McFarlane Denies Asking Saudi To Assist Contras

By DAVID ESPO
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former National Security Advisor Robert McFarlane, declaring "I stand by everything I have testified to," told the Iran-Contra hearings today he does not recall meeting with King Fahd to solicit a contribution for the Nicaraguan rebels.

"I don't believe we had any meeting there," McFarlane told Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Texas, whose questions followed publication of a story that such a meeting occurred at the Saudi ambassador's house outside Washington at a time when U.S. aid to the Contras was banned.

McFarlane also branded as "utterly false" previous reports that he offered intelligence information to the Iranians in an effort to persuade them not to give the Soviet Union information they had obtained by torturing the former CIA station chief in Beirut.

"In no sense, ever, in my hearing" was that discussed, McFarlane said, reporting on a secret meeting he held in Tehran in May, 1986.

McFarlane was in Tehran in an attempt to win the release of U.S. hostages in Lebanon in exchange for American weapons.

Former CIA station chief William Buckley was taken hostage in Beirut, and is believed to have died following prolonged torture by his captors. His Lebanese captors are believed to be closely linked to Iranian authorities.

Testifying for the fourth day at the joint House-Senate hearings, McFarlane also said President Reagan often said that the United States had a long tradition of providing assistance to "freedom fighters."

Reagan "said that he believed that this tradition that goes all the way back to our own revolution and the assistance we got from the French is one that we should identify with and support. But that is not to say that he urged or in any way authorized me or anyone else to take any illegal activity" on behalf of the Contras, McFarlane said.

Reagan acknowledged on Wednesday that he personally thanked King Fahd for his contributions to the Contras but denied that he solicited the donations and said the king brought up the issue during their 1985 talk.

Although the Saudis have denied it, committee members have put their contributions to the Contras at $32.5 million in 1984 and 1985.

The former top-ranking administration official was questioned about an alleged meeting with King Fahd after The Washington Post reported that he had made a secret solicitation for funds for the Contras during an unannouinced visit to see the Saudi king and the Ambassador, Prince Bandar, at the diplomat's private home in McLean, Virginia.

"I remember no such meeting, sir," McFarlane said.

The Post said McFarlane requested up to $10 million from the Saudis in May or June of 1984 and then made an unannounced visit to see King Fahd and Saudi ambassador Prince Bandar during the king's 1985 U.S. visit, requesting $15 million.

The Post said McFarlane was "very nervous" in making the request and quoted him as telling Fahd, "We will fall on our swords before we let this become public."

Army Colonel Leads Coup In Sweep Of Fiji Leaders

SUVA, Fiji (AP) — The country's most influential chieftain today called on troops who arrested the prime minister and Cabinet to end their rebellion, and said he was assuming control of the government.

But the army colonel who led the revolt announced he was appointing the former prime minister as foreign minister and named 15 other people to a "council of ministers" that would rule until he called elections.

Governor General Ratu Sir Penaia Ganilau, normally a figurehead, declared a state of emergency and issued his appeal on a commercial radio station. Ganilau, an ethnic Fijian, is the representative of Queen Elizabeth II, Fiji's head of state.

Ganilau appealed to the mutinous soldiers who earlier today arrested Prime Minister Timoci Bavadra, recently elected on a non-aligned and anti-nuclear platform, and the entire Cabinet to release their captives and return to the barracks.

Fiji, about 1,400 miles east of Australia, is a popular tourist spot and one of the most prosperous island states in the South Pacific.

The military takeover followed weeks of racial unrest triggered by the April 11 general election. The polling put in power for the first time a government dominated by ethnic Indians, who slightly outnumber ethnic Fijians.

The leader of the coup, Lt. Col. Sitiveni Rabuka, named former Prime Minister Ratu Sir Kamisese Mara as foreign minister and 15 other people, many of them former ministers from Mara's Alliance Party, to the "council of ministers."

Observers were skeptical of the announcement, which was broadcast on National Radio. They said there was no evidence that anyone had actually accepted the posts, and Mara did not issue any statement.

In the election, Bavadra's coalition of the National Federation Party and Labor Party unseated the staunchly pro-Western Mara, a native Fijian who had governed Fiji since independence from Britain in 1970.

Bavadra, a 52-year-old physician with 11 children, was elected on a non-aligned foreign policy platform that would include a ban on port visits by nuclear-capable warships.

Rabuka met with Ganilau soon after seizing power in the South Pacific's first coup.

It was not immediately clear if Rabuka, 38, who was the army's third-in-command, represented the entire army or just a faction. Some

Harris Presented Chamber Award

Durward Harris, owner and founder of the local Harris Supermarket chain, was named "Small Businessman of the Year" by the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce at a banquet Wednesday.

Harris, who opened the first Harris Supermarket in Greenville in 1951, and his family now operate eight stores in eastern North Carolina.

"This is certainly a big honor to me," said Harris, who recently has been suffering from declining health.

"I've been in business since 1951 and never had a business person of the year award," Harris said. "I turned the business over (to his children) Duff and Susan about six or eight months ago and they're running the business now. Evidently you're doing better than I was doing to get this recognition."

Harris advised, "You young people — I don't see a lot of young ones out here — if you want to go in business, get your mess together and go."

Harris was introduced by Greenville Mayor Les Garner, who called Harris his "best customer and best friend."

"He's the greatest fighter I've ever known," the mayor said.

Garner noted that the eight Harris' Supermarkets employ 300 persons and provide $2.5 million in salaries in eastern North Carolina.

Harris is a charter member of Hooker Memorial Christian Church and has served as a deacon and active member of the Christian Men's fellowship.

He has been a member of the board of the Salvation Army for 20 years and is a past chairman of the board.

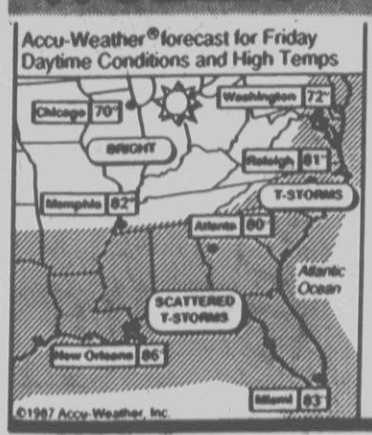

He is a past master of Crown Point Masonic Lodge No. 708, and is chairman of the fund-raising committee of the Oxford Orphanage.

He is past president of the Pitt County Shrine Club and was contractor for the new Shrine Building. The ballroom of the building was named for he and his brother, Ed.

He also led a fund-raising drive to purchase a $75,000 hypothermia

Reid To Head Pierce Fellowship

By DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer

Superior Court Judge David Reid was elected president of the John Pierce Fellowship Club at the organization's 65th annual meeting Wednesday at Camp Contentment on the banks of Contentnea Creek between Ayden and Grifton.

Reid replaces Pitt County Commissioner Charles McLawhorn, who presided over a brief meeting that resulted in the election of Sidney Pierce Britt as vice president, Wayne Harris as secretary and Leroy Smith as assistant secretary-treasurer.

J.B. Spilman, chairman of the Pitt County Democratic Party, gave a brief history, saying the club had its beginning on April 4, 1922, when a group of 19 men met at Peele's Beach on the Pamlico River in Beafort County to celebrate the 48th birthday of John B. Pierce, an Ayden merchant and cotton broker.

The group so enjoyed the outing that it decided to celebrate again the following year, Spilman said.

The first meetings were known as "J.B.'s Birthday Party," then later as "the John Pierce Birthday Party." In 1942, the year Pierce died, the name was officially changed to the "John Pierce Fellowship Club" and the first president was elected.

"Since the only running water anywhere within miles (of Camp Contentment) is the creek," Spilman said, "the club has been all male and almost all Democrats though there are no rules as to membership.

"There is no board of directors, no constitution, no by-laws, and it has not been necessary to have a sergeant-at-arms. It has been, for 60 years, a gathering for the purposes of fellowship and friendship and since nothing but profanity is prohibited, politics is an acceptable subject."

The annual fellowship gathering, which attracted about 200 local men, gives local individuals an opportunity to discuss issues, according to Reid.

"These people are all good Democrats. They are interested in good government," Reid said. "We come together in fellowship to advance the purposes of the fellowship, and advance good government through the Democratic party."

Sen. Bob Martin, D-Pitt, a past president who has been attending the event for about 25 years, said he looks forward to meeting with old friends.

"It's a get-together, a pow-wow, to exchange pleasantries and renew old acquaintances and friendships," Martin said. "It's like a homecoming."

Hardison Expects Fight Over Signs

Legislation designed to make local governments pay a fair price for billboards they remove which has won House approval will be a hot topic when it reaches the Senate floor, Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir, says.

"There is an awful lot of feeling on both sides," Hardison said at the 65th annual meeting of the John Pierce Fellowship Club Wednesday at Camp Contentment on the banks of Contentnea Creek between Ayden and Grifton.

"I think everybody wants to make the streets and the highways in the cities prettier, more attractive, but they (billboards) generate an awful lot of revenue," said Hardison, a 1988 candidate for the Democratic nomination for lieutenent governor.

The billboard bill won House approval 61-43 Wednesday despite objections that sign owners were trying to circumvent the U.S. Supreme Court and the legislation usurps the authority of local governments.

Hardison said the members of the Senate have a variety of factors to consider before casting their votes on the bill.

"Local governments have the authority to pass the ordinance," he said. "But if they pass the ordinance to outlaw it, then they ought to reimburse those that they are putting out of business. There's an awful lot that has to be considered on that when you talk about outlawing an item like that."

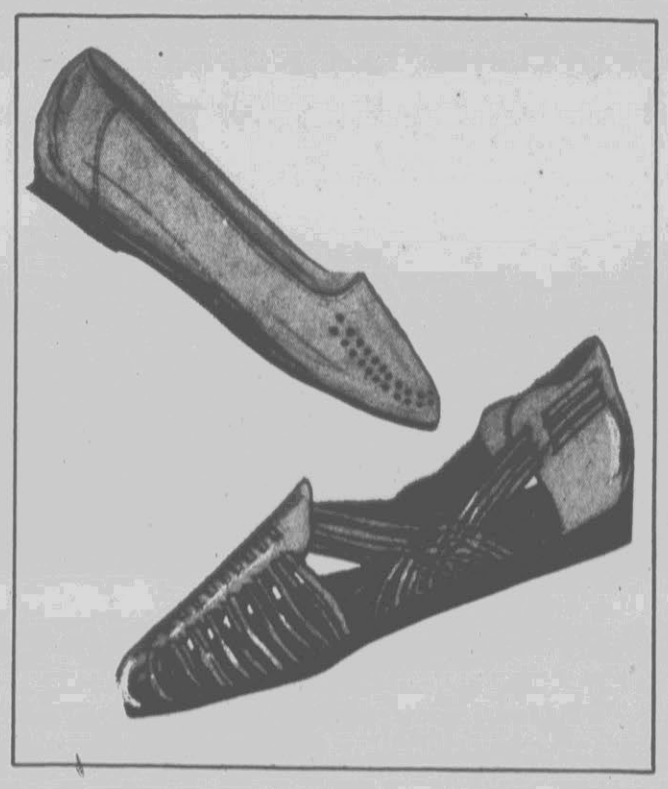

However, Hardison did say he was not comfortable with limiting local authority.

"I've never have been one to take the local government's authority away," he said. "I think we're treading where angels should not have traveled."

Volvo Tennis Tournament May Draw Overflow Number Of Participants

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Several status reports were presented and discussed at the May meeting of the Greenville Recreation and Parks Commission on Wednesday. No items requiring action were on the agenda of the meeting.

The department's executive director, Boyd Lee, reported that the statewide Volvo Tennis Tournament being hosted in Greenville by the Recreation and Parks Department June 6-7 is expected to draw an overflow number of entrants. "Already we have had over 700 to register for the event," Lee said, "and there will likely be others to enter."

Lee said that, according to estimates prepared by the chamber of commerce, the tournament will result in about $35,000 being poured into the local economy. "This, the chamber notes, can be multiplied by five with a total impact on the local economy of something like $175,000. It's going to be a big weekend, with all our tennis courts and those at ECU being used. This is the kind of thing that pays dividends to the city for its investment in recreational facilities."

At River Park North, bids have been awarded for construction of the Science and Nature Center Building. Construction is due to begin next week for the three connecting pods that will constitute the building. Low bid came in at $283,895 — which is $33,895 over the $250,000 fund allocation for the structure. "The City Council authorized the transfer of funds necessary so that work can begin," Lee said.

In the budget request for 1987-88 presented by the department, funds for several capital improvements did not receive City Council approval on tentative consideration of total city budget requests. One of the department's request was for a bridge to cross Parkers Creek on the distant side of River Park North. "We hope this bridge can eventually be funded," Lee said. "The bridge will give access to a big section of the park which cannot be utilized at this time."

Construction work on the amphitheater on Town Common is proceeding on schedule, Lee reported. A dedication ceremony is planned for 7 p.m. June 14, which will coincide with the first Sunday in the Park program this summer.

At the Eppes Center in West Greenville, painting of the back rooms in the gymnasium will get under way Monday. These are the rooms to be used by the Eppes Alumni Association, for community meetings and other activities. Also, Lee said he has been informed that reroofing of the back portion of the building, the section over the back rooms, is due to get under way within a week with the roof repair over the main gym hopefully to be done during the coming fiscal year.

In his report on the Aquatics and Fitness Center at East Carolina Vocational Center, Lee told commissioners that to date "the faciliy is paying for its operation and maintenance. The situation looks good now. We have reached our quota of 1,100 members and believe that we can handle a total of 1,200 members and still provide full service to that number. At this time, interested persons can join as we no longer have a waiting list, although that can change any time and we may have to go back to a waiting list to insure that we do not have more members than can be served."

Improvents noted as needed at the center include paving the parking lot and installing an air conditionign facility. "This, as well as the operation of the center, must come from membership revenues," Lee said.

"We have agreed not to ask the city council for any financial assistance. It seems at this point that the center will continue to pay for its operation."

Martin School Board Scans Election Plans

WILLIAMSTON — The Martin County Board of Education and a 21-member advisory committee are examing proposals to create election districts for the school board.

A legal consultant presented some of the proposals at a joint board-committee meeting this week.

In November 1986, the board was ordered the U.S. Justice Department to end residency requirements for school board members. The department claims that residence requirements makes it difficult for minorities to win board seats, and that the board should have submitted its residency system before implementing it.

If the board does not develop a new procedure, all of its seven members will be elected at large, as they were until the early 1970's.

Board members now come from four school attendance zones. The Williamston and Roanoke zones are represented by two members, while Bear Grass and James are each served by one, with the seventh member elected at-large.

The board is presenting to the public a concept where candidates would be voted on in districts, rather than by the entire county. Methods discussed include two ways of splitting the county into five districts, and two more plans with seven districts.

Attempted Rape

Greenville police this morning arrested David James Carr Jr., 19, of 1805B W. Third St. on an attempted rape charge.

Detective J.E. Harris said the charge stemmed from an incident reported to the department at 5:02 p.m. Wednesday.

Harris said the 17-year-old victim said the alleged attack occurred after Carr, who was taking her home after school, drove to a dirt path in a wooded area near the intersection of Arlington Boulevard and Beasley Drive.

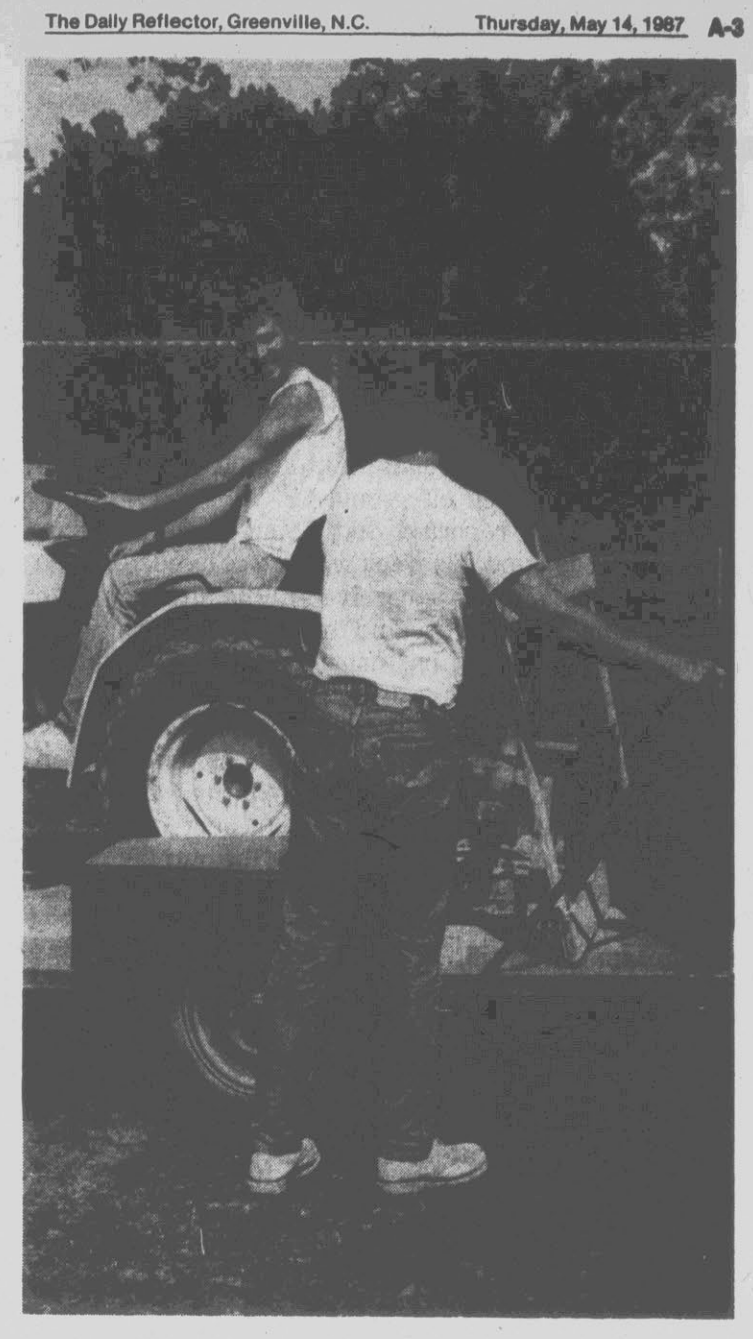

When a passing motorist saw the car and stopped, Harris said the victim hollered for help, then jumped from the vehicle and ran.

The passing motorist drove the girl home and reported the incident to police, Harris said.

Homework Needed

If the first group of applications for the position of Greenville city manager is any indication, the City Council will have adequate numbers to look through in its quest for a new city manager.

City officials reported that about 60 applications had been received this week with more expected. The applications, and those received in the future, will go to the council for review and the paring down process which will lead to final consideration of the more promising candidates.

The flood of applications was generated by city advertisements in various publications that reach potential candidates. The ads are expected to bring in still more applications for council consideration.

The basic rules apply in reducing the number of applications to a few serious candidates. The city obviously wants a person with adequate training for the city manager's position. For a city the size of Greenville with the amount of activities under way here that person should have several years' experience as a city manager in a comparable or smaller community.

A strong background in all the areas of city involvement — from budgeting to construction — will be needed to adequately fill the position. And the candidates should have above average skills in working with people, including employees, the public and elected officials.

Obviously the perfect person for the position doesn't exist. Still Greenville offers enough so that it can attract an exceptional city manager and that is what it should be looking for. An important part of the process is the studying of the many applications by members of the council. That is some homework that must be done.

A derailed freight in adjacent Wilson County this week released clouds of acidic gas.

The freight wreck near Elm City north of Wilson derailed 27 cars including tank cars loaded with concentrated sulfuric acid.

Schools, a nursing home and the entire town of Elm City were evacuated because of the intense fumes.

No injuries were reported but thousands of people living in the area learned the problems of being rousted from their homes and jobs because of an industrial accident.

The train crash raises once again the concerns about the kinds of chemicals that trains carry, how they are handled and the consequences of their escaping in the event of an accident.

Trains move through cities every day carrying tank cars filled with chemicals. It would be futile to argue that trains should not transport such chemicals. They must be moved about and it is probably safer to move them by train than by trucks on the highways.

There are valid safety questions, however. Are the tank cars built to a standard that will prevent their rupturing in the event of a train wreck? Obviously the cost of hauling chemicals will rise as more sophisticated equipment is required but that is preferable to large scale evacuations and the possibility of injury to humans.

No doubt we still have much to learn about the safe transportation of toxic chemicals. We must learn more, however, and we must not be lulled into thinking it won't happen in Greenville, Farmville, Wilson or Raleigh. It just happened near Elm City.

Secrecy Went Out The Window

WASHINGTON — Amid all the testimony during the Iran-contra hearings, and all the damaging documentation to date, nothing more reveals the contemptuous attitudes that produced this disaster than one deadly little throwaway line.

It came during the contentious cross-examination last week of the no-longer-so-secret agent, Richard V. Secord, by Senate counsel Arthur L. Liman.

Secord was asked, casually, if business associates deeply involved with him in clandestine White House-inspired missions held U.S. security clearances. He said they did not.

Yet all had been involved in matters of the most extraordinary governmental secrecy, privy to top-secret codes, with access to highly secret Swiss bank accounts established to hide existence of funds for U.S. covert operations. They had also worked closely with senior American officials and intelligence operatives in several foreign countries.

They were crucial elements of an operation authorized secretly by President Reagan, an operation regarded as so sensitive by the administration that the president ordered "witting" highest officials of his administration not to disclose it to members of Congress, press or public.

What exquisite, historic irony.

Here's a president who, more than any in memory, has been obsessed with governmental leaks and press accounts that supposedly damage national security, if not give "aid and comfort to the enemy."

Now his administration's security procedures are shown to have been cavalierly managed, singularly lax and, in the end, disastrously implemented.

It's not the first time that the Reagan presidency has been caught employing a dual standard, saying one thing in public and doing another in private. But the Iran-contra affair represents the first time so much of its duplicity has been so totally exposed, with all of the ensuing humiliation.

How serious will it all prove to be? The answer depends on the public. My guess is that we're still too close to the Watergate impeachment trauma and that no desire exists to bring Ronald Reagan to ultimate public judgment. His age, his genial personality, his nearness to the end of his term and the memory of the last presidential crisis are factors in his behalf.

These could be the best things going for him, for already the testimony about his role has been extremely damaging.

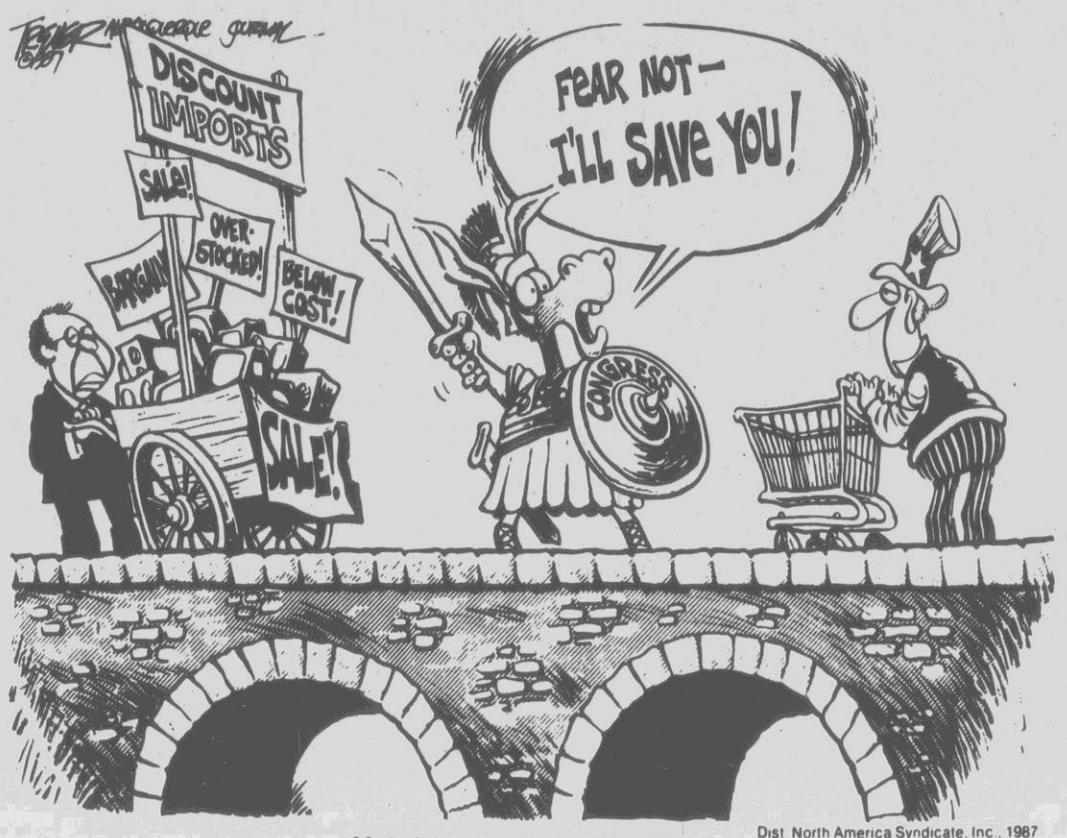

Reagan's former national security adviser, Robert C. McFarlane, gave congressional investigators one bit of potentially incriminating information during his first day of public testimony this week.

McFarlane said his former aide and fellow Marine, Lt. Col. Oliver L. North, called him at home on a Sunday morning after Attorney General Edwin Meese III had discovered the now-famous North "diversion memo."

North, according to McFarlane's testimony, already had told him of plans to hold "a shredding party." McFarlane said he didn't know who might have authorized North's palpably illegal actions.

Had that kind of testimony been given during the Watergate hearings 14 years ago, a great public outcry would have resulted.

HORATIO AT THE BRIDGE

Public Forum

To the editor:

Like Mark Antony in Shakespeare's "Julius Caesar," who said, "The good is oft interred with their bones ...," I feel compelled to speak in defense of the late Mr. Arthur S. Alford. I was appalled to read the remark from one of the Pitt County Board of Education members, "Mr. Alford has left no good memory for Pitt County."

If no one else can remember and appreciate the great contributions Mr. Alford rendered during the difficult consolidation period for Pitt County schools, I certainly can.

Granville Walker said, "There are times when silence is yellow, times when we ought to stand on our feet and, regardless of the consequences, challenge the gross evils of the time, times when not to do so is the most blatant form of cowardice. But there are other times when silence is golden, when to tell the truth is to make many hearts bleed needlessly and when nothing is accomplished and everything is hurt by a loose tongue."

Let's remember what our parents taught us, and that is to not speak ugly of those who have passed away.

Ron Braxton

To the editor:

It has been a month since the deadline for grandfathering, and many parents are waiting anxiously to see the effect that redistricting, restructuring and the grandfather decision will have on our schools. I ask the school administration, when will these figures be released? I do not believe these figures are still unknowns.

I believe they will show two city schools that do not meet federal guidelines for racial balance in '87-'88 and, if projections are available, they will show four schools in '88-'89 that will not meet these guidelines.

What will our school board do to correct this situation? As public servants, will they act responsibly and make the necessary changes to give every child in Pitt County the same opportunity for a quality education? Or will the board shirk its duty and force concerned parents to file suit to correct this injustice.

Following is a list of questions that citizens of Pitt County are entitled to know the answers to. Please openly answer them.

1. How many eligible people elected to grandfather?
2. When will new projection figures (placing grandfathering students where they have elected to go) for all schools be available for review?
3. An annual review to determine if schools meet federal guidelines has been promised. When will this take place? When guidelines are not met, will steps be taken immediately or will the board wait a year to correct the problem?
4. How will cases of children illegally registered be handled?
5. The administration projected problems in allocating instructional materials, allocations from state and local funds, staff placement, inefficient bus routes and establishing and maintaining record keeping systems. How are these problems going to be dealt with?

What has grandfathering cost the people of Pitt County?

To the editor:

With a Pitt County school superintendent who commands the highest superintendent's supplement in North Carolina, one wonders why such outside educational consultants as Dr. George Redfern and Dr. Delma Blinson are needed.

Also, since the superintendent's supplement is at the top, questions have been raised about the amount of supplements paid to the deputy superintendent and the four assistant superintendents, as well as the various coordinators housed in the Pitt County schools' central office. Is it true that their central office staff is the largest in North Carolina, when the size of the system is considered? Are we getting what we are paying for? Are we getting high-quality decision-making for the high local cost?

Both the Pitt County Commissioners who appropriate local educational funds from our tax dollars and the Pitt County Board of Education who spends these funds need to address some difficult questions. For example, what benefits are we and our children receiving from local tax dollars, which are going to increase the superintendent's supplement (increased from $16,800 in 85-86 to $33,988 in 86-87), and to build a bigger educational bureaucracy. Could the money spent benefit students more if priorities were changed?

To the editor:

At the Pitt County Board of Education meeting Monday, May 4, the League of Women Voters of Greenville-Pitt County requested the board to hold a public hearing on the proposed budget under consideration. By a vote of 7-6, the request was denied.

The budget, including allocation plans for capital outlay, was first formally presented to the board by its administration only four days earlier on April 30. It was not available to the public until the workshop meeting held for the board that evening. The public was, therefore, denied both ample time to study the budget and the opportunity to voice opinions at a hearing.

According to Page DCDB of the Pitt County Board of Education Policy Manual, a public hearing may be held on the proposed education budget before it is presented to the Board of County Commissioners. "The League of Women Voters believes that democratic government depends upon the informed and active participation of its citizens at all levels of government ... and that governmental bodies must protect the citizen's right to know by giving adequate notice of proposed actions ..." (Impact of Issues, 1986-88, LWVUS.)

The League of Women Voters of Greenville-Pitt County does not feel that four days constitutes "adequate notice" and would like to express its objection to the Pitt County Board of Education's action denying the request for a public hearing.

Legislature Deals With Marriage

RALEIGH — How North Carolinians dissolve their marriages, split up their marital property, live in separation and divide child custody could all very well be changed this year by the General Assembly.

Several dozen bills dealing with divorce, separation, property settlements and child custody have been filed by a variety of legislators from both parties.

Probably the most discussed bill to date concerns separations. House Bill 293, sponsored by Rep. Joe Hackney, D-Orange, would redefine the legal term "resumption of mariatal relations." As Hackney explains, state law is now very strict. Any sexual act between separated individuals now constitutes a resumption of marital relations and thereby causes all separation agreements reached to that point to be void. Hackney's bill, which has passed the House, would require that a couple actually return to living together before they would be considered to have resumed marital relations.

Rep. Jonathan Rhyne, R-Lincoln, wants to give the courts use of the contempt power to enforce separation agreements when those agreements have been filed with the court. With contempt power, the court could move much more quickly, and decisively, in disputes over compliance.

Several bills deal with the equitable distribution of property, but Sen. Bob Swain, D-Buncombe, probably has the most constroversial. It would exempt state pensions, like those for state employees and judges, from the list of assets subject to equitable distribution.

Certain to be the most controversial bill in the entire divorce area is Senate Bill 765. Sen. Sandy Sands, D-Rockingham, proposes to reduce the waiting period for a divorce from one year to six months. A veteran legislative librarian quipped recently, "We still remember how much the phone rang the last time" such a change was proposed. Sands says he's heard nothing but positive feedback so far, but conservative legislators like Sen. Ollie Harris, D-Cleveland, say they're opposed and will fight the bill.

Sands says he's filing his bill to speed up the equitable distribution process. Sen. Jim Johnson, R-Cabarrus, wants to do the same thing. But he's taking a different approach.

Johnson, in SB 785, wants to give the courts the authority to set an equitable distribution of marital property in motion even before a divorce has been granted. Both parties would have to agree. Sands and Johnson agree that with equitable distribution both parties have to wait too long to claim their belongings.

Finally, in the area of child custody, two forces are at work. Women's advocates continue to push for stricter enforcement of child support judgements. Sen. Helen Marvin, D-Gaston, proposes SB 409 which would prohibit retroactive reductions to late support payments. A judge would still have authority to reduce a paying parent's future responsibilities.

Mrs. Marvin is also responding to fathers' groups, however, and their plea for a fairer shake when custody is decided. She is the lead legislator in a coalition of women's advocates and conservatives pushing for greater use of joint custody.

Strength For Today

Phillips Brooks was one of the greatest preachers of a past generation. For years he held the people of Boston spellbound. He even preached in Westminster Abbey on several occasions.

Yet, until he achieved success as a preacher he was a disappointed man, because what he really wanted to be was a teacher. But when he started a teaching career in a boys' school, his failure was complete.

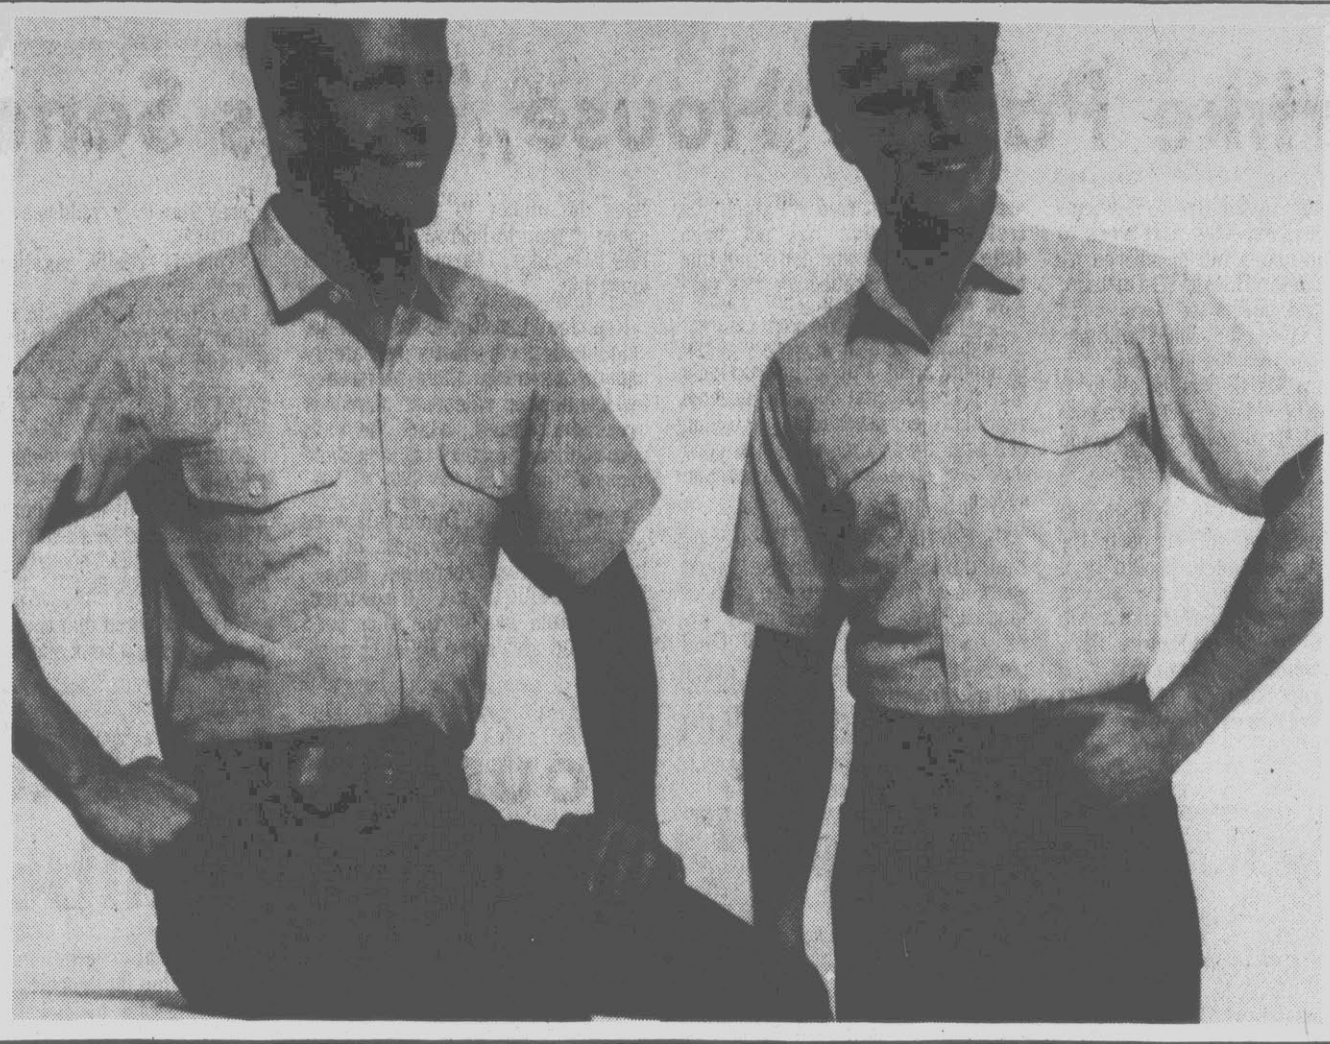

Failure is often the door through which God leads us to our greatest successes. Often we do not know ourselves. God steered Phillips Brooks to a great career. He can do the same for us.

Sales Tax Hike Passes House, Faces Senate Foes

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolinians would pay a sales tax of 6 cents per dollar for four years under a bill that has won House endorsement as a vehicle for raising up to $2 billion to build schools.

"We have the opportunity to take a bold step to keep North Carolina in the lead in the South and in this nation in providing educational opportunities for our children," Rep. Bob Etheridge, D-Harnett, said Wednesday before the House gave the bill final approval, 80-35.

But despite the measure's overwhelming support among House Democrats, all but two of whom voted for it, it likely will face tough opposition in the Senate.

The Senate Committee on Economic Growth is expected next week to begin work on a bill sponsored by Sen. Kenneth Royall, D-Durham, that would authorize two bond issues: $1 billion for school buildings and $1 billion for other purposes.

Gov. Jim Martin has called for a $1.5 billion bond issue to create a pool from which local governments could borrow at low interest for school construction and repairs.

Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan, who opposes the tax increase and supports the Royall bill, said there should be a comprehensive study of the state's school construction needs and available revenue sources before decisions are made on any plan.

"I have not failed to join in supporting (tax increases) that I felt were needed," Jordan said. "I think the real question that has not been determined yet is whether or not this tax increase is needed for this purpose."

He questioned the accuracy of the Department of Public Instruction's March 4 report that the state's school capital project needs total $3.2 billion and said it was time to look beyond the sales tax as a new revenue source.

During House debate, Democrats said the sales tax increase would spare local governments the costs of interest, legal fees and other expenses. They said the rival bond plans would cost $1.19 for every dollar borrowed.

"I think it's far cheaper ... if you have the money to go ahead and spend it than to borrow," said Rep. Bob Etheridge, D-arnett. "All of us know that.

Rep. Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, said local governments repeatedly had demonstrated their preference for local-option sales tax increases over bond issues, which he said usually force property taxes upward to pay off the loans.

Republicans said Democrats were exaggerating the costliness of the bond plans. Rep. Johnathan Rhyne, R-Lincoln, said the tax bill's distribution formula was not based on need and would give some counties more money than they could use and others too little.

"This is really taxation at its worst," Rhyne said.

He offered a motion to return the bill to the Finance Committee where it could be put alongside the bond proposals and a compromise sought. It was quickly tabled, 76-35.

The state currently levies a 3-cent sales tax while counties charge 2 cents. If the bill were approved, the state tax would be 4 cents per dollar and the entire tax 6 cents from July 1, 1987, until July 1, 1991.

Rhyne charged that the expiration provision was a hoax and that in four years, the Legislature would find an excuse to retain it.

The bill's sponsor, Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Granville, derided GOP arguments as "foolish." He said it would not give any county more than it could use because the money would be held in a State Budget Office account and distributed individually to local governments only after they sign contracts for school construction work.

Counties that don't want to improve their school buildings could not use their share of the tax revenue for other purposes, Watkins said. It would revert to the state budget's general fund.

House Adds Exemptions, Approves Billboard Bill

RALEIGH (AP) — Opponents plan to keep fighting a bill that would make governments pay for billboards removed through local ordinances, although the House voted to exempt cities that already have passed billboard bans.

Wednesday's 57-49 vote for final House passage showed an erosion of support since the House tentatively approved the bill 61-43 on Tuesday.

Fred Baggett of the North Carolina League of Municipalities said the amendment, which will exempt Raleigh, Durham, Winston-Salem and New Hanover County ordinances, "leaves about 470 towns that haven't addressed the issue and won't have that opportunity."

"I hope the Senate committee will research the far-reaching implications of this bill more than the House committee did."

"It's an attack on zoning," said Bill Holman, representing the North Carolina Conservation Council. "The bill should be defeated."

Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, sponsor of the bill, said it is only proper that local governments pay fair market value for property taken out of commission by law. But Rep. Richard Wright, D-Columbus, said the U.S. Supreme Court has upheld the practice of giving sign owners up to five years' notice so they can recoup expected losses. He said a reversal of that policy could spread to zoning ordinances on everything from liquor stores to massage parlors and adult bookstores.

Abortion Proposals To Become Effective

By The Associated Press

Two proposed abortion regulations, rejected by a North Carolina review board and the source of lively public debate last year, now are on the verge of quietly becoming law.

On June 1, county social service agencies throughout North Carolina are slated to implement the new rules, which affect poor women applying for state-funded abortions.

The proposals would require inviting pregnant applicants to view models showing the "growth and development of the human embryo" and mandatory reporting of all alleged rape or incest cases to the local district attorney.

Despite protest from pro-choice groups, both regulations were enacted in October by the Republican-controlled Social Service Commission, which makes rules regarding the state abortion fund and other social programs. Opponents have argued that the new rules would cause emotional stress for state abortion applicants, who must have an annual income of about $4,200 or less to qualify for funding.

Planned Parenthood organizations had vowed to block the proposals, either through the courts or the General Assembly. But on Wednesday, weeks before the regulations are to take effect, representatives of the groups said they were uncertain of their next move.

The issue is "in limbo as far as we're concerned," said Gail Miller, a public affairs coordinator for Planned Parenthood of Charlotte.

IN THE STATE

Martin Suit

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin's bid to strengthen his office moved to the N.C. Supreme Court Wednesday when his attorney argued that Martin — not the court's chief justice — should be able to choose the head of a state office created in 1985.

Martin has filed suit against the General Assembly and the Office of Administrative Hearings, which handles appeals from people dissatisfied with rulings by state agencies.

The Legislature established the office in 1985 and gave the chief justice the power to appoint its director. But in the March 1986 suit, Martin said the governor, as head of the executive branch, should appoint the director because the administrative hearings office is an executive branch agency.

Baby Injured

BURLINGTON, N.C. (AP) — An 11-month-old baby was critically injured Wednesday after falling through a car window and being pinned under the car, police said.

Terry Hopkins of Burlington suffered head injuries and was transported from Alamance County Hospital to North Carolina Memorial Hospital in Chapel Hill.

Police said the accident occurred after a truck collided with a Volkswagen Beetle. Police said an infant car seat was in the vehicle, but authorities did not know if the child had been restrained in the car seat.

Malfunction

BURLINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Officials think a malfunctioning thermostat caused Tuesday's explosion at the Burlington water plant, which spilled thousands of gallons of a corrosive chemical.

Randall Kornegay, director of public works and utilities for the city, said Wednesday pressure built up in a 10,000 gallon fiberglass storage tank because of the malfunctioning heater, causing the sodium hydroxide inside to reach its boiling point.

"It blew piping and liquid about 100 feet away," Kornegay said. No one was injured in the blast.

Microscope

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — A microscope so powerful that it permits looking at the structure of a molecule will be at the heart of a national center for electron microscope research recently approved for the Bowman Gray School of Medicine.

The school has been designated a National Biomedical Research Center for Intermediate Voltage Electron Micoscopy by the National Institutes of Health.

Support for the center comes from a five-year, $1,237,052 grant from NIH, a one-year, $250,000 grant from the N.C. Biotechnology Center in Research Triangle Park and from Bowman Gray.

Hodel Speech

ASHEVILLE (AP) — Americans must return to their Judeo-Christian heritage and promote "ethical absolutes" rather than "situational ethics" to ensure protection of human rights, Interior Secretary Donald Hodel said Wednesday.

"You need to become teachers, leaders whose ideas are dedicated to seeking justice," Hodel told the national conference of the Evangelical Press Association. "It's clear that situational ethics and relative values don't work, and that ethical absolutes are necessary if we're able to view the future with the conviction of protecting the rights of the people."

The Christian journalists, who have been meeting in Asheville since Sunday, heard Hodel at their closing banquet Wednesday night.

Prison Camp

MORGANTON, N.C. (AP) — A proposed forestry prison camp in Burke County would pose a threat to the safety and property values of residents, opponents of the camp said at a public hearing Wednesday.

The camp, called BRIDGE, would house about 50 non-violent prisoners between the ages of 18 and 25 on 125 acres in Pisgah National Forest at Table Rock. They would learn forestry, firefighting and construction skills. In exchange for fighting fires and building trails, the prisoners would receive time off their sentences.

State officials applied last month to the U.S. Forest Service for a conditional use permit to build the camp.

Legislature Passes Anti-Takeover Bill

RALEIGH (AP) — Capping an extraordinary, month-long effort to avert a hostile takeover of Burlington Industries Inc., the Legislature has enacted a law that enables shareholders in North Carolina companies to thwart unwanted buyouts.

"We know that we've helped Burlington," Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan said Wednesday after the Senate approved the bill, 42-0. "The question is, have we helped them enough to prevent the takeover."

The measure cleared its final hurdle when the House voted overwhelmingly to accept a technical amendment adopted by the Senate.

The bill is the latest of three measures that the General Assembly, introduced, debated and approved within four weeks, beginning shortly after reports surfaced of New York investor Asher Edelman's plan to seize control of Burlington.

Jordan, who championed all three measures, said there appeared to be little more that state lawmakers could do to assist Burlington, the nation's biggest textile manufacturer which employs some 22,000 North Carolinians.

"I don't think you're likely to see anything else come up," Jordan said.

Under the bill, shareholders who increase their holdings in a company beyond certain levels would be denied the right to vote their shares unless a majority of the other stockholders approved.

The decision would be made at the first stockholders' meeting after the would-be purchaser obtained a controlling share — which could be one-fifth, one-third or a majority of all voting power.

Without voting power, a would-be corporate raider cannot seize control of a company or dismiss its board of directors.

At the shareholders' meeting, which would be held within 50 days of a request for one, the purchaser would be required to disclose his intentions in buying the additional stock. He would be required to say so if he plananed to attempt a takeover.

The law would not apply to acquisitions consummated before April 30, 1987, or voluntary mergers that the company management supports.

The measure is modeled after an Indiana law recently upheld by the U.S. Supreme Court, but it differs in one key respect: it would apply not only to companies chartered in North Carolina, but to those chartered in other states that have at least 40 percent of their employees and assets and at least 10 percent of their shareholders in North Carolina.

"We feel that since the Supreme Court has upheld the Indiana law, they'll uphold this one if there is a challenge ...," said Sen. R.C. Soles, D-Columbus.

The Legislature last month voted to require that purchasers of North Carolina companies pay the same price for all stock unless 95 percent of the shareholders waive the provision or the company exempts itself. The measure, called the Shareholder Protection Act, is designed to make North Carolina firms less attractive targets for hostile takeovers.

Shortly thereafter, the Legislature passed a second law that applies the Shareholder Protection Act to out-of-state companies such as Burlington that meet the same criteria as in the bill enacted Wednesday.

Helms Task Force Named

RALEIGH (AP) — The National Congressional Club has created a new political committee in an effort to boost what it says are Sen. Jesse Helms' sagging ratings in public opinion polls.

The formation of a Jesse Helms Task Force was announced in a letter dated April 29 and mailed to Congressional Club contributors. The club is Helms' political organization.

The letter, signed by Mark L. Stephens, who was Helms' 1984 campaign treasurer, said attacks by "the major liberal newspapers" had caused Helms' popularity to drop 10 points in the polls.

"No wonder Senator Helms' voter approval rating is at the same low point it was when he trailed his 1984 opponent by 22 points in the polls," Stephens wrote.

Helms, a Republican, overcame a large early deficit in the polls to defeat former Democratic Gov. Jim Hunt in the 1984 Senate race.

R.E. Carter Wrenn, executive director of the Congressional Club, said the Jesse Helms Task Force had been created because of the club's money-raising problems.

U.S. Presence Stirs Resentment In Honduras

By ELOY O. AGUILAR
Associated Press Writer

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — Local resentment of U.S. pressure to give Nicaraguan rebels free use of Honduran territory simmers here, even though the government publicly supports its close relationship with the United States.

Criticism of the continued presence of about 1,500 American troops and the Nicaraguan rebels fighting their country's leftist Sandinista government crops up more frequently among opposition politicians and in the national news media.

The Honduran military privately admits that some policy decisions were made under duress. And President Jose Azcona Hoyo has served notice he wants the rebels out of Honduras.

"The destiny of Honduras will be decided within our borders," the president said in his state-of-the-union message earlier this year. Azcona Hoyo has asked the United States for assurances that the Contras will move their base of operations into Nicaragua as soon as possible.

"Our people bought the idea, spread by the military, that there was a threat of an invasion from Nicaragua," said Ruben Palma, secretary-general of the small Christian Democratic Party. "As a result we opened our country to the United States Armed Forces and allowed the Nicaraguan rebels to use our territory."

The largest anti-Sandinista rebel group, the Nicaraguan Democratic Force, also known as the Contras, is based in Honduras and operates in northern Nicaragua with CIA backing. It was formed in 1981 and claims to have 8,000 fighters.

In the past five years, thousands of Nicaraguan rebels settled in training camps in southern Honduras. The camps were protected by the Honduran army, which kept Honduran citizens from the area. Farmers in the region were forced to flee and relocate.

The civilian government of President Roberto Suazo Cordova from 1982 to 1986 insisted steadfastly that there were no rebel camps inside Honduras and that, even if there were, the border area was too rugged to be patrolled thoroughly.

At the same time U.S. and Honduran forces engaged in nearly continuous military maneuvers pointedly intended to make a statement to the Sandinistas. The largest joint military exercises to date involving U.S. and Honduran troops culminated Wednesday with a mock assault on an isolated northern beach. The exercise involved nearly 11,000 soldiers.

The United States began building up its military presence in Honduras shortly after a civil war in Nicaragua led by the Sandinistas ousted the U.S.-backed conservative government of President Anastasio Somoza in July 1979.

About 1,500 U.S. military personnel are stationed in Honduras, most of them at Palmerola Air Base, a Honduran facility 40 miles northwest of the capital of Tegucigalpa.

With the U.S. military came a noticeable increase in economic assistance, but critics say that does not make up for Honduras' loyalty at a heated time in Central America.

In a recent speech, Carlos Orbin Montoya, president of the Honduran Congress and leader of the pro-government Liberal party, called the United States an "unreliable ally," and said its foreign policy mistakes were directly responsible for the existence of a "Marxist regime in Nicaragua."

U.S. economic assistance jumped from $32.7 million in 1981 to $158.8 million for fiscal year 1987. Military aid during the same period went from $8.9 million to $88.8 million.

Newspaper editorials demand that the United States compensate farmers affected by the Contras. There also is persistent concern about the potential for an eventual rebel defeat and what that would mean for Honduras.

Contra leaders have promised that all their forces would be moved inside Nicaragua as their fight advances, but it is by no means clear when that might happen.

Gen. Humberto Regalado Hernandez, commander in chief of the armed forces, surprised U.S. officials here by saying he did not believe "in a military victory of the Contras nor in an invasion of Honduras by Nicaragua."

A top Honduran military source, who spoke on condition he not be identified further, told The Associated Press that if the Contras return to Honduras defeated, "we will disarm them and consider them refugees."

The source added that many in the military feel the "gringos (Americans) have used the Honduran army and have pressured it to give the Contras all sorts of facilities. That is finished."

Government spokesmen say publicly that most Hondurans are indifferent to the U.S. military presence and note that Honduras' close alliance with the United States dates back to the days when the big banana companies first came here.

"We are natural allies," said presidential press secretary Lizandro Quesada. "It would be absurd to think that we are allies only because the United States provides economic assistance. We have an ideological affinity."

Americans Stage Huge Maneuver

L.A. Times-Washington Post

TRUJILLO, Honduras — American troops stormed a beachhead and remote airstrip in northern Honduras Wednesday in one of the largest U.S. military exercises here in the last five years.

The war games with the Honduran military forces are designed to train U.S. soldiers in tropical warfare, improve Honduras' strategic military capability and provide a show of force to the leftist Sandinista government in neighboring Nicaragua.

"We want to demonstrate to Nicaragua that we have a commitment to Honduras and in that way to act as a deterrent to Nicaragua," a U.S. military officer said. "We're sending a message to Nicaragua."

Honduras has received $341.5 million in U.S. military aid in the last five years, and on Tuesday the Reagan administration notified Congress that it will sell the Hondurans 12 F-5 jet fighters to replace part of their aging air force.

Wednesday's maneuvers, dubbed Solid Shield '87, were the latest in a series of joint exercises that began in 1983 and have been nearly continuous here this year. The war games have left an infrastructure of roads, airstrips and military bases and have resulted in a constant U.S. military presence in Honduras.

Several of the facilities have been used by the Contras, the U.S.-backed Nicaraguan guerrillas, who have maintained bases here for the last five years.

Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega charged in his capital of Managua last week that Solid Shield was part of the Reagan administration's "policy of pressure and threats against Nicaragua to make us see that they ... have not discounted an invasion."

The exercises coincide with reports of fierce fighting in northern Nicaragua, where Sandinistas claim to have overrun a contra base near the Honduran border.

Trujillo, about 150 miles northeast of Tegucigalpa, is a fishing town of about 10,000 residents that has a place in history as the death and burial site of William Walker, an American adventurer who aided a guerrilla faction in 19th-Century Nicaragua and had himself declared president.

About 6,900 American troops are participating in the three-day land, air and sea maneuvers that began Wednesday, but 3,300 of them are on ships offshore, U.S. military officials said.

Reagan Says U.S. Policy Flexible

L.A. Times-Washington Post

WASHINGTON — President Reagan Wednesday assured Guatemalan President Vinicio Cerezo that the United States is ready to cooperate with the countries of Central America "in any process that brings democracy to Nicaragua."

Cerezo — who 16 months ago became Guatemala's first democratically elected, civilian president in two decades — supports a policy of "active neutrality" aimed at finding negotiated settlements to the tensions between Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government and its Central American neighbors. He also opposes U.S. support for Nicaraguan contras fighting a guerrilla war against the Sandinistas.

Following a White House meeting Wednesday, Reagan used the farewell ceremony for Cerezo to reiterate the position taken by his administration in recent weeks that the United States is not wedded to military solutions for Central American problems and is flexible about the best way to bring pluralistic democracy to Nicaragua.

"The United States is ready to cooperate with you and other democratic leaders in any process that brings democracy to Nicaragua, which is the key to peace in Central America," Reagan said. "Democracy, if it is to have a chance in your region, must not be threatened by a dictatorship bent on expansion and supported and sustained by the enemies of freedom."

However, a senior U.S. official later cautioned that Reagan's remarks should not be interpreted as a retreat from support of the embattled contra program that faces a possible funding cutoff from the Democratic-controlled Congress.

The official, who briefed reporters on the condition he not be identified, said, "President Reagan affirmed that he plans to stay the course in supporting the (Nicaraguan) resistance. We are not changing our policy. We are in this for the duration. The goal of our policy is democracy in Central America."

Cerezo, in his remarks, avoided direct references to Nicaragua and the contra rebels.

CAR TALK

From Joe Cullipher Chrysler Plymouth, Dodge, Peugeot

By James Phillips

BRAKES HAVE THEIR LIMITS

Modern brakes are designed to give you a dependable margin of safety for thousands of miles of driving. In repeatedly slowing and stopping the car, they absorb enormous punishment-without complaint. But they shouldn't be expected to do the impossible.

Contrary to popular opinion, the brakes will not stop a car "on a dime". Although you can stop your car in about five feet from 10 mph, stopping distance from 60 mph is closer to 200 feet-not counting reaction distance. At 60 mph, you travel 88 feet per second, and even with a lightning-fast reaction time of a half-second, you'll travel 44 feet before you can hit the brake pedal. Total stopping distance: about 240 feet, or nearly the length of a football field.

Another misconception concerns power brakes which reduce the effort required to apply the brakes. Power brakes, however, do not slow or stop the car any faster than non-power brakes.

Parents Of Slain Volunteer Speak Against U.S. Policy

By CAROLYN SKORNECK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A congressman accused the parents of an American killed in Nicaragua of playing politics with their grief by testifying against U.S. policy, but another lawmaker said their son would be proud of them.

"How can you use the grief that I know you feel to politicize this situation, or to allow yourself to be used to politicize this situation?" Rep. Connie Mack, R-Fla., said to Dr. David and Elisabeth Linder, whose son was killed two weeks ago.

"I don't want to be tough on you, but I feel you asked for it," Mack said Wednesday during a hearing of the House Foreign Affairs subcommittee on Western Hemisphere affairs regarding the April 28 slaying of Benjamin Ernest Linder, 27.

"That's the cruelest thing you could have said," Mrs. Linder responded.

Later, Mack said, "Your son chose to go into an area that he knew was dangerous, and he had a gun."

"He had a commitment, and that's why he was there," Mrs. Linder said. "He didn't go there because it was dangerous."

"We have no choice" but to speak out against the U.S. support of the Contra rebels fighting Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government, she said in an interview outside the hearing room.

Linder, a mechanical engineer, was killed while working on a government rural electrification project in the El Cua-Bocay region of Jinotega, a northern province of Nicaragua.

He had been in Nicaragua since 1983 and was buried there, with Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega serving as one of the pallbearers. There are an estimated 200 U.S. volunteer workers in Nicaragua.

Linder was the first American volunteer to be killed in the five-year-old war. At least seven other volunteer workers, all Europeans, have been killed since 1983.

"This is murder," Linder, a pathologist from Portland, Ore., said of his son's slaying. "This was an ambush, not a chance encounter. ... This was not an accident but a result of United States policy."

After Mack's criticism of the Linders, Rep. Peter H. Kostmayer, D-Pa., told the couple, "I think your son would be proud that you're here," and Rep. Stephen J. Solarz, D-N.Y., said, "I don't think you asked for it. ... If there are any Americans who have the right to speak to this issue, it's the two of you."

Elliott Abrams, assistant secretary of state for Inter-American affairs, meanwhile, said there have been repeated warnings that Americans should stay out of combat zones. He said fighting will continue until "democracy comes to Nicaragua."

"Our government has repeatedly protested to the Nicaraguan government its practice of permitting and even encouraging Americans believed to be sympathetic to the Sandinista regime to travel in combat zones," Abrams said.

When Rep. Sam Gejdenson, D-Conn., asked if there were any restrictions on targets the Contras hit, Abrams said, "The Contras have their own guidelines."

He said the U.S. government also has guidelines that it has given the Contras, but when asked for a copy, he said, "I'm not sure we ever put it in writing."

Linder, without visible emotion, described for the panel his son's wounds, including disabling but not fatal ones and then a bullet to the brain from point-blank range.

He told reporters later that there was no evidence his son had been tortured, saying he believed cuts on his head were caused by shattered eyeglasses.

Asked in an interview during a hearing break how he could recount such details so calmly just two weeks after the death, he said, "I've been worried about Ben every day since he has been down in Nicaragua."

Linder wrote to his parents that he believed international workers helping the Nicaraguan government were targeted by the Contras, his father said.

Asked why he didn't encourage his son to come home, Dr. Linder at first said he wouldn't answer, and then commented with tears in his eyes, "I did. I said it every which way I could. I said it."

The Contras have said the Nicaraguan government was responsible for Linder's death and that he was killed during a firefight between a Contra patrol and a group of Sandinista militia "which accompanied the U.S. citizen."

Sandinista officials claim Linder was singled out by the attackers.

There were conflicting reports on whether Linder was armed, with some saying he usually armed himself whenever he went into the countryside, and others saying he was unarmed when he was attacked.

AGAINST CONTRA SUPPORT — Dr. David and Elizabeth Linder of Portland, Ore., appear before a House Foreign Affairs subcommittee on Capitol Hill Wednesday to voice objections to U.S. support of the Nicaraguan Contras. Their son, Benjamin, was the first American volunteer killed in Nicaragua. He was helping the Sandinistas develop a power plant when he was killed during a Contra raid. (AP Laserphoto)

Grain Trade Shows Slow Recovery

WASHINGTON (AP) — The world's grain trade is slowly recovering, including some improvements in U.S. exports, according to a new analysis by the Agriculture Department.

After plummeting 19 percent two years ago, total world grain exports are up this year and are expected to rise again in 1988. Although the total volume would still be down from the earlier mark, there are other encouraging signs.

"The global grain situation remains characterized by large oversupply and over-capacity (to produce), but with some signs of a continued slowing in the rate of production increases in major exporting countries," the department's Foreign Agricultural Service said Wednesday.

According to the agency's analysis, 1987 global production of wheat and "coarse" grains such as corn, oats and barley is likely to fall short of consumption for the first time since 1983, a year when drought and government programs cut U.S. harvests sharply.

As a result, global year-end inventories of grain are expected to decline for only the second time since 1980-81. The other time was after the smaller 1983 harvests.

Overall, grain shipments by the major exporting countries in 1987-88 are expected to total about 186.7 million metric tons, up 5.4 percent from 177.2 million tons this year.

Jurors Hear Goetz Describe Shooting

NEW YORK (AP) — Jurors raptly watched a police videotape as a defiant, disgusted Bernhard Goetz declared that he had murder in his heart and intended to kill the four youths he shot on a subway train 2½ years ago.

"I turned into a vicious animal, and that's what I was," Goetz said on the Dec. 31, 1984, videotape played Wednesday at his attempted murder trial. The shooting, he said, was "sadistic and savage."

"They didn't die," Goetz said of the four teen-agers he shot on the subway on Dec. 22, 1984. "Well, that's God's, that's what God has wanted evidently — if there is a God. But, I, in my heart, was a murderer."

During two hours of taped testimony Wednesday, the jurors never seemed to take their eyes from the five video monitors, except to steal a glance at the silent defendant at the defense table, wearing bluejeans and a white shirt.

"People are looking for a hero, or they're looking for a villian and neither is, nothing is the truth," Goetz said. "What you have here is nothing more than a vicious rat. That's all it is. It's not Clint Eastwood."

At the trial's outset, the prosecution said Goetz's own words on the videotape and in a taped interview with Concord, N.H., police following his surrender there would be the most damaging evidence against him.

"It was attempted cold-blooded murder; I don't deny that," Goetz said in the New Hampshire video. "And if you're going to pass judgment on that, good. I accept it. Look if I had more bullets, I would have shot them all over again."

During the interview, Goetz said he "was going to gouge one of the guy's eye's out with my keys" after the shooting. "The only reason I didn't do it was because he (Darrell Cabey) had changed his look."

Cabey, a bullet in his spine, became paralyzed, slipped into a coma and suffered brain damage as a result of his wounds.

Cabey was the subject of other testimony Wednesday when an eyewitness testified that he was seated with his hands down and a frightened look on his face when he was shot.

The eyewitness, Christopher Boucher, 33, of San Francisco, testified that Cabey was "sitting back with his hands grasping the bench. ... In just a matter of seconds, he (Goetz) fired into this individual," Boucher testified.

Earlier testimony trial has indicated that Cabey was the only victim seated when paramedics boarded the train.

The prosecutor maintains Goetz was in no danger from the youths when he shot them; Goetz says the four had surrounded him in a menacing fashion before he opened fire with his gun.

Air Cuts Suggested By Panel

WASHINGTON (AP) — Airline flights during peak travel periods should be ordered cut back at most major airports to halt "an erosion of safety" that may get worse if action is not taken immediately, a federal safety panel says.

The National Transportation Safety Board on Wednesday called on the Federal Aviation Administration to take new actions aimed at reducing the potential for an airliner collision as travel increases during the summer months ahead.

The FAA's air traffic control system "is at times overburdened with traffic," and the situation is likely to become worse because of increased travel this summer, the safety board concluded in a special report.

The board urged the FAA immediately to reduce the maximum number of flights allowed in any particular hour in and out of 22 airports monitored by he agency and to tighten control over aircraft en route to assure that peak traffic remains within safe levels.

While the overall number of flights might not be cut, such action could force airlines to shift flights to less crowded time periods. NTSB Chairman Jim Burnett acknowleged the proposed flight curbs might result in added delays if airlines do not adjust their schedules, but he suggested that safety concerns warrant the inconvenience.

Falwell Says PTL Needs Cash

LYNCHBURG, Va. (AP) — The Rev. Jerry Falwell says the PTL ministries need to raise $20 million to $25 million within 90 days and cut expenses by $1 million a month to survive.

Since July 1986, PTL has lost money every month except December, when it broke even, Falwell said during services Wednesday at his Thomas Road Baptist Church. He said the losses have ranged from $1 million to $4 million a month.

Falwell took over the ministries in March from evangelist Jim Bakker, who admitted to a 1980 sexual encounter with a church secretary. Bakker has since been defrocked by the Assemblies of God church.

Wright Speech On Arms Race Spurs Flood Of Letters From Soviet Union

By ANDREW MANGAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — An outpouring of support for House Speaker Jim Wright is arriving daily from hundreds of Soviet citizens who viewed a 15-minute speech he gave on Soviet television last month condemning the arms race.

Soviet children have sent drawings and watercolors depicting scenes of peace. Old men and women have declared their belief in Wright as an American who seeks friendship with the Soviet people.

"I am a pupil," an 11-year-old from Minsk wrote. "I study English first year. The war bring many, many deaths in our countries and bring nuclear winter. I want friendship with American children. Good-bye."

Letters like this have been pouring into the speaker's office at a rate of several hundred a day, written by children, youths and elderly Soviets, Wright aide Marshall Lynam said Wednesday.

Wright released the letters to the press on condition that none of the Soviet writers be identified by name "just in case."

The speaker's office plans to respond to each letter and include a lapel pin of the Soviet and American flags that Wright promised his television audience he would send "as a token of friendship" if they wrote him.

So far he has received about 1,500 letters, many in English. Those written in Russian are being translated by the Library of Congress, Lynam said.

"Great changes are going on in our country," wrote a 54-year-old woman from Lithuania. "We feel it daily in our life.

"I am already 54 and have no hope to have chance to see your wonderful country, but I wish that my granddaughter Irene would be able to come to America and to shake hands with your grandchildren."

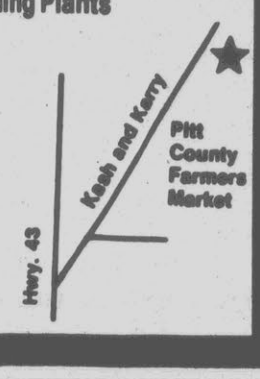

Wright delivered his hastily prepared 15-minute talk on national Soviet television April 18, the day he and a group of 20 congressmen departed Moscow after a six-day Easter visit.

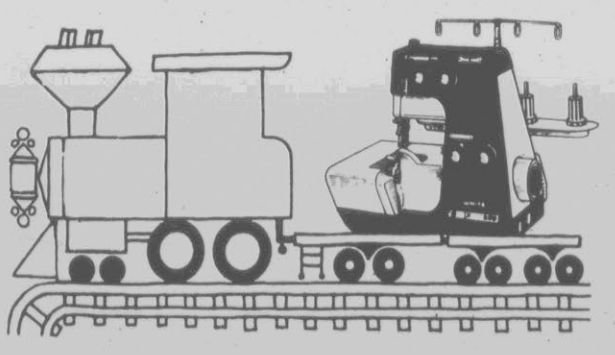

A Soviet official had asked Wright if he would like to address the Soviet people on national television, Lynam said, and after being assured there would be no attempt to edit the broadcast, Wright agreed.

He quickly prepared a speech based on a newsletter he wrote in 1958 titled "A Letter to Ivan," in which he detailed some of the positive ways money spent on arms could be put to better use.

Mrs. Reagan Leads Rally In LA

By PENELOPE MCMILLAN
(c) 1987, Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — Nancy Reagan brought her anti-drug campaign to Los Angeles Wednesday, joining thousands of screaming schoolchildren in a rally to "Just Say No" to drugs.

About 6,000 children from area schools, the majority wearing green "Just Say No" T-shirts, waved green flags and cheered performers and speakers alike throughout a two-hour rally at Universal Amphitheatre, about 10 miles northwest of downtown Los Angeles.

The first lady joined country-western singer Larry Gatlin, child actress Soleil Moon Frye and other young stars of television's "Punky Brewster Show," C.B. Barnes of "Starman" as well as Voyager pilots Dick Rutan and Jeana Yeager for the event, which was part of a national "Just Say No" Week.

"Just Say No" is a national organization of 12,000 anti-drug abuse clubs for children, meant to be a source of mutual support for young people not to drink, smoke or use drugs.

"Positive peer pressure works," Mrs. Reagan, who is the honorary chairman of The Just Say No Foundation, told the youngsters. "We want you to stay just like you are. You're our hope and our promise for the future."

"I'm lucky I'm here," Gatlin told the crowd before he sang a song he wrote about a drug addict who killed himself. "Drugs and alcohol nearly killed me."

Three years ago, he added, "I was crawling around the floor picking up lint out of the carpet putting it in a freebase pot." Now, he said, he'd been off drugs and alcohol for "882 days."

"We can put blockades up, we can arrest people," pilot Rutan said, "but there's only one way you're surely going to stop drugs, and that's supply and demand. Stop the demand and we won't have to worry about the supply."

Most of the schoolchildren attending the rally were members of "Just Say No" clubs in their schools, rally organizers said. The clubs teach students from 7 to 14 years old about the harmful effects of drugs and encourage the attitude that it is socially acceptable to refuse them.

The first lady, who launched an anti-drug abuse campaign during her husband's first term as president, was the inspiration for the formation of the first "Just say No" club in January 1985 in Oakland, Calif.

"They see they're not alone," Jim Brown, a math teacher from Pasadena said. "It gives them more strength to be able to say no."

Several of his students, however, said they wanted to come to see young cyclists from the Dan'Up Freestyle Bike Show at the event. The troupe did acrobatic loops and spins on small bicycles.

Others, like Greg Cetina, 12, said he wanted to attend because, "I never came here before."

"I'm glad I'm here because of my awareness of drugs," Danielle Walsmith, 12, a student from Tarzana, said proudly, then added, "and I really want to see Soleil Moon Frye."

What the students especially seemed to enjoy, though, was just screaming "no" as often as possible — when prompted by the first lady.

"So, we'll practice," Mrs. Reagan said. "What will you do if somebody offers you drugs?"

"Noooo! Just say noooo!" the children responded, delightedly yelling it again and again when the first lady cupped a hand to her ear, pretending she could not hear them.

Homemaker's Haven
Evelyn Spangler

Computer-assigned figure analysis is a unique program which helps identify your personal vertical and horizontal proportions. It helps you understand your figure and its problems.

By studying your figure objectively, the computer printout will show you where a specific style line can improve your visual proportions. You will learn how to draw attention away from a problem area, de-emphasize unflattering characteristics, and create the illusion of a well-proportioned figure.

Your bone structure will be calculated from your wrist and ankle measurements and will be used to determine the size of prints and plaids which are best for you. Bone structure also helps in computing your recommended weight.

We'll also take a look at your shoulders. Ideally, your hips and shoulders should fall in two parallel lines!

Vertical proportions are inherited characteristics over which we have no control. The ideal vertical proportion is very rare. The computer will consider your vertical figure type in selecting the length of your jacket, skirts, and accessories.

Your horizontal figure type explains the ratio of your bust, waist, and hip. Dressing your vertical proportion correctly will camouflage your horizontal problems.

The object of this program is an improved personal image. As you apply these design elements you will make better wardrobe selections which show your figure to its best potential.

There is no charge for the figure analysis. Call the extension service at 752-2934, extension 370, to preregister. The schedule is as follows:

Tuesday — Grifton Train Depot, 2 p.m. — 7 p.m.
Wednesday — Ayden Community Building, 2 p.m. — 7p.m.
Thursday — Winterville Christian Church, 2 p.m. — 7p.m.
Friday — Extension Office, Greenville, 10 a.m. — 3 p.m.
May 26 — Eastern Pines Fire Dept., 2p.m. — 7p.m.
May 27 — Farmville Recreation Center, 2p.m. — 7p.m.
May 28 — Bethel Rotary Building, 2p.m. — 7p.m.
May 29 — Extension Office, Greenville, 10 a.m. — 3 p.m.

Stranger Troubled By Alcoholic's Plight

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I placed an ad in our local Lincoln paper to "drive your car to any destination for a fee." This morning a lady called, wanting me to drive her to a retirement home in Texas. After the price was agreed upon, I went to her apartment in Lincoln.

When she met me at the door she was crying, saying she was an alcoholic – and a very sick woman – and could I please help her. The poor woman was shaking, so I suggested we call a family member as I had never seen this lady before in my life. (There is alcoholism in my family, so my heart went out to her.) She said she was 69, but she looked much older. She started shaking badly, and began looking for her bottle. (She had bottles hidden all over the place, but the ones I found were empty!) We visited for half an hour, then she fell asleep on the couch, so I called the apartment manager who turned out to be a young lady about 35. She said, "Leave her alone; don't get involved. Go on home."

I went home, but, Abby, this poor lady has called me five times asking me to come back. Part of me says, "Go back and try to help her," and the other half says, "Listen to the manager – don't get involved."

I feel guilty because like most people, I don't want to get involved, but I can't get this lady out of my mind. She said she has no family. What would you do in a case like this? – W.F., PALMYRA, NEB.

DEAR W.F.: I would go back to try to find out from the woman (or the apartment manager) if she has anyone, anywhere, to notify in case of accident or death. Telephone the retirement home in Texas; the people there may have recent information.

As it stands, she's not competent to live alone. If you can find no one, then contact your county department of social services.

My hat is off to you. That pathetic woman said she has no family. She has. We are all part of the family of man. God bless you.

DEAR ABBY: I am so angry and disappointed! Earlier today a good friend of my deceased husband's grabbed me in a sexual way. I was shocked, and told him off in no uncertain terms. If I were interested in a man, it would be for marriage – not a casual romp in the hay.

His wife and I are such good friends, and when my husband was alive, we were a constant foursome. Is there no loyalty, no respect for old friendships? His wife would be devastated if she knew, and my late husband would turn over in his grave if he knew his good friend was such a rat. Abby, this man has destroyed a friendship. Now I am going to be forever uncomfortable when I see him or his wife. Any advice on how to handle this from now on? – INSULTED IN THE MIDWEST

DEAR INSULTED: Since you have already put him in his place, chalk it up as an unfortunate lapse in judgment and try to put it behind you. Why sacrifice your friendship with his wife? A woman whose husband tries to put the make on her friends needs all the friends she can keep. And as unbelievable as it may seem, the poor boob probably thought he was doing you a favor.

(To get Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions," send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.)

Every Working Mom Knows:

Mothering By Phone Is Fact Of Life

By LINDA MATHEWS
(c) 1987, Los Angeles Times

"It's one of your kids again," my co-worker said, handing me the telephone.

"Joe is bothering me," Peter, then 8, blubbered at the other end of the line. "Tell him to leave me alone."

"OK," I said wearily. "Put him on, and I'll see if I can straighten this out."

"I can't," Peter explained. "I locked him out of the house."

Ever so faintly, over the line, I could hear Joe, then 12, banging on the back door and screaming that he would not stop until he had settled the score with his brother.

Once again, I found myself practicing the art that Doctors Spock and Brazelton never tell you about: mothering by phone. Since I first started calling Joe from the office when he was just a toddler, I have had almost daily practice. I have diagnosed fevers, soothed scraped knees, settled squabbles and, more recently, explained what little I could remember about polynomial equations — all over the phone.

All the personnel manuals, of course, say that the ideal employee should avoid letting personal and family matters interfere with business. Life should be neatly compartmentalized, so that what is going on at home never impinges on company routine. A worker should keep his mind on his work.

There may be some paragons out there who actually live by these rules — but they're not mothers.

Working mothers nearly always know what is going on at home, no matter how busy they are. Whether they spend their days word processing or working on assembly lines or drafting multimillion-dollar legal contracts, mothers are linked, as fathers rarely are, to what their children are doing at home or at the baby sitter's.

And the link, more often than not, is the telephone.

Mothering by phone usually starts with those nervous calls to the baby sitter right after the new mother returns to work, to check on whether the baby is napping and eating on schedule.

By the child's first birthday, the phone will be held up to his ear so that Mommy can speak directly to him and perhaps, O bliss!, elicit some response. By 3, he can report fully on his day at nursery school. By 5, the child of average precocity is direct-dialing Mom.

So accustomed is Erica Johnson, 1, to talking to her mother, Susan, on the phone that when someone asks, "Where's Mommy?" Erica holds her hand up to her ear as if she were cradling a receiver. Her brother, 6, is more practiced and a bit more formal; when he dials Susan's office, he announces, "This is Lionel, your son."

School-aged children often get into the habit of calling as soon as they reach home, whether there's a baby sitter there or not. "My daughter calls just about every day because she wants to check in, to be reassured that I'm here," one mother said of a 6-year-old. "She asks me whether she should change to cooler clothes, what she should have for a snack.

"If I'm out of the office in the afternoon, I'll come back and find a stack of messages. 'Mommy, call Tara.' 'Mommy, I called 15 minutes ago.' Then, 'Mommy, it's an emergency. Call home.' Once I got a message that said, 'Call Tara in 15 minutes.' It turned out she figured she would be away from the phone doing something else that long."

Savvy kids quickly figure out that if they've broken a household rule or misbehaved, it's better to report the transgression on the phone rather than wait for Mother to come home. "My kids know that if they tell me they've broken my favorite vase when I'm in the office, I can't yell at them without calling attention to myself," a lawyer said. "And by the time I get home, I've cooled off."

Many mothers find, however, that, in a crisis, they can even discipline children on the phone. When her son balks at taking his bath, one mother has been known to hiss into the phone, "Take a bath now or there'll be no 'Square One' for a week," thus threatening to deprive him of his favorite television program. It is the only punishment, she said, that is "so specific and ... so horrible that you can deliver it over the phone."

The phone can be used to deliver motherly comfort, too. Scraped elbows, cuts and bloody noses are often reported to mothers, even when there is a perfectly competent housekeeper or neighbor on the spot to minister to the injured. "It's not that the baby sitter doesn't do the right thing," Tara's mother said. "But Tara wants me when she gets hurt."

Some children can be eerily calm when reporting the worst calamities. Tricia Vick, a lawyer, recalls the day her younger son, Kevin, 13, called to report a skateboard accident. "Do you need to see a doctor?" she asked frantically. Matter-of-fact Kevin said simply: "I think I may need stitches. I can see a flap of skin hanging out from my arm."

Sometimes, of course, mothers have to say they're too busy to talk. " 'We'll talk about it when I get home' is my standard line," said Karen Gruettner, a dental hygienist and mother of three. "They've learned not to bother me unless it's urgent, because I work with patients and can't be going to the phone all the time."

When her two teen-age sons, Keith and Kirk, call in the midst of a heated argument at home, "I have been known to hang up on them," said Shari Thorell, vice president of alumni relations at University of Southern California. "Normally, when my private line rings at 3:27 p.m., I know they're calling to touch base and let me know they're fine. It's a real upper for me. ... But if they're squabbling and won't listen to reason, I don't put up with it."

Over the years, I have heard via phone of both triumphs and disasters. Peter called when he stunned himself by winning a spelling bee, Joe when he was chosen to play Riff, the gang leader, in the junior high production of "West Side Story."

Unfortunately, they also have called to report that their sister, Kate, 2, has scribbled all over the kitchen wall and that Comet is taking off the paint as well as the crayon marks. Kate, uncharacteristically reticent, refused to come to the phone.

Sometimes, I am informed in time to head off such fiascoes. Joe, now 14, thoughtfully consulted me before he began to brew chemicals for a science project in my brand-new Calphalon sauce pan, so I could suggest substituting a coffee can.

And, once, I got the call that all working mothers dread. Our housekeeper, Ahlin, telephoned to say that Peter, then 4, had climbed to the top shelf of the linen closet, found an old bottle of cough medicine we somehow had overlooked and drunk at least half of it. "Now he's asleep and I can't wake him up," she cried. "I'm scared."

That was one problem that couldn't be solved over the phone. A coworker, another working mother, called the paramedics, and I sped home, arriving just as the ambulance did. Ipecac was administered and Peter spent half the night in the emergency room.

As roles have changed, I've noticed that more and more fathers are being called by their offspring. My husband has begun to get his share, particularly when the kids doubt my ability to help with their math homework. And once, when I worked in the Los Angeles Times' Washington bureau, I answered the phone on deadline and heard a little voice say, "I want to speak to Daddy."

"Who is your daddy?" I asked stupidly.

"He's Daddy, Daddy, Daddy!" the voice said, breaking into tears.

After a sudden brainstorm, I said, "What's your name?"

"Jenny," came the answer.

Bob Toth, then The Times' White House correspondent, quickly identified himself as Jenny's daddy and, I noted with some pleasure, sat down to do a little mothering over the phone.

Those people who believe that mothers belong at home with their children may find it shameful or sad that many of us do part of our mothering over the phone. But, to me, it seems like the most natural thing in the world, maybe because I'm the daughter of a working mother.

From the time my brother and I could use the phone, my mother insisted that we memorize her number at work. We didn't call every day, for my mother worked in aerospace plants with time clocks and strict regulations about taking time off for personal matters. But, in an emergency, we always knew how to reach her reassuring voice.

Today, although I am middle-aged and my mother is old enough that she would not want me to mention her age in print, I still carry, deep inside my wallet, a scrap of paper with a phone number written on it, just in case I have to call Mom at work.

Working mothers nearly always know what is going on at home, no matter how busy they are. Whether they spend their days word processing or working on assembly lines or drafting multimillion-dollar legal contracts, mothers are linked, as fathers rarely are, to what their children are doing at home or at the baby sitter's.

And the link, more often than not, is the telephone.

Is Russia's Raisa Getting Decadent?

At Wits End
Erma Bombeck

Holy Robin Leach! Can you believe the flap over Raisa Gorbachev dropping a few bucks on jewelry during a recent visit to London?

Critics who viewed Russia's first lady (on an underground video yet) as she signed her American Express card accused her of being extravagant, vain and caught up in the decadence of the Western world.

I hate to say it, but in the shopper's race, the Soviet Union is a good 200 years behind the rest of the world. While they were sitting over there stockpiling missiles and connecting dots on all those floral print dresses, the rest of the world was turning its technology toward shopping emporiums.

London launched Harrods, Japan positioned Issey Miyake, Hong Kong perfected a fabulous silk factory called Kaiser Estates Phase I, and frankly, if I saw Bloomingdale's and Bergdorf-Goodman aimed toward me from the United States, I wouldn't sleep well in the Soviet Union tonight.

In all the years the World's Ten Most Famous Shoppers has been circulated, not once has a Russian woman made the list. Most of them are first ladies and powerful women like Tammy Faye Bakker, who recently launched her secret weapon for dealing with life's problems. "When I'm shopping, I don't think about the bills at PTL. There's times I just have to quit thinking and the only way I can quit thinking is by shopping."

If Mrs. Gorbachev is really serious about making Russia a super shopping power, she should learn the first rule about shopping. Never sneak around and do it alone. Alert the press corps and make every 6 and 10 o'clock newscast in the world. Before Ferdinand Marcos even made airline reservations to return to the Philippines in a takeover, the first thing he did was to get Imelda shopping at the Banana Republic for takeover clothes.

Don't be too embarrassed or too proud to study and to follow the lead of shoppers with more experience. Wherever there is a summit meeting, ask yourself, "Why isn't Nancy Reagan going to Reykjavik?" and then answer yourself, "Why would you want to go anyplace where they haven't heard of Adolfo?"

I would say Raisa has her work cut out for her. The wives of Soviet leaders weren't even visible until her husband came to leadership. If they did appear in public, they were airbrushed out of the photographs.

On the other hand, if she's airbrushed out of the next state photo, we'll know the Russians aren't up to decadence.

Former Members Honored

FARMVILLE — A memorial service honoring four former members highlighted Saturday's meeting of the Major Benjamin May Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution (DAR).

Elizabeth Lang, chaplain, gave the service remembering Goldie Burke, May Barrett Pollard, Mary Frances Whitehurst Lewis and Olivera Cox House. Each was remembered for her devotion to family, church, and the organization. Grave markers and flags were presented to the families of Mrs. Lewis and Mrs. Rouse; they were presented earlier to Mrs. Burke's family and will be presented to Mrs. Pollard's family at a later date.

Mrs. R.T. Williams reported on the Conteninental Congress she attended in April. Actions taken by the congress included supporting the United States Constitution, making note of the Russian preparation for war while negotiating for nuclear treaties, calling attention to communistic control of strategic materials in South Africa, proposing the adoption of English as the official language of the country, and calling for the invocation of the Monroe doctrine in U.S. relations with Nicaragua.

The meeting was hosted by the chapter officers. It was announced that the first fall meeting of the group will be on September 17 at the Walter B. Jones Town Commons. A tree planting ceremony will be held in observance of the bicentennial of the adoption of the U.S. Constitution.

Harris Wins Award

machine for cancer patients at Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

He was president and chairman of the board of the North Carolina Food Dealers Association and was selected as their Grocer of the Year in 1974.

He is a member of the board of directors of NCNB.

He and his wife, the former Edna Cannon, have three children and three grandchildren.

Keynote speaker for the event was Dr. Leo Jenkins, chancellor emeritus of East Carolina University. He discussed his view of small business.

"I have such a high regard for the winner" of the Small Businessman of the Year Award, Jenkins said. "When you find a fellow who becomes more gracious as he becomes more successful, that's rare."

Jenkins said it "takes a lot of guts" to begin a small business. He noted that problems for small businessmen include "fear of not succeeding — fear of losing your shirt, so to speak," and problems with personnel, supply, the tax structure and liability insurance.

He also commented that unfair competition comes from "big business trying to eat you up ... The small business world, if we don't watch it, not only in American but all over the workd, is going to be swallowed up by big business.

"If our America is going to continue to be the way we want it to be, it will be with the help of small entrepreneurs."

The chamber also honored the local businesses which have been in operation for 50 years or more. These 40 members of the Half-Century Club were presented plaques by PG-CC Chairman Bill Clark.

The Century Club members are M.O. Blount & Sons Inc., founded in 1887; The Daily Reflector, 1882; Wachovia Bank & Trust Co., 1879, and Frank M. Wooten Jr., 1874.

The Half-Century and Century Clubs will be an annual event for the chamber.

Louise Downing, director of the Small Business Center at Pitt Community College, honored the persons who have completed seminars in the Small Business Achievement Program.

Associate Degrees

Martha Anne Allen of Bethel, Mary Evelyn Sparrow of Williamston and Eleanor Grainger White of Greenville recently received associate of arts degrees from Saint Mary's College, Raleigh.

Driver Charged

Richard Morris Hamill, 54, a Pitt County native now living in Conway, S.C., was arrested on multiple traffic charges by Greenville police Wednesday night following a chase that ended on Hooker Road when the car Hamill was driving wrecked.

Sgt. J.R. Teel said the chase began on Skinner Street and continued along Wataugua Avenue, Spruce Street, Line Avenue, Wilson Street and Dickinson Avenue before Hamill lost control of the car on Hooker Road, south of the Arlington Boulevard intersection, ran into a ditch and overturned.

Teel, who said Hamill was treated at Pitt County Memorial Hospital for minor injuries, said the 1976 model car was a total loss.

Hamill, who police said ran seven stop signs and a red light during the chase, was charged with driving while his license was permanently revoked, speeding in excess of 55 mph to elude arrest, failing to stop for a blue light and siren, careless and reckless driving and failing to stop for a stop sign and failing to stop for a stop light, Teel said.

Fiji Leaders Held

reports said Col. Jim Sanday, who ranked second in the army, also was arrested by Rabuka's men.

The army commander, Brig. Ratu Epeli Nailatikau, was visiting Australia.

Ganilau said he was assuming control of government in this Commonwealth nation as prescribed by the British-drafted constitution in the absence of government ministers.

Rabuka and about 10 soldiers had stormed Parliament at 10 a.m., arrested Bavadra and his 11 Cabinet ministers and suspended the constitution. He said he would draft a new charter and hold elections to "restore civilian rule and go back to democracy," but did not set a date.

At a news conference hours after the bloodless takeover, Rabuka also appealed for calm and said he wanted things to run normally.

There was no sign of violent opposition to the coup.

"The town is calm. There is no sign of the army in the streets," said Robert Keith-Reid, a resident, reached by telephone from Sydney, Australia. "The shops are still open and the people seem a bit dazed."

Rabuka said he launched the coup because of unspecified "planned activities by certain groups" and said his intervention was "absolutely necessary" to protect the interests of all communities.

Ethnic Indians, descended from 19th-century indentured laborers, make up about 49 percent of Fiji's 715,000 people, and ethnic Fijians about 47 percent.

Cummings' Spurt Stops Celts

BOSTON (AP) — One of sport's incredible winning streaks died when Terry Cummings came alive.

His brilliant fourth-quarter performance Wednesday night breathed new life into Milwaukee's NBA playoff chances and assured Bucks' Coach Don Nelson of at least one more game at the helm.

It also ended Boston's five-month, 33-game home winning streak and put the Celtics back on the road, where they have lost 10 of their last 14 games.

Cummings had 14 of his 23 points and five of his nine rebounds in the final period as Milwaukee beat the Celtics 129-124, cutting Boston's lead to 3-2 in the best-of-seven Eastern Conference semifinal.

"We have a great opportunity in our hands now," Cummings said.

The Bucks return home for Game 6 on Friday night, hoping to force a seventh game in Boston on Sunday and become just the fifth team in NBA history to win a seven-game series after trailing 3-1.

"The homecourt doesn't mean a lot," Milwaukee center Jack Sikma said, "but we're glad to be going home."

So were the Celtics. But Boston Garden, where their only loss in their previous 80 games was last Dec. 12 to the Los Angeles Lakers, was no place like home for them Wednesday night.

They didn't go ahead until 2:30 remained in the first half and squandered a 106-101 lead they held with 10:15 left in the fourth quarter. That's when Cummings went back into the game.

He got the next two baskets in the first 41 seconds after he returned. Nineteen seconds later, he blocked Kevin McHale's shot, setting up Sidney Moncrief's basket on Milwaukee's next possession that gave the Bucks a 107-106 lead.

Then, with 51 seconds to play, his bank shot from the left side put the Bucks in front to stay at 125-124. He rebounded Dennis Johnson's missed shot with six seconds left, was fouled and clinched the victory with two free throws for the final two points with five seconds to play.

"We didn't come up with the big plays down the stretch like we usually do," Celtics guard Jerry Sichting said.

"Down the end, they were a more aggressive team," Johnson said. "They hit the boards, boxed out and got second shots."

With 20 seconds to go, Sikma hit two free throws to put Milwaukee on top 127-124. Cummings wasn't celebrating yet.

"My thought was, I've been here before," the 6-foot-9 forward said. "With 20 seconds to go we were up by two or three points. It doesn't mean anything against a team the caliber of Boston.

"I played as if we didn't have a lead," he said. "As long as there's time on the clock, you play as if the Celtics are ahead.

When there was no time on the clock, Boston's 14-game home playoff winning streak, which matched the NBA record set by the Minneapolis Lakers from 1949 to 1951, was over.

Moncrief led Milwaukee with a career playoff high 33 points and Sikma added 21. Boston's starting frontcourt teamed up for 83 points, with Robert Parish getting 30, McHale 27 and Larry Bird 26. But they managed just nine in the fourth quarter.

Nelson is in his 11th and probably last season as coach of the Bucks. He has had differences with club owner Herb Kohl and has indicated he will not return next season.

"We didn't talk about the rumors before the game," Bucks' guard John Lucas said. "He just said he felt we were about to win. Then we huddled up, said a prayer and went out there and did it."

Nelson said he told his players "give me a game like you've been giving me and we'll win. It's simple. If you keep playing at the level we've been playing, you're going to win."

Except for Boston's 111-98 opening victory, every game of the series was decided in the final minute. The Celtics won the second game 126-124, then went to Milwaukee where they lost 126-121 in overtime and won 138-137 in double overtime.

They were confident they could end the series Wednesday night.

"You can't go into a game expecting you're going to win on your home court," Bird said. "We'll have to change that thinking the next game here."

That will be Sunday, either in a seventh game against the Bucks or the opener of the Eastern Conference final against Detroit, which eliminated Atlanta on Wednesday night.

"We've got to play better on defense to win this series," Bird said. "They were getting every loose ball. It was frustrating."

Although Milwaukee trailed 66-65 at intermission after leading most of the first half, then let Boston come back from a 119-111 deficit to take a 122-121 lead, it never gave up.

"Anytime they got a five-point lead in the second half, we came right back," Sikma said. "They weren't going to shake us."

Not even with a full house of 14,890 at Boston Garden rooting for the Celtics.

"You think about their home record but you don't think you can't win," Moncrief said. "If we execute, we can win."

ATLANTA (AP) — Coach Chuck Daly wasn't so sure, but Isiah Thomas was.

"Isiah kept saying we're going to win this game, and he was right," Daly said.

His Detroit Pistons overcame a 13-point deficit late in the third period for a 104-96 victory over Atlanta on Wednesday night to eliminate the Hawks 4-1 in the best-of-seven NBA Eastern Conference semifinal.

The Pistons will face the winner of the Boston-Milwaukee series, which the Celtics lead 3-2 with a Game 6 on Friday in Milwaukee.

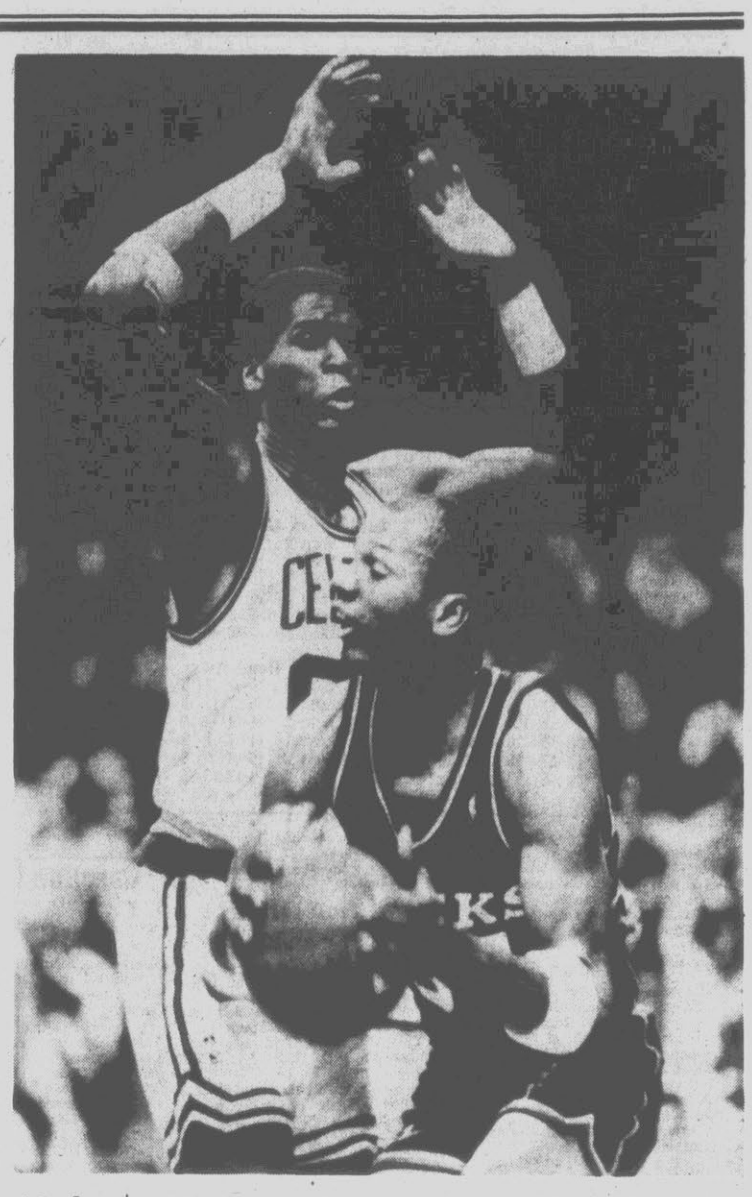

Vinnie Johnson scored 15 of his 17 points in the final period and Thomas connected on 12 of his 19. The two guards combined for 27 points as the Pistons outscored Atlanta 39-19 in the last 12 minutes.

"We were down by 11 points in the fourth quarter, but I just felt it. I knew we were going to win the basketball game," said Thomas, who had a brilliant series, scoring 30 or more points in three games.

"Late in the game they (the Hawks) had no motion, no zip, nothing else to give," he said. "They came out in the beginning very emotional, but as the game wore on you could see it slowly dying. I knew if we stayed close, we'd get them in the end and win. I'd do something to make us win."

The Pistons' point guard hit on only six of 23 shots, but had 12 assists. Johnson, who comes off the bench to Cauble Is All-CAA, But Where Is Sides?

RICHMOND, Va. — East Carolina University catcher Chris Cauble was the lone Pirate selected to the All-Colonial Athletic Association baseball team, announced Wednesday night.

The annoucement was made during a dinner held for the six CAA teams gathered in Richmond for the league's second baseball tournament. That event was to get underway this morning at The Diamond, Richmond's minor league baseball park.

Normally, the naming of a Pirate to the all-conference team would simply be a news story. But there is more than news behind it.

Perhaps, in a league weak in catching, Cauble might be a natural choice. Certainly, in many ways he has filled in well for regular Jim Riley, who was injured near the half-way point of the season.

But with Cauble's presence on the team, the absence of another Pirate is easy to spot. It's almost glaring.

The man whose name is not present is second baseman Steve Sides. In his place is James Madison's Jeff Garber, the only player on the team who repeats from last season.

No doubt, Garber is a worthy player. But lets's look at Sides.

Sides was second in the league in hitting, with a fine .399 average. He hit in 29 consecutive games, including four from last year, and missed getting a hit in only three of the 35 games ECU played in 1987.

Garber, in contrast, hit only .294, and did not even make the top 20 in the league in that category.

When the team was announced at the player banquet Wednesday night, ECU players exchanged looks of shock and surprise when Garber was named over Sides.

The players were voted on by the coaches of the conference, and no coach could vote for his own players.

ECU Coach Gary Overton expressed dismay that Sides was not selected. "I just can't see how they can overlook what he has accomplished this year." Overton said.

A league official said that the vote between the two was close. With five coaches eligible to vote, it would appear that Sides got two votes to Garber's three.

UNC-Wilmington dominated the team with three selections, while Richmond, Madison and George Mason each had two. ECU and William & Mary each had one player selected.

George Mason's Ryan Johnston was named as the Player of the Year in the conference. A senior, he was selected to the outfield. Johnston led the league in hitting with a .402 average and was tied for the league lead in triples with eight and doubles with 17. He is fourth in homers with 12 and with RBI with 46. He was second in stolen bases with 18 (in 20 attempts).

GMU Coach Billy Brown, in his sixth season, was named as Coach of the Year. He led the Patriots to a 30-21 record, 9-6 in the CAA.

Named as pitchers on the all-conference team were UNCW's Wesley Currin (8-2, 2.41 ERA, 53 strikeouts), and Bill Prezioso of William & Mary (6-6, 3.56 ERA, 64 strikeouts).

The infield consists of Cauble behind the plate, Chuck Jones of UNCW at first (.366, 45 RBI, 9 homers); Garber at second, Mike Zambo of Richmond at short (.335), and Luke Sable of Mason at third (.365, 17 stolen bases).

In the outfield, along with Johnston, were Greg Harding of Richmond (.367, 49 RBI, 13 homers); and Scott Mackie of Madison (.366, 36 RBI, 9 homers).

Eric Hickman of UNCW was named the designated hitter. He hit .345, had 17 homers and 47 RBI.

Only three of the 11 are seniors, Currin, Jones, and Johnston, so most will be back for next season.

For the most part, the team represents the conference well.

But how do you ignore a player like Steve Sides?

Aycock Leads EPC Tennis Event

C.B. Aycock was the early winner in the first round of the Eastern Plains Conference tennis tournament Wednesday.

Aycock advanced five singles winners and one doubles winners into today's second round. Farmville Central was close behind, with two singles winners and one doubles winner. Ayden-Grifton had three singles winners.

In the sixth flight of the singles, Greene Central's Craig Sparrow, seeded fourth, pulled off the big upset of the day, defeating number-one seed Kevin Easom of Aycock, 7-6, 7-5.

In the second flight of the doubles, the Rams pulled off another upset as Reade Dawson and Steve Putnam, seeded fourth, defeated Al Davis and Chad Dosch of Ayden-Grifton, the number one seed, by a score of 8-3.

The first flight of the doubles was not played because of rain and only one doubles match from the second flight was completed.

Barring rain, all first round matches will be completed today along with the championship rounds and the consolation rounds.

Hargrove

Responsibility Is More Than Imagined

By DAVID DROSCHAK
Associated Press Writer

KINSTON, N.C. (AP) — Mike Hargrove, a 12-year big league veteran known more for his home plate rituals between pitches than for his six .300 seasons, says managing a minor league team has more responsibilities than he ever imagined.

The 37-year-old Hargrove, who played 12 seasons in the major leagues with Texas, San Diego and Cleveland, is in his first full season of managing with the Carolina League Kinston Indians.

"The big difference is now you're not just responsible for yourself, you're responsible for 25 or 30 other guys that are under you," Hargrove said. "Sometimes it becomes an awesome responsibility because, really, their future is pretty much in your hands."

Throughout his baseball career, Hargrove said he was always the one who was judged, but now he has to sit back and assess talent, something the new manager says he finds difficult at times.

After each game, Hargrove must call in statistics and comments about players' performances to the Cleveland front office.

"You try to be real objective in your judgments," said Hargrove, who only played 1½ years in the minor leagues. "The people that make the decisions on these kids haven't seen them play and they really are going on your reports. It can be a heavy responsibility at times, but it's a lot more fun being the yeller than the yellee."

Hargrove says the most satisfying part of his short managerial career has been watching players take what they learn and apply those skills in games.

"It's nearly as good as doing it yourself," he said.

Patience was one of Hargrove's best qualities as a major league hitter, being selective enough to lead the American League in walks twice while compiling four seasons in which he drew over 100 free passes. However, as a minor league manager, he says his patience sometimes grows thin.

"The frustrating part (of managing) is seeing what a kid is doing wrong and talking to him and him not being able to grasp and idea or the fundamental you are trying to teach," Hargrove said. "It's like beating your head against a brick wall.

Al Unser Is Back In Saddle Again

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Three-time Indianapolis 500 winner Al Unser is back in a driving uniform and back in his element.

Unser, who has been without an Indy-car ride since the end of last season, Wednesday moved into the ride left vacant when Indianapolis Motor Speedway medical officials ruled Danny Ongais, recuperating from a concussion suffered in a crash in practice last Thursday, would not be cleared to drive at Indy any more this month.

Unser, the winner of 38 career Indy-car races and the series champion only two years ago, said he turned down several offers before taking the one-race deal with Penske Racing.

"I feel very bad for Danny," Unser said. "I've been there before. But I am very happy to get this ride. It's a first-place team. Whatever it takes, Roger Penske tries to make it happen, whether it's a two-car team or a three-car team."

Unser got onto the Speedway's 2½-mile oval for a shakedown run just 20 minutes before the end of Wednesday's practice, getting in only a few trips around the track before it closed for the day. He posted a fast lap of 197.585 mph.

Asked what speed he could attain in practice the next two days that would make him comfortable going into qualifying, Unser, still dressed in his driving uniform, said, "I could say 210, but really anywhere above 205. I want to make the race right now and then worry about getting the race set-up. I'm not concerned with fast laps at this point. That doesn't mean anything now."

He said he never contemplated retirement while waiting for the right deal to come along.

"I was not that comfortable without a ride," Unser said. "In no way was I thinking about retiring. In no way was it (not finding a ride) discouraging me. I still love racing and I did have offers. But I made up my mind what I wanted and that's what I was going to stick by.

"Everybody out here has new cars, but do they have the budget to take the pressure that comes at this place and go 500 miles? That's what I was looking for."

Eighteen of the 33 starting positions were filled in qualifications last Saturday and Sunday. The field will be completed in further time trials this weekend.

Unser, 47, stepped into a Cosworth-powered 1986 March that was being prepared for Ongais. He will be trying to qualify for his 22nd Indy 500.

"It's really something to come to Indy and three days before the second qualifying weekend come up with a driver like Al in a situation like this," Penske said. "It's a good opportunity for Al and we're happy about it. He knows us and we know him and it's just an extension of what we've been doing."

Gordon Johncock, another former Indy champion who did not have a ride when practice opened May 2, found some speed Wednesday in his Buick-powered '86 March. The two-time Indy winner, who replaced injured driver Jim Crawford of Scotland, was up to 200.534 in his third day of practice.

Crawford suffered severe ankle and leg injuries when he crashed last Saturday during qualifications.

Geoff Brabham of Australia became the first crash victim at the Speedway since Sunday, walking away uninjured when his Honda-powered 1987 March hit the wall in turn three late in Wednesday's practice. That was the 17th incident of the month, including several in which only incidental contact was made with the wall.

Last year, driving for Penske, Unser started fifth and finished 22nd, going out with a vibration problem after 149 laps. It was his first finish out of the top five at Indy in five years. He drove for the Penske team for four seasons, but was in only four other races in 1986.

Unser, whose son, Al Jr., also will attempt to qualify this weekend, rejoined Penske drivers Rick Mears, the 1979 and 1984 winner, and Danny Sullivan, who won here in 1985.

Unser, who is one of only three active drivers with three or more victories at Indianapolis — Johnny Rutherford has three and A.J. Foyt four — is the last driver to win here twice in a row, 1970 and 1971. He also won in 1978.

Pirates Honored

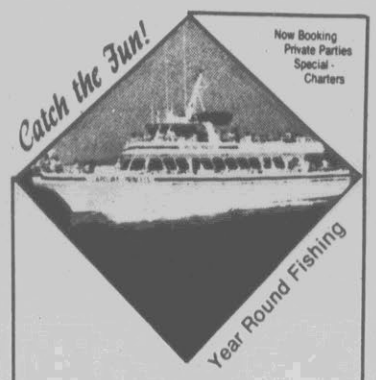

The Raleigh chapter of the Pirate Club honored golfer Mike Bradley and swimmer Scotia Miller as its male and female Athletes of the Year at the annual Pirate Club banquet held Wednesday night at the Sheraton Imperial.

Bradley has been the Pirates' top golfer for the past two seasons and he led East Carolina to the 1987 Colonial Athletic Association championship this past April. A native of Durham and a graduate of Jordan High School, Bradley finished fourth at the Tar Heel Invitational held in Chapel Hill this spring. The commercial recreation major was a finalist in the North Carolina State Amateur Tournament in 1986 and is presently competing in the 1987 championship at Pinehurst.

Miller set the Colonial Athletic Association record in the 1650 freestyle as a junior and was named ECU's outstanding female swimmer. A dean's list student, Miller served as co-captain of the Lady Pirate squad that finished 39-13 in dual match competition during her career. The Silver Spring, Md., native was a national qualifier in the 1650 and her times represent some of the best ever at ECU.

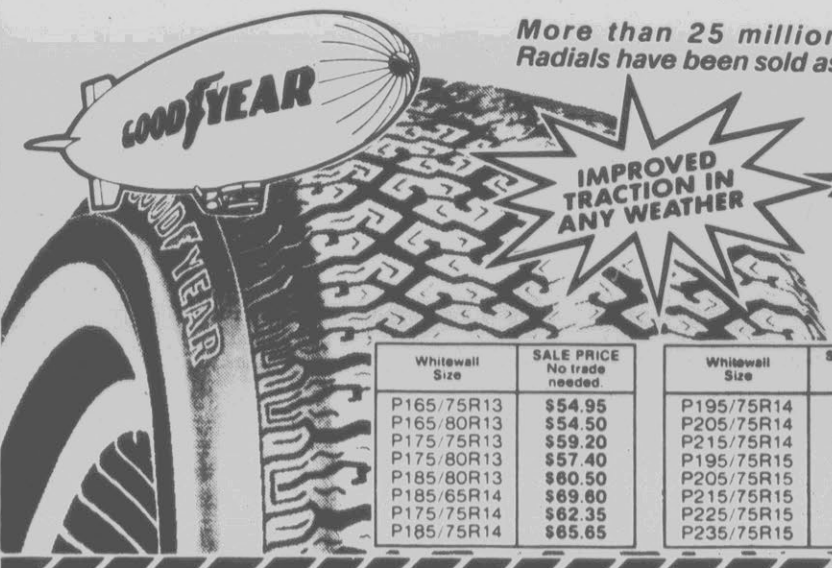

The Raleigh chapter of the Pirate Club has initiated its Athlete of the Year Awards to honor East Carolina students that have distinguished themselves in academics and athletics.

Bass' Hit Keys Astros Victory

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

A classic pitching duel between Mike Scott and Ron Darling ended in frustration for both. A night of frustration ended in victory for Kevin Bass.

Scott, the 1986 National League Cy Young Award winner, and Darling hooked up for seven innings of sparkling work. Scott went out for a pinch hitter in the seventh, trailing 1-0, and Darling left with the bases loaded and none out in the eighth. Jesse Orosco came on and got Bass to hit into a double play as the tying run scored.

Bass made up for it in the 10th with a line drive single to center that scored Bill Doran with the winning run in a 2-1 decision.

"I just try to do my job and let the hitters do their jobs," said Scott, who struck out eight and allowed five hits.

New York scored in the second inning when center fielder Billy Hatcher let Gary Carter's hit skip past him. Carter went to third and Howard Johnson singled him home.

Darling got out of jams in the fifth and seventh, but Houston tied it after Darling loaded the bases on a single to Doran and walks to Denny Walling and Glenn Davis in the eighth.

Reds 12, Expos 6

The Red Wrecking Crew was at it again, getting two-run homers from Eric Davis, Barry Larkin and Dave Parker and a solo shot by Bo Diaz in rallying from a 6-0 hole. Cincinnati has 50 homers in 33 games, including a major-league high 15 by Davis.

Davis' homer got the Reds going in the fourth and Diaz homered in the sixth. Cincinnati, first in the NL West, pulled ahead in the seventh as pinch hitter Lloyd McClendon doubled home a run, scored on Tracy Jones' single, then Larkin hit a two-run shot off reliever Randy St. Claire.

Cardinals 7, Giants 6

Terry Pendleton's two-run homer rallied the Cardinals, who stayed atop the NL East.

After Pendleton homered off Jeff Robinson, the Cardinals got the decisive run when Willie McGee doubled and scored on a single by Curt Ford. McGee hit what appeared to be a single, but he beat right fielder Candy Maldonado's throw to second.

Cubs 5, Dodgers 0

Rick Sutcliffe became the NL's first six-game winner, allowing two hits in 6 1-3 innings. Lee Smith pitched the final 2 2-3 and gave up one single.

Sutcliffe, 6-2, struck out seven and walked four through 6 1-3 innings as he earned his third straight victory.

Braves 10, Phillies 5

Dale Murphy continued his hot hitting with two homers, four RBI and three runs scored for visiting Atlanta, which has won five of its last six. Murphy's second homer was measured at 436 feet, the longest at Veterans Stadium this year.

Pirates 9, Padres 5

Barry Bonds hit his second three-run homer in as many games as Pittsburgh rallied, scoring the go-ahead run on reliever Craig Lefferts' seventh-inning balk.

Coca-Cola.....8
Optimist.....2

James Ebron and Adam Charlton both went 3-4 to lead Coca-Cola past Optimist, 8-2, in a North State Little League baseball game Wednesday.

Charlton doubled home two runs to key a two-run second inning that gave Coke an early 4-0 lead. Coke added two more runs in the fourth and one each in the fifth and the sixth to complete its scoring.

Optimist scored its only two runs in the fifth when Pat McNally singled home two runs.

Charlton and Omar Jordan combined for the win, giving up a hit apiece.

Ron Clemens added two hits for Coke.

Moose.....12
First Federal.....11

Curtis McRay had a three-run, in the park home run in the fifth inning to help Moose top First Federal, 12-11, in a Tar Heel Little League baseball game Wednesday.

First Federal led 9-5 after four innings but Moose struck for four runs in the fourth to narrow the gap.

Buddy Foley led off with a walk and eventually came home on an error. One out later, Jason Krause reached on an error, went to third on another error and came home on a wild pitch. Michael Howard then doubled. Montez Barrett tripled him home and then came home himself on an error.

In the fifth, McRay had his three-run inside the park homer to make it 12-9.

First Federal came back with two runs in the sixth but it wasn't enough as Michael Howard came up with two strikeouts sandwiched around a walk to end the game.

Babe Ruth League

Computerland.....6
Pepsi-Cola.....5

Scott Byrd singled home two runs in the fifth inning to key Computerland past Pepsi-Cola, 6-5, in a Babe Ruth League baseball game Wednesday.

Pepsi had taken a 5-0 lead by scoring once in the first and four times in the fourth but Computerland rallied in the fifth.

With one out, Stan Gay singled. Kelvin Yarrell then reached on a walk. Charles Evans followed with a single to score Gay.

After a pop-out, David O'Neal doubled in Yarrell and Evans to make it 5-3.

Chris Christopher and Jon West followed with consecutive singles, with West's shot scoring O'Neal. Byrd then came up and had the game-winning hit, bringing home West and Christopher.

Yarrell led Computerland with two hits and also pitched the win, tossing a three-hitter.

S. Pitt League

Bethel.....8
Chicod.....3

Donte Bunn tossed a two-hitter to lead the Bethel Mets to a 8-3 win over the Chicod Royals in a Southern Pitt Little League baseball game Wednesday.

NBA Playoffs...

spell starter Joe Dumars, got his line-drive jumper going in the final period to key the victory. Dumars led five Pistons in double figures with 21 points.

"Vinnie just exploded," Daly said. "He had struggled a bit this series, but when he finally got hot it came at the right time. He gave us a big, big game."

"After I hit my first two shots, I knew I was on," Johnson said of his fourth-quarter sharpshooting.

"Vinnie Johnson finally hit a streak for really the first time in the series in the final period," said Atlanta Coach Mike Fratello, whose squad was led by Dominique Wilkins with 26 points and 11 rebounds.

Randy Wittman added 21 and John Battle came off the bench to contribute 16. Glenn "Doc" Rivers had nine points and 15 assists.

Adrian Dantley added 17 points for the Pistons while Rick Mahorn had 10 and 16 rebounds.

"In the fourth quarter we combined poor shot selection, poor defense and turnovers to lead to our demise," said Fratello.

Fartello later went to the Detroit locker room and hugged Daly, a good friend, and wished him luck in the next round of the playoffs. Fratello also went around and congratulated the Pistons players.

"It's tough to lose a game that you think that you really have control of," said Wittman. "We just couldn't get it going at the right time late in the game.

"When a team beats you four out of five games, you just have to go along with the fact that they were better than you were for that stretch of time and that they deserve to win the series."

"I really thought we had the game won, but it just sort of slipped away in the last six or seven minutes," Wilkins said.

The Hawks only connected on two field goals in the final 7:55 when Wilkins hit a jumper at that point for an 87-77 lead. Wittman hit the other with 14 seconds left and the game well out of reach. In between, Atlanta managed seven free throws as Detroit outscored the Hawks 27-9 the rest of the way.

The Hawks' biggest lead came at 74-61 late in the third period on a 3-pointer by Wilkins.

"We were frustrated the last couple of minutes," Wilkins said. "But you have to give them credit, they were better than we were in the series."

Now its on to either Boston or Milwaukee for the Pistons, although Daly seemed to indicate it would be the Celtics.

"We're happy to be there, but we're going to go after them. You're not going to win any other way," he said.

"Facing Boston up there the first two games will be tough. They're a great team, but we're going to give it all we've got. We've got nothing to lose."

Old And New Aid Royals' Win

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

Veterans George Brett, Willie Wilson and Frank White kept Kansas City close. Then a newcomer won it for the Royals.

Danny Tartabull, having left runners in scoring position his previous two at-bats, hit a two-run single with two outs in the 12th inning Wednesday night that gave Kansas City an 8-7 victory over the Baltimore Orioles.

"I was fortunate to be in that position, and fortunate enough to get the ball through the infield," said Tartabull, acquired in an off-season trade with Seattle.

Wilson went 5-for-6, including a single setting up Tartabull's single.

Brett, activated from the 15-day disabled before the game after recovering from separated cartilage in his right ribcage, drove in two runs.

White hit a three-run homer, capping a four-run rally in the eighth that put the Royals ahead 5-4. Eddie Murray and Sheets hit two-run homers off Mark Gubicza.

The Orioles have hit 22 homers in their last six games, two shy of the major-league record set by the 1977 Boston Red Sox.

McKey Heads Hardship List

NEW YORK (AP) — Derrick McKey, the Southeastern Conference Player of the Year from Alabama, and former Virginia standout Olden Polynice top a list of nine underclassmen who applied to be eligible for next month's NBA draft, the league announced Wednesday.

Others seeking early entry were Vincent Askew of Memphis State, Ricky Brown of South Alabama, Norris Coleman of Kansas State, Kenny Drummond of North Carolina State, Russell Pierre of Virginia Tech, Reinhard Schmuck of Baruch and Kelvin Smith of Minnesota.

McKey, Askew and Coleman had made their intentions known earlier.

McKey originally intended to play his senior year at Alabama, but was declared ineligible because he had dealings with a sports agent.

The 6-foot-9 forward led Alabama to the SEC title and into the NCAA tournament round of 16 last season.

The NBA draft will be held at the Felt Forum in New York June 22.

The 6-11 Polynice, plagued by a series of problems, left Virginia after his sophomore year and spent last season playing in Italy.

Hollywood Prepares 3-Hour Birthday Party For ABC TV

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Hollywood throws itself a three-hour, heel-clicking, back-slapping, Roman candle-shooting, star-studded 100th birthday party on ABC Monday night.

A hundred years ago Hollywood was little more than a name and a dream and a lot of open space. The motion picture industry was still in the future. In the same year Hollywood became a community, Thomas A. Edison began work on a device to make pictures appear to move.

"A hundred years ago Harvey Wilcox came here and built a house and called it Hollywood," said producer Alexander Cohen. "Mrs. Wilcox had met a woman on the train who had a home in Chicago called Hollywood. "But the fact is, film is only 75 years old. It began here when Cecil B. de Mille came here to make 'The Squaw Man' in 1913."

That Western, starring Dustin Farnum, was a big success and a milestone in the movie industry. It wasn't long before moviemakers made Hollywood a name known all over the world.

"Happy Birthday Hollywood" was put together with the help of Cohen and Hildy Parks, the same husband-wife team that made the Tonys the classiest of all awards show, produced the last two Emmy shows and "Night of 100 Stars," and oversaw the telecasts celebrating CBS' 50th anniversary and NBC's 60th.

More than 150 stars, from James Stewart, Luise Rainer and Burt Lancaster to Burt Reynolds, Jane Powell and Ginger Rogers, pay tribute to Hollywood in the gala celebration.

The ABC special was taped April 26 at the Shrine Auditorium, with tickets selling for up to $1,000 for the benefit of the Motion Picture and Television Country House and Hospital. Cohen said ABC also paid a generous license fee for the show. All together, they expect to raise nearly $3 million for the facility, which provides medical care and old-age residency for workers in the entertainment industry.

Asked the theme, Cohen quickly replied, "Survival." Added Parks, who wrote the show, "We do try to cover the 100 years in the opening number. We start on the streets of New York, where the movie industry began, and show its move out here. By the time the opening number is over, we're at the advent of sound."

That opening number is led by Liza Minnelli, who dances her way from New York to Hollywood. The show also features a Busby Berkeley musical number with Gregory Harrison and 32 actresses, a salute to movie costumes, a look at movie stunts and special effects, plus segments on socially conscious drama, comedy, horror films and movie heroines.

The show also contains many vintage film clips assembled by Jack Haley Jr., the show's co-executive producer. The one-time studio executive and power behind "That's Entertainment," Haley has also produced a number of other film tributes and documentaries and has directed and produced the annual Academy Awards presentation.

For the first time in 20 years, the Cohens will not produce Broadway's Tony awards this year. Cohen, who created the Tony television show, said, "I don't know how to answer why I'm not doing them. I guess they were polarized to a degree. And 20 years is a long hitch. The Tonys were never produced by committee, and we took some very controversial positions in terms of control. I think it's very important that a producer take control, just as on a ship there is only one captain."

In a separate event, many of MGM's legendary stars are scheduled to attend an autograph party tonight at the Hollywood Roosevelt Hotel. The stars, including Cyd Charisse, Gene Kelly, Kathryn Grayson and James Stewart, will sign their names to their images in the famed MGM portraits taken in 1943, 1949 and 1957.

NBC Sticks To Lineup For Fall

NEW YORK (AP) — Returning series will be spruced up with new faces and storylines, but NBC is sticking with much of its successful, prime-time lineup next fall, with only five new series.

NBC Entertainment President Brandon Tartikoff, in presenting the fall lineup Wednesday, said the switch of "Family Ties" from Thursday to Sunday is "the single most important move of the schedule."

"The Cosby Show" and the comedies that follow it on Thursday gave NBC its second-consecutive winning season in the ratings.

One of the Thursday night hits, "Cheers," faces the loss of star Shelley Long, who is pursuing a movie career. Tartikoff said her replacement probably will be announced in June.

Sherman Hemsley's character will adopt a 10-year-old boy on "Amen." On "The Facts of Life," now the network's longest-running show, one of the characters will get married, another will get engaged, and they will be joined by a new, younger girl. And the cops on "Crime Story," the big surprise among the returning series, will chase other bad guys besides crime boss Ray Luca.

Another surprise return is the mid-season replacement "Rags to Riches," a musical-comedy-drama set in the early 1960s.

NBC is bringing back 21 prime-time series, the most for the network since 1959. Three one-hour dramas and two half-hour comedies are being added. Two new and one returning show will be given monthly airings for the first half of the season in what Tartikoff called NBC's "designated-hitter" concept.

Stars from several shows, including Dennis Farina and Stephen Lang from "Crime Story," Sandra Santiago from "Miami Vice" and Corbin Bernsen of "L.A. Law," came out on stage during the presentation at the Waldorf Hotel to thank advertisers and NBC for bringing them back another season.

NBC is leaving intact Monday and Saturday, the nights it won consistently this season besides Thursday. NBC is challenging CBS on Sunday with the move of "Family Ties" opposite CBS' top-rated but older-appeal "Murder, She Wrote."

The A.C. Nielsen Co. begins using "people meters" to determine ratings next fall, so advertisers can see what kind of viewers watch each show. The most desirable audience is young and upscale.

CBS and ABC will announce their fall schedules later this month.

NBC To Introduce Sunday News Show

NEW YORK (AP) — NBC will air a 90-minute Sunday morning news and information program beginning Sept. 20, with Maria Shriver and Boyd Matson as co-anchors, the network news division announced today.

The "Sunday Today" program, which will concentrate on the week ahead rather than review the week past, also will feature Garrick Utley as principal correspondent, said Lawrence K. Grossman, president of NBC News.

The experience of Shriver, Matson and Utley "brings the right combination of hard news and feature reporting to get viewers in gear for the upcoing week," Grossman said.

The program also will have sports reporter Bill Macatee and weatherman Al Roker as regulars. It will be broadcast from 8 a.m. to 9:30 a.m. Eastern time.

Shriver, former anchor of "CBS Morning News," was hired by NBC last September for the now defunct "1986." She and Matson will continue as news correspondents for NBC News programs and specials.

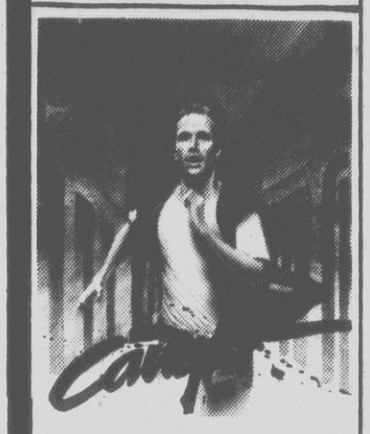

Utley will anchor the "NBC Nightly News" on Sundays. He will continue as a reporter and will be substitute anchor for Tom Brokaw on the weeknight news program.

Foundation

SCRANTON, Pa. (AP) — Actor Richard Harris has established a scholarship fund for Irish students at the University of Scranton in memory of his younger brother and plans to spend a month teaching and performing there next year.

Dermot Harris died in Chicago Nov. 12 while touring in the play "Camelot" with his brother. They had performed in Scranton, visited the Catholic university and "made a lot of friends here," said the university president, the Rev. J.A. Panuska.

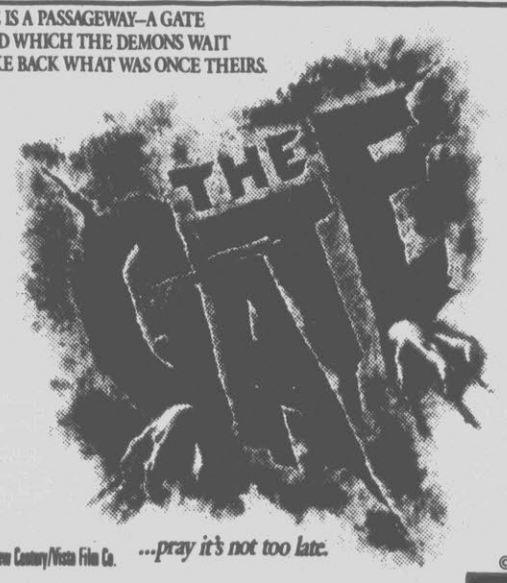

The Dermot Harris Foundation will sponsor one needy student each year from the Harrises' native Ireland, Panuska said.

Gift of Death

Modern military weaponry is becoming increasingly high-tech. But germ warfare is not new. In 1763, British commander Sir Jeffrey Amherst assigned an officer to infect Indian chief Pontiac's braves with smallpox by giving them disease-infested clothing. Smallpox did indeed strike several tribes in the area the following spring. This kind of germ warfare was also used against Indians in Brazil, who were often wiped out with "gifts" of infected items.

DO YOU KNOW — Is smallpox a virus or a bacterium?

3 ◇	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
4 ◇	Pass	4 ♠	Pass
6 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Queen of ♠

It all depends on the eye of the beholder. Some players are by nature optimists, and they view their hands accordingly. If they seem to be lucky in the bargain, they probably have to be.

We know the meaning of the first few bids in the auction on this hand played at the Hoechst tournament in The Hague. South's bid of three diamonds was a transfer to hearts, and North's spade response showed a super-maximum two no trump opening with a fit. Now we are not sure of the exact range of North's opening bid, but with only three-card support and an insufficiently guarded queen whose value could not be determined, we would be inclined to treat it as a minimum. From this point on we are not sure what the bids meant, but we don't blame South for being bullish opposite expected four-card support.

West led the top of his spade sequence, and South could not have been enthralled with his prospects. He won in dummy and ruffed a spade, then led a low heart to the king. The queen of clubs was covered by the king and taken with the ace, and when a low trump was led, West, who thought he was looking at two sure trump tricks, split his honors. Declarer won on the table and learned the bad news.

Undismayed, declarer led a low club from the table and confidently finessed the nine. On the jack of clubs dummy and West both sluffed a diamond. After cashing the king-ace of diamonds and king of spades for a diamond discard, he ruffed another spade in hand. When he played the last club, he could not be stopped from scoring the board's ten of trumps en passant for the fulfilling trick.

States Want To Tax Catalog, TV Shopping Sales

By JIM LUTHER
AP Tax Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — State officials, eyeing the chance to pick up $1.5 billion a year in new revenue, are urging Congress to let states collect sales tax from catalog stores and television shopping clubs selling to people in other states.

Bills pending in Congress would overturn a 1967 Supreme Court decision and take away the tax advantage enjoyed by such operations.

"Tax avoidance is not a fair element of competition," North Dakota state Sen. David E. Nething said Wednesday, noting that mail-order companies that do not collect sales taxes have a distinct competitive advantage over more traditional businesses. He testified to a House Ways and Means subcommittee on behalf of the National Conference of State Legislatures.

Gov. James R. Thompson of Illinois made a similar plea on behalf of the National Governors Association.

With increased usage of toll-free telephone numbers, credit card promotions on television and TV shopping clubs, direct marketing's 14 percent share of the nation's retail sales is expected to grow to 20 percent by 1990, Thompson said. "It clearly is now a significant threat to our local merchants."

Alan Glazer, president of Bedford Fair Industries of Mt. Kisco, N.Y., and spokesman for the Direct Marketing Association, called the proposed changes unconstitutional and unwise. "The costs for companies to collect these taxes would be heavy for some and ruinous for others, and the annoyance to mail-order customers would, we feel, significatly reduce sales," he said.

In 1967 the Supreme Court held that a retailer may not be required to collect taxes on a sales unless the company has a business presence in the home state of the purchaser. Merely sending catalogs or delivered merchandise by mail into a state is not enough to establish that business connection, the court ruled.

That decision did not affect operations of giant retailers such as J.C. Penney and Sears, which have retail outlets in every state. Thus, when merchandise is ordered by catalog or phone from Sears, for example, the company collects sales tax at the rate in effect in the buyer's home state.

On the other hand, the big L.L. Bean mail-order company has only one retail store, in Freeport, Maine. So a customer in Tennessee avoids any sales tax on mail orders from Bean.

The Supreme Court decision did not repeal customers' liabilities for sales taxes on mail orders from out of state. But that has been the effect, since there is no mechanism for states to collect from mail-order customers.

Bills by Reps. Byron Dorgan, D-N.D., and Jack Brooks, D-Texas, would overrule that decision.

Forty-six states, the District of Columbia and more than 6,000 local jurisdictions rely on sales taxes. The Advisory Committee on Intergovernmental Relations has estimated state and local governments lost as much as $1.5 billion on mail-order purchases from out of state in 1985.

Roderick G.W. Chu, New York state finance commissioner, said the Supreme Court decision is encouraging citizens to violate the tax laws. Some of New York's most prestigious retailers have pleaded guilty to disguising over-the-counter sales as mail-order sales in order to evade the tax, Chu noted.

Joseph Chesnick Jr., president of Robert Joseph Interiors of Houston, said consumers go to great lengths to take advantage of the no-tax furniture prices offered by mail-order merchants in North Carolina.

"Consumers come at the advice of the North Carolina retail agents and literally steal our salespeople's catalogs and price lists, turn furniture upside down in order to copy down the stenciled stock number, shoot both still and video photography within our store" so they can identify what they want to order from out of state, he said.

O. Donaldson Chapoton, deputy assistant secretary of the treasury, raised several questions about Dorgan's bill and said the Reagan administration opposes provisions requiring the Internal Revenue Service to collect sales-tax information for the states.
