Contra Fund-Raisers Used Access For Leverage

By RITA BEAMISH
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A private Contra-aid operation, assisted by Lt. Col. Oliver L. North, touted access to President Reagan and the White House to raise millions of dollars from wealthy Americans, documents show.

At least one contributor believes that North, then a White House aide, was controlling how the funds were spent, according to the internal documents obtained by a former employee of fund-raiser Carl "Spitz" Channell.

A $100,000 check to Channell's tax-exempt National Endowment for the Preservation of Liberty — some of the more than $7 million raised in 1986 — was sent by Pennsylvania contributor Bruce Hooper. The check was accompanied by a note telling Channell's staff, "Please have Ollie contact me to let me know what he's going to do with it."

The note, dated May 27, 1986, was among documents that Jane McLaughlin, who worked as a fund-raiser for Channell, has turned over to Lawrence E. Walsh, the independent counsel investigating the secret sale of U.S. arms to Iran and the possible diversion of payments to Nicaraguan Contra rebels.

The documents, which were reviewed by The Associated Press, indicate a more active role by North in Channell's program than previously acknowledged by Channell.

Channell, whose activities are under scrutiny by the independent counsel, has maintained that North did not raise or control money for Channell's projects, which included a speaker program featuring Nicaraguan Contras, a $1 million pro-Contra television campaign and humanitarian aid contributions estimated at some $3 million during the two-year congressional ban on military aid to the Contras.

Hooper acknowledged sending McLaughlin the note and $100,000 check. But he declined in a telephone interview to elaborate on Channell's relationship with North other than to say, "I had a sense that ... they were cooperating between each other about those funds."

Channell spokesman Jared Cameron said "there would be no comment on stolen documents."

He said North was simply a resource of information for Channell since both worked for Reagan's policy of backing the Contras.

Cameron has said the two met as many as 14 times, only during White House briefings that Reagan sometimes attended, where North spoke to Channell contributors about Central America.

However, the documents show North wrote to donors to thank them and encourage support.

North was fired from his National Security Council job last November for his role in the Iran-Contra affair.

The presidential commission that investigated the Iran-Contra matter said North was deeply involved in raising private funds for the Contras and in getting weapons to them during the congressional ban on military aid from 1984 to 1986.

Letters from McLaughlin to donors state, "We met with the president" or

Alleged Spy Recruiter Resigns Israeli Post

By SERGEI SHARGORODSKY
Associated Press Writer

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — A top air force officer was quoted today as acknowledging he recruited Jonathan Jay Pollard to spy for Israel but that he did not consider it a mistake and resigned only because "America wants a head."

Lt. Col. Aviem Sella on Sunday resigned his command of Israel's most prestigious air base, Tel Nof, citing his concern for deteriorating U.S.-Israeli relations over the Pollard affair.

Sella, 46, was indicted in the United States this month on espionage charges. His appointment March 3 to command Tel Nof angered U.S. officials who interpreted it as a reward for his role in the Pollard affair.

The mass circulation newspaper Yediot Ahronot today quoted Sella as saying he recruited Pollard and passed him on to Rafael Eitan, head of the Defense Ministry's Scientific Liaison Bureau.

"Yes, I recruited Pollard. He came to me, and I passed him on to Rafi Eitan. I did not do more than that," Sella was quoted as saying in the interview, conducted last Friday.

"I don't think I made a mistake ... I did only what any other (Israeli) Jew would have done," Sella was quoted as saying. He was quoted as saying his contact with Pollard was limited to recruitment because controlling a spy was the job of the secret services.

He also was quoted as saying he was reluctant to leave his post but that "America wants a head."

Pollard, a 32-year-old American Jew and former civilian analyst for the U.S. Navy, was sentenced to life in prison March 4 for selling Israel hundreds of classified U.S. military documents in 1984-85.

The Israeli military spokesman's office had no immediate comment when asked to confirm Sella's reported comments. Sella could not immediately be reached for comment.

Sella, who remains in the air force, said in his resignation letter he was stepping down because of "the worsening of Israeli-U.S. relations and my concern for the future of relations between the two countries and ties with U.S. Jewry."

He added, "If facts had been the

Help For Hostages Pledged By Syrian

By MAIA LAWAND
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Brig. Gen. Ghazi Kanaan, the Syrian intelligence chief whose forces control west Beirut, said today his men are "working seriously" to free foreign hostages in Lebanon.

Kanaan described as "lies" a claim by Palestine Liberation Organization chairman Yasser Arafat that four kidnapped Beirut University College educators are in the custody of Syrian forces.

"We have no interest at all in keeping them (the teachers)," Kanaan said in a statement broadcast by Beirut radio stations.

Three Americans, Robert Polhill, Alann Steen and Jesse Turner, were kidnapped Jan. 24 along with Mithileshwar Singh, a native of India who is a resident legal alien of the United States. A Moslem group, the Islamic Jihad for the Liberation of Palestine, claimed responsibility.

Kanaan said the 7,500 Syrian soldiers deployed in the Moslem sector of the Lebanese capital Feb. 22 to end militia fighting are "working seriously to obtain the freedom of all hostages. ... This is a humanitarian issue."

Twenty-four foreigners, including eight Americans, are missing and believed held captive in Lebanon. Also missing is Anglican Church envoy Terry Waite, who disappeared Jan. 20 while on a mission to free foreign hostages.

Arafat and other PLO officials have claimed the four teachers were kidnapped by the Shiite Moslem militia Amal, Syria's main ally in Lebanon, and were turned over to the Syrians when they moved into west Beirut last month.

Evidence Storage No Problem

By DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer

Despite problems related to evidence storage incurred by some small North Carolina municipalities, Pitt County law enforcement officials say they've been able to avoid similar difficulties.

"I've had no problems and I hope I never do," Sgt. R.W. Benton, supervisor in charge of identification and evidence for the Greenville Police Department, said today.

"Everything is locked inside jail cells upstairs. It (evidence) is behind two steel doors. I'm the only person who can get anything out or can carry anything in. I'm the only one who can release it."

In some North Carolina counties, lenient evidence handling procedures has caused police to lose arrests, officials say.

The Bethel Police Department uses a method similar to Greenville of handling evidence.

"We have a vault," Bethel Police Chief J.B. Buell said. "We use a vault and myself and the sergeant are the only ones with the combination to it."

Buell, who has served as police chief for two years, said his department has not had evidence tampered with, stolen or lost.

"We never have had a problem," he said. "We always label it and secure it and only two of us have access — no one else. It works out real well."

The Pitt County Sheriff's Department turns all evidence over to the identification department for storage, according to Chief Deputy Brooks Oakley, who said it is stored either in a vault or locked doors depending on the evidence.

Other area police departments use a different method.

"The officer that collects evidence in a case keeps his own evidence in a locker assigned to him and nobody else has key," Farmville Police Chief William Waters said. "He controls it. He keeps it until a court date. We don't break our chain of evidence and we lock it up."

"In a major case that requires extensive investigation, an investigator handles it and evidence is handed over to him."

The Ayden Police Department is in the process of improving its evidence storage system, according to Police Chief Tim Phillips.

"We have similar problems to most other municipalities," he said. "We've designed a method that reduces risks and highly documents property. During the next fiscal year, we are going to implement that program."

Phillips said the system is needed to protect officers.

"Presently, the officers keep it (evidence) in lockers assigned to them, unless it is drugs. Drugs are turned over to me," he said. "We've remodeled two cells in our program that will facilitate centralized storage."

"No evidence has disappeared. It's not disappearing, but it is necessary for us to provide a safeguard to protect officers from being accused of tampering or taking evidence. More protection shows accountability to the public."

Midwest Gets 8 Feet Of Snow

By JONATHAN W. OATIS
Associated Press Writer

A double-barreled blizzard that stranded hundreds of travelers left the Midwest buried in up to 8 feet of snow today, while National Guardsmen prepared to airlift hay to starving livestock in Kansas, and Southern farmers braced for a crop-killing freeze.

Hundreds of miles of interstate highway remained shut today, and officials canceled school in parts of Nebraska, as well as at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln and the University of Nebraska-Omaha.

Snow fell in Michigan, and was expected to spread into Indiana and Illinois, and very light snow fell in southeast Texas near Port Arthur. But the latest storms were nowhere near the strength of the two blizzards that hit the nation's midsection during the past week.

"The storm over the Plains and the Mississippi Valley is pretty much over now," said Harry Gordon of the National Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo. "The big problem will be the very cold temperatures."

The temperature early today was 33 degrees at Dallas, Indianapolis and St. Louis; it was 24 at Kansas City.

Farmers in Oklahoma, Texas, Louisiana, Arkansas, Missouri and Utah were warned of freezes, with temperatures expected to plunge into the 20s. Cool weather was expected as far east as the Florida Panhandle.

"We're very concerned, especially for the peaches," said Pat Hegwood of Mississippi State University's Crystal Springs agricultural experiment station. "Peaches are now in absolute full bloom. It looks like a bumper crop — probably a record crop" that's threatened. Frost also would threaten tomatoes, melon and squash in Mississippi and Alabama.

Some Texas peach growers said they checked their orchards Sunday and found them already damaged by cold.

Milton Jung, a major grower near Fredericksburg, said it appeared his 250 acres of peach trees were wiped out. "Our loss will probably be close to $300,000," said Jung.

Growers said the full extent of the damage wouldn't be known until the weather warms up and there is a day or two of sunshine.

The blizzard that started Friday — the second of the week — was blamed for at least a death each in Colorado and Kansas before spreading into Nebraska and Iowa through Sunday, closing hundreds of miles of highways. It dumped more than a

Afghan Warplane Downed

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Pakistani jet fighters shot down an intruding Afghan warplane today after it penetrated 10 miles into Pakistani territory in an area where scores of people have been killed by Afghan air attacks, officials said.

A Ministry of Defense spokesman, who declined to be identified further, said Pakistani air force fighters shot the plane down near the border town of Parachinar. He said the wreckage was seen falling in the mountains to the north.

Border officials, who also spoke on condition of anonymity, said the Afghan air force plane was shot down by two American-made F-16 jet fighters. The Pakistani jets hit the Afghan plane with a missile, the officials said.

Military patrols were searching for the wreckage of the plane, but it was not clear if the debris had fallen in Pakistani or Afghan territory, the Defense Ministry spokesman said.

The ministry spokesman said the type of plane shot down had not been identified. All Afghan air force planes are of Soviet origin.

Scores of people were killed and injured March 23 when Afghan planes bombed and rocketed the border settlement of Tera Mangal west of Parachinar. A Foreign Ministry spokesman said in Islamabad last week that at least 152 people were killed in Afghan air attacks along the border since March 23.

Pakistan aids and shelters Moslem guerrillas fighting the Afghan government, which is supported by an estimated 115,000 Soviet troops.

Attended Seminar

Sixteen science teachers from the Pitt County, Lenoir County and Kinston City schools recently attended a national science teachers convention in Washington on fellowships provided by the Du Pont Company. A total of 252 science teachers from Du Pont communities attended the convention.

The Pitt County teachers participating were Pattie Leary and Bill Smith, both of D.H. Conley High School; Catherine Moss of Farmville Central High School; Ann Burden of North Pitt High School; Cheryl Treadwell of Greenville Middle School; Catherine Skinner of Ayden-Grifton High School, and Naomi Moore and Ellis Banks, both of J.H. Rose High School.

Safety Meeting

The Pitt County Health and Safety Council will hold its April meeting Thursday at noon at the Greenville Golf and Country Club. John Craggett, plant manager of SAB NIFE, Inc. and Edison Batteries, has planned the program.

Training Class

A free grandparent-in-training class will be held at Pitt County Memorial Hospital at 3 p.m. Sunday. Offered by the staff of the hospital's obstetrics department, the class explores the changes that have occurred in methods of childbirth and child rearing in recent years. Discussion of the participants' feelings about their new roles will be encouraged and ways to help new parents and the baby's siblings will be discussed. A tour of the hospital labor and delivery room will be offered. To register, call the PCMH nursing office, 757-4470.

Weekend Thefts

Investigators said six thefts were reported to Greenville police over the weekend. Officer L.R. McLeod said two boxes containing tools with a combined value of $350 were taken from a vehicle parked at Larry's Carpetland at 3010 E. 10th St. in an incident reported at 6:15 a.m. Saturday, while Officer E.M. Haddock said four pairs of shoes and several undergarments were taken from 102 Kings Row Apartments in an incident reported at 11:20 a.m. Officer J.M. Jones said a 1979 model car was taken from the visitors parking lot at Pitt County Memorial Hospital in an incident reported at 12:03 p.m. Saturday, while Officer M.T. Scheid said four gold rings and a watch were taken from a student locker at E.B. Aycock Junior High School Friday, in an incident reported at 9:07 p.m. Sunday. Officer Alexander Batts said a television set was taken from 418 W. Third St. in an incident reported at

TWO HURT IN CRASH — James W. Shearin, 22, of Raleigh, and Cheryl L. The vehicles collided about 6.4 miles west of Greenville about 9:05 p.m. Sunday. Highway Patrol Trooper R.G. Mills said the Shearin car passed another west-bound vehicle, went out of control after pulling back into the westbound lane, crossed the center line and collided with the east-bound Davis auto. Damage to the Shearin car was estimated at $6,500 while damage to the Davis car was estimated at $2,500. Mills said Shearin was charged with improper passing. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Better Breathers

The Better Breathers Club will meet Wednesday at 2 p.m. in conference room B of the Gaskins-Leslie building. Margie Rachide, patient education coordinator of Lenoir Memorial Hospital in Kinston, will speak on stress management.

Theft Charges

Four people were taken into custody on theft charges by Greenville police over the weekend. Officer Alexander Batts said a juvenile was turned over to department juvenile officers about 6:30 p.m. Saturday after taking a pair of shoes from Allen Shoes, two blouses from Roses and four pairs of sunglasses from J.C. Penney Co. at The Plaza mall. Officer L.R. McLeod said Todd Michael Thomas, 21, of Cary, and Bryon Neal Smith, 20, of Washington, N.C., were arrested on shoplifting charges after switching price tags on items at the Farm Fresh store on Greenville Boulevard in an incident reported at 1:15 a.m. Sunday.

Officer J.M. Jones said Elaine Monique Harris, 17, of 103H Lakeview Terrace was charged with larceny after taking a pack of cigarettes from the Piggly Wiggly supermarket on Dickinson Avenue in an incident reported at 10:46 a.m. Sunday.

ECU SGA President

Scott Thomas of Vanceboro, a junior majoring in political science, has been elected president of the Student Government Association in student elections at East Carolina University.

Thomas, the son of former state senator and Mrs. Joe Thomas of Vanceboro, received 1,303 votes to 861 for his opponent, Steven Pierce. Dillon Kalkhurst of Raleigh, a psychology and broadcasting major, was elected vice president. His opponent was Rick Brown.

Carol Shore, a sophomore education major, won a write-in campaign for secretary of the SGA.

The president of the SGA serves as an ex-officio member of the ECU board of trustees. Thomas will succeed outgoing SGA president Steve Cunanan of Cary.

Plan Approved

The Williamston Planning Board has approved a plan that could locate a seafood packing company on a site on U.S. 64 west of Williamston.

The plan now goes to the Williamston Town Board and the Martin County Commissioners for their consideration.

The planning board approved a recommendation that 87.3 acres of land owned by John and Bud Roberson off U.S. 64 be rezoned from residential to mixed manufacturing.

About four acres of the land is targeted by developer Jack Williams for a crab-processing plant. If all approvals are made and the plant is opened, it could eventually employ as many as 60 people. It is estimated these jobs would mean $650,000 annually in revenues.

However, there are no water and sewer lines to the property. Town Administrator John Boykin said installation costs for water and sewer facilities would run over $65,000.

Location Stalled

The New York based firm of Inter-Farm will not move an operation to Williamston because a grant needed for the location has been denied.

The firm had been considering the Hudson Building on U.S. 64 West, with plans for the go-ahead depending on approval of Community Development Block Grants. The grants requested were denied by CDBG.

Town administrator John Boykin said the grant refusal was based on the fact that they "could not satisfy themselves that Inter-Farm had given them all the right criteria."

Inter-Farm had requested the town's help in receiving a full grant of $750,000 for the purchase of property, land and equipment.

Boykin said the county was ineligible for the full grant because it already had CDBG backing funds tied up in water tank and well construction.

Man Drowns

A Falkland area man drowned Saturday after the pickup truck he was driving ran into a creek near Falkland.

Trooper C.R. Taylor said Leroy Everett, 61, was dead at the scene of the one vehicle accident. He said the truck Everett was driving had left rural paved road 1258 at a high rate of speed. He said the vehicle skidded out of control, ran off the road into the creek, collided with a creek bank on the east side and came to rest under water in the creek on its side.

The accident occurred about 2:30 p.m.

Although Everett sustained other injuries, the medical examiner said the cause of death was drowning.

PCC Classes

Pitt Community College will begin two 10-week adult classes today.

Oil painting lessons will begin at 7 p.m. in room 215 of the Whichard Building on the PCC campus, and beginning sewing classes will be held at 6:30 p.m. in room 201 of the Whichard Building.

History Winners

Approximately 250 students in grades six through 12 participated in National History Day district competition at East Carolina University recently.

Competition in junior and senior divisions included seven categories of entries. District winners will advance to the state competition at Wake Forest University in April. State winners will compete in June at the University of Maryland.

The District I competition was sponsored by ECU's Department of History. The Pitt County Historical Society awarded a plaque to the school with the top entry in contest categories in each division.

Local district winners in the senior division were:

Historical Papers — John H. Beasley, E.B. Aycock Jr. High, first place, and Sarah Yarbrough, D.H. Conley High School, second place.

Group Projects — Mohammed Dar, Alex Ferguson and Chris Richards, J.H. Rose High School, first place.

Group Media — John Person, Parker Davis, Howard Resnik, Rose High, second place.

Motorcycle Death

A Greenville man died Wednesday as a result of injuries sustained

Tuesday when his motorcycle was struck by a van at the intersection of N.C. 33 and rural paved road 2527.

Trooper C.S. Raines said Jack Ronald Mobley II of Shady Knoll Mobile Estates was thrown from his motorcycle which collided with a van driven by Michael Eugene Ellis, 25, of Route 4, Greenville. Mobley was taken to Pitt County Memorial Hospital, where he died.

He said both vehicles had the green light at the intersection, but that Ellis apparently did not see Mobley and pulled in front of him. He said Ellis is charged with death by motor vehicle, a safe movement violation and a yield violation.

The accident occurred about 12:40 p.m. Tuesday.

Mathcounts

Students from E.B. Aycock Junior High School and Greenville Middle School will compete with other seventh- and eighth-grade students in the state finals of the national Mathcounts program in Raleigh Saturday.

Twenty-four teams and 12 individuals will participate in the competition. The top four individual scores and the top coach will team up to represent North Carolina in the national finals in Washington.

The competition consists of written tests and oral matches. Topics include statistics, linear algebra, probability and number theory.

Cattle producers who have cattle grazing cool season grasses or small grains should be aware of the possibility of cattle undergoing grass tetany. Grass tetany or magnesium deficiency is a nutritional disorder of cattle which usually occurs when cattle are grazing the pastures mentioned above. It occurs most frequently in lactating beef cows within 60 days after calving. However, it can affect cows in late gestation or cattle fed wintering rations.

Cattle affected with grass tetany may have the following symptoms: excitement, loss of appetite, muscular twitching, viciousness, grinding of teeth, profuse salivation, tetanic contractions, convulsions and death.

Animals observed suffering from grass tetany must be treated immediately. Several commercial preparations containing calcium and magnesium salts are available for intravenous injection.

The most effective approach to managing grass tetany is a prevention program based on magnesium supplementation. During periods of moderate to great risk, daily consumption of 1 ounce of magnesium oxide should provide protection. The following methods may be used to supply one ounce of magnesium.

•Feed two pounds of a grain mix containing three percent magnesium oxide.

•If a protein supplement is used as the carrier, feed one pound of a mixture containing six percent magnesium oxide and 94 percent protein supplement.

•Sprinkle one ounce over silage at feeding time.

•Magnesium blocks offered free choice — enough to provide one ounce magnesium oxide per head per day.

•Free-choice mineral mixes with 25 to 30 percent magnesium oxide per head per day.

Contact the agricultural extension office for further details about grass tetany.

Martin, Jordan Forces Debate School Chief Issue

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Supporters of an appointed state superintendent of public instruction say the only way to muster the needed three-fifths majority to get the plan through the Legislature is for Gov. Jim Martin and Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan to join forces on its behalf.

But as a Senate committee prepares for a key test vote on the issue this week, the two have been unable to agree on an issue that Jordan supporters call secondary, but Martin allies portray as a question of principle: selection of State Board of Education members.

The Senate Committee on the Constitution will vote Wednesday on a proposed constitutional amendment that would make the post of superintendent of public instruction appointive instead of elective, the committee chairman, Sen. Charles Hipps, D-Haywood, said last week.

It's likely the panel will approve some version of the measure; most of its members are allies of Jordan, who has made education "governance" change a top-priority issue. But prospects beyond the committee vote are uncertain.

Under an amendment backed by Jordan and co-sponsored by Hipps and Sen. Bob Warren, D-Johnston, the board would consist of eight members appointed by the governor and four by the Legislature, plus the lieutenant governor and state treasurer.

A rival amendment supported by Martin and sponsored by Sen. Jim Johnson, R-Cabarrus, would retain the current board membership: the lieutenant governor, the treasurer and 11 gubernatorial appointees.

Both proposed amendments would have the board appoint the superintendent, correcting what critics of the existing system call its biggest flaw. They say there are no clear lines of authority in the education bureaucracy and there is no undisputed chief spokesman for education.

But Johnson contends the board and Department of Public Education should implement the governor's policies.

"If the governor is going to run on an education platform, he should have the authority and the ability to carry out that ... program," Johnson said.

He argues that under the Jordan plan, the governor would have trouble putting his stamp on education policy — especially with the Legislature retaining the power to reject gubernatorial appointees.

"I just don't think it's practical to do it that way," Johnson said. "It's just another way for the General Assembly to grab away a little more appointive power from the governor."

Hipps disagrees that his plan would weaken the governorship. Because the governor would choose a majority of the board members, who in turn would elect their chairman and appoint the superintendent, "it puts him in the position to influence the selection of both," Hipps said. "That's a lot of influence, I believe."

But Hipps says the board membership issue pales in significance beside the need for an appointed superintendent. Giving the Legislature some appointments may be the only way to win three-fifths support for the amendment, he says.

And he warns that if supporters of an appointed superintendent aren't united, selling the amendment to the voters will be difficult. (All constitutional amendments must get majority approval in a statewide referendum).

"We've got to have a broad based consensus," Hipps said. "We shouldn't have to worry about hearing these give-me-strength arguments or about governor-bashing or Legislature-bashing or bureaucracy-bashing. We need to sell the message ... that we're trying to do something good for the schoolchildren of the state."

Johnson agrees, but says he's not convinced the Martin approach wouldn't succeed if Jordan embraced it.

"I'd like to see these two men come together like they did on the gas tax and say 'we want this for the good of the state,'" Johnson said. "One or the other of them is going to be the next governor, and they both need that office protected."

Hipps says he, Johnson and administration officials are talking privately about possible compromises, such as reducing the number of legislative appointees to two or ending legislative confirmation of gubernatorial appointees.

J. Ward Purrington, Martin's legislative liaison, sidestepped the question of whether the governor would endorse the Jordan plan over the status quo if efforts at compromise fail. He did say Martin and Jordan probably would confer before Wednesday's committee vote.

Researcher Thinks More Work Needed To Solve Prison Woes

RALEIGH (AP) — The Legislature has taken emergency action to relieve North Carolina's prison overcrowding, but now must move to unite the state's many criminal justice agencies, a North Carolina Center for Public Policy researcher says.

"The cap of 18,000 on the prison population and the new $15 million appropriation to relieve overcrowding — legislative actions taken earlier this month — were important and dramatic," said Bill Finger, the editor of the center's quarterly magazine Insight. "But they were taken in a crisis atmosphere with little real discussion. Can the legislature now move beyond emergency responses and tackle the broader, systemic issues?"

The publication, released today, showed the results of a yearlong research project on North Carolina prison issues. The center studied four major interrelated issues that the General Assembly must now address. They were:

- the need to expand awareness and the operating capacity of entrance-level alternatives to incarceration, such as the Community Penalties Program.
- the importance of sentencing misdemeanants to local jails or work-release situations instead of the state prison system.
- the urgency of attempting to broaden parole to an accredited and more targeted system.
- the impact of changes in the Fair Sentencing Act on the prison population.

Earlier this month, 18,200 inmates were in a system built to house 16,695. Using the American Correctional Association standard of 50 square feet per inmate, the capacity would be 5,000 fewer. The recent $15 million legislative appropriation will add 2,200 new beds.

"Both Gov. Jim Martin and the General Assembly seem to be trying to avoid a potential federal court order with only bricks and mortar rather than with a comprehensive criminal justice system," Finger said.

All but nine states are currently under court order or facing litigation because of crowded or inhumane prison conditions. North Carolina has 13 prison units operating under court order, with conditions at 48 additional road camp units also under litigation.

"I had hoped that alternatives and construction bills would come together so we could look at everything as a package deal," said state Sen. Tony Rand, D-Cumberland, who chairs the Senate Appropriations Base Budget Committee. "Addressing the prison problem may well be the most important thing we do this session."

The center's research says that solutions like releasing all nonviolent offenders is too simplistic. For example, a drug addict who breaks into a house that happens to be unoccupied is classified as a nonviolent offender, while a 45-year-old alcoholic with no criminal record who murders his wife in a fit of passion is classified as violent, the center says.

The center recommends that state officials carefully review the prison population, and suggests that three types of criminals could be punished more appropriately outside the state prison system — persons serving sentences of less than 60 days, most drunken drivers and most misdemeanants.

Community penalties and intensive probation are designed to punish felons who would otherwise go to prison. Instead of prison, the offenders are sentenced to community service, mandatory alcohol or drug treatment, and intensive supervision in their homes or a halfway house.

The center said more politicians are showing interest in alternatives to incarceration because of the cost of prison construction. The average cost of building a new prison cell in a medium security prison has increased to $72,000, and the average cost per inmate in state prisons is $31.63 per day or $11,500 per year.

By contrast, the cost per person on intensive probation or parole is $7.13 per day or $2,602 per year, and the cost for a person on traditional probation or parole is $1.25 per day or $456 per year.

The center says that only seven states, including North Carolina, send misdemeanants to the state prison system rather than local jails. Currently, 19 percent — or one in five prison inmates in the state prison system — were convicted of misdemeanors.

Last year, the N.C. Parole Commission released a record 11,312 inmates from state prisons and local jails. The 1987 emergency cap legislation provides the Parole Commission with the latest of ways to expand its flexibility in whom to parole, the center says, but it is driven by pressure to respond to severe overcrowding.

The center says three steps would help the parole system broaden its mission:

- to seek national accreditation in order to identify weaknesses according to national standards.
- to allow the parole process to review the inmate population according to the nature of the crime and risk to society.
- to require the parole system to incorporate existing community-based resources to assist parolees in moving back into society.

Bisons May Roam Smokies

TOWNSEND, Tenn. (AP) — The busiest area of Great Smoky Mountains National Park, America's most-visited national park, would once again have roaming buffalo under a recommendation made by the National Park Service.

But local park officials aren't thrilled with the proposal, which is aimed at curbing the growing deer population at Cades Cove, because they say it could compromise the safety of visitors.

"Re-introduction of bison ... hasn't been allowed because of danger to the public," said Stephanie Gibert, a spokeswoman for the park along the Tennessee-North Carolina line.

"With all the deaths people attribute to grizzly bears in Yellowstone, the majority of people killed (by wild animals) are killed by bison," she said.

Cades Cove, which includes a log cabin display depicting life in the area from the late 19th century to early 20th century, has had a problem with the deer population, which grew from about 600 head in 1980 to 700 in 1982, says the park service study that makes the bison recommendation.

The proposal says the buffalo would compete with the deer for food and, thus, gradually reduce the number of deer.

"The tremendous popularity (with tourists) might also be enhanced," the study says. "The historic preservation period of Cades Cove would be broadened to reflect a time when bison and/or elk were included in the scene."

But Stuart Coleman, another park spokesman, said he does not believe the buffalo would fit into the log cabin era which Cades Cove was set up to display.

Although bison once roamed the area, their presence was from an earlier era than that of the log cabin display, Coleman said.

IMPROVING YOUR APPEARANCE

If you would like to improve the appearance of your teeth and smile, ask your dentist if he would recommend the laminate veneer technique to mask any chips, gaps, discolorations, and other imperfections in your teeth. Your smile can be an asset when your teeth and gums are healthy and shaped to show you off at your best. Imperfections in the shape and condition of teeth, however, can make you self-conscious as well as detract from your general appearance.

The laminate veneer technique involves repairing and reshaping damaged tooth surfaces and applying a thin shell of tooth-colored veneers through a chemical bonding process. This procedure is not as long-lasting as crowning a damaged tooth and may have to be redone after several years wear. However, it is also less expensive than more permanent restorations.

If you are bothered by imperfections in your teeth and would like to have them treated, call our office for an appointment.

Quality System

Dr. Richard Eakin, the new chancellor of East Carolina University, told the North Carolina General Assembly's Joint Appropriations Base Budget Committee on Education that "the reputation of state of North Carolina as the sponsor of an exemplary system of higher education is alive and well across the nation."

The new chancellor was meeting most of the legislators for the first time having assumed the chancellorship here following service at Bowling Green University in Ohio. He is in a position to give an informed view on how the University of North Carolina system is seen nationally.

Much of what he said bears repeating.

"We have much to be proud of as citizens of North Carolina. I am mindful of those in leadership positions who, over many years, have nurtured this fine system and who have assured that adequate state funding has been available to accomplish important teaching and research aims."

Eakin cited innovative thinking by the universities and the state government as the keys to success.

"As a result of their progressive thinking and positive action, we have been able to equip generation after generation of residents with the knowledge, understandings and skills necessary for a prosperous economy and vital society."

He said the university has been able to attract quality students.

"One of the most important attributes of a successful state system of higher education is its ability to foster access to qualified students, with minimal constraints based upon the student's economic standing," he said. "That attribute is fully present in North Carolina."

Many of North Carolina's universities have been cited for their achievements in higher education. Some have been signaled out as exceptional institutions at which to pursue a college education.

Chancellor Eakin has seen North Carolina's university system from outside our state. It is obvious he feels much has been accomplished here and perhaps that is one reason he chose to become a part of it. No doubt his views were enlightening to the legislators.

Fruitful Meetings

The City Council's meeting with legislators who represent the county may lead to something good.

Members of the council journeyed to Raleigh last week for a session with Rep. Ed Warren, Rep. Walter Jones, Jr. of Farmville and Sen. Bob Martin of Bethel.

The council members discussed a variety of issues which might affect Greenville including the 3 percent motel and occupancy tax which will be used to promote travel, tourism and conventions. The occupancy tax was approved by the county commissioners this week.

Also discussed was the repeal of portions of the Law Enforcement Officers Bill, retirement benefits for firemen, annexation, transportation issues, a manufactured housing bill and a clean water detergent act.

"It's always to our benefit to know the thinking of the leaders of Greenville and the county," Rep. Walter B. Jones Jr., D-Pitt, told council members. "I can assure you that we will think carefully when we deliberate on these matters."

We hope, of course, that the council was able to present a unified opinion to the legislators as its members discussed the issues. In order to know what the council desires our legislative representatives need to have a consensus from the City Council of what it wants.

That will require careful discussion of issues prior to the legislative meetings by the council members with a clear statement of the council's intent. Such was the case with the motel and hotel room occupancy tax.

The legislative-council meetings seem to be a good idea and with careful preparation prior to such meetings they can be made productive.

WASHINGTON — Although the infant body of President Reagan's cherished Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI) has not yet chilled in its crib, hard-core congressional supporters dimly discern an epitaph that would cheer Mikhail Gorbachev: died for lack of care and feeding.

Typical is the disregard for a report to Congress on how the administration might proceed with SDI deployment within the next five to 10 years. The report was due on Capitol Hill March 15, ordered by Congress in Section 215 of last year's Defense Authorization bill at the instigation of pro-SDI Republican Sen. Dan Quayle. It is now two weeks late and, one administration official told us privately, "was farmed out to a Rosslyn think-tank that didn't know how to handle it."

That seems about par for the course despite Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger's special commitment to SDI. In the White House, the great harmonizer, new White House chief of staff Howard Baker, joins Secretary of State George Shultz in withholding support for the infant SDI even though it is President Reagan's favorite offspring.

Reagan is quietly warned that if he takes the gloves off for SDI, he risks a killing counter-offensive by Capitol Hill Democrats who disparage it as Star Wars. The eyes of Baker and Shultz are on Gorbachev's proffers of new arms agreements, not saving SDI. They throw out tantalizing hints of surging political health for

'Reagan is told that if he approves space testing of "exotic" defense components by adopting a broad interpretation of the Anti-Ballistic Missile (AMB) Treaty, an enraged Congress will take revenge by savaging SDI appropriations and crippling SDI.'

Reagan's last months, topped with arms agreements and a summit spectacular that will excise the horrors of the Iran-contra scandal.

These are the telltale signs as to why the president has all but accepted a Catch-22 for his cherished SDI, even though he may not fully appreciate how the catch works.

During the president's lunch last week with his old regional political directors, Roger Stone made a powerful appeal for the hard pursuit of several Reaganite issues — "and particularly SDI deployment" — even if that would mean political confrontation. The president was looking Stone squarely in the eye, one of those present told us, but made no answer to signify assent or in any way reveal his inner feelings.

SDI's Catch-22, as purveyed to the president, traps him in a Hampton Court maze. Reagan is told that if he approves space testing of "exotic" defense components by adopting a broad interpretation of the Anti-Ballistic Missile (ABM) Treaty, an enraged Congress will take revenge by savaging SDI appropriations and crippling SDI. But to keep SDI alive, testing and early deployment are essential, Reagan is told.

With SDI getting smothered either way, a counter-attack by supporters is beginning to get underway but with no strong smell of success. Sen. Robert Dole, the Senate Republican leader and soon-to-be-announced presidential candidate, joined Quayle and Sens. Malcolm Wallop and Pete Wilson in a strong letter to Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger demanding action. They termed the deployment report "of the utmost importance" and said every day's delay will make congressional support for new SDI funding "more difficult."

But to Baker and Shultz, the important work of the administration these days is not SDI but Gorbachev. Baker is quietly pushing the line that the battle over how to interpret the ABM treaty and whether to plan SDI space testing should wait until after the Soviet visit of Shultz. He is due in Moscow in two weeks to confer with Gorbachev and the Soviet leadership on a new treaty eliminating Euro-missiles.

But Shultz is also quietly planning far-reaching talks in Moscow on reductions of offensive strategic missiles to ceilings established by "sub-limits" the Soviets have always resisted. Thus, while Baker warns the president about a Capitol Hill counterattack if he does what he wants to do on SDI, Shultz warns him that an SDI testing decision might anger Gorbachev. That could abort the Euro-missile treaty and the follow-on agreement on offensive strategic weapons, sending the U.S. home from Moscow empty-handed — just as it came home from Reykjavik.

Wallop, the conservative Republican, spoke for the small hard-core cadre of pro-SDI Reaganites last week when he said that SDI had been "hijacked by the Reagan administration's incompetent and unfaithful crew."

Such Republicans as Wallop, and the occasional Democrat like Sen. Fritz Hollings, speak more for Reagan's past than his future. Lacking any enthusiastic support from the administration's highest political cadres downtown, they are likely to fall short of finding any fail-safe strategy that would give SDI the momentum it needs to assure survival after Reagan.

"Hijacked" or withering away in its crib, that may doom the president's most favored offspring.

Tobacco Road Meets Super Collider

RALEIGH — For generations, the most famous element of North Carolina's infrastructure was "Tobacco Road." But in recent years, as Research Triangle Park and University Park developed, North Carolina has developed a reputation for its high-powered research infrastructure.

The state has several projects in the works which, if they come to fruition, will tremendously expand the state research infrastructure. Unfortunately, it will be the federal government which, to a large extent, decides if the state is to have that success.

Gov. Jim Martin is currently pursuing four major federal scientific research projects. All would be expected to contribute tremendously to the state's economic development.

The most famous is the $6 billion

'The day when infrastructure meant only roads and sewers is long gone.'

federal Superconducting Super Collider, a high energy physics facility which Martin says the feds should build in Person and Granville counties.

Martin is also seeking three National Science Foundation grants that would establish engineering research centers at North Carolina universities. One would focus on textile research, another on bio-medical research and the third on advanced electronic materials research.

The supercollider is a longshot at best. A number of states are competing for it, and even if North Carolina has the best proposal, national politics are sure to play a major roll. The three NSF grants, however, are considered to stand a more reasonable chance.

"We stand a good chance of getting one or two of those," Martin said in an interview. But the one which North Carolina thought it would get, the textiles center to be located at N.C. State University, has apparently hit a snag in Washington. NSF officials are said to feel it would not fit the research specifications they prefer. More likely to be funded, said Martin's science adviser, Earle MacCormac, is a bio-medical engineering center at Duke University. If NSF funds five or six centers, he said, it would appear that the electronic materials center would also stand a very good chance.

MacCormac explained that the engineering centers, others of which are scattered across the country, bring universities and industry together in collaborative efforts. University researchers tend to take a wide view of scientific research while industry tends to focus its research on particular end products. Both approaches are needed, but so is collaboration, if new uses for science are to be found. These centers would provide that.

The economic ramifications are obvious. The textiles center, for example, would research new fabrics and new technologies that could keep American apparel and textile manufacturers competitive with foreign concerns. The bio-medical center would help develop new technologies for health care, and thus new products.

The day when infrastructure meant only roads and sewers is long gone.

Strength For Today

A clock is of no value unless we keep it set to the correct time. Likewise, the human conscience has to be checked with considerable regularity in order to assure that it is ticking in accordance with the moral standards of Almighty God.

There are certain aids to this process of correction. A thoughtful reading of the Bible ought to reveal whether our lives are deviating from God's plans for us.

We should never forget that conscience stands in continual need of correction. We can never be sure we are right about anything until we take pains to find out what are God's standards of right and wrong. Just as we are often surprised to find that our clocks and watches are out of time, so we will be equally surprised when we take the trouble to compare our conscience with God's eternal standards of right and wrong.

Public Forum

To the editor:

In response to your editorial on the growth of the Pitt-Greenville Airport, there are several facets that need to be explored. First, the runways need to be extended to 8,000 feet to allow the larger planes to land. It is true that there is a regional airport in Kinston; however, with the recent studies showing population growth, Greenville is expected to grow considerably while Kinston's population is not expected to grow much. The need to have the regional airport in Greenville will increase. Also, with the increase in boardings and the addition of a second airline, there will be a need in the near future for larger planes to land at the airport.

Secondly, in order to extend the runways, it might be necessary to relocate the terminal. This should be done before any expansion to the current terminal is started. Another possibility is to move the airport. Since the current airport is surrounded by the city and might limit its growth, it would be in Greenville's best interest to move the airport. This would allow the airport to expand as necessary without infringing on the development of the medical district.

The airport is essential to the growth of Greenville. It should not be taken lightly by the city council or the county commissioners. I urge them to plan for the growth of our airport as they have for the medical district.

Evangelical Movement's Strength Is Not In Personalities

For well over a decade Jim and Tammy Bakker have exhibited their spiritual and moral vulnerabilities with embarrassing and often histrionic candor on prime-time television.

For many, even within evangelicalism, such exhibitions have tested the limits of plausibility. For others they have been a mark of sainthood. Yet, whether saints or charlatans, the Bakkers' public credibility has been perhaps permanently undermined as a consequence of recent exposes.

Many liberals are gloating. For those whose image of evangelical Protestant preachers has never gone beyond Sinclair Lewis' "Elmer Gantry," Christmas has come early. The facade of hyper-piety has been at long last stripped away, exposing the self-aggrandizing and opportunistic nature of these leaders and their ministries. Pleased to see their critical assumptions about "these people" verified, many observers now fully expect widespread disillusionment to set in: Television ratings will plummet, phoned-in prayer requests will dwindle, contributions will dry up and the banks that hold the mortgages for the Heritage U.S.A. theme park will be talking foreclosure. Many hold an even grander view of apocalypse: The Bakker scandal, they say, may even signal the downfall of the broader evangelical movement.

They are wrong. Although many evangelicals hold strong affection for and loyalty to particular preachers, it is not these bonds that define the movement. These personalities may provide a rallying point, a celebrity to identify with, but their appeal lies in the values that they proclaim and the way of life that they promote. It is these values and this way of life that provide the cohesion and vitality for the movement.

Evangelicals, in all their diversity, are simply people who strive to maintain a biblical theism as the core of their individual and collective lives. Although enculturated in various ways and to varying degrees, this theism nevertheless has generated — and is buttressed by — a vast network of social institutions: churches, Sunday schools, small group fellowships and Bible studies, independent Christian schools (up to 18,000 of them), Bible colleges, liberal-arts colleges and seminaries (more than 500 in all), magazines and newspapers (more than 400), a major publishing industry (with up to 80 publishing houses accounting for a $1 billion a year book business), a gospel music industry, radio stations and television programs and networks.

The evangelical television ministry is certainly a visible tiller of this subculture, but it is anything but central.

Analysis

The strength of the movement, then, is found not in its leadership but in a particular vision of reality and the expansive set of institutions that sustain the vision. Even before his own flirtation with conservative Protestantism, Bob Dylan talked of "road maps for the soul." The "maps" that evangelicalism offers provide clear moral coordinates by which well over 40 million Americans navigate their lives.

Another reason to suppose that the Bakkers' problems will have little effect on the broader phenomena is that they are not the first to suffer public disgrace. Robert Pearsall Smith, one of the popular leaders of Victorian perfectionism, had to be retired after stories of sexual scandal. More recently a similar fate befell Billy James Hargis of the anti-communist crusade. Anita Bryant's divorce prompted her disappearance from moral advocacy as well. Other cases could be mentioned, but none of these scandals ever substantially undermined the vitality of the larger movement.

That is not to suggest that evangelicals hold an extraordinary tolerance for public hypocrisy. The vast majority simply interpret these events as proof that even these leaders are vulnerable to the weakness in us all. All the same, evangelicals could learn a lesson from their Roman Catholic counterparts on this point. Catholics have the good sense to wait until people are long dead before elevating them to sainthood.

James Davison Hunter is an assistant professor of sociology at the University of Virginia and the author of "Evangelicalism: The Coming Generation" (University of Chicago Press).

No Impact

LOS ANGELES (AP) — They came by the thousands, despite television, despite Saturday night dates, despite the sex scandal rattling the Assemblies of God. They came to hear the Rev. Jimmy Swaggart preach the Gospel.

And Swaggart is one TV evangelist who doesn't believe in going easy on his flock.

"Men are sinners," thundered the preacher from Baton Rouge, La. The fabric of society is unraveling. Salvation is only for those who accept Jesus as their personal savior and live the Ten Commandments.

He also pleaded with them to double their contributions, saying he needed $7 million to continue the work of Jesus.

On Sunday, Swaggart lamented the fact that it's taken word of a minister's sexual indiscretion to get the press interested in the evangelical ministry.

"If the news media got as excited as it has this last two weeks, think what it's going to do when the trumpet sounds and every child of the living God gets up and leaves this world."

His message comes wrapped in rousing gospel music, delivered in an atmosphere of joyous good fellowship, and the faithful respond. Swaggart's Los Angeles Crusade this weekend packed the Los Angeles Sports Arena: 12,000 on Friday, 16,000 on Saturday and 14,000 Sunday.

"It's exciting. It's love," said Dianne Finneran, explaining why religion for her is a full-time state of mind instead of a weekly duty.

"When you open your heart to Jesus everything changes," said Ms. Finneran, 37, a city water department employee who attends Christ Chapel in Walnut Valley. "I've been down in the pits, and he's changed my life so dramatically."

IN THE STATE

Cuts Averted

CHARLOTTE (AP) — The director of North Carolina's Willie M. program says an emergency bill passed by the Legislature last week "staved off the wolf at the door" by averting a budget shortfall.

"They (lawmakers) saw a need for these services," said Mike Pedneau, director of the program for 1,109 emotionally disturbed and potentially violent children in 30 North Carolina counties. Pedneau said a shortfall would have caused reductions in funding for group homes, out-patient treatment and educational programs.

"At this point, there have been no program cuts that had not been planned," he said. "For the balance of this (fiscal) year we're in pretty good shape."

The bill approved last week allowed Willie M. officials to use about $1.3 million that was left over from the 1985-86 fiscal year. That money had reverted to the general fund.

Bakker Probe

CHARLOTTE (AP) — District officials of the Assemblies of God say they are not sure they will be able to begin their investigation this week of the sexual encounter and payments that led to Jim Bakker's resignation from the denomination and his PTL ministry.

Members of the Assemblies of God's 16-member state governing board said Sunday that church officials tried to schedule a meeting for Tuesday, but some board members could not attend.

"We need them all together when you have something like this," said board member Fred Sorrells of Franklin.

North Carolina denomination officials said early last week they did not need to investigate because Bakker had acknowledged a 1980 encounter with a former church secretary.

But they were told Thursday by national church officials to investigate.

Students-Teaching

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — More college students appear to be interested in entering the teaching profession now than in 1982, and that increase is also reflected in the number of education students in North Carolina colleges and universities.

A survey last year by the University of California at Los Angeles and the American Council on Education showed that 7.3 percent of the entering freshmen were interested in elementary or secondary teaching careers. This compares with 6.2 percent in 1985 and 4.7 percent, the low, in 1982.

In North Carolina, salaries for teachers have been raised 30 percent in three years. And the state's Basic Education Plan, which calls for smaller classes and more teachers in certain fields, is creating a need for possible thousands more teachers.

Boost For Hawke

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Mecklenburg County Republicans have elected a group of state convention delegates loyal to party chairman Jack Hawke, further bolstering his bid to hold off conservative Barry McCarty at the state GOP convention in May.

Hawke, Gov. Jim Martin's hand-picked choice, is trying to fend off a challenge from McCarty, who is supported by the National Congressional Club and its executive director, Carter Wrenn. Party officials estimated that at least 75 percent of the 578 Mecklenburg delegates support Hawke.

"It was a clear victory for the Hawke people," state Sen. Larry Cobb, R-Mecklenburg, said after Saturday's county convention in Charlotte. "It's a clear victory for Jim Martin is what it is. Not the Hawke people or the McCarty people. It's Jim Martin versus Carter Wrenn."

Wait Continues

CULLOWHEE, N.C. (AP) — Law enforcement officers today continued to surround a rented house where a man has resisted tear gas assaults and pleas from friends and relatives to surrender for five days.

"It's very tiring, very wearing on everyone's nerves," Jackson County Sheriff's Department dispatcher Sgt. L. Lampros said Sunday. "I think right now, it's just a wait-and-see situation."

The man has been inside the house since Thursday, when several lawmen, including Jackson County Deputy Sheriff David Eugene Hall, went to serve papers to involuntarily commit William G. Moss to a state mental hospital.

Steve Fisher, a student at Western Carolina University and a witness to the incident, said Moss apparently barricaded himself inside the house and refused to come out when the officers arrived. Officers broke out a window in the front door of the house and tossed a tear gas grenade inside. When they did, shooting began and Hall was hit.

Martin Uses Lobbyist, Mailings To Solicit School Bond Support

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin has hired a private lobbyist to help push his plan to borrow $1.5 billion for public school construction and has mailed 1,400 information packets to people who serve on state boards and task forces.

Lawyer Sam Johnson, ranked the most influential lobbyist during the 1985 session, has billed the state $3,200 for services in January and February, the Greensboro News & Record reported in today's editions. His bills indicate he has written off a third of what he's due to public service.

The newspaper said at the current rate, Johnson's total bill for the legislative session would be about $14,000.

The information packets, which ask people to fill out lobbying questionnaires, cost $1,694 to prepare and mail.

"The mailing is part of an overall effort that is educational in thrust," said Tim Pittman, Martin's press secretary.

"It is a proper use (of taxpayer money)," he said. "The benefits to the state are immeasurable. The need is very great and the idea of lobbying is as old as government."

Pittman termed the issue "nonpartisan" and said Martin sees his program as "good government."

The packet includes a letter from the governor and several pages describing the school-bond program. It also asks people receiving the packet for a list of names of legislators they can contact, how well they know them and what they'll do in seeking help to get others to contact legislators.

"I sincerely hope you will find it possible to support my proposals and that you will voice that support to members of our General Assembly," Martin said in the letter.

Legislators disagreed with the administration on whether the mailing was a nonpartisan use of tax funds.

"It's certainly questionable whether it's within keeping of what taxpayer money should be spent for," said Sen. Bob Warren, D-Johnston, who chairs the Education Committee. "It's good politics."

House Speaker Liston Ramsey, D-Madison, was blunt.

"Mailing out things of that type at taxpayer expense is wrong," Ramsey said. "He certainly has a right to do it, but not at taxpayer expense."

He was quick to contrast the cost of that single mailing, $1,022, with the annual postage allowance for a legislator — $185 this year.

Johnson, the lobbyist hired to help move the plan through the General Assembly, said he isn't very familiar with the mailing.

"I'm not tuned in on that end of it," he said.

His work so far, he said, is researching the legal end of the bond issue, surveying local school needs throughout the state and studying practical ways of financing the projects.

Warren termed the Martin letter and information packet "image building" to help improve Martin's standing on education in the eyes of voters, as the 1988 re-election campaign nears.

Martin's March 13 letter says, "You will find that education — the improvement of our public schools — is my first and foremost priority."

"Our legislators will be asked to keep faith with the young people of North Carolina by ratifying my proposals to provide them with a quality education," he said.

The reference to "my proposals" particularly raises the ire of legislators such as Warren, who recall Martin's opposition two years ago to the Basic Education Plan. They say his new budget does little more than endorse those programs already started by the Democratic legislature.

"You name me one that was new," said Warren, a retired educator, of the education proposals in Martin's budget for fiscal years 1987-1988 and 1988-1989. "It's just a little different twist on things already in the hopper."

Judges Back 'Truth In Sentencing'

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — The Governor's Crime Commission has drafted legislation that it says would put "truth in sentencing" back in the state's courtrooms, and judges say they are ready for it.

Mecklenburg County Superior Court Judge Frank Snapp says the present sentencing system, which allows criminals to serve 30 to 40 percent of the sentences they receive, is unfair to victims of crime.

"The judge is lying," Snapp said at the N.C. Conference of Superior Court Judges. "And the defendant knows you're lying. The only one who thinks you're telling the truth is the poor victim."

"I don't like it. None of the judges like it," he said.

Under the present system, a killer sentenced to life imprisonment, for example, might get out in 20 years. A three-year sentence for breaking and entering can mean a little more than one year, while an armed robber sentenced to 12 years in prison can get out in five.

In April 1985, superior court judges adopted a resolution urging legislators to make sentencing more understandable.

The Governor's Crime Commission says its proposed legislation, which has not yet been introduced, would ensure public safety, improve integrity in sentencing and hold offenders accountable both in prison and in the community.

The proposed legislation would do away with "good time" — credits prisoners get for good behavior — and would authorize prison officials to take away credits prisoners get for working if they misbehave.

It would also require court-ordered minimum parole of 18 months for all criminals sentenced to terms of 36 months or more.

Prisoners also get "gain time" — anywhere from two days to six days off their sentence each month for working. They also can earn up to 30 days a month for performing emergency or meritorious service, such as working in bad weather or giving first aid.

The N.C. Parole Commission also has the authority to release some criminals who have served only one-fourth of their sentences. And the state correction secretary has the power to release criminals early to relieve overcrowded prison conditions.

North Carolina's Fair Sentencing Act, enacted in 1981, was designed in part to provide greater certainty in sentencing. Judges must give standard sentences or give reasons for imposing harsher or more lenient punishment.

But the Governor's Crime Commission has concluded that there has been "an erosion of confidence" in the act.

Criminals sentenced to nine years or more now only serve about 40 percent of their prison terms, according to the commission. Those sentenced to fewer than nine years are serving as little as 30 percent of their sentences.

"Judges and district attorneys are not content with these reductions in courtroom sentences," the commission's report says, "and appear to be choosing longer sentences in order to ensure an appropriate amount of punishment for offenders."

Cigarette Market Woes Lead To Diversification

GREENSBORO (AP) — Tobacco dealers are turning to flowers, coffee and insurance in the face of a world cigarette market growing just 1 to 2 percent a year, heightened competition and declining profit margins, officials say.

Observers say that decline has been behind some diversification by dealers to new and less controversial areas of growth.

Universal Leaf Tobacco Co., the world's biggest seller, bought a title insurance company in its home town of Richmond, Va. Standard Commercial Tobacco Co., based in Wilson, has made a big push into the global marketing of wool.

Last week, Dibrell Brothers of Danville, Va., which vies with Standard for the No. 2 ranking, announced a move that will give it control of one of the world's biggest cut flower importers and exporters, Florimex Verwaltungsgesellschaft mbH in Germany.

"We're looking for expansion, which could include additional acquisitions," Dibrell chairman Richard B. Bridgforth Jr., told the Greensboro News and Record.

Diversification isn't new. Dibrell, for example, in the mid-60s bought and still owns a company that produces home ice cream makers and wood salad bowls. Dibrell also bought a lamp company in the late 1960s but sold the unit a decade later after concluding it did not match the company's expertise.

Universal, meanwhile, bought a fertilizer maker in 1980. But Universal sold the line following an industrial decline in fertilizer sales.

Universal acquired Lawyers Title Insurance Corp., the nation's No. 3 title insurer in 1984, for $115 million cash. David E. Boshier, an analyst with Davenport & Co. of Virginia in Richmond, says he wouldn't be surprised to see Universal expand more into financial services.

But much of the dealers' diversification has been into areas that complement their main leaf business. The dealers are buying into businesses that they understand — what they know, namely other consumer product makers.

Last spring, for example, Universal bought a Dutch company that distributes such commodities as coffee, sunflower seeds, rubber and tobacco. That business complements Universal's existing tobacco import-export operations.

Dibrell and Standard also have stuck to lines with clear parallels. The functions for buying, processing and selling tobacco, wool and flowers are strikingly similar. Traders must know how to deal in multiple international markets. Success requires careful buying and strong service.

At Standard, the move from international tobacco trading to international wool trading proved to be a natural progression, said president Marvin W. Coghill. Like tobacco, wool trading involves areas of Standard expertise — agriculture markets, international trade and foreign currencies.

Standard has explored diversification into coffee, tea and lumber before it stumbled into the wool market, Coghill said, by buying a West German firm two years ago for $900,000. The small company was undergoing financial difficulties unrelated to wool, but it had strong sources for wool in western Australia and South Africa.

After a flurry of friendly takeovers of wool trading companies in Germany, Australia and England, Standard transformed a company with 77 years experience in tobacco trading to one that has a strong worldwide presence in wool processing and distribution. Between March 1985 and December 1986, the company spent almost $26 million on acquisitions.

Wool revenues now account for about 38 percent of company revenues, which totaled $520.7 million with profits of $11.9 million in Standard's last financial year.

Dibrell buys and sells tobacco for cigarettes, pipes and chewing tobacco in 18 nations. Its top source of tobacco remains the U.S., through Brazil follows close behind. The company also buys from such producers such as South Korea, Zimbabwe and Italy. A large majority of its volume comes from foreign tobacco sold to U.S. cigarette makers and foreign companies, Bridgforth said.

Dibrell has agreed to buy a major stake in Florimex for an undisclosed amount from the founder's son, who is staying on as managing director and minority owner. The deal will close July 1.

Newman-Loftin Vows Said

AYDEN — Janet Susan Loftin and Dr. Walter Joseph Newman were united in marriage Sunday at 3 p.m. in a candlelight ceremony in the Liberty Free Will Baptist Church. The Rev. Raymond A. Gaskins performed the double ring ceremony.

Wedding music was presented by organist Sue Branch, guitarist and vocalist Rob Oehrli, and vocalists Glenn Gaylor and Kathleen Jackson.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Loftin of Ayden. The bridegroom is the son of Peggy Newman and the late Dr. Glenn Newman.

Escorted by her father and given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore a formal gown of white crystal organza over peau de soie designed with an open off-shoulder neckline outlined in crystal fluted ruffles. The fitted bodice was overlaid in imported schiffli embroidered lace beaded with pearls and sequins. Matching lace encircled the basque waistline of the gown. The full circular skirt and attached cathedral length train were accented by cascading tiers of fluted crystal organza ruffles. Appliques of the schiffli embroidered lace beaded with sequins accented the skirt front and train. She selected a double tier of illusion veil with pencil edging held in place by a Camelot cap overlaid in schiffli embroidered lace beaded with pearls. She carried a formal cascading bouquet of phalaenopsis orchids, stephanotis and white sweetheart roses.

Patsy Hagan of Ayden, the bride's sister, was matron of honor and wore a formal gown of peach satin designed with an open sweetheart neckline and off-shoulder short sleeves. Fluted ruffles of satin accented the sleeves and shoulders. A gathered peplum of satin encircled the basque waistline, from which fell the full circular skirt. She carried a cascade bouquet of tropicana roses tied with satin ribbon.

Bridesmaids were Susan Loftin of Ayden, sister-in-law of the bride; Dee

Ann Frazier of Raleigh, and Cindy McNeill, Bonnie Lee and Cindy Haddock, all of Greenville. Their dresses and bouquets were identical to those of the honor attendant.

Junior bridesmaids were Ginger Newman, daughter of the bridegroom, and Jessica Loftin, niece of the bride. They wore formal gowns similar to the bridesmaids' and carried a single tropicana rose with satin ribbons.

Flower girls were Camille Newman, daughter of the bridegroom, and Sommer Hagan, niece of the bride. They wore white formal gowns and carried baskets of white lace with peach and white flowers accented with silk ribbons.

Dr. Glenn Newman of Durham, brother of the bridegroom, was best man. Ushers were Randy Loftin of Ayden, brother of the bride; Dr. Bill Newman of Raleigh, brother of the bridegroom, and Jim Woody and Ralph Ward, both of Greenville.

The mothers of the bride and the bridegroom wore formal gowns and phalaenopsis orchid corsages. Sallie Buck of Ayden, grandmother of the bride, also wore a formal gown and an orchid corsage.

The wedding was directed by Mamie Smith of Ayden.

A reception followed the ceremony at the Ayden Golf and Country Club. Cake was served by Bettye Phillips and punch was poured by Ginger Haddock. Jean Askew greeted guests and Mr. and Mrs. Alton Haddock said goodbyes. Entertainment was provided by Katie Raab on the violin and Otto Dykstra on the accordion.

The bride attended East Carolina University and Pitt Community College. She is a nurse clinician with the ECU School of Medicine division of hematology oncology. The bridegroom is a graduate of Duke University School of Medicine and practices medicine at Pitt Internal and Renal Medicine Associates.

The bride was honored with a bridesmaids luncheon at the Sheraton-Greenville given by Vera

MRS. NEWMAN

Claybrook and Lois Haddock. The bridegroom's mother entertained the wedding party at an after-rehearsal dinner at the Greenville Golf and Country Club.

Several showers, a lingerie party and a bachelorette party also were held.

The bride and bridegroom will reside in Greenville after a wedding trip.

Couple Marries In Rocky Mount Church

ROCKY MOUNT — The wedding of Pamela Jane Fisher of Greenville and Benedict R. Votipka of Fayetteville took place Saturday at 3 p.m. The Rev. Robert Ricks Boone Jr. conducted the double ring ceremony in the Arlington Street Baptist Church.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John T. Fisher III of Rocky Mount. She was employed by Dixon, Duffus and Doub, attorneys, Greenville, and will be a legal assistant with McLeod, Snter and Winnesette in Fayetteville. She is a graduate of East Carolina University and the National Center for Paralegal Training in Atlanta.

The bridegroom is a chief warrant officer 2 with the U.S. Army stationed at Fort Bragg and is the son of Mrs. Charles M. Votipka of Hebron, Neb. He is a graduate of Embry-Riddle Aeronautical Institute.

The bride, escorted by her father, wore a full length satin gown with a dropped waistline and a barones neckline. The bodice was trimmed with pearl and sequin appliques. She wore a cap which matched the bodice of the dress, to which was attached a waist length scalloped net. She carried a bouquet of yellow roses with baby's breath and greenery entwined with lace.

Matron of honor was Ginger Chenoweth of Greenville. She wore a teal colored tea length dress of moire taffeta and carried a bouquet of three yellow long-stemmed roses.

Bridesmaids were JoAnne Votipka and Rhonda Votipka, both of Lincoln, Neb., and Mary Jane Votipka of Beatrice, Neb., all sisters of the bridegroom, Farley Phillips of Pinetops, Brenda Rhodes of Greenville, and Lisa Votipka of Rosemont, Md., niece of the bridegroom. Each wore a dress like that of the honor attendant and carried a single long-stemmed yellow rose.

Honorary bridesmaid was Linda Zelesnick of Rocky Mount, aunt of the bride.

Flower girls were Kendria Navarro and Andrea Navarro, both nieces of the bridegroom from Columbia, S.C. They wore candlelight colored lace dresses designed with a dropped waistline and a satin sash and carried baskets of rose petals.

Mark Votipka of Denver, Col., brother of the bridegroom, was best man. Ushers were J.T. Fisher of Rocky Mount, brother of the bride, Jeff Retzlaff of Souix City, Iowa, Greg Bodtke of Lincoln, Neb., and Bob Lowe, Brian Mueller and Jon Morris, all of Fayetteville. The ring bearers were Eric Retzlaff of Gilead, Neb., and Charles Votipka of Alexandria, Neb., both nephews of the bridegroom.

Organist James Pender provided nuptial music, and guitarist for the ceremony was Ginger Gay, cousin of the bride. Vocalist was June Carlisle, cousin of the bride. The wedding was directed by Mrs. Norman Gay of Whitakers, aunt of the bride.

A reception given by the bride's parents was held in the church fellowship hall following the ceremony. Punch was poured by Kim Tugwell of New Bern and cake was served by Marlene Sanders of Raleigh. The register was attended by Linda Zelesnick of Rocky Mount. Rice bags were distributed by Brenda Rhoades, Ginger Rhoades and Alana Rhoades, all of Greenville. Goodbyes were said by Mr. and Mrs. Albert Boone and Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Fisher, all of Rocky Mount.

A bridesmaids brunch was hosted by Ginger Chenoweth and Mrs. Frazier Woolard at the Cameilla Room of the Sheraton Hotel in Rocky Mount. An after-rehearsal dinner was given by the bride's parents at Gardner's Restaurant in Rocky Mount. Several showers and parties were given in honor of the couple.

After a wedding trip to Florida, the couple will live in Fayetteville.

Pamela Gay Elks Weds Sunday

GRIMESLAND — Proctor Memorial Christian Church was the setting for the wedding ceremony of Pamela Gay Elks and Marc Allen Milnes Sunday at 2:30 p.m. The Rev. Edgar Dunn conducted the double ring ceremony.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tommy Elks of Route 1, Grimesland, the bride was given in marriage by her father. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Karl Wayne Milnes of Chocowinity. His father was best man.

The honor attendant was Sharon Moore of New Bern, sister of the bride. Micki Saad of Apex, sister of the bridegroom, was bridesmaid. Donna Tate of Belhaven was honorary attendant. Kelly Letchworth of Farmville, cousin of the bride, was flower girl.

Brandon Moore of New Bern, nephew of the bride, was ring bearer and ushers included Karl Milnes, brother of the bridegroom, and David Elks of Grimesland, brother of the bride.

The bride wore a gown of ivory silk organza over peau de soie. The Queen Anne neckline was fashioned of re-embroidered lace beaded with pearls and edged with an Austrian pleated ruffle. The long tapered sleeves were of re-embroidered lace and the empire bodice was accented with lace motifs and seed pearls. The A-line skirt was decorated with re-embroidered lace and Austrian pleated organza ruffles forming a scalloped pattern on the skirt and chapel train. She wore a headpiece of matching lace flowers forming a half-crown with sequin leaves and half-circles of pearls. The two tiered veil of illusion featured a satin edge and fell from a back pouf. She carried a bouquet of ivory roses with pearls and lace streamers.

The honor attendant selected a lilac tea length gown with crocheted lace which fell to a scalloped edged hemline. The gown had a blouson bodice, gathered waistline with a satin sash. She carried a bouquet of lavender daisies, pink carnations, ivory sweetheart roses with ivory and lavender ribbons.

The attendants were dressed like the honor attendant.

The flower girl wore a floor length gown of ivory satin accented with lace with an embroidered bodice with lilac ribbon bow. She carried a miniature bouquet like those of the other attendants.

The mother of the bride wore a mauve tea length gown of crystal pleats over taffeta with an overlay bodice. The mother of the bridegroom selected a reach tea length gown with a full skirt and long lace sleeves.

A reception was held after the ceremony in the church fellowship hall. Edna Mills served wedding cake and Jackie Williams poured punch. Goodbyes were said by Mr. and Mrs. Lester Elks.

An after-rehearsal party was given by the parents of the bridegroom in the church fellowship hall. The bride was honored with several miscellaneous floating showers.

The couple will live at Rt. 2, Grimesland after a wedding trip to the mountains of North Carolina and Tennessee.

The bride graduated from D.H. Conley High School and is employed at Pitt County Memorial Hospital. The bridegroom is a graduate of Chocowinity High school and is employed by Farrior and Sons in Greenville.

Grandmother Gets Vote

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am constantly amazed at some of the nitwits who write to you. I refer particularly to "Burned Up in Butte" whose son received a card for his 16th birthday with this handwritten message: "Sorry, Billy, no money this time because we received no thank-you for the money we sent last year. Lots of love, Grandma and Grandpa Jones." "Burned" complained: "Although these grandparents are retired and living on a fixed income, they are far from poor, and it wouldn't have hurt them to have enclosed a $10 bill."

Abby, instead of taking offense, "Burned" should have boxed Billy's ears all the way to the desk and forced him to write his grandparents a long letter of apology.

You asked your readers how they felt about Grandma's message to Billy. How did they feel? — MRS. GLENN R.

DEAR MRS. R.: "Burned" lost to Grandma in a landslide. Some typical letters:

DEAR ABBY: I'd like to nominate Grandma Jones for Grandmother of the Year. I wish I had the guts years ago to do what she did. I have seven grandchildren whom I've outfitted lavishly every Easter and Christmas. On their birthdays I have sent them all sizable checks and became so accustomed to not receiving any kind of thank-you, I would have fainted had one arrived. From now on, I'm going to follow Grandma Jones' lead. — ANOTHER GRANDMA, MOLINE, ILL.

DEAR ABBY: If children have no manners, whose fault is it? Their parents'. Listen to this: Every year, our 42-year-old daughter-in-law has acknowledged our carefully chosen Christmas gifts in the following manner: "Thank you for the lovely silver bowl for us; for the nice jacket and sweater for Jane (age 18); for the stereo for Dick (age 16). Love, Betty." Period. The least she could have done was to have added: "We are fine. How are you? Dick and Jane broke their right arms so they are unable to write." — ANONYMOUS IN ROSWELL, N.M.

any other grandma? — BEWILDERED GRANDMA

DEAR ABBY: Can you top this for ingratitude? After her birthday last year, our 23-year-old niece phoned us from Los Angeles — not to thank us for our card with money enclosed, but to complain because it wasn't enough! — PHLABBERGASTED IN PHOENIX

DEAR ABBY: About gifts and no thank-yous: For years I have sent generous birthday checks to my granddaughter — increasing the amount every year, even though I had to wait until I received the canceled check to be sure she received it.

On her 21st birthday, I figured she was old enough to acknowledge my gifts, so I enclosed a little note with my check, saying, "How about a simple thank-you so I'll know this arrived?"

Do you know what she did? She sent back the check — torn in half. I wonder if this has ever happened to only consideration, I would not have drawn the conclusion that I reached." He did not elaborate.

Sella said his decision was "personal and independent" and came despite numerous requests "from the general public and even American citizens who have expressed support and identification with me and have urged me to continue in my job."

According to Israeli newspapers, Sella was a top pilot and computer expert who won the Air Force Prize, one of its highest awards, for a program that jams enemy radar during combat. Colleagues described him as one of two or three candidates for air force commander.

Sella has faced little criticism in Israel for his role in the Pollard case, and his resignation drew wide praise.

"I expected it. He did what he had to do," Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, of the right-wing Likud bloc, said on Israeli radio. He declined to speculate when asked if others would resign.

Yossi Sarid, a left-wing member of Parliament, praised Sella's decision and called on Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin and other politicians allegedly involved to resign as well.

"I respect a person who decides on his own," said Foreign Minister Shimon Peres, head of the left-leaning Labor Party.

The government said in November 1985 when Pollard was arrested that his hiring was done by low-level officials and had not been authorized by the government. But in a presenting statement, Pollard claimed his activities were known by senior Israelis.

A government-appointed panel and a parliament subcommittee are investigating the affair.

"(Sella's resignation) is without doubt a positive step," said Abba Eban, who heads the parliament probe.

In London, meanwhile, The Sunday Times reported that U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger acknowledged in a secret affidavit submitted during Pollard's trial that the United States spies against Israel.

Weinberger has publically denied allegations that Washington carries out espionage against the Jewish state. The Jerusalem Post last week said Israel recruited Pollard in retaliation for alleged CIA spying on Israel from 1982 to 1984.

foot of snow Sunday in western Iowa as winds up to 45 mph piled drifts as deep as 8 feet around the town of Carroll.

Wisconsin and Upper Michigan, which got more than a foot of snow on Sunday, also had blowing snow. However, temperatures rose to 70 degrees in southern Michigan.

Light snow fell in Texas, and a travelers' advisory for slippery roads was in effect today west of the Pecos River.

About 170 miles of Interstate 70 remained closed to all but local traffic eastbound from Watkins, 30 miles east of Denver, to the Kansas state line and to all traffic for 250 miles from the border to Salina, Kan., officials said.

The freeway, closed due to a lack of accommodations in western Kansas, was open to eastbound traffic from Salina and westbound traffic from Stratton, Colo., to Denver.

Kansas National Guard spokeswoman Maj. Joy Cole said 115 people remained stranded Sunday night at armories in Concordia, Hays and Russell, down from 202 earlier.

The Guard planned to use eight helicopters today to airlift hay to the first four of 18 western counties on the first day of the four-day operation, she said.

In Nebraska, Interstate 80 was reopened Sunday.

"The good news is, it's open again, both east- and west-bound lanes. But the bad news is, it's down to one lane in some places and it's very, very slick," said state Department of Roads spokesman Pete McShane.

Hundreds of travelers prepared to hit the road again after being stranded for the night in North Platte. The city's 1,200 motel rooms were filled, so 910 travelers were put up at the Holiday Inn's Holiday, the city recreation complex and a Red Cross Emergency Shelter at Adams Junior High School.

Syrian Offers Aid

Amal's chief, Nabih Berri, also denied the claims Arafat made in Baghdad, Iraq, during the weekend.

Berri told reporters today: "Arafat knows well the conditions of the kidnapers and he still wants to blame Amal for the abduction."

Arafat is Syrian President Hafez Assad's main Arab enemy. His guerrillas in Lebanon have been locked in a 22-month-old intermittent war with Amal.

Berri made his remarks after a 30-minute meeting with the wives of the four educators.

"I believe that the kidnapers are embarrassed and want to release the hostages," Berri said. He did not elaborate.

Elliott's Gamble Fails As Earnhardt Speeds Past Gasless Car In Final Lap

DARLINGTON, S.C. (AP) — Dale Earnhardt knew what would've been on his mind if he'd been in Bill Elliott's seatbelt — and that's what worried him.

Elliott ran out of gas with less than a lap to go, allowing Earnhardt, who took a calculated risk by pitting with 11 laps left for a last gulp of gas, to charge past him to win the TransSouth 500 on Sunday.

"When I was coming up on him I kept thinking what's going through my mind ... (has) got to be going through his mind — this guy's going to pass me and I can't do anything about it," Earnhardt said. "I was just wondering if 'Ole Bill's going to cut me off against the wall or something. I was ready to dodge one way or the other."

Earnhardt passed the coasting Elliott in the fourth turn of the final lap on the 1.366-mile Darlington International Raceway and crossed the finish line 1.23 seconds ahead to win his third race this season.

"How do I feel?" Elliott said. "It just ran out of gas. ... That's all there is to it. We had more to lose than we did to gain (by stopping for gas). With the way Earnhardt was running, that's the only way you could beat him. He was playing with us."

Earnhardt, of Kannapolis, N.C., led for 230 laps, the fourth consecutive race the defending Winston Cup champion has led the most laps. The two-time series champion averaged 122.540 mph and picked up first-place money of $52,985.

Earnhardt also now holds a 71-point lead over Elliott in the points race.

Earnhardt took the top spot 73 laps from the end of the 367-lap event and appeared to have things in hand until suddenly diving onto pit road on lap 356. The stop took him just 4.3 seconds and he managed to come back onto the track in third place, behind Elliott and Ken Schrader.

"The fuel gauge went down on the back straightaway, and I told them I've got to come in to get some gas now," he said.

But moments later Earnhardt almost lost his chance to win in turn two when he slammed into the wall with five laps left after passing Schrader and seeing Elliott hung up in traffic ahead.

"I said, 'Ole Dale, you've got him now.' In all my exuberance about catching 'Ole Bill, Dale forgot you got to go slow down on that corner, and I ran into the wall," he said. "Ole Dale said, 'You're a dumb.... Going down the back stretch I was talking to myself.'"

But the "sun came back out" when Bill ran out of gas, Earnhardt said. "I was smiling and grinning," he said.

Schrader also ran out of gas and was fifth, behind third-place Richard Petty, who started 24th, and Sterling Marlin, who began at the No. 16 spot on a windy and overcast afternoon.

Schrader started from the pole but didn't lead the first lap. Earnhardt, who started on the outside of the front row, took the lead from Schrader in the third turn of the first lap and immediately established his strength.

Buddy Baker pressured Earnhardt during the middle of the race and was in front on lap 249 when he slid sideways in turn four and backed into the wall. He was able to continue, but retired the car after several lengthy pit stops.

That was just one of several accidents that slowed the 500-mile race, the first test on the newly resurfaced track. The worst accident was a multi-car crash on lap 145.

Benny Parsons, who was running third behind Earnhardt and Baker, lost control heading into turn three and hit the wall. He bounced off into the path of Terry Labonte, who hit Parsons' car, then was hit broadside by Morgan Shepherd and struck again by Ricky Rudd. Lake Speed and Greg Sacks also were involved in the accidents. All six cars suffered considerable damage.

Sacks continued and Parsons returned after extensive repairs. Shepherd's car also returned later, with Rick Wilson driving.

Labonte was taken to McLeod Regional Medical Center at nearby Florence, where he was admitted with a broken shoulder blade. Labonte was to be held overnight for observation. Preliminary reports indicated he would be out of action for about six weeks.

No other injuries were reported in the race.

Rookie Davey Allison, who was sixth and moving up, spun and hit the wall in turn three on lap 216. He came down the track and collected the car of his father, Bobby. The fuel cell on the younger Allison's car was punctured and caught fire, but both drivers escaped injury.

In all, there were 10 caution periods for a total of 70 laps.

A crowd estimated at more than 50,000 was at NASCAR's oldest superspeedway.

Final results Sunday in the TransSouth 500 NAS-CAR stock car race, with type of car, laps completed, reason out, if any, money won and winner's average speed in mph:
1. Dale Earnhardt, Chevrolet Monte Carlo SS, 367, 52,985, 122.540.
2. Bill Elliott, Ford Thunderbird, 367, $31,465.

Indiana, Syracuse Battle

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Only one step remained to a national championship.

"We've earned what we got all year," senior guard Steve Alford of Indiana said. "The next goal is tomorrow night."

"We're not just content to be here," senior forward Howard Triche of Syracuse said. "If we win tomorrow, this will mean a lot more."

Third-ranked Indiana, 29-4, and 10th-ranked Syracuse, 31-6, meet tonight (8:12 p.m. EST) in the finale of the NCAA's college basketball tournament. Indiana will be trying for its fifth national title and third under Coach Bob Knight. Syracuse has never won the championship.

The two teams took a day off Sunday after winning their semifinal games on Saturday. Indiana defeated top-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas 97-93, and Syracuse beat Providence 77-63.

Those semifinal games saw the demise of the nation's top two 3-point shooting teams and set up a final between two more traditionally structured offenses.

Indiana is built around the guard play of Alford, the school's career scoring leader, while Syracuse has come to rely heavily on the front-court play of Rony Seikaly and Derrick Coleman.

"I often compare Steve with my all-time favorite sports idol, Ted Williams," Knight said. "They used to say Williams would stand in the outfield thinking about his next at-bat, but he became a pretty good outfielder. He played the wall at Fenway Park as well as anyone."

"Steve is a shooter, but he has progressed like that. I'm sure when he first came here, he would be playing defense thinking about his next shot. I don't think I've ever had a player who made more out of his talent."

Indiana has averaged 92.2 points a game in five tournament contests, with Alford averaging 23, one more than his regular season average. Alford had 33 points against Nevada-Las Vegas.

In its five tournament victories, Syracuse has averaged 85.2 points, with Seikaly, a 6-foot-10 junior center, averaging 25, 10 more than his season average.

"My expectations for him are much higher than anybody else's," Syracuse Coach Jim Boeheim said of Seikaly. "He can, and will, bring much more to the game than he has. No one ever disputed his athletic skills. It was his experience, which you can't teach."

Seikaly had never played organized basketball before coming to Syracuse from his home in Athens, Greece.

Boeheim, who said his club would have to play great defense to beat Indiana, watched the Hoosiers' victory over UNLV, then looked at the tapes.

"When Alford plays the way he did, I don't know if they are beatable," Boeheim said. "In the games in which I've seen him play well, they seem to beat anyone easily. ... You have to be aware of where he is, but you can't pay too much attention to him, because if you do they have two or three other players who can hurt you."

"Nobody sets screens better than Indiana, and Alford does a better job reading screens than anybody," Boeheim said. "He also put the ball on the floor better (against UNLV) than I had seen him."

Boeheim said he also was concerned with Indiana's big men, junior-college transfer Dean Garrett and Rick Calloway, point guard Keith Smart and the Hoosiers' bench, including forward Steve Eyl and guard Joe Hillman.

"Calloway, Garrett, Smart and those two guys off their bench did a lot for them," Boeheim said. "If you can get seven guys contributing, and you stay out of foul trouble, that's enough to win."

Boeheim said Indiana's quickness on defense probably would force Syracuse into a half-court game.

"We came into the season with three or four question marks," Boeheim said. "First, Rony was in a cast for 12 weeks (from a broken foot)."

"The second question was the leadership we would get from our two seniors (Triche and Greg Monroe). I believe it's been the best we've ever had, and it's the reason we're still playing."

"Third was the development of our younger players, Derrick, Stevie (Thompson) and Sherman Douglas. Sherman had always played well in practice, and I felt he would be good defensively, without a question. But he was a surprise to me and everyone else with his offensive production."

Douglas led Syracuse with an average of 17.3 points per game this season, including an 18-point average in Big East play. While he scored only 12 points against Providence, the 6-foot Douglas had 11 rebounds.

Knight called Boeheim's teams "difficult to play against."

The matchup of the 6-10 Garrett against Seikaly should be a key. Against Nevada-Las Vegas, Garrett drew the tough assignment of Armon Gilliam. Although Gilliam scored 32 points, Garrett forced him to move out of the middle and blocked one of his shots in a telling stretch early in the second half as Indiana held off the Runnin' Rebels.

"I think Syracuse is as good a team as there is in the country," Knight said. "What little I've seen of Syracuse, I think they're an awfully good basketball team. Jimmy Boeheim hasn't gotten a lot of the credit he deserves for the great job he's done."

Robinson Says He'll Play Pro

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — All-American David Robinson says the Navy has made "a commitment" to allow him to play professional basketball, and he doesn't think James Webb can rescind that decision when he takes office as Secretary of the Navy next month.

"They have made a contract with me and we have a commitment," Robinson said Sunday.

Webb reportedly is considering reversing the agreement reached by Secretary John Lehman Jr. and Robinson that would reduce the basketball player's obligation to the U.S. Naval Academy when he graduates in June and enable him to either play in the National Basketball Association or on the 1988 U.S. Olympic team.

Under the agreement, the 7-foot-1 Robinson would serve two years of active duty and four years of reserve duty, instead of the standard five years of active duty required by Navy graduates.

Robinson made the arrangement with Lehman after former Navy running back Napoleon McCallum was allowed to play last season for the Los Angeles Raiders of the National Football League while serving as a duty officer on a ship stationed off the southern California coast.

Webb's decision on Robinson also could affect McCallum's professional sports future.

"I don't know if he can rescind it or not," Robinson said.

A spokesman for the Department of the Navy also was unsure of the policy, according to the Washington Post.

Robinson, selected college basketball's Player of the Year, is expected to be the top choice in the NBA draft in June.

Lehman leaves office April 10, then confirmation hearings will start on President Reagan's nomination of Webb.

Bucs Sweep Two From Tribe

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. — William & Mary rocked East Carolina to sleep in the first game of a Sunday baseball doubleheader by losing 26-0, then came back and had the Pirates on the ropes in the second game before ECU pulled it out, 5-4, in eight innings.

The Indians, who were blasted on Saturday, 13-3, by the Pirates, went down with even less than a struggle in the opening game Sunday, but then suddenly rallied to make a game of it in the second.

Only a pair of runs with two out in the seventh allowed the Pirates to escape from what would have been their first Colonial Athletic Association loss kept them alive.

But the wins did keep the Pirates unbeaten in league play — the only team in the conference without a blemish on their CAA mark. ECU is now 6-0 in the league and 13-2 overall. William & Mary drops to 8-15, 0-6 within the league.

The Pirates put the first game again early by scoring seven times in the first inning. Steve Sides led off with a single and Mike Sullivan got a hit, moving up on the relay. Jay McGraw walked and Dean Ehehalt singled in both Sides and Sullivan. Chris Cauble walked, reloading the bases. John Adams doubled to drive in both McGraw and Ehehalt and Mike Andrews singled in Cauble. John Thomas singled in Adams and then stole second. Andrews scored when David Ritchie grounded out.

The Pirates added six more runs for a 13-0 lead in the second. The Pirates banged out three doubles — one each by McGraw, Thomas and Sides and also added three more hits along the way.

A 14th run crossed in the third. McGraw banged out a triple and scored on Ehehalt's ground out.

Still another scored in the fourth. Thomas triple and scored on Ritchie's sacrifice fly.

The Pirates pushed over eight more in the fifth on seven hits and three walks. Sides hit a two-run double to highlight the frame, with Calvin Brown following that up with a two-run single. That made it 23-0.

The final three crossed in the seventh on two hit batsmen, two walks and a single by Thomas. A wild pitch also scored a run.

Sides finished the game with five hits and three rbi, while McGraw and Ehehalt had four each and Thomas had three. Adams and Andrews each collected a pair.

Daniel Boone went the distance for the victory, his second in three decisions. He scattered three hits along the way.

But while the Pirates had it easy in the first game, they struggled in the second.

East Carolina took the initial lead with two runs in the second. Ehehalt walked and stole second, moving to third on an out. He scored on Adams' ground out. Andrews then walked and moved to third on Thomas' error ball. A wild pitch allowed Andrews to score for a 2-0 lead.

William & Mary finally scratched with two in the bottom of the third. Keith Yates singled and was sacrificed up. He scored on a double by Tim Boyle. Sam Champi then reached on an error which allowed Boyle to score and tie it up.

The Indians took the lead in the sixth with two more. Jim Mc-Candless singled and Bobby Knox got a hit. Todd Schwisher singled in McCandless and moved Knox to third. Boyle's single brought Knox home.

The Pirates then had to rally with two out in the seventh to avoid the loss. Andrews walked and moved up on the first out, holding second on the second out. Sides singled and stole second and Sullivan was intentionally walked. McGraw then delivered a single, driving in both Andrews and Sides. Sullivan, trying to reach third, was thrown out, ending the rally.

But the Pirates got the game winner in the eighth. Ehehalt singled and was sacrificed up. Adams then reached on an infield hit. Andrews followed with a single, driving in Ehehalt with what proved to be the winning run.

William & Mary didn't go down easily, however, coming back to put a man on scoring position before the final out.

Gary Smith, who came on in relief of starter Jake Jacobs, got the win, his sixth of the year against one loss.

McGraw had two hits for the Pirates while Boyle had a pair to pace the Tribe. Sides added a hit in the game to run his consecutive game hitting streak to 19 over the past two seasons.

The Pirates return to action tonight, hosting Southern Maine in a 7 p.m. game at Harrington Field in Greenville.

Sandy Lyle Wins TPC Playoff

Knocked Away

Tennessee Is Women's Champ

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — For Tennessee Coach Pat Summitt, winning the NCAA Women's basketball championship was as much a relief as it was a joy. Finally, the second-place tag is gone.

The Lady Volunteers, seven times a Final Four participant in Summitt's 11 seasons but never a champion, made up for years of frustration by thrashing Louisiana Tech 67-44 in Sunday's championship game.

"The monkey is finally off my back, how about it!" Summitt exclaimed.

"This is just as special as winning a gold medal in the Olympics," said Summitt, who coached the United States to the Olympic basketball title in 1984.

In winning the title, the Lady Volunteers also emphatically ended a nine-game losing streak against Louisiana Tech by giving the Lady Techsters their second-worst defeat ever. Tennessee's victory, only its second in 13 games against Tech, came before a record crowd of 9,823 fans in the Special Events Center.

"It was a long time getting here," Summitt said. "Four weeks ago, I wouldn't have given us a chance. I was just hoping we'd get into the Midwest Regionals."

Tech, champions in 1981 and 1982, had knocked Summitt teams out of the tournament three times over the years, but Tennessee had all the answers on Sunday.

"We had a tough, ball-denying defense that frustrated them," Summitt said. "We stayed up until 3 o'clock in the morning watching film trying to devise a defense that would stop their inside game."

Summitt said the key was "denying the ball inside. We played in front of them and didn't let them catch the ball. That was the secret. There's no team in America I have any more respect for than Louisiana Tech."

Tech Coach Leon Barmore said, "There weren't too many Tennessee players I wasn't impressed with."

"Tennessee played the greatest defensive game I've ever seen," Barmore said. "I don't know of any coach in America who deserves to win the national championship more than Pat Head Summitt. She did a great job. They deserved to win. We just couldn't get anything going."

Sheila Frost came off the bench to score 13 points and played tenacious defense for the Lady Volunteers, causing three Tech turnovers.

The victory, Tennessee's 28th in 34 games, came much easier than expected. Tech, which finished 30-3, had beaten the Lady Vols 72-60 in February at Ruston, La.

"It was an amazing turnaround from when we played them in Ruston," Summitt said.

Tonya Edwards and Bridgette Gordon also each had 13 points for the Lady Vols. Edwards, a freshman, was named the tournament MVP.

"Tonya really developed through the year," Barmore said. "Only a great athlete can develop as quickly as she did."

Tennessee held high-scoring Tori Harrison to only eight points and all-American Teresa Weatherspoon had 11. Nora Lewis was high for the losers with 12.

Tennessee took advantage of a seven-minute Tech cold spell to go on a 13-5 spurt and build a 33-24 halftime lead. Tech didn't threaten thereafter.

The victory snapped a 19-game Louisiana Tech winning streak, longest in the nation.

PONTE VEDRA, Fla. (AP) — In 1965, Sandy Lyle of Scotland won the British Open, that most ancient of all golf's championships.

On Sunday, in a misty, drizzly rain, he won the Tournament Players Championship, an unabashedly ambitious event that first was played in 1974 and seeks a ranking along with the other "majors" of the game, the British and U.S. Opens, the Masters and PGA.

How, Lyle was asked, does he compare the victories?

"The difference between the British Open and this tournament?" Lyle mused.

"About 120 years," he said, then quickly added, in what appeared to be an attempt at British diplomacy: "But I'm sure that in another 100 years, this will be a major, too."

This victory, however, carried major cash and career benefits to Lyle. Those include a $180,000 winner's check and a 10-year exemption to all American Tour events.

"That's very important to me," Lyle said. "I very much want to play four to five months a year over here, about 15 tournaments a year."

Lyle, a four-time member of the British Ryder Cup team and winner of 17 titles around the world, also reconsidered his comments about the status of this $1 million event, the annual championship of golf's touring pros.

"This is still a fairly new tournament to Britain. But it's on a very good golf course. It has the best of the international players. It has a big purse. It's a major in my mind," he said.

His victory did not come easily. It took some minor magic down the stretch and three holes of sudden death before he could shake loose from Jeff Sluman.

"He stuck to me like muck to a shovel," Lyle said.

Sluman, who never before had finished higher than fifth in a regular PGA Tour event, quietly matched Lyle's magic down the stretch.

Tied for the lead, Lyle chipped in for birdie on the 15th. Sluman matched it with a 20-footer.

They were still tied for the lead going to the 18th. Lyle birdied from long range, perhaps 30 feet. Sluman dropped a 12-footer in on top of it, setting up the playoff after each had finished regulation play in 274, 14 under par and matching the course record. Lyle had a closing 70, Sluman 69.

Both players made par on the first two playoff holes. But it wasn't exactly routine. On the 17th, a par-3 with an island green, Sluman may have been distracted before he missed an 8-foot birdie putt that would have won it.

An unidentified spectator leaped into the water as Sluman was lining up the putt. After the man was fished out, Sluman tried to regroup, but let the putt slip away.

That sent them to the third playoff hole, "one hole more than I wanted," Sluman said.

Both missed the green, in very nearly the same spot, to the back right. Lyle chipped long. Sluman chipped short. Sluman missed his par putt and Lyle made his for the winner.

"I guess I can't be too disappointed," Sluman said after collecting a $108,000 prize for second.

Mark O'Meara missed the playoff by a single stroke at 73-275. Scott Simpson, with a 74, and Australian Greg Norman, with a 70, were next at 276. Paul Azinger followed at 71-277.

Ben Crenshaw, only two strokes back when the final round started, went to a 75 and was well back at 279.

Point Shaving Not A Thing Of Past

NEW YORK (AP) — Junius Kellogg, whose disclosure of a bribe offer uncovered a series of college basketball fixes during the 1950s, says the atmosphere is ripe for it to happen again.

"Most definitely. As long as you have point spreads and big money being bet, the potential is there," he said.

Kellogg's report of a bribe attempt in 1951 triggered an avalanche that caught more than a half-dozen teams and threatened to bury college basketball.

The sport was riding a wave of popularity in those days not unlike the current frenzy.

The crowds were big — 18,000 packed Madison Square Garden in New York for doubleheaders three nights a week — and the betting was heavy.

Then came disclosures that some players, in some cases virtually entire teams, had been bribed by gamblers to dump games or shave points.

The sport fell from favor, the crowds and the interest dwindled, and so did the betting. The crowds have long since returned, not only in the arenas, but on television, with all three networks televising games this season — and the betting again is furious.

"Thirty five million Americans bet each week," said Danny Sheridan, an oddsmaker, who put the amount wagered in the billions.

"Whenever you have big betting, someone will be seeking to find an edge. That is the nature of the beast," Kellogg said.

What better edge than to have someone in the game manipulate the score so that it winds up in favor of the gambler in relation to the point spread?

"Many of the kids who are playing come out of poor backgrounds. The chance of making fast money overnight would be appealing," Kellogg said.

Did he think that has been happening?

"I don't think about it," he said. "But I'm naive. I have a sense of purity about such things. I don't want it to happen. I'd be as surprised as anyone."

That was his reaction when he was a center at Manhattan College and was offered $1,000 by a former Manhattan player to make sure the team lost by more than eight points to DePaul in a game at Madison Square Garden.

"He said to me, 'If you lost by 10 or 15 points, what's the difference?'" Kellogg recalled.

Kellogg told Ken Norton, then Manhattan's coach, and as a result, two of the team's former players were arrested along with three gamblers.

"I thought it was just he and I," Kellogg said of the bribe offer, "but it was the whole world."

Subsequently, disclosures of fixes caught up with City College of New York, which was manipulating the scores when it won both the NCAA and NIT championships in 1950; Long Island University; New York University; Bradley, Toledo and Kentucky, whose coach Adolph Rupp said his players wouldn't touch a bribe with "a 10-foot pole."

It has happened again since, most recently involving players at Tulane, and a new lure was used, drugs rather than money.

The thought that it could happen again prompted television producer Bob Seizer to get Kellogg and Sheridan together last week on his syndicated show, "Sports Pros and Cons." Their debate over whether gambling should be legalized will be seen later this spring.

Indiana...

Both teams have all five starters averaging in double figures. Guard Darryl Thomas is Indiana's second-leading scorer with an average of 15.6, followed by Calloway at 13, Garrett at 11.4 and Smart at 10.9. On Syracuse, Monroe is third in scoring after Douglas and Seikaly with an average of 12.9. Coleman averages 12 and Triche 11.9.

"We worked hard as a team and we've surprised ourselves sometimes," Thomas said of the Hoosiers. "We're very pleased to be here, but we're not at all through with what we came here to do."

"When it's all over," Coleman said, "I hope I can look back and say I was a national champion as a freshman with Syracuse."

Four Take Mat Wins

PEMBROKE — Four wrestlers from the Pitt County Wrestling Club placed in the Tar Heel State Classic wrestling meet this past weekend.

The meet featured entrants from four different states as well as a team from New Zealand. The meet also had a record turnout, with over 411 total entries.

In the kids division, at 100 pounds K.D. Anderson took fourth place. At the 105-pound class, Jason Osborne took second place, earning a silver medal.

Stephen Daughtry, competing in the 157-pound class, took first place earning a gold medal. In the Cadet Division, Heavyweight Danny Osborne earned a bronze medal for his third place finish.

INVISIBLE FENCING® OF THE PIEDMONT

Sheridan said bookmakers take a beating when games are fixed and are very diligent in watching for suspicious games. He said information from a Las Vegas bookmaker helped uncover the scandal at Tulane.

Kellogg argued against legalizing gambling because he said it would increase betting.

"The greater the number of bettors, the greater the interest in the outcome and the greater the chance of someone trying to persuade a young man to fix or dump a game," he said.

Kellogg, 60, is first deputy commissioner of Commerce and Development in New York, part of the city's Human Resources Department.

He has been confined to a wheelchair since 1954 when he was paralyzed in an automobile accident while with the Harlem Globetrotters.

There were rumors then that he was hurt in retaliation for helping to break up the fixes.

"That's not true. The driver, one of my teammates (on the Globetrotters), just lost control of the car," he said.

Kellogg said educational programs, in effect at many schools, help to guard against attempts to fix games.

"Show the players what happened to those who took bribes and how it ruined their lives," Kellogg said. "Most of them may not even know that it happened."

Tech Wins Iron Duke; ECU Finishes Seventh

From Staff and Wire Reports
DURHAM — Jay Nichols and Nacho Gervas tied for second place, but sparked Georgia Tech to a 10-stroke victory and the team title of the Iron Duke Classic golf tournament on Sunday.

The Yellow Jackets posted a three-round score of 867 to outdistance North Carolina's 877. N.C. State was two more shots back at 879 to place third, while Clemson and Wake Forest tied for fourth at 892.

North Carolina's Greg Parker won the individual title by shooting an even-par 71 Sunday for a 54-hole total of 210 on the Duke University Golf Course.

However, Nichols and the second-round leader Gervas carded 214s to tie for second. Georgia Tech golfer Chris Cupit rallied to finish fifth at 216 with an even-par 71 Sunday.

N.C. State's Uly Grisetette placed third at 215.

East Carolina finished in seventh place, after starting the day out tied with Duke for the sixth position.

Mike Bradley was the Pirates' top finisher. He took ninth place with a total of 220, including a final round of 74.

ECU's Brian Connor shot a final round 72.

ECU plays Thursday through Sunday at the Furman Intercollegiate Tournament in Greenville, S.C.

Bradley Getting Back To Pace Of Her 1986 Form

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Although all the wrinkles haven't been ironed out yet, Pat Bradley's two-shot victory in the LPGA Turquoise Classic golf tournament has her feeling a lot closer to the form which made her the Tour's Player of the Year in 1986.

Bradley used two dramatic shots, one on each nine of the 6,419-yard Moon Valley Country Club course, to turn dreams of her first 1987 victory into reality.

An eagle-3 on the eighth hole turned around what had been a disastrous start, and a birdie putt on No. 17 capped a final-round of 3-under-par 70 that was enough to hold off fast-closing runnerup Chris Johnson.

Bradley completed 72 holes in 6-under 286, while Johnson used a course record-tying 67 to finish at 288.

Bradley's 22nd career title was worth $45,000 from the $300,000 purse as well as an enormous mental boost heading into the season's first major, the Dinah Shore at Palm Springs, Calif.

"I'll be going to Palm Springs with a lot of confidence in my putter," said Bradley, who won three of the four majors last year while collecting $92,021.

Johnson, who had only one birdie on the back nine in three previous rounds, had five on Sunday to share the course record set Saturday by Bradley.

Bradley said she was unaware of Johnson's charge because the challenger's name was low on the leader board, which was obscured by the heads of onlookers. She said she learned of it on the last hole after Johnson had finished.

"The most important thing at that point was what I'm doing now," Bradley said.

The 28-year-old Johnson, a 1984, 1987, and 1988 winner of the Samaritan Turquoise Classic and was played at a different club.

"There was no pressure on to play well today, and those factors helped me to feel freer. ... I felt like I wanted to play well," she said. "Emotionally, I was ready, and I was in a good position to play well, and it happened."

"I needed this as a boost going into the Dinah Shore. I feel ready for a major," she said.

Lori Garbacz fired a 70 to take third-place money at 290. Penny Hammel was at 291 after an even-par 73.

Juli Inkster, Cathy Gerring and Susan Sanders were tied at 292, even par.

Penny Pulz, who started the day tied with Bradley, bogeyed the first and third holes and never recovered, slumping to an 80 and a tournament total of 296.

Bradley bogeyed two of the first seven holes on the front side before pitching in from 85 yards for an eagle-3 on the 473-yard eighth hole.

She bogeyed the next hole after hitting her tee shot into a water hazard and her second shot into a sand trap. But in keeping with the topsy-turvy nature of her final round, Bradley sank a 12-foot putt for birdie on the par-5, 493-yard 10th hole.

Bradley hooked her tee shot on the 13th hole, but put her approach six inches away from the hole to save par.

On No. 16, she punched a 6-iron shot over the green but again saved par by chipping within two feet. Then came 17, when a 9-iron approach finished about 16 feet from the hole to set up the decisive birdie.

UNLV Hoping That History Won't Repeat

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A decade ago, Jerry Tarkanian came to the Final Four with high hopes and left with dashed dreams.

Tarkanian, the consummate warrior, hopes the similarities between 1977 and 1987 stop there.

Pardon Tarkanian if he seems a bit paranoid. He is about as friendly with some NCAA enforcement officials as Al Davis is with Pete Rozelle.

It seems that every time Nevada-Las Vegas does a lot right on the basketball court, the NCAA looks to see if it did anything wrong off the court. And this year, the parallels are obvious.

On Saturday, UNLV lost to Indiana 97-93 in the NCAA national semifinals. In 1977, the Rebels lost in the semifinals to North Carolina 84-83. Later that year, the NCAA placed UNLV on probation for recruiting violations and began an unsuccessful eight-year legal battle to suspend the coach for two years.

Now there may be another storm brewing, and that has Tarkanian worried.

There has been media speculation in recent weeks about UNLV's recruiting of prep star Lloyd Daniels. Tarkanian ever tied with Daniels when the youth was arrested on charges of trying to buy the cocaine derivative crack. Daniels never was a member of the UNLV team.

The NCAA has not said it is investigating the Daniels-UNLV ties and Tarkanian vigorously denies the university is guilty of any rules violations.

Later that year, the NCAA placed UNLV on probation for recruiting violations and began an unsuccessful eight-year legal battle to suspend the coach for two years.

There has been media speculation in recent weeks about UNLV's recruiting of prep star Lloyd Daniels. Tarkanian ever tied with Daniels when the youth was arrested on charges of trying to buy the cocaine derivative crack. Daniels never was a member of the UNLV team.

The NCAA has not said it is investigating the Daniels-UNLV ties and Tarkanian vigorously denies the university is guilty of any rules violations.

"We'd be crazy to do anything wrong, as closely as the NCAA watches our program," Tarkanian said. "And particularly with a high profile kid like that."

The coach does admit to wrongdoing on the court Saturday.

"We just beat ourselves," he said. "Our biggest problem is that we didn't hit our free throws and they did. How can you go 10 for 19 and win a national tournament?"

While Indiana was hitting 21 of 28 free throws, Vegas hurt itself by missing the front end of three 1-and-1 opportunities.

The loss, only the second against 37 victories, could be particularly depressing if followed by any NCAA action.

Tarkanian also faces the loss of five of his top seven players, although losing them through graduation instead of merely expired eligibility can only help counter UNLV's image problems.

The image was reflected in a classroom skit on NBC's "Saturday Night Live" just hours after the Runnin' Rebels' season ended. In a take-off on the series "The Paper Chase," Professor Kingsfield was depicted teaching Las Vegas students to play blackjack.

"There is nothing I can do about that," Tarkanian said of his image problems. "The media creates that perception. They want to stick us with that. We've got super kids and a great program. We can't help what the media says about us. We have no control over them."

For more than a generation, thousands of lovely lawns have been established annually with Centi-Seed, the original and dependable Centipede grass seed. New Centi-Seed is treated for fungus and bacteria protection and with a natural growth stimulant for quicker, surer results. Centipede develops and grows slower than other grasses but unlike "quicker starters" it produces a dense, weed-free, lifetime turf. Ask your neighbor who has used it and insist on Centi-Seed for planting your new lawn or converting your old lawn.

Human Rights On Thatcher, Gorbachev Agenda

By DAVID MASON
Chief European Correspondent
MOSCOW (AP) — British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev held nearly four hours of talks today on a wide range of issues including human rights and arms control, said British sources.

The sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, described the morning Kremlin discussions as "vigorous and often forthright but never hostile."

Among issues discussed were human rights, differences in the two countries' political systems and philosophies and some "nitty gritty" on arms control, said the sources.

In a discussion about human rights, Gorbachev raised the issue of Northern Ireland's sectarian strife, said the sources. They did not elaborate.

The discussions ran well into the normal lunch period and finally recessed on the Soviet leader's initiative.

When Mrs. Thatcher returned to the British Embassy across the Moscow River from the Kremlin for a hasty late lunch, she was asked why the talks had run beyond schedule.

"They were too interesting to break off," she replied.

The talks were to resume in the afternoon with the participation of British Foreign Minister Sir Geoffrey Howe and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze, who held a separate morning meeting.

An aide to the Conservative prime minister earlier said she would press Gorbachev for effective and verifiable arms agreements, including a superpower accord to rid Europe of medium-range missiles.

Before meeting with Gorbachev this morning, Mrs. Thatcher laid a wreath at the tomb of the unknown soldier near the Kremlin. The monument commemorates the 20 million Soviets who died in World War II.

She stood with her head bowed before the huge wreath of red carnations and lilies as the British and Soviet national anthems were played.

On Sunday, the first full day of her five-day visit to the Soviet Union, Mrs. Thatcher visited a 14th century monastery and called for greater religious freedom on the Soviet Union and throughout the world. She also urged that people imprisoned for their faith be released.

Before going to the Kremlin today, Mrs. Thatcher met for about 40 minutes at the British Embassy with five members of the Soviet Peace Committee at their request.

British sources said the Soviet group called for elimination of nuclear weapons and complained that Britain was strengthening its nuclear arsenal.

The sources quoted Mrs. Thatcher as saying nuclear weapons had helped keep the peace in Europe for 40 years, deterring both nuclear and conventional wars. But, the sources said, Mrs. Thatcher made it clear she wants all nuclear forces cut back while insuring security for both East and West.

Mrs. Thatcher criticized the Soviet military presence in Afghanistan, where an estimated 115,000 Soviet troops are helping the government fight Moslem guerrillas.

The peace group replied that the United States had occupied Grenada in 1983, the sources said, but Mrs. Thatcher said the United States left the Caribbean nation quickly after insuring a return to democracy.

Among those in the Soviet group were Galina Ulanova, a former ballerina, Vladimir Karpov of the Soviet Writers' Union and cosmonaut Georgy Grechko.

On Sunday, Mrs. Thatcher attended Mass at the Trinity-St. Sergius Monastery in Zagorsk, 40 miles north of Moscow, chatted with a couple at a suburban Moscow housing complex and went to a supermarket.

During a luncheon speech at the monastery, she said, "I hope the principles of freedom of religious belief and worship will grow ever stronger here in the Soviet Union and throughout the world, and that many of those people imprisoned for their faith will be freed."

Her aides said her visit to the monastery was a sign of her solidarity with Christianity in the Soviet Union.

Infant Safe, Two Arrested In Abduction

By RON WORD
Associated Press Writer
JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — A newborn child abducted after the slaying of her mother was treated well by her captors, gaining a pound in three days before being found by authorities, her grandfather said today.

Friends and relatives were praying for Heather Marie Witt at her grandfather's house Sunday when the FBI called and said she was all right.

Wendy Lee Zabel, 23, and Robert H. Ryan, 26, surrendered peacefully late Sunday after they returned to their suburban Mayport apartment with the infant, who was abducted Thursday, authorities said.

The suspects were arrested in the parking lot outside their apartment, and Heather was in their car when they arrived, said James Cognassola, special agent in charge of the Jacksonville FBI office.

Heather taken to Baptist Hospital for a checkup and then released to her father, Mark Witt.

"We just got home and everything is fine," Roger Witt, Mark's father, said early today. "There's not a scratch mark on that baby. She's gained a pound since she left the hospital (last Wednesday). Those people took good care of her."

About 25 or 30 people had gathered at the elder Witt's home Sunday to pray for the child's safety. The call from the FBI came during that prayer meeting, Roger Witt said.

Investigators said the break in the case came Saturday when the gun used to kill Joan Witt and wound her mother during the abduction was found on the side of a rural road.

A search of the weapon's history led investigators to California, where it was bought, and then to Minnesota and Wisconsin. The trail eventually led to Ms. Zabel, who moved to the Jacksonville area several years ago, Cognassola said.

FBI officers then waited Sunday outside the apartment Ms. Zabel shared with Ryan. They returned with the child at about 8:40 p.m. EST, the spokesman said.

Ms. Zabel has been charged with murder and kidnapping, and Ryan with kidnapping, according to Jacksonville Sheriff Jim McMillen. The suspects were being held at the Duval County Jail.

Witnesses described the assailant as a pregnant woman, but Cognassola said Ms. Zabel doesn't appear to be pregnant.

The attack and abduction occurred one day after Mrs. Witt and her 8-pound, 6-ounce daughter were released from Baptist Medical Center. Heather was born March 22.

The assailant asked to use the telephone in Mrs. Witt's home, saying she was pregnant and going into labor. Inside, she shot Mrs. Witt and stabbed and shot her mother before leaving with the baby.

Mrs. Witt died Thursday night after surgery. Her funeral was scheduled today.

The baby's maternal grandmother, Marie Barrett, 56, was listed in serious but stable condition at University Hospital.

'Gopher' Marries

SIoux CITY, Iowa (AP) — "Love Boat" star turned congressman Fred Grandy was headed back to Washington after marrying television reporter and novelist Catherine Mann.

Grandy and Ms. Mann, who met when she interviewed him in 1982, were married Saturday night at St. Thomas Episcopal Church in Grandy's hometown. It was the second marriage for both.

Ms. Mann is chief correspondent for the "Entertainment Report," a syndicated report for use by local news programs. She is the author of "Tinsel Town" and recently completed a second book, "Rumors."

Grandy won the 6th District congressional seat as a Republican last year.

'Platoon' The Favorite For Best Picture Honor

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — The film world's 59th Academy Awards will be presented tonight before an estimated billion television viewers in 86 countries, climaxing one of the most suspenseful Oscar races in recent years.

The consensus suggests that Oliver Stone's slashing "Platoon" will be announced when Dustin Hoffman declares "... and the winner is" for best picture. But the acting awards are by no means certain.

Some predict that Academy voters were swayed by sentiment and selected seven-time nominee Paul Newman ("The Color of Money") for his first acting Oscar and the deaf actress Marlee Matlin ("Children of a Lesser God") for her first film role.

Bob Hoskins ("Mona Lisa") and Sissy Spacek ("Crimes of the Heart") also have their advocates. And the races for supporting actor and actress appear wide open.

A stunning black, white and silver art deco set reminiscent of Hollywood's golden era will showcase the presenters and production numbers at the Dorothy Chandler Pavilion. ABC will televise the ceremonies, starting at 9 p.m. EST.

Veteran Oscar director Marty

Paseta staged rehearsals while crowds of spectators lined the performer's entrance of the theater Sunday hoping to catch a glimpse of a star or two. They watched as Dom DeLuise, Lou Rawls, Bernadette Peters and dozens of others arrived.

Inside, hundreds of stage hands wearing headsets and carrying walkie-talkies milled about while elaborately costumed dancers rehearsed their steps for the Best Costume Design award.

A seemingly frustrated Paseta, taking on the heady chore of coordinating the 19 cameras, computer-operated graphics, film clips, enormous stage sets, and teleprompter, coached presenter Lauren Bacall on her lines.

"You're not the pope so don't bless the crowd," he said as she waved her microphone in the air.

Most of the acting winners will reel off their thanks in person, with the Academy reporting only three acting nominees as no-shows.

Maggie Smith ("A Room with a View") is appearing in a London play, while Newman is busy editing "The Glass Menagerie," in which he directed his wife, Joanne Woodward.

Michael Caine, nominated as supporting actor for "Hannah and Her Sisters," will be unable to return from the Bahamas location of a "Jaws" sequel.

Newman also claims superstition, telling his publicist: "I showed up seven times (he was also nominated for producing 'Rachel, Rachel') and lost. Maybe I can win if I stay away."

Another notable non-appearance will be Woody Allen, nominated for directing and writing "Hannah." He expected to follow his Monday night ritual of playing jazz clarinet at Michael's Pub in Manhattan.

Discussing the Oscars in Esquire magazine, Allen remarked, "I don't think 'Hannah' is as good as 'Blue Velvet.'" He termed the lurid "Blue Velvet" the year's best picture, but it wasn't nominated by the Academy. There was "no chance" he would attend the awards: "It's just not my interest, not my bag, not an area I function in."

Samuel Goldwyn Jr., who is producing the Oscar broadcast, hopes tonight's show will avoid the deadening litany of thank you speeches and perhaps reverse the ratings slide of recent years.

"I would like the show to be witty, elegant, suspenseful — and finish before midnight New York time," he told the nominees luncheon. He advised the hopefuls to "start thinking of what you will say if you win. Don't wait for that flash of insight. ... It's not bad luck to prepare a speech in advance."

The festivities will be handled by Chevy Chase, Goldie Hawn and Paul Hogan ("Crocodile Dundee"), subbing for Robin Williams, who was unable to leave a film location.

The presenters represent a cross-section of Hollywood veterans — Miss Bacall, Bette Davis, Jennifer Jones, Karl Malden, Elizabeth Taylor — and the new generation — Matthew Broderick, Tom Hanks, Molly Ringwald, Helena Bonham-Carter, Sigourney Weaver.

Goldwyn has planned no big production numbers for tonight's show, but Telly Savalas, Pat Morita and DeLuise will open with a "Fugue for Oscar" with lyrics by Sammy Cahn.

The nominated songs will receive bigger showcases than usual, said Paseta. Miss Peters will introduce a medley, which will be sung by Tony Bennett, Levi Stubbs, Peter Cetera, Lou Rawls and Melba Moore, Natalie Cole and James Ingram.

Steven Spielberg is flying from London to receive the Irving G. Thalberg award for distinguished production. Ralph Bellamy will receive a special award.

Razzies Announced

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Howard the Duck," the $45 million cartoon that laid an egg, and Prince's box-office bomb "Under the Cherry Moon" were co-winners of the 1986 worst-picture Razzie at the annual Golden Raspberry Awards.

Others dishonored on Sunday were rock star Madonna as worst actress for her role alongside her husband, Sean Penn, in "Shanghai Surprise" and to comedian Dom DeLuise as worst supporting actress for his performance in drag as Aunt Kate in "Haunted Honey Moon."

FOCUS

Vincent's Flowers
 One of Vincent Van Gogh's sunflower paintings could sell for a record $11 million at an auction scheduled today. Were he alive now, Van Gogh would be shocked. During his lifetime, he sold only one of more than 750 paintings and 1,600 drawings he produced. Artist Paul Gauguin lived with Van Gogh briefly, but he left after Vincent's dementia became unbearable. Van Gogh took his own life at a time when his work was finally starting to receive praise.

DO YOU KNOW — In what country was Van Gogh born?
FRIDAY'S ANSWER — Albert Sabin developed the first oral vaccine for polio.

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY March 31

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Now you are able to organize whatever materialistic and practical affairs that are of concern to you. Gain the good will of most everyone by displaying common sense.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Study your monetary pressures and handle them wisely. If your property needs repair, get to it. TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Get out to the beauty or barber shop and improve your appearance. Be with old friends and enjoy their company.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): You can make arrangements to improve your lifestyle. Do something special for your loved one.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Contact those friends who are most aware of your needs and gain their assistance.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): Contact persons you know and explain your sensible plans to them. Gain their support and get right to work.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): You have fine ideas and can put them across in a modern way for fine results.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Bring out your good ideas and pique the interest of others. If you want to revise an agreement, do it now with much ease.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): You have to be more diplomatic with a partner who has ideas that do not fit into your scheme of things.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Be sure to persevere in any activities you are engaged in and get the right results.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Be more romantic by getting rid of that chip-on-the-shoulder attitude. Get all the pieces together logically.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Establish greater harmony with those who dwell with you. Have people in tonight and be happy.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): You can clear up an agreement now before it takes on a serious mien, so be very cooperative.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be very down to earth and practical and will also have fine common sense in trying to help others with their problems. Teach this one to get rid of prejudices and then he, or she, will become a successful person. Sports are a must here.

"The Stars impel; they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1 — As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠95 ♥AKJ9 ♦A763 ♣J62
 Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with one club. What action do you take?
 A. — In theory, there is nothing you can do. You can't make a takeout double without spades and you need a fivecard suit to overcall. Here, however, we would bend the rules a little and overcall one heart. Our suit is good and our hand is worth an opening bid.

Q.2 — Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠AQJ63 ♥A8 ♦762 ♣KQ9
 The bidding has proceeded:
 West North East South
 1 ♠ 1 ♥ Pass ?
 What action do you take?
 A. — You could easily have a game, but where? You want to make sure partner bids again, but to jump to two spades overstates the quality and length of your suit and in modern theory it is no longer considered forcing. The solution is to cuebid two diamonds. That will give you the chance to show your spades in comfort, knowing that partner must find another bid. The course of the auction should then enable you to place the final contract with confidence.

Q.3 — As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠AQJ63 ♥KQJ95 ♦87 ♣4
 Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with one diamond. What action do you take?
 A. — Experience has shown that it is wrong to make a takeout double with a twosuit hand the enemy might be able to preempt you out of your best suit. We vote for a quiet one spade. It is our bet that the auction won't die there.

Q.4 — Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠7 ♥1076 ♦K83 ♣AK10952
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♣ Pass 2 ♣ Pass
 2 NT Pass ?
 What action do you take?
 A. — The one thing you can't do is rebid three clubs that shows a sub-minimum twooverone response with no strength outside the club suit. You have only two choices: pass or three no trump. We opt for the latter since our hand should produce five or six tricks for partner.

Q.5 — Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠AK98632 ♥AQ108 ♣76
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♥ Pass 3 ♥ Pass
 What do you bid now?

A. — While you might have a grand slam, the possibility exists that your limit is 11 tricks. Where partner has stuff is the question. Blackwood won't necessarily help you uncover whether he has the right cards or not. Start a cuebidding sequence with three spades your cheapest first-round control.

Q.6 — Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠AJ95 ♥Q72 ♦KJ762 ♣9
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♣ Pass 1 ♦ Pass
 1 ♥ Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
 A. — You have no reason to suppose that no trump is going to be your best spot. If partner has four spades, a spade contract should prove infinitely superior. Bid one spade, which is forcing since it is a change of suit by responder, to see what partner does next.

Hahn Told Keep A Lower Profile

By JONATHAN W. OATIS
Associated Press Writer

Jessica Hahn, whose sexual encounter with the Rev. Jim Bakker proved his downfall, has been told by her adviser to keep quiet and dress more modestly, while her church remembered the two principals in the affair in their prayers.

"I have told her in writing and on the telephone to either shut up and say nothing," or else tell her whole story to a church tribunal, Paul Roper said in an interview published Sunday in Newsday, the Long Island newspaper.

He also told the 27-year-old Hahn to stop "walking around in skin-tight jeans in her backyard saying cute little throwaway remarks to the press."

The self-appointed Pentecostal watchdog, who negotiated a $265,000 settlement with Bakker's PTL ministry, said he believes the Assemblies of God will convene such a hearing. He and Bakker both belong to the denomination.

Meanwhile, Bakker's congregation in Fort Mill, S.C., and Ms. Hahn's congregation in Massapequa, N.Y., offered prayers for them Sunday.

"We're on the road to victory," the Rev. Richard Dortch, Bakker's successor as president of PTL, told 2,300 people packed into Bakker's Heritage Village Church.

"I'm staying on the boat ... because we're going to the other side," said Dortch, who offered a prayer for Bakker and his wife, Tammy. Mrs. Bakker left PTL to undergo treatment for addiction to prescription drugs.

"I know Jim Bakker is a hero," the Rev. Gene Profeta said during a rousing service at Ms. Hahn's church, the Full Gospel Tabernacle.

"It's not what men think or what men say. It's what God says," he said in a sermon punctuated by gospel singing, a 10-piece electric band and shouts of "Amen" and "Hallelujah" from the congregation.

Profeta never mentioned the name of Ms. Hahn, who was not at the service, but asked the Pentecostal congregation to pray for "a brother and a sister."

Ms. Hahn, a onetime church secretary who regularly attends church, spent the day inside her West Babylon, N.Y., home behind a string fence bearing signs saying, "No Trespassing: No Press Beyond Rope."

Ms. Hahn, identified as the woman whose night with Bakker led to his resignation from the PTL ministry, has refused most requests for interviews but has stepped outside occasionally to be photographed, at times in tight jeans.

"I believe her story. But I'm violently opposed to trying anybody without hearing all the versions," said Roper, an Anaheim, Calif., businessman who met with several reporters last week to give Ms. Hahn's version.

Bakker and Dortch offered their resignations to the denomination on March 19, the day Bakker announced his resignation from 500,000-member PTL, which stands for Praise The Lord or People That Love.

Bakker asked the Rev. Jerry Falwell, a Baptist, to step in as chairman of the PTL board to prevent what Bakker called a hostile takeover.

Bakker's attorney later accused Louisiana evangelist Jimmy Swaggart of attempting a takeover, a charge Swaggart denied.

Dortch has been asked to meet with the North Carolina District Council of the Assemblies of God this week to discuss his resignation, which was not immediately accepted.

Roper has said that Dortch met with him to negotiate a $265,000 settlement for Ms. Hahn, which included a $150,000 trust fund. Roper has said the agreement called for her to keep silent about her liaison with Bakker in 1980.

Bakker has called the money "blackmail" and Falwell has said it has the appearance of extortion.

"If that's the case, I would predict he will be gone in the near future," the Rev. Robert Dugan, president of the National Association of Evangelicals, said Sunday on ABC's "This Week with David Brinkley."

"Dortch does not have a proxy on the majority votes on that board, he is one among many," Dugan said. "A lot of the others, I think, would not stand for that sort of thing."

In Rochester, N.Y., the evangelist who introduced Bakker and Ms. Hahn seven years ago on Sunday repeated previous statements that he deeply regretted his role in the matter.

"I wanted to say it in Rochester, New York: I am guilty," the Rev. John Wesley Fletcher told reporters, reading from a statement.

The Oklawaha City man, who is touring churches in the area, said he's been bothered since he introduced Bakker and Ms. Hahn in a hotel room in Clearwater Beach, Fla., on Dec. 6, 1980.

"In a way, I'm glad it's over. I'm glad the news is out," he said. "Now I can face the world without wondering whether that creeping hand would come out of some dark corner and grab me."

Maria Von Trapp Funeral Tuesday

STOWE, Vt. (AP) — Maria von Trapp, whose marriage to a baron and escape from the Nazis with their children inspired "The Sound of Music" was praised as a "remarkable woman" following her death at age 82.

The funeral for Mrs. von Trapp, who died Saturday night at the Copley Hospital in Morrisville, will be Tuesday. Six of her 10 children were expected to attend, along with dozens of grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

Mrs. von Trapp had been hospitalized Wednesday with intestinal, heart and diabetic problems, said Johannes von Trapp, one of her sons.

"Maria was a truly remarkable woman, inspirational and loving. She will be deeply missed by all who knew her," actress Julie Andrews, who played Mrs. von Trapp in the 1965 movie version of "The Sound of Music," said through a spokesman Saturday night.

Mrs. von Trapp, a native of Austria, was preparing to be a nun when she was hired as a governess to the seven children of the widower Baron Georg von Trapp, a highly decorated submarine commander. She and von Trapp married in 1927 and had three more children of their own.

The family often sang together informally, and became professional entertainers after winning the Salzburg Festival in 1936.

Two years later, the family fled Austria to escape the Nazis. Their story was dramatized in a book, musical play and Academy Award-winning movie.

The Trapp Family Singers toured Europe and the United States for several years before settling in 1942 in Vermont, whose mountains and people reminded them of their homeland. The baron died in 1947 at age 57.

The von Trapp home atop a Stowe hillside eventually became a music camp and was expanded in 1962 into the Trapp Family Lodge, a popular resort.

Fire destroyed the lodge four days before Christmas in 1980, killing a guest and wiping out all of Mrs. von Trapp's personal possessions, but she had it rebuilt and enlarged.

Mrs. von Trapp said she and her family received little of the $180 million in revenue from the movie, but praised it for honestly depicting her life story and for bringing joy and hope to millions.

"The great good the film and play are doing to individual lives is far beyond money," Mrs. von Trapp said in an interview with The New York Times. "There seems to be so much despair in the world. But so many people write about how much the film has helped them in restoring their confidence in God."

Friends and a family on Sunday described her as a woman of great humility who made a special effort to spend time with workers at the lodge, as a devout Roman Catholic and strong woman.

"I think more than anything, she was a humble lady," said Peter Goodyear, a family friend who helped manage the lodge. "I think it's unfortunate people didn't realize that about her."

A burial Mass will be said at the Blessed Sacrament Church in Stowe, to be followed by burial, said family spokeswoman Barb Faunce. She said the church is small and the service will be open only to the family.

Mrs. von Trapp is survived by eight of her children, sons Rupert and Johannes of Stowe, and Werner and Johannes of Waitsfield; daughters Eleonore Campbell of Waitsfield, Rosmarie of Pittsburgh, Agathe of Baltimore, Johanna of San Diego and Maria of New Guinea. She also is survived by numerous grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

Johanna and Maria are not able to attend the funeral because of poor health, the family said.

No Plans To Return

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — The Dalai Lama, exiled spiritual leader of Tibetan Buddhists, was quoted as saying he has no plans to return to his homeland as long as it remains under Chinese rule.

"It is time for waiting and watching," the Indian Express quoted him as saying in a rare interview published Sunday.

China invaded Tibet in 1951. The Dalai Lama fled to India in 1959 after a failed Tibetan uprising against the Chinese.

The Chinese have tried to void the 52-year-old lama back, but intermittent talks have ended in stalemate.

102 Mobile Homes For Sale

FIRST FEDERAL EQUITYLINE

A Tax Deductible Line of Credit Secured by the Equity in Your First or Second Home.

New Tax Law

The new tax law takes away valuable deductions for consumer credit interest. Most of the itemized deductions for the interest you pay on such things as your car loan, credit cards or charge accounts will be discontinued under the new tax law. First Federal's EQUITYLINE provides a way for you to have consumer credit and deduct the interest.

Equityline

Your home is an excellent source of credit and you can turn the equity in your first or second home into a line of credit you can use at any time, for any reason—education expenses, a new car, bill consolidation, home improvements or whatever you want. And within certain guidelines your interest will be tax deductible.

Equity is the difference between what you owe on your home and what it's worth.

You can have an EQUITYLINE of credit that will put cash in your hands immediately—right up to your approved credit limit. Or you can establish your EQUITYLINE today, and have it available for future needs.

Competitive Rates/Amounts

The EQUITYLINE interest rate is prime plus 1% for a line of credit $15,000 and over; and prime plus 1½% for $10,000-$14,999. The minimum EQUITYLINE is $10,000—maximum $100,000. The monthly payment on your EQUITYLINE can be as little as interest only or any amount you may choose above the interest.

Easy Process/Minimum Cost

First Federal's EQUITYLINE has no origination fee and no annual fees. We will work to minimize your closing costs—call us for more details.

You have an easy, one-time application. Once your line of credit is established, that's the end of the paperwork. In fact, when your line of credit is approved, the cash you want will always be only a check away. Just use one of the special checks provided to access your line of credit.
