AIDS Drug Approved For Prescription Use

WASHINGTON (AP) — The first drug shown to prolong the lives of AIDS sufferers won federal approval today for prescription use in the United States.

Azidothymidine, better known as AZT, is not represented as a cure for the deadly disease but clinical trials last fall convinced officials it does prolong life and reduce symptoms among some AIDS patients.

Noting that it is the only treatment proven to offer even that relief, a Food and Drug Administration advisory panel concluded in January that AZT should be approved despite some serious side effects.

Today's final FDA approval, announced by Robert E. Windom, assistant secretary of health at the Department of Health and Human Services, had been widely expected for several weeks.

"Today's approval marks an important step, but by no means a final victory, in our ongoing war against AIDS," said Windom.

The drug, made by Burroughs Wellcome Co. of Research Triangle Park, N.C., is already being given to about 4,500 patients under a special treatment plan approved by the FDA after the clinical trials were so promising.

Those trials were stopped earlier than scheduled when the FDA agreed that AZT had demonstrated enough beneficial effect to make it immoral to continue denying the drug to those patients in the study who were getting a placebo.

Medical experts are careful to emphasize that AZT is not a cure for AIDS because tests have shown it does not kill the AIDS virus.

How long it may be able to prolong the lives of AIDS sufferers is unknown because no one started taking it until last year. Some people have died even while taking AZT, but a majority have shown marked improvement — to the point of some seriously ill patients being able to return to work and resume other daily activities.

One of the arguments for approving AZT, even though it is not a cure, is that it might keep thousands of patients alive until a cure is found.

Burroughs Wellcome Co. officials told a House subcommittee earlier this month they expect the annual cost of AZT — to be sold under the trade name Retrovir — for a typical patient to range between $7,000 and $10,000.

Company officials have declined to provide details of how they arrived at the price, but said the drug is so expensive mainly because of large costs incurred in developing it and because both the raw materials and the laboratory procedures for refining AZT are very costly.

While acknowledging that AZT is expensive, the company has pointed out that some other rare drugs — including one used to fight rejection of transplanted organs — also are quite costly.

Moreover, they suggest, the annual cost of the drug will be less in many cases than the cost of extensive hospitalization.

Reagan Draws Praise For 'Deft Performance'

By TERENCE HUNT

AP White House Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, at a news conference judged by Democrats and Republicans alike as a deft performance, ignored criticism from the Tower Commission and defended anew his arms-to-Iran policy as being "right in the beginning."

Reagan also left the impression Thursday night that he and Vice President George Bush disagree over whether Bush had opposed the covert sale of arms to Iran.

Bush has said key officials knew he harbored "certain reservations" about the deal, but Reagan used a single word — No — when asked if Bush had ever voiced an objection.

Reagan's news conference, his first in four months, was considered crucial in his campaign to regain his footing after the Iran-Contra uproar shook his administration and caused his popularity to plummet.

Republicans expressed pleasure and relief today with the relaxed, confident way President Reagan handled his nationally broadcast news conference while Democrats, giving Reagan high marks for style, said they had hoped for more substance.

"He was his old self," enthused Sen. Alan K. Simpson, R-Wyo., who a day earlier had berated the news media for questioning Reagan and trying "to stick it in his gazoo."

Sen. Warren Rudman, R-N.H., vice chairman of the Senate committee investigating the secret sale of arms to Iran and possible diversion of payments to the Nicaraguan Contras, said the session did not produce much news but that "nobody was really looking for news tonight."

He said people were looking instead at "the president and his competence and his style."

Sen. Howell Heflin, D-Ala., said Reagan was "calm, cool and collected," and Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., said the president "was much better prepared than he was at his last news conference. I think that helps him a great deal." Heflin and Nunn both are on the investigatory committee.

Reagan appeared at ease and in control throughout 30 minutes of questioning. Joking about the infrequency of his news conferences, he told one reporter, "The only thing I've done casually since I've been here in these six years is hold a press conference."

While not offering any revelations about the Iran-Contra affair, Reagan acknowledged his policy amounted to an arms-for-hostages swap.

"I would not go down that same road again," he pledged.

However, he said it was not until he read the Tower report — released Feb. 26 — that he realized his strategy for the Iranian initiative "had disappeared completely, and led by the Iranians, the conversation was totally arms-for-hostages."

The Tower panel concluded that the Iran initiative "ran directly counter to the administration's own policies on terrorism, the Iran-Iraq war and military support to Iran" and that the result "was a U.S. policy that worked against itself."

It said Reagan had not seemed aware of the way his policy was carried out and did not recognize its full consequences.

However, responding to questions, Reagan said, "Well, if I hadn't thought it was right in the beginning, we never would have started that."

He insisted his policy was intended to open a channel for better relations between the United States and Iran. The Tower commission had rejected that rationale, saying, "Whatever the intent, almost from the beginning the initiative became in fact a series of arms-for-hostages deals."

Journalist Paints Greenville's 'Face'

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

The way of life in Greenville has been shared with the people in South America via an article written by an Argentine journalist who visited eastern North Carolina last summer.

In the March 17 issue of Esquiu Color, a weekly Spanish-language news magazine which receives general circulation in Argentina, writer Cecilia Luchia-Puig described her impressions of Pitt County in the article "Living in Greenville: The Other Face of the U.S.A."

The introduction to the article reads, in a loose translation, "The image that we usually receive of the U.S.A. through the mass media has nothing to do with the life of a typical family on the East Coast."

The writer, married to tobaccoist Carlos de la Vega, accompanied her husband to Greenville for a business trip. They stayed in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Wainright. Wainright is a controller at Carolina Leaf Tobacco Co.

Her visit to Greenville allowed the journalist to see first-hand the life of an American city. She said in her article, "Probably this is a different reality than what we are used to hearing about the U.S.A., the other side of the same coin."

Ms. Luchia-Puig related the Wainrights' everyday life and observations of American technology — and mentioned her tour of The Daily Reflector and an interview with her that was published in the newspaper Aug. 17.

"In general, when we speak about the American society we make reference to the big cities where the drug, alcoholism and homosexual problems are more remarkable and the personal relations are every time more distant," she related. "Nevertheless, when we refer to the U.S.A., sometimes we forget that includes so much more than New York, Washington or San Francisco ... that it is composed of hundreds of smaller

Trial Delayed

WASHINGTON, N.C. — Greenville-based television evangelist Jim Whittington was in Beaufort County District Court Thursday to answer charges that he violated a Belhaven zoning ordinance Sunday by holding services without obtaining a permit.

But trial of the case was continued until April 13 when Judge James Hardison refused to grant a request by Whittington's attorney to dismiss the charges.

Hardison ordered those associated with the trial — the defense, prosecution and witnesses — not to discuss the case in public.

Whittington was served a criminal summons Sunday after holding a church service in a downtown Belhaven building.

The summons charged Whittington with conducting religious services without a permit in a zone approved only for business use and with occupying an unoccupied building.

Whittington said he would plead innocent to the misdemeanor charges, which carry a maximum penalty of $50 fine and 30 days in jail.

Whichard To Head UNC Drug Policy Committee

David J. Whichard II of Greenville, editor and co-publisher of The Daily Reflector, has been named chairman of the University of North Carolina Board of Governor's Drug Policy Committee.

UNC Board Chairman Phillip G. Carson of Asheville made the appointment Thursday.

Carson also named Phillip Haire of Sylva, Sam Neill of Hendersonville, Martha McNair of Winston-Salem, Walter Davis of Midland, Texas, and Southern Shores, Asa Spalding Jr. of Durham, John Garwood of Wilkesboro and Joan Fox of Oxford as members of the committee.

"The Board (of Governors) is concerned about and interested in what's going on on the campuses with regard to drugs," Whichard said. "This committee's responsibility is to review the policies of the 16 campuses with respect to drugs and to make recommendations to the board, as necessary, after careful study."

Whichard said "the committee will work closely with the general administration staff, appropriate campus officials and others in carrying out its study."

The Board of Governors last week approved the establishment of a drug policy committee to review the various campus policies.

Whichard, a member of the UNC board since 1973, is a former member of the East Carolina University Board of Trustees and was a member of the N.C. Board of Higher Education from 1969 to 1971.

Saudi Hostage Freed In Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Syrian forces today obtained the release of a Saudi Arabian held captive for 54 days in Lebanon, the head of Syria's military observer team said.

The Saudi, Khaled Deeb, was the second foreign hostage to be freed in Lebanon this week. The other freed hostage was also a Saudi.

"Hostage Khaled Deeb is with us here," Col. Abdul-Salam Daghistani told The Associated Press by telephone. He was reached at the headquarters of the Syrian forces in west Beirut's seaside Ramlet Al-Baida district.

Bakr Damanhour, an employee of the Saudi Embassy cultural section, was freed Wednesday after 66 days in captivity.

Abdallah al-Amin, spokesman for Syria's military intelligence chief in Lebanon, Brig. Gen. Ghazi Kanaan, told the AP, "Deeb is in good health. He will be sent to Damascus soon and from there he will fly to Saudi Arabia."

Damascus is the capital of Syria, which is Lebanon's main power-broker with more than 25,000 troops stationed in the war-torn country. Deeb was kidnapped Jan. 26, 1987 on the road to the Beirut airport. Moslem-controlled Channel 7 television in west Beirut said an anonymous caller told the station the Organization of Partisans of Islamic Jihad abducted Deeb, who it said was the son of Ali Deeb, chief of security in the Saudi Arabian capital of Riyadh.

Daghistani heads a team of 36 observers stationed in west Beirut since last summer, when Syria proposed a security plan to curb militia anarchy in the capital's Moslem sector.

The team was attached to a Syrian army force of 7,500 troops and 100 tanks that rumbled into west Beirut on Feb. 22 to quell a week of street warfare between feuding moslem militias in which 300 people were killed and 1,300 wounded.

Deeb's release leaves 24 other foreigners, including eight Americans, missing and believed kidnapped in Lebanon.

Earlier today, the wife of an American teacher held hostage said she has received belated Valentine's Day greetings from her husband's town of Boise, Idaho.

Armed Robbery

Greenville police are looking for two men who robbed the Food Lion supermarket at Stanton Square Shopping Center near Pitt County Memorial Hospital of about $3,000 in cash early today after they tied up the four employees in the store.

Detective J.E. Nichols, who said the armed robbery occurred about 12:10 a.m., said the robbers were both wearing ski masks, gloves and sweat pants. One was armed with a .22 caliber rifle and the other with a knife, Nichols said.

One of the masks was recovered by investigators in an area behind the store, Nichols said.

According to the officer, the robbers forced their way into the building as an assistant manager was letting one of the employees out after the store closed.

Nichols said one of the robbers took a new pair of tennis shoes from one of the clerks and wore them from the building after the robbery.

The officer said the robbery was reported by a clerk who freed himself, broke a window to get out of the building and ran to a security post at the hospital to use the telephone.

BUS ACCIDENT — An Edgecombe County bus from Roberson School in Tarboro ran off U.S. 64 west of Conee Thursday afternoon, causing the bus to overturn. The driver of the bus, 16-year-old Delonza Lee Candies, was charged with careless and reckless driving. Trooper Fred Sullivan said Candies was distracted, causing him to run off the right side of the road. Twenty students were on the bus and nine, ranging in age from 9 to 13 were, transported to Heritage Hospital in Tarboro. No serious injuries were reported and all were released following treatment. (Reflector Photo by Cliff Hollis)

Thursday Thefts

Three thefts were reported to Greenville police Thursday.

Officer J.M. Jones said a motorized bicycle was taken from 622 Ford St. in an incident reported at 2:20 p.m., while Officer T.A. Lee said a bookbag containing three text books, a calculator, three tablets and two computer discs was taken from a car parked on Hopkins Drive in an incident reported at 5 p.m.

According to Officer M.J. Nobles, a battery was taken from a car parked at 403 Church St. in an incident reported at 10:37 p.m.

Shoplifting Charges

Three people were arrested on shoplifting charges by Greenville police in connection with three separate incidents Thursday.

Officer B.M. Highland said Shelia Wilson Daniels, 30, of Winterville was charged in connection with the theft of a bracelet and two necklaces from Nichols Discount City on Greenville Boulevard which was reported at 4:44 p.m.

Velton Tyrone Williams, 22, of 1400 W. Fourth St. was charged in connection with a price-switching incident at Nichols Discount City which was reported at 5:30 p.m., Officer C.A. Sharpe said.

According to Officer T.A. Lee, Alex Barrett, 34, of 1222 Battle St. was charged in connection with the theft of an umbrella from Kerr Drugs at Carolina East Mall that was reported at 6:02 p.m.

Defense Lecture

"Defense and the Federal Deficit: U.S. Needs, Soviet Challenges," will be the topic for a presentation Tuesday at East Carolina University by an author and authority on defense weapons and equipment.

Richard A. Stubbing, a professor at Duke University and former deputy chief of the National Security Division of the U.S. Office of Management and Budget, will speak at 7:30 p.m. in the Biology Lecture Hall (103 Science Complex).

Stubbing's presentation is part of the "Great Decisions 1987" lecture series being held on Tuesday nights through April 7 at ECU. The series is sponsored by the ECU College of Arts and Sciences and the political science department.

His book "The Defense Game," describes how the defense world operates and assesses the performance of five recent Secretaries of Defense.

Stubbing joined Duke University in 1981 as a professor of the practice of public policy. He teaches courses in public budgeting and in defense strategic programs.

Pitt Board To Meet

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners will meet Monday at 10 a.m. at the county office building, 1717 W. Fifth St.

Included on the agenda for consideration are: changes in building permit fees; the adoption of a revised flood damage prevention ordinance; the adoption of an ordinance regulating massage businesses; the adoption of a noise control ordinance; the adoption of a dog leash law for Brook Valley subdivision; approval of a local bill to establish a motel room occupancy tax; granting extraterritorial jurisdiction over three tracts of land split by the one mile limit to the city of Greenville, and the acceptance of a Federal Aviation Administration grant of $229,025 for the purchase of a crash fire and rescue vehicle and associated construction for the Pitt-Greenville Airport.

Directors Honored

J.J. Grimsley of Ayden and Mark W. Mazingo of Farmville have received meritorious service awards in recognition for their 25 years of service on the board of the Pitt and Greene Electric Membership Corp.

The awards were announced at the recent 1987 annual meeting of North Carolina's statewide EMC organization in Raleigh.

Grimsley received a plaque from R.W. Blanchard Jr., outgoing president of the N.C. Association of Electric Cooperatives. Mazingo was unable to attend the awards ceremony.

IRA Spokesman Speaks At ECU

BY ELIZABETH GORDEN
Reflector Staff Writer

Mairtin O'Muilleoir said he is trying to combat British propaganda and tell the truth about his home — Northern Ireland.

During a press conference at East Carolina University Thursday, he compared Northern Ireland to the Colonies during the American Revolution. "You have to examine the similarities. If part of North Carolina was still under British rule, wouldn't you have the right to an arms struggle?"

"I hope that my visit will open the flood gates and others will be allowed to come to the United States. Hopefully it will help make an impact on the American media," he said.

O'Muilleoir, 27, lives in Belfast, Ireland. He said he was the first person in the political arm of the Irish Republic Army, Sinn Fein, to speak in the United States in at least 10 years.

He spoke at Duke University and North Carolina Central University this week and was scheduled to speak at ECU Thursday night in the Brewster building. He planned an address Georgetown University in Washington today.

Sinn Fein is an open and revolutionary political party dedicated to the re-unification of Ireland and the establishment of a 32-county democratic socialist republic, according to a pamphlet distributed by the group.

When asked at the news conference if the Irish Republican Army is a terrorist group, he replied, "The IRA is not a terrorist group. Members put their life and liberty at risk everyday."

O'Muilleoir described the British police as having "a state license to kill."

"The American people respond to the name IRA, and they know a war is going on but the American media have not given the people much to think about," he said. "However, they are very interested and willing to learn."

"I know this is not a very healthy occupation to be involved in, but you have to do what you have to do."

He is scheduled to return to Ireland Sunday.

Program Funded

The Charles Gray Morgan Auxiliary to Post 7032 of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of Greenville has donated funds enabling the Pitt County Sheriff's Department to purchase a slide program titled "The Truth About Marijuana," Deputy Timothy Copeland said.

The program will be used by the department's crime prevention unit to teach young people how marijuana is a "gateway" drug and provides information on the risks of using today's stronger, more potent varieties of marijuana, Copeland said.

The program is available through the crime prevention unit, along with others dealing with safety, community watch, child abuse, drunk driving and stranger awareness, he said.

Permit Issued

The Greenville Police Department has granted a solicitation permit to the Pitt County chapter of the Shaw University Alumni Association allowing the sale of tickets to a musical production called "Blues Alley" from Saturday to April 11.

Proceeds from the event are to be used to support Shaw University and provide scholarships to Shaw students from Pitt County.

Concert For Boy

Local bands Virgin Ear and Nitrus will perform April 18 at 8 p.m. in the Washington, N.C., Civic Center at Main and Gladden streets to benefit a 3-year-old boy.

Matthew Boyd of Washington needs from $150,000 to $200,000 to finance his liver transplant, said Nannette Harris, who organized the concert and is the bass player for the Virgin Ear.

"I had seen news reports in January saying he needed so much money," she said. The concert is a way to help.

"We're hoping to get 300 people" to come to the concert, Ms. Harris said, which is the maximum capacity of the center.

She said tickets are available at Electronic Music and Recording, 10th Street, Greenville, and at Charich Music on Main Street and The Record Shop in Washington Square Mall, both in Washington. Tickets will also be sold at the door of the concert.

WRQR-FM in Greenville will have a live remote from the civic center from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m., Ms. Harris said. Doors open at 7:15 p.m. for the public.

Biennial Convention

The 1987 biennial convention of the 1st Congressional District Republican Party will be held April 25 in Nags Head.

The district includes 21 counties in northeastern North Carolina, including Pitt.

The convention will begin at 1 p.m. at the Outer Banks Coliseum, mile post 15 on U.S. 158 in Nags Head. Delegates and alternates to the convention will be elected at GOP county conventions in each of the counties during March.

State Rep. Larry Etheridge, R-Wilson, will be the keynote speaker, while GOP Dare County Commissioner Michael P. Daniels will give the welcoming address.

SS Number Needed

The Social Security office has reminded taxpayers that under the Tax Reform Act of 1986, each person age 5 and over listed as a dependent on a federal tax return due after December 31, 1987, must have a Social Security number.

For further information call the Social Security office at 758-7656.

Observance Planned

Central America Week will be observed in Greenville today through March 29.

A 6:30 p.m. dinner and 8 p.m. movie will be offered today at the Baptist Student Center, 511 E. 10th St. The movie, "Todos Santos Cuchunatan," is about a Mam Indian village in Guatemala.

A PBS television presentation of "El Norte" will be shown Monday at 9 p.m. in Mendenhall Student Center, East Carolina University. It is the story of a brother and sister who left Guatemala to escape death and came to the United States.

Tuesday, two college students from Nicaragua will be at ECU for one night only. The time and place has not been determined, but information may be obtained from Rick Brown, 746-6049.

Wednesday at 7:30 p.m., a movie on "American Journey" will be shown at the Baptist Student Center. It will describe how U.S. citizens from various backgrounds experience Nicaragua and United States intervention.

From Sunday through Saturday, there will be a display on Central America at Joyner Library at ECU.

Committee Post

Listen B. Ramsey, speaker of the North Carolina House, has appointed Raymond Reddick of Greenville to the North Carolina Teaching Fellows Region I Review Committee, which was organized to provide scholarship loans to high school seniors interested in teaching in the public schools of the state.

Sudden Dismissal Haphazard Action

The Greenville City Council's firing of city manager Gail Meeks may have been correct in its intent but the manner in which the issue was handled was reprehensible, haphazard and unprofessional.

Such gross mishandling of a critical issue will hurt the city, both immediately and in the long-run.

More professionalism in the position of city manager is a goal that should be supported. It is a need that was appropriate for the City Council to address. But the time frame for Mrs. Meeks' dismissal is ill-conceived and prompts immediate problems. Greenville is in the midst of budget preparation for 1987-88 — now, without the expertise of its primary budget officer. Council should have stopped to consider the inadequacy it saddled itself with before acting so emotionally on an issue that required cool-headed thinking.

A more appropriate move certainly would have been to ask Mrs. Meeks to remain until a new city manager was in place. That way, both council and the city could be assured of a soundly-prepared budget. The city could expect a smooth switch from one administration to another. Now it will be saddled with an unpredictable budget process and a potentially disruptive transition.

The council's action created further problems. Although interim city manager Mayo Allen is capable and experienced in budget preparation, his tenure at the city's helm will put him in a difficult position. He will oversee the preparation of a city budget that includes the finances of his own department — public works. There is no doubt Allen is a man of integrity and would work against any conflict of interest, but once again, the council has precipitated a situation that is inappropriate.

In the long run, the council's questionable approach to seeking new direction may jeopardize Greenville's chances of securing a quality city manager. A top individual trained in professional management would be justifiably hesitant to consider a position in a city run by such apparent ineptitude. The council's unprofessional behavior may cost the city its much-needed goal of proficiency and new direction. The way the issue was handled raises the question of whether the council will be able to recognize a professional applicant for the position should one apply.

If the council felt the city needed fresh leadership from someone with a more professional background, that is a decision that should have been made only after hours, weeks or months of careful deliberation — not after one evaluation in an executive session. It is a decision that should have been made with unity, not by a widely-divided panel of public servants.

To dismiss a city manager so impulsively smacks of small town political maneuvering. The council should be reproached for selecting such an indiscriminate approach to the issue.

Yes, Greenville clearly needs new direction. That is a decision that had to be made by the council, but shouldn't have been made in the manner it was. To capriciously toss out the city's number one executive during a highly critical period of time is an irresponsible way to conduct public business and precipitate progress.

No End

The House-passed measure making the GI Bill a permanent attraction for enlistments in the all-volunteer armed forces has yet to be tested in the Senate but the 401-2 roll-call House vote of approval makes the Senate passage virtually certain. It will hear the same arguments that influenced the House.

Demobilization following World War II was accompanied by a Golden Era in the country's higher education system. The GI Bill of 1944 made it possible for the schools as well as for the young men and women who returned home.

Educators who shared the experience later looked back on their more mature, goal-oriented students as highlighting a shining hour in their lives.

Even today, former servicemen and women are cashing in on their GI Bill provisos that provide an education to fit their career goals. The House was told 84 percent of all new Army recruits are taking part in the program along with 54 percent of Navy recruits, 64 percent of Marine recruits and 44 percent of Air Force recruits.

The civilian sector benefits, as does the defense establishment. Some of their former enlisted personnel will qualify for commissions. The enrichment of American professional and business fields is similarly assured, as are the arts and sciences.

There's just no end to benefits resulting from furthering of education opportunities.

Today's Thought

Wonder if anyone has told Old Man Winter he's supposed to disappear after 10:52 p.m. today?

FIRST THE CITY COUNCIL MET TO TALK ABOUT THE CITY MANAGER'S JOB PERFORMANCE.

THEN WE VOTED TO ASK FOR HER RESIGNATION WITHOUT DISCUSSING THE MATTER WITH HER AT ALL.

THE OTHERS DUCKED OUT, AND I COLD-COCKED HER WITH THE NEWS WHEN SHE CAME THROUGH THE DOOR!

THAT'S THE "PROFESSIONAL" WAY!

Public Forum

To the editor:

What I want to tell you concerns many people across the nation and Canada. I recently learned that Jim Whittington is trying to buy land in Beaufort County to build a church, but people are ganging up against him so he would not be able to buy land. And the people are trying to run him out of town.

Jim Whittington is a real chosen man of God. How do I know? I have known Jim Whittington for eight years through telecasts, crusades, camp meetings, but I have never talked to him personally. Yes, he has his faults, but who is so perfect as to judge him? God is the judge, not man. And if a man of God wants to buy land to build a church and people refuse, they are the ones who are going to have to answer to God Almighty Himself.

I represent hundreds of people from Philadelphia, Baltimore, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Virginia, North Carolina and Ohio — and also Canada — who love Jim Whittington for his simplicity in preaching the gospel so any 6-year-old can understand. He is sincere and honest and tells the truth the way it is. It is a shame that some people misunderstand him. I can give you hundreds of names of people who have been blessed and delivered through his ministry — me being one of them.

We also love Him because he doesn't limit his ministry to certain kinds of people, but goes about preaching in places other preachers wouldn't be caught dead. For instance, at the Met Church in North Philadelphia, where on every street corner are muggers, rapists, murderers. He might go to bars and slums and ditches by the roadside. Don't you see? That is where he finds the lost sinners who need to hear about Jesus Christ.

Think about it, people in North Carolina. Jim Whittington is a chosen man of God.

To the editor:

While watching the Reverend Jim Whittington on television as he defended his right to ignore Belhaven officials, I realized that my old TV must be ready for the junk pile. For a moment, I could have sworn to have heard the Reverend invoke such principles as "integration" and "civil rights." There must have been some distortion problems in the speakers of my set. The Jim Whittington that I'm familiar with has never publicly defended or supported organizations or individuals that have historically been in the forefront of the struggle for freedom, justice or racial equality. Yes, his audiences are integrated, but the hierarchy of the Fountain of Life Inc. is lily white.

If I did hear Whittington correctly, it's obvious that he has no shame when it comes to promoting his crusades through exploitation and blatant distortion. Next, I expect to hear that he needs contributions to wage legal battles to support his newly-found cause.

Reagan Stands Ground On Points

WASHINGTON — Facing a severe test of his ability to present a coherent defense of his Iran-contra policy, President Reagan firmly stood his ground Thursday night before a barrage of questions that challenged his credibility and his competence.

At his first nationally televised news conference in exactly four months, Reagan demonstrated that he has no intention of yielding on the two essentials of the defense he has constructed in a series of statements and speeches about the scandal that has threatened his presidency.

The essentials, which Reagan repeated Thursday night in varying forms, are that he did not intend his Iran initiative to turn into the trade of arms for hostages that he acknowledges it became. The other essential, as Reagan tells it, is that he knew nothing about diversion of proceeds from the Iran arms sales to the Nicaraguan contras until Attorney General Edwin Meese III informed him of it the day before it was disclosed publicly last November.

But, in holding to this account, as aides say he has in a number of private meetings as well as in Thursday night's news conference, Reagan also contradicted some of the findings of the Tower board he appointed to investigate activities of the National Security Council while at the same time saying he accepted what the board said. The president also raised new questions about his recollection of the events that led to the arms sales to Iran in the first place.

Early in his news conference Reagan was asked about the statement of former national security adviser Robert C. McFarlane, who told the board chaired by former senator John G. Tower, R-Tex., that in early August 1985, after several meetings of NSC officials, the president had given McFarlane authorization in a telephone call to allow U.S. arms to be shipped from Israel to Iran.

McFarlane said he also reminded the president that both Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger opposed this sale. "Do you have no memory of that, whatsoever?" a reporter asked Reagan.

In a long response to this and a series of follow-up questions, Reagan repeated previous assertions that he remembered authorizing the arms sale but didn't know when he had done it. But Thursday night he appeared to misremember what McFarlane had said. The president disputed the idea that he had received a phone call, indicating that the question of approving the sale had been raised when McFarlane visited him in the hospital in July 1985 while the president was recuperating from cancer surgery.

The Tower commission report said that "in his meeting with the board on Feb. 11, 1987, the president said he had no recollection of such a meeting in the hospital in July with Mr. McFarlane and that he had no notes that would show such a meeting."

Later in his news conference Reagan was asked whether, in view of his difficulties in recollection, might he also fail to remember being told about the diversion of funds to the contras fighting the government of Nicaragua.

"Oh, no," Reagan replied. "You would have heard me ... without opening the door to the office if I had been told that at any time. No. And I still do not have the answer to that money. The only thing I can see is that somebody in the interplay of transporting the weapons must have put an additional price on them. We asked for $12 million, which was the cost — no profit on those weapons — and we got our $12 million back."

The president apparently was referring to the price the Pentagon worked out to charge the Central Intelligence Agency for weapons taken from U.S. stockpiles for transfer to Iran, some of which replenished Israeli stockpiles.

Instead of the single $12 million transaction that Reagan's answer seemed to suggest, arms were shipped to Iran in a complex series of deals involving four transactions. Iran made payments of $24 million for these arms. The United States never asked Iran for $12 million, as Reagan indicated.

While minimizing the amount of the U.S. arms transfer to Iran, the president also tried to dismiss as a minor mistake his repeated statements at his news conference last Nov. 19 that there was no involvement by a "third country" — meaning Israel — in the arms deal. According to Reagan's description Thursday night of his Nov. 19 misstatements, he realized from talking to his staff soon after the news conference that he had erred and insisted that a correction be issued immediately.

"So it was just a misstatement that I didn't realize had been made," Reagan said Thursday night.

In fact, as NBC News reporter Chris Wallace immediately pointed out to the president, he was asked about Israel's involvement four times at the Nov. 19 news conference and each time made the same denial of third-country involvement. According to several officials and published accounts, then-White House spokesman Larry Speakes and then-White House chief of staff Donald T. Regan insisted on the Nov. 19 correction, rather than the president, a point that did not come up last night.

Strength For Today

As most Christians know, the Great Commandment is: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, with all thy soul, with all thy strength and with all thy mind; and thy neighbor as thyself."

When asked about it, Jesus replied, "This do and thou shalt live."

The Master was ever conscious of the pathetic and tragic breakdown which constantly takes place between what a person believes and what he does, between his theories about life and life itself. When Jesus said to his questioner, "This do and thou shalt live," he indicated a doubt as to whether the man had the will to translate his theories into action.

The divine answer to all life's questioning is love. The divine commandment is to put it into practice.

Chadbourn Mayor Swears In Black Police Chief, Then Submits His Own Resignation

CHADBOURN, N.C. (AP) — Ten minutes after swearing in the town's first black police chief, Chadborn Mayor Dick Tyler abruptly resigned, but said his resignation was not related to the firing of the town manager this week.

Tyler, general manager of an underwear factory, said he had not come to Town Hall Thursday intending to quit.

"I'm not running from a fight," he said. "I'll never run from a fight."

Before and after the brief swearing-in ceremony, the mayor took several phone calls but he would not discuss those conversations. He informed his wife of the resignation after he signed the letter.

Asked if he was pressured by a caller to resign, Tyler said, "I'd rather not comment."

But he added, "It does not have anything to do with what happened this week."

The announcement stunned Kelly Rogers and a handful of others on hand to see Rogers sworn in as the town's first black police chief. Already this week, Town Manager Steve Wyatt was suspended and fired before he could appoint Rogers chief.

The Town Council's three white members voted to fire Wyatt Wednesday night, saying their action had nothing to do with Rogers but, rather, the failure of Wyatt to consult them adequately during his 2½ years on the job. The three then asked that Rogers be sworn in as chief Thursday morning. The council's other two members, both black, challenged each move.

One of the three white council members, Mayor Pro Tem Ruby Spivey, is now apparently in charge of Chadborn, under a state of emergency declared by Tyler Tuesday, the day after Wyatt was suspended.

"I understand I am the mayor now and I will be doing what's necessary," said Mrs. Spivey, a teacher at Chadborn Primary School. She called a special meeting of the council for tonight.

Mrs. Spivey and Councilman Bobby Tedder were not at the swearing-in. Councilmen C.W. Williams and Joe Evans, both black, and Councilman F.M. Carroll, who is white, did attend.

Williams and Evans criticized the swearing-in, saying that they supported Rogers for the job, but could not abide the firing of Wyatt.

Evans called Rogers' appointment a face-saving measure by the white council members following the public outcry over their suspension of Wyatt Monday night, the eve of Wyatt's appointment of Rogers.

"It was a way of getting around the charge of racism," he said. "The bottom line is racial."

"Come back in one year and find out where he's at," Evans added, gesturing at Rogers, who stood in silence several feet away. "They'll probably say they never heard of him."

Sarah Davis, a black Chadborn resident, congratulated Rogers following his oath-taking, then told him: "You got that rope around your neck, all they got to do is pull the string. And they might do it sooner than you think."

Rogers smiled but did not respond. Later he said, "I have enough on my mind. ... That really gets to me."

Carroll, who voted to fire Wyatt but also to swear in Rogers, dismissed the allegation. "Things will be alright in a little bit," he said.

Tedder called Tyler's resignation "shocking" but reiterated that Wyatt's firing was not racially motivated. "There was no racism on my part and there's still none," he said.

Rogers said of the attention surrounding his appointment: "I hope it won't affect the performance of my duties."

STEVE WYATT

"Quite naturally the job is going to be rough but I'm just going to do the things I'd naturally do."

House Rejects Martin Nominee

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin accused House Democrats who rejected his choice for state banking commissioner of political pettiness, but opponents of Ben Tison's nomination said their stand was justified.

In a joint session Thursday, the state Senate voted 43-4 to confirm Tison. But the House's 81-31 vote of disapproval blocked the nomination.

The banking commissioner, who serves eight-year terms and is paid $58,716 per year, charters state banks and regulates the industry.

Martin said House opposition stemmed from Tison's jump from the Democratic Party to the GOP in 1985.

"It is regrettable that old partisan grudges have taken precedence over the merit and qualifications of the person recommended and his obvious knowledge of banking and proven experience in the field," Martin said in a prepared statement.

"Last-minute efforts ... to dredge up imaginary grievances will not obscure the fact that the main objection anyone had against Mr. Tison was against his decision to change his registration to Republican," he said. "I am grateful to those who put aside such petty considerations, especially among the Senate leadership who refused to join in a partisan vendetta."

The House vote was mostly along partisan lines. Three Democrats — Reps. Jo Graham Foster, D-Mecklenburg, Pete Hasty, D-Robeson, and Wendell Murphy, D-Duplin — joined 28 Republicans in favor of Tison's nomination. Two Republicans opposed it: Reps. Harold Brubaker, R-Randolph, and Monroe Buchanan, R-Mitchell.

Many House Democrats acknowledged privately that Tison's party switch played a major role in his defeat, while others cited his opposition to Liston Ramsey's candidacy for House speaker in 1981, when Tison was a state representative.

The Charlotte Observer reported Thursday that some Democrats also wanted to retaliate against Tison for a 1983 incident in which Tison, then a senator, asked a representative's boss to urge the representative to support a controversial bill to change the state's civil justice system.

Publicly, however, Democrats insisted their motives were pure.

"Political ramifications carried no weight with me," Rep. Dennis Wicker, D-Lee, said.

"We live by the sword and we die by the sword, and we are perfectly happy to accept the realities of politics," Tison said in a telephone interview from his home in Charlotte. He was not on hand for the votes.

Tison said some Democrats told him after the vote that politics was the only explanation for the wide disagreement between the Senate and House.

"Everybody I've talked to, House and Senate both, have listed that as the primary reason," Tison said. "They say without the switch I would have had no trouble at all."

Tison, 56, is vice president and trust officer of NCNB National Bank in Charlotte. He served 10 years in the House and two in the Senate before departing in 1984 to make an unsuccessful bid for Congress.

Wicker, a member of the House Banking and Thrift Institutions Committee that voted earlier Thursday not to support Tison, said he had two major objections to Tison: his employment with a national bank and his record on consumer issues as a legislator.

"I question the wisdom of establishing a precedent where the executive officer of a national bank of this size would be the regulator of state banks," Wicker said.

For the past 20 years, the banking commissioner has not been a banker, he said. "I say to you that they served us very well through the turbulent economic times we've experienced," he said.

Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, argued that the Founding Fathers intended for legislative scrutiny of executive appointments to be taken seriously.

Peat Mine Opposed

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Three North Carolina environmental groups say they will sue the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers and the Environmental Protection Agency to block a peat mine in Hyde County.

A notice of the intent to file suit was mailed Wednesday by the Southern Environmental Law Center on behalf of the N.C. Coastal Federation, the N.C. Wildlife Federation and the N.C. Fisheries Association Inc.

The same three groups prevailed in a similar lawsuit in 1985 involving a nearby 15,000-acre tract owned by First Colony Farms Inc. First Colony has since abandoned its plans to mine peat in the area.

"We are challenging the failure to regulate the project because it could destroy a huge area of wetlands that play a crucial role in protecting the water quality and productivity of the fisheries in the Pamlico and Albemarle Sounds," David W. Carr, an attorney with the Southern Environmental Law Center, told the Norfolk Virginian-Pilot and Ledger-Star Thursday.

Harrington Says Highway Cuts To Cost $160 Million

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Calling the new federal highway package "an unmitigated disaster" for North Carolina, state Transportation Secretary James Harrington said states hurt by it must band together or watch road funds slip through their fingers.
North Carolina will lose $160 million over five years to the new federal highway package, mostly to pay for projects backed by key lawmakers in Washington, Harrington told the House Transportation Committee Thursday.

"Under the legislation adopted by the (U.S.) House yesterday, our citizens are betrayed," he said, adding that North Carolina was already losing $37 million of its $345 million in federal gasoline taxes to out-of-state mass transit systems.

"This adds insult to injury," he said. "An additional $38 million will go to demonstration projects selected and written into law by key members of the Congress in important positions, none of which help North Carolina," Harrington said.

"You and I are going to be stuck with some very difficult problems or some very irate constituents, or, more likely, both."

Currently, one of the few supporters for North Carolina's position is the U.S. Department of Transportation, Harrington said.

"We feel sort of lonesome, but they're on our side," he said. "We've put our backs together and we've both drawn swords. But the woods are full of wolves."

Harrington urged state lawmakers to use ties with other losing states to inform them of the facts.

"Unless this is brought forcefully to the attention of the congressmen and senators in the other states that are going to lose money, they won't know how bad it is," he said.

A presidential veto is the best bet for detouring the measure and force renegotiations in which North Carolina's congressional delegation could take an active role, Harrington said.

"My attitude is that I would rather sit five months, if necessary, without a bill than live five years with this disaster," he said.

Former U.S. Rep. Bill Cobey, now a state DOT lobbyist in Washington, mentioned that some of the other losing states include Texas, South Carolina, Tennessee and Kentucky. He said the biggest winners were Massachusetts, California and Illinois.

"One of the problems we have is so many of the states are desperate that some of them are willing to take any bill just to get some funding from the federal government," he said.

Rep. Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, noted some have-nots had something influential in common — plans to hold joint March 1988 presidential primaries.

Burke Officials Say School Blast Caused By Gas Leak

MORGANTON, N.C. (AP) — Investigators say an explosion that destroyed a junior high school apparently was caused by leaking gas and originated in a second-floor classroom that used to be a science laboratory.

"All indications right now are that it was a gas explosion," said Nick Waters, Burke County Emergency Management director.

Authorities said the room has been used as regular classroom since 1973 when a former high school was converted into Salem Junior High.

Stewart Leonard, branch manager of Steele-Rulane Gas Service Inc. said Wednesday three liquid petroleum gas tanks were located at the school but said only a 500-gallon tank was in use when the explosion occurred.

The large tank provided gas for hot water and cooking heat in the first-floor cafeteria, while two 23-gallon tanks provided gas to the home economics class and old science lab until 1973, Leonard said.

Investigators also received reports that students complained about smelling gas Tuesday, but those reports have not been confirmed by school officials, Lt. Ralph Johnson of the Burke County Sheriff's Department said.

Authorities said they have heard rumors that the school had received bomb threats, but school officials said they have no knowledge of such threats.

"I don't know anything about any bomb threats," Salem Junior High School principal Ernest Jenkins said Thursday. "We had a locker search Tuesday morning looking for overdue library books, and somebody must have decided later that we were doing that for some other purpose."

Meanwhile, the school board met Thursday and decided to move the junior high school students to the N.C. School of the Deaf by April 1. The move must be approved by the state Department of Human Resources, and that approval is expected possibly as early as Monday.

The school board said it hoped the elementary school students would be back in their classrooms by Monday.

Members of the National Emergency Response team supervised by federal Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearm agents have not yet been able to enter the interior of the building because of the structure's instability.

Only the four outside walls are still standing, and workers used a crane and wrecking ball Thursday to begin knocking the front and rear walls out into the parking lot and rear of the building. Flattening the walls will lessen the danger of the structure caving in on investigators digging through the rubble.

After the unstable walls are removed, fire investigators will drag much of the debris and rubble out of the structure, looking for evidence of how the blast occurred, officials said.

Wreckers also pulled the five automobiles destroyed by the blast away from the front of the building Thursday.

Hunting Garb OK'd

RALEIGH (AP) — Some legislators called it the seat-belt bill of the 1987 session, but a measure to require big-game hunters to wear bright orange for safety had no trouble getting unanimous approval of a House committee.

"The people I represent, I know it's good for them. I know it'll save lives. But I still know they don't want it," Rep. Ed Bowen, D-Sampson, said during Wildlife Resources Committee discussion of the bill Thursday.

"Now, what do you do in a situation like this? I'll vote to put it on the floor, but I don't know how I'll vote after this."

The bill says any person hunting big game must wear a bright orange cap, hat, or outer garment visible from all sides. It exempts landowners hunting on their property and their spouses and children.

Supporters said the bill was needed because a growing number of hunters were being shot by fellow hunters who mistook them for animals.

IN THE STATE

Jordan Firm

DURHAM (AP) — Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan, who has promoted himself as a champion of the environment, owns an interest in a firm that has been cited by state inspectors for violating pollution laws, a newspaper reported.

On March 13, Jordan received a letter from the state Department of Natural Resources and Community Development notifying him that Carolina Development Co. was polluting an Anson County creek.

Jordan said he has no management control in the firm, just an investment, the Durham Morning Herald reported Thursday.

The letter cited four specific violations by the company, which is building an apartment complex. The letter cited the company for not controlling erosion at the building site, building too close to water and leaving no buffer zone and not filing an erosion control plan with the state.

Jordan said he called the Fayetteville office of NRCD, which issued the letter, and then called the company and urged its officials to comply immediately with state laws.

Indictments

GREENSBORO (AP) — Thirty-four people have been indicted on 106 felony charges of selling cocaine and marijuana to undercover police officers in an area of Greensboro called The Hill, authorities said.

The charges followed a seven-month undercover operation by the State Bureau of Investigation, Greensboro Police Department and the Winston-Salem Police Department, which provided undercover officers to make drug purchases.

The 34 suspects were named in sealed indictments returned by a Guilford County grand jury.

"I expect there are some happy residents on The Hill," said Charles Dunn, deputy director of the SBI. Dunn called the operation a "surgical attack" that should significantly reduce drug dealing in the area.

Cape Extension

RALEIGH (AP) — Attorney General Lacy Thornburg has filed objections with the N.C. Department of Administration to the U.S. Marine Corps' proposed expansion of military airspace over the Cape Lookout National Seashore and other North Carolina coastal areas.

The Marine Corps had recently notified the state of North Carolina that it proposed a major expansion of its training operations over Pamlico and Core sounds, the Pamlico River and Carteret County. The expanded training operations would require daily, high-speed flights by military aircraft over a portion of the Cape Lookout National Seashore and over the Atlantic, Sea Level and Cedar Island communities.

Thornburg said high-speed flights at such low altitudes would substantially interfere with the public use of beaches and ocean waters, and with fishermen using the sounds and rivers.

No Plans

RALEIGH (AP) — Former Charlotte Mayor Eddie Knox, who switched his party registration to Republican, has expressed little interest in seeking the GOP nomination for lieutenant governor in 1988.

"I've always had an interest in state government," Knox said in an interview. "But if you ask if I have had any plans or formulated plans or given it any serious discussion, the answer is no. ... I don't think you'll see me announce."

Sentence Changed

GREENSBORO (AP) — A federal judge has modified the sentence of a Greensboro man convicted last year of drug charges and intimidating federal witnesses, noting that the man is providing information in another investigation.

U.S. District Court Judge Hiram H. Ward changed William Snouffer's 18-year prison sentence to make Snouffer eligible for parole at any time the U.S. Parole Commission wishes. Ward did the same for Snouffer's co-defendant, Hobart Michael Anderson.

Snouffer, 33, was the owner of Dragon Productions, a security service that often provided security during rock concerts at Greensboro Coliseum.

Rape Arrests

ASHEBORO, N.C. (AP) — Two Asheboro men, whom authorities say raped and kidnapped an 83-year-old woman and burglarized her home, have been arrested.

Jamie C. Cassidy, 20, was in Randolph County Jail under a $500,000 bond, charged with first-degree rape, first-degree burglary, kidnapping and larceny. Cassidy was arrested while asleep at a residence and offered no resistance, said Maj. Larry Emerson, spokesman for the county sheriff's department.

Anthony Leak, 22, was arrested on the same charges Wednesday after an extensive search.

The two are accused of forcing their way late Sunday into the home of the woman, raping her and burglarizing her house. Two men then stole her car and took her to an abandoned mobile home near Franklinville, where she was kept tied up until escaping late Monday or early Tuesday.

Martin Defends Budget Policy To Reduce Surplus

RALEIGH (AP) — Republican Gov. Jim Martin says Democrats critical of his budget may be more concerned about hiding pet projects from public scrutiny than they are with the way he proposes to spend money.

Martin, at his weekly news conference Thursday, said legislative leaders are worried that his budget would spend all the revenues that can reasonably be forecast.

"In other words, we didn't leave a box of money that says, 'Here, come take this and spend it for pork barrel and those kinds of purposes,'" he said.

Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan said Wednesday that Martin had neglected to provide budget funds for recruiting teachers. He said lawmakers might have to go back to "first base" rather than try to fit changes into a spending plan he likened to an overblown balloon.

Martin, however, said legislatures traditionally change budgets submitted by governors. He said the latest argument was similar to complaints that Martin's budget was presented in a format that includes continuing spending as well as proposed increases.

"I expect that what the problem is, in order to spend on a lot of things that they think are more important, they want to do it without drawing attention to what they have to cut back on," Martin said. "Maybe they have convinced themselves that if they start from scratch they can escape that kind of scrutiny."

Martin said that would not be the case, even if Democrats go back to the old format.

"We can still keep score of what we proposed and what they've taken out," he said. "They won't be able to escape that."

Martin's main announcement Thursday was that the state's film industry had brought in a record $266.5 million in 1986.

Pitt County is located approximately 30 miles inland from the coastal sounds, 80 miles from the Atlantic Ocean and roughly 150 miles from the Appalachian Mountains.

MCI Claims Student Fraud Cost $600,000

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A long-distance telephone company has filed suit against 27 Johnson C. Smith University students to recover damages for credit card fraud estimated in excess of $600,000, and a company spokeswoman says that may just be the tip of the iceberg.

"We believe there are far more students involved," Laurie Tolleson of MCI Telecommunications Corp. said Thursday. "I'd say over 50."

She said the suit, filed in Mecklenburg County Superior Court Thursday, is based on the use of two credit card codes to obtain long distance telephone service without the intent to pay MCI for access.

Ms. Tolleson said MCI had reached the 27 students named in the suit and that they had agreed to make restitution for the fraud, but that none of the students has made payments.

"We have gone to the college and asked each of the students identified in the suit to make restitution. They have not," Ms. Tolleson said.

Ms. Tolleson said the investigation "into thousands of calls, some coast to coast," began in May 1985 and is continuing. She said MCI believes fraud through the use of the codes "being transferred among students" may still be going on.

"The situation that we have here involves two credit cards which are, in essence, bogus cards," she said. "They were subscribed to under fake names. We identified the abuse through our software system and went through our investigation process."

Ms. Tolleson said J.C. Smith was not being singled out for the suit and that similar cases have arisen at the University of Miami, American University in Washington and at North Texas State.

"It's a problem that seems to crop up on college campuses or where there are large groups of people in one location," she said.

Scott Ross, MCI Southeast Division finance director, said losses attributed to telephone fraud and code abuse "adversely affect the industry's ability to provide the most cost-effective and efficient service to the consumer."

"I did understand that the institution had indeed cooperated with MCI in this matter," said Dr. James Law, dean of students at J.C. Smith.

He did not know if the university had been contacted before the lawsuit was filed.

Private Study Questions Profits Reported By Insurance Industry

RALEIGH (AP) — An independent analyst's report on property and casualty insurance companies indicates their 1985 profits nationally were much higher than reported by the industry when it was blaming the civil justice system for a poor financial performance.

The report, compiled by A.M. Best Co. for North Carolina's automobile insurers, shows after-tax income of $7.8 billion and return on equity of 9.63 percent. The industry has maintained that after-tax income in 1985 was $1.9 billion and return on equity was 3.8 percent.

The industry figures were released Thursday by state Insurance Commissioner Jim Long during the first day of a hearing on a request by the auto insurance industry for a 12.2 percent increase in premiums.

"It shows they have been making a lot more money than they have been claiming around the country," J. Robert Hunter, president of the National Insurance Consumer Organization, told the News and Observer of Raleigh.

"They admitted they made a lot of money in 1986, but they continue to allege that their (1985) profits were woefully inadequate," he said.

The industry earned record profits of $12.7 billion in 1986, according to the Insurance Services Office, which compiles data for the industry.

An insurance industry spokesman expressed surprise at the 1985 figures released by Long and said he had no explanation for the discrepancy from the industry's lower figures.

"We are certainly surprised by this and can't explain it until we see it," said William Davis, regional manager in Atlanta for the Insurance Information Institute, a trade organization. "We have never seen them release any other numbers than what has been talked about and widely discussed. I think something might have got mixed up there."

The report had been requested by the N.C. Rate Bureau, which represents the state's auto insurance industry. Bureau officials had sought to prevent its release, arguing that A.M. Best had wanted it kept confidential. But Long ruled the report become a public document when it was turned over to his department.

Trooper Injured In Shooting

FRANKLIN, N.C. (AP) — Law officers from North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia are searching for two men who shot a N.C. Highway Patrol trooper in Macon County during a routine traffic stop.

Officials said a bulletproof vest worn by Trooper Glenn Allen Jones, 33, apparently stopped two or three bullets fired at his chest Thursday night.

Jones was reported in good condition at Angel Community Hospital in Franklin early today.

Sgt. Jack Edwards of the Highway Patrol headquarters in Asheville said officers had set up roadblocks in Macon, Clay and Jackson counties in North Carolina, as well as neighboring counties in South Carolina and Georgia.

"There are so many different agencies involved, it's difficult to give an accurate count" of the officers in the search, Edwards said.

Trooper C.D. Jenkins, who was patrolling in the same general area, said Jones had pulled a van to the side of U.S. 64 about 10:15 p.m. because it had no license plates. As he was walking up to the vehicle, he was hit several times with gunfire, apparently from a small-caliber handgun.

Jenkins said Jones returned the fire as he made his way back to his cruiser to call for help. Jones then began driving himself to the hospital, but Jenkins said he told him to pull off the road and wait for assistance.

Jenkins, who is a trained emergency medical technician, said he could not determine if the bullets penetrated Jones' protective vest.

Bias Case Studied

BESSEMER CITY, N.C. (AP) — The Equal Employment Opportunity Commission is investigating allegations of racial discrimination in the Bessemer City Police Department.

City officials refused to discuss the case, but a decision from the federal agency is expected in coming weeks.

On Feb. 10, Patrolman Fredrick C. Hardin, who is black, filed a charge of discrimination against the city alleging that Patrolman Ken Fowler, who is white, "spread false information" about Hardin and repeatedly involved Hardin "in conflicting issues and incidents of a discriminatory nature because of my race."

The complaint does not say when the alleged incidents occurred.

Mayor Richard B. Lackey would not comment on the allegations.

Sue Thompson, an EEOC counselor, said once a complaint is filed against a city, federal officials inform the city of the action and get a written statement from city official.

A federal investigator interviews those named in the complaint and then recommends whether the complaint is justified. If the complaint is deemed justifiable, the EEOC and city officials try to negotiate a settlement.

On Jan. 30, 1986, Hardin filed a similar complaint alleging that white officer Sgt. Don Spake said he didn't want a black on his shift.

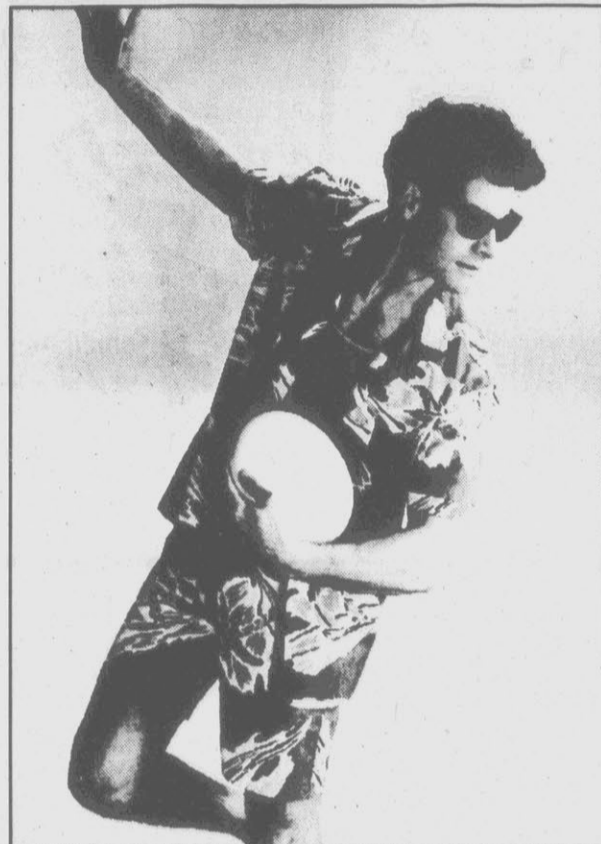

Hardin, in the earlier complaint, accused Spake of frequently "using racial slurs in the line of duty."

The federal agency ruled in that complaint that discrimination did exist and negotiated an agreement between Hardin and the city, assuring Hardin that racially motivated comments would stop.

Hardin, in the latest complaint, argues that the agreement was ignored.

Bakker Turns Over PTL Reins To Jerry Falwell

By PAUL NOWELL
Associated Press Writer
FORT MILL, S.C. (AP) — Television evangelist Jim Bakker, saying he had been blackmailed about an alleged sexual encounter seven years ago, has resigned as chairman of his PTL ministry and turned it over to fellow evangelist Jerry Falwell.

Bakker, 47, said in a statement to The Charlotte Observer Thursday that he had been manipulated by former friends he did not name who "conspired to betray me into a sexual encounter."

Then, Bakker said, he "succumbed to blackmail ... to protect and spare the ministry and my family" and "appease these persons who were determined to destroy this ministry."

"Unfortunately, money was paid in order to avoid further suffering or hurt to anyone to appease these persons who were determined to destroy this ministry. "I now, in hindsight, realize payment should have been resisted and we ought to have exposed the blackmailers to the penalties of the law."

Falwell, at a news conference late Thursday night in Lynchburg, Va., called Bakker "a personal friend and brother in Christ. He put his arm around me and asked me personally to help him in his time of crisis."

Falwell said Bakker had personal problems that "are in no way as serious as many of the rumors would have it." Falwell declined to comment on Bakker's statement about being blackmailed.

A lawyer representing PTL, Norman Roy Grutman, refused Thursday to answer whether the blackmail money was paid by PTL, from Bakker's personal funds or some other source, the Observer said. He also declined to say how much money was paid, but the newspaper said it had been investigating allegations that Bakker paid $115,000 in blackmail money.

Denomination officials told The Observer March 13 that they had begun formally investigating allegations against PTL, including the charge of sexual misconduct by Bakker.

Bakker said he was also resigning from his denomination, the Assemblies of God, "for the good of my family, the church and of all our related ministries."

The investigation will continue, despite the resignations, church officials said Thursday.

Falwell said he had no intention of moving any of his operations from Lynchburg but said he would have an office in Charlotte.

"I am not naive enough to think that a ministry of the magnitude of PTL and Heritage USA could go through a dilemma such as this without creating a backwash that would hurt every gospel ministry in America, if not the world, and so that is a second reason I felt responsible in a very busy schedule and a very important time in my life to make time for this responsibility," Falwell said in a statement released earlier Thursday.

Bakker and his wife, Tammy Faye, had been co-hosts of the ministry's daily talk-show-style broadcast, "The Jim and Tammy Show," distributed on cable.

Bakker announced March 6 that Mrs. Bakker is undergoing treatment in an undisclosed California center for drug dependency that began when she was pregnant 17 years ago.

PTL, which reported $129 million in revenues in 1986, employs about 2,000 people and owns the 2,300-acre Heritage USA retreat near Fort Mill.

Bakker, a Michigan-born preacher, moved to Charlotte in early 1974 and soon became the top figure at fledgling PTL.

He was Heritage USA's master planner, conceiving two 500-room hotels, a water amusement park, homes for single mothers and street people and other buildings. There are plans for developments worth hundreds of millions of dollars more.

Church Groups Sharpen Stance On Contra Aid

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Major religious bodies, which steadily have opposed outside military infusions into Central America, are stepping up pressures against further U.S. arms supplies to Contra rebels in Nicaragua.

With the issue simmering in Congress and in investigations into the administration's arms deals with Iran that funded battle gear for the Contras, a broad ecumenical coalition has launched an intensive drive against such aid.

Called "Lenten Witness for Justice and Peace in Central America," the special effort was to run through Lent's 40 days of penitence before Easter and include events in the nation's capital and in cities across the country.

Both Roman Catholic and Protestant leaders were spearheading the effort, with local churches urged to hold special services, prayers, study and weekly vigils in front of federal buildings.

Administration policies in Central America are a "betrayal of the American heritage," says the Rev. Arie Brouwer, general secretary of the National Council of Churches, including most major Protestant and Orthodox denominations.

It is participating in the Lenten coalition's drive of mainline Protestant denominations and national Roman Catholic organizations, such as the leadership conferences of men's and women's Catholic religious orders.

The U.S. Catholic Conference, action arm for Catholic bishops, last week reiterated their consistent opposition to U.S. military aid in Central America, and specifically to the Contras.

"The continuation of such aid prolongs and deepens the conflict with its attendant costs in human suffering and economic devastation," the conference said, and also "frustrates peace-making efforts of our hemispheric allies."

The Lenten drive, to include weekly demonstrations on the Capitol steps in Washington and lobbying visits with Congress members, began on Ash Wednesday, March 4, when five religious leaders were arrested in the Capitol rotunda.

The process is continuing each Wednesday through April 15, with a turnout of Lutherans and Presbyterians this week in Washington.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

This is a dramatized version of facts taken from the Book of Genesis intending to show some of the customs of these ancient and traditional times

A BRIDE FOR ISAAC

ABRAHAM HAS TOLD HIS STEWARD, ELIEZER TO GO TO THE LAND OF ABRAHAM'S BIRTH AND BRING BACK A YOUNG MAIDEN TO BECOME THE WIFE OF HIS SON, ISAAC, NOW...

...ELIEZER SWEARS A VOW THAT HE WILL DO ALL IN HIS POWER TO BRING THIS ABOUT....

FOR SUCH A JOURNEY, THERE IS MUCH TO BE DONE!

...THE SERVANTS GO INTO THE PROVISION TENTS TO PREPARE FOR THE LONG TRIP....

...NOT ONLY FOOD, BUT GOLD, SILVER, AND GEMS WILL BE NEEDED, FOR MANY GIFTS WILL HAVE TO BE MADE...

...STURDY CAMELS ARE LOADED WITH FOOD, WATER, WINE, GARMENTS, AND RICH GIFTS OF SILKS, AND FINE WOOLS - NOT TO MENTION SHEKELS OF GOLD, AND TALENTS OF SILVER. FOR OBTAINING A WIFE IS A VERY COSTLY AFFAIR, AND SERIOUS, AS LONG JOURNEYS THROUGH THE WILD COUNTRY OF THESE ANCIENT TIMES ARE FILLED WITH MANY DANGERS AND HARDSHIPS!

Larry Lea is the Pastor of the 11,000 member Church on the Rock in Rockwell, Texas. In 1969 God called him to preach and with that call to pray. After six years of no power he obeyed the call to pray. Then, by the Holy Spirit, God taught him to pray. Now through the blessings of God with the fruit of his ministry, he is teaching others across America how to pray

Lifestyle

Live-In Maids Remain Popular In Beijing

By BERNARD DeGIOANNI
Agence France-Presse

BEIJING — Despite daily calls to fight against "bourgeois liberalization," the influx of thousands of peasant girls who come to the Chinese capital to work as live-in maids continues unabated.

During the Cultural Revolution (1966-76) the practice of keeping a live-in maid was denounced as "bourgeois" and "reactionary."

And as traditionalist leaders currently sing the praises of egalitarianism and denounce the Westernization of China, the social role of these maids or "ayis" is increasingly suspect.

The official Chinese press said earlier this month that the younger generation should receive a "collective education" while the maids can only give them a "personalized education."

But the demand is still so great that an estimated 30,000 peasant girls from rural areas have come to the capital in search of a job as a live-in maid.

The government has set up employment agencies to help them find work, and three free markets operate in the city, where the would-be maids wait patiently for days on end to find an employer.

Most of the "ayis" at these markets are under 20 years old. Their wages — between 30 to 40 yuan ($8 to $10) a month — are less than half the salary of an average worker.

One "ayi" free market is located on a long boulevard not far from the prestigious Maxim's restaurant and close to a factory wall, where dozens of peasant girls in brightly colored clothes, scarves wrapped tightly around their heads, come every day to huddle together in little groups on the pavement.

Li, 17, arrived in Peking two weeks ago from Anhui, a poor agricultural province in central China. She carries only a few personal belongings in a small sack.

"I've never worked," she says. Li's story is repeated by other girls of the same age, all of them shy and speaking only halting Mandarin, being more used to conversing in their provincial dialect at home on their farms.

The girls say that they want to discover what city life is like. To escape the countryside and to earn money have brought them here.

But they all say that they do not intend to stay more than a few months, as they must return home to rejoin their families and help in the fields.

Their hope of earning good money is unlikely to be fulfilled. The "ayis" are fed and housed, but this does not compensate for the gap between their salary and that of the average worker.

And the fact that they live with their employers means that they often work up to 12 hours a day.

The would-be employers are in search of "simple, serious young girls who are unpretentious and devoted," according to 30-year-old Mr. Liu, a young cadre and Communist Party member who was looking for someone to take care of his son and his elderly father, and who bemoaned the lack of nurseries and live-in nurses.

The government has set up special agencies responsible for recruiting and placing the girls with employers.

"We can provide a maid with all the required qualifications within a fortnight. Before, you needed three to six months," said Li Ruiqin, the director of one of the largest agencies.

An official circular pasted at one of the free markets states that all "ayis" are to be registered with a municipal office. It also stipulates that the recruits be at least 16 years of age and in possession of an identity card and a medical certificate.

Contracts must also indicate the time of work and the salary.

But in practice, both employers and employees frequently ignore these obligations, people at the market said.

Chen, a pregnant young woman, has been searching for an "ayi" to take care of her future child.

"I work all day. I don't come home until late at night. An 'ayi' is not a luxury, it is a necessity if I don't want to lose my job," she said.

A cadre in an import-export company, Chen earns 300 yuan ($81) a month, three times the average salary in the capital.

Will she have to make sacrifices to have an "ayi"? She smiles. "No. I already have a color television," a symbol of consumerism in China.

Second Gifts Not Expected

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am marrying my ex-husband in September. We never gave our marriage a chance, and were divorced shortly after we were married.

Our first wedding wasn't much. We were married by a justice of the peace with a few close friends and some family members present. This time we are having a church wedding with lots of friends and relatives.

The problem: Our relatives and close friends who attended our first ceremony already gave us lovely wedding gifts, and I want them to know that they are not expected to give us another gift. However, we do want them to share our day of happiness. Would it be all right to enclose a little note with the invitations to these special people saying, "No gift, please. You already gave"? — SECOND MARRIAGE, SAME MAN

DEAR SECOND: No notes. Tell them privately that a second gift is not expected.

DEAR ABBY: I have recently had a couple of puzzling experiences that maybe you or your readers can help me with. I am a single woman 45 years old.

The first was a year ago. While touring New Zealand, I dated a 56-year-old man. On our first date (which was also our last) while dining at a restaurant, he reached over for what I thought was to be a friendly kiss — instead he stuck his fingers in my mouth, tugged at my teeth and laughingly asked, "Are these false?" Fortunately, I don't have false teeth, but what odd behavior!

Then a Pennsylvania man I had known intimately for 15 years (and almost married) arranged to meet me in Las Vegas for a romantic weekend, after we had not seen each other for four years. Upon retiring the first evening, he reached over as if to hug me, but instead he pulled at my teeth, making a joke (ha-ha) about false teeth. I was stunned! (What if I had had false teeth?)

Is this crass and rude behavior what we can look forward to should we lose our teeth? How can a lady handle this repulsive behavior without stooping to their level? — APPALLED IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR APPALLED: It is indeed amazing that you should have encountered two such weirdos with the same fixation about teeth. I assure you that this kind of behavior is not usual. Some may suspect, or even inquire, but to actually tug at someone's teeth in order to determine whether they are false is truly bizarre.

DEAR ABBY: I'm writing about that letter you ran from the "Proud Texan." He wrote you about a western-club owner who had changed the sign from "Cow" to "Heifer" on the ladies' restroom door because the women resented being called cows. If you think that's bad, wait until you hear this one!

My husband and I are both country-and-western people through and through. Anyway, when I told my husband I was pregnant, he bragged to everyone that he had me "bred" and that I was due to "calve" in July. After the baby was born he started calling people to tell them the news — and he told them all that I had "dropped" him an 8-pound "heifer."

Sign me ... PROUD COW WITH A 3-YEAR-OLD HEIFER

DEAR PROUD: Thanks for writing. Now I've herd everything.

DEAR ABBY: My sister-in-law (I'll call her Charlotte), 41, and her husband have four lovely boys (ages 10, 8, 6 and 3). Last October they flew to Sidney, Australia, for an "in vitro fertilization" of a baby girl. (It's a rather new process whereby the male and female chromosomes can be identified and separated, and the parents can select the sex they want. They did this because they didn't want another boy.)

Charlotte has just found out that she is carrying twins — a boy and a girl. She wants to keep only the girl! She and her husband have decided to put the boy up for adoption. The doctor has agreed, so when the time comes, Charlotte will see only "the chosen baby."

What is your opinion of this idea? — WITHHOLD MY NAME

DEAR WITHHOLD: It doesn't seem right to keep only one twin. I pray that Charlotte and her husband change their minds and keep them both.

Zeta Tau Alpha Charter To Be Granted March 28

Zeta Tau Alpha Fraternity will grant its 209th charter at East Carolina University March 28.

Linda Deviney of Virginia Beach and Cathy Slaughter of New York City will be the installing officers. The chapter will be initiated by Duke University and the University of North Carolina chapters.

Zeta Tau Alpha focuses on personal enrichment and development so that each member may reach individual potential. The new chapter will be the ninth one in North Carolina.

The group is currently working with the Association for Retarded Citizens. The group has helped provide financial aid for such projects as a Mental Retardation Prevention brochure, a handbook for social workers on dealing with low-income parents of retarded children, and an audio visual presentation on including retarded students in public schools.

Their newest project involves using space-age technology to create a unique living/learning environment for the severely retarded.

The new ECU chapter will be Iota Rho. Charter members of Greenville are Claudia Moseley, Melanie Robinson and Lisa Satterfield. Chapter advisers are Dr. Eugenia Zallen, Charla Holbrook, Bettie Richardson and Beth Caron.

Zeta Tau Alpha was founded in 1898 at Longwood College in Farmville, Va. The group now has over 100,000 members.

Ralph Lauren Goes West With Designer Ranch

By JIM CARRIER
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

RIDGWAY, Colo. — The cowboy stepped out of the cookhouse onto the wood porch, paused at the weathered screen door, and swung it back and forth.

"Listen," he said, cocking his ear. The three metal hinges gave off a satisfying, nostalgic squeak, the kind old screen doors make.

"That's attention to detail," the cowboy said. He moved it again.

His visitor stopped. "You mean ...?"

Yes, the cowboy nodded. At Ralph Lauren's ranch, even the squeak is designed.

In a picture-book setting, quintessentially Western, it seemed only fitting: a cook house built new to look — and sound — old, a fence made to look weathered. The Double RL ranch is one man's image of the West brought to life. A movie set lighted and peopled.

It is easy to get cynical about Ralph Lauren and his vision of the West.

But the Double RL ranch is real, too, and working, innovative and efficient. A business just like Lauren's other adventures in lifestyle. Larry Luke, the manager, can prove it in short order, with charts on beef growth, genetic studies, and marketing tests of "RL" brand beef planned for sale by mail and to restaurants. Last year, he said, the ranch made a small operating profit.

The difference is that Lauren has placed his brand on this land — just as he has on fashion — in a way that is at once new and old, trendy and traditional.

Take the fence, for example. Fifteen miles of four-rail pine stained with a combination of preservers that Lauren chose, it is built, as one of his cowboys put it, "hell for stout." But it has been dubbed the "designer fence" by a local columnist, who took it to task for its $25,000 cost per mile and its departure from the traditional barbed wire that the state ran along the highway toward the Dallas Divide to Telluride.

"It's probably the most commented part of this ranch," said Luke. "To me, it defines something special. To me it frames a picture. It's very functional. It should last 40 years."

Take the cookhouse, then. Built two years ago of aged barn board, it looks as old as the 1890 cabin beside it. The porch roof is supported by four knot-py posts, the fourth set to be tried before Lauren accepted the right look. Inside, there are old cupboards, old lanterns, banged-up floors, tables and chairs. Inside the stressed cupboards are Ralph Lauren dishes, Ralph Lauren towels, and in the dark and weathered bathroom, Chaps after-shave.

When Lauren and his hands sit at the long cracked table, as they do on his occasional visits, it is a scene a Marlboro art director might design. Lauren wanted his men to eat there every day, even when he was gone. They wanted to be with their families, in their own homes.

Such stories create Lauren lore in the valley. To Luke, who is defensive, they distort Lauren's values. But to the extent that a man's house is a reflection of him, then a whole ranch, even in Lauren's absence or refusal to talk about it, says much about the man. Lauren, a New Yorker who parlayed ties into a $1 billion fashion empire, bought the major part of the ranch in 1982 and has since added pieces totaling 12,300 acres. It is one of the most picturesque spreads in the West, with a backdrop of the jagged San Juans.

"Ralph bought this place because it's beautiful," said Luke, a hefty, studious, former investment counselor who runs the ranch as he once ran accounts — with posted work schedules, a budget, and computer runs. He was hired after an executive search and three days in New York at Lauren's headquarters, a process Lauren used, Luke said, to overcome his "soft spot for a cowboy."

"His charge to me: I want this ranch to be a serious operating ranch. I don't want this to be a tax haven. It is not. I want to have the best ranch in the West."

Lauren poured millions into the ranch, which had almost no buildings on it. He built fences and corrals, calving sheds and equipment, bought cattle and horses.

While he left the ranching to his men, he paid attention to the esthetics. Cabins were stained old. Old sheds were left old on the outside, but framed and modernized inside.

Lauren's new house, built of logs, was torn down and replaced because the logs were too uniform. The fireplace was rebuilt, too. The swimming pool was dynamited and redone with the "right" rocks.

Shopping To Meet Someone

At Wits End
Erma Bombeck

Somehow, I've never looked upon a supermarket as an alternative to the bar scene. To me, the only alternative it served was to shop or starve. But then, I've never been single in the '80s.

An increasing number of supermarkets around the country have declared "Singles Night" for men and women who aren't into unisex sweat at health spas, have trouble seeing wedding rings in a dark bar and can't stay awake for the crowds at the Laundromat as a viable alternative.

It's not as crass as a voice coming over the PA saying, "Attention, shoppers. A real bargain this week on desserts. Mid 20s, single, great shelf-life, check her out on aisle 3. Quantity limited while she lasts."

Or, "You think the lettuce is fresh. We're proud to announce a special this week on hunks. Let our butcher help you select a prime date. Buy one and freeze one for later."

The way it works is you slap on name tags, grab shopping carts and check out ... one another. In New Jersey at a supermarket on a typical night, a disc jockey in the front of the store airs rock music over the store's public address system. Games ensue. The first couple to exchange telephone numbers or the best dancing duet can waltz away with a free dinner at a restaurant or receive a T-shirt or an album.

Bowling contests with toilet paper rolls are also popular ice breakers. The age varies from singles in their 20s to older widows and divorcees, some of whom were dragged there by their children.

Actually, the idea is no crazier than water holes past. How many of you remember going to dances in high school or college where the girls sat on folding chairs around the dance floor like birds on a telephone wire waiting to be picked off by someone with sweaty palms? You could die from the rejection.

When I mentioned this to a group of my son's friends, they said, "You don't know death until you've called up five girls on the phone for a date and are turned down by five girls. That's rejection!"

Posturing for courtship is the most painful time of your life. No doubt about it. I see nothing wrong with a romantic interlude where your hand touches his as you reach for the same brand of wheat germ and realize you want to spend the rest of your life with this man of taste. Or a woman who just dashed in for a quart of milk and sees the man of her dreams bowling with a roll of toilet tissue.

Hey, it beats the depression I suffered the other day at my supermarket. I said to the cashier, "I'm ready to check out," and she yawned, "We all have to go sometime."

Stock And Market Reports

By The Associated Press
HENS: Market steady. Supply adequate for a moderate demand. The undertone for next week's trading is steady. Prices paid per pound for hens over seven pounds at farm for Wednesday, Thursday and Friday was 13 cents.

GRAIN: No. 2 yellow shelled corn mostly steady at mostly 1.75-1.86 in East and mostly 1.90-1.95 in the Piedmont; No. 1 yellow soybeans steady to 1 cent higher at mostly 4.82-5.02 in East and mostly 4.82-4.92 in the Piedmont; wheat mostly 2.64-2.77; (new crop wheat 2.40-2.60). Exchange rates for P.I.K. certificates were steady to 1/2 percent higher and ranged from 101 to 104 percent of face value.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market headed higher today.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial, which hit record highs in each of the past three sessions, rose 8.24 to 2,307.81 in the first half hour of trading.

Gainers outnumbered losers by more than 2 to 1 in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 729 up, 328 down and 478 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 26.68 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

Among actively traded blue chips, International Business Machines gained 1/2 to 147 1/2; American Telephone & Telegraph was up 1/4 at 23 3/4, and Exxon slipped 1/2 to 84 1/2.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks rose .50 to 167.78. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .85 at 338.32.

On Thursday the Dow Jones industrial average climbed 12.64 to 2,299.57, stretching its gain over the last three sessions to 51.13 points.

Advancing issues slightly outnumbered declines on the NYSE, with 809 up, 769 down and 387 unchanged. Big Board volume totaled 166.12 million shares, against 198.14 million in the previous session.

Barrett
 Mrs. Agnes Wadlington Barrett, 84, of 402 S. Jarvis St. died Thursday in Pitt County Memorial Hospital.
 Her funeral will be conducted Saturday at 2 p.m. in Wilkerson Funeral Chapel by the Rev. Glenn H. Evans. Burial will be in Forest Hill Cemetery, Farmville.

Mrs. Barrett served six presidents/chancellors of East Carolina Teachers College and East Carolina University as secretary and administrative assistant from 1930 to her retirement in 1968. She wrote many articles on the early history of the college, presidents and trustees she had served. She was a principal source for material used in the university's official history, "East Carolina University: The Formative Years - 1907-1982," by Dr. Mary Jo Bratton.

Upon her retirement, Mrs. Barrett was honored at a dinner attended by more than 125 members of the ECU faculty and staff.

MRS. AGNES W. BARRETT

A native of Kentucky, she attended Western Kentucky State Teachers College, State Teachers College at Edmond, Okla., and College of Commerce, Bowling Green, Ky.

She had been appointed a Kentucky Colonel by the governor of Kentucky and was a member of the Clio Book Club in Greenville.

Surviving are one sister, Mrs. James A. Armstrong of Waverly, Tenn., and one brother, Ben Wade Wadlington of Cadiz, Ky.

The family will receive friends at the funeral home today from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m.

Early Season Adversity Helped Conley To Arrive

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer
D.H. Conley's basketball team, which will play for the state 3-A championship Saturday, had an inauspicious beginning, compiling a 4-5 record by the Christmas break, but that early season adversity has helped the team get to where it is now.

"We've been used to being behind and coming back and winning and we've been used to being behind and staying behind," said Viking coach Walter Claybrook.

"I think it might have been an advantage for us going through things like that during the course of the year because I got the feeling that Bartlett-Yancey and Madison-Mayodan (the Vikings' opponents in the regionals) had been used to beating people pretty bad and not being behind."

Conley was able to jump out in front early in both games, and Claybrook felt that was a key.

Now the Vikings face North Gaston for the title. Up to now, the Vikings have employed the Cinderella theme in describing their season. But the name may fit the Wildcats, 15-14, a little better.

"I reckon they've got a right to steal the line that we've been using," Claybrook said. "We always say we're just happy to be here. I guess we're using their line. It ought to be a happy game because they're happy to be here and we're happy to be here."

Claybrook said he is not about to underestimate the Wildcats because of their record.

"We'd all be mighty foolish to look at records and think that's going to affect the game," he said.

Both teams have seen just about everything possible this year. Because of that, Claybrook said he gets worried when his team trails, but never loses hope. "We've been in situations like that before and this team, it looks like they have been in the same situations," he added.

So, it appears both teams have taken their knocks this year and learned from them.

Conley, 21-8, was picked to finish third in the Coastal Conference this season, behind West Craven and Havelock. The Vikings were able to win the title outright during the regular season but lost to Havelock in the conference tournament.

Senior's Troy Ebron (10 ppg) and Ricky Farrow (12.5 ppg) have led the way for the Vikes all season along with junior center Phil Medlin, who was named MVP of the Eastern Regional. The other starters have been freshman forward Paul Merritt and junior guard James Smith.

Jonathan Bonner and Bronswell Patrick, a pair of junior swing men, have been the main contributors off the bench.

Both teams will have to adjust to playing in Smith Center, which seats 21,444. It could be a factor as the Viking had trouble adjusting in their first game at the Cumberland County Memorial Arena in Fayetteville. To help in that adjustment, the Vikings practiced in East Carolina's Mingos Coliseum during the week.

Claybrook said that he thought his team did a better job in the second game at Fayetteville against Bartlett-Yancey than in the first one when they went up against Madison-Mayodan.

"I was real pleased with the way we started the (second) game, especially in comparison to the Thursday night game. I thought we started the game loose and relaxed," he said of the win over the Buccaneers, 53-51. "We had trouble against their press and we did some poor things against the press. But as much as anything else, I thought it was Bartlett-Yancey putting on a good pressure."

"I was real pleased that we showed we were a championship quality ball club. We got down after having the big lead and we able to regain it."

Now the Vikings will try to go back to the well one more time. Claybrook said the emphasis will be on keeping things the same in preparation.

"The way we are going to approach it is we are just trying to keep practicing the same way we have been," he said. "We're going to keep things as normal as we can. I think you can find out some things about them (North Gaston) but it's still going to come down to who can execute their own things the best, who can stay closest to what they have been doing."

Reid Sparks Tar Heels To Victory Over Irish; Orangemen Nip Florida

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — When his North Carolina teammates talk about freshman J.R. Reid, they say the 18-year-old has a man's body.

Tar Heels Coach Dean Smith was more emphatic.

"J.R. showed he's a man," Smith said. "Certainly from the importance of the game, this was probably his best performance."

Reid, who stands 6-foot-9 and weighs 245 pounds, showed why he's the most dominant freshman in college basketball Thursday night by scoring 31 points in the Tar Heels' NCAA East Regional semifinal win over Notre Dame 74-68.

The Tar Heels, 32-3, ranked No. 2 and seeded No. 1, will play No. 10 Syracuse, 28-6, the No. 2 seed, Saturday at the Brendan Byrne Arena for the right to advance to the Final Four in New Orleans. Syracuse beat Florida 87-81 in Thursday night's opening game.

"J.R.'s got a man's body," said teammate Dave Popson. "When he gets the ball inside, it's pretty much two points."

Reid worked inside for almost all his points, hitting 15 of 18 shots from the field — including 10 of 11 in the second half, when he turned into a one-man scoring gang and equaled his career scoring high.

With the No. 18 Fighting Irish, 24-8, staying in contention because of guard David Rivers' outside shooting, Reid made 12 straight Carolina points. The Tar Heels led only 65-62 before Reid scored on a dunk and short jumper, extending the lead to 69-64. He also added Carolina's final two field goals to put the game away.

"I just happened to end it," Reid, from Virginia Beach, Va., said. "Anybody who's given the ball on this team could have scored."

Teammate Kenny Smith, an All-American guard who had only four points but 12 assists said, "When J.R. gets the ball, he knows what to do with it. He's not indecisive."

Notre Dame Coach Digger Phelps, whose team beat North Carolina 60-58 on Feb. 1, said, "J.R. put on a good show. He made the last 10 shots he took and played with a lot of confidence for a freshman. He was a dominant factor."

Rivers, a junior guard, hit eight of 16 from the field, including three 3-pointers. Donald Royal added 19 points and Mark Stevenson 14.

"We had our moments this year and this was just a time when we didn't go out and grab it," Rivers said.

In the Syracuse-Florida matchup, one freshman excelled and the other fizzled.

Derrick Coleman scored 15 points, grabbed nine rebounds and had a key block as the Orange ended the Gators' surprising tournament run.

The block came by Coleman on Andrew Moten with 5:10 left. Syracuse's Howard Triche then hit a three-point play to cut the Syracuse deficit 69-67.

"It was truly an outstanding play for them," said Florida Coach Norm Sloan, whose Gators finished with a 23-11 record.

Syracuse Coach Jim Boheim agreed that Coleman's block was the turning point.

Syracuse's big gun was 6-10 junior center Rony Seikaly, who scored a career-high 33 points — 23 in the first half — on 14 of 20 shooting from the field. He also had nine rebounds.

In turn, Dwyane Schintzius, Florida's 7-2 freshman center, managed only six points on three of 10 field-goal accuracy. He did grab 11 rebounds.

Schintzius, who describes himself as cocky, said Wednesday he felt he could handle Seikaly.

"I hope he learned a lesson about comments before a game," Sloan said. "He still doesn't understand how these things he's saying are going to appear in print."

"I've learned a lot from this game," Schintzius said.

Other Orangemen in double figures were Triche, 17 points, Greg Monroe, 12, and Sherman Douglas, 10.

It was Florida's guards, Vernon Maxwell (25 points) and Moten (18) who led the Gator comeback.

Coleman's dunk with 1:49 left broke a 75-75 tie and Syracuse was on its way, although Florida's Pat Lawrence made two 3-pointers over the last 40 seconds.

"Syracuse is a great team," Maxwell said, "and although we came back on them, we didn't stick the stake into their heart."

Stewart Says No To Pirates

Bruce Stewart has turned down the head basketball coaching position at East Carolina University.

Dr. Ken Karr, ECU athletic director, issued the following statement this morning: "Bruce Stewart has withdrawn from the pool of candidates for our new head basketball coaching position. He has made the decision to stay at Middle Tennessee State."

Karr had earlier said that he had hoped to introduce a new head coach on either Friday or Monday. "That date now would seem to be out of the question," he said. He indicated that there is a good likelihood that additional candidates will be interviewed.

Stewart, who was in Greenville on Wednesday for a second visit to the campus, was believed to have been offered the head coaching position vacated by Charlie Harrison, who resigned in January. Harrison's contract was to have expired at the end of the season.

Stewart, who has been at Middle Tennessee State for the past three years, led his team to two NCAA bids and one visit to the NIT.

The decision by Stewart could still open the door for two other men who already have been interviewed. They are Bob Huggins of Akron, whose head coaching record is 126-57, and who participated in the NIT this season, and Tom Chapman of Gannon, 212-51. Chapman's team is to play in the NCAA Division II semifinals tonight.

At least one Division III coach has also been interviewed by the search committee.

NFL Tries To Cut Time Of Games

KAANAPALI, Hawaii (AP) — NFL owners approved a rule on Thursday that is designed to speed up games by cutting from one minute to 40 seconds the timeouts in the last two minutes of each half.

They also began studying a change that would substitute a 40-second clock for the present 30-second clock that would start as soon as the previous play is blown dead.

Tex Schramm, the chairman of the league's Competition Committee, noted that if all 12 timeouts were taken, a total of four minutes could be cut from NFL games, which last season averaged almost three hours and 12 minutes. But he added:

"That's with an asterisk — it's only if the networks have gotten in all their commercials."

The change in clocks was also aimed at speeding up games. The present 30-second clock often isn't started until perhaps 15 seconds after the previous play, depending on how long it takes to unpile or how long it takes receivers to return to the line of scrimmage from downfield.

The owners defeated any attempt to cut down on crowd noise, including a measure that would result in penalties against home teams for crowd noise that kept the visitors from snapping the ball. They also mandated an end to experiments with radios in helmets that would help players hear signals in heavy noise.

Farmville Central's basketball team has been able to handle every obstacle thrown in its path this season and the only one that remains between the Jaguars and the state 2-A title is the Salisbury Hornets.

The Jaguars, 23-5, and the Hornets, 29-2, tip it off Saturday at 2 p.m. at the Smith Center in Chapel Hill.

Farmville has exceeded many people's expectations this season, tying Ayden-Grifton for the Eastern Plains Conference title and then advancing through the sectionals and the regionals on the way to the championship game.

Last weekend, the Jaguars topped Edenton Holmes, 58-50, to win the Eastern Regional.

Now coach Mike Terrell must guard against his players being satisfied too early. "If I want to win, I feel like they are going to want to win," he said. "We know that we're playing an outstanding basketball team and that is going to make it more of a challenge."

Over the course of the year, the Jaguars have overcome the loss of starting point guard Reggie Mitchell and top reserve Tim Dupree to disciplinary actions at midseason.

The Jags regrouped from that loss by moving Tyrone Joyner to point guard and moving Gary Moore into the starting lineup at off-guard. Alexander Daniels also became the top front-court reserve. In essence, Farmville plays a six-man lineup but so far it has not hurt them.

The lack of depth almost came back to haunt them in the Eastern Regional's first round game against Fuquay-Varina. The Jaguars won the game, 65-53, but played most of the second half with three starters, Joyner, Mark Williams and James Reid, in foul trouble with four apiece.

One of the keys to Farmville's success has been the emergence of Joyner. He had 19 points against Fuquay-Varina and 14 in the Edenton game. For those feats, he was named MVP of the regional.

"We knew that Tyrone is a great athlete," Terrell said. "Down the stretch, he's played well. He's had to make the adjustment from number two guard to point guard. He's done a heck of a job."

"Tyrone's a pretty smart kid. I think giving him that responsibility, he's become a better player."

Another key performer for Farmville is forward Kennedy Williams, the team's leading scorer at 17.3 ppg and main threat from outside.

"Kennedy has got to have a good ballgame (for us)," Terrell said. "He has to hit those shots. It spreads the magic across our team. It gets us into it. His leadership is super. It's not a verbal leadership, it's a leadership by example."

The Jaguars didn't react well to playing in a big arena in their first game at the regionals but played better in the second and Terrell thinks the whole experience will help the team when the get to the Smith Center.

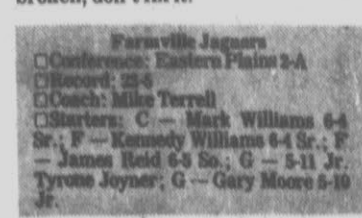

"Playing in Cumberland County Arena is going to be a plus," he said.

"I don't think we'll be as intimidated, but these guys are only 16-17 years old and a lot of them have never been out of Pitt County that much."

Salisbury poses a big challenge for the Jaguars. The Hornets are big up front with two starters over 6-6. In addition, their point guard (Donald Jenkins) is 6-4.

"They're not a lot bigger than we are," Terrell said. "Your talking two inches a man. My biggest concern with their height is they may be able to outmatch us in some defensive (situations)."

"We have to play the same type of defense we've played all year. We may make a couple of adjustments. You don't change a lot. If it's not broken, don't fix it."

Big East Final In Southeast

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — It's come down to a battle of the Big East Conference in the NCAA Southeast Regional.

Fourth-ranked Georgetown and Providence will meet for the fourth time this season in Saturday's championship game, with the winner advancing to the Final Four in New Orleans.

The Hoyas defeated No. 20 Kansas 70-57 on Thursday, while Providence upset ninth-ranked Alabama 103-82 in the regional semifinals.

All-American Reggie Williams scored 34 points, including 16 of 18 from the free-throw line, to lead the Hoyas.

But it was Charles Smith's seven straight points midway through the second half that gave Georgetown the lead for good.

Kansas had erased a five-point halftime deficit to go ahead 41-39 on a layup and free throw from Keith Harris with 13:26 to play. But Smith hit a 3-pointer from the left baseline, a jump shot in the lane and two free throws to give Georgetown a 46-41 lead with 10:18 left.

Kansas countered with Cedric Hunter's 18-foot jumper, but the Hoyas followed with six straight points to take control of the game.

"I'm not surprised at Charles' ability to play offense," Georgetown Coach John Thompson said of Smith's scoring spurt.

Smith added 13 points and Perry McDonald had 10 for the Hoyas, now 29-4.

Kansas Coach Larry Brown said Georgetown's aggressive defense in the second half was the key to the game.

"They have a lot of people that they can throw at you and I think that was real positive for them," Brown said. "You've got to give them credit because they come to play hard and know what it takes to win ballgames."

Danny Manning led Kansas with 23 points, but only four of them came in the second half.

"Anthony (Allen) did a great job and Ronnie (Highsmith) did a great job, but they got help from a lot of people," Thompson said of his team's defensive effort on Manning.

"The object of our defense is to wear opponents down," he added. "Hopefully, in the end they get a little tired. With Manning, we were using three or four people to wear him down."

Kansas, a Final Four team last year, finished with a 25-11 record.

In the first game Thursday, guards Billy Donovan and Delray Brooks took turns lighting up the scoreboard with 3-point field goals to lead Providence to the easy victory.

Donovan, who scored 26 points, made five of five 3-point shots in the first half as the Friars slowly worked their way to a 49-41 advantage at the break.

Brooks, who tallied 23, had the hot hand in the second half, hitting four of six 3-pointers.

"Billy did a great job of getting the ball to me," said Brooks. "It just felt good out their tonight. As a team, everything was working well."

Donovan agreed. "The first shot I took felt good," he said. "I felt I would have a good night."

Providence, 24-8, sank 14 of 22 shots from 3-point range while the Crimson Tide was good on seven of 23.

Ahead 65-58 with 10:37 left in the game, Providence used a 16-2 run, including three 3-pointers by Brooks, to break the game open and take an 81-60 lead with 6:57 remaining.

Alabama managed to pull within 81-69 on Derrick McKey's two free throws with 4:34 left, but it was too little, too late.

"I have no excuses, no alibis," said Alabama Coach Wimp Sanderson. "The best team won today."

"I'm disappointed, but it's certainly not going to mar the season we've had."

Jim Farmer led Alabama with 24 points, followed by Michael Ansley and Mark Gottfried with 14 apiece. The Crimson Tide, regular and postseason champions of the Southeastern Conference, ended their season at 28-5.

Return Of Boz Seems Unlikley

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — All-America linebacker Brian Bosworth has only the slimmest of chances of returning to the Oklahoma football team next season - and his alter ego, "The Boz," has no chance at all.

Sooners Coach Barry Switzer told the Associated Press on Thursday night he is "99.9 percent sure" that Bosworth will not be around for his final year of eligibility.

Bosworth was not included in Oklahoma's spring football guide this week - prompting questions about his status, since the Sooners begin spring practice later this month.

"Bosworth has been gone since the Orange Bowl," Switzer was quoted in Thursday's Norman Transcript. "It humors me to see the attention he gets. He's gone. He's history."

But Switzer said later that he would be willing to talk with Bosworth "if he came in and was sincere that he really wants to come back next year."

Without elaborating, he said Bosworth would have to drastically change his nonconformist image - the multi-colored hairdo with the shaven temples and the outrageous remarks and actions - to have any chance at returning.

"It (his return) would have to be structured how I want it," he said. "I'll play Brian Bosworth; I won't play the Boz."

"I've made sure to leave the door open because I want him to be part of this program in 20, 30, 40, 50 years," Switzer added. "He's a good kid and I love him."

Switzer said Bosworth has occasionally worked out on his own in the Oklahoma weight room but has not participated in the football team's off-season conditioning program.

Bosworth, a three-year All-Big Eight selection, two-time All-American and winner of the Butkus Award as the nation's top linebacker in 1985 and 1986, will be eligible for the NFL draft if he graduates this spring, as scheduled. He has said several times in recent months that he would like to return to Oklahoma rather than play for a poor NFL team.

He must inform the NFL by April 13 if he wants to be in the regular draft on April 28. He could decide to enter the supplemental draft, which is a weighted lottery for the first time. The Super Bowl champion New York Giants have one chance, the runner-up Denver Broncos have two, down to the Tampa Bay Buccaneers with 28 shots. The Bucs, who have the first pick in the regular draft, are expected to pick Miami quarterback Vinny Testaverde.

There has been speculation that Bosworth has kept his options open to use as leverage with the NFL.

"He's in the pros," Switzer told the Transcript. "It's been that way for months. That's what he wants and that's what he needs to do."

Speculation about Bosworth's future at Oklahoma intensified after the Orange Bowl. He was barred from playing in the game because he tested positive for steroids and appeared on the sidelines wearing a T-shirt that referred to the NCAA as "National Communists Against Athletes."

Crenshaw Heeds Wife's Advice

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Ben Crenshaw's wife Julie gave him his orders for the day when he left for the golf course.

"No 75's," Crenshaw quoted her as saying.

And Ben, who has had his troubles getting started this season, followed through.

The former Masters champion reeled off a string of five consecutive birdies in a 6-under-par 66 that left him two strokes behind longshot leader Dick Mast in the first round of the $500,000 USF&G Classic.

Mast, 36, who has spent most of his career on golf's mini-tours and has yet to finish higher than fifth on the PGA Tour, compiled a bogey-free round of 64 Thursday.

That left him one shot in front of veteran Bob Gilder, who said he "made all the putts today I haven't made in the last three years" in a 65.

Neither Gilder nor Mast was any happier with his effort that the frustrated Crenshaw.

"I've been battling the first round all year," he said. "It's like a race horse going out the starting gate, then having to wait to get saddled."

"I've had 75 in the first round five times this year. It just leaves you with so much work to do. I don't want to say what my first round average is (73.75), but it hasn't been a good day for me," Crenshaw said.

He was tied at 66 with Brian Clair.

Curtis Strange led a large group at 67 that included Jay Haas, Phil Blackmar, Ronnie Black, Steve Pate, Brett Upper, South African Nick Price and Sam Randolph, who stripped five strokes off par over the last four holes.

Tom Watson, a two-time winner of this tournament, was five strokes back with a 69 in the warm, sunny weather.

Defending champion Calvin Peete struggled to a 74 that left him in danger of missing the cut when the field is trimmed to the low 70 scorers after today's second round.

Mast, who also had a 64 in this tournament a year ago before fading to seventh, said he has "some good memories from here. I've done it before, so you feel you can do it again."

He and Gilder, in a slump since scoring his sixth career victory four years ago, took the same route to their high standings: very good putting.

Mast one-putted 10 times, including long putts of 35 and 25 feet, in his bogey-free effort.

Gilder scored birdies from 30, 20, 15 and 15 feet and dropped a 12-footer for an eagle-3.

"I haven't felt this good on the greens in a long time," he said. "I didn't hit the irons all that well, but putting can make up for a lot of mistakes."

Rain Forces Cancellation

Rains again washed out all outdoor area sports activity on Thursday, including the East Carolina-Westfield State baseball game at Harrington Field.

The game was the 10th lost to bad weather this spring by the Pirates, and the 11th overall as the umpires failed to show up for another. ECU is currently 6-2 and will entertain James Madison in a 1 p.m. doubleheader on Saturday and a 1 p.m. single game on Sunday - their first Colonial Athletic Association action of the year.

The game will not be rescheduled.

Other activities rescheduled for today include: Rose at Ayden-Grifton golf, Conley at New Bern golf; and North Edgewood at Chocowinity baseball and softball.

Other rescheduling include: Creswell at Jamesville baseball and softball, Monday; and Farmville Central at Tarboro golf, Tuesday.

The fate of Rose at Havelock baseball and softball; UNC-Wilmington at East Carolina tennis; East Carolina at UNC-Wilmington softball; and Conley at Ayden-Grifton tennis, have not been resolved.

A tennis match between Rose and Farmville Central has been cancelled.

In addition, today's scheduled baseball and softball games between Farmville Central and Conley have been reset for April 4.

Reid The Finest Of The Frosh

Reacting To Final Shot

Lefty's Name Arises At USA

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — Lefty Driesell, who quit as Maryland's basketball coach in the wake of Len Bias' drug-related death, will be considered for the vacant post at South Alabama, university officials said.

Mike Hanks, who compiled a 45-43 record in three seasons at South Alabama, was fired Thursday after he refused to resign with two years left in his contract.

"Coach Hanks has notified the university through his attorney that he will not resign, nor will he accept any of the other options (offered) to him," Athletic Director Joe Gottfried said in a statement. "These options included his reassignment to another position within the university, or assistance to him in every way possible should he elect to make a career change."

"His decision leaves the university with no other choice than to terminate him immediately."

Driesell told The Mobile Register on Thursday that he would "investigate" any offer, but has had no official contact with the school.

Gottfried said the university had not contacted Driesell or any other coach about the school's vacant coaching position.

But, he said, "We are going to look at a lot of coaches, including Lefty. He's a recognized coach and he's available."

Driesell resigned Oct. 29, 1986, after 17 highly successful seasons at Maryland. He was ousted as a result of Bias' cocaine-induced death after the 1985-86 season and subsequent revelations of academic deficiencies among his players.

Gottfried said "we're going to move as quickly as possible" to hire a new coach because the national signing date for high school players is April 8.

He said a screening committee would be appointed, and indicated some prospective coaches may be interviewed this weekend.

"We're not going to offer the job to several coaches, just the one we want," he said.

Hanks, 34, was in the third year of a five-year contract. He was given a 5 p.m. Thursday deadline to submit his resignation.

But his attorney, David Cromwell Johnson of Birmingham, said, "I have advised him not to resign and he has agreed to follow my advice."

Hanks had refused to comment on the situation.

Johnson said the university was obligated to pay for the two years remaining in his client's contract.

"They've just refused to pay the contract off. They offered him something like 25 cents on the dollar, and I think that's entirely unreasonable," the attorney said Thursday.

But when the firing was announced, Gottfried said, "The university and Coach Hanks have reached a mutually satisfactory agreement, and he will be paid his salary for the remainder of his contract."

Gottfried said he recommended a change at the helm of the basketball program to South Alabama President Frederick P. Whiddon after obtaining input from the athletic council and others at the end of the last season.

"It was my recommendation and one of the most difficult decisions I

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer
EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Presenting the Class of 1990, and the class of that class, J.R. Reid.

There are freshmen and there is J.R. He is in his first year academically at North Carolina but he's clearly an upperclassman when it comes to basketball.

The NCAA tournament is a time for seniors, young men who play each game as if it is their last one, because it just might be exactly that. When it's crunch time, that's when you want your seniors with the ball.

Unless you happen to have a freshman like the 6-foot-9, 245-pound Reid.

J.R. was flawless down the stretch Thursday night. He scored 31 points, hitting his last 10 shots and scoring 16 of Carolina's last 17 points in a 74-68 NCAA East Regional semifinal victory over Notre Dame.

He wasn't perfect, though. He missed three of his 18 shots from the field. And he even blew a foul shot during those final eight minutes, when the Tar Heels held off Notre Dame's last thrust and sealed the victory.

"I thought J.R. put on a great show," said Notre Dame Coach Digger Phelps, showing a flair for the understatement. "He plays with a lot of confidence for a freshman."

Or a sophomore, or a junior or a senior, for that matter. He is a basketball Ph.D.

Reid's contributions go beyond raw points. He does things that don't show in the box score, things like banging the ball off an opponent's knee to save a possession, forcing fouls, affecting the other team's offense. He is a tower a strength underneath, a force that turns games.

"He has a man's body," said teammate Dave Popson, who guards him in practice. "There are certain positions where he's almost unstoppable."

Notre Dame noticed.

"We did what we wanted to do," said Irish guard David Rivers, "but not well enough to stop him."

This was supposed to be a showdown between the point guards, Rivers against UNC's Kenny Smith. But Smith, being a clever senior, recognized what kind of night Reid was having and just kept feeding the ball to the big guy. He wound up with 12 assists, pushing his career total to 750 and breaking Phil Ford's school record.

"When J.R. gets the ball in a certain position, he knows what to do with it," Smith said. "He's not indecisive. You make an extra effort to get him the ball. J.R. has a man's mind and a man's body."

Down the stretch, when Notre Dame crept within three points, the man took over. Time after time down the court, he wound up with the ball and it wound up in the basket. On one sequence he drove from half court, climaxing the play with a rim-rattling dunk.

"It just happened that way," Reid said. "I got the ball in good position tonight. After I thought about it, I should have given up the ball (on the half court play). But when the game is in progress, you go on instinct."

And his instincts are pretty good. Reid has a nose for the ball and an eye for the hoop. He plays with an intensity that belies his age, rushing around on defense, always there on offense. He is, after all, just 18 years old. He only plays older.

Are his dunks impressive? "They're easy, really," Coach Dean Smith said admiringly. "Of course, I can say that because I can't dunk."

Reid's flattop haircut makes him look like a Marine recruit. "I swear," North Carolina State Coach Jimmy Valvano is fond of saying, "I saw him playing at Camp Lejeune in 1968." Or was it a Final Four?

Bodine Rolls To Qualifying Mark

MARTINSVILLE, Va. (AP) — Brett Bodine set a Miller 500 Classic Grand National qualifying record Thursday and won the pole position for his division's 200-lap race in Sunday's $165,000 NASCAR triple-header at Martinsville Speedway.

Bodine, driving an Oldsmobile, turned the .526-mile track in 92.469 mph to erase a six-year-old record of 92.191 mph held by his older brother, Geoff.

Mark Martin took the outside pole in a Ford with a speed of 92.056 mph while Tommy Ellis was third in a Pontiac at 91.478 mph. Rounding out the top 10 qualifiers were Rick Mast, Merv Treichler, Elton Sawyer, L.D. Ottinger, Jimmy Hensley, Dale Jarrett and Brad Teague.

Twenty starting positions were decided for the race with only .62 seconds and 2.717 mph separating the qualifiers.

It was Bodine's second straight Grand National pole position of the season and his fourth in the last five Grand National races at Martinsville.

Bodine is the defending Modified division champion for the Miller 500

Classic and will compete in both classes Sunday.

Thirty-nine of the 54 entries attempted to qualify with the rest of the 30-car starting field to be determined in qualifying races Saturday.

The rest of the triple-header includes a 100-lap Late Model Stock car race and a 200-lap Modified event. Those cars will qualify Friday with 20 positions to be decided in each class. The remainder of those fields will be determined in Saturday's qualifying races, two for each division.

Qualifying results Thursday for the 200-lap Buick Grand National race in Sunday's $165,000 Miller 500 Classic triple-header at the .526-mile Martinsville Speedway with type of car and qualifying speed in mph (rest of 30-car field to be filled in two 25-lap qualifying races Saturday):

Egyptian Calendar

Most people today consult a calendar to find out when spring — the vernal equinox — arrives. Ancient Egyptians used the Great Pyramid of Cheops. Like a huge sundial, the pyramid recorded the time of day. It also marked off the days of the year, including the equinoxes and solstices. Rows of blocks around the pyramid were cut in widths equal to the daily changes in the noonday shadow cast by the pyramid. In this way, the days and the seasons could be easily identified.

DO YOU KNOW — What is a solstice?

THURSDAY'S ANSWER — Wooden matches are usually made from pine.

Horoscope From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY March 21

GENERAL TENDENCIES: This first day of spring will allow you to make some decisions that tie you down to a course of action for a long time to come. Your past experiences will serve you well.
ARIES (March 21 to April 19): A person with a different background than your own can be of assistance now. Cultivate this individual wisely.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Get together with a clever person in business and plan how to get your affairs on a more secure ground.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Accept that outside outlet that can be helpful to you now. Be very social tonight and enjoy yourself.
MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Plan how best to handle your routine responsibilities in the days ahead and become more efficient.
LEO (July 22 to August 21): Take your mate along with you on some recreation for double the pleasure. This can make for a better understanding.
VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Invite friends in that you have not seen in a long time. This can bring happiness to all.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Concentrate on how to better communicate with others. Visit a friend you have known for years.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Study your monetary plans and then contact an important person who can give you the backing you need.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Although you like to do whatever you please, it is wiser now to make a practical plan.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Sit down with advisors and make a plan for the future. Show your mate you want the relationship to last.
AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): You are noted for being gregarious, but it behooves you now to be more selective.
PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Plan how to gain the prestige that you truly want. Contact influential people who can be most helpful.
IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will know what is best for him, or her, and will trend the energy in such directions for a steadfast path to success. Teach this one to develop a sense of humor and thereby get along better with others. One who deserves a fine education in modern schools.

"The Stars impel; they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

 Here is another hand to highlight the difference in technique between rubber bridge and duplicate. Decide how, after a heart lead, you would play a contract of six spades at these two forms of bridge

You have bid reasonably well to get to the slam with only 29 high-card points in the combined holding. Obviously, the key to the auction is the high honor in partner's suit held by both North and South.

Since you can be sure of 12 tricks even if the club finesse fails, it seems right to win the opening lead in dummy and draw trumps. Now you lead the queen of clubs. If it loses to East, you can win any return (rise with the ace if East shifts to a diamond) and take more than enough discards on the table's clubs to make your contract.

But what if the queen of clubs wins? At rubber bridge you should take out insurance at the cost of the overtrick by continuing with a club to the ace. Even if the king doesn't appear, you can lose no more than one diamond trick.

As it happens, you drop East's king and make the rest of the tricks. The cunning blighter had been hoping you would repeat the finesse. He would then win the king and return a heart and, since you would be cut off from the table, you would have to concede a diamond trick for down one.

At duplicate, the decision is more complicated. Since we are not convinced that everyone would bid the slam, our gut feeling is that we would assure 12 tricks by spurning the club finesse. However, that would depend on the ability of the defender in the East seat, for it is not an easy proposition to elect to hold up the king. We realize we could look silly if the club finesse was working all the time and we are the only pair not to take all the tricks!

Eddie Murphy Settles Lawsuit Out Of Court With His Former Manager

By CAROLYN COLWELL
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

MINEOLA, N.Y. — The tension in the $30 million breach-of-contract suit against comedian Eddie Murphy broke Thursday when the judge announced that the case had been settled and Murphy jumped up, waved and got a big laugh as he told the court, "I'd just like everybody to go see 'Beverly Hills Cop.'"

Murphy actually meant "Beverly Hills Cop II," the sequel that he and his attorneys later cited as the reason that the 25-year-old comedian agreed to settle the case brought against him by his former manager, King Broder. They said that work still to be done on that about-to-be-released movie prompted the agreement. "I wanted to go back to work," Murphy explained to reporters with a chuckle, "and I still got a couple of dollars left."

Murphy, Broder and their attorneys refused to disclose the amount of the settlement, saying that the agreement required them to keep that figure confidential. Broder said only that "the settlement was very generous and, more importantly, we're friends."

Murphy said Wednesday that he spent more on attorneys' fees than it would take to settle the case, and speculation Thursday centered on just how much that was. Broder's attorney, Herb Sachs of Las Vegas, Nev., said that Murphy had spent more than $500,000 on legal fees, but Murphy's attorney, Leonard Marks, would not confirm that, saying he wouldn't discuss his fees.

"I feel very good. I'm going back to work," Murphy said as he left the courtroom that he had packed for nine days with fans, reporters and an entourage. Murphy — dressed in gold jewelry, tweed, leather and suede — said, "We settled because we were in court two weeks doing this thing, and it was basically something that got blown out of proportion. It's over now."

Just 24 hours earlier, walking down the same hall and dressed in a conservative double-breasted suit, Murphy had said that, out of principle, he wouldn't settle the case.

Murphy said that Broder, with whom he signed a personal management contract in 1980, had done nothing for him and did not deserve any share of his later earnings.

When asked about that seemingly sudden change of heart, Murphy said, "OK. On principle. OK. We had to sit on the stand and tell our side of the story, too. We did that, and both sides of the story went into the record. OK. And I feel that the jury would have felt strong about what I said. So my principle. I got it off. I've got work to do."

Caine Movie Draws Praise

LONDON (AP) — The Duke and Duchess of York and Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher turned out for the London premiere of "The Fourth Protocol," starring Michael Caine.

"I thought it was terrific. Absolutely marvelous," said Mrs. Thatcher, who attended the movie with her husband, Denis, their son, Mark, and his American bride, Diane.

Queen Elizabeth II's second-oldest son, the Duke of York, and his wife, the former Sarah Ferguson, arrived as last-minute surprise guests at the Odeon cinema in Leicester Square.

The movie is about Soviet and British spies locked in a struggle over a home-assembled atom bomb.

After chatting with the prime minister, Caine said: "I like Mrs. Thatcher very much. She said she was going to Moscow in 10 days' time so she thought she'd better come and have a relaxing evening out."

Awards

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Reginald Rose and Woody Allen will receive the 1987 Laurel Awards from the Writers Guild of America honoring their lifetime achievements.

Guild President Melville Shavelson said Thursday the presentations will be made March 26 at ceremonies in New York and Los Angeles.

Brosnan Perturbed

HONOLULU (AP) — Pierce Brosnan, star of "Remington Steele," is still perturbed over NBC's handling of the series.

"The network canceled the show, but put it back on the air for six more episodes this season — six pathetic, distressing shows (that were poorly written, poorly received," he said in a newspaper interview while vacationing in Honolulu. "Of course, the show shouldn't have been canceled in the first place. We could have gone the full fifth year."

He said two years remain on his seven-year contract with MTM Productions, which produces "Remington Steele."

"Don't get involved in something that takes seven years of your life," he said. "I kind of buried the whole thing and chalked it up to experience. I saw no other way out of it, actually."

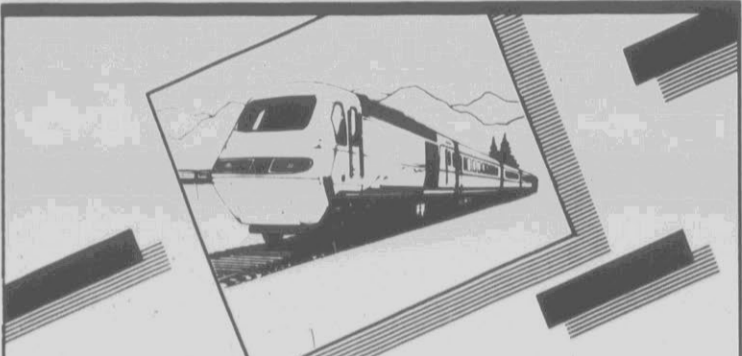

Benji Joins Up

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — Benji the lovable movie mutt has a new master, Walt Disney Pictures, which plans to release "Benji, the Hunted" and other Benji projects.

Disney announced it has signed an agreement with Mulberry Square Productions for writer-director Joe Camp to work on "Benji" movies for Disney and to release "Benji, the Hunted" this summer through Buena Vista, Disney's distribution company.

The first "Benji" movie came out in 1975.

Since 1960, Pitt County's population has increased from 69,942 to approximately 95,000.

WTBS Takes TV Viewers On Search Of The Titanic

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The camera swims through the murky, undersea darkness, illuminating the ocean floor ahead. Suddenly, ghost-like, the bow of a huge ship takes form.

This was Dr. Robert Ballard's first close look at the RMS Titanic, and viewers of "Secrets of the Titanic" on WTBS this Sunday can have the sensation of being there with him.

The one-hour program is part of the "National Geographic Explorer" series and is narrated by actor Martin Sheen.

The Titanic has been the subject of legend since the supposedly unsinkable vessel sank on its maiden voyage in 1912, its hull gashed open by a North Atlantic iceberg. Of the 2,228 people aboard, 1,523 died.

Many still photographs of the sunken ship have been published since Ballard and his crew became the first to locate it in 1985, but watching the discovery on television is especially eerie and spectacular.

The program opens with scene-setting facts about the Titanic — it weighed 66,000 tons and the hull was four city blocks long — and the lifestyle of the time.

The ship sailed from Southampton, England, on April 10, 1912. We are shown rare photographs taken by a priest who disembarked in Ireland before the doomed ship departed on its only voyage.

Over a grainy, poignant photo of the Titanic rounding the bend and sailing out of sight, the narration notes that the ship would not be photographed again for 73 years.

Ballard's crew from Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution found the ship Sept. 1, 1985, and their jubilation is captured on film.

"I'll be damned! The sucker exists," Ballard exclaims. But the crew soon realizes the gravity of the moment and observes silence in honor of the victims of the tragedy.

The U.S. Navy put up the money for the expedition as a way of testing the $1 million robot submarine Jason Jr.

On a return trip to explore the Titanic itself, Ballard took a small, manned sub, Alvin II, down to the ocean floor. The small, unmanned Jason Jr. was used for exploring inside the vessel.

It took 2½ hours for Alvin to drop to the bottom of the sea.

The footage of Ballard's first approach to Titanic is accompanied by unobtrusive music and spare narration.

Later, closer views of the rusting ship are interspersed with still photographs of the "floating palace" when it was new. Clearly visible in an old photo is a fancy chandelier that now dangles, broken and encrusted, from the ballroom ceiling.

The only item touched by Ballard's expedition was an assistant purser's safe lying amid the debris strewn between two pieces of the broken ship.

We watch the robot arm extend from Alvin and gingerly turn the latch, but the safe does not open. The arm withdraws.

Ballard left a plaque honoring the dead. "It's a very quiet place, very peaceful," he concludes. "And it's sitting upright on the bottom, very nobly, at rest."

"I'm very proud of this. It turned out well," Ballard said in an interview a couple of months ago, after his first look at the completed video. "The whole project worked well. No one got hurt. We didn't lose any expensive equipment. We did it within budget. This just helps seal the project. And I never want to go back again. Because how could you do it better?"

Ballard has done other projects for the National Geographic television series and chose to do the Titanic with them, because "they have an ability to walk to the line between seriousness yet doing it in a format that will have broad appeal."

The Titanic project was a first step for Ballard, who plans to begin in 1988 exploring the Mediterranean for "tens of thousands" of ancient cargo vessels believed to have sunk there.

"One of every hundred Roman cargo vessels sank in deep water, and many of them were carrying the art treasures back from Greece — bronze, brass, marble," Ballard said. "Anything like that would be impervious to attack in this deep world of suspended animation, so I personally believe that there are many, many, many more Titans."

Titanic bore no archaeological treasures, but ancient Roman vessels, if found, would be recovered for museums, Ballard said.

Ballard is developing higher-resolution cameras and an advanced robot sub that can be operated from the surface in hopes of sharing the moment of discovery on live television with others, especially children, gathered in classrooms or at museums.

PBS To Salute Styne's Music

By MICHAEL KUCHWARA
AP Drama Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Julie Styne writes the brassiest music on Broadway.

If there is any doubt, tune in "Broadway Sings: The Music of Julie Styne," tonight's edition of public television's "Great Performances" in which nearly two dozen performers salute one of the theater's most underrated and little known composers.

The parade includes Carol Channing, Diahann Carroll, Hal Linden, Linda Lavin, Jack Jones, Vic Damone, Chita Rivera, Rex Smith and even Mariette Hartley.

At an astonishing 81, Styne, the man behind the music in such shows as "Gypsy," "Funny Girl," "Bells Are Ringing" and "Peter Pan," appears to be equal parts of vim and vinegar.

"I don't write songs," he growled recently in an interview in his Fifth Avenue apartment. "I never wrote songs in my life. I write melodies. Songs don't go dum-dum-dah-dum. Words makes a song."

Styne has had some of the best wordsmiths in the business including Sammy Cahn, Betty Comden and Adolph Green. All three appear in the PBS salute, and their moments are among the most special of the evening.

Cahn first worked with Styne in the 1940s in Hollywood. They wrote some of the biggest hits of World War II including "I've Heard That Song Before," "It's Been A Long, Long Time," "Five Minutes More" and "I'll Walk Alone."

In the special, Patti Austin wrings all the heartbreak out of "I Guess I'll Hang My Tears Out to Dry," a quintessential torch song.

Styne broke into the New York theater in 1947 with "High Button Shoes." He brought along Cahn as his lyricist on the show which included such hit songs as "I Still Get Jealous" and "Poppa, Won't You Dance With Me?"

"You couldn't get into the theater when I began," he recalled. "There was Porter, Rodgers, the Gershwins, Kurt Weill, Kern, Arthur Schwarz. That was it. Year after year, they had shows, and nobody else did."

"High Button Shoes" changed that, but Cahn went back to Hollywood after "High Button Shoes." Styne stayed in New York. He was hooked, and his next show, "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes," cemented his relationship with Broadway.

Comden and Green have been among his most frequent theater partners. Besides "Bells Are Ringing" and "Peter Pan," the trio wrote "Two on the Aisle," "Do Re Mi," "Subways Are For Sleeping," "Fade Out, Fade In" and "Hallelujah, Baby!," which finally won Styne a Tony award.

In the PBS show, Green performs a definitive version of "Captain Hook's Waltz," from "Peter Pan" that almost erases the memory of Cyril Ritchard. His wife, Phyllis Newman, does the same with "It's a Perfect Relationship," a charming, little-known song from "Bells Are Ringing."

U.S. Boosting Military Presence In Honduras With Spring Buildup

By REID G. MILLER
Associated Press Writer

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — Honduras has agreed to buy advanced U.S. jet fighters and American troop strength here will reach a record level this spring, sources said, as Washington moves to strengthen a key regional ally.

U.S. and Honduran sources told The Associated Press on Thursday more than 7,000 regular and reserve Air Force, Army and Navy personnel will be in Honduras in April and May to take part in overlapping air, ground and amphibious exercises with Honduran troops.

The largest U.S.-Honduran joint exercise to date was the 1983 Big Pine II, with about 5,000 troops.

Sources in Tegucigalpa and Washington also said Honduras agreed to buy 12 F-5E fighter planes from the United States. The jets first were offered last year in what was seen as a major reversal of U.S. policy and an escalation of the arms race in the volatile region.

At that time, U.S. officials privately said the move was aimed at maintaining air superiority in the face of a steady military buildup by neighboring Nicaragua. U.S.-supported Nicaraguan rebels called Contras are fighting to overthrow that country's leftist government.

The United States had followed a policy of not being the first to introduce advanced jet fighters into Central America, but made the offer after Israel offered to sell Honduras its Kfir combat jets.

One of the three spring maneuvers, an Air Force exercise called Pegasus 87, was announced simultaneously Thursday by the Defense Department in Washington and the Honduran high command in Tegucigalpa.

Sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said plans also call for a large-scale amphibious landing on the northern Caribbean coast and an Army test of command and control procedures if Honduras is invaded.

Operation Pegasus will bring about 870 Army, Air Force, Air National Guard and Air Force reserve personnel to Honduras between April 1 and May 10.

It will be the first time A-10 Thunderbolt and A-7 Corsair jet fighters and EC-130 Airborne Warning and Control Systems aircraft (AWACs) have been deployed in joint exercises in Honduras.

A-10 Thunderbolts and A-7 Corsairs, both Air Force planes, are designed for close support of ground forces engaged in combat with enemy armored units. The AWACs planes are used to coordinate tactical air missions.

Nicaragua has Central America's only armored force, with hundreds of Soviet-built T-52 tanks, personnel carriers and amphibious tracked vehicles.

Several U.S. state governors have criticized the use of National Guard personnel in what have become almost constant military exercises in Honduras. About 20,000 National Guard members have trained here and in Panama in the past four years.

The permanent U.S. strength in Honduras is about 1,200, most of whom serve six-month tours.

They are assigned to Joint Task Force Bravo, a unit of the U.S. Southern Command based in Panama. The force is based at Palmerola air base, a Honduran facility about 30 miles north of Tegucigalpa.

Negotiations for the new aircraft have been under way since November, but one U.S. source said the United States and Honduras had a "done deal" for the F-5E fighters, manufactured by the Northrop Corp. of Los Angeles.

The Hondurans have long sought to update their air force, built around a core of 12 French Super Mystere B-2 light bombers, first flown in the 1950s.

Sources said the F-5Es would cost Honduras $75 million to $100 million, to be paid out of U.S. military credits to the country. Those credits totaled $85 million last year.

One source said delivery of the first of the 12 new jets would take place late this year, with the last to be delivered in early 1989.

Honduras has one of the smallest armies in Central America with about 17,500 personnel, and relies on its air force as its primary line of defense.

Nicaragua has Central America's largest army, estimated at more than 100,000 active and reserve members, and a fleet of Soviet-built helicopters. But it has no jet fighters.

We will be closing on March 23rd to move to our new location at 2826 S. Memorial Drive, next to Camelot Inn.

Reagan Says Bush Had No Objections

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says George Bush raised no objection to the Iran initiative, posing a possible conflict with his vice president, who says he voiced reservations about certain aspects of the matter.

The issue is politically troublesome for Bush, who two weeks ago went to lengths during a tour of Iowa to say he regrets the initiative in hindsight, while never blaming it on Reagan.

At the conclusion of his nationally broadcast news conference Thursday night, Reagan was approached by reporters trying to get in a last question or two.

"Did the vice president object to the plan in Iran?" Reagan was asked.

"No," he replied.
Donald P. Gregg, Bush's national security affairs adviser, said he watched the exchange on television and Reagan's answer came to a "very imprecise" question.

Bush has said frequently he is willing to share responsibility for the ill-fated arms-to-Iran initiative. But he told a Lansing, Mich., audience on Feb. 12 that he had privately "expressed certain reservations on certain aspects" of Reagan's decision to sell weapons. The "key players" in the administration knew about his doubts, Bush said, without elaborating.

In a telephone interview following Reagan's news conference, Gregg said he could not recall that Bush ever elaborated on those doubts in conversations the two had about the initiative.

Gregg said that while "there was a great hullabaloo there (at the end of the news conference) ... the vice president has said he felt that a case was to be made" for seeking contacts with potentially friendly political elements in Iran.

After the Reagan news conference, CBS ran a videotape of remarks Bush made during a "60 Minutes" interview last Sunday but which were not shown on the air.

Senate Seeks Court Help To Open Swiss Accounts

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate, exerting pressure on a major figure in the Iran-Contra affair, is asking a court to compel retired Maj. Gen. Richard Secord to produce records of secret Swiss bank accounts he is said to control.

The Senate began the process Thursday evening, voting without debate to cite the former Air Force general for contempt and to ask the U.S. District Court to jail him if he refuses to cooperate.

Secord refused a Feb. 23 order by the Senate select committee investigating the sale of arms to Iran and possible diversion of payments to Nicaraguan rebels that he waive his rights under Switzerland's bank privacy laws and turn over records of accounts suspected of serving as channels for the arms proceeds.

The investigators said in a report that Secord's refusal to cooperate has "frustrated the committee in its efforts to answer critical questions relating to the flow of funds from the sales of arms to Iran to the Nicaraguan resistance forces."

The report noted that some $20 million from the transactions remains unaccounted for.

And it said there was little prospect that formal negotiations with the Swiss government would produce the records soon.

In other developments:
—Senior CIA officials told The New York Times they gave the White House intelligence reports in 1985 that indicated little prospect for improving U. S. relations with Iran, even as the Reagan Administration began its covert Iran initiative. The officials said they also repeatedly advised the White House then that there was no imminent threat that the Soviet Union would gain significant influence in Iran, the newspaper reported.

Carter Uses Cairo Forum To Attack Reagan Policy

By PATRICK E. TYLER
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

CAIRO, Egypt — In one of his harshest attacks on the Reagan administration, former president Jimmy Carter told a group of businessmen and diplomats here Thursday that President Reagan "is more inclined to form a contra army to overthrow the Sandinistas or inject the Marines into Lebanon or use American battleships to shell villages around Beirut" than to seek negotiated solutions in foreign policy disputes.

"I am not here to criticize my own government," Carter, who was defeated by Reagan in the 1980 presidential election, said on this second stop of a Middle East tour.

But at the same time, he forcefully denounced what he called the "missing leadership" in Washington and the absence of "courage, tenacity and dedication" among Middle East political leaders who have let the peace process founder during the Reagan era.

Former U.S. presidents generally have avoided criticizing incumbent successors while traveling abroad, but Carter had done so before, including a 1983 news conference in Tokyo in which he sharply attacked Reagan's Central American policies.

(In Washington, White House officials were unavailable for comment on Carter's criticisms.)

Carter made his remarks at an American Chamber of Commerce breakfast attended by senior Egyptian officials as well as U.S. Ambassador Frank Wisner. Carter told his audience that he enjoys being free of the constraints of office and being able "to say what I please" about sensitive political issues with which he wrestled while in the White House.

He pledged to use "every ounce of energy I have" during the coming presidential campaign to boost the Middle East peace process to the top of the agenda for the next president.

In the wake of the Iran arms scandal, Carter said, Reagan, like his predecessors, "is looking for his so-called place in history, which has not yet been assured," but could be achieved if he would seize the initiative in the Middle East.

As it is, however, Carter said, "President Reagan has not been inclined to use negotiation and diplomacy as a means to achieve our nation's goals nearly so much as have his Democratic and Republican predecessors. He's more inclined to exert America's military strength, either the actual use of it or the threat of it."

During his tenure in the Oval Office, Carter said, "whenever a person in the Middle East wanted to take the smallest step" toward peace, "he knew he had an eager partner in the White House and State Department."

During the Reagan era, Carter said, regional leaders committed to peace have had to organize their own steps forward, but "their efforts have been doomed to fail without partnership and encouragement from Washington."

Carter began his tour in Algeria and will spend two more days in Egypt before leaving for Syria, Jordan and Israel. In Syria, he is to meet with President Hafez Assad to discuss the plight of American hostages held in Lebanon, where the Syrian Army has extended its dominion by occupying West Beirut with at least 7,500 troops.

The former president praised Palestine Liberation Organization Chairman Yasser Arafat for asserting that an international conference on Middle East peace could take place without the direct participation of PLO officials. "This helps to remove a lot of potential opposition from Israel," he said.

Carter was critical of Israel for failing to honor the "spirit and in some cases the letter" of the Camp David agreements by going forward with Israeli settlements in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, both occupied territories whose Palestinian populations aspire to self-rule. Carter played a key role as political broker in the Camp David agreements, which led to the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty.

In an apparent reference to Israeli Prime Minister Yitzak Shamir, Carter added that "it remains to be seen what leadership will come forward in Israel" to make future negotiations between Israel and its neighbors possible.

Asked to criticize his own performance in the Middle East, Carter said he erred by not keeping Jordan's King Hussein more closely informed during the 13 days of Camp David negotiations and blamed early mischaracterizations of the terms of the accords on Hussein's decision to join in a "misguided condemnation" of the agreement by Arab leaders.

Carter also said it was a mistake not to have gotten a written commitment from Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin to stop building settlements in the occupied territories until after the peace process was concluded.

At the same time, he praised Begin's courage, saying that of the two leaders involved in the negotiations — Begin and the late Egyptian president Anwar Sadat — Begin came the greatest distance to reach an agreement.

RETAIN CUSTODY — Deborah and Gary Stern of Sunrise, Fla., aunt and uncle of 4-year-old Rachel Rauser, talk with reporters Thursday in Hackensack, N.J., after they were awarded temporary custody of the young girl. The Sterns are seeking permanent custody of the child from her natural father, Joseph Waltman, 22, who has been charged with trying to sell her to the Sterns for $100,000. (AP Laserphoto)

Couple To Keep Child Up For Sale

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — A 4-year-old girl whose father is accused of trying to sell her for $100,000 has been temporarily turned over to an aunt and uncle, but a custody battle over the child continues.

Superior Court Judge Naomi G. Eichen in Hackensack, N.J., issued a gag order before recessing the custody hearing Thursday, but lawyers said Rachel Rauser would stay with Gary and Deborah Stern at least until the hearing resumes March 30.

Rachel's custody has been in dispute since her mother, Michal Rauser, died in a 1984 automobile accident. Seeking custody are her stepmother and the Sterns, who live in Sunrise, Fla.

The father, Joseph Waltman, was arrested March 10 in the Giants Stadium parking lot in East Rutherford, N.J., on charges of trying to sell the girl to Stern for $100,000.

Waltman, a 22-year-old hospital maintenance worker, gave Rachel to Stern and an undercover detective in exchange for a suitcase full of cash, police said.

Waltman, who never married the child's mother, was charged with endangering the welfare of a child and freed on $10,000 bail.

Before the alleged sale attempt, the Sterns had been trying to wrest custody of Rachel from Cindy Sullivan-Waltman, who raised the child after her marriage to Waltman.

On the sidelines of the dispute are Rachel's maternal grandparents, John and Ruby Rauser of Salem, N.J., who have fought for the child in past disputes. They said they will side with Stern, who is married to their daughter.

"We feel like we're her parents," said John Rauser.

Rachel was hugged by her maternal grandmother Thursday night when she arrived at Fort Lauderdale-Hollywood International Airport.

"Let me see your face. You're so pretty, honey," Mrs. Rauser said.

The dispute started three weeks after Michal Rauser died. At first, the grandparents had the child.

But Waltman won custody in January 1985. The Rausers say he barred them and the Sterns from visiting her.

Last August, a court recognized Ms. Sullivan-Waltman as the girl's stepmother and she won temporary partial custody. When she and Waltman separated in November, she kept Rachel.

Waltman took the girl from Ms. Sullivan-Waltman's home, authorities have said.

Waltman's sister, Patricia Waltman, and father, John Waltman, contend the Rausers and the Sterns coerced Waltman into selling the child through threats against his life.

Mexican Mayor Says Students Are 'Scandalous'

By JENNIFER DIXON
Associated Press Writer

MATAMOROS, Mexico (AP) — Rowdy American students are treating streets like cantinas and bathrooms when they hit this border town on spring break, say city officials, who want the "scandalous" behavior stopped. "We want tourists to come and have a good time, but we want them to behave according to the laws here, as city residents do," said City Manager Roberto Solis.

U.S. Consul Danny Root said the students seem to need "protection from themselves." But, he added, that isn't an easy task.

At least eight students were arrested this week for smoking marijuana, drinking in the streets and vandalism, authorities reported.

And on Wednesday, officials followed up their complaints with action, doubling the fine for smoking marijuana in public to $40 and raising the fine for drunk and disorderly conduct from $10 to $40.

"If we don't allow it locally, we're not going to allow it for foreigners," said Mayor Fernando Montemayor.

There will be more arrests if the "scandalous" behavior does not stop, said Montemayor.

The problem occurs in Matamoros and in other border cities such as Nuevo Laredo and Ciudad Juarez in part because the drinking age in Mexico is 18, according to Root. It's 21 in Texas. Beer is also cheaper in Mexico.

Authorities said the students act as if the streets are cantinas, or bars. Local newspapers have editorialized against what some termed "licentious" behavior by students and said police seemed to be more tolerant of the students than of local residents.

"They were taking advantage of our welcoming of them," Solis said Thursday. "Residents are not happy because they were not obeying the local ordinances. They were asking 'How come spring breakers can go loose in the streets and we can't?'"

Several students were jailed overnight and at least five others were arrested and released the same day, Root said.

Among those arrested, three were students caught smoking marijuana in the streets and others had broken property or urinated in public, according to Root. They were the first such arrests in recent memory, he said.

Those arrested on drug charges had their cases handled administratively, which allowed them to get off by paying fines, but convictions in court proceedings carry a minimum punishment seven years in prison for smoking marijuana in public, Root said.

"When visitors become too obnoxious and property is destroyed and disrespect for the law is openly flaunted, you have to expect civic leaders to react," he said.

"Our job is to protect Americans overseas, but these kids need protection from themselves. But they're hard to protect when so many feel hell-bent on provocation."

The consul helped secure the release of several of the students, but said students' complaints about the arrests were unjustified.

"They were walking down the streets and smoking dope," Root said. "Can you do that in Dallas or Houston or wherever they come from? My sympathy for them is limited."

U.N. Rejects Israeli Request To Examine War Crimes File

By ANDREW KATELL
Associated Press Writer

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — An Israeli spokesman criticized as incomprehensible the United Nations' denial of public access to secret U.N. files on suspected Nazi war criminals, and a Jewish leader said it was insulting.

A U.N. spokesman said Thursday that 16 of 17 member nations of the defunct U.N. War Crimes Commission rejected Israel's request for access to its files.

"It is incomprehensible why names of accused Nazi war criminals should be shielded from investigation," said Eyal Arad of the Israeli Mission. "Only access to the general public will ensure that governments will act on the files and prosecute."

The rejection is "an insult to the memory of the Holocaust and the living survivors of the Holocaust," said Elan Steinberg, executive director of the World Jewish Congress.

U.N. officials have said the files are kept confidential because they contain unsubstantiated accusations.

When the commission was disbanded in 1948, its files went to the U.N. archives. The files are stored in New York and have remained secret, with the exception of those on Adolf Eichmann, Josef Mengele, Klaus Barbie and former U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim.

U.N. rules stipulate that only member governments may see the nearly 40,000 files and must request them by name.

Israel asked Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar for general access to all files last May. He insisted on consulting with representatives of the 17 governments that served on the commission.

In the interim, Israel presented names of suspects believed to be still alive and received 300 files.

Israeli Ambassador Benjamin Netanyahu said Wednesday they contained "indispensable information for the prosecution of living Nazi war criminals as well as for historical research of the Holocaust."

Perez de Cuellar's spokesman, Francois Giuliani, said in a statement Thursday the secretary-general informed Netanyahu that 16 of the 17 former commission members opposed opening the files.

"In those circumstances, it would not be appropriate to introduce any substantial modification of the rules at the present time," he said.

Giuliani did not name the country not opposed to opening the files, but William Farmer of the Australian Mission said it was Australia.

S. Africa Says U.S. Blackmailed Israel

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The government today blamed U.S. pressure for Israel's decision to adopt sanctions against South Africa, including a ban on new military sales contracts.

The state-controlled South African Broadcasting Corp. said Israel's move underscored "the international blackmail role — the bully boy tactics — the the United States Congress has now resorted to in its vendetta against South Africa."

Critics of the white-led government in Pretoria and its policy of apartheid also responded with dismay.

Harry Schwarz, finance spokesman for the liberal opposition Progressive Federal Party, said he sent a telegram to Israeli leaders saying blacks, "who deserve it least," would be hardest hit by sanctions.

Israel said Thursday that its decision to ban arms contracts and reduce trade and cultural ties was prompted by South Africa's continued state of emergency, imposed last June 12 to crack down on violence linked to anti-apartheid unrest.

The decision came in anticipation of the April 1 release of a U.S. government report that is expected to list Israel as one of Pretoria's five top weapons traders. Israel feared the report would strain relations with Washington and lead to pressure for a cutoff in U.S. military aid, which totals $1.3 billion this year.

In the government first formal reaction, Foreign Minister R.F. Botha issued a statement today saying Israel's action was "clearly a direct result of pressure by the United States."

"The measures announced, however, do not go further than those adopted by European countries," Botha said.

The Star newspaper of Johannesburg quoted the deputy foreign minister, Ron Miller, as describing Israel's move as "a matter of greatest concern."

SABC said in a commentary that another "sad aspect" of the development was Israel "had chosen to disregard the past friendship of South Africans and the special relationship the Jewish community in this country has with Israel." Some of the 120,000 Jews in South Africa have urged against Israeli sanctions for fear of a backlash of anti-Semitism.

Business Day, a Johannesburg newspaper opposed to apartheid, said in an editorial today, "The awesome potential of the United States to inflict damage blindly on South Africa has been demonstrated once again...."

"The only remedy — and it is a poor one — is to reduce relationships with the U.S. to the barest minimum in the hopes that the Americans will gradually lose interest before they wreck this country entirely," it said.

In 1977, the U.N. Security Council approved an international embargo on arms sales to South Africa to protest its policy of apartheid, under which the 24 million blacks are denied a voice in national affairs while the 5 million whites control the government and economy. The United States joined the embargo.

Anti-Apartheid Unit Says Elections Farce

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The nation's biggest anti-apartheid group said the government is illegitimate and the May 6 whites-only parliamentary election is a farce, but it stopped short of calling for a boycott of the voting.

The United Democratic Front also said in a statement Thursday that it would continue to challenge the elections and press for a government in which all races have the vote.

"We want to reiterate that we cannot approve participation in the apartheid Parliament," it said.

The front was formed in 1983 to protest the new constitution that created a Parliament with separate chambers for whites, Indians and people of mixed-race. Blacks were excluded as before and the new non-white chambers had little power. Only a new white chamber will be elected in the May 6 polling.

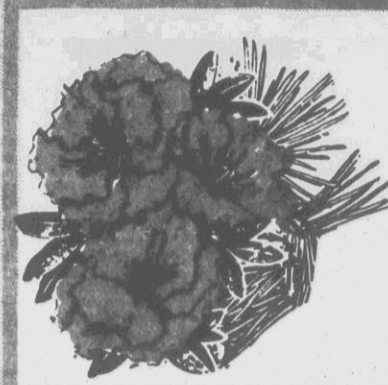

"Four years of misrule by the tricameral Parliament has made our people more determined than ever before to achieve this goal... of a non-racial South Africa," the front said.

"After serious discussion in our structures, despite the difficulties posed by the state of emergency, we are now able to announce our approach to the elections," it said. "The theme of our response to the election will be, 'Down with apartheid elections: Votes for all in a united South Africa.'"

By law and custom, apartheid establishes a racially segregated society in which the 24-million black majority has no vote in national affairs. The 5-million white minority controls the economy and maintains separate districts, schools and health services.

Censorship rules under the state of emergency, imposed June 12, restrict reporting about unrest, security force actions, treatment of detainees, most forms of peaceful protest and a broad range of statements the government considers subversive.
