McFarlane: Reagan Says 'Help Contras'

By JIM DRINKARD
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Former National Security Adviser Robert C. McFarlane told Congress today that President Reagan ordered him to help Nicaragua's Contra rebels "hold body and soul together" even though the House and Senate had banned all U.S. military aid.
"The president repeatedly made clear in public and in private that he did not intend to break faith with the Contras," McFarlane said in his sworn testimony as the joint House-Senate hearings entered their second week.
"He directed that we make continued efforts to bring the movement into the good graces of Congress and the American people and that we assure the Contras of continuing administration support — to help them hold body and soul together — until the time when Congress would again agree to support them."

McFarlane emphasized that he had stressed to his own aides "that we were to operate at all times within the law, and that in particular we were not to solicit, encourage, coerce or otherwise broker financial contributions to the Contras."
McFarlane was expected to face tough questioning during the televised hearings.
"Do you think that you can let it hang out here today — the facts?" asked Arthur I. Liman, the Senate committee lawyer who began the questioning.

"I'll do my best sir," said a solemn-looking McFarlane.
In his opening statement, the former NSC director declared, "I regret and continue to regret the mistakes I have made" in the entire affair.
But, in a 12-page opening statement he read before responding to questions, McFarlane said the administration relied too heavily on covert operations and Congress had sent contradictory signals about its own views on the Contras.
The result was a "confused and contradictory policy," McFarlane said. "The policymakers who create conditions like this must bear some of the moral responsibility for the failures that follow," he declared.

McFarlane served as Reagan's National Security Adviser from Oct. 17, 1983 to Nov. 30, 1985. His involvement in the Iran-Contra affair continued afterwards, as he was recruited by the administration to make a secret trip to Tehran in May 1986 as part of an arms-for-hostages arrangement.
McFarlane has said publicly he feels a heavy responsibility for the failures of the Iran-Contra debacle, and was hospitalized in February for attempting suicide by taking an overdose of anti-depressant pills. Congressional aides have reported that McFarlane seemed brittle in private questioning, and broke down on at least one occasion.

McFarlane was expected to be questioned closely about Reagan's knowledge of his administration's efforts to assist the Contras during a period when all military assistance was banned.
It was during this period that NSC aide Lt. Col Oliver North was involved in establishing a secret supply network, and in raising funds from private sources to help the rebels.
McFarlane said at the time, in 1985, he did not believe that such financial support was necessary because a foreign country — widely reported to be Saudi Arabia — was

Barbie Refuses To Give Identity As Trial Opens

By JEFFREY ULBRICH
Associated Press Writer
LYON, France (AP) — Klaus Barbie, the Nazi Gestapo commander known as the "Butcher of Lyon," refused to acknowledge his identity at today's opening session of his trial on charges of crimes against humanity.

The 73-year-old Barbie, who is frail and gray-haired, looked pale and a bit drawn as he entered the courtroom in handcuffs. But he later smiled and laughed while chatting with his defense attorney and French-German interpreters.

A policeman removed the manacles, and Barbie sat in the defendant's box to the left of the three-judge court, gazing around the room packed with more than 800 journalists, lawyers, civil parties, court officials and members of the public.

Andre Cerdini, president of Lyon's Assize Court, called the roll of the 120 civil parties to the case and their lawyers as photographers and television cameramen recorded the opening of the proceedings.

Defense attorney Jacques Verges and Barbie posed smiling for the cameramen. After about 20 minutes, the judge ordered cameras from the building.

The 24-columned, 19th century courthouse on the bank of the Saone River was surrounded by dozens of police and metal crowd control barriers.

Inside the courtroom, police were everywhere, closely watching the crowd. Barbie sat just behind his lawyer, with the judges' bench to his right. To his left was a protective glass shield.

Cerdini asked Barbie to stand and give his name. Speaking in French, he said he was Klaus Altmann, the name he used for 39 years in South America. He said he was a businessman and gave an address in La Paz, Bolivia.

Charles Libman, one of the attorneys for civil parties participating in the case, told the court Barbie was presenting himself under a false identity and demanded the defendant acknowledge he had previously identified himself to investigators as Klaus Barbie.

Barbie responded in German: "I will not answer these questions."

After a sharp exchange between Libman and Verges, who said his

Ex-Actor Reagan Trades Quips On Age With Hope

By PAUL NOWELL
Associated Press Writer
FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — President Ronald Reagan had to reach back and pull a page out of his old acting book when he was forced to stare face-to-face with comedian Bob Hope at Pope Air Force Base.
The two made a cameo appearance during Sunday's filming of a Bob Hope television special at the base, where Reagan traded barbs about old age with the famous comedian.

"You look good for your age," Hope told the president.
"Bob, you look good for your age, too," Reagan responded. Then they both said, "I hope I look that good when I'm your age."
During his five-minute appearance on stage, Reagan also joined in a "Happy Birthday" rendition for Hope, who just turned 84.
"Mr. President, I thought you might parachute into this

Thatcher Bids For Third Term

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher today announced Britain will hold a general election June 11, a year early. It heralded the Conservative Party leader's bid to become the first British prime minister ever to win three terms in a row.
The announcement from her official residence at 10 Downing Street said Parliament will be dissolved May 18.

The announcement came after the 61-year-old Mrs. Thatcher held a special 50-meeting meeting with Queen Elizabeth II at Buckingham Palace, the traditional pre-election audience to seek the dissolution of Parliament.
"The Prime Minister today asked

Her Majesty the Queen to proclaim the dissolution of Parliament," the announcement said.
"Her Majesty has been graciously pleased to signify that she will comply with this request."
Mrs. Thatcher, whose party has been leading in recent public opinion polls, became Europe's first woman prime minister on May 3, 1979.

She called the June 11 election a year before her second five-year term expires.
Mrs. Thatcher waved and smiled at photographers as she returned to Downing Street after meeting the queen.

Meese Requests Wedtech Probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney General Edwin Meese asked today that an independent counsel conduct a criminal investigation of his ties to scandal-plagued Wedtech Corp.
In a statement, Justice Department spokesman Terry Eastland said that "the attorney general desires that this matter be resolved as promptly as possible, and in a forum that will prevent partisan political exploitation."
"For these reasons, Mr. Meese ...

has asked the Department of Justice to act as expeditiously as possible to ensure that an independent counsel investigate all questions that have been raised," said the statement.
A letter from Meese's attorney, Nathan Lewin, also released today, asked that the investigation of Meese be conducted by James C. McKay, an independent counsel who already is probing the lobbying activities of former White House aide Lyn Nofziger on behalf of Wedtech.

On April 6, Meese acknowledged to reporters that he had interceded in May 1982 as White House counselor on behalf of Wedtech, directing his White House staff to ensure that the Army gave fair consideration to Wedtech's effort to win a $32 million contract to build engines for the military.
Wedtech subsequently was awarded the no-bid contract. It was revealed later last month that Meese's investment manager, W. Franklyn Chinn of San Francisco, sat on the board of directors of Wedtech beginning in 1985. Meese invested $60,000 in a "limited blind partnership" with Chinn.

The statement issued today also said that the attorney general "has acted to terminate the limited partnership under California law."
The Justice Department statement said Meese does not know if Chinn in

'Love Run'

The Muscular Dystrophy Association is sponsoring a "Love Run" in eastern North Carolina this summer.

Participants will seek sponsors for each mile they run during a given period. For information about how to take part in the fund-raising project contact Natascha Loeb, district director, MDA, 6612 Six Forks Road, Suite 104, Raleigh, 27615; phone, 448-8714.

Field Day

Growers and others interested in wheat, barley, oats and rye will get a review of current technology and a preview of things in development at the annual Small-Grain Field Day May 19 in Tidewater Research Station near Plymouth.

The program begins at 4:30 p.m., said Mitch Smith, assistant agricultural extension agent for Pitt County. North Carolina State University agricultural scientists and extension specialists will discuss plant breeding, plant pathology and entomology.

Special attention will be given to Hessian fly problems, Smith said, as well as rates and timing of nitrogen applications, disease management and triticale.

The station is located six miles east of Plymouth on U.S. 64.

Class Play

Sue Worthington's third-grade class at Pactolus Elementary School recently presented the play "Trouble in Tooth Town." The play concluded a unit on dental health and nutrition.

Graduates

Six Greenville residents recently were among about 200 graduates of Peace College during the ceremonies on the lawn of the campus.

They are Miriam Louise Johnston, Ingrid Elizabeth Ross, Nancy Kenon Sneed, Elizabeth (Lisa) May Trevathan, Rhonda Lou Wallace and Elizabeth Ashley Wasson.

Installation

Officers will be installed during a meeting of the Pitt County Day Care Association Tuesday.

The group will meet at 6:30 p.m. at Little Darlin's Day Care Center, 1201 W. Third St., Ayden. A covered-dish dinner is part of the meeting. This is the last meeting until after the summer.

PTA Meets

The PTA of Eastern Elementary School will meet Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in the school's multipurpose room.

Pitt Medical Society Gives Scholarships

Seven area students are being honored by the Pitt County Medical Society with scholarship for studies in health care.

The scholarship recipients are Sharon Danielle Mann, Roger Nelson, Rebecca Liles, Jeanne Elayne Katrobos, Tracey Walston, Bella Soohie Kang and Lisa Ann Pollard.

Ms. Mann is a rising junior in the school of nursing at East Carolina University. She plans to practice in rehabilitation medicine in North Carolina.

Nelson is enrolled in the nursing curriculum at Pitt Community College. He plans to be a nurse at Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Ms. Liles is a student at Ayden-Grifton High School. She plans to obtain a bachelor's degree at Elon College, with a double major in biology and cytology. She then plans to enter graduate school at the University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill and get a doctorate in cyto-genetics.

Ms. Katrobos, a student at D.H. Conley High School, has been accepted by East Carolina University. She plans to major in chemistry and would like to attend the East Carolina University School of Medicine.

Ms. Walston, a student at Farmville Central High School, has been accepted at East Carolina University. She plans a career in radiology.

Ms. Kang is a student at Rose High School and has been accepted by UNC-Chapel Hill. She plans to major in biology, with a minor in chemistry. She would like to be a surgeon.

Ms. Pollard, a student at North Pitt High School, has been accepted by East Carolina University. She would like to get an undergraduate degree in chemistry and attend the ECU School of Medicine. She would like to be either a family physician or a gynecologist.

The total value of the seven scholarships is $1,750.

WILL BABY HAVE HEALTHY TEETH?

What can an expectant mother do to make sure her baby will grow up to have healthy teeth? There are two things that will make all the difference in the world.

One is the child's genetic make up, the genes he or she inherits from both parents. They will help determine the size, shape, texture, and other qualities of a child's teeth. There's nothing a parent can do to control this. It just happens.

But there is something an expectant mother can do to give baby a good dental start. She can do whatever possible to protect her health.

She should eat a well-balanced diet, as recommended by her physician. And she should avoid infection, including tooth decay and gum disease. Any infection can have unhealthy consequences for mother and child. A dental checkup and treatment will help eliminate any source of infection caused by decayed teeth or gum disease.

Once baby's bottom is slapped and the crying starts, you should start planning for that first visit to the dentist at about age three. That's when all 20 of the primary teeth should have erupted and we can evaluate progress or problems.

Call our office for an appointment for your toddler. Let's eliminate dental decay while he/she is young.

Note: We invite all participants of the Blue Cross/Blue Shield personal care plan to come by our office. We are a member of Cost Care.

Prepared as a public service to promote better dental health. From the office of Kenneth T. Perkins, D.D.S., P.A., Evans St., Family and General Dentistry.

"MYSTERY" SPOTS

One of the most frustrating problems homeowners face is permanent discolorations with no apparent cause. Today the carpet's fine—tomorrow spots appear, seemingly without cause. Several household products can cause "mystery" spots if not used with care. The chief culprits are:

Any product which removes mildew from shower walls or from the home's exterior probably contains chlorine bleach. When chlorine contacts dyes in nylon carpet, rapid (almost instant!) discoloration usually occurs. Also, cleaners containing strong acids (bowl cleaners) or alkalis (oven or hard-surfaced floor cleaners) may bleach fibers in time.

Be cautious of toilet bowl sanitizers (blue in color), which easily contact-dye carpet, as do several popular dandruff shampoos. Pesticides, including those in pet shampoos, may turn red dyes blue after prolonged exposure, and time-release plant foods contain similar chemicals which may cause "mystery" discolorations.

Powdered bleaches spilled on carpet may go unnoticed until activated gradually by humidity in the air, or suddenly by cleaning. Either way, dye-loss results.

Watch The Chemicals

Household disinfectants contain chemicals (look for phenol on the label) which are dilute versions of those used to dissolve fibers and dyes. In time, your carpet may likewise be adversely affected.

One of the newest culprits causing "mystery spots" is a chemical (benzoyl peroxide) used in acne medicines. After application, the teenager attempts to wash this medicine off his hands but to no avail, since it isn't easily dissolved in water. He then reclines in front of the TV, leaning on the hand still coated with acne medicine. Given sufficient time and humidity, a hand-shaped discoloration appears. Don't blame teenagers entirely, because fade creams used on age spots by the older generation can do the same thing—especially if carpet contact is made while tusseling with grandchildren!

The solution? Other than avoiding contact between the carpet and these chemicals, there is none. If color is lost, call a professional cleaning technician for advice. ©GFC 1987

Philippines Report Heavy Voting In 'Honest' Election

By ROBERT H. REID
Associated Press Writer

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Millions of Filipinos cast ballots today for a new U.S.-style Congress, with President Corazon Aquino's personal popularity expected to give her centrist coalition a strong majority.

Mrs. Aquino said the election was the most peaceful and honest "perhaps since independence" in 1946, adding there was a record turnout but giving no figure for total votes cast. Election chief Ramon Felipe estimated 80 percent of the 26 million voters cast ballots.

At least seven people were reported killed in scattered election incidents and there were some reports of vote fraud. But the violence did not compare with the bloodshed, intimidation and corruption which marked the 1986 presidential contest between Mrs. Aquino and Ferdinand E. Marcos.

"The sight of millions of Filipinos showing up at the polls at the first hour this morning and patiently waiting for their turn to vote according to their conscience is the most impressive proof that the democratic process has indeed taken root in our country," Mrs. Aquino said in a statement.

Polls closed at 4 p.m. after nine hours. Eighty-four candidates ran for the 24-seat Senate and 1,899 for the 200-seat House of Representatives.

Most commentators expected Mrs. Aquino's Lakas ng Bayan, or People Power, coalition to win majorities in both chambers. Official returns are not expected for at least a week, although the private National Movement for Free Elections expected unofficial trends late tonight.

Balloting was suspended in one district in the Sulu island chain, where Moslem rebels called a boycott.

Mrs. Aquino came to power in a military-civilian revolt that ended Marcos' nearly 20-year rule in February 1986. Today's election establishes a legislature in the Philippines for the first time since March 1986, when Mrs. Aquino abolished the single-chamber assembly dominated by followers of the former president. Since then, she has governed by decree.

Two supporters of an independent congressional candidate in Luzon's Tarlac province were shot to death by a rival's followers, police said. Three other campaign workers were reported slain in two separate attacks on Cebu island.

Others slain in election violence included a village chief on Panay island and a politician's bodyguard in Mindanao's Pagadian City.

A poll worker and her daughter were reported injured when a booby-trapped package exploded at a Davao City precinct.

There also were scattered reports of armed men stealing ballot boxes in northern and eastern Luzon island.

The new Congress will share in decisions on such crucial issues as the communist and Moslem insurgencies, land reform and the future of U.S. bases after their lease expires in 1991. Legislators will serve until Mrs. Aquino's term expires June 30, 1992.

Mrs. Aquino staked her enormous personal prestige on the People Power ticket and urged voters to reject the opposition as extremists and vestiges of the Marcos regime.

Candidates also were fielded by the center-right Grand Alliance for Democracy, the New Society Movement founded by Marcos and the left-wing Alliance for New Politics.

Senate candidates of the Grand Alliance included Juan Ponce Enrile, who was fired last November as defense minister after an alleged coup plot, and Arturo Tolentino, who led an abortive attempt last July to install himself as president.

The Alliance for New Politics' list of Senate candidates included Bernabe Buscayno, former commander of the communist New People's Army. It is the first time an avowedly leftist party has fielded candidates here since 1946, but its Senate candidates were given little chance of election.

In one Manila district, where Mrs. Aquino's sister-in-law Tessie Aquino-Oreta faces a strong leftist challenger in a House race, witnesses said campaign workers were handing out "sample ballots" marked with Mrs. Aquino-Oreta's name within 50 yards of the polling station.

In a broadcast message from Hawaii, where he has lived since his ouster, Marcos told supporters to be on guard against fraud and denied plotting to sabotage the election.

Senators are elected nationwide, while House members are selected by district.

CORY VOTES — Philippines President Corazon Aquino puts her ballot into the box at her hometown polling station Monday in Luisita, Tarlac Province. Fatal Jet's Recorder Examined

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — A special government commission today examined a flight recorder from a Polish jetliner to determine what caused the crippled aircraft to crash near Warsaw, killing all 183 people aboard.

The 13-member commission, headed by Deputy Premier Zbigniew Szalajda, was expected to issue its first statement on the crash later today, said Stefan Pozniak, a spokesman for the Transport Ministry.

Police found the flight recorder from the LOT Polish Airlines jetliner Sunday. One report said the pilot radioed moments before Saturday's crash: "This is the end. We are saying farewell."

The jet reported engine trouble shortly after leaving Warsaw's Okęcie International Airport, and was returning when it went down in a forest three miles from the airport. Witnesses said one of its four engines was on fire.

A Polish aviation expert said today that judging by the pilot's actions, the captain probably believed he had the plane under control and would reach the runway until the final minutes.

Ryszard Witkowski, who has been a member of several government commissions investigating plane accidents, said otherwise the captain would not have tried to fly the disabled plane back to Warsaw and would have tried to land at another airfield.

"The engines must have lacked power for the last kilometers of the approach to the airport," Witkowski was quoted as saying by the official youth newspaper Sztandar Mlodych.

Greenville's first public library was established in 1904.

Jobless Rate

North Carolina had a decrease of 0.1 percent in its unemployment rate for April. Last month's figures, released by the U.S. Department of Labor, show the state's seasonally adjusted rate was 4.7 percent, down slightly from the March rate of 4.8 percent.

The state's unemployment rate is the third lowest among the 11 largest states. Only New Jersey with 3.9 percent and Massachusetts with 4.0 percent had lower state unemployment rates.

Shooting

A 22-year-old Ayden woman was listed in serious condition at Pitt County Memorial Hospital early today after sustaining gunshot wounds to the face and arms Sunday night, authorities say.

Nita Louise White of 127 Faye Street, Village Trailer Park, Ayden, was transported to the hospital from her home after the incident was reported at 9:09 p.m., according to Officer Steve Whaley of the Ayden Police Department.

Whaley said Ms. White was shot three times with a .22-caliber rifle.

Debra Ann Oxley, 25, of Route 5 Greenville, has been arrested and charged with first degree burglary, assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill and inflicting serious injury in connection with the incident, a spokesman for the Ayden Police Department.

Ms. Oxley was being held in Pitt County Jail without bond, the spokesman said.

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina has received $30 million in federal interstate discretionary funds, which will allow the state Department of Transportation to award contracts for the completion of two sections of Interstate 40.

The discretionary funds were awarded to North Carolina by the U.S. Department of Transportation in February.

Peace Debate May Lead To Breakup Of Israeli Pact

JERUSALEM (AP) — A divided Cabinet debated Israel's participation in a proposed Middle East peace conference today, but officials said the two sides did not bridge their differences, raising the possibility of a government breakup.

The coalition government of Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir and Foreign Minister Shimon Peres is sharply split over the issue, with Shamir opposing participation in an international conference and Peres arguing Israel will miss an historic chance if it says no.

Both Peres and Shamir have threatened to call new elections if their position is rejected by the 10-member inner Cabinet, which is evenly divided between Peres' leftist Labor Party and Shamir's right-wing Likud bloc.

Peres would not say what was discussed during today's four-hour meeting, but he said another session was planned for Wednesday, the day he is to fly to Washington. His aide said Peres still hoped to leave Wednesday night.

Government officials from both Likud and Labor said no progress was made in settling differences over the international conference and hinted at the possibility of new elections.

"If you ask me about the likelihood of a compromise after this meeting, I'd say it's highly unlikely," said one official who spoke on condition that neither his name or party affiliation be used.

Another senior government official also said "no progress" was made today and predicted a stalemate at the next session.

The political assessments after the meeting contrasted with earlier predictions that the Cabinet was moving toward a compromise involving a decision not to vote on the peace plan but to allow Peres to continue contacts.

Israel radio said Secretary of State George Shultz sent a message to Peres and Shamir on Sunday, urging them to take advantage of the latest progress in the peace process. The report said Peres presented the message during the Cabinet meeting.

On Sunday, mounted police used clubs to disperse about 1,000 protesters of the left-wing Peace Now movement and several hundred right-wing demonstrators of the Gush Emunim settler movement and American-born Rabbi Meir Kahane's anti-Arab Kach party. The opposing groups gathered outside Shamir's house and shouted insults at each other.

Sound Approach

The proposed 1987-88 budget for Greenville appears to be a fiscally sound approach for an interim period in city management.

Some of the policies initiated by the budget could represent a questionable approach under a full-time permanent city manager, but for a city searching for a top executive, they are acceptable.

The budget represents a "hold the line" approach to spending for the coming year by trimming $1.3 million from the preliminary funding proposals. It further encourages balanced spending by incorporating a hiring freeze, which at this time seems appropriate.

The budget stops one step short, however, on the issue of garbage collection fees. Eliminating the charges for residential collection is sound, but cutting out service to businesses is a mistake. That move would force businesses to seek private collection, which for some establishments with special collection needs — restaurants and grocery stores, for example — could prove prohibitively expensive.

Garbage collection is a basic, public health service paid for when businesses and residents pay their taxes. The user fee concept should not apply to this needed service — neither should cutbacks. Refuse collection is not an area where reduction of service should occur.

The council should examine the proposed budget and its policies carefully and be prepared to make a decision without delay. Greenville needs a budget in place when the 1987-88 fiscal year begins July 1. In 1986, council members vasculated on spending issues too long and the result was a hastily OK'd budget approved June 30 — one day before the new fiscal year. The council should avoid that pitfall in 1987.

The council should also examine the budget with the knowledge that financial policies initiated under the interim city manager should not necessarily apply to new city leadership. The board should be careful not to set an example on policy that would tie the hands of a new city manager.

For example, the council should realize that a hiring freeze, although acceptable in a transition period of city government, is not feasible for a city growing as fast as Greenville. Neither is reduction of services sound.

By curtailing spending for now, however, the proposed budget represents a solid fiscal approach to funding in 1987-88.

Priorities Drawn

The U.S. Senate's approval of a trillion-dollar budget involves more than the shock attendant on considering a package of those dimensions.

It was a Democrat-written spending plan that was passed by a 56-14 vote. All but four of the Republican minority stood opposed; and it's doubtful the size of the program influenced the "nay" votes. One may presume those were prompted by loyalty to the Reagan budget offered in January.

Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd observed his party's version included "no gimmicks, no garage sales of assets, no attempt to use the next generation's credit card to pay for today's bill."

It does include a $131 billion deficit ... according to the Congressional Budget Office ... well beyond the $108 billion ceiling imposed in the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings balanced budget law.

Lawton Chiles, chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, says by passing the budget the Senate "is saying we're going to borrow more money or start living a little bit within our means."

The House passed a similar budget in April but the House plan omitted extra defense spending the Senate backed. The Senate version would provide $290.6 billion for defense next year (enough to keep up with inflation) with the condition that $7 billion of that amount would only be available if the president approves $18.3 billion worth of new taxes for 1988.

Added taxes have been consistently opposed by Mr. Reagan.

The Democratic domestic spending program just as consistently gives more emphasis (i.e., money) to domestic needs in such fields as agriculture, housing, transportation, education and job training, Medicare and other health programs.

At this point, both the Congress and the White House may be presumed to be indulging in a bit of posturing. Still, it tells us something of the difference in priorities between the two parties.

Each Candidate Is An Issue

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the ruins of Gary Hart's long, lost, presidential campaign there is a message for the rivals to whom he surrendered the field: like it or not, each of them is an issue.

"I am what I am," Hart said in his campaign farewell. "I don't want to be the issue."

But there was no option.

No one can be a candidate for president without facing, and withstanding, the glare of unrelenting scrutiny.

That isn't new and it isn't wrong, Hart's angry farewell notwithstanding. The voters are not choosing among position papers or abstractions. They are selecting a leader, a person with habits, traits, attitudes and, inevitably, failings.

In judging the people who want to be president, personal attributes are at least as significant as the position the candidate takes on taxes, jobs, inflation, war and peace — the kind of topics Hart said the voters really want discussed.

Politicians can and have reversed themselves on specific issues, sometimes on the central issues of a campaign. President Lyndon B. Johnson campaigned in opposition to the use of U.S. soldiers in Vietnam, suggesting that Republican nominee Barry Goldwater would send troops there. Johnson sent them, and wound up a political victim of the war he escalated.

Even though positions change, personality traits usually do not. And reputations are altered slowly if at all, which may have been Hart's undoing.

Rumors of his involvements with women persisted for his 15 years in national politics. They intruded on his first presidential campaign, and he had hotly disputed them at the beginning of his second, a scant month before it ended on Friday.

Ironically, on the Sunday The Miami Herald published its report that he had spent part of the weekend with a 29-year-old sometime actress while Mrs. Hart was in Denver, a piece in The New York Times Magazine quoted him as challenging reporters to check the rumors.

"If anybody wants to put a tail on me, go ahead," he said. "They'd be very bored."

Without that background, a candidate of Hart's standing might well have withstood an indiscretion with a confession of error. With it, the campaign was over.

One episode had become the symbol of nagging questions and rumors about Hart's private life and personal judgment.

"Gary Hart doesn't claim to be a saint, and the contest for the presidency is not a competition for sainthood," said former Sen. George McGovern, defending his one-time campaign manager. "It's more important that we have a thoughtful person with some sense of history and judgment about the great problems of this country."

Judgment is at the intersection of personal and political issues.

Not that the most faithful husbands necessarily make the best presidents. Ann Lewis, chairman of Americans for Democratic Action, said she was certain Richard Nixon was a better husband than Franklin D. Roosevelt, but she preferred FDR for the White House.

With few exceptions, politicians resist the idea that their personal lives are proper issues. Jimmy Carter didn't mind; he purposely made himself an issue in the trust-me campaign of 1976.

He had some trouble with human frailty, unwisely deciding to discuss the matter in a Playboy interview during that campaign. "I'm human and I'm tempted," Carter said. "I've looked on a lot of women with lust. I've committed adultery in my heart many times."

Carter won despite the Playboy diversion. He won in part because the personal image of his opponent, President Gerald R. Ford, also had become an issue.

Ford was among the most athletic of presidents, but he had been cast as a man who stumbled down steps and bumped his head on helicopters. The image was set and it added to the political burden of the appointed successor who pardoned Nixon. Polls showed him closing in on Carter until Ford insisted during a debate there was no Soviet domination of eastern Europe. He was wrong but he stuck to it, and cemented the image.

Edmund S. Muskie, who led the Democratic field into the 1972 campaign, was the subject of scrutiny because of his temperament and, most specifically, his temper. Under the strain of the campaign, there were bursts of irritation and anger. So when Muskie went to the Manchester Union-Leader on a snowy Saturday to denounce publication of an editorial critical of his wife — and by some accounts shed tears in the process — it became the symbol of that temper. His campaign, essentially, was over.

George Romney came to the 1968 Republican campaign billed as a successful governor of Michigan who had proven himself in the automobile industry, but with little polish on national matters and foreign affairs. His campaign ended short of the New Hampshire primary.

The item that cemented Romney's downfall came from a radio interview he'd given six months earlier. In it, Romney said that as part of a delegation of governors on an administration-sponsored trip to South Vietnam, he'd been subject to a brainwashing.

But for the image of the inept campaigner that already had crippled him, that might well have been read as the perceptive comment it was. Instead, it was seen as more bumbling.

Public Forum

To the editor:

Have you ever heard that actions speak louder than words? The actions exhibited by Sheriff Ralph Tyson are much more offensive than what Greenville Mayor Les Garner has said. Sheriff Tyson seems to be functioning under the same theory as the British prior to the American Revolution, which was taxation without representation.

County Commissioners, you hold the purse strings to the sheriff's budget. Where is the minority representation at the Sheriff's Department? When it comes to minority representation at the Sheriff's Department in Pitt County, the sheriff has a bigger deficit than the federal budget. The County Commissioners continue to fund the Sheriff's Department, knowing his opposition to hiring and promoting minorities. Perhaps it's time we follow the lead of President Reagan and attempt to balance our deficit. Perhaps you as a black community should entertain the thought of a block vote for the Republican Party.

We as taxpayers are tired of leaving the polls with nothing but empty promises. Sheriff, it's time to pay up and try to balance your minority deficit. Mayor Garner has apologized for what he said and has tried to make things better. Sheriff Tyson has never apologized about the racial injustice that is every-day practice at the Sheriff's Department. It is a shame to think that this behavior is so commonplace that no one looks twice.

We as a community cannot change what the Greenville mayor has said. But let's not embarrass Greenville and Pitt County any more by creating an even bigger bloop and blunder by letting Sheriff Tyson continue as he has for the last 21 years. Stand up, Pitt County. Let your voices be heard. These are elected officials we are dealing with.

Katie Lebaron

To the editor:

I have read, with regret, the controversy with respect to naming the new county elementary school after Arthur Alford. Whether or not the school is named for him is immaterial to me, but I feel that the perception that some people have about "Ott" is incorrect insofar as racial bias is concerned.

Ott was my friend, so I am not completely objective. But in all the years I knew him, I never heard him express racial bias. Ott Alford's major bias was for quality education in Pitt County. Since he is unable to defend himself against these allegations, I think it is only fair that another opinion be heard.

Dr. Charles C. Mitchell
Greenville

To the editor:

I was in the last graduating class of Winterville High School when Arthur Alford was superintendent of the Pitt County School System. I wasn't for or against this man. But I remember several things.

When I was in the 11th grade, we had all white teachers, but we were in need of a biology teacher. Mr. Alford got us a black biology teacher. He told us before she came that he felt she was very well qualified and that she was one of the best that he had information on. He told us to cooperate with her and not look at her color, but at her knowledge that she was going to bring to us. This fine lady came and she was a very good teacher. She even made a statement once that, if it wasn't for Mr. Alford and his confidence in her ability, she felt that she would have never gotten her job.

Maybe the black people never saw a side that was expressed to us.

As far as naming the school, I really don't care what the name will be. Why not have the children of the county name it? In 30 or 50 years, these people that are complaining won't know or care anyway. It will be the children who will have to pronounce and write this name. It will be they who will have it on their records of the future.

Why have it named for someone at all? Let the kids name it and if they want to call it Sesame Street School, just inform them that this name will be on their records — not yours or mine — for as long as they live.

As far as "it would be a slap in the face and an insult," I think from what we at WHS saw those years, these people should research a little more before any more is said.

I don't even like holidays named for people. These people being George Washington, Abraham Lincoln, Columbus and King. These are just all a gimmick that benefits only the merchants.

Now, if all — I mean all — the stores would close on all those days, then that really would be a holiday.

Strength For Today

"One foot up and one foot down,

That's the way to London town."

This old rhyme came out of a bygone era when most people had no way to get about from place to place but by plodding along the highway, one foot up and one foot down.

Modern transportation has, of course, made it infinitely easier for even people of modest circumstances to travel long distances, but it is not true that the passing of time has taken all the drudgery out of the pilgrimage of life. In most spheres it is still true that achievement comes as a result of one foot up and one foot down.

So don't get discouraged if the reward of your efforts seems long in coming. There are not jet liners to success. Most of us have to follow the method of the poor man of long ago making his way to London town.

Secord Mystery Deepens

Analysis

WASHINGTON — Except for a few occasions when he invoked the "lawyer-client privilege," retired major general Richard V. Secord never once flatly refused to answer a question that was put to him last week by the House and Senate panels investigating the Iran-contra affair.

Even when he protested that he was being "badgered" by Senate Counsel Arthur Liman, he kept answering. In four days, he gave hundreds, if not thousands of responses; yet in the end it was clear he had answered on his own terms and, if anything, had deepened the mysteries of the case.

Who, really, was Richard V. Secord in the affair? Was he just a private businessman as he repeatedly asserted? Or was he a covert agent of the White House — or an "agent of the CIA," as he was described in a memo by White House aide Oliver L. North?

And what was the covert organization that Secord referred to as "the enterprise"? Was it just set up by Secord and his partners to make money on business deals that came their way as a result of Secord's unique connections in government? Or was it set up with the knowledge and direction of high U.S. officials and the White House, to carry out secret initiatives outside the system of accountability established by Congress?

The questions about Secord's status — was he a government agent or a private operator? — may ultimately turn out to be at the heart of the Iran-contra controversy.

Although many of the questions seemed to focus on the narrow issue of whether Secord was in the business for the money, the underlying question was whether he was brought into both the contra and Iran operations so that the Reagan White House could hide activities it knew Congress already had barred, or would attempt to halt if known.

Secord plainly was no ordinary businessman. He testified, for example, that the communication system employed by "the enterprise" was a secure one that used a network of six sophisticated encryption devices provided by the ultra secret National Security Agency through North at no cost. In addition, the internal coding tape, which was changed monthly by the NSA, was also provided.

With these portable KL-43A devices, Secord and the people he referred to as his "operatives" could send messages over the telephone with no fear of private — or governmental — eavesdroppers.

As a "private businessman," he had unusual access. In the summer of 1984, his friend at the National Security Council, North, introduced him to the contra leader who would become a customer for $10 million worth of arms in 1984 and 1985. When the White House brought him into the secret Iran initiative in November 1985 to help Israelis ship arms, North provided him with a special letter on White House stationery asking him to provide "again" some "discrete assistance... in support of our national interest."

In the second week of January 1986, Secord testified, the new national security adviser John M. Poindexter invited him to his office in the White House and said he and the president appreciated his services rendered in the contra project and the earlier effort to help the Israelis.

Poindexter asked for his "help," and the next day, Secord said, he was invited to a second meeting held in the White House situation room. Also attending were North, then CIA general counsel Stanley Sporkin, the CIA specialist on the Near East and the CIA's top man on covert operations, Clair George.

Secord testified that these men were discussing the details of a presidential authorization for the covert sale of arms to Iran in which the U.S. government, through the CIA, would hide its role by making a sale through a "third party."

"That's why I was at the meeting," said Secord. "I was the 'third party'. I was to be the commercial cut out, if you will."

While Secord claimed repeatedly that the "enterprise" he used to carry out the plan was strictly private, Poindexter in a memo to the president written the day after the situation room meeting, said that the Central Intelligence Agency would use an "authorized agent" to handle the arms sale.

When presented with the document Friday, Secord said he had never seen it before.

Not surprisingly, the congressional investigators have been particularly aggressive in questions about the administration's deliberate efforts to keep Congress in the dark. In the case of Iran, the White House failed for 10 months to inform Congress of the covert sale of weapons-for-hostages, perhaps fearing that congressional leaders would strongly object to it as running counter to public U.S. counter-terrorism policy.

In the case of the contras, the Boland amendment prohibited all U.S. governmental aid to the contras from Oct. 3, 1984, through Dec. 19, 1985, and subsequently only humanitarian, communications and intelligence aid was allowed. In an electric few minutes of interchange, the amendment's author, Rep. Edward P. Boland, D-Mass., read the language of the law.

"General, they're very simple English words, and if you've demonstrated anything here in the last four days it's your magnificent knowledge of the English language."

"I understand the words, Mr. Boland, but it also tells me that private funding is legal," said Secord minutes later.

Secord's role enabled his White House contact, North, to accomplish tasks that could not be achieved through normal government channels.

Instead, North turned to "the enterprise," a network of shell companies, Swiss and Panamanian bank accounts, and fiduciary arrangements created at Secord's instructions. In mid-1985, North met with Secord in Miami and urged him to help set up a private airlift to carry military supplies to the contras. In November 1985, funds began to flow into the main enterprise account, Lake Resources in Switzerland.

And in December, North directed Secord to divert to the contras $800,000 that had been deposited by an Israeli businessman to pay for transportation to Iran of Israeli-owned U.S. weapons.

Beginning with the first sale of U.S. arms to Iran through Secord, much bigger money began flowing into the Lake account. And, according to records, $222,000 was taken from the Lake account to buy munitions on Feb. 27, along with other expenditures on the contra airlift.

If it was proved that Secord's enterprise acted as agent for the U.S. government, then the profits from these sales would be U.S. government funds. In that case, the eventual use of the $3.5 million that Secord testified went to buy arms for the contras would be an unequivocal violation of the Boland amendment.

But Secord argued last week that he had never signed a contract with the U.S. government or its agencies during this period, and was acting as a private entrepreneur.

Secord repeatedly asserted that "not a nickel of government funds" were used to pay for the arms, planes, crew and other costs connected with transporting U.S. arms and spare parts to Iran in 1986. These expenses, he said, were covered "up front" by getting the Iranian middlemen to give him cash far in excess of the price charged by the U.S. government for the weapons.

If Secord turns out to have been an agent of the NSC, employed under cover as a private entrepreneur in order to carry out a series of covert actions not approved by Congress, the Iran-contra affair could grow still messier and more embarrassing for the administration.

The Last Thing This Man Is Going To Do Is Sell You A Birdhouse.

He's a Perdue housing representative.

And he's as concerned about your operation as you are. He's not going to waltz in and give you a lot of fast talk or high pressure. The first thing he's going to do is answer your questions, clearly and simply, without a runaround. Answers about cost, cash flow, building specifications, service contracts, legal work, financing alternatives, construction time, and almost anything else connected with a poultry operation. Then he'll help you go over your operation to see what poultry could realistically add. He'll review the growing opportunities Perdue has to offer and outline all your options. He'll make sure you have all the answers and all the facts, then let you decide if you want to talk about investing in a Perdue House.

This man has the know-how you need when you need to know about poultry. Call him, day or night, and get some answers.

GOP Convention May Be Battle Of Factions

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Chances are that when Republicans congregate in Asheville for their state convention, the biggest question in the air won't be whether Jack Hawke will retain his job as chairman of the North Carolina GOP.

Instead, the issue may boil down to how the party's feuding factions conduct themselves.

Will they bury their differences and depart in the spirit of unity Gov. Jim Martin sorely needs as he prepares to seek re-election in 1988? Or, will there be more of the floor fights, shouting matches and accusations of dirty tactics that marred conventions in Wake and Durham counties, among others?

Both sides in the chairmanship battle agree Hawke is the favorite, as a majority of the Republicans elected as delegates to the May 29-30 convention support him over Barry McCarty to lead the party the next two years.

Hawke, Martin's 1984 campaign manager, was elected by the party's Executive Committee in January to complete the term of former Chairman Bob Bradshaw, who resigned. Hawke is backed by Martin and the traditional wing of the state party.

McCarty, a professor at a fundamentalists college in Elizabeth City, is supported by Sen. Jesse Helms and the National Congressional Club, his political organization.

Hawke says his supporters won about 5,000 delegate slots to roughly 800 for McCarty in balloting at precinct and county conventions over the past several months. Carter Wrenn, director of the Congressional Club, says Hawke exaggerates his lead, though Wrenn won't say what he thinks the margin is.

Hawke acknowledges the state convention vote could be close because under convention rules, each county will cast all the votes allotted to it regardless of how many delegates show up. If a county is entitled to 100 votes and only 10 delegates attend, each will cast 10 votes regardless of whom they support.

"Our job right now is organizing a good turnout of people committed to us," Hawke said. "Even though in raw vote totals we have a five-to-one lead, attendance can make a big difference."

Wrenn said, "I think the Hawke people have the lead, but there's a lot of soft votes and a lot of undecided votes out there. Barry is an underdog ... but he has a chance to win."

The chairmanship fight is part of a loss to Democratic Sen. Terry Sanford as a product of GOP disunity. Little was heard from the Congressional Club leadership after Broyhill defeated David Funderburk for the GOP nomination, although Helms campaigned for Broyhill.

If the party is not firmly united next year, Martin could be deprived of the few votes that prove decisive in what likely will be a nip-and-tuck race against Democratic Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan.

"I don't think Republicans will have any problem uniting to help Jim Martin, but Jack (Hawke) is a divisive figure," Wrenn said. "He's got a problem with conservatives around the state. They feel like he's done some unfair things in this race ..."

Hawke says he's fought fairly and contends that the Congressional Club has nowhere else to go.

"If the conservatives of our state have any hope of electing candidates and influencing the direction of the state and nation, it has to be done within the Republican Party," he said. "The most conservative of the Democratic candidates is twice as liberal as the Republican candidates."

State Sen. Larry Cobb, R-Mecklenburg, a Hawke supporter, adds that failure to stand behind Martin and Hawke in 1988 could come back to haunt the Club.

"If Martin loses and there's any hint that the Club people sat on their hands ... the Martin people will remember it if Jesse Helms runs again in 1990," Cobb said. "If the Congressional Club thinks they don't need help from traditional Republicans to elect Jesse, they're wrong."

IN THE STATE

Paperwork

RALEIGH (AP) — The state Department of Correction sold almost 1 million pounds of scrap metal to a Goldsboro company in the late 1970s and early 1980s, but never sent the company a bill — a mistake that cost the state $237,107.

Though the three-year statute of limitations has run out, Correction Secretary Aaron Johnson says the state still hopes to collect the money.

Correction officials considered filing a lawsuit against Goldsboro Iron and Metal Co. to collect the debt, which covered the years 1979 and 1980, but rejected the notion in late 1985 after the Attorney General's Office concluded that the department had no chance to win.

Johnson also rejected a July 1985 offer by the company to settle the state's claim for up to $5,000.

Seymour Brown, president of Goldsboro Iron and Metal, said his company did not pay the bills from 1979 and 1980 because it had discarded its records from those years and could not substantiate the state's contention.

Block Grants

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin and state Department of Natural Resources and Community Development say $37.5 million has been allocated to North Carolina for the Community Development Block Grant.

The CDBG program is funded by the Department of Housing and Urban Development and is administered in North Carolina by the Division of Community Assistance.

CDBG funds are awarded to North Carolina local governments in four categories of community development. Community revitalization is the largest category and is used primarily for housing rehabilitation and public improvements, such as streets, water lines and sewer.

Appointed

RALEIGH (AP) — William A. Crews Jr. has been named deputy secretary for Operations in the state Department of Correction, officials say.

Correction Department Secretary Aaron Johnson says Crews will assist in carrying out plans to help eliminate overcrowding in state prisons and avoid federal intervention.

Crews, who has been an assistant secretary for the state Department of Crime Control and Public Safety since February 1985, begins his new duties Monday.

Alumni Awards

GREENBORO (AP) — Three women who are involved in fields ranging from education to politics were presented Alumni Distinguished Service Awards Saturday at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

Lou Hardy Frye, who graduated in 1942, was the first woman elected to the Moore County School Board, where she served for 24 years. Mrs. Frye, of Robbins, was a leader in the county's integration of its schools, in the consolidation of 15 high schools into three "super schools" and in the merging of three school systems.

South Carolina State Sen. Nell Smith is a former public school science teacher and a 1951 graduate. When her husband, a South Carolina state senator, died in 1981, she ran successfully to complete his term and has since been re-elected on her own.

Trudy R. Creed, a 1939 graduate, was recognized for her creativity in helping thousands of children with their reading skills. Ms. Creed, of Hildewood, N.J., has helped develop the highly successful "Photography and the Arts in the Teaching of Reading" program. She retired from teaching in 1982.

DETOUR — Law enforcement officials set up detours from a segment of U.S. 321 near Boone late Saturday in anticipation of a rock slide that eventually occurred Sunday afternoon. Traffic between Boone and Blowing Rock is now being diverted to the Blue Ridge Parkway. (AP Laserphoto)

Shifting Rock Buries Part Of U.S. 321 Near Boone

BOONE, N.C. (AP) — The state Highway Patrol is urging travelers to use alternate routes after a rock slide buried part of U.S. 321 under up to 15 feet of rock this past weekend.

State officials said Sunday they weren't sure when the four lanes between Boone and Blowing Rock would reopen.

"The Department of Transportation has a bunch of engineers and geologists on the scene, and about all they can do is monitor and see what else is about to fall," said Joseph Gabel, a Highway Patrol dispatcher. "They're going to have to take some type of action to get the rest of the rock down. There is still a whole lot more that has to come down."

The Highway Patrol urged travelers to use alternate routes U.S. 421 and N.C. 16 or U.S. 221 and N.C. 105.

For a northbound trucker turned back at the slide, the detour via U.S. 421 and Wilkesboro would add 70 miles.

The road was closed Saturday afternoon because of occasional falling rock and a foot-high buckle in southbound lanes. Then at 12:45 p.m. Sunday, tons of rock crashed down.

"It came down with a fairly easy slide, with a rumbling noise, not too vicious," said Kenneth Anderson, who watched from his wife's Christmas Shop across the street. "A few people standing in front of it took off running."

"I think it was just due to come, and it came off of there spectacularly," Anderson said.

There were no injuries.

The slide blocked Watauga County's major north-south road on a day of heavier-than-usual traffic.

The trouble started last week as a widening crack in a hillside that had been stable for years. "Nobody can figure out why now, all of a sudden," said a sheriff's department spokesman. "They built that road years and years ago."

Officials said that perhaps as little as one-third of the unstable rock on the hillside had fallen and that workers would have to remove the rest of the unstable rock — as well as clear the road — before U.S. 321 could reopen.

Legislature Faces Bills On Alcohol

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Bills that would ban open containers of beer in cars, require health warnings about alcohol where it is sold and ban alcohol advertising originating in North Carolina may come before legislators this week.

Lawmakers also are poised to resume action on a bill to reform North Carolina's civil justice system.

Votes were almost certain in the House Alcoholic Beverage Control Committee, where Rep. Coy Privette, R-Cabarrus, saw bills to eliminate cold-beer sales and brown-bagging killed last week.

"We'll take them all up Thursday," said Rep. Dave Redwine, D-Brunswick, committee chairman. "I want to give them a fair hearing and give Coy a chance to say his piece."

Privette predicted the ban on open beer in automobiles and the health warnings have a good chance of passing the committee.

"I think the industry got themselves in a corner on the cold beer selling," he said. "They said it wasn't cold beer that was leading to drunken driving and littering, they said it was allowing open containers in the cars."

"It makes no sense for it to be illegal to have one mini bottle of liquor open in your car and let you have a thousand cans of beer," he added.

Privette said his bill for rotating health warnings where alcohol is sold is similar to legislation passed in Georgia and New York. He said a recent study linking drinking with breast cancer in women provided one more reason for the warnings.

Redwine agreed that the ban on open containers had a chance of passing despite the overwhelming opposition to the bills taken up last week.

"My informal poll shows that one has the best chance," he said.

More than a month ago the Senate approved the controversial bill to eliminate a rule of law that bars compensation to accident victims who are partly to blame for their injuries. But with Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan casting the deciding vote, the Senate tacked on an amendment to make another far-reaching change.

The amendment would limit damages recovered from one party to their proportion of responsibility. Supporters of industry said that would eliminate the unfair practice of having those with "deep pockets" pay all of the damages when a second party causing a large part of the damages can't afford to pay.

House supporters of comparative fault generally oppose the amendment to eliminate joint and several liability and have spent several weeks "educating" people about the bill, said Rep. Martin Nesbitt, D-Buncombe.

"I think by letting it lay there people have had time to educate themselves on what joint and several is," he said. "That's a good example of what can happen when you have the time."

Rep. Dennis Wicker, D-Lee, said his Judiciary IV Committee will begin formal discussions of the bill this week, but he said he wasn't sure if the panel would vote on it.

Action appeared unlikely this week on bills to address the handling of low-level radioactive waste in North Carolina or to remove the state from an eight-state Southeast waste compact.

Partners Challenge Falwell Leadership

By RICK SCOPPE
Associated Press Writer
FORT MILL, S.C. (AP) — The Rev. Jerry Falwell says he isn't surprised that a group of PTL donors is worried about the television ministry's course under his guidance, but he says he is not trying to change the charismatic nature of the ministry.

Organizing as a group calling itself the "PTL Partners Advisory Board," some donors want to hold a referendum on whether Falwell should continue to lead the ministry.

Falwell said such concern "is certainly to be expected."

"These persons, I am told, are not former staff members at PTL," Falwell said Saturday. "Since they are not privy to the great financial crisis now facing us and the very sensitive commitment to fairness by all us in the leadership, it is certainly to be expected that some might totally misunderstand our motives."

Falwell took over the ministry in March after former leader Jim Bakker resigned and admitted he had had a sexual tryst with a church secretary in 1980.

The newly formed board of PTL partners met for the first time Friday night and held a news conference Saturday at a motel about two miles from PTL's Heritage USA.

"We think it is a fair question that no honest man should duck," said Don Lee, spokesman for the group. "We're challenging Dr. Falwell to send the referendum to the membership."

"Everybody's worried about protecting the grandmas and the grandpas who sent the money to support the ministry, but no one's asked them their opinion," said Lee, a 43-year-old Michigan schoolteacher.

Lee characterized both Bakker and Falwell as "wheeling and dealing pastors" who were not concerned with the views of the donors.

"We're asking them to put up or shut up," he said.

He also said he thought Falwell's ultimate aim was to have access to PTL's television satellite communications system, which Falwell denied.

"I have no intention of co-opting anything at PTL or Heritage Village for Jerry Falwell," Falwell said in a telephone interview from his home in Virginia.

Lee said the group is "absolutely not" trying to bring Bakker back into the ministry, adding, "I don't know if it would be appropriate." He said hadn't talked to Bakker about his efforts.

In a letter to Falwell in late April, Bakker urged the return of the PTL leadership to charismatics. "Due to the unrest in the charismatic world and also among the charismatic leadership, I feel that it is time now for you to turn the PTL ministry over to charismatics..." he wrote.

In contrast to Falwell, a fundamentalist independent Baptist, Bakker and the charismatics emphasize such things as emotional expressiveness, speaking in tongues and laying on of hands.

Lee said the referendum should ask regular PTL donors, called "partners," whether the charismatic nature of PTL should continue and whether a new charismatic leader and board should be appointed to replace Falwell and his board.

Plus-Size Find Shopping Easier

EDITOR'S NOTE — Not too many years ago large women had a hard time finding pretty clothes no matter how much money they had to spend. Not anymore. There's been a big change on the fashion runway in more ways than one. An industry that has traditionally shunned plus-size shoppers is suddenly wooing them.

By NANCY SHULINS
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Denise Patrick, a beautiful, blue-eyed blonde, will never forget her debut as a model. There she sat in her dressing room, trying to summon the courage to pose in a bathing suit, an ugly one-piece with a skirt.

"I could hear the photographer screaming at the regular girls," she recalls. "I was terrified."

Then he was ready for her. She knew it was time to come out when she heard him bellow, "OK, bring in the fat one!"

Several years ago, at a coat show, Pat Swift, a size 18, shared the dressing room with eight Wilhelmina models, size 8.

"Here I was sitting down waiting for my turn, and one of the girls started yelling at me to come help her get dressed," remembers Pat, a hazel-eyed blonde with a flawless complexion who in another century might have modeled for Reubens.

"I didn't know any better, so I ran over to help her. The woman in charge said, 'Pat, what are you doing? You're on next!' The models were shocked. Here I was, making the same $75 an hour that they were."

Susan Bishop's body is her greatest asset. She works out often, eats a well-balanced diet of chicken, fish and vegetables, drinks lots of water and gets plenty of sleep.

"I take care of my body," she says, and it shows. It also pays off. This year, her income will top $100,000, thanks to her "perfect" proportions: 44-35-44.

In the showrooms of New York's Seventh Avenue, a world of jutting jawlines and prominent hipbones, Susan Bishop is a rarity among models. She is a perfect size 18.

There was a time when every shopping trip ended in tears for Pat Swift. When clothes-buying for Susan Bishop meant a choice between double-knit polyester and double-knit polyester. When Denise Patrick despaired of ever finding a swimsuit that revealed more than it covered.

It was the era of housedresses and pantsuits, mumus and shifts, and every fat woman in America followed The Rules: No red or yellow. No horizontal stripes. No belts. No brights. No fun.

No more. A new age is dawning, thanks to a series of discoveries by manufacturers, designers, beauty editors and retailers: Large-size women often carry fat pocketbooks. Their fashion flair is on a par with their slimmer sisters. And given the choice, they will spend their dollars as readily as any size 8.

An industry that has traditionally shunned plus-size shoppers is suddenly wooing them. In March, a layout of these fashions appeared in Vogue magazine. A high-fashion flagship of the Lane Bryant chain opened up on Fifth Avenue. The largest large-size fashion show in history took place at Parson's School of Design. And a Manhattan designer put the finishing touches on a new couture line for plus-size women.

A recent article by New York Times health columnist Jane E. Brody proclaimed the glad tidings: "...the time may finally have come to learn to live normally with food and to accept the body that results."

Clearly, these women are basking in their new-found attention. "When I do runway work, women love me. I get standing ovations," says Gloria Alhanti, a striking 49-year-old who once modeled thin fashions.

"All I did was get a little older and a little fatter," says Alhanti, who, as a 16 — twice the size of the average high-fashion model — has become the much-photographed symbol for a chain of boutiques called The Forgotten Woman.

For Pat Swift, a former model who broke the size barrier in a full-page ad in The New York Times nearly a decade ago, the issue is economics as well as acceptance. Ten billion dollars is spent each year on large-size fashions for women.

"Our money is equal," she says. "Women have to make that known."

She speaks for a good-sized segment of the population. One in three American women — 30 million in all — wears a 14 or larger. One in six wears a 22 or larger.

Long a pioneer in the movement to educate manufacturers, Pat Swift is finding herself at its center.

She grew up in Sacramento, Calif., munching diet pills instead of potato chips. "I was always a good girl, I was just overweight," recalls the woman whose grammar school classmates knew her as "Fat Pat."

The pills worked for a while. But although she continued to eat carefully — no pasta, no cereal, no peanut butter — eventually the pounds came back and brought friends.

Unhappy in high school, she blossomed in college. "Looking back, I realize that I dated more than anyone. My weight was almost a handicap, and I learned to compensate. I have a terrific personality. I had to."

Armed with a criminal justice degree, she began her career as a security guard for Bloomingdale's. A manufacturer of plus-size fashions spotted her and asked her to be their model.

She didn't believe it at first. She still glows as she recalls the words she had waited a lifetime to hear: "We like you just the way you are."

For Pat Swift, a head-turner in a size 18 fur, modeling was "the dream I never had. I was a fat girl. Fat girls don't model."

Despite others' warnings that large-size models were merely a passing fad, Swift launched her own modeling agency, Plus Models Management Ltd., in 1978 with $100 and a surfeit of confidence.

Her business, the largest and most successful of its type, now represents 65 models and grosses more than $2 million a year.

And Swift, who once nabbed prospects on street corners and herded them into Manhattan coffee shops, now oversees her empire from a fashionable penthouse in the heart of the garment district.

Her accounts include Macy's, J.C. Penney, Spiegel and Bloomingdale's, all of which carry large sizes. Among those who strut their stuff for Plus Models are Patrick, a 5-foot-9, 180-pound beauty who specializes in bathing suit and lingerie layouts, and Bishop, who concentrates on mannequin modeling for a cool $100 an hour.

"Our models have to maintain some stability. They can't yoyo," says Swift. "We have a scale and they have to be weighed. The average is between 140 and 185 pounds."

Swift preaches exercise as well as acceptance. Virtually all her charges adhere to a regimen that rival those of any high-fashion models.

"We're not just fat girls with pretty faces," says Susan Bishop. "We take care of our bodies. My friends have a problem dealing with the fact that I don't have a problem with my size. But you have to work with what you have."

Darby Williams, another plus-size model, has lustrous dark hair and big brown eyes. She also has a flair for the theatrical, honed during her years as an actress and singer. "I do a lot of showroom modeling," she says. "I'm good at selling the clothes."

Williams started modeling after the birth of her first child. Her career was interrupted by a second pregnancy — "I gained 50 pounds" — but she's now back in business.

Hers is "an important job. I consider myself a spokeswoman for large-size women," says Williams. "We're not promoting being fat. We are saying there's no reason to hide if you're not exactly what you want to be."

Like Darby Williams, Cathryn Schuller, a stunning blonde whose look is sophisticated and upscale, also came to modeling with a music and theater background. "I was always the big, brassy chorus girl with the big heart."

Weight problems run in her family, says Schuller. One sister weighs 265 pounds; another has been hospitalized for anorexia nervosa. At 5-feet-10, Schuller looks firm and fit in her size 14 clothes. She bicycles to her jobs and is careful to take in no more than 1,200 to 1,500 calories a day.

"Modeling isn't a mission per se," she explains. "But beauty exists on many levels. There's no one way to be. It's all in how you present yourself."

Laura Douglas couldn't agree more. She's the founder of Je Suis!, a new couture line for women who spend $500 to $800 for a dress or $1,200 for a coat.

Douglas, who wears a size 24, went into business for herself after a new $500 dress split up the middle on her way to a fashion show.

"I got frustrated. I never could find beautiful, well-made clothes in my size. I had the disposable income, but nothing to wear," she says. "If I couldn't get what I wanted — quality, detail, high styling — other women out there must be having the same problem."

Like Douglas, Sharon Rothfeld believes that no one understands the problems of large-size women better than other large-size women.

"If you're a regular designer, you don't have the care and love needed by this size customer," says Rothfeld, who began designing plus-size sportswear nine years ago after she began gaining weight.

Care and love, in her case, find their way into such small details as longer earring posts and necklaces that are weighted to hang properly, around the neck rather than under the armpit, Rothfeld says.

"I was a contemporary designer before this, but it occurred to me that I never wore any of those beautiful things I designed. Now, I am the customer."

"I'm tired of all this talk about genes. Now's the time to bury the issue. All women deserve to be beautiful. Ten years ago, women my size would be thrilled to have anything that fit. That isn't enough any more."

While the outlook is brightening, there remains plenty to be done.

"I want it to be acceptable to be fat," says Pat Swift. "People still look at large-size people as having a problem. Of course, everyone would like to have a perfect body, but not everyone does. For those who do not, I want to alleviate prejudice."

To that end, she takes her crusade on the road, a one-woman cheering squad who roams outlying department stores dispensing revolutionary advice: "Wear a belt! Wear brights! WEAR ANYTHING!"

"I want to help large women find all the wonderful things I never had," she says. "I serve as their consultant and they love it. Finally, someone is listening."

band leaned forward and said, "Madam, because of your rudeness, you not only ruined the piece for my wife, but for me as well!"

Abby, was I wrong to ask her to stop singing along? In my mind, if his wife can't tell the difference between a concert and a sing-along, she should stay home. After all, I paid to hear the choir, not her. What's your opinion? — MUSIC FAN

DEAR MUSIC FAN: You were within your rights if you "shushed" the sing-along in a courteous manner. And her husband, although loyal, was out of line for chastising you for your so-called rudeness.

In the future, to avoid a possible confrontation, take your complaint to the official "shusher." The usher.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "VIRGO" IN ESTHERVILLE, IOWA: You've gone from bed to worse in your search for popularity. Estherville is a small town for people with big mouths. Take my advice and move to Sioux City.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Another view about not receiving thank-you notes for gifts of checks: Our family has always felt that a gift of cash is no gift at all. We would prefer to receive a card by itself if it contains a heartfelt sentiment. Obviously the giver of cash does not feel the need to take the time to select an appropriate gift, so why give a "gift" at all?

How much time does it take to select a pretty necklace or hair combs for a teen-age girl? It's easy to ask a salesperson for help to see what's in style.

Can't get out to shop? Why not send a subscription to a magazine? Or order from a mail-order catalog? We feel that cash is a poor substitute for caring. No cash, please. Draw me a picture or write me a poem. — SCHARRE JOHNSON, REPRESA, CALIF.

DEAR SCHARRE: I see no correlation between cash and caring. Some people are not as gifted as others in selecting appropriate gifts and, realizing their limitations, prefer to allow the recipient to do the choosing. One thing about a gift of money: The size is always right — and so is the color.

DEAR ABBY: Will you please use the power of your column to stop people from GIVING condoms to young people on campuses, at youth groups, and wherever young people gather?

I am appealing to you as a parent who has tried to raise her children with high Christian morals — to say no to sex — and now we have these liberal do-gooders handing out condoms to "protect" our children against pregnancy, VD and AIDS.

Society might just as well say, "Go out and have a good time, and take these with you for protection!" Giving kids condoms is giving them permission to have sex.

Please push for higher moral standards — not ways to break the laws of decency without having to pay the price. — INDIANA MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: I wish it were that easy. For decades parents have tried to teach their children that sex outside of marriage is immoral, forbidden, dangerous and ill-advised. It has worked with some — but for most, it has not. The sex drive is powerful, and today the price for having sex just one time with the "wrong" partner is death! So ask yourself this question: "Would I rather have my child prepared for a safe sexual encounter, or be unprepared and die?" The choice is yours.

DEAR ABBY: I recently attended a choral concert with my boyfriend. During the first number, a woman seated behind me sang loudly and hummed along. At first, I just gave her a stern look, hoping she would stop, but when she didn't, I "shushed" her. She kept right on singing, then at the end of the piece, her hus-

Exchange rates for P.I.K. certificates were steady and ranged from 101 to 103 percent of face value.

NEW YORK (AP) — Prices advanced broadly on Wall Street today in response to gains by the dollar and U.S. Treasury bonds.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was up 41.73 points to 2,364.03 as of 11 a.m. EDT.

Advancing issues outnumbered decliners by a margin of about 4-to-1, with 1,113 stocks rising, 283 declining and 379 unchanged on the New York Stock Exchange.

Volume on the Big Board came to 66.63 million shares at midmorning.

Topping the NYSE's most active list was Texaco, which rose 1 1/2 to 36 1/2.

Among the big gainers was IBM, which rose 3 to 166 1/4, Compaq Computers, which was up 3 to 46 1/4, Dupont, which rose 3 to 119 1/4 and Atlantic Richfield, which rose 3 to 94 1/4.

British Elections

for the two-minute journey from Downing Street after summoning an unscheduled meeting of her 22-member Cabinet to tell them of the decision — which is hers alone.

After the audience, she had lunch with seven senior Cabinet ministers in a strategy session.

The queen, also 61, returned from a weekend at Windsor Castle shortly before Mrs. Thatcher arrived at the palace at 12:30 p.m.

Share prices, buoyant for weeks as opinion polls showed Mrs. Thatcher well ahead of socialist opponents and election fever mounting, broke new records today.

The Financial Times Index of 30 industrial shares made a record 44-point leap to hit 1703.1 soon after noon and the index of 100 leading companies was up 52.8 at 2179.3.

Mrs. Thatcher was sending letters to leaders of the opposition parties, the socialist Labor Party and the Social Democratic-Liberal Party alliance, advising them of the election date.

After the dissolution of Parliament, the brief campaign will start officially.

The prime minister chose the June 11 date after pulling significantly ahead of her main socialist opponents in polls over the past six weeks.

The announcement said that after Parliament is dissolved and the election is held, "The new Parliament will be summoned on Wednesday 17 June ... and the state opening will be on Thursday 25 June."

Mrs. Thatcher conferred Sunday at her country residence, Chequers, with seven senior Cabinet ministers.

Most commentators, Tia opposition parties said they over the weekend that they believed Mrs. Thatcher already had decided to call the election. Newspaper banner headlines today declared, "Mrs. T's Final Sprint" and "Maggie Names The Day."

Mrs. Thatcher is widely regarded as Britain's most conservative leader since World War II. In 1979, she ousted a Labor administration. She won a landslide victory June 9, 1983, in an election called a year early.

A Harris poll done for the London Weekend Television channel and announced Sunday showed Mrs. Thatcher with an 11-point lead, in line with most other recent soundings.

The poll of 1,009 voters indicated the Conservatives had the support of 44 percent, Labor had 33 percent and the centrist Social Democratic-Liberal Party alliance 21 percent, with small parties getting the rest. There was a 2 percent to 3 percent margin of error.

In the last general elections, the Conservatives won 397 seats in the 650-member House of Commons, while Labor won 209 and the alliance, 23. The other seats went to minor parties.

The Tories had a better-than-expected showing in municipal elections last Thursday, winning 40 percent of the vote.

Reagan Matches Jokes With Hope

audience," Hope said, referring to the military airlift command.

"Bob, I leave that kind of thing to the experts," the president responded, which drew loud cheers of "Ronnie, Ronnie" from the crowd of about 20,000 military personnel and their families who waited several hours to see the president.

One member of the audience, 18-year-old Sonnie Bost, was videotaping the president's visit for his own records.

"People always go to Washington, D.C., to see the president," Bost said. "He's coming here to see us. This is a chance in a lifetime that I didn't want to miss."

Bost, the son of a U.S. Army captain, said he planned to enter the Air Force after he graduated from high school in June.

Catherine Greenwood found relief from the heat under the wing of C-141 transport plane with her four young daughters. Her husband is a doctor at Womack Community Medical Center at Fort Bragg.

"This is just a stopping point," she said several minutes before the president's plane landed. "We'll be moving up closer when he gets on stage."

David Chaney, a U.S. Army private at Fort Bragg, didn't learn that he was going to be at the show until this morning.

"My first sergeant came into our barracks this morning and brought us passes," he said. "That gives you a good feeling about the chain of command."

Chaney's friend, David Davis, said he felt good about Reagan's visit to the Air Force base.

"It's the kind of thing that motivates us," he said. Steve Sargent, a member of the military police at Fort Bragg, said he saw Hope twice during his stint in Vietnam in the 1960s.

"This is a great thing for the soldiers to enjoy," he said. "It tells them that he cares."

Jean Stultz, the wife of a retired Army sergeant, said Sunday's show was the perfect way to spend Mother's Day.

"I've always wanted to see Ronald Reagan," said the mother of four. "I think he has done some wonderful things, and Bob Hope is a legend in our time."

The Hope special, to be aired May 25, is a salute to the 40th anniversary of the Air Force as a separate military branch. Rehearsals for the show have been going on all week, and such stars as Lucille Ball, Don Johnson and Brooke Shields also appeared on the Hope special.

Barbie Trial Opens Meese

client had papers only in the name of Altman, State Prosecutor Pierre Truche stood and said there was no doubt the man in court was in Lyon at the time of the events in question.

"I understand the name of Barbie must be heavy to carry, and he might want to be rid of it," Truche said.

Barbie was brought to the courthouse shortly after noon in a van accompanied by police motorcycles and a car carrying four shotgun-wielding officers. About 300 police officers were deployed to protect him.

The cobblestone street was jammed with reporters, police and onlookers, including one gray-bearded old man with a sign around his neck reading "Never again." Barbie, who spent four decades on the run and was convicted twice in absentia of war crimes, may be the last of Adolf Hitler's officers brought before a criminal court.

He was stationed in Lyon from 1942 to 1944 as an SS lieutenant and head of the police section in charge of deporting Jews to German concentration camps and wiping out the French Resistance during World War II. The southeastern city of Lyon was known as the capital of the French Resistance.

Barbie says he is innocent. According to his defense attorney, Barbie says he bore no responsibility for rounding up Jews or sending them to death camps. His principal function, he says, was to destroy the Resistance, which struggled against German occupation for four years.

When asked by the judge at the beginning of today's session whether he preferred to speak French or German, Barbie indicated he would speak German. However, in the opening exchanges with the judge, he responded to questions directly in French.

A jury of five men and four women, most appearing to be in their 40s, was selected, along with six alternate jurors.

Before the trial opened this morning, a group dedicated a white cubic monument to the memory of Nazi Holocaust victims. The cube was erected in a Lyons square where Jews were assembled for deportation during the German occupation of France. It was to be removed after the Barbie trial ended.

In 1952 and 1954, French courts convicted Barbie in absentia of war crimes and sentenced him to death. Those convictions are no longer valid because of France's 20-year statute of limitations. There is no statute of limitation, however, for crimes against humanity.

Barbie faces a maximum sentence of life imprisonment. The death penalty was abolished in France in 1981.

Floyd's 51 Lifts Warriors

By BILL BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

The Los Angeles Lakers appeared to be on the way to a sweep of the Golden State Warriors until they got Sleepy in the fourth quarter.

The Lakers, leading the best-of-seven NBA playoff series 3-0, took a 102-88 lead into the fourth quarter against the Warriors Sunday. Then 6-foot-3 guard Eric "Sleepy" Floyd scored a record 29 points in the final 12 minutes and finished with 51 as Golden State stayed alive with a 129-121 victory.

"My teammates kept giving me the ball, and said 'Take it,' so I took it," Floyd said. "I was very conscious of the score, and the crowd got us pumped. Once we got it rolling, we weren't going to lose. I've never been hotter at any level."

"The basket seemed 10 feet wide."

Floyd broke the one-quarter playoff record of 25 set by Detroit's Isiah Thomas last Friday night. Floyd's 39 points in the second half also eclipsed the previous mark of 33 by Elgin Baylor of the Lakers in 1962.

Floyd hit 12 of 13 shots in the fourth period as the Warriors outscored the Lakers 41-19.

"The kid (Floyd) is just a great player," Lakers Coach Pat Riley said. "There was no stopping him, period. They scored 14 of 16 times down at the top of the fourth quarter and we didn't do anything about it."

The Lakers tried three defenders against Floyd in the fourth period and couldn't stop him.

"Sleepy can finish a drive as well or better than any guard in the league his size," Riley said. "We just sort of backed off and waited for him to miss. He gets the first step, and once he gets through, he's a broad jumper."

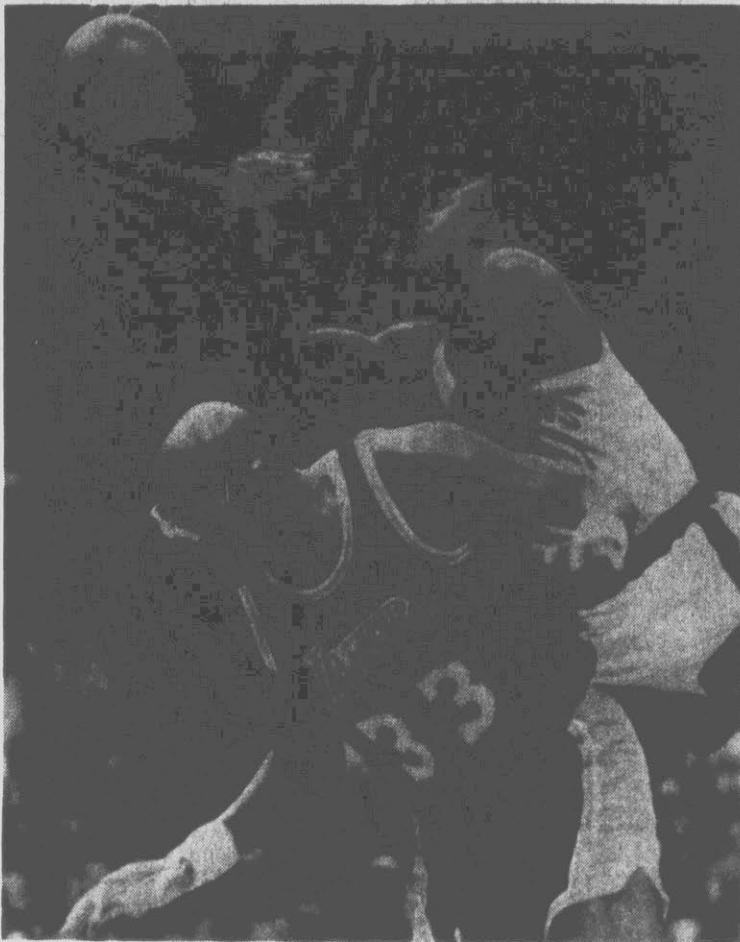

One of the Lakers defenders was Michael Cooper, a member of the NBA All-Defensive team.

"He had every phase of the game going ... three-pointers, drives ... They strung our defense out pretty well," Cooper said.

"What you saw in the fourth quarter was a lot of guts and heart," Warriors Coach George Karl said. "In the fourth quarter, that was not coaching. That was the best basketball and show I've ever seen in the playoffs. When he (Sleepy) was in the rhythm, the players knew to get out of the way."

Joe Barry Carroll had 23 points for Golden State, while Byron Scott had 28 and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar 27 for the Lakers.

Abdul-Jabbar had eight during a 20-3 run that helped the Los Angeles lead 34-27 after one quarter. A 10-2 spurt gave the Lakers their largest lead, 98-83, in the third period.

Larry Bird scored 42 points and Kevin McHale 34, and Boston held Milwaukee scoreless in the final minute of the second overtime.

"Fatigue is just no factor. I can play all day long," Bird said after playing 56 minutes against the Bucks. "They've got to beat us twice now in Boston Garden. To do that, they're going to have to pick their game up a notch."

The Celtics, who can establish an NBA record with 15 straight playoff victories at home if they win Wednesday, have won 33 consecutive games at Boston Garden.

While Bird and McHale, who suffered a sprained ankle on the final play of the game, carried the scoring load, reserve Darren Daye provided a spark for the Celtics in the second overtime.

"I hadn't played, so I was fresh," said Daye, who had four points in the second extra period, including an offensive rebound and two free throws with a minute left. I just wanted to relax and put up some good free throws. This is as sweet a moment for me as I've ever had."

"I would say Darren Daye was the catalyst," Celtics Coach K.C. Jones said. "He got the big rebound and made the big free throws. If not for Darren Daye, we'd be on the other side of the fence."

Daye's free throws were the last points of the game as the Celtics survived two Milwaukee scoring chances in the final seconds.

First, McHale blocked Ricky Pierce's layup with 49 seconds remaining. And then with the clock running down, the Bucks' John Lucas drove the lane, threw a pass that hit Terry Cummings in the shoulder and then missed a short shot as the game ended.

"I should have pulled up and shot the ball," said Lucas, whose 3-pointer with 1:55 to go had given the Bucks their first lead. "That's what's disheartening. I thought the 3-pointer had broken their rhythm."

Cummings led Milwaukee with 31 points and Sidney Moncrief had 22.

Detroit took a commanding lead against Atlanta as Isiah Thomas scored 31 points, including a driving layup with one second remaining.

Thomas, who scored 23 points in the second half, drove around the right side of the lane with time running out and soared for a finger-roll that fell in.

"It's a tough situation because you have to be mentally tough enough that if you miss it, you can bounce back next game and take it again," Thomas said. "Some players would miss that shot and not be able to bounce back for two or three weeks."

John Battle, who scored 11 of his 19 points in the fourth quarter, gave the Hawks an 88-85 lead on a layup with 1:30 remaining. Two free throws by Adrian Dantley with 1:14 left made it 88-87.

After Rick Mahorn rebounded a missed shot by Battle with five seconds left, the Pistons worked the ball to Thomas, who scored the game-winner.

McNeills Qualify For NCAA Event

From Staff And Wire Reports

RALEIGH, N.C. — East Carolina's Lee Vernon McNeill qualified for the NCAA track and field championships in a pair of events at the North Carolina Collegiate Track and Field Championships Saturday.

Lee Vernon McNeill qualified in both the 100-meter dash and the 200-meter dash while his brother Eugene qualified in the 200-meter dash for the NCAA meet, to be held June 3-6, at Louisiana State University in Baton Rouge, Louisiana.

In winning the 100 meters, McNeill defeated Danny Peebles of North Carolina State, who had been unbeaten in that event all year.

Peebles, though, anchored the Wolfpack 400-meter relay team to an NCAA qualifying time of 39.71 seconds. He then won the 200-meter dash in which three runners qualified for the NCAA meet.

Peebles won the 200 in 20.39 seconds — his fastest time ever in the event. Eugene McNeill of East Carolina was second in 20.58 and Lee Vernon McNeill took third in 20.61.

Lee Vernon McNeill won the 100-meter dash in an NCAA qualifying time of 10.24 seconds. In the 100 meters, Peebles got off to a great start and led for first 75 meters but then McNeill ran him down and scored a one-meter victory.

Peebles took second with a time of 10.34 while Eugene McNeill took third at 10.36.

"Lee Vernon and I have a friendly rivalry," Peebles said. "But when you were unbeaten in the 100 as I was this year, you hate to lose, even to someone who is nationally ranked like Lee."

Lee Vernon, a two-time All-American in the 100 meters, and Eugene are from St. Pauls, North Carolina. In addition to qualifying for the NCAA's in the 100 and the 200 respectively, Lee and Eugene will also compete in the NCAA's on 400-meter relay team.

Kelvin Wrighton, a sophomore from Edenton, and Jon Lee, a junior from Falls Church, Va., are the other members of the relay team.

Lee Vernon McNeill said he almost didn't run the 200 meters because of a sore leg but decided to go ahead and try to qualify for the NCAA's in the event.

"I think I can finish in the top two in the NCAA now," McNeill said, regarding the 100 meters. "In the 200, I was just too relaxed. I would like to run the event again but I will probably just run the 100 and the 400 meter relay."

Appalachian State triple jumpers Michael Hanks and Warren Posey also bettered the NCAA qualifying standard. Hanks won with a leap of 53 feet, 1 3/4 inches and Posey was second in 52-10.

In women's competition, Appalachian State's Meg Warren tossed the javelin 176-6 to qualify for the NCAA meet to be held June 3-6 in Baton Rouge, La.

No team scores were kept in the championships, which were revived after several years.

ECU has one meet remaining prior to the NCAA's, at the ICAAAA Track Invitational May 23-24 in Philadelphia.

Couples Changes Season, Attitude

IRVING, Texas (AP) — The 1987 PGA Tour season has turned around for Fred Couples. So has his attitude.

"It's a whole different thing," Couples said after his playoff victory over Mark Calcavecchia in Sunday's final round of the $600,000 Byron Nelson Golf Classic.

"It's fun being in this position, playing in the last group. It's just more fun to play."

Couples, who established himself as one of the brightest young prospects in the game with his 1984 triumph in the Tournament Players Championship, had been a non-winner and in a decline for three full seasons.

That ended when he dropped a five-foot par putt on the third playoff hole at the Tournament Players Course at Las Colinas. It secured the third victory of his seven-season career and was worth $108,000.

"It proves I can win again," said Couples, who matched par 70 over the last round and completed the regulation 72 holes at 266, 14 under par and matching the tournament record.

"It's weird," Couples said. "Sometimes you feel like you can't win an amateur tournament. Then to beat these guys..."

Although he won $116,065 last year, he was in title contention only once.

"It was a pretty slow year. I didn't put out 100 percent and I didn't deserve to play any better than I did," he said.

"When January came around, winning was the last thing on my mind. You play to win, but you don't expect to," he said.

But he played in the last group on the final day in both the Pebble Beach Classic and the Hawaiian

Open and had three top-10 finishes coming into the Nelson.

"It's fun again," he said. "I'm playing well. And I looking forward to the next two tournaments, to continuing to play well, to doing the best I can in the next two."

Couples, a two-shot leader starting the final round, couldn't get much going until he made a great save of par from the trees on the 14th hole.

Calcavecchia, who played 40 minutes in front of Couples, had completed a 64 and was sitting in a television tower when Couples came to the par-5 16th needing a birdie to catch up.

"I knew I had to make birdie there," Couples said. "Seventeen is a hard hole and there's always pressure on you on the last hole."

Couples made his birdie, pitching a third shot some three feet from the cup and dropping the putt. He parred in and the playoff was on.

Both birdied the first playoff hole, the 16th, and both one-putted for par on the 17th. On the 18th, Calcavecchia missed the green with his approach and played a poor chip across the green. Couples was on in two and two-putted. When Calcavecchia missed a 20-foot par putt from the fringe, leaving it short, Couples was the winner.

Bob Lohr missed the playoff by a single shot with a closing 69 and a 267 total.

He was followed by Donnie Hammond and Craig Stadler at 268. Stadler closed up with a 65 and Hammond shot 69.

Greg Norman matched par 70 and tied with three others at 269. He'll now take two weeks off before continuing the search for his first American victory of the year.

Chips To Green

Swindell Continues Following Clemens

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Sports Writer

Greg Swindell followed Roger Clemens as the pitching star at the University of Texas. He's starting to look like he may follow Clemens' example in the American League, too.

Just one year and 11 days after Clemens struck out 20 Seattle Mariners to set a major league single-game strikeout record, Swindell set a high for this year by fanning 15 Kansas City Royals Sunday. The Indians won 4-2, ending both a six-game Cleveland losing streak and a six-game Kansas City winning streak.

"Fans like strikeouts, especially strikeouts in crucial situations with men in scoring position," said Swindell, who went the distance, allowing 11 hits and walking two.

Rick Dempsey's two-run double in the second off Danny Jackson gave the Indians a 2-0 lead and the Royals tied it in the third on RBI singles by Juan Beniquez and Angel Salazar.

Joe Carter scored on one of third baseman Bill Pecota's two errors in the third and Pat Tabler's infield single drove home the fourth run in the fourth.

That was all that was needed for the 22-year-old Swindell, who mixed up his stuff with the ablomb of a veteran.

Red Sox 7, Angels 0

Bruce Hurst scattered five hits for his second consecutive shutout and third of the season and Mike Greenwell had a homer and four runs batted in for the Red Sox.

Hurst has been accomplishing his feats at Fenway Park, traditionally a burial ground for left-handers.

Hurst struck out nine and walked one for his 12th career shutout and third this season, improving his record to 4-3.

The Red Sox jumped on Don Sutton, 2-4, for seven hits and five runs in the first three innings, spoiling the 42-year-old right-hander's bid for his 313th career victory.

Yankees 6, Twins 1

Charles Hudson pitched a six-hitter and Gary Ward drove in three runs for the Yankees. The Yankees stole seven bases, including three by Rickey Henderson. Ward, Claudell Washington, Willie Randolph, and Wayne Tolleson also stole bases.

Hudson, 5-0, lowered his AL-leading earned run average to 1.90 while striking out four and walking three. It was his fourth complete game of the season, the most of his five-year career.

Tigers 7, Athletics 6

Darrell Evans' two-run eighth inning homer overcame a power display by Mark McGwire as the Tigers beat the Athletics for the first time in six starts this year.

Lou Whitaker also had a three-run homer as Detroit overcame a 4-0 deficit.

Evans' fifth homer of the season came off on a 2-0 pitch from reliever Steve Ontiveros with one out in the eighth and erased a 6-5 Oakland lead.

McGwire hit two home runs for Oakland, his ninth and 10th, his second two-homer game in three days.

Mariners 5, Brewers 1

Ken Phelps hit two home runs as the Mariners handed the Brewers their sixth straight loss.

The victory was the fifth in six games for Seattle but the sixth straight loss for Milwaukee, which had won its first 13.

Phelps had a solo homer in the first and a two-run shot in the fourth, giving him 10 for the season. It was his third two-homer run game of the year.

Orioles 6, White Sox 4

Terry Kennedy snapped a 0-14 slump with a tie-breaking seventh-inning home run and Fred Lynn added a three-run shot in the eighth as Baltimore beat Chicago. Jim Dwyer also homered for the Orioles.

It was the fourth straight loss for Chicago, while the Orioles won for the fifth time in their last six games. They had 12 homers in the three-game series although Eddie Murray was held to a double after setting a major-league record by hitting homers from opposite sides of the plate in two straight games.

Kennedy's homer broke a 2-2 tie, then Lynn's shot made it 6-2. Mark Williamson got the final two outs with the bases loaded to save the game for rookie Eric Bell, 4-1.

Rangers 8, Blue Jays 8

Bobby Witt survived a shaky start for his first victory of the season and Ruben Sierra drove in three runs as Texas rallied to beat Toronto.

Witt, 1-1, gave up four runs in the first two innings, then allowed just one over the next five before giving way to Mitch Williams at the start of the eighth. Dale Mohorcic pitched the ninth for his third save.

Lloyd Moseby had two homers for the Blue Jays.

FOCUS

Who Gets In?

The immigration amnesty program is bringing thousands of people to registration centers like this one to apply for legal citizenship. In the past, immigration restrictions were often somewhat arbitrary. In 1870, for example, Congress granted naturalization rights to whites and people of African descent, but not to Asians. Asians today comprise 44.6 percent of all legal immigrants into the country. Only 10.4 percent are from Europe.

DO YOU KNOW — From what nation do most illegal immigrants come?

FRIDAY'S ANSWER — China gave the U.S. two pandas following President Richard Nixon's visit in 1972.

Horoscope

From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY May 12

GENERAL TENDENCIES: It's a good day to delve deeply into whatever problems may be facing you. You also find it possible to come to a new meeting of the minds where emotion are concerned.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): You have much charm and can use it wisely so that you handle practical interests more efficiently.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Have a talk with a sensible person about the advice an expert has given you. It may make you more affluent.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Do your work in such a manner that you get the approval of a bigwig. Don't be too anxious to gain your own way.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Confidentially go after the backing you need from an important person. Have fun with your mate tonight.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): Have meetings at home with those whose aims are similar to your own. Discussions can prove very enlightening.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Contact those you deal with daily and plan for expansion. Start the day early to use your best cleverness.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): The material side of life is important to you now. You need the assistance of an outside associate to make arrangements.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Find a new outlet that can give you greater income in the days ahead. Be willing to introduce co-workers.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Get together with an expert in private and learn how to become more popular at social affairs.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Listen to the suggestions of a good friend for improving your daily activities. Be more practical.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Get your talents across in public and become more successful. Go out with your mate tonight.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Study some new situation that can spell more security for you. Get good results now.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he, or she, will be one of those unusual young persons who will want to finish whatever he, or she, starts. This one will have a most cheerful attitude and will like to have a good time. Great success is possible here if this child learns to overcome prejudices.

"The Stars impel; they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KQ7 ♥AKQ98 ♦Q9 ♣KQ10

The bidding has proceeded:

South West North East

1 ♥ Pass 4 ♥ Pass

What action do you take?

A.—You have a very good hand but, if you trust partner, you have no play for slam. Partner's jump is preemptive, showing good trumps and a singleton and denying, among other things, two aces. Therefore, there is no point to endangering your contract—Pass.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠6 ♥AQ108 ♦J983 ♣AK105

East South West North

What action do you take?

A.—While you can expect to rack up a tidy sum against three hearts doubled, you unfortunately cannot take that action. A double by you would be for takeout, and probably would get partner wildly excited in spades. Pass, and hope that partner can balance, preferably with a double since you know he is short in hearts.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠AKJ974 ♥Q7 ♦632 ♣AQ

The bidding has proceeded:

South West North East

1 ♠ Pass 2 ♠ Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—A borderline hand. You can't be sure how valuable your queen of hearts will be, but your two honors in partner's suit are pure gold. We think a jump to three spades best expresses the value of your hand and the quality of your suit.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠AQJ63 ♥7542 ♦95 ♣83

Your partner opens the bidding with one heart. What do you respond?

A.—You have found a fit, which is the purpose of the early rounds of the auction. A raise to two hearts by you describes both the strength of your hand and your support. Don't even think of introducing that splendid five-card spade suit, because your next bid in hearts will sound like a preference rather than solid support.

Q.5—Both vulnerable as South you hold:

♠AQJ7632 ♥95 ♦106 ♣74

Partner opens the bidding with one no trump. What do you respond?

A.—You know where you want to play the hand, so don't waste everyone's time—bid four spades. Don't jump to three spades. That would show either a holding where you are interested in slam or where you are not sure which game you want to play and are offering partner a choice of contracts.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South

you hold:

♠6 ♥AJ53 ♦K8 ♣KQ10542

The bidding has proceeded:

South West North East

1 ♠ Pass 1 ♠ Pass

2 ♠ Pass 2 ♦ Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—Partner's new suit is forcing, so you can't pass despite the misfit. Make your normal bid of two hearts, the suit you couldn't afford to show at your second turn because that would have been a reverse, promising extra values. Besides showing your stoppers, your bid in hearts will highlight the potential misfit.

Reagan Uses Tuskegee Graduation To Urge More 'Successes' By Blacks

By LOU CANNON
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

TUSKEGEE, Ala. — President Reagan paid tribute Sunday to black scientists, businessmen and military heroes and said that "if black Americans are to progress socially and economically," they must become part of "the great technological changes now sweeping our country and the world."

In his first speech to a black institution of higher learning, the president told a commencement audience at Tuskegee University that it was "crucial" for young black Americans to become scientists, physicists and mathematicians.

Reagan said that instead of focusing on the achievements of black athletes and entertainers, as he has sometimes done, "it is high time the media and the rest of America began paying more attention" to the successes of black professionals.

"We must be concerned about the perception children of every race are developing about themselves and about others," Reagan said. "Certainly, problems in the black community cannot be covered up or ignored, yet rather than dwelling almost exclusively on the negative, let's make certain our children see stories of black successes and triumphs."

Reagan, who as a conservative spokesman opposed the landmark Civil Rights Act of 1964, said Sunday that "great strides were made through political action" in achieving civil rights in the 1950s and 1960s.

"The civil rights movement earned the respect and gratitude of all good and decent Americans, even some who may at first have had reservations about what was happening," the president said, without mentioning his own reservations. "Yet, changes in the law — and the political struggle itself — brought social progress that enormously strengthened the moral foundation of the United States."

The president enumerated the achievements of several black scientists and physicians and said they might have accomplished even more except for racial discrimination, which he called "one of the great impediments to the forward thrust of our nation."

Reagan has been unpopular with a majority of blacks throughout his presidency. Black leaders have sharply criticized him, especially for reducing federal spending for such programs as student loans and child nutrition.

The president made no mention of these measures Sunday, but he contended that his administration had contributed to the progress of blacks by boosting spending for research projects at black institutions of higher learning.

"We have an agenda aimed not only at overcoming the problems of today, but also preparing the ground for black economic independence in the technological era we are entering," Reagan said. "We threw out the old, inefficient CETA (Comprehensive Employment Training Act) program and put in its place the Job Training Partnership Act, which provides more training for every dollar spent. It was Booker T. Washington who said, 'The world cares very little about what a man or woman knows; it is what the man or woman can do.'"

Washington, a former slave, founded Tuskegee in 1881 as an institution designed to provide vocational training for freed slaves. It grew from a college in a one-room cabin on an abandoned cotton plantation into a modern university which now enrolls 3,300 students from 40 states and 54 nations.

Before his speech, Reagan dedicated the university's newest building, the Daniel (Chappie) James Center for Aerospace Science and Health Education. It is named for the nation's first black four-star general, whom Reagan called "one of this country's great patriots."

James, a Tuskegee graduate, flew 101 combat missions in the Korean conflict and another 78 combat missions in the Vietnam War.

Family Feud Fans Sheriff's Campaign

By STEVEN L. HERMAN
Associated Press Writer

PINEVILLE, W.Va. (AP) — A family feud over who should be sheriff in this quiet mountain town has the man appointed to the job and the chief deputy he fired defending their powerful fathers and alleging illegal activities.

The battle over the Wyoming County sheriff's badge began when Sheriff Gene A. Vance died of cancer on April 17 at age 50. Vance was a popular professional lawman whose predecessors included a pistol-packing preacher and a butcher.

Even before his funeral, the battle lines were drawn between supporters of two powerful families — the Buzzos and the Baileys.

"The only qualification for being sheriff is to be a registered voter," said Sheriff William "Billy" Bailey Jr., 29, who admits he is more a politician than policeman.

Bailey, the son of a county commissioner, was hired at the commission's April 21 meeting, with his father abstaining from the vote. Commission President George W. Ford said no one had asked for the job so he and Commissioner Wanda J. Lester appointed the younger Bailey.

Bailey's first act following his swearing-in was to fire chief deputy Bill Buzzo Jr.

"I knew it was coming," said Buzzo, 37, who is free on $500 bond on a battery charge stemming from an alleged fight in a restaurant last October.

Buzzo had been in charge of the department while Vance was ill, but said his power was usurped by "The Group," a political machine run from the courthouse by county purchasing agent Jack Pizzino.

"I've never heard of an organization called 'The Group.' We're all just friendly people that work here," Pizzino said.

Fires Burn In 5 States

By The Associated Press

About 200 firefighters worked today to contain two fires that burned 5,000 acres of forest and marsh in Michigan, while cooler temperatures and higher humidity helped efforts to put out blazes in the Pacific Northwest.

Forest fires were burning in at least five states and in Canada. A forest fire in New Jersey was brought under control Sunday night after consuming 100 acres.

Fire officials in Michigan said they hoped that rain would help them contain the fires, about 60 miles apart in remote sections of the central Upper Peninsula, by evening and under control Tuesday night.

"We're getting shower activity and thunderstorms right now. We're hoping to have some of it go across the fire," Loren Woerpel, fire management officer of the Hiawatha National Forest, where a blaze has burned 4,300 acres, said Sunday.

National Weather Service officials on the site predicted 15 mph to 25 mph wind with a 30 percent chance of rain today. Woerpel said these conditions could help or hurt the firefighting, depending on where the rain fell.

Officials said they believe the fires, in Schoolcraft and Alger counties, were set.

Firefighters from as far away as Minnesota and Indiana joined the effort, with the aid of helicopters, bulldozers, and tanker trucks.

Erratic winds on Sunday hampered 125 firefighters battling a 1,200-acre brush fire near Patterson, Calif., authorities said.

"The terrain is very steep, and a lot of it is inaccessible," said Pam Porter, spokeswoman with the California Department of Forestry.

Nearly 125 firefighters also were dispatched to a fire that burned about 300 acres just east of Henry Coe Park in Stanislaus County, Ms. Porter said.

High humidity and calm wind helped 527 firefighters battle an 1,800-acre forest fire that erupted Friday on Weyerhaeuser Co. land.

Quake Jolts San Francisco

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — A "sharp" earthquake that jolted the San Francisco Bay area knocked dishes from shelves, set off burglar alarms, cracked a jail window and flooded switchboards with calls from worried residents.

Oakland police had almost 300 calls from people asking about the tremor, according to Sgt. Robert Crawford.

"It set off lots of burglar alarms and we had to check every one of them," he said.

"We also got a few calls from people who said they felt a mild aftershock," he said, adding that the calls concerning the second quake started coming in at 1:42 a.m.

The earthquake struck at 11:47 p.m. Sunday night, and the Office of Emergency Services in Sacramento reported a preliminary reading of 3.3 on the Richter scale with a center six miles east of Oakland.

The office based its estimate on earthquake monitoring equipment used by the state Department of Water Resources but had not confirmed the reading with a seismologist, according to OES spokesman Lloyd Darrington.

A spokesman for University of California campus police in Berkeley said they were alerted by an alarm that goes off when a quake hits 3.5 on the Richter scale, but they had been unable to locate a seismologist to confirm the reading.

The Sunday night jolt cracked a window in the North

County jail in Oakland, said jail Sgt. Dave Alvey, who described the earthquake as "sharp."

KCBS radio reporter Jim Cullen said the San Francisco station received "hundreds" of calls.

"Some people said dishes fell from shelves and pictures fell off walls," Cullen said.

The San Francisco Chronicle reported in today's editions that shortly after the earthquake the newspaper's phones "began ringing off the hook with calls from concerned Bay Area residents."

Bay Area Rapid Transit District trains were delayed for about 15 minutes, according to BART central supervisor Margaret Pierce.

"We stop our trains when there is an earthquake and check for track damage," she said, adding that no damage was found.

Martinez police dispatcher Roberta Amdahl said she received several calls but no reports of damage.

The Richter scale is a measure of ground motion as recorded on seismographs. Every increase of one number means a tenfold increase in magnitude. Thus a reading of 7.5 reflects an earthquake 10 times stronger than one of 6.5.

A quake of a magnitude of 2 is the smallest normally felt by humans. A 3.5 earthquake can cause slight damage. The great San Francisco earthquake of 1906 has been estimated at 8.3 on the Richter scale.

Senator Keeps Up Budget Vigil

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — A state senator who is camping out in the legislative chamber until a budget is approved prepared to go a fourth day without a shower or change of clothing today, though the House speaker said agreement is near.

Sen. George "Buffy" Warner, a Morgantown Republican, began his vigil Friday when both the House and Senate adjourned until Tuesday without making headway on the state budget.

Late Sunday, Warner thought he had reached the uncompromising conferees.

"I think it's finally starting to sink in," he said. "This afternoon, I heard a couple of different people saying they had heard people saying, 'We decided to reach an agreement at the end of last week.' If that's true or not, we'll know soon."

House Speaker Chuck Chambers said staff members worked over the weekend on the budget and conferees from both houses will meet this afternoon. Chambers said a settlement is near.

"I'm afraid Buffy has not been party to the conference committee meetings and meetings between the House and Senate leadership and he doesn't know what we have accomplished," Chambers said.

The Legislature has been in extended session off and on since April, haggling with the budget. The House is backing a $1.5 billion plan, while the Senate wants to spend $47 million less. The budgets are based on different sets of tax revenue projections from Gov. Arch Moore.

Chambers said staffers were trying to find $47 million in "various accounts" that would make the difference moot. "It's all a matter of identifying it," he said.

Meantime, the stocking-footed, chain-smoking Warner has been surviving on junk food and heavy media coverage.

"People keep bringing food in. I've had to turn most of it away," Warner said Sunday afternoon. "I'm thinking of putting a sign up on the chamber door: 'Don't feed the senator.'"

Warner had promised reporters he would not change clothes or shower while he was camped out. By Sunday, the moppish senator, wearing the same red tie, white shirt and dress slacks, was wishing he had said otherwise.

"I'd like to climb in a hot shower and stay there for a while. And get a shave," he said. He said he would at least wash his hair in the bathroom sink today.

Government Backs Plan To Keep Eye On The Elderly Living Alone

By JERRY ESTILL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 68-year-old man might have died if he had not been six months late paying his electricity bill.

But since he was late, and since he had not missed a payment in 30 years, a supervisor for Puget Sound Power and Light Co. decided to pay a visit to the customer.

"It was about 75 degrees outside and he had his thermostat turned up to 95," said John Ellis, president of the utility. "He was malnourished and nearly dehydrated. He was very close to expiring."

It was discovered that the man, who lived alone, was taking medication that sometimes left him disoriented and he had turned up the thermostat by mistake. He had not paid his light bill, said Ellis, "because a government computer flipped and he wasn't getting his veteran's check."

While not all cases involve a medical emergency, Ellis and government officials say the episode last summer in Washington state is typical of many in which lives have been saved under the Gatekeeper approach.

The program, started by Puget Sound, has proved so successful it has been adopted by the federal government and is being pushed this month — in conjunction with Older Americans Month — by the Department of Health and Human Services and the National Association of State Units on Aging.

Video training tapes and other materials produced under a federal grant to Puget Sound and the Washington state Bureau of Aging and Adult Services are being sent to each state aging office for distribution to private companies interested in starting their programs.

The drive is not limited to utilities, but any business that has contact with the elderly, such as banks and supermarkets.

Ellis said his company started its Gatekeeper program in response to frustrated employees.

"Many of our customer service employees believed they were in a moral dilemma," he said. "One the one hand, as the company was charging more for electricity, the employees were being encouraged to tighten up on bill collections. On the other hand, thoughtful employees found it difficult to terminate electrical service to elderly customers — some of whom were sacrificing proper food and medication in an attempt to pay their electric bills."

Out of that grew a program in which 450 of the company's employees — collectors, meter readers and such — were trained to spot potential problems and call the local government aging office for help.

TOWN OF BETHEL ADVERTISEMENT OF TAX LIENS ON REAL PROPERTY

Under and by virtue of the authority vested in me by Section 105-369 of the North Carolina General Statutes and pursuant to an order of the Board of Commissioners of the Town of Bethel, dated May 5, 1987, I am advertising tax liens for the year 1986 upon the real estate described below. The amount advertised will be increased by interest and costs, and the omission of interest and cost from the amount advertised will not constitute a waiver of the taxing unit's claim for those items. The name of the person to whom the property is listed for taxes, and the principal amount of the taxes are set out below. If the taxes remain unpaid, the lien will be foreclosed by the taxing unit and the property sold to satisfy the taxing unit's claim for taxes.

Detroit Tops FBI's List For Murders

WASHINGTON (AP) — Detroit remained the nation's murder capital in 1986 for the second straight year, and a city council member has laid the blame squarely on handguns.

"Our stats are so high in homicide because of the solving of problems with handguns," Councilwoman Maryann Mahaffey said Sunday in Detroit. "We've got too many handguns out there, and people are not learning how to solve problems without violence."

Mahaffey said she plans to reintroduce a proposal for a gun freeze ordinance within the next few weeks.

Detroit had 648 homicides last year, or 59 homicides per 100,000 people, the highest murder rate for any of the 184 U.S. cities with more than 100,000 residents, according to 1986 crime figures released by the FBI on Saturday.

Fort Worth, Texas, was second in the rate of homicides in 1986 at 46.2 per 100,000, followed by St. Louis, Mo., 44.9; Atlanta, 41.7; Flint, 40.6; Miami, 37.3; Richmond, Va., 36.4; Newark, N.J., 35.4; New Orleans 34.9; and Oakland, Calif., 34.8.

New York, Los Angeles and Chicago reported more homicides, but their larger populations resulted in a lower per capita rate.

Detroit, the nation's sixth-largest city with 1.1 million people, also led major U.S. cities in 1985 with 52.2 homicides per 100,000 people.

Detroit City Councilman John W. Peoples agreed that gun control would deter crime.

"Obviously we need gun control laws," Peoples said. "At least you would get the gun out of the home and remove it as a temptation when people have domestic problems."

Nationwide, serious reported crimes rose 6 percent last year, the biggest increase in seven years, the FBI said.

Man Is Killed By Lion He Took In 3 Years Ago

ANNANDALE, Minn. (AP) — A man who maintained a private lion and tiger preserve on his farm was killed by a lion he had rescued three years ago, officials said Sunday.

Wright County Sheriff Darrell Wolff said his office was called to the farm of Brad Hullsiek, 29, by a friend who had discovered Hullsiek's body in a cage with two lions.

He said Hullsiek apparently went into the cage Friday to clean it and had been dead for several hours before he was found. The two lions had to be shot and killed before officials could recover the body, Wolff said.

"It was a lion that was abused when he was young," said Hullsiek's wife, Jane. "Brad, out of the goodness of his heart, was asked by a humane society outside of the state if he could take this animal because it was going to be destroyed."

She said she believes her husband let his guard down inside the cage and the lion took the opportunity to attack.

"The longer you're in the business, the more you trust your animals, and maybe you do let your guard down a little, more than you should," she said.

Mrs. Hullsiek said she is trying to find temporary homes for the nine remaining lions, tigers and other animals on the farm.

Houston Firm To Launch Five Private Satellites

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — A rocket company says it plans to launch five navigation satellites for a California company, with the first launch scheduled for late next year.

Former astronaut Donald K. Slayton, president of Space Services Inc., announced Sunday his company has reached an agreement with Star Find Inc., of Laguna Niguel, Calif., to launch the satellites from Wallops Island, Va.

Slayton said Space Services will use the Conestoga II, a rocket system developed by his Houston-based company, to place 300-pound navigation satellites in geostationary orbit, 22,000 miles above the Earth.

Star Find said the satellites will use new technology to provide precise navigation and positioning information for its customers.

The satellites will be the first delivered to orbit by a private U.S. launch company. Space Services has launched one suborbital rocket, as a demonstration, but it has not before placed a satellite in orbit.

Star Find president Richard Halavais said the new type of satellite will require approval from the Federal Communications Commission, but he noted, "the importance of this new technology is so evident that we expect excellent cooperation and few delays."

Ernest Kimmey, director of Star Find engineering, said the satellites will use navigation technology developed and patented by his company.

"For the first time accurate positions and navigation information in three dimensions can be determined from a single satellite," he said. The satellite, using a low-power signal from a target, can locate an object to within 12 feet.

Slayton said the satellite system will detect low-powered signals from small transmitters and then determine their exact location anywhere on the Earth.

For example, he said, it would be possible with the system for a credit card-sized transmitter to be placed on a car that then could be located by the satellite.

One use, he said, would be to find lost children. A transmitter the size of a safety pin, said Slayton, could be placed on a child's clothing. If the child becomes lost, the satellite could determine the location to within a few feet.

Star Find said the system has been tested in reverse, with a receiver on the ground. The system was able to correctly locate satellites in orbit 22,000 miles above the Earth.

Kimmey said the accuracy is greater than any current system.

FIRST FEDERAL EQUITYLINE

A Tax Deductible Line of Credit Secured by the Equity in Your First or Second Home.

Tax Law

The tax law takes away valuable deductions for consumer credit interest. Most of the itemized deductions for the interest you pay on such things as your car loan, credit cards or charge accounts will be discontinued under the tax law. First Federal's EQUITYLINE provides a way for you to have consumer credit and deduct the interest.

Equityline

Your home is an excellent source of credit and you can turn the equity in your first or second home into a line of credit you can use at any time, for any reason—education expenses, a new car, bill consolidation, home improvements or whatever you want. And within certain guidelines your interest will be tax deductible.

Equity is the difference between what you owe on your home and what it's worth.

You can have an EQUITYLINE of credit that will put cash in your hands immediately—right up to your approved credit limit. Or you can establish your EQUITYLINE today, and have it available for future needs.

Competitive Rates/Amounts

The EQUITYLINE interest rate is prime plus 1% for a line of credit $15,000 and over; and prime plus 1½% for $10,000-$14,999. The minimum EQUITYLINE is $10,000—maximum $100,000. The monthly payment on your EQUITYLINE can be as little as interest only or any amount you may choose above the interest.

Easy Process/Minimum Cost

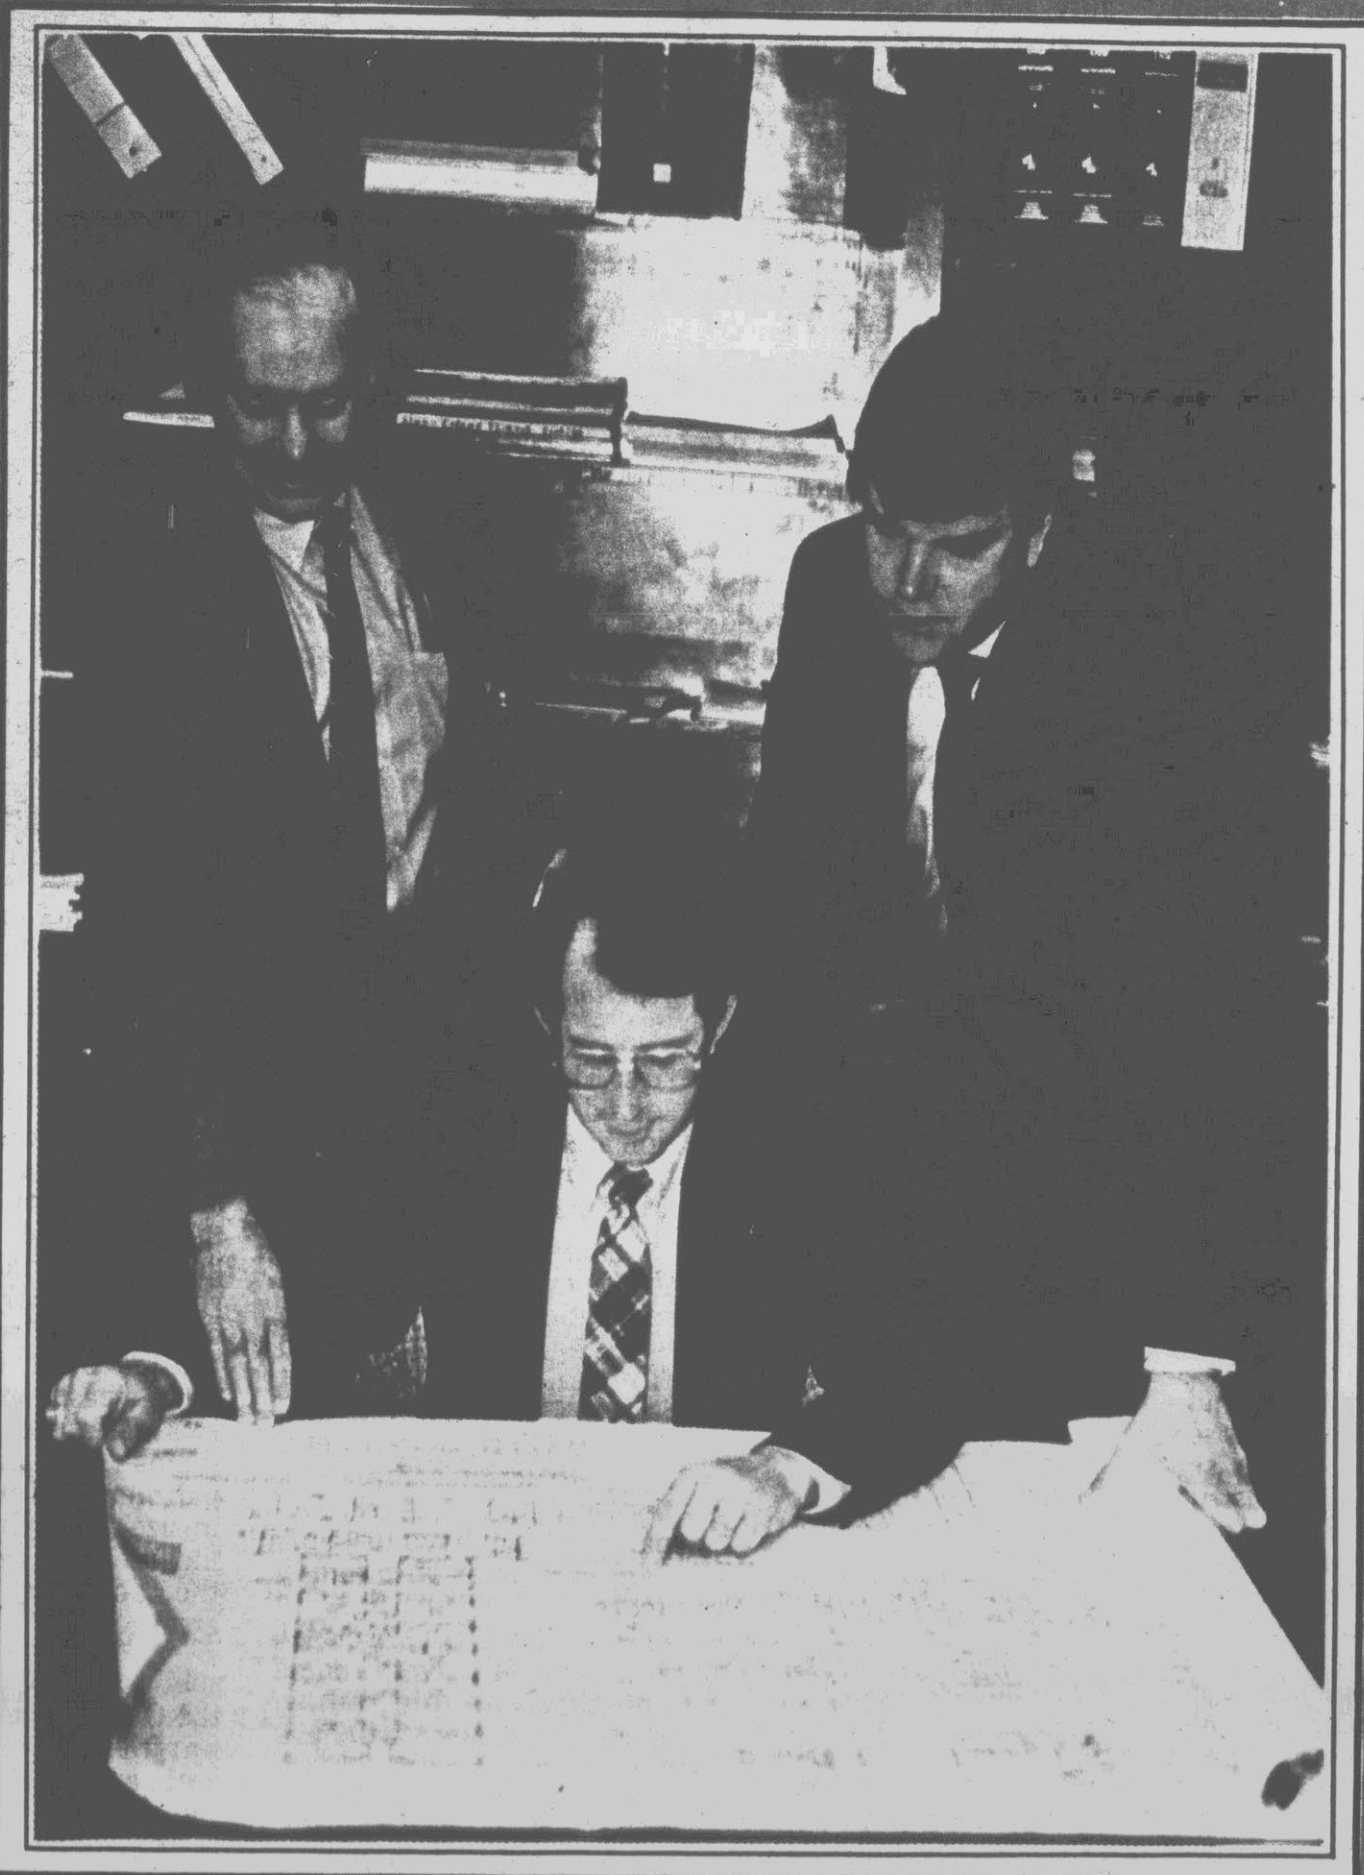

First Federal's EQUITYLINE has no origination fee and no annual fees. We will work to minimize your closing costs—call us for more details.

You have an easy, one-time application. Once your line of credit is established, that's the end of the paperwork. In fact, when your line of credit is approved, the cash you want will always be only a check away. Just use one of the special checks provided to access your line of credit.

Serving the Community from Lancaster County Hospital

Hospital planning team, Kenneth England (l) discusses plans for the hospital expansion program with Dr. George Miller, Chief of the Medical Staff (c) and Henry Smith, Chairman of the Board of Trustees (r).

Planning Now, Construction This Summer

Hospital Renovation Projects Begin

For the past 11 months the Beaufort County Hospital Board of Trustees and staff members have been involved in an intensive planning program concerning the hospital's renovation. Planning sessions and approval sessions have been held regularly since the citizens of Beaufort County passed the bond referendum on May 6, 1986 approving the funding for renovation of the hospital's emergency department, outpatient services areas, and obstetrics and gynecology department.

"During the planning process we have recognized that we are experiencing utilization changes. Outpatient services are increasing in demand and our construction plans have been designed to meet these demands. We are consolidating the outpatient services for the convenience of our patients," Kenneth Ragland, Administrator said.

Ragland said that the expertise of staff members, physicians, and board members have been essential in identifying areas which should be changed to assist patients. These changes are reflected in a very progressive plan for the hospital.

Many members of the hospital staff, board, and medical staff have worked together to project the utilization of the hospital's services and to consider services and facility construction which would be most convenient for patients and their families. Together with architects from McCulloch-England - Associates Architects, formerly Snoddy & McCulloch, preliminary plans have been approved and designs have been presented. In the next few months, the board of trustees will approve designs and the projects will be prepared for bidding, according to Bill England, Chief architect for the project.

"We hope to have the projects ready for bidding by July and to accept bids in August. After the bids are approved we anticipate the construction to be completed within 18 months. The plans for the construction schedule as well as the renovations have been designed to meet the needs of the patients," he said.

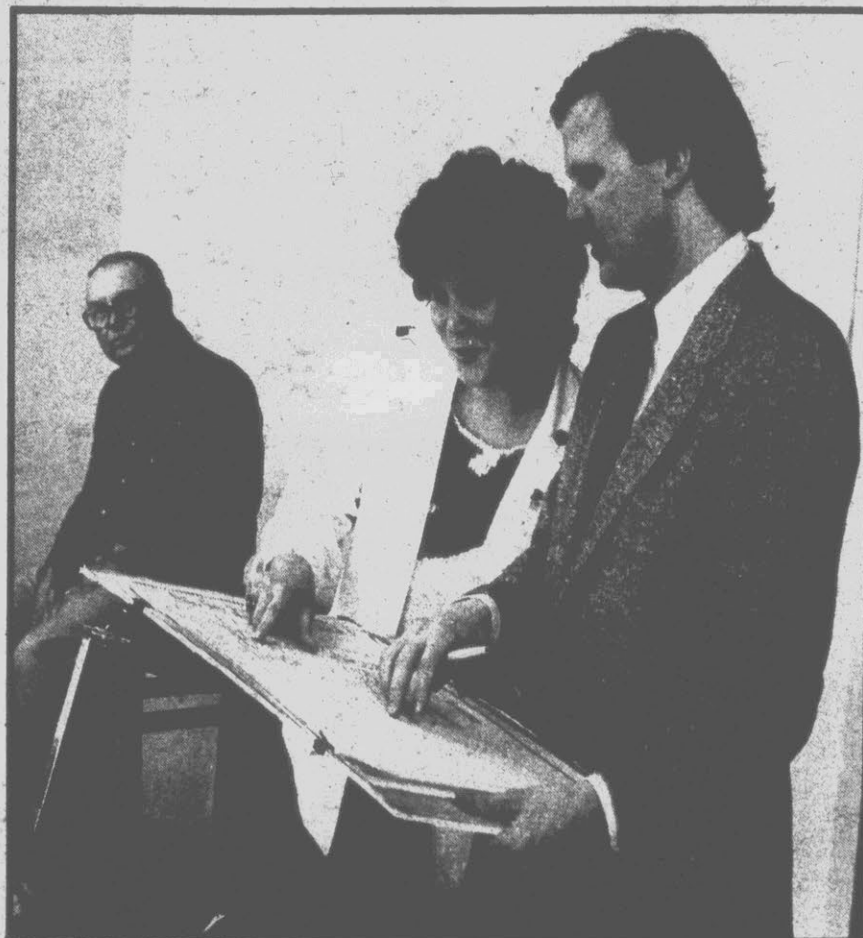

England explained that as the construction work begins it will be necessary to close some areas of the hospital, move some departments to temporary locations, and then move them to their permanent locations after construction. He said that the plans were designed to coincide with the priorities of services of the hospital.

"We recognize that more patients are needing outpatient services, therefore the construction schedule will allow for work on outpatient services early in the construction project. The outpatient departments' renovation has been designed to locate the services close together. Physical Therapy, Respiratory Therapy, and Patient and Family Services will be located in one general area of the fourth floor," he said.

England said that before the general construction can begin a new central fire alarm system and new emergency generators for the hospital will be installed.

England outlined the construction project in four phases as follows:

Phase I: Upfitting the fourth floor which is currently a shell building. The Pharmacy, Physical Therapy Department, Respiratory Therapy Department and Family and Patient Services Department will be located on the fourth floor. The Pharmacy will double in space. The Physical Therapy Department will be consolidated and its space will be almost doubled. The Respiratory Therapy Department will also increase in size. These services will be served by a central reception area, but they will each have individual waiting areas also.

Phase II: The first half of the Emergency Department renovation will begin. Work will begin on the second floor in the Outpatient Surgery Department and the OB-GYN Department. At construction completion, the Outpatient Surgery Department will have 10-15 patient care areas with family access to patient recovery areas. The OB-GYN area will have 14 private rooms and three double rooms. Each of the rooms will have private toilet and shower facilities. The OB-GYN area will also have two new birthing rooms which will allow the father and/or family members to be participants in the birthing experience.

Phase III: The second half of the Emergency Department renovation will begin.

At the completion of the construction, the Emergency Department will have different entrances for ambulance patients and patients who walk in. It will include a new larger waiting room, a family/physician conference room, three trauma bays, two cardiac bays, a cast room and three examination/treatment rooms. The Emergency Department will almost double in size. This phase will also include some renovations in the Laboratory and Nursery areas.

Phase IV: Completion of the Outpatient Surgery Department and OB-GYN areas are the main plans for this phase.

Future update reports concerning the renovation project will be reported monthly in the hospital's newsletter "Health Lines" which is inserted in the Washington Daily News.

Food Management Program: Provides Training In Eating For Health

For Harold Gilbert

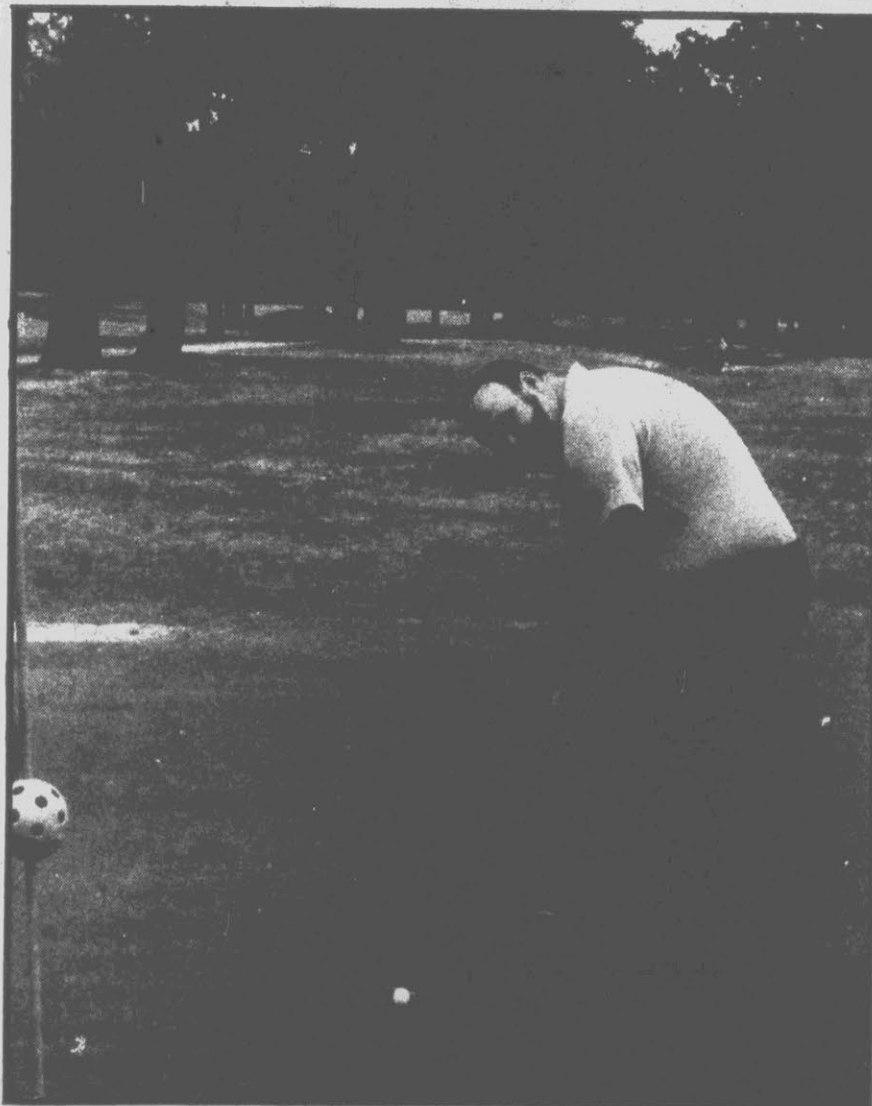

Harold Gilbert, like most men and women is a busy person. As a supervisor at National Spinning Co. his work is demanding and fast paced. About a year ago, he decided that he could meet the fast pace better and longer if he could lose weight. He was an effective worker, but today he feels that he is much more productive and healthier.

"The hospital's food management plan provided the help and plan I need to successfully reduce my weight and change my eating habits to healthier eating habits. I am still participating in the program, but I already feel much better and my friends and family have noticed the good changes I have made," Gilbert said.

"The food management program does take a lot of effort, but it's worth it. I had to learn that managing my diet is like managing the rest of my activities; It's very important!" he said.

"I think that it's a very good program. I have been on diets before and had not learned to modify my lifestyle to live in a mode which food intake is reduced. The hospital's approach showed me that I could eat certain combinations and groups of food that were appetizing and filling but continue to reduce," he said.

"It is a realistic diet program. You know that you can splurge once in a while for a meal, but that your diet is not for a few weeks or days,

Mr. Harold Gilbert

it is for a lifetime. During the first nine months of the program I ate three meals a day at the hospital and exercised daily. As a result I lost 72 pounds. Several business and pleasure trips followed 50 waist to 44 waist.

"The people at work and my family have all been very supportive of my participation in the food program. Many have asked me how I did it and I have referred and I gained a few pounds, but I am still working at it," Gilbert said.

He said that his size reductions were reflected in changing coat sizes from 56 to 50 and slacks sizes from them to the hospital. It is a successful program and I guess we now have more people on it than ever before," he said.

"We are all very pleased with Mr. Gilbert's progress.

He has done very well and we have enjoyed getting to know him. He has met new friends here and he has been a good confidence builder to some other participants," Jean Moser, BCH Chief Clinical Dietitian said.

"This program has grown from a response to an individual patient's need for counseling and guidance to a program with more than 45 active participants. It is a pilot program and is the only hospital based food management program at this time," Ms. Moser said.

"Our program teaches the participants to select food combinations which are nutritionally sound but allows them to maintain calories still needed for their individual energy level and lose weight. All of our participants are referred by an order from a physician. A participant may begin the program as a patient in the hospital and continue as an outpatient. Some participants are receiving our services in conjunction with exercise counseling through the hospital's health awareness program," Ms. Moser explained.

Family involvement is not unusual in the food management program.

"Many participants bring their families with them to learn and to eat. We request that all participants eat three meals daily in our hospital cafeteria for the first

Surgery Allows Hands To Function

For Jason Alligood

Jason Alligood and Dr. Kelley Wallace

A child's busy hands touch and reach for literally thousands of things each day. The functions of touching and reaching have been made easier for two year old Jason Alligood by a surgical procedure performed by Dr. Kelley Wallace, a new plastic surgeon at Beaufort County Hospital. Although Jason's hand functions were not severely impaired, Dr. Wallace explained how he will function better. He also explained the surgical procedure used to help Jason.

"Jason was born with a congenital deformity of the right hand called syndactyly. This means that his fingers were grown together; in Jason's case it was his long and ring fingers. Syndactyly is the second most common hand deformity in children. Approximately one in every 1,000 births will have some form of syndactyly. Often a syndactyly is related to other congenital deformities such as Downs Syndrome, heart murmurs, facial or cranial deformities," Dr. Wallace said.

"There are two forms of syndactyly: simple and complicated. Simple syndactyly means that two fingers are joined by skin only. Complicated syndactyly means that two fingers may share bone, nail, or nerve tendon. Thankfully, Jason's case was a simple syndactyly," he continued.

Dr. Wallace said that syndactyly repair is usually done before the child begins school to avoid criticism of other children.

"We like to wait until the child is at least two years old because of the size of the hand, but we like to do it before the child enters school, because other children will notice the difference. After two, the child seems to tolerate the operation better and there is less anesthesia risks," he said.

Jason's surgery was on November 4. He spent a few days in the hospital, but he has healed well and his hand is now functioning normally with much finer dexterity.

Dr. Wallace said that the have a normal looking hand," he said.

Jason's mother, Belinda Alligood said that they are pleased with the operation's results.

"We are very glad that we had the surgery. It doesn't seem to effect him now, but we were afraid that it would have interfered with his grip in the future. We also thought it would have interfered if he wanted to play sports. The way he grips a baseball at two may not be

"We are happy that he seems to be able to use his hand better now. We are very pleased that Dr. Wallace was able to perform this procedure at Beaufort County Hospital," Mrs. Belinda Alligood.

procedure did require skin grafting, but with time the hand should look perfectly normal.

"The procedure required us to first divide the fingers and then prepare skin grafting. It was necessary to prepare a normal appearing web between fingers. We use groin skin for the grafting because it is soft and folding. With success the scars will fade in several months and Jason should too important, but the way he could grip it at seven might have been hampered," Ms. Alligood said.

"We were very pleased with the personal care that the nursing staff provided. I think that Dr. Wallace is a valuable addition to the hospital. He was very considerate and patient with Jason. As the mother of a two year old, I think he treated our son with extra good care," she added.

Food Management continued from page 3

two weeks of their program. After that, we request that they eat with us at least once a day and then they are on their own. If a participant is learning eating skills to assist with a physical disorder such as hypertension, or if they are trying to reach a certain weight goal they may eventually eat at home, but we anticipate that some of the participants will continue to eat at the hospital for some time," she added.

Food management is an essential part of the healing and health maintenance process. We feel that this program is one way the hospital can extend its traditional services in a nontraditional way to the citizens of Beaufort County," Ms. Moser said.

Heart Attack Causes Life Changes For Milton Woolard

"It was the first Saturday that we could sleep late in a long time. We didn't have to worry about taking out a barn of tobacco or going anywhere that day, so we had slept a little later than usual. I got up and fixed breakfast and when I went to tell him (Milton Woolard) that it was ready, I found him laying on the couch. He had put his clothes on, but he was holding his chest. He was sweating and looked pale. He said that he didn't feel good. Right away I began to wonder if it was his heart," Mrs. Woolard said. "His father and two of his brothers have died with heart attacks. He (Milton) was in good health, in fact he had never been to the doctor too much except for kidney colic, but with his family's history of heart problems, I was worried that I would lose him," she added.

"My nephew and I took him to the hospital and he passed out in the Emergency Room. We lost him three or four times, but I think that the good Lord knew how much we love him and need him and with the help of our doctors and nurses they pulled him through. Dr. Cook said that she saw him die once in the ER and they had to revive him three times in ICU. Dr. Nicholson said that he was amazed, because he had not seen a patient prior to that time receive as many shocks (a technique used to revive heart attack patients) as Milton, and he really thought that he would have brain damage, but he didn't. We are so grateful to everyone who took care of him at the hospital," Mrs. Woolard said.

According to his wife's account, Milton Woolard, a 54 year old farmer and City of Washington employee, had no warning of his impending illness. "It just hap-nurses at the hospital were as nice as they could be. They really helped me and my family. Dr. Nicholson is a mighty fine doctor. I am very grateful for all of them," Woolard said.

"I don't remember much about the whole thing. I got up that day and I felt sick. They took me to the hospital and when I was in the wheelchair I passed out. Three days later I woke up." Milton Woolard pened so quickly, we were lucky to get him to the hospital when we did," she said.

"It was the first major health problem I've had so they didn't know what medicines I could take or couldn't take and they had to work it out for themselves because I was out of it. The riding a tractor. My main problem now is that I get short winded, but if I pace myself I can do most anything," Woolard said.

Asked if he participates in a regular exercise program Woolard said that his daily routine is exercising.

"Bouncing around on that tractor all day keeps me exercising," he said.

Asked about the changes in their lifestyles since her husband's heart attack, Mrs. Woolard said that there have definitely been a few.

"We eat very differently and I try my best to be sure that he gets what he should and avoid what he shouldn't eat. We are all working again. He went back to work six weeks after the heart attack, but I am trying to help him more around the farm so he won't worry about that. We raise hogs and I take care of them and we burn wood, so I bring the wood in. He doesn't need that kind of strain. He drives a tractor and bushhog all day for the city and provides lawn maintenance around the electrical poles. I don't want him to have to do as much around home as he used to. We have five daughters and they have always helped us work, but we only have one at home now," she said.

"The only other major change is that soon after he came home from the hospital, Milton joined the church and he was baptized. He goes to church every Sunday morning and Wednesday night and that is something I am very happy about. We both believe that the Lord has taken care of us," she said.

Hospital Reaches Out With Lifeline Care To Bertha Biggs

Bertha Biggs

"I used to cook and clean and take care of children. Now I can't do too much and the children are taking care of me. One thing that does make me happy is that I am able to stay at my home," Bertha Biggs said.

"Why, I worked for the Walker family for 30 years as their housekeeper. I practically helped Ms. Margie (Walker) raise Jimmy and Suzanne. They are a wonderful family and I love them. They love me too. In fact, after I had a light stroke a few months ago, Jimmy decided that he would provide this Lifeline for me. I'll tell you, I couldn't be here by myself if I didn't have it," she said.

"Lifeline is my direct line for help when I need it. I haven't needed it yet, but I know how to use it if I do. I feel good about having it because it makes me feel safe at night and if I have to be alone. After my stroke there are a lot of things that I can't do, but I can push this button for help and I feel good about that," she said.

Mrs Biggs is one of the 45 subscribers of Lifeline, Beaufort County Hospital's personal emergency response system. Lifeline, a telephone based emergency response system allows subscribers to simply push a "help" button attached to a bracelet, necklace or waistband. The message is automatically transmitted to the hospital's emergency department where health care professionals respond by phone first and by ambulance if needed.

The Lifeline system began several years ago at Beaufort County Hospital with a contribution from the Washington Woman's Club.

independence, because help is as close as their "help" buttons," said Sally Miller, manager of the hospital's Patient and Family Services Department. "Most people want to live in their own homes and remain as independent as possible. This is often impossible to a disabled patient or elderly person. Lifeline provides the reassurance that someone can respond to their call for help immediately 24 hours

Since that time the hospital has purchased additional units and the program has grown.

"Lifeline is a tremendous system for providing emergency help particularly to the elderly, but it is also a system that gives them their

"Lifeline is one of the ways that the hospital can extend its services to the community. For some, it is their only source for help when they need it," she added.

Administrators' Message

During the past twelve months Beaufort County Hospital has expanded its services to meet the needs of the community. The addition of programs such as the Health Awareness Program, Case Management Program, Pre-Admission Discharge Planning, Nutritional Counseling and others were mandated by the needs of our community and patients. It is our responsibility to provide a range of health care services that our community needs and wants.

In May, the community expressed its confidence in our services as it dramatically approved a bond referendum which will enable the hospital to continue to expand its programs and provide adequate facilities for these programs.

There is a major commitment on the part of hospital employees and physicians to continue to earn the enthusiastic support of the citizens of Beaufort County. Beaufort County Hospital is a valuable asset in the community, both in terms of medical care it offers and as an attraction to new industry and business. During the coming year, we will be striving to justify and enhance the confidence of the people we serve.
