PTL Board Meets Amid 'Holy War' Threats

By DAVID REED
Associated Press Writer
FORT MILL, S.C. (AP) — The possible return of Jim Bakker to the evangelical empire he founded and then lost after a sex scandal loomed as the PTL board headed by the Rev. Jerry Falwell gathered at the ministry's headquarters.

Bakker has threatened a "holy war" if the board does not let him return. Falwell, the Rev. Bailey E. Smith, a board member, and Rex Humbarnd Jr., spokesman for board member Rex Humbarnd Sr., said Bakker should not return but they won't fight him if he insists.

Falwell, who said a PTL with Bakker at the helm would be doomed, was considering resigning at today's board meeting. Smith and Humbarnd Jr. predicted the board would resign en masse if Falwell left.

If Bakker wants to come back, "that's his business; he's a grown man," said Rex Humbarnd Jr.

The PTL television ministry, along with an amusement park, shopping center and hotels, reported $129 million in revenues last year.

The eight-member board was formed March 19 when Bakker and the members of his board resigned, except for current PTL president and board member Richard Dortch.

Bakker's return and board resignations were "possible scenarios," but there's no way of predicting what will happen until after today's board meeting at the PTL complex in Fort Mill, said Mark DeMoss, Falwell's administrative assistant.

A woman who answered the phone Monday at Bakker's house in Palm Springs, Calif., said "he's not available." A secretary at PTL refused to refer calls to PTL officials.

Smith, a Baptist evangelist from Oklahoma, said his ministry and Falwell's have been hurt financially because of their connection with the scandal-ridden PTL.

Smith said he can't say exactly how much donations have decreased because of the PTL scandal and his connection to it, but Falwell has said he has lost $2 million.

Falwell, in an interview Monday on "The 700 Club" on the Christian Broadcasting Network, said Bakker wrote him last week asking to return the ministry, which he resigned and turned over to Falwell after admitting to a sexual encounter with a church secretary seven years ago.

"I received a wire, a Telex, from him this past week. In it, he implied that I made some kind of deal with him, which I did not, to give it back to him and asking me to pass it on to another board, I'm sure he means of his selection, I don't know, and implying that if I don't do it, there'll be a holy war. Those are his words," Falwell said.

Falwell and Smith said Bakker should not be allowed to return and both predicted PTL will fold unless its credibility is strengthened.

The board plans to discuss new allegations that Bakker hired prostitutes and engaged in homosexual acts, allegations Bakker has denied.

The Rev. John Ankerberg, a Baptist minister who has a weekly TV show based in Chattanooga, Tenn., said in an interview Monday on ABC's "Good Morning America" that he presented "many pieces of evidence" to some members of the PTL board to support allegations that Bakker had hired prostitutes and engaged in homosexual acts.

Navy Posts 24-Hour Guards After North Receives Threats

By NORMAN BLACK
AP Military Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Navy guards are giving 24-hour protection to fired White House aide Oliver L. North because he has received death threats, Pentagon sources say, and his home today had the appearance of an armed camp.

North, who has yet to tell publicly what he knows about the sale of arms to Iran and a diversion of funds to Nicaraguan rebels, is guarded by agents from the Naval Investigative Service at his home, at his Marine Corps job and on family outings, officials said Monday.

One source said there is "reason to believe that North is considered a target" of terrorists. He did not elaborate, however. Several sources, all asking not to be identified, confirmed that the Navy guards have set up a command post at North's Great Falls, Va., house.

No longer does North drive his own station wagon down the driveway en route to work, stopping to chat with reporters gathered at the entrance. This morning, at least six guards were seen walking outside the house. Two cars swept out of the driveway before another car left with North in the front passenger seat, a guard behind him. At least two guards remained at the house.

Television cameras are mounted on a huge pole in front of the house as well as on a box at the end of the driveway used for newspaper deliveries. That camera is aimed down the road.

Meanwhile, congressional investigators visited the Israeli embassy to review a report on Israel's role in the arms deal. Israeli officials required that the investigators give assurances of confidentiality and immunity before being allowed to remove the documents from the embassy, officials said.

An Israeli official, who asked not to be identified, said there are negotiations both with Congress and with independent counsel Lawrence E. Walsh over confidentiality of the material. The Washington Post today reported that Israel also is seeking limited immunity for Israelis involved in the arms sales.

Investigators had sent Israel a letter asking for material, including a chronology of events in the clandestine arms shipments, said a congressional committee official who spoke on condition of anonymity.

In other developments in the Iran-Contra affair:

—Robert McFarlane, former national security adviser who delivered one arms shipment to Iran, said Monday in a speech in Pennsylvania he warned President Reagan soon after returning from the trip in 1986 that the Iranians were interested only in weapons, not "meaningful dialogue." McFarlane attempted to close an arms-for-hostages deal, but the deal fell through when the Iranians refused to guarantee that all U.S. hostages in Lebanon would be released, according to the Tower commission report.

—FBI Director William Webster is to be recalled Thursday before the Senate Intelligence Committee, which is considering his appointment to head the CIA. The committee wants to question Webster about FBI contacts with North. The FBI said earlier this month it was looking into press reports that the FBI provided North with information about pending criminal investigations.

NBC Nightly News reported Monday that North's protection began April 15, the anniversary of last year's U.S. air raid on Libya. The network said.

Japan Holds Up Computer Chips

U.S. Hints That Trade Tariffs May Be Lifted

By TOM RAUM
AP Economics Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. trade representative said today that Japan appears to have ended its dumping of computer chips on overseas markets. The comment was the strongest suggestion yet from a high Reagan administration official that retaliatory tariffs against Japan may soon be lifted.

But trade representative Clayton Yeutter said that verifying Tokyo's action will take some time and he did not expect any resolution of the dispute to be announced during Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone's meetings with Reagan this Thursday and Friday.

Yeutter, interviewed on the NBC-TV "Today" show, said he had detected a change in attitude during his meetings last week with high Japanese officials in Tokyo.

"It seemed to me apparent from my discussions ... that correction has probably already taken place and it's just going to be a matter of time until the compliance is fully demonstrated to us," Yeutter said.

Indeed, he added that the Reagan administration is prepared to lift the 100 percent duties imposed on a variety of Japanese televisions, computers and power hand tools, "just as soon as we have persuasive evidence that compliance has existed over a period of time."

But he said that U.S. officials "can't do this on the basis of a couple of days of data. ... That's why it would really be unfair to Prime Minister Nakasone and to President Reagan to expect this issue to be resolved during the forthcoming visit."

Yeutter's comments, which came as a showdown neared in the House on a major trade bill, amounted to the strongest suggestion yet from a top administration official that the dispute with Japan may be near a resolution.

On Monday, Reagan said he has not ruled out imposing additional sanctions against Tokyo such as the recent tariffs on $300 million worth of Japanese televisions, computers and power tools.

But, he added: "The final answer to the trade problems between America and Japan is not more hemming and hawing, not more trade sanctions. ... The answer is genuinely fair and open markets on both sides of the Pacific. And the sooner the better."

An administration official, speaking Monday on condition of anonymity, said the administration privately anticipates narrow House approval of an amendment by Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., which Reagan has threatened to veto.

Pitt To Condemn Greenville Block

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer
The Pitt County Board of Commissioners took formal steps Monday to acquire the downtown-Greenville block — 75,372 square feet — bounded by First, Washington, Second and Evans streets for expansion of county offices.

Following an executive session to discuss the acquisition, the board — at the request of the owners — adopted a resolution calling for a "friendly condemnation" of the block.

The resolution calls for the county attorney to "notify each owner ... of the county's intention to institute an action to condemn the block and acquire the premises ... for $1.9 million."

Earlier this month, the board agreed in principle to purchase the property, which includes three buildings — one at the intersection of Second and Evans streets, one at the intersection of First and Evans streets, and the other at the intersection of Second and Washington streets — from Collice C. Moore and Max Ray Joyner, for an amount not to exceed $1.9 million.

The board considered the purchase of the land and buildings a year ago, but an agreement was not reached at that time.

Interest in the property was sparked again recently as commissioners began looking for places to house offices now located in the courthouse to relieve overcrowding there.

An appraisal done when the board first looked at the property set its value at $2.09 million.

County Manager Kramer Jackson told the board that although an agreement to purchase the property has been reached, "condemnation will assure that the property will be sold to the county" and preclude its sale to others.

County Attorney W.H. Watson — emphasizing that the owners requested condemnation — said this morning, "I'm giving the owners notice today." He said the necessary proceedings will be filed with the clerk of court in about 30 days.

Following that, according to Watson, a consent judgment between the county and owners will be entered to end the condemnation and give title of the property to the county.

An agreement, according to Watson, calls for the payment of $600,000 about June 1, $900,000 about Aug. 1, and the remaining $400,000 on or before Jan. 1.

Watson said the building at the intersection of Second and Evans streets — Shore Drive Plaza, which contains 9,600 square feet — should be available for occupancy by the county sometime in June.

The other two buildings — the Barclay's Bank main office at the intersection of Second and Washington streets, with 7,262 square feet and the building housing the Internal Revenue Service offices at the intersection of First and Evans streets, with 5,980 square feet — will remain rented until the county needs the additional space.

Watson said rent from the two buildings will amount to about $140,000 a year for the county.

Commissioners Monday also adopted a resolution designating May as "Better Hearing & Speech Month."

Jackson reported that 16 "Welcome to Pitt County" signs have been received and that the signs will be installed on U.S. 264, U.S. 13, U.S. 258, N.C. 11, N.C. 33, N.C. 118 and N.C. 903.

County Schools Serve 11,000 Lunches Daily

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

Over 11,000 lunches are served per day in the county schools, according to the director of the child nutrition program.

"You cannot teach a hungry child," school nutrition director Donna Ware told the members of the Pitt County Board of Education Monday. She was one of three support services supervisors who discussed their programs at a workshop meeting.

Ms. Ware told the board the child nutrition program has a $3 million-a-year budget and operates on a non-profit basis. Each school has an on-site cafeteria which serves lunches and often breakfasts to the students. The cafeterias also cater to day care centers and special functions.

In 1980, the Pitt County schools began a program in which students choose the food they wish to eat from a serving line. The Choice program was one of the first such programs in the country, Ms. Ware said, and has improved participation and has reduced food wastes in the lunch program.

The county also was one of the first school systems to implement cash registers in the cafeterias to improve accountability. Inventory and purchasing are being computerized to save time for the cafeteria managers.

Ms. Ware said an awards banquet is held each year to provide employee recognition and motivation.

Carl Heath, supervisor of the maintenance department, said that janitorial standards have been improved with a quality control program implemented last year. A crew of inspectors visit each school each day to check the sanitation of the school and a complete report is made each week.

One central computer run controls the thermostats at all the county schools. From his office, Heath can oversee the temperatures of the classrooms and see that each

Board Appointments

The Greenville City Council and Mayor Les Garner will consider appointments to the Board of Adjustment, Planning and Zoning Commission, and Recreation and Parks Commission in June.

Local residents who would like to be considered for an appointment should call or write the City Clerk's office, P.O. Box 7207, Greenville, 27834, telephone 752-4137, extension 219, and complete a resume form to indicate interest.

Elmhurst Arts Week

Arts Week events under way at Elmhurst Elementary School include various enrichment activities for the students during lunch period.

Each day, at least two "stations" are available for entertainment and demonstrations to the students after they have finished their lunch.

Monday's stations featured folk-singer Henry Queen and Elmhurst staff needlework artists. Origami artists David Rubenstein, Ada Brown and Catherine Moore and portrait artist Arch Manning were featured today.

Artisans and performing artists for the rest of the week include: Wednesday — Elmhurst staff quilters, cartoonist Barbara Tyson, watercolor artist Bill Yahknors and pastel and oils artist Ruth Gibbs; Thursday — potter Steve Donald, jeweler Gail Williams and canvas painter Mary Gandy, and Friday — Elmhurst staff basketweavers and woodworkers and smocking by Elmhurst parents.

The enrichment week was organized by the Elmhurst staff and parents and the Triad Enrichment Program.

school's energy system is functioning properly.

Energy conservation in four of the county high schools has saved $47,000, Heath said. Conservation measures are being implemented in other schools.

The supervisor said supplies are delivered to the schools once a week and the supply inventory is computerized.

Several maintenance employees are on call around the clock, Heath said.

Superintendent of Transportation Rodney Bullock said the department's 211 buses and budget of $1.3 million is provided through state allocations. The county buses transport students 1.6 million miles per year.

Bullock said the state is in the process of replacing older buses with more energy efficient diesel buses with a new light system and safety features.

The average age of school bus drivers in Pitt County is 17 years old, he said. He said that 69 of the drivers in the county are adults. The state is planning to raise bus driver salaries and benefits in order to attract a "professional" driver.

Bullock said that 11 minor traffic mishaps have occurred so far this school year and most accidents occur while backing or turning the 40-foot-long school buses. There were 18 accidents at this time last year.

Thomas L. Craft Jr., associate superintendent for support services, presented a detailed capital outlay analysis report for five fiscal years to the board members. The report included the deficiencies at each school and the expenditures to correct the problems.

A report of the services offered by Construction Management Association was presented by the company's employees.

INVESTMENT CLUB?

I would like to know if there are any investment clubs in Greenville. W.R.

Wes Singleton, who teaches investment courses at Pitt Community College, said that most investment clubs, once they're started, have closed membership, because it's wise to keep them small and selective. He suggested that you might want to form your own with not more than nine of your closest and most trusted friends.

Participating in an investment club is a learning experience in itself, he said, but he recommended that, before you start the club, you educate yourself all you can on your own. He more highly recommends letting investing be an individual thing, so there's no one to give credit or blame to but yourself if your fortunes vary. An adult education course in investing at Pitt Community College costs $15, he said, and is a much sounder investment for the novice than whatever one would agree to put into a club's joint investments.

Reagan's Budget Jokes Prompt Retort From Byrd

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd said today President Reagan was trying to dodge the deficit issue with one-liner jokes at a time when cooperation with Congress was urgently needed.

"One-liners are good, but what we need is to sit down and have substantive discussions," said Byrd as the Senate began its second day of debate on the fiscal 1988 budget.

Reagan, in a speech Monday, said the Democrats were seeking a budget summit with the White House because they wanted the president to "bail them out."

Byrd, D-W.Va., vehemently denied that, saying it was Reagan who needed bailing out.

"We don't want him to bail us out. We want him to help us bail himself out and the country out," Byrd said. "It was during his administration that the public debt more than doubled — to more than $2 trillion, putting the Treasury in a perilous state, he said.

Senate Democrats have produced a spending plan they say would reduce deficits below the levels in the budget submitted by Reagan.

Republicans in the Senate, breaking with GOP strategy in the House and the White House, plan to offer an alternative budget that would boost military spending above the Democratic mark.

Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., announced Monday he will propose a fiscal 1988 budget that also would have a smaller tax increase and greater domestic spending cuts than the plan Democrats are pushing this week in the Senate they control.

Domenici, trying to win White House support for his efforts, said he will include provisions President Reagan has been touting, including more presidential power to rescind spending programs and a two-year commitment on military spending.

"This might be the way to open the door to the White House and the president" becoming involved, said Domenici, the senior Republican on the Senate Budget Committee.

Committee Chairman Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., said Monday such involvement was crucial to reducing the government's huge budget deficits.

"We need Republican involvement and we need presidential involvement because we need the job done right now," Chiles said.

The Democrats' deficit-reduction plan includes tax increases of at least $11.5 billion, more than twice the level proposed by the White House, while cutting military spending far below Reagan's request.

"It is not even remotely acceptable to the president," said Domenici, although acknowledging taxes were not his main objection to the Democrats' plan.

Domenici's effort in the Senate, to be joined by several of his moderate GOP colleagues, would be in sharp contrast to what happened in the House. There, Republicans decided it was politically smarter to sit back and attack whatever the Democrats produced.

Domenici decided to become involved against the advice of some aides and Senate colleagues who prefer the other strategy, because of his belief it was the best way to prevent severe cutbacks in military spending, said staff aides who spoke on the condition of anonymity.

Domenici, in a speech before the Senate on Monday, said the Democratic plan would cause America to "flop back to the pre-1981 priorities" with a "unilateral retreat on defense."

The Democratic-drafted plan would sharply restrain Reagan's Pentagon program.

Hearing Awareness Drive To Release Balloons Friday

May has been designated "Better Hearing and Speech Month" by the U.S. Council for Better Hearing and Speech.

To coincide with recognition of this campaign, Quota International Inc. will participate in a worldwide special event on Friday.

Members of the Quota Clubs across the globe are expected to send off hundreds of balloons and will sponsor a variety of ceremonies in service to the hearing impaired.

The Quota Club of Pitt County will conduct its event at the Town Common Park at noon Friday with a rain date slated for Monday.

Local government officials will be on hand to share in the kick-off of Better Hearing and Speech Month and to present a proclamation. Balloons, imprinted with the "Shatter Silence" theme, will be released by Quota Club members.

In addition, a telephone hearing screening designed to alert callers to possible hearing loss is being conducted throughout the month of May by the Quota Club of Pitt County.

During the month, any person residing in the Greenville area may dial 758-8800 for a pre-recorded Hearing Check.

Hearing Check was developed by the Hearing Industries Association, a trade association that represents firms that manufacture or distribute hearing health care products, including hearing aids or their component parts.

Kim Carraway, service chairwoman, said Hearing Check provides an easy and convenient service for the public.

"We are proud to sponsor Hearing Check in this community," Mrs. Carraway said. "We believe that hearing screening is an important aspect of any health examination. Any individual in the community can now detect the possibility of a hearing problem in the privacy of his or her home at no cost."

By dialing 758-8800, a caller is immediately connected with a prerecorded message. The speaker announces that a simplified hearing screening will follow. The check consists of a series of tones presented at different loudness levels.

The tones are presented twice so the caller may check both ears. At the end of the message, the caller is urged to seek professional hearing assistance if a hearing problem is suspected.

It is emphasized that Hearing Check is a preliminary screening only, it is not a complete hearing test, and does not substitute for a professional hearing evaluation.

"Hearing Check is a first step in countering the unfortunate fact that hearing testing is neglected by thousands of Americans who have hearing problems," Mrs. Carraway said.

Quota International Inc. is a non-profit, classified service organization, comprised of executive businesswomen who are dedicated to serving the hearing impaired and their communities.

Any group or organization that would like to charter bus service through the Greenville Area Transit (GREAT) system should call the city's Public Works Department at 752-4137. Charters can be arranged to destinations within a 50 mile radius of Greenville. The service is available 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

Unions' Pay Raises Average 3.8 Percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Major union contracts in January, February and March produced first-year pay raises averaging 3.8 percent for the majority of workers covered, the government says.

But large pay cuts in settling a six-month steel strike dragged down the overall average increase for the 230,000 workers affected by 58 major accords to less than 1 percent, the Bureau of Labor Statistics said Monday.

About 57 percent, or 143,500, of the workers covered in the accords received first-year pay raises averaging 3.8 percent, the bureau said in its quarterly report on major collective bargaining settlements in private industry.

And the average immediate pay gain for 108,500 non-manufacturing workers who won wage increases under the major agreements was 4.1 percent, the BLS said. The agency defines major agreements as those covering 1,000 workers or more.

Thirty percent, or 69,000 workers, accepted wage freezes, and 14 percent, or 32,000 workers, agreed to pay cuts the first year of the new contracts — often in exchange for lump-sum bonuses, profit-sharing or stock ownership plans, and enhanced job security and retraining benefits.

Those types of payments, the bureau said, "are made instead of wage increases or to offset decreases" and are not included in its calculations. For example, contracts covering 36 percent, or about 82,000, of the workers included lump-sum bonuses.

Vegetable Battle

When North Carolina legislators rise to the occasion of debating whether the collard or sweet potato should be designated the state vegetable, they had best watch their words.

Life in Raleigh (they keep telling us) is tough enough without offending partisans of either example of agricultural treasure.

Billy Yeargin of the North Carolina Yam Commission will tell anyone who listens that the collard, when cooked, is a good fly repellent. That, of course, is a dangerously outrageous statement for anybody to make. We have it on some authority the reverse is true. Mr. Yeargin, however, raises the risk of creating split personalities among ranks of his followers because we have known innumerable sweet potato enthusiasts who are also disciples of the collard.

Robert L. Griffith of the N.C. Crop and Livestock Reporting Service, says a state census of agriculture notes there were 191 farms that grew collards commercially in 1982 and they grew 756 acres of them.

This represents a woefully inadequate amount of the leafy greens. More to the point, Rep. Joe Mavretic of Edgecombe County says collards are grown in all of the state's 100 counties ... mostly for home consumption. These are often shared with friends and kin who have moved to urban areas where there is less space available for planting either collards or the yam.

Rep. Mavretic's legion of collard-addicts include almost as many admirers of the sweet potato; so his judgement in belittling the sweet potato is arguably not too reliable. That can cost votes; something no political warrior (or is it worrier?) risks.

He may have blown it in a big way by observing the rival vegetable has the "wrong" color. "You don't want a state vegetable that's yellow", he says, and refers to the connotation of that color in such fields as courage and moral fiber. He also had something to say that because the yam grew underground there was also an aura of subversion involved. (Some people get carried away in the heat of debate and say almost anything.)

That alone probably cost collards a pot full of votes. The news account of the issue being given legislative attention carried a bit of explanation by Mavretic. "We deal in very serious issues down here. Every once in a while we ought to have something that's a little fun to play with."

Our view exactly. The lawmaker should get back into bills concerning handling of wastes and support for the Basic Education Program. Our legislators need something "to play with" instead of endangering Tar Heel unity by debating a state vegetable.

Expansion Timely

The city of Greenville appears to be in a position to resume annexation of residential areas on its borders.

The city has been stymied in its expansion efforts pending development of a new election method which would assure that black voting strength wouldn't be diluted.

A five district, one at large and mayor election system has now been adopted which is expected to meet U.S. Justice Department objections.

Last week the Planning and Zoning Commission recommended the annexation of six areas totaling about 100 acres. The areas are Scarborough, Mumford Park, sections of Treetops and Oakdale subdivision, Willoughby Park Condominiums and the Elks Lodge property.

Planning officials say the annexation would add $139,514 in revenue when the property is fully developed. It would also mean increased money from state Powell Bill funds for street improvements. It would allow extension of the city's extraterritorial planning area.

There would be costs to the annexation — $74,843 in initial expenses and $74,293 in annual expense at full development.

It is entirely logical that the city continue to expand by annexing residential areas. Greenville is a growth area and it cannot afford to become locked in by the results of its extensive economic development. The city, of course, has much to offer in lower fire insurance rates, better police protection, street maintenance, street lighting and other services.

Now that the question of minority voting strength appears to be resolved it is sensible to proceed with annexation of selected areas.

Today's Thought

The key to detente between the United States and the Soviet Union might be to get the bugs out of the relationship — and the U.S. Embassy in Moscow.

Public Forum

To the editor

Recent comments attributed to Greenville Mayor Les Garner have left me with concern for what is happening in our city. Mayor Garner's remarks, as reported in your Forum, reflect both a racist and sexist attitude.

Approximately 12 years ago, I attended several local City Council meetings. I was appalled by the behavior of the mayor then who would address all whites coming before the council as Mr. or Mrs. So-and-So. Each black citizen making a request was, not matter the age of the individual, addressed by his or her first name. The intent was obvious. When that mayor left office, I felt Greenville was changing with the times. Evidently, I was wrong.

The position of mayor is one of power. The corollary of power is sensitivity. Power without sensitivity is power abused (or likely to be abused).

I do not call for the resignation of Mayor Garner. He is a capable and respected businessman and has given much of himself to our area for years. Greenville can benefit from his leadership. But he must open his eyes. There is a new concept emerging from management circles: Change Begins at the Bottom. The bottom in this case is the voters. They spoke in the last election and gave us our present city council, the composition of which reflects a local distrust of "good ole boy" politics and a hope for New Age public attitudes which cater to the needs and personal worth and dignity of each private citizen.

Again, I do not call for the mayor's resignation. He was value-programmed in a time when prejudice and chauvinism reflected the "way things were done." But times have changes. He has announced that he will run for re-election. If he is to retain the favor of the voters, he must do some soul-searching and begin to demonstrate a sensitivity toward and an appreciation of his fellow citizens. If he cannot do this, the citizens of Greenville will again make their voices heard.

Hugh Stanley

To the editor:

The headlines of "The Daily Reflector" on April 23, 1987, read "Garner Apologizes for Watermelon Remarks." It is about time the public is made aware of racist, chauvinistic remarks. I applaud Judith Kornegay for caring enough to write a letter to the editor.

Pitt County citizens are subjected to racism every day of their lives and the majority of people do not realize it. Take a look at the Pitt County Sheriff's Department. It is apparent that there is a problem when there are only two black patrol deputies out of several whites and only one female. There are no black or female investigators.

My congratulations to Ted Holmes and the Greenville Police Department for not only employing a significant number of black and female patrol officers, but for also having black and female officers in investigator and supervisory roles.

You can't help but wonder if there is some reason why not five blocks away from the Greenville PD the Pitt County Sheriff's Department is in a time warp and is still functioning in the 1950's. As citizens of Pitt County, we must make elected officials much more responsible for their behavior. Come on, Sheriff Tyson, why don't you join the 80's.

Patricia King

To the editor:

I have been attending a seminar on Holocaust literature at East Carolina University this spring. The term 'Holocaust,' with a capital H is accepted as the term used to refer to a massive slaughter of human beings, especially the devastating treatment and genocide of those deemed 'undesirables,' predominantly Jewish, by the National Socialist German Workers' Party commonly called Nazis.

The students are asked to read a book a week and keep a journal on what they have read. Several movies, videos, and guest lecturers are included. Toward the last weeks of the course each student offers a creative presentation dealing with an aspect of the Holocaust. One of the impacts of this course has had on each of us is the emphasis on the very real hidden and not-so-hidden examples of prejudice and its accompanying cruelty that exist today. This is brought home in the scrapbooks each of the students has kept during the seminar. The economic medium which insidiously fosters accepted levels of prejudice/cruelty has the potential to exist the world over.

So we must ask ourselves on these beautiful spring days are we sometimes like the German people and the world at that time, oblivious and then unbelieving of for example what the U.S.-funded, U.S.-advised Contra forces are actually doing in Central America? And does it matter? Is it easy to go along with what is being done because of what is happening in Afghanistan? The Nazis used our treatment of Native Americans to allow what they did. Will we say we did not know what was going on in Central America? Do governments sometimes feel so frustrated that torture, killing teachers, burning hospitals and schools is permissible/necessary? Is it?

Charlotte Purrrington
Greenville

To the editor:

I was very disappointed to hear of Mayor Garner's recent remarks which were insulting to Blacks ("We'll eat some watermelon.") and his reference to the City Council as "titty city," which was degrading to women. The mayor publicly apologized for his watermelon statement, but made no public reference to his "titty" comment.

I am past president of the Greenville chapter of the National Organization for Women (NOW) and current State NOW Vice President for Membership East. NOW is the nation's largest women's right organization and we work hard to prevent the kind of thinking that leads to remarks such as those made by Greenville's mayor. I feel that it is appropriate to expect Mayor Garner to publicly apologize for his lack of judgement in the "titty" statement, as well as his reference to watermelon. If the City Council were comprised mostly of men, he would not likely have made reference to male anatomy when discussing them. The persons on City Council deserve respect, not degrading remarks.

Fran Parrott
N.C. NOW vice president,

Editors Note: Greenville Mayor Les Garner said the term "Titty City" predates his time in office and he has been incorrectly labeled as the originator of the statement.

To the editor:

Your article relative to the difficulties in recruitment and retention of nurses at Pitt County Memorial Hospital could well have appeared in any newspaper in the country. The "shortage" of nurses is, in fact, a mirage. There are plenty of nurses in this country, able but not willing. Why not willing?

There is a multiplex of concerns that keep the actual work force of nurses low. Low pay, impossible (not just poor) working conditions, lack of prestige, public misunderstanding of our actual role in health care, a natural tendency profession-wide to be passive and accept the status quo, and most significant of all, our position on the bottom rung of the health care ladder. When budgets are cut, nursing services are cut. The few nurses left have more patients and more work. A few quit, a few graduate and come into the profession wide-eyed, excited and full of energy — the cycle continues. It is a human mill.

The solution? I don't know, but one way to start is to get together collectively. I realize that "unions" is a dirty word in this area, but the other option is to have the medical community bleed you dry, then spit you out. We can change the course of events if we do it together.

Strength For Today

"I am frustrated."

Frustration is often considered today to be a modern phenomenon which did not plague the people of simpler times in the past. Psychologists of the Freudian variety link it to repression.

But if we go back into the past we will find that at all times frustration has been a commonplace of history. Columbus was frustrated when his generation laughed at his conviction that one could reach the East by sailing west. Noah was frustrated when everyone called him a fool for prophesying the flood. Or — go back to the very beginning — Adam was frustrated when the Lord told him that he could eat the fruit of all of the trees in the garden except one; the fruit of that tree was what Adam wanted most.

So let us reflect a bit before we complain.

Aiming Nuclear Warheads At Military Targets Won't Save Lives

One way to understand the immense destructive power of nuclear weapons is to imagine a nuclear attack against targets in the Washington, D.C. area.

This targeting exercise yields some disturbing conclusions. The most important is that nuclear war, in practice, wouldn't be as manageable as it may seem on a nuclear strategist's blackboard.

The strategists talk in terms suggestive of conventional war — about "limited nuclear options" and "warning shots across the bow" and "counterforce" targeting that seeks to destroy military facilities rather than population centers.

But such bloodless discussions ignore the reality of nuclear weapons, which are more devastating and less controllable than the theorists imagine.

To put the problem simply: Any attack against "military" targets is likely to cause severe damage among the civilian population as well.

In the Washington area, for example, a "limited" attack against Andrews Air Force Base could result in the destruction by massive fire of the southeast suburbs of Washington.

The damage to civilians in such "limited" attacks would be compounded by the inevitable preference among military planners for redundant systems and "overkill."

The first step in planning a nuclear attack on Washington would be the selection of specific targets. These targets probably would include: bases for military operations (such as Andrews Air Force Base and National Airport); facilities that support military operations (such as the Central Intelligence Agency, the Defense Mapping Agency, the Pentagon, the Navy Yard, and the Naval Research Laboratory); and the headquarters of the political and military leadership (the White House, the Capitol, and the Pentagon).

The next step after selecting targets would be to set damage objectives for each. If the attack planner's objective were to destroy America's leadership and support structures, he would probably opt for a high level of damage in the Washington area.

Setting damage objectives would involve a careful calculus of how to do the most damage in the most efficient way. Since the Capitol, the Pentagon, and the Central Intelligence Agency are reinforced monumental structures, a large blast creating pressure at ground zero of 40 pounds per square inch (psi) might be considered necessary to reduce these structures to rubble.

Since the White House may have underground bunkers, a 40 psi blast might be needed there also. The Defense Mapping Agency might require a 15 psi blast, which could probably knock down all but the most reinforced buildings, while the Naval Research Laboratory and Navy Yard might require a 10 psi blast, since those facilities are "softer" than the others.

The damage objectives for National Airport and Andrews Air Force Base would probably demand the destruction of all associated buildings that could be used to support dispersed aircraft, together with the cratering of runways so that they could not be used after the attack.

Next would come the allocation of warheads. Let's assume the attack planner had a choice between using 50-kiloton or 1-megaton weapons. To allocate them efficiently, he would carefully select the ground zero for each weapon.

The attack planner might calculate as follows: A single 1-megaton ground zero between the Central Intelligence Agency and the Defense Mapping Agency would result in a blast of more than 40 psi on the first and more than 15 psi on the second.

Another 1-megaton ground zero between the White House and the Capitol would result in a 40 psi blast on both and more than a 10 psi blast on the Navy Yard. And so on.

With a lower yield 50-kiloton weapon, a ground zero between the Capitol and the Navy Yard would cover both with appropriate levels of blast.

Another ground zero north of the Naval Research Laboratory would cover that target and do additional damage to the untargeted air facility (Bolling Air Force Base) north of the laboratory. The attack planner's goal would be to mix the warheads efficiently, with some redundancy and "cross targeting" to make sure each target was destroyed.

To understand the effect of a nuclear attack, it's useful to imagine what a hypothetical attack on Washington would look like from ground zero, and how it would evolve over the first few hours.

The first warheads to arrive at their targets in our scenario would be the 50-kiloton submarine-launched warheads. They would travel their course of about 3,000 nautical miles in about 20 minutes.

The warheads would probably arrive about five to ten seconds apart, first at the Central Intelligence Agency, then at the Defense Mapping Agency, the Pentagon, National Airport, and the eastern or western runway at Andrews Air Force Base. For the postulated initial phase of the attack, five 50-kiloton warheads would therefore fall in the target area within 30 to 60 seconds.

Theodore Postol is a former adviser to the chief of naval operations and is now a senior research associate at Stanford Center for International Security and Arms Control. This article is adapted from a chapter in "Managing Nuclear Operations," published by The Brookings Institution.

Eliminate Battlefield Nuclear Weapons First

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration has embraced the concept of eliminating nuclear missiles from Europe with an enthusiasm unseen in an administration that treated arms control like a pariah for its first six years in office.

I would like to welcome any convert to the cause. My one problem with the Reagan conversion is that it exudes more zeal than rationality. The Reagan plan for nuclear weapons in Europe would have us eliminate the weapons we should keep and keep the weapons we should eliminate.

There are three categories of nuclear weapon in Europe. First, there are long-range intermediate-range nuclear forces, or LRINF. (The terminology is ridiculous, but we're stuck with it.) These are missiles with a range of 600 to 3,000 miles. Second, there are short-range intermediate-range nuclear forces, or SRINF. These are missiles with a range of 300 to 600 miles. Finally, there are battlefield or tactical nuclear weapons, which include land mines, artillery shells and truly short-range missiles.

Both we and the Soviets have long-range INF missiles. Ours are the Pershing 2 and GLCMs whose deployment in the early 1980s prompted so many anti-nukes marches in Europe. As for short-range INF missiles, we have none and the Soviets about 140. Both of us have thousands of battlefield nuclear weapons.

Of the three categories, the most dangerous are the battlefield nuclear weapons. In the event of a Soviet attack, allied forces will be struggling to avoid losing ground, and commanders will be asking to use their battlefield nuclear weapons before their positions are overrun. In the most tense and unnerving days of any war — the first few days — anxious officials will be faced with a decision on resorting to nuclear weapons. They will confront the worst choice anyone can face: use 'em or lose 'em.

We ought to be moving nuclear weapons away from the battlefield. Modern technology gives missiles fired from a thousand miles away roughly the same accuracy as an artillery shell fired from a dozen miles away. And a missile sitting a thousand miles from the battlefield has two other advantages: first, it is in no danger of being overrun, and second, it is much easier for NATO headquarters and political leaders to keep control over use.

But what are we negotiating with the Russians? Ronald Reagan has proposed eliminating all long-range INF missiles. Mikhail Gorbachev has proposed that we eliminate both long-range and short-range INF missiles from Europe, and Secretary of State George Shultz has accepted that as the goal of the upcoming Geneva talks. That will leave us with battlefield nuclear weapons — precisely the ones we ought to be eliminating.

Reagan is not a convert to arms control. He is a nuclear disarmer. Disarmers simply want to abolish whole categories of nuclear weaponry, thinking the world is better off by virtue of our having fewer numbers of weapons.

But the point is not just to reduce numbers. The point is to reduce the chances of an outbreak of nuclear war. In that regard, some nuclear weapons are more dangerous than others. Battlefield nuclear weapons are one of the most dangerous. Silo-based missiles that are vulnerable to attack are another. Again, the danger is that, if you don't use them, you take the chance of losing them.

Ironically, the battlefield-weapon problem is one we have the ability to solve unilaterally — one of the rare instances where unilateralism is a real option. We ought to replace battlefield nuclear weapons unilaterally with weapons of greater range. Don't even try to negotiate with the Soviets — we'll never reach a verifiable agreement. Some of these weapons are so small one man can carry them. But the double zero agreement we are working on with the Soviets — zero LRINF and zero SRINF — makes such a unilateral restructuring illegal.

It all comes down to a question of the purpose of arms control. While it would be nice to reduce the numbers of weapons, that isn't the real point of arms control — blind submission to reductions could actually make the world less safe. While it may be desirable to reduce Pentagon budgets, that isn't the real purpose of arms control either — less reliance on nuclear weapons actually means more reliance on conventional weapons, which is a more costly route to take. The purpose of arms control — the bottom line, in today's parlance — is to make the outbreak of nuclear war less likely.

Legislature Tries To Halt Takeover Of Burlington

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — State legislators are rushing to include Burlington Industries under an anti-takeover law approved last week since a New York financier and a Canadian textile company have announced plans to acquire the textile giant.

Identical bills including Burlington under the new takeover law were introduced in the House and Senate Monday, but sponsors insisted they were not requested directly by Greensboro-based Burlington.

"But this looks like the most likely way that they could get some type of protection," Sen. R.C. Soles, D-Columbus, said. "And (in light of) what has taken place over the weekend, it has been decided to give it a shot."

He added that he believed Burlington officials favored the bills.

"The idea is to try to prevent a hostile takeover of companies like Burlington," Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan said. "If it's passed, hopefully it would prevent a hostile takeover there."

Published reports Saturday said that New York investor Asher B. Edelman and Montreal-based Dominion Textile Inc., Canada's largest textile manufacturer, had acquired 7.6 percent of the outstanding shares of Burlington's common stock.

The reports said Edelman and Dominion had offered Burlington's board of directors to pay $60 per share for the remainder of the stock. Edelman and Dominion also have filed suit in a federal court and a New York state court challenging Burlington's anti-takeover provisions.

Lobbyists for North Carolina textile firms say they're worried that if Burlington is taken over, the new owners will move many of the jobs it provides out of the state.

Last week, the House and Senate speedily enacted a law designed to insulate shareholders in North Carolina corporations from hostile takeover bids.

The law established a formula to protect the value of the average shareholder's stock in the event of a hostile takeover attempt and prevent them from panicking when such an effort is made.

It prevents corporate raiders from acquiring companies and liquidating their assets without paying shareholders a fair price for their shares. Under the law, once a buyer offers a price for stock, it must pay that price to all shareholders unless 95 percent of them vote to override the requirement.

Legislators said last week the new law might need to be revised because it applies only to North Carolina corporations and that its definition of such corporations was too narrow to include such firms as Burlington.

Although it is headquartered in Greensboro and has most of its assets in the state, Burlington was chartered in Delaware.

Under the Soles and Miller bills, the new law would extend the protections of the new Shareholder Protection Act to companies that were chartered elsewhere but: — Make North Carolina their "principal place of business."

— Have more than 50 percent of their domestic fixed assets in the state at the end of their last two fiscal years and at the end of their most recent fiscal quarters.

— Have more than 50 percent of their employees in North Carolina.

— Have 10 percent or more of the beneficial owners of the voting stock residing in North Carolina.

In other legislative action:

Hunting-Fishing
The Senate approved 43-2 and sent to the House a bill that would boost state fees for hunting and fishing licenses after defeating an amendment to cut in half the increase for lifetime all-purpose sporting licenses. The bill now goes to the House.

Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, said the bill was needed because the state wildlife fund is designed to be self-sustaining but is not raising enough money through license sales to pay its bills.

Last year, the Legislature had to appropriate some $2 million to the fund.

"In an effort to make the wildlife fund self-sustaining and let those people who hunt and fish pay for the cost of the wildlife fund we introduced this legislation," Rauch said. "These increases are not that substantial."

But Sen. Donald Kincaid, R-Caldwell, argued that one of the increases — from $300 to $500 for a lifetime sportsman's license — was too steep. He proposed an amendment to boost the cost to only $400.

"I'm saying that ... if we increase it that drastically (to $500) we may destroy the lifetime program," Kincaid said, warning that it would reduce participation.

The bill would raise the one-year cost of sportsman's licenses from $30 to $40. Hunting licenses and fishing licenses would cost $15.50 per year instead of the current $11.50 while the cost of combined hunting-fishing licenses would rise to $15.50 to $20.

ESC Funds
The Senate approved 46-0 a bill already passed by the House that would make an emergency appropriation of $251,460 to administer a new state unemployment trust fund.

Earlier this year, the Legislature enacted a bill to reduce by $100 million the tax that North Carolina employers pay for federal jobless benefits. Under the law, $50 million will go toward a new reserve that will guarantee the solvency of the state unemployment trust fund.

Traffic Tickets
The Senate approved 47-0 and sent to the House a bill that would allow the State Highway Patrol to put parking tickets behind windshield wipers of cars whose drivers park the vehicles in rights-of-way owned by the Department of Transportation.

Current law requires the patrol to hand-deliver the citations.

GOP Congressmen Offer $1 Million Reward For Return Of Asian POW

By PAUL NOWELL
Associated Press Writer

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Eight Republican congressmen, a former congressman and a former prisoner of war are putting up $100,000 each as a reward for any Southeast Asian defector who brings an American prisoner of war out with him.

Retired Navy Capt. Eugene "Red" McDaniel, a former POW, said Monday he is convinced some Americans are still being held in solitary cells and bamboo cages in Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia.

"We believe it is time for the private sector to join the president in working to bring about their release," he said. "We are providing an incentive for a defector to bring one of our men out."

Former North Carolina Rep. Bill Hendon of the American Defense Institute, which is spearheading the campaign, said the $1 million reward will be paid within seven days of the delivery of an American prisoner on the official list of U.S. personnel not accounted for in Southeast Asia.

To prevent "illegal rescue attempts," the only people who are eligible to receive the award are citizens of Vietnam, Cambodia or Laos who are escaping or defecting, Hendon said.

"We may have to raise the money or borrow it. But we will get it to anyone who brings someone out," Hendon said. "We're going to get the word out on the streets of Southeast Asia."

Hendon said he and McDaniel, who heads the institute's POW Policy Center, will broadcast the reward offer in the Vietnamese language throughout Southeast Asia.

Five congressmen at the Monday news conference — Robert Dornan, David Dreier and Duncan Hunter of California, John Rowland of Connecticut, and Robert Smith of New Hampshire — declined to blame President Ronald Reagan for what they described as years of frustration for the families of the American POWs and MIAs.

"I think the president has kept his promises," said Dornan. He said he believed that members of the presi-

Final Vote Postponed

RALEIGH (AP) — Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan says a proposed ban on phosphorus in household laundry detergents is not in serious trouble, although foes managed to hold up final action on the measure.

The Senate voted 25-22 Monday to put off until today a vote on several amendments tacked on by the House, which gave the measure final approval last Thursday. The postponement came after questions were raised about the bill's effect on small businesses.

"It was very obvious that some of those who would like to delay it would like for it to be a permanent delay," Jordan told reporters. But he added: "I feel confident that it will pass (today), period."

The roadblock thrown in the bill's path did not stem from the handful of House amendments, one of which reduces the fine for violating the proposed law from $50 to $10.

Sen. Kenneth Royall, D-Durham, said the bill did not appear to allow small businesses to send their employees' uniforms to a commercial laundry for cleaning with phosphate detergents.

The bill allows several exemptions to the phosphorus ban, including commercial laundries and textile rental service companies that provide laundry service for hospitals, clinics, nursing homes and other health care facilities.

REWARD OFFERED — Eight members of Congress have joined in offering a $1 million reward to any Southeast Asia defector who frees an American POW. The offer was made Monday at the Charlotte Motor Speedway, where five of the lawmakers held a news conference and displayed the money that was being offered. They were, from left to right, Reps. Duncan Hunt, R-Calif.; Robert Dornan, R-Calif.; David Dreier, R-Calif.; John Rowland, R-Conn., and Robert Smith, R-N.H. (AP Laserphoto) dent's staff are not convinced that some Americans are still being held in the Communist countries.

"A lot of good men have not been as optimistic as they should be," he said. "This is not a job for cynics."

Hunter admitted that the odds against success were great.

"I guess it is a long shot," he said. "I came to the conclusion that they (POWs) would want us to do this. They would want us to take the extra step."

Dreier called his $100,000 contribution a "small thing for us to do."

"I hope and pray that this reward will begin to bring Americans out of Southeast Asia," he said.

The other congressmen who are contributing to the reward offer are Jim Hansen of Utah, Denny Smith of Oregon, and Don Sundquist of Tennessee.

Hendon said he and the others have traveled to Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia, where they heard the accounts of refugees who claimed they have seen Americans in captivity.

"Then came the boat people, who brought out thousands of stories," he said. "I think we've long since moved from the question 'Are they there?' to 'How do we get them out?'"

Smith said he believed there was evidence that American servicemen were still alive.

"We prosecute people in this country with far less evidence than we have here," he said. "We have hundreds of reports of live sightings. Some of them are shams, but many of them haven't been debunked."

Hendon said it hasn't been determined if another reward would be offered if someone came forward to collect the $1 million. But he said he didn't believe it would be necessary.

"The first man is key," he said. "Then the ball game is over and the rest will follow."

"This is for the guard in the dirty, little camps," he said. "We're saying, 'Hey pal, bring along the wife and kids and bring our man.'"

Also attending the news conference were the wives and sons and daughters of some of the missing American servicemen.

Beth Stewart, whose father, Peter, has been missing since 1966, called the reward "the best news in 21 years, without a doubt."

"We've lost something very dear to us and we feel we have to offer something very valuable to get him back," she said.

Ms. Stewart said she has been frustrated by the U.S. government's attempts to find out whether any American POWs are still alive.

"It is disappointing when we went to the bargaining table empty-handed," she said. "Now we're not empty-handed."

Stormy Spring Has Created Havoc On Outer Banks

NAGS HEAD, N.C. (AP) — The Nags Head building inspector says stormy weather has created destruction faster than his office can notify homeowners.

"It's been really hectic around here," inspector Ronnie Ballance said Monday.

Ballance, who was busy trying to notify homeowners Monday that their cottages were endangered, added, "I'm ready for summer, I'll tell you."

Ballance said about half a dozen homes in south Nags Head were damaged by tides and wind over the weekend. A $92,500 home owned by Gene Kellher of Wrightsville, Pa., tumbled down a 20-foot escarpment early Sunday morning.

The sea, with high astronomical tides running 1 to 2 feet above normal, undermined house pilings, shattered decks and stairwells and damaged siding and foundations at other homes.

Ballance said he met with the owners of two teetering homes last week, and the owners were going to try to remove the furnishings. But he said the homes became so unstable this weekend that "the furniture and stuff's still in there."

Both cottages still clung to a sliver of eroded dune Monday, but Nags Head officials warned that the buildings could fall at any moment.

Next door, there was little left of a home that fell last week. The sea had washed most of it into the breakers.

Ballance said homes expected to collapse into the sea include one owned by David Short of Newport News, Va., valued in the Dare County tax records at $87,000; an adjoining house owned by Edward Barnes of Virginia Beach, Va., valued at $95,300, and a home owned by John Kane of Thornton, Pa., which is valued at about $92,000.

On Hatteras Island, meanwhile, seawater poured over N.C. 12 north of Rodanthe Sunday, burying the road in up to 3 feet of sand and 4 feet of water. The road was passable by Monday, but was left exposed to more ocean overwash because dunes had washed away, officials said.

Dare County Sheriff Bert Austin said two unidentified people who tried to drive through the flood had to be rescued when their vehicles, a car and a truck, were swamped. They escaped unharmed.

Four more vehicles became mired Monday and had to be pulled out by U.S. Coast Guard and state Highway Patrol personnel, Austin said.

"I was joking with the (Coast Guard) district commander that he should put buoys out of the road for us to follow," Austin said.

The stormy weather that bludgeoned the Outer Banks for two weekends straight also had an economic impact on merchants who usually see business accelerate after Easter.

"People who would have otherwise come down from Washington, D.C., or even the Tidewater area, just stayed home," said Scottie Foster, administrative assistant for the Outer Banks Chamber of Commerce. "Even though we have some really nice indoor attractions and great places to shop, the weather was probably just too much."

College Receives $2 Million Gift

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A retired Birmingham, Ala., insurance executive has given Swannanoa's Warren Wilson College $2 million — the largest gift in the school's 93-year history.

College President John Carey announced recently that alumnus and trustee Algernon Sutton has presented the 500-student Presbyterian liberal arts college with a $2 million trust.

The largest gift previously given the college was a $1 million donation by Chicago philanthropist Foster McGaw in 1977.

The college can't use Sutton's money until he dies. Sutton, 83, draws an income from it and receives tax deductions until then, said John Davies, the school's director of college relations.

Sutton gave the trust as an unrestricted gift, so the college is free to use the money as it likes.

Auditor Says Public Support Needed For Passage Of School Financing Plan

ASHEVILLE (AP) — State treasurer Harlan Boyles says getting a school financing plan through the Legislature will be far harder than the hurdles it will face when put to a statewide vote.

Boyles, meeting with Yancey and Mitchell county school officials Monday, said without a groundswell of public support for passage of a school construction bill, there is likely to be "a lot of talk but little action."

Unless pressure can be brought to bear on legislators to act on one of the three plans they are considering, "you'll probably discover that in the quiet of the night they've postponed action on all three" when they adjourn this summer, Boyles said.

Each of the plans faces its own legislative obstacles. Gov. Jim Martin's plan to float a $1.5 billion state bond from which to loan construction funds to local school systems faces partisan political obstacles in the Democratic-controlled legislature, he said.

Another proposal that would add an additional penny sales tax earmarked for school construction won't be popular with legislators with an eye on the 1988 elections, he said.

And a third, which proposes a much larger bond issue to fund both school construction and water and sewer projects, won't pass the state House of Representatives, Boyles said.

An additional problem with Martin's plan is that it won't provide enough money for the needs of 10 of the state's 100 counties, he said.

Though school needs have been a longtime problem in the state, implementation of the Basic Education Plan has brought the issue to a head, Boyles said.

Lack of action by the legislature to provide counties with a means of meeting the physical plant requirements of that plan at the same time they are mandating its provisions "may backfire on them," Mitchell schools Superintendent Douglas M. Greene said.

A school construction plan could be adopted before adjournment if people put pressure on their legislators and if the school board and county commissioners' associations back its passage, Boyles told the group.

He urged them to meet with legislators soon "because right now the opportunities for choosing between the three proposals is clear. Later on the water will get muddier."

Officials Agree To Meet Miller

RALEIGH (AP) — Federal officials say they will agree with Glenn Miller's demand for a meeting — one of 17 conditions for calling off a threatened race war — if the fugitive white supremacist will tell them where he is.

"Mr. Miller has requested as part of his demands a meeting with U.S. Attorney Sam Currin, U.S. Attorney Barry Kowalski, (State Bureau of Investigation) Director Robert Morgan and public defender Bill Martin," said Bill Berryhill, a federal marshal. "All of those people have agreed to meet with Mr. Miller and we need Miller to get in touch with us so that the meeting can be arranged."

An arrest warrant was issued last week for Miller, former leader of the White Patriot Party, on charges he violated bail rules and signed a letter declaring "total war" on Jews, blacks and federal officials. An all-points bulletin also was issued for his arrest.

On a tape played on the air Saturday, a man who identified himself as Miller issued a list of demands including the overturn of a contempt-of-court conviction, a payment of $888,000 and an apology for allegedly violating his rights.

Berryhill said Monday authorities have found no sign of Miller or any disturbances.

"As far as we can tell at this point, the war has not started," he said. "And we would hope that Mr. Miller would not start such a war until he talks with us again because at this point we have not had a chance to talk to him directly regarding his demands."

Berryhill said he will go anywhere in the country to meet with Miller and personally guaranteed Miller's safety if he will peacefully surrender.

When Escape Occurs At Mental Hospital

Flaherty's Report Says Police Responsible For Notifying Public

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Police, not hospital officials, should notify the public when patients escape from North Carolina's four mental institutions, says a report issued by Human Resources Secretary David Flaherty.

"We need to remember that we are operating hospitals to serve people, not running prisons," Flaherty said Monday. He released the report compiled by a blue-ribbon committee led by former Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green.

State policy on notifying law enforcement agencies and the public about walkaways is basically sound but needs clarification, the report says. It recommends no change in state law on patients' confidentiality rights that bars hospitals from releasing to the public information on escapes.

The report takes issue with media contentions that the law violates the public's right to know and jeopardizes citizens' safety.

"Once provided with the details of the escape and a profile of the client, it is the (law enforcement) agency's responsibility to determine whether the public safety is in jeopardy or whether media involvement would assist in the apprehension of the client," the report says.

Leaving public disclosure up to law enforcement agencies, it says, "appropriately reflects the relative expertise and responsibilities of the facility and the law enforcement agency."

The study committee was appointed Jan. 5 by Flaherty's predecessor, Phil Kirk, now chief of staff to Gov. Jim Martin. The move followed several highly publicized escapes from Dorothea Dix Hospital in Raleigh.

North Carolina's other state-run mental facilities are Unstead Hospital at Butler, Cherry Hospital at Goldsboro and Broughton Hospital at Morganton.

A 28-year-old man whom a court found innocent by reason of insanity in the shotgun slaying of his mother walked away from the Dix grounds in late December.

The man returned to the hospital vicinity a few days later and was captured without incident. But officials drew criticism for waiting 45 minutes after the escape to notify local law enforcement agencies. No public announcement was made for two days.

The Green report endorses a pending Senate bill that would broaden the category of patients whose escapes would be reported to police.

The report recommends notification about the escape of any patient believed likely to harm himself or others, damage property, commit a crime or endanger his health or safety.

Additionally, the report suggests that the four mental hospitals reach agreements or "memorandums of understanding" with area law enforcement agencies on when and how the agencies will be notified.

Such an arrangement already has been made between Dix Hospital and the Raleigh Police Department, according to Paul Kaye, director of DHR's Division of Mental Health, Mental Retardation and Substances Abuse Services.

Strike Team Awaits Decision

ELIZABETH CITY, N.C. (AP) — The Coast Guard is reconsidering its decision to disband its Atlantic Strike Team based at Elizabeth City, a spokesman said Monday.

The team, one of three formed to handle spills and other environmental hazards, received verbal orders last week that the unit would be abolished this summer.

Rep. Walter B. Jones, D-N.C., protested the decision to Adm. Paul Yost, the Coast Guard commandant, who must still make a final decision on the issue. Jones is chairman of the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee, which oversees the Coast Guard.

Yost, who is expected to resolve the situation later this spring, "told the chairman that he would get back with the committee before deciding," Edmund Welch, the committee's chief counsel, said Monday.

Although Yost's staff has recommended eliminating the Elizabeth City team, a Coast Guard official emphasized Monday that the commandant would not automatically endorse the proposal.

"It's not a rubber stamp situation," said Lt. Wayne Justice, a spokesman for Coast Guard headquarters in Washington.

Soviet Arms Offer Tests NATO's Resolve

By ROBERT BURNS
Associated Press Writer
LUXEMBOURG (AP) — The Soviet Union's latest offer on nuclear arms reductions in Europe is testing the European NATO countries' resolve to present a more unified stance on key defense issues.

Most European governments appear willing to accept the Soviet proposal on eliminating short- and medium-range nuclear missiles, but West German hesitation has put a full consensus in doubt.

Defense and foreign ministers of the seven-nation Western European Union met in Luxembourg today in a special session devoted mainly to seeking a common response to the Soviet proposals.

The one-day meeting was touted as a crucial opportunity to transform the nearly moribund Western European Union into a forum for asserting a European viewpoint on arms control independent of the United States.

"We must come to a common stance on this (Soviet) proposal," said Jacques Poos, the Luxembourg foreign minister and chairman of the meeting. "The question is very urgent for us."

Also today, political officials from the 16 North Atlantic Treaty Organization nations were meeting in Brussels to try to agree on a recommended response from the Western alliance.

Both sessions were closed, and details of the discussions were not immediately released.

The United States has said it would not formally answer the Soviet proposal until its European partners in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization study it and express a judgment.

Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev told Secretary of State George Shultz in Moscow on April 14 that he was willing to destroy the Soviet arsenal of short-range rockets aimed at Europe as part of a deal eliminating medium-range nuclear missiles from the continent.

While the United States and its NATO allies have endorsed elimination of the medium-range missiles, some Western alliance officials have said eliminating the short-range arms would leave Western Europe dangerously vulnerable to an assault by superior Soviet conventional and chemical arms.

The West German government on Monday said it would not yet declare its stance.

Chancellor Helmut Kohl met for three hours Monday with top ministers, including Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher, who favors the Soviet idea, and Defense Minister Manfred Woerner, who says NATO should retain some short-range weapons in Europe.

Friedhelm Ost, the chief government spokesman in Bonn, denied the ministers were split over the issue and said the government would not draw up its response until it sees a formal version of Gorbachev's proposals.

That appeared to jeopardize chances for the Western European Union defense and foreign ministers to declare a common stance on the issue at their Luxembourg meeting.

The union, made up of Britain,

France, West Germany, Italy, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg, is a largely inactive defense organization that now stands at the center of new European efforts to assert an independent view on security issues.

In an extraordinary meeting of the Western European Union Assembly on Monday in Luxembourg, delegates approved a resolution calling for a "reactivation" and enlargement of the group to include such NATO members as Spain and Portugal.

But the assembly failed to agree on a relatively innocuous resolution supporting U.S. efforts to reach an arm control agreement with the Soviets. The failure appeared to underscore the difficulty of reconciling differing views within Western Europe.

Left-wing members of the assembly accused the conservatives of trying to amend the resolution in ways that cast the Soviets' arms control intentions in a negative light. The conservatives accused the leftists of failing to take proper account of the role of the United States in protecting Western Europe.

Peter Hardy, a British Labor Party member of the assembly, said afterward that quibbling over the resolution cast grave doubt on the future of Europe's effort to coordinate on defense issues.

"It's a sad day for Europe, a sad day for the Western European Union," Hardy said.

Austria Reacts Sharply To American Decision To Bar Visit By Waldheim

By ALISON SMALE
Associated Press Writer
VIENNA, Austria (AP) — The government today criticized the United States for barring President Kurt Waldheim and rejected as "not proven" charges that he had a role in Nazi atrocities in World War II.

Chancellor Franz Vranitzky told a news conference that the process used by Washington to reach its decision "is one that cannot be followed by the Austrian people and the Austrian government and is therefore incomprehensible."

"The known charges against President Kurt Waldheim are not proven and are therefore rejected," Vranitzky said, reading the text of what he said was a government statement.

"The federal government will take all steps to protect the head of state ... from unjustified accusations," he said. Asked if this meant Austria will take legal action against the United States, Vranitzky said it was too early to reply.

He said the government was waiting for a full report from the Austrian ambassador in Washington, who was ordered home Monday for consultations.

The decision Monday by U.S. Attorney General Edwin Meese means Waldheim would be denied a visa should he seek to enter on a private visit.

It is the first time the United States placed a head of state on its Watchlist of undesirable aliens. Jewish groups in the United States praised the move.

Politicians and media commentators seemed stunned by a move that appeared likely to cloud relations with the United States and unleash a new wave of sentiment against foreign interference in Austrian affairs.

Left-wing groups ranging from the youth group of Vranitzky's Socialist party to commentators in leftist newspapers called for Waldheim's resignation.

Vranitzky said he had not yet decided if he would go ahead with a scheduled trip next month to the United States.

"I proceed from the principle that (Austria and the United States) ... must be interested in working it out in a cooperative way," he said.

The Austrian Press Agency quoted Waldheim as saying at a dinner Monday night that he had a clear conscience about his wartime activities. It said he attacked the decision as "grotesque" and said it implied all former soldiers in Hitler's army also should be banned.

Waldheim issued no further comment today.

Nazi hunter Simon Wiesenthal today said Waldheim should allow historians to investigate his past to end the year-long debate over his actions as a German army lieutenant in the Balkans, where the Nazis deported or killed thousands of Jews and partisans.

"A result could be obtained in about four weeks," Wiesenthal told The Associated Press. "The matter belongs outside politics and should be given over to military historians."

Foreign Minister Alois Mock said at today's news conference that the U.S. action "has hit us hard" and "has a burdensome effect" on relations with Washington.

"For public life, the U.S. action has a destructive effect — catastrophic for the whole of Austria," commented the Salzburger Nachrichten, a conservative daily that opposed Waldheim's election as president last year.

"Which Western statesman will be ready to pose for eternity in official photos with a man who cannot enter the United States because of his unclear past?" the newspaper asked.

The World Jewish Congress charged last year that Waldheim was a member of a unit that committed atrocities against Greek Jews and Yugoslav partisans.

Waldheim, who was U.N. secretary-general from 1972-82, at first denied that he had been in the Balkans during the war. He later admitted it but denied any link with atrocities.

He was elected president last June.

In Washington, a Justice Department official said: "The available evidence demonstrates that Lt. Waldheim assisted or otherwise participated in ... the transfer of civilian prisoners to the SS for exploitation as slave labor; the mass deportation of civilians to concentration and death camps (and) the deportation of Jews from Greek islands and the town of Banja Luka, Yugoslavia, to concentration and death camps."

The official, who spoke at a news briefing on condition he not be identified, said Waldheim also assisted in "the utilization of anti-Semitic propaganda, the turnover of Allied prisoners to the SD (the security arm of the Nazi SS) and reprisal executions of hostages and other civilians."

Wiesenthal said there is a danger the affair will spark anti-Semitic and anti-American feeling in Austria.

Buddha's Bones

BEIJING (AP) — Two gold bowls holding tiny bone fragments said to be those of Buddha have been found in a temple near Beijing, city officials said today.

Vice Mayor Chen Haosu said the relics were "one of the important discoveries of Chinese history and Buddhism."

The bowls were found five years ago inside five progressively smaller boxes in a cave of the Yunju Temple 44 miles southwest of Beijing. Zhao Puchu, head of the Buddhist Association of China, told a news conference.

Chen said the discovery was not immediately made public because "we were waiting for an auspicious moment."

Siddhartha Gautama, the founder of Buddhism, lived in India about 500 B.C. His followers called him Buddha, "the enlightened one."

His teachings, which stress renouncing all earthly desire so as to escape the cycle of reincarnation, spread to China and together with Confucianism and Taoism became one of the nation's most influential bodies of moral precepts.

Zhao said the bowls were placed inside the cave in 616 A.D. It was not known how they arrived at the temple. Bone fragments a fraction of an inch long were found inside.

Inscriptions on the boxes that held the bowls said the remains of Buddha were inside.

Yunju Temple, perched on a mountainside, is famous for 14,728 stone slabs inscribed with Buddhist scriptures.

Plant Reports Uranium Leak

HANAU, West Germany (AP) — Slightly radioactive gas leaked into a control room of a plant where nuclear fuel rods are made, and company officials said today that 23 employees will undergo precautionary medical checks.

Hesse state Environment Minister Karlheinz Weimar said the RBU fuel rod production plant in Hanau was shut down after the leak of uranium hexafluoride gas late Monday. He said it would remain idled pending a report on the cause of the leak.

Juergen Krellmann, technical director of the RBU plant, said the gas escaped because of a simple malfunction and posed no threat to the workers or environment of Hanau, about 15 miles northeast of Frankfurt.

But he said the 23 employees in the control room where the leak took place would be tested for possible inhalation of the radioactive uranium content in the gas. He said "it's not likely" the workers had inhaled the radioactive element.

The uranium hexafluoride seeped out of a loose pipe connection into the control room, Krellmann said. A control room alarm sounded immediately and the flow of uranium hexafluoride was shut off, he said.

Employees then evacuated the room "in an orderly way," donned oxygen masks and purged the area of the gas, Krellmann said.

Uranium hexafluoride is a key element in the production of nuclear fuel rods. The RBU plant is the most important producer of fuel rods for West German nuclear reactors, processing 700 tons of uranium hexafluoride for that purpose annually.

On Feb. 8, 1984, a small amount of uranium hexafluoride leaked at the RBU plant during maintenance work on a valve seal. Twenty employees underwent medical examinations and were found to have absorbed radiation well under the permissible yearly maximum.

Dead Dissident Labeled Traitor

MOSCOW (AP) — Anatoly Marchenko, a prominent dissident who died in prison, today was branded a traitor by a Soviet newspaper.

The labor newspaper Trud accused Marchenko, who died Dec. 8, 1986, at age 48, of fabricating tales of human rights violations to draw Western attention.

The daily said Marchenko's writings were passed "to accomplices in the West, where they were used as 'facts' to organize hostile campaigns against our country."

"His vicious writings were full of invented reports of alleged strikes in some of our cities and beatings of dissidents in camps," the newspaper charged.

Some dissident Soviet emigres have said they believed Marchenko's death, which followed a hunger strike, was such a blot on the Soviet human rights record that it prompted authorities to end the internal exile of Andrei Sakharov.

When Sakharov, a Nobel Peace Prize winner, arrived in Moscow on Dec. 23, after seven years of exile in the closed city of Gorky, he said he had mixed feelings about returning, "because this coincided with the great tragedy of the death of Anatoly Marchenko, a remarkable man, a hero of the struggle for human rights."

Marchenko's widow, Larisa Bogoraz, who lives in Moscow, told The Associated Press today that she had not seen the Trud article and could not comment in detail on its charges.

It was not clear why the Trud attack was published almost five months after Marchenko's death. At the time, his death prompted sharp international criticism.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz called his death "a great loss" and said it cast doubt on Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev's proposal to hold a human rights conference in Moscow.

The Trud article alleged Radio Liberty and other Western radio services that broadcast to Communist countries "incited his vanity" with reports about Marchenko.

Couple Speaks Vows Saturday

Cynthia Marie Parker of Greensboro and Glendale Craig McKeithen of Dallas, Texas, were united in marriage Saturday at Dida's Chapel Free Will Baptist Church at 2 p.m. The double ring ceremony was performed by Dr. Robert Gorham.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Russell Lee Parker Sr. of Fountain and Mrs. Lareese Gaddy and Glen Rodgers of Aberdeen.

Organist and vocalist Walter Bolden, soloist Debra Leathers and Linda Johnson performed music.

The honor attendants were Pamela Parker of Fountain, sister of the bride, and Patricia Hampton of Raleigh, sister of the bridegroom.

Bridesmaids were Towanda Carney, Brenda Spell, both of Richmond, Va., and cousins of the bride, Lynette Horne of Camp Springs, Md., cousin of the bride, Charlene Toomer of Capitol Heights, Md., Deborah Gaddy of Pinehurst, sisters of the bridegroom, Melba Willoughby of Greensboro, and Mariam Slade of Robersonville.

The flower girl was Latoya Spell of Richmond, Va., cousin of the bride.

The best man was Robert Marks of Statesville and the ring bearer was Santonio Parker of Fountain.

Serving as ushers were Russell L. Parker Jr. and Jerry Parker of Fountain, both brothers of the bride, Broderick Maye of Farmville, Perry Spell of Richmond, Va., cousin of the bride, Stevie Gaddy, Virgil Gaddy and James McKeithen of Aberdeen, all brothers of the bridegroom.

Junior usher was Corey Carney of Richmond Va., cousin of the bride.

The bride's gown, fashioned by the bride and Elise Hill of Greensboro, was of ivory satinette with a lace stand-up collar and sheer yoke neckline, pearls and re-embroidered lace applique fitted bodice, long pointed sleeves trimmed with lace appliques and pearls at the shoulders and wrist. The gathered skirt had lace trim circling the hemline and chapel train. She wore a fingertip length V-shape wreath veil with appliques and pearls to one side.

The attendants wore tea length gowns of purple satinette fashioned by the bride and Elise Hill of Greensboro. They had ruffled puffed sleeves, sweetheart necklines and a fitted bodices with yoke waistlines.

The flower girl wore a dress similar in design to the other attendants except it had Victorian sleeves.

The reception was held in the church fellowship hall and a party was given afterwards at the Sheraton-Greenville.

Several showers to honor the bride were given prior to the wedding.

After a wedding trip to Hawaii, the couple will live in Dallas, Texas.

Parents Need To Read Infants

By MARY JO KOCHAKIAN
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

Rather than endlessly reading advice from "the experts," parents of infants should learn to "read" their babies.

Babies offer myriad clues to their emotions, and with effort, parents can learn how best to respond, says Evelyn Thoman, a University of Connecticut professor of psychology and biobehavioral sciences who is co-author with Sue Browder of "Born Dancing" (Harper & Row, $15.95).

Babies "talk" through the ways they hold their heads, look at or away from another person, cry and even hiccup and yawn, Thoman says. They have innate rhythms that wise parents try to get in step with. The authors term these behaviors a baby's "dance."

Cuing into these signals is far more valuable than adhering to an authority's advice that may not apply to your child, says Thoman, an infant behavior researcher.

Such advice "puts so much pressure on (parents) because they feel as though, if they don't do all the musts and shoulds, then they'll be less than perfect, and of course their child will be," Thoman said in an interview.

Her own child-rearing advice comes from a different perspective. It is related to new visions in physics as well as her own research. Albert Einstein's work has changed the cause-and-effect view of reality by discovering complex rhythms and relationships, she says.

Such patterns also are present in every parent-child relationship, Thoman says, and it can be of great benefit to discern them.

While everyone is born with the potential for becoming a good parent, she says, "unless one is committed, challenged by and really works at it, the talents do not come to fruition."

Getting in step with the baby requires effort and practice, she says, even though some behavior comes naturally, like a parent's wide-eyed, squeaky-voiced "baby talk."

"We don't have to make an effort to do that — it just feels good," Thoman says. "One of the things we're pointing out (in the book) is to let yourself go and do it, because that's the way you and your baby dovetail."

But there are some signals a parent might miss. For example, Thoman says, when a newborn sticks her tongue out, it can be a sign that she wants to be approached.

If a parent is not picking up on an infant's signals, "the parent will know it," Thoman says. The baby likely will be distressed and have problems with sleeping or eating. This is not to say that reading an infant correctly will eliminate normal troubles, she says. But if the baby's feelings are not being acknowledged, the infant will be unhappy.

Babies who are "poor fits" with their parents, those infants sometimes considered "difficult" who have a hard time organizing their behavior and react strongly to stimuli, "are a much bigger challenge for any parent," Thoman says. But if parents "can find ways to groove into the baby by attending to the baby and letting themselves feel what the baby is feeling, particularly during playtime, then they begin to get a feeling for what the baby is expressing," she says. "And even the most disorganized baby has ways of expressing its needs and distresses, and contentment."

To enrich the baby-parent relationship, the authors also recommend that parents:

Think holistically. Avoid thinking in terms of opposites such as good and bad, right and wrong, good-natured and cranky. Oversimplifications preclude seeing things in their true, relative terms.

Accept their mistakes and learn from them.

Accept uncertainty in the parent-child relationship. Leave behind the need for simple answers.

Camping Ranked As Popular Sport

OK, so what do YOU think of when you think of the most popular sports being enjoyed in America today? Swimming? Fishing? Bowling? Tennis? Right.

Well, how does camping grab you? I cannot believe that 34 percent of our population said camping ranked third as a favorite sport. A sport is supposed to be a form of recreation ... a physical pastime ... a fun game having a set body of rules where someone wins ... and everyone has a fighting chance.

I've camped. It's none of those things.

I always considered camping a punishment from God for ignoring my parents when they said, "We're not asking you not to get married, we're just asking you to wait a few years."

Why else would I be washing out underwear in a double boiler? Showering with a nozzle reserved for spraying vegetables at home? Stepping on someone's face to get to my bed which is suspended from the ceiling?

Camping is a lot like the Depression with tandem wheels.

The first time my husband pitched the sport to me, I couldn't believe what he was saying. "How would you like to leave all this convenience," he said, "and set out in a car with three surly kids, stop about 4 in the afternoon, spray for mosquitoes, haul water and wood, build a fire and cook the food, and maybe if it's a public facility wander over and listen to a ranger show a film on "The Birth of a Bog"?"

"How much do we get paid for all of this?" I asked.

"You don't understand. We don't get paid anything," he said. "In fact, all of this is a vacation."

At Wits End

"No, you don't understand," I said. "I don't go anywhere where they haven't heard of Liz Claiborne."

"Honey, this is one of the most popular sports in America."

"Then how come I never see any cute outfits advertised for it?"

It's hard for me to imagine what the attraction of parking between a public toilet and a ghetto blaster for an entire weekend is all about. Maybe I just don't have that pioneer spirit ... that quest for survival ... that will to live that is needed for the sport.

A few years ago, we went camping in Africa, where I was promised a shower. The good news is every day hot water poured from the ceiling of a small enclosure. The bad news is the water was being poured by a man I had never seen before. The incredible news is he didn't lose his eyesight.

It still doesn't account for camping's popularity.

Don't Contact Your Old Flame

Dear Abby!

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Fifteen years ago, when I was in high school, "Steve" and I went steady for three months. It was an intense and wonderful relationship (we never slept together), then one night he called to say that he no longer wanted to go steady. No explanation. He didn't start to date anyone else, but from then on we hardly even spoke. In time I got over the hurt, but I never forgot Steve.

Eight years ago, I married a man who is the best, and we have a beautiful family. I have no regrets about my choice; however, it still bothers me that Steve broke up with me so suddenly without an explanation.

I don't want to rekindle anything between us, nor do I want an affair; I only want a 30-minute face-to-face conversation with Steve to find out why he broke up with me. He still lives in this city, and I heard that he is married and has a family now, but I haven't seen him in 10 years.

Am I crazy to want this question answered so I can die in peace? Please advise me. — LEFT WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: Crazy? No. Your curiosity is understandable, but were you to contact Steve and suggest a rendezvous, he couldn't be blamed for assuming you'd like to rekindle the old romance. The word from this corner is "don't."

DEAR ABBY: Bet you never heard this one before: My husband and I and our five kids live in a modest-sized mobile home where it's not easy to find peace and quiet. My husband is a wonderful man, works very hard, and is an early-to-bed person.

The children and I enjoy sitting up later on evenings and weekends to watch TV. Sometimes we do get a little noisy. The problem? When Daddy wants peace and quiet, before going to bed, he goes to the electric meter and disconnects all the power in the house! And it stays off until the next morning. How about that? — MOONLIGHTING IN TAMPA

DEAR MOONLIGHTING: All the power? It appears that Daddy is on a "power" trip! Next time he heads for the switch, hand him some earplugs, and turn down the volume.

DEAR ABBY: I had to chuckle when I read the letter from "Hurt," whose partner made an untimely comment concerning a utility bill while they were making love.

Allow me to relate a similar incident that happened to me. It was a class reunion time, and my husband and I were working on our class floats. The night before the parade always finds classes working right through the night. Jim and I had scooted home to steal a few hours of sleep before getting back for the parade. Glad to have a few moments to ourselves after so many hectic days, we were soon enjoying ourselves completely. In the middle of all this intimacy, my husband pipes up and asks, "What size chicken wire does your class use for tissue stuffing on your floats?"

Needless to say, the mood changed instantly — but not to one of silence as "Hurt" related in her letter. We both broke into a wholehearted laugh! Am I to assume that Jim loves me any less because his mind was elsewhere? Not on your life! This incident is among our funniest memories.

By the way, we've been married for 19 years. Ours was a marriage that everyone said would never last because we were so young (I was 17 1/2 and he was 19), but it's been truly wonderful, and I look forward to growing old together. — LUCKY MARY IN SPRINGFIELD, VT.

DEAR ABBY: Our 50th wedding anniversary is coming up soon and our two children want to give us a lovely party celebration. We are sincere when we say we want absolutely no gifts. First, we have no place for anything in our house. I am the last of eight children and have accumulated a lot of furniture, family silver, dishes, etc., and simply do not want another thing. The gifts would have to be divided between our children soon as we are in our 80s now. Is it proper to state "no gifts" on an invitation? If so, how should we word it? — ENOUGH THINGS IN VIRGINIA

DEAR ENOUGH: It is proper. Say, "No gifts, please. Your presence will be our cherished gift, and we respectfully request no other."

(For Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding," send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.)

Ankerberg has said he presented the evidence now because he had heard Bakker wanted to come back to PTL.

Smith said the board may discuss Bakker's request to return to PTL. He said it also will decide:

—Whether to continue payments to Jessica Hahn, the West Babylon, N.Y., woman who had the tryst with Bakker.

In a related development, The Charlotte (N.C.) Observer reported in today's editions that in 1985 Dortch, used ministry money to pay Miss Hahn, channeling $265,000 through PTL's building contractor.

—Which of PTL's executives will stay, how much they should be paid and "who ought to go." Their salaries and bonuses in the past year ranged from $160,000 for an executive assistant to $1.6 million for the Bakkers.

Dortch, Bakker's top deputy and now PTL's television show host, received $350,000. Dortch has told viewers he is not accepting any payment this year.

Smith confirmed that Dortch will be considered in the board's review of PTL personnel and their compensation.

The board, Smith said, also will decide which building projects at Heritage USA to continue funding.

The Observer reported Saturday that PTL records show that nearly twice the money needed to build the $26 million Towers hotel at Heritage USA has been raised, but only $13 million has been paid on the unfinished high-rise.

Previously undisclosed portions of PTL's 1986 financial statements show PTL has tens of thousands more hotel "lifetime partnerships," people who are promised three nights a year in the Heritage Grand or Towers hotels for a one-time donation, typically $1,000, than it once told viewers it would have, The Observer reported.

Smith said he has no interest in taking control of PTL and said he has received personal assurances from fellow television evangelist Jimmy Swaggart that he does not want to take over.

When he resigned March 19, Bakker claimed he quit to thwart "a diabolical plot" by a rival to take over PTL. Bakker's attorney, Roy Grutman, later identified Swaggart as being behind the plot, which Swaggart has vehemently denied and called a "smokescreen."

House Panel Subpoenaes Records On U.S. Embassy

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House subcommittee today accused the State Department of withholding information on security problems at the Moscow embassy and subpoenaed department files on the matter.

"I am shocked and chagrined that the State Department would act in this way when they had indicated that they would cooperate," said Rep. Dan Mica, D-Fla., chairman of the Foreign Affairs subcommittee on overseas operations. He accused the department of forming a special task force to interfere with the panel's investigation.

The panel voted 6-0, with three absent, to issue the subpoena for files dealing with security procedures at the present U.S. Embassy in Moscow, with the building still under construction to replace it, and possibly with other American missions in the Soviet bloc.

Mica and the ranking Republican on the committee, Rep. Olympia Snowe of Maine, launched their investigation after allegations that two U.S. Marines allowed KGB agents into the current embassy and that Soviet workers had implanted so many listening devices in the new building that President Reagan may order it torn down.

Korean Students Clash With Police

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Thousands of students fought with police at 18 universities around the country today, on the first anniversary of the self-immolation deaths of two students during anti-government demonstrations.

Police officials said 44,000 students took part today in rallies that turned violent at 18 universities. There was no immediate information on injuries or arrests. Witnesses said police took away at least two students at Seoul National University, site of the most violent clash of the day.

About 1,000 riot police firing tear gas skirmished with 400 Seoul National University students for two hours today after a memorial service for the two students who died last year, according to witnesses who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Police reported violent clashes at 17 other schools in Seoul and other cities following services dedicated to the two Seoul National University students who took their lives in a dramatic protest against the government of President Chun Doo-hwan.

Also today, 122 Christian clergymen and human rights activists announced they were joining hunger strikes or sit-ins in progress throughout South Korea.

The hunger strikes and sit-ins were called to oppose Chun's announcement on April 13 that he was halting constitutional debate in Parliament until after next year's Olympics. Chun has said his successor will be chosen under the current electoral college system when his term ends next Feb. 24.

Officers Pin Down Montana Snipers

WOLF CREEK, Mont. (AP) — Gunfire erupted again today as police tried to flush out up to four snipers who were pinned down on a mountainside after they fired shots at officers and passers-by, wounding two campers, authorities said.

Two of the snipers were believed to be suspects in a double slaying in Colorado.

Several ambulances stood by today and at least one helicopter was dispatched as law officers hunted for the snipers today.

Reporters heard the sounds of automatic weapons shortly after 8 a.m., followed by bursts from several rifles, but could not get close enough to see what was going on. Lewis and Clark County Sheriff Chuck O'Reilly earlier told reporters some kind of assault was planned this morning, but he could not be reached in the field today.

A campground and scattered rural residences were evacuated after gunfire broke out Monday at the site overlooking Holter Lake, a reservoir on the Missouri River midway between Helena and Great Falls.

"As we started a sweep of the mountainside, literally all hell broke loose," O'Reilly said Monday. "They must have had scads of ammunition."

Pirates Snap Back, Top Seahawks, 7-5, In Tenth

WILMINGTON — East Carolina, its back against the wall, snapped back to claim a 7-5 10-inning baseball victory from UNC-Wilmington Monday, and keep its fading regular season title alive.

The Seahawks, who swept the Pirates in a Sunday doubleheader, hold a one-game lead over the Pirates with a 9-3 Colonial Athletic Association record. East Carolina is now 6-4.

Close behind both of them is the University of Richmond, which has concluded its season at 10-5.

Both the Pirates and Seahawks have three games remaining on their schedule, to be played this weekend. ECU travels to George Mason while Wilmington will visit James Madison.

East Carolina finds itself in this position — it must sweep Mason to have any chance at first seeding in May's CAA tournament, to be held at Richmond's The Diamond. Anything less would doom the Pirates to no better than third place in the seedings. At the same time, for the Pirates to take the top spot, Madison would have to take two of three from Wilmington.

The Pirates struck first, scoring two runs in the opening inning. John Adams led off with a walk and Steve Sides doubled. Calvin Brown then followed with a single, driving in both runners.

Wilmington began a comeback in the bottom of the second, scoring once. That came off Chuck Jones' home run — his fifth in the three-game series against the Pirates.

The Seahawks then got another run in the sixth, tying the game at 2-2. Jones walked and Eric Hickman reached on an error. Mike Byers reached on a bunt single, loading the bases. Randy Fennell then grounded into a doubleplay, but Jones scored on the play.

The Pirates then came back to score twice in the seventh to regain the lead, 4-2. John Thomas doubled, moved up on an out and scored on David Ritchie's double. Sides then singled to score Ritchie.

But the Seahawks struggled back and scored twice in the bottom of the ninth to tie the contest once more. Dwayne Graham singled and Tom Heitler singled. Both advanced on an out and Mike Meadows' sacrifice fly scored Graham. Mark Maultsby then doubled in Heitler for the 4-4 tie.

The Pirates came back once more to take the lead, scoring three times in the 10th. Jay McGraw opened with a double and scored when Mike Sullivan's bunt was thrown away at first. Mike Andrews also laid down a bunt, but it was played to second — not in time to get Andrews and both runners were safe. A third bunt sacrificed them up, and Chris Cauble singled to drive in both Sullivan and Andrews.

Wilmington didn't give up easily, however, coming back to score once in the bottom of the inning. Hickman singled and Byers also got a hit. Graham also singled to drive in Hickman, but reliever Jake Jacobs finally got them out the rest of the way to preserve Gary Smith's win.

East Carolina's hitting was led by Sides and Cauble with two each while Byers, Graham and Heitler each had three for Wilmington.

East Carolina is now 20-10 overall while the Seahawks are 24-18.

The Pirates are idle this week until

Gooden May Be Back On June 1

NEW YORK (AP) — Dwight Gooden could pitch again for the New York Mets by June 1 if his training program goes as planned, General Manager Frank Cashen says.

"Of course, we'd like to be ahead of that target date, but we'll have to see how things go," Cashen said Monday. "We're not going to rush it."

Gooden will be released Thursday from New York's Smithers Alcoholism and Treatment Center, where he has been undergoing rehabilitation for cocaine use. The center determined the star pitcher had occasionally used cocaine but was not an addict.

Gooden entered the center April 2, one day after his problem was revealed by a drug test. Commissioner Peter Ueberroth threatened to suspend Gooden unless he sought treatment.

they travel to Fairfax, Va., for their fateful series with Mason.

Testaverde (Surprise) Is 1st Choice; Duke's Junkin Picked Fifth By Cleveland

NEW YORK (AP) — Vinny Testaverde, the Heisman Trophy-winning quarterback from the University of Miami who signed a six-year contract with the Tampa Bay Buccaneers on April 3 for an estimated $8.2 million, was formally named the No. 1 choice today as the 12-round NFL draft of collegiate talent got under way.

The 6-foot-4 1/2, 214-pound Testaverde was a starter for only two seasons and finished his career with 413 completions in 674 attempts — 61.3 percent — for 6,058 yards and 48 touchdowns.

The Buccaneers had the most picks of any team — 18, after trading quarterback Steve Young to San Francisco for second- and fourth-round selections.

Shortly after 8 a.m., EDT, NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle stepped to the podium at the Marriott Marquis Hotel and announced Tampa Bay's selection of Testaverde, who appeared wearing a dark blue suit with a white shirt and yellow tie.

Testaverde then posed for pictures with his parents and Rozelle before holding a news conference.

Each team had 15 minutes to make its first-round selections, 10 minutes in the second round and five minutes in each of the next 10 rounds.

The Bucs' early signing of Testaverde had erased any suspense about the No. 1 choice. However, Rozelle repeated the selection of Testaverde because the box that feeds the audio to television stations was not working at first and missed the original announcement.

The Indianapolis Colts picked second and let the clock run down to 1:49 before taking Alabama outside linebacker Cornelius Bennett, the player they were expected to choose all along.

The 6-2, 235-pound Bennett won the Lombardi Trophy as the nation's top lineman, only the second linebacker in 18 years to win it. A big-play specialist, he led Alabama last year with 10 sacks for minus 78 yards and caused six fumbles despite missing two games. He made 287 tackles in 39 career games.

Ray Perkins, his coach at Alabama, compares Bennett favorably with Lawrence Taylor of the New York Giants, who Perkins coached in the pros.

"If I was starting a team today and could pick four linebackers, college or pro, Cornelius Bennett would be one of them," Perkins said.

There had been speculation that the Colts might go for a running back since Randy McMillan, a first-round choice in 1981, was seriously injured early Sunday when he was hit by a car in Timonium, Md.

The 225-pound fullback suffered two broken bones in his lower left leg, as well as head injuries, and underwent plastic surgery on the right side of his face.

The Buffalo Bills, who traded their first pick in five of the previous seven years, made it 6-for-8 when they sent their first-round pick to Houston for the Oilers' first-round pick — No. 8 over-all — and a second-round choice which the Oilers had acquired from Detroit. The Oilers selected Testaverde's Miami teammate, 235-pound fullback Alonzo Highsmith, who shares the record as the most prolific touchdown scorer in school history with 25.

Highsmith was second to Ottis Anderson with 1,914 rushing yards, fourth in all-purpose yards (2,915) and sixth with 92 career receptions. He gained 462 yards on 105 carries last season and caught 30 passes for 416 yards. As a sophomore, he rushed for 906 yards, second best season in Miami history.

Highsmith is an exceptional blocker who delivered crushing shots to opposing ends and linebackers in Miami's pro-style attack.

The Green Bay Packers then took Auburn running back Brent Fullwood. The 5-11, 209-pounder succeeded 1985 Heisman Trophy winner Bo Jackson AS Auburn's tailback and was the Southeastern Conference's leading rusher with 1,391 yards on 167 carries for a best-in-the-nation 8.3 average.

His yardage total is the second best in Auburn history behind Jackson's 1,786 in '85 and his career total of 2,789 ranks fourth on school's all-time list, although his mark of 7.15 yards per carry is the best ever.

The San Diego Chargers then traded their first- and second-round choices to Cleveland for the Browns' first- and second-round selections and linebacker Chip Banks.

To replace Banks, the Browns then took Mike Junkin, a 6-3 1/2, 230-pound inside linebacker from Duke. Junkin played the entire 1985 season on a severely damaged knee and was unable to practice after the first month but led the Blue Devils with 162 tackles, including 105 initial hits.

He bettered those numbers last fall with 110 solos and 78 assists, plus two sacks and 13 other tackles for a loss. He also caused five fumbles.

Junkin led Duke with 105 tackles in 1984 despite playing with a painful back injury.

The St. Louis Cardinals, with three picks in the first two rounds, used all but 55 seconds of their allotted 15 minutes before taking Colorado State quarterback Kelly Stouffer, who quietly established himself as one of the nation's top passers.

The 6-3, 214-pound Stouffer was the MVP of the East-West Shrine Game after completing 205 of 374 passes during the regular season for 2,604 yards but only seven touchdowns while being intercepted 14 times.

In 1985, he was 204-of-347 for 2,387 yards and 15 touchdowns, with 11 interceptions.

He is Colorado State's all-time passing leader with 7,142 yards.

The Detroit Lions, picking seventh, took Reggie Rogers, a defensive tackle from the University of Washington. The 6-5 1/2, 266-pound Rogers was voted Pac-10 Defensive Lineman of the Year by the league's offensive linemen.

He registered 95 tackles last fall and led the Huskies with 13 tackles for a loss. He tied for the team lead with seven sacks and had at least one tackle for a loss in eight games.

Rogers originally came to Washington on a basketball scholarship. He is the brother of the late Don

Collins Said In Drug Program

BOSTON (AP) — Running back Tony Collins of the New England Patriots has been checked into a rehabilitation center by the National Football League team for a recurring drug problem, according to a published report.

Patriot coaches and management became suspicious of Collins, a former East Carolina running back, two weeks ago during the annual spring mini-camp at Sullivan Stadium in Foxboro when he was late for some sessions and absent from others. The Boston Globe reported today, citing unidentified sources.

When management confronted Collins, the Globe said, he reportedly admitted he had had a relapse and needed help.

The newspaper said it is not known where the drug treatment facility is located.

The day after Super Bowl XX in which the Chicago Bears beat the Pats 46-10, head Coach Raymond Berry admitted at a news conference to a drug problem on the team.

"There are at least five players we know who have a serious problem, and five to seven more we suspect very strongly," Berry said at the time.

Two days later, Jan. 28, 1986, General Manager Patrick Sullivan confirmed to the Globe the identity of six admitted drug users on the team. One of the players was Collins.

Since then, Patriots officials have said several players have gone through a drug rehabilitation program administered by team psychiatrist Armand Nicholi, and were clean.

Collins, the Pats' second-round draft pick in 1981 out of ECU, played every game during the 1986 season. He gained 412 yards on 156 carries and caught 77 passes for 684 yards.

A starter most of his pro career, his best season was 1983 when he led the team with 1,049 yards rushing and played in the Pro Bowl following the season.

Since then, he has assumed the blocking-back role for teammate Craig James. However, he led the team in pass receptions in 1985 and finished second to Stanley Morgan last year.

Deshaies Proves He Belongs

By BILL BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

Jim Deshaies, who didn't pitch in last fall's memorable league championship series against the New York Mets, shouldn't have that problem again if the Houston Astros win their division.

Deshaies pitched a four-hitter in his second seven-inning stint of the season Monday night, and also contributed two RBI as the Astros broke a three-game losing streak with an 11-1 rout of the Mets.

"I wasn't thinking of last October," said Deshaies, 2-0, who has allowed only one run in the last 14 innings. "It was only my second start. We've gone with four starters so far and eventually we'll go with five. It's a matter of time until I get more starts. It's a long season."

The Mets are 9-9 and last in the National League in earned run average after starting the season 20-4 en route to winning the East by 21½ games a year ago. They could be feeling the pressure of defending their World Series title.

"I think that was rock bottom. This is as far as we can go," said Manager Dave Johnson, who was ejected from the game after arguing the first of two balk calls against Mets starter David Cone.

In other NL games, San Francisco defeated Atlanta 7-3 and Montreal tripped Philadelphia 6-4.

Cone, forced by an injury to Bobby Ojeda to make his first major-league start, gave up 10 runs in five innings on seven hits, six walks and two wild pitches in addition to the two balks on consecutive pitches.

"It's been a long time (July 4, 1985) since I've been thrown out," Johnson said. "I think I felt the frustration everyone else felt. We just have to good a staff, too good a ballclub to struggle like we have."

Deshaies ignored the 44-degree temperatures and was helped by a 7-1 lead after three innings.

"The weather wasn't too bad once you got started," Deshaies said. "I didn't have great command of my pitches, but when I got a big lead, I went to my fastball and threw strikes."

Deshaies allowed only a first-inning home run to Keith Hernandez and went on to strike out seven and walk five. Aurelio Lopez and Julio Solano each worked a scoreless inning to finish the game.

Billy Hatcher and Glenn Davis homered for the Astros, who just finished losing three straight to Cincinnati at Houston.

Craig Reynolds drove in two runs with a suicide-squeeze bunt and a sacrifice fly. Deshaies doubled his career RBI total with a bases-loaded walk and run-scoring single.

"We swung the bats better than we have all season," Manager Hal Lanier said. "We're capable of doing this. When they swing like this, it has to help their confidence."

Expos 6, Phillies 4

Montreal snapped a three-game losing streak as Neal Heaton allowed five hits in eight innings before leaving the game in the ninth when he was hit in the right leg by a line drive single by Juan Samuel.

"It was a fastball away," Heaton said of the pitch to Samuel. "And that's the same pitch he hit for a home run last week in Montreal. He won't ever see that pitch again."

Heaton, 3-1, who struck out six and walked one, left the game and was replaced by Tim Burke, who gave up a single to Milt Thompson and a three-run homer to Mike Schmidt, getting the Phillies within two runs.

After Lance Parrish singled, Randy St. Claire relieved Burke and got the last two outs for his third save.

Andres Galarraga had an RBI single and a two-run double for the Expos, and Mitch Webster had an RBI double and a run-scoring single.

One of the five hits Heaton allowed was Rick Schu's first homer.

Giants 7, Braves 3

San Francisco right-hander Kelly Downs allowed three hits in the first six innings, then singled in the tie-breaking run in the seventh against Atlanta.

Chili Davis, who later homered, followed Downs' hit with a two-run single, enabling Downs, 2-0, to survive three more hits and two runs in the bottom of the seventh. Scott Garrelts pitched the last three innings for his fourth save.

Downs, in his second season, collected the first game-winning RBI of his career when his liner to center scored Matt Williams from second base and broke a 1-1 tie.

"I had a tough time up until tonight," Downs said of his first hit in 10 at-bats this year. "You hear some hitters say they threw the head (of the bat) at the ball. I threw the handle."

Robby Thompson gave the Giants a 1-0 lead with his second homer, off Rick Mahler, 2-2, but Ozzie Virgil got the run back for the Braves when he also hit his second homer. Chris Brown also homered for San Francisco.

Rams Romp By Beddingfield

WILSON — Greene Central romped to a 13-2 victory over Wilson Beddingfield in the consolation game of the Wilson Optimists Baseball Tournament Monday evening.

The Rams got all they needed in the first inning, scoring six times. T.J. Johnson walked on one away and Gary Ginn singled. Shay Beaman brought both of them home with a double, then came the rest of the way on an error on the relay.

Tommy Eason kept it going with a single and Darin Radford brought courtesy runner Chris Howell in with a double. Barry Ginn's singled scored Radford and Ginn scored on a double by Vance Head.

The Rams added five more in the second, then picked up two more in the fifth. Beddingfield got one in the second and one in the fourth.

Gary Ginn, with four hits, including a two-run homer in the second, led the Ram attack. Radford had three and Barry Ginn and Vance Head each had two. No one had more than one hit for Beddingfield.

The win boosts the Ram record to 11-3. Greene Central plays host to Ayden-Grifton on Thursday as it returns to Eastern Plains Conference play. Action will begin at 6 p.m. when the two resume a game halted in the third inning earlier this year with the Rams up 10-1.

Jamesville.....1

JAMESVILLE — Steven Braddy tossed a two-hitter with 13 strikeouts as Bath defeated Jamesville, 7-1, in a Tobacco Belt 1-A conference baseball game Monday.

Bath pushed across two runs in the first and one in the second to jump ahead early and never look back.

Chuck Williams opened with a double. Brian Tuten walked. Timmy Sparrow followed that by reaching on an error on the outfielder that allowed Williams and Tuten to score.

In the second, Jason Shiverly, Williams and Chris Edwards all walked before Braddy was hit by a pitch to score Shiverly and make it 3-0.

The Pirates added one run in the fifth and three more in the sixth to complete their scoring.

Jamesville's only run came in the fourth. Craig Dickerson walked. Jeff Phelps reached on an error. Dickerson then came home on a fielder's choice by Kelly Moore.

Jamesville is 5-9 overall and 5-6 in the conference.

Blazers Have Tricks In Store

By BILL BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

The Portland Trail Blazers promise to have another trick defense ready for the Houston Rockets in the third game of their NBA playoff series tonight.

Portland used a half-court trap to force 11 turnovers and hold Houston to 12 points in the second period of Sunday's 111-98 victory over the Rockets that evened the best-of-5 series at one game apiece.

"The trap was our surprise," said Clyde Drexler, who scored 32 points for Portland. "Tuesday night in Houston, we'll have a different surprise."

Blazers Coach Mike Schuler said the Rockets are too big to stop with a conventional defense, so he devised a trap to utilize his team's superior quickness.

"I really didn't think we could get away with it," Schuler said. "We used it at different times during the year and we didn't have the commitment to make it work."

In other games tonight, Boston, leading 2-0, is at Chicago and Dallas is at Seattle in a series tied 1-1.

Wednesday's schedule features Milwaukee at Philadelphia in a series tied 1-1; Detroit, 2-0, at Washington; Atlanta, 2-0, at Indiana; the Los Angeles Lakers, 2-0, at Denver; and Utah, 2-0, at Golden State.

Akeem Olajuwon, who was 13 of 16 from the field while dominating the opening game of the series, was neutralized by Portland on Sunday, drawing three fouls in the first 13 minutes. He finished with 17 points and fouled out with 1:13 left in the game.

Despite its success, Houston forward Jim Petersen said Portland's trapping defense was a desperation move.

"They had to try something because we were controlling the series," Petersen said.

Because of previous commitments at Seattle Center Coliseum and the Kingdome, Seattle must play its two home games against Dallas at the 8,700-seat University of Washington arena.

"It should be interesting," Seattle Coach Bernie Bickerstaff said. "We have to play in the University of Washington gymnasium, which isn't real big. But it should be real loud."

Seattle, which lost all five regular-season games to Dallas in an average of 19 points, beat the Mavericks 112-110 on Saturday on a pair of free throws with two seconds left by Dale Ellis, who scored 32 points.

The SuperSonics also got a big effort from center Clemon Johnson, who had 20 points after going scoreless in Dallas' opening-game victory.

Chicago hopes to snap a 15-game losing streak against Boston and avoid elimination by the Celtics.

Barbour Wildcats.....2
Grifton Bears.....1

PACTOLUS — The Bob Barbour Wildcats nipped the Grifton Bears, 2-1, in their opening game in the Southern Pitt Little League Monday.

Kelly Mayo got the win for the Bears. The Wildcat hitting was led by Travis Hardy with three hits, including a triple that set him up to score the winning run.

Little League

Sportsworld.....6
Lions.....4

Sportsworld opened the 1987 North State Little League baseball season with a 6-4 victory over the Lions Monday.

The Lions took the initial lead with two runs in first. They added a third run in the third.

But in the bottom of the third, Sportsworld came back with five big runs to put the game away. Clyde Little singled and was safe on an error on Dante Daniels' grounder. Shea Harper singled in Little. Russell Oats followed with a two-run triple, scoring when Richard Ray reached on an error. Ray moved up on a wild pitch and a hit by Michael Worthington. He scored on Joel Fickling's hit.

Each team added one more run in the sixth.

Fickling led the Sportsworld hitting with three while Little and Oats each had two. Scott Briley had two hits to lead the Lions.

Oats was the winning pitcher, going the distance.

True Value.....12
Exchange.....11

True Value Hardware outslugged Exchange to gain a 12-11 victory in the opening game of the 1987 Tar Heel Little League baseball season Monday.

True Value scored two in the top of the first, but Exchange came back to push over nine runs in the bottom of the frame. True Value then came back with one in the third and scored eight times in the fifth to take an 11-9 lead. Exchange, however, rallied for two in the bottom of the fifth to tie it at 11-11.

In the sixth, however, True Value pushed over the winning run. J.D. Helms doubled to open the inning and came around on a pair of errors on the play.

Beau Williams led True Value's hitting with three while Alan Columbus and Helms each added two. Danielle Daniels led Exchange with three hits while Tarelle Daniels and James Willer each added two.

Columbo won the game in relief on the mound.

Braggs Gets Wish, Leads Brewers

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

When right-hander Glenn Braggs went to the plate in the 12th inning, he knew he was going to be walked intentionally. After all, two runners were on base, first base was open, left-hander Chuck Finley was on the mound and a left-handed hitter, Greg Brock, was on deck.

"I thought they would walk me," Braggs said. "I kept looking behind me to see what the catcher was doing."

"When I saw they were going to pitch to me, I was happy. I wanted to hit in that situation."

Braggs hit a double to the wall in right-center to drive in Jim Gantner and Paul Molitor in the top of the 12th inning, snapping a 7-7 tie and leading the Milwaukee Brewers to their 17th victory in 18 games. Braggs later scored on a single by Rick Manning in a 10-7 victory over California.

"It was a great feeling, especially in front of what I think of as a home crowd," said Braggs, a resident of nearby San Bernardino who had a solo homer earlier in the game.

In other American League games Monday night, Oakland downed Boston 5-2 and Seattle defeated Detroit 5-2.

The Brewers took a 5-0 lead, including a two-run shot by Rob Deer, his major league-leading ninth home run, before California battled back to go ahead 7-6, the big blow being Jack Howell's three-run homer. But Milwaukee tied the game in the ninth on Molitor's bases-loaded single.

"We were going to stay out there as long as it took to get the job done," Braggs said.

The victory put Milwaukee one game ahead of Detroit's 16-2 pace of 1984 when the Tigers won 35 of their first 40 games.

"It's so early," Braggs said, "but the way we've been playing, I'm starting to get that feeling that maybe it's our year. We're getting contributions from everyone, and even the right moves from the manager."

Milwaukee Manager Tom Trebelhorn said: "Exciting game, huh? That's Brewer baseball for you."

Athletics 5, Red Sox 2
Curt Young hurled his second straight complete game, stopping Boston on six hits and handing the Red Sox their fourth straight defeat.

"We needed to win a game, whoever it was pitching," said Young, who has three of his last-place team's seven victories.

"I believe he's going to win 20 games in the big leagues — as soon as he plays on a club that plays good enough behind him," Oakland Manager Tony La Russa said.

Even Boston pitcher Bob Stanley, who suffered his third loss against two victories, was impressed.

"When you give a three-run lead to Curt Young, you're in trouble. He's a heck of a pitcher," Stanley said.

Young's pitching was backed by Jose Canseco, who had four hits, raising his average to .309, and Mark McGwire, who drove in two runs with a pair of doubles.

Boston's hits included the 2,000th of Don Baylor's career, a single in the seventh inning, and Jim Rice's third homer of the season, a two-run drive in the fourth.

Young, 3-1, had five strikeouts and walked none. No other pitcher on the Oakland staff has a complete game this season.

Mariners 5, Tigers 2
John Christensen drove home Phil Bradley with the winning run in the bottom of the eighth inning as Seattle stopped Detroit 5-2. With one out, Bradley walked, stole his league-leading 10th base of the season, and scored on Christensen's single to center to break a 2-2 tie.

After Alvin Davis was walked in-

Rogers, a defensive back with the Cleveland Browns who died last year of a cocaine overdose.

The Bills used the first-round pick they acquired earlier in the day from Houston to select Penn State linebacker Shane Conlan.

The 228-pound Conlan, the latest top-flight linebacker from Linebacker U., led Penn State's national champs with 79 tackles, including 63 solo stops. He had five sacks and eight other tackles for a loss, caused a fumble, recovered a fumble, intercepted a pass and broke up seven others.

Conlan had two of Penn State's five interceptions against Testaverde in the Fiesta Bowl, including a 38-yard return that set up the winning touchdown.

The Philadelphia Eagles used little more than a minute before grabbing the third Miami player to go in the first nine picks, defensive tackle Jerome Brown, a 6-2½, 291-pounder. A fierce pass-rusher who encountered double- and triple-team blocking all season, Brown was a key to Miami's school record 49 sacks.

He missed two games last season but still made 75 tackles, including five sacks and four other tackles for a loss, caused two fumbles and recovered two. Brown played nose guard and tackle as a sophomore and was one of the few true freshmen to contribute to Miami's 1983 national championship.

The Pittsburgh Steelers, who had problems in the secondary even before cornerback Dwayne Woodruff was lost for the season with a knee injury, chose Purdue defensive back Rod Woodson.

"The best athlete I've ever coached," former Purdue Coach Leon Burtnett called the 6-foot, 201-pound Woodson, who holds schools records of 320 solo tackles, 11 interceptions for 276 yards in returns and three touchdowns and 71 kickoff returns for 1,535 yards.

Woodson played free safety his first three seasons and moved to cornerback in 1986. He also played some offense last fall, catching seven passes for 129 yards. He started at tailback against Indiana in the regular-season finale for the first time since high school and rushed 15 times for 93 yards, the only carries of his collegiate career.

The New Orleans Saints let the clock run down to 0:45 before selecting defensive tackle Shawn Knight of Brigham Young. The 288-pound Knight teamed with Jason Buck to give BYU one of nation's best tackle tandems. He had made 23 solo stops, 37 assists and 16 sacks last season.

Contenders Bunch Up

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The top contenders to runaway NASCAR Winston Cup leader Dale Earnhardt are bunched together in position for one or two to break from the pack and challenge for the championship.

Earnhardt has won six of eight Winston Cup races this season to rack up 1,390 points in the season-long points race. Bill Elliott is a distant second at 1,233.

But the difference between Earnhardt and Elliott is greater than the difference between Elliott and sixth-place Terry Labonte.

Neil Bonnett is third with 1,138 points, followed by Richard Petty with 1,105, Ricky Rudd with 1,085, Labonte with 1,078, Rusty Wallace with 1,061, Kyle Petty with 1,029, Ken Schrader with 1,028, and Darrell Waltrip with 1,022.

Open Net Winners

Fred Robinson of Charlotte and Susan McDonald won the singles titles at the Greenville Open Tennis Tournament this past weekend.

Robinson defeated Jimmy Milley of Richmond, Va., 7-6, 6-3. Milley teamed with Tim Melton of Charlotte to take the doubles title, topping Keith Richardson of Rocky Mount and Allen Farfour of Greenville, 2-6, 6-4, 7-6.

In the men's 35 singles, Larry Walker of Washington defeated Cecil Martin of Raleigh.

McDonald, ranked number three in the south, won the women's title by defeating Dolly Blantley of Washington, 6-1, 6-4.

The only local winners were in the women's doubles where Margaret McGlohon and Karen Akers of Greenville defeated Maria Swaim and Jeannie Jones, 6-3 and 6-1.

The tournament, sponsored by the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department and held at the River Birch Tennis Center, attracted over 90 players from across the state.

Creditors To Oversee Texaco Bankruptcy

By DEBRA WHITEFIELD
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. — In a decision as novel as the case itself, the trustee overseeing Texaco's reorganization proceedings Monday appointed Pennzoil and six other oil companies to one of two separate committees that will help steer through the courts the largest bankruptcy ever filed.

Harry Jones, the U.S. bankruptcy trustee for the Southern District of New York, said he believes that this is the first time a creditors' committee comprised strictly of competitors has been appointed to play a major role in a court-assisted corporate reorganization.

Pennzoil, whose $10.3 billion claim makes it by far Texaco's largest creditor, heads the list of oil companies named to the competitors' committee. The second committee of 19 unsecured creditors includes banks, insurance companies, non-oil corporations and the Getty Museum.

After a sometimes heated 90-minute initial meeting of the two groups to choose chairmen — a meeting that was closed to the press — Metropolitan Life was named interim chairman of the general creditors committee. A second meeting of the committee is scheduled Tuesday at the Metropolitan Life offices in New York.

The competitors' group was unable to select a chairman and also will meet again Tuesday.

The unusual arrangement is the trustees' solution to a thorny problem that threatened to stall the reorganization of America's eighth-largest industrial corporation: What role to give Texaco's nemesis, Pennzoil. Texaco has charged that Pennzoil's refusal to negotiate an out-of-court settlement of their $10.3 billion legal war over the rights to Getty Oil provoked Texaco's bankruptcy filing on April 12.

A creditors' committee helps advise the trustee and the judge in a bankruptcy. Ordinarily, there is only one committee. But in such complicated bankruptcy cases as Manville's, whose 1982 filing for Chapter 11 protection from the burden of billions of dollars in asbestos-injury claims marked an unprecedented use of the bankruptcy laws, there are sometimes several creditors' committees formed.

What is unusual about the Texaco arrangement, bankruptcy lawyers said, is the formation of an all-competitors' committee.

Texaco was pleased with the arrangement, as was Jones, who said he wishes he could take credit for the idea. It was devised, he said, by someone else in the trustee's office.

Pennzoil, while not challenging the trustee's decision, greeted it cautiously.

Jones "did something unusual, as he said," Michael J. Crames, Pennzoil's bankruptcy lawyer, said after the committee members were named. "We're going to be asking a lot of questions about this."

Both Pennzoil and Texaco had been canvassing creditors for nearly two weeks — Pennzoil seeking a major voice in the case and Texaco arguing that Pennzoil's role should be limited lest it unfairly gain proprietary information about the legal battle.

By separating the competitors from other creditors, the trustee in effect gave Texaco permission to give "one set of information to one group and another (set) to the other," said a Texaco spokesman who called the decision "a good sign."

Jones said any protests by either group about the type of information either side receives from Texaco would be settled by Bankruptcy Judge Howard Schwartzberg. He is overseeing the case from White Plains, New York, where Texaco is based.

The rationale behind this arrangement, he said, wasn't to give Pennzoil and the other oil companies to whom Texaco owes money a lesser role in the case. Rather, he said, it was to quickly get the representatives of Texaco's more than 20,000 creditors talking about the substantive issues of the case instead of dwelling on whether Pennzoil's claim is valid.

When the two sides last met at the bargaining table, Texaco offered to settle for about $2 billion, less than half the amount Pennzoil said it would accept.

In addition to Pennzoil, the competitors' committee comprises Conoco, Mobil, Amoco, Tenneco, Marathon and Coastal Eagle.

On the second committee are what Jones called a representation of Texaco's creditors; not just its largest ones.

The members are Chase Manhattan Bank, Bankers Trust, Bank of America, Manufacturers Hanover, Irving Trust, Metropolitan Life Insurance, The Travelers, New York Life, Connecticut General, Citibank, IBM, Xerox, the Getty Museum, New York Telephone, Idaewoo Corp., Petroleum Helicopters, the equipment leasing firm Comdisco, the William Esty advertising firm and the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers International Union.

PARTY AT ALCATRAZ — Some of the 600 investment bankers and high-tech executives dine on "Broadway" in the main prison block of Alcatraz Island Monday night at an invitation-only party hosted by a San Francisco investment banking firm. Crystal And China Replace Tin Cups At Alcatraz Party

By JACK SCHREIBMAN
Associated Press Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The clink of crystal and china replaced the clatter of tin in Alcatraz mess halls as the pinstripe set did time on "The Rock" before escaping — something Al Capone and "Machine Gun" Kelly never could do.

"My God, when you eliminate these tables, you really can't imagine what it's like coming in here and they close the door behind you," Barry Douglass of Los Angeles said Monday night as 600 executives dined and toured the island in San Francisco Bay that once housed some of America's toughest prisoners.

The guests heard an eight-piece band and saw a laser light show on a mess-hall wall where the last breakfast menu, from March 1963, was still hanging. But the high-tech executives and institutional money managers didn't have to worry about choking down prison coffee. Hambrecht & Quist, the San Francisco investment banking firm which threw the $72,000 bash, sprung for spinach salad, roast quail with chanterelles and lime sauce, risotto with porcini, vegetables and white-chocolate-and-macadamia-nut torte with creme Anglaise.

Barges transported $11,000 in lighting equipment, dozens of portable heaters, toilets, furniture, thousands of feet of extension cord, 4,000 pounds of food, and hundreds of gallons of fresh water for the party.

And don't forget the wine — the first time, according to the National Park Service, that alcohol has been served legally on the island. The $72,000 didn't cover the cost of rangers who oversaw the party.

Bill Hambrecht, Hambrecht & Quist's chief officer, said he approved of Alcatraz for the party — part of the firm's 15th annual technology conference — to get away from the ordinary.

"It's a bit far out," he said. "But we work these people hard. They talk business for four straight days, and it's important to go out at least one night and have a lot of fun."

Howard Levitt, spokesman for the park service, which administers the former federal penitentiary as a national park, said the party was an experiment to determine the feasibility of such events for the future.

Spoma Mattson, one of the event's chief planners, said the bash had a certain timeliness because it comes "at a time when some Wall Streeters are facing sentences in federal penitentiaries."

The partygoers ran into the cavelike detention cells in the infamous "D" Block, and later had supper at tables right outside the steel bars. Sixty tables had been set for 10 guests each.

"What an existence. How could they live in there," said Gary Haroian of Boston, peering into 7-by-4½-by-7-foot solitary-confinement cells.

Guests listened closely to the lectures of Frank Heaney who, at 21, was the youngest guard ever to serve on the island.

During dinner, actors staged loud fights between "guards" and "inmates," belting one another and dashing up and down corridors. During dessert, the actors staged a breakout, rolling around the floors, smacking each other and climbing the barred walls.

Guests peered through the barred mess-hall windows at the view of San Francisco that convicts must have seen while serving time on "The Rock," a 20-acre outcrop where only scrub and low grass grow naturally.

Bone-chilling fogs whip among the decaying buildings. Treacherous currents and riptides swirl around Alcatraz in each tide. Sharks are not unknown in the bay, where the water is between 55 and 60 degrees.

Alcatraz opened in 1934, and for 29 years was the meanest prison in America, housing such criminals as Capone, Robert "Birdman" Stroud and George "Machine Gun" Kelly.

Leaders Of CIA Protest Praise Police For Conduct During Demonstration

McLEAN, Va. (AP) — Most of the 553 people arrested in the first mass protest ever to occur outside CIA headquarters face $50 fines, and protest leaders praised police for their handling of the demonstration.

The events Monday in this Washington, D.C., suburb evoked some memories of the anti-war protests of the 1960s as the demonstrators, protesting Reagan administration policies in Central America and southern Africa, blocked roadways, sang, chanted slogans, passed out pamphlets and waved placards.

Except for a few minor scuffles, the event was nonviolent.

"These are just regular old people," Officer D.A. Stopper of the Fairfax County police said, comparing the protest with the "May Day" disruptions of 1971 when hundreds of thousands of Vietnam war protesters came to Washington.

CIA spokeswoman Kathy Pherson said it was the first big protest she knew of at the headquarters since it opened 25 years ago in this quiet suburban area.

The Monday protest capped a weekend gathering of at least 75,000 people in the capital.

Daniel Ellsberg, the former Pentagon employee whose activism included leaking the Pentagon Papers to the press, said the peace movement should have begun targeting the CIA 30 years ago.

"This building is filled with people who know what they're doing is wrong," said the Vietnam-era activist, who returned to the main gate after being detained briefly. Ellsberg, who faces a court appearance in June, praised police handling of the protest.

"They're very gentle and making it very easy for those of us getting summonses," echoed William J. Price, director of World Peacemakers, a Washington activist group.

The U.S. Park Service said that Fairfax County police, responsible for the south gate at the sprawling, tree-lined installation, arrested 355 people.

The U.S. Park Police, with jurisdiction over the north gate, arrested 183 people. Another 15 were taken into custody at a third gate by the Federal Protective Service.

Demonstrators sat down on roadways leading to the spy headquarters, preventing vehicle access.

There were cheers for the protesters as they were carted off in police vans and, as the demonstration wound down, cheers for the restraint exercised by the police.

Most of those arrested were charged with obstruction of passage, a misdemeanor carrying a $50 fine.

Park Police spokesman K.C. Perry said those who scuffled with police would be charged with disorderly conduct and disobeying a police officer, as well as demonstrating without a permit.

One Body Discovered In Rubble

BRIDGEPORT, Conn. (AP) — Rescue workers toiled for the fifth straight day today in a race against the clock to find any of 12 missing men alive beneath the rubble of a collapsed apartment building.

"They're all saying there is hope, but as each hour passes chances are diminishing," Mayor Thomas Bucci said Monday night.

The body of crane operator Albert William Ritz, 59, of Stamford was pulled from the wreckage Monday evening, raising the number of known dead in Thursday's L'Ambiance Plaza disaster to 16, Bucci said.

Funerals for two of the dead were held Monday, and three funerals were set for today.

A state official said the architectural firm for the project, TPM Architectural Inc., is not licensed to practice in Connecticut, although some of its principals are. The Hartford Courant reported today.

James F. Carey, the Department of Consumer Protection's director of licensing and administration, also said the license for engineer James O'Kon, whose Atlanta firm handled structural engineering for the project, had expired Jan. 31, the newspaper said.

Neither O'Kon nor officials of the architectural firm returned the newspaper's calls for comment.

The last of 41 survivors was pulled out of the wreckage the day of the collapse, and hopes of finding more dimmed Monday as rescue workers removed tons of concrete and steel.

"We're reaching the 11th hour," said Jonathan Best, Bridgeport's director of emergency services. "After nine days, the chances of somebody surviving are minimal."

The search will be treated as a rescue operation until at least Saturday, Bucci said.

"The morale is high but the people are tired and sometimes they can begin to get frustrated," Best said.

"We're still hoping," added Bucci.

He said his city of 142,600 has shown admirable spirit through the worst construction accident in state history. "That coming together will stand the city in good stead beyond this."

Gov. William O'Neill said he would declare a statewide day of mourning once all the missing are accounted for.

Prosecutor Paints Goetz As 'Emotionally Troubled'

NEW YORK (AP) — Bernhard Goetz is "an emotional powder keg" who shot four youths in a subway car not because they were about to mug him but because of his rigid concept of justice, a prosecutor charged.

"The defendant tried to kill them, not as an act of self-preservation, but because in the defendant's mind this was right and this was just," Assistant District Attorney Gregory Waples said as Goetz's trial on attempted murder charges began Monday.

Defense attorney Barry Slotnick said Goetz had a right to do what he did more than two years ago because he was under attack.

"Bernhard Goetz was set upon by four seasoned, sophisticated, educated street predators," Slotnick said. "And every gesture had meaning." He said Goetz, the victim of a 1981 mugging and beating, knew the signs of attack.

"Those punks that surrounded Bernhard Goetz got what the law allows," Slotnick said. "Under the law and under the facts of the case, deadly physical force was appropriate."

The trial before Justice Stephen Crane in Supreme Court, the state's trial-level court, was to resume today.

Goetz, a 39-year-old electrical engineer, is charged with attempted murder, assault, reckless endangerment and gun possession in the Dec. 22, 1984, shootings of the four youths.

The shootings sparked a national debate on vigilantism and self-defense.

Goetz said he shot the youths because they were trying to rob him when they surrounded him and demanded $5.

Some of the teen-agers maintain they were panhandling; but one, Darrell Cabey, has said the four were about to rob Goetz because he "looked like easy bait."

Monday, onlookers filled every seat, and lined up to enter the courtroom.

Waples said he would introduce a videotape that shows Goetz did not shoot to save himself but did so as an expression of the rage of "an emotionally troubled man."

"He was an incendiary mixture of raw nervous tension, rigid opinion and explosive anger, an emotional powder keg one spark away from a violent explosion," Waples said.

By firing his unlicensed .38-caliber revolver at Cabey, Troy Canty, Barry Allen and James Ramseur, all 19 at the time, Goetz committed "vicious, even sadistic acts of violence," the prosecutor said.

Waples also said he would call at least one of Goetz's victims to testify, but not Cabey, who was paralyzed from the waist down and suffered brain damage from a subsequent coma. Waples said Cabey is not competent to testify.

Walsh Firm Linked To Shippers

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — The law firm that handled the registration of two aircraft used to ship missiles to Iran employs the independent counsel investigating the Iran-Contra affair, it was reported.

But the counsel, Lawrence E. Walsh, denies any conflict of interest.

"I don't have anything to do with it at all," Walsh said in a telephone interview Monday night from his hotel in Washington, D.C.

The firm of Crowe & Dunleavy registered three Boeing 707s belonging to Southern Air Transport of Miami, radio station KTOK and The Oklahoma Gazette reported, citing records from the Federal Aviation Administration's registration office here.

Two of the aircraft were later used to carry weapons to the Mideast as part of the sale of U.S. arms to Iran, said the report carried Monday by KTOK and scheduled for publication today in the weekly Gazette.

Walsh said he does not handle aircraft registrations or title searches for the firm, and that Crowe & Dunleavy's work for Southern Air would not represent a conflict of interest for him in his probe.

"There is none," he said. "Suppose

I drew a contract for you to buy a house. I send you the bill and you pay me. That's the end of our relationship."

"If a person wants to buy an aircraft and borrow the money, the bank will usually call us and we'll search the title... then we'll give the bank an opinion," Walsh said. "The lender gets our bill. There's no relationship that goes on."

Congress To Scrutinize Network News Cutbacks

By DAVID CROOK
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

HOLLYWOOD — In a sign that Washington's laissez-faire attitude toward television may be ending, Congress begins taking a very public look today at the impact of recent financial cutbacks on network news operations.

Rep. Edward J. Markey, D-Mass., making his debut as chairman of the telecommunications, consumer protection and finance subcommittee of the House Energy and Commerce Committee, opens three days of hearings that will see all three network news presidents and their bosses take the hot seat to discuss the impact that network takeovers, mergers and belt-tightening measures have had during the past year.

Today's opening round was to feature testimony by noted liberal economist John Kenneth Galbraith and media critic Ben Bagdikian. The outspoken former CBS News president Fred Friendly and the more soft-spoken former NBC chairman Julian Goodman were also on today's agenda.

There is no indication that Markey expects any legislation to emerge from the hearings. Indeed, subcommittee aide Larry Irving said the panel is exercising its oversight function in an effort to determine "what's going on" in the medium that informs upwards of 68 million Americans nightly.

"The purpose of the subcommittee hearings," Irving said, is "really just a greater understanding of the forces impacting networks and network news operations."

Irving said the subcommittee is interested in studying technological and competitive pressures along with the new network financial structure.

Still, the hearings indicate that after six years of deregulation under the Reagan administration, television may be in store for closer scrutiny by this Democratic Congress.

One subcommittee member, Rep. Dennis E. Eckart, D-Ohio, had called for the hearings last March, saying that "we are deeply concerned that with the rush to (network) profits, the public interest has been trampled."

CBS Chief Executive Laurence Tisch, who is scheduled to testify Thursday, already has expressed opposition to the hearings. "I believe it is inappropriate for Congress to inquire into the nature and adequacy of our news operation," he told the National Association of Broadcasters.

For the most part, however, the networks' public posture has been to welcome the congressional inquiry.

Bud Rukeyser, NBC vice president in charge of corporate communications in New York, said, "We're a very open institution and think it's perfectly appropriate for Congress to look at what we do. We're happy to go down and testify."

Privately, however, some TV officials are calling the hearings an exercise in congressional "headline hunting," a point reinforced by the subcommittee's insistence that no legislation is being considered.

Furthermore, say some network officials, the upheavals in the business are now for the most part over, and the subcommittee may be indulging in a case of congressional barn-door closing long after the network horses have galloped.

The subcommittee is "not looking at trying to undo what's been done," insisted staffer Irving.

Actor Bill Macy Cools His Style For New Role

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bill Macy, who used to play the loud-mouthed husband on "Maude," says he had to cool down his style when he accepted the role as the meddling father in NBC's "Nothing in Common."

"I had to come down a lot," he said. "When I did 'Maude' for Norman Lear he wanted us to play everything for the second balcony. Bea Arthur and I were stage actors, so there was no problem."

"For 'Nothing in Common' I found a new ground that lets me do a lot of comedy and still be real. Which I think is why they hired me." He laughed and added, "I do my best acting getting hired. I auditioned on Thursday, got an OK on Friday and went to work on Tuesday."

"I find that quite natural. I never object to auditioning, although some actors consider it beneath them."

Macy stars with Todd Waring in the comedy series "Nothing in Common," which is based on the movie starring Jackie Gleason and Tom Hanks. Garry Marshall, who had a hand in creating "Happy Days," "Laverne and Shirley" and "Mork and Mindy," directed the movie and is executive producer of the limited spring series.

The show made its bow on Thursday, April 2, and the last of the seven episodes will be broadcast on May 14.

The show's fate will be known on May 13, when NBC announces its fall schedule.

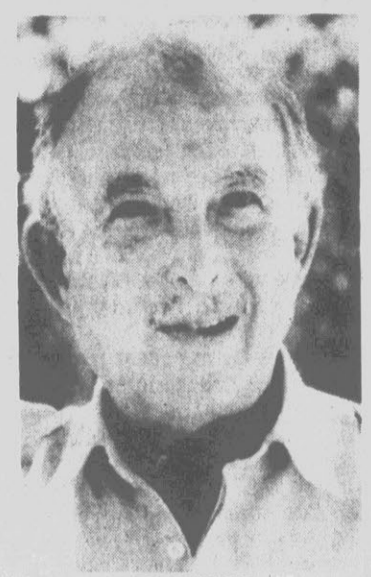

"They'd be stupid not to pick it up," Macy said. The show ranked 14th in the A.C. Nielsen Co. ratings for the week of April 13-19.

"When you get older you get a better feeling for the material and the vibes. This show has a great human quality to it, thanks to Garry Marshall. It's not joke, joke. It's not cartoons."

Waring plays David Basner, a young advertising executive who is on his own until his father shows up. Macy is Max Basner, recently retired and recently divorced and suddenly lonely and inactive. He was too busy to spend time with David when he was growing up and now he wants to atone.

The show also stars Wendy Kilbourne, Elizabeth Bennett, Mona Lyden, Bill Applebaum, Patrick Richwood and Billy Wirth.

"We handle the relationship between the father and son much more lightly than in the picture," said Macy. "I'm not sick like Jackie Gleason was. I think the only similarity is that we're the same age. And Todd Waring isn't doing Tom Hanks. He's doing the role as he sees it. I didn't even see the picture until a few days ago."

BILL MACY

"I meddle in his life. I have a lot of time on my hands. I was a toy salesman. Jackie was a clothing salesman. I was on the road. Willie Loman? You're looking at him."

That reference to the lead character in Arthur Miller's "Death of a Salesman" reminded Macy of an incident in 1955.

"I was a young actor in New York and I saw an ad in the newspaper," he said. "It was a salesman looking for someone to drive him through Indiana and Illinois and carry his bags into the stores. I took the job for two months for $60 a week. I also took along a book of plays."

"One night we were in a motel room and he was writing up his order. I was in bed reading 'Death of a Salesman' and crying. It was right there. This man said the same things Willie Loman said. I'd seen what he was going through."

Macy starred in a number of plays in New York until producer Norman

Lear brought him out in 1972 to play the husband, Walter Findlay, in "Maude."

"I didn't want to come out," he said. "Before that, maybe I'd done a few lines in 'The Producer' and 'Naked City.' I was a stage actor."

"Nothing in Common" is Macy's third series. His second, "Hanging In," which came soon after "Maude" left the air in 1978, lasted only four episodes. The show went through various mutations and had several other leads before it ended up as "Hanging In." Originally it was Bea Arthur, as Maude, becoming a congresswoman. Then it became John Amos as the congressman in "Onward and Upward." Then Cleavon Little as "Mr. Dooley," then "Mr. Dugan." Black politicians in Washington objected so much that it finally became "Hanging In," with Macy as a university president.

Macy is married to actress Samantha Harper. "We met during 'Oh Calcutta,'" a long-running play with heavy doses of nudity.

"I said I was attracted by her smile," Macy said. "I once said something else and she told me to never say that again."

Coin a Face
 The Bank of China recently released a new series of gold coins honoring the nation's most famed animal — the panda. In 1917, Henry Ford minted a coin honoring himself. The coin resembled the Lincoln penny, except that Ford's face was on it. "In God We Trust" was replaced by "Help the Other Fellow." Ford planned to give the coins to customers as a goodwill gesture. He ordered production of a million. But because of the outbreak of World War I, only a few were made.

DO YOU KNOW — In what year did Henry Ford introduce the Model T?
MONDAY'S ANSWER — In Morse code, three dots-three dashes-three dots is the distress signal "SOS."

Horoscope From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY April 29
GENERAL TENDENCIES: It's one of those days when you would be wise to follow through with the practical ideas you've started on. Anything new could have countless unfortunate ramifications.
ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Pay more attention to the smaller details of practical affairs. Visit a good friend tonight for a good time.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Concentrate on personal matters that can be profitable. Show special thoughtfulness to your friends.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Contact your friends and see if there is anything helpful you can do for them that makes them happy.
MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Study your personal wishes and find the best way to attain them. Make a practical plan for best results.
LEO (July 22 to August 21): Delve right into outside activities and handle them efficiently. Enjoy the feeling of satisfaction you have.
VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Study your routines well and do whatever will make them run more smoothly now and in the future.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Go over your bills and see how you can handle them right so they are soon behind you.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): You have to use tact with a recalcitrant partner if you are able to put your points across.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Persevere if you aim to complete your duties. Discuss the details of some project with co-workers.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): You can enjoy yourself more at hobbies by practicing. Show more devotion and feel more sure of yourself.
AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): It's a good day to discuss financial affairs at home, but use tact and avoid arguments thusly.
PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Handle delayed communications and they are soon behind you. Be happy with the one you love.
IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he, or she, will seem to be slow at studies or movements, but is only eager to be thorough. Be sure to teach that too much deliberation will see lesser persons get away with the prizes your progeny desires. There can be a fine salesperson here, so educate this one.

"The Stars impel; they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

The bidding:
 South West North East
 1 ♠ 2 ♠ 3 ♠ 4 ♠
 Pass Pass 6 ♠ Pass Pass Pass

Opening lead: King of ♠
 There is a time for everything under the sun. That includes a time to win a trick and, perhaps more importantly, a time to lose one. North judged well to bid the club slam even though there was a possibility the one club opening might have been made on a three-card suit. He knew that South had to have a diamond control for his opening bid, and East-West's vigorous competitive bidding in spades greatly increased the chances of the club opening having been made on a genuine suit.

 After the lead of the king of spades, declarer could count only 11 winners. The 12th would have to come from either a club finesse, unlikely in view of West's preempt, or from ruffing a spade. All is well if trumps are 3-2, but what if they should break 4-1?

forcing you to ruff the third spade in hand.
 The way to maintain control is to lead the jack of trumps at trick two! If East ducks, continue with the ten of trumps. If he wins this time, you are firmly in command. East's best defense is to return a heart, but you win in hand with the ace, ruff a spade in dummy and cash the ace of clubs. Then you return to your hand with a diamond to draw the last trump and claim the rest. It doesn't matter if East holds up the king twice. In that case you cash the ace of clubs, enter your hand with a diamond, ruff a spade and proceed to run diamonds. East can take the master trump whenever he wishes, but that is the only trick for the defense.

EVEN THE MOST DEMANDING HOMEOWNER'S CRITERIA are surpassed with Rustic Shingle intelligent aluminum roofing.

Making an intelligent roofing decision

Intelligent homeowners want their homes to be sound investments. As a result, they use carefully-set criteria to choose the best building materials. Until now, however, roofing materials were thought to be generic and even the smartest homeowners made blind choices.

Classic Products, Inc.'s Rustic Shingle ends all that by giving homeowners an intelligent roofing material which surpasses even the most demanding criteria.

Rustic Shingle, designed to have the sought-after look of hand-split cedar shakes, is manufactured of high-grade aluminum to provide armor-like protection for a home's most vulnerable spot — its roof.

Rustic Shingle's limited 40-year warranty eliminates roof maintenance worries and enhances the home's value as an investment. The available eight colors include a Weathered Wood Series to complement all architectural styles.

The strong panels install directly over most existing roofs, reducing installation cost and providing long-lasting, weather-tight protection.

Homeowners also benefit from Rustic Shingle's ability to reduce energy costs. An independent solar research team received an award from the U.S. Department of Energy for its work in determining that aluminum is an effective barrier against roof heat infiltration. As a result, homes protected by Rustic Shingle are naturally cooler in summer and warmer in winter.

Rustic Shingle reduces summer ceiling heat gain by up to 40 percent. A Victoria, Texas, homeowner had a 20 percent reduction on his total electric bill between June and July, after installing the aluminum roofing.

Even though the weather got hotter, he maintained his home at 76 degrees with substantially less air conditioning.

Further benefits are provided by Rustic Shingle's fire protection. It has been the choice roofing for over 25 years in areas prone to outdoor fires. Rustic Shingle carries a U.L. Class A fire rating and is highly respected by fire safety officials and insurance underwriters.

Because of its deep texture, Rustic Shingle is not damaged by moderate hail. This texture, combined with felt underlayment, prevents rain and hail from causing a noise problem.

Long-life durability, distinctive looks, energy savings and fire protection: Rustic Shingle meets all the criteria for the intelligent homeowner's intelligent roofing choice. Available internationally, Rustic Shingle has in-use experience on tens of thousands of homes.

For free information on making an intelligent roofing decision, write to Dept. M-9, Classic Products, Inc., P.O. Box 701, 299 Staunton St., Piqua, OH 45356.

With vinyl siding, you can cross house painting off list of springtime chores

It's almost springtime, a time when a young man or woman's fancy turns to love... walks in the park... softball games... house painting. House painting!

It's not a pretty thought. With all the enjoyable things a person can choose to do in the springtime, the tiresome job of house painting is probably at the bottom of the list.

That's why vinyl siding has grown to be the most popular siding material in America today. Each time this season rolls around, homeowners who have invested in vinyl siding find they have the time for the more pleasant joys springtime has to offer.

HOMEOWNERS WHO INVEST IN VINYL SIDING find that they can cross house painting off their list of tiresome springtime chores. To help homeowners find local reputable home remodelers, one vinyl siding manufacturer, Bird Incorporated, has instituted a Professional Vinyl Siding Contractor Certification Program that distinguishes the best craftsmen in the field.

Once vinyl siding is properly applied, it will give any house a freshly painted look with only a simple soap and water rinse.

Homeowners can enjoy many years of freedom from laborious upkeep. How many years? Major manufacturers like Bird Incorporated offer a lifetime warranty for standard and premium lines of vinyl siding.

Available in attractive wood-grain or smooth "brushed" finishes, solid vinyl siding is made of PVC (polyvinyl chloride) compound.

Its tough makeup means it cannot corrode or dent like aluminum, and will not chip, peel or rot like wood. Even deep scratches will not show, because the color is molded clear through.

Job only as good as contractor

Like many other major home improvements, having a house sided with solid vinyl siding is usually a substantial investment for the homeowner.

That is why it is important to select a professional home improvement contractor who uses quality materials from a reputable manufacturer.

A homeowner must be able to trust a contractor's workmanship. For, in nearly every case, the overall quality of the job is only as good as the craftsman applying the siding.

To help homeowners find local reputable home remodelers, Bird Incorporated instituted a Professional Vinyl Siding Contractor Certification Program that distinguishes the best craftsmen in the field.

Contractor Certification Program that distinguishes the best craftsmen in the field.

To qualify for certification, contractors must meet strict criteria for experience, application standards and code of ethics.

Contractors are re-certified each year, to make certain that they abide by the standards set forth by the manufacturer.

One example of the program is the fact that Bird-certified contractors must offer a two-year warranty on installation as a complement to Bird's lifetime product warranty.

Homeowners dealing with certified contractors are also assured of being provided with clear, written estimates by contractors who carry insurance coverage for worker's compensation, personal injury and property damage.

In addition, contractors will provide the names and addresses of satisfied customers for homeowners who may wish to inspect their work.

Making up your mind to have your home remodeled with vinyl siding will most likely be a once-in-a-lifetime decision. Make it wisely by choosing a craftsman who has been officially recognized by a major manufacturer for his professionalism and high standards.

Don't forget the four areas of energy efficiency when buying a home

Buying a home is the largest and most important investment decision most people ever make. And one of the most influential factors in that decision today is the energy efficiency of the house.

Why? Because by not considering the energy efficiency of a home, a prospective homeowner could make a costly mistake. Mortgages offering a low interest rate are no bargain if oversized cooling and heating bills chew up the gains.

When looking at homes, the CertainTeed Home Institute recommends prospective home buyers examine four basic areas of energy-efficient construction before making a decision.

These are: 1) Insulation, caulking and weatherstripping, 2) storm windows and doors or double or triple-pane windows, 3) an efficient cooling and heating system, and 4) efficient lighting and appliances.

Insulation, caulking, weatherstripping

Attic insulation is the most important thing to look for when evaluating the energy efficiency of a home. Check the attic (including the attic door). If it has 6" or less of fiber glass insulation, it should be upgraded to the recommended level of insulation for that geographic area.

After attics, sidewalls are the second most important area to check for insulation. Since you can't see inside to determine how much insulation exists, press your hand on the wall.

If it feels hot in the summer it may need more insulation. Properly insulated walls will not only help save energy, but improve comfort in your home.

Next, check for adequate levels of insulation under floors and crawlspaces.

Finally, make sure all window and door facings, corner trim and siding joints and roof eave joints are caulked and weatherstripped to avoid air conditioning loss.

Windows/doors

Standard windows and doors can lose approximately five to eight times more energy than an insulated wall area of the same size. Therefore, it's important to check for storm windows and doors. They can help reduce energy loss by as much as 25 percent.

If the home doesn't have storm windows, look for double or triple-paned glass. It offers double and triple the thermal efficiency of a regular window.

Central heating and cooling systems

The efficiency of a central heating and cooling system will have a major impact on annual energy bills.

Check the efficiency rating on the furnace and boiler. It should have an AFUE (Annual Fuel Utilization Efficiency) of 80 percent or higher.

If you're looking at an older furnace, check to see if it runs smoothly or quietly. Look for oil stains and signs of wear. Ask how old it is. The average furnace can be expected to last about 25-30 years.

If the home has a heat pump, check its Heating Seasonal Performance Factor (HSPF) rating. A HSPF rating of more than 7 is excellent. A Seasonal Energy Efficiency Ratio (SEER) rating measures a heat pump's cooling efficiency. The higher the SEER, the more efficient it is at cooling. A SEER rating over 9 is excellent.

Lighting and appliances

The lighting and appliances in a home, to a lesser degree, also affect the amount of energy consumed, so look for efficient ones. A good way to evaluate efficiency of major appliances is to look for the bright yellow and black ENERGYGUIDE label to help you determine estimated annual operating costs. Look also for fluorescent fixtures.

Clean Care Chat

By: Glenn F. Corey

DO-IT-YOURSELF?

Everyone loves a money-saving bargain; and many energetic homeowners, who've yet to invest in finer furnishings, anticipate professional results without paying the professional's price. Not trying to duplicate the job of the old pro, mind you, they simply have other budget priorities right now.

This article is dedicated to those who have the energy and determination to "do it yourself".

Consider these very practical points in your carpet-cleaning procedures: (1). Don't tackle too much at once. Remember, an aching back Monday morning hardly justifies the few dollars saved. (2). Don't empty the rooms of furniture. Simply slide each piece out, clean underneath, and replace it with triple-folded aluminum foil under each leg to prevent permanent furniture stains. Clean around flat pieces, since lack of air-circulation underneath results in mildew, odor and severe staining. (3). Prepare your carpet in advance. Before renting equipment, thoroughly vacuum, concentrating on wall-edge areas. Also, remove breakables and small furniture items from the area. (4). Use about half the chemical recommended. The results may not be as dramatic and the chemist may starve; but you'll save money, and there'll be far less sticky residue to create resoiling. (5). When shampooing, provide uniform detergent lubrication. Otherwise permanent distortion of pile yarns will result. (6). Don't overwet! When using a "steam" machine, be sure to follow-up all wet (spraying) strokes with careful, dry-vacuum strokes. Most distress calls to professionals relate to overwet backings and subsequent odor problems. (7). Provide air-circulation to expedite drying. Overhead fans, portable fans and overnight use of the home's central blower are strongly recommended.

Never hesitate to call a professional if problems arise. A true pro will be happy to provide free advice which could prevent ruining your carpet. Then, in later years, you'll know who your friends are when it's time for professional cleaning! ©GFC 1987

Solar screens:

The solution to keeping cooling bills down, this summer

There's a quick and easy way to help keep down your cooling bills this summer. The solution is SunScreen® solar screens.

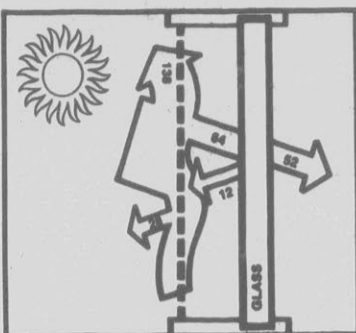

When used in place of regular insect screens, these unique fiberglass screens keep up to 70 percent of the sun's heat and glare from hitting your windows and entering your home. This means less work for your air conditioner and lower cooling costs.

The concept of these screens is relatively simple. They have a unique and patented ribbed-weave construction (U.S. Pat. No. 4,002,183) when compared to the more uniform and open mesh of regular insect screens.

This mesh is just enough to stop most of the sun's heat, while still allowing daylight to come in. It's a lot like sitting under a shade tree on a hot summer day.

The SunScreen works exactly like the tree's leaves, except that with the screens in a fixed position on the outside of your windows you are protected all day long, regardless of the sun's angle.

SunScreen solar screens are not really that new. They were selected by energy experts for use on The Energy Saving KEEPING THE SUN'S HOT RAYS away from your windows and glass doors, SunScreen® solar screens work like a shade tree.

House at both the 1982 and the 1984 World's Fairs.

Solar screens have been popular for years in such hot climates as Arizona, Southern California and Texas. In fact, some state and local building ordinances in these states are now requiring some type of shading on the west, east and south-facing windows on all new home construction.

SunScreen solar screens are also recommended and endorsed by many utility companies in the South and West.

There are lots of additional benefits to having SunScreen solar screens, too... for example, improved daytime privacy.

Homeowners report they can leave shades or drapes open during the day and still enjoy a large measure of privacy. They can see out but outsiders cannot easily see in.

Since most of the sun's ultraviolet rays are stopped, fading of carpets, drapes and furnishings is also greatly reduced when SunScreen solar screens are installed.

Unlike films or other types of sun control products, solar screens work with the windows open or closed, a nice feature during those times of the year when you want windows open for ventilation. Gentle breezes enter through the open mesh. Plus, SunScreen solar screens make interiors more comfortable by reducing glare from water, pavement, adjacent buildings or other shiny objects. The SunScreen fabric comes in a choice of several colors to blend with any type of building exterior.

If your home has storm windows, you are already benefiting from the winter savings storm windows provide. By adding SunScreen to your home, you can protect your home from solar heat gain year-round.

Also, the payback period will be considerably less for storm windows equipped with full-length solar screens.

One important thing to remember... to be really effective, solar screens should cover the entire window. If you have half-screens, you will need a new frame or an installation method that will allow you to cover both the top and bottom sashes.

Many homeowners prefer to have SunScreen solar screens installed by a local dealer/installer. To find one in your area look in the telephone book under "Screens - Door and Window" or "Storm Windows and Doors."

Chances are your local screen shop is already familiar with SunScreen solar screens. If you have full screens, ask them about reusing your existing screen frames.

The SunScreen solar screen material is also available at many leading hardware and home centers, and replacing the screens is not a difficult do-it-yourself task. Some stores now also offer the materials needed to make new screen frames, if you have half-screens or no screens at all.

SunScreen solar screens work great over windows that don't open, too, such as large picture windows, skylights or even greenhouse areas.

The payback period for SunScreen solar screens should be three years or less, and that's based on utility rates that are probably going to rise.

Wallprinting safely covers any surface at less than half the cost of wallpaper

A California designer was faced with the time-consuming chore of looking through book after book of wallpaper samples in order to locate an acceptable pattern in just the right color combination. An architect for a large business office complex was confronted with a vast expanse of bare walls and minimal budget. Both situations posed potential problems which were solved with wallprinting.

According to Bill Edholm, who acquired the worldwide rights to Solution To Wallpaper seven years ago and has put over $500,000 into developing the process, wallprinting achieves the same results as wallpaper at less than one-half the cost.

Using what looks like a hand held printing press filled with one to three colors of paint, the professional wallprinter applies a design directly to wall surfaces.

The designs — which can be applied to even textured and grass cloth walls — are washable, durable and dry to the touch in 15 minutes. They are available in over 1,600 colors — and, yes, the final result really does look like wallpaper.

A pressing problem

Because of the current liability insurance problems facing design professionals, many are seeking building materials which are not considered hazardous by government research and regulatory agencies, consumer groups and environmental organizations.

"In 1984, a total of 13 insurance companies sold policies for design professional liability," Edholm said. "Today there are only two such companies in the entire country. An architect is liable 10 years after a building is constructed. These people have to be careful."

Solution To Wallpaper uses only top-quality water-based latex paint in its process, avoiding controversial substances such as vinyl chloride, a major component of many wallpaper products, he said.

"Gases from burning synthetics were responsible for most of the deaths in major fires such as the MGM Grand Hotel fire in Las Vegas, a tragedy that resulted in many deaths and lawsuits.

Today's caulks, sealants repair winter's ravages

The smart homeowner knows that spring is the time to repair the ravages Old Man Winter has wreaked on your home. A few hours invested leisurely during the warm weather can easily save twice that amount of time in the fall — and perhaps save money as well.

Red Devil, Inc., the Union, N.J.-based manufacturer of tools and chemical products for do-it-yourself (DIY) home repairs and remodeling, advises that one of your primary tasks should be repairing and sealing the many openings in your home (there are more of them than you think!) that ice and rain might have exploited during winter.

What type of sealant should you use?

Generally speaking, the helpful folks at Red Devil say, quality in sealant products increases with price. There are, however, one or two exceptions.

There are many different types of caulks and sealants. The most common include:

- Latexes — These caulks feature easy cleanup with water in addition to good durability.
- Acrylics — One step up in toughness. Some, like Red Devil's LIFETIME® brand, have silicones added and boast substantial warranties. LIFETIME, for example, is guaranteed not to peel or crack as long as you own your home.
- Silicones — The premium sealant product, a favorite of contractors. Red Devil has plugged a gap in this lineup with its new CELULON™ Adhesive Sealant Products. The CELULON formulas, based on a completely new polymer, claim to offer silicone-like adhesion and sealing performance, while permitting painting and water cleanup, features not available with silicones, at a significantly lower price.

Three CELULON products, keyed to painting, building and plumbing applications, are available in hardware/home center outlets.

Where to seal

Take a hard, critical look at your home. Look for places where water, ice and wintry winds may have found and widened gaps or caused old caulk to crack.

- Typical problem areas include:
- Siding — Check the whole house for loose strips. Examine all corners and sections where siding joins windows, doors, porches, etc., for gaps that need to be sealed.
 - Windows and doors — Recaulking here in spring will save hours next fall.
 - Gutters and downspouts — Gutter leaks can cause major damage to homes. Caulk loose joints with a good adhesive sealant like CELULON.
 - Utility lines — Reseal wherever those lines enter the house. Don't forget dryer and kitchen range vents, too.
 - The attic — Spring is a good time to look for air leaks that might be defeating your careful insulation job, and seal them up tightly.

The moral is, take the time to make these repairs now. It will save last-minute fixes in the chill winds of fall.

"Our process is very well received by design professionals and property owners who are seeking positive alternatives to controversial hazardous decorating materials."

In 1981, Solution To Wallpaper was featured in Entrepreneur magazine's centerfold, "Hottest New Money-making Opportunity." Last year Entrepreneur publisher Chase Revel again featured the firm in his Bantam Press Book, 168 Businesses Anyone Can Start and Make a Lot of Money.

Retired hockey player Mike Toal and his partner wallprinted 26 hospitals in Canada last year, earning close to $100,000. High profits and low costs to clients are two reasons wallprinting appeals to entrepreneurs, Edholm said.

"People love you because you save them more than half the cost of buying a low to medium-grade wallpaper and having it professionally installed. Yet, after the initial purchase of training and equipment, all you pay for is paint."

Price for the Basic equipment and training package is $8,500. The package includes two sets of equipment with different-sized rollers, 50 pattern designs, ongoing assistance, business cards, brochures, photos, even a bookkeeping system.

Because of the high profitability and low overhead of the business, more than half of those purchasing training and equipment select the Professional package, which includes the Basic package plus two additional machines and 40 brand new patterns modeled after the most popular wallpaper designs.

Selling for $13,500, the package enables the new entrepreneur to have a minimum of four wallprinters trained and available for jobs. Additional patterns can be purchased as they are developed.

"This is definitely not a do-it-yourselfer," Edholm said. "If you don't have professional equipment and training, you'll spend all your profits painting out your mistakes." He said that selling equipment is not the firm's major business.

"We do it to spread the word about wallprinting. The money — and for me, the satisfaction — is in doing the work."

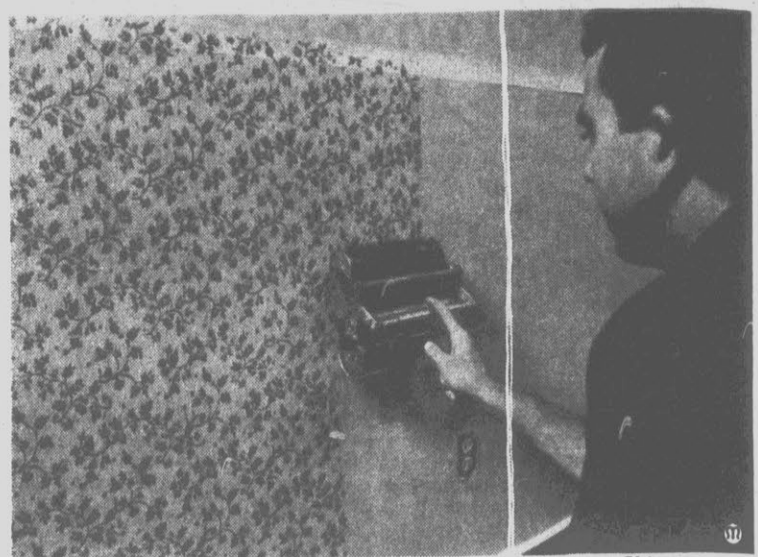

Because of its appeal to interior designers, the process was featured in two Southern California international design homes and will show up in the 1988 Seoul, Korea, Olympics for which the firm has created custom rollers.

"We know that what we have here is a safe and cost-efficient alternative to traditional wallcoverings, and we are currently involved in an extensive consumer awareness campaign," Edholm said.

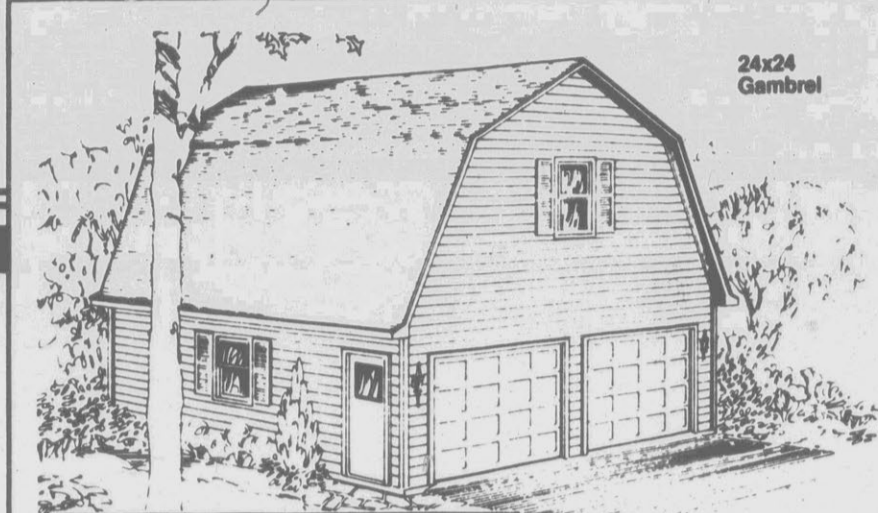

"The timing is right for this innovative process and, for a relatively small investment, there is tremendous income potential."

Performing furniture facelifts: Quick and easy-to-follow advice

While many homeowners concentrate on major repairs when it comes to home improvement, there's a simple way to make any home look 100 percent better.

Proper care and an occasional beauty treatment for wood furniture, paneling and kitchen cabinets can make a world of difference in how a home looks.

According to the makers of Old English® Furniture Polishes, there are simple steps to follow to improve the appearance and protect fine wood furniture.

In its 90-year history, Old English has made a tradition of protecting families' furniture investments. Here are tips from the experts on wood care:

1. Wood furniture has a complexion — heat and bright sun can make it dry out. The function of furniture polish is to protect the finish from scratching, provide water repellency, moisturize the wood to help keep it from cracking, and enhance the beauty of the wood grain.

Several times a year, it's a good idea to use an oil polish for moisture seal and to help conserve oils in the wood which may "steam out" over the years.

For weekly dusting, an aerosol works well; dry dusting can cause hairline scratching of the finish.

2. As furniture ages, it may become "checked" after long exposure to changing temperature and humidity. "Checking" is a natural phenomenon in which the smooth lacquered surface becomes disrupted by tiny lines and cracks.

Checking can make furniture more susceptible to water damage and, if untreated, further damage to the finish can result.

Oil polishes will seep through the cracks of the furniture to provide protection from spills and help keep the furniture looking great.

3. Furniture in a busy household can occasionally become scratched or damaged. There are many "home remedies" for covering scratches, from shoe polish to children's crayons.

James Peek, a New York antique dealer and furniture refinisher, recommends Old English Scratch Cover — a liquid polish designed especially for covering unsightly scratches that have broken the furniture's finish.

Using a clean cloth, apply a little Scratch Cover to the damaged area, then spread over the entire surface. Using another cloth, wipe dry and buff until the finish becomes lustrous.

The Scratch Cover actually seeps into the abrasion to hide it and protect the wood. Both light/medium and dark Scratch Covers are available from the makers of Old English.

Unless you have experience with furniture refinishing, it is probably better not to attempt to repair serious damage — deep abrasions, marking caused by liquids that have eaten through the finish or deep cigarette burns.

First try the Scratch Cover method. If the damage is still visible, consult a furniture repairperson, as some "do-it-yourself" remedies may cause even more unsightly damage than they fix. For valuable pieces, consult a furniture repairperson.

4. Wood paneling and kitchen cabinets can be forgotten in the regular routine of housecleaning. Yet, like any other wood surfaces, they are susceptible to the effects of heat, humidity and hot sun.

Use cream or oil polishes to rejuvenate and bring out the shine, protect and beautify. If damaged, Old English Scratch Cover can be used to hide nicks and scratches.

5. Finally, when polishing furniture, remember to use two clean cloths. Old T-shirts, flannel nightgowns or towels make good dust cloths; avoid synthetics, permanent press or any fabric with scratchy decoration.

Use the first cloth to apply the polish; wipe and buff the shine with the second. Polishes include a solvent to pick up soil and old polish. Keep the cloths clean to avoid redepositing what you've just picked up.

A fast and easy facelift for wood furniture can be a snap with the right polish and a few tips from the experts. And the soft shine of the wood furniture will make it look like you worked harder than you did!

How to shop for reputable contractor

When the time comes to replace the roof on your house, do you know what to do? Many people don't.

If you have to choose a roofing contractor, for instance, you'll want to pick one who is well qualified. You'll want one who has an established business in the community, who has a reputation for getting the work done on time, who backs up his work with service, and who is willing to provide customer and credit references.

One way to find a contractor, says the Asphalt Roofing Manufacturers Association, is to ask neighbors or friends who recently had their homes reroofed. Try to get the names of several.

ARMA says it's also a good idea to get more than one written estimate for comparison. Don't base your decision on price alone, however, and make sure all candidates are bidding on the basis of the same quality of materials and workmanship.

Before signing a contract, be certain the contractor is licensed and insured, and that the contract specifies the work to be done, materials to be used, completion dates, any warranties or guarantees of the contractor and roofing manufacturer, the removal of any waste materials, the final price and the method of payment.

Remember also that a professional contractor is an excellent source of information on how to use roofing to improve the looks of your home.

The roof, as the largest outdoor expanse, is the key to exterior decoration. A professional roofer is an expert in the art of color and roofing design as well as application.

He may suggest a new generation of prestigious, three-dimensional organic or fiber glass-based asphalt shingles that create a long-lasting roof with dramatic bold texture and a distinctive appearance.

Designed to last 25 years or more with little maintenance, these shingles come in attractive shades of browns and beiges that help relate a home to its environment, yet set it apart from other homes in the neighborhood.

Lawn Gypsum Creates Yards Healthy and Attractive

Sof'N-Soil® Lawn and Garden Gypsum, from United States Gypsum Company, conditions and loosens soil to allow more air, water and nutrients to reach roots and enhance growth.

A luxurious lawn and bountiful garden, the pride of every homeowner, can now be yours.

With Sof'N-Soil® Lawn and Garden Gypsum from United States Gypsum Company, you can transform heavy clay into open, "soft" soil. The days when your soil crusted in dry weather and puddled when it was wet are over.

Sof'N-Soil® Lawn and Garden Gypsum conditions your soil allowing more air, water and nutrients to reach roots throughout the year, enhancing deep root growth and better turf and garden development. In addition, less fertilizer and water are required for soil maintenance.

Gypsum also supplies plants with two essential nutrients, calcium and sulfate sulfur, and counteracts lawn damage from the toxic effects of excessive winter de-icing salt.

This natural soil conditioner is harmless to you and your plants and pets because it is noncaustic, non-toxic and ecologically safe. It will not significantly alter soil pH (acidity or alkalinity), and can be applied at any time. Recommended usage is 40-50 lbs. per 1000 square feet of lawn.

For a 12-page booklet explaining the uses and applications of Sof'N-Soil® Lawn and Garden Gypsum, write United States Gypsum Company, HIT, Dept. 122-72, 101 South Wacker Drive, Chicago, Illinois, 60606. Adding a new living area to your home need not be expensive or complicated

Imagine adding a new, spacious living area to your home without the high price, mess and delay associated with conventional construction.

With an insulated patio enclosure, you can have a high quality room addition in a few days instead of a few months and for approximately two thirds of the cost of a stick-built addition.

Your new living area can become the exercise room you have always wanted, or the room for the kids and their toys. You can design the space to become a den, a sun room or an expansion of your living and storage space.

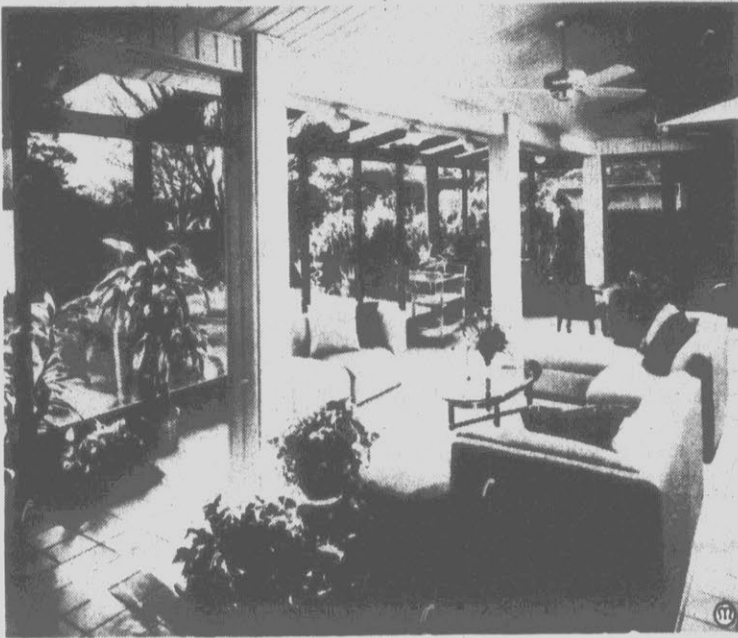

If you are a home gardener, use your new room as a greenhouse to extend the growing season, or install a spa for relaxing comfort and privacy. With an insulated patio enclosure, you don't have to sacrifice quality for affordability.

Insulated wall panels conform to color scheme

According to Alumax Building Specialties, maker of the Solera™ patio enclosure, American homeowners will add approximately 2.3 million patio enclosures each year.

As conventional construction costs rise, the insulated patio enclosure is becoming an attractive alternative to a room addition.

The unique Solera™ integrates several inches of insulation and aluminum extrusions, to form a highly energy-efficient enclosure system. You can choose from a wide variety of interior finishes and surfaces which will conform to most any color scheme or design you create. In addition, these wall panels require no painting or maintenance.

Let the sunshine in by adding a variety of energy-efficient windows which are sized and placed to your specifications.

Each window can be removed for cleaning, and an energy-efficient solar screen can be added.

Durable energy-efficient roofing system

The Weather/Breaker™ roofing system is a one piece envelope panel containing the roof, insulation and interior ceiling, all in one piece.

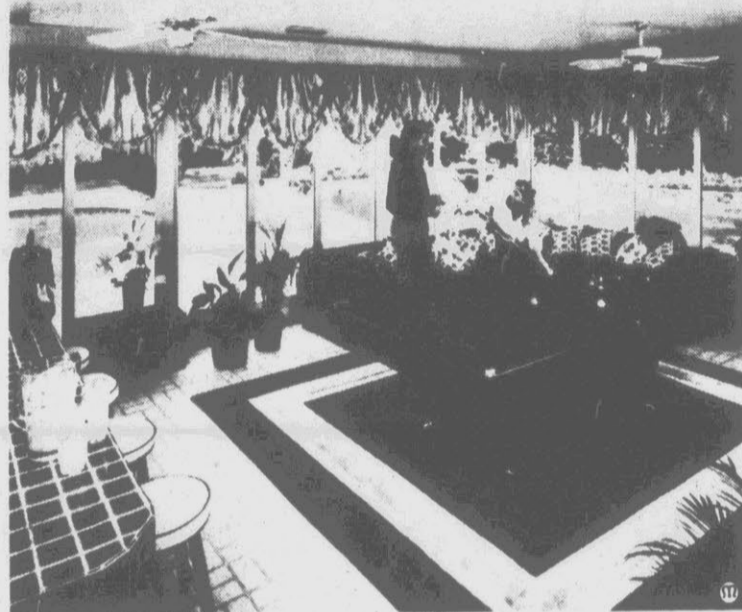

With an "R" value of 24, this steel or aluminum clad roof is impervious to hail or heavy rain, and is sturdy enough to walk on.

Each joint is literally locked in place and permanently sealed. Built-in drains prevent leakage and control water runoff, and optional exterior trim and perimeter guttering can be easily snapped into place. The three-inch energy-efficient rigid foam insulation helps maintain the desired temperature.

As with a conventional ceiling, you can add light to dark areas by installing an economical skylight or any other form of lighting, including track lighting and ceiling fans.

Add another entrance with a high quality door

Your Solera™ comes with a factory weather-stripped door, paneled to match your choice of interior and exterior colors. Available in eight to 10-foot heights, the door has an adjustable bottom sweep for carpeting and a fully weather-stripped threshold.

SPRINGTIME IS THE PERFECT TIME to build a patio enclosure. You can use your additional living space for a game room or for an extra entertainment area.

It's spring again, and time to clean carpets, upholstery

As spring cleaning time approaches, don't forget about your carpeting and upholstery.

After all, they represent two of the most expensive investments you've made in your home. And dull, dingy carpets and upholstery can ruin the appearance of an otherwise lovely house.

Even so, many homeowners go about traditional spring cleaning chores like washing their windows and walls without considering a thorough cleaning of their carpets and upholstery.

According to officials at Stanley Steemer Carpet Cleaner, that's a mistake. Winter, they say, takes a heavy toll on carpets and upholstery.

Dirt, mud and — in some climates — snow and salt, have been tracked in. Woodburning stoves and heating units leave a heavy residue of dirt.

In addition, homes are closed tight during cold winter months, leading to an accumulation of dust and odors. They may not be noticed right away but they build up.

As spring nears, thawing snow and frequent rain often cause new problems like the "browning of carpeting," resulting from excessive dampness.

According to Wes Dvorak, Training Director of Stanley Steemer, a thorough, professional carpet cleaning is needed this time of the year. This should reach deep into the carpet fibers and remove the dirt and spots.

Vacuuming alone, he says, isn't enough. A vacuum removes surface dirt and should be done twice weekly, more frequently in high traffic areas.

But no matter how often or how thoroughly you vacuum, soil accumulates. This dulls the color of the carpeting and builds up in the fibers.

Sand, gravel and mud tend to settle deep in the carpet. Along with greasy particles from cooking, smoking or tracked-in asphalt, they're very difficult to remove and can damage the carpet fiber or color.

Dvorak says a professional steam cleaning is the best way to remove the soil and restore the color. He adds that people aren't aware of the dramatic difference this type of cleaning can make on carpeting... and upholstery.

"Most people seem to think there's nothing they can do for furniture upholstery short of reupholstering or recovering when dirt builds up. But, in most cases, a good cleaning can make it look like new."

Dvorak cautions people about do-it-yourself carpet cleaning methods. Many of these methods leave a residue of soap which can actually attract dirt. This is harmful to the long term life of the carpeting.

If you have used this method in the past, the Carpet and Rug Institute says steam cleaning is the best way to remove the residue.

Steam cleaning extracts ground-in dirt, which has been loosened or dissolved by highly effective detergent solutions.

Dvorak says Stanley Steemer uses various cleaning agents for spot removal, depending on the type of spot, the fiber or fabric, and the dyes that have been used.

Dvorak recommends a professional steam cleaning at least once a year, to prolong the life and appearance of the carpeting and upholstery. Other options to be considered at the time the carpet is cleaned include:

- Scotchgard Brand Protector, to resist stains, and
- Lysol Brand Deodorizer, to neutralize odors.

Not everything should be left to the carpet cleaner, though. The homeowner has some responsibilities, too.

They include vacuuming regularly and thoroughly, protecting high-traffic and entrance areas, covering arms of upholstered furniture, and removing stains and spots promptly.

The reward will be a more beautiful home for many years to come. And less money from your pocketbook for new carpeting and upholstery.

To find out more about proper care for your carpets and upholstery and the removal of common spots and stains, write to Stanley Steemer International, Inc., 5500 Stanley Steemer Parkway, Dublin, OH 43017, for the free booklet, "The Complete Guide to Carpet and Upholstery Care."

A range of options: Creating dream kitchen step by step

Kitchens have always been the heart of the home. But with the advent of two career couples sharing the cooking and the popularity of informal entertaining, this room is getting even more attention.

Improving your kitchen one remodeling project at a time can often be the best, most economical way to make a difference. Even minor changes can make a vast improvement and be the first steps in the creation of your dream kitchen.

In smaller kitchens, a common objective in remodeling is to create more space. The average modern kitchen holds more equipment and appliances than ever before, with everything from food processors to microwave ovens fast becoming standard items.

Installing your own hardwood floor is now quick and easy

People used to think that to get a hardwood floor, your home had to come with one, but that isn't true today. Now you can install an elegant wood plank floor over almost any subfloor — old hardwood, vinyl, even concrete. It's quick and easy with the new do-it-yourself glue-down plank hardwood floors.

Bruce Hardwood Floors, manufacturers of hardwood floors for over 100 years, recently introduced "Hampton Plank" with the Bruce 13-Step Penetrating Stain and Wax Finish, called "Dura-Satin™" in a special size of 3" x 48" (equal to 1 square foot) and very easy to install.

They feature a milled tongue and groove on the sides and ends of the planks that lock the planks together for a tight, durable and professional looking installation.

The experts at Bruce have this advice for do-it-yourselfers: Prior to starting, always read the detailed instructions in the carton.

Then simply follow these four easy steps:

1. Remove the moldings from around the floor. Then, to insure a square installation, measure 3' out from the longest wall at 2 different points and mark point 1 and point 2.
2. Snap a chalkline the length of the room across points 1 and 2.

3. Spread the adhesive in the largest section of the room, working back to the chalkline. Do not cover the chalkline. Be sure you read the instructions on the adhesive label.
4. Install a row of planks, tongue side on the chalkline. Continue adding rows of planks working towards the far wall. Walk in or roll the floor to seat the planks in the adhesive. Now repeat steps 3 and 4 on the remaining area. Replace the moldings.

Glue-down installation is easy, and so is the floor care on this new generation of hardwood floors, once the floor is laid.

Bruce's "Hampton Plank" has a penetrating seal and wax finish, and is so durable that just vacuuming or sweeping regularly is all that is needed.

Then, once or twice a year, wax with either Lite 'n' Brite for the Desert color, or Dark 'n' Rich for the Chestnut color. The Dura-Satin finish can be enhanced between waxings by simply buffing.

Wood warms a room twice — once with insulation and again with style; bring both to your home with a plank hardwood floor.

For more information about hardwood floors write: Bruce Hardwood Floors, 16803 Dallas Parkway, Dept. M, Dallas, TX 75248.

THE KITCHEN always has been an inviting place for cockroaches to live and breed. By using an effective, natural pesticide such as Roach Attack™, you will be able to quickly control the roach population, without affecting food, children or pets.

Shades of difference: Focus on windows to create a new look

In a small apartment or house there's no treasure as great as an extra room. If you have an enclosed porch or patio you already have that room. Now all it takes is a small leap of imagination and some down-to-earth ingenuity to adapt it to year-round use.

Begin by focusing on the windows. You'll want a window treatment that lets you have your view and your privacy, too: A treatment that controls light, is energy efficient and, most of all, is beautiful. It's a tall order, but not as difficult to fill as you might think.

One particularly effective and attractive idea would be to combine drapery panels with "Duette" dual-pleated fabric shades. Developed by Hunter Douglas, a fashion leader in alternative window treatments, "Duette" are fabric shades with a difference.

They're fashioned from two layers of fabric, double-pleated in a honeycomb effect, to trap air between the layers for natural insulation.

Duettes are custom-made and can be tailored to fit even the most oddly-shaped or difficult-to-fit windows. They can be operated from the bottom up as well as from the top down.

Duettes make a fashion statement with a range of designer color that suit today's romantic mood. These are combined with an off-white neutral on the back side so you are assured of a uniform appearance on the outside of the house.

And because Duettes have no tape seams or holes, they cover windows up to 174 inches wide with a clean uncluttered look that makes a particularly beautiful foil for curtain, drapery or valance treatments.

Lightly scaled, comfortable furniture and piles of plump pillows complete your four-season retreat... so slow down, enjoy yourself.

New and effective method for attacking cockroaches

Nobody likes the cockroach — and about the only good thing you can say about the ugly bug is how to kill it.

For as long as people have existed in this world, they have been plagued by nature's almost-indestructible creation.

Amazingly, this small, aggravating insect has been able to survive radiation, extreme temperature changes, famine and even our attempts to annihilate the varmint.

Although many people believe cockroach infestations are just another "city problem," the roach actually makes its home just about anywhere.

The nocturnal pest seeks warm, dark and damp places — particularly areas near water pipes, kitchens and bathrooms.

It requires little food, and feeds on anything from paper, cardboard and glue to pet food and shoe polish.

The cockroach not only is a nuisance and a social embarrassment; it also is a carrier of bacteria which can cause food poisoning.

Boric acid, another common weapon to combat cockroaches, is not as toxic as the chemical pesticides.

However, boric acid is slower-acting and takes a longer time to control the roach population. Researchers also have found that the pest develops a resistance to the substance.

In short — it's much easier to get roaches than to get rid of them — until now.

Avoiding toxic chemicals

To avoid the hazards of using toxic chemicals and to search for an effective pesticide, researchers have turned to nature to win the war against cockroaches, studying the physiology of cockroaches and the effects of natural plant extracts on the insects.

Based on extensive research, Reuter Laboratories, a manufacturer of natural pesticides, has developed Roach Attack™, a fast-acting and effective pesticide which kills cockroaches on contact for up to six months with one application.

Roach Attack is a natural pesticide containing pyrethrum — a substance derived from a certain chrysanthemum flower — and silica gel.

Pyrethrum provides quick-killing action, and long-term control is provided by the physical properties of silica gel.

Silica gel adheres to the body of the insect pest, abrading and dehydrating it, causing death. Because of this physical action, roaches cannot develop an immunity to Roach Attack.

The product has no harmful effects on humans or pets. It is odorless and stain-free, and can be applied easily without rearranging furniture or emptying cabinets and drawers.

By keeping potential breeding grounds clean, and by using safe and effective natural pesticides, we at last may be able to control the 400-million-year-old nuisance — without causing harm to ourselves, our children, our pets or the environment.

SAVE A BUNDLE OF MONEY by installing your own hardwood plank floor. It's fun and easy! And today's new generation of hardwoods are easy to care for once they're laid, too.

A raised floor creates visual excitement to enhance this basement "make-over"

Little things can often add a lot of pizzazz to basement make-overs. Something as simple as elevating a section of flooring can create visual excitement which sets the tone of the entire project.

Genie and Will Crane had just that thought in mind when they decided to finish the basement in their Atlanta, Ga., home.

They envisioned the raised floor area as a centerpiece that would serve as the dramatic setting for a family pool table, with bookcases lining one wall.

But the same area also could serve a variety of other functions — a cozy nook for informal entertaining or watching television, a library, a computer room or a workout room.

The raised floor is easy to build, requiring only basic woodworking skills. Construction is straight forward — random lengths of 2" x 6" pine lumber nailed to a platform of pressure-treated wood risers.

Once the pine lumber is sanded smooth, it's treated with wood sealer/stain. Several coats of clear polyurethane are brushed on for protection and durability after the stain is thoroughly dry.

Exposed risers along the sides and front of the raised floor are finished with small pieces of wood paneling, matching the paneling used on the basement walls.

The front edge of the floor assembly is extended slightly outward and capped with triangular moulding to give the raised portion of the floor added dimension and a finished appearance.

Railing adds dramatic impact

A handsome railing adds impact to the raised floor section, setting it apart from the rest of the room and demanding the eye's attention.

The triangular-shaped railing is constructed of 30-inch balusters, spaced 4 1/2" apart. Newel posts at both ends of the railing form a dramatic entrance to the pool table area.

For extra impact, railings and posts are painted white — in sharp contrast to the dark wood flooring.

These conventionally-installed panels have the appearance of fine wallpaper, but eliminate the messiness associated with hanging wallpaper.

Plans outlined in booklet

This project — as well as other exciting basement make-over ideas and suggestions for finishing basement walls, floors and ceilings — are detailed in a new booklet and plans from Georgia-Pacific Corp. entitled "Beautiful Basements."

Cleaning tips for pet owners: How to keep carpets clean and odor-free

Nearly one-half of the 83.5 million households in the U.S. have two things in common: Pets and a pet's odors. According to the Humane Society, Washington, D.C., there are 57 million pet dogs and 33 million pet cats in the U.S., alone.

"Most pet owners share a common challenge — keeping their carpets free of stains and odors," notes Frederic Rench, chairman of Racine Industries, Inc., a leading manufacturer of dry carpet cleaning products.

Accidents are unavoidable. They happen during pet training, and even the best-trained pets become ill. For accidents, notes Rench, keep several tips in mind:

- Unless water is specified by your carpet's manufacturer, avoid using wet towels to remove or blot a stain. Water generally dilutes and spreads the spill deeper into the carpet.
- Use an old spoon and scoop up a solid spill immediately. Absorb urine spills by placing pressure on dry, white towels; then wet towel with diluted vinegar solution and blot area.
- Cover spills with a dry cleaner (absorbent compound), working it through the spill with a brush; let cleaner dry completely, then vacuum away.
- Substitute a layer of paper or cloth towels if dry cleaner is not available. Weight down towels overnight to absorb moisture.
- Dry cleaners consist of millions of tiny sponges that dissolve soil and spots before absorbing them.
- Dry cleaning works effectively for spills and spots, since cleaned areas can be blended in with surrounding carpet or used to clean wall-to-wall.

Carpet discoloration can occur if you are not able to get to a spill soon after it happens, according to Rench. When it occurs, he suggests the following, if dry cleaner is not immediately available:

- Mix one tablespoon of liquid dishwashing detergent into one-half cup warm water. Moisten white towel and alternately dab spill and blot with a dry towel. If the spot's color transfers, continue; then pack with towels as described above.
- For tougher stains, dab and blot with solution of half-cup white vinegar in half-cup water. Pack overnight with towels (or dry cleaner).
- If neither method shows color transfer, apply an all-purpose spot remover to the towel. Never pour the spot remover directly onto the carpet. Cover the spot overnight with towels or dry cleaner.
- If these fail, the stain may be permanent; call your professional carpet cleaner

When odor persists but no visible spot is found, furniture legs and planters may be hiding your pet's surprise.

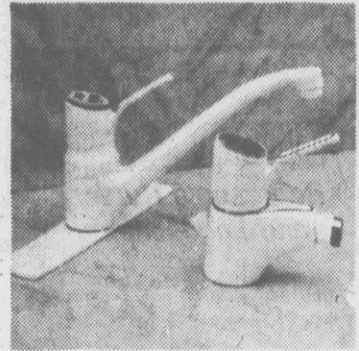

Pets also create lounging and sleeping areas. These dull and matted areas can be cleaned, giving the whole room a new appearance and fresh scent.

Caution is advised when choosing a carpet cleaner. "Wet cleaning methods can carry dissolved soil and stains down the sides of the fibers, trapping them in the backing," notes Rench. "And they can wick back up the fibers and smell even more potent."

Prompt action and an effective cleaning strategy — including regular vacuuming of doorways and traffic paths — ensure a pleasant living environment for residents and pets.

Advanced Bathroom Faucet

As part of American-Standard's luxury faucets, the high-quality single control line, Ceramix, is available with or without a liquid crystal display giving the temperature of the water passing through the faucet. The models with temperature display are named Ceramix Electronix. Both Ceramix and Ceramix Electronix come in six fashion finishes: chrome, polished brass, bone, white, white with a gold trim line, and gold. They both contain advanced technology ceramic disc valves, housed in easily removable cartridges and solid brass construction.

Doors Offer Improved Security

The aesthetics of a custom-made traditional wood door with the security and energy efficiency of steel is available to customers with the Castlegate® Insulated Steel Entry Door from the Castlegate Division of USG Industries, Inc.

In situations where additional security is desired, Castlegate® Insulated steel entry doors offer an exclusive security frame. Made of 22-gauge steel that wraps the wood frame, the Castlegate Security Frame costs only a few dollars more than a conventional wooden door frame alone. The security frame allows the Castlegate door to either be pre-hung in a plant or at a door jobber location and shipped as a unit to the job site.

The Castlegate insulated steel entry door comes with a five-year warranty that provides either repair or replacement if the door does not perform as covered in the warranty.

Which Home Improvements Are The Best?

Residential remodeling and repair work are booming. In fact, figures recently released by the U.S. Department of Commerce showed that more than $80 billion will be spent this year on home improvements and repairs.

A big factor in the remodeling surge is that many homeowners are staying in their present homes longer and are therefore fixing and improving them more than in the past. With the interest in home improvements come questions from concerned homeowners as to which projects offer the most value. The following is a listing of four different project types: additions, minor remodeling, outdoor and energy saving which are expected to give the most return at resale. Figures were compiled by the CertainTeed Home Institute from Remodeling Contractor magazine.

Additions

Additions are the most popular type of remodeling projects homeowners engage in today and they also offer the most value. The best additions are fireplaces, full baths, greenhouses and skylights.

Fireplaces average $3,000, to install and offer an average value at resale of $4,000, a 133% return on your investment.

The average cost to add a full bathroom today is $7,500, but it offers a resale value of $8,000. If you're home doesn't have two bathrooms and you find you always wish it did, now's the time to add one.

Greenhouse and skylight additions are also quite popular and provide good resale values. Installing a skylight costs about $3,000, but offers a return when selling of $2,000. Greenhouse additions, which offer extra living space and year-round outdoor atmosphere, cost approximately $13,500 to add on, but provide a $12,000 resale value.

Minor Remodeling Projects

Other home improvements besides additions that have gained popularity are minor kitchen and bath oriented projects. Improving cabinets, counters, wallcoverings or paint and installing an energy efficient range may cost you about $7,000, but the return at resale is $6,500. In the bathroom, consider such items as a new bath or whirlpool tub and new fixtures. The average cost of a project like this is $6,000, but its value at resale is $4,500.

Outdoor Projects

More and more homeowners are engaging in outdoor home improvement projects as well. The best of these by far, for comfort purposes is the building of a deck. Decks are a good way of adding living space and are popular with prospective home buyers. They run approximately $5,000, but offer a return on investment at resale of $3,500.

Energy Saving Projects

Adding extra insulation to a home to bring it up to today's energy standards is a very easy task and it also provides a good return on your investment. The average cost of adding insulation to your home is $1,200 but the average return at resale is $1,000. Upgrading your insulation with CertainTeed Fiber Glass Insulation is also important because according to a recent survey by Professional Builder magazine energy efficiency is still a top priority among new home buyers. Therefore, prospective buyers may ask about insulation levels, heating costs and the overall energy efficiency of your home.

For more information on energy saving home improvements write for the "Energy Facts" brochure, CertainTeed Home Institute, P.O. Box 860, Valley Forge, PA, 19482.

Your plants can survive the move to a new home!

If you're planning to move this spring, even just down the street, it's wise to give some thought now to preparing your plants for the move. After all, plants are an important part of your home decor, and are expensive to replace.

Advance planning
"Preparing your indoor garden for a move and the adjustment to a new environment is no cause for panic," says Robert Maronde, indoor gardening expert for Garden Scene planterware. "It's really quite simple if you follow some basic rules of thumb."

There are two key elements to a successful plant move, according to Maronde. One is to retard excessive growth prior to the move. The second is to allow plants adequate time to adjust to their new environment.

Stop fertilizing your plants several weeks before the move. By eliminating fertilization, your plants have a chance to rest.

"A resting period," says Maronde, "will make your plants more resilient to any drastic changes. Don't worry. They'll continue to grow, just at a somewhat slower rate.

"Also, don't water plants just before the move. Large plants can be difficult to maneuver and the additional water weight will only add to the problem."

If you plan to repot during the spring, wait until after you are in your new home. That way, not only will your plants have more time to acclimate to their new environment, but you'll have a better idea of what planter colors and sizes will best accommodate your new decor.

"When you repot, select planters with the same care you give your plants," Maronde advises. "Garden Scene's extensive variety of planter sizes, colors and styles makes it easy for plants and planters to reflect your decorating style, from subtle to dramatic."

When making arrangements with your mover, let them know the number and sizes of plants included in the move. Plants can't be stacked, so they not only take up floor space but air space in the moving van.

Proper packing plans should be made so plants are situated in a no-shift position within the truck.

Small plants can be grouped carefully in boxes. Medium and large plants should either be twist-tied in large plastic bags or securely wrapped in plastic or brown kraft paper.

If the move will be longer than a few hours, make several small airholes in the plastic. Don't worry. The plants will not suffocate.

"And remember," warns Maronde, "never, ever, allow large plants to hang out of a moving vehicle unless they are protected from the wind. Wind will tear and irreparably damage a plant's leaves."

If you are not planning your move until the fall, follow the same basic procedures, but be sure the plants are not exposed to cold drafts.

Whenever you move, plants should always be the last items on the truck and the first off the truck and into a warm, protected space inside.

Settling in and readjusting light
Once in your new home, unwrap your plants, place them where you think you want them, and give your thirsty plants a drink!

"Be careful about where you put your plants for at least the first few weeks," says Maronde. Garden Scene's plant expert stresses the importance of allowing plants at least four to six weeks to adjust to their new environment.

If a plant had a lot of sun in your previous home, and you place it in a less sunny area, keep it as close to a window as possible.

On the other hand, if it had limited light before and you want it in a bright room, slowly move it toward the light source.

Don't fertilize again for several weeks. You may change your mind as to where you want to put certain plants while you settle in.

Remember the energy crisis?

Higher cooling costs in summer and heating costs in winter are on the way back. According to the U.S. Department of Energy and experts from the nation's top oil and gas companies, the lower energy prices we have been experiencing recently won't be around for long.

In fact, the cost of fuel oil is expected to double by the year 2000 as U.S. dependence on foreign oil continues to climb yearly. Electricity prices are expected to grow at an even higher rate than inflation.

The future
From a supply standpoint, the country is in better shape with its domestic natural gas reserves than with its oil. U.S. domestic production of oil has been steadily slipping, even with the addition of the Alaskan oil fields.

Electricity for cooling and heating purposes has climbed steadily between 1975 and 1985 by approximately 11 percent. Electricity World, a utility trade magazine, estimates that through 1990 the average price of a kilowatt-hour will increase by two percent a year above the rate of inflation.

What can a homeowner do to combat high cooling and heating costs? "The best insurance against volatile prices is an efficient heating and cooling system and a well-insulated house," says George Hoffmann, senior vice president of marketing at CertainTeed Corporation. "Start with a simple inspection to see how energy efficient your home is."

In the attic, check your insulation levels. If they're not up to the energy standards for your geographic area, upgrade them with CertainTeed Fiber Glass Insulation. Next, check to see if the caulking and weatherstripping around your windows and doors is adequate.

If you don't have storm windows or double or triple-pane windows, consider installing them.

Lastly, if buying a new heating and/or cooling system, keep in mind the following terms: AFUE (Annual Fuel Utilization Efficiency), which measures the efficiency rating for a furnace and boiler and SEER (Seasonal Energy Efficiency Ratio), which measures the cooling efficiency of many central air conditioning systems and heat pumps. Look for AFUE ratings over 80 percent and SEERs of nine or greater.

New cabinet system creates more storage, softens sharp corners

FLOOR PLAN

THE VARIO SYSTEM

IF YOU ARE LIKE MOST PEOPLE, you are constantly looking for more storage space in your kitchen. Now, a new design concept, recently introduced by ALNO Kitchen Cabinets, Inc., can help meet your need for increased storage by creating extra space in both base and wall cabinets. Called the Vario System, this cabinet design concept may be used to extend ALNO's sleek European-styled cabinets. Using eye-pleasing angled units, the system adds depth to cabinets and work surfaces, such as around and below the cooktop shown above. Other areas where homeowners often want larger-than-usual work surfaces or cabinet storage are near the sink and refrigerator. ALNO's Vario System is ideally suited to expanding work and storage space in these and other areas. For a free catalog of ALNO's classic wood or contemporary European-styled cabinets, along with many innovative space-enhancing features, write to Jim Nelson, ALNO Kitchen Cabinets, Inc., 385 Bellevue Drive, Newark, DE 19713.

Southern roofs fight fungus stains

Southerners will be fighting fungus attacks on the roofs of their homes again this summer, according to Robert Garrett, vice president of marketing, for CertainTeed Corporation's roofing group.

Fungus stains are a common problem with light-colored shingles in the hot, humid climate of the Southeastern states. Many homeowners in this region have noticed black streaked fungus stains on their light-colored roof as early as three to four years after the roof is applied.

The problem usually begins at the bottom of the roof and intensifies rapidly as it moves upward, creating an unattractive appearance. The fungus does not structurally damage the roof, however, it is aesthetically unattractive, according to Garrett.

"The best method for fighting roof fungus is to prevent it from growing in the first place. Once the fungus appears, homeowners try a variety of methods to remove it, but all are damaging to the roof," Garrett cautioned.

Homeowners hire companies to jet spray their roofs. This method is extremely damaging to the roof. It washes away many protective granules, and bends and peels the shingle edges.

After removal, the fungus immediately begins to grow again. This time, it may reproduce underneath the shingle from trapped jet spray moisture, according to Garrett.

Garrett said the most common method of removal is bleaching with a product such as Clorox®. "Bleaching chemicals are also very damaging to the granules. By scrubbing the roof with the solution, even more granules are scrubbed away. The granules provide the protection from sunlight and when removed, roof failure will occur much sooner," said Garrett.

Fungus stains themselves absorb more sunlight because they are darker than the shingles. The added ultraviolet light also causes the granules to break down and creates roof failure even sooner.

Garrett said homeowners often mistake fungus stains for faulty shingles, believing the asphalt is seeping through. Others think the stains are soot from the chimney or pollution from the city.

CertainTeed has introduced a shingle called "FungusBuster" designed to be fungus free for the warranted life of the shingle (20 years), Garrett said.

"FungusBuster" is manufactured with a fiber glass base that gives the shingle extreme durability and exceptional attractiveness. The composition of the shingle essentially is the same as the company's popular CertainTeed 20 (Glassguard) shingle, but, in addition to the usual composition, zinc granules are imbedded in the asphalt coating along with regular granules to provide fungus resistance.

"Heavy metals such as copper, lead, galvanized steel and zinc prevent fungus cell reproduction," said Garrett. "Scientists aren't exactly sure why this is so, but it has been observed for years that fungus does not grow on the roof around flashings and other metal areas."

"The zinc granules in fungus resistant shingles chemically destroy the fungus spores. Whenever it rains, the fungicide slowly releases and washes across the face of the shingle, much like a time-release capsule," Garrett said.

"Zinc does not hurt the asphalt, and is non-toxic and easy for manufacturing personnel to handle. The granules are microscopically small so they wash away very slowly and last for the warranted life of the product, 20 years."

Manufactured at CertainTeed's Savannah, Georgia plant, FungusBuster is available in four colors: Star white, gray frost, cinnamon frost and timber blend. The product is available to homeowners in South Carolina, Georgia and Florida.

For cramped quarters...

Versatile hide-away table can solve space problem

Need a table in a basement recreation room that's already cramped for space? Then this easy do-it-yourself hideaway table project might be just the answer for you.

Opened, the table provides an ample surface (24" x 57") for playing cards or board games, informal entertaining, tracing sewing patterns, building models or other activities. Place a telephone nearby, and it serves as a temporary desk for conducting business.

When not in use, the table is hidden from view behind closed doors. Finishing the rear wall of the cabinet with wood paneling will enhance its appearance when opened.

How it works

The table operates like a Murphy bed or fold-away ironing board. Open the cabinet doors and pull the table down when it's needed; push it up and close the doors when it's not being used.

Construction of this weekend project is simple and straightforward. There are two components: The table and the 11-inch-deep closet in which it is stored when not in use.

Materials—easily obtainable through your local home center or lumber dealer—include 3/4" A-B plywood, 2" x 4"s, straight wood moulding, hardware and miscellaneous items.

Instructions available

Complete plans for building the folding table are available through Georgia-Pacific Corporation, the nation's largest manufacturer and distributor of building materials.

To obtain the plans, a $3 rebate coupon for Georgia-Pacific building materials, plus a 20-page full color booklet illustrating several exciting basement renovation ideas and information on finishing basement walls, ceilings and floors, send $3 to Georgia-Pacific Corporation, "Beautiful Basements," Dept. MT011, P.O. Box 2808, Norcross, GA 30071.

Resurface cabinets with laminate to give tired kitchen a great facelift

If your kitchen looks a bit tired and you are not ready for a complete overhaul, think of resurfacing the cabinets with one of today's great decorative laminate designs or colors.

You will be rewarded with a fresh new look at roughly one-third to one-half of what it would cost to rip out and replace those over-the-hill cabinets.

A few years back, cabinet resurfacing was often considered a rather tacky process, admits the Laminate Council of America. But all that has changed, first because of the stylish Eurostyle look, which has popularized laminate as the finishing material of choice, and secondly because of the new fashion consciousness of the laminate industry.

"Today, high pressure decorative laminate no longer has to pretend to be some other material," notes David Embry of Wilsonart, one of the Council's member companies.

"It has become a design element in its own right, and the new styles prove the point. There are all those wonderful solid colors — hundreds of them — ranging from crisp whites and pretty pastels to smart dark neutrals and rich jewel tones. They add infinite fashion to kitchen cabinets, whether used alone or with wood trim."

Andy Ziegler of Nevamar, Dan Cannady of Westinghouse Micarta and Pioneer's Kenn Smith all like "fantasy finishes" for cabinetry.

They talk about exotic wood grains and leather looks in such deliberately unreal colors as mauve and teal. Such designs can be counted on to provide great glamour, particularly when they are combined with luxurious metal accents.

Choosing a burl design in mauve, for example, is a sure-fire way to create an Art Deco look to transport you right back to the Hollywood of the '30s and '40s.

Formica Corporation has added many new beiges, greiges and grays as well as blue-greens and red-purples that will add high style to cabinets, while Sterling's DuraBeauty line features many grays, a color group that can go both contemporary and traditional.

And if you are an incurable traditionalist, you can, of course, go with a wood-look laminate. Today's manufacturers have rounded up so many of them, from oak and weathered barnwood to cherry and mahogany, that you can go anywhere from rustic to traditional formality, and still enjoy the easy care and affordability of laminate.

So, as you can see, there are lots of options to consider before calling in somebody to do plastic surgery on your kitchen. Besides laminate colors and designs, there are door styles and hardware to choose.

Inexpensive project

When cabinetry is resurfaced, the old cabinet doors and drawer fronts are removed and replaced with new ones. Simultaneously, the cabinet box is sanded down and recovered to match the new doors and drawer fronts.

Most-asked sidewall insulation questions answered

Although high energy costs have recently subsided, energy efficiency is still a prime concern among homeowners today. In fact, according to a recent survey in Professional Builder magazine, it is still a top priority among those buying a new home.

Along with the continued interest in energy efficiency come questions regarding home insulation. Millions of Americans have learned how easy it is to insulate attics and crawl spaces, but the CertainTeed Home Institute has found there is still some confusion about insulating sidewalls.

In response to this, a list of most-asked questions about insulating sidewalls has been developed. Here are the most-wanted answers:

When we're sitting in our den in the hot, summer months, we often find our walls feel warm to the touch. Is this because they do not have enough insulation?

Chances are that's the case — especially if your home is more than 10 years old. Homes built before the energy crisis in 1974 do not have the high R-values of insulation installed in them that homes built today contain.

Can we insulate our sidewalls ourselves?

It's far easier to hire a professional insulation contractor to insulate your sidewalls. Since walls are finished off, it is very difficult and costly for the average do-it-yourselfer to undertake this project.

How will a contractor insulate my sidewalls, and is it a difficult task?

No, it is an easy job for a professional insulation contractor. All sidewalls are basically insulated the same way.

First, some of your home's siding or outside finish is removed. Secondly, small holes are drilled to create an opening for the insulation. Thirdly, loose-fill fiber glass insulation is blown into the stud spacing through a special insulation hose. Lastly, holes are plugged and siding is installed again.

Will the contractor make many holes in my home?

No, generally the rule of thumb is one opening for every 4 to 5-foot height to ensure that the stud space is completely full. Blowing through a single opening in an eight-foot wall, for example, might leave some of the cavity with no insulation if it has a fire stop.

Do we have to wait until we're planning to remodel our home to upgrade our sidewall insulation?

No, this is a common myth. You can have your walls insulated at any time.

How do I find an insulation contractor to insulate my sidewall?

Ask your utility company for recommendations, consult friends and neighbors and/or look in the telephone book under "Insulation Contractors." Once you've chosen one, you should educate yourself a bit about sidewall insulating to ensure the job will be done properly.

What type of insulation material is best suited for my sidewalls?

There are several types of insulation that can be used in sidewalls. Use only high quality materials like INSUL SAFÉ III[®], a blown-in fiber glass insulation from CertainTeed.

It offers outstanding thermal performance, is noncombustible, will not absorb moisture, and will not rot or decay.

How much can I expect to save by insulating my sidewalls?

That's difficult to pinpoint because the answer is determined by the type of construction of your home and the climate in which you live.

Rest assured, however, that by upgrading the insulation in your sidewalls, you can reduce the amount of air conditioning lost through your walls by up to 30 percent.

Compact cooking center is ideal for tight spaces

Not enough room in your kitchen? Well, welcome to the club! It is no secret that, for the majority of people, there never seems to be enough space for all the pots, pans, dishes and other items that are so essential to their cooking needs.

One solution to the problem is space-saving appliances, such as a convenient eye-level microwave oven/range or a new narrow 20-inch range, available from Maytag.

The range with the eye-level microwave oven offers the best of both worlds — microwave cooking and conventional cooking. The exciting part about this design is that there no longer is a need to sacrifice precious counter space, since the microwave oven takes a "second-story" position above the Maytag range.

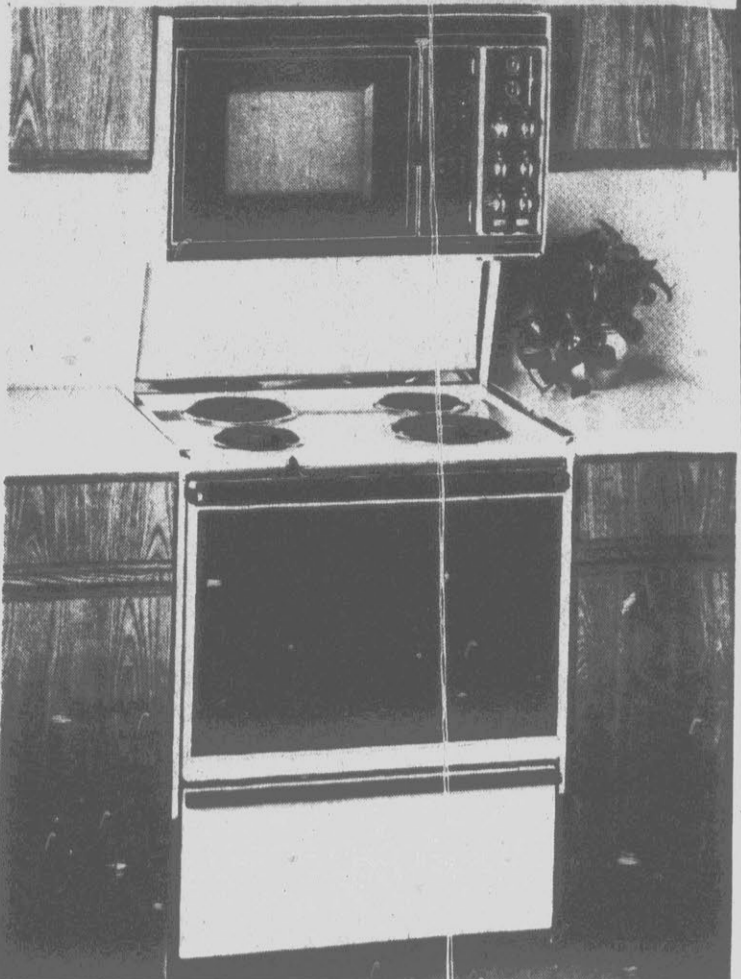

In addition to freeing your countertop, the microwave oven offers four programmable memory levels with 10 power settings and a temperature probe with a "cook-and-hold" feature.

But that's just the beginning. The bottom half of the cooking center is highlighted by a range built with quality features like Maytag's two-coat, porcelain-enamel finish, and other conveniences such as a "delay start" control that enables you to automatically start and stop the oven to suit your busy schedule.

As an answer to messy cleanups, the gas and electric models provide parts that are easy to remove, and the electric model also is available with a continuous clean oven.

For even tighter spaces, Maytag's new 20-inch ranges can save the day. The streamlined design is the perfect solution to those tight spots, yet it includes features that you would expect to find only in larger ranges.

The 20-inch ranges are available in gas or electric models.

THE ULTIMATE IN COOKING CONVENIENCE: Maytag's eye-level microwave oven/range. The cooking center combines the best of both worlds — microwave cooking and conventional cooking — in an efficient space-saving design.

Southwestern style gains in decorating popularity

The style of the American Southwest is fast becoming a sought-after decorating look in homes all over the U.S.

No wonder. Southwestern flavor can add drama to any room with its exciting combination of desert colors, rich textures and native artifacts. Proof is the family room decorated in the Southwest style by the pros at Armstrong.

The interior designers picked a color scheme for the room of red and sand, set off by teal blue. First, a red no-wax floor in a ceramic tile design was put down. On the flooring sit wicker chairs whose cushions are covered in a deep-red Navajo Indian fabric. Woodwork around the doors and windows is painted teal blue.

The primary reds and blues come to life against sand-colored stucco walls and textured ceiling tiles. Rustic beams accent the tile ceiling.

Wood shelving on the upper part of one of the long walls adds architectural interest, and provides a place for collectors to display leather-bound books, wooden boxes and woven baskets. An authentic Indian water jar made of clay nestles in a wall niche.

Other touches reinforce the Southwestern look. Examples: A black wrought-iron sconce on the wall, a wooden stool with leather-strap seat, and a kettle of hammered copper hanging from the wall shelf.

Much of the remodeling for the Southwestern look can be done without professional help. The basics involve brushing on stucco paint, installing the no-wax floor and fashioning ceiling beams by nailing together one by six and one by four boards.

Putting up the ceiling tiles is no problem either with an Easy Up kit, which consists of lightweight metal tracks, clips and nails. You simply nail the 4-foot tracks in place and secure the 12 by 12-inch tiles with the clips.

An added bonus is a no-fault guarantee when you install an Armstrong ceiling with an Easy Up kit. If you make a mistake, the damaged materials are replaced free, on the spot, by the dealer. Another advantage is the ceiling's 10-year warranty against defect.

To help you get started on your own remodeling project, write for a free copy of the Consumer Guide to Ceilings at Armstrong World Industries, P.O. Box 3001, Lancaster, PA 17604. Or call 800-233-3823 toll-free and ask for a complimentary copy of the Consumer Guide to Ceilings.

Vertical blinds are a sleek, soft touch

Coping with rooms that are rich in architectural details calls for a light hand and a soft touch. After all, nooks and crannies, exposed beams and woodwork should be part of the background, something to be discovered, not something to be featured.

One family had great success using the "soft touch" to create a unifying theme in their decoratively beamed, country-style living room.

Influence perspective

To expand the sense of scale and create a feeling of greater height and width, they selected a monochromatic color scheme and used it throughout. The beams and woodwork were left unfinished and the walls were painted a neutral ivory. The upholstery is in a rosy hue.

To add to the illusion of height, they covered the window wall and the windows over the built-in sofa with soft vertical blinds in the Fenbuck pattern from the Dixie Verticals Division of Hunter Douglas.

They found the soft verticals combined the sleekness of contemporary design with the warmth they associated with the traditional country look.

Dixie Vertical blinds are available in textured knits, weaves and non-woven fabrics that coordinate with the soft look that's so popular in home fashion and which provide the soft elegance of fabric window treatments.

Another advantage

An added asset, they discovered, is the easy gliding slim "stack-back" which permits them to open the blinds wider than usual, making the room lighter and brighter.

High, wide, handsome and very functional, today's vertical blinds are a soft touch.

Utilize Overlooked Space

The attic becomes one of the favorite rooms in the house when decorated with plywood wall paneling. Sheets of plywood paneling can be applied easily over the rafters and studs. Add lamps, a throw rug and audio-visual equipment and a humble storage space is transformed into a library or family entertainment center.

How to construct a raised bed garden

What has been around for hundreds of years yet, to some gardeners, is brand new?

What can be as wide as five feet and as narrow as a foot and a half?

What can help root crops grow straighter and longer?

What can give more control over soil content in the garden?

What type of gardening has a typical size of 4x6 ft. and has growing space eight inches higher than walkways?

The answer is raised beds. According to the experts at The National Gardening Association, raised bed gardening is the answer for many of America's 44 million flower and vegetable gardeners.

"Although raised beds aren't for all gardeners, if gardeners have never tried them and want a new experience, we're recommending trying at least one this year," said Charles Scott, president of the non-profit 250,000 member National Gardening Association, based in Burlington, Vermont.

"We have put together some tips and techniques to help succeed in raised bed gardening," continued Scott.

Where do raised beds work best? Raised beds work especially well if soil is poor, rocky or compacted; if the spring season is cold and wet; or if the garden soil is too muddy to enter following a rain.

What's the best way to make a raised bed? NGA experts found three basic methods work to construct a raised bed.

• The easy way — Shovel, hoe or rake the earth from the path to the raised bed, then rake along the top to even the soil, then tamp the edge firm with a hoe.

• The tiller way — With a tiller-furrower attachment, drive the tiller so the machine pushes soil from the path to what will be the beds on either side of the path. To make beds higher, repeat as necessary. Repeat entire process on each path until finished.

• The hard way — This is the double digging method of digging a trench with a shovel, the depth of the shovel blade, putting the soil in a wheelbarrow and then loosening the base soil with a fork.

Dig a second trench adjacent to the first, putting top soil into first trench, then loosen the soil at the base of the second trench. Continue moving top soil and loosening subsoil until all beds are done.

Complete by adding soil in wheelbarrow from first trench to the last trench. Never stand on soil in bed.

For all three methods, add organic matter to soil.

Rows can run the length of the bed but NGA experts advise that rows running across the raised beds are easier to hoe, weed and harvest.

Plant in blocks to cut down on weeds. Mix vegetables and flowers in raised beds. (Example: Lettuce and herbs grow well in the shade of tomatoes, with radishes and marigolds and/or john jump-ups along edges.)

Choose plant varieties that like warm dry soil. NGA finds that root crops succeed, while corn does not, nor do crops that need to be hilled like leeks and potatoes. Perennials such as strawberries need to be well mulched.

"Raised bed gardening can have a positive impact on gardening methods by helping gardeners keep track of soil warm-up, water drainage and plant health," said Scott. "Trying raised beds is the best way to learn whether they will work for you."

The National Gardening Association publishes a full color magazine each month featuring good gardening information from NGA experts. For a sample issue, send $1 to cover postage and handling to The National Gardening Association, 180 AD Flynn Avenue, Burlington, VT 05401.

Landscape kit for watering trees, shrubs and plantings

An underground watering system so easy to install that any do-it-yourselfer can do it...and without specialized tools?

That's part of the appeal of a new landscape watering kit being introduced by True Temper. The unusual system is simple enough for any do-it-yourselfer to install...and, once installed, enables the do-it-yourselfer to water trees, shrubs and plantings automatically, without being on the scene.

In flower and vegetable gardens, as well as patio plants, slow-drip is considered the best watering method. The system allows delivery of water at a slower rate, in a form that meets specific plant needs.

The landscape kit features tubing connectors that are quick and easy to assemble, and sprayer heads with specially barbed risers that create their own hole in the tubing.

They save installation time, and ensure a secure and watertight fit. The entire system can be installed without specialized tools.

The kit comes with everything needed to water up to 500 square feet of landscaping — enough to water trees, shrubs and flower plantings in two or three areas of the average home landscape.

Included are 80 feet of half-inch UV resistant, low density poly tubing used to carry water underground from an outside faucet to the risers which connect into spray heads; 20 self-tapping risers; 12 half-circle spray heads; and 12 full-circle spray heads.

The kit also includes a tap connector with filter screen to catch sediment and prevent blockage of the small water outlets; a flow regulator that reduces water volume to correct level; two hose closures for sealing end of tubing; two barbed T-connectors for in-line connection of tubing to branch attachments; two barbed L-connectors for end-line connections; and four barbed "goof" plugs for changing the tubing once it has been installed.

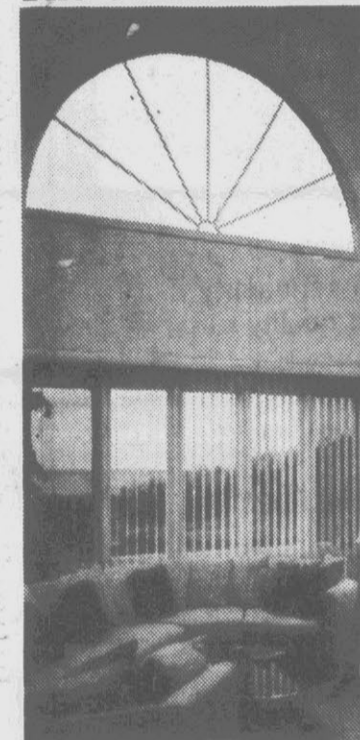

According to the manufacturer, the new irrigation system is quick and easy to assemble, designed to meet any gardener's needs, and saves time and money.

For further information, write to True Temper Water Works, P.O. Box 3500, Shiremanstown, PA 17011.

Like the owners of this home, you must contemplate window placement carefully. Consider such factors as size of the window in relation to the size of the room or wall; cross ventilation; where your furniture is going to sit (you may or may not want it in front of the window); and whether the window is placed at the proper height (can the average person see out of it comfortably when sitting and standing). For more information, phone Marvin Windows 1-800-346-5128.

The Sunshine In

Today's aesthetic-minded homeowners also enjoy graceful styles like round tops and casements. And, like the owner of this home, they demand them longer and wider for maximum sunlight, according to Beverley Ellsley of Beverley Ellsley Interiors, a Westport, CT designer and builder of homes. For more information, phone Marvin Windows 1-800-346-5128.

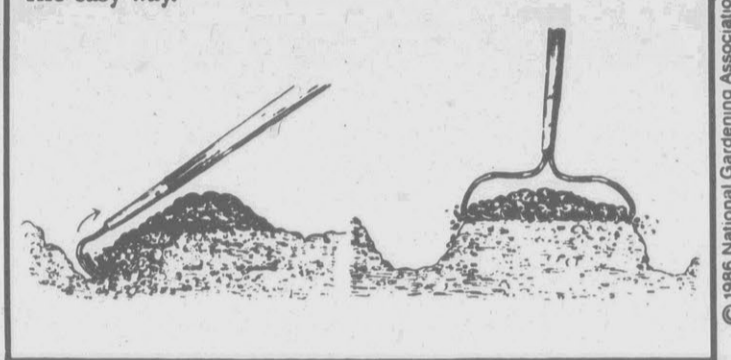

FOR BIRDLIVERS

Americans reportedly spend $90 million yearly on birdseed for their feathered friends. However, much of the money is wasted because some species don't eat seeds. Woodpeckers and hummingbirds are two examples.

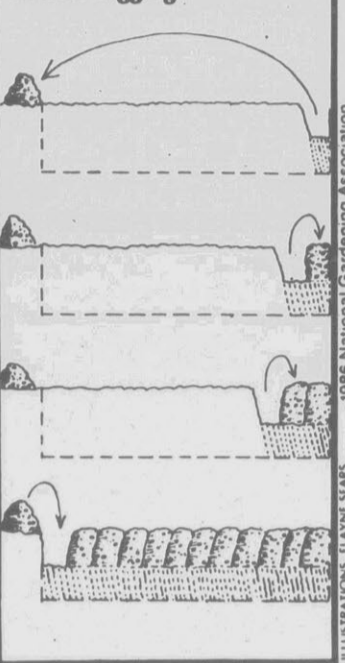

Those who would like to help birds make it through the winter should visit their local library and read up on the feeding habits of local species.

WHICH RAISED BEDS ARE RIGHT FOR YOU?

The easy way.

The hard way: double digging.

Choose energy-efficient, secure patio doors

Installing a patio door is a great way to bring the best of the outdoors inside your home and increase its value.

Sometimes, however, the worst of the outdoors can also gain entry through these doors. Air infiltration may be a problem, along with condensation and water penetration under and through the frame. And if the doors don't have proper locks, they could present a security hazard.

Smart shopping will help prevent such "unwanted visitors." The producers of Vinylite rolling patio doors, the pioneers of the rigid vinyl-framed patio door, offer these shopping tips for homeowners.

• Check for welded corners on the mainframe and sash. Unlike frames that are screwed together, welded construction virtually eliminates air and moisture penetration through the frame.

• Select thermal glazing that is securely affixed to the frame with heavy-duty weatherstripping at all points.

• Choose a durable framing material that will not rot, rust or corrode. Vinylite patio doors with rigid all-vinyl frames, for example, retain their superior weathering qualities throughout their long life and do not need to be painted.

• Touch the frame to make certain it feels warm to the touch. Frames that feel hot or cold will conduct unwanted heat in the summer and cold in the winter. Furthermore, they're likely to invite condensation problems.

• Look for a door that opens and closes quietly and smoothly, such as those on ball-bearing rollers. The screen should be on a separate track that holds it securely at bottom and top.

• Security features to look for include a key lock on the door, a separate lock on the screen and yet another lock along the bottom track, which permits the door to be opened enough to allow fresh air in while keeping intruders out.

• Look for the ANSI/AAMA certification label. This label assures that the door has been tested and approved according to rigid industry performance standards.

• Choose a reputable dealer and installer who will back up the product. For more information about patio doors and the names of local sources, write to Vinylite, One Raritan Rd., Dept. RSPR, Oakland, NJ 07436.

Safe Garage Door

Next, some tips from experts about getting along with your garage door.

For safety's sake, garage door remote controls should never be handled by children, only by responsible adults.

Proper installation of a garage door usually requires a professional. You can find one by looking in the Yellow Pages. You can look for members of the Far Western Garage Door Association or the Door and Operator Dealers of America, according to Frank S. Fitzgerald, He's president of the Garage Door Council.

They're tricky all right. Creeping across your lawn. Multiplying with a vengeance. Stubbornly resisting any store-bought remedies.

Pull them out by hand and, one by one, they return. Almost overnight.

Before you give up, you should call ChemLawn. Because with ChemLawn, all you've got to lose are your weeds.

YARD PONDS: Easy to construct, easy to maintain, beautiful to look at.

Installing, maintaining a yard pond can be easy

If you really enjoy being in your yard and would like to give your yard that extra dimension to make it even more enjoyable, as well as the envy of your neighborhood, here's a great suggestion — put in your own yard pond! Too difficult? Too much worry? Don't know how to do it? Through new technology, all these worries are needless.

Installing your own garden pond is simple, maintaining your own yard pond is easy and, best of all, your yard pond can provide year after year of trouble-free enjoyment.

European gardens, particularly in Great Britain, Southern France, Northern Italy, Holland and West Germany, are almost always pictured with a yard pond.

Six years ago, a German company, the Tetra Werke, known best in the United States for its products for home aquariums, developed a bonded two-piece, heavy-duty (32 Mil thick), flexible rubber pond liner. This liner allows home owners to free-form a yard pond efficiently and immediately.

The liner can withstand the warmest summers and the coldest winters, and is available in sizes big enough to create ponds almost 10 feet in diameter.

Through Tetra Werke's U.S. distributor, Tetra Sales, U.S.A., all the products and complete information on constructing a yard pond is now available.

In summary, you should select a location on your property where the ground is fairly even although, because of the flexibility of the liner, some leveling can be achieved when digging your pond. The pond should be placed where it will get approximately six hours of sunlight per day.

While you can place your pond anywhere, it is not recommended to place it directly under trees since falling leaves can foul the water and tree roots will make digging difficult.

Using a heavy garden hose or a rope, free-form your pond design to conform to your landscaping scheme.

When constructing your pond, you should dig both a shallow area and a deep area. Fish benefit from the shallow area to feed on insects and the shallow area can also be used to place potted plants such as lilies.

The deep area will provide security for your fish and protect them from birds and small animals. Depending on your climate, the deep area of your pond should be anywhere from 24" to 40", and the shallow area from 4" to 12".

When constructing your pond, you should line the ground with sand, carpet padding or even old newspapers before laying the liner. This will protect your pond liner against sharp protruding objects such as roots or rocks.

To create that professional look, build a rock border around your pond, allowing the rocks to overlap the edge of the pond by 1" or 2". You can landscape back around the pond and even build a patio if you so desire.

Maintaining your pond is very easy. Tetra has an economical, permanent pond filter and a complete line of water chemicals and foods to ensure that your fish will prosper.

What kind of fish should you put in your pond? The hardiest are large Common or Comet goldfish. Depending on the size of your pond, these hardy fish will grow rapidly and can withstand the worst weather. As long as the water in your pond does not freeze to its lowest depth, these fish can survive the cruelest winters.

If you live in a warmer climate, you can select from the most prized pond fish: The beautiful and exotic Koi from Japan. These are increasingly available throughout the U.S. and, although they are not quite as hardy as the common goldfish, they are a treasured pond fish.

What should you do in the winter? Nothing! After the first frost, remove your filter and leave your pond alone until the onset of spring (as soon as the water temperature reaches 50°F).

Never feed your fish during the winter as their metabolism directly relates to the water temperature, and when the water temperature drops below 50°F they will not eat. In the spring, simply reinstall your filter and begin feeding your fish.

Poison Ivy: Handle with care

While many plants thrive only in rarefied climates, the hardy poison ivy, oak and sumac exist in almost every state of the U.S.

Exposure to these plants results in an estimated 18 million annual cases of severe plant dermatitis — an extremely annoying, painful and persistent skin rash caused by contact with poison ivy, oak or sumac.

Proper attention important

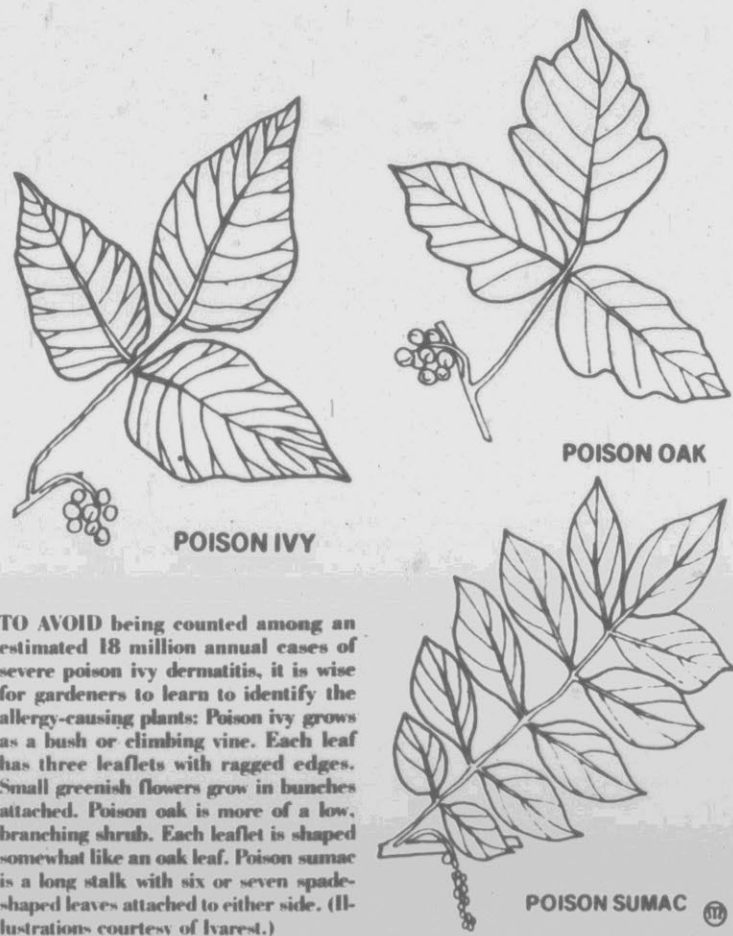

For gardeners and others who are exposed to poison ivy or other strains of the pesky allergy-causing plant, proper and immediate attention can alleviate much of the discomfort, according to Charles Zuger, M.D., assistant professor of clinical dermatology, Northwestern University Medical School, and consultant to Blistex Inc., makers of Ivarest: The Poison Ivy Expert.

Poison ivy and poison oak rashes consist of varying amounts of redness, weeping and blistering. All or one symptom may be present. Itching is always intense and unbearable. The classic lesion is a linear stripe of rash due to brushing against the leaf.

Dr. Zuger advises gently washing the affected area with plain soap and water immediately following exposure to remove plant oil, applying a medicated cream or lotion, and washing all exposed clothing as soon as possible. Use separate and thorough cleaning methods for clothing.

Long-lasting relief

A non-prescription medication such as Ivarest provides long-lasting relief of itching and inflammation, reduces the rash and helps prevent secondary infection.

TO AVOID being counted among an estimated 18 million annual cases of severe poison ivy dermatitis, it is wise for gardeners to learn to identify the allergy-causing plants: Poison ivy grows as a bush or climbing vine. Each leaf has three leaflets with ragged edges. Small greenish flowers grow in bunches attached. Poison oak is more of a low, branching shrub. Each leaflet is shaped somewhat like an oak leaf. Poison sumac is a long stalk with six or seven spade-shaped leaves attached to either side. (Illustrations courtesy of Ivarest.)

How to create a garden in a basket

The Hanging Gardens of Babylon may have inspired the current rage for suspended baskets of flowering and foliage plants. Whatever their origin, these colorful "sky gardens" are happy additions to the gardening scene.

You can be "all thumbs" and still create a distinctive sky garden, according to Toni Parsons. She is an outdoor container plant designer for world-famous Roger's Gardens, the showplace garden center in Newport Beach, Cal. The center is the West Coast home of the PBS television series, The Victory Garden.

One of Toni's original arrangements, which is a favorite with customers, combines gold-and-bronze marigolds, yellow ranunculus, lavender petunias and variegated vinca. You can make one just like it, using Toni's color scheme or your own.

Here is a list of the materials you'll need:

- One 12" shallow wire basket
- One package sheet sphagnum moss
- One package all-purpose potting soil mix
- One 4" pot yellow ranunculus
- Three 4" pots bronze marigolds
- Three 4" pots lavender petunias
- Six 4" pots vinca "Silver Queen"
- One 3-branch hanger or chain ensemble
- Bowl and pitcher of water

Follow these simple step-by-step directions:

1. Soak sheets of sphagnum moss in the bowl of water.
2. Squeeze excess water from the moss and line the bottom of the basket, gently pushing the moss through the wire frame. Overlap the pieces so the soil won't escape.
3. Continue overlapping pieces of moss along the sides of the frame until it is completely covered.
4. Pack thicknesses of moss between the top two wires to form a solid collar around the rim of the basket.
5. Fill the basket with a 2-inch layer of soil. Position the ranunculus in the center so that the top of its rootball is level with the bottom of the collar. Add more soil to the bottom of the basket, if necessary.

6. Form a circle around the ranunculus, alternating one marigold plant and one petunia plant.

7. Position the vinca plants around the inner rim of the basket. Fill the spaces between the plants with more potting soil, tamping it down firmly. Do not fill the basket to the top. Leave about a half-inch of watering space between the soil surface and the rim. Water thoroughly.

8. Attach hanger or chain ensemble (Toni Parsons offers this tip: If you use a hanger, attach it to the basket before you start Step 1 above).

"Sky gardens" can be hung almost anywhere outdoors. If they are placed in heavily trafficked areas, be sure there's enough clearance between the bottoms of the containers and the tops of heads. Avoid placing them where they will be buffeted by strong winds.

Frequent deep waterings are a "must" for hanging basket arrangements because the plants are exposed on all sides.

"Never let the planting dry out," cautions Toni Parsons. "Soak it thoroughly until the water runs out of the bottom of the container, not over the top of the rim."

At Roger's Gardens, hanging basket arrangements are watered and fed dual-action Oxygen Plus® Outdoor Container Plant Food every other day.

It contains urea peroxide, a safe compound that delivers life-giving oxygen and nutrients to the plant roots. At the same time, the oxygen content helps prevent overwatering, the most common cause of plant failure.

Recent testing of plants foods at a major horticultural university demonstrated that Oxygen Plus consistently outperformed a wide variety of other name-brand fertilizers.

Combinations of seasonal annuals in solid or mixed colors are the basis for hanging basket plantings. "Use your own creativity and the sky's the limit," says Toni Parsons.

Developing good consumer habits makes buying lawn and garden, outdoor power equipment easier

Trimmers, power blowers, hedge clippers, chain saws and other outdoor power equipment can make lawn and garden care much easier. But they can also cause headaches.

The engine won't start. It worked just fine before you stored it for the winter, but now it's making a funny noise.

Malfunctioning equipment can cause aggravation and accidents. And then there may be the inconvenience and expense of repairing or replacing units.

Inferior equipment certainly is one cause of potential problems; misuse, improper storage, and inadequate maintenance are others. What's a gardener to do?

Fortunately, there is a solution: Become a good consumer. If you know how to shop for quality equipment and good service, you can make wise purchases in the first place, and know what to do when (or before) something goes wrong.

Shopping for the right dealer is at least as important as looking for the right equipment. Naturally, it helps to choose a sturdy, well-manufactured piece of equipment with a good "track record" for longevity.

Cheap equipment is often just that, but price alone will not tell you what you need to know about the product's quality.

That's the dealer's job. Comparison shop — not only to see what equipment models and prices are available, but to see how you are treated by different sales staffs.

A good salesperson isn't just interested in selling something. He or she should care about you, not just the sales figures.

Look for salespeople who are willing and able to explain and compare product features. Explain what uses you have in mind — does the salesperson then point out specific models and features that will be most appropriate for you?

If you need versatility for specialized uses, does the salesperson suggest accessories or special features that are appropriate?

Look for a dealer that services and sells an entire line of outdoor power equipment. Echo, Incorporated, for example, offers a complete line of chain saws, weed and grass trimmers, brush cutters, hedge trimmers, power blowers, generators, water pumps, and a complete line of attachments and accessories.

Both light and heavyweight products are available for a wide range of homeowner and commercial uses.

Good salespeople are happy, even eager, to demonstrate the power equipment or have you try using it. Using the equipment yourself is the best way to find out whether a mower engine is hard to start, a saw is too heavy for you, or a blower really can move autumn leaves without disturbing your favorite plants. Some dealers will even let you borrow a demonstration model to try at home.

If you experience a product's performance before you buy, you're less likely to regret your purchase later. Salespeople should encourage your research.

Another thing to notice is the dealer's service facilities. Will you be able to get fast, reliable service? Is the dealership proud of its service facilities, mentioning them as an asset? Do the mechanics seem knowledgeable and willing to answer your questions?

Dealers who assume their job stops after you've paid for your new machine are "fair weather friends," whereas a dealer who is willing to service products well can make life much easier at repair and maintenance time.

Speaking of maintenance, how informative is the dealer about what you need to do to keep your equipment in good working order?

Few consumers are skilled mechanics; dealers who realize this provide instruction in assembling, using, and caring for the power equipment they sell.

Insist on learning about how to change blades, string or chain, add fuel and oil, store the product, and when to bring it in for routine maintenance.

Better yet, find a dealer who doesn't make you insist. Good ones will give you one-to-one instruction and/or offer classes in maintenance and safety.

If a dealer says "read the manual" when you ask about safety precautions or maintenance procedures, it's time to shop somewhere else.

A responsible dealer makes absolutely sure that you know how to handle the product, use ear and eye protection, and store equipment safely.

Buying a reliable, well-made product from a dealer who is willing to go an extra mile or two to satisfy you is the way to avoid power equipment blues.

After all, power equipment is supposed to be a help in your garden and lawn work. Make sure you don't get less than you deserve.

TO MAINTAIN A SLEEK AND NEAT APPEARANCE IN THE GARDEN, it is necessary to utilize a variety of lawn and garden products. One piece of outdoor power equipment, alone, may not provide the desired results.

Your garden should be a beautiful reflection of your personal style

One of the most enjoyable aspects of gardening is the pure physical work that is involved. This, coupled with being outdoors among the flowers and trees, makes gardening one of the most relaxing and therapeutic pastimes imaginable.

Nothing clears your head of the everyday trivialities and problems of life better than getting out in the air, working with the soil, and being able to enjoy the fruits of your labor.

The ultimate retreat

For many, a garden is the ultimate retreat. It is an expression of nature that is at once peaceful, beautiful and pure.

And, whether you are a city or country dweller, you can have a garden in some form or another.

The other wonderful aspect of having a garden is that you can create your own. Whether it be a flower, vegetable, herb, rose, Japanese or English cottage garden, it can be a true expression of your own individual style.

Factors to consider

When deciding what type of garden you will create, a few factors should be taken into consideration. Climate, type of soil, drainage, position, and access to direct sunlight are all important factors.

Consider how large you would like your garden to be, being careful to note how much time you have to devote to it. You can then draw a diagram of your garden on paper, noting the space you wish to assign to each flower or vegetable. This will enable you to decide how much seed and how many plants you need to buy.

Protecting your garden

To avoid damage by small animals such as dogs, rabbits or moles, protect your garden with a fence that is fairly high and tightly woven.

The time you will need and the method of preparing a garden for planting will depend heavily on the type of soil you have and the geographical location. However, there are a few hard and fast rules pertaining to soil preparation that work for most all areas.

Soil that is fertile with organic matter, well-drained and relatively free of rocks is necessary for a successful garden.

Good air and drainage — that is, free movement of air to lower levels — are necessary to lessen the damage that can be caused by frost.

There are many things that you can do in the spring to protect your seedlings from frost.

If you are able to, plant your garden on a high spot; a south-facing slope or a spot along the south wall of a building is warmer than most places and will provide some protection for your plants.

Coverings for plants — whether they be old blankets, buckets, baskets, sheets or black plastic — will trap heat that rises from the earth while allowing some air to circulate, discouraging the formation of ice crystals.

A myriad of possibilities

The varieties of gardens you could plant are endless, but one of the prettiest, most natural and easiest to create is the English cottage garden.

Informal, colorful and fragrant, this type of garden provides a natural environment for flowers and shrubs. Wisteria, climbing roses, delphiniums, bachelor buttons, daisies, daylilies, basil, mint, lavender and sunflowers are just some of the flowers and herbs that make an English garden special.

Very often these gardens look as though they must have been very carefully planned, given the overall harmony of the flowers and the resemblance to an Impressionist watercolor.

Natural beauty

The truth is that nature, more times than not, is a better orchestrator than we are, allowing the natural beauty of wild flowers to come through.

Whichever method of gardening you choose and whatever type of garden you create, enjoying the creative process and the beauty of the flowers and plants is the true purpose of this wonderful pastime.

Repairing Closet Doors

Closet Doors appear simple and usually operate smoothly for years. Fixing one, however, can easily become an exercise in futility! Many homes have malfunctioning closet doors because, either the repair parts cannot be located, or the principle of their operation is so unique that the average homeowner is reluctant to undertake the project.

For more information on where these universal parts are sold in your community and a copy of "The 15 minute Fix-it Guide for Closet Doors", write L.E. Johnson Products, Inc., Dept. HT, Box 1126, Elkhart, Indiana 46515.

Gardening: An occupation for just about all seasons

For gardeners who think there may be a time limit on the gardening season, the National Gardening Association experts have ideas on how to continue gardening, despite colder temperatures.

The National Gardening Association, based in Burlington, Vermont, has researched a coldframe/hotframe "Greenbox" to help start extra-early spring crops, and extend gardens and harvests through fall and winter.

"NGA experts have developed a plan for this Greenbox with details on the construction and use of the coldframe. This special 'Greenbox' can extend either end of the gardening season and, as well, serve in summer's heat as a food dryer," said Charles Scott, president of the non-profit, 250,000 member-supported National Gardening Association.

"We know gardeners need the best help and information to keep crops growing, so we compiled months of research to develop our Greenbox coldframe.

"Besides extending the growing season, this special Greenbox can help preserve fruits and vegetables for winter," Scott continued.

"Our NGA Greenbox plan shows gardeners how to construct the coldframe and use it to garden in many seasons. In addition, the Greenbox can serve to dehydrate garden produce as it converts easily into a food dehydrator in summer, so it's useful every month of the year," Scott said.

A special feature in National Gardening magazine explains how to use the coldframe as a food dryer. First, cover the soil in the Greenbox and the interior front and back walls with black plastic. Then, replace sides with two pieces of plywood into which holes are drilled at ground level to provide air circulation.

Inside the Greenbox, window screens can be inserted (supported on either clay or plastic pots) to use as food drying trays. When the sunlight heats the interior, fresh air is pulled in through the holes at ground level. This air heats and flows out through the vented Greenbox lid/door.

"We found the Greenbox to be invaluable to serious gardeners," said Scott.

For a sample copy of the National Gardening magazine featuring the Greenbox and the special plan, send $1 to cover postage and handling to National Gardening, 180 AJ Flynn Avenue, Burlington, VT 05401.

The tomato: A favorite of the country's gardeners

The nation's number one vegetable is ripening on the vine from coast to coast. According to the National Gardening Survey, 33 million American households or nine out of 10 gardeners are growing tomatoes, the nation's number one home-grown vegetable.

As harvest time approaches, those 33 million gardening households are looking for creative uses and ways to preserve what amounts to over four billion pounds of tomatoes.

Answer for tomato growers

"We have just the answer," says Charles Scott, president of The National Gardening Association, based in Burlington, Vermont, "The Gardens for All Book of Tomatoes."

"This 36-page book on tomatoes covers helpful information on harvesting, fall tomatoes and step-by-step tips for preserving by canning and freezing methods," Scott says. The Gardens for All Book of Tomatoes includes favorite tomato recipes such as Tomato Sauce, Paste, Gazpacho, Relish, and even Tomato Jam and Bread, among others.

Useful to gardeners

"Our book is useful to gardeners, year round," says Scott. "It features information on everything about tomatoes from varieties, growing steps and new ideas to harvest, preserving and even recipes."

NGA is offering this book free to all interested gardeners looking for ideas and information on ways to make the best use of the nation's most popular garden vegetable.

Send $1 to cover postage and handling to National Gardening Association, 180 TMS Flynn Avenue, Burlington, VT 05401.

Learn how basic care can help make your rose garden flourish

Roses are delicate, beautiful flowers that look like they can be grown only by professional gardeners.

But, by becoming knowledgeable of the five basic steps to rose care — planting, watering, fertilizing, pruning and pest control — you can grow your own vibrant rose garden.

Planting

The ideal location for a rose garden is a spot with an eastern exposure that provides at least six hours of sun a day.

However, the absence of an ideal spot shouldn't discourage anyone — roses are hardy flowers and can thrive almost anywhere.

One of the most important steps toward ensuring a healthy rose is the planting hole. A hole approximately 2 feet wide and 1½ feet deep will provide the rose with plenty of room to grow.

Watering

Roses are thirsty plants that require a lot of water. As a general rule, roses should be watered once a week throughout the growing season.

During the hottest part of the summer when the roses are in flower, you may want to water everyday. Be sure the surrounding ground is thoroughly soaked.

Morning is the best time to water roses because leaves dry quickly — preventing diseases from developing.

Fertilizing

Most garden roses require regular feeding. Nitrogen, phosphorus and potassium are the primary nutrients roses need for proper growth.

Whether organic or inorganic, fertilizers help grow sturdy plants with green leaves and vibrant flowers. It is best to fertilize once a month throughout the growing season.

Pruning

The best time to prune is in spring just as the buds are beginning to swell. The first step when pruning any rose is to cut the dead canes to the crown. Remove all of the weak, spindly growth that tends to crowd the center of the bush.

Pest protection

A rose's most feared enemies are aphids and mites. If your roses are left unprotected, these two pests may drain the life from the rose bush.

Aphids are easily recognized as tiny insects which primarily cluster on soft, new growth. Mites are almost invisible; however, their presence is made evident by the fine webs they make on the undersides of leaves.

Two of the most popular methods of pest protection are spraying and dusting. Most spray and dust products available contain toxic chemicals which not only kill the most harmful pests but also kill the rose's natural protectors such as ladybugs and honeybees.

Reuter Laboratories, a manufacturer of natural pesticides, has developed Aphid-Mite Attack™, a natural pesticide which protects roses from aphids and mites without affecting beneficial insects.

Aphid-Mite Attack is an insecticidal soap sprayed directly on the insects, killing them instantly. In addition to its quick-killing capabilities, the product is biodegradable.

No harmful residue

The natural spray can be applied up to harvest time because it does not leave behind a harmful residue.

It is not difficult to grow a prosperous rose garden if you follow the few simple steps discussed (planting, watering, fertilizing, pruning and pest control).

Realizing it takes a little time and knowledge, you, too, can have a rose garden that looks like it was taken care of by professionals.
