Violent Storms Rip, Wash, Smash State

By The Associated Press
Waves of violent storms that ripped across North Carolina were blamed for three traffic deaths, and residents were left to cope with washed-out roads and bridges, downed trees, broken power lines and other damages caused by hail and high winds.

The storms started before dawn Wednesday and were still ripping across the state early today. There also were reports of funnel clouds, but National Weather service officials could not confirm that any were tornadoes.

Two men were killed when the trucks they were driving collided head-on on U.S. 64 near Lexington. State Highway Trooper E.J. Bowers said Thurman Weeks, 36, of Hickory and William Bobby Ayers, 34, of Spruce Pine, were killed at about noon Wednesday.

Weeks apparently lost control of his truck in heavy rain, and his truck crossed the center line and hit Ayers' vehicle, Bowers said. Traffic on U.S. 64 was blocked for about five hours as work crews cleaned up the wreckage.

In another accident, Sheila Dunlap Burchell, 27, of Stoneville in Rockingham County, was killed when her car skidded and crashed on a road near Stoneville.

Weather service officials said fierce winds that scattered shopping carts, tore down signs and chased bank employees into a vault at a Mecklenburg County shopping center probably were not part of a tornado, despite reports of a funnel cloud.

"We're all shook up," said Jo Ann Stewart, an employee of First Union National Bank at Coulwood Shopping Center near Charlotte. "The windows rattled, the doors blew open and the sky got pitch black. We ran into the vault."

Other funnel clouds were reported in Mecklenburg, Forsyth and Anson counties later Wednesday.

By Wednesday night, nearly half of the state's 100 counties were under a tornado watch.

About 200 families were without electricity in Charlotte and Mecklenburg late Wednesday, a Duke Power Co. spokeswoman said. Other power outages were reported late Wednesday in Albemarle and Monroe.

In Caldwell County, a mobile home in the Collettesville community was thrown about 14 feet Wednesday morning. A woman, whose name was not available, was sleeping inside and was not hurt, but the mobile home was destroyed, county emergency management director Dale Coffey said.

In Davidson County, hail the size of golf balls was reported and extremely heavy rain continued to fall early today.

The Davidson County Sheriff's Department reported that creeks were coming out of their banks around Welcome in the northern part of the county. Water was reported over U.S. 52 in places.

Over an inch of hail was on the ground in northeast Forsyth County and northwest Guilford County.

A severe thunderstorm just west of China Grove in Rowan County dumped more than three inches of rain and covered the ground with up to three inches of hail.

Many roads, especially in Guilford County, were covered with water. Among those roads were Interstate 40, N.C. 61 and U.S. 70 to the Alamance County line. Some portions were under 2 feet of water.

Up to four inches of rain had fallen at Regional Airport in Greensboro by early today, and a flash flood watch was in effect for Guilford, Rockingham, Caswell and Davidson counties as the rain continued to pour.

The weather service said the Haw River was at 23.9 feet just before dawn, 5.9 feet above flood stage. The river had risen nearly two feet in just over an hour early today. The river was expected to crest at 25.5 feet today.

A bridge over the Dan River on secondary road 1908 in Stokes County was closed Wednesday after a Department of Transportation road supervisor noticed that high water had caused one of the bridge pilings to slip. The closing will cause a detour of as many as 18 miles, DOT spokesman Bill Jones said.

Showers and thunderstorms will continue through Saturday, but the rain was expected to be much lighter today, Friday and Saturday, the weather service said. Fair and dry weather was expected to return by Sunday, with temperatures climbing as high as the lower 80s.

TRAFFIC REROUTED — Motorists this morning had to find an alternate route of travel along 10th Street because the two eastbound lanes were blocked off in the area of College Hill Drive. The corridors are temporarily closed from Rock Springs Road to College Hill Drive because of soggy conditions following a broken water main. (Reflector Photo by Cliff Hollis)

Water Main Broke

Eastbound Lanes Closed On 10th

Motorists traveling east on 10th Street will be faced with a detour for the next several days because of a water main break near the College Hill Drive intersection Wednesday night.

Wayne Bryant, a spokesman for the Greenville Utilities Commission, said this morning that both eastbound lanes of 10th Street will be closed "until further notice," even though the break in the 8-inch water main has been repaired.

He said rock used to fill the hole dug by GUC crews repairing the pipe is too wet and "won't hold the weight of traffic." So eastbound vehicles are being detoured along Rock Springs Road, 14th Street and Elm Street to bypass the area of the break.

"The stone is too wet. We can't compact it. It needs to dry" for two or three days "without traffic" before it can be compacted. "And today's rain will just delay the process, Bryant said. "The weather will have to clear and get some sun on it. It could be several days."

The break in the main was reported at 6:48 p.m. Wednesday, Bryant said. "We had crews on the scene until 6 a.m. today," completing the repair.

Bryant said there is a chance that the westbound lanes of 10th Street will also have to be closed because of the broken main. "The westbound lanes will be detoured at Maple Street if that becomes necessary," he said.

Water service to East Carolina University dormitories on College Hill Drive was interrupted because of the ruptured pipe.

NATO Ministers Welcome Hope For Missiles' Removal

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer
BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — NATO foreign ministers today said Secretary of State George Shultz's talks in Moscow produced welcome progress toward eliminating nuclear missiles from Europe.

The ministers from 10 North Atlantic Treaty Organization countries were briefed by Shultz on his three-day visit to Moscow. Shultz then left for California to meet with President Reagan, who is on vacation at his ranch near Santa Barbara.

The allies said they would need to study the latest developments but expressed optimism an accord is near.

Britain's foreign secretary, Sir Geoffrey Howe, said "significant progress has been made in several directions by United States and Soviet negotiators."

"That is good news for all of us in East and West. Credit must be given to the Soviet leadership for their contribution to bringing this goal at last within reach," Howe said, adding: "What has got to be done now ... is an overall assessment of (Soviet leader Mikhail) Gorbachev's proposal and our possible response."

The Dutch foreign minister, Hans Van den Broek, said, "What I am enthusiastic about is the headway that has been made. Let's have a look at it. Let's not lose the momentum."

Added Italian Foreign Minister Giulio Andreotti: "There is not only the will but the prospect" of an agreement.

Shultz said at a news conference after he briefed the NATO officials that the allies had examined alternatives to the Soviet proposal and "We will make a decision promptly about our next steps."

He said the Soviet offer was "broadly along the line of what the alliance has long sought. We have a hard decision to make but it is the kind of decision we have been wanting to make."

But in a jab at the Soviets, Shultz said, "For some reason they think there should be an instant response from us." He said the allies "were not going to jump to any quick conclusion."

Lord Carrington, NATO secretary general, said in a statement after the meeting that the allies will "take into account the complex inter-relationship between alliance and Warsaw Pact conventional and nuclear weapons as well as Soviet superiority in chemical forces."

A treaty based on the Soviet proposal would eliminate hundreds of American medium-range nuclear missiles NATO considers essential to deter aggression.

The Soviets in turn would eliminate, over a five-year period, all their medium-range nuclear warheads except 100 to be retained in Asia. They also would scrap immediately about 50 shorter-range missiles in East Germany and Czechoslovakia.

Another 80 shorter-range missiles in the Soviet Union would be dismantled over a year, with the precise terms of an agreement with the United States still to be worked out.

Negotiations on medium-range missiles resume in Geneva on April 23. Separate East-West talks have been under way on conventional forces and chemical weapons.

Shultz met early today at NATO headquarters with Carrington, then jointly with the foreign ministers of Canada, West Germany, Great Britain, Italy, Luxembourg, Norway, Denmark, the Netherlands, Spain and Belgium.

Reagan said Shultz's talks in Moscow helped pave the way for a superpower agreement on medium-range weapons "in the not-too-distant future."

But the president said in a statement that much remains to be done and that agreements in longer-range missiles and space-based defenses "will be more difficult."

Rainfall Causes Erosion, Delays

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

Rain is causing some plant bed erosion and some crop delays, said Mitch Smith, tobacco agent with the Pitt County Agriculture Extension Service. But, there are some methods that may aid the problems.

"Our present plant bed season is one of the worse due to excess water," he said. Many plants are yellowing, which is the result of too much water.

To combat the problem, "you want to practice proper drainage," Smith said. Ditch fields or trenches also may be dug to allow the trapped water to escape.

The greatest effect of today's rain may be the "delay of cultivation, and tobacco transplants will have to be delayed," he said. "The alternative to having plants become too large is to clip them."

"Run the lawn mower over them," Smith said. This clipping technique may delay plant growth up to four days.

The Greenville Utilities Water Plant recorded 1.71 inches of rain from 7 a.m. Wednesday to 7 a.m. today in north Greenville while WNCT-TV recorded 1.24 inches Wednesday and .46 this morning in south Greenville.

Scattered rain and thundershowers are expected to continue through Saturday with skies clearing Sunday, said area forecasters.

High temperatures today were forecast to be around 68 degrees while low temperatures are expected in the mid 50s. The Tar River level was at 7.1 feet above sea level this morning.

"There has been nothing significant as far as outages or anything" because of the rain, said Roger Jones, director of Electric Systems at GUC. "We've not had any signs of problems."

The rain also has not caused any street problems, said Greenville City Manger Mayo Allen. "I'm sure the ditches are about full, but I don't know of any problems."

Administrative Secretary Diane Lamb said "we checked our key points for flooding and everything was alright."

Marine Guard Returns To Court

WASHINGTON (AP) — Marine Sgt. Clayton Lonetree, accused of compromising U.S. security while guarding the Moscow embassy, returned to a military courtroom today for a pre-trial hearing to determine if he should face a court-martial on espionage charges.

Lonetree was scheduled to face three additional witnesses in a hearing that began Wednesday before a military hearing officer at the nearby Quantico, Va., marine base. Lt. Col. John Shotwell, a Marine spokesman, said the hearing probably would be completed today.

Lonetree's lawyer described him as being "in great spirits" after Wednesday's session in which, the lawyer said, no incriminating evidence was presented against him.

A report in today's Los Angeles Times, meantime, says Lonetree had admitted previously to military investigators that he had turned over secret documents in Vienna, where he was then assigned, to a Soviet operative he had met in Moscow. Lonetree, according to a 23-page military investigative report obtained by the Times, broke down and cried in shame after making that admission.

Lonetree, according to his defense lawyers and his own statements, trained himself to be a secret agent, relying on spy novels for information, but got in over his head. His lawyers described some of Lonetree's cloak-and-dagger escapades as "fanciful."

"After I got involved, I was unable to get out," Lonetree told investigators, according to the Times.

Lonetree, however, never mentioned allowing Soviet agents into the Moscow embassy, the newspaper said. The Marine Corps has charged Lonetree and another guard, Cpl. Arnold Bracy, with escorting Soviets through the embassy's most sensitive offices and high-security communications facilities.

Lonetree has also been accused of becoming involved sexually with a Soviet woman, embassy employee Violetta Seina, while working in Moscow.

Lonetree, according to the Times account, refused a request by the Soviet operative, a man named Sasha who posed as Seina's uncle, to plant an electronic eavesdropping device in the American ambassador's office in Moscow. But he did give details on the layout of the office and the material the desk was made of, the newspaper said. He also gave information later on the layout of the Vienna embassy, the report said.

Textile Subsidies Total $48 Million

By The Associated Press
Four North Carolina textile firms received subsidies totaling $48.8 million last August as part of the federal government's attempt to balance the price of raw cotton bought by U.S. companies.

Cone Mills in Greensboro received $16.5 million, and Burlington Industries, also based in Greensboro, got $14.8 million. Parkdale Mills in Gastonia, which owns 13 plants, received $9.4 million. Ti-Caro of Gastonia, now a division of Dixie Yarns, got $8.1 million.

The subsidies largely were certificates redeemable in cotton held in warehouses. The government released the information in response to Freedom of Information Act requests by newspapers.

Subsidies totaling $728 million were paid nationwide. Companies in North Carolina and South Carolina received a total of $125 million.

The subsidies were paid after textile executives complained that they were competing at an unfair advantage against foreign manufacturers in the raw cotton market. Domestic producers were restrained from buying cotton overseas that foreign competitors could purchase for 30 to 40 cents less a pound. The pricing led to what the industry commonly calls two-price cotton.

"For example, Japan could buy world cotton at 30-40 cents a pound cheaper than the price we were buying American cotton that had a guaranteed support for the grower," said Jim Fry, president of Ti-Caro.

To even the situation, Fry said, Congress passed a law in 1985 to allow the one-time subsidy.

Subsidies were based on the raw cotton textile companies held in inventory on Aug. 1, 1985. Payments were based on a formula worked out by the U.S. Department of Agriculture that compared the difference in price of world cotton to the price of domestic cotton.

"Obviously, there are some very large payments there," Agriculture Department aide Michael Masterson said Wednesday after releasing the figures, which had been kept under wraps for six months.

S.C. Court Denies Duke Power Appeal

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — A divided state Supreme Court reversed a 1985 Circuit Court ruling and denied Duke Power Co.'s attempt to reclaim $1.14 million in taxes stemming from the 1981 sale of part of the Catawba Nuclear Station.

Duke protested the payment required by the state Tax Commission as part of the corporate license fee tax, arguing the intent of the law exempted the sale from taxes.

Duke spokesman Joseph Maher said the ruling will have no direct impact on the company because the tax was paid under protest in 1984.

"When there is a question (about taxes), we feel it is in our customers' best interest to raise that question, and that's what we did in this case. This ends the process. The tax has been paid in 1984," Maher said.

Columbia attorney William Booth, who represented Duke, said he was surprised by the outcome because Duke won in circuit court.

"Statistically, most of the decisions are affirmed" by the Supreme Court, he said. "So it was a surprise from that angle and Duke felt very confident about their position and felt like we were going to win. But any time you go into court you never know what the result is going to be."

The utility had argued it was not required to report income from the $295 million sale of the Catawba station's electric capacity to other utilities. Duke attorneys said only income from its South Carolina customers should be taxed.

Greenville's first public library was established in 1904.

Divers Halt Hunt Inside Freighter

MIAMI (AP) — Six Navy divers entered the darkened hull of a capsize freighter today to look for three missing crewmen, but had to call off the search because of heavy debris, bad visibility and surging water, officials said.

"Certainly, there doesn't seem to be much hope of finding anybody inside the vessel," said Coast Guard Lt. Cmdr. Jim Simpson. "The only real chance left now is if they made it out...."

"As far as any more entry into the vessel, that's pretty much ruled out," Simpson said. "There's equipment, things breaking loose inside the vessel. They just decided to pull out."

One crewman was killed and four were rescued after the 165-foot Haitian-registered Aristeo capsized Wednesday morning, apparently because its cargo containers shifted.

The Coast Guard, with help from the Navy and Air Force, planned to continue a sea search today. The freighter had drifted 75 miles north with the Gulf Stream to a point off Palm Beach 13 hours after the ship capsized Wednesday morning.

Coast Guard Lt. Sam Jeffries had said when the dive began that there was a fair chance the missing crew members could have reached an air pocket, but that opinion quickly changed. The divers had no luck, and repeated pounding on the hull generated no response.

A Coast Guard helicopter plucked the three survivors from the hull Wednesday afternoon. The fourth was hoisted from the water moments later, Petty Officer Brenda Toledo said.

Metro-Dade police scuba divers Wednesday night pulled the body of an unidentified seaman from inside the Aristeo, she said.

Survivors said they believed containers of cargo inside the ship shifted and made the ship roll over with such speed the crew did not have time to send a distress signal, according to Ms. Toledo. She said she did not know what was in the containers.

There had been no reports of a storm in the area.

The rescued crewmen were treated for exposure, bruises and other injuries, said Fred Pike, spokesman for Mercy Hospital in Miami.

U.S. Dollar Continues To Climb

LONDON (AP) — The dollar moved higher in early trading today, especially against the Japanese yen, supported by perceptions that central banks have increased their resolve to halt the U.S. currency's decline.

Gold prices retreated. Traders in Frankfurt said early dealings were quiet, with market activity winding down in anticipation of the Easter holiday weekend. They said they didn't expect any major swings in foreign exchange rates during the session.

The dollar rose to present levels partly on a statement by Bank of Japan Governor Satoshi Sumita earlier in the week that major industrial countries have discussed ways of raising funds for dollar-support activities. The statement, dealers said, reaffirmed central banks' resolve to keep the dollar from falling much further.

Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III said Wednesday night that further declines in the dollar could counteract higher economic growth in major industrialized countries.

In a speech to the Japan Society in New York, Baker said the United States and six other major industrial powers believe their currency values are within broad ranges consistent with their basic economic situations.

The dollar rose strongly against the Japanese yen in Tokyo today, closing at 143.20 yen, up 1.35 yen from Wednesday's close of 141.85 yen.

Trading ends in Tokyo before Europe's business day begins.

Later, in London, it was quoted at 143.15 yen.

Other dollar rates at mid-morning, compared with rates late Wednesday were:

—1.8174 West German marks, up from 1.8100

—1.4990 Swiss francs, up from 1.4905

—6.0450 French francs, up from 6.0185

—2.0485 Dutch guilders, up from 2.0405

—1,294.50 Italian lire, up from 1,290.50

—1,3205 Canadian dollars, down from 1.3225

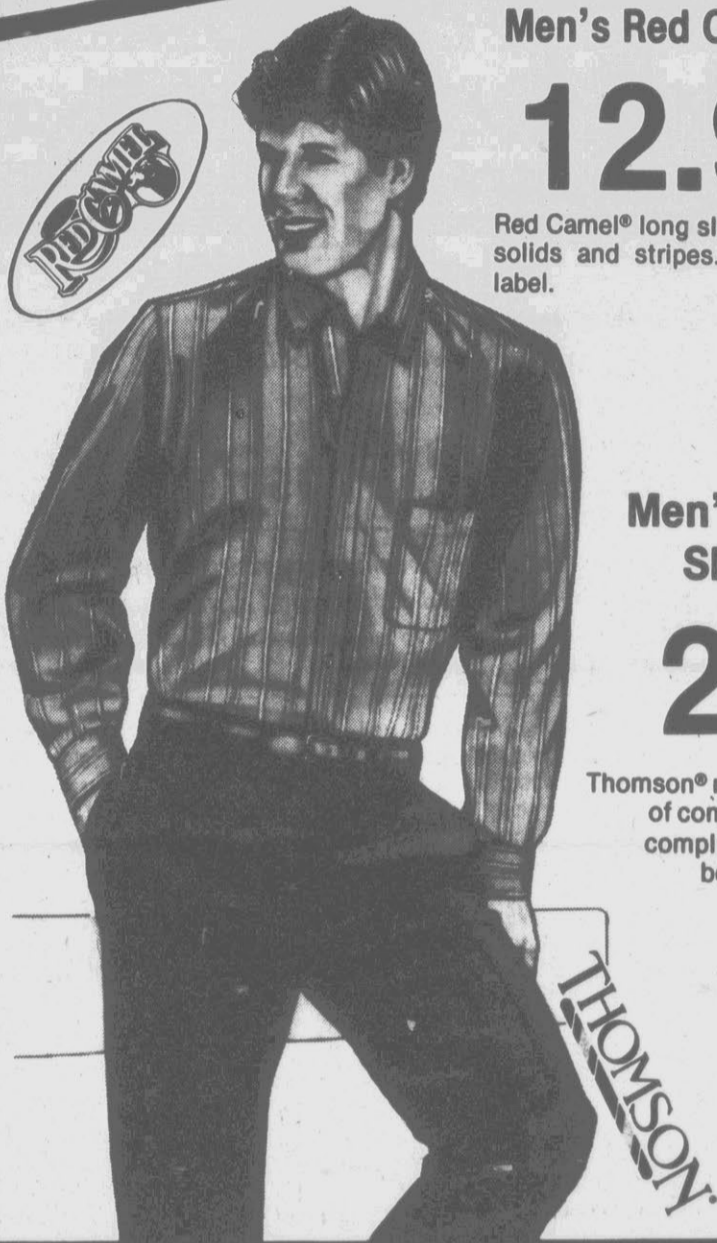

In London, the British pound was quoted at $1.6275, compared with $1.6330 Wednesday.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $438.10 a troy ounce, compared with late Wednesday's $443.75. At mid-morning today, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $441.

No Bad Jokes

No election should be a joke. Especially not a student government election on the campus of a major university. While the shenanigans surrounding East Carolina University's spring Student Government Association elections might seem like a prank, the improprieties are no laughing matter. Questions must be answered by those charged with running future student elections at the University. After a protest of the election, a review board found rules infractions in election procedures. Although the board also ruled that no candidate benefitted from those infractions, the issue is one that clearly needs the responsible attention of individuals who know how to run an election.

Certainly the students of East Carolina University should expect an honest, above-board election process. What transpired in the spring elections is contradictory to that expectation and blemishes the integrity of student government.

First, candidates were obviously misinformed about requirements for holding office, since both vice presidential candidates were disqualified as ineligible — an embarrassing predicament.

Second, polling places were not monitored carefully — a violation of the first rule of any election process. Partisan politicking was allowed too near the polls and some voters were not checked for eligibility. All are shameful situations that prove irregularities are widespread enough to merit reform.

The incident, however, provides the University with an opportunity to strengthen and revise election rules and implement change. Now the time to set concrete standards and communicate these requirements to the campus.

ECU Chancellor Richard Eakin, when he reviews the election protest, should instruct the election rules revisions committee to develop new, stronger election guidelines and a plan for implementing them. Seeking the advice of community election officials would benefit this process. The committee must provide reform measures that give the student elections accountability. Only with that perspective can the SGA hold future elections with confidence.

The protest of the election was appropriate, although painful to the University. It was correct to contest questionable actions. Although the black candidates protested the election of whites, race is not an issue. Instead, the issue is propriety.

The violations that set the stage for the brouhaha seem minor and appear to be the result of slackness, not deliberate underhandedness. The university should not, however, allow this laxness to continue. College is an environment that prepares students for the "real" world. Complacency and impropriety are not tolerated in this nation's political process and shouldn't be condoned in the academic world. Responsibly electing leadership is a duty of citizenship that must be taken seriously and that attitude should be fostered on the campus of East Carolina University.

A valid, respectable system of electing student government is necessary to keep ECU's SGA elections from becoming a bad joke.

Leading The Pack

People who have read the brief sketch of Gary Hart's private and public life would appreciate why at the present time he is considered an odds-on favorite to capture the Democratic nomination for the 1988 presidential race.

Hart, now 50, was an early starter in the political wars with his work as a volunteer in the presidential campaigns of John F. Kennedy and Robert Kennedy.

He later managed George McGovern's campaign in 1972, (which crashed) and was elected to the U.S. Senate from Colorado in 1974 and 1980. In 1984 he almost upset Walter Mondale in the contest for nomination as the party's choice to run for president. He retired from the Senate in 1986 for his current bid.

Hart has authored and co-authored several books and has been working to make his views known on "issue positions". In sum, it all represents decades of groundwork as a qualifier for 1988.

His present and anticipated rivals for the Democratic nomination include able political heavyweights; but in one important aspect he leads the pack and that is in name recognition.

Not everybody knows Hart was born in Kansas and few of us are familiar with his books or his educational background; but his name triggers an awareness that he's the one running for president.

More names will certainly enter the field; time and circumstances have a way of spoiling early favorites and raising up new ones. He can (and probably will) make missteps and the stresses of campaigning are among the continuing hazards.

Nomination time is a long way away, but for now count Gary Hart as the one to watch.

Reagan Begins 'Glasnost' Campaign

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan startled members of the White House press corps on a recent trip by strolling up to them to chat — a striking turnabout from the days when reporters were kept so far away they had to bellow queries at an unresponsive chief executive.

Reagan's new tactic took some reporters off guard, forcing them to scramble into position under the wing of Air Force One to catch his remarks.

Although some Reagan aides contend it is the president's own inclination to begin visiting with the press, the president's new openness appears as calculated as the months of enforced isolation and silence that marked White House attempts to avoid having the president speak on the Iran-Contra affair.

The day after Reagan made his surprise visit with reporters during a stop at Purdue University, his comments on topics ranging from the budget to the Soviet Embassy scandal were on front pages across the country — a development that delighted presidential aides weary of seeing his name tied only to the Iran-Contra controversy.

Not only has the president begun to

'The president's new openness appears as calculated as the months of enforced isolation and silence that marked White House attempts to avoid having the president speak on the Iran-Contra affair.'

side up to the cameras and microphones, he took the opportunity at the Purdue airport to work the crowd, laughing, joking and shaking hands with students for several minutes.

Although this was nothing new to the 76-year-old campaigner, many reporters present could not remember the last time they had seen such a scene occur in public, particularly given the strict security precautions imposed following the 1981 assassination attempt on Reagan.

Such events sparked comments around the White House likening Reagan's breezy style with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev's policy of "glasnost," or openness and liberalization.

Reagan's new accessibility — promoted by his new chief of staff, Howard H. Baker Jr. — is a strategic maneuver designed to help repair the image of a president whose popularity and political standing were marred by the secret sale of U.S. arms to Iran and the possible diversion of payments to the Nicaraguan Contras.

And White House aides say privately they think the strategy is working.

To bolster the new campaign for openness, White House aides have started their own publicity blitz, painting the president as newly energized and actively involved in the policy decision-making process — a marked contrast to the Tower board's image of a hands-off president whose policies were driven by overzealous White House staffers.

"He's active and energized — really engaged," said one White House aide who spoke only on condition of anonymity. "It's a matter of comfort, confidence and message. ... He has a message he wants to get out."

Accompanying Reagan to California on his Easter vacation, several aides made themselves available for informal get-togethers with virtually all reporters traveling with the president.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater insists that it has always been Reagan's personal inclination to speak with the press, and that Reagan is the first to say, "Shall I go over?" when he sees the small press "pool" that accompanies him on his travels.

"His natural instincts are to talk. ... He's perfectly at ease," Fitzwater said.

The press spokesman said Reagan only appears to be emerging now, because he was silent on the Iran-Contra matter for months while he awaited the findings of the Tower board. Also, Fitzwater pointed out, Reagan underwent prostate surgery Jan. 5, further restricting his activities.

"Those two things converged" and kept him out of the spotlight, Fitzwater said.

Susanne M. Schafer is assigned to The Associated Press bureau at the White House.

Public Forum

To the editor:

A new senator brings hope for a fresh new beginning. Although Senator Terry Sanford was elected by a narrow margin, he is a highly-qualified person and I had hoped he would represent North Carolina well in Washington, D.C. But events of the past two weeks have raised my doubts about his leadership abilities.

Although our senators are from two different political parties, they share one common interest: the people of North Carolina. Senator Jesse Helms, a Republican whom we all tend to dislike at one time or another — is a lot like the Statue of Liberty. We know where he stands. Although we may not always agree with his beliefs, he does fight for what he believes in. Senator Terry Sanford, a Democrat, appears to be just the opposite. He seems to have more sides than a rectangle.

Recent newspaper articles have said Senator Sanford felt "confused" as the reason he changed votes three times on the $88 billion highway bill vetoed by President Reagan. Instead of defending his first vote and not changing his mind because of pressure from the other Democratic senators, he decided he'd better do what they wanted him to. If Senator Sanford gets confused over something as simple as a highway bill, how confused will he be on a bill such as national defense?

I guess he will vote for a national income tax increase, since the other Democrats see that as the only solution to the national deficit. Instead of working together to cut government spending, Congress is choosing the easy way out and raising taxes.

I hope that Senator Sanford will overcome his self-inflicted wound and work hard for the people he represents: North Carolina, not other states from all over this great land.

Our senator has become known as "Turnaround Terry." If his continues the chart he has plotted over the past couple of weeks, he may "turnaround" and find he does not have enough support to win re-election in 1992.

To the editor:

I would be remiss if I did not take the opportunity to respond to your editorial in Sunday's edition of The Daily Reflector. Your general theme suggested unity is not possible unless there is a consensus or compromise. You further suggest that the lack of consensus represents divisiveness. Nothing could be further from the truth! One can disagree and still work as part of a team. In fact, I sincerely hope that within any organization, there is a climate wherein individuals can disagree and yet work together as a team!

In advocating that the Greenville City Council obtain agreement and/or consensus on major decisions, it is quite obvious that it was "consensus" that caused previous city councils to abdicate their responsibility and not deal with the more controversial issues which adversely affected the status quo. It was "consensus" that causes blacks to be denied adequate opportunities to be proportionately represented on the elected boards and commissions in the city and throughout Pitt County. It is "consensus" which tells parents of white children not to let their children attend a school with too many black students for fear of lack of adequate support from governmental agencies. Finally, it is "consensus" which causes the Daily Reflector to write editorials favoring methods of elections for the local school board and the county commissioners which minimizes the possibilities for adequate minority representation and certainly would lead to costly and embarrassing litigation.

Based on The Daily Reflector's definition of consensus, I sincerely feel that the citizens of Greenville will benefit more from the leadership of individuals who are not afraid to make decisions because of controversy or lack of agreement/consensus. I feel those individuals are needed in every organization, including The Daily Reflector.

Strength For Today

The parable of the Good Samaritan sets forth in striking contrast the law of man and the law of God.

The priest and the Levite who looked on the stricken wayfarer and passed by on the other side were legally faultless in their procedure. They had not caused the man's suffering and there was no reason why they should do anything other than what they did.

But the Good Samaritan believed himself to be responsible to a higher law. Legally his hands would have been clean if he had left the victim of the robbery lying as he found him. But probably, without knowing why, the Samaritan immediately felt himself involved in the situation and responsible for the man's welfare.

He was responding to that divine law higher than man's law, that final authority to which the true humanitarian appeals.

With Progress On Arms, Shultz Must Now Convince NATO

BRUSSELS, Belgium — Secretary of State George P. Shultz left Moscow Wednesday night convinced that his talks with Soviet leaders had brought the two countries to the verge of a treaty that would leave Europe virtually free of nuclear missiles.

Ordinarily, NATO leaders and public opinion would be expected to welcome the removal of an entire category of nuclear weapons. Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev not only is willing to remove the intermediate-range missiles in Europe and scale back sharply those deployed on Asian territory, but he outlined to Shultz a plan for removing Soviet shorter range missiles within a year of ratification of an agreement.

Yet North Atlantic Treaty Organization leaders are skittish, and however buoyed Shultz feels about a breakthrough, he was not recommending approval at his planned briefing of NATO foreign ministers Thursday, a senior aide said.

The reason is that although U.S.-Soviet relations may be poised to enter a new era, U.S. relations with its NATO allies are uneasy.

The tensions grew out of the October summit in Reykjavik, Iceland, when President Reagan, without consulting the NATO allies, accepted a Gorbachev proposal to eliminate U.S. and Soviet nuclear weapons within 10 years.

NATO leaders expressed grave reservations about the substance of the proposal, which would remove the U.S. nuclear umbrella from Europe and force a drastic revision of the Atlantic Alliance's military and political strategy, but they were especially piqued by Reagan's impromptu decision-making process.

The administration has, in the meantime, abandoned the plan, and in his talks with Gorbachev this week, Shultz scaled back that goal to a 50 percent reduction of ballistic missiles within seven years.

But problems persist within the alliance. French and British leaders have expressed fears about the "de-nuclearization of Europe," and West Germany, the only NATO ally to have shorter range nuclear missiles on its territory — Pershing IAs — has referred to "non-singularity," meaning that it fears isolation as the sole European country with these weapons. U.S. officials predict it will take a month or more for NATO to reach a decision on whether to support elimination of the so-called Euromissiles.

Nine foreign ministers were expected Thursday morning for Shultz's briefing.

"This is an honest-to-God consultation," a top Shultz aide said at a briefing late Wednesday night. The official added that the allies had better decide on a course within two months, or Gorbachev may withdraw the proposal and claim a propaganda victory.

Meanwhile, U.S. officials had to stifle their inclination to celebrate what they viewed as Shultz's success.

In Santa Barbara, Reagan expressed cautious optimism about the possibility of a summit with Gorbachev to sign an agreement on medium-range missiles.

In a statement read by Chief White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater, the president said, "The exchanges Secretary Shultz had (in the area of arms control) hold promise for an agreement on intermediate nuclear forces at some point in the not too distant future."

Fitzwater repeated the assertions of Shultz, in a press conference, that "progress" toward a summit and an Intermediate Nuclear Force agreement had been made and he added, "We're upbeat." While Fitzwater declined to go into details, he noted that Shultz had not pressed the issue of a summit during his meetings with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze and Gorbachev.

At the same time, a senior administration official, who asked to remain anonymous, said that Shultz had withheld from the press some information about the prospects for a summit and an arms agreement, which he is to convey directly to Reagan.

Soviet Offer Challenges U.S., NATO Positions On Euromissiles

WASHINGTON (AP) — Kremlin leader Mikhail Gorbachev, by offering to withdraw Soviet short-range nuclear missiles from Czechoslovakia and East Germany, has called and raised U.S. demands and forced NATO once again to reexamine the role of atomic weapons in Europe.

Gorbachev's offer appears to be a significant step toward an agreement to eliminate all U.S. and Soviet short- and medium-range missiles from Europe, and could open the door to a superpower summit, experts in and out of government say.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz carried the Soviet offer to NATO headquarters in Brussels on Wednesday to see how it would sit with West Europeans who fear that removing too many U.S. nuclear forces from Europe could expose them to a threat from superior Warsaw Pact conventional armies.

Some West Europeans were surprised at proposals bandied about at the U.S.-Soviet summit last October in Iceland for the ultimate elimination of all strategic weapons, and possibly all superpower nuclear weapons.

And Gorbachev's apparent concessions this week in Moscow could leave some mouths agape.

He reaffirmed a statement made Feb. 28 in which he agreed to eliminate U.S. cruise and Pershing 2 missiles and Soviet SS-20 medium-range missiles in Europe, while keeping 100 Soviet nuclear warheads in Asia and 100 comparable American devices in the United States.

The intermediate weapons have ranges of 600 miles to 3,000 miles.

The Kremlin leader sidestepped American demands for a freeze in smaller nuclear missiles, with ranges of 350 miles to 600 miles, by proposing to remove such Soviet weapons altogether. The United States has no comparable missiles.

And Gorbachev proposed a ban on even shorter-range nuclear weapons, although the full details of that offer remained unclear.

Caught off guard in Iceland, U.S. negotiators got "pretty much what we expected" this week in Moscow, said one administration official who worked on preparations for Shultz's trip.

Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze agreed that hard work remained to be done before the deal is final, and much of it will be agreeing to steps to verify that both sides have withdrawn and dismantled the missiles.

"We would need on-site verification at the beginning, to ensure that the weapons go," said the administration official, speaking on condition of anonymity. "After that, we could rely on technical means to assure that the bases are not reactivated." Technical means are photography and communications intercepts.

Neither the Soviets nor the Americans have spelled out publicly how they would verify the proposed reductions, although administration officials said earlier that the Kremlin tentatively agreed to allow U.S. officials to visit weapons bases and some other facilities as part of the procedure.

Paul Warnke, who was chief U.S. negotiator for the second Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty (SALT II) signed by President Carter in 1979 but never ratified, said, "If both sides are serious about it, verification can be worked out."

"My guess is that if the Soviets accept our verification requirements, we would faint," because they require so much intrusion at U.S. and Soviet sites that they have raised concern at the Pentagon, said Warnke.

Warnke, who has criticized President Reagan for failing to reach any arms control agreements and for saying he would stop observing SALT II, welcomed the prospective agreement on short- and medium-range missiles. But he called it a "side show" to the main issue of reducing longer-range strategic nuclear arsenals.

Warnke counseled against tying any agreement to Gorbachev's new twist, the proposed elimination of thousands of Soviet and American battlefield nuclear weapons, such as artillery shells.

Shultz Gets Dose Of Openness

MOSCOW — Secretary of State George P. Shultz got a full dose of glasnost Wednesday, and Soviet television viewers got a full dose of Shultz because of glasnost.

Glasnost, translated as openness, is one of the bywords of the new era of Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev. Political scientists call it the engine behind his drive to shake up this society — to vent frustrations, creative energy, criticism and ultimately the truth.

Shultz's visit tested the concept of glasnost in new ways. In a 32-minute interview Wednesday night on Soviet television, he challenged his audience with the view that the Afghan people want 125,000 Soviet troops out of their country.

The figure on troop strength was news to most Soviet viewers, who have never been given an official tally by their media. It was also perhaps the harshest assessment of the Afghan war ever aired on state-controlled television.

"They want peace with you," said Shultz during the 11:25 p.m. interview with Soviet political observer Valentin Zorin. "They want you out of their country."

Shultz's taste of how the Soviets use glasnost on visitors began much earlier in the day, at 1 a.m., when his hosts spilled the beans on his supposedly private talks on nuclear arms control with Gorbachev.

Wednesday morning's detailed account of the Shultz-Gorbachev talks, carried by the official news agency Tass and printed in official morning newspapers, blew an agreed news blackout wide open and caught the tight-lipped Americans by surprise.

When Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze was queried later in the day about the revelations, he had a ready excuse. "This is glasnost," he quipped. "This is the way we do things here."

The policy of glasnost that allowed Shultz to speak frankly on television apparently impressed the visiting secretary of state, who had a chance on his three-day visit to discuss other reforms under way in the Soviet Union.

On television Wednesday night, and at a Moscow press conference earlier Wednesday, Shultz spoke admiringly of some of what he saw and heard here firsthand. "It is quite clear that some important changes are taking place," he said. "All the leaders described it, as did others."

He went Wednesday to Peredelkino, a village of country homes, or dachas, used by Soviet writers. He laid a bouquet of red carnations on the grave of the once-defamed and now rehabilitated writer Boris Pasternak, attended a holy week service at the local Russian Orthodox church and attended a lunch at the dacha of poet Andrei Voznesensky.

Voznesensky is in San Francisco, so the lunch was hosted by his wife, Zoya Boguslavskaya, who provided blinis, or pancakes, caviar and Russian borscht soup. Guests included writers Chengis Aitmatov and Anatoli Rybakov, a playwright, a poet and magazine editor and a sculptor, plus American diplomats.

The subject, according to one of the guests, was glasnost and the effects it has had on Soviet cultural life.

Legislature Tackles Plans To Repeal Seat Belt Law

By JODY TAYLOR
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Repealing the 1985 mandatory seat belt law would do away with an "unnecessary regulation" and forestall a move to make legal demands upon society beyond buckling up, state Rep. Richard Wright, D-Columbus says.

But a highway safety expert says seat belts save lives, and says there's evidence to prove it.

"The feeling seems to be that there are many better uses for our law enforcement officers — which are in short supply — than peering in cars to see if you are wearing your seat belt for your own good," Wright said. "Next they'll be checking to see if I eat three meals a day and sleep eight hours a night."

Wright introduced two bills Wednesday. One called for the repeal of the mandatory law, but it would leave intact provisions for the use of child safety seats. The other measure called for a binding referendum on the issue, to be held during the 1988 presidential primary.

But two other bills calling for a statewide binding referendum on the seat belt question hit roadblocks Wednesday.

A bill introduced by Sen. James McDuffie, R-Mecklenburg, was killed in the Senate Elections Law Committee. McDuffie had been seeking the referendum for the 1988 general election.

Sen. Sandy Sands, D-Rockingham, filed a similar bill Wednesday to schedule a referendum on the date of the presidential primary, but Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan said such a measure would require a two-thirds majority to pass. Though the bills have different dates for the referendum, Jordan said the McDuffie and Sands bills are considered the same.

Wright, speaking at a news conference with members of North Carolinians for Seat Belt Choice, said the government can impose necessary regulations, like a 55-mph speed limit. But it can also impose unnecessary ones, like the seat belt law, which he said "basically protects me from myself."

B.J. Campbell, director of the Highway Safety Research Center at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, defended the law.

"I think the scientific evidence is very clear: seat belts work, they save lives; and secondly, seat belt laws work and they save lives," Campbell said.

He said seat belt use in North Carolina had jumped from 25 percent before the law was enacted to 78 percent after a $25 fine for violating it became effective in January.

Campbell acknowledged that highway fatalities were continuing to increase nationwide, but that the rate of increase was smaller or was decreasing in states with mandatory seat-belt laws.

Twenty-three states and Washington, D.C., have such laws. Two states — Massachusetts and Nebraska — have repealed mandatory seat-belt laws.

Kim Steffon, president of North Carolinians for Seat Belt Choice, said the loss of federal highway funds and the mandatory installation of airbags in automobiles were used as leverage to sway the bill to passage two years ago. But she said the state would lose nothing with a repeal of the law.

"No federal highway funds are at stake," Mrs. Steffon said. "That was a false rumor that had no basis from Day One."

Wright said the current seat belt law has so many loopholes that "we don't have much of a bill anyway." He said physicians are besieged with requests for exceptions to the law, but they are afraid of being held negligent.

"We depend so much upon tobacco

— if we continue this tradition with the seat belts, how long can we ignore that some people have statistics that show that tobacco isn't very good for you?" Wright said Wednesday.

"I think we have to decide if this is necessary or unnecessary. Where do we stop?"

McDuffie, a supporter of the seat belt law, said his referendum bill would allow officials to gather data on seat belt safety to determine if the buckling up saves lives. But barely four minutes after the discussion began, Sen. Howard Bryan, R-Jredell, moved to kill the bill. The committee unanimously agreed.

House Panel Endorses 65 MPH On Some Roads

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Ominous predictions of soaring highway deaths failed to curb a House committee's approval of a bill to let state transportation officials set a 65 mph speed limit on some rural interstates.

Countering objections that drivers should be able to go faster than 55 mph, the director of the University of North Carolina Highway Safety Research Center said Wednesday that time was relative.

"If you count up the number of hours of lost time on account of being dead, it turns out that number of hours is actually ... bigger than the number of hours you save" with high speed, said B.J. Campbell.

But after nearly an hour of debate, the House Highway Safety Committee approved the bill 8-7, sending it to the floor for a possible vote today. A similar bill is pending in the Senate.

Much of the debate pitted claims that most drivers already speed on interstates against claims they would go even faster with a higher speed limit.

"I think it's been proven that people will not obey a law that's not reasonable," said Rep. Sam Hunt, D-Alamance, sponsor of the bill.

"The name of this committee is Highway Safety," said Rep. Ed Bowen, D-Sampson. "We all know that speed kills. ... Raising the speed limit certainly won't help the insurance situation. It won't save lives. I don't think any of us are in that big of a hurry."

Congress recently paved the way for states to raise their speed limits by overriding President Reagan's veto of a highway funding bill that included a provision for limited 65 mph driving.

However, state Transportation Secretary Jim Harrington has said he doesn't consider anywhere in North Carolina suitable for a 65 mph limit. Gov. Jim Martin also opposes raising the limit.

Martin Wants Law Toughened

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin proposed legislation Wednesday to toughen North Carolina's laws on drunken driving, saying the deterrent effect of the 1983 Safe Roads Act was wearing off.

"We must take action now," Martin said in a prepared statement. "It is our sincere hope the members of the General Assembly will adopt these measures to address the DWI problem on our roadways."

Martin said there were 1,645 deaths and 113,195 serious injuries on the state's roads in 1986. Of those, 707 deaths were attributed to drunken driving — a 10 percent increase over the previous year.

House OKs Aid Plan For Victims Of Crimes

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — The state House has approved and sent to the Senate a bill that its sponsor says will ease the pain for crime victims even if their losses are not fully compensated.

"With this program ... I think this General Assembly will have taken North Carolina to the forefront of protection for victims," Rep. Bob Hunter, D-McDowell, said. "And I think that we will then be able to ensure that victims of crime will not also be victims of our criminal justice system."

The bill, which rewrites the guidelines for North Carolina's crime victim compensation program in an effort to get it off the ground, was passed 99-2 Wednesday. It is part of a package designed to end a dispute over funding the program that has kept it from being started although it has been on the books since 1983.

The bill sets a cap of $20,000 per individual award and would compensate only bodily injuries or death, not property losses. Hunter says the average award probably will be $2,500.

Only victims whose injuries are not covered by other forms of compensation, such as insurance, would be eligible. Compensation for lost work would be awarded up to 26 weeks from the date of the crime and limited to $200 per week. Payments for funeral expenses could not exceed $2,000.

Hunter said he hoped a companion bill that seeks $2 million over the next two years to fund the program could be expanded to add funds to compensate victims of automobile-related crimes, who would not be covered under the bill passed Wednesday.

Tuesday, the House defeated an amendment offered by Rep. Coy Privette, R-Cabarrus, to make automobile crime victims eligible. Privette argued that no one is more deserving of assistance than victims of drunken drivers.

Hunter opposed the amendment, saying the exemption was among the tough policy decisions that the House Judiciary IV Committee made in an effort to enhance the bill's prospects for enactment.

In other legislative action:
Water Skiing
A bill to reduce the hours when water skiing is allowed took on some water and then sank beneath a wave of opposition in the Senate.

Sen. Dan Simpson, R-Burke, said he'd received a lot of objections to his bill since it was discussed on the Senate floor last week. Simpson had proposed banning water skiing from sunset to sunrise, chopping two hours off the current rules prohibiting skiing from one hour after sunset to one hour before sunrise.

"I'm afraid there are a lot more people skiing in the moonlight than I thought there were," Simpson said. He offered an amendment to water down the bill and ban skiing from a half-hour after sunset to a half-hour before sunrise.

The amendment was approved 40-8, but the Senate wasn't through.

Sen. George Daniel, D-Caswell, said he liked the law the way it is.

"My good daddy believed that you worked pretty long hours and you didn't have much time to ski until the work was over with and a lot of skiing was done in that hour or half hour after sunset," he said.

Daniel said most boating accidents happen in the middle of the day when the water is crowded. His motion to kill the bill was approved 31-18.

Endangered Child
Sen. Helen Marvin, D-Gaston, has renewed efforts to pass a bill that would help keep children from being unnecessarily removed from less-than-ideal homes.

Ms. Marvin told the Senate Children and Youth Committee that in some counties, children are taken away from homes that are basically loving because of some instances of mild abuse that could be remedied.

Her bill would require that social service officials determine that there is actual harm or risk of harm to a child before he is removed. It also calls for continued efforts to correct the problem quickly.

"A few weeks can be an eternity in the life of a child, especially if a child is separated from ... the familiar love and bonding to which he's accustomed," she said.

The bill was sent to a subcommittee for further study. A similar bill passed the Senate last session and failed to pass the House.

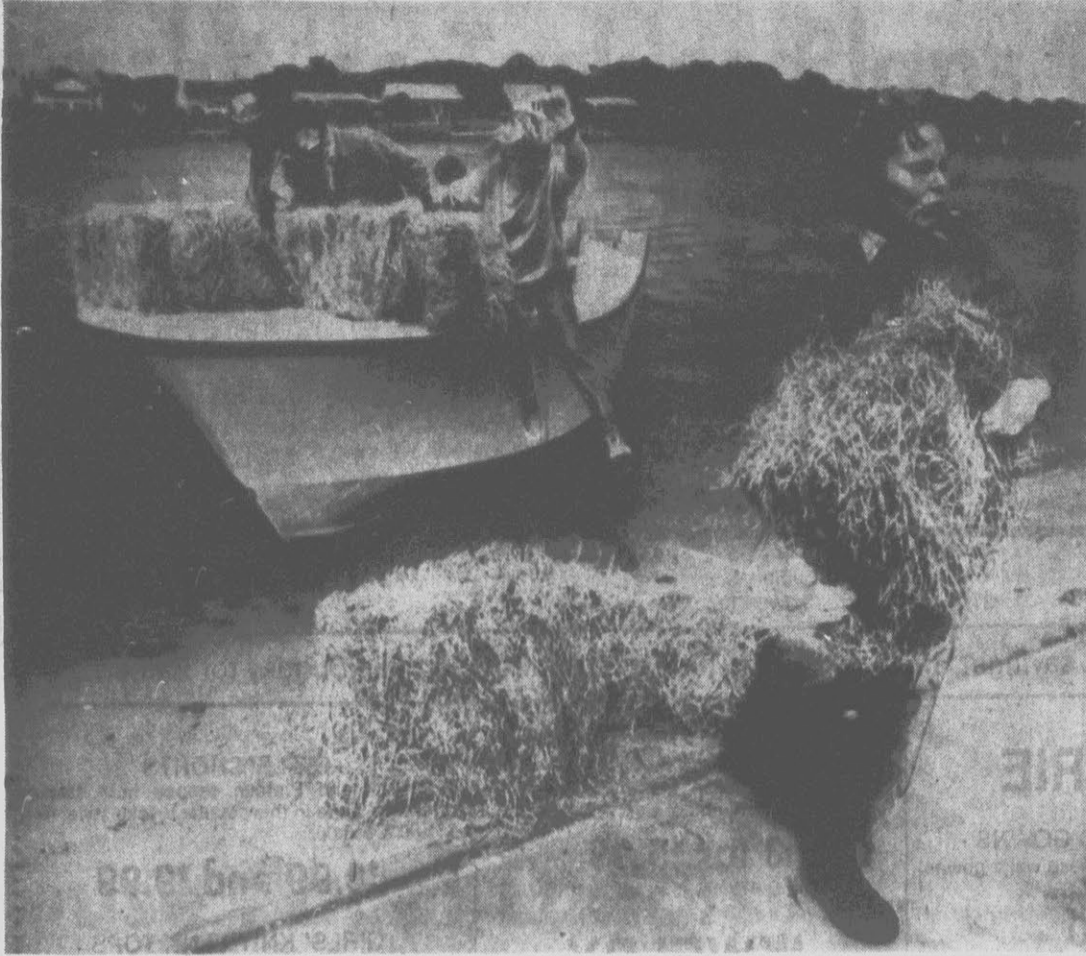

Textiles
A bill that would help consumers identify American-made textile products was tentatively approved in the Senate. Sen. Ted Kaplan, D-Forsyth, said no penalties were included in the legislation, but the bill "does make a statement to help the textile industry."

The measure requires that advertisements of textile products say whether they are made in the United States. Federal law requires such labeling of advertisements in publications distributed in more than one state, Kaplan said.

The bill was tentatively approved 47-1, with Sen. Lura Talley, D-Cumberland, casting the lone negative vote.

Low-Income Housing

The House Committee on Housing approved a bill that would allow city governments to use general obligation bonds and property tax revenue to construct housing for low- and moderate-income people.

FEED FOR THE PONIES — Ann Carter, right, carries an armful of hay as Curtis Merrick, Gene Morrison and Tabbie Nance prepare to unload more hay for wild ponies on Carrot Island off Beaufort. State Wants To Relocate Horses On Barrier Islands

BEAUFORT, N.C. (AP) — State officials say the best way to save a herd of starving wild horses on the barrier islands off Beaufort is to move most of the animals off the islands.

Fifteen of the horses have died from malnutrition and parasites recently, and residents fear that more in the remaining herd of 50 also could die. Their food has disappeared because of drought and an increase in the herd's population. Some say a dredging process also buried pastureland and a freshwater well.

"It's clear from looking at the situation that they outbred the available feeding area," said Dr. Ernie Carl, deputy secretary of the North Carolina Department of Natural Resources and Community Development.

"The objective is to get the number down to a size the islands can support," Carl said. "We'd rather have 20 healthy horses than 60 starving."

Carl said he hopes to move most of the herd before the food supply dwindles next winter.

"We'll pick which horses to keep and which ones to take off," he said. "My guess is we'll try to get them down to 20, possibly through adoption."

Horses have lived among the 2,300 acres of marshes, thickets and tidal waters in the North Carolina National Estuarine Sanctuary since the 1940s, when a doctor put six domesticated ponies out to graze. In November, there were 68.

February took the biggest toll. The hungry horses chewed sea oats and marsh grass beyond the roots, stripping the once-green islands to sandy wastelands.

"Where there is enough march grass, the mud is too deep for the horses to get to it," said Tabbie Nance, a Carteret County newspaper reporter and photographer.

But the end of February, 10 horses, including a mare in foal, had died. Others were suffering.

Last month, Nance and 15 other Beaufort residents began carrying hay by boat twice weekly to supplement the food supply. Donations came from as far away as Raleigh.

"You can see they're still pitiful-looking," said Ann Carter, one of the volunteers. "... But we can notice some improvement. They seem to be resting a bit more, for one thing. Before, they grazed constantly."

"And once in a while, we see them active," she said. "Usually, they walk around dragging their feet and hanging their heads."

Hudson Draws Sentence

GREENSBORO (AP) — Prosecutors say they have no regrets about withdrawing a plea bargain and seeking the death penalty for a Greensboro dentist convicted in the slaying deaths of his wife and 3-year-old adopted daughter.

"I'm not going to make it open season on 3-year-olds," Assistant District Attorney Rick Greeson said Wednesday after Jimmy Dale Hudson was sentenced to life plus 50 years.

Hudson, who could be eligible for parole in 40 years, was convicted

Saturday of first-degree murder in the death of 3-year-old Wilma Dale Hudson and second-degree murder in the slaying of his estranged wife, Kathryn Everett Hudson. The same jury Wednesday recommended he be given a life sentence rather than the death penalty in Wilma Dale's slaying.

Prosecutors last summer withdrew a plea bargain offer that would have let Hudson plead guilty to two charges of second-degree murder and receive two 50-year sentences.

Foiled Robbery

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — A plot to rob a Fayetteville bank was foiled as FBI agents captured an armed gunman as he tried to enter a bank building near Methodist College.

Dennis Wayne Moore, 38, was being held without bond Wednesday in Cumberland County Jail, charged with attempted bank robbery. Moore has lived in Garland, Kenly and Clayton during the past several years, officials said.

The robbery plot was hatched in a Garner motel room with an unidentified female who apparently was released from custody after she was picked up in the parking lot of a Fayetteville pizza restaurant shortly after Moore was apprehended. The name of the woman was not released by the FBI.

Federal agents received a tip about the potential robbery from officials in Wake County, said Tom McNally, special FBI agent in charge of the Fayetteville division.

Hearing

RALEIGH (AP) — The Transportation Department late Wednesday called for a formal hearing on the merger between USAir and Piedmont Airlines, rejecting a request that the proposal be put on a fast track.

The department said concerns about the impact of the $1.65 billion merger on competition require that an administrative law judge consider the applications and make a recommendation on whether the deal should be approved.

"Preliminary review of the application indicates a hearing should be held," the department said in a statement. The planned merger, announced in early March, would create the country's seventh largest airline.

Seminar

RALEIGH (AP) — Sen. Terry Sanford, D-N.C., and Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., will hold a seminar April 25 as part of the North Carolina Democratic Party's annual Jefferson-Jackson Day celebration.

Bumpers is chairman of the Small Business Committee and a member of the Appropriations Committee. Sanford is a member of the Banking, Budget and Foreign Relations committees. He and Bumpers will discuss these and other issues during the seminar, which begins at 5:30 p.m. at the Raleigh Civic and Convention Center.

Tickets are $100 per person for the seminar and include the price of dinner. Earlier April 25, Democratic activist and actor Robert Foxworth, better known as Chase Gioberti from television's "Falcon Crest," will be the keynote speaker at the Jefferson-Jackson Day breakfast at 10 a.m. at the Brownstone Hotel. Tickets are $15.

Speedway Fined

CHARLOTTE (AP) — The Charlotte Motor Speedway has been fined nearly $40,000 for exceeding pollution levels in its treatment plant's discharge.

The fine, first ever for the speedway, was levied by the state Division of Environmental Management after inspectors found violations on major race days since 1984.

The Cabarrus County speedway also was cited by the agency for trucking about 450,000 gallons of sewage to a Mecklenburg County treatment plant last fall without a permit.

The speedway treats the waste of up to 150,000 people several days a year.

Playmate

GREENSBORO (AP) — Donna Edmondson of Greensboro has been voted Playmate of the Year by readers of Playboy magazine.

Miss Edmondson, 21, who appeared in the November 1986 issue, will win $100,000 and a new Corvette for getting the most votes in a call-in campaign.

She will appear on the cover of the June issue of Playboy, which will go on sale May 5.

The award will be announced formally April 30 at a party in Los Angeles, a magazine spokesman said.

Miss Edmondson, who was an honor student at Western Guilford High School, is a computer programmer and a licensed real-estate agent. Playboy paid her $15,000 to pose for a 12-page feature in the November issue, which took about a week of shooting to complete.

Inlet Closed

HATTERAS, N.C. (AP) — The Coast Guard, citing heavy seas and lost marker buoys, has again closed Oregon Inlet to all navigation.

The decision on Wednesday to close the outlet to the Atlantic fishing grounds comes exactly one week after the inlet was reopened for daylight passage only after being closed since March 11 because of severe shoaling.

Lt. Martin Phillips, commander of Group Cape Hatteras, said heavy seas, triggered by a storm that passed through the area Tuesday, washed away all of the temporary marker buoys that had been placed to mark the temporary, shallow channel.

"After discussions with the captain of the port in Hampton Roads, we decided to close the inlet until the buoys can be replaced," Phillips said. "The seas are running 12 to 15 feet over the sand bar that has built up on the ocean side of the inlet."

Giraffe Injured

ASHEBORO, N.C. (AP) — The first giraffe to survive birth at the N.C. Zoological Park, on exhibit for the first time Tuesday, fell and broke two legs, zoo officials said.

The legs were set during three hours of surgery and prognosis for recovery is hopeful, zoo spokesman Rod Hackney said. In falls, giraffes often sustain muscular injuries that cause complications, but there was no evidence of such injury, Hackney said.

"The youth of the animal is important to the recovery," he said. "The fact that it is young is apparently weighing very heavily in its favor."

After several hours on exhibit, the 5-month-old female wandered away from her mother, then panicked and slipped on a rock slope while running, Hackney said. Zookeepers monitoring the animal's introduction to the habitat witnessed the accident and immediately tended to the injury, he said.

Heavily Backed Bill Would Require AIDS Education In Public Schools

RALEIGH (AP) — Children would be encouraged to avoid sex or engage in it only when married under a bill that would require AIDS education in public schools.

The bill, filed Wednesday with the backing of 65 House members and the state health director, says "responsible sexual behavior within the context of marriage shall be encouraged, based on fidelity, commitment and maturity."

The bill also says, "All educational materials on this subject provided by the state shall teach that children should not engage in sexual activity."

"That's been our message, that if abstinence isn't practical, which it isn't in our society, then the next best thing is a monogamous relationship," said state Health Director Ron Levine.

Levine said AIDS education would be required in all grades above grade 6, but that local school systems would be given latitude in how they apply the state model. He said the emphasis on abstinence would not come at the expense of other forms of sex education.

Rep. Trip Sizemore, R-Guilford, the principal sponsor of the bill, said lawmakers hoped to defuse controversy surrounding the bill by limiting it to acquired immune deficiency syndrome and leaving some local control in the bill.

"We need to have the AIDS issue addressed and get something through so that we can begin a viable program to address the epidemic," he said.

The bill specifically says all programs "shall actively seek and encourage parental involvement and approval of program content and method."

AIDS is a sexually transmitted disease in which the victim loses the ability to fight off infection. The fatal malady hits hardest at homosexual men and intravenous drug users.

Levine said his office is already working with the state Department of Public Instruction on the AIDS curriculum. But he said the bill may remain controversial.

"The public education establishment traditionally doesn't like to be told what to do," he said.

Martin Administration Again Calls For Approval of Gubernatorial Veto

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Undaunted by warnings of certain failure, Gov. Jim Martin again is calling on the General Assembly to approve a constitutional amendment granting the governor veto power.

"Why should I knuckle under on every important subject?" Martin asked in an interview. "The people are for this. It only becomes a controversy if they (lawmakers) insist on denying the people a chance to vote."

A proposed state referendum on the veto amendment was filed for introduction Wednesday by Senate Minority Leader Larry Cobb, R-Mecklenburg. The bill must get three-fifths majority approval in the Legislature before it could be put on the ballot.

The veto proposal was crushed by the predominantly Democratic Legislature in 1985 despite the Republican governor's vigorous lobbying effort, including a daylong statewide airplane tour to drum up public support.

Martin acknowledged there was "still a negative attitude" in the Legislature about the veto, but vowed to "keep raising the issue until they give it a chance."

House Speaker Liston Ramsey, D-Madison, and Democratic Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan charged that Martin was playing politics by raising a controversial issue he knew had no chance for success.

"Give me power, give me power, give me power ... that's what he's saying," Ramsey said. "It's just a political move."

Martin denied that. "I think all public issues ought to be debated, and people should be willing to be counted on how they feel about it," he said. "I don't know anything that they take up in that Legislative Building that's not political."

Jordan told reporters the fact that Martin apparently sought no Democratic co-sponsor of the bill demonstrated he was not serious about getting it passed.

A Democrat who is expected to challenge Martin in the 1988 gubernatorial race, Jordan acknowledged he would like to have veto authority if elected governor.

"But I'm a realist," he told reporters. "I haven't seen anything that would change people's minds at this point."

He was unmoved by Martin's argument that the state's voters should decide the issue, saying there were many questions the Legislature refused to submit to a referendum.

"The public also would support the elimination of all taxes," Jordan said, "but we have a responsibility to run the government and we have to have money."

North Carolina is the only state that denies its governor veto authority, a policy rooted in historical mistrust of the chief executive stemming from tyrannical royal governors who ruled the state before the Revolutionary War.

Opposition to the veto has been so strong that few governors have sought it — including Martin's Democratic predecessor, Jim Hunt, who persuaded the Legislature in 1977 to approve an amendment letting governors seek two consecutive terms.

Martin surprised lawmakers by requesting veto authority for the first time in his 1985 State of the State address. A proposed amendment introduced by Sen. Wendell Sawyer, R-Guilford, quickly was killed by a Senate committee, a move that Martin described as "arrogantly repulsive."

Martin and several former governors testified in favor of the amendment before a House committee, which defeated it anyway. A Republican effort to force the bill onto the House floor failed as well.

Jordan said he would refer the bill to the Senate Committee on the Constitution. The chairman, Sen. Charles Hippy, D-Haywood, promised it would receive fair treatment but declined to predict how it would fare.

Ramsey said the no-veto policy was conceived by the state's founders, who "were a lot smarter than we were."

Cobb's bill would allow the governor to reject laws passed by the Legislature.

Some Farmers Still Feel Effect Of '86 Drought

By PAUL NOWELL
Associated Press Writer
CHARLOTTE (AP) — B.B. Haigler says he might not still be a farmer if he did not have other income to offset his losses from last year's drought.

"I'm glad I didn't have to rely just on the farm," said Haigler, who raises corn and soybeans on his 2,000-acre farm near Monroe. Haigler was able to stay ahead of his creditors by using revenue from his farm equipment business and a quail hunting reserve.

"But it took all we had to keep the farm going," he said. With harvests cut by the drought and prices down, field crop income for North Carolina farmers fell from $20.8 million in 1985 to just over $8 million last year, say officials with the state Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

Bruno Mangum, a program specialist with the ASCS, said $30 million in federal money is being distributed to about 17,000 farmers in North Carolina's 81 drought-affected counties. Mangum said $14 million of the total was for crop losses while the same amount was distributed for farmers to buy hay and other feeds for poultry, cattle and other livestock.

The remaining $2 million was for conservation programs to improve pastures and trees damaged by the 1986 drought, he said.

Robert Griffith, director of the state crop and livestock reporting service, said the drought had the worst impact on the corn crop. The 1986 yield-per-acre for corn was 69 bushels — down from 79 in 1985 and 90 in 1984, he said.

"This is a drought-affected statistic," he said. Still, Griffith maintains that last year's drought shouldn't prevent farmers from rebounding in 1987.

"It's a whole new year," he said. "There's been plenty of moisture. How they do this year will depend on this year's conditions."

Union County extension agent Jerry Simpson disagreed. He said many farmers in his county are having trouble borrowing enough money to stay in business.

"Most farmers are mortgaged to the hilt," he said. "They borrowed money to buy seed and chemicals and equipment and when they don't have a crop they can't pay it back."

"With a lost year they're in a fix trying to finance two crops," he said. Haigler said he is eligible for federal disaster money and he got some money from his crop insurance.

Some North Carolina farmers have taken up an offer of free corn seed that was donated by anonymous Midwestern dealers.

Wilburn Williams of Cabarrus County picked up 38 bags of the unmarked corn seed worth about $2,000. Williams and others like Lipe Barrier of Mount Pleasant ignored warnings from some state agricultural officials that the free corn could jeopardize their 1987 crop.

"In a year like this, the farmer can't get the money or can't get enough money," Simpson said. "He has to grab for anything he can."

"Normally, we'd say, 'Don't plant it,'" Simpson said. "But we're not going to tell anybody not to plant it when they're hard up."

Williams said he didn't have much of a choice. "We may have some problems with it," he said, "but I'm willing to take that risk."

Simpson said the farmers who took the free seed will probably use it as an insurance policy of sorts.

"Farmers are pretty ingenious people," he said. "They might plant some for feed or mix it with their own."

Simpson said many North Carolina farmers were already suffering financially before the drought because of low commodity prices.

"More are closer to foreclosure (because of the drought)," he said. "There will be some who won't survive unless they get money from some other source — like a part-time job."

"A few farmers I know told me they were told by their bankers that they have one more shot," he said. "So they have this year to turn it around."

The federal money will keep some farmers in business for at least another year, he said.

"Last year was the straw that broke the camel's back," he said. "A whole lot were ready to go under already. That's why everyone is riding the government programs as hard as they can."

Justice Department Assesses Need For Study In Robeson

LUMBERTON, N.C. (AP) — U.S. Justice Department officials say they are assessing whether an investigation is needed in the shooting death of Jimmy Earl Cummings at the request of Cummings' family.

"I can confirm that we received a letter from (the Cummings family) and that we are making an assessment. How long that might take and what will happen next, I can't tell you," said Deborah Wade, a spokeswoman for the Justice Department's Civil Rights Division.

Cummings was shot to death Nov. 1 by Robeson County narcotics agent

Kevin Stone. Cummings had run as Stone tried to arrest him on drug charges. Stone, son of Sheriff Hubert Stone, later was cleared of wrongdoing when a coroner's inquest jury ruled that the shooting was an "accident and/or self-defense."

Ms. Wade told The Robesonian in Lumberton Wednesday that federal officials are assessing whether an investigation is warranted into possible criminal or civil rights violations in Cummings' death.

The assessment could take "two months or two years," Ms. Wade said, adding that agents in North Carolina are conducting the field work. "Once they have completed their report, it will be turned over to us for consideration," she said.

Cummings' relatives have complained they were notified of the inquest just a few hours before it was held and did not have enough time to hire a lawyer to represent them.

Junior Cummings, the victim's brother, said an FBI agent spent several hours interviewing him and two other members of his family Friday.

"I guess altogether they spent 45 minutes talking with me and about that much time talking with Darlene (Cummings' sister), and my mother," he said.

The agent asked questions about the night Jimmy Earl Cummings was killed and the events surrounding the coroner's inquest, Junior Cummings said.

Junior Cummings said the agent "told me he was interviewing other people here in Robeson County, but he wouldn't tell me who they were. I do know that he wanted to interview Darlene (Hunt)."

Miss Hunt was with Jimmy Earl Cummings the night he was killed.

Motorist Convicted

WARRENTON, N.C. (AP) — A Warren County man has been convicted of two charges in the traffic death of an Associated Press newsman, while a felony charge of death-by-vehicle has been bound over to Superior Court.

William I. Levister, 46, of Wise, was convicted in Warren County District Court Wednesday of driving while impaired and driving left-of-center in the death of Peter R. Turkel.

Levister was sentenced to two years in prison on the first charge and 60 days on the second offense.

The death-by-vehicle case was expected to go before the Warren County grand jury during a session that begins June 22, said Carol Burroughs in the office of the Warren County clerk of court.

South Demands More Effort From Candidates

By SANDY JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — On his maiden outing as a presidential candidate, Jack Kemp's flight log resembled a travel agency's package tour of Dixie. It is a common recognition of the 1988 realities — pay homage to Iowa and New Hampshire, but don't neglect the South.

"In American politics, there are only two resources — time and money," says Lee Atwater. "An unprecedented amount will be spent in the South by anyone interested in becoming president."

Atwater, a South Carolinian who runs Vice President George Bush's campaign, predicts that between now and March 8, "the South will be getting more attention than it's ever gotten in history and probably will ever get again."

Why the fuss? Because most Southern states have scheduled their 1988 presidential primary elections to follow Iowa and New Hampshire, and because candidates have studied 1984 and learned the Gary Hart lesson.

Hart exploded out of Iowa and New Hampshire with the momentum to score a knockout punch against Walter Mondale in the Democratic race. But he hadn't organized much of a campaign in the South and on Super Tuesday 1984 he sputtered just enough for Mondale to survive and begin his comeback.

Thus, Dixie datelines are appearing regularly on the itineraries of 1988 presidential candidates, though the emphasis on early campaigning remains centered in Iowa and New Hampshire. Example: This week, after declaring his candidacy in hometown Denver, Hart, a former Colorado senator, immediately headed to Iowa — by way of Texas.

The Kemp campaign believes the Southern primaries could be key to his effort to overtake the Republican front-runner, Bush.

Kemp began his Southern tour in Missouri, took a jet to Alabama and spent the night in Atlanta, where he drew 700 Georgians to a rally at which he was serenaded with a chorus of "New York, New York."

The next day, Kemp toured the Carolinas — Greenville, S.C.; Charleston and Raleigh.

All in all, on his meticulously planned four-day announcement tour, the New York congressman devoted almost half his time to the South.

The South, with its cluster of more than a dozen primaries and caucuses, may be redefining the candidates' travel, but it remains to be seen whether the candidates will also alter their campaigns to appeal to the region's large conservative and large black voting populations.

"I hope this isn't too naive," Kemp said in Atlanta. "I announced in Washington a national campaign ... not trying to geographically be parochial and tie myself into any one region."

In any event, early campaign activity will provide an undeniable political stimulus to the region.

Consider Bob Dole of Kansas — the Republican Senate leader hasn't yet made his formal announcement, but he spent last weekend in Louisiana, Georgia and Mississippi. On Monday, he toured the Carolinas.

Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri, seeking the Democratic nomination, has logged considerable time in the South. He'll spend the long Easter weekend in North Carolina.

"During the last two years he's probably spent more time in the South than any other Democratic candidate," Gephardt spokesman Don Foley said, noting that Gephardt's moderate political philosophy focuses on trade and agriculture, two vital issues to the region.

Among Democrats, former Gov. Bruce Babbitt of Arizona or Sen. Albert Gore Jr. of Tennessee might attract natural constituencies in the South, as would evangelist Pat Robertson or former Sen. Paul Laxalt of Nevada on the GOP side.

And the Rev. Jesse Jackson, a likely Democratic contender, did well in 1984 with black voters and could reap enormous advantage from the March 8 primaries.

Many of the candidates may have a hard time simply managing the Southern regional primary. It covers a huge area from Florida to Oklahoma, and falls on the same date as primaries in Massachusetts and Rhode Island.

Bush has skillfully used his office to collect chits for 1988, campaigning to elect dozens of local and state officials. Moreover, Bush also should draw well in Texas, where he made a fortune as an oilman before his election to the House.

"Sure he's going to claim he's a Southerner," said Democratic pollster Claiborne Darden of Atlanta. "But Texas has never been considered Southern. (And Bush) bought himself a burial plot up in Maine."

Perceptions are also important in the South, and Darden said Bush might not stand scrutiny. "We don't like folks in pink sweaters. Right or wrong, we're talking about reality, and Bush is kind of a pink sweater man," he said.

Democratic front-runner Hart has also been logging time in the South.

"When he ran last time it was like a hot air balloon," Darden said. "It was real pretty on the outside but when you looked up to see what was in it, you were deeply disappointed. ... He needs to put some content into his campaign."

MOTHER RESCUED — Rescue workers pull Ceryl Crowder, 24, out of Dry Branch Creek near Buchanan, Va., on Wednesday after she jumped into the stream trying to save her son. The boy, Michael, 7, was swept through a culvert during a heavy rainstorm and was later found about 50 yards downstream. He died in a Roanoke, Va., hospital. Mrs. Crowder, who is pregnant, was treated at a hospital where she was reported in good condition. (AP Laserphoto)

Hinckley Denied Hospital Pass

WASHINGTON (AP) — Presidential assailant John W. Hinckley Jr. lost his chance to leave a mental hospital unescorted to spend Easter Sunday with his parents following an uproar over revelations that he corresponded last year with triple-murderer Theodore Bundy.

St. Elizabeths Hospital withdrew its request Wednesday for a 12-hour pass for Hinckley, who was committed to the mental hospital after his 1981 attempt to assassinate President Reagan.

The hospital said it wanted to take a detailed look at documents taken Tuesday night from Hinckley's room "to assess the clinical significance of writings and other materials belonging to Mr. Hinckley which were heretofore unexamined by the hospital staff."

Hospital officials gave no indication what the writings were, but they apparently are in addition to the correspondence with Bundy, who is awaiting execution on Florida's death row for the slayings of a 12-year-old girl and two sorority sisters.

U.S. District Judge Barrington D. Parker accepted the hospital's decision and also agreed to a request by the U.S. attorney's office to seal documents and writings taken from Hinckley.

Hinckley, 30, was found not guilty by reason of insanity of the March 30, 1981, shootings of Reagan, presidential press secretary James Brady and two security officers. He has been under treatment at St. Elizabeths ever since.

Hospital officials, who said they are undertaking a thorough review of the Hinckley case, were blasted by prosecutors for not turning over all relevant documents prior to this week's court proceedings.

The government and the court clearly were surprised at a hearing Monday when psychiatrist Glenn Miller disclosed that Hinckley had requested the prison address of mass murderer Charles Manson, had received mail from Manson disciple and presidential attacker Lynette "Squeaky" Fromme and had written to Bundy several times.

Evangelists' Wives Say Success Can Take Its Toll On Marriages

By DOLORES BARCLAY
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Being a success in TV evangelism can take its toll, as Tammy Faye Bakker quickly found out.

She was under a lot of pressure when her husband, Jim Bakker, who quit as head of the PTL ministries last month after acknowledging he had had sex with a church secretary, developed ulcers as their "Jim and Tammy Program" on the PTL Television Network grew in popularity.

It was too much for Mrs. Bakker, according to a new book by James Schaffer and Colleen Todd, "Christian Wives: Women Behind Evangelists Reveal Their Faith in Modern Marriage."

One day, the book recounts, Mrs. Bakker was taking a glass of milk to her husband and dropped it, breaking the glass and spilling milk all over the floor. It was a moment of great despair for her.

"I got down in that milk and just started crying," the 45-year-old Mrs. Bakker said in the book. "And the Lord spoke to me and said, 'Tammy, be glad that you have milk to spill and be thankful that you have a husband to take it to.' I never complained after that."

A few weeks before Bakker resigned, it was disclosed that Mrs. Bakker was being treated for a drug dependency.

"Christian Wives" makes other disclosures about Mrs. Bakker:

— She rarely goes to bed without her makeup and swears by her false eyelashes: "Jim has very seldom seen me without makeup and hardly ever in my life without my eyelashes. I think every woman ought to wear eyelashes."

— She has a secret for making her marriage interesting: "I like to be different people for my husband. I wear different wigs all the time. Jim never knows if I'm going to be a redhead, a blonde or a brunette. I like to keep him guessing."

— Her secret vice is buying shoes and cubic zirconiums. "Any woman can look like she's really got a lot on the ball by buying herself a $30 cubic zirconium, about three or four carats. People always think all my stuff is real."

"Christian Wives" offers other glimpses of life in the spiritual lane:

— Frances and Jimmy Swaggart decided not to have any more children after their son, Donnie, because they felt guilty about raising him on the road.

"A great deal of our life was spent in old cars," Donnie says in the book. "The first time we stayed in a Holiday Inn, I thought we were in the Taj Mahal."

At first, Mrs. Swaggart taught Donnie herself, using teaching materials from the Calvert School, an accredited correspondence school in Baltimore. Later, he went to 31 different public schools around the country.

Mrs. Swaggart is chief executive officer of the Jimmy Swaggart Ministries, which employs 1,500 people and is involved in 191 countries.

— Ruth Bell Graham, wife of the Rev. Billy Graham, is a nonconformist who loves adventure. She took up hang gliding and motorcycle riding as an adult.

"I do love to go fast, to go full speed with the wind in my face," she says in the book.

She once fell out of a tree while trying to make a slide for her grandchildren. She wound up with a concussion, a broken rib and crushed vertebra.

"When she awoke, her memory was wiped clean of, among other things, one of her most prized possessions, the bible verses she had memorized since childhood," the book recounts.

Scientists Say Previously Unknown Gas Clouds May Cut Radio Waves

BY MALCOLM RITTER
AP Science Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Hot, gaseous clouds as wide as the distance between Earth and the sun appear to be floating through the galaxy, outnumbering the Milky Way's stars by 1,000 times, scientists reported today.

The clouds appear to be far smaller and less massive than previously identified cosmic clouds, which is why they had escaped detection despite the "truly astounding" size of their population, said researcher Ralph Fiedler.

The estimate that there are 500 to 1,000 clouds for every Milky Way star could be 10 times too low or too high, but clouds probably do outnumber the stars, said Fiedler of the Naval Research Laboratory in Washington, D.C.

The evidence for the clouds was described in a report in the British journal Nature by Fiedler and colleagues at the naval laboratory, the Mullard Radio Astronomy Observatory in Cambridge, England, and the Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University in Blacksburg, Va.

The authors propose the existence of the clouds to explain unusual, temporary dips observed in the intensity of radio waves from three of 36 very distant celestial objects, mostly quasars.

The clouds apparently deflect radio waves, so that they produce the dips when they pass between Earth and the distant objects, the authors say.

"To me, that seems like a reasonably convincing explanation,"

Barney Rickett, a radioastronomer at the University of California at San Diego, said in an interview. "Nobody's had to try and explain such a thing before."

Rickett said he expected other scientists would try to explain the phenomenon with fewer clouds. It would not be too surprising if the clouds were about as common as stars, he said.

The report is based on daily radio-wave observations from 1979 through 1985 of the 36 celestial objects, Fiedler said. Each observed dip in radio wave intensity lasted from 10 weeks to three months, and each dip was preceded and followed by a brief jump in intensity.

The researchers interpret that pattern as the result of deflection by a cloud as it passes between the Earth and the distant object.

A common optical lens focuses light on a point behind it; however, the cloud appears to do just the opposite, shunting radio waves off to each side, researchers said.

As a cloud passes between Earth and a radio wave source, the Earth is first bombarded by the waves deflected off ahead of the roaming cloud. Then it is sheltered by the cloud, then bombarded again from waves deflected off behind the cloud as it moves out of the way, they said.

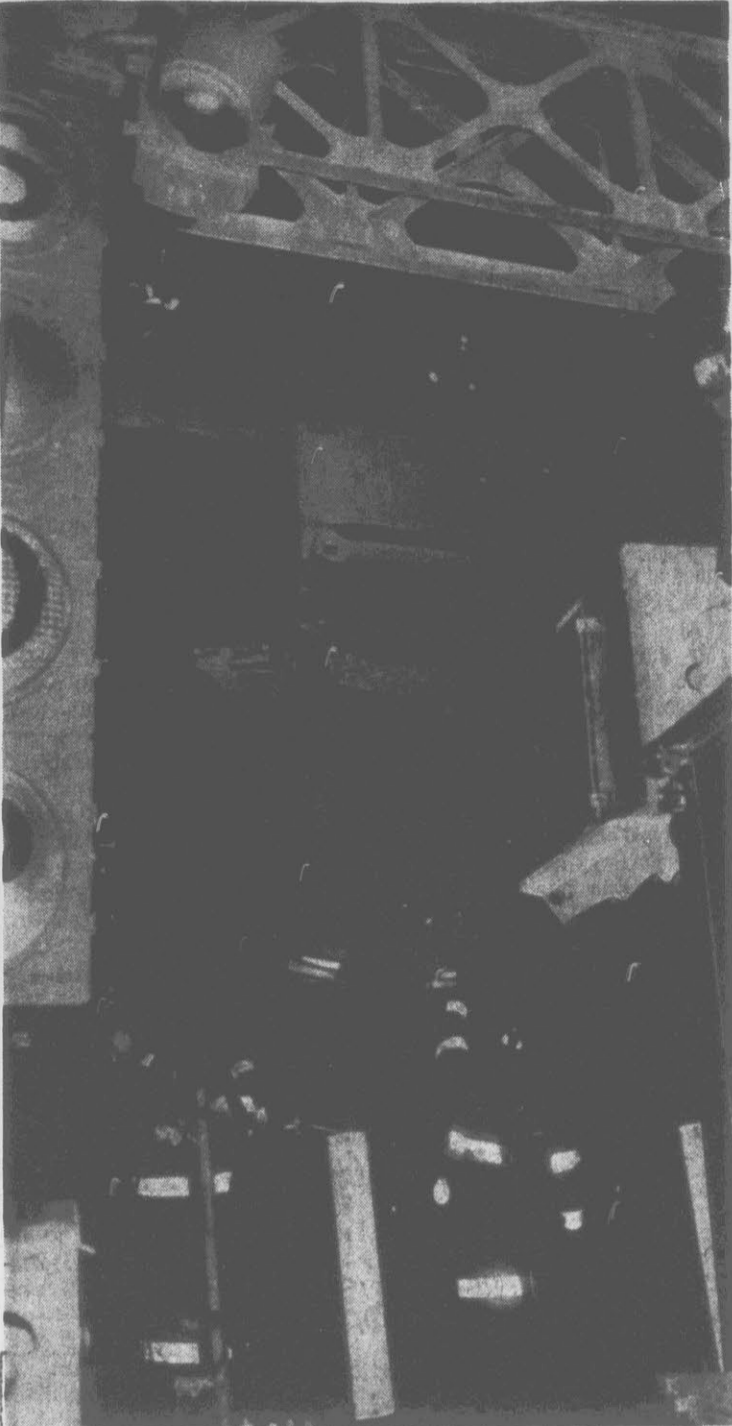

Comparing that effect to the way an ordinary cloud blocks sunlight, Fiedler said the "shadow" cast by a cosmic cloud appears to be larger than the solar system.

The new clouds must be around 3,000 degrees to 4,000 degrees Fahrenheit because their gas must be ionized to deflect the radio emissions, he said.

At most, the clouds' distance from Earth is about 300 million times the distance between the Earth and sun, Fiedler said.

That is very close in comparison to the distance to the radio wave sources, which is why relatively small clouds could effectively blot out the radio emissions, much as Earth's tiny moon can eclipse the much larger sun, Fiedler said.

Previously identified clouds are at least 20,000 times wider than the new clouds, he said.

ON THE EDGE — A Taxicab hangs from a Chicago River bridge in downtown Chicago after the cab driver attempted to drive across the bridge while it was being opened for a barge. The driver was crushed to death when the bridge was closed with the cab caught between the sections of the bridge. (AP Laserphoto)

Cab Driver Crushed As Bridge Closes

CHICAGO (AP) — The operator of a drawbridge that lifted a taxicab into the air then came down and crushed it, killing the driver, says he never saw the vehicle start across the span. "I feel terrible about it," Edward Przislicki said in an interview published today in the Chicago Sun-Times. "I just didn't see the cab out there."

Przislicki, 57, was suspended with pay after cab driver Ju Bang, 36, of Chicago was killed and two passengers were injured Tuesday night.

Przislicki said he drank two beers before reporting for work at 10 p.m., about 20 minutes before the accident, but insisted "there was no impairment" of his job performance. He said he had agreed to give blood and urine samples Wednesday for tests for the presence of alcohol and drugs.

The cab was nearly across the downtown Kinzie Street bridge when the span, which opens in one piece, was raised to accommodate a barge on the Chicago River, said police Sgt. Thomas Reynolds.

Bang apparently had stopped the cab with its rear wheels on the west end of the drawbridge when warning lights flashed and automatic traffic barriers closed, Reynolds said.

Passengers Jane Williams, 24, of Highland, Ind., and Reva Hawk, 31, of Chicago jumped to safety as the rising bridge lifted the taxi. The cab fell on its roof, with its front end extending over the water.

Moments later, the cab was crushed as the bridge was lowered, Reynolds said.

Przislicki raised the 180-foot-long bridge again after being alerted by a tugboat pulling the barge, Reynolds said.

"I'm way over on the east side," Przislicki said. "I couldn't see him (the cab)."

However, after surveying the accident scene Wednesday, Reynolds said, "The operator's visibility is somewhat obstructed by part of the bridge, but we feel he should have been able to see the cab."

"Nothing like this has ever happened to me before," Przislicki said. "I have 20 years on the job."

"I can't understand why he (Bang) didn't just drive right through the gates. The gates could easily be replaced."

Ms. Williams and Mrs. Hawk said they tried to persuade Bang to drive around the barriers and get off the bridge.

Mrs. Hawk said she jumped out of the cab when the bridge started to open and shouted to Ms. Williams to do the same. "I prayed as I jumped," said Mrs. Hawk, who landed on the concrete approach.

Ms. Williams said she could not remember clearly when she got out of the cab.

"I was hysterical," Ms. Williams recalled. "Reva started yelling for the driver to get off the bridge as it was starting to go up. She said 'Come on Jane, get out.' I got out, but the taxi driver didn't."

Ms. Williams was in fair condition at Northwestern Memorial Hospital today with wrist and arm fractures. Mrs. Hawk was treated and released.

Health Insurers Begin Round Of Rate Hikes

By MICHAEL ABRAMOWITZ
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — After several years of modest increases, health insurers have begun a new round of sharp price hikes in the past three months that have raised the cost of medical care for consumers and employers as much as 60 percent.

In the Washington area, for example, Blue Cross and Blue Shield has raised premiums an average of 29 percent since January for small employers, the first such increase in three years for the 150,000 area workers covered in that category.

Insurers are raising premiums because of escalating health care prices, the diminishing effectiveness of corporate cost-cutting efforts, and signs that doctors and hospitals are jacking up rates charged to private insurers to make up for other cutbacks, according to insurance and corporate health officials.

The increases have been less dramatic — but still large — for other, bigger businesses that pay premiums based on the actual health care costs of their employees. Blue Cross and Blue Shield has been raising rates at a 14 percent clip for these "experience rated" groups of more than 50 employees, a spokesman said.

"We don't raise rates without justification," said Barry Wilson, a vice president of Blue Cross and Blue Shield of the National Capital Area. "The alternative for us is to continue to lose money on those categories of business, and that's not fiscally responsible."

Blue Cross and Blue Shield is far from alone in passing on increases in doctor and hospital bills to employers and consumers. After moderating for several years, the medical bills for most companies have started to rise, surprising many employers who thought they had licked high medical costs several years ago.

"Employers have been rather complacent. They are going to be shocked when they see their rates for the coming year," said Dindi Weinstein, executive director of the National Capital Area Health Care Coalition, a group of employers, unions and health officials.

Health insurance officials and other medical experts said that a primary reason for the latest price hikes was the continuing inflation of medical prices.

Medical prices rose 7.7 percent in 1986, compared with the general inflation rate of 1.1 percent. In 1985 medical inflation was 6.7 percent, or nearly twice the general inflation rate of 3.8 percent.

Several other explanations were also cited for the rise in insurance premiums:

— Hospitals and doctors are increasing prices to traditional insurers and employers offering full-service coverage to make up for cuts in government funding for Medicare and discounts offered to prepaid health plans.

— Cost-cutting measures taken in the early 1980s have shown diminishing returns in terms of savings. These techniques include requirements that employees obtain second opinions before undertaking certain elective surgery and getting prior authorization for other procedures.

— Recent declines in hospital usage have begun to bottom out, while ambulatory procedures and surgery are on the rise, signaling a new source of high costs. Feeling pressure for several years from health maintenance organizations and other prepaid forms of health insurance, traditional fee-for-service plans kept prices down more than costs justified, simply to remain competitive. But increasing costs are forcing them to abandon this strategy, according to health industry observers.

Whatever the reason, the recent escalation in health insurance costs confronts consumers and the employers that pay for most of their health care costs with some unpleasant possibilities.

Employers are expected to increase their efforts to shift more of the burden of health care costs to their employees by raising the deductibles and copayments called for under their health plans, officials said. Consumers also can expect greater incentives to leave traditional insurance plans and join HMOs and other lower-cost health plans that limit the choice of doctors and hospitals.

Linda Spear, a benefits officer for Bell Atlantic, which like many large employers insures itself, said that after remaining flat in 1985, medical costs jumped roughly 10 percent in 1986. Spear said cost increases have been restrained by recent increases in deductibles and copayments charged employees. But she added: "What we're afraid of is that the 1986 (increase) is a trend."

"I don't think that employers are going to stand for (these) kinds of increases" in insurance costs, said Judith Fleming, senior vice president of HealthWin, which markets prepaid plans for Lincoln National. "They will look for a plan that manages their costs better than indemnity plans, or they will reduce the benefits in indemnity plans," she added. Indemnity plans pay for coverage of medical expenses by virtually any hospital or doctor.

Within the past year, most major health insurers, including Blue Cross and Blue Shield, Prudential, Lincoln National and others, have moved to set up lower priced, "preferred provider" arrangements that cut costs by offering incentives for patients to use certain lower-cost facilities.

Such arrangements may prove popular because they are less restrictive, albeit more expensive, than HMOs. Some employers also have shied away from HMOs, hailed several years ago as a solution to escalating health costs, because of concerns that they are actually driving up the cost of their traditional health plans by taking away healthier, less expensive employees.

Little Girl Dream Leads To International Fame

EDITOR'S NOTE — From the time she was a little girl, Sheila Hicks wanted to be an artist, a painter. She has earned an international reputation as an artist all right, but not with canvas and paints. She's considered a pioneer in the design of textiles.

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Sheila Hicks, the world-traveling artist whose tapestries hang in 39 countries, considers herself a "gun-for-hire for culture."

Described by the Metropolitan Museum of Art as "one of the founders of the contemporary fiber movement," Miss Hicks designs textiles. The Metropolitan chose one of her works, "Linen Lean-to," to hang in the inaugural show when the museum opened its 20th century wing in January.

"I also design textiles for fashion and furnishing — place mats and 100 other things," she says. "It would seem that artists from upon making utilitarian things. I've tried to keep a delicate course in walking both tightropes simultaneously, realizing people were taking potshots from both sides."

On the art side, her textiles now hang in government buildings and residences and places like Ford Foundation in New York. Her first museum showing came at the Museum of Modern Art in New York in 1964. "I've got six or seven there now," she says.

Her works also hang in the decorative arts wing of the Louvre in Paris and in museums in Holland, Sweden, Tokyo and Kyoto, Japan, Hartford, Conn., San Francisco, Atlanta, Washington D.C. and Chicago. One of her biggest tapestries, 6 by 14 feet, is in New York's new American Craft Museum.

"For the last 20 years I've been a gun-for-hire for culture," says Miss Hicks, who makes her home in Paris.

"In India," she explains, "a hand-weaving factory that's the largest and oldest in the world hired me to design textiles for the export market. The high-style markets had told them their things were well-made but the colors and designs could be better. Why didn't they get somebody like Sheila Hicks to help them?"

"They're now marketed throughout the world and some of the designs we initiated 20 years ago are still in production."

"In Morocco, the government hired me to come renovate their handmade pile carpets. My great bylaw is, do not disturb a culture. We went back to the great and beautiful old textiles and looked for the roots and essence and just strengthened and reinforced that — cleaned up the show."

She went back and forth between Morocco and Paris monthly for about four years, carrying clothes in a shoulder bag and a hand loom for weaving on planes.

Hotel architects began recommending her. "Sometimes I create entire environments of things that would go in every room, textiles, artwork," she says. "It became a mission, of wanting to improve our culture, in the sense of finding something I liked to put my cup of coffee on."

"I started publishing more and more, to encourage other people to take up the cause of beauty in the environment."

Miss Hicks decided as a child to become an artist, meaning a painter. "It never seemed like there was any other thing to do but that. With that I could do everything else. All the rest would be a spinoff and turn around in a twist, with art the central core."

"You can draw and paint, so you make a whole environment, have your children, make a creative existence for them, earn your living by making beautiful things, discover the world."

Though she keeps an apartment and studio in New York, Miss Hicks has lived for the past 20 years in Paris. She has a studio there "where I design the tapestries and assistants help me make them." She also teaches at the Fontainebleau School of Art, Architecture and Music.

Though she leads an international life, her roots are in the Midwest.

"I'm the great-great-granddaughter of a Nebraska homesteader," she says. "The old family graveyard is in the middle of a plain near Hastings. When it was about time for a baby to be born, they would come back and re-establish themselves in Hastings."

She was born there in 1934. A year later, her mother visited again, to give birth to her brother, Bill, now a training psychoanalyst at the Freudian Institute in Chicago. Another brother, now a Chicago attorney, was born later.

"I broke the tradition. My daughter Itaka, 26, was born in Mexico City and my son Cristobal, 21, was born in Paris."

"My grandfather had three old maid sisters. Emma sewed and embroidered and designed our clothes. It was a way to be economical. I was enchanted. We even had hand-spun and hand-woven flax dish towels in the kitchen."

"Lizzie had the first piano brought to Hastings on the train. Gertie drew and painted and read."

Miss Hicks' father moved his family often, as he set up a company's district offices. "A gypsy existence became a way of life. We weren't fearful of any places or new experiences. We tried to make them our own."

She studied painting at Yale, getting a bachelor's and a master's degrees. Josef Albers, director of the art school, invited her to have tea with him and his wife, Anni, the weaver. Miss Hicks recalls a moment of enlightenment soon after that.

"I was waiting for a bus on a cold, gray New Haven afternoon and thinking about my thesis and things I was working on," she says. "I figured out a way to amalgamate my love for color, my involvement in art and my penchant for sewing — from Aunt Gertie and Aunt Emma — into a kind of ensemble. I thought, 'I'm going to give myself over to this adventure.'"

Albers suggested that she apply for a Fulbright Fellowship to Chile.

"He was a very strong personality," she says. "We did everything he told us to. I think he knew I would plug into that culture because of the textiles and inspiration of the landscape. I found myself in 1957 teaching in Spanish, which I knew not, on design, color, painting and weaving."

"I had improvised a little loom to fool around on. It started becoming the center of my existence."

"Still, it was backup to enable me to function toward doing something I considered serious, which was becoming a painter. My culture implies that you have pursued a serious endeavor if you have pursued painting or sculpture. Maybe in the back of my mind that's still where I'm going."

Her next fellowship was to Paris. There she began hanging out with some Latin Americans. She married one, an apiculturist, gave up the fellowship, and moved to Mexico's central valley. After five years she returned to Paris.

Black And White Lead Spring Parade

NEW YORK (AP) — It's back to the classics in colors and styles for fashion footwear this spring, according to industry sources who say that the most popular colors are the old favorites, black and white.

"White will be especially important," says Larry Rosenbloom, a buyer for Kinney Shoes.

Men will choose comfortable, less formal footwear, headed by classic all-leather and fabric jazz-style oxfords and soft Brazilian leather slippers, he says.

"The fabric jazz shoe, which comes in white, gray and natural jute canvas, is a lighter version of the extremely popular leather style," Rosenbloom says. "The leather slipper is made of soft, woven leather and is very comfortable. You could say it's a dressed-up version of the huarache sandal and has the same distinctive, stylish Brazilian look."

A return to feminine styling in women's and girls' fashions has welcomed back the bow as a major accent. Bows can be found everywhere — in hair, on dresses, gowns,

Game Shows Are Hard Work

I don't want to sound like the woman who came to my garage sale and bought a wool coat with a mink fur trim for $1.50 and asked me if I did alterations, but aren't the prices of merchandise on game shows pretty exorbitant?

I saw a woman the other night with $3,095 to spend say, "I'll take the throw pillows for $2,000 and the cake server for $1,040. Put the $55 on a gift certificate."

Those prices are usually reserved for rubes who come to town with the egg money sewed in the lining of their coats.

The way I figure it, game show contestants work their buns off for the money. They have to be screened, put in a stressful situation before thousands of viewers, keep the buzzer when they have no idea what the answer is, keep the energy of the show high by yelling out, "Come on $1,000," and jumping higher than the host's head when they win.

It's not like they're getting something for nothing. You think it's easy standing over a hot wheel buying vowels all day, just try it!

Years ago, there was a show called "Queen for a Day." You have never seen so much misery pass before your eyes in one half-hour. I had a great-aunt who never missed a show. She had 13 children and she parked herself in front of the TV set to watch these people go from peasant to queen.

I was with her the day a woman came on the show who had 14 children. Her husband was out of work, her washer had broken down,

At Wits End
Erma Bombeck

she was pregnant again, her mother was in another city and she hadn't seen her in three years and their car needed major work.

When it came time for her to pick her prize, she chose a set of golf clubs valued at $2,000. For that you could get Nancy Lopez in the bag at St. Andrews.

My aunt was appalled at her choice. She said with all those kids, who was she kidding that she would ever get a chance to play golf. She said she would have chosen the dinner ring.

Somehow, I could never imagine my husband on a game show making a decision to spend $5,060 in eight seconds. He would tell Pat Sajak he would have to think about it and to give him his card as he had a few other shows to check out. He would then shop around to "Sale of the Century" and "Newlywed Game" to see what their ceramic dogs and washers were going for before making up his mind. He would inspect the seams of the fur coat, kick the tires of the car and eyeball the brooch under a strong light.

Likely as not, he'd lean over to Pat and say, "Now give me your brother-in-law price!"

Some Fashions Aren't Trendy Your Marriage Needs A Compromise

By TRACY SEIPEL
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

NEW YORK — For women who shudder at the thought of wearing the short and trendy looks being promoted for fall, there is Liz Claiborne, And Regina Porter. And Eleanor P. Brenner. And Cathy Hardwick.

These four, known for their affordable interpretations of the latest styles for the American working woman, proved once again how well they understand their genre during solid presentations last week at the fall-winter women's ready-to-wear shows in New York.

When the big designers were showing short and snug and sophisticated looks, these designers — among others — showed longer, looser versions that more women could appreciate, wear and actually buy.

Claiborne, the darling of the desk set, highlighted classic jewel-tone knit jersey or print dresses that often fell to midcalf. Sometimes they were paired with sweater vests; other times, a long sweater tunic was worn over a pleated skirt. As always, the look was feminine, soft and professional.

But Claiborne didn't overrule short looks — just the distracting short.

Shirtdresses, zipper-front dresses and slim skirts in solid gabardine or wool jersey in a prevalent shade of whiskey fell an inch or so above the knee, about the same spot Regina Porter sighted in her hemlines.

Porter, however, concentrated on showing even longer looks than most. In this year's collection, she opted for lots of black cotton turtle-necks, matching cowl-neck cardigans and long, flared skirts or straight, long cotton polo dresses worn under dusters.

Other noteworthy looks included long, checked, pleated wrap skirts worn with black-and-white glen plaid jackets and matching plaid blouses. When it wasn't plaid, Porter, like many others, showed a number of animal-print blouses that were paired with the solid skirts.

Remaining within the practical and pretty theme was Eleanor P. Brenner. As always, almost everything she presented was reassuringly familiar to the audience. But it was her updated approach to classics that provoked their constant applause.

Brenner believes in tall, slimming styles and often accomplished the look by using one color throughout an ensemble. The look was best characterized by a group of winter white pants and long skirts worn with matching turtle-necks and trench coats. Another good look was seen in her sleek and streamlined, high-waisted black pants with a cropped black sweater, punctuated by a red-knit zip jacket.

To her credit, much of Brenner's line revolved around solids of red, black, gray, ivory and a brass shade, all of which make for easy mixing and matching.

Other highlights of the show included her black and bright pink or turquoise windowpane jackets with pink or turquoise sweaters and black leather pants or skirts.

The clothes were a little more progressive at Cathy Hardwick, whose customer is younger-minded and a little sportier.

What started off with something as simple as a herringbone hunting jacket with matching pleated trousers and solid turtle-neck, quickly progressed to a blouson-styled long jean jacket mixed with green flannel, paired with a matching short skirt and green wool turtle-neck. Short-in-front, long-in-back tops worn over short, straight or flared skirts followed.

While the collection emphasized shorter hemlines, it also promoted such staples as brown and black houndstooth coat dresses, cropped jackets with pleated pants, and for evening simple slim black velvet dresses.

Annual Springtime Event Planned By Junior Guild

ROCKY MOUNT — The Junior Guild of Rocky Mount will hold its annual springtime event "Antiques And Accents" show and sale May 15-17 in the gymnasium of N.C. Wesleyan College.

The weekend show will feature exhibits from 35 antique dealers from North Carolina, Virginia, Delaware, Pennsylvania, and Florida. In addition to the exhibits, there will be a garden shop with herbs, perennials, hanging baskets and potted plants.

First Lady Dottie Martin, wife of Gov. Jim Martin, will officially open the show at 9:45 a.m. May 15.

Barbara Luck, a Colonial Williamsburg official and the Abby Aldrich Curator of the Rockefeller Folk Art Center, will speak on the "Changing Faces of America: 19th and 20th Century Folk Art Paintings of the Land" Friday.

Gordon Chappell, Director of Landscaping at Colonial Williamsburg will speak on "Visions and Revisions of Williamsburg Gardens" on Saturday.

Authentic reproductions of several of the nation's first ladies' wedding gowns will be on display during the weekend.

The Junior Guild will give proceeds from this year's event to the Drug Abuse Prevention Program which will be offered to all public and private schools in Nash and Edgecombe counties. This program is sponsored by Nash-Edgecombe Mental Health Association.

Coloring Eggs Is Ancient Custom

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — The practice of coloring eggs at Easter was borrowed from a 5,000-year-old springtime Persian custom that has spread to many countries through the centuries.

In ancient Persia, say researchers for PAAS, manufacturer of Easter egg coloring kits, the gift of a colored egg given at the vernal equinox, or start of spring, symbolized good will and friendship.

In Eastern Europe, the Ukrainians covered their eggs, called pysanky, with elaborate designs. Each color in the designs symbolized a virtue. For example, yellow stood for innocence and wisdom; green represented rebirth, hope and vitality; and orange meant endurance and ambition. Ukrainians in America have continued using their well-known designs.

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I bought a home together. We both work. There are two people in her life who dislike me intensely — her father and her best friend. I dislike them both because they have continually bad-mouthed me to my wife.

I feel that when a husband and wife own a home in partnership as we do, both parties should have approval concerning who should set foot on their property.

More explicitly, I feel that I have the right to bar a person from our property whether I am home or not. (I would honor that request without question if my wife asked me to.) My wife insists that it is her right to invite anyone she wants to our home as long as I am not there.

There can be no compromise here. Either one of us has the right to keep someone off our property, or we don't.

What is your opinion? — STANDING FIRM

DEAR STANDING: Loosen up. A marriage without compromise is tenuous at best. If your wife has agreed to entertain people you dislike only when you are not home, that seems reasonable enough to me. But for you to "bar them from the property" whether you're at home or not seems petty and unreasonable.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I just moved into a beautiful new home that I love dearly, but here's the problem: His parents live next door with his sister and brothers, and they come over here every single day and never leave until late at night.

Abby, we've been married only four months, and in those four months we haven't had any privacy at all. Everybody in his family has keys to our house, and when we go out, we come back to find the place full of his kin and their friends — eating and drinking everything in sight. What should we do? — FED UP IN WISCONSIN

DEAR FED UP: Lay down the law, call in the keys and inform your kin that they are not to come over without calling first to see if it is convenient. (No dropping in uninvited.) And if you have trouble getting your house keys — change the locks.

DEAR ABBY: I've been having an affair with the husband of a friend of mine. It's been going on for over two years. We get together about three times a month. There are times when I feel guilty, but not very often.

We meet in the daytime at a motel — nothing fancy. We spend about three hours together (in bed). We can't go out in public because everybody knows him. He rarely calls because he's busy with business. He only calls to ask me to meet him. He has never said he loves me — only that he "needs" me. When I tell him I love him, he keeps telling me how much he "needs" me. (What is that supposed to mean?)

He has never bought me a gift, and he has plenty of money. I'm not a gold digger, but a little gift would be nice to show he's thinking of me. I wanted to buy him a birthday present and he told me not to because his wife would wonder where it came from.

Abby, can you figure this relationship out? I can't. What do you call it, and where is it going? — FUNNY FACE (HIS NAME FOR ME)

DEAR FUNNY FACE: I would call it an accommodation for him (strictly physical). When he says he "needs" you, that's what he means. He needs the sex you provide. He doesn't tell you he "loves" you because he wants no involvement on an emotional level. The relationship is going nowhere, and if you're smart you will put an end to it before you get caught or become addicted to him — whichever comes first.

GRAIN: No. 2 yellow shelled corn steady to 3 cents lower at mostly 1.81-1.92 in East and mostly 1.93-2.03 in the Piedmont; No. 1 yellow soybeans 5 cents lower at mostly 5.02-5.23 in East and mostly 5.08-5.12 in the Piedmont; new crop wheat 2.30-2.85. NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices rose broadly in early trading today as a rising dollar helped Wall Street continue rebounding from its recent slump.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was up 15.06 to 2,298.01 at 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

In the broader market, advancing issues outnumbered decliners by more than 3 to 1, with 947 up, 260 down and 330 unchanged on the New York Stock Exchange.

AT&T rose 1/4 to 25 to lead the NYSE most active list.

Soviet Official Says Shultz Gave No Proof Of Spying

MOSCOW (AP) — A Soviet official said today Secretary of State George Shultz offered no proof of alleged KGB spying at the U.S. Embassy and said reports of Marine guards trading classified information for sex "may be cases of two consenting adults."

Foreign Ministry spokesman Genady Gerasimov also said during a news briefing that Shultz seemed unprepared to respond to new Kremlin arms control proposals offered during his three-day visit this week.
 "Instead of applauding this decision, Mr. Shultz reserved his position" on the Soviet initiatives, Gerasimov said. "We are not criticizing him for this. We will give him time to consult. But it would be very unfortunate if this process of consultations and discussion would lead to protracted negotiations."

 Shultz briefed NATO allies in Brussels, Belgium today, on his talks before heading to California for discussions with President Reagan. The Western allies said significant progress was made in the Moscow talks, but reserved a final judgment on whether the Soviet proposals were acceptable.

Gerasimov was asked about how Shultz's meetings with Soviet officials were influenced by U.S. allegations that KGB agents conspired with Marine guards to gather intelligence at the embassy in Moscow.
 "Mr. Shultz didn't show anything," Gerasimov said, referring to a lack of physical evidence that Soviet listening devices were planted at the embassy. "He was asked for proof, but left us with only words, not substance. As far as the alleged guilty actions of the Marines, there is no proof and, using the phrase popular in America, these may be cases of two consenting adults."

Gerasimov was referring to two former Marine guards from the U.S. Embassy here who have been charged with espionage for allegedly trading access to secure areas for sexual favors from Soviet women formerly employed at the embassy.
 Shultz declined to give an immediate response to the arms control offers made by Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev, saying he first needed to discuss the proposals with Reagan and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

"We will make a decision promptly about our next steps," Shultz told a news conference in Brussels today after briefing the NATO allies.

"We recognize the need to consider these issues, but at the same time what we proposed had already been proposed by the U.S. side," Gerasimov said.

Shultz's delegation "left hiding behind the backs of their NATO allies," the Soviet spokesman said. However, Gerasimov hailed Shultz's visit as an important step toward achieving an arms control agreement, saying: "We give a very positive assessment of the visit by Mr. Shultz to our country."

On Wednesday, Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze said Shultz's visit could lead to a summit meeting in Washington.

 Lonetree, according to the report, said he never released any classified material while in Moscow.

Defense attorney Michael V. Stuhff said after Wednesday's closed-door session that three witnesses were called and "not one of them said anything in terms of implicating my client."

"Sgt. Lonetree is in great spirits," said Stuhff. "He knows better than anyone else what he did and didn't do and why. He's not worried at all about these proceedings."

Shotwell refused to discuss Wednesday's hearing or Stuhff's characterization of the testimony. The proceedings are closed to the press and public.

Stuhff and co-counsel William Kunstler on Wednesday showed off photographs, taken at the annual Marine Ball in Moscow in November 1985.

Stuhff said the photos showed the senior non-commissioned Marine in Moscow "with two Soviet women, one under each arm on a sofa ... as well as a State Department official with another Soviet woman."

Stuhff said Lonetree had not denied having a relationship with Seina, but such fraternization was "a very common accepted practice."

Lonetree "has been grievously and dangerously chastized, denigrated for engaging in something that he quite frankly was encouraged to do," the attorney concluded.

In discussing the witnesses who appeared Wednesday, Stuhff and Kunstler both asserted the witnesses had discussed security procedures and the possibility of breaches, but offered no direct testimony of wrongdoing by Lonetree.

"There was no direct evidence today that tied or linked ... Sgt. Lonetree to any illegal activity," Stuhff said, adding that the three witnesses included two Marines who had worked with Lonetree in Vienna and a State Department security official whom he identified as Kenneth Kidwell.

Once the hearing is completed, the hearing officer, Maj. Robert J. Nourie, will have up to three days to make his recommendation on the court-martial. The commander at Quantico, Lt. Gen. Frank Petersen, must then make the final decision on how the case should proceed.

CONSISTORY NOTICE
 The Roanoke Consistory No. 248 will hold Maundy Thursday services and meeting at the Coronation Masonic Hall, Williamston, at 7:30 p.m. today. Easter sunrise service will be held at 6 a.m. Sunday at Green Memorial Church, Main Street, Williamston. The sunrise service is open to Princes and Peers and the public.

Scientology Founder's Assets Total $26 Million

SAN LUIS OBISPO, Calif. (AP) — The estate of Church of Scientology founder and author L. Ron Hubbard is valued at more than $26 million, according to documents filed by his executor.

Assets listed in the inventory total $26,305,706. They include $25 million in copyright and trademark materials and $1,305,706 in oil gas and business investments, said attorney Charles Ogle of Morro Bay.

The documents were prepared by Norman F. Starkey of Los Angeles, the executor of Hubbard's estate. Ogle handled the filing of those documents with the San Luis Obispo County Clerk's Office.

Hubbard suffered a stroke and died Jan. 24, 1986, on his ranch in Creston. His will, filed in Superior Court the following February, did not detail his wealth. Hubbard signed the will the day before his death.

The listed assets do not include money Hubbard put into trust funds for his wife, four of his five children and the Church of Spiritual Technology. The amount in the trust funds is private, Ogle said.

The attorney said the next step will be filing of federal inheritance tax returns and settlement of claims against the estate.

Among the items filed with the county clerk was a 4-inch-thick binder containing lists of Hubbard's copyright poems, movies, books, office memos, office rules, music and choreography. There was also a binder listing patents for inventions and additional copyrights, such as for the words Scientology and Dianetics.

Stadium Was Minges' Last Dream

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Calling it the "last impossible dream of Ray Minges," W.M. (Booger) Scales urged supporters to go out and make quick work of a drive to build a new football stadium for Rose High School Wednesday.

Scales, who was named earlier this week as the drive's chairman, spoke to gathered supporters and fellow fund-raisers at a luncheon at the Greenville Country Club to kick off the campaign.

Dr. Ray Minges, who died earlier this year, was to have headed the drive to raise the funds for the stadium, which will be built behind Greenville Middle School and the Boys' Club, was, in Scales' words, a man who made a number of impossible dreams come true in Greenville.

And the Minges family was quick to respond to the challenge left by Dr. Minges, donating $50,000 to the project to begin the drive.

Scales said that he did not think it would be difficult to raise the needed funds, approximately $500,000, for the construction of the first phase of the overall athletic complex.

Phase One consists of the construction of a football-track stadium, seating, toilet facilities, concession and storage areas, lighting, a press box, and fencing around the facility.

Phase Two would include new playing fields for baseball, softball and soccer, while Phase Three will see the construction of a football practice field, a field house and the paving of parking lots.

The entire project is expected to cost in excess of $1 million.

And while it must still pass the Pitt County Board of Education, names for the facility have been offered and are expected to be approved. The overall complex itself will be the Minges-Farley Athletic Complex, named in honor of Dr. Minges and former Rose High School coach and athletic director Boley Farley.

Names for the football stadium, the baseball park, and the field house have been proposed, but will not be announced until final approval by the board.

Scales told the gathering that normally in a fund-raising drive, "There is only one button to push," to appeal to donors. "But there are three buttons on this one."

"Everyone says that Greenville is one of the fastest growing cities in the state, and I think it is a black eye that the city school is the only one in the system that does not have its own athletic facility. So you can appeal for the children of Greenville."

"Two, there are few people who do not know or who have not been touched by the life of Bo Farley, who is a living legend," Scales continued.

"Then, you've got Ray Minges. Ray is the man who wanted this stadium named for Bo Farley. And few people have done for Greenville what Ray Minges has done. It was his last dream to see this stadium built and that's the only reason I'm here today. He knew how important this stadium is to the children of Greenville."

Scales referred to the song "The Impossible Dream" and said that Dr. Minges sought to attain the unreachable for Greenville and Pitt County, and that his final dream should be brought to fruition.

"I'll make a date with each of you to sit down in this stadium and we'll look up and see one star shining brighter than all the others. And we will all know that Ray Minges has reached that unreachable star."

The campaign is expected to get underway on Monday.

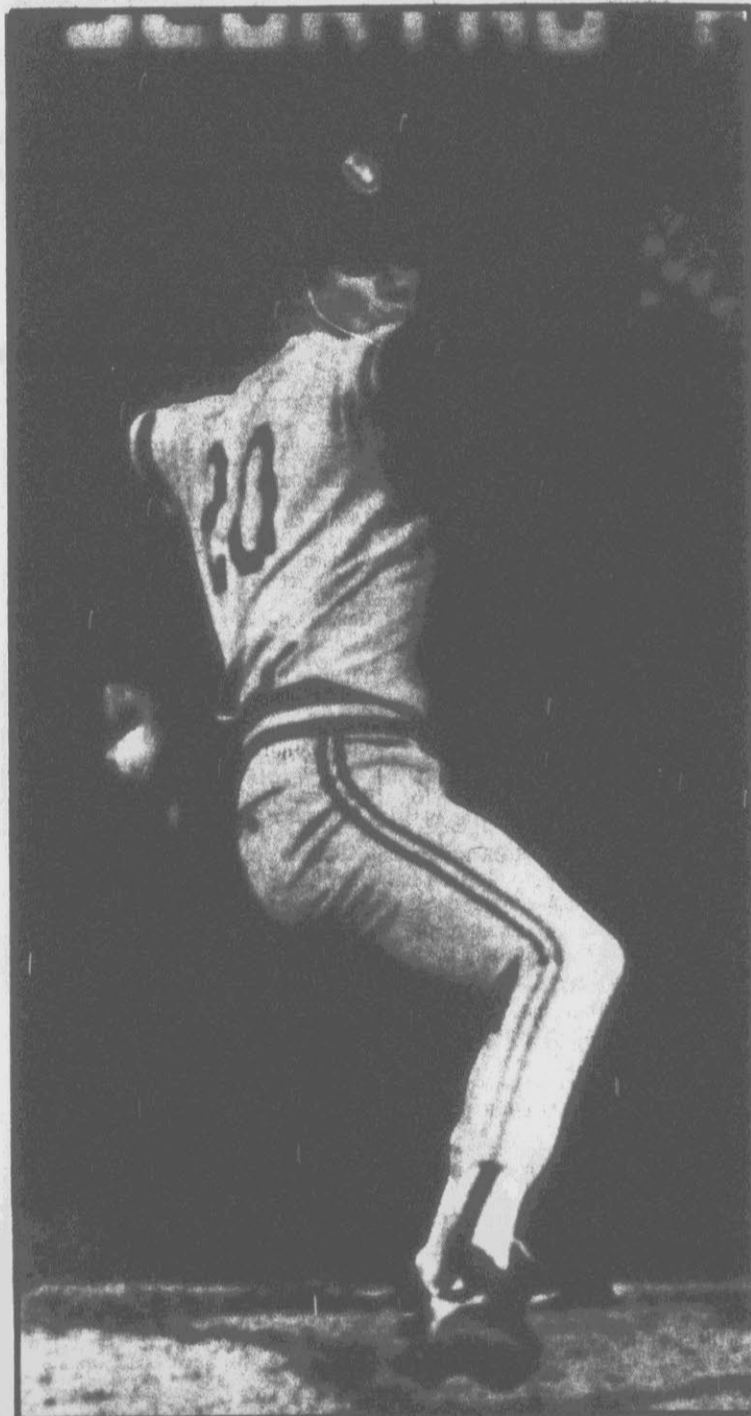

Anyone wishing to donate toward the stadium fund can do so by sending a check to "Athletic Complex Committee, 1717 W. 5th St., Greenville, N.C. 27834." Contributions are tax deductible.

Two facts in the Monday story on Scales being named as chairman of the fund drive were incorrectly reported to the Daily Reflector.

Scales was not asked to serve as the original chairman of the fund drive, but to serve as co-chairman of the drive with Ray Minges.

Scales raised funds for the construction of the First Christian Church, not the First Presbyterian Church.

Nieves Tosses No-Hitter At O's

No-Hit Effort

Milwaukee Brewer pitcher Juan Nieves delivers a pitch during action Wednesday night in Baltimore as he throws a no-hitter against the Orioles. Milwaukee won the game 7-0 behind the gem. (AP Colorlaserphoto)

BALTIMORE (AP) — After pitching the first no-hitter in Brewers history, 22-year-old Juan Nieves said he was going to try to relax on the plane back to Milwaukee with a good Spanish novel.

But while Nieves and his teammates relax and enjoy their club-record 9-0 start, the rest of the American League is probably wondering when the Brewers amazing start will end.

The Brewers equalled the third best start in American League history Wednesday night with a 7-0 victory over Baltimore, a no-hitter that was capped by a brilliant diving catch for the final out by Milwaukee center-fielder Robin Yount.

"People think this start is a joke," said Nieves, who became the youngest pitcher in 15 years to hurl a no-hitter. "But we are for real and this is just a taste of what is to come. We are in a tough division and we're going to go out and go after people."

Burt Hooton threw a no-hitter for the Chicago Cubs against Philadelphia on April 16, 1972 at the age of 22 years, 2 months, 9 days. Nieves is 22 years, 3 months, 10 days. The youngest pitcher to hurl a no-hitter was Nick Maddox of Pittsburgh who did it against Brooklyn on Sept. 20, 1907 at the age of 20 years, 10 months, 11 days.

Milwaukee Manager Tom Trebelhorn said the Brewers' latest victory was miraculous.

"That is the most remarkable game I've ever been associated with," he said.

Yount, who caught a slicing drive from Eddie Murray in right-center field for the final out, seconded that opinion.

"It's the first no-hitter I've been associated with and it's just a great feeling to be a part of one," Yount said. "I didn't have time to think on the final catch. I wasn't going to do anything but catch it. It's an exciting way to win a ballgame. Things don't happen like this often."

Brewers leftfielder Jim Pacionek, who had his first major-league hit and made a diving catch to rob Murray of a hit in the second, said, "This whole year has just been unbelievable. No one expected us to be playing this well. We're just playing with so much confidence right now."

Nieves, who lost eight straight games during one stretch late last season in his rookie year, said he never really thought about his no-hitter until the final out.

"I didn't really think about it until my teammates started tacking me," Nieves, a native of Puerto Rico, said. "It still hasn't sunk in. I guess it will after a few more bottles of champagne."

"I thought I had a mediocre fastball and my slider was awful. After we got a 3-0 lead in the seventh I thought, 'Well I'll just go after them now,'" said Nieves, who struck out seven, walked five and threw 128 pitches.

The no-hitter was the first in the major leagues since Houston's Mike Scott clinched the NL West title on Sept. 25 last season, 2-0 over San Francisco. It was the first in the AL since Chicago's Joe Cowley defeated California 7-1 on Sept. 19 last season.

Baltimore's Fred Lynn said Nieves was effective because he kept the ball out of the strike zone.

"He moved the ball around well. He had good breaking stuff," Lynn said. "It just boiled down to getting a base hit. Everything was right and I saw the ball well but I just didn't hit it. To me he wasn't overpowering. He threw the ball hard and just out of the strike zone. He was just high enough to be effective."

Dale Sveum, who extended his hitting streak to nine games, gave the Brewers a 1-0 lead in the fourth inning against Mike Flanagan, 0-1, with his first home run of the season.

The Brewers added two runs in the seventh as Pacionek doubled and Bill Schroeder bunted for a single. One out later, Paul Molitor doubled into the left field corner scoring Pacionek, and Schroeder came around on an error by left fielder Ken Gebhardt.

Greg Brock's third home run of the year, a three-run shot in the eighth after Cecil Cooper and Sveum singled, made it 6-0, and Glenn Braggs capped the scoring with a solo homer in the ninth.

Former Clemson, State Coach Maravich Is Dead

COVINGTON, La. (AP) — Peter "Press" Maravich, who rescued Louisiana State basketball from the doldrums with the help of his record-setting son, has died after a lengthy battle with cancer.

Maravich, 71, died Wednesday night at Highland Park Hospital.

Maravich lived at Indian Rocks, Fla., but he spent much of his time at the home of his son, Pete, in Covington. After battling cancer the last few years, Maravich visited Germany for treatment of the disease. He had recently been confined to Highland Park Hospital, where he died at 6:30 p.m.

With Pete throwing in record numbers, the Maravich-coached LSU Tigers shed years of mediocrity in becoming one of the top teams in the Southeastern Conference.

"It's a well-known fact that the Maravich Era, between Press and Pete, revitalized basketball, not only in Louisiana but in the Deep South," former LSU athletic director Carl Maddox said. "Both of them made an indelible impression on basketball in the South."

Pete scored 3,667 points as LSU compiled records of 14-12, 13-13 and 22-10 from 1968 through 1970. The 1970 team matched a school record for victories and earned the school's first post-season invitation in 16 years. The Tigers advanced to the quarter-finals of the National Invitation Tournament.

"I knew the guy like a brother. I loved him," said Jay McCreary, an LSU assistant under Maravich. "Talk about family, we were very close."

The cigar-smoking Maravich was known for his sharp tongue and hot temper. In a 1969 Knoxville (Tenn.) News-Sentinel poll of the 10 Southeastern Conference coaches, Maravich was unanimously chosen as the "most inflammatory" coach in the league.

"He was a great guy," said Tommy Hess, head basketball coach at Belaire High School. "Sure he cussed a lot. I never heard anybody cuss the way Press used to do. But when he said the words, there was a kind of humor in them. He was a great coach; he had all the Xs and Os."

"I'll never forget walking down to his office that day after he had given up smoking. He was lighting up a cigar and said, 'The son-of-a-guns fired me.' I'll always remember that."

Maravich coached six years at Clemson, accumulating a 55-96 record from 1957 through 1962. He became coach at North Carolina State in 1965 when, after two games, Everett Case retired. Maravich completed a 21-5 season and led the Wolfpack into the NCAA tournament.

After an 18-9 mark in 1966, Maravich left North Carolina State for LSU, which had become a basketball patsy in the years after the Bob Pettit era of the early 1950s. Maravich's first team struggled to a 3-23 record, but Pete showed up the next year and the Tigers had a winning record for only the second time in 14 seasons.

Maravich remained at LSU for two seasons after Pete's graduation, posting records of 14-12 and 10-16. He was fired with one year remaining on his contract.

He moved to Appalachian State, then a fledgling member of the Southern Conference, in 1973. Faced with an upgraded schedule, he had records of 6-20, 5-20 and 3-23.

His 17-year major-college record was 183-258.

Services are being handled by the Wayne Tatalovich Funeral Home in Aliquippa, Pa., hometown of the Maravich family, said Mark Spohrer, a funeral director with the Jacob Schoen & Son Funeral Home in Covington.

Rain Once More Halts Pirates

Rain again hit East Carolina University's baseball team, washing out Wednesday night's game with the University of North Carolina.

ECU officials said the game will not be rescheduled.

Also rained out was a softball doubleheader between Seton Hall and East Carolina, and two girls' high school track meets.

One of the meets, at Farmville Central, will not be rescheduled, while the other, between Rose and hosting Northeastern, has been reset for Wednesday. A scheduled meet between Rose and Hunt that day has been moved up to next Thursday.

No Choice In Septien Release

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Dallas Cowboys officials say they had no choice but to drop veteran placekicker Rafael Septien after he pleaded guilty to a charge of indecency with a 10-year-old girl.

The team waived Septien Wednesday, one week after he pleaded guilty to the charge and was placed on 10 years probation.

"I knew we would receive adverse public reaction when we did not take this action immediately, but we wanted to investigate all the ramifications of our decision,"

Cowboys President Tex Schramm said.

He called the decision "a sad episode for everyone, but Rafael is no longer a member of the Dallas Cowboys."

By Wednesday afternoon, Septien's nameplate had been removed from its place above his locker at the Cowboys' practice facility at Valley Ranch.

Septien, 33, said he hopes to be forgiven and that another team will give him a chance to play.

Seitzer Excels As KC's Other Rookie

By The Associated Press
Kevin Seitzer might not have a Heisman Trophy at home but he's battling Bo Jackson for the title of Kansas City's outstanding rookie.

The first baseman drove in both runs Wednesday night as the Royals beat the Detroit Tigers 2-1 and Seitzer raised his average to .452, the same mark as Jackson.

"I loved it last night when Bo hit the two home runs and everybody was over there talking to him and I could just go on and do my thing and not worry about it," Seitzer said. "If I don't have to do any talking, that's just more time I have to relax and concentrate on the game."

Jackson, the running back who was the NFL's No. 1 draft choice in 1986, drove in seven runs Tuesday against the Tigers, but Wednesday was Seitzer's turn at glory.

"Seitzer did it again," Royals Manager Billy Gardner said. "He sure has been swinging the bat good. He knows what to do with the bat in any situation."

Kansas City also has to be happy with the 1987 start of Bret Saberhagen, 2-0, who went 7-12 last year. Saberhagen allowed six hits and struck out two in eight innings and Bud Black pitched the ninth.

In other AL games Wednesday, Juan Nieves pitched the first no-hitter in Milwaukee history as the Brewers beat Baltimore 7-0; Boston beat Texas 5-4; Minnesota defeated Oakland 5-2; California blanked Seattle 4-0; New York edged Cleveland 4-3; and Chicago beat Toronto 5-0.

The Tigers took a 1-0 lead in the sixth inning when Tom Brookens tripled and Lou Whitaker doubled.

The Royals answered in the bottom of the inning when Seitzer drove home Angel Salazar with a ground-out. Seitzer made a loser of Walt Terrell, 1-1, when he doubled home Salazar, who had doubled.

"You lose about 20 one-run games a year," Tigers Manager Sparky Anderson said. "We've got 17 to go."

Brewers 7, Orioles 0
Nieves, a 22-year-old left-hander, got his no-hitter when Robin Yount made a diving catch in right-center field of a line drive by Eddie Murray to end the game.

Dale Sveum, who has hit safely in each of Milwaukee's games this season, homered off Mike Flanagan, 0-1, in the fourth inning. Greg Brock added a three-run homer and Glenn Braggs a solo shot.

"The whole year has just been unbelievable," said Jim Paciorek, who made a diving catch in left field in the second inning and had his first major-league hit, a double in the seventh.

The no-hitter was the first in the major leagues since Houston's Mike Scott clinched the NL West title on Sept. 25 last season, 2-0 over San Francisco. It was the first in the AL since Chicago's Joe Cowley defeated California 7-1 on Sept. 19 last season.

Red Sox 5, Rangers 4
Dwight Evans' sixth-inning grand slam erased a 4-1 deficit and reliever Wes Gardner struck out seven of the 10 batters he faced as the Red Sox dealt the Rangers their sixth straight loss.

The Rangers, 1-7 this season, took their lead with a four-run fifth off Bruce Hurst, 2-0. Gardner relieved with two men on base in the seventh, and struck out Pete Incaviglia, Larry Parrish and Don Slaught on 14 pitches.

"I never thought I'd punch out the side, but after one pitch I knew my fastball was there," Gardner said.

Evans' homer came off Dale Mohorcic, 1-1, who relieved starter Charlie Hough with the bases loaded and a 2-0 count.

Twins 5, Athletics 2
Mike Smithson had a no-hitter for undereated team in the major leagues.

"I didn't have time to think. I wasn't going to do anything but catch it," Yount said. "You don't think about it, you just react."

The Brewers' start, tied for third best in AL history, was almost overlooked because of Nieves' exploits.

"People think this start is a joke but we are real and this is just a taste of what is to come," Nieves said.

Lansford scored on Dwayne Murphy's two-out double and Oakland added a run in the eighth on an RBI double by Mike Davis.

The Twins scored their first run off Dave Stewart, 0-2, in the third on the first of two RBI singles by Kirby Puckett. Tom Nieto also had two RBI for Minnesota.

Angels 4, Mariners 0
Kirk McCaskill, 2-0, faced 29 batters, struck out nine and walked one and allowed four singles.

"You won't find a better pitched game this year," Mariners Manager Dick Williams said.

"In the bullpen warming up I felt like I had a pretty good fastball and thought I would go with that most," McCaskill said. "Once I found my mechanics I started to get my curveball over more and that helped."

Brian Downing led off the game with a home run for the third time this season and second consecutive game.

Yankees 4, Indians 3
Dave Winfield's two-run single capped a three-run seventh for the Yankees as the Indians lost their sixth straight.

Cleveland starter Scott Bailes took a four-hitter and a 3-1 lead into the seventh. He walked Joel Skinner, and one out later, Bailes went 2-0 on Rickey Henderson before reliever Tom Waddell, 0-1, took over and completed the walk.

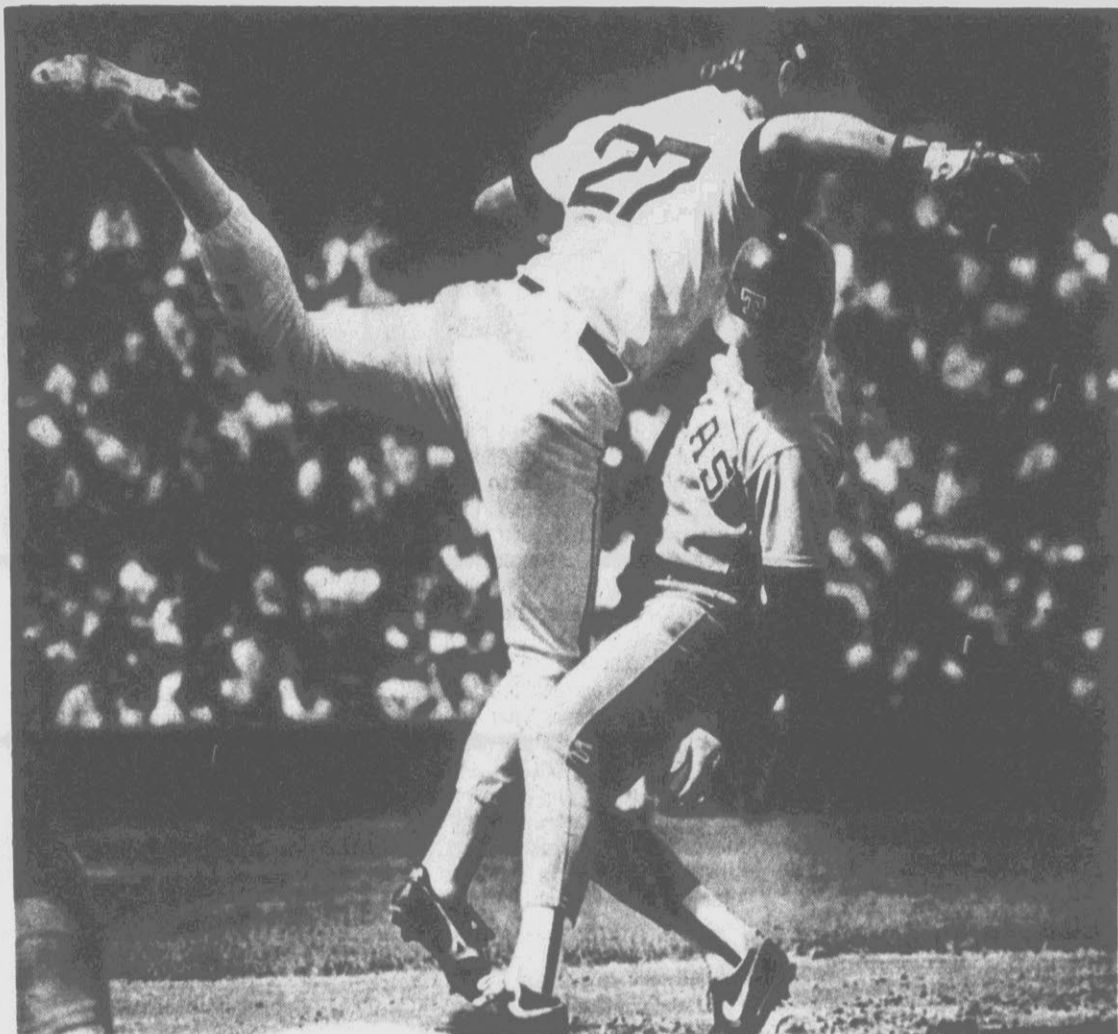

A single by Willie Randolph loaded the bases and brought in Greg Swindell. Don Mattingly lined out to shortstop Julio Franco, but Franco overthrew second baseman Tony Bernazard trying for a double play and the error allowed Skinner to score.

Rick Rhoden, acquired from Pittsburgh in the off-season, evened his AL record at 1-1. He gave up three runs on six hits in seven innings. Dave Righetti left the bases loaded in the ninth for his second save, as the Yankees completed a three-game sweep of the Indians, who are 1-8.

White Sox 5, Blue Jays 0
Jose DeLeon extended his scoreless streak to 14 1-3 innings as he and Ray Searage combined on a four-hitter to snap the White Sox' four-game losing streak.

DeLeon, 2-0, allowed three hits and struck out nine in 7 2-3 innings, while Tim Lulett got three hits and drove in four runs, two in the fourth with a double and two in the sixth with a single.

Memory Of Jackie Robinson Growing Bigger Than Life

NEW YORK (AP) — To a baseball world celebrating the 40th anniversary of its first black player, Jackie Robinson has become a larger-than-life figure.

His widow remembers April 15, 1947 as a larger-than-life day for a young, apprehensive American family.

"I was 23, Jack was 26. We were young people with a baby just trying to get a start in the world," Rachel Robinson recalled on Wednesday, the 40th anniversary of her husband's first game. "It was a tense day, but it was also an exhilarating day."

The observance of the shattering of baseball's color barrier came a week after Al Campanis, vice president of the Los Angeles Dodgers — Robinson's Brooklyn team, transplanted west after the 1957 season — was forced to resign. Campanis had suggested on a national television show about Robinson's debut that blacks "may not have some of the necessities" for baseball management positions.

Indeed, at ceremonies at the New York Historical Society and at Ebbets Field Homes in Brooklyn, the housing project named for the baseball park that was home to many of Robinson's exploits, Campanis was mentioned nearly as much as Robinson.

Mrs. Robinson was at the historical society to discuss the major-league debut of her husband, who died in 1972 at age 53, 10 years after becoming the first black to be named to baseball's Hall of Fame.

Most of her time was given to fielding questions about Campanis and the future of blacks in baseball's executive suites.

Mrs. Robinson said she was sure there would be more black managers in baseball. There have been three — Frank Robinson with the Cleveland Indians and San Francisco Giants, Maury Wills with the Seattle Mariners and Larry Doby with the Chicago White Sox.

But she said that in itself wouldn't be enough.

"If they had introduced a single black manager 40 years ago following Jackie's entry, that would have been an act of good faith," she said. "But to do it today would be tokenism. Somebody is going to pull a black out of the hat someday. That will happen. But we want to see a systematic way in which blacks are hired, retained and promoted."

And while she was hopeful that some teams — notably the Dodgers — would make aggressive efforts to advance blacks into the upper echelons of their organizations, she said she was totally surprised at what Campanis' remarks revealed about feelings in baseball.

"I felt shocked, horrified, appalled and angry because I hadn't expected it," she said. "Bigots have gotten sophisticated today. They're not usually so open."

Meanwhile, the NAACP was announcing a national campaign to pressure sports franchises to hire more blacks in management, promising "massive demonstrations" against any that refused.

Benjamin Hooks, the civil rights group's executive director, said the first step would be meetings between members of local NAACP chapters and the teams in their areas.

Brooklyn Borough President Howard Golden speaking at the Ebbets Field ceremonies.

"There is a void of minority general managers, managers and executives in baseball today," Golden, who is white, said. "This remains a challenge for all of us. We must carry on the fight that Jackie Robinson started and we must not rest until the boardrooms and playing fields of our national pastime truly reflect the principles and composition of America."

Many of the ceremonies in baseball had already taken place by Wednesday.

Each of the 26 major league teams had ceremonial "42s" painted on second bases to commemorate Robinson's number and position — although he made his major league debut at first base. Rachel Robinson threw out the first ball at the opener Tuesday in St. Louis, where in 1947 Cardinals players threatened a boycott over Robinson's appearance with the Dodgers.

The geographic area composed of Greenville and Pitt County consistently ranks among the top ten centers in dollar volume of construction activity. During the past decade, Greenville construction activity alone exceeded $20 million.

DeVenzio Stresses Talking Over Playing For Kids

By JODY TAYLOR
Associated Press Writer

CHARLOTTE (AP) — There was time to kill and no place to play basketball, so Dick DeVenzio talked. Amusing teen-agers who were waiting for a court at a basketball camp has turned into serious business. The former Duke University guard who has coached basketball in five different languages has a new message for teen-agers — sports isn't everything. For five days in June, DeVenzio is going to try to prove it. The idea was born at the Prep Stars basketball camp several years ago. There wasn't enough court space to accommodate all the players, so the coaches divided them into groups, and the lecture and counseling sessions were born.

"I realized I was really a lot more concerned about that aspect of the camp than teaching people how to shoot jump shots or layups," DeVenzio said. "... not many of us are going to make money playing pro basketball."

Prep Stars eventually moved to a larger facility, but the lecture portion of the camp was by then a part of the program. At the Ambassador Athletes Convention, to be held June 18-23 in Charlotte, it will be the total program.

DeVenzio wants to attract 150 to 200 ninth and 10th graders from across North Carolina and South Carolina. They will be chosen not only for their interest in athletics, but for their academic achievements.

"We want to confer a very special honor on kids who are doing things right," DeVenzio said. "We are choosing athletes who are good citizens, and conscientious students."

Conscientious may not mean a straight-A student. It may mean that they are still eager and receptive, DeVenzio said.

"We want sponges," DeVenzio said. All the furniture is taken out of the room, and the students sit on the floor. DeVenzio doesn't make them pay attention. They can close their eyes, even go to sleep if they want to.

He uses jokes, he tells stories, he acts out skits to get their attention. "I always feel like when you stand in front of a group of kids for the first time, unlike maybe adults, they are going to view you at face value for what you give them," DeVenzio said.

"We vie for their attention ... but I'm not going to say, 'Sit up, give me respect because I'm in this position.' If I say some good things you can use, use them, and if I don't, tune me out. 'How can you be mad at a guy who lets you sleep,' he said. 'I'll do whatever I have to do to get their attention.'"

DeVenzio wants the business community to pay for the convention, and he has invited them to come and see how their money is being spent. A corporation can sponsor a male and female athlete from their community for $800 — and they can come to the convention and speak to the participants about their job and their lifestyle. That could bring together bank presidents and basketball players, writers and real estate tycoons.

DeVenzio hopes to have more than 100 occupations represented at the convention. He already has Tom Smith, the president of Food Lion, Bill Grigg, the executive director of Duke Power Co., Jere Drummond, a vice president at Southern Bell, and Chuck Richards, a special agent in the FBI, to name a few. Jim Lamplery of ABC Sports also has committed to participate in the convention.

Each participant will be assigned a mentor, who will review grades and progress reports. DeVenzio hopes students will be motivated by the fact that their grades are seen by the president of a multi-million dollar corporation. "Sports isn't really going to come into it," DeVenzio said. "These kids can get plenty of that. We're not going to waste the chairman of the board of NCBN."

Geddes Leads LPGA Field

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — Jane Geddes, the second-leading money winner on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour this year, heads a field of 144 entered in the first Santa Barbara Open.

The $300,000 tournament, which offers a top prize of $45,000, is one of two new events on the LPGA tour this year. The other was the $300,000 Tsumura Hawaiian Ladies Open in February.

Among others entered in the 54-hole tournament which begins Friday are Ayako Okamoto, winner of the $200,000 Inamorita Open at San Diego last weekend, Patty Sheehan, Cathy Gerring, Cindy Rarick, Kathy Postlewait and Jan Stephenson.

The field will be split the first two days with each golfer playing one round at the Sandpiper Golf Course in nearby Goleta and the La Purisima Golf Course just outside Lompoc. Both are public courses.

The low 70 scorers and ties after Saturday's round will finish Sunday at Sandpiper.

Among those not playing this week are Betsy King, the LPGA's top money winner with $162,432 in earnings, Pat Bradley, Chris Johnson and Nancy Lopez.

Geddes has earned $131,080 in 1987. Okamoto ranks fifth on the earnings list at $78,658 while Sheehan, Gerring, Rarick and Postlewait rank sixth through ninth, respectively.

Sandpiper is located about 110 miles northwest of Los Angeles while La Purisima is another 40 miles to the northwest. Par for both courses is 72. The Sandpiper course measures 6,311 yards while La Purisima plays to 6,250 yards.

"I think this tournament is the start of something that can be very memorable and enjoyable over the years," Mike McGinnis, the head professional at both each course, said. "Hopefully, it will become one of the highlights of the ladies' tour."

Most of the golfers hadn't seen the two courses before practice rounds earlier this week. Sandpiper opened in 1972, La Purisima only last September. "It's so pretty, it reminds me of Australia," Stephenson said of Sandpiper. "I grew up on courses just like this. I'm really surprised. I hadn't heard that much about it until I got here and I'm really impressed."

"The golf course is excellent, it's one of the best we have on the tour. The (winning) score won't be too many under par, maybe four. I'll really be surprised if the scores are low because the golf courses are tough."

Donna Caponi, a 23-year tour veteran who is the sixth-leading money-winner in LPGA history with more than $1.3 million, also noticed the beauty of Sandpiper.

"The greens are enormous," she said. "I like everything about it so far. I think it's going to be a putting contest because the greens are so big. If they were smaller, it would be a shotmaker's golf course."

After playing La Purisima, Caponi said, "This is tougher than Sandpiper. I expect the scores to be higher here. But you'll always have somebody shooting 67 or 68 no matter where you play."

The greens at La Purisima are much smaller than the greens at Sandpiper. "You have to hit some precise shots (at La Purisima) because the greens are very small and very firm," Sue Ertl, who joined the LPGA tour in 1982, said. "There are some places where if you miss the fairways or greens, you're going to be in trouble."

Wants To Be Host

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — The United States Soccer Federation reaffirmed its bid to host the 1994 World Cup, informing its members and FIFA again of its intentions and progress, the USSF announced.

In a letter to both its members and FIFA, the world governing body of soccer, USSF President Werner Fricker said the United States "has begun the process to bid for the World Cup in 1994."

The step is the latest to play host to the 52-game, month-long tournament in the United States, which many soccer experts said was snubbed in its bid to stage the 1996 event.

Mike Scott and Kelly Downs were almost as dominant as a pitcher can be, yet the spotlight eluded them.

Scott threw a one-hitter and Downs had a three-hitter Wednesday night, but the masterpiece of the evening was thrown in the American League where Milwaukee's Juan Nieves pitched a no-hitter against Baltimore.

Still, Scott's 4-0 win at Los Angeles and Downs' 1-0 victory in San Diego were not exactly weak efforts. Both were dominant.

Scott, of course, has been that way for nearly a year. After a poor start last season, Scott made his splitter fastball dance and he rode it to an 18-10 record and the National League Cy Young Award.

Against the Dodgers, he was virtually unhittable, yielding only a third-inning single to Mariano Duncan and striking out 10.

"I don't know how he could have been any better unless, of course, he had pitched a no-hitter," Astros Manager Hal Lanier said. "He looked pretty overpowering to me. He gave up one hit, retired 15 in a row, was in complete command of all of his pitches."

The Dodgers wondered if Scott had a little help in holding such command. Like the New York Mets in last year's playoffs, the Dodgers accused Scott of scuffing the baseball.

"The scuff marks (on the balls) were all identical," Dodgers pitcher Rick Honeycutt said. "I don't know what grade of sandpaper he (Scott) was using, but it was a finer grade."

Dodgers Manager Tommy Lasorda didn't think it mattered if the balls were doctored.

"He pitched a heck of a game; you can't do anything about that one."

Also Wednesday, it was New York 4, Philadelphia 1; Pittsburgh 3, Chicago 1, and Atlanta 4, Cincinnati 3.

Astros 4, Dodgers 0

Scott threw a no-hitter last September in the Astros' division-clinching win. He beat the Dodgers 4-3 on opening day for his other 1987 victory.

Billy Hatcher, who's hit in all nine of the Astros' games, homered, doubled and singled to account for half the Houston runs. His solo homer in the fourth off Alejandro Pena, 0-1, gave Scott the lead. The Astros upped their record to 7-2, equalling the best starts in the club's history — in 1972 and 1980.

"I hope we keep it up and I keep it up," said Hatcher, who is hitting .472 with 17 hits in 36 at-bats. "This is the best start I've ever had, and my confidence just keeps building."

run by Candy Maldonado, the Padres continued to falter.

San Diego, 1-8, is off to the worst start in the 19-year history of the franchise. Counting spring training games, the Padres have won only once since March 27 and have lost 16 of 17 since then.

The Giants improved their record to 8-2, their best start since 1979, and moved into first place in the NL West.

Downs, 1-0, outlasted Padres starter Storm Davis, 0-1, who allowed only four hits in eight innings. Downs struck out seven and walked one.

Maldonado's homer, his first of the season, came with one out in the seventh.

Mets 4, Phillies 1

The Mets used the long ball and stingy pitching by Sid Fernandez, David Cone and Doug Sisk. Gary Carter and Darryl Strawberry hit consecutive home runs in the seventh inning off Kent Tekulve to break open a tight game. Strawberry has hit in all seven Mets games, including four home runs and 11 RBI. He's scored six runs in the last seven games.

Fernandez, 2-0, worked six innings, giving up two hits, walking five and striking out five. Rookie Cone came on in the seventh and retired Mike Schmidt and Lance Parrish on fly

Mavs Top Rockets In Texas Feud

By BILL BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

Dick Motta and Bill Fitch, the principals in one of the NBA's best feuds this season, weren't impressed. But the players and 17,007 rip-snorting fans at sold-out Reunion Arena in Dallas took the meeting between the two Texas rivals to heart.

Two players were ejected for fighting and another was hit over the eye with an elbow Wednesday night as the Mavericks defeated the Rockets 113-107 in the first game between the two teams since Motta accused Fitch and the Rockets of purposely losing to improve their playoff chances.

"I thought it was a very dull game," Motta said. "I expected some real excitement."

"There were a few short tempers out there, but it wasn't much," Fitch said. "It's an intense series. We'll try to get them back when they come to our place Friday night."

Fitch did admit that the game did have more flair than the average late-season game between teams with little to gain by winning.

"This game had enough fire and enthusiasm where the fans got their money's worth," he said.

Elsewhere, it was Washington 110, Cleveland 101; Atlanta 136, New Jersey 116; Detroit 118, New York 114; Boston 108, Indiana 85; Milwaukee 128, Philadelphia 95; San Antonio 123, Portland 112; and Phoenix 119, Golden State 116.

While the coaches took a low-key approach after the game, Mavericks guard Derek Harper, who scored a career-high 31 points in 26 minutes, said players took their cue from their coaches' feuding.

"It was a crazy game," Harper said. "The intensity came from the words the coaches exchanged."

Harper said he was sorry he didn't get involved in the fray when teammate Al Wood exchanged punches with Houston's Steve Harris in the second period, clearing both benches. Wood and Harris were ejected. "I told Al Wood he did a good job," Harper said. "I like to see that kind of stuff."

Meanwhile, Houston's Jim Petersen also missed most of the first half when he suffered a cut over his left eyebrow from a flying elbow.

Akeem Olajuwon scored 24 points and Allen Leavell 21 for the Rockets, while Mark Aguirre had 22 points and James Donaldson added 15 rebounds.

"The crowd was in the game from the beginning," Donaldson said. "They were booing the Rockets during the introductions and that started the tempour way."

Harper hit two 3-point baskets in the third period as Dallas built a 16-point lead. The Rockets whittled it down to five late in the fourth period before Harper hit two more baskets to keep the Mavericks in control.

Panama Rejects Accused War Criminal

WASHINGTON (AP) — Panamanian officials have rejected the effort to deport Karl Linnas, accused of being a Nazi war criminal, to their country.

"The government of the Republic of Panama echoes the preoccupation of important sectors of the Hebrew community and the rest of the world that, as well as our country and our government, reject and condemn the crimes committed by the fascism," Jose I. Blandon, the Panamanian consul general in New York said late Wednesday.

The arrangement that would have sent Linnas to Panama to avoid the death penalty in the Soviet Union provoked a sharp outcry from a New York prosecutor and Jewish leaders.

Brooklyn District Attorney Elizabeth Holtzman flew to Washington on Wednesday to present Panamanian Ambassador Dominador Kaiser Bazan with court documents outlining the allegations against Linnas after learning the Justice Department apparently would allow him to go to Panama.

Holtzman, who was accompanied to Washington by Eli M. Rosenbaum, general counsel of the World Jewish Congress, and Menachem Z. Rosensaft, founder of the International Network of the Children of Survivors of the Holocaust, said the Panamanians had heard only one side of the case, from Linnas' daughter, and that the court documents had "opened their eyes."

"To have Karl Linnas spend the rest of his life on a tropical beach enjoying the sunlight in some kind of paradise would be a real perversion of justice," Holtzman said.

Four sources in the Justice Department, speaking on condition that they not be identified, said Wednesday that Attorney General Edwin Meese III had decided to deport Linnas to Panama instead of the Soviet Union, where the 67-year-old Long Island, N.Y., resident has been condemned in absentia to death.

Justice Department spokesman Patrick Korten refused to confirm Meese's decision and declined to comment.

Adolfo Arrocha, minister of the Panamanian Embassy, had said earlier Wednesday his government had suspended indefinitely its original decision granting Linnas asylum.

Panamanian President Eric Arturo Delvalle, in New York on vacation, had said it was "very unlikely" asylum would be granted.

"My suspicion is that someone in the United States government put pressure on the government of Panama to accept Mr. Linnas. I don't know who that is. But, there is, I suspect, a rat in the U.S. government," said Rosenbaum, a former war crimes prosecutor with the Justice Department.

Rosensaft, a New York attorney, said, "Apparently until today no one, including no one in the Justice Department, saw fit to inform the government of Panama that the United States was about to dump a mass murderer into Panama ... The U.S. administration apparently was not straightforward with the Panamanian authorities and it is shocking that the attorney general would have been so anxious to sign the order allowing Mr. Linnas to find a safe and comfortable retirement home in Panama."

Several Justice Department sources said the department's Nazi-hunting unit, the Office of Special Investigations, opposed Meese's plan. OSI director Neal Sher was not in his office Wednesday afternoon for comment.

Ethnic organizations representing Baltic and Ukrainian empires, along with former White House communications director Patrick Buchanan, lobbied to block the deportation.

The ethnic organizations favor Nazi war crimes trials in the United States and charge that Soviet-provided evidence and videotaped testimony against Linnas was false.

Linnas, a native of Estonia, was stripped of his U.S. citizenship in 1981 after the U.S. District Court in Westbury, N.Y., found he had hidden his wartime role in Estonia when he entered the United States in 1951 and when he became a naturalized citizen in 1959.

Linnas, who has been jailed in New York since last April, was convicted in a Soviet court of supervising mass executions as the chief of a Nazi concentration camp in Tartu, Estonia, in 1941 and 1942.

The charges are "Soviet disinformation," Buchanan said Wednesday in an interview on Cable News Network. "Put this guy on trial, let him be defended by competent counsel and if he's convicted, I'll agree with the punishment. ... Don't send him over there to be lynched."

Linnas attorneys have been waging a campaign in the courts to shelve his deportation to the Soviet Union while they and the Justice Department searched for another country to accept him. On April 6, Supreme Court Justice Thurgood Marshall temporarily blocked Linnas' deportation to the Soviet Union.

Buchanan, in a February memo to Meese, said President Reagan wants Linnas tried in the United States. The White House and the Justice Department have said that Reagan, however, is leaving the decision up to Meese.

Report Cites Bias In Awarding Of Merit Scholarships

NEW YORK (AP) — Girls are not getting their fair share of National Merit Scholarships because eligibility for the prestigious awards is based on a test biased against women, according to a report released today.

Girls received only 36 percent of the scholarships, which totaled $23 million last year, even though females earn better grades on average than males in high school and college, according to the report, "Sex Bias in College Admissions Tests: Why Women Lose Out."

The report by FairTest, a Cambridge, Mass., group highly critical of standardized tests, was being released today at a news conference at which National Organization for Women president Eleanor Smeal was to endorse the findings.

Test bias "contributes to a real dollar loss for females in later life, as they get less prestigious jobs, earn less money, and have fewer leadership opportunities," said the report, adding that minority women are "doubly penalized by both the gender and class bias of these exams."

The heart of FairTest's charge is that female students are being unfairly deprived of merit scholarships, worth up to $8,000 over four years, because a high score on the Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Test (PSAT) is the sole criteria for semifinalist status in the competition.

College-bound students who score in the top 0.5 percent on the PSAT in each state automatically become merit scholar semifinalists. About 6,000 of the 15,000 students who reach that score eventually win scholarships.

The PSAT, a multiple-choice test of math and verbal ability taken annually by about 1.2 million high school juniors, is similar to the Scholastic Aptitude Test, which FairTest and others have argued is sex biased.

Boys averaged 47.2 on the math section of the PSAT and 41.6 on the verbal in 1986, while girls averaged 43.1 on the math and 40.3 on verbal, according to Fred Moreno, a spokesman for the College Board, which sponsors the exam. Both portions are scored on a scale of 20 to 80.

The report cited research suggesting that while girls tend to outperform boys academically in high school and college, they average worse than boys on multiple-choice tests because girls are more reluctant to guess at answers. Males are featured more often in test questions than females, the report said, and boys are encouraged to excel in math and science in school while girls are subtly steered into "softer" subjects like arts, humanities and writing.

Donald Stewart, president of the College Board, said in a telephone interview that he saw nothing wrong in the way the National Merit Scholarship Corp. was using the PSAT.

"In the case of the National Merit Scholarship Corp., they use the test exclusively only once, to make a reasonable cut from the 1.2 million. To use any other means, considering costs, would be just too expensive," he said.

FairTest's allegations of sexual and cultural bias in standardized tests have been gaining ground in academia.

FCC Scans Bid To Raise Line Charge

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Communications Commission is considering raising a $2 monthly line charge paid by residential telephone subscribers to as much as $3.50 over the next two years.

The first increase would add 60 cents to customers' bills on July 1, another 60 cents in December 1988 and up to 30 cents in April 1989.

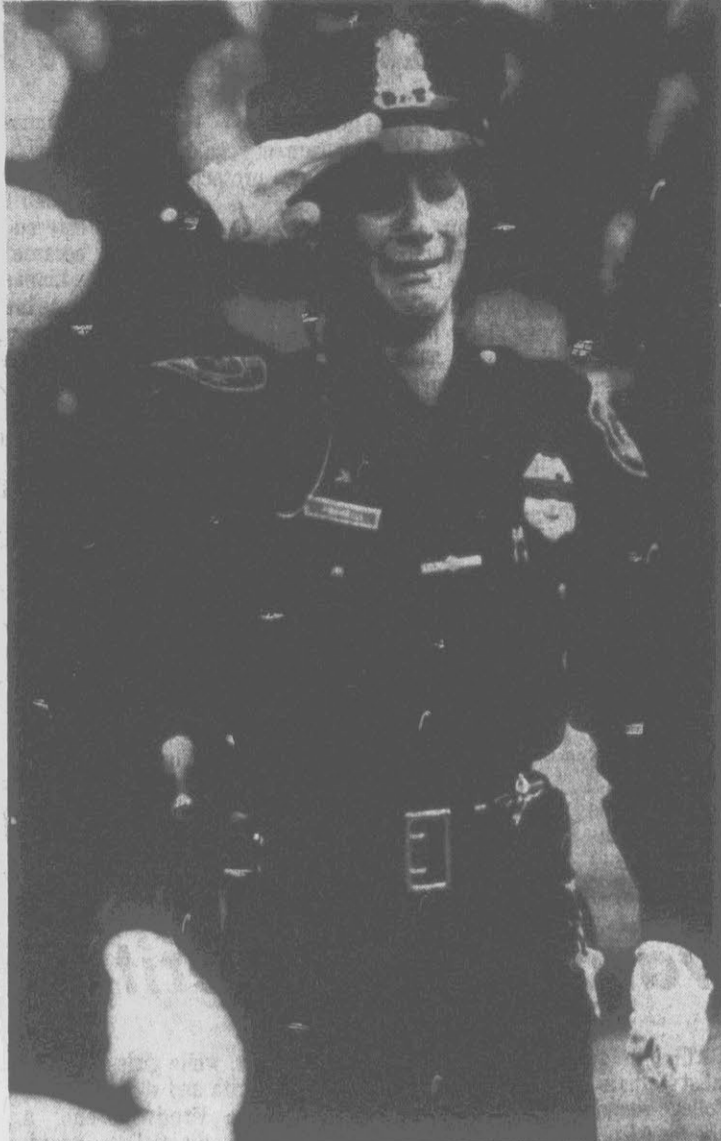

The proposal was approved last month by an advisory board of FCC members and state telephone regulators, who voted to begin the plan June 1.

FCC Chairman Mark S. Fowler today was expected to recommend delaying the first increment one month and the second until after the presidential election as a compromise with members of Congress who are skeptical of the need for the increases.

The subscriber line charge helps pay the cost of the wire that connects a customer's telephone with a phone company's central office. Part of that line cost also is buried in long-distance rates, so raising the subscribers' share reduces long-distance rates.

Since the charge was initiated at $1 in June 1985, long-distance rates have dropped about 30 percent, the FCC says.

The FCC estimates the higher charge will reduce long-distance rates by at least 15 percent over the next six years.

Prisoner Says He's Fearful Of Vigilantes

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — A man convicted of raping and cutting the forearms off a 15-year-old girl says he doesn't want to be paroled to the town of Antioch, where he fears vigilantes will kill him.

Larry Singleton, 59, also told the Oakland Tribune in an interview published today that he has been told he is going to be sent somewhere else, "but I'm not at liberty to say."

He was interviewed at the medium-security California Men's Colony in San Luis Obispo. He is due to be released April 25 and paroled to Antioch, a town of 51,000 about 40 miles east of Oakland.

The proposed parole has angered citizens in Antioch. A petition drive has gained almost 10,000 signatures against the move and a lawsuit has been filed in the case.

"They're going to shotgun me down in the square," Singleton said.

Singleton said he is writing a letter to Antioch Mayor Joel Keller saying, "I didn't ask to be paroled to your fair city of Antioch in the first place."

Corrections officials said earlier they are trying to place Singleton in the southern United States with family members, but the state involved must agree.

Parole officers said they chose Antioch for Singleton's release because convicts are released into the county of their last previous residence.

Antioch Police Chief Len Herendeen has expressed fears about vigilante action in his community, where citizens have circulated a picture of Singleton.

"A lot of threats have been made publicly and I would take them seriously," he said on Monday, the day about 200 people turned out at a police commission meeting to oppose the parole.

On Wednesday, Sacramento County Superior Court Judge Cecily Bond instructed the attorneys for the city and the state Department of Justice to submit arguments by April 23.

Singleton maintains he was innocent in the attack on Mary Vincent, now 23, who lives in a small town in the Pacific Northwest.

He was sentenced in 1979 to 14 years and four months in prison but earned an early release for good behavior and for his involvement in a work program.

Former Millionaire Now Faces Eviction From Nursing Home

DICKINSON, N.D. (AP) — A former millionaire who allegedly was bilked of her fortune by an acquaintance could be evicted from a nursing home next week because she can't pay a $30,000 bill.

Martha Saif, 85 and in a wheelchair, once owned a successful furniture store, several homes and an antique collection that filled two semitrailers, but is now penniless, her family says.

The Dickinson Nursing Center, which has cared for the widow for 16 months with only token payment from her Social Security check, says it cannot allow her to remain unless the bill is paid by Monday.

Administrator Lee Stickland said he could not keep his job at the for-profit nursing home if he allowed bills to go unpaid.

John Havlis, an attorney for Legal Assistance of North Dakota, said Wednesday he was prepared to ask a judge to block Mrs. Saif's removal from the nursing home until several lawsuits in the case could be heard.

"I have the injunction ready to go," Havlis said. "It probably won't be filed until ... the nursing home takes some sort of action regarding Martha's removal."

Mrs. Saif's guardian, attorney Diane Melbye, and the nursing home have sued James Rassmussen, who had Mrs. Saif's power of attorney, contending he persuaded her to sign over all her real estate property to him against her will.

The property transfers led authorities to declare Mrs. Saif ineligible for public assistance, based on rules that keep people from shifting money around to qualify. The denial is under appeal.

Rassmussen denies he defrauded Mrs. Saif. He said he was given the property in return for 13 years of care that Mrs. Saif's family did not provide.

"There's a lot of people who say I took good care of her," the 56-year-old Rassmussen said. "I helped her, I paid her hospital bills. ... If it wouldn't have been for me, Martha wouldn't even be alive today."

Rassmussen's attorney, Ardell Tharaldson, said even if his client were to sell off the property Mrs. Saif once controlled, it would not cover the nursing home bill.

The property transfers began in January 1982 when Mrs. Saif gave Rassmussen her home, said her brothers, Mason and Gemal Massad. A month later, she turned over her furniture store and named Rassmussen her sole heir.

The brothers sued in 1982, contending their sister was incapacitated, but a Stark County judge denied their request for a guardian for Mrs. Saif.

The lawsuit revealed that Rassmussen had been convicted of desertion from the Army, passing bad checks, gambling and theft.

At a hearing, Mrs. Saif called Rassmussen "one of the nicest persons that ever lived," and told the court her brothers were after her belongings.

An attempt to appoint a guardian four years later included allegations, made in sworn testimony, that Rassmussen was neglecting and abusing Mrs. Saif. Rassmussen denied the charges.

A judge revoked his power of attorney nonetheless and appointed Ms. Melbye legal guardian. Rassmussen countersued her.

At a medical assistance hearing last week, Mrs. Saif said she thought Rassmussen had tricked her out of her property.

Rassmussen denied that, saying: "She used to call me a dirty crook all the time when I took care of her. I never did trick Martha."

Quake Relief

NEW YORK (AP) — Church relief organizations are sending food, clothing and cash to help the thousands left homeless by a series of earthquakes in Ecuador that resulted in mudslides and floods in which many are reported dead or missing.

Catholic Relief Service said it is sending $75,000 in emergency funds for relief workers, and $104,000 worth of food.

From Memphis, the Southern Baptist Brotherhood sent a Boeing 707 loaded with food and clothing.

U.S. To Keep Sanctions On Japanese Electronics

By TOM RAUM
AP Economics Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Sanctions on selected Japanese electronics products will stay in place until the Reagan administration is satisfied that Japan is fulfilling its part of an agreement on computer chip sales, say U.S. officials.

The Cabinet-level Economic Policy Council decided against setting a specific time limit for the duties at a private session Wednesday at which a decision to move ahead on the tariffs was made, said officials who insisted upon anonymity.

One official predicted that the duties of up to 100 percent will remain in place for at least three months.

A monitoring process will be established for lifting the sanctions once the administration is satisfied that Japan is making a good-faith effort to live up to the 1986 accord, the sources said.

In Santa Barbara, Calif., White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater told reporters that he expects President Reagan to sign the proclamation formally imposing the sanctions Friday.

He said the final $300 million hit list of Japanese products still is being compiled.

"That process of winnowing down certainly will consider the impact on American consumers," he said.

An initial list of targeted items contained dozens of products ranging from Japanese-made television sets to pocket calculators and computer disks. However, the administration was in the process of narrowing that list down following two days of public hearings earlier this week.

In addition to penalizing Japanese companies, witnesses at the hearings said the sanctions would have a sharp impact on U.S. computer makers that rely heavily on Japanese components.

The Cabinet panel, headed by Treasury Secretary James Baker III, brushed aside Japanese appeals that the duties, which effectively could double the prices of some Japanese imports, are misguided and should not be imposed.

In the 1986 agreement, Japan agreed not to sell computer memory chips, also known as semiconductors, in U.S. or foreign markets at prices far below their true value, a practice called "dumping," and to give U.S. semiconductor makers more access to Japanese markets.

The United States contends Japan has violated two parts of that accord — failing to increase access to Japanese markets and continuing to "dump" chips in foreign markets where they can be purchased and resold in the United States.

Semiconductors are the tiny circuit chips that run computers and other modern electronic devices.

The Japanese government has said it would take "appropriate measures to defend its interests" should the United States go ahead with the penalties, raising the possibility of a counter-retaliation.

'HEAVEN' — Actress Diane Keaton has created a new movie titled "Heaven." It is a series of interviews with a wide variety of people talking about their concepts of Heaven. The interviews are interspersed with depictions of Heaven from film features, television shows and religious programs. (AP Laserphoto)

Actress Diane Keaton Creates Film With Religious Overtones

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — She sat in a booth of the Sunset Strip coffee shop trying to look inconspicuous in a derby hat and man's coat and pants, all black, with a high-collared white shirt with tie.

Of course it's hard for Diane Keaton to be inconspicuous anywhere.

It was mid-afternoon, and the few customers who occupied the other booths tried not to stare. Still, they couldn't help wondering: What was the reclusive Academy Award winner doing in a Sunset Strip coffee shop?

Surprisingly, she was giving an interview about her new movie — not a movie in which she appears; she never does publicity for those. The movie in question was "Heaven," which she herself created.

"Heaven" is difficult to describe. It's not a story film, nor is it a documentary. What it is is a series of interviews with a wide variety of individuals talking about their concepts of heaven. Their comments are interspersed with depictions of heaven from a wide variety of film footage, including features, television shows and religious programs.

"It was a huge undertaking," she said with a large sigh. "I spent a year in the editing room. First of all, I had to see all that footage. Religious films, films from all of the studios, everything had to be looked at. It was a big research job. I don't think I'd ever undertake another film with so much research."

"I liked it. I enjoyed looking. That was not a problem for me."

Miss Keaton had made a 17-minute film in 1982, "What Does Dorrie Want?" about her sister. She had been looking for another subject and found it while touring the visitors' center at the Mormon Temple in Salt Lake City with director Jonathan Demme ("Melvin and Howard"). They viewed a film depicting the

Mickey Rooney, Now 66, Hams It Up On Stage Circuit En Route To Broadway

By BILL KAUFMAN
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

Costumed in a bright yellow toga and looking sort of like a pounded-down version of Zero Mostel, Mickey Rooney these days is hamming it up in ancient Rome.

Rap out a few rim shots: The pudgy little trouper is back on the road again in "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum," a vaudeville-burlesque-flavored show that's overflowing with the same type of slam-bang slapstick humor offered by his last stage triumph, "Sugar Babies." (That 1979 comedy, which paired Rooney with Ann Miller, ran for three years on Broadway and then toured extensively.)

In New Haven, Conn., Rooney recently opened in a production of "Forum" that is working its way around the country through the end of the year. Producers Lee Guber and Shelly Gross hope to bring the revival to Broadway in the spring of '88.

In the bawdy farce, Rooney plays Pseudolus, a conniving slave in the employ of a lecherous Roman senator and his shrewish wife. It's a role filled with elaborate sight gags, mistaken-identity shtick, scrambles through swinging doors, cross-dressing, frantic pratfalls and vigorous song-and-dance routines that one might not associate with a senior citizen. Rooney carries on Mostel's classic interpretation of the part, drawing from a burlesque comedian's bag of tricks. You want delayed takes, double takes, slow burns? They're all there. Of course, Rooney is maybe a head and shoulders shorter than Mostel was — but girth-wise, it's another story.

Rooney, 66, whose waistline looks as if he's concealing a beach ball, seems to relish the opportunity to dash around on stage. "It's all play," he said in his dressing room an hour before the musical's New Haven premiere. "It's like a bunch of kids making believe in their backyard. I've never regarded what I have been doing out there for 64 years as work. This is a romantic business. It's the constant joy of being a child."

On a more practical level, the joy of being a child has made Rooney one of the highest-paid stage performers. His salary for "Forum" is reportedly more than $50,000 per week, and his contract stipulates that after every 10 weeks of work he gets two off. "I also never do matinees on Wednesday or work December through March," Rooney emphasized, sounding a little like a labor leader who has carved out a record settlement.

Probably the topic that provokes the most vociferous response from the balding performer is the subject of growing older. "Age is experience," said Rooney. "The goal is to inspire, not retire. That's the first step to atrophying."

This gives him a perfect segue into a pitch about one of his pet projects, Fun Time Family. According to Rooney, the West Coast-based organization he founded offers a variety of services for those over 50 years old, ranging from insurance and health plans to a philosophy of life. However, Rooney bristles when anyone uses the word "organization" to describe the paid-membership service. "It's a family, not an organization! It's a family!" Rooney kept repeating to an interviewer who was unable to stop saying the offending word.

The Brooklyn-born actor, son of vaudevillians Joe Yule and Nell Carter, made his stage debut when he was 2 years old, crawling out during their performance. Soon they put the toddler into their act. Since that literally creepy beginning, he has made dozens of memorable films and received four Academy Award nominations, the most recent for "The Black Stallion" in 1979. Rooney got an Emmy in 1982 for his work in "Bill," a TV movie that focused on the problems of the mentally retarded.

The actor, of course, was one of the major movie stars during Hollywood's Golden Age. In 1938, he was given a special Academy Award for his roles in the two "Boys Town" films, and as Andy Hardy in the popular series of movies about a small-town family. The following year, Rooney was nominated for an Oscar for his work in "Babes in Arms," the first time a juvenile had competed against adult stars for the honor. Among some of his more memorable movies are "Babes on Broadway" with Judy Garland and "The Human Comedy."

Rooney said that lately he has been turning more and more to writing. Among his projects are three screenplays he has just finished: "The Picture That Nobody Should See," "Introducing Sussie" and "Systems." He also has come up with a concept for a TV sitcom about a showbiz family, "Shuffle Off to Buffalo," which Rooney said will be turned into a pilot soon. "Writing is a craft I always enjoyed and had a certain degree of success in. I've had several songs and a symphony published, so this is a logical step," he said.

The performer's personal life has always been controversial — especially his eight marriages, a high figure even by Hollywood standards. He's now married to Jan Chamberlain, a singer-songwriter. Rooney's other wives included Ava Gardner, whom he married in 1942 (MGM sent a press agent along on the honeymoon), Betty Jane Rase ("Miss Birmingham of 1944") and actress Martha Vickers. His marriages produced seven sons and six daughters.

He also has three grandchildren. "The oldest is now 18," said Rooney with an unmistakable touch of pride. As one might expect, he sums it all up with a wink and some self-directed humor. In his official biography for "Forum," under the section that lists his height as 5 feet 3, it reads: "I was 6-4 when I married Ava Gardner." As to his marital status, the bio says, "What time is it?"

Bill Moyers' 10-Part Look At Constitution To Open

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Bill Moyers' search for the Constitution boasts no special effects, no flashy video segments. It requires thought and attention.

The reward to the viewer is a stirring story of a frail document and the remarkable men who created it through wit and compromise and intellect, and almost entirely by chance.

The first installment of his 10-part series, "In Search of the Constitution," begins appropriately with "In the Beginning" tonight on PBS, in which Moyers sits down with a series of three historians at Independence Hall in Philadelphia.

"They really knew how to play the game," said one of the historians, Forrest McDonald of the University of Alabama. "They could have shown these guys in Washington a thing or two."

Moyers rarely interjects, except to exclaim or emphasize.

"I do long conversations, and I use the term conversations, because they're different from interviews where you're trying to get the person to respond to specific questions with specific ideas previously known," Moyers said recently. "A conversation is like you and I sitting here now, and you're just going along unexpectedly and unpredictably, so that you can actually see a person's mind working."

"To me the best production value is a face and a mind that has something of value to say."

McDonald notes that one man might have been responsible for producing the constitutional convention, at the time a subject of public apathy.

Henry Knox, then superintendent of war and an "ardent nationalist," described a farmers' tax rebellion in Massachusetts with such embellishment in a letter to George Washington that when Washington retold the story, fears of anarchy replaced indifference.

If the convention had been delayed another year, McDonald suggests, America might have been split by conflicting loyalties in the French Revolution and never have repaired the damage.

McDonald begins the hour by humanizing the men who had met in the room only 200 years before.

In the 18th century "it was the norm in America to be fat," he notes. John Adams weighed more than 275 pounds and was only 5-foot-6.

"You put that many, that obese people in a room this size with the doors shut, with the windows shut, in hot summer. They were pouring sweat," McDonald says.

Olive Taylor of Howard University says she learned as an adult what she did not know as a child, that "We the People ..." did not include her, because she is black.

She remembers how impressed she was as a child at the thought of "founding fathers," but as an adult, "I often wondered, having grown up black, if they had the same fatherly attention for me that they did for the rest of America."

Michael Kammen of Cornell University talks about the early life of the document and how it was taken for granted. It, along with the Declaration of Independence, were actually stored for a time in an of phanage.

Ralph Edwards Revives 'Your Life' For NBC Television Special Sunday

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Once, it was the most familiar of television sights — Ralph Edwards, a huge book tucked under one arm, with microphone in hand, surprising someone by announcing, "This Is Your Life!"

From its inception as a segment of "Truth or Consequences" on radio in 1946 to its final TV appearance in 1984, Edwards caught 505 people off guard for a presentation of their life story.

"This Is Your Life" ran for nine years on NBC. It was revived in syndication in 1971 with Edwards as the host and again in 1983 with Joe Campanella. Edwards and David Frost also did an NBC special in 1981. Ronald Reagan served as host for two weeks while Edwards was in the hospital.

Now, a youthful-looking Edwards is back for another special this Sunday on NBC.

Who is in the biographical book Edwards carries under his arm? "I can't say," Edwards said, "but we taped a half-hour each on two stars, one a man and one a woman. That's all I can say. We surprised them."

"It's always a surprise to our guests. If they found out in advance, we'd ditch the show. The only time the guest ever knew was when Gloria Swanson called one night and said she knew. I was treading water. I said I didn't know what she was talking about, but she'd learned it from her sister. I said we would go ahead with it."

Among the people he has caught unaware have been Marilyn Monroe, Stan Laurel, Bob Hope, Andy Griffith, Lillian Roth, Frances Farmer, Barbara Eden, Bette Davis, Shirley Jones, Jayne Mansfield and Carol Channing.

"At least half of our guests were ordinary people," said Edwards. "In the beginning we didn't use celebrities at all. But when we did, I think it humanized the stars and gave them more appeal. That was the key that got it rolling.

"I think the appeal of the show is the self-identification. It gave the audience an opportunity to applaud the 'little person' and have the viewer recognize in that person some of their own qualities. Of course, there was also the showmanship and the surprise."

In 1950, Edwards got the town of Hot Springs, N.M., to change its name to Truth or Consequences, the name of the show that gave "This Is Your Life" its start on radio.

"We wanted to do something for our wounded veterans coming back from the war and we picked a patient in a Veterans Hospital," said Edwards. "He was paralyzed from the waist down. His name was Lawrence Trantor and he was from Murray, Utah. We brought in people from his hometown. As a prize we sent him to the Bulova School of Watchmaking for a year and set him up in a jewelry store."

"We brought him back two years later and when he walked on his own to get the key to the jewelry store the audience stood up and applauded so much I knew we had the makings of a (television) show."

Edwards said he and his staff used all kinds of subterfuge to surprise guests. They once went to Brazil to get Mary Martin on her ranch there.

"Charlie Ruggles was the first person we did when we went to tape our last year on NBC," he said. "I walked up to his front door, and he answered it and said, 'Hello, Ralph, I was wondering when you could come for me.' To get Tennessee Ernie Ford we just walked from our studio across the hall to where he was doing his show."

"Billie Burke saw us and ran down the hallway. We had to bring her back. Nat King Cole ran off, too. It was tomfoolery. Milton Berle kept hitting Dean Martin and Jerry Lewis with his napkin. We caught him at the Brown Derby."

The most difficult guest, Edwards said, was probably Lowell Thomas, who was on Sept. 30, 1959. "He saw instantly what was going on and nobody puts anything over on Lowell Thomas," said Edwards. "He tore the show apart. I said, 'You're going to enjoy this,' and he said, 'I doubt that very much.' The New York Times did a front page story about it."

Graham Debut
NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Former CBS newsman Fred Graham made his debut on WKRN-TV's evening newscast with an interview of White House Chief of Staff Howard Baker.

"It's my way of starting out with a bang," Graham, who was released by CBS in cutbacks in the news division, said before the broadcast.

Bernstein Will Open Carnegie Season

NEW YORK (AP) — Leonard Bernstein is to conduct the Vienna Philharmonic on Sept. 24 to open the season at Carnegie Hall.

More than 30 orchestras will appear during the season, General Manager Judith Arron told a news conference Wednesday, and a two-hour special of last December's reopening, after a seven-month restoration, will be shown on CBS-TV on April 21.

The Carnegie Hall Corporation will present 154 events during the season, which includes Esa-Pekka Salonen's Carnegie debut conducting the Swedish Radio Orchestra. The Leningrad State Symphony also is scheduled; German baritone Dietrich Fischer-Dieskau will make his first Carnegie Hall appearance since 1980; and the Atlanta Symphony will perform choral works.

Marvelous Mayans

Mexico and Guatemala may build a series of dams that could flood two ancient Mayan cities. The Mayans built several cities in Central America between 200 A.D. and 900 A.D. Their great engineering skills enabled them to build massive stone temples without the use of wheels or metal tools. The Mayans were also expert astronomers and mathematicians. They forecast solar eclipses and calculated the path of Venus to within an error of only 14 seconds a year!

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY April 17

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Look into the principles of whatever new line of activity concerns you. Avoid anything of a confusing nature. New influential persons can aid you now.
ARIES (March 21 to April 19): You have fine ideas of an intimate nature, but don't let them interfere with outside practical interests.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Try a new approach at a wish and it can soon be yours. A close friend can be of help to you.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Steer clear of a person in business who is too greedy. Join with influential persons you know and trust.
MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): You can make your daily activities more profitable now, but don't be conned by a stranger.
LEO (July 22 to August 21): Today you can enjoy recreations. Be very romantic with your mate tonight and be happier together.
VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Do whatever will bring more harmony at home. Steer clear of a fellow worker who likes to quarrel.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): You can run around and make new contacts of worth. Sitting at home will get you absolutely nowhere.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): It's a good day to get into whatever activity you feel can bring you a greater income. Visit friends and neighbors.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Your judgment is good now since you can view everything most clearly. Avoid one who is greedy.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Study your private wishes and know how to gain them. Adopt a new attitude and get good results.
AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): It's an ideal day to contact the most prominent persons you know and state your desires.
PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Contact those who can assist you in gaining your worldly ambitions. Handle credit and career matters.
IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will have every ability at judging wisely, planning travels, getting along well with influential people, etc. The greatest success is apt to come far away from the place of birth. Give an extensive education, especially where modern aspects are concerned.

 We are sad to learn of the sudden death of our good friend, C.C. Wei.

While he was well known as the originator of the Precision System, about which we were among the first to write, we admired him even more for the effort he put into developing bridge players. It says much for the training methods he advocated that many of his proteges became world-class players.

In the early 1970s, Wei's team of young bridge stars burst upon the bridge scene and won several national team titles back-to-back. This hand is from the final of the 1971 Spingold Team Championship, in which the Precision team faced a squad of veteran internationalists.

In both rooms the final contract was four spades. The team of internationalists reached the game on the revealing auction shown, and West got off to the excellent lead of a trump. Declarer won in dummy, club on this trick, West cashed his ace of clubs and continued with a club for East to ruff. But that was the third and last trick for the defense.

The Precision team gained 12 International Match Points on the hand. That was 5 IMPs more than their total winning margin.
