To Counter Sex Bias In Work

Court Rules Boss May Bypass Male

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court, ruling in its first affirmative action case involving alleged sex discrimination, said today an employer may promote a woman over a more-qualified man to help get women into higher ranking jobs.

By a 6-3 vote, the justices ruled against a man who was denied promotion to road dispatcher by the Santa Clara County Transportation Agency in California.

The court said employers need not admit past discrimination against women to adopt such preferential treatment. The promotion of more women is a legitimate effort to overcome "a conspicuous imbalance in traditionally segregated job categories," the court said.

"Voluntary employer action can play a crucial role in ... eliminating the effects of discrimination in the workplace," Justice William J. Brennan wrote for the court.

The decision was based on the court's interpretation of a 1964 civil rights law banning on-the-job discrimination.

The court today did not decide whether Santa Clara's affirmative action plan might violate the Constitution's equal-protection guarantees. Constitutional issues were not raised in the case.

Today's ruling marked the second defeat this year for the Reagan administration in key high court rulings on affirmative action.

The court last month upheld the constitutionality of a court-ordered plan requiring promotion of equal numbers of black and white Alabama state police troopers.

Pitt Republicans Name Smith County Chairman

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County Republicans, apparently split between supporters of Jack Hawke and Barry McCarty for state party chairman, elected McCarty-supporter Carlton Smith of Greenville as county chairman at the county convention Tuesday night.

Elected on the same slate with Smith was Mary Lou Sugg as vice chairman, Cindy Story as secretary and Chip Laughinghouse as treasurer.

The McCarty supporters won by a vote of 115-104 over a slate of officers nominated by Hawke supporters that proposed Ed Griffith as chairman, Gladys Strauss as vice chairman, Ms. Story as secretary and Laughinghouse as treasurer.

The McCarty faction was also successful in electing its slate of nominees for membership on the county executive committee and for the county's 76 state convention delegates.

McCarty is supported in his bid for the state party chairmanship by the National Congressional Club, Sen. Jesse Helm's Raleigh-based political organization.

Hawke, now serving as interim party chairman, is Gov. Jim Martin's choice as state chairman.

Smith, a former precinct chairman, in a nominating speech, said he would "work for stability and growth of the Pitt County Republican Party" and strive to "build a strong grassroots organization."

Driver Charged

An 18-year-old driver of a Pitt County school bus involved in a collision that injured six people in Farmville Tuesday afternoon has been charged with a safe movement violation, Farmville police said today.

The driver, Jesse Ray Vandiford Jr., of 201 North Jefferson St., Fountain, was treated at Pitt County Memorial Hospital and later released, according to Sgt. W.R. Stokes of the Farmville Police Department.

Talea Hunter of Toddy, a passenger on the bus and a fourth-grade student from H.B. Sugg Grammar School, was also taken to the hospital and later released, school officials said.

Stokes said the bus, which was carrying 22 students from Sugg and Sam D. Bundy Primary School, was attempting a left turn off Wallace Street when it collided with a car driven by Alice Haddock Dail, 31, of Route 1, Box 260, Greenville, in the incident reported at 3:13 p.m.

Mrs. Dail and three passengers were transported to the hospital and later released.

Warren Praises Occupancy Tax As Innovative Concept

By DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer

RALEIGH — Pitt County's decision to levy a 3 percent motel and hotel occupancy tax to promote travel, tourism and conventions is an innovative concept, says Rep. Ed Warren, D-Pitt.

"I think this is one of the most progressive things the county has ever done," Warren told members of the Greenville City Council at a luncheon meeting at the Capital City Club Tuesday.

The proposed bill, which is to be forwarded to the county's delegation in Raleigh for passage by the General Assembly, was approved by the City Council on March 16.

Warren said lawmakers will begin work on the legislation as soon as they receive the draft from the Pitt County Board of Commissioners.

Revenue from the tax, which is estimated at $200,000 per year, would be used for "promotion, activities and programs aiding and encouraging travel, tourism and conventions," the act said.

The ordinance would establish an 11-member Pitt-Greenville Convention and Visitors Authority to be comprised of a board of directors consisting of five appointments from both the city and county and one from the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce.

Members of the Greenville City Council met with the Pitt County delegation to discuss the occupancy tax, the repeal of portions of the Law Enforcement Officers Bill, retirement benefits for firemen, annexation, transportation issues, a manufactured housing bill, and a clean water detergent bill.

"It's always to our benefit to know the thinking of the leaders of Greenville and the county," Rep. Walter B. Jones Jr., D-Pitt, told council members. "I can assure you that we will think carefully when we deliberate on these matters."

Council members Ed Carter, Janice Buck, Bill Hadden and Lorraine Shinn traveled to Raleigh along with Mayor Les Garner to meet with the Pitt delegation, which included Sen. Bob Martin of Bethel. Malcolm Green, general manager of the Greenville Utilities Commission, also attended the annual luncheon.

Sen. Tom Taft, D-Pitt, and council members Nancy Jenkins and Inez Fridley were unable to attend the meeting.

Economist Notes Rural Changes

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

Powerful structural changes in rural America have caused it to lose its ability to employ its people, an economist said today.

Dr. C.E. Bishop, special assistant to the provost at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, spoke to local municipal leaders during a Rural Economic Development Conference at the Sheraton today.

Structural changes that have impacted rural America include standardization, simplification and computerization of production and component manufacturing, he said.

"These forces, taken together, have the capacity to affect the United States and the world," Bishop said.

Those structural changes, for example, helped create institutional land grants to build schools to educate sons and daughters of farmers and mechanics, he said.

They also created the American Country Life Commission to strengthen rural sociology and to create institutions such as the Agricultural Extension Service, Bishop said.

"Farmers have to have some credit; farmers have to have some capital," he said.

With these structural changes, "the system hit the key elements" with education, extending knowledge and providing capital, he said.

"That set in motion technology that's unbelievable," Bishop said. "It increased production capacity and changed the way we do things. We've substituted capital for labor."

"We lost our capacity to employ our people," he said. But, "you're not going to solve that problem by looking at agriculture" alone.

"Rural America must survive; farming must survive," Bishop said.

But, "there are no general solutions to the problems" such as a vast increase in production.

"We must keep our economy dynamic; new technology is essential," he said. To accomplish that, "we must educate our people, maintain and improve our infrastructure, cultivate local entrepreneurship and support the local industry we have."

The conference, sponsored by several state agencies, was to continue today with presentations by Claude Pope, secretary of the state Department of Commerce, and other local and state economists.

Thefts Reported

Three thefts were reported to Greenville police Tuesday.

Officer B.M. Highland said a 100-foot tape measure valued at $25 was taken from a truck parked at Doc Moore & Sons Pest Control on Dickinson Avenue in an incident reported at 11:37 a.m., while Officer S.A. Person said a boat propeller assembly valued at $220, a spotlight and a pair of pliers were taken from 1206 S. Overlook Drive in an incident reported at 11:41 a.m.

According to Officer J.M. Jones, several items, including an equalizer, amplifier, four wheel spinners and a set of Corvette emblems were taken from a vehicle parked at the Sheraton on Greenville Boulevard in an incident reported at 1 p.m.

Stolen Property

Ralph Christopher Langley, 24, of 603B Church St. was arrested by Greenville police Tuesday on a charge of possession of stolen property.

Officer B.W. Lewis said Langley was charged after a motorized bicycle, taken from 203 S. Elm St. in November 1986, was found in his possession.

Rape Charge

Greenville police arrested Lavern Frank, 34, of Route 1, Greenville, on a second degree rape charge Tuesday.

Detective J.E. Harris said Frank was arrested about 8:24 a.m. by Officer E.E. Laughinghouse in connection with a rape reported at 7:57 a.m.

Harris said a 66-year-old woman told officers she was assaulted at a home in the Cherry View area.

Marijuana Counts

Greenville police arrested two people early Sunday on charges of possession with intent to sell and distribute marijuana.

Officers C.M. Credle and B.M. Highland said Michael Dodd Stanley, 20, and Johnny Ray Stanley, 22, both of 915 Cortland Road, were arrested about 1 a.m. in an alley off Cotanche Street between Fourth and Fifth streets.

The officers said 10 small bags of marijuana and $625 in cash were confiscated at the time the two men were taken into custody.

Program On AIDS

The Learning Channel on cable television will air a call-in show about AIDS Friday from 7 p.m. to 8 p.m. as part of a series called "State-to-State."

Three doctors from across the country will participate in the program. Taking part will be Dr. J.N. McCormack, state epidemiologist for North Carolina; Dr. Donald Lyman, director of the California Department of Health Services Office of AIDS, and Dr. Peter Selwyn, medical director for the Drug Abuse Treatment Program at Montefiore Hospital in the Bronx, New York, and assistant professor in the department of epidemiology and social medicine at Albert Einstein College of Medicine in New York City.

The telephone number for the live program will be 733-6342. Collect calls will be accepted.

"State-to-State" is a production of the North Carolina Agency for Public Telecommunications in Raleigh.

Nature Presentation

Jerry Everhart, nature science coordinator for the Pitt County schools, taught first- and second-grade students at Falkland Elementary School recently to identify various animal tracks.

Everhart showed the students several types of tracks and discussed the information which could be obtained from them. The students used models to make their own tracks.

Funds Available

The North Carolina Department of Human Resources, Division of Youth Services, has announced the availability of $128,484 in community-based alternative funds for fiscal year 1987-88.

The river otters habitat will be part of the Streamside habitat cluster at the zoo's planned North American region. The society is conducting a campaign to raise $6 million in private funds for the $30 million North America project.

The river otters will be exhibited in an outdoor pool at the cluster when North America is complete. Visitors will be able to see the otters from outdoors or from inside for underwater views.

At the Streamside habitat cluster, visitors will be able to follow a small, fast-moving stream to a quiet beaver pond, into a net-covered, 10,000 square-foot flight cage and then into the Streamside building.

Within the building, visitors will have closeup underwater views of otters, muskrats, trout, water snakes, turtles and other wildlife. A simulated beaver dam will form the backdrop to the NCNB-sponsored otter habitat.

Ground for North America will be broken this spring, with the grand opening scheduled for late 1991.

Fire 'Suspicious'

WILSON, N.C. (AP) — Investigators say a March 12 fire that leveled an entire city block was "of a suspicious origin."

Investigators plowed through brick and soot last week searching for clues to what started the blaze, which caused an estimated $1.5 million to four businesses, including two warehouses.

suspected of espionage and related charges. He will appear before a military magistrate who will determine whether his continued confinement is justified."

Shotwell said Bracy was arrested as a result of investigation into the case of Sgt. Clayton J. Lonetree, 25, currently held at Quantico. On Jan. 30, the Marine Corps announced it was asking a military lawyer to approve the start of court martial proceedings against Lonetree on 19 charges, including espionage.

Overturned Trailer Rig Spills Toxic Chemical Near Saluda

SALUDA, N.C. (AP) — About 100 people were evacuated from Saluda early today when a tractor-trailer carrying a poisonous chemical overturned on Interstate 26 and the chemical combined with rain to form a toxic cloud.

"The cloud doesn't seem to be moving right now," said a dispatcher with the Polk County Sheriff's Department who would not give her name. "It just seems to be hanging over the Saluda exit right at the interstate."

Chrystal Stowe of the state Department of Crime Control and Public Safety said the truck, reported by the sheriff's department to be owned by Welland Chemical Co. of Ontario, Canada, was carrying aluminum chloride anhydrous. It is a granular chemical that is poisonous if inhaled and can cause severe burns to skin and eyes.

Polk County emergency management coordinator Jim Cochran said the truck was carrying eight aluminum chloride containers totaling 36,000 pounds. It wrecked at the 29-mile marker, forcing eastbound trucks to divert to Spartanburg, S.C., 40 miles to the south.

Polk County sheriff's deputy Dennis Bishop was among the first law enforcement officers on the scene. He said he noticed a burning sensation in his chest, followed by a headache.

"I was completely engulfed in it at one time before I knew what it was," Bishop said. "When I found out what we were dealing with, I got out of there."

A statement released by the sheriff's department this morning said the driver, identified as Joseph Such, 56, was transported to St. Luke's Hospital in Columbus where he was treated for minor lacerations and released, according to hospital spokesman Tom Kelly.

The dispatcher said residents within a mile radius of the interchange had been evacuated to the Saluda Fire Department and the gymnasium of a school at Saluda.

"A lot of people went to the firehouse," said a secretary at Saluda Elementary School who asked that her name not be used.

"We prepared breakfast for them and took it over there. There are a few here who came in around 6 or 7 o'clock."

J.D. Gilbert, a Saluda fireman, said there were about 40 evacuees at the station. He said he thinks other people may have either gone to work or traveled to neighbors, while the people in the firehouse were fairly calm.

"There's a lot of anxiety because people want to go home, but that's about all right now," Gilbert said.

A section of I-26 around the wreck site was closed and was expected to remain closed all day, the dispatcher said.

She said rain was continuing to fall before dawn, but emergency crews from the state Emergency Management Division, Department of Transportation and the local fire department were trying to clean up the spill. Rain was still falling at mid-morning.

"Saluda is not alerted yet," said mayor Nolan Pace. "But if the wind changes, we will be and could be evacuated. I think that we're safe here in Saluda, but maybe not."

Congress Told Private Pension Plans Often Aren't Available When Needed

By MATT YANCEY

AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Since 1980, U.S. businesses have stripped 1,338 pension plans of nearly $16 billion in so-called surplus assets, often to finance or fight corporate takeovers.

In that same period, other companies have foisted upon the government 734 pension plans with more than $3.7 billion in promised but unfunded pension obligations.

The phenomena result from pension fund terminations either by corporations in order to lay claim to the surplus assets of overfunded plans or by government insurers to protect the benefits of workers in insolvent plans.

In both cases, hundreds of thousands of current and future retirees are being hurt, Congress was told

Tuesday, with warnings that what has happened in the past seven years is just the tip of the iceberg.

If what Labor Secretary William E. Brock called the "two disturbing trends" continue, millions of retirees can anticipate losing one-third to one-half of the benefits they had expected would protect them in their old age, according to a study by his department.

Testimony of more than a dozen witnesses Tuesday before House and Senate labor subcommittees indicated those trends will continue unless Congress changes the law to force underfunded plans to improve their solvency and then addresses who should enjoy the excess assets of the overfunded plans.

"The situation cries out for reform," said Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio. "Millions believed the pension promises made by their employers. They assumed there were laws to protect them. Sadly, they were wrong."

To understand the enormity of what is at stake requires only a cursory glance at the number of people and amount of money involved:

—A total of 38 million workers plus their spouses, or roughly one-fourth of the nation's population, look to 110,000 private and voluntary defined-benefit pension plans to help take care of them in retirement.

—Assets in those individual pension plans to finance those benefits total nearly $2 trillion, an amount approximating the total federal debt and equal to half the annual U.S. gross national product.

The Labor Department says surplus assets in overfunded plans total $263 billion, making them a lucrative target for both corporate raiders and entrenched managements in defending themselves against takeovers.

"Companies have turned their pension plans into corporate piggy banks," Metzenbaum said. "And in the process, workers have lost retirement security."

By terminating overfunded plans, companies can capture the excess assets for their own coffers. "Without a cushion of assets, plan sponsors will be less likely to increase benefits or grant cost-of-living increases to retirees," Brock said.

"The problem is awesome and I don't know that any of us have the answer," Brock said.

RESOLUTION OF THE CITY COUNCIL OF
THE CITY OF GREENVILLE DECLARING ITS INTENT TO CLOSE A PORTION OF
THE 300 BLOCK OF HILL TOP AVENUE

WHEREAS, the City Council has received a petition that a portion of Hill Top Avenue be closed; and

WHEREAS, the City Council intends to close the portion of Hill Top Avenue in accordance with the provisions of G.S. 160A-299;

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED BY THE CITY COUNCIL that it is the intent of the City Council to close the following described portion of Hill Top Avenue a distance of 150 feet, said portion being more particularly described as follows:

Professional Search

By no means should the Greenville City Council's search for a new city manager be conducted in the same manner in which the dismissal of Gail Meeks occurred.

Instead, the City Council should use the search as an opportunity to develop a new unity and professional image that will be an asset to progress.

The council's goal of new direction for the city via a new city manager is worthy of support but it is an objective marred by the haphazard way the board fired Mrs. Meeks. The public watched with dismay as a widely-divided council axed the 5-year city manager with no discussion, no negotiation and no heed to the consequences of the action.

The council can work to improve its impaired image, however, and take solid steps toward dissolving disorganization by carefully devising and agreeing upon a sound plan of action for selecting the city's new top executive.

Seeking the expertise of Woody Underwood, services director for the N.C. League of Municipalities, was an important first step. It would be a responsible move, however, for council members to promptly schedule a meeting to set mutually agreed upon standards for the search. The board should state, in writing, its goals, procedures and qualifications for filling the position. It should make sure these requirements are objectives of the entire council — not just one faction.

The search should be conducted only under the most professional circumstances. The priority of the council should be unity — oneness in purpose dedicated to the best interest of the city.

The standards for a new city manager must be the highest attainable. Education, experience, expertise, financial acuity and vision — those are the characteristics the board should choose.

The firing of Gail Meeks was a decision made by a divided board. Consequently, it was an irresponsible move made under the poorest of circumstances. By pulling together in the search for a new manager, the council can retract itself from the quagmire of that questionable choice.

Even though the intent may have been correct, the council blew it by firing Mrs. Meeks so abruptly. Now, with the search for her replacement, the board has a second chance to accomplish what it was elected to do — govern Greenville in a responsible, professional manner with careful attention to progress.

Possible Source

A possible source of money to be used in a program to compensate crime victims has finally emerged in the fee convicted criminals must pay for their probation or parole supervision.

It sounds like a winner and it comes at a time when (a) pressures for providing money for the crime victims' fund is growing and (b) when numbers of prisoners who are going to be freed from durance vile are rising because of the new cap on the state's prison population result in more criminals being freed from prison and given probation or parole supervision.

As it now stands, convicted criminals pay $10 a month for their parole supervision (or probation). Raising that monthly fee to $15 would generate about $1.5 million a year, or more than enough to offset the $2 million appropriation the program is said to need for openers.

Revenue from the fee increase would go into the state budget's general fund and could not be earmarked for the victim compensation program, but it would furnish the money the legislature has to see before approving an appropriation for victim's compensation.

General Assembly members are wrestling with budgetary items and awareness has penetrated deep into the ranks that money-shortage versus money-needs is a recurring story.

There are details to be ironed out.

For instance, avoidance of an alternative "home-owners insurance program"; whether to put a cap on benefits per case and, if so, how much. Most agree some limits are necessary and, too, there's the matter of making sure that victims of crime are not also victims of the criminal justice system.

The Legislature's Fair Treatment for Victims and Witnesses Act includes a victims' bill of rights and funds to ensure victim-witness coordinators are provided in all 35 of the state prosecutorial districts. The coordinators help victims compile reports on how crimes affected them and give judges some guidance in sentencing criminals and ordering restitution.

It is all coming to a head at a time when the crackdown on crowded prisons is under way and the Parole Commission begins wielding its authority to reduce that prison population to the 17,280 limit.

Everything is fitting into place.

Today's Thought

Congress's 65 mph speed limit legislation certainly won't be accelerating with President Reagan's veto looming ahead.

Haig Running Against The Odds

NEW YORK (AP) — By traditional political standards, the presidential bid of Alexander M. Haig Jr. is a quixotic venture given no chance of success.

Yet Haig was outwardly buoyant Tuesday when he launched his campaign for the 1988 Republican presidential nomination with a news conference at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel and the obligatory quick trip to New Hampshire.

Obviously, the retired general with an impressive resume hopes to turn conventional political wisdom on its ear and upset the likes of George Bush, Bob Dole and Jack Kemp.

With his entry into the race, Haig joined former Gov. Pete du Pont of Delaware as the only declared candidates on the Republican side.

Both are long shots. But du Pont is regarded as a dark horse with a chance of surprising his better known rivals. He has won elections to the House of Representatives and to two terms as governor of his state.

By contrast, at 62, Haig has never held elective office, has never run for anything. He can argue that neither had Dwight D. Eisenhower, another retired general who entered electoral politics at the presidential level.

But Eisenhower emerged from World War II as one of the most, if not the most popular man in America. He was the architect of the Normandy invasion, the commander of the Allied forces that defeated Germany.

Haig lacks the celebrity and the persona of Eisenhower. What Haig doesn't lack is a resume that has placed him at the side of the men who held power during much of his professional life.

He worked for Henry A. Kissinger, was Richard M. Nixon's chief of staff and Ronald Reagan's secretary of state.

William E. McCann pointed out with pride that Haig was the only White House chief of staff "who ever oversaw the resignation of a vice president (Spiro T. Agnew) and the resignation of a president (Richard M. Nixon)."

Maybe voters will come to agree with McCann that service at the center of that dark moment in American history is more to be admired than forgotten.

Haig rarely misses reminding audiences that "I've served seven presidents."

But is a resume enough for a man with no discernable political base?

"I think I have a very substantial constituency and that's the American people," he told reporters at his announcement news conference.

Haig must count on more than the shortcomings of his rivals.

So far he is pushing his resume and telling voters, "What I offer is leadership."

More consistently than any of his Republican rivals, Haig indirectly attacks Reagan policies at the same time he urges audiences to rally around the president.

For example, he said he opposed covert aid to the Contra forces fighting the Sandinista government of Nicaragua but then adds that "now that we are there I support aid to the Contras."

He refused to rule out a tax increase to help balance the budget but ruled out "going immediately to a tax increase."

These are the kind of positions that could strike voters as an effort to have it both ways.

Public Forum

To the editor:

I have been reading about all the heat our City Council is taking over the recent request for City Manager Gail Meeks' resignation. In contrast to these opinions, I feel Council members Ed Carter, Lorraine Shinn, and Janice Buck, along with Mayor Garner, should be applauded for their vote.

A city manager whose income is between $50,000 and $60,000 per year should be a creative, resourceful person. Ms. Meeks has not been. It should be easy for anyone to bring a budget out of the red by proposing a tax increase at every opportunity or charging citizens extra for garbage collection. Methods such as these are not creative or imaginative. A sharp manager would be able to use things such as our various Parks and Recreation facilities to generate funds.

If our new city manager can only propose taxes or collection fees to answer our budget problems, then replace him or her, whether a professional or someone who rose through the ranks. Call me — for $50,000 per year, I'll come up with some great ideas.

Robert Moseley
Greenville

To the editor:

I wish to praise the wise decision of the City Council to ask Ms. Meeks to resign. Most people against this action cite Ms. Meeks as being a capable leader. How can this be?

If you look around at the town of similar size to Greenville, all city managers must have at least a college degree related to the job or higher. Ms. Meeks' education ended with a high school diploma. As a city manager, a college degree is a must in order to have an adequate understanding and ability to perform as a professional. Ms. Meeks was never qualified for this job and I think that became more evident within her five years as city manager.

The council took a brave action that had to be done. Perhaps now a city manager can be brought in that is ready for the job, instead of training someone on the job as in Ms. Meeks' case. Greenville citizens expect Greenville to be the best in the East — it's time we select individuals with the background capable of making us the best!

The High Cost Of Running

WASHINGTON — Back in 1958, Robert Byrd and Jennings Randolph pooled their efforts to run for the Senate in West Virginia. Their combined war chest amounted to $50,000. In 1962, running alone, Byrd had to raise $2 million. That is a fair measure of what is happening to congressional elections. The costs have soared out of sight.

Byrd was one of eight senators who testified last week before the Senate Rules Committee on the wide-ranging field of election reform. The eight agreed on only one point: Something has to be done to curb campaign spending and to restore public confidence in the electoral process. Beyond that consensus each of the witnesses had some different ideas.

Let us crunch numbers. As recently as 1976, total spending on Senate general election campaigns amounted to $38 million. In 1986 candidates reported comparable spending of $182 million. In 1988 the average Senate race will cost a candidate more than $3 million. Ten years hence, if present trends continue, the average candidate will have to raise $15 million.

In last year's congressional elections, about 23 percent of campaign receipts came from PACs (political action committees) and 9 percent from political parties. The balance came from individuals, from the candidates themselves, and from independent sources. The PACs contributed $8.5 million to House and Senate general election campaigns in 1972. By 1980 PAC funding had grown to $51.9 million. Last year the PACs gave $127.7 million.

The perception grows, in Mark Twain's cynical observation, that we have the best Congress that money can buy.

One after one the Senate witnesses testified to the strain of raising money, money, money. "Today candidates campaign for funds, not for votes," said California's Alan Cranston. "Rightly or wrongly," said Oregon's Robert Packwood, "the public perceives that elections are being 'bought and sold.'" Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts asserted that "Congress is awash in a sea of special interest contributions, and it's time to drain the swamp."

The stark reality, said Byrd of West Virginia, is that "we are all trapped by a system which forces us to make fund raising a major priority." The senator had done some figuring: In order to raise $2 million for an election campaign, a candidate "must raise $2,739 every day of every week for two straight years, Saturdays and Sundays included." This obsession with fund raising inevitably pulls incumbents away from their primary responsibilities.

The principal reform bill before the Senate is S.2, sponsored by Byrd and David Boren of Oklahoma. Its key provisions would provide public financing for senatorial candidates, if they choose to accept it, in general election campaigns. To be eligible for public funds, a candidate first would have to raise $250,000 from individual contributions; 80 percent of these would have to come from individuals residing in the candidate's state.

The Boren-Byrd bill would limit PAC contributions to no more than $175,000 in small states, $750,000 in large states. It would lower the limit on individual PAC contributions from $5,000 to $3,000. Overall, a candidate in a general election could spend no more than $600,000, plus 25 cents for every person of voting age in his state.

For my own part, I doubt that the time has come for public financing of congressional elections. Such a step would lay the heavy hand of federal regulation upon one more area of public life. It would diminish individual and party involvement. Neither can I accept Boren's unwritten premise that political action committees are inherently evil. Often they represent positive good. Yet I willingly concur in the feeling that the present system cries out for reform. The incessant pursuit of money, money, money has to be curbed.

Strength For Today

Over the past decades the gypsy moth has done considerable damage to woodlands in many parts of the country. How the gypsy moth arrived here is an instructive story.

Many years ago an American traveling in China conceived the idea that he might be able to spin a new kind of silk from the cocoons of the gypsy moth. He brought back some of the insects with which to experiment. Some escaped, began to multiply and in a short time were playing havoc with trees.

Like the gypsy moths, there are a few little sins in life which, while we are not looking, can grow into a devastating burden. The little white lie, for instance, is the progenitor of a vast number of lies, not little and not white, the little words uttered in anger which cause mounting division in families — these are examples of how little pests grow into great afflictions.

Missile Proposal Essentially The Same

Playing His Game

WASHINGTON — Under reform-minded Mikhail Gorbachev, the Soviet Union is conducting unprecedented jamming of Munich-based Radio Liberty in a move that coincides with his campaign for major political change. That demonstrates Kremlin concern over internal publicity of the reform program, perhaps because of political delicacy or inopportune timing.

Gorbachev's unwitting ally in the high-intensity jamming of Russian-language broadcasts may be none other than the U.S. Congress. Worried by Gramm-Rudman budget ceilings, Congress is not rushing to give Radio Liberty and its partner, Radio Free Europe, the piddling millions they need just to compensate for the 30 percent decline of the dollar.

The result could cripple Radio Liberty at the peak of its impact as the West's only reporter of news inside the Soviet Union to the Soviet Union. Radio Liberty's broadcasts have always been jammed, but never at today's level of intensity.

The impact of the Radio today must be substantial, judging from the Soviet efforts to prevent the signal from getting through to millions of radio receivers in cities, towns and farms. When the Soviets stopped jamming Britain's BBC at the end of January for the first time in almost 10 years, 12 of the nearly 20 large jamming transmitters used to block the BBC's signal were redirected against Radio Liberty.

But why on earth would Gorbachev fear Radio Liberty's reports back to his own people when he is making so large a world case out of his political, economic and other efforts to reform the Soviet system? "Because," a White House adviser told us, "he wants to be in charge of timing and of how his people react to Glasnost, and he doesn't want his critics to have the means of articulation" — Radio Liberty.

That answer explains worry in the Kremlin about Radio Liberty (and Radio Free Europe, which broadcasts to Eastern Europe). Using sources of information from hundreds of different places inside the Soviet Union, Liberty's broadcasts tell Soviet listeners infinitely more about what is happening in their country than they get from Tass, Pravda or any other media.

The disaster at the Chernobyl nuclear reactor, withheld for days by government censors, was not withheld by Radio Liberty. Gory details were aired as they were discovered.

Last December, when major political riots in Alma Ata greeted the dismissal of D.A. Kunayev as boss of the Kazakhstan Communist Party, Radio Liberty broadcast far more about the size and intensity of the riots than came out of Moscow — and more about Kunayev's corrupt past than Gorbachev may have wished.

These subtleties are not entirely lost on Capitol Hill, but they play a secondary role to the questionable politics of budget deficits and Gramm-Rudman. That helps explain why, with the dramatic drop in the dollar, both Radios are in serious financial trouble. Converting dollars into West German marks, the currency for almost all spending by the

Will we soon have a nuclear arms-control agreement with the Soviet Union? Early agreement would seem highly likely in light of President Reagan's optimistic appraisal of Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev's proposal to eliminate all intermediate-range missiles in Europe. In fact, proponents of arms reductions suggest that such an agreement is possible in three or four months.

But some key players are not equally optimistic. Before he fell ill, Max M. Kampelman, the senior U.S. negotiator in Geneva, said that he hopes to reach a useful agreement by spring 1988. Other authoritative voices in, or close to, the administration are raising doubts, citing three principal concerns about the wisdom of removing U.S. missiles, the difficulty of negotiating an equitable agreement with the Soviets, and the ability to verify compliance with the agreement to prevent Soviet cheating in the future.

The first concern is based on the assertion that the Soviet Union has overwhelming conventional military power that can be countered only by U.S. nuclear strength. That assertion is made so often that it is commonly accepted without question even though there is considerable evidence that it is a myth. For example, the conservative International Institute for Strategic Studies of London says in a recent analysis that the conventional balance of NATO and Warsaw Pact military forces in Europe "is still such as to make general military aggression a highly risky undertaking for either side ...

there would still appear to be insufficient overall strength on either side to guarantee victory."

There is another reason to question any argument that 316 intermediate-range U.S. nuclear missiles are critical to nuclear deterrence or the defense of Europe. Even after all 316 are gone, the United States will still have aircraft and submarine-based missiles assigned to NATO that are capable of delivering approximately 1,200 nuclear warheads and bombs on the Soviet Union from European bases and waters.

The second reservation about obtaining an equitable arms-reduction agreement reflects a mistaken belief that devious Soviet negotiators always hornswoogle their innocent American counterparts. Former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger recently explained the problem this way: "Wherever the Soviets are numerically inferior they demand equal numbers; in whatever categories they are ahead they ask for equal reductions that improve their proportionate advantage."

The record shows that the American negotiators have more than held their own. SALT II numbers are a good example. In that treaty the Soviets agreed to surrender their overall numerical advantage in strategic nuclear delivery vehicles (2,504 Soviet to 2,284 U.S.) by coming down to equal limits of 2,250 missile launchers and bombers when the treaty was ratified. The United States was not required to surrender its 2 to 1 advantage in deliverable strategic bombs and warheads (9,808 U.S. to 5,764 Soviet). Not a bad bargain!

In the present Soviet proposal the numbers favor the United States even more. Both sides would remove all intermediate-range missiles from the European theater. The Soviets would retain 100 warheads on 33 missiles in Eastern Russia while we would retain 100 warheads on 100 missiles in the United States. To reduce to equal numbers of warheads, the Soviets would have to dismantle 520 missiles and inactivate 1,336 warheads while the United States would dismantle 216 missiles, each with one warhead. Numbers never tell the whole story of an arms-control agreement, but it is fair to say that the Soviets are offering up a lot more than we are.

Finally, the issue of verification is raised by many who oppose any arms agreement with the Soviets. Perhaps the most straightforward evidence that we can verify missile levels with great confidence is provided by the Department of Defense in its publication, "Soviet Military Power." The 1986 edition lists exactly 112 SS-4 and 41 SS-20 missiles deployed in the Soviet Union. Previous editions have carefully reported the inactivation since 1978 of 485 SS-4 and 90 SS-5 missiles as the SS-20s increased from zero to 41. All of this information was available without any special verification arrangements. If we have been able to track their intermediate-range missiles one-by-one since 1978, we certainly have the ability to keep track of them today. Furthermore, the Soviets are proposing new measures of on-site inspection in each country that would increase confidence even more that no significant cheating was possible.

Reagan has promised new "hands-on" leadership in the White House, and it appears that his personal political interests would be well served by a breakthrough on arms control after six years of no progress.

For his own reasons Gorbachev has chosen to offer an agreement that is almost exactly the same "zero-option" that Reagan originally proposed for intermediate-range missiles in November 1981. In effect, Reagan is being asked to accept "yes" for an answer to his own proposal. If the president is really back in command, that should not be hard to do.

House Democrats Back Special School Tax

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — A four-year sales tax increase of 1 cent per dollar is the best way to generate more than $2 billion needed for school construction in North Carolina, House Democratic leaders say.

A spokesman for Gov. Jim Martin, however, says the governor's plan to issue $1.5 billion in bonds is a better idea.

"It's an innovative and creative way to finance school needs and build them now, without any additional taxes," Phil Kirk, Martin's chief of staff, said Tuesday. "I'm sure there's some consternation among the Democratic leadership in the House that they didn't think of it first."

Kirk called raising taxes "the typical Democratic approach." But House Speaker Liston Ramsey, D-Madison, said Martin's plan would triple the state's indebtedness and force many local governments to boost property taxes.

"My position is that (raising taxes) is better than borrowing the money," Ramsey said. "Borrowing the money, that's the way the federal government's doing — and look at them."

Ramsey said he supported the tax increase bill, sponsored by his chief ally, Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Granville. But Ramsey said he would not campaign vigorously on its behalf.

Martin issued a statement opposing the tax increase and Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan, a Democrat who is expected to challenge Martin's re-election in 1988, reacted coolly.

"We do not need another major tax increase at this time," Martin said. "I hope that the General Assembly will support my proposal for a bond issue to build the schools we need."

Jordan told reporters, "I'm not sure this is the appropriate time for another sales tax (increase). ... It will not be an easy year to raise taxes."

The state sales tax is 3 percent, but all 100 counties levy a 2 percent local option tax. Thus, Watkins' bill would boost the sales tax North Carolinians pay to 6 percent.

Under the bill, the state tax would rise to 4 percent for four years, beginning July 1. The tax would revert to 3 percent July 1, 1991, unless a future Legislature voted by a two-thirds majority to keep it at 4 percent.

The four-year increase would generate about $1.8 billion, all of which would be earmarked for school construction. The money would be deposited in a special fund that would generate enough interest to push it above $2 billion, Watkins said.

The revenue would be distributed to local school boards under a population-based formula that benefits smaller, rural counties.

Reporting on a recent survey of the state's 140 school boards, the Department of Public Instruction said March 4 that North Carolina needed $3.2 billion to construct and renovate school buildings.

Watkins and Ramsey said that figure probably was inflated and that the proposed tax increase would generate most if not all of the money needed.

The Watkins bill drew quick endorsements from the public instruction department and the North Carolina Association of School Boards, both of which support the Martin plan.

"We've talked about construction needs of school for the last 20 years, and they've been documented and documented and documented," said Gene Causby of the school board association. "This is the first bill that ... attacks the problem directly with a specific amount of money over a set period of time."

Superintendent of Public Instruction Craig Phillips could not be reached. But his senior associate superintendent, William W. Peek, said Phillips supported a sales tax increase for school construction.

Under the Martin plan, unveiled last fall, the state would issue up to $1.5 billion in bonds to create a pool from which local governments could borrow to fund school capital projects.

Local officials could take advantage of the state's AAA bond rating to borrow the money at low interest rates and could pay off the loans over 20 years using revenue from half-cent, local-option sales tax increases authorized in 1983 and 1986.

Legislature Approves Paid State Holiday Honoring Martin L. King

RALEIGH (AP) — A law establishing a paid state holiday in honor of Martin Luther King Jr. takes effect today, showing the nation that North Carolina supports the cause for which he died, the measure's sponsor says.

"It sends a signal of commitment to the principles we all claim to support — peace, justice, freedom, and equality," Rep. Dan Blue, D-Wake, said. North Carolina is the 40th state to give its employees a day off in honor of the slain civil rights leader.

The House took final action on the bill Tuesday, approving 114-0 a Senate amendment to Blue's bill. Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan and House Speaker Liston Ramsey were to sign the measure into law today.

Under the bill, the holiday will be the third Monday in January — the same date as the federal King holiday. North Carolina has designated King's birthday, Jan. 15, as an unpaid holiday since 1983.

North Carolina was the only Southern state without a paid King holiday.

The bill drew bipartisan support, although most Republicans in both chambers voted against it and Sen. Donald Kincaid, R-Caldwell, charged that King was unworthy of the honor because he allegedly associated with communists.

"The day he died ... he had become as polarizing, as divisive, as negative a force as we've had in the United States in many years," Kincaid said during Senate debate last week.

Gov. Jim Martin, a Republican, opposed the measure but did not lobby against it.

The only significant opposition came from the 50,000-member State Employees Association of North Carolina Inc., which fought a provision under which the King holiday will replace one of the 11 paid holidays observed in 1986.

Durwood "Butch" Gunnells, executive director of SEANC, said he regretted that his organization found itself working against the King bill.

House Wants Separate Public Hearings For Board Nominees

RALEIGH (AP) — A House committee has refused to participate in a public hearing with its Senate counterpart on Gov. Jim Martin's three nominations for State Board of Education seats, insisting on separate sessions to guard against "rubber stamp" approval.

The House Education Committee voted to conduct its own hearing next Tuesday and to make no decision on whether to recommend confirmation of the nominations until after April 1, the day the State Board of Education had planned to swear in its new members if the nominations were approved.

That means the 13-member board apparently will have to meet with three of its slots unfilled, since the incumbents' terms expire March 31.

Martin's nominees are Howard Haworth of Morganton, former state commerce secretary; William C. Meekins Jr. of Elizabeth City, and Patricia H. Neal of Durham.

Members of the House panel complained that Martin only recently had submitted his nominations and that lawmakers weren't being given enough time to study them.

"It does appear that they expect us to rubber-stamp these nominations," Rep. George Brannan, D-Johnston, said Tuesday.

They also said their decision was a demonstration of unhappiness with the way the Senate Commerce Committee handled a joint hearing this month on Martin's nomination of Ben Tison as state banking commissioner.

IN THE STATE

Appointment

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin has appointed a Carolina Power & Light Co. foreman to the state Industrial Commission, possibly avoiding attempts to limit his appointment powers.

Martin announced Tuesday that Harold Davis of Raleigh, plant services foreman at CP&L's Shearon Harris Nuclear Plant, to replace Charles Clay on the commission. He will join another Martin appointee, commission chairman David Brooks, and William Stephenson on the commission.

Chris Scott, president of the state AFL-CIO, said both Davis and Brooks, a former workers' compensation defense lawyer, appeared to represent employers on the three-member panel. He said current law allows no more than one representative of employers and no more than one supporter of labor.

Manager

CHADBOURN, N.C. (AP) — An attorney representing former Chadbourne Town Manager Steve Wyatt says he will ask the town council to reinstate his client or face a lawsuit charging his dismissal was a violation of his civil rights.

Wyatt was suspended last week just hours before he intended to swear in the town's first black police chief. Two days later, he was fired.

"The law is clear that to discriminate against an employee because that employee lawfully causes or encourages the employment of a black applicant is a violation of the law," said Robert P. Joyce, a lawyer from Pittsboro, citing the Civil Rights Act of 1964. "The termination of Mr. Wyatt's employment was such a violation."

The three white council members who supported Wyatt's suspension and firing said the termination was not racially motivated but stemmed from Wyatt's failure to adequately consult them on major hiring decisions. After firing Wyatt, they voted to swear in the black police chief, Kelly Rogers.

Student Killed

LELAND, N.C. (AP) — A Brunswick County college student was killed and two other people were injured when a 15-year-old boy, angry after an argument, rammed a pickup truck through a duplex apartment.

The body of William Guy Bondurant II, 21, a junior at the University of North Carolina at Wilmington, was found among the debris inside the apartment early Tuesday.

The crash apparently followed a disagreement earlier in the evening between the 15-year-old and one or more of the people in the duplex apartment.

No formal charge had been filed.

Ford Visit

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — The National Security Council was intended to be a think-tank of highly qualified analysts who could advise the president, not an agency for running covert operations, former President Gerald Ford says.

Ford, at a news conference before a speech at the University of North Carolina, said he does not fault the U.S. government for trying to establish relations with Iran, but said the operations posed high risks.

"The NSC was never intended as a field operation organization," Ford said. "When you undertake a high-risk operation, you better supervise. Nobody did."

NCAE Director

RALEIGH (AP) — Thomas Husted, a director of business affairs and research for the Utah Education Association, will become executive director of the N.C. Association of Educators on April 6.

The NCAE board of directors chose Husted, 42, as its staff chief following a two-month national search. Husted will succeed K.Z. Chavis, who died in a car accident in November.

The 45,000-member NCAE, an affiliate of the National Education Association, is the state's largest teacher association. Elected officials in the NCAE have been trying to exercise more leadership and to bring the staff into a subordinate role.

Hall Of Fame

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Six North Carolinians will be inducted into the N.C. Journalism Hall of Fame at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill on April 12, the UNC-CH School of Journalism has announced.

The Hall of Fame honors journalists who have made significant contributions in the state and native North Carolinians who have attained journalistic distinction elsewhere.

Honored will be Claude Sitton, editor of The News and Observer of Raleigh; Margaret Harper, former editor of the State Port Pilot in Southport; Neil Luxon, dean emeritus of the school of journalism; Robert Mason, former editor of the Norfolk Virginian-Pilot; Sam Summerlin, president of The New York Times Syndication Sales Corp., and the late Henry Belk, former editor of the Goldsboro News-Argus.

The inductees will be honored during the Hall of Fame banquet at The Carolina Inn. A reception will begin at 6 p.m. in the UNC ballroom.

Military Awards

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger on Tuesday cited four military bases as recipients of the annual Commander-in-Chief's Award for Installation Excellence.

Established in 1984 by President Reagan, the award is presented to bases that have done the most to "increase productivity of the workforce and enhance the quality of life for personnel."

The four winners include the Army's Mainz Military Community in West Germany; the Marine Corps' Camp Lejeune, N.C.; the San Diego, Calif., Naval Station, and Beale Air Force Base, Calif.

Drug Charge

MONROE, N.C. (AP) — A 41-year-old Waxhaw man has been charged by Monroe and Union County officers with 30 counts of obtaining a prescription drug illegally.

John Sheldon was arrested by the Monroe Public Safety Office and charged with 17 counts of obtaining a controlled substance by forgery and one count of obtaining a controlled substance by fraud, according to Capt. Reid Helms.

"The drug he was charged with obtaining is a Schedule II drug called Dilaudid," Helms said. Sheldon was charged with seven counts of prescription forgery and five counts of obtaining prescription drug through fraud.

Search Ends

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — The Coast Guard has called off its search for a Wilmington man missing since Saturday, said Coast Guard spokesman Peter Virock in Portsmouth, Va.

John Good was among four men aboard on a fishing boat that sank last weekend. One man, Doug Sherwood of Wilmington, survived by climbing inside a four-foot cooler. He drifted 19 hours before his rescue, officials said.

Two others who had been aboard the boat drowned.

Federal Judge Will Allow State More Time To Improve Prisons

GREENSBORO (AP) — A federal judge has ruled that the state has not complied with a two-year-old consent decree to improve facilities at 14 prisons, but has declined to intervene in the prison system until he sees how much money the General Assembly puts into prison improvements.

State officials say the ruling earlier this month by U.S. District Court Judge James B. McMillan is a reprieve that gives them more time to avoid a federal takeover of North Carolina's prison system.

"We won the first battle," Deputy Correction Secretary John Higgins told the Greensboro News and Record Tuesday. "Not the war, but the battle. We are very pleased."

McMillan, in his ruling, said the state had failed to meet all the requirements of the consent decree, but was making progress.

"The Legislature is now addressing the budget, and it will be some months before it will be known how far they have gone toward funding the goals of education, employment and rehabilitation which the consent decree embraces," McMillan said in his decision.

"The defendants are complimented upon the progress achieved to date."

McMillan could have held the state in contempt, fining officials until they complied with his order. He could have closed some units or ordered prison officials to release inmates.

In a hearing in Charlotte on March 9, lawyers for prison inmates argued the state had violated the 1985 consent judgment and should be forced to comply immediately.

The judgment settled a 1980 law suit brought by four prisoners at Union County's state prison unit. McMillan later certified the litigation as a class-action lawsuit involving about 2,000 inmates.

The lawsuit, one of the first of many attacking conditions in the state's prisons, charged that the prisons are unfit for human habitation.

The judgment McMillan signed in September 1985 requires the state to spend $12 million to improve physical conditions at the prisons, provide better medical care and improve recreational, vocational and educational programs.

McMillan's deadline for improving vocational, educational and rehabilitation programs expired late last year, and lawyers for the inmates asked the judge to intervene.

McMillan, however, said his court "will not put in its oar" until prison officials know how much money they will have to spend.

The General Assembly approved a $29 million emergency bill March 12 to provide space for some 3,000 additional beds in the system.

At the same time, lawmakers enacted emergency legislation requiring prison officials to place a cap on the rapidly increasing inmate population.

On Thursday, parole officials will begin releasing hundreds of inmates convicted of misdemeanor crimes, in addition to those criminals who ordinarily would be paroled.

The special releases will continue until the prison population, now at more than 18,000, falls to 17,280 — 96 percent of 18,000 — as required by the emergency bill.

Lawmakers and prison officials hope these moves will avert a federal takeover of the system.

Higgins said he was heartened by McMillan's language in his decision, particularly a phrase in which the judge says any action by the court should come after the Legislature "has read-dressed the questions of money, and after the Department of Correction has had a reasonable time to make use of a new set of appropriations...."

"Reasonable time." Those words warm us very much," Higgins said.

Mavretic Suggests Union Of States Opposed To Regional Waste Sites

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina should trade its membership in a Southeast compact for low-level radioactive waste for a new pact with states that agree to take care of their own, a state representative says.

Rep. Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, said Tuesday that if North Carolina leaves the eight-state compact that chose it to host a waste site in 1992, it could create a domino effect that will force Congress to re-examine the whole idea.

"It might be North Carolina's largest contribution to the whole issue," Mavretic told the Joint Select Committee on Low-Level Radioactive Waste.

Mavretic asked the staff of the committee to consult with Texas about forming a compact that would let each state handle its own wastes without violating laws governing interstate commerce.

He said North Carolina was chosen by "lottery" as the regional host and should have no qualms about leaving the compact.

Linda Little, director of the Governor's Waste Management Board, said the idea was unworkable.

"The costs are going to be absolutely prohibitive," she said. "No matter where you look, you're talking about big money."

Ms. Little estimated it would take 250,000 cubic feet of radioactive waste a year to make a facility cost effective, while North Carolina generates about 80,000 cubic feet.

Mavretic, however, said the cost figures were suspect because they came from utilities.

"If you were Duke Power or Carolina Power & Light ... and you certainly did not want to be the first power companies in America to handle your own wastes, would you set your prices very high?" he said.

Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, one of two North Carolina members on the 16-member compact commission, said he doubted Congress would go along with the idea.

"We don't have the convenience of moving in and out and in and out (of compacts)," he said.

Swaggart Denies He Planned Takeover

By MARTIN STEINBERG
Associated Press Writer

Jimmy Swaggart, rejecting accusations he masterminded a "diabolical plot" to seize the $172 million PTL empire from Jim Bakker, suggested the evangelist was a "cancer" that needed to be excised from the body of Christ.

In TV interviews Tuesday night, Swaggart repeated denials he was behind any attempt to take over the 500,000-member PTL television ministry by revealing that Bakker had had an extramarital affair.

He also criticized Bakker ally Oral Roberts for his $8 million, do-or-die fund drive, and denied he forced a fellow Pentecostal minister in Louisiana to resign by spreading sexual misconduct allegations.

Bakker resigned last week from the South Carolina-based TV ministry, admitting he had an affair with a woman seven years ago and saying he had been blackmailed. On Monday, he said he quit to thwart a "diabolical plot" to take over PTL, which stands for Praise the Lord or People That Love.

Bakker's attorney, Roy Grutman, on Tuesday identified Swaggart as being behind the takeover plot.

In an interview with the WBRZ-TV of Baton Rouge, La., Swaggart said the charges were a "smokescreen" to cover Bakker's "nefarious" activities.

On "The Larry King Show" Tuesday night on the Cable News Network, Swaggart said: "In one sense of the word, it's a sad day for the church of the Lord Jesus Christ."

"And in another sense of the word it's a very glad day, because this cancer has been excised that I feel has caused the body of Christ untold reproach...."

And on ABC's "Nightline," in an interview that Swaggart said would be his last on the subject, he asserted that Bakker's resignation was "a very painful experience, but it's something that needed to be done."

Asked about Roberts' fund drive, he said, "I think it's very inappropriate.... I think that this terrible situation in Tulsa and this situation going on in South Carolina is bringing terrible reproach to the Kingdom of God."

Roberts has said God told him to raise $8 million by March 31 or he would be "called home."

In New York, Grutman told a news conference Swaggart had gone to prominent believers and at least one newspaper with "exaggerated and distorted" information about Bakker's sexual liaison of seven years ago.

"It was part of a plan that would have accomplished the ouster of Jim Bakker and if that had occurred, would have enabled Jimmy Swaggart to take over PTL," Grutman said.

He said Swaggart's feud with Bakker stemmed from the latter's decision to remove Swaggart's show from the PTL network because Swaggart's "condemnatory, un-Christianlike, personal attacks on other churches which are not in keeping with the message of PTL."

Swaggart was not involved in blackmailing Bakker for $115,000, but found out about it and tried to use the information against Bakker, Grutman said.

JIMMY SWAGGART

Secretary Says She's Sincere 'Churchwoman'

By GERALDINE BAUM
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

Jessica Hahn, a secretary whose sexual liaison with evangelist Jim Bakker figured in his decision last week to give up his multimillion-dollar PTL empire, defended herself this week as a sincere churchwoman who spent most of her adult life working for a Long Island faith healer and his congregation.

"I've spent my life in the church," Ms. Hahn said. "I was in at nights and working in the office during the day. My first job was cleaning toilets. Nobody asked me to. I just did it."

Last Thursday, Bakker revealed that he had paid money in "blackmail" over the 1980 sexual encounter and resigned as president and chairman of the board of PTL, which stands for both "Praise the Lord" and "People That Love."

But Monday, appearing with his wife, Tammy, in Palm Springs, Calif., on a taped segment of the PTL cable television show, Bakker said a takeover attempt of his empire was the underlying reason he turned his 500,000-member charismatic ministry over to Moral Majority leader Jerry Falwell, a Baptist fundamentalist. The revelation of the sexual encounter was the first step in that plot, he said.

Ms. Hahn, 27, said that from the time she graduated from Massapequa (N.Y.) High School until recently, she worked full-time at the Massapequa Tabernacle Church for Gene Profeta, a charismatic minister who started preaching to a few in a tent in 1970 and now attracts thousands to a brand-new brick church.

It was there that Ms. Hahn met John Wesley Fletcher, a traveling evangelist who in the 1970s occasionally set up his tent to preach next to Massapequa Tabernacle. Ms. Hahn confirmed a report that Fletcher would later set up the Dec. 6, 1980, encounter between Ms. Hahn and Jim Bakker in a hotel room in Clearwater Beach, Fla.

Ms. Hahn confirmed the 1980 encounter with Bakker and said she later received "a few dollars" of the $115,000 that PTL reportedly paid after Ms. Hahn complained. She insisted there was "no blackmail" but refused to give a detailed account of her part in Bakker's downfall.

Of Fletcher, Ms. Hahn said she used to babysit for his children on occasion but did not consider him a friend. Profeta, she said, was a trusted friend who knew nothing of her meeting with Bakker.

Ms. Hahn, who said she was hiding from the media in her South Shore apartment, complained that her family was being harassed. "I just want this whole thing to blow over and for my family to be left alone," she said, stroking her black dog, Missy. A thin woman with flowing hair, Ms. Hahn wore black jeans, a black top and heavy gold jewelry.

"I didn't come forward in the first place," she said. "There were other people who used the information. But I didn't want to hurt anybody. I didn't want to hurt Jim." She refused to elaborate.

Future Of Bakkers' Real Estate Still Uncertain

FORT MILL, S.C. (AP) — PTL evangelist Jim Bakker and his wife, Tammy, amassed at least $700,000 worth of real estate and cars in recent years, but it's uncertain what holdings they will keep now that Bakker has resigned from the PTL ministry.

The figures on the Bakkers' holdings were compiled from previous stories by The Associated Press on PTL and the couple.

The 47-year-old evangelist resigned as PTL president and turned the ministry over to the Rev. Jerry Falwell last week, saying he had been blackmailed after a sexual encounter with a New York secretary seven years ago. In a videotaped statement aired Monday, Bakker said the sex scandal was just the beginning of a "diabolical plot" to take over the ministry which reported $129 million in revenues last year.

Bakker attorney Norman Roy Grutman on Tuesday said the takeover plot was hatched by television evangelist Jimmy Swaggart, with whom Bakker has feuded. Swaggart denied the charge.

Bakker has not said how his departure will affect his assets, and repeated calls to PTL's vice president for public relations, Neil Eskelin, were not returned Tuesday.

Since his resignation, Bakker and his wife, Tammy, have been in seclusion in Palm Springs, Calif.

The Bakkers are in the process of selling a house they bought in Palm Springs in 1984 and buying another one there, The Charlotte (N.C.) Observer reported. The transactions have not been finalized, but the Bakkers have been in the new home since February, the newspaper said. The value of the new home could not be learned Tuesday.

In addition, the Bakkers own a mountainside house overlooking Gatlinburg, Tenn. The PTL ministry also provided homes for the evangelists near PTL headquarters in Fort Mill and a Florida condominium.

The Bakkers bought the first Palm Springs home for $449,000, saying they used their own money. The same year, Bakker bought a new Mercedes-Benz for $45,000 and a 1953 Rolls Royce for $55,000

Bakker May Return To Active Ministry

DUNN, N.C. (AP) — PTL founder Jim Bakker could be preaching again as an Assembly of God minister within two years if he accepts an invitation to stay in the denomination, the North Carolina district superintendent for the church says.

Bakker resigned from the Assemblies of God as well as his PTL television ministry last Thursday. But district superintendent Charles Cookman said Tuesday the door is open for Bakker to return.

"Jim Bakker is one of ours. There is an open door of restoration available to him through his church, the Assemblies of God," Cookman said.

"According to church documents, there is a restoration-rehabilitation process that is open to all Assemblies of God ministers and Jim Bakker will not be an exception to that," Cookman said.

Cookman said a board must decide on the punishment to be meted out to Bakker, but he said whatever action is taken will be based on what occurred according to Bakker's admission as well as Bakker's standing with the church.

Swaggart Faces Suit

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — An attorney for Jimmy Swaggart says there is no foundation to a $90 million lawsuit filed by evangelist Marvin Gorman, which accuses Swaggart of trying to bankrupt Gorman's television ministry by spreading tales of sexual misconduct.

"I've read his complaint. It's totally unfounded and full of nontruths," said Swaggart's attorney, William Treeby, a codefendant in the lawsuit filed Tuesday by Gorman in state district court in New Orleans.

Gorman said in the lawsuit that he had committed "an immoral act" with a woman in 1979. But he said he repented and felt he was forgiven by God.

He said in the lawsuit that he resigned in July as pastor of the First Assembly of God Church in New Orleans after Swaggart joined church's officials in a conspiracy to defame him.

Some Still Manage To Avoid Paying Income Taxes

By JIM LUTHER
AP Tax Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — High-income Americans are finding it more difficult to escape the federal income tax, but 325 well-heeled citizens still managed to put together enough big deductions to pay nothing, the Treasury Department says.

Another 3,605 couples and individuals with incomes above $200,000 paid a tax of less than 10 percent — less than that paid by a typical two-earner, four-member $40,000-a-year family.

But the percentage of over-$200,000 earners paying no tax on 1985 returns dropped to the second-lowest level since Congress began requiring the annual reports in 1976. About one of every 1,000 top earners got off scot-free on returns filed in 1985, less than half the figure of a year earlier, when 579 paid no tax.

The Treasury offered no explanation for the decline, saying it had not had time to analyze the figures. A former congressional analyst, Joseph Minarik of the Urban Institute, suggested that several tax changes that took effect in 1984 were responsible.

He mentioned a less-advantageous depreciation deduction for buildings, several accounting changes and a crackdown on tax-shelter arrangements that the Internal Revenue Service defines as abusive. While those changes affected relatively few people, they "are the kind of thing that could affect you if you were making over $200,000 a year and trying to pay zero tax," Minarik said.

Analysts say there is even less chance for the wealthy to escape taxes under the landmark tax overhaul enacted last year. It includes a major revision of the "minimum tax" rules aimed at ensuring that high-income earners and profitable corporations pay some tax, regardless of how many legitimate deductions they have.

The latest figures reflect income earned in 1984 and filed on returns in 1985.

The number of upper-income people who paid no tax or less than that paid by more-typical wage-earners dropped slightly, to 3,930, or about 13 of every 1,000 people at that income level. A year earlier, 4,134 of the 249,319 with incomes over $200,000 (about 17 per 1,000) paid less than 10 percent of their earnings in federal income tax.

A two-earner family of four with $40,000 income and average deductions paid 12 percent to the government on returns filed in 1985, as did a typical single person earning $30,000. A one-earner, four-member family with $20,000 income paid about 8 percent.

Most wealthy people pay a substantial tax, the report shows. Sixty-four percent of the 310,042 people with incomes over $200,000 paid between 20 cents and 50 cents of each dollar to the government. Treasury said 566 paid more than 50 cents on the dollar; 11 of them paid a tax of over 80 percent.

Thirty-seven percent of the 310,042 high earners used deductions to avoid tax on at least half their income. That was up from 34 percent of 249,319 the previous year.

Interest paid was the biggest tax-saving device for most of the 325 upper-income non-taxpayers. Next in line was the foreign tax credit, which eliminates $1 of U.S. tax liability for every $1 paid to a foreign country. The third-most-popular was the 10 percent credit for investment in business equipment, which was repealed last year.

The over-$200,000 non-taxpayers reported wages averaging in excess of $260,000 and taxable capital gains of more than $362,000. Their interest income averaged more than $144,000. Most of them reported large losses from businesses, partnerships or farming.

Their average itemized deductions doubled from a year earlier, to more than $562,000. The biggest average deduction, claimed by 32 of the group, was the $583,000 for casualty or theft losses.

How They Avoided The Tax

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here, according to a Treasury Department report, are some of the ways 325 couples and individuals making more than $200,000 earned their money and managed to pay no federal income tax on returns filed in 1985:

- 204 claimed interest deductions averaging $366,000, more than double the average of a year earlier.
- 218 itemized deductions, at an average of $562,018, again up by more than 100 percent.
- 14 claimed medical deductions, averaging $135,500.
- 193 made contributions to charity, averaging $63,000.
- 32 took a writeoff for a casualty or theft loss, averaging $583,000.

On the income side:

- 190 reported wages or salaries, averaging $260,616, double the previous year.
- 300 received interest, averaging $144,633.
- 227 reported dividends, averaging $64,203.
- 61 had net business income, averaging $160,410.
- 64 reported business losses, averaging $458,203.
- 4 had a farm profit, averaging $163,500.
- 38 claimed farm losses, averaging $189,895.
- 166 had partnership losses, a favorite tax-shelter device; they averaged $459,663.
- 74 reported partnership gains, averaging $374,797.
- 194 had net taxable capital gains, or profits from the sale of stocks and other assets. They averaged $362,650. The 60 percent of capital gains that was not subject to tax averaged $430,835.

Domenici Says Budget 'A Joke'

By ROBERT A. ROSENBLATT and DEBRA WHITEFIELD
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

WASHINGTON — Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., throwing a cloud over Congress' ability to write a federal budget for next year, said Tuesday that the annual budget-writing process was "a joke" and called for Congress to prepare two-year spending plans with strict deficit controls.

Domenici, the top-ranking Republican on the Senate Budget Committee, said that Senate Republicans would not cooperate in preparing a fiscal 1988 budget unless they were convinced that Democrats would agree to legislation reforming the budget process.

Budget Committee Chairman Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., said that Democrats intended to go ahead and issue their own budget soon for fiscal 1988, which begins on Oct. 1.

Meanwhile, partisan wangling also intensified in the House, where Republican leader Robert H. Michel of Illinois insisted that Democrats should say what programs they plan to cut and what taxes they plan to raise. House Republicans, he said, will continue to boycott the budget-writing sessions until Democrats offer a spending program.

House Budget Committee Chairman William H. Gray Jr. responded angrily: "Here we go again. We expected a legislative process, not a diplomatic negotiation. Instead, we have another delay and another excuse for the president to lambaste the Democrats."

The partisanship could leave Congress unable to write a budget. Although Democrats control both houses of Congress, it is unlikely that all Democrats in both the House and the Senate could unite around a single package of spending cuts and tax increases.

Their goal is a combination of expenditure reductions and new revenues totaling $36 billion to enable Congress to reduce the 1988 deficit to $108 billion, the goal of the Gramm-Rudman deficit reduction law.

So far, the House Budget Committee has made virtually no progress in writing a budget. In the Senate Budget Committee, Democrats have been meeting privately to devise a plan.

Domenici, who ran the Senate committee for six years until the Democrats won control of the Senate in November, complained in an interview that Congress often ignored its own budget when it passed individual spending bills. "What we've got now is a joke," he said.

In addition to recommending that Congress adopt budgets and spending bills that cover two-year periods instead of just one, Domenici called for automatic spending reductions if the deficit exceeded congressionally established targets.

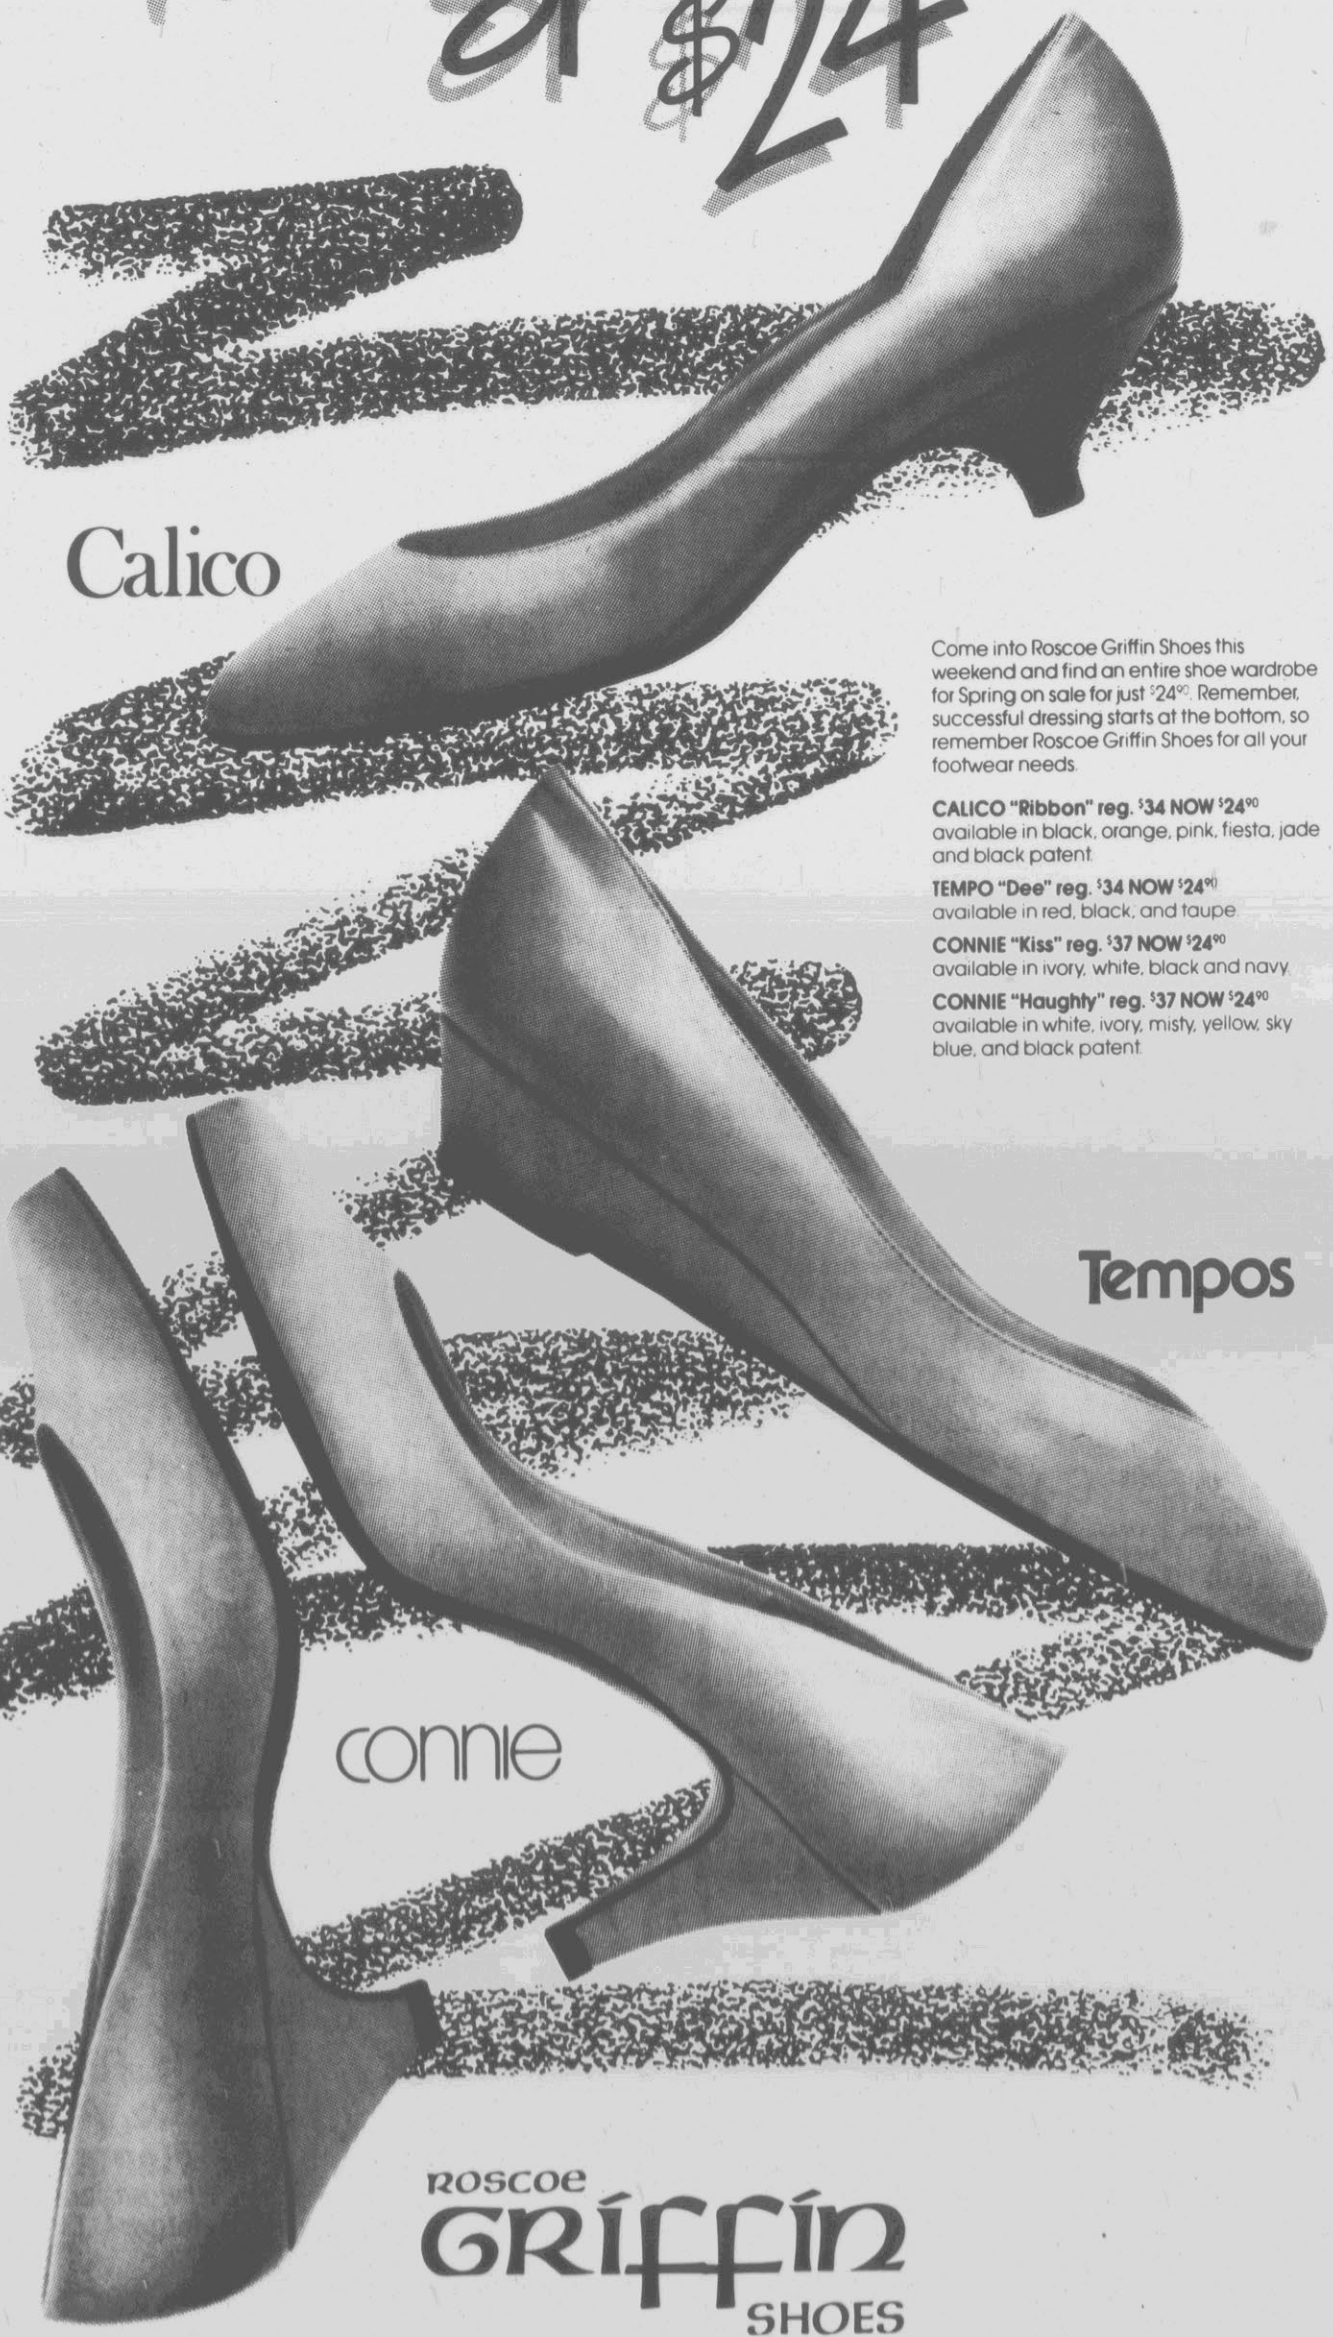

The Supreme Court ruled the automatic spending cuts of the Gramm-Rudman act unconstitutional because the General Accounting Office, an arm of Congress, participated in executing the law. Domenici would delete the GAO's role.

"We need to see some willingness to reform the process," Domenici said.

Chiles said that the Democrats would proceed with the process anyway.

Domenici "is my friend and sincere in wanting to make some changes," Chiles said in an interview. But he added, "There's a little bit of hypocrisy to say another process, a two-year budget, will take care of the problem," said Domenici.

Haig Begins Candidacy With Visit To Tiny Dixville Notch

By WENDY MITMAN
Associated Press Writer
DIXVILLE NOTCH, N.H. (AP) — Newly announced presidential contender Alexander Haig opened his campaign by courting the nation's first voters — all 35 of them — as if they were a vast constituency.

"As Dixville goes, so goes America," the former GOP secretary of state told supporters, voters and reporters Tuesday at a small room at The Balsams resort ringed with photographs of candidates past.

The citizens of Dixville Notch, most of them employees of the resort, traditionally cast the first votes in New Hampshire's leadoff primary every four years, although their record for picking winners is poor.

On Election Day, Dixville Notch's polls open before dawn — earlier than anywhere else in the country — and the town's voters go in front of TV cameras to be the first in the nation to cast their ballots for president.

Haig, 62, announced his intentions in the morning in New York and opened his New Hampshire headquarters in Manchester in the afternoon, complimenting the state's voters as smart people who don't buy packaging, labeling or imagery.

The retired Army general then boarded a helicopter for Dixville Notch with his wife, Patricia, and daughter, Barbara.

There he told voters that the GOP has faced tough times for the past several months, including the failed Iceland summit and "this Iranian brouhaha."

The 1988 election will let voters decide whether the "renaissance of spirit" brought about under President Reagan will "carry us successfully through the turn of the 21st century or be a brief — although very happy — footnote" in U.S. history, Haig said.

Haig said he opposes apartheid in South Africa but said economic sanctions against the country and pulling American companies out will only hurt the black majority. He also said he opposed sending covert aid to rebels in Nicaragua.

For Haig, Dixville Notch was one of many stops on a tour that was to lead him next to Iowa. For Dixville Notch residents, it was another in a series of whirlwind candidate visits.

"They're working to get the vote," said Linda Tillotson, who seemed unimpressed by the candidate and press entourage. "It's just like getting a bunch of mail from one candidate ... if you read his mail, he's in your brain more often."

Rick Tillotson said living in Dixville Notch affords the "rare opportunity ... to have people take the time to let us know them personally."

While in Manchester, Haig called

New Hampshire residents "the essence of America."

New Hampshire is a state "where the electorate looks at the candidates," Haig said. "This is not a state that's sold a bill of goods by propaganda or a media blitz but which eyeballs each candidate and looks for the qualities that each candidate brings."

"I think in 1988 that leadership, experience and competence are going to be at the centerpiece of the American electorate," he said.

Voters will "wonder who is sitting across the table from who is clearly the most adept, capable — and perhaps for that the most dangerous — leader of the Soviet Union since the days of Marxist-Leninism," Haig said.

There Are Some Who Chose Not To Run For Presidency

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Two more people announced this week they are not running for president. That brings the total of prominently announced noncandidates to 10.

More than 240 million other Americans also can truthfully say they are not running.

But, because the refusniks were at least on someone's list of possible candidates, their declarations of noncandidacy made news.

So did the announcements of the four who have so far declared themselves candidates for an election still two baseball seasons in the future.

Latest to join the presidential race is Alexander Haig, the former secretary of state, former White House chief of staff and former NATO commander. He is in the company of former Delaware Gov. Pete duPont on the Republican side and former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt and Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri on the Democratic.

The reason most cited by those who have dropped out is family responsibilities.

The evening before Haig's Tuesday announcement, former U.N. ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick, a Republican, and Sen. Albert Gore, D-Tenn., made statements that they were not running.

First to bow out was Democratic Sen. Edward M. Kennedy. He bought time on Boston television on Dec. 19, 1985 — yes, that's nearly three years before the election — to announce he would not be a presidential candidate in 1988.

"I know that this decision means that I may never be president," said the senior senator from Massachusetts. The reason: his children deserved more of his time than campaigning.

Mario Cuomo, the governor of New York, started Democratic pulses racing in 1984 with his keynote speech at the San Francisco convention. But he took himself out for 1988 saying he couldn't perform adequately as both governor and candidate. And besides, he said, it was a family decision. "We'd all have to go to Iowa and do this thing. It would be a strain on everybody."

Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., a favorite of his peers in Congress, decided against running in 1984 after toying with the idea and did it again last week. "A campaign means a total disruption of one's life and the life of his family," he said. "It would mean a total disruption of the closeness my family has cherished."

In January, Colorado's Sen. Bill Armstrong issued a statement that "if there were an overriding reason to do so, I would run for president; but I do not think this is the case." There were plenty of other outstanding Republican leaders, he said.

Two months later, Gov. James R. Thompson of Illinois, also a Republican, said he needed to stay home to advance his programs and to spend time with his family. "I can't be an absentee governor," he said.

During two days in late February, two Democrats announced they would not run. Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois said "there was a fair amount of interest but I would be fooling you if I said there was a large draft out there." And former Gov. Charles Robb of Virginia said "I have retired from elective politics and I hope to stay there."

Howard Baker, the former senator from Tennessee, left the presidential scene when he became President Reagan's chief of staff last month, although there is still some speculation he or another noncandidate could be drafted at the GOP convention in August.

Gore added his name to the presidential non-runner list, saying: "I'm not running for anything but the job I have." Gore said that "every once in a while someone mentions it. But it hasn't affected my thinking on it. I just want to be the best senator for Tennessee I can."

Kirkpatrick said — for the thousandth time — that she is not a candidate for anything and she said it is "not necessarily" time to have a woman on a Republican ticket.

Pentagon To Chart Airspace Policies

By NORMAN BLACK
AP Military Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon may not be able to resolve rural residents' complaints of being "bombed" and "strafed" by warplanes, but it has decided it's got to bring some order to the process of setting aside airspace for military training.

The Defense Department, in a Feb. 24 letter to the General Accounting Office, officially concurred with a new audit's conclusion that the Navy and Air Force have been approaching airspace management in a haphazard fashion.

Because it has "not been a high priority in the Department of Defense," the military services have not attempted to forecast or coordinate their requests to restrict airspace, said the GAO, the congressional watchdog agency.

The result, the agency added, has been the deployment of high-speed fighters to bases that don't have sufficient restricted airspace for training purposes, and which have little prospect of obtaining rights to such airspace without touching off bitter fights with residents and the civilian aviation community.

While offering a few caveats, the Pentagon agreed it was time to centralize planning and better define its needs for airspace.

"By July 1987, the Department of Defense plans to develop a directive that will require the services to develop and maintain airspace plans, use these plans to help make aircraft basing and mission decisions and share these plans with the Federal Aviation Administration and affected states," the Pentagon wrote the GAO.

The 27-page audit by the GAO, initiated on its own authority last year, was published Monday.

Reports Say Casey Masterminded Contra Aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional investigators believe former CIA Director William J. Casey got former White House aide Oliver L. North to organize a military supply operation to the Nicaraguan Contras that would hide CIA involvement, a published report says today.

The New York Times quoted two unidentified senators and a representative on the special committees investigating the Iran-Contra affair as saying they have clear indications that Casey, who is hospitalized with a brain tumor, masterminded the Contra aid effort.

The newspaper quoted other lawmakers and legislative aides as saying Casey turned to North to mask CIA's involvement and to avoid having to report the matter to Congress. From 1984 to 1986, Congress banned military aid to the Contra rebels fighting the leftist Nicaraguan government.

"Casey's fingerprints are everywhere," one lawmaker told the Times. Another said, "North surely needed the expertise and help of the CIA to do all the things he did in Central America."

The lawmakers did not say what specific evidence they had to indicate Casey's involvement, said the Times, adding that Casey may have told North that the president wanted him to do it.

They said they did not know whether Casey was involved in channeling to the Contras profits from the secret sales of weapons to Iran.

Meanwhile, the Senate votes today for the third time on whether to cut off a filibuster that is blocking action on a proposed freeze of U.S. military aid to the Nicaraguan rebels that Congress approved last year.

But even before the vote, Democratic leaders said their real goal was to demonstrate they can muster the 51 votes needed to kill the aid program completely later in the year. The Reagan administration is seeking to give the Contras $105 million in aid for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1.

On Tuesday, the Senate split 50-50 on the question of whether the filibuster should be ended. On Monday, the vote was 46-45. It takes 60 votes — three fifths of the 100 senators — to choke off debate.

A CIA spokeswoman, asked late Tuesday about the Times report, denied any involvement of senior CIA officials, including Casey, in any private military aid to the Contras.

"The CIA had a longstanding policy, which it reiterated to employees twice, of avoiding agency involvement with the Contras' private benefactors. There is no basis for stating that senior agency officials authorized any activities contrary to that policy," said spokeswoman Kathy Pherson.

The commission headed by former Texas Sen. John Tower, in its report on the sale of arms to Iran and the purported diversion of funds to the Contras, concluded there was evidence that North assumed "a direct operation role" in sending privately purchased arms to the Contras when aid was banned by Congress.

Casey, before he resigned to undergo brain surgery, had acknowledged the CIA helped North transfer U.S. arms to Iran. He said he did not learn of any diversion of funds to the Contras until last November.

But members of the Senate Intelligence Committee have complained that Casey's testimony to them was misleading and that he did not pass on suspicions brought to him in October by a senior CIA analyst and a New York businessman that the profits might have been diverted to the Contras.

A Republican lawmaker was quoted as saying Casey's involvement would explain how a relatively low-ranking Marine officer such as North, who was unlikely to have acted without orders, could have directed such an important foreign policy operation. It also would explain why North believed he had the authority to use money from the arms sales to help the Contras, the lawmaker said.

In other developments: —The Justice Department repeated denials Tuesday that Attorney General Edwin Meese III intervened at the request of former National Security Adviser John M. Poindexter to block indictments of smugglers shipping guns to the Contras. The latest denial came after the Village Voice on Tuesday, quoting unidentified White House and Justice Department sources, said Meese blocked the indictments after responding to a request from Poindexter that the investigation could imperil the Contras' efforts against Nicaragua's government.

—Independent counsel Lawrence E. Walsh asked Bandar bin Sultan, Saudi Arabia's ambassador to the United States, to answer questions about the Iran-Contra affair, according to unidentified sources cited in today's Washington Post. Former National Security Adviser Robert McFarlane has said the ambassador arranged for millions of dollars in contributions to the Contras that began at a rate of $1 million per month in 1984. The ambassador has denied personal or Saudi involvement in funding the Contras. Walsh and Frederick G. Dutton, the Saudi government's attorney, declined to comment on the Post report.

Moslems Cite Heavy Toll By Soviets

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Soviet air attacks and commando raids killed hundreds of civilians and Moslem guerrillas in northern Afghanistan in retaliation for a guerrilla rocket attack on Soviet territory, guerrilla officials said today.

A Pakistan newspaper, meanwhile, reported that the toll from a series of Afghan bombing attacks on Pakistani border villages Monday was 147 dead and 176 injured. Government officials in Islamabad on Tuesday put the losses at 85 dead and 13 wounded.

Jamiat-i-Islami, the dominant guerrilla group in northern Afghanistan, said new reports described massive destruction in Afghanistan's Kunduz province along the Soviet border, with waves of Soviet jets and helicopters bombing villages and towns.

The group quoted guerrilla reports from Kunduz as saying hundreds of people were killed.

"Many people have been killed, many villages have been destroyed and the Soviets are everywhere," said a guerrilla officer, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Soviets forces launched their air attacks and commando raids five days after guerrillas bombarded Soviet territory across the Amu Daryu River with 107mm rockets on March 9, the guerrillas said.

Guerrilla officials said Tuesday that up to 12 Soviets were killed by the rockets and Western diplomats based in Islamabad said they also had received reports of the rocket attack.

Helicopter gunships and jet fighter-bombers from bases in the Soviet Union began bombing villages in the Imam Sahib district of Kunduz province March 14, the guerrillas said. Elite commando units then were dropped from helicopters, surrounding villages and guerrilla posts, they said.

Many guerrillas were trapped and killed in the attacks and others were surrounded by attacking Soviet troops, the officials said. No specific casualty figures have been received on guerrilla losses, but it is unusual for the insurgents to admit any serious losses.

Western journalists are rarely allowed into Afghanistan and reports often cannot be checked.

People's Congress Opens In Beijing

BEIJING (AP) — Premier Zhao Ziyang today opened the annual session of the National People's Congress with a pledge to continue economic reform, but said 1987 would be a year of austerity and grappling with low productivity.

China's second major goal, Zhao said, would be to oppose "bourgeois liberalization," the current phrase for favoring Westernization and capitalism over socialism.

"Immense efforts must be made to eliminate the pernicious influence of this erroneous ideological trend," Zhao said.

The opening session of the 16-day meeting of China's legislature was attended by 2,719 delegates, including former Communist Party General Secretary Hu Yaobang.

It was Hu's first public appearance since he was ousted as party chief Jan. 16 for failing to crack down on student pro-democracy demonstrations in December and January and stop the trend of bourgeois liberalization. There was brief, scattered applause as he entered the auditorium.

Hu waved after sitting down in the second row on the rostrum two seats from Zhao, who has been acting Communist Party general secretary.

Zhao said China has been successful in curbing bourgeois liberalization, which he blamed on "weak and lax" leadership and said resulted in the student unrest.

He said if allowed to spread unchecked, Western liberal ideas would "plunge our country and society into turmoil."

But, he said: "Under no circumstances is it permissible to stifle democracy on the pretext of opposing bourgeois liberalization."

The National People's Congress is constitutionally the highest state organ with sole authority to enact laws and amend the constitution, but long has been regarded as a rubberstamp body. In recent years it has taken a more decisive role in putting final touches on government policies, but ultimate power remains in the grip of the Communist Party.

Williams-Fisher Vows Exchanged

KITTRELL — Oak Ridge Baptist Church was the setting Saturday at 4 p.m. for the marriage of Julene Faye Fisher and Larry Brooks Williams. Dr. Roger Crook officiated at the double ring ceremony.

Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. Gene Fisher of Rt. 1, Kittrell. She graduated from Vance Senior High School and East Carolina University. She is employed by the New Bern-Craven County school system.

The bridegroom is the son of Bernard Thomas Williams and Frances Williams. He is a graduate of William Edloe High School, Hardbargers Business School and served in the U.S. Army. He is presently employed by the U.S. Postal Service in Raleigh.

Nancy Shearin was pianist for the ceremony. Mary Nell Hight sang "It Seems I've Always Loved You," "Evergreen" and "The Lord's Prayer."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was attired in a white gown of chiffon over taffeta with silk Venise lace and schiffli embroidery. The fitted bodice, which featured a Victorian neckline over a sheer English net yoke trimmed with a deep schiffli embroidered ruffle, was accented with designs of silk Venise lace and schiffli embroidery. The long, full chiffon sleeves extended to English net cuffs trimmed with silk Venise lace. The flared chiffon skirt featured a pyramid of lace at the center front that extended around the skirt and chapel train. Her organza covered cap was accented with seed pearls and had a back organza pouf flowing into a double layer fingertip veil with pencil edging. She carried a cascade bouquet of pixie carnations and snowdrift mums tied with white satin ribbon and streamers.

Linda Susan Roberson, cousin of the bride, was matron of honor and wore a blue satin gown with fitted bodice, sweetheart neckline and double cap sleeves trimmed with bows. A matching spray of baby's breath adorned her hair. She carried a long-stemmed mum with greenery and blue satin bow.

Bridesmaids were Shannon Williams of Garner and Eva Blackburn of Greenville. Their gowns and flowers were designed identical to that of the honor attendant. Natalie C. Hight was flower girl and wore a formal blue gown of sheer polyester lined in taffeta with a jewel neckline. The gown had a raised waist with satin bow trim. The skirt had a lace flounced hemline. She carried a white basket with flowers tied with blue satin bow and streamers.

The bridegroom's brother was best man. Other groomsmen were Steven Fisher, brother of the bride, Donald Williams, brother of the bridegroom, and Bobby Bourne of Raleigh. Brooks Williams was ring bearer. Tammy Hight directed the wedding.

The bride's parents and brother entertained at a reception in the fellowship hall of the church. Guests were greeted by Mr. and Mrs. Joe Hight of Henderson.

The couple will live in Raleigh after a wedding trip.

A dinner party was held at Middleburg Steak House after the rehearsal Friday night. The bride-elect was also honored at a miscellaneous shower.

MRS. WILLIAMS

Bridal Policy

A black and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements in The Daily Reflector. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a one column picture. During the second week, a one column picture will be used with a write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement.

Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to The Daily Reflector one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

CLARIFICATION

An article in Sunday's Lifestyle section failed to note that Patricia Wilkes is director of the Cornerstone Baptist Church's "Taking Charge" physical fitness program.

Since 1960, Pitt County's population has increased from 69,942 to approximately 95,000.

Love Was In The Cards

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Last year when I was a freshman at Tulane University, I read in your column (The Times-Picayune) that the Marines at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, were "lonely" and wanted mail, so I wrote a friendly letter to a Marine (any Marine) telling him all about myself. Much to my surprise, I received a wonderful five-page letter from Lance Cpl. Mark Dennis — a native New Yorker. I answered immediately and enclosed my picture. He wrote again and sent me his picture. (He's very handsome!) Soon we were often exchanging letters and there were hour-long long-distance telephone calls!

Mark was promoted to corporal and transferred to a base in Florida. The best news is that we have fallen in love through the mail. Mark flew to New Orleans and we met for the first time when I picked him up at the airport on a rainy Thursday night in December. Our weekend was like a fairy tale!

We exchange letters and phone calls almost daily now. From pen pals we became sweethearts dreaming of the future. I flew to Florida to spend Valentine's Day weekend with Mark, and it's like a dream come true.

How can I thank you, Dear Abby, for giving fate a hand by publishing that address in your column last April? — VANESSA McMILLAN

DEAR VANESSA: Don't thank me, and don't thank fate. You reached out to cheer up a lonely Marine, and in so doing, you caught the gold ring. Congratulations and all the best to both of you!

DEAR ABBY: Some young relatives of mine are getting married. Bonnie is 19 and Chuck is 20. The other evening a friend (not a relative) was over and the kids were here. This friend congratulated the bride, then asked her what she wanted for a wedding present. Then Bonnie said, "How much did you want to spend?"

I nearly fainted! The friend was obviously taken aback, but she hemmed and hawed and never did give Bonnie a direct answer. I got in to it, and saved the situation by telling the friend that Bonnie was registered at such and such a store downtown.

Later I got into an argument with Bonnie's mother. She thought Bonnie's response was perfectly OK. What do you think? — IN THE MIDDLE

DEAR IN: Bonnie's response was frank and forthright — although somewhat startling. The answer you provided in the interest of "saving the situation" was the one Bonnie should have used.

DEAR ABBY: A very bright, single and absolutely beautiful young woman recently came to work in our office, and I would like to ask her for a date. There's only one problem. She wears a very strong perfume, and too much of it.

Geometric Shapes Add Appeal To Vest

Pat's Pointers
Pat Trexler

You won't often create so much drama with so little effort. Eye appeal of this knit sweater vest is guaranteed by the interplay of geometric shapes and two contrasting shades of yarn.

There is virtually no shaping involved in this intriguingly designed garment. It's worked quickly with double strands of yarn on size 10 needles in two rectangles that are simply seamed up the sides, front and back. The lightweight, silky acrylic yarn used in the pattern can be machine-washed and dried.

Easy-to-follow directions are written for small, medium and large sizes, with finished bust measurements of 36, 38 and 40 inches respectively. The gauge on large needles is four stitches per inch.

To obtain directions for making Two Easy Pieces, send your request for Leaflet No. Z-032287 with $2 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler Crafts, The Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 419148, Kansas City, Mo. 64141.

Or you may order Kit No. K-032287 by sending check or money order for $14.95 for small or medium or $15.95 for large to Pat Trexler Crafts at the same address. The kit price includes shipping charges, full instructions and yarn in your choice of peach with flamingo, ruby with silver, taupe with natural, or Ming blue with white.

One of the joys of working with plastic canvas is the ease of finishing. There is no blocking to worry about and assembly is truly beginner easy.

When you want to join two pieces together, the easiest — and often most effective — way is with the basic overcasting stitch, also known as whipped edging or the lacing stitch.

Simply hold the two pieces together with right sides out and wrong sides facing each other, and with the holes of each piece lined up over one another. Then just whip or lace them together. To do this, bring the threaded needle up through one matching pair of holes; carry it over the edge and bring it up in the adjoining pair of holes; carry it over the edge and bring it up in the adjoining pair of holes. Continue along the edge or edges to be joined, taking an extra stitch or two in the corners, as needed, for good coverage.

In starting or finishing a yarn strand, always secure the ends under previously worked stitches or — if there are no stitches near the edge — start by working over the yarn "tail" for the first inch or so.

For ease in securing the yarn, I recommend that you always work toward the open end of any boxlike shape. Here is the preferred working order for joining the pieces of such a shape. First, join all side pieces to the bottom piece. Then join each of the sides to the adjoining piece, starting at the bottom and working to the top.

The same overcast, whipped or laced stitch can be used to cover any raw edges that are not to be joined to any other edge. You might want to try a couple of more advanced edging and joining stitches, however.

To work either the picot or binding stitch described below, it helps to mentally number the holes along one edge. For the picot stitch, bring the needle up in hole 1; take it to back of work and bring it up in hole 3. Now, back up and bring it up in hole 2, which you skipped over in working the second stitch. Skip hole 4 and bring needle up in hole 5; back up and bring it up in hole 4. Continue in this manner all around. Often when working this stitch, I make no special effort to completely cover the corners as the stitch itself has a rather airy look.

By way of contrast, the binding stitch is a very solid stitch, giving the best coverage of any finishing stitch. It is also a little more involved. To avoid a lot of repetition, I will just give you the sequence of hole numbers and you will know that I mean for the needle to be brought up in each hole in the order given. The sequence is as follows: 1, 4, 2, 5, 3, 6, 4, 7, 5, 8, and so on in this manner. This is not quite as complicated as it may seem from reading this, so practice it on a scrap of canvas. It's a really beautiful finishing stitch and well worth the effort on some projects. I should add that it is really a "yarn-eater," though, taking about two and a half times as much yarn as the overcasting stitch.

Best Kind Of Friend Gives At All Times

By REDBOOK
A Hearst Magazine

The proverbial friend in need may not be a friend indeed — that kind of good friend may be bad for you.

"We operate on the belief a friend in need is a true friend," clinical psychologist Mervin R. Smucker said in an article in the March issue of Redbook, but the article points out that the best kind of friend sees you through good times as well as bad.

"The need for fair weather friends is often grossly underrated because we have the mistaken idea that a real friend is a friend in need and that other friendships aren't nearly as important," said Smucker, formerly director of clinical education at the Center for Cognitive Therapy at the University of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia.

Some friends seem almost gratified by our troubles but indifferent or even hostile to good news.

"Some friends want confirmation of their particular negative world view," said New York City psychotherapist JoAnn Magdoff.

Smucker said this "misery loves company" type "depends on other people's misery to mitigate her own."

Other foul weather friends rush to your aid to avoid facing their own problems or to spice up dull lives with your misery.

Joan Odes, a Millburn, N.J., psychotherapist and marriage counselor, said, "Many people fantasize about being very powerful, and thrive on having needy people around them."

Smucker said foul-weather friends could have a profoundly negative effect by reinforcing miseries.

"Fair weather friends don't reinforce you for being a complainer or being miserable, so they may prompt you to bounce back quickly," he said.

How can you spot the foul weather friends in your life? Here are some signs to watch for.

Do you "bite your tongue" in front of your friend when you are feeling happy and funny?

Do you hesitate before phoning her with good news, or feel guilty when you do?

Do you feel your good news isn't so good once she's done with it?

Do you have the feeling she is taking your problems a lot harder than you are?

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market declined slightly today, meeting with more resistance from profit-takers after Tuesday's mixed session.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks slipped 3.55 to 2,365.63 in the first half hour of trading.

Losers outnumbered gainers by 5 to 4 in the overall tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 481 up, 602 down and 499 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 28.75 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

Analysts said several seasonal forces continued to work in the market's favor.

For one thing, they said, money managers at investing institutions appeared still to be doing some last-minute buying as they prepared their portfolios for first-quarter reports to clients.

For another, equity mutual funds are presumed to be receiving a steady stream of new money from investors making individual retirement account contributions for 1986 before the April 15 deadline.

But brokers said many traders looking past those temporary influences found the temptation strong to cash in some of their gains after the market's runaway rise since the start of the year.

Losers among the blue chips included General Electric, down 7/8 at 110 1/2; International Business Machines, down 1/4 at 152 1/2; and International Paper, down 1/4 at 105 1/2.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks dropped .34 to 170.74. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .17 at 339.48.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average rose 5.40 to 2,369.18, marking its sixth consecutive record close.

But declining issues outnumbered advances by about 8 to 7 on the NYSE, with 738 up, 850 down and 402 unchanged. Big Board volume totaled 189.85 million shares, against 189.07 million in the previous session.

UNC Petition

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — A student group at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill is soliciting signatures from campus faculty members in an effort to force a meeting of the UNC endowment board April 7.

Members of Action Against Apartheid, a campus anti-apartheid group, began circulating petitions among faculty Monday, said Dale McKinley, a leader of the group.

The faculty petitions will be sent along with a letter to each of the seven members of the UNC endowment board, McKinley said. The letter urges the members to appear at a special board meeting on the steps of UNC's South Building at noon April 7.

The April 7 date marks the anniversary of campus workers tearing down shanties erected in March 1986 in front of South Building, the campus administrative building.

Santa Clara plan "casual social engineering heedless of individual rights."

The plan was challenged by Paul E. Johnson, who was denied promotion in 1980 when the job of road dispatcher went to Diane Joyce. Both had considerable experience working as road yard clerks with the transportation agency.

Johnson said he was more qualified because he scored two points higher than Ms. Joyce on an oral examination for the dispatcher job. Also, the examiners who conducted the test unanimously recommended Johnson for the promotion.

The agency adopted a voluntary affirmative action plan in 1978 aimed at promoting women, minorities and the handicapped. At the time, not one of the agency's 238 skilled craft positions was held by a woman.

The affirmative action plan has a long-range goal of assigning 36 percent of the agency's jobs to women, minorities and the handicapped.

Smith

But Randy Doub, in a nominating speech for the Martin-Hawke slate, said Griffith has been far more active in the party than Smith, and said Griffith would support Martin's choice for state party chairman.

Smith, Doub said, has "loyalty to the Congressional Club and Helms. Support the governor ... stand behind him" by electing Griffith, Doub urged.

Doub, a member of the state board of transportation, was Martin's campaign manager in Pitt County.

One Republican, active in local and state politics, said following the convention that the Helms-McCarty faction had "registered 65 people in the past two weeks" in an effort to gain control at the county convention. He asked not to be identified.

Another active party member, who asked not to be identified, said "it's unfortunate that the party has been taken over by the extremes. We've worked so hard over the past few years to build credibility."

There were 257 delegates present at the convention, held at the Willis Building at the intersection of First and Reade streets.

In a farewell speech, Tom Herndon, the outgoing party chairman, said the Republican presence in Pitt County had increased during his term of office and said that the party is "becoming a force to be reckoned with in eastern North Carolina."

Herndon said when he took office "a little over a year ago," that there was "internal dissension" and he promised to work toward "unification" of the party.

"There is still some dissension within our ranks," Herndon said, but "we care about differences as we care about similarities. I am confident we can join together" to elect Republican candidates in the next election.

Suit Settled

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Collier Cobb and Associates, a Charlotte-based insurance broker, has reached an out-of-court settlement in a sex-discrimination lawsuit filed 15 months ago by the U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

Indian Wins Suit Over Oil Rights

MUSKOGEE, Okla. (AP) — A U.S. district judge has awarded $685,000 to a Cherokee Indian who was penniless and living in a car before he learned oil and gas was being pumped from his land.

Austin Walker, 47, sued the government after learning that in 1983 he had signed away leasing rights to property he owned in Creek County for $4,000 even though substantial gas and oil had already been pumped from his land.

Judge H. Dale Cook said in his ruling, issued Thursday, that the legal process had broken down when the Bureau of Indian Affairs allowed an attorney who represented the oil company, Bristow Resources Inc., to also serve as Walker's attorney.

Court records show Walker was penniless in 1983 when he went to the Bureau of Indian Affairs office in Muskogee to ask if he had a check for a grazing lease on the Creek County land he inherited from his grandmother.

When Walker told a clerk he knew nothing about a lease he allegedly signed with Bristow for oil and gas production on his land, he was sent to Rex Herren of the bureau's Office of the Solicitor, which provides legal advice to Indians.

The oil and gas drilling agreement had apparently been signed by someone else who had falsely represented himself as owner of the land, court records indicate.

Cook said Herren notified court officials and the oil company lawyers about the erroneous drilling lease. He said an employee of Bristow Resources contacted Walker and offered him money to sign a new leasing agreement.

McGraw, Smith Lead ECU Sweep

Since it was a double dipper, East Carolina's Pirates came up with a double solution — Jay McGraw and Gary Smith.

McGraw came up with the game winning runs batted in in both games against Rider College, 6-5 in the first and 7-5 in the second. The latter came on a two-run homer in the bottom of the seventh inning.

Smith, who came on in relief in the first game to pick up his fourth win, came back in the second to notch number five against one loss this year.

“Gary felt he could throw three or four more innings, but I don't think he could have gone much longer. We were ready to relieve him if it had gone further,” Overton added.

The games featured hits in each by second baseman Steve Sides, who has now hit safely in his last 16 games, including four going into last season. “Sides is doing an excellent job for us,” Overton said. “Not only is he swinging the bat well, he's getting important hits for us.”

As for McGraw, who has been struggling this spring thus far, Overton pointed out that that has been the rightfielder's custom — a slow start and a fast finish.

For the Pirates, it represented another come-from-behind effort. In their 12 games thus far, they had recorded two shutouts. In the remaining 10 games, they have trailed in all but one — and rallied to win in all but two.

Rider, a strong hitting team, used the home run rout in both games. Chet Coddington hit two in the first game while Ken Kuehner added one. That accounted for all but one of the runs in that game.

In the second game, Kuehner and Nick Vallorosi each homered, picking up four of the five Bronc runs.

Rider jumped into the lead with three first inning runs in the opener. Coddington got the first on a solo homer with one away. Pat Larkin was hit by pitcher Jim Peterson, making his second start after coming off arm problems. Kremer then followed with a second shot out of the park in left for the 3-0 lead.

East Carolina came back with one in the bottom of the first. With two away, Mike Sullivan singled and McGraw walked, as did Calvin Brown, loading the bases. A walk to Chris Cauble brought in Sullivan.

A second run scored in the second. Mike Andrews singled and moved up on a wild pitch. Two ground outs, the latter by John Adams scored Andrews.

Rider added one in the third for a 4-2 edge. Kremer reached on a two-base error and took third on a single by Kuehner. Vallorosi then grounded out, scoring Kremer.

East Carolina got a third run in the bottom of the frame. McGraw singled and stole second. A wild pitch moved him to third and he scored on Thomas' single.

The Pirate tied it up in the fourth with still another single run. David Ritchie singled and stole second. He moved up on an out and scored on Sides' single to left.

In the sixth, the Pirates struck for two more to take a 6-4 lead. Andrews walked and was sacrificed up. Adams walked as did Sides, loading the bases. With two away, McGraw delivered a single to left, scoring both Andrews and Adams.

Rider closed to within one in the seventh as Coddington again homered, but the rally was ended there.

McGraw had two hits for the Pirates in the game while Coddington and Dave Wandling each had two for Rider.

Rider again went up with two runs in the first inning of the second game. Coddington walked and Kuehner

No Double This Time

Chapman Appears To Be ECU Choice

East Carolina University has apparently offered the head basketball coaching position to Tom Chapman, head coach of Gannon College.

Gannon was the national runner-up for NCAA Division II honors this season.

Chapman was on campus this morning, and ECU had, Tuesday night, notified the media of a 10 a.m. press conference.

However, Bob Roller, Sports Information Director at the school, called media members back this morning, and said that the press conference had been postponed. No new time for it was scheduled. Roller later said that there would likely be no official word today.

Late this morning, Chapman and Dr. Ken Karr, ECU director of athletics, were meeting Karr's office. John Ruby, Chapman's chief assistant at Gannon, told the Erie, Pa., newspaper that the hangup was the length of contract offered. ECU was offering a three-year pact, while Chapman was asking for a four-year contract, Ruby related.

Chapman emerged as the top candidate for the job vacated by Charlie Harrison after a tenure of five years. Ironically, he was a finalist when Harrison was hired in 1981.

At least four other head coaches had been mentioned as candidates. They include Mike Steele of Division III DePauw, Bobby Hussey of Davidson, Bob Huggins of Akron and Mike Stewart of Middle Tennessee State.

Stewart was reportedly offered the job last week, but turned it down. Huggins was apparently dropped as a candidate following his interview, one source said.

Jaguar Thinclads Sweep Tri-Meet

FARMVILLE — Farmville Central won every individual event, led by four wins by Rodney Gorham as the Jaguars romped to an easy victory in a three-way track meet Tuesday.

Gorham captured the high jump, triple jump and both of the hurdle races to lead the way for the Jaguars. Marty Baker added three wins, in the mile, 800 and two-mile, while Anthony Carmon won the 220 and the long jump.

Farmville finished the day with 108 points while D.H. Conley was a distant second with 47. Southern Wayne finished with just nine points.

Conley won only two events, taking two of the three relays.

Farmville is now 2-0 and hosts Greene Central and Pamlico on Thursday. Conley returns to action on Thursday at North Lenoir.

Southern Miss, LaSalle Win

NEW YORK (AP) — One team's poison might be another team's candy.

That could be the lesson for Southern Mississippi Coach M.K. Turk, who put his team in a zone defense during a decisive stretch of its 82-75 victory over Nebraska in the National Invitation Tournament semifinals Tuesday night.

But Turk might think twice about doing the same thing against La Salle in the final on Thursday.

La Salle took advantage of Arkansas-Little Rock's zone defense in the other semifinal, hitting eight of its first 12 shots from 3-point range to build an 18-point lead late in the first half. When UALR went man-to-man in the second half, the Explorers took only one 3-point shot, but went on to a 92-73 victory.

“I was happy to see the zone,” La Salle Coach Bill “Speedy” Morris said. “Making our first four 3-point shots got us off good and relaxed us.”

La Salle, 20-12 will play Southern Mississippi, 22-11, in Thursday night's 50th NIT championship game.

Randolph Keys had 24 points and nine rebounds and combined with John White to score all of Southern Mississippi's points during a 15-2 second-half spurt that broke open a close game.

Nebraska led 60-58 before White, who had 19 points, started the streak with a 3-point goal, giving the Golden Eagles a 61-60 lead with 7:17 left.

At that juncture, Turk went to a zone defense.

“We had defensive problems early and in the second half we struggled until we went to the zone when we got ahead 61-60,” Turk said. “Man-to-man pressure is our usual defense, but we had to use the zone when we got ahead because their fast break was hurting us.”

With White scoring eight points and Keys seven, the spurt ended with the Golden Eagles ahead 73-62 with 2:58 left, and Nebraska got no closer than the final score.

Southern Miss made only two of its first 15 shots and fell behind 18-5 in the first six minutes of the game. After making 54.2 percent of their field-goal attempts in three previous NIT victories, the Golden Eagles hit just 43.9 percent against the Cornhuskers, 20-12.

“It was not a pretty win, but it was a great win,” Turk said. “We aren't beautiful to watch to anyone but our wives and girlfriends.”

The Golden Eagles got back in the game with a 14-0 spurt late in the first half, giving them their first lead at 30-28. After that, the game at 12 more lead changes until Southern Miss grabbed the lead for good at 61-60.

In the first game, Tim Legler had 26 points, Rich Tarr 23 and freshman star Lionel Simmons 21 for La Salle against UALR, 26-10.

Guards Legler and Tarr had three 3-pointers each during the Explorers' first-half bomb fest when they collected all but one of their nine 3-point goals.

“No team in the country can play us like they tried to,” Legler said. “Temple played a zone against us and we were up 20 at the half. I think they didn't know we were such good shooters.”

Legler said La Salle's game plan was to establish an outside game to open up the inside game for Simmons, the team's leading scorer with 19.8 points per game.

“It just happened that we tried three pointers because they extended the zone out that far,” the 6-foot-4 guard said.

UALR switched to a man-to-man defense after La Salle led 43-25, and the Trojans cut the deficit to 45-34 at halftime. In the second half, the Explorers abandoned the outside game and went inside to Simmons, who had nine points during a 21-13 streak that rebuilt La Salle's advantage to 66-47 with 10:26 left.

“We just didn't miss in the first half,” Simmons said, “and when they went man-to-man, that freed me up. I knew the ball would come in to me.”

Arkansas-Little Rock got 19 points from James Dawn, 15 of them in the first half, and Paul Springer had 12.

Trojans Coach Mike Newell said a lack of depth forced him to use a zone defense.

“We don't have the depth to match them, only seven players,” Newell said.

Keys, Southern Mississippi's leading scorer, was scoreless in the first 14 minutes of the second half, but had 11 points the rest of the way.

“He's a money player for them and when he got going, that won the game for them,” Nebraska co-captain Brian Carr said.

Carr, who scored the last eight points during an early 11-0 Nebraska run, finished with 12. Derrick Vick led the Cornhuskers with 19 points, and Bernard Day and Anthony Bailous had 14 each.

“They outplayed us during the spurt and made some 3-pointers,” Nebraska Coach Danny Nee said. “We just couldn't come back. I think the two beat teams will be playing for the championship.”

Vikings Rip Farmville, 13-2

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer
FARMVILLE — It may have been the first baseball game of the year for Bronswell Patrick and Sherwood Wilder, both of whom had been busy helping the Vikings' basketball team win the state title, but the two appeared to be in midseason form as they helped the Vikings roll over Farmville, 13-2, in high school baseball action Tuesday.

With only Monday's practice session under their belts, Patrick and Wilder helped Conley rap out 11 hits and also combined with starter Brian Bullock to hold the Jaguars to four hits.
 "I wanted all of them to throw," Conley coach Allan Wilson said of his team's latecomers. "But, I didn't want to throw them too much. I also wanted them to hit the ball. That's what we've been missing."

Bullock pitched the first four innings, giving up three hits and two runs while striking out seven. Patrick came on in the fifth and pitched two scoreless innings with four strikeouts. Wilder then came on for the final inning and struck out the last batter to end the game.
 "Bronswell and Sherwood have thrown some," Wilson said. (But) that's the first live hitting they've faced."

Patrick also collected three hits and drove in a run while Bullock had two hits and two RBIs for the Vikings. Brian Joyner also hit a two-run homer in the five-run sixth inning.
 Conley went ahead early and never trailed.
 In the third inning, Bullock opened with a double, went to second on an error and moved to third on a single by Karl McLawhorn. Bullock then scored on Butch Mills' ground out to make it 1-0.
 The Vikings added three runs in the fourth. Joyner reached on an error on the third baseman and went to second on a wild pitch. Kervin Vines walked and Bullock followed that with an RBI single that scored Joyner.
 Vines later came home on an error by the second baseman before Robbie Nichols doubled home Bullock to make it 4-0.
 The Jaguars made their first and only attempt at a rally in the bottom of the fourth.
 With one out, Mike Vandiford walked before Chris Ross ripped a homer to make it 4-2. That was as close as the Jaguars would get.

Conley added three runs in the fifth.
 Patrick singled then moved home on consecutive errors. Joyner reached on one of the errors and moved to third on the other one. Wilder also reached on the first error, then stole second. Joyner then stole home to make it 6-2. Wilder also came home that inning, on a ground out by Jim Faulkner.
 The Vikings added five more runs in the sixth, with Joyner's two-run homer highlighting the scoring.
 Farmville had a chance to rally again in the fifth. Patrick had replaced Bullock on the mound and had given up a single and two walks to load the bases with one out.
 Nichols then caught Shea Terrell's pop fly and Patrick struck out Vandiford to end the threat.

"We're still not swinging the bats well," said Jaguar coach Bill Davis. "We've just got to keep our heads up, keep working hard and hopefully things will jell."
 Ironically, Farmville was not able to use pitcher Alexander Daniels, who like Patrick and Wilder, had missed the early part of the season while Farmville's basketball team advanced to the state finals.
 "He hadn't worked enough to pitch," Davis said.
 Conley improves to 2-1 on the year while Farmville drops to 1-2.
 "It was a close game to start with," Wilson said. "We started hitting the ball. They started making mistakes."

Facing A Known Team No Consolation For Syracuse

By The Associated Press
 For the Syracuse Orangemen, familiarity breeds caution.
 The Orangemen, winners of the NCAA Tournament's East Regional, will face a team they know well in the Final Four at New Orleans on Saturday. That opponent, Providence, has been the surprise team of yet another wild college basketball championship tournament.

He dismissed the fact Syracuse, 30-6, has won 15 straight games against Providence, which was fourth in the conference this year. The Orangemen tied with Georgetown and Pittsburgh for first place and then lost the conference tourney final to the Hoyas.
 "They're the hottest team in the tournament," Boeheim said. "Everyone else has had to struggle. All the regional finals and semifinals came down to the last shot or the last play, except theirs. They're playing the best of anybody at this stage."

to try to push the pace with us. It's going to be a very fast game."
 Probably not as fast as the nightcap, however. The top-ranked Runnin' Rebels of Nevada-Las Vegas, in the Final Four for the first time in 10 years, won't do much walking. Neither will Indiana, which built its 28-4 record on solid defense — a trademark of all Bobby Knight teams — and a high-powered attack led by All-America guard Steve Alford.
 "It will be a real physical game," said Jerry Tarkanian, coach of the Rebels, 37-1. "Bobby's teams always play that way. If we play a real good ball game, I think we have a chance. I hope we are a team of destiny."

East Carolina's Lady Pirate tennis team rolled up a 9-0 victory over Mt. Olive College Tuesday.
 The Lady Pirates were never contested in the match, losing only 13 games throughout the whole afternoon.
 The victory boosts East Carolina to 11-8 on the year. The Lady Pirates play host to St. Mary's on Thursday.

Tarboro Tops Jags

TARBORO — Tarboro High School eased past Farmville Central in a nine-hole golf match held at the Tarboro Country Club Tuesday.
 Tarboro finished the afternoon with a team total of 160 while Farmville Central came in with a 178 total.
 Steve Brewer led Tarboro with a 35 while Lee Edmondson had 40, Jim Stocks had 42 and Will Aycock had 43.
 Farmville Central was paced by Mark Williams with a 39, while Lance Parker and Gary Joyner each had 46 and Parker Ledbetter had 47.
 The loss drops the Jaguars to 1-3 on the year. They return to action on Thursday, hosting Conley, Zebulon and Southern Wayne at the Farmville Golf and Country Club.

"They're not the same team we beat twice," Syracuse guard Sherman Douglas said. "They've raised their game a notch. They're using the 3-pointers more. They're more aggressive. The two games we played them, we had to come from behind, which showed us they can beat us."
 Providence's 88-73 win over Georgetown, which had routed the Friars 84-66 in the Big East tournament earlier this month, proved there are no favorites in postseason.
 "Anyone that's overconfident at this stage shouldn't be in college," Syracuse Coach Jim Boeheim said.

"It would be understating it to say it is a shock," Providence Coach Rick Pitino said of being 25-8 and in the Final Four. "The biggest shock is the way we have done it."
 "We played on Alabama-Birmingham's home court and that didn't bother us. One of the toughest defensive teams we faced all year was Austin Peay. Then we played the SEC (Southeastern Conference) champions and the Big East champions and executed very well."
 Pitino, who once was an assistant at Syracuse under Boeheim, said he doesn't look for a repeat in style of last Saturday's Georgetown game. The Hoyas shut down the Friars' vaunted outside game but, while guards Billy Donovan and Delray Brooks struggled, Providence dominated the inside.
 "We're going to react to what they give us," Pitino said. "We're going to try to push the pace and they're going

"I think we've really improved, but at times we play really immature, run the offense too quick," forward Daryl Thomas said. "That leads to a bad defensive conversion. ... The other team gets it out and runs it up."

Rose Girls Win Opener

Lisa Leisten scored the only goal of the game as the Rose girl's soccer team won its opening match of the year, 1-0, over the Eastern North Carolina School For the Deaf Tuesday.
 Rose took seven shots at the goal while NCSDF took only four. Senior goalie Adrienne Harrington had her first shutout of the year and had five saves.
 Rose improves to 1-0 and 1-0 in the Big East Conference.
 The Rampettes next game is Friday at Rocky Mount.

"We're going to react to what they give us," Pitino said. "We're going to try to push the pace and they're going

Boyd Leads Valkyries Past Lady Jaguars, 9-4

FARMVILLE — Trellan Boyd went 3-4 as D.H. Conley's girl's softball team defeated Farmville Central, 9-4, Tuesday.

The Valkyries went ahead 4-0 in the third inning and never looked back. Conley loaded the bases with Miriam Fulford, Boyd and Tabitha Dalton. Three runs then scored on an error on the shortstop.

Gail Cash got the win for Conley, which improves to 4-0. Farmville drops to 1-2.

Chocowinity.....15

COLUMBIA.....9

COLUMBIA — Chocowinity rallied from a 9-0 deficit to gain a 15-9 softball victory over Columbia Tuesday in Tobacco Belt Conference action.

Columbia took the lead with two runs in the first then added seven in the third for the 9-0 lead.

But Chocowinity came back with three in the fourth, then scored six in the fifth, three on a homer by Christie Bradley, tying it at 9-9.

In the fifth, Chocowinity scored four more times for a 13-9 lead. Corinna Paszt reached on an error and scored on a triple by Bradley. Susan Elks singled in Bradley and Dawn Mayo reached on an error. Tracy Dixon hit a sacrifice fly to score Elks and Cheryl Wiggins doubled in Mayo.

The Lady Tribe added three more in the seventh to wrap it up.

Bradley led Chocowinity's hitting by hitting for the cycle. Wendy Dixon, Susan Elks and Vickie Elks each added two. Elizabeth Tarkington had two for Columbia.

Now 2-2, Chocowinity plays host to Creswell on Thursday.

JAMESVILLE — Jennifer Getchel singled home two runs in the first two innings as Jamesville rolled to a 12-1 win over Bear Grass in high school softball action Tuesday.

In the first inning, Carolyn Price doubled and then came home on a single by Getchel. In the third inning, Michelle Peele reached on a fielder's choice. Price then singled to score Peele. Getchel then singled home Price before Val Clark brought home Getchel with a base hit to make it 4-0.

Jamesville improves to 4-1 overall and 2-1 in the conference. The Bullets return to action next Thursday at Behaven.

McGraw, Smith Lead...

slapped still another Bronco homer for a 2-0 edge.

The Pirates used the long ball themselves in the second to take a 4-2 lead, however. Andrews walked and Ritchie beat out a bunt single. Adams singled to drive in Andrews and Sides followed with his fourth homer of the year, scoring all three runs.

Rider pulled back into a tie in the third. With one out, Kremer walked and Vallorosi homered to left, knotting it at 4-4.

Rider then took the lead in the fourth with one. Larkin beat out an infield hit and stole second. He took third on a wild pitch and scored when Coddington reached on an error.

The Pirates tied it again with one in the bottom of the fourth. Thomas singled and was sacrificed up. He scored on Adams' single.

It stayed tied until the seventh when McGraw struck. Adams led off with a walk but went down on Sides' infield grounder. Then, after a popup made two away, McGraw crushed the ball to left.

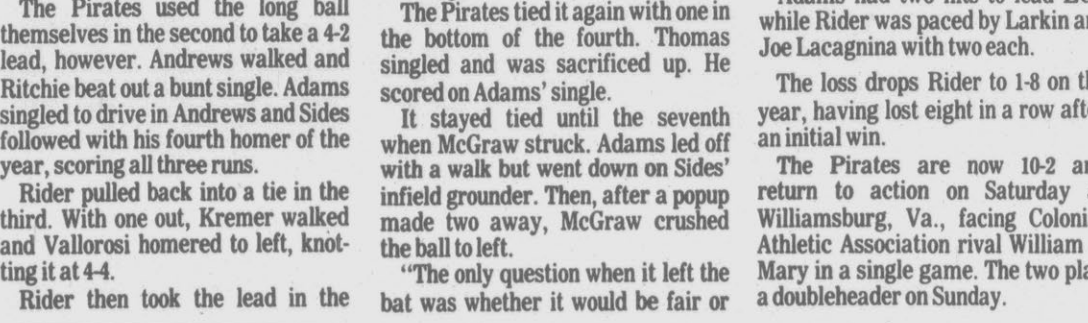

"The only question when it left the bat was whether it would be fair or foul," Overton said. "I couldn't tell, but when I saw their pitcher walk off the mound, I knew."

Adams had two hits to lead ECU while Rider was paced by Larkin and Joe Lacagnina with two each.

The loss drops Rider to 1-8 on the year, having lost eight in a row after an initial win.

The Pirates are now 10-2 and return to action on Saturday at Williamsburg, Va., facing Colonial Athletic Association rival William & Mary in a single game. The two play a doubleheader on Sunday.

Peterson Goes The Distance As Chargers Rout Havelock

HAVELOCK — Ayden-Grifton scored seven times in the first inning and went on to romp to a 15-1 baseball victory over Havelock High School Tuesday.

Ronnell Peterson hurled the victory, going the distance in his first-ever start. He struck out five and walked five as he scattered only three hits.

The first inning put the game away. Billy Miller led off with a walk and moved up on a wild pitch, scoring when Ty Little reached on an error. Gary Eubanks singled and Tony McLawhorn's hit scored Little. Courtesy runner James Woodard stole second and Aaron Harper walked to load the bases. Steven Tucker's grounder got Eubanks at the plate, but Stacy Cole walked to force in Woodard. Peterson singled in Harper and Tucker, and Miller doubled to drive in Cole and Peterson.

Ayden-Grifton added four in the second inning, then scored three times on a homer by Stacy Cole in the fourth. The final run came over in the sixth.

Havelock's only run scored in the fifth.

Miller led Ayden-Grifton's hitting with three while Eubanks, Peterson and Cole each had two, one of Cole's a triple. Andy Amidon had two of the three hits for Havelock.

The Chargers are now 2-3 on the year and play host to North Pitt.

Hoosier Stations To Play By Rules

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Because they don't want to see Steve Alford warming the bench during the Final Four in New Orleans this weekend, three Indiana radio stations say they will stop playing "Stevie Shoot a Three-Pointer" and the "Bobby Knight Bop."

Indiana University sports promotion director Chuck Crabb said WEAG-FM and WENS-FM in Indianapolis, and WTTS-FM in Bloomington, stopped playing the songs when they learned the NCAA had warned that any player named in a song on a commercial broadcast could be ineligible to play in remaining games.

"Three of the four radio stations I've had to contact about playing the songs have all agreed to comply with the request to discontinue the songs," Crabb said.

"They said the last thing they wanted was for any player's eligibility to be in question going into the Final Four."

Crabb said the fourth station, WSTO in Owensboro, Kentucky, is unwilling to stop playing "Stevie Shoot a Three-Pointer," which was written by a WSTO employee.

"Barry Witherspoon, the program director there, says they don't see the song as being sold as a commercial product," Crabb said. "They say they want to study the matter further."

Crabb said the problem began when he heard "Stevie Shoot a Three-Pointer" on WTTS.

Alford received a one-game NCAA suspension in the 1985-86 season because he posed for a calendar made by an I.U. sorority to benefit charity.

"I heard the song, and a note of alarm went off in my brain," Crabb said. "So I contacted our associate athletic director, who talked with the Big Ten, which then sent a request for interpretation to the NCAA."

reached on a fielder's choice that left the bases loaded. A wild pitch brought in Johnson, and Barry Ginn followed with a three-run homer.

The Rams added two more in the seventh.

The Ganns each had two hits, Gary adding a double. West Craven was led by David Boyd and John Taylor, each of whom doubled.

The victory boosts the Rams to 6-2 on the year. They return to action on Thursday, opening Eastern Plains Conference action against C.B. Aycock.

COLUMBIA — Columbia High School pushed across a run in the bottom of the fifth inning to nip Chocowinity, 2-1, in a Tobacco Belt Conference baseball game Tuesday.

Columbia had taken the lead in the first with one run. Then, in the top of the fifth, Chocowinity rallied to tie it up.

Brian Badeau opened the fifth with a single but was forced on Jamie Stokes' grounder. Stokes stole up and scored on Brad Tyson's double to tie it at 1-1.

In the bottom of the inning, however, Columbia came back with a run to win it. Pledger walked and after two outs, stole second. Liverman then singled him in.

Badeau led Chocowinity's hitting with three while Liverman had two for Columbia.

Chocowinity, now 2-3 in the league and 2-4 overall, plays host to Creswell on Thursday.

JAMESVILLE — Jamesville High School took advantage of 17 walks to rout Bear Grass, 16-9, in Tobacco Belt Conference baseball Tuesday.

Both teams scored single runs in the first inning with the Bullets adding two in the second. Bear Grass came back with three in the third for a 4-3 lead, then added three more in the fourth. Jamesville rallied for five in the bottom of the inning, but the Bears added another in the top of the fifth for a 9-8 tie.

The Bullets then scored three times in the bottom of the fifth to take the lead for good. Ernie Coltrain and Ernie Gardner both walked. Eric Spruill singled to score Coltrain. Spruill moved up on the relay and both he and Gardner scored on Jeff Phelps singled for an 11-8 lead.

The Bullets added five more in the sixth while Bear Grass got one in the seventh.

Tommy Mobley and Jake Scott each had two hits for Bear Grass while no one had more than one for Jamesville.

Jamesville is now 3-3 overall and 3-1 in the league. The Bullets travel to Belhaven on Thursday.

Big Decision Awaits Robinson

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

The decision weighs heavily on the broad shoulders of Midshipman 1st Class David Robinson, who continues to sweep college basketball's Player of the Year awards.

Does he become a part-time NBA player while completing his two-year Navy commitment? Or does he hang onto his amateur standing and play in this summer's Pan American Games and next year's Olympics?

For Robinson, who won the Eastman Award on Tuesday, his final days at the U.S. Naval Academy, where he set 33 school records, are clouded by the dilemma. "I am confident I'll be successful no matter which way I go," he said. "But I think one way might be better. The question is, which one?"

Robinson thoroughly enjoyed last summer's world championships and suspects the Pan Am-Olympic amateur perfecta would be just as rewarding an experience. He is almost certain, however, to be a lottery pick in the NBA draft and the right Navy assignment would permit him to start his pro career immediately.

There are other factors involved for the 7-foot-1 Robinson, whose size disqualifies him from sea and air duty and reduced his military obligation from five years to two. One is which NBA team drafts him. Another is the experience of his friend, Ensign Napoleon McCallum.

McCallum, a record-setting running back at the Naval Academy, was drafted by the NFL Los Angeles Raiders. He has combined his Monday-through-Friday Navy duty with a pro football career on Sundays.

"We talk a lot," Robinson said. "For Napoleon, it has been real hard. Practicing all the time, working in the Navy, putting the two together have been real tough for him. He told me he knows the money I'll be offered will be attractive but that I should be careful and live day to day. There will always be a need (in the pros) for a big man. I'll still be seven feet tall in two years."

When he graduates May 20, Robinson will be commissioned in the civil engineer corps on a restricted-list billet, which limits his duty because of his size. When he enrolled at Annapolis, he was 6-7. He just kept growing beyond the limits that planes and ships can accommodate.

"I went to the Academy because I wanted a great education," he said. "Basketball was secondary to me. I felt I had more (academic) potential than I showed in high school. I felt I needed a little discipline."

"With the emphasis on academics and the military, the Academy is a tough place to develop your game. It's easy to get distracted from basketball. If you're not a great player with great potential, you might figure, 'Why waste my time?' When I came to the Academy, I was not a great player and it was not a great program. We had trouble getting 1,000 fans to a game. As I grew, the program grew. That was to my advantage."

Not to mention the Academy's. Now, Robinson thinks Navy is a viable option for high school players interested in getting a quality education in a program that is not a total stranger to the Top 20.

"I think a lot of guys want the education," he said. "That's real important today with the emphasis on academics. I think scholar-athletes will go that route, especially shooting guards or small forwards. If they are realistic about their pro potential and remember the small percentage of players who make it to the pros, they'll take a chance."

"Big men who are pro prospects will still go to the other schools."

Or, perhaps, they'll remember David Robinson and sign on, too.

Wyoming Coach Moves West

SAN DIEGO (AP) — In the battle for Jim Brandenburg's heart, Wyoming more than matched San Diego State dollar for dollar but ended up losing its veteran basketball coach to the allure of Southern California.

At a Tuesday news conference to announce his appointment as San Diego State's new basketball coach, Brandenburg said he relished the challenge of rebuilding an Aztec program that sagged to new lows in 1986-87. He also said he was attracted to the job by the quality of life the city offers.

"I think this is a tremendous community, and I think there is unlimited potential. It's an opportunity I just couldn't afford to turn down," Brandenburg said.

Wyoming Athletic Director Paul Roach, who failed in an 11th-hour bid to change Brandenburg's mind, said he hopes to name a new basketball coach within 10 days.

Roach said he offered to raise Brandenburg's annual pay but could not convince the coach to stay.

"I know the issue wasn't money," he said.

Brandenburg left a Wyoming club that won the Western Athletic Conference tournament and advanced to the Round of 16 in the NCAA tournament before being eliminated last Friday by Nevada-Las Vegas. Last season, the Cowboys were 24-12 and advanced to the finals of the NIT tournament, where they lost to Ohio State.

All five starters from this season's 24-10 Cowboys team are returning next year.

At San Diego State, Brandenburg, 51, takes the reins of a team that suffered through a school record 17-game losing streak en route to a 5-25 record, the worst in the school's history.

He replaced David "Smokey" Gaines, who resigned Feb. 6 but stayed on to coach through the end of the season, when he became San Diego State's assistant athletic director for marketing and promotions.

Brandenburg is no stranger to rebuilding projects. In 1978, he took over a Wyoming program that in the previous eight years had only one winning season.

Fred Miller, San Diego State's athletic director, said Brandenburg was signed to a five-year contract with a base pay of $57,000 a year plus other economic benefits that are being negotiated.

San Diego State and Wyoming are both members of the WAC, and Brandenburg's defection is likely to heat up the schools' rivalry.

Lakers Lose Magic Touch

By The Associated Press
 For one night, the Los Angeles Lakers — the team with the best record in the NBA — looked more like The Gang That Couldn't Shoot Straight.
 The Lakers lost Magic Johnson early in the game with a bruised calf muscle and then had their 10-game winning streak snapped by the Phoenix Suns 108-93 Tuesday night.
 Along the way, the Lakers made only two of 24 shots in the second quarter — the fewest field goals in one period ever in the Arizona Veterans Memorial Coliseum — as they were outscored 28-12 and fell behind 57-42 at halftime.
 "There's not a better team in the NBA to beat outside of the Lakers to come out of a slump," said Larry Nance, who scored 32 points as the Suns snapped a seven-game losing streak.
 "It was our very, very poor game combined with their great game," Los Angeles Coach Pat Riley said after his club fell to 54-15. "It was our mental slippage more than anything else. They were aggressive, they got all the loose balls and second shots. They dominated the boards."

Despite their cold shooting, the Lakers were warmer than Washington's Jeff Malone, a 22.3-point scorer. In what he conceded was "probably my worst shooting night," Malone missed his first 13 shots and scored only six points, getting his only field goal of the game with five seconds remaining as the Bulls lost to Atlanta 96-87.
 Meanwhile, at the other end of the thermometer:
 —Michael Jordan scored 56 points and sparked a 12-point burst in the fourth quarter as the Chicago Bulls held off the Philadelphia 76ers 93-91.
 —Larry Bird made 13 of 16 shots, including his last 10, and added nine assists and eight rebounds as the Boston Celtics rolled to a 111-88 victory over the Cleveland Cavaliers.
 —Mark Aguirre, who became involved in controversy after being ejected from a game on Saturday, scored a season-high 43 points and tied the pro scoring record for the Byrnie Meadowlands Arena as the Dallas Mavericks defeated the New Jersey Nets 119-107.
 —The Milwaukee Bucks set season highs of 78 points in the first half and 135 points in a game in routing the New York Knicks 135-96.

 Elsewhere, it was San Antonio 103, Houston 97; Denver 128, Los Angeles Clippers 119; Sacramento 128, Portland 116.
 Phoenix's Nance scored eight points during the lopsided second period. The Suns also scored the last seven points of the first quarter to trigger a 35-12 burst.
 The Lakers got within 73-65 late in the third quarter but six points from Nance, who had 11 in the period, put Phoenix ahead 83-70 and the Suns led by as many as 20 in the fourth quarter. James Worthy paced Los Angeles with 23 points.
 The Lakers were outrebounded 48-43 and had four shots blocked by the spirited Suns, who had lost 14 of 16 games against Los Angeles dating back to November, 1984.
 The victory was only the third in 11 games for Phoenix interim Coach Dick Van Arsdale, who took over for the fired John MacLeod on Feb. 26.
 "It was a great win, Magic or no Magic," Van Arsdale said. "We lost the last two games against the Lakers and they didn't have Magic in the lineup, either. We were just ready to play tonight."

 Riley said the loss of Johnson may have been a factor in the outcome.
 "There's always a shock when one of your great ones goes down, and you could feel it on the bench," he said. "Magic got kicked in the back of the calf and we'll have to wait and see, but he should be okay. It's the same thing as a charley horse."
Hawks 96, Bulls 87
 Dominique Wilkins took six stitches above the left eye when he caught a stray elbow in the first quarter, but came back to score 31 points as Atlanta moved one game ahead of idle Detroit in the Central Division.
 Atlanta shot 39 percent and Washington 25 percent in a first half that included Wilkins' injury, a near-fight between Atlanta's Spud Webb and Washington's Michael Adams and the automatic ejection of Bulls Coach Kevin Loughery, who picked up two technical fouls for arguing a call.
Bulls 93, 76ers 91
 Jordan scored 56 points and sparked a 12-point burst in the fourth quarter. Jordan tied the game 71-71 with 9:50 left, then stole the ball and scored on a slam dunk 27 seconds later. After a three-point play by Gene Banks, Jordan added a free throw and two more baskets to give the Bulls an 81-71 lead with 5:14 left.
 Philadelphia, led by Steve Colter's season-high 21 points, pulled within 93-91 on Colter's steal and layup with 14 seconds left.
Celtics 111, Cavaliers 88
 Kevin McHale had all his 22 points and Bird had all but two of his 32 in the first three quarters as the Celtics built a 20-point lead and substituted freely in the final period.
 Brad Daugherty had 16 points for the Cavaliers, who scored only 76 points in a weekend loss to Indiana.

Boston held high-scoring rookie Ron Harper, who leads Cleveland with 23 points per game, to just eight, the first time all season he failed to score in double figures.
Mavericks 119, Nets 107
 Aguirre scored 18 points in the first quarter and 17 in the fourth period when Dallas came from behind for its sixth straight victory. New Jersey, which led by nine points in the third period, was ahead 88-84 early in the final quarter. Then Aguirre took over, scoring all of Dallas' points in a 13-4 spurt that put the Mavericks in front for good.
 The spurt put Dallas in control and the Mavericks went on to their 14th victory in the last 18 games. They lead second-place Utah by 7½ games in the Midwest Division. Orlando Woolridge led the Nets with 29 points.
Bucks 135, Knicks 96
 Craig Hodges scored 27 points and Milwaukee opened a 44-30 first-period lead in snapping a three-game losing streak. Ricky Pierce added 24 points for Milwaukee. Trent Tucker scored 19 for the Knicks, who lost for the seventh time in the past eight games. New York played without three injured 7-footers — Patrick Ewing, Bill Cartwright and Jawann Oldham.
 "This game is just what the doctor ordered," Milwaukee Coach Don Nelson said. "It was just a pleasure to let the game come to us for a change. It's the first one we've had like this in a long, long time."
Spurs 103, Rockets 97
 Artis Gilmore scored 24 points as San Antonio avenged a string of five straight losses to Houston. The Spurs had four other players in double figures — Walter Berry with 22, Jon Sundvold 18 and Johnny Moore 17 while David Greenwood had 14 points, 10 assists and 15 rebounds. Houston was led by Akeem Olajuwon with 22 points.

AIDS in Europe

AIDS IN EUROPE — The number of AIDS cases in Europe reported to the World Health Organization has nearly tripled in the past 18 months. This map gives the total number of AIDS cases in each of 12 European countries.

As the disease spreads, more and more European countries are turning to some form of selective screening for high-risk groups to detect the AIDS virus. (AP Laserphoto)

Europe Tends To Favor Selective Screening Of High-Risk Groups To Find AIDS Carriers

By ROBERT GLASS
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — Some European countries have begun or plan selective medical screening of high-risk groups for AIDS, prompting complaints of discrimination and invasion of privacy.

Proponents say selective blood tests are needed to halt the rapid spread of the acquired immune deficiency syndrome, but civil liberties groups say it violates the rights of homosexuals, prostitutes, drug abusers and foreigners.

A survey by Associated Press bureaus in Europe indicates that most governments have rejected mass screening in favor of health-education campaigns. Nationwide screening programs are confined mainly to voluntary tests for antibodies to the AIDS virus in donated blood and transplant organs.

Nevertheless, some authorities have opted for selective and, in some cases, compulsory testing.

The West German state of Bavaria has adopted sweeping measures requiring compulsory screening of all homosexuals, prostitutes, inmates, applicants for public-service jobs and foreigners from outside the European Economic Community from seeking residency.

Belgium has announced it will require foreign students, most of them from central Africa, to submit to annual blood tests for AIDS. Finland has similar plans, and Finns who study abroad would also be tested for AIDS on their return.

Turkey has ordered AIDS screening of all prostitutes and homosexuals, and officials say at least 5,000 have been tested in Istanbul alone since December.

Austria also has included tests for AIDS in regular health checkups given licensed prostitutes.

The French Health Ministry has said it will soon require AIDS screening for applicants for marriage licenses to protect unborn children.

The number of AIDS cases in Europe reported to the World Health Organization has nearly tripled in the past 18 months: from 1,573 through September 1985 to 4,647 as of March 13.

Twenty-six European countries now have reported AIDS, up from 21 in 1985.

Compared with the United States, where as of March 6 there had been 31,982 reported AIDS cases, including 18,462 deaths, the figures from Europe are small. But the disease is following the U.S. pattern in Western Europe, with a doubling of cases every nine to 11 months, and experts are forecasting a European epidemic.

AIDS cripples the immune system, leaving victims vulnerable to infections and cancers. It is invariably fatal and is spread through sexual contact or exchange of blood, as can occur when drug addicts share needles. Male homosexuals, prostitutes and intravenous drug users are most at risk.

With no cure or vaccine expected for at least five years, large-scale screening has been proposed by some as the only possible way to protect the uninfected population.

A Harris poll published by London's Observer newspaper in November found 63 percent of the public favored compulsory nationwide AIDS screening. Eighty-two percent of the 1,050 people surveyed said all visitors to Britain should be tested.

Britain's chief medical officer, Dr. Donald Acheson, told a parliamentary committee that the government is considering screening visitors from high-risk countries, presumably central Africa, where the disease is widespread.

He also said officials were considering anonymous tests for the AIDS virus among hospital patients to determine trends and prevalence of the disease. Under the proposal, patients would not be told the results of the tests.

Marie Staunton, legal officer for Britain's National Council for Civil Liberties, said in an interview that her group opposed any screening that could involve coercion or invasion of privacy.

"The problem with compulsory screening is that it is impracticable to screen everybody, so to screen targeted groups would further expose groups that already suffer from prejudice, such as gay men, to further prejudice," Ms. Staunton said.

AIDS experts convened in March by the World Health Organization in Geneva rejected screening international travelers. They said it would be too costly, impractical and possibly counterproductive.

Dr. Jonathan Mann, the American director of the organization's special program on AIDS, said it can take weeks, or even months, for antibodies to the AIDS virus to show up in the blood after a person is infected. A negative result might be meaningless and could lead to the abandonment of sexual precautions, he said.

But the Belgium government says it will go ahead with plans to require all foreign students on state scholarships, as well as their spouses and partners, to submit to annual blood tests for AIDS.

Of the 207 AIDS cases reported in Belgium, more than half — 113 — have been among nationals from the former Belgian colonies of Zaire, Rwanda and Burundi in central Africa.

Eighty-five percent of 1,262 foreign students studying in Belgium are from central Africa.

Burroughs Wellcome Keeps Tight Security On AZT Drug

RESEARCH TRIANGLE PARK, N.C. (AP) — Burroughs Wellcome Co. officials say tight security at its Greenville plant and an unusual distribution system should keep its much-sought-after AIDS drug off the black market.

"The security measures from the very beginning for this drug were the very same... (as) for narcotics," said S. Winston Singleton, vice president of medical affairs for the company, which is based in Research Triangle Park.

The drug AZT — being sold under the brand name Retrovir — was approved Friday for sale in the United States. It is the only AIDS treatment available by prescription and is expected to remain in short supply for months.

Singleton said the drug is kept under lock and key at the Greenville plant and will be shipped in small orders to pharmacies all over the country. The small shipments will limit the amount that could fall into the wrong hands.

AIDS sufferers will get the drug only after they are approved by a panel of doctors in Maryland and assigned a special identification number. They will be able to get only a month's supply of the drug at a time from pharmacists.

An estimated 15,000 AIDS patients live in the United States, not including people with AIDS-related complex, a condition that is similar to and sometimes precedes the full-blown disease. Another 19,000 have died.

Retrovir prolongs the lives of AIDS sufferers but is not a cure for the disease, which cripples the immune system.

Public Ranks AIDS No. 2

NEW YORK (AP) — AIDS has replaced heart disease in the public mind as the second-most serious health problem in the country, ranking behind cancer, according to a nationwide survey.

The poll, conducted in December for the American Association of Blood Banks, showed that 35 percent of the respondents ranked AIDS as the No. 1 health problem, while 29 percent viewed heart disease as the major threat.

The majority, 52 percent, feared cancer most.

A 1985 poll showed 35 percent of the respondents ranked heart disease as the main health threat, with 27 percent naming AIDS. Fifty-four percent of those questioned in the previous survey viewed cancer as the most serious health problem.

Blood bank officials, reporting the results at a news conference Tuesday, said the poll showed public confusion and "irrational fear" over contracting the deadly AIDS from blood transfusions.

They said 55 percent of those polled believed it was likely that a person could become infected with the AIDS virus from a blood transfusion. These fears were unfounded, they said, since the development of a screening test that has been applied to all donated blood since April 1985.

However, officials at the federal Centers for Disease Control are encouraging the nation's doctors to recommend the AIDS test for some patients who received transfusions between 1978 and 1985.

Many people also had unfounded fears about donating blood, said Dr. Edwin A. Steane, the association's president. He said 27 percent of those polled believed it was likely that a person could get AIDS that way, even though there was no risk whatsoever from donating blood.

The telephone poll interviewed 1,000 randomly selected Americans age 18 and older. Conducted Dec. 12-16 by Hamilton, Frederick & Schneiders of Washington, the poll had a margin of sampling error of plus or minus three percentage points.

New Therapy Offers Hope After Tumor

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
AP Science Writer

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A new form of therapy is providing "some hope" for the first time for victims of the most common form of brain cancer, which until now has been quickly and relentlessly fatal, a researcher says.

Among the 60 patients who have received the experimental therapy so far is Dick Hower, who resigned as manager of the Kansas City Royals baseball team this team after attempting a comeback following surgery.

Doctors are unsure whether they have cured anyone with the new approach, but some of their patients are still alive long after such victims usually die.

The patients were treated at an advanced stage of their disease, when the expected survival is 14 weeks. But some are apparently free of disease more than two years later.

The therapy uses a newly developed technique to rally the body's own immune defenses to fight cancer. In this case, it's being used to attack brain tumors called gliomas. About 15,000 new cases of malignant brain tumors occur in the United States each year, and 70 percent of them are gliomas.

Dr. Deane Brunton Jacques and colleagues began administering the treatment in February 1985 at the Huntington Medical Research Institutes in Pasadena, Calif. He described his results at a meeting of the American Cancer Society under way this week.

"It's not a panacea," he said. "It's highly experimental. But in a disease that's heretofore been 100 percent fatal, at least for the first time there's some hope for these people."

The approach, called adoptive immunotherapy, uses the patient's own white blood cells as the primary assault against cancer. The white cells are separated from the blood and grown for 10 days in interleukin-2, one of the body's natural chemical weapons against disease. This seems to stimulate the white cells to fight the cancer.

All of the patients so far have failed to respond to surgery and radiation. When their cancers recur, surgeons remove as much of the tumors as they can, then fill up the resulting cavity with a mixture of the activated white cells and blood plasma.

Jacques said several of the patients have continued to improve long after the treatment. On CAT scans, a standard diagnostic test, there is often no sign of their cancer.

However, this does not mean they are cured.

"I don't know what the natural history of this disease is, since people don't live this long" with this form of cancer, Jacques said. "One young man recurred over two years later, when I thought he was over the hump."

Of the 60 patients treated, 16 have died. He said everyone else is alive and well with followup times ranging from a week to 26 months.

Typically people with gliomas live just under a year from the time their disease is first spotted. And they survive 14 weeks from the time of recurrence of their disease, which was when these people were treated.

Koop Says AIDS Testing Needed Before Pregnancy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Surgeon General C. Everett Koop and a national blood bank official are urging women to have themselves tested for AIDS before becoming pregnant.

That advice, which came separately Tuesday from Koop and Edwin A. Steane, president of the American Association of Blood Banks, is based on the high probability that a pregnant woman with the virus will pass it to her infant and that the child runs a substantial risk of developing the fatal disease.

Dr. James Curran, AIDS project director at the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta, echoed the recommendation today.

"We've recommended now for the past year that all women with any increased risk of infection with the AIDS virus be tested before contemplating pregnancy," Curran said in an interview on NBC-TV's "Today" show. "This is an entirely preventable condition — the perinatal transmission of the AIDS virus."

Although Koop, Steane and Curran did not cite statistics, some researchers say 30 percent to 70 percent of infected mothers will transmit the AIDS virus to their babies either prior to or at birth.

Moreover, AIDS experts are finding that children infected with the virus seem to develop the disease itself, acquired immune deficiency syndrome, more readily than infected adults.

Koop, a pediatric surgeon who specializes in treating newborns with life-threatening defects before becoming surgeon general, is holding a conference on AIDS in children next month in Philadelphia.

He made his statements regarding pregnant women during a question-and-answer session at the National Press Club in which he was asked about mandatory AIDS testing for people applying for marriage licenses.

"I can't understand why it is so controversial," he said. "I would think anybody who is getting married today would want to be tested and would want to know" whether his or her intended spouse had the AIDS virus.

"One of the things I think is most important about this... is my great concern for the babies who are born to... positive mothers," he said. "I think no woman should contemplate a pregnancy without voluntarily wanting to be tested for the AIDS virus."

Koop, a strong opponent of abortion, picked his words carefully when asked whether abortion is an option for a woman who discovers she has the AIDS virus after becoming pregnant.

"If you wanted to give her all the possibilities that were available to her, you would have to mention abortion," he said.

"It is my understanding that in major obstetrical clinics on the East Coast... where the population has a high incidence of... the AIDS virus, that women who are pregnant under 13 weeks are being advised to have abortions and about 50 percent of those, I understand, are indeed having abortions."

Koop told reporters later that his personal opposition to abortion has not changed.

Steane, at a briefing on the state of the nation's blood supply, said there is no compelling reason for most people who received a transfusion before blood donations were routinely screened for AIDS in 1985 to get the test.

KOOP CAUTIONS — Surgeon General C. Everett Koop draws a hand across his brow Tuesday during a question-answer session at the National Press Club in Washington. Koop urged women who want to become pregnant to have their blood tested for AIDS before pregnancy occurs. He said their is a high probability that a pregnant woman with the virus will pass it to her infant. (AP Laserphoto)

Vicksburg's 'Attic' Is A Treasure Of Memories

By STRAT DOUTHAT
Associated Press Writer

VICKSBURG, Miss. (AP) — At a time when Dixie Democrats are dreaming about having a Southerner in the White House again, Gordon Cotton would much rather talk about the presidency of Jefferson Davis.

You remember Davis, of course. He was a local boy who made good back in 1861, when he was chosen to lead the Confederate States of America in its bid to leave the Union.

That might seem like a long time to some folks, but Cotton, a lanky, gray-bearded son of Mississippi, can make it sound like only yesterday.

"The bell on top of this building rang for four solid hours the day Davis was sworn in over at Montgomery, Ala.," he said the other day.

Cotton's remark came as he stood next to a set of 30-foot Ionic columns on the portico of a two-story stone edifice overlooking the Mississippi River.

The building, once the Warren County courthouse, now is the home of the Old Court House Museum. As such it is a repository of Mississippi memorabilia and a storehouse for some of the Old South's most sacred totems, including part of the inauguration outfit worn that day by Davis, who owned a nearby plantation.

"Jefferson Davis made his first political speeches on these grounds when he was a young man," Cotton says. "His family came to Vicksburg from Kentucky when he was just 2. He grew up in Warren County."

As director of the museum, Cotton spends a lot of his time ruminating over Davis and the role of Vicksburg in the Civil War, referred to locally as the "War of Yankee Aggression."

"Take this building for example," he says. "It took only one direct hit during the 47-day siege of Vicksburg. That was because the Confederates let the word out that they were keeping Yankee prisoners in the courtroom on the second floor."

Cotton's grin made it clear what he thought of this Southern stratagem.

Vicksburg, where Cotton was raised, surrendered to the Union troops on July 4, 1863. Newspaper accounts of the siege are displayed in the museum.

"This is the famous wallpaper edition of the old Vicksburg Daily Citizen," he says, pointing to a yellowed page dated July 2, 1863. "They started printing on wallpaper after they ran out of newsprint during the last days of the siege."

The siege and surrender made such a vivid impression on Vicksburgers that they refused to observe Independence Day for more than a century, Cotton notes.

"We started observing it again in 1976, the bicentennial year," he says. "Immediately following World War II there were three celebrations that coincided with the Fourth of July, but they called them Confederacy Day."

In addition to his museum job, Cotton pursues his penchant for the past in a weekly historical column for the Vicksburg Evening Post, the local newspaper. He gets much of his information from the museum's research library.

"Several books have been researched in our research library," he says. "The building itself is a national historic landmark. It was built by slave labor in 1858."

Cotton proceeded to conduct a brief tour of the building, which was abandoned as a courthouse in 1939 and reopened as a museum nine years later.

Heading upstairs he says, "See this iron staircase? It was made in Cincinnati and shipped down the river by steamboat. Legend has it that when the Yankees first entered the building one of them saw the staircase and said, 'The damned rebels think they can win a war when they can't even build their own steps.'"

Cotton sighs and adds, "That pretty well summed up the problem."

The museum's second floor is dominated by a large courtroom with a cast-iron judge's platform and a 23-foot-high ceiling.

"Jeff Davis went to court here in this room and fought to get his plantation back following the war," Cotton says. "A carpetbagger court ruled against him but he appealed to the state Supreme Court and got it back."

The museum displays include slavery and black history exhibits and collections of Confederate ballots, stamps and money. A tattered flag commands a place of honor on the first floor.

"It belonged to the 21st Mississippi. We call it the flag that never surrendered," Cotton says. "John Collier, a local boy, brought it home wrapped around his body, beneath his clothing. Like a lot of the other Confederate soldiers, he walked the entire way."

Cotton stops in front of a case containing a 2-foot-high, starched Ku Klux Klan hood with finely stitched eye slits.

"That was my great-grandfather's Klan hood," he says. "My aunt gave it to me after I promised I would never show it to anybody."

He scratched his beard and looked at the hood for a long moment.

"You know," he says, "the Klan eventually wound up in the wrong hands, but for a while there, in its early years, it was about the only protection we had. Things were so bad during the period of Reconstruction following the war that you even had to get permission to put flowers on a relative's grave."

Cotton says some people who come to the museum, such as a recent visitor from France, get the wrong idea when they see some of the exhibits.

"The Frenchman told me he got the impression we Southerners wish we'd won the war. Well, I told him that ought to be obvious, even though we know now that things turned out for the better."

"Personally, I feel you can honor your past without wanting to go back to it. I see this museum as a way of honoring our rich heritage. Many of the local residents call us 'Vicksburg's attic.'"

Creek-Cherokee Has Public Radio News For Indians

By DAVID FOSTER
Associated Press Writer

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — His long, black hair hangs freely. A wide leather belt and beaded buckle depicting the Minneapolis skyline secure a pair of faded jeans. Gary Fife, managing editor of the first national daily news show on Indian issues, does not bend to convention.

"I've worked in the business for a long time. I don't have to conform to anybody's standards," he said. "What's an Indian journalist supposed to look like?"

Fife, a 36-year-old Creek-Cherokee raised in Tulsa, Okla., is one of the few American Indian journalists with national experience. He worked 11 years for native news and advocacy groups in Washington, then spent four years in Minnesota free-lancing and running a weekly radio show on Indian issues.

Diane Kaplan, director of the Alaska Public Radio Network, started looking for someone to run a native news show last spring.

"Gary was the logical person," said Kaplan, who had the idea for the program and obtained $60,000 in seed money from the Corporation for Public Broadcasting.

The National Native News hit the airwaves Jan. 5. It is available free five days a week via satellite or telephone to any public radio station.

The 10-minute program, four minutes of news followed by a longer feature, is designed to fit into a variety of formats. A musical lead-in and Fife's smooth delivery make it sound like public radio anywhere, but the stories are purely native:

—The Mohawk Nation in upstate New York negotiates with state officials for 14,000 acres it claims were taken illegally.

—Aleuts in Alaska's Pribilof Islands worry that proposed federal rule changes could further reduce their harvest of fur seals.

—Residents of Santa Cruz, Calif., raise money to send an ambulance to the Oglala Sioux living on South Dakota's Pine Ridge reservation.

"We're trying to personalize native issues — bring them out of the romantic savage or drunken Indian image," Fife said in a recent interview. "We live, we die, we get in trouble. And we get in arguments with the rest of the world from time to time."

Indian news shows already exist, including a weekly feature program broadcast from Minneapolis and a weekly wire service in Washington, but Fife said his was the first such daily program.

He said his service filled a void, reminding listeners daily that native Americans — 1.5 million at last count — are out there. The show also aims to link the country's often disjointed tribes.

"We have to fight a lot of the same battles," he said.

Fife and two assistants augment their coverage with reports from stringers scattered across the country and items from other news services.

About 45 public radio stations, mostly in the West, use the program regularly. Others lift segments for their shows.

Subscribers' initial reactions are encouraging, Fife said, but the program's success depends on financial backing as much as on popularity. Kaplan is seeking additional grants to keep the program alive.

Fife is proud of his Indian heritage but said he struggles to keep bias out of his work, and that it is important to report objectively.

"I'm a full blood myself, and I'd love to see natives progress. But we need to know when mistakes happen, when something goes wrong or situations backfire."

NATIVE NEWSMAN — Gary Fife, 35, is managing editor of the National Native News Service, the first daily news program on native issues to be broadcast nationally. Fife is hoping the program will help erase stereotypes about native American culture. (AP Laserphoto)

FINISHING TOUCH — Earl Peaden and Dennis Thomas of the Staton House Fire Department give a finishing wipe to a new equipment truck members of the fire department built. The used auto parts truck was painted and equipped by the department members, taking about 1,000 hours to complete.

Money to build the truck is being obtained through fund-raisers held each year. This year's fund-raising barbecue will be held Friday. According to department officials, about $12,000 is expected to be raised. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Speed Reading Isn't All You Might Believe

By MARCIA DUNN
Associated Press Writer

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Back in the '60s, when speed reading was the rage, comedian Woody Allen quipped: "I read 'War and Peace' in 15 minutes. It's about Russia."

That's overdrawn, but speed readers don't comprehend more than the gist of a text unless it deals with familiar subjects, two researchers say.

"You don't want your lawyer speed reading," says Marcel Just, a psychology professor at Pittsburgh's Carnegie Mellon University.

Speed reading has its uses and "we don't mean to debunk speed reading," says Just. "But some claims are not accurate."

"One hears, almost anecdotally, about people reading 2,000 words a minute or something fantastic like 10,000 words a minute. Yet, there's seldom, perhaps never, a test of comprehension," he said.

Some people do read fast — even really, really fast — to race through mounds of material, but there's nothing magical or supernatural about that, Just says.

"Many intellectual feats are like that," he adds, citing championship chess as an example. While they are still very impressive, "it's when you analyze them that they get demystified."

By monitoring eye movement with a computerized tracker, Just and Patricia Carpenter, his research partner and wife, have found that speed readers pick out about every third word regardless of size or importance.

The result, they say, is a "grab bag" of information and a vague understanding, but within its limitations there's a time and place for speed reading, depending on the reader's purpose and material, according to the psychologists.

The couple's speed reading study is one of the first of its kind dealing with that skill. The study is reported in their new textbook, "The Psychology of Reading and Language Comprehension."

Speed reading was popularized through Evelyn Wood, a former Utah school teacher who opened her first Reading Dynamics Institute in 1959.

She taught readers to guide their eyes down a page with a rhythmic hand movement and to take in groups of words at a time. She cautioned readers against "saying" the words in their heads, a habit she said slowed them down.

"A person who speed reads and does it correctly can read with better comprehension. I'm sure of it," says Mrs. Wood, who is now 78.

"We've had too many hundreds of thousands of people who could do it."

Since 1959, more than 2 million people have passed through the Evelyn Wood Reading Dynamics program, now owned and operated by American Learning Corp., a subsidiary of Encyclopedia Britannica Inc. The roll included the staff of President John Kennedy and President Jimmy Carter and his family.

Nominees For Supporting Actor Include Top Names

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Academy Award nominees for supporting actor include four well-established performers and one who evoked the question: "Who's Willem Dafoe?"

The well-known actors are: Tom Berenger, "Platoon"; Michael Caine, "Hannah and Her Sisters"; Denholm Elliott, "A Room With a View"; and Dennis Hopper, "Hoosiers."

But Willem Dafoe? Those who had seen his riveting performance as the good-guy sergeant in "Platoon" didn't need to be told who he was. And, like most of the principal figures involved in the landmark film of the Vietnam War, he is likely to become familiar to the general public.

Despite the foreign-sounding name, Willem — a childhood phoneticism for William — Dafoe is a 31-year-old Wisconsin native who seemed destined for a career of sadistic heavies. "It's a matter of physiognomy, I guess — my face and the way I move," he said.

In his film debut he played a biker gang leader in "The Loveless," and his career in crime continued with "The Hunger," "Streets of Fire" and "Roadhouse." Oliver Stone chose him for the role of Sgt. Elias after seeing Dafoe as another insidious villain in "To Live and Die in L.A." Elias, a humane soldier, plays opposite to Berenger's sadistic Barnes. Both, however, are highly skilled killers.

Dafoe, along with other members of the "Platoon" cast, was surprised by the pre-production training in the Philippines.

"It was half-survival training and half-jungle warfare," he said.

"We were totally unprepared for it. They just dropped us off in the jungle and issued us gear. There was no explanation at all. ... We were always asked to do what we weren't prepared to do, and I think that paralleled the experience of a lot of grunts in Vietnam.

"It was unorthodox, but I think it paid off. It really helped to make all the soldierly tasks we had to do become second nature. I developed such a relationship with my weapon that once when I didn't need to draw it from the armory, I was anxious all day."

Berenger, the scarred, demonic Staff Sgt. Barnes, lost 20 pounds during the training period, couldn't sleep and became "cranky, tired and mean" — a perfect condition for his role. Chicago-born, he started acting in "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" at the University of Missouri, studied in New York and worked off-Broadway.

Berenger is the only well-known actor in "Platoon," which has been nominated for eight Oscars. He began in films as the psycho who murdered Diane Keaton in "Looking for Mr. Goodbar." His television credits include "Butch and Sundance: The Early Days," "Flesh and Blood" and "If Tomorrow Comes." He also is remembered for his portrait of the TV star in "The Big Chill."

For his "Platoon" role Berenger obliterated his good looks with unsightly scars. His main concern was not loss of glamour, but of sleep: "I worried about how long it would take to get into the makeup in the morning. It could have been up to two hours, and our call was already a sleep-robbing 5 a.m." Fortunately, the makeup man came up with a new kind of glue that allowed the scars to be applied in 25 minutes.

The Oscar nomination culminates a remarkable comeback by Hopper, a folk figure of the 1960s with his "Easy Rider." After 20 years in a career limbo, Hopper kicked alcohol and drugs and proved himself employable by appearing in 10 movies in three years. Now he is directing a major film, "SMASH," starring Sean Penn and Robert Duvall.

Hopper was mentioned as a nomination possibility for both "Hoosiers" and "Blue Velvet." As the town drunk in "Hoosiers," he feels he has a better chance of winning — "only because it parallels my life a lot; I'm a recovering alcoholic."

Two veteran British actors round out the nominees. Denholm Elliott, the outspoken Mr. Emerson of "A Room With a View," has been on the London stage since 1945 and in films since 1949. He already holds the British Academy award for "Trading Places" and "A Private Function." Caine, who plays the errant husband in "Hannah and Her Sisters," won his fourth nomination — the first as supporting actor. He was in contention as best actor for "Alfie" (1966), "Sleuth" (1972) and "Educating Rita" (1983).

After his "Educating Rita" nomination, he said: "The last time I won an award was for 'most promising newcomer.' I was beginning to feel I let down the people who gave it to me."

Caine has played university professors and business magnates, but he has never forgotten his cockney birth as Maurice Joseph Micklewhite. During most of his London youth his father was unemployed and his mother worked as a charwoman.

He once explained why he continued to speak with a cockney accent: "I want people who are stuck in a bloody caste system to know they can make it without changing their accent. You can force people to accept you the way you are."

'Max Headroom' Goes Prime Time

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Fans of irreverent cable TV denizen Max Headroom must have heaved a collective, weary sigh when they learned he was moving into the uptight world of network prime time. Sellout time, right?

Not Max. The wisecracking computer concept's futuristic action series on ABC, premiering Tuesday, March 31, is wicked, fast, funny and sophisticated. In the pilot, an evil television network covers up a lethal side effect of subliminal commercials — they cause viewers to explode.

"Max Headroom" is the first new idea network television has had since "Moonlighting," and, in fact, Max is getting a prime tryout spot following ABC's hit detective series on Tuesday nights.

Matt Frewer stars in a dual role as Max and his human counterpart, television reporter Edison Carter.

The look of the show resembles Ridley Scott's movie "Blade Runner," with its grimy, rain-and-neon street scenes and high-tech interiors furnished with circa-1930s antiques. All the cars are Studebakers. There's also a touch of Sidney Lumet's cynical 1976 film "Network," written by Paddy Chayevsky.

"The show revolves around the media, the manipulation of the media and the power of television," said producer Peter Wagg in a telephone interview from Los Angeles.

Wagg developed the Headroom character for British television, and Max soon was a hit in America on cable television and in commercials. Frewer, an American, had moved to England to study acting.

Headroom's fictional genesis is the subject of the series pilot, described by Wagg as "set 20 minutes into the future."

Star television reporter Carter is hot on the trail of a story, the mysterious death of a John Q. Citizen. Carter takes his camera to the scene, guided by a computer "controller" back in the newsroom where "real-time" ratings are projected on a chart and fluctuate by the second.

At a crucial moment, Carter's controller is ordered, by the network, to pull Carter off the story.

Furious, Carter demands a new controller and is assigned Theora Jones, played by Amanda Pays.

With Jones at the computer, the two use the building's security camera to eavesdrop on executives standing at urinals.

It seems the killer commercials are "blipverts," high-speed ads designed to keep viewers from switching channels. The network knows blipverts are dangerous, but will lose its biggest sponsor if it takes them off the air.

Guided by Jones, Carter scours the network for clues and stumbles on the secret whiz kid who created blipverts, Bryce, played by Chris Young.

Security chases Carter. He roars off on a motorcycle, only to run head-on into a low barricade labeled with a warning about "Max(imum). Headroom."

At the behest of the network's evil boss Grossberg, played by Charles Rocket, Bryce copies the dying reporter's memory into the computer so they can find out how much he knows. Carter is carted off to a body bank, and a smart-mouth, talking head is born. His first words are the last thing Carter saw — "M-m-m-max Headroom."

"Welcome to Network 23," chirps Max, "the network where two's company and three's an audience."

Jones locates Carter, still alive, at a body bank where body parts are sold. "Any particular piece in mind, honey?" the proprietress inquires. (Carter is saved. He and his video alter ego will team up to solve crime in future episodes.)

Max knows about the blipverts, and Grossberg orders his memory erased. Max escapes into the network's computer system and puts himself on television. The ratings go up.

According to the last decennial census, 45.5 percent of Pitt County's labor force was composed of females; roughly 12 percent of workers belonged to minority groups.

Disney Contract Signed

PARIS (AP) — Premier Jacques Chirac today signed a contract for creation of a EuroDisneyland east of Paris, saying the link with the Walt Disney Co. was "a guarantee of success."

The $2 billion project is to be built on a 4,400-acre site in Marne-la-Vallée, about 25 miles from the capital, with opening day set for 1992.

National and local governments are pledged to spend $333 million, much of it on road improvements and extending an urban transit rail line to the park, which has become known as "Mickey-sur-Marne."

Michael D. Eisner, president of Walt Disney Co., said in French at the signing ceremony that Walt Disney, the creator of Mickey Mouse, was "a citizen of the world who knew how to talk to the entire world through his cartoons."

The French government said it won guarantees from Disney, in negotiations lasting more than a year, that the park would incorporate themes from French and European culture, rather than simply copying the formulas of Disneyland in California and Walt Disney World in Florida.

A statement issued by the Culture Ministry less than 24 hours before the signing also said the Disney company had agreed to guarantee the primacy of the French language on the site "in the name of a certain cultural idea of France."

EuroDisneyland is projected to draw 10 million visitors a year and create at least 30,000 jobs, government officials say.

Open/net, North Carolina's Open Public Events Network, returns to cable television on six Tuesday nights from 8 to 10 p.m., featuring topics such as economic development, juvenile delinquency and prisons.

Each program features one hour of footage of a state government meeting or conference, followed by a one hour call-in program with leaders from the meeting or conference.

Upcoming topics include: March 24 - Winning in the Global Economy, March 31 - Preventing Juvenile Delinquency, April 7 - Prison Alternatives, April 14 - Alcoholism Research, April 21 - Public Education, April 28 - Constitution Bicentennial.

Lecturer

Christopher French of New York, a visiting critic at East Carolina University, will present a lecture at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in Jenkins Auditorium on the ECU campus.

The lecture is free and open to the public.

A contributing editor to Artweek magazine, French has written more than 50 reviews of artist's exhibitions in the San Francisco Bay area. He has lectured on art at the University of California, in Davis and at Sacramento, and is himself a practicing artist.

'Good Old Days'

FREMONT - On Friday, the Aycock Birthplace State Historic Site will host its first "Good Old Days" living history program. The program will be held in conjunction with Fremont's Annual Daffodil Festival.

Both the Aycock old days and the Fremont festival are open to the public without charge.

Interpreters dressed in period attire will perform activities such as quilting, open-hearth cooking, spinning, natural dyeing, washing clothes and corn grinding.

These activities will represent some of the typical farm and domestic chores performed on a mid-19th century modest farm home such as the birthplace and early years home of Governor Aycock.

"Good Old Days" will begin at 10 a.m. and continue until 4 p.m. The site is located nine miles north of Goldsboro between Pikeville and Fremont, one-half mile off U.S. 117.

For more details, call 242-5581. From Greenville, the shortest route to Fremont is via Farmville, then take a left on N.C. 222 at Saratoga. Distance, about 42 miles.

Iraqis To Unveil Restored Babylon

By JOHN RICE
Associated Press Writer
BABYLON, Iraq (AP) - This ancient "fairest of the kingdoms" is rising again on the Euphrates plain in an Iraqi restoration program, 2,500 years after the Hebrews fled from exile with curses upon it that echo across history.

Babylon, 60 miles south of Baghdad, was the place of the Tower of Babel, whose foundations are still visible; the stories of the three men in the fiery furnace, Daniel in the lion's den, and the handwriting on the wall.

It also is the place of one of the Seven Wonders of the World, the Hanging Gardens, but an Iraqi researcher says he doubts they ever existed as such.

From Genesis to the last chapters of Revelations, Babylon was a byword for splendor and sin to the biblical authors, whose views were colored by the Hebrews' forced exile here under King Nebuchadnezzar II, the last great Babylonian king.

"Never again shall she be inhabited," wrote the prophet Isaiah in chapter 13 of the Old Testament's Book of Isaiah, after the Hebrews were conquered. "No man shall dwell in her through all the ages. There no Arab shall pitch his tent, nor shepherds fold their flocks. ... Jackals shall occupy her mansions and wolves her gorgeous places."

But to modern Iraqis, Babylon is a monument to the region's history as the birthplace of writing and law, and they have begun a task likely to take many years to restore the city that dates from around 2000 B.C. Officials have set no time limit nor do they give any idea how much it will cost.

Iraq itself is considered by many historians to be the cradle of civilization dating as far back as 6,000 years to the time of the Sumerians whose city states flourished as early as 3500 B.C.

The Iraqis have begun rebuilding several major structures from Nebuchadnezzar's time and plan to unveil them this summer in an international culture festival.

The government considers the project so important it has exempted some Iraqis from military duty in the war against Iran to work on it, said site director Donny George Yokhana.

The ancient Temple of Ishtar has been rebricked, replastered and whitewashed. A new 4,000-seat Greek theater is rising on the site of the old.

Workers on scaffolds are topping the ancient bricks of Nebuchadnezzar's palace with blocks from the government brick works.

The bitumen mentioned as mortar in the biblical story of Babel is still visible between the old baked mud bricks.

In Nebuchadnezzar's time in the 6th century B.C., Babylon was a sprawling city of perhaps a million people, one of the most powerful and cultured places in the world.

The city had been pillaged, destroyed and rebuilt several times before the Hebrews conquered by Nebuchadnezzar were brought there from Palestine in the late 6th century.

It survived some 400 years after they left in 538 B.C., until the descendants of Alexander the Great, who conquered Babylon and died there, moved their capital north to Selucia in 274 B.C.

Babylon's most famed early king was Hammurabi, who codified its laws 3,700 years ago and some 1,200 years before Nebuchadnezzar II.

Hammurabi's city today lies below the ground water level, Yokhana said.

To reach it, he said, archaeologists would have to lower the water level, perhaps by diverting the Euphrates.

Most of Babylon's brown-brick ruins rest below the level of the ground, dotted with clumps of yellow grass and palm trees.

But most of the exposed brick was hauled away over the centuries by the modern city of Hilla a few miles south, Yokhana said.

The European excavators who first explored the site also carried treasures away.

One of Babylon's great monuments, the Ishtar Gate, stands today in an East German museum. Only the foundations of the gate, some 120 feet across, are now visible in Babylon.

Carved into the bricks are reliefs of oxen and a mythical beast called the mushrushu, with the head of a serpent, body of a fish, front legs of a lion and back legs of an eagle.

Some carvings have been scarred by graffiti that stand out over the occasional, original cuneiform inscriptions on a few old bricks.

The Hebrew tribes were both awed and appalled by Babylon.

"Babylon has been a gold cup in the Lord's hand," wrote Jeremiah. He also called it "a land of idols that glories in its dreadful gods."

"Babylon the great, the mother of whores and every obscenity on earth," said the author of Revelations.

But said Moaiyad Saeed Dimugi, head of Iraq's Antiquities and Heritage Organization, "Babylon has been misunderstood."

He maintained that many stories in the Bible and elsewhere "are mixed up," noting that biblical writers sometimes confused the reigns of Babylonian kings.

Dimugi directs the restoration work at Babylon, where he did research that led him to doubt the Hanging Gardens.

"I believe there were no Hanging Gardens at all," he said.

He suggested that ancient visitors may have been confused by the Babylonian practice of decorating their towers with trees and plants once a year during a festival.

San Quentin May Have Own Museum

By TRACEY KAPLAN
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

SAN QUENTIN, Calif. - Prison officials here are planning to open a small museum that would depict 134 years of life inside San Quentin, home to some of California's most notorious criminals.

The plans include the construction of model jail cells and a gas chamber similar to the real one that was installed in 1938, after then-Warden James Holohan succeeded in having hanging banned.

Also included would be artifacts dating from the days when inmates were whipped for misbehavior.

"There should be some way of preserving the history of this grand old place," said Associate Warden Richard A. Nelson of the penal complex perched on a rocky outcropping overlooking the bay about 20 miles north of San Francisco.

"Right now, there are just volumes of historical material scattered all over the state," he said.

Officials also intend to renovate the prison cemetery, which is no longer in use. The graves of 694 people are located high on a hill in a eucalyptus grove, far enough away from the watchful eye of guards so that vandals over the years have stolen the original wooden markers and disinterred several of the plots.

The cemetery, like the prison itself, is off limits to tourists and would remain so after its renovation. Until the museum is installed in the small, mint green, stucco building that once housed the inmates' mail room, visitors will have to be content with purchasing inmate-made handicrafts such as desk accessories in the hobby shop just outside the prison gates, and with peering in at the 432-acre complex.

If the museum opens by January

1988, as planned, it would be the first glimpse the public would get of the maximum-security institution since it stopped conducting public tours in 1976 when the state began sending all disruptive or violent inmates from its 11 other major institutions to San Quentin, said prison spokesman John W. Reid.

The prison houses 3,429 convicted rapists, killers, thieves and other assorted felons, about 1,700 of them under high-security conditions. Isolated on death row are 203 men.

The prison contains so many dangerous criminals that the few law enforcement officers, judges and journalists who tour it are given a stern warning, delivered with a dash of humor:

"Are you aware of the state's no-hostage policy?" each person is asked in a standard speech given by the guards. "If you are taken hostage, the state will do everything in its power to negotiate your release. However, no exchanges will be made."

To satisfy public curiosity about the 134-year-old institution, Nelson and a group of citizens and employees, including Warden Dan Vasquez, formed the San Quentin Museum Association, which has collected about $3,400 so far in its efforts to raise the $200,000 needed for the museum. Nelson, who is the group's president, said several corporations and trusts have expressed interest in donating funds.

"There is just a tremendous fascination with this place's macabre history," said Nelson, 49, a short rotund man with silver hair. "Everyday, we turn away people at the gate asking for tours."

The old and dilapidated penitentiary is currently undergoing a $36.9 million renovation to comply with court-ordered improvements in living conditions.

Taxing Tomatoes
 Trade legislation now before Congress could raise prices for many imported goods. About 100 years ago, a tariff on tomatoes imported from the West Indies led to a major Supreme Court battle. Under the Tariff Act of 1883, only fruits could be imported duty-free. Because tomatoes are a technically a fruit of the vine, importer John Nix challenged the duty on tomatoes. The Supreme Court ruled the tomato a vegetable on the grounds that it is served for dinner, not dessert.

Horoscope From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY March 26
GENERAL TENDENCIES: One of the best days you could have to put into motion a new inspiration that is unique and original and which involves persons who are quite extraordinary.
ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Some ideas you have may seem odd, but later you realize that they are dynamic and can bring you the right results.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Be more enthused when dealing with the public and you can get your points across more successfully.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Any communications, either written or oral, are the best means through which you can get your new plans across.
MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Use more advanced systems that can help you to produce more during the daytime.
LEO (July 22 to August 21): Plan a new course during the day with an associate. Take time to do some civic duty and gain more prestige.
VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): You can gain all the data you need now that will help you in furthering your ambitious activities.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Make romantic and recreational arrangements for the evening. Work on ideas that are lucrative.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): You are highly enthused at home with your kin and can get much done. Have guests in and enjoy amusements.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Find the right words in any communications with others. Be sure to dress nicely today.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Plan on making new additions to your home. Your education in finances can be most helpful to you now.
AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): You are cheery and can help others to come out of any depression. Get into new outlets with the one you love.
PISCES (February 20 to March 20): You have privately been thinking along modern lines and can use such ideas in a profitable way now.
IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be quite dramatic in actions, but don't try to change your progeny since the best success can come from this very difference. Do teach your New Age progeny to value the conventional things in life. Give as many courses as possible in school.

"The Stars impel; they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

We were burned many years ago when we were given the club holding that appears in the diagram and we replied that we would finesse the jack. Considered in isolation, that reply was undoubtedly correct. In the context of the whole hand, however, we could not have been further from the truth!
 With a combined 27 high-card points, it might seem the hand should present no problem. Certainly, that is the way declarer approached his task after West led a spade against three no trump. He captured East's queen of spades with the king and led a club to the jack. Despite the fact he had two stoppers in the suit, East made a farsighted play when he held up the king. Declarer was a dead duck. With only one side entry to dummy, there was no way he could make more than two club tricks for a grand total of eight tricks.

Reflections in the river
As I sit and reminisce
My thoughts linger carelessly
Nothing wanting to resist
The trees climb over my face
And I look into their eyes
They tell of lost stories of the dinosaurs rise

A sliding breeze passes through
And I stare into the sky
The emotion towers within me
And my eyes begin to cry
Rolling down the river
My thoughts, my hopes, my dreams

My life finally opening up
Unraveling at the seams

Excuses, Excuses

By Christie Collins

I can't clean up the yard today, said little Christie right away.

I have a fever of one hundred three,
I have a sore right on my knee.

My hand is broke, my finger too,
I have no socks, I can't find my shoes!

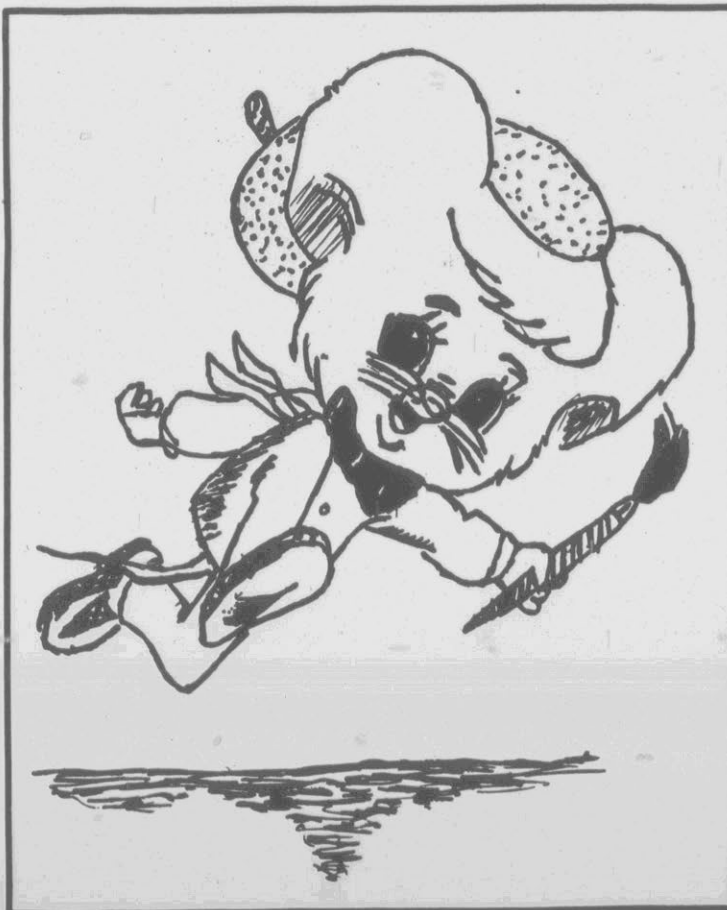

What is that I heard you say,
I can do it some other day?

I think I have the chicken pox, my hands are filled with little dots.

Thank you mother, that made my day,
now I am going out and play!

I am sick I have a cold,
Or maybe I'm just getting too old.

Christie Collins, 11, a student at Bethel Elementary School receives special mention.

Over The Rainbow

By Sarah Lewis

On a day that was both rainy and sunny, I saw a rainbow come out. It was beautiful! The colors were red, yellow, blue, purple, pink and a mixed color.

I wondered where that big rainbow ended. It was so big, it covered the whole town. "I wish I could find the gold at the end," I said to myself.

Then all of a sudden, I thought of something! I would find it! I was going to the end of the rainbow.

So I ran and ran and ran until I got so tired I laid down. But it was strange, something was lifting me but I could see nothing.

The next morning I stood up and a bright-rainbow was under me! No wonder I was so tired, I was running up a rainbow!

Well was I ever surprised! Now I knew what I was going to do. So down I went sliding right into a pot of gold! From then on whenever I saw a rainbow, I'd remember this time.

Sarah Lewis, 8, a student at Sam D. Bundy School receives special mention.

I loved you, I wanted you, I needed you, but you weren't there for me.

Margo

By Teresa Lambe

"Look, Margo, you've got to decide!"

"Mom please, you know how hard this is for me," Margo replied.

"I know. But, honey, don't you realize that you've either got to accept the dance scholarship or the science scholarship. You can't choose both!" her mother pointed out.

"But—" she began, only to be interrupted by her father.

"C'mon, Margo. The train to your Dance Expo is leaving soon," he yelled from the front door.

Margo stared out of the train window, eyes unfocused, not really looking past the glass. Thoughts flew around her head.

"What if I take the dance scholarship? But maybe I'm not good enough, then what will I do?"

"In that case, I should take the science and GIVE UP DANCE?"

The words in her mind stood out in capitals — GIVE UP DANCE.

She arrived at the expo, dance bag in hand and big dreams in heart. This was the day she had always dreamed of; the day she would go to the Dance Expo. Dancers from all over the world were here for the two day seminar.

Margo ran lightly up the heavy concrete steps.

"Name, please?" the registrar at the door asked.

"Margo, Margo Dickenson. I'm from Dreyfus Connecticut."

"OK, Margo, go right in."

Everywhere dancers. They stood, they stretched, they sat. Their taut bodies seemed to flow from position to position. No one ever sat perfectly still, always moving extending their limbs.

Margo stood in the midst of all this, a rock among swirling dust. Finally she began to stretch, too — to move her body, tune it in the same way a musician tunes his instruments or a writer sharpens his work.

"All right people! To the barre!" the instructor rapped out.

Margo chose her spot and stood ready at graceful attention. The class did not begin right away, as the instructor had to take a phone call.

Margo glanced at the other dancers. They seemed much more experienced than her, not at all like the girls back home. They all looked haughty and bored, as if they knew they were better than everyone else.

She walked up to one of them. "Hi," Margo ventured shyly. The girl just nodded. "Small room isn't it?" Margo tried again.

"We're always in a small room," the girl said. "Last year, we had a real studio to work in. Now we're here bumping legs." Her tone was mean and sarcastic.

"Oh," was all Margo said as she stepped back into place. "Are these the kind of people I want to work with?" she thought.

After several hours of class, Margo collapsed onto her hotel bed.

"Ugh," she groaned. "I've never worked so hard in my life!" she complained to nobody.

But it was time now to sleep. Tomorrow would be a long day in the study class at 7:30 a.m. Yawn.

"Push, push, straighten that leg! You call that a pirouette? What's wrong with you? Keep your back up!" the teacher yelled.

"How much longer can he keep that up?" Margo thought. "I'd be hoarse by now!"

Suddenly a cry from the corner of the room. A small girl with red hair and freckles lay sobbing on the ground, clutching her knee.

"Help! I think I broke my leg!" she cried.

Everyone rushed around, someone called an ambulance. The dancers stood in huddles, whispering among themselves. Only Margo stood alone.

"How bad is she?" the teacher asked the ambulance attendant.

NOT DANCE.

NOT DANCE.

"What would she do? She had already graduated with a major in dance. Now what?"

Margo thought.

"But I don't have to be like that. I'll always have dance, but will dance have me? THEN WHAT?"

"I can't. I can't. Dance, it's my life, but I can't live with it," Margo told herself.

She walked up to the registrar at the top of the steps.

"Name, please?"

"Margo, Margo Dickenson."

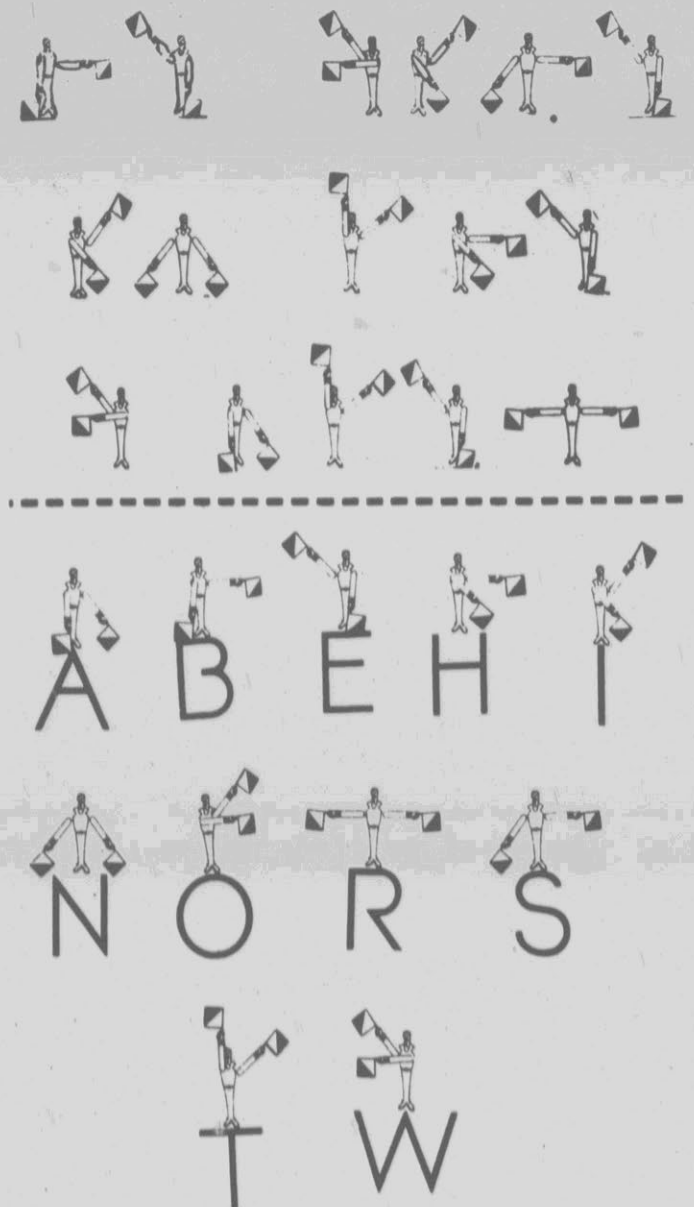

"What course?"

"Chemistry II," Margo said.

Reading

In addition, 46 major U.S. corporations such as IBM Corp. and General Motors Corp. have offered the course for employees, according to Claire Carlyle, director of speed reading for American Learning Corp.

"The average person who takes this course is usually a professional looking to improve his reading skills to try to clear the paperwork off his desk or get through journals quicker," Ms. Carlyle said.

Although still popular, speed reading no longer attracts as much attention from educators as it did during the 1960s and 1970s, says Alan Farstrup, director of research and development for the International Reading Association.

As to speed reading, he says, "It allows you to plow through the material and find those places where you really need to read with care. You just have to be realistic about what it does for you."

Long intrigued by the mental processes of reading and why some people are better readers than others, Just and Carpenter decided to study speed reading when a subject in one of their adult reading tests proved to be an extraordinarily rapid reader.

Their opportunity came in late 1979 when an Evelyn Wood course was offered at Carnegie Mellon.

Of the students and university staff members enrolled in the seven-week program, 11 agreed to take part in the professors' experiment. Three were tested before and after the course, while others were studied immediately afterward.

"We studied people as they stepped out of the course" as opposed to those with years of practice, Just said.

Just, Carpenter and research associate Michael Masson compared the 11 speed readers, who clocked in at about 700 words a minute, to 25 university-affiliated people who had never studied speed reading. Half the untrained readers were asked to read at a normal rate, or about 200 to 250 words a minute. The other half, instructed to skim, zipped along at about 600 words a minute.

The 36 subjects were given relatively easy excerpts from Reader's Digest on familiar topics, such as the adventures of a 19th century American frontiersman, as well as technical articles from Scientific American.

The texts, 1,500 to 2,000 words each, were presented on a video monitor. One by one, day by day for several weeks, the subjects read the articles as instructed, using a long pointer to pace themselves while moving through the text.

The computer recorded the duration of the readers' gaze on each word, indicating exactly what was being looked at and what was being missed.

Just and Carpenter found that the normal readers looked at 64 percent of the words, compared to 33 percent for the Evelyn Wood students and 40 percent for the untrained skimmers.

In addition, the normal readers spent an average 330 milliseconds on each word, or about a third of a second, compared to 233 milliseconds for the Evelyn Wood students and 221 milliseconds for the untrained skimmers, the researchers said.

The researchers regularly questioned the subjects to test comprehension and asked them to summarize what they had read. In nearly every case the normal readers fared much better than their quicker counterparts. The three readers studied both before and after the Evelyn Woods course comprehended more when they proceeded at a normal rate.

Unsurprisingly, all readers comprehended more from Reader's Digest than from Scientific American. They also responded more accurately to questions about main ideas rather than details.

The Evelyn Wood students were better at grasping simple, familiar passages than the untrained rapid readers, such as the Reader's Digest text dealing with an Indian attack on a group of fur traders.

There was no evidence that the speed readers forgot any more, or any less, than the untrained rapid readers.

Speed reading courses offer effective retention techniques, Just says: for example, asking oneself why he is reading a piece and what information he wants from it, and afterward making an outline of what was read.

"There are occasions when people are needlessly slow on certain kinds of information," Carpenter says. "They don't know how to be flexible readers. Speed reading courses tend to teach people that."

Show Returns

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS is putting its "West 57th" newsmagazine show back on the air in April.

The show will get a four-week test run in the time period now occupied by "Cagney & Lacey," Monday at 10 p.m. EST, where it will have a lead-in from CBS' strong comedy lineup. But in May, it will move to 8 p.m. EST Tuesday, up against top-rated shows on both ABC and NBC.

"I think it will get very good ratings," CBS News President Howard Stringer said Monday. "I think it will succeed, and I don't think the network can ever afford to put it on hiatus again."

WOK COOKING — The wok is traditionally used for Chinese cooking such as with this dish of sweet and sour chicken with rice. But, the wok can extend beyond ethnic cooking and be used for most modern, Western cooking techniques such as frying and stir-frying, braising and steaming. Try the accompanying recipes. (Reflector Photo by Cliff Hollis).

Wok Cooking Is Quick, Has Nutritious Results

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

Not only is wok cooking fast and easy, but the food preparatory process also has nutritional value, said a local cardiovascular nurse specialist at Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Using a wok to cook usually decreases the amount of oil needed to prepare foods, said Cindy Mayo. "You can wok without oil and use the natural juices of food."

"You are usually cooking vegetables for less time" when using a wok, she said, therefore the vegetables maintain some of its nutritive value. "You lose nutrients when you boil food because you're cooking for a longer period of time," Ms. Mayo said.

The shape of the wok contributes to its ability to cook foods with less oil, said Linda Walker, a nutritionist at Eastern Carolina Family Practice Center.

"It seems to be you can use less fat and keep it from sticking," she said. "In a flat pan, you tend to use more."

The wok is a thin, curved metal pan that originally was beaten out of tempered steel, which heated quickly and curved to fit over the flames of a Chinese brazier — a pan in which charcoal is burned, according to "Cooking With A Wok" by Bridget Jones.

SIMPLE CHOP SUEY

- 1 small onion
- 2 carrots
- 1 can bamboo shoots
- 12 ounce bean sprouts
- 1 tablespoon sunflower oil
- 1 small clove garlic
- 3 to 4 tablespoons soy sauce

Halve the onion, then cut it into very thin slices and separate the slices into strips. Trim the carrots and cut them into very fine strips, and do the same with the drained bamboo shoots. Pick over the bean sprouts, removing any which are slightly brown and as many of the green pods as possible.

Heat the oil in the wok and crush the garlic into it, then add the onion and carrots. Stir-fry for a few minutes, or until the onion has softened slightly. Stir in the bamboo shoots and cook for a minute, then add the bean sprouts and stir-fry for another minute before adding soy sauce to taste. Serve immediately — the bean sprouts should be very crunchy and overcooking will destroy their texture. Serves 4.

SHRIMP FRIED RICE

- 1 onion
- 3 tablespoons oil
- 1 clove garlic
- 1 cup long-grain rice
- salt and freshly ground black pepper
- 2 1/2 cups chicken stock
- 2 cups frozen peas
- 8 ounces peeled cooked shrimp

Chop the onion. Heat the oil in the wok and crush the garlic into it. Add the onion and cook until softened but not browned. Add rice and stir-fry until the grains are transparent and lightly browned. Add seasoning to taste and carefully pour in the stock — take care because a cloud of steam will rise from the wok and this may burn your hand or arm if it is in the way. Bring to a boil, reduce the heat and put the lid on the wok, then simmer gently for 15 minutes.

When the rice has absorbed most of the stock, stir in the peas and shrimp and continue cooking for a further 5 minutes; make sure that the rice does not overcook and burn at this stage. Serve straight from the wok or spoon the fried rice into a heated serving bowl.

CRISPY NOODLES WITH MUSHROOMS AND HAM

- salt and freshly ground pepper
- 12 ounces lo mein noodles (thin Chinese egg noodles)
- 6 large dried Chinese mushrooms
- 8 ounces cooked ham
- 1 bunch spring onions
- 2 tablespoons oil
- 4 tablespoons butter

Pour 5 cups water into the wok and add a little salt, then bring to a boil and add the noodles. Put the lid on the wok and simmer for about 5 minutes; when cooked the noodles should be tender but not sticky. Drain the noodles and place them on a plate, patting them into a round shape.

Place the mushrooms in a basin and pour in enough boiling water to cover them completely, then leave to soak for 15 minutes. Drain and slice. Cut the ham into shreds and trim and shred the spring onions.

Heat the oil and butter together in the wok and add the mushrooms, ham and spring onions. Cook for a few minutes, then remove with a slotted spoon and set aside. Slide the noodles into the wok and cook over a high heat until they are golden and crisp underneath, then turn them over and cook the second side in the same way. Sprinkle the ham mixture over the noodles and serve immediately. Serves 4.

Sweet Onions Are Just Right For Light Entrees

A triple dip of sweetness is available in the onion bin or your local market. For good cooks and health enthusiasts throughout the nation, fresh red, white and yellow onions herald the advent of spring.

Known for their juiciness and natural sweetness, spring and summer onions boast a mellow flavor which has started a new eating trend. An onion connoisseur even knows them by name and will diligently shop for Texas 1015Y Super Sweet, Imperial Sweet from California, Carzalia Sweets from New Mexico, Vidalias from Georgia, and Walla Wallas from Washington.

These "gourmet" onions have been developed especially for their specific areas and take advantage of their special climates and soil condi-

A healthy choice, an average onion provides 20 percent of the U.S. Recommended Daily Allowance for Vitamin C and has 2.8 grams of dietary fiber. A good source of potassium, they possess no fat or cholesterol and retain their healthful properties whether cooked or eaten raw. Studies also indicate that onions help lower blood pressure and reduce cholesterol levels.

The sweet onion's crisp fresh wholesomeness is especially suited to the light summer entrees and salads that lend themselves to our summer lifestyle. When selecting fresh onions, choose those that are well-cured and have tight, dry, necks. Avoid exterior blemishes or cuts. Store onions with a high water content in a cool, dry, well-ventilated area, in a single layer if possible. Store cut onions in an airtight container in the refrigerator.

Here are some delightfully adaptable recipes that utilize the appealing characteristics of the spring and summer sweet onions available in your markets from March to August.

Pepper to taste

- 1 dash vinegar (optional)
- Slice onions and separate into rings. Pour boiling water over onions and let stand for 1 minute. Drain and chill in covered container till cold. Combine the rest of the ingredients and toss with chilled onions. Parsley and cucumber may be added for variety.

CARZALIA SWEET SALAD

- 1 sweet Carzalia onion (jumbo size)
- 2 large vine-ripened tomatoes
- 1 avocado
- Cut the onion into 1/2-inch wedges. Wedge the tomatoes and chunk the avocado. Salt and pepper, toss lightly with vinegar and oil or Italian dressing. Serve on a bed of crisp lettuce. 4 servings.

TERRIFIC TEXAS SWEET ONION-POTATO BAKE

- Per serving:
- 1 medium Texas sweet onion
- 1 medium potato
- 1 tablespoon parmesan cheese
- Peel onion and slice into five equal slices. Scrub potato well and cut into

Fun Meals Bridge Gap Between Seasons

It's that in-between time of year — post-holiday and pre-barbecue — when meal preparation becomes particularly perplexing. Yet, satisfying meals can really bolster sagging March spirits.

Here are two super menus you can whip up in a mere half hour or less, a big benefit since time, for many, is always in short supply. Each is elegant enough for entertaining but quick and easy enough for everyday. The secret to these magical menus is condensed soup, that most versatile of ingredients, which adds flavor and convenience to a variety of recipes.

The first menu typifies the lighter style of eating so popular today. Instead of the traditional tossed salad, try Marinated Vegetable Kebobs, a colorful medley of artichoke hearts and crisp vegetables, marinated in a flavorful mixture made with condensed zesty tomato soup/sauce. This attractive appetizer or salad course can easily be made in advance and chilled until serving time.

A fitting follow-up is Cheddar Baked Fish, a delicious dish which tastes robust without being filling. Start with a can of condensed cheddar cheese soup/dip and any light-tasting but meaty "steak" fish such as halibut, cod or swordfish. The fish is baked over rice that's blended with cheddar cheese soup and a touch of sherry. A fruit dessert would certainly make an apt finale to this appealing meal.

Menu two has the exotic taste of the Far East beginning with Oriental Garden Soup, a clear broth enhanced with tofu cubes, mushrooms, leeks and lemon peel. Condensed chicken broth is the time-saving solution, supplying a richly-seasoned flavor base to perfectly enhance the delicate ingredients. Follow the soup with Beef Stir-Fry in Creamy Peanut Sauce. Whether you stir-fry in a skillet or wok, this dish is fun to prepare, particularly when you can count on such tasty shortcuts as canned soup and frozen vegetables. For best results, have all of the ingredients measured, mixed and ready, because the cooking goes fast!

Armed with such special — yet easy — recipes, you'll find that March may very well fly by. Before you know it, you'll uncover the picnic table and dust off the barbecue for warm weather meals.

Munchy, Crunchy Specialty Vegetables Help Slim Down

LOS ANGELES — Swimsuit season is fast approaching. So, start thinking "slimline" eating with munchy, crunchy, svelte specialty vegetables.

Unlike a boring carrot-and-celery-stick regime, noshing on exotic, enticing produce like jicama, spaghetti, squash, Belgian endive, bamboo shoots, sunchokes and other wonderful vegetables can melt extra pounds away with little effort and no guilt.

"Nothing is better for staying slim than making natural, fiber-rich, low-cal, high-nutrition veggies part of your daily diet," says Karen Caplan, president of a specialty produce firm in Los Angeles.

Specialty produce is especially well-suited to diets, including calorie-restricted, low-salt, diabetic or low-fat, because they offer variety, new flavors and satisfying textures. Recipes help spark up restricted menus with flavor ranges from delicate to snappy.

"Entertaining is one of my favorite things to do," says Ms. Caplan. "And I like all my guests, especially dieters to enjoy my cooking. Endive Hors D'Oeuvres, a simple appetizer of Belgian endive leaves stuffed with ricotta cheese and fresh herbs, make entertaining a lot easier and lighter."

Vegetables are excellent fare for weight-control, yet it's important to remember that a healthy portion of nutrients our bodies derive from vegetables also depends upon how to prepare them. To keep from cooking out all that's good within, consider eating produce raw or simply steaming, boiling, broiling, baking, microwaving or lightly stir-frying.

One light and low-calorie dish is Quick Shrimp Chop Suey with fresh shrimp, ginger root and Chop Suey Mix by Frieda. Stir-frying in chicken broth rather than oil really saves on calories while using fresh pre-chopped chop suey vegetables, made with celery, napa (Chinese) cabbage, bok choy and onions, saves on time.

For a Sunday brunch fit for any "beautiful" person, try a Peasant Omelet made with sunchokes — knobby brown tubers with a nutty skin and white flesh tasting of a brown artichoke. This recipe adds sophistication to a simple omelet.

Grow fresh potted herbs on your windowsill and you can enjoy their aroma and spunk in any dish while avoiding the saltshaker. Vegetable-Stuffed Finnish Potatoes blend fresh snipped herbs with broccoli, red bell pepper and shredded cheese for the hottest trend in main dishes — stuffed potatoes.

ENDIVE HORS D'OEUVRES

- 3/4 cup ricotta or drained cottage cheese
- 1/4 cup grated carrot
- 1 green onion, chopped
- 2 tablespoon chopped fresh herbs such as sage, basil, chives, dill, sorrel or watercress

(See MUNCHY, D-3)

ENDIVE HORS D'OEUVRES — Make entertaining easy and light with a simple appetizer of Belgian endive leaves stuffed with ricotta cheese and fresh herbs.

Wok Cooking Is Not Only Fast, But The Results Are Nutritious

UPSIDE-DOWN PUDDING

- 4 canned pineapple rings
- 6 glace cherries
- 1/2 cup butter
- 2/3 cup sugar
- grated rind of 1 large orange
- 2 eggs
- 3/4 cup self-rising flour

Arrange three of the pineapple rings in the base of a buttered 6-inch soufflé dish. Cut the remaining pineapple ring into thirds and arrange the pieces between the rings in the dish. Place the cherries in any gaps between the rings and place one in the center.

Cream the butter with the sugar and orange rind until pale and soft. Gradually beat in the eggs with a little of the flour, then use a metal spoon to fold in the remaining flour. Spoon the mixture into the dish, taking care not to disturb the arrangement of the fruit in the base. Wrap the dish completely in foil, making sure that it is securely folded to prevent any steam from entering. Stand the dish on the steaming rack in the wok and pour in enough water to come up to the base of the dish. Put the lid on the wok and bring the water to a boil, then boil steadily for 1 1/2 hours. Check to make sure that the wok does not boil dry during cooking and add more boiling water if necessary.

When cooked, carefully lift the dish from the wok and remove the foil wrapping, then turn the pudding out onto a heated serving plate and serve hot. Serve with a custard cream or whipped cream. Serves 6.

CARAMELIZED PINEAPPLE

- 1 large pineapple
- 4 tablespoons butter
- 4 tablespoons brown sugar
- 4 tablespoons kirsch
- 2 tablespoons chopped pistachio nuts
- 2 tablespoons chopped maraschino cherries

Trim the leaves off the pineapple and cut off the stalk end. Using a sharp knife, cut off all the peel and remove the spines. Slice the fruit fairly thickly and remove the hard core from each slice.

Melt the butter in the wok and add the pineapple slices, frying both sides for a few seconds. Sprinkle the sugar over and turn the slices of fruit, then cook until the sugar caramelizes, turning the fruit once again. As soon as the sugar is lightly browned, turn off the heat and pour in the kirsch. Sprinkle on the nuts and cherries and serve with whipped cream or vanilla ice cream.

RICH CHICKEN STOCK

- 2 chicken legs and thighs
- 8 ounces lean boneless pork
- 1 large onion
- large bay leaf
- 6 peppercorns
- about 6 cups of water

Place the chicken in the wok. Cut the pork into cubes and cut the onion into chunks, then place both in the wok with the chicken. Add the bay leaf and peppercorns and pour in the water, adding a little extra, if necessary, just to cover the meats. Bring to a boil and skim off any scum which rises to the surface. Put the lid on the wok and reduce heat so that the stock simmers steadily. Cook for one hour.

Lift the chicken joints out of the stock and cut all the meat off. Chop this and reserve for use in the soup, or for another purpose. Remove and discard the onion, pork and bay leaf, then strain the stock through a piece of fine cheesecloth or a coffee filter paper. If the stock looks greasy, then chill it thoroughly and skim off the fat. The stock is now ready for use, but remember it is not seasoned.

A simple chicken soup can be prepared by returning the chopped chicken to the stock and adding seasoning to taste. Heat through and sprinkle some chopped parsley into the light broth.

EGG DROP SOUP

- 3/4 cups Rich Chicken Stock and reserved chicken meat, chopped (above)
- 6 spring onions
- 2 tablespoons chopped fresh coriander leaves
- 4 tablespoons soy sauce
- salt and freshly ground black pepper
- 2 teaspoons cornstarch
- 1 tablespoon cold water
- 2 eggs

Prepare the stock according to the recipe above, straining it and removing any excess fat if necessary. Stir in the chopped chicken meat. Finely chop the spring onions and mix them with the coriander.

Pour the stock into the wok and heat through, then stir in the soy sauce, tasting the soup as you do so, and add seasoning to taste. The soup will need some pepper but, depending on the strength of the soy sauce, it may not need any salt. Blend the cornstarch with the water and stir into the hot soup, then bring to a boil to thicken slightly.

Beat the eggs thoroughly without allowing them to become frothy — the idea is to combine the yolks and whites evenly. Stir the spring onion mixture into the soup, bring to a rapid boil and stir the soup so that it swirls around vigorously in the wok. Immediately turn off the heat and pour in the egg in a slow thin stream. It should set in the swirling soup to give thin strips. Serve immediately. Serves 4.

STEAMED FLOUNDER

- 2 whole flounder, heads removed and cleaned
- 4 slices fresh ginger
- 2 large stalks lemon grass
- 3 tablespoons soy sauce
- Garnish: 1 lemon
- 1/4 cucumber, sliced

Rinse and dry the fish, then make a neat slit down the center of the backbone and cut between the bone and the flesh, working outward to make a large pocket on each side. Place the ginger slices and lemon grass in the pockets, allowing two slices of ginger and a piece of lemon grass for each fish.

Lay the fish on a large plate and sprinkle over the soy sauce. Alternatively, wrap the soy sauce-coated fish in greased foil. Place on the steaming rack in the wok and add water to come up to the edge of the rack. Bring to a boil and put the lid on the wok, then steam for 15 to 20 minutes, or until the fish is cooked through.

Garnish the cooked fish with sliced lemon and cucumber and serve immediately. Serves 4. (Lemon grass is sold in oriental groceries).

TROUT WITH ZUCCHINI

- 4 tablespoons butter
- 2 trout, cleaned
- 4 small zucchini
- 2 tablespoons chopped dill
- salt and freshly ground pepper
- Garnish: lemon wedges
- dill sprigs

Melt the butter in the wok and add the trout. Cook until browned on the underside, then carefully turn the fish over and cook until browned on the second side. Meanwhile, slice the zucchini.

Sprinkle the zucchini over the fish in the pan. Allow as many of the slices as possible to sit beside the fish in the wok, then sprinkle the chopped dill over and add a little seasoning. Put the lid on the wok and cook gently for 20 minutes, turning the fish over after 10 minutes cooking time.

Serve immediately on a warmed serving platter, with the zucchini arranged around the fish, garnished with lemon wedges and dill sprigs. Serves 2.

CHICKEN IN A WOK

- 1 (3 1/2 pound) oven-ready chicken
- 6 carrots
- 1 pound potatoes
- 2 large onions
- 2 cups green beans
- 4 tablespoons butter
- bay leaf
- 3 sprigs parsley
- 2 sprigs thyme
- spring of sage
- pared rind of 1/2 lemon
- salt and freshly ground black pepper
- 3/4 cups dry white wine or chicken stock

Trim the ends of the wings and legs from the chicken. Cut the carrots into chunks and cut the potatoes in half, or quarters if they are very large. Slice the onions fairly thickly and separate the slices into rings. Trim the green beans if they are fresh. Melt the butter in the wok and add the chicken. Fry, turning frequently, until well browned all over. Add the onion rings and cook for a few minutes. While the chicken is browning tie the bay leaf and the other herbs into a small bunch with the lemon rind.

Sprinkle a little seasoning over the chicken — add this sparingly at this stage if you are going to use ready-seasoned stock. Add the bouquet garni and pour in the wine or stock. Bring to a boil and put the lid on the wok. Reduce the heat so that the liquid simmers steadily and cook for 30 minutes. Open the wok and add the carrots and potatoes, then bring the liquid back to a boil, regulate the heat so that it simmers again and put the lid back on the wok. Simmer for a further 30 minutes. Add the green beans and cook for 10 minutes, then serve straight from the wok. Serves 4.

ORIENTAL DUCK WITH PINEAPPLE

- 1 oven-ready duck
- 5 cups water
- 3 tablespoons rich soy sauce
- 1 fresh pineapple
- 1 can water chestnuts
- 1 bunch spring onions
- 2 green chilies
- sesame oil
- 1 large clove garlic

Cut the duck in half lengthways, using a meat cleaver and poultry scissors. Place the halves in the wok and pour in the water, then add 1 tablespoon of the soy sauce. Put the lid on the wok and bring to a boil. Reduce heat so that the liquid simmers steadily and cook for an hour.

While the duck is cooking prepare the remaining ingredients.

Trim the leaves off the pineapple and cut off the stalk end. Cut off the peel and cut out all the spines, then slice the spring onions diagonally. Cut the stalks off the chilies and remove all their seeds, then slice the green part thinly.

At the end of the simmering time remove the duck from the stock and set it aside. Pour the stock out of the wok (this should be chilled and the fat skimmed off, then the stock can be used in oriental soups and stews) and wipe out the pan. Grease it with a little sesame oil. When the duck is cool enough to handle cut all the meat off the bones and slice it into pieces. Heat the wok and add the chilies, crush the garlic into the pan and add the duck. Stir-fry until lightly browned, then add the water chestnuts and pineapple and cook for a few minutes. Stir in the remaining soy sauce and any juice from the fruit, and sprinkle over the spring onions. Cook for a minute before serving straight from the wok. Serves 4.

Munchy, Crunchy Specialty Vegetables Can Help To Slim Down

Few drops bottled hot pepper sauce
Salt and pepper to taste
2 heads Belgian endive
Watercress sprigs for garnish
For filling, combine the ricotta or cottage cheese with carrot, green onion, chopped herbs and enough milk to make a smooth consistency. Add pepper sauce and salt and pepper to taste. Separate endive leaves, reserving the tiny leaves for another time. In larger leaves, spoon about 1 tablespoon filling carefully into each leaf. Garnish each with a sprig of watercress. Cover and chill until serving time. Makes about 16 appetizers. About 22 calories each.

QUICK SHRIMP CHOP SUEY
2 tablespoons cooking sherry
2 tablespoons low-sodium soy sauce
1 tablespoon hoisin sauce
1/2 cup chicken broth
2 teaspoons cornstarch
About 1/4 cup chicken broth
1 pound medium or large shrimp, shelled and deveined
1 tablespoon minced fresh ginger root
1 red or green bell pepper, seeded and cut into 1-inch squares
1 1-pound package chop suey mix
1/2 cup peanut halves
For sauce, stir together sherry, soy, hoisin sauce, 1/2 cup chicken broth and cornstarch until well blended. Set aside. Heat about 2 tablespoons chicken broth in a wok or large skillet until very hot. Add shrimp and ginger root, stir-frying until shrimp turn pink. Remove from wok.
Add more chicken broth; stir-fry bell pepper about 2 minutes. Remove from wok. Stir sauce; pour into wok. Cook and stir sauce about 1 minute or until bubbly. Add shrimp, chop suey mix and peanuts to wok; toss to combine with sauce. Cover and steam 2 minutes or until heated through; serve at once. Makes 4 servings; 200 calories/serving.

PEASANT OMELET
1 tablespoon cooking oil
3/4 cup chopped sunchoke
1 medium zucchini, halved

ONIONS

six equal crosswise slices. Dredge the onions in the cheese and roll the sides of the potato through the cheese.
Reassemble the potato with a slice of onion between each slice of potato and place in a piece of foil that has a thin pat of butter on it. Seal the foil and bake at 375 degrees for 45 minutes. May also be done on the middle rack of the grill.
WALLA WALLA SWEETS & SALMON
8 slices Walla Walla Sweet Onion, 3/8-inch thick
4 6-ounce salmon fillets, boneless
4 teaspoons butter, divided
4 tablespoons parmesan cheese
Dried dill weed
Fresh parsley, chopped
In a heat-proof dish, for each serving, layer one slice Walla Walla Sweet Onion, a salmon fillet, a sprinkle of dill, another onion slice and 1 teaspoon of butter. Bake, uncovered, for 20 minutes at 450 degrees.
Uncover, sprinkle 1 tablespoon parmesan cheese over each serving broiling briefly until cheese is melted and lightly browned. Garnish with chopped fresh parsley. 4 servings.

VELVETY VIDALIA SWEET SALAD
1/2 cup sliced almonds
3 tablespoons sugar
1/2 head iceberg lettuce
1/2 head romaine lettuce
1 cup chopped celery
1 Vidalia Sweet Onion
1 11-ounce can mandarin oranges, drained
Dressing:
1/2 teaspoon salt
Dash of pepper
1/4 cup vegetable oil
1 tablespoon chopped parsley
2 tablespoons sugar
2 tablespoons vinegar
Dash Tabasco sauce
In a small pan over medium heat, cook almonds and sugar, stirring constantly until almonds and sugar dissolve. Watch carefully as they will burn easily. Cool and store in airtight container. Mix all dressing ingredients and chill.
Slice the Vidalia Sweet Onion and separate into rings. Mix lettuce, celery and onions. Just before serving add almonds and oranges. Toss with dressing. 4-6 servings.

1 small tomato, chopped
2 shallots, thinly sliced
1 tablespoon chopped fresh herbs such as rosemary, basil, oregano, chervil or chives
1/4 teaspoon pepper
1 tablespoon oil or butter
3 eggs
1 tablespoon water
Dash of salt
Heat oil in a small skillet. Sauté sunchoke, zucchini, tomato and shallots for 3 minutes or until vegetables are crisp-tender. Stir in fresh herbs and pepper. Cover and keep warm. In another small skillet, heat oil or butter. Whip together eggs, water and salt lightly; pour into hot skillet. Stir mixture for a few seconds; then allow to cook for 1 minute.

Use a spatula to lift egg mixture, allowing uncooked portion to flow underneath. When omelet is cooked, spoon the vegetable mixture over top half of omelet; fold bottom half of omelet over filling. Turn out into platter. Makes 2 servings, 275 calories/serving.

VEGETABLE-STUFFED FINNISH POTATOES
3 to 4 yellow finnish potatoes, scrubbed
1 cup broccoli florets

Half of a red bell pepper, chopped
1 leek, sliced (white part only)
1 tablespoon chopped fresh herbs such as basil, chives, rosemary or thyme
1/8 teaspoon pepper
3/4 cup shredded cheddar, Monterey Jack or Swiss cheese Pierce potatoes several times with fork. Bake potatoes in a 350-degree oven for about 50 minutes, or until tender. (Or, cook potatoes in a microwave about 5 minutes; let stand 5 minutes.) Meanwhile, steam broccoli and bell pepper about 5 minutes.

Add leeks; steam 2 minutes more. Cover and keep warm. Split potatoes; place on a heat-proof platter. Heap vegetables over potatoes. Sprinkle on fresh herbs, pepper and shredded cheese. Return to oven until cheese melts. Makes 4 servings, about 160 calories/serving.

Fun Meals Aid In Planning Menus For In-Between Time Of Year

MARINATED VEGETABLE KEBOBS

- 1 jar (6 ounces) marinated artichoke hearts, undrained
- 1 can (11 ounces) condensed zesty tomato soup/sauce
- 1/4 cup water
- 3 tablespoons wine vinegar
- 4 large cauliflowerets
- 4 pitted ripe olives
- 4 pimento strips, cut 1-inch wide
- Salad greens

To make dressing: Drain artichokes, reserving 1/4 cup marinade. In covered jar or shaker, combine reserved marinade, soup, water and vinegar.

To make kebobs: On four 6-inch bamboo skewers, alternately thread artichoke hearts, cauliflowerets, olives and pimento. Serve on salad greens with dressing.

Makes 1 1/2 cups dressing or 4 servings. Calories per serving: 171.

CHEDDAR BAKED FISH

- 1 can (11 ounces) condensed cheddar cheese soup/dip
- 1/4 cup sour cream
- 2 teaspoons dry sherry
- 1/8 teaspoon cayenne pepper
- 2 cups cooked rice
- 1/4 cup sliced green onions
- 4 cod, halibut or swordfish steaks, about 1/2 inch thick (about 2 pounds)
- Sliced green onion for garnish

Preheat oven to 375 degrees F. In a small bowl, stir soup, sour cream, sherry and cayenne. Set aside.

In medium bowl, stir rice, onions and 1/2 cup of the soup mixture. In each of four buttered 8-ounce ramekins, place 1/2 cup of the rice mixture. Top with a fish steak; cover with foil.

Bake 30 minutes or until fish flakes easily with fork. Heat remaining soup mixture; serve with fish. Garnish with additional green onions.

For microwave cooking: Stir soup, sour cream, sherry and cayenne in small bowl and set aside. In medium bowl stir rice, onions and 1/2 cup of the soup mixture. Place 1/2 cup of the rice mixture in each of four buttered 8-ounce ramekins and cover with fish.

Arrange ramekins in microwave oven. Cover with waxed paper.

Microwave on High 10 minutes or until fish flakes easily with fork. Rearrange ramekins twice during cooking. Remove ramekins from oven; let stand, covered.

Meanwhile, in 2-cup glass measure, microwave remaining soup mixture 1 1/2 minutes or until hot. Serve with fish. Makes four servings. Calories per serving: 421.

ORIENTAL GARDEN SOUP

- 1 cup (10 3/4 ounces) condensed chicken broth
- 1 soup can water
- 1/2 cup cubed tofu
- 1/2 cup sliced mushrooms
- Dash Chinese 5-spice powder
- 2 tablespoons thinly sliced leeks or green onions
- 1/4 teaspoon slivered lemon peel

In 2-quart saucepan, combine broth, water, tofu, mushrooms and 5-spice powder. Over high heat, heat to boiling. Reduce heat to low. Cover; simmer 5 minutes.

To serve: Divide leeks and lemon peel evenly among four soup bowls. Ladle soup into bowls.

NOTE: Substitute a sprinkle each of ground cinnamon, cloves and paprika for dash of Chinese 5-spice powder.

For microwave cooking: In 2-quart microwave-safe casserole, combine broth, water, tofu, mushrooms and Chinese 5-spice powder. Cover. Microwave on High for 6 minutes or until hot. Serve as directed above.

Makes about 3 1/2 cups or 4 servings. Calories per serving: 48.

MAGIC WANDS

- 1/2 cup chunky peanut butter
- 1 cup sifted powdered sugar
- 1 cup shredded coconut
- 1 cup raisins
- 1 to 1 1/2 tablespoons milk
- 1 to 1 1/2 cups crushed Do-si-dos
- Blend well, peanut butter, powdered sugar, coconut and raisins. Add enough milk to make firm mixture. Form into thin fingers and roll each in cookie crumbs. Chill.

Peanuts Maintain Popularity

March is National Peanut Month so lets take a look at this great tasting celebrity.

Peanuts were first brought to America from Africa. They were raised in the South mostly as food for the poor (sole food). During the War-Between-the-States, this crop was eaten by soldiers on both sides.

Union soldiers spread the popularity of our celebrity (the peanut) by taking him home and sharing him with friends and family. History shows that the production of peanuts increased rapidly after the Civil War.

Peanut "pastry", known better to us as peanut butter, was developed in 1890 by a St. Louis doctor who was looking for a nutritious, easily-digested food to prescribe to his patients. Today peanut butter is a staple found in everyone's cupboard across our country.

At present there are more than 300 by-products made from peanuts. These products include; cheese, oil, flour, livestock food, face powder, face cream, soap, paint, dyes and axle grease, just to name a few.

In North Carolina peanuts are grown in the eastern section of the state, with most of the production being in the northeast area. An average of 275,000 tons of peanuts were harvested this past year, grossing $150 million of income to North Carolina farmers.

PEANUT INFLATION CORN-BREAD

- 1/2 cup peanut butter
- 1 pound ground beef (saute/drain off fat)
- 1 onion finely chopped
- 1/2 pound grated cheddar cheese
- 3 chopped Jalapeno peppers (optional)
- 12-ounce jar pimentos, chopped
- Mix Together:
 - 1 cup corn meal
 - 1/2 teaspoon baking soda
 - 3/4 teaspoon salt
 - 2 eggs, well beaten
 - 1 cup buttermilk
 - 1/2 cup peanut oil
 - 1 can (303) cream style corn

Preheat oven to 350 degrees F. Stir peanut butter into cooked ground beef. Pour 1/2 of corn meal batter into greased large iron skillet (or 9 1/2" casserole dish). Spread in meat and peanut butter mixture. For next layer, put in onions, peppers, cheese and pimentos. Pour remaining batter on top. Bake uncovered for 50-60 minutes. Serves 6-8.

A DATE WITH PEANUTS

- 20 pitted dates (prunes)
 - 20 whole salted peanuts
 - 20 uncooked bacon strips (approximately 2 1/2 inches long)
 - 20 toothpicks
- Stuff dates with peanuts. Wrap with bacon strips, secure with toothpicks. Bake for 20 minutes at 350 degrees. Cool before serving.

FUDGY PEANUT PIE

- 9" regular pie shell
- 1 stick (1/2 cup) margarine; melted
- 1/4 cup cocoa
- 1/4 cup all-purpose flour
- 1 cup sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon vanilla
- 2 eggs, slightly beaten
- 3/4 cup salted peanuts, chopped
- Mix all ingredients together and pour into unbaked pie shell. Bake in a 350 degree oven for 25 minutes. Serve warm with whipped topping. Makes a 9" pie.

Holly Farms® guarantees the highest standards of quality and freshness in the world.

Holly Farms guarantees The Taste of First Day Freshness.™

There's fresh. And there's Holly Farms fresh. Because every one of Holly Farms' ten thousand employees is committed to assuring you of absolutely the freshest chicken possible. And that's why Holly Farms guarantees you The Taste of First Day Freshness every time. That's not just an idle promise. That's a full money-back guarantee.

We demand far more inspections than the Federal Government.

We're continuously checking our chickens' freshness from before hatching until after they're in the store. Every Holly Farms plant has its own laboratories to closely monitor every aspect of quality and freshness from feed ingredients to final product freshness. And we don't leave it there either. We send our own highly trained inspectors right into the food stores to check on meat case temperatures and climate conditions.

Our chickens dine on a natural blend of corn and soybeans delivered by our own computerized feed mills. The result is the freshest food for our chickens. And that means the freshest food for you.

To be really fresh, you've got to be fast.

When it comes to freshness, speed is of the essence. Every Holly Farms chicken is processed, packaged and ready to deliver in less than three hours. Then it's shipped out fast. In most cases Holly Farms chicken arrives at the market less than twelve hours after leaving the plant. And that plays no small part in how we deliver The Taste of First Day Freshness.

Real freshness requires the right refrigeration.

Temperature is a vital ingredient to freshness. At Holly Farms we've pioneered our own chilling process to maintain a perfect freshness-preserving temperature. Then, to ensure that our chicken arrives at the store with The Taste of First Day Freshness, we send it in our own fleet of refrigerated trucks—the largest in the industry.

FreshGuard™ packaging keeps freshness all wrapped up.

Every Holly Farms chicken comes in a special package that's not only tear-resistant. It's air-resistant. Every package is heat-sealed to keep the freshness in. FreshGuard packaging. It's another reason we can guarantee The Taste of First Day Freshness.

We never stop looking for fresh ideas.

Fresh thinking is what keeps Holly Farms products at their freshest. Every person at Holly Farms is encouraged to develop fresh ideas for feeding, raising, processing, packaging, distributing, inspecting. Because at Holly Farms we're not just living up to the highest standards of quality and freshness. We're setting them.

What the highest standards mean for you.

It's this simple. Every time you purchase a Holly Farms product, you can be sure you are getting the freshest, highest-quality food a company can deliver. We guarantee it. And you can taste it.

PLUS A WHOLE LOT MORE. Like our W-D Brand U.S. Choice beef and Harvest Fresh pick-your-own produce. And complete delicatessens and bakeries in most stores. All this, plus the quality, variety and service you deserve in a food store. That's an unbeatable combination other food stores can't match!

YOUR BEST TIP
SIRLOIN TIP!

Take a tip from The Beef People and buy a Whole Sirloin Tip for your freezer. It's U.S. Choice... naturally tender and full of the hearty satisfying flavor of good beef.

And it's economical, because it gives you the beginnings of many delicious meals...savory roast, country-fried steaks, rich brown stews and of course, great ground round for burgers or casseroles!

So take a tip on a great buy - a Whole Sirloin Tip!
