SHOPPING CENTER DESTROYED — Flames destroyed the Village Square Shopping center containing 12 stores in Kinston Wednesday. Firefighters were hampered by a limited number of hydrants at the scene off U.S. 258 north. The fire reportedly began in a video store. Firemen from all available Kinston and Lenoir County departments were called to the scene. Holes were cut in the roof but firefighters were unable to get enough ventilation to the flames to ward off intense heat that ignited the walls and ceilings of surrounding businesses. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Syrians Threaten 'Severest' Penalty If Hostages Killed

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Syrian forces controlling west Beirut have warned they will mete out "the severest possible punishment" if any of the 25 foreigners believed held hostage by Shiite Moslem extremists are killed, police said today.

"The Syrians have sent messages through Shiite clergymen that they will not sit idly by if a foreign hostage was killed," said a police official who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The warning "included a threat of the severest possible punishment if a foreigner was killed," the official said.

He said the first result of the Syrian warning was the Revolutionary Justice Organization's statement Tuesday that it had postponed killing French captive Jean-Louis Normandin.

The authoritative an-Nahar daily on Wednesday credited Syrian pressure for Normandin's reprieve. Normandin, a 35-year-old lighting engineer with France's Antenne-2 television station, was kidnapped in Beirut March 8, 1986.

Revolutionary Justice, believed made up of Shiite zealots loyal to Iran's Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, had said it would kill Normandin by Monday evening if France did not clarify its policy on terrorism and stop selling arms to Iraq, Iran's enemy in the 6½-year-old Persian Gulf war.

However, the group delivered a statement to an-Nahar on Tuesday saying it was pushing back its deadline a week because of pleas from Lebanon's top Shiite clerics, the hostage's family and "secret pledges from the French government to parties concerned."

Syria deployed 7,500 troops in kidnap-plagued west Beirut on Feb. 22 in response to appeals by Moslem leaders to end three years of chaotic rule by rival militias.

The 25 foreigners believed held hostage are eight Americans, six Frenchmen, two Britons, two West Germans, an Italian, an Irishman, a South Korean, an Indian, a Saudi Arabian and two unidentified men.

Anglican Church envoy Terry Waite also has been missing since Jan. 20, when he left his west Beirut hotel to negotiate with hostage-holders. No group has claimed to hold him or has made any demands for his release.

A second Saudi hostage, Bakr Damanhour, was released Wednesday after 66 days in captivity. Syria and its ally, the Shiite Amal militia, were credited with his release, although no details were disclosed.

He was the first foreign kidnap victim freed since the Syrian deployment in west Beirut. No group publicly claimed responsibility for his kidnapping.

Damanhour, who is in his mid 40s, returned to Saudi Arabia today and was welcomed in Jidda by Prince Majed bin Abdel-Aziz.

Head Of Jefferies Brokerage Will Plead Guilty To Securities Charges

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Boyd L. Jefferies, one of the nation's most successful securities brokers, said today he would plead guilty to two criminal charges, including one related to trading stocks with former speculator Ivan F. Boesky.

Jefferies, founder and chairman of Los Angeles-based Jefferies & Co., said he also resigned from the firm. He also consented to an administrative order barring him from the securities business for at least five years, and agreed to place his shareholdings in the firm's parent company, Jefferies Group Inc., in a voting trust during the period.

Boyd Jefferies owns about 13 percent of Jefferies Group's stock.

Without admitting to any Securities and Exchange Commission allegations, Jefferies, Jefferies

Group and Jefferies & Co. consented to an injunction prohibiting them from any future securities law violations.

Jefferies & Co. also agreed to reviews of internal record-keeping and other control systems.

Boyd Jefferies, in a letter to the firm's employees and shareholders, said he would plead guilty to two felony counts of violating federal securities laws.

"I fully accept sole responsibility for these transactions," he said. "I think it is appropriate that I suffer the consequences for my actions rather than the company."

Frank E. Baxter, president and chief operating officer, would assume Jefferies' duties as chief executive officer of Jefferies Group and its subsidiaries.

One of the felony charges against Boyd Jefferies resulted from a transaction in which he, on behalf of his firm, agreed to buy certain stocks from companies controlled by Boesky with the understanding he would sell the stocks back to Boesky later.

The transaction, known as "parking" securities, enabled Boesky to falsify the true extent of his stock holdings, Jefferies' statement said.

According to Jefferies, after he bought the stocks from Boesky, "the market value of one of the stocks fell sharply and, pursuant to their agreement a Boesky entity paid Jefferies & Co. $3 million to offset the loss."

Israel Will Impose Limited Sanctions On South Africa

JERUSALEM (AP) — Foreign Minister Shimon Peres said today Israel will impose limited sanctions on South Africa for the first time by banning new military sales contracts with its white-controlled government.

The decision was made Wednesday night by a 10-member Cabinet forum in anticipation of the April 1 release of a U.S. government report that is expected to list Israel as one of Pretoria's five top weapons traders.

Israel feared the report would strain relations with Washington and lead to pressure for a cutoff in U.S. military aid.

Peres' remarks to 65 American Jewish leaders were the first official confirmation of the Cabinet decision, which was reported by state television Wednesday night.

"We shall not sign in the future any more contracts in the domain of defense with South Africa and we shall gradually reduce our relations with South Africa," Peres said.

Peres refused to elaborate on the sanctions, but government officials said Israel also would curb trade, cultural and scientific contacts with Pretoria and set up a panel to formulate a new policy toward South Africa within two months.

The measures are subject to approval by the full 25-member Cabinet, which meets Sunday and is all but certain to give approval.

The measures were backed by Peres and Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, while Ariel Sharon of Shamir's right-wing Likud bloc voted against them, the Israeli media said.

Although new military trade contracts would not be signed, the measures are unlikely to nullify existing contracts, the officials said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Israel has a billion-dollar-a-year arms export business, but keeps its trading partners and size of its arms sales closely guarded secrets. Sources in Jerusalem say Israeli sales to South Africa are mostly light arms.

Foreign newspapers also have reported cooperation between the two countries on nuclear tests, but Israeli officials deny it.

The U.N. Security Council approved an international embargo on arms sales to South Africa in 1977. Since then, South Africa has expanded its weapons production and is estimated to manufacture about 90 percent of its own arms needs as well as exporting weapons.

The United States bans sales of American arms to South Africa.

Israel has condemned South Africa's apartheid police of racial segregation in the past but has balked at imposing sanctions largely out of concern for that nation's 120,000-member Jewish community, who strongly support Israel.

Peres made an oblique reference to these Jewish pressures in his 35-minute speech, saying, "Israel is looking for ways to be part and parcel of the democratic world. The transition is not so simple."

Israel is "not fighting a people or a country. We are fighting a totally rejected policy by anybody who believes all human beings were created equal," Peres said.

Train Evacuated

DU QUOIN, Ill. (AP) — More than 100 passengers and crew members were evacuated from Amtrak's City of New Orleans train today because of a bomb threat which proved to be false, a State Police officer said.

"The train was searched. We came up zero," Sgt. Ray Lichliter said here. "We're reloading the train."

Amtrak train No. 59 en route from Chicago to New Orleans was stopped and evacuated in Ullin, about 18 miles north of Cairo in southern Illinois, around 2 a.m., Lichliter said.

Amtrak officials in Fort Washington, Pa., had told police that a passenger carrying a bomb and three guns would be boarding the train in Carbondale, the sergeant said. Carbondale is about 60 miles north of Ullin.

"All the seven who boarded in Carbondale were searched," Lichliter said in a telephone interview. "We interviewed everybody."

The train was detained for more than three hours.

Lichliter said all 115 people aboard, including 11 crew members, were taken to a high school gymnasium during the search "to make it as comfortable as possible while they checked this thing out."

Hilton Hotel To Open Monday

The city's newest hotel and meeting complex — the Hilton Inn Greenville at 207 S.W. Greenville Blvd. — will officially open for business Monday with a 3 p.m. ribbon cutting for invited guests.

The new hotel complex includes a six-story, 141-room brick-and-glass guest tower and an adjoining meeting complex which includes more than 6,000 square feet for meetings, banquets and conventions.

The hotel also has a 192-seat Americana restaurant and specialty bar — Charlie O's — and Rio!, The Club, a large "high-energy" dance club with an accent on after-hours entertainment.

The Hilton Inn Greenville is owned by Ameribanc Savings Bank of Annandale, Va., and will be managed by Vista Host Inc., a hotel management company based in Houston.

Sandra Webb, sales director for the Greenville Hilton, said the multimillion-dollar hotel is the largest, most complete meeting complex with adjoining hotel yet to be built between Raleigh and the coast.

The hotel's guest tower, made of tangerine-colored reflective glass and brick, features 135 deluxe guest rooms and six luxury suites.

The largest ballroom, located in the MeetingPlex area adjacent to the guest tower, is the Carolina Ballroom — a 4,500-square-foot room which can seat up to 560 people and accommodate 450 for a banquet. The ballroom can be divided into two, three or four smaller areas and equipped and staffed for virtually any size business or social function, Ms. Webb said.

Also available in the Hilton's MeetingPlex is a 700-square-foot meeting room and a 625-square-foot board room.

Recreational facilities for the hotel's guests include an outdoor pool and an indoor spa and exercise-fitness center.

The restaurant seats 122 and features American cuisine, while Charlie O's specialty bar seats an additional 70 people.

Guest services at the Hilton Inn Greenville will include safety deposit boxes, daily laundry service and free airport transportation as well as free coffee and newspapers in the morning for overnight guests.

Work on the hotel started in 1984, but counter-suits by the partners of Leisure Development Inc. of Greenville, the original owner, halted work on the project early in 1985.

Ameribanc (formerly First American Savings and Loan), which held a mortgage on the property because of a $5.5 million construction loan, foreclosed and bought the land and partially completed building in late 1985 for $4 million.

When in full operation, 200 people are expected to be employed full time at the hotel.

"Techniques like auditorium music preference testing, call-out research, studies of audience reports, and computerized music lists help us ensure we play the right songs but don't repeat them too often."

Rescue Manual Being Revised

Work on a revised edition of "The International Manual of Basic Rescue Methods" by Pitt County resident Dawson Nethercutt is nearing completion.

Nethercutt, former director of training for the N.C. Department of Insurance's Fire and Rescue Service Division, who lives near Grimesland, first published the manual in 1975. It has been adopted by the International Rescue and Emergency Care Association, the N.C. Association of Rescue Squads and other states as the standard for basic rescue methods.

Photographic illustrations for the first edition, revisions in 1977 and 1981, and the present revision were made by Stuart Savage, staff writer for "The Daily Reflector."

Savage and former Greenville resident Wilburn Small, presently director of training for the insurance department's fire and rescue service division, provided technical assistance.

Nethercutt, Small and Savage were members of the former volunteer Greenville Rescue Squad. Nethercutt and Small are former Greenville fire department employees.

More than 10,000 of the manuals have been sold to rescue squads, major industries such as Exxon, Mobile, Shell and Amoco oil refineries and universities such as Princeton, Texas A&M and Western Kentucky.

In addition to users in the United States and Canada, the publication has been purchased by organizations and individuals in such countries as Germany, Japan, England, the Netherlands, Venezuela and Australia.

The latest revision of the 128-page manual will add about 30 pages in an expanded chapter on rappelling (a technique for descending a rope on a steep or vertical slope or incline) and new material on such things as special hauling systems (methods used to gain a mechanical advantage when lifting heavy loads), breaking systems (methods of creating friction so victims can be lowered with less manpower), suspension systems (telpher or traverse line) which allow loads to be transported off the ground along a static line to cross difficult terrain such as a stream or ravine or lowered from multistory buildings.

The 1981 revision was the first time detailed instructions and photographic illustrations on techniques for rappelling had been published.

The rescue manual also includes chapters on such subjects as rope and knots, block and tackle, ladders, casualty handling, rescue from upper stories, rigging and lashing for rigging.

The printing of the manual is being done by Morgan Printers of Greenville.

Kicking Habit May Have Drawbacks

BOSTON (AP) — Quitting smoking appears to raise the odds of contracting a serious intestinal disease known as ulcerative colitis, but the benefits of kicking the habit still far outweigh the risks, doctors reported today.

The researchers said their study appeared to be the first to find a health hazard related to quitting smoking. Cigarette smoking is believed to cause a variety of major illnesses, including cancer and heart disease.

The doctors found that smokers had a 40 percent lower chance than those who never smoked of getting ulcerative colitis. But reformed smokers had double the non-smokers' risk.

"The adverse health effects from smoking far outnumber any potential benefits to be gained from decreasing one's risk of ulcerative colitis," said Dr. Edward J. Boyko, who directed the study.

"Ulcerative colitis is rare, but cancer and heart disease are not rare," he added in an interview. "The argument simply can't be made that one should continue smoking to improve one's health, because that would not be happening."

Boyko, a researcher at the University of Colorado Health Sciences Center in Denver, outlined his findings in today's issue of the New England Journal of Medicine.

The study seems to suggest that something in cigarette smoke pro-teets against ulcerative colitis, Boyko said. Just why giving up the habit might increase the risk also is a mystery.

The researchers theorized that it might have something to do with weight gain, which is common after kicking the habit, or increased physical activity, but they cautioned these ideas were highly speculative.

Boyko said he and his co-authors

"put their heads together and tried to think of (another) illness associated with quitting smoking, and we couldn't come up with anything."

About one in 1,000 Americans has ulcerative colitis, a chronic inflammation of the lining of the large intestine. No one knows what causes the disease, which usually strikes between ages 20 and 40, causing diarrhea, cramps and bloody stools.

Sometimes the illness goes away by itself. But if it lingers for years, the only effective treatment is removal of the diseased part of the large intestine.

"The main value of this study is that it opens up new areas for research into a disease that is a complete enigma in medicine," Boyko said.

Dedication

A journey from Greenville, North Carolina, U.S.A., to becoming a physician in China is one that covers many miles and many years.

Nevertheless it is one that Dr. George Hatem, now 76 years old, has taken. He left Greenville as a youth and received his medical training at the University of North Carolina. Then he went to China, took a Chinese wife and became the first foreigner granted citizenship by the People's Republic after the Communists took over mainland China in 1948. Since then he has become an eminent public health authority working with leprosy and virtually eliminating venereal disease in China.

But he was also cut off from his homeland during the years when China had no relations with the United States government.

During the Nixon administration China was recognized by the United States and relations have steadily improved. For Dr. Hatem personally that meant renewed contact with people he remembered in the United States and recognition by the medical establishment of his homeland. He was able to attend the 50th anniversary reunion of his Greenville High School graduation class (the school was located at Fifth and Reade streets when they graduated) and discussed his years in China.

There have also been a number of articles about Dr. Hatem in popular U.S. publications recognizing his work in China. This week in China he received a plaque from a team of visiting American physicians which honors him (for his long medical achievements and names him the first international ambassador of Durham, which has declared itself "City of Medicine, U.S.A.). The team includes the American Medical Association President, John H. Coury of Port Huron, Mich., and Dr. James Davis of Durham.

Dr. Hatem chose to work in a society far different from ours and he worked with little contact with his homeland for decades. Slowly the political changes came, and now he is being honored by American physicians for doing the work to which physicians all over the world must be dedicated. Perhaps a little of his dedication to medicine and improving living conditions of the people he serves was born of his early years in Greenville and Pitt County.

How We Speak

A bill has been introduced in the General Assembly by Sen. Franklin L. Block, D-New Hanover, to designate English as the official language of North Carolina.

Block says it is not intended to deter those who speak only a foreign language from settling in the state. Rather, he says, its intent is to bring those people into the mainstream as rapidly as possible. He noted that his grandfather immigrated from Latvia and quickly learned the language.

Nor is Block opposed to bilingualism. In fact, he says he encourages his children to learn a foreign language.

Sen. Block's bill seems to deal with the future. A look around North Carolina today indicates that English is the language. There is no bilingual education in North Carolina, nor are road signs in English and another language to be seen.

That is happening in some areas of the nation as large waves of population move in from areas where a language other than English is spoken. The possibility exists for many more people who speak only a foreign language to come in the future and there is always the likelihood that use of a foreign language could come into the demand in North Carolina.

There is, of course, nothing wrong with designating English as the official language of the state for governmental and educational purposes. However, if large numbers of people come who speak another language, it will still be a problem to be dealt with by educators and governmental units. That prospect tells us we need to prepare for the situation before it becomes crucial.

Finding One's Own Place

WASHINGTON — Will any of the prospective 1988 presidential contenders have the smarts to appeal to the concerns of voters under age 40? Probably not. Unless a generational candidate pops up, one can count on a majority of younger voters skipping another presidential election.

That's not to say that young people aren't overburdened with a heap of problems. Saddled with high expectations of affluence and post-college success, many post-war kiddies haven't seen the American dream work for them. As they enter middle-age, all too many of them are still plagued with uncertainty. Questions linger about their role in society and whether they'll ever own a home or get married.

Life hasn't been rosy for the post-baby boomers, either. Society has traditionally defined promising young adults as those who accept responsibility for their own lives. After leaving school, graduates are expected to find a job, get an apartment and begin a career.

But a disturbing trend, which began during the Reagan recession of 1982, hasn't disappeared. More and more young people have become what sociologists call RYAs — returning young adults. Instead of spreading their wings and finding their own pads, thousands of young adults are still living with their parents or have recently returned to do so.

In 1985, 54 percent of Americans aged 18 to 24 and 11 percent of those aged 25 to 34 were living with their parents. Fifteen years ago, only 47 percent and 8 percent of these respective age groups were doing so. According to as yet unreleased census data for 1986, this trend hasn't changed measurably.

Needless to say, hanging out with mom and dad does not fit the image people have of effervescent, self-reliant youth. But this has become a way of life for a large body of young Americans and there is little likelihood that it will change under current economic conditions.

High tuitions coupled with federal funding cuts have resulted in students graduating from college with outrageous debts from loans — an average of $6,685 for students who graduate from public college and $8,950 for private-college alumni. Meanwhile, rents have boomed as entry-level positions have shrunk. Of 22-24-year-old men who were living with their parents in 1985, more than 70 percent had incomes below $10,000; only 40 percent of those who had left home fell below $10,000.

What we've got here is a younger generation that's collided with the bottom line. Unable to make a quick turnaround, many members are stuck in mud on the homefront. Of course, that's not to say they're physically uncomfortable. Who can argue with free board, no rent, and a secure environment?

Yet, on a more personal level, young people are saddled with informing family of their whereabouts, schedule and companions. Unfortunately, this doesn't do much for the socialization process.

Ordinarily, between the ages of 18 and 24, young people begin to move away from their parents' view of the world and have their own philosophy. The major decisions of adulthood — job, family and community — await them. But with today's economy, there is no way many young people can begin to grapple with these questions.

Now we have two generations of adults living on top of one another, with no adequate precedent. "We don't even have a name of this setup yet," said Allan Schnaiberg, a sociology professor at Northwestern University in an interview with Advertising Age. "It's not an extended and it's not a nuclear family."

In an academic paper on returning young adults that Schnaiberg recently co-authored with another sociologist, Shelly Goldenberg of the University of Calgary, the two professors forecast increased tension on the homefront as each generation tries to assert its rights.

To the editor:

Local environmental issues have received fair treatment during Gail Meeks' tenure as our city manager.

We can point with pride to our Noise Ordinance and our Sign Ordinance as evidence that Greenville can and will regulate the activities of those who would infringe upon our quality of life via unwarranted noise and visual pollution. A third landmark environmental issue — the Buffer Yard Proposal now being reviewed — mandates the use of landscaping to more effectively buffer the spaces between commercial, industrial and residential areas. It is much needed, long overdue and like the Sign and Noise Ordinances — stems from the Meeks administration.

Council members Inez Fridley, Nancy M. Jenkins and Bill Hadden voted Monday night for all of us who know first-hand the good work Gail Meeks has done for Greenville. If we must indeed hire a replacement, surely council will see fit to give a citizens' advisory committee a major role in the selection process.

To the editor:

So the City Council wants a "more professional city manager?" It appears that the city of Greenville needs to elect a more professional city council.

Anyone in a supervisory or management position who considers himself or herself a professional does not dismiss someone without first making that person aware of any problem. He or she should work with that person for a fair amount of time before a decision on dismissal is reached. The individual, in turn, should have the opportunity to respond to problems, not be callously dismissed for whatever personal animosity, reason or desire for personal gain that is influencing the situation. The only exception should be when the employee is flagrantly violating company or municipal policy. According to the media, the mayor stated, "We are indeed appreciative for her services, contributions and leadership..." I have not seen any appreciativeness exhibited by the city council in their action.

During my employment with the city, I was proud to have Ms. Meeks as city manager. She conducted her duties professionally and treated employees fairly. Ms. Jenkins, one of the council persons, excellently described Ms. Meeks' capabilities when she said Ms. Meeks is "dependable, efficient, capable, cool-headed."

I wonder about the professionalism of a council that appoints a citizens' advisory committee for the review of the proposed city budget. Was that because they were not experienced or professional enough to accomplish the task on their own?

A council with the city's best interest in mind, instead of their personal feelings, would not have acted as they did at this critical time of budgeting for the next fiscal year.

I hope that the people of Greenville can learn from the tragic miscarriage of decency what professionalism is and what a personal vendetta is without having to pay an enormous price over the next few years.

Let the people of Greenville duly note this despicable conduct at the new municipal election.

"Nothing is so corrupting to a man as to believe it is his duty to save mankind from men. He comes to evil because he must first usurp the rights of men and finally the prerogative of God." — Vermont Royster

If it ain't the pope or the ayatollah, somebody's giving religion a black eye almost every day now.

You take Pastor Harper and the Goldsboro Christian schools for example. Now this might sound like something out of Harper Valley PTA, but they expelled a senior two months prior to graduation. And guess what for:

1. Being head cheerleader?
2. Being Homecoming queen?
3. Doing volunteer work at the hospital?
4. Collecting food for the needy?
5. Wearing a two-piece bathing suit at the beach?
6. Wearing a one-piece bathing suit at Well's Department Store?

If you guess "all of the above," you are eligible for membership in Pastor Harper's Second Baptist Church of Goldsboro.

If you are wondering why Pastor Harper was peeping through the window of a lady's fashion show instead of visiting the sick and feeding the hungry, join the crowd.

Of course, Pastor Harper's probably wondering what's that got to do with Christianity. And if Pastor Harper ever hears, "He who is without sin, throw the first rock!" we better duck!

To the editor:

I lost more than a little pride in my city government when I learned how the City Council evaluated, voted for dismissal, and then dismissed the city manager all in the course of one evening. No charges, short of criminal, warrant such swift action. Does the city have no personnel policies to ensure fair treatment of employees? All employees, from garbage collector to city manager, are entitled to a hearing and orderly procedures before being dismissed.

It would seem that the more judicious action for the mayor, when finding the council tied in its vote for dismissal, would have been to put aside his own feelings and to call for a delay of any action until more study and substantiation could take place. Surely this further study should include evaluation by staff working under the supervision of the city manager.

I wonder how the city can hope to attract qualified applicants to the position when fair treatment is so lacking. Something is terribly wrong when this kind of action can happen in a city of this size. Talk about "attracting business" — huh! Come on, Greenville citizens, let's demand some professionalism of our elected officials.

To the editor:

What has happened to our fair city, or rather what has happened to those within whose hands its responsibility falls? Calling for Mrs. Meeks' resignation Monday night is a tragedy in and of itself.

Since when is it fair to take a person's right of defense away, especially when they are not even aware of what they have done or have been doing wrong. It is one thing if your weaknesses have been pointed out to you and you do not excel, but it is a different story if you are not aware that there is a weakness in your performance so you may be offered the chance to correct it. This is one of the worst cases of dirty under-handed politics I have ever witnessed and it is a shame to see such take place in our city government.

So they say they want a professional. Do people that act so irreverently and in a manner such as this know what a professional is? Just because Mrs. Meeks does not hold a piece of paper signifying a college degree in this field does not mean she is not a professional and cannot perform the duties. Mrs. Meeks has proved herself.

It is not a professional that is being sought here, but someone who can be more easily swayed and influenced by those select council members. Tell us what is really eating at you, Mr. Mayor and Council members. Is there an item on the next agenda which you favor that you are afraid Mrs. Meeks will oppose? Let's face it. This is a dirty scandal.

Mrs. Meeks is an intelligent, hard-working individual dedicated to the betterment of the city of Greenville. My heart goes out, not only to her, but to the council members who elected to dismiss her. It is they who will suffer, for they have done no justice. Come on, council members, get your act together or hand in your resignations.

Strength For Today

There have been generations which were God-centered in their thinking, others in which people were thought-centered and others which were pleasure-centered.

The 13th through 16th centuries were God-centered. Religion held men's minds in a mighty grip. In the days of the Greek philosophers many people were thought-centered. In the decadent period of the Roman Empire, generation after generation passed its days in a search for sensuality and pleasure.

We live in an age which is different from those of the past in that it is man-centered, concentrating on control of the environment for human welfare.

But this emphasis on man can be disastrous. In controlling the environment, man is polluting it. The power to create a better life is spawning ever greater powers for destruction.

Senate Gives Tentative OK To Holiday Honoring King

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — The state Senate tentatively approved a paid holiday honoring Martin Luther King Jr. after an occasionally tense debate in which supporters and opponents said history was on their side.

Sen. Donald Kincaid, R-Caldwell, fought the bill Wednesday, saying the slain civil rights leader "had become as polarizing, as divisive, as negative a force as we've had in the United States in many years ..."

Sen. DONALD KINCAID

Waving a history textbook, Kincaid said, "There are many, many able people in this book that we should honor with a holiday in North Carolina, and we don't do it. In fact ... we don't even honor the gentleman who is given credit for bringing about the proclamation that freed the slaves — Abraham Lincoln."

But Sen. Jim Johnson, R-Cabarrus, the only Republican senator to vote for the bill, said, "I have a feeling if Lincoln were here today ... he'd say let's pass this bill, lest what Lincoln did stand for naught."

The bill was approved 39-12 as three Democrats joined nine of the Senate's 10 Republicans in opposition. A final vote is scheduled for today. If the bill is approved it will become law, since the House overwhelmingly passed it last week.

The final vote was delayed when Sen. Ollie Harris, D-Cleveland, objected to an immediate vote, saying he wanted to offer an amendment to ensure that Veterans' Day is not dropped in favor of the King holiday.

Harris, a World War II veteran, said he served in a field hospital in Belgium. "I saw 'em die over there for you and I and a free country," he said.

The bill would limit the number of paid state holidays to 11. It would force the State Personnel Commission, which decides which holidays will be observed each year, to discard one of the 11 observed in 1986 to make room for the King holiday, which would be the third Monday in January.

That provision has drawn opposition from state employees who don't want to lose any of their days off, but their lobbying swayed only a few votes. The three Democrats who opposed the bill — Sens. Joe Johnson, D-Wake, Jim Speed, D-Franklin, and Bill Staton, D-Lee, represent districts with heavy concentrations of state workers.

"Our phones have been ringing off the hook," Speed said.

The other main argument against the bill Wednesday concerned claims that King was linked with communists.

Kincaid said King had been warned by the late Robert F. Kennedy, attorney general during the administration of President Kennedy, that some of his associates in the civil rights movement were communists.

He also told the Senate that FBI tapes and transcripts from wiretaps on King are being withheld from the public until the year 2027.

"Why this mystery? What do we have to hide?" Kincaid said.

Sen. Bob Somers, R-Rowan, warned that "we may come, in the next century when they open those archives, (to be) embarrassed over having done this."

Jim Johnson, however, said he was unmoved by that argument.

"It's the prejudices that people have that cause the problems," he said. "I'm not interested in what those capsules would show. I'm more interested in what the man did."

A Kincaid amendment to let the public vote on the King holiday was defeated 45-5. Sen. Dennis Winner, D-Buncombe, offered an amendment to create a paid holiday honoring George Washington, which would have forced the personnel commission to drop a second 1986 holiday.

"This nation would not be here as a nation were it not for George Washington," Winner said.

Sen. Bill Martin, D-Guilford, the King bill's floor leader, suggested such a holiday should be the subject of a separate bill and the amendment was defeated 33-17.

Martin, who said he was arrested with other blacks for picketing a whites-only theater in Greensboro in 1963, said the holiday would honor King's message more than the man.

Unlike other holidays, he said, it would be difficult to "comprehensively and understandably express the ideas and the ideals that are symbolized by Martin Luther King" without naming the holiday for him.

Legislators Told To Keep Schools' Post Elective

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Efforts to have the superintendent of public instruction appointed, billed as a way to give education a single spokesman, will fail because doing so would take away the voters' right to elect a superintendent, an official says.

Michael Latta, spokesman for the State Advisory Council on Education, warned the Senate Constitution Committee that a public referendum to make the superintendent appointive would never pass.

"You can't get the people to vote not to have somebody to vote for ... because the last time one (an elective office) was done away with was in 1873," Latta said Wednesday.

The committee began a study of two proposed constitutional amendments to make the change. One of the measures also would change the membership of the State Board of Education.

Sen. Charles Hipps, D-Haywood, chairman of the committee, said this year offers perhaps the best and last opportunity to change the leadership of the state Department of Education, since Superintendent Craig Phillips has said he will not seek re-election in 1988.

"If we're ever going to do anything, it's put up or shut up time," Hipps said.

But Latta said the House and Senate are unlikely to reach an agreement.

"The General Assembly has not been able to deal with this in 45 years," he said. "And you're not going to be able to deal with it this time."

As an alternative, the council has proposed rewriting state law to make the superintendent the non-voting chairman of the Board of Education.

Under that plan, the board would hire a commissioner who would run the Department of Education. The controller, the department's financial officer who now is chosen by the board, would report to the commissioner.

Ray Sarbaugh, spokesman for the North Carolina Association of School Administrators, said the existing system, with the elected superintendent, board and controller speaking on behalf of public schools, is flawed.

"There are too many official voices speaking for the public schools, and too often they speak from different perspectives and with different priorities," he said.

Sarbaugh maintained, however, that the issue is important enough to warrant one more try at a constitutional amendment.

Gene Causby, spokesman for the North Carolina School Boards Association, said his group supported an appointed superintendent but favored retaining a semblance of "the elective process" by having education board members elected by the people or by the Legislature.

If the Legislature elects the members, it should choose from among nominees elected by local school boards, Causby said.

Prisoner Ran Drug Operation

NEW YORK (AP) — An inmate currently serving 44 years in the federal prison at Otisville has been heading a heroin smuggling ring, officials said.

Seven people were arrested Wednesday in connection with the ring run by Leslie "Ike" Atkinson, who was convicted in 1974 for drug crimes, according to Special Narcotics Prosecutor Sterling Johnson.

Two others who were charged were still at large.

Atkinson, a Vietnam veteran, previously smuggled heroin into this country from Southeast Asia in corpses and in bags containing the remains of dead soldiers shipped to Fort Bragg, N.C., according to Robert Strang, a Drug Enforcement Administration agent.

Atkinson, a native of Goldsboro, N.C., and his associates had planned to import as much as 500 kilograms (1,100 pounds) of heroin to the United States with the help of a bogus German diplomat, according to the complaint filed by FBI Agent Raymond Kerr Jr.

The "diplomat" was in fact an undercover DEA agent fluent in German.

Officials said that by tapping telephones at the Otisville prison and at the homes of defendants Clarence Jackson in Briarcliff Manor and Philip Wade Atkinson in Queens, they learned that defendant Savaneeya Batton, of Felton, Del., was going to Thailand to arrange for heroin shipments to the United States.

Last month, Atkinson and his nephew, Philip, arranged for the undercover agent to travel to Thailand on March 3. There, he met Batton who gave him 2.4 kilograms (5.28 pounds) of 94 percent pure heroin to bring to New York.

Wednesday morning, the undercover agent delivered the heroin to Philip Atkinson at the Waldorf Astoria Hotel. Atkinson was arrested as he left the hotel with the package.

Leslie Atkinson's alleged drug importing enterprise was helped by defendant James Arrante, a prison guard at Otisville, Kerr said in his complaint. Kerr said Arrante, of Bloomingburg, N.Y., accepted bribes to smuggle Atkinson's letters out of the prison.

Republican Fights Downhill Battle To Shorten Sessions

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — An outspoken Republican representative whose tactics have rankled Democratic leaders is getting little support from the majority party for his efforts to shorten legislative sessions.

Some Democrats view Rep. Johnathan Rhyne, R-Lincoln, as "a hothead" who is "camera conscious ... seeking headlines." Rep. H.M. "Mickey" Michaux, D-Durham, said Wednesday.

Noting that Rhyne has said he will not seek re-election next year, Michaux said, "Maybe he's trying to go out in a blaze of glory."

Rhyne, a second-term lawmaker known for aggressive tactics and a willingness to take on veteran Democrats, said he was not seeking publicity. "I really think the Democratic leadership feels threatened by any Republicans that have skills at debate," he said. "I just think they're paranoid."

The House Rules Committee killed one of Rhyne's bills. The other was spared the same fate, at least temporarily, when the chairman of the House Constitutional Amendments Committee refused to accept a motion to kill it.

At the Constitutional Amendments Committee meeting, Rhyne offered separate bills, one of which would limit legislative sessions to 95 workdays in odd-numbered years and 25 days in even-numbered years.

His other bill would shorten legislative work weeks to three days — Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays.

Rhyne said a number of well regarded lawmakers had left the Legislature in recent years because the job was so time consuming that they had too little time for their careers and families.

He said the situation was endangering the "citizen legislature" concept that values an assembly whose membership "is a cross section of society." If the current trend continues, only wealthy or retired people will have time to serve, he said.

But after explaining his bills, Rhyne proposed that instead of voting on them, the Legislature create a study commission to investigate ways to improve its operations.

Democrats argued that the study was not needed and fired challenging questions at Rhyne.

Rep. Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, asked whether Rhyne knew of another state legislature better than North Carolina's. "What you're suggesting is we are so terribly out of step with somebody that we need to drastically restructure the legislative process," Mavretic said.

Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Granville, asked Rhyne if he considered the legislators who replaced those who have not sought additional terms inferior to their predecessors. "What difference does it make (whether a lawmaker stays or quits) if the man that replaces him is just as good?"

House Speaker Pro Tem Jack Hunt, D-Cleveland, said National Conference of State Legislatures statistics show North Carolina's Legislature to be the least costly in the nation.

Rep. Joe Hackney, D-Orange, moved to re-refer the bill to the Rules Committee, which handles proposals to create study commissions. The panel then resumed the debate and adjourned without voting on Hackney's motion, meaning that the Rhyne bill will be taken up again next week.

Meanwhile, the Rules Committee killed a Rhyne bill that would allow legislators to introduce bills before a regular session of the General Assembly convenes.

Rhyne said his bill was aimed at accelerating the work of the Legislature, but Rep. Bruce Ethridge, D-Onslow, said lawmakers are busy enough at the beginning of a session without added responsibilities.

Martin Names Three To Education Board

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin has nominated three Republican business leaders to the state Board of Education, including former state Commerce Secretary Howard Haworth.

Confirmation by the General Assembly would mean Martin's appointees would make up a majority of the voting members on the board for the first time since the Republican governor took office in 1985.

Besides Haworth, others named to the 14-member board were William Meekins, community relations manager with Carolina Telephone & Telegraph in Elizabeth City, and Pat Neal, a real estate broker and member of the Durham County Board of Education.

Haworth would replace Theda

Moore on the board to represent the 7th educational district.

Meekins, 59, is president of the Downtown Business Association of Elizabeth City. He will replace Betty Speir in the 1st educational district. Ms. Neal, 52, will succeed Elmer Wilkins as an at-large member. Last year, she ran for the state House of Representatives.

All three will serve eight-year terms if their appointments are approved by the Legislature.

Chadbourn Blacks Threaten Boycott

By ERICA JOHNSTON
Associated Press Writer

CHADBOURN, N.C. (AP) — Three white councilmen who voted to fire a town manager who wanted to name a black police chief say their offer to appoint the same chief proves their action wasn't racially motivated, but blacks say the offer was just a face-saving maneuver.

"You're playing with people's emotions here in Chadbourn," resident Larry Towns told the Chadbourn Town Council Wednesday night after members voted 3-2 along racial lines to fire Town Manager Steve Wyatt. "We are not Forsyth County, Ga. We see what you're doing, and we're tired of it."

Towns and other black residents at the meeting said after the vote they intended to begin boycotting some white businesses next week. Wyatt was suspended without pay Monday night, just hours before he intended to swear in veteran black police officer Kelly Rogers as chief of police. After voting to fire Wyatt Wednesday, the three white council members moved to appoint Rogers as police chief.

But Mayor Dick Tyler, who sided with Wyatt and the board's two black members, said the council could not legally name the police chief because that authority rests with the town manager. Both Tyler and Wyatt are white.

Blacks on the board said they were appalled by the firing of Wyatt, who had been suspended on the same 3-2 vote.

"Steve Wyatt is being fired because we have an individual who was afraid that he would name a black man the chief of police," said C.W. Williams, a black council member.

The white city council members' move to install Rogers as police chief was a face-saving move, Williams said.

"If you fire (Wyatt), even though he's white, and even if you hire Kelly Rogers ... it will still be racial. There is no way you can get around that," Williams said.

"This has nothing to do with Kelly Rogers. This is with Steve Wyatt. I have no qualms with Kelly Rogers," said Bobby Tedder, who read the motion signed by the three white council members to fire Wyatt.

"... We realize this appears to be racial," Tedder said. "This is not true. We respect and enjoy a harmonious relationship" with Rogers, he said.

Tyler said he would consult with officials of the North Carolina League of Municipalities today to see if he could swear in Rogers as police chief, but he said that would not quell the racial tension that has built this week.

"Rogers' appointment will not rectify this. I'm still very unhappy with the whole situation," Tyler said.

"I'm sure our town and county are being looked at as something less than desirable and it's not a true picture of our community," Tyler said.

About one-third of the approximately 2,000 residents in the Columbus County town are black.

Wyatt did not attend the meeting. Rogers stood quietly at the back of the room and left immediately after the decision was announced.

About 150 of the town's residents attended the meeting after council members met in closed session. The meeting was moved between sessions from the municipal building to another building a couple blocks away to accommodate the crowd. Most members of the audience vocally supported Wyatt and Rogers.

A black woman who works at a restaurant in downtown Chadbourn said she wasn't sure Wyatt's suspension was racially motivated.

"I don't know. It isn't necessarily," said the woman, who asked not to be identified. "But the question is, why? It looks like it's a racial thing. And whether it was or not, it looks bad ... It's just too bad that so long after integration, we still have segregation. That's what it is, and it's bad."

Charles McArthur, owner of McArthur's Hardware Store in downtown Chadbourn, said he did not think Wyatt's suspension had anything to do with his plan to appoint Kelly. He said the suspension was a case of bad timing.

"Kelly's been on the police force for several years," McArthur said. "He's well liked. I don't see where it (race) would have any bearing on it (the suspension)."

But he said the council members "picked a real sticky time" to suspend Wyatt.

Duke Will Supply Electricity To CP&L

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Duke Power Co., which sells electricity in the Piedmont of North Carolina, will be lighting up Tar Heel homes and offices from the mountains to the sea in the mid-1990s.

Duke has struck a deal with neighboring Carolina Power & Light Co. to provide bulk power to CP&L for six years beginning in 1992, officials for both companies said Wednesday.

Announcement of the arrangement coincided with a decision by CP&L to cancel an uncompleted coal-burning unit as too costly. The unit, Mayo No. 2, was scheduled to operate in 1992.

A CP&L official said the Raleigh-based utility will buy between $240 million and $480 million worth of electricity in the period.

"We will be able to purchase power 25 percent to 30 percent less than Mayo 2," said Bobby Montague of CP&L.

A Duke Power official said both its customers and stockholders will benefit from the deal.

"The additional revenue will help offset the cost of service," spokesman Joe Maher said.

Duke Power will sell energy — the actual electricity — at cost. Duke also will charge CP&L for capacity, which is a block of potential power plant generation.

Radar Tests

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Aviation Administration has decided to use two airports in North Carolina and Tennessee to test new air traffic control radar that is supposed to increase the volume of traffic the airports can handle.

The new sophisticated radar will be put into the Raleigh-Durham airport in North Carolina and the Memphis, Tenn., airport, a Transportation Department spokesman said Wednesday. The timetable for installation has not been specifically determined.

Both airports had been competing to get the new type of radar under an experimental demonstration project.

Spokesman Ed O'Hara said the radar is designed to be used at airports with closely spaced parallel runways and will permit simultaneous landings with less separation than now is required.

Haig To Run

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Former Secretary of State Alexander Haig says he will announce his candidacy for president next week, and has criticized the Reagan administration for a "cascade of misjudgments."

But Haig, appearing in Charlotte Wednesday night, said the country should rally behind the president.

It's time for the president, Haig said, to "hunker down and begin to wrestle with some of the problems that face America."

Haig plans to kick off his candidacy in a Monday night speech in the ballroom of the Waldorf-Astoria in New York.

Speaking to a conference of auditors in Charlotte, Haig directed most of his criticism at Reagan administration staffers rather than at other contenders for the 1988 Republican nomination.

Police Chief

MOCKSVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Thomas F. Foster has been named police chief of Mocksville.

Foster, 54, who was chief deputy for the Davie County Sheriff's Department, succeeds G. Alton Carter, who retired in February after 14 years on the job.

Terry Bralley, the town administrator, said Foster would begin work April 1.

Continued

MARION, N.C. (AP) — The trial of McDowell County School Superintendent Terry Grier, charged in February with passing a bus unloading students at a Marion elementary school, has been continued until April 8.

Grier's attorney, Frank Goldsmith, asked Judge Samuel Tate to grant the continuance Wednesday.

Death Penalty

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — A Superior Court judge has ruled that a jury will consider the death penalty for a man who admitted killing his wife.

Judge Thomas S. Watts ruled in Craven County Superior Court that the jury will sentence Jerry Demond Carr, 33, of New Bern, for the first-degree murder of his wife, Carol Marie Bryant Carr, on Nov. 7. Jury selection in the sentencing is scheduled to begin May 18.

The sentence for first-degree murder is life imprisonment or the death penalty. If sentenced to life imprisonment, Carr will not be eligible for parole for 20 years.

Robber Foiled

GREENSBORO (AP) — Undercover vice officers preparing to make an arrest in another operation hauled in 27-year-old Michael Anthony Braddy just minutes after a holdup was reported at Gate City Federal Savings and Loan, police Sgt. Dean Harris said Wednesday.

Police stopped Braddy's car at Florida Street and Randleman Road. They found a bag containing money under the front seat of the car, Harris said.

Police charged Braddy with common law robbery. He was placed in the Guilford County Jail in lieu of $50,000 bond.

Cougars Shot

RALEIGH (AP) — Two cougars were found dead in Tyrrell County this week, and the animals have been sent to a center in Georgia for testing, a wildlife official said Wednesday.

Both cougars had been shot, said Angie Hill, a spokeswoman for the North Carolina Wildlife Commission.

"We are investigating that aspect," Mrs. Hill said. "We don't know if there will be any charges. They are protected by federal laws. We don't know at this point how the feds will be involved, if they will be."

One cougar was found Monday night near Columbia in Tyrrell County and the second animal was found Tuesday in the same general area, she said.

Petition

WILKESBORO, N.C. (AP) — A petition calling for a referendum on liquor by the drink is being circulated here by mail.

A letter being distributed by a group called the Committee for the Right to Vote asks registered voters in Wilkesboro to sign an enclosed petition and mail it to a post office box in town. For a referendum to be held, 520 of the town's voters, or 35 percent, must sign the petition before June 8.

In late 1985, a similar petition drive in Wilkesboro was unsuccessful.

Zoo Expansion

ASHEBORO, N.C. (AP) — Researchers found 10,000 artifacts dating back 8,000 years in a part of the area targeted for expansion of the N.C. Zoological Park, and one report recommends that the area be included in the National Register of Historic Places.

"It was concluded ... that this area was significant and eligible for inclusion ... because of the potential the site has of yielding information pertinent to the local and regional prehistory of North Carolina," a preliminary report to the N.C. Department of Cultural Resources from Wake Forest University's Archaeology Laboratories said.

The report, which was based on research this summer, was presented to the N.C. Zoo Council and released Wednesday.

The archaeologists found 9,769 "man-manipulated" artifacts, most of them stone flakes from toolmaking. Also found were arrowheads and sharpened stone tools and blades.

Democrats Unveil Plan For Recruiting Teachers

RALEIGH (AP) — Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan and House Speaker Liston Ramsey have announced a bill to provide $9.7 million for teacher recruitment programs over the next two years, and they used the occasion to criticize Gov. Jim Martin's budget.

"Last year the North Carolina General Assembly laid the groundwork for the nation's most ambitious program of teacher recruiting," Jordan said at a news conference Wednesday. "Today we are announcing the bill that will give the Teacher Recruitment Program substance by providing $9.7 million over the biennium."

"While North Carolina is not alone in attempting to find ways to attract top-notch teachers into public school classrooms, we are alone in attempting to blend scholarships, retraining and marketing efforts aimed at finding a long-term solution to quality in our classrooms," Jordan said.

Much of the money would pay for 400 four-year scholarships of $5,000 a year aimed at top teaching prospects. Those scholarships would be loans to be forgiven once teachers serve four years in North Carolina schools.

In addition, the state would subsidize retraining costs for people willing to return to college to fill areas in which there are teacher shortages and there would be one-time financial incentives to former teachers who have been out of the profession for three or more years if they return.

Jordan said Martin "for some reason forgot to put the teacher development program in the budget," and indicated that was not the only problem with the governor's proposals.

"I've about come to the conclusion that we've got to start back at base one and decide what ought to be in the budget, rather than try to carve on things that he might have recommended," Jordan said. "The governor proposes and the Legislature has to then deal with it, dispose of it."

"They're going to have to find some way to start," he said. "And you've got a balloon that's blown up so tight, if you touch it it bursts. It seems to me that we may have to start back and re-inflate the balloon."

Ramsey also indicated the budget might need to be revamped.

Researcher Tests New AIDS Vaccine

NEW YORK (AP) — Test results reported today by a French researcher who gave himself an experimental AIDS vaccine are significant but do not prove the vaccine works, scientists said of first such trial reported in humans.

Daniel Zagury and 11 other scientists report in a letter to the British journal Nature that the vaccine was given to Zagury and a group of volunteers from Zaire.

The letter says Zagury's immune system created defenses against two varieties of the AIDS virus. But it does not mention whether he was later exposed to the AIDS virus to see if the vaccine prevented infection.

Zagury, of the Pierre and Marie Curie University in Paris, declined Wednesday to elaborate on the report. Initial human tests of vaccines and medicines generally focus on side effects rather than effectiveness.

"It's of considerable interest to the scientific community and I think it's very noble that he did it on himself first," Dr. Robert Gallo, an AIDS researcher at the National Cancer Institute, said Wednesday. "It's an important first step."

In the Nature letter, the researchers wrote that the experiment was prompted by concern that a vaccine that spurs the body only to produce antibodies, which are proteins in blood that recognize foreign invaders, may not be able to fight off more than one variety of the virus.

The experimental vaccine was designed to stimulate a second kind of immune system defense, called cell-mediated response, in which special blood cells also fight invading microorganisms.

The hope is that this defense would protect against more than one strain of the virus that causes acquired immune deficiency syndrome and kill cells already infected by the virus, researchers wrote. The new results are "preliminary work, but it's interesting," said Bernard Moss, chief of the laboratory of viral diseases at the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases.

The experiment used a genetically altered virus called vaccinia. Unaltered vaccinia is used as a smallpox vaccine.

Researchers inserted a gene from the AIDS virus so the vaccinia virus would resemble the AIDS virus and provoke the immune system into mounting a defense against the deadly virus.

The vaccine was administered to Zagury through a series of superficial scratches or punctures on the skin. His body's immune response was studied weekly for nine weeks.

The vaccine activated both antibodies and the cell-mediated response, the Nature letter reports. When blood cells were tested in the laboratory, they were found to be activated against two varieties of the AIDS virus.

The stronger response was against the variety used in making the vaccine, researchers said.

Gallo said the major question now was whether the overall immune response from the vaccine was strong enough to prevent infection by the AIDS virus, and whether it could work against all variants.

Neither Zagury nor the "small group" of Zairian volunteers who received the vaccine had been exposed to the AIDS virus before the tests, the letter said.

Bristol-Myers Wants To Run Human Tests

NEW YORK (AP) — Bristol-Myers Co. plans to seek government approval this month for human tests of an AIDS vaccine that appeared to be partially effective on chimpanzees, a spokesman said today.

Bristol-Myers stock climbed 4% to 107 on Wednesday after the plan was disclosed.

Jerry Parrott, a spokesman for the nation's third-largest pharmaceutical company, said its Oncogen subsidiary, based in Seattle, would ask the Food and Drug Administration to allow it to test the vaccine on humans.

"This is a normal part of the process, and there's a lot of work ahead before we decide if we want to make a new drug application," he said.

Scientists at Oncogen have used genetic engineering to manipulate vaccinia virus so that it manufactures two surface proteins from the AIDS virus — GP-110 and GP-41. In humans, according to theory, the proteins would stimulate the body to produce antibodies.

Dr. George J. Todaro, Oncogen's scientific director, said the chimpanzee experiments had been encouraging. According to the Chicago Tribune, some chimps became infected even after receiving the vaccine, but the infections were fewer than those in a control group.

A number of other companies around the world are testing potential AIDS vaccines.

In the first reported trial of an experimental AIDS vaccine on humans, a French doctor reported he had given the vaccine to himself and a group of volunteers from Zaire.

In a letter to the British journal Nature, researchers in the case said the doctor's immune system created defenses against two varieties of the AIDS virus. But it does not mention whether he was later exposed to the AIDS virus to see if the vaccine prevented infection.

Acquired immune deficiency syndrome devastates the body's defenses against disease, leaving a person prey to other life-threatening infections and certain cancers.

It is caused by a virus that is passed through blood, sexual contact and from infected mothers to their unborn infants.

CONTRA AID — Senate Minority Leader Robert of Kansas, left, talks with Sens. Bob Graham, D-Fla., center, and Jesse Helms, R-N.C., right, on Capitol Hill Wednesday. The discussion took place after the Senate voted 52-48 to release a $40 million aid installment to the Nicaraguan Contras. (AP Laserphoto)

Senate Votes To Free Remaining Contra Aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — Opponents of aid to the Nicaraguan Contras see their narrow defeat in the Senate as "an alarm bell" signaling an eventual end to military aid, while backers say they gained a new chance to win public support for President Reagan's Central America policy.

Wednesday's 52-48 vote to free $40 million in previously approved Contra military aid did not end the debate.

Democrats still were seeking to bring before the Senate a resolution similar to one passed by the House last week that would stall the aid until the administration accounts for past aid money — including any funds diverted from Iranian arms sales.

That resolution would place a moratorium on any future aid money as well as the $40 million, while the administration is given six months to trace the uses of past government and private assistance to the Contras.

Supporters of the rebels had vowed to filibuster the resolution, but after the winning vote Wednesday they said they might let the issue proceed to a vote.

"If we have the votes, there's no reason to filibuster," said Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan. "We just give it the old 'slam dunk.'"

There was no doubt that the Contras would get the $40 million, regardless of the Capitol Hill skirmishes, because opponents have acknowledged they cannot muster the two-thirds majority needed to override a certain presidential veto of any aid cutoff.

But Contra opponents were looking beyond Wednesday's loss to an expected administration request for an additional $105 million for the Contras for 1988, which could be blocked by a simple majority.

"This vote is not a victory for the administration's course of action in Central America," said Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va. "It is an alarm bell. It says the American people have grave reservations about the administration's policies."

Byrd and others pointed to the history of sharply divided votes on Contra aid, and said no policy that provokes such division in Congress can be sustained over the long period it will take to achieve peace in Central America.

Byrd said present policy presents a choice "between the unworkable and the unacceptable" — unworkable, he said, because money cannot transform the Contras into an effective fighting force; unacceptable because the policy could lead to the eventual use of U.S. troops in the region.

Deaver Indicted

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former White House aide Michael K. Deaver says he is innocent of perjury charges contained in an indictment that gives new details on his use of government connections to lobby for corporate and foreign clients.

The former deputy chief of staff faces up to 25 years in prison if convicted of five counts of lying about his lobbying activities to Congress and to the federal grand jury that indicted him Wednesday.

A longtime friend of President Reagan and wife Nancy, Deaver professed his innocence to reporters as the president issued a public statement wishing him well.

The indictment alleged, among other things, that Deaver lied to a federal grand jury when he denied contacting anyone in the government on behalf of Trans World Airlines, the first client he got after leaving the White House in May 1985.

According to the indictment, Deaver contacted "Secretary of Transportation Elizabeth Dole in connection with TWA's efforts to block or delay a bid by Carl Icahn to gain control of TWA."

The charges said Deaver also contacted Dole's deputy and a White House official on the same matter.

The indictment said Deaver made the contacts "in an attempt to involve the Cabinet Council on Economic Policy in blocking or delaying the Icahn takeover bid."

Deaver had testified to the grand jury that "I don't recall any government contact I made on behalf of TWA."

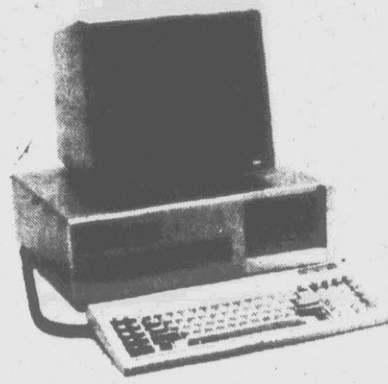

A Transportation Department official, speaking Wednesday night on condition he not be identified, said Mrs. Dole does not recall details of the conversation she had with Deaver. The official said the conversation Deaver had with Mrs. Dole's deputy, James Burnley, concerned procedures for challenging Icahn's takeover efforts.

TWA management filed a petition seeking to have the Transportation Department declare Icahn not stable enough financially to take over an airline as large as TWA. The Transportation Department rejected the petition June 10, 1985.

The indictment marked the first detailed disclosures of Deaver's efforts on behalf of TWA.

House OKs Speed Limit, Highway Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — A 65 mph speed limit for many rural highways and an $88.6 billion highway bill, both approved by the House, face a minor hurdle in the Senate but a possible brick wall at the White House.

The House approved a measure Wednesday that would allow states to increase speed limits to 65 mph on interstate highways outside urban areas with populations of at least 50,000.

The 217-206 vote was seen as the final meaningful congressional test of the speed limit proposal because the Senate has gone on record repeatedly as overwhelmingly favoring it.

That tally came shortly after the lawmakers passed, 407-17, the highway measure, which will distribute assistance to states and communities for road and bridge projects and for mass transit systems.

"I think people realized the troops out in the rural areas of our country weren't abiding by the law," Rep. Kenneth Gray, D-Ill., an active supporter of the 65 mph proposal, said after the vote. "The American people have spoken."

The measures were expected to be passed and combined into one package by the Senate as early as today.

But a note of warning was coming from the Reagan administration, which for months has said the spending levels of the highway bill would invite a veto.

"A veto will be recommended by the Department of Transportation," said H. Joseph Rhodes, special assistant to the chief of the Federal Highway Administration.

The main problem, he said, was a provision that would provide $890 million in federal assistance — in addition to the money distributed to states under aid formulas — to help pay for about 120 so-called demonstration projects. These road and bridge projects were sought by representatives and senators for their home districts and states.

Administration officials also have said the measure would spend too much money for mass transit.

Most lawmakers were cautious in evaluating their chances of mustering a two-thirds vote in each chamber to override a veto.

Welfare Proposal Creates Minimums

WASHINGTON (AP) — A comprehensive welfare reform proposal backed by the House Democratic leadership would set a minimum benefits standard and require some recipients to participate in an education, training and work program.

The "Family Support Program" that would replace the Aid to Families with Dependent Children program was unveiled Wednesday by Rep. Harold Ford, D-Tenn., chairman of the Ways and Means subcommittee on public assistance. He said he would introduce the bill today.

Ford said the plan, developed after taking testimony from more than 100 witnesses during two years of hearings, was presented to the House leadership Wednesday. He said Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, has designated it "the official vehicle" for welfare reform and wants it to be on the floor by mid-May.

"We feel the bill will make work more attractive than welfare," Ford said. He estimated the program would cost $600 million to $800 million in fiscal year 1988 and $2.5 billion annually when it is fully phased in.

"Over time, these families will be independent of the welfare system and it'll end up saving taxpayers money in the long run," Ford said.

Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., is scheduled to introduce a similar comprehensive welfare reform bill in the Senate, possibly as early as next month.

The Ford bill would require cash assistance payments equal to 15 percent of median income in each state, a standard the Congressional Research Service calculates would mean 18 states would have to raise benefits.

The increases would range from $11 annually for a three-person family in West Virginia to $1,734 for the same family in Alabama. Ford said the states would have to start boosting benefits immediately but would have six years to comply fully. The federal and state shares, which vary from state to state, would remain the same.

To encourage work, a standard deduction of $100 plus 25 percent of remaining earnings would be disregarded in determining eligibility for cash assistance. In addition, the earned income tax credit would be disregarded for FSP purposes.

Child support enforcement efforts would be strengthened, requiring paternity establishment in all cases and uniform guidelines for child support awards in all states.

The work component of the welfare overhaul would be called the National Education, Training and Work program (NETWork). Parents of children age 6 or older would have to participate. States could lower that to age 3. They also could apply for a waiver and include parents of even younger children if they could demonstrate day care was available.

Ford said the work programs would serve as many people as states can afford to serve, starting with certain target groups, with no cap on federal money available. But he said intensive services must be offered — not just the job search most commonly available under current programs.

Among NETWork's provisions: —States would have to offer high school or equivalent education, remedial education, job search services, job readiness training and counseling to people with personal problems preventing them from having jobs. They also would have to offer at least two other activities such as on-the-job training and public employment or workfare programs.

—The federal government would pick up 75 percent of the NETWork tab; states would pay 25 percent.

Hemlines On The Rise Again In Italian Styles

By NINA HYDE
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

MILAN, Italy — Just when you thought designers had made the world safe for skirts of any length, the established designers here have made it clear: Shorter is better. Gianni Versace opened his show with business suits for women with midlength skirts. Byblos, catering to a younger crowd, sent models down the runway in flared skating skirts and mini-kilts. The Fendi fabrics and furs as well as the Mario Valentino leathers were far more of ten short than long.

Even though lots of long full coats are being shown with the short skirts — these collections are for winter — clearly the newer coat length is the above-the-knee or shorter. Even the shorter jacket, often flared at the back, is an important proportion being offered.

And without a doubt, hedging with a below-the-knee-length skirt is decidedly dowdy. "You'll see, short is here," said Bill Ruben, chairman of (Washington-based) Garfinckel's. "Even the house of Andre' Laug, which is worn by a not-all-that-young customer, showed everything above the knee."

Ruben said expects women will take to the shorter length for evening — in fact they already are, even in Washington. Soon the daytime minis will follow.

Of course, some long skirts are being shown. Long skinny skirts with stretch in the fabric so they don't bind the legs are the pet of avant-garde designers like Romeo Gigli. Others, like Krizia, show hemlines both long and short. (One of the show stoppers at Krizia was a long tailored jacket worn with a miniskirt of blue lace.) But from the first few days of the Milan collections, the message is clear: Wear short or wear pants.

Many of those on hand to receive this message are already in above-the-knee skirts. More than 1,300 buyers from around the world — 40 percent of them American — are here to scout fresh clothes for next fall. And 956 fashion writers for newspapers and magazines (10 percent more than last season), plus 25 television camera crews, are watching what is sent down the runway. The message is going to get through.

First down the runway at the jampacked Gianni Versace show Monday night at the Fiera, the fairground on the edge of Milan, were models in broad-shouldered, long tailored jackets and supershort skirts. Tiny as they were, the skirts were never plain but tiered, pieced or draped. The models all wore black sheer hose and high heels. Their hair was slicked back or molded up high like Max Headroom's.

Versace also put to rest the notion that the broad-shouldered look is collapsing. While many designers are rounding off shoulders and deflating shoulder pads, Versace's shoulders are even more exaggerated than before, almost like a ledge on the top of the jacket. Versace calls them "box shoulders" and they look like the box was left inside the jacket.

Princess Caroline of Monaco and her husband Stefano Casiraghi were in the front row at Gianfranco Ferre's show Monday night. She was wearing an above-the-knee suit in navy, just like one that went down the runway. Ferre, like others, made a strong point of the pants alternative to the short, short skirt, and his often had a bright tuxedo stripe down the side.

At the Fendi show Princess Caroline wore a Chanel suit designed by Karl Lagerfeld, who also designs for Fendi. "I've always preferred the shorter length," she said after the show.

There were endless variations on the short theme at Fendi, including short wool dresses edged in fake fur as well as short dance dresses of real fur.

Fur coats, from a remarkable printed summer ermine to sable, were mostly well above the knee and flared at the hem. In another era they might have been called "fingertip length" or "three-quarter." In the current fashion lingo, these are the new full-length coats, even with the hem of the new short skirts.

"Who needs those yards of fabric or fur around the legs," said Lynn Manulis, president of Martha's in New York, after the show. "All of our women are in good shape today. Women of 60 are in exercise classes with women of 40 and look just as good."

Added Marjorie Deane, chairman of the Tobe Report, which guides retail executives in their buying and merchandising plans, "Women who have enjoyed the social security of long skirts for the past two years will be surprised and pleased to see how much younger they will look and feel in the short skirts that are about to happen."

Should Parents Boycott?

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My 30-year-old sister is finally getting married. She is having a formal church wedding, reception and sit-down dinner for 200 guests, but no children!

However, she has made one exception — our 7-year-old daughter, whom she has asked to be the flower girl in the wedding. We accepted. The catch is that we also have a 4-year-old daughter whom my sister is specifically not inviting.

Naturally, we objected. We told her that we were not about to hurt the feelings of our younger daughter, and if she can't go to the wedding, none of us (including our older daughter) will attend. My sister insists that we are being insensitive to her feelings and her rights as the bride-to-be.

Abby, the wedding is two months away, and there has been no compromise. Who is being insensitive — the bride, or are we? — BIG BAD BROTHER IN HAWAII

DEAR BROTHER: You are. It's the bride's big day. To "boycott" her wedding by refusing to allow your daughter to be her flower girl — and absenting yourselves unless she invites your 4-year-old — would, in my view, be a serious mistake.

Also, consider the precedent you'd be setting if you arranged for your younger daughter to be invited everywhere big sister went. Think about it.

DEAR ABBY: The last year of my military duty I decided to have a tattoo on my upper arm. I now have a civilian job and have been in it for the last two years.

I was recently tested for AIDS, and I tested positive! I am not a homosexual, I am not a drug abuser, I have never had a blood transfusion and, although this may be hard to believe, I have never had sex without a condom.

Abby, please let your readers know of my experience, but please do not identify me in any way. — UNCERTAIN FUTURE

DEAR UNCERTAIN: It's commendable of you to want to warn others. I consulted Dr. Arnold Klein, an eminent dermatologist and a director of the American Foundation for AIDS Research. He said, "It is important to know WHEN you were tested, also if confirmatory testing was done to be sure your reaction was not a false positive. Although it's theoretically feasible to transmit AIDS from a very shallow needle puncture, the incidence on record is rare."

Since you are in none of the high-risk groups, you should repeat the tests, and if you ARE indeed positive, then see your physician to determine the status of your immune system and to what extent the virus has affected your body. Then determine what you must do to protect yourself and keep from spreading the virus. Your physician will instruct you.

Any group or organization that would like to charter bus service through the Greenville Area Transit (GREAT) system should call the city's Public Works Department at 752-4137. Charters can be arranged to destinations within a 50 mile radius of Greenville. The service is available 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

Puppeteer Bil Baird Dies At His Home

NEW YORK (AP) — Bil Baird, the puppeteer who created early television's Charlemagne the Lion and Sluggo Ryan, has died at age 82. Baird had been weakened by bone marrow cancer and died Wednesday of pneumonia, said his daughter, Laura Baird. Charlemagne, a hand puppet, appeared on CBS' "The Morning Show" with Jack Paar in the early 1950s. "He was sort of a commentator, a wit, a puppet pundit," said Arthur Cantor, who was a producer and publicity agent for Baird. "He sort of was Bil personified, a good-natured lion. That's a good way to characterize Bil." Sluggo Ryan was a cigarette-smoking piano player. Baird appeared with his puppets on TV shows with Ed Sullivan and Jack Paar and on Sid Caesar's "Show of Shows." He also hid a series with his third wife, Cora, "Life with Snarky Parker." Baird and his studio also made hundreds of TV commercials, including some for Wheaties cereal. Born William Britton Baird in Grand Island, Neb., he used to say he spelled his first name with one "I" because "no one ever pronounced the other one anyway," according to his brother George. Baird teamed up with Tony Sarg to build and direct puppets in a show at the 1933 Chicago's World Fair. He met Cora, also a puppeteer, while appearing in Depression-era work projects in 1936-37, and in 1943 their Bil and Cora Baird Marionettes performed in the Ziegfeld Follies. Baird received an Emmy nomination in 1958 for "Art Carney Meets Peter and the Wolf." His 1965 book "The Art of the Puppet" is considered a classic in its field. Survivors include a daughter and son.

President Says Will Seek Funds To Fight Acid Rain

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is renewing a pledge to Canada to do more about acid rain, but environmentalists are saying Reagan is not doing enough to solve the problem himself.

The president said in a statement Wednesday he would seek $2.5 billion over five years to move into commercial use the new technologies that cut the precursor emissions of acid rain.

This is the sum that special representatives of Reagan and Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney called for more than a year ago in a program that the president and other officials have said they supported — but without requesting new money to meet the target.

Mulroney asked Reagan in a telephone call early this year to re-examine the funds devoted to the program, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said. The prime minister has requested a decision before this year's summit conference of the two leaders in Ottawa April 5-6.

Energy Secretary John Herrington said budget amendments would be submitted to Congress within the next few weeks. His department is considering 139 requests for $5 billion in projects that would meet the representatives' criteria of benefit to Canada, adaptability to existing plants and maximum emissions reductions for the dollar.

Reagan said an advisory committee with Canadian members — also foreseen by the report to Mulroney and Reagan — will guide Herrington's selection of projects.

Jet Leaves Runway

GANDER, Newfoundland (AP) — A Soviet airliner skidded off a runway and its wing sliced through a snowbank early today as it was landing at Gander International Airport.

No injuries were reported among the 190 passengers and crew, but the cover was torn off the aircraft's engine and several runway lights were smashed, said airport manager John Pittman.

The pilot managed to steer the jetliner back onto the runway and taxi to the terminal, Pittman said.

He said the runway was closed after the incident.

Transport Canada officials were investigating why the aircraft landed well off the center of the runway. Pittman said the runway was clear and weather conditions were good.

The plane had been en route to Moscow from Havana, Cuba. Its passengers were taken to hotels in this central Newfoundland town, and another Aeroflot plane was to arrive tonight to take them to Moscow.

Stewart Said Offered ECU Post

The position of head basketball coach at East Carolina University apparently belongs to Bruce Stewart — if he wants it.

Stewart was believed offered the job in a second meeting with East Carolina officials Wednesday afternoon.

The school held a midmorning press conference Wednesday to introduce its new women's basketball coach, Pat Pierson, who replaces Emily Manwaring. Manwaring, who coached the Lady Pirates for three seasons, resigned in late January.

Pierson comes to East Carolina following a highly successful nine-year career at Northwestern State University in Louisiana.

Manwaring's resignation came less than a week after the resignation of men's coach Charlie Harrison was announced, ending his five year association with the school.

The search for new coaches has been going on since then, and the two leading candidates for the men's job seemed to have settled around Stewart, presently the head coach at Middle Tennessee State and Bob Huggins of Akron. Ironically, both coaches head teams currently in the Ohio Valley Conference.

Stewart was interviewed in Greenville last Saturday, and was quoted in the Nashville Tennessean as saying that he had talked with ECU, but that no offer had been made to him at the time, and he planned to be at Middle Tennessee State next year.

Huggins, meanwhile, was interviewed on Tuesday. It is also believed that Tom Chapman, the head coach at Division II powerhouse Gannon — currently playing in the final four of Division II — was also interviewed about the job. Chapman was one of the finalists when Harrison was given the job five years ago.

Wednesday afternoon, Stewart, accompanied by one of his current assistants, Ralph Radford, was again in the offices of Dr. Ken Karr, the ECU athletic director. It is believed that the offer was extended at that time.

Dr. Karr had said earlier this year that he hoped to introduce the new coach either Friday or Monday in a press conference.

Meanwhile, Stewart's wife, Robin, told the Tennessean that her husband had told her to tell the newspaper that "he definitely will not take the job." But she added that she had not talked with him since he met with the ECU officials.

The athletic director at Middle Tennessee told the Ten- nessean that Stewart told him that it would take a "tremendous package" for East Carolina to attract him. Stewart, according to the Nashville newspaper, is currently making $50,000 a year. Harrison was paid only $30,000 annually throughout the length of his contract.

But Tennessee observers also said that for Stewart to have taken Radford with him to the meeting indicated things might be serious. Radford is Stewart's top recruiter.

Stewart has just completed his third season at Middle Tennessee State, where he took the Blue Raiders to the NCAA for the second time in three years. In between, he earned a bid to the National Invitational Tournament. This year's team lost to Notre Dame in the first round by a single point.

Stewart has an overall five year head coaching record of 126-41, having served two years at West Virginia Wesleyan before coming to Middle Tennessee. His first team at the Tennessee school finished fourth in the regular season but then won the tournament, earning the automatic NCAA berth. His second team tied with Austin Peay for the league regular season title, but lost in the finals of the tournament, advancing on to the NIT. This year, his team won the regular season title outright, but lost in the tournament. Middle Tennessee was then awarded the first-ever at-large berth for the OVC into the NCAA field.

While at West Virginia Wesleyan, he guided his team to two straight appearances in the NAIA national tournament. His 1982-83 team finished second in the nation and his 1983-84 team advanced to the quarterfinals.

Prior to that, he coached at Volunteer State Community College, taking that team to two straight national junior college tournament appearances. His record there for three years was 73-19. At Wesleyan, he was 64-9.

Stewart holds B.S. degrees from both Jacksonville State and Auburn, and holds a masters from Jacksonville State.

He spent two years as an assistant coach at Chattanooga Valley Community College and Phenix City, Ala., and was a graduate assistant at Jacksonville State for one year prior to taking the head job at Volunteer State in 1979.

He and his wife have two children.

Should Stewart turn down the offer, ECU would then take another look at Huggins, who is 126-57 overall, and Chapman, who is 212-51, among others.

Salisbury Likes Full Court Game

By TOM MORRIS

It will be a game of contrasting styles when Salisbury and Farmville Central face off for the state 2-A high school basketball championship.

Salisbury, 29-2, likes to play the whole court, according to Hornet coach Sam Gealy.

"They've got good size," he said.

"We're a little bigger than they are. They like to slow it down and play a halfcourt game more than we do.

"We're averaging about 68 points a game and I think they're holding their opponents to about 48 points a game. There's going to be clashing styles out there. We're not a true fast-breaking team but we'll try to take advantage of it in some situations."

The Hornets boast a balanced scoring attack. Bryan Withers, a 6-6 post player, averages 13.7 points a game to lead Salisbury. Fred Campbell, a 6-7 post man, chips in 13.3 points a game while Donald Jenkins, a 6-4 point guard, also averages in double figures at 12.5 points a game.

Gealy said the Hornets feature a double post attack on offense centered around Campbell and Withers.

Salisbury defeated Lexington, 64-49, to win the Eastern Regional. That win negated an earlier loss to Lexington. The Hornets only other loss was to 4-A East Mecklenburg.

"We start four juniors and a senior and at one time or another last year, they all had starting experiences," Gealy said. "We started off fast and we've just been able to continue playing well through the entire season."

At this point in the year, Gealy said he doesn't expect much to change for the Hornets. "You aren't going to change much. We're going to do pretty much what we do best. We probably, and they have too, seen just about everything," he said.

The 3-A western regionals were held at Hickory High School last week. Gealy said he is unsure of how his team will react to the Smith Center since they have not yet played in a large arena.

Gealy said playing in the Smith Center is something both teams are going to have to adjust to. "The first part of the ballgame is when you just try to get everything under control and (then) get down to playing," he said.

North Gaston Fits The Image

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

If ever there was a team that fit the Cinderella image, it is the North Gaston boy's basketball team which will face D.H. Conley in the State 3-A Championship Saturday in Chapel Hill.

The Wildcats, 15-14, finished the regular season as the number five team in the Southwestern Conference, but then rebounded to win three games and advance to the

North Gaston Wildcats
□3-A Western Champion
□Record: 15-14
□Conference: Southwestern

western regionals, with one of the victims being defending state champion Rutherford-Spindale Central.

North Gaston then topped Wilkes Central and Swannanoa C.D. Owen to advance to Chapel Hill.

Wildcat coach Hal White said the key has been hard work and game-to-game improvement.

"We started out the year with two guys with experience," he said. "We knew we had a lot of physical ability but we just had no (overall) experience. It was just a matter of working hard and trying to improve and learning from our mistakes."

North Gaston is led by Alton Mintz, a 6-0 guard who was named MVP of the Western Regional. He averages 15.9 points a game and is supported by Albert Watson (13.2 ppg) and center Ricky Jackson (11.1).

"A lot of it is the confidence factor," White said of the team's turnaround. "I think more than anything else, we cut down on our turnovers. We've really had a fantastic five games as far as handling the ball. Everybody is doing their job. Everybody has their role."

"Against R-S Central, we had five guys in double figures. I don't think there is a definite weakness on our team."

The Wildcats will be at a slight height disadvantage against Conley, primarily in the middle, but White said his team has played against bigger teams all through the sectionals and the regionals and it hasn't been a problem.

"Ricky Jackson may only be 6-4, but he has long arms. We have a lot of quickness and we have good jumping ability," White added.

Should the glass slipper continue to fit the Wildcats, White said it important for them to concentrate on the task before them.

"If you do things right, you shouldn't worry about your opponent," he said. "Make sure you do what you're supposed to and do it right. In the same sense, it's awful important to know their strengths and weaknesses. (But) it really doesn't take very long in the game to figure out what their strengths and weaknesses are."

'Bama, Kansas Face Big East

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Ninth-ranked Alabama and No. 20 Kansas face identical problems tonight in the semifinals of the NCAA Southeast Regional basketball tournament — full-court pressure defense from a pair of Big East Conference teams.

"I don't think we've faced any team that presses as much as they do," Alabama guard Mark Gottfried said of Providence, the Crimson Tide's foe in the 6:37 p.m. EST opener of the Freedom Hall doubleheader.

"That's definitely a key for us, being able to handle the press," Gottfried said at a news conference Wednesday.

"I don't think anybody faces the kind of pressure Georgetown gives you," Kansas Coach Larry Brown said. "If we don't handle the pressure, I don't think we'll be around very long."

Alabama, the Southeastern Conference champion riding an 11-game winning streak, and No. 4 Georgetown, which has a 13-game winning streak on the line, are favored to advance to Saturday's regional championship game, with a berth in the Final Four at stake.

This is the fourth time in seven years that Alabama, 28-4, has reached the regional semifinals under Coach Wimp Sanderson, but the Tide has never reached a regional title game.

"You get this far along, everybody is extremely good," Sanderson said. "If you have one bad game, then certainly, you're out of it."

The Tide has a veteran team that includes three fifth-year seniors and a balanced attack in which all five starters are averaging in double figures.

Derrick McKey, a 6-foot-9 junior center, was named the Southeastern Conference Player of the Year this season. He is averaging 18.9 points and 7.6 rebounds per game.

Providence, 23-8, will counter with its long-range bombers headed by Bill Donovan, who scored 35 points in the Friars' first-round victory over Alabama-Birmingham and 25 in their second-round overtime decision over Austin Peay.

Donovan is averaging 20.9 points per game and has shot 40 percent from 3-point range. The Friars lead the nation in 3-point baskets, averaging 8.25 per contest. Donovan has 91, Ernie Lewis 90 and Delray Brooks 60.

Coach Rick Pitino says Alabama is one of the top teams in the nation.

"They're a veteran ballclub that doesn't make mistakes," the Providence coach said. "In order for us to win, we'll have to force them into more mistakes than they're used to making."

Pitino says he's also concerned about Alabama's free-throw shooting because his team commits a lot of fouls in its full-court defense. Alabama leads the nation in free-throw shooting with 78.4 percent.

The Tide is coming off a sizzling performance from the field, shooting an NCAA first and second-round record 72.7 percent in last week's 101-76 victory over New Orleans.

"Too much hype is put on momentum and too much hype is put on your last game," Sanderson said.

The Georgetown-Kansas matchup will feature two young teams built around two All-Americans — Reggie Williams of the Hoyas and Danny Manning of the Jayhawks.

Williams averaged 23 points and eight rebounds for Georgetown, 28-4, which is trying to reach the national championship game for the fourth time in six years. The Hoyas won the title in 1984.

Kansas, 25-10, has made seven Final Four appearances in its history and won the national title in 1952.

Manning, who had a career-high 42 points against Southwest Missouri State last Sunday, is averaging 23 points and nine rebounds per game for the Jayhawks.

It will be the first meeting between the two teams.

Brewers Kick Off Fund Drive With $50,000 Gift

The Pitt/Greenville Chapter of the East Carolina University Pirate Club kicked off its 1987 fund drive Wednesday with the receipt of a $50,000 lead gift.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Brewer of Kentucky Fried Chicken presented a check for the gift to Dave Hart, executive director of the Pirate Club and Kay Gay, Pitt/Greenville Fund Drive chairwoman.

Funds generated through the drive go to support athletic scholarships at the university.

Chancellor Richard Eakin, who was the principal speaker for the luncheon meeting held at the Sheraton, called the gift "a truly outstanding beginning for the '87 fund drive."

Eakin also pledged to the group to help build a nationally recognized athletic program at East Carolina, but to do so with "integrity," and also cautioned supporters against the kind of excesses found in some schools recently.

Hart, in accepting the gift, said that the Brewers and Kentucky Fried Chicken have been extremely supportive of "our efforts to reach the long-range goals which have been set forth for our athletic program. They have enthusiastically assisted us in our advertising and marketing efforts, our networking efforts, and our fund raising efforts."

"This very generous gift magnifies their confidence in our program's future growth and responsibilities as the university's most visible ambassador. We are most appreciative that they have enabled us to begin 1987 in such a positive vein," Hart added.

Adams To Fight 2.0 Rule

RALEIGH (AP) — The executive director of the North Carolina High School Athletic Association says he will fight to the bitter end a proposal in the General Assembly that would require high school athletes to have a 2.0 average to participate in sports.

"You think by raising the standards that kids will suck it up and go after it, and a lot of them will," NCHSAA Executive Director Charlie Adams said this week. "But then there are a lot of kids who have already sucked it up and can't get there. We don't want to weed these kids out."

Adams said he has been concerned since last week, when state Sen. Robert Somers, R-Rowan, introduced a bill that would require all students participating in high school activities, including athletics, to have at least a 2.0 grade point average. The NCHSAA, which has governed its own academic standards since 1913, requires an athlete to pass a minimum of four courses per semester to be eligible to play high school sports.

"Our phone has rung off the hook since this thing has come out," Adams said. "The coaches have a real concern. They look at their teams and see some kids that are spending their lunch hours to study in order to pass, but there is no way in the world they can get a 2.0."

Adams contends that the NCHSAA is geared toward participation, and that only 1 percent of the 100,000 student-athletes in the state will go on to play college sports.

"Our position is that our job is to progress kids toward graduation and your job (the colleges) is to determine who is college potential," Adams said. "I think what is going on right now is a spinoff to what is going on in the colleges now."

But Somers argues that lower standards cheat the students. He says the NCHSAA's current four-course requirement does not give athletes the 21 credits they need to graduate from high school in North Carolina.

"I have right here before me their (NCHSAA) handbook," Somers said in a telephone interview Wednesday. "They devote a page and a half to academics. They require the athletes to pass four credits. You and I both know that one will be P.E. (physical education) and shop and whatever the coach teaches."

"In my opinion, it is an idea that is a long time coming. Wake County already requires what my bill requires. I know when I played I had to pass to play. Their standards are such that they are cheating the athlete."

Two years ago, the NCHSAA raised its requirements to make athletes pass four courses, instead of three. Whiteville city school superintendent Jerry Paschal, who was chairman of the academic committee that proposed the additional course, said the committee discussed a GPA requirement. However, Paschal said the committee decided at the time a GPA requirement was not needed.

"I think a lot of people outside education have a lot more respect for grades than some of us," Paschal said Wednesday. "We (in education) know that grades even vary from classroom to classroom."

"When you have a GPA requirement, you have got to be sure you are not eliminating some people that are doing the best they can," Paschal said.

"The NCHSAA has been working with its own standards for some time now and if you start messing around with it the whole bottom will drop out," Paschal added. "It could force a crack and that could be devastating."

Adams said he would not be opposed to raising the minimum standard to five passing courses because, "I think that is a realistic goal. There are kids in this state that can pass their work but not make a 2.0."

"It is not set in stone," Somers said. "I would love to see it as I put it in."

Somers said he is even willing to concede the 2.0 GPA requirement for legislation that requires five passing courses.

"There is an unwritten rule over here that no Republican bill will pass," he said. "I would like to see it passed and if they want to take my name off of it all the power to them."

"I guess what bothers me more than anything else is that everybody is not intended to go to college," Adams said about the proposed legislation. "Deep down inside, I feel it won't pass. But I feel sitting here I have a responsibility to 100,000 athletes in this state. It would be easy to sit back and say this thing is not going to do anything — let it run its course and it will be voted down."

"Then again, I get kind of shaky and feel like if I sit here and gamble on that and then all of the sudden this thing picks up speed, then it's too late to do anything about it," Adams said.

Drivers Like New Darlington

DARLINGTON, S.C. (AP) — A smoother, faster and better handling Darlington International Raceway will greet NASCAR drivers next week — and Bobby Hillin expects his companions to take advantage of the situation.

"I think you'll see a lot of people getting gutsy in the race," Hillin said of the TransSouth 500 Winston Cup stock car race March 29. "The track has all the same characteristics it did — this is a one-of-a-kind track. It's just smoother."

Hillin and other drivers — including Richard Petty, Buddy Baker and Bobby Allison — tested their cars on the newly paved 1.366-mile oval track Wednesday in preparation for the TransSouth.

"The more we run on it, it'll get better, and even faster yet," Allison said. "But there'll be a lot of smudges on the wall when practice starts next week."

Baker said the raceway may have a new face but it's as tough as ever. "It's still a tough old son-of-a-gun," he said. "We're cutting a new groove and we're still trying to find the limit."

"We've been getting braver. I just hope we don't run out of race track before we run out of nerve," said Baker, who lives nearby in Florence and has won two races at the track.

Baker toured the raceway at 158.12 mph in his Crisco Oldsmobile as he and other drivers tested their cars.

Tickets; Broadcast

Tickets for two state championship games involving D.H. Conley and Farmville Central, to be played Saturday in the Dean Smith Student Center in Chapel Hill, are on sale at their respective schools' principal's office.

Farmville Central will face Salisbury at 2 p.m. for the state 2-A championship while Conley takes on North Gaston at 6 p.m. for the 3-A boys title.

The advance tickets are $4 each as compared to $5 at the gate.

The Conley game will be broadcast live over WRQR-FM, 94.3, starting at 6 p.m. In addition, updates on the Farmville Central game will be broadcast from time to time throughout the afternoon.

Benny Parsons of Ellerbe, N.C., had the best time of the day at 158.890 mph in his Folger's Chevrolet. The track record of 159.197 mph was set by Geoff Bodine during last spring's TransSouth race.

Hillin toured the track in 158.38 mph. Allison, a five-time winner at Darlington, came in at 158.02, and Petty, the all-time leader in victories on the Winston Cup circuit, was at 157.26 mph.

Darlington, the oldest superspeedway on the NASCAR circuit, has a reputation as a narrow, treacherous race track. Several bumps and dips in the old pavement helped add to that reputation.

"They got rid of a couple bumps, especially in turn four, and I think that's neat," Allison said. "But it's very much the same old Darlington. It's mysterious. You can run a good lap here and you can't be 100 percent sure the next lap how you ran it."

BETHEL — North Pitt High School romped to a 14-8 softball victory over Roanoke High School in action Wednesday afternoon.

Both teams pushed over five runs in the first inning of the game. Then, in the fifth, Roanoke scored three times to move back out into the lead, 8-5.

But North Pitt rallied for nine hits, one of them a three-run homer by Maggie Blount, to score nine times in the bottom of the fifth and charge back into the lead for good, 14-8.

Melody Harrington, Blount and Donna Leggett each had three hits for North Pitt while Keisha Pilgreen, Esther Witherspoon, Sabrina Baker, Renee Jacobs and Shenita Witherspoon each added two.

Roanoke was led by Amy Stegal with three, while Nancy Johnson, Shonique Jones and Robbie Harris each had two. One of Johnson's was a double.

North Pitt is now 1-1 while Roanoke falls to 0-3.

North Pitt plays host to West Craven on Friday, while Roanoke entertains Washington.

First Testing Results Good

By The Associated Press

Nothing in the NCAA's basketball drug-testing has come up positive thus far — which means that everything is positive.

The Associated Press contacted all 32 first-round winners. Twelve reported no positive test results while the others either said they had not heard from the NCAA or were not available for comment.

The 12 teams reporting everything A-OK were Alabama, DePaul, Duke, Florida, Georgetown, Indiana, Kansas, Nevada-Las Vegas, North Carolina, Notre Dame, Oklahoma and Wyoming.

The initial basketball tests were taken after opening-round games last Thursday and Friday. Another round of tests will be done following the regional semifinals Thursday and Friday.

The tests are given to the seven players on each team with the most playing time and an eighth chosen at random. Any player testing positive will be declared ineligible for further tournament play although the team will be allowed to continue.

Jeff Fogelson, athletic director at Xavier of Ohio, said he hadn't heard from the NCAA about the drug-testing.

"I'm assuming that means everything was fine, and that's the way we expected it to be," Fogelson said, adding that Xavier's entire team was tested as part of the school's program before the Midwestern Collegiate Conference tournament.

John Lewandowski, associate sports information director at Auburn, said, "We should have been contacted by Monday if there was anything positive. No news is good news."

Florida Coach Norm Sloan said his players were tested 10 days ago "and everybody came back all right."

Athletic Director Brad Rothermel of No. 1-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas said the NCAA contacted him with the news that all the Runnin' Rebels passed their drug tests.

The procedure of testing immediately after games drew criticism from some players and coaches. Because they were dehydrated from the games, many players had problems providing urine samples. Some waited for hours.

"I'm for drug testing, but that was ridiculous," Kansas Coach Larry Brown said. "I know it's good and I know it's important but there has to be a better way."

Wyoming Coach Jim Brandenburg called the testing an invasion of privacy.

"It's aggravating for the players to have to go through it after a game, but the players are willing to through with it," Brandenburg said. "We've got a situation where we need to do something, we need to have a deterrent."

Peace Tops Lady Pirates

RALEIGH — Peace College romped to a 9-0 tennis victory over East Carolina's Lady Pirates Wednesday.

The Lady Pirates failed to contest the match except in the number four singles where Susan Montjoy forced three sets, two of them going to a 12th game to decide.

The loss drops East Carolina to 4-3 on the spring. They return to action on Friday, hosting Elon College.

Lady Pirates Bow To UConn

The University of Connecticut swept a doubleheader from East Carolina's Lady Pirate softball team Wednesday.

Connecticut won the first game, 3-1, then came back with a 3-0 victory in the second.

East Carolina was limited to only one hit in the shutout, that a triple by Mickey Ford.

The Lady Huskies pushed over one run in the first inning of the opening game to take the lead, then won it in the third, scoring twice.

In the third, Sandy Bartlucchi tripled and scored on a single by Kim Black. Lisa Rogers doubled to drive in Black for a 3-0 lead.

East Carolina came back to score its only run in the fifth off a triple by Kathy Schrage.

Rogers led the UConn hitting with two.

In the second game, Connecticut repeated its offense of the first game, scoring a single run in the first and two more in the third. The game-winner in the first came when Black crossed the plate after a bases-loaded walk was issued by ECU Tracye Larkin.

The loss dropped the Lady Pirates to 6-8 on the year. They return to action today, traveling to UNC-Wilmington.

Syracuse Worried About Florida

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Of course Syracuse Coach Jim Boeheim is concerned about Florida. And why not? Boeheim knows the Gators are a good basketball team, one that even has Ronald Reagan playing second fiddle to them tonight in the NCAA East Regional, at least on some Florida television stations. Tenth-ranked Syracuse, 28-6, will meet upstart Florida, 23-10, at 6:37 p.m. EST in the first game of the NCAA's Sweet 16 at the Brendan Byrne Arena with No. 2 North Carolina, 31-3, looking to avenge an earlier loss against No. 18 Notre Dame in the second game, scheduled at 9:11 p.m. "Florida is very balanced," said

Boeheim. "Their guards are as good as any in the country. They shoot well as a team from the outside and yet can score from inside. You also have to look at what they've done." What the sixth-seeded Gators have done in their first NCAA tournament appearance is impressive. They blew out Atlantic Coast Conference tournament champion North Carolina State with a 17-point second-half run in the first round and ripped Big Ten co-champion Purdue by 19 points in the second round. "It's true we weren't taken seriously by some people in the first round," Florida Coach Norm Sloan said. "We weren't taken seriously in the second round and in the third in some areas, we aren't being taken seriously again." The oddsmakers aren't in that group. They have made the Gators, the runner-up in the SEC this season, a two-point favorite. "Whoever those people pick ends up losing," Syracuse guard Greg Monroe said. "They (Florida) played a good ballgame against Purdue, a good Big Ten team, and that caught a lot of eyes." A lot of eyes and ears in Florida probably also will be tuned to the Gators tonight instead of President Reagan. Six of Florida's seven CBS television affiliates will televise the Syracuse-Florida game instead of carrying President Reagan's 8 p.m. news conference. "There are three different ways you can see the president," said Delilah Morford, program director for WTVX in Fort Pierce, who mentioned ABC, NBC and the Cable News Network. "But there's only one way you see the Gators." What catches the attention of most people is the Gators' outstanding guard combination of Andrew Moten and Vernon Maxwell, the so-called "M & M Boys." Maxwell leads the Gators in scoring with a 21.6 average and Moten is second at 15.9 points per game. Underneath, 7-foot-2 freshman center Dwayne Schintzius is coming into the game off a career-high 21-point effort against Purdue. There's a lot to be said for the Big East and Syracuse, the second seed in the region. The Orangemen are making their fifth straight NCAA tournament appearance, ninth in 11 years and 15th overall. And they have just as much to look at as the Gators. Monroe and Sherman Douglas are also one of the top guard tandems in the country and 6-10 junior center Rony Seikaly is having his best season. Every member of the starting five is averaging in double figures scoring.

N.C. State Women Go For Shot At Final Four

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.

North Carolina State is returning to the arena where it won the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament championship in its quest to reach the final eight of the NCAA tournament for the first time in six tries. The 13th-ranked Wolfpack, 24-6, captured the ACC at the Cumberland County Memorial Arena and then went on the road to take a 68-67 victory over Villanova in the first round of the NCAA tournament. Tonight, they face a Rutgers team that has all five starters returning from last season's national quarterfinal team. The Wolfpack boasts two all-ACC performers in Trena Trice and Annemarie Treadway. "They score a lot of points and really seem to be a strong rebounding team," Wolfpack coach Kay Yow said. "They have such good size with which to play a strong zone defense. We don't have as much size and maybe aren't as strong rebounding, but we may have a little more quickness." Yow said her team is not ready for the season to end. "They are not ready to stop playing," Yow said. "I think that we want it. This team has a real belief in themselves. They don't stop. They think they have a chance to win it." Sixth-ranked Rutgers, 29-2, fought off ACC opponent Duke for a 78-64 victory in the quarterfinal round. Defending champion Texas will be trying to keep its hopes for a second straight crown alive when it meets James Madison in the other semifinal game. The Longhorn women, 29-1, are in their fifth NCAA tournament under 18-year veteran coach Jody Conradt. They downed St. Joseph's 86-56 to reach the round of 16. "My kids don't know a lot about James Madison, but I do," Conradt said. "We're going to have to take it one game at a time." Texas is among the nation's leaders in most major offensive and defensive categories, including tops with a 53.7 percent average from the field and third in scoring offense. The Longhorns are also outrebounding their opponents by an average of 13.1 per outing, third in the latest NCAA statistics. On paper, the edge goes to Texas. Conradt takes nothing for granted at this stage of the season.

"I thought that James Madison would win (over Vanderbilt). They're very aggressive and quick like we are," Conradt said. "It's going to be like looking into a mirror. It will be tough for us if we don't play as well as we did against St. Joseph's." Conradt also is trying to live down the spectre of an NCAA semifinal loss to Western Kentucky two years ago when the Longhorns were expected to capture the national championship. This year, Conradt is looking forward to "going home" — the women's Final Four site of Austin, Texas. "We've got two games to get back home to the Final Four, but we've got to take them one at a time," she said. James Madison, 27-3, champions of the Colonial Athletic Association and ranked 12th in the final regular-season poll, stopped Vanderbilt 68-60 to reach the semifinals. It is the second straight year in which the Dukes have reached the Sweet Sixteen. Texas and James Madison meet in the opener of the doubleheader at 6 p.m., with N.C. State and Rutgers to follow at 8 p.m. Friday is a practice day for the finalists, with the championship set for noon Saturday.

McRae Hopes To Pass On Lore

FORT MYERS, Fla. (AP) — Throughout his career, Hal McRae has been known for his intelligent approach to hitting — and the results it has yielded. In his new role as hitting coach for the Kansas City Royals, McRae is hoping that he can pass on that knowledge. And McRae, to whom confidence is everything, would be surprised if he doesn't get results. McRae flashes a wide grin at least a hundred times daily, a grin that says he has come to terms with his new role as combination hitting coach and part-time player. "There were some things to work out," McRae said. "I think the major thing was settling how I was going to get my work in and how the other players were going to get their work," he said. "I had to decide how much time I should devote to the other players so they could get their work in and I could get my work in." McRae certainly has the career credentials to teach hitting. He's been the Royals' designated hitter since 1971, posting a .290 career average with 2,081 hits. In 1985, McRae helped lead Kansas City to the American League West pennant by batting .291 down the stretch with seven home runs and 46 runs batted in 56 games. He had 27 home runs and led the American League with 133 RBI while batting .308 in 1982, his finest year. But statistics don't tell the whole story to Royals Manager Billy Gardner. "The players respect him," Gardner said. "They listen to him. The guys look up to him."

Gardner said McRae will see limited playing time as the Royals DH this season and will serve primarily as a pinch-hitter. He's had only five at bats this spring, with one hit. The Kansas City media guide defines McRae as DH-hitting coach. He feigns anger one day when he steps into the batting cage to take his cuts and a fan shouts, "Let's go, Coach." Cuts completed, the grin returns as some Texas Rangers begin throwing a football around. "Hey, get that football out of here," he yells, making sure Bo Jackson, a former Heisman Trophy winner now trying to win a job in the Royals' outfield, is within earshot. "You'll scare Bo. We got a guy around here who is allergic to pigskin." Later, he explains to Royals co-owner Avron Fogelman why Jackson, who turned down a million-dollar football contract to play baseball for a lot less, has the mechanics and physical ability to become a great hitter. "We try to keep it simple and let the player try to have a lot of input," McRae said. "What the player feels is more important than what I feel. I'm not up there hitting, the player is up there hitting. We let the player say what he feels and we go from there." And there is the confidence factor. "We're going to be ten to 15 points higher," McRae said. "Everybody is going to hit better. This year, the guys are going out to prove they can hit, and they know they can hit." "Confidence is everything," he added.

Three-Pointer Is Making Tourney Debut

By JIM O'CONNELL
AP Basketball Writer

A point or three about the rule being used for the first time in the NCAA basketball tournament.

The 3-point field goal, a subject of lengthy discussion throughout the season, has made its debut amid yells of "Three."

Television announcers and arena crowds scream the number of points the shot is worth when it's taken; some get to yell it much more than others.

The 3-point shot was introduced throughout college basketball at a uniform distance of 21 feet from the backboard — some conferences had been experimenting with it for years — to alleviate congestion in the lane and end rough post play.

This year, there haven't been many post players who have drawn attention and thus the 3-point shots seem to stand out more in the minds of those who didn't follow the game throughout the season.

Of the teams in the round of 16 of the tournament, Nevada-Las Vegas has made the most 3-point field goals, 281, while Notre Dame is at the other extreme, having attempted less than half the number that the Runnin' Rebels have made. The Fighting Irish have made 41 of 113 3-point field goal attempts.

Teams haven't changed their styles just because it's tournament time. The ones who were quick to heave the long shot all season have kept it up and the ones who disdained it continued to opt for the more traditional two-point field goals.

Nevada-Las Vegas, the top-ranked team and No. 1 seed in the West Regional, has made 281 of 693 3-point attempts, or 41 percent. That's not near the best percentage of the remaining teams.

Indiana has made 51 percent of its 3-pointers and All-American Steve Alford has taken 78 percent of the Hoosiers' long jumpers. Alford is 95 of 181, for 53 percent, from 3-point range, while the rest of the team has made 23 of 51.

Some of the teams that exited the NCAA tournament early had trouble with the 3-pointer.

Navy made just three of 14 in its first-round loss to Michigan, which made 12 of 20, including a 9-for-12 performance by Garde Thompson, whose 33-point performance was overshadowed by Midshipman David Robinson's 50, all of the conventional one- and two-point variety.

Illinois missed all seven of its 3-pointers in its first-round loss to Austin Peay, which sported the largest of the tournament's long-range gunners, 6-foot-8, 260-pound Darryl Bedford.

Bedford made eight of 18 3-point attempts in the Governors' two games, the second of which was an overtime loss to Providence, the team that acts like it invented the 3-pointer.

The Friars took 47 3-pointers in their two games, making 21. They averaged more than eight per game during the regular season, tops in the nation, and have three players capable of burying the shot.

Billy Donovan, 91 of 227, Ernie "Pop" Lewis, 90 of 203, and Indiana transfer Delray Brooks, 60 of 143, certainly aren't shy about hoisting the 3-pointers.

Providence's opponent tonight, Alabama, isn't shy either. The Crimson Tide made nine of 11 against North Carolina A&T and seven of 11 against New Orleans.

"We're not the type of team that lives and dies by the 3-point shot," said Alabama forward Jim Farmer, a 40.5 percent 3-point shooter. "We try to get the ball inside to Derrick McKay and Mike (Ansley) as much as possible. If the guys collapse on them, then we'll shoot the 3-point shot. We really don't have any set offense to try to get the 3-point shot."

But Providence Coach Rick Pitino knows what the 3-pointer can do.

"Because we're so fearful of it as an offensive weapon, we try very hard to defend it," Pitino said.

Alabama guard Mark Gottfried respects Providence's 3-point capability.

"We can't let them get three every time we come down and (we) get two," he said. "They probably use the 3-point shot in the flow of their offense more than most other teams. ... What's different from other teams is the guys receiving the ball are aware of the 3-point line and they make sure they are behind it."

Morris Finds Midseason Form

By The Associated Press

Jack Morris is in midseason form. Detroit's ace pitcher, who won 21 games last year despite being tagged for 40 home runs, yielded three long balls — all in a four-run fourth inning — in a 5-3 loss to the Chicago White Sox on Wednesday and has given up six homers in four exhibition outings.

Morris, who once destroyed a batrack in Tiger Stadium, also has a notable temper. That, too, is in midseason form.

Russ Morman hit a solo homer in the White Sox fourth. With two out, Morris and plate umpire John Shulock got into an animated shouting match when the call on a 1-2 pitch to Jerry Hairston was a ball.

Morris came several feet off the mound and Shulock walked several feet in front of the plate. Both men waved their arms and shouted for about a minute. Morris then walked Hairston before giving up successive home runs to Tim Lulett and Ken Williams.

"I shouldn't have done that, but we haven't seen any of that in spring training," Morris said. "We needed a little excitement. I have to do things to reduce the boredom. But it was stupid, so stupid."

"If it had been the regular season, if it had meant something, I don't think I would have done it. Nothing matters now. We're not here for blood and guts, but we will be in two weeks. As long as everybody is geared to that, that's all that counts."

Morris tried to make light of the home runs.

"How were they traveling today? Pretty good?" he asked. "That was your basic workout in spring training when you don't have much. You try to create something. The best thing I could do was concentrate, and I didn't do that. You just kiss an outing like this goodbye."

Joe Cowley pitched five scoreless innings for Chicago before Detroit's Tim Tolman hit a three-run homer off Juan Agosto.

Eric Davis hit a three-run homer to highlight a nine-run sixth inning that carried the Cincinnati Reds over the Houston Astros 11-3. Davis also had an RBI single.

But the best news for the Reds came when veteran right-hander Mario Soto, who had shoulder surgery last August, threw approximately 60 pitches over three innings of a simulated game.

"He threw good. Every time out he is getting better," Manager Pete Rose said, adding that he hopes Soto can pitch two innings in a minor-league game on Saturday. Soto has not pitched in a regular game this spring.

Medical Report
Pitcher Rick Rhoden of the New York Yankees has a strained muscle in his left side and is questionable for his next exhibition start. Rhoden was examined Wednesday and diagnosed as having a strain of the muscle between the ribs.

"He (the doctor) told me I should be fine in a week or so," Rhoden said.

Meanwhile, Baltimore infielder Rex Hudler will undergo surgery for a torn ligament in his left thumb. Hudler was injured Sunday when he fell during a rundown. A similar operation was performed last week on outfielder Mike Young. Both are expected to be out from 6-8 weeks.

Free Agency

The Oakland A's are no longer in the bidding for free-agent catcher Rich Gedman, a two-time All-Star with the Boston Red Sox. Sandy Alderson, the A's vice president of baseball operations, informed Gedman's agent on Wednesday that Oakland no longer is interested.

Sands made several proposals to the A's.

"It was a combination of things," Alderson said. "Some of them were financial and some of them were related to the current composition of our ballclub. It was not clear to us that we would be able to cross any existing gap."

Gedman has said all along that he would either sign with Oakland or return to Boston on May 1.

Holdout News

The Boston Red Sox talked with one of the agents for holdout pitcher Roger Clemens by telephone but no progress was reported in their salary war.

"We talked for 30 minutes about nothing," Red Sox General Manager Lou Gorman said. "There's nothing new to report. No figures were mentioned. There is still no movement on their part. They still haven't changed their position. I guess I'll have to call again (Thursday)."

Exhibition Games

—Howard Johnson and Mark Carreon homered, leading the New York

Mets to an 8-5 victory over the Red Sox. Bob Stanley, being groomed to move from short relief to a starting role, became the first Boston pitcher to go five innings. He allowed four runs and seven hits.

—Pat Tabler and Dave Gallagher tripled during a nine-run second inning that powered the Cleveland Indians past the Seattle Mariners 14-4. Seattle's Mike Morgan was charged with all nine runs. Gallagher and Brook Jacoby led the Indians' 20-hit attack with four hits apiece while Tony Bernazard homered.

—Glenn Braggs, Greg Brock and Rob Deer homered while Bill Schroeder had four hits to lead the Milwaukee Brewers to a 10-4 victory over the Chicago Cubs. The Brewers scored six runs off Rick Sutcliffe in the first four innings, including consecutive homers by Braggs and Brock in the third.

—Benito Santiago's two-run double in the seventh inning put San Diego ahead and the Padres went on to beat Oakland 10-8. The Padres' 17-hit attack included John Kruk's three-run homer.

—Run-scoring singles by pinch hitter Jeffrey Leonard and Robby Thompson in the bottom of the 10th inning lifted the San Francisco Giants over the California Angels 2-1. The Angels broke a scoreless tie with a run in the top of the 10th on Brian Downing's RBI single. Urbano Lugo worked the first six innings for the Angels, yielding four hits.

—Nelson Simmons drove in the tie-breaking run with a pinch single as the Baltimore Orioles scored three unearned runs in the eighth inning and defeated the Atlanta Braves 6-4.

—Geno Petralli's pinch single off Dan Quisenberry with two out in the ninth inning gave the Texas Rangers a 2-1 victory over the Kansas City Royals.

—Tim Laudner's third spring homer, a three-run shot in the third inning, carried the Minnesota Twins to a 5-2 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers and Fernando Valenzuela. Valenzuela allowed 10 hits in six innings.

—Von Hayes' leadoff homer ignited a six-run eighth inning that carried the Philadelphia Phillies to an 8-7 victory over the Montreal Expos.

—Pat Keedey's RBI single capped a four-run eighth inning, rallying a split squad of Chicago White Sox to a 6-6 tie with the St. Louis Cardinals in a game ended by mutual agreement after 10 innings. Danny Cox pitched four scoreless innings for St. Louis.

—Rickey Henderson hit a solo homer in the third inning to start the New York Yankees on their way to a 14-2 victory over the University of Florida.

—Joe Carter had three hits and a sacrifice fly in the Cleveland Indians' 5-2 victory over the University of Arizona.

Peete Looks For A Cajun Cure

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Calvin Peete, troubled by a variety of aches and pains, hopes a familiar scene will help cure his slow start.

"It's always nice to come back to a course you've won on," Peete said before teeing off today in defense of his title in the $500,000 USF&G Classic.

"When you're playing a course where you've won, you have good memories."

"You kind of feel, well, if I've won here once, maybe I can do it again," Peete said.

And he's done that. Peete has scored multiple victories in both the Milwaukee Open and the Anheuser-Busch Classic.

They account for one-third of his 12 career victories. Of that total, 11 have come in the last five years — the highest victory total on the PGA Tour in that period.

But Peete, now 43, is off to one of the slowest starts of his career. At this time last year, he had won once, finished second in another and was closing in on $200,000 in earnings.

This season, he really hasn't been in contention in seven starts. To date, his best tournament was at Phoenix, where his best round of the season, a closing 67, lifted him into a tie for ninth. He ranks 44th on the money-winning list with $43,744.

Some back and shoulder problems have slowed him, he says. "I haven't played golf that long," said Peete, who did not join the Tour until 1976 at the relatively advanced age of 32. "So I'm not old in golf. But after 40, I guess your body starts telling you things."

And there are other factors. "I just haven't played very well at times," he said. "And the competition is better and stronger than ever before. There's all these young players out here, and they all play so well, it's hard to stay up with them," Peete said.

Peete, however, ranked as one of the prime contenders in the 144-man field that began the chase for a $90,000 first prize.

Other major figures include Lanny Wadkins, a winner in his last appearance at Doral a couple of weeks ago, and Tom Watson, a two-time winner of this tournament.

How They Voted

WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on roll call votes during the week ending March 13.

HOUSE
CONTRA AID FREEZE The House voted, 230 for and 196 against, to withhold $40 million in U.S. aid to the American-backed contras in Nicaragua until the Administration accounts for appropriations and other money already made available to them.

In part, the legislation (HJ Res 175) gives President Reagan six months to account for up to $27 million in fiscal 1985 contra aid that reportedly vanished, and to try to explain allegations that Iran arms sales profits were diverted to the anti-Communist guerillas.

The Senate is scheduled to vote on a similar attempt to freeze the $40 million, which is the final payment of a $100 million contra aid package approved last year by Congress.

Reagan has the House and Senate backing he needs to successfully veto these freeze attempts. But Democratic leaders say they can block any new contra aid requests by the president.

Supporter Thomas Foglietta, D-Pa., said the freeze "will force the Administration to come clean with its contra activities."

Opponent Robert Michel, R-Ill., called the aid embargo an "inexcusable retreat from a firm, workable U.S. policy toward Central America."

Members voting yes wanted to withhold the $40 million in contra aid.

NORTH CAROLINA Voting yes: Walter Jones, D-1, Tim Valentine, D-2, Martin Lancaster, D-3, David Price, D-4, Stephen Neal, D-5, Charles Rose, D-7, W.G. Hefner, D-8, James Clarke, D-11.

Voting no: Howard Coble, R-6, Alex McMillan, R-9, Cass Ballenger, R-10.

Not voting: None.
CLOSED CONTRA RULE By a vote of 227 for and 198 against, the House approved a closed parliamentary rule (H Res 116) for debating whether to freeze the $40 million in fiscal 1987 contra aid (above).

This was a victory for Democratic-led foes of the aid because the rule precluded Republican amendments that, after open debate and record votes, might have shaken free the $40 million.

For example, GOP backers of the contras wanted to force the House to stick with its previously approved position that the $40 million be automatically released unless Congress voted to disapprove it.

Adoption of the narrow rule enabled Democrats to try to embarrass President Reagan by linking the release of the $40 million to the Iran arms scandal.

Supporter Mel Levine, D-Calif., said that in periodic House debates on contra aid the Democratic leadership "has bent over backwards" to protect the minority rights of Republicans.

Opponent John Porter, R-Ill., said "this rule shuts off debate on one of the most important foreign policy decisions of the century."

Members voting yes favored the closed rule.

NORTH CAROLINA Voting yes: Walter Jones, Valentine, Lancaster, David Price, Neal, Rose, Hefner, Clarke.

Voting no: Coble, McMillian, Ballenger.

Not voting: None.

SENATE
COSTA RICA'S PLAN By a vote of 97 for and one against, the Senate approved a resolution (S Con Res 24) backing the latest Central American effort to end hostilities in Nicaragua and neighboring countries.

Offered by Costa Rican President Oscar Arias Sanchez to energize the Contadora peace process, the plan is being discussed by him and the presidents of El Salvador, Nicaragua, Guatemala and Honduras.

It seeks a Central American rather than a superpowers' solution to the region's problems. It calls in part for dismantling totalitarianism in Nicaragua, stopping American aid to the contra rebels, establishing a Central American parliament and, in general, more democracy and less military activity throughout the region.

Supporter Terry Sanford, D-N.C., said "this might be our last, best hope" for Central American peace.

Opponent Gordon Humphrey, R-N.H., said the plan failed to confront spreading Communism in the region and called it "a large portion of pablum."

Senators voting yes endorsed the Costa Rican peace plan.

All senators voted yes except for Humphrey, who voted no, and Thomas Daschle, D-S.D., who was absent. The seat of the late Edward Zorinsky, D-Neb., was vacant.

Cheryl Ladd Plays Addict In TV Movie 'Deadly Care'

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Cheryl Ladd says she wasn't aware nurses had such a high rate of drug abuse until she started work on the CBS movie "Deadly Care."

The two-hour movie, which will be telecast Sunday, tells of a critical care nurse whose abuse of prescription drugs and alcohol causes her to make a near fatal error in treating a patient.

"It's like police departments. They protect their own," said Ladd. "They don't confront each other and tend to sweep things under the rug. Sick nurses and sick doctors are not something you usually hear about. A person who deals with other people's illnesses tends not to face his own frailties."

Health care professionals abuse narcotics at a rate 40 times greater than the general public, according to published reports. The statistic is attributed in part to the ready availability of drugs.

Ladd stars as Anne Halloran, a nurse in a Cardio-Vascular Intensive Care Unit, who is forced to seek help in dealing with her abuse of drugs and alcohol. The character is based on a real nurse who helped set up a rehabilitation center for nurses and was instrumental in getting legislation passed that permits nurses who conquer their addiction to keep their licenses.

Jennifer Salt and Jason Miller also star in the movie, written by Lane Slate and directed by David Anspaugh. It was produced by Wendy Riche, Paula Rudnick and Jon Epstein.

"Wendy and Paula had me in mind from the beginning," said Ladd. "I read the script and it was very disturbing. It stuck with me and I kept thinking about the scenes. When it won't let you go, then you know it's something you want to do."

"The next thing, we went looking for a director and were lucky to get David, who was coming off 'Hoosiers.' It's unusual that he would want to do television."

Ladd also talked to the nurse whose story is told in the movie and to a doctor who treats addicted nurses. The nurse's name was changed for the movie.

"This is set in the 1960s, when Valium was prescribed like candy," said Ladd. "If you had a problem, take a Valium. Doctors didn't know how dangerous or addictive it could be. Drugs were left all over hospitals."

"She was taking 80 milligrams a day of Valium and Percodan and other drugs. She built up a tolerance."

The movie is the first for Ladd since her starring role in the six-hour miniseries "Crossings" in February 1986. Prior to that she starred in "A Death in California" and "Romance on the Orient Express." She also appeared in the play "Anything Goes" in Santa Barbara.

"I've got a few things in development," she said. "I'm waiting for something wonderful to come along. I'm in a nice position because I only work when I want to. You always want the next Meryl Streep role, but you strive for better and better material."

She has been asked to appear on Broadway, but has put that off until her two daughters, Jordan, 12, and Lindsay, 10, are out of school.

She also gets frequent offers for another series, but has said no since "Charlie's Angels" ended six years ago. "I won't say never," she said. "Maybe when I'm 50 I'll want to do another series."

"But after playing the same character for four years I know that a series is not as inspiring as getting a new script and a new character. I prefer to work like crazy for three months, then be off for three months and be able to lead my life. When you do a series you live only to go to work. It's confining to your life and confining to your craft. I want to be able to stretch and do other things."

She is married to producer Brian Russell, who recently produced "From the Hip" with Judd Nelson. He also produced her movie "Grace Kelly" and her musical specials.

Disappointed

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Director Roland Joffe says actors Robert De Niro and Ray McAnally should have been nominated for Academy Awards for their performances in "The Mission."

"I was disappointed that Ray McAnally wasn't nominated for what was far and away the best supporting performance of the year," said Joffe, who directed "The Mission" and received an Oscar nomination for the work.

"And I was upset De Niro didn't get a nomination for best actor. He was quite superb."

Joffe also directed "The Killing Fields."

Oscar Show Will Keep TV Format Despite Ratings

By RICHARD DE ATLEY
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Faced with dwindling ratings over the past four years, the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences toyed with trimming four minor award categories from the show, but ended up rejecting the idea.

The academy's board of governors also will keep the traditional recitation of the voting rules and presentation of envelopes by two staid representatives of the Price Waterhouse accounting firm.

In other words, the three-hour-plus 59th Annual Academy Awards will contain all the elements cited by critics as boring when it is telecast on March 30 (ABC-TV, 9 p.m. EST).

"They are fierce about the integrity of the awards," said Samuel Goldwyn Jr., himself a member of the board of governors and producer of this year's show.

Like his predecessors, Goldwyn faces the task of making the marathon presentation as entertaining as possible, from the hot acting categories to the backwaters of the cinematic art. He hopes to keep the pace alive by having lively hosts handle the more ponderous categories such as documentary features. Hosts this year will include Chevy Chase, Michael Caine, Rodney Dangerfield, Goldie Hawn, Elizabeth Taylor and Sigourney Weaver.

Since 1983, the Oscars' ratings, while still respectable, have been in decline. About 31.4 million households watched the show four years ago, compared with 23.4 million households last year, according to the A.C. Nielsen Company.

Its competition this year on the other networks will be the NCAA basketball regional playoffs plus "Cagney and Lacey" on CBS and "Stone Fox," a save-the-farm tear-jerker starring Buddy Ebsen on NBC.

Several factors have been contributed to Oscar's falling ratings, including competition from cable TV and videocassettes. There also is an overall factor with a plethora of televised entertainment awards shows such as the Golden Globes and People's Choice.

The glamour factor also has been diluted by television's ubiquitous celebrity shows such as "Entertainment Tonight" and "Lifestyles of the Rich and Famous."

There also are the nominees themselves, which in recent years have reflected a taste for small, independent films with limited distribution.

Of this year's best picture nominees, for instance, only "Platoon" has been in wide release. The others — "Children of a Lesser God," "Hannah and Her Sisters," "The Mission" and "A Room With a View" — were primarily shown at a few theaters in big cities.

The academy can't stop its members from voting for unfamiliar nominees and it doesn't want to do anything about the length of the show.

"Every problem is an opportunity if you're smart enough to solve it," Goldwyn said. "An ideal show, as far as some people are concerned, would be giving about five awards — for best picture, best actor, best actress, best supporting actress and actor. But part of the fun of it is to take categories that make you ask, 'How do I do this?' and solve them in an entertaining manner."

Screenwriter Norman Corwin, also a member of the board of governors, noted that the four categories considered for expulsion from the show — documentary feature, documentary short, live short and animated short — represent most of the Oscars given for entire productions. The others are best picture and foreign film.

"That's for a totality of work for filmic art," he said. "Whereas the actor, supporting actor, cinematography, are for contributions rather than the entity."

"The people who are bored by documentaries, or feel that it is an added burden, are usually those people who don't have any interest in the world going on around them; they are entirely centered on the entertainment values."

Goldwyn said it's often difficult making obscure animated films and documentaries more interesting and appealing to the audience. "It wasn't a problem when the animated features were Walt Disney. But now they are obscure films," he said. "I'm going to deal with this problem straight out."

In an attempt to liven things up, he plans to use TV talk show host Oprah Winfrey to introduce the documentary categories. She will discuss the value of the films.

"My biggest goal," said Goldwyn, "is to get the best picture before midnight, Eastern time. If I accomplish that, I'll really feel good."

Today's Cryptoquip clue: J equals S

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another.

Don't Play With Them

Almost every child is warned about the dangers of playing with matches. But in the 19th century, people who made matches found out too late just how deadly they could be. Match-heads then were made with white phosphorus, which proved fatal. Workers developed necrosis, a bone disease. By 1910, the incidence of necrosis had become so serious that the United States placed a high tax on the poisonous phosphorus matches, thus ending their production.

DO YOU KNOW — What type of wood is usually used to make matchsticks?

WEDNESDAY'S ANSWER — The "zip" in zip code is an acronym for "zoning improvement plan."

Horoscope

From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY March 20

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You may find some nit-picking conditions annoying you, but this soon clears up and you get into some progressive phases of the interests that most animate you.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Rid yourself of some secret worry and then you can get into activities that are most profitable.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): You know exactly how to gain greater expertise in business, so get busy at that now. Don't waste any time.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Steer clear of that noisy public affair. Get some civic work handled that can bring you advancement.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Don't get conned by one who is overly dynamic. Handle your affairs in a most efficient way.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): Take the time to plan recreations that will please you. You must, however, be sure to stay within your budget.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Avoid an associate who has a chip on his shoulder. Invite older persons into your home and learn from them.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Ignore an irate fellow workers and handle personal matters. Be with your friends and learn from them.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Try not to take on a big expense today. Study your property well and plan any repairs that are needed.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Try not to argue with a home tie. Get together with friends that can be very helpful to you.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Forget an annoying letter and make plans to gain your wishes. State your true affection for the one you love.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Postpone handling a financial matter until you are thinking more clearly. Go after personal aims now.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Get rid of any negativity around you. Come right to the point with a bigwig and get good results.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will have many excellent ideas that are advanced and there is bound to be much travel during this lifetime. Teach your progeny to put ideas into motion quickly since there is a tendency to daydream here. You have a young wizard.

"The Stars impel; they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

 The normal way to signal is to discard a high card if you want the suit led and a low card if you do not. But what if you don't have a high card in the suit you want led? This hand, from the World Open Pairs 25 years ago, was defended by Arthur Robinson, West, and Robert Jordan of the US.

We would not open the South hand with a demand bid, but we give you the auction as it occurred at the table. North's jump to five hearts was over-aggressive despite his six-card support, he had a balanced hand of nothing but losers. The club lead was normal West was trying to build tricks. East's eight was won by the ace, and declarer eschewed the percentage line of trying to enter dummy to take the trump finesse in favor of cashing the ace of trumps in an attempt to drop the king. When the monarch did not appear, he shifted to a low diamond

(the king would have posed greater problems for the defenders) Jordan took his ace and then made the fine play of the king of trumps he wanted to get a signal from his partner to show him what to do next.

West could see that dummy's two spades were going to be discarded on declarer's high diamonds (East would not have fooled his partner by winning the ace if he held a lower honor), so he wanted to ask for a spade shift. Unfortunately, the fates had been unkind; since his spade spots were the lowest in the pack, he was afraid that, if he signalled with the three, his partner would read that as (ital) discouraging(end ital).

His solution to the dilemma was elegant. He discarded the queen of clubs! Since West could have discarded almost any card in his hand if he wanted a club continuation, Jordan correctly interpreted East's discard of his top club as saying he did not want that suit led! The spade shift was obvious down one.

The problem with most big banks' Individual Retirement Accounts is that they don't treat customers as individuals.

A First Federal IRA specialist will be happy to help you maximize your individual tax savings on a high-yielding First Federal IRA.

We'll help you maximize your tax benefits this year while explaining what the new tax laws may bring next year.

We know the ins and outs of making an IRA work harder to meet your needs. That's why we're happy to explain our different IRA plans and help you select the one plan that makes the most sense for your particular situation.

So instead of being a face in the crowd at one of the big banks' IRA factories, bring this year's IRA investment to First Federal.

As the only financial institution with offices only in Pitt County, your business is important to us at First Federal. That's why we make an extra effort to meet your individual financial needs. See us about an IRA today.
