Reagan To Seek Input From Allies

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan is talking hopefully of a U.S.-Soviet arms control accord by year's end, while pledging no hasty decisions on a Kremlin proposal to eliminate all short- and medium-range nuclear missiles from Europe.

Reagan, after getting a 75-minute briefing from Secretary of State George P. Shultz at his mountaintop ranch near here, said "We've narrowed the gaps a little more" on medium-range weapons.

"I remain optimistic about an agreement this year," said Reagan, standing outside his adobe-style "Rancho del Cielo" with Shultz, who had just returned from a meeting with Soviet leaders in Moscow. The president said he's optimistic that he and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev "can complete an historic agreement on East-West relations at a summit meeting."

Neither Reagan nor Shultz would respond in detail to reporters' questions about whether America's NATO allies would be upset over an accord that essentially rids Europe of missiles.

Shultz, however, did say, "I don't think that at all. ... The opportunities before us ... are all very positive."

And Reagan promised to "consult personally with our NATO allies on further negotiations and plans."

The Soviet proposal made to Shultz in Moscow would mean the elimination of about 130 short-range Soviet missiles in East Germany and Czechoslovakia, in addition to getting rid of all U.S. and Soviet medium-range missiles in Europe.

Gorbachev offered to include those weapons, which have a firing range of 350 to 600 miles, in a treaty to scrap medium-range missiles except for 100 warheads that would be left in Soviet Asia and in the United States.

The allies fear that elimination of these weapons would leave them vulnerable to the Soviet Union's super-

Sri Lanka Attacks Kill 107

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — Tamil militants attacked three buses and two trucks with machine guns and grenades today, dragging out passengers and killing 107 people, including women and children, the government announced.

Tilak Ratanakara, chairman of the government Media Center, said it was believed most of the victims were Sinhalese, the majority on the island.

Other officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the Sinhalese were segregated from the Tamils and Moslems and shot.

Ratanakara said many Tamil guerrillas stopped the three buses and two trucks on a jungle road near Aluth-Oya Village, 115 miles northeast of Colombo, the capital. Women and children were among the dead, he said.

The army was called out to protect villagers and retrieve bodies in the area, Ratanakara said.

Most of the victims had been headed home to Colombo from villages in the Trincomalee district after Tuesday's New Year celebrations with their relatives, Ratanakara said. The New Year holiday, which marks Buddha's birth, is celebrated both by Tamils and Sinhalese.

The government had announced a 10-day cease-fire for the New Year and said its forces would not attack Tamil militants on land or by air. Tamil groups agreed to go along if soldiers did not attack, but both sides allege violations.

Tamils, who are mostly Hindu, allege discrimination in jobs, education and use of their Tamil language by the majority Buddhist Sinhalese in this island nation formerly known as Ceylon.

Mount Etna Erupts

CATANIA, Sicily (AP) — Gas and hot rocks spewed today from Mount Etna, Europe's tallest and most active volcano, killing a 9-year-old boy and a woman when it showered a group of French and Italian tourists, officials said.

Three other people were reported injured in the explosion.

A police official in Catania, who declined to give his name, said rescue workers identified the dead boy as French and the woman as his mother. Earlier, officials in Catania said the boy was Italian.

The Civil Defense Ministry in Rome confirmed the two deaths and said the victims were Italian.

Officials said about 25 people were on a guided tour of the volcano when the gas and hot volcanic rocks shot from a crater.

Renato Cristofolini, a volcanologist in Catania who monitors Etna's activity, said there had been other explosions in the same area in recent weeks. "Tourists are warned not to go near the craters," he said.

The explosion occurred 9,900 feet above the ground on the southeastern slope of the volcano, officials said. The area is nearly at the summit of Mount Etna.

Mount Etna is one of Sicily's main tourist attractions.

U.S. Setting Steep Tariffs

Japan Rules Out Trade Concessions To Halt Bans

TOKYO (AP) — Japan will not make major trade concessions to persuade the United States to lift sanctions against Japanese industry, a special envoy for Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone said today.

But former Foreign Minister Shintaro Abe, who will go to Washington Sunday as Nakasone's representative, said he would offer "concrete measures" aimed at easing growing trade tensions between Japan and the United States.

The Reagan administration is expected to announce today $300 million worth of punitive tariffs on an array of Japanese electronic products. The sanctions are in retaliation for what Washington contends is Japanese "dumping" of semiconductors, or computer chips, in overseas markets.

Dumping is the selling of a product at a price below its production cost in an effort to open or expand markets.

Japan denies the charge.

The United States has announced a list of items possibly subject to tariffs of up to 100 percent. They include computers, disk drives, television sets, pocket calculators, radio-tape players, communications satellites, surveying equipment and photographic film.

Abe told a news conference Japan will not try to have the sanctions removed by striking deals with the United States on several key issues in U.S.-Japan trade relations — supercomputers, telecommunications, construction and agriculture.

"We are not at all thinking of making a concession here and there in exchange for lifting the sanctions," he said.

He said he was confident the measures he plans to propose to U.S. officials for expanding domestic demand and boosting imports in Japan would help ease tensions.

The United States wants to see a decrease in its trade deficit with Japan, which last year hit $58.6 billion, according to U.S. figures.

He said the measures would have "considerable punch," but declined to reveal specifics.

Abe said the primary purpose of his trip is to pave the way for Nakasone's planned visit later this month and to "make sure U.S.-Japan relations are not undermined by the very severe situation."

"Retaliation is no way to reach a solution, nor is protectionism. We should search for solutions through calm, dispassionate discussion," he said.

Abe, currently chairman of the Executive Council of the governing Liberal Democratic Party, is regarded as one of three possible successors to Nakasone, who is to step down in October. Abe was foreign minister for four years beginning in 1982.

Tamotsu Harada, spokesman for the Electronic Industries Association of Japan, said today, "We hope that President Reagan will cancel the sanctions, but I think there is only a 1 percent possibility of his doing so."

"If there are sanctions, we will appeal to the United States to rescind the decision immediately after the tariffs are announced," Harada said.

He said he could not predict how the sanctions would affect Japanese industries without knowing what products Washington has selected for tariffs.

Officer Charged

A Winterville police officer has been charged with filing a false police report in connection with the shooting of a department cruiser while on patrol at A.G. Cox School early Wednesday, authorities say.

SBI Agent Jim Wilson said Officer Donald D. Resner was also charged Thursday with damage to real property and damage to personal property in connection with the incident.

A first appearance hearing for Resner, who was placed under $600 bond, has been set for April 30.

A spokesman with the Winterville

Police Department said Resner has been suspended from the force without pay.

Police Chief R.J. Terrel said Resner reported that the vehicle and property at the school, located at the corner of Church Street and Sylvania Drive, were hit by gunfire at 2:50 a.m. Wednesday when two unidentified persons opened fire with what appeared to be a handgun and shotgun. He said the officer reported that he returned fire.

Terrel said no one was injured in the incident.

A memorial endowment honoring former Pitt Community College President William E. Fulford Jr. has been established by his family at PCC.

In ceremonies Thursday afternoon, the William E. Fulford Sr. family donated $2,500 to begin the endowment fund for the William E. Fulford Jr. Memorial Scholarship. Family members participating in the ceremony were Fulford's mother, Mrs. W.E. Fulford Sr., and his brother, Bobby Fulford, both of Farmville.

The annual scholarship of $250 will be given to a PCC student "to reward and encourage academic excellence."

PCC President Charles E. Russell said, "Establishment of this scholarship program by the William E. Fulford Sr. family is a very appropriate way of honoring the many contributions of Dr. William E. Fulford Jr. to Pitt Community College and Pitt County."

"His leadership, dedication and service to vocational, technical and college transfer education for the students, faculty and staff of PCC, and for the citizens, business and industries of Pitt County contributed significantly to the rapid growth and development of this college during his 20 plus years as president of PCC," Russell said. "The board, faculty and staff are grateful to the William E. Fulford Sr. family for their generosity and support of this college and its students."

Fulford became PCC president in 1964 and served in that capacity until his death in 1984.

A resident of Farmville most of his life, he received a bachelor's degree from North Carolina State University, a master's degree from East Carolina University and a doctoral degree in administration from Duke University.

Fulford was vocational agriculture teacher at South Edgecombe High School from 1955 until 1962, when he joined Pitt Technical Institute as associate director.

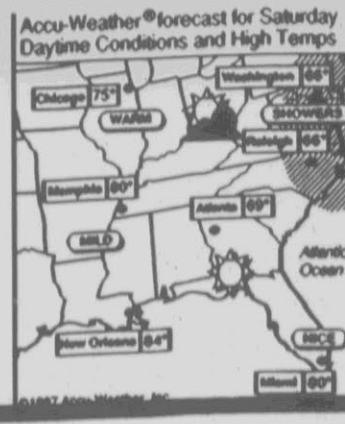

His memberships included the American Vocational Association, the American Educational Research Association, the American Council on Basic Education, the Pitt County Advisory Council on Mental Health, the Advisory Committee of the Sheltered Workshop, the Pitt County School Consolidation Advisory Committee and the N.C. Educational Association. He held honorary memberships in Phi Delta Kappa, Kappa Delta Phi and Epsilon Phi Tau.

Fulford served on the board of directors of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce and was chairman of the board of the Alcohol Corporation of America.

To be eligible for the William E. Fulford Jr. Memorial Scholarship, applicants must be current PCC students, have completed at least three quarters of college work at PCC and plan to pursue the completion of a two-year technical or college transfer program.

The two trucks collided on the left shoulder of the highway, Mumford said, causing the pickup truck to go out of control and overturn.

Mumford said Lyon was dead on arrival at Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Teel was wearing a seat belt at the time of the collision, Mumford said, but Lyon did not have his seat belt fastened.

Senate Panel Kills Farmworkers' Bill

RALEIGH (AP) — While a Senate subcommittee worked on a bill to make wide-ranging changes in workers' compensation, its parent committee had little trouble deciding to kill an effort to extend benefits to farmworkers.

The Manufacturing and Labor Committee's quick action on the bill drew criticism from Bill Stephenson, a member of the state Industrial Commission, who said supporters had little opportunity to comment on the proposal when it was before a subcommittee.

"I didn't even know they were meeting," he said. "I would have liked at least for them to have heard from some of the people that represent migrant farmworkers in the state."

Stephenson said the subcommittee heard only from the North Carolina Farm Bureau and the North Carolina Grange in making its decision.

Hart Says Funds' Seizure 'Politically Motivated'

By DOUG WILLIS
Associated Press Writer
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Gary Hart says he is not embarrassed by U.S. marshals' seizure of nearly $30,000 in contributions at this week's Hollywood fund-raiser, but the Democratic front-runner suggested the legal maneuver related to his 1984 campaign debt may have been politically motivated.

Hart campaign officials said Thursday they expect the money to be returned to the 1988 campaign committee soon, since federal law does not allow contributions to the 1988 campaign to be used to pay off the 1984 debt.

"They have a judgment against 'Americans With Hart' (the 1984 campaign committee). What they did was try to seize the assets of 'Friends of Gary Hart, 1988.' It would be as if you had a judgment against GM and tried to seize Ford's assets. They're different entities," said deputy campaign manager John Emerson.

Lawyers for the 1984 Hart campaign and the advertising agency seeking payment for a 1984 debt were negotiating over return of the money.

At the Hollywood fund-raiser on Wednesday, a pair of U.S. marshals and a lawyer seized what officials said was $28,000 to $29,000 in receipts to satisfy in part a judgment handed down in federal court in Washington, D.C. A California advertising agency, Semper-Moser Associates, sought the judgment to collect the $105,412 still listed as owed in Hart's 1984 campaign committee filings with the federal election commission.

Court papers in Washington put the debt at $162,754, including interest since March 1984, when the agency produced and placed commercials for Hart.

Talking with reporters in San Francisco late Thursday, Hart both joked about the incident at the fund-raiser and suggested that sinister motives might be behind the action.

Hart variously described the seizure of the fund-raiser receipts as a misunderstanding or an illegal act, and at one point invited speculation about political motives, saying it "raises questions about why this is being done."

But Hart refused to make any specific allegations and denied it was embarrassing. "We've settled $3.5 million in debts

(out of $4.7 million left over from 1984) in less than three years. I'm not embarrassed. I'm proud," he said. "I'll pay my debts. That's the way I was raised. That's what I believe."

James Turner, the agency's attorney in Washington, denied there was any political motivation.

"That's just bizarre. Gary's just got to stop saying things like that," Turner said, adding that he personally did volunteer work for Hart in 1984. "The notion that there is anything political about this is just crazy."

It's just a debt collection matter, not a political one, said Betsy Lehrfeld, another Washington attorney for the agency.

"They've been stiffing our client for three years," she said.

The former Colorado senator joked about the matter.

"I think it would be better to elect a president with a demonstrated ability to retire debts, rather than a demonstrated ability to run them up," Hart said.

He added that he saw nothing wrong with paying less than 100 percent if both parties agree, saying that is "a sound business practice" and is what all other campaigns do.

"I don't want to be held to any higher standard or any lower standard than other campaigns," he said.

But he added that didn't necessarily mean he would pay the full amount, but that he intends "to satisfy our obligations, either through 100 percent (payment) or negotiated settlements."

He promised to pay off or settle all the remaining debts before the 1988 primary and caucus season begins in February next year.

Hart campaign manager William Dixon said he was offended that the lawyer for the advertising agency "misrepresented" the situation to federal marshals. But he admitted that the seizure of the money was not expected.

"They kind of surprised us," Dixon said.

Defendants Make Haste To Get 'Lenient' Judge

By JOHN M. DOYLE
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — When a federal judge with a reputation for leniency handles arraignments, defense attorneys call it the window of opportunity. Those working to shut the window call it judge shopping.

There were 67 defendants in 49 cases, including insider trading and narcotics trafficking, on Judge Morris E. Lasker's calendar Thursday in U.S. District Court in Manhattan. By the end of the day, about 20 had pleaded guilty and nine more were slated to do so today.

"I wish I'd had a case down there," Thomas Fitzpatrick, a defense attorney, said when told Lasker was handling arraignments Thursday.

Last week, Judge Thomas P. Griesa, who has a tougher reputation, was handling arraignments. Only one of the 50 defendants on the calendar pleaded guilty.

Every Thursday at the courthouse, people indicted the previous week appear for arraignment, the procedure in which a defendant enters a plea.

Each judge handles arraignments for two-week periods. The Southern District of New York has an unusual rule specifying that the judges who preside over defendants' arraignments will also sentence them.

Defendants who don't plead guilty take the chance of getting a tougher judge when their case is randomly assigned to one of the 30 or more judges who try cases.

Recent news reports that the rules may be changed later this year had courthouse observers predicting a mad rush to plead guilty Thursday before Lasker.

In fact, about 15 defendants who had been arrested but not yet indicted pleaded guilty before Lasker in their first court appearance, triple the usual number, according to court clerk Ronald Sulyma, who called the large number of guilty pleas "most certainly" unusual. Defense lawyers are split on the merits of the window of opportunity.

"I think it was a good procedure to have," said Fitzpatrick, a former federal prosecutor. "It generated pleas that might not have been obtained otherwise. It clears the docket and prosecutors can go on to other cases."

Milton Gould, a partner in the law firm of Shea & Gould, said it was to his advantage to keep the present system but a change was needed "to avoid the erosion of public confidence." He said the public perception that lawyers are "playing games with the system causes distrust."

Lasker has refused in the past to talk about descriptions of him as lenient. Efforts to reach him today were unsuccessful because he was on the bench and unavailable for comment.

The arraignment procedure in the federal district that covers Manhattan, the Bronx and six counties north of New York City is also unusual in having one judge handle all incoming cases at the arraignment stage.

But the percentage of criminal cases disposed of through guilty pleas in the district is about the same as the national rate, which was 71 percent in 1985-86, according to statistics compiled by the Administrative Office of U.S. Courts.

Charles L. Brieant, the district's chief judge, recently ordered a study of the pleading procedures. The court's judges are expected to consider that report April 30 and possibly vote to change the way arraignments are handled. One possible change could randomly assign a judge to a case after an indictment is handed up.

Regan Says He Learned Of His Ouster From TV

By FRANK CLIFFORD
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

LOS ANGELES — "It only hurts when you think about it," Donald T. Regan told a Los Angeles audience Thursday during a brief, sardonic reminiscence of the moment less than two months ago when he learned he was being replaced as White House chief of staff.

Making his second public appearance since he left the White House, Regan sounded characteristically blunt and bullish as he talked about politics and the economy and emphasized his belief that President Reagan was not aware of any illegal activity related to the Iran-contra affair.

As he talked about the economy, Regan, who was a top Wall Street executive for many years, said he thinks the best answer to the current rash of insider trading violations is a dose of jail time for the guilty parties.

"I must hasten to add that I condemn these recent practices on Wall Street," he said. "My antidote for that, incidentally, is a little Draconian. But it goes along with my whole temperament.... If those people actually went to jail for two or three years, it would be the greatest antidote and it would stop others from the same practice."

Regan spoke at a downtown hotel to an audience composed largely of businessmen. A spokeswoman for Loyola Marymount University, the sponsor of the appearance, said Regan was paid $20,000. He reportedly received the same amount the day before in Denver for giving the same speech.

Regan offered no new disclosures on the still unraveling scandal that led to his abrupt departure from government. But he did provide some details of the circumstances under which he left the White House.

Regan, when he announced that former Sen. Howard H. Baker would be the new chief of staff, said that Regan had told him a week earlier that he would like to return to private life.

Regan, however, gave the impression Thursday that he first learned he was being replaced when Baker's appointment was reported on a television newscast.

He said he was in his office when national security adviser Frank Carlucci walked in and said, according to Regan: "Don, I just saw on television that Howard Baker has just been named the new chief of staff. What the hell is that all about?"

Regan said he turned on the television "and there it was. So I dashed off a fairly terse resignation, picked up my briefcase, stuffed it full of a few personal papers and left. That was it."

On the economy, Regan said "there will be another recession" but not for a while. "I believe this recovery has a lot further to go if we take some reasonable steps."

Responsibility for those steps, he said, will fall heavily on his old nemesis, Congress, and its willingness to control spending.

"Irresponsible action by the Congress in either the budget or trade areas could be economically devastating."

One reform he recommended was limiting Congress' power over the budget to what the British Parliament has.

"In Parliament, when the budget is written, the chief finance minister takes (it) in and it's there for perhaps a period of a month. And there are hearings on it for one month only. And then it's an up-or-down vote."

No Belts

SHELBY, N.C. (AP) — The head of public school bus operations in North Carolina said Thursday there was not enough evidence to justify equipping school buses with seat belts.

Norfleet Gardner, director of the transportation division of the Department of Public Instruction, said a pilot study on seat belt usage on buses did not show enough benefits to justify the costs.

The study was begun a year ago and involved two buses in the Cleveland County school system and two buses in the Wake County school system.

Congress May Act To Block Phone Rate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Members of Congress say they may seek legislation to block a $1.50 boost in the cost of basic telephone service unless they are satisfied the increase is needed.

Rep. Edward J. Markey, D-Mass., chairman of the House telecommunications subcommittee, said Thursday he remains unconvinced the increase is needed and will seek legislation to block it unless the Federal Communications Commission satisfactorily justifies its case to raise the cost of connecting customers with their local telephone companies.

His remarks followed FCC action

Thursday to increase to $3.50 over the next two years the $2 monthly charge that helps pay the cost of connecting a subscriber to the local telephone office.

The FCC action, on a 5-0 vote, would further reduce long-distance rates and discourage large business users from abandoning the public telephone network.

The first increment will add 60 cents to customers' bills on July 1, an additional 60 cents in December 1988 and as much as 30 cents in April 1989. The FCC will evaluate the amount of the final increase when the time comes.

Editorials

Keep Service

The suggestion that the Greenville City Council eliminate residential garbage pickup fees is sound, but terminating service to businesses is rubbish.

That proposal, which originated from the Mayor's Ad Hoc Budget Advisory Committee, should be thrown in the trash, and the city should cease all user fees for refuse collection.

Garbage collection is a basic service, paid for when individuals and businesses pay their taxes. It should be provided by the municipality without a user fee and the City Council should resume this fundamental public service.

Besides, dropping trash pickup for businesses represents a reduction of services by the city — a move that should be precipitated only in a crisis situation. The city has shown no evidence that this measure is a financial necessity and if it were, garbage collection is the last area cutbacks should be implemented.

Garbage collection for homes and businesses is a public health issue that should be handled by public collection to ensure sanitation codes are met. It is at the heart of the concept of city-offered services — if taxes don't pay for garbage pickup, what do they fund?

The argument that private trash collection would cost about the same for businesses as the city's current fee is not sound, since private collectors charge each time they empty a refuse container. Some types of businesses could simply obtain larger trash containers and have them emptied less frequently to save money.

Establishments with perishable refuse, however, such as restaurants, must have constant refuse pickup. Public sanitation codes and common sense dictate those types of businesses dispose of garbage frequently to guard against disease, insects and rodent problems. Frequent collection is an expensive proposition; therefore, the proposal to end commercial collection clearly would put an unnecessary burden on certain types of businesses.

In addition, some businesses may not have room to place a large trash container. Space restrictions — in the downtown area, for example — dictate that many establishments use as small a trash receptacle as possible.

Garbage fees are not a correct approach to refuse collection. Like fire and police protection, trash pickup is an indispensable public health service which benefits the entire community.

These fees should be completely eliminated and service to the business community should not be interrupted.

Drive Must Succeed

The drive for funds to construct a new high school athletic complex is on track again with the naming of W. M. "Booger" Scales as its chairman.

Scales succeeds the late Dr. Ray D. Minges who died before the campaign he was to head could be launched.

Scales is the champion of fund raisers and headed the original drive to provide funding for construction of Ficklen Stadium. He accepted this new assignment, he says, "out of love and respect for Ray Minges and our lifelong friendship."

It is an effort which is bound to succeed. Both Scales and Dr. Minges devoted many hours and days to projects which have made our community a far better place in which to live. Now with Scales heading the drive and as a tribute to Dr. Minges, how could we fail?

There are few projects which deserve success more. Rose High School has played its home games in Ficklen Stadium, a situation which has become more difficult as the East Carolina University football program has grown.

Now it is time for Rose, and a future high school in the Greenville area, to have a football stadium it can call its own and it will be up to the people of the Greenville area to provide it through donations.

Eventually it is expected the football field will serve two high schools in the Greenville area. Other facilities, such as track, will be available for county wide athletic activities. The athletic complex could become a much-enjoyed area.

Certainly Rose should not have spend its future football seasons looking for a place to play its home games. Now we have the opportunity to build a facility which will end the weekly guessing game of where Rose High will play. By all means let's do it.

Religious Right Fears Yuppie Takeover

WASHINGTON (AP) — On the religious right, where political influence has grown for a decade, there now are fears of a yuppie takeover of the Republican Party and talk of an alliance with blacks.

As the battle shapes up for control of the GOP in the post-Reagan era, maintaining influence in party councils looks less certain for the religious right compared with the heady times during the first six years of Reagan's presidency when fundamentalist ministers exulted over the presence of a kindred spirit in the White House.

They had become a force in the Republican Party — their opposition to abortion and the Equal Rights Amendment became part of the GOP platform. But now, according to conservative activist Gary Jarmin, there is a "yuppie strategy" being pursued by some Republican strategists who want to play down the religious right's social agenda and concentrate on conservative economic proposals.

"They are leading the party astray," he said of such strategists, implying they were in the camp of such presidential aspirants as Vice President George Bush and Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas.

"If Bush wins the nomination, I guarantee you most conservatives are going to walk," Jarmin said over breakfast this week with a reporter and the Rev. Robert Grant, chairman of Christian Voice.

'As the battle shapes up for control of the GOP in the post-Reagan era, maintaining influence in party councils looks less certain for the religious right compared with the heady times during the first six years of Reagan's presidency ...'

But where to? A third party? "Down the track maybe," Grant said.

"The Republican Party is elitist," Jarmin said.

Grant's organization puts out a "Biblical Scorecard" on what it calls "the family-moral-freedom issues." Those issues include not only abortion and school prayer, but also support for increased defense spending, "Star Wars," and aid to anti-communist insurgents in Nicaragua, Afghanistan, Angola and elsewhere.

Led by politically active television ministers such as Jerry Falwell and Pat Robertson, the religious right captured public attention in the late 1970s by mobilizing their followers and claiming to bring millions of new voters to the polls in support of conservative causes and candidates.

Robertson is aspiring to the 1988 Republican presidential nomination, an effort not universally cheered by his fellow evangelists. Falwell, who is supporting Bush, has expressed misgivings about the Robertson campaign, calling it "a very precarious undertaking."

Grant and Jarmin expressed concern that if Robertson stayed in the GOP race "for the long haul" even if he had no chance of winning the nomination "his leverage is going to be less than what it could have been."

He added that "a wise move for Pat would be to withdraw and throw support to the guy he thought would be the best," and thereby retain greater influence in the writing of the party platform. The most surprising view expressed by the two men was the need for the religious right to broaden its base, particularly by appealing for support among blacks.

"There is a guilt trip the white evangelical feels for having sat out the civil rights of the '60s and letting the liberals seize the high ground," Grant said.

"There could be a natural alliance between black and white Christians," he said, citing strong concern about education and drug abuse in both communities.

"There is a quiet but profound movement toward racial reconciliation," said the minister who called on white fundamentalists "address some of the issues of concern to blacks."

Republican Party leaders tried to forge a similar alliance in 1986 without much success. GOP leaders said blacks were being taken for granted by the Democrats and that Republican economic policies would be more beneficial to blacks in the long run.

At the same time, the Republicans got involved in a ballot security program party leaders claimed was aimed at detecting voter fraud, but that the Democrats argued was directed at purging black voters from the rolls.

The publicity over that program cost the GOP dearly in black precincts and contributed to the strong turnout for Democratic candidates — a turnout that was a major factor in the defeat of four Republican senators in Southern states in 1986.

Appointment Bill Seeks Accountability

RALEIGH — Sen. Jim Johnson, R-Cabarrus, knows that the best bill in the world is worthless unless the legislature votes to make it law.

Johnson sponsored Gov. Jim Martin's version of a proposed constitutional amendment to make the state's superintendent of public instruction an appointed, rather than elected, officer. But he learned early that his bill was not going to pass, so he compromised with sponsors of a Democratic version of the amendment. Now Republicans are saying that Johnson's bill is just as worthless as no amendment at all.

Martin wants the State Board of Education to appoint the superintendent. So do a number of Democrats, including Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan. Where the two sides differ is in the future make-up of the state board. Martin wants the governor to continue to appoint 11 of the 13 members. Jordan and the Democrats want the governor to appoint eight members and the legislature four. Under both plans, the lieutenant governor and state treasurer would continue to serve on the board.

By appointing a superintendent, both sides hope to streamline the governance of the education in the state. With an elected state superintendent, a board appointed mostly by the governor, and an education controller who reports to the board, there is no clear accountability, on anyone's part, for education policy. If the amendment is passed, the governor would obviously be the person to blame or praise.

"If we're going to say that the governor is head of education ... and that is the reason for having an appointive superintendent, then you undo what you've accomplished by having a fragmented board," says Rep. Betsy Cochran, R-Davie, House minority leader.

If the board is only partially appointed by the governor, and the board is split philosophically, she argued, then it will be impossible to hold the governor accountable for the board's actions.

Johnson used to think the same way but, when he proposed his amendment to the Senate Constitution Committee, he said, "I recognize the realities of certain situations." The reality is that the legislature is not going to approve a constitutional amendment for an appointed superintendent unless it gets to appoint some of the state board. Martin's version of the bill might have gotten out of the Senate, but it would get nowhere in the House where Speaker Liston Ramsey doesn't like the idea of taking an elective office away from the people.

Senate backers of the amendment feel they might satisfy Ramsey to some extent if they allow other elected officials, namely the assembly, to appoint four of the board members.

Johnson says that the compromise he brought forth, in which the governor would appoint 10 out of 16 members, would "give us some of the accountability we want. It's not as much as the governor feels is necessary to hold him full accountable, but it's more than was in the (Democratic) bill to begin with."

Mrs. Cochran said the legislature would continue to have a say in the selection of board members through the confirmation process. With that check on the governor, she said, the legislature could be sure that an ideologically slanted board did not come into power.

But Mrs. Cochran conceded that Martin's preference has no chance of passing the House in 1987, and she said she's likely to vote against Johnson's compromise. Unless somebody's mind is radically changed, the amendment will not go before the voters in 1987.

Strength For Today

We flip the electric switch and the room, erstwhile dark, is flooded with light. Did we produce the light? By no means. We merely set in motion a series of processes over which we have almost no control. Someone had to wire the house and someone else brought the electric power to our town. Behind all this are huge generators and behind them coal fields and miners, or perhaps nuclear power plants.

These processes constitute a parable on and the marvelous things it does. When we pray it is the equivalent of flicking on the light switch. The light comes on, but we certainly have not created that light. Back of our praying are powers vastly beyond our ability to create or even to understand. Our faith and prayers are necessary, but spiritual achievement comes through God's power, not ours.

Torrential Rains Bring More Flooding To N.C.

RALEIGH (AP) — Scattered showers have replaced torrential rains across North Carolina, but the deluge left in its wake flooded roads, rivers running out of their banks, homes damaged by water and hail and at least three traffic deaths blamed on the weather.

Ten families in the Cedar Falls community of Randolph County were forced to evacuate Thursday when the rising Deep River spilled onto the street. About 50 families in High Point were stranded by the flooding, but stayed in their homes. Several families in Eden left their homes voluntarily.

Up to seven inches of rain was reported in some areas of Greensboro, where 30 streets were closed Thursday.

And in Rowan County, the heavy rain was accompanied by hail the size of ping-pong balls that ripped siding off houses.

"I've never seen it hail so bad in my life," O.H. McDaniel, 67, of the Rowan County community of Woodleaf said after the early-morning hailstorm.

Rowan County tomato farmer Sam Correll said he drove through Woodleaf Thursday morning to assess the damage and saw hailstones piled up waist-deep in a waterway off N.C. 801. State highway maintenance engineer Charles Klutz said lawns in the area looked like they were covered with snow.

The city garage in Asheboro took in 18 inches of rain, and a power plant in Lexington was temporarily knocked out of service. By midafternoon, the Dan River in Eden was measured at 22 feet above normal and still rising.

"It is definitely still rising," an Eden Police Department spokesman said late Thursday. "There is not even a guess what the crest level will be or when it will crest."

Rockingham County emergency management coordinator Lloyd Bolt said 15 families were evacuated in the Eden area after the Dan, Mayo and Smith rivers flooded their banks. The rivers were rising an average of 4½ inches an hour, he said.

At least six of the homes were partially under water at 2 p.m. Thursday, and the others were threatened, Bolt said. The Salvation Army put several of the displaced families into motels until the water receded, Bolt said.

At Grogan's Garden and Flower Center in Eden, workers and volunteers built a temporary dirt dike to hold back the raging waters of the Smith River. Plants and pots were moved to higher ground.

"Some of the shrubbery we couldn't move just floated away," said Susan Carter, who works at the family-owned garden center.

WSTP radio in Salisbury went off the air Thursday morning because its basement was filling with water. Salisbury firefighters, rescue workers and inmates from a local prison unit sandbagged the building to keep the water out.

A shift of workers — about 40 people — were sent home from the Cedar Falls Manufacturing Co. Division of Jockey International in Randolph County early Thursday morning when water threatened the plant, plant manager Bob McCormick said.

"Had they not left when they did, all of the arteries surrounding the plant would have been closed and they would have been stranded," McCormick said.

In the Haw River community of Alamance County, a Cone Mills plant was also shut down for two shifts when its sewage-treatment plant got waterlogged.

In Wilson and Edgecombe counties in eastern North Carolina, authorities reported thunderstorms with marble- and golf ball-sized hail. But flooding was worse in the northwest Piedmont, where the ground was saturated, said Wayne Jones at the National Weather Service in Raleigh.

High Point and Randolph County authorities closed several bridges over the Deep River due to flooding.

A 5-foot-deep puddle in a High Point subdivision closed most of the area to traffic, and a city motor grader ferried residents who could not otherwise go to work.

April usually is one of the driest months of the year in North Carolina, weather service said. But several locations reported 3 inches or more of rain Wednesday and Thursday, and the Randolph County town of Randleman was doused with more than 5 inches.

"Last year was so dry, and this year is so wet, so far," Jones said. "But if you average out the two years, you'd probably have a pretty normal amount of rainfall."

State Highway Patrol spokesman W.G. Bridges said several state and rural roads in Alamance, Rockingham and Caswell counties were closed. In Stokes County, a bridge crossing the Dan River was closed by state officials who thought some of the sediment along the river bottom had been washed away. Divers will inspect the damage next week, officials said.

Bill Paris, a boating enthusiast who often rafts on the Haw River, said he drove to several points along the river Thursday morning.

"It's the highest it has been in 15 years," he said. "The last time I saw it this high was in 1972, after a hurricane went inland and caused flooding in Virginia."

Two men were killed Wednesday when the trucks they were driving collided head-on on rain-slickened U.S. 64 near Lexington. State Highway Trooper E.J. Bowers said Thurman Weeks, 36, of Hickory and William Bobby Ayers, 34, of Spruce Pine, died in the accident.

Sheila Dunlap Burchell, 27, of Stoneville in Rockingham County, was killed in another accident Wednesday when her car skidded and crashed on a road near Stoneville.

Eden Neighborhoods Face New Round Of Repairs

EDEN, N.C. (AP) — Ronald Booth was nearly finished repairing the damages from a March flood when this week's heavy rain put his home back under water.

"Two more weeks work and we would have been able to move back in," Booth said Thursday, standing at the corner of his lot — much of it six feet under water.

Two days of heavy rains had forced Matrimony Creek, which feeds the Dan River, into the yards, basements and living rooms of six families along Booth's street and the water was creeping toward homes farther up the street.

"I had just about remodeled this place and the rains came again," Booth said. "New Sheetrock. New paneling. New doors. We were set to go back in."

"But when it rains up here, it floods."

In this city where the Smith and Dan rivers merge, many people seemed to be taking the latest high water in stride.

"If we have to leave this time, it will be the fifth time since we moved here in 1961," said a calm Iris Newby, who was standing with her husband, George, on the edge of the driveway watching Matrimony creep up their back steps.

The creek looked as wide as the Mississippi, its muddy waters swirling rapidly as they headed toward the swollen Dan River nearby.

A tractor-trailer rig, donated by a local trucking company, was parked in front. It had already moved the belongings of several families on the street.

The Newbys were holding off on a decision whether to load up.

"I wouldn't go yet," said Tommy Newby, the couple's son who lives on higher ground across the street.

There was still one dry step. The Newbys were planning to wait until it was covered before starting any heavy lifting of furniture.

In 1972, when water rose to the window sills, the Newbys were forced out of their house into a trailer they had in the front of the house. They lived there nine weeks while their house was repaired.

They came within 30 minutes of moving out in March, but their home was spared.

Booth, who has a wife and four children, doesn't know how much he has spent because of the last flood.

"Whatever it costs, now it's gonna cost twice as much," he said. "I would sell, but who would buy? This just makes me sick."

Between 8 a.m. Tuesday and 8 a.m. Wednesday, 5.02 inches of rain fell in Rockingham County, according to measurements taken at the Upper Piedmont Research Station in Reidsville — just shy of the record 5.26 inches during a 24-hour period in September 1979.

The Brookwood Apartments, only a year old and sitting on stilts next to the Smith River, were an island. Duke Power Co. used a boat to turn off the complex's electricity.

At the nearby Lynrock Golf Course, hard beside the river, water was up to the flags on the flagsticks.

The Dan River was 22 feet above normal at 1 p.m. Thursday, just 9 inches shy of the measurement taken during the March flood, which was caused by rain, melting snow and sleet. The river swirled into surrounding neighborhoods.

Tanya Gibson looked out her window at 6:30 a.m. Thursday and was shocked to see only the head of her dog Roscoe was visible. The rest of his body and his fenced-in pen were underwater.

"He was barking and raising Cain," said Ms. Gibson, who rushed out to rescue Roscoe.

Across the street, Virgil and Lousie Ringer had just finished paying $200 the day before for repair work caused by the March flood. Now they'll have to pay again. Their house was a peninsula, surrounded on three sides by water.

House Votes To Change Judicial Elections Plan

RALEIGH (AP) — A bill to help blacks win Superior Court judicial seats won House approval on a partisan 75-33 vote despite delaying tactics by Republicans who said the bill would strip Gov. Jim Martin of appointment powers.

"I believe this is a partisan stripping bill that is directed primarily at Governor Martin," said Rep. Ray Warren, R-Mecklenburg, during debate Thursday.

"Again, the legislative branch appears to be intruding in a significant way," said House Minority Leader Betsy Cochrane, R-Davie. "What we have here is a blatantly stripping bill of our governor."

Rep. H.M. "Mickey" Michaux, D-Durham, said his bill would likely put an end to two lawsuits that claim the current system for electing Superior Court judges discriminates against blacks.

"In effect, this legislation is designed to maximize the ability of minority races to elect the candidates of their choice, to preserve statewide elections and at the same time not being an arbitrary and capricious action by the Legislature," Michaux said.

In addition to eliminating staggered terms in each district, the bill would establish black majorities in 10 of 73 judicial districts where today there is only one among 72. The change, including one new judgeship, would cost $555,000 over two years.

Most of the new positions in the bill, approved 75-33 and sent to the Senate, would come through the replacement of special judges appointed by the governor with resident judges elected statewide. That was what irritated Republicans because the overwhelming Democratic majority among state voters would effectively eliminate GOP judges.

"Nowhere in the lawsuit did it say we had to guarantee somebody a seat in an election, and in this bill this is what we have done," Ms. Cochrane argued.

Rep. Trip Sizemore, R-Guilford, offered an amendment to require that the new judges be elected in their own districts — a move that would make it more likely some Republicans would win. But Sizemore emphasized that it would also further enhance the chances of blacks.

"If there's a Voting Rights Act problem ... it certainly enhances and probably settles the case once and for all if you also provide that those same judges nominated district by district will in fact be elected by those same districts," he said. "If they run statewide, there's a possibility they will be defeated statewide."

Michaux moved to kill the amendment and the Democrat-dominated House agreed in a 68-35 vote. After that, GOP objections became more strident and Rep. Edgar Starnes, R-Caldwell, tried unsuccessfully to delay the bill by having it sent to the Appropriations Committee.

Senate Backs Plan For Appointed School Superintendent

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — The state Senate has approved a proposed constitutional amendment to appoint rather than elect the state superintendent of public instruction, but supporters said the effort may be for naught unless Gov. Jim Martin's objections are defused.

"There is no political reason to try to pass this bill out of the House if we know the governor's going to fight it once it goes out," said Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan after the Senate moved the referendum to the House on Thursday. "This referendum will not pass if he's going to oppose it. So it's now kind of up to him."

While Martin backs an appointed superintendent, he wants to retain a state Board of Education comprised of 11 gubernatorial appointees plus the lieutenant governor and the state treasurer. The Senate approved a plan under which the board would consist of the lieutenant governor, treasurer, 10 members appointed by the governor and four appointed by the Legislature.

The measure, passed 44-5, would set up a statewide referendum in November on the matter if endorsed by three-fifths majorities in both chambers. But its future remained uncertain because House Speaker Liston Ramsey has spoken against an appointed superintendent, and some House leaders are pushing a bill that would retain an elected superintendent and make him chairman of the State Board of Education.

Senate Minority Leader Larry Cobb, R-Mecklenburg, said during floor debate that Martin viewed any legislative appointments of education board members as an improper mingling of executive and legislative authority.

"We must continue to have clear delineation between the executive and legislative bodies," Cobb said. "We must continue to have separation of powers."

He said the arrangement in the bill ran counter to the intended purpose of defining lines of authority in the state public school system.

"The person we need to make responsible for education in this state is the governor of North Carolina, and this bill does not do that," Cobb said.

Sen. Charles Hipps, D-Haywood, chairman of the Senate Committee on the Constitution which approved the bill, said the panel "went to great lengths to make sure that partisanship was kept out of this."

Hipps noted that under the bill the governor would choose 10 of 16 members of the board, which would, in turn, choose the superintendent.

The bill originally gave the governor eight appointments and the Legislature four, but Hipps said his Democrat-dominated committee increased the gubernatorial appointments by two as a gesture of good will.

"We went the extra mile," Hipps said.

Sen. Jim Johnson, R-Cabarrus, praised Martin for defending his office but said giving the Legislature some board appointments was the only way to get the bill through the House.

"It's not a matter of who won and who lost," Johnson said. "... It's whether we do something for the educational system of North Carolina that's needed to be done for so long that we rise above the turf battle of appointments."

The Senate tabled 39-10 an amendment offered by Cobb to retain the current system of choosing board members.

No one spoke against the proposal to change the way the superintendent is chosen, a move that the bill's sponsor, Sen. Bob Warren, D-Johnston, said had been endorsed by numerous legislative studies for 40 years.

"The governance of North Carolina education is broken," Warren said. "It needs fixing."

Hipps said an appointed superintendent would ensure clear lines of accountability, making the Board of Education "the (chief) policy voice for education in North Carolina."

Privette Attacks Beer Sales

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Efforts to curb drunken driving through such methods as banning alcohol ads and prohibiting open beer cans in automobiles were described as a "band-aid approach" by opponents.

Rep. Coy Privette, R-Cabarrus, said Thursday he sponsored five bills to take strong action in the face of last year's 18 percent increase in drunken driving arrests.

"If we want to see a decline, we need to get on the offensive rather than playing defense," he said at a news conference.

The bills would limit the sale of cold beer and wine, eliminate brown-bagging, ban alcohol-related advertising originating in North Carolina, prohibit open beers in cars and require health warnings where alcohol is sold.

Chris Valauri, executive vice president of the North Carolina Beer Wholesalers Association, said Privette had missed the boat with the bills.

"On the one hand, we share any reasonable effort to deal with the problem of abusive consumption of alcohol in society and getting drinking drivers off the road," he said. "But we feel that these bills constitute really the right problem, but the wrong solution."

Privette said the consumption of alcohol is linked with $100 billion in economic damages nationally every year and 200,000 deaths. He said each bill is aimed at a different facet of the problem.

But Valauri said the only long-term solution would come through "meaningful education programs, and strong law enforcement and good research and prevention programs. That's already being done."

Privette said selling cold beer and wine for off-premise consumption would be banned to discourage drinking in cars as well as littering.

"What originated as a take-home plan has now degenerated into a take and drink as you go plan," he said at a news conference. "It's basically communicating the message that it's all right to drink and drive in North Carolina."

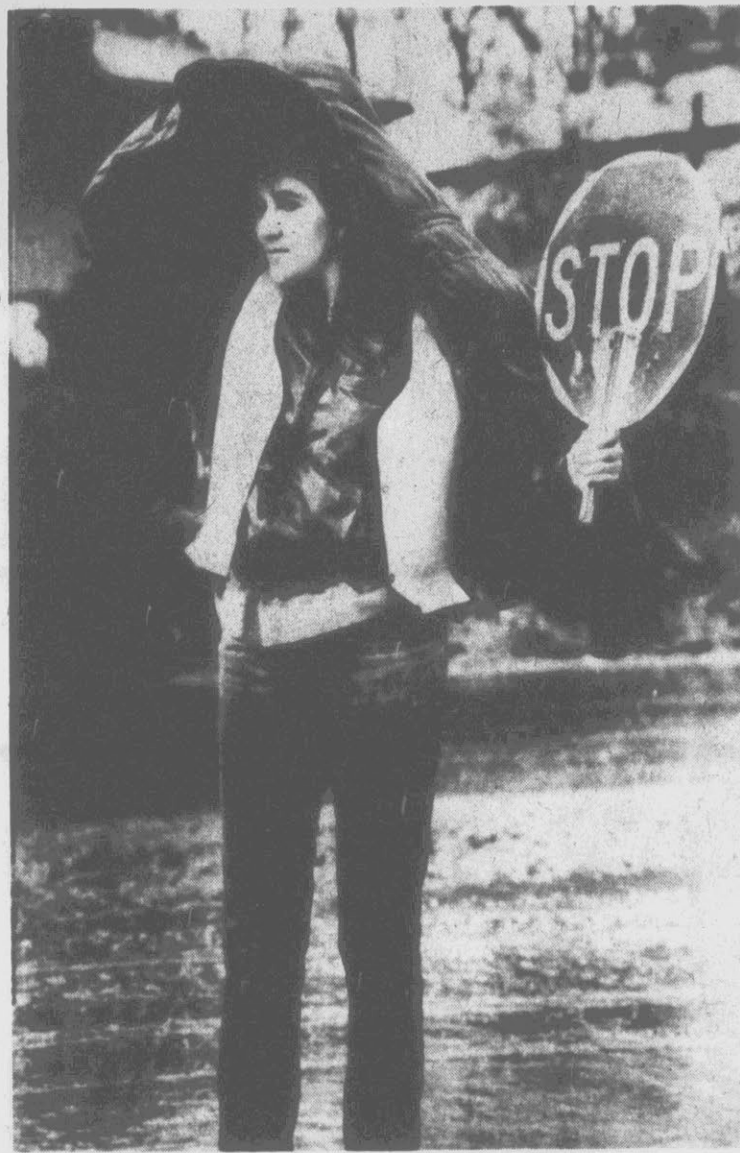

Prohibiting open beer and wine containers would conform the law with a ban already put on liquor, Privette said.

"Today, if you have a two-ounce mini bottle in your automobile and that seal is broken, it's Katie bar the door," he said. "But in North Carolina you can have 10,000 cans of beer in your motor vehicle, every one of them can be open, and it's not against the law of this state."

Privette said 50 percent of drunken driving arrests are linked with beer and wine.

Rotating health warnings similar to those required on cigarette packs would be displayed where alcohol is sold in another bill. The warnings would mention the possibility of birth defects due to drinking by pregnant women, impaired ability to operate machinery, increased risk of high blood pressure, liver disease and cancer associated with alcohol and the possibility of immediate death due to rapid consumption.

"We think that since alcohol is our No. 1 addictive drug in our society, that we ought to do what we can ... to prevent these problems," Privette said.

House Gives Green Light To 65 MPH

By JODY TAYLOR
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina has 641 miles of rural interstate highway that could be designated for a 65 mph speed limit, but some legislators gave a bill authorizing the higher speeds a rough ride on its way to the fast lane.

The state House passed a bill 77-29 Thursday that would give the Department of Transportation the authority to raise the speed limit to 65 mph on some rural interstates. But opponents warned that some motorists' need for speed would exceed 65.

"I think you're confusing the folks back home," said Rep. Richard Wright, D-Columbus. "I think you are hastening the next gasoline crisis. Going 75 and 80, you're going to wear the interstate out faster, and where is that money going to come from?"

"We're voting on 75 miles per hour," said Rep. David Diamond, D-Surry. "We're not enforcing the speed limit now. I can go 65 miles per hour — no problem. Unless you put more highway patrol out there, it's not going to be enforced."

But Rep. Jack Hunt, D-Cleveland, the sponsor of the bill, said all the measure did was give DOT the authority to raise the speed limit — the vote would not mandate that the limit be raised.

"I think there have been too many objections to this bill in committee," Hunt said. "The statistics which exist today are based on people going 65. The sign may say 55, but people are going 65."

"If they (DOT) decide to raise the speed limit, ... it would simply make legal what they're (drivers) doing now."

The bill tentatively passed 84-24 on its second reading, and Hunt made a motion to suspend the rules, allowing the bill to proceed immediately to its third reading. But not before debate continued.

Rep. Foyle Hightower, D-Anson, said it was unreasonable to tax one group excessively even if it is for a good cause. He also wondered how each county would be sure to get its fair share of funds for bikeways.

Rep. Harry Grimmer, R-Mecklenburg, said he was worried that children who don't use bikeways would be unfairly taxed.

Bike Tax Proposed

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina may have to add a tax to bicycle sales in order to retain its reputation as a good state for bike riding, the House Finance Committee was told.

Rep. Harry Payne, D-New Hanover, who sponsored the bill, said the 2 percent sales tax would be used to keep up existing bike routes and build new ones. He said the state spends only $250,000 a year for such projects, while the bill would provide up to $2.5 million.

Payne said bicycle dealers don't object to the tax "if the funds go to increasing bicycle opportunities."

"The money would be well spent simply from an advertising standpoint," he said.

Several committee members questioned the bill, which was not voted on Thursday.

"I really have a concern about the poor businessman out there who sells three bicycles," said Rep. Dan Lilley, D-Lenoir, who said it would be a burden for them to keep track of the taxes.

IN THE STATE

Phony Classes

RALEIGH (AP) — Auditors have found that enrollment figures were padded in 10 percent of 300 community college classes checked at a dozen schools across the state, State Auditor Ed Renfrow says.

Auditors visited classrooms and verified enrollments at the schools after the state learned that more than $1 million had been paid to phantom teachers for classes that did not exist at Cape Fear Technical Institute in Wilmington.

"I think it's important to say that what went on at Cape Fear didn't go on statewide — frauds and phantom classes," Renfrow said Thursday.

But he called enrollment padding a "significant problem" and said three more schools, whose names he would not give, have been referred to the State Bureau of Investigation.

Suspension

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Herman Aldridge, Winston-Salem's director of human relations, has been suspended without pay, and the Human Relations Commission has asked him to resign.

City officials said the suspension, which began April 3, will remain in effect until Aldridge is dismissed or reinstated by City Manager Bill Stuart.

Stuart would not comment on the reasons for the suspension or when he expects the case to be resolved. Aldridge said he could not comment until he talked to his attorney.

Aldridge, 49, became the first director of the Human Relations Department in 1978.

Plant Tests

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Carolina Power & Light Co. officials say they expect to declare the Shearon Harris Nuclear Power Plant ready for commercial operation before the end of April.

The Wake County plant has completed tests at 75 percent power. On Tuesday, the plant was brought to 90 percent power for the first time, said CP&L spokesman Roger Hannah.

"We're ending for the end of the month," Hannah said. "We'll still have some tests to complete at full power, but after that, we'll be ready to declare the plant in commercial operation."

Waste Storage

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Duke Power Co. and other nuclear utilities are pressing the U.S. Energy Department to meet a deadline of January 1998 for taking tons of nuclear waste off the utilities' property.

R.G. Snipes, Duke's senior engineer for fuel-cycle operations, has told the department that Duke will need waste-storage relief by 1998 and that Duke is concerned that the temporary waste depot that the department proposes to build in east Tennessee will not be ready in time.

The department wants to postpone the opening of the first national nuclear repository from 1998 to 2003, and to open the temporary depot near Oak Ridge, Tenn., in 1998 as a stop-gap measure.

Rauch Sign

CRAMERTON — A sign for a state lawmaker's business violated state law, North Carolina Department of Transportation officials say, and it has been removed.

The sign, which directed delivery trucks to the Rauch Industries Inc. plant in the Gaston County town of Cramerton, was bolted to a state sign on U.S. 29-74 that proclaims Cramerton as a Governor's Community of Excellence.

Rauch Industries, owned by Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, makes Christmas decorations. The company also has a plant in Gastonia.

Liver Transplant

RALEIGH (AP) — Katherine Anne Strickland, a 1-year-old Fuquay-Varina girl, was resting comfortably in the intensive care unit of Children's Hospital in Pittsburgh after undergoing a second liver transplant.

"As we know it right now, there were no complications," said Sue Cardillo, a hospital spokeswoman. "Everything was pretty much normal."

Katie, the daughter of Charles and Deborah Strickland, went into surgery just after 10 p.m. Wednesday. The operation was completed about 8:30 a.m. Thursday. It was her second liver transplant in less than three months.

Katie came through the first transplant, on Jan. 27, without any complications. By the middle of February, however, a series of tests indicated Katie would need a second transplant. One of the two main arteries that carries blood into the liver was blocked. Her name was put back on the waiting list for an organ donor.

The child suffers from biliary atresia, which is characterized by the absence or obstruction of the bile ducts in the liver.

Professor

RALEIGH (AP) — A political scientist denied tenure several years ago at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill was awarded a Pulitzer Prize Thursday for a book about the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr.

David J. Garrow won the biography award for his book, "Bearing the Cross: Martin Luther King Jr. and the Southern Christian Leadership Conference."

In 1983, the UNC-CH political science faculty denied Garrow tenure by a 10-9 vote. James W. Prothro, then chairman of the department, upheld the faculty decision and did not renew Garrow's contract as an assistant professor.

A native of Massachusetts, Garrow also taught at Duke University. Since 1984, Garrow, 33, has been an associate professor in the political science department at the City College of New York.

GOP Proposes Crossover Voting

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — A U.S. Supreme Court ruling has cleared the way for Democrats and independents to vote in Republican primaries, an invitation the North Carolina GOP is extending in hopes of winning converts.

"We have sections in this state where people still feel that granddaddy's going to roll over in his grave if they consider registering Republican, but at the same time they're behavioral Republicans," state GOP Chairman Jack Hawke said Thursday. "They think like us, they vote with us and they support us."

Hawke said he would recommend that the state GOP rewrite its bylaws during its May convention to allow crossover voting in Republican primaries.

"The Republican Party is the conservative voice in North Carolina and we invite conservative independents and Democrats to join us in selecting the best candidates that our party can offer in general elections," he said at a news conference at state GOP headquarters.

Jim Van Hecke, the state Democratic chairman, said his party had no intention of letting Republicans vote in Democratic primaries.

"I think this shows that they're desperate," Van Hecke said in an interview.

He said crossover voting defeated the purpose of membership in parties and that the current system worked well. Democrats would gain nothing by allowing Republicans and independents to vote in Democratic primaries, he said.

"I'll be darned if I want these right-wing crazies voting for our people," Van Hecke said, declining to say to whom he was referring. "Let Jack Hawke keep them over there."

In December, the Supreme Court ruled that a state government cannot determine which voters may participate in a political party's primary. That decision is up to the party, the court held in a suit brought by the Connecticut GOP.

State Rep. Margaret Keesee-Forester, R-Guilford, has introduced bills that would abolish state laws saying only those registered in a particular party can vote in that party's primary.

Another pending bill would allow independents and Democrats to go so far as to become the Republican nominee without changing voter registration.

Hawke predicted that the predominantly Democratic General Assembly would pass laws to block the GOP action. If so, he said, the GOP will challenge the measures in court.

Farmer To Pay Migrants $165,000

RALEIGH (AP) — A Nash County farmer has agreed to a $165,000 settlement of a migrant worker lawsuit in a move that farmworker advocates say could influence the way other North Carolina farmers deal with migrants.

"As far as we're aware, it's the largest cash settlement agreed to by a North Carolina farmer involving migrant farm workers," said Robert J. Willis, an attorney for Farmworkers Legal Service of N.C. Inc., which filed the class-action suit on behalf of migrants who worked for Carson B. Barnes of Spring Hope in 1983.

"We believe that it already has and will continue to have a ripple effect on how other farmers do business," Willis said Thursday.

The 35 named plaintiffs will divide

$39,500 of the settlement. Another $70,000 will be put into a fund to be divided among any workers who lived in one of Barnes' labor camps in 1983. Another $55,000 will be used to pay legal services for court costs and attorneys' fees.

Barnes, who bills himself as one of the largest yam growers in the world, admitted no wrongdoing in agreeing to settle a civil suit.

GARBAGE BARGE — This barge load of garbage from Islip, N.Y., sits near the mouth of the Mississippi River 75 miles south of New Orleans, where it was intercepted by Louisiana officials. Gov. Edwin Edwards, like North Carolina officials earlier, has said he will do everything possible legally to prevent disposal of the garbage in Louisiana waters. A private contractor has hauled the garbage along the East and Gulf coasts for several days, looking for a place to dispose of it. (AP Laserphoto)

Louisiana Blocks Garbage Barge After 1,400-Mile Trip From N.Y.

VENICE, La. (AP) — Gov. Edwin Edwards vowed that Louisiana will take every legal avenue to keep a barge load of garbage from being dumped in the state, approximately 1,400 miles from its point of origination on Long Island.

"If we don't have the legal authority, then we can't line the National Guard on the banks of the river and shoot at them — that would be an improper and illegal act," Edwards said Thursday in New Orleans.

Also Thursday, officials of the state's Department of Environmental Quality intercepted the barge, laden with 3,000 tons of garbage, after it arrived at the mouth of the Mississippi River.

The Louisiana officials have armed themselves with documents forbidding unauthorized dumping of wastes in Louisiana.

"We certainly have notified the company we do not feel it is the proper use of our facilities, and we suggest it go back from whence they came," Edwards said.

The garbage came from Islip, N.Y., where it was turned over to a private disposal contractor. It was put aboard a barge owned by Lowell Harrelson, who tried to dispose of it in North Carolina, but was denied permission by state authorities there.

Charles Weidner, chief engineer of Islip Resource Recovery Agency, said he is "virtually certain" that the waste is some commercial solid wastes removed under contract by a company called Waste Alternatives.

Weidner said Islip stopped taking commercial wastes on Nov. 1, because it hasn't enough room at its landfill. In a call to Waste Alternatives, a secretary said the head of the company was busy on the phone, and she relayed a message saying he had no comment.

Islip Supervisor Frank Jones said Waste Alternatives turned the garbage over to Star Sand & Gravel of Kings Park, N.Y., for compacting, and that Star turned it over to Harrelson's National Waste Contractors.

In Louisiana, officials identified the owner of the barge as Harrelson, who was in a motel in suburban New Orleans before checking out Thursday morning.

Seed Firms Say Free Corn Is OK

ATLANTA (AP) — The company that donated free seed corn for distribution to farmers in eight Southeastern states admitted it is partly to blame for the reaction of some agriculture officials who questioned the seed's quality and cautioned farmers against planting it.

But Tom Luehder, president of Jacques Seed Co., of Prescott, Wis., said the seed, distributed to 6,100 farmers in the Southeast, was of high quality and agriculture officials had overreacted by sowing doubt among the receiving farmers.

Georgia Department of Agriculture officials led the way in questioning the seed distributed free by Church World Service, saying it was mislabeled, didn't meet state standards and was unsuited to the Southeast.

The program distributed the seed corn to 6,100 farmers in North and South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Arkansas, Louisiana and north Florida. Church World Service is an agency of the National Council of Churches.

Officials in other states have also expressed reservations and federal crop insurance officials have placed special conditions on crops grown with the seed.

Georgia Agriculture Commissioner Tommy Irvin said Thursday he remained unconvinced the seed would benefit most of the farmers, in Georgia especially, who received it.

Panel OKs Zoning Change For Trailers

RALEIGH (AP) — A bill to free manufactured homes from trailer parks passed a Senate committee by one vote, and lawmakers said the vote could be just as close on the Senate floor.

The Senate Judiciary IV Committee approved the bill 5-4 as the chairman, R.C. Soles, D-Columbus, broke a tie. Soles said he voted for the bill to keep it from stalling in his committee, but added that he might switch his vote on the floor.

Some of the Senate's most influential members are pushing the bill, which pits elected city and county officials against the manufactured housing industry.

Sen. Dennis Winner, D-Buncombe, who led opposition to the measure, said he was optimistic about prospects for defeating it in the Finance Committee or on the floor. But he said the issue might be decided by one or two votes.

The bill would outlaw local ordinances that bar manufactured housing from residential areas zoned for traditional single-family dwellings.

While critics say the measure could open the door to locating manufactured homes in any residential area in North Carolina, bill supporters say high land costs make the placement of a mobile home in an affluent neighborhood virtually impossible.

They also cite a provision in the bill that would permit ordinances requiring that manufactured homes measure up to appearance and quality standards of surrounding dwellings.

Several witnesses, including spokesmen for the manufactured housing industry, have charged that some local governments were biased against mobile homes and refused to acknowledge how their looks and quality have improved.

However, local officials said Thursday the bill would ride roughshod over local control for the sake of industry profits.

"The issue of manufactured housing is something that we know that with changing times we need to consider," Lucy Allen, mayor of Louisburg, said. "But this bill is a blatant theft of the responsibility of local ... officials to make land use decisions for our areas."

She added, "There is no sweetener, there is no enhancement, there is no detail you can add to this bill to make it acceptable to the people of the small municipalities and the large cities of North Carolina."

CRUCIFIXION — Mario Castro grimaces in pain as a man dressed as a Roman soldier drives a four-inch nail through his palm in a Good Friday ritual re-enacting the crucifixion of Jesus Christ. Thousands Of Pilgrims Trace Walk Taken By Jesus Christ

By NICOLAS B. TATRO
Associated Press Writer
JERUSALEM (AP) — Christian pilgrims singing hymns, reading from prayer books and carrying wooden crosses crowded the Via Dolorosa, walking in the footsteps of Jesus in Good Friday devotions marking the day of Christ's crucifixion.

Israeli soldiers carrying automatic rifles patrolled the winding, cobblestone streets as thousands of visitors crowded Jerusalem's Old City.

The Christian Easter celebrations of both the Eastern Orthodox and Western churches coincided this year with the week-long Jewish Passover observances which brought thousands of Orthodox Jews dressed in black cloaks and fur-trimmed hats to the Wailing Wall.

A long procession made up of groups of pilgrims singing and praying in different languages wound past the 14 stations of the Cross on the Via Dolorosa, marking the route Jesus took to his crucifixion.

The groups included pilgrims from Denmark, West Germany, France, the United States, Italy, Ethiopia, Sweden, South Africa, Ireland and Palestinian boy and girl scouts in uniform.

"It puts flesh on the story we have read so many times," said the Rev. Joe Conden of Gormanston College near Dublin, Ireland.

"This devotion is one of retracing the stops that Jesus made and the images we see here are helpful to a better understanding," said Conden, dressed in a brown robe as he led a group of 15 Irish pilgrims to the fifth station of the cross.

A woman and two men hefted a six-foot long cross made of thick pine as another priest read from the scriptures about Jesus' walk carrying the cross on which he was crucified.

"This is such a contrast to what we are used to back home," said Sheila Miller who together with her sister Fay runs a fabric shop in Gayndah, Australia.

The groups also included about 15 blind people from Sweden who were led by a priest.

The Via Dolorosa, or "road of suffering" in Latin, ends at the candlelit Church of the Holy Sepulcher, which marks the site of the crucifixion and resurrection. There chants in Latin and Arabic from the masses of Roman Catholic and Egyptian Orthodox mixed with the spontaneous singing of monks and lay pilgrims.

"I see us as a group of people coming together from all different faiths, all different religions recognizing the Lord of Lords, the King of Kings," said Kathleen Case, a preacher from Corona, Calif.

"All the way through this procession I have had this feeling that these people are looking backwards. But they should look forwards. It won't be long. He'll be back," said Ms. Case, who was leading a group of 15 pilgrims from her Changing Life Ministries.

Daniel Rossing, head of the Christian section of the Ministry of Religion, estimated the number of visitors this year exceeded the 50,000 who came last year when tourism was down because of a wave of terrorism in the Middle East.

This year's unofficial estimate of 70,000 was still below the 80,000 who came to Israel during Holy Week in 1985.

Filipinos Submit To Flogging, Crucifixion For Good Friday

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Several Filipinos had themselves nailed to crosses and thousands flogged themselves in public today in observance of Good Friday.

Nuns and leftist activists in this predominantly Roman Catholic nation led marches through slum districts around Manila to protest the suffering of the poor on the day marking the crucifixion of Jesus Christ.

Government and private offices were closed and most streets were deserted except for a few vehicles and groups of barefoot penitents. Some carried wooden crosses or religious statues under the scorching tropical sun.

The Philippine News Agency said four zealots, including a woman, were nailed to crosses by men dressed as ancient Roman soldiers in San Fernando, 35 miles northwest of Manila.

The annual ritual in San Fernando is duplicated by zealots in several provinces on a smaller scale. It has attracted tens of thousands of spectators, and local officials promote it as a minor tourist attraction.

Those "crucified" are taken down after a brief time on the cross and their wounds are treated and bound.

In vacant lots in Manila's Tondo slum district and in rice fields in the provinces, bare-backed men wearing hoods drew blood by beating themselves on the back with whips tipped with thorns or broken glass.

Church officials frown on the "crucifixions" and flagellations but say they can't curb the practices, which date back to Spain's introduction of Christianity in the 16th century.

Pontiff Hears Confessions

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II, keeping up a practice he began in 1979, heard confessions from 11 people in St. Peter's Basilica on Good Friday.

In the evening, the pope is to carry a wooden cross in a torch-lit procession at the Colosseum, symbolically retracing Christ's steps to his crucifixion in Jerusalem.

The 66-year-old pontiff is suffering from a cold, and his voice was hoarse during a Holy Thursday Mass, but Vatican officials said he doesn't have a fever and plans to go ahead with Holy Week activities as scheduled.

A small crowd was waiting in the basilica when John Paul appeared, wearing an ordinary priest's black cape over his white robe, and stepped into one of the hand-carved booths to hear confessions. He heard confessions for more than 75 minutes.

The pope hears confessions on Good Friday to emphasize the importance of the sacrament.

Current Christian Ritual Differs From Years Past

By JIM NAUGHTON
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

WASHINGTON — The Knights of Columbus wear shiny capes and plumed hats. The choir is dressed in robes of red and gold. A knot of 12 elderly people climb down from a Wisconsin-Northern tour bus to mingle with the faithful and the curious. Sitting on a low stone wall, a beggar, in fatigues, extends a baseball cap, upside down, toward the well-dressed passers-by. A black flag bearing a skull and crossbones juts out of his back pocket. He may be the only one here who is not waiting for the archbishop.

The procession begins to the strains of "To Jesus Christ Our Sovereign King," winds down the 1700 block of Rhode Island Avenue and turns up the stone steps of the Cathedral of St. Matthew. The archbishop wears a deep red hat and carries a gleaming staff. He is surrounded by palm-carrying priests who lead him into a church filled with parishioners, incense and a majestic organ fugue.

Roughly 2,000 years ago, a country prophet, his popularity waning, is believed to have ridden a donkey into Jerusalem, touching off a confrontation with religious and secular authorities that led to his death. All this is done to honor that.

It is neither an endorsement nor a rejection of current Christian ritual to point out that it often bears little resemblance to the events it is meant to recall. Each age, each faith and each ideology shapes its own image of Jesus of Nazareth. "After all, there is no more powerful symbol in all of western culture than the symbol of Jesus Christ," says the Rev. David Tracy of the University of Chicago's Divinity School. "There is no way to avoid the figure of Jesus Christ if one wants to understand what we have all become."

But, on this Good Friday, what is one to make of a figure about whom so little can be said for sure? "No pictures were taken at the Resurrection," says Lloyd Alexander Lewis, associate professor of the New Testament at Virginia Seminary. "There were no tape recorders, no VCRs. But I believe that something happened that was more than just a rearranging of people's mental furniture."

But what?

The question is nearly two millennia old, but since the turn of the century, scholars have attacked it with an array of tools developed by historians, anthropologists and literary critics. "The dominant view today seems to be that we can know pretty well what Jesus was out to accomplish," writes Oxford historian E.P. Sanders in "Jesus and Judaism," "that we can know a lot about what he said, and that those two things make sense within the world of 1st century Judaism."

The scholars' findings are frequently at odds with the letter of the New Testament, the great body of Christian iconography and much traditional Sunday preaching. While mainstream Christian denominations agree that the Gospels were never intended as works of historical fact, few churches have attempted, in any systematic way, to inform believers about the growing body of historical evidence. There is little agreement on how or whether that should be done. There is even some question as to whether it matters.

And for all their scientific methodology, recent scholars do not completely escape the trap of historical relativism. The Jesus they present is very much in tune with the age in which he is presented. In a way, current scholarship seems to do for theology what minimalist writing does for fiction. It strips away ornament and excess to leave what it hopes is a lean, defensible, but still emotionally moving core.

Many are still moved. "If they discovered the bones tomorrow, people would still go to church on Good Friday," says Karen Smith, an assistant editor at Commonweal, a liberal magazine published by lay Catholics.

"It doesn't change what we call the truth of the matter, which may or may not be scientific. They (the disciples) experienced something so incredible that for 2,000 years people have been going to church. For me that can't be shaken readily by any scholarship."

Tea Ladies Fading Into Past

EDITOR'S NOTE — One more part of Britain's past is giving way to the machine — the tea lady, along with her smile and gossip. This is one of a series of occasional reports by Associated Press correspondents on the way of life in other countries.

By COTTEN TIMBERLAKE
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — Just about every British office had at least one much-loved tea lady who came around twice a day, smilingly serving tea in the china cups, dropping an occasional juicy bit of gossip and, when needed, passing along a little motherly advice.

But Britain's tea ladies are dwindling — replaced by machines. It's a trend regretted by many. "There is something very British about tea ladies," said Mark Chapman, an independent television producer.

He recently made a documentary about tea and said he discovered that more and more people were going to tea-dispensing machines, and that the tea ladies were a endangered species.

There are 180,000 machines dispensing tea in offices, factories and other locations throughout the country today, said Roboserve Ltd., a major vending machine maker.

That number will increase by 10 percent in each of the next five years, the London-based company predicted.

The number of British machine manufacturers, meanwhile, has grown to six, reflecting the size of the market in a country that leads the Anglo-Saxon tea-drinking world with an annual average of 1,355 cups per person.

The accounting firm Stoy Hayward Jet five tea ladies go when it moved to a new building and introduced machines three years ago. The firm kept one tea lady to serve the top partners and important meetings.

"The tea ladies were getting old and past retirement," said Brian Udell, a director. "It was an amicable arrangement. They went off happily."

But things haven't been the same since.

Stoy Hayward had to install a new make of machines in December because the previous ones weren't reliable, but the new machines already have had water-pressure problems.

The firm also has to charge employees 7.5 cents a cup; the tea ladies' tea was free.

Then there is the problem of people spilling their tea on the way back to their desks, although the firm does supply trays.

And, there are the gripes from the 800 employees.

"People like being served," Udell said. "They don't like getting up and getting it for themselves."

In addition, he said, "Some people don't like the quality. It doesn't please everybody. Most people don't like drinking out of plastic cups (although) most of us have gotten used to that."

The company is installing a sixth machine, and it dispenses beverages into your own cup.

The machines, which Stoy Hayward rents, are slightly cheaper than employing tea ladies, whose salaries are estimated at $4,500 to $9,000 a year.

But cost wasn't the primary consideration, Udell said. Convenience was.

"The main benefit is that we could produce drinks all day or night," Udell said. "We do have staff working late hours."

The machines also offer a much wider choice. Besides tea, they dispense coffee, soft drinks, soup and cold water.

But Sheila Brewin, a secretary, said she prefers a tea lady — and is lucky enough to still have one, because she works for a top partner.

"I like the personal touch," Mrs. Brewin said. "I also like a little gossip with her. A tea machine can't talk to you."

Mrs. Brewin swears the tea lady keeps mum about important business conversations she overhears.

"It's only the little tattle she gossips about, like who's having an affair with whom, who's having a baby, etc.," Mrs. Brewin said.

Does Mrs. Brewin tell her tea lady her troubles?

"She usually tells me her problems," Mrs. Brewin said, and laughed.

Besides making their rounds, tea ladies traditionally have provided a social function, organizing Christmas caroling and such.

At Butlers Till Ltd., a money brokerage firm, two ladies ply tea on a frenzied trading floor, and Mike Redgwel, deputy managing director, said it's a tough job supplying the busy traders.

But Butlers is determined to persevere.

"We have a machine as well, but they (the tea ladies) won't be replaced under any circumstances," Redgwel said.

Middle Class Is Indulging In Expensive Tastes

By VERA HALLER
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Despite an affinity for Hermes scarves, Godiva chocolate, Christian Dior lipstick, vintage wine and weekend getaways in the Caribbean, the American aura of affluence may be deceptive.

According to a new market survey, people aren't getting richer, just more willing to pay for luxury items.

"We found an enormous attitude change — a whole new state of mind," said Barbara Feigin, an executive vice president at Grey Advertising. "People are looking for the very best they can have."

Grey, a New York City agency with an annual billing of $2 billion, conducted the market survey to see who was buying $200 Gucci wallets, $250 Louis Vuitton purses and other expensive designer goods.

The survey uncovered a slice of the market Grey dubbed "ultra consumers," middle-class people willing to juggle their finances for a taste of the good life.

The ad agency interviewed a cross-section of consumers ranging in age from 21 to 50, living in households with incomes of at least $25,000. Grey claimed the respondents represented about a quarter of the adult population.

Just over half of those surveyed said they would buy top of the line products if they could afford it. Only 5 percent of these ultra consumers lived in households with incomes of $75,000 or more, the level of income Grey said was needed to live an affluent life.

"These are not wealthy people," Ms. Feigin said. "They spend a lot of time figuring out their finances. If a woman can't afford that $400 designer scarf or designer perfume."

In addition to compromise, they also rely on bargains and credit to keep up with the Rockefellers.

Ultra consumers are not limited to yuppies. They can also be found in suburban and rural areas and represent a new mind set in America, Ms. Feigin said.

"They have different feelings about entitlement than their parents," she said. "They say, 'I deserve to treat myself well.'"

Ultra consumers are also very ambitious and optimistic about the future, she said. "If they pass on the Rolex watch in favor of a Club Med vacation, they think that they may be able to make enough money next year for the watch."

The survey findings account for why designer products in an affordable price range — Calvin Klein underwear or Ralph Lauren Polo ties — are such big sellers.

"There's something for everybody," Ms. Feigin said.

At Ralph Lauren's Madison Avenue store, everything from $300 cashmere sweaters to $35 Polo ties are selling "very, very well," said Suzy Aiken, a public relations assistant.

"Customers, in general, are coming more and more to understand the importance of quality and realizing they also have to pay for it," she said.

Ms. Feigin said the attitude change can be attributed in part to television. "People see the menu of all the goodies to be had and they're mesmerized by the lifestyles of the rich and famous."

More two-income households also may mean people have more spendable income, she said.

Father Of 7 Turns From Computers To Priesthood

By WALTER LAW
Chambersburg Public Opinion
CHAMBERSBURG, Pa. (AP) — New priests enter the Catholic Church regularly, but few fathers of families become fathers of congregations.

Bill Chant is looking to the day he becomes a priest, a far different life from the one he had until recently and far from his vocation as a computer programmer.

Next year Chant will become a priest in the Roman Catholic Diocese of Burlington, Vt. The 57-year-old father of seven is a seminarian at Mount St. Mary's Seminary, Emmitsburg, Md.

As part of his training, he is assigned to Corpus Christi Catholic Church, Chambersburg, where he has served for more than 18 months.

Church members and leaders say they recognize a gift in the man who asked 300 friends and casual acquaintances if he should become a priest before choosing the seminary in northern Maryland in 1984.

"He has been a real plus in our parish spiritually," the Rev. John Schmalhofer said. "And I know he has enriched the parish in so many ways by his presence."

Schmalhofer, assistant pastor at Corpus Christi, said Chant can deal with all kinds of problems, probably because of experience from his years of marriage and family life.

On Sundays Chant sits next to Monsignor Thomas Kujovsky at the altar to assist with Mass. His field education here also allows him to help with the Catholic Education Program at Scotland School for Veterans' Children in nearby Scotland, Pa., as well as to counsel adults at the church.

Monday mornings he is back among the other 160 students at the seminary and joins other family members in college. Among his children, who are 23 to 33 years old, one daughter is in graduate school at Georgetown University, Washington, D.C., and a son is at the University of Vermont.

Chant's explanation of his decision to join the priesthood is simple: "If I was not in the seminary I believe that I wouldn't be doing what God wants me to be doing."

That decision was not easy. Chant was a non-denominational Protestant. He converted to Catholicism while in the Army from 1946 to 1949 in Japan. Friends taught him church ways, ideas and principles which he readily accepted.

He later married. He and his wife, Patricia, had four sons and three daughters. His days revolved around his family and work as a computer programmer-designer for IBM in Burlington.

In 1978, his wife of 28 years died of cancer.

Following her death, he worked in the IBM laboratories, cared for the two younger children at home and attended a Catholic church in Burlington.

Bored with the routine, Chant became interested in a church leadership role.

In 1977, while he was at a diocesan church teaching program, the pull to the priesthood was fostered. Three years later he became a permanent deacon.

"I had a sense of God and talked to many people who wanted me to be a priest. All said they expected I would make a good priest. Sure it was a dramatic step. It's a significant change but I am adaptable. I'll feel comfortable being there."

"I think that I will hear people a little differently than somebody who hasn't had the experience of father and husband. I think my advice would be drawn from that period but would not be different than a priest who would be unmarried."

These days he concentrates on his new life, which centers around school and training to become a church leader. He carries a full academic load of 15 hours at school.

Like most other priests, Chant first talked with the bishop of his diocese, then decided to attend the seminary.

That decision was approved of by his family.

"My children are all happy with the decision," he said.

They did have one question.

"They asked, 'What should we call you? Father? Dad?'"

"I told them to call me plain old Dad."

Woman's Club Officers Named

Elsie Eagan was installed as president of the Greenville Woman's Club last week. Helen Summercamp, District 10 president, conducted the installation using U.S. flags as a theme.

Mrs. Summercamp spoke on women of North Carolina who made a difference in the quality of life. "These women saw a need and made improvements in the quality of life for others," she said.

Others installed were Mary Ann Clark, first vice president; Eleanor Hutchins, second vice president; Doris Ballengee, recording secretary; Lib Respass, treasurer, and Phyllis Joel, corresponding secretary. Carolyn James was named a trustee.

Betty Tate gave the welcome and Ann Windley of Aurora was a special guest. She is president of the Aurora Woman's Club.

Mrs. Ballengee presented an engraved silver tray to Mrs. Tate, outgoing president. Barbara Hall gave Mrs. Tate a pin for serving as president.

Mrs. Eagan said the Creative Writing Tea will be held May 8 at the club building.

Neighbors Bring The Office Home

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My husband (I'll call him Denny) is a police officer, and our neighbors know it. Last week a neighbor called Denny while he was home — off duty — and asked him to meet him about a mile from our house. We thought this neighbor was having car trouble. When Denny got there, he found some guy holding a woman hostage with a gun! Not only was valuable time lost until the police arrived, but Denny was totally unprepared for the situation and could have been killed. Another time, a neighbor lady called Denny and asked him to come over and arrest some guy because he had cashed her paycheck without her permission!

Abby, why do people think that because off-duty police officers are armed they are always available? (Cops carry their weapons to protect themselves from criminals who might recognize them as cops and try to "waste" them.)

Police officers are taught in the academy that if they see a crime committed, they should try to be a good witness, but leave the law enforcing to the cops in that jurisdiction. (Most cops don't appreciate outsiders butting in.)

The bottom line is this: If a cop is needed, don't waste time calling one who is home off duty. Call the station.

I hope you think this is important enough for your column. — DENNY'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: It is. Thanks for the tip.

DEAR ABBY: I identified with that long-suffering woman who stayed married to a physically filthy man for 47 years. I was married for 10 years to a man who never showered. He wore his underwear for 24 hours a day for over a month at a time. I finally left him when I had to put a tissue over my nose when we made love. (Yes, he expected lovemaking regularly!)

But do you know what really ticked me off? It was his adoring family — especially his mother and sister — who kept insinuating that his filthy condition was my fault!

Outside of hiring two thugs to rip the clothes off his back and throw him under a shower, I can't imagine what they expected me to do.

We are not married anymore for obvious reasons, and his family still thinks I'm crazy for giving up this prize. What do you think? — HAD ENOUGH

DEAR HAD: I think 10 years with such a man is about 9 years, 11 months and 3 weeks too long.

DEAR ABBY: My husband has a gorgeous beard that neither one of us wants him to shave, but it's so stiff it irritates my face, which becomes raw and abraded from the roughness. We've tried hair conditioners, but they don't help.

Can you give us any advice on how to save our love life — short of shaving his beard? — SORE IN LOVE

DEAR SORE: Can you fashion some kind of protective covering on the order of a ski mask? Or perhaps a "snood" to cover the beard? (You may break up laughing in the middle of a love scene, so keep your eyes closed.)

Couple Marries On Monday

The wedding ceremony of Christine Ward and Robert Earl Williams took place Monday in Greenville. Lucy Mae Murphy conducted the double ring ceremony.

The mother of the bride is Lucy Mae Murphy of Greenville. The bridegroom is the son of Robert Williams of Ayden.

The bride was given in marriage by her mother, Christine E. Ward was a bridesmaid.

A reception is planned for Saturday at the home of the bride.

Nursing Offers Opportunities

NEW YORK (AP) — In view of the current shortage of nurses, the profession offers challenging career opportunities, says Dr. Marilyn Jaffe-Ruiz, dean of the Lienhard School of Nursing at Pace University.

"More people are getting MBAs; women have more options; they are entering traditionally male fields," she says, explaining the lack of nurses and nursing students. "It's an ideal time to be a nurse."

Among the advantages, she points out, nurses can work almost anywhere in the United States and even abroad. They can work days, evenings, late nights or weekends.

Soviets Conduct N-Test

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union said it conducted an underground nuclear explosion today at its test range in Soviet Central Asia — the fourth since the Soviets ended their 19-month unilateral test ban Feb. 26.

The official Tass news agency said the 20- to 150-kiloton nuclear device exploded at 5:05 a.m. Moscow time, or 9:05 p.m. EDT Thursday.

Twenty kilotons was the yield of the atomic bomb the United States dropped on Hiroshima, Japan, in 1945. One kiloton is the explosive force of 1,000 tons of TNT.

Tass said the test was designed to perfect military technology, but it provided no other information.

The Soviets announced the three previous explosions on Feb. 26, March 12 and April 3. Tass said the first two had a yield of up to 20 kilotons.

Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev declared a halt in nuclear tests in August 1985 to mark the 40th anniversary of the attack on Hiroshima.

The moratorium became a centerpiece of Soviet foreign policy, and Gorbachev extended it several times. But the Reagan administration refused to go along, saying it needed further tests to ensure the reliability of nuclear weapons and to develop new technology.

Earlier this week, Tass said Gorbachev told Secretary of State George Shultz in a Kremlin meeting that the Soviet Union was willing to work out agreements to lessen the yield and frequency of nuclear tests.

Argentine Rebels Holding Garrison

By WILLIAM H. HEATH
Associated Press Writer
BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Rebels led by a cashiered army major accused of helping run a detention and torture center held out at a provincial garrison today in demand of amnesty for officers accused of human rights violations.

President Raul Alfonsin summoned the commanders of Argentina's five Army corps to an emergency meeting today to assess the rebellion, considered the gravest crisis of his 40-month-old civilian government.

Alfonsin appealed to the rebels at a 500-man paratroop regiment near the western city of Cordoba to surrender in a nationally broadcast speech Thursday night. He declared that "the democracy of the Argentines is not negotiable."

An estimated 150,000 flag-waving demonstrators gathered outside the national Congress building in Buenos Aires and roared their approval of Alfonsin's speech amplified over loudspeakers. Similar, though smaller, "in support of democracy" rallies were held in all of the nation's major cities, including Cordoba, 440 miles northwest of the capital.

Gen. Antonio Fichera, commander of the Third Army Corps, which is based in Cordoba, issued a communique saying his troops, which include the paratroop regiment, would respond to all orders "except those referring to military repression against other units."

The major, Ernesto Guillermo Barreiro, took refuge in the 14th Paratroop Regiment late Wednesday in defiance of federal judges seeking his testimony regarding atrocities committed at La Perla detention camp near Cordoba during the 1976-1983 rightist military dictatorship. Human rights groups say Barreiro was an officer at the camp and participated in abductions, torture and murder of suspected leftists.

He had been considered likely to be formally charged after providing testimony.

Government officials said Barreiro, who was declared "in rebellion" and cashiered Thursday by the Defense Ministry, was backed by about 15 officers and an undetermined number of enlisted men.

The rebels issued a communique demanding amnesty for all military officers accused of human rights abuses and the resignation of Army Chief of Staff Gen. Hector Rios Erenu and his replacement by someone meeting their approval. They also demanded an end to what they described as the administration's hostility toward the military.

Bush Reports Raising More Than $2 Million

By RITA BEAMISH
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President George Bush, with $2.3 million raised toward his 1988 White House race, is investing heavily in Michigan where the first volleys will be fired in the GOP presidential contest.

In his first disclosure of the activities of his presidential campaign committee and the exploratory committee that preceded it, Bush this week reported expenditures of $1.6 million, with $556,438 going into the Michigan delegate contests.

The report, sent to the Federal Election Commission, covered the period from July 10, 1986, when he opened his exploratory effort, through March 31, 1987.

When he set up his exploratory committee, he announced its initial effort would be to back candidates he had recruited for the August precinct delegate contests in Michigan. Those races are part of the state's long process leading to the selection in February 1988 of delegates to the Republican National Convention.

Bush, who officially is an undeclared candidate, also reported spending $47,538 in the other early caucus state of Iowa, $15,217 in New Hampshire and smaller sums in Texas, Florida, Missouri and Alabama.

The first major party candidate to enter the 1988 race officially, former Delaware Gov. Pierre S. du Pont, has raised $1.4 million since starting his campaign last fall, said his spokesman, Bob Perkins.

Du Pont has spent $545,013, has $407,560 in cash on hand and chose not to go into Michigan, Perkins said.

He said the campaign had reached its goal of $1 million by March, but conceded in reference to the vice president's fund-raising ability, "The competition is pretty stiff for the dollars. We decided long ago we would not be able to out-fund-raise" Bush or GOP hopefuls Rep. Jack Kemp of New York and Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole of Kansas.

Kemp has not filed a financial report yet because he formed his committee after the March 31 end of the first quarter. But on Wednesday he became the third 1988 candidate — along with Democrats Rep. Richard Gephardt and former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt — to apply to the Federal Election Commission for federal matching funds for his campaign.

Although such funds cannot be released until 1988, the FEC can certify candidates as qualified to receive the money. To qualify, a candidate must raise at least $5,000 in each of 20 states in donations of $250 or less.

Dole reported raising $626,689 through his exploratory committee and spending $417,947 as of March 31. He announced his exploratory committee March 3. He also has more than $2 million left over from his Senate re-election race last November, and that could be transferred to the presidential fund.

Among Democrats, Sen. Joseph Biden of Delaware leaped to an early start with money, reporting receipts of $1.7 million in one month including $1,000 contributions from such heavy hitters as Disney Co. chief Michael Eisner and Los Angeles film exhibitor Bruce Corwin. Biden reported spending $186,571.

Gephardt raised close to $1.1 million since last November and Babbitt raised $824,777 since the beginning of the year, their reports show.

Former Colorado Sen. Gary Hart has not filed a report yet because he did not have a campaign committee in place during the first quarter.

Gephardt got $65,750 from political action committees, while Babbitt and Biden did not accept PAC money.

Du Pont is not accepting PAC money either, Perkins said. Bush got $25,250 from 118 PACs, and Dole got $22,150 from nine PACs. Dole also transferred $5,913 left over from his 1980 presidential committee to his 1988 exploratory committee.

Bush reported paying the political action committee he founded, Fund For America's Future, $13,743 for mailing lists, equipment and office supplies.

Allies To Be Checked

or conventional fighting capability.

Shultz took issue with suggestions that Gorbachev's proposal probably would divide the United States and its allies.

"If we are placed in a box, it's a wonderful box to be in. It's the box we've been trying to get into," the secretary said. "That is, we have been working from day one to bring about radical reductions in these weapons systems."

He said the question of removing battlefield-type tactical nuclear weapons, those of very short range, is not a part of the superpower negotiations.

As for the conventional force imbalance in Europe, he said the United States has "a negotiation going on right now to set a mandate" for talks that would broaden those that have been taking place in Vienna.

And, he added, "I think the assurance (to NATO allies) comes from the fact that we have troops there ... we behave like an ally ... we have the same security concerns."

The Shultz trip to Reagan's ranch took on the aura of a summit in its own right, with the secretary taking a helicopter to the ranch from Point Mugu Naval Air Station to a landing pad, then wending his way toward the ranch on a curving road.

When he stepped from his car, Nancy Reagan walked up and kissed him, and Reagan shook his hand, while nearly a dozen presidential aides stood by. Then Reagan and Shultz, accompanied by national security adviser Frank Carlucci and White House chief of staff Howard H. Baker Jr., went into a guest-house adjoining the ranch.

Seventy-five minutes later, Reagan, wearing a pink cowboy shirt, jeans and cowboy boots, walked Shultz to a microphone, and the pair's comments were piped by the White House communications agency back to a press room at the Santa Barbara Sheraton.

Time and again during his subsequent news conference at the press center, Shultz emphasized that no quick decisions would be made on the Soviet proposal, although he did say there would be a decision "long before" the seven-nation allied economic summit in Venice in June. "But I don't want to put a time on it."

Regarding the Kremlin's offer, Shultz said "the president hasn't made a decision about it yet," and Reagan said he planned to consult with congressional leaders of both the Democratic and Republican parties when he returns to Washington next week.

"All I heard today is in the direction that I want to go in," Reagan said at one point. But he said he doesn't want another summit with Gorbachev just for summit's sake.

"There has to be some substantial agreements that make it worthwhile," said Reagan, who has given Gorbachev an open-ended invitation to come to Washington.

Reagan administration optimism about the prospects of an arms accord, Shultz said, "doesn't mean that anything goes."

When asked why Gorbachev has made such far-reaching proposals, particularly during a time of superpower tension over embassy espionage, Shultz replied:

"And why are the Soviets doing this? I don't know. They say they're doing it because they want a less threatening and less nuclear world. And maybe you should take them at face value."

In 1760, the state General Assembly passed a resolution establishing Pitt County.

While Clemens Struggles

Key Enjoying Great Start

TORONTO (AP) — Jimmy Key is having the kind of start to 1987 that Roger Clemens enjoyed a year ago.

Conversely, Clemens is struggling the way Key did at the beginning of 1986.

"All I know is that it feels a lot better to be 3-0 instead of 0-3," Key said Thursday night after tossing a two-hitter over six innings in the Toronto Blue Jays' 4-2 victory over the Boston Red Sox.

Key started the 1986 campaign with three straight setbacks, but rebounded to finish as 14-11. Boston's Cy Young Award winner Clemens, who won his first 14 decisions last year before losing to Key, is winless this season in two starts, both against Key.

"I had fairly decent control, a lot better than last time," said Clemens, who gave up four runs on five hits and lasted only four innings in an 11-1 loss to Toronto last Saturday. "I just need to keep doing what I'm doing and it'll all come together."

The game was one of only two played in American League. In the other, Seattle beat Oakland 6-5.

Solo homers by Dave Henderson in the third inning and Jim Rice in the fourth had staked the Red Sox to a two-run lead and Clemens seemed in control.

"Things never look too good when you're down to Roger, but I managed to keep the club close and we were fortunate enough to come back," said Key, who, in his last five starts against Clemens, is 3-1.

Rance Mulliniks went 3-for-4 with a home run and two runs batted in to support Key. The veteran third baseman boosted his average to .428 from .353.

"I'm just feeling very comfortable at the plate," Mulliniks said. "Roger's a tremendous pitcher and I was lucky enough tonight to have some balls fall in for me."

"On the homer, I just don't think I can hit a ball any better than that. The wind was blowing in pretty good from right, but I didn't hit it high enough to let the wind keep it in the park. But there's no doubt in my mind that Clemens will bounce back and win 20 again this year."

Key struck out three and allowed only three walks, all in the sixth. Don Baylor flied out to end the threat.

"I'd thrown a lot of pitches (108) by that point and was pretty tired," said Key. "The game was still close at that point and I think I was trying to be too careful."

The Red Sox put runners at second and third with one out in the ninth, but Tom Henke got Dwight Evans on a popup and Henderson on a flyout to end the game and earn his first save.

"I haven't been in that situation very often this season, so it feels pretty good to come out of it with the save," Henke said.

Clemens struck out nine and walked two over 7 1-3 innings. George Bell doubled to start the Toronto sixth and Jesse Barfield followed with a line-drive single to center that put the Jays ahead 3-2.

"I thought I threw fairly well," Clemens said. "You get tested real early with a club like Toronto."

Boston Manager John McNamara, whose club came in with a three-game winning streak, was pleased with his Clemens' performance.

"I thought he pitched real well, we just didn't do enough for him offensively," McNamara said.

Mulliniks led off the eighth with his first homer of the year and first since last July 17 to give the Jays a two-run cushion.

The Blue Jays started their comeback with a run in the fourth when Mulliniks singled to right, moved to second on a groundout and scored on second baseman Ed Romero's two-out fielding error.

Toronto pulled even in the fifth when Mike Sharperson singled, stole second and scored on Mulliniks' opposite-field single to left.

Mariners 6, Athletics 5
An errant throw by Oakland second baseman Tony Phillips allowed the winning run to cross the plate.

Harold Reynolds started the Mariners' decisive rally in the fourth inning with a one-out double off Jose Rijo, 0-1. After a groundout, Mickey Brantley and Phil Bradley both walked to load the bases and bring up Ken Phelps.

The designated-hitter hit a sharp groundball up the middle that Rijo deflected toward Phillips, who bareheaded the ball and threw toward first. But Phelps collided with Oakland first baseman Ron Cey, and the ball rolled away allowing Brantley to score the game-winning run.

"Rijo may have been snakebit, he had tough luck tonight," Athletics Manager Tony LaRussa said. "But he did not make a pitch to get out of an inning."

Seattle starter Mike Trujillo, 1-0, pitched seven innings, allowing five runs on six hits. He walked three and struck out a career-high eight. Edwin Nunez pitched the final two innings for his second save.

"He was brilliant in the first couple of innings," Mariners Manager Dick Williams said of Trujillo. "Afterward he pitched great, but I was upset for a couple of innings."

"I settled down after the fourth inning and the hitters bailed me out with more runs," Trujillo said.

Carney Lansford extended his hitting streak to 10 games with a three-run homer in the third, but Seattle responded in the bottom of the inning with four runs.

More Bad Luck Continues To Plague Greg Norman

HILTON HEAD, S.C. (AP) — Greg Norman is beginning to get that picked-on feeling.

Norman, the principal victim of Larry Mize's pitch-in playoff birdie last weekend in the Masters, was breezing along at two under par Thursday in the first round of the Heritage Classic.

Then, on the 14th hole of the Harbour Town Golf Links, his tee shot clipped the limb of a tree that shades the front-left edge of the green.

The ball dropped down, hit a cart path and kicked left, out of bounds. It led to a double-bogey that sent Norman reeling back into the pack.

"Obviously," Norman said after finishing a 1-over-par 72, "the golfing gods still don't like me."

But, for the first time in almost a decade, they smiled on Mark Hayes.

Hayes, whose last official PGA Tour victory came in 1977, set a course record on the way to a 7-under-par 64 that provided him with a two-stroke lead.

"Everything was working together," the 37-year-old Hayes said. "That's the best round I've had in five or six years."

Yet it could have been better. "I missed two or three putts I should have made," he said.

Hayes birdied the first three holes and played the front side in 30, six under par and one better than the course record 31 set by Jack Nicklaus in 1975.

Hayes' fast start was the critical factor in the eight-birdie effort that gave him a two-shot lead over five others.

The group at 66 included West German Bernhard Langer, who one-putted 12 times; Howard Twitty, who played without a bogey; John Cook, Mark Calcavecchia and Scott Hoch.

South African David Frost and Steve Jones, who got into the invitational field only after Tony Sills withdrew, had 67s in blustery weather that produced gusty winds and occasional brief showers.

Mize, the upset-maker at the Masters last week, couldn't take advantage of the unusually low scoring on the difficult little course that winds through woods and marshes down to the lighthouse behind the 18th green.

He struggled to a 76 and must improve today if he is to qualify for the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday.

Defending champion Fuzzy Zoeller led a group at 68, and Corey Pavin, the only two-time winner on the Tour this season, and U.S. Open champ Ray Floyd were at 69, two under par.

Baker Posts Top Speed

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — An Oldsmobile driven by Buddy Baker has posted the fastest time ever for a General Motors car at the Alabama International Motor Speedway.

Baker, who posted a lap of 210.462 mph Thursday, was one of several drivers who toured the 2.66-mile track in preparation for the May 3 Winston 500 NASCAR Grand National race.

Bobby Allison's qualifying run of 209.274 mph in a Buick for last year's Winston 500 is the official track record for a GM car.

"It's a mighty fine feeling to come down here and run 210 as easily as we did," Baker said. "We have a lot more in that car, it wasn't nearly as loose as we'll have it for qualifying, and I didn't have the spoiler laid back as far as it will be, so I feel real good about going significantly faster when it comes time to qualify."

Also testing their cars were Bill Elliott, Phil Parsons, Rick Wilson, Ricky Rudd, Cale Yarborough and Terry Labonte.

Elliott, who ran 214.660 mph at the track in January, clocked 211.717 in his Ford, while Parsons ran 209.586 in an Oldsmobile.

Carmichael Ad Investigated

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — An internal investigation shows the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill did not grant permission for a television commercial for Rose's department stores to be filmed in Carmichael Auditorium in 1983, school officials said.

However, officials with the company that handled the filming say they did receive university clearance to shoot the advertisement, which featured Harlem Globetrotters star James "Twiggy" Sanders.

Lady Pirates Enter Tourney

East Carolina's Lady Pirate tennis team takes a 13-5 spring record into the Colonial Athletic Association's annual tournament which begins today in Williamsburg, Va.

The Lady Pirates are 18-9 overall, counting their 5-4 fall season. They have won eight of their last nine dual matches.

"I'm very pleased with the record we have right now," Coach Pat Sherman said. "I feel like the girls have played to their potential and that is all I can ask of them. We have had a lot adversity during the season and they have hung together well as a team."

Richmond, William & Mary and James Madison appear to be the class of the tournament field. "They have had excellent seasons and have proven themselves," Sherman said. "Our conference tournament will use a blind draw so it really is the luck of the draw that can determine just how well you do."

Amy Ziemer is the top seed for the ECU women with a 6-6 spring record. Maria Swaim will be number two with a 7-6 mark. Ty Myers, seeded third, is 8-5 while number four Susan Montjoy is 7-6. Holly Murray, ranked fifth, is 6-2, and Kim Bergen, ranked sixth, has the best ECU record at 10-2.

Jeannie Jones and Swaim will lead the Pirates in doubles and are 9-3 on the spring. Myers and Montjoy, who will play number two, are 9-4 while Murray and Ziemer, number three, are 7-2.

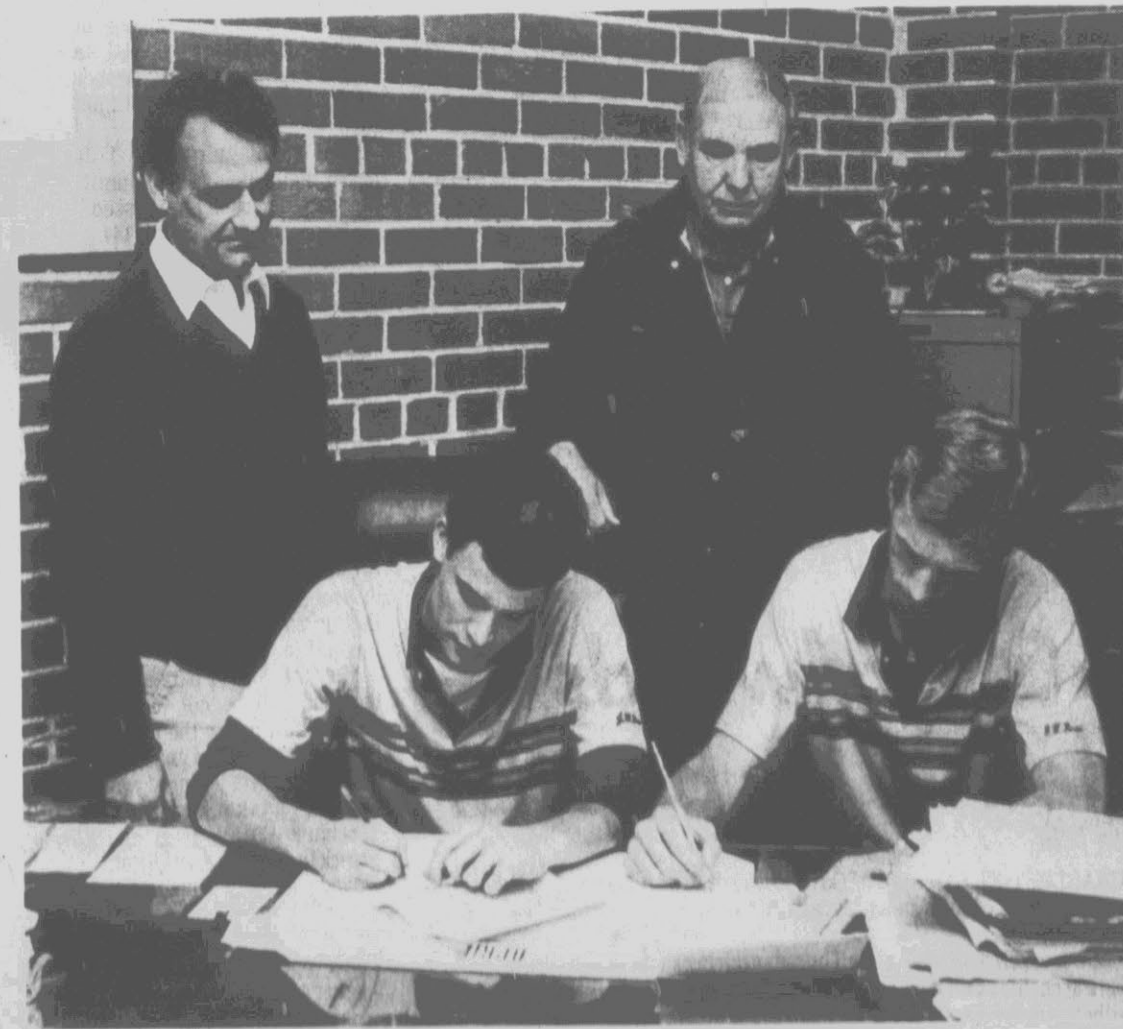

The men's team closes out its season this weekend when it travels to Harrisonburg, Va., to take part in the James Madison Spring Invitational.

Strawberry Homers, Key Mets

By The Associated Press
The New York Mets and Darryl Strawberry are keeping the home runs coming.

The Mets continued their streak of at least one home run in each game this season as Strawberry's fifth of the season led a 9-3 assault over the Philadelphia Phillies on Thursday night.

"I'm not overswinging or overstriding and I'm waiting for my pitch," said Strawberry, who took over the league with four runs batted in for a total of 15. "I'm just swinging well. I've developed good work habits and good things are happening."

What happened to the Phillies was another poor start that has meant a 1-8 record to open the season.

The Mets took a 4-0 lead with the help of two bases-loaded walks by Joe Cowley, 0-2, who has an earned run average of 48.60 in his two starts. Strawberry's two-run homer came in the second inning off reliever Tom Hume, and it made the score 7-0.

"I'm here to have fun," Strawberry said. "I'm trying to live up to what I can do, not the dreams of others and what they think I should do."

In other NL games Thursday, Montreal beat St. Louis 4-3; Pittsburgh defeated Chicago 6-0, and San Diego needed 10 innings to down Los Angeles 3-2.

New York's Rick Aguilera went eight innings for the victory, his first of the season, allowing nine hits with eight strikeouts. Terry Leach pitched the ninth.

Mets Manager Dave Johnson lifted Aguilera because he had thrown more than 100 pitches on the cold, rainy night.

"I'd like him to come back with three days' rest," Johnson said. "Aguilera had a good fastball and the best forkball he's shown me this season."

The Mets team record for consecutive games with a home run at the start of the season is 10, set in 1970 and matched in 1975. The major-league record is 13 by the 1954 Chicago Cubs.

The victory enabled the Mets to sweep a three-game series from the Phillies for the first time since 1972, when they took four-and-three-game sets.

"Once again we were in a hole at the start," Phillies Manager John Felske said referring to the fact that his team has been behind in the first inning in every game this season but one.

The Phillies scored in the sixth on an RBI single by Luis Aguayo, who added an RBI double in the eighth and then scored on a single by Mike Easler.

Expos 4, Cardinals 3
Randy St. Claire struck out pinch-hitter Jack Clark with two runners on to end the game and earn the Expos' first save of the season.

St. Louis led 2-0 before the Expos rallied for four runs, three a sixth-inning rally that was capped by Tom Foley's two-run double. Ozzie Smith's eighth-inning single brought the Cardinals within one and brought on St. Claire, who got the final two outs in the inning.

The 26-year-old right-hander gave up consecutive one-out singles to Willie McGee and pinch-hitter Curt Ford before getting Mike Laga to pop out and striking out Clark on five pitches.

"He got it by me before I knew what happened," Clark said of the final pitch, which was clocked at 91 mph.

"I've got to take a chance," Montreal Buck Rodgers said of going to St. Claire with designated relief ace Tim Burke sidelined with a bad right elbow. "This is the only way I'm going to find out."

Neal Heaton, 1-1, was the winner.

while Bob Forsch, 1-1, was charged with the loss.

Pirates 6, Cubs 0
Bob Kipper threw a four-hitter for his first complete game and shutout in the major leagues. The 22-year-old left-hander had a career-high eight strikeouts and walked one.

"I got ahead of the hitters and I got my offspeed stuff over," Kipper said. "He (Mike Lavalliere) called a great game and that always helps when you're in cahoots with the catcher. I was happy to get the opportunity to go all the way."

Lavalliere and Andy Van Slyke, both of whom the Pirates obtained on April 1 in a trade with St. Louis for catcher Tony Pena, had three hits and two runs batted in each.

"It's always a great feeling to see players you get in a transaction do well," Pirates General Manager Syd Thrift said. "We always had high regard for Lavalliere. He has a good swing and we're trying to get him to use the entire field."

Van Slyke doubled home one run in the first off Ed Lynch, 1-1, and tripled in the sixth to touch off a four-run rally, which featured Lavalliere's two-run double.

Padres 3, Dodgers 2
Tony Gwynn had the first five-hit game of his career and scored the winning run in the 10th inning as the Padres won for just the second time in 10 games.

Gwynn became the first San Diego player to get five hits in a game since Kevin McReynolds did it on Sept. 4, 1984.

Santa Barbara Helps Stephenson Reminisce

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — For Jan Stephenson, competing in the $300,000 Santa Barbara Open brings back memories of a faraway place.

"It's so pretty, it reminds me of Australia," Stephenson said of the Sandpiper Golf Course, one of two public courses to be used in the Ladies Professional Golf Association event. "I grew up on courses just like this."

"I'm really surprised. I hadn't heard that much about it until I got here, and I'm really impressed."

Stephenson was among 144 golfers entered in the inaugural Santa Barbara Open, a 54-hole tournament which offers a $45,000 top prize.

"The golf course is excellent. It's one of the best we have on the tour," Stephenson said. "The (winning) score won't be too many under par, maybe four. I'll really be surprised if the scores are low because the golf courses are tough."

The tournament, scheduled to begin today, splits the field the first two days between Sandpiper, which is located in nearby Goleta, and the La Purisima Golf Course just outside Lompoc.

After the golfers play each course, the field will be cut to the low 70 scores and ties for the final 18 holes Sunday, to be played at Sandpiper.

Among others entered were Jane Geddes, Ayako Okamoto, Patty Sheehan, Cathy Gerring, Cindy Rarick and Kathy Postlewait.

Sandpiper, which opened in 1972, is located about 110 miles northwest of Los Angeles while La Purisima, which opened last September, is another 40 miles to the northwest.

Par at both courses is 72. The Sandpiper course measures 6,311 yards, La Purisima 6,250.

Among those not playing are Betsy King, the LPGA's top money winner this year with $162,432 in earnings. Also taking a break are Pat Bradley, Chris Johnson and Nancy Lopez.

Geddes ranks second on the money earning list at $131,080. Okamoto moved into fifth place at $78,658 by winning the $200,000 Inamori Open at San Diego last weekend.

Postlewait rank sixth through ninth, respectively, and Stephenson is 11th.

Most of the golfers hadn't seen the two courses before practice rounds earlier this week. One of the major differences of the courses is the size of the greens.

"You have to hit some precise shots because the greens are very small and very firm," Sue Ertl, a touring pro since 1982, said of La Purisima. "There are some places where if you miss the fairways or greens, you're going to have some major trouble."

Said 23-year tour veteran Donna Caponi of Sandpiper: "The greens are enormous. I like everything about it so far. I think it's going to be a putting contest because the greens are so big. If they were smaller, it would be a shot-maker's golf course."

After playing La Purisima, Caponi said, "This is tougher than Sandpiper. I expect the scores to be higher here. But you'll always have somebody shooting 67 or 68 no matter where you play."

AC's Edwards Heads To Baptist

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — Gary Edwards, who turned a sagging Atlantic Christian College basketball program into a winner, was named head coach at Baptist College.

The announcement was made Thursday during a news conference. Edwards, the ninth basketball coach at Baptist in 21 years, replaces Tommy Gaither, who resigned to become head coach at Morehead State.

"I have dreamed many times of coaching at an institution such as Baptist. I've dreamed of being a Division I head coach. There's only about 290 Division I jobs in this country and Gary Edwards has one and that is very exciting for me," he said Thursday.

Edwards said one of his first goals is to get Baptist into the NCAA playoffs as a Big South Conference member when the league gets an automatic bid to the tournament in a few years.

In three years at Atlantic Christian, Edwards compiled a 62-35 record at the Wilson, N.C., school, leading the Bulldogs to two straight Carolinas Conference championships and back-to-back appearances in the NAIA playoffs in Kansas City.

Gwynn led off the 10th with his fifth hit — a single off Matt Young, 0-3. Carmelo Martinez followed with a double inside the left-field line as Gwynn scored from first.

"When I got to the bench everybody was congratulating each other," Gwynn said. "Then Carmelo came up to me and said I had missed the hit-and-run (sign). I said, 'You're kidding me. That's going to cost me $100.' But we won. It was worth it."

Martinez had tied the score 2-2 in the fifth with an RBI double off Los Angeles starter Orel Hershiser. The Dodgers had taken a 2-1 lead in the top of the inning on Franklin Stubbs' second homer of the season.

Lance McCullers, 1-0, the fourth Padres pitcher, pitched a scoreless 10th inning for the victory.

Ayden-Grifton Nets Tennis Win

MOUNT OLIVE — Ayden-Grifton rolled up a 7-2 tennis victory over non-conference foe North Duplin in a match Thursday.

Ayden-Grifton captured five of the six singles matches to put the match on ice, then added two more wins in the doubles. Two of the wins came hard, however, as North Duplin forced split sets in the number one and number six singles.

Ayden-Grifton is now 3-5 overall. The Chargers travel to Charles B. Aycock on April 28 for their next action.

Jordan Continues To Set Records

By The Associated Press
 Michael Jordan is keeping Wilt Chamberlain company in the NBA record book.
 The third-year Chicago guard scored 61 points Thursday night in a 117-114 loss to the Atlanta Hawks to become the second player to ever surpass the 3,000-point mark in a season. Chamberlain was the other, doing it three times, the last in 1963.
 Jordan also became the second player to ever score at least 50 points in three consecutive games, having scored 53 against Indiana on Sunday and 50 in Milwaukee the next night. Chamberlain was the other, doing it five consecutive times in 1961.

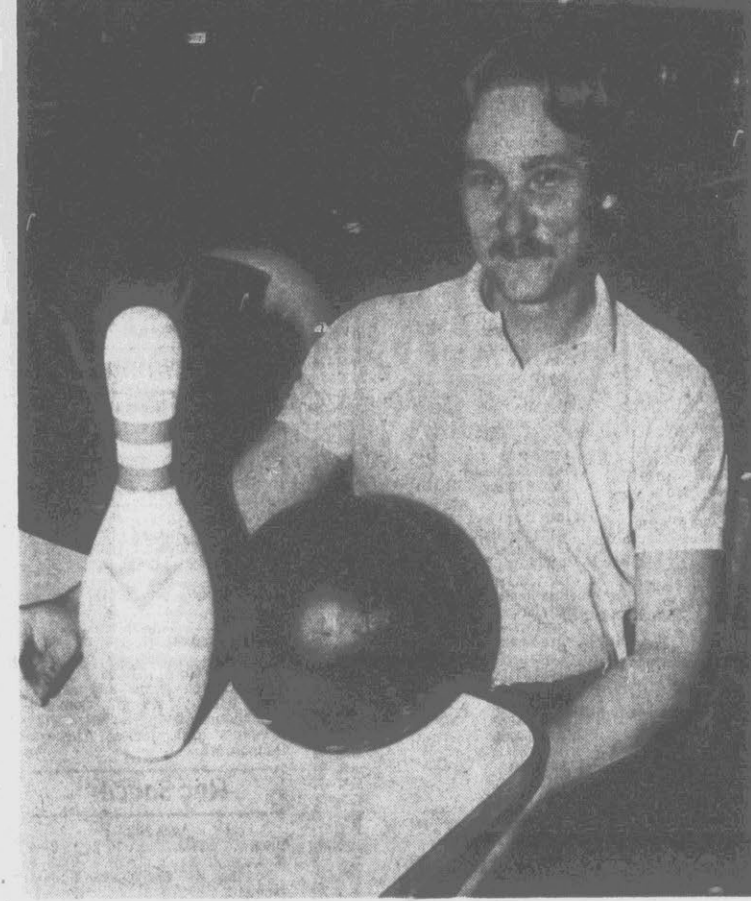

Jordan also scored 23 consecutive points for the Bulls in the game, including the final 17 of the first half, breaking the record of 18. Chamberlain wasn't the holder of that mark, Jordan was, doing it earlier in the season.
 In other NBA games Thursday night, the Los Angeles Lakers beat Utah 110-97; Seattle beat the Los Angeles Clippers 118-87, and Sacramento beat Denver 123-117.
 "I know records are meant to be broken but I also know that I am the only guard in the history of basketball to have scored this many points," Jordan said. "I'm a realist because I'll know there will never be another scorer like Chamberlain. I may reach 70 points someday, but doing it consistently like he did is out of the question.

 "But these records and marks meant nothing," Jordan said. "I'd rather have had the win because it would have clinched the seventh playoff spot in the Eastern Conference."
 Oh yeah, the game. It's easy to forget the other Bulls and their opponent when Jordan gets going.
 Atlanta's Dominique Wilkins connected on an 18-foot jumper from the top of the key with 11 seconds remaining, then added a free throw to break a 114-114 tie as the Hawks set a franchise record with their 57th victory of the season.

Wilkins, who finished with 34 points, put Atlanta ahead 114-112 with 41 seconds left after the Hawks had trailed 101-91 with 7:02 left in the fourth quarter. The Hawks took the lead at 103-102 on a jumper by Antoine Carr.
 The score was then tied six times, the last at 114-114 after two free throws by Jordan with 32 seconds remaining.
 "It was a tough game to lose, but I hurt my leg in the first quarter and by the time the fourth quarter rolled around, I was really in agony," Jordan said.
 The 61 points matched Jordan's regular-season best. He scored 63 points against Boston in a playoff game last year.
 "I have to give Atlanta and Dominique all the credit in the world and I agree with Coach (Doug) Collins that the Hawks are the most relentless team in all of basketball," Jordan said. "They never stop coming at you."

 Neither does Michael Jordan.
 Lakers 110, Jazz 97
 Kareem Abdul-Jabbar celebrated his 40th birthday with 15 points, 10 rebounds and five assists. Sounds a lot like the way he has celebrated most of his birthdays since entering the NBA.
 "I thought Kareem played great tonight," teammate Byron Scott said. "He sure doesn't act like he's 40 years old."
 The Jazz presented Abdul-Jabbar with a birthday cake and the crowd serenaded him before the game.
 Once the game began, Earvin "Magic" Johnson took over, scoring 31 points as the Lakers rolled.
 Utah shoot poorly, hitting just 36 percent from the field, "but one of the reasons was our good defense," Lakers Coach Pat Riley said.
 "We were scattered offensively, but overall it was a strong enough defensive game to win it," Riley said. "And I think we had a psychological edge because we haven't played well in Utah this year and we didn't want them to beat us three times in a row here."
 Johnson scored 21 points in the first half as Los Angeles built leads of 28-18 after one quarter and 55-37 at halftime.
 James Worthy added 22 points for the Lakers and Scott had 17. Utah was led by Karl Malone with 24 points and Carey Scurry with 20.

SuperSonics 118, Clippers 87
 Dale Ellis scored a career-high 41 points as the Sonics won for just the third time in 10 games.
 The Clippers finished their home season with a 9-32 record and they have now lost 12 games in a row and 24 of 26.
 Ellis scored 24 in the first half as Seattle built a 22-point halftime lead. Xavier McDaniel added 23 points for the Sonics. Los Angeles was led by Michael Cage with 19 points and Darnell Valentine with 17.
 "It's time to get ready for the playoffs," said Ellis, who reached the 40-point mark for the fourth time this season. "I just hope I can extend that into the playoffs. I'm a scorer, playing in a position where they want me to score points. So I have to keep shooting."
 Kings 123, Nuggets 117
 Eddie Johnson scored 14 of his 26 points in the final quarter to lead the Kings, who won for the ninth time in 13 games.
 The Kings broke away from an 87-87 tie at the end of the third period on the strength of Johnson's performance as well as a nine-point fourth-quarter effort from Otis Thorpe, who finished with 28 points.
 Alex English topped Denver with 30 points and Lafayette Lever added 21.
 "I thought we played a good first half but we also played a terrible second half," Denver Coach Doug Moe said. "I felt that we were kind of out of it tonight. Sacramento earned it tonight. They were very physical and they deserved to win the ball game."

The One That Got Away
 Kevin Williams, bowling in the Thursday Night Mixed League at Hillcrest Lanes, rolled a 299 game in last week's outing, missing a perfect game by only one pin. After 11 straight strikes, he left the nine pin standing in his bid for the perfect game. He had a 658 series for the night. (Reflector Photo)

Accomplishments Don't Phase Star

CHICAGO (AP) — Michael Jordan was put his name in the NBA record book another time, but seemed unmoved by his latest accomplishment.
 "These records and marks meant nothing," Jordan said Thursday night after the Chicago Bulls dropped a 117-114 decision to the Atlanta Hawks despite his 61 points. "I'd rather have had the win because it would have clinched the seventh playoff spot in the Eastern Conference."
 Jordan became the second player in NBA history to crash the 3,000-point, single-season threshold with 3,024. The only other player to score 3,000 points in a season was Wilt Chamberlain, who did it for the third time in 1963.
 Jordan's effort on Thursday also made him the first NBA player since Chamberlain to score at least 50 points in three consecutive games.
 "It caps off a great season for me," Jordan conceded. "I'm just glad this team has never quit. And when we go to Boston Friday night, we know in our hearts we can win."
 Chamberlain, a center, holds the single-season scoring record of 4,029 points in the 1961-1962 season.
 "Wilt was the greatest, and since I am a guard, I don't ever feel I'll come close to setting the scoring marks he did," Jordan said.

 Jordan, a 6-foot-6 Brooklyn native, speaks as if someone else is responsible for the baskets that he engineers with a multitude of fakes, powerful leaps and deadly dunks.
 "I'm sometimes surprised at myself," he said in a recent interview. "To get where you're going, sometimes you have to surprise yourself."
 To Jordan's coach, Doug Collins, the way the team and Jordan work together is important.
 "The thing I'm most proud of is the way the guys ... work to help him get open to do the things he can do," Collins said.
 Jordan said he knew he might break the 3,000-point mark Thursday, but he wasn't outwardly excited before the fact.
 "If I get it, I get it," he had said in earlier interview. "Individual accolades are fine ... I just want to make this franchise better every year I'm here."
 Jordan said he probably wants to play for eight more years and has expressed interest in becoming a professional golfer after that.

Johnson scored 21 points in the first half as Los Angeles built leads of 28-18 after one quarter and 55-37 at halftime.
 James Worthy added 22 points for the Lakers and Scott had 17. Utah was led by Karl Malone with 24 points and Carey Scurry with 20.

Pro Wrestler Is Found Dead

DALLAS (AP) — An autopsy on the body of professional wrestler Mike Von Erich, found zipped inside a sleeping bag with no evidence of injury, failed to establish a cause of death, but officials say it appears to have been suicide.
 The body was found Thursday in heavy underbrush near Lewisville Lake, where Von Erich's abandoned car was found Wednesday night, Denton County Sheriff's Capt. Allen Lewis said.
 The body was discovered by a police dog sniffing Von Erich's trail.
 "He was lying there very peaceful, like you would go out for an overnight, to get away from it all," said Justice of the Peace Hubert Cunningham, who declared Von Erich dead and ordered an autopsy.

 The 23-year-old, 210-pound athlete, a member of the famed Von Erich wrestling dynasty founded by Fritz Von Erich, was last seen Saturday when he posted $3,500 bond on drug and alcohol charges.
 He had been arrested in Argyle early that day and held briefly for investigation of driving while intoxicated, possession of less than two ounces of marijuana and possession of a controlled substance.
 World Class Championship Wrestling referee David Manning said the family first became alarmed Saturday night when Von Erich failed to appear for a scheduled match.

Peanut Butter, Indoor Air Rank High On Cancer-Causing Scale

By WARREN E. LEARY
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A peanut butter sandwich has 10 times the cancer-causing potential of a serving of bacon, but is 20 times safer than breathing the air in a normal home for 14 hours, according to researchers who developed a scale for measuring the dangers of cancerous substances. California scientists said Thursday they developed a system for ranking the potential hazard to humans of natural and man-made chemicals that cause cancer in animals.

The scale is designed to help assess realistically the hazards of numerous carcinogens people hear about but don't know how to relate to personally, they said.

Scientists at the University of California, Berkeley, said their system — which, for example, rates a daily glass of beer as a greater cancer hazard than some pesticide pollution — takes into account real-life exposures to the many cancer-causing substances.

"Our purpose is not to scare people about an occasional raw mushroom or beer, but to help them make sense of the many reports they see about this or that causing cancer in animals," Dr. Bruce N. Ames, the principal researcher, said in a telephone interview.

Ames said the scale, expressed as a percentage of risk over a lifetime of exposure, rates possible cancer hazards to people based upon the known potency of a substance in animals and the likely human exposure.

Under this system, a daily ration of the peanut butter used in one sandwich has a rating of 0.03 percent because of a carcinogen from mold that forms on peanuts.

Bacon, which develops carcinogens called nitrosamines when cooked, has a 0.003 percent rating if eaten each day. And the normal air pollution in a conventional house, breathed 14 hours a day, is rated 0.6 percent.

The researchers, including Renae MaGaw and Lois Swirsky Gold, describe their HEP scale, for "Human Exposure doseRodent Potency," in the April 17 issue of the journal Science, a special issue focusing on assessing risks.

The scale is an extension of a much-discussed report Ames published in 1983. That study concluded that the most-common carcinogens to which people are exposed are natural substances, such as by-products of mold and fungus contamination of grains and other foods, and not man-made compounds such as pesticides and industrial chemicals.

Half of all chemicals tested, whether natural or man-made, have been identified as potential cancer-causing agents in rats or mice, the new report said. It also questioned the validity of making inferences about human risks based upon high-dose rodent tests.

Merely identifying a substance as a potential cancer agent is not very useful for making health decisions without considering amount and likelihood of exposure, as well as other hazards with which people come in contact, the researchers said.

Ames bases his HEP rating on a ratio between the dose rate that induces cancer in half of the animals tested, called TD-50, and lifetime human daily exposure to the chemical per unit of body weight.

Using this scale, chlorinated tap water had a low HEP rating that still was several times higher than the potential hazard of pesticide residues, the researchers said. Because chlorine in water kills many disease-causing bacteria and viruses, they noted, its potential cancer hazard is insignificant compared with the sickness and death it prevents.

By contrast, the potential hazard from breathing formaldehyde from building materials in the air of a mobile home is 1,000 times greater than the risk of chlorinated tap water, according to the scale.

The alcohol in a glass of beer poses a possible cancer hazard 3,000 times that of tap water, said the report, and dried herbs, raw mushrooms, peanuts and other natural foods can have higher scores in the amounts generally consumed than trace pollutants.

There isn't enough human data to determine whether any of these potential hazards warrant a change of eating habits, the researchers said, but the numbers serve to point out that there isn't enough information to do low-dose risk assessment on many potential carcinogens.

"If people start worrying about all the things that give cancer, then they can't concentrate on the important things, such as cigarette smoking and the buildup of radon gas in buildings," Ames said.

Cancer Institute Cites 'Progress'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Cancer Institute, reacting to criticism that it has overstated advances against the disease, says a number of trends indicate there has been real progress in the war on cancer.

Increasing survival rates, a decreasing percentage of smokers and declining death rates for a number of cancers are some of the hopeful indicators, the institute said Thursday in response to a General Accounting Office report.

GAO, the non-partisan investigative arm of Congress, said institute survival rate statistics had given a misleading impression of progress in the treatment and prevention of cancer.

"For the majority of cancers we examined, the actual improvements have been small or have been overestimated by the published rates," GAO said.

The agency said it analyzed the way the cancer institute collects statistics, reviewed medical literature on 12 types of cancer and interviewed groups of experts at comprehensive cancer centers around the country.

It concluded there was no improvement in patient survival rates for stomach cancer from 1950 to 1982; a slight improvement for breast, cervical, colon, rectal, head and neck, and lung cancers; moderate improvement for bladder, endometrial and prostate cancer, and dramatic improvement for acute leukemia and non-Hodgkins lymphoma.

But GAO said leukemia and non-Hodgkins lymphoma are relatively rare diseases. "The result is that the dramatic improvements in leukemia and NHL are muted by the overwhelming prevalence of the other cancers. From this perspective, it is difficult to find that there has been much progress," the report said.

According to Rep. Ted Weiss, D-N.Y., chairman of the House Government Operations subcommittee on intergovernmental relations and human resources, cancer institute officials repeatedly have cited a 49 percent cancer patient survival rate as evidence of progress in fighting the disease. Weiss asked GAO investigators to assess the accuracy of the claim.

GAO noted that survival rates do not indicate progress in reducing the absolute number of cases or deaths, do not include patients who die of cancer after the five-year-period, provide no information on how long cancer patients live and contain no information about the quality of survival.

Poindexter May Get Immunity

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House and Senate committees investigating the Iran-Contra affair are expected to vote next week to grant limited immunity to former National Security Adviser John M. Poindexter, committee sources say.

Immunity from prosecution, expected Wednesday, would be granted under an agreement with special prosecutor Lawrence E. Walsh that would keep Poindexter's congressional testimony secret until June 15.

Poindexter, a Navy rear admiral who resigned his White House post Nov. 25 after Attorney General Edwin Meese III said profits from secret arms sales to Iran had been diverted clandestinely to aid Nicaragua's Contra rebels, is regarded as the key witness on the question of President Reagan's knowledge of the funds diversion.

Reagan has denied knowing about the diversion of money, and Poindexter will be asked whether he briefed the president orally, possibly on May 15, 1986, about the contents of a memorandum from his aide, Lt. Col. Oliver North, that discussed diverting $12 million in arms payments to the Contras.

Associates say Poindexter, 50, is determined to clear himself when he finally talks.

"He thinks what he did was OK and he's going to be exonerated," one associate said, insisting on anonymity.

Under the agreement with Walsh, Poindexter could be questioned as early as May 2 by the congressional investigating panels. Public hearings on the Iran-Contra affair are scheduled to begin May 5.

Limited immunity compels a witness to testify before Congress but guarantees that the testimony cannot be used in any criminal prosecution.

The witness can, however, be prosecuted on evidence gathered independently. Walsh is expected to submit sealed evidence on Poindexter to a federal judge before any of the congressional testimony is made public, in order to establish what evidence was gathered before Poindexter's testimony is given.

Meanwhile, Poindexter's immediate predecessor as national security adviser, McFarlane, emerged as a likely opening witness when the public congressional hearings begin May 5.

"He is sort of a logical opening or early witness because he has the most to say about the whole case," one source said, insisting on anonymity.

Gorbachev Decries Reform Slowdowns

By WILLIAM J. EATON
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

MOSCOW — Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev acknowledged Thursday that high-level Communist Party officials are slowing his programs designed to revitalize Soviet life.

But he insisted that there is no organized political opposition to him or his attempts to bring greater efficiency and more candor into the economy and government.

Speaking to 5,000 delegates to the 20th congress of the Komsomol, or Young Communist League, Gorbachev said that the nation already has traveled a long way on the road to renewal.

"The past period was not easy, but it was fruitful," he said of the two years since he assumed office in March 1985.

"The ideas of renewal and revolutionary change have caught up with the millions and won over to their side the overwhelming majority of our people," Gorbachev asserted.

But he said that there have been difficulties as well, adding:

"The machinery of braking (the proposed change) existed not by itself. There are concrete personalities involved in that machinery at the level of the Central Committee (of the party) and government, in the ministries, republics and regions. They are in work collectives and even in the Komsomol.

"There are people accustomed to the old way of life who do not want to revise it or are changing it very slowly," he added. "Of course, it is not easy to overcome such an attitude."

Since he came to power after the death of Konstantin U. Chernenko, Gorbachev has presided over a purge of aging and corrupt officials at all levels in Soviet life.

In the past, Gorbachev has said that those who do not support his call for perestroika, or reorganization, should "get out of the way." At a meeting last January of the Central Committee, however, Gorbachev apparently ran into opposition from some powerful members of this important body when he proposed secret ballot elections of some senior party officers instead of the current practice of voting by acclamation in open meetings.

In Thursday's speech to the youth group, which claims 40 million members in this country of 280 million people, Gorbachev took a milder line in referring to those who resist reorganization.

"Openness, criticism and democracy are the motive forces of renewal, while their absence will lead us back to stagnation," he said.

Marines Granted Four-Week Delay

WASHINGTON (AP) — Separate hearings to determine whether two U.S. Marine guards will be court martialed on espionage charges are being delayed for several weeks.

Attorneys for Sgt. Clayton J. Lonetree requested and received a 3½ week delay in pre-trial hearings Thursday in order to review more prosecution evidence that he let Soviet agents into the U.S. Embassy in Moscow.

William M. Kunstler, an attorney for Lonetree, criticized the military Thursday for imposing a "gag rule" on him that prevents him from discussing the nature of the evidence or what transpired in a closed hearing room during the day.

"They want to chill us out of speaking. The secretary of defense and the president and everybody else has spouted off about Sgt. Lonetree and others and now they want to keep us from responding," Kunstler said.

The Corps also announced Thursday that Cpl. Arnold Bracy's pre-trial hearings would not get underway until April 30. The Corps said a new military attorney had been assigned to Bracy and had requested the delay to familiarize himself with the case. The hearing had been scheduled to begin Thursday.

Lonetree and Bracy have been accused by the Corps of espionage while working together in 1985 and 1986 as guards at the U.S. Embassy in Moscow.

Broadway Discovers Merits Of The Computer

By DREW FETHERSTON
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

NEW YORK — Broadway theater, according to one of its home-grown chestnuts, is wonderful art and primitive business.

But now, as a sudden, welcome wave of ticket sales surges through the theater district, there are some glimmers of change, some indications that art may look to commerce for lessons to ensure a future. As with any step from the primitive toward sophistication, a new tool is involved: the computer.

It is still regarded by many producers with the same unease with which they encountered its cousin, television. When the League of American Theaters and Producers assembled its first-ever panel on using the contraption for more than payroll chores, "some people were scared to death you were going to be having an effect on the artistic side," said George Wachtel, the league's research director.

But the now not-so-new machine is making converts in the theater district, just as it has long since done everywhere else. Last winter, the computer told "Big River" to hunker down and wait out the cold weather: Ticket sales would accompany the warm winds of spring.

"We didn't even bother to advertise the show in January and February, because we knew from our projections that it wouldn't do any good," said Michael David, producer and general manager for "Big River."

The computer is at its best in assisting decisions of that sort. It can absorb a huge amount of statistical data, and use it to project trends with better than human accuracy. For example, ticket sales in the past six weeks were stronger than Broadway had anticipated, yet Warner's projections were just $1,712 off the actual sales of $1 million.

The computer is only useful once a show is up and running; it cannot select a hit from a pile of scripts. But precise figures are crucial to many decisions in a business where the sale of 50 extra tickets per night can turn a $5,000 weekly deficit into a $5,000 weekly profit.

The projections issue from a Macintosh computer on the desk of Sherman Warner, David's partner and a onetime math major. "I started playing with this Apple II computer two or three years ago," Warner said. "It was frustrating to attend meetings where everyone's view was so subjective."

His hope was to find some hard facts to help in discussions about the show. "This is a business in which people don't have many objective benchmarks. A lot of decisions are made for very unbusinesslike reasons. People try to read the proof of their theories in the tea leaves of the box office." In fact, it is likely that no business is more thoroughly ruled by lore and gut reaction than legitimate theater. There is, for example, a longstanding producers' prejudice against theaters east of Broadway. The prejudice probably dates back decades, to a time when unsold tickets could be hawked in the crowded streets west of the thoroughfare. Though credit cards, telephone sales and the half-price ticket booth have made that prejudice obsolete, it endures.

There are also hallowed gimmicks for propping up a show whose popularity is fading, such as posting "Last Weeks" notices. The theory is that this will goad people who have considered seeing a show into actually buying tickets. It sometimes works; "Dreamgirls" ran nine months after posting "Last Weeks."

Similarly, any pro can recite the list of weeks in which business drops dead: "The week after Labor Day," said Leo Cohen, the general manager of "42nd Street." "Traditionally, the first two weeks in January, though now it's January-February-March. The week in which the Fourth of July occurs, and the week after that. And the week following when Daylight Savings Time occurs, and the week Standard Time comes back, though I don't know why that is."

Cohen and most of his peers in the business do by hand what Warner and David do by computer. He keeps track of the weekly grosses, and after six years of "42nd Street" can look to the future with fair confidence in his predictions. "If you're breaking even and its January, February, March, you know the summer will be better," he said.

Still, the precision with which "Big River" can predict its future is impressive, and the inability to make such predictions has doomed shows in the past. "I know of one straight play — I don't want to say which one — that closed last spring because the producers thought it couldn't survive the summer doldrums," said Wachtel. "Then, in August, business went up twenty-four percent. They would have been fine."

That surge didn't surprise "Big River"; sales matched the computer projections remarkably well. For example, the computer predicted $215,161 for the week ending August 3; actual sales were $215,920.

The computer wasn't quite so accurate every week — it underestimated the effect of the Statue of Liberty centennial celebration, which eliminated the usual dip in sales after July 4 — but over the past 44 weeks, the estimate has been off by just .04 per cent. That represents an error of $3,000 in predicting a gross of more than $8.2 million.

Having a good idea of what direction sales are likely to take eliminates the necessity of blowing the advertising budget during slumps that are the product of business cycles. "The temptation is to throw money at short-term problems," said David. "Now, we can figure out ahead of time what's likely to happen."

"Big River" was prepared for last winter's slump; the producers asked for royalty concessions two months before it occurred. In return, they said, they could guarantee that the show would do good business in the spring and make more money. The concessions were made, and the show survived.

Much attention has been focused this spring on the beneficial effect of the blockbuster London imports, "Les Miserables" and "Starlight Express." The tide of ticket sales that greeted them lifted all shows; Broadway grosses soared 30 percent over those of a year ago.

But Warner's computer program suggests that Broadway should not depend on blockbusters to maintain its health. The computer indicates that each show may have a set share of the market that is relatively inflexible.

In the case of "Big River," its sales (at this stage of its life) fluctuate in a narrow band never far from 4.9 percent of the Broadway total. If Broadway's overall gross rises, so does that of "Big River," but its share of the pot remains the same.

The conclusion, said David, is that Broadway's best hope of financial health lies in having many hit shows. "The future lies in the very good shows that never sell out," he said. "The business can't live on the blockbuster."

Ervin Nyiregyhazi, Pianist, Dies At 84

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Pianist and composer Ervin Nyiregyhazi, who as a child was the toast of Europe but whose later years were spent in relative obscurity, has died at age 84.

The Hungarian-born musician, who died Monday, began composing at age 4, was performing his own works at 5 and was the subject of a psychological study on the child prodigy.

In his youth, he performed for Europe's crowned heads and won acclaim for his mastery of the Romantics, particularly Franz Liszt. He made his debut at New York's Carnegie Hall in 1920 at 17.

Five years later, his career lay in ruins, a combination of a revolt of the modernists against romantics and a lawsuit over money Nyiregyhazi brought against his manager. As an adult, he performed sporadically but married often, a total of 10 times.

He came to Los Angeles at the suggestion of an old friend, novelist Theodore Dreiser, and went to work at Hollywood's United Artists, where he did mostly studio work.

He also played with Works Progress Administration orchestras for $90 a month during the Depression.

His hands were photographed playing piano in "Song of Love" and "Song to Remember" although Arthur Rubinstein and Jose Iturbi, respectively, were the off-screen pianists for those films.

In 1935, while at the piano at a friend's home, he was heard by Arnold Schoenberg, father of the 12-tone composition.

CBS Guild Ratifies Contract

L.A. Times-Washington Post
 HOLLYWOOD — Both the majority of the 315 striking members of the Writers Guild of America and their employer, CBS Inc., breathed easier Thursday after guild members voted 266-24 to ratify a new three-year contract with the network.
 Strikers were expected back to work as early as today.
 There was still no breakthrough announced on a similar impasse between ABC and its striking 125 guild newswriters as of Thursday afternoon, though guild officials hoped that the ratification of the CBS pact might spur on bargaining talks. Moments after the contract was approved in New York, the guild negotiating committee adjourned to a Manhattan hotel to continue haggling with ABC officials.

Under the new CBS contract, writers will get a 3 percent pay increase each year, which would amount to about $30 per week for those at the top of the pay scale.
 Pay, however, was never the issue, the guild said.
 "This strike has proven that it is possible for 325 people to say no to a Fortune 500 company that believed that it could undo a hard-won contract simply because it wanted to," said Mona Mangan, the chief negotiator for the guild. "This agreement is a result of the courage and tenacity of our members and the broad support we have received from so many within and outside our industry. We are grateful to them all."
 The guild said that the walkout of an admittedly small number of specialized employees was over seniority rights, job security and, ultimately, the fate of the guild and other labor unions dealing with the new cost-conscious broadcasting networks.
 The same week that newswriters struck CBS, that network's news division discharged more than 200 employees in a cost-cutting maneuver that paid little heed to seniority. CBS veterans such as correspondents Ike Pappas and Fred Graham were fired along with support staff who had been with the company only a few months.

PBS Offers Rare Look Sunday At S. Carolina Gullah Culture

By ROBERT BARR
 Associated Press Writer
 NEW YORK (AP) — Public television takes an enchanting look at the people of South Carolina's Sea Islands on Sunday with a dramatization of "The Half-Pint Flask."
 As a ghost story, it's a routine piece of work, but the real interest is in the setting — among the Gullah-speaking blacks of the islands.
 Gullah is a melodious blend of colonial-era English and West African languages which is still spoken by about a quarter of a million blacks, especially in the self-contained communities of the islands.
 The story, set in the 1920s, tells of a white linguist who comes to an island to study the language, but who has no respect for the culture and ignores the warnings of his host, a white lodge-keeper. His life starts to unravel after he steals a valuable flask from a grave, and finally a ghost comes calling for him.
 The drama stars John Malloy as the lodge-keeper, Richard Leighton as the linguist and Estelle Evans as Maum Beck, a local woman. An old rice plantation near Myrtle Beach, S.C., provided the evocative setting, and The Moving Star Hall Singers contributed the distinctive music.
 "It's a story about outsiders and insiders," said Randy Brinson, who directed the film for South Carolina Educational Television.
 "The visitor is obviously an outsider who is presented a whole new experience which presumably changes him. But beyond that, the person who presumably was the insider and was fond of the local culture discovers that he, too, is an outsider, and discovers a little bit about himself."
 "As you look at 'The Half-Pint

Flask,' keep in mind that we tried not to make it a statement that analyzed Gullah culture," Brinson said.
 "It's seen through the perspective, the experiences and the fears, if you will, of the white outsiders."
 The story was written in 1927 by DuBose Heyward, whose little-remembered book "Porgy" became the durable George Gershwin opera "Porgy and Bess."
 Heyward was born in Charleston, S.C., in 1885 to a once-prosperous family whose fortunes had hit bottom following the Civil War. His subject was nearly always the Gullah-speaking blacks of South Carolina, and he was proud to be sometimes mistaken for a black writer.
 One university which he visited described him on a program as "not only a member of Harlem's intellectual colony, but a Southern Negro of the old tradition."
 "The Half-Pint Flask" runs about 40 minutes, and the producers filled out the hour with a documentary about the survival of African burial customs in the South.
 While that is an element of the tale, it would have been more interesting to learn something about Heyward, or about the relationship of white authors to Southern blacks in the early 20th century, or about the Gullah dialect.

 Brinson noted that the story reflects a debate which continued long after the 1920s about the value and the roots of Gullah speech. The linguist in the drama holds the idea that the dialect was entirely adopted from whites, and retained nothing of Africa.
 In "The Story of English," presented earlier this season by PBS, Robert MacNeil discussed that controversy in more detail.
 It had been widely believed that black English was rooted in British regional speech, and H.L. Mencken concluded that "the Negro dialect, as we know it today, seems to have been formulated by the song-writers for the minstrel shows."
 Later students of the language, however, found that much of Gullah — as many as 6,000 usages and expressions — came from Africa.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Discuss with a good friend that strange wish you have, but later devote your time to your mate.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Get started on making a fine impression on a prominent person. Don't neglect public and credit matters.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will have all kinds of fascinating and advanced ideas and will articulate them very well. It would be wise to give as comprehensive a course of education as possible. Upon reaching adulthood your progeny will become very businesslike and successful.

"The Stars impel; they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Opening lead: King of ♠ Looking at all four hands, it is hard to see how South went down at his contract of four hearts in a duplicate pairs contest. Even if he mis-guesses the queen of trumps, two spades and a trump are apparently all he has to give up. But see what happened.

North was on the borderline between a jump to three and four hearts. He chose the more conservative action, and South had sufficient values to contract for game.

West led the king of spades and East dropped the queen. That is something you never do with a doubleton; it promises the jack and asks the leader to continue with a low card so you can win the trick with the jack. West did so obediently, and East persisted with a third round of the suit, ruffed in dummy.

Declarer cashed the ace of trumps and was acutely conscious of West's nine. With that card out of the way, it seemed completely safe to finesse East for the queen of hearts. Even if the finesse lost, a high trump would remain in dummy to prevent a spade overruff. So South made the normal play of running the ten of trumps, and he lived to rue the day.

After winning the queen of hearts, West continued with his last spade. For the moment declarer had no problem — he was able to ruff with the table's last trump. While East could not overruff, he had an equally deadly defense: he discarded his singleton club. Declarer was locked in dummy with no way to get back to his hand except in clubs, and when he led that suit East ruffed with his last trump to administer a one-trick defeat!

Philadelphia Paper Tops Pulitzer Prize List With 3 Awards

NEW YORK (AP) — A series about drug abuse and dangerous medical problems among airline pilots won The Pittsburgh Press the 1987 Pulitzer Prize for public service, while The Philadelphia Inquirer won three awards.

The New York Times and The Los Angeles Times each won two Pulitzers, while playwright August Wilson won the drama prize for "Fences," about a black garbage collector robbed by racism of a chance to play major league baseball.

The general non-fiction prize went to New York Times reporter David K. Shipler for his book "Arab and Jew: Wounded Spirits in a Promised Land." The fiction prize went to 70-year-old Peter Taylor for his novel, "A Summons to Memphis," about an elderly widower's remarriage.

Other journalism winners included the Akron (Ohio) Beacon Journal, the Chicago Tribune, The Washington Post, The Tribune of San Diego, the San Francisco Examiner, The Des Moines (Iowa) Register and The Miami Herald.

Winners of the Pulitzers, journalism's most prestigious award, were announced Thursday by Columbia University. The journalism award carries a $1,000 stipend.

A three-piece band tooted "Happy Days Are Here Again" at The Pittsburgh Press, where the public service prize was its second Pulitzer in as many years. "You don't set out to win them," said reporter Andrew Schneider. "You go out and do the reporting we all do every day."

It was a series by Schneider and Matthew Breilis about the Federal Aviation Administration's medical screening of pilots that won this year's gold medal for public service for the newspaper.

The stories led to FAA reforms, including new procedures for testing flight crews for drug and alcohol use and replacement of a federal air surgeon who allowed more than 250 pilots or co-pilots to return to the cockpit after they were grounded by debilitating or potentially fatal medical conditions.

The Inquirer's John Woestendiek was cited in the investigative reporting category for outstanding prison beat reporting, including stories that helped win a new trial for a man convicted of murder.

An investigative reporting prize also went to the Inquirer's Daniel Biddle, Fredric N. Tulsy and H.G. Bissinger for a series about backroom deals and other shady doings in the Philadelphia court system. The series led to investigations and reforms.

Said Bissinger: "It is the second most wonderful moment of my life next to the birth of my children."

General non-fiction — "Arab and Jew: Wounded Spirits in a Promised Land," by David K. Shipler.

Music — "The Flight into Egypt," by John Harbison.

Bissinger is studying at Harvard University on a Nieman Fellowship.

The Inquirer's third Pulitzer, for feature writing, went to Steve Twomey for a look at life aboard the aircraft carrier America, which became a launchpad for the U.S. air strike on Libya while he was aboard.

The newspaper now has won 13 Pulitzers, all during the past 15 years.

Publisher Sam McKeel declared it a "great day, a great year and the continuation of a great trend" at the Inquirer, where the newsroom was awash in champagne.

In national reporting, the staff of The New York Times was cited for coverage of the Challenger aftermath. The Times' Alex S. Jones won the specialized reporting prize for his story about the sale of the Louisville (Ky.) Courier-Journal and Louisville Times.

The two awards brought the Times' total to 58 Pulitzers, by far the most of any news organization.

The Pulitzer Prize Board also awarded a prize in national reporting to the staff of The Miami Herald for "its exclusive reporting and persistent coverage" of the Iran-Contra affair.

"I have a lot of people to thank," said Herald reporter Alfonso Chardy, "but most of all, I guess I should thank the Contras."

As always, the announcement of the journalism prizes brought work to a halt in winning newsrooms. There were hugs and cheers, and champagne corks were popped.

The San Diego Tribune's Jonathan Freedman won the editorial writing award for editorials urging passage of an immigration reform bill.

DEA Says Wall Street Brokers Traded Cocaine For Stock Tips

NEW YORK (AP) — Some Wall Street brokers arrested in an undercover investigation used cocaine "as a regular method of exchange," dispensing it to employees and customers and trading it for stock tips, authorities said.

"Cocaine became an integral part of the personal and professional lives of these people," Robert Stutman, special agent in charge of the federal Drug Enforcement Administration in New York City, said after the arrests Thursday of 19 people, including at least 16 financial workers and two alleged drug suppliers.

"We don't believe this case is an aberration," he said.

Federal authorities described a cocaine subculture in which the drug was snorted in bathrooms, stairways and boardrooms on Wall Street and purchases were made in neighborhood bars.

Those arrested included Wayne D. Robbins, a senior partner in the firm of Brooks, Weinger, Robbins & Leeds Inc.

Authorities also filed suit to seize assets of the firm, which has offices in nine cities. U.S. Attorney Rudolph W. Giuliani told a news conference he believed it was the first time the government tried to seize part of a brokerage's assets because of a narcotics violation.

"Cocaine was used as a regular method of exchange, allegedly in the business of this firm," Giuliani said.

But its lawyer, Bert Gusrae, said the principals of the firm have "no knowledge of any widespread drug distribution of drug network inside the firm."

According to Giuliani, a Brooks broker once sent a free sample of heroin via the firm's messenger service, information on stocks was traded for cocaine, a person was hired because he was a trusted source of the drug, and accounts were steered to brokers who returned the favors with cocaine.

He said that on one occasion, "a principal of a company whose stock Brooks was about to offer to the public was given cocaine in exchange for $10,000 worth of the stock."

The prosecutor said Brooks has been involved for some time in manipulating the issues of "penny stocks" — shares in new companies that trade at a very low price.

Further charges and arrests are expected, he said.

Ten of those arrested were brokers and five were professionals in the field, said Robert Strang, a DEA spokesman. One other person may have been a broker, he said.

In addition to the Brooks firm, Stutman said, those arrested worked for Prudential-Bache, The New York Depository Trust, Advest Corp. and Allied Capital, all financial institutions with offices in the Wall Street area.

"This is a classic case of how drugs affect every American in this country," Stutman said. "Every American is touched by Wall Street."

The DEA said the arrests stemmed from a three-year investigation that included an undercover agent working at Brooks since mid-March as a broker's assistant.

Charles Rose, an assistant U.S. attorney in Brooklyn, said his office had participated in initial parts of the investigation of five brokers, three of whom earned than $1 million a year. But Rose said his office declined to prosecute the brokers because they were at worst drug users and not traffickers.

"We went on to other cases which we consider more significant than a bunch of yuppies," Rose said.

City police and DEA agents also announced Thursday that a separate drug sweep had netted 114 street-level drug buyers and sellers in the Wall Street area since April 1. Two stockbrokers were among those arrested in "Operation Buy and Cry," according to Police Commissioner Benjamin Ward.

FCC Cracks Down On Obscenity

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than a decade after George Carlin's "seven dirty words" shook the airwaves, federal regulators are issuing their own words to clean up obscene and indecent broadcasts.

In actions Thursday against three radio stations, including one with controversial morning-show personality Howard Stern, regulators sent word that they will be holding the nation's broadcasters to higher standards.

The Federal Communications Commission is hoping its crackdown on broadcast obscenity will tame the airwaves, but until the agency details its new guidelines, Stern is planning no changes in his New York-based radio program.

The FCC plans to publish its new guidelines soon in the Federal Register to put all broadcasters on notice that it will no longer limit its definition of indecency to the "seven dirty words" broadcast in 1975 in a monologue by comedian George Carlin. That broadcast led to a 1978 Supreme Court decision, which set an indecency standard for the airwaves.

The FCC has interpreted the standard narrowly, and since the Carlin case arose in 1976, the agency has taken no action against a station for indecency or obscenity.

FCC General Counsel Diane Killory said the FCC had to advise stations about the new standards before it takes action, which could include fines and the revocation of licenses.

Mel A. Karmazin, executive vice president of Infinity Broadcasting, owner of WYSP-FM, Philadelphia, which airs Stern's program, called the FCC position a victory despite a written warning against Stern's sexual-excremental talk on the airwaves.

"Clearly, we've won," Karmazin said. "What they've said is: that they're not taking action against us."
