Supreme Court Overturns Texaco Ruling

By JAMES H. RUBIN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court ruled today that a federal judge mistakenly excused Texaco Inc. from posting a potentially ruinous $12 billion bond in its court battle with Pennzoil Co.

By a 9-0 vote, the justices overturned a federal court ruling that Texaco need only put $1 billion in security while the case is pending in the courts.

But today's ruling left open the possibility that Texaco could avoid posting the $12 billion bond through a successful appeal in Texas state courts.

U.S. District Judge Charles Brient in White Plains, N.Y., "should have abstained" rather than reduce Texaco's bond, said Justice Lewis F. Powell for the court.

Powell said federal judges should not rule in such cases until state courts have the opportunity to review the issues raised.

He said the constitutionality of the $12 billion bond, which Texaco said could drive it out of business, is best left to the Texas courts for now.

"We cannot say that those courts, when this suit was filed, would have been any less inclined than a federal court to address and decide the federal constitutional claims," Powell said.

A state court jury found in 1985 that Texaco improperly interfered with Pennzoil's planned acquisition of an interest in Getty Oil Co. The jury awarded Pennzoil $11.1 billion against Texaco.

Texas, like most states, requires the losing side in such cases to post bond to protect the winning side. Texas requires a bond roughly equal to the judgment before the losing side is permitted to appeal.

Lawyers for Pennzoil, which is based in Houston, accused Texaco of going to federal court in White Plains, N.Y. — where Texaco is based — in an end run to avoid the Texas court ruling.

Brient ruled that the $12 billion bond could drive Texaco out of business, effectively denying it the right to appeal.

There has been speculation that a Supreme Court ruling favoring Pennzoil could pressure Texaco into settling the case.

A Texas appeals court last February upheld most of the multibillion-dollar award against Texaco.

The appeals court reduced the jury award to $8.5 billion. But with interest payments, the total amount owed by Texaco is believed to approach $12 billion.

Getty and Pennzoil announced Jan. 4, 1984, an agreement in principle to merge. Two days later, Texaco reached an agreement to acquire Getty.

Texaco argued there was no evidence that the company knew of any contract between Pennzoil and Getty.

Pennzoil insisted that Getty and Pennzoil had an agreement and that Texaco was aware of it.

In today's ruling, the Supreme Court did not decide whether state laws that require the posting of such large bonds are constitutional.

"We express no opinions on the claims Texaco has raised ... nor on the possibility that Texaco now could raise these claims in the Texas courts," Powell said. "Today we decide only that it was inappropriate for (Brient) to entertain these claims."

The case is Pennzoil vs. Texaco, 85-1798.

More Bodies Recovered At Bridge Collapse Site

By JEFF DONN
Associated Press Writer

AMSTERDAM, N.Y. (AP) — Rescue workers recovered two more bodies today from a rain-swollen creek where an interstate highway bridge collapsed, plunging at least four vehicles 80 feet into the swirling water and killing at least three people.

Up to 400 feet of the New York State Thruway bridge collapsed Sunday near this town 35 miles west of Albany. At least three cars and a tractor-trailer plummeted into rain-swollen Schoharie Creek.

Rescuers located two vehicles and one body late Sunday, and a third vehicle was spotted this morning with the bodies of two men inside.

That vehicle, a blue car with its roof crushed, was pulled out of the water about three-quarters of a mile downstream from the collapsed span, said Montgomery County Sheriff Ronald Emery. Two bodies were removed from the front seat after firemen cut through the roof, Emery said.

Early today, the creek had begun to recede and a white Cadillac could be seen above the water line about a quarter-mile downstream from the bridge. The first body, that of a man, was found inside the car, state police spokesman Robert Armet said.

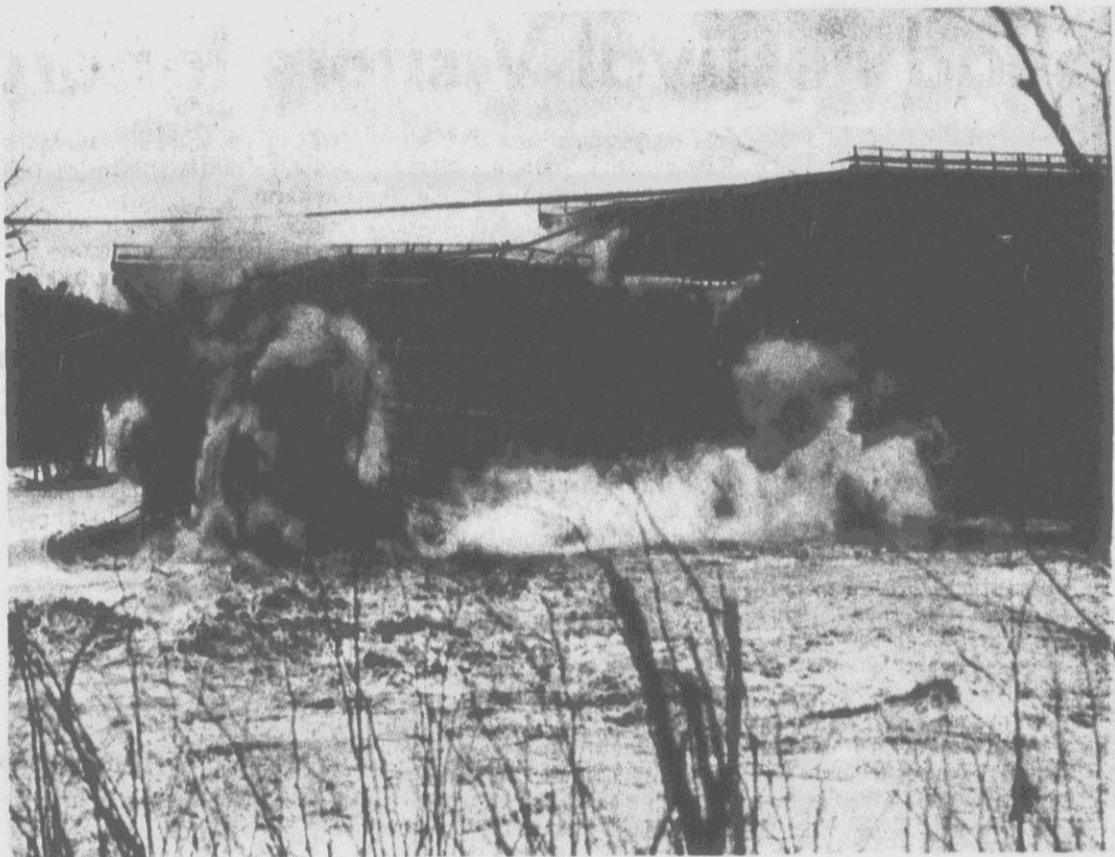

However, the water near the collapsed span was still too rough to send in divers because of the threat of moving debris, said Armet. He would not estimate when it would be safe enough to use divers.

When the water calmed, divers using cables and hoist would attempt to lift the trailer of a tractor-trailer also located about a quarter-mile downstream from the bridge, said Technical Sgt. Larry Moyer. The back end of the trailer was sticking up out of the water with branches snagged on the tires. The cab could not be seen. Sunday night, two smokestacks believed to be part of the cab were above the water, but they were not visible today.

"This is something totally beyond the scope of what you think of," said Armet. "You can't believe this would happen."

Reagan Says Emissions Treaty Faces Problems

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer

OTTAWA (AP) — President Reagan said today that acid rain is hurting the environment in both the United States and Canada, but told reporters he believes there are "great difficulties" in the way of Prime Minister Brian Mulroney's proposal for a treaty to reduce the emissions.

Reagan was questioned by reporters first as he began a meeting with John Turner, the leader of Canada's opposition Liberal Party, on the second day of Reagan's visit to the Canadian capital.

Asked whether he opposed Mulroney's proposal to reduce U.S. acid rain emissions by 50 percent, Reagan said, "I am not against it. I would like a total reduction of it. It's quite a technical problem and a very major problem to achieve."

Questioned about Mulroney's proposal for a treaty between the two nations to set a schedule for reductions, Reagan said, "I think there are great difficulties, but one thing I am sure of is that both sides want to get a handle on acid rain."

Reagan declined to predict whether any agreements would be reached during the summit meeting with Mulroney, but added, "I think we have all come together on both sides with the hope of reaching a number of agreements."

Reagan was later asked why the United States would not agree to a treaty, in view of charges that acid rain is hurting Canada's environment.

"Well, we're not helping ours, either," he replied.

For his part, Mulroney, asked if he and Reagan were making progress on the acid rain issue, replied, "We're working hard."

Spokesmen for both sides had said earlier that no substantial agreements were expected.

Asked on Sunday about Mulroney's treaty proposal, Reagan's spokesman, Marlin Fitzwater, said the administration has nothing new to offer on the issue of acid rain, spread by prevailing winds from U.S. plants across much of Canada.

After seeing Turner, Reagan met with Mulroney for their second session of talks. The president then was delivering a speech to Parliament and flying back to Washington late in the afternoon.

The president and the prime minister met for 35 minutes Sunday, longer than had been expected, in front of a crackling fire in the drawing room of Rideau Hall, the residence of Canadian Governor General Jeanne Sauve.

On other issues: —Reagan warned Sunday that it will take "much hard bargaining" to reach a free trade agreement be-

Legislature Ponders Law On Organ Donor Consent

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

The North Carolina General Assembly is considering a law that would require hospitals to ask the family of brain dead or near-death patients for consent to donate the patients' organs and tissues for surgical implantation in others.

There are many more potential donors than are now being reached, organ donation advocates say. A commonly held belief, according to Steve Joyner, executive director of the Carolina Organ Procurement Agency, is that only young healthy accident victims are good transplant candidates.

While this may be true for some key organs like hearts and livers, there is much of the human body that can be used for others, Joyner said. For example, the eye corneas of about 85 percent of all deaths could be transplanted, he said, yet less than one percent are.

A Gallup Poll conducted last year showed that 61 percent of all Americans say they are likely to want their own organs and tissues donated after death. Seventy-five percent say they are willing to donate the organs and tissues of a family member. The poll also showed 70 percent of all the families approached about organ and tissue donation say yes. Yet the organs and tissues of less than one percent of all people who die in the U.S. are transplanted for use by others.

There are emotional impediments to organ and tissue donation, advocates explain, as well as informational ones.

According to donation proponents, many people believe that one of the major reasons for the low donation rate lies in the fact that a decision to donate is nearly always made while the family is emotionally resisting the death of a loved one. Facts show that most people do not, during this time of stress, consider the possibility

Arts Festival Gets Under Way

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

The Super Sunday opening of the Eastern Carolina Arts Festival saw thousands in attendance Sunday at Carolina East Mall.

"We have an estimate that about 20,000 visitors were on the scene during the afternoon," said Lou Miller, chairman of the festival.

"It was simply an amazing response to the festival's opening,"

she said. "People were there ahead of the 1 p.m. opening and there was still a big crowd on hand right up to closing hour."

Mrs. Miller feels the cool weather worked to the festival's advantage. "It was one of those days people could get out since there was no rain or snow, but an unfavorable day for going to the beach or for picnics or bike riding."

"What really pleased us is the huge number of children who came, stayed, took in everything. There were lines all afternoon for activities designed for the children," she said.

She indicated that as expected, "the musical events drew a large number of listeners. These groups have their devoted fans, plus they had an audience who had not before heard these particular groups who expressed pleasure at the variety and number of musical offerings the opening day made possible."

"The folk art section and art alley were packed all afternoon. Every time I went by these places, people were gathered, watching. Children particularly seem intrigued by the pottery demonstration, and by on the

Shad Festival Visitors Ignore Weather

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

Despite cold temperatures and high winds, records were broken Saturday and Sunday during events at the 17th Annual Grifton Shad Festival, said Janet Haseley, publicity coordinator for the festival.

"The bicycle race had more (participants) than they've ever had before," with 84 riders, she said. Twenty-four towns, including those from Pennsylvania, South Carolina and Virginia, were represented in the race.

"It was really interesting how many people came from far away." The Bass Fishing Tournament also broke a record with 108 boats, Mrs. Haseley said. But, she said, "the total weight of catch was down."

Other outside events such as the tennis tournament with 66 competitors and the Archery Tournament with 93 competitors also were successful given the weather conditions, she said.

The festival "went surprising well given the weather predictions" of cold temperatures and rain, Mrs. Haseley said. "On a balance, everybody was pleased at how things went."

Several events, however, were canceled or significantly affected by the weather.

"Some exhibitors either didn't show up or (they) shut down early" because there were not many spectators on the streets, she said.

There were not many participants in the Spring Shad Run, and the street dance Saturday night was canceled.

"But Shad-o was packed," Mrs. Haseley said. "Everybody wanted to be warm."

The sheltered and indoor events were the most popular, she said. "Things that were inside had a steady stream of visitors."

Inside events included the Historical Museum and Folk Skill Demonstrations such as basketweaving, quilting and folk singing.

Warm foods such as the fish stew and fried fish helped spectators combat the weather, Mrs. Haseley said.

"We sold out of the fish stew. The stew was served in large portions and was warm."

Other hot foods such as hamburgers and french fries were available in the Rescue Squad building, she said, and the Pancake Supper also had good attendance.

Mrs. Haseley said the financial report for this year's festival still is being assessed. "The souvenir sales were down, but they bought more sweatshirts," she said. And, "the Shad Festival gets a percentage of the events. It's hard to assess right now."

Spectators also were not deterred by rain from the Shad Queen Pageant Friday night in Grifton Elementary School, Mrs. Haseley said. Erin Leigh Tyndall, a senior at Ayden-Grifton High School, was crowned queen of the 1987 Shad Pageant and was sponsored by the Grifton Piggly Wiggly.

Kimberly Lynn Sutton was first runner-up and Miss Congeniality while Anna Margaret Rogers was second runner-up and Shannon Vera Dudley was third runner-up.

The 18th Annual Shad Festival is scheduled April 13-17, 1988, she said.

Police Probe Thefts

Investigators said nine thefts were reported to Greenville police over the weekend.

Officer R.C. Stroud said a wallet containing $60 in cash was taken from a man on Chestnut Street in an incident reported at 5:46 a.m. Saturday, while Officer C.S. Candler said a pair of pants were taken from a car parked at Carolina East Mall on Memorial Drive in an incident reported at 7:23 p.m.

Officer C.M. Credle said a 1979 model car was taken from a lot at the Pirate's Chest at 760 E. Greenville Blvd. in an incident reported at 10:11 p.m., while Officer T.A. Lee said an assortment of tools valued at $345 were taken from a car parked at Carolina East Mall in an incident reported at 10:32 p.m.

Officer C.A. Elks said two cassette tapes and 76 cents in change were taken from a car parked at Carolina East Center on Memorial Drive in an incident reported at midnight Saturday and said a sofa was taken from 115 Riverbluff Apartments in an incident reported at 4:26 a.m. Sunday, while Officer Stroud said a 1978 model car was taken from the intersection of Third and Summit Streets in an incident reported at 5:59 a.m.

Officer T.E. Nevelle said four hubcap center pieces were taken from a car parked at 1801 Riverbluff Apartments in an incident reported at 9:47 a.m., while other investigators said a bicycle was taken from 3000 Adams Blvd. in an incident reported at 2:40 p.m.

Residents Attend Rescue College

DURHAM — Nine Pitt County residents were among some 400 students that attended classes at the first session of the 26th annual North Carolina Rescue College at the Durham Fire Department Training Academy Saturday and Sunday.

John Fisher, a member of the Greenville Fire-Rescue Department, along with Woodie Wilson and Marilyn Leonard, members of the Eastern Pines Rescue Squad, were among fourth-year students who received graduation certificates for successfully completing the college's four-year program.

Other local students attending the school's first year classes included Doug Branch of the Greenville Fire-Rescue Department and Eastern Pines rescue members Sharon Shipley, Donna Fekonis, Terry James and Al Hodges.

Eastern Pines' Brent Stocks was enrolled in the school's graduate program.

Greenville native Wilburn Small of Wilson is director of the rescue college. Joe Burris and Stuart Savage, both of Greenville, are rescue college staff instructors.

Small was training officer for the Greenville Fire-Rescue Department before joining the N.C. Department of Insurance's Fire and Rescue Service Division as an instructor in 1974. He is presently director of field services for the division.

Burris, who joined the fire and rescue service division staff in September 1984 after serving as training coordinator and shift captain for the Catawba County Emergency Medical Services system, is also a former Greenville Fire-Rescue Department employee.

Small, Burris and Savage, a staff writer for The Daily Reflector, were all members of the former volunteer Greenville Rescue Squad.

The first Rescue College program, sponsored by the insurance department and the Greenville Rescue Squad, was held in Greenville in 1961.

About 350 people are expected to attend the school's second and third year and graduate classes April 11 and 12 at the Durham training facility.

Homosexual Abuse

GREENSBORO (AP) — Gay rights advocates in North Carolina say homosexual abuse is increasing, partly in reaction to Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome.

The National Gay and Lesbian Task Force says 5,000 cases of threats, vandalism, assaults and homicide involving homosexuals were reported last year, and 1,300 of those cases came from North Carolina.

AVOIDING TOOTH EXTRACTION

If you have an infected or badly decayed and damaged tooth in your mouth and conventional restorative treatment can not save it, ask your dentist if he would recommend root canal therapy. This technique offers an important alternative for saving your teeth. By keeping your teeth in your mouth as long as possible, they can continue to function in maintaining the shape of your face as well as in chewing food. There is NO equally strong substitute for your natural teeth.

Root canal treatment involves the removal of diseased tissue from the root of a tooth and replacing it with a sterile filler. The tooth is then sealed to prevent further infection. This is a relatively comfortable procedure and is usually performed with the aid of local anesthesia when a tooth is severely infected.

High speed dental instruments and other techniques also help to make root canal therapy more comfortable for the patient. They have also helped reduce the time needed to complete the procedure.

Jack Kemp Opens White House Campaign

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Jack Kemp, declaring "there are no limits to our future," today entered the race for the 1988 Republican presidential nomination.

The former professional football quarterback who became a leading advocate of federal tax cuts, opened his campaign with pledges to resist any tax increases and to deploy a missile defense system as soon as possible.

"The central dilemma of our day is that we lie defenseless against Soviet missiles," the 51-year-old congressman said.

He said laser technology "that can today eliminate a cancer cell could tomorrow neutralize a Soviet ballistic missile in space."

Kemp criticized both the Democrats and the Reagan administration State Department for wanting to use the president's plan for a space-based defense system as an arms control bargaining chip.

"The State Department and the Democratic Party would rather use SDI (the Strategic Defense Initiative) as a bargaining chip and would rather bind this country to a treaty the Soviets have violated since day one than give America and our allies the defenses we need."

Kemp joined former Gov. Pete du Pont of Delaware and former Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. in the Republican race.

Also expected to enter the contest are Vice President George Bush, Senate GOP leader Bob Dole of Kansas, former Sen. Paul Laxalt of Nevada, and the Rev. Pat Robertson.

Kemp's wife and children were at his side when he declared his candidacy in the House Judiciary Committee hearing room before a crowd that spilled out into the hallway.

Kemp said he would "continue to oppose any plan, from any quarter, to raise taxes on the American people."

An advocate of a return to the gold standard, Kemp said, "We must guarantee the purchasing power of the dollar, make the dollar once again an honest dollar, a dollar as good as gold."

He also called on Congress to pass legislation that would nullify the 1973 Supreme Court decision legalizing abortion.

Kemp said he would "take this campaign to company halls and to union halls; to young people and to senior citizens; to entrepreneurs and, yes, to inner city families so that we, the party of Lincoln, can once again hold up the dream of liberty and justice for all."

He said the nation should have a vision for the future that includes victory — "a victory for the idea that there is nothing wrong with America that cannot be fixed; and that there are no limits to our future if we don't put limits on our people."

Kemp, interviewed before today's announcement, conceded, "I don't have the resume the other people have."

But he insisted he is the candidate with the ideas and vision to carry forward President Reagan's policies.

"I'll be the only one in the race who was one of the key architects of the Republican platform upon which Reagan and Bush ran in 1984," he said.

Elected to the House from the Buffalo area in 1970, Kemp quickly established himself as a leading advocate of supply side economics, the theory that lowering tax rates would increase productivity and investment and lead to higher government revenues.

Kemp's view was adopted by Reagan in his 1980 presidential campaign and became the basis for the tax cut enacted during his first term.

Often criticized for his tendency to deliver overly long speeches on arcane economic topics such as monetary reform and the need for a return to the gold standard, Kemp promised that would change when he became a candidate.

"Up until now, I have been less a candidate than a teacher," he said. "I have been trying to change my party and I have gone against the orthodoxy in many instances."

"I do not represent the Old Guard of the Republican Party. I represent a progressive conservatism."

Kemp said he believes he has had an impact in changing the Republican Party.

"You can't look at the new tax code without at least giving some credit to Jack Kemp," he said.

Kemp drew both applause and criticism recently when he appeared before a conservative conference and called on Secretary of State George P. Shultz to resign. The conservatives gave him a standing ovation, but some of Kemp's rivals characterized his speech as grandstanding.

A tireless traveler on behalf of Republican causes and candidates, Kemp has visited about 20 cities a month since October and aides say he delivered 500 speeches in 1985-1986.

Despite all his speech making, the New York congressman has remained mired at about 7 percent in most national polls asking Republicans for their presidential preference. Bush consistently leads such surveys, with Dole running second.

Before winning his congressional seat, Kemp was quarterback for the Buffalo Bills and was the American Football League's Most Valuable Player in 1965. He led the Bills to four division and two league championships in seven years.

Kemp and his wife, Joanne, have four children, Jeff, Jennifer, Judith and Jimmy. Jeff Kemp is backup quarterback for the San Francisco 49ers in the National Football League.

Residents Fear Toxic Gas

By SARAH GRAHAM
Associated Press Writer
GILLETTE, Wyo. (AP) — Most families who were evacuated after build-ups of toxic gas were discovered have returned to their homes, but some residents say they are still worried.

"My kids are wanting to move," said Diane Savage. The youngest of her seven children have had nightmares since investigators began testing the soil around their subdivision for gas, she said.

In February the presence of methane inside some homes and hydrogen sulfide between two houses prompted Campbell County officials to order evacuations of 31 of the neighborhood's 215 families.

About two weeks ago the county decided that all but seven families could return.

Ranchers noticed gas bubbling up in Rawhide Creek before the Rawhide Village subdivision was built 12 years ago. This year, methane began seeping through a coal seam beneath lawns in this northeastern Wyoming community.

Ten-year old Chenel Altman and her family recently moved back to Rawhide Village, but she'd rather live somewhere else.

"Then you wouldn't have to worry about dying," said the fifth grader at Rawhide Elementary School.

"There shouldn't have been a subdivision built here," said Mrs. Savage, pointing to soil test results taken before construction began that indicate some lots are as little as a foot above the coal.

But a company that recently studied the soil said it is unlikely the problem could have known before construction.

"Obviously nobody considered it so they must have been ignorant at that point," said Chester McKee, president of In-Situ, Inc. Possible gas seepage was not a criterion when the permitting process was begun for the subdivision, he said.

The methane apparently built up naturally, and if so, there may be no solution to the problem, McKee said.

"If (the contamination) is due to natural causes, then it's hard for me to see that it is possible to solve it," he said.

Nursing School May Close Doors

By DUNCAN MANSFIELD
Associated Press Writer
BOSTON (AP) — Students and faculty members are mounting a fight to prevent the closing of Boston University's nursing school, ranked two years ago among the best in the nation.

Last month, Dr. Richard Egdahl, academic vice president for health affairs, told the faculty that a proposal was being developed to shut the school, which is battling financial pressures and declining enrollment.

BU nursing school professors and students last week mailed letters to about 9,000 alumni, politicians and professional groups asking for help in fighting the closing, which could come as early as the fall of 1988.

"At a time when we have fewer and fewer enrollees in schools of nursing and we need more nurses, it sends out a very alarming signal to potential nurses," said Nancy Perrin, spokeswoman for the American Nurses Association, based in Kansas City, Mo.

Two years ago, deans and nursing researchers rated the BU School of Nursing, established in 1946, among the top 20 in the country in a national poll by Nursing Outlook magazine.

"We are not fighting our administration on the economic front," said Muriel Poulin, a BU nursing professor. "Our problem is the fact that they decided to close us with no input from us in terms of what could be done or how to approach it."

While the exact closing proposal has yet to be shown to the faculty or the public, Egdahl said there will be an opportunity for faculty comment before BU's trustees vote on it.

The number of full-time nursing students at BU has declined from 800 in 1981 to 355 this year. The number of first-year undergraduates has fallen from 50 to 10, Egdahl said.

He blamed competition from nursing programs at lower-cost public colleges, where a four-year degree can cost $8,000 compared to nearly $44,000 at BU.

Enrollment in nursing programs nationally fell from 250,553 students in 1983 to 217,955 in 1985, while hospitals are grappling with a nursing shortage, according to the National League of Nursing.

The American Hospital Association reports hospital vacancies for full-time registered nurses has reached 13.6 percent, double since 1985.

More Experience

We don't know yet all that transpired in the months (possibly years) preceding the events that led to charges against two Marine guards accused of allowing KGB agents to prowl the United States embassy offices in Moscow and steering them to secret information they sought.

Wisely, investigators are presuming "worst case" possibilities and probabilities. The sex-and-money payoffs may have been the lowest prices ever paid for a comparable intelligence operation with such great rewards for an espionage agency.

The Soviet tactics may have been crude, but they worked — and that's what counts.

It's easy, from a distance and in after-thought, to be highly critical of the embassy guards as well as the system which led to the painful experience.

Embassy guard duty, we would assume, is a cushy job and mostly ceremonial in most countries of the world but it must be looked upon as something that is nerve-wracking behind the Iron Curtain with a continuing threat of the unexpected.

All this took place while the U.S. was in the process of replacing Soviet employees who held jobs in the installation. They were withdrawn by their government but in view of the sensitivity of the post and knowledge of Soviet "curiosity" it's a matter of wonderment over their employment.

The Ambassador who occupied the embassy in Moscow when the American Marines there were seduced, concludes the Marine detail was simply made up of men who were too immature for the job. He's got a point.

U.S. Marines are basically made up of healthy young men trained for their chief function: armed combat. Few are better than they in that role.

The former ambassador observed embassies of some other countries, such as Britain, used retired diplomats or non-commissioned officers for security roles.

It's something for Washington to consider. The Marine Corps was not always assigned to that unfamiliar role so there is no unbreakable rule that requires continuing adherence.

Changes are certainly in order; and that might be a good place to begin.

Interest Increasing

Interest in teaching has been increasing among North Carolina's younger students as shown in surveys by interested observers. That growing interest was reflected in 1986 showing 7.3 percent of entering freshmen expressed interest in elementary or secondary teaching careers, compared with 6.2 percent in 1985 and 4.7 percent in 1982.

That interest appears to have risen in step with that of North Carolina lawmakers and office holders in government as well as in the education field.

It is no accident more people look on teaching as a career choice during three years North Carolina was raising salaries for teachers by 30 percent. Too, the state's Basic Education Plan, which calls for smaller classes and more teachers in certain fields, has been creating a need for possibly thousands more teachers.

Another incentive, the Teaching Fellows Program, was set up by the legislature to attract more promising students into teaching. The program offers $5,000 a year for four years to up to 500 high school seniors. For each year a student teaches, the state subtracts $5,000 from the amount owed.

Such inducements are bound to have promising results.

Maybe it is wishful thinking, but we too have a feeling more is said about education today than was the case yesterday, and people are encouraged to think there is a more positive climate. It is something we have needed for a long time.

AUSTIN, Texas — During one of Gary Hart's innumerable trips to Texas, Lt. Gov. William Hobby a month ago told a political intimate: "There's no point waiting any longer. Why don't we get it over with and endorse him?"

Hart eagerly returned here last week to be endorsed by Hobby, the state's most prestigious Democrat. Joining him were conservative State Railroad Commissioner Mack Wallace and eight state legislators, including several conservatives.

Speaker Gib Lewis, second in power only to Hobby and markedly to his right, told us he is undecided but thinks highly of Hart and might support him.

Thus, without causing great astonishment here, the man who managed George McGovern's presidential campaign and whose 100 percent liberal Senate voting record surpassed even Ted Kennedy's, has been embraced by what remains of the Texas Tory democracy.

That is a breakthrough for Hart, whose immense lead in opinion polls until now has not been matched by weighty endorsements. It also reflects how much Texas politics has changed, from fratricide between Democratic left and right to partisan conflict along national lines between conservative Republicans and increasingly liberal Democrats.

With newly-reinstated Republican Gov. William Clements tarnished by the Southern Methodist football scandal, Hobby is the state's preeminent political figure. Beginning his 15th year in the powerful lieutenant governor's post, he is the early favorite to be the next governor. His father a conservative governor and his mother a member of the Eisenhower Cabinet, Bill Hobby never has been considered one of the liberal crowd in Austin.

Then why jump on Hart's bandwagon? Hobby told us he thinks Hart probably has the nomination clinched — a judgment widely challenged by Democrats elsewhere. But such realpolitik did not prevent Hobby four years ago from heading Sen. John Glenn's campaign in Texas after nearly endorsing Sen. Ernest F. Hollings, even though Walter F. Mondale then was a clearer favorite than Hart is today.

The partial answer is that Hart has campaigned well in Texas. "This time, he looks and sounds more like a Texan than the other candidates," one conservative Democratic insider told us. With his cowboy boots and Rocky Mountain profile, Hart comes over as more Westerner than liberal.

His call for a 10 percent oil import fee particularly attracts Hobby and Wallace, who regulates oil as a Railroad Commission member and is incensed by Reagan administration opposition to the new tax. They praise Hart for courage in boosting the import fee while campaigning in New Hampshire (though his proposal exempts heating oil used by the Northeast).

Good Students Highly Sought

RALEIGH — A feverish search for college-bound talent is underway across North Carolina. Students are being offered free educations, special summer jobs, spending money and opportunities for jobs after the graduate.

Surprise! This column is not about the recruitment of ACC basketball prospects. Any school offering this package to athletes would surely be thrown into the NCAA slammer.

The recruitment effort is aimed at North Carolina's best academic performers and the state, with private help, is trying to lure them into the teaching profession.

The biggest element in the effort is the North Carolina Teaching Fellows program which is being run by the N.C. Public School Forum, a private non-profit group. Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan and House Speaker Liston Ramsey are seeking $9.7 million in state money over the next two years to provide up to 400 students with $5,000 a year fellowships.

Those fellowships, good for use at any of nine state schools, would more than cover room, board, books and tuition, and leave the student with a little extra for spending money. The student, in return, would be required to teach at least four years in a North Carolina public school.

To date, the response has been encouraging. John Dorman, executive director of the forum, said the average college board exam of the 594 fellowship finalists is 1035, that's 200 points above the state average. The average finalist is in the top 10 percent of his or her class, maintains a 3.5 grade point and "has a broad range of extracurricular interests."

Dorman said the forum would like the teaching fellowships to be seen in the same light as the prestigious Morehead Scholarships. The teaching fellowships will emulate the Moreheads, he said, in that the students will be encouraged to participate in extracurricular activities related to teaching.

There are other elements in the effort, also. The Office of Teacher Recruitment in the Department of Public Instruction has named a teacher in each of the state's 400 high schools who will be responsible for generating interest in the teaching profession. That interest had been very low. Last year only 37 high schools in the state had Future Teachers of America clubs. Not too long ago, almost every high school had such a club. Dorman says many schools are now reopening their clubs, and at the very least, most high schools will soon have printed information about the teaching profession available for students.

The state is also going after college students who are not now majoring in education. Up to 50 scholarships worth $4,000 a year will be offered to juniors and seniors majoring in disciplines like math, science and foreign language where there is a shortage of teachers. They'll be required to teach for three years after graduation.

Finally, there is a three-pronged effort to attract college graduates into teaching. For teacher aides and substitutes willing to return to school for their teaching certificates, there will be 50 grants of $1,000 each. For teachers living in another state, there will be 50 financial incentive grants of up to $3,500 each to move here. And, for teachers willing to be retained in a discipline with a teacher shortage, there are 50 $1,000 grants.

It wasn't many years ago that college students interested in teaching found a saturated market. That's not the case now. Good students will find that they're as highly sought by schools as are good point guards — maybe more so.

Looking For Mr. Goodteacher

WASHINGTON — Students who fear being placed with a certain strict teacher next term may be in for luck. At least 6-8 percent of the 2.1 million teachers in this country won't return to work next fall.

Some will leave because of age. But most will do so simply out of frustration with low pay and minimal community support.

The Carnegie Forum on Education and Economy estimates that between 1986 and 1992, the United States will need 1.3 million new teachers. Carnegie assumes that 50 percent of all public school teachers will leave the profession within the next six years. This decline will occur against a backdrop of a shrinking pool of young college graduates from which prospective teachers can be recruited.

What's appalling is that teacher recruitment has begun to extend beyond state lines to foreign countries. Some school districts have been recruiting in West Germany, Spain and other nations where there is an oversupply of teachers. New York, for example, reports that it has imported about 200 teachers from Spain during the past two years.

Equally serious is the low quality of students being attracted to the teaching profession. Almost one half of the students enrolled in Teacher Education come from general or vocational — rather than academic — programs. Many states are having to issue emergency teaching certificates to fill the classrooms. Half of all science, math and English teachers in this country are unqualified.

To complicate matters the composition of the student population is changing. More come from single-parent, low-income and non-English-speaking households. One third of all students will soon be minorities. These students need teachers who have a more sophisticated and complete understanding of their subjects and their students.

Naturally, school districts need more minority teachers. Students require role models and a teaching system that reflects the diversity of the nation's racial and cultural heritage. Yet, minority teachers comprise less than 5 percent of the elementary and secondary teaching force, and their numbers are dwindling.

Most Americans, including those in the Reagan administration, don't want to come to terms with the country's dismal education picture. They prefer, as Vice President Bush did in a speech in New York last week, to publicize meaningless statistics — such as rising SAT scores — as being representative of the progress that our educational system has made. The trouble is that it just ain't so.

The bottom line is that it's going to cost money, lots of money to hire and hold better quality teachers within school districts. In some Southern states, for example, starting teachers are paid between $13,000 and $15,000 per year. But money, of course, isn't everything. Teachers want more autonomy, community support and adequate materials.

The latest administration figures estimate that 17 to 21 million American adults, or 13 percent of the population, are illiterate by the most simple tests of everyday reading, writing and comprehension. Moreover, 38 million adults have not completed high school and are estimated to have only marginal abilities to perform these tasks. If these numbers are correct, almost one-third of the adult American population lack the basic abilities to participate effectively in everyday life.

Britain's Labor Party leaders were in for quite a shock when they met with President Reagan last week. Reagan walked up to Dennis Healey, the Labor Party's foreign affairs spokesman, and said: "Nice to see you again, Mr. Ambassador."

The British ambassador in Washington, Sir Antony Acland, the leading British diplomat here, looked on in dismay. Meanwhile, Healey was unyielding in his critique of Reagan's grasp of the Labor Party's defense policy. "He did not understand this area," Healey said. "He was not capable of making a response. He just nodded his head."

The United States will bear primary responsibility if Pakistan detonates a nuclear bomb, according to Indian Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi, in an interview with the Energy Daily. "It is not just Pakistan's bomb," he said. "It has been financed by others and presumably it will be available to others." Gandhi said the United States could stop the development of the Pakistani bomb by pressuring the Zia government. He said he did not believe the Pakistanis have reached the point of being able to explode a device, but he believes they're very close to doing so.

Within a year or two the United States automobile industry will begin a major shift to plastic fuel tanks in passenger cars. Plastic gas tanks have been talked about for years but so far have been installed in only a few truck models.

States in the heart of the oil patch, including Texas, Louisiana, Arkansas and Oklahoma, had a 59.9 percent increase in business failures last year, reflecting the record decline in oil prices that occurred in 1986, according to Dun & Bradstreet, the New York-based credit information group.

Strength For Today

The medieval artist Donatello who lived in Florence produced some sculpture in Pisa which brought him widespread acclaim. But he knew that his work did not measure up to his suddenly-acquired reputation. Therefore, afraid that in an atmosphere of adulation he would grow vain and lazy, he returned to Florence where competition was sharper and where nothing but his best work could receive recognition.

Our Lord warned us to beware when all men speak well of us. We all seek approval for our efforts, but in the long run that may not be what we need. We may resent criticism and think it unfair, but this may be exactly what we need in order to bring forth our best efforts. The fact that Donatello is remembered today is in part due to the attitude that the citizens of Florence took toward him.

Gorbachev Is A Leninist Still

the West's interest in his prevailing. By "help" is sometimes meant a policy of concessions.

But the resistance Gorbachev is encountering arises from sources in the culture and society that are not easily reached from outside. To imagine that the West could intervene effectively to help Gorbachev in his interior maneuvers is to endow foreign political leaders with an opening that may not exist and a skill they have not previously displayed. And there is at least as much of a case for toughening Western policy to discourage the Kremlin's own tougher options, as there is a case for moderating policy, which runs the risks of inviting harder Soviet probes. Steadiness is better.

but — as he surely sees it — for the welfare and security of his country.

To put it another way: there is not a democratic bone visible in Gorbachev's body and there is only the slightest democratic bone in the body of the Russian past. Gorbachev runs an elite Communist Party that monopolizes power, perpetuates itself and denies any standard of public accountability — this in a country where autocracy is the historical rule. His "democratization" seems aimed strictly at making the parts of the party machine and the economic machine run more efficiently.

Gorbachev says that he wants to get back to Lenin, leader of the 1917 Russian Revolution. This goes along with an analysis blaming Stalin, who came to power at the end of the 1920s, for the flaws that are now being officially spotlighted, including the dragging economy and the self-serving bureaucracy. But Lenin installed the style of top-down, single-party rule, enforced by terror, that produced not just the failings of the economy and bureaucracy but also the immense atrocities that were committed against the Soviet people in Lenin's and Stalin's times alike.

Sanguine Westerners nod in approval as Gorbachev announces that he is going to cast off the Soviet Union's Stalinist inheritance, or aspects of it. One hopes Gorbachev will do just that: Khrushchev found it possible to maintain Communist Party privilege without mass terror, and Gorbachev may figure he can maintain the same privilege without bureaucratic cruelty. This hope is what appears to lead so conscientious a Soviet citizen as Andrei Sakharov to root for Gorbachev. But Gorbachev remains a top-down man: a Leninist.

Too many people think it's bad manners to say so. Or they see that Gorbachev is encountering some resistance to his "new political thinking," and they think it will go easier for him if Westerners tread softly. Some people take the next step and suggest that the West ought somehow to "support" or "help" Gorbachev in his reform, so great is thought to be

WASHINGTON — All of us in the West are having difficulty getting a handle on Mikhail Gorbachev and his "new political thinking" but it is hard to think Margaret Thatcher got it right in her visit to Moscow this week. The British prime minister ended up gushing about Gorbachev and glasnost in a way that might make the unwary believe the Soviet leader is nearly ready to cross over to the capitalist and Western side.

Now, something important is happening in Moscow, and it is necessary to explore what opportunities may be opening for the West. But curiosity, good manners and hope are not enough to bring to the inspection of the Kremlin's political experiment. Even if Gorbachev entirely succeeded in what he appears to have in mind, the results would not merit the uncritical reception they are getting in many places.

It helps to listen to Gorbachev's rebuke to those in the West who claim that the Soviet reform program is an admission that socialism has failed. He delivered the rebuke, at his dinner for Thatcher, by way of denouncing the "delusion" that the Soviet Union can now be made to bow to pressure. But his point in the first instance was to affirm devotion to the Soviet system, and that point needs to be absorbed by those who feel that he is abandoning Marxism-Leninism and slipping into incipient pluralist ways.

It is simply not credible that someone who worked his way up through the Communist Party ranks to the Kremlin's top spot would defect publicly and in place, so to speak, and turn upon the system that is responsible not simply for the power and privilege of himself and his class

Horse Race

PARIS — A honey of a political horse race is under way in France, the kind A that Washington dotes on when it is run close to home. Like the American presidential contest, this race has begun in earnest a year in advance and will absorb national energies and attention to a debilitating degree over the next 12 months.

The most intriguing presidential contender at this stage is the one who is saying more to the electorate by talking less. Raymond Barre has made an art and a virtue of being out of power in these confusing times, using silence as a devastating weapon against his two chief rivals, Francois Mitterrand and Jacques Chirac.

While they are obliged to govern in uneasy tandem, Barre stands as the antipolitician. His image of "stubbornly saying what he thinks, and doing what he says," now works to his advantage, French political journalist Alain Duhamel has observed. These traits were problems for Barre when he left office as prime minister in 1981 with strong negative ratings.

Barre's undeclared but open candidacy will test whether France is still a country in which serious candidates can emerge outside party structures to win elections. A centrist whose reputation as a brilliant economist won him high-level government posts, Barre hardly hides his scorn for the nuts-and-bolts organizing work of the parties and their ideological labeling. He will have to depend on acclaim from an electorate fed up with the parties to carry him to office, in the style of his political mentor Charles de Gaulle.

To Barre's right, Prime Minister Chirac is promising to lead France out of recession and past West Germany in five years if the French vote for him next spring and put their shoulders to a laissez-faire economic wheel. The debacle of Socialist rule has left France too weak for him to accomplish much in the year left to him, he now concedes.

To Barre's left, President Mitterrand is urging the French not to give in to Chiraqian greed, but to protect the Socialist gains enacted under his reign of the past five years.

April Storm Lingers Over N.C.

By The Associated Press

Afternoon temperatures in the low 40s began melting 8-foot snow drifts, but forecasters say the giant storm that clogged roads and left as many as 31,000 customers without electricity will continue to dust the mountains through Tuesday.

Right now, we've got three inches on the ground" at Asheville Regional Airport, Craig Carpenter of the National Weather Service said Sunday afternoon. "We've lost four inches since 7 this morning. I guess we had so much warm weather before all this hit that the ground is just soaking it up pretty quick."

Black Mountain, east of Asheville, reported snow depths of five inches Sunday, down from 12 inches.

Mount Mitchell reported the highest accumulation in the state at 35 inches, while Grandfather Mountain had 26 inches, said Bruce Cheatham, meteorologist with the National Weather Service at Raleigh-Durham Airport.

"It's a slow-moving system," Cheatham said. "A big system that keeps rotating around itself. It'll be variably cloudy right into Tuesday. The mountains might catch some flurries right on into Tuesday ... "It (the weather system) is kind of like a whirlpool up there that keeps going around and around."

Gary Coffey, a supervisor with Carolina Power & Light Co. in Asheville, said service was restored Sunday to nearly everyone who had been without power since the freakish April storm hit Friday. At the peak of the storm, an estimated 30,000 customers were without electricity, he said.

"It hit us system-wide," Coffey said. "We had outages in downtown Asheville and on every mountaintop."

The heavy snowfall hampered work crews' efforts to restore power, he said. "For the most part, we couldn't even get to some of the homes because of the roads," he said.

Duke Power Co. spokesman Andy Thompson said Sunday only scattered power outages remain from the more than 1,200 customers who were without electricity on Friday.

The National Weather Service said gusty winds Saturday helped produce unusually high drifts, many as high as 8 feet in the middle of roads.

"This is a bit unusual," said meteorologist Wayne Jones in Raleigh. "However, with the amount of snow and the wind tunneling through the mountains — let's just say it's creating a problem."

"When I got up this morning and saw 3 feet of snow outside the door I wasn't about to go (to church)," said Boone resident Jeni Gray. "I walked outside this morning to take my dog out. I looked over and there was a drift under my carport that was about 5 feet tall."

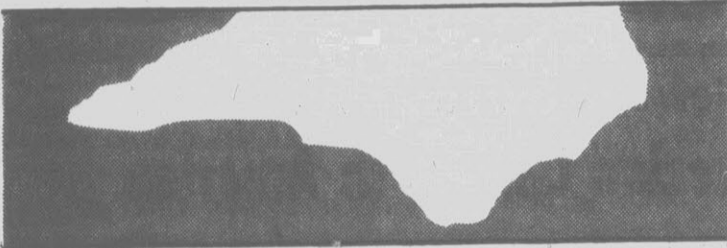

Bob Sneed, vice chancellor for development at Appalachian State University in Boone, said classes were canceled today because snow drifts had reached 8 feet high on the school's campus.

"I've been here 36 years and I believe it's the worst I've ever seen," Sneed said. "I got stuck getting here (to the school) for the first time in my life. "It's a soft snow and it's so deep that it's not like ice," he added. "In fact, if you were on a set of steps you probably wouldn't know it except that you'd fallen."

Tom Huskins, Grandfather Mountain manager, said Sunday snow drifts on U.S. 221 leading up to the park were 8 feet high and winds hit 100 mph. "We can't even get to the animals to feed them," Huskins said. "We didn't get up there yesterday and we may not get up there today. We are getting concerned about them starving."

Huskins said bears, eagles, cougars and deer have all gone without food. "This is the worst storm we have seen here since 1960," Huskins said. "Back then, we had 26 inches of snow on the ground but it was over a longer period of time. This has come in two days and two nights."

IN THE STATE

Auto Rates Debate

RALEIGH (AP) — The insurance industry and some state legislators are wrestling over whether auto rates should be based largely on a driver's record or the statistical possibility that a particular group of drivers will have an accident.

Last year, the Legislature asked the industry to revise the way it classifies drivers for the purpose of setting insurance rates. But several key legislators and Insurance Commissioner Jim Long already have criticized the industry's proposal, saying it would unfairly penalize younger drivers.

The Legislature generally has taken the approach that a driver's record should determine his rates, but the insurance industry favors age-based rates, arguing that statistics show young drivers are more likely to be involved in accidents.

The insurance industry, in its plan, wants to charge less-experienced drivers more for auto insurance.

That proposal, which would require changing a 1975 state law barring the setting of auto rates based on age, would require the approval of both the Legislature and the Insurance Department. The proposal already has angered one key legislator.

"Their plan's not worth the powder to blow it up," said Rep. Martin L. Nesbitt, a Democrat from Asheville who was chairman of the House Insurance Committee last year.

Insurance companies in North Carolina are allowed to assess drivers with less than two years of experience a 100 percent additional charge on their basic auto insurance rate, regardless of age. The insurance companies, through the N.C. Rate Bureau, propose eight years of surcharges on a descending scale.

"There are a lot of youthful drivers out there for whom the rates aren't adequate," said John W. Watkins, general manager of the Rate Bureau, an industry group that proposes auto insurance rates to the Department of Insurance. "The burden of paying for them has to be shifted to someone else, and that's the older, safer drivers."

Nesbitt and Insurance Commissioner Long say the proposal discriminates against the young.

"I think the legislators and I told them over and over, 'no' on age," Long said.

Sanford Sues Kugel

SANFORD, N.C. (AP) — The town of Sanford has joined a growing list of North Carolina municipalities suing Pennsylvania developer Owen Kugel for payments they made for downtown developments Kugel promised but has not delivered.

Investors in Eden, Elizabeth City and Mount Olive have been awarded judgments against Kugel. But since those judgments came from North Carolina courts they were unable to recover anything. Kugel owns no property in North Carolina.

But a Superior Court in Lancaster, Pa., last month awarded a group of Reidsville investors a $35,000 default judgment against Kugel.

Reidsville is one of 21 municipalities in the state in which Kugel is accused of failing to deliver on money-back contracts.

Each development contract called for investors to pay Kugel $60,000 in $5,000 monthly installments over a period of a year. In return Kugel agreed to bring $2 million in development within a year.

Mary Ellen Bowen, executive director of the Downtown Sanford Redevelopment Corp., said Sanford investors filed a lawsuit in Lancaster last week.

"We filed suit by registered letter for the $40,000 he owes us plus interest," she said. "We haven't received confirmation that the letter was received, but we expect to within the next few days."

Ms. Bowen said Kugel made only a superficial effort to carry out his promise to bring $2 million in development to Sanford.

"We got a cookie-cutter type plan. Not necessarily a deceitful thing, but very general and generic. Something we felt like a lot of towns probably got," she said.

Under the terms of the contract Kugel had an option to buy the Carolina Hotel, which he had plans to redevelop.

"He'd made some moves towards buying the hotel but legally he hadn't done anything," Ms. Bowen said. "It's been purchased by someone else now."

She said the organization suspended payments to Kugel several months ago.

Apartment Burns

CLAYTON, N.C. (AP) — Seven apartments were damaged and 14 people left homeless when fire swept through an apartment building in Clayton, authorities said.

Firefighters were called out about 6 a.m. Sunday to the building, which housed eight apartments. Officials said six of the apartments were gutted.

Some of the residents said they smelled a strange odor about 10 p.m. Saturday but didn't find anything unusual when they looked around. They were awakened by smoke alarms Sunday morning.

Wrecks Kill Three

By The Associated Press

Three people died on North Carolina roads over the weekend, the state Highway Patrol says.

Odaris Blackwell Barnett, 40, of Reidsville, was killed at 9:07 p.m. Saturday in Rockingham County. Troopers said her car was hit head-on after an oncoming vehicle crossed into her lane on N.C. 87, about four miles north of Reidsville.

Jimmie Wilson Allman, 23, of Mount Pleasant, was killed in Cabarrus County at 4:30 a.m. Saturday. Troopers said his car ran off the right side of the road and hit a culvert. The accident occurred on N.C. 49, about four-tenths of a mile north of Harrisburg.

Harold Junior Warriax, 26, of Angier, was killed at 10:40 p.m. Friday in Harnett County after his car ran off the right side of the road and struck a tree. Troopers said the accident occurred on N.C. 210, about two-tenths of a mile east of Angier.

The deaths push the highway death toll to 318 in 1987, compared to 371 on this date last year.

State Seen As 'Mini-Hub' For Drug Smugglers

GREENSBORO (AP) — North Carolina is becoming a crossroads for drug smugglers because of its interstate highway system, numerous small airports and rugged coastline, investigators say.

South Florida is still the main distribution hub in the United States for cocaine, federal and state authorities say. But as drug enforcement has increased there, smugglers have moved up the East Coast and found new distribution centers.

"We're sort of a stop-over point," Sgt. Jeff Bruce, head of the Guilford County Sheriff's Department vice and narcotics unit, told the Greensboro News & Record.

Bruce believes North Carolina is a "mini-hub" for drug smugglers who pass through on Interstates 95, 85 or 40. The Triad in particular has a large share of drug traffic because it is centrally located in the state and is midway between Atlanta and Washington.

Last year, the SBI and other police agencies seized $363 million in illegal drugs, including 200,744 pounds of marijuana and 96,269 grams (about 215 pounds) of cocaine. And Dunn said there is no way of knowing how much drug smuggling went undetected.

Five people were indicted last week in U.S. District Court in Greensboro for conspiring to smuggle LSD from Colorado to North Carolina using Federal Express, U.S. Postal Service and Western Union.

Police in February arrested a man they say is one of the largest suppliers of cocaine in Greensboro. They believe the cocaine he sold was shipped into Greensboro on Greyhound buses.

"The biggest increase we're seeing is in interstate drug traffic," Deputy Attorney General John D. Simmons said.

Five interstates run through North Carolina with I-95 by far the most heavily traveled. Interstate 95 links Miami and New York, and one federal prosecutor in North Carolina has dubbed it "cocaine alley."

The Highway Patrol has seized more than $2.1 million in drugs and $35,400 in cash since it began a special surveillance program on interstate highways last April.

North Carolina has more than 500 airstrips, many of them private and remote. That, says State Bureau of Investigation deputy director Charles Dunn, makes it hard for agents to combat smugglers.

The SBI, working with local agencies, has drug interdiction units at airports in Greensboro, Raleigh and Charlotte. Agents stop travelers who fit certain profiles of people likely to be smuggling drugs. Narcotics officers have declined to say what those profiles are for fear that it would tip off drug smugglers.

Dunn said his agency is seeking funds for a roving unit that would monitor smaller airports statewide.

"They may be beating us to death at these smaller airports," Bruce said. "I really don't know."

Narcotics agents say smuggling on commercial flights increases when airlines offer special "Super Saver" rates. Last year, some airlines offered flights to Newark, N.J., one of the New York-area airports, for as little as $29.

"When the rates are low, you see a lot of people flying to New York and bringing back cocaine," Talbott said.

The SBI, Coast Guard and Drug Enforcement Administration work together to enforce drug laws along coastal areas. But authorities say the drug smugglers have the advantage.

Humbles-Brown Vows Said

Peoples Baptist Church was the scene of the wedding ceremony of Stephanie Dawn Brown and William Luther Humbles Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Mack Brown of Greenville and Mr. and Mrs. Mack Humbles of Ayden.

A program of wedding music was presented by organist Della Dixon, pianist Alberta Potter and vocalists Todd Brown and Pam Thatcher.

The double ring ceremony was conducted by the Rev. Alvis Pollard, cousin of the bride.

The bride was escorted by her father and given in marriage by her parents. Her honor attendant was her sister, Paige Brown of Greenville. Bridesmaids included Brenda Pollard of Gallipolis, Ohio; Susan Branch of New Bern; Isla Bunch of Greenville; Glenda Humbles of Nashville, Tenn., sister of the bridegroom; Karmayne Ekkela of St. Petersburg, Fla., and Janet Dilda of Winterville. Laura Pollard of Gallipolis, Ohio, cousin of the bride, was flower girl.

The best man was Delmar Fincher of Carlsbad, N.M., and the ring bearer was Chad Fincher of Carlsbad, N.M. Serving as ushers were Todd Brown of New Bern, brother of the bride; Brian West of Rocky Mount and Lawrence Dilda of Raleigh, both cousins of the bride; William Harrell of Greenville; Danny Nicholson of Thomasville, and Brian House of Farmville.

The bride's gown, fashioned by her mother, was of tissue satin overlaid with point d'esprit. The bodice featured a chantilly lace ruffle around the sheer yoke, sheer bishop sleeves with cuffs and stand-up collar of matching lace. The skirt extended into a full cathedral train encircled with ruffles of lace. She wore a lace modified derby hat with attached illusion veil applied with lace motifs and carried a full cascade of white cattleya orchids, stephanotis, dracaena and ivy.

The honor attendant wore a gown of dusty rose taffeta fashioned with a fitted bodice and cap sleeves of white chantilly lace. Matching lace formed scallops around the full skirt with ribbon bows of Williamsburg rose adorning each scallop and shoulder.

She carried a basket of mixed spring flowers with matching rose ribbons. The bridesmaids' gowns and flowers were similar. The flower girl wore a dress similar in design to the other attendants' in white crepe d'chine. The basque bodice and short puffed sleeves were overlaid with point d'esprit and the full skirt was encircled with chantilly lace scallops over a full flounce of lace with ribbon on the sleeves, waist and scalloped crests of the skirt. She carried a basket of spring flowers.

A reception was held in the Family Life Center of the church. Brenda Oakley and Martha Tew presided at the punch fountain while cake was served by Andrea O'Neal and Kris Sheppard. A program of music was presented by Wayne Gunnoe, pianist. Goodbyes were said by Marlene Mixon.

The couple will live in Greenville after a wedding trip to Western North Carolina.

The bride attended Liberty University in Lynchburg, Va., and East Carolina University. The bridegroom attended Free Will Baptist College in Nashville, Tenn. She is employed by East Carolina Plastic Surgery Associates, PA of Greenville and he is employed by Toyota East of Greenville.

A rehearsal dinner was given by the bridegroom's parents Saturday evening and a bridesmaids luncheon was held at the home of the bride. The bridal couple was honored with several miscellaneous showers and the bride was given a lingerie shower.

Wedding Vows Are Performed Saturday

Susan Powell Finch and Stephen Thomas Eustrom, both of Raleigh, were united in marriage Saturday at St. Raphael Catholic Church at 2 p.m. in a double ring ceremony.

Mr. and Mrs. W.P. Smith and Wilton C. Finch, all of Burlington, are the bride's parents. Mr. and Mrs. Robert T. Eustrom are the bridegroom's parents.

Organist Gene Pipas and soloist Kathy Charboneau presented a program of wedding music.

Ann Finch, sister of the bride, of Raleigh was honor attendant. Bridesmaids were Carla Tadlock of New Bern; Penny Rhudy of Raleigh; Barbara Stevens and Mary Drum of Raleigh, sisters of the bridegroom; Elizabeth Henderson, cousin of the bride, of Laurinburg.

The father of the bridegroom served as best man. Bryan McGann, Ross Rhudy and Tony Tucker, all of Raleigh; Charles Eustrom, brother of the bridegroom, of Greenville; and Chris Drum, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, of Raleigh, served as ushers.

Melissa Stevens, niece of the bridegroom, of Raleigh was the flower girl.

The bride wore a gown in satin fashioned with a lace scalloped off-shoulder neckline, pearl embroidered alencon lace applied fitted bodice, Victorian sleeves and a gathered skirt with narrow lace trim circling the hemline of the skirt and the chapel train. She wore a chapel length wreath veil with alencon lace and pearls.

The attendants wore tea length daphne rose taffeta gowns with fitted bodices, sweetheart necklines and butter cup sleeves.

The flower girl wore a long white gown.

The reception was held at the Knights of Columbus Club following the ceremony.

Several showers to honor the bride were given prior to the wedding.

The bride and bridegroom both attended East Carolina University.

After a wedding trip to Los Angeles and Anaheim, Calif., the couple will live in Raleigh.

DEAR ABBY: Three cheers and blessings upon you for telling "Hurting in Hartford" — that 17-year-old virgin — that she is neither weird nor stupid for sticking with her principles. She'll never lose a guy who's worth having if he drops her because she refuses to have sex with him. In fact, she's lucky to be rid of the creep.

I was a 24-year-old virgin when I got married, and I've been happily married for 26 years. I never had any guilt, illegitimate children or venereal diseases. If more girls stayed virgins until they got married, we'd have a healthier world, a lot less misery and lower taxes. — SUZIE IN MOBILE, ALA.

DEAR ABBY: I hope "Hurting in Hartford" listens to your advice. When I was 16, I refused to have sex with my steady boyfriend, so he dumped me for a girl who would. I remember how hard I cried when he told me he wouldn't be coming around any more.

Well, his new girlfriend gave him VD, and he gave her a baby before her 17th birthday. — GLAD IT WASN'T ME

DEAR ABBY: I'm glad you told "Hurting in Hartford" to hang on to her virginity. If I had been as strong as she seems to be, I wouldn't have lost mine at 15. It has taken me eight years and four relationships to learn that a relationship built on sex doesn't last.

LEARNED TOO LATE IN ROCKFORD

DEAR ABBY: This is for "Hurting in Hartford" whose relationships never lasted any longer than three weeks because she wouldn't have sex with her dates. Please, keep on saying NO. Putting out will not win you popularity. It will only get you a bad reputation because no matter what a guy says, he will talk about you afterward to other guys.

Dear Abby

I didn't put out, and I was popular. I was the editor of our high school paper, on the debate team, a cheerleader and vice president of our graduating class.

Sure, there were guys who tried to score with me, but when they knew they couldn't, they respected me and remained my friends anyway. Deep down in my heart I knew I was saving myself for someone who would appreciate me for having saved that special gift a girl can give only once. I met that guy in college. We've been married for six years, and I couldn't be happier. — M.M. IN LITTLE ROCK

DEAR ABBY: I'm writing in reference to "Hurting in Hartford." I want her to know she's not alone. I will turn 20 next month and I'm still a virgin. I plan to stay that way until I'm married. I've had three relationships that ended because I wouldn't have sex.

I'm not a cold fish. I enjoy hugging, kissing and cuddling, but I'm not a tease. I tell them up front how far I'll go. I'm only human, but I never get into a situation I can't handle. Remember, you'll never miss what you haven't had. — NOT HURTING IN ENID, OKLA.

Collectibles: Selling Tips

By COUNTRY LIVING
 A Hearst Magazine

Antiques collectors, who have learned to spot reproductions, remain unruffled at auctions and buy real bargains, may still come unglued when it comes to selling their surplus collectibles.

Collectors can turn an unneeded antique into extra cash, according to an article in the March issue of Country Living, by following these rules of what not to do when selling.

— Do not be in a hurry to sell. Unlike the stock market, antique prices remain fairly stable. The price you get will be more affected by the effort you put into the sale than by how quickly you sell. As one veteran dealer said, "Son, it's only going to get older."

— Do not know less about your antique than your buyer does. Successful antique buyers depend on their knowledge and the seller's lack of same. The buyer who knows more about the piece than the seller will know if it is priced to high or too low. Research your antique — family history, age, type of wood, style, designer, dimensions and value.

— Do not sell a valuable antique without an appraisal. Rather than risk selling your Pennsylvania harvest table for $800 less than it is worth, why not invest $25 in a professional appraisal that will confirm, in writing, its present market value?

— Do not refinish an antique before you sell it. You may lose both the serious collector who insists on an original finish and the do-it-yourselfer who wants to refinish it himself.

— Do not attempt to sell a dirty antique. An original finish does not imply a dirty finish.

— Do not be afraid to advertise. Practice writing concise ads but don't lose a $500 sale by trying to save 50 cents in an ad. Include all important information, including the price to discourage bargain hunters.

 — Do not be afraid to insist on cash. Bad checks are no laughing matter when the buyer has vanished with your $800 Rookwood vase. Unless the buyer is a friend or reputable area antiques dealer, indicate in your first conversation this will be a cash-only transaction.

NEW YORK (AP) — The Dow Jones industrial average passed the 2,400 mark today as Wall Street continued the rally that propelled the stock market into record territory on Friday.

The closely watched average, which reflects the performance of 30 blue chip stocks, rose 14.49 to 2,404.83 as of 10 a.m.

Advancing issues led decliners by a margin of 2-to-1, with 784 stocks up, 376 down and 422 unchanged on the New York Stock Exchange.

Volume totaled 30.78 million shares after the first half-hour of trading. On Friday, the Dow Jones industrial average had the biggest one-day gain in its history, 69.89 points, to reach a new closing high, 2,390.34.

Gainers outdistanced losers by a margin of about 3-to-1, with 1,209 stocks up, 413 down and 348 unchanged on the NYSE. Volume totaled 213.39 million shares, against 182.95 million the previous session.

Topping the most active list today was Caesar's World, which rose 1/2 to 30%. The casino operator, which is fighting a takeover bid, announced on Sunday a billion-dollar recapitalization plan in which it would pay a special cash dividend of $25 a share to shareholders.

Big gainers included Upjohn, which rose 2% to 130% and Digital Equipment, which jumped 1% to 171.

Donor Law Eyed

 ty of donation — even if the deceased or near-deceased has expressed an interest in organ and tissue donation.

For this reason, many advocates of organ and tissue donation believe that hospitals should be required to approach the families of each potential donor to ask if a loved one could be a donor.

Now being deliberated by the health committee, House Bill 172 would require every hospital or its designated representative to request of each family of a dying or brain dead person that consideration to given to allowing an organ/tissue donation. Documentation of the request would be required.

The federal government already requires that every hospital which received Medicare payments for some of its patients have protocol for anatomical gift requests. However, this state law would go beyond the level and request the actual carrying out of the request, not just the protocol. The state would also adopt rules concerning the training of hospital employees designated to perform the request.

Organs and tissues that can readily be donated are hearts, livers, pancreases, kidneys, corneas of the eye, skin, and bone.

Twenty-nine other states and the District of Columbia have passed a "required request" law. Legislation is pending in 12 states other than North Carolina.

COPA has gone on record as favoring the strong required request law.

The North Carolina Hospital Association has indicated that it favors the proposed law be similar to the federal ruling — that each hospital establish written protocols for the "identification of potential organ and tissue donors."

Rescue Workers Recover 2 More Bodies

 Armet said there were no signs of survivors and the possibility of finding any "would seem very remote."

The victims' identities were withheld pending notification of relatives, said Montgomery County Sheriff's Deputy Overrocker.

Gov. Mario Cuomo, who went to the scene Sunday afternoon, said there was no evidence of any defect in the 31-year-old, concrete and steel girder bridge, a part of Interstate 90.

"We don't know precisely what caused the collapse of the span, and that's disconcerting," he said.

Officials said the span went through extensive rehabilitation about two years ago and was deemed in good condition in its last inspection, in April 1986.

The collapse, which forced the closing of about 25 miles of the Thruway, is expected to have a major impact on the area's trucking industry. Drivers will have to take detours of up to 20 miles on secondary roads through rolling countryside.

Thruway spokesman Raymond Makay said replacement of a bridge usually takes two years but that authorities would try to speed up work on a new span.

About 25,000 vehicles cross the bridge in a typical 24-hour period of heavy traffic, a thruway official said. The thruway runs from the New York City area north to Albany, then west to the Buffalo area.

Overnight, about two dozen rescuers stood by with flood lights overnight as the creek receded.

"We can't do a thing," said volunteer firefighter Dennis Jablonsky. "There are trees coming down the creek 2 feet wide and 30 to 40 feet long, some longer. Refrigerators, a picnic table, benches, all kinds of debris."

The collapse prompted an immediate inspection of the 819 bridges on or over the 559-mile Thruway, said Thruway Authority deputy executive director James A. Martin. By nightfall, more than 100 bridges had been inspected with no major problems detected.

Cuomo said it was virtually certain other bridges would need to be closed.

Witnesses said three to five cars and the tractor-trailer fell into the creek when the concrete and steel girder bridge collapsed.

"I heard this noise, I looked up and the whole bridge was falling. There was a tractor trailer on it and a few other cars," said firefighter William Weller, who was on a nearby bridge.

Sid Brown, a Schenectady Gazette photographer watching firefighters check water levels from a bridge a mile downstream, said he heard a rumbling noise as a tractor-trailer plunged with the bridge. He said he watched a white car drive off the edge seconds later.

State police Maj. Edward Vanderwall said the westbound span of the four-lane bridge collapsed at 10:48 a.m. and the two-lane eastbound section immediately began to sag and went down about 15 minutes later. Another 15 minutes later, more of the bridge collapsed.

State police said 350 to 400 feet of the road deck — most of the 525-foot bridge — ended up in the water. Only two of four sets of supporting concrete pylons remained intact.

Vanderwall said that shortly before the collapse, workers checked the bridge because of the swirling waters and found it safe. However, Arthur D'Isabel, a Thruway spokesman, said no Thruway worker conducted such an inspection.

Alexander Levine, the Thruway authority's executive director, said the extensive rehabilitation about two years ago included installation of a new deck and several supporting steel cross members.

Emissions Pact Faces Problems

 tween the two countries, and that "setting the goals is ... easier than achieving them."

Reagan told a state dinner that the free trade talks initiated by Mulroney have "opened a historic prospect. Setting the goals is, however, easier than achieving them."

"Our intense negotiations to bring a comprehensive free trade agreement into being certainly suggests this. There is still much hard bargaining ahead."

—Mulroney said Canada will stand by its insistence on sovereignty over the Northwest Passage, declaring, "We own it, lock, stock and icebergs."

Canada is building the world's largest icebreaker to patrol the passage, which the United States contends is an international waterway. The United States also seeks the right of transit for its warships through the passage.

Mulroney said last week that Canada is "ready to negotiate an arrangement that respects our sovereignty in the Arctic, and within which appropriate accommodations can be made for our friends and allies."

On one issue, however, the two leaders agreed.

"They agreed to joint work in the fight against AIDS, which would be worked out jointly by the secretary of health and human services in the United States and the minister of national health and welfare here in Canada," Fitzwater said.

They also agreed to put the fight against the deadly disease on the agenda of the June economic summit meeting in Venice, he said.

After arrival Sunday at Uplands Canadian Forces Base, Reagan drove to the governor general's house past knots of onlookers and a few protesters holding up signs such as "No Free Trade in Acid Rain" and "Canada Is Not for Sale." One group hoisted a supportive banner reading, "Friends in Freedom."

Earlier Sunday on the NBC television program "Meet the Press," Mulroney was asked about Reagan's commitment to spend $2.5 billion for research on ways to combat acid rain.

A Canadian government official, speaking on condition he not be identified, said the proposal for a treaty, which would require Senate ratification, would add "a new dimension" to U.S.-Canadian negotiations on acid rain, although Canada long has favored an international agreement on the issue.

The official said Reagan "took note" of Mulroney's proposal when the prime minister brought it up again in their meeting.

 spot work being done by artists. They watched intently and asked lots of questions."

One of the things that Mrs. Miller said was heartening was "that it was so much a family affair. Parents, grandparents and children came together in so many instances."

"The number who came and the interest they showed by taking everything in, staying all afternoon really amazed us. We thought we had more than ample space by using Carolina East Mall. But large as the space there is, it was packed to capacity from early to late. There's no doubt about it, Super Sunday festival opening day has become a special event in Greenville and the area."

"Now our hope is that special events scheduled during the week will be as successful in being well attended," she said.

Adams, McGraw Help ECU Earn Split With Richmond

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

John Adams hit a three-run homer and Jay McGraw slapped a grand slam to pace East Carolina University to a 14-4 baseball victory over the University of Richmond Sunday to earn a doubleheader split.

The Spiders had won the opening game, 8-2, handing the Pirates their first loss of the year in Colonial Athletic Association play.

The split left the Pirates still atop the CAA pile with a 7-1 record, while Richmond slips to 5-3 in the league.

Richmond used a strong hitting attack to power past the somewhat lethargic Pirates in the opener, but were no match for the Pirates in the second game as Jim Peterson went six innings to earn his first decision of the year.

Peterson, hampered by arm problems this spring, had not gone further than two innings in any of his previous appearances, and Coach Gary Overton was happy to see him come away with his performance Sunday.

In addition, second baseman Steve Sides kept his consecutive hitting streak going, banging out singles in his first appearance in each game to run the string to 22 games in a row, dating back into last season.

Mark Sweeney got the win for Richmond in the first game, despite a shaky performance. Sweeney allowed only three hits by the Pirates — all in the third inning when the Bucs scored both of their runs. He walked eight and struck out five and went full on a number of batters.

"The key to the first game was Sweeney's effective wildness," Overton said. "He kept us off balance after not being able to locate well at times."

"Too, I think we were a little flat for the game. I didn't think going in that we were totally ready to play," the coach added. "We weren't aggressive and didn't take the game to them. We made a lot of little mistakes that don't show up in the box score — like not getting to balls that we've caught in the past, or letting them take an extra base."

Overton added that he didn't think Boone had his best stuff for the game either. The redhead was racked for eight hits and seven runs, six of them earned, in just three and a third innings.

But in the second game, it was a different story. The Pirates were ready this time and banged out 12 hits, five of them for extra bases. Peterson threw well and our bats came alive," Overton said. "Richmond's pitching in the second game was not the caliber it was in the first either. But we had timely hits and McGraw's grand slam put it away."

As has so often been the case, the Pirates fell behind early in both games. The Pirates have trailed in 12 of the 15 games in which their opponents have scored.

Richmond got the lead in the top of the first in the opener. Mike Zambo walked and Don Vossler brought him home with a double to right center. Vossler moved to third on Greg Harding's long fly to right and scored on a hit by Andy Malloy.

The Spiders got a third run in the top of the third. Harding singled and was safe at second when Malloy's grounder to short was errored on the relay. Both were sacrificed up, and Jim Merritt grounded out, scoring Harding.

East Carolina tried to come back in the bottom of the third, scoring twice to trim it to 3-2. With two away, Sides singled to center and Mike Sullivan got a hit into right. McGraw was hit by a pitch, loading the bases. Calvin Brown then singled to center, scoring both Sides and Sullivan.

But the Pirates were unable to generate another rally the rest of the game.

The Spiders then put it away with four in the fourth. Chris Blanton led off with a double to right center and Zambo walked. Vossler singled in Blanton and a double by Harding brought in Zambo. Malloy was intentionally walked as Jake Jacobs came on in relief, but Robert Reid singled to drive in Vossler. A walk to David Boynton forced in Harding for a 7-2 lead.

The other Spider run came in the seventh. Blanton led off with a single and was sacrificed up. He took third on a wild pitch and scored on a hit by Zambo.

Vossler led the Spider hitting with three while Harding, Reid, Merritt and Blanton each added two.

No one had more than one for the Pirates.

The second game started with almost the same situation as the Spiders took a 2-0 lead in the first inning. Zambo led off with a walk and Vossler singled him to third and stole second. Both scored on Malloy's single to center.

The Pirates, however, came back with one in the bottom of the frame. Adams singled and Sides beat out a bunt down the third base line — for his 22nd straight game with a hit.

Both were sacrificed up and an infield out by McGraw plated Adams.

The Pirates then broke it open in the second, scoring six big runs. Chris Cauble led off with a double to right and John Thomas walked. Mike Andrews reached on an error when his sacrifice bunt was errored, allowing courtesy runner Tommy Yarbrough to score. David Ritchie beat out a chopper to the infield, scoring Thomas and Adams followed with a three-run shot to left, powering the Pirates into a 6-2 lead.

Then, with one away, Sullivan singled, moved up on a hit by McGraw and a long fly out by Brown, scoring on a wild pitch to make it 7-2.

Richmond got one back in the third. Zambo walked, moved to third on Vossler's hit and scored on a single by Harding.

But East Carolina then scored five more in the third for a 12-3 edge. Thomas opened with a single deep in the hole behind the mound and stole second. Both Andrews and Ritchie walked, loading the bases. With two away, Sullivan walked to force in Thomas and McGraw followed with his fourth homer of the year, a shot to left center, driving in four runs.

The Spiders got their final run in the sixth. With two away, Reid walked and scored on a double by Merritt.

ECU added two more in its half of the inning. Cauble reached on an error and Thomas walked. Ritchie singled to load the bases and Adams walked, forcing in one run. Dean Ebehalt's fly to center was dropped, allowing Thomas to score.

The One That Got Away

Richmond's Greg Harding (right) pulls into second base after East Carolina's Steve Sides dropped the ball on an attempted forceout in the fourth inning of Sunday's first game of a doubleheader. Waiting Over, Fight Set To Go

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — After months of hype and a frenzied build-up, Marvelous Marvin Hagler and Sugar Ray Leonard finally meet tonight in a middleweight title fight that could be boxing's richest ever.

Hagler and Leonard will earn a combined $23 million in the scheduled 12-round bout before 15,366 spectators in an outdoor arena at Caesars Palace. They stand to collect several million more on proceeds from closed-circuit television.

It is a fight that was never supposed to happen, a fight that Leonard walked away from twice before. It is also a fight that Leonard finally orchestrated, coming out of retirement to challenge Hagler and attempt to rewrite boxing history in the process.

"He is the ultimate champion. That's why I came back," said Leonard, who last fought three years ago in a desultory performance against journeyman Kevin Howard.

"I think he's on an ego trip," Hagler says of Leonard's motivation. "He sees me doing good, he sees all the press, all the attention I get."

If the fight had happened five years ago, as many thought it would, the question would be simple. Could a great welterweight champion move up in weight to beat an equally proficient middleweight?

Now, however, the questions are many, and the most troubling involve Leonard's eyes.

Critics charge that Leonard, who underwent surgery in May 1982 to repair a detached retina in his left eye, is risking blindness by going back into the ring and exposing the eye to Hagler's punches.

The Nevada State Athletic Commission, responding to the fears, had Leonard undergo a retinal exam by three eye specialists last October and another just last Tuesday. After each, he was pronounced fit to fight.

"I'm not concerned about my eye, not in the least," Leonard said.

Leonard's camp was sufficiently concerned over the perception that Leonard's eyes might be bad that his lawyer, Mike Trainer, voiced worries that the referee would stop the bout if Leonard was cut or had a slight swelling around the eye.

"We're concerned that, because of the hysteria, one fighter might be treated differently than the other one," Trainer said. "We don't want public and media concern over Ray to carry over to the fight."

Hagler, for his part, says he certainly won't worry about his opponent's eye.

"He's the one who made the choice to fight," Hagler said. "This is a dog-eat-dog sport, a man's sport. If it was my eye, do you think he'd back off and say, 'Marvin, your eye?'"

Hagler is a 2 1/2-1 favorite in the 13th defense of the middleweight title he won with a third-round knockout of Alan Minter in September 1980. Hagler, 62-2-2, hasn't lost since dropping a 10-round decision to Willie Monroe in 1976.

"I don't feel I have anything to lose in this fight because I've done it all," Hagler said. "I'm going out the undisputed middleweight champion."

Hagler's World Boxing Council title will be on the line against Leonard, but Hagler no longer holds the World Boxing Association version of the crown. The WBA stripped him of the title for failing to defend it against a top-ranked contender, a decision that was upheld by a federal appeals court last week.

Hagler also holds the International Boxing Federation crown but Leonard can't win that title in tonight's fight. The IBF is not sanctioning the bout and will declare the title vacant should Hagler lose.

The titles, though, are almost secondary in this fight, which has so captured the attention of the public that promoter Bob Arum predicts it will be the biggest grossing bout ever. Arum said the fight will do at least $80 million and could approach $100 million.

Hagler is guaranteed $12 million plus a percentage of the gross, while Leonard will get $11 million for the bout, which is scheduled to begin about 8:15 PDT.

"I wasn't supposed to make all this money," Hagler said. "I wasn't colorful, I wasn't marketable, I wasn't a showbiz-type person. But look at me now."

Leonard says it isn't the money that lured him out of a retirement that began after he looked unimpressive in knocking out Howard in May 1984. Rather, he says, it is Hagler himself.

"He's the only reason that I've been able to train for an entire year," Leonard said. "I knew I wanted this more than I wanted any other fight. I was willing to sacrifice for it."

To get the feel of fighting again without having a tuneup bout, Leonard had a series of four fights in training last fall using 10-ounce gloves and without wearing headgear.

Simpson Survives, Wins GGO

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Scott Simpson considers The Masters a fun tournament, and his two-shot victory at the Greater Greensboro Open ensured he'll get a chance at some good times this week at Augusta.

Simpson survived a momentary lapse on the back nine at the Forest Oaks Country Club and held off at least five golfers to take a two-shot triumph in the $600,000 tournament.

Simpson turned in a 2-under-par 70 for a four-day total of 6-under-par 282 in conditions which resembled the middle of winter instead of early spring in North Carolina.

Thus, instead of a trip to Hattiesburg, Miss., for a satellite tournament, Simpson will take his wife, two children and $108,000 in first-prize money to Augusta National.

"It's not really a great course for my game because I don't hit it very long," Simpson said. "But it's a really fun tournament and it's a lot of fun to go there. If I can hit my irons good and close, I should be able to play good."

Simpson called the GGO victory nerve-racking, and not just because he hadn't won since the 1984 Westchester Classic.

"It meant so much to win, to go to Augusta," Simpson said. "I was close the whole way."

Simpson and Tom Byrum dueled through the first nine holes, with Simpson collecting a birdie on No. 9 to take a one-shot edge.

Simpson watched his lead grow when Byrum bogeyed the 10th hole. But Simpson played back to the field with bogeys at 12 and 14. By then, Chip Beck was within one shot and Clarence Rose was within two.

"When my game left me, I was just thinking about trying to hit some good golf shots," Simpson said. "At that point, I was just trying to keep going, stick with trying to hit the best shot."

After holding par at 15, Simpson sank a 12-foot putt for birdie at the 16th green.

"I just hadn't hit many good shots on the back nine. I was just a little bit off," Simpson said. "I finally made a good swing. It felt great. Then I made a good swing at 17 and two good ones on 18. A great way to finish."

Simpson locked up the victory with a 20-foot putt for birdie at 18. In addition to breaking the drought, the triumph wiped out most of the memories of a lost opportunity at last week's Tournament Players Championship.

"I was just trying to come here and keep playing good, whatever that was going to bring," Simpson said. "I feel real confident about the way I'm playing ... and that's the biggest key for me."

Simpson said he would approach the Masters as he would any other tournament.

"I've watched the Masters for a lot of years and it's a really exciting tournament," he said. "I've dreamed of winning it."

Rose finished with a 69 and a four-day total of 284.

Magic Helps L.A. Past Nuggets

By The Associated Press
Magic Johnson's latest act of legerdemain is a quadruple triple-double.

The Los Angeles Lakers' star scored 23 points, grabbed 11 rebounds and added 10 assists Sunday — the fourth consecutive game he has hit double figures in all three categories — in a 126-118 NBA victory over the Denver Nuggets.

The triumph gave the Lakers their third straight 60-victory season (60-15) and also reduced their magic number for clinching the home-court advantage throughout the playoffs to one.

"They are so good you can't afford to make any mistakes," Denver Coach Doug Moe said. "We made a few in the last quarter and they certainly took advantage. We had a couple of bad shots and they ran the lead from one (point) to seven just like that."

Elsewhere, Philadelphia edged Boston 106-104 in overtime, Detroit trimmed Milwaukee 125-107 and Golden State nipped San Antonio 120-119 to clinch its first playoff berth in 10 years.

Denver's Mike Evans scored the first basket of the fourth quarter to give the Nuggets a 97-96 lead over Los Angeles. But the Lakers' James SALISBURY — The Pitt County Wrestling Club had five medalists in the junior Olympic Wrestling Tournament held at East Rowan High School Saturday.

In the kids' division, Steven Osborne (98 lbs) took first place. Jason Osborne (110 lbs) also had a silver medal, second place, in the kids division.

K.D. Anderson, competing at 102 pounds, took a bronze medal for third place. Jason Adams won first place and a gold medal at the 145-pound division.

In the Juniors Division, Kevin Daniels (147 lbs) was a first place finisher.

ECU 8th

ECU finished in eighth place at the Furman Invitational Saturday.

Georgia Tech won the event with a team score of 589. They were followed by Clemson 590; Tennessee 598; Wake Forest 601; Furman 605; Georgia 607; Duke 608; East Carolina and South Florida 612; North Carolina State 613; Campbell and South Carolina 614; Virginia Tech 617; Virginia 619; Augusta College 622; Appalachian State 624; UT-Chatanooga 627; Marshall 630; Citadel 631; Western Carolina 634; and Murray State 642.

ECU was led by John Maginnes with a two-day total of 150. Brian Connor chipped in a 154 and Mike Bradley had a 153.

ECU returns to action at North Carolina Friday in the Tar Heel Invitational.

Earnhardt Wins Fourth Of Six

NORTH WILKESBORO, N.C. (AP) — After six NASCAR races this year, Dale Earnhardt is walking around with a big smile on his face while his competitors are shaking their heads in disbelief.

Earnhardt and the Richard Childress team have won four of the first six events on the Winston Cup circuit, have led 1,211 of a possible 2,187 laps for 55.37 percent and are averaging nearly $50,000 in winnings per race.

With a little bit of luck, they could have shut out everyone this season. Only a faulty alternator at Atlanta last month and a bad pit stop in the Daytona 500 have kept him from winning all six races.

Earnhardt's 24th career win came at the First Union 400 race Sunday at the 1/2-mile North Wilkesboro Speedway. He lapped all but three cars in the 32-car field and was just a few seconds away from lapping all his competitors when the sixth caution was thrown on lap 240 for an oil leak on Geoff Bodine's Chevrolet. He never regained that big of an advantage because of two more cautions in the race's latter stages.

"I don't try to go out and intimidate them," Earnhardt said of his competitors. "I go out to try and race and beat them, but not bully them. The shoe is going to be on the other foot and it could be next week. I have got to make hay while I can."

Earnhardt's Chevrolet finished 1.72 seconds ahead of Kyle Petty's Ford, but the race was not as close as it appeared. No one seriously challenged Earnhardt under the green flag.

"What made it so easy was the race car worked so good," Earnhardt said after collecting $44,675 before an estimated crowd of 26,500. "I was relaxed and having a good time. The car was doing its job and I was doing mine."

Earnhardt led five times for 319 laps in the 400-lap event and averaged 94.103 mph. The race was slowed by eight caution flags for 54 laps, and there were 11 lead changes among seven drivers.

Third place went to Neil Bonnett in a Pontiac and fourth to Alan Kulwicki in a Ford. Ricky Rudd, also in a Ford, finished fifth, one lap off the pace.

"This was the same car I won in at Richmond (Va.)," Earnhardt said. "I know we're a good race team and we've got a lot of confidence, but it amazes me how the team continues to repeat itself and is so consistent. If I can just keep my head screwed on my shoulders right and the car keeps doing what it's supposed to, we will have a super year."

"The competition will get tougher at mid-season, but we'll get tougher," he said. "We go to try to win, not just try to finish."

There were no injuries in the wrecks, but one of Kulwicki's crewmen was hurt on a pit stop during the third caution. John Junk was taken to Wilkes General Hospital for X-rays. He was treated for scrapes and abrasions and released.

There were conflicting reports as to how Junk was injured. Some said Bill Elliott's Ford hit a tire as he left his pits and knocked it into Junk. Other reports said Bobby Hillin Jr.'s car brushed against Junk.

North Wilkesboro is the only track on the circuit where no railing or wall separates the pit crews from pit road.

Here are the results from the First Union 400 NASCAR race at the five-eighths-mile North Wilkesboro Speedway. Each driver is listed with his type of car, laps completed, money won, and winner's average speed.

1. Dale Earnhardt, Chevrolet, 400 laps, $44,675, 94.103 mph.

Scott Looks For Repeat Shutout

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

Mike Scott, the king of the National League hill in 1986, hopes to start this season the same way he pitched in the spring — by shutting out the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Scott and the Houston Astros begin defense of their NL West championship tonight at home against Los Angeles, which counters with right-hander Orel Hershiser.

In three exhibition outings against the Dodgers, Scott did not allow an earned run in 12 innings. Last year, when he won the NL Cy Young award with an 18-10 record and a major-league leading 2.22 earned-run average and 306 strikeouts, Scott was 2-1 against Los Angeles.

Hershiser has a 7-1 career record against the Astros, including 2-0 last season.

The 1987 regular season was to open today with the Cleveland Indians at the Toronto Blue Jays, the first time the first game of the major-league season was scheduled to be played outside the United States.

In other American League openers today, it was Texas at Baltimore, New York at Detroit, Chicago at Kansas City and Boston at Milwaukee.

In other National League openers today, it was Montreal at Cincinnati and San Diego at San Francisco.

Scott finished out the 1986 regular season by going 4-0 at the Astrodome with a 1.71 ERA. He then shut out the New York Mets in Game 1 of the NL playoffs.

Manager Hal Lanier said Houston's pitching, which ranked second to the Mets in team ERA, will continue to improve.

"Without question our staff is better coming out of spring training this year than it was last year," Lanier said. "Last year we didn't know what we had after (Mike) Scott, (Bob) Knepper and (Nolan) Ryan."

Knepper will oppose Fernando Valenzuela, runnerup to Scott in the Cy Young voting, on Tuesday night.

"Now we know that Jim Deshaies is a major-league pitcher and we'll have Danny Darwin for a full season."

Gymnasts Place

GREENSBORO — Three Greenville youths scored in the North Carolina Boys' Qualifying Gymnastics Meet held in Greensboro Saturday. All three, members of the Greenville Gymnastics Club, participated in Class IV competition.

David Colbert led the group with a fifth place finish in the all-around competition with a 46.9 score. He won four ribbons on the day, finishing third on the rings with an 8.1 score, third on vaulting with a 9.0, fifth on the sidehorse with a 7.8 and sixth on the horizontal bar with a 7.5.

Seth Taper scored 44.3 in the all-around and won first place in vaulting with a 9.2. Brian Rose scored 42.2 in all-around and finished fourth in the vault with an 8.9.

All three reached qualifying levels for the state meet, to be held April 25 in Charlotte.

BOONE, N.C. — Kerri Moreno placed third in the all-around to qualify for the state gymnastics meet to be held April 25 in Charlotte.

Moreno was first on the balance beam with a 17.85 total and that included a 9.4 on her optional, which was the highest score of the meet.

She also placed second on floor exercise with a 17.85.

In the class II competition, Jennifer Mohror placed third on the floor exercise with a 16.20.

Roles Reversed After King Wins

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — Patty Sheehan popped the cork and drank champagne. Betsy King, stoic by comparison, seemed mostly grateful that she was going to get a few days' rest.

It wasn't exactly obvious which of the two golfers had just won the $500,000 Dinah Shore tournament and which had lost.

King was the winner, sinking a 3-foot par putt on the second hole of a playoff Sunday at Mission Hills Country Club to collect the $80,000 winner's prize.

Sheehan missed a putt for par from similar range, a miss that relegated her to second place and cost her $38,000.

King, who won the Tucson tournament just two weeks ago, collected her ninth career win and her first major title.

Local Teams Win

GRIFTON — Four Greenville teams took titles at the Shad Festival Tennis Tournament Sunday.

Henry Hostetter, Randy Bridgman, Al King, and Margaret McLawhorn took wins in the championship rounds while David Brown, Marvin Hardy, Darrin Reeder and Pam Young took wins in the consolation finals.

Diet Pill Sweeping U.S. Super Dream Pill Guaranteed Weight Loss

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH — According to a review of customers' files, here's what people are saying about the amazing, vastly improved "new version" of the world famous Dream Pill System for fast, guaranteed weight loss featuring Super Lite Dreams tablets:

- "I lost 25 lbs. with a 30 day supply."
- Mrs. J.N.S., Ft. Payne, Alabama
- "Losing 1 lb. per day."
- Mr. J.G., Pineville, Kentucky
- "I've lost 34 lbs. and I'm still losing."
- Mrs. J.K., Garden Grove, California
- "I have been on Dream Pill for one month and feel great...have lost 27 lbs."
- Mr. A.D., Anadarko, Oklahoma

The System's Dream Pill combines two natural substances called L-arginine and L-ornithine which can stimulate the body's production of growth hormone. Diet researchers believe that growth hormone may be what's responsible for allowing teenagers to down thousands of calories in hamburgers and other foods and still be thin as a rail."

Life Extension Authors Confirm Results

Growth Hormone is present in people up through the teenage years, then slowly diminishes with age. But L-arginine and L-ornithine make the body "think" it belongs to a teenager again, allowing adults to eat as much as they want — and still be thin and wiry.

Durk Pearson and Sandy Shaw, graduates of MIT and UCLA respectively, introduced these miracle substances to the public in their runaway best selling book, Life Extension. Much to her amazement, while taking L-arginine for its healing effects on a broken foot, Sandy lost 25 pounds of fat and put on 5 pounds of firm-toned muscle in six weeks. According to Durk's calculations, the pill caused Sandy to lose 400 times as much fat as she would otherwise have lost — without dieting!

Wet Game Ends Spring Season

The Pirates played outstanding defense in the second game, committing no errors and turning three double plays.

Adams led the Pirate hitting with three while McGraw and Ritchie each had two. Richmond was led by Vossler with a pair.

East Carolina is now 15-3 overall, while Richmond drops to 11-16.

The two teams meet in another CAA game today at 3 p.m. at Harrington Field.

By The Associated Press
If major-league umpires decide not to work today's opening games in a contract dispute, they went out with a splash.

John McSherry's National League crew ordered Sunday's exhibition game in Washington, D.C., between the New York Mets and Philadelphia Phillies to begin in a steady rain and 38-degree temperatures.

"This game wouldn't have been played except for the fact that they sold 40,000 tickets (45,614 tickets were sold, representing the largest crowd in the history of the District of Columbia, although many stayed home) and they didn't want to give out any refunds," Philadelphia third baseman Mike Schmidt said. "It's wrong, it's over, it's history."

And when they called the game after five innings — as soon as it became official — with the Mets leading 1-0 and the rain having slackened to a mere drizzle, it drew a lusty chorus of boos from a vast majority of the crowd that attended RFK Stadium's first major-league game in 15 years.

"You hate to see a game played under these conditions," Mets Manager Davey Johnson said. "We're lucky no one got hurt."

The only player who seemed to enjoy the miserable conditions was Mets pitcher Sid Fernandez, who entered the game with a 4.95 spring ERA and allowed only one hit — pinch hitter Milt Thompson's two-out single in the fifth inning — while walking one and striking out seven.

The Mets nicked Joe Cowley for a first-inning run on Mookie Wilson's leadoff double and Gary Carter's two-out single. Cowley allowed six hits.

Although the St. Louis Cardinals will close out the exhibition season today with a game against their Louisville farm club, the regular season gets under way with eight games — five in the American League and three in the National.

In the AL, Cleveland is at Toronto, New York at Detroit, Texas at Baltimore, Chicago at Kansas City and Boston at Milwaukee. NL games find Montreal at Cincinnati, San Diego at San Francisco and Los Angeles at Houston.

Toronto's Jimmy Key is scheduled to throw the first pitch of the 1987 season, the first time Opening Day has started outside the United States. Tim Raines, Bob Horner, Rich Gedman and Ron Guidry, all still unsigned free agents, are among the missing.

The Cleveland Indians and Toronto Blue Jays played to a nine-inning 8-8 tie in Buffalo, N.Y., en route to Toronto. Steve Carlton, signed by Cleveland on Friday, pitched three innings and gave up one run and two hits. The four-time Cy Young Award winner relieved fellow 300-game winner Phil Niekro, who allowed four hits and two runs in his three innings.

Cleveland's Mel Hall went 4-for-5, homered twice and drove in five runs. The Blue Jays tied the score with four runs in the ninth off Ernie Camacho, including Kelly Gruber's two-run double and Jesse Barfield's RBI single.

Meanwhile, Roger Clemens, who ended a 29-day holdout on Saturday, worked out with Boston but will not pitch in the opening series against Milwaukee — although the Red Sox are hurting for starters with Bruce Hurst and Oil Can Boyd ailing.

Bob Stanley will pitch the opener with Al Nipper going on Wednesday. Asked who his starting pitcher would be Thursday, Manager John McNamara said, "I don't have one." He then said it would not be Clemens, who pitched six hitless innings against Harvard University on Saturday. "He will not start Thursday," McNamara said.

Mario Soto, Cincinnati's one-time pitching ace, won't star for a while, either. The veteran right-hander was placed on the 15-day disabled list. Soto had arthroscopic surgery on his right shoulder last August to have bone spurs removed. He has thrown without pain this spring but isn't at full strength.

Soto pitched five innings in Saturday's exhibition game against Montreal. He allowed eight hits and four earned runs and said he was pleased with his performance.

On Sunday, Kal Daniels homered and Eric Davis had an RBI triple as the Reds beat the Expos 5-3. Reds starter Ted Power pitched seven innings, allowing three runs — two unearned — on five hits.

In other exhibition games: —Gary Pettis' squeezed home the winning run with one out in the ninth inning as the California Angels nipped the Los Angeles Dodgers 2-1 and swept their three-game Freeway Series. The Dodgers scored off Kirk McCaskill in the second inning on Pedro Guerrero's second home run of the spring. McCaskill allowed seven hits and struck out nine in six innings.

—Carlton Fisk's two-run homer in the seventh inning off rookie Logan Easley gave the Chicago White Sox a 12-11 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates. Greg Walker, Gary Redus, —Mike Morgan, pitching in his home town of Las Vegas for the first time in nine years, limited the defending Pacific Coast League champion Stars to five hits and one run in five innings in the Seattle Mariners' 5-0 victory.

—Albert Hall's two-run double in the ninth inning gave the Atlanta Braves a 6-5 victory over their Greenville, S.C., farm team.

Gorbachev Delays Trip

By ALISON SMALE
Associated Press Writer

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — A top official said a slight cold forced Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev to postpone today's planned visit to Czechoslovakia, where the conservative Communist leadership has resisted his style of reforms.

But a West German newspaper claimed Gorbachev had a case of the "political flu" because he angered the Prague government by planning to visit Alexander Dubcek, who led reforms in Czechoslovakia until Soviet tanks crushed liberalization in 1968.

Gorbachev, 55, appeared in good health last week during meetings with visiting British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher.

Foreign Minister Roman Narozny announced the postponement Sunday and rejected a suggestion from a Western reporter that disagreements between his government and Gorbachev were the real reason for the delay.

He said the trip would take place later this week, but did not give a date. Reporters were advised to attend a news conference Wednesday for more details.

Official Radio Moscow said today the visit would take place "in the second half of this week."

The official Soviet news agency Tass, in distributing Narozny's announcement in Moscow, originally kept the reference to a cold but later dropped it.

President and Communist Party leader Gustav Husak, 74, has given verbal support to Gorbachev's economic and political reforms in the Soviet Union, which include efforts to increase productivity and slightly increase competition for party office.

Husak and other Prague leaders have outlined plans for economic change in Czechoslovakia but say they will not rush to adopt all the Kremlin's reforms.

As Communist Party leader during the "Prague Spring" of 1968, Dubcek advocated some of the reforms Gorbachev is now pushing, including secret ballots in party elections.

That heady period of cultural and political freedom came to an end in August 1968, when the Soviet Union led a Warsaw Pact invasion. Husak replaced Dubcek as party leader eight months later.

In Hamburg, West Germany, the newspaper Bild quoted "reliable sources in Moscow" as saying Gorbachev had planned to meet Dubcek, who was relegated to a menial job near his native Bratislava after falling from power.

Bild said conservative Czechoslovak leaders as well as some senior Soviet officials were enraged.

"Gorbachev was unable to overcome this opposition for now, so he chose to declare that he had the 'political flu,'" said Bild. In the past, the mass-circulation daily has received inside information leaked from the Kremlin to promote or discredit Soviet officials.

Bild said Gorbachev wanted to demonstrate his policy of openness, or "glasnost," by meeting Dubcek.

The newspaper said Gorbachev did not seek to rehabilitate Dubcek but rather to push the Czechoslovak government onto a more moderate course in economic policy and treatment of dissidents.

The Prague authorities have moved swiftly to repress dissent since 1968, harassing and jailing religious activists and human rights advocates such as the signatories of Charter 77.

Narozny refused to say whether Gorbachev's itinerary was being adjusted. Although he would not confirm Gorbachev's original schedule, the Kremlin leader was expected to spend two days in Prague and one in Bratislava, the capital of the republic of Slovakia in the southeast.

Czechoslovak officials had said privately for several weeks that Gorbachev would visit from Monday through Wednesday, although the schedule never was officially announced.

Orange-coated workers spruced up Prague streets over the weekend in preparation for the visit, and thousands of Soviet and Czechoslovak flags fluttered from lampposts and buildings.

Pope Delivers Message Of Peace To Prisoners

By FRANCES D'EMILIO
Associated Press Writer

ANTOFAGASTA, Chile (AP) — Pope John Paul II prepared today to end his violence-marred Chilean pilgrimage by visiting political prisoners who have been fasting to protest the rightist military government of President Augusto Pinochet.

On Sunday, he gave words of encouragement to Indians and farmworkers in an economically depressed southern region and heard a local archbishop describe Chile as torn by "terrorism" from both the government and opposition forces.

The pope arrived in the northern desert town of Antofagasta on Sunday night and offered a blessing for the residents over the local television station. He was scheduled today to visit the Antofagasta prison, whose inmates include political prisoners accused of leftist subversion, before leaving Chile for neighboring Argentina.

Relatives of inmates have alleged that some political prisoners were transferred just before John Paul's arrival so they would not be able to speak out to him.

On Friday, about 400 political prisoners throughout Chile announced they were ending a hunger strike in response to a plea from church officials. Some had been fasting as long as 38 days to protest jail conditions and seek to have their cases switched from military to civilian courts.

The weekend saw a respite from the violence that accompanied the pope's stay in Santiago, the capital, including a clash Friday between demonstrators and police in which at least 261 people were injured.

John Paul traveled the length of Chile from Punta Arenas near the country's southern tip, through Pacific coast towns with their backs to the snow-tipped Andes, to Antofagasta at the edge of the Atacama Desert, the world's driest.

Crowds at the weekend appearances were peaceful in contrast to those in Santiago, where demonstrators boldly hoisted signs urging: "Excommunicate the assassin," meaning Pinochet.

In Temuco, nearly 400 miles south of Santiago, the pope told farmworkers, "Your problems of land ownership are not hidden from me." The crowd gave whoops of approval. He told the farmworkers and native Mapuche Indians, who comprise about 600,000 of Chile's 12 million people, that he recognized they "have been the object of injustice."

However, he urged, "Don't abandon farm life without justification ... only to find, often, an even more difficult and precarious life in the city."

Roman Catholic Archbishop Jose Manuel Santos of Concepcion, an industrial city about 275 miles south of Santiago, told John Paul of Chile's "anxiety over terrorism from the opposition and terrorism by the government" and "horrendous crimes whose authors go unpunished."

Human rights organizations have charged Pinochet's government with widespread human rights abuses, including the use of torture during interrogation of detainees. Pinochet took power in a bloody 1973 coup that overthrew elected Marxist President Salvador Allende.

Catholic Church leaders have been among Pinochet's most vocal opponents, and many church activists have come under attack by security forces.

New Moscow Embassy Bugged, Senator Says

By BRYAN BRUMLEY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Prospects for tighter security at the U.S. Embassy in Moscow are uncertain as a senator says a new office building there is riddled with KGB listening devices and an attorney claims Marine guards are encouraged to use local prostitutes.

"Our general contractor is the KGB for our embassy over there," Sen. Patrick J. Leahy, D-Vt., the former vice chairman of the Senate intelligence committee, said Sunday. "The fact is that this embassy can never, ever be made secure."

The extent of alleged security breaches at the mission remained in question Sunday as Secretary of State George P. Shultz prepared to fly to Moscow for arms talks April 13-16. The talks are aimed at reaching an accord to eliminate U.S. and Soviet medium-range missiles in Europe.

U.S. officials say they are not certain whether secure meeting rooms and the embassy communications center are bugged following revelations that two Marines allegedly were seduced by Soviet women and allowed KGB agents into the old embassy office building.

A new $191 million office building under construction is so riddled with hidden KGB listening devices that it will never be secure, Leahy said Sunday on the CBS-TV program, "Face the Nation."

Under a 1972 agreement, the U.S. government allowed the new U.S. Embassy building to be built by Soviet workers, with many prefabricated sections assembled off the site, away from American supervision.

Listening devices have been found in the bricks and steel girders of the nearly completed building, government officials say, and in February, the State Department appointed James Schlesinger, the former Defense Secretary and CIA chief, to investigate.

Leahy urged that the U.S. government "require payment from the Soviets for the damage that has been caused or not allow them to go into their own embassy in Washington."

Arthur Hartman, who retired from the State Department last month after five years as U.S. ambassador to Moscow, said a 1977 agreement blocks the Soviets from moving into newly constructed offices in Washington.

The Washington Post reported in today's editions that Rep. Dan Mica, D-Fla., said 10 more U.S. missions have come under investigation by State Department and military officials.

The newspaper also said Hartman and the State Department resisted warnings for several years that all Soviet nationals working at the embassy should be fired, even though they knew 50 of the 200 Soviet employees were working for the KGB.

Hartman denied ever skimming on security precautions but said he didn't want to get rid of all the Soviet employees because their American replacements might be more vulnerable.

Mica, chairman of the House Foreign Affairs subcommittee on international operations, was in Moscow today to inspect the new U.S. embassy.

He said his review of the embassy construction problem was taking a back seat to an investigation that two Marine guards at the Moscow mission allowed KGB agents into the most sensitive areas of the old building.

The State Department, Defense Department and the intelligence agencies currently are carrying out an investigation that assumes a "worst case" scenario about what the Soviets learned, and the Pentagon is recalling the entire 28-man Marine detail to expedite the assessment.

If the allegations prove correct, Leahy said, "It is a major coup for the Soviet Union."

Mike Stuhff, an attorney for one of the Marines accused in the case, Sgt. Clayton Lonetree, acknowledged that his client had an affair with Violetta Seina, a Soviet woman who was employed at the embassy and who now is believed to have worked with Soviet intelligence.

But Stuhff denied allegations his client allowed Soviets into the embassy, saying the assertion was "completely and totally a fabrication" of the other guard accused of espionage, Cpl. Arnold Bracy.

Stuhff also claimed Marines were told on arriving in Moscow "that they should have relations with prostitutes."

"It wasn't uncommon at all for the Marines to go out to some of the hotels where the local women were known to hang out. ... They were encouraged to relieve their tensions in rather promiscuous types of liaisons," he said.

But Hartman vigorously denied Stuhff's statements, saying, "Every Marine was briefed about the dangers when they came in. They went to weekly school to tell them about these dangers, and unfortunately, it is just very difficult to convince young men."

"I had many cases during the time that I was there where people met Soviets at a hotel," Hartman said on the same CBS program. "We used to find out that people thought they were Finnish girls."

The Los Angeles Times reported Saturday that Marine guards at the embassy reportedly slept with Soviet maids, fraternized with prostitutes and had reputations for boozing and brawling that prompted one Western diplomat to refer to the guards' quarters as "Animal House."

The newspaper, quoting sources it did not name, said a young British woman allegedly was raped at one Marine party, and five Marines later were sent home to face courts-martial.

Maj. Anthony Rothfork, a spokesman for the Marines in Washington, confirmed an incident did take place involving Marines and a woman who was not a Soviet citizen, but denied a rape took place.

Cuban Prisoners Arrive In U.S.

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Following a personal appeal to Cuban President Fidel Castro by French undersea explorer Jacques Cousteau, Cuba quietly has allowed 20 former long-term political prisoners to emigrate to the United States, U.S. officials say.

The emigration, at the rate of two a week, is an apparent attempt to avoid publicity and the tumultuous receptions that have accompanied large-scale prisoner releases in the past, said the officials, who asked not to be identified.

When a group of 75 former Cuban prisoners showed up in Miami last September, thousands gathered at the airport for the occasion, including high ranking city officials and Assistant Secretary of State Elliott Abrams.

The United States has authorized an additional 59 former prisoners to immigrate and they are awaiting permission from Cuba to leave along with close relatives, the officials said, adding that Cuban authorities have indicated that the group will be allowed to leave.

Cousteau made the personal appeal to Castro when he visited Cuba in late 1985. All 20 of the prisoners who already have arrived in the United States were freed from incarceration last May.

The last two of the 20 arrived Wednesday aboard a weekly charter flight that operates between Miami and Havana. The other 18 had arrived on earlier charter flights.

The State Department had expected the 20 Cubans and their family members to arrive last December, but Cuban authorities postponed their departure until the new year without explanation.

The political prisoner issue took on a new dimension several weeks ago when the United States undertook a major effort to persuade the 43-nation U.N. Human Rights Commission in Geneva to address the Cuba question, and the Cuban government may have freed the prisoners quietly to keep the issue out of the spotlight, the officials said.

A motion to kill the U.S. proposal was approved 19 to 18 with 6 abstentions despite an intense lobbying effort that included President Reagan and Vice President George Bush.

The U.S. case against Cuba focused on its contention that there are large numbers of political prisoners in that country, an allegation supported in a report issued last year by Americas Watch, a New York-based human rights group.

The report said Cuba has more long-term political prisoners than any country in the world. However, Castro said in a 1985 interview that there are fewer than 200 such prisoners in Cuba.

Press Law Protested

HONG KONG (AP) — More than 600 students and union members marched to the Hong Kong governor's residence to protest a new law making it a crime to publish "false news" that is likely to cause public alarm.

The protesters Sunday were headed by the Joint Committee for the Promotion of Freedom of Press and Expression and also included some members of the Legislative Council, the colony's lawmaking body.

They ended their march outside the council's headquarters, where they submitted a petition to amend the press law.

Judds, Travis Lead Nominees

BUENA PARK, Calif. (AP) — The Judds, a musical mother-daughter team, and Randy Travis, part of a new wave of country artists, lead the list of nominees for Monday night's Academy of Country Music Awards. The three singers, with four nominations each are followed by George Strait, Reba McEntire and Alabama, with three each.

The 22nd annual show comes as musicians such as Travis, Dwight Yoakam and Steve Earle are creating country-western music with a raw, rock edge, which many say has given the industry new life. "I'm real inspired by what I see coming up the pike right now," Dolly Parton said in a recent interview. "It is going back to what we were trying to do years and years ago when nobody was buying it (country records) and people were ashamed to say they liked it."

Emmylou Harris agreed. "There are so many good things happening in music right now," she said. "It was just a wasteland out there for a while. I think country music is very, very healthy."

The two-hour Dick Clark Productions awards ceremony will be televised on tape delay nationally Monday night on NBC-TV from Knott's Berry Farm, which some West Coast country music fans have dubbed Grand Ole Opry West.

Noami Judd and her daughter, Wynonna, were nominated for top vocal duet, single record of the year for "Rockin' With Rhythm," song of the year for "Grandpa," and album of the year for "Rockin' With the Rhythm."

Travis was nominated for top male vocalist, single record and song of the year for "On the Other Hand," and album of the year for "Storms of Life."

Alabama is a familiar fixture on the list of nominees, winning 13 awards — the most of any group — since 1982.

Footo Miniseries Will Air On PBS

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Thank you, PBS, for giving some of Horton Footo's plays and limited-release movies a bigger audience and a better context as the miniseries "Story of a Marriage," beginning Monday on "American Playhouse."

Footo won Academy Awards for his screen adaptation of "To Kill a Mockingbird," and more recently his original screenplay, "Tender Mercies."

Of the three of Footo's plays recently made into films, only "The Trip to Bountiful," with an Academy Award for Geraldine Page, received much box-office notice.

"On Valentine's Day" and "1918" played only in a few markets and not for long. PBS viewers, however, will get to see these two and one other, original production in the five-part, 5½-hour miniseries over three weeks.

"They've all been done in the theater, so in that sense there's nothing totally new about them, but it's the first time they've been seen together and released in sequence," Footo said in a telephone interview.

The programs are part of a nine-play project about Footo's family in East Texas. The opening episode, "Courtship," was produced especially for "American Playhouse." It was filmed in Mississippi.

"Courtship" is 90 minutes. The rest of the episodes are an hour and air two each night on April 13 and 20.

In "Courtship," set in the small, East Texas town of Harrison in 1915, we meet Elizabeth, a character based on Footo's grandmother and portrayed by his daughter, Hallie. (The cast also includes Footo's son, Horton Jr.) Elizabeth is enamored of a "wild" boy named Horace, played by William Converse-Roberts.

While other young people in the town attend a dance nearby, the quietly confident Elizabeth and her earnest but clumsy younger sister Laura, played by Amanda Plummer, stay at home and gossip.

Their parents and two visiting aunts gossip, too, about so-and-so who went to the asylum and so-and-so who committed suicide. Aunt Sarah (Marietta Marich) wonders about the deathbed confession of a departed in-law, then says fondly she'd like to visit her grave.

"I just like to visit graveyards. I like to see what they put on people's gravestones," she says cheerfully. "I wonder what on earth would you put on Asa's gravestone?"

Horace leaves the dance and comes over to visit Elizabeth. Her disapproving father (Michael Higgins) refuses to let her walk downtown with Horace to get an ice cream, so they stay on the porch and talk, stealing a quick kiss.

Later, after Horace has left, the girls' mother (Rochelle Oliver) confronts Elizabeth and Laura with her knowledge that they have been "slippin' around" with boys. The confrontation comes on the heels of news that a local girl who "got in trouble" and suffered a miscarriage had died that night of complications.

Even when he writes of the tragic, Footo's dialogue is subtle and enchanting. The world he creates is so palpable, you can even feel the warmth of the summer evening on the small screen. (If you ever have the chance, see Footo's little-known but stunning 1972 movie adaptation of the William Faulkner story "Tomorrow" starring Robert Duvall).

"It's not a literal retelling about my family," Footo says of the series of plays. "There's some basic things I've used, but a lot of it is fantasy, though it's true to the spirit and the time."

First-time director Howard Cumings has done an admirable job with "Courtship," which is heavy on the dialogue and requires close attention to keep up with all the comings and goings and carryings on.

It doesn't take long, however, to be lured into the story and find yourself anxious to know what happens.

The cast is terrific, especially Hallie Footo, whose level gaze and straightforward speech hides the simmering emotion that will shortly make Elizabeth the talk of the town.

With episode two, "After the Elopement," Plummer is gone from the cast, but Matthew Broderick joins up as Brother for the rest of the series. The last three episodes are "Reconciliation," "Shadows of War" and "Renewal."

Gentlemen, Play Ball!
 The 1987 baseball season begins today. At first, the national pastime was played only by amateur "gentlemen." But in 1869, the Cincinnati Red Stockings became the first all-pro team, touring from New York to San Francisco, and winning every game they played against the amateur gentlemen's teams of the day. Within two years, the Boston Bostons, the Troy Haymakers, the New York Mutuals and many other teams were helping professional baseball sweep the country.

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You are able to complete arrangements for getting home and property matters together. Think about the policies you wish to express and your special creative views.
ARIES (March 21 to April 19): See what can be done to get your home improved. Show your mate how devoted you are tonight.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): It's a good time for dealing with outside contacts. The evening is fine for inviting friends over.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Practical affairs can be made to work profitably. Be optimistic in writing notes to those close by.
MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Seek out new outlets for your personal existence. Contact one who has been very successful.
LEO (July 22 to August 21): Study a better course of activity through which you can gain your personal desires confidentially.
VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Team up with one who is sensitive and gain a favor that means much to you. Romance is in the air tonight.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Complete that outlet and later put your energy toward gaining personal aims. Be with generous friends who can assist you.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Make arrangements for the pleasure you have in mind. Plan how to have greater happiness in the future.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Know how others expect you to keep promises made to them, and try to please them.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Be alert to new opportunities for advancement and seize them enthusiastically.
AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Utilize your time wisely and get everything working in better order. Activate your personal ingenuity.
PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Plan to enjoy the pleasures you have liked in the past. Do something to gain more energy. IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be an affectionate family member and also be very patriotic. Make sure to have friends come into the home since your progeny is apt to be quite introverted. Give as fine an education as you can. Upon adulthood, your progeny will be quite responsible.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1 — Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠93 ♥7 ♦KJ973 ♣AJ965
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♦ Dbl ?
 What do you bid now?
 A. — One thing is sure the opponents have a good majorsuit fit somewhere. We would opt for five diamonds as a twoway action. There is a chance that partner might make it; but if he doesn't, it will surely be a cheap sacrifice against a probable enemy game.

Q.2 — Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠83 ♥AJ762 ♦8643 ♣J2
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♣ 2 ♣ Pass Pass
 Dbl Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
 A. — The answer depends on your methods. If you are using negative doubles, two hearts is sufficient because partner might have a minimum opening bid and is simply protecting your possible penalty double. If you are not, partner must have a good hand, so you should show that you have reasonable values by jumping to three hearts.

Q.3 — As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠J76 ♥9 ♦AKJ72 ♣AKJ10
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 1 ♦ 1 ♣ ?
 What do you bid now?
 A. — Slam depends almost entirely on what partner holds in spades. Since you know where you are going to play the hand, you can now afford to jump shift to three clubs now. Assuming partner doesn't cuebid spades at his next turn, you should then jump to five diamonds.

Q.4 — East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠K98 ♥7 ♦J107632 ♣632
 The bidding has proceeded:
 North East South West
 3 ♣ Pass ?
 What action do you take?
 A. — Matters are serious. The opponents can make a lot of tricks at a heart contract. To make it more difficult for them to get into the auction we suggest you make an advance sacrifice of four spades. A raise to five spades might prove more effective, but could propel the opposition into a makable slam they might not normally bid.

Q.5 — As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠7 ♥854 ♦AKQ1093 ♣AQJ
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♦ Pass 2 ♣ Pass ?
 What do you bid now?
 A. — You have to decide between rebidding those magnificent diamonds or showing your excellent support for partner's suit. We think you should jump to three diamonds. Since partner has made a twoover-one response, this creates a gameforce, giving you the opportunity to show your club support at your next turn.

Q.6 — Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠83 ♥AJ72 ♦Q83 ♣A762
 Partner opens the bidding with one heart. What do you respond?
 A. — If you are playing limit raises, this hand qualifies as maximum for that action. If you are playing forcing jump raises, we think you are a whisker light for that, so we recommend a temporing bid of two clubs, to be followed by a heart raise at your next turn.

Interstate Road System Needs Work As Last Sections Funded

WASHINGTON (AP) — Even as Congress authorized money to finish the last segments of the 42,798-mile Interstate highway system, officials worried that billions of dollars more will be needed to keep the already completed roadway from falling apart.

"You might turn around in 1995 and find that the Interstate system is in much worse condition than it is today," says Lester Lamm, director of the Highway Users Federation, which represents a broad coalition of transportation interests.

The Interstate system, the largest public construction program ever with a price tag of $123 billion, is expected to be completed in the early 1990s thanks to the five-year highway authorization bill that became law this week. The controversial bill, which survived a veto by President Reagan, includes $13.4 billion to finish the system's last miles.

But more than $64 billion will be needed over the next 18 years to keep the ribbons of asphalt and concrete in conditions comparable to what they were four years ago, the Transportation Department estimates.

The highway bill's five-year plan includes about $2.8 billion annually in federal funds for repairs, short of what highway experts believe will be needed even after state contributions are added. Without repairs, hundreds of miles of the highway system will surpass their 20-year design life each year over the next decade.

State highway officials are struggling to keep much of the existing roadway in proper repair.

A decade ago, the Interstate highways were deteriorating at a record pace with neither adequate state nor federal funds available for repairs. At that time, it was estimated the federal highway system was deteriorating at a rate 50 percent faster than road crews could fix it.

Highway experts say the tide since has begun to turn, largely because of a nickel-a-gallon fuel tax increase in 1982 that provides new funds for Interstate repair projects.

"The tax increase really rejuvenated the whole effort to rebuild and repair roads in the country," says Robert Hartmann, executive director of the Road Information Program, a research group affiliated with road construction interests.

Nevertheless, as of 1985, the latest year for which Federal Highway Administration figures are available, about 35 percent of the rural Interstate system and 40 percent of the urban system were in poor or marginally fair shape.

Some highway experts say the amounts being authorized for the rest of the decade and early 1990s may not be able to keep up.

"Deterioration might get the better of the improvements," Lamm said. The Interstate highway system was born in 1956 when President Eisenhower signed into law legislation authorizing the system and establishing a federal trust fund to pay for its construction with 90 percent coming from federal funds.

At the time, it was estimated to cost $37 billion and be completed by 1972. But additional miles were added and construction costs have risen well beyond the original estimates.

At the beginning of this year, the price tag stood at $110 billion with 41,661 miles open to traffic and 651 miles under construction. About 500 additional miles remain in the engineering or planning stage, some of the most expensive miles in the system.

Among the most expensive gaps to be filled are the Century Freeway in Los Angeles, a 17.3-mile section of I-105 estimated to cost $1.1 billion; a third-harbor tunnel and airport connector in Boston, a 3.4-mile segment of I-90 that will cost $1.5 billion; and a 6.4-mile extension of I-90 across Lake Washington east of Seattle, including a floating bridge and tunnel, costing $1 billion.

Few projects have affected and shaped a country's economic and social fabric as has the Interstate highway system.

The system "literally goes from anywhere to everywhere ... in a way that no other transportation mode can. And because it does this so effectively day in and day out, it is simply taken for granted, like the rising of the sun each morning," says Francis C. Turner, the retired federal highway administrator sometimes referred to as the "father of the Interstate system" because of his involvement in the project in the 1950s.

The highways have allowed middle-class families to drive from urban centers to vacation spots and still get back within two weeks, and have allowed the trucking industry and many other sectors of the economy to boom.

In 1956, the long-haul trucking industry had total revenues of $5.8 billion. Its revenues today are 10 times that amount and a coast-to-coast trip has been cut from seven to 10 days to as little as 72 hours with sleeper cabs and two drivers.

As the Interstate highway system made its way across the country, little managed to stand in its way. Mountains were moved, urban and suburban neighborhoods were razed, wetlands were filled.

But some barricades stood.

In San Francisco, local opposition stopped work on the Embarcadero Freeway, and an elevated, partially completed, part of the highway remains today. The four lanes of I-93 briefly become a two-lane road through New Hampshire's Franconia Notch despite years of efforts by highway builders to push the four lanes through the historic notch.

In addition, Interstate sections planned in cities such as New York, Chicago, Washington, D.C., and New Orleans — including one that would have been built in the shadows of the Lincoln Memorial — have long ago been wiped off highway planning maps.

Evangelist Says Prayer Vigil Renewed His Healing Powers

By JOEL WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer

ROCKWALL, Texas (AP) — TV evangelist Oral Roberts says he narrowly survived a bout with death and emerged with renewed healing powers after his 10-day prayer vigil to raise $8 million.

"It was like a howling hurricane was sweeping in from a spiritual standpoint, and my body was being buffeted," Roberts said Sunday in his first sermon since ending the vigil Tuesday at the Oral Roberts University prayer tower in Tulsa, Okla.

In January, the 69-year-old evangelist told a national television audience that God had told him he would "call him home" unless he raised $8 million for medical missionary scholarships by March 31, which was Tuesday.

He said he decided to come down from the tower Tuesday night after hearing a voice say, "It is done. The medical missionary program has been birthed by the Lord."

Roberts said Wednesday he had received about $8.7 million in donations, an amount he said must be matched each year to support the medical missionaries who study at his Tulsa medical school.

He said God told him to undertake the 10-day ordeal from which he said he emerged with enhanced healing powers.

"When I came down from that prayer tower, my hand was on fire," Roberts said. "It's on fire this morning."

At one point during the vigil, he and associates anointed the tower with oil, he said. He said he also sensed his strength fading more than once. "Two or three times, I felt death on me. I felt the devil was trying to destroy my life," Roberts told a capacity crowd at a service dedicating the new 5,001-seat, $15 million Church on the Rock.

Officials estimate that one of every four residents is a member of the church in this city of 10,800 about 30 miles east of Dallas.

Roberts defended the prosperity he enjoys from his ministry, and said God returns wealth to those who give out of expectation.

"I live in one of the finest homes you've ever seen in your life," he told the congregation. "I have one of the finest, safest cars."

Apparently referring to some TV stations that pulled his program after he announced the life-or-death ultimatum from God, he said, "Just don't censor us when we worship our God."

Church on the Rock member Cindy Morhac said Roberts' revelations are similar to those given to Moses in the Old Testament. "This is really nothing new," she said of the life-threatening ultimatum.

On Friday, two aerospace workers filed suit in federal court in New Orleans, asking that Roberts be forced to return donations to anyone who asked and that the federal government regulate evangelism.

The suit accused Roberts of portraying God as a blackmailer. A spokesman for Roberts' ministry said he could not be reached for comment.

Larry Lea, pastor of the 7,000-member church, said, "I think it's ludicrous to say God would blackmail someone" and that he saw no opposition to Roberts' fund-raising methods among the Rockwall congregation.

Pilots Make Purchase Bid

CHICAGO (AP) — United Airlines pilots have offered to buy the carrier for $4.5 billion, a spokesman for the pilots said today.

The bid was outlined in a letter Sunday to UAL Inc. Chairman Richard J. Ferris, said pilots' spokesman James Damron. Service, safety and profitability would improve if UAL agreed to sell, he said.

The company is studying the proposal, which it views as "an invitation to negotiate," said airline spokesman Matt Goning.

The pilots are troubled by the company's recent decision to diversify and move away its "core" business of operating an airline, Damron said.

UAL has acquired Hertz Rent-a-Car, Westin Hotels and Hilton International and is changing its name to Allegis and its image to that of a total travel-service company.

"In today's highly-competitive industry environment, a first-class airline cannot afford the drain of financial capital and corporate commitment that results from excessive diversification," said the letter from F.C. Dubinsky, chairman of the group representing United's 6,000 pilots.

The proposal offers approximately $1 billion more than the estimated public market value of the airline, the letter said.

SHILOH RECREATED — Confederate soldiers battle with Union troops Sunday during a re-creation of the Battle of Shiloh. The event was held on 600 acres of land several miles from the original battle site near Shiloh, Tenn. About 6,000 Civil War buffs took part in the re-enactment. (AP Laserphoto)

'Soldiers' Stage Battle

By WOODY BAIRD
Associated Press Writer

SHILOH, Tenn. (AP) — The echo of musket fire swept across rolling fields Sunday as 6,000 Civil War buffs transformed into Civil War soldiers staged a remake of one of the bloodiest battles on American soil.

Cavalry companies charged into the fray with swords and pistols drawn while 66 cannon sent clouds of smoke and waves of thunder across the battlefield.

"When the shooting starts and your adrenaline gets up, you get just as excited as if it were real," said William Carrington of Durham, N.C., serving as a lieutenant with the 19th Alabama Infantry.

The show, watched by about 40,000 people perched on hills, the first day of what had been a two-day fight 125 years ago.

The real battle began on April 6, 1862, when 40,000 Confederate troops led by Gen. Albert Sidney Johnston surprised an equal number of Union soldiers under the command of Gen. Ulysses S. Grant.

The Union army, marching south after victories at Fort Donelson and Fort Henry on the nearby Tennessee River, had decided to rest and drill in west Tennessee near Shiloh Church.

Confederate troops marched up from Corinth, Miss., about 20 miles south. By the time the battle ended, more than 100,000 men had joined the fight, and 23,000 of them were killed or wounded.

At the time it was the largest battle fought in the United States.

Sunday's event was organized by the Shiloh Re-Enactment Association Inc., which said requirements for proper period dress and weapons were strictly enforced. The soldiers, wearing replicas of Civil War uniforms, were armed with 1860s-era weapons or replicas. Cavalrymen provided their own mounts.

The location for the re-enactment was a 600-acre field near the original battleground, now a national park about 100 miles east of Memphis.

On Saturday, the participants from 47 states and five foreign countries practiced marching, turning, advancing with fixed bayonets and other war tactics of the day.

Re-enactment organizers had to deal with matters more mundane than combat, such as parking and traffic control.

Ken Chrestman, who spent two years planning and organizing the re-creation, said thousands of dollars were spent on insurance, permission to use the land had to be secured, and 120 "porta-johns" were ordered. The Re-Enactment Association hoped to recoup the $50,000 cost by charging spectators $3 for tickets.

"In many ways, it's like a play," Chrestman, a 34-year-old investment banker, said recently. "But what we do is a lot more serious than a play. It's history re-created so people can see and understand what happened 125 years ago. It's awfully hard to smell black powder between the pages of a history book."

The problem with most big banks' Individual Retirement Accounts is that they don't treat customers as individuals.

A First Federal IRA specialist will be happy to help you maximize your individual tax savings on a high-yielding First Federal IRA.

We'll help you maximize your tax benefits this year while explaining what the new tax laws may bring next year.

We know the ins and outs of making an IRA work harder to meet your needs. That's why we're happy to explain our different IRA plans and help you select the one plan that makes the most sense for your particular situation.

So instead of being a face in the crowd at one of the big banks' IRA factories, bring this year's IRA investment to First Federal.

As the only financial institution with offices only in Pitt County, your business is important to us at First Federal. That's why we make an extra effort to meet your individual financial needs. See us about an IRA today.

FIRST FEDERAL

The best place to bank.
