Salvadorans Searching For Leftist Guerrillas

EL PARAISO, El Salvador (AP) — Troops searched the mountainous northern region for leftist guerrillas who killed at least 43 soldiers and a U.S. military adviser and heavily damaged a key military base in a pre-dawn assault.

Staff Sgt. Gregory A. Fronius, 27, a Green Beret intelligence specialist, was the first American to die in battle in this Central American nation's 7-year-old civil war.

Fronius, of Scottdale, Pa., was killed by mortar fire during the raid Tuesday on the 4th Infantry Brigade garrison at El Paraiso in Chalatenango province, about 40 miles north of the capital of San Salvador.

Fronius had arrived Jan. 6 in El Salvador for a six-month tour and was training Salvadoran troops at the garrison. His body was shipped later Tuesday to Panama, said U.S. Embassy spokesman Pen Agnew.

Fronius' wife, Celinda, lives in Panama with the couple's 7-year-old son, Gregory Jr., and infant daughter, Francine.

Sgt. GREGORY FRONIUS

"He was a gung-ho kind of guy," said Fronius' brother, Anthony, of Baxter, W. Va. "He loved the Army. I think it was the fact that he got to do crazy things, like jumping out of helicopters."

In Washington, President Reagan said Fronius' death was "a tragedy" that "should bring home to everyone what we face against communism."

"I hope we realize we have a responsibility to keep communism out of the Western Hemisphere," he said.

The military said at least 43 soldiers were killed and 35 wounded, while at least eight guerrillas were killed.

However, soldiers on the scene estimated about 65 troops were killed and more than 100 wounded. Gen. Adolfo Blandon, chief of the armed forces, said the death toll could rise "because of the seriousness of the injuries."

He said 250 soldiers were at the post, and that most of the casualties

Ferret Owner Upset

By DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer

A bill filed this week in the N.C. House of Representatives which would eventually eliminate ferrets as domestic pets has left at least one local owner gnawing on the situation.

"I'm trying to let people know about this," said Tim Siders of Grimesland, who owns 35 ferrets. "I wanted to make people aware of it. I'm upset with the bill."

According to the bill, it would be illegal to possess a ferret in North Carolina after Jan. 1, 1988, without a permit.

Dr. John I. Freeman, director of Environmental Epidemiology with the N.C. Department of Health Services, said the bill would require a permit which could be obtained from his department from Oct. 1 to Dec. 31.

"In order to obtain a permit owners are required to submit a

GUC Waives Main Fee For Water Line

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

People living along the Belvoir Highway — where the Greenville Utilities Commission will begin installing a water main in the next few weeks — will have to pay less for water service if they connect to the line within the first six months the line is in service.

The GUC board Tuesday night voted to waive the usual $300 per lot water main fee for potential customers along the line for the first six months of availability.

That action means that rather than paying the main fee and tap fee, customers, if they act within the first six months the 3½ mile extension is in service, will have to pay only the $300 tap fee.

Malcolm Green, GUC's general manager, said the board voted to waive the main fee for the first six months because half the cost of the $185,000 project was paid for from state clean water grant money allocated to the project by the Pitt County Board of Commissioners and because it would cost less to connect a number of customers in a relatively short period of time than it would to make random connections over an extended period.

Green, who said the extension will make water service available to 75 to 100 existing potential customers and to many acres of undeveloped property, said the new line will tie into an existing water main along the River Road to provided looped service and increased fire protection in the area.

The board also reviewed preliminary budget requests for personnel, non-system capital outlay, travel and training for the 1986-1987 fiscal year at the meeting, but no action was taken.

Growers Escape Damage

By The Associated Press

Sandhills peach growers got a scare when the temperature dipped below the 30-degree mark early today, but they say the cold snap, which didn't last long, might actually have helped by thinning out the abundant crop.

"I found some damage ... but I'm very well pleased," Moore County peach grower Clyde Auman said today. "I think what we got last night was beneficial to the crop. There were so many buds on there that we would have had to get some of them off."

But Cameron Ware, a Gaston County apple and peach farmer, said the 21-degree temperature recorded near Kings Mountain probably damaged his peach buds.

Ervin Lineberger of Gaston County said his peaches were "thinned out," but he didn't think the sub-freezing temperatures hurt his strawberries or blackberries.

"It was obiviously the stage of (development) of the peach" where they would be damaged, Lineberger said. Without a freeze, buds would have to be thinned by hand, he said.

Auman said freezing temperatures forecast for Saturday night could hurt his 60 acres of crops. And he said any subsequent frosts could destroy peaches, because they become more

HEART RECIPIENT — Malcolm Huffman smiles as he leaves the Pitt County Memorial Hospital Tuesday. His wife Katie, left, and Wendy Bridgers, a Pitt Memorial Hospital nurse, push him to his car. Huffman, from Washington, received the transplant on Feb. 17, becoming the first heart transplant patient at PCMH. Doctors said he could expect to live a relatively normal life. Washington Man Goes Home With New Heart

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Malcolm Huffman went home from Pitt County Memorial Hospital to Washington, N.C., Tuesday afternoon with a transplanted heart serving him well six weeks after his Feb. 17 transplant surgery.

The retired automobile mechanic quietly acknowledged reporters and well-wishers when he was wheeled through the hospital lobby, but he left the hospital talking to his wife, Katie.

"We're fixing to do something today that I never thought we'd be able to do," Mrs. Huffman said. "We're taking him home. At one time I didn't have much hope we'd ever be able to do this. We're so very grateful!"

Minutes before her husband was brought from his hospital room, she had cried softly as she described her emotions: "Scared. Excited. Real grateful."

She expressed gratitude to God and to the heart donor and his family. "The donor is living on through my husband and my husband is living on through him," she said.

Huffman, 58, was reportedly requiring resuscitation to sustain his life when he was taken to the operating room the evening of Feb. 17. Having suffered "a large heart attack" in July 1986, he had been hospitalized in Pitt Memorial for six weeks prior to his surgery and his condition was worsening. It had been decided on Feb. 14 that transplant surgery was his only hope for survival and an appeal for a donor heart had gone out on a national computer network. But his donor was located Feb. 16 within Pitt Memorial.

Tuesday afternoon, clapping sounded and smiling faces of hospital staff and visitors greeted Huffman as nurse Wendy Bridgers wheeled him through the hospital lobby to the front doors. Two of the Huffmans' nine children accompanied their parents during the leave-taking. Their daughter, Karol, stood at her father's shoulder holding an arrangement of lilies as he breathed outdoor air for the first time in three months. His party waited briefly under the canopy at the hospital entrance as his son, Paul Huffman, brought around the car that would transport him home. Well-wishers cheered as the car pulled away.

Huffman is, so far, Pitt Memorial Hospital's only heart transplant patient. The implant surgery team was led by Dr. Randolph Chitwood; the donor team by Dr. Mark Williams.

According to Art Schneider, PCMH cardiac transplant coordinator, Huffman's doctors have been pleased with his progress. He said there has been no sign of rejection of his new heart and that Huffman has recovered remarkably quickly considering the seriously debilitated condition of his body prior to the surgery.

Prospects now are excellent for Huffman to gradually resume normal activity, Schneider said. He said he does not know whether Huffman and his doctors have yet determined whether he can return to work.

Grifton Gets Funds

Grifton was to be given $468,336 in a Community Development Block Grant today during a presentation in the Grifton Town Hall, said Ron Hardison, a town administrator.

Lorraine Shinn of National Resources and Community Development notified the town recently of the available funds, Hardison said.

"We applied (for the grant) last April, and we were turned down. These were some discretionary funds that Ms. Shinn got allocated to us," he said.

Hardison said Grifton was about eight points from receiving the grant. "On their point system, we did not score enough points on our application. We were very close to the cut-off," he said.

The grant will be used "to rehabilitate about 42 houses and install a new water line" in the Contentnea Street and Tucker Street areas, Hardison said. There will be a maximum limit that may be allocated to each home.

W. Germany Swaps Spy For 4 Agents

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — West Germany today swapped one of East Germany's most notorious spies for four Bonn agents held by the Communists, the West German ZDF television network said.

Security sources contacted by The Associated Press confirmed that Lothar Erwin Lutze, held in a West German prison since his 1979 conviction for betraying NATO secrets, had been sent back to East Germany.

The sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the four West German agents were part of the deal, but could not confirm that East Germany had set them free as of this afternoon

Lutze, who sent key North Atlantic Treaty Alliance contingency plans to the East Bloc in the 1970s, was handed over to East German officials at the Herleshausen border crossing, ZDF and the security sources said.

The mass-circulation newspaper Bild had earlier reported a swap was imminent. Bild's report was to appear in Thursday's editions, but was released in advance to other news media Wednesday.

Lutze was arrested in 1976 and eventually was sentenced to 12 years in prison. He and his wife, Renate, were exposed in a counter-espionage crackdown after the 1974 arrest of a senior aide to then-Chancellor Willy Brandt as an East German spy.

Renate Lutze, who had been a secretary to the West German Defense Ministry's personnel chief, served two years in prison before being handed over to East Germany in a 1981 spy swap.

The documents dealt with the NATO oil pipeline network in central Europe, West German evaluations on the readiness of Soviet-led Warsaw Pact forces, NATO energy use plans in a crisis and plans for a new battle tank to be built in the 1990s.

The West Germans in the exchange were two agents of the nation's counter-intelligence agency and two members of the foreign intelligence service, the sources said.

Best Location

If you could head off a flood, a disaster, a storm of difficulty, that measure would be the proper course of action.

A Rural Economic Development Center for North Carolina is a means of subterfuging the tide of unemployment and decay heading for the state's rural communities.

A bill introduced by Pitt County Sens. Tom Taft and Bob Martin that would appropriate $4 million from 1987 to 1989 for the center is an important piece of legislation that should be accepted by the N.C. General Assembly.

The senators should go one step further, however, and suggest that Greenville be earmarked as the site for the center. The city would be a logical location for the state's Rural Development Center. Geographically, it is central to eastern North Carolina — the largest, most rural, most isolated section of the state.

In addition, Greenville has the educational resources necessary for establishing such a center. East Carolina Universty and Pitt Community College could provide the center with the necessary technical and research expertise — from ECU's Rural Development Institute to PCC's Small Business Center.

Greenville could adequately support a successful Rural Development Center. Transportation resources — good highway and air access — would foster the center's accessibility to the state. The area has community support and local initiative necessary for the center's nourishment.

The crisis in rural communities is a real one. Rural North Carolina has lost a portion of its ability to employ its people. Declining manufacturing employment, shrinking business in small cities and the shriveling productivity of farmland have combined to impact sharply on the rural economic climate.

To reverse this trend, rural North Carolina must improve its infrastructure — its water and sewer resources and its system of highways and airports. It must also cultivate local entrepreneurship, support existing local industries and increase opportunities for natural resource-based industries.

Rural development is an important issue. As the economics of agriculture and textile-dependent small communities change, a resource must be available to direct this change into progress. A center could do this effectively through research, training and becoming a source of economic and social data.

Greenville and Pitt County would be a proper site for such a significant state resource. The community has the record of cooperation, progress and expertise essential for a successful Rural Development Center.

Stay In Compact

Thanks largely to Rep. Joseph Mavretic of Edgecombe, the idea of North Carolina quitting the Southeast Compact on Low-Level Radioactive Waste Disposal lingers. He does not want the seven other states in the compact to bury their wastes in North Carolina.

The Daily Reflector has repeatedly said that once having joined the compact, North Carolina agreed to obligations as well as the benefits entailed by membership in the group.

One law firm's advice to N.C. is that withdrawal from the compact would be legally dubious and could make the state a national dumping ground.

On the other hand, law professor Eugene Gressman opined nothing could be done to stop states from quitting the compact at any time. The Compact Commission, in turn, voted last Thursday to amend its bylaws so that any member wishing to withdraw after 1997 would need the unanimous approval of the commission and consent of Congress. The storage facility is scheduled to open in North Carolina in 1992.

The measure also calls for waste facilities to remain open for 20 years or until 32 million cubic feet of wastes are stored.

Regional waste disposal compacts were authorized by Congress in 1980, and that authorization allowed compacts to exclude waste from states that do not belong to the group. That raised concerns nonmembers could be vulnerable to becoming national dumping grounds.

Other members of the compact are South Carolina, Virginia, Georgia, Florida, Mississippi, Alabama and Tennessee.

Governor Jim Martin says acceptance of the grace period by member states satisfies one of two conditions he set for remaining in the compact. The other is that the state be able to levy sufficient tariffs to pay for state-of-the-art technology in disposing of the wastes and to make the facility an economic boon to the host community.

Critics want the state to withdraw and force generators of the waste, especially electric power companies, to store it on site.

Over the years there have been a number of horrible examples of how some private industries were negligent in dealing with that responsibility. It is a field that demands close supervision.

If Tar Heels are to enjoy to the full national advances in technology, we must be prepared to accept accompanying responsibilities. The compact remains "the way to go".

Waiting Out Gorbachev's Reforms

'A system of family-run, small-scale private enterprise is being inaugurated. Western companies are being invited to consider joint ventures in the Soviet Union.'

Tass, the Soviet news agency, reported the other day that a Leningrad construction trust had gone out of business after having been declared bankrupt. As a result, 2,000 employees are temporarily out of work.

The enterprise, it seems, was failing to meet deadlines for completion of work. It was guilty of cost overruns. And the quality of work was shoddy.

The demise of a troubled company would hardly be news in the West. But it was a first in the Soviet Union, where state-owned enterprises have never had to worry about bankruptcy and workers have had virtually airtight job security.

Western analysts read the bankruptcy story as a stern warning to complacent managers and bureaucrats that Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev is very serious about economic reform. And, in the view of a growing body of outside experts, this preoccupation with internal reform — if it stays on track — will increase the likelihood that U.S.-Soviet arms competition can be moderated in the years ahead.

The "if" is important, because there is also a body of opinion that Gorbachev's reform efforts are doomed to failure.

In his latest major pronouncement concerning arms control, Gorbachev accepted President Reagan's "zero option" proposal for the withdrawal by both sides of all medium-range nuclear missiles from Europe with almost no strings attached.

There are two ways to interpret the Soviet leader's "concession."

One view is that Gorbachev is playing a clever game aimed at splitting Washington from its allies. Withdrawal of all medium-range missiles from Europe would leave the Soviets with a big edge in short-range nuclear missiles, chemical arms and numbers of conventional weapons.

Thus the signing of a zero-option treaty on medium-range missiles could leave the Soviet Union with a residual destabilizing edge in Europe-based nuclear and conventional weapons. It could also set the stage for acrimonious arguments within the Western alliance as to whether the Europeans are spending enough for their own defense, and whether a larger U.S. withdrawal from Europe is in prospect.

The other interpretation is that Gorbachev genuinely wants and needs agreements imposing significant restraints on the U.S.-Soviet military competition, especially in space-based strategic defenses, and is anxious to negotiate a Euromissile agreement as a step toward that goal.

The optimistic view is supported by the Kremlin's repeated statements that it wants to do business with Ronald Reagan, not wait for his successor to take office in 1989. Instead of taking raw advantage of Reagan's weakened position as a result of the Iran-contra affair, Gorbachev actually seems to be throwing him a lifeline.

Even more important is the evidence that Gorbachev has made internal rejuvenation of the Soviet system his top priority. And to have much hope of succeeding, he needs a period of relative quiet in U.S.-Soviet relations.

U.S. intelligence agencies reported last week that the long-sluggish Soviet economy grew by 4.2 percent in 1986 — the best overall performance in a decade. However, they also predicted that Gorbachev won't be able to keep it up.

The fact is that the traditional style of Soviet economic management is capable of producing impressive weapons but condemns the Soviet Union to permanent and increasingly serious economic inferiority unless drastic changes are made.

The outlook was explored at the recent Arden House Conference on U.S.-Soviet Relations, sponsored by Harvard's Russian Research Center and the Harriman Institute at Columbia. Many of the assembled experts doubted that Gorbachev himself fully comprehends the depth of the need for reform. But he is showing an impressive determination to get on with the job.

Gorbachev, now three years in office, is moving to decentralize some aspects of economic decision-making and encourage the integration of information-age technologies into the economy.

A system of family-run, small-scale private enterprise is being inaugurated. Western companies are being invited to consider joint ventures in the Soviet Union. Factories are being warned that they must gear up to world standards, and that enterprises remaining uncompetitive may be allowed to perish.

Scratch Hits, A Lucky Run And Errors

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. William Proxmire has decided that a United States senator has a very good life indeed.

So good a life that it has caused him to reflect on the wording of his epitaph.

Senators, Proxmire told the Senate recently, are in the middle of the game of life, active participants in steering the nation, not just passengers or mere observers.

"Where else can you not only dream of the direction the nation is going but play a significant part in getting it there," the Wisconsin Democrat said.

"Now let's not kid ourselves," Proxmire said. "Senators may accomplish little or nothing."

"But we have a chance, a remarkable chance."

After all, there was Paul Douglas of Illinois, "who successfully led the fight for the most significant human rights achievement of the 20th century — the civil rights bill."

There was Arthur Vandenberg of Michigan, who forged a bipartisan foreign policy "that brought forth the Marshall Plan and a great cooperative era of American leadership in the free world."

There was Robert Taft of Ohio, he said, who helped sponsor legislation that brought housing and education opportunities to millions; Sen. Gaylord Nelson of Wisconsin, who put his mark on pioneer environmental legislation; and Wisconsin's Bob LaFollette, who "left on this country a concern for the men and women who work with their hands..."

"What an opportunity those of us who serve in this Congress have to make the world a better place," Proxmire said. "What a golden and rare opportunity we have."

"Most of us strike out more often than we hit safely," Proxmire said. "But just think of it, we are given a chance not just to play in the big league but to work in the biggest league of them all. ... For anyone looking for a career that offers the greatest prospect for a fulfilling life — how can you beat it? How lucky can you get?"

And so to the summing up:

"You see, some of us have a fear that our tombstone might read like this:

"Here under the rocks lies Bill Prox.

"For him life held no terrors.

"Prox became an observer, died an observer.

"No hits. No runs. No errors."

Much better, said Proxmire, for the epitaph to read like this:

"Here under the rocks lies Bill Prox.

"For him life had its terrors.

"Prox became a senator, died a senator.

"Two scratch hits. One lucky run. A coffin filled with errors."

Tackling the federal budget deficit is hard work.

There is just too little coming in, too much going out.

And the job of trying to increase the former and decrease the latter is a hard one.

It leads to frustration.

So debates about it in Congress have at times been strident, even partisan, even just a bit silly.

The other day when majority Democratic members of the House Budget Committee offered to lower the flag of political hostility and open a new era of bipartisan cooperation, minority Republicans reacted with suspicion.

They were so suspicious, in fact, that they had to revert to the memories of high school in order to express them properly.

Rep. Jack Buechner, R-Mo, addressed the Democrats:

"You've got the only car in the high school and the only time you asked us to double date was when you ran out of gas and needed some money," he said.

Not so, said Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y.

Quite right, said Rep. James L. Oberstar, D-Minn.

Why, said Oberstar, he wasn't permitted to date Republicans when he was growing up.

Maybe the whole thing was a bad idea, said Rep. Pat Williams, D-Mont.,

"I don't care much for double dates," he said. "I want to dance with the girl I brought."

The Republicans, spurning the idea of cooperation, boycotted a series of committee decisions by refusing to vote either yes or no and by responding with the word "present" when their names were called.

"This isn't even a double date," Williams grumbled. "We're dancing with ourselves."

Strength For Today

After all of the struggles for freedom which have taken place in the last hundred years or so, it is a sad fact that most of the people in the world today still live under tyrannies of one sort or another.

Yet even more destructive than these political or military tyrannies is the tyranny of self-bondage. The avid scramble for money, for power, for the gratification of sensual desire — these are some of the taskmasters that make more slaves than military dictators or commissars.

The great need for people in such circumstances is to draft a declaration of independence. The tyrant they need to be freed from is themselves. Also, if they begin to bear some of their neighbor's burdens, they will find their own becoming lighter by comparison.

Alliance In Jeopardy

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Fear for the safety of foreign hostages and pressure from Iran apparently has caused Syria to delay plans to move troops into the Beirut stronghold of Iranian-backed Moslem fundamentalists.

However, Syrian President Hafez Assad's intervention in Lebanon already has threatened his alliance with Iran.

Well-placed Arab sources with inside knowledge of Syrian objectives in Lebanon said Syrian forces eventually will take over Beirut's southern slums where the pro-Iranian Shiite Moslem Hezbollah, or Party of God, has its bastion.

"The major sticking point right now is the foreign hostages who are almost certainly held in the southern suburbs," one source said.

Like all the people interviewed by The Associated Press, the source spoke on condition he not be identified.

Hezbollah evacuated its main base in the Basta district of Moslem west Beirut as the Syrians moved in Feb. 22 to quell factional fighting. Witnesses reported seeing gunmen lead more than 20 people, their heads covered by black hoods, from the building and put them in vans.

The prisoners, taken out in four groups of six or seven each, were believed to include some of the 25 foreigners missing and believed kidnapped in Lebanon since March 1985, the sources said.

They stressed that Brig. Gen. Ghazi Kenaan, Syria's military intelligence chief in Lebanon, was expected to order his men into the Shiite shantytowns once he has pinpointed where the hostages are being held.

The sources said that the Syrians have assured Lebanon's Christian president, Amin Gemayel, they will push into Hezbollah's sanctuary "in due time."

Eliminating the threat of Shiite fundamentalism is one of the Christians' conditions for cooperating with Syria in renewed efforts to end Lebanon's civil ar, which enters its 13th year April 15.

A Syrian thrust into south Beirut would deal a death blow to the Damascus-Tehran alliance, an uneasy relationship at best, thus signalling a major realignment in the Arab world.

Although secular Damascus has little in common with the fundamentalist government in Tehran, Syria and Libya have been Iran's key Arab allies in its 6½-year-old war with Iraq. Iraq is Syria's longtime rival in the Arab world.

Libya's Col. Moammar Gadhafi has distanced himself in recent months from Tehran, declaring that the Persian Gulf war is "madness" and urging Tehran to accept Iraqi peace offers.

Iran has criticized bitterly Syria's intervention in Beirut. The Syrian force includes 7,500 crack troops, nearly 300 tanks and armored vehicles and a small army of Mukhabarats, or intelligence agents.

Among the troops is a 700-man commando unit used to ruthlessly crush fundamentalists rebels in the Syrian city of Hama in 1982.

Three of the Syrians' most feared Special Forces officers, colonels Hisham al-Mouallaq, Ali Deeb and Abdul-Hamid Sultan, who commanded the Hama operations, are believed to be in Beirut now.

Assad did not inform the Iranians of his intervention in advance, the sources said. He did advise the Americans and Saudi Arabia.

The Saudis have been trying to wean Syria away from Iran to isolate Tehran in the gulf war that increasingly is destabilizing the oil-rich region.

The Saudis promised financial aid for Syria, plagued by severe economic problems, if Assad curbed Shiites who seek to set up a second Islamic republic in Lebanon.

The Damascus-Tehran alliance had been showing signs of strain even before Assad's intervention in Beirut.

The Iranians have complained about Syria's failure to pay a $2.3 billion debt, and Syria has refused to buy 5 million tons of oil under a 1983 agreement because the contract price is well above today's market price.

Assad wants to impress the West by freeing hostages to refute allegations he sponsored international terrorist attacks. Western countries, including the United States, imposed diplomatic and economic sanctions against Syria last year but have been quietly restoring links in hopes of help in freeing the hostages.

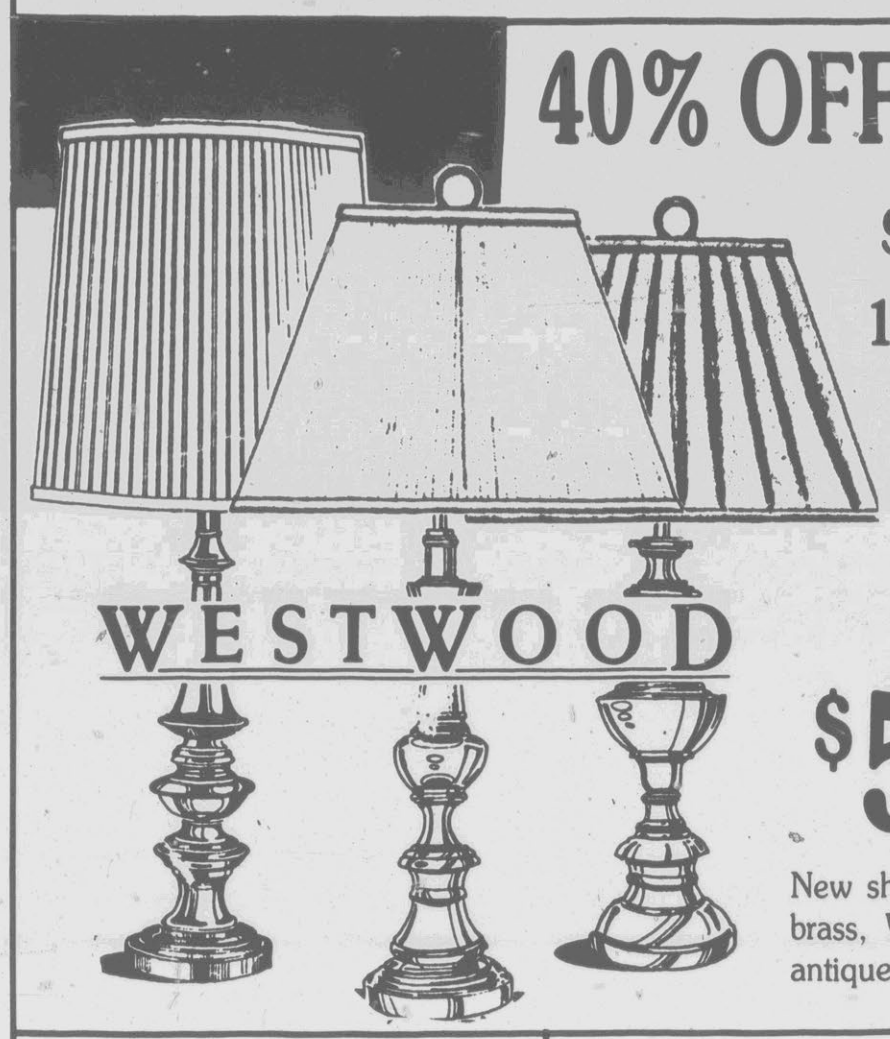

The sources said Assad told top Iranian officials the day after his troops entered Beirut that he wanted French and German hostages freed in return for not moving against Hezbollah.

Martin Says He Supports Change In School Proposal

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Republican Gov. Jim Martin says a "miscommunication" led a Democratic senator to deny what Martin called the senator's agreement to co-sponsor a $1.5 billion school construction plan.

In a statement issued late Tuesday, Martin said he and Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir, were "shoulder to shoulder in support of school bond leglislation he is introducing this week ..."

Earlier, Martin announced at a news conference that Hardison and Sen. Paul Smith, R-Rowan, were cosponsoring the governor's program. Moments later, however, Hardison disavowed knowledge of that.

"I have not discussed anything with the governor," Hardison, who is considering a bid for the 1988 Democratic nomination for lieutenant governor, said in an interview. "I don't know anything about this."

Hardison said he was preparing to offer his own bond plan, which would be the fourth legislative proposals for financing what the Department of Public Instruction calls desperately needed construction and renovation of public school buildings.

In his statement, Martin said the confusion arose from his mistaken belief that Hardison had endorsed the bill. Instead, Hardison was awaiting the governor's answer to a request that it be revised.

Martin said he agreed to the change Hardison sought — allowing community college needs to be met under the program as well as those of elementary and secondary schools — at an evening meeting with Hardison.

"Now, with bipartisan support to introduce the legislation, I hope the ... General Assembly will see the merits of the idea," Martin said.

He also said House Democrats had expressed willingness to co-sponsor his bill but declined to identify them. He said his package would be introduced in the House later.

Meanwhile, Sen. Ken Royall, D-Durham, introduced Tuesday a bill that would authorize bond issues of $1 billion for school construction and $1 billion for other infrastructure projects, plus a $120 million loan and grant fund for water and sewer system improvements.

Also, Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Granville, last week proposed a 1-cent increase in the state sales tax for four years, with proceeds earmarked for school capital projects. Watkins estimated it would generate $2 billion.

Martin said he was not dismayed by the appearance of rival programs sponsored by his Democratic adversaries. He repeated his opposition to a tax increase, but said the Royall bill was similar to his own and that the two might be combined.

"It is very encouraging to see that kind of movement among the legislative leadership to develop ... a proposal that seeks to do the same thing that our legislation seeks to do," Martin said. "As to the differences, they are all negotiable as far as we're concerned."

The Martin bill would require a statewide referendum on issuing $1.5 billion to create a pool from which local governments could borrow at low interest for school projects.

They would repay the loans using proceeds from a half-cent local-option sales tax increase authorized in 1986.

Aside from dealing with areas other than school construction and authorizing a second bond issue, the Royall bill — endorsed by Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan — differs from Martin's in two respects, the governor said.

It seeks only $1 billion in bonds instead of $1.5 billion, the amount that county officials indicated in a survey they would borrow, Martin said.

Also, it would require local referendums whenever local governments borrow money from funds created by the statewide bond issues — unless the county or municipality pledges no more than the revenue it receives from the portion of the 1986 sales tax increase earmarked for school construction.

Child Expecting Tooth Fairy Dumped In Sand By Tornado

ELIZABETH CITY, N.C. (AP) — Seven-year-old Michael J. Rak had just awakened and noticed the tooth he had left for the tooth fairy had fallen on the floor.

Within moments the tooth, the floor and his family's entire mobile home had disappeared, swept away in a howling tornado that injured both his parents Tuesday.

"The next thing I knew, I was sitting outside in the sand, right where the trailer used to be," the boy, who was not injured, told The Virginian-Pilot and The Ledger-Star in Norfolk, Va.

He said his father, shirtless and covered with cuts, had been thrown into the grass about 10 feet away. His mother, wearing only her nightgown, was trapped nearby under the couple's water bed.

Michael said that he dug sand out of his ears as his father, screaming for help, dragged his mother free.

The adults were taken by ambulance to Albemarle Hospital in Elizabeth City. Pamela Rak, 27, was admitted late Tuesday. Michael A. Rak, 31, was treated and released.

"It was just like everything blew up," Rak said earlier Tuesday, before he was discharged from the hospital.

Rak said he and his wife were both asleep when the tornado struck about 6:30 a.m.

When he awakened, he said he first noticed "my little boy, standing where his bedroom used to be. He was standing up and appeared to be all right."

He said he did not realize his wife was nearby until he heard moaning from underneath the bed.

Roger Farrow was the first to reach the Raks from his trailer across the road. "I was sure they were dead," said Farrow as he helped dozens of others cleaning up in the ravaged boatyard.

"You could hear it coming like it was a train. I said, 'Hold on, everybody,' but it was over in about five or six seconds," Farrow said. "When I got to Mike he was really stunned, cut real bad."

For now, the family plans to stay with Pamela Rak's parents. But Rak, a construction worker, said he was unsure how he would begin to replace the family's possessions. Only the family's car was insured.

"I don't know what we're going to do now, I really don't," Rak said, holding his head with his one free hand. "I'd be thankful for anything anyone could do."

The loss of his home and property is "painful, but all that can be replaced," Rak said.

"Right now," he added wearily, "I'm just thankful we're still here."

Panel To Review Education Nominees

RALEIGH (AP) — A House committee decided to take a second look at Gov. Jim Martin's nominees to the State Board of Education after a two-hour public hearing at which the three candidates promised to support the Basic Education Plan.

The House Education Committee agreed to continue its public hearing on the nominees at its regularly scheduled meeting next Tuesday.

In interviews, members voiced mixed feelings about the prospects that Howard Haworth, William C. Meekins Jr. and Patricia H. Neal will be confirmed by the House and Senate. The Senate Education Committee held a separate hearing last week but took no vote.

"In my opinion, none of them have qualified for the approval of the House yet," Rep. Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, said. "I want to hear more."

Rep. Bob Etheridge, D-Harnett, the influential co-chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, said: "I don't have a problem with any one of them. I think they will make excellent board members."

All the nominees are Republicans. Haworth, former state commerce secretary, is from Morganton; Meekins is from Elizabeth City; and Ms. Neal is from Durham.

While describing Haworth and Ms. Neal as knowledgable about many of the education issues confronting the state board, some lawmakers expressed concern about Meekins, who admitted he knew little about the public school system.

Harris Plant Nears Commercial Status

RALEIGH (AP) — The Shearon Harris Nuclear Plant is expected to reach full power and begin commercial operations by the end of April, Carolina Power & Light Co. President Sherwood H. Smith Jr. said Tuesday.

The 900-megawatt plant in Wake County is operating at 75 percent power. It has been ascending toward full power since being licensed by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission in January.

Commercial status would allow CP&L to begin passing the costs of the $3.8 billion plant to its customers once a rate increase is approved by the N.C. Utilities Commission.

The commission does not allow a rate increase to go into effect until a plant is operating commercially. To receive the designation, a plant must show it can operate at full power without interruption for 100 hours.

CP&L already has filed for a 13.1 percent rate increease to begin recovering the costs of the plant. The increase would boost the typical residential customer's bill by $10 a month. The utilities commission will open hearings on it June 9.

The utility plans to seek a second rate increase this fall. That request is expected to be for another 13 percent increase, depending on the outcome of the first case

CP&L Vice Chairman William E. Graham Jr. said that after the two increases, the utility would not expect another major rate increase for 10 years. He said any rate increases sought during that period would be due to inflation.

Bingo Scam

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — A businessman who skimmed profits from high-stakes bingo games at the Cherokee Indian Reservation in North Carolina has been sentenced to 60 days in prison and fined $100,000.

John A. Young, 53, of Cherokee, N.C., could have received up to five years in prison and been fined $250,000 for his guilty plea to mail fraud. Prosecutors said Young mailed a false statement of the partnership's profits to investors.

Young admitted in February that he skimmed $141,894 in profits from Cherokee Bingo Associates, a limited partnership based in Virginia Beach.

U.S. District Judge J. Calvitt Clarke Jr. imposed a three-year sentence with all but 60 days suspended and ordered Young to serve three years on probation. Young must pay the $100,000 fine within two months of his release from prison. He will report to prison April 15.

Sheriff's Job

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Former Iredell County Sheriff J.D. Benfield went to work today for the North Carolina Division of Motor Vehicles, which he hopes will put an end to questions surrounding his receipt of unemployment benefits.

Benfield was appointed sheriff in June to fill the unexpired term of the late LeRoy Reavis, who died in May. He ran for election in November but lost to current Sheriff Clyde Lloyd. Then he signed up for unemployment insurance.

"I was told that's what it's for, to help you financially 'til you find another job," Benfield said.

Elected officials are not eligible to receive unemployment insurance after losing an election. But Benfield was appointed, not elected, so Employment Security Commission (ESC) officials ruled he could collect benefits. For the past eight weeks, he has received $184 per week.

Benfield said he learned Monday that he had gotten a job as a transportation inspector for the Division of Motor Vehicles.

Icebreaker

WILMINGTON (AP) — The Coast Guard icebreaker "Northwind" is back at its home berth on the Wilmington riverfront after spending about five months in a shipyard near Baltimore for renovations and repairs.

While families greeted the ship, many were wondering whether the ship may be leaving Wilmington for good. The Coast Guard is considering moving the aging "Northwind" to a new home port so it can be closer to maintenance facilities.

"It's pure speculation at this point," said Capt. Kenneth Morris, commanding officer of the "Northwind".

Coast Guard officials in Washington are considering the move as part of the service's budget decisions. Morris said no decision is likely to be made before this fall.

Free Seed

MONROE, N.C. (AP) — Union County Farm Bureau members on Tuesday distributed 4,300 bags of corn seed to 91 farmers, courtesy of the Garst Seed Co. of Coon Rapids, Iowa, and the Rev. Larry Jones of Oklahoma City.

Jones is founder of the Feed the Children charity that distributed 14 tons of food, clothes and medical supplies last year, mostly overseas and to Indian reservations.

Union County Farm Bureau officials today planned to distribute about 5,000 more bags of seed at Dennis Rape's Gro-More Inc. warehouse off U.S. 74. Combined with 3,000 bags of Asgrow seeds distributed Monday through another charity, there should be enough seed to plant nearly 40,000 acres.

Suspension

SYLVA, N.C. (AP) — C.B. Hart, director of Southwestern Technical College's Cherokee Center, has been suspended with pay while the school conducts an investigation into "possible incompetency."

STC President Norman Myers said Hart "was suspended from his duties and has appealed that supension, which will be going through our appeals channel," Myers said.

Hart said he was shocked to learn of his suspension. "I asked what the charges were and there were no charges," he said. "(Myers) said there were no charges and it was for the investigation into possible incompetency and that sort of thing."

Lawsuit Filed

GREENSBORO (AP) — A 1985 family gathering in Mebane that ended in tragedy when a 13-year-old Virginia youth was accidentally shot by a teen-age cousin has resulted in a civil lawsuit brought by the injured boy's parents.

William and Patricia Puryear of Chester, Va., have filed suit in U.S. District Court in Greensboro against Patricia Puryear's brother and sister-in-law, Eugene and Debbie Walters of Mebane. The suit charges the Walters were negligent in having a gun in a place accessible to children.

The incident occurred Aug. 17, 1985, while the Puryears and other relatives were visiting the Walters at their Mebane home.

The 22-caliber pistol, loaded and cocked, had been hidden in a sofa at the Walters' living room. Their other 13-year-old nephew found the gun, and, thinking it was a toy, pulled the trigger. The bullet hit William Thomas Puryear Jr. in the head.

Tommy Puryear suffered brain damage and other serious injuries, the lawsuit says.

SBI Chief Says Early Releases May Give Drug Dealers Wrong Message

DUNN, N.C. (AP) — State Bureau of Investigation Director Robert Morgan says releasing hundreds of inmates to alleviate prison overcrowding is sending the wrong message to the state's drug dealers.

"Common sense should tell them that turning prisoners loose before they serve their time isn't going to help solve the problem," Morgan said. "It's simply going to help other offenders who haven't yet been caught realize that they don't have much to worry about if they are sent to prison. How can anybody expect that to help reduce crime?"

Morgan says he has instructed his drug agents to put every case possible in federal courts instead of state courts. He said the order will remain in effect until state prisons operate normally again.

'In the past we've been putting only the big cases in federal court, and have been putting the small-time offenders caught with an ounce or two in the state courts," Morgan said.

"We have no choice now but to put as many of them in federal court as we can persuade Sam Currin and the other U.S. attorneys to prosecute."

Morgan said it was unfortunate that federal prosecutors seem primarily interested in the big cases.

"I hope we can also persuade them to take the small cases and put these dealers behind bars and keep them there for the full length of whatever time they get," Morgan said.

Morgan called for Gov. Jim Martin and the General Assembly to realize that crime is a real problem, and "the dope traffic is the biggest problem of all."

Morgan told the Dunn Daily Record Monday that about 90 percent of drug dealers are also users, and said most of them will go back to dealing in drugs to support their habit.

"A lot of good law enforcement officers put their lives on the line putting these criminals in court, and now the state is getting ready to turn them loose," Morgan said. "I think it's disgraceful to turn these prisoners out. If they'll violate the law one time, they'll do it again. We don't need them out on the streets."

Morgan refused to place blame on anyone for the shortage of state prisons. "I do know the problem didn't start yesterday or the year before. The problem started 10 or 12 years ago," he said.

Morgan said he had heard of a suggestion to use some state-owned prison property to string up tall barricades and put the prisoners, at least temporarily, in tents — the same way servicemen used to sleep in pup tents during their training in World War II.

'If tents were good enough for the brave men who fought World War II, they're certainly good enough for these hardened criminals," Morgan said.

Duke Marine Expert Says Quick Action Necessary To Save Fish

BEAUFORT, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina's coastal estauries produce the largest number of fish on the East Coast, but the number of fish has waned in recent years because of the strain on those waters, a Duke University professor says.

John D. Costlow, director of the Duke Marine Laboratory at Beaufort, said Tuesday efforts must be made quickly to stop the destruction of the state's coastal waters.

"The obvious culprit is man," Costlow said, "who damages the fragile ecology of the coastal waters by overdeveloping on the land and drilling for oil on the ocean floor."

Only an 11th-hour effort saved the nearby Chesapeake Bay as a fishing area, he said.

"The trick will be whether the state will make the effort to save the estaurine areas (of North Carolina)," he said.

"We will continue to have problems of multiple use and they will get worse in the next 10 years," Costlow told reporters at a seminar at the Duke laboratory.

Costlow said some of the problems affecting the state's coastline are natural and can't be avoided.

"But there are other things we can do something about if we want to preserve it for the 6.2 million residents of the state or for protect the interests of a few select individuals," he said.

Costlow said state environmental officials issued a coastal management policy in 1985 that outlined ways to attack the problem.

New Rules Could Require Teachers To Spend Five Years In Preparation

RALEIGH (AP) — It may take students who want to become teachers up to five years to complete their education under new rules being considered by North Carolina education officials.

A joint committee of the N.C. Board of Education and the University of North Carolina Board of Governors agreed Tuesday that the state should require teacher education majors to have a second academic major, such as math, English or psychology.

But they admitted that it will be hard for students to finish required courses in four years.

"That's not bad, but I think that's the reality of it and we need to be up front about it," Board of Education member Norma Turnage said.

The committee finished reviewing 39 recommendations to improve teacher education in North Carolina. Acting on the legislature's mandate, a task force in November presented a broad range of proposals for improving teacher education programs and the schoolteachers they produce.

The Board of Governors has adopted the report, directing its 15 public colleges with teacher education programs to begin following some recommendations that don't require board of education participation.

The board of education has objected to some recommendations in the report.

Meantime, the committee has discussed how to implement some controversial measures.

The committee Tuesday settled concerns of some members about several sensitive issues. Among them are requiring teacher education programs to be nationally accredited and requiring those programs to maintain a 70 percent pass rate of graduates taking a test for teacher certification.

Don Stedman, a University of North Carolina system administrator, emphasized that programs wouldn't be forced to close if they didn't meet those requirements by the 1990 deadline.

That was a concern of committee member Prezell Robinson, president of Raleigh's St. Augustine's College.

He asked that colleges be given until 1992 "to give those of us who feel we need it a little more time to get in there and roll up our sleeves."

The committee agreed schools should be given until 1992 if they ask for more time.

Fifteen of North Carolina's 44 teacher education programs are now nationally accredited.

Thirteen colleges have pass rates below 70 percent.

Robinson said his colleagues at private colleges were concerned that national accreditation requirements could force them to add faculty members.

They wonder, he said, who will provide the money when the National Council on Accreditation of Teacher Education "says you need three PhDs and you only have one."

"That's going to be the test of an institution's commitment to have a valid teacher education program," said Ms. Turnage.

Earl Danieley, former president of Raleigh's Elon College, also a private college, agreed.

He said some institutions might be better off dumping some marginal programs in their teacher education department and concentrating on the remaining ones.

If the state board of education declines to adopt some of the recommendations, the legislature could make them law, forcing the board to abide by them. The board of education is responsible for certifying North Carolina's teachers.

House OKs Criteria For Dump Selection

RALEIGH (AP) — The state House voted 105-4 to tentatively approve a bill listing factors to be considered in deciding where to put low-level radioactive waste, but lawmakers rejected efforts to include population density on the list.

"We purposely did not include population density," said Rep. Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, who noted that nuclear power plants in populous Wake, Brunswick and Mecklenburg counties account for most of the waste.

"... If population density was not a negating factor in siting these facilities, then certainly it should not be a negating factor in siting the waste facility," he said.

Rep. Dan Blue, D-Wake, said he proposed an amendment to include population because the possible dangers of radioactive waste should fall on as few people as possible.

But Rep. Foyle Hightower, D-Anson, said the facility is supposed to be safe.

"If it's safe to have one (a waste facility) in a rural area, it's safe to have it in a city. If it's not safe, I don't think we need one in North Carolina."

Rep. Dave Diamont, D-Surry, added that populated areas that receive income from electric utilities running nuclear plants should be considered for a waste facility.

Blue's amendment was killed on a 79-30 vote, but final House consideration of the Senate-passed bill was postponed until today when Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, objected to immediate consideration.

A House committee postponed action on a bill to pour $1 million a year into a crime victim compensation fund after questions arose about the way the money would be distributed.

Rep. Martin Nesbitt, D-Buncombe, told the House Judiciary IV Committee he was concerned that a seven-member commission automatically chaired by the secretary of crime control and public safety could lose its autonomy.

Nesbitt said he was also concerned that the bill might take the pressure off judges to require restitution to crime victims.

Rep. Bob Hunter, D-McDowell, said the makeup was intended to speed compensation cases because the secretary would be empowered to approve payments of up to $5,000.

Rep. Dennis Wicker, D-Lee, postponed action until next Tuesday.

The bill would mark the first time funding has been approved for the Victims Compensation Act. Victims could receive no more than $10,000 in compensation for medical bills and damages not covered by insurance.

The House Judiciary II Committee unanimously approved a bill to require that political action committees clearly identify their interests when pushing for election of candidates.

Rep. Walter Jones, D-Pitt, said some PACs deliberately obscure their intentions behind false labels.

A second Jones bill designed to curb negative political advertising remained in committee after some debate.

"It seems like, in many cases, groups will do whatever they can to win the election," Jones said. "I feel like that cheats the voting public."

The bill would require that all ads clearly indicate which candidate they support and include the identity of any group sponsoring them.

The Senate approved and sent to the House a bill that would allow a fine of up to $500 for littering after amending it to also allow community service in some cases.

Rep. Bill Staton, D-Lee, said the amendment would allow eight hours of community service in which someone convicted of littering would pick up litter along the roads. The bill, approved 48-0, would raise the current penalty of $50 to as much as $200 for the first offense. The second offense could carry a $500 fine.

The Senate Insurance Committee took no action on a bill by Sen. Don Kincaid, R-Caldwell, to change the way insurance points are awarded.

Complaint Lodged Against Panel Chief

RALEIGH (AP) — An attorney for a textile worker seeking benefits for a severe hearing loss says state Industrial Commission Chairman David V. Brooks intervened improperly in the case last year.

Court documents filed on behalf of John W. Brown of Roanoke Rapids say that Brooks helped close files prematurely in Brown's case and three similar cases. Brooks had represented the insurance company seeking to deny Brown's claim before joining the Industrial Commission.

The decision to close the files shut out vital medical evidence and will results in those claims being rejected, according to the documents filed this week in the state Court of Appeals.

After joining the commission in 1985, Brooks did not actively participate in the decision to exclude evidence in Brown's case. But Brown's attorney argued that all four decisions were based on the same set of facts.

"Brooks' signature is omitted from the orders governing the cases in which he was defense counsel," says the document, filed by Durham attorney Paul Pully Jr. "It seems to belabor the obvious, however, to suggest that Chairman Brooks is calling the shots."

Brooks said Tuesday he did nothing to influence the Brown case.

"That's garbage," Brooks said. "I was not present and did not participate in the deliberations in that case. I've been rigid with myself in removing myself from any case I might have been concerned with."

Pulley is appealing the commission's decision to exclude further evidence in the cases. He hopes to reopen the cases and be able to add medical testimony, which he thinks would allow his clients to win compensation for their alleged hearing losses.

Brown, 62, filed his claim in 1983, asserting that his 30 years of work in a weave room of J.P. Stevens & Co. had caused permanent hearing loss.

Morehead Bridge To Open April 23

MOREHEAD CITY, N.C. (AP) — A new beach bridge at Morehead City will open April 23, but city council members are not excited about paying for the electricity to light the north side of the structure.

"The bridge construction is essentially complete now, with the exception of a guard rail," said Ed Latham, district engineer for the state Department of Transportation. "The contractor said someone tossed a section of it overboard."

Officials said telephone lines from the old bridge will have to be moved, and reflectors must be installed. Because of the work, the bridge will be open for only two lanes of traffic for about three weeks.

During that three-week period, workers will install street lights on the new bridge. Atlantic Beach has agreed to pay about $800 per year to light its side of the structure, but most Morehead City councilmen balked last week at the city paying what the DOT has called Morehead City's share — $540 per year.

City Manager David Walker said the city did have the funds in the budget if the council desired to light the bridge. Council members agreed to invite another DOT representative to attend the next council meeting, set for April 14.

Embassy Spy Ring May Have Given Soviets Access To Codes

By NORMAN BLACK
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A third Marine who was an embassy guard in Moscow was in custody today in a sex-and-spy case, while published reports said the spy ring let the Soviet Union intercept and read virtually all coded communications between the embassy and Washington for up to a year.

The sensitive documents were falling into Soviet hands during the October summit between President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev in Iceland, the Los Angeles Times reported today, citing unidentified sources.

This week's Time magazine says U.S. negotiators in Reykjavik were disturbed by the Soviets' uncannily well-prepared responses to U.S. points.

The United States now realizes that throughout the summit, "we played poker with the Soviets, and they were looking at a mirror over our shoulders," Time quoted an unidentified State Department official as saying.

Staff Sgt. Robert Stanley Stufflebeam, who had commanded the other two Marines arrested in the case, was being held in the brig at Camp Pendleton, Calif., Pentagon spokesman Robert Sims said Tuesday.

In addition to being able to intercept communications, the Times said the Soviets also obtained the identities of Soviet contacts for U.S. intelligence agents in Moscow and U.S. officials fear the Soviets may have laced the embassy with listening devices.

"That ... embassy is one radiating antenna," the newspaper quoted one unidentified official as saying.

However, State Department spokeswoman Phyllis Oakley said Tuesday that U.S. officials expect to have the secure communications by the time Secretary of State George Shultz visits Moscow on April 13.

Damage from the case is regarded as much worse than that caused by former CIA agent Edward Lee Howard, who gave CIA secrets to Moscow before defecting to the Soviets in 1985, the Times said. Howard's disclosures reportedly led the Soviets to execute at least one American contact in Moscow.

But one government official said the Marine guards gave the Soviets "access to the names of every American contact" in the Soviet Union, and, "A lot of things we attributed to Howard may actually have come out of this."

The arrests and the Marine Corps' announcement earlier this week that the entire 28-man guard detatchment in Moscow would be replaced in a "precautionary" move drew sarcasm from a Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman Tuesday.

"We can only smile at what is said about the story that 28 staunch Marines are being withdrawn because they were allegedly unable to withstand the charms of blonde spies," Soviet spokesman Gennady Gerasimov told reporters in Moscow.

The stories indicate the Marines' "inability to resist the enemy," he said.

The Soviet spokesman added the allegations that Soviet women lured Marine guards into espionage sounded like the plot of a lurid spy novel. He did not, however, directly deny it had happened.

The 28 Marine guards being recalled from the Moscow embassy have been told they will be asked to take polygraph tests when they return to the United States, The New York Times reported today.

The newspaper, quoting an unidentified American close to the contingent, said the Marines were told they would be transferred to regular Marine duty if they declined to submit to the tests.

In addition, the Marines were told they would be asked what they knew of any illegal activities, including black market dealings and bringing women into the Marine compound, the Times said.

Stufflebeam, 24, of Bloomington, Ill., had not been accused of espionage, as have two other former Moscow embassy guards: Sgt. Clayton J. Lonetree and Cpl. Arnold Bracy.

Unclassified summaries of the interrogation of Lonetree say he told investigators he received $3,500 from the Soviets, and the corps alleges that Bracy received $1,000 from Lonetree.

Sims said Stufflebeam had commanded Lonetree and Bracy in Moscow and acknowledged he had been arrested last Sunday at Camp Pendleton on the basis of information uncovered in the Lonetree investigation.

Stufflebeam is being held for investigation of violating two military regulations: failure to report all contacts with foreign nationals and making false official statements "during his exit debriefing indicating that no such contacts had occurred."

"Specifically, he is suspected of having associations with Soviet women on several occasions," Sims said.

President Reagan said Tuesday night that replacing the Marine contingent in Moscow, was "simply a precaution."

The president, speaking with reporters following a state dinner for French Prime Minister Jacques Chirac called the case "regrettable."

The 25-year-old Lonetree was the first of the three to be arrested — last December — and has since been charged with two counts of espionage and 22 related counts. Bracy was arrested two weeks ago for investigation of working as an accomplice with Lonetree.

The two were assigned together in Moscow for a period of roughly eight months in 1985 and 1986.

According to the Marine Corps, Stufflebeam served in Moscow for a year — from May 10, 1985, to May 24, 1986 — after working as a guard at two other U.S. embassies.

Guard Rotation Will Take Month

MOSCOW (AP) — The replacement of the 28-man U.S. Embassy Marine guard detachment, two former members of which are charged with espionage, will be completed by the end of April, an embassy official said today.

The Marine corps announced earlier this week it would be replacing the security guards as a "precautionary" measure.

Two former guards, Sgt. Clayton J. Lonetree and Cpl. Arnold Bracy, have been charged with espionage, and U.S. officials announced Tuesday that the man who was their commander has also been arrested.

The third Marine, Staff Sgt. Robert Stanley Stufflebeam, is suspected of failing to report contacts with foreign nationals, including Soviet women, u.S. Officials in Washington said. Regulations require the reporting of all such contacts.

The U.S. Embassy official, who spoke on condition that he not be identified by name, said the Marine rotation would take place "within the next month."

Some of the guards on their way out have been in the Soviet capital only a few weeks, embassy sources said.

Pentagon sources have said both Lonetree and Bracy became involved with Soviet women who worked on the embassy staff, who in turn introduced them to a man who worked for the KGB, the Soviet secret service.

It is the first such breach of security at the embassy since Marines started guarding the compound in 1948, embassy officials said.

The Marines guard the large embassy on Moscow's Garden Ring Road and the ambassador's residence, Spaso House.

Judge Upholds Validity Of Surrogate Contract

Court Rules Biological Mother Has No Claim On Baby

By MICHAEL FLEEMAN
Associated Press Writer

HACKENSACK, N.J. (AP) — A judge's ruling upholding a surrogate mother contract and awarding custody of Baby M to her father is the nation's first on the validity of such agreements, but is certain to be appealed.

Superior Court Judge Harvey R. Sorkow on Tuesday upheld the legality of the arrangement, denied the biological mother, Mary Beth Whitehead, the right to see her child again and granted custody to the father, William Stern.

Minutes after the 121-page ruling was read, Stern's wife Elizabeth adopted the year-old baby and Mrs. Whitehead's lawyer requested a stay of the decision.

The appeal is expected to go directly to the state Supreme Court. Mrs. Whitehead has asked Sorkow that pending the appeal she be allowed to continue seeing the child she called Sara, but who is now Melissa Elizabeth Stern.

The judge ruled that surrogate parenting is not the same as baby-selling because the father "cannot purchase what is already his." He said states should regulate the practice but that it is legal because just as there is a law allowing abortion, "the same law may be used to create and celebrate life."

Just as men have the constitutional right to sell their sperm, women can do what they want with their wombs, Sorkow said, and "a woman with her husband have the right to procreate and rear a family."

The judge described Mrs. Whitehead as manipulative and exploitive, untruthful in testimony and unwilling to accept that her husband's problems, especially his alcoholism, are hers.

Sorkow said Mrs. Whitehead "knew just what she was bargaining for" when she signed the $10,000 surrogate contract and agreed to be inseminated with Stern's sperm.

The Sterns, the judge said, offer a stable and caring environment for the child.

"They have shown no difficulty in coping with crisis," Sorkow said. "It may be anticipated that because the child is unique and at risk, crisis for the next several years will be part of their lives."

The Sterns tearfully expressed sorrow about how their attempt to have a child turned sour. They sympathized with Mrs. Whitehead but said she had left them no alternative to launching the landmark custody case.

Stern promised to be frank with his daughter, who had been in his temporary custody, and his wife said they would not stop her from getting to know Mrs. Whitehead if she chooses.

"We'll have to start telling her right away about a kind woman that wanted to do something nice for us," Stern said. "And then from there we'll have to start telling her how she changed her mind and how things went awry."

Mrs. Whitehead heard the news at her Brick Township home, hours after seeing her baby for what could be the last time. The 29-year-old housewife, mother of two other children, offered no comment.

"She basically anticipated which way the judge was going to rule," said her attorney, Randolph Wolf. "The judge was very hard on her."

"What really is disappointing is that this court has said we will not take into the consideration the morality of this situation," said another of her lawyers, Harold J. Cassidy.

The judge ordered the Sterns to pay Mrs. Whitehead the $10,000 but Wolf said he did not expect her to spend it pending the appeal.

The precedent set by the judge's ruling applies in New Jersey, but Noel Keane, the Dearborn, Mich., lawyer who arranged the Stern-Whitehead contract, said it will be cited in future cases nationwide.

"It gives an infertile couple greater assurance that surrogate parenting agreements will be recognized and enforced," he said.

Mrs. Whitehead signed the contract — she says without reading it — in February 1985 but refused to give up the baby and fled to Florida. Law offficers caught up with her after 87 days, returning the baby to the Sterns, who then sued for permanent custody.

The case generated worldwide debate.

The Vatican condemned surrogate motherhood last month, saying it "offends the dignity of the right of the child," and feminists picketed the courthouse to support Mrs. Whitehead, saying no mother should be forced to give up her baby.

Others say surrogate motherhood exploits poorer women and undermines traditional concepts of family.

"How can that be when the childless husband and wife so very much want a child?" the judge said. "They seek to make a family. ... The male gave his sperm; the female gave her egg in their pre-planned effort to create a child — thus, a contract."

No state regulates the practice, which has led to about 500 births since the first contract in 1976, but Sorkow said legislatures must act.

"It took years of legislative debate and judicial inquiry to define and develop today's laws of abortion and artificial insemination," he said. "With an increasing number of surrogate births, legislation can avoid harm to society, the family and the child."

Surrogate mothers can change their minds until conception, Sorkow ruled. He also nullified a section of the contract that gave the father the right to request an abortion.

Surrogate contracts "hold out so much hope" to the estimated 10 percent to 15 percent of the married couples who cannot have children, he said.

Stern, a 41-year-old biochemist, said he sought surrogacy because his 41-year-old wife, a pediatrician, worried childbirth would aggravate her mild form of multiple sclerosis.

Baby Will Know Of 'A Kind Woman'

HACKENSACK, N.J. (AP) — William and Elizabeth Stern, granted custody of Baby M in a judge's historic decision on surrogate parenting, say they will tell their child "about a kind woman that wanted to do something nice for us."

That woman is the child's biological mother, Mary Beth Whitehead, who lost her battle to Tuesday keep custody of her offspring.

"And then from there we'll have to start telling her how she (Mrs. Whitehead) changed her mind and how things went awry, all the painful things we had to do," Stern said. "It wasn't a lot of fun."

The Sterns promised to start early, perhaps when the youngster turns 2 next March 27.

"I hope she'll understand," said Stern. "I can't predict."

Mrs. Stern said she will not stand in the way if her child wants to know Mrs. Whitehead.

"If she wants to be with Mary Beth, we'll do everything to help her be with Mary Beth," she said.

Legal Professionals Rejoice As Court Supports Third-Party Parenting Plans

By ROBERT BARR
Associated Press Writer

Professionals involved in third-party parenting rejoiced as a New Jersey court upheld the validity of a surrogate contract, while legislators noted the judge's conclusion that the states "should and must regulate" reproductive contracts.

"Surrogate parenting is here to stay," said William Handel, an attorney and director of the Center for Surrogate Parenting in Beverly Hills, Calif.

"There has been significant fear on the part of some patients that they might go through all of this and find that they had a major legal problem," said Dr. Steven N. Taylor, director of The Fertility Institute of New Orleans.

Noel Keane, the Dearborn, Mich., attorney who arranged for Mary Beth Whitehead to be surrogate mother for William Stern's child, said Tuesday's ruling in Stern's favor was important, if not conclusive.

"Although the ruling is not binding outside the state of New Jersey, it does set a precedent that will be cited in any future cases," said Keane. "It gives an infertile couple greater assurance that surrogate parenting agreements will be recognized and enforced."

The judge in the case, Harvey R. Sorkow, noted that there was no state legislation to guide his decision.

"While a state could regulate, indeed should and must regulate the circumstances under which parties enter into reproductive contracts, it could not ban or refuse to enforce such transactions altogether without compelling reason," he said.

New York state Sen. Mary Goodhue, who is sponsoring regulatory legislation, said Sorkow's ruling was helpful.

"He has upheld the validity of the contract," Goodhue said. "He has decided it as a contract question, and that is just what our legislation intends to do."

"The absence of any statute, case law or clearly defined public policy forced Judge Sorkow to make a difficult and painful decision in a dispute which should never have arisen," said New York state Senate Deputy Majority Leader John Dunne, who is sponsoring surrogate mother legislation.

Dunne's bill would require judicial approval of surrogate contracts.

But in Pennsylvania, state Rep. Joe Markosek said the ruling was an incentive for him to push legislation to ban surrogate mothering.

"We already have a string of public policies that prohibit financial enticements to a woman to give up her child in an adoption situation," he said. "We also have a string of laws that prevent the exchange of money in adoptions. I'm trying to add surrogates to eliminate the profit motive, which smacks of child selling."

Sorkow held that a surrogate contract was not child selling, because the father "cannot purchase what is already his."

"There should be no more 'Baby M' cases," said Michigan state Sen. Connie Binsfeld. "Surrogates should be discouraged as public policy."

Phyllis Chesler, a psychologist and a professor of psychology at the College of Staten Island and a founder of the Committee for Mary Beth Whitehead, condemned the decision as a "form of child abuse and sex discrimination."

Mrs. Whitehead's "only sin was that she changed her mind and her only crime was that she was working class," said Ms. Chesler.

Members Of Congress Reject Pay Raise

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than 12 percent of the members of Congress say they will either give back or give away a $12,100 pay raise that begins appearing in their paychecks today, according to a survey by consumer advocate Ralph Nader.

The survey released Tuesday by a Nader group called Stop the Salary Grab listed 56 House members and 12 senators who said as of last Friday they planned to reject the raise. Some said they would give it to charity.

Two congressmen on the list said Tuesday they would take the increase and at least one senator said his name should be added.

"It's fitting that the first installment of this backhanded salary grab appears in congressional paychecks on April Fool's Day," Nader said. "Congress intentionally tried to fool the American taxpayer when it sidestepped the voting process to pocket this pay hike through the back door."

The House allowed congressional and other top government salaries to rise automatically in February, although a majority of members voted against the pay raise after it apparently was too late to have any effect. A lawsuit has been filed against the increase.

The raise from $77,400 to $89,500 actually began accumulating the first of March, and the first of it — an extra $1,000 approximately — appears in paychecks that come out today.

The Nader group said it surveyed all members of Congress, initially by mail and with a telephone follow-up to see who would refuse the pay raise.

Besides the 68 who rejected the raise, 100 said they either would not disclose their decision or said they hadn't decided yet. The remaining members said they would accept it, according to the Nader survey. There are 100 senators and 434 members of the House; one House seat is vacant.

"We suspect the survey may spur some others" to give the pay raise to charity or back to the Treasury, given the political pressures from constituents, Nader spokesman Craig McDonald said.

But two Republican congressmen — Rep. Bill Emerson of Missouri, and Rep. Jim Leach of Iowa — said that although their names were on the list, they would accept the raise.

Emerson spokesmen Jim Hunter and Leach spokesman Andy McLeod both said their congressmen were listed because of a miscommunication between their staffs and Nader's group.

Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., whose name was not on the list, said through a spokesman he would write a check to the Treasury each month for the amount of the raise.

Spokesman Jack Pridgen said it would be part of Chiles' overall effort to reduce the federal deficit.

Of the 68 on the list, 30 are Republicans and 38 are Democrats. They include only two members of the House or Senate leadership: Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., and Senate Assistant Minority Leader Alan Simpson, R-Wyo.

Along with hefty salary increases for federal judges and top-level federal workers, President Reagan in January recommended the 15.6 percent pay raise for Congress, which then had 30 days to disapprove it.

The Senate rejected it on Jan. 29. On Feb. 3, House leaders quickly adjourned the chamber without taking a vote, thus allowing the raise to take effect.

Since then, however, opponents have raised questions in their U.S. District Court lawsuit about whether Feb. 3 was the 30th day or whether it fell on Feb. 4 when the House voted it down.

Major Congressional Fight Looms Over Navy Plea For New Carriers

By TIM AHERN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — There will likely "be quite a fight" when the full House is asked to buy two more aircraft carriers for the Navy, according to the congressman representing the district where the giant warships would be built.

A House subcommittee Tuesday voted 14-0 approval of President Reagan's request for $644 million in the fiscal year starting Oct. 1. That money would be the down payment on the $7 billion the carriers are expected finally to cost.

It was the first, tentative decision by the 100th Congress on defense spending. The vote in the seapower subcommittee of the Armed Services Committee came as several subcommittees began marking up defense budgets for their various areas.

The full committee is expected to vote next week on its version, sending it to the floor of the Democratic-controlled House later this spring. The same process will later be followed in the Senate, and the differing bills that pass each chamber will be reconciled by a House-Senate conference committee.

Reagan sought $312 billion for the Pentagon, which would be an increase after inflation of 3 percent, but legislators of both parties say defense spending is likely to remain at the current level.

One of the most controversial requests is for the carriers. Critics say the Navy cannot afford to start two more carriers when defense budgets are being frozen or cut as part of the drive to reduce federal deficits.

Rep. Herbert Bateman, R-Va., a member of the seapower subcommittee, said Tuesday that "I anticipate there will be quite a fight on this when it reaches the floor. I would hope reason will prevail and we'll win."

Rep. Charles Bennett, D-Fla., said he was originally cool to the Navy's request but now thinks, "we need these ships." Bennett is chairman of the seapower panel, which is traditionally one of the strongest supporters of the Navy's requests.

Bateman represents the Newport News area of Virginia. The Newport News Shipbuilding & Drydock Co. is the only American shipyard capable of building the giant ships.

The Navy says the two carriers would not enter the fleet until the middle of the next decade, at the earliest. They would replace ships which would then be up to 45 years old, and the total U.S. carrier fleet would remain at 15.

One carrier, the Theodore Roosevelt, was recently launched at Newport News while two more, the George Washington and the Abraham Lincoln, are under construction.

All those carriers, along with the two tentatively approved Tuesday, would be nuclear-powered and would be Nimitz-class ships, which are the largest warships built by the United States. The USS Nimitz itself was commissioned in 1975. It is almost 1,100 feet long, can sail at better than 30 knots, and supports about 95 planes.

The carriers were among the major items approved Tuesday by the panel in support of Reagan's goal of building to a 600-ship Navy.

The panel also approved a number of other ships. Among them are one Trident missile-firing submarine in each of the next two fiscal years at a cost of $1.4 billion each; five more fast-attack submarines in the next two fiscal years at a total cost of $3.4 billion; and authorization to begin building a new type of fast-attack sub.

GOP Senators Say Housing Bill Bad

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate passed and is sending to the House a two-year, $38.3 billion federal housing bill that two Republicans say should be vetoed if it reaches President Reagan.

The Senate approved the legislation 71-27 on Tuesday even though GOP senators objected to the continuation of an urban development program and a plan to provide interest-free loans to low and median-income, first-time homebuyers in distressed areas.

Sen. William L. Armstrong, R-Colo., said he hoped Reagan would veto the bill if necessary and believed Republicans can muster the votes to sustain it. If all senators vote, it would take 34 votes to prevent an override.

Sen. Gordon J. Humphrey, R-N.H., said if Congress were serious about balancing the nation's budget, it would set its "priorities in the authorization process and not simply shift that task to the appropriations process."

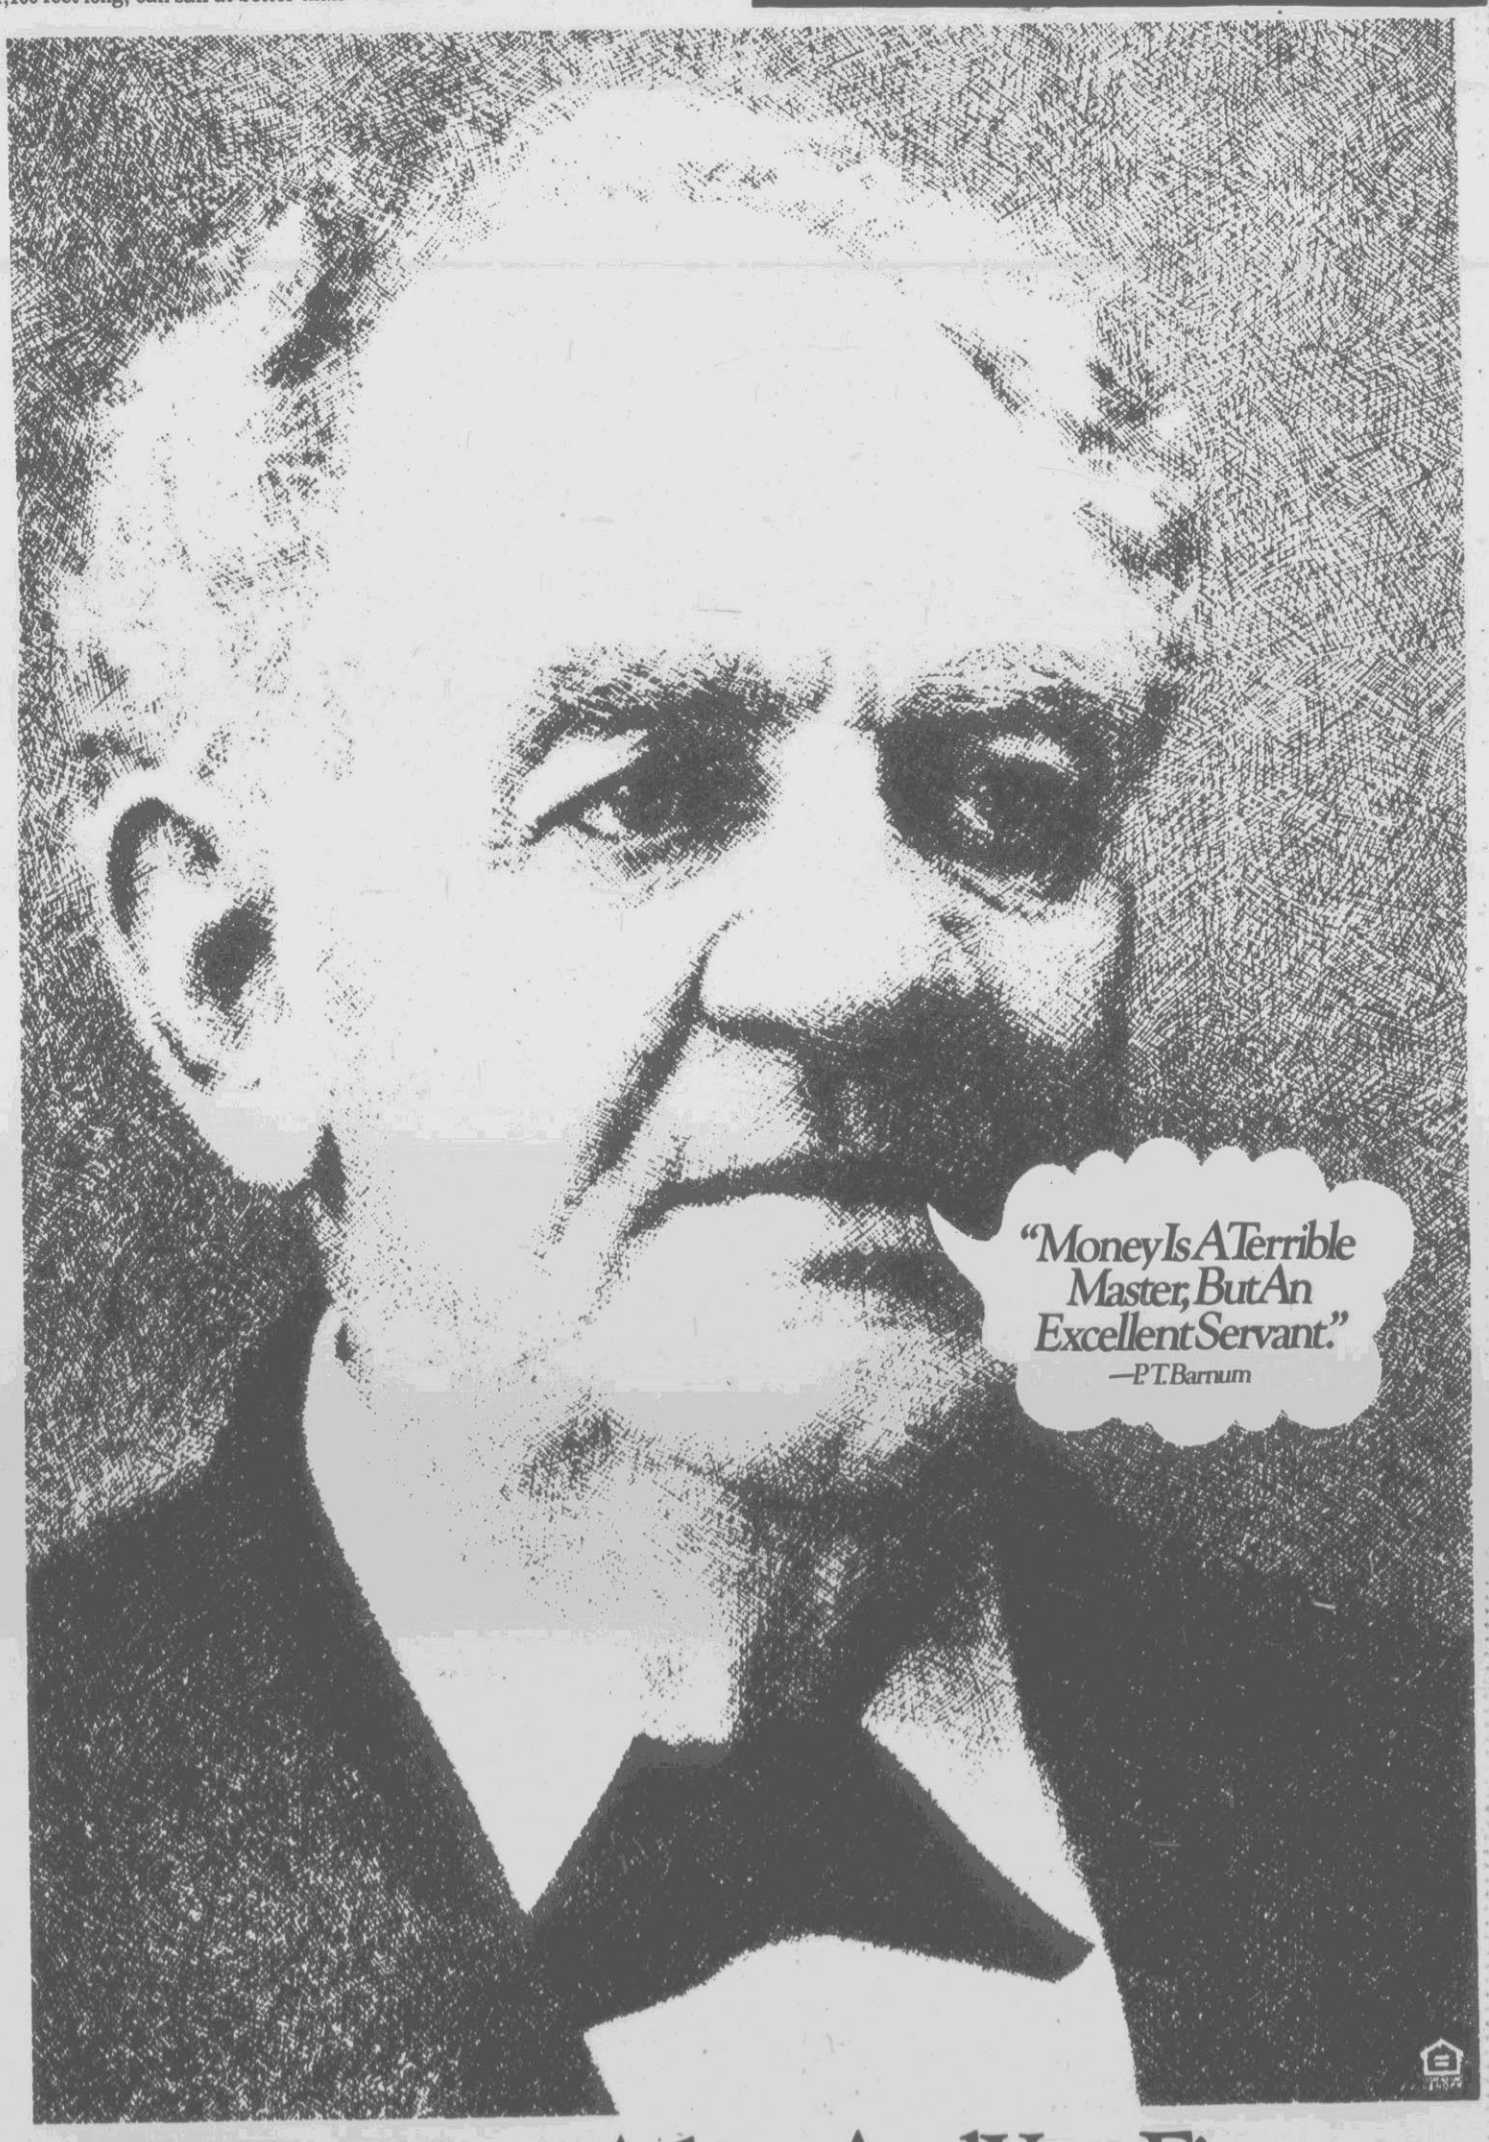

"I hope the president will see through this maze of unnecessary and fiscally irresponsible programs and wield his veto pen yet again to prevent this kind of frivolous spending," he said.

Overall, the bill would authorize $18.8 billion in 1988 and $19.5 billion in 1989 for housing programs administered by the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

In the House, Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez, D-Texas, chairman of the banking subcommittee, is calling for a one-year authorization of $22.3 billion for housing programs, $9 billion more than this year's appropriation.

Church Group Schedules Meeting To Consider Bakker Resignation

DUNN, N.C. (AP) — The North Carolina district of the Assemblies of God will consider the resignations of PTL founder Jim Bakker and the Rev. Richard Dortch next week, but will not make its decision public, the district superintendent says.

The 16 members of the Presbytery Board have been asked to meet April 7 at the district office in Dunn, the Rev. Charles Cookman, the North Carolina superintendent for the Assemblies of God, said Tuesday.

The denomination does not automatically accept resignations and has the choice of dismissing a minister rather than accepting his resignation.

"The Presbytery can decide to accept a resignation from a minister, revoke a minister's credentials or suspend for rehabilitation and restoration, which a minister must request," Cookman said in a prepared statement released by his office.

The decision of the board will be sent to the church's Executive Presbytery, Cookman said. No decision will be announced by the district office "because a minister's credentials are a confidential matter."

Bakker resigned March 19 as head of PTL and from the denomination, saying he had been blackmailed after a 1980 sexual encounter with a former church secretary. Later, Bakker said the alleged blackmail was part of an effort by a rival evangelist to take over PTL.

But the Executive Presbytery of the Assemblies of God issued a statement after a meeting last week in Springfield, Mo., saying its investigation had found no indication of either a takeover attempt or blackmail. "On the contrary," the statement said, "the evidence seems to indicate that effort and money have been expended to cover moral failure."

Dortch also submitted his resignation from the denomination on March 19 but did not give a reason. The new PTL board last week named Dortch president and TV host, replacing Bakker.

Dorth negotiated a $265,000 settlement to benefit Jessica Hahn, a New York woman who complained about a 1980 sexual encounter with Bakker, according to a representative for Ms. Hahn. At the time, Dortch was PTL's executive director.

In a news conference Friday, the Rev. Jimmy Swaggart said Dortch should resign — "him being involved in a cover-up ... It is impossible for him to continue."

Swaggart is also a member of the Assemblies of God denomination.

Dortch has been invited to attend next week's meeting to answer questions about his ministry and to discuss his resignation.

The Rev. Tom Whidden, pastor of Concord's First Assembly of God and assistant superintendent of the North Carolina District Council of the Assemblies of God, told The Charlotte Observer last week that Dortch had been invited as a courtesy.

"Because of all the publicity, I feel like we're just being nice to Brother Dortch," Whidden told the newspaper. "We're saying to him, 'You have requested this resignation. We're going to be discussing it. You can be there."

TOWER CLOSED — A temporary sign posted on a sidewalk sign informs the public that the Prayer Tower, in left background, at Oral Roberts University has been closed. Oral Roberts Says Ministry Needs More Than $8 Million

By GIL BROYLES
Associated Press Writer

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Oral Roberts, esconced in his gleaming prayer tower, urged the faithful to keep donations coming after the TV evangelist met what he said was a life-or-death mandate from God to raise $8 million by today.

The 69-year-old Roberts promised to give details today about his widely criticized effort to raise money for medical missionary scholarships.

Roberts said the 10-day prayer vigil concluded Tuesday had "rekindled the healing presence in my right hand like it was when I began in 1947. ... My hand, right now, feels like it is on fire."

Roberts said his healing powers had seemed to "recede to some extent" recently.

The $8 million goal for assisting Oral Roberts University students was reached earlier in the month, but he said in a remote hookup on his son's "Richard Roberts Live" TV program that his ministry needs more.

Roberts received widespread criticism after saying Jan. 4 that God told him to raise $8 million by March 31 or he would "call me home." He has not said how much above the $8 million mark has been raised.

"You know, the devil almost tricked us because the news media feels that it's their job to play up on the more sensational, which was the $8 million to turn the medical school around by putting them under scholarship," Roberts said Tuesday.

"That $8 million captured the attention of the world. But what they failed to bring out was what I said, was that God said to me, 'You must raise this $8 million above the regular needs of the ministry, above the support base.'

"Getting the $8 million is absolutely essential, but it will not answer anything if the regular needs of the ministry are not met."

Lace Collar Trims Knitted Sweater-Jacket

Pat's Pointers
Pat Trexler

Put on this ultrafeminine knit sweater-jacket and you'll instantly feel like a queen. The soft scoop neckline trimmed with a fashionble knitted lace collar and the dainty edging on the sleeves, front and bottom, add up to a truly royal look.

This elegant jacket is fashioned quickly with double strands of soft-as-a-cloud "eyelash" sports yarn, which results in an intriguing tufted texture. Simply put together with dropped shoulders, three-quarter sleeves and seven buttons down the front, this winner will be a welcome addition to any lady's wardrobe.

Directions are given for small, medium and large sizes with finished bust measurements of 36¼, 39 and 41 3/4 inches respectively, with a stitch guage of 4½ stitches to the inch.

To obtain instructions for knitting the Pure Elegance sweater, send your request for Leaflet No. Z-032987 with $2 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler Crafts, The Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 419148, Kansas City, Mo. 64141.

Or you may order Kit No. K-032987 by sending check or money order for $41.95 for the small, $47.95 for the medium or large to Pat Trexler at the same address. Kit price includes shipping charges, full instructions and white yarns.

DEAR PAT: From time to time, I see patterns in your column and elsewhere that are made with multiple strands of yarn — two, three or even four strands "at the same time." I may be dense, but I just don't quite know how to do this. Also, why would you want to use more than one strand at a time? — A PUZZLED READER FROM NEBRASKA

When you are told to knit or crochet with more than one strand at a time, you simply hold all strands together and work with them as if they were a single strand. If you have never done it, this may sound awkard to you.

I'd suggest that you make a sample swatch casting on or chaining just a small number of stitches. Then, knit or crochet a few rows with two strands (one each from two skeins of yarn).

Use a larger needle or hook than you would with a single stand. Then move up a size or two with your implements and add a third strand, again working several rows. Once you feel comfortable with this number of strands, you need never worry about using multiple strands.

You will quickly see that the only difference is that you need to take care that you pull through all strands for every stitch. In knitting, in particular, don't make the mistake of making two or more stitches out of one double or triple-stranded stitch from the previous row.

You might find it helpful to place all the skeins in use in a plastic bag. Pull up one strand from each skein and then loosely fasten the bag with a tie such as the type you find on bread wrappers. This keeps the separate skeins neatly in place as you work.

The purpose of multiple strands is usually to speed up your knitting or crocheting. You will use larger-than-usual needles or hooks and each stitch will be larger than those worked on a single strand with smaller ones. In other cases, a different color is used for each strand to create a tweed look with solid-color harns. Yarns with different textures can be used to achieve special textural effects.

This is a good way to use odd dye lot and/or leftover yarns. A striking sweater or vest can be made with random tweed striping, for example. Start with one strand each of Colors A and B for several rows. Then follow the stripe of Colors B/C, then C/D and so on. Stripes are really more interesting if they are of varying widths so you can just let your imagination run wild, limited only by the amount of each yarn you have on hand.

With all of the relatively expensive, but elegant designer yarns available today, some really exciting looks can be achieved by combining one strand of the designer yarn with a strand or two of a less expensive one. When using multiple strands on large needles, you will use less of each than you would if using them singly on smaller needles, so this can be a cost-cutting technique, especially if you happen to find the more expensive yarn reduced at an odd-dye lot sale!

Church Group Schedules Meeting To Consider Bakker Resignation

DUNN, N.C. (AP) — The North Carolina district of the Assemblies of God will consider the resignations of PTL founder Jim Bakker and the Rev. Richard Dortch next week, but will not make its decision public, the district superintendent says.

The 16 members of the Presbytery Board have been asked to meet April 7 at the district office in Dunn, the Rev. Charles Cookman, the North Carolina superintendent for the Assemblies of God, said Tuesday.

The denomination does not automatically accept resignations and has the choice of dismissing a minister rather than accepting his resignation.

"The Presbytery can decide to accept a resignation from a minister, revoke a minister's credentials or suspend for rehabilitation and restoration, which a minister must request," Cookman said in a prepared statement released by his office.

The decision of the board will be sent to the church's Executive Presbytery, Cookman said. No decision will be announced by the district office "because a minister's credentials are a confidential matter."

Bakker resigned March 19 as head of PTL and from the denomination, saying he had been blackmailed after a 1980 sexual encounter with a former church secretary. Later, Bakker said the alleged blackmail was part of an effort by a rival evangelist to take over PTL.

But the Executive Presbytery of the Assemblies of God issued a statement after a meeting last week in Springfield, Mo., saying its investigation had found no indication of either a takeover attempt or blackmail. "On the contrary," the statement said, "the evidence seems to indicate that effort and money have been expended to cover moral failure."

Dortch also submitted his resignation from the denomination on March 19 but did not give a reason. The new PTL board last week named Dortch president and TV host, replacing Bakker.

Dorth negotiated a $265,000 settlement to benefit Jessica Hahn, a New York woman who complained about a 1980 sexual encounter with Bakker, according to a representative for Ms. Hahn. At the time, Dortch was PTL's executive director.

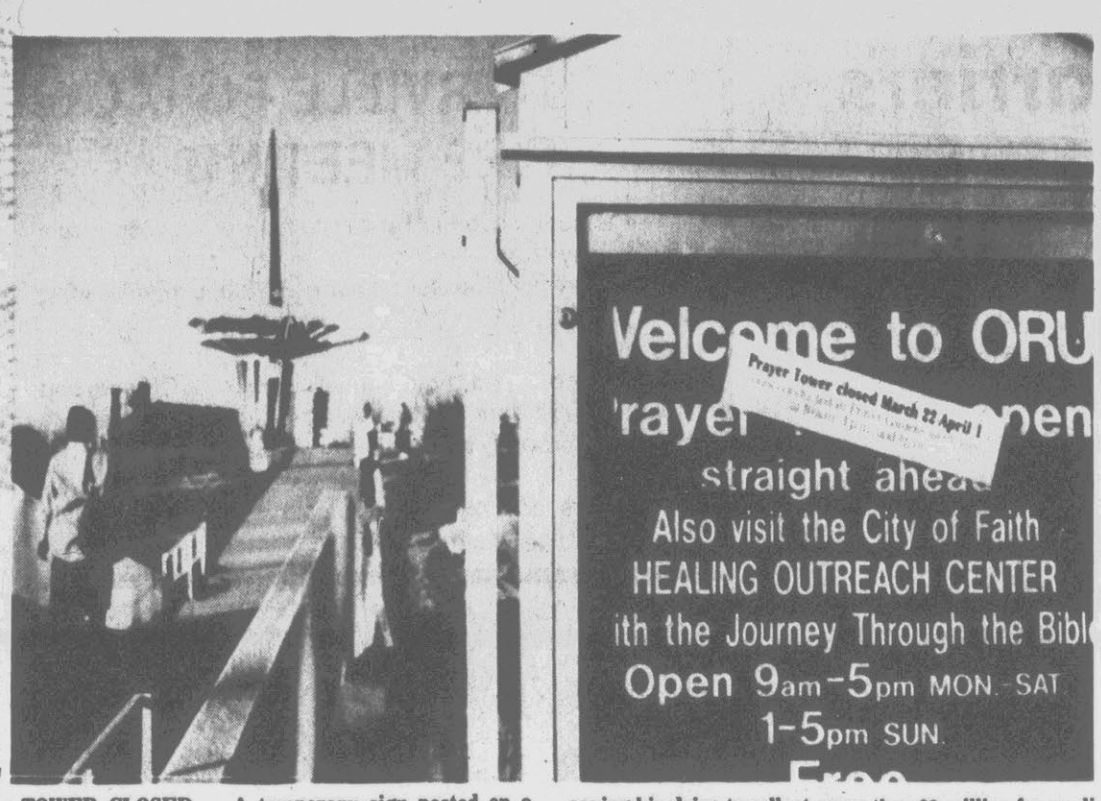

In a news conference Friday, the Rev. Jimmy Swaggart said Dortch should resign — "him being involved in a cover-up ... It is impossible for him to continue."

Swaggart is also a member of the Assemblies of God denomination.

Dortch has been invited to attend next week's meeting to answer questions about his ministry and to discuss his resignation.

The Rev. Tom Whidden, pastor of Concord's First Assembly of God and assistant superintendent of the North Carolina District Council of the Assemblies of God, told The Charlotte Observer last week that Dortch had been invited as a courtesy.

"Because of all the publicity, I feel like we're just being nice to Brother Dortch," Whidden told the newspaper. "We're saying to him, 'You have requested this resignation. We're going to be discussing it. You can be there."

TOWER CLOSED — A temporary sign posted on a sidewalk sign informs the public that the Prayer Tower, in left background, at Oral Roberts University has been closed. Roberts ended a 10-day vigil in the tower Tuesday, saying his drive to collect more than $8 million for medical missionaries had been completed. He had claimed God would call him "home" if the money was not raised. (AP Laserphoto)

Oral Roberts Says Ministry Needs More Than $8 Million

By GIL BROYLES
Associated Press Writer

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Oral Roberts, esconced in his gleaming prayer tower, urged the faithful to keep donations coming after the TV evangelist met what he said was a life-or-death mandate from God to raise $8 million by today.

The 69-year-old Roberts promised to give details today about his widely criticized effort to raise money for medical missionary scholarships.

Roberts said the 10-day prayer vigil concluded Tuesday had "rekindled the healing presence in my right hand like it was when I began in 1947. ... My hand, right now, feels like it is on fire."

Roberts said his healing powers had seemed to "recede to some extent" recently.

The $8 million goal for assisting Oral Roberts University students was reached earlier in the month, but he said in a remote hookup on his son's "Richard Roberts Live" TV program that his ministry needs more.

Roberts received widespread criticism after saying Jan. 4 that God told him to raise $8 million by March 31 or he would "call me home." He has not said how much above the $8 million mark has been raised.

"You know, the devil almost tricked us because the news media feels that it's their job to play up on the more sensational, which was the $8 million to turn the medical school around by putting them under scholarship," Roberts said Tuesday.

"That $8 million captured the attention of the world. But what they failed to bring out was what I said, was that God said to me, 'You must raise this $8 million above the regular needs of the ministry, above the support base.'

"Getting the $8 million is absolutely essential, but it will not answer anything if the regular needs of the ministry are not met."

PCMH Volunteers Honored

Pitt County Memorial Hospital's over 500 volunteers were recognized Tuesday night at the seventh annual volunteer banquet. Over 40,272 hours of service were rendered to the hospital last year.

"Once a year the hospital staff has opportunity to say a special 'thank you' to the hundreds of citizens that come to work each week as hospital volunteers. People from every background and all walks of life make up the PCMH force; each offering their own unique skills to assit the patients, families and staff. The volunteers epitomize the hospital's motto 'People Care More Here," said Etsil Mason, director of volunteer services at the hospital.

"The health care team encompasses a myriad of professions. Accountants, technologists, physicians, housekeepers and nurses are just five of the more than 400 separate job listings. One job is not listed in our personnel records; but without it, we would have difficulty in providing the kind of service we do," said Ms. Mason.

The top 10 volunteers giving over 700 plus hours introduced by Ms. Mason included Bob Price, Mary Craft, Eli Bloom, Guy Watkins, Ann Stalls, Dr. Al Conley, Edythe Price, Gertie Turner, Louise Harrod and B.F. Good. Price's total hours last year were 1,237. Ms. Stalls total hours are over seven thousand during a period of several years.

The theme for the evening was Volunteers: Heart of the Health Care Team. Certificates and pins were presented each volunteer by Ms. Mason assisted by Jennifer King and Barbara Clark.

Special guests introduced included PCMH board members, Pitt County commissioners and various hospital staff members.

Entertainment for the event was provided by Henry Queen, artist in residence at Pitt Community College.

HOSPITAL VOLUNTEERS — The annual volunteer recognition banquet was held Tuesday evening at the Greenville Country Club. Etsil Mason, director of volunteer services at PCMH, is pictured with Ann Stalls, seated.

Boys And Toys Cause Tragedies

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: It was a beautiful spring day in Ellisville, so I went for a walk in my neighborhood park. Through the trees I saw three boys with several pellet guns intently tracking something. There was a flutter of feathers, several barely aimed shots, then some peals of laughter.

I was so angry and upset that by the time I found the badly injured bird, I was speechless. When those boys saw the tears in my eyes as I picked up the dying creature to humanely put it out of its misery, I think they knew.

So, if you are looking for the first robin of spring in my neighborhood — it's dead. I buried it down by the creek. — KAREN KRUMREY, ELLISVILLE, MO.

DEAR KAREN: Your letter moved me to tears. Those three cruel, misguided boys in Ellisville may not see this, but it will be seen by the parents of an untold number of children whose toys include pellet guns that could conceivably injure a family pet, blind a child, or kill the first robin of spring.

It is the responsibility of parents to raise moral children to have reverence for life and to respect all living creatures. And why must children "play" with guns, anyway?

DEAR ABBY: Please print this:

An Open Letter to Wedding Guests:

After eight months of planning, and several thousand dollars, my daughter's wedding was beautiful. Thank you all for coming.

Unfortunately, some of you will not receive a thank-you note for your lovely presents. The reason should be obvious: the practice of bringing a gift to the reception is becoming the norm rather than the exception. Very late in the evening, after the newlyweds had departed, the caterer had been paid and the reception was over, the family was faced with loading hundreds of presents into the too few remaining cars. Naturally, when the gifts were unloaded, some had cards attached, some did not. And don't forget the loose cards found on the floor, on tables, etc.

So, if you receive a note thanking you for the "lovely present," don't blame my daughter for not specifically mentioning your gift. She has no idea who gave her that place setting of sterling silver. We have loose gift cards, and we have gifts with no cards. How can she possibly thank each of you?

Incidentally, the guests who (properly) sent their presents to our home before the wedding received a thank-you note by return mail! — MOTHER OF THE BRIDE

DEAR MOTHER: Your open letter appears to have been written by a woman with a closed mind.

There is no excuse for the cards to be "loose," lost or dropped on the floor; the thoughtful bride asks a member of the family or a close personal friend to see that the cards and gifts are kept together in an orderly fashion. And by the way, it is not considered "improper" to bring a wedding gift to the reception.

DEAR ABBY: After two years of dating Rick, a very loving and good man, he opened his eyes one night in the middle of making love and asked, "Say, what does your gas bill run a month?"

I was hurt and dumbfounded and haven't spoken to him since. (We are both in our late 40s.) What should I do? — HURT

DEAR HURT: Tell him you were hurt and why. Rick may be a loving and good man, but his timing is poor.

(For Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding," send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.)

'Miracle Baby' Doing Fine

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Successful open heart surgery on Kimberly Renee Register at the Children's Hospital in Greenville has given the tiny girl, now almost 6 months old, a chance for a normal life, her parents say.

Kimberly went home March 16 from the Children's Hospital component of Pitt County Memorial Hospital to Comfort, a community 30 miles south of Kinston. Prior to two weeks ago, her whole life had been spent in a hospital, mostly the Children's Hospital in Greenville. Her delighted parents sing the praises of God, of cardiologist Dr. Peter Harris, of Dr. Randolph Chitwood, the surgeon who closed a hole between two major arteries near her heart, and of the staff of the PCMH neonatal unit.

Margaret Register said she had no clue that her first child might be premature until Oct. 6 when Kimberly started being born and being born fast. Mother and baby were first in Lenoir Memorial Hospital in Kinston, but Kimberly was transferred by helicopter to a neonatal intensive center in Charlottesville, Va., the day she was born. Her chances for survival did not look good. She was 2½ months premature, weighed one pound, 12 ounces and had an opening between two vital arteries, a condition which was expected to greatly interfere with her development and endanger her life.

Durwood and Margaret Register went to visit their daughter in Charlottesville as soon as Mrs. Register was released from Lenoir Memorial. They were pleased when word came that there was an opening in the Neonatal Intensive Care Unit of Pitt Memorial and she could be transferred closer home. She was flown to Greenville by airplane and then taken to Pitt Memorial from the Pitt-Greenville Airport by ground ambulance.

Once she was here, Dr. Peter Harris evaluated her condition and told her parents that he preferred to wait until Kimberly was considerably larger to repair the "window" between the arteries. He explained to them that the circulatory abnormality had nothing to do with her prematurity, but that being so small would greatly decrease her chances of surviving the surgery. He believed it would be best to let her grow as much as possible — that every gram of body weight she added would better the possibility of her living through the surgery and recovering. He also warned, however, that the circulatory condition itself would be likely to impede growth. He explained that the opening between an artery that goes to the lungs and one that goes to other parts of the body would cause the lungs to get too much blood and be congested and the rest of the body not to get enough. If growth stopped or slowed appreciably at any point, he said, then the surgery would be considered immediately necessary.

Kimberly did grow steadily, however, so it was possible to delay the surgery until she weighed a little more than seven pounds. Then her operation was set for Feb. 24.

In the meantime, however, there were some close calls. Normally only parents can visit in the Neonatal Unit. But on November 22 — the Registers' wedding anniversary — the couple was called and told that any family members who wanted to see Kimberly should come, that she had an infection in her blood and wasn't expected to live through the day.

"A crowd of us — my wife and me and our family and friends — went to Greenville," Durwood Register recalled. "And, when we got there, we all prayed. And as soon as we started praying, our baby started getting better. People who don't believe in the power of prayer just need to come and talk to me."

Register, a battery salesman, said he had never been a religious person before his daughter was born, but that since her birth he has "received Jesus."

"This baby would fit in the palm of my hand when she was born," he said. "And her chances looked so slim. Nobody knows what my wife and I have been through, hoping and praying that she'd live and be all right, but us and the Lord. But now she's doing fine and we're just so thankful to have her."

Margaret Register says she's been told by Dr. Peter Harris, her daughter's pediatric cardiologist, that Kimberly's heart is "just as good as mine or yours" now that the opening between the two major arteries has been repaired. Dr. Harris said the closure was done with a synthetic graft that apparently worked beautifully. "Her heart sounds are good," he said, "and she's thriving. In about six months, we'll do a catherization to be sure, but we don't expect any problems."

He said Kimberly is not the youngest patient who has had open heart surgery at Pitt Memorial, that newborns have been operated on. She is, however, one of the youngest and smallest. He said "The beauty of what was done for Kimberly was the excellent care she received in the neonatal unit while we got her up to optimum size to withstand the surgery she needed. There have been great strides in neonatal nutrition and other care to make her degree of well-being possible."

Mrs. Register also praised the care Kimberly received in the neonatal unit. She and her husband and her sister, Doris Whaley, visited often, and other members of both families went when they could. "I went every time I got the chance," she said, "but I never worried about the kind of care she was getting when I wasn't there. I could tell that those nurses and doctors loved my baby and took good care of her. Kimberly's primary nurse, Vanessa Beamer, cried when Kimberly went home. She had gotten that attached to her during the five months she was there."

Mrs. Register's mother, Ernestine Moody, summed up the family's thankfulness. "Kimberly is our little miracle baby," she said. "And we're so glad we've got her. There's no way we can ever thank enough all the people at Pitt Memorial. They seem to love her just like we do."

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The first increase in the prime lending rate since 1984 sent stock prices broadly lower today.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 22.30 points to 2282.39 as of 10 a.m. EST on Wall Street.

Declining issues outstripped advancers with 1,315 stocks falling, 124 rising and 137 unchanged on the New York Stock Exchange.

Volume totaled 30.16 million shares.

Manufacturers Hanover Corp. today joined Citibank and Chase Manhattan in lifting its prime rate one-quarter point to 7.75 percent, the first increase in the base lending rate since mid-1984, when banks raised the prime to 13 percent from 12.5 percent.

Analysts agreed the increase was behind the market's drop, but split on how long the decline would last.

Topping the most active list was IBM, which dropped ¾ to 149⅜.

Among the big losers was Digital Equipment, which fell 1 to 160⅝ and McDonnell Douglas, which fell 1⅛ to 77.

Bucking the downward move was Texas Instruments, which jumped 4⅜ to 189⅞.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks fell 1.76 to 164.13. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index dropped 3.05 to 329.61.

Guerrillas Sought

were in the barracks, which was destroyed along with the command post and officers mess.

The clandestine guerrilla radio station Radio Farabundo Marti broadcast a statement calling the attack a "total success because we completed the main objective of destroying the forces inside the brigade."

The assault began at 2 a.m. and lasted 2½ hours, the military said. The guerrillas attacked from three sides, said base commander Col. Gilberto Rubio who had scratches and burns on his face and arms.

The guerrillas fired cannons, mortars and grenade, and some entered the compound carrying explosives.

The rebel radio claimed the guerrillas overran the base 10 minutes after beginning their attack and remained inside until about 6 a.m.

Hours after the attack, the air at the base was thick with smoke and the acrid smell of burning flesh. Dazed soldiers loaded the charred remains of their friends into plastic bags.

The bodies of the dead guerrillas lay in the scorching sun.

Troops from the U.S.-trained elite Atlacatl Batallion arrived later Tuesday reinforce the base. Military officials said patrols were sent into the surrounding mountains to hunt for the guerrillas.

Military officials said an investigation was begun to determine how the attack occurred on the garrison, which is considered one of the army's best and is surrounded by dozens of security posts. Half of the base was destroyed in a 1983 attack.

Blandon said he did not know the number of attackers. One military official, speaking on condition of anonymity, estimated about 100 rebels took part.

The attack was the largest since a June 1986 guerrilla assault on the army base at San Miguel, 86 miles east of San Salvador. The military said 50 soldiers were killed or wounded there, but the rebels claimed they inflicted 250 casualties.

Fronius was the first U.S. military adviser killed during battle in the war between the U.S.-backed government and leftist guerrillas, grouped as the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front.

Lt. Cmdr. Albert Schaufelberger, deputy commander of the American advisers, was shot to death May 26, 1983 on a university campus in San Salvador.

Four off-duty U.S. Embassy Marine guards were killed June 19, 1985, in a guerrilla attack on two sidewalk cafes in the capital.

At least five CIA employees also have died in El Salvador, one in the crash of a Salvadoran military helicopter last week.

U.S. advisers instruct in classrooms and during exercises but do not take part in combat missions or enter areas where fighting is likely. They are armed and may return fire.

The U.S. Congress has limited the number of U.S. advisers in El Salvador at any one time to 55.

An estimated 62,000 people have been killed since the civil war began. Human rights groups say most were civilians.

sensitive to freezing temperatures as harvest time approaches.

"I think they'll survive another freeze Saturday night. But if it comes two weeks from now, they'll be more vulnerable," he said.

At 6:30 a.m., the National Weather Service reported the temperature at 27 degrees in Greensboro, tying a record set in 1964. The low temperature at Raleigh-Durham Airport was 26, breaking the previous record low of 29 set in 1964. Other low temperatures early today included Asheville at 22, Charlotte at 30 and Winston-Salem at 29.

Carl Gallimore, 53, said his father and other Montgomery County peach growers used to burn truckloads of old tires in hopes the smoke would keep the trees from freezing.

"We used to have this country smoked up so much, in the morning you couldn't see the sun come up," Gallimore told the News and Observer of Raleigh Tuesday. "I worked all day, all night trying to save them, but I ended up losing as many as I would have if I hadn't done anything.

Saturday at 9:30 a.m. at the Bunting Track on the campus of East Carolina University. The Washington Community Band will perform and there will be a flag presentation by Senior Games participants. Local dignitaries will attend the ceremony.

Saturday's activities, most of which will take place at the track, include a 5-kilometer race beginning at 8:45 a.m., men's and women's walk races beginning at 10:15 a.m., shuffleboard and horseshoes at 11:30 a.m. and a softball throw at 11:30 p.m. Croquet will take place at 1 p.m., as will the football throw, basketball shooting and spin casting.

The closing ceremonies will be held at 3:30 p.m. Saturday. Medals from Saturday's events will be presented.

The purpose of the Senior Games is to "improve the quality of life for older adults," said coordinator Carol Shields of the recreation coordinator for the Pitt County schools.

"We encourage older adults to get involved in year-round recreational activities," she said. "Then they can come out to the Senior Games and celebrate what they do year round."

The event is sponsored by the Pitt County Community Schools, the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department and East Carolina University.

Local first-place winners will compete in the state Senior Games competition.

In anticipation of the Senior Games events, older adults in the Greenville area have been "in training" for the competitions. The Greenville Recreation and Parks Department has provided facilities at Elm Street gym for the participants to practice three times a week for eight of the Senior Games events.

Mrs. Shields said several local adults hold state Senior Games records in the events.

Ferret Owner Upset

statement from a licensed veterinarian saying the ferret has been spayed or neutered," said Freeman, who wrote the legislation which was introduced Monday night.

"This would allow anyone who currently has one to keep it and allow it to live out its natural life. It will stop the breeding of ferrets."

Permits would not be available after Jan. 1, 1988, under the bill, according to Freeman, who said the legislation is being sought for health and safety reasons.

"As a 'pet,' the number of ferrets are increasing very rapidly not only in North Carolina but across the country," he said. "The number of injuries to infants and small children is increasing accordingly."

Ferrets have been known to crawl into cribs and chew on the appendages of infants, according to Freeman, who said rabies is another consideration for the ferret regulation measure.

"The ferret is not native to North Carolina," he said. "There are other areas in the country where escaped or loose ferrets are breeding in the wild. They are capable of having and transmitting viruses. We don't need another rabies vector in North Carolina."

However, Siders says ferrets make good pets and only a minimal number of rabies cases involving the animals have been reported.

"They're litter trainable. They can live in apartments, trailers, dorms for students and with Marines at Cherry Point," Siders said. "They're a small animal. They don't bark and they don't scratch furniture. They haven't got a rabies vaccine that has been approved. They are growing in popularity."

A Greenville pet store owner who sells ferrets is also in opposition to the bill.

"I don't like the idea. I think they should keep them legal," Donna Edwards, owner of Pet Village Pet Shop, said. "Ferrets have been domesticated for 2,000 years — for as long as dogs and cats. They make great pets.

"I never have had any problems with any rabies scare with ferrets. People treat them just like cats. I think they (health officials) are worried because you can't get a rabies vaccine, but it shouldn't be a problem as long as you have responsible ferret owners who keep them in their own home or out of harm's way."

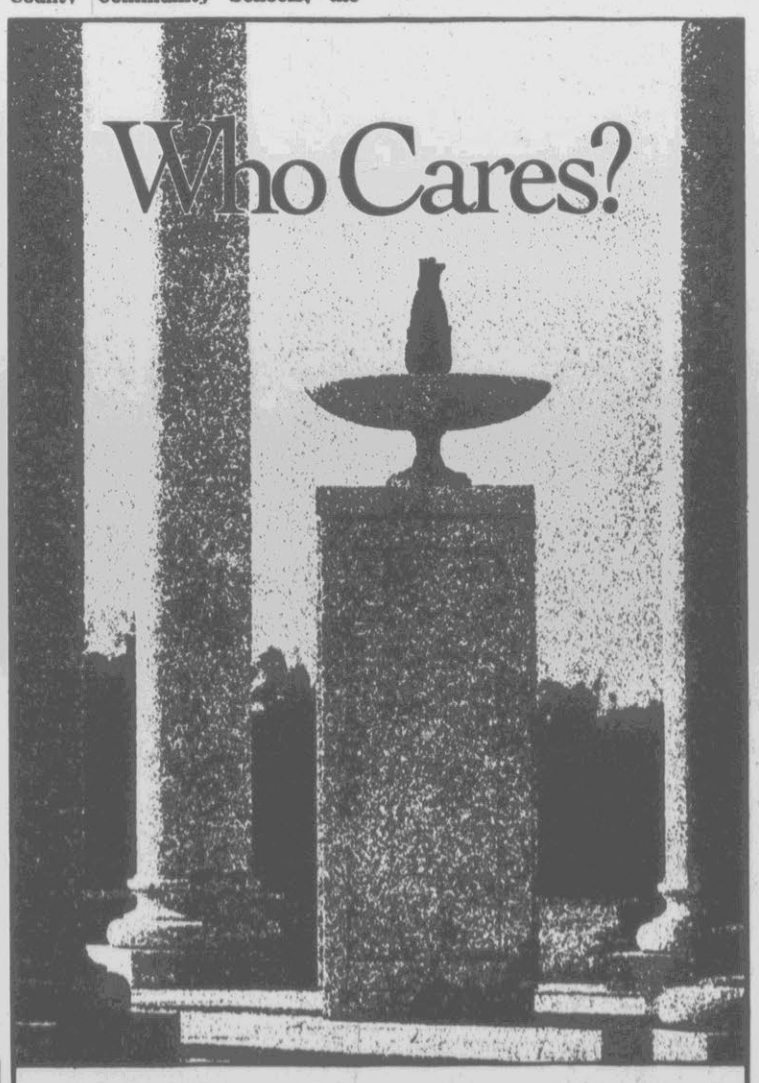

The Ferret Regulation Bill has been sent to the House Wildlife Resources Commission for discussion.

New Pirate Basketball Coach

Steele Likes ECU Challenge

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Basketball successes at East Carolina University have been few and far between. In the past 13 seasons, the Pirates have recorded only three winning seasons — chewing up four coaches in the process.

Now Mike Steele takes over the role of head basketball coach — and he looks on it as an opportunity.

"People tell me if you can win at East Carolina, you can go anywhere in the country," Steele said Wednesday after being introduced as the Pirate coach. Not that he meant it quite that way. "I'm going to look at Greenville as my home. I'm not looking for a quick fix, but to build a program."

Steele, 33, comes to East Carolina from Division III independent DePauw of Greencastle, Ind., where he took a program that had never seen a team win more than 18 games in a season and turned in four straight NCAA tournament qualifiers. Among the records his teams set were a 24-game winning streak and a 61-game home court streak.

The new coach brings in a 124-40 career record and in his six years as a head coach has never had a losing season.

"I'm excited to be here," he told a gathering of media and fans Wednesday in the Pirate Club. "And I'm already busy."

Steele met earlier in the day with the academic counselor, and had later meetings set with the strength coach, and the returning Pirate players. "I've already talked with some potential recruits and some potential staff members," he added.

The coach said that in the academic area, there is work to be done. Several players are in academic difficulties and their future at East Carolina is unsure.

"I don't know whether we're going to have five or 11 grants to give — but we're not going to give them just to be giving them," he said. "I would rather have seven or eight and several walkons rather than just giving them out."

"I'm going to go out and work just as hard as I can at (recruiting)," Steele said. "I'll probably hire an assistant coach in the next week or so, and our recruiting may go on until July or August. Some of it will depend on who comes back. We have to be selective with how many grants we do give."

Steele said he had talked with several potential recruits he had been following for DePauw.

"One of them has committed to Memphis State, but the other is still open. Too, I've got some lists and names and numbers from the Big Ten area. It's just going to take a lot of legwork."

And Steele feels that the difference in recruiting on Division III and Division I is not that great. "I'll talk to them about coming to school, playing basketball and having a good social life. Each kid we bring in must make progress toward a degree. He will be productive no matter what his major. We'll give them a lot of help, but it's still going to be up to him."

While saying he preferred to recruit high school seniors, Steele said he might have to bring in some junior college players this fall.

"But it's going to be people that I have confidence in. If I bring one in, it will be because I know the coach (at the junior college) and get a good recommendation."

Steele said that when people watch his teams they will find the members play hard.

"I'm not big on slogans, but I do believe that nothing great happens without enthusiasm. Our players will be unselfish. They will care about their teammates. And I think people who watch them will be proud of them."

While there has been some vocal feeling about the lack of support basketball has received at East Carolina, Steele said that he is pleased with what he's seen so far.

"I have no problems with my contract, and I don't care about the fact that someone else has turned it down," he said. "I wasn't the first born in my family and I'm still pretty happy with it."

One observer pointed out that Steele may have been number three in the coaching list. "That's okay, too. I've got a little sister I think pretty much of," he said.

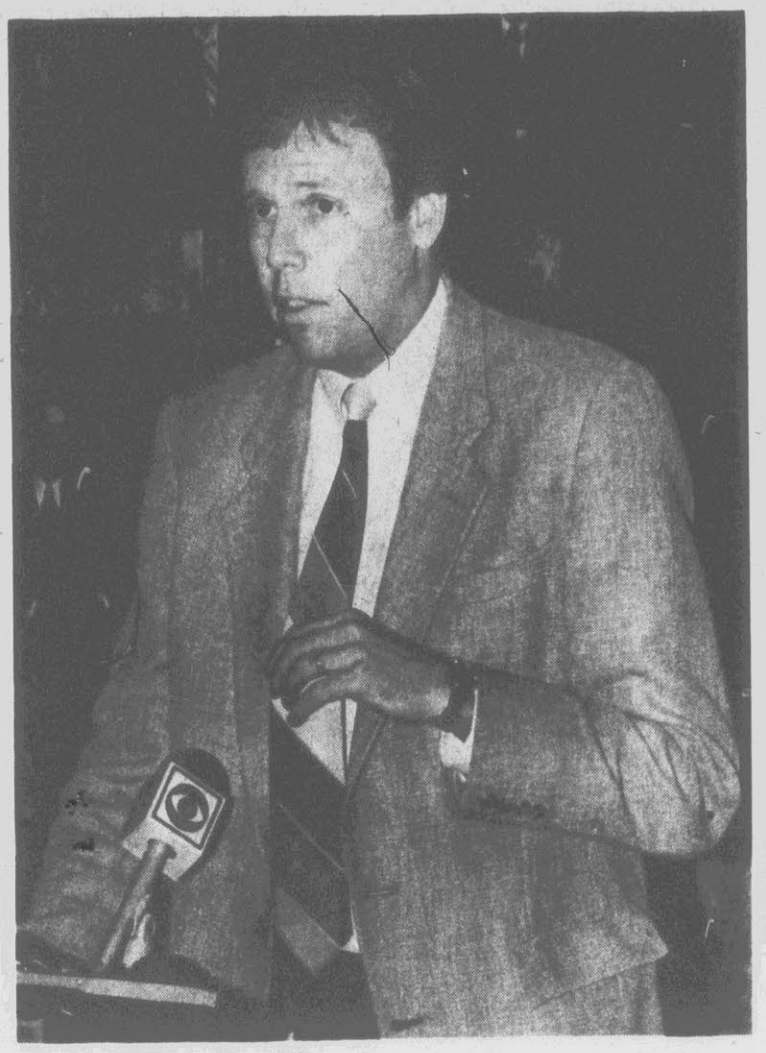

Asked if there was a clause in his contract asking him to check with the athletic director before making any statements about the program, Steele said, "I will pretty much say what I feel. But I have no reservations about anything in my contract."

Dr. Ken Karr, director of athletics, said Steele was given a three-year contract. He also added that Steele would receive more than the $30,000 salary former coach Charlie Harrison received, but would not be specific.

Steele also would not talk about specifics in his contract, only to say that he was happy with it.

Steele said he was attracted to East Carolina by the challenge of the situation and admitted that having been hired so close to the mid-April national signing date would not help the situation. "I also like the people I've been around so far," he added.

"I feel that the commitment is here," Steele said. "I came from a program that had a strong commitment, and I loved every minute of the six years I was there."

Sugar Ray Thinks He Can Beat Anyone In Ring

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Sugar Ray Leonard, making his first appearance since arriving here for Monday night's fight against Marvelous Marvin Hagler, didn't have to wait long before being asked the inevitable question.

How does a former welterweight champion who has had one fight in the last five years beat a middleweight great with proven knockout power?

"I feel I can beat any man I step into the ring with," Leonard answered patiently. "It's just my nature."

Leonard is guaranteed $11 million to climb into the ring against Hagler for the scheduled 12-round fight for Hagler's World Boxing Council middleweight title. But Leonard has contended all along that it's not the money, but the desire to prove his greatness in the ring that made this bout.

"It's a continuation of my career," said Leonard, who admits being driven by the desire to return to the public eye. "I deviated from it 4-5 years ago, but I was able to resume it against Hagler. He's the final champion. That's why I came back."

Leonard made his comments during a brief press conference Tuesday among several dozen of the estimated 1,000 media who will eventually flock to Caesars Palace to record what is being billed as "The Superfight."

Hagler, who arrived at the resort Tuesday afternoon, planned to meet with the press today.

The pre-fight hype, which began last November with a tour by the two fighters that was eventually aborted when Hagler became irritated with Leonard's theatrics, is in its final stages this week. It is being carefully orchestrated.

Prior to Leonard's 20-minute appearance in the fight press room, his public relations man passed out a list to four questions he said the former two-time champion was tired of and would not answer. Included among the questions were why he was risking reinjury of the retina of his left eye and whether he would fight again after Hagler.

Despite that, one media type asked Leonard, who has said this will be his last fight, if he would quit if he beat Hagler.

"No," Leonard replied, rolling his eyes and grinning as writers laughed with him at his answer.

Another question about his eye wasn't as humorous to Leonard, who suffered a detached retina in 1982, then retired before returning for his last fight, an unimpressive ninth-round knockout of Kevin Howard in May 1984.

"I don't think about it," Leonard answered curtly.

Doctors chosen by the Nevada State Athletic Commission examined the eye last November before Leonard was approved for the fight and said the retina had healed. Still, Leonard will be examined by specialists this week, as will Hagler.

The chairman of the commission's medical advisory board complained Monday that the board was being left in the dark about Leonard's eye trouble and could not appoint its own experts to examine him. Commission member Sig Rogich said, however, that Leonard had been examined thoroughly and Leonard said he was unaware of the latest controversy.

"I hadn't heard about it," he said.

The fight, scheduled for a 15,000-seat arena in the parking lot of Caesars Palace, is already a financial success, according to promoter Bob Arum.

"The fighters have already made their guarantees of $23 million," Arum said. He also said the net has reached about $27 million.

Leonard is guaranteed $11 million, Hagler $12 million, but the $250,000 WBC sanctioning fee reportedly will come out of Hagler's purse.

The WBC is the only one of the international governing bodies recognizing the 12-round bout Monday night at Caesars Palace as a middleweight championship fight.

The World Boxing Association has stripped Hagler of his title because he didn't make a mandatory defense against its leading contender last December.

On Tuesday in Boston, U.S. District Court Judge Robert Keeton refused to make permanent a preliminary injunction against the WBA's action. Morris Goldings, Hagler's lawyer, said an appeal is planned.

The International Boxing Federation still recognizes Hagler as champion, but would declare the title vacant should Leonard win.

Vinnie Set To Ink Big Contract

BOSTON (AP) — If everything falls into place, Heisman Trophy-winning quarterback Vinny Testaverde could soon sign a contract worth very big money.

A source said Tuesday that Testaverde will sign a deal with the Tampa Bay Buccaneers that would leave his pay behind only two players — Miami Dolphins quarterback Dan Marino and Buffalo's Jim Kelly, another former University of Miami signal-caller.

Kelly's contract reportedly is for $8 million over five years. Marino's is worth a reported $9 million over six years. The source said Testaverde would sign a contract that wouldn't be much less than Marino's

But Testaverde's agent, Bob Woolf, would only say, "I'm very optimistic of making an agreement, although we don't have one yet."

The Bucs didn't have immediate comment, club public relations director Rick Odioso said. Woolf said he had been speaking daily with Tampa Bay owner Hugh Culverhouse.

"There's no question in my mind that Tampa Bay is extremely interested in Vinny Testaverde," Woolf said. "We think this is a great marriage."

Tampa Bay, whose 2-14 record was the NFL's worst mark last season, has the first pick in the draft April 28. Should Testaverde sign before then, it would allow Indianapolis, which has the second choice, to sign a player it intends to draft.

Linebacker Cornelius Bennett of Alabama is considered the second-best player in the draft. The Colts have indicated they might trade their first-round pick.

In 10 regular-season games last year, Testaverde led the nation in passing efficiency and threw for 2,557 yards and 26 touchdowns.

But he was unable to lead the Hurricanes to the national championship against Penn State in the Fiesta Bowl.

In that game, he completed 26 of 50 passes for 285 yards, with five interceptions and no touchdowns. He was also sacked four times.

Woolf said the poor bowl performance has had no impact on negotiations.

Signing Testaverde would give the Bucs one of their few successes in negotiating with first-round choices.

Last year, they took Auburn running back Bo Jackson with the top pick in the draft. He chose to play baseball in the Kansas City Royals' organization.

In 1985, their top pick was defensive end Ron Holmes of Washington, who became a starter. It was one of the Bucs' few recent successes with their opening pick.

In 1984, they would have had the top choice in the draft but traded it to Cincinnati for quarterback Jack Thompson, who is out of football. The Bengals then sent it to New England, which drafted wide receiver Irving Fryar.

Steele Stresses Scholastic Success

If there is one thing that is clear after the introduction of Mike Steele as the new head basketball coach at East Carolina, it is that his players will be student-athletes with a heavy emphasis on the student part of the term.

Steele plans to stress academics, according to the players who met with him for the first time Monday afternoon.

"He wants to really instill some discipline and make sure all the players get their academics squared away," said sophomore guard Jeff Kelly. "Basically he's giving us four weeks to show what we can do in the classroom."

Steele was introduced to the media at a news conference Monday and met with the players afterwards.

"We've got a lot of guys in trouble," Steele said. "I don't know if I'm going to have five or 11 grants to give. Each kid we bring in must make progress towards a degree. He will be productive no matter what his major. We will give them a lot of help but it's still going to be up to them.

"The next four weeks are going to be critical for the people on this basketball team."

Those four weeks, he said, will give him a chance to evaluate the team's personnel, their academic standing and how many scholarship grants he has.

According to Steele, all but two of the players are on shaky academic ground.

"I think he's coming in here with the right frame of mind, getting our academics straightened out first, then working on the basketball stuff," said Blue Edwards, a junior forward. "The first thing he mentioned was getting our basketball players straightened out academically because that is what will enable us to play."

Steele was a stickler for academics during his previous job at DePauw. Over the last 11 semesters of his tenure at DePauw, his team compiled a 3.0 academic average on a 4.0 scale. He also had one academic All-American during his stay at the Greencastle, Ind., school.

"Coach Steele came in here and my first impression was that he's coming in here and setting some guidelines down," said Reed Lose, a freshman guard. "He's ready to get some things straight and discipline is one of the main factors. He's real concerned about us, academically more than anything."

Kelly said the signing of the new coach is a step in the right direction.

"I'm happy that the university has made more of a commitment to the basketball team," Kelly said. "He said they had made a commitment to him and to the program."

Academics aside, Steele will have his hands full in the coming weeks. In addition to evaluating the returning seven players, he has one walk-on, one transfer and another player who sat out last year with a knee injury who will all be competing for roster spots.

The team loses six seniors, five of whom were on scholarship. In addition, the NCAA has recently cut the number of scholarships allowed on college basketball teams from 15 to 13.

Returning for next year, barring any transfers, are guards Kelly, Lose, and John Williams, along with forwards Manuel Jones, Edwards and Tracy King.

Another possible returnee is point guard Howard Brown who was suspended from the team late in the season for disciplinary reasons. "My plan is to come back," Brown said. "So far, everything he says is good. It seems like he's going to be real strict about things."

Tim Beckworth, a 6-4 swingman who transferred from Marist, Steve Patton, a 6-5 walk-on forward, and 6-0 guard Gus Hill, returning from an injured knee, all figure into the pattern.

The Pirates are top heavy at guard and return no players taller than 6-6. The lone returning front-court starter is Edwards, who stands 6-4. The other front court returnees are King (6-6), who was used sparingly last season, and Jones (6-5), who had an injury plagued sophomore season but contributed when healthy.

"You can look at the height of our guys coming back and you know we're going to have to recruit height," Steele said.

Not only must Steele evaluate the returning players, he also has to get a coaching staff together and begin recruiting immediately. Add all that together and there could be problems.

"We're in a situation now where it could be very difficult. We're behind but we're going to have to work through that," Steele said.

Hoosier Fans Celebrate Success

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Although the plane bringing Indiana's newly crowned NCAA basketball champions home from New Orleans was late, fans waiting to greet the team didn't really care.

"Hoo-siers, Hoo-siers," about 15,000 fans chanted Tuesday afternoon as they waited for Indiana's 74-73 winners over Syracuse.

Inside Assembly Hall were draped with four giant red banners proclaiming Indiana's previous NCAA basketball titles. A fifth — the third for Coach Bob Knight in 16 years at Indiana — will go next to the others.

"I've had a chance to coach a lot of players and a lot of teams," Knight told the crowd. "There's never been a team I've taken greater pride in for what it has accomplished."

In five of the Hoosiers' six tourney victories, they had to battle from behind. Twice, they won by one point on baskets in the closing seconds, including Monday night's comeback from eight points down that was won on tourney MVP Keith Smart's jumper with five seconds to go.

"Hopefully, this team will show you when you've got problems of your own, when things aren't going well for you, each of you can find a Keith Smart if you look around a little bit to help you," Knight said.

The screaming fans, many of whom had been waiting more than three hours, gave heroes' welcomes to the team.

"Weren't there any classes today?" joked reserve forward Todd Meier, one of the team's three seniors. Then he pointed across the vast arena to the four NCAA banners and said, "I'm really proud because we came back here and put another banner down there."

Meier and senior starters Steve Alford and Daryl Thomas presented the NCAA trophy to retiring Indiana President John Ryan, who also spoke briefly.

"Think a minute," Ryan said to the crowd of mostly students. "You're gathering here in history. You're gathering here in the presence of five national championships. Let anybody ask why we have Hoosier pride around this university."

Each player took his turn to speak. The biggest cheers were for Smart, because he got the winning basket, and for Alford, a two-time All-American who finished his career with a school-record 2,438 points.

The 6-foot-1 Smart, one of two junior college transfers new to the team this year, said the national championship was a "dream come true."

"During a visit here, I saw how you come together as a family. That sold me on Indiana," he said.

Smart will be one of three returning starters next year, along with 6-10 center Dean Garrett — the other junior college transfer — and 6-6 forward Rick Calloway.

"We've worked awfully hard for this. Let's savor this for awhile before you start talking about next year," Alford said.

Even in triumph, Alford couldn't resist a jab at Indiana's fierce rival, Purdue, which shared the Big Ten title with the Hoosiers but lost in the tourney's second round.

"Something that really inspired us after the (regular-season) loss up at West Lafayette, was a sign, 'So long, Bobby, Keady's Kids will be in New Orleans,' said Alford.

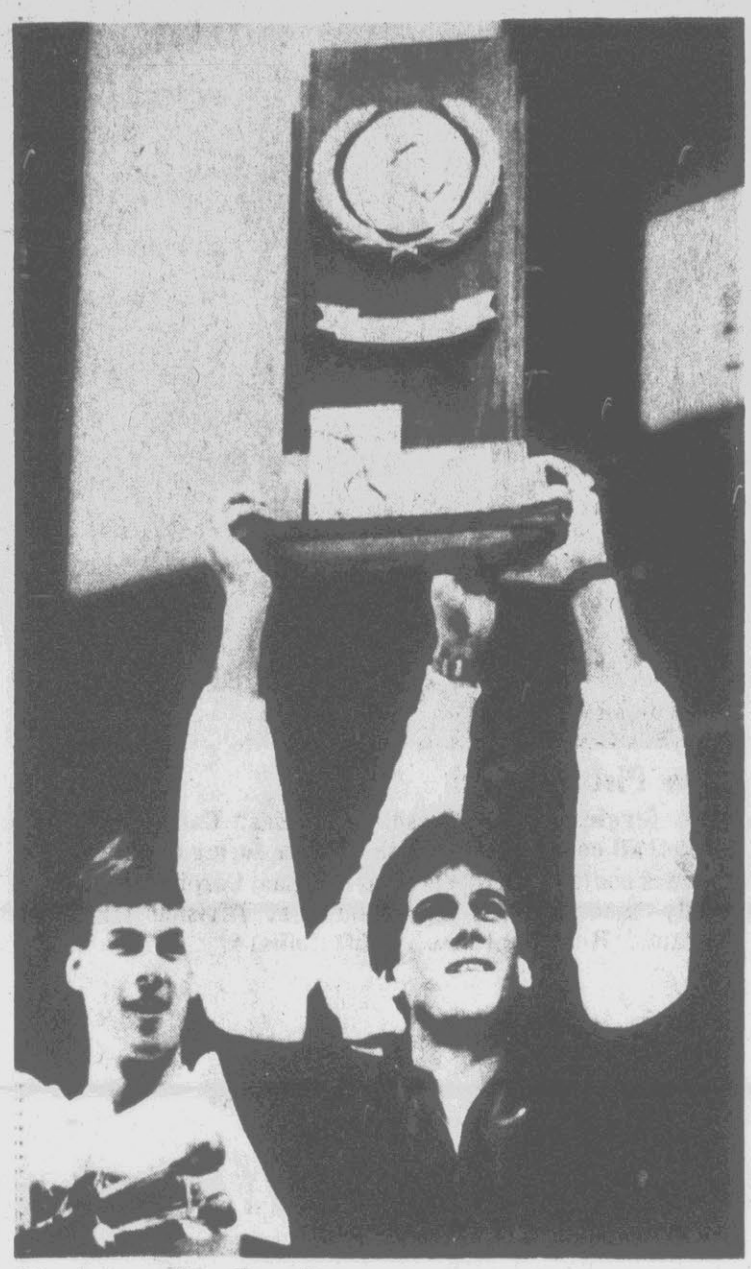

"Well, it was Bobby's Boys who brought a banner back to Assembly Hall."

Knight also took a swipe, his at the mayor of Louisville, Ky.

After Louisville won the national championship a year ago, Mayor Jerry Abramson, an IU grad, had a big sign showing a picture of a Cardinal and saying, "Louisville 1986 NCAA champions" posted on a bridge leading to Louisville from southern Indiana. Abramson said at the time, "Now, when those Hoosiers come over the river, the first thing they're going to see is this."

Knight asked the crowd, "How many of you live in Louisville?" There was light applause.

"I want to tell the mayor of Louisville to turn his sign around," Knight said.

Charlotte 4th In NBA Minds

MIAMI (AP) — Miami and Orlando are first and third respectively on the list of cities in line for an NBA franchinse, according to a story published Tuesday in The Miami Herald.

Citing anonymous sources, the story said Minneapolis was second on the list.

NBA Commissioner David Stern will reveal the recommendations of a five-member expansion committee Thursday, two sources told the paper.

He will also narrow the timetable for when each city would be admitted to the league, the Herald story said.

League spokesman Brian McIntyre confirmed that Stern will "give an update this week regarding expansion," but wouldn't say when or what the announcement will reveal.

Officially, the 23-member league has said only that it will add up to three teams by 1990-91.

Miami is most likely to be awarded the first franchise for the 1988-89 season, according to the sources.

Knights Top Rose, 17-6

RED OAK — Northern Nash High School romped to a 17-6 victory over Rose in a Big East softball game Tuesday.

Rose took a brief lead with a run in the top of the first, but Northern came back to score five times in the bottom of the frame, three on a homer by Alisa Richardson.

Then, in the second, Northern added four to put the game away. Buffy Dew singled and Arrington got a hit. Both advanced on an out and scored when Martha Hucks singled. An error on the play allowed Hucks to come the rest of the way around. Joyner then singled and another error allowed her to come all the way in.

That made it 9-1.

Northern added eight in the fourth inning. Rose picked up four in the third and one in the seventh.

The Rampants were led by Kim Bridges with three hits while Joanne Brown and Sherry Williams each had two. Dew and Hucks had three each for Northern while Arrington, Langston and Joyner each had two.

Rose is now 1-3 overall and 0-1 in the conference. Rose plays host to Rocky Mount on Thursday.

Leisten Leads Rose Victory

WILSON — Lisa Leisten knocked in four goals as Rose rolled by Wilson Beddingfield, 5-0, in high school girl's soccer action Tuesday.

The Rampettes took a 3-0 lead on Leisten's two first half goals and another one by Susan Aycock. Leisten then added two more goals in the second half, one coming on a corner kick.

Leisten has seven goals in the three games. Last year as a team, Rose had only 11 goals total.

Rose out shot Beddingfield 12-3. Rose's Adrienne Harrington had three saves. Rose improves to 2-1 overall and 2-1 in the Big East. The Rampettes return to action Friday at Northeastern.

Sequel There For 'Hoosiers II'

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Let's write a script for "Hoosiers II," a sequel to the story of the small-town team that, against all odds, wins the Indiana high school basketball championship.

Only this time, the team will be on the college level, playing for the NCAA championship.

We'll make the Indiana team the favorite. That way, everyone will be surprised when the favorite struggles.

The lead changes hands through the first half. Neither team dominates.

In the second half, Indiana falls behind by eight points, but rallies.

Build suspense by focusing on the clock: 28 seconds to go. Indiana is down by one and forced to foul. If the other guys hit the free throws, it's curtains.

A miss! Indiana grabs the rebound and moves the ball down the court. The clock ticks.

Everyone knows that the Indiana sharpshooter, Steve Alford, will take the final shot. He's the son of a high school coach, winner of Indiana's "Mr. Basketball" award as a high school senior, an All-American as a college senior. If he hits it, he'll be the leading scorer in Big Ten history as well as champion for the first time.

But let's create more suspense: keep Alford covered up.

Get the ball to Daryl Thomas, but he's covered as well.

Dissolve to Keith Smart. He's been on the bench much of the game, but has returned to rally his team. Smart gets the ball, dribbles left behind Thomas' screen.

Go to slow motion: Smart goes into a high-floating jump, lofts a picture-perfect shot, and — with five seconds left — the ball drops through the basket.

Too "Hollywood?"

It seemed somehow fitting that Indiana should topple Syracuse 74-73 in such melodramatic fashion on the same night Hollywood was handing out its Academy Awards. One of the nominees for an Oscar was the movie "Hoosiers."

EC Women Top Camels

East Carolina's women's tennis team defeated Campbell, 5-4, in a match Tuesday.

The Lady Pirates lost the first two singles matches, then swept the next four. Jeannie Jones and Maria Swaim then won the number one doubles match to clinch the victory.

East Carolina is now 13-8 and plays at St. Mary's on Thursday.

Summary:

Missy Register (C) d. Amy Ziemer, 6-3, 6-1.
Karen Poole (C) d. Maria Swaim, 6-1, 3-6, 6-3.
Ty Myers (EC) d. Susan Mattocks, 6-2, 2-6, 6-0.
Susan Montjoy (EC) d. Deanna Gaskins, 6-2, 6-1.
Holly Murray (EC) d. Lisa Van Meter, 6-3, 6-3.
Kim Bergen (EC) d. Laura May, 6-3, 6-2.

Nettles Makes Cut

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Veteran infielder Graig Nettles, who came to the Atlanta spring camp as a non-roster player, will be on the Braves' 24-man roster when they open the 1987 season next Tuesday, playing host to the Philadelphia Phillies.

Nettles continued his torrid hitting Tuesday with a home run and two doubles in a 12-7 exhibition victory over Minnesota. It was the seventh homer of the spring for the 42-year-old Nettles, who has reached base 13 straight times over four games. Nettles is batting .467 with 12 RBI.

Second baseman Damasco Garcia officially went on the disabled list Tuesday after undergoing arthroscopic surgery on his left knee.

Team spokesman Jim Shultz said Dr. Robert Wells, who performed the operation at Atlanta's Piedmont Hospital, reported finding "frayed cartilege and loose bodies in the knee joint," but was optimistic that Garcia would recover quickly.

Vike JV Tops GC

SNOW HILL — D.H. Conley's junior varsity baseball team gained a 9-5 victory over Greene Central Tuesday.

Scott Brock hurled the victory with help from Gray Mills. They scattered five hits between them.

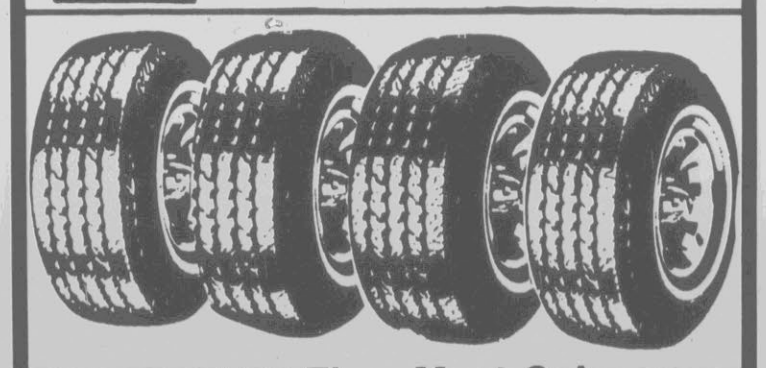

Conley's hitting was led by Mills, Scott Claybrook (3 rbi) and Andy Fassett with two each. Chris Hill had two for Greene Central, while Chris Collins had a two-run homer.

Conley is now 5-1 and plays at North Pitt on Friday.

Syracuse Fans Give Team Rally To Help Lift Spirits

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — The Syracuse University basketball team was feeling despondent after losing college basketball's national championship to Indiana. But more than 2,500 Syracuse fans helped lift their spirits with a campus rally.

"This is the first time since we lost that I've been able to hold my head up and smile. Thank you," Orangemen co-captain Howard Triche said Monday. "This is something the whole team appreciates and something we will be able to look back on in the future and remember."

City officials planned a parade today and were scheduled to present the Orangemen with a giant orange cake.

Coach Jim Boeheim said the turnout at Manley Field House was the perfect medicine for Syracuse's heart-rending 74-73 loss to the Hoosiers. Boeheim had to wait through a two-minute ovation before he could utter a strained "Thank you.'

"When you go through a night like last night, when the kids did everything we asked, you think about that basketball has to come down to winning and losing," said Boeheim, rubbing under his glasses. "But there were two great teams, and two great efforts, and you come down to it that you don't really have a loser in that type of game.

"This reception means a lot to us," said the Syracuse coach. "It takes an awful long time to recover from a game like this. This is a great, great first step and it helps get on track for Kansas City next year."

The Final Four will be played at Kansas City's Kemper Arena in 1988.

"It's been a sad day," said junior center Rony Seikaly, who was beckoned to the podium by the crowd. "I couldn't sleep last night. I kept seeing (Indiana's Keith) Smart make that shot over and over. But in your hearts and our hearts, we're number one."

It was Smart's baseline jumper with four seconds to play that ended Syracuse's dreams of a national title.

"We didn't lose, we just ran out of time," said the Orangemen's other senior co-captain, Greg Monroe.

"I'm proud of them," said Cid Knoblock, a 20-year-old junior from nearby Cazenovia. "They made it further than any team in Syracuse history. Sure, we didn't win the national championship, but we can be proud of the way they played and what they accomplished this year."

"They played an excellent game. If a couple of things had gone differently, we would have taken Indiana," said Gordie Franz, a liquor store owner and Syracuse fan.

"Except for one shot, our team would have been there," said 32-year-old April Nolan.

"Somebody always has to lose in basketball. It just wasn't meant to be," said Nolan, an Orange fan since moving to Syracuse five years ago.

The field house, where Syracuse played basketball until moving into the Carrier Dome in 1980, was awash with orange shirts, caps, posters and balloons.

Signs with slogans such as "You're No. 1 In Our Hearts — Thanks For A Great Season" and "We're Proud of You" hung from the rafters or were waved by fans.

"Some people may feel they let us down by not winning the championship," said Kim Lee, a junior from Bay Shore, N.Y.. "But they have given us the greatest memories."

Clemens And Sox Differ

WINTER HAVEN, Fla. (AP) — The Boston Red Sox and Roger Clemens still are far apart in negotiations for a new contract for the 1986 American League MVP and Cy Young Award winner.

And, with the 1987 season opener scheduled for Milwaukee next Monday, time is running out on hopes that Clemens will be with the club when it breaks camp Saturday evening.

Unless the two sides can get together, the Red Sox will have to take tougher action than the $1,000 daily fine begun on March 11.

Clemens probably will be suspended or put on some restricted list if there is no indication of a possible settlement in the salary war.

General Manager Lou Gorman says the fact that the parties are talking again is "encouraging."

But Gorman and Clemens' agents, Randy and Alan Hendricks, appear no closer to an agreement now than they were on the day the pitcher walked out of training camp on March 6.

On Tuesday, Gorman rejected a new proposal that would pay Clemens a $1.5 million base salary in 1988.

Gorman said "we want to keep the line of communications open and see if we can work something out," but said Monday's proposal in a telephone call from Randy Hendricks was too high.

"It presented a very creative picture, but when you looked at it closely it was all in their favor," Gorman said.

"I tried to call Mr. Hendricks this morning, but I couldn't reach them," Gorman added. "I want to tell them that we appreciate the call, but that we reject the proposal.

Spring Rejuvenates Two Players

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

Springtime is a period of rejuvenation and blossoming. Just ask 42-year-old Graig Nettles and 24-year-old Devon White.

Nettles revitalized his career with a sensational spring training performance, which he capped Tuesday with a home run and two doubles in leading the Atlanta Braves to a 12-7 exhibition baseball victory over the Minnesota Twins. The 18-year veteran, invited to the Atlanta training camp as a non-roster player, earned a berth on the team with a .467 batting average in March, with seven homers and 12 RBI.

White, a rookie outfielder, has done almost as well. He had three of California's 15 hits in a 7-3 win over San Diego. White now has 46 hits and a .411 batting average in 26 exhibition games and will open the season in right field for the Angels.

Elsewhere in spring training Tuesday, it was Houston 7, Boston 3; Seattle 2, Oakland 1; Milwaukee 7, Cleveland 4; the Chicago Cubs 6, San Francisco 5; Philadelphia 5, Pittsburgh 2; Montreal 7, Los Angeles 3; Detroit 6, the Chicago White Sox 4; Baltimore 6, Texas 4; Toronto 15, Cincinnati 8; and the New York Mets 6, St. Louis 6 in a game called after 10 innings.

Tuesday also saw several well-known veterans cut by major league teams. It was the last day on which a team can release a veteran without having to pay him his salary for the full season.

Among those released were outfielders Mickey Hatcher and Billy Sample (Minnesota), Darryl Motley (Atlanta) and Mike Brown (Pittsburgh), and pitcher Pete Ladd, outfielder Steve Henderson and infielder Dave Stapleton, all by Seattle.

San Francisco traded outfielder Dan Gladden to Minnesota for three minor league pitchers.

Braves 12, Twins 7

Nettles, who has reached base 13 straight times over four games, has six homers and three doubles in that span. After doubling and scoring in the third and walking in the fourth, Nettles hit a two-run homer in the sixth.

"I tried to make their decision as hard as I could on them," Nettles said. "I'd have to say this has been the best spring of my life.I've never been much of a spring player and I've always been a streaky home run hitter."

Nettles has hit more home runs (319) than any third baseman in American League history (he has 384 overall). He was with the Twins and Indians before joining the Yankees in 1973. In a decade with New York, Nettles became the premier third baseman in the American League.

He signed with the Padres for the 1984 season after Yankees owner George Steinbrenner said Nettles was "in the twilight of his career." In '84, he helped the Padres into their first World Series. He was not re-signed by the Padres after last season.

The Braves, minus unsigned free agent Bob Horner, need power, and Nettles certainly can supply that. He is expected to play both first and third for the Braves.

Nettles homered twice against the Yankees last Friday. On Sunday, Nettles hit three home runs and a double against Baltimore.

"I came down here to impress people," Nettles said. "I think the last three or four days only reinforces the fact I can play the game."

Angels 7, Padres 3

While Doug DeCinces, Jack Howell and Dick Schofield drove in two runs each, White continued his hot hitting. During his most recent six-game hitting streak, the 24-year-old native of Jamaica has gone 14-for-26 with seven RBI.

"This is far from typical for me," White said. "The last time I was in a streak like this was in high school, when all the competition was at my level."

White hasn't hit higher than .296 in six minor league seasons.

"I've been pretty relaxed at the plate. I don't even care about all the hits, I'm just trying to react to different situations."

California Manager Gene Mauch said White "has shown me everything he possibly could. Now I know what he can do."

Astros 8, Red Sox 3

Nolan Ryan allowed only one run in four innings, struck out eight and did not walk a batter.

Glenn Davis drove in two runs with a first-inning double. A third-inning double by Robbie Wine and Mark Bailey's two-run pinch-hit homer in the fifth helped the Astros to a 7-1 lead.

Mariners 2, Athletics 1

Solid starting pitching kept this game tight. Mike Morgan allowed five hits, walked two and struck out four in 6 1-3 innings. Oakland's Dave Stewart, named to start Oakland's home opener, gave up five hits and one run in 6 2-3 innings.

Pinch-runner Donnell Nixon scored on a groundout by Rey Quinones for the winning run. Dwayne Murphy homered for the Athletics.

Brewers 7, Indians 4

Juan Castillo hit a two-run homer and Dale Sveum doubled in two runs as Milwaukee scored all seven runs in the third inning. The deluge began with Greg Brock's RBI triple off Cleveland starter Scott Bailes, 1-1. The Brewers had four straight run-scoring hits — an RBI double by Rob Deer, Sveum's two-run double, a run-scoring single by Bill Schroeder and Castillo's two-run homer.

Cubs 6, Giants 5

The Cubs stormed back for the win on Chico Walker's two-out, two-run double and Ryne Sandberg's RBI double that capped a four-run rally in the ninth. Leon Durham and Jody Davis opened with singles off loser Keith Comstock. With one out, Shawon Dunston blooped an RBI double, and after pinch hitter Gary Matthews struck out, Walker's fly ball dropped between left fielder Jeffrey Leonard and center fielder Randy Kutcher, who both seemed to lose it in the sun.

Chris Brown, Candy Maldonado and Chili Davis had two hits apiece for the Giants.

Phillies 5, Pirates 2

Joe Cowley, acquired by the Phillies last week from the White Sox for Gary Redus, gave up three singles, walked six and fanned six in his first appearance for the Phillies.

Milt Thompson and Greg Gross each had a pair of RBI for Philadelphia.

Expos 7, Dodgers 3

Struggling right-hander Floyd Youmans, who entered the game with a 10.80 ERA, allowed Los Angeles three runs in seven innings and hit a solo home run.

Besides his improved pitching, Youmans homered in a four-run second inning.

Larry Walker drove in three runs with a two-run double and a single, and Tim Wallach had a two-run homer for Montreal.

Tigers 6, White Sox 4

Matt Nokes' three RBI, including a two-run double, sparked Detroit. Nokes, one of four catchers in the running to replace Lance Parrish at catcher, keyed a three-run outburst in the second.

Walt Terrell improved his spring record to 4-0 with a seven-inning stint.

Harold Baines, Ron Hassey and Ron Karkovice had solo homers for the White Sox.

Orioles 6, Rangers 4

Eddie Murray drove in two runs and extended his hitting streak to 10 games. Cal Ripken Jr. had two singles and a double for the Orioles, giving him 7-for-9 in the last two games, while Rick Burleson added a solo homer and a single.

Mike Flanagan, touched for 16 runs and 18 hits in seven previous innings, held the Rangers to five singles during his five innings.

Blue Jays 15, Reds 8

Fred McGriff drove in four runs with a pair of homers and George Bell went 5-for-6 to lead a 22-hit Toronto attack.

The Blue Jays hit four homers off left-handed reliever Norm Charlton in two innings for a 13-6 lead in the sixth.

The Blue Jays also got homers by Kelly Gruber and Jesse Barfield.

Dave Parker hit a two-run homer for Cincinnati. The game was played in a strong wind blowing out toward right field, where all of the homers landed.

Cincinnati right-hander Mario Soto threw 68 pitches in his second spring start, giving up three runs and six hits over four innings. Soto is recuperating from arthroscopic shoulder surgery.

Charlton failed to retire a batter before being replaced in the sixth, having officially allowed 11 hits and 10 earned runs in one inning.

Bell singled home the first Toronto run in the sixth, Barfield hit a three-run homer, his seventh, and McGriff followed with his seventh homer to chase Charlton.

Mets 6, Cardinals 6, 10 innings

Terry Pendleton hit a two-run homer in the ninth inning to forge the tie in a game called by mutual consent after 10 innings. Jesse Orosco, the Mets left-handed relief ace, failed to protect a 6-4 lead.

"The new proposal is worth more than their first one. However, I'm going to look at it further and see if something can't be worked out within the framework. The main thing now is for us to stay in touch, to keep talking."

Gorman also disclosed that he had spoken to Clemens for the first time since the pitcher walked out of training camp.

"I guess he walked into the Hendricks' office in Houston while we were on the phone and we said hello," Gorman said. "It was pleasant, but it would be much nicer if I could say hello to him right here."

Gorman did not disclose specifics in the proposal. However, another source said that for 1987 it would go along with the club's offer of a $500,000 basic salary, add $150,000 in bonus money for 31 starts and include the Red Sox' $75,000 in incentives.

In 1988, the source said, the new proposal would triple the base salary to $1.5 million and keep intact the same incentive money, including $50,000 for 25 starts, $50,000 more for 28 starts and another $50,000 for 31 starts.

The Red Sox flatly rejected Clemens' demands for $2.4 million for two years before he walked out.

The Red Sox originally offered $500,000 and $375,000 in incentives. When Clemens left, they renewed his contract for 1987 at a negotiable figure of $400,000.

Since then, the club has altered its offer, keeping the base salary at $500,000 but improving incentives to $475,000.

Clemens earned $220,000 in salary and another $120,000 in bonus money in pitching Boston to the pennant with a 24-4 record in his second full major league season last year.

Thomas Suspects Foul Play In Loss

By BILL BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

Isiah Thomas suspected that foul play prevented the Detroit Pistons from making up ground on Atlanta in the NBA's hot Central Division race.

A foul called against Thomas enabled Portland's Terry Porter to hit two free throws with two seconds left Tuesday night, giving the Trail Blazers a 113-111 victory over the Pistons.

Thomas, who led Detroit with 26 points, wasn't certain the call was a bad one, but he was certain that if it was a good call, he should have spent a lot more time at the free-throw line.

"If that was a foul, and I'm not saying if it was or it wasn't, then I should be shooting free throws all night because I get pushed like that every time down the court," Thomas said of referee Bill Oakes' call. "That's a terrible way to lose a game."

"He pushed me pretty good," said Porter, who was 10-for-10 from the free throw line and scored 18 points for Portland. "I don't know if he was off balance or what. Caldwell (Jones) picked him pretty good."

The loss dropped the Pistons 1½ games behind idle Atlanta in the NBA's only close division race. Boston and the Los Angeles Lakers already have clinched division titles and Dallas has an 8½-game margin in the Midwest.

In other NBA games, it was New York 128, Boston 120; Philadelphia 116, Cleveland 105; Chicago 101, Washington 75; Dallas 118, Los Angeles Clippers 102; Denver 111, San Antonio 106; Utah 110, Phoenix 95; Los Angeles Lakers 111, Houston 96; and Seattle 132, Sacramento 129.

Portland Coach Mike Schuler said the foul call on Thomas, who earlier in the game was whistled for a technical foul by Oakes, was clear cut.

"We had to get the call," Schuler said. "I mean, if an official doesn't call that, he should not work in this league."

The crucial foul call occurred right in front of Detroit Coach Chuck Daly.

"It looked like to me that he (Porter) had the ball and was moving in to Thomas. But I was too close to the play," he said.

The Pistons had tied the game at 111-111 on Bill Laimbeer's 3-point bomb with three seconds remaining.

After a Portland timeout, Porter drove toward the baseline and Thomas was called for a blocking foul.

The Blazers took a 110-106 lead with 27 seconds left on a dunk by Kiki Vandeweghe.

Thomas, who had 12 points in the fourth quarter, scored with 15 seconds to go, getting the Pistons within two, and Portland's Jerome Kersey's free throw one second later made it 111-108, setting up Laimbeer's 3-pointer.

Clyde Drexler had 29 points and 10 assists for Portland, while Vandeweghe added 28 points and Steve Johnson 20.

Vinnie Johnson scored 23 points and Adrian Dantley added 19 for the Pistons, who were playing their seventh road game in 11 days.

Lakers 111, Rockets 96

Magic Johnson had 21 points, 13 assists and 10 rebounds for Los Angeles against Houston, which still clinched a Western Conference playoff berth because of the loss by Phoenix.

Houston, behind 60-48 at halftime, scored the first eight points of the third quarter to get within four, and the Rockets later got as close as 77-72 with 3:04 left in the third quarter.

The Lakers, who got 20 points from Byron Scott, started the final period with a 14-6 spurt for a 102-86 margin with six minutes to play. Houston, which was led by Robert Reid and Jim Petersen with 16 points each, didn't threaten again.

Bulls 101, Bullets 75

Chicago clinched a playoff berth as Michael Jordan scored 36 points against visiting Washington.

The Bulls took control of the game by scoring 16 consecutive points in the second quarter to go from three points down to a 47-34 lead.

Charles Oakley had 15 points and 21 rebounds for Chicago, while Jeff Malone topped the Bullets with 22 points.

76ers 116, Cavaliers 105

Charles Barkley had 34 points and 12 rebounds and Steve Colter added 20 points for Philadelphia in Julius Erving's last visit to the Richfield Coliseum, which drew a crowd of 17,641 despite a 20-inch snowfall.

The 76ers only led 83-80 with 2:36 remaining in the third quarter, but a 19-5 run gave them a 102-85 lead with 8:32 left. Barkley, who made 12 of 14 field goal attempts and 10 of 11 free throws, sparked the rally with seven points, and David Wingate added six.

Ron Harper led Cleveland with 27 points.

Knicks 128, Celtics 120

Louis Orr tied his career high with 28 points and Gerald Wilkins scored 16 of his 28 in the fourth quarter as New York snapped a five-game losing streak with a victory over visiting Boston.

The injury-plagued Knicks, with five players 6-foot-9 or taller on the sidelines, took advantage of the absence of injured Boston starters Kevin McHale and Dennis Johnson.

The Knicks took the lead to stay in the third quarter despite 20 points in the period by Larry Bird, who had 30 of his 39 in the second half.

Mavericks 118, Clippers 102

Dallas won for the ninth time in 10 games as Mark Aguirre scored 36 points against Los Angeles.

The Mavericks, returning home after an Eastern road trip that saw them win four of five games, never trailed after grabbing a 28-27 lead early in the second quarter. But they didn't pull away until a 21-10 spurt in the final 5:43 of the third quarter put them ahead 91-77.

The Clippers, with the worst record in the NBA, have now lost 15 of their last 17 games and are 3-34 on the road. They were led by Mike Woodson with 22 points.

Sonics 132, Kings 129

Tom Chambers scored seven of his 36 points in the final three minutes, including the game-winning shot with 47 seconds remaining, lifting Seattle over visiting Sacramento.

Chambers hit a four-foot bank shot to give the Sonics the lead to stay, 130-129, then added a free throw to give Seattle a two-point lead with 19 seconds left.

Sacramento, which rallied from a 12-point deficit to tie the score at 120-120 with 3:01 left, was led by Otis Thorpe with a career-high 34 points and Eddie Johnson with 30. Dale Ellis added 34 points for the Sonics, and Nate McMillan contributed 21 assists.

Jazz 110, Suns 95

Darrell Griffith scored 27 points, including three 3-point goals, as Utah beat Phoenix for the first time in four tries this season.

The host Jazz, who got 14 points, 12 rebounds and four blocked shots from Mark Eaton, led 85-77 after three quarters, then sealed the victory by holding the Suns to 18 points in the fourth period.

Walter Davis led Phoenix with 23 points and Larry Nance added 20.

Nuggets 111, Spurs 106

Bill Hanzlik had five points during a 9-2 spurt that put Denver in front for good late in the first period against San Antonio.

The run gave the host Nuggets a 29-23 advantage, and they went on to lead 92-76 after three quarters and by as many as 24 points in the fourth period before the Spurs rallied, trimming the final margin to five with a flurry of 3-pointers by Johnny Moore, who had 21 points, and Johnny Dawkins.

Denver's scoring was evenly distributed as Alex English had 18 points, Darrell Walker 17 and Lafayette Lever and Hanzlik 15 each.

Bradley Hopes To Continue

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — Pat Bradley, who dominated the LPGA tour in 1986, and Nancy Lopez, who did the same thing the year before, are among the favorites in the $500,000 Nabisco Dinah Shore tournament, which begins Thursday at Mission Hills.

Bradley, the LPGA's Player of the Year in 1986, is coming off a year that ranks as the best ever on the women's tour, and arguably one of the best years every by any athlete in any sport.

Lopez, 1985's LPGA Player of the Year, is back after taking time off to have her second child.

Bradley said her victory in this tournament last year started her on the route to her outstanding campaign.

"My victory in the Nabisco Dinah Shore was very important to me because it was the stepping stone for my entire year," she said.

"My later wins were just so much icing on the cake. But the Dinah Shore was the centerpiece, the jewel."

Bradley, who had always been one of the most consistent performers on the tour but really had never burst into the limelight, changed that last year.

After winning the Dinah Shore, the most prestigious of the women's events and the richest of their four major tournaments, Bradley went on to win two other majors, the LPGA Championship and Canada's du Maurier Classic.

Soviets Will Exchange Delegations With Israel

By DAN IZENBERG
Associated Press Writer

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — The Soviet Union has agreed to send a consular delegation to Israel in the first diplomatic exchange of its kind in almost 20 years, a Foreign Ministry official said today.

Israel radio said the delegation was expected to arrive within two weeks, and that an Israeli delegation later would visit the Soviet Union.

Avraham Tamir, director general of the Foreign Ministry, told Israel army radio that "the delegation is expected" and an Israeli delegation will "certainly" make a trip to the Soviet Union. He would not say when either visit would take place.

The Soviet visit was agreed upon in a meeting in Washington last week between Israel's ambassador to the United States, Meir Rosenne, and Soviet charge d'affaires Igor Sokolov, Israel radio said.

The radio's Washington correspondent quoted unidentified officials in Washington as saying the Soviets told them they did not intend to renew diplomatic ties with Israel in the near future.

"These contacts have been a continuous process, and I hope that they will result in the renewal of relations," Rosenne told Israel radio. "That is the interest of the Soviet Union and without a doubt the interest of Israel."

The Soviet Union broke diplomatic ties with Israel after the 1967 Mideast war to protest the Israeli occupation of Arab lands.

Foreign Minister Shimon Peres said in a television interview Tuesday he expected "a slight thaw" in Soviet-Israeli relations soon.

"We will be seeing it in the next few days. Not yet anything decisive or what we would like, but a small change," Peres said without elaborating.

Israeli and Soviet representatives have had many private meetings over the years, but the first official talks between the two countries took place last August when low-level delegations met in Helsinki.

The meeting, hailed at first as signaling a dramatic change in Soviet-Israeli relations, collapsed when Israel insisted on discussing the issue of Soviet Jewry.

A month after the Helsinki meeting, Peres, then prime minister, met with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze at U.N. headquarters in New York in the highest-level meeting between the two countries in 19 years. Peres said the two agreed to work to improve ties.

Israel television reported Tuesday that Peres and Shevardnadze will meet again in the Soviet Union or elsewhere in Europe after the Soviet consular delegation visits Israel. A Foreign Ministry spokesman refused to comment on the report.

The Soviets had asked for the Helsinki meeting to discuss sending a consular delegation to Israel to make a survey of Russian church property there.

The church property, estimated to be worth at least $100 million, is the subject of a conflict between the Moscow-controlled Russian Orthodox Church and the emigrant anti-Communist Free Russian Church, established soon after the 1917 revolution.

The Free Russian Church, whose official title is the Russian Orthodox Church Outside Of Russia, controls monasteries and churches in East Jerusalem and the Israeli-occupied West Bank.

The larger, Moscow-based Russian Orthodox Church controls prime real estate in West Jerusalem, Jaffa, Haifa, Tiberias and elsewhere in Israel.

Another key issue dividing Israel and Moscow is Soviet restrictions on the emigration of Jews.

In 1986, the Soviet Union allowed 943 Jews allowed to emigrate, compared with 51,330 in 1979. A Geneva-based group that helps resettle the emigres said today that 470 Jews left the Soviet Union in March, the highest total in 5½ years.

Jewish leaders said Monday that high-ranking Soviet officials had agreed during a Moscow meeting to allow 11,000 Jews to emigrate by the end of the year and improve conditions for Jews choosing to remain.

Tamir said the new Soviet moves could contribute to the convening of an international peace conference.

The right-wing Likud bloc and left-leaning Labor Party, partners in the governing coalition, are at loggerheads over such a conference. Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir of Likud maintains that Israel would be forced to accept the decisions of a hostile forum if it joined in a conference.

Labor favors the idea of a conference but opposes Soviet participation until the Kremlin restores diplomatic ties with Israel and allows more Jews to emigrate.

Jumblatt Meets Hostage's Wife

LONDON (DPA) — Frances Waite, wife of Anglican Church Envoy Terry Waite, who disappeared in Lebanon in January, met Tuesday with Lebanese Druse militia leader Walid Jumblatt.

He offered to see her and she agreed, a spokesman for the Archbishop of Canterbury said. Archbishop Robert Runcie made a special request that no publicity be given to the time or place of the meeting.

It was the first time Mrs. Waite and Jumblatt have spoken. Waite disappeared Jan. 11. Jumblatt said in a television interview here that he did not know where Waite was being held.

He also said Waite had been "overconfident" when he walked out on his bodyguards and went to meet members of the Shia extremist group Hezbollah, which is believed to be holding many of the hostages.

Beirut was "a jungle, but now a peaceful jungle since the Syrians moved in. In Lebanon it is impossible to control everything," Jumblatt said.

Asked how long it might take to free Waite, Jumblatt said, "I don't know. It is too risky for me to venture. I hope it will happen tomorrow but I just don't know."

Jumblatt is in London in his capacity as Lebanon's minister of tourism and to visit his son, who is hospitalized here.

Thatcher Ending Her Soviet Visit

MOSCOW (AP) — British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said today that Kremlin officials told her emigration rights for Soviet Jews are purely an "internal affair," Soviet Jewish activist Josef Begun reported.

The official Tass news agency quoted Mrs. Thatcher as telling Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev she was satisified with the results of her five-day visit which ends today.

Begun, a 55-year-old Hebrew teacher, and his wife, Inna, met with Mrs. Thatcher for a one-hour breakfast today at the British Embassy.

He was pardoned in February after serving more than three years of a seven-year term for alleged anti-Soviet activities. He repeatedly has been refused permission to emigrate to Israel.

Begun told reporters after the meeting that Mrs. Thatcher said she talked to Gorbachev and other Kremlin officials about Jewish emigration. He quoted Mrs. Thatcher as saying Soviet officials appeared "nervous on this problem."

"They say that it is an internal affair for the Soviet Union," he said, speaking in English. "But she expressed her hopes that authorities maybe will do something to move the question."

He would not say whether he was able to confirm during the meeting recent reports that the Kremlin plans to allow more Jews to emigrate and permit more religious freedom for those who remain.

"That's a special question," Begun said.

North American Jewish leaders say high-ranking Soviets told them in recent meetings in Moscow that 11,000 Jews would be allowed to emigrate by the end of the year.

The Jewish leaders also said the Soviets agreed to permit imports of Jewish religious books.

Pope Visits Chili Today

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay (AP) — Pope John Paul II today reminded Uruguayans of their secular country's Roman Catholic roots and said divorce offers "only apparent solutions."

The pontiff, winding up a 19-hour visit to this small South American country, spoke at a Mass attended by 60,000 people in the Plaza Tres Cruces. Uruguay, considered the most secular Latin American nation after Cuba, is the first stop of his three-nation tour of southern South America.

On his way to Uruguay from Rome on Tuesday, the pontiff told reporters on his plane he hopes to bring a new spirit of human rights to military-ruled Chile during his six-day visit there beginning this afternoon. Even so, he cautioned that he is "not the evangelizer of democracy."

John Paul met privately this morning with Uruguayan President Julio Sanguinetti, an agnostic, and the two were serenaded in the Government Palace by several hundred hymn-singing schoolgirls.

During the Mass, the pope acknowledged Uruguay's secularism — only 4 percent of the 3 million Uruguayans are regular churchgoers — but said: "Dear Uruguayans, your country was born Catholic."

Most Uruguayans are of southern European descent and nominally Roman Catholic. But the country's founders were liberals who officially separated church and state.

More Soviet Jews Leaving

GENEVA (AP) — A total of 470 Jews were allowed to emigrate from the Soviet Union in March, the highest figure in nearly 6 years, the agency helping them resettle said today.

Regina Boucault, spokeswoman for the Intergovernmental Committee for Migration, said 126 of the emigres went to Israel while the rest headed for other countries.

The March figure represented the fourth straight monthly increase in the number of Soviet Jews permitted to emigrate. Last month's total was 146.

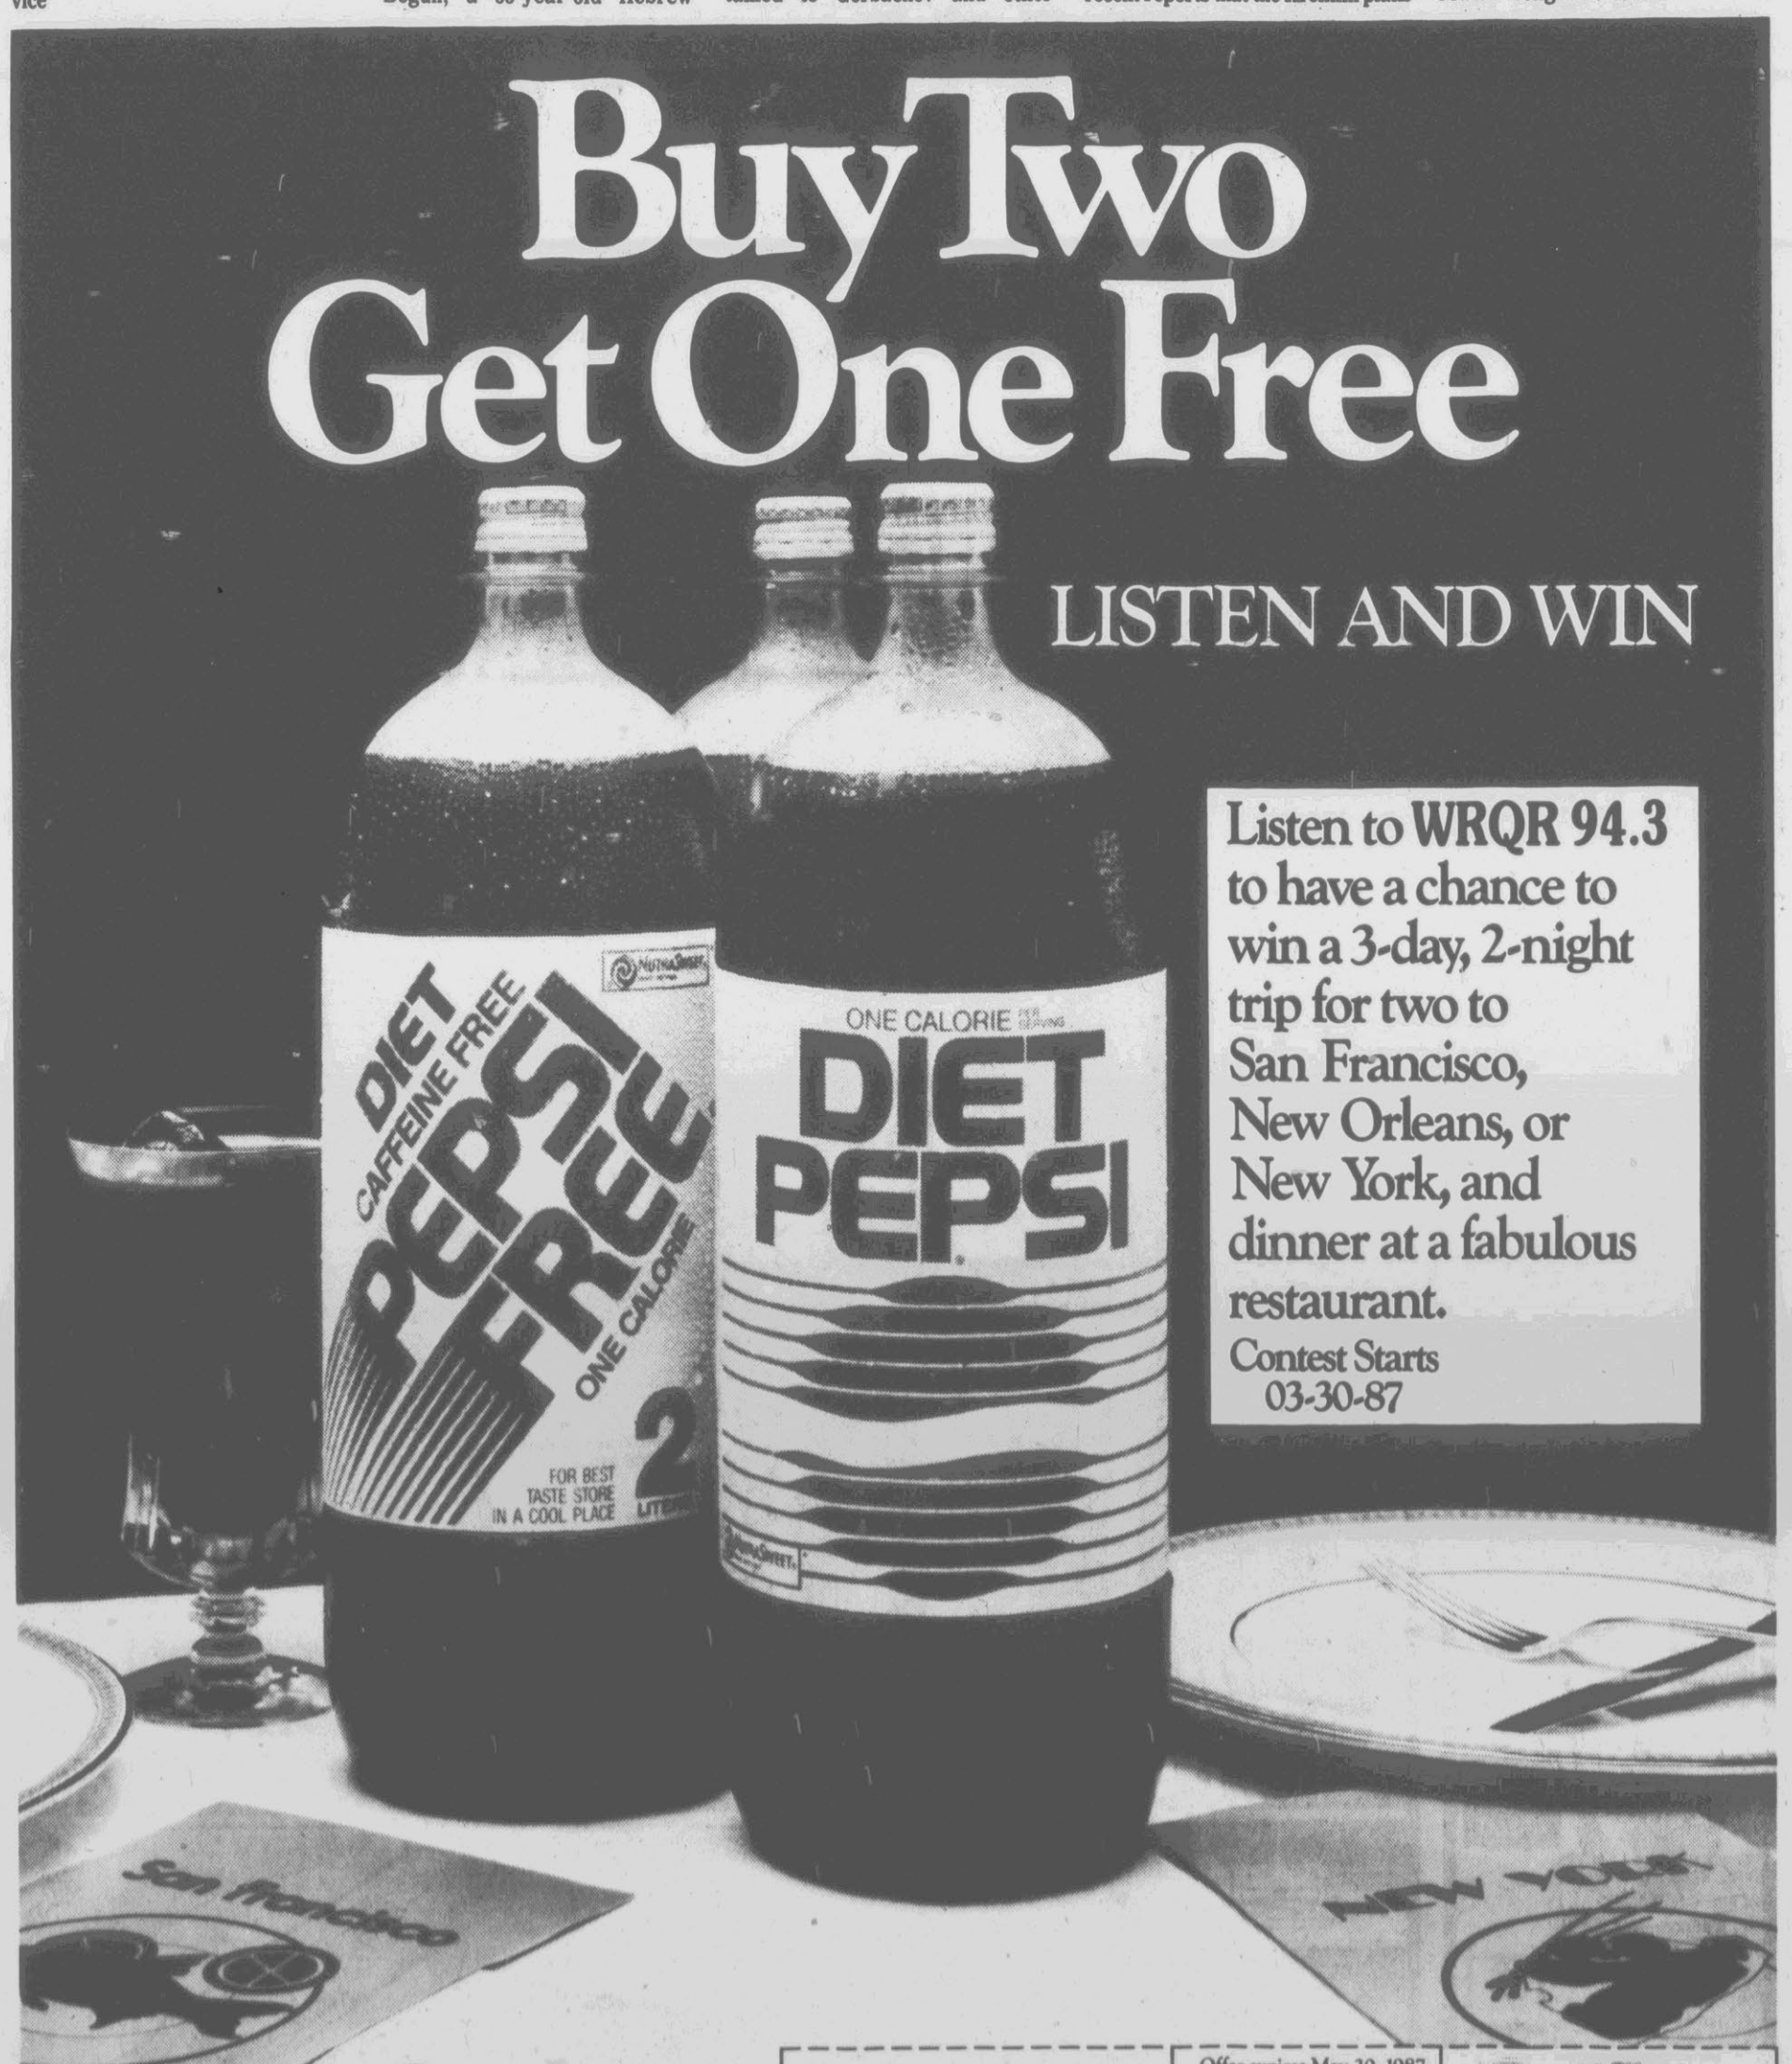

In July 1981 more than 1,000 Jews were allowed to emigrate, but the number dropped to 430 the next month and continued to decline, Ms. Boucault said.

In 1986, 943 Soviet Jews emigrated, compared with 51,330 in 1979.

Jewish leaders said Monday that high-ranking Soviet officials agreed in Moscow to allow 11,000 Jews to emigrate by the end of the year and to improve conditions for Jews remaining in the Soviet Union.

A Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman said such a meeting took place but that he could not confirm if an agreement was reached on Jewish emigration.

Israel maintains that 400,000 Jews in the Soviet Union want to emigrate.

How They Voted

WASHINGTON — Here's how senators were recorded on major roll call votes in the week ending March 27. There were no House votes during the week.

Senate

PRO-CONTRA FILIBUSTER — The Senate failed, 54 for and 46 against, to achieve the three-fifths majority required to silence a filibuster in behalf of more aid for American-backed contra forces in Nicaragua.

The vote enabled contra supporters to continue to supress a bill (HJ Res 175) banning additional aid until President Reagan explains what happened to funds already provided to the Nicaraguan rebels.

Congressional foes of the contras want the president to account for aid such as appropriations, private funding and money allegedly diverted to the rebels from Iran arms sales.

The bill, which passed the House, would freeze a $40 million payment to the contras that the Senate approved in mid-March.

Tom Daschle, D-S.D., who voted to end the filibuster, said "support for contra aid among the American people continues to decrease."

Frank Murkowski, R-Alaska, said the United States should continue aiding the contras until "the Soviets and their Cuban allies get out of Central America."

Senators voting yes wanted floor debate on the proposed contra aid freeze.

North Carolina Sen. Terry Sanford voted yes and Sen. Jesse Helms voted no.

FAILING BANKS — By a vote of 52 for and 42 against, the Senate adopted an amendment making it more difficult for so-called "non-bank banks" to get a foothold as competitors against traditional banks and savings and loans.

These unorthodox financial institutions have been able to provide an array of financial services, and operate interstate, by taking advantage of a loophole in federal banking law.

The amendment adopted by this vote sought to sidetrack a pending measure enabling certain non-bank banks to expand their base by rescuing failed or failing thrift institutions. It affirmed the power of state legislatures to block any such acquisitions.

The vote occurred during debate on a sweeping bill (S 790) to bolster the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation, the agency that insures thrift institution deposits. The bill was headed for final passage and consideration by the House.

Senators voting yes wanted to make it more difficult for non-bank banks to acquire failing thrift institutions.

Sanford voted yes and Helms voted no.

Corn Crop Is Smaller

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farmers plan to cut back sharply on corn plantings this spring, reflecting overloaded world granaries, lagging exports and participation in government acreage programs.

An Agriculture Department report said Tuesday that an annual survey showed corn farmers may reduce plantings to 67.6 million acres, a 12 percent cut from 76.7 million acres last year.

The department's Agricultural Statistics Board said the survey of more than 70,000 farmers in early March also showed 1987 reductions of some other major crops, including soybeans, sorghum, barley, rice, sweet potatoes, winter wheat and "other" spring wheat.

Increases were indicated for spring-planted durum wheat, oats, cotton, sugarbeets, peanuts, tobacco and dry edible beans.

According to USDA records, if farmers follow through with current plans, 1987 corn plantings would be one of the smallest acreages in 15 years, since 67.1 million acres were planted in 1972. The corn acreage dropped to 60.2 million acres in 1983, a year of drought and massive government acreage cutbacks.

The indicated 1987 corn acreage also was held down by many farmers signing up in in the department's long-range conservation reserve under a special bonus arrangement designed to attract fragile, highly erodible Corn Belt land into the program, thus keeping it out of crops for 10 years.

"Actual acreage planted may vary from intentions because of further adjustments to the 1987 farm program, the effects of weather, availability of production inputs, changes in market conditions prior to planting, and the indications from this report," the agency said.

Soybean plantings were indicated at 56.9 million acres, down 7 percent from last year and the smallest acreage since 1976.

Supreme Court Clears Way For Merger Of Delta, Western

By CAROLYN SKORNECK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The $860 million merger of Delta Air Lines and Western Airlines can go through, thanks to a Supreme Court action early today that vacated a lower court's injunction that had blocked the merger.

"That's great news," exulted Delta spokesman Bill Berry from his home in Atlanta. "All I can say is we'll proceed as rapidly as possible to make the merger a reality."

The merger, which was to have taken effect at midnight, had been stalled Tuesday afternoon when a federal appeals court in San Francisco ordered the companies into arbitration over a union contract dispute. That injunction prohibited the merger until after the arbitration ended.

Acting on an 11:40 p.m. Tuesday application by Western and Delta attorneys, Justice Sandra Day O'Connor vacated the ruling by the three-judge panel of the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals at 2:15 a.m. today, said Kathy Arberg, Supreme Court spokeswoman.

"That means the merger can take place," Ms. Arberg said, who noted that the justice has responsibility for the 9th Circuit.

"We did not think the judge would rule that quickly," Berry said, adding that he hopes the merger will be accomplished "within a matter of hours after the start of business this morning."

The merger, approved by the stockholders of both airlines in December, would make Delta the world's fourth-largest airline.

Union lawyers had estimated that the arbitration could last a week, prompting predictions by Delta of losses of $3 million to $4 million for each day of delay.

The 9th Circuit panel had said the only way the merger would be allowed to proceed was if Delta agreed in advance of the arbitrator's ruling that it would be bound by the arbitration decree, subject to judicial review, over which unions could continue to represent former Western employees.

"It had been a real smooth merger, and then at this late hour we get this ruling," Berry had said before Justice O'Connor vacated the decision. "It definitely creates a major problem for Delta. We were only hours away — the only thing left to do was to tell the Western employees to show up in Delta uniforms."

The dispute concerned a 1982 union contract that said employees of Los Angeles-based Western still would be governed by the pact if a merger occurred. Union lawyers argue the merged airline must honor the contract, but attorneys for the airlines say that clause is unenforceable.

Only about 10 percent of Delta employees — its flight dispatchers and pilots — belong to unions, according to the company. In contrast, 92 percent of Western employees are represented by a union.

Under the merger, Delta, headquartered next to Hartsfield Atlanta International Airport, would fly to 153 cities worldwide, and expects to carry more than 53 million passengers each year.

The merger would increase Delta's number of aircraft from 259 to 360, its workforce from 38,000 to 48,000 and states served from 35 to 42. Delta would be the primary carrier at the Atlanta, Cincinnati, Los Angeles and Salt Lake City hubs.

"We've always been tough," company spokesman Jim Ewing said of the airline's position in the market. "Delta has never been a patsy — this gives us more moxie."

Though Delta previously has had some service in the West, its strongest base in the past has been in the Southeast and East. Analysts have said a major incentive for the merger was an opportunity for Delta to strengthen its presence in the West.

"We've been operating to California since 1961, and we've been in Oregon and Washington for eight years," Ewing said. "We're not total strangers out there. This just gives us a lot more depth."

Ewing said most of the Western flights being acquired by Delta are to cities the Atlanta-based airline did not serve previously, so service was duplicated in only five or six cities.

Other than the union dispute, the merger has progressed smoothly, he said.

"We're quite attuned to how to merge," he said, noting that Delta merged with Chicago and Southern Airlines in 1953 and with Northeast Airlines in 1973.

Workers for the past week have been replacing Western's "W" insignia with that of Delta: a red, white and blue triangle design. It will take about 15 months for Western's fleet of airplanes to be repainted fully, Ewing said.

Court OKs Search Without Warrant

By AL KAMEN
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court ruled 5 to 4 Tuesday that public employers do not need a search warrant in order to search employees' offices for evidence of work-related wrongdoing.

But the justices, unanimously rejecting arguments by the Reagan administration, said employees do enjoy a "reasonable expectation of privacy" in their offices, and especially in personal effects in their briefcases or purses.

The narrow ruling, the court's first in the area of public employees' Fourth Amendment rights, was being closely studied Tuesday for clues to the splintered high court's thinking on the issue of mandatory drug testing for public employees.

Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, in a plurality opinion joined by three other justices, said "a search of an employee's office by a supervisor will be (justified) when there are reasonable grounds for suspecting that the search will turn up evidence that the employee is guilty of work-related misconduct."

"Searches and seizures by government employers or supervisors of the private property of their employees," she said, "are subject to the restraints of the Fourth Amendment," which prohibits unreasonable searches.

Employee-union representatives were disappointed that the court sanctioned warrantless searches and gave employers broad leeway to search desks and files. But they claimed language in the often-vague ruling appeared to support their opposition to President Reagan's executive order of mandatory drug testing for federal employees in sensitive positions.

Tuesday's decision is "modestly good news," said Justice Department spokesman Patrick Korten. "It recognizes that there is a legitimate employers' interest here.

"It gives us some hope that a well-designed, well-conceived drug-testing program might be looked on with favor. We should not judge what the court will ultimately do, but it gives us some encouragement."

The ruling came in the case of a physician at a state hospital whose locked office and files were searched by officials looking for evidence of alleged misconduct, including sexual harassment. The doctor argued that the search violated his rights under the Fourth Amendment. The hospital, joined by the administration, said he had no "expectation of privacy" in his hospital office and thus no constitutional protections against such searches.

"We reject the contention made by the solicitor general and (the hospital) that public employees can never have a reasonable expectation of privacy in their place of work," O'Connor said, for the plurality in O'Connor v. Ortega. "Individuals do not lose Fourth Amendment rights merely because they work for the government instead of a private employer.

Japan Will Attempt Again To Boost Imports As Trade War Talk Flares

By JAMES F. SMITH
Associated Press Writer

TOKYO (AP) — Japan plans to meet with major companies to urge them to boost their imports but will not make concessions in the area of semiconductors despite imminent U.S. sanctions, a high government official said.

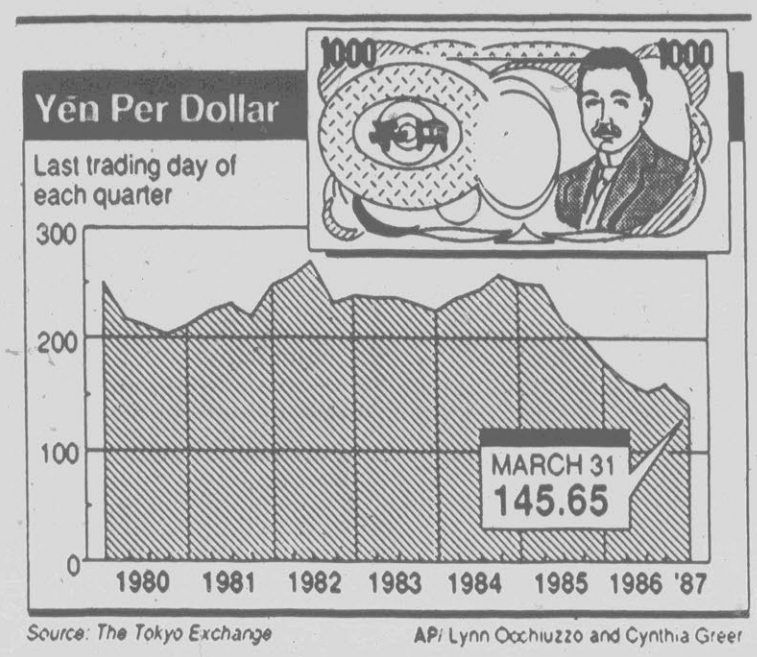

Noburo Hatakeyama, director general of the International Trade Administration Bureau, also warned Tuesday that anti-American sentiment will rise in Japan if the United States goes ahead with the planned penalty duties on up to $300 million worth of Japanese electronic goods.

Japanese citizens would regard the United States as "emotional and illogical," he said, and repeated warnings from other Japanese officials that Japan would consider retaliation.

Hatakeyema said Japan is striving to cut its huge trade surplus, but said it is already abiding by an accord with the United States to compete fairly in the worldwide semiconductor market.

"If we offer any concessions, then that suggests we acknowledge having violated the agreement," he told a meeting of foreign journalists. "But in this case we've done nothing wrong, so there is nothing we can concede."

The U.S. government last week said it plans to impose the tariffs on a range of Japanese electronic goods April 10 to force Japan into compliance with the accord, in which Japan agreed to open its home market to U.S.-made chips and to avoid selling its chips overseas at unfairly low prices.

RECORD LOW — The dollar slid to a record low against the Japanese yen on Tuesday, for the second straight day. The dollar closed Tuesday at 145.65 on the Tokyo Foreign Exchange Market. Japanese officials said the yen rose slightly at the start of today's trading. (AP Laserphoto)

In Washington, U.S. Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige said there would be no "last-minute reprieve" from the tariffs, but said they could be short-lived if Japan adhered to the pact. "There will not be a trade war," he said.

Hatakeyama said the duties on electronic products would have minimal financial impact, but "the psychological impact would be very big. ... We are not accustomed to this type of retaliation or game."

Trade concerns caused in part by the semiconductor dispute have caused the dollar to sink sharply in recent days against the yen, making Japanese products more expensive on foreign markets. The dollar opened today in Tokyo at 146.30 yen, up from Tuesday's close of 145.65 yen — its lowest closing since modern exchange rates were set in the late 1940s.

The trade ministry will meet Saturday with representatives of 151 leading Japanese firms to ask them "to make maximum efforts to expand their imports" in the fiscal year that starts today, Hatakeyama said.

He said the companies would be called in for follow-up intrviews if needed. Automakers Toyota and Nissan, the Sony and Sanyo electronics giants as well as Seiko and Mitsubishi Heavy Industries are among the companies included.

Similar meetings in the past helped boost imports of manufactured goods to $25.2 billion in 1986, Hatakeyama said, $5.2 billion higher than expected.

Japan had a record $58.6 billion trade surplus with the United States in 1986, according to U.S. figures. Japan puts the figure at $51.4 billion.

Japan's overall trade surplus was $82.7 billion in 1986 and is expected to top $100 billion for the fiscal year that ended Tuesday.

Kyodo News Service meanwhile quoted political sources as saying Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone is considering a package that would meet a range of American demands for greater access to Japanese markets.

Buying U.S. supercomputers and possibly jet fighters, as well as U.S. contracts to help build a multibillion-dollar airport, was being considered for a program to be announced before Nakasone's trip to Washington at the end of April, the agency said.

Canada's Views Turn Sharp On Eve Of U.S. Trade Talks

By TERENCE HUNT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — With unusually sharp words, Canada is criticizing the United States about trade in advance of President Reagan's summit with Prime Minister Brian Mulroney, and both countries say they do not expect major agreements to be signed at the annual talks.

Reagan will fly Sunday to Ottawa for his third summit with Mulroney, a fellow champion of conservative politics who has tried to convince his countrymen that he enjoys a "special relationship" with the U.S. president but is irritated by Washington's stand on trade and acid rain.

Setting the stage for the talks, Canadian Embassy spokesman John Fieldhouse complained Tuesday that officials in Ottawa feel "a growing sense of betrayal" over a "series of kicks in the shins" from the Reagan administration.

Specifically, he protested U.S. tariffs on cedar shakes and shingles and other actions involving trade in softwood lumber, steel, uranium and other commodities, as well as Customs user fees.

From Ottawa's point of view, "We feel we may not be angels but we can't be that bad," Fieldhouse said, adding that "the deck is occassionally stacked down here (in Washington) and we are being subjected to harassment."

Privately, Reagan administration officials say that routine trade problems with America's largest trading partner have been magnified in Ottawa because of Mulroney's political troubles.

Support for his party has sagged halfway through his five-year mandate, due in part to scandals and controversies that have led to the resignation of eight of his Cabinet members and led to talk about Mulroney as a one-term prime minister.

"Our trade relationship with Canada is more normal than it appears and more normal than the politics between the two countries permits it to appear," said one administration official, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Fieldhouse, in an interview, said Reagan's recent pledge to seek $2.5 billion to deal with the acid rain problem — which Canada says has killed 14,000 of its lakes — had alleviated "a very dark cloud" that was hanging over the summit.

However, he said the commitment did not break any new ground and merely "brought us back to where we thought we were a year ago" when Reagan agreed to a cooperative $5 billion acid rain program.

Fieldhouse called the trade disputes "another major cloud" and said there was a widespread perception in Canada "the administration either deliberately or inadvertently backed away" from a 1985 commitment by Reagan to oppose trade barriers and fight protectionism.

Since Reagan made that pledge, the impression grew that the administration, "far from being our ally, had gone over to the other side," Fieldhouse said.

At the White House, presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said that U.S.-Canadian trade covers thousands of different products and that "generally speaking, our trade relationship is very good.

"However, whenever trade is this large, you can expect a number of frictions or trade irritants to appear," he added, noting differences on lumber, steel, mining and other industries.

"But we believe these are problems that can be worked out," he said. "We want a good trading relationship with Canada that can be a model to the world, a model that says, 'We don't want protectionism,' takes differences into account, acknowledges problems and seeks solutions."

Fitzwater said Reagan's visit was "not an agreement-signing trip" but rather an opportunity to talk about problems and work for solutions.

Fieldhouse said, "This summit is likely to be more of an inconclusive working session" without a lot of announcements or signings.

Prime Rate Climbs

NEW YORK (AP) — Moves by two of the nation's biggest banks to raise their prime lending rates for the first time since mid-1984 could signal an increase in how much consumers pay for credit.

Citibank, the nation's largest commercial bank, announced Tuesday it had increased its prime rate to 7.75 percent from 7.5 percent, where it had stood since Aug. 26.

The announcement was quickly followed by Chase Manhattan, the nation's third-largest bank.

Major banks generally follow each other in changing the prime, although no others announced rate hikes Tuesday.

The previous change in the prime, which is what the banks charge for loans to their best customers and is used as a base to set interest rates on a variety of corporate and consumer credit, came when the nation's major banks cut the rate from 8 percent.

The rate had not been increased since June 25, 1984, when banks raised the prime to 13 percent from 12.5 percent.

Wall Street Regulators Say Some Firms Fail To Help Investigations

By MICHAEL A. HILTZIK
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

MARCO ISLAND, Fla. — Two of Wall Street's top regulators complained Tuesday that securities firms have done an inadequate job of unearthing illegal conduct by their employees or customers and reporting it to authorities.

Some firms have also failed to fully cooperate with government investigations, said Gary G. Lynch, enforcement chief of the Securities and Exchange Commission, and U.S. Attorney Rudolph W. Giuliani of New York.

"The record of cooperation is a very mixed one," said Giuliani. "In some instances it has been tremendous. In others it has been adequate — if we find a problem, they will cooperate in the nature of damage control. In still others, it has been disgraceful, and close to obstruction of justice."

Giuliani and Lynch made their remarks at this Florida resort in separate keynote addresses to a gathering of more than 600 in-house and outside lawyers for securities firms. Neither regulator was particularly conciliatory toward the industry, which has been rocked by nearly weekly exposures of insider traders and other alleged criminals.

Both criticized the level of ethics in the securities industry and suggested that the wrongdoing now being exposed was partly the result of the failure of the firms' internal regulation, known as "compliance." Lynch suggested that this may be because some firms have not adequately financed these operations.

"Some firms simply are not supporting their legal and compliance groups in the way they should be," he said.

Giuliani and Lynch both indicated that they expect securities firms henceforth to step forward with evidence of potential crimes, even when they may not be legally bound to do so.

"If you have a customer appearing to engage in illegal conduct," said Lynch, "it is not enough to simply ask him to move his account to another firm or to knock it off. A responsible firm will notify the SEC or the stock exchange." He emphasized that firms may not have to do so out of a legal duty, but should "because they are good citizens."

The SEC's insider trading investigation of stock speculator Ivan F. Boesky, he noted, began with just such a voluntary referral by Merrill Lynch of an anonymous letter it received from a customer. The letter led probers to Dennis B. Levine, an investment banker who then implicated Boesky.

"If Merrill Lynch had not brought that letter to our attention," he said, "there is a good chance we might not have discovered the problems that led to this area."

Lynch also complained that many firms on Wall Street still hamper government investigations by not responding promptly to SEC requests for internal documents. Among other things, the SEC must often wait for weeks or months for firms to respond to its demands for so-called "blue sheets," the internal records of securities trading that are the starting points of many important investigations. The delays often allow wrongdoers to escape prosecution or to ship their illicit gains out of the country.

Giuliani, asked after his own speech to specify the differences between firms in cooperating with the government, described how he approached two large Wall Street firms for assistance while investigating the so-called "pizza connection" case. The probe, which resulted in convictions last year, involved allegations that organized crime was selling narcotics through a network of neighborhood pizzerias.

"We had evidence that some of these drug funds were laundered through accounts at Merrill Lynch and E.F. Hutton," Giuliani said, "and we asked both firms to make their account information available to us without alerting the specific clients. Merrill Lynch cooperated, but Hutton notified the clients." He said Hutton did not break the law in doing so, however.

Lynch, in his talk, said the SEC will be actively pursuing investigations of wrongdoing other than simple insider trading. This trend is exemplified by the case against Boyd L. Jefferies, a leading institutional stockbroker who was charged in March with manipulating a stock subject to a public offering and with helping Boesky disguise his ownership of blocks of takeover-prone stocks. The Jefferies case grew out of the insider-trading probe of Boesky, who settled SEC charges last November by agreeing to $100 million in fines and penalties and a permanent bar from working in the securities industry.

"Make no mistake," Lynch said. "We intend to pursue all such activities. Will there be additional cases? Count on it."

Medicare Review Plan Hurts Country Doctors

By ANDREW MANGAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — In Kaufman County, east of Dallas, Dr. Manuel S. Rivero says he lost 60 percent of his practice when he was barred from treating Medicare patients last fall for "flagrantly violating government quality standards."

"All the physicians here are scared because it could happen to them, too," said the 40-year-old internist. "I had 750 admissions last year and they questioned six charts."

Rivero is one of hundreds of doctors across the country who are being investigated by watchdog groups — peer review organizations — under federal contract to check the cost and quality of care provided to Medicare hospital patients.

Supporters say the program is designed to ensure quality medical care. But critics say rural doctors are being unfairly judged by big city physicians and will end up being driven from the more remote parts of the country.

Medicare patients can represent up to 80 percent of a rural doctor's practice.

Judy Martin, communications director for the Texas Medical Foundation, acknowledges that the watchdog organization is investigating rural doctors more often than those in cities. But she says that is because rural physicians are less likely to be aware of the latest in medical developments, are less likely to abide by new pre-set Medicare billing procedures and often carry heavier Medicare case loads than urban doctors.

Thus far, 34 doctors in about 20 states have been disqualified from Medicare reimbursement under the peer-review program. Many of them are in rural areas, the only doctors in their communities.

Dr. Billy Bob Brame, a family doctor from Eldorado, Texas, and president of the Texas Medical Association, said the focus on rural doctors is prompting some to relocate and is forcing hospitals to shut down. Without Medicare patients, he said, the hospitals cannot survive.

As for rural practices, he said, "If I have someone I've treated for 20 years, I know what they've gone through over those years and so need fewer tests to make a diagnosis."

"We have kept charts for the patient rather than documenting everything for a review process," he said.

As of Sept. 30, 1986, the peer review organizations had identified 3,812 cases with "a pattern of questionable care or a single gross and flagrant episode," the Congressional Research Service said in a report to a Senate health subcommittee.

Sanctions had been recommended in 93 cases as of Jan. 31, according to the report. Among them, one hospital and 34 doctors were barred from the program and 17 physicians were fined. Thirteen cases were overturned by the office of the Inspector General, according to the report.

Rivero, the Kaufman County internist barred from treating Medicare patients, said he had only four weeks to plan his own defense once he was informed that he was under investigation. And, he said he knew little about the peer-review process.

Ms. Martin, of the Texas watchdog group, said her organization uses a "program of quality assurance" to determine whether a doctor is violating accepted professional care requirements. And every case is reviewed by an average of 25 doctors, she said.

"We have 27,000 practicing physicians in the state and have made 14 sanction recommendations as of Dec. 31," Ms. Martin said. "Eight have actually been sanctioned. Six others are still under consideration. None has been overturned."

Brame, who set up a program at Texas Tech University to recruit young doctors for rural areas, suggests the peer review organizations are being used as a hidden budget scalpel by the administration to cut away at the Medicare budget.

Adds Sen. George Mitchell, a Maine Democrat and chairman of the Senate health subcommittee, "Unfortunately, the program has not complied with the intent of Congress in assuring quality of care in hospitals for Medicare beneficiaries. The program has become solely a cost-containment mechanism, totally budget driven."

End Adv for Tues AMs, March 31

SANCTIONED — Dr. Manuel Rivero, right, examines one of his patients in his Kaufman, Texas, office. Rivero is one of several rural doctors who have been sanctioned by a peer review, causing a loss in Medicare and Medicaid business. (AP Laserphoto)

AIDS Test Fight Over

WASHINGTON (AP) — A transatlantic quarrel over patent rights to AIDS screening tests is over and international research will be the prime beneficiary, health officials say.

In an agreement announced at the White House Tuesday, research institutions in the United States and France agreed to smooth over their differences and divide patent rights to the technology for the tests. The agreement ends more than a year of legal tangling that caused ill-will among scientists on both sides.

President Reagan and French Prime Minister Jacques Chirac, on a visit to the United States, announced settlement of the patent dispute and pledged renewed international cooperation in fighting the deadly disease.

"We in the United States and France have very, very good and efficient scientists, and we will now work together and also create a foundation to fight against AIDS," Chirac said during the White House appearance.

"I feel very good about it," said Dr. Robert Gallo, head of the American research team. "For the first time in a few years, I can concentrate on the problem of AIDS and not have to concern myself with legal hassles."

The agreement between the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services and the Pasteur Institute in Paris calls for the French to drop a lawsuit concerning patenting an AIDS test developed by U.S. government scientists.

Each side agreed to keep past proceeds from licensing agreements concerning AIDS tests they developed but to funnel most future revenues into a new international foundation for research into acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

The tests detect antibodies to the virus that causes AIDS, an indication of infection by the agent. They are used worldwide for screening blood supplies and identifying people who have been exposed to the virus.

Reagan, speaking at the White House ceremonies, said the two medical groups will share the patent, with each contributing 80 percent of the royalties to set up and support an international AIDS research foundation.

The foundation, he said, will also raise private funds, sponsor AIDS related research and donate 25 percent of the funds it receives to education and research of AIDS problems in less-developed countries.

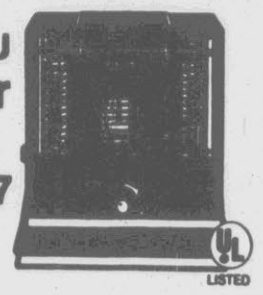

Ron Robertson, a Health and Human Services lawyer, said the agency and the Pasteur Institutes are now getting 80 percent of the royalties on the tests.

Washington Gets Taste Of Poetry In Annual Fling

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — This capital city, more comfortable with acronyms than anapests and with politics than pentameter, has had an unaccustomed invasion:

The poets are coming to town.

On Monday and Tuesday, 15 former consultants in poetry to the Library of Congress got together to compare notes and give two nights of public readings.

The occasion was the 50th anniversary of the consultantship, which began in 1937 with the appointment of anthologist and poet Joseph Auslander.

Absent, however, was the nation's first poet laureate, Robert Penn Warren, named to that position by the library last year after Congress added the title to the traditional post of consultant.

Warren, 81, was invited and the library had announced he would attend.

In a telephone interview from his home in Fairfield, Conn., however, he said, "I haven't been very well, lately, up and down. I couldn't think of doing that now."

What can poetry make happen in a city preoccupied with the Iran-Contra crisis, next year's presidential elections and congressional battles over the budget?

"Not anything as far as I know," said Warren. "It exists. Somehow, people have always wanted it to exist."

Poets are not strangers to Washington. Several live here, including one of the former consultants, retired University of Maryland English professor Reed Whittemore.

They visit from time to time to give readings. Robert Frost read at President Kennedy's inauguration, and James Dickey at one of the gala events held for President Carter's oath-taking.

They occasionally write about the capital.

There is, for instance, Randall Jarrell's "Woman at the Washington Zoo," who wears her "dull null Navy" to work daily with no complaints or comments "from my chief, the Deputy Chief Assistant, nor his chief ... "

There is Elizabeth Bishop, who looked out the window of the poetry consultant's third-floor office at the library and observed a lunette on the Capitol Dome "like a big white old wall-eyed horse."

There is even one Washington poet, Ernest Kroll, who has his words inscribed in stone on a Pennsylvania Avenue square, asking

How shall you act the natural man in this

Invented city, neither Rome nor home?

But it is the consultants at the library, usually one at a time, who have been poetry's most consistently visible presence in Washington.

The position was established in 1936 with an endowment presented anonymously by Archer M. Huntington, heir to a railroad fortune and Family Farm Supplies Daffodils To Dealers Across Eastern U.S.

By SCOTT PRICE
The Beaufort Gazette

BEAUFORT, S.C. (AP) — As springtime nears, a family tradition continues to bloom on Kane Island, just south of Beaufort. It's the Trask family daffodil farm, and each year at this time, nature turns the 40-acre tract of land into a sea of bright yellow.

Owned by Flora G. Trask and operated by her son, John M. Trask Jr., and his wife, Caroline, the farm supplies flowers to dealers across the eastern part of the nation.

The idea to raise the sturdy perennials on Kane Island was started by John M. Trask Sr. in the late 1960s. John Trask Jr. said, "We've been growing daffodils for probably over 20 years."

The family used to grow only vegetables on Kane Island, Trask said, while some daffodils were raised on nearby Orange Grove Plantation, where Trask now lives.

"All of them (the daffodils) have been consolidated at Kane Island for around 15 years," he said, adding that his father planted the crop that is there now. The same bulb will flower each year, sending shoots under the ground that develop into bulblets.

Trask said the flower is formed the year before. "This spring, the flower is formed for next year's crop," he said.

Mrs. Trask said the family also used to raise irises and gladioluses, but soon concentrated on the daffodils — particularly the popular "King Alfred" variety. She said there are many reasons they decided to stick with daffodils.

"Because it's a perennial, we don't have to replace them every year," she said. "This particular variety has withstood the test of time."

Other varieties include "Dutch Master," "Carlton" and "Fortune."

"Each has a little different variation," Trask explained. He said once the bulb is planted, there is a minimal amount of cultivation required because the daffodils are not quite as sensitive as other crops. The daffodils are weeded and fertilized.

"No insecticides are needed," he said.

They don't even water the crops. "God does all that," Mrs. Trask said. Because the family only sells wholesale, daffodils from Kane Island Farms aren't available locally. Trask said the farm supplies daffodils to places such as Atlanta; Richmond, Va.; Washington, D.C.; New York City and New Jersey.

"And then up to New Haven, Conn., and as far north as Boston and as far west as Chicago," he said, adding daffodils are big with the street vendors and chain stores.

"It's a relatively inexpensive flower. It's an impulsive item. It's the first sign of spring. This time of year, people up there are ready for some sign of spring," he said.

He said the toughest competition in daffodils comes from Holland, England, and Washington state. "They ship theirs by air — they have to pick it when the bud is very tight," he said. Trask said the shelf life of daffodils varies. "If you keep them in a cooler and if they're picked where the buds are still tight," shelf life is two to three weeks, he said.

Iraqi Project Restores Monument To History

Babylon's Splendor Rises Again

By JOHN RICE
Associated Press Writer

BABYLON, Iraq (AP) — This ancient "fairest of the kingdoms" is rising again on the Euphrates plain in an Iraqi restoration program, 2,500 years after the Hebrews fled from exile with curses upon it that echo across history.

Babylon, 60 miles south of Baghdad, was the place of the Tower of Babel, whose foundations are still visible; the stories of the three men in the fiery furnace, Daniel in the lion's den, and the handwriting on the wall.

It also is the place of one of the Seven Wonders of the World, the Hanging Gardens, but an Iraqi researcher says he doubts they ever existed as such.

From Genesis to the last chapters of Revelations, Babylon was a byword for splendor and sin to the biblical authors, whose views were colored by the Hebrews' forced exile here under King Nebuchadnezzar H, the last great Babylonian king.

"Never again shall she be inhabited," wrote the prophet Isaiah in chapter 13 of the Old Testament's Book of Isaiah, after the Hebrews were conquered. "No man shall dwell in her through all the ages. There no Arab shall pitch his tent, nor shepherds fold their flocks. ... Jackals shall occupy her mansions and wolves her gorgeous places."

But to modern Iraqis, Babylon is a monument to the region's history as the birthplace of writing and law, and they have begun a task likely to take many years to restore the city that dates from around 2000 B.C. Officials have set no time limit nor do they give any idea how much it will cost.

Iraq itself is considered by many historians to be the cradle of civilization dating as far back as 6,000 years to the time of the Sumerians whose city states flourished as early as 3500 B.C.

The Iraqis have begun rebuilding several major structures from Nebuchadnezzar's time and plan to unveil them this summer in an international culture festival.

The government considers the project so important it has exempted some Iraqis from military duty in the war against Iran to work on it, said site director Donny George Yokhana.

The ancient Temple of Ishtar has been rebricked, replastered and whitewashed. A new 4,000-seat Greek theater is rising on the site of the old.

Workmen on scaffolds are topping the ancient bricks of Nebuchadnezzar's palace with blocks from the government brick works.

The bitumen mentioned as mortar in the biblical story of Babel is still visible between the old baked mud bricks.

In Nebuchadnezzar's time in the 6th century B.C., Babylon was a sprawling city of perhaps a million people, one of the most powerful and cultured places in the world.

The city had been pillaged, destroyed and rebuilt several times before the Hebrews conquered by Nebuchadnezzar were brought there from Palestine in the late 6th century.

It survived some 400 years after they left in 538 B.C., until the descendants of Alexander the Great, who conquered Babylon and died there, moved their capital north to Selucia in 274 B.C.

Babylon's most famed early king was Hammurabi, who codified its laws 3,700 years ago and some 1,200 years before Nebuchadnezzar II.

Hammurabi's city today lies below

Modern Johnny Appleseeds Help Distribute Seeds To Fight Hunger

By PENNY PAGANO
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Tucked in cramped offices in the nation's capital, a fertile ground for flowering political careers, are some most unusual green thumbs.

Last year alone, these modern-day Johnny Appleseeds helped scatter 2.5 tons of seeds that produced $7 million worth of food. And the seeds were planted in all 50 states as part of 6,000 projects for groups ranging from a convent in Santa Barbara, Calif., to a soup kitchen in Brentwood, N.Y.

It is Operation Green Plant, a little-known national free seed distribution program run by America the Beautiful Fund, a non-profit group with a tiny staff, a shoestring budget of $123,000 a year and a goal to help plow corporate seed surpluses to help hungry Americans.

Since 1980, when Operation Green Plant got off the ground, America the Beautiful Fund has distributed about 12 tons of vegetable, herb and flower seeds to charitable, educational and community groups.

"This is probably one of the smallest budgets in Washington that does a program that covers all 50 states," said Nanine Bilski, the national projects director.

In this city, where politicians, lawyers and lobbyists regularly make decisions of global significance, the presence of myriad smaller organizations and their impact often goes unnoticed.

The fund was founded 22 years ago by Bruce Dowling, a former wildlife biologist, and a small group of preservation-minded people who believe that "the citizen involvement that made America great was in

Fan Mobilizes Forces To Improve TV Fare

By PATRICIA BRENNAN
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Dorothy Swanson was shocked when CBS announced that "Designing Women," "Hard Copy" and "Nothing Is Easy" would be shelved in favor of a Sunday-night movie.

It was the second time "Designing Women" had disappeared from the schedule, and Ms. Swanson, cofounder of Viewers for Quality Television, thought her efforts to save "Designing Women" had been successful.

Despairing, Ms. Swanson commented, "I may be moved to calling CBS 'Could Be Stupid.' If CBS cancels the shows, it means we need this organization (VQT) even more than I thought."

But "Designing Women" was back later in March in its old spot on Monday nights, the lead-in once again to "Cagney & Lacey." Both shows' producers expect the series to be renewed, and Ms. Swanson is delighted.

It's axiomatic that ratings rank No. 1 in determining whether television shows live or die. What effect the fans have on an individual basis is a topic networks address guardedly.

Last week CBS Entertainment president B. Donald "Bud" Grant said, "We try to pay attention to all the viewers in our audience. We like to know what they think about our programs, whether they represent only themselves or large groups."

Still, Ms. Swanson, 47, who has made a career out of being a fan, believes that "one individual person can make a difference." From her early letters to the producers of her favorite shows — notably "Cagney & Lacey," then "Designing Women" — to her efforts at building Viewers for Quality Television, Ms. Swanson accentuates the positive and mobilizes the undirected.

She reaches her approximately 850 members through a bimonthly newsletter that she writes and edits. (Box 195, Fairfax Station, Va. 22039. 703-425-0075.)

Ms. Swanson, who draws no salary but considers VQT a full-time job, is looking for funding for her efforts. Advertising is a possibility. VQT members are primarily women between 35 and 44 who earn $10,000 to $30,000 annually, most of them professionals with postgraduate degrees.

Articulate and eager to help the series she believes worthwhile, Ms. Swanson goes into overdrive when she mobilizes her membership. "Somebody has to channel that passion," said Ms. Swanson. "They have to tell them where to direct their interest."

Annually, the membership votes on programs that VQT should support, becoming especially active when favorite series are endangered. For "Cagney & Lacey, Ms. Swanson admitted she wrote many letters herself for people who "don't want to take the time to write the letter, but they'll sign it."

She encourages members "to send copies of their letters to TV critics. ... You just keep drawing attention to the fact that it's happening, and then the network is presented with an opportunity to take advantage of this groundswell of support and turn it into the kind of publicity that will then bring more viewers to their show. ... I think somehow it all works."

Ms. Swanson, daughter of a General Motors Corp. executive, grew up in the Detroit suburb of Birmingham, Mich., went to Hillsdale College, became a teacher and met and married her husband, who is now a partner in an insurance agency.

But just over a year ago, after 24 years of marriage, she left Michigan, her husband and teen-age son and moved to Fairfax, where she shares a house with a friend, Patricia Murphy, and Murphy's children.

Ms. Swanson's home office is filled with autographed pictures of the women stars of "Cagney & Lacey" and "Designing Women," files and a home computer.

Viewers for Quality Television had two mothers: Ms. Swanson and Donna Deen of Plano, Texas, who met in April 1984 when both appeared on a Washington TV show, Carol Randolph's "Morning Break."

" 'Cagney & Lacey' had been brought back, and I didn't think I'd feel that strongly about a show again," Ms. Swanson said. "Then I read about what she (Deen) was doing about 'St. Elsewhere,' which was sort of a campaign to bring it more media attention and stronger viewer support, and I thought, 'Now here's someone who feels like I do about television.'

"VQT was born, and much to our amazement the mail started pouring in. People said, 'I feel the same way you do. What can I do to improve the quality of our television programs? I want to participate. I'm tired of the Nielsens determining what I watch.'"

Ms. Swanson took most of her tips from "Cagney & Lacey" producer Barney Rosenzweig, who in 1983 had told the fans who had written him to contact major newspapers "because no one at CBS was reading the letters."

By enlisting the support of television critics, who had trumpeted that CBS was about to kill off its best series, he reasoned, the network could hardly ignore the public.

"Everything we did on the 'Designing Women' campaign was taken from how Barney told us to do it for 'Cagney & Lacey,'" said Ms. Swanson. "But I think I went at it a little more relentlessly. I really wanted this show back. At that time I was one person mobilizing friends and family all over the country."

Rosenzweig, noting that Ms. Swanson "is an important fan of ours," recalled that she was "one of 15 or 20 who wrote letters, each with their own circle of contacts. Dorothy has now taken it another step by organizing a group. Along with a lot of people, she was very helpful. It would be wrong and ungrateful to minimize what she did. But it would be less than sophisticated to think that all the letters put together saved the show."

Mike Buchanan of CBS public relations said last week that while network decision-makers acknowledge a large quantity of mail on a particular show, they "have access to a great deal of research" and rely on "their gut reactions based on years of experience in programming."

Ms. Swanson is concerned about the future of "Hill Street Blues" and "St. Elsewhere" but said that "unless the network and cast and producers want it to come back, I don't think you can bring it back against its will."

They are regarded by the VQT membership as quality shows, along with "Cagney," "Cheers," "The Cosby Show," "Family Ties," "The Golden Girls," "Kate & Allie," "Moonlighting," "Newhart" and "St. Elsewhere."

"Designing Women" ranked just below the top shows. "It was voted a 'possible quality show,' so I did not send out the letter to the entire membership," Ms. Swanson said.

"I called up the people who had put it down as a 'yes' or 'possible' and just selected them. ...

"I think that the days of passive consumerism for television are over. I think 'Designing Women' did that."

Oscar Wins Big Over Basketball

NEW YORK (AP) — Indiana may have eked out a win over Syracuse for the NCAA basketball championship, but the Academy Awards show was the big winner in the A.C. Nielsen ratings.

According to ratings from 13 major markets, the Oscars got a 33.8 rating and a 53 share Monday night.

The movie awards extravaganza on ABC was only head-to-head against the game on CBS after 9 p.m. EST. The game had started at 8 p.m.

Indiana won in the final seconds, 74-73. But the game's rating against the Oscars was only 19.1 with a share of 27.

The rating is a percentage of the nation's estimated 87.4 million households with television. The share is a percentage of the available viewing audience.

This year's Oscar show did considerably better than last year's, the lowest-rated ever with a 27.3 rating and a 43 share.

Seeds For Hungry

danger of being swallowed up by big government programs."

"Our main goal is to encourage people to practice good citizenship," Bilski said in an interview. "It's not something you have — it's something you do."

In addition to Dowling and Bilksi, who previously taught a film and television course at New York University's School of the Arts, there are two other full-time workers, two part-time staff members and a handful of volunteers — some of whom are assigned there as part of required public service work by the District of Columbia criminal court.

But at the core of the fund's work force is a field staff of about 500 volunteers. Dowling stressed that such volunteers are crucial to the success of small organizations such as his.

"It's like David and Goliath," said Dowling, a rumpled, self-effacing man who is now executive director of the fund. "We can do a Gargantuan program with a lot of volunteers. We can bypass a lot of forms and lost energy."

To make Operation Green Plant work, major seed companies have donated $1 million in seeds left in their stock after the planting season that still have a germination life of 85 percent or 90 percent. Companies such as Park Seed and Harris Seed have sent individual packages as well as bulk vegetable seeds, while others have provided flowers. The fund also relies on grants from foundations and contributions from corporations and individuals.

Babylon Arises

the ground water level, Yokhana said.

To reach it, he said, archaeologists would have to lower the water level, perhaps by diverting the Euphrates.

Most of Babylon's brown-brick ruins rest below the level of the ground, dotted with clumps of yellow grass and palm trees.

But most of the exposed brick was hauled away over the centuries by the modern city of Hilla a few miles south, Yokhana said.

The European excavators who first explored the site also carried treasures away.

One of Babylon's great monuments, the Ishtar Gate, stands today in an East German museum. Only the foundations of the gate, some 120 feet across, are now visible in Babylon.

Carved into the bricks are reliefs of oxen and a mythical beast called the mushrishu, with the head of a serpent, body of a fish, front legs of a lion and back legs of an eagle.

Some carvings have been scarred by graffiti that stand out over the occasional, original cunieform inscriptions on a few old bricks.

The Hebrew tribes were both awed and appalled by Babylon.

"Babylon has been a gold cup in the Lord's hand," wrote Jeremiah. He also called it "a land of idols that glories in its dreadful gods."

"Babylon the great, the mother of whores and every obscenity on earth," said the author of Revelations.

But said Moaiyad Saeed Dimugi, head of Iraq's Antiquities and Heritage Organization, "Babylon has been misunderstood."

He maintained that many stories in the Bible and elsewhere "are mixed up," noting that biblical writers sometimes confused the reigns of Babylonian kings.

Dimugi directs the restoration work at Babylon, where he did research that led him to doubt the Hanging Gardens.

"I believe there were no Hanging Gardens at all," he said.

He suggested that ancient visitors may have been confused by the Babylonian practice of decorating their towers with trees and plants once a year during a festival.

George Segal Makes Debut In 'Take Five'

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — It's so good to see George Segal's pained countenance on the television set, and what's more in a sitcom from those nice boys who brought us the movies "Night Shift" and "Splash."

"Take Five," premiering tonight on CBS, seems to have sort of imploded from all the talent, however. If it doesn't live up to expectations, it is still a pleasant, intelligent diversion.

Segal plays Andy Kooper, a public relations man who miffed his boss — also his father-in-law — and as a result, was blackballed in the industry.

"You have no job?" queries Kooper's psychiatrist, played by wonderful character actor Severn Darden.

"I have a job," Kooper says, "but somebody else is doing it."

Kooper finally lands a position, but with a catch. He has to clean up after the boss' incompetent son — without letting the kid know he's doing it.

The show also stars Derek McGrath, Bruce Jarchow and Jim Haynie as Kooper's buddies, Melanie Chartoff as a capable co-worker, and Todd Field as the spoiled kid. Eugene Roche makes a spectacular guest appearance as the bullish boss.

Segal, best known for his roles in such films as "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" "The Owl and the Pussycat," "Where's Poppa?" and "A Touch of Class," is making his first foray into series television.

"My only experience in TV has been the Carson show," he said in a telephone interview from California.

Doing the sitcom is "like a zen slap," he said. "You see the jokes that you used to say in movies 15 years ago have been rearranged. I feel a little like Rip Van Winkle."

Segal is waking up to find himself working with some of the funniest guys in recent film. "Take Five" is executive-produced by director Ron Howard and the pilot was written by screenwriters Lowell Ganz and Babaloo Mandel.

But the show also boasts script consultant Mel Tolkin, a writer on "Your Show of Shows." "With all the youth that we have, it's good to know we have some gray hair," Segal said.

Though he has spent his career in films, Segal professes no snobbism about television.

"I was just looking for the right format," he said. "I always thought it was going to be something like 'You Bet Your Life' or a musical comedy show."

Segal, who plays banjo and piano and sings, did get a Dixieland combo written into the premise — "The PR thing was theirs, and the band was mine, and we agreed on a psychiatrist."

'Star Trek IV' Whale Search Boosts Greenpeace Efforts

By DONNA CASSATA
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — When Adm. James T. Kirk and the crew of the Starship Enterprise saved the 23rd century Earth from an alien space probe, they also focused attention on Greenpeace's efforts to stop commercial whaling.

Is it logical to hunt a species to extinction, the half-Vulcan, half-human Mr. Spock asks in "Star Trek IV: The Voyage Home," as he and other members of the Enterprise crew go back in time to retrieve two humpback whales to neutralize the probe.

The Greenpeace organization, which for 15 years has fought to save the whales, heartily agrees with Mr. Spock, in real life actor-director Leonard Nimoy, and is grateful to him for the movie's focus.

"It's brought attention to the fact that whaling is still going on," says Gene Wilkinson, wildlife legislative director at Greenpeace's Washington chapter. "The whale population is vulnerable to the point of extinction.

"Also it stands for a whole lot of species that countries are exploiting or losing due to extinction," Wilkinson said.

"Star Trek IV: The Voyage Home" portrays the humpback whale as being extinct since the 21st century. The alien space probe, which is draining power from the 23rd century Earth, emits sounds the crew eventually determines to be that of the whale.

The crew jets back to 1986 to capture two humpback whales, transport them to the future and save Earth.

Since its November release, the movie has grossed $107.3 million, placing it among the top five films of 1986, said Harry Garrison, an analyst for Paramount Pictures. "Star Trek IV" also has garnered four Academy Award nominations, including cinematography, original score, sound and sound effects editing.

Translating the movie's gross into number of viewers is difficult with variables such as discount tickets and complimentary passes, according to Paramount officials.

Greenpeace, though, heard from some of those movie-goers soon after the film hit the screen.

The Washington, D.C., office, one of six regional offices nationwide, noticed a marked increase in phone calls and letters, with school children requesting information for assignments and members of the general public wondering whether whaling was still going on.

Russ Wild, assistant media director, said that of approximately 75 people who saw the movie and wrote to the organization immediately following the film's release, 60 included donations. The receptionist at the chapter's office fielded about 25 calls a day, Wild said.

However, the organization did not keep an official count of the calls and letters, Wilkinson said. And although donations increased, Greenpeace is unsure whether a membership drive or the movie is responsible.

"All of the elements ... subtly reinforce why Greenpeace exists," said Wilkinson.

Greenpeace officials contend the movie has some factual errors. For example, the minke whale, not the humpback whale, is the target of commercial whalers from the Soviet Union, Norway, Iceland, Japan and South Korea.

"The humpback is no longer being hunted to the point of being commercially extinct," Wilkinson said.

But the National Marine Fisheries Service has classified the humpback as endangered, with only 10,000 remaining from the approximately 120,000 that once existed.

The movie also showed a Finnish whaling crew hunting the ocean-dwelling mammals. Finland, however, has honored the full moratorium on commercial whaling that was passed by the International Whaling Commission in 1982, Wilkinson said.

"If this had been a Jacques Costeau documentary, it would be unforgivable," said Peter Dykstra, media director for the local chapter. "For the frame of reference that is Hollywood ... the message is right on the money."

Greenpeace, which began in 1971 as the 12-member Don't Make A Wave Committee in Vancouver, British Columbia, has national organizations in 17 countries and 1.5 million members worldwide.

Employing mostly young, idealistic volunteers, the group campaigns on a range of environmental and anti-war issues, with an emphasis on wildlife protection, toxic-waste disposal and nuclear weapons.

The group is known for sending out volunteers in rubber boats in the path of whaling harpooners — a fact not lost on Nimoy, who along with William Shatner, who plays Kirk, are active contributors to Greenpeace.

"There's a homage to Greenpeace in the movie because the idea of putting the spaceship between the whaling ship and the whales and being hit by the harpoon has Greenpeace roots," Nimoy said in a published interview in November.

"Greenpeace used to go out in rubber rafts in front of the Russian ships to try to prevent them from firing their harpoons, and that's where that idea came from.

"But I did not set out to make a cause film," he said. "It's a piece of entertainment in which there are some ideas."

Pitt County is located approximately 30 miles inland from the coastal sounds, 80 miles from the Atlantic Ocean and roughly 150 miles from the Appalachian Mountains.

New Dawn

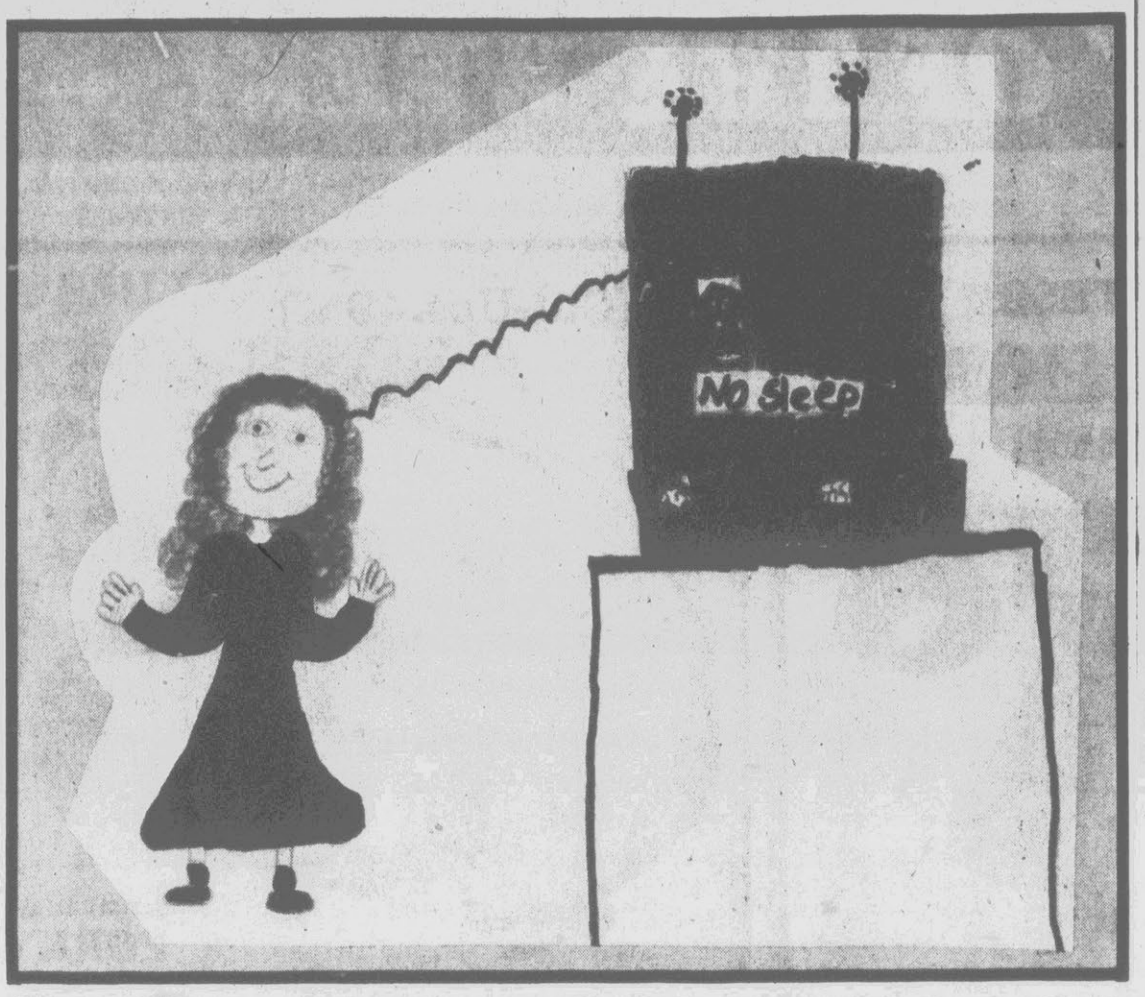

By Jon Carson

A tear of grief slides down a weary face shrouded in the soft glow of a flickering candle.
A prisoner of the shadows
he has but one dream:
That the dark and the cold and the curse of night be vanquished by the light and the warmth of day.
But the sun has gone away to retire beneath the hills.

And an eye peers longingly at the wets for the sun was a young sun;
it knew of youthful things, of magical yellow light shining on sandcastles at the beach, of candy-sweet snow cones glistening in the summer heat, of rainbow balloons set free near the silver pond.
But the sandcastles have all washed into the dunes beneath the sea.
The snow cones have all melted from the fatal kiss of the sun.
And so much the balloons did love their flight
they could not return.
He knew his mistress would depart for she had shown him the world.
And she left in haste, proud of the work she had done, triumphantly leaving in an explosion of crimson and orange.
And night stalked across the land, whispering spells with its cold breath.
He spreads confusion as he aimlessly wanders down forgotten paths near tombs of sorrow.
He deems the tombs are fine resting places for he grows weary.
But a voice from within tells him to go on and wait for the hour of her return.
And still he wanders with but a candle in his hand and a dream in his heart...

Lo! The time of her return is near:
a faint glow blankets the eastern sky.
The songbirds cantate in hopeful expectation of her triumphant entry into the realm.
He senses her presence as the domed sky transends from black to blue.
He knows somehow she is different:
Perhaps her slumber has changed her.
A finger of muted orange light points through the trees on the mountain.
It strikes him, and he feels her warm touch.
His heart pounds with joy for a new dawn has arrived.
It broke through the hills;
it penetrated the trees;
it conquered the heavens.
It was a dawn of hope,
of patience,
of kindness.
It was a dawn of love.

Jon Carson, 15, a student at J.H. Rose High School wins this week's writing contest.

"Nights Awake" is a machine that keeps you awake. The machine sends messages to your brain like nerves do. This gives you new information. It also gives things to your body that will not allow you to sleep. You just don't feel sleepy. Now you can stay up to do anything you want at nighttime. But there's one thing you need to know. You have learned in Health that you need sleep to help you stay healthy. Nights Awake gives you the energy that you need and helps you stay healthy.

A Letter From A Log

By David Christian

Hi! I'm a log. In my job I'm a roaring success, that is, when I'm a fireplace.

My owners don't really care about me. First of all, they put me on a rack outside in the middle of winter. Out there you freeze to death as you see everybody running around in nice heavy jackets. But do they ever stop and say, "Here log, do you want my coat? I would be happy to keep you warm now, seeing as how someday you'll keep me warm." Noooo! And then it starts to rain, a freezing rain, and then it snows, not just the kind that falls off when it hits me. Oh no! This kind is always the kind that sticks to me.

And then they deceive me by taking me inside. You think they're going to make you a nice centerpiece for the dining room table, or maybe they'll put you on the mantle and you'll live in the nice warm house forever and ever. But they squish you in the fireplace with all your friends and then they light the match. They touch the match to your skin and you start to burn. (I'll spare you the details). In the fire they separate part of you into smoke, which goes up the chimney, and when it reaches the outside it's known as pollution. What an insult! My mother surely didn't raise me to be known as pollution. They separate the rest of you into ash, which they bury, not in respect for you, which you deserve for dying for them, but to help their plants and trees grow. They probably want to burn the trees they're growing too.

I hope this little letter will open your human eyes to what cruelty you humans are showing us logs! I hope you will deal with us in a little kinder way.

Sincerely,
The Log

P.S. Don't write back because the paper will be burned. And that means my friends who made the paper will also be burnt.

David Christian, 12, a student at South Greenville School receives special mention.

My Dog — A True Story

By Robbie Bridges

My name is Robbie Bridges. This is a story that happened to me, January 28, 1987. My dog was going to have puppies but she died when it happened. My father and mother took a knife to get the puppies out of my dog's stomach. I do not know what was inside the dog but my mother and father do. They told me that there were 15 puppies, total. They got two puppies that were still alive. We took a hairdryer to get them warm. We got a big box and a milk bottle.

Please Don't Love My Outward Part

By Gina Smith

Don't love me for my walking grace,
Don't love me for my pretty eyes or face,
Do not love my outward part,
But love me for what's in my heart!

For these are sure to go away
When I am feeble, old, and grey,
So please don't love my outward part,
But love me for what's in my heart!

Gina Smith, 15, a student at E.B. Aycock School receives special mention.

FOCUS

New Fools

April Fool's Day began because of a change in the calendar. In 1564, the King of France adopted a calendar that moved New Year's Day to January 1. Previously, the new year had been celebrated between March 21 and April 1. Not everyone was pleased with the switch. Many people continued to celebrate the New Year on April 1. These folks were called "April fools." Fooling friends and relatives on the first of April soon became a popular custom.

If we were to tell you that the fulfilling trick in declarer's slam contract came from the queen of clubs, you would, considering the date, be justified in being sceptical. But this is no April Fool's tale. Watch how the play unfolded.

South's decision go for slam is reasonable. He had a fit for his partner's suit, his diamond honors were superbly placed behind the overcall and he had a singleton in the unbid suit. All that remained after a diamond lead was for him to bring home his contract.

Obviously, West's diamond lead was a singleton. East confirmed that by making the discovery play of the jack, won by declarer's queen. A trump to the king brought the news of the 4-0 break. Declarer could do nothing better than run the queen of spades, then repeat the finesse. East correctly refused to cover.

Declarer reeled off four rounds of trumps to draw all West's fangs, then cashed ace of spades. That brought about this position:

When declarer led his last trump, East could not discard a diamond. Also, he saw that if he clung to the ace of clubs, he would be thrown in with that card and forced to lead away from his king of diamonds into declarer's A10 tenace. So he jettisoned the ace, but to no avail. Declarer led a club, and there was now no way to prevent dummy's queen from being the entry to the good spade.

Spring Allows Burials Delayed By Maine Winter

By CAREY GOLDBERG
Associated Press Writer

AUGUSTA, Maine (AP) — Charles Hewins stood in the basement of his funeral home before an array of steel vaults holding a dozen caskets awaiting the burial that has been delayed by the frozen ground and snow of winter.

Brightly colored ribbons taken weeks ago from funeral floral displays were attached to some of the closed vault doors.

"The ones with the ribbons are occupied," Hewins said recently.

For most of the smaller cemeteries in Maine, the arrival of spring after a long winter freeze always brings a rush of burials, and this winter's unusually heavy snows have stopped work even in some graveyards that usually stay active.

By the time the season's first blizzard hit in December, it already was clear there would be no municipal burials in Biddeford this winter, City Clerk Luc Angers said.

Although Biddeford normally manages to dig the half-dozen graves in the city cemetery it needs each winter, Angers said, "with the depth of the snow it would be too hard to find the plots, and we had frost in the ground at that point."

The bodies that were to be buried by the city of 19,000 residents instead went into storage.

Though often unavoidable, delayed burial can add to the burden on grieving relatives, said Paul Garriepy, president of the Maine Cemetery Association.

Hewins, whose Knowlton and Hewins funeral home is one of Maine's largest, agreed. "It's unfinished business," he said.

Sometimes, he added, families want to come back and see a dead relative in the receiving vault weeks after the death.

Hewins tries to discourage such visits. "You've (already) said your physical, visual goodbye, and you aren't going to get over this thing if you use the body as a crutch," he said.

Garriepy said sometimes families that have been hit by particularly traumatic deaths insist on winter burials no matter what the cost. And in one case, he recalled, a woman chose to bury her husband in a Biddeford cemetery because it was active in winter even though she owned a plot elsewhere.

"She wanted him buried and that's it, she didn't want to wait," he said.

Undertakers estimated that fewer than half the relatives of people who die in the winter attend a spring burial.

Bereaved relatives and friends often do not want to reopen the wound that is just beginning to heal after two or three months, said Nick Susi, chairman of the state Board of Funeral Service.

Despite the extra pain that the winter wait can cause, thought, he hears few mourners complain. "It's always been a fact of life in this area."

Susi described the beginning of spring for funeral directors in northern Maine as "three or four weeks of bedlam, starting soon."

Spring is also hectic for funeral suppliers.

Swan's Wilbert Vault Co., Maine's largest supplier of the concrete vaults that keep the ground from settling as a coffin deteriorates, installs an average of about 250 a month in winter, but that jumps to as many as 700 a month in spring, says owner Steve Swan.

Those cemeteries that stay active through winter have to make special provisions.

The Maine Veterans Memorial Cemetery in Augusta covers an area big enough for 400 graves with a foot-thick layer of straw in the fall to hold back the frost, said Superintendent Harold Irish. If a reserved lot in another area is needed, workers use jackhammers to break through the frozen ground, he said.

To fight the confusion of finding lot markers under deep snow, Irish has a system of pipes with marked cables that can be unreeled along the length of a row to show where the lots begin and end.

If the veterans cemetery stopped work in winter, it would face 300 extra burials come spring, Irish said, adding that it serves the entire state, and more people die in winter than in any other season.

"People just can't wait for spring," he said.

Poets

Auslander served from 1937 until 1941, when Archibald MacLeish, the Pulitzer Prize-winning poet who had by then become librarian of Congress, decided to make the appointment an annual one.

"Real jobs were assigned then," recalled Warren, who was the second consultant under the new system, serving in 1944-45.

One of Warren's jobs was to check the library's collection of late 19th century poetry to see what volumes were really on the shelves.

"The catalogs weren't dependable," he said. "See the books, look at the books one by one and see what was there. That was the basic task."

Others have performed other tasks. Jarrell, for instance, helped plan an expanded program to collect manuscripts and papers of American writers. Whittemore held a symposium on little magazines.

Some poets have complained that the act redesignating the position as "poet laureate consultant in poetry" makes too close a link between poetry and government and that the title of laureate is more appropriate to England than America.

"Ask the librarian what it is," said Warren. "I'll tell you one thing, it's no job. It's a mere name attached legally by the Congress to the real job of consultantship. That's the real post."

As to writing poems about public events, one of the traditional duties of England's poet laureate, Warren said, "Of course not. Why should I, or why should anybody in our country?"

Consultants attending the reunion, and the years in which they served, were Karl Shapiro, 1946-47; Richard Eberhart, 1959-61; Howard Nemerov, 1963-64; Whittemore, 1964-65; Stephen Spender, 1965-66; Dickey, 1966-68; William Jay Smith, 1968-70; William Stafford, 1970-71; Josephine Jacobsen, 1971-73; Daniel Hoffman, 1973-74; Stanley Kunitz, 1974-76; William Meredith, 1978-80; Maxine Kumin, 1981-82; Anthony Hecht, 1982-84; and Gwendolyn Brooks, 1985-86.

Mrs. Jacobsen, who lives in Baltimore and comes to Washington frequently, said in a telephone interview, "I think it is a very poetry conscious city, certainly one of the most that I have ever lived in. I think the library has focused attention on poetry and ... has kept pushing poetry to the front as something that is really worthwhile and really applicable to life now."

Tasty Eastern Recipes Feature Visiting Shad

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

"Eat Mo Shad" is the recommendation as Grifton honors the saltwater fish during the 17th annual Grifton Shad Festival under way today through Sunday.

The shad is a fish in the herring family that migrates to fresh water rivers and streams to hatch its eggs from late February to late April.

Shad common to the Grifton area are the White or American shad and the Hickory shad. They are most plentiful in March and are found in area creeks and rivers. They are usually caught by casting or trolling.

Try the shad recipes listed from the 1987 festival brochure "Life, Liberty and the Pursuit of Shad."

EASTERN NORTH CAROLINA FISH FRY

Use an iron pot and a gas burner to fry fish outdoors. Fill pot with 48 ounces of cooking oil. Heat until oil sizzles when a piece of food is dropped in.

For small fish such as herring or hickory shad, cut closely-spaced gashes along both sides of the fish, about 1/4 inch apart.

For larger fish such as American Shad, cut crossways through the backbone into pieces about 3 or 4 inches long.

Put cornmeal, salt and pepper in bag, add fish, and shake to coat fish.

Drop fish in hot oil and cook about 10 minutes or until fish floats. Scoop fish out with slotted spoon or french fry basket.

Serve with hushpuppies and slaw. Optional: Drop 1 tablespoon vinegar into hot oil for each batch of fish just before fish begins to float. This softens the bones so they can be eaten. (Recipe contributed by Leo Brown.)

GRIFTON SHAD FESTIVAL FISH STEW

This is the recipe used in the annual Grifton Shad Festival fish stew each April. Any kind of fish can be used, but rock and catfish are less bony than shad and more plentiful in April. (The peak of the shad fishing season in Grifton is March.) Shad makes extremely tasty stew, but many people do not like to pick out so many bones.

Stew can be cooked inside in an ordinary pot, or outdoors in an iron pot over a gas burner. It's good either way. When cooked outside men are often the cooks.

Ingredients are seldom measured, and seasonings are added according to taste. More or less of each ingredient can be used.

1/2 pound fatback or slab bacon
5 pounds white potatoes (sliced)
5 pounds onions (sliced)
4 pounds rockfish, striped bass, puppy drum, catfish, shad or any firm fish, cut in 2-inch pieces crossways through the backbone salt and pepper to taste
1/2 teaspoon crushed red pepper
1 can tomato soup
1 dozen eggs

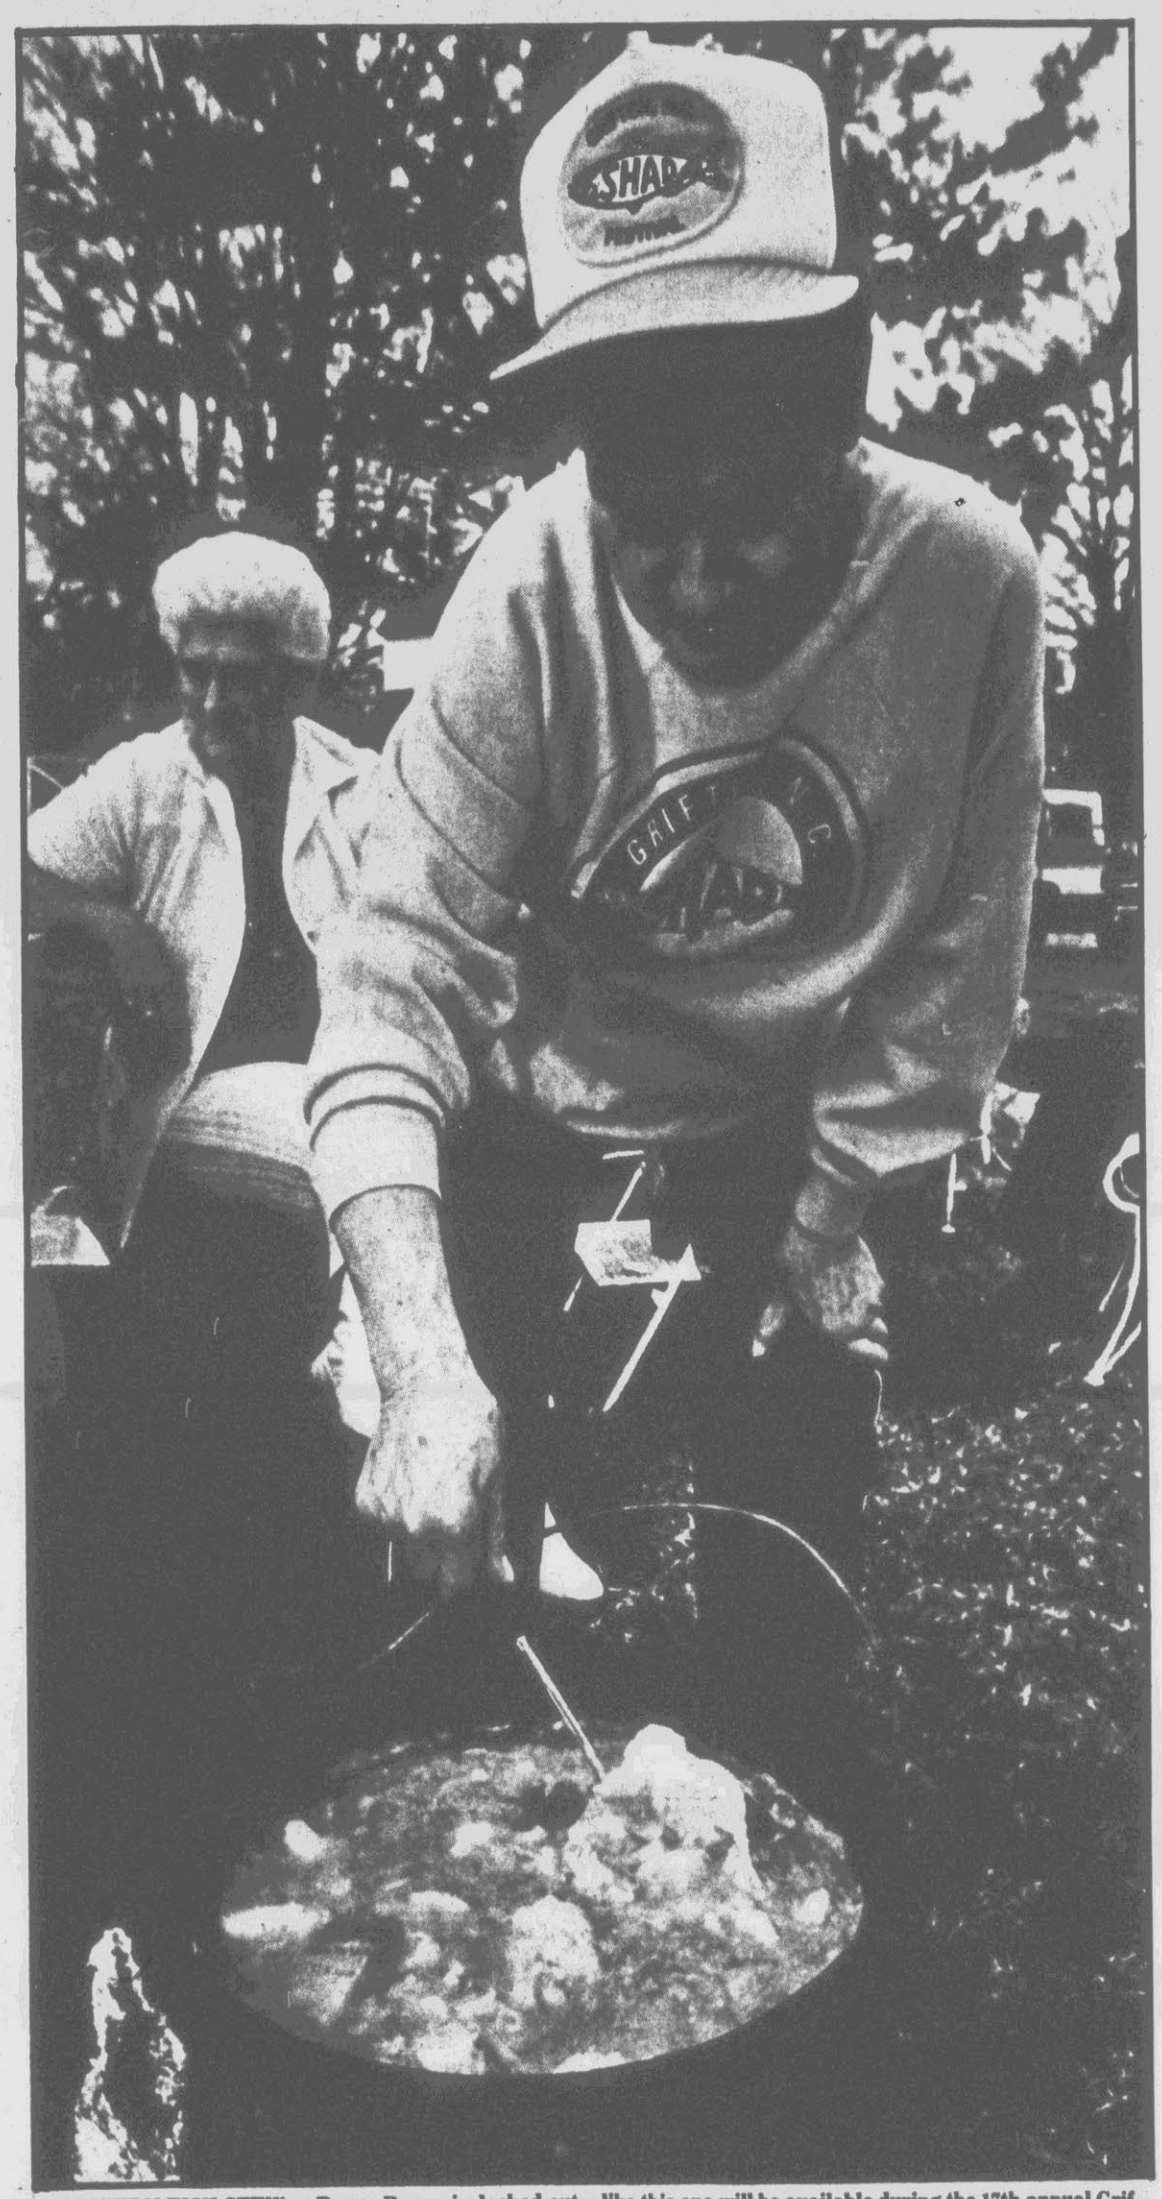

Put fatback or bacon in bottom of pot and fry. Leave grease in pot and remove fried meat. (optional: leave fried meat in pot) Add other ingredients, layering them beginning with onions, then potatoes, then fish, more onions, more potatoes, more fish, etc. Sprinkle with salt and pepper as you add ingredients to pot. When stew comes to a boil, turn heat down to medium and cook about 1 1/2 hours. Do not stir, as this will break fish into small pieces. Do shake the pot from time to time to keep stew from sticking to bottom. About 20 minutes before stew is done, add 1 can of tomato soup and break eggs into the stew. Allow eggs to cook in the liquid until yolks are hard-boiled. Plan about 1 egg per person, or more eggs, as this is very popular and a distinguishing ingredient of Eastern North Carolina Fish Stew. Add more red pepper if you like it hotter in flavor. Serve with hushpuppies, bread, and slaw. This will feed 8 to 10 people. (Recipe contributed by Peggy Brown.)

BAKED SHAD WITHOUT BONES

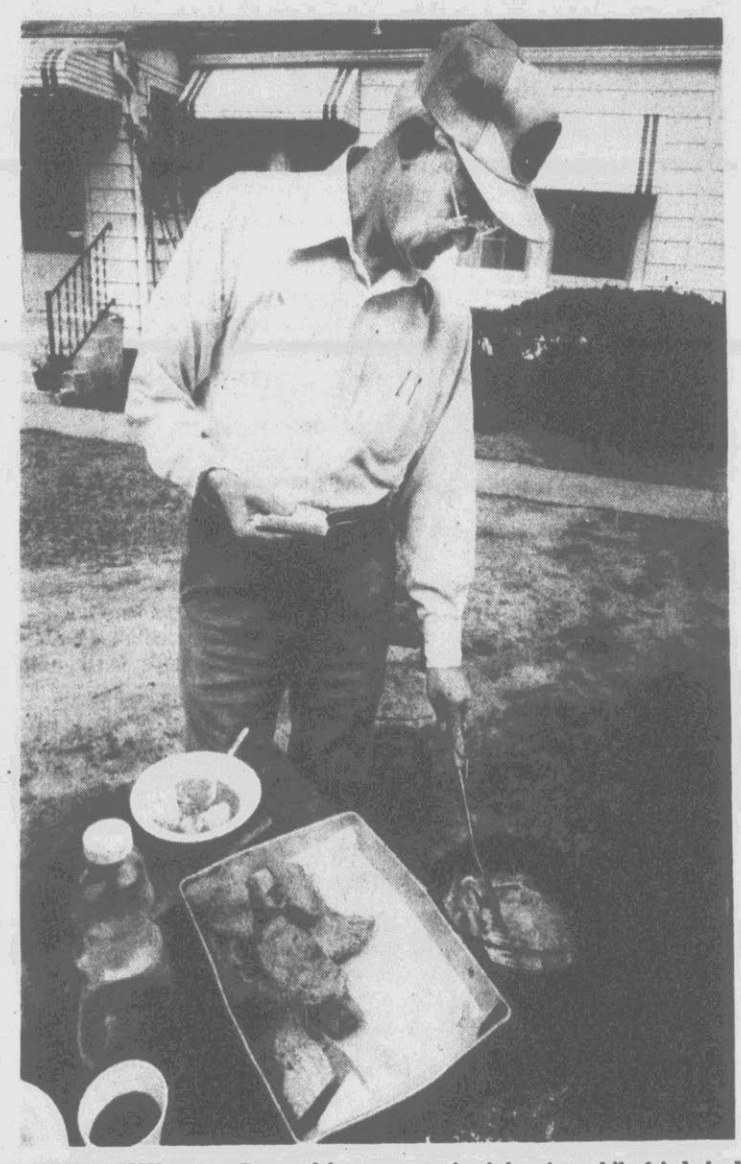

Removing bones from shad before cooking is a difficult job. Shad baked by this recipe can be eaten, bones and all, because the bones will dissolve during baking.

Cut gashes about 1/4-inch thick apart along both sides of shad (3 pounds or larger) and place on large piece of aluminum foil. Sprinkle about 2 tablespoons of vinegar on fish. Surround fish with sliced onions and sliced white potatoes.

Place 4 slices of bacon on top of fish. Salt and pepper to taste. Fold and seal aluminum foil and place in a baking pan in 300-degree oven. Bake at least 6 hours. All the little bones will dissolve; everything can be eaten except the backbone. (Macon Quinerly's recipe contributed by Peggy Brown.)

EASTERN FISH STEW — Peggy Brown is decked out in shad festival apparel as she stirs up some fish stew using rock as the featured ingredient. The stew can be prepared using shad, rock, herring or other fish. Dishes like this one will be available during the 17th annual Grifton Shad Festival today through Saturday. (Reflector Photos by Cliff Hollis)

FRIED FISH — Leo Brown fries up some fresh herring while fried shad cools on the corner of the table. Accompanying recipes tell how to fry fish so that all but the backbone can be eaten.

With Microwave, No Need To Stew Over Fish

By MARIE BIANCO
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

One of the nicest things about a microwave oven is the way it cooks fish — moist, flaky, tender. The sauce for this fish stew can even be made the day before and brought to a simmer before adding the seafood.

Prepare the rice first so that it can absorb its liquid while the stew is cooking. The rice will come out perfect with no burning or sticking.

If your dish does not have a tight cover, use a dinner plate. These recipes were tested in a 650-watt microwave oven on high power, unless otherwise indicated.

MICROWAVE RICE

1 3/4 cups liquid (water, chicken stock, clam broth)
1/2 teaspoon salt (use only with water)

In a 3-quart microwave proof dish with a tight-fitting cover, combine rice, water and salt. Cook, covered, until water comes to a boil, about 5 minutes. Reduce heat to medium and cook an additional 10 minutes or until rice is tender. Stir gently and set aside for 5 minutes, covered, for rice to absorb remaining water. Fluff rice before serving. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

MICROWAVE SEAFOOD STEW

2 tablespoons olive oil
1 cup coarsely chopped onions
2 cloves garlic, chopped
2 cups canned, crushed tomatoes
1 green pepper, diced
1 cup clam broth
2 tablespoons chopped fresh parsley
1/2 teaspoon crushed thyme
1/4 teaspoon dried rosemary, crumbled
1 bay leaf
salt and pepper to taste
1 pound firm white fish (a mix of at least 2: haddock, monk, halibut, tile) cut into 1-inch cubes
1/2 pound sea scallops, cut in half
1/2 pound medium-size shrimp, shelled, deveined
1 pound mussels or Little Neck clams, scrubbed
dash of Tabasco

In a 3-quart microwave-proof bowl, cook oil, onions and garlic, covered, 5 minutes, stirring once or twice. Add tomatoes, green pepper, clam broth, parsley, thyme, rosemary, bay leaf, salt and pepper to taste. Cook, uncovered, 10 minutes. Stir the fish, scallops and shrimp into the sauce. Add mussels or clams on top. Cook, covered, for about 10 minutes or until fish flakes and shellfish open. Remove bay leaf. Sprinkle with Tabasco. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

MICROWAVE APPLE PEAR CRISP

3 medium apples, peeled, cored, sliced
3 medium pears, peeled, cored, sliced
2 tablespoons fresh lemon juice
2 tablespoons granulated sugar
1/2 cup quick-cooking oats
1/3 cup brown sugar
3 tablespoons all-purpose flour
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
1/4 teaspoon nutmeg
3 tablespoons butter
1 cup heavy cream, whipped

Arrange fruit slices in a buttered 10-inch pie plate. Sprinkle with lemon juice and 2 tablespoons granulated sugar. Cook, uncovered, for 5 to 6 minutes, stirring once. In a small bowl combine oats, brown sugar, flour, salt, cinnamon and nutmeg. Cut in butter and sprinkle over fruit. Cook 5 minutes, or until fruit is tender. Serve with whipped cream. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Seasonal Seafood Substitutes Help Save

By MARIE BIANCO
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Servide

Buying generic can save you money at the fish counter. Instead of searching out cod, or sole, or bluefish, ask for fish in the generic sense — firm, flaky or fatty; thick or thin; steaks or fillets — and be willing to substitute.

Fish is seasonal, and its price often depends upon the weather. If a recipe calls for firm thick cod steaks, and the calendar registers the middle of August, the price will be high, because the cod have traveled to colder waters. Substitute pollack or haddock.

The prices for thin, flat flounder and sole are highest during the fall; substitute fluke or porgy. Fatty bluefish is scarce right now, but mackerel is a bargain.

Your fishmonger will know what's available at the fish market (it's hoped he will have been there that morning), and relying on his good judgment will steer you toward the right type of fish at the right price.

There may be regional favorites, such as flounder, striped bass and fillet of sole in the Northeast, but hundreds of species of fish are harvested around the world.

Don't let an odd- sounding name like ling, lotte, dogfish, crappie, drum or cusk be a turn-off. At one time salt cod was the only fish available during cold weather. With air transport, fish caught off the coast of South America, or even New Zealand, are only a few hours away from your fish market all winter long.

The following recipes carry fish options for taking a seafood-lover through the seasons of the year.

PASTA PRIMAVERA WITH CHUNKS OF FISH

3 tablespoons olive oil
1 cup broccoli florets
1 cup green peas, frozen or fresh
1 cup thinly sliced carrot
1 small zucchini, sliced
1 red pepper, diced
4 scallions, chopped
1 pound white firm fish fillets (monkfish, grouper, tilefish)
1 cup heavy cream
1/2 teaspoon dried thyme
2 tablespoons chopped fresh Italian parsley
salt and pepper
12 ounces fettucine, cooked al dente
grated Parmesan cheese

1. In large skillet, heat oil and stir-fry broccoli, peas, carrots, zucchini, red pepper and scallions 5 minutes.

2. Cut fish into ½-inch cubes.

3. Place cream in a medium saucepan and bring to simmer. Add fish, thyme and parsley; simmer 5 minutes. Add cooked vegetables and toss gently. Season with salt and pepper.

4. Place hot cooked fettucine in serving dish and spoon sauce over pasta and toss gently. Sprinkle with Parmesan cheese. Makes 4 servings.

See, Smell, Touch

By MARIE BIANCO
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

Buying fish is as simple as see-smell-touch.

—Look for bright, colorful eyes; avoid those with a dull or cloudy look. The gills should be bright red or pink. If the gills are brown, the fish has been frozen. If the gills are white, it has been out of water too long.

—The fish should smell like the fresh aroma of the sea. The skin should not be slippery or slimy, and the scales should cling tight.

—The flesh should be elastic, yet firm. Press the fish with the fingertips; it should spring back.

—When buying steaks or fillets, avoid those with a dried-out appearance or a brown or yellow coloring around the edges. The pieces should be clean-cut, with no jagged edges.

—Try not to buy prepackaged fish. Fish should be packed in ice, not plastic foam.

—When choosing frozen fish, inspect the packages for water marks. Wrapping should look new, not abused. Feel the package; it should be solid with no air space.

Continental Chicken, Sour Cream Dish Still Popular

By ROSE DOSTI
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

Dear SOS: I remember cutting out a recipe for Chicken Smetane many years ago but foolishly lost the recipe. Do you still have it in your files? —SUE

Dear Sue: Here is a favorite from the '70s, resurrected. Smetana, the Russian word for sour cream, or smetane, the transliteration, is used when referring to continental dishes made with it.

CHICKEN SMETANE
1 small clove garlic
1 to 1 1/2 cups sour cream
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 1/2 teaspoons seasoned salt
1 teaspoon paprika
Dash hot pepper sauce
4 pounds chicken pieces
1 cup fine dry bread crumbs
1/2 cup butter or margarine, melted

Mash garlic well and combine with sour cream, lemon juice, seasoned salt, paprika and hot pepper sauce.

Coat chicken in sour cream mixture and chill, covered, several hours or overnight in refrigerator. Remove chicken from cream, allowing as much cream as possible to adhere to pieces.

Roll gently in crumbs and arrange in single layer in greased large shallow baking dish. Drizzle with melted butter and bake at 350 degrees about 1 hour or until chicken is tender and golden brown. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Dear SOS: Gardel's in Los Angeles serves a wonderful flan topped with a delicious sauce called dulce de leche. I have tried without success to duplicate the sauce and would be grateful if Gardel's would share the recipe. And while you are at it, I would love the flan recipe, as well. —JOSEPH

Dear Joseph: Tito Tarrago, owner, and chef Ricardo Macchi of Gardel's, an Argentine restaurant, were delighted to share the recipe. The dulce de leche (sweet milk) is actually a caramel sauce. The flan and the sauce are winners.

GARDEL'S FLAN
4 cups milk
1 1/4 cups sugar
1 1/2 tablespoons vanilla
4 egg yolks
5 whole eggs
Dulce de Leche (caramel sauce)
Sweetened whipped cream, optional

Combine milk, sugar and vanilla in saucepan. Bring to boil, stirring constantly so it does not stick to bottom of pan. Remove from heat and cool.

In separate bowl, mix, without beating, yolks and whole eggs. Add 1 cup milk mixture and blend well. Return egg mixture to remaining milk mixture in saucepan and mix well.

Pour into 6 (4½-inch) fan molds. Place in baking pan filled with about 1 inch water. Cover with foil and bake at 325 degrees 1½ hours or until custard becomes firm. Serve cold with Dulce de Leche and whipped cream.

Dulce de Leche
4 cups milk
1/4 teaspoon baking soda
2 1/4 cups sugar
1 whole vanilla bean pod
1 1/2 teaspoons butter
1/2 cup brown sugar, packed
3/4 cup light corn syrup
1/4 cup pancake syrup
1/4 cup butter or margarine, melted
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 cup chopped pecans
3/4 cup chopped fresh or frozen cranberries

Combine milk and baking soda in saucepan and bring to boil. Add sugar and vanilla bean. Mix well and simmer over medium heat, stirring occasionally.

Mixture will begin to turn light brown in color. Begin stirring constantly as soon as color begins to change to light brown. Add butter and blend well when mixture becomes creamy and thick. Remove immediately from heat and continue to stir until cool.

Cooking will take 1½ hours. Use as much as is needed for recipe. Store remaining for use within a week. Makes 2 cups.

Dear SOS: I have been trying for years to get the recipe for Indian fry bread, and you are my last hope. It is bread dough fried in peanut oil and sprinkled with powdered sugar. —PAT

Dear Pat: How about a recipe for fry bread from one of our favorite places, the Ranch House in Ojai, Calif. The bread can be served with honey, beans or meat.

RANCH HOUSE CAFE INDIAN FRY BREAD
5 1/2 cups flour
1 tablespoon baking powder
Dash salt
1 cup butter
2 cups milk
Oil for deep-frying
Powdered sugar, optional

Combine flour, baking powder and salt in large bowl. Cut in butter until mixture resembles coarse crumbs. Stir in milk until moistened. Do not over stir. Mix until smooth.

Roll out onto well-floured surface to ⅛-inch thickness. Cut into 24 (4-inch) circles or 10 (8-inch) circles (Dough can be stored in refrigerator up to 4 days at this point).

Heat oil for deep-frying to 400 degrees. Fry dough in deep oil until golden brown on both sides. Sprinkle with powdered sugar. Makes 2 dozen.

Dear SOS: While going through my old files, I discovered what is perhaps your lost recipe for Cranberry-Pecan Pie and decided to send it along. —MARY

Dear Mary: How kind of you. Let's print it even though fresh cranberries may be out of season. Fresh or frozen, cranberries are a good berry to keep in mind the year-round.

CRANBERRY-PECAN PIE
1 cup flour
1/4 cup cornmeal
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/3 cup shortening
1/4 cup cold water
4 eggs

Combine flour, cornmeal and salt in medium bowl. Cut in shortening until mixture resembles course meal. Add water, 1 tablespoon at a time, stirring lightly until mixture forms ball.

Wrap dough securely and chill about 30 minutes. Roll dough on lightly floured surface to form 13-inch circle. Fit loosely into 9-inch pie plate. Turn edges under and flute. Bake at 425 degrees 7 minutes. Cool.

In medium bowl, beat together eggs and brown sugar. Slowly add corn and pancake syrups, butter and vanilla, mixing well. Stir in pecans and cranberries.

Pour into partially baked pie crust. Bake at 325 degrees 40 to 45 minutes or until set. Cool thoroughly. Serve with whipped cream or ice cream, if desired.

Muffins Provide Quick Means To Fresh Bread

By NANCY BYAL
Better Homes and Gardens Food Editor

Remember how wonderful warm-from-the oven bread smells and tastes? Fresh bread can be more than a memory when you bake muffins. These light, crusty little breads are faster to measure, mix and bake than yeast breads and many other quick breads.

To reheat extra muffins in the microwave oven, place two muffins on a white paper towel on a microwave-safe plate. Cook, uncovered, on 100 percent power (high) for 15 to 20 seconds (40 to 50 seconds if frozen).

CARAWAY CHEESE MUFFINS
1 cup rye flour
3/4 cup all-purpose flour
1/4 cup sugar
2 1/2 teaspoons baking powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 beaten egg
3/4 cup milk
1/3 cup cooking oil
3/4 cup shredded cheddar cheese (3 ounces)
1 1/2 teaspoons caraway seed

In a large mixing bowl stir together the rye flour, all-purpose flour, sugar, baking powder and salt. Make a well in the center. In a small bowl combine egg, milk and oil. Add egg mixture all at once to flour mixture. Combine cheese and caraway seed; fold into batter. Fill greased or paper lined muffin cups 2-3rds full. Bake in a 400-degree oven for 20 to 25 minutes or until golden. Remove from pans; serve warm. Makes 12 muffins.

CARAWAY CHEESE MUFFINS — Lightly flavored with rye flour and caraway seed, these muffins taste great with soup or stew.

Rule Of Thumb For Asparagus: Don't Overcook It

By BETSY BALSLEY
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

Forget the calendar. Ignore the weather. Those tender-crisp first fresh green spears of the season say it all. Fat stalks of asparagus standing row upon row in the produce section are indisputable indications that spring is here.

This is the time of year that asparagus abounds at prices that make it accessible to most. This also is the season when the arguments begin over how to cook it properly. Should a batch of asparagus stalks be tied together and placed cut-end down in a narrow, deep pan designed primarily to cook this particular vegetable? Should they be cooked lying flat in a large skillet in a half-inch or so of water? Should they be steamed? Or microwaved?

The answer is easy. Any and all of the above. And do not overlook the idea of slicing them into inch-long pieces and stir-frying or sauteing them. Cook asparagus however you please. Just do not overcook it. That is the No. 1 crime one can commit against this delightful taste of spring.

Asparagus is dreadful when cooked to a limp state. It loses its spectacular texture and shape, tends to become stringy and, worst of all, turns a horrendous grayish tone. It was never intended to become mushy. But it does need cooking to bring out the best of its flavor. The tender tips will, of course, cook much faster than the more dense stalks, which is a point in favor of cooking the spears in an upright fashion. However, when the stalks are allowed to cook just to the tender-crisp state where a fork tine will pierce them easily, there is no reason any of the other suggested cooking methods are not suitable.

When buying asparagus, look for tightly closed tips and firm, well-greened stalks. Size selection is strictly a personal matter. Arguments have raged for years over whether the best asparagus is that which is skinny or the big, fat spears.

Once bought, if it is not to be used immediately, refrigerate the asparagus with the cut ends wrapped in paper towels. Do not wash asparagus until it is to be cooked. Then snap — do not cut — the tough ends from each stalk. Plunge the spears into water to wash them, trim the lower (and tougher) nibs from the stalks with a vegetable peeler or sharp knife and proceed with whatever recipe you have in mind.

Early in the season, asparagus deserves to be savored with little more embellishment than a bit of melted butter or lemon juice. There is plenty of time later to do dramatic things with it. Here are some suggestions for those times.

ASPARAGUS SPOON BREAD
1 1/2 pounds asparagus
1 1/2 cups milk
1/2 cup cornmeal
2 eggs, separated
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon sugar
Cheese Sauce

Snap tough ends off asparagus stalks. Wash well. Cut into 1 1/2-inch lengths. Cook, uncovered, in boiling water to cover, about 8 to 10 minutes. Drain, reserving ½ cup liquid for Cheese Sauce.

In medium saucepan, gradually stir milk into cornmeal. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, until thickened to consistency of moist mashed potatoes, about 5 minutes. Remove from heat and cool slightly.

Beat egg yolks until well mixed. Add to cornmeal mixture with baking powder, salt and sugar. Mix well. Beat egg whites until stiff but not dry. Fold into cornmeal mixture.

Arrange asparagus pieces in bottom of well-greased baking dish. Pour cornmeal batter over asparagus, smoothing over asparagus and to edge of casserole. Bake at 375 degrees 45 to 50 minutes or until golden brown. Serve with Cheese Sauce. Makes 4 servings.

Cheese Sauce
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 tablespoon cornstarch
1 cup milk
1 cup cup grated Parmesan cheese
1/2 cup reserved asparagus liquid
½ teaspoon salt
1/8 teaspoon white pepper
1/4 teaspoon ground nutmeg

Melt butter in small saucepan. Stir in cornstarch to form smooth paste. Gradually stir in milk. Place over low heat and cook, stirring constantly, until mixture is thickened and comes to boil. Cook 3 minutes longer, continuing to stir. Add cheese, a little at a time, stirring until melted. Stir in reserved asparagus liquid, salt, pepper and nutmeg. Heat to serving temperature.

STUFFED TORTELLINI WITH ASPARAGUS
1/4 cup butter
3 cloves garlic, crushed
3 tablespoons flour
2 1/4 cups hot milk
Salt, pepper
1 tablespoon dry Sherry
2 (8-ounce) packages cheese- or mushroom-stuffed tortellini
1 pound asparagus spears

Melt butter in saucepan and saute garlic until lightly golden. Remove garlic. Stir in flour and cook over low heat 3 to 5 minutes. Return garlic to pan. Stir in hot milk. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Stir in Sherry. Keep warm. Cook tortellini according to package directions. Drain and keep warm. Steam or cook asparagus in boiling salted water 10 to 15 minutes. Drain and arrange on plate with tortellini. Pour garlic sauce over (Or cut up asparagus into 1-inch pieces and mix with sauce and tortellini). Makes 4 to 6 servings.

EGG SALAD ASPARAGUS MOLD
3 tablespoons unflavored gelatin
1 1/4 cups water
1 cup mayonnaise
2 teaspoons Dijon mustard
1/4 cup vinegar
2 teaspoons sugar
Salt, white pepper
1 1/2 dozen hard-cooked eggs, diced
2 tablespoons minced onion
1 (2-ounce) jar pimientos, chopped
1/2 cup minced celery
16 asparagus spears, blanched

Sprinkle gelatin over water. Let stand until softened. Heat, stirring, until dissolved. Whip in mayonnaise, mustard, vinegar, sugar and season to taste with salt and white pepper. Cool until mixture begins to thicken. Mix eggs with onion, pimientos and celery. Add gelatin mixture.

Spoon 1-3 of mixture into lightly oiled 9-inch loaf pan. Chill until almost set. Arrange half of asparagus spears atop egg mixture. Spoon over another 1-3 of egg mixture. Chill until partially set.

Arrange remaining asparagus spears over egg layer. Top with remaining egg mixture. Chill until set. Turn out onto serving platter. Garnish as desired and serve. Makes about 10 servings.
