PTL Set Up $265,000 Account For 'Other Woman'

By WILLIAM STRACENER
Associated Press Writer
FORT MILL, S.C. (AP) — PTL lawyers agreed to pay $265,000 to the woman whose sexual liaison with Jim Bakker led to his resignation, a newspaper said today as the ministry's new board gathered to decide PTL's future.

Leaders of Bakker's denomination, the Assemblies of God, meanwhile, were to meet again today in Springfield, Mo., to weigh misconduct charges against him.

The Rev. Jerry Falwell said that he hopes "the Lord will allow us the privilege of making some kind of contribution back toward civility" in the new PTL board's first meeting. He was interviewed on CBS television's "The Morning Program" today shortly before the meeting began.

On Wednesday, Falwell, who succeeded Bakker as chairman of the 500,000-member PTL, had said the eight board members may offer their own resignations at the meeting.

"We may walk in there and find it's intolerable, unsolvable, that our presence is not going to provide any thing positive and therefore there is no need for us to stay," Falwell told reporters in Cocoa Beach, Fla.

The PTL board meeting was closed. A security guard at the Heritage Grand Hotel at PTL's Heritage USA center said board members had gathered there shortly after 8 a.m.

The board includes the Rev. Richard Dortch, who had been executive director and is now the organization's president and host of the ministry's "PTL Club" television show, and former U.S. Interior Secretary James Watt.

In its report, The Charlotte (N.C.) Observer said a $150,000 fund was set up from which Jessica Hahn received monthly payments of $800 to $1,200, in addition to a $115,000 payment to her representatives in February 1985.

Ms. Hahn, who had a sexual encounter with Bakker seven years ago, would get the entire $150,000 after 20 years if she did not sue Bakker or reveal the liaison, unidentified sources told the Observer.

The newspaper said the fund has operated since spring 1985, with Ms. Hahn receiving $10,045 that year. The $150,000 was deposited in the Bank of Los Angeles, the newspaper said, citing legal documents. The documents did not reveal the source of the money, the Observer said.

Earlier, the Observer reported the $115,000 payment, of which about $20,000 went to Ms. Hahn directly. The rest was used to pay legal and other expenses, an unidentified source told the newspaper.

The paper said the fund is based on a trust arrangement, apparently never signed, that was part of an agreement reached after meetings involving Dortch, PTL's attorneys and Ms. Hahn's representative.

A retired California Superior Court judge, Charles Woodmansee, acted as mediator, the newspaper said. He approved the settlement's terms after an informal hearing at which Ms. Hahn spoke.

"The judge talked to me and asked me what I wanted to do, asked me if it was all right if they set it up like this," Ms. Hahn said. "Nobody put a gun — the judge said how do I feel about this deal?"

County Nearing Election Decision

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer
Pitt County Commissioners may move a step closer toward changing the method of electing members of the board when they meet next week to consider the adoption of a position paper on the subject.

If the position paper is approved, commissioners are then expected to adopt a resolution asking the General Assembly to change the election process.

Commissioners began looking at a new election method — one that would give blacks a greater opportunity to be elected — early last year at the request of the Pitt County Chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

After promising to change the method of electing board members, commissioners hired Raleigh lawyer Mike Crowell to help with the project and hired East Carolina University's Regional Development Institute to do the field work associated with drawing new commissioner residency districts.

New districts are necessary as part of a plan to change the method of electing members of the board to assure black representation and to conform with the federal Voting Rights Act.

At present, board members must be residents of the district they represent but are elected by voters countywide.

As a result of the field work done by the Regional Development Institute, the board agreed on six proposed new residency districts — two of them predominately black. One member of the board would be elected by the people living in each district.

In addition to the six district representatives, commissioners proposed that the new board include three at-large representatives — commissioners who could live anywhere in the county and who would be elected by voters countywide.

Commissioner Charles Gaskins said the at-large seats would serve two purposes — ensure that some of the board members feel they represent the interests of the entire county and provide an opportunity for blacks living in predominantly white districts to be elected to the board.

State Official Says Rural Growth Based On Farms

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer
Agriculture is still the centerpiece of our rural economy, said the secretary of the state Department of Commerce during a rural economic development conference Wednesday.

"When agriculture suffers, rural development is also in trouble," said Claude Pope to community leaders of eastern North Carolina who gathered for the conference at the Sheraton.

"Agriculture and rural development are inseparable.

"North Carolina has been in the business of economic development for a long time," he said. In the 1930s, the state had a policy for industrialization; in the '50s, the Research Triangle Park area was planned and, currently, the state is advancing in microelectronics and pharmaceuticals.

But, when planning a rural economy, it is important to realize that "companies go where they want to go — not necessarily where you or where we want," Pope said. "The places we want them to go need to be more attractive" than those of the competitors.

"How do we make rural North Carolina an attractive place?" he asked. He then said there are six categories for rural growth.

Infrastructure development is the first category, Pope said, putting emphasis on water and sewer systems. Gov. Jim Martin supports an $80 million program that will provide statewide, local water and sewer systems based on need, Pope said.

Other improvements in this category include improving highways U.S. 264, 64 and 17 and improving bridges at the Albermarle and Roanoke sounds.

Education was cited second because "no company is going to locate where children of its employees are not going to have a good education," he said.

Programs such as having a step-ladder for teachers and more adequate schools would improve this category, Pope said. "This is particularly true in our rural areas.

"We like to think we have, and we do have, a system of pay as you go" instead of pay as you use, when it comes to equipping schools.

A labor force is the fourth category, Pope said. "Nowhere is our effort better (in providing a labor force) than in rural North Carolina."

Community colleges and promoting these local institutions would help support this category, he said.

"Jobs are likely to come, more often, in greater quantity from small businesses," Pope said, stressing the importance of supporting small businesses.

In an effort to do this, the Department of Community Colleges established small business centers to offer direct assistance through classes and seminars, he said.

Strong support for existing industries represents the fifth category, Pope said, because new economic growth may be built from these industries.

"We shouldn't ask them to pick up the tab for new firms" that do not pay adequate taxes, he said. "Subsidizing our neighbors' growth doesn't seem to go over too well."

Local initiative form the sixth category, Pope said. "There's a lot of leg work to be done."

Community leaders need to combine efforts to unite public and private resources, he said. "Each community also has some unique resources and assets" to develop for growth, Pope said. "Rural development can be a reality for North Carolina."

Eakin Says UNC Units Can Become 'Exemplary System'

By DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer

RALEIGH — Strong educational leadership and prudent investments by the N.C. General Assembly have provided University of North Carolina institutions with the opportunity to establish an "exemplary system of higher education," East Carolina University Chancellor Richard Eakin said today.

"The reputation of the state of North Carolina as the sponsor of an exemplary system of higher education is alive and well across the nation," Eakin told members of the N.C. General Assembly's Joint Appropriations Base Budget Committee on Education.

"We have much to be proud of as citizens of North Carolina. I am mindful of those in leadership positions who, over many years, have nurtured this fine system and who have assured that adequate state funding has been available to accomplish important teaching and research aims."

Eakin, who assumed his responsibilities as ECU's new chancellor on March 1, was in Raleigh to present legislators East Carolina's proposed $2.4 billion budget for the 1987-89 biennium.

Innovative thinking by the institutions as well as the state's government have been the keys to success, according to Eakin.

"As a result of their progressive thinking and positive action, we have been able to equip generation after generation of residents with the knowledge, understandings, and skills necessary for a prosperous economy and vital society," he said.

"I am especially mindful of those who have brought East Carolina University to its present stage of development. In my judgment, those who have served East Carolina University as administrative leaders, faculty and staff have used state resources prudently and have contributed in exceptional ways to the strength of our education and service mission — a mission which extends across the state of North Carolina with special emphasis on the needs of eastern North Carolina."

The UNC system has been able to attract quality students, Eakin said.

"One of the most important attributes of a successful state system of higher education is its ability to foster access to qualified students, with minimal constraints based upon the student's economic standing," he said. "That attribute is fully present in North Carolina."

"I congratulate the university and the state on their commitment to bear a major share of the cost of higher education and to keep tuition as low as possible."

Eakin said the system's success has been recognized by business leaders in eastern North Carolina.

"As I meet with with business leaders and hear their praise for our graduates, as I witness the generosity of alumni and friends in support of East Carolina University, as I see the contributions university research efforts have generated for this country, and as I observe the new interest among students in careers as teachers, I realize that much is right about higher education."

Eakin cited East Carolina's growth as an example of the system's effectiveness.

Prison Cuts Ordered

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin today ordered the state Parole Commission to implement emergency measures to reduce the state's prison population, which has exceeded a ceiling imposed this month to ward off a federal takeover of the system.

Under legislation enacted March 11, the commission within 60 days must release enough inmates to reduce the population from today's total of 18,067 to 17,280.

Correction Secretary Aaron Johnson also announced that the state prison system would not accept any misdemeanor violators serving terms of 30 days to 180 days until further notice.

At a news conference, Martin said there was no cause for concern that the emergency measures will endanger public safety.

"There won't be a sudden flood of prisoners (released) because it will just be a gradual increase over what they've been doing," Martin said.

The emergency action was triggered when today became the 15th consecutive day the population has

Farmville Accepts Housing Grant

FARMVILLE — Farmville commissioners have voted to accept a federal housing development grant of $358,715 for assistance with the construction of an apartment complex.

The grant will be used by Square Six Corp. to build Walnut Ridge Apartments, six one-bedroom and 14 two-bedroom units to be located on the 200 block of West Horne Avenue and the 200 block of North Walnut Street. The building corporation is composed of Jack Farrior, W. H.

Farrior Jr., Alex Allen III, David Stowe and Vance B. Taylor, all Farmville residents.

Provisions of the grant specify that 10 percent of the apartments will be rented to families whose income does not exceed 80 percent of Pitt County's median income. At present rates, this would mean that a family of four would have to have income of $18,160 or less to be considered as a tenant. Of the four units reserved for rental to families with incomes within these guidelines are two one-bedroom apartments and two two-bedroom apartments.

The town will be responsible for monitoring the rental of the four designated special units, but will have no control over the rental of the other 16.

The square footage of the project will be 19,270.

Construction is expected to start in May, with partial occupancy planned by February, 1988.

In other business Monday night, the commissioners passed on second reading an ordinance to extend the town limits to include the right of way on both sides of U.S. 264A at the highway's intersection with Farmville Central High School's driveway. The annexation will allow the Department of Transportation to lower the speed limit to 35 mph.

The board also voted on second reading to adopt a flood damage prevention ordinance as recommended and required for citizen participation in the National Flood Insurance Program.

Peace Tree Planted

Some Greenville residents joined Caroline Killeen, a "Bicyclist for Peace," in planting a tree for peace Tuesday morning on the Greenville Town Common. The small live oak tree was accepted by the parks and recreation department to grow near the amphitheater being constructed at the end of Evans Street. The occasion was one of a series of plantings for peace along the route that Ms. Killeen, 61, is taking on a bicycle trek to Moscow. A prayer was led by the Rev. John Price during the tree-planting ceremony. Ms. Killeen says her purpose for the trip is "to promote peace and understanding between the United States and the U.S.S.R." She encourages others to "invest in nature instead of technology," and advocates returning to a 1940's lifestyle — when there were no nuclear weapons. She encourages curbing the use of cars as much as possible and riding "peace machines," as she refers to bicycles. She says she has written to General Secretary Mikhail Gorbachev of the Soviet Union telling him she is bringing a pinon tree with her to Moscow and inviting him to help her plant it for peace.

Investors Face Back-Tax Payments In Wake Of Tax-Fraud Indictments

By JOHN M. DOYLE
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The head of CBS, several actors and other investors who took more than $350 million in deductions in a tax-shelter scheme that led to the indictment of three businessmen will have to repay the taxes, authorities say.

A federal grand jury Wednesday handed up a 31-count indictment accusing the three of creating limited partnerships promising $4 in tax deductions for every dollar invested. Investors included actors Lorne Greene, Michael Landon and Sidney Poitier, U.S. Postmaster General Preston R. Tisch, his brother, CBS Chief Executive Officer Laurence A. Tisch; television producer Norman Lear and the late artist Andy Warhol, the indictment said.

"The investors were not involved in criminal activities," said U.S. Attorney Rudolph Giuliani, but "will have to pay back all of the tax that they did not pay" plus interest and possible penalties to be determined by the Internal Revenue Service.

Twenty investors were named, but officials said there were more than 100.

"If it isn't the largest it's one of the largest tax cases ever brought," said Giuliani.

According to the indictment, Charles Agee Atkins, 32, of Amelia Island, Fla.; William S. Hack, 62, of New York, and Ernest M. Grunebaum, 52, of Chappaqua, N.Y., created more than $1.3 billion in fraudulent trading losses and interest expenses on bogus transactions in U.S. Treasury bills and other government securities.

A portion of those phony losses allegedly was used to offset fictitious gains that also were created as part of the scheme.

The fraudulent transactions generated losses "that enabled investors to deduct more than $350 million from their taxes," Giuliani said.

The three also allegedly sold more than $200 million in bogus trading losses and interest expenses to other unidentified entities and individuals to be used as tax deductions. The $200 million was part of the $1.3 billion in fraudulent trading losses and interest expenses, the indictment said.

Grunebaum also was charged in a separate three-count indictment with participating in separate phony

Treasury bills transactions that generated more than $138 million in fictitious losses.

If convicted of all counts, Atkins faces up to 86 years in prison and $145,000 in fines, Giuliani said. Hack faces a maximum penalty of 17 years and $30,000 in fines, and Grunebaum 92 years and $160,000.

The three, who remain, are to be arraigned April 2.

John Scanlon, a spokesman for Laurence Tisch, said the CBS executive and his brother "were limited partners along with more than 100 other investors based on the advice of their counsel."

"They disposed of their investment in 1983 before there was any indication of a problem or impropriety," Scanlon said. "They will do whatever is appropriate to settle this matter." Greene and Landon invested in the partnership at the urging of their longtime accounting firm, said their business manager, Jay Eller. Eller said he believed the firm, which he refused to identify, brought Lear and others into the partnership.

"We went through the numbers very, very carefully on why this was going to make a profit and the conservative nature of the operation," Eller said by telephone from his Los Angeles office. "We were assured that it was a perfectly legitimate thing."

According to the indictment, Greene and his wife sustained a loss of $333,838 on his 1981 tax return and Landon sustained a loss of more than $1 million on his return.

"We've paid the government what it asked," said Eller.

Spokesmen for Poitier and Lear refused to comment on the matter.

South Africa, Banks Agree On Payments

By ALLISTER SPARKS
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — South Africa has reached agreement with creditor banks to reschedule the repayment of $13 billion in frozen foreign debts as its economy shows signs of recovering from the crisis that sent its currency plummeting 18 months ago.

The agreement was announced in London by Foreign Minister Barend du Plessis after a meeting with 34 main creditor banks.

At the same time a forecast by a leading economic research institute here indicated that the economy was pulling out of its deepest recession since World War II and could reach a growth rate of 3 percent in gross domestic product this year.

The Bureau for Economic Research at Stellenbosch University, while warning that the economy was not about to exhibit great vigor, forecast a "meaningfully higher" growth rate due to the strengthening of the rand, an increase in manufacturing activity and a return of business confidence.

Under terms of the new debt agreement, South Africa is to repay 13 percent of the frozen debt within three years. This amounts to $1.4 billion, of which $508 million must be repaid during the second half of this year and the rest in installments after that. In addition, South Africa will continue to pay all interest on its total foreign debt of $23 billion.

South Africa imposed the freeze when major American banks, led by Chase-Manhattan, refused to roll over short-term loans because of the racial unrest sweeping the country at the time and anti-apartheid pressure to disengage from South Africa.

This led to a run on demand for repayment by other international banks, until South Africa found itself faced with a demand for the repayment of $13 billion in short-term loans by mid-1986.

Unable to meet the demand, South Africa froze repayment of the short-term loans and introduced strict exchange controls to stop foreign capital leaving the country. This included introducing a two-tier system for the rand currency, with separate internal and external valuations.

The agreement announced Tuesday, which was signed three months before the expiration date of an earlier rescheduling arrangement agreed to in February last year, is being hailed here as a positive achievement by the country's financial managers in stabilizing an economy which only a year ago looked to be in serious trouble.

As the governor of South Africa's Reserve Bank, Gerhard de Kock, put it Wednesday: The creditor banks "did not enter into an agreement because they were overcome with affection for us. They knew they were dealing with a country that is running a current account surplus, that has rising reserves and a responsible fiscal and monetary policy."

"Compared with what is going on in Latin America and some other parts of the world, South Africa is paying all its interest, and not just in theory," de Kock added.

Du Plessis said the atmosphere at Tuesday's talks was "completely different" from those held last year. He said there were signs of renewed political and economic confidence in South Africa.

Growth of wholesale/retail, government and service employment in Pitt County exceeded 70 percent in the past decade.

Keep 55

If a bill approved by Congress gets through soon some states will be setting 65 mph speed limits on many rural highways.

The measure to allow states to set the higher speed limits outside urban areas with populations of at least 50,000 has passed Congress. It faces difficulty with the president.

The measure is combined with a bill which appropriates $88 billion for road construction projects. It is this measure that the White House has threatened with a veto.

If that happened, a two-thirds vote would be required to override the veto.

It will be just as well if the 65 mile per hour provision goes down with the veto. It is another case of 'where do we stop?' Many people exceed the speed limit by a few miles per hour feeling that that won't draw the attention of traffic officers. If they exceed the 55 mph limit they will also exceed the 65 mph limit.

Reducing speed limits was found to reduce accidents and save gasoline. The nation worked out of the gasoline shortage but there is hardly anyone knowledgeable on the subject who doesn't feel that we will be facing petroleum product shortages in the future.

Our alternative energy programs have all but disappeared in this new era of plentiful gas. One way we can save is the 55 mph speed limit — and save it we should, even if it is with a presidential veto.

Encouragement

North Carolina Congressman Charlie Rose is not pleased by the State Goals and Policy Board encouraging farmers to look for alternative crops to replace tobacco.

Rose complains the advice is coming at an inappropriate time when tobacco companies are being encouraged to buy more domestic leaf. He sees no chance of this country to suddenly stop smoking tomorrow and observes as long as it's legal to manufacture cigarettes he wants North Carolina farmers to grow as much of that tobacco as they can.

Nor does he think those tobacco companies will stop making cigarettes if our farmers stop growing tobacco. He expects a continuing demand for tobacco for many years to come.

We would agree with that, too.

Still, if one is to assume there are small farmers who have had unhappy experiences with tobacco, the Goals and Policy Board would be remiss in not reminding alternative crops are a potential that cannot be ignored.

The small family farm is a distinct part of eastern North Carolina's heritage and they need encouragement during a period of sometimes heartbreaking frustration.

Outhouses Back

Outhouses are nothing new on the farm scene. In fact there was a time when there was no farm home without an outhouse. They were essential to the residents who were many decades removed from the flush type toilets which required the development of running water and septic tanks.

Building the outhouse was simple. All that was required was a wooden building which was set over a pit, placed far away from the house so as not to be offensive but close enough to be available.

Well, outhouses gradually disappeared as electricity came and water pumps were developed. Indoor plumbing was as feasible for the rural home as it was in the city.

Lo and behold, along comes the federal government with new regulations which will bring back the outhouse. These modern day outhouses will be provided, not for the rural home, but for those who work in the fields. They won't be like the old ones, made of wood and with half moons cut in their doors. These probably will be portable and in appearance will be more like the ones found around construction sites.

It is likely that most farmers will turn to the services which provide the portable rest rooms and service them. That, of course, means increased costs for farmers who are already wondering how they can continue to make a profit.

Portable outhouses have not been a necessity on farms for thousands of years, but perhaps their time has indeed come. We can only hope that when the regulations are issued next month they will be flexible enough so that farmers won't have to spend inordinate amounts of money to provide them.

Media Field Day With 'Godgate'

New York Newsday called it "Heavengate." The New York Post, announcing that Tammy Faye Bakker has contributed to a book about how to keep one's husband happy by wearing false eyelashes, among other things, put the news under a headline that read: "Sex Tips From Tammy Faye Bakker."

ABC's "Nightline" dedicated its Monday and Tuesday shows to the evangelical holy wars, and David Letterman has already delivered "come-on lines" jocularly attributed to Tammy's husband Jim, who resigned as head of his PTL ministry after reports of a fling with a church secretary.

But for all the attention the media are giving the infighting among television's most famous moralizers, the journalists on the front line — the staff of The Charlotte (N.C.) Observer — are trying to go about their business with a silence almost monastic by newspaper standards.

Observer editors Wednesday avoided commenting on the story, which they broke last Friday and have followed steadily for the past 10 years. Top management mostly refused on-the-record interviews. Reporters spoke on background. Charles Shepard, 32, who has been covering the Bakkers' earthly kingdom since he came to The Observer 10 years ago, did not return calls.

The reason, according to some Observer staffers and former staffers, is that Bakker and some of his friends have either said or implied that The Observer was part of the alleged unholy conspiracy to oust the Bakkers from their electronic ministry.

'But for all the attention the media are giving the infighting among television's most famous moralizers, the journalists on the front line — the staff of The Charlotte (N.C.) Observer — are trying to go about their business with a silence almost monastic by newspaper standards.'

For a decade, The Observer has been "out there alone on this story," as one staffer put it. And even though the attention from around the world is "exciting" right now, The Observer will undoubtedly be out there alone again once the cameras aim elsewhere.

In the only on-the-record comment from the paper, Observer Editor Richard A. Oppel said late Wednesday: "For more than 10 years we've been covering PTL. We do so because it's become a major institution in our community. It employs 2,000 people, has annual revenues of $240 million and projects an image nationwide from the Charlotte area."

"We've covered their day-to-day activities. We've had front-page stories about the throngs out there attending their Christmas celebrations. We've written about their real estate transactions."

"But we've also gone deeper, covering the financial activities as we would with any major institution in our community. Jim Bakker has repeatedly questioned our motives in pursuit of this story. The accuracy and fairness of what we've done has never been successfully challenged. And that's all I want to say."

Journalists who have covered or dealt with PTL and similar organizations have found reporting all the more difficult, partly because the huge religious empires are private. In addition, some believers tend to view a negative story about their preacher as being the work of the Devil.

"For years, Jim and Tammy have made The Charlotte Observer like a household word," says one former reporter. "It was 'the Great Satan paper.'"

What has caused such hue and cry from the evangelicals has been a solid stream of news for Charlotte readers about what PTL did with the money it raised. The stories often coupled a televised claim of personal poverty by Bakker with the purchase of some new worldly good.

During one such "financial crisis," for example, The Observer reported that the Bakkers bought a $375,000 ocean-front condo and then spent $22,000 installing floor-to-ceiling mirrors. A new television dressing room came complete with gold-plated plumbing fixtures. In 1979, about a month after telling supporters that they had given "every penny of our life's savings to PTL," the Bakkers put down $6,000 for a houseboat.

Tammy Faye Bakker has also made frequent appearances in the paper. One story noted the time during a cooking segment of her show when she asked whether her fellow chef for the day — a local disc jockey — had herpes.

The paper quoted Tammy Bakker as stating once that "I take Him shopping with me. I say, 'Okay, Jesus, help me find a bargain.'"

After Observer stories prompted a Federal Communications Commission investigation of PTL, the Bakkers began a high-level campaign against the newspaper, including bumper stickers that said "Enough is enough."

Bakker would tell viewers to call The Observer, let editors know what they thought of the paper's coverage and cancel their subscriptions. One Observer manager said that in many cases the calls were from people who were far outside the Observer's circulation area.

Says Kent Bernhard, the former editor of The Charlotte News and now executive editor of the Detroit Free Press: "I have to say that PTL is really a lot more fun to read about some distance removed."

Public Forum

To the editor:

Like many others, I was perplexed at first when I learned of Ms. Gail Meeks' dismissal. It seemed heavy-handed and abrupt and, as an outsider, I was unable to make an informed evaluation. Upon reflection, a couple of things occurred to me: 1. The Council members really are not at liberty to get involved in a lot of discussion about the matter, for, unlike the typical Mom and Pop corner grocery store, the rules of management for a local government are complex and perilous. 2. Since I was not on the scene working with Ms. Meeks and the Council over the past years, I am not in a position to lambast her, the mayor or the council members on either side of the issue.

It appears to me that the editor of the Reflector, along with many persons who have written letters to the Public Forum, have been overly judgmental and have responded with a knee-jerk defense of the perceived underdog.

I don't believe we are serving the best interests of the people involved, or the best interest of the citizens by making emotional or unfounded condemnations. My assumption is that the Council dealt with the substantive issues in executive session. That content is not known, I am confident, by any of the writers, including myself. In the absence of considerable factual information on our part, perhaps we would do well to give it a rest and let the Council get on with its total job, which goes well beyond this present matter.

To the editor:

In reference to Stuart Shinn's letter on March 23, I found his reference to genetics interesting. I would like to remind him that the Nazi Party in Germany was very interested in genetics and psychology.

The facts are that the Republicans on the City Council got together and fired Gail Meeks just so they could replace her with a Republican city manager. Gail Meeks is a responsible, dedicated woman and a good public servant. To fire her just to put a Republican in her place is shameful conduct on the City Council's part.

I call for the City Council to reinstate Gail Meeks and to stop this politicking that is at the expense of the Greenville taxpayers.

Strength For Today

Few things are more devastating than self-pity. Some people take morbid delight in thinking of the slights to which they have been subjected and the malice which their associates have shown toward them. They continually brood over the prizes should have justly been theirs and which they have seen go to the unworthy.

That there is much injustice and little gratitude in the world no one can deny. But the well-adjusted people disengage themselves from the injustices of life with a shrug of the shoulders. There is an even better response than that, however. People who are truly noble of heart have always used occurrences such as these as the starting point of a better life.

It takes a lot of courage to make achievements stem from apparent defeat. But it can be done and those who do so achieve a moral victory.

The big banks would be a lot smaller if they didn't require such high checking balances.

We'll give you free checking and interest with a Prestige Checking account at First Federal. All for a low minimum balance of $300.

If you do business with one of the big banks, examine the service charges on your checking account. We think you'll be surprised.

If you check with anyone but First Federal, you're probably paying more in service charges than you're earning in interest...if you earn interest at all.

Now examine the benefits of First Federal's Prestige Checking account. When you maintain a balance of only $300 or more, you receive interest, no-fee travelers checks, free notary services, our no-charge Prestige Place 24-hour teller and Prestige Emergency Cash in over 5500 locations nationwide. All insured to $100,000 by the FSLIC.

Maybe we could be a lot bigger if we require higher minimum balances on our interest checking accounts. But at First Federal, we'd rather be better than bigger.

Jesse Jackson Hails Approval Of King Holiday

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — When the Rev. Jesse Jackson dropped by the Legislative Building to meet with black lawmakers and discuss his likely presidential campaign with reporters, he paid North Carolina a compliment.

The previous day, the General Assembly had enacted a bill making North Carolina the 40th state to honor Jackson's mentor in the civil rights movement, Martin Luther King Jr., with a paid holiday.

"I'm glad it has happened," Jackson said Wednesday. "It's a positive sign, and I hope we can build on the spirit of passing that holiday legislation and now go on to focus on education and economic equity."

Black and white legislators alike are hailing the approval of the King holiday and the relative ease with which it moved through the House and Senate as symbols of enlightenment and understanding.

Some, however, caution against exaggerating the significance of the bill's success.

"We realize that we have not reached the millennium, in fact have not gotten close to it," Rep. Dan Blue, D-Wake, said in an interview, acknowledging he had received racist telephone calls — some threatening bodily harm — while the bill was pending.

"But it's an indication that while maybe the state hasn't gone as far as we've wanted, the political leadership realizes it's important to deliver these signals to the populace ... that we are striving for an all-inclusive society."

The holiday issue surfaced against a backdrop of what some observers call a resurgence in overt racism, citing such incidents as the death of a black man chased by a mob after

"It's a positive sign, and I hope we can build on the spirit of passing that holiday legislation and now go on to focus on education and economic equity."

venturing into an all-white neighborhood in Howard Beach, N.Y., and Klan demonstrations in all-white Forsyth County, Ga.

In North Carolina, Gov. Jim Martin recently created a panel to monitor incidents of racial, religious and ethnic violence and intimidation.

Martin said he had no hard evidence that such problems were on the rise, but that the state should be vigilant.

House Speaker Liston Ramsey says that even at their worst, race relations were not as bad in North Carolina as elsewhere. Despite such high-tension civil rights activities as the Greensboro sit-ins, the state generally escaped violence, he said.

"We didn't have riots to speak of the way they did in Detroit and Newark, N.J., and some other cities in the North," said Ramsey, D-Madison, a white who has served in the Legislature since the early 1960s.

He says the presence of black lawmakers, beginning with Henry Frye (now an associate justice of the state Supreme Court) in 1969, has led whites in the Legislature to be more sensitive to minority concerns.

This year, there are 13 blacks in the House — eight of whom are committee chairmen — and three in the Senate.

"I think that has had a lot to do with the change in the atmosphere in the General Assembly," Ramsey said. "Every black member in both houses commands the respect of all the other members."

Rep. Ray Warren, R-Mecklenburg, one of three House Republicans who supported the King holiday, said during floor debate that working alongside blacks in the Legislature had influenced his decision.

"Every employee in the Research Triangle Park, every employee in the glittering bank buildings in Charlotte, every person who has benefited from the economic miracle of the 'New South' should get down on his or her knees and thank God for Martin Luther King Jr.," Warren said in his emotional speech.

Warren said, however, that several lawmakers hurled racial epithets his way after he signed on as the lone Republican co-sponsor of the bill.

And during Senate floor debate, Sen. Donald Kincaid, R-Caldwell, said he is not a racist but contended that King "does not deserve a ... holiday, not even remotely." Kincaid reminded his colleagues that former FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover had accused King of having "close ties with communists."

Observers say another indication of changing attitudes was the unprecedented request by a white freshman, Rep. Brewster Brown, D-Hertford, to join the Legislative Black Caucus. Brown said he thought it would be a good idea since his district is 65 percent black.

Blue, chairman of the caucus, said the group would allow Brown to attend meetings that deal with legislative issues, as opposed to political matters not directly linked with legislative business.

"They decided they wanted a relationship with Brewster, and they're glad he's interested in working with us," Blue said.

"FIRING LINE" — TV host William F. Buckley Jr., left, talks with Govs. Carroll A. Campbell Jr. of South Carolina, Guy Hunt of Alabama and Jim Martin of North Carolina after they taped an interview show in Columbia, S.C., on Wednesday. Three GOP Officials Tape 'Firing Line' Show For TV

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Gov. Carroll Campbell joined two fellow Republican governors to assess growing GOP strength in the South during a taping of the "Firing Line" television program.

Appearing with Campbell and host William F. Buckley were Govs. James G. Martin of North Carolina and Guy Hunt of Alabama. The program, taped at South Carolina Educational Television studios, will be aired at 10 p.m. April 7 over the ETV network.

Another "Firing Line" show on South Korea, featuring former Ambassador Richard L. Walker of Columbia, was taped earlier Wednesday to be shown April 21.

The trio agreed with Buckley's premise that Democrats "outsourced themselves" in pushing for the Southern regional primary scheduled in at least 12 states on March 8, 1988.

Campbell noted that in South Carolina, Republicans will hold a primary on March 5, but Democrats will conduct a caucus a week later.

"So we've wound up being the more open party, offering an opportunity to participate. That puts us in an activist role and they're holding in the status quo," Campbell said.

The prospect of a fragmented

Democratic vote on "Super Tuesday," with the Rev. Jesse Jackson running strong and probably winning pluralities in some states, will tend to drive more conservative Democrats into the Republican fold, the governors said.

Asked by Buckley if it would "help Republicans for Jesse Jackson to run away with the (Democratic) vote?" Hunt said, "Looking over the front-runners on the Democratic side, we'd be very comfortable having any of those opposing us."

The governors agreed that the Republican Party in the South has matured and developed a firm grass roots leadership foundation.

Campbell said the days when the GOP had to recruit political novices on the basis of their local name identification in business circles are past.

"We've got the foundation now," he said.

Campbell said the nature of the Republican Party is changing from a negative-based philosophy to one with a positive agenda.

"Too often, Republicans have been 'aginners,' against everything that came along. The Republican Party (now) is not that way; we understand that we have to have a positive agenda at the state level," he said.

Campbell said although Southerners are fiscally conservative and don't want the federal government meddling in their lives, "they do want an activist state and local government dealing with problems. In the past ... we (Republicans) looked the other way."

The governors discussed their efforts to recruit blacks into the GOP, with success so far limited largely to members of the rising black middle class.

Campbell estimated his share of the black vote in the November election at 8 percent.

He said the votes came mainly from racially mixed areas where there is an emerging black middle class. "We didn't get them in the old (Democratic) machine boxes," he said.

Patrol Chief Says Speed Limit Should Stay At 55

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina should not raise its speed limit to 65 miles per hour on rural interstate highways without careful study, even if Congress endorses the move, the commander of the state Highway Patrol says.

Col. Jack F. Cardwell told the Senate Transportation Committee that highways have gotten busier in the 14 years since the 55 mph limit was imposed, while cars have gotten smaller and trucks bigger.

"Our problem is we have a lot of drivers who are unskilled," Cardwell said. "We have a lot of vehicles that are unsafe. ... Deregulation of the trucking industry has put people out there that shouldn't be allowed out of the driveway."

The committee voted Wednesday to delay a vote on a bill that would allow the state Department of Transportation to boost the speed limit to 65 on stretches of rural interstates that DOT considers suited for the higher speed.

The bill, sponsored by Sen. Bob Somers, R-Rowan, drew bipartisan support. Sen. R.P. "Bo" Thomas, D-Henderson, moved for approval of the bill, but withdrew the motion when committee members said they wanted to study it further.

Senators said they would ask officials of the Highway Safety Research Center at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill to report next week on possible effects of a higher speed limit, including more deaths.

Some committee members also said they wanted to wait until the federal situation became clearer. A highway funding bill passed by Congress would allow a speed limit of 65 mph on rural interstates, but President Reagan was expected to veto the bill Wednesday.

Somers' bill would allow the speed limit increase only if Congress enacts legislation endorsing the policy. Failure to comply with the federal speed limit could cost North Carolina some or all of its federal highway construction funds.

Sen. Jim McDuffie, R-Mecklenburg, said the 55 mph speed limit was obsolete.

"Safety statistics do not support keeping the speed limit lower and indeed, most people are driving faster than 55 mph," McDuffie said.

Proposed Phosphate Ban Sparks Debate

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — More than an hour of public debate on a proposed statewide ban on phosphorus in laundry detergents failed to clean up questions about the cost or effectiveness of the idea.

"This bill would be an enforcement nightmare," said former Attorney General Rufus Edmisten, representing Monsanto chemicals. He said it might be necessary to have border patrols to keep people from straying into Tennessee or South Carolina for phosphorus detergents.

But Michael Corcoran, executive vice president of the North Carolina Wildlife Federation, said Consumer Reports' top three detergents were phosphate free. He said 40 percent of the people in the U.S. live with phosphate bans, adding, "I don't see a lot of dirty people running around."
Supporters of the ban said it would cut phosphorus in city water treatment systems by 25 percent, saving local governments millions of dollars in treatment costs, reducing algae blooms that threaten aquatic life and saving homemakers money.

But opponents at the hearing held Wednesday by the house and Senate Committees on Natural and Economic Resources said detergents account for only 2 percent of phosphorus in the environment, that no studies document benefits of a ban, that housewives would bear extra costs in getting laundry clean and that authorities would have to beef up security to police a black market in phosphate-laden soap.
City officials disagreed with city officials and scientists argued with scientists as the debate went on.

Raleigh City Manager Dempsey Batton said 15 percent of phosphorus in fresh water is due to laundry detergents. He said it would cost the city $5.5 million in capital and $3 million in operating expenses to remove the phosphorus at sewage treatment plants.
Marty Groome, a chemist for the city of Greensboro, said phosphate detergents contributed 8 percent of the load and said efforts should be focused on agriculture runoff and other non-point sources of phosphorus.

David Moreau, professor of water resource planning at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, said a phosphate ban is "an important part of a comprehensive strategy" for controlling water pollution. But UNC biologist Charles Weiss said a phosphate ban would just "create a false sense of success" without making a dent in the problem.
"The bill doesn't cost any money," said Miriam Block of Raleigh. "It's not going to wreck any city budgets."

There was also no agreement on whether phosphate detergents help get clothes clean or cost more money.

IN THE STATE

Guilty Plea

RALEIGH (AP) — A federal prison guard from Alabama has pleaded guilty to a charge of assault in connection with the asphyxiation death of a federal prison inmate on a prison bus at Butner.

Gerry Allison Dale, 31, had been indicted in connection with the death of inmate Vinson P. Harris, who suffocated last March after a portion of his face and mouth were taped with an elastic bandage and duct tape, authorities said.

Harris, a convicted bank robber from Charlotte, was handcuffed and chained to his seat at the time, according to inmates who witnessed the incident.

Dale, a guard at the federal prison in Talladega, Ala., was supervising a bus bound for Virginia when Harris died. He had been scheduled for trial in Elizabeth City next week.

No date was set for sentencing, although Curran said he expected sentencing would occur within six weeks. Dale faces a possible prison sentence of 10 years.

Water Problem

STANLEY, N.C. (AP) — The state has ordered Stanley to stop discharging treated water into Mauney Creek immediately or face a stiff fine and has given the town until March 28 to respond.

Town officials were given notice on March 18 by the state department of Natural Resources and Community Development that the town was violating a state statute by discharging water into Mauney Creek without having a valid permit.

The water that the state has ordered Stanley to stop discharging into the creek is used to backwash filters at the town's water treatment plant.

The filters keep impurities from getting into the town's drinking water and are backwashed with 42,000 gallons of clean water every three days. The plant pumps approximately 800,000 gallons per day.

State officials are worried that chemicals used to treat the water could hurt the fish in the creek by depleting the oxygen.

Teacher Charged In Theft Ring

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — A Durham high school teacher and baseball coach has been charged as the alleged mastermind of a computer-theft ring that stole up to $200,000 worth of equipment from eight colleges and sold it in five states.

Clevell Sylvester Roseboro, 38, who teaches physical education at Hillside High School in Durham, was arrested Tuesday by Winston-Salem police. He was charged with eight counts of breaking, entering and larceny and one count of possession of stolen goods.

Roseboro also has a Winston-Salem address, arrest warrants said. Michael Earl Griffin, 30, of Winston-Salem, was charged with one count of possession of stolen goods.

Roseboro, Griffin and others are charged with stealing computer equipment from eight colleges in North Carolina. Lt. R.O. Pouncey of the Winston-Salem Police Department said at a news conference Wednesday.

Equipment was taken from Forsyth Technical College, Winston-Salem State University, Rowan Technical College, Central Carolina Community College, Catawba College, Davidson County Community College, Fayetteville Technical College and Rutledge College.

The thefts went on for more than two years.

"We have been conducting an investigation into breakings involving computers," Pouncey said. "We just didn't have any leads to go on until recently."

The equipment was stored in four homes in Winston-Salem, Pouncey said. From there the equipment was sold in Winston-Salem, Statesville, Fayetteville and Durham. It also was sold in Florida, New York, Georgia and Ohio, Pouncey said.

Most of the buyers worked for small businesses. "Some of the buyers knew they had stolen goods," he said. The ones who did will be charged with possession of stolen goods.

"Other arrests will be pending," he said. "There's going to be some prominent people, I can tell you that." Doctors and teachers will be among those charged, he said.

Police were still working Wednesday to recover some of the equipment. Pouncey said that about $100,000 worth had been recovered and that more might be. Some of the colleges have already gotten the stolen equipment back.

Roseboro and Griffin were being held Wednesday night in the Forsyth County Jail. Roseboro's bond was set at $50,000 and Griffin's at $5,000. Their preliminary hearing is scheduled for April 7 in Forsyth District Court.

Compact Considers Limit On Withdrawals

CHARLOTTE (AP) — The Southeast Compact Commission is considering a recommendation that any state wishing to withdraw from the compact after 1997 would have to get the approval of Congress.

The recommendation by an ad hoc committee on sanctions Wednesday came in response to threats by North Carolina that it will withdraw from the compact rather than open a regional disposal facility for low-level nuclear wastes starting in 1992.

Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, a member of the commission, said his motion limiting the ability of other states to withdraw from the compact might answer opponents who fear other states will pull out after North Carolina begins its 20-year turn.

"As a consensus, it certainly would address the concerns that have been raised by those who feared that other states would use a facility and then withdraw," Miller said. "If North Carolina accepts the obligation for 20 years, the other states would do likewise. With that assurance, it certainly satisfies the concerns that have been raised."

"This is a strong message of the good faith of all (eight) states working together", he said about Wednesday's motion.

Miller's motion would give other states five years to withdraw after the North Carolina facility opens in 1992. It also requires each host state to keep a facility open for 20 years or until 32 million cubic feet of the low-level radioactive material is stored at the site.

Chemical Spill

SALUDA, N.C. (AP) — Authorities have reopened two lanes of Interstate 26 while they try to clean up a chemical spill that spewed a toxic cloud over this mountain community.

About 100 people who had been evacuated were allowed to return home Wednesday night, but were told to watch for any side effects from the gas.

Truck driver Joseph Such, 56, driving from Ontario, Canada, to Elgin, S.C. for Welland Chemical Co., suffered minor cuts in the 1:40 a.m. accident. No one else was injured.

Chairman Dies

GOLDSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Joseph B. Lancaster, 73, of Patetown, chairman of the Wayne County Board of Commissioners, died Tuesday at Pitt Memorial Hospital in Greenville. He had suffered a stroke Saturday.

He was a retired employee of the Soil Conservation Service and was in his second term as a county commissioner. Lancaster was appointed chairman of the commission after the death of Dallas Price in July 1985.

A funeral service was scheduled for 4 p.m. Thursday at Stony Creek Free Will Baptist Church in Goldsboro.

Rabbit Suit

STATESVILLE (AP) — A class-action lawsuit against the makers of the Volkswagen Rabbit is scheduled for trial in Statesville in June, court officials say.

The suit, filed in 1985 in U.S. District Court in Statesville, charges that an oil-seal defect in about 450,000 Rabbits has cost car owners millions of dollars in repairs.

The suit applies to about 310,000 people nationwide who own gasoline-powered Rabbits. Similar suits in New York, California and Arizona were settled earlier.

Judge James B. McMillan granted the case class-action status in February 1986.

Barrier Islands

RALEIGH (AP) — A proposal to expand a federal program that discourages coastal development would increase North Carolina acreage covered by the program by 20 percent.

While the U.S. Department of Interior proposal would remove two of nine North Carolina islands from the National Coastal Barrier Resources System, it would expand the acreage at most of the remaining sites significantly, said Frank B. McGilvrey, who coordinates the program for the Fish and Wildlife Service.

Congress established the barrier island protection program in 1982 to protect fragile coastal environments and to prevent the expenditure of federal money on areas susceptible to hurricanes, erosion and other natural hazards. Nationwide, the system now covers 666 miles of shorelines and 452,834 acres along the coasts of the Atlantic Ocean and the Gulf of Mexico.

Eyesore

DOBSON, N.C. (AP) — A 4½-foot-tall, canary-yellow box on the courthouse square may soon have a new home after county officials complained it was an eyesore.

The control box for the traffic light at Kapp and North Main will be moved across the street as part of the county's plans to beautify the courthouse grounds.

"We want to proceed with our landscaping as planned. We need to move the box to do that," said Dennis N. Thompson, Surry County's manager.

Democrats' Proposal Falls Short

WASHINGTON (AP) — House and Senate Democrats, following weeks of closed-door struggles, emerged with budget proposals that failed to meet congressional deficit-reduction goals despite about $18 billion in new taxes.

Democrats on the House Budget Committee, meeting late into the night Wednesday, announced tentative agreement on a package crafted to reduce the deficit by at least $36 billion in fiscal 1988.

Senate Budget Committee Chairman Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., was to release today his proposal to trim the deficit by $37 billion.

Neither plan would come within $25 billion of the $108 billion deficit target of the Gramm-Rudman law for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1. However, each would cut the deficit about as well as President Reagan's budget, based on congressional estimates that show the president's budget would leave $135 billion in red ink next year.

The White House, which uses more optimistic scenarios for government spending and economic growth, maintains its plan hits the $108 billion target.

Reagan met privately Wednesday with House Republicans and was quoted by a spokesman as saying, "The number for this year is 108 (on Gramm-Rudman) and the model is no fudging."

Rep. William H. Gray III, D-Pa., chairman of the House committee, said a marathon session Wednesday with his committee's Democrats had produced tentative agreement on "a strong, credible package that moves in the right direction with cuts in spending that are real but fair."

"I think that our budget will be much more credible than the administration's budget," he told reporters.

The only public decision by the committee has been to scale back sharply the president's military spending request.

Gray said taxes were part of the plan but declined to release details of those or the spending cuts, saying his staff needed to make extensive calculations.

The panel's discussions, which began more than a month ago, were guided by a framework that half the deficit reductions would come from tax increases and the spending cuts would be divided about equally between military and domestic programs.

Chiles, while holding public budget sessions, nailed down the details of his plan Wednesday following weeks of private meetings with other members of his committee.

SUSPECT IN CUSTODY — Police lead Gary Heidnik, 43, from the Philadelphia police department Wednesday following his arrest near a rowhouse where three women were found chained to a sewer pipe. Police said Heidnik had been charged with rape and kidnapping. (AP Laserphoto)

Police Discover Three Nude Women Shackled In Basement Of House

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Neighbors had reported smelling burning flesh before three starved, naked women were found shackled in the basement of a house where police also discovered body parts in a refrigerator, an oven and a stewpot.

The owner of the rundown house and another man were charged with murdering two women. One was electrocuted in a watery pit in the basement, police said, and one captive said the other woman apparently died in a fall.

Police discovered the scene after a fourth woman escaped early Wednesday.

Officers arrested owner Gary Heidnik, 43, and entered the house, finding three women chained to a sewer pipe in the basement, 24 pounds of human limbs in a freezer and other body parts in the kitchen, police said.

One of the women, aged 18 to 24, had been kept in the basement since November, said police Capt. Robert Grasso. The women were fed only water, bread and dog food, and when Heidnik left the house, he forced them into a pit in the basement, police said.

Two of the women were in stable condition today at Episcopal Hospital, suffering the effects of dehydration, malnutrition and sexual abuse. A third was treated and released. Authorities on Wednesday also found the body of Debbie Johnson, 23, partly buried under leaves and branches in a remote southern New Jersey forest, said Grasso.

Heidnik was charged with her murder, as well as rape and kidnapping. The other suspect, Syrril Brown, was arraigned today on charges of murder, rape, kidnapping and conspiracy in the death of Sandra Lindsay. He was being held without bail.

One captive, Lisa Thomas, 19, said a woman she knew only as Sandy fell while handcuffed and hanging from the basement ceiling, and hit her head against the concrete floor.

Miss Johnson was electrocuted in the pit, said district attorney's spokesman Thomas Williamson. Ms. Thomas told the Philadelphia Daily News that Heidnik had apparently electrocuted the woman by wires attached to her chains.

Neighbors said they repeatedly told police that the odor of burning flesh was coming from the house. The smell persisted for more than a week, said Catharine Wainwright, who lives three doors away.

Ms. Lindsay's mother, Janet Perkins, said she told police her daughter was missing and that the girl had frequented Heidnik's house. "They told me that she was an adult. ... I think I wasn't treated fair. If they went into this house before now, they would have found living people," she said.

Dean Paul Martin's Body Found In Crash

MARCH AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — Dean Martin's son and a fellow crewman died instantly when their fighter jet slammed into a remote mountainside in dense clouds six days ago, officials said after finding the fliers' bodies.

Searchers found the remains Wednesday of Air National Guard Capt. Dean Paul Martin, 35, and weapons officer Capt. Ramon Ortiz, 39, of Las Vegas, Nev., in the San Bernardino Mountains where the wreckage of their F-4C Phantom was spotted from the air earlier in the day.

"They made no attempt to eject," said Sgt. Carolyn Hamilton, a guard spokeswoman. They "perished instantly at the time of impact."

There was no immediate comment from Martin's father, who had been waiting for word of the search at his Beverly Hills home, according to publicist Warren Cowan.

The jet crashed into the side of a granite mountain at about 400 mph, after plunging nearly 4,000 feet from its last altitude reading on radar of 9,300 feet.

There was no indication of a malfunction with the plane, said another guard spokesman, Maj. Steve Mensik. "Apparently they did a 360-degree loop, four miles long, after his last hit (sighting) on the radar," Mensik said.

Martin and Ortiz were in one of three Phantom jets that left March Air Force Base, 50 miles east of Los Angeles, on maneuvers near the San Bernardino mountains Saturday afternoon.

As the jets approached 11,502-foot Mount San Geronio in heavy clouds, civilian air traffic controllers instructed the pilots to turn. Two crews acknowledged and steered clear of the mountain, but there was no response from Martin's jet.

Searchers had difficulty finding the aircraft, which had a green and gray camouflage pattern that blended with the terrain, Mensik said.

Search and rescue workers had remained optimistic throughout the search, confident that if Martin and Ortiz were able to parachute from the jet they could survive for up to a week in the wilderness.

Both had been wearing parachutes and survival kits containing food, insulating blankets and other gear.

Ten years ago, the 82-year-old mother of Frank Sinatra, Natalie "Dolly" Sinatra, was killed in a plane crash nearby in the same mountain range.

Court Ruling May Expand Job Choices For Women

By JAMES H. RUBIN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The latest Supreme Court ruling on affirmative action will expand job opportunities for women and help shield employers against sex discrimination lawsuits, legal experts and women's rights advocates say.

The Justice Department, on the other hand, called Wednesday's ruling a defeat for the moral principle that hiring should not be based on race or sex. And the man who filed the case after being passed over for a job said he couldn't believe people as intelligent as those on the Supreme Court could rule that way.

The decision upholding the hiring of a slightly less-qualified woman over a man as a remedy to sex discrimination "sends a strong message to employers that voluntary affirmative action is the way to go to remedy past discrimination against women," said Marsha Levick, executive director of the National Organization for Women's Legal Defense and Education Fund.

She said the message for women is, "They have an equal right to compete for advancement and promotion."

"It vindicates our historic position that sex discrimination, like race discrimination, can be remedied by the use of affirmative action measures," added Judith Lichtman, executive director of the Women's Legal Defense Fund.

The court, by a 6-3 vote Wednesday, for the first time upheld an affirmative action plan for women. The justices said employers may give special preferences in hiring and promoting female workers to create a more balanced workforce even if the employers do not admit past discrimination against women.

The court has upheld affirmative action plans to help racial minorities in a series of decisions since 1978.

Penda Hair, a lawyer for the NAACP Legal Defense Fund, said, "Employers will be among the decision's principal beneficiaries. (They can rest confident that their plans are legal without having to prove a history of prior discrimination — without having, in effect, to convict themselves."

The Reagan administration, which has suffered a string of Supreme Court defeats on affirmative action, expressed disappointment.

Wednesday's ruling departs "from the moral principle of non-discrimination for all citizens," said Justice Department spokesman Terry Eastland. "An employment decision should not be made on the basis of race or sex."

John D. Maddox, a lawyer who argued successfully before the Supreme Court last year in an affirmative action case from Ohio, said the latest rulings "firmly establish" the principle of preferential treatment to help minorities and women.

With Wednesday's ruling, he said, "There is much more incentive for employers to work this out. It's now much easier to implement a voluntary program, particularly if you're a private employer."

The ruling came in an appeal by Paul E. Johnson, who was denied promotion to road dispatcher by the Santa Clara County Transportation Agency in California.

The job went to Diane Joyce, who Johnson said was less qualified than himself.

The court said Johnson, who scored two points higher than Ms. Joyce on a test, may have been minimally more qualified for the job. But the justices emphasized that their ruling does not mean unqualified people will be hired or promoted.

"This case will have an impact on all women and I'm very happy for them," said Ms. Joyce, 49.

"I think this is going to be a regrettable thing for the future, especially (for) Caucasian males," said Johnson, 62, who is retired and now lives in Sequim, Wash.

"It's a gross miscarriage of justice. I can't believe people with their intelligence could rule this way," he said.

Justice William J. Brennan, writing for the court, said, "Sex is but one of several factors that may be taken into account in evaluating qualified applicants for a position."

The transportation agency "appropriately took into account as one factor the sex of Diane Joyce in determining that she should be promoted to the road dispatcher position," Brennan said.

But in a dissenting opinion, Justice Antonin Scalia said, "We effectively replace the goal of a discrimination-free society with the quite incompatible goal of proportionate representation by race and by sex in the workplace."

Brennan emphasized that employers should not be forced to admit past bias before taking such steps since to do so would expose them to lawsuits for sex discrimination.

The Santa Clara County Transportation Agency adopted its plan in 1978 to promote women, minorities and the handicapped. At the time, not one of the agency's 238 skilled craft positions was held by a woman.

The plan has a long-range goal of assigning 36 percent of the agency's jobs to women, minorities and the handicapped.

The plan did not specify any past discrimination by the agency — only that the women and others were under-represented.

PROMOTION UPHeld — Diane Joyce turns away from the microphone at her job as dispatcher for the Santa Clara County, Calif., Transportation Agency on Wednesday. The Supreme Court ruled earlier Wednesday that her promotion over a male with higher qualifications was legal, saying that an employer may discriminate in favor of women to help even the balance between the sexes. Democrats Propose Minimum Pay Hike

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democrats want to add $1.30 to the minimum wage, which has remained at $3.35 an hour since President Reagan moved into the White House six years ago.

With Democrats in control of both houses of Congress for the first time since Reagan took office, they are proposing to raise the minimum hourly wage to $4.65 by 1990 for some 17 million workers and then provide a formula for workers to receive one-half the general hourly wage beginning Jan. 1, 1991.

The administration immediately denounced the Democratic proposal.

"We will oppose it," Labor Secretary William E. Brock said. "The administration cannot stand by while some in Congress propose an action which will further deny opportunity to America's young men and women."

Brock said each increase under the Democratic bill would result in "the loss of job opportunities for thousands of teen-agers" who already are suffering an unemployment rate of 18 percent.

Under legislation introduced Wednesday by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., and Rep. Augustus F. Hawkins, D-Calif., chairmen of the Senate and House labor committees, respectively, the minimum wage would remain $3.35 an hour until Dec. 31 of this year, jump to $3.85 during 1988, rise another 40 cents in 1989 and become $4.65 on Jan. 1, 1990.

Salvadoran Teen-Agers Surrender After Holding 900 Pupils Hostage

By BRYNA BRENNAN
Associated Press Writer
SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Two armed teen-agers claiming to be leftist guerrillas surrendered to authorities more than six hours after taking nearly 900 children hostage in a grammar school and threatening to kill them.

A guerrilla communique denied any connection with the takeover Wednesday at the school in the working-class San Jacinto neighborhood. The 947 children and 27 teachers were released unharmed in groups over the course of the day.

The siege began at about 10:30 a.m. when the young couple pounded on a school door and insisted on being let inside "for protection," said the school's director, Arely de Flores.

Once inside, the young man, an army deserter armed with a German-made G-3 automatic rifle, threatened to shoot if anyone entered the building.

Police said the couple also had at least one hand grenade. A knife was visible during an interview the young man gave to a reporter of the television newscast Teleprensa, whom he invited to enter the school.

"So long as they don't take me out of here, not a single child will leave here, and if a single soldier comes in I'm going to let the bullets fly and I'll kill myself and I'll kill the students," the teen-ager told the reporter.

At one point, a girl peeked through the bars of a ground floor window and told reporters: "We are very scared. They threatened to kill us if we talked with you."

But about four hours after the takeover started, the couple allowed 25 first- and second-graders to leave the building. The children, dressed in beige uniforms with white shirts, were visibly scared.

An hour later, they began to let most of the other students leave, but delayed the release of 47 ninth-graders, students 14 or 15 years old.

A group of rescue workers meanwhile sawed off the bars on two windows and carried some children down a ladder to safety.

The couple released the last hostages after speaking with Monsignor Gregorio Rosa Chavez, auxiliary bishop of San Salvador.

"I have the impression that they are not guerrillas, because their arguments are too incoherent," Rosa Chavez said.

The drama ended when Gen. Adolfo Blandon, head of the joint chiefs of staff, entered San Jacinto Grammar School and persuaded the couple to give up.

The pair left the school at about 4:45 p.m. in a blue mini-bus belonging to the army. Police sources would not say where they were taken.

Regional education director Eduardo Alfonso Molina identified the young man as Juan Francisco Medrano Eraheta and his companion as Gloria Escobar Guzman. He said they were in their teens but their exact ages were not available.

In the interview with Salvadoran television, the young man identified himself as "Alexander Alvarez Cadena, a captain of the guerrillas."

But Gen. Rinaldo Golcher, chief of the Treasury Police, said the teen-ager was a corporal who deserted from the Instruction Center of the Armed Forces three or four days earlier and took two G-3 rifles.

A Salvadoran colonel who spoke on condition of anonymity said the couple ran to the school after a routine police blockade stopped them outside the Instruction Center, which is for communications study, and is in the San Jacinto neighborhood.

Golcher said the young man demanded that President Jose Napoleon Duarte, Roman Catholic Archbishop Arturo Rivera Damas and International Red Cross officials come to the school.

Alfonso Molina said the young man told him he wanted to escape to Nicaragua or Mexico.

Special anti-terrorist personnel from the army slipped in through windows shortly before the pair gave themselves up.

The two dropped a bundle of propaganda leaflets of the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front guerrilla organization on the school steps as they entered the building, and the young man insisted he was a member.

Carter Says Mideast Needs Top Priority

ALLENBY BRIDGE, Occupied West Bank (AP) — Former President Jimmy Carter today urged greater flexibility in Middle East peace efforts and said President Reagan should make the issue a priority during his last two years in office.

Carter, accompanied by his wife, Rosalynn, and several aides, waved good-bye to his Jordanian hosts and crossed the Allenby Bridge over the Jordan River into Israeli-held territory for a six-day visit.

His arrival coincides with the eighth anniversary of the Egypt-Israel peace treaty, signed March 26, 1979, by then-Prime Minister Menachem Begin and late Egyptian President Anwar Sadat after lengthy mediation by Carter.

It is the only treaty between Israel and an Arab country.

Carter planned meetings with Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, Foreign Minister Shimon Peres and Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin.

Secord Accounts Sought

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate wants a court to help unlock the mysteries of secret Swiss banks accounts held by Richard Secord, who helped former White House aide Oliver L. North arrange secret arms sales to Iran and help for the Nicaraguan Contra rebels.

Senate lawyers filed papers Wednesday in U.S. District Court, asking that the former Air Force general be forced to give them access to the accounts or be held in contempt. The accounts may have contained or still contain funds missing in the Iran-Contra affair.

Meanwhile, the chairmen of select House and Senate investigating committees — Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., and Sen. Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii — moved Wednesday to keep their own information secret.

They said they would seek removal of any committee member caught leaking unauthorized information and would fire any staffers who leaked information to reporters.

The warnings followed publication Wednesday of a New York Times story that said congressional investigators believe former CIA Director William Casey masterminded the once-secret Contra aid program that was run by North, a former National Security Council aide.

While the committees delved into past administration actions, future aid to the Contras was debated again on the Senate floor.

Senate Democrats, after failing a third time to choke off a Republican-led filibuster, abandoned their drive to force President Reagan to account fully for all assistance flowing to the rebels fighting the leftist Nicaraguan government.

The Senate voted 51-46 in favor of cutting off the filibuster, but that was six votes short of the total needed to end debate. Still, it provided evidence there may be a Senate majority ready to reject new aid later this year.

If Hair-Teasing Comes Back, It Won't Be As Bad

By JOY L. HAENLEIN
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

STAMFORD, Conn. — Every industry has its dark moments. Some hair stylists recall the puffy, teased hairdos of the late 1950s and early '60s with a bone-chilling shudder.

"I remember those days and they were terrible," said Louis Gignac of Louis Guy D' salon in New York. "Everywhere you turned, you saw a head of hair that looked like a rat's nest. And no comb in the world could untangle your hair once you teased it. Oh, it was awful."

So when the call went out recently for voluminous hair styles to complement the return of crinolines, A-line and bubble skirts, and other fuller, feminine fashions from the '50s, some hair stylists feared teased hair would rear its sticky-sprayed head once again.

They can relax. The teased look may be back for spring, but there are easier, more sophisticated ways to achieve it.

The secret to fuller hair styles begins with the cut, stylists say. As boyish-cut clothes have been replaced by feminine fashions this spring, so too have the blunt, one-length hair styles been succeeded by softer, tapered cuts. Hair that is tapered looks fuller because the ends are clipped at different angles and lengths.

"Roots will hold the ends (of the hair) up naturally once the ends are made lighter, so the real key is to cut the dead weight from the ends," explained Phillip Addario of Phillip's of Westport, Conn. "Years ago, we teased hair to hold it up."

Styling tricks can also add volume to fine or straight hair — and you don't need a cosmetologist's license to attempt them.

Gignac said that he advises customers to bend at the waist, brush hair forward, shake it and simply flip it back. Those with fine hair can use a little mousse, gel or hair spray underneath the hair and let the product dry slightly before flipping it back. And those wishing to perk up the short ends on top of their heads can "back brush" them in the opposite direction from the hair's normal growth pattern.

"This is a very natural way to achieve volume, and your hair doesn't have to look like a rat's nest anymore," Gignac said. "And you don't have to do all that nonsense to your hair, either."

If you must tease, the stylists recommend teasing the root of the hair only with a small tooth comb to add fullness to the crown area. Addario suggests teasing on the underside of the strand to add volume; on the top of the strand for a looser, airy look. Antonio deBourbon, salon manager at Saks Fifth Avenue in Stamford, suggests a non-alcoholic mousse or hair spray to keep the style in place.

Inanimate Things Need Direction

At Wits End
Erma Bombeck

A couple of years ago, a woman in Vermont filed a $25,000 suit, charging she was struck from behind by a shopping cart while grocery shopping.

The suit alleged that another customer failed to keep her shopping cart under control and that she suffered injuries to her back and legs which made it impossible for her to work.

I say it's about time we got bad drivers of inanimate things off the streets and the aisle ways. Every day our lives are put in jeopardy by thoughtless operators who are never held accountable for the pain they inflict.

It isn't only shopping carts that leave wheel marks on the back of your knees and across your feet, but did you ever get in the path of a baby carriage being operated by a little brother or sister? Believe me, you'll never dance the polka again.

Umbrellas are lethal when put in the hands of unlicensed drivers who figure if God hadn't wanted them to carry an umbrella into an elevator, then how come He gave people two eyes?

Luggage is being taken over by amateurs, and the potential is there for mass extinction. Golf bags and boxes are thrown off airport carrousels with no thought of who is in their path, and in ticket lines huge stacks of luggage are piled up directly behind you so that your chances of remaining upright are nonexistent.

For years, I've watched men behind the wheels of power mowers who have no business there. Bulldozers maybe, but never in control of a motor-driven machine that within seconds levels every shrub and flower including the 5-year-old blue spruce that is just beginning to peek above the grass.

As a professional domestic, I've seen some women wheeling a sweeper around like a crazy person sucking up everything in its path. And if you don't know what you're doing, don't even think of renting a cleaner to shampoo your rug. I've lost two or three friends to foam.

Possibly the worst offenders of careless driving are the kids who mount skateboards and proceed to terrorize pedestrians. We're talking a vehicle with no steering mechanism, no brakes and no reason for being, other than a broken bone wish.

Inanimate vehicles are underrated. People with no experience whatsoever turn a key, push a switch, grab a handle and they're off!

The other day in a doctor's office, a small child scaled a water cooler and proceeded to spray the office with water. Where was a policeman when you needed him? Probably out giving someone a traffic ticket!

Ethics Should Prevent Dating

DEAR ABBY: The other evening, Donna, my 26-year-old daughter, asked me to baby-sit her two children. As Donna and her husband were preparing to leave for the dinner party, Donna remarked that she always loved an invitation to the Smiths (made-up name) because they have a hot tub. I asked Donna as they were walking out the door whether they had forgotten their bathing suits, since all her husband was carrying was a bottle of wine for the hosts. Donna's reply astounded me. She said nobody wears a bathing suit in a hot tub because it's too darn hot.

Abby, am I old-fashioned and over the hill at 46? Donna and her husband and the other couples apparently soak together naked! I asked Donna how they could do this, and she replied that all the couples involved are "good" friends. Abby, I have a number of very good and close friends, but not close enough to bathe together in our birthday suits. In fact, the only person I would ever share a hot tub with is my husband.

What do you think of what my daughter and her husband and their friends are doing? Is this as common

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

as she makes it sound? Am I the odd duck now? — IRENE B. IN ALBANY
DEAR IRENE: You are not an odd duck. Many others, including me, believe that married couples who soak together in the altogether could find themselves literally in hot water up to their necks.

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to "Too Late Now" — the poor woman whose husband never bathed or brushed his teeth, so she just moved into another bedroom and closed the door. Ten years ago, I met a really great guy. We dated for a long time before getting very close. After we did, I noticed he had bad breath and body odor. I also discovered he didn't wear underwear, and thus his jeans carried a foul smell all the time.

Well, I bought him plenty of underwear and told him I thought they were "sexy." I got him deodorant and said it "turned me on," and I showered with him — not for sex, but to be sure he showered. Because of this, he was clean and I was happy. We've been married for five happy years.

Some people are lazy, and with an incentive they'll come around. — HAPPILY WED

DEAR HAPPILY WED: Wonderful! You nipped some slovenly habits before they were so ingrained they were impossible to change. If you'll recall, "Too Late Now" had locked her repulsive husband out of her bedroom for 49 years. Were she to buy him sexy underwear and a quart of cologne, at this stage of the game he'd probably drink the cologne and polish his car with the underwear. My point: You can't teach an old dog new tricks.

DEAR ABBY: My boyfriend is a high school teacher. He is 29 and very good-looking. I know that he is attracted to some of the girls in his classes and wouldn't mind dating them.

I love him and I'm concerned about this. What's to prevent teachers from dating their students in high school? — CONCERNED IN CALIFORNIA
DEAR CONCERNED: Ethics. It's usually the "principal" of the thing.

DEAR ABBY: In apologizing to "Dentist's Wife in Utica," you still haven't gotten it right. You said, "One day I may be in Utica and require the services of a first-class dentist to extract my foot from my mouth." In the case you have just mentioned, your need would be not for a DENTIST, but a PODIATRIST — a doctor of podiatric medicine and surgery.

Just trying to get your doctors straightened out. — NORMAN S. SCHUMANN, D.P.M., M.D. in NYC

Shooting For The Hip, Paris Lowers Its Sights

By NINA HYDE
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

PARIS — Where, oh where have all the shoulder pads gone? Somewhere, apparently, around the hips.

For the past several years the designers have counted on a triangle silhouette, broad at the shoulder and tapered to the hem to give a small look to the waistline. Now they've turned the silhouette virtually upside down, with a small natural shoulder and often fitted top, a nipped in waistline and a wide skirt or wide pants.

It is the emphasis on the hips, rather than the shoulders, that makes the waistline look small in the new silhouette for next fall. If that sounds a bit like the old "New Look," it is, except that the clothes are much softer and the skirts almost always very short.

Just who was the first to make this fashion flip is debatable. Certainly Vivienne Westwood's mini-crisis in London were an influence. And the rousing success of the petticoated pouf skirts by Christian Lacroix, until recently the designer for Jean Patou, called attention to the changing silhouette as well.

Designers use many ways to play up the change. Short jackets emphasize an indented waist above a full skirt in many collections. Peplums and fur trims, too, make the hips round and, at the same time, the waist small.

All this fiddling with figures is part of the French designers' way to boost the imbalance of payments and encourage stores to buy more French goods. And in fact, while business has been down for spring because of the weak American dollar, it has also been down because of lackluster collections. For fall, though, many of the collections look better than in a long while.

Rounding the hips is not the only thing designers are doing to the silhouette next fall. They are stretching out the shape to make women look taller. They are showing some of the highest heels around, the tallest hats, and hair styles that spin up over the head in buns and curls to add inches to a woman's height. Thierry Mugler, who used some of the tallest models in Paris, exaggerated even their height with tall curls and heels so high they seemed to torture the feet. Jean-Paul Gaultier put all his models in old-fashioned bathing caps, poked holes in the top and let the hair stick up for height. Gaultier put the girls in such high heels many tripped on the long, dark runway, and one model actually fell off. Some of the women wore clear heels with light bulbs inside that flashed on with each step. Battery packs were strapped around their ankles.

It was Gaultier who has taken this new slip of the shoulder pad most literally. He has padded the hip line of sweaters, giving much the same effect as the rounded hips of the old New Look of 1947. His variations on the waist-cincher and the Merry Widow have the same effect.

Others are far more subtle. Givenchy, who is in top form this season, sent model Gloria Burgess down the runway in a bright yellow sweater draped and tied over the hips with a short black skirt. In the show at the Grand Hotel Monday morning, Burgess also wore a slim black jersey dress with a tiered, jeweled peplum, emphasizing the hip both for daytime and evening.

Claude Montana actually put paper stuffing under some of the model's skirts to emphasize their rounded shape, according to Janet Racey, a fashion consultant who was standing backstage during the Montana show. Montana named his suits with long jackets gently rounded over the hips "hip suits."

Last season Montana showed high-rise skirts and pants that called attention to a rounded hip line. This season he has developed that idea with skirts that rise so high they are almost like strapless dresses, worn with any number of beautiful white shirts. It's part of the recurring theme of the simple teaming of blouses and skirts or pants as an alternative for evening.

Karl Lagerfeld found many ways to change the silhouette at Chanel, still keeping the Chanel spirit. If Chanel might not have approved of his very short hemlines — she thought the knee was the ugliest part of a woman's body — she would certainly have liked his inventiveness and playfulness with the clothes. He takes the popular muffler and turns it, fringe and all, into a short jacket and sarong skirt. His long and lean jacket suits, the best of them in brown wool with stand-up collars, and his wide belts with full skirts or pants both emphasize the hips for fall. Draping over the hip and peplum jackets make the same point in the evening wear.

In the Valentino collection, Valentino gracefully mixed the rounded and narrow silhouette. Belted coats with full skirts were worn over narrow skirts. But a favorite skirt silhouette for this designer for fall laces a drawstring that rounds the silhouette. His dyed-fox-trimmed tweed suits for daytime and tiered ruffles over the hips for evening make Valentino a leader in this new silhouette.

BROILERS: The North Carolina fob dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 44.25 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pounds birds. Too few of the loads offered have been confirmed. The market is steady and the live supply is adequate for a moderate demand. Average weights desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Thursday was 1,841,000, compared to 1,921,000 last Thursday.

GRAIN: No. 2 yellow shelled corn mostly 1 cent higher at mostly 1.93-2.00 in the Piedmont; No. 1 yellow soybeans 4 cents to 5 cents higher at mostly 4.85-5.04 1/2 in East and mostly 4.84-4.95 in the Piedmont; (new crop wheat 2.45-2.66). Exchange rates for P.I.K. certificates were steady to 1/2 percent lower and ranged from 101 to 103 1/2 percent of face value.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market turned upward today, rebounding from Wednesday's mild setback. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 13.07 to 2,376.56 in the first half hour. Gainers outnumbered losers by nearly 2 to 1 in the overall tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 698 up, 373 down and 468 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 36.58 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street. Conrail led the active list, trading at 31, after an initial public offering of 58.75 million shares at 28. The sale of the shares by the government was the largest stock offering in U.S. history.

Standard Oil jumped 7/8 to 72. British Petroleum said it plans to offer $70 a share for all the Standard Oil stock it doesn't already own. The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks gained .87 to 171.37. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .79 at 339.34.

Prisons

exceeded 17,460, or 97 percent of an 18,000 capacity set in the March 11 law. Threatened with costly court-ordered prison improvements, legislators and Martin are trying to avoid the fate of 13 states where entire prison systems are under federal court supervision.

In addition to limiting prison population, the General Assembly has approved a $29.1 million emergency program that adds space for over 2,000 new prison beds. The problem is that prison improvements haven't kept pace with prison population during the last 15 years. Since 1970, the average number of inmates has risen from 9,789 to a recent high of 18,200. Using American Correctional Association space standards, North Carolina prisons hold about 5,000 too many prisoners.

Prisoners who could be released would be those convicted of misdemeanors or felons serving the last nine months of their sentences, said Jim Marable, spokesman for Johnson.

On Wednesday the Dow Jones industrial average slipped 5.69 to 2,363.49. Declining issues outnumbered advances by about 5 to 4 on the NYSE, with 689 up, 854 down and 409 unchanged. Big Board volume totaled 171.34 million shares, against 189.85 million in the previous session.

PTL Set Up Payments

Bakker, who remained in seclusion in Palm Springs, Calif., with his wife, Tammy Faye, resigned as chairman a week ago today, saying it was the only way to stop a "diabolical plot" by another evangelist to seize his $172 million empire.

Bakker's attorney later identified the evangelist as Jimmy Swaggart. Swaggart denied trying to bring down PTL but admitted telling Assemblies of God leaders what he knew about Bakker's sexual encounter with Ms. Hahn.

Bakker also claimed he was blackmailed into paying $115,000 for the one-time sexual encounter with Ms. Hahn. But California lawyer John Stewart, who represented the 27-year-old West Babylon, N.Y., woman, said it actually was a financial settlement "requested by PTL as an alternative to meeting with Christian leaders to discuss the allegations."

Stewart, who is co-host of a Christian radio program called "The Bible Answer Man," and attorney Paul Roper of Anaheim, Calif., said Ms. Hahn claimed Bakker pressured her into having sex with him.

Stewart said the settlement was negotiated on Ms. Hahn's behalf. She received "a few dollars" and the rest was divided, he said, but he wouldn't discuss who got what.

Ms. Hahn told reporters Wednesday outside her home that she had been advised by Roper, who is serving as her lawyer, not to talk. Asked how she was coping with the furor, she said, "I'm fine ... for now. I'm OK."

At a meeting Wednesday in Springfield, Mo., the Rev. John Ankerberg of Chattanooga, Tenn., presented church leaders evidence he said would show that PTL officials attempted to cover up the sexual misconduct reports.

Ankerberg said he was responding to reports that he and Swaggart were involved in the alleged takeover attempt of the PTL, which stands for Praise The Lord or People That Love.

Ankerberg, a Southern Baptist, said he came upon his information while investigating rumors of Bakker's sexual affair. Ankerberg said he, Swaggart and Falwell sent a joint letter to Bakker through Dorch that was detailed enough "so they would know we had solid information."

He said Bakker thanked them for the letter.

Eakin Looks At UNC

"As the university has matured, we have developed a rich and diverse set of degree offerings, with degrees now granted to over 2,500 graduates each year in the college of arts and sciences and 10 professional schools," he said.

"Throughout our history, we have maintained a strong school of education and a commitment to teacher preparation. We believe that our traditions of strength and our commitment to the preparation of teachers will serve the state, the schools, and their students well as we seek new avenues to the continued improvement of teaching in our schools."

Representing ECU along with Eakin were Dr. William Laopus, vice chancellor and dean of the school of medicine; C.G. Moore, vice chancellor for business affairs; Dr. Trenton Davis, associate vice chancellor for academic affairs, and Daniel Bishop, comptroller.

Meanwhile, Laopus told legislators that a recent survey conducted by the ECU School of Medicine shows that 25 percent of the institution's graduates are entering family medicine. Additionally, 32 percent of the class of 1987, numbering 67 who will graduate in May, selected family medicine residencies, Laopus said.

"This is a strong record, one of the best," he said. "I think it indicates our dedication to primary care and our emphasis on it."

County Nears Decision

were held earlier this year on the proposed "six-three" plan.

While there was support voiced for the "six-three" plan, the majority of those attending the hearings objected to having three at-large members and voiced support only for electing six commissioners from districts.

During a meeting with commissioners Monday, Crowell — as he has in the past — suggested that the U.S. Justice Department is "unlikely" to approve the "six-three" plan unless it has support from the black community.

"They (the Justice Department) generally have a bias against at-large seats," Crowell said.

So the board asked Crowell to meet with representatives of black organizations in the county in an effort to gain their support for three at-large seats.

Commissioner Eugene James said "if you really want at-large ... talk to them."

Commissioner Tom Johnson, saying "we're in a very precarious situation ... in selling a 'six-three' plan," suggested "make at-large a little more attractive" by appointing one or more blacks to the board until an election is held.

The next meeting of the board is scheduled for 10 a.m. Monday at the county office building at 1717 W. Fifth St.

Tark's Gesture May Haunt Him

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — It could be that a generous gesture might come back to haunt Nevada-Las Vegas Coach Jerry Tarkanian.

UNLV, 37-1 and a unanimous pick as the No. 1 college basketball team in the country, meets Indiana, 28-4 and ranked No. 3, in a semifinal game of the NCAA college basketball championship tournament on Saturday.

When Indiana Coach Bobby Knight made a rare foray into the junior college ranks last season, he checked out reports that San Francisco City College had a pretty good prospect in 6-foot-10 center Dean Garrett.

At the same time, Knight said, he was being told that Garrett was too slow to play at the major college level.

A factor in Knight's signing Garrett was a recommendation from Tarkanian.

"We'd heard a lot of negative comments about Dean from some West Coast people," Knight said Wednesday during a telephone conference call involving Final Four coaches.

"Tark took me aside and told me the kid could play."

And play he has, hitting 54 percent of his shots from the field, averaging eight rebounds and blocking 88 shots over the season. In a 77-76 victory over Louisiana State in the Midwest Regional championship game, Garrett had 17 points, 15 rebounds and three blocked shots.

Tarkanian, the earliest arrival among the Final Four coaches, said Wednesday that the nay-sayers had overlooked Garrett's abundance of intangible qualities.

"He was a worker. I knew that Knight was the type of coach who could take his qualities and make him a winner," Tarkanian said.

"He's got good movement inside, and when you've got his height, with good coaching, you've got the potential to be a star."

Big East rivals Providence, 28-5, and Syracuse, 30-6, meet Saturday in the opening game of the Final Four. Syracuse was No. 10 in the national rankings. Providence was out of the Top 20, although the Friars did get a few votes from pollsters.

Three of the four teams were to be on hand Thursday, but Knight said he would wait until Friday to bring his team to New Orleans.

Tarkanian gave his players a night on the town after a two-hour practice Wednesday afternoon, and said he wanted them to be exposed to the crush of reporters assembling to cover the event.

Knight said he wasn't ducking the temptations of the French Quarter or the distractions of the media, just concentrating on academics.

"As long as I've been involved in coaching, we have never — regardless of the game, whether it's a regular season game or a conference tournament or an NCAA tournament game, first-round or championship game — have we ever gone to the site of a game more than one day prior to the game," Knight said.

"That's been our policy for 22-23 years. We still have classes today and tomorrow. We'll miss a little class on Friday. We'll get the chance to work out on Friday, and that's the way we've always done it."

Tarkanian said he's treating the trip as an educational experience for his players.

"I'm going to let the kids enjoy themselves tonight and after the game," he said. "Starting (Thursday,) we will definitely keep our team under close restrictions."

"However, we won't isolate them from the press, because I think it is very important to give them the opportunity to talk to the press and other people. I think that's a real learning experience."

Each team will be housed in hotels adjacent to the French Quarter, the nightclub center of the city.

Providence Coach Rick Pitino and Syracuse Coach Jim Boeheim leaned toward Tarkanian's more lenient philosophy.

"We don't have that much time for them to get out much," Pitino said. "It's a lifetime experience for them."

"We want them to have a good time," Boeheim added, "but we also expect them to concentrate on the game."

No Announcement Expected Before Tuesday, Karr Says

East Carolina University did not name a new men's basketball coach Wednesday — as expected — and will not do so until at least next week, Dr. Ken Karr, director of athletics and chairman of the search committee, said.

Tom Chapman, head coach of Division II power Gannon, was in Greenville Wednesday, and has been offered the job. However, he apparently did not accept it right away, stalling hopes for an announcement on Wednesday.

Karr, who had called a 10 a.m. press conference for Wednesday — then canceled it — refused to give his reasons for the move. "We were gambling on the roll of the dice when we called it, and it turned out to be premature," was the only statement he would make on the abortive press conference.

Karr also refused to comment on whether Chapman was still a candidate or had removed himself from consideration.

Karr added that he hoped to make an announcement now on the new coach either Tuesday, Wednesday or Thursday of next week, saying that nothing further could be done until after the finals of the NCAA basketball tournament in New Orleans Saturday and Monday.

Karr, along with several other ECU officials, were to leave today for New Orleans.

Chapman, too, was to be in New Orleans, and might be expected to talk further with ECU officials during the tournament.

According to a statement made to the Erie, Pa. Daily Times, Chapman's assistant coach at Gannon, John Ruby, said the hangup between East Carolina and the coach was over the length of the contract. ECU was, Ruby told the newspaper, offering a three-year pact, while Chapman was asking for a four-year contract.

Joe Scottino, president of Gannon, said he met with Chapman prior to his visit with ECU and offered him a large pay increase and an extension on his contract, the Daily Times reported. Scottino said he was to meet with Chapman again on Monday for further talks.

Chapman has been at Gannon for three years, recording records of 22-9, 25-6 and 28-6, including his trip to the Division II championships this year. The 38-year-old coach was at Upsala, a Division III school, for three years prior to that, carrying them to the Final Four for two of those three years. Five years ago, while coaching at Upsala, Chapman was a finalist for the ECU job when Charlie Harrison, the man he would replace at ECU was hired.

In a sidelight to the situation, Chapman's car was firebombed in front of the Gannon gym just prior to the start of the Division II Final Four tournament last week. Police are still investigating that incident.

Pirate Catcher Breaks His Foot

East Carolina University's baseball team has lost the services of four-year catcher Jim Riley for 4-6 weeks with a fractured toe.

Riley was injured in a non-playing accident when he stepped between the curb and a speed bump on campus while going to class on Wednesday. He fractured the fifth metatarsal bone in his right foot and is currently in a cast and on crutches.

The 6-1, 185-pounder will probably be replaced by Chris Cauble, a 5-9, 180-pound sophomore transfer from UNC Charlotte.

In 10 games this spring, Riley, who has a .241 lifetime average with the Pirates, has hit only 216, with eight hits in 37 appearances. He has 10 runs batted in this spring, third best on the team. He's hit three homers, including two against Fairfield and has two game-winning rbis.

Riley's fielding percentage is .983, as he has made only one error in 60 chances. He has no passed balls, and has thrown out four opponents who attempted to steal.

Cauble, who has started in two games and played in seven, is hitting .167, with two hits in 12 trips, one a double. He has one rbi and has walked three times. He's made no errors and has one passed ball.

Riley hit safely in seven of 10 games he played in, and had seven runs batted in in one of the Fairfield games.

East Carolina returns to action on Saturday with a single game at William & Mary in the Colonial Athletic Association. The two teams play a doubleheader on Sunday in Williamsburg, Va.

Swenson Is W&M's Pick

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Chuck Swenson, an assistant coach at Duke for the past seven seasons, has been selected as head basketball coach at the College of William and Mary, according to a report published today.

The Richmond News Leader quoted unidentified sources at the Williamsburg school and at Duke as saying the appointment of Swenson, 33, will be announced at a 7 p.m. news conference.

William and Mary officials refused to comment on the report.

Swenson would replace Barry Parkhill, whose contract was not renewed after four years on the job. William and Mary went 5-22 and 8-20 the past two seasons under Parkhill, who got the job when his brother Bruce left to take over at Penn State.

Swenson was one of five candidates interviewed for the job in the past week. The others were Bucknell coach Charlie Woollum, a William and Mary grad; California assistant Ernie Nestor; Davidson coach Bobby Hussey and Catholic coach Jack Bruen.

Woollum's wife said today her husband was en route to New Orleans for the Final Four and would not be in Williamsburg tonight. Nestor and Hussey both said they had not been selected. Bruen could not be reached for comment, but a spokesman in the Catholic athletic office said Bruen was in New Orleans.

Swenson's wife Betty said this morning that her husband was asleep and unavailable. She declined to comment when asked if he had been chosen as William and Mary's head coach.

Swenson, a native of Crystal Lake, Ill., was captain of his high school basketball team. From there, he went to Indiana University, where he served as student manager of the Hoosiers' 1976 national championship team.

After graduation, Swenson served one year under Bob Knight as a graduate assistant. He then moved to Army with coach Mike Krzyzewski and served as junior varsity coach for two seasons. He spent one year as a varsity assistant before moving with Krzyzewski to Duke.

"Chuck worked with me for 10 years. When you work at two highly regarded academic institutions... he would be a natural for William and Mary," Krzyzewski said. "He understands the situation."

"In both cases (Army and Duke), he was part of rebuilding situations. To do it in academic situations where the recruiting is a bit different makes him an ideal candidate," he said.

SPRING, Texas (AP) — Roger Clemens isn't wavering in his determination to get what he wants from the Boston Red Sox.

"I want them to recognize what I did on the field last year and they are not doing that," the Red Sox ace said Wednesday. "It seems like they don't care what I did on the field. They are just using me as an example to keep salaries down."

Clemens met with the media in the office of his agent, Randy Hendricks, on Wednesday and said he had the same resolve as when he walked out of training camp March 6 in protest of the team's contract offer.

Clemens, 24-4 last season, won the AL Cy Young Award and the league's Most Valuable Player Award. He earned $340,000 last year on a base salary of $220,000 and an added $120,000 in incentives.

He sought a new contract for $1 million over one year or $2.4 million over two years.

Clemens has since lowered his demand to $950,000 for one year, but the Red Sox have offered him a $500,000 base salary and $350,000 in incentive clauses.

Hendricks suggested that Boston's management wanted to keep Clemens' salary low to help reduce future salary negotiations.

"If this is being orchestrated in New York City (baseball headquarters) by people indifferent to the needs of Boston, then we have the ingredients of a non-ending situation," Hendricks said.

Hendricks said Red Sox General Manager Lou Gorman continually tells him that "times have changed."

"They say others have accepted it and so should we," Hendricks said. "We've chosen another route. These other players aren't satisfied. Go ask (Houston first baseman) Glenn Davis is he's happy. None of them are. They're all just waiting for arbitration to get even."

Davis signed a 1-year contract with the Astros after holding out early in spring training.

Hendricks said the Red Sox have rebuffed his attempts to discuss a two-year contract.

"If they would acknowledge what he's done in year two of a contract, we might acknowledge that we don't have that much bargaining power in the first year," Hendricks said.

To earn the full $350,000 incentive portion of his proposed contract, Clemens would have to be the AL MVP and World Series Most Valuable Player, repeat as the AL MVP, make the AL All-Star team and repeat as the league's Cy Young Award winner.

Clemens said he did not want to be traded.

"I haven't played anywhere else and I don't want to," he said. "I like the fans in Boston and I like playing there."

Clemens said his decision to leave training camp was not made casually.

"I'm not the type that will let emotions get involved," he said. "It's just logic. I worked hard to get where I am and I deserve to be compensated for it."

The Red Sox have been levying a $1,000-per day fine on Clemens since March 11.

Gorman, contacted in Winter Haven, Fla., refused to comment on Clemens' remarks Wednesday. He said last Saturday that after the Red Sox's "last and best offer" was rejected, the team was prepared to start the 1987 season without Clemens.

Gorman also said negotiations were at a stalemate and that Hendricks would have to make the next phone call.

Asked what they thought about Clemens' news conference, Red Sox veterans Wade Boggs and Dwight Evans, in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., responded briefly.

"We just have to tighten our belts and get along with what we have to do," Boggs said. "Roger Clemens has to do what he thinks is best for Roger Clemens. I can't be concerned or worried about anyone except Wade Boggs."

"I'm not going to get into the money issue, but I think they're (Red Sox) picking on the wrong man," Evans said. "They're messing with the wrong kid, knocking on the wrong door."

Clemens Unwavering In Decision To Get Demands

Ponders Future

Boston Red Sox pitcher Roger Clemens scratches his eye Wednesday during the news conference at his agent's office. Clemens, in the 19th day of a holdout, accused the Red Sox management of trying to use him as an example for the rest of the league. (AP Laserphoto)

Coaches Like Three-Point Shot...

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — In an abrupt turnaround, college basketball coaches have endorsed the 3-point goal by such an overwhelming margin that one of the game's chief rulemakers says its future is assured.

"The support has been beyond my wildest expectations. It's such a clear mandate that there's no question it's here to stay," said Dr. Edward S. Steitz, the Springfield College athletic director who has been secretary and editor of the college basketball rules committee for more than 25 years.

More than 83 percent of the 1,400 coaches and 1,000 administrators, referees and basketball writers who responded to the survey at the end of the season supported the 3-pointer, Steitz said. Eighty percent of college coaches from all levels endorsed it.

The respondents, about 60 percent of the survey group, were nearly evenly split, 36 percent to 35 percent, on whether the 3-point line should remain at its present distance — 19 feet, 9 inches from the basket — or be moved back 9 inches to the distance used in international play.

In the absence of a clear mandate,

Steitz said the current distance would likely be retained by the Rules Committee, which will meet this week at New Orleans, site of the NCAA Tournament finals. However, he said he expected "considerable consideration" of the idea of moving the line back to the international distance.

NCAA Division I coaches favored the longer distance 39 percent to 31. NCAA Division II coaches gave it a 41-35 percent endorsement while those in Division III, junior college and NAIA ranks supported the shorter distance.

Referees were almost unanimous in support of the 3-pointer, with 94 percent favoring it. It also was endorsed by 90 percent of the administrators and 82 percent of the sportswriters.

But the biggest change of heart was on the part of the coaches, 66 percent of whom had told Steitz last spring they didn't want the 3-pointer.

The coaches' complaints continued throughout the first half of the season, "then they started discovering how to use it and what it could do for them," Steitz said. "With the 3-point shot, a team is never out of the game."

"I expected it to take much longer, but we have achieved all our goals with the 3-point shot in one year," he said. "Scoring, which had dropped 17 points per game over the past 10 years, was up by 10 points per game."

"We also wanted to open up the area under the basket and we have seen less rough post play this season," Steitz said. "But the most important thing is it has put the outside shooter back into the game and made it an outside-inside game again rather than just a big man's inside game."

"Coupled with the 45-second clock, it has t be one of the best changes ever made in the game," he said.

Looking to next season, the committee will consider various schemes to end the parade to the foul line in the closing minutes of game, he said.

One of the most attractive proposals is to award two free throws to a player who is fouled intentionally and then give ball possession to his team. That proposal received the support of 58 percent of the coaches and 65 percent of the referees.

"I think what the coaches and referees are saying is that if we make the penalty tough enough it's going to act as a deterrent," Steitz said.

...Well, Maybe Not All

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Coaches Jerry Tarkanian and Rick Pitino, whose teams used the 3-point basket to crash the NCAA Tournament's Final Four party, understandably have come to like college basketball's latest innovation.

Even though Jim Boeheim and Bob Knight have benefitted from the long-range bomb, they remain opposed to it.

That was the split among the four coaches whose teams will battle this weekend for college basketball's biggest prize.

"I think it forces everybody to play man-to-man defense," said Tarkanian, whose Nevada-Las Vegas team has won 37 of 38 games while putting up a nation-leading 746 shots from beyond the 19-foot, 9-inch arc.

"Any rule that forces you to play man-to-man defense is good for college basketball," Tarkanian said. "I don't believe there is any fans or any player who likes the zone defense."

"The only ones who like the zone defense is some coaches, and obviously the game shouldn't be played for coaches. I think it's a great rule."

The top-ranked Rebels made 40 percent of their 3-point attempts.

"The rule has helped us, but it has also hurt us," Tarkanian said. "Iowa got ahead of us (in the West Regional finals) because we weren't making the shots. In the second half, we made them. But we didn't win because we made the shots. We won because we played defense and got the rebounds of the missed shots."

Knight's third-ranked Indiana Hoosiers, 28-4, were more successful with the long bomb, connecting on 50 percent, with All-American guard Steve Alford hitting 98 of 188 attempts for a team that has made 121 of 241.

"I didn't like the rule then (at the start of the season) and I don't like it now," Knight said via a telephone hookup from Bloomington, Ind.

Providence, 25-8, has made nearly 43 percent of its 646 3-point attempts, with three Friars each trying more than 150.

"It opens the game to spectacular drives," Pitino said by telephone. "I like it, but it's too short."

No. 10 Syracuse, 30-6, is 93 of 230 from 3-point range with guard Greg Monroe accounting for 74 baskets in 165 attempts.

"In the preseason, I didn't like it a little bit and I really haven't changed my opinion very much," Boeheim said from Syracuse. "People will not enjoy college basketball as much, when you watch the Russians play now and they're taking 30 or 40 shots out there and it's not interesting."

LaSalle Goes For NIT Title

NEW YORK (AP) — Three weeks ago, La Salle's coaches and players weren't even sure they would be invited to the 50th National Invitation Tournament.

Tonight, when they meet Southern Mississippi at Madison Square Garden, the Explorers will try to repeat the NIT championship they won 35 years ago.

La Salle had hopes of winning the Metro Atlantic Conference postseason tournament, but they were upset by Fairfield in the first round, ending their chances of winning an NCAA tournament berth.

"We had three practices the week after the Fairfield game without knowing if we were even going to play again," La Salle Coach Bill "Speedy" Morris said Wednesday. "Then we gave the players the weekend off and said we'd let them know Sunday night when the NIT invitations went out. I think some of them already had made some spring break plans."

The Explorers had a 16-12 record after the Fairfield defeat and wondered if that was good enough for the NIT despite a schedule that included highly ranked North Carolina, Temple, DePaul and Notre Dame.

"We thought we deserved it," Morris said. "We didn't have 20 wins, but if that was our only goal, we would drop North Carolina and DePaul from our schedule."

"We were all but dead three weeks ago," said guard Tim Legler, who had four 3-point goals and 26 points in the Explorers' 92-73 semifinal victory over Arkansas-Little Rock on Tuesday night. "We thought we'd go home for spring break. Now, three weeks later, I'm at the highlight of my career."

When the Explorers won the NIT in 1952, the co-Most Valuable Player was freshman Tom Gola, who went on to become a three-time All-America.

This season, La Salle's leading scorer and rebounder is another freshman forward, Lionel Simmons.

"Lionel is a great 1-on-1 player and a fine passer who can kick the ball back out to the guards if he's double-teamed," Morris said.

"I made some freshman All-America teams this year, but I'm just thinking about winning this tournament now," said Simmons, who had 21 points Tuesday night. "If we shoot like we did against Little Rock (9-for-15 from 3-point distance), there's no one in this tournament that can beat us."

But Morris added that Simmons is not yet ready to equal Gola in La Salle basketball annals.

"Tom's Mr. Basketball at La Salle; he put the school on the map," Morris said. "He's coming to New York for the game Thursday and he'll have dinner with the team. The players are aware of who he is and what he meant to La Salle, but they want to win for themselves, not because of what he did in 1952."

Southern Miss, which defeated Nebraska 82-75 in Tuesday night's other semifinal, has no such tradition to speak of.

M.K. Turk, in his 11th season with the Golden Eagles, said he is pleased to be the coach of the first Division I team from the state of Mississippi to be in the Final Four of a national postseason tournament.

"It's been a hard struggle, but I'm proud that people are starting to take pride in Golden Eagle basketball," said Turk, whose team was 7-21 in 1984-85. "We have about 500 fans here and it's a long way to New York from Hattiesburg, Miss. We only lose one player off this team and we feel this program is on a sound footing."

Randolph Keys, who had 24 points against Nebraska, and John White, who added 19, are both junior stars for the Golden Eagles.

Preps Add 3-Pointer

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — High school basketball players will be getting three points for shots made beyond the 19-foot, 9-inch line starting next season.

The basketball rules committee of the National Federation of High School Athletic Associations voted this week to put the new rule in effect with the 1987-88 season, said Billy Wise, the executive assistant commissioner of the Kentucky Athletic Association and a committee member.

The 3-point circle will be the same distance as in college basketball, which began using the 3-pointer this season.

"The states that experimented with the 3-point shot found out that attendance was up at their games, that the rule created more interest in the game and that the fans stayed for the entire game instead of leaving early," Wise said Wednesday.

"This dimension will help the high schools so as to keep the big man from dominating as much," Wise said. "It will open up the middle and relieve the congestion in the paint area."

North Carolina experimented with the rule last year, but few conferences voted to use it.

Lady Pirates Sweep By Rams

East Carolina University's women squeezed out a pair of softball victories over Virginia Commonwealth University, 3-2 and 7-6.

The first game went nine innings before the Lady Pirates broke a 2-2 tie and the second was decided when the Pirates scored twice in the bottom of the seventh inning.

In the opener, ECU came up with a run in the first inning, but VCU tied it up in the third. East Carolina scored again in the fourth, but VCU scored in the seventh to tie it up and force extra innings.

In the ninth, Kim Adams walked and Jeannie Murray singled. Leslie Cramer then reached on an error, allowing Adams to score the game-winning run.

Murray banged out three hits for the Pirates while Mona Jackson added a double. Wanda Albright had a double to lead the Lady Rams.

In the second game, East Carolina again took the lead with a run in the third. VCU came back with three in the top of the fourth, but ECU countered that with three of its own in the bottom of the frame. East Carolina upped its lead to 5-3 with one in the fifth, but VCU tied it up with two in the sixth. ECU got another in the bottom of the sixth, but the Rams again tied it, 6-6, with one in the top of the seventh.

Then, in the bottom of the seventh, Kathy Schrage walked as did Chris Byrne. Lynda Barrett tripped to drive both of them in to win the game. Barrett had two hits to lead the Pirates while Lynn Gill had a pair for VCU.

The wins boost ECU to 11-8-1. The Lady Pirates return to action on Friday, hosting Kent State in a 2 p.m. doubleheader.

Mario Soto Imperfectly Perfect

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — The box score says Mario Soto's first spring outing was perfect. Not so.

Perfection is still a 90-mph fastball away for the Cincinnati Reds' right-hander.

Soto threw three "perfect" innings Wednesday afternoon, retiring nine consecutive Los Angeles Dodgers in his first spring training game of the season. He also got credit for the win in the Reds' 5-3 victory.

But the 5,856 fans at Al Lopez Field discovered what Soto already knew — the hop still is missing from his delivery and from his fastball.

He acknowledged he's not yet over the fear of how his surgically repaired shoulder will respond when he lets fly with a vintage Soto fastball.

"I wish I could say yes, but . . ." Soto said, his voice trailing off.

The proof was in the windup. When he's throwing hard, Soto will make a little hop after he releases the ball — his way of stopping his forward momentum while maintaining balance. The hop wasn't there Wednesday, and neither was the 90 mph fastball.

The doctors who removed spurs in an arthroscopic operation last August say Soto eventually will fully recover. For now, the 30-year-old pitcher must deal with the uncertainty of each step in the rebuilding process.

That means holding back on the fastball for now.

"That's something I have to work to," Soto said. "I'm throwing the way my arm feels like. In my mind, I'm ready to go out and let it out. That's not the way it happens."

His 36-pitch performance featured a reduced fastball and plenty of change-ups — a menu that baffled hitters more accustomed to Soto's overpowering speed.

"They were waiting for the hard fastball, and everything was a change-up," he said.

While pleased with the three perfect innings — which were aided by some good defense — Soto is ready to move on to the next step. He'll start playing catch at longer distances to build up the arm and, perhaps, ease through the fear of putting extra zip on his tosses.

"I'll probably play catch or shag balls in the outfield. That's when it's going to come out," Soto said.

The Reds aren't pushing Soto, but they're anticipating continued improvement that will put him on course to pitch by the middle of April. Manager Pete Rose praises Soto's determination and the effort he's putting into the rehabilitation program.

"He's working extra hard," Rose said.

Soto was on the disabled list three times last season, when he was 5-10 in 19 games with a 4.71 earned run average. He had a poor season the year before, going 12-15 with a 3.58 ERA.

As the ace of the staff, Soto felt greatly responsible for the Reds' second-place finishes both years in the National League West. He wants it to be different this year.

"I really have been hurt personally the last two years, by not being able to help the team," Soto said. "The team was so close to the playoffs, and I couldn't help them."

Cincinnati had 10 hits against three Dodgers pitchers. Los Angeles scored its runs on homers by Pedro Guerrero and Jose Gonzalez.

In other spring training action, San Francisco took California 5-4; the White Sox split games, with one squad beating Philadelphia 7-2, the other losing to Houston's split squad 4-3; the other Astros squad downed Pittsburgh 8-4; Cleveland beat Milwaukee 8-4; Seattle defeated Oakland 4-1; the Chicago Cubs edged San Diego 3-2; Atlanta whipped Montreal 5-3; Minnesota pounded the New York Mets 11-6; Detroit stopped Kansas City 6-2; St. Louis was a 4-2 winner over Toronto; Boston outscored the New York Yankees 6-2; and Texas romped past Baltimore 14-1.

Giants 5, Angels 4
Mike Aldrete's RBI single in the fourth inning, his third RBI of the game, gave the Giants their sixth straight victory.

The Angels had staged a furious two-out rally in the second, collecting five consecutive hits. Darrell Miller singled and scored on a triple by Gus Polidor, who scored on Butch Wynegar's single. Mark McLemore doubled, then Gary Pettis singled in two runs.

California pitcher John Candelaria left the team's camp to have numbness in his right leg checked. The team's orthopedist, Dr. Lewis Yocum, said the condition was caused by irritation of a peroneal nerve. He performed a scan and said the results were negative.

Cubs 3, Padres 2
Andre Dawson had three hits and an RBI and pitcher Greg Maddux drove in the deciding run. In the fourth inning, Leon Durham had an infield single and went to third on a single by Jody Davis. Davis took second on center fielder Stanley Jefferson's bobble. After an intentional walk to Shawon Dunston, Durham scored on a fielder's choice grounder by Maddux, who earned the victory by holding the Padres to two runs and seven hits in six innings.

Mariners 4, A's 1
John Moses led off the ninth with a pinch-hit homer, starting a four-run rally. The Mariners had only Bob Kearney's single in the sixth before rallying off A's ace reliever Jay Howell in the ninth.

The Mariners sent 10 batters to the plate in the ninth, when Phil Bradley and Rich Renteria had RBI singles and Ken Phelps doubled home a run.

Indians 8, Brewers 4
Cleveland had 16 hits, including Cory Snyder's run-scoring double in a three-run fifth inning. Julio Franco drove in two more Indian runs with a two-out single in the eighth.

Joe Carter and Tony Bernazard each had three hits for the Indians.

Astros (ss) 8, Pirates 4
On a windy day in Bradenton, Fla., Houston and Pittsburgh combined for five home runs. Jim Pankovits had two hits, including a homer, drove in two runs and scored twice for Houston.

All of the Pirates' scoring came on solo home runs off Nolan Ryan. Tony Pena hit his in the first inning, R.J. Reynolds followed in the second, and Jim Morrison and pitcher Bob Pateron connected in the fourth.

Astros (ss) 4, White Sox (ss) 3
The other set of Astros also won as Bill Doran drove in three runs with a sacrifice fly and a two-run single.

Bob Knepper pitched five innings and allowed three hits. Neil Allen pitched the first seven innings for the White Sox while losing his first decision.

White Sox (ss) 7, Phillies 2
Jerry Royster hit a three-run homer and Ron Hassey added a solo shot for the split Chicago squad. Royster hit his homer in the second inning after starter Kevin Gross walked the first two men he faced that inning. Hassey's home run came one inning later.

Doug Bair gave up hits to the first four batters he faced in the eighth as the White Sox scored three more times.

Braves 5, Expos 3
Atlanta came up with five runs in the eighth inning. Ken Griffey's two-run double highlighted the rally.

The Braves roughed up rookie pitcher Roger Cole in the eighth after Neal Heaton, who became the first Montreal pitcher to go seven innings this spring, allowed just two hits and did not walk a batter. He retired 14 straight until giving up a leadoff single in the seventh. Tim Wallach drew a bases-loaded walk and Mike Fitzgerald singled home two runs as Montreal jumped to a 3-0 lead in the third.

Twins 11, Mets 6
Tom Brunansky's two-run home run ignited a seven-run sixth-inning for Minnesota, which has won four straight games. Trailing 6-3 entering the sixth, the Twins' Randy Bush doubled and Brunansky followed with his homer off Ron Darling. A walk to Roy Smalley, Mark Salas' triple and two more walks knocked out Darling.

Mark Davidson greeted reliever Randy Myers with a two-run single and Bush later singled to drive in two more runs. The seventh run scored on an error.

Gary Carter and Clint Hurdle homered in New York's six-run second inning.

Tigers 6, Royals 2
Non-roster rookies Billy Bean and

Scott Lusader each singled and drove in a run and Detroit's Walt Terrell pitched six innings for the second time. Terrell allowed four hits and one run, striking out two. Bret Saberhagen gave up five hits and three runs in his five innings.

Cardinals 4, Blue Jays 2
John Tudor, who will be St. Louis' Opening Day starter, turned in six strong innings. Tudor allowed four hits and one run and became the first St. Louis pitcher to go six innings this spring.

Anderson Can Always Get Job

LAKELAND, Fla. (AP) — Sure, managers are hired to be fired. But with managers like Detroit's Sparky Anderson, that's not where the story ends.

Anderson, by his own admission, is one of a select few men who will always be able to find a job in baseball.

"I've never worried about a job in my life," Anderson said Wednesday. "I've never feared hearing the phone ring."

Anderson's theory is that when club owners go out looking for a new manager, they look for a recognizable face first and won-lost records second.

"That guy will never be fired," Anderson said. "He'll just be rehired and rehired."

Anderson, by any measure, is one of the most recognizable faces in baseball.

He said that within three days after being fired by the Cincinnati Reds after the 1978 season, he had six job offers. Anderson turned them all down, but signed on with the Tigers about two months into the 1979 season, replacing Les Moss.

Since then, Anderson and Jim Campbell, the Tigers president, have become close friends. There's little chance, therefore, that Anderson would be fired while Campbell is in command — although nothing is absolute.

"If pressure was great enough, Jim might have to fire me, but it would have nothing to do with our friendship," Anderson explained. "Eventually, animosity is bound to build up in any organization."

And even if he were fired by the Tigers, it wouldn't necessarily be a bad thing. Anderson noted, for example, that he signed with the Tigers for double the salary the Reds paid him.

The secret of his success, Anderson explained, isn't that he fears being fired but that he fears losing.

"The fear I never want to lose is the fear of losing a ballgame," he said. "That's my main desire, to win every game."

Anderson concedes, however, that much of winning and losing is beyond a manager's control.

"I never worry at the start of the season whether I'm going to finish first or last, because the players are going to determine that," Anderson said. "If you've got first-place players, you'll win. If you don't, you won't. Didn't Whitey Herzog manage the St. Louis Cardinals in 1985 and 1986?"

Anderson isn't naive, nor is he a braggard. He simply knows how he stands.

"Why do you suppose every city I go into, you guys (reporters) are in here (his office) instead of out there?" he said.

Anderson said another key to his success is the fact that he maintains absolute control, although it isn't exactly certain how he does it.

"All clubs, no matter what the sport, will emulate the guy that's leading it," Anderson said. "I can tell as soon as I walk through a clubhouse what kind of guy is in charge, just by the way the players behave."

"In our clubhouse, all the people act like professionals. You think I'm going to live with a jerk for seven months?"

What does the manager do then? He creates the mood, in Anderson's opinion. As examples, he cited the late Bear Bryant and Joe Paterno of college football, Bob Knight of college basketball, and Don Shula of professional football.

"All of those men have had talented players," Anderson said. "But so did some of the people they beat. But those men have something special and their teams emulate them."

"It's a system. Everything's a system."

ANY TURF SERVICE CAN GIVE YOU GREENER GRASS

That doesn't mean you're getting a healthier lawn. In most cases, it means you're getting a turf treatment that promotes "top" growth and color. Which makes your grass look great. But to build a really healthy lawn, you need treatments that get down to the roots and build a hardy, healthy root system as dense and vigorous as your lawn's top growth.

You need a service that works from the roots up. Not from the top down.

Pacers Keep Playoff Hope Alive With 126-108 Win

By The Associated Press
A spot in the NBA playoffs is high in the thoughts of Indiana's Wayman Tisdale and Steve Stipanovich. Both kept the Pacers' playoff hopes alive by scoring 24 points Wednesday night as Indiana beat Milwaukee 125-108.

"We don't want to lose sight of a playoff spot," Tisdale said. "I think our confidence is high, and our intensity is up. Tonight we moved the ball well. Hopefully, we can come back and play this way against New York. I have't been scoring that well lately."

With Stipanovich scoring 15 points in the final period, Indiana, 34-35, opened an 18-point lead.

"I was passing up shots early, but in the fourth quarter I made an adjustment and the shots started falling," the Indiana center said. "We're trying to improve at each outing. Everyone on this team is capable of playing an outstanding game. When it's your night, you have to rise to the occasion."

"We're moving the ball better, but every season you shoot for at least .500. Everyone told me I was crazy," said Pacers Coach Jack Ramsay who took over the Pacers this year after Indiana finished four straight seasons in the Central Division cellar. "But any team can be a winning team if they really work and they play with intensity."

In other games, the Los Angeles Clippers beat Utah 111-101, while Golden State was a 127-115 winner over Detroit.

Pacers 125, Bucks 108

The Pacers were in front 90-81 to start the fourth quarter, and Stipanovich scored nine points in the first 2:20. Included was an 18-foot jumper that capped an 11-2 Indiana run and pushed the lead to 101-83.

"We played a great ballgame from top to bottom," Ramsay said. "Stipo, after struggling the first four or five minutes, was magnificent. This team is getting better, I'll tell you that."

Milwaukee Coach Don Nelson said he was to blame for the loss. "This was a coach's loss. I thought we'd be able to come out and play well after we played well last night. I simply misread my team. I didn't feel my team was prepared. It wasn't their fault.

"I didn't get them prepared because I was in bed most of the day myself. My back is acting up again. I just didn't do a very good job of preparing them for tonight's game."

Indiana's Chuck Person broke a 16-16 tie with a 3-pointer with 5:20 to play in the first quarter. Indiana had a seven-point lead at the end of the period, 38-31.

Tisdale, who had been in a recent scoring slump, scored nine of his team's first 18 points in the second period as the Pacers took a 56-41 lead. Indiana led at halftime 70-53, but the Bucks closed to within six at 76-70, led by Terry Cummings, who scored nine of his team-high 21 points in the third period.

Four consecutive free throws, two by Vern Fleming and two by backcourt mate John Long, pushed Indiana's lead back to 10.

Long finished with 18, Fleming had 17, and Person added 14 points and 13 rebounds.

Ricky Pierce and Craig Hodges each had 18 for the Bucks.

Clippers 111, Jazz 101

The Clippers ended their latest losing streak at six as Larry Drew came in to score 14 of his 23 points in the final period and Mike Woodson chipped in with 28.

The Clippers, who won for only the second time in their last 14 games, also got 24 points from Michael Cage. Los Angeles is 12-56, easily the worst record in the NBA.

Thurl Bailey came off the bench to lead Utah with 24 points and Karl Malone had 21, despite going 0-for-11 in the second half.

Warriors 127, Pistons 115

Joe Barry Carroll's 33 points, 31 by Eric "Sleepy" Floyd, and Larry Smith's 19 rebounds paced the Warriors, who moved above .500 with their 35th victory this year and third in a row.

An 11-2 spurt by the Pistons got them within a point in the final quarter. But Carroll made two free throws with 3:25 left, Floyd followed with a driving layup and Smith's two free throws made the score 120-111 with two minutes remaining.

The Pistons, who got 23 points apiece from Bill Laimbeer and Adrian Dantley, have lost three of their last four games to drop 1 1/2 games behind first-place Atlanta in the Central Division.

TPC Course Is Now Applauded

PONTE VEDRA, Fla. (AP) — The Tournament Players Club at Sawgrass, once a subject of howling controversy, now is accepted, even applauded by golf's touring pros.

"It's a good course now," said U.S. Open champion Ray Floyd, one of the prime contenders in the $1 million Tournament Players Championship that got underway today.

"For me, it's like St. Andrews," said Greg Norman, the Australian who holds the British Open title. "The first time I played St. Andrews, I didn't like it. The more I played it, the more I liked it."

"This course is the same," said Norman, who dominated world golf last year with $1.2 million in winnings and 10 international titles. "As I play it more, I like it more and more and more. The more you play it, the more you understand it and what it asks you to do."

It was not always thus. Most of the criticism concerned the greens, with their humps and hollows and relatively sparse grass.

"It's like playing Donkey-Kong," Tom Weiskopf said.

Jack Nicklaus said that hitting a shot into the greens was like "trying to stop a shot on the hood of your car."

Lee Trevino's complaint about the greens: "You can't read dirt."

All that was in the past.

"It was terribly frustrating to hit a shot you were totally proud of, and make a bogey," Floyd recalled.

"Now the course has had a chance to mature. Some of the more severe greens have been replaced. Now the grass has a root structure that will accept a shot."

"It's a very acceptable golf course, one the touring pros can be proud of," he said.

The tournament, recognized as golf's fifth major and annually growing toward the stature held by the U.S. and British Opens, the Masters and PGA, has drawn the finest field in the game.

A federal judge recently ordered the removal of 45 textbooks from the Alabama public schools on the grounds that they promote "secular humanism." The term "humanism" originally referred to a philosophical and literary movement of the Renaissance. Renaissance humanism emphasized classical studies and a return to "classical" forms of culture and thought. The humanist movement led to a careful reexamination of Scriptures and it helped give birth to the Reformation.

trumps and he could then have claimed 10 tricks, conceding two heart tricks to the opponents. But East's shift to a club at trick two had all the earmarks of a singleton and, after all, this was duplicate. With the help of the "marked" finesse for the queen of clubs, at least one overtrick seemed there for the taking. So declarer led a club to the jack, and a satisfied East took his queen and shifted to a heart for a one-trick set.

West led his singleton in his partner's suit. Sitting East was Tom Snow, business manager of New York's prestigious Cavendish Club. He won the jack of diamonds and smoothly shifted to his low club!

Declarer took his ace, cashed the ace of hearts and ruffed a heart. Since a crossruff would have promoted West's nine, declarer drew

At the other tables East continued with a diamond at trick two. Declarer ruffed high, trumped a heart on the board, drew trumps and continued with the ace-king of clubs to earn an unexpected bonus of two overtricks.

Susannah York's 'Star Quality' Launches PBS Masterpiece Series

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Susannah York plays a spoiled actress in a dramatization of a Noel Coward short story that is likely based on Coward's frequent costar, Gertrude Lawrence.

"It's a dramatic piece, a melodrama you might say, about the theatrical profession in the 1930s," said the British actress on a visit to Los Angeles. "The two main protagonists are the star, Lorraine, a spoiled, pampered, egotistical actress who nevertheless has star quality, and a director who is equally vain and egotistical."

"It's a clash of egos. What brings them together is a new play by a playwright we are to assume is young Noel Coward. The actress is quite probably Gertrude Lawrence."

The short story, called "Star Quality," is one of five Coward pieces that will be presented on Mobil Masterpiece Theatre on PBS beginning this Sunday. In all, Coward wrote about 100 stories.

Jan Richardson stars as the director, who puts up with Lorraine's prima donna ways until the curtain is about to rise. Peter Chelsom plays the young playwright, and David Yelland (the Prince of Wales in "Chariots of Fire") is the director's assistant.

Other plays in the series: —"Mr. and Mrs. Edgehill," starring Judi Dench and Ian Holm as a British couple who keep their stiff upper lips on a South Pacific island in the face of the American military and the Japanese in World War II, April 5.

—"Me and the Girls," Tom Courtenay as the homosexual leader of a girls dance troupe playing seedy cabarets in Europe, April 12.

—"Mrs. Capper's Birthday," Patricia Hayes plays a cockney cleaning lady who realizes on her 50th birthday she has much to be thankful for, April 19. —"Bon Voyage," Judy Parfitt and Nigel Havers fall in love on a cruise ship, April 26.

Ms. York is well known to American audiences for roles in such movies as "Tom Jones," "Kaleidoscope," "A Man for All Seasons," "The Killing of Sister George," "They Shoot Horses, Don't They?" and "Sky Riders." She and Marlon

Brando played Superman's parents in the first two "Superman" movies, and she starred with George C. Scott in "Jane Eyre" and "A Christmas Carol."

About five years ago she co-starred with David Janssen in a TV movie called "The Golden Gate Murders." More recently she went to Norway for a two-hour "Love Boat" set among the fiords.

She calls "Star Quality" a witty and funny play. "I think Lorraine is unconsciously funny because she takes herself so seriously," she said. "It's two clashing egos and two very spoiled natures."

"The turning point comes when the director tries to fire her sidekick, a not very good actress who is her toady and gofer and bottlewasher. The director sees it's not working and wants to recast."

It's not Ms. York's first encounter with Coward. She starred in "Private Lives" on stage and did "Fallen Angels" with Joan Collins for British television, and played the balcony scene from "Private Lives" with Richard Briers with Coward in the audience.

"It was the first and last time I ever met him," said Ms. York, clad in jeans, her golden hair cut short.

Recently she appeared in three plays at the Old Vic, "The Apple Cart," "Fatal Attraction" and "The Women."

She's also written two children's books, "In Search of Unicorns" and "Lark's Castle." She says, "I wrote the first for my son, Orlando, and the second for my daughter, Sasha."

Ms. York, who is divorced, lives with her children in a rambling Victorian house south of the Thames River.

David Frost Plans Return To TV For Campaign Trail

By MATT WOLF
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — In 1968, his line-up included Richard Nixon, Eugene McCarthy, Robert Kennedy and Ronald Reagan. Now, the names have changed, but David Frost's interest in the American presidency has not.

Almost 20 years after he last tracked the campaign trail to the White House, the British television personality is returning to the American beat in "The Next President," a planned series of 13 hour-long television interviews with the 1988 presidential candidates.

"Anybody who's running for public office has a duty to let the public know something about them," the 47-year-old interviewer and talk-show host said before flying to the United States this week.

Due for syndication by Westinghouse to individual television stations, "The Next President" will follow the Republican and Democratic presidential hopefuls in weekly airings to begin next November. It will end with the New Hampshire primary Feb. 16, 1988.

In the plushly carpeted comfort of his north London offices, Frost, cigar in hand, looked more like a politician himself than the investigative journalist who elicited an apology to the American people from former President Richard Nixon. His 1977 televised interviews focusing on the Watergate scandal gained worldwide attention.

But the Cambridge University graduate who found fame at age 23 with the series "That Was the Week That Was," a satirical revue of current events, said he looked forward to renewed coverage of American politics after time spent on books and other TV work.

"At that time, Vietnam overshadowed all else, really," said Frost, contrasting his 1968 encounters with the nine presidential aspirants with the ones to come.

"One of the questions relevant in '68 — and it got a whole spectrum of replies — was, 'Do you believe in my country, right or wrong?'" he said. "That question is no longer topical. Nobody would say yes anymore."

"The nuclear dialogue under way at the moment would have been inconceivable in 1968. The dialogue with China has also opened up in a way that would have been inconceivable," he said.

Frost said he believed his being British helped him get and conduct interviews in America.

"I think independence is an important factor in a country as diverse as America, with so many loyalties," said Frost. "I'm not part of the Eastern establishment or the rising Sun Belt."

Frost first worked in the United States at age 24, when "That Was the Week That Was" began its two-year American airing.

"Over the years, I've had a long love affair with the States. I was touched and delighted by the generosity of the welcome you get," he said.

Newman To Skip Oscars

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Paul Newman, nominated for the 1986 best-actor Oscar for "The Color of Money," is skipping Monday's award ceremonies, citing work and superstition.

Newman is working around the clock editing "The Glass Menagerie," starring his wife Joanne Woodward, said Newman's publicist, Warren Cowan. "He told me, 'Besides, I'm superstitious. I've been there seven times and lost. Maybe if I stay away I'll win.'"

Newman has been nominated seven times by the Motion Picture Academy of Arts and Sciences as an actor and once as producer, of "Rachel, Rachel."

In "The Color of Money" he reprises his 1961 Oscar-nominated role of "Fast Eddie" Felson, the razor-sharp pool player in "The Hustler."

Deaf Actress Holds Oscar Spotlight

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Four stars in the prime of their careers and one 21-year-old newcomer who cannot speak are the candidates who make the 59th Academy Award race for best actress the most arresting in recent years.

Jane Fonda, Oscar winner for "Kluge" in 1971 and "Coming Home" in 1978, was nominated for her performance as the boozing, ex-actress caught in a murder plot in "The Morning After." It is her seventh nomination.

Sissy Spacek, who won the best actress prize for her portrayal of country star Loretta Lynn in the 1980 "Coal Miner's Daughter," was cited this year for her role as the dippy, husband-shooting sister in "Crimes of the Heart."

Kathleen Turner, who rose to stardom after her first film, "Body Heat," was nominated for her role as the housewife who relives her teen years in "Peggy Sue Got Married."

Sigourney Weaver, a dramatic actress ("The Year of Living Dangerously"), was nominated for her Rambo-like space adventurer in "Aliens."

Marlee Matlin, deaf from the age of 18 months, won her nomination for portraying the wordless cleaning woman who learns to conquer her fury in "Children of a Lesser God."

It is Miss Matlin who has captured the most media attention. At a recent luncheon for the nominees, she impressed interviewers with her sprightly, rapid-fire answers followed by signing and relayed by an interpreter. Asked if she expected to find other film roles, she replied: "That depends on how imaginative producers are."

Did she expect to be the sentimental favorite at this year's awards?

"I expect to have a good night at the Oscars," she said. "I tend to be courageous. I've been that way all my life. I go for what I want, and I speak what I feel."

Some might argue that sentiment affords her an unfair advantage against the four other candidates, that she must have found it easy to play a deaf woman.

However, she said making "Children of a Lesser God" was "a lot of physical and emotional, good and bad times." Out of the film came her real-life romance with co-star William Hurt; they continue to share a New York apartment.

For her role as the alcoholic actress in "The Morning After," Miss Fonda researched with her customary thoroughness.

"A few times I got very drunk, then I'd go in the bathroom and say, 'Now I'm going to study myself.' I didn't learn anything, so I put that aside," she said. "I began to talk to doctors, sober alcoholics, went to a number of A.A. (Alcoholics Anonymous) meetings." Her best coaching came from an alcoholic actress who told her: "I feel insecure unless I'm out of control. Drink to me means: the loss of control, and that's how I feel secure."

Miss Spacek's feat in "Crimes of the Heart" was extraordinary: outshining two other Oscar winners, Jessica Lange and Diane Keaton. It could be argued that she had the showier role: She shoots her husband in the stomach and has an affair with a teen-ager.

Miss Spacek was also nominated for "Carrie" (1976), "Missing" (1982) and "The River" (1984). "I've always tended to play very strong women, and they rubbed off on me and made me stronger. Now I suppose I feel strong enough to play troubled women," she said.

But roles such as the quirky Babe McGrath Botrelle of "Crimes of the Heart" apparently don't rub off on her: "People perceive me as a happy-go-lucky, stable person, and it's perfectly true. Maybe I can be the way I am in real life because I get paid to freak out."

Kathleen Turner won her first Academy nomination for "Peggy Sue Got Married." However, in six years she has acquired enough luster to be dubbed "The New Queen of the Screen" by People magazine. She made it with a series of stunning and varied portraits in "Body Heat," "The Man With Two Brains," "Romancing the Stone," "Crimes of Passion" and last year's "Prizzi's Honor."

As Peggy Sue she had an actress' dream: playing a middle-age housewife in the present as well as a high schooler in a flashback dream.

At the nominees' luncheon, she was asked about criticism that she didn't look like a teen-ager. She replied, "Peggy Sue didn't try to pass as 18; she was always 42 in her mind."

Sigourney Weaver may be the first actress to win an Oscar nomination in the kind of role usually reserved for such performers as Sylvester Stallone and Arnold Schwarzenegger. Her nomination came from a repeat of the role of Warrant Officer Ripley that she played in her film debut, "Alien," in 1979.

She has termed the role "Rambo-ina." But her inspiration came from more bookish sources: "I secretly structured myself to play Ripley like Henry V and like the women warriors in classic Chinese literature."

A first rate comedy about a second story woman.
