Soviets Take Control Of Accused Nazi

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet officials today flew Karl Linnas, who faces execution on charges he supervised the killings of 12,000 prisoners at a Nazi death camp, to his native Estonia.

The 67-year-old Linnas was only the second person accused of Nazi war crimes to be deported from the United States to the Soviet Union. He fought an eight-year legal battle to retain his U.S. citizenship and stay in the United States.

The official Soviet news agency Tass said Linnas was put on a plane to Tallinn, capital of Soviet Estonia, after he was turned over to Soviet authorities at the airport in Prague, Czechoslovakia. He arrived in Prague this morning after a flight from New York.

Linnas accused the United States of murder as he was put aboard the Czechoslovak Airlines flight at John F. Kennedy International Airport.

"What they are doing right now is murder and kidnapping," the retired surveyor shouted as he was led into a police office at the New York airport.

Linnas entered the United States in 1951, lived in Greenlawn, N.Y., and became an American citizen. He was sentenced to death in the Soviet Union after being tried in absentia in 1962. His deportation came despite appeals to the U.S. Supreme Court and Justice Department.

Tass initially said Linnas would be taken to Moscow, but the Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman, Genady Gerasimov, would not confirm the report.

"He's on his way to the Soviet Union, not necessarily to Moscow," he said at a Moscow news briefing today. In a report issued later, Tass said Linnas was on a plane "that has taken course for Tallinn."

Asked about plans for Linnas, Gerasimov said, "He was sentenced to capital punishment. He's entitled to ask for a pardon."

Tass did not say if a new trial was planned.

In a report on Linnas, Tass said: "In World War II, he was chief of a Nazi concentration camp in Tartu, in the Soviet Republic of Estonia, where he personally participated in the mass execution of civilians, including the elimination of women and children."

The Soviets have said he supervised the deaths of 12,000 people as head of the camp in 1941-42, while witnesses at hearings in the United States put the number at 2,000.

Linnas has argued that the Soviet Union may have falsified evidence it provided for his deportation trial, and he said a recent book and articles on Soviet disinformation provided grounds to re-examine his case.

Anu Linnas, Linnas' daughter, vowed Monday to keep fighting.

"I maintain that this is the worst foreign policy mistake that this government could ever have done," Ms. Linnas said on ABC-TV's "Nightline." "My father is innocent.

I will prove that if it takes every God-given strength that I have for as long as it may take."

In seeking a delay from the Supreme Court, Ms. Linnas had hoped to make a personal appeal to Attorney General Edwin Meese III for time to find another country willing to accept her father, said family lawyer Larry Schilling.

Meese did not have time to meet with her, and authorized the deportation after the Supreme Court rejection.

Takeover Restraints Approved

By JAMES H. RUBIN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today gave states considerable power to regulate hostile corporate takeovers.

By a 6-3 vote, the justices said an Indiana law placing restraints on tender offers does not interfere unlawfully with interstate commerce.

"To the limited extent that the (Indiana) act affects interstate commerce, this is justified by the state's interests in defining the attributes of shares in its corporations and in protecting shareholders," Justice Lewis F. Powell said for the court. "Congress has never questioned the need for state regulation of these matters."

The court ruled in favor of CTS Corp. of Elkhart, Ind., in its bid to ward off a takeover attempt by Dynamics Corporation of America, based in Connecticut.

Dynamics already owned 9.6 percent of CTS common stock when it made a tender offer in March 1986 for a million shares, which would bring its holdings to 27.5 percent.

A new Indiana law imposed a 50-day delay on such tender offers and made it more difficult for takeovers to succeed by allowing shareholders to vote as a group to block the merger.

The law also made the target company less inviting because the acquiring company could end up with non-voting shares in the target company, thereby thwarting the purpose of its tender offer.

The 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals last year said the Indiana law interfered unlawfully with interstate commerce and may benefit only corporate managers determined to hold on to power.

The Indiana law applies to any company that has its principal office or substantial assets in Indiana and has at least 100 shareholders, with more than 10 percent of its shares owned by Indiana residents or more than 10 percent of its shareholders living in the state.

The Securities and Exchange Commission and the Reagan administration argued that the law interferes with federal regulation of the stock market.

But Powell said the Indiana act does not violate federal securities law because the purpose of the state law is to place the acquiring company and a corporation's managers on equal footing.

Some Schools Shifting Money PCC Says It Uses ABE Funds Only On Adults

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer
Pitt Community College officials say the school is using funds earmarked for adult basic education to provide learning experiences for adults in the county. Other community colleges in the state may have been using the funds for other purposes.

Charlotte Ashcraft, a senior financial analyst for the Legislature, told a budget committee on education last week that the state's 58 community colleges received $14.3 million for programs geared to adults with less than an eighth-grade education in 1985-1986. Throughout the state, only $8.47 million — or 59.1 percent of the money — actually was spent on the adult basic education programs.

Ed Bright, dean of instruction at PCC, said, "Adult Basic Education was underfunded for years. We went from feast to famine" when the General Assembly doubled the amount of ABE funding four years ago. "For most schools, it has been difficult to utilize all the funds."

"It has been difficult for us, even with a 20 percent increase in the ABE students in the last two or three years," Bright said. "We haven't needed all the funds for ABE."

The money for adult basic education was not additional appropriations by the General Assembly, Bright said, but funds earmarked for that specific program.

"They set aside a certain amount of money for adult basic education,"

Bright said. "It is the same amount of money in the budget, not additional money. When they allocated that money for ABE, they reduced the money for other programs. It is the way they sliced the pie."

According to figures provided to Ms. Ashcraft by the state community college system, PCC spent $47,906 of its $319,574 in adult basic education money to combat illiteracy in 1985-1986.

Of the funds appropriated for adult basic education at PCC, Bright said $56,182 has been used for administrative expenses.

However, PCC officials said all of the funds appropriated for adult education programs have been spent on adult basic education, compensatory education and occupational programs — all of which provide educational opportunities for adults.

PCC has projected that 1,100 students will continue adult basic education programs in 1987, and 250 new ABE students will be added to the programs. The programs will serve 6 percent of the 20,000 Pitt County adults over the age of 16 without a high school education.

According to the 1980 census, 43.2 percent of the total population 25 and older in the county had less than a high school education.

"It is a hard job to get people to take adult basic education classes, to get people out of the woodwork," Bright said. "We try to employ people who are known and respected in the community" to recruit the adult students. "That is the reason for the high administrative costs."

Ola Porter, assistant dean for continuing education at PCC, added that an assistant instructor is needed in an ABE class of 10 students to help the full-time instructor provide individual attention for the pupils.

Training instructional personnel used $3,392 of the funds.

The instructional funds for the adult basic education programs amounted to $47,906. The funds were used for supplies and materials.

Counselors and recruiters also are paid with adult basic education funds, however PCC decided not to hire additional support personnel with the funds.

"We knew that the ABE funds probably would be reduced back and

Wright Predicts House Will Back Arms Plans

By TIM AHERN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The House will approve two arms control proposals this week despite Reagan administration fears that they will hamper U.S.-Soviet negotiations and the possibility that an arms agreement is "quite near," says Speaker Jim Wright.

The Texas Democrat, who returned Monday night from meetings with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev and other high-ranking officials, said "we have the impression that they are quite near to an accord," referring to both nations.

Wright said "there seems to be the best opportunity that has existed, probably since the Russian revolution (in 1917), to bring about an arms control agreement."

However, Wright said "it will be my guess that the House will pass" the proposals when it considers a spending bill later this week.

Wright made his remarks at Andrews Air Force Base after he and 13 other congressmen returned from a six-day stay in the Soviet Union.

During that time, Secretary of State George P. Shultz traveled to Moscow to meet with Soviet leaders. Shultz has since returned amid optimistic assessments in both countries that an agreement may be near to eliminate medium- and short-range nuclear weapons from Europe.

Meanwhile, high-level NATO officials gathered in Washington this week to plot western nuclear strategy and discuss the new Soviet proposal. The informal talks among the 16 members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization were scheduled before last week's developments.

Sri Lanka Bomb Kills Nearly 100

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — A car bomb exploded today at the main bus terminal in the heart of the Sri Lankan capital, and police said nearly 100 people were killed and more than 200 were injured.

The explosion occurred at about 4:45 p.m. (7:15 a.m. EDT), a time when many workers were leaving their offices in this city of 750,000 people.

The blast was the first in Colombo since a series of fatal bombings last May that were blamed on Tamil guerrillas. Attacks by Tamil insurgents killed at least 142 people in eastern Sri Lanka in the past week.

There was no immediate claim of responsibility for today's blast.

Witnesses said they expected the death toll from the bombing would

Thefts Reported

Three thefts were reported to Greenville police Monday and one theft was reported early today.

Officer J.M. Jones said $20 and two credit cards were taken from a purse in a ladies' restroom at the Sheraton Hotel on Greenville Boulevard in an incident reported at 9:22 a.m.

Officer C.S. Candler said that Troy Taylor of Kinston reported that two men assaulted him and took his wallet, containing $20 in cash, in an incident that occurred in the Sheraton parking lot. Candler said the theft was reported about 10:14 p.m.

Officer C.J. Melvin said a purse containing $6 in cash was taken from Pitt County Memorial Hospital in an incident reported at 11:26 p.m., while Officer W.R. McCarter said a purse and wallet, containing $22 in cash, were taken from the hospital in an incident reported at 1:45 a.m. today.

Larceny Arrest

Greenville police said Jaqueline Shallotee Maye, 28, of 800 W. Fourth St. was arrested Monday on charges stemming from larcenies at Carolina East Mall.

Officer E.M. Haddock said Ms. Maye was charged with larceny in connection with the theft of three blouses valued at $100 from Brody's at the mall.

Haddock said Ms. Maye was charged with possession of stolen property after a $50 pants suit that had been taken from Sears Roebuck and Co. at the mall was found in her possession.

Ms. Maye was also charged with giving false information to police, Haddock reported.

Electric Co-Op Has Anniversary

The Edgecombe-Martin County Electric Membership Corp. recently celebrated its 50th anniversary of operation.

The corporation has grown from 32 miles of line and 66 consumers in 1937 to a $13 million utility system that today serves about 9,000 farms, homes and industries in eight eastern North Carolina counties, according to Manager Rudolph Sexton.

The corporation credits its beginnings to R.W. Knight, a prominent Edgecombe County farmer who submitted a petition the Tarboro Board of Commissioners to extend approximately five miles of rural lines to farms of the petitioners.

The board approved the extension but said it was unable to finance the construction. A committee was appointed to investigate a source of funds.

The committee learned of Rural Electrification Authority funding provided through the Emergency Relief Appropriations Act of 1935 when REA was established as a lending agency.

Also during this time, the town of Hassell requested that the proposed rural line be extended to the town.

Attorney Lynn Bond suggested five or more men from the county form a straw corporation that would borrow money from the government and be guaranteed against loss through the town. The town would privately agree that the lines would become the property of the town at the termination of the loan agreement with the government.

The board voted to proceed with the corporation later to be known called Edgecombe-Martin County Electric Membership Corp. The five incorporators were B.C. Mayo, R.V. Knight, W. Dave Moore and C.W. Mayo, all of Tarboro, and W. J. Mayo of Bethel.

The corporation petitioned the REA for a loan of $32,000 at 2 percent interest. It was approved.

The board entered into a contract with EMC to construct 32 miles of lines from Tarboro to Hassell, to sell EMC electricity at wholesale rates and to operate the system.

Recovering

DETROIT (AP) — Big-band leader Woody Herman is expected to be out of a hospital and back on tour within two weeks, his manager says.

Herman, 73, was in fair condition and doctors have not specified when he may be released, Sinai Hospital spokeswoman Suzanne Timma said Monday.

Herman was admitted to the hospital March 26 after suffering from effects of medication taken for high-altitude sickness he suffered during a tour through Colorado and Utah.

Annual Reports Sometimes Fail To Tell Story

By The Associated Press

Coca-Cola Bottling Co. Consolidated of Charlotte lost nearly $13 million last year, but you might skip over the numbers by browsing through its glossy 1986 annual report.

"We move forward," the report says cheerfully, "and we hope you share our optimism." Its cover features a shimmering empty Coke bottle, and by turning inside pages, readers see six more pictures of the same bottle as it gradually fills up. By the end, the bottle is full.

"That's wild," says Kay Norwood, research director of Interstate Securities Corp. in Charlotte. "I would think it would have started with a full bottle and become empty."

William Dougherty, vice chairman and chief financial officer, says the filling of the Coke bottle "symbolizes the turnaround in earnings performance we expect going forward, in 1987, 1988 and 1989." The "upbeat" message was appropriate, he says, because "we have confidence in the steps we've taken to turn it around."

A flurry of slick annual reports is hitting the mailboxes of North Carolina shareholders this month. In many cases, analysts say, companies present themselves in the most favorable light and downplay information that's important to investors. It's critical investors look beyond the color photos to the gray financial data in the back, they say.

Many companies spend between $2 and $8 per copy to present their accounts of the past year, according to a 1985 study by the National Investor Relations Institute, a trade group.

"There's a lot of public relations that goes into an annual report," says Scott Szabo, senior manager with Peat Marwick Mitchell & Co. in Charlotte. Szabo said serious investors read the reports cover to cover, including the auditor's note and footnotes which can contain vital information about litigation and other problems.

Securities analyst Buddy Howard of Carolina Securities Corp. in Raleigh thinks reports are "used too often as an advertisement for the firm" with upbeat copy often obscuring painful realities. "When there's reference made to a 'rebuilding year' or a 'transition year,' these are dead giveaways they had a cruddy year," he says.

Salisbury-based Food Lion Inc.'s red-white-and-blue report opened with a tribute "commemorating the 200th anniversary of the United States Constitution." It was the idea of Brian Woolf, chief financial officer and an immigrant from New Zealand.

"We felt an obligation to remind people we have something beautiful here," Woolf said. He said the feature isn't intended to deflect criticism by competitors of Food Lion's partial foreign ownership. Delhaize "Le Lion," a Belgium firm, owns more than 44 percent of the company's stock.

Some annual reports are notable for what is left out.

Piedmont Aviation Inc., which has agreed to be acquired by USAir Group Inc., did not mention takeover speculation surrounding the company throughout 1986 or the Jan. 26 end of Norfolk Southern Corp.'s five-year agreement not to raise its stake in Piedmont above 20.5 percent. Norfolk Southern's pursuit of Winston-Salem-based Piedmont ultimately resulted in its takeover by USAir.

Piedmont spokesman Ken Carlson said it would not have been appropriate to address the "what-if's of a stockholder. The annual report is the place to discuss the company's performance and, to a degree, strategy." The timing of Piedmont's takeover may make much of the report seem dated, he concedes. "Whether it's irrelevant, that's for each stockholder to determine."

In contrast, RJR Nabisco Inc. did include in its report its January decision to move its corporate headquarters from Winston-Salem to Atlanta and to reduce its corporate staff to around 300. Ross Johnson, president, and Edward Horrihan, vice chairman, in a letter to shareholders explain the "difficult decisions" as a way to provide operating companies with more authority.

The core of the reports, analysts say, are tables of numbers — income statements, balance sheets, and so on. While this information is sometimes buried, a few companies have moved the information up front.

Food Lion includes a comprehensive 10-year summary of operations near the front of its report.

"You don't need to be an accountant to understand it," said Woolf. "We want shareholders to see everything, early on, in an understandable form."

First Union Corp., meanwhile, made a "radical change" by mixing its financial numbers and written presentation together. The approach was intended to make the figures more understandable, says Barbara Massa, senior vice president. "Usually, the communicators write the front end of the report and the accounting staff and the legal staff write the back," she says. "We saw it as a joint effort."

Wherever the numbers are, they are more important to investors than the lavish photographs and breezy copy.

"A picture is worth a thousand words — and the picture is of the income statement," Ms. Norwood said. "Numbers tend to speak for themselves."

Toy Safety Challenged By N. York

By KIM I. MILLS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The New York attorney general is asking the Consumer Product Safety Commission to use a larger device to measure whether toys can choke small children, saying children under age 3 have choked on objects that met the government's standard.

Attorney General Robert Abrams, in a petition filed Monday with the CPSC, asked the commission to increase the standard to a diameter of at least 1.68 inches for all toys intended for children under 3. The present minimum is a diameter of 1.25 inches and length of 2.25 inches.

"Parents and other purchasers of children's toys and products are being duped by age labels predicated upon the CPSC small parts requirement," said Mary Ellen Fise of the Consumer Federation of America, which joined in the petition.

"They believe that because a product's label states that the toy is appropriate for babies newborn through 3 years, that the product is safe and will not pose a choking hazard," she said.

Abrams cited the commission's own figures showing that over a 10-year period, 195 choking incidents, including 37 deaths, were caused by toys or children's products larger than the standard.

Further, he said, in 1985 alone, small toys or small parts of toys were responsible for 12,000 injuries, and between September 1985 and September 1986, at least 18 children died as a result of choking on toys.

Federal law prohibits the sale of toys for children under 3 that could be swallowed or present a choking hazard. If a toy fits into a test cylinder that is 1.25 inches in diameter and 1 to 2.25 inches in length, it is considered a banned substance.

"However, if any part of the object protrudes from the cylinder, the object does not fail and may be sold for use by children under 3," the petition said. "For example, if a toy has a diameter of 0.8 inches, and easily fits within the cylinder but is 2.26 inches long and sticks out of the cylinder by .01 inches, the toy is not considered a small part."

In the meantime, Ms. Fise recommended that parents conduct their own small parts safety test by measuring the diameter of toys or their parts at the widest point.

"If the diameter is less than 1.68 inches, put that toy away until your child is at least 3 years of age or older..." she said. "Also, keep in mind that toys intended for children age 3 and up do not have to meet any small parts requirement, so an older sibling's toys can pose a choking hazard to a younger child."

Rattles and pacifiers are regulated under more stringent requirements. Pacifiers must have shields of 1.68 inches in diameter and rattles must be at least 1.38 inches.

"Out of the 136 choking incidents for which product size is known, 69 involved rattles; 58 of these rattles had diameters larger than the small parts standard's diameter," the petition said. The toy industry adopted a voluntary rattle standard last year, requiring a minimum 1.68-inch diameter.

LaRouche Offices Occupied As Agents Try To Collect Fines

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
LEESBURG, Va. (AP) — Federal agents today seized control of the headquarters of political extremist Lyndon H. LaRouche in an attempt to collect on part of more than $21 million in fines facing LaRouche-related groups.

Officers of the U.S. Marshal's Service occupied LaRouche organization offices at three locations around Leesburg shortly before 7 a.m. EDT.

They were acting under an order signed by a federal bankruptcy judge, said Assistant U.S. Attorney David Schiller.

The sealed, involuntary bankruptcy order was regarded as a rare legal maneuver by the government. One government source, who demanded anonymity, said the intent of the move was to "keep the companies operating and to pay money to the creditors," meaning the government.

Schiller said the order directed marshals to seize the assets and property of three LaRouche organizations that face fines of more than $5 million each. The fines were levied by a federal judge in Boston for contempt of court for failing to turn over financial records sought by a grand jury.

He said the bankruptcy order provides for a trustee to be appointed to take control of the three organizations.

Sandy Roberts, listed as a LaRouche legal aide, declined to comment. Ken Kronberg, an original board member of Caucus Distributors, one of the LaRouche groups, also declined to comment as he stood outside one of the offices occupied by the marshals.

Schiller said the order was signed Monday by U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Martin Bostetter after government attorneys filed papers under seal seeking the order.

Armed marshals, assisted by local police, entered the three offices and posted signs saying they were under federal control and sealing them off from outsiders.

The marshals were assisted at all three locations by a locksmith in penetrating outside and inside locks. The marshals met no apparent resistance.

The government is seeking $21.4 million in fines from four LaRouche-related organizations: Campaigner Publications Inc., Fusion Energy Foundation, National Democratic Policy Committee, and Caucus.

Schiller said the court order named Caucus, Campaigner and Fusion but did not name the fourth group, the National Democratic Policy Committee.

Prosecutors contend those organizations funnel money to other LaRouche-linked corporations and committees.

The financial records were sought by a grand jury investigating an alleged credit card scam used to fund LaRouche's 1984 presidential campaign.

The fines accumulated at a rate totaling $45,000 a day. The federal grand jury in Boston that sought the records has since indicted 13 LaRouche followers and five LaRouche-related organizations for wire fraud, mail fraud and conspiracy to obstruct justice.

Federal prosecutors have accused the LaRouche groups of trying to avoid paying the fines by seeking to sell off property they hold, primarily in Virginia.

In court papers filed earlier this month, the government estimated the LaRouche groups have $7 million in property, including Ibykus Farm, a fortress-like mansion where LaRouche lives near Leesburg, about 45 miles outside Washington, D.C.

The fines were imposed March 29, 1985, by U.S. District Judge A. David Mazzone in Boston, and later were increased for one of the four.

According to court documents, the fines totaled $5.11 million each for three of the organizations and $6.05 million for a fourth as of Sept. 1, 1986, when prosecutors filed motions in federal court seeking a final judgment. An earlier partial judgment added $430,000 in fines.

In seeking the judgment, the government charged the LaRouche organizations "deliberately refused to comply" with subpoenas and later "blatantly disregarded" the court's order to turn over documents.

Two of the organizations, Caucus and Campaigner, are among the LaRouche organizations facing federal conspiracy charges.

An attorney for the LaRouche organizations, Matthew H. Feinberg, contended in federal court earlier this month that none of the properties is actually owned by the four groups ordered to pay the fines.

LaRouche espouses eccentric theories of world conspiracies including allegations of drug-dealing and other crimes by prominent Americans and other world leaders. He has announced his intention to run for president again in 1988 as a Democrat, although he has remained out of the country since early December 1986.

Narcotics Agents Attacked

FREEPORT, Bahamas (AP) — Six U.S. and Bahamian narcotics agents escaped without serious injury after about 100 revelers on a remote beach attacked them with bricks and bottles as they investigated a downed drug plane, authorities said.

Shots were fired at a Blackhawk U.S. Customs Service helicopter as it airlifted the agents Monday night, said Roger Garland, acting branch chief for U.S. Customs Air Branch in Homestead, Fla. Two suspected smugglers escaped.

No arrests were made, but U.S. and Bahamian officials planned to return to the area today to investigate, he said.

"If one of the bullets had gone through the window, it would have hit the pilot in the head," Garland said.

The agents — two from Customs, two from the Drug Enforcement Administration and two from the Bahamian police — suffered only bruises from rocks and bottles, he said.

The incident occurred about 8:30 p.m. on a beach several miles south of Freeport International Airport.

Customs radar had spotted a suspect Piper Aztec flying low over the Bahamas and a jet was dispatched to track the plane. The Piper dropped 12 bales about 40 miles south of Bimini, Garland said.

A Coast Guard helicopter later recovered one bale of marijuana, he said.

The Customs jet was joined by a smaller Customs plane and the helicopter, and the three aircraft continued to track the suspect plane. Near Freeport, the plane began to lose the Customs aircraft.

"He was trying all this yanking and banking," Garland said. "Then he crashed into the beach. I guess he was out of gas and just ditching it, but I don't know."

Authorities do not know what happened to the pilot.

Garland said the Customs helicopter dropped the crew on the beach to investigate, but they were surrounded quickly by a crowd.

Phone Companies Going After Fraud

WASHINGTON (AP) — Telephone companies are declaring war on the thousands of college students, professionals, and even prisoners who get into the telephone network illegally and ring up a half billion dollars in unpaid calls a year.

Companies are changing the software as well as the hardware in their networks to try to block the calls, and they are offering amnesty programs on college campuses for students to fess up and pay up.

They also are working with federal authorities to prosecute call-sell operators who are using stolen authorization codes and electronic devices to break into the network and sell calls to all parts of the world at drastically discounted prices.

"We look at it as a major problem, and it's definitely well worth going after this half a billion dollars," said Rami Abuhameed, executive director of the industry-sponsored Communications Fraud Control Association. "In any industry, if you don't do anything about it, it's only going to get worse."

Computer-literate college students are among the biggest offenders and their campuses are breeding grounds for large-scale theft. Authorization codes get passed around quickly, allowing students to phone home for free, telephone company security officials say.

"That's something we're going to have to deal with because college students have inquisitive minds and they like to do things like challenge the network," said Neal Norman, district security manager for American Telephone & Telegraph Co.

MCI Communications Corp. officials say they recently persuaded 1,000 students at North Texas State University in Denton, Texas, to turn themselves in and pay about $100,000 for the illegal calls they made.

At American University in Washington, D.C., 400 students turned themselves in and are being billed for about $25,000 so far, MCI spokesman John Houser said.

Computer hackers — including doctors, lawyers and some housewives — who search computer files for authorization codes are another problem, but Abuhameed says their heaviest damage is in selling the codes or posting them on electronic billboards. The hackers themselves usually don't make as many calls as other groups, including prisoners, he said.

"Prisoners have a lot of time on their hands and they're very innovative. And unfortunately in a lot of places, they have access to phones continually," AT&T's Norman said.

In one case, Norman said, a prisoner called a hospital, identified himself as a doctor and asked to be connected to another number in the hospital. When that number answered, he asked to be switched to the hospital operator, whom he asked to connect him to an outside line for a long-distance call.

Companies are using sophisticated computer technology to identify patterns of illegal calling, which are often traced to operations run by "call sellers."

Firm Control

The news services keep a relatively close watch on reports concerning air travel safety. Those occasions of "near misses" between two in-flight aircraft appear to come with great frequency although we are inclined to think that with the amount of daily air traffic in this country, the number of near-misses is reasonably low.

However, four incidents of aerial collisions that might have happened — but didn't — were reported on a recent Friday. All involved commercial jetliners and small private planes. Pilots of two airliners said evasive action was required so the risks are real.

It's to the credit of the Federal Aviation Authority that a close surveillance of hazardous flight data is maintained, but somebody, somewhere along the line is not doing all that might be expected of them. Airlines fault the FAA for not training enough new air traffic controllers since 11,400 of them were dismissed six years ago. There are those who complain a pledge was made to rebuild the air traffic control system and that pledge has not been met.

Aerial congestion over large airports is a safety factor. The condition has worsened in recent years with more aircraft, more passengers and more flights. Complaints by passengers have become epidemic.

Airlines appear reluctant to try resolving congestion by negotiating schedule changes among themselves and the FAA apparently is not pressing for early solution.

As for air controllers, it is reasonable to think stress and resulting operational errors would be lessened by increasing their numbers. It is not realistic in our view to think increased reliance on gadgetry can fully replace the human factors of flight safety. There are always going to be "judgment calls" which require the expert's role.

Last year there were 839 near mid-air collisions reported and about 40 percent involving at least one commercial aircraft and perhaps half involved cases in which aircraft came within 500 feet of each other. With the increasing number of flights odds against avoiding some potential aerial disasters are bound to shrink.

Good intentions are not enough. The FAA should get into its act. A firm hand at the controls is needed.

Treasure

Tar Heels take much pride in the examples of rare beauty that abound in their state. A prime example is the Blue Ridge Parkway which stretches between the Shenandoah National Park in Virginia and the Great Smoky Mountains National Park in North Carolina. It is a 470-mile long scenic roadway that represents a melding of the Almighty's gift of wonders and the handiwork of Man in showing off that grandeur at its scenic best.

Completion of the last few miles of roadway in the project is expected in September, 52 years after the work was begun. Already, tens of millions of people have traveled the Parkway, occasionally pausing to absorb the spectacular views of forested valleys and slopes ... of horizons that blend with the sky in a distant haze and deeply inhaling the pure, pine-scented mountain air.

There are other national parkways but none like this. It follows the crest of the Blue Ridge Mountains, taking in sights unsurpassed in the United States. There may be roadways built higher, but none more pleasing.

Fifty-two years is a horrendous time to wait for such a work's completion but there were obstacles involving that 7.7 miles-long link. As so often happens, those last few miles will be the costliest of the entire system.

A great part of the added expense is attributed to meeting environmental impact concerns that require a sequence of bridges. They eliminate what would have been massive and damaging cuts and fill.

The result — the Blue Ridge Parkway — is a treasure and will continue to be one for generations to come.

The New World Of Foreign Trade

WASHINGTON — U.S. trade policy has reached a decisive turning point. For sound reasons, the American people reject our current policies and demand a change. Congress is going to respond. Not since 1973-74 has Congress embarked on so thorough an overhaul of our national trade objectives and remedies. This year's legislation will set the framework for U.S. trade policy for the rest of this century.

Congress intends to support tough international negotiations and to correct our economic policies here at home. On both counts, we have been frustrated for years by an administration seemingly disengaged and behind the times.

For some years, our trade officials have relied almost exclusively on multi-lateral negotiations to pursue our trade objectives. Achievement of a "level playing field" for U.S. producers was only the next trade round away. With modest tinkering, our trade competitors could be coaxed into the same free and open economic system that we enjoy. We had only to demonstrate the advantages of the free-trade nirvana, and they would follow.

That approach made sense four decades ago, when we ruled the roost in the world economy and our major trade competitors were other long-industrialized countries. The principal trade barriers were tariffs, and we established the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade to negotiate mutual tariff reductions. GATT succeeded far beyond expectations in lowering tariffs for manufactured goods among these countries.

But the trade problems of the 1940s and 1950s are not the trade problems of today and tomorrow. GATT rules apply to only a small fraction of world trade and a smaller fraction of trade frictions. Nontariff barriers, for which GATT procedures are inadequate at best, now predominate.

Further, many of our leading trade competitors today have not taken part in the mutual tariff reductions of previous GATT rounds. Korean tariffs average some three times our level, and Brazilian tariffs are twice those of Korea. And few of our newly industrialized competitors — including Japan — have abandoned their mercantilist attitude toward trade and accept the principles of a free and open international world trade system. They have prospered behind formal and informal trade barriers while watching the U.S. economy flounder in the pursuit of a one-sided free trade policy.

Far too often, we have naively applied traditional GATT formulas for tariffs to the nontariff barriers of our current competitors. We have assumed that any reduction in these barriers would immediately cause cash registers to ring for our exports.

The case of the Japanese semiconductor agreement underscores the bankruptcy of this strategy. The administration hailed the agreement as the most commercially significant action ever taken by the United States under our laws to eliminate foreign unfair practices and promised $4 billion in new sales over the next five years. But even before the ink was dry, the Japanese redoubled their efforts to squeeze U.S. manufacturers out of Japan and third-country markets.

NASA's Free Ride Should End

WASHINGTON — In opinion polls, Americans consistently place journalists just below politicians — that is to say, pretty low — among people we trust and respect. But most of us realize that a free and skeptical press, even if it sometimes questions some sacred cows, is essential to a healthy democracy.

But to fulfill that role, the press must do its job. It must poke and prod behind the official statements to inform and sensitize the public to issues that otherwise would remain hidden — perhaps until it's too late.

That responsibility is currently shirked by most of the major news media with regard to one of the most popular of all American institutions. The sad fact is that our National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) has fallen victim to its own favored status. It's time Americans took a closer look at the aims and administration of the space race.

Following the explosion 15 months ago of the space shuttle Challenger, the press took a keen interest in NASA's response and in the verdict of the Rogers Commission, which investigated the mishap. But in recent months coverage had tailed off, until the disclosure last Thursday that the FBI had launched a secret criminal investigation of Morton Thiokol Inc.

The probe began in January, when the FBI was told by company employees of "substantial ... fraud" concerning the manufacture of the booster rockets blamed for the Challenger accident.

The exceptions to this trend had been two recently-published books on the shuttle debacle, Malcolm McConnell's "Challenger: A Major Malfunction," and Joseph Trento's "Prescription For Disaster." Yet, these works only highlight the fact that for practical purposes, NASA has been allowed a virtual free ride by our supposedly skeptical media.

"How else can it be," asks veteran space reporter Gregg Easterbrook in the Washington Monthly, that "two uncelebrated writers have come up with page after page of material missed by the networks and major newspapers about the most conspicuous story of the year?"

That's a sign something is wrong. "The Challenger tragedy didn't come out of nowhere," Easterbrook observes, "there were repeated danger signs clear to any reporter willing to look beneath the P.R. gloss."

Here's a shocker. Remember how NASA claimed for days after the disaster that the astronauts died instantly? The fact is, their bodies were discovered clinging to the craft's hatch. And author Trento reveals, "hundreds of people heard the screams of agony over an open circuit that was preserved on tape."

But if one listens to press and political observers of NASA, it becomes clear it's no surprise the agency lied about the astronauts' death. NASA has been bending its facts for years. The surprise is that so little has been said and written about the problem.

In the cold light of reality, NASA's estimates of the costs and feasibility of the shuttle program seem absurd. The shuttle, remarkably, remains to this day several times more expensive than reliance on old-fashioned disposable rockets. Moreover, NASA has been wildly optimistic about its technology.

Congress' original mandate for the shuttle was based on a projected schedule of 50 flights per year. Now NASA says that anything above 16 a year is unrealistic until the next century. Besides its fabled problems with fuel and heat shields, NASA has to deal with weather. Did you know that a successful shuttle launch requires good visibility and low winds, in Florida, California and either Morocco or Senegal — all at once?

Most of the blame for NASA's plight must go to James M. Beggs, the agency's head until two months before the final flight of Challenger.

Beggs, who in 1985 was indicted on charges of fraud stemming from his former post at computer giant General Dynamics Corp., reportedly had little taste for bad news about the shuttle.

Beggs' other baby was the permanent space station. He sold it to Congress on the claim that it would cost $8 billion. Former associates recently told reporters the figure was consciously false. Despite some opposition, the station is expected to be approved soon, with a price tag (for now) of more than $12 billion. Even sadder is the fact that in 1984 Beggs killed a minor alteration on the shuttle that would have made the station redundant.

In a recent announcement regarding his intention to seek the presidency, Democratic Sen. Albert Gore (D-Tenn.) pledged, if elected, to send Americans to Mars. Space, it seems, is America's bipartisan crowd-pleaser. It's time reporters got back to their rightful business: annoying people and questioning the way our national dreams are pursued.

Strength For Today

When world conditions become grim and threatening, people long for charismatic leaders to arise and sweep the problems away. Yet this very tendency to wait for leaders before taking action is a large part of these problems. As the English man of letters, Gilbert Chesterton, once said, "Those who are waiting for leaders should instead be waiting for a chance to lead."

If we begin to assert leadership in the area in which we move, we shall find many people willing to follow us. Much human potential goes to waste. For example, some studies show that a considerable proportion of high school drop-outs ranks as high on basic intelligence tests as students who finish school.

In the same way, much leadership potential is going to waste. Many of the world's problems would be solved if the people who have it would be leaders and not wait for them.

A Conversation With 'G'

The old man, whom all of us called G, came to the door. He looked a bit more fragile than he was when he ran our spy network during the days when the cold war really counted for something.

G, now living a block from the Soviet Embassy in Northwest Washington, ushered me into the living room and offered me a cup of instant tea. Then he put two slices of bread out on the windowsill. He explained that the microwaves from the Soviet Embassy roof toast his bread a lot faster and cheaper than his oven. "I even cook my steaks that way," he said.

"What do you make of all the espionage activity?" I asked him.

"Big budgets and showboating. We must let Ivan know that we can hear every word he says, while he is doing the same to us. I'm not in the game anymore, but if I were I wouldn't hesitate to stick my bugs up every Commie pant leg in the country."

"G, if you were running things, would you plant American girls on Soviet guards here in Washington so the guards would show us their basement?"

"I would if I could find any American who would participate. But in my 40 years with the Company I never could find an American woman who would offer her charms to a Red Marxist Leninist rat."

"Not even for money?"

"Not even for money. I went to every madam between Park Avenue and Anchorage, Alaska, and they all said the same thing: 'We may be

'He explained that the microwaves from the Soviet Embassy roof toast his bread a lot faster and cheaper than his oven.'

fallen women, but we're Americans first."

"Since you couldn't get American women to compromise themselves with Russian government personnel, what did you do to garner important information from Ivan?"

"We did the next best thing. We gave the Russian secretaries nylons and Hershey bars."

"Could they be turned around for that?"

"No, but the Hershey bar almonds were really listening devices, and once the bar was consumed the secretary unknowingly was on our side."

"G, will this mutual bugging hurt relations between the United States and the U.S.S.R.?"

"I shouldn't think so. Both sides are very aware that their intelligence people have to make a living and look good with their bosses at home. What bothers me is why the U.S. did not anticipate that Ivan would bug our new embassy in Moscow."

"Maybe it's because our State Department is dumb?"

"That's too obvious," G said. "There might be another reason. The Americans wanted the KGB to bug the embassy in Moscow so that they could pass on disinformation to the Soviets."

"That's possible, but wouldn't the embassy eventually run out of disinformation, and then be stuck with leaking legitimate secrets?"

"Exactly," said G. "That's why it is so confusing. Somebody is doing something to someone and we don't know the who and why of it because their side has enlisted women agents and our side is still paying off their people with Japanese watches."

"Your toast is done," I told him.

He took the bread off the windowsill. Then he said, "You know, we've bugged their building in Washington up, down and sideways. Every time I try to get the game show 'Jeopardy' on television I hear the Soviet ambassador's wife talking to Mrs. Gorbachev in Moscow. I'm sure it's them because Mrs. Gorbachev keeps insisting she wants her American Express card renewed."

The old boy was getting tired so I got up to leave. "G," I said, "if we can't use lovemaking as a legitimate weapon, what would you suggest we do to find out what they're really up to?"

He said, "Garbage. The first thing any espionage agent does is go through his opponent's garbage. Sifting through the other chap's trash pile may not be as exciting as compromising him with a woman, but it's a lot neater."

Rayburn Still Casts A Long Shadow On Capitol Hill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Over 48 years, Sam Rayburn, the 43rd speaker of the House of Representatives, cast a long shadow on Capitol Hill.

Twenty-six years after his death in 1961 the Texas Democrat still does, even though the institutions of Congress have undergone profound change.

Committee chairmen are far less powerful than they once were. The seniority system has suffered erosion. Women and minorities are coming into their own. One-issue special-interest groups have flourished. Freshman members no longer are like children who are best seen and not heard.

And House members no longer cling to Rayburn's famous adage: To get along, go along.

But Rayburn, whose service in Congress began in 1913, who was first elected speaker in 1940, who worked with presidents from Woodrow Wilson to John F. Kennedy, is far from forgotten.

Now there is a new biography, published at $19.95 by the Texas Monthly Press, titled simply, "Rayburn," that illuminates anew the career of a politician whose career was rooted "in the rich black dirt of north Texas."

The book is the result of a collaboration between the late D. B. Hardeman, who began his research more than 30 years ago, and Donald C. Bacon, now assistant managing editor of U.S. News & World Report, who finished the job.

They describe Rayburn at the height of his career:

"He had a large round head, as hairless as a billiard ball, with hot brown eyes that flashed when he was angry. Five-foot, six inches tall, he grumpily reminded friends that Napoleon was only five feet four. His carefully cultivated scowl, worn like a protective shield, broke easily into a broad smile at the slightest provocation.

"... There were two Sam Rayburns. The stern, no-nonsense master of the House of Representatives and the unadorned, warm, often lonely human being who liked nothing better than to sit with friends, sip good whiskey, and swap great yarns ...

"He loved the House ... and understood its workings better than any member before or since. He marveled at Congress' intricate machinery, much as a watchmaker admires a fine timepiece. On the House floor, in committee meetings, and in the back rooms of the Capitol, he fought dozens of historic battles — winning most, losing some, but never hesitating to spill political blood to achieve a goal he believed in ..."

Hardeman and Bacon conclude that while Rayburn was a master at passing laws, analyzing politics and manipulating the levers of power, he was, nonetheless, "severely limited," a political chieftain who "ran a horse-and-buggy shop in the jet age."

Rayburn, who once said the federal government would do better if it appointed Texans to all of its important posts, probably had a right to say that jet age or no, his horse and buggy had got him where he wanted to go.

And he had a great deal of advice for those who wanted to follow his trail.

Race-Hate Letter Sets Off Hunt For Supremacist

By MARGARET BELL
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — A federal warrant has been issued for former White Patriot Party leader Glenn Miller, who last week urged white supremacists to begin a race war against blacks, Jews and the government.

U. S. Attorney Sam Currin said Monday that federal and state officials are concerned about Miller's mental condition and about the people who received his hate letter offering various numbers of "points" for attacks on Jews, blacks, homosexuals, government officials and "white race traitors."

"You never know how they are going to react to this kind of violent rhetoric," Currin said at a news conference. As for Miller, he said, "We're dealing with someone who perhaps is not playing with a full deck."

Currin said Miller is accused of violating the terms under which he was released on bond last July while appealing his conviction on contempt charges for operating a paramilitary organization.

Miller, a retired Green Beret, was sentenced to six months in prison and ordered to disassociate himself from the White Patriot Party and its members. This year, he moved from Angier to Hillsvale, Va., where he was required to report to a parole officer every day.

Currin said Miller was given permission in March by the Virginia federal probation office to take a "vacation" in the Southeast.

"We learned that he has been out of touch with the federal probation office in the western district of Virginia for the past 11 days," Currin said. "He apparently has also not disassociated himself from the White Patriot Party or the White Patriot Party members. Those are clear violations that we know about now."

"We have no idea where he is," Currin said. "We were caught off guard" by the fact that Miller had not been reporting regularly to his parole officer.

"But it appears that Glenn Miller did leave Virginia and has been traveling not just in the southeastern part of the United States, but all around the country," Currin said, adding that authorities knew Miller had been in Arizona and Oklahoma within the past 10 or 11 days.

Federal agents have been searching for Miller since they obtained a letter Friday to white supremacists calling for "total war." The letter, which Currin said was mailed to about 5,000 people, was postmarked in Shreveport, La.

"Both the tone and the substance of his letter bothered us a great deal," Currin said. "The fact that he indicates in the letter that he is a member of The Order (a violent white supremacist group) and that he apparently is also still claiming to be the leader of the White Patriot Party were of great concern to us."

Currin said Miller's state of mind, as reflected in the letter, "seems to me to be almost suicidal."

Miller's two-page letter leaves instructions for his funeral service and burial.

Currin said two of his criminal lawyers spent Monday reading through the letter and looking at the applicable federal statutes to decide whether Miller can be charged with any kind of a threat.

U.S. Marshal William Berryhill Jr. said after the news conference that Miller had tried to take out a life insurance policy for $100,000.

"However, since the time he left Virginia, a rejection notice has been delivered to his Virginia address," and Miller doesn't know that his insurance application has been rejected, Berryhill said.

"We think that makes him a more dangerous individual because he may be walking around right now thinking he's worth more dead than alive," Berryhill said. "If he thought he was going to declare war on Uncle Sam, die as a martyr and leave his family well-heeled, he needs to know that that's not the case."

Berryhill says protection has been stepped up for North Carolina government officials involved with the prosecution of Miller and his allies.

Marchers Call For Justice In Robeson Mass Protest

By ERICA JOHNSTON
Associated Press Writer
LUMBERTON, N.C. (AP) — Singing Christian hymns and an Indian song of mourning, more than 1,000 people marched on the Robeson County Courthouse to protest the treatment of Indians, blacks and poor people by the county's justice system.

"We must quit moping about injustice, and start promoting justice," the Rev. Mac Legerton, head of the county's Clergy and Laity Concerned, said at Monday's rally. "We are doing that."

Legerton said the group has begun negotiations with representatives of the North Carolina Bar Association and Sheriff Hubert Stone to improve conditions.

"Today is historic in that the power that used to be theirs ... is now your power," the Rev. Franklin Reeves, national director of the South Carolina-based Operation Help, told the crowd.

More than 20 speakers representing groups such as Amnesty International, the North Carolina Civil Liberties Union, the North Carolina Council of Churches and the Tuscarora Indian tribe addressed the crowd.

Rep. Sidney Locks, D-Robeson, also spoke as did relatives of Jimmy Earl Cummings, Cummings, who was unarmed, was shot to death Nov. 1, 1986, by sheriff's Deputy Kevin Stone, the son of Sheriff Stone. That death, along with several unsolved murders, sparked the creation of a citizens group to protest what they call unequal enforcement of the law.

The group also called for a public defender system, and the ouster of District Attorney Joe Freeman Britt, who has sent more convicted killers to death row than any other prosecutor in the county.

The rally followed a 3-mile march that passed through near Cummings' gravesite. Marchers sang hymns and carried signs with such messages as "Indian Hunting Open: Who is Next?" and "Solve The Unsolved Murders."

Several speakers called the protest a test of the U.S. Constitution.

"Two hundred years later, here we are ... still testing whether or not this nation is going to stand by its original promises," said Herbert Locklear, Cummings' uncle. "Liberty is yours. You have a right to demand it."

The N.C. Civil Liberties Union has agreed to sponsor a lawsuit on behalf of Cummings' family.

"We believe Jimmy Earl's rights to due process and a fair trial were wiped out by a bullet from Kevin Stone," said William Simpson, an attorney for the NCCLU.

"I'm here today because in South Africa we believe that an injury to one is an injury to all," said Laurie Nathan, a white South African who is touring the United States on a campaign to end military conscription in his country.

"In South Africa and this county, we have the same basic demands," Nathan said. "We want our rights. We want all of them. We want them here and we want them now."

At a memorial service held earlier, speakers urged the protesters to continue their fight.

Junior Cummings, the brother of Jimmy Earl Cummings, said he wants the march to draw attention to the county's judicial system and the circumstances surrounding his brother's death.

"I feel like we are much closer than we were at the beginning to seeing justice done. But there are a lot more pieces to the puzzle," Cummings said.

College-Bound Students Finding Admissions Test Hard To Handle

By The Associated Press
A week after many colleges notified applicants, admissions officers say frustrated parents have bombarded their offices with telephone calls demanding to know why their child didn't get accepted.

"One person offered to fly me and a colleague to the island of our choice for a vacation," said Anthony Strickland, associate director of undergraduate admissions at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. "That's the most extreme thing I've heard."

Admissions officers said the threats and bribes — most of which are more subtle than Strickland's example — don't do any good.

"I don't know what my price is," Strickland said, "but nobody's met it yet."

Strickland and others said that such parental behavior is symptomatic of the high-stakes game the college admissions process has become.

If there's a college-bound senior in the family, these are tough times, admissions officers and guidance counselors said.

"Certainly there's a lot of anxiety, especially for students who applied late or whose credentials are not as competitive," said George Dixon, associate director of undergraduate admissions at North Carolina State University.

Todd DeVries, a senior at Grimsley High School in Greensboro, could tell the news was bad when he came home and found his mother crying. He had been rejected from his first-choice school, Northwestern University in Evanston, Ill.

"I was crushed," DeVries said. "I wasn't expecting a rejection."

DeVries, 18, is in the top 5 percent of his class, scored 1280 on the SAT, was a member of the High IQ team and attended Governor's School. He said he didn't enjoy the college selection process one bit.

"No, it's not been fun," he said. "There's nothing like putting your ego on the line and seeing where you really stand."

Traditionally, many colleges have notified students in April about acceptance for the coming school year, although some start the process much earlier. Usually, the students have until May 1 to let the college or university know if they will enroll.

For the past three or four years, many campuses have reported dramatic increases in applications at a time when the number of 18-year-olds was expected to decline.

The surge continued this year. At Duke University, for example, 15,088 students — 18 percent more than last year — have applied for 1,494 spots in the freshman class.

At the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, 15,400 students applied, the most in the school's history and 12.8 percent more than last year. They are competing for 3,200 spaces.

Experts said applications are up for at least two reasons. One is the "hot college" syndrome — schools thought to be the place to attend because of positive national publicity. But probably the most important reason is that students — especially the top ones — are applying at more and more places, hoping to get in the best school possible.

"I had a girl apply to 15 last year," said Phil Weaver, director of guidance at Grimsley High School. "Four or five is not unusual."

But as applications increase, so do standards.

At UNC-CH, the average SAT score for an entering freshman has jumped 60 to 70 points in the past four years.

"That's a phenomenal increase," Strickland said. "It's simply the result of application pressure. When applications increase, you have a larger number of good students."

Strickland said he expected the average SAT score for students enrolling next fall to be around 1115 to 1120. The average for the current freshman class is 1087.

Wrenn Says Club Will Keep Operating

RALEIGH (AP) — The executive director of the National Congressional Club says a flood of donations has saved the political action committee, but Republican Sen. Jesse Helms says the club still needs money so badly it will accept contributions on the installment plan.

Club executive director Carter Wrenn told conservative supporters in a letter dated April 10 that the club would have to close its doors if they did not make emergency donations of $95 by this Friday.

Wrenn said Monday that a "gratifying response to my letter" had brought in enough money to keep the club functioning past the Friday deadline.

"You have to understand that this is an off-year problem for all political organizations," Wrenn said. "Some people lose interest between elections and it's a problem we've survived before and we'll survive this time. We have enough money to meet our immediate expenses."

But in a letter that arrived in club members' mailboxes over the Easter weekend, Sen. Jesse Helms, the club's principle beneficiary, said that contributions have slowed so much that he'll settle for $25 down on a $75 installment donation, the newspaper said.

"Carter wasn't crying wolf," Helms wrote. "Unless some helping hands are extended, and quickly, there'll be joy and jubilation in every left-wing circle in America. The Congressional Club may have to shut down."

It was the second letter Helms has written in less than a month, asking for money. In a March 30 plea, Helms told club members a $100 emergency contribution was sorely needed.

-Price vs. Quality?-

With so many brands of contacts available, it can be tempting to choose a pair with the lowest price. The fact is, however, that quality lenses may cost more but are a better value in terms of VISION (superior optical quality), COMFORT (due to precision manufacturing), and DURABILITY (better materials result in longer lens life).

At Carolina Eye Center we offer no sales or gimmicks to entice you to come see us. We only offer quality contact lenses, professional eye exams/contact lens fittings, and extensive follow-up exams for all of our contact lens patients. Airlines Stir Anger Over Change In Rules

By RICK GLADSTONE
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — U.S. airlines are tightening the rules in their frequent flier programs, worried that the runaway success of the marketing strategy to capture repeat customers is costing tens of millions of dollars in lost income.

Because so many people have been exploiting the programs to qualify for free trips, major carriers say they have been forced to raise the minimum mileage required for the most popular destinations, such as Hawaii.

The airlines also have attempted to stop frequent fliers from selling or sharing their rewards in violation of the programs, a practice that has flourished since the marketing strategy was introduced seven years ago.

The hard-line attitude adopted by the airlines has aroused complaints from many program participants, who claim they suddenly cannot take advantage of the rewards or lack the mileage needed for previously planned vacations.

"From the passenger's point of view, airlines have been able to change the awards with impunity, with no advance notice," said Peter Tanous, president of The Frequent Traveler, a New York-based newsletter that tracks changes in reward programs. "You save up for an award that costs 100,000 miles then the airline changes the rules and says you need more."

American Airlines, for example, has raised the requirement for its most popular reward, two coach tickets to Hawaii, from 50,000 miles to 60,000 miles effective May 1.

Trans World Airlines has raised its requirement for two first-class tickets to Europe from 90,000 miles to 110,000 miles effective April 1. Northwest Airlines has doubled the mileage required for a single coach ticket to Hawaii from 20,000 miles to 40,000.

"I was hoping to get away to Hawaii some time in August, and I don't have my mileage yet," said Roseann Brancatelli, an employee of Dover Handbag Co. in New York who often travels for the company. She had 48,000 miles accrued in American's program when she learned of the mileage increase.

"Now I'll certainly have to take two more business trips," she said. "I think it's very unfair."

At least two groups of frequent fliers have sued to challenge the changes, and law enforcement authorities in California, Kansas and New York are investigating whether some elements of the programs are fraudulent.

"We started looking into this a couple of weeks ago," Lanie Accles, spokeswoman for the New York State Attorney General's office, said Monday.

In one case, she said, a family that had accrued mileage for a free trip was ready to obtain tickets when the airline raised the required mileage. "We think that is not a fair business practice," she said.

The airlines have long reserved the right to change the rules of their frequent flier programs, and emphasize that only some of the mileage requirements were increased.

But complaints about the latest changes have put some airlines on the defensive, and at least one carrier, United, said it might revise the new rules after they take effect.

"We are looking at the aspect of retroactivity and expect to make an announcement in coming weeks," said United spokesman Matthew Gonring.

Introduced by American Airlines in 1980, frequent flier awards were designed to create passenger loyalty by giving repeat customers free trips or upgrades to first class, depending on the number of miles flown. The rewards were aimed at wooing business travelers, the most lucrative source of income for the airlines because they usually pay full fare.

Since then, nearly every airline has developed its own program to entice frequent fliers, a market that now constitutes nearly 20 million people. But the airline industry did not envision the popularity of the programs and incorrectly assumed many of the awards would go unclaimed.

Many frequent fliers sell their award coupons to brokers, who in

Air Fare Wars Keep Going As Major Airlines Maintain Sharp Discounts

By BILL MENEZES
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The nation's major airlines are expected to offer deeply discounted fares through the end of the peak summer travel season, analysts said following moves taken or planned by several carriers.

Continental and Eastern airlines, units of Texas Air Corp., said Monday they planned to continue offering the deeply discounted "Maxsaver" fares they introduced in January, although the tickets will be more expensive and carry more restrictions.

Minneapolis-based Northwest Airlines said it expected to match the extension, while several other major airlines said they were studying the move.

The Maxsavers currently offered by Continental and Eastern were supposed to end May 20. Those non-refundable fares are discounted as much as 80 percent from regular fares and are less than the "super-saver" fares that previously were the industry's lowest.

Analysts said they expected the major airlines to follow, especially because the summer fares would be higher and slightly more restrictive than the current Maxsavers.

"Those are two positives," said Louis Marckesano of Janney Montgomery Scott Inc. in Pittsburgh. "We were hoping they would modify pricing upward and/or increase the minimum stay involved."

Thomas G. Plaskett, Continental's president, told a news conference that an estimated 3 million passengers had purchased Maxsaver tickets from Continental and Eastern since Feb. 1.

The fares, good through May 20 and intended to fill seats that otherwise would go empty on selected flights, could be purchased at any time up until two days before the flight. Passengers changing or cancelling their reservations forfeit the entire ticket price.

The summer fares will cost more than the earlier Maxsavers and the advance-purchase requirement was stretched to seven days. Also required are a Saturday night stayover and roundtrip purchase.

The summer Maxsavers are priced from $38 to $278 roundtrip, compared with a range of $38 to $198 roundtrip before May 20. A Maxsaver flight from New York to Los Angeles, for example, would be $129 one-way this summer, compared with $89 each way before May 20.

Continental also said it was trimming the advance-purchase restriction on its regular supersavers to seven days from 30, while reducing the cancellation penalty to 25 percent from 50 percent. Continental said ticketholders could change super-saver reservations for a flat $25 instead of the previous 50 percent penalty.

Unlike the first Maxsavers, no expiration date has been set for the post-May 21 fares.

Plaskett said Continental believed the fare extension would be industrywide, noting "the fares have been very advantageous to the industry" because of the "impulse buying" they generated.

He also said the non-refundability may have cut down on no-shows, saying Maxsaver no-shows were five to six percentage points less than for other fares.

In a related matter, Plaskett said Continental had asked the Transportation Department to require U.S. airlines to routinely disclose service information such as on-time performance, complaints about lost luggage and the time it takes for answers on telephone reservation lines.

Plaskett said industry deregulation made it tougher for consumers to evaluate the various carriers, and disclosure of efficiency information would improve competition in service-related areas.

United and Northwest representatives said they would accept such disclosures.

"We would support the disclosure because it would help positively differentiate United," said Matt Gonring, at United's Chicago headquarters. "We've got a good service record. We think reporting would prove out our high quality."

New Cars Will Have Air Bags

By HENRY GILGOFF
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

WASHINGTON — In the next three to five years, millions of drivers will be getting new cars with a new feature: a driver-side air bag supplementing manual lap and shoulder belts.

"It's about time," said Joan Claybrook, president of Public Citizen, an activist group that has long advocated the air bag, and the former head of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration.

Ms. Claybrook estimates that 12 years of delay since a federal "inflatable restraint" rule was to take effect in 1974 has resulted in 50,000 to 70,000 fatalities and more than half a million injuries.

The move to air bags is supported now by the auto industry, which had successfully fought to delay it for years, and by the Reagan administration, which had rescinded a federal standard to require automatic restraints. Automakers cite a number of factors, including competitive forces and favorable experience with air bag-equipped cars. The Reagan administration's inability to rescind the original mandate for passive restraints a revision of the rule more favorable to the auto industry also been cited as factors in the turnaround.

The rescission was overturned by the U.S. Supreme Court, and the Transportation Department issued a modified version in 1984, requiring a phase-in of automatic restraints. Currently, most automakers meet the rule — which this model year affects 10 percent of their cars — with automatic seatbelts rather than air bags. But in the 1990 model year, 2 million cars will be air bag-equipped, mostly on the driver side only, according to an estimate by the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety.

A key force behind the phase-in rule is the refusal of so many Americans to buckle up. About 40 percent of drivers observed in a 19-city survey in the last six months of 1986 were using seatbelts, according to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration. In New York, seatbelt use by front-seat occupants was only 12 percent before violators of a state belt-use law became subject to $50 maximum fines in January 1985. Usage shot up to 69 percent that month — but was down to 48 percent last October.

Particularly because of the reluctance to buckle up, federal officials say, air bags can be lifesavers, providing protection in frontal and front-angle crashes.

Auto insurers have long championed the air bag, and some of them put their money where their mouth is by purchasing air bag-equipped cars for their company fleets. With exceptions such as General Motors' former president, Edward Cole, the auto industry has opposed it fiercely.

Gen. MAXWELL TAYLOR

Maxwell Taylor Dies At 85

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, remembered as "one of the great military men in American history" for his service in World War II, Korea and Vietnam, will be buried Thursday in Arlington Cemetery on a hillside below the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

The four-star general died Sunday at the age of 85 in Walter Reed Army Medical Center of amyotrophic lateral sclerosis, which is more commonly known as Lou Gehrig's disease. He had been hospitalized since mid-January.

Taylor was a World War II hero who became chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and U.S. ambassador to South Vietnam during the buildup of American forces there. In his memory, the Army ordered flags lowered at all Army installations.

Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger said Taylor "epitomized what it means to be a soldier, a diplomat and a scholar." The general, he said, was "one of the great military men in American history."

Army Secretary John O. Marsh called Taylor "a great patriot, a peerless military leader and an individual dedicated to the cause of peace in the world."

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., described Taylor as a "rare and gifted military leader," who understood the importance of arms control in the nuclear age.

"America has lost one of the greatest soldier-statesmen in its history and the Kennedy family has lost one of its dearest and closest friends," the senator said.

The general leaves his wife, the former Lydia Gardner Happer, and two sons, John Maxwell Taylor and Thomas Happer Taylor. The funeral Thursday will be at Fort Myer, Va., with burial at the adjoining national cemetery. A spokesman for the cemetery said the gravesite is less than 200 yards, down a hill, from the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

Taylor was born in Keytesville, Mo., on Aug. 26, 1901. He graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point in 1922.

His World War II career was studied with stunning exploits, including a cloak-and-dagger mission to Italy to confer with Italian officers before their country's surrender was announced. He led the 101st Airborne, which he helped found, in its jump into Normandy on D-Day and then led his paratroopers through 73 days of combat in Holland.

After the war, Taylor became commandant of Berlin, the Army's top office in the German capital, then under the control of the United States, the Soviet Union, France and Great Britain.

He commanded the 8th Army in Korea toward the end of the Korean War and was United Nations commander in the Far East.

Taylor assumed the Army's top military position, that of chief of staff, in 1955, a position he held until his first retirement on July 1, 1959.

He wrote four books, starting with "The Uncertain Trumpet," in 1960. In it, he said massive retaliation with Air Force nuclear bombs continued to be the "basic strategic concept which guides our military preparations today."

He retired from the Army after 41 years of service and became chairman of the Mexican Light & Power Company in Mexico City. In the fall of 1960, he was made president of New York City's Lincoln Center for the Performing Arts.

Taylor was recalled by President John F. Kennedy to assist him as an adviser in the military and intelligence fields. Taylor had been head of the "Cuban Study Group" formed by Kennedy to look into the Bay of Pigs debacle and to advise on guerrilla tactics. He opposed the strategy of quarantine in favor of strikes that would destroy the Soviet missile sites in Cuba.

In the fall of 1961, Kennedy sent him to Vietnam to see what the United States could do there to stop Vietnamese communist forces. He recommended that U.S. military presence in Vietnam should function primarily as a "logistical task force" and as an "emergency reserve in a military crisis."

By ALAN FRAM
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's property and casualty insurance companies earned high profits on their investments despite losing billions of dollars on policies in the decade ending in 1985, a congressional investigator says.

The insurers earned $81.1 billion in after-tax profits during the period, including $19 billion in 1986, when the liability insurance crisis was at its peak, the General Accounting Office says.

Towards the end of the period, insurance premiums also rose dramatically, making some policies become hard or impossible to obtain, the GAO says. The industry blamed skyrocketing premiums and cancellations on excessive court judgments in wrongful action cases.

The figures were included in testimony obtained by The Associated Press that was prepared for delivery today by William J. Anderson, an assistant comptroller general of the GAO.

Anderson was to tell the House commerce, consumer protection and competitiveness subcommittee that the insurance industry actually lost $64.8 billion during the decade on the policies it underwrote.

But during those same years, the industry more than offset that loss, earning $144.3 billion by investing its capital, and collecting $1.6 billion in federal tax refunds and future tax credits, Anderson said.

The past decade has seen cycles of steep increases and sharp drops in insurance company earnings, accompanied by intermittently rising and falling premiums. Rate increases in recent years have led businesses, municipalities and doctors to complain that it is difficult or impossible for them to get insurance.

Congress has been studying whether to approve legislation that would oversee the insurance industry, which currently is regulated chiefly by the states.

"Despite faring poorly in recent years, the industry's profitability in terms of its rate of return on net worth over this 10-year period was comparable to that of other industries, such as the banking, transportation and utility industries," said Anderson.

Anderson said the study by the GAO, Congress' investigative arm, found that the industry's earnings improved from $9.7 billion in 1985 to about $19 billion in 1986.

The testimony noted that the insurance industry disagrees with some of the technical assumptions GAO made in computing the figures.

The testimony did not provide details for individual insurance companies.

Zaccaro Charges Upheld

NEW YORK (AP) — A judge has ruled that John A. Zaccaro must stand trial on charges of attempted extortion and bribe-seeking stemming from an inquiry into the awarding of cable-television franchises in Queens.

Acting Justice John S. Thorp of State Supreme Court in Queens — a trial-level court — rejected a motion by the real-estate broker in making the ruling Monday.

Zaccaro is the husband of former Rep. Geraldine A. Ferraro of Queens, the Democratic vice presidential candidate in 1984.

The judge upheld the two most serious charges of a three-count indictment against Zaccaro. He dismissed a third charge, charging Zaccaro with a lesser degree of attempted extortion, because the alleged payoff occurred in Manhattan.

Zaccaro, who says he is innocent, is accused of having acted in concert with Donald R. Manes, the Queens borough president who committed suicide in 1986, in seeking a large, unspecified bribe from a cable-television company trying for a franchise in Queens.

Cablevision System Corp. refused to pay the bribe and was not awarded the franchise, prosecutors say.

Seven People Die In Apartment Fire

CAMDEN, N.J. (AP) — Neighbors could only listen in horror to the screams of four young children and three adults who died after fire raced through an apartment building and trapped them in a second-story kitchen.

"I could hear the kids screaming. I could hear them but I couldn't get to them," said Duane Vautier, who lives two houses away from the row house that was engulfed by fire early Monday.

Careless smoking in an upstairs room probably caused the blaze, the prosecutor said. But fire officials said no cause was determined for the fire that also left one child in critical condition.

Six were dead at the scene, and a 4-year-old boy died Monday night at Children's Hospital, authorities said. All seven died apparently of smoke inhalation. Autopsies were planned today.

The victims included a young couple and two children who lived upstairs. Also dead was a woman and two of her three children, who had moved into the first-floor apartment about two weeks ago.

Camden County Prosecutor Samuel Asbell said evidence shows the fire began on the second floor, probably in a mattress from careless smoking.

Asbell, whose investigation is continuing, said it appears one of the residents may have tried to drag a burning mattress downstairs.

"We can only assume the exit ways were blocked — one of them by a burning mattress," he said.

The conclusions contradicted those of Fire Marshal James Hillman, who said the fire began on the first floor and its cause was still undetermined.

GOP Sees Money Flow Ebb As Democrats Cut Cash Edge

L.A. Times-Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Republican Party's three major fund-raising committees — for years the financial success stories of modern politics — are running into problems, and their Democratic counterparts are beginning to reduce the GOP's still-overwhelming cash advantage.

As the GOP struggles to cope with the Iran-contra scandal, loss of Senate control and disclosures of lucrative bonuses to influential committee staffers and consultants, its consistently rising cash tide has begun to ebb.

"We are concerned about it," said Terry Wade, spokesman for the Republican National Committee (RNC).

Wade said the RNC still "projects that 1987 will match 1986," but he acknowledged "there is no doubt the Iran situation has had some negative effect, and the direct-mail market has been in flux for about two years now."

Tom Mason of the National Republican Senatorial Committee said donors who have responded generously to previous direct-mail appeals "quite frankly are tired."

Over the past decade, the Republicans' financial advantage has enabled them to invest far more money in computer technology, polling and special consultants.

The clearest evidence of today's GOP difficulties is at the Republican National Committee, where revenues for the first three months of 1987 amounted to $10.99 million, down from $14.01 million for the comparable period in 1985, according to reports filed with the Federal Election Commission.

No reports are available yet for the National Republican Senatorial and Congressional committees, but the evidence points toward a significant reduction in cash flow there, too.

At the senatorial committee — which lost some financial backing after disclosures that it paid bonuses of $50,000 and $90,000 to the executive director and a fund-raising consultant — the staff has been cut in half to about 65 and no consulting contracts have been renewed.

Crocodile Shoes, Accessories Are Likely From Poachers

By BETHANY KANDEL
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Shoppers who purchase a pair of crocodile shoes may unknowingly be stepping into an international smuggling ring.

Some 25 percent to 30 percent of the $600 million worth of imported wildlife items Americans buy each year are made from endangered and protected animals that are illegally poached, smuggled and trafficked in a black market similar to the international drug trade, says Ginette Hemley, director of the World Wildlife Fund's watchdog unit, called TRAFFIC.

"In many cases this trade represents the major threat to these animals' survival in the wild," she says.

As a result of increased demand and consumption due to fashion trends, the World Wildlife Fund has joined forces with the U.S. Interior and Justice departments to launch an educational campaign to tell consumers and designers which species are protected.

"Americans help drive the trade and perpetuate the illegalities because of our insatiable craving for the exotic," says Ms. Hemley. She blames the fashion industry for fueling demand for products made from the hides of many endangered species.

Yet, designers often don't know that the skins they use in their belts, bags, boots and wallets come from endangered species. "They're often duped by their suppliers," she says.

American alligators and ranch-grown crocodiles are protected and controlled and thus more expensive, she says. Caiman, however, is cheaper and thus the target of rampant poaching.

It's common for the skins to be smuggled from Latin America to France, Italy, Spain or Japan for processing, and then imported as finished products into the United States carrying documents listing false countries of origin or improper species names.

Consumers should be suspicious of all crocodile accessories, Ms. Hemley says, "because at least half of the crocodile products on the market are illegal."

Other species high on the endangered and threatened lists include the Chinese alligator, spectacled caiman, most lizard skins from Brazil, Paraguay and a number of Asian countries, and snakeskin originating in Latin America and India.

Consumers intent on buying alligator shoes or a purse should ask specifically for American alligator products, which come from animals that are no longer endangered, she says.

But, Ms. Hemley concedes, "it's very hard to distinguish protected, illegal or endangered skins from those that aren't."

Thus the campaign is hoping to encourage designers to deal only with reputable importers and to "start asking intelligent questions about where the skins come from," she says.

It's also important for consumers planning to shop overseas to know what they cannot bring into this country, under penalty of steep fines and loss of the product to customs.

"One immediate and good alternative to the real thing are mock products," says Ms. Hemley.

"It's a lot cheaper and you can get the same look," agreed Linda Allard, who designs for Ellen Tracy. The company sells mock crock belts for $50 to $90 retail, while real crocodile could cost several hundred dollars.

"A lot of women are very conscious of the endangered species issue and are reluctant to wear the real thing," Ms. Allard says.

However, Ms. Hemley notes, even though the use of reptile-like products represent a move away from products made of endangered species, "conservationists worry that it still sustains and stimulates interest in the real thing and thus in the illegal trade."

Miss Taylor Is Married

MRS. FEKETE

WINTERVILLE — Sylvia LaVonne Taylor of Fairfield, Ohio, and John Andrew Fekete of Saginaw, Mich., were united in marriage Saturday at 3 p.m. at Corey's Chapel Free Will Baptist Church.

The double-ring ceremony was performed by Bishop J.B. Taylor with Elder Allious Gee assisting. Performing music for the ceremony were organist Abner J. Clark and soloist Marsha Taylor.

The bride is the daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. Johnnie B. Taylor of Greenville. She is a graduate of J.H. Rose High School and North Carolina A and T State University. She is an industrial engineer.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Fekete of Kawkawlin, Mich. He is a graduate of T.L. Handy High School, Bay City, Mich., and Saginaw Valley State College. He is a manufacturing engineer with General Motors Corp.

The bride wore a formal white gown of sheerganza over peau de soie and silk Venise lace. The gown was designed with a Queen Anne neckline appliqued with Venise lace encrusted with pearls and irridescent. The full sleeves featured lace appliques and pearls. The circular skirt, appliqued with lace and pearls flowed into an attached chapel-length train. Her veil was a teardrop hat accented with pearls and lace. She carried a bouquet of white and pink carnations, baby's breath and orchids.

Patricia Ray, sister of the bride, of Naranja Lakes, Fla. was the matron of honor. Gwendolyn Alford, sister of the bride, of Greenville was the bridesmaid and Misty Lynn Fekete, daughter of the bridegroom, of Saginaw, Mich. was the junior bridesmaid. Niece of the bride, Jacinta Alford of Greenville was the flower girl.

The matron of honor and the bridesmaid wore gowns of lilac lace over taffeta. The dresses featured dropped waists, scalloped edging and satin ribbon sashes. The dresses were two-tiered tea length. They carried a bouquet of spring flowers with lilac and pink ribbons.

The junior bridesmaid wore a lilac floor-length dress with a fitted bodice, sweetheart neckline and puffed sleeves. She carried a bouquet of pink, lilac and white carnations with pink and lilac satin ribbons.

The flower girl wore an antique satin gown with lilac cummerbund and carried a basket with spring flowers tied with lilac and pink bows.

Rick Burger of Midland, Mich., was the best man. The ushers were John C. Taylor and Bryan Taylor, brothers of the bride, both of Greenville. William Taylor, nephew of the bride, of Greenville was the ring bearer.

A reception was held at the Ayden Community Building. Guests were greeted by Sharon Smith. Deborah Taylor presided at the guest register. Barbara Taft poured punch and Carolyn Kennedy, the bride's cousin, served cake.

After a wedding trip to the Caribbean Islands, the couple will live in Saginaw, Mich.

Dad Enforces Rules For Flunking Grades

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My parents are divorced and I live with my father. My 17-year-old sister lives with our mother in another town. I'll be 15 next month. Last semester I flunked almost all of my subjects. Up until now I've done quite well in school, but I guess I just got lazy.

My father took away my stereo, radio and all my tapes. I am not allowed to accept any telephone calls or make any. I have to stay after school every day for an hour and a half to study, plus I am not permitted to sleep after 8 a.m. on the weekends. These are the rules my father made, and I will have to obey them until I get my next report card.

Abby, I don't smoke, don't drink and I don't do drugs. I'm a pretty decent and trustworthy teen-ager. Do you have any ideas on how I can get my harsh punishment reduced? — MY FATHER'S PRISONER

DEAR PRISONER: No. But thank the Lord for a father who cares enough about you to insist that you study. By your own admission you are capable of doing "quite well." Now, hit the books and pull down some impressive grades, so you can go back to enjoying life with father.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I disagree strongly. His work takes him out of town periodically on business seminars. The last two trips, he has developed a friendship with a woman from his office who also attends these three-day seminars. The first time, he took her out for a drink and dancing. The second time, they had breakfast together every morning — just the two of them — even though there were seven people from the same office there. They spent every evening together — with him walking her to her room (one night getting in at 3:30 a.m.). This friendship is still going on at work; they go to lunch together, taking time off in the middle of the day to go shopping. He claims it's business and there is no reason for me to be upset.

The lady says it is just a platonic friendship — she has many male friends and her husband doesn't mind. Am I wrong to let this friendship upset me? Or is my husband wrong to expect me to accept this kind of friendship? — HURT IN OREGON

DEAR HURT: He's wrong. You seem to have a fairly complete timetable of your husband's schedule. If it is accurate, I think you had better opt for a counselor before you need a referee — or a lawyer. This kind of "business" could be filed under "monkey."

DEAR ABBY: Will you please save our sanity and print the letter someone sent in about wind chimes? We are being clanged to death here! We'd like to mail it to the neighbors in our circle who are causing us sleepless nights and driving us crazy. I hope you can find it. — J.D.

DEAR J.D.: It was a breeze:

DEAR ABBY: Why do people assume that everyone in the world likes wind chimes? My neighbors hung some right outside my bedroom window, and in the middle of the night it sounds as if my telephone is ringing. Somebody stole their first set, and I don't dare to say anything because they might think I took them. (Believe me, I was tempted.)

If people like wind chimes so much, why don't they hang them INSIDE the house, turn on a fan and enjoy them to their heart's content? — HATES DING-A-LINGS

DEAR ABBY: Your recent columns on labeling rest room doors reminded me of the time when Jock, my good Scotsman friend, visited me in Kansas City and got into big trouble when he thought the sign on the door said "LADDIES." — BEN NICKS, SHAWNEE, KAN.

Club championships will be held Wednesday morning and afternoon, Thursday night and Saturday afternoon.

Most brides still wear traditional white for purity, but not necessarily in Beverly Hills. Country Elegance, a North Hollywood bridal salon, has outfitted two brides in black. "Everyone said, 'Oh, you lost weight,'" happily explained one of the brides who was clad in a black lacy gown.

Home-Smoked Salmon, Anyone?

At Wits End

Erma Bombeck

Last spring my husband looked up from the travel section of the newspaper and said, "Have you ever thought of what it would be like to catch and smoke your own salmon?"

"I think of nothing else," I said. "Think of the money you could save by doing it yourself and eliminating all those middlemen. And look at all the fun you could have in the process."

The next sound I was to hear struck terror in my heart. "Jack the Clipper" was ripping out the story in those little zigzag cuts that meant he was going to put it in his billfold for future reference.

In June, he booked passage on a ship for the two of us to cruise the Bering Sea off the coast of Alaska in search of bargain salmon loaves, salmon steaks and pate. The cost of the cruise was excessive, but as he pointed out, "Salmon don't swim by your front door."

Since we live in a desert climate, both of us had to buy a warm wardrobe for salmon searching, consisting of windbreakers, parkas, knee-length boots and extra rain gear.

The first several days were the fun ones where I threw up every minute I was awake. Then it went downhill. We boarded little zodiacs and sat in the rain for hours at a time. The monotony was broken only when one man got a hook caught in his lip, and I thought a plane was landing in the boat ... and it turned out to be a mosquito.

On the next to the last day, we caught 45 pounds of salmon. They were expensive to air freight home, but as my husband said, "Those little babies will pay for themselves in pure pleasure."

Their arrival necessitated giving away less exotic fare in our freezer like chicken, roasts and steaks. What with the holidays, we didn't have time to fiddle with the salmon, but soon after the new year, we purchased an electric smoker which we discovered was missing two wing nuts. The instructions on how to assemble it were written in Swedish.

Last week, my husband decided the time was perfect to smoke our own salmon and have that fun he talked about. He was going to serve our guests smoked salmon on little crackers. He went out once for the salt for the brine, made another trip for the wood chips and still another for bags to hang the salmon in to dry.

When he plugged in the smoker, the fuse blew. He put the smoker in his workshop for a higher voltage plug and the smoke alarm went off. By the time our guests arrived, the process hadn't even begun. I put out a bowl of nuts.

At 3 in the morning, the salmon was ready. We figured it cost $3,995 an ounce.

Gold costs $405 an ounce. Who wants to be worth their weight in salmon?

Dole Says Momentum Building For Tougher Sanctions On Trade

By MERRILL HARTSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Republican leader Bob Dole said today he doubts that the Reagan administration's imposition of punitive sanctions against Japan would stop the momentum building in Congress for tough trade sanctions.

"I doubt if it will have much impact," Dole told reporters at the White House after GOP congressional leaders met with President Reagan. "I happen to agree with the administration but I don't think it's going to change any votes," the senator said.

Dole was discussing the U.S.-Japanese trade situation just as former Japanese Foreign Minister Shintaro Abe was about to go into a private meeting with Reagan. No reporters or photographers were admitted to the meeting.

Dole, asked about the chance that Abe can talk U.S. officials into reversing the sanctions, said of today's meeting, "I don't see it having any big impact. It comes a little late. I think this has been brewing ... for two or three years. I think coming now, when we're on the eve of passing legislation in the House and may in ... three months in the Senate, it comes a bit late."

On Monday, Vice President George Bush and presidential Chief of Staff Howard H. Baker said they doubted the Japanese could win any quick reversal of the president's decision to impose $300 million in punitive tariffs on Japanese electronic products.

Abe, a personal emissary of Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone, came to Washington with the dual purpose of getting the tariffs lifted and setting up Nakasone's visit here next week.

The former Japanese foreign minister met with Bush Monday, then told reporters that "we should settle the matter through friendly talks, not through confrontation or sanctions or reprisals."

But Baker, talking to reporters accompanying Reagan back to Washington aboard Air Force One on Monday, said that Reagan's April 30 meeting with Nakasone "ought to be more than just a friendship meeting."

And Bush said he didn't know whether it was possible to get the sanctions lifted, although he said there was no deadline for resolving the matter.

Administration officials are concerned about the growing possibility that an amendment to trade legislation before the House, sponsored by Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., will get enacted by the Congress.

The Gephardt amendment would require the government to take punitive action against Japan and other countries judged to have excess trade surpluses with the United States by virtue of unfair trading practices.

In a speech in Oiso, Japan, over the weekend, House Majority Leader Thomas Foley, D-Wash., warned that the Gephardt amendment was likely to pass Congress by an overwhelming margin.

On Monday, Baker said the Japanese are capable of moving "with lightning rapidity" to ease trade tensions with the United States.

"Abe is pretty well tuned into U.S. politics," Baker said. "He has a better understanding of the relationship of Congress to trade policy."

"So, I think he'll take seriously" the statements of Foley, Baker added.

Asked about the possibility that Japan will yield in the talks on the semiconductor issue, Baker said, "I hope so. I don't know that. ... But I hope they come up with measures that would ease the tensions, reduce the likelihood of a protectionist trade bill, and even to permit the president to rescind his recent proclamation on semiconductors."

Abe's talks on Monday included a session with Secretary of State George P. Shultz followed by an informal social hour at the State Department to which Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III was invited.

A U.S. official, speaking on condition he not be identified, said Abe sought to assure the Americans that Japan was prepared to take steps aimed at improving consumption — measures that presumably would stimulate Japanese purchases of foreign goods.

The vexing trade problem puts a strain on the relationship between Reagan and Nakasone, who have become friends in recent years.

we didn't want to hire additional counselors and recruiters," he said. "We didn't want to put on additional people we couldn't fund when we had cuts."

According to PCC figures, $100,696 of the adult basic education funds were spent for expressly for that purpose.

However, community college officials are not required to spend the money on adult programs. "The funds are not restricted," Bright said. The money may be transferred to other programs in the budget with the approval of the N.C. Department of Community Colleges.

"We need to transfer and utilize the funds to serve the clientele," Porter said. "All of the money is used. It is a matter of the way we coded it."

Some of the $104,089 in excess ABE funds were used for compensatory education programs for the mentally retarded in Pitt County, according to Porter.

"There has been no funding specifically for those programs until this fiscal year," he said. "We have been using portions of the adult basic education funds for students with learning disabilities or for the mentally retarded. Now we will earn funds for that program."

Money from the ABE program also was used to provide training for law enforcement officers, fire fighters and other groups of adults requesting specific occupational courses. Funds also have been used for workshops for Chore Service providers in conjunction with the Department of Social Service's program.

The Joint Appropriations Committee on Education, which received Ms. Ashcraft's report, said it might study proposals to limit how adult basic education money is spent.

Linnas

cept Linnas last week, after the arrangement was disclosed by the World Jewish Congress.

Tass and Radio Moscow criticized U.S. officials for failing to deport Linnas earlier.

"The butcher evaded just retribution and found sanctuary in the U.S., where he was granted American citizenship," Tass said.

Twenty years after Linnas became a U.S. citizen in 1959, immigration officials charged he entered the country under false pretenses, after passing himself off as a displaced person in Germany after the war. He was stripped of his U.S. citizenship in 1982, and had been jailed in New York since April 1986.

Many Jewish groups have lobbied to have him deported.

"I came here tonight as a witness to see with my own eyes that we have done as much as we can to see that Linnas is brought to justice for the crimes he committed," Menahem Z. Rosensaft, of the World Jewish Congress, said at Kennedy airport.

The first person accused of being a Nazi war criminal to be deported from the United States to the Soviet Union was Fyodor Fedorenko, 78. He was deported in December 1984, and has been sentenced to death. No date has been set for the execution.

Fedorenko was accused of escorting prisoners to gas chambers and shooting children and elderly people at Poland's Treblinka death camp.

Wright Expects Arms Accord

The arms control proposals are expected to be considered by the Democratic-controlled House later this week as it takes up a bill appropriating $11 billion in the current fiscal year for a variety of government programs. The two proposals were added by the Appropriations Committee.

One would require the United States to comply with the unratified SALT II treaty that Reagan says will no longer guide his decisions on which long-range atomic weapons to build. The United States is now above the limits in the pact, although the Soviets say they will still honor the treaty.

The second would ban almost all U.S. nuclear tests, as long as the Soviets halt their test program.

White House chief of staff Howard Baker Jr., speaking to reporters aboard Air Force One as President Reagan returned from vacation, said he expects the president to lobby against the proposals.

Asked if he thought Reagan would renew his argument that congressional action might hurt the current negotiations, Baker said, "I don't think he needs to make that argument."

"I think it's self-evident that when you are making progress — and I believe we are making progress — it will be perceived as a sensitive time and I believe that Congress will give the president the latitude to pursue these matters," said Baker.

Wright disagreed, saying, "They will always have those arguments." He also noted that the House won't again go along with the argument that the restrictions will harm the ongoing talks.

Wright said he and the other legislators felt "there are changes occurring in the Soviet Union" under Gorbachev. But he added, "It doesn't measure up to our standards of civil rights and individual freedom."

The Soviet Union "has made progress and that's an encouraging sign," he said. "It's a little like looking at a glacier — any movement is significant and there has been movement."

He also said a number of the visiting congressmen toured the new U.S. Embassy under construction. Some Reagan administration officials have said the building is so riddled with Soviet listening devices that it might have to be torn down.

"That would be ridiculous" Wright said. "It's nothing new that they have tried to bug, and have bugged, our embassy ... we bug their embassy. The only thing that's new is the appalling betrayal of duty by U.S. military personnel," who are accused of permitting Soviet citizens into secure areas of the old U.S. Embassy, he said.

Wright also said Gorbachev was "apparently misunderstood" when he reportedly told the group that the United States should create separate states for blacks. Wright said Gorbachev was talking about how the Soviet Union dealt with its minorities.

"There was no suggestion at all that he was trying to tell us what to do in our country," Wright said.

Six-Run Rally Carries Rampants Past Havelock In Tourney Semi-Finals

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer
HOLLYWOOD — Rose broke open a tight game with a six-run sixth inning and went on to take an 11-3 win over Havelock in the second round of the D.H. Conley Pitt County Easter baseball Tournament Monday.

The win sends the Rampants into the finals against D.H. Conley, a 1-0 winner over Kinston in the other semi-final game.

Rose trailed 3-2 heading into the sixth inning when Robbie McDonald started off a rally with a solo homer that tied the game at 3-3.

Tom Moye then walked before being put out on a fielder's choice by Greg Jones. Pinch-hitter Billy Carr, in for Jamie Brewington, followed with a single. Hunter Clark, batting in the ninth position for the Rampants, then drove home Jones to give Rose the lead.

Axel Smith was intentionally walked, followed by an error on the shortstop that allowed Tim Moore to reach and Carr to score.

Jason Galloway then knocked a double which cleared the bases and gave Rose an 8-3 advantage.

"McDonald's hit took the pressure off of us," said Rose coach Ronald Vincent. "(But) I felt like Hunter had the really key hit."

The six run burst broke open a tight game that up until then had featured base-running mistakes by Rose.

The Rampants opened the game with three straight singles by Smith, Moore and Galloway but Smith and Moore were picked off base and Rose came away with nothing in the first inning despite putting three men on base.

Moore was also picked off base in the third on a double play and on a play at the plate in the fifth, but he more than made up for it at the plate, going 3-4 with one RBI.

"We really made a lot of base-running mistakes, just (being) too aggressive," Vincent said. "(But) I felt like Tim Moore had a really good game."

Rose added three more runs in the seventh inning to decide the matter.

Brewington reached on an error with two outs before Clark singled and stole second. Axel Smith followed with a home run to make it 11-3.

Havelock went through three pitchers, Steve Daub started and lasted three innings. Jeff Sykes came in in the fourth before giving way to Jimmy Amidan in the sixth.

Brewington went the distance for the Rampants, striking out nine and walking eight. He gave up his first run in the first inning when he opened the game with two consecutive walks before Shane Kensey singled home Andy Amidan to draw first blood.

Havelock added two more runs in the fourth when Steve McKechnie walked and went to third on consecutive sacrifices. David Seaton followed with a single before Danny Webster singled home both runners to give the Rams a 3-2 lead.

Brewington settled down though, holding the Rams hitless the rest of the way.

"You have to be impressed with Brewington," Vincent said. "After he got his rhythm, he got ahead of the batters."

Galloway added three hits for the Rampants along with three RBI. Smith and Clark added two hits apiece.

Bullock's Shutout Leads Conley By Kinston, 1-0

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer
HOLLYWOOD — Brian Bullock pitched a five-hit shutout as D.H. Conley slipped past Kinston, 1-0, avenging the Vikings' only loss of the year and sending them into the finals of the Pitt County Easter baseball tournament.

Conley pushed across the winning run in the sixth inning on an error on the left fielder that allowed Kervin Vines to score from third.

Bullock then put out the side in three at-bats in the top of the seventh to end the game.

"It was anybody's ball game. We were fortunate to get the error," said Conley coach Allan Wilson. "Late in the ballgame, we were just trying to get a man on second base. I felt like one run would win it. We've been fortunate winning (since) we've played two games today."

The game was a defensive struggle, with both teams collecting only five hits apiece.

In the bottom of the sixth, Vines singled with one out and went to second on a wild pitch. After a strikeout by Jim Faulkner, Amzie Hoffner, the eighth place batter, singled with a bloop right over third base.

Vines rounded third before the throw came in from the right fielder. Vines turned around and headed back to third before watching the throw sail over the catcher's head. He then came home on the error to score the winning run.

The win avenged Conley's opening season loss to Kinston, 3-2.

"They beat us in the opening game of the year," Wilson said. "(And) Bullock was also pitching then. He's done a super job for us. He is 6-1. Early in the ballgame he was behind (the batters in the count). He's come around. I've got a lot of confidence in him."

Both teams stranded a number of runners on base during the game. Conley left eight on while Kinston left six.

That was the second inning when Conley loaded the bases. Brian Joyner walked to open the inning and went to second on a ground out. Faulkner singled, followed by Hoffner being hit by a pitch which loaded the bases with two outs. Outlaw then struck out Nichols, ending the threat.

Conley left at least one man on in each of the remaining innings before taking advantage of the error in the sixth.

Kinston, too, failed to take advantage of a bases loaded situation, this one in the first inning.

Greg Jones walked and went to third on Whit Whitley's single. Whitley stole second before Outlaw walked to load the bases. Brian Lang then tried to bunt but popped the ball up in the air to Bullock for the final out of the inning.

Bullock recorded seven strikeouts and five walks in going the distance for the win. Outlaw took the loss, recording four strikeouts and three walks.

With the win, Conley improves to 10-1 on the season.

Stancill Shuts Out Jags As Ayden-Grifton Wins

HOLLYWOOD — Gene Stancill tossed a two-hit shutout in his first varsity start as Ayden-Grifton topped Farmville Central, 3-0, in the second round of the Pitt County Easter baseball tournament Monday.

Stancill was moved up from the J.V. team for the tournament and responded with a solid performance, striking out five and walking one for the win.

"He wasn't overpowering, but he worked his corners real well," said Charger coach Chris Ross.

Ayden-Grifton scored all the runs it would need in the second inning.

Steven Tucker started things off when he reached on an error on the shortstop. Todd Miller then doubled him home to make it 1-0. Stacy Cole then doubled home Miller to give the Chargers a 2-0 advantage.

Miller led Ayden-Grifton, 7-5, with a 2-3 performance at the plate.

Jim Faulkner lashed a three-run homer to key a six-run sixth inning that lifted Conley to a 8-0 victory over New Bern in first round action played Monday morning.

The Vikings had a 2-0 lead heading into the sixth when Robbie Nichols started things off with a single.

Butch Mills then reached on a sacrifice and an error. Bronswell Patrick followed with a single that scored Nichols and Mills.

Brian Joyner singled home Bullock before Sherwood Wilder reached on a fielder's choice that put out Patrick.

Chris LeGrand, running for Wilder, stole second before Faulkner brought them all home with his shot.

Wilder took the win, tossing a three-hitter with four strikeouts.

In other second round action, North Lenoir topped New Bern, 8-7. Ayden-Grifton will meet North Lenoir for fifth place this afternoon. New Bern and Farmville play for seventh place while Kinston and Havelock for third place this afternoon.

Love Wants To Look Ahead, Not To The Past

By RICK SCOPPE
AP Sports Writer
HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — With his first victory on the PGA Tour safely in the record books, David Love III wants to make sure he looks ahead, not behind.

"I'm going to enjoy this, and I'm going to enjoy it for a long time," Love said Sunday after capturing the Heritage Golf Classic.

"But I know I have to get back out there and work just as hard as I have been and work on winning another one," he said. "You can't get complacent out here."

Love, 23, of St. Simons Island, Ga., won the $650,000 Heritage Golf Classic when Steve Jones had a double-bogey six on the 18th hole.

Love, who had been 4 strokes behind going into the final round, shot a 4-under-par 67 to finish with a 271 total, 13 shots under par on the Harbour Town Golf Links.

The victory was worth $117,000 from a total purse of $650,000. Love, whose previous best finish was third in last year's Canadian Open, now has made $148,890 in his second season on the PGA Tour.

Love, a University of North Carolina graduate, said the victory means more pressure will be put on him now that he's shown he can win on the PGA Tour.

"I think you're going to see me work even harder from now on, just to keep up," he said. "I'm going to get a lot of pressure put on me now. So, it's just going to make me work harder."

"If I can win on this golf course, I should be able to win on a lot of other ones. Now that I have one in my belt, I can enjoy playing a lot more and I can enjoy working a lot more."

Love is one of the longest hitters on the tour, but he won on a course where length is not that much of an asset.

"This is not supposed to be a long hitter's course. ... I talked to some people and they said, 'How are you playing this golf course. You're not supposed to shoot low scores here. You're supposed to be in the trees on every hole."

Mishaps, Mediocrity Mark This Year's Boston Run

BOSTON (AP) — A Boston Marathon touted for its magnificent field will likely be remembered for its mishaps and mediocrity.

The defending champion fell during the botched start. The winner pulled away with surprising ease.

The pace was unexpectedly slow. A crash marred the wheelchair competition.

On a gloomy day in which 6,313 official entrants ran under drizzly skies and into a moderate wind that slowed them, Toshihiko Seko of Japan covered the final six miles unchallenged Monday to win the 91st Boston race in 2 hours, 11 minutes, 50 seconds.

"Up to 20 miles, he thought the pace was slow," Seko said through an interpreter. "He looked at other people's faces. If he started there, he didn't think they could follow him."

So Seko, who won the 1981 Boston Marathon, spurred out in front and none in the big pack of challengers could keep up for the rest of the 26-mile, 385-yard race.

Not Steve Jones, the top-ranked marathoner in 1985. Not Juma Ikangaa or defending champion Rob de Castella, the world's first- and second-rated runners. Not two-time Boston winner Geoff Smith. Not 1984 Olympic silver medalist John Treacy. Not a single member of probably the finest field in Boston history.

"He just ran away from us," Jones, the runner-up in the 10th fastest Boston run. "There was nothing we could do about it at all."

It was Seko's eighth victory in his last nine marathons.

Rose Mota of Portugal, the bronze medalist in the 1984 Olympics, led from start to finish to win the women's race in 2 hours, 25 minutes, 21 seconds. Her margin was a very comfortable 4 minutes, 32 seconds over runner-up Agnes Pardaens of Belgium, who was timed in 2:29:53. Ria van Landeghem, also of Belgium, was third in 2:29:58.

"She does hope that next year the women's field is as good and as competitive as the men's field," Mota's interpreter said.

Mota, who said the victory was "the finest moment of my career," won her third consecutive marathon and seventh in 10 tries.

"She is used to running marathons by herself," the interpreter said. "She is very pleased with her own performance."

Mota and Seko each won $40,000 and a $31,000 car.

A pack of 10-20 men clung together at the front for 20 miles as Seko averaged 5:04 per mile. He covered each of the next four miles in less than five minutes and crossed the finish line 47 seconds before Jones, who was timed in 2:12:37. Smith, like Jones from Great Britain, was third in 2:12:42.

Dave Gordon, the first American finisher, came in fourth in 2:13:30.

Seko frequently glanced back over his shoulder after going in front only to find no one close enough to threaten his lead.

"When Seko made his move there was still enough left in the race for anything to happen," Jones said. "Seko was better prepared for the last six miles."

At the top of Heartbreak Hill, about 21 miles into the race, Seko led by 100 yards. At 23 miles, his lead was 350 yards. He won by 280.

Tomoyuki Taniguchi of Japan was fifth, 10 seconds behind Gordon, and de Castella of Australia was sixth in 2:14:24. Ikangaa was 11th, Treacy 14th and four-time Boston winner Bill Rodgers 15th.

"I'm fairly satisfied (with) the way I was able to finish," de Castella said.

The start, however, was decidedly unsatisfactory.

Brewers Enjoy Streak As It Lasts

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

The Milwaukee Brewers know their winning streak can't go on forever. But they are enjoying it while it lasts.

"Everybody has to be realistic," said Robin Yount, whose blop single in the seventh inning knocked in the winning run and increased Milwaukee's season-opening victory streak to a major league record-tying 13 games. "We're not going to win every game, but you have to ride it when you can."

Milwaukee tied the record of 13 straight victories by coming from behind Monday night to nip the Chicago White Sox 5-4. The Brewers can break the mark set by the Atlanta Braves in 1982 when they take on the White Sox tonight.

"Somewhere along the line we're going to lose," said Milwaukee's Greg Brock, who hit a two-run homer in the first inning. "We just have to remember not to get too high."

With Chicago leading 4-3, Paul Molitor doubled home the tying run with two outs in the seventh inning, then scored the winning run on Yount's double.

"That's another one," Brewers Manager Tom Trebelhorn said. "The only reason we play is to win, and this one is as important as any of them."

"I'm going to tell them we have to play better tomorrow night. We were lucky tonight. When we got behind, we fought to get even. And we got even. We went ahead and we had the right guys in at the right time."

The right guys turned out to be relievers Chuck Crim, who gained the victory in relief of Juan Nieves, and Dan Plesac, who pitched the ninth inning to earn his fifth save.

In other American League games Monday, it was Kansas City 10, Boston 2; the New York Yankees 8, Detroit 2; Toronto 8, Cleveland 7 in 10 innings; Minnesota 13, Seattle 5; and Oakland 10, California 5.

The Brewers broke the AL record of 11 straight victories to begin the season set by the Oakland A's when they posted their 12th consecutive victory on Sunday, scoring five runs in the ninth inning to down Texas 6-4.

"You have to think about getting caught up in all the hoopla," Molitor said. "But the nice part is that these games are not that crucial. We still have a long way to go. We shouldn't feel pressure that the winning streak is the key to the season."

Molitor said the streak "didn't mean that much until we got to the point where we were going to break the record. And the way we've been playing, we have a chance for it tomorrow."

After Brock's two-run homer, the White Sox tied the game in the second inning, helped by an error by Nieves.

Then came Milwaukee's seventh. Bill Schroeder walked and pinch-runner B.J. Surhoff took second on a fielder's choice. Dale Sveum also bounced out before Molitor doubled into the left field corner to score Surhoff with the tying run. Molitor then scored on Yount's blop single to right.

"When things are going good, you get those kind of breaks," Yount said.

said. "This was sort of a different game. Most of the others have been well played. I didn't think it was that well-played but we got the break on the blop hit."

"These guys believe they have a chance to win every time they step on the field."

Crim, 2-0, got the victory, while Plesac came on in the ninth to get his fifth save.

Blue Jays 8, Indians 7
Kelly Gruber scored one of five Toronto runs in the ninth inning - a rally that included just one hit - then drove in the game-winner with a single in the 10th inning as the Blue Jays rallied to defeat Cleveland.

After Toronto took a 7-6 lead in the top of the ninth, Cory Snyder lined a solo homer, his fourth of the season, off winner Jeff Musselman, 1-0, to send the game into extra innings.

Doug Jones, 0-1, walked Rance Mulliniks with one out in the 10th and then gave up consecutive singles to Ernie Whitt and Gruber as the Indians lost for the ninth time in 11 games.

The Blue Jays' big rally consisted of five walks, one hit batter, two wild pitches, a passed ball and Lloyd Moseby's three-run double.

"They gave us the ballgame," Moseby said.

Yankees 8, Tigers 2
Don Mattingly, Mike Pagliarulo and Claudell Washington slammed two-run homers to power New York to its seventh straight victory as the Yankees downed the Detroit Tigers.

Mattingly, who was celebrating his 26th birthday, connected with one out in the first inning off Jack Morris, 1-2. It was his second home run of the season and his third homer in 23 career at-bats against Morris.

Rick Rhoden, 2-1, gave up one run on five hits in 6 2-3 innings. Dave Righetti pitched the final two innings for his fourth save as New York remained unbeaten in seven games at home.

Mets Lose To Pittsburgh, Suffer A Tongue-Lashing

By HERSCHEL NISSON
AP Sports Writer

En route to the 1986 world championship, the New York Mets' longest losing streak was four games in a row - once in August, once in September - and they were beaten by the Pittsburgh Pirates just once in 18 meetings.

Both of those things already have occurred this season as a result of Monday night's 9-6 loss to the Pirates, a game that forced Manager Davey Johnson to berate his troops in a 15-minute postgame meeting, although he said the tongue-lashing wasn't entirely because of the losing streak.

First baseman Keith Hernandez said Johnson's rare closed-door session "rates as the top meeting of my career. He knows what it takes to get his point across. This meeting wasn't because we had lost four in a row; it was more internal. It was absolutely a must."

The setback dropped the Mets into a second-place tie with Pittsburgh in the National League East, 1 1/2 games behind St. Louis.

The Mets had beaten the Pirates 15 consecutive times - including the first two games of this season - until Mike Diaz's three-run pinch-hit homer capped a four-run seventh inning after New York had taken a 6-5 lead with four runs in the top of the inning on homers by pinch hitter Dave Magadan off John Smiley and Gary Carter off Barry Jones.

Phillies 4, Expos 3
Montreal's Jay Tibbs took a 2-0 lead into the ninth inning in the Expos' home opener but Philadelphia's Von Hayes was safe on a one-out throwing error by first baseman Andres Galarraga. Mike Schmidt walked and Mike Easley struck out before Lance Parrish, batting only .167, hit a 3-1 pitch for his second home run of the year.

Giants 4, Dodgers 3
Mark Davis held Los Angeles to four hits in seven innings and Chris Speier homered as San Francisco boosted its record in one-run games to 9-0. The Giants had 13 hits, including four by Mike Aldrete and three by Speier.

policeman and a rope still in front of the runners, the starting gun sounded. They scattered as the marathoners took off and de Castella fell when his foot was entangled in the rope. He rolled over and got back up, skinning his knees and elbows but avoiding a trampling.

"You've got to be prepared for things like that to happen," he said. "I don't think it affected me. It happened very early in the race and I got up quickly."

Guy Morse, administrator of the Boston Athletic Association which organizes the event, said race personnel apparently spent too much time trying to keep the runners behind the starting line. They were still in the way when former BAA President Tom Brown, who had performed the task many times before, fired the gun at noon, Morse added.

The wheelchair racers, who started 15 minutes earlier, also had problems.

Two-time winner Jim Knaub's chair apparently hit a small bump in the road, according to several accounts. He overturned, setting off a chain reaction in which other racers swerved to avoid him. At least four chairs overturned and two competitors received minor injuries.

Andre Viger of Quebec also overturned, but he regained his chair and went on to win the race for the second consecutive year and third time in four years.

"Today, I earned my money," said Viger, whose time of 1:55:42 easily beat Jim Martinson of Puyallup, Wash., second in 2:02:36. For the fifth time in seven years, Candace Cable-Brookes of Long Beach, Calif., was the first woman finisher, in 2:19:54.

California. The Athletics had taken a 6-5 lead in the eighth on Reggie Jackson's infield roller, which scored Mike Davis from third base to snap a 5-5 tie.

Dave Stewart, 1-2, went seven innings to snap a personal six-game losing streak dating back to last year. Jay Howell went the final two innings for his the Athletics' first save of the season.

California starter Kirk McCaskill left the game after six innings with tightness in his right elbow. Mike Cook came on and gave up a double to Jose Canseco to lead off the seventh. Dwayne Murphy then homered to knot the game at 5-5.

Williamston In Tournament Win

JAMESVILLE — Williamston, Bath, Columbia and St. Francis of New York advanced to the semifinals of the Jamesville Easter Baseball Tournament Monday, setting up today's action.

Williamston downed Washington, 5-2, in the opening game, while Bath downed Plymouth, 3-0, in the second. Columbia came up with a run in the seventh inning to nip Roanoke, 4-3, while St. Francis romped over hosting Jamesville, 13-3.

Because of the late start of the tournament, which was to have started on Saturday, the event was shortened and no consolations will be held.

Today's schedule has Williamston facing Bath at noon, followed by St. Francis and Columbia at 2:30 p.m. The two winners then meet for the championship at 7:30 p.m. tonight.

In the opener, Washington and Williamston were scoreless through the first four innings. Then, Washington broke the ice in the fifth, scoring once. But Williamston came back to score three times in the bottom of the inning and put the game away.

John Ambrose walked and stole second. Doug Manseau also walked, setting the stage for Tyrone Rodgers who cracked a three-run homer.

Williamston added two more in the sixth while Washington also got a run in the sixth.

E.J. Paszt led Washington's hitting with three, while no one had more than one hit for Williamston.

Roanoke took the lead in the second game with three runs in the second inning. Columbia came back with one in the bottom of the second, then scored two more in the third to tie it up. Those two came on a homer by Nolan Kirkman.

Then, in the seventh, the Wildcats pushed over the winning run. Kirkman tripled and scored on a hit by Jeff Creef.

Kirkman and Creef each had two hits to lead Columbia while Ramon Mason and Jeff Nicholson each had two for Roanoke.

The final game saw St. Francis make quick work of the hosting Bullets, scoring five times in the first inning.

John Dantonio led off with a single and stole second. Sean Hennessy singled in Dantonio and Tom Moroski walked. John Wilson reached on an error that allowed both Hennessy and Moroski to score. Eric Ziobro was safe on another error, bringing in Wilson, and Brian Clouden reached on still another misplay, scoring Ziobro.

Hennessy and Eric Karney each had two hits to lead St. Francis while Craig Dickerson had two hits for Jamesville.

Argentines Send Word To Mutineers That Military Power Is Thing Of Past

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Hundreds of thousands of Argentine civilians, from chilly Patagonia to the subtropical north, have sent a loud, clear and bipartisan message to the nation's military establishment.

Singing, chanting, waving flags and banners and beating drums, they have said they enjoy their newly-restored democracy and are sick and tired of constitutional disrespect by military men who have ousted elected governments and seized power six times in the past 57 years.

The message was sent from Easter Sunday mass rallies in cities across the nation in support of democracy and in rejection of a mutiny by a small band of disgruntled army officers who took over an infantry school Thursday at the Campo de Mayo military base near the capital.

The approximately 150 mutineers surrendered peacefully Sunday. A related rebellion Wednesday by about 130 soldiers in Cordoba, 140 miles northwest of Buenos Aires, ended with their surrender Friday.

At the largest rally, in Buenos Aires, nearly half a million people overflowed the historic Plaza de Mayo facing Government House, where President Raul Alfonsin, his Cabinet and loyal military officers sought to resolve the crisis.

They cheered when Alfonsin stepped to a balcony Sunday to announce he would go to Campo de Mayo to try personally to win a rebel surrender. They roared approval, embraced each other and sang the national anthem, many with tears in their eyes, when he returned hours later to announce success.

The scene was repeated across the nation. In the far-northern province of Salta, on the border with Bolivia, Gov. Roberto Romero drew cheers when he proposed the province secede from the federal system if the mutiny led to a rupture of constitutional rule.

"A superficial view could indicate that Argentina has simply experienced one more of the many military crises it has gone through, with varying success, over the last half century," the conservative, independent Buenos Aires daily La Nacion wrote Monday.

"But a deeper look will produce another conclusion: Yesterday, the entire country showed itself and the world that it has no desire to abandon the path of law, democracy and peace," the paper said.

No one demonstrated this better than the multitude gathered in the Plaza de Mayo and in smaller squares throughout the country of 31 million people.

The rally-goers, in a festive mood, were mainly middle-class and working-class Argentines, including many families with small children in tow, as well as casually-dressed secondary and university students and a scattering of elderly couples in their Sunday best.

They arrived singly, in small groups and in long columns accompanied by bass drum beats and disciplined by party or union organizers armed with bullhorns.

Many, like Juan Lucruk, 48, pressed transistor radios to their ears to keep track of events at Campo de Mayo. Almost all said they had come "to defend democracy."

"This is the first time in my life that we have had a democratic system like the one we enjoy today," Lucruk said. "We must defend it and convince these people to surrender without spilling blood."

Thousands of voices chanted in Spanish: "Don't you dare, don't you dare, and if you do, we'll burn down your barracks," "Hey soldiers, hey soldiers, put down your mutineers," and "Hey stupid, hey stupid, take your coup and shove it."

There were remarkably few incidents as groups from traditional political rivals, including Alfonsin's Radical Civic Union, Peronists and the Movement Toward Socialism, took up positions side by side.

"Just look at this," said Luis Cortes, 31, waving at the sea of multi-colored party banners and blue and white national flags.

"This union would have been unimaginable not many months ago," he said. "It indicates that we Argentines are losing our fear of the military along with the old idea that it's best not to get involved."

Interior Minister Antonio Troccoli described the massive demonstration of public support as the "central and preponderant factor" of the crisis.

Perhaps even greater recognition came from Lt. Col. Aldo Rico, the leader of the 150 mutinous officers at Campo de Mayo. He told a brief news conference after surrendering that his men had turned off their radio and television sets to avoid being influenced by the mass public rejection of their rebellion.

Argentina Replaces Army Chief Following Mutiny

By WILLIAM H. HEATH
Associated Press Writer

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — President Raul Alfonsin replaced his army chief of staff after the surrender of mutinous officers who demanded amnesty for human rights violators and threatened Argentina's 40-month democracy.

But human rights groups said the new army chief, Gen. Jose D. Caridi, may have been involved in the 1983 torture death of an army conscript.

Caridi was appointed Monday after Alfonsin accepted the resignation of Gen. Hector Rios Erenu. Erenu had submitted a letter of resignation several days ago during the mutiny of 150 officers who occupied an infantry school at the Campo de Mayo military base outside Buenos Aires.

The three-day standoff ended Sunday when Alfonsin flew to the base to talk to the rebels. In addition to amnesty for those guilty of human rights violations under past military governments, the mutineers also had demanded Erenu's resignation because he insisted that officers accused of rights abuses be tried in civilian courts.

Alfonsin accepted the general's resignation in what appeared to be a deal for the rebels' peaceful surrender, but lawmaker Cesar Jaroslowsky said Monday that the president made no deal.

The government gave no formal reason for Erenu's resignation. But his usefulness to Alfonsin appeared to end Saturday night when loyalist troops refused his order to attack the rebels.

Caridi's appointment to chief of staff meant that two other generals, senior to him in service time, would have to retire in keeping with regulations.

Alfonsin and civilian Defense Minister Horacio Jaunarena, who served as Erenu's temporary replacement briefly Monday, together chose Caridi. The 56-year-old artillery general had been serving as army inspector general and earlier commanded the Fifth Army Corps.

"I am accepting this responsibility at a very difficult moment for our institution (the army)," Caridi said shortly after he learned of his appointment. He immediately called a meeting of top-ranking officers at army headquarters.

Rios Erenu sent a message of farewell to his troops, urging them to continue defending democracy and to resolve the army's problems "within the mark of respect for the national constitution and the laws that govern our actions."

Caridi's name was on a list of officers that human rights groups submitted to the Senate on April 1, asking the officers not be promoted pending an investigation of their activities during the "dirty war" on suspected leftists by military governments that ruled from 1976-83.

About 250 officers face charges of violating human rights during military rule. The government says at least 9,000 people vanished, but human rights groups say the number is closer to 30,000.

Human rights groups say the offenses include wholesale abduction, torture and killing of people who were innocent of any crime but were persecuted because of their friends, professions or political opinions.

The crisis began Wednesday in Cordoba, 440 miles northwest of Buenos Aires, when Maj. Ernesto Barreiro sought refuge in a paratroop camp rather than testify in a case charging him with human rights abuses. He was joined by 130 soldiers.

They surrendered Friday, but Barreiro escaped and his whereabouts are unknown.

In sympathy with the Cordoba rebels, Lt. Col. Aldo Rico led a revolt Thursday at the Pedro Aramburu Infantry School at the Campo de Mayo base, 19 miles northwest of Buenos Aires.

Rico told reporters Sunday after surrendering: "We arrived at an accord with the president, in his quality as commanding chief, because we are self-limited in our objectives. The president said that we are not coup plotters and that is the case. ... It was a reaction against the army high command."

Adolfo Perez Esquivel, an Argentine who won the 1980 Nobel Peace Prize for his human rights activities, said he considered it "future suicide" that the president apparently yielded to some of the rebels' demands.

Crime Wave Hits White Areas In South Africa

By ANDREW TORCHIA
Associated Press Writer

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The intruders, a man and a woman, hit 60-year-old Hester Joubert with a brick. They forced open a safe, took 2,500 rand ($1,250) and a revolver, and vanished.

Her skull fractured and arm broken, Mrs. Joubert took an hour to crawl to a telephone in her bungalow and call her husband at work. After she recovered, the Jouberts moved out of a mixed business-residential district of Johannesburg and sought safety in the countryside.

Stories like this, reported daily in news media and embellished across dinner tables, reflect a crime wave in white neighborhoods across South Africa. Black neighborhoods, where anti-apartheid unrest broke out in late 1984, also feel the impact. Violent criminal gangs have stepped up operations in black townships, their activities sometimes indistinguishable from the results of political protest.

Statistics tell an alarming story: An insurance company director said homeowners have a one-in-eight chance of being burgled. According to official figures, a car was stolen every 10 minutes last year — a total of 58,119, up from 42,696 in 1985.

A police spokesman urged people to form groups of at least four when they walk through downtown Cape Town.

Santam, the country's largest insurance company, said it paid the rand equivalent of $40.5 million last year in burglary claims — 55 percent more than in 1985.

The Star, a Johannesburg newspaper, reported that more than 2,800 people were murdered last year just in the Witwatersrand mining-industrial region around Johannesburg — almost twice the number of murder and manslaughter cases recorded by police in New York City in 1986.

Law and Order Minister Adriaan Vlok told foreign correspondents in February that reports of a crime wave were exaggerated. He said crime increased an overall 6.9 percent in the 12 months ended June 30, 1986, "which compares favorably with any other Western nation." The U.S. crime rate rose by 5 percent in 1985, according to the U.S. Federal Bureau of Investigation.

But Vlok has acknowledged a "marked increase in serious crime," and he told Parliament in March that 197,400 burglaries were reported in 1986, up 15 percent from 1985. Police statistics show sharp rises in many categories, from purse-snatching to rape, drug-smuggling and white-collar fraud.

Analysts attribute the increases to a prolonged economic depression, diversion of police from crime-fighting to quelling black-township unrest, a generational change in attitudes and apartheid, the policy of racial separation.

"The younger generation is most probably not so well disciplined as the older generation, and I'm not referring to any particular race group," Brig. Andries P. van den Heever, head of criminal investigations around Johannesburg, said in an interview.

"The crime wave is expanding at twice the rate of population growth because unemployment has made tens of thousands of people desperate and bitter," The Star said in an editorial.

"The political situation affects the entire community," John Pegge, head of the National Institute for Crime Prevention and Rehabilitation of Offenders, said in Cape Town.

"Because many people see themselves as disadvantaged and see many laws as discriminatory, respect for the law is lessened. Their perception of house-breaking might be that of equalizing wealth."

Barry Blyth, a security company executive, said, "There is mass unemployment and there is no dole (unemployment compensation), as in the United Kingdom."

"Nearly all the guys we catch are black but half of them are not criminals. They are hungry people who turned to crime to put food on the table."

High walls, some topped with razor wire, are going up around suburban houses. Steel grills are being installed over front doors. Most homes have watch dogs.

COMPENSATION REQUESTED — George Kondo looks over a display of Japanese internment photographs taken during World War II. The photos were on exhibit Monday at the Japanese-American Citizen League offices in San Francisco. Like 120,000 others, Kondo was interned by presidential order because the government decided they couldn't be trusted during the war with Japan. (AP Laserphoto)

Japanese-Americans Say Payments Would Restore Faith In Democracy

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — George Kondo, recalling how he and other Japanese-Americans were dragged from their homes and businesses during World War II, says more than damage payments are at stake in a lawsuit being argued before the U.S. Supreme Court.

"It will mean they will reaffirm our confidence in the constitution of the United States," Kondo, regional director of the Japanese-American Citizens League in San Francisco, said Monday. "I think it would renew our faith in our government."

Kondo, who was living in Berkeley during the war, was among the 120,000 Japanese and Japanese-Americans interned by presidential order because the government decided they could not be trusted.

Reagan administration attorneys agreed Monday that the detentions shamed the nation, but they still urged the Supreme Court to kill a lawsuit seeking compensation for property losses.

The lawsuit was filed by 19 prison camp survivors and descendants of those interned, but also would apply to other former prisoners.

Kondo was 26 when he was shipped off to a detention center in Topaz, Utah. He said he left behind a laundry where the equipment alone was worth more than $100,000. He and his wife leased the business for $150 a month "just in case we were able to come back," Kondo recalled.

The couple managed to get out of the camp, but were forced to work as domestics in a Chicago suburb until the war ended.

South Korea Agrees To Open Its Import Market

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The government agreed today under pressure from the United States to open its market wider to foreign computers and ease regulations discouraging imports of candy and auto parts.

South Korean officials said the decision was made during meetings today and Monday between U.S. Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige and Trade-Industry Minister Rah Woong-bae.

Baldrige told a news conference before leaving today for Beijing that his talks with Rha were "valuable." South Korea agreed to ease restrictions on importing computers with less than 32 bits of processing capacity and peripherals such as CRTs as of July 1, one year ahead of schedule, the Trade and Industry Ministry said. South Korea had been opposed to advancing the timetable.

The immediate impact of the action was difficult to measure. South Korea produced an estimated $520 million worth of computers and peripherals in 1985, the last year for which figures are available.

South Korea's agreement to open its markets comes at a time when the United States is engaged in one of its most serious trade disputes in recent years with Japan.

Washington last week imposed $300 million worth of tariffs on selected Japanese products in retaliation for alleged Japanese violation of an agreement on trade in computer chips.

Baldrige said at the news conference that U.S. trade complaints against Japan and South Korea are not identical.

He said there "are a great deal of differences" between the two countries and that U.S. negotiations with South Korea were "friendly and reasonable ... ending up with something good."

Currently, foreign-made personal computers with eight bits of processing capacity cannot be sold in South Korea under a government measure to protect the fledgling domestic industry. Imports of 16-bit and 32-bit computers are allowed on a selective basis.

The officials said the government also agreed to liberalize restrictions on importing technically more advanced computers with both eight-bit and 16-bit capacities.

The officials also said South Korea will repeal in two stages a system requiring government agencies and public organizations to purchase only computers that contain a certain percentage of local components.

The requirements will be lifted July 1 for small computers and Jan. 1 for large computers, the officials said.

South Korea agreed to cut in half, to 12 days, the customs deadline for inspecting imported chocolates and other candies in order to facilitate speedy clearance.

It also agreed to reduce the categories of imported auto parts requiring a good quality rating from the Seoul government from 12 to two.

Rha told Baldrige that South Korea will send more purchase missions to the United States later this year in an effort to limit the country's growing trade surplus with the United States, which reached $7.3 billion last year.

Baldrige said the gap might reach $12 billion this year unless preventative action is taken.

He said the United States had agreed to help Korean companies form joint ventures in high technology areas with U.S. firms in third countries.

Zucker Brothers Team Up For 'Our Planet Tonight'

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — What Jerry and David Zucker did to movies with spoofs such as "Airplane!" they do to television newsmagazines with "Our Planet Tonight."

"Most of the shows we satirize are entertainment presented as news," says Jerry Zucker. Adds David, "The line between entertainment and news gets thinner and thinner all the time. We're trying to erase it entirely in our show."

In one segment of "Our Planet Tonight," airing Wednesday on NBC, Don Novello as Father Guido Sarducci breaks into Geraldo Rivera's house and finds a secret vault.

Rivera, a former ABC correspondent who now does syndicated specials, got the highest rating ever for such a show when he presided over the opening of Al Capone's secret vault on live TV.

"He wants to find out about Rivera's next special," said Jerry Zucker. "A dog, who's part of 'Our Planet Tonight' news team, sniffs out the vault. In it, we find an enormous picture of Geraldo Rivera painted by Red Skelton. It's one of Red's few non-clown pictures."

"The thing I love about Geraldo Rivera is that he presents his show as a million times more important than it is. Parts of his drug-bust show were interesting, but he kept building it up. 'This is live, this is happening now.'"

The one-hour special features the unlikely pairing of John Houseman and Morgan Fairchild as the hosts.

This is only the second television venture for the Zuckers, who are best known for "Airplane!," a satire on airplane disaster movies. In 1982, they frisked cop shows with "Police Squad" on ABC. It didn't last long, but it was long enough to trash every cliché of the genre. The show is now a hot item in video stores. The were also responsible for the films "Kentucky Fried Movie" and the more recent "Top Secret" and "Ruthless People."

"We look for targets that have been around long enough to establish themselves, like airports or police shows," David said. "Some areas lend themselves more to satire than others. Horror or science fiction would be hard to satirize because it's not taken seriously. But the news shows and magazine shows are taken seriously."

Though "Our Planet Tonight" looks like a spoof of "20-20" or "60 Minutes," the Zuckers say they weren't out to get any particular show.

"In our minds a lot of TV blends together," said David.

"Look at TV for 24 hours and it homogenizes into one mass. News, entertainment, specials, drama, variety," Jerry said. "It's hard to satirize some of the shows, because a few of the magazine shows have become self-parodies."

The brothers grew up in Milwaukee, where, they said, their humor developed as a defense mechanism. "The only difference between then and now is that we are now getting paid for what used to get us kicked out of class," said Jerry.

They started Kentucky Fried Theatre while students at the University of Wisconsin at Madison. As soon as younger brother Jerry graduated, they took off for Los Angeles with an old friend, Jerry Abrahams, and opened the Kentucky Fried Theatre Revue.

David said he regards "Police Squad" as one of the best things they've done. Jerry added, "The point of 'Police Squad' was that it was pretending to be serious. A laugh track would have ruined it. We taped it in front of an audience, so we had their laughter but we didn't sweeten it."

They said they didn't blame the network for taking it off the air. It started with decent ratings, but went downhill.

Would the Zuckers do another series?

"Sure," said Jerry. "If an idea came along that we really liked," said David.

The brothers are now working on a motion picture version of "Police Squad," which will again star Leslie Nielsen as the stone-faced police captain.

"We're going to advertise it as a movie based on a failed TV series," said David.

The Zuckers don't see the possibi-ty of "Our Planet Tonight" making it to the big screen.

Caine's Co-Star Kept Him From Collecting His Oscar

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Michael Caine had his speech prepared, just in case he won the Academy Award. But instead of basking in his own glory on the stage of the Music Center, he found himself on a far-away location.

"I watched the show on a very glitchy television set, sitting with my makeup man in a hotel room in Nassau," the London-born actor sighed. "At least we opened up a bottle of champagne. The speech? I'll save it till next time."

Caine, who won the Oscar for his supporting role in "Hannah and Her Sisters," was stranded in Nassau because of a temperamental co-star.

The mechanical shark for "Jaws: The Revenge" repeatedly malfunctioned, throwing the film's schedule into chaos. The company returned here a week after the awards and will finish shooting on the Universal backlot tank.

After three previous nominations with nary a win, Caine was doubtful about his chances this year.

"I thought either Tom Berenger or Willem Dafoe of 'Platoon' had it over me," he said. "Hannah and Her Sisters," after all, had been released even before last year's Oscars, so we were in the distant past.

"On the other hand, 'Platoon' had just been released, and there was a tremendous upsurge for it. Very often popular pictures can sweep the Oscars. I'm happy to say it didn't happen this year."

Besides quaffing champagne with his makeup man, Caine fielded a host of telephone calls. "The phone started ringing soon after the award," he recalled. "My daughter called from Wales. My agent called from London. Then my friends in New York and Los Angeles began calling. Nobody knew what time zone Nassau is in — it's the same as New York."

"So I stayed up all night. Every time I started to fall asleep, the phone rang."

Michael Caine makes more movies than any other star in Hollywood. Last year he had four films in release. This year he may have more. He has already finished three: "The Whistle Blower," "Fort Protocol" and "Surrender" with Sally Field.

He had barely returned to Los Angeles from Nassau when he had to repack and head for New York rehearsals and filming of "Switching Channels" with Kathleen Turner.

Sometime during the schedule he will have to return here for two final days on "Jaws."

Why does he work so much?

"Well, I've been around a long time, and the stuff comes up," he said. "Really, I don't work as much as it seems. Of the other pictures besides 'Hannah and Her Sisters' last year, I worked one week on 'Mona Lisa,' four weeks on 'Half Moon Street' and five weeks on 'Sweet Liberty.' So that's the equivalent of one picture. The year before that I just laid around."

After a decade as a Californian, Caine said he'll return to his homeland.

"Not this year, probably next April," he said. "I'm too old to immigrate. I came here when I was 46, and it's been a lovely 9½ to 10 years. But I always change my location every 10 years, and it's time to move back."

Caine was born Maurice Joseph Micklewhite on March 14, 1933, to working-class parents in London. After military service in the Korean War, he began playing classical roles in English repertory and then drifted into films.

After a few minor roles ("A Hill in Korea," 1956; "How to Murder a Rich Uncle," 1957), he starred as a double-agent in the spy thriller, "The Ipcress File" (1965). His tall, blond good looks and trademark horn-rimmed glasses (he is nearsighted) helped make him a star.

As the ruthless Cockney Lothario in his next film, "Alfie" in 1966, he won his first Oscar nomination as best actor. He was also nominated for best actor in "Sleuth" (1972) and "Educating Rita" (1983).

FOCUS

Secretaries Bash
 It's Professional Secretaries Week. Undoubtedly, some secretaries would like to celebrate as this one did, by steamrolling their typewriters and dictaphones. Offices were actually off-limits to women until the 1890s. But in that decade, the demand for office workers began to exceed the supply, and women were given their chance. During World War I, female secretaries became commonplace. Some famous male secretaries include Mark Twain, Carl Sandburg, and Lyndon Johnson.

DO YOU KNOW — What song recorded by Dolly Parton expresses the complaints of office workers?

MONDAY'S ANSWER — Ingrid Kristiansen won the women's division of the Boston Marathon last year.

Horoscope From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY April 22
GENERAL TENDENCIES: You're due for a terrific day when you can go after what you desire with courage and confidence by utilizing all kind of modern and up-to-date methods.
ARIES (March 21 to April 19): You have an opportunity to meet with persons who are into all kinds of fascinating activities.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): It would be wise to join with out-of-towners on a little excursion. You make great progress tonight.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): You get sudden ideas that should be put into operation quickly. Plan to take a trip that brings prosperity.
MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Try to please your mate and use inventive ideas for best results. An associate can be helpful.
LEO (July 22 to August 21): Change your attitude toward a partner and gain his, or her, support. Cultivate a new business contact.
VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Concentrate more on your work and make it more up to date. Be more understanding of a modern co-worker.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): It's important to modernize your appearance. See a prominent public figure who can be of help to you now.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Study the conditions at home add see if any important changes need to be made. Be happy.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): It's a fine day to be very productive in the business world or to enjoy the pleasures you like the most.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Discuss practical and worldly affairs with family ties and plan how to have a greater abundance.
AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): You have excellent ideas that can be put into operation provided you use more modern systems.
PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Your intuition can be helpful in improving property affairs now. Show your mate your true concern.
IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will have every ability to know what is going on in the world around him, or her, and will be very much attuned to modern vocations and projects. Give as much leeway as you can and let the discipline be gentle since this child's talents need freedom.

Southern Congressman Asks For More Farm Loan Money

By MIKE ROBINSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — More farm loan money should be made available by the government to ensure that producers have what they need to proceed with spring planting, a senior House Agriculture Committee member says.

"Time is running short for many farmers who soon must secure credit for their 1987 crop production," Rep. Ed Jones, D-Tenn., said Monday in a letter to Agriculture Secretary Richard E. Lyng.

Jones, chairman of the credit subcommittee, said an additional $542.5 million should be made available by Lyng through powers granted to him under the 1985 farm law. It enables the secretary to transfer 25 percent of funds available for Farmers Home Administration loan guarantees to direct loans.

That still would leave nearly $1 billion for loan guarantees, Jones said.

"As the time for spring planting approaches, thousands of farmers across the nation are facing the very real possibility that they will not obtain sufficient credit to finance their operations this year," Jones said.

He issued a statement saying that FmHA had "virtually exhausted" April-June operating loan accounts by April 17 in 21 states. It identified the states as Alabama, California, Georgia, Idaho, Louisiana, Maine, Minnesota, Mississippi, Nebraska, New Jersey, New Mexico, New York, North Carolina, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Tennessee, Washington, West Virginia and Wyoming.

Lyng was on a visit to Japan. FmHA spokesman Marilyn Aycock said he could not respond to the Jones letter, but he acknowledged that "direct funds are being used up in places," adding that "we have a lot of guarantee authority."

He said that, under the program in which FmHA guarantees 90 percent of bank loans to farmers, 635 loans totaling $57.5 million have been made thus far this year compared to 550 for $43 million in the same period last year.

"Our position is that we have the lending authority to take care of them," Aycock said.

Jones said in his letter, however, that FmHA has made "commendable progress" in using the loan guarantee program in some states.

"For a variety of reasons, FmHA's loan guarantee program simply is not working in too many areas of the country and farmers cannot afford the consequences of this failing experiment," Jones said.

Alien Farm Owners Get $7 Million In Subsidies

By WARD SINCLAIR
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

WASHINGTON — Investors from West Germany and the Netherlands Antilles received more than $3 million in American farm-program subsidies in 1985 through ownership of U.S. farmland, according to a General Accounting Office (GAO) study.

The GAO study of 401 U.S. counties where the bulk of foreign-owned farmland is located found that 598 foreign owners received $7.7 million of the subsidies intended to support U.S. farmers' income and offset losses caused by surplus-crop reduction programs.

Almost half the 598 owners were corporations, suggesting that the Agriculture Department subsidies provided incentives for investing in American farmland. Twenty-one foreign-owned corporations received payments of at least $50,000 each, while one in Sherman County, Ore., was paid $71,680.

Investors from West Germany and the Netherlands Antilles qualified for 50 percent of the subsidy payments, while Swiss landowners received 10 percent and Canadians got 9.9 percent. Investors from Belgium, Mexico, Pakistan, Britain, Liechtenstein and the Netherlands followed with lesser amounts.

The study was ordered last year by Rep. Leon E. Panetta, D-Calif., who expressed concern that foreign investors were siphoning money intended to assist U.S. farmers.

Overall, the GAO reported, the payments to foreign land owners represented about four-tenths of one percent of the $1.74 billion in subsidies farm operators received in the 401 counties.

The GAO said the foreign owners were able to qualify for payments by share-renting their land to U.S. farmers, meaning that the subsidies and crop harvest income were divided between owners and tenants.

Another 1,513 foreign-owned farms in the 401 counties studied did not participate in the federal programs.

The auditing agency said it could not come up with specific reasons for those 1,513 farms staying outside the programs, but noted that a number of them cash-rented their farms. Under that procedure, the owner would receive a straight land rental and the farmer alone would qualify for USDA subsidies.

Draft legislation prepared for Panetta by the GAO would prevent foreign individuals and corporations from receiving the direct subsidies. They would not, however, be prohibited from cash-renting their properties to farmers who then could qualify for federal payments.

USDA officials did not comment on the study.

Efforts Set To Preserve Rainforests

YOKOHAMA, Japan (AP) — Although they didn't agree on everything, 40 timber producing and consuming nations have decided to take their first practical steps toward saving the world's tropical rainforests.

Some conservationists say rainforests are disappearing rapidly and that uncontrolled logging is the chief cause.

Member nations of the International Tropical Timber Organization reached the decision after a week of meetings here and while the atmosphere often was discordant, outside conservationists view the outcome with some optimism.

"It's justifiable to say progress has been made — it's a turning point," said Charles Secrett, tropical rainforest campaign coordinator for the London-based Friends of the Earth International, and one of several international conservationists who attended as observers. "Prior to this meeting there was a very real danger of the whole thing collapsing."

"But we're having to balance small gains against a lot of inaction. It's a bit like a patient on a life-support system — it's still alive but not cured."

He and others estimate only seven or eight decades remain before the forests disappear, and with them, nearly half the world's species. Some warn that such destruction could mean a mass extinction on a scale not seen since the time of the dinosaurs.

Already, excessive logging and its after-effects have destroyed half the world's tropical rainforests, which make up 7 percent of the earth's land, and each year 50 million acres more disappear.

The timber organization meetings March 23-27 centered on administrative matters, including a decision to meet again in November, and to base six more staff at its new headquarters in this port city near Tokyo.

But the organization, which includes 22 consuming countries and 18 producers, also will administer the International Tropical Timber Agreement, a global commodity pact approved two years ago after 10 years of debate.

The agreement emphasizes research and market studies and is the only such pact with conservation as a chief aim.

The sessions also brought progress on funding.

Members allocated $640,000 for preliminary work on projects ranging from market studies in Italy to broad programs of conservation in Asia, Africa, and Latin America, the three main producing regions.

Christopher Rose, campaigns officer for the World Wide Fund for Nature International, said he had worried that members were not taking the timber pact seriously, but "now we see it will become a functioning organization with its own identity."

Host-country Japan largely avoided the conservationists' ire, after years of being assailed as a prime cause of tropical forest devastation.
