Second Criminal Charge Filed In Arms Deal

WASHINGTON (AP) — Independent counsel Lawrence Walsh filed his second criminal case in the Iran-Contra affair today as congressional investigators shifted the focus of nationally televised hearings from efforts to arm the Nicaraguan rebels to the Reagan administration's arms sales to Iran.

Walsh filed a conspiracy charge against public relations executive Richard R. Miller, and a hearing was expected to be held later in the day in U.S. District Court.

The filing of a criminal information indicated that Miller, who worked as a consultant for Carl Channell's National Endowment for the Preservation of Liberty, had entered into a plea agreement with independent counsel Lawrence E. Walsh. Channell pleaded guilty last week to a similar charge brought by Walsh, who is investigating the entire Iran-Contra affair.

The criminal charge was filed shortly before retired Air Force Maj. Gen. Richard V. Secord resumed his testimony before the joint House-Senate committees investigating the affair.

Under questioning from House counsel John Nields, Secord began detailing the 1985 sale of Israeli missiles to Iran, a transaction that he said several U.S. officials were aware of.

Secord spent more than three hours testifying on Tuesday, the first day of hearings, detailing the extent to which Reagan administration officials assisted his efforts to supply Contra rebels at a time when such aid was banned by Congress.

One prominent official whom Secord named as a supporter of his efforts, then-CIA Director William J. Casey, died today of pneumonia which has devcloped during his recovery from surgery for a brain tumor. The surgery had forced him to resign from the CIA earlier this year, and investigators had doubted that he would able to be questioned during these joint hearings.

Miller worked closely with Channell to raise funds for Contras, and in pleading guilty last week in federal court, Channell named the public relations executive and former National Security Council aide Lt. Col. Oliver North as people he conspired with.

Channell pleaded guilty to conspiracy to defraud the government of taxes on more than $2 million raised by the endowment to arm the Nicaraguan rebels. Channell admitted that he falsely represented to the Internal Revenue Service that his endowment was a tax-exempt organization raising money for charitable purposes.

Money for arming Nicaraguan rebels is not a tax-deductible contribution. The information filed against Miller charged that he met with Channell and a series of contributors who gave more than $2 million in stocks and cash to the endowment.

North is expected to be called as a witness in the congressional hearings, but not until June.

Woman Receives Cochlear Implant

By SALLIE WHELAN
PCMH Medical Writer

Geraldine Allcox can hear. After 10 years of living in silence and nearly a lifetime of being hearing-impaired, she's hearing better all the time.

A 52-year-old grandmother from Kinston, Mrs. Allcox can hear because of a cochlear implant she received Feb. 19 at Pitt County Memorial Hospital. She is among the first people in the state to have this surgery.

Her implant surgery, the first at Pitt Memorial, was performed by Dr. William S. Bost Jr., a clinical associate professor of surgery and otorhinolaryngology (ear, nose and throat) at the East Carolina University School of Medicine and a partner in Pitt Otorhinolaryngologists Inc. of Greenville.

Mrs. Allcox declares it has changed her life. "I had no idea there were so many sounds that I had been missing," she said. "It's just wonderful what I can hear now. There's just no way to describe it."

Mrs. Allcox had worn a hearing aid since she was 13 years old until 10 years ago, when she lost all hearing.

With the help of her husband, Herman Allcox, and her proficiency at lip reading, she managed in a hearing society. "I missed a lot more than I heard, but it was better than nothing," she said.

The sounds Mrs. Allcox hears now are sounds most people take for granted. Paper rustling, water running, a light switch being flipped on or off are sounds that astonish her each time she hears them. The most precious sounds she hears, she says, are the voices of her six grandchildren, five of whom were born after she became deaf.

The cochlear implant is an FDA-approved device that allows some previously deaf people to hear sound, Bost explained. It does so by putting small amounts of electrical current near the hearing nerve. The brain interprets this electric current as sound.

In normal hearing, sound waves enter the ear canal, strike the eardrum and set off vibrations along the tiny bones of the middle ear to the cochlea, a small snail-shaped organ, also called the inner ear. Inside the fluid-filled cochlea, hair cells convert these vibrations into electrochemical impulses that travel the auditory nerve to the brain.

When hair cells are damaged or destroyed by illness or injury, an essential link in the chain is broken.

Occupancy Tax Wins Approval

RALEIGH — The N.C. General Assembly has passed Pitt County's 3 percent motel and hotel occupancy tax which will become effective July 1.

The revenue from the tax, estimated at $200,000 a year, will be used to promote travel, tourism and conventions.

The occupancy tax ordinance establishes an 11-member Pitt-Greenville Convention and Visitors Authority to be governed by a board of directors consisting of five appointments from both Greenville and Pitt County and one from the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce.

The city and county will each appoint two owners or operators of hotels, motels and other taxable accommodations and an individual who is directly involved in a tourist or convention-related business but does own or operate a hotel or motel, according to the ordinance.

The City Council will appoint two residents of Greenville, while the County Commissioners will appoint two residents of Pitt County but not of Greenville.

The authority will present both the city and the county an audit report each year and provide a quarterly financial report, and the annual budget of the authority will be pre-

'I May Bend, But I Don't Break'

Hart Admits Mistake, But Denies Immorality

By EVANS WITT
AP Political Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Saying "I may bend, but I don't break," Gary Hart is fighting to get his presidential campaign back on track even as he concedes the controversy about his weekend activities with a Miami woman is not over.

The former Colorado senator, in a speech Tuesday before the nation's newspaper publishers, denounced as "false and misleading" a Miami Herald report that a young woman spent Friday night with him at his Capitol Hill home.

"Did I make a mistake by putting myself in circumstances that could be misconstrued? Of course I did. That goes without saying," the Democrat said. "Did I do anything immoral? I absolutely did not."

Hart's afternoon speech at the annual meeting of the American Newspaper Publishers Association had been scheduled before the Herald story was published Sunday and was his first public appearance since then.

On Tuesday night, Hart began rallying his supporters with a speech at a fund-raiser in which he vowed to continue fighting through "these hard days."

"Anyone who wants to test my character is in for a surprise: I may bend, but I don't break," Hart told an enthusiastic crowd. "I can be bruised and I can be battered but I will come back because this fight must go on.

"These are hard days, but we will prevail for one single reason: the truth will prevail. ... Fight on and march on." Hart, whose campaign has been dogged by rumors of womanizing, added, "I expect, since I am realistic, that this race will continue to focus on me and my character. And as uncomfortable as I have always been with the personal side of politics, I now welcome that."

"To me, character is what is left after all the charges and innuendoes, sensationalism and unfairness have been thrown and disappeared. Character is really about saying no to PACs even when you have a debt to pay. It's about standing up to Gramm-Rudman and Reaganomics and unfair tax cuts, MX missiles and covert wars. It's really about doing what's right even when its unpopular."

Despite the Herald report, an ABC News poll released Tuesday found that Hart continued to hold a large lead over the rest of the Democratic field and would fare well against top Republicans in the race for president.

Hart's support fell from 46 percent on March 9 to 36 percent on Monday night, when the telephone poll of 529 Americans was taken, ABC said. Of those polled, 29 percent said the Herald report made them less likely

Astronaut's Widow Files $1 Billion Suit

WASHINGTON (AP) — Alleging a "conspiracy of silence and deceit," in the building of space shuttle rocket boosters, the widow of Challenger pilot Michael J. Smith filed a $1.5 billion lawsuit today that demands Morton Thiokol Inc., be barred from further work on the shuttle program.

The suit, filed in federal district court in Orlando, Fla., asks $500 million in actual damages from three defendants and $1 billion in punitive damages from Morton Thiokol for "reckless disregard for human life."

Smith was one of seven crew members who died when the space shuttle Challenger exploded 73 seconds after leaving the launch pad on Jan., 28, 1986. His widow, Jane Smith, earlier had filed a $15.1 million claim against the National Aeronautics and Space Administration and had negotiated with Morton Thiokol. These negotiations obviously fell through.

A leak at a joint on the shuttle's right booster rocket was blamed for the tragedy by a presidential commission. The leak allowed hot gases to sear the shuttle's huge external tank, which had been filled with a half million gallons of fuel at the time of liftoff.

The complaint, filed by William F. Maready of Winston-Salem, N.C.,

Legislators Holding Pitt Election Plan For Study

By DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer

RALEIGH — Pitt County's proposed "six-three" method of election is stuck in a government study panel while Pitt County legislators debate the plan which drew opposition from local black leadership.

"The method of election was introduced in the House and a companion bill was introduced in the Senate," Rep. Ed Warren, D-Pitt, said Tuesday night at a Pitt County Legislative Day at the Raleigh Marriott. "The bills are in the Local Government II committees in both bodies."

The "six-three" plan provides for six members of the commission elected from districts and three at-large representatives voted on countywide. Commissioners worked for more than a year on changing the method of electing members to the board to give minorities an equal opportunity to be represented.

The bills are expected to remain in committee until the Pitt County legislative delegation takes a position on the method of election, according to Warren.

"It will stay there until our delegation decides what to do," he said. "We've heard from the County Commissioners, and we've heard from minorities, so we're going to make a decision as a delegation in the next few days. It will probably be the first of the week. We'll say at that point what we're going to do."

Warren said members of the delegation have been meeting with minority groups, which opposed any at-large seats.

"We had a very good meeting. We heard them out — the pros and cons both ways," he said. "We will take all these things into consideration and make a decsion. We can't pass it on to

Pitt Reception Impresses Solons

By DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer

RALEIGH — Pitt County community and business leaders are making great strides in strengthening the county's position among North Carolina's lawmakers, according to some state and local officials.

"I've heard over and over from legislators, 'you people must have a community that's really on fire down there to come and do this,'" Sen. Tom Taft, D-Pitt, said Tuesday night at a Pitt County Legislative Day Reception at the Raleigh Marriott.

"The real importance is that it says to the Legislature that our community is one that is exceptional and needs to be dealt with," Taft said of the reception. "It really make an impression."

The Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce hosted the event for members of the General Assembly, N.C. Court of Appeals, Council of State, N.C. Supreme Court, and the N.C. Board of Transportation.

The reception, which was attended by about 500 guests, is designed for Pitt County leaders to meet with lawmakers and state officials to disucuss legislation directly affecting eastern North Carolina, according to Bill Clark, chairman of the board of directors of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce.

"It gives the poeple of Pitt County an opportunity to thank all the people up here in the General Assembly for what they've done for us," Clark said.

"It gives us, hopefully, a little bit of an edge with these people when they see a bill come through or they see something about eastern North Carolina, and they'll think maybe a little more highly of us. Yet, even if we didn't get that, it's always good to say thank you."

Rep. Ed Warren, D-Pitt, said the reception, which is held every other year, has a long-term impact.

"This has been a great step forward for Pitt County. I think you'll see more things come to our county and more progress, more state dollars because of what we're doing tonight," Warren said. "I think what

Larceny Charges

Two people were arrested on larceny charges by Greenville police Tuesday.

Sgt. T.V. Woolard said Jonathan Randolph Ross, 20, of Route 11, Greenville, was charged with larceny in connection with the theft of money from the Holiday Inn at 702 S. Memorial Drive in an incident reported to police on April 15.

Officer Alexander Batts said Tammy Rena Wade, 17, of Route 2, Washtonburg, was arrested on a larceny charge in connection with a 6:48 p.m. incident at D.A. Kelly's at Carolina East Mall.

Break-In Arrest

Bobby Ray Williams, 31, of 1105 Melody Lane was arrested by Greenville police on a breaking, entering and larceny charge Monday.

Detective C.E. Weatherington said Williams was charged in connection with a Nov. 27, 1986, incident at Greenville Villa Nursing Home where two television sets were taken.

Tuesday Thefts

Investigators said seven thefts were reported to Greenville police Tuesday.

Officer J.A. Felton said a bicycle was taken from 125 Avery St. in an incident reported at 6 a.m., while Officer R.J. Brewington said a 1974 model car was taken from the parking lot at The Plaza in an incident reported at 12:15 p.m.

Officer Darryl Bazemore said a bicycle was taken from 401 S. Meade St. in an incident reported at 12:54 p.m., while Officer W.C. Widener said a radio-tape player valued at $224 was taken from a vehicle parked at F44 Langston Park Apartments in an incident reported at 1:02 p.m.

Officer D.W. Nichols said two speakers were taken from a car parked at The Plaza — and later returned to the owner — in an incident reported at 2:30 p.m., while Officer M.A. Jordan said a nursing bag and wallet were taken from the south patient tower's first floor nursing area at Pitt County Memorial Hospital in an incident reported at 4:45 p.m.

Jordan said a wallet was taken from a car parked on East Fifth Street in an incident reported at 11:17 p.m.

Drug Counts

Greenville police arrested Donnie Lee Wilson, 30, of Ayden on drug charges late Tuesday night.

Officer K.M. Smeltzer said Wilson was charged with possession of marijuana, possession of drug paraphernalia and driving while impaired after the vehicle he was driving was stopped at the intersection of Fifth and Latham streets about 11:50 p.m.

Recording Artist

Christian recording artist Bill Brock will sing and speak at Covenant Community Church on U.S. 264 13 miles east of Greenville at 7:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday.

Brock, a member of the staff of the Christian Broadcasting Network in Tidewater Virginia, is the founder of Housetop Records and its two music publishing companies. He has been in the music industry for 25 years as a writer, recording artist, manager, and record producer. He has written country and gospel hit songs and has performed on the Grand Ole Opry.

Farmville Board Exempts Multifamily Housing Units

FARMVILLE — Farmville commissioners voted Tuesday night to establish multifamily housing as a special exception to town zoning ordinances and to have requests heard by the Board of adjustments.

The vote was 4-1, with Moses Moye voting against the measure.

Board of Adjustment Chairman David Reeves appealed to the board not to take the action. He said that he believes that making multifamily a special exception paints the town of Farmville as a multifamily excluder and the Board of Commissioners as "being betwixt and between, very uncomfortable with politically uninviting situations."

He said referring multifamily approval or disapproval decisions to the Board of Adjustment will not work. "The Board of Adjustment is a quasi-judicial body that acts on fact, not on political considerations. We won't handle the questions brought to us on a political basis," he promised.

He also said he believes that the zoning ordinances that now exist are workable and that the planning board should be obliged to continue its function as the body which deals with multifamily building applications.

He suggested that the board leave the land use plan it now has in place. Board members can change any zoning they do not agree with, he said, perhaps to create one particular section of town that is the only one in which multifamily dwellings are allowed. He also suggested that the board "meet the challenge of education of the public" about what areas are zoned how and what is allowed in each zoning classification.

The measure adopted will be in effect until April 30, 1988, the board indicated.

The town code was amended to change the time for the planning board meeting from the last to the third Tuesday of each month. This action will allow an additional week between the planning board meeting and the commissioners' first-Tuesday meeting. This time can be used by the planning and finance committee of the board to review planning board action, it was pointed out.

Following affirmative comment during a public hearing, the board voted to change the zoning of an area behind the Collins and Aikman and A.C. Monk manufacturing facilities from heavy industrial to light industrial. The consensus among commissioners was that perhaps consideration should be given to applying light industrial zoning to all industrial sites in town.

The zoning ordinance was amended to make all parking places in town be 10 feet wide and 20 feet deep.

Approval was given for the purchase of five capacitors from Eastern Electric for $4,425. These capacitors will help alleviate load loss and improve the town's electric system, Bill Modlin, utilities director, said.

Mayor Edna Earle Baker read a letter from Julian Gaynor, mayor of Fountain, who said that "after 50 years of bad water, Fountain residents are ecstatic" about the quality of water they are being supplied by Farmville.

Craggy Prison

RALEIGH (AP) — The Council of State Tuesday approved a 309-acre site in Buncombe County for construction of a new Craggy Prison, despite opposition from residents who feared the prison would depress their property values.

The council voted to approve the purchase of the land at a cost of $1.3 million.

State officials said construction of the new 300-bed medium prison and a 100-bed minimum-security work-release center could be under way within a month.

MISREPRESENTATIONS ALLEGED

Attorney General Lacy H. Thornburg said that a consent judgment filed recently against Red Hawk Ranch is the final step in a state consumer protection lawsuit alleging misrepresentations in statewide mailings soliciting memberships in the Richmond County campground.

Thornburg said, "This judgment ought to tell sellers of resort properties that our state laws are to be taken seriously. When they promise gifts or prizes to North Carolinians, they should mean what they say."

The July 1986 lawsuit alleged, among other violations of state law, that Red Hawk's promotional mailings promising a "$1,000 U.S. Government Secured Bond" were deceptive because they had nothing to do with the U.S. Treasury or any other governmental agency.

Thornburg said marketing firms preparing mailings like these need to understand that they, too, will be prosecuted.

In addition to prohibiting Red Hawk Ranch from using promotional mailings promising a "bond" appearing to be backed by the federal government, the court order also:

•Prohibits the use of documents simulating or resembling a check.

•Requires clear and accurate disclosure of conditions for claiming any gifts or prizes.

•Requires full disclosure of the actual retail price and odds of receiving gifts or prizes.

Under provisions in the final judgment, Thornburg's consumer protection agency will handle requests for contract cancellations and refunds for consumers who were misled into buying campground memberships in response to Red Hawk's "1,000 Bond" mailing.

The deadline for these requests being sent to Thornburg's office is June 30. The address is Consumer Protection, N.C. Attorney General's Office, P.O. Box 629, Raleigh, N.C. 27602.

Spymaster William Casey Dies Of Pneumonia At 74

GLEN COVE, N.Y. (AP) — William J. Casey, the former wartime spymaster who as CIA director restored the agency's vigor following a period of eroding morale and sharp criticism of its activities worldwide, died today at a hospital here. He was 74.

Casey died at 1:15 a.m., said his son-in-law, Owen T. Smith.

"The immediate cause of death was aspirational pneumonia as a result of a central nervous system lymphoma," said spokesman Dennis Connors. Casey's cancerous brain tumor, discovered late last year, was a contributing factor.

Casey had resigned as director of the CIA on Feb. 2, seven weeks after he was struck by brain seizures and rushed to the hospital.

He underwent surgery Dec. 18 at Georgetown University Hospital for removal of the tumor, which proved to be malignant.

He was released from the hospital Feb. 28, but was readmitted for re-evaluation March 13 and discharged again March 28. Casey, who had a home near here, was hospitalized at Glen Cove Community Hospital on April 25 for aspiration pneumonia, or fluid in the lungs.

Smith said funeral arrangements would be announced later today.

White House spokesman Ben Jarratt said President Reagan had been informed of Casey's death. A statement was being prepared.

Said the CIA, "We have benefitted from his leadership and we shall miss him."

Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., former vice chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee, who often clashed with Casey, said, "The news was expected, but in a way it really is the passing of an era. I think Bill Casey was sort of a larger-than-life director of the CIA and I think he's going to be remembered that way."

He said Casey probably knew more than anyone about the Iran-Contra affair, with the possible exception of fired White House aide Oliver North.

"And of course that we'll never know, because he didn't really tell us much about it before he died," said Leahy.

In his last public appearances, Casey testified at length on Capitol Hill about the CIA's role in arms shipments to Iran. He conceded that the intelligence agency became involved in the secret dealings with Iran in the summer and fall of 1985, before Reagan issued formal authorization.

Last month, a Senate investigating committee was considering having its own doctors examine Casey to see if he were fit enough to testify before panels investigating the Iran-Contra affair, according to Sen. Howell Heflin, D-Ala.

Reagan named Casey, a successful tax attorney, to head the CIA in 1981 after Casey helped manage his campaign for president. Earlier, Casey had served as chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission and in other posts during the Nixon and Ford administrations.

During his tenure as director, Casey's action-oriented leadership and drive to rebuild the agency was matched by his zest for controversy and frequent outspoken sparring with congressional committees striving to monitor activities of the U.S. intelligence establishment.

There were controversies over his personal finances, as well as over covert operations including the mining of Nicaragua's harbors and preparation of a manual for Nicaraguan rebels counseling them in the "selective use of violence" to "neutralize" civilian officials.

Expansion Needed

The Pitt County Commissioners should be lauded for their steps to expand courthouse offices by purchasing a one-block piece of property in downtown Greenville.

That approach indicates a move toward centralization of governmental offices — a sound approach for accessible services and smooth operation of county business.

The move could mean a great deal to the future of downtown Greenville, suffering from a nearly-defunct retail business and an otherwise dwindling economy. It could also mean a great deal to the citizens the offices serve. Expanding court-related offices across the street instead of relocating them inconveniently two miles away from the courthouse — where the rest of the couty offices are — is a logical step.

While the commissioners are taking this action, they might consider developing a long-term plan for growth of county offices. Now, with this expansion in the works, would be an opportune time for the board to devise a comprehensive plan for the future needs of all county offices. Greenville, because of its location in the middle of the county, would be a good location for such a governmental center.

Commissioners should pursue the purchase of this property without regard to the negative history surrounding the project. The fact that the county could have purchased the land 20 years ago at a much lower price is irrelevant and should be forgotten. The important issues are the need for space court offices currently have and the convenient location the purchase would afford the county for these offices.

In addition to giving the court necessary elbow room, the purchase would provide around $140,000 a year in revenue for the county in rent for office space not currently needed. As county services further expand, this rented space could be converted for county use.

The commissioners should continue with the purchase of this important property. They should also develop a strong plan for future governmental office needs that will provide the citizens served by the offices a central, convenient location.

Belt Use Proper

A bill to repeal the state mandatory seat belt law has received proper treatment at the hands of the House Highway Safety Committee. The bill was killed, and that move is appropriate.

Sponsors of the bill protested that it had not received a full hearing. Nevertheless members of the committee were convinced that mandatory use of seat belts deserves to be continued.

We agree. There is nothing new about the seat belt use requirement. It has been discussed both statewide and nationally for years. The conclusion is clear that use of auto seat belts saves lives in collisions.

Opponents seem to want to argue that use of seat belts is an infringement of individual rights. That argument can be extended the other way to say that we all have a right to get out on the highways without any restrictions. We know, of course, that won't work. There have to be legal restrictions on driving to protect the drivers and their passengers. Use of seat belts fits in reasonably with the other safety laws designed to protect us all on the streets and highways.

Installation of seat belts is required on American cars. It logically follows that their use be required by law.

Today's Thought

When state lawmakers talk about funding for a pet project, it's tough to get them to either budget or budge on it.

Hart Admits He Made The Mess

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gary Hart complained angrily about the news story that so damaged his presidential prospects, but even he had to concede that the mess he finds himself in was of his own making.

And as he campaigns in New Hampshire today, the question confronting him is political survival.

The 50-year-old former Colorado senator may be determined to talk about the issues, but through his own actions he has focused attention on his character.

Now he must persuade people to shift their attention from sex to budget deficits, trade and arms control. Whether he succeeds will determine the future of his candidacy.

After a day in which he tried to confront the questions about his personal life, a missing ingredient was Lee Hart, the candidate's wife.

According to aides, Mrs. Hart was in Colorado suffering from a sinus infection and unable to travel to be with her husband in New York on Tuesday when he addressed the American Newspaper Publishers Association.

"For 28 years I have been married to my wife Lee, a woman with an inexhaustible reservoir of affection, caring and patience," Hart told the publishers. "We've survived separations, and today our marriage is stronger."

Jeanne Shaheen, an architect of Hart's stunning upset of Walter F. Mondale in the 1984 New Hampshire primary, questioned the explanation for Mrs. Hart's absence.

"I'm sure it has to do with her working out how she was going to deal with the whole issue," said Mrs. Shaheen, who is not involved in any presidential campaign this year.

"The whole womanizing issue has been around for a while," she added.

That is what raises the question about Hart's judgment in becoming involved in an incident so easily seen as another case of womanizing.

"Did I make a mistake by putting myself in circumstances that could be misconstrued?" Hart told the publishers. "Of course I did. That goes without saying. Did I do anything immoral? I absolutely did not."

Did the former Colorado senator, the front-runner for the Democratic presidential nomination, have a right to expect the news media to ignore a tip that he was having an extramarital liaison with a 29-year-old model from Miami?

Did he have a right to feel his relationship with Donna Rice, if innocent, should be ignored?

Could he repeal the laws of human nature and expect people to concentrate on questions of military reform and the economy and ignore speculation about his personal life?

"Ideas, issues and policies will always be less sensational than rumors and speculation," he told the publishers. "But in the final analysis, average Americans will always be more concerned about their families and their nation's future than those rumors."

Hart said he was willing to accept the scrutiny but he complained that the account published Sunday by the Miami Herald was "a misleading and false story that hurt my family and other innocent people and reflected badly on my character."

The newspaper story said Hart and Rice spent most of the weekend together in Washington while the candidate's wife was in Colorado.

Hart Incident Shows Rules Changing

NEW YORK — If there had been any doubts that the gentlemanly rules of covering political figures have been changing in recent years, they have been dispelled by the bitter confrontation between presidential candidate Gary Hart and the Miami Herald.

It is clear now that there is no rock under which the press will not look and no closet it will not open if it will shed some light on a candidate's personal life — all in the name of informing the public. It is not a situation that is relished by all journalists — in fact, a number of them find it repugnant — but they appear resigned to it even as they are troubled by it.

For the most part, they do not fault the Herald for going with its story about Hart, but they have some reservations about the surveillance the paper employed and the accuracy of the story itself, which is still under challenge.

They cite the growing emphasis on "character" as an issue in the presidential race; Hart's behavior as reflecting on his judgment and integrity, whether the story is true or not; and the reliance of the candidates themselves on image-shaping television commercials in which the wholesomeness of their family lives is portrayed as something akin to freshly baked bread.

"They've promoted themselves with their wives and children and dogs," said Robert Shogan, national political writer for the Los Angeles Times. "Therefore, it becomes part of the public debate."

The juxtaposition of the real and the phony, and the not infrequent blurring of the two, is certainly a part of the reason the press in recent years is not as ready as it used to be to wink and look the other way. Reporters cite the Chappaquiddick incident in which a young woman died; the public disgrace of Wilbur Mills, then running a powerful congressional committee; and the "womanizing" of John F. Kennedy as instances that began to break down the taboos against digging into private lives.

"I think the rules have changed whether we like it or not," said Michael J. O'Neill, former editor of the New York Daily News, who, when he was covering Washington 25 years ago, said he did not report everything he knew about leading politicians. He now thinks that was a mistake. "A lot of us in my generation were too tolerant of aberrations," he said. "It would have been better if we had published."

At the same time, there is concern in the press that it may now be going too far; the problem is they see no way to put the brakes on. Increased competition between news organizations and the growing number of publications that feed on gossip and sensationalism are all factors contributing to the change, they say.

John Johnson, an anchor for WABC-TV, for example, says that he is troubled by the possibility that sleaziness for the sake of ratings is a factor in TV's coverage of the Hart story. But at the same time his station is pursuing it as intensely as the next one.

Sometimes the journalists sound like individuals caught up in a national mood of changing values and mores over which they have no control — even as they themselves are catalysts of that change.

Public Forum

To the editor:

The Pitt County School Board accepted a budget Monday evening which was not based on priority of need. Our school board must be held accountable for this budget.

Does the Capital Outlay Analysis Report provide or prioritize the exact changes that occur in each school? Can the school board members be aware of all the needs in our schools from this report? Have school board members had adequate time to study this budget? Are the monies appropriated suitable after the recent reorganization of some schools? Can Stokes survive without capital outlay funds? Are schools which have large minority populations receiving adequate funds? All the answers are no!

Isn't it puzzling that H.B. Sugg, which showed site, design and mechanical deficiencies and was rated poor/fair on the construction category receives only $350,000 in 86-87, while Farmville Central, with only design deficiencies and rated excellent on the construction category, receives $360,000 to add classrooms and eliminate trailers? Isn't it disturbing that the capital outlay allocations say "no" to any immediate needs of the city schools? That is a "no" to help air condition schools whose PTAs are unable to raise adequate funds, and a "no" to Third Street School's need for an adequate library. Except for Greenville Middle School, there aren't any funds allocated to any city schools until 1988-89.

This year our school board and the administration have presented us with redistricting, grandfathering, and now a budget that ignores priority of need. All of these changes have lacked equity. We cannot have excellence for our children without equity. Pitt County school need an administration and a school board that can provide this excellence.

Nel Roberts
Greenville

To the editor:

Many inequities are shown through the budget adopted by the Pitt County School Board on Monday night.

This is our money and these are our children. Citizens of Pitt County need accurate information about these funds, as well as any changes that may occur in the adopted budget. We need to know definite long-range plans for the life of each school. Once again, the school board and the administration have offered us too little information wrapped in ambiguity. We need an administration that openly keeps us informed. If the questions and concerns made by parents, principals and teachers about the policies and practices of the administration are not even considered, can we be progressive? There is little growth in a system that mandates.

J.H. Rose High School will not be receiving any capital outlay funds. Some of the programs and courses at Rose will be changing in order to make our school system more uniform. In order to conform programs, should any school be asked to take a step backward? Would it not be a more progressive idea to place these programs in all the high schools?

It is also imperative that the school board and the administration let the taxpayers of Pitt County know what justifies building a new high school. Five million dollars has been allotted for this in the capital outlay plan for 1989-91. Are the administration and the school board actively seeking to sell the Rose High property?

Our school board needs to address the concerns of the citizens of Pitt County. The League of Women Voters requested a public hearing on the budget at Monday night's meeting. This hearing would have allowed time to discuss and clarify everyone's concerns. By turning down this opportunity, the people of Pitt County are unable to question this budget.

Strength For Today

The Greek philosopher Epictetus asks in one of his Discourses where a man can be found who will love his enemies, forgive his oppressors or die that others might lead a fuller life. He declares that he has found no such person among even the philosophers of that day.

Whether Epictetus had any actual knowledge of the early Christian movement of his day we do not know. But if he had looked around him in the town in Asia Minor in which he lifed, he would have found men who, following the example of Jesus, were trying to love their enemies and do good to those that despitefully used them. If he had inquired of any of his Christian neighbors, they would have told him of a Man who had died for the good of others.

When the Word became flesh, men beheld in living form the moral ideas of which great thinkers had caught but a faint glimpse.

Focus On Struggle For Rights

Analysis

WASHINGTON — Reports of ethnic massacres in Sri Lanka — Tamil terrorists murdering women and children — astonish most Americans. This country, inhabited primarily by gentle Buddhists who enjoy a democratic tradition and a physical quality of life comparable to Washington, D.C., should be an example of the democratic wave now said to be sweeping the globe. Instead, it seems an example of barbarism.

Sri Lanka's difficulties, in fact, reflect a problem that affects an increasing number of nations, both democratic and non-democratic, large and small, Western and developing — the mounting demands of minorities for their rights. We may be moving into a time of troubles for established governments everywhere unless they can devise ways to address minority concerns more effectively.

In Sri Lanka, as in most other parts of the globe, world attention is drawn to outrageous measures carried out by the minority, whose agents are sometimes fairly and sometimes unfairly denounced as terrorists. Less attention is paid to equally outrageous measures carried out by the majority, whose agents have the more acceptable titles of army or police. A review of the 1986 Amnesty International report on Sri Lanka soon puts matters into a more balanced perspective. Amnesty International records "arbitrary killings of many hundreds of non-combatant Tamils by government security forces in northern and eastern Sri Lanka and of many 'disappearances.'"

Some media seem to have a double standard in covering troubles like those now convulsing Sri Lanka. When security forces kills non-combatants, it is not news. When minority Tamils are equally reprehensible, it is a front-page story.

The double standard operates elsewhere. Turkey's protest over Bulgarian efforts to repress its Turkish minority is major news. Turkey's own harsh repression of its Kurdish minority is not news unless the effort spills into Iraq or Iran. The Indian peasant revolt against the Guatemala government was major news. The government's earlier repression of Guatemala's Indian population earned little notice. The bloody revolt of the black population in the southern Sudan seems outrageous to many outsiders. Few ask what policies the government in Khartoum followed prior to the revolt.

Americans like to believe that if countries were more democratic, they would not have aggrieved minorities. But that approach is too simple. A majority can use the machinery of democracy to repress a minority or at least to deny it the opportunities it deserves. That is one reason the United States itself was forced to adopt civil rights legislation. But even that form of corrective action may not be enough in some societies. Many minorities around the world are striving not only to be equal but to be different.

Today minorities have more tools to deploy in their fight for freedom. Today a minority finds it easier to get outside assistance and to explain its case to a distant world. It finds more ways — including some that are reprehensible — to strike out at oppressive authority. The number and variety of countries now facing minority problems is astonishing.

Democratic Britain, France and Spain face separatist challenges from Northern Ireland, Corsica and the Basque country. Iran, Iraq and Turkey face a Kurdish revolt. Hungarians believe that socialist brothers in Romania are oppressing the minority Hungarian population. The Soviet Union combats growing restiveness among its Jewish and Moslem populations. The Maori in New Zealand are becoming more politically active, as are the Moros in the Philippines. Indian populations in Latin America are rising up; witness the violence of Peru's Sendero Luminoso (Shining Path) guerrillas. In the Middle East, ethnically or religiously diverse states such as Egypt, Israel, Lebanon and Syria suffer growing civil unrest.

Many Americans consider the issue of separatist minorities primarily a foreign problem. For the American dream is assimilation.

Indeed the angry black American reaction to Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev's suggestion that the United States set up special homelands for minority populations shows how powerful this dream remains even among the country's most disadvantaged citizens.

But the desire to remain part of the American community cannot be taken for granted. Those who ridicule the political aspirations of America's minorities — and in recent years such comments have become commonplace — play with fire.

Is there anything that can be done about the destabilizing tensions that bad relations between majorities and minorities may create? We might try learning from the past. The international system had better arrangements for handling minority problems after World War I than today. Special provisions were made in the treaties signed by Poland, Lithuania and Greece for the protection of the religious rights of Jews. Similar provisions in treaties with Albania, Greece and Yugoslavia protected Moslem minorities. The Treaty of Sevres had provided autonomy for the Kurds but it was never ratified. And a German-Polish convention in 1922 protected the rights of German and Polish minorities in Upper Silesia.

The League of Nations then worked out procedures for considering minority issues covered by the various postwar treaties. Complaints were discussed by neutral members of the league's minorities committee. The aim was to find redress by a disinterested party through conciliation and discussion rather than through judgment and sanction.

There were, of course, problems. The countries whose minorities were protected by treaty resented this special status and contended that all countries with minorities should be covered. But progress was made and for some time the international community had an institutional framework for addressing minorities' problems.

Now the communications revolution heightens the political consciousness of minorities everywhere. An emphasis on individual human rights does not satisfy them.

White Supremacists Have Court Hearing

By DENNIS PATTERSON
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Former White Patriot Party leader Glenn Miller and two other men faced a hearing in federal court this morning, nearly one week after they were captured at a mobile home park in Missouri.

U.S. Attorney Sam Currin said Miller, Robert Jackson and Douglas Sheets would face the 10 a.m. hearing. The three had been held without bond since their capture in Ozark, Mo., last Thursday.

Currin said a search of the trailer where Miller, Jackson and Sheets were captured revealed the original "declaration of war" signed by Miller as well as the machine used to copy it.

"It (the letter) was certainly produced by him and mailed by him and I have every reason to believe he wrote the letter," Currin said Tuesday. "I have no evidence to the contrary."

A nationwide search for Miller began last month after a letter bearing his signature called on white supremacists to begin a war against blacks, Jews and government officials.

Along with Anthony Wydra, the four men surrendered after federal agents surrounded the mobile home in Missouri. Investigators later said they found firearms, grenades, explosives, pipe bombs and thousands of rounds of ammunition in the trailer.

"I was in Missouri (Monday) and spent all day Monday meeting with the U.S. attorney in Missouri and they're still in the process of evaluating the weapons," Currin told reporters. "They're doing some tests, fingerprint analysis. I fully expect weapons charges to be brought in Missouri, but it's going to be a while before they're able to do that out there."

Meanwhile, Currin refused to meet Tuesday with Wydra, Jackson's half-brother, was was arrested with the others in Missouri, then released by a federal magistrate.

Wydra, 19, asked Federal Bureau of Investigation agents if a warrant had been issued for his arrest. He was told agents knew of no outstanding warrants.

Wydra told the agents he "was hoping to get on TV with Currin in a debate-type thing."

Currin wasn't interested.

"I intend to investigate Tony Wydra. We are investigating his role with these three fugitives both in Missouri and back here in North Carolina," Currin said. "He has been subpoenaed to testify before grand juries both here and in Missouri and is a potential target of those investigations."

Wydra said he had been at the trailer "two or three days" when he was arrested, and had not been aware there were illegal weapons in the mobile home. He also said he did not know Miller was in the trailer until he got there.

Jackson was being sought as a fugitive after he failed to appear for a trial in Elizabeth City on federal conspiracy charges. He was convicted in absentia.

Stephen Miller, who is not related to Glenn Miller, also was convicted of conspiracy and weapons charges in the same trial.

Wydra was acquitted in the same trial, Sheets, who was subpoenaed as a witness, did not appear.

Anti-KKK Rally Denied

GREENSBORO (AP) — Greensboro city councilman Earl Jones wants to investigate the possibility of challenging a decision that denied a permit for a peace rally to counter a parade by the White Patriots of the Ku Klux Klan.

"It's a bit odd that the city would issue a permit to the KKK and then at the same time deny the permit to local citizens," Jones said.

Greensboro City Manager William Carstarphen denied the permit to the Greensboro Alliance. Its rally would coincide with the Klan march on June 7.

Joanna Colodin, a city spokeswoman, says that according to Greensboro's parade ordinance, the city could deny a permit on certain conditions, "in this case, our ability to staff it."

"It's not to try and quelch or chill this other's groups freedom of speech," Ms. Colodin said. "We just don't have enough person-power to go around."

Efforts to reach Carstarphen for comment were unsuccessful Tuesday.

The Greensboro Police Department recommended against issuing a permit for the festival, which would have been held between 1 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. and would have required closing part of a street.

City and police officials said the KKK march downtown would stretch the department's resources, with both overtime and overlapping shifts planned.

Taunts End In Gunfire

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Four people have been arrested in a racial confrontation along Interstate 40 that started with taunts and ended in gunfire.

Jesse Thomas Graham, 34, of Greensboro, was charged Monday with shooting a .22-caliber pistol at a car being driven by Michael Timothy Cooley, 19, of Route 8, Mocksville.

Cooley was charged with malicious injury to personal property. He threw a beer bottle from his car at a car that Graham was driving, the warrant said.

He also was charged with disorderly conduct.

Julia Diane Ratledge, 17, of Rt. 8, Mocksville, and Timothy Mack Wagner, 17, of Route 6, Mocksville, were also charged with disorderly conduct.

Deputy W.P. Capers of the Forsyth County Sheriff's Department said that Graham and two friends, all black, had stopped their car on the side of Interstate 40 just west of Kernersville Sunday to help a stranded motorist when three white people drove by and shouted racial slurs.

After Graham's car was hit by two beer bottles, he fired a pistol at the car, Capers said.

"The bullets struck the right front fender," Capers said. He didn't know how many times Graham fired, he said. "There were two holes in the car. Other than that we can't determine."

Martin Asks Senate Panel To Back GOP Proposal On Judicial Elections

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin, in an unusual appearance at the Legislature, proposed a Republican alternative to a bill designed to make the selection of judges more fair to blacks.

Martin, at a public hearing Tuesday, urged the Senate Judiciary IV Committee to scrap a bill passed by the House that is aimed at satisfying a class-action lawsuit. The suit, filed on behalf of North Carolina blacks, contends that the state's policy of electing Superior Court judges is racially discriminatory.

Instead, the Republican governor endorsed a bill sponsored by Senate Minority Leader Larry Cobb, R-Mecklenburg, under which elections of Superior Court judges would be non-partisan and district-wide.

The Cobb bill "will cure the present injustices of our judicial election system," Martin said. "It will end the pending federal litigation and pre-empt the lawsuits that are sure to continue until the people of this state are given a fair and meaningful vote in the choosing of their own Superior Court judges."

The House bill, sponsored by Rep. H.M. "Mickey" Michaux, D-Durham, would make several changes sought by black litigants.

It would create black majorities in 10 of 73 judicial districts where now there is only one among 72. Judicial candidates receive their parties' nominations in district-wide primaries but general elections are statewide.

The bill would eliminate staggered terms, having all judges in a district seek election in the same years.

Martin, however, said the Michaux bill had major faults, including:

— It retains the current system of partisan, statewide general elections that dilutes GOP votes and virtually assures Republicans won't be elected to the Superior Court bench.

— It would abolish eight special Superior Court judgeships, which are filled by gubernatorial appointment. Those judges have no home district and hold court wherever the chief justice of the state Supreme Court assigns them.

Currently, the only Republican Superior Court judges are special judges.

Martin also argued that statewide election of judges would make no sense because most voters know nothing about the candidates except those from their area.

Democrats said in interviews that Martin had not dissuaded them from supporting the Michaux bill. Sen. R.C. Soles, D-Columbus, the committee chairman, said the panel would vote on the bill next Tuesday.

"The governor's an honorable person," Soles said. But "he is as much interested in helping his own party and electing Republicans to the judiciary as anything."

Sen. Tony Rand, D-Cumberland, noted that Martin, despite endorsing merit selection of judges, did not establish a procedure for screening candidates to fill vacancies as former Gov. Jim Hunt did.

"It appears that his primary purpose is to help elect Republican judges," Rand said.

Soles said the committee would discuss "the concepts" espoused in the Cobb bill. Soles said he didn't know whether there would be a vote on the measure but that portions of it might be incorporated into the Michaux bill.

Michaux, who attended the hearing but did not speak, said in an interview that statewide elections of judges were justified. He said Superior Court judges usually spend only about six months out of every four years holding court in the districts in which they were nominated.

No one spoke in favor of the Michaux bill. Donald L. Smith, a Republican and special Superior Court judge, urged the committee not to abolish the special judgeships. He said those judges often were assigned cases of unusual complexity that would be a burden to regular judges.

Frank W. Snepp, senior resident Superior Court judge in the 26th Judicial District, said the bill offered an "ill-conceived" method of dealing with problems in the judicial system and "poses serious dangers to the integrity and quality of the state's judicial system."

After his speech, Martin told reporters he didn't know whether his personal appeal would do any good but that it had been worth the effort.

"Let's see what happens," he said. "I was there to make a case for what I thought was a better ... system."

Amnesty Program Has Slow Start

By PAUL NOWELL
Associated Press Writer

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Estimates of huge crowds and chaos failed to materialize on the first day of the federal government's program which could mean U.S. citizenship for as many as 3 million illegal immigrants.

The program, which lasts for one year, offers amnesty only to those who illegally entered the country before Jan. 1, 1982, and have lived in the U.S. continuously since then. But the expectations were far from reality.

Business was slow Tuesday morning at a special processing center in Charlotte that was set up by the Immigration and Naturalization Service to handle applications from North Carolina and South Carolina.

By midday, less than 50 people had come to the office to apply for the program, said Ana Pardo, the INS legalization officer.

Ms. Pardo's staff of 12 was equipped to process as many as 100 applications a day.

"We estimate (there are) anywhere from 10,000 to 50,000 (people eligible for the program) from North Carolina," she said. "We don't have any figures for South Carolina. No one knows for sure."

As she described the program, a young man was filling out an application in a room filled with empty chairs. Breaking the relative silence was a small black and white television set that was replaying a video cassette about the amnesty offer.

The man would not identify himself or reveal his nationality, saying it might jeopardize some of his friends.

"I've been waiting for this for 10 years," he said, explaining that he came to the U.S. to go to school in 1976.

"I got so far along with my education and my job that I never left," he said. "I have been afraid to go to an immigration office and ask them to let me stay."

On the other hand, Olivo Diaz, who ran across the Mexican border into the United States in 1968 when he was just 15 and who drove 100 miles to fill out an application, pointed to his two young daughters and smiled when asked about the amnesty program.

"I don't want to worry about agents taking me back to Mexico and leaving my kids here," he said. "This is why I came."

Diaz is now in the aluminum siding business in Carthage, N.C. His wife, Celia, said until two months ago they worked as pickers in the fields of North Carolina.

"Sometimes the two of us could make $300 a week," she said. "But if you got a bad field you could make less than $100. And the man is the one who picks where you work."

Diaz said he wanted to become an American citizen because of the opportunities it would open up for him and his family.

"I think I'll be better off than I was," he said.

Movie Set Property Faces Suit

GAFFNEY, S.C. (AP) — Duke Power Co. has filed a foreclosure notice for a company owned by North Carolina moviemaker Earl Owensby to pay more than $1.9 million owed on the purchase of the abandoned Cherokee nuclear power station.

Owensby bought more than 2,000 acres of land from Duke Power in December 1985 after the utility halted construction of the station on the Broad River property in Cherokee County.

Owensby turned the abandoned facility into a movie set and announced plans to build a luxury city on the property and 2,000 adjacent acres he purchased.

At the time of the sale, officials said E.O. Corp. paid $1 million in cash to Duke Power for equipment left at the site and financed the additional $2 million for the land.

The $2 million plus 10 percent interest was to have been payable at the end of 1986.

The foreclosure action, filed Monday in Cherokee County, states that E.O. Corp. agreed to pay the principal amount of $2 million for the property, plus interest in monthly installments.

The action says the E.O. Corp. "has failed and refused to comply with the terms of the note and the mortgage and it is now in default."

Owensby was out of town and could not be reached for comment Tuesday.

Debra Franklin, vice president of development for the E.O. Corp., said the company and the utility are in dispute over property "obligations," but said other details would have to come from Owensby.

The action states that under the terms of the purchase agreement, "if any portion of the principal or interest becomes past due, the entire unpaid balance shall be immediately due and payable, at the option of the holder."

The notice did not say how many monthly installments are owed, and Mary Boyd, director of communications for Duke Power, declined to say how far behind Owensby had fallen in his payments.

The foreclosure notice declares the unpaid balance, including principal and interest, as $1,905,017 as of May 1.

Boyd said the filing of the action was "just a procedural matter." The company is "sure" Owensby will meet his obligation, she added.

House Panel Backs Ban On Youthful Executions

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — A House committee has approved a bill which would ban capital punishment for minors, and the committee chairman says the bill has a good chance of advancing.

Rep. Dan Blue, D-Wake, made the prediction after the 9-3 vote Tuesday. The House easily defeated a bid last session to repeal capital punishment altogether.

Voting against the bill were Reps. Joe Hege, R-Davidson, Walt Windley, R-Gaston, and Doris Huffman, R-Catawba, although none spoke against it. Another Republican, Rep. Ray Warren, R-Mecklenburg, abstained from voting.

Most of the discussion of the bill centered on the inhumanity of killing children, who are usually treated differently from adults.

Rep. Sidney Locks, D-Robeson, said minors are not always responsible for their actions and many may be influenced by "Darth Vader, Bonnie and Clyde, Charles Manson or even Luke Skywalker."

"The execution of a minor is one of the most hideous things that any state or country can do," said Locks, who noted minors can't vote, buy guns or drink alcohol.

"With no possibility for rehabilitation, to give minors the death penalty, in my opinion, shows vindictive action on the most vulnerable persons in our society," he said.

Episcopal Bishop Robert Estill told the committee Christian faith "teaches us that the worth of every human life and the dignity of every human person are gifts from God. We believe no one can rightly judge another to be beyond the reach of God's grace."

"The death penalty violates the Christian reverence for human life," he added. "It teaches revenge, not mercy."

Evelyn Mattern, representing the North Carolina Council of Churches, noted that black youths have historically been more likely to be executed than others.

Former Instructor Pleads Guilty To Bogus Courses

BURGAW, N.C. (AP) — A former part-time instructor and supervisor on the Cape Fear Technical Institute staff has pleaded guilty in connection with a bogus operation at the school.

Richard T. Pigford, 42, entered guilty pleas to 48 of the more than 450 counts of obtaining property by false pretenses he faced. In return for testimony against his former director, Michael D. Bonner, the remaining charges will be dropped.

Pigford's pleas came before attorneys could finish jury selection.

Pigford had pleaded innocent to the charges against him. He was accused of receiving instructor's pay for the false courses. Sentencing was continued until after Bonner's trial, which began immediately after Pigford's guilty plea.

The State Bureau of Investigation began looking into the CFTI continuing education program last summer after administrators discovered irregularities. Since then, 18 people have been charged in connection with the scam.

Investigators estimate that at least $1.4 million was paid to instructors of non-existent classes over the course of six years.

Bonner, a director of CFTI's Pender County continuing education division, is charged with 36 counts of embezzlement by a state employee and one count of conspiracy to embezzle.

Carol Newton, a former part-time continuing education instructor, was the first witness for the state. She told how she made up qualifications, invented names for class rosters, and got access to other people's Social Security numbers and used their names as instructors.

She said she did so on the instructions of Pigford, her boyfriend. But she also testified that she and Pigford met Bonner on several occasions and that Pigford gave Bonner envelopes containing money.

Johnson Home

ATLANTA (AP) — RJR Nabisco Inc. President F. Ross Johnson, whose company is moving its headquarters to Atlanta from Winston-Salem, N.C., has purchased a 5,900-square-foot home near the Chattahoochee River.

The Atlanta Journal and The Atlanta Constitution reported that the purchase price was $930,750, which Johnson paid in cash. The two-story brick house sits on 1¾ acres and has about 10 main rooms, the newspapers said in Monday editions.

Johnson said the thing he likes most about the home is its location. "It's only about 10 minutes from work," he said.

RJR Nabisco is to be located at the Galleria complex in Cobb County, just north of Atlanta.

Drowning

GOLDSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A Wayne County man drowned 25 feet from shore Monday after his boat began leaking while he was fishing in Walnut Creek.

James Winstead of Rt. 3, Pikeville was fishing with a friend when the boat began taking on water. His companion said Winstead tried to swim to shore but managed to swim only a few feet.

"He never told me he couldn't swim," said Eddie Lancaster, who was fishing with Winstead. "I don't know why James didn't just hang onto the boat. We were just trying to get to shore. We panicked."

The men were not wearing life preservers, Lancaster said.

"We were in the water and with my wet clothes, it was all I could do to swim. If I hadn't been able to get my boots off I never would have made it," Lancaster said. "It was all I could do to get to shore. I couldn't have gone back in to get him."

Duplin Remap

KENANSVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Representatives of the NAACP urged Duplin County officials this week to change the county's method of electing commissioners or face possible legal action.

A proposal presented to Duplin County Commissioners would call for each commissioner to be elected by district and for the five districts to be redrawn so that two of the five contain a majority of black voters.

Attorney James W. Wall of Wilmington, director of litigation for Legal Services of the Lower Cape Fear, told commissioners that the existing system is intolerable.

Wall said the redistricting plan would divide the towns of Warsaw, Kenansville, Beulaville, Rose Hill and Wallace, but said that having two districts that are majority black would better represent the population ratio of blacks to whites in the county.

New Center

CHARLOTTE (AP) — The nation's second largest savings and loan firm said Tuesday it establish a data processing center near Charlotte that eventually would employ about 1,000.

While Home Savings of America executives stressed the decision would not be final until a site is selected and purchased, Mecklenburg County leaders said the firm has made an all-but-final decision to put a facility in University Research Park near the University of North Carolina at Charlotte.

University Research Park officials said negotiating continues but they expected no problems reaching an agreement with Home Savings, a $28 billion company based in the Los Angeles suburb of Irwindale, Calif.

Student Protest

MARION, N.C. (AP) — About 250 McDowell High School students demonstrated Tuesday to protest the enforcement of a "no-kissing" rule, and 35 of the protesters were suspended, school officials said.

"The rules are unfair. They're treating us like children," said junior Mitzy Wright, who addressed the group with her arm around her fiance, junior Billy Reed.

Students, chanting "We want rights" and statements about the principal, refused to return to their classes after a morning break. They were protesting the rules, which are being more strictly enforced in a recent crackdown ordered by the school principal, Wayne Silver.

Silver said the rules ban kissing, hugging, chewing gum, playing radios and tape recorders and boys wearing hats in school.

State Church Board Ends Bakker Review

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — It is now up to the Executive Presbytery of the Assemblies of God to determine what action to take on the resignation of former PTL leader Jim Bakker following a meeting of the denomination's North Carolina officials.

The 16-member North Carolina board met Monday and Tuesday in Fayetteville on the eve of the Assemblies of God annual district council. A spokesman said a decision had been reached, but would not say what the verdict was.

"The board announced today that they have reached a decision on the credential resignations of the Rev. Jim Bakker and the Rev. Richard Dortch. They will now pass on their recommendation to the Executive Presbytery in Springfield, Mo.," Wes Cookman, son of district superintendent the Rev. Charles Cookman, told WPTF-AM in Raleigh Tuesday.

"They had a wide agenda, since this was a regularly scheduled meeting of the Presbytery Board. They met until 11 p.m. Monday night and resumed at 8 a.m. (Tuesday) and concluded the board meeting about 12:30 p.m.," Wes Cookman said.

Bakker and Dortch resigned from the denomination March 19, the same day Bakker stepped down as head of PTL after admitting a sexual encounter with a former church secretary.

Bakker had been an Assemblies of God minister for 23 years.

Dortch temporarily replaced Bakker as host of the PTL Club television show, but resigned in the wake of disclosures that he had negotiated a settlement to Jessica Hahn, the church secretary.

Cookman said he did not know whether Bakker or Dortch appeared before the board. He also said he did not know when, or if, the national church leaders would release the decision to the public.

In a telephone interview with The Morning Star in Wilmington, Terry Terrell, church relations coordinator in the national office, said he was unaware of any decision made in Fayetteville. He said the district board will forward their recommendations in writing.

"We are concerned only with (Bakker's) credentials, not with what his future is. He is free to do whatever he cares to do. Our only concern is with whether he continues to have Assembly of God credentials and if so, what restrictions would be placed on him," Terrell said.

After making their decision on Bakker, the district presbyters joined the annual convention here.

"This has been a subduing thing, speaking for myself," said the Rev. Frank VanArsdale, a presbyter from Spring Lake.

Unwanted Trash May Be Sign Of Future

By LAWRENCE KILMAN
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Some people laughed when they heard about the scow of New York garbage being rejected by six states and two countries, but the barge nobody wants is a serious omen, say experts on waste disposal.

"This barge is a warning: 'Hey people, there is a crisis in this country and we've got to do something about it,'" said Bill Taormina, a director of Anaheim Disposal, a private collection company in Anaheim, Calif.

The 3,000 tons of floating garbage left Islip, N.Y., on March 22 and were rejected by North Carolina, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas, Florida, Mexico and Belize. The "barge to nowhere," which remained off Key West, Fla., today, has drawn public attention to a problem that has been growing for years: no place to put the garbage.

Americans generate about 220 million tons of garbage each year, and 95 percent of it is buried in landfills, according to the National Solid Wastes Management Association, an industry trade group.

But about one-quarter of the nation's cities have less than five years' space left in their landfills, according to Combustion Engineering, a Connecticut-based supplier of garbage-burning electric generating plants.

"If a community has a landfill that has fewer than five years' useful life, then that community has a problem," said Sheila Prindiville, director of the solid waste program for the National Solid Wastes Management Association.

"Will Americans wake up next week and see every flat surface covered ankle deep in orange peels? The answer is no," said Ms. Prindiville. "Will it happen locally? The answer is yes, and it's happening now."

Almost every state has a disposal problem somewhere, according to a U.S. Environmental Protection Agency survey that found trouble in all states except Kansas, Nevada and the Dakotas.

"The issue is, sites are reaching permanent capacity, or they're closing for environmental reasons, and they're not being replaced fast enough," said Robert Morris, a senior policy analyst for the solid-waste industry group.

Public opposition to landfills was often cited as a major reason for the shortfall.

The Islip barge is "a very good dramatization of the NIMBY syndrome: Not In My Back Yard," said Fitzhugh Green, an EPA official.

If something isn't done quickly, the spectacle of mobile, unwanted garbage will become more common, experts say.

In Islip, authorities were forced to ship commercial garbage elsewhere because New York state closed the Long Island town's dump to protect drinking water. Islip is seeking to reopen the dump.

"We're outraged that a barge of Islip garbage is floating around the country trying to find a home," said town Supervisor Frank Jones.

Taormina, director of the collection company in Anaheim, said most people take disposal for granted. "People put trash on curbs. It disappears. The awareness factor is nonexistent," he said.

Taormina's company is flourishing. It is a transfer station, a relatively new idea that grew lucrative as dumps became harder to find. Trash collectors, unwilling to make frequent, often lengthy trips to the dump, pay transfer operators to take it off their hands.

After removing metal, paper and glass for recycling, Taormina's firm packs the refuse into giant trailers and takes it to the dump. He charges $15 a ton, $9 more than the nearest landfill, and takes in 2,000 tons daily, or 1,100 tons more than he originally anticipated.

Taormina is also planning to build a garbage-burning power plant.

"What happens when we run out of space? The barge is a perfect example," he said. "It's almost as if it was planned to show an example. It's a classic case of what can happen without planning."

Recycling, garbage-fueled power plants and incinerators are some of the methods being pushed by the industry, and producing less garbage also may be be necessary.

"We're a consumer culture and we keep cranking it out," said Arthur Purcell, head of the Resource Policy Institute, a non-profit group concerned with waste disposal.

Purcell likened the garbage crisis to the energy crisis of the 1970s. Americans became more energy efficient then, and Purcell believes the same thing can be achieved with garbage. "We can't eliminate it, but we can increase efficiency," he said.

Meanwhile, the barge languishes. Its owners thought it would be a cheap way to transport garbage from Long Island to a North Carolina dump.

"It's pretty much of an experimental thing with our customer," said Bob Gwinn, vice president of Harvey Gulf International Marine Inc., the tugboat company hired to push the barge. "It didn't turn out the way they planned."

Readiness

WASHINGTON (AP) — The general in charge of the Pentagon's National Guard Bureau has created a committee to conduct an independent review of the guard's readiness, the Defense Department said Tuesday.

Lt. Gen. Herbert R. Temple Jr. has named four other general officers to the committee and asked them to compare 20 Army National Guard units with 20 active-duty units, said Robert Sims, the Pentagon's chief spokesman.

Sims said Temple has selected Maj. Gen. Charles M. Keifner of Missouri to chair the special committee. The other members include Maj. Gen. Lloyd M. Price of New Hampshire; Maj. Gen. Ivan F. Smith of Alabama, and Brig. Gen. Thomas Schulte of Ohio.

Embezzlement

ASHEVILLE (AP) — The vice president of Sure-Fire Distributing Co., which was destroyed in a spectacular blaze in 1984, has been charged in federal indictments with embezzling funds from the motorcycle parts dealership.

A federal grand jury meeting in Asheville Monday returned the 14-count indictment against William Fleming Burbank IV, also known as Bill Burbank Jr. It charged him with defrauding Sure-Fire, which was owned by him and his father, William Burbank Sr.

EPA Inspectors Say Trash Aboard Wandering Barge Found Harmless

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP) — A weeks-old bargeload of New York trash rejected by six states and two countries was pronounced harmless and practically odorless by environmental officials and the contractor who leased the scow.

"All of it is non-hazardous," contractor Lowell Harrelson said Tuesday as the barge, its tug and its cargo of 3,100 tons of garbage lay at anchor about seven miles south of this island city.

The barge, which began its 5,000-mile odyssey when it left the Long Island city of Islip, N.Y., on March 22, has been rejected by North Carolina, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas, Florida, Mexico and Belize.

Some state officials had raised concerns about health hazards from the garbage, which has been exposed to the sun for weeks.

Its long journey was to be the subject of a U.S. House Energy and Commerce Committee hearing today on municipal waste disposal problems.

Tests by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency determined that the garbage is "remarkably free of living flies," said Harrelson. "Contents dry," he continued, citing the EPA findings. "No seepage. Which is exactly what I've been saying all along."

Complete test results are expected in two to three days, said Rick Cahill, an EPA spokesman in New York City.

The EPA's conclusion agreed with that of an engineer who inspected the trash for New York State Commissioner of Environmental Conservation Henry Williams.

"My engineer reported that the trash on the barge was typical commercial and industrial waste, predominantly paper, assorted containers, some tires and miscellaneous junk. There was little leachate, no gulls and little odor," Williams said.

"At the present time, New York state has no legal authority regarding the trash on the barge. We cannot order that the waste be directed to any port or disposal site," Williams said.

The New York state agency has been trying to help find a permanent resting place for the garbage.

Florida Gov. Bob Martinez on Tuesday announced that the state Department of Environmental Regulation had obtained an injunction forbidding the barge and its tug from entering Florida waters without further permits.

Bob Gwynn, a spokesman for the barge's owners, Harvey Gulf International in Harvey, La., said there were no plans to move the vessel until a destination is guaranteed.

U.S., Canada See Dispute Sharpen Over Access To Northwest Passage

By JEFF BRADLEY
Associated Press Writer

OTTAWA (AP) — Accusing each other of shortsightedness, Canada and the United States are engaged in a bitter dispute over access to the Northwest Passage waterway in the Arctic.

Canada claims the 1,000-mile passage, which runs from the North Atlantic to the Pacific and is frozen most of the year, is part of its sovereign territory and subject to Canadian laws and jurisdiction.

The Reagan administration regards the route as an international waterway open to all, and says acceptance of the Canadian claim would set a dangerous legal precedent affecting strategic straits in the South Pacific and elsewhere.

Prime Minister Brian Mulroney underlines a more ominous consequence if Washington gets its way: missile-carrying Soviet submarines might prowl the Canadian Arctic if the Northwest Passage were an international strait. Another Canadian official says international status would allow Soviet aircraft to fly over it.

The Soviet Union has not objected to Canada's Arctic position, possibly because the United States does not recognize the Soviet claim to sovereignty over the Northeast Passage on the other side of the North Pole.

Britain and other West European nations back the U.S. position. They are concerned that international waterways such as the Philippines archipelago, Lombok Strait in Indonesia, Sunda and Malacca Straits in Malaysia or the Strait of Hormuz off Iran could be affected by a Canadian precedent.

"We don't want to agree to conditions governing the status of that passage which could be applied in other parts of the world where for us it is extremely important to maintain navigational freedom for the U.S. Navy," Thomas Niles, U.S. ambassador to Canada, said in an April 22 speech.

Canada counters that its Arctic archipelago is unique since it is frozen all or most of the time and is in effect an extension of the coast, occupied by the Canadian Inuit (Eskimo) people for thousands of years.

Attempts to negotiate a compromise have failed, but when Reagan visited Ottawa on April 5-6 he pledged to inject "new impetus" into the talks, provided American interests in the Arctic were respected.

Those include U.S. oil exploration in the Beaufort Sea, where the two governments disagree over the border line dividing Alaskan and Yukon waters.

Failing a settlement, Canada is prepared to present its case to the International Court of Justice in The Hague, as it did successfully in an east coast fishing dispute with the United States.

First sought by European explorers in the 16th century, the Northwest Passage was not successfully navigated until 1906 when Roald Amundsen of Norway completed the voyage over three winters. Since then, there have been only 45 complete transits.

Except for a brief summer period, the passage from Baffin Bay to the Beaufort is icebound with temperatures around 40-50 degrees below zero. A handful of permanent settlements dot surrounding islands and a few thousand Inuit hunters roam the white landscape for polar bear, seal, walrus and fish.

Trouble over navigation rights erupted 18 years ago when the U.S. supertanker Manhattan entered the passage without Canadian permission to test whether Alaskan oil could be shipped across the Arctic to the East Coast.

Environmentalists were alarmed when the ice tore a hole in the tanker's hull. "Any spill could be locked in for millenia," one Canadian official said of the fragile ecology. In 1972, Canada adopted an Arctic Waters Pollution Prevention Act, claiming environmental control for the region.

In August 1985 the U.S. Coast Guard icebreaker Polar Sea prodded its way from Greenland to Alaska, sparking a new frenzy of Canadian protest.

The Mulroney government, then focusing on improved relations with Washington, had given its permission for the voyage.

Soviets, U.S. Agree On Warning Centers

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and the Soviet Union plan to establish communications centers to warn each other of nuclear missile test launchings or other moves that might be mistaken as attacks.

"This can lead to a much safer world," U.S. arms control director Kenneth L. Adelman said Tuesday of the tentative accord reached in Geneva. However, he emphasized that the risk-reduction centers in Washington and Moscow should be coupled with deep cutbacks in U.S. and Soviet strategic nuclear weapons.

Negotiations to cut the arsenals resumed, meanwhile, in the Swiss city with the two sides tentatively agreeing to seek a 50 percent reduction in their globe-girdling bombers, missiles and submarines.

However, the United States proposed to carry out the reductions over seven years and to establish quotas for various types of weapons. The Soviets want a five-year plan and are resisting sub-ceilings in an effort to maintain a sizable arsenal of heavy land-based missiles.

A senior Reagan administration official who met with a group of reporters in Washington on condition he not be identified said the disagreement on a reduction schedule "could be a hangup."

Through the risk-reduction centers, the two sides will notify each other of missile tests and other actions that might be misunderstood as a nuclear attack. They also will exchange strategic information, but the details at this point are classified.

The two principal congressional sponsors of the centers, Sens. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., and John W. Warner, R-Va., hailed the tentative agreement, which is the first step in their ambitious campaign for superpower cooperation to combat nuclear terrorists and prevent war by miscalculation.

"This agreement demonstrates that the two superpowers can act together to advance their mutual interest in enhancing stability and reducing the risk of nuclear war," Nunn said.

"Whether or not we reach agreement in other areas of arms reductions, it is clearly in our mutual interest to avoid stumbling into a nuclear war through miscalculation or misunderstanding," the Senate Armed Services Committee chairman said in a statement.

Warner said, "All mankind benefits from the increased safety such an agreement provides." He called the accord a significant step toward a more peaceful world.

The agreement will be signed in mid-month in Geneva by Assistant Secretary of Defense Richard N. Perle and Soviet negotiator Alexei Obukhov.

Most details of the agreement were withheld. Nunn and Warner have proposed supplementing the centers with periodic meetings between U.S. and Soviet officials and a joint annual review of measures to prevent accidental war.

The two senators, who launched their campaign in 1981, initially with the late Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., also hope to have the two powers cooperate in preventing terrorists from starting a war with nuclear arms.

Nunn and Warner called on U.S. military leaders and security specialists, such as former Defense Secretary James Schlesinger and former deputy CIA director Bobby Inman, to persuade the Reagan administration and the Kremlin to establish the centers in the two capitals and link them with 24-hour teletype communication.

The arrangement is apart from the improved "hotline" that connects President Reagan with Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

Congress endorsed the proposal for risk-reduction centers in 1984. Nunn and Warner carried it to Gorbachev in Moscow in 1985, and the Soviet leader said it "demanded attention."

Presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the agreement would be referred to the leaders of the two countries for final approval.

At their 1985 summit in Geneva, Reagan and Gorbachev agreed to explore the possibility of setting up the risk-reduction centers.

At the State Department, spokesman Charles E. Redman said the centers would "strengthen international security. They could, for instance, provide a channel for exchanging notifications required by certain existing arms control agreements."

Private Donations To Colleges Rise Record $1 Billion

By LEE MITGANG
AP Education Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Private donations to America's colleges and universities soared 17.1 percent last year to an estimated $7.4 billion, fueled by a 25 percent rise in gifts from individuals.

Contributions were up by a record $1 billion, according to an annual survey released Tuesday by the Council for Financial Ai to Education.

Alumni gifts reached $1.83 billion, up 25 percent from a year earlier, and donations from non-alumni individuals rose 25.8 percent to $1.78 billion. The average gift from alumni was $331, up from $265 in 1984-85.

A $100 million contribution from the Danforth Foundation to Washington University in St. Louis was another key factor behind last year's big rise in giving to higher education, according to the survey.

That gift made Washington University the nation's third most successful fund-raiser last year behind Stanford University and Harvard University, the survey said.

Donations from foundations, including the Danforth gift, increased 16 percent to $1.36 billion, while gifts from religious organizations were up 1.4 percent to $211 million, and contributions from all other private sources rose 6.4 percent to $518 million.

After six years of double-digit increases, corporate donations to academia rose a more modest 8 percent to $1.7 billion in 1985-86.

Council president John R. Haire called the tailing off of business giving "not unexpected," considering the "continued sluggishness of corporate profits and the impact on giving budgets of the mergers, acquisitions and restructuring now going on in the corporate community."

Haire termed the upsurge in individual support to higher education "extraordinary," and said that it was most likely stimulated by increasingly ambitious fund drives by colleges, strong gains in the stock market, and the likelihood that individual donors were anticipating changes in the federal tax code affecting charitable contributions.

Stanford University, in the midst of a $1 billion-plus fund-raising campaign, was last year's top fund-raiser, with $179.3 million.

Harvard University raised $146.2 million, Washington University $146.1 million, Cornell University $114.2 million, Yale University $110.2 million, Columbia University $94.5 million, University of Minnesota $93.7 million, Princeton University $87.5 million, University of Illinois $82.9 million, and University of Pennsylvania $79.5 million.

The council's annual estimates are based on projections from data reported by 1,194 colleges and universities responding to the council's survey.

The council is a private, non-profit corporation funded by the business community and charged with encouraging private-sector support of education.

Invitation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Prime Minister Ingvar Carlsson of Sweden has accepted an invitation from President Reagan to meet with him at the White House on Sept. 9, presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater announced.

Fitzwater said Carlsson will be making an official visit to the United States.

In The Area

The Howell Suite

The Hilton Inn of Greenville is naming its presidential suite for Dr. John Howell, recently retired chancellor of East Carolina University.

The naming cites Howell for his contributions to the people of eastern North Carolina. It will take place Friday at 7 p.m. with Howell, local officials, and hotel executives and owners in attendance.

Located on the sixth floor "executive level," the presidential suite is about the size of three hotel rooms, according to Rhesa Tucker, sales representative with Hilton. It has a large living-dining area and a separate bedroom.

Ms. Tucker said that Howell's name will be engraved on a gold plaque on the door of the suite.

Blood Drive Set

There will be a public blood drive and information booth about organ donation Thursday from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the Boys Club of Pitt County facility on Arlington Drive.

The event is sponsored by the Greenville-Pitt County Board of Realtors, Make America Better Committee and the Women's Council of Realtors.

RTRF Roster Grows

Membership in the Washington, N.C., based Pamlico-Tar River Foundation, a non-profit organization dedicated to the promotion and protection of the water resources in the Tar-Pamlico river basin, has passed the 1,000 mark, acording to David McNaught, the foundation's executive director.

McNaught said membership had settled just below 300, but in the past 10 months the organization has more than tripled in size.

"What we stand for is something every housewife, every working man, every mother and every father would endorse," McNaught said. "There is nothing unusual about protecting the most valuable asset in our region — a clean and healthy river."

The foundation is growing, McNaught said, "because people realize that the river cannot defend itself against pollution. All of us are responsible and the solutions will demand the awareness and assistance of us all."

He said the foundation "exists to educate ourselves and others to the many subtle ways in which human activities have degraded the quality of waters in eastern North Carolina. As we learn more about the environment and behave more responsibly toward it, we man find the pollution solution."

Orchestras Perform

The Greenville Elementary Beginners Orchestra, directed by JoAnn Moore, and the E.B. Aycock Junior High School Orchestra, directed by Lynn Roberson, will present a spring concert for the third general annual meeting of the Orchestra Boosters Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in the Wahl-Coates School auditorium.

Recipients of Orchestra Boosters scholarships will be awarded during the meeting.

Executive Session

A special call executive session of the Pitt County Board of Education will be held at 7:30 p.m. today.

The meeting, called for the discussion of a legal matter, will be held in the third floor conference room of the Pitt County Office Building, 1717 W. Fifth St.

Committee To Meet

The Greenville Historic Properties Selection Committee will meet on Thursday at 5 p.m. in the third floor conference room of the Community Building located at the corner of Fourth and Greene streets.

EDUCATORS — The Pitt County Association of Educational Office Personnel honored Daniel W. Thomas, controller for Pitt County schools, and Gail R. Skinner, secretary to the superintendent, at its annual Administrators Night held at Farmville Central High School Tuesday night. Falkland Elementary School recently held its annual Science Fair.

Fourth-grade winners were Jeff Randolph, first place; John Moore, second place, and Tori Gray, third place.

First place winner in the fifth grade was Natalie Volkman, while the second place winner was Lee Carraway and third place went to Samantha Register.

Warren Honored

Rep. Ed Warren, D-Pitt, has been honored by the N.C. Superintendents' Legislative Liaison Committee for "meritorious service" to public schools in North Carolina for 1986.

The committee award seeks to honor persons who have supported education issues through their work in the North Carolina General Assembly and elsewhere.

Warren, a former Pitt County high school principal, is chairman of the House Appropriations Base Budget Committee on Education. He also serves as vice chairman of the Appropriations Base Budget and Expansion Budget committees. He serves on the committee on higher education, among others.

Warren, who serves the 9th House District, representing Greene and Pitt counties, has been a member of the House of Representatives since 1981.

This is the first year the awards have been presented by the group, which serves as a liaison between the General Assembly and local school units.

Singer To Perform

Contemporary Christian singer Brian Becker will perform at Immanuel Baptist Church Friday at 7:30 p.m.

The concert is sponsored by Immanuel Baptist and Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church.

The concert will feature songs from Becker's newly released album "Getting in Shape," as well as selections from his other recordings, "Home Again" and "Come Into My Life."

The 23-year-old singer has performed for seven years, singing at churches, youth rallies, school assemblies and church camps throughout the nation.

BRIAN BECKER

Prayer Service Set

Many churches will open for prayer all across America Thursday in response to a proclamation by President Ronald Reagan calling for a National Day of Prayer.

A united prayer service is planned for Greenville area churches at Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church from noon until 1 p.m. on a "come-and-go" basis, said the Rev. J. Malloy Owen III, senior minister.

The Pitt-Greenville Ministerial Association pastors have planned a worship format, which includes a pastor leading a prayer every five minutes. The rest of the time will be spent in silent prayer, he said.

Pastors involved in the service in order of participation are: Owen; Michael Clay, St. Peter's Roman Catholic; Sam Loy, St. James United Methodist; Dexter Wasson, Red Oak Christian; Daniel Naugle, Greenville Bible; Glenn Evans, First Christian; Hugh Burlington, Immanuel Baptist; Earl Woodard, the Salvation Army; John Speight, Jarvis Memorial; William Leary, Winterville Baptist; Daniel Wilkers, First Presbyterian, and David Ralston, Peoples Baptist.

NCDHA President

Barbara S. Hardee was installed recently as the 1987-88 president of the North Carolina Dental Hygienists' Association during the annual meeting at Myrtle Beach, S.C.

A Greenville native, she received a degree in dental hygiene from Guilford Technical Institute, Jamestown, and is a dental hygienist and professional relations manager with D.H. Taylor.

Ms. Hardee serves as a radiology instructor for the Area Health Education Centers, University of North Carolina School of Dentistry, and has coordinated courses for North Carolina Dental Hygiene Academy of Advanced Studies, where she served on the board of directors from 1985-87. She served as president of the Southeastern Dental Hygiene Component and as a member of the American Dental Hygienists' Association.

Choir To Rehearse

The Mass Choir of Progressive Free Will Baptist Church will rehearse Thursday at 7:30 p.m.

Marshals Named

Two local students have been named marshals at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

Carla Snow and Brenda Stanton, both of Greenville, were selected to serve as ushers for the annual commencement program.

North Carolina's first Baptist Conference was organized in Greenville in 1830.

Health Groups Seek Federal Ban On Smoking In Most Workplaces

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two public health groups, claiming the lives of tens of thousands of workers are at stake, today asked the Reagan administration to prohibit smoking on the job in virtually all of the nation's indoor workplaces.

In a petition to the Labor Department's Occupational Safety and Health Administration, the groups said a nationwide federal ban of on-the-job smoking could prevent 3,200 lung cancer deaths a year among non-smokers now exposed to the smoke of co-workers.

"We'll certainly review the request," said Donald Smythe, a Labor Department spokesman.

The petition requesting an immediate "emergency temporary standard" establishing the ban was filed by the American Public Health Association and the Public Citizen Health Research Group, an organization affiliated with consumer activist Ralph Nader.

"This will protect at least 52 million non-smoking Americans who work in over 4.8 million indoor workplaces regulated by OSHA and involuntarily breathe tobacco smoke," the directors of the two groups, both physicians, said in an accompanying letter to OSHA Administrator John A. Pendergrass.

They cited the administration's own restrictions adopted three months ago on smoking by 890,000 federal workers in 6,800 government office buildings around the country as acknowledgment of the hazard.

In addition, the two groups called attention to regulations in 12 states and ordinances in "at least 70 communities" restricting smoking in private workplaces. Those measures, however, don't begin to address the magnitude of the problem, they said.

Photography: Magic To Children

By LOU RENZULLI
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

NEW YORK — In 1901, Jacques Henri Lartigue was given his first camera by his father, a Parisian banker — himself an ardent amateur photographer.

The boy was 7 years old.

Over the next dozen years this child — and then, this youth — took photos to illustrate his diary and incidentally provided us with the finest, most joyous record we have of "La Belle Epoque," that optimistic, nearly mythic period of civilization flowering before World War I clamped down on the West.

Few children are blessed with Jacques Henri's genius — he went on to a 70-year career in painting as well as photography — but every child is possessed of the sense of wonder, of curiosity, the desire to master the world, that led that 7-year-old to write in his diary, "Photography is magic!"

It's hard to tell what triggers a child's interest in taking pictures, but there are few families today without a good camera which Mom or Dad use often on special occasions and vacations. Such snapshots seem to enthrall some youngsters who are quick to ask, "Let me take one!"

When my wife took a pair of 6-year-olds to the New York Aquarium at Coney Island, the little girl was carrying a kind of armor-plated, rubberized 110 Instamatic camera made by Kodak for Fisher-Price, the toy company. It's a real camera, capable of taking clear snapshots, and it's simple to load and use. It sells for around $30 and is a fine starting place for the curious child.

But there's a new way for youngsters to try their hands at photography — the disposable camera. Take your pictures and drop the entire film-camera combination off at the photo shop for prints.

Fuji is selling a green-and-gold box that measures 3¾ by 1½ by 2¼ inches. Into this literal palmful they've put a 35mm cartridge with 24 exposures of their 400-speed Fujicolor negative film, a tiny lens with a spring-loaded shutter that snaps at 1-100th of a second, an f11 opening, a simple viewfinder, plus a dial that automatically shows the number of pictures left. They call it the "Quick Snap," and it's ideal for any child to take along on school field trips and to summer camp. It will sell for about $8.

Kodak will shortly market a similar disposable unit using the smaller, 110-size film. They call it "The Fling," and it should sell for less than $7.

There's another approach that draws children into picture-taking, and that's the fun of seeing a color picture develop in a matter of seconds right before their eyes — the Polaroid "instant-photography" process.

The Polaroid 600 series cameras are basically box cameras with some sophisticated devices to provide good exposure and, in the more expensive models, automatically to focus sharply. The youngest snapshooter might need help loading the film, but otherwise the camera is utterly simple to use. On sale, they start around $20.

Incidentally, if you and your friends use 600-type film, save up the UPC bar symbols from 10 packs and your school will get a free 600 LMS camera from Polaroid. Included with it is an extensive teacher's kit to help get youngsters, from kindergarten through high school, involved in many types of photography projects. For information on the program, write to Bob Goldberg, Polaroid Corp., 784 Memorial Drive, Cambridge, Mass. 02139; ask for Polaroid's "School Kit." Two pieces of simple advice can help get even the youngest tyro off to a good start:

— Always keep your eye pressed very close to the viewing window in the back of the camera. If you don't — if you put the camera up to your eye but keep it an inch or two away from your face, as I've seen many adults do — what you see won't be what you get. Your pet pooch patiently posing might be entirely out of the picture frame or way off to one side.

— If the sun is directly in your eyes and you find yourself squinting, don't take a picture. Think to yourself that the camera also squints when it looks toward the sun, and the photo will be spoiled. The best approach for beginners is to keep the sun at an angle behind you — say, off your left or right shoulder. That way your big sister with a new bike won't be looking into the sun as you take her picture (in return for a ride), as she would if the sun were behind you and the camera.

But what's a good next step to move past the simple-camera stage for somewhat older children? It's really the same dilemma that faces adults who feel they've outgrown the modern equivalent of the old Kodak Box Brownie.

One path leads to a better 35mm camera that still requires no skill to operate — the extremely popular "point-and-shoot" models made by all the famous camera manufacturers, Nikon, Canon, Minolta, Pentax, Ricoh, etc., and selling for $90 on up ... and up. Many of them autoload, autofocus and autoexpose — all you do is drop in a film cartridge.

In addition to having great appeal for a boy or girl who has shown a growing interest in photography, these are ideal all-occasion family cameras. One of them would be a splendid gift for a youngster graduating from grammar school.

But that path has a built-in dead end. Point-and-shoot cameras do well what they do — take clear, sharp photos under a variety of lighting conditions indoors and out — but they can't take extreme close-ups or use real telephoto or wide-angle lenses or freeze very fast sports action. And those capabilities lead to wonderful new photographic worlds.

The other path is to the unlimited flexibility of the single-lens reflex camera. A responsible teen-ager, say, one graduating from middle school or junior high, will have a lifetime of picture possibilities ahead with an SLR.

Among the latest models that are simple to use but whose features can grow with the youngster are the Olympus OM-77AF and the Pentax SF1, each with swiftly autofocusing, interchangeable lenses and automatic, built-in flash units. They sell for around $350; another autofocuser, the Minolta 5000, costs somewhat less. But if that's too rich a gift for even, say, a favorite grandchild, other SLRs that require you to focus manually start at around $180 — there are several in the $200 range.

And there's one more choice for the Mom or Dad who already owns an SLR and perhaps a couple of lenses for it. Most manufacturers offer cheaper models with fewer features in the same line as you now own, so you can buy one of the less-expensive camera bodies without a lens for $100 or so, and share lenses (and shooting expeditions) with your budding photographer.

For beginners of any ace, Kodak offers many pamphlets filled with basic information. Write to Eastman Kodak Co., Dept 412-L, Rochester, N.Y., 14650, and ask for a catalog of photo publications. They're free. For youngsters especially, the price is right. So, for the Henri or Henrietta of the '80s, go to it.

Abby Applauds Single's Attitude

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a 26-year-old single, attractive woman who is not presently involved in a serious relationship because I haven't met a man who possesses the qualities I want in a husband.

I don't expect to find Mr. Perfect, because I am not Miss Perfect, but I am tired of hearing that after a woman reaches 25, her chances of finding a mate are greatly reduced because "all the good ones are taken."

Well, I am a "good one," and I am not taken, and I refuse to settle for a man who doesn't meet my standards just so I can say, "I have a man."

I know that I possess the qualities that someone out there is looking for, but he hasn't met me yet. — SINGLE AND HAPPY

DEAR SINGLE AND HAPPY: Hooray for you. I applaud your attitude. I can't imagine anything more depressing than waking up every morning (or worse, going to sleep) with a man I neither loved, admired, respected nor needed, but for whom I "settled" rather than live alone.

DEAR ABBY: Our son's lover recently died of AIDS. He and "John" had been together for more than 10 years. Our son is devastated, and plans to visit us for a family reunion soon.

Here's the problem: We never wanted to let the rest of our family know that John is gay. John says that he is not about to sit down with his family and pretend that life is just beautiful after having gone through the most painful and tragic year of his life, and if he can't be open and honest with his own family, he refuses to come home.

Abby, we love our son, but don't want the embarrassment and hysteria that this situation could bring. What do we do? — EMOTIONALLY TORN

DEAR TORN: Tell John that you want him to come home — that you don't expect him to pretend that "life is beautiful" considering the pain he has endured the last year. But you see no good purpose served by his coming out of the closet to the rest of the family who, until now, did not know that he was gay.

The decision, of course, is John's. For him to insist that the entire family be informed that he is gay, even though it may cause his immediate family members "embarrassment and hysteria," is insensitive and inconsiderate. But make him welcome anyway.

DEAR ABBY: My wife, who is approaching 40 and in reasonably good health, has recently announced that she has no more interest in sex, and we have stopped all sexual relations. Obviously I am not very pleased with this situation and have conveyed that to her in no uncertain terms. However, she has indicated that that's the way it is — and I had better learn to live with it.

I don't believe my wife is seeing anyone else; she's just decided that she can live wihout sex. However, I can't, and I would like to know whether this is normal for a woman her age, and what do you recommend I do? I would appreciate an early response, as I am ... FRUSTRATED IN DOWNERS GROVE

DEAR FRUSTRATED: If ever a couple needed a therapist, you do. It is not normal. Why did your wife decide that there would be no more sexual relations? Has she lost the desire? Or is she punishing you for something? Knowing that you are not pleased with the situation but announcing that you had better learn to live with it indicates a less than loving attitude.

Bridal Policy

A black and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements in The Daily Reflector. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a one column picture. During the second week, a one column picture will be used with a write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement.

Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to The Daily Reflector one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

Awards Presented At Sorority Founder's Day

Founder's Day of Beta Sigma Phi Sorority was celebrated by Eta Delta and Xi Gamma Xi chapters at a luncheon Saturday. Awards were presented and yearly highlights were given.

Linda Patterson received Eta Delta's woman of the year award while Georgia Potter was named Xi Gamma Xi's woman of the year. Audrey Harsany presented Mrs. Patterson a gift from the chapter and Mrs. Potter received a similar gift from Rosalie Trotman.

Harriett Griffin was named Eta Delta's pledge of the year. Having best programs throughout the year were Carolyn Powell, Xi Gamma Xi, and Mary Jo Nason, Eta Delta. Programs given by non-members for Eta Delta were a fashion show arranged by Betty Womack and one on basket weaving presented by Mrs. Patterson.

Eta Delta members having perfect attendance were Paula Scholtens, Susan Deans, Mrs. Harsany, Mrs. Patterson and Linda Bradford. Xi Gamma members receiving perfect attendance were Mrs. Trotman, Sharon Smith, Mrs. Powell, Mrs. Potter and Sandra Everett. The awards were presented by Mrs. Scholtens and Mrs. Potter.

Yearly highlights of the chapters were given by Linda Bradford, Eta Delta, and Kay Smith, Xi Gamma Xi.

Mrs. Powell was awarded a silver certificate from Xi Gamma Xi and recognized for being a sorority members for 25 years.

Eta Delta will give $1,200 to the Children's Hospital of Eastern Carolina. The check presentation will take place May 31.

Fran Rostar, incoming president of Xi Gamma Xi, announced the national sorority theme "Build Bridges of Friendship" for 1987-88. "Share the Dream" was the 1986-87 theme.

Teacher Under Fire For Giving Low Grades

By GEORGE ESPER
AP Special Correspondent

PARKERSBURG, W.Va. (AP) — Science teacher Larry Brown, given failing marks by parents and superiors for handing eighth-graders too many Ds and Fs, is awaiting a state ruling on whether he can be forced to award more As, Bs and Cs.

Brown's detractors, who include other teachers, say he teaches over the heads of his earth science students and uses big words they can't understand.

Brown says he gives so many Ds, for poor work, and Fs, for failing work, because most students aren't doing assignments and therefore are scoring poorly on tests and quizzes. On one recent assignment, he said, only four students in a class of 18 turned in their papers and only one of those was complete.

"Parents and administrators want the students to have good grades but students and parents don't want students working for those good grades," Brown said. "When we assign a (high) grade to work when it's not up to standard, that's lowering the quality."

Brown filed a grievance with the state in May 1986 after Steve Summers, principal of Blennerhassett Junior High School, gave him an evaluation saying he'd failed to properly monitor his students' progress. In a written "improvement plan," Summers told the teacher he had to either "change his expectations of students or lower grade scales ... to be more in line with other teachers" of same level courses.

A hearing on Brown's grievance was held in January, and a ruling by the examiner is expected to be announced this week.

Besides upsetting students and parents in this largely rural, mostly middle class school district, the grading dispute, now 18 months old, has also raised broader issues — whether Brown's grades reflect poor teaching methods and whether school standards would fall if he were forced to give higher marks.

Summers said Blennerhassett routinely groups students according to ability — above average, average and below average — so they enjoy some success in class. Brown teaches five average level classes and one below average. His classes total 110 students.

In the first two six-week grading periods, from last September to December, Brown gave half his students Ds and Fs. In the third and fourth periods this year, the percentage rose as high as 65, and Brown gave no As. Summers wants him to limit the Ds and Fs to no more than 25 percent of the students.

"I'm not arbitrarily assigning grades," Brown said. "I don't think it's fair to inflate grades. I believe that's shortchanging the students."

Summers said he was not advocating low standards but argued that it was not enough for Brown merely to set high standards.

"If you set standards for someone, it becomes your job to help them reach those standards," he said.

In February, 27 of the 39 teachers at the school signed a letter to the editor of The Parkersburg News saying that, contrary to inferences in prior news stories and editorials, Summers had never encouraged them to lower their standards.

" ... We believe teachers and students have a joint responsibility for learning," the letter said. "Student achievement is directly related to instructional practices. ... If an unusual number of students continue at an unsatisfactory level over an extended time, it becomes quite likely that students are not learning because the instructional practices of the teacher are not meeting the needs of learners."

But one veteran instructor, Charles Keitch, 63, who teaches just across the hall from Brown, says Brown tries awfully hard with his classes.

"I'm sure no one's found fault with the quality of instruction," Keitch said. "Larry refuses to compromise. I think it's more a clash of wills than anything else. I feel the school has compromised its position in that they let the public get into this situation so much."

Fourteen-year-old Angie Weekley said she earned Cs or better in other classes, but had received a D and an F from Brown, even though she studies 90 minutes for his tests compared to 15 minutes for other classes.

"He teaches above our capability of what we can do," she said.

Julie Penn, 14, who's been getting straight Ds, said she didn't study that much and that her grades in other classes weren't all that good. She said she could follow Brown's lectures and that the homework he assigned was about the right amount.

Her mother, Janet Penn, said she was satisfied with Brown's explanation of his teaching methods.

"It looks to me like if they studied they would make good grades," she said.

Becky Camp, 14, who gets Bs and Cs from Brown, said she was sometimes unable to understand the classroom instruction and that Brown gave too much homework.

"He uses a lot of big words," she said. "You don't know what he's talking about. I don't do that good on tests, but I do all my homework. Usually if you do all your homework you can get a good grade."

Brown said he typically assigned 15 to 30 minutes of homework every school night except Friday.

Couple Marries In Saturday Ceremony

Debra Teel Moore and James Carl Hillard were united in marriage Saturday at 1 p.m. in The Memorial Baptist Church. The double ring ceremony was conducted by the Rev. E.T. Vinson of Greenville and Dr. R.L. Davis of Farmville.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. John Richard Teel Sr. of Greenville and Mrs. James Critz Hillard of Farmville and the late Mr. Hillard.

Music was presented by organist Joe Goodwin and vocalist Susie Pair.

Susan Sabate was matron of honor. Bridesmaids included Jerri Simmons, sister of the bride, Jo Teel, sister-in-law of the bride, and Lisa Laughinghouse all of Greenville, and Barbara Drake of Farmville.

The best man was Al Drake of Farmville. Ushers included John Teel, brother of the bride, Buzz Sawyer and Robbie Pinner, all of Greenville, and Robert Tamblyn of Goldsboro.

Given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, the bride wore a floor length gown with a chapel train of bridal satin and re-embroidered alencon lace. The fitted bodice featured a Victorian neckline with an illusion yoke, Victorian long sleeves and basque waist. Re-embroidered alencon lace embellished with seed pearls and sequins appliqued the bodice and sleeves. The floor length sheath skirt was accented with garlands of re-embroidered alencon lace bordering the side slit and hemline of the gown. The train was accented with scattered beaded lace motifs and bordered with scalloped re-embroidered alencon lace. She wore a tiered veil of illusion with a hand-rolled edge attached to a wreath of lace petals, silk flowers and pearl sprays accented with cascading lace petals and pearl sprays. She carried a cascading bouquet of dendrobium orchids, white roses, stephanotis, lavender roses, baby's breath and white satin streamers.

The attendants wore fuschia tea length gowns of polyester crepe styled with a boat neckline and three-quarter length sleeves. The fitted waist was accented with a wrap around skirt with rosette enclosure. Each carried a bouquet of pale yellow freesia, variegated lavender mini carnations, white lilies, ecucalyptus and baby's breath with white satin streamers.

The mother of the bride wore a floor length lavender chiffon dress. The mother of the bridegroom wore a floor length aqua and white chiffon dress. Both had corsages of cymbidium orchids and baby's breath.

Kathryn Vinson directed the wedding.

A reception was held at the Greenville Country Club. Taffy Tamblyn of Goldsboro presided at the register.

The mother of the bridegroom gave a rehearsal dinner at the Sheraton-Greenville Friday night. Miscellaneous and lingerie showers were given for the bride and a cocktail party was given for the couple.

MRS. HILLARD

The bride is employed by Wachovia Bank and Trust Co. The bridegroom is general manager of Creative Leasing Services.

The couple will live in Winterville after a wedding trip to Bermuda.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market headed higher today, extending Tuesday's strong rally.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 5.82 to 2,343.89 in the first half hour of trading.

Gainers outnumbered losers by slightly less than 3 to 2 in the overall tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 619 up, 422 down and 477 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 29.35 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

Among actively traded blue chips, International Business Machines gained ½ to 167⅜; Ford Motor ⅞ to 98¼, and American Telephone & Telegraph ¼ to 25¼.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks rose .40 to 166.74. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .96 at 329.25.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average jumped 51.85 to 2,338.07, for its fourth largest point gain on record.

Gainers outpaced losers by nearly 3 to 1 on the NYSE. Big Board volume totaled 192.29 million shares, against 140.61 million in the previous session.

Hart Defends Action

to support Hart for president. But 28 percent said it had no effect and 10 percent said they were now more likely to support him.

Hart was to travel to New Hampshire today, where he scheduled a news conference to try to answer questions remaining about the controversy and to hear firsthand from voters. However, he canceled scheduled appearances Thursday night and Friday to fly home Thursday to Denver, "where he will spend time with his family," said an announcement issued by his campaign staff.

The story linking Hart to 29-year-old Donna Rice of Miami "deserves a big yawn" and probably will get that from New Hampshire voters, said George Bruno of Manchester, N.H., immediate past chairman of the state Democratic Party.

"I get the sense that not too many people here are paying much attention to 1988 yet," he said.

From Iowa, which holds the first caucuses in 1988, Democratic Chairwoman Bonnie Campbell said she was disappointed by the televised speech.

"I had hoped he would offer some definitive explanation that would be plausible," she said. "I don't think he did anything to allay the doubts raised by the Miami Herald story. He didn't clarify things."

The Herald story said the 50-year-old candidate and Rice, an actress, model and pharmaceutical saleswoman, spent Friday night and most of Saturday together at his townhouse while his wife, Lee, was in Denver.

The Herald had assigned reporters to stake out Hart's house Friday and Saturday after an anonymous tip, but admitted Monday that entrances were unwatched for up to five hours.

Rice and Hart's aides said the woman did not spend the night at Hart's townhouse, but at the nearby home of Hart's friend, William Broadhurst. Rice, in an interview Monday, also denied that she had sex with Hart.

Hart told the publishers that the Herald story was plain wrong: "Last weekend, a newspaper published a misleading and false story that hurt my family and other innocent people and reflected badly on my character.

"This story was written by reporters who by their own admission undertook a spotty surveillance, reached inaccurate conclusions based on incomplete facts, who after publishing a false story now concede they may have gotten it wrong; and who, most outrageously, refused to interview the very people who could have given them the facts before filing their story which we asked and urged them to do."

He said Broadhurst contacted the Herald reporters Saturday night and offered them "all the facts. And the response was, we will come over and talk to you after we've filed our story."

Hearing Restored By Surgery

The cochlear implant provides a sense of hearing by stimulating the auditory nerves with electrical signals the brain interprets as sound. The device is different from a hearing aid, which delivers amplified sound to the outer ear.

The cochlear implant consists of a microphone, signal processor, and transmitter worn outside the body and an internal receiver which is surgically implanted. Bosts explained how the system works: a tiny microphone picks up sound waves, converts them to electrical impulses, and send them to a signal processor tucked in the user's pocket or worn on a belt. The processor amplifies this electrical energy from the microphone and sends it to the external transmitter located above and behind the ear. The transmitter changes the electricity into magnetic signals and routes them directly through the skin to an implanted internal receiver. From the receiver, the signal tranvels to the cochlea via an implanted wire electrode. Current flowing between this active electrode and a nearby ground electrode stimulate nerve fibers which the brain interprets as sound.

The implant surgery is for profoundly deaf people, Bost said. According to FDA regulations, implant candidates must be 18 years or older, have no chronic ear infection and must be post-lingually deaf, meaning they learned to talk before they lost their hearing.

Bost said post-lingually deaf adults have a better chance at a successful implant because they can lip read and can be expected to recognize sounds they learned before they became deaf. Because the implant recipient does not hear the sounds in the same manner as a hearing person, it is extremely important that the recipient have those past hearing experiences, he said. The implant success rate for post-lingually deaf adults was 86 percent in 1985, while the success rate for people who were born deaf or who became deaf before learning to talk was only 14 percent.

The implant does not provide normal hearing, Bost said. It does enable previously totally deaf people to hear voices, telephones, warning sirens, door bells, and other significant sounds. Its recipients report that it improves their ability to read lips. In addition, many recipients report that they can maintain better control over the volume and pitch of their voices, because they can hear themselves talk.

The implant system is based on the developmental work of Dr. William F. House of the House Ear Institute in Los Angeles. Bosts and other members of his staff received training in the surgery and post-operative treatment at the House Institute.

The surgery lasts from one to two hours and requires an overnight hospital stay. Following a two-month healing period, the patient receives the external components of the system and spends 20 to 25 hours with an audiologist, learning the use the implant.

Total cost of the implant system and the surgery ranges from $10,000 to $12,000, according to Bost. He said Medicare and most private insurers cover cochlear implant surgery. Mrs. Allcox had considered implant surgery several years ago, but the procedure was not covered by insurance at that time. In October 1986, Medicare coverage was extended to the implant device and surgery.

Legislators Feted

it does is it lets the people in Pitt County see the legislators one on one and express their concerns, and also the legislators appreciate them coming all the way up.

"I'm just so excited about it because it means so much to our delegation because it shows so much interest and concern in our county. It helps me and others up here (when) you need funds or you need things done you can talk to these people and they know where you're coming from."

Rep. Gene Rogers, D-Williamston, said lawmakers will appreciate efforts made by the county.

"The legislators will remember this. It will not go unnoticed," Roger said. "It's a very casual and subtle affair, but they remember we have receptions like this for them, and if a request comes through it is bound to have an impact on the Legislature.

"Legislators have something like this almost every night, but they remember, really and truly, they remember. It's not so much the food and the drink, it's the contact they make with the people back home. It's the impression they get."

Meanwhile, the reception serves more than a social purpose, according to one lawmaker from the other end of the state.

"It's very helpful to meet the different people from different areas because you get to find out one on one their problems and situations," Rep. Ivan Mothershead, R. Mecklenburg.

"The whole state is one big family in some respects. You would hope that the people of Pitt County would see that we're interested in their problems and hope that they'd be interested in our problems, too, in Mecklenburg County. That's the reason these things are fun, but they also serve a very important function, and everybody gets to meet the people behind the bills."

Others said they had looked forward to seeing old friends.

"I've been connected with eastern Carolina for a long time through the higher education committee," said Sen. Paul Smith, R-Rowan. "I've been here since 1980, and I've been on the higher education committee ever since. I've thoroughly enjoyed meeting these folks."

"It's always a pleasure to see them," said Sen. Kenneth Royall, D-Durham. "I grew up in Goldsboro early in my life ... way back about 50 years ago. I never have forgotten eastern North carolina and I never will."

Plan

anyone else. We'll make a decision then good or bad. Eventually they could take it to Washington (for U.S. Justice Department approval). We'll do what we think is right and fair."

Pitt County Commissioners asked the N.C. General Assembly to change the method of election, which requires Justice Department approval before it can go into effect.

Meanwhile, Sen. Tom Taft, D-Pitt, said members of the delegation are carefully reviewing the plan.

"I think it's an important issue," Taft said. "The delegation is sensitive to the various opinions that people have, and we're trying to deal with that in an intelligent way right now."

Tax

sented to both bodies for approval, the ordinance said.

The occupany tax can only be repealed by a joint resolution of the city and county, according to the act.

Suit

said Morton Thiokol ignored a history of problems with the rocket joints and warnings by its own engineers "for the sole purpose of protecting its monopoly in the supply of SRB's (solid rocket boosters) to NASA and its very lucrative SRB contract with NASA, a business interest which was worth billions of dollars to Thiokol."

In addition to the rocket builder, the defendants are the United States and Lawrence B. Mulloy, who had been manager of NASA's solid rocket booster program at the Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala.

The families of teacher Christa McAuliffe and three of the other astronauts killed in the explosion accepted confidential financial settlements from NASA and Morton Thiokol in December. The amount, not announced, was reported to be more than $1 million per family. The father of astronaut Ron McNair has filed suit against Thiokol, asking unspecified damages.

Smith is survived by his wife; his 17-year-old son, Scott, and daughters Alison, 14, and Erin, 8.

No Contest

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — A teacher's aide at Lowrance Middle School who was charged with taking indecent liberties with a minor has pleaded no contest to the less serious charge of assault on a female.

Oscar D. LeGrant Jr., 26, entered the plea after the trial already had started on the indecent liberties charge. Judge Robert D. Collier of Forsyth County Superior Court accepted the plea but he entered a prayer for judgment continued, which means there is no sentence given in the case.

Obituaries

Brown

Miss Sarah Ann Brown, 80, of 1204 S. Wright Road died Tuesday in Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Her graveside funeral will be conducted at 2:30 p.m. Thursday in Greenwood Cemetery by the Rev. J. Malloy Owen III.

An Edgecombe County native, she spent most of her life in Pitt County. She taught at A.G. Cox Elementary School in Winterville for 35 years and at Black Creek Elementary School. She was a member of Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church.

The family will receive friends at the Wilkerson Funeral Home from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. today, and at other times will be at the home of a niece, Mrs. Ruth Braddy, 2802 Edwards St.

Daniels

Mr. Linwood Daniels, 47, of Route 11, Greenville, died Tuesday in Pitt County Memorial Hospital. Arrangements will be announced by Hardee's Funeral Home.

Manning

A funeral for Ms. Belinda Manning will be conducted at 2:30 p.m. Thursday in Phillips Brothers Mortuary Chapel by the Rev. Douglas Allen. Burial will be in Brown Hill Cemetery.

Surviving is a daughter, Mrs. Hattie Fleming of Greenville.

The family will receive friends today from 7 p.m. to 8 p.m., and at other times will be at 603 Gum Road.

Correction

The name of Pitt County Board of Education member Donovan Phillips was omitted from a vote on the capital outlay budget at Monday's meeting. Phillips voted against the capital outlay budget.

This is the way most people look at funeral prearrangement.

Granted, it isn't the cheeriest of subjects. But, considering the benefits it offers, funeral prearrangement does merit just a little attention.

The puzzling thing is why so many people carefully avoid even thinking about it. The fact is, prearrangement takes very little time. Moreover, funeral prearrangement makes matters infinitely more simple for family and friends in the long run. And ultimately, it's your responsibility—yours alone.

So take off your blinders. Call us at S.G. Wilkerson & Sons to arrange a private consultation.

Bell Pitches Near No-Hitter

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

Baltimore rookie Eric Bell lost his no-hitter in the ninth inning. At least he didn't lose the game.

Bell took a five-run lead into the final inning, but Tom Nieto's bloop single started a four-run rally and it took five Orioles pitchers to hold off the Minnesota Twins 5-4 Tuesday night.

"I came out for the ninth inning and I felt real comfortable," the 23-year-old left-hander said. "Later in the dugout, all I could think of was win, win, win."

In other American League games it was California 2, Milwaukee 0; Chicago 2, New York 0; Boston 6, Oakland 0; Seattle 7, Detroit 5; Kansas City 6, Toronto 4, and Texas 6, Cleveland 5 in 10 innings.

Bell, 3-1, had allowed only one baserunner in eight innings, a fourth-inning walk to Steve Lombardozzi, and was trying to become the first rookie to pitch a no-hitter since Oakland's Mike Warren against Chicago on Sept. 29, 1983, and the first pitcher to throw a no-hitter at the Minnesota's Metrodome, a hitters' paradise.

Instead, Bell became the ninth Baltimore pitcher to lose a no-hitter in the ninth inning.

Greg Gagne led off the ninth by reaching on shorstop Cal Ripken Jr.'s error and Nieto followed with a bloop single to left field. Ken Gerhart got a late break on the ball and had to play it on the short hop.

"We were playing the guy (Nieto) to go the other way, and then he hit the ball off the end of the bat," Gerhart said. "I thought I had a shot at it. After the game, I said (to Bell), 'I'm sorry,' but he said, 'There wasn't anything you could do about it.'"

Said Bell: "I had a feeling it was going to drop in. If he caught it, it would have been a real good catch."

One out after Nieto's hit, Lombardozzi got an RBI single through the middle. That finished Bell, who struck out seven, and brought on Dave Schmidt. Kirby Puckett hit a three-run homer off Schmidt that made it 5-4 and Gary Gaetti followed with a single.

Reliever Mike Kinnunen yielded a single to Kent Hrbek and Mark Williamson got the second out before intentionally walking pinch-hitter Randy Bush to load the bases. Ken Dixon then retired pinch-hitter Roy Smalley on a foul popup for his first save.

Jim Dwyer put Baltimore ahead with a two-run homer in the third off Mike Smithson, 3-2. Eddie Murray hit a solo homer and Terry Kennedy had an RBI double in the sixth, and John Shelby singled home a run in the ninth.

Murray, batting just .180 entering the game, hit a homer, double and single in five at-bats as the Orioles ended a four-game losing streak.

Angels 2, Brewers 0

Don Sutton pitched two-hit ball for seven innings and moved into 14th place on the all-time win list with his 312th victory as California beat Milwaukee.

Brian Downing and Jack Howell homered in handing the Brewers' their first loss at home in 10 games this season. Milwaukee, which has lost two straight games for the first time this year, leads the major leagues with a 20-5 record.

Sutton, 2-3, moved past Tom Seaver and Mickey Welch on the all-time victory list and is one behind Phil Niekro. Donnie Moore finished with two-hit relief for his fourth save.

Bill Wegman, 2-2, lost despite pitching a three-hitter.

White Sox 2, Yankees 0

Bill Long, stuck in the minor leagues since August 1985, pitched a two-hitter in outdueling Joe Niekro as Chicago beat visiting New York.

Long allowed a pair of singles to Dan Pasqua. Long struck out five, walked none and retired 17 straight batters at one stretch.

Niekro, 1-2, also pitched a two-hitter. He gave up RBI singles to Gary Redus and Ron Hassey in the third inning.

Red Sox 6, Athletics 0

Bruce Hurst pitched a five-hitter and struck out a career-high 14, leading Boston over Oakland.

Hurst, 3-3, ended his three-game losing streak. He walked two.

Royals 6, Blue Jays 4

Danny Tartabull drove in three runs and Kansas City ended Toronto's six-game winning string.

Charlie Leibrandt, 4-1, got the victory and Jerry Don Gleaton picked up his first save.

The host Royals scored five times in the second inning against Joe Johnson, 1-3. Tartabull hit a two-run single and Steve Balboni and Angel Salazar had RBI singles. Balboni's hit ended an 0-for-31 slump.

Mariners 7, Tigers 5

Rey Quinones hit a two-run homer off Detroit reliever Willie Hernandez in the ninth inning, giving Seattle its victory over Detroit.

Jeff Robinson, 1-2, walked Jim Presley to start the ninth. Hernandez, making his first appearance since going on the disabled list April 9, retired two batters before Quinones connected.

Stan Clarke won his first decision of the season and Edwin Nunez got his sixth save. Mike Kingery also hit a two-run homer for the visiting Mariners.

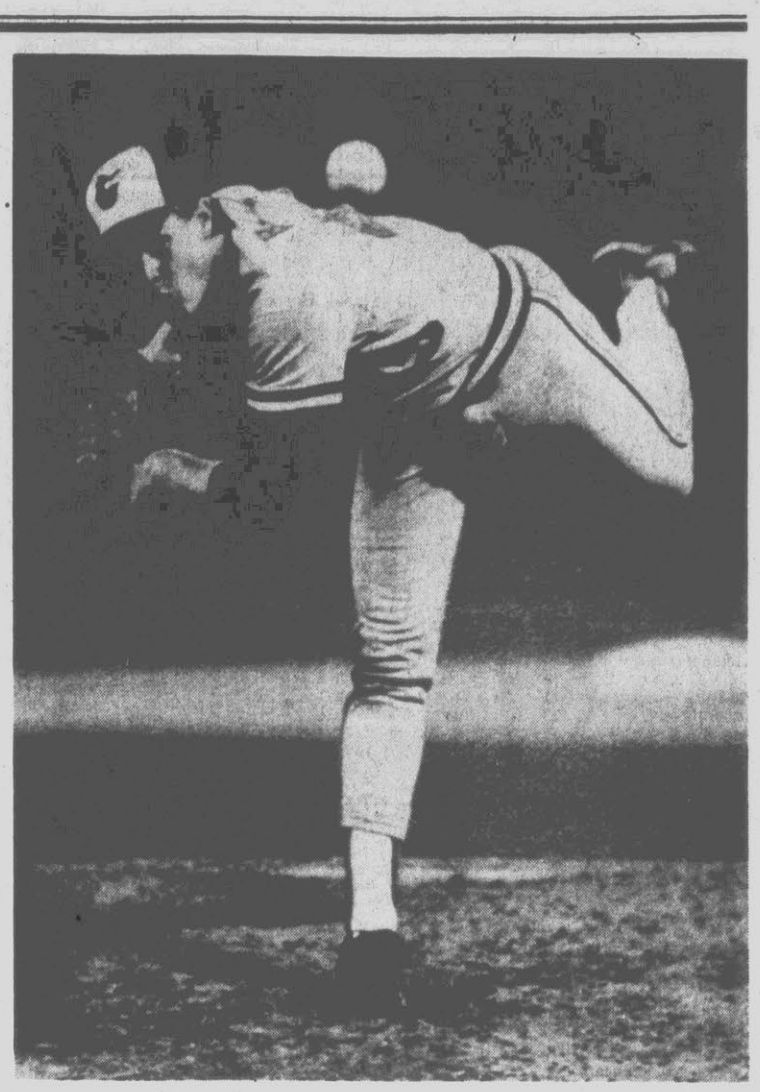
Rangers 6, Indians 5

Curtis Wilkerson singled home the winning run in the 10th inning as Texas beat visiting Cleveland.

The Rangers scored four runs in the ninth for a 5-5 tie, and then won it in the 10th when Wilkerson singled after Frank Wills, 0-1, walked Pete Incaviglia and Larry Parrish. It was the first RBI of the season for Wilkerson, who has been replaced by Scott Fletcher as Texas' shortstop.

Indians starter Greg Swindell took a 5-1 lead into the ninth but walked Incaviglia and threw two balls to Ruben Sierra. Ernie Camacho gave up a triple to Sierra and an RBI single to Parrish, who homered earlier. Jerry Browne's two-run single off Steve Carlton tied it.

Mitch Williams, 3-2, got the victory as Texas ended a three-game losing string.



Big Night For Bell

Baltimore Oriole pitcher Eric Bell fires a pitch in the seventh inning against the Minnesota Twins. Bell had a no-hitter through eight innings before giving up two hits in the ninth and being relieved. Baltimore hung on to win, 5-4. (AP Laserphoto)

Bill Asks Big Four Play ECU

RALEIGH — Rep. Ed Warren, D-Pitt, has co-sponsored a bill in the N.C. General Assembly that would require all of the state's Division 1-A schools to meet on the gridiron by the 1990 football season.

The Division 1-A football schedule bill, which was introduced to the House of Representatives by Rep. Edward Redwine, D-Brunswick, Tuesday, would require all Division I institutions of higher education that receive state funds from North Carolina schedule to play each other, Warren said.

"We already have the big four, but we'd like to see it become the big five," Warren said.

The natural rivalries existing between the teams should provide enjoyable competition, according to the bill, which would require Duke University, Wake Forest University, N.C. State University, and the University of North Carolina to schedule games against East Carolina University.

"College sports activities are important to the college's alumni and to the citizens of North Carolina, and football is a sport that North Carolina citizens enjoy," the bill said.

"North Carolina holds a tradition of excellent competition between the Atlantic Coast Conference and the Division 1-A schools," the bill said. "The rivalry generated between enighboring schools enhances attendence and promotes ticket sales, thereby, attracting many athletes."

SuperSonics Surprising Themselves With Victories

By The Associated Press

How surprising have the Seattle SuperSonics been in the NBA playoffs? Enough to have stunned even themselves.

The Sonics have made everyone take notice with their romp through two of the league's Texas teams. After upsetting the Dallas Mavericks in the first round, Seattle grabbed a 2-0 lead in a Western Conference semifinal series with Houston by beating the Rockets 99-97 Tuesday night.

"It was unlikely for us to even be in the playoffs, much less beat the Rockets twice at home," guard Dale Ellis said after his 30 points, including two crucial baskets down the stretch, lifted Seattle to its fifth consecutive postseason victory. The Sonics were 39-43 during the season.

"We had just hoped to come down here and steal one game," said Tom Chambers, whose free throw with eight seconds to go provided the final margin. "If I were a betting man, I wouldn't say we would come in here and win two straight. Both games were close and could have gone either way."

But just about everything has gone Seattle's way in these playoffs, which resume for the Sonics and Houston on Thursday night in Seattle. Game 4 will be there Saturday afternoon.

The only recent setback for the team came when Ellis and teammate Kevin Williams were arrested early Sunday following an altercation at a night club. Ellis said he expected more jeering from Houston fans.

"I was disappointed," Ellis said. "I expected more. There are some real comedians here."

In other games, the Los Angeles Lakers set an NBA record with 49 points in the third quarter in a 125-116 victory over Golden State; Boston whipped Milwaukee 111-98, and Atlanta downed Detroit 115-102.

The Bucks and Celtics play Game 2 of their series tonight.

SuperSonics 99, Rockets 97

The Rockets came back from a four-point halftime deficit, outscoring the Sonics 31-18 in the third period. But Ellis, who had 20 points at halftime and has 160 points in the Sonics' five-game winning streak, Xavier McDaniel and Eddie Johnson led them back. McDaniel finished with 22 points.

The Rockets went scoreless in the final 2:05 of the game after a layup by Allen Leavell gave them a 97-94 lead.

Only one team has ever climbed out of the kind of hole the Rockets find themselves in — the 1969 Lakers.

"We are putting dirt in our own faces. We're either through or just starting," Houston Coach Bill Fitch said.

"We have a lot of guys that nobody wanted and they've been winning as a group," Seattle Coach Bernie Bickerstaff said. "Dale is playing great, we all know that. But the other guys are setting screens for him to get him open."

Akeem Olajuwon led Houston with 27 points, including 20 in the second half. Ralph Sampson finished with 25 points and both he and Olajuwon had 13 rebounds.

Lakers 125, Warriors 116

Trailing by seven points at halftime, Los Angeles had what Coach Pat Riley called "one of the best quarters for 12 minutes of sustained action that we've ever had with the Lakers."

With their transition game in high gear, the Lakers scored 29 points over the final 6:06 of the period and broke the game open.

The 49 points was the most ever scored in the third quarter of an NBA playoff game, breaking the mark of 47 set by Milwaukee in 1970 and matched by the Lakers in 1984.

In the quarter, James Worthy scored 18 of his 28 points, with Michael Cooper adding 13, including three three-point baskets. Magic Johnson added 11 points in the period and had 25 points, 14 assists and 12 rebounds overall.

The Lakers made 17-of-21 shots from the field (80.9 percent) in the record quarter.

"It's hard for any team to stop us when we're playing like that," Magic Johnson said. "We were on top of our game at that point."

"That was the most beautiful basketball I've ever seen," Golden State Coach George Karl said. "I really don't think we lost our composure. They were just playing so well."

Joe Barry Carroll, who had 20 points at halftime, finished with 22 to lead the Warriors.

Celtics 111, Bucks 98

Larry Bird scored 40 points, making up for the absence of All-Star forward Kevin McHale, who is out with an ankle injury.

It was a season-high eighth straight victory for Boston, which never trailed. The Celtics' 13th consecutive home playoff victory moved them within one of the league record set by the 1949-51 Minneapolis Lakers.

Bird got help from Robert Parish with 22 points and Dennis Johnson with 20.

Vandiford's Bat, Arm Help Farmville Defeat Aycock

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

FARMVILLE — Mike Vandiford played the role of life-saver for Farmville, notching the game-winning RBI and pitching the seventh in relief to give the Jaguars a 4-2 win over C.B. Aycock in high school baseball action Tuesday.

"Vandiford came through," said Jaguar coach Bill Davis. "That gave everybody the boost we needed. We've been in that situation many times (but) this time we executed the plays we needed to."

Farmville trailed 2-1 heading into the bottom of the sixth and had gone hitless since the third inning but George Burnette opened the sixth with a single and stole second. Shea Terrell followed with a reach on an error and both moved up on a sacrifice bunt by Gary Baker.

After one out, Vandiford, the designated hitter, ripped a single into right field to score Burnette and Billy Barnhill, who was running for Terrell. Vandiford went to second on the resulting throw home. He then stole third and came home when the catcher overthrew the third baseman and the ball went into the outfield.

Alexander Daniels, who had gone six strong innings giving up four hits, opened the seventh and got the first out on a ground-out. He then gave up a walk and a single and was replaced by Vandiford, who then struck out the first batter he faced.

Following that, Mark Casey reached on an error to load the bases but then Greg Chase grounded out to third to end the game and give the Jaguars the win.

"Daniels threw the ball extremely well today," Davis said. "We made the plays behind him. I'm just excited for the boys. I think it was a good team effort. That bunt we laid down was big play. We made the plays at the right time."

Excuse Davis for being a little excited, but wins have not come easily for this young Jaguar team, now 5-10 overall and 3-5 in the Eastern Plains Conference.

"We've been capable of playing like this," Davis said. "(But) I just can't put my finger on it. We've had our share of bad ball games. We executed well (today). We made the plays we had to. The boys were aggressive. They were hungry today."

Aycock jumped on top first, scoring one run in the first.

Benny Miller led off with a reach off an error, went to second on a ground out and third on Michael Odom's single. Greg Chase then drove him home on a fielder's choice.

The Jaguars knotted the score in the third when Daniels opened with a reach on an infield single. Brian Huber followed with a fielder's choice that put out courtesy runner Chris Ross. George Burnette then singled home Huber.

Aycock went ahead again in the fourth when Chase opened the inning with a double and went to third on a wild pitch. Brian Johnson followed with a single to drive him home and make it 2-1.

Aycock falls to 9-7 overall and 4-4 in the EPC.

Firestone Wrecks

Race driver Dennis Firestone hits the fourth turn wall at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway Tuesday. Firestone went low in turn four, slid 600 feet, hit the outside wall (top) and slid along the wall for 80 feet (bottom), spun 180 degrees and slide another 500 feet. Firestone was taken to the hospital for observation, but was awake and alert. (AP Laserphoto)

Moose.....24
Exchange.....5

The Moose exploded to romp past the Exchange by a 24-5 score in Tar Heel Little League action Tuesday.

The Exchange took the lead in the first inning with one run, but Moose came back with four in the bottom of the frame and never trailed again.

Buddy Foley reached on an error with one out and moved up on a wild pitch. He moved to third on an out and scored on another wild pitch to tie it up. Montez Barrett walked and scored on a double by Jason Krause. Krause stole third and scored on a wild pitch. Jimmy Rouse singled and stole second, moving to third on a wild pitch. Michael Howard walked, and a double steal plated Rouse with the fourth run.

The Moose added six in the third, nine in the fourth and five in the fifth for its 24-run total. The Exchange picked up one in the third and three in the sixth.

Rouse led the Moose hitting with three while Krause allowed only one hit by the Exchange.

Sportsworld.....20
Optimists.....4

Sportsworld overwhelmed the Optimists, 20-4, in a North State Little League baseball game Tuesday.

Sportsworld took the lead in the first and never trailed again after scoring four times. Joel Fickling led off with a double and stole third. He scored on a double by Dante Daniels. Shae Harper singled, moving to second on a fielder's choice. A passed ball let Daniels score and moved Harper to third. Russell Oats reached on a two-base error that scored Harper and moved to third on a passed ball, later scoring the fourth run.

Sportsworld added six in the second, two in the third, one in the fifth and seven in the sixth to wrap up its scoring. The Optimists got two in the second and one each in the fourth and fifth.

Daniels led the Sportsworld hitting with three while Fickling and Oats each had two. No one had more than one for the Optimists.

Gryphons Hand Rose 2nd Straight Loss

ROCKY MOUNT — Playing and winning at Rocky Mount is one of the most difficult things for Rose High School's baseball team to do.

Tuesday night, Rocky Mount's home field whammy over the Rampants came through once again as the Gryphons rallied to take a 6-5 eight-inning victory.

It was the second straight loss for the Rampants, who cruised through the first half of the season — less one game that was postponed — without a Big East Conference defeat. Northern Nash handed Rose a 7-5 setback last Friday night.

Rocky Mount took the lead in the bottom of the first, scoring twice. Mike Davis led off with a single and scored on a triple by Joseph Hill. Tom Jones' grounder to second brought in Hill for a 2-0 lead.

The Gryphons added two more in the second. Tim Kilpatrick singled and Matt Dunlap was hit by a pitch. Both were sacrificed up and a passed ball let Kilpatrick score. Mike Davis grounded out to drive in Dunlap and make it 4-0.

Rose rallied for one in the top. David Daniels singled and Curtis Perkins reached on a fielder's choice. Robbie McDonald then singled in Daniels.

Rocky Mount countered that with one in the bottom of the third for a 5-1 lead. Gary Miller walked and moved up on an out. He scored on a double by Mark Worsley.

Rose came back with one in the fifth. Jason Galloway singled with one out and Daniels doubled him in.

In the seventh, with their backs against the wall, Rose rallied for three to tie it up. Hunter Clark led off, reaching on an error. Axel Smith was hit by a pitch. Galloway's grounder got Smith at second, and Daniels followed with a two-run triple. Tim Clark then grounded out, scoring Daniels with the tying run.

Rose, however, never got another man on base the rest of the way.

Rocky Mount, after leaving the winning run at third in the bottom of the seventh, pushed over the deciding run in the bottom of the eighth.

Tom Jones singled to open the inning and he was sacrificed to second. With two away, Matt Dunlap reached on an error that allowed Jones to score the game-winner.

Mike Davis had two hits to pace Rocky Mount while Daniels had three to lead Rose. Galloway and McDonald also added two each for the Rampants.

The loss drops Rose to 13-3 overall and 6-2 in Big East play. Rose travels to Wilson Hunt for another key game today.

Conley 3
Washington 0

WASHINGTON — Brian Bullock tossed a four-hitter as D.H. Conley shut out Washington, 3-0, in a Coastal Conference baseball game Tuesday.

The Vikings scored all their runs in the sixth.

Butch Mills led off with a single to left. Bullock sacrificed him to second. Bronswell Patrick was intentionally walked. Brian Joyner struck out. With two outs, Sherwood Wilder hit a fly ball to center that was misplayed, allowing Mills and Patrick to score. Kervin Vines then singled home Wilder.

Donald Tyer went 2-3 to lead Washington.

Bullock had six strikeouts and one walk while raising his record to 7-1. It was the second straight shutout for the Vikings, who blanked West Carteret, 6-0, last Friday.

Conley improves to 13-2 overall and 7-0 in the conference. The Vikings host East Carteret tonight.

GOLDSBORO — David Hamm tossed a three-hitter and struck out 10 to lead Faith Christian Academy to a 8-1 win over Trinity Christian Academy in a high school baseball game Tuesday.

Faith scored three runs in the first. Hawley and Patrick opened with walks. Hawley later came home on an error. Warren Riley then singled home Patrick. David Hamm also singled, moving Riley to third and he later came home on an error.

Michael Harrell had a sole homer in the fourth for Trinity. John Griffin went 2-2 for Trinity, 3-1 on the year.

Faith was led by Riley, who went 3-4 with two RBI. Hamm went 3-4 with one RBI. Hope went 2-3 with a triple.

Belhaven 11
Jamesville 6

JAMESVILLE — Belhaven banged out 12 hits en route to a 11-6 win in a Tobacco Belt 1-A conference baseball game Tuesday.

Wayne Moore went 2-4 with four RBI and a two-run homer in the third inning while teammate Scott Campbell went 3-3 with three RBI and two triples and Sport Sawyer went 3-4 with a double.

Jamesville was led by Jeff Phelps, who went 2-4 with a triple. Kelby Moore also went 2-4 with a double while Ernie Coltrain went 2-2.

Jamesville is 7-9 overall and 7-7 in the TBC. The Bullets play Mattamuskeet today in a make up game.

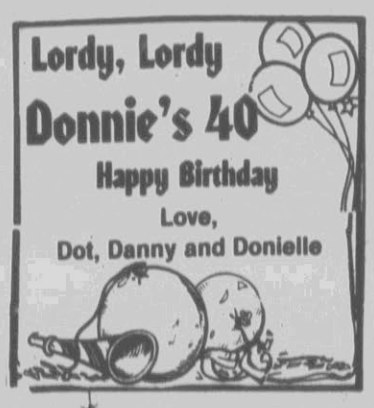
Rams' Game Is Postponed

SNOW HILL — Greene Central's baseball game with Pamlico, scheduled for Tuesday, was postponed because of wet grounds.

The game will be made up on May 13.

Meanwhile, the softball game between Pamlico and Greene Central was forfeited because of a lack of players by the Lady Hurricanes.



Four Teams Gain State Tourney

Four teams qualified Tuesday to advance to the state championship of the Heart Fund Golf tournament.

Brook Valley Country Club was the host course Tuesday for the regional tournament. The top three teams in gross score moved on, while the top team with the low net moved along.

The low gross title was captured by the Don White team, headed by Don White Jr., Billy Clark III, Greg House and Larry Picard. They finished the superball format event with a 54, 18 under par.

Second place in gross score went to the Aldridge & Southerland team, which included Mike Aldridge, Dick Evans Jr., Jim Moore III and Skip Collier. They carded a 56.

Third place went to the Hardison Insurance team, including Buzz Sawyer, Tee Davies, Brady Pinner and Lang Hardison. They finished with a 55.

The low net event was won by the Rich Rados team, which included Rados, Mac Worley, Curtis Quinn and Alan Griffin. They had a net score of 48.

The four teams will advance to the state tournament, set at Mid Pines Resort at Pinehurst on August 7-9.

The highlight of the tournament was a hole-in-one on the fifth hole by Edwin Clark. Other closest to the pin awards went to Curtis Quinn at 8, Rox Corbin at 12 and Burney Warren at 18.

Proceeds from the tournament go to benefit the Heart Fund.

Heart Fund Golfers

The Don White team captured first place honors in the Heart Fund Golf Tournament held at Brook Valley Tuesday. The team members included Don White Jr., Billy Clark III, Greg House and Larry Picard. Error Lifts Farmville By Aycock

FARMVILLE — Farmville Central took advantage of a throwing error in the bottom of the sixth inning to score the winning run and take a 4-3 win over C.B. Aycock in a high school softball game Tuesday.

The Lady Jaguars opened the bottom of the sixth by loading the bases on three consecutive walks to Susie Stancill, Diane Hudson and Iris Dupree. Karen Carter then hit a grounder to the third baseman who errored on the throw home allowing Stancill to score the winning run.

Farmville is 4-8 overall and climbs to 3-5 in the Eastern Plains Conference with its next game Friday at Greene Central.

D.H. Conley.....12
Washington.....9

WASHINGTON — D.H. Conley's girls' softball team slipped past hosting Washington, 12-9, in Coastal Conference softball action Tuesday.

Conley scored first in the game, getting single runs in the first two innings. Washington then came up with one in the bottom of the second, then charged ahead with three in the third for a 4-2 lead.

Conley came back with five in the fourth to regain the lead, then added one more in the fifth for a 8-4 lead.

What proved the difference, however, was three more in the sixth. Trellaney Boyd singled and Charlene Davenport reached on an error. Tabatha Dalton followed with a single to load the bases. Successive hits by Rhonda Jackson, Lynn Keeter and Rhonda Mills brought in the three runs.

Conley added one more in the seventh while Washington rallied for four in the sixth and one in the seventh.

Boyd led the Conley hitting with five while Eileen Evans had three. Tracy Summerell, Mills, Keeter, Dalton and Davenport each had two. Washington was led by Amy Maurizzio with four while Heather Freese and Amy Youmans each added two.

Conley is now 13-4 overall and 5-2 in Coastal play. The Valkyries play host to East Carteret today.

GOLDSBORO — Faith defeated Trinity, 4-1, in high school girl's softball action Tuesday.

Trinity scored first when Natalie Godwin singled and then came home on a single by Jennifer Alexander.

Faith took advantage of four walks in the first inning and a two-run double by Sutton to score four runs in the opening frame.

Alexander went 2-2 to lead Trinity.

Trinity falls to 2-2 and has no more games scheduled.

Jamesville.....11
Belhaven.....6

JAMESVILLE — Jamesville High School scored nine times in the first two innings and went on to take an 11-6 softball victory over Tobacco Belt Conference rival Belhaven Tuesday.

Belhaven scored three times in the top of the first, but Jamesville came back with four in the bottom of the frame.

The Lady Bullets then put the game away with five in the bottom of the second. Mary Hardison reached on a fielder's choice and Shay Hale singled. Jennifer Getchell singled in Hardison. Val Clark reached on an error that allowed both Hale and Getchell to score. Senita Rodgers then followed with a two-run homer.

Jamesville added single runs in the third and fourth while Belhaven got one in the third and two in the seventh.

Rodgers led the Jamesville hitting with three, also getting a double, while Hale and Penny Price each added two. One of Hale's was a triple.

Jamesville is now 10-6 overall and 8-6 in the conference. The Bullets travel to Mattamuskeet today.

Aycock Rolls By Barber

E.B. Aycock Junior High School rolled to a 22-2 baseball victory over J.T. Barber in action Tuesday.

Leading the Aycock attack was Grant Harmon who had three hits, one a homer, with five RBI. Dwayne Williams added two hits and two RBI while Chris Christopher had four RBI and Heath Clark had 3 RBI and three stolen bases.

Walter Gatlin tossed a no-hitter in the game, walking three and striking out four.

Aycock is now 7-0 and travels to Goldsboro on Thursday.

Death To Be Investigated

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — New information connected with the death of University of Texas-El Paso basketball star Hernell "Jeep" Jackson has sparked an investigation by a special team of the police department, the chief of police says.

Jackson, 23, a first-team All-Western Athletic Conference player, died Saturday during a charity basketball game. A preliminary autopsy Sunday was inconclusive.

"There is an investigation on," El Paso police Chief John Scagno said Tuesday.

The probe by the police Special Investigative Group, or SIG, began Monday "because of information the department received ... concerning the situation," Scagno said.

SIG includes officers from intelligence, vice, narcotics and other specialized units of the police department. Scagno said he did not know when the investigation would conclude.

Jackson had joined Houston Oilers football players for a game Saturday afternoon at the Fort Bliss military reservation on the outskirts of El Paso. He had been playing for five minutes in the second half, sat on the bench and collapsed shotly before 3 p.m. Jackson was declared dead at Beaumont Army Medical Center at 4:09 p.m.

Scagno would not comment on whether the information police received involved drugs.

Raines' Homer Wins Game

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Tim Raines doesn't consider himself a true home run hitter and Danny Darwin isn't much of a hitter at all. But Raines hit another game-winning home run and Darwin went 3-for-3 to help their teams win.

Raines continued his storybook return after missing spring training and the first month of the season. His third home run in four games was a tie-breaking shot leading off the seventh inning. It led the Montreal Expos to a 6-4 victory Tuesday night over the Atlanta Braves.

"I don't like to say I'm a home run hitter, but I've always felt that I had home run power," said Raines, who led the National League with a .334 average last year but has never hit more than 11 homers in a season. "I'm just making good contact and getting the ball up in the air."

In four games, Raines is batting .438 (7-for-16) with a double, triple, three homers and seven RBI. All his homers have been game-winners. His first, a 10th-inning grand slam, beat the New York Mets 11-7 on Saturday. He led off the next day with a homer in a 2-0 victory over the Mets.

Darwin came into Houston's game against Philadelphia batting .100 for the season (1-for-10) and .077 for his career (2-for-26), with 20 strikeouts, including his previous seven trips to the plate. He promptly doubled, singled and snapped a tie with a two-run triple in the seventh inning. He also held the Phillies to one run and five hits in seven innings as the Astros won 5-1.

"I really don't know what happened," Darwin said. "(Coach) Denis Menke told me to put my hands lower because I was uppercutting. Other than that, I have no idea how I got three hits."

The world champion New York Mets could have used Darwin's bat. They were blanked for the second game in a row, losing to Cincinnati 2-0. In other National League games it was, Los Angeles 3, Chicago 1; San Francisco 10, St. Louis 6, and Pittsburgh 10, San Diego 8.

Raines homered off Rick Mahler after the Expos tied the score 4-4 in the sixth inning on an infield hit by Casey Candaele. Montreal added a run off Gene Garber in the ninth when Candaele was safe on shortstop Rafael Ramirez's error, took second on a groundout and scored when third baseman Ken Oberkfell fielded Tim Wallach's grounder and threw wildly past first.

Andy McGaffigan, who has not allowed a run in 20 innings, pitched the final three innings for his fifth save.

The Braves, who trailed 3-0 before they came to bat, took a 4-3 lead off Jay Tibbs with four runs in the third, two on a double by Gerald Perry and two more on an error by third baseman Wallach. Montreal scored its first-inning runs on a two-run single by Wallach and Vance Law's infield hit.

Astros 5, Phillies 1

With the score tied 1-1, Alan Ashby and Bert Pena singled with two out in the Houston seventh off Shane Rawley. Darwin then lined his triple over the head of center fielder Milt Thompson. The Astros added two runs off Kent Tekulve in the ninth when Kevin Bass and Jose Cruz singled and Alan Ashby doubled them home.

Darwin had an infield hit in the sixth and scored the tying run on Billy Hatcher's sacrifice fly.

It was the second game in a row in which the opposing pitcher was 3-for-3 against Philadelphia. Cincinnati's Bill Gullickson had two singles and a home run on Sunday.

Reds 2, Mets 0

Ted Power allowed six hits in 8 1-3 innings and struck out a career-high nine batters for his ninth consecutive victory. He is 3-0 this season.

Power was relieved by John Franco after Kevin McReynolds singled with one out in the bottom of the ninth. Franco, who hasn't allowed a hit in 9 2-3 innings this season, earned his fifth save. He has retired 28 of the 29 batters to face him. One reached on an error.

Dave Parker doubled home the first run in the third inning after Kurt Stillwell was hit by a pitch from Sid Fernandez with two out.

Eric Davis, the Reds' slugging center fielder, managed only an infield hit in three at-bats but robbed Darryl Strawberry of a home run in the sixth with a leaping catch. In the eighth, Davis walked with two out, stole his third base of the game and scored on a single by Buddy Bell.

Dodgers 3, Cubs 1

Bob Welch scattered seven hits and struck out nine, but saw his shutout streak stopped at 23 1-3 innings. The Cubs' run came in the eighth when Shawon Dunston led off with a triple and pinch hitter Jerry Mumphrey singled, ending a string of 36 innings over five starts in which Welch hadn't allowed an earned run.

Cubs starter Jamie Moyer was nicked for a run in the third when Mike Ramsey walked, was sacrificed to second and scored on a single by Mariano Duncan. Bill Madlock, who came off the disabled list last Friday after having athroscopic surgery on his right shoulder, hit his first home run of the season in the eighth.

"The team is a better team when I'm in the lineup," Madlock said.

Giants 10, Cardinals 6

Chris Speier hit his first grand slam in 15 years, capping a six-run rally in the sixth inning. Speier hit the first pitch thrown by reliever Ray Soff over the left-field fence for his third homer of the season. Soff relieved loser Greg Mathews after the Cardinals' starter fell behind 2-0 on the count.

The Giants trailed 2-1 after five innings. With two out, Chili Davis started the rally with his fifth home run of the year and doubles by Jeffrey Leonard and Candy Maldonado gave the Giants a 3-2 lead. Mathews then walked Bob Melvin and Mike Aldrete o load the bases and set the stage for Speier's second career grand slam.

The Giants added three runs in the eighth, which featured RBI doubles by Maldonado and Aldrete. Winner Scott Garrelts relieved in the sixth and shut out the Cardinals the rest of the way on three hits.

Pirates 10, Padres 8

Rafael Belliard hit his first major-league home run, a three-run shot, to cap a five-run second inning that gave Pittsburgh a 5-0 lead. Belliard, who became the Pirates' regular shortstop midway through last season, had gone 404 at-bats without a home run until he drove a pitch from Eric Show over the fence in left-center.

Andy Van Slyke, R.J Reynolds and Barry Bonds also homered for Pittsburgh while Benito Santiago hit a three-run homer for San Diego.

Van Slyke hit a two-run homer off Rich Gossage, who had been on the disabled list with torn cartilage in his rib cage and made his first appearance of the season.

Seattle...

Boston in last year's Eastern Conference final, was led by Terry Cummings with 28 points.

"Larry Bird is the best basketball player there is," Celtics center Bill Walton said. "No matter what they do against him, he responds."

Hawks 115, Pistons 102

Not wanting to meet the same fate as the Rockets, the Hawks used 34 points by Randy Wittman and a third-quarter burst to subdue the Pistons, who won the opener of the series 112-111.

Dominique Wilkins added 23 points and Kevin Willis had 19 points and 10 rebounds for the Hawks. Bill Laimbeer and Isiah Thomas each scored 20 for the Pistons.

The Hawks led 68-65 when Wittman hit an 18-foot jumper with 3:54 left in the third period. The spurt ended when Mike McGee scored on a tip-in with 36 seconds left to give Atlanta an 83-71 lead going into the final quarter.

Dominique Wilkins added 23 points and Kevin Willis had 19 points and 10 rebounds for the Hawks. Bill Laimbeer and Isiah Thomas each scored 20 for the Pistons.

"If they are going to double down on 'Nique, it's going to leave someone else open," Wittman said of Detroit's defensive plan. "I was just hitting the open shot and they got the ball to me.

Where People Live Can Determine How They Keep Up Their Lifestyles

By DON COLBURN
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Servicew

Anyone who tries to define "old" knows the feel of tricky ground.

"It's easier to describe what a 1 year old is like than what a 75 year old is like," says Dr. Nathan Billig, psychiatrist and director of the Center on Aging at Georgetown University Medical Center.

"There's more variability with age. We don't become more similar; we become more different."

Any true definition of old age must encompass George Burns and Eubie Blake, Claude Pepper and John Stennis, Georgia O'Keeffe and Pablo Picasso, Rose Kennedy and Ronald Reagan — as well as grandma, the man on the bus and the neighbor down the block. It must include the healthy and the sick, the spry and the frail, the homeless and the homeowners "free and clear." It must acknowledge the institutionalized, the deinstitutionalized and the noninstitutionalized. It must account for the cruelty of Alzheimer's and Parkinson's, the trauma of hip fracture and stroke, and for nostalgia, accomplishment, loneliness and loss of friends.

In many ways, everything depends on where a person lives, since where people live reflects how well — and how well off — they are. If eduation is a priority for children, housing is a major issue for the elderly.

Though nearly half of older Americans own their own homes, many need a dwelling with less room and less upkeep. Growth of the 65-and-over population has given rise to the need for new living arrangements — sometimes called "assisted housing" — that bridge the gap between people who are healthy and totally independent, and those who require the intensive care of a nursing home. Most of the elderly fall somewhere in between.

A common misperception is that a large percentage of older Americans live in nursing homes. In fact, about 1.3 million Americans, or fewer than 5 percent of those 65 and older, live in nursing homes. But that percentage masks vast differences among the older population. Of those 65 to 74, barely 1 percent live in nursing homes, compared with 22 percent of those 85 or older.

There are "enormous differences" by race, sex and family status among older Americans, says Cynthia M. Taeuber, a specialist on the demographics of aging with the Bureau of the Census. The poverty rate generally is highest among women, minorities, those who live alone, the unmarried and rural residents.

For example, the poverty rate among all women 85 and older who live with a spouse is about 8 percent. But the poverty rate among black women 85 and older who live alone is 73 percent.

President Reagan, who at 76 is the oldest president in U.S. history, has helped to undermine the stereotype of the frail, inactive older person.

U.S. Crews Airlift Guatemalans To Remote Center In Battle Zone

By NORMAN KEMPSTER and DOYLE McMANUS
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — In the first direct U.S. involvement in Guatemala's long-running war against leftist insurgents, three U.S. Army helicopters with American crews airlifted about 300 Guatemalan troops to a remote part of the Central American nation, the Pentagon and State Department announced Tuesday.

Reagan administration spokesmen said that the operation, requested last week by Guatemalan President Vinicio Cerezo, was carried out Sunday and Monday by CH-47 Chinook helicopters that ferried the Guatemalan troops to the regional military headquarters for the Playa Grande area of Guatemala, about 120 miles north of Guatemala City.

Col. Marvin Braman, a Pentagon spokesman, said that the three helicopters, with four-man crews each, "took off and landed in secure areas" that did not bring them into range of hostile fire.

He said Cerezo requested the mission as a "one-time thing." The U.S. helicopters returned to their base in Honduras after delivering the Guatemalan troops.

"This isolated area has been the scene of increasing hostile guerrilla activity of late and the Guatemalan government has only limited capacity to transport troops," Braman said.

The Pentagon and the State Department said that the cost of the operation, estimated at between $250,000 and $300,000, would be financed out of Guatemala's share of U.S. military aid.

Guatemala has been engaged in an off-and-on conflict with Marxist guerrillas since 1954 when a U.S.-backed coup ousted the government of President Jacobo Arbenez.

In the late 1970s, President Carter cut off all U.S. aid to Guatemala to protest human rights violations by the military government then in power. The aid program was resumed in 1985 with a tiny $300,000 military training program.

In January 1986, Cerezo became the first civilian president since the overthrow of Arbenez.

"The United States is committed to providing assistance to democratic governments in Central America and meeting their security needs," State Department spokesman Gregory Lagana said.

Braman said that the three helicopters, the 12 members of the flight crews and six maintenance personnel are attached to the Army's 243rd Aviation Co., based at Fort Lewis, Wash., but have been on temporary assignment at Palmerola air base in Honduras.

U.S. helicopters have been used twice in Honduras to airlift Honduran troops to remote areas of that country. But it was the first time the United States had provided similar help to Guatemala.

Lagana and Braman said that President Reagan and the Congress were kept fully informed of the operation. They said that the helicopters were unarmed although the flight crews carried their "personal weapons."

Lagana said that all 18 U.S. personnel involved in the operation were regular Army troops. He added that Honduras and Nicaragua's Contra rebels played no role.

In July, the United States sent 160 Army troops and six Blackhawk assault helicopters to Bolivia to assist that South American nation in a crackdown on cocaine laboratories.

Father Says Linder Wounded, Then Slain

By ANDREW SELSKY
Associated Press Writer

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The father of American engineer Benjamin Linder said his son was shot at point-blank range by Contra rebels while he lay wounded by grenade fragments.

The younger Linder was working on a rural electrification project last week when he became the first pro-Sandinista American volunteer to be killed by the U.S.-backed insurgents.

Dr. David Linder, a pathologist from Portland, Ore., told a news conference Tuesday that an autopsy shows his son was killed by a gunshot to the head at "very close range, possibly two feet away or less."

Earlier reports had said the 27-year-old Linder died when a grenade exploded near him during a Contra attack on his party, which included Sandinista militiamen, outside a village in northern Jinotega province.

Witness accounts indicated the electrification crew was ambushed by the rebels.

Linder said the autopsy report shows his son first was immobilized by non-lethal wounds in the legs and left forearm, and then was shot to death.

"This is murder," he said. "What I am telling you is that they blew his brains out at point-blank range as he lay wounded."

The Nicaraguan Democratic Force, the largest Contra fighting group, says Linder was caught in a firefight. There were conflicting reports about whether he was armed.

Two Sandinista militiamen also were reported killed in the clash.

Linder was given a hero's burial Thursday in Matagalpa, 60 miles north of Managua. President Daniel Ortega was one of the pallbearers.

About 200 Americans are working as volunteers for the leftist Nicaraguan government.

Elisabeth Linder, the slain man's mother, and Alyson Quam, his girlfriend, also appeared at the press conference. Miriam Linder, Benjamin's sister, said the family did not know when they would return home.

Soviets File TV Protest

CANBERRA, Australia (AP) — The Soviet Embassy said today it formally protested to the Australian government over a television program that satirized Soviet revolutionary Vladimir Lenin and called Kremlin leader Mikhail Gorbachev a wimp.

However, the embassy denied reports that it would follow the example of Iran, which expelled two Australian diplomats over a televised comedy sketch about the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

First Secretary Yuri Belobrov also denied reports the Soviet Union was considering trade sanctions against Australia following the showing Monday night of a program called the "Dingo Principle" on the government-funded Australian Broadcasting Corp.

The Age newspaper had reported that Belobrov hinted the Soviet Union would stop imports of wheat from Australia worth $140 million.

"We simply said our assessment of the program is being sent to Moscow for their consideration," Belobrov told The Associated Press.

In his protest Tuesday, Belobrov also requested government action against the Australian Broadcasting Corp. Prime Minister Bob Hawke refused, saying there is nothing he can do because Australia guarantees freedom of expression.

Hawke said he said he doubted relations between the two countries were seriously damaged by the comedy sketch, which showed an actor playing Lenin singing and dancing. One who played Gorbachev sang an irreverent song.

Iran expelled two Australian diplomats from Tehran last month after the same station broadcast a sketch featuring a mock interview with Khomeini that ended with the Iranian leader threatening to blow up the world.

Philippine Economy Levels Off, But Remains Clouded

By JAMES W. HATTON
Associated Press Writer

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — President Corazon Aquino proudly told a local business club recently that her government has accomplished what few realistically had thought possible — an economic turnaround.

New figures show the Philippine economy has, in fact, leveled off after shrinking for two years. But few outside the government expect it to produce the sustained growth she has promised.

Mrs. Aquino's statement was based on a Central Bank report, dated April 8, that showed the gross national product grew 0.1 percent in 1986. The report said fourth quarter 1986 performance "suggested the country was on the threshold of economic recovery."

A senior Asian economic expert said the figures showed the economy "has stopped falling."

"But I feel there is no sustained recovery," he told The Associated Press, speaking on condition of anonymity. "There is no base for it. There is no capital flowing into the country."

Mrs. Aquino has made clear political headway since taking office in February 1986, ending the 20-year rule of deposed President Ferdinand E. Marcos.

She oversaw the drafting of a new constitution, which 76 percent of the voting public approved on Feb. 2, and has survived at least five coup attempts and conspiracies. Congressional elections are set for Monday and local elections for August.

But critics say she has failed to develop a cohesive economic policy.

The economy struggled for years under Marcos. The Aquino government has said up to $10 billion in government funds and corporate assets was funneled out of the country during his reign.

The economy nose-dived in 1983 after the assassination of opposition leader Benigno Aquino, Mrs. Aquino's husband.

Fearing political turmoil, foreign investors began leaving. Governments and aid institutions withheld funds and local entrepreneurs began investing abroad instead of at home.

The country was left with little foreign exchange to import raw materials, and many companies closed or laid off employees.

Mrs. Aquino's government moved quickly to stem the flow of funds abroad and has tried to restore faith in the national economy. It still is seeking to recover alleged ill-gotten wealth of Marcos and his associates.

Foreign aid has slowly resumed and investor confidence appears to be on the increase.

On March 27, creditor banks agreed to reschedule at more favorable terms almost a third of the $28.2 billion foreign debt.

Dallas-based Shakey's, Inc., the pizza parlor giant, is planning to make Manila its "staging area for the Pacific rim," spokesman Russ Frederickson said recently.

But wealthy Filipinos still are depositing their profits abroad, and a bank official who deals with multinational companies said it is difficult to attract foreign investment when locals are wary of keeping their money in the country.

The government has forecast 6 percent growth this year. But private financial experts interviewed by the AP predicted no more than 3 to 4 percent.

The Central Bank report cited exchange rate stability and declining interest and inflation rates as factors helping to halt the two-year slide.

The bank report also said:

—The balance of payments was $527 million in the black in the last quarter of 1986, compared to deficits of $8 million the previous quarter and $314 million in the fourth quarter of 1986.

—Hard currency reserves were about $2.5 billion at the end of 1986, up from $1.06 billion at the end of 1985.

—Prices increased 0.3 percent nationwide during last year's last quarter, but 4.2 percent in Manila.

The report gave no inflation figures, but the Asian Development Bank put the rate at about 5 percent in 1986, down from about 20 percent in 1985.

—Just over 11 percent of the 22.1 million-member work force remained jobless, despite increased federal spending on employment programs.

Red Cross Staffers Kidnapped

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Seven Red Cross staffers have been kidnapped in a Moslem area of Mindanao island, the government-run news agency reported today.

The Philippines News Agency quoted military officials as saying the team was abducted Tuesday afternoon by armed men in the town of Molundo in Lanao del Sur province, about 520 miles south of Manila.

There was no immediate claim of responsibility.

Jean-Daniel Tauxe, deputy director of the International Committee of the Red Cross in Manila, told The Associated Press the seven had been working with people displaced by sectarian fighting, and failed to return to their headquarters in the Mindanao city of Cagayan de Oro as scheduled Tuesday.

He said those abducted included two Swiss nationals. The news agency quoted police as saying the five others were Filipino nurses.

PNA said the Red Cross workers and their captors were reported seen later Tuesday in the town of Butig about 15 miles south of Mulonlo on the shores of Lake Lanao.

There was no word on the reason for the kidnapping. Moslem rebel groups are active in the area, and foreigners have been advised by authorities to use caution when traveling there.

Last July, a Swiss tourist was kidnapped by Moslem pirates in western Mindanao. He was released in October.

No Smoking

BEIJING (AP) — The city plans to ban smoking in 100 public areas this year as part of a no-smoking campaign, the official Xinhua News Agency reported today.

The report said the campaign was being sponsored by the Beijing Association for Smoking and Health, which was organized Tuesday.

Xinhua said a survey by a Beijing Medical University researcher found that 48.4 percent of adult men in the city smoke, and that 86.4 percent male workers between the ages of 16 and 68 smoke.

Only 2.2 percent of Beijing women smoke, Xinhua said.

Army Blamed In Drug Death

NEW YORK (AP) — A federal judge Tuesday found that the U.S. government negligently caused the death of a mental patient given mind-altering drugs in secret Army experiments during the 1950s.

Calling it "a sad episode in the conduct of the U.S. government," District Judge Constance Baker Motley awarded $702,044 to the estate of Harold Blauer, a mental patient "who died in 1953 as a guinea pig in an experiment to test potential chemical warfare agents for the U.S. Army."

The judge's 106-page opinion said Blauer died as a result of one in a series of mescaline derivatives he was given at the New York State Pyschiatric Institute.

"Rather than admit its role in Blauer's death, the government covered up its involvement in the affair," Ms. Motley said, noting that her opinion "is issued today rather in the 1950s when the death occurred."

NORTH CAROLINA
COUNTY OF PITT
NOTICE OF SALE OF LAND UNDER DEED OF TRUST

IN RE: Foreclosure of Deed of Trust Executed by JESSE JAMES STATON and wife, JOYCE C. STATON, dated February 28, 1977 and of record in Book K-45, page 610, Pitt County Public Registry by Edward J. Harper, II, Substituted Trustee (by instrument of record in Book 122, Page 521, Pitt County Registry)

Under and by virtue of the power and authority contained in that certain deed of trust dated February 28, 1977, executed by Jesse James Staton, and wife, Joyce C. Staton, and duly recorded in the Office of the Register of Deeds for Pitt County, North Carolina, in Book K-45, page 610, in which W.W. Speight, was named Trustee (Edward J. Harper II, having been duly substituted as successor trustee by instrument recorded in Book 122, page 521, Pitt County Registry), default having been made in the payment of the indebtedness thereby secured, and pursuant to the demand of the owner and holder of the indebtedness secured thereby, and after notice and hearing and order authorizing foreclosure to proceed by the Clerk of Superior Court of Pitt County dated April 10, 1987, and done in accordance with Section 45-21.16 of the General Statutes of North Carolina, the undersigned Substituted Trustee will, at 12:00 noon on May 13, 1987, at the front door of the Pitt County Courthouse, offer for sale to the highest bidder for cash, at public auction, that certain real property and the improvements located thereon described as lying and being in Pitt County, North Carolina, and more particularly described as follows:

That certain tract or parcel of land lying and being in Winterville Township, County of Pitt and State of North Carolina, and being all of Lot No. 6, in Block "E" of the Oakdale Subdivision, Section 2, as shown on map thereof prepared by McDavid & Associates, as appears in Map Book 20, pages 173 and 173A of the Pitt County Registry, and being a part of the land conveyed by Provert Lassiter to Oakdale Development Corporation by deed recorded in Book E-39, at page 168, of the Pitt County Registry, to which deed and map reference is hereby made for a more accurate and complete description.

The improvements on said property are included in the sale. Said sale will be made subject to all ad valorem taxes and any outstanding governmental assessments, building restrictions and easements of record.

The last and highest bidder at the sale will be required to make a cash deposit of ten percent (10%) of the first one thousand dollars of the bid price and five percent (5%) of the balance of the bid price at said sale.

This the 10th day of April, 1987.

Dance Teacher Ready To Hang Up Her Shoes

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

'Dancing For The Love Of It' may represent Ramona VanNortwick's account of her dancing and teaching experiences if she were to title it.

She was sent to her first dance class by a physician because "I had fallen arches and my heel bone was going out of place."

"I started dancing when I was 10 years old," Ms. VanNortwick said in her studio as she led her senior students in a dance by calling out the steps or by demonstrating it.

"Cross over in front, grapevine, shuffle — cross over in front, grapevine, shuffle. Got it?"

Dressed in white slacks and a black sweatshirt, she does not look or move like a 73-year-old grandmother who is about to retire as a dance teacher. Her slim figure and gray hair seem to suggests maturity but not age.

She moves to the side of the studio to give space to those practicing the step and is flanked by her students in photos on the walls.

Ms. VanNortwick said she began teaching in Virginia when she was 18 years old to appease a shattered dream.

"I wanted to go on stage but my mother said I wouldn't go through life with 'chorus girl' behind my name. My mother wouldn't let me go professional.

"My cousin did 'The Drunkard' in L.A. (Los Angeles). I was so envious of her."

Ms. VanNortwick said she taught her first Greenville dance class in 1935 at the Woman's Club. The recital was May 15, 1936, in Greenville High School, once located on Fifth Street.

Since then, Ramona's School of Dance moved to a mirrored, wood-paneled room above her garage.

"When I came to Greenville, there was no television, no live entertainment. We were wonderful," she said.

The first program featured dances titled "Let Yourself Go," "Savage Serenade," "Lucky Star" and "Pipes of Pan."

But, that was generations ago, Ms. VanNortwick said. "I'm teaching the third generation now."

Her goal as a dance teacher was "to make the students love it," Ms. VanNortwick said. "I never encouraged professionalism. I never promoted it.

"In fact, I've lost students because I would not encourage stage," she said. Stage performers need to have "that magic something that hangs over the footlight and hasn't been taught."

Many "college-born teachers want to start with dancers," she said. "I wonder if we're going to lose the love for dancing.

"I don't expect professionalism" from the students, Ms. VanNortwick said. "They're dancing for the fun of it."

Even though she did not dance professionally, Ms. VanNortwick was the star of her personal recital Nov. 25, 1935, in Wright Auditorium. "I did 11 dances," she said.

"The tap is my first love," Ms. VanNortwick said. She said she also likes the free style ballet of Ruth St. Denis and Ted Shawn known as Denishawn. "I don't like modern."

Ms. VanNortwick said she has danced with a semi-professional group for about two years under the direction of Hal Fisher, a Denishawn teacher. "I've studied (dance) from north to south to east and west of the United States."

In addition to the recital, Ms. VanNortwick has performed and directed activities for several local service and civic organizations.

Peggy Wood, who played Aunt Alice in Arsenic and Old Lace, and Andy was in the minstrel before he was famous.

"If I had a dollar for each time I danced ... I would be able to retire in comfort," she said.

But, most of her time has been spent teaching dance, Ms. VanNortwick said. Her last dance recital will feature her dance students of 1987 Saturday at 7 p.m. in North Pitt High School. The program is dedicated to Marie Smith Wallace, who was her first assistant dance teacher.

Students from years past also have been invited to participate in a dance. "I have 10 students from my 1936 recital that are going to appear. They will be there Saturday night on stage," she said.

As she ends her years of teaching dance, Ms. VanNortwick said she will continue to direct the Junior Cotillion and other events that present themselves. "I have to have contact with young people. It keeps you young," she said.

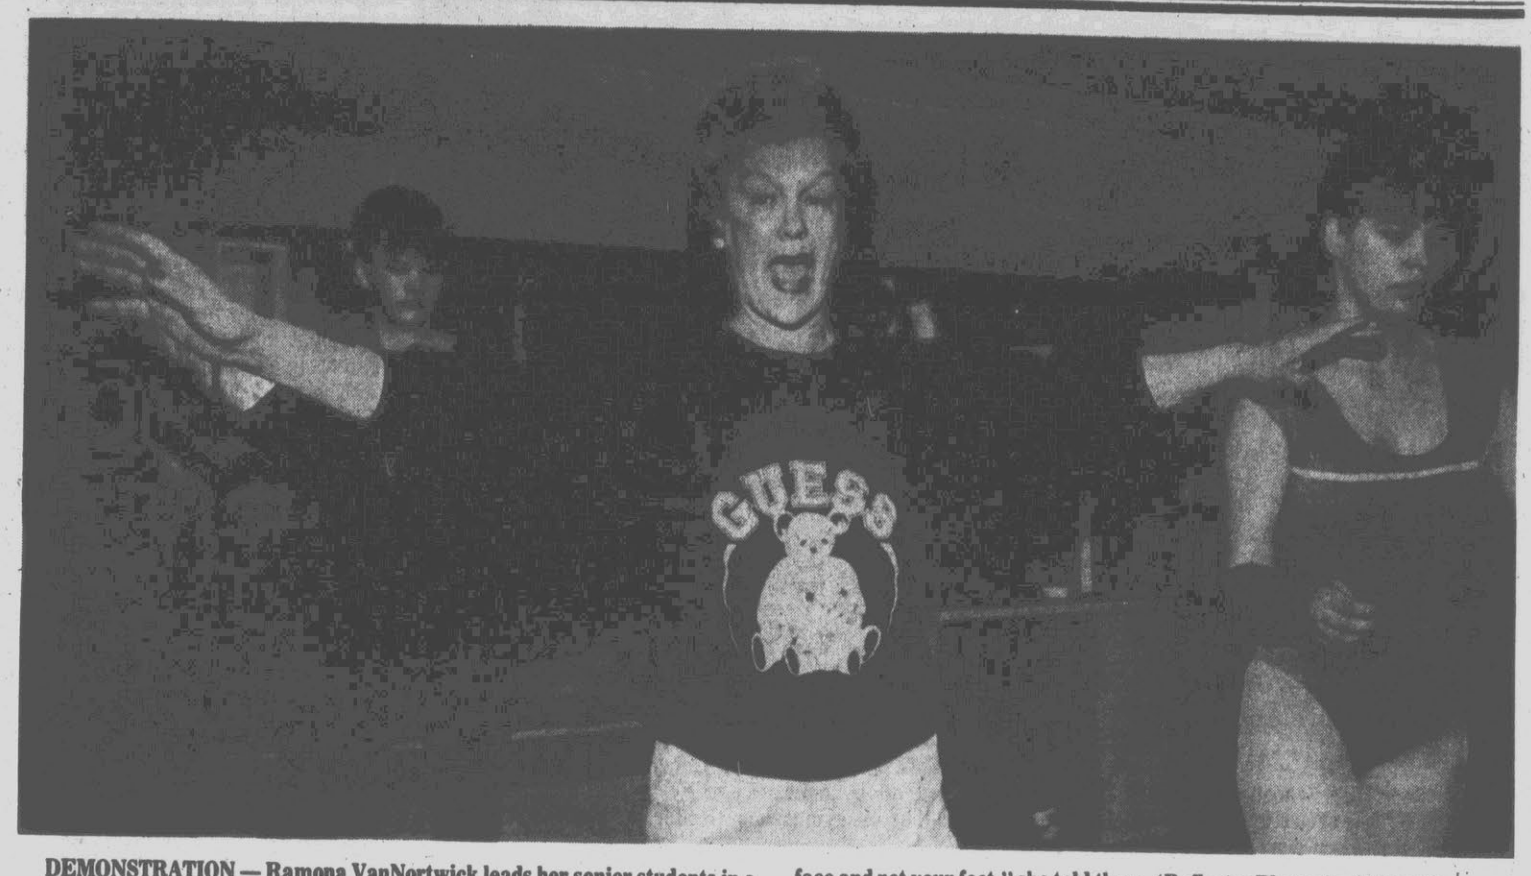
She also wants to travel, knit, basket weave and complete her book publishing process.

Ms. VanNortwick has authored a cookbook with large print to aid those with vision impairments. It is being reviewed by a publisher.

"I'm legally blind," she said. "I have peripheral vision, but if I saw you on the street, I wouldn't recognize you."

Ms. VanNortwick said she became legally blind about five years ago. "It doesn't hold me back. You can either sink or you can get up and go. I chose to get up and go.

"My favorite threat is ... if you don't behave yourself, I'll drive home," she said.



DEMONSTRATION — Ramona VanNortwick leads her senior students in a dance they will perform in a recital Saturday. "If you smile, they look at your face and not your feet," she told them. (Reflector Photos by Cliff Hollis).

FRAMED — Ms. VanNortwick is framed by photos of her students in the Ramona School of Dance located above her garage. She also has taught students in the Woman's Club.

Grandma Gives Kids Big Push

By WALTER C. PUTNAM
Associated Press Writer

GARLAND, Texas (AP) — No one cares much for "Grandma's" kids. After all, they're not really kids.

Most people 18 to 21 have jobs or are in school or the military. Grandma's brood includes recovering drug addicts and alcoholics, unwed mothers and ex-convicts with baby faces.

The woman they call "Grandma," Edie Lewis, has been taking in social outcasts for 20 years, sheltering and nurturing them until they are able to stand on their own feet.

"There's places for minors. This is an age group there's no place for," said Mrs. Lewis, who houses anywhere from a half-dozen to a dozen hapless youths at a time in her [illegible] suburb.

Some have been on the streets for years by the time they find their way into Grandma's fold. They come in "with chips on their shoulders the size of logs," she said.

Mrs. Lewis, 60, gives them not only a place0to stay but money for a haircut, a new set of clothes, or a ride to a job interview; whatever it takes to "help them get their heads on straight."

In four to five months, most are gone. Some stay a year or more.

Until the death of her husband, Charlie, 18 months ago, there was enough cash on hand with his $2,800 a month in retirement funds. Now, she said, she clears $800 a month in widow's benefits.

The $720 monthly mortgage falls behind. The house at the corner of Warren and Walnut, a six-lane highway, is almost stripped of furniture, resembling a 1960s crash pad. Two refrigerators are almost bare except for sandwich makings or a pot of beans.

"When Charlie was here, I had three refrigerators and they were always full," said Mrs. Lewis.

Now, she makes visits to a doughnut shop in the wee hours of the morning to get unsold doughnuts. She

Too-Good-To-Be-True Travel Offers Snaring The Unwary

By STEVE SILK
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

The phone rings. The voice on the other end, like the Godfather, makes an offer you can't refuse.

It might be a $329 trip, including air fare for one and accommodations for two, to Spain, Hawaii or London.

Or maybe a $31.03 air fare to Hawaii.

Or maybe an invitation from a time-share resort promising a dirt-cheap trip to Hawaii just for listening to a sales pitch.

Such offers of free or low-cost vacations are among the pitches heard recently by people who were targets of schemes used by telephone and mail solicitors to dupe unwary consumers.

"It's almost like a whole new industry that just popped up in the last six months," said JoAnn Chin, a spokeswoman for the Federal Trade Commission in Washington. She said her office is receiving more complaints about misleading travel offers than anything else.

Most offers involve a certificate or voucher that the consumer purchases, "wins" or "qualifies for" and then tries to redeem for travel. Would-be travelers often find out later that unmentioned restrictions make it extremely difficult to get the trip they were promised. Or they find the offer was misleading and that the holiday will cost far more than they were led to believe.

Frank Perruccio, a Canton, Conn., resident, was offered one of the $329 trips to Hawaii. When he tried to make the arrangements, he learned the full-fare economy round-trip ticket he would need to buy to take advantage of the offer would cost him $1,596, bringing the trip's total cost to more than $1,900 for two people. Local travel agents offered similar trips for two to Hawaii for $1,238.

Perruccio said that when the telephone offer was made, "They didn't disclose everything. ... You don't think to ask what the other fare will cost — they give you a choice of 13 locations, and you don't know which one you might choose."

Perruccio was fortunate. The company, Houston-based Vacation Marketing Inc., was unable to process his credit card. By the time they called to verify the number, he had learned enough about the trip to refuse to give the number out again.

Others haven't been so lucky. When Kathleen Jordon of Farmington, Conn., was told by a friend about a company offering a $31.03 air fare to Hawaii, she promptly ordered four tickets, paying the $124.12 fee with her MasterCard. She then called to check the offer with the Better Business Bureau. Jordon was told the certificate she would receive from World Travel Vacation Brokers Inc., based in Alsip, Ill., could be used only to purchase a more expensive travel package that included air fare and hotels for two, with prices ranging from $800 to $1,600. The company did not mention that because the trip departed from Chicago or Houston, she also would have to pay her way to one of those cities to take advantage of the offer.

Jordon's efforts to cancel her order took nearly three months, although she followed the company's instruc-

HOLD ON TIGHT — Six-year-old Jessica Kallweit holds on tight as she swings in a hammock in a yard on Hardee Circle this week. A sudden cool snap has made going outdoors a cold idea, but the Weather Service says warmer temperatures are ahead. (Reflector Photo by Cliff Hollis)

Rose Offers 'Once Upon A Mattress'

The Mary Rodgers and Marshall Barer Broadway musical, "Once Upon A Mattress," is being presented by students at Rose High School for three performances — Friday, Saturday and Sunday evenings, all at 8 p.m. in the school auditorium.

Betty Topper is the director, assisted by student directors Ellen Cotter and Debbie Morriison. Chuck Allen directs the Rose orchestra, with choreography by Kipper Hair and Diane Lamb. Hubert Leggett is technical director, and Steve Donald is scenic artist.

Members of the Rose cast are: Earl Hines, minstrel; Rob MacKenna, wizard; Christy Alexander, Lady Larken; Julie Mayberry, Queen Aggravain; Jason Lee, Prince Dauntless; Larry Howard, King Sextimus; Ann-Marie Ambert, the jester; Robbie Fulford, Sir Harry; Debbie Morrison, Princess Winnifred, and Ally Savitt, the nightengale.

The cast listed above is supported by an additional group of 25 characters.

The story line of the musical is based on an old fairy tale of the same name, related by the minstrel who was on the scene in 1498. The crux of the story centers on a test of feminine sensitivity to choose a princess bride suitable for a prince. The test, administered to 12 princesses, is a simple one — that of placing a single hard pea between a stack of mattrasses. All candidates except one are not bothered by the presence of the well-buried pea, but one is and she predictably is the victor in the search.

The search is made colorful by the presence of a wizard, a jester and a peripheral body of knights, kitchen wenches and others serving at the medieval court.

Namath Defines Heroes

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Football great Joe Namath says it is America's unsung stars, like a woman who founded a home for newborns addicted to drugs, who are true heroes, not people like himself.

"I was a sportsman," said Namath, 43, who is hosting a syndicated series: "Heroes: Made in the USA."

"If I was a hero, it was because of a few games. I don't qualify as a hero compared to the people on this show," said the Football Hall of Famer.

The heroes Namath reveals are people like Mother Hale, who founded the home for drug-addicted infants in New York City, or Carole Hudne, an Iowa farmer's daughter who heads a coalition to help struggling farmers.

"A hero is anyone that does a courageous deed, one with nobility and purpose, not necessarily for remuneration," he said.

Awards

NEW YORK (AP) — Dancer Fred Astaire, choreographer Bob Fosse and ballet star Rudolf Nureyev were among the winners of $5,000 Capezio Dance Awards this year.

Four awards were given instead of the usual one to mark the 100th anniversary of immigrant shoemaker Salvatore Capezio's founding of his company, Capezio-Ballet Makers.

UCLA Medal

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jazz singer Ella Fitzgerald will be awarded the UCLA Medal for her musical achievements at commencement ceremonies June 14.

The honor, established in 1979, also will be bestowed on abstract painter Richard Diebenkorn and John W. Ryan, president of Indiana University.

Miss Fitzgerald, 69, has recorded more than 250 albums and is a charter member of the Jazz Hall of Fame.

Greenville's first public library was established in 1904.

Push

sometimes goes door-to-door collecting change. An anonymous benefactor gave her $3,700 around Christmas for back house payments.

Mrs. Lewis, typically garbed in blue jeans and work shirt, her graying hair neatly combed, said she started taking in young people when she lived in Fairbanks, Alaska.

"One night I heard what I thought was a dog barking in my back yard," she said. "I went out and found a boy lying there."

She took him in and let him stay overnight. She found out where his parents lived and called them.

"They said, 'We're not interested,' " Mrs. Lewis recalled.

As with many of her kids, his parents were alcoholics, "always fussing and fighting," she said.

Not long after the youth left, others came. Word of mouth spread the story about the woman who would help you out in a bind.

"I was sleeping on the streets and this lady told me about Grandma's," said Sean, who is staying with Mrs. Lewis now.

Sean, 18, had been on his own for four years and was on the verge of being jailed for sleeping in the laundry of an apartment complex, Mrs. Lewis said.

Now, he's next in line for a job as a bus boy at a popular restaurant and club in Dallas. In a few months, he expects to have an apartment of his own.

Among the hundreds of young people she has known, Mrs. Lewis can recall few who turned out badly.

"The real bad ones, when they come here, they take care of themselves," she said. "They're just looking for a place to sleep. After a day or two, they're gone."

Mrs. Lewis has two rules: No drugs and no alcohol.

"They can stay out until 3 a.m. Adults can go out," she said. But they soon learn that they can't go out all night and hold down a job, she said.

Apartheid Play Is Big Stage Hit

By DAVID CRARY
Associated Press Writer

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — The biggest stage hit in South Africa this year, playing to full houses at one of Cape Town's top theaters, is a musical commemorating a mixed-race neighborhood demolished to make room for whites.

Four songs from "District Six — The Musical" are banned from the airwaves of the government-controlled South African Broadcasting Corp. But the show has won nightly standing ovations from multiracial audiences at the 650-seat Baxter Theater, a short drive from the district that remains a wasteland 20 years after bulldozers moved in.

One of the very few full-fledged musicals created in South Africa, "District Six" was written by David Kramer, a white from a conservative wine-growing town, and Taliep Petersen, a mixed-race musician who grew up in the district.

"We spent weeks just talking about what it was like to live in District Six," Kramer said in an interview. "Then we started to create characters."

Established by freed slaves in the 1830s, District Six evolved into a dilapidated but vibrant inner-city neighborhood, predominantly for coloreds — the South African term for people of mixed race.

In 1966, the national government declared it a whites-only district under the provisions of the Group Areas Act, the law that establishes segregated neighborhoods. Within 15 years virtually every building, except churches and mosques, was razed and more than 40,000 residents moved to distant suburbs.

The new, matchbox homes on the Cape Flats, says one character in the musical, have rooms "so small you can't even change your mind in them."

So deep is the bitterness created by the evictions that few Cape Town whites or businesses want any part in entrenching an all-white neighborhood. The 250-acre area, crisscrossed by deserted streets, remains vacant except for a new technical school for whites and a few housing projects at the foot of Table Mountain.

The bitterness is conveyed in the script and songs of "District Six," but the political message is interspersed with a love story that at times recalls "West Side Story."

The 21-song score, reflecting the variety of music that existed in the district in 1966, includes jazz, a capella harmonies, banjo tunes and the soul ballads that were emerging at the time from Detroit and other black recording centers in the United States.

The show opens with a biting number called, "The Law, The Law," which suggests that not only neighborhoods and beaches, but even hell is "reserved for whites."

The powerful closing song, "Seven Steps of Stone," is performed on a set depicting demolished slums. Its lyrics say:

"The children will revenge us
For better or for worse. ...
For they too have been broken
And scattered like the bricks
The stones, cement and concrete
That once was District Six."

Both "The Law, The Law" and "Seven Steps Of Stone" are among the songs banned by the South African Broadcasting Corp.

Critics have been unanimous in their praise for the show and its energetic performers, who portray characters ranging from a pushcart fruit vendor to a transvestite night club emcee.

Comedian Howie Mandel's Star Appears To Be Rising

By FRANK RIZZO
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

HARTFORD, Conn. — The mild-mannered theater administrator had just finished straightening out a ticket snafu for the sold-out comedy concert here when Howie Mandel asked, "And what's your name?"

"I'm Bill Martin. I'm the marketing director."

"Hi," he said. "I'm Howie. I'm the ...." He paused a second, as if the word "star" was caught in his throat. Instead he came up with "comedian."

But star he is, with a sold-out, North American comedy tour, a featured role for five years in the acclaimed television series "St. Elsewhere," and a new movie in which he is, make no mistake about it, the star.

In the movie, "Walk Like a Man," Mandel plays a young man who as a child was lost in the wilderness and raised by wolves. Years later he is discovered by a kindly animal behaviorist who attempts to civilize him. However, his evil brother trys to keep him in a primal state of mind so he will not inherit the family fortune.

For his character, Mandel's role model was Scooby Doo. The Saturday morning canine cartoon character does bear a striking similarity to Mandel's character, Bobo. Both are lovable, goofy, innocent-yet-wise — and could easily be mistaken for another species.

But making the comedy was no cartoon.

"I left body parts on the set," Mandel said in a recent interview here. "I had my two front teeth knocked out. In the movie you can actually see them fly across the screen. I also ruined my back from being on all fours for three months. And my feet got ruined from running in the woods with wolves. I had to be carried home each day. The common words on the set were 'action,' 'cut' and 'nurse!' "

Mandel did get a new body out of the movie — a body builder worked with him for months. "I actually changed my body shape," he said. "But now I'm back to the old Howie. I hate working out. I hate exercise. I can't sit on a bicycle for a half-hour and be at the same place where I started."

Despite all the physical horrors, Mandel says that making his second movie (his first was Blake Edwards' flop, "A Fine Mess") was rewarding.

"I had a great time," Mandel said, "because I got to work with my idols — (director) Melvin Fran, Christopher Lloyd and Cloris Leachman."

It is the type of physical and absurd role that one associates with Mandel's manic comedy on record ("Howie Mandel Fits Like Glove"), on cable television and videocassette ("Howie Mandel's North American Watusi Tour") and live in his "Monkeyshine" tour, which ended in April.

Mandel's popular comedy act is a grab bag of funny voices, gag toys, rude language, silly faces, wild gestures and primal screams.

Tom Hanks...If You Like Laughing With Tom Hanks...You Will Love Loving With Tom Everytime We Say Goodbye
In a moving departure from his comedic roles, Tom Hanks, star of the widely acclaimed Splash, Bachelor Party and Nothing In Common, stars as a royal Air Force officer caught amidst the ravages of World War II and unrequited love. Jerusalem, 1942. Tom Hanks is flight Lieutenant David Bradford. While recuperating from a leg wound at a local army hospital, David meets and falls madly in love with a beautiful Jewish girl, Sarah. Her highly religious clan cruelly rejects David, a gentile and the son of a minister. The family wages war on the couple by keeping Sarah separated from the man she loves. But, the two young lovers stage an emotional fight against the powerful ties of a family, heritage and tradition.

Travel

tions for doing so. The charge remains on her MasterCard, although the bank is now crediting her account and charging the company. The Better Business Bureau of Chicago and Northern Illinois Inc. has received more than 2,500 inquiries about World Travel Vacation Brokers Inc. The Illinois and California attorneys general recently filed suits against the company for deceptive advertising practices.

Ray Greenly, director of consumer affairs for the American Society of Travel Agents, said the association receives 75 to 100 telephone complaints daily about misleading travel offers.

In the typical telemarketing version of the travel scam, unscrupulous pitchmen bait their victims with enticing, low-cost travel offers or "free" prizes, make a high-pressure sales pitch, then hook them by asking for their credit card number to cement the deal.

After the credit card payment has been processed, consumers get a certificate and, perhaps, a brochure. While reading the details, they begin to discover previously undisclosed additional costs, or requirements such as being married or earning a minimum income.

Some time-share operations purchase those hitch-laden certificates and then offer them as a prize for visiting their facilities.

Frank Sterpka of West Hartford, Conn., received a travel offer from a Newport, R.I., time-share resort, Newport On-Shore Resort. After listening to a sales pitch at the resort, Sterpka was instructed to contact a Nevada company that would send him a certificate good for a trip for two to Hawaii — all he had to do was buy one of the two airplane tickets. When he learned the one ticket would cost him about $1,200, he thought there had been a mistake. He contacted the company and learned there had been no mistake.

Greenly said the problems involved in getting a refund are sometimes compounded by a lack of accountability. For example, a Texas company that made the original offer may have purchased the certificate from a California business, while the consumer's credit card account is perhaps being handled by a third company in New York. When a consumer complains to one company, each says the other is at fault.

As always, when faced with an offer that looks too good to refuse, buyers should beware. Even if, despite the additional charges and restrictions, a consumer wants to use a certificate to travel, the companies still have a few tricks up their sleeves. Buyers often have to make a reservation at least 60 days in advance and provide two alternate departure dates. Just before the vacationers are scheduled to leave home, they'll get a call saying the previously arranged date is now unavailable, or that they won't be able to go to Hawaii after all — but how about Las Vegas?

"We've had a couple promoters say they're in trouble if over 18 percent of the people who respond want to travel," Parsons said. "These things are so overbooked there's no way they could accommodate them all." The companies are acknowledging that four out of five people will be so frustrated by delays and undisclosed requirements that they'll just give up.

Conley Students Present 'Carousel'

The 42-year old Broadway musical "Carousel," with music by Richard Rodgers and lyrics by Oscar Hammerstein II, is the choice for the 1987 spring entertainment being presented this week at D.H. Conley High School.

Performances will be presented at 8:15 p.m. Friday and Saturday and at 3:15 p.m. Sunday in the school's auditorium.

Tickets, available at the door, are priced at $3.50 per person.

Appearing in the lead roles are John Howard as Billy Bigelow and Cathy Creech as Julie Jordan. Others in the cast include Tom Hall as Mr. Buncombe; Paul Bredderman as the policeman, and Shelly Harrington as Carrie Citteridge.

Libby Sellers is director. Music is by a combo comprised of area musicians.

Reportedly the favorite of Rodgers and Hammerstein from among the hit musicals the two created, "Carousel" has a strong story line of ill-fated lovers. Billy, a physical, impetuous type, is killed while trying to steal money for his pregnant wife. Having obtained heaven "through the back door," his task of redemption is to bring hope to the lives of his wife and young daughter.

"Carousel" contains several memorable hit songs such as the love ballad, "If I Loved You"; the melodic "Carousel Waltz"; the sprightly "June Is Bustin' Out All Over," and a powerful, dramatic song, "You'll Never Walk Alone."

Artists Show Is Scheduled

The Greenville Recreation and Parks Department is sponsoring a Greene Street Artists Art Show to be held two days — Friday and Saturday at the Community Building, corner Fourth and Greene streets.

Hours Friday are from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. and Saturday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The exhibition will be of paintings by local artists, with all paintings to be for sale.

Strong Offer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — James Caan says he ended his five-year absence from the movies after director Francis Ford Coppola made him an offer he couldn't refuse.

Caan stars with Anjelica Huston and James Earl Jones in "Gardens of Stone," which is set for release this month. He plays an Army sergeant who served in Vietnam.

Caan, who was nominated for an Academy Award for his performance in Coppola's 1972 movie "The Godfather," said he took a hiatus from the movies after making "Kiss Me Goodbye" in 1982 to spend time with his son, now 10.

Cosby Speech

MIDDLETOWN, Conn. (AP) — Bill Cosby will have some words of encouragement for his daughter, Erika — and about 680 other Wesleyan University seniors — graduating this month.

The 49-year-old star of "The Cosby Show" will give the 1987 commencement address and receive an honorary doctor of humane letters degree on May 31, the school announced Thursday.

Erika Cosby is to receive a bachelor's degree.

Hang Gliders Set Nags Head Contest

NAGS HEAD — The 15th Annual Hang Gliding Spectacular will be held Friday, Saturday and Sunday at Jockey's Ridge State Park, Nags Head.

The oldest continuously held hang gliding competition in the country, it is the site where more than 80,000 people have experienced their first flights as hang gliders.

The event was organized by Vic Powell in 1973, and hang gliding enthusiasts and pilots nationally came to compete.

The events this year will include spot landing, duration, and slalom competitions. There will also be a stunt kite demonstration and a street dance.

The competition schedule portion of the event is from noon to 6 p.m. Friday; 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Saturday, and 9 a.m. to noon on Sunday. The awards ceremony will take place at 1 p.m. Sunday.

The event is sponsored jointly by the Dare County Jaycees, the N.C. State Park Service and Kitty Hawk Kites. For more details, call 441-4124.

Scandalous Swimwear

Today's professional male swimmers may wear strange caps and goggles, but at least they can go topless. As recently as the 1930s, it was illegal for men to wear topless bathing suits in New York. Only shoulder-to-thigh tank suits were allowed. In 1934, eight men were fined for topless bathing at Coney Island. A year later, police in Atlantic City conducted a mass raid against 84 topless men. City officials proclaimed, "We'll have no gorillas on our beaches!"

Horoscope — From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY May 7

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You have an unusually good day to get into all the details connected with the goals set firmly in your mind. Perfect these conditions for efficient expression.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Get our work planned so that it will be a breeze to handle properly. Come to an agreement with a co-worker.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Make plans for the amusements you desire to have with congenials. Take time to make repairs at home.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): If your home needs repair, plan to do this now. Make sure that you get more than one estiamte.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): You can easily express yourself, either orally or in writing, but be careful of what you state.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): Study all your bills and find a better system for handling your money. See if your property needs repair.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): You are a perfectionist and should now express this in both your home and personal life.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Find the right way to spruce up your appearance. Be a bit happier and bring your mate closer to you.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): If you are more precise in stating what it is you want from others, there's a better chance of getting it.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): You have many outside tasks to handle and should get right at them. Be more efficient at the office.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): You are inspired toward progressive ideas. Watch for a letter from a distance that can be enlightening.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Study the promises you've made and handle the pratical ones first. Try to do what your mate requests.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Long conversations with an inquiring partner can bring you support. Stop procrastinating on some public affair.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he, or she, will be very capable at making plans, designs and blueprints for whatever is of interest and then carry them out to a successful conclusion. Plan an education along such lines and there can be much success here. Sports must not be neglected.

"The Stars impel; they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
Pass	Pass	Pass	3 NT
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: ?

We cannot stress sufficiently the importance of the opening lead. On this hand from the Open Pairs Championship at the Spring North American Championships, a well-reasoned opening shot helped Jan Janitschke, Denver, and Dick Reed, Boulder, to victory.

The Gambling Three No Trump opening bid has become exceedingly popular in modern tournament play. In its most widely used version, it is made on a solid minor suit, usually at least seven cards long (using it in a major risks going down when a major-suit game might make), with no stoppers in the outside suits. Its orphan cousin also shows the long minor suit, but tends to show stoppers in one or two of the three outside suits as well. Proponents of the first method claim that, if you promise some side strength, the partner of the opening bidder never knows what to do because he doesn't know whether his stoppers guard the unbid suit or duplicate opener's.

North-South here were employing the latter method. When the defenders know that declarer has seven fast tricks in one suit and perhaps one or two on the side, it is essential for them to get their tricks immediately. As a rule, they cannot afford to develop a long suit and hope to gain the lead in time to run that suit. Therefore, all you know about opening leads should be thrown out of the window in favor of finding a killing lead. As a rule of thumb, lay down an ace on opening lead to get a look at dummy so that you can decide what plan of campaign you wish to adopt.

Janitchke did just that—he led the ace of clubs with dramatic results. The defenders reeled in the first eight tricks for a fortuitous result.

Homework

By Susan Hu

I hate homework
it really is a bore.
But when I tell my teacher this she only gives me more.

From this it seems she gets her kicks.
I want to beat her with a stick.

All these feelings,
I do not hide.
Because my classmates,
are on my side.

Homework I guess will always be,
Until the end, of eternity.

So I guess I'll be staying up at night.
And sleep I'll always have to fight.

My teacher is looking so I have to end this rhyme or she'll take it up and it won't be mine.

The Same Old Teacher

By Michael Patterson

One morning, I woke up and got ready for school. I was a little scared at first. I was on my way to kindergarten. I wondered if I would have a friend at first and I did. My teacher's name was Ms. Mayo. We worked hard all year. We learned to read, write and share. Then it was time for first grade. I wondered all summer who my new teacher would be. I got to school and there she was. It was Ms. Mayo again! I was proud of myself for getting her again. Ms. Mayo and I worked hard on math and science and then Ms. Mayo told me I would be a good second grader. I wondered all summer that maybe she wouldn't be my teacher. She probably didn't get promoted to the second grade. I went back to school in August and there she was, Ms. Mayo! Here we are together again. We do a lot of things together. And Ms. Mayo is fun, but sometimes I wonder if I will ever have another teacher.

High Tide

By Marty Measamer

As the sun fades away and the darkness comes near

the people go home and the crabs hide in the sand.

The wind slackens and then stops
Waves breaking on the beach are the only thing to be heard.

I sit down, prop my feet up, and relax in the sand.
Soon, my eyes become heavy and I am lifeless.

The pounding of the surf puts me in deep sleep
But suddenly the pounding of the ocean comes nearer!

When the first feeling of wet touches my toes,
I awaken, look up, and see the top of a wave tumble on me.

High tide has come.

We Belong

By Vikki Mercer

We belong on a pedestal together.
Being there for each other,
When we need it.
Being able to say, "I'm sorry",

Supporting each other and giving comfort.
And...Never looking back!

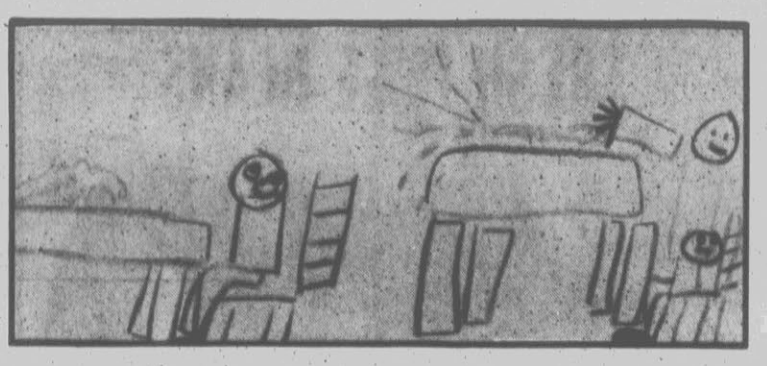
I Would Like To Be A Scientist

By David Northrup



I would like to be a scientist when I grow up. I can figure out a lot of things then!...like how a rattlesnake rattles his tail. In my picture, the scientist is discovering things about the rattlesnake. The one in the middle is studying an alligator. Then they will study the eel on the other table. Each scientist in my picture is studying a different thing.

'Just Keep Your Sense Of Humor'

TV Chef Urges Maximum Use Of Microwaves

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

"Microwave cooking is like marriage," Donovan Jon Fandre said. "People can tell you how it's successfully done. But to really know whether you can make it work, you have to jump in and try it."

The results of botching "microwaving," as the television chef likes to refer to his favorite cooking method, are a lot easier than getting out of a marriage that's not working, though, he said.

"Just keep your sense of humor. I tell people, 'When you first start, get a big dog. He'll enjoy everything you mess up.'

"Seriously," he said, "Don't be afraid to fail. Most people, when they first try using a microwave oven, are experienced cooks and they forget that they didn't cook everything perfectly the first time on the range top or in the range oven either."

Fandre is a Wisconsin native now a resident of Huntsville, Ala. He is on tour promoting Rubbermaid microwave cookware and his television show, "Microwaves Are For Cooking."

A former restauranteur in the San Francisco area, he has parlayed his fascination with microwave cooking into several enterprises. Included are a nationally-distributed cable television show, a monthly column in "Working Woman " magazine, a how-to book with the same title as his television show, and endorsements for various microwave enhancement products.

Don't Do It All

Some people will tell you, he said, that the microwave can be used successfully to cook everything. He disagrees. Some meats — like lamb — he said, are better broiled in a traditional oven. And he doesn't advocate use of the microwave oven for baking.

He abhors the microwave cake mixes now on the market. In his opinion, they don't turn out a product anywhere near comparable to conventional oven-prepared mix cakes and they're frightfully overpriced.

He reminded: The microwave is an appliance. It's not meant to be the only appliance in the kitchen, but it's well-suited for many uses. He said, "It's silly for people to spend $500 for a coffee warmer. So experiment."

He recommends its use for steaming, poaching, cooking stews and soups and casseroles, and for many kinds of roast dishes. His recipe book has chapters on appetizers, soups, beef, veal, lamb, pork, chicken and other fowl, seafood, vegetables, casseroles, salads, sauces, and desserts. During a demonstration of the preparation of a "Naked Chicken," he shared some advantages of microwave cooking when one is watching his or her weight and cholesterol intake. He recommends skinning the whole bird and removing excess fat. He then seasons the chicken inside and out with salt and pepper. Then he recommends rubbing in or brushing on a browning substance if you want the roast chicken you end up with to look "normally brown." The chicken will roast to perfection by microwaving about 7 minutes per pound on high. He calls this a never-fail, confidence-builder recipe.

You never add oil or grease to prevent sticking, only for flavor, he said. Leaving it off saves a lot of calories and artery-clogging.

Just As Juicy

He promises that any meat or seafood cooked in a microwave will be just as juicy as if basted often while cooking in a conventional oven. "There's no hot air in a microwave so foods don't dry out." he asserted.

That's also the reason that leftovers reheated in the microwave are just as moist as when first cooked. And it's why vegetables need no moisture but what's left after washing.

In his book, he explains his reasons for feeling that microwaves oven are not hazardous to health or safety. One reason, he said, is that microwave ovens are metal boxes with even the doors equipped with metal shields that microwaves cannot pass through. He said that microwaves are non-ionizing radiation like radio waves. They don't change the molecular structure of material, as does ionizing radiation like x-rays and ultra-violet rays.

Fandre admitted, of course, that a microwave left on while open could harm you, but said all of those whose latched have not been monkeyed with should have instant automatic cut-offs when the door is opened.

He said microwaves travel at the speed of light, 186,282 miles per second, so turning them off and on is instantaneous. The fact that utensils tend not to get as hot as in a conventional cooking lessons the risk of getting burned while cooking.

He also seeks to lay to rest fears about metal "arcing" in the microwave oven. He said he would not put a metal pan in the microwave, because it would reflect the microwaves rather than employ them for cooking. But he did say it's all right to leave solid metal stirring spoons in dishes during cooking, and to use smooth aluminum foil for protecting certain portions of a dish from overcooking. The arcing that may be seen in the form of sparks is the result of microwaves hitting metal particles that are separated by air and the energy being converted into light. He said microwave manufacturing engineers have assured him that this phenomenon is harmless, but he still discourages putting into the microwave crumpled aluminum foil, strainers and other metal that has surfaces separated by narrow gaps of air.

Undercook Slightly

He advocates undercooking dishes

The Quick Way To Perfect Fish

By BEA LEWIS
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

Fish is one of those foods that loses its appeal when overcooked. For years, cookbooks have recommended cooking fish until it flakes easily when tested with a fork in its thickest part.

But since fish continues to cook en route to the table, it can wind up overdone. Instead, try cooking the fish until the flesh inside turns slightly opaque. After being transported from stove to table, the fish should flake easily.

Try the suggestion with the recipe below. Near the end of the estimated cooking time, remove fish from the oven and cut a tiny slit in the center of the thickest portion.

If the inside appears just slightly opaque and has lost its wet look, it's ready to be transferred to a platter, to be garnished and enjoyed.

Serve this easy-to-make baked fish with steamed fresh asparagus and red new potatoes flecked with fresh dill. Or serve the asparagus cold with vinaigrette.

For dessert, warm chocolate sauce offers chocolate-lovers a quick and wonderful fix. To keep calories down, spoon the sauce over a plate of sliced strawberries, kiwi and banana.

BAKED FISH WITH ZUCCHINI, TOMATOES AND DILL

2 tablespoons olive oil
3 ripe plum tomatoes, diced
1 medium zucchini, diced
1 tablespoon wine vinegar
2 teaspoons finely minced chives
salt and pepper to taste
1 1/2 pounds fish steaks (halibut, ling, cod, sea bass or swordfish, each about 1 inch thick)
3 tablespoons chopped pimiento-stuffed green olives (optional)

1. Preheat oven to 400 degrees. Heat oil in a small frypan over medium-high heat, add tomatoes and zucchini, and cook, stirring ocasionally about 2 minutes. Remove pan from heat, add vinegar and chives; season with salt and pepper. Set aside.

2. In a greased shallow baking pan, arrange fish in a single layer. Season

Trim Down With Low Calorie Feast

This is is a great time to start a diet and exercise program that will have you looking and feeling great by swimsuit season. If, however, you don't relish the thought of cutting back on your favorite foods, don't sweat it. Here's a menu of savory and satisfying dishes that are low in calories and rich in taste. This spring feast is a breeze to prepare thanks to condensed soup, a convenient and flavorful addition to any fitness plan.

A generous serving of fresh vegetables is a healthful start to any meal. Instead of traditional table salad that's loaded with hidden calories from sinful dressings, try Marinated Cucumbers. This appetizer salad features cucumber slices in a zesty marinade made from condensed crispy gazpacho soup. At only 71 calories per serving, you can afford to have a second helping!

This next recipe is Seafood Kabobs with Ginger Lime Sauce. It boasts a medley of succulent scallops, swordfish pieces and vegetables drizzled with a lime-soy mixture and served with a creamy dipping sauce. The secret to this dish is in its sauce. Condensed onion soup/dip, blended with low calorie mayonnaise and a reliable line up of herbs and spices, makes a dip so rich and creamy that all your friends will want the recipe.

For a tasty alterative to rice or potatoes, try Bulgur Pilaf, a fiber-rich side dish that can be made in minutes by cooking the bulgur with condensed chicken broth, an ingredient that always gives foods just the right flavor. The addition of shredded coconut, dry sherry and cayenne pepper gives this dish a truly extraordinary taste.

With these light recipes in hand, you'll not only be able to enjoy satisfying dishes guilt-free, but you'll be out of the kitchen and onto the beach in no time because they're so easy to prepare.

MARINATED CUCUMBERS

1 can (10 1/2 ouces) condensed crispy gazpacho soup
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
2 tablespoons wine vinegar
1/4 cup sliced green onions
1 tablespoon chopped fresh basil leaves or 1/2 teaspoon dried basil leaves, crushed
1 large cucumber, seeded and sliced (about 3 cups)

In 2-quart bowl, combine soup, oil, vinegar, green onions and basil. Add cucumber; toss to mix well.

Cover. Refrigerate until serving time, at least 2 hours, stirring occasionally. Makes 3 1/2 cups or 6 servings.

SEAFOOD KABOBS WITH GINGER LIME SAUCE

Sauce:
1 can (10 3/4 ounces) condensed creamy onion soup/dip
1/2 cup reduced-calorie mayonnaise
2 tablespoons chopped fresh parsley
1 teaspoon grated fresh ginger
1/2 teaspoon Dijon-style mustard
1/8 teaspoon grated lime peel
Kabobs:
2 tablespoons lime juice
1 tablespoon soy sauce
1/2 pound sea scallops
1/2 pound swordfish, cut into 1-inch pieces
1 medium green pepper, cut into 1-inch squares
1 large spanish onion, cut into 6 wedges

To make dipping sauce, blend soup until smooth in a covered blender or food processor. Add mayonnaise,

Tasty Combination

There are dozens of fancy ways to serve fresh strawberries. But this simple recipe combining strawberries, brown sugar and sour cream rivals the best of them.

STRAWBERRIES BRULEE

Two 3-ounce packages cream cheese, softened
8-ounce carton dairy sour cream
2 tablespoons brown sugar
6 cups fresh strawberries
2 tablespoons brown sugar

In a small mixer bowl beat cream cheese with electric mixer until fluffy. Add sour cream and 2 tablespoons brown sugar, beat until smooth. Halve berries and arrange in bottom of an 8-inch round baking dish. Spoon cream cheese mixture over berries. Sieve remaining 2 tablespoons brown sugar evenly over cream cheese mixture. Bake in 450-degree oven 3 to 4 minutes or until sugar turns golden brown. Serve immediately. Makes 8 servings.

Q. Two of my favorite treats at showers and parties are cheese straws and sausage cheese balls. Can you tell me how bad these are for me? S.D. Winterville.

A. There are really no bad foods. Many of us just eat too much. I calculated the calories and nutrients in these favorite snacks from recipes Mrs. Pat Lowe, my secretary then, gave me when we moved to Greenville. The cheese straws are a good snack — if you don't eat too many. One cheese straw has about 27 calories and 3 grams of fat (about half unsaturated). Cheese straws are good sources of vitamin A and calcium. For people following a heart healthy diet, note that one cheese straw has 2.3 milligrams cholesterol and 26 milligrams of sodium.

The sausage cheese balls are higher in fat and calorie content than straws. One sausage cheese ball has 43 calories and 2.4 grams of fat (about half unsaturated). Sausage cheese balls are good sources of vitamin A and calcium too. One sausage cheese ball has 7 milligrams cholesterol and 88 milligrams sodium.

If you are trying to eat so you won't gain weight, limit the calories, fats and sugars you eat. Many eastern North Carolinians also need to watch their sodium or salt intake because of their hypertension. Some need to limit their saturated fat and cholesterol intake because of risks of heart disease.

I hope hosts and hostesses will offer some low calorie treats along with the traditional snacks to their guests. Has anyone tried to make cheese straws or sausage balls using low-fat cheese? Send your recipes to me to share with our readers.

Q. Do you have a recipe for a homemade egg substitute? M.P., Greenville.

A. I've tried several in cooking and the one I like the best calls for 3 egg whites, 1/4 cup non-fat milk, 1 tablespoon non-fat dry milk and 1 teaspoon vegetable oil. Beat egg whites lightly with a fork. Add rest of the ingredients and blend. This recipe makes 6 tablespoons (equal to 2 whole eggs or 1/2 cup egg substitute).

Study Shines New Light On Chocolate

Eating chocolate may be less fattening than you think. When you eat a chocolate bar, the amount of fat you digest may be less than the fat content listed on the wrapper. This finding could put chocolate in a different category for people concerned with the amount of fat in their diets.

According to a study published in the April issue of the "Journal of Nutrition," cocoa butter, the main source of fat in chocolate, may be less digested than other saturated fats. This lower digestibility may mean chocoolate is less fattening than previously believed.

The study may also explain why cocoa butter is apparently not a typical saturated fat since it does not increase blood cholesterol in the same way as other saturated fats.

This study was conducted by the Nutrition Research Department at the Hershey Corporate Technical Center, under the direction of Dr. Stanley M. Tarka Jr., director of food science and nutrition. If found that cocoa butter, a saturated fat, was less digested (59 to 72 percent) than corn oil, an unsaturated fat (93 to 97 percent).

In the study, laboratory rats fed cocoa butter excreted more saturated fat than those rats fed corn oil. In addition, fat stores from the cocoa butter fed rats contained a higher percentage of unsaturated fat than fat stores in the corn oil fed rats. This may mean that only a small amount of the saturated fat in cocoa butter is stored in the body with less of a potential to raise blood cholesterol levels.

"These findings about cocoa butter may put chocolate in a different category when it comes to making recommendations for intake of dietary fat," explains Dr. Tarka.

Preliminary work conducted with humans at Penn State University supports the results of this study. Additional studies are being designed to determine the digestibility of cocoa butter in humans and its effect on fats in the blood (blood lipids). These studies may explain why cocoa butter has a neutral effect on blood cholesterol and may determine if it actually has a cholesterol-lowering effect.

Cookbook Author Fixes Things 'Food People Can Relate To'

By TOM SIETSEMA
L.A. Times—Washington Post News Service

"When I come off a trip," says Nathalie Dupree, who travels extensively in her dual roles as cookbook author and television personality, "I want corn bread and turnip greens cooked with fatback. The next day, I want something lighter, so I might try chicken with sauteed turnip greens and coriander."

Dupree, a champion of grits, biscuits, peaches and pecans — basically anything indigenous to Southern cooking — says she's simply cooking the way most Southerners cook today.

In short, she's cutting the amount of time spent cooking and modernizing old food favorites while preserving historic recipes and tastes.

It all adds up to "food people can relate to." And for Dupree that means preparing staples like grits — not necessarily plain, but teamed with rosemary and grapes or yogurt and herbs; and chicken — not simply fried, but stir-fried, with collard greens and peanuts.

Southern food is about more than ingredients, the author points out; it's also about individual flavors ("There's not a lot of subtlety in my food") and generosity ("We don't portion things out").

She's quick to defend Southern home-style cooking while lamenting the bulk of what she refers to as buffet-style restaurant fare, which has become synonymous with terms like "continental" and "greasy."

Unlike elsewhere in the country, says Dupree, "It's just now that Southern cooks are making their mark."

Though she was born in New Jersey, Dupree's resume reads like that of a dyed-in-the-wool Southerner: She grew up in Alexandria, Va., went to school in Texas and has spent the past 16 years in Georgia — where she founded the renowned Rich's Cooking School, writes cookbooks (including "Cooking of the South," which won the prized Tastemaker award) and stars in her own televised cooking show, "New Southern Cooking with Nathalie Dupree," which currently airs on almost 200 PBS stations.

Still, Dupree insists she "cooks as a whole person, not as a piece," which is her way of explaining the international dimensions that surface in her menus.

Her heart is in the South, but Dupree's background includes schooling at London's acclaimed Cordon Bleu, where she received an advanced degree, and a stint at running a restaurant in Majorca, Spain. (She admits the move from Majorca back to Georgia was made easier by the fact that the foods of both regions — "green peppers, garlic, pimento, all the herbs, chicken and rice" — are so similar.)

Below are Dupree's recipes for ginger tomatoes and roast chicken stuffed with peanuts, both of which demonstrate the versatility of "New Southern Cooking":

Express-lane list: tomatoes, ginger root, scallions, roasted unsalted peanuts, hot red pepper, red onion, chicken, chicken stock.

GINGER TOMATOES

(6 to 8 servings)

4 tomatoes, about 1 pound, unpeeled
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
1 slice fresh ginger, about the size of a quarter, slivered or chopped
Salt
Sugar
6 scallions, green part only, sliced thin

Wash the tomatoes and cut each into 6 wedges. Heat the oil in a large frying pan over high heat. Add the ginger to the oil and let it sizzle a few seconds, stirring it with a wooden spoon. Add the tomatoes and toss them quickly in the ginger until just heated through and coated with oil. Don't let the tomatoes get mushy. Add a dash of salt and sugar. Sprinkle the scallions over the tomatoes and serve hot.

ROAST CHICKEN STUFFED WITH PEANUTS

2 cups chopped roasted unsalted peanuts
1 hot red pepper, chopped
1 large red onion, chopped
4-pound roasting chicken
3 tablespoons butter
About 3 cups chicken stock
Salt and freshly ground black pepper

Mix together the peanuts, hot pepper and onion. Stuff inside the chicken. Tie the legs of the chicken together and rub it with butter. Place in a roasting pan with chicken stock to a depth of 1 inch up the sides of the chicken. Place in a 400-degree oven and roast 1 to 1 1/2 hours, until brown and the juices run clear when a leg is pierced, turning occasionally to brown all over. Remove from the oven, carve and remove stuffing. Meanwhile, add the remaining stock to the pan juices. Place on the stove over low heat and boil until well reduced and slightly thickened. Taste for salt and pepper and season if necessary. Placed the carved chicken on a platter and surround with the peanut stuffing. Strain the sauce and serve separately.

The Ideal Snack

Raisins are a natural — the ideal snack for active people, no matter what age. Raisins also combine with other ingredients to make snacks, breads, cakes, salads and puddings.

RAISIN FACTS

- Raisins are actually grapes that are sun-dried in the fields.
- It takes four pounds of grapes to produce one pound of raisins.
- Raisins are an excellent quick-energy food full of vitamins and minerals.
- Once a package of raisins is opened, it should be place in an air-tight container and refrigerated or frozen.
- Raisins will retain their flavor, color and nutritive value up to two years when kept in the refrigerator.
- If raisins dry out or form sugar crystals due to improper storage, rinse them in hot water to dissolve the crystals and restore moisture.

OLD-FASHIONED OATMEAL COOKIES

1/2 cup raisins
Boiling water
1 cup sifted self-rising flour
3/4 teaspoon cinnamon
1/4 teaspoon nutmeg
1/4 teaspoon baking soda
1/4 cup sugar
1/2 cup firmly packed brown sugar
1/3 cup vegetable shortening
1 egg
2 tablespoons milk
1 1/2 cups uncooked quick oats

Combine raisins and water in small bowl; set aside. Preheat oven to 375 degrees. Grease 2 large baking sheets; set aside. Sift flour, cinnamon, nutmeg, and baking soda into mixing bowl. Add sugars, shortening, egg and milk; beat with electric mixer until smooth.

Drain raisins; add oats and raisins to batter; blend well. Refrigerate about 20 minutes. Roll out dough on lightly floured board or pastry cloth to 1/4-inch thickness. Cut out with floured 2-inch cookie cutter. Place on prepared baking sheets. Bake 12 to 15 minutes, or until golden brown. Transfer immediately to wine racks to cool. Makes about 36 cookies.

RAISIN HINTS AND TIPS

- For easy chopping, toss 1 cup raisins with 1 teaspoon oil and chop with a sharp knife or a food processor.
- If a recipe calls for ground raisins, use an oil-coated blender or meat grinder.
- To plump raisins, cover the amount needed with very hot tap water and soak 2 to 5 minutes; drain.
- To distribute raisins better in cake batter, stir 3/4 of amount needed into batter. Pour batter into pan(s) and sprinkle remaining raisins on top.
- Stir 1/2 cup raisins into bran muffin mix for added nutrition.
- Combine raisins with any one of the following to make great-tasting snacks: nuts, diced dates, chopped dried apricots, pretzels, coconut and granola.

Fish Oil Is Beneficial, But Don't Forget Fish

By BEA LEWIS
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

For years, nutritionists have encouraged Americans to eat more fish. It may help to cut chances for a heart attack, they said. Then, along came the research suggesting that an unsaturated oil — omega-3 — found in fatty fish also helps protect against heart disease.

Smart businessmen pounced on the research and started turning out fish-oil capsules to capture consumers who don't like fish but want the benefits anyway.

But don't forget salmon in favor of fish-oil supplements; the American Heart Association advised against taking these capsules in its revamped dietary recommendations announced last fall.

The association was not convinced that the long-term effectiveness and safety of fish-oil capsules have been established. Stick to fish, the association said, because it is relatively low in fat, particularly saturated fat, which elevates blood cholesterol.

If the allure of a single supplement is too strong, nutritionist Walhida Karmally advises taking no more than two fish-oil capsules a day. "That amount might not do much good, but it probably won't hurt either," said Karmally, who heads the nutrition commitee for the New York affiliate of the heart association.

The reason? "Right now we don't know what amount of fish oil to recommend," she said. "What we do know is that too much can be dangerous, increasing the risk of excessive or prolonged bleeding. Fish-oil capsules made from fish livers may cause vitamin A and D toxicity," she said. Besides, popping a pill cannot cancel out the effects of an otherwise high-fat, high-cholesterol style of eating.

All the hoopla about fish oils got its start with the Greenland Eskimos, who had baffled nutrition scientists for years. Because the Eskimos eat large amounts of fatty fish, seal and whale meat, researchers expected to find fat-clogged arteries and a history of heart disease.

No such thing. Instead, these people showed little evidence of heart disease; their blood cholesterol levels were low.

Other population studies also showed a link between consumption of fish and low incidence of heart disease. Japanese researchers looking at Japanese fishing villagers found that the fishermen (with a diet rich in fish) had virtually no heart disease. Dutch researchers reported far less heart disease among those who had two or more fish meals a week.

The key to the Eskimos' low rate of heart disease, researchers are finding, is in the highly unsaturated omega-3 oil. Omega-3 protects the heart by making platelets, important clotting fac-tors in the blood, less sticky.

The blood is therefore more fluid, less likely to clump, causing a heart attack. Some studies have shown that omega-3 helps to lower triglycerides (the main type of fatty substance in the blood); other studies have shown it to lower cholesterol levels.

Since research continues, recommended amounts have not been established; in addition, not all scientists are sure whether it's the omega-3 alone or omega-3 working in combination with other components in fish that does the trick.

As a rule of thumb, the higher the fat content, the more omega-3 in the fish. But nutritionists don't advise going overboard with only the fatty kinds; a variety of fish is the best route. Of course, heart-healthy guidelines suggest cooking without extra fat: poach, bake, broil, don't fry. The microwave produces succulent salmon fillets, tender shrimp. Like crabmeat or tuna? Have it with lemon juice or a dab of calorie-reduced mayonnaise.

Fish with the highest amounts of omega-3 include salmon, mackerel, herring, anchovies, sardines, shad, albacore, tuna and trout.

Medium-fat fish choices include bluefin tuna, halibut, mullet, red snapper and swordfish.

Fish — A Quick Way

with salt and pepper if desired. Spoon tomato and zucchini mixture over fish.

3. Bake, uncovered, for about 15 minutes or until fish tests done. Transfer to a platter. Garnish with chopped olives. Serves 4.

CHOCOLATE SAUCE

6 tablespoons cocoa powder
1 cup sugar
3/4 cup canned evaporated milk
1/4 cup margarine or butter
1/2 teaspoon peppermint extract

Combine cocoa and sugar in a small saucepan; blend in evaporated milk. Add margarine and cook, stirring constantly, until mixture just begins to boil. Remove from heat and add peppermint extract. Makes 1 cup.

ASPARAGUS VINAIGRETTE

1 pound cooked fresh asparagus
3 tablespoons white-wine vinegar
3/4 teaspoon Dijon-style mustard
6 tablespoons almond or vegetable oil
2 tablespoons finely minced shallots salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
4 tablespoons toasted pine nuts

While the asparagus is cooking, combine the vinegar and mustard in a small bowl. Slowly whisk in the oil, and continue whisking until the vinaigrette has thickened. Add the shallots, salt and pepper to taste. Coat drained asparagus with dressing and top with pine nuts. Makes 4 servings.

parsley, ginger, mustard and lime peel. Blend just until combined. Cover; refrigerate until serving time, at least 2 hours.

To assemble kabobs, stir lime juice and soy sauce in a cup; set aside. On six 8-inch skewers, alternately thread scallops, swordfish, pepper and onion. Arrange kabobs on lightly greased jelly-roll pan or grill. Brush each kabob with lime-soy mixture.

Broil or grill about 10 minutes until fish flakes easily with fork, turning and basting occasionally. Serve with dipping sauce. Makes 6 servings.

BULGUR PILAF

1 can (10 3/4 ouces) condensed chicken broth
1 cup bulgur
1 tablespoon butter or margarine
2 cups sliced mushrooms (about 1/2 pound)
2 medium cloves garlic, minced
1/4 cup toasted shredded coconut
2 tablespoons dry sherry
Generous dash cayenne pepper

In 2-quart saucepan over high heat, heat broth to boiling. In medium bowl, pour broth over bulgur; stir well. Cover; let stand 5 minutes.

Meanwhile, in same saucepan over medium heat, in hot butter cook mushrooms with garlic until tender, stirring often. Reduce heat to low. Stir in bulgur mixture, coconut, sherry and cayenne. Heat through, stirring occasionally. Make 3 cups or 6 servings.

SEAFOOD KABOBS — This savory dish boasts a medley of scallops, swordfish pieces and vegetbles drizzled with a lime-soy mixture and served with a creamy dipping sauce.

Fandre

slightly, because residual heat buildup causes cooking to continues after it is removed from the oven. This is true in conventional cooking, too, he said.

A cook who enjoys cooking, he thinks much of the joy of food preparation is in poking and stirring and tasting. He says microwaves are eminently suited for the recreation of dish-watching, because there is no heat loss when the door is opened. Again, he advises undercooking initially, because time can easily be added when something isn't done to your liking.

WHOLE MAINE LOBSTER

What could be simpler, he asks, than cooking lobster in the microwave?

Kill each lobster by severing spinal cord at the shell separation between body and tail. To keep lobster flat while cooking it, insert a wooden peg, a metal skewer, or a chopstick under shell from tail to head. Then put two to three pounds — probably two lobsters — in a covered pot with 1/4 cup of white wine and microwave on high for 10 minutes or until shells turn red.

SCANDINAVIAN PORK LOIN

He calls this a show-off dish, suitable to impress a date or your spouse's boss:

4-pound deboned pork loan roast
1 cup prepared chutney
1 cup (dried or fresh) diced fruits. Apples, apricots, oranges, and prunes are especially good.

Make a lengthwise pocket in the center of the roast by inserting a long, thin carving knife through the meat. A sharpening steel may also be used.

Set aside 1/4 cup of chutney. Mix remaining ingredients and stuff them into the pocket. Place the roast, fat side up, on a microwave roasting rack. Cover ends with foil to prevent overcooking. Microwave 10 minutes per pound on high or 12 minutes per pound at 70 percent. The temperature should be 170 degrees Fahrenheit when done (Trichinosis bacteria is killed at 137 degrees Fahrenheit)

During the last 10 minutes of cooking, coat the outside of the roast with the reserved chutney. Serves six-eight people.

OSSO BUCO

This is a way to make an Italian delicacy of a not-very-meaty veal shank:

1 medium onion, finely chopped
1 large carrot, finely chopped
1 large celery stalk, finely chopped
2 large cloves garlic, finely chopped
4 pounds veal shanks (Have butcher cut them in 2-inch pieces)
4 tablespoons flour with browning agent
1/2 cup dry white wine
1/2 cup chicken stock
1 can tomatoes, chopped
1/2 teaspoon basil
1/2 teaspoon thyme
2 bay leaves

Saute first four ingredients until soft, about 3-4 minutes. Coat veal with mixture of flour and browning agent. Add veal to the sauteed ingredients. Cook 10 minutes on high and 15 minutes on 50 percent power, covered. Turn shanks and add other ingredients. Place foil over top of food. re-cover and cook on high power for 25 minutes or until tender. If it's too watery, remove cover and cook 5 minutes to reduce the liquid. Serve over rice. Sprinkle Gremolata — a mixture of 1 tablespoon grated lemon peel, 1 tablespoon finely chopped garlic and 3 tablespoons finely chopped parsley — over the top. Serves four people.

BRAISED LAMB SHANKS

browning agent
salt and pepper to taste
1/2 cup flour
1 small onion, chopped
1 medium stalk celery, chopped
1 large clove garlic, minced
1/4 teaspoon thyme
1/2 teaspoon oregano
1/2 cup dry red wine
1/2 cup beef stock

Place vegetables and seasonings in an appropriate microwave cooking dish. Microwave on high for 3 minutes. In the meantime, paint lamb shanks with browning agent. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Place flour and shanks in a paper bag and shake to coat. Add shanks to vegetables. Microwave on high 4 minutes per shank. Add liquid. Cover. Microwave on 80 percent power for 30-40 minutes. Turn shanks over once while cooking. Serves four people.

Editor's note: Fandre was under the assumption, when he toured this area, that the "Microwaves Are For Cooking" show was being aired on North Carolina's public television stations. It is not, however. Diane Lucas, programming director, said that anyone interested in seeing the show started may write to her at UNC Public Television, P.O. Box 3508, Chapel Hill 27515.

FDA Report Says Facts Contradict Sugar Myths

WASHINGTON — Confused about sugar? It's no wonder. Myth and superstition surround this kitchen staple, and distinguishing sugar fact from fiction can be difficult.

Help is on the way, however, in the form of a recently released Food and Drug Administration report. A special FDA task force spent three years reviewing a 10-year accumulation of research on sugar's role in nutrition. Its conclusions put many of our most popular sugar myths to rest. Perhaps some of these will surprise you.

MYTH: Overweight people are likely to overconsume sugar.

FACT: The FDA panel found that overweight people actually eat less sugar than thin people do. Obesity is the result of many factors, including family history, individual metabolism and individual lifestyle. It is not what food is eaten, but the number of calories consumed and the number expended through exercise that influence weight loss.

MYTH: Individuals with diabetes cannot eat sugar.

FACT: In addition to concluding that sugar consumption does not cause diabetes, the FDA panel found that diabetic individuals can have sugar under some conditions. The main focus in treating many diabetics is control of body weight and regular physical exercise. And with both normal and diabetic individuals, the panel found no evidence that sugar is a unique cause of obesity.

MYTH: Sugar is responsible for behavior problems such as childhood hyperactivity.

FACT: After evaluating all the available research, the FDA panel found no evidence that sugar consumption is responsible for behavioral changes in children or adults. The commonly held belief that sugar intake is related to childhood hyperactivity is based on anecdotal reports, the scientists said, and is not supported by experimental evidence.

Scientists Say Garlic, Vegetables Do Wonders

By WARREN E. LEARY
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Researchers say they have evidence that certain foods, such as garlic and green vegetables, contain components that boost the immune system to fight cancer and infections.

Scientists said Monday that preliminary tests in a small group of subjects show that large amounts of garlic increase the number and activity of white blood cells that naturally kill cancer cells.

And other researchers reported that animal studies with high doses of vitamin B-6 indicated breakdown products of this nutrient primed other white cells to respond to infection.

In presentations at the annual meeting of the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology, both groups of researchers cautioned that their results are preliminary and should be interpreted cautiously.

Dr. Daila Gridley of Loma Linda University in California said vitamin B-6 may damage the nervous system in large doses and that people should take it cautiously.

Humans can safely take daily doses of about 100 milligrams of the vitamin, available in vegetables, whole grains and lean meats, and should await further research before consuming more, she said.

Gridley and her colleagues found that immune cells from the spleens of mice grew more rapidly when stimulated when they were incubated with high levels of vitamin B-6 and its active breakdown product, pyridoxal.

In earlier work, the researchers discovered that mice fed from 10 to 100 times the normal dose of the vitamin had stronger immune reactions and were much slower at growing tumors than animals given normal doses.

Another team of scientists reported that garlic, used from ancient times to prevent and treat disease, stimulates so-called natural killer cells in humans who eat a lot of it. These soldier cells attack tumor cells and virus-infected cells.

Previous research by other groups has shown that garlic kills a number of disease organisms, including viruses such as herpes simplex, fungi and bacteria.

Drs. Tariq Abdullah, Ahmed Elkadi and Osama Kandil gave both raw garlic and dry, encapsulated garlic to volunteers at the Akbar Clinic and Research Institute in Panama City, Fla. They described their institution as a small, private cancer treatment clinic and research facility supported by private donations.

Of nine healthy volunteers, three ate the equivalent of two bulbs of garlic daily for three weeks, three took the equivalent dose in capsule form and three had none of the herb.

Testing blood samples after the three-week period, the researchers found that natural killer cells from the raw garlic group killed 139 percent more tumor cells in culture than those from non-garlic eaters.

With the group taking the odorless and tasteless garlic capsules, the immune cells killed 155 percent more tumor cells than their counterparts from the non-garlic group.

"The most important conclusion is that this shows for the first time a direct effect of garlic on the immune system," Kandil told a news briefing.

The researchers said more research with many more subjects is needed before garlic can be recommended in formal immune-bolstering treatment programs, such as those for cancer and AIDS, or acquired immune deficiency syndrome.
