U.S. Waves Trade Bill As Japan's Surplus Soars

By TOM RAUM
AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is threatening to veto a tough trade-retaliation bill, but without offering much hope that existing sanctions that Japanese Prime Minister calls a "sore thorn" will be lifted quickly.

Nakasone had sought an end to the penalty tariffs on $300 million in Japanese televisions, computers and power tools. But the Reagan administration is insisting first on proof that Japan has complied with an agreement on computer chip pricing.

Nakasone called the sanctions "a very sore thorn sticking in our small finger. We have to remove that thorn as soon as possible."

U.S. officials hailed the goodwill announcement by Nakasone that he had ordered Japanese banks to lower interest rates.

The administration long has pressed Japan to take steps to stimulate domestic growth, including a lowering of key interest rates, in hopes that it would help boost demand there for U.S. goods.

In Tokyo today, the dollar closed at 140.30 yen, up .65 yen from Thursday's close. Analysts said most of the strength was the result of comments Thursday by Nakasone and Paul A. Volcker, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, who said the dollar had "absolutely and fundamentally" fallen far enough.

The board, facing up to the continuing fall of the dollar, moved to tighten federal monetary policy.

In another development, the Japanese Finance Ministry announced that Japan's trade surplus soared to a record $101.4 billion in the fiscal year that ended March 31.

The surplus had been $61.1 billion in the previous fiscal year.

On Thursday, Reagan promised Nakasone he would veto a major trade bill if it reaches his desk in the form it passed the House. The measure calls for stiff retaliation against Japan and other countries that maintain large trade surpluses with the United States.

The House-passed bill would force Japan and other countries that maintain huge trade surpluses with the United States through unfair trading practices to reduce those imbalances by 10 percent annually — or face stiff sanctions.

Reagan told the Japanese leader he was optimistic such a veto could be sustained because of the narrow House margin of four votes by which the sanctions provision, an amendment by Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., was approved Wednesday.

Despite the slim margin, the House went on to approve the overall trade bill containing the amendment on Thursday by a 290-137 vote.

That vote, in fact, represented a margin that would be large enough to override a veto — a two-thirds majority.

Nakasone, in a statement, said that while he shared "the serious concern of the U.S. Congress over the trade imbalances, I am apprehensive that the bill, if legislated, may lead to a contraction of world trade. I sincerely hope that the current bill will not be legislated in its current form."

Regarding a more immediate trade irritant between the two economic allies, Reagan failed to give Nakasone the prize he had sought: an immediate lifting of the tariffs on the $300 million in Japanese electronics goods.

The administration has said it first needs proof Japan is living up to a 1986 promise not to sell computer chips in foreign markets at bargain-basement prices, undercutting U.S. sales.

Reagan cited a violation of that agreement in slapping the 100 percent duties on the Japanese products on April 17. Administration officials have said the sanctions would remain on for at least two or three months.

The visiting Japanese leader also got some blunt comments on the U.S.-Japanese trade imbalance in a visit with Senate leaders.

School System Unveils Proposed $15.1 Million Budget For '87-88

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County's school system has unveiled a proposed 1987-88 fiscal year operating budget calling for nearly $1.4 million more in expenditures than this year.

The $15,103,961 budget proposal was presented to the Pitt County Board of Education at a workshop meeting Thursday. It will be considered for approval at the board's regularly scheduled meeting Monday at 7 p.m. in the Pitt County Office Building.

The approved operating budget for the current fiscal year for the school system is $13,741,399.

The financial plan consists of estimates of the proposed expenditures for the fiscal year and anticipated revenues that will finance the expenses, including requests for local funds and estimated state revenues which will not be appropriated until October.

The 1987-1988 fiscal year budget includes a request of $11,086,229 from the Pitt County commissioners.

In addition to the operating budget, capital reserve funds requested by the system for capital outlay expenses total $3,000,000 in the upcoming fiscal year. The funds are appropriated by the Pitt County Commissioners and the accounting of the funds is done by and through Pitt County.

Dan Thomas, controller of financial services, noted that the local budget must be approved by the board and forwarded to the County Commissioners by May 15. The state Legislature, which adds funding to the budget, operates on a later fiscal year, so exact resource amounts are not known in May and state estimates must be used in compiling the budget.

An interim budget resolution must be approved by the board by July 1 to operate the system until the final resolution is prepared. By Oct. 1, all resources will be consolidated and an accurate operating plan will be presented to the board.

The budget includes a 5 percent salary increase for system employees. The additional salary appropriations should assist in teacher recruitment.

Included in the budget is the second phase of extra pay for extra duty for athletics and arts instructors. The teacher supplement increases from 1.75 percent to 2.25 percent.

Retirement was projected in the budget at 11.5 percent rather than at the current rate of 11.2 percent to offset any legislated increases which normally come late in the session, Thomas said.

Hospitalization was projected at a 10 percent increase. Thomas noted that this increase may prove to be low, as premiums and cost containment are discussed in the legislative session and the state has not provided the school system with projected cost data.

Included in the budget is the opening of the 31st school in the system, the new elementary school located on the old County Home property in the D.H. Conley attendance area.

The budget provides for the expansion of guidance services to include 120-month guidance at the high schools. This expansion was a request of the principals.

In the plant maintenance area of the budget, funds have been provided for the expansion of energy control in the schools.

The remainder of the budget sets aside the funds needed to continue the educational programs on the same level they have been operating.

POSTHUMOUS AWARD — Mary Jo Nimmo, acting head flight nurse of Pitt County Memorial Hospital's EastCare Air Ambulance Service, accepted the hospital foundation's annual service award Thursday night on behalf of the three EastCare crew members who were killed Jan. 8.

EastCare Team Receives Award

By CAROL TYER

There were few dry eyes in the hotel ballroom Thursday night when the annual Pitt Memorial Hospital Foundation award for service was given posthumously to the EastCare team who died in a Jan. 8 helicopter crash.

For the past six years, the award has been given during this annual benefit banquet to an individual deemed to have contributed most to health care excellence in Pitt County.

It was given for excellence this year, too, not to one person, but to three — Mike McGinnis, head flight nurse of Pitt Memorial's air ambulance service, Pamela Demaree, also an EastCare nurse, and Perry Reynolds, an EastCare pilot.

Kenneth Dews, the hospital foundation officer who presented the award, said the three were "pioneers seeking always to do the best in their field." He dedicated the ceremony Thursday night to their memory and said a plaque in their honor would be "placed prominently in the hospital."

Mary Jo Nimmo, acting head flight nurse now, wept as she accepted the award on behalf of her team members. She promised that the present EastCare crew would "carry on the tradition of excellent service they started."

The banquet is the hospital endowment fund organization's biggest fund-raiser of each year. Tickets cost $35 each and all proceeds beyond expenses go into the hospital foundation endowment fund.

Entertainment for the evening was provided by the Barbara Berry Singers.

Prime Jumps

NEW YORK (AP) — Major U.S. banks raised their prime lending rate to 8 percent from 7.75 percent today, a month after the banking industry lifted the key rate a quarter percentage point.

Bond and stock prices fell following the announcement.

Citibank, the nation's largest bank, and Chase Manhattan, the third largest, were the first to announce an increase. No. 5 Manufacturers Hanover, No. 8 Bankers Trust Co. and First National Bank of Chicago, ranked 11th, made similar announcements shortly after.

The prime is the benchmark used by banks to set interest rates on a variety of corporate and consumer loans, including some mortgages.

Poles See May Day Protests

By The Associated Press

Polish riot police moved against Solidarity supporters in several cities today where May Day marches were mounted to counter Communist Party-organized parades on this international workers holiday.

There was violence in Sri Lanka, the island state off India where May Day rallies were banned because of a recent upsurge in ethnic violence. At least one anti-government demonstrator was killed.

In the Communist giants that proclaim themselves workers states — the Soviet Union and China — the party rulers led the celebrations.

Eastern N.C. Ranks High In Heart Disease, Strokes

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

North Carolina is in the heart disease and stroke belt of the country with higher mortality and morbidity rates for the diseases than the national average, said the president of the state affiliate of the American Heart Association.

"North Carolina is not doing as well as the rest of the country — especially in the eastern section," said Dr. Leonard S. Gettes, who also is chief of the cardiology division in the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill School of Medicine. He spoke recently at an AHA Food Writers Forum in Chapel Hill.

The state age-adjusted death rate due to heart disease was 193.9 per 100,000 population in 1984, while the national death rate was 183.6 per 100,000 population, he said. Strokes accounted for 41.6 per 100,000 population in the 1984 state death rate and for 33.4 per 100,000 population in the nation.

"Cardiovascular disease is the leading cause of death in North Carolina as it is for the U.S. as a whole," Gettes said. Heart attacks top the national list of cardiovascular diseases as the cause of about 55 percent of the deaths.

It is followed by stroke causing about 16 percent of the deaths and hypertensive diseases causing about three percent.

A heart attack is caused by the blockage of an artery, Gettes said.

The heart "is just a great big muscle and like any other muscle it has to have blood coming to it."

"Coronary arteries are only about as big as the end of a pen," he said. "It doesn't take much to fill that. When it gets totally clogged off ... that's a heart attack."

A stroke "has to do with a loss of brain tissue," Gettes said. Causes of a stroke include the rupture of a blood vessel, blockage of blood vessels in the brain and a clot or plaque in the arteries.

While heart disease still leads the state and the country in the cause of deaths, it is on the decline, he said.

The state heart disease death rate dropped to 188.4 per 100,000 population. (See HEART, A-16)

Schools Say Plant Needs Will Cost Over $12 Million

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

More than $12 million over a period of five years will be necessary for all of the Pitt County schools to be in excellent physical condition, members of the Board of Education were told at a recent workshop meeting.

A report on capital outlay analysis was presented by Thomas L. Craft Jr., associate superintendent of support services for the school system. The report shows in detail the deficiencies at each school, the corrections needed to improve the physical plant and the amount of funding needed to complete the project.

The report is based on three studies of the school system: Pitt County-Greenville City Schools Planning Data completed in 1977-1978, the Research Triangle Institute Merger Feasibility Study of 1983, and the Willis Survey of 1986.

The action timeline, based on the condition of the school and the need for the improvements, covers five fiscal years beginning this school year and running until 1990-1991.

The funds for the construction projects are appropriated by the Pitt County Commissioners.

The funds for some of the projects necessitated by building condition or attendance line changes have been set aside this fiscal year, however the improvement work will not begin until the students leave for summer vacation.

The information presented to the school board by attendance area in the report follows.

Ayden-Grifton Attendance Area
The total estimated costs for the improvements in this attendance area is $470,000.

AYDEN ELEMENTARY SCHOOL — The facility is rated good or very good.

The report recommended eliminating temporary facilities (trailers) and providing specialty areas for indoor physical activities.

The report suggests the transfer of grade four to Ayden Middle to eliminate the need for temporary facilities and construction of a specialized area for indoor play and physical education.

The total approximate cost is $150,000 in the 1987-1988 fiscal year.

AYDEN-GRIFFON HIGH SCHOOL — The primary need at the school involves Environmental Protection Agency regulations to the sewerage system, the report said. The school is in excellent condition, according to the study.

The report suggests consulting engineers to recommend the most feasible and cost-efficient corrections for the on-site sewerage system.

The approximate cost is $70,000 in the 1988-1989 fiscal year.

AYDEN-MIDDLE SCHOOL — The facility is excellent and has no current capital outlay needs, according to the report.

GRIFFON SCHOOL — The school is rated in good to very good condition.

The report notes that the vocational program is conducted in the old lunchroom building, separated from the school by a road. Due to the location and longevity of this building, the report recommends replacing the building. There also is the need to expand the media center to accommodate the present enrollment at the school.

The report suggests adding classroom space to eliminate the use of the old lunchroom building and enlarging the media center.

The cost will be about $250,000 in the 1987-1988 fiscal year.

D.H. Conley Attendance Area

The total cost estimate for the projects in the attendance area is $1,560,000.

A.G. COX SCHOOL — The report notes that the old wood frame vocational shop building is being used as classroom spaces. Beginning with the 1987-1988 school year, Cox will accommodate grades six through eight; this organizational change facilitates the need to provide adequate specialized areas which are housed in the frame buildings. There are EPA regulations to be met regarding the facility.

The school is in the good to very good category.

Recommendations of the report include: meet EPA regulations; update science area, and add classrooms to accommodate art, music, band and vocational programs.

The estimated cost of $500,000 comes from funds set aside this fiscal year.

CHICOD SCHOOL — The facility is rated good to very good.

The old vocational shop building is located some distance from the main building and is being used for classroom space and specialized areas, the report said. The sewer system must meet EPA regulations.

Additional classroom buildings should be built to eliminate the old shop building, according to the report. The sewerage system also must be upgraded.

The approximate cost of the project, set for fiscal year 1988-1989, is $250,000.

D.H. CONLEY HIGH SCHOOL — The report states that addition to the facility should be completed in June of this year, thereby meeting capital outlay needs. The addition accommodates music and band facilities and specialized areas for science and math.

The facility is in excellent condition,

Protect The Pamlico

It's not a glamorous project.

It's not like the Hatteras Lighthouse campaign, where you can ride by and point with pride at a visible symbol of hard work.

The move to preserve the Tar-Pamlico River Basin will be just as hard, but less tangible. If you dip a handful of water, it's likely it will look the same before and after.

The things that aren't visible in the water, however, make the difference. Nitrogen, phosphorus, sediment and fresh water are there in alarming quantities — large enough amounts to kill fish, reduce marine catches, send oyster beds retreating downstream and produce slimy, destructive algae.

These changes in the river basin have prompted timely and justified concern. The Tar-Pamlico is an important resource, a beautiful, bountiful playground and workspace being beleaguered by pollution and abuse. It is imperative that work toward reversing this process begin now.

The river cannot take any more pressure from agricultural, industrial, and residential sources. If the communities that line its banks continue to stress the river, the potential and promise that it holds will diminish beyond recovery. This destruction must not be permitted to occur. State natural resource officials need to prioritize safeguarding the river's water quality.

The Tar-Pamlico basin must be saved from the fate that beset the Chesapeake Bay. This effort goes beyond the people that work the river, love the river and need the river. These groups already know firsthand the consequences of stress on the river. To successfully save the Pamlico-Tar, everyone must be cognizant of its value.

The awareness created by the Pamlico-Tar Foundation is essential to save the river. The organization has come of age — no longer are its members strictly biologists, environmentalists or property owners. It is now an alliance of concerned residents, sportsmen, commercial fishermen and farmers.

The natural beauty and recreation value of the river are sufficient reasons to save this resource. Productivity and profitability are two other important reasons. Fishermen pull their livings from this expanse of water and its estuaries. Others seek respite from the pressures of the work-a-day world in its quietude.

To Greenville, the river is a water source. It eliminates the need for expensive, deep water wells. The city draws a plentiful water supply from the Tar. The more pollution and nutrients the river contains, the more it costs to remove these substances from the water. For this reason, Greenville has a high stake in preserving the quality of the river.

The phosphate ban is a beginning. Declaring the river nutrient-sensitive and helping farmers pay for controlling runoff would be another helpful measure. But some control on the amount of phosphorus discharged into the river by wastewater plants and industries may be necessary. Controls on fresh water that enter the river may also be needed.

It is time for the state — and the communities in the 17-county Tar-Pamlico River Basin — to recognize the environmental dilemma facing the nation's second largest marine estuary and take positive steps to protect it from demise.

Reserves Reduced

Tobacco news these days is usually dismal.

Sometimes, however, there is a ray of sunshine for the tobacco producer as he absorbs the daily attacks on his livelihood. There was one this week. The buyout of Flue Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corp. huge stocks of surplus tobacco is working.

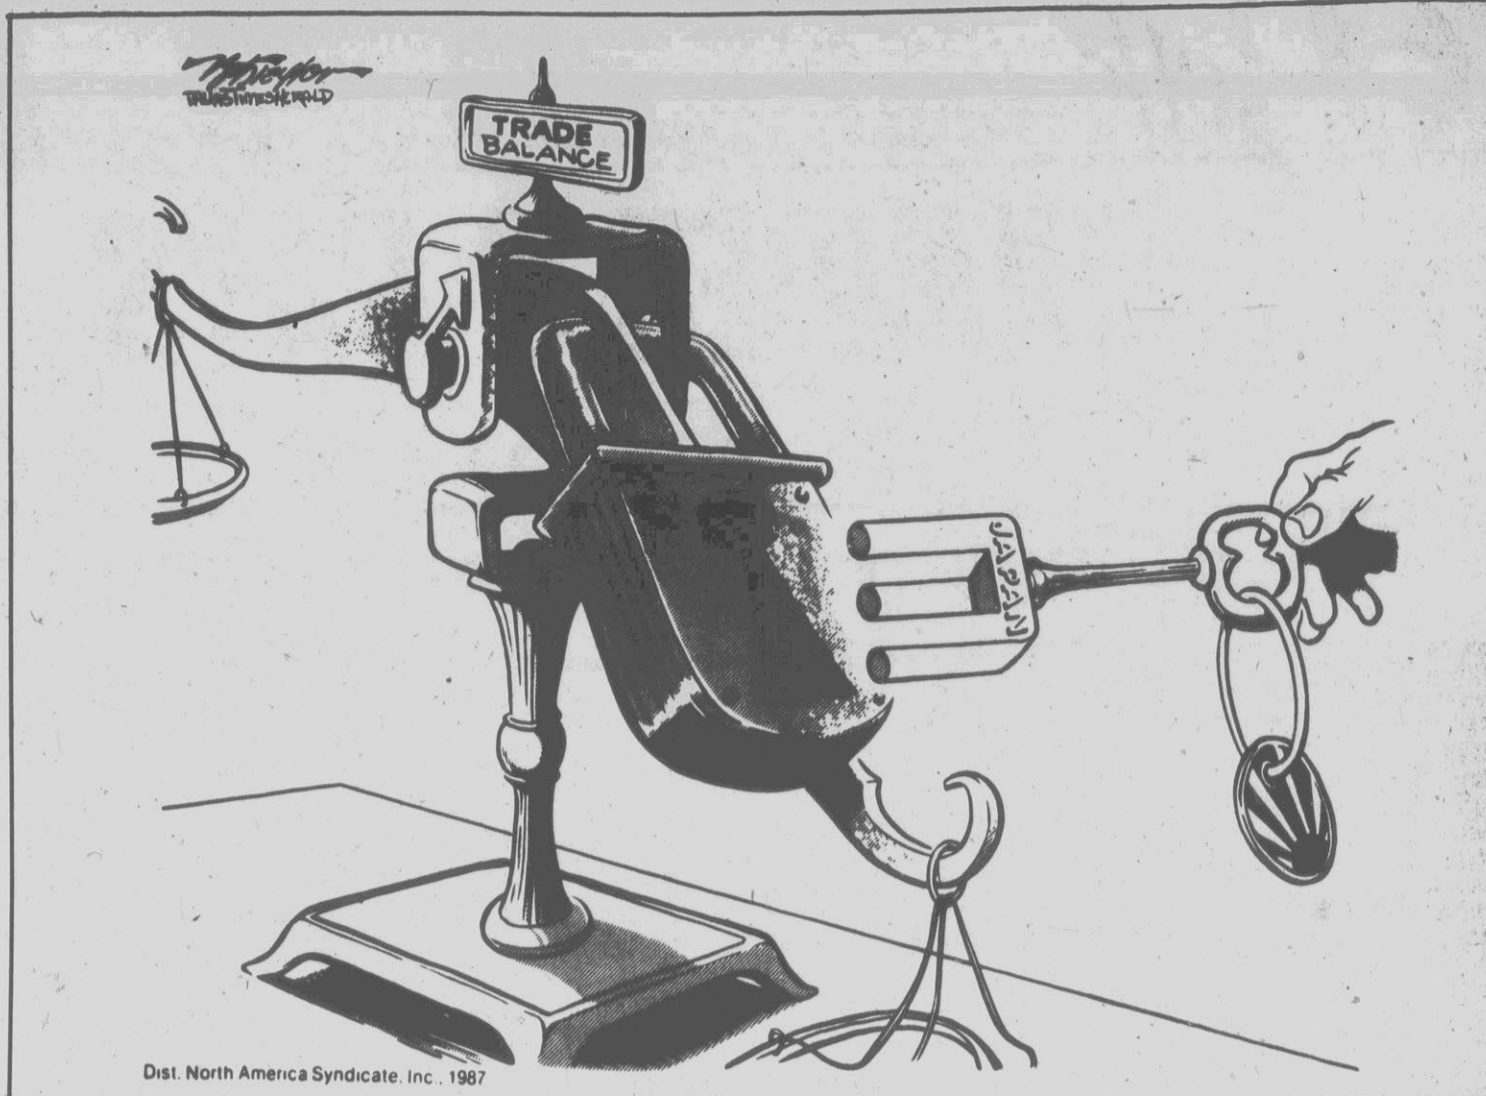

Fred Bond, general manager of Stabilization, said the four cigarette manufacturers who agreed to buy the 584 million pounds of surplus tobacco have purchased more than half of it. Bond said the companies have bought 51 percent of the Stabilization tobacco since July 1986.

The companies had agreed to purchase the surplus within eight years. The action meant a significant drop in the assessment tobacco growers were paying to operate the tobacco program.

While the buy-out plan seems to be working, Bond warned that care must be taken to see that the tobacco surplus doesn't rebuild.

Tobacco experts are also telling the growers they must produce a quality product. They warned against the "nesting" practice — mixing foreign material with good tobacco on the warehouse floors. It was also suggested that different grades be separated. Mixing grades sometimes means that buyers can't get the specific tobacco that they want. That is age-old advice which is particularly significant now as a new planting season begins.

The best news for tobacco farmers as they transplant their tobacco is that Stabilization's huge reserves are being reduced. Only a year ago the reserves threatened to bankrupt Stabilization or place an unbearable cost upon the growers in way of soaring assessments.

Trade Debate Shows Growing Concern

WASHINGTON — The House debate on trade legislation this week demonstrated the growing national concern over the United States' weakened position in the world economy, but it also underscored deep divisions on how to deal with an issue that could play a major role in the 1988 presidential campaign.

The 290 to 137 vote by which the trade bill cleared the House Thursday was a strong signal of discontent with the trade deficit and the perception of unfair trading practices by U.S. allies, notably Japan. Forty-three Republicans voted for the measure despite the inclusion of a controversial amendment sponsored by Rep. Richard A. Gephardt, D-Mo., that has drawn a veto threat from the White House.

Congress, Gephardt said after his amendment was adopted Wednesday, "has said clearly and unequivocally that it wants a change in trade policy."

Thursday's vote reinforced that impression, but the signals were less clear on the Gephardt amendment itself, which became the centerpiece of the debate. The amendment — which would require tough retaliatory actions against countries with huge trade surpluses that refuse to halt unfair-trading practices — was adopted by only a four-vote margin.

The House vote on the amendment illustrated some of the divisions that presidential candidates of both parties, including Gephardt, will have to assess as they refine their positions on the question of U.S. "competitiveness." While there was overwhelming sentiment in the House for a "tough" trade policy, many warned against inviting retaliation and possibly setting off an international trade war.

No one, several lawmakers said, wants the United States to be a "patsy" to its trading partners, but there was an equally strong aversion to being tagged a "protectionist."

"There are no protectionists in the United States Congress," said Gephardt, who has used the trade issue to raise the visibility of his presidential campaign at the cost of charges of protectionism by his critics.

The 218-to-214 vote approving the Gephardt amendment was largely along party lines, but it also revealed other cleavages, most notably between lawmakers from the so-called "Rust Belt" in the industrial Midwest and Northeast and their colleagues from the West Coast.

House Democrats in Indiana, Michigan, Ohio and Pennsylvania voted unanimously for the Gephardt amendment. In the industrial belt that stretches from Illinois to Massachusetts, Democrats voted 74 to 10 for the measure.

It was also in this region that a majority of Republican defections occurred. Of the 17 Republicans who supported the Gephardt amendment, 13 represent districts in this aging industrial area.

In contrast, a slim majority of Democrats from the three Pacific Coast states joined all Republicans from their region in opposing Gephardt. "We obviously are all very trade sensitive and recognize the huge export market for California," said Rep. George Miller, D-Calif., of the West Coast vote. "We've tried to develop the concept of the Pacific rim with the economic benefits to trade with Asian nations."

In his district east of San Francisco, Miller added, "they don't see international trade in the same light as other people. By the same token, they don't want to be suckers and that's why we need a trade bill."

Elsewhere in the country, the political signals from the House vote on the trade issue were mixed. Southern lawmakers voted overwhelmingly along party lines, but there were also signs of uncertainty, particularly in Georgia, where five of the state's eight House Democrats opposed the Gephardt amendment.

Rep. Richard B. Ray, D-Ga., said Georgia Democrats discussed the Gephardt amendment and "we kind of felt it was sending a little too strong a signal, where it might provoke retaliatory measures." In Georgia, he said, the textile industry is rebounding and retaliation could hurt.

Similar sentiments were clear in the Midwest. In Iowa, where the presidential process will begin in February, the state's four Republican House members and one of the two Democrats opposed the Gephardt amendment.

Rep. Timothy J. Penny, D-Minn., who represents a rural district north of the Iowa border, also opposed the measure, noting that three countries targeted by Gephardt account for about one-third of U.S. agriculture exports. "There may be a lot of sentiment on the stump for fair trade, but if you get down to it people come out against protectionism," he said.

Glasnost And Kuklinski Undercover

WASHINGTON — While Mikhail Gorbachev struggles to reform the Soviet Union internally, a self-exiled Polish patriot, whose undercover signal to the U.S. stymied a 1980 Soviet invasion against Solidarity, exposes an external threat to Moscow — a time-bomb ticking away in Eastern Europe.

Former Polish Col. Ryszard Kuklinski has been living undercover since escaping Poland in 1981 to avoid arrest by the Polish dictator, Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski. In translated portions not yet published from his long, gripping interview with the Paris-based Polish-language magazine Kultura, Kuklinski says opposition to Jaruzelski had penetrated top ranks of the army. Solidarity, he said, would have survived if Jaruzelski had stood up to the Soviets.

What gives contemporary significance to Kuklinski's revelations of the seven-year old tragedy of Solidarity is the strong probability that Gorbachev's glasnost will spill over into Eastern Europe. The Soviet leader has made speeches in Warsaw, Prague and elsewhere promoting reform and promising better, more productive lives for people. He is courting leaders of Soviet satellite states and has made Jaruzelski a clear first among East European equals.

If, as expected, glasnost enhances self-confidence among communist satellite leaders and broadens the small freedoms of Europeans living under Soviet hegemony, the Kremlin may be sowing a whirlwind. The central theme of Kuklinski's interview is that Jaruzelski's total lack of self-confidence and his panicky reaction to pressure from Moscow were the major reasons for the failure of Solidarity. Discussing pro-Solidarity sentiments in the army, Kuklinski denied that he was "unique" or an "exception" as a high-ranking military officer who backed the union in 1980. His job was coordinating at the highest level the secret contacts between Jaruzelski and the Soviet command that was pushing him to smash Solidarity. He said that opponents of the regime, viewing Solidarity as their rallying point, grew geometrically at each crisis point.

At the climactic moments in 1980-1981, when Soviet forces were on the brink of invasion, this anti-Jaruzelski opposition was "flourishing" in the army itself.

"There is no doubt that Solidarity would not have been destroyed and would still be strong," Kuklinski said, if Jaruzelski had stood tall for his country. Moscow would have been forced to learn to live with Solidarity and to cooperate with a more open communist system.

For even in 1980, Kuklinski argues, the Soviets would not have risked European fury by killing thousands of Polish youth in the streets of Warsaw as an aroused Polish population took to the barricades — so long as Jaruzelski, the Communist Party and the army stood with the people and with Solidarity.

Seven years later with Gorbachev and glasnost, slaughter in the streets of Warsaw by Soviet tanks becomes even less probable.

The impact of the colonel's interview has been substantial throughout

Eastern Europe, but little has leaked into the official Polish press. Poland knows only what it has heard from British and U.S. official radio broadcasts and Radio Free Europe. That is true even though Jerzy Urban, the government's spokesman, promised a full "refutation" of Kuklinski's fascinating account when he was first asked about the interview two weeks ago.

But last week, when he next met reporters, he ran away from questions and instead tossed an unproven espionage charge at American diplomat Albert P. Mueller. Mueller left Warsaw on Easter, but Urban still has refused to discuss details of Kuklinski's revelations of the 1980-1981 tragedy.

One possible reason is that Kuklinski is known to have brought highly-sensitive, top-secret documentation of his charges with him when he eluded arrest and managed to escape out of Poland just before the December 1981 imposition of martial law. The Polish regime may fear that Urban's "refutations" would not survive the light of day.

Strength For Today

A bereaved father, who had lost a daughter, recently quoted the following verse:

"Good nothing does, nor suffers to be done, but that thou wouldst thyself,

Couldst thou but see, through all events of things,

As well as He." If we can just believe that all things work together for good to them that love God, and that even the most tragic circumstances will be used by a loving God to enrich our lives and further our spiritual destiny, then we have something to lay hold of in the day of trouble.

God sees the end while we see only the beginning — and very dimly at that.

Mixed Greeting For Pope John Paul II In West Germany

BONN, West Germany — The most enduring image of Pope John Paul II is surely his white-garbed figure descending from an aircraft, his arms spread wide, with the familiar smile bestowed on the welcoming crowd. He has the presence of a religious superstar, attracting not only Catholics but also millions who do not share his faith. He has dazzled Peru's Indians and Australia's aborigines and Moslems and Hindus in the Near and Far East.

Last week this familiar spectacle emanated from West Germany, when the pontiff landed Thursday at Cologne-Bonn Airport to start a five-day trip to 11 cities, his second trip to West Germany and his 34th foreign trip since he succeeded John Paul I in 1978.

For most of the 8½ years of his pontificate, John Paul II has had it his way. But now his most outspoken critics are charging him with using 20th-century techniques to push the church back into the 18th century. Beneath the media spectacle of the papacy, and beyond the power and influence of the Holy See, a profound struggle is taking place. At stake is nothing less than the credibility of the Supreme Pontiff and the Roman Catholic Church as a strong and dynamic institution.

As he began his pilgrimage to West Germany, John Paul's hosts had their hands full keeping the flock in line. Feelings about his visit ran deep, not least among the 28 million Roman Catholics — about 50 percent of the population. In a recent opinion poll, more than half of them expressed indifference or outright opposition to the pope's sojourn. Protestants have also voiced their objection to the pontiff's visit — a dramatic turnaround from the response to his first pilgrimage here in 1980.

At the root of the conflict is the Vatican's campaign to stem the tides of liberalism in Martin Luther's Germany. At the end of World War II the country's Catholics were as conservative as any in Europe. But with the rebuilding of war-torn Germany and the restructuring of its social fabric came the experimentation with ecclesiastical democracy. Catholics and Protestants, priests, nuns and the laity argued with the hierarchy over the course their church should take.

The Protestant leadership decided that in a democratic age their followers should have the right to decide for themselves questions of liturgy and the church's involvement in social matters. The Vatican to this day has traveled a different, more rocky road. As the Pope calls upon the country's Catholic leaders to correct "with charm and firmness" errant thinkers who "proclaim not the truth of Christ but their own theories," theological scholars and practitioners of the parish challenge his rigid stance on issues of family life and morality, discipline among priests and nuns and the authority of the papacy.

The dissenting theologian Hans Kung, who has questioned the personal infallibility of the pope, among other dogmas, has been denied the right to teach Catholic theology, a Vatican decision that drew sharp reactions from many of the church's priests and laity.

In asserting control over doctrine and discipline, John Paul's pontificate has run up against a pressures for more freedom for local and national expressions of Catholicism. Taking their cues from the second Vatican council (1962-1965), which opened up the way for greater involvement of the laity in church worship and urged all to work toward unity with other Christians and closer relations with Jews, Catholics in Germany and elsewhere began to show a heretofore unknown activism in church affairs and social matters. This has been anathema to John Paul II, and he has not been hesitant in repressing those viewed as opposed to the Vatican's central role. Kung, an early target of the papal crackdown, charged that a "new phase of Inquisition" has begun in the Catholic Church, with a pope at the helm who is keen on suppressing problems instead of solving them.

What the Germans are only now beginning to appreciate is that within John Paul there is a fierce and determined belief, dating back to the days of Hitler and the Stalinists, that his church can only become strong if individualism makes room for the requirement of unity.

That, however, has not been the experience of his West German brethren. Under the tutelage of the Americans, British and French they inhaled the winds of democracy after World War II with individual freedoms and civil liberties. They experimented with a decentralized form of governance, and they became quite suspicious of anything that smacked of central dictates and collectivism. That is still the case, particularly with the vocal younger clergy and laity. They take a dim view of papal instructions, be it on church dogma or social matters.

So it was not too surprising when they accused John Paul of undercutting his own call for social justice and democratic rule when he admonished the Latin American clergy not to become a party to the social and political turbulence while, on the other hand, turning a blind eye on the church's active political role in Poland. Moreover, they have charged him with being so adamantly anti-communist that he appears only too willing to receive any dictator who professes to fight "the forces of evil."

Thus, much of the Catholic grassroots movement has begun to resist more firmly the Pope's agenda. The clear majority is opposed to his teaching on such issues as contracception, abortion, celibacy and the ordination of women, and blames him for deepening the divisions between Catholics and Protestants. The fact that John Paul has refused to speak with Germany's Protestant leadership about injecting new life into the faltering ecumenical movement has prompted many in his own church to call for a boycott of his visit.

To make matters worse for the pope, he has also come under intense criticism from Germany's vocal Jewish community. His beatification of Edith Stein, an Orthodox Jew who converted to the Catholic order of the Carmelites during Hitler's reign, opened up old wounds between the two religions. Stein's death in Auschwitz has brought the Holy See's role in the Third Reich under close public scrutiny. What has emerged is a picture of a Vatican led by Pope Pius XI that willfully turned its back on the plight of the persecuted Jews in exchange for Hitler's promise not to nibble away at the Catholic Church's position in Nazi Germany and its influence in the schools.

The widespread criticism of the Catholic Church and the pope's pastoral visit from nearly every religious quarter in Germany, including his own, must be disconcerting to John Paul. Yet he seems undeterred in his efforts to clarify and unify the church's public voice and preserve its heritage, as he sees it. He is bound to leave Germany empty-handed, but may take solace, however, in the realization that throughout its history the Catholic Church has faced persecution, wars and strife, yet has survived and often thrived.

State Legislature Steps Back In Time To Celebrate Historic Tarboro Session

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
TARBORO, N.C. (AP) — The General Assembly took a short break from the mad rush of legislating to embark on its version of Alex Haley's search for his roots.

For about 18 hours Wednesday night and Thursday, lawmakers walked, slept and conducted the state's business in the town where, two centuries before, the assembly pondered whether North Carolina should join the newly formed United States of America or go it alone.

"America has come a long way since those days," Sen. Bill Martin, D-Guilford, told his colleagues in an official session held outdoors under towering oaks and a cloudless sky on the Tarboro Town Common.

Noting that the chief item of business when the Legislature met in Tarboro for a month in 1787 was consideration of the Constitution, Martin said it was "a flawed document" that did not recognize racial minorities as "whole persons."

But Martin, a black, said that despite its imperfections, the Constitution was "solid enough ... to withstand the stormy seas of time yet pliable and fluid enough to change as dictated by the smooth flow of the river of time."

He said North Carolinians should take pride in their refusal to ratify the Constitution until 1789, when the Bill of Rights was added.

Thursday's legislative session got under way at 10 a.m. Senators and representatives sat on folding chairs in roped-off areas perhaps 200 feet apart. The presiding officers, Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan and House Speaker Liston Ramsey, stood behind podiums.

The only official business was the approval of resolutions honoring Cameron S. Weeks, H. Vinson Bridgers and Joseph E. Eagles, deceased former legislators who represented Tarboro and Edgemont County.

Legislators also delivered speeches about the historical significance of the occasion.

North Carolina was the 12th state to ratify the Constitution. While at Tarboro — the Legislature met at different places at the time because there was no permanent state capital — lawmakers authorized the election of delegates to a constitutional convention.

At the July 1788 convention at Hillsborough, delegates voted not to ratify the Constitution. The vote was reversed at a Fayetteville convention in 1789.

The Tarboro assembly, which met in the Edgemont County Courthouse, also enacted 56 laws ranging from establishment of free ferry service across the Tar River to a measure to prevent tobacco fraud.

"The horses are now under the hoods of cars, trucks and buses," Royall said. "The mattresses of corn shucks and pine straw have been replaced by Posturepedics."

"Last night, crabmeat, barbecue, potato salad and strawberries replaced collards, chitlins, turnips and hominy. Better manners have prevailed over fighting and cussing. But the essence of it all is the same."

The celebration, which began Wednesday when buses brought most of the assembly's 170 members to Tarboro for an evening of feasting and ceremony, ended after the sessions. The Senate met for about an hour; the House lingered about 30 minutes longer.

The large, grassy common in the center of town was decked out for the occasion.

At one end was a replica of a Revolutionary military camp with pup tents and a campfire. Men and women dressed in period costumes demonstrated muskets and colonial crafts. Horses, drawing carts, trotted by. Several men wearing the Scottish-style garb of the North Carolina Highland Regiment played bagpipes.

Schoolchildren, many wearing colonial-style garb, frolicked on the grass as a high school band played patriotic and religious tunes.

"This really makes history come alive for these children," said Carolyn Sharpe, a third-grade teacher's aide at Princeville School. "This gives them ... incentive to do a lot better in the classroom."

Last-Minute Bills Create Rush For Drafting Office

RALEIGH (AP) — The bill deadlines intended to shorten the General Assembly session have meant long hours for staff members who deal with each wave of proposed legislation.

Thursday was the cutoff for introduction of public bills, and dozens of bills — particularly controversial ones — poured out.

"I get three minutes to do a bill I should spend three hours on," said Gerry Cohen, director of legislative bill drafting.

Cohen said requests for bills are up 52 percent over this time two years ago, largely in response to a series of bill deadlines. He said getting controversial matters out of the way is part of the plan to reduce session length.

"A lot of the stuff that would have come in in June is coming in now," he said. "To have controversial stuff at the last minute this year you'll need a two-thirds vote (to suspend the rules)."

Among the bills filed Thursday were proposals to:

- Ban tobacco products in public schools.
- Require parental consent for a minor's abortion.
- Make it a felony for someone driving while intoxicated to cause the death of an unborn child.
- Make it a felony to possess more than one-third of an ounce of marijuana.
- Require that 50 percent of bingo proceeds go to charitable organizations.
- Require that food service workers be tested for AIDS.
- Require that all children attend school until they are 17.
- Hold grandparents liable for supporting their minor grandchildren.
- Increase the top fines for DWI.
- Regulate home schools.
- Increase the retirement formula for beneficiaries of the teachers' and state employees' retirement system.
- Make the sweet potato the state vegetable.

Cohen said he had about 50 bills still in various stages of drafting — bills that will likely be granted an extension of the deadline. But he said the deadline appears to be having the desired impact.

Weapons Cache Found In Miller's Trailer

By ERICA JOHNSTON
Associated Press Writer

Former White Patriot Party leader Glenn Miller and two other white supremacists have been ordered held with bond after being captured at a Missouri mobile home that law officers said contained enough weapons "for a small army."

Miller, Douglas Sheets and Robert Eugene "Jack" Jackson Thursday were ordered held in the U.S. Medical Center for Federal Prisoners in Missouri until a Monday hearing on whether they should be returned to North Carolina.

A fourth person arrested, Tony Wydra, was released without being charged, according to a spokeswoman in the U.S. attorney's office.

FBI agent Brian Carroll said the trailer was stocked with pistols, flak jackets, several thousand rounds of ammunition, shotguns, rifles, hand grenades, plastic explosives and pipe bombs.

"This is what happens when white people stand up for their rights," Miller said as he was led to a bond hearing.

Following the hearing, Jackson told reporters "we are political prisoners being prosecuted for our religious beliefs."

U.S. Magistrate James England appointed lawyers to represent Sheets and Jackson. He did not appoint a public defender for Miller after Miller said he had $14,000 in cash in a tin can at the trailer where he was arrested. Authorities later said that money had been recovered.

The four surrendered Thursday morning, after federal agents threw five canisters of tear gas into a mobile home in Missouri.

"They were caught off guard," U.S. Attorney Sam Currin said. "They had no time to think, no time to react."

Forty federal agents surrounded the mobile home in the town of Ozark after evacuating the residents of about 20 other homes in a trailer park, said U.S. Marshal Bill Berryhill at a news conference in Raleigh with Currin.

After staking out the mobile home throughout the night, the agents ordered the men to surrender about 7:20 a.m. EDT, Berryhill said.

When the men did not respond, agents repeated the call over a bullhorn, waited three minutes and threw in the canisters of tear gas.

The four then came out of the trailer.

Currin said that he wanted the remaining three — all fugitives from North Carolina — to return to the state as soon as possible. But he said that could take days, weeks or months.

"We've got to sit down and go through law books and pick and choose what we want to charge them with," Currin said.

The men could be charged with weapons violations, fleeing from justice, making false statements and mail fraud, among other possibilities, Currin said.

Miller, 46, formerly of Angier, was convicted last year of operating a paramilitary organization in defiance of a federal judge's order. He was freed on bail from a six-month prison sentence.

But Miller's bail was revoked and an arrest warrant was issued April 20, after it became clear that he had left Hillsville, Va., where he moved last winter.

Last week, a man who identified himself as Miller called a Raleigh radio station with a list of 17 demands, including the overturning of the contempt of court conviction, a payment of $888,000 and an apology from the government.

"I have eight teams of freedom fighters prepared to start a race war nationwide," Miller said in a statement to WPTF-AM radio April 23. "If the demands are not met in 48 hours, the war will begin shortly thereafter."

Max Geiman, an FBI spokesman in Missouri, said the FBI office in New Orleans was informed on Tuesday that Miller had recently purchased a 1975 Chevrolet van from a dealer in Monroe, La.

Miller bought the van under the name of Walter Johnson, Berryhill said.

While FBI agents questioned the dealer about the purchase, Miller — using the name Walter Johnson — called the dealer and asked that the papers on the van be mailed to Springfield, Mo., Geiman said.

"That's divine providence if I've ever saw it," Currin said.

On Wednesday morning, an FBI agent in Springfield, Mo., noticed the same van at a shopping center, Geiman said.

"As a result of that, very intensive surveillance of that van was set up by the U.S. marshal and FBI. ... And that surveillance ended up putting Miller with these associates and led them to this trailer residence," Geiman said.

The arrests and indictments of several white supremacists in Arkansas last week "deal a real death blow to the movement in North Carolina," Currin said. "The entire movement has been dealt a real serious, and I believe a fatal blow."

There probably are fewer than 50 members of the White Patriot Party or its successor, the Southern National Front, in North Carolina, Currin said.

Sheets, formerly of rural Chandler, Okla., was wanted by federal authorities because he failed to honor a subpoena to testify in the conspiracy trial of fellow party member Stephen Miller earlier this month in Elizabeth City, Currin said.

Jackson, of Midwest City, Okla., was found guilty in absentia with former White Patriot Party official Stephen Miller in that trial.

Wydra, 19, of Fayetteville, who is Jackson's half-brother, was acquitted of conspiracy charges in that trial. Stephen Miller, Jackson and Wydra were accused of conspiring to blow up the Southern Poverty Law Center in Montgomery, Ala., and to assassinate its leader, civil rights attorney Morris Dees.

Federal Suit Challenges School Elections In Granville Country

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Justice Department says the at-large method of electing school board members in Granville County, N.C., discriminates against blacks and has filed a lawsuit to get the election system changed.

"Black citizens in North Carolina, including Granville County, have suffered from a history of official discrimination and continue to bear the effects of past discrimination," the suit filed in U.S. District Court in Raleigh Thursday said.

Noting that blacks made up 40.9 percent of the county's voting age population in 1980, the suit said, "No black person has been elected to the Granville County Board of Education in this century."

The suit was filed by Assistant Attorney General William Bradford Reynolds, head of the department's civil rights division. The Justice Department distributed copies in Washington.

The suit charged that the at-large election system violates the Voting Rights Act of 1965 and asked the court to order the county to devise a legal plan.

"I was hoping this was not going to happen," James Lumpkins, vice chairman of the county school board told the News and Observer of Raleigh. "Comments at this time are not suitable."

The county is divided into five election districts. Three candidates are elected to staggered six-year terms on the school board from the Oxford district, while one each are elected from the other districts. However, all voters of the county may vote for candidates for each seat.

"If members ... were elected by district, rather than at large, black persons would constitute a voting majority in some of the districts and would have a fair opportunity to participate in the political process," the suit said.

"Racially polarized voting patterns prevail," the suit charged. "Numerous black persons have sought election to the county school board and other countywide offices."

Falwell Says New PTL Host Will Be Named Soon, Pleads For Donations

By DAVID REED
Associated Press Writer
FORT MILL, S.C. (AP) — The Rev. Jerry Falwell, just one day after taking over the "PTL Club" broadcast, said he would step aside by Monday and name a permanent host for the religious program carried on more than 1,400 stations.

Falwell, a fundamentalist evangelist and host of the "Old Time Gospel Hour" show in Lynchburg, Va., pleaded on the broadcast Thursday for donations to help PTL recover from scandal.

"I promise you that every penny you give will be carefully accounted for, carefully applied. And right now we have some great needs," he said. "We're trying to spiritually, theologically, collectively with our business practices put our house in order."

The Rev. Jim Bakker turned control of PTL over to Falwell in March, admitting he had a sexual tryst with church secretary Jessica Hahn in 1980. Subsequent revelations that Bakker and his wife, Tammy, were paid $1.6 million in salary and bonuses in 1986 prompted PTL's new board, led by Falwell, to sever ties Tuesday with Bakker.

The board also dropped the Rev. Richard Dortch, a former Bakker aide, as host of the show that is the heart of PTL's ministry and its main fund-raising device.

In other developments:

— Dortch admitted having received property tax exemptions for two Florida homes rather than one as allowed by state law, but attributed it to a paperwork mistake by his wife, Mildred.

— Miss Hahn, 27, said Thursday that she believed her sudden illness was brought on by stress from the controversy. "I came out of the shower and blacked out" Wednesday night, she said in a telephone interview. Miss Hahn, who was treated at a clinic for severe stomach and chest pains, said she planned to rest until she regained her strength.

After originating the "PTL Club" broadcast at his own studio in Lynchburg on Wednesday and Thursday, Falwell said he would step down as host Monday in Fort Mill, where PTL has its 2,300-acre headquarters. He said he may name his replacement as early as today.

The choice of a new host will be part of an effort to give the organization a more moderate and less charismatic tone, an Oklahoma evangelist and PTL board member said Thursday.

The Rev. Bailey Smith of Del City, Okla., said Falwell is looking for "a new Mr. and Mrs. PTL" to host the program. Smith said the couple need "warm personalities with a little bit of pizzazz about them," and "financial and moral integrity, no question marks over their lives."

He said Falwell also will change the tone of the program from the charismatic approach of Jim and Tammy Bakker.

"Instead of a strong, one-sided, charismatic position, it may be more of a mainline, denominational approach," Smith said.

Accounts of this week's board meeting indicated that Bakker had urged that leadership be kept in the hands of a charismatic Christian, such as board member and former U.S. Interior Secretary James Watt, or a "holy war" would ensue. The board compromised by appointing Sam Johnson, a minister of the charismatic Assemblies of God, as PTL's director of ministries.

Naming a fundamentalist as host could alienate charismatics, said Hal French, a professor at the University of South Carolina's Department of Religious Studies.

Jim Bakker's father, Raleigh Bakker, who lives at PTL's Heritage USA resort here, said he appreciated Falwell's efforts to stabilize activities at PTL. But he added that he hopes and expects his son to return.

"Jim has his life here. Falwell is trying to get this place back on its feet, but Jim's the moneymaker."

Of PTL's $129 million in revenues in fiscal 1986, $43.7 million came from contributions, $50.8 million from time-share or lifetime partnership sales, $17.6 million from hotel, restaurants, amusement park and shops; $6.4 million from real estate sales; $4.8 million from satellite network time and the rest from other sources, according to financial statements released by Falwell.

At the Bakkers' home in Palm Springs, Calif., a staff member said that Bakker would issue a statement next week but would not take questions from the news media.

April Espinoza said Bakker told her to relay this message to supporters: "We are very hurt and very sad. We want to wait. We don't want to speak out of our emotions."

Raleigh Bakker said his son is innocent of sexual misconduct, particularly of accusations made a week ago by the Rev. John Ankerberg. Ankerberg said Bakker had engaged the use of prostitutes and participated in homosexual activities.

"Jim would never yield to homosexuals or prostitutes," the elder Bakker said. "At the right time he'll produce documents necessary to prove that 99 percent of the things that have been said are wrong."

CAR TALK

From Joe Cullipher Chrysler
Plymouth, Dodge, Peugeot

By James Phillips

LOCKED OUT?

Have you ever found yourself locked out of your car? It's a distressing but not a hopeless problem. If the keys are nowhere in sight, and you live too far away to call home for that extra key, you can call a dealer who sells your car make and ask for assistance. But, it's always preferable to avoid this situation by carrying an extra ignition key tucked away in your wallet or purse or placed in a magnetic box and attached to the automobile out of sight.

If you do have your key but it won't turn the lock at all - try sliding it forward and backward while turning it. If this doesn't work, try a little graphite on the key. In cold weather heat the key with a match before inserting it to melt any frozen moisture in the lock. Don't use oil to lubricate the lock as it will probably clog the mechanism.

Hahn Cites 'Stress'

WEST BABYLON, N.Y. (AP) — Jessica Hahn, whose tryst with PTL founder Jim Bakker contributed to the evangelist's downfall, says the scandal caused her sudden illness.

"I just think it's stress," the 27-year-old former church secretary said in a telephone interview Thursday. "I should be in bed."

Miss Hahn, who had been scheduled to appear on ABC-TV's "Nightline" program Wednesday night, was treated at a clinic in nearby Lindenhurst that night for severe chest and stomach pains.

"I came out of the shower and blacked out," Miss Hahn said. "Since then, I've been real weak. I just want to feel better."

Charlotte Woman To Receive Medal

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Gail Snodgrass says she doesn't feel like a hero just because she jumped into a fight between a Houston policeman and two prisoners who had knocked him to the ground.

But the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission disagreed and this week selected Ms. Snodgrass as one of 20 people honored for risking their lives trying to save others.

"I was just very lucky," Ms. Snodgrass, 29, said Thursday. She lives in Charlotte again after a decade in Houston. "It didn't have to be a police officer. It could have been any human being. I don't feel like a hero. It's something I would have done for anybody."

Ms. Snodgrass and another waitress jumped into the fight. They screamed, they pulled hair, and they kept the attackers from getting the officer's gun. The commission, founded in 1904 by industrialist Andrew Carnegie, will give her a medal and a $2,500 cash award.

Inmate Dies

RAEFORD, N.C. (AP) — An inmate at McCain Hospital near Raeford died of heart failure Thursday afternoon, officials said.

Jim Marable, spokesman for the N.C. Department of Correction, said Charlie Crimes, 66, of Greenville, died at 12:35 p.m. An autopsy will be conducted.

Crimes was convicted of possession of cocaine and heroin in 1985 and sentenced to serve six years, Marable said.

Damaged Houses

NAGS HEAD, N.C. (AP) — Nags Head officials have condemned 26 homes because of storm damage and erosion, and three of them are in danger of falling into the Atlantic Ocean, Town Manager Web Fuller said Thursday.

Two other houses have toppled into the ocean in the past nine days, Fuller said.

Fuller said most of the houses could be brought back into compliance with housing codes if they are moved or if sand dunes are replaced and pilings are repaired.

Officials could not provide a dollar estimate on the damages from a series of coastal storms, but said a number of homeowners are working now to repair houses.

Triad Tour

GREENSBORO (AP) — Consular officers from about 20 countries on five continents are making a three-day tour of the Triad designed to show off the region's business climate.

The visit, sponsored in part by the chambers of commerce in Greensboro, High Point and Winston-Salem, is the first coordinated effort to bring all the consuls — who are based in Atlanta — to one place for an extended tour.

Local chamber officials say they hope the visit will encourage friendships and commerce between the international representatives and businessmen in the Triad.

Kuralt Trip

RALEIGH (AP) — Charles Kuralt, television commentator and author of "On the Road," will hit the road to Chicago next week to sell his home state as a top travel designation.

Kuralt and North Carolina composer Loomis McGlohon will perform "North Carolina is My Home" before a group of 400 travel industry representatives.

The presentation is part of a travel mission to Chicago. A delegation of state officials and travel leaders from across North Carolina will share the Tar Heel state's story during the three-day visit, scheduled May 6-8.

North Carolina's Division of Travel and Tourism is jointly sponsoring the mission to Chicago with the Travel Council of N.C. and Piedmont Airlines.

Fire Danger

RALEIGH (AP) — Consecutive days of high winds, low relative humidities and dry weather conditions have increased the chances of forest fires, state officials say.

On Wednesday, fires broke out in Yancey, Mitchell, Watauga, Buncombe and McDowell counties. The largest was a 120-acre fire in Yancey

Family Will Keep Its Farm

NORLINA, N.C. (AP) — A year ago, Margie Brauer and her husband were sure they would lose everything they had worked for, but a letter to the bankruptcy trustee handling the disposal of their family farm has helped save their house and 38 acres of land.

In touching prose, Mrs. Brauer wrote to bankruptcy trustee William Yeager of Durham, describing her family's plight.

"I don't know what compelled him to release the letter, but he did — to someone," Mrs. Brauer said Thursday. "And apparently that person contacted Time magazine, which called us to see if they could write an article about us."

Time published the story in its Sept. 8 issue. Along with it, they ran a copy of Mrs. Brauer's letter.

"Immediately, within hours of when Time hit the newsstands, we were getting calls," Mrs. Brauer said. "That was the beginning of about four weeks of the telephone ringing constantly, and the mailbox being stuffed with mail."

More than 250 people sent them donations, from 49 states and many foreign countries, she said. One, in particular, came from a man in Holland who contacted them anonymously through a lawyer.

"I have not had any correspondence with him at all — and I guess I'll never know his name," Mrs. Brauer said. "But he sent us 100,000 Swiss francs (about $60,000) to be used toward the purchase of our home and whatever else we could get. We were able to purchase the home and about 37 1/2 acres."

"He said that during World War II, this man's family somehow or another was saved by American soldiers," she said. "It seems like he took this way to show his gratitude."

Mrs. Brauer won't say how much the contributions totaled. But they were enough to enable the family to keep their home and part of their land, and Thursday the Brauers got a new deed. The rest of their 228 acres will be auctioned off.

"With the contributions that had been sent to us, we were able to buy back a few cattle with their offspring and a bull," she said. "The land that we'll be keeping will be able to support those few cattle."

Mrs. Brauer, 60, now works as a secretary at Maria Parham Hospital in Henderson. Her husband, Ernie, 69, took a job with a golf course in Warrenton.

"He loves the job he has because it's working with machinery and being outside," she said.

But despite their good fortune, Mrs. Brauer said she still feels uneasy.

"Underneath all of it is the knowledge that there's so many thousands that will go through this and not have any help and not be able to save their homes," she said. "I think there's some of this among our neighbors."

County near N.C. 80. All the fires are contained.

More than 97 percent of all forest fires in North Carolina are caused by people. The only natural cause of forest fires is lightning, which accounted for 3 percent of the fires in the state last year.

Fellows Chosen

ASHEVILLE (AP) — Five top North Carolina high school students have been chosen as the first University of North Carolina at Asheville Fellows, a scholarship program emphasizing undergraduate research and an honors course of study at the school.

The students will receive four-year fellowships valued at $10,000. The fellowships cover the costs of tuition, fees and books for four years.

AIDS Survey

RALEIGH (AP) — A survey estimates that almost three-fourths of North Carolina residents think AIDS is a problem in their communities or is likely to become one.

But the same survey shows that only 38 percent of the residents think that acquired immune deficiency syndrome is a threat to people they know. And only 16 percent consider it a threat to their own lives, the survey says.

Meanwhile, the dean of the University of North Carolina School of Medicine warned state legislators that AIDS is cropping up more and more outside the traditional high-risk groups. And although the state still has few AIDS cases, the disease "is certain ultimately to reach into every community of this state," said Dr. Stuart Bondurant, the dean of the medical school.

The results of the survey were announced Wednesday at a panel discussion on AIDS at the Legislative Building.

John Paul Beatifies Jewish-Born Nun, Eulogizes Nazi-Killed Jews

By SAMUEL KOO
Associated Press Writer
COLOGNE, West Germany (AP) — Pope John Paul II today beatified a Jewish-born nun who perished in the Auschwitz Nazi death camp, and in a major gesture of solidarity with the Jews called her an "outstanding daughter of Israel."

Less than four hours earlier, a fire of unknown origin destroyed a Roman Catholic church just over a mile from the stadium where the pontiff beatified Carmelite nun Edith Stein. Police reported graffiti spray-painted on another Catholic church said: "We love to see churches burn."

More than 1,200 leftists and Greens, including naked women and at least one naked man, marched through downtown streets today to Cologne Cathedral chanting "Pope get lost!" police said. Marchers included homosexuals, lesbians and women's activists. No incidents were reported.

EDITH STEIN

The Greens said before the pope arrived in West Germany on Thursday that they would protest the pontiff's traditional stances on divorce, birth control and other issues.

The beatification of Edith Stein — a major step toward possible sainthood — drew criticism from some Jewish leaders, who said she was killed because she was born a Jew, not because she became a Roman Catholic.

John Paul referred several times to the ties between Christian and Jews, and acknowledged the "deadly threat to the Jewish people gathered like a dark cloud" over Edith Stein as well. The Nazis killed the nun in an Auschwitz gas chamber in 1942.

Meeting with West Germany's Jewish leaders later in Cologne, the pope called for a joint effort to guard against a possible resurgence of anti-Semitism and racism.

"We must speak out when necessary, not to lose sight of our example, and remain alert for all new forms of anti-Semitism, racism and neo-pagan religious persecution," he said.

"Such a joint effort would be the most precious gift Europe could give the world in its arduous effort to develop and attain justice."

Forty-two years after the Nazi era ended, West Germany is still plagued by occasional outbursts of anti-Semitism, including desecration of Jewish graveyards and neo-Nazi graffiti aimed at the Jews.

At an outdoor Mass under threatening skies at Cologne's Muengersdorfer soccer stadium, the pontiff proclaimed Edith Stein a "blessed martyr" and delivered a eulogy to the 6 million Jews massacred by Adolf Hitler's Nazis.

The Polish-born pontiff delivered his homily in German. The soccer field and seats were filled to 75,000-person capacity.

A choir sang hymns to organ music as the pope circled the stadium in a bulletproof "popemobile."

The crowd applauded and waved handkerchiefs. The pope responded by repeatedly making the sign of the cross and smiling broadly.

Trumpeters in medieval costumes played a fanfare as the pope, in gold-colored robe, mounted the altar platform in the center of the stadium.

On hand were Jewish relatives of Edith Stein's. The pope said their presence "fills us with great joy and gratitude."

Two of them, nieces Charlotte Stein Sachs, of Atlanta and Suzanne Batzdorff of Santa Rosa, Calif., sat in the front row with West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl.

"Today we greet in profound honor and holy joy a daughter of the Jewish people, rich in wisdom and courage, among these blessed men and women," the pontiff said.

In his homily, the pope, who on Thursday issued the strongest papal denunciation to date of Nazi atrocities, again condemned the Third Reich as an "insane ideology" and a "wretched form of racism."

He tried to counter criticism from some Jewish circles over the beatification, by repeatedly emphasizing that Edith Stein, who took the name Sister Teresia Benedicta a Cruce upon becoming a nun, died as "an outstanding daughter of Israel."

Some Jews said one who deserted Judaism should not be so honored by the Roman Catholic Church.

"For Edith Stein, baptism as a Christian was by no means a break with her Jewish heritage," the pope said. "Quite on the contrary, she said: 'I had given up my practice of the Jewish religion as a girl of 14. My return to God made me feel Jewish again.'"

"She offered herself to God as a sacrifice for genuine peace and above all for her threatened and humiliated Jewish people," John Paul said.

Some Jewish leaders contended

Sister Teresia was killed only because of her Jewish origins.

But Vatican officials previously said she was being held up as a model for Roman Catholics worldwide, because she died for her faith.

Before the Mass, John Paul flew by helicopter to the West German capital of Bonn, about 18 miles south of Cologne, for a meeting with President Richard von Weizsaecker.

In Munich on Sunday, the pope is to beatify Rupert Mayer, a Jesuit priest imprisoned by the Nazis for defying a state edict not to preach. He died in 1945, six months after World War II ended, while saying Mass.

About 26.3 million Germans, or 43.6 percent of the population, are Catholics. Nearly an equal number are Protestants.

Newly Merged Lutheran Church Electing Leader

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer
COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) - The marathon election of the leader of most of America's Lutherans, newly united into the nation's fifth-largest denomination, entered its second day today with a Minneapolis bishop leading a field of five.

In a historic session Thursday, convention delegates merged three major Lutheran branches into the 5.3 million-member Evangelical Lutheran Church in America. They then began picking their presiding bishop in a long process resembling the way Roman Catholic cardinals choose the pope.

The person chosen as presiding bishop will be the Lutherans' chief spokesman for the next four years and will have powerful influence over the denomination's relationship with other faiths and society.

Bishop Herbert W. Chilstrom, 55, moved ahead on the fifth ballot Thursday night, edging Bishop David W. Preus, head of the now-merged American Lutheran Church, 354 to 349 votes.

A sixth ballot was to be held today to narrow the field of candidates. Under the rules, the election could take up to nine ballots.

Running behind Chilstrom, a regional bishop for the former Lutheran Church in America, and Preus, 64, were the Rev. William Lazareth, the Rev. Reuben Swanson and the Rev. Barbara K. Lundblad, all of New York City.

Lazareth, 59, is a noted theologian and ecumenical leader, Swanson is secretary of the former LCA and Ms. Lundblad is an internationally recognized pastor.

Unlike the secret papal selection, the 1,045 Lutheran delegates were choosing their leader in the open at the Ohio Convention Center. The balloting gradually narrowed the field of candidates to six to five.

Between votes, there were breaks for reflection, prayer and conversation.

The new denomination is the nation's fifth-largest after Roman Catholics, Southern Baptists, United Methodists and the National Baptist Convention.

The church, combining the LCA, ALC and smaller Association of Evangelical Lutheran Churches, drew together ancestral Lutheran strands involving about 50 Lutheran groups at the turn of the century.

"It's been a long journey," said the Rev. William A. Kinnison of Springfield, Ohio, who presided over the consolidating convention and headed the joint commission that planned the merger over the past five years.

Kinnison, the president of Wittenberg University, told the delegates they came here from different churches, but "we leave as one."

In a spirited worship service, leaders of the three branches poured water into a baptismal font as a symbol of the unification.

The delegates also approved a new constitution and an initial 14-month budget of $112.3 million.

The constitution binds the church to the ancient, classic Christian creeds held in Roman Catholicism and much of Protestantism, as well as historic Lutheran confessions of faith.

After the constitution and bylaws were adopted, Preus told a news conference the new church would make for "greater identification" of Lutherans in society and more impact on public issues.

"But the biggest thing is the sense that we are now united," he said.

Priest Sees Duel As 'Teaching Moment'

NEW YORK (AP) - The beleaguered Rev. Charles Curran calls his duel with Roman Catholic authorities a "teaching moment," exercised in official church circles and beyond them.

In the process, the moral theologian says, "I believe that I am working in the long term for the good of the Catholic Church - my church."

A faculty committee at the Catholic University of America in Washington begins hearings this month on Curran's suspension at the Vatican's behest for dissenting from some church teachings.

Those hearings themselves will extend the "teaching moment," he says, allowing him to press his contention that dissent on issues not involving basic faith is proper and often has proved beneficial.

"No matter what happens, I will continue to address the questions of public dissent," he says.

His stand also was being pressed in a civil suit against the university, and he'll be back in the classroom next fall for a one-year visiting professorship at Cornell University in Ithaca, N.Y.

For the 1987-88 term at Cornell, he says, Catholic University has granted him an academic leave without prejudice to his contract there and the hearings process.

however, EPA requirements for the on-site sewerage system have not been met. The report suggests upgrading the sewerage system.

The cost of the upgrading will be $70,000 in fiscal year 1988-1989.

NEW SCHOOL — No capital outlay expenditures are recommended and the school is in excellent condition.

W.H. ROBINSON SCHOOL — Beginning in 1987-1988, Robinson will accommodate grades kindergarten through five. The school has been listed in good to very good condition.

Renovation in the kindergarten area as well as campus drainage improvement is needed. Discontinued use of the vocational building also is recommended by the report.

Suggestions include adding classroom space to eliminate the old vocational building, renovating the kindergarten areas, improving drainage and accommodating specific requirements for grades four and five.

The approximate cost of the project, for which funds were set aside this year, is $500,000.

G.R. WHITFIELD SCHOOL — Wood frame buildings and an old vocational building that are in fair to poor condition are being used for classrooms and specialized curriculum areas. EPA regulations for the sewerage system also must be met.

The report suggests adding classroom space to replace the inadequate facilities and meeting EPA regulations relative to the sewerage system.

The project will cost approximately $240,000 and should be addressed in the 1987-1988 fiscal year.

Farmville Central Attendance Area — The overall estimated costs for improvements is $1,170,000 in this attendance area.

FALKLAND SCHOOL — The sewerage system must be improved to meet EPA requirements, according to the report. The facility is rated as good or very good.

The study suggests consulting engineers to recommend the most feasible and cost-efficient correction for the sewer problem.

The approximate cost of the project, scheduled for the 1988-1989 fiscal year, is $60,000.

FARMVILLE CENTRAL HIGH SCHOOL — The main building is adequate for a modern high school program and is considered excellent.

However, the report notes a need for additional classroom spaces to eliminate the use of temporary facilities located away from the main building.

The additional classrooms to eliminate the trailers and provide for a specialized art area are suggested, at a cost of $360,000. Funds for the project are available this fiscal year.

FARMVILLE MIDDLE SCHOOL — This relatively new facility is considered excellent.

No capital outlay expenditures are recommended.

H.B. SUGG SCHOOL — The facility is considered in fair to poor condition despite many recent improvements. The old home economics building is no longer in use.

According to the report, a number of classrooms need to be renovated and some foundation repairs made. Adequate drainage should be implemented, which will add to improved landscaping.

The study recommends: upgrading the main building, repairing the foundation in one isolated area and improving campus drainage.

The approximate cost of the project is $350,000 and the funds are available this year.

SAM D. BUNDY SCHOOL — Several temporary facilities are being used and the lunchroom area is not adequate for the Child Nutrition Program, the report notes, although the facilities is considered good to very good.

The recommendations are to add classroom space and to enlarge the lunchroom.

The $400,000 for the project has been set aside this fiscal year.

J.H. Rose Attendance Area — Projects in this attendance area are estimated at $7,670,000.

AGNES FULLILOVE SCHOOL — The school has been relocated to a facility that is considered good to very good. No capital outlay expenditures are recommended.

E.B. AYCOCK JUNIOR HIGH SCHOOL — The facility is rated as good to very good and no capital outlay expenditures are recommended in the report.

EASTERN ELEMENTARY SCHOOL — The school facilities are evaluated as good to very good and the classrooms within the main building are adequate.

However, the report notes that the temporary facilities at the school should be replaced with new classrooms.

The approximate cost of the project is $350,000. The construction has been scheduled for the 1988-1989 fiscal year.

ELMHURST ELEMENTARY SCHOOL — Temporary facilities are being used to accommodate the present enrollment, according to the report.

The school facilities are evaluated as good to very good.

The report recommends the addition of classrooms to eliminate trailers and to facilitate adjustments in specialized areas for music and small group instruction.

The projects, scheduled for 1988-1989, will cost approximately $280,000.

GREENVILLE MIDDLE SCHOOL — Although the facilities are evaluated as excellent, construction is recommended to convert the school to a high school. The building is one story with semi-open classroom areas.

The report recommends construction in phases. Classroom space is available for the transfer of approximately one-half of the sixth-grade student enrollment; additional classrooms to house the remaining sixth-grade students must be constructed.

Work will begin in 1987-1988 at an estimated cost of $630,000. A vocational area and gymnasium will be constructed in the 1988-1989 fiscal year, with an estimated cost of $480,000. The last phase, scheduled for 1989 through 1991, completes the total conversion process, including additional classroom space and adjustments to the open classrooms. The estimated cost will be $5,000,000.

J.H. ROSE HIGH SCHOOL — The facilities are considered good and no capital outlay expenditures are recommended by the report.

SADIE SAULTER SCHOOL — The facility lacks specialized areas, specifically for music, and temporary facilities are used. A good to very good evaluation is given this facility.

The report recommends adding classrooms to eliminate trailers and give flexibility to specialized area needs.

The approximate cost of the construction, scheduled for the 1988-1989 fiscal year, is $290,000.

SOUTH GREENVILLE SCHOOL — The report notes that the facility, evaluated as good or very good, includes temporary classroom facilities and lacks specialized areas for music, art and special small group programs.

The study recommends constructing additional classrooms and providing specialized areas. The approximate cost is $300,000 in the 1988-1989 fiscal year.

THIRD STREET SCHOOL — The school facility, evaluated as good to very good, lacks specialized areas. Temporary classroom facilities are used for special programs, the report notes.

At an approximate cost of $350,000 in the 1988-1989 school year, the report suggests constructing additional classrooms.

WAHL-COATES LABORATORY SCHOOL — The facility is evaluated as excellent. No capital outlay expenditures are recommended by the report.

North Pitt Attendance Area — The improvement projects for the attendance area have been estimated at $1,650,000.

BELVOIR SCHOOL — The report notes that temporary facilities are being used and the kitchen and food preparation area is not adequate.

The facilities are considered good to very good.

The report suggests the addition of classrooms and restrooms and the enlargement of the kitchen and preparation area.

The approximate cost of the project is $400,000 this fiscal year.

BETHEL ELEMENTARY SCHOOL — The school is considered good to very good, but the vocational program is housed in a woodframe structure and a specialized area for science is needed.

The recommendation to add the vocational area and to upgrade the specialized science area will cost approximately $300,000 and is recommended for the 1987-1988 fiscal year.

NORTH PITT HIGH SCHOOL — Addition to the facility should be completed in June of 1987, thereby meeting the major capital outlay needs, according to the report.

The facility is considered excellent, but EPA standards must be met.

The report recommends upgrading the on-site sewerage system at an approximate cost of $70,000 in the 1987-1988 fiscal year.

PACTOLUS SCHOOL — A new cafeteria and kitchen have been added to the facility and the school is considered good to very good. However, the enrollment dictates the use of inadequate facilities housed in a woodframe building.

The report recommends additional classroom space to eliminate the wood-frame building. The cost of the project is approximately $300,000. It has been scheduled for the 1987-1988 fiscal year.

STOKES ELEMENTARY SCHOOL — The school is considered to be in fair to poor condition.

Although several temporary facilities are presently being used and EPA regulations relative to the on-site sewerage system must be addressed, no capital outlay expenditures are recommended by the report.

WELLCOME MIDDLE SCHOOL — The facility is evaluated as excellent.

Grade five will be transferred to the school. To accommodate the enrollment, classroom space should be added at an approximate cost of $580,000. The report notes that the construction is scheduled for 1987-1988.

Ways Of Diffusing That Sibling Rivalry

By DAVID STREITFELD
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

Sibling rivalry is a family affair. Listen to the whine: "That's mine!" "He hit me!" "She started it!" "You love her more than you love me!" "I hate him!" It starts when the second child is brought home from the hospital, and it can last a lifetime. A child gets food, shelter, understanding and love from his parents — everything needed for survival. No wonder the competition for attention and devotion is so fierce, and the effect so likely to linger.

"The very presence, the very arrival of the other child makes child No. 1 feel he or she is immediately getting less time alone with the parents, less approval for accomplishment," says Elaine Mazlish. "And they feel if they're getting less, maybe they're worth less."

"That's why they fight so hard to be first, and why they mobilize all their energy to have more. Security lies in having all of Mommy, all of Daddy, all the food, all the toys."

Mazlish and Adele Faber, former lecturers at the New School for Social Research and at the Family Life Institute of C.W. Post College of Long Island University, have spent five years and given hundreds of parenting workshops to produce a self-help book that is actually useful.

"Siblings Without Rivalry: How to Help Your Children Live Together So You Can Live Too" (Norton, $14.95) follows up on the authors' earlier success. "How to Talk So Kids Will Listen & Listen So Kids Will Talk." The first book engendered a kit that has been used by thousands of groups around the country. The likelihood is that the new book will do the same.

In any family, there is the undercurrent of competition. "What parents can do," says Faber, "is either fan the flames or reduce them to a small, safe flicker." There are no statistics to prove it, but the trend toward smaller families quite possibly has accelerated the struggling and infighting among children. In the four-, five- and six-children broods that were regularly produced just a generation ago, there was only so much Mom and Dad to go around.

"When there's limited access, kids fill in with each other — you turn to your big sister to mother you, or to your big brother to teach you how to play ball," says Faber, who grew up in a family of three. "With only two children, there's nothing to break the intensity, nothing to act as buffer. If you're trapped together on a rainy Sunday, it's imperative you work out some mode of getting along other than tormenting each other."

The heart of "Siblings Without Rivalry" is a series of illustrations drawn by Kimberly Ann Coe from dialogue supplied by the authors. These cartoons vividly explain strategies for dealing with children's disputes: Instead of dismissing negative feelings about a sibling, a parent should acknowledge the emotion; children should be encouraged to channel their hostile feelings into symbolic or creative outlets; both favorable and unfavorable comparisons between siblings should be avoided; equal time can make each child feel as though he is getting less, so time should be given in terms of need; kids shouldn't be made into either bullies or victims.

While the drawings ring true in both the descriptions of the problems and the solutions, the fact that cartoons are used can make the authors' approach sound more simplistic than it is.

"It's very complicated stuff we're dealing with here," says Faber. "It takes practice, thought, commitment, and a desire to change. But the difference between a wounded child who feels bad about her sibling, and one who feels like a whole person and feels good about her sibling — that's worth it."

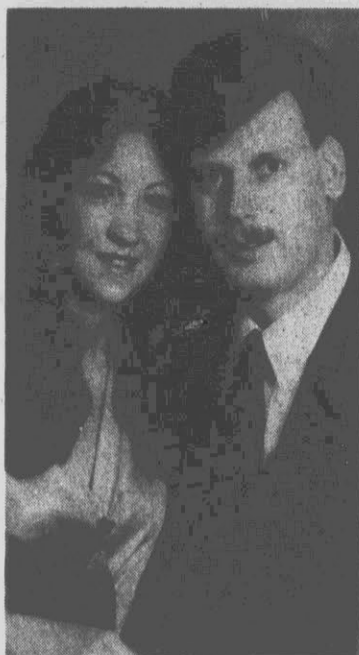

The most important skill to learn involves letting angry children express their rage. "It's the one thing parents cannot tolerate," says Faber. "They cannot hear one child, whom they love, say something nasty about another child, whom they love."

To their credit, the authors refuse to make generalizations about those cases or ages in which sibling rivalry is most likely to spring up. Two boys, two girls, one of each, any combination of three children — with any of these, there can be relative peace or total war.

And it's not always the parents' fault. While some children just seem to hit it off, "others are natural antagonists from the beginning," says Mazlish. "They irritate each other and are constantly measuring and sizing themselves up. They define themselves in terms of their sibling."

Even with these cases, the authors say, the prevalent attitude until recently has been "some day they'll outgrow it."

Her Heart, Not Calendar Decides Mourning Period

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: When a wife has lost her mate through death, how long should the mourning period be? Also, how long must she wait before dating members of the opposite sex so people won't talk? Then, how soon after she has started to date must she wait before accepting an engagement ring?

And finally, what is the proper waiting period before she remarries without having people think she has no respect for her first husband's memory? — JUST ASKING IN CANADA is traditionally one year. After that, she may start dating. From six months to a year following the mourning period, she may accept an engagement ring. And remarriage can take place any time after that.

DEAR JUST: The mourning period

None of this is written in concrete, however. What is in one's heart is far more important than what others say. Play it by ear, and don't worry about people's mouths.

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem that has been bothering me for a long time, but I haven't seen a doctor about it because I'm too embarrassed. I am a 15-year-old girl, and the nipple on one of my breasts is "in-grown." It looks funny because it doesn't match the other one. Also, I am worried that when I get older and have a baby, I won't be able to breast-feed it.

Will I grow out of this and have normal-looking breasts like other girls? Am I the only girl with this problem? — CONCERNED

DEAR CONCERNED: You have what is known as an "inverted nipple." It is not uncommon. First, you should discuss it with your mother — and then with your family physician. If necessary, he can refer you to a specialist who can surgically correct it.

DEAR ABBY: Several years ago, my son left Ohio to take an executive position in Denver. While there he met "Sue." To make a long story short, he divorced his wife of 16 years to make Sue his new bride. I flew to Denver, checked into a hotel and attended the wedding. I bought my son and Sue several wedding gifts and wished them love and happiness in their new life together. I never did receive a thank-you note, but at the time I wrote it off as simply an oversight.

Sue recently had a baby. I splurged on clothes for the new arrival. (You know how grandmothers can be.) It's been four months and I have not received an acknowledgment from Sue. Finally I mentioned to Sue that I was waiting for an acknowledgment from her. Her reply, "I have a perfect card for you; I just haven't had the time to send it." Abby, I know she's written thank-you notes to close friends and family.

How do you size this up? — HURT IN OHIO

DEAR HURT: Obviously, Sue's manners leave much to be desired, but where is your son in all of this? He is equally guilty of ignoring the receipt of "several" wedding gifts as well as gifts for their baby.

Were I in your shoes I would feel more disappointed than "hurt" to learn that my son had married a woman who is either sadly lacking in the social graces or doesn't give a hoot about what you think of her.

Farm Bureau Day Observed Thursday

National Farm Bureau Day was observed Thursday by the Pitt County Farm Bureau Women's Committee. Mary Pope of Moore County was keynote speaker.

Mrs. Pope discussed state projects and told of changes over the past 20 years including legislative programs in the counties. "Keep abreast of what's going on and read publications," she said.

She challenged Pitt women to know about the issues. "Have a plan and make a stand. Take a look at projects needed through womens' eyes. Prepare an achievement book and keep it updated," she said.

"Know where you are and what you want to do and aim high. Don't set your goals low. Try new things and a new approach. Develop an interest in people and projects and multiply their efforts. Simplify the task — do a small bit at a time — then it will all come together," she said.

"Enthusiasm is a main concern. When someone does something, say thank you. Give a person recognition for a job well done," she said.

Mrs. Pope said, "I see great things in the future for Pitt County."

Janice Bliss, coordinator of women's activities, N.C. Farm Bureau, was also a special guest. She congratulated the local women for areas of work being done in the county. "Everyone's contribution is needed," she said.

Mrs. Pope is chairman of the N.C. Farm Bureau Women's Committee. She has served on the committee for seven years and as chairman for two years. She gave an overall view of the state committee and made several challenges to the local women's committee.

Alma Worthington of Pitt County introduced the speakers. She also told of several award-winning projects held throughout Pitt County in the past several years including farm safety and bike safety.

The local women's committee works jointly with the Pitt County Farm Bureau board of directors to help carry out the purpose and beliefs of farm bureau. "We try to improve the quality of life for our farming community," said Helen Wooten, chairman of the Pitt Women's Committee.

"N.C. Farm Bureau created a program 'Ag in the Classroom' to help young people understand agriculture and appreciate farm families. There are three pilot schools in Pitt County and volunteers from the women's committee go into a classroom and teach a lesson on agriculture in grades K-4. A tour of local farms has been scheduled for June to provide teachers an opportunity to see farming operations," said Mrs. Wooten.

An auction has been scheduled for Oct. 3 with proceeds to go to the R. Flake Shaw Scholarship Fund, which provides financial assistance to 24 selected college students interested in agriculture and agricultural relates studies each year.

Others participating on the program were Rebecca Davenport, co-chairperson, women's committee, and Linda Davenport.

Heart

 tion in the 1985 age-adjusted statistics, while strokes slightly declined to 40.9.

"But, this decline still represents some 24,000 deaths per year in North Carolina due to cardiovascular disease and stroke," Gettes said.

The heart disease and stroke belt seems to begin in Norfolk, Va., and comes through eastern North Carolina extending to about Raleigh, said Dr. Robert E. Thurber in a telephone interview. He is chairman of the East Carolina University Department of Physiology.

Causes of increased risk "doesn't seem to be traceable to anything we have or don't have" in the environment such in soil composition, he said.

But, risks do range within groups of people, Thurber said. "Blacks are much more likely than whites" to suffer with heart diseases. "Sometimes that can be traced to the diet in the east," but many times diets do not vary significantly.

"If I had to guess," he said, diet would be the cause of the increase in the numbers. Easterners may have "a little more pork and a little more cholesterol in the diet."

There is something that cause heart diseases to be more prevalent in the east, but "what it is we don't know," Thurber said.

The potential for heart disease may be measured through primary risk factors such as blood cholesterol level and high blood pressure.

"Higher cholesterol levels are frequently the result of eating foods high in saturated fat and cholesterol, including fatty red meats, eggs and dairy products made with whole milk or cream," Gettes said.

Cholesterol accumulates in arterial walls and will eventually block the arteries if the diet is not adjusted to the lower blood cholesterol level, he said. A safe level is 200 milligrams per deciliter of blood.

May Day Celebrated

 tradition that doubles as a festive heralding of spring. Model workers in China were saluted at Communist Party headquarters in Beijing in official celebrations, but most Chinese held family gatherings to mark the day.

May Day is not celebrated in the United States, which honors workers on Labor Day in September.

In South Africa, May Day was a national holiday for the first time in a compromise by President P.W. Botha to black union demands. However, about 20 planned union rallies were banned and police in an Asian township of Johannesburg broke up a union gathering that black trade movement leaders were to have addressed.

In Tokyo, 150,000 Japanese chanted slogans against the 2.8 percent jobless rate and the soaring value of the yen that has hurt many export industries.

In Tel Aviv, several thousand people chanted "bread, work, peace" in a demonstration organized by pro-Palestinian Communists.

In Spain, where a wave of strikes has hit state-run industries and services, hundreds of demonstrations were held supporting the workers. No incidents were reported.

In Bangkok, Thailand, 17 people were hurt, three of them seriously, when a bandstand collapsed as fans surged toward musicians during a May Day concert.

Solidarity was the only trade union independent of state control in the East bloc when it was recognized by the Polish government in 1980.

Sets Record
Bill Elliott removes his helmet after setting a new qualifying speed record of 212.809 mph at the Alabama International Motor Speedway. Elliott will sit on the pole in the Sunday running of the Winston 500. (AP Laserphoto)

Elliott, Despite Record, Disappointed In His Run

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — Despite another all-time stock car speed record and another pole position, Bill Elliott was still a bit disappointed.

The heavy-footed driver from Dawsonville, Ga., powered around the 2.66-mile, high-banked oval at Alabama International Motor Speedway on Thursday at an average speed of 212.809 mph, breaking the record of 212.229 he set here last May.

Elliott not only won his fifth straight pole at the Talladega track, but also broke the stock car speed record for the third straight year in qualifying for the Winston 500.

But the slim, red-haired driver was less than jubilant when he scrambled out of his red and white Ford Thunderbird after his sizzling run.

"You always want to go faster," said Elliott, who blamed temperatures in the high 80s for his failure to fulfill predictions by others that he would reach 215 mph.

"I knew it would be hot out there and I didn't think we'd get the speeds people had been talking about," said Elliott, the only multiple pole-winner this season with three in nine races. "I don't know how much faster we could have gone, even if it had been cooler. We were pretty close to the most we could get out of it."

Bobby Allison, the 49-year-old Alabamian who became the oldest man ever to win a stock car race when he took the 1986 Winston 500, pulled another surprise Thursday by driving a Buick LeSabre to the second qualifying spot for Sunday's race.

His 211.797 mph lap is the fastest official qualifying lap ever for a General Motors car.

Allison's son, Davey, a rookie, took the third spot in a Ford at 210.610, which was actually a disappointment to the youngster.

He was expected to vie with Elliott for the pole, but blew his qualifying engine in practice earlier in the day.

"Considering we've got a new motor in the car now, it wasn't bad," the younger Allison said. "When we went out there with the new motor, we hadn't even run it. We weren't even sure where we were."

Three-time Winston Cup champion Darrell Waltrip, in a Chevrolet Monte Carlo SS, was fourth at 210.471, followed by Dale Earnhardt, the defending Winston Cup champion, at 210.360 in another Chevy.

Earnhardt heads into Sunday's 500-mile race with four straight victories and six in the first eight races this season.

He wasn't expecting to win the pole.

"That's good," Earnhardt said. "We did all we could. Let's go race. That's what we're here for."

Despite the heat, 37 of the 41 drivers who made one-lap qualifying runs on Thursday exceeded 200 mph. And 36 of the 41 equalled or bettered their all-time best qualifying effort.

Only the top 20 locked up starting positions for Sunday, with a lap of 207.659 mph by Benny Parsons taking the 20th spot.

Parsons started a string of six straight all-time stock car records in Winston 500 qualifying when he turned a lap of 200.176 mph here in 1982. That was the first official 200 mph lap in stock car racing.

Noting that it may take 205 mph just to make the field, Elliott said, "Everybody just gets faster. That's what competition's all about. And that's why I can't expect to keep on doing this forever."

The drivers who failed to make it into the top 20 on Thursday can either stand on their Thursday lap or try again today to make the 40-car field in further time trials. Included in that group are Neil Bonnett, Greg Sacks, Joe Ruttman, Richard Petty, Harry Gant, Rick Wilson, Alan Kulwicki and Dave Marcis.

The top 20 qualifiers for Sunday's Winston 500 NAS-CAR stock car race, with type of car and qualifying speed in mph:

Jackson's 552nd Homer Erases Milwaukee Lead, Allows Oakland To Win

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Reggie Jackson has battered Milwaukee pitching throughout his career and there was no letting up against the hottest Brewers' club in history.

Jackson's two-run homer Thursday wiped out a 1-0 lead held by the Brewers, who were trying for their 19th victory in April, and the Oakland Athletics won 4-1. Jackson's 420-foot drive in the third inning was the 552nd homer of his career; 61 have been against Milwaukee.

"I seem to play well against them. Who knows why?" said the 40-year-old slugger, whose other career marks against Milwaukee include 157 RBIs and a .285 average.

"I gave him a pitch he could hit, a slider up, but I didn't think the homer would beat me," said loser Bill Wegman, 2-1.

In the only other American League games, Seattle trounced Boston 11-2 and Detroit whipped California 12-4. The Brewers came from behind several times in their 18-3 April and they had a team batting average of .304 before running into Oakland's Dave Stewart and Jay Howell.

Stewart, 3-2, allowed three hits and struck out eight in 7 1-3 innings and relief ace Howell retired the last five batters, three of them on strikeouts.

"Stewart got his off-speed stuff over when he had to and he threw some fastballs we couldn't hit. Howell was great, too," Milwaukee Manager Tom Trebelhorn said.

The Brewers' April record was the second best in baseball history behind the 18-2 start of the 1984 Detroit Tigers. Milwaukee starts May with a four-game lead in the American League East.

Jackson has four homers, the last two coming in Oakland victories, and 11 RBIs, including seven in his last six games.

"He's got his stroke together. We can saddle him up and ride him for a while," said Mike Davis, who doubled home one of two Oakland insurance runs in the eighth.

"Reggie puts a charge into about anything he does. As he's said, he's not here to have fun, he's here to win," Oakland Manager Tony LaRussa said.

The Athletics got poor pitching in most of their April losses and LaRussa said of the Stewart and Howell show, "That was exactly what we needed, especially after what happened last night."

In Wednesday night's 8-7 loss to the Brewers, Oakland pitchers gave up 14 hits and nine walks.

Milwaukee got its only run Thursday in the second inning with Rob Deer drawing a walk and scoring on Cecil Cooper's double.

Mariners 11, Red Sox 2

Jim Presley hit two home runs and Scott Bankhead held Boston to five hits in a game that featured two bench-clearing incidents and a full-scale brawl.

Bankhead struck out seven and walked one. Loser Bruce Hurst was roughed up for seven runs in 3 2-3 innings as the Red Sox lost for the sixth time in their last seven games.

In the fourth inning, Bankhead hit Mike Greenwell on the wrist. Greenwell, who homered in the second inning, charged the mound but no punches were thrown. In the seventh, Boston's Steve Crawford hit Presley in the ankle. Presley started for the mound but was wrestled down by catcher Marc Sullivan. Many individual fights broke out and Crawford and Red Sox Manager John McNamara were ejected.

Greenwell's home run gave the Red Sox a 1-0 lead. Seattle went ahead 2-1 in the bottom of the second on Presley's first home run and an RBI single by Rey Quinones. The Mariners put the game out of reach with six unearned runs in the fourth. John Christensen's two-run double chased Hurst and Presley followed with a three-run homer off Crawford.

Seattle's John Moses and Boston's Dwight Evans also homered.

"This isn't the way the game is supposed to be played," Moses said of the two brawls.

Boston's Wade Boggs, who earlier got his 1,000th career hit in his 747th major-league game, injured his shoulder in the second altercation and will see a doctor Friday. Boggs also committed the error that set up Seattle's six-run fourth.

Tigers 12, Angels 4

Rookie Matt Nokes hit a grand slam in the seventh inning to break open a close game, and Jack Morris recovered from a shaky start. Nokes' fourth homer of the season and first career grand slam gave the Tigers an 8-3 lead.

Morris gave up nine hits but three of them came in the first inning when rookie Devon White followed Brian Downing's single with his seventh homer, giving California a 2-0 lead. Morris also batted for the first time in his major-league career in the ninth inning and hit a foul fly to right field.

The Tigers tied it in the second inning on Dave Bergman's two-run homer off loser Willie Fraser. They took the lead for good in the sixth. Fraser left after hitting Chet Lemon, who went to third on Darnell Coles' pinch single off Gary Lucas and scored the go-ahead run as Tom Brookens hit into a double play. Nokes homered off Mike Cook in the seventh.

Rockets Blast Blazers; Sonics Bulldog Mavericks

By The Associated Press

The state of Texas and the Pacific Northwest each have something to celebrate and something to bemoan from the NBA playoffs.

Basketball fans in Houston rejoiced Thursday night as the Rockets eliminated the Portland Trail Blazers 113-101. But the Dallas Mavericks, who owned the second-best record in the Western Conference, were eliminated 124-98 by the Seattle SuperSonics.

The Rockets, who lost in the NBA finals to Boston last year, easily won Game 4 of their series with the Trail Blazers, whose 49-33 record was third in the West and seven games better than Houston's mark. Their Twin Towers were too much for Portland to handle.

Akeem Olajuwon scored 27 points, grabbed nine rebounds and blocked five shots as the Rockets clinched a playoff at home for the first time. Ralph Sampson scored 18 points and grabbed 10 rebounds.

"They were playing so well I wanted to run for cover," Portland forward Kiki Vandeweghe said. "I wanted to find a foxhole."

The Mavericks probably felt the same way after being bombed by Seattle in Game 4. The SuperSonics lost all five regular-season meetings with Dallas this season by an average of 18½ points.

But it was Seattle which dominated the postseason series. On Thursday night, Tom Chambers scored 31 points and Xavier McDaniel added 29.

"If we played these guys for 10 years, we wouldn't be able to beat them," Dallas Coach Dick Motta said.

Houston hosts Seattle in the next round's opening game on Saturday.

In games tonight, Milwaukee is at Philadelphia, with the Bucks leading 2-1; Atlanta, ahead 2-1, visits Indiana; and Utah tries to end its series, which it leads 2-1, at Golden State.

Rockets 113, Trail Blazers 101

Houston staged a 20-4 surge over the final 4:23 of the third quarter to take command. Robert Reid hit for 22 points, including 10 in the fourth quarter, to keep the Rockets in control.

"Now was a good time for us to come together as a team," Reid said. "The other team's coach knows that if Akeem breaks out and you get on him, Ralph will hurt you. It's nice to have that Triple Tower effect with Jim Petersen coming off the bench."

Blazers Coach Mike Schuler said the matchup disadvantage finally caught up with his team.

SuperSonics 124, Mavericks 98

Dallas couldn't overcome the absence of 7-foot-2 center James Donaldson, who was out with a sore right leg. Seattle barely missed injured center Alton Lister as its high-scoring trio of Chambers, McDaniel and especially guard Dale Ellis were unstoppable. It was Ellis, who had 21 points Thursday, who led the Mavericks in their other two victories. The former Maverick had 118 points in the series, including 43 in Game 3.

"We wanted this series badder than anything," said Ellis, who pointed to the Mavericks' bench as he left the court late in the game. "I might look back in a few years and regret that but I got caught up in the moment. That was a little out of character for me. It was spontaneous."

Rolando Blackman scored 25 points and Sam Perkins had 24 for Dallas. Mark Aguirre of the Mavericks, who has had strep throat, was held to 13 points and did not score in the second half.

Demons Begone Early Favorite

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Demons Begone was the best in the Southwest, but will the colt be the best in Saturday's richest-ever Kentucky Derby?

If there's a knock on the early 5-2 favorite for the 113th Run for the Roses at Churchill Downs, it is that he hasn't faced any top stakes winners this year.

Demons Begone will have to beat 16 other 3-year-olds in a wide-open Derby that will be worth $793,600 if all go. The winner receives $618,600.

Trainer Phil Hauswald said the early odds were about what he expected, "although I don't think there will be that many horses under 10-1 on the board."

The Leroy Jolley-trained entry of Gulch and Leo Castelli is rated at 4-1 and Cryptoclearance at 5-1, followed by Masterful Advocate, Bet Twice and Alysheba, each 6-1, and the D. Wayne Lukas-trained entry of Capote, War and On The Line, 8-1.

The odds on the remainder of those entered range from 20-1 to 50-1.

"Probably half the horses in the race could win it," said Jimmy Croll, veteran trainer of Bet Twice, the Fountain of Youth Stakes. "It's one of the most evenly matched Derby races I ever saw. I'm not a very good handicapper, but I've got to say that at least six horses could win it."

Hauswald, 29, said he wasn't ducking any of the contenders this year; in fact, he thought some trainers may have been ducking him.

"He didn't come up against any real proven stakes horses," Hauswald admitted, "so you always have that in the back of your mind. But he won his races so easily and with such authority, and he had already proven as a 2-year-old that he could hold his own against the best horses in the country."

The Lobolly Stable colt won all three starts this year, all at Oaklawn Park — the Southwest and Rebel stakes and the Arkansas Derby. A Kentucky Derby win would also earn Demons Begone a $1 million bonus from Oaklawn Park.

Demons Begone, with Pat Day to ride, drew the No. 10 post position in Thursday's draw.

"I don't care for the one hole and I didn't want to be outside the (main starting) gate," Hauswald said. "I'm awful pleased with what I ended up with."

Scotty Schulhofer, who trains Florida Derby winner Cryptoclearance, wasn't pleased with the No. 1 position.

"That one I didn't want," he said. Cryptoclearance's running style is to come from behind. It could be difficult for jockey Jose Santos to get through or around the bulky field for that one late run.

Schulhofer, who is saddling his first Derby starter, was reminded that Ferdinand won from the No. 1 post last year.

"We might get lucky and do it again," he said. "Ferdinand came from far back and so do we." Jolley, with Gulch in the No. 6 post and Leo Castelli in No. 8, said of the draw, "I think it worked out reasonably well for us. Both jocks are to sit back anyway. I think the draw affected us less than anyone else."

Gulch won the Wood Memorial in his last start and will have Bill

Shoemaker aboard going for his fifth Derby win, which would equal the Derby record shared by Eddie Arcaro and Bill Hartack.

Leo Castelli, charging through the stretch at the end of the Blue Grass Stakes at Keeneland on April 23, was hindered by Alysheba and finished third, two heads behind Alysheba and War.

War was declared the winner, Leo Castelli was moved from third to second and Alysheba dropped to third.

Alysheba's only victory in 10 career starts came last September, but trainer Jack Van Berg is confident.

"I don't know of another horse in the race who I think has a better chance than mine," he said. "I might be out here crying Saturday night because I've had plenty of horses make liars of me."

Both Masterful Advocate and Bet Twice have impressive credentials but each is coming off a loss.

Booker's Emergence No Surprise

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON AP Sports Writer. It shouldn't come as any great surprise that Rod Booker has come out of nowhere to do the job at second base for the St. Louis Cardinals.

Actually, Booker came out of Louisville in the American Association earlier this week after Tom Herr went on the disabled list and his stand-in, Jose Oquendo, suffered a muscle strain.

"I don't know where we'd be without him," San Francisco Manager Roger Craig said of Speier, who signed with the Giants after playing out his option with the Cubs last season.

Bell singled to start the 11th off Steve Ziegler, making his major-league debut, and took second on a balk. Ed Olwine relieved and Terry Francona grounded to Ramirez, who tried to get Bell at third.

winning runs when Los Angeles failed to turn in ending double plays and R.J. Reynolds hit a two-run double.

Bonilla's grounder and settled for a forceout at second instead of a double play. Stubbs and Duncan homered for the Dodgers against Dorn Taylor, a 28-year-old right-hander making his major-league debut.

In other National League games, New York crushed Montreal 11-3, San Francisco edged Chicago 5-4, Cincinnati outlasted Atlanta 9-8 in 11 innings and Pittsburgh nipped Los Angeles 5-4.

The Padres made it 5-2 and chased winner Greg Mathews in the seventh when Benito Santiago doubled and Marvell Wynne singled. Santiago hit a two-run homer off Bill Dawley in the eighth.

Reds 9, Braves 8. Buddy Bell scored from second base with the winning run on Atlanta shortstop Rafael Ramirez's throwing error after Cincinnati came back from a six-run deficit.

Pirates 5, Dodgers 4. Pittsburgh scored the tying and winning runs when Los Angeles failed to turn in ending double plays and R.J. Reynolds hit a two-run double.

The Pirates tied the score in similar fashion in the sixth inning when shortstop Mariano Duncan mishandled pinch hitter Bobby Bonilla's grounder and settled for a forceout at second instead of a double play.

Stubbs and Duncan homered for the Dodgers against Dorn Taylor, a 28-year-old right-hander making his major-league debut. Taylor, a former janitor who spent three years in semi-pro ball before signing a minor-league contract, allowed three runs and five hits in four innings.

Davis was replaced by Ed Wojna after Terry Pendleton doubled and Clark walked to start the fifth. Pendleton scored on a balk and Booker's two-out single scored Clark with what proved to be the decisive run.

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) - Nine people, including four current and former members of the NBA Phoenix Suns, entered not guilty pleas to charges stemming from a Phoenix police drug investigation.

But rookie Lloyd McClendon's two-run double in the seventh cut it to 8-4 and the Reds scored four times in the ninth, highlighted by Eric Davis' three-run homer.

Pirates 5, Dodgers 4. Pittsburgh scored the tying and winning runs when Los Angeles failed to turn in ending double plays and R.J. Reynolds hit a two-run double.

Booker, a native of Los Angeles, may have a bigger thrill when St. Louis entertains the Dodgers tonight. "My mother always thought there was nobody but the Dodgers," he said. "Getting a chance to come up here in the big leagues is like a dream."

Webster Says North Tried To Halt FBI Probe Of Contra Fund-Raising

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fired White House aide Oliver L. North twice sought to interfere with an FBI investigation into people North was using to raise money for the Nicaraguan Contras, it was disclosed at a congressional hearing.

The interference, which came in 1985 and 1986 during a two-year congressional ban on U.S. military assistance to the Contras, was detailed Thursday at a Senate Intelligence Committee confirmation hearing for FBI Director William Webster to head the CIA.

North's actions were in connection with a federal investigation of an Iranian, Mousalreza Zadeh, a swindler under FBI investigation who was posing as a Saudi Arabian oilman and who falsely offered to raise millions of dollars for the Contra rebels, Webster testified.

The committee released FBI documents showing North personally asked an FBI agent on July 18, 1985, to delay interviewing Zadeh for four days until he had made a promised donation to the Contras.

Another document said North told the FBI he held personal discussions in June 1985 with President Reagan and then-National Security Adviser Robert A. McFarlane about Zadeh's interest in contributing money.

Meanwhile, The Washington Post reported today that Carl R. "Spitz" Channell, who pleaded guilty Wednesday to tax conspiracy charges surrounding his Contra fund-raising activities, paid former presidential assistant David Fischer $20,000 a month in late 1985 to arrange meetings between Contra contributors and President Reagan.

The original arrangement was for Fischer, who retained access to the White House after he quit on April 7, 1985, to receive $50,000 for each meeting arranged with the president, the Post reported, quoting sources close to Channell.

Fischer finally gave up his White House pass on Nov. 24, 1986, the day before Attorney General Edwin Meese III disclosed that funds from the Iran arms sales had been diverted to the U.S.-backed Contra rebels fighting Nicaragua's government, the newspaper said. The Post said Fischer arranged seven meetings of major Channell contributors with the president.

Reagan, asked about the Channell case Thursday night, said: "I'm kind of a stranger to this whole thing. I never knew anything about it."

"I was told they were people raising money for TV ads. ... I didn't know he (Channell) had a foundation or anything else," Reagan told reporters after a state dinner for Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone.

Presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater earlier said Reagan had no part in Channell's conspiracy to defraud the government by raising weapons money for the Contra rebels without paying taxes on the contributions.

"In the legal view of the White House, the president is not a part of this conspiracy," Fitzwater told reporters.

Congress Steps Up Drive To Raze Moscow Embassy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sentiment is mounting on Capitol Hill to order demolition of the new U.S. Embassy in Moscow because of Soviet bugging and to force the Russians to vacate their hilltop embassy complex in Washington.

The probability of damaging intelligence losses at the old Moscow embassy rose with the revelation by U.S. sources that Marine guards were given combinations for all secure rooms and safes for use in case of fire.

Having those combinations would allow KGB agents, allegedly permitted by two Marine guards to prowl the building at night, to gain access to the embassy's innermost secrets, government sources said Thursday.

Rooms in which CIA and Defense Intelligence Agency operatives worked, as well as the communications vault, were closed at night by steel doors with combination locks, said one intelligence source who is familiar with the Moscow operation and spoke on condition of anonymity.

A State Department source also said that until 1983, a code expert was stationed in the communications vault 24 hours a day, but that after that, no one was assigned to the room between midnight and 6 a.m., another development which would have made it easier for the KGB to penetrate the area.

The State Department, he said, would withhold final recommendation pending a report from James Schlesinger, the former defense secretary and CIA chief, who is studying the problem. Spiers said Soviet workers had incorporated electronic eavesdropping devices into concrete beams, precast offsite away from U.S. supervision and then welded into the structure.

The measure approved by the Senate Appropriations Committee followed a recommendation Wednesday by the Senate Intelligence Committee for the demolition of the new embassy office building.

The government, the committee said, has spent $23 million out of $65 million earmarked for the building in the $191 million project.

Study Says Sponge Reduces Sex Risks

CHICAGO (AP) — Women who use contraceptive sponges significantly reduce their risk of contracting gonorrhea and chlamydia, sexually transmitted diseases that can cause infertility, a study concludes today.

The national Centers for Disease Control has said chlamydia is the most common venereal disease in the United States, infecting up to 4 million people each year. That makes it two to three times more common than gonorrhea.

The study, reported in today's edition of the Journal of the American Medical Association, examined the effectiveness of sponges using nonoxynol 9 as the contraceptive ingredient.

Nonoxynol 9 is the most common contraceptive ingredient in spermicides like vaginal jellies, creams and foams.

The study said "even modest increases in the use of spermicidal preparations might result in a substantial decrease" in the incidence of sexually transmitted disease.

"Some people find it awkward to talk with a partner, and unlike a condom, a sponge is one step a woman can take without agreement from a partner," said Dr. Michael Rosenberg, who headed a team of researchers that studied the effectiveness of contraceptive sponges.

Chlamydia afflicts an estimated 4 million women each year and causes infertility in nearly half those cases, said Rosenberg.

"Besides being dangerous and prevalent, chlamydia is particularly insidious because women often don't learn they've been infected until years later, when they try to have children," he said.

About 1.5 million women routinely use contraceptive sponges and 73 million have been sold since the product was first marketed, said Debra Gaynor, spokeswoman for VLI Corp., the sole U.S. manufacturer based in Irvine, Calif.

Rosenberg did the study while at Family Health International Inc., in North Carolina's Research Triangle Park.

Ortega Joins Funeral

MATAGALPA, Nicaragua (AP) — President Daniel Ortega helped carry the coffin of an American volunteer killed in an attack by U.S.-backed Contra rebels and said his death should move the Reagan administration to negotiate for peace.

Benjamin Linder, an engineer working without pay on a rural electrification project, was "assassinated by mercenaries following orders from the CIA," Ortega said in a speech at Linder's funeral Thursday.

Linder's slaying Tuesday "should move the conscience of those in the U.S. government so that (funeral) bells should toll no more, so that aggression ends ... and they accept to dialogue with Nicaragua," he said.

The Contras said Linder was killed in a clash between their forces and Sandinista militiamen accompanying him, and blamed the Nicaraguan government for the American's death because it allowed him into a war zone.

"For whom the bell tolls? Hemingway would ask," Ortega said. He answered that it tolled for Linder and seven European volunteers slain in Contra attacks since the rebels, with support from the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency, began their guerrilla war against the leftist Sandinista government five years ago. About 40,000 Nicaraguans have died in the conflict.

The Reagan administration considers Ortega's government a threat to regional security because of its close ties to the Soviet Union and Cuba.

Sandinista officials have claimed the rebels singled out Linder and killed him along with two Nicaraguan militiamen near the hamlet of La Camaleona, 20 miles north of this provincial capital.

Unconfirmed reports said Linder was carrying a weapon when he was killed.

In a protest note to Secretary of State George Shultz, Foreign Minister Miguel d'Escoto said Linder was "kidnapped and later murdered ... by a counterrevolutionary group under contract to the U.S. government."

The U.S. Embassy in Managua first said it would send consular officials to northern Nicaragua to investigate the slaying, but later said it would not because Sandinista authorities were not cooperating and the area was too dangerous.

Linder, 27, of Portland, Ore., came to Nicaragua in 1983 shortly after he graduated from the University of Washington as a mechanical engineer. He was one of about 200 American volunteer workers currently in the country.

On Thursday, the Sandinista government posthumously awarded him the Order of Commander Jose Benito Escobar, the country's highest non-military citation. It was the first time the award was given to a foreigner.

Survivors Contradict Claims Of How Linder Was Killed

By RICHARD BOUDREAUX
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

SAN JOSE DE BOCAJ, Nicaragua — Survivors of a guerrilla attack in which an American engineer was killed have contradicted both the government's initial report that he was slain after being captured and the guerrillas' assertion that he was caught in a crossfire between rebel and militia forces.

Four armed and uniformed militiamen were working at a power plant construction site here when U.S.-backed Contras attacked it and killed the American, Benjamin E. Linder, according to two survivors.

Linder was also armed, but neither he nor the militiamen were able to shoot back when the rebels hurled six hand grenades at them from about 10 yards away and opened fire with automatic weapons, the survivors said.

The engineer, who was working for the Sandinista government, died of shrapnel wounds in the head, and two Nicaraguans — a militiaman and an unarmed worker — were also killed in the Tuesday morning attack. Four construction workers survived.

Beyond contradicting both the government and contra versions of the attack, the accounts by two militiamen interviewed here Wednesday also underscored a recurring issue of the five-year-old war: whether the presence of armed workers or militiamen at a Sandinista civilian project makes them legitimate military targets for the rebels.

Hundreds of armed and unarmed Nicaraguan professionals working for the Sandinista revolution, including 166 teachers and 52 doctors, have been reported killed in rebel attacks. Linder, 27, of Portland, Ore., was the first such American victim.

Linder had arrived last week in this war zone farming community, 192 miles northeast of Managua, to build a hydroelectric plant to bring electricity to the village's 3,000 residents. Last May 1, he electrified the nearby town of El Cua, his home since 1984, with a similar project.

Eulogio Moran, a local official of the National Farmers and Cattlemen's Union here, said that Linder recruited four militiamen, along with two other men from San Jose de Boca, to help build the new plant because of a belief that such projects, in themselves, are rebel targets in need of protection.

"Here the rebels do not respect the development of the people," Moran said.

Two foreign reporters who drove here Wednesday heard occasional mortar and machine-gun fire in the Boca Valley, which is a major route of infiltration by the rebels from their camps in Honduras.

Townpeople said that the rebels had considerable support among peasant farmers outside San Jose de Boca but that the attack was the first inside the town since 1983.

The construction site is on a stream at the edge of town, less than a mile from the main road through it.

Cecilio Rosales, 40, one of the militiamen, said about six rebels attacked from a wooded ridge above the site just after the seven-man construction crew came to work at 8:30 a.m.

Normally, he said, one or two militiamen stood guard with AK-47 assault rifles while the others worked, but Tuesday, "we had just barely arrived when they attacked."

"Benjamin sat down, took out a pad and pencil and started to make notes about our work assignments," recalled Santos Centeno Garcia, 45, another surviving militiaman.

Centeno said that the American's AK-47 was on the ground and that he had put down his own rifle to go mix concrete.

A rebel grenade hit Linder in the back of the head and killed him instantly, Centeno said, and the entire work crew "jumped for cover."

The two Nicaraguans were killed by subsequent rebel gunfire, he said. They were identified as Sergio Hernandez, a militiaman, and Pablo Rosales, who was not armed.

The rebel band escaped into the rugged hill country outside town, pursued by an army patrol, townspeople said.

President Daniel Ortega led more than 1,500 mourners, including Linder's parents, at the engineer's burial Thursday in the northern city of Matagalpa.

In a slap at the Reagan administration's hostility to Nicaragua, Ortega told the crowd: "Benjamin did not come to Nicaragua in a plane full of weapons, but with a heart full of love, joy and hope, which grew from his conviction that ethical values are above the illegal policies of the United States."

Earlier in the day, more than 100 Americans working for the Sandinista cause demonstrated for a second day outside the U.S. Embassy in Managua, blaming the Reagan administration for the engineer's death.

One speaker denounced what he called "the murder of an unarmed humanitarian aid worker."

The Sandinista government has not reported or acknowledged that Linder and some of his work crew were armed. In a protest note to the United States on Tuesday, it said the American was "captured and later killed."

The Nicaraguan Democratic Force, the largest rebel group, issued a statement in Honduras saying Linder died "in the midst of a firefight between one of our patrols and a group of militia of the Sandinista army" accompanying him.

Congressman Wants TV More Responsive To Public

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of a House subcommittee told the heads of ABC, CBS and NBC that he wants to make broadcasters more answerable to the public interest after seven years of deregulation by the Reagan administration.

Rep. Edward Markey, D-Mass., outlined his intentions at the testy conclusion Thursday of three days of hearings prompted by recent corporate takeovers, management changes, layoffs and budget cuts at the big three commercial networks.

"I aspire to resanctify the public interest as the foundation for our broadcasting industry," Markey said. He said his House Energy and Commerce subcommittee on Telecommunications and Finance will consider legislation to make the Fairness Doctrine part of the law — which all three network heads said they opposed — and legislation controlling acquisition of broadcasting properties.

Noting that Secretary of Education William J. Bennett had criticized the hearings at a broadcasters convention, Markey suggested Bennett didn't want the committee to reveal how the Reagan administration's "fanatic devotion" to deregulation had created chaos in the broadcasting industry.

Two Republican members of Markey's panel objected to the hearings, saying they intruded upon First Amendment rights of freedom of the press.

Rep. Dan Coats, R-Ind., had said Wednesday that the hearing was "offensive" and chided three news division presidents for agreeing to participate. All expressed reservations about the hearings but said they participated because the panel did not intrude on news content.

Markey and Rep. Thomas Tauke, R-Iowa, debated heatedly at the conclusion of Thursday's session for 25 minutes as the chief executive officers of ABC, CBS and NBC looked on silently from the witness table.

Tauke said the hearing "trampled on" the First Amendment.

Markey said he "resented" Tauke's assertions. Rep. Mickey Leland, D-Texas, said he was "personally insulted."

The hearing was called in the wake of layoffs and cutbacks at CBS News.

On Thursday, the network chief executive officers, CBS' Laurence A. Tisch, NBC's Robert C. Wright and ABC's Thomas S. Murphy, spent almost four hours answering questions about the effects of business decisions on network news. All insisted that public service still comes before profits but that they had to try to operate their news division more efficiently.

Tisch suggested the networks were forced to operate under outdated regulation imposed in years past when they dominated the airwaves. Now, he said, they face increasing competition from cable stations and videocassette recorders.

Tisch defended the cuts at CBS as "prudent" management, but promised that CBS would spend "any amount of money needed whenever it is needed" to maintain the quality of CBS News.

"We must all be wary of the mistaken idea that the proper measure of any news organization is a dollar sign," Tisch said. "The Iran-Contra story was broken by an obscure journal in Lebanon whose resources are undoubtedly minuscule. Examples of that sort are legion in this business."

Rep. Jim Slattery, D-Kan., asked Wright what would keep NBC's parent company, major defense contractor General Electric, from trying to affect the reporting of news in its favor.

"General Electric has bent over backward to ensure there is not even a semblance of any appearance (of intrusion)," Wright said. "The implication of that would be so disastrous, it would become so public so quickly, it would be just terrible."

'Death Of The Heart' Has Deceptive Twist In Writing

By ROBERT BARR
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — It's not a good sign on "Masterpiece Theater" when Alistair Cooke tells you that the evening's author has written a better book, and he wishes someone would make a film about that one.

But Cooke, that devil, holds his opinions until the viewer has spent two hours watching something else.

"The Death of the Heart," appearing Sunday on public television, deserves such warnings and right at the beginning. It's sometimes confusing, and often deceptive, but that seems to have been Elizabeth Bowen's style.

Bowen, an Anglo-Irish writer who died in 1973, made the upper-middle class her subject, and a critic once spoke of her "fascination with what cannot be said."

In this case, it's the upper-middle class of London in the late 1930s, a world in which feeling has been abolished and poses are worn and discarded as casually as the fancy clothes.

In its second hour, "The Death of the Heart" repays the viewer's time as cracks develop in the cultivated veneers of the characters. Tiny cracks, to be sure, but enough to see what until then could not be said.

"The Death of the Heart" ostensibly is about Portia Quayne, a wide-eyed 16-year-old orphan, born out of wedlock, who has come to London to live with her stuffy brother and his acerbic, repressed wife.

Jojo Cole makes her professional acting debut as Portia, and Nigel Havers and Patricia Hodge play Thomas and Anna Quayne, the brother and sister-in-law. Dame Wendy Hiller, that splendid actress, plays a maid who is Portia's best friend, and Daniel Chatto is the shallow, narcissistic young man who plays amorous cat to the mousy Portia.

Among the virtues of "The Death of the Heart," produced by Granada television, is the striking photography that often makes it more interesting to the eye than to the ear.

For all the time the camera spends with Portia, it seems the story is really about the brother and sister-in-law. At least, they have the best scene.

Portia precipitates a crisis when she seeks the comfort of an old family friend named Major Brutt (Robert Hardy) after her young man has ditched her. Brutt telephones Anna to say that Portia will come home, if they do "the right thing."

But what is that?

"Look at us, we can't decide anything," says a novelist (Jonathan Hyde) who has come to dinner.

"This evening, the pure in heart have simply got us on toast," he says, making the last word a multisyllabic exercise. He plainly relishes the domestic drama, even if he's oblivious to the poor girl's broken heart.

Portia is also upset because she has found out that Anna has been reading her diary. For the cold-blooded Anna, the diary may be her last window on real life.

How would you feel, the novelist asks Anna, if you were Portia?

"Contempt for the pack of us, who muddle our own lives and stopped me from living mine," she says.

"Boredom, oh, such boredom, with the sort of secret society about nothing, forever making little signs to one another. Utter lack of desire to know what it was all about."

"Wish that someone would blow a whistle and make the whole thing stop."

"Wish to have my own innings."

"Contempt for married people who are always playing up; contempt for single people who are forever cautious and touchy."

"Frantic, frantic desire to be handled with feeling," says Anna.

now in tears, "and at the same time to be left alone."

"Wish to be asked how I felt, and to be taken for granted."

The novelist asks: "How much is the diary, how much is you?"

"You said if I were Portia," Anna says, her eyes now as dry as her voice. "Naturally, that's impossible. She and I are hardly the same sex."

Of course, evil is usually more interesting than goodness, and bitterness more satisfying than innocence. Anna is simply a better part than Portia.

Hodge, who also plays Phillida Erskine-Brown, Q.C., on "Rumpole of the Bailey," gives a terrific performance, and Cole is always ingratiating.

Sweden's Artist Tax May Ax Sinatra Tour

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Frank Sinatra may drop Sweden from his upcoming European tour because of the government's refusal to exempt him from a 30 percent artist's tax, the tour's organizer says.

Most visiting performers are routinely excused from the tax, but the government decided not to waive it for Sinatra because he is on a United Nations blacklist for performing in South Africa, Finance Ministry Undersecretary Goran Selvall said Thursday.

Sinatra's tour is scheduled to open June 8 in Strangnas, 60 miles west of Stockholm, but the government's decision casts doubt on that date, concert organizer Lief Boner said.

"The question is whether we can raise the ticket prices enough both to pay the tax and to give Sinatra what he demands," Boner said.

Tickets for the concert, which was booked for a 10,000-seat auditorium, were set at $40 to $320 but haven't gone on sale yet. Boner declined to say how much Sinatra wanted for his performance.

The U.N. blacklist is a protest against South Africa's system of racial segregation.

To the uninitiated, Japanese calligraphy is anything but child's play. Basic literacy in the Japanese language requires a mastery of at least 1,850 characters. Many Japanese characters were borrowed from China. Phonetic signs were later added by altering some of these Chinese characters. There are more than 40,000 characters in Chinese script. Some Chinese typewriters have 5,700 characters with keyboards that are three feet wide.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Be most careful in whatever money matters you handle. The evening is fine for seeking advice.
MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): You may be overly sensitive during the daytime, so be more objective.

 When you have no legitimate play for your contract, run your long suit. You would be surprised at the strange things that might happen, even against expert opposition. Even at this vulnerability, we are not sure we would raise to six clubs with the North hand. There is just too great a risk that your side has two fast diamond losers.

 That was indeed the case here, but South was lucky to escape immediate demise when West chose to lead a spade. The bad news was that the lead removed an entry to dummy prematurely, so there was no legitimate line for the contract. Declarer, Dorothy Hayden Truscott of Riverdale, NY, won the ace, ruffed a spade and, stranding the ace of hearts on the table, proceeded to run off seven club tricks. Both defenders felt they had to retain three hearts to guard against dummy's long suit, so each came down to one diamond. Declarer led the ten of diamonds at trick 10, and scored the last three tricks with her last trump and the 3-2 of diamonds.
 Was there any justification for East-West's defense at rubber bridge? At duplicate?
 At rubber bridge it would be inexcusable. If declarer held the king of hearts, she had 12 tricks—nine trumps, the ace of spades and ace of hearts. But what about at duplicate, where the heart suit might be the key to an overtrick?

 At tournament play, you must judge the likelihood of the other pairs in your direction having to defend against six clubs. Since North-South barely have half the deck (you should be aware of that by the time declarer plays her eighth trump), few pairs are apt to get to slam. Since you are destined for a bad

Israel, Jordan Set Guides For Talks On Mideast Peace

JERUSALEM (AP) — A government official said today Israel and Jordan have agreed on guidelines for Arab-Israeli peace talks, including the issue of Palestinian representation.

The senior official, who spoke to reporters on condition of anonymity, said Israel and Jordan agreed the talks would begin with an international conference on Middle East peace intended to lead to direct negotiations between Israel and Jordan.

The neighboring countries also agreed on the length of the conference, the official said.

"It's not a contract that's been signed. We're still in the process of shaping it up," he said. "But there is agreement on these issues."

The government official said the one outstanding issue was whether the Soviet Union would participate, but that would be resolved between Jerusalem and Moscow. The Soviet Union broke ties with Israel in 1967.

He said the proposal was expected to be put before the Israeli Cabinet next week.

The official declined to say how Israel and Jordan had decided to handle the issue of Palestinian representation, which has been a key obstacle to peace talks.

Israel refuses to negotiate with the Palestine Liberation Organization, which it views as a terrorist group. The Arabs have traditionally seen the PLO as the sole legitimate representative of the Palestinians.

The official also did not say how or when the agreement between Israel and Jordan was reached. News reports have said King Hussein of Jordan met secretly with Israeli Foreign Minister Shimon Peres last month to discuss convening peace talks.

There was no immediate confirmation from Jordan on the Israeli official's statement. A Jordanian government spokesman on Thursday denied earlier reports that Peres and Hussein had met or that any agreement had been reached. "Hussein would never go (to an international conference) without the PLO," the spokesman, who insisted on anonymity, told The Associated Press.

Peres has been pushing to convene an international peace conference, but has faced stiff opposition from Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, who says Israel would be isolated in such a forum and forced to make territorial concessions.

Shamir, of the right-wing Likud bloc, and Peres, of the left-leaning Labor Party, have said their disagreements over the issue may bring down their coalition government.

The government official said the issue would likely come to a head when the proposal goes before the Cabinet. He declined to be specific about what had been decided, saying: "giving details now will only jeopardize any chance for movement or progress."

The official said the parties to the agreement were Israel, Jordan, Egypt and the United States. The United States has been mediating efforts to open peace talks.

U.S. Ambassador Thomas Pickering met separately with Shamir and Peres today. Shamir said Thursday he hoped to clarify the U.S. position on an international conference in his session with Pickering, but both meetings were held behind closed doors. Details of the discussions were not made public.

Shamir told reporters Thursday that the showdown could lead to new elections, which he does not want.

"That would be a tragedy for all of Israel. It would be total irresponsibility to throw us today into the whirlpool of elections, to endanger our accomplishments and to return us, God forbid, to inflation and stability," he said.

But speaking to university fund donors Thursday, Peres indicated he would go to the polls if Shamir's and his supporters did not back the conference.

"We have to decide today," Peres said. "It would be a shame to lose the chance of peace. Whoever wants to avoid elections must not avoid the possibility of examining the prospects of peace talks."

Labor and Likud are in the third year of a fragile coalition, and the two leaders traded jobs in October.

Peres said Jordan has agreed to bilateral talks with Israel under the umbrella of an international peace conference, but refused to say what form the agreement has taken.

"The situation is at this point that we've agreed on most of the subjects on the agenda," Peres said Thursday. "I don't want to say with whom we've reached agreement. I can only say there is someone who will write it up and someone who will guarantee it."

Israel radio reported Thursday that Peres drafted a written agreement during talks with Hussein in London earlier this month.

Soviets Relax Laws On Personal Labor

By CELESTINE BOHLEN
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

MOSCOW — A much-heralded law went into effect today that will allow thousands of Soviet citizens for the first time to work for themselves instead of the state.

Announced last November, the new law expanding legal "individual labor" has already been put into practice in scattered areas of the Soviet Union, as craftsmen, handymen, hairdressers and cafe managers experiment with concepts of profit, loss, competition and risk.

Under the new law, people can register with local authorities and offer their services to the public — if necessary, with credit and premises provided by the state. In some cases, the entrepreneur pays a fee for a license; in others, the state gets its share through progressive taxes.

Experts here say that by itself, the new law — restricted to about 40 job classifications — is not likely to have a big economic impact since it will mostly legitimize work that is now being done illegally. The bigger effect, they note, will be psychological, as work once regarded with suspicion becomes part of the economic mainstream.

Also, the "individual labor" law promises to be one of the most tangible features of Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev's package of reforms, and one that could have the most direct impact on people's lives by improving the now-dismal state of consumer services.

Soviet spokesmen are quick to protest that the new law does not allow private ownership and is not a step away from socialist principles. But they concede that it will challenge old stereotypes and require a rethinking of concepts about work.

"For many years, this kind of activity was considered unnecessary and social opinion about it was not very positive," said Lev Nikiforov, deputy director of the Institute on the Economy. "Now it is considered necessary. Many people do not understand it. They will have to work out new attitudes."

The significance of the May 1 law is bolstered by a simultaneous, and related, boom in "cooperative" enterprises, a field where opportunities were expanded with new rules issued in February. Cooperatives, which have existed here in various forms, can now engage in small-scale manufacturing as well as in providing public services.

According to economic experts, the cooperatives will overlap with, and eventually overtake, the "individual labor" law as people band together to reduce costs and share administrative burdens. Thus, for instance, Nikiforov predicted that car owners, who will be able to get licenses to give people lifts, will form cooperatives to share repair facilities and gasoline.

Leonid Abalkin, director of the Institute on the Economy, said in a Washington Post interview in November that cooperatives, now accounting for 12 percent of the gross national product, will double their share to 25 percent in 10 years.

Interest in the cooperative movement is visible daily in the Soviet press. Scientists are forming "research" cooperatives in Estonia, lawyers in Latvia are starting a video dating service, writers have so far formed three publishing cooperatives in Moscow, production cooperatives have started work in Armenia. The cooperative members are either pensioners or have other full-time jobs.

Yet during the experimental phase before the law went into effect, there was widespread confusion over how it was supposed to work. "At the moment, a person who expresses a desire to create a cooperative is like a boat on the open sea without a map or compass," wrote a Soviet journalist in the Moscow regional newspaper Leninskoe Znamya.
