Club Is Open 'To Whole World'

Supreme Court Upholds Women-In-Rotary Law

By JAMES H. RUBIN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — States may force Rotary Clubs to admit women, the Supreme Court ruled today.

The justices, in a 7-0 ruling, upheld a California law that bars Rotary International from ousting local chapters that have women members.

Justice Lewis F. Powell, in his opinion for the court, said the California law does not interfere with the constitutional rights of Rotarians to associate with whom they please.

Powell compared the clubs to public accommodations in rejecting arguments that Rotarians have a First Amendment right to bar women.

He said the clubs are sizeable, have a high turnover rate, engage in public activities, encourage participation by non-members and welcome news media coverage of many of the central activities.

"The evidence in this case indicates that the relationship among Rotary Club members is not the kind of intimate or private relation that warrants constitutional protection," Powell said.

"The membership undertakes a variety of service projects designed to aid the community, to raise the standards of the members' businesses and professions and to improve international relations," he continued.

"In sum, Rotary Clubs, rather than carrying on their activities in an atmosphere of privacy, seek to keep their 'windows and doors open to the whole world,'" Powell said.

While today's ruling reinforced the power of states to curb sex discrimination, the court provided no checklist on what other organizations might be affected.

Powell suggested it requires a case-by-case analysis to determine whether an organization is sufficiently private to base membership on gender.

The justices in 1984 ruled that the Jaycees may be forced by states to admit women as full members. That decision said a Minnesota law banning discrimination by "public accommodations" applies to the Jaycees.

Thus, today's ruling does not answer the question of whether state public accommodations laws may apply, for example, to such groups as the Kiwanis, Lions, Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, Sons of Italy or the Polish Women's Alliance.

Rotary International has nearly one million members in some 20,000 clubs in 54 nations. It was founded 82 years ago by four Chicago men and took its name from their practice of rotating meeting sites at each other's place of business.

The international organization was ordered to abide by a California law,

Nancy Says First Lady Has Right To Her Opinions

By TERENCE HUNT
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Nancy Reagan said today she does not hesitate to offer her views to President Reagan and his staff, saying, "You don't give up your right to an opinion just because you're married to the president."

"Neither marriage nor politics denies a spouse the right to hold an opinion or the right to express it," she said.

Mrs. Reagan made her comments in a speech prepared for delivery at the annual luncheon of The Associated Press, held in conjunction with the annual convention of the American Newspaper Publishers Association. The president addressed the ANPA on Sunday, vowing to keep fighting for aid for Contra rebels in Nicaragua.

In her remarks, Mrs. Reagan made light of stories that have said she plays a major role in shaping administration policy.

"This morning, I had planned to clear up U.S.-Soviet differences on intermediate-range nuclear missiles, but I decided to clean out Ronnie's sock drawer instead," she joked.

More seriously, she said she had been unprepared for the intense scrutiny a first lady receives, adding, "I was even more unprepared for what I read about myself in the papers."

"I read that I wanted the Carters to move out of the White House early, that I banned sumo wrestlers from the Rose Garden, that I planned to tear down a wall in the Lincoln bedroom."

She said she finally concluded, "You may never stop being hurt by stories, but you do stop being surprised."

Mrs. Reagan's role became the subject of attention earlier this year when some of her friends — speaking anonymously — said she was spearheading a campaign to oust Donald Regan as White House chief of staff. He resigned Feb. 27 after

Hart Says Report Tying Him To Woman 'Untrue'

By EVANS WITT
AP Political Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Gary Hart says a Miami Herald story claiming he spent Friday night with a young woman isn't true. His campaign manager calls the story character assassination, based on "hiding in bushes, peeking in windows and personal harassment."

A Herald executive said the newspaper stands behind its Sunday story, which told how its reporters followed a woman from Miami to Washington and saw her at Hart's townhouse. The newspaper said she "spent Friday night and most of Saturday" with Hart.

But today the newspaper conceded the woman could have left Hart's townhouse without being seen by the paper's reporters, since there was a five-hour gap in their surveillance.

The paper said that "there were opportunities between approximately midnight and 5 a.m. for her to depart undetected via the unwatched rear entrance" of Hart's house. And no one from the paper watched the house at all from 3 a.m. to 5 a.m.

On Sunday, Executive Editor Heath Meriwether said that "the womanizing issue has become a major one in Hart's campaign because it raises questions concerning the candidate's judgment and integrity.

That's why we are reporting on this story."

Hart, the front-runner for the 1988 Democratic presidential nomination, denied any impropriety.

"No one was staying in my apartment," Hart told the Herald. "I have no personal relationship with the individual you are following."

Council To Get Proposed Budget

Mayo Allen, Greenville's acting city manager, will present a proposed $19.6 million budget for fiscal year 1987-88 to the City Council at a workshop tonight.

The $19,568,574 proposed budget includes provisions to eliminate the residential refuse collection fees and to use private haulers for commercial garbage pickups.

The budget provides for privatization of the service effective Sept. 1 with current commercial refuse fees remaining in place until that date.

Other options such as continuance of commercial garbage fees with the Public Works Department providing service or discontinuance of commercial fees and raising taxes are available for council consideration, according to Allen, who said the budget to be presented doesn't address those options.

The controversial refuse fees of $4 per month for residential collection and $15 per month per container for businesses were included in the 1986-87 budget to offset the loss of $750,000 in revenue sharing.

The proposed 1987-88 budget, which includes $16,400,618 in the General Fund, marks a 0.85 percent reduction from 1986-87's $19,737,196 budget, according to Allen.

"The proposed budget represents an efficient and planned approach to operating city government," Allen said in the budget report. "Every effort has been made to fund existing city services at the current level, to meet the demands of a growing city, and to offset the loss of federal funds in 1987-88 and each year thereafter."

Relief Flights Resuming To Famine-Stricken Sudan

By JONATHAN C. RANDAL
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

KHARTOUM, Sudan — International relief flights are once again flying food to southern Sudan to prevent famine caused less by poor crops than by widespread fighting in the 4-year-old civil war.

Plans to stockpile 71,000 tons of food in the south before the now imminent six-month rainy season collapsed largely because lawlessness in neighboring Uganda prevented delivering the food by road, the cheapest form of transportation.

Working under the umbrella of the United Nations World Food Program, donors such as the United States, the European Community and church groups pledged the food despite a bumper crop of Sudan's northern-grown staple, sorghum.

As is often the case in relief operations, by far the main cost was not the grain itself, but its transportation to the vast, inaccessible and landlocked south from Kenya, Uganda, Zaire and northern Sudan.

Reliance on air shipments sharply limited the amount of food that could be delivered. Donors scaled back their involvement and relief workers who once hoped to reach 1.3 million of the 6 million southerners now more realistically limit their goals to helping 900,000.

Unlike the previous year, the original stockpile goal for 1987 reflected careful on-the-ground evaluation. Aid officials admit that in 1986 they exaggerated the danger rather than face criticism that they were unprepared, as in the Ethiopian and northern Sudanese famines the previous year.

The now-reduced shipments also fit in with unacknowledged tactics by both government and rebel forces designed to deny each other — and parts of the civilian population — access to food.

The war is fought in the south, where black tribesmen of the Sudanese People's Liberation Army battle forces of the government, which is dominated by Arabized northern Sudanese.

Increasingly, the government has sought to reward its allies among local armed militias with relief supplies, forcing aid organizations to go along as the price for reaching civilians, aid workers here said.

Still, roughly 10 percent of the food has reached the southern target area, according to relief officials.

That represents more than was flown in last year during the United Nations' "Operation Rainbow." An

Boy Scout Units Win Citations

About 2,500 area Boy Scouts congregated at Camp Bonner in Beaufort County this weekend for the annual East Carolina Council camporee, according to Heber Adams of the Boy Scouts.

The campers from 20 eastern North Carolina counties began the event Friday with a campfire, Adams said. During the weekend, they learned several camping skills such as flag pole raising, tent and peg making, patrol and flag symbols, fire by friction and first aid.

The camp concluded its weekend events Sunday with religious services, he said.

Several local troop received special citations for camping events, said Irene Lee, chairman of the citations.

Troop 30, sponsored by Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church, was cited for its Gateway project, while Troop 550 of Winterville was cited for its Gateway project and Pedro flag.

Troop 826 was cited for its flaming arrow Pedro flag, while Troop 34 of Ayden was cited for its Gateway project and camp setup.

Jesse Moye of Greenville was the camporee chief, while Rick Askew of New Bern was the events chairman, Adams said. Bernard Haselrig of Greenville was the chief judge.

Physical Therapists At ECU Use Robot To Treat Aches And Pains

By GEORGE THREEWITTS
ECU News Bureau

When Paul Hager severely injured his leg in a car accident last year, he wondered if he would ever walk again without pain and stiffness. But with the help of a robot at East Carolina University, Hager should soon be walking normally, running and even playing sports.

Hager, an ECU junior, is among the first and the most seriously injured of the patients using the new Biodex robot in the department of physical therapy in the ECU School of Allied Health Sciences. The machine is used for analyzing and treating joint and muscle problems.

Hager was injured last November near his home in Greensboro when a car in which he was a passenger crashed into a tree. His kneecap was shattered as it struck the dashboard. In surgery following the accident, doctors removed 15 pieces of broken bone from his knee, leaving his leg swollen, stiff and with an H-shaped scar. His patella (or kneecap), a mobile bone that covers and protects the knee joint and serves as a lever to the strong muscles which straighten the leg, was removed.

On recommendation from his doctor, Hager began physical therapy treatments in January when he resumed his studies at ECU. His treatments are directed by George Hamilton, chairman of the department of physical therapy. Hamilton immediately prescribed a regimen of therapy on the Biodex, a machine ideally suited to Hager's injury.

Acquired last year, the Biodex can be controlled through a computer and can be programmed to do a variety of procedures. It's a testing device that can tell how much force the muscles can create around a joint. It gives information about the motion in the joint and how rapidly the muscles contract. It also determines how much force the muscles can create at various points in the range of motion and the speed of movement.

In addition to analyzing the condition of the limb, the Biodex can also be used to build strength in an injured muscle and to increase the range of flexibility in a joint.

When Hager uses the machine, he sits in a comfortable seat and straps his right leg to a padded pendulum which is attached to the machine itself. Part of the therapy consists of setting the controls on the machine so that it automatically swings the pendulum forward and backward to loosen the muscles and soft tissues of his injured leg.

The Biodex can also be set so that Hager must exert his muscle strength to move the pendulum. As part of the therapy, electrodes are placed near his knee. Light pulses of electricity cause the muscles to contract and are timed with the movement of the pendulum. A computer collects data on muscle strength and angle of flexibility and prints out information showing improvements and weaknesses.

"We are trying to get the knee joint to flex as far as possible and build strength in his leg," Hamilton said. He said that the physician who operated on Hager's leg did an excellent job in repairing the joint so that it responds very well to physical therapy.

He said that when Hager used the machine for the first time last December, his leg could only bend about 20 degrees. It was very painful. Hager can now flex his knee joint 90 degrees without any pain associated with the exercise. Hamilton said the goal for Hager is 110 degrees of flexibility, which would give him a good functional range of motion.

Protection

Some well-qualified observers say the hastily written legislation to protect Burlington Industries from a takeover by outside interests is poorly done and when many people are racing the clock it is quite probable.

Still, legislators may have bought some time with their effort and under the circumstances that can't be all bad. Too, they sent a message.

The legislators' early concern was the protection of North Carolina shareholders in a corporate entity that made its base of operations in North Carolina. The lawmakers were dismayed by the impact of other takeovers which cost the state heavily in terms of industries and its impact on the Tar Heel economy. The recent past has been marked by several such losses costing North Carolinians a lot of jobs.

Basically, the Shareholder Protection Act established a formula to protect the value of the average shareholder's stock in the event of a hostile takeover attempt and prevent a panic when such an effort is made.

It prevents corporate raiders from acquiring companies and liquidating their assets without paying shareholders a fair price for their shares. Under the law, once a buyer offers a price for stock it must pay that price to all shareholders unless 95 percent of them vote to override the requirement.

The Burlington case, they realized, might not be covered because Burlington Industries was chartered in Delaware but made North Carolina its "home."

So the law was hurriedly amended to cover companies chartered elsewhere but that make North Carolina their principal place of business, had more than half of their domestic fixed assets in this state at the end of their last two fiscal years and at the end of their most recent fiscal quarters, had more than 50 percent of their employees in North Carolina and had 10 percent or more of the beneficial owners of the voting stock residing in North Carolina.

The N.C. Senate bill covers more than the one industry which triggered Assembly action.

We see it entirely logical that North Carolina would move to defend its own interests in protecting its jobholders as well as N.C. shareholders.

The N.C. Senate's action was the reasonable thing to do. Now it's up to the House to follow suit.

Beach Dangers

April was not a good month for people with dwellings in the Nags Head area. Beach erosion became a classic example of the unexpected along the state's coast line and one just cannot argue with all that erosion signifiers.

Tides and winds played havoc along the coast. On Hatteras Island seawater poured over roads and briefly buried stretches in up to three feet of sand and four feet of water. Cars and trucks were swamped and their occupants were lucky with little worse happening to them than getting soaked.

For two weekends in a row the tides were running well above normal and undermined pilings, shattered decks and stairwells and damaged siding and foundations of other homes. Houses tumbled into the water.

Dunes simply melted away; and with them, some protection heretofore provided for property owners.

The Nags Head building inspector says the weather created destruction faster than his office could notify homeowners.

It could have been worse.

Forecasters have long warned of a big "killer storm" with unfavorable tides and winds of a hurricane combining forces to create a nightmare of disruptive power. That has yet to come.

Our beaches are glorious targets of opportunity for vacationers and family holidays but at the same time "permanent" structures are an illusion.

Reality lurks.

Putting Out The Word, Bringing In Bucks

— Megan Rosenfeld —

When the broadcasting "Bible thumpers" first attracted national attention about 10 years ago, the secular public and press greeted them with amusement and amazement.

In an era of bland politicians, anonymous suburbs and fading regionalism, their blazing and hyperbolic oratory and emotionalism was riveting to believers and non-believers alike. The media feasted upon their colorful quotes and claims, delighted to have found some genuine American folklore.

From Ernest Angeley exhorting the sick to place their hands on the television set to be healed, to the more mainline Robert Schuller in his gigantic glass cathedral, the preachers offered an antidote to the predictable hymns and too-often boring sermons dished up in mainstream churches.

Instead there were vast choirs of well-coifed men and women, augmented with orchestras instead of organs, singing not the same old hymns but upbeat tunes you could almost dance to. There were tearful testimonials from people whose lives had been changed after they accepted Jesus Christ as their personal Savior, and in some cases Charismatic worship such as speaking in tongues. And there was a fierce and uncompromising morality that answered a need for some adrift in the situational ethics of modern society.

But as the visibility and financial power of the televangelists grew, they drew attention not just for their style of worship but for their message as well. Increasingly they appeared to espouse messages some found racist, anti-Semitic, anti-Catholic, or anti-anything that did not conform to a fundamentalist interpretation of the Bible. Yet the message of the electronic ministry has rarely been that simple, and its sometime stridency springs from an apocalyptic vision both real and frightening to its believers. To millions of their followers, the televangelists chart a genuine path through a world of disturbing and often terrifying questions — questions far more disturbing than any behavior by the ministers themselves.

Pollsters have found 81 percent of the televangelists' viewers are white, and few of those visible on the air or in the administrative hierarchies are black, but the top evangelists have not been charged with racism as often as with religious intolerance. Falwell once supported school segregation, and his Lynchburg, Va., Christian School was started as an all-white alternative in his southern Virginia town, but he has since repudiated this position, and blacks attend both his church and his schools.

Many both in and outside of the more established clergy have found the dogmatism of the televangelists less interesting than their often flamboyant life styles, so different from the tradition of the modest and ascetic man of God. Jimmy Swagart has a mansion with swimming pools, an array of expensive cars and a $3.75 million Gulf Stream jet; Oral Roberts has a $500,000 house in Tulsa and an $850,000 jet; Jim Bakker has a lavish home near Heritage USA, one in Tennessee and another one in Palm Springs, Calif., and when in South Carolina was usually seen driving a Mercedes. Pat Robertson lives in a lavish home and takes his recreation by riding one of his purebred horses. Falwell lives somewhat more modestly in one church-supplied mansion on a $100,000-a-year (or, in another of his reports, a $200,000) salary. He has the use of a church-owned $2 million Israeli Westwind jet, but considering the amount of time the peripatetic preacher spends on the road, it could almost be considered a parsonage.

Falwell recently suggested that the credibility of television preachers would be helped if they scaled down their life styles a bit. But most of the fundamentalists believe not only that God showers blessings, both earthly and spiritual, on the true believers, but that their followers, who are largely working class, get vicarious pleasure from their luxury.

Sociologist William Martin, who is completing a biography of Billy Graham, said Graham is still the only popular evangelist he has studied whose personal life is above reproach. When Graham first burst onto the scene in the late 1940s, Martin said, he convened a meeting of advisers to discuss ways evangelists had traditionally met their downfalls. They were clear: sex, inflated statistics and the handling of money.

"So Graham has always had a friend who travels with him, who goes into every hotel room first to make sure there is no one there to trap him," Martin said. "He has a board of businessmen who make the financial decisions. He submits his 990 forms to the IRS, and he makes his audit forms available. He is still the model."

Debate Over 'Special Provisions' Flares

RALEIGH (AP) — You're a state legislator with clout and have a bill you'd like to see enacted. But it would be controversial, and you'd just as soon avoid a fuss.

So instead of introducing the bill, you have it attached to an omnibus budget measure that's hundreds of pages long and is rushed to approval in a legislative session's waning days. You've been clever enough to camouflage the provision in legalistic jargon that's hard to decipher.

Presto! The provision goes virtually unnoticed as the budget package is debated. Your proposal becomes law without having been introduced, scrutinized by a committee or debated on the floor.

Is the above scenario fact or fiction?

Fact, say critics inside and outside the General Assembly. Indeed, in recent years spending bills increasingly have been packed with "special provisions" that make far-reaching policies having little or nothing to do with the budget.

According to a study by the non-partisan North Carolina Center for Public Policy Research, 376 laws and amendments were enacted as special provisions in the 1985-86 session. Of those, 57 passed in last year's short session — even though the Senate had adopted rules designed to curb the practice.

"The House did not pass equivalent rules, and ... the final appropriations bill was once again loaded down with special provisions that few legislators knew anything about — let alone what their ultimate impact would be," said Kan Coble, the center's director.

Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan, who presides over the Senate, has been preaching reform for two years. Last week one of his allies, Sen. Charles Hipps, D-Haywood, proposed a constitutional amendment to outlaw special provisions that don't pertain directly to the budget.

Hipps was in the spotlight last summer when he led a revolt of rank-and-file lawmakers against a special provision that would have given former Rep. Margaret "Pinky" Hayden a sizable pay increase in her job with the state Department of Public Instruction.

The outcry against the provision, slipped into the budget by House Appropriations Committee Chairman Billy Watkins, D-Granville, was so loud that he finally dropped it. But the incident left hard feelings. Last week, Watkins denounced Hipps' proposed amendment.

"He's chairman of the (Senate) Constitutional Amendments Committee and he has to have something to play with," Watkins said in an interview. "That whole business (special provisions) is just something people gripe and complain about, mostly Republicans and Republican sympathizers."

Watkins called the proposed amendment a "run-on bill" designed to benefit the political fortunes of Jordan — a likely candidate for governor next year — "and his cronies."

Asked about the bill's prospects in the House if passed by the Senate, Watkins said, "I absolutely don't think it's got a snowman's chance in the fire."

Hipps denied political motivation. "This is not an issue that's going to make or break me with the folks back home."

He said he had been disturbed by the budget situation since his arrival in the Senate in 1982, when he and other newcomers searched frantically for hidden bombshells in thick budget bills. Often, legislative leaders unveil such bills in a morning meeting of the Joint Appropriations Committee and push them to enactment by sundown.

Public Forum

To the editor:

When a man like Les Garner has been so viciously attacked and maligned, it makes people like me, who have lived and worked in Greenville all their life, wonder what this community really wants in a leader. Les, by serving as mayor, has had his good name and integrity questioned. Is it worth it? Maybe to someone like Mayor Garner, who has spent his life working for and giving to others, it is.

He has served his country, receiving the Distinguished Flying Cross in World War II. He has served his state and local community through various organizations such as: Board of directors of NCNB, ECU Pirates Club, Pitt County United Fund, Board member and one of the founders of St. James United Methodist Church, chairman Salvation Army Board (chairman of Christmas Drive for the past 20 years). He is a Shriner, Mason and Kiwanian.

He was awarded Tar Heel of the Week in 1976, Citizen of the Year 1976, Small Business Leader of the Year 1985, Employer of the Year for Mentally Handicapped in 1984.

These are just a few of the contributions Les has made to his community. He provides jobs for 200 people. He has adopted and reared two foster children and is currently the guardian of a mentally handicapped adult. He is a person who loves his fellowman, regardless of race, religion or creed.

Now, I ask you again, why would someone with all this going for him put up with the recent derogatory comments and attack levied upon him? I guess the answer is that he feels like he has something to offer to the citizens of Greenville. Thank you, Les.

Contras Became Personal Cause

Analysis

WASHINGTON — Alexander Haig thought the plan made no sense. A small covert war couldn't be won, the secretary of state told President Reagan. Besides, it would be illegal.

But the retired four-star general, like virtually every other source of professional advice, was ignored.

And on Nov. 23, 1981, when Ronald Reagan signed a secret directive providing CIA support for a small paramilitary band of Nicaraguans, he embarked on one of the most controversial policies of his presidency.

Nicaragua at the time was only a tiny backwater in the heart of Central America. Its population was a little smaller than that of Chicago. Its agricultural economy had been battered by civil war and upended by the 1979 revolution that ousted the U.S.-backed dictator Anastasio Somoza Debayle.

The leftist Sandinistas hardly posed a direct threat to any of their neighbors, although their willingness to allow arms to be funneled through their territory was a boost for leftist guerrillas trying to seize power in neighboring El Salvador.

But Nicaragua had become a rallying point for a small group of conservative Republicans who used their party's platform process in 1980 to push their view that the Soviet Union was using Nicaragua, like Cuba, to extend its power to the Western Hemisphere. At the behest of Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., the platform was amended to "deplore the Marxist Sandinista takeover of Nicaragua," oppose U.S. aid to "any Marxist government in this hemisphere" and "support the efforts of the Nicaraguan people to establish a free and independent government."

And the "Nicaraguan people" that Reagan decided to support were mainly the small groups of ex-National Guard officers, once loyal to Somoza, who met in Guatemala and Honduras plotting the overthrow of the Sandinistas.

From among these groups, Enrique Bermudez, an American-trained guard colonel who had served as Somoza's military attache in Washington during the revolution, organized the Nicaraguan Democratic Forces, or FDN. Bermudez convened a meeting in Guatemala City in August 1981 that established him as military leader.

At the time, CIA analysts assessed the rebels' military prospects at near zero. But supporting anti-Marxist guerrillas meshed well with Reagan's anti-communism. Cloak-and-dagger operators, who build their careers on missions impossible, were enthusiastic. And so was CIA director William Casey, who argued that the United States would merely be backing an effort already under way.

And when Reagan approved the expenditure of $19.95 million to build a 500-man force and authorized the CIA to work "with foreign governments as appropriate," Casey picked Clarridge to run the program.

In a pattern that would repeat itself, Reagan's decision bypassed expert advice from the State Department and military professionals.

Haig wanted to make a stand over what he saw as a threat to El Salvador, but favored "going to the source" — pressing Cuba to limit its support for the Salvadoran rebels — and stepping up military aid to El Salvador.

He argued that secretly funding a war "brings with it a built-in incentive for the other side relatively easily to repair the damage and face you with escalating levels of violence," he said in a recent interview. And he felt that U.S. policy should be "based on the rule of law and not engage in the repetition of Brezhnev doctrines of our own," a reference to the doctrine Moscow used to explain its 1968 invasion of Czechoslovakia.

Congress was misled about the aim of the operation. Casey, briefing its intelligence committees in early December, said the goal of the rebels, who became known as contras or counterrevolutionaries, was to stop arms traffic into El Salvador and strike at Cuban military installations in Nicaragua. Clarridge never mentioned such goals to the FDN, according to top rebel sources.

These were the beginnings of a policy that was to become a personal cause for Reagan.

The president proclaimed the rebels the "moral equal of our Founding Fathers" and said, "I'm a contra too." They were fighting, he said, against a Soviet satellite that would export Marxist revolution in the region.

The policy was begun without public debate. Once controversy emerged, Reagan's expressed goals varied: to halt the flow of arms, to force the Sandinistas to make democratic changes or share power, to oust the Sandinistas. Meanwhile, the rebels grew in number — if not effectiveness — to beyond 10,000.

Not-So-Feeble Policy

WASHINGTON — In the common view, American foreign policy is now enfeebled by the Reagan administration's lame-duck status, its indecisions and the Iran-contra scandal. The president's effort to redeem himself in arms control, it is suggested, is the only real sign of life on the diplomatic horizon, and perhaps not an auspicious one. Critics expecting little good from him join erstwhile supporters who fear a sellout in hoping he'll limp to a quiet exit.

Except that reality keeps pressing in. Friends and rivals keep demanding American choices. And there is from the administration a response — ragged, not in a pattern, but who at this late date will complain of that?

The Soviet example is instructive. Skeptics may ask whether Mikhail Gorbachev is pushing arms control in order to take advantage of Reagan's political embarrassment. But the sounder view is the one the Soviets themselves profess: Reagan remains a president who can deliver the conservative American constituency that wields a permanent veto power over any significant arms-control agreement. To wait for the next president — especially to wait for a more liberal Democratic president — is just too chancy.

In the Middle East, where you might think Reagan would be under a shadow, our Arab friends implore him to join the call for an international peace conference. An international conference means a new Mideast opening for Moscow. It is the club with which Arabs threaten Reagan for failing to renew the assertive, exclusively American role played earlier by Henry Kissinger and Jimmy Carter. Arabs would almost certainly have preferred to see Reagan, or a successor, resume that exclusive role. So would the territory-for-peace party, though not the annexationist party, in Israel.

In Africa, Angola has chosen this moment to reopen its lines to Washington. Mozambique is widening its American connection, encouraged by a Ronald Reagan who has steadily widened his own connection to a regime that American conservatives (wrongly) revile as irreparably Marxist. This goes on even as the Reagan policy of "constructive engagement" with southern Africa is widely dismissed as a failure and a thing of the past.

In fact, "front-line states" desperately need the United States to help blunt South Africa's ferocious "destabilization" campaign. This is so even of angry Zimbabwe, whose reported receipt of an offer of Soviet warplanes seems to have had a quickening effect in Washington. The black states, if not yet obdurate white-ruled South Africa, may have calculated that the Reagan administration's interest in finishing up strong in southern Africa gives them a few extra cards.

I don't say any of these or other negotiating situations will burst into spring bloom. Events, however, are refusing to respect Reagan's political disabilities. Certainly it's too early to close the book on this administration's regional diplomacy.

Views On Dental Health

HOT AND COLD OF IT

Hot foods and cold drinks may be enjoyable together, but there is evidence that this combination can result in dental damage. Studies have found that intensive cycles of heat and cold can cause tiny cracks in tooth enamel, inviting tooth decay and possible tooth fracture.

Heat alone seems to do no harm. Cold is the villain and when warm teeth are suddenly exposed to cold, the temperature drop can be shocking. Thus, if your after-dinner coffee at 140 degrees is followed by ice cream at 35 degrees, the enamel contracts severely. The resulting pressure on the shrinking enamel may make it crack. Repeated exposure to such temperature changes increases the possibility of tooth fracture.

One sure way to injure teeth is to chew cracked ice. The physical pressure from chewing hard ice, combined with the sudden temperature drop, subjects teeth to dangerously high levels of stress. If you wear a full set of dentures, there's no problem. They come out at night anyway — but why take a chance with the ones Mother Nature provided?

IN THE STATE

Jordan

CHADBOURN, N.C. (AP) — Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan says he'll announce his plans on the 1988 governor's race in the fall, and he says he might just have to run for higher office.

Any challenge he mounts against incumbent Gov. Jim Martin, a Republican, will be helped by the absence of other contenders for the Democratic nomination, Jordan said during Saturday's Strawberry Festival.

Jordan said he hasn't really focused on the exact timing of an announcement, "but you're talking about October or November."

Quads Born

DURHAM (AP) — Quadruplets born nearly 10 weeks premature were in critical condition at Duke University Medical Center Sunday, a hospital spokesman said.

The infants — three boys and a girl — were born to Tony and Loretta Hall of Four Oaks, hospital spokesman Michael Chitwood said.

Mrs. Hall, 25, had been taking Clomid, a ovulation-inducing drug that Chitwood said could result in about a 5 percent chance of twins and less than a 1 percent chance of other multiple births.

The Halls named the infants Toni Faith, Garrett Lee, Anthony Brian and Cameron Micheal — all of whom were in the hospital's intensive care unit.

Mrs. Hall said she and her husband have no other children.

Smith's Body

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Nearly a year after her death, Kate Smith's body is being stored in the basement of a New York chapel because of disagreements about the size of her mausoleum and a short mountain burial season.

Miss Smith, known for her rousing rendition of "God Bless America," died in Raleigh June 17 of respiratory failure. Her will stipulates that she be interred in a pink- or rose-colored granite mausoleum at the cemetery of St. Agnes Catholic Church in Lake Placid, N.Y.

However, St. Agnes can bury bodies only seven months in the year because the ground freezes at the end of November and doesn't thaw until mid-April. The short burying season also makes mausoleums impractical in the Adirondacks because the ground has to be warm enough to pour a cement foundation. Church officials are attempting to work out the problems now, a spokesman said.

"This is certainly something which no one has foreseen, and we don't want any more delay with it," Miss Smith's sister, Helena M. Steene of Raleigh, said.

Missing Pilot

THOMASVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Authorities are continuing their search for a Greensboro man whose gyrocopter crashed into a Davidson County lake over the weekend.

The gyrocopter, which had been missing for almost 24 hours, was found Sunday in Lake Thom-a-lex, said Chris Brown, a dispatcher for the Davidson County Sheriff's Department.

The Civil Air Patrol from Charlotte and Winston-Salem had been searching since daybreak in a 10-mile radius for the gyrocopter. The gyrocopter — a one-seat helicopter with a small engine — took off about 6 p.m. from a private airstrip in Davidson County, Brown said.

Authorities dragged the lake, and the patrol continued its air search for Tony Pierman of Greensboro, believed to be the pilot of the gyrocopter.

Legislature

RALEIGH (AP) — The makeup of the state General Assembly has changed dramatically since 1971, according to a study by the North Carolina Center for Public Policy Research.

There are more women, blacks, Republicans, retirees, educators and people in the real estate business in the Legislature than ever before, the survey found.

In 1971, there were two women and two blacks in the General Assembly; in the 1987 session, 24 lawmakers are women and 16 are black. The number of Republicans has grown from 31 in 1971 to 46 this year.

Legislative turnover rates, traditionally about 36 percent, took a nose-dive this year, the center reported.

"The turnover ratio for the 1987 General Assembly is down to 12 percent in the Senate and 21 percent in the House, so we'll just have to see whether this trend in favor of incumbents is a long-term trend," said researcher Marianne Kersey. "A decline in legislative turnover rates is also being seen nationally."

Mopeds

RALEIGH (AP) — A bill to allow motorized bicycles to be driven by younger teenagers at faster speeds is drawing fire from law-enforcement officials.

The bill, introduced by state Sen. J.K. Sherron, D-Wake, would allow 15-year-olds to ride mopeds at up to 30 miles per hour without requirements for insurance, licenses and tags.

"I don't think it's any more dangerous than what they are presently doing," Sherron said.

Currently, moped riders must be at least 16 years old.

Second Suit

DURHAM (AP) — The chairman of the Granville County Board of Education said a lawsuit filed by the U.S. Justice Department seeking charges in the method of election of the school board was necessary.

However, Bobby Young, chairman of the school board, said he finds it "ironic" that the Justice Department filed the lawsuit and never contacted anyone connected with the Granville County schools.

The Granville County commissioners already were faced with a similar lawsuit and Young said the school board "on March 11 addressed this question and adopted a motion authorizing the superintendent, the board's attorney and the chairman to start reviewing possible realignment of school board districts."

Young said the school board took the action so that any needed changes could be made to bring the school system into compliance following a decision in the lawsuit against the county commissioners.

Young told the newspaper he sees the latest lawsuit as a "waste of the Justice Department personnel and our resources."

Integon-Southmark

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Southmark Corp. of Dallas has announced plans to spin off Integon Corp. into a separate subsidiary and publicly held company, but officials say the change won't affect the insurance company's operations here.

"It will have no effect at all on Integon," said Thomas C. Walker, executive vice president of corporate development at Southmark.

Southmark bought Integon, a Winston-Salem-based life insurance company, two years ago.

The company said it would keep about 85 percent of Integon's common stock. "This is simply a sale of a portion of the company to the public," Walker said.

A registration statement filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission outlined a proposed initial public offering of 4 million shares of common stock of Integon Corp.

Graduation Speakers Will Include 'Second-Choice' Ueberroth, Koppel

By The Associated Press
Baseball Commissioner Peter V. Ueberroth will deliver the commencement address May 10 at Kenan Stadium, but organizers admit he wasn't the top choice of University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill students.

"The first choice was Bishop Desmond Tutu, but he declined some time ago," said Ted Bonus, director of public information at UNC-CH. "They were lucky to get Ueberroth."

Many of the people who have a hand in selecting graduation speakers for the dozens of colleges, universities and community colleges across the state agree with Bonus that there's a lot of luck involved.

They say that national figures like Ueberroth often receive between 50 and 200 commencement speaking invitations a year.

"It's a very big headache," Bonus said of the selection process. "There's really not a large number of people around you'd want to hear give a commencement talk."

This spring that list includes speakers from the usual categories — politicians, educators, celebrities, business executives, literary figures, military leaders and journalists.

The speaker selection process is especially competitive, administrators say, because the majority of graduations occur during three weeks in May.

"All the institutions want the same people at the same time," said Fred Young, president of Elon College. "The students will want some big-name entertainer or the secretary of state or the president. For example, Bill Cosby would be a suggestion."

Instead of Cosby, Elon graduates will hear Charles Gibson, host of

ABC's "Good Morning, America."

Young said getting Gibson was easy, but did require connections.

"Charles and I are personal friends, and I called him at home and he said yes," Young said. "If I had gone through his office, it could have taken weeks."

Because of the long waits for confirmation and the competition for speakers, many schools work several months in advance.

"We've already submitted a list of speakers for 1988," said Pelham Wilder, executive secretary of Duke University's commencement committee. "We try to work a year in advance."

Philosophies differ from college to college as to the type of speaker.

"We look for someone who is nationally or internationally known," Wilder said.

But at N.C. State University, the approach is considerably different.

"We haven't gone for international names as some universities have," said Don Locke, head of N.C. State's commencement committee. "We've gone for people who are appropriate to the occasion."

Those differing philosophies are evident in this year's speakers at the two schools — Ted Koppel, host of ABC's "Nightline," at Duke and NCSU Chancellor Bruce Poulton, who will speak at his own school.

Even so, Duke, N.C. State and most other schools look for a speaker who has some tie to them.

Koppel, for example, has a daughter, Deirdre Anne, who is graduating from Duke.

Former Rep. Richardson Preyer, the speaker at Greensboro College, is a longtime trustee of the school.

Some are chosen because of special events in the life of the school or the speaker.

Poulton is speaking at N.C. State because the university is observing its centennial.

And Isaac Miller, retiring president of Bennett College, will be making his last speech in office.

Those interviewed refused to say what their speakers will be paid.

"It's modest," said William Likins, president at Greensboro College. "They surely don't come for the honorarium."

Universities typically pay the speaker's expenses and an honorarium, which, depending on the school and speaker, can run from a couple of hundred dollars to a couple of thousand.

But selecting and paying commencement speakers isn't the main headache for those saddled with such responsibilities.

What if 3,000 students, their parents and friends and faculty have assembled and the commencement speaker gets sick?

"We always have a backup," says Elon's Young. "We go into every commencement with one of our outstanding professors standing by."

Harris Plant Fully Operational

RALEIGH (AP) — The Shearon Harris nuclear plant moved to commercial operation status Saturday after five months of testing, Carolina Power & Light Co. announced.

"This is a major achievement for the company and everyone involved," said R.A. "Al" Watson, vice president of the Harris nuclear project. "We look forward to being a vital part of the CP&L system."

Watson said the plant completed a 100-hour test run at full power late Friday night.

As part of the testing operation, the plant in southern Wake County was taken off line after the testing phase was completed, Watson said. He said additional adjustments would be made while the plant is off line, and the plant should resume operations by mid-week.

"Commercial operation of the Harris plant is very important for our customers," said CP&L Chairman and President Sherwood Smith.

Commercial operation means the plant's status changes from test operation to full availability for service to customers. The Nuclear Regulatory Commission granted CP&L a full power license for the plant in January.

Graham Crusade Tops Goal

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — A total of 287,100 people flocked to Williams-Brice Stadium for the eight services during the Billy Graham Crusade, which one official called "the greatest crusade" ever held in South Carolina.

The crusade ended Saturday with its biggest single-day attendance — a crowd of 44,600.

"Our goals have been exceeded," Crusade Chairman Harry Dent said. "No one really knew what to expect. The Graham people never moved above an average of 30,000 in their estimates."

The average attendance each night was about 36,000.

The message of the crusade was inescapable Saturday as an airplane circled the stadium pulling a streamer that read, "Say Yes to Jesus."

"I don't know who he (the pilot) is, but he's up there for Jesus," Graham said as he began his last sermon.

An Eagle Aviation Inc. spokesman said the plane was one of their charter flights, but he couldn't identify the pilot.

Storm clouds that shortened Graham's sermon Friday night stayed at a safe distance Saturday, much to the relief of crusade officials.

Dent said the evangelical event that began April 25, "the greatest crusade that has ever been held in the state of South Carolina."

"Your crusades actually work," Dent said to Graham. "They deliver. They deliver people to Jesus Christ."

Almost 12,000 people came forward during the services to commit or recommit their lives to Christ.

Graham, calling his South Carolina Crusade "a wonderful week," was effusive in his praise for all who contributed to the crusade's success. But ultimately, he said, "we give Him (God) the glory, the praise and the honor."

Southern Baptists To Debate Inerrancy

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — For the first time in seven years of sometimes rancorous disagreement, the Southern Baptist Convention plans to debate the divisive issue of biblical inerrancy at a week-long convention in North Carolina.

Conservative and liberal members of the organization have been feuding over whether the Bible should be interpreted literally, and the inerrancy doctrine has threatened to split the 14.6 million-member denomination.

"This is the first time in the seven years of our debate that Southern Baptists will have an opportunity for a balanced, objective discussion of inerrancy apart from emotion," said Russell Dilday, president of Southwestern Baptist Seminary in Fort Worth, Texas.

About 1,500 people are expected to attend the conference in Ridgecrest, N.C. It is the first conference ever on the doctrine for the Nashville-based SBC.

Conservative and liberal members have been fighting for leadership of the SBC over the issue. SBC President Adrian Rogers, a Memphis minister, supports the inerrancy doctrine.

Conservative members assert the Bible should be interpreted literally, and that it makes no errors regarding history or science. The liberal members have charged conservatives with using the doctrine to purge the SBC of liberal leaders.

Beverly Hills Restaurants Say New Smoking Ban Cutting Into Business

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Some local restaurateurs complain they have lost more than half their patrons in the month since smoking was banned, but the mayor says any notion of amending the ordinance is wishful thinking.

"I think the days of public smoking are over," said Mayor Benjamin H. Stansbury.

The Beverly Hills ordinance, which took effect April 3, bans smoking in stores, at public meetings and in restaurants, except those in hotels. Smoking is permitted in restaurant bars.

"No matter which way we analyze the figures, we're seeing drops over the comparable periods in the prior years, and I think that goes for everyone," said David Zwaaf, co-owner of the Rangoon Racquet Club and a director of the 61-member Beverly Hills Restaurant Association.

The association has sued the city, claiming that the ordinance, by exempting hotels, violates the equal protection clause of the U.S. Constitution.

Most association members report declines in income of 10 percent to 30 percent, and a few have seen drops as high as 60 percent, Zwaaf said.

Malcolm Lee, a computer company executive and a smoker, said he doesn't entertain customers in Beverly Hills restaurants anymore. "I can't tell my clients they can't smoke," he said.

"We miss them," Lee said of his former haunts, but added: "We can't go back there anymore."

The mayor said the city may pay for a public relations campaign to draw patrons back to city restaurants, but that the April decline may have stemmed from the Easter and Passover holidays and income tax deadline.

"I expect that business will restore itself to normal," he said. "In fact, I think that it will be even better than it was before."

Patricio Flores, a waiter at Jucopo's pizzeria in Beverly Hills, said some customers smoke anyway. But in some establishments, customers have called the police on other patrons.

"Of course you end up having to be a mediator," Zwaaf said. "It's really ludicrous."

Police have issued one citation for unauthorized smoking since the law went into effect, said police Lt. Bill Hunt.

The department has received a few calls about violators from non-smokers, but by the time officers arrive the offenders usually have left, he said.

Hunt said the department has no specific budget for no-smoking enforcement and is not giving priority to enforcing the ordinance. "The spirit of this thing is for voluntary compliance," he said.

Many are happy to comply and happier to eat in Beverly Hills under the smoking ban.

"I hated when people's germs would come floating down and the smoke would get in your food," said Helen Stansbury, the mayor's wife. "We eat in Beverly Hills more often now. It's really nice to have it (smoke) completely gone."

Wolfgang Grahl, banquet manager at Jimmy's Restaurant, just inside the Los Angeles city limits near Beverly Hills, said business has increased in the past month. But he expects passage of a no-smoking ordinance in Los Angeles.

A proposal that may come before the Los Angeles City Council in a month would require restaurants with 50 seats or more to set aside half as a non-smoking section.

NEW LIFE — Siamese twins Yvonne and Yvette McCarther study a newspaper in English class at Compton Community College in California. The twins, joined at the head since their birth 38 years ago, have left the seclusion of their home for a new life in college. (AP Laserphoto)

Twins Joined At Head Take On College Classes

COMPTON, Calif. (AP) — Willie McCarther cried for fear of the world that would greet her 38-year-old daughters, who are joined at the head, when they ventured out of their home.

But now that her daughters are enrolled in a local community college, Mrs. McCarther has a new worry.

"They're working themselves to death," she said. "They don't want to do anything but study."

Twins Yvonne and Yvette McCarther, who say they had spent their days lying around the house, "watching TV and being worthless," don't believe they waited so long to go to college. And they're looking forward to summer school.

When the twins were born in Los Angeles, doctors said they would only be able to crawl and would probably be retarded, even though they have separate brains.

Their mother wouldn't allow surgery to separate them because of the risk that one would die, and as they became older, doctors said separation was theoretical. Because of their connected circulation, doctors say the death of one will mean death for the other.

The twins spent two early years of their life as a circus attraction because their mother, who was divorced and had five other children, needed a means of paying the $14,000 hospital bill incurred at their birth.

They were removed from the circus when their mother married factory worker Charles McCarther.

The twins walk with their necks turned to the side, and even though they cannot see each other's faces except in a mirror, they dress alike and carry the same items in identical purses.

They were educated by tutors when they were younger and received high school equivalency certificates in 1967.

Their lifestyle changed when a Compton Community College catalogue arrived in their mailbox earlier this year.

"All I know is, I just decided the time had come," said Yvonne.

"Me, too," Yvette agreed.

"Besides, I'm not getting any younger," Yvonne added.

"Me either," Yvette agreed.

They signed up for basic math and English courses and a computer class, and took a bus to school.

When they made their first appearance on campus, some students glanced at them curiously; a few people in the admissions office blinked.

Arrangements were made for round tables and two armless chairs to be moved into classrooms where the twins would sit, replacing the conventional desks.

The twins say they have been accepted from the first day, when English teacher Rhoda Casey called roll asking for Yvonne and Yvette and then earned the twins' respect when she reprimanded them for collaborating during a pop quiz and snapped, "Laaadies!"

Newsweek Says Arab Leaders Met

NEW YORK (AP) — Leaders of Syria, Iraq and Jordan met secretly early last week, and an Israeli statesman said the meeting brought the Middle East peace process "close to a breakthrough," according to a published report.

Ezer Weizman, former Israeli defense minister, said in an interview in the May 11 issue of Newsweek that Jordan's King Hussein was host for the talks with Syrian President Hafez Assad and Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein.

The Middle Eastern leaders met at a desert outpost outside Amman, Jordan, to discuss their concerns about the spread of "Khomeinist fundamentalism to the whole Arab world," said Weizman.

Other topics included Iraq's continuing war with Iran, serious troubles in the Syrian economy and maneuvers toward an international Middle East peace conference that would allow Israel to discuss peace with Jordan, Weizman said.

"Potentially, these talks could fill in the blanks in the Middle East peace puzzle," said Weizman, now a minister without portfolio. "We're now close to a breakthrough which should restart the peace process."

Weizman said he saw Iraq "as a potential partner for peaceful coexistence with Israel."

Jordanian Information Minister Mohammed Khatib, asked by telephone about the meeting, said, "We have nothing to say about all these reports."

Weizman, Israel's foremost advocate of accommodation with the Arabs, has offered to meet with Palestine Liberation Organization chief Yasir Arafat if Arafat would accept Israel's right to exist and give up terrorism.

"The PLO, despite its nastiness and terrorism is part of the Palestinian problem," Weizman said. "That's why I said I was willing to meet with Arafat."

Arafat said he would meet Weizman at the United Nations, but made no acknowledgement of the other conditions of the meeting, Newsweek said.

Israel could not bring specific proposals to a negotiating table, Weizman said.

"At this point we can only talk about principles," he said. But once principles were agreed upon, he said, "we can talk about territorial compromise, functional division of power, or a Jordanian Palestinian confederation."

Escapees Die In Montana Fire

WOLF CREEK, Mont. (AP) — Authorities pulled bodies thought to be those of two escaped killers from a burned-out trailer and called off the hunt for an accomplice, speculating she was shot to death in the wild by her companions.

"If she was buried it would be extremely hard to find her," Lewis and Clark County Sheriff Chuck O'Reilly said late Sunday.

The three had been the object of one of Montana's biggest manhunts since they ambushed eight sheriff's deputies in a four-hour gun battle April 27 at a campground along the Missouri River, authorities said.

Police searching rugged mountains about two miles away Saturday said they were fired on from the mobile home, and a blaze broke out inside without officers returning gunfire.

The bodies pulled from home Sunday were tentatively identified by Coroner M.E. Nelson as Steven Miller, 34, and John "Doc" Whitus Jr., 36, both convicted of murders in California.

The two had escaped in February 1986 from a prison in Vacaville, Calif., and were believed to have been living under assumed names near Byers, Colo. They were wanted there for questioning in a double murder late last month.

Nelson said the FBI was gathering medical and dental records to confirm their identities.

FBI negotiators tried to persuade the occupants to surrender before the fire, which was started by an explosion inside the trailer, according to O'Reilly and FBI agent Toby Harding.

Sheriff's Capt. Bill Fleiner suggested that the explosion was caused by leaking propane gas or occurred when an attempt by the fugitives to booby-trap the mobile home went awry.

Authorities said police never returned the occupants' fire and did not fire tear gas shells into the trailer. The men did not appear to have been shot, the coroner said.

O'Reilly said he spotted one automatic rifle and several other weapons in the debris, which an FBI forensics team from Washington, D.C., was examining Sunday.

O'Reilly speculated that the two men killed the woman in the surrounding mountains, where three shots were heard Wednesday. He said there would be no search for the body, which he said could be anywhere within a 50-square-mile area.

The FBI team spent all day at the fire site and divided it into squares for the painstaking process of collecting evidence.

Phobics, Fans Advise Woman How To Shed Snake Problem

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: You really were off the wall in your response to "Snake-a-phobic" in your column recently. The last thing a person with a phobia of snakes needs to hear is how to save one! I feel so sorry for that poor lady who discovered a snake in her attic. She's much braver than I. At least she still lives in the house. I couldn't sleep anywhere knowing a snake was around.

This is not just a silly notion. Apparently you have no idea what it's like to see a snake and totally freak out. I know my reactions are extreme, but I literally cannot control my hysteria. I wouldn't even go into a pet store or zoo building that had snakes. I'm afraid one might get out of its cage. If a snake appears on TV, someone else has to turn off the TV. I couldn't even bring myself to walk over to the set.

Please don't suggest professional help. I'm afraid I'd be subjected to the "conditioning" treatment and shown pictures of snakes, and I'd die of heart failure.

So please, Abby, try recognizing this condition as something other than silly nonsense. If snakes were really as afraid of me as I am of them, they would have the good sense to stay in the ground. If you use this letter, please don't print my name. This is a small town and some sadist is liable to see this letter and send me a snake for kicks. — TERRIFIED OF SNAKES, LACEY, WASH.

DEAR TERRIFIED: You are not alone. If a survey were taken, I'll wager that more people are terrified of snakes than lions, tigers and the fiercest of jungle animals. Education conquers fear. The more you learn about the crawling creatures, the less you will fear them.

DEAR ABBY: I can sympathize with "Snake-a-phobic" because we have had a similar situation in our home with black snakes in the basement instead of the attic. We had found several skins and were told by our local exterminator they are a "protected species" in our state, but were advised to try the following method to get rid of them: Sprinkle moth crystals all around the perimeter of the area and stuff all the entry holes with mothballs. Believe it or not, this seems to be working!

Maybe it will work for her as well, and give her a stress-free summer. — JUNE MARTZ, DELAWARE

DEAR JUNE: Many other readers suggested the mothballs (or moth crystals), which is fine — providing children and/or pets aren't "done in" in the bargain.

My desk is crawling with snake mail. Many suggested that if snakes had been hanging around an attic for three years, it might be wise to find out what they're living on up there. Mice and rats, no doubt. And since most snakes are harmless, but rodents carry disease, it might be wiser to let the snakes remain.

DEAR ABBY: About snakes: They make wonderful pets. You don't have to bathe them, you don't have to walk them, and they don't need a license. — NORMAN

DEAR NORMAN: And you don't have to worry about anyone stealing them. (To get Abby's booklet, "How to Be Popular: You're Never Too Young or Too Old," send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Popularity, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.)

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market headed higher today, rebounding from Friday's modest setback.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks rose 9.80 to 2,290.20 in the first half hour of trading.

Gainers outnumbered losers by about 5 to 4 in the overall tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 607 up, 478 down and 413 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 17.39 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

Analysts said the market was still confronted with big uncertainties about the outlook for the dollar and interest rates.

On the calendar for this week is a $29 billion auction of Treasury bonds and notes Tuesday through Thursday in the federal government's quarterly refunding.

Wall Streeters will be watching closely to see what kind of reception the sale receives.

Nevertheless, brokers said stocks got some help today from new evidence that the domestic economy was still turning in a decent performance. A monthly survey of purchasing managers showed a slight pickup in economic growth for April.

Auto stocks, one of last week's strongest groups thanks to a strong earnings report from Ford Motor, ran into some resistance from sellers today. Ford shares dropped 1/2 to 97 1/2; General Motors slipped 3/8 to 91 1/4, and Chrysler was unchanged at 39 1/2.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks gained .26 to 162.90. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .54 at 324.63.

On Friday the Dow Jones industrial average slipped 5.96 to 2,280.40, trimming its gain for the week to 45.03 points.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by about 5 to 4 on the NYSE, with 675 up, 857 down and 409 unchanged. Big Board volume totaled 160.11 million shares, against 183.06 million in the previous session.

Hart Denies Report

Hart said he had met the woman — since identified as Donna Rice of Miami, an actress — several months ago at a party and had talked to her on the telephone several times.

There are two listings for a Donna Rice in Miami directory assistance. The first number is unpublished, and there was no answer Sunday night at the second number.

William Dixon, Hart's campaign manager, said the allegations were "preposterous and inaccurate in their entirety. They have taken a casual acquaintance and a simple dinner with three friends and political supporters and attempted to make a story where there is none."

Hart spokesman Kevin Sweeney said Hart attended a dinner Friday night at the nearby home of friend William Broadhurst with Rice and her friend Lynn Armandt. Broadhurst said Rice and Armandt spent the night at his Capitol Hill house.

After the dinner, Dixon told The New York Times that the four walked to Hart's nearby townhouse to see renovation work there and that Broadhurst, Rice and Armandt left shortly afterward.

Hart said his wife, Lee, was in Denver for the weekend, the Herald said.

Hart has been dogged by rumors about his personal life since the 1984 presidential campaign, rumors he has denied.

Hart, in an article in Sunday's editions of The New York Times Magazine, was quoted as saying, "Follow me around. I don't care. I'm serious. If anybody wants to put a tail on me, go ahead. They'd be very bored."

And Dixon condemned the methods used by the paper.

"The system, when reduced to hiding in bushes, peeking in windows and personal harassment, has clearly run amok," he said. "Those who cover politics have some duty of self-restraint. Here the boundaries of journalistic ethics have clearly been crossed."

"Senator Hart accepts the scrutiny that comes with his leadership role in the Democratic Party and the country. But scrutiny and questions of character are one thing; character assassinations are entirely another," Dixon added.

Meriwether rejected Dixon's attacks, saying "That's not what we are engaged in."

"Acting on a tip and because the 'womanizing' issue has been raised in Hart's campaign, a Herald reporter flew to Washington on the same plane with a young woman who was later observed with Hart entering and leaving his townhouse," Meriwether said. "We reported those observations this morning responsibly and accurately along with Mr. Hart's comments."

"We observed Hart's townhouse for more than 24 hours, from a respectful distance, and we conducted ourselves in a professional manner throughout. We never engaged in the tactics suggested by Mr. Dixon," Meriwether added.

The Herald said in today's editions that its work on the story began a week ago with a call from a woman who said the candidate was having an affair with a Miami woman. The caller promised to provide information about the woman's trip to Washington, but failed to do so. A Herald reporter caught Eastern Airlines Flight 996, where he saw two women matching the description.

The reporter went directly to Hart's townhouse Friday, where he watched Hart and the woman leave his townhouse at 9:30 p.m. and return at 11:17 p.m., the Herald said.

Hart told the Herald they had returned because "she had left some things at the house," and that she left again 10 or 15 minutes later.

Meriwether said in an interview early today it "could have been possible" that the woman left the townhouse without being seen because "we had nobody there" from 3 a.m. to 5 a.m. Saturday. Today's editions added the lack of coverage of the rear entrance of Hart's house.

The paper said the reporters next saw Hart and the woman at 8:40 p.m. Saturday, and interviewed Hart on the street about 30 minutes later.

But the New York Times quotes Hart aides as saying Hart, Broadhurst, Armandt and Rice went out Saturday for a drive and were apparently seen by the reporters only when they returned.

Meanwhile, a Des Moines Register poll published Sunday said Hart had widened his lead in Iowa, where precinct caucuses on Feb. 8, 1988, are the first major tests of the campaign.

Hart had the support of 65 percent of the Democrats questioned, compared with 59 percent in February's poll. The Rev. Jesse Jackson was a distant second, moving up to 9 percent from 5 percent in February. The poll, based on telephone interviews conducted April 20-29 with Iowa adults, has a sampling error margin of 5 percentage points for the results based on the 359 Democrats in the sample.

Nancy Speaks Up

learning that Reagan had given his job to Howard Baker.

The first lady's press office would not comment on the reports about her involvement, but the president said they were "despicable fiction."

In today's speech, Mrs. Reagan said, "I see the first lady as another means to keep a president from becoming isolated. I talk to people. They tell me things. They pass along ideas. And sure, I tell my husband. And if something else is about to become a problem or fall between the cracks — I'm not above calling a staff person and asking about it."

"I'm a woman who loves her husband, and I make no apologies for looking out for his personal and political welfare," she said. "We have a genuine, sharing marriage. I go to his aid, he comes to mine. I have opinions, he has opinions. We don't always agree."

Alluding to recent, critical press accounts, she said, "There are some who think first ladies should be kept in attics, only to say our lines, pour the tea and then be put away again."

"Although I don't get involved in policy, it's silly to suggest my opinion should not carry some weight with a man I've been married to for 35 years," Mrs. Reagan added.

She said her advice to future first ladies is to "be yourself" and "to do what you feel is best for yourself." Secondly, she said, get involved with something you are interested in.

"Third, don't be afraid to look after your husband or to voice your opinions, either to him or his staff."

"In spite of a White House full of people taking care of various aspects of a president's life, you're the one who knows him best."

the state's so-called Unruh Act, that bans discrimination based on race, sex, religion or national origin.

Rotary International ousted a chapter in Duarte, Calif., in 1978 after it admitted three women.

A California appeals court ordered the Duarte club reinstated in Rotary International last year.

In upholding that ruling today, Powell said, "Even if the Unruh Act does work some slight infringement on Rotary members' right of expressive association, that infringement is justified because it serves the state's compelling interest in eliminating discrimination against women."

Justices Harry A. Blackmun and Sandra Day O'Connor did not take part in the decision.

DeCinces Takes Walk Personally

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

Doug DeCinces took it personally and made the Boston Red Sox pay for what he took as a slight.

It was the sixth inning when Red Sox Manager John McNamara decided to walk California's Wally Joyner to load the bases and bring DeCinces to the plate. DeCinces responded with a grand slam.

"I take it as a personal challenge when they walk the guy in front of me to pitch to me," DeCinces said after California's 11-4 victory on Sunday.

"And when you homer with the bases loaded, it's the ultimate."

It had been six years since DeCinces' last grand slam. He was in a Baltimore uniform then and the opponent was California.

"Gene Mauch (the California Manager) walked the batter in front of me to get to me," DeCinces laughed.

And less than a week ago, the Milwaukee Brewers intentionally walked Jack Howell to get to DeCinces. He also responded that time with a home run.

"A homer with the bases loaded doesn't come along that often," DeCinces said after he thrust his fist in the air following his four-run shot against Boston. "When you do it, you better enjoy it."

In other American League games Sunday, it was Toronto 3, Texas 1; the Chicago White Sox 4, Baltimore 3; Minnesota 4, the New York Yankees 3; Kansas City 2, Cleveland 1; Seattle 7, Milwaukee 3; and Oakland 2, Detroit 0.

DeCinces' grand slam was the big blow in the Angels' six-run sixth inning. Howell and Joyner each had two-run homers earlier in the game.

For the defending AL champion Red Sox, it was the eighth loss in their last 10 games.

"We get good pitching and we don't score runs," Boston Manager John McNamara said. "We haven't been hitting good collectively and haven't been able to put things together."

Boston has a team batting average of .235.

The Red Sox got solo homers from Dave Henderson and a three-run shot from Don Baylor.

California left-hander John Candelaria improved his record to 4-0 with the victory, while Boston's Al Nipper, 1-3, took the loss.

The Angels won two of the three games played in a rematch of the two teams that played for last season's AL championship, won by the Red Sox in seven games.

Royals 2, Indians 1
Danny Jackson pitched a four-hitter to outdue Ken Schrom and lead Kansas City over Cleveland.

Jackson, 1-4, held the Indians hitless until Carmen Castillo doubled leading off the fifth. He struck out seven and walked four.

Each team got a run before it got a hit. The Royals scored with the help of a two-base error and a balk. The Indians' run was the result of a passed ball.

Frank White's two-out double in the fourth was Kansas City's first hit off Schrom, 1-3, and Thad Bosley followed with a triple.

Athletics 2, Tigers 0
Eric Plunk held Detroit to six hits for 8 1/3 innings and Mike Gallego got his second game-winning RBI in two days as Oakland stretched its winning streak to four games.

Gallego broke up the scoreless duel between Plunk, 1-1, and the Tigers' Eric King, 2-2, on an RBI grounder in the seventh inning. Jose Canseco hit his second homer of the season in the eighth off reliever Mark Thurmond.

It was the first time this season the Tigers have been shut out and was Detroit's third straight loss.

White Sox 4, Orioles 3
Donnie Hill's eighth-inning RBI single scored the tie-breaking run lifted Chicago over Baltimore. It was the fourth straight loss for the Orioles, who have now lost 14 of their last 18 games.

Daryl Boston, Greg Walker and Ron Hassey hit solo home runs for Chicago, and Walker scored the winning run when he doubled to lead off the eighth against Mike Boddicker, 2-1, and eventually scored on Hill's single.

Cal Ripken Jr. hit his eighth homer for the Orioles, a three-run shot.

Mariners 7, Brewers 3
Mike Morgan, 2-3, won his second consecutive start since returning from the bullpen as Seattle downed Milwaukee. Morgan went the distance, allowing eight hits, striking out three and walking two.

The Mariners scored in the first against Teddy Higuera, 4-1, on RBI singles by John Christensen and Alvin Davis and added three runs in the third on RBI doubles by Davis and Rey Quinones, and a sacrifice fly by Dave Valle.

Blue Jays 3, Rangers 1
Pitching two-hit ball for 8 1/3 innings against Texas, Jim Clancy led Toronto to its sixth straight victory.

Clancy, 3-2, struck out seven and walked two. He left in the ninth with a 3-0 lead and two runners on base.

The Blue Jays swept the three-game series and sent Texas to its ninth straight loss on the road. Edwin Correa, 1-2, lost despite allowing just four hits in seven innings.

Texas Manager Bobby Valentine was ejected for the second straight game, both times for questioning ball-strike calls.

Twins 4, Yankees 3
Gary Gaetti, Dan Gladden, Tom Brunansky and Kirby Puckett hit solo home runs for Minnesota. Puckett connected on the first pitch from Tim Lincecum and sent it over the left-field fence for his seventh homer of the season, snapping a 3-3 tie. The Twins had eight homers while winning two of three games against the Yankees.

George Frazier, 3-2, the third Minnesota pitcher, got the victory and Stoddard, 0-1, took the loss in relief.

Golden State Has New Tough Task

By BILL BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

The Golden State Warriors, the second NBA team to win a five-game playoff series after trailing 2-0, now face another tough assignment in the Los Angeles Lakers.

"We've had our backs against the wall, every game has been a pressure game, and we've answered the call," said Purvis Short, making the first NBA playoff appearance of his nine-year career. "The playoff will hurt the Lakers more than us. We're ready to play."

Golden State, making its first playoff appearance since 1977, defeated Utah 118-113 at Salt Lake City Sunday to advance to the second round against the Lakers, who swept Denver in three games and haven't played since Wednesday. The Lakers, 65-17 in the regular season, play host to the Warriors on Tuesday.

The only other time an NBA team has won a best-of-five series after trailing 2-0 was in 1956 when Fort Wayne defeated St. Louis. The best-of-five format was not used for 16 seasons between 1968 and 1983.

In other games Sunday, Milwaukee beat Philadelphia 102-89 to win that first-round series 3-2, and Detroit edged Atlanta 112-111 in a second-round opener. On Saturday, Seattle beat Houston 111-106 in overtime to open that second-round series.

On Tuesday, it's Milwaukee at Boston, Detroit at Atlanta and Seattle at Houston along with Golden State at the Lakers.

Joe Barry Carroll scored 24 points and Larry Smith tipped in a rebound with 17 seconds left for Golden State, which led 87-65 in the third quarter, but had to hold off a Utah rally.

"All year we've felt like we could play better and now we're playing like we're capable," Carroll said. "You can't imagine what it feels like until you get here."

The Jazz got as close as 114-111 when Mark Eaton hit a free throw when he was fouled by Chris Mullin with 39 seconds left.

Bucks 102, 76ers 89
Milwaukee eliminated Philadelphia for the second straight season and ended Julius Erving's basketball career.

Craig Hodges keyed a 17-2 run with two 3-point baskets and a 2-pointer as the Bucks turned a 69-67 lead late in the third quarter into an 86-69 rout with 8:53 left. Hodges scored all of his 14 points in the fourth period.

"When you hit the 3-pointers, it makes them think like, 'Uh-oh, we got to come down and do something,'" Hodges said. "We were able to move the ball. The fourth quarter was the type quarter you can only dream about."

Much of the decisive spurt came with a lineup that included reserves Hodges, Paul Mokeski and Dudley Bradley. Assistant coach Del Harris was in charge of the team after Coach Don Nelson was ejected with two technicals in the second quarter.

"It was a big error on my part," Nelson said. "I thought Del Harris did a terrific job for us in the second half. I told the team at half to bail me out."

Jack Sikma led the Bucks with 18 points and 21 rebounds. John Lucas added 17 points.

Erving, who is retiring after 16 professional seasons, led the 76ers with 24 points. Philadelphia's leading scorer, Charles Barkley, had only 12 points on 5-for-16 shooting.

"Even though it was a disappointing finish, we're still leaving with a oneness," Erving said. "It's not that men can't cry, but this was not a tear-jerker situation."

Pistons 112, Hawks 111

Detroit won its second-round opener against Atlanta as the Hawks missed two shots in the final seconds after Isiah Thomas broke a 111-111 tie by hitting one of two free throws with 16 seconds left.

Thomas, who scored 30 points, gave the Pistons a 111-108 lead with a long jumper with 1:02 left, barely beating the 24-second clock. A short jumper by Antoine Carr got the Hawks within a point, and a turnover by Thomas led to a foul on Glenn Rivers, who hit one free throw to tie the score.

When Thomas was fouled on Detroit's next possession, he broke a string of 17 consecutive Pistons free throws without a miss, but made the second for the final point of the game. After a timeout, Dominique Wilkins missed a 15-footer and Randy Wittman missed a rebound attempt before time expired.

'Cagney & Lacey Is At Its Best

By HOWARD ROSENBERG
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

HOLLYWOOD — "May the angels lead you to paradise," says a Catholic priest, gently concluding his graveside eulogy.

Monday night is the night that Christine Cagney's alcoholic father dies. Charlie Cagney falls and hits his head. Too drunk to get up or call for help, he lies on the floor of his apartment and bleeds to death.

Always interesting, often heroic and occasionally brilliant, "Cagney & Lacey" rarely softens edges in portraying two female police detectives whose complex personal lives are usually more compelling than the cases on which they work. You expect good work from "Cagney & Lacey."

But Monday night's and next Monday's season-ending episodes (airing on CBS) are up there in the stratosphere, two hours of simply rip-roaring, absolutely devastating, standing-ovation television. And what acting by Sharon Gless as Christine!

"Cagney & Lacey" has never been better — or uglier.

The ever-plastered Charlie checks out Monday night. Then, next week, the distraught, compulsive, obsessive, drink-binging Christine has a crackup from which recovery will surely be agonizing. And see you next fall.

The CBS series has been building toward a screeching crescendo of father-daughter alcoholism for some time, their days of Scotch and roses gaining increased, more focused exposure since this season's arrival of supervising producers Jonathan Estrin and Shelley List.

Charlie was an easy call as being hard-core tipsy, but Christine's subtler social drinking also gradually evolved into destructive, full-blown drunkenness as she became her father's co-alcoholic.

Like detectives themselves, in fact, the show's producers have charted Christine's obsessive behavior and dependence on drink to 1983, as if her alcoholism crept up on them as it did on her.

So much for those once-routine staples of TV drama: the funny drunk, the wet bar in everyone's living room and the gratuitous, harmless guzzling of cocktails as a substitute for dialogue. The real world is nastier.

Monday night's episode opens optimistically with Cagney's partner, Mary Beth Lacey, rescuing an infant from a car moments before it explodes — the saving of life set against the subsequent squandering of it.

hope paired with hopelessness, renewal with boozy death.

Charlie's body is discovered by Christine, who frantically tries to breathe life into his lungs, pleading with him to live, just as she had begged him to stop drinking.

The story shows life's clashing colors and patterns, the contradictions and paradoxes, one drunk worrying about the drinking of another, the alternating tenderness and sharpness that give relationships texture.

Lingering aromas of booze and death surround Christine, leavened by moments of dark humor. At the cemetery, she and Mary Beth take a right turn at the Garden of Tranquility to reach the Garden of Hope, where Charlie is to be buried.

Veteran Richard Widmark Finds TV Role In 'Gathering' To His Liking

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A shotgun blast from the shack, and the tormenting white man, Beau Bouton, lies dead in the black sharecropper's yard. Beau's father, a notorious racist, and his Cajun clan are sure to come for revenge.

Set in modern, rural Louisiana, the moody and gripping two-hour movie "A Gathering of Old Men" airs Sunday, May 10, on CBS.

Beau had chased a black field-worker, Charlie, to Mathu's house, threatening to kill him. Now Beau is dead, and Mathu sits on the porch cradling a shotgun. Charlie has run away.

Candy Marshall, the white heiress to the plantation, adores Mathu, the old man who helped raise her, and vows not to let him die at the hands of a lynch mob.

She sends for Mathu's friends, telling them to bring shotguns and empty shells. All will claim to have killed

Beau. All presume Mathu did it. He remains silent.

The movie was filmed in Thibodeaux, La., and is based on the book by Ernest J. Gaines, author of "The Autobiography of Miss Jane Pittman." Charles Fuller, the Pulitzer Prize-winning playwright and screenwriter of "A Soldier's Story," adapted Gaines' book for television. The director is Volker Schlöndorff, who directed last season's "Death of a Salesman" with Dustin Hoffman.

Academy Award-winner Louis Gossett Jr. plays Mathu. Holly Hunter ("Raising Arizona") is Candy. The cast also includes Woody Strode, Joe Seneca, Papa John Creach and Will Patton.

Richard Widmark, in a rare television appearance, plays Sheriff Mapes, a low-keyed but meaty role Widmark said he was thrilled to play.

Widmark said he would rather "read a good book or sit on my duff" than do the "schlock" roles generally offered an actor of his age.

"They call 'em cameos," he said in a recent interview, "but what they are is small parts — lawyers, judges, admirals. And dull. Just dull."

"So when you get with a group like this, a script that at least I liked, and with people I liked very much, it was a great joy," he said. "I can't tell you what kind of a joy it is."

Widmark, 72, has played a variety of parts in his 70-odd films. He was the detective "Madigan" in the 1968 movie later adapted as a television series, but frequently played misfits and villains. He was nominated for an Oscar for his first screen role in 1947, as "mean little twirp" Tommy Udo in "Kiss of Death."

"Gathering" gives Widmark a chance to play "not a heavy, not a good guy."

Mapes, though racist, is law-abiding. When he confronts the old black men standing defiantly on Mathu's porch, he calls them down one by one — and clouts each who lies and claims to have killed Beau.

But they don't waver, and Mapes won't arrest them all.

"He's caught in a bind, because these guys are not really particularly his friends, but part of the community. He knows 'em all and knows 'em well, so he's just kinda caught in the middle with one of the powerful white men in the community," Widmark said. "He doesn't want to rock the boat. He's just waiting to see how things work out."

The tension builds as the afternoon sun sinks.

"Gathering" avoids simplistic, us-versus-them mentality:

Patenting Life
 The U.S. Patent Office recently decided to give scientists the right to patent new, genetically engineered life forms. The Patent Office was established in 1836. In its first 24 years, it only granted 32,000 patents. From 1860 to 1890, 450,000 patents were registered. Inventors did even better between 1890 and 1955. In those years, the government gave out more than 2.5 million patents. The U.S. registers far more patents than do most other countries.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠AK1076 ♥95 ♦AKQ7 ♣K6
 Partner opens the bidding with one heart. What do you respond?
A.—Those who just count points would jump shift in spades. Here, however, you don't know whether you want to play in spades, hearts, diamonds or no trump, so the correct way to show your strength is to respond one spade and then jump shift in diamonds at your next turn. That gives you the maximum chance of finding your best strain and level.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠AK1076 ♥95 ♦AKQ7 ♣K6
 This time partner opens the bidding with one diamond. What do you respond?
A.—Here, you know where you can play the hand—in diamonds. Therefore, you should make a jump shift, secure in the knowledge that if partner doesn't have a fit in your suit, you can retreat to his suit and still have room for further investigation.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠AKQJ83 ♥95 ♦AQ6 ♣72
 Partner opens the bidding with one heart. What do you respond?
A.—Again, you know where to play the hand: in spades, since your suit is self-sufficient. This is the time to tell partner about your good hand and strong suit by jump shifting to two spades. To clarify your holding, you intend to rebid your spades at your next turn.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠Q6 ♥A83 ♦J10762 ♣AQ6
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♦ Pass 2 ♣ Pass
 What do you bid now?
A.—Partner either has a very good suit of his own or a fit in your suit. Either way, your queen of spades is a golden asset, and we lean toward a raise to three spades. With your three key cards, you are interested in slam regardless of which hand partner holds.

Q.5—As South vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠83 ♥AQ3 ♦J10762 ♣AQ6
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♦ Pass 2 ♣ Pass
 What do you bid now?
A.—With no particular fit for partner's suit and double stoppers in the unbid suits, tell partner you have a balanced minimum with no liking for his suit. Bid two no trump.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠Q7 ♥AQ ♦J10762 ♣KJ63
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♦ Pass 2 ♣ Pass
 What do you bid now?
A.—With only one ace, we would tend to dampen partner's ardor a little. There is no point to showing your club suit, since you know partner can't have a two-suiter including clubs. The logical choice, therefore, is two no trump, which would protect your tenaces from a lead through should the hand eventually be played in no trump.

Nakasone Stresses Tax Reform, Efforts To Cut Trade Imbalance

By SAM JAMESON
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

MAUI, Hawaii — Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone will return to Tokyo Monday intent on pursuing a tax reform that already has snarled debate in Parliament for three months, he told reporters traveling with him here.

Nakasone also disclosed for the first time that he will seek enactment "by around August" of a supplementary budget, the centerpiece of a 5 trillion yen ($35.7 billion) fiscal expenditure program designed to expand domestic demand in the economy. The demand-stimulus package forms the core of promises he made to President Reagan to cut what the two leaders agreed was a "politically unsustainable" imbalance in U.S.-Japan trade.

The prime minister, however, attached priority to tax reform.

"I want very much to achieve it," said Nakasone, whose term as president of the ruling Liberal Democratic Party expires Oct. 30. The party post, by tradition, is considered a prerequisite to serving as prime minister.

Nakasone refused to say what he would do to implement the $35.7 billion program of expansion of growth at home in the likely event of debate over tax reform again snarling parliamentary deliberations.

Opposition parties have demanded that Nakasone scrap bills to implement a 5 percent value-added sales tax and have insisted that any new indirect tax be debated "for two or three years" before enactment.

Cuts in income and corporate taxes that he told Reagan he would carry out will be implemented only as part of overall tax reform, including increases in tax revenue through indirect taxes, Nakasone said. He added that he had made this point clear to administration leaders in two days of talks in Washington on Thursday and Friday.

If an outlook for a new tax structure, including increases in indirect taxes, is obtained in discussions with opposition parties, Nakasone said that tax cuts will be included in the supplementary budget. But without such an outlook, tax cuts will be excluded, he indicated.

Nakasone pointed to an agreement, hammered out with the opposition parties, by which they ended obstructionist tactics against passage of the fiscal 1987 budget in exchange for a shelving of Nakasone's controversial sales tax proposal. It specified that the present 73-27 ratio between direct and indirect taxes will be changed to increase indirect taxation. The agreement, however, failed to spell out specifics.

Tax cuts, he said, will be implemented first, before any increase in indirect taxes goes into effect — but not until a new "overall tax structure" is worked out as part of tax reforms.

"I told American leaders that tax cuts had to be part of an overall reform of the tax structure," he said.

Although expansion of growth at home creates in Japan only about one-third of the expansion of imports that growth in the U.S. economy produces, the Reagan administration has made expansion of Japan's domestic demand its No. 1 priority in negotiations with Japan aimed at curtailing the bilateral trade deficit, which last year reached $58.6 billion.

Nakasone indicated that he would seek an extension of the current session of Parliament, now scheduled to end May 27, to enact both tax reform and the $35.7 billion program of fiscal spending as soon as the upper house finalizes approval of the regular 1987 budget. His reference to enactment of the supplementary budget "by around August" indicated that the extension would be a lengthy one.

Nakasone also faces a host of challenges to carry out promises he made to Reagan to solve individual U.S.-Japan trade disputes.

Although the 68-year-old leader enumerated the most extensive series of measures designed to cut Japan's trade surplus and shoulder a greater burden in world economic affairs that any Japanese prime minister has ever made in Washington, only one of his promises spelled out details in full. That was a pledge to cut in half Japan's tariff on imports of chocolates, reducing it to 10 percent effective next April 1.

The most dramatic of Nakasone's pledges involved not Japan's trade surplus but rather Japan's burgeoning accumulation of capital.

Over the next three years, Nakasone said that Japan would recycle $20 billion to developing nations, in addition to $10 billion it pledged in December, to provide to a special fund of the World Bank for loans to indebted nations. The total of $30 billion in credits to developing nations marked a significant departure from Japan's present overseas investments, which have been concentrated almost entirely in purchases of securities in the United States and Western Europe.

But even that pledge was made with the details yet to be worked out, a Foreign Ministry official, who asked not to be named, admitted privately.

On four items that Reagan himself listed as focal points of American interest, Nakasone either made incomplete or negative responses. On a fifth Reagan request, he made no response at all.

Cat Sets Off Mine

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A mine apparently detonated by a cat exploded in the yard of the French Embassy in Moslem west Beirut today, and police said no people were injured but the cat was killed.

The mine, planted by French marine guards as a security measure, went off about noon at the walled compound in Clemenceau Street, a police spokesman said.

The spokesman, whose name was withheld in keeping with official policy, said the cat apparently detonated the mine by stepping on it.

Two French soldiers were wounded when a similar mine went off at the embassy gardens Oct. 21.

The French and other Western diplomatic missions have fled west Beirut in the past two years following a spate of attacks by Moslem extremists against foreigners and diplomats.

Lebanese staffers still provide consular services at France's west Beirut embassy, which is protected by a platoon of French marines.

French diplomats, however, are based at a new embassy in Christian east Beirut.

Pope Urges Women, Young To Avoid 'False' Freedoms

AUGSBURG, West Germany (AP) — Pope John Paul II today denounced popular ideas of women's liberation and urged women and youths not to be "led astray by false or short-sighted freedom."

On the last day of his five-day West German tour, which has been marked by strong statements and sermons against the Nazis, the pontiff also called for unity among Christian denominations.

"Today, a great deal is being said about liberation and emancipation," John Paul, speaking at the cathedral in Augsburg, 55 miles north of Munich, told nuns and young women involved in church-related work.

"But is the person who does nothing but shake off commandments and obligations really free?" he said. "Is such a person able to find his or her way out of the captivity of egoism and hate if he or she views every sort of authority with suspicion?"

"Let me ask you dear young people: don't let yourselves be led astray by false or short-sighted freedom. You are not yet free if you are merely able to do what you feel like doing or what your wallet allows you to do."

The pope said many people in West Germany appear to "believe everything can be bought," including happiness.

In remarks prepared for delivery at an ecumenical service later in the morning, the pope delivered a strong call for Christian unity and alluded to Augsburg's role as a stronghold of the Protestant Reformation.

"If we want to obey the Lord's command and be his witness, we will have to do everything we can to increase our oneness," the pope said.

Speaking of the 16th century Protestant Reformation and the religious wars that wracked Europe for decades, the pope added:

"What direction would history have taken, what missionary opportunities would have presented themselves for the New World, if it had been possible to bridge the differences that existed then and clarify the points of contention?"

During an ecumenical service Sunday evening in the Augsburg cathedral, the pope urged Christians to draw lessons from the Reformation, saying: "Wasn't it perhaps even necessary, we might ask here in Augsburg, in accordance with God's unfathomable wisdom, for religious schisms and religious wars to occur in order to lead the Church to reflect on and renew its original values?"

In remarks prepared for delivery later today during the consecration of a seminary, the pontiff said seminaries must teach not only traditional church values but also ways to promote dialogue with the rest of the world.

"So many people are without direction, objectives or hope — like sheep without a shepherd," he said in a prepared text.

The pope planned to travel later today to the Rhine River city of Spreyer to meet with Chancellor Helmut Kohl before leaving for Vatican City tonight.

In Munich on Sunday, John Paul beatified the Rev. Rupert Mayer, a German Jesuit who was jailed three times for his sermons against Nazism and eventually was sent to a concentration camp.

Aquino Says U.S. Military Aid Falls Short Of What's Needed

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — President Corazon Aquino charged today that the United States is failing to provide enough aid as her government faces a Communist rebellion and the threat of new fighting with Moslem guerrillas.

"With all the will in the world to achieve a smashing victory, we can only do as much as the means available permit us," she said without mentioning the United States by name at a flag-raising ceremony at Villamor Air Base.

"Our principal military supplier should not expect our brave soldiers and determined commanders to fight the insurgents with our teeth and our hands," she said.

The United States provided $100 million in military aid to the Philippines last year. President Reagan has proposed raising the aid to $150 million, but there is strong sentiment in Congress to reduce all military aid to balance the budget.

Mrs. Aquino said lack of mobility and inadequate tactical intelligence were hampering the military's fight against the 24,000 Communist guerrillas of the New People's Army.

"In the meantime, we shall, as I have warned, have to depend on our valor and native ingenuity to meet the national security needs of our country," she said. "Much as we need relevant, adequate and kindly assistance (from) our ally, our security needs cannot wait on their generosity."

Mrs. Aquino has asked for 130 helicopters to improve the mobility of her 250,000-member armed forces as it fights the 18-year insurgency she inherited from deposed President Ferdinand E. Marcos.

Ex-Afghan President Is Arrested

BEIJING (AP) — Former Afghan leader Babrak Karmal has been jailed in Afghanistan by the Soviet-backed government he led from 1979 to 1986, China's official news agency said.

The Xinhua News Agency on Sunday quoted unidentified diplomatic sources in Islamabad, Pakistan, as saying that Afghanistan's ruling Revolutionary Council sent Karmal to Pul-e-charkhai Jail in the Afghan capital of Kabul.

As president, Karmal, 58, headed the council during nearly seven years in power. He also was secretary-general of the ruling communist People's Democratic Party.

Xinhua did not say when or why Karmal was jailed, but it said he had been under house arrest "for some time."

The news agency said his supporters "have time and again made troubles with his successor Najibullah," who "is reported to have ordered a close watch over Karmal before." The current Afghan leader now goes by the single name of Najib.

Western diplomats based in Kabul have reported periodic demonstrations by Karmal supporters, and the ruling party's headquarters in Kabul has been the target of repeated bombing attacks.

The diplomats said that in December, the Afghan government demoted pro-Karmal Cabinet officials, and Karmal loyalists within the ruling party reportedly have been arrested.

The People's Democratic Party took power in Afghanistan in a coup in April 1978. Karmal became the top leader on Dec. 27, 1979, when his predecessor, Hafizullah Amin, was killed in a coup reportedly backed by the Soviet Union. At the same time, the Soviets sent the first of an estimated 115,000 troops now in the Central Asian country.

Many Afghans viewed Karmal as a Moscow "puppet," but Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev reportedly grew impatient when Karmal could not end an insurgency by anti-communist Moslem guerrillas.

Fighting resumed after peace talks with the rebels collapsed and a 60-day cease-fire expired Feb. 8.

Mrs. Aquino said a large guerrilla force slipped away because of government soldiers lacked mobility during an operation last month in Kalinga-Apayay province on northern Luzon island.

Defense Secretary Rafael Ileta later said that Mrs. Aquino was reminding the Americans "that they have a lot of commitments, and it's not coming as fast as she expects it."

Mrs. Aquino was promised an increase in annual aid during her visit to Washington last September. Government officials have said they will raise the issue of military aid during talks next year on the status of U.S. military bases here.

Inouye Says Reagan Knew About Contra Fund Drives

By TIM AHERN

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the Senate committee investigating the Iran-Contra affair says President Reagan knew money was being raised to provide arms to Nicaraguan rebels.

Sen. Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, said Sunday, "I think the president knew much more than what the White House has intimated."

Inouye was interviewed on NBC-TV's "Meet the Press" as a committee he chairs, along with a companion panel in the House, begins joint hearings Tuesday into the secret sales of U.S. arms to Iran and the diversion of payments to the Contras fighting the Nicaraguan government.

A major question of the long hearings, Inouye said, will be who knew what about the private fund-raising effort to get money and arms to the Contras after Congress cut off aid to the rebels.

Inouye said Reagan "was aware that monies were being raised to provide arms for the Contras."

That was done, Inouye noted, "at a time when the Congress of the United States had expressed its intention that funds should not be spent to purchase arms for the Contras."

Sen. Warren Rudman, R-N.H., vice chairman of the Inouye panel, said on the NBC program, "There's a difference between public and private funds ... and that's, of course, the one issue that we have yet to hone in on."

Another question is whether Reagan knew about the diversion of money from the Iran arms sales to the Contra cause.

Inouye said he has found no evidence "whatsoever" that the president knew about the diversion of that money, considered to be public funds.

In other developments:

—Lewis Tamba, former U.S. ambassador to Costa Rica, was quoted Sunday in The New York Times as saying that during the time U.S. aid to the Contras was legally banned, Tamba was ordered by senior U.S. officials to help the rebels. He identified those officials as Lt. Col. Oliver North, who had since been fired from the president's National Security Council, Assistant Secretary of State Elliott Abrams and Alan Fiers, who was head of the CIA's Central American Task Force.

—Newsweek magazine reported this week that friends of retired Air Force Maj. Gen. Richard Secord will testify that less than $1 million from the arms sales was diverted to the Contras.

The magazine also released a new poll showing 49 percent of Americans surveyed believe the congressional hearings will simply "prolong the affair." The telephone poll of 615 people on April 29-30 also showed 62 percent were convinced that once all the evidence has been presented, Reagan will prove to have been more deeply involved in the affair than he had publicly acknowledged, up from 59 percent in a poll conducted shortly after the release of the Tower commission report.

—The Chicago Tribune reported Sunday that according to former National Security Adviser Robert C. McFarlane, within 30 days of Reagan's May 1984 decision to sell 400 Stinger anti-aircraft missiles to Saudi Arabia, $1 million a month began flowing from the Saudis into a secret bank account set up for the benefit of the Contras.

Congressional investigators believe the Saudis contributed $30 million to $40 million to the Contra cause before the arms sales were disclosed last November.

—Former National Security Adviser John M. Poindexter began meeting over the weekend with congressional investigators, but Rudman and Inouye said they hadn't yet been told what he had said.

Last week, Carl R. "Spitz" Channell, head of a conservative fund-raising foundation set up to raise money for the Contras, pleaded guilty to tax fraud conspiracy.

Reagan has said he met with donors to Channell's group, but said he believed the organization only wanted the money for pro-Contra television ads.

Inouye, asked if he thinks Reagan knew the Channell money was going to buy more than ads, said: "Well, I think the hearings will have to decide that. I think the president knew much more than what the White House has intimated."

The president on Sunday repeated to reporters that he was aware of the private aid network, "but there was nothing in the nature of a solicitation by the administration, to my knowledge, of anyone, to do that."

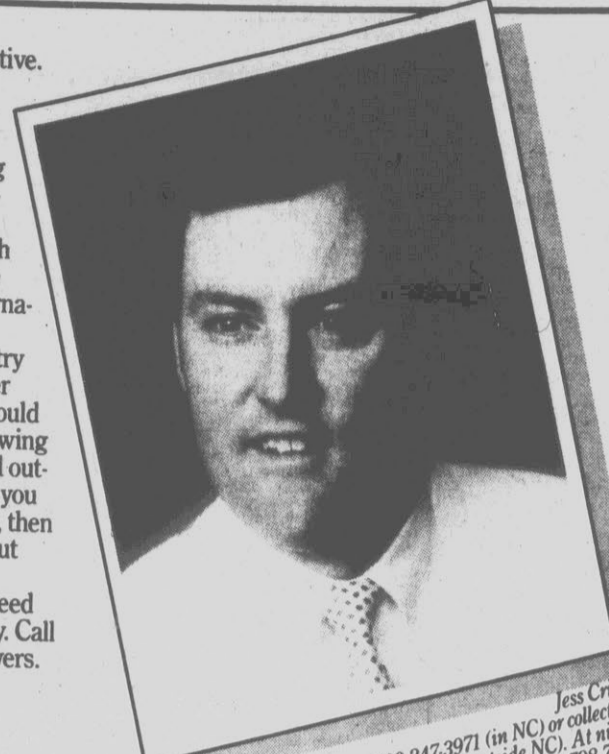

"I did know the people I met with, to thank, because they had raised money to put commercials on television to urge the Congress to support the Contras," Reagan said before a speech on Ellis Island in New York.

The president said he listened to Inouye's remarks on television. "As the program went on, I listened to him very carefully and made it plain what he was actually saying that, no, I did not have knowledge of things of that kind," Reagan said. "What he had said in the first place was that I was not off someplace on an island, not paying any attention."

The Last Thing This Man Is Going To Do Is Sell You A Birdhouse.

He's a Perdue housing representative. And he's as concerned about your operation as you are. He's not going to waltz in and give you a lot of fast talk or high pressure. The first thing he's going to do is answer your questions, clearly and simply, without a runaround. Answers about cost, cash flow, building specifications, service contracts, legal work, financing alternatives, construction time, and almost anything else connected with a poultry operation. Then he'll help you go over your operation to see what poultry could realistically add. He'll review the growing opportunities Perdue has to offer and outline all your options. He'll make sure you have all the answers and all the facts, then let you decide if you want to talk about investing in a Perdue House.

This man has the know-how you need when you need to know about poultry. Call him, day or night, and get some answers.

Hearings Set Tuesday

WASHINGTON (AP) — The stars of the Iran-Contra hearings beginning Tuesday will be the witnesses who break their silence and fill in the blanks of the complex story about secret deals and clandestine operations.

But the featured players will be the interrogators: 26 legislators, nearly all lawyers, serving on the special House and Senate committees probing the affair, along with the counsels to the panels.

The hearings into the secret U.S. sale of arms to Iran and diversion of payments to the Nicaraguan Contras are being conducted jointly by the two panels. They will begin in the Caucus Room of the Senate Russell Office Building, site of the 1973 Watergate hearings on abuses of power during the Nixon administration.

The second week of the Iran-Contra hearings will convene across Capitol Hill in the hearing room of the House Judiciary Committee, where articles of impeachment were voted against Nixon in 1974.

Unlike the Senate's freewheeling Watergate hearings during which the legislators were often surprised by the information they gathered in public, the Iran-Contra hearings will be carefully orchestrated.

Witnesses will be interviewed extensively in private before they are questioned publicly, virtually assuring that the committee members will not be caught off guard.

There also will be a structured procedure for the public questioning of the witnesses.

The initial questions will be asked by the counsels for each committee. Then one Democrat and one Republican from each committee — a total of four legislators — will continue the questioning.
