Blacks Threaten Suit Over Pitt Elections

By STUART SAVAGE
 Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners — for the second time in a month — unanimously approved a "six-three" method of electing members of the board after black leaders rejected offers to change the method of electing three proposed at-large members at a Monday afternoon meeting.

Black leaders attending the meeting promised court action against the plan.

Commissioners worked for more than a year on changing the method of electing members of the board to give minorities an equal opportunity to be represented before adopting the six-three plan in mid-April.

The plan calls for six members to be elected from districts, with voters in the districts — two of which are predominately black — voting only on the representative from their district.

Three other board members, who could live anywhere in the county, would be elected by countywide vote.

The six-three plan was approved after a compromise proposal, using mandatory single-shot voting for the three at-large members (each voter would be able to vote for only one of the at-large seats), was rejected by black leaders who voiced support for having only six districts and no at-large seats.

But in light of statements by Pitt Rep. Ed Warren that the proposed six-three method of election has been met with opposition in the General Assembly, commissioners met again with black leaders Monday in another effort to compromise.

D.D. Garrett, president of the Pitt County chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, told board members Monday, "We're here for two basic issues. We'd like to know your position. And, have you changed your position at all?"

"I hope we can get together," Garrett said. "We want six districts and no at-large."

But Garrett said "as a compromise, we think we can live with one at-large (seat). We are asking you to accept the one. We are bending," he suggested. "You are not. I don't see any need in delaying it."

The Rev. Alonzo Mills said "to show good faith," black leaders would support "six districts and one at-large ... six and one and no more."

But Commissioner Eugene James said "we made a decision some time ago and it's in Raleigh (awaiting action by the General Assembly)."

Then commissioners, deciding against having only one at-large seat, suggested another variation of the three at-large seats by combining districts, with one at-large nominee having to live in Districts 1 or 2, another in Districts 3 or 4 and the third in Districts 5 or 6 — but being voted on in the general election by all voters in the county.

"Any number less than three (at-large) doesn't give fair opportunity (to blacks). We've got to give equal opportunity," Commissioner Tom Johnson said.

"I think this is a reasonable alternative."

But Garrett rejected the proposal. "We deny it," he said.

Bennie Rountree, president of the local chapter of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, said "That's what I can't understand. We're looking for fair play for all the people of the county. All of us are human beings."

"The problem is people don't have trust in one another," Rountree suggested.

Death Toll Reaches 37

U.S. Listened To Iraqi Radio As Jet Attacked

By BARRY SCHWEID
 AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The death toll rose to 37 today in the missile attack on the USS Stark as White House Chief of Staff Howard Baker asked why a "trigger-happy" Iraqi pilot had launched a deadly missile into the Stark's crew quarters.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger said the ship's 185 other crew members "are fine," but did not elaborate.

Baker, interviewed on the NBC-TV show "Today," said, "I think we should understand that free transit on the high seas, and the Persian Gulf is international water, ... is absolutely essential to the vital interests of the United States and the free world."

"I would certainly like to know why a trigger-happy pilot decided to fire on the basis of radar signals, why there wasn't more identification.

He said the United States had listened in on radio communications from the Iraqi Mirage fighter that launched the missile against the U.S. frigate in the Persian Gulf. Baker did not elaborate.

Weinberger, testifying before a Senate Appropriations subcommittee, said the ship was carrying a total of 222 officers and sailors when it was attacked by a single missile Sunday.

Of the 37 dead, he said, 24 have been identified and their families notified. The remaining 13 have not been identified. A Pentagon spokesman said earlier that 15 sailors had been washed overboard or were still trapped in the wreckage.

Weinberger did not elaborate on the condition of the survivors, beyond saying they "are fine."

He also said a board of inquiry has been convened and will arrive Wednesday in Bahrain, where the Stark is expected to arrive under tow later today.

The secretary said one Exocet missile was launched from 12 miles away, giving the Stark 60 to 80 seconds to respond with its defensive weapons.

But Weinberger noted that the missile defenses were not used and added, "We do not know why. ... The most likely explanation, it seems to me, is that there was no reason to believe an Iraqi plane would attack."

On the Senate floor, meanwhile, Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., said, "we need to rethink exactly what it is we are doing in the Persian Gulf. What are our goals? What is our strategy? What are the risks? And how much cost are we willing to pay?"

But the first need, he said, is "to find out why this ship — equipped with some of our most modern and effective defensive weaponry — was not able to, or just did not, use any of it to defend itself."

Appearing earlier on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America," Weinberger said it was impossible to prejudge why the ship's captain did not respond to the attack.

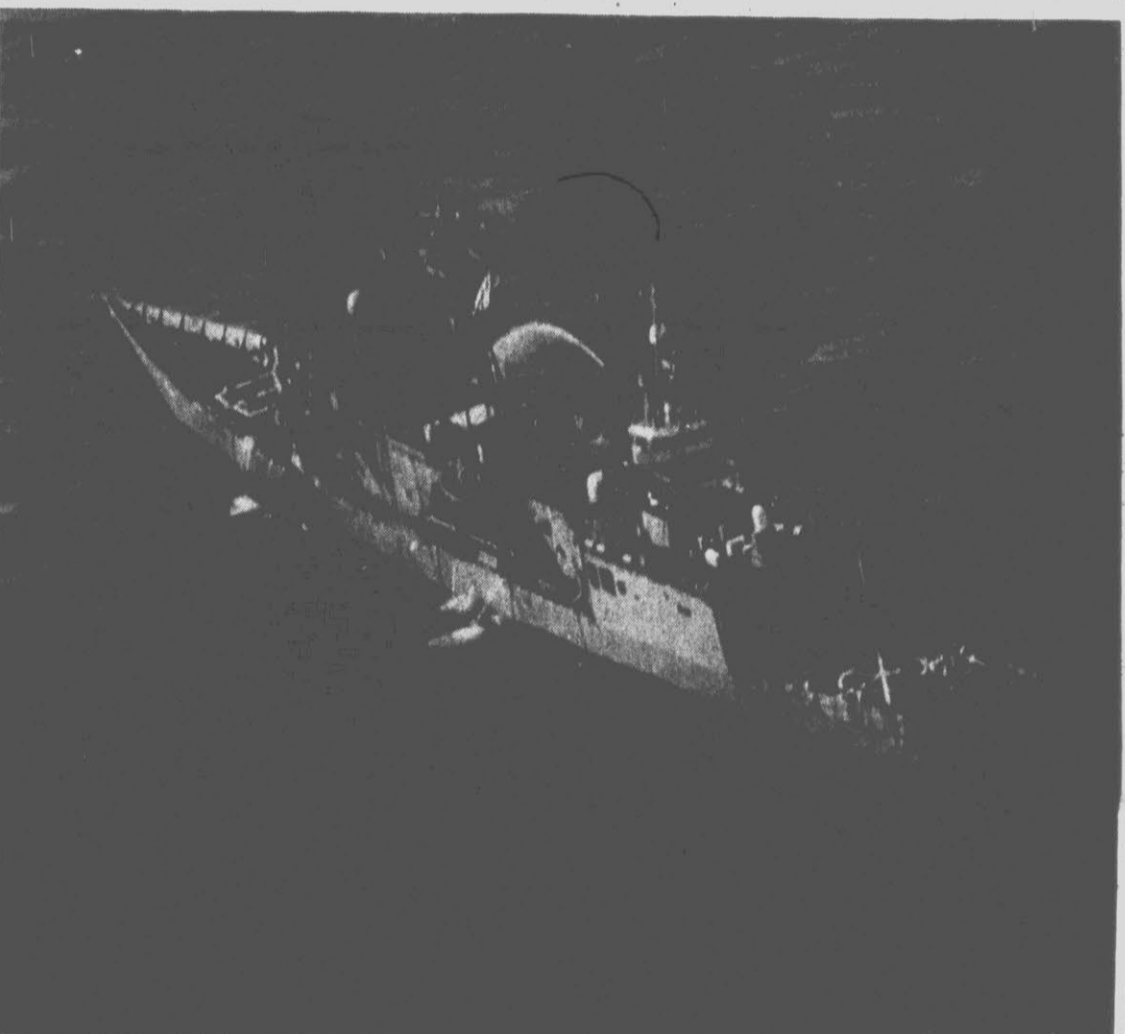

He also disputed an explanation by the Iraqi ambassador to the United States, Nizar Hamdoon, that Iraqi warplanes had targeted a suspected Iranian ship 20 miles from the Stark.

"I think he was aiming at that ship," Weinberger said. "I think the real situation is he did not know it was an American ship. And that's why, as I've called it, it was a ghastly error on his part."

Iraqi warplanes hit another ship 40 to 60 miles away from the Stark earlier in the day and missed another one in roughly that same area, Weinberger said.

The Pentagon said Monday that most of the sailors who died had been trapped by intense fire in one compartment.

As a result of the Iraqi missile attack, President Reagan upgraded the alert status and warned both Iran

Pitt Democratic Leader House Dies

BETHEL — Former Superior Court clerk David Thurston House Jr., 84, of Bethel, a longtime Democratic leader in Pitt County, died at his home on Monday.

The funeral will be held at 11 a.m. Wednesday in the Bethel United Methodist Church. Family visitation will be at Ayres-Gray Funeral Home from 7 to 9 tonight.

A native of Bethel, House was active for many years in educational, agricultural and civic activities in Pitt County.

After graduating from Duke University, he began his career in education as principal of Falkland High School in 1924, with subsequent positions at schools in Belvoir and Chicod before retiring in 1936 to return to Bethel to manage his father's farms.

In 1936 House was elected a Pitt County Commissioner and served in that capacity for nine years — as chairman for the last five years of his tenure. In 1945 he was appointed clerk of Pitt County Superior Court, a post he filled until he retired in April 1968.

An active member of the Democratic Party, he served as an alternate delegate to the Democratic National Convention in Chicago in 1956. House was also engaged in agricultural activities, serving as director of the N.C. Peanut Stabilization Corp. from 1937 until 1940 and was one of five members of the State Agriculture Adjustment Committee for three years.

A member of Bethel United Methodist Church for 70 years, House was active in church affairs. He also served the community in school and business connections, in Rotary and Masonic activities, and in alumni activities for Duke University.

Czech Uses Motorized Hang Glider In Escaping To West

RODING, West Germany (AP) — In a daring flight to freedom in the West, a Czechoslovak man in a motorized hang glider eluded two military jets and flew over his Communist nation's border to West Germany, police said today.

The glider pilot entered West German airspace Monday night just before the jets could intercept him and he landed the homemade aircraft in the Bavarian Forest, not far from the frontier, a Bavarian police officer said.

The pilot, a 39-year-old engineer, has applied for political asylum in West Germany, the police officer said.

He said the pilot, who was not identified, secretly built the glider at his home and planned his escape for years.

The police officer, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the engineer took off at dusk Monday from the Czechoslovak town of Domazlice, about 10 miles from the Bavarian border.

Two military jets spotted the glider as it was nearing the rural boundary area at Polnava and raced after it in an effort to prevent the escape, the police officer said.

But the pilot flew over the border seconds later and the two jets pulled up without entering West German airspace, the officer said.

The pilot flew a total of 30 miles in one hour and landed just outside Roding at 8:30 p.m. after running out of gas, the police officer said.

Roding is about 125 miles northeast of Munich and about 18 miles from the Czechoslovak border.

The officer said the pilot told Bavarian authorities he fled Czechoslovakia because he "generally was dissatisfied with the Communist system."

For the past two decades, West Germany has not sent back any refugees to the Communist East bloc, even if they have not been officially granted political asylum.

County Commissioners Scan Budget Proposing 8 Percent Spending Hike

By STUART SAVAGE
 Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County Commissioners took their first, brief look at a proposed $41.68 million budget for the coming fiscal year Monday, then scheduled a workshop session for Friday to begin a detailed review of the list of expenditures recommended by County Manager Kramer Jackson.

The proposed budget is $3.22 million — or 8 percent — larger than this year's $38.46 million budget, and among other things, includes a proposed 5 percent pay raise for all county employees.

But Jackson, in his budget message to the board, said, "Although the increase appears large, $2.3 million of the increase represents obligated money carried forward for school construction."

For the first time this year, commissioners received a two-part budget: an operating budget (which Jackson said, "is intended to reflect the cost of operating county government next year at the same operating level of the current budget," with no new positions, no salary increases, no new or expanded programs and no capital outlay items), and a supplementary budget (all requests for salary increases, new positions, expanded programs, expanding operating expenses and capital outlay items).

The total proposed operating budget amounts to $35.55 million, while the supplementary or expansion budget amounts to $6.12 million. Because $4.68 million included in the supplementary budget has already been committed (such things as school capital outlay money and money to pay for property being purchased by the county) only $1.44 million is available to meet other requests.

The proposed operating budget for next year reflects a decrease of $3.2 million over the present year ($38.75 million), and that amount ($3.2 million) "has been transferred to the supplementary budget," Jackson pointed out, while "requests for funds in the supplementary budget ($5.4 million) exceed available revenues ($1.44) by $4 million."

Jackson told commissioners that "the 18 percent requested increase for funds from the schools alone is $874,000 more than all available funds at the same tax rate."

The school system requested a total of $15.1 million for current expenses in the coming year, which begins July 1, compared with a budget this year of $13.7 million.

The largest source of revenue for the county is ad valorem property tax, according to Jackson, who said the tax base for the coming year is estimated at $2.65 billion — an increase of $115 million over the current year.

Based on the same tax rate of 64 cents per $100 valuation, Jackson told the board, the county should receive $16.29 million in the coming year in property taxes — an increase of 4.9 percent or $757,111 over 1986-1987 revenues.

Fiery Wreck Kills One

KINSTON, N.C. (AP) — At least one person was killed when a tractor-trailer rig carrying 8,700 gallons of gasoline collided with an automobile, overturned, and burst into flames on U.S. 258 this morning, authorities said.

"The truck is blazing so much we can't get close to it," said Capt. W.A. Ballard of the North Carolina Highway Patrol district office in Greenville. "I've been told there was one (fatality), but they don't know which vehicle it was from."

Ballard said the truck belonged to A.G. Lee Oil Co. He said the fire was being allowed to burn in order to prevent spillage.

"They tried to put it out, but it's hard to put out 8,700 gallons of gasoline," Ballard said.

The accident occurred about 9:30 a.m. near Nobles Crossroads and volunteer firemen were dispatched to the scene.

"We do have personnel rerouting traffic right now," Ballard said.

Vaccine Cost Falls

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina will pay less than any other state for DPT vaccine, saving more than $1 million a year, after enacting legislation to protect drug makers from liability lawsuits, lawmakers said today.

"I expect that many other states will follow this lead," Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan said at a news conference in which representatives of Lederle Laboratories announced North Carolina's cost would fall from $133.75 a vial to $55 in response to the legislation.

The new law revises action taken in 1986 to make the state compensate families of children permanently damaged by rare bad reactions to state-mandated DPT vaccination.

The new law reduces state compensation for such injuries by the amount of damages awarded to families who sue the drug's manufacturer under federal law. It also makes it a felony to sell vaccines designated for North Carolina in other states for profit and repeals a provision in last year's law under which it would have expired Oct. 1, 1989. It also prohibits health-care providers who receive state-purchased vaccines from charging more than a reasonable fee.

Sen. Tom Taft, D-Pitt, sponsor of the legislation, said the cost savings may not be enough to balance the cost of caring for injured infants throughout their lives. But he said the law will help keep children in the hands of private pediatricians and out of public health clinics.

Officials said parents also will see a price reduction as the cost per dose falls from $12 to $3.67.

The students are invited to Washington in June to receive the Presidential Scholar medallion at a White House ceremony and to participate in a week of activities.

The students were selected on the basis of academic achievement, leadership qualities and involvement in community and school activities.

Miss Shappley is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Ben Shappley of Greenville.

CABLE TV SOUNDOFF

Since Greenville Cable TV is a city-sanctioned service, I think the public should voice an opinion on its programming. I am upset that Home Team Sports has been placed on Channel 16, which is also occupied by CSPAN. I enjoyed CSPAN very much. How is the working public supposed to watch CSPAN when Home Team Sports comes on Channel 16 at 6 p.m.? For the past three weekends, Home Team Sports has been on all day on Saturday and Sunday. I am not against sports on television, but with all the sports already on TV, surely the cable channel could have at least one full-time channel devoted to coverage of the U.S. House of Representatives, the U.S. Senate and other programs previously found on CSPAN's M.A.

Reagan Urges Graduates To Say 'Yes' To School

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer
CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — President Reagan, making his third commencement speech in two weeks, urged high school seniors today to help their drop-out friends to "just say yes" to completing school.

Addressing 2,700 students from Chattanooga and Hamilton County schools, Reagan introduced a variation of first lady Nancy Reagan's anti-drug abuse slogan, "Just Say No."

"Nothing is more important to opening up the opportunities of our country than finishing high school," he said in a speech at joint commencement exercises in the University of Tennessee-Chattanooga arena.

"Nothing could be better for your friends who dropped out than to go back," he added. "Nothing could be better for America either. So, if you have a friend who didn't make it — or who's a sophomore or junior and is thinking of quitting — could you do something for me?"

"Ask them to give it another try. Tell them they can do it if they stick with it. So many of you have helped friends 'just say no' to drugs. Help your friends 'just say yes' to finishing school."

Reagan also spoke about a comparative study of schools in Japan and the United States and said:

"We found that, in Japan, when a student did poorly in math or science or any other subject, parents and teachers said that the student should work harder. In the United States, when a student did poorly, as often as not, everyone made excuses, said it was because of poverty or lack of ability, or problems in the family. In Japan, the message to students was always, you're responsible for what you make of your life. In the United States, too often, it was that you aren't."

Reagan praised Tennessee and other states that he said have "begun rewarding excellence in teaching ... with a career ladder program for teachers."

"The funny thing is that, as schools have done this, test scores have started on the rise," he said, from county and city schools during his three-hour visit.

Two Tennesseans in key positions in Reagan's administration, White House Chief of Staff Howard H.

Baker Jr., and Secretary of Labor Bill Brock, were accompanying the president to Chattanooga.

The president was scheduled to meet with more than 30 teachers honored in an awards program named for Brock's late wife, Laura Brock, formerly of Chattanooga.

It is Reagan's first trip to Chattanooga as president. He last visited the southeastern Tennessee city in 1976, when he unsuccessfully challenged President Ford for the Republican presidential nomination.

Reagan began his round of graduation ceremonies on May 10 at Tuskegee University in Alabama, where he told his largely black audience, "As our country moves into the 21st century, it's crucial that more young black Americans follow the path ... of our black scientists, physicists, and mathematicians."

On Saturday at the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts in Washington, he told graduates of the Uniformed Services University of the Health Sciences, a Pentagon school for medical officers, that "in field after field, America's doctors in uniform have pushed forward the battle lines of medical treatment, even while under fire."

White House Rules Out Use Of War Powers Act

By TERENCE HUNT
AP White House Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, while demanding an apology and compensation from Iraq for firing on an American ship in the Persian Gulf, will not go to Congress to invoke the War Powers act, the White House says.

The White House said Monday it will consult with Congress on the Sunday night attack on the guided-missile frigate USS Stark that killed 37 U.S. sailors, and it will put Navy ships in the Persian Gulf on a higher alert status.

However, officials said the administration would not invoke the War Powers Resolution.

The 1973 act requires presidents to notify Congress within 48 hours after American forces are put in a situation where they may become engaged in hostilities.

It also requires those forces to be withdrawn within 60 days, subject to a 30-day extension, if Congress does not declare war. Reagan, objecting that the act encroaches on the president's constitutional authority, has refused on other occasions to proceed formally under the act but has submitted reports as the law requires.

Presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said U.S. officials believed the nighttime attack was "an inadvertent strike. We know of no motive for this action."

Later, Fitzwater said the State Department had received a letter from Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, expressing "deepest regret over the painful incident."

Second Guesses

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger said today he does not want to second-guess why the commander of an American frigate did not use the ship's defenses against a surprise attack in the Persian Gulf that killed 37 sailors.

"We don't know at this point whether there was time or whether he concluded it was not proper to fire," Weinberger said in an interview on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America." "I just don't want to second-guess the captain from 7,000 miles away."

"The ship's perfectly capable of defending itself," Weinberger said Monday night, rejecting suggestions the Navy should be assigning larger ships to the waterway in light of Iraqi and Iranian attacks on commercial vessels.

"The systems that we have ... can deal with incoming missiles ... and they work extremely well," Weinberger said in an interview on Cable News Network.

"They were not used," he added. "But it's a little easy to sit here so many thousands of miles away and second-guess someone who's on the job, and I don't want to do that. The possibility, or even the likelihood, that an Iraqi plane ... would launch a missile at us was just about zero. And so you did not have any expectation of that."

Weinberger told ABC News it was "a single, horrible error on the part of the Iraqi pilot."

An Exocet missile that struck the 453-foot ship on its port side, just above the waterline, tore open a gaping hole.

"We feel it does represent an apology. It does not address the matter of compensation," Fitzwater said.

"We expect an apology and compensation for the men who died in this tragic incident," Fitzwater said. "We also seek compensation for the ship."

Administration officials began meeting Monday night with members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. Its chairman, Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., issued a statement saying his panel "is working with the administration to ascertain the facts of the situation and how the requirements of the War Powers resolution will be fulfilled."

"As a first step, it is up to the administration to inform the committee concerning this involvement of U.S. forces," Pell said. Meetings were expected to continue today.

It was the first attack on an American warship in the nearly 7-year-old Iran-Iraq war.

Reagan pledged an investigation and promised to report its findings to the American people.

"I know and I share the sense of concern and anger that Americans feel over yesterday's tragedy in the Persian Gulf," Reagan said in a nationally televised appearance in the Rose Garden.

"I want to express my deepest sympathies to the families of the brave men killed and injured yesterday aboard the USS Stark," Reagan said. "Their loss and suffering will not be in vain."

"The mission of the men of the USS Stark — safeguarding the interests of the United States and the free world in the gulf — remains crucial to our national security and to the security of our friends throughout the world."

Reagan met for 75 minutes with top national security advisers and ordered that U.S. ships in the region be put on a higher state of alert. Iran and Iraq were formally notified of the change.

Families Of Stark Crew Await Fate Of Loved Ones

By JONATHAN W. OATIS
Associated Press Writer
Across America, families of the USS Stark's 200 crew members grieved for their dead, rejoiced for the living or waited anxiously for word of their loved ones' fates following the Persian Gulf missile attack.

"We're walking zombies right now," Theresa Luffman of Water-town, N.Y., said Monday after finally getting through to the Pentagon for news of her 25-year-old son, Petty Officer 3rd Class Brian Luffman.

Luffman's family made dozens of phone calls to a special Navy information number before learning he was not on casualty lists from Sunday's Iraqi air raid on the guided-missile frigate, which left 22 confirmed dead, 15 missing and presumed dead and 21 wounded.

Mrs. Luffman said the Navy felt her son was still aboard the Stark, which was under tow today as firefighters battled stubborn blazes around a gaping hole in its side.

"The waiting is the worst part," Debra Kirkland said in Tallahassee, Fla., as she tried to learn what had happened to her only child, 25-year-old Petty Officer Christopher Jones.

In Columbus, Ohio, the family of Michael Nelson, 23, lit candles in their front yard as they waited to learn whether he had been hurt. The Pentagon notified them that he was not among the dead.

Nelson's wife, Tracy, gave birth to a girl early Monday in Florida.

"He was so anxious about the baby being born. This is his first," said his mother, Maria Nelson.

A memorial service is tentatively scheduled for Friday at the Stark's homeport, Mayport Naval Station, near Jacksonville, Fla.

For others, the waiting ended Monday and the mourning began. One of those was Robert DeAngelis of Dumont, N.J., whose newly married 23-year-old son, Christopher, had been an electronics technician on the Stark.

"It was just like in the movies," said DeAngelis. "Two officers walked up to the house about 3 o'clock and said: 'Sir, we regret to inform you that your son gave his life in the line of duty.'"

He said his son's wife, Donna, was taking the news "very hard" at her Florida home. "They were married on New Year's Day."

Alfreda Shippee of Adams Center, N.Y., also learned that her 35-year-old son, fire control technician Robert Shippee, was killed.

"He was a patriotic boy and he would do everything for his country," she said. Shippee left a wife and three children, ages 8 to 12.

Carol Kiser lost her husband, and his 5-year-old boy and 11-year-old daughter lost their father, 18-year

Navy veteran Stephen Kiser, in the attack.

"He's gone to meet the Lord," his mother, Norma Kiser, said in Elkhart, Ind.

"He was an electrician's mate," she said. "He was the command senior chief in the power plant. He kept the thing going."

"He really loved the Navy," she said. "That was his life, defending his country and not letting them come over here."

Others learned their relatives were hurt but alive.

Paige McLeod of Millbrook, Ala., said her brother, William McLeod, telephoned her. "He said he's fine," Miss McLeod said. "He has some cuts, his feet were cut up pretty bad."

She said her brother was able to provide few details about what had happened. "He told me that I knew more than he did."

In Hoosick Falls, N.Y., Jane Dugan received a call Monday evening from her 21-year-old son, William Morandi, from a hospital in the Persian Gulf country of Bahrain.

She said her son told her a Bahraini helicopter had fished him out of the water, and that he had suffered only a few bruises.

"He sounded wonderful," Dugan said. "I asked him if he would be coming home, and he said he thought he would be coming home but they were going to take it one step at a time."

Dugan said her son told her few other details about the attack, and that she didn't press him.

"It's scary," she said of her ordeal. "I hope no one ever has to go through something like this."

Execution Date

DOBSON, N.C. (AP) — A new execution date of Aug. 17 has been set for Arthur Martin Boyd Jr., who was convicted in 1983 of murdering his former girlfriend in the parking lot of a local shopping mall.

Judge Joseph R. John set the date and denied a motion by Boyd's attorneys for an extension of time to file an appeal in the case.

Burn Victims Treated

WIESBADEN, West Germany (AP) — Two USS Stark crewmen were flown today to a U.S. Air Force hospital in West Germany, and an official said they suffered serious but not life-threatening burns in the Iraqi missile attack.

Meanwhile, a military transport plane left the Rhine Main Air Base for Bahrain today to pick up the remains of sailors killed in Sunday night's raid, said an Air Force spokesman, Sgt. Ralph Monson. The plane was expected to return to Frankfurt late today or early Wednesday, he said.

Dr. Robert A. Gilmore, director of hospital services at the Air Force hospital in Wiesbaden, said the two injured crewmen were in an intensive care unit with burns over 40 percent of their bodies and shrapnel wounds.

"Right now their lives are not threatened," he said. "But there always is a threat of infection."

Gilmore, speaking to reporters at Lindsey Air Station, identified the two hospitalized men as Lawrence Mark Bareford and James Wheeler, both petty officers third class. He did not give their hometowns or ages.

He said the two men were alert and remembered the explosion that tore apart the side of their ship Sunday night, killing 37 crewmen and wounding 21. U.S. officials say an Iraqi plane fired Exocet missiles at the Stark in a case of "mistaken identity."

Local Matter

If the bill in the Legislature which requires local governments to pay for signs removed through local ordinances is approved, it won't directly affect Greenville since this city already has its sign ordinance on the books.

It was only through an amendment to the proposed legislation, however, that Greenville and other North Carolina cities were recognized for having their ordinances in place.

While that improves the bill from Greenville's standpoint, we have a better suggestion. The entire bill should be defeated in the Legislature.

Every North Carolina community differs in the kinds of regulations that are needed. No doubt there are some communities which see no need to pass ordinances regulating signs. For them it is not a problem. For growing cities, however, it can become a problem and that is the reason some municipalities have reacted.

Walter Jones Jr., D-Pitt, was one of those who voted against the bill. He said, "I believe that local governments should make these decisions."

"I thought this bill would not only put a financial hardship on municipalities but would also eliminate their efforts to work out an agreement on a local matter. I believe in matters such as this the decision should be made by local government elected officials; therefore, I could not support the bill." Members of the Greenville City Council were in agreement:

Council member Inez Fridley said, "I feel municipalities have a right to determine what their city is going to look like."

Council member Inez Shinn said, "It appears to me that between the manufactured housing and billboard reimbursement legislation, and some other bills that are in committee now, like the utilities bill, that they are going to strip local government of its authority."

The State Legislature has enormous powers to tell counties and municipalities what to do. It is, however, a power that should be exercised as little as possible. This session has been marked by bills which attempt to tell the local governments how to run their affairs. That ignores the fact that local leaders can best decide their local affairs.

The Legislature can show its faith in local government by defeating this billboard act.

Still Reasonable

This month's announcement that the U.S. Postal Service expects to be adopting new and higher rates in 1988 came as no big surprise. The decision was presaged by an earlier announcement saying an increase in postal rates would probably be necessary to cope with future rising costs. The current scale has been in effect since February 1985.

John H. Griesemer, chairman of the Postal Service board of governors, observes that compared to other small necessities ... from toothpaste to ground coffee ... this would be "a very modest increase".

For senders of birthday cards, letter-writers and people paying their bills via the mails, first class stamps would rise from 22 cents to a quarter. On average, cost of sending something by mail is to go up 16 percent. Changes include a reduction in cost for Express Mail rates.

For a generation that has seen the price of a package of chewing gum multiplied by five, the prospect is not too bad.

Anyone giving serious consideration to the quantity and variety of mail the postal service handles has to be dazzled by customer confidence in its reliability. There is a history of dependability involved. Better yet, think of its history.

Without letters we would still have history but it would largely be a matter of dry facts and dates of major events and insights as to cause and effects might well be left unclear. Old correspondence by mail fleshes out the story.

Great immigration movements must have begun with letters sent friends and family members that said in effect "Come, it's better here". The story of America is filled with such instances.

They, and so much more, would not be a part of our lives if assured mail delivery did not exist.

Despite claims by people in high places that "we've stopped inflation" it is not completely true and that story affects an army of men and women who make the postal service possible.

Our postal service approaches the level of being indispensable and we still have a bargain on our hands, even as its cost inches up.

Attack Quickly Labeled An Accident

WASHINGTON (AP) — Even before the Reagan administration knew what happened, it was quick to label the Iraqi attack on a U.S. warship in the Persian Gulf a case of "inadvertent happenstance."

The apparent purpose: to avoid exacerbating damage done to U.S.-Arab relations by the clandestine sale of arms to Iran. The moderate Arab nations of the Persian Gulf, especially Saudi Arabia and Kuwait, have expressed fear that an Iranian victory over Iraq in the Gulf war would unleash a wave of Moslem fundamentalism that could topple their own conservative monarchies.

So within hours of the attack on the frigate USS Stark that killed 37 U.S. sailors on Sunday, Pentagon spokesman Robert Sims told reporters that it "appears to be a case of mistaken identity. We don't know why it happened."

Pentagon officials were holding to the same line 24 hours later.

While President Reagan demanded "an apology and compensation for the men who died in this tragic incident," other administration officials took pains to stress that they believed the attack was a tragic error. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger called it a "ghastly accident."

The United States is officially neutral in the Gulf war, which began in September 1980.

But Washington has tilted subtly toward Iraq. And after the sales to Iran were disclosed last November, sources said that White House operatives had given Baghdad intelligence information about potential bombing targets in Iran.

By then, it was clear that Tehran was not eager for a quick improvement in ties with Washington.

U.S. officials contended that the American arms would not shift the balance of the war in favor of Tehran, but that argument was weakened by bloody Iranian offensives that moved the battle front deeper into Iraq around the beginning of this year.

Since then, U.S. diplomats have worked hard to improve relations with Iraq and the moderate Gulf states.

This month, Richard Murphy, the assistant secretary of state for Near Eastern affairs, toured the region and discussed with Kuwaiti officials plans to register 11 of that nation's 21 oil tankers in America so they can fly the Stars and Stripes and come under protection of U.S. warships.

The U.S. Navy has kept a small fleet in the Persian Gulf area since World War II and beefed it up four years ago when Iran and Iraq expanded the ground war to embrace commercial shipping. The Stark was one of seven U.S. warships in the area, Pentagon officials said.

Before Sunday, neither Iran nor Iraq had staged an air attack on the U.S. fleet, and the greater threat was seen from Iran, which earlier this year deployed Chinese-built Silkworm anti-ship missiles near the mouth of the gulf.

Prime Minister Hussein Musavi of Iran seized on the Iraqi attack to repeat warnings for the United States and Soviet Union to keep away.

The Persian Gulf, he said, "is not a safe place for the superpowers and it is not in their interest to enter these quicksands ... The Great Satan has been trapped."

Weinberger, in a CBS Evening News interview, said the United States has "no support for the Iranians whatever, and there is no feeling that Iran should ever be in a position to win that war. That would be a disaster for the world."

Iraqi officials were more conciliatory than the Iranians.

On Monday, Iraqi officials delivered a note to Reagan from President Saddam Hussein expressing hope that this "unintentional incident will not affect our relations, which will remain cordial and based on mutual respect and the common desire to establish peace and stability in the region."

But Iraq was slow to acknowledge responsibility for the incident, at first suggesting it must have been a plane from another country.

Iraq's ambassador to the United States, Ambassador Nizar Hamdoon, later indicated the Iraqi warplane had targeted another ship, believed to be Iranian, 20 miles from the U.S. frigate.

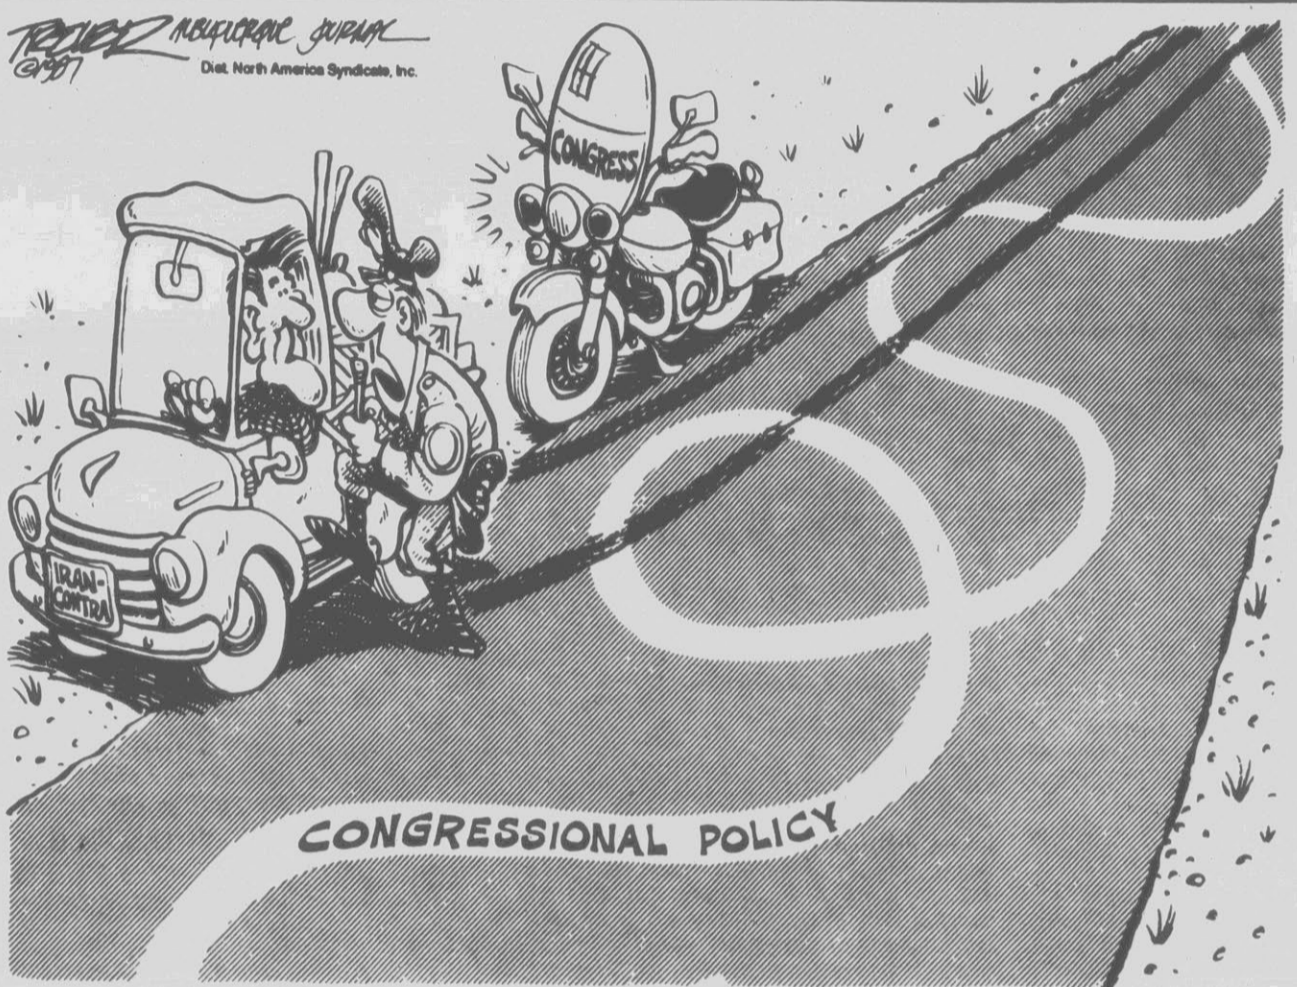

He said any Iraqi personnel who violated instructions will be punished, and Iraq will take steps to see that the incident is not repeated.

The Stark was 85 miles northeast of Bahrain, and 60 miles south of two tankers that were attacked earlier Sunday by Iraqi warplanes, said Vice Admiral Henry Moustin, deputy chief of naval operations.

Speaking to reporters before the Iraqis issued a public explanation of the incident, Moustin said: "We have no indication they knew they were firing at a U.S. vessel."

"The United States has not been at war with Iraq. Relations with Iraq have improved since 1984 ... (Nothing would) lead us to believe that the Iraqis would suddenly attack a U.S. vessel underway for peaceful purposes in international water."

Public Forum

To the editor:

On March 23-24, 1987, the Division of Facility Services conducted a survey of the University Nursing Center. It was with dismay that I found many of the same citations of a survey by the Department of Health and Human Resources on June 17-19, 1986.

Some of the discrepancies cited again after a nine-month period of time include:

1. Lack of respect for dignity and privacy of patients
2. Inadequate Decubitus care (bed sores)
3. Inadequate supervision of patient feeding
4. Inadequate skin care
5. Inadequate pharmaceutical supervision of drugs
6. Infection control problems
7. Patients lying or sitting in own urine
8. Inadequate aseptic and sterile techniques
9. Inadequate rehabilitative nursing
10. Improper use of restraint devices
11. Medical records lacking or not kept

Mr. William T. McConnell Jr., the present administrator of University Nursing Center, has answered these instances by indicating to the Division of Facility Services that they are being rectified or action of some sort is being taken. Time and the next inspection will tell.

Dr. Leo Jenkins, a man whom I respect, was quoted by The Daily Reflector (and I paraphrase and interpret) "My mother has received good care at University Nursing Center, and the less said, the better for all."

Dr. Jenkins, unless pressure is maintained, unless the public becomes concerned, many of the patients — particularly those who have a diminished mental capacity or those who have no loved ones to see them often — will be neglected, perhaps not on purpose.

To the editor:

There is rejoicing in Greenville. The school board decision to grandfather only high school students is a move toward equality in education for all the children of Pitt County. It is a timely decision and one that will begin to unite the city's divided neighborhoods.

Our family is glad that our neighbors will now be coming to our schools. We still wonder what it is that frightens them about attending the schools that our children attend. We have three children who are attending J.H. Rose attendance area schools, from elementary school through high school. Not every day for each child has been perfect, nor has every educational situation been perfect, but our children have matured and learned each year. They have acquired the necessary academic skills to achieve and progress educationally. Equally important is the fact that they have learned to respect children from a variety of racial, ethnic and socio-economic backgrounds. We are proud to have our children in these schools and are committed to making their new classmates feel welcome.

Strength For Today

When Chester W. Kingsley, a noted banker and philanthropist of Boston in the 19th century, was a young man he decided to open an account with the Lord. Throughout his long and useful life he considered himself to be a steward entrusted with many things, including money, which he must use for the glory of God. This statement was in later years found in his diary: "Why should not a Christian businessman open an account with the Lord and treat it with all the sanctity and promptness that he would his own account with a business firm? Resolve to do it."

Kingsley lived a happy, prosperous and useful life and gave away a considerable fortune. The Biblical idea of stewardship had a great deal of meaning for him. And he learned from immediate experience that it is more blessed to give than to receive.

There He Goes Again, Ignoring The Real World

Analysis

WASHINGTON — In the last two weeks, Ronald Reagan has faced some stunning charges about his presidency. There were tales of a White House "shredding party," of a personal aide to the president who departed to sell his access to the Oval Office, of plans to buy freedom for American hostages with ransom money, of cash disbursed in envelopes to contra leaders outside the White House gates, of Iranians being given a late-night tour of the White House, of conspiracies to surmount the laws imposed by Congress.

And how did Reagan respond to these serious charges?

He responded with shouted answers at photo opportunities, with statements that raised as many questions as they answered, and with an interview Friday in which he almost casually took responsibility for contra activities and apologized that he was "having some trouble remembering" whether he approved ransoming the hostages.

As last week's events showed, Reagan has not yet come to grips with the potentially devastating impact of the Iran-contra investigation on his presidency. He has noticed it only as a sideshow from another era. Despite its profound lessons, Reagan seems unwilling to confront the widening scandal directly, as he has been unwilling to face many of the hard and difficult choices of his administration.

In answering questions about the affair last week, Reagan did not acknowledge that he or his subordinates had done anything wrong. "I have to say that I get around quite a bit in the country," he said, "and the audiences range from blue collar workers in a factory, as they did just a few days ago, to students and their families at a graduation ceremony, and I haven't seen any evidence that I've been mortally wounded, nor do the people seem to be unhappy about what we've been doing here."

In the first two weeks of the hearings, Reagan dealt with the issue by relegating it to the short blasts of questions and answers with reporters that pass for dialogue in the twilight of his term. "I'm hopeful that I'm finally going to hear some of the things that I'm still waiting to learn about," he said as the hearings opened.

"Don't you know what you did?" he was asked.

"I know what I did and I have told all of you repeatedly what I did, and now I'm going to quit talking to you and go in the office," he replied testily.

On Friday, after the testimony of his former national security adviser, Robert C. McFarlane, Reagan changed his approach, insisting he was kept informed. "I was very definitely involved in the decisions about support of the freedom fighters," he said. "It was my idea to begin with."

This pattern of disengaged leadership is characteristic of Reagan's presidency. Long before the Iran-contra affair came to light, Reagan was dancing around other hard issues and unpleasant truths of his administration, and he is still avoiding them. Despite the trenchant criticism of the Tower board and all the subsequent promises of a more engaged presidency, we haven't yet seen it.

So don't break out the champagne for a fundamentally different Reagan. He is still in many ways a remote president who goes for months without explaining his actions, or glides over them in generalities disconnected from the real policy, or explains them away when they don't work — blaming someone else.

What's different now is the seasoned new team in charge at the White House under Chief of Staff Howard H. Baker Jr. The new staff has clearly recognized that, Iran aside, Reagan's legacy will be measured by his progress on the central issues of the decade — repairing the nation's fiscal hemorrhage and slowing the nuclear arms race. Reagan is at least rhetorically committed to this agenda, but it is not yet clear whether he can vigorously seize these issues in the final 20 months of his presidency and make genuine headway despite the Iran-contra affair.

For example, Baker has quietly moved in recent weeks to set up the elements of a compromise on the deficit, as part of a budget "reform" package. But it will require Reagan's active participation and perhaps his acceptance of higher taxes — which he has vowed to reject.

The next few months will also require Reagan's active leadership in foreign policy, if the administration hopes to persuade the allies to accept the latest Soviet proposal for eliminating medium-range missiles in Europe. This may be Reagan's only hope for an arms-reduction treaty in his presidency. But it is too early to know whether Reagan, who failed to demand unity from his own advisers on arms control, will be capable of achieving it among the allies.

Reagan's presidency has been built on the masterful use of public relations — which underscored his strengths and masked his weaknesses — and it is a great irony that his popularity and prestige reached a zenith last year just as they were being put at risk by the covert scheming of his subordinates. Now that the public-relations mask has been lifted, you might assume Reagan would try to improve his performance and engage the issues of his presidency more directly.

He hasn't.

For example, take one of the important issues that Reagan has dealt with since the Iran-contra affair — the Moscow espionage cases. Americans might wonder if Reagan feels any sense of responsibility for the breach of security at the United States embassy in Moscow, where Marine guards have been accused of trading secrets for sex with Soviet women.

This episode happened on Reagan's watch. One of his White House advisory boards had warned of the potential for such spying, in a report that appears to have been ignored. By his own words, Reagan recognized the seriousness of the problem, which he described in a November, 1985 radio address.

"We approach the intelligence threat with a new degree of realism," Reagan said then. "We're up against aggressive people who take their job seriously. There's no reason to sugar-coat reality. The free world is today confronted with some of the most sophisticated, best-orchestrated efforts of theft and espionage in modern history." And, Reagan vowed, the administration was "ensuring the security of U.S. embassies and bases throughout the world."

But when he was asked about it recently in an appearance before the Los Angeles World Affairs Council, Reagan took no responsibility for what went wrong in Moscow.

Instead, he blamed the Marines episode on "value-free" education in the nation's schools.

"I can't help but wonder," he said, "are we now seeing the fruit of education that predominantly throughout our country has stopped making any — or performing any teaching on the basis of moral principles or what is right or what is wrong?" He then told a story about a guidance counselor whom he said refused to teach his students that it would be wrong not to return a lost billfold with $1,000 in it.

It was a cute story, but it did not address any of the serious issues raised earlier by Reagan or the Soviets in a series of heated exchanges over embassy spying.

Nazi Holocaust: No Room To 'Forgive And Forget'

Two steel cabinets in the United Nations shelter 38,000 files containing 25,000 names of Nazis, who actively participated in the murder of Jews, Gypsies, various "undesirables" and resistance fighters.

The names were compiled by the U.N. War Crimes Commission, composed of 17 nations, which collected the evidence between 1943 and 1948, a period when memories still were fresh and smarting.

Done with its work, the commission turned over the files to the secretariat of the newly formed United Nations, which, in the prevailing mood of "healing" the war's wounds, promptly locked them up in the U.N. archives.

Forty years is a long time for the truth to remain locked up. A new generation has grown up since, a generation that didn't know Adolf Hitler. Last year it was discovered that one of the names in those files was that of Kurt Waldheim, former secretary-general of the United Nations, an organization founded, as its charter so eloquently proclaims, "to save future generations from the scourge of war."

Waldheim, now president of Austria, has been barred by the Department of Justice from entering the United States. But what about the others, the names that the United Nations refuses to make public? Surely we all realize that in a free society the only reason for secrecy is to protect the innocent, not to shield the guilty.

The case of Waldheim, as well as the recent deportations of John Demjanjuk, Karl Linas, and the trial of Klaus Barbie, should not be seen as a sudden and unseemly rush to justice, a last gasp for revenge, at a time when the victims have been dead for more than 40 years, and the few survivors and the many killers are old and dying off.

The issue is not revenge, it is remembrance. It is not about punishing, it is about learning. The corpses and clouds of smoke generated by the Third Reich have rendered physical revenge meaningless and banal.

People have a need to forgive and forget, but there are events in the lives of nations that cannot be forgotten. Such a horror was the Holocaust.

Locking the evidence in an attic, will not exorcise the evil demons from our collective consciousness. Only a bold confrontation with the ghosts of our past and the reassertion of man's capacity to do good will banish them from our midst.

It will be a heart-rending confrontation, which is why so many prefer not to open the "Pandora's box," even to the point of allowing some to advance the theory that the Holocaust never happened, or that the numbers have been greatly inflated.

I would like to be able to believe that assertion very much, but cannot.

My entire family once lived in the Polish city of Bialystok. My grandfather, Jacob Meyer Rakowski, did a brisk trade selling oil burners; his daughter, Fanya Kaplan, my aunt, could recite volumes of Polish poetry by heart; her husband, Grisha, milled flour with which they baked their famous "Bialys." Their son Broniek was so fair no one thought he was Jewish. Jacob Meyer's son, Lev Rakowski, a mechanical engineer, married a girl named Tanya, and they had a son named Tolek about whom I remember nothing.

If the numbers of Holocaust victims have been inflated, then a few of these people should have survived. Perhaps even one, just one. But no one lived, not a single Rakowski or Rubinow came out alive, not even a distant cousin.

If the butchers and the bureaucrats who unleashed them are made invisible, then my relatives also become invisible, the memories of them dimming from year to year, their presence diminishing, as if they had never been born. It is a punishment they do not deserve.

Admiration Or Anti-Semitism?

TOKYO — The Jews, it seems, are to blame. The Japanese are casting about for explanations for their country's current economic troubles, and this one — the Jews — has drawn enough attention to make a best-seller (400,000 copies in 12 months) of a book entitled "If You Understand the Jews, You Can Understand the World."

"International Jewish capital" has been secretly battering Japan for years, writes author Masami Uno. The bribery indictment of former Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka in 1976, the softening up of Japanese young people and the rise of South Korea as a competitor were all part of the plot.

Now comes the strong yen, which Uno tells us Jewish bankers have created to subvert and subjugate the Japanese economy.

Uno's book was so successful that last fall he brought out a sequel that has sold 250,000 copies. Other Japanese authors have joined in with such works as "Miracles of the Torah Which Control the World," "Understanding the Protocols of the Elders of Zion" and "Make Money with Stocks Targeted by the Jews."

The books by Uno and the others are just one part of a boom in Japanese interest in all things Jewish. Tokyo's Kinokuniya book store recently held a "Jewish fair" that assembled 150 titles on the subject. Most are intended as paeans of praise, depicting Jews as dynamic models of success in business, the arts and human relations.

The few Jews (around 1,000) who live in Japan report no sense of personal danger despite the anti-Semitic tone of some of the books. "Ninety-nine percent of the Japanese population doesn't know what Judaism or people of Jewish origin are," says Walter J. Citrin, a businessman who is chairman of Tokyo's Jewish Community Center. "They just consider them foreigners."

Still, he is worried. "We feel the contents of these books will create a wrong impression among Japanese young people," possibly leading to anti-Semitism, says Citrin.

A few foreigners believe it is already here, and that the books are a new sign that nationalist extremism is on the rise in Japan.

"Anti-Semitism has greater intellectual currency and respectability in Japan than in perhaps any other industrialized society," wrote David G. Goodman, a University of Illinois specialist on Japan, in a recent letter to The New York Times.

Japanese commentators tend to see the books as generally benign, a passing fad that shows how ignorant the Japanese remain of the world beyond their shores and the sensitivities of people there.

"The books sell well because of the Japanese' feelings of isolation," says Jewish-studies specialist Shichihei Yamamoto. "Japanese are being criticized from all over the world, and they want to know who is doing it and why." (There are also books alleging an American conspiracy.)

Jews have evoked fascination in parts of the Japanese intellectual world for decades. By some accounts, it began in the late 19th century, when Japan was exposed to anti-Semitism in the flood of Western ideas it imported for modernization.

"The Merchant of Venice" was the first of Shakespeare's plays to be translated. Pejorative terms applied to Jews remain in many Japanese-English dictionaries.

In the 1930s, the Japanese military came up with an idea to populate occupied Manchuria with 1 million European Jews seeking refuge from Nazism.

Had it gone anywhere, it might have saved many lives.

The plan's motivating factor, however, seems to have been a belief the newcomers would draw capital and learning from the United States to that impoverished area.

There is evidence, too, of feelings here of a special affinity with Jews. Perhaps it is due to perceptions that Jews have the same sense of purpose and group loyalty that the Japanese admire in themselves. Tiny religious sects have even sprung up here preaching that the Japanese are one of the lost tribes of Israel.

In Israel there is a forest named in honor of Chiune Sugihara, a Japanese diplomat stationed in Lithuania during the war, who ignored his government's regulations and issued visas that enabled an estimated 4,500 Jews to escape to Japan.

As the war progressed, the Japanese interned certain European Jews in a Shanghai ghetto but otherwise generally resisted demands by Nazi Germany for wholesale persecution.

After the war some Japanese saw a spiritual brotherhood with the Jews as innocent victims of war. One side had Hiroshima; the other had Auschwitz.

Anne Frank's story has always sounded a strong chord with the Japanese. Over a recent two-week period, 35,000 of them paid the equivalent of $2 and $3 to see a Tokyo exhibit of objects from the girl's life.

Proud of their "one-race society," the Japanese are forever treading unaware on the toes of other people's ethnic pride.

Japanese television frequently depicts Africans as amusing savages. Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone last year remarked in a speech that blacks and Hispanics have dragged down the United States' educational level, and many people here still can't figure out why his comments caused such a fuss across the Pacific.

Most Japanese who buy conspiracy books probably have no notion that they present warmed-over versions of theories that the Nazis used to justify the murder of millions. Many might think twice if they knew how abhorrent the ideas are considered overseas.

"People buy the books thinking it will give them an international outlook," says Akira Mizuguchi of the Middle East Institute of Japan. "Unfortunately, it makes a very strong impression on those with little knowledge."

Perhaps the supreme irony is that the Jews depicted in the books bear remarkable resemblance to the stereotypical Japanese denizens of "Japan Inc." — rich, treacherous, manipulating, secretly conspiring with every member of their kind to control the world.

Meanwhile, Jewish leaders in Japan are trying bring foreign pressure to bear on the issue. Members of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith have met with Japanese Ambassador Nobuo Matsunaga in Washington to express concern.

Two members of the U.S. Congress recently demanded that Nakasone take a stand against the books. In response, they got a letter from Matsunaga affirming that Japan opposes discrimination of any kind but also upholds freedom of expression.

The Tokyo Jewish Community Center's Citrin hopes that Japanese intellectual leaders, and perhaps even politicians, will at some point speak out publicly against the books' ideas.

For now, however, the idea is to play down the issue in Japan. "The more it appears in the press here," he says, "the more books it sells."

New Survey Shows Seat Belt Usage Declining

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Children may be used in commercials to help remind North Carolinians to use their seat belts, a move prompted by the state's slip from first to second nationwide in seat-belt use.

The Highway Safety Research Center at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill released statistics showing North Carolina's seat-belt use among drivers fell from 78 percent in February to 71 percent in March. The survey showed use among front-seat passengers fell from 71 percent to 63 percent.

The decline left Maryland in front with the highest compliance at 74 percent, officials said.

"North Carolina children have been targeted to get the message to adults because they are the pros at riding buckled up," said Donald Reinfurt, associate director of research center. "Young children were the first to experience the benefits of a belt law in 1982 and today's 6-year-olds are the first generation to grow up required to be buckled up."

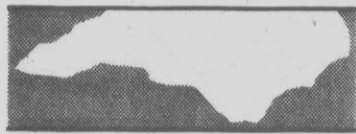

Reinfurt said Monday that North Carolina law enforcement officials this week will join a national public awareness campaign called "All-American Buckle Up Week" in which 400,000 badges will be distributed to children "deputized" as seat belt enforcers.

The survey of seat-belt use is the second since violators of North Carolina's seat belt law began facing a $25 fine. UNC researchers recorded usage rates for 16,000 drivers and 6,000 front-seat passengers at 12 sites and found compliance above 70 percent at seven of the 12 test areas.

Pitt County motorists recorded the highest compliance at 79 percent, while those in Haywood County had the lowest rate at 55 percent. Other monitoring stations were in Fayetteville, Greensboro, Winston-Salem, and Lenoir, McDowell, Moore and Yancey counties.

Analyzed by region, 74 percent of coastal residents used seat belts, compared with 62 percent of mountain drivers and 73 percent in the Piedmont. The survey also showed that 74 percent of women observed used seat belts, compared with 65 percent for men.

IN THE STATE

Officers Sue

CONCORD, N.C. (AP) — Two Concord police officers are suing the city of Concord and its former police chief, claiming they were denied their civil rights to appeal their firings after they allegedly violated department policy.

According to reports, officers Joseph Warren Keller and Timothy R. Biggerstaff accepted video cassette recorders from a local video store owner after a break-in there four years ago. Keller said he had offered to pay for his; the owner said he would name a price later. Biggerstaff had received his from another officer.

The VCRs later showed up on an insurance report as being stolen. The reports cost Keller, Biggerstaff and two other officers their jobs for accepting gratuities and violating police department policy. It also prompted a criminal investigation that sent another officer, Roger Moss, to jail for three years.

Pope Visit

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Pope John Paul II's September visit to South Carolina will also draw busloads of North Carolina Catholics who want to see their spiritual leader, tour organizers say.

"This is a once-in-a-lifetime thing," said Leonard Johnson, a parishioner of St. Mary's Catholic Church in Wilmington, who is organizing a trip involving four buses. "It's not every day you get to see the pope."

Johnson said about 165 people have already ordered tickets to see the pope in Columbia, S.C., when he stops there as part of a nine-day, nine-city tour of the United States, beginning Sept. 10 in Miami.

The eastern North Carolina diocese of the church, which is based in Raleigh, has received 7,000 tickets to a prayer service the Pope will lead Sept. 11 in Columbia. Wilmington-area churches have ordered 300 of those tickets.

Holiday Traffic

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Seventeen people could lose their lives in North Carolina traffic accidents over the long Memorial Day weekend, the N.C. State Motor Club is predicting.

The club counts the holiday toll over a 78-hour period from 6 p.m. Friday, May 22, until midnight, Monday, May 25.

Last year 23 fatalities were recorded on North Carolina roads over the 78-hour period, while 19 deaths occurred in 1985, and 11 in 1984.

Less than 500 traffic fatalities have been recorded this year in North Carolina by the N.C. Division of Motor Vehicles, down from the 564 recorded at this time last year.

Resignation

ASHEVILLE (AP) — N.A. Miller, head of the Buncombe County school system since 1978, became the county's second superintendent to step down in two months when he submitted his letter of resignation Monday.

Miller, 63, offered no explanation in the letter read by school board chairman Vernon Dover, but said in an interview after the meeting that "it's time for a change."

"Nine and a half years is long enough," he said. "I am considering several options that I have and I look forward to some different challenges."

Miller's resignation, effective Aug. 1, follows Donald Jones' announcement in March that he planned to resign as superintendent of the Asheville city school system to become director of the Western Regional Education Center.

Baby Death

OXFORD, N.C. (AP) — An Oxford woman has been arrested in connection with the death of a newborn infant, whose body was found in a garbage can in February.

Darleen Brandon, who allegedly was the baby's mother, was arrested May 13 on charges of murder and felony concealment of a birth, said Oxford Police Capt. Glen Boyd.

Police became suspicious when Ms. Brandon, 27, went to a hospital Feb. 3 complaining of a miscarriage, authorities said. She was examined, and then investigators went to her home and found the infant's body in a kitchen trash can.

FARM HELPERS — Working in tobacco may seem like a chore fit only for adults but children also can lend a hand. Chris and Melisa Merritt of Jacksonville put in their hand for the family farm recently, bringing baskets to a plant bed as their parents reset their tobacco fields. (AP Laserphoto)

Texasgulf Seeks Reduction In $5.7 Million State Fine

By The Associated Press
Texasgulf Chemicals Co. has asked an administrative law judge to recommend that most of the state's record $5.7 million fine against the company not be imposed, the company's attorney says.

Texasgulf, which produces more than one million tons of fertilizer a year at its Beaufort County plant near Aurora, met Monday with administrative judge Robert Mellott and with state environmental lawyers in the first step in the company's legal battle against the fine.

The company was fined in December for 1,724 alleged violations of air-quality laws and regulations from 1983 to 1986 at its phosphorous mining and fertilizer plant near Aurora.

Texasgulf has challenged the fine, denying that it willfully violated air-quality standards and contending that some measures for which it was fined actually had improved air quality.

At Monday's meeting, lawyers for both sides agreed to postpone further work on the case until they filed briefs on two legal questions that could reduce the fine substantially, said Lucius Pullen, Texasgulf vice president for law and communications.

In a telephone interview, Pullen said the issues were whether the state could retroactively fine a company up to $5,000 a day for violations, and whether a one-year statute of limitations applies to the fines.

The company has argued before that many of the charges, dating back to 1983, fall under the statute of limitations.

Garbage Barge Still Held At Bay In N.Y.

NEW YORK (AP) — After eight weeks and thousands of miles, the skipper in charge of America's most famous load of garbage saw little to laugh about when the welcome mat at home was snatched away at the last minute.

"Every time we go someplace they turn it around," Capt. Duffy St. Pierre said Monday. "We'd like to go ashore. We're only human."

"I can half understand the people in the South hollering about New York garbage," said St. Pierre, whose barge and its 3,100-ton load was invited to return home last week when space was found for its load at an Islip landfill.

"But when you go right back to where you picked it up you don't expect 'em to jump all over you for it," he said.

Court challenges have prevented the barge from docking. It has been rejected for dumping by three countries and six states on a 6,000-mile journey.

On Monday, St. Pierre hosted a visit by four New York City health investigators and a sanitation officer, who examined the garbage.

A city sanitation worker found hospital waste on the barge and brought some back to the city for tests, although there were no obvious signs of infectious wastes, a spokesman said.

Representatives of the city Health

Department and the state Department of Environmental Conservation were to inspect the ship again today, said Health Department spokesman Marvin Bogner.

The barge was kept 700 yards south of the Verrazano-Narrows Bridge in New York Harbor after attorneys argued in court that it should not be docked until a resting place was found, payment was assured and the garbage was tested.

Earlier Monday, state Supreme Court Justice Angelo Graci granted the city's request for a two-day extension of a temporary order blocking the barge from docking in the borough of Queens pending the outcome of tests for toxic or infectious wastes.

City Councilwoman Susan Molinari obtained another state Supreme Court temporary restraining order Monday to prevent the barge from unloading its cargo on her borough of Staten Island, where the city has the Fresh Kills landfill.

The barge arrived in New York waters Saturday, but was blocked from docking at Queens, where it was to be unloaded into trucks.

The garbage was rejected by North Carolina, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas, Florida, Mexico, Belize and the Bahamas, after some officials said they believed toxic substances were in the garbage.

Preliminary testing did not reveal any putrefied material or other health hazards, state and city officials have said.

The refuse, consisting mostly of commercial trash and containing no municipal waste, was loaded onto the barge March 22. It came from the Long Island town of Islip, New York City and suburban Nassau County.

Falwell To Bakker: 'You're Not Coming, Back, Today Or Ever'

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Former PTL leader Jim Bakker says he has more support than ever and can raise the money to save the television ministry from bankruptcy, the Rev. Jerry Falwell said in a newspaper interview published today.

"He said, 'The ministry is going to go into bankruptcy under your leadership. I have more support than I have ever had. I can raise the money,'" Falwell told The Charlotte Observer on Monday.

Falwell — who had declared Bakker's ministry at the Fort Mill, S.C.-based PTL at an end during an April 28 news conference — said he told that directly to Bakker for the first time Sunday.

"I said, 'Jim, your friends no doubt are lending you support, and I'm glad they are. But in my opinion, you have lost credibility with the general public. If I were to allow you to come back to PTL, I would be betraying God and the general public. And you need to hear me say this, Jim. You are not coming back, today or ever.'"

Telephone calls by The Associated Press to Bakker's Palm Springs, Calif., home early today went unanswered.

Bakker resigned his posts as chairman and president of PTL in March after admitting a sexual encounter with a former 21-year-old church secretary in 1980. In 1985, PTL financed a secret $265,000 settlement to keep the secretary, Jessica Hahn, from suing and making her allegations public.

Before a PTL board meeting April 28, Bakker wrote Falwell, a fundamentalist, asking him to step down and let Bakker return to PTL.

Bakker also gave Falwell approval to arrange a meeting between Bakker and men who have accused him of homosexual conduct, Falwell said.

Alluding to Bakker's Sunday request that Falwell step aside, Falwell said he had told Bakker in mid-March that Bakker might one day return. But, he said, at that point he was unaware, among other things, of charges of homosexual conduct.

In the phone call, Falwell said, Bakker asked for the names of his four accusers. Falwell said he identified only one — a former PTL employee — because Bakker knew about him and had already chastised him by telephone.

Falwell told Bakker he believes the four men's charges. He has met with all four, he told The Observer.

Falwell offered to set up a meeting between Bakker and his accusers. If in that meeting, Falwell told Bakker, he could convince PTL's board that he was innocent, then Falwell would make that public.

"I would not say he was enthusiastic about it. I asked him point blank, 'Jim, are you willing to allow me to put this meeting together?' And his terse answer was, 'Go ahead.'"

Bakker's phone call to Falwell at home Sunday night apparently was spurred by news accounts of a $92 million diversion of PTL funds.

New IRS Tax Forms Show Only Slight Changes For Taxpayers

By JIM LUTHER
AP Tax Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service is taking the wraps off the first of about 240 new or rewritten tax forms required by the 1986 tax overhaul. For most Americans, it means no dramatic change in how they file their returns.

But there are enough differences between the old and new forms to affect every taxpayer to some extent. Even the simplest tax form, the single-page 1040EZ, had to be reworked to reflect increases in the standard deduction and personal exemptions and a new requirement affecting mainly students with part-time jobs.

There is some complication, for example, for taxpayers with losses from rental operations and for children under 14 with significant interest and dividends. And there is some simplification for perhaps 10 million couples and individuals who, because of the loss of some deductions, will find it unprofitable to continue itemizing.

"The forms are a reflection of what the Congress has given us," Arthur Altman, chairman of the tax-forms advisory committee at the IRS, told reporters Monday as the IRS released first drafts of eight revised forms and schedules.

They are: the basic individual forms, the long 1040, the short 1040A and the 1040EZ; Schedule A for itemized deductions; Schedule B for interest and dividends; Schedule D for capital gains; Schedule E for self-employment income, and Form 2106 for employee business expenses.

Even the most noticeable changes in forms — those requiring the listing of dependents — are hardly radical.

The old Forms 1040 and 1040A required the reporting of the first names of dependent children and the names of other dependents claimed. In an effort to stop cheating, the new versions shift some of the lines around and require the full names of all dependents plus the Social Security numbers of those over age 4.

And although Congress severely restricted the number of workers entitled to fully deductible Individual Retirement Accounts, the change is reflected on the new tax forms as simply a requirement that each spouse's IRA deduction be listed separately.

Altman said the IRS will begin testing the new forms soon among taxpayers and he expects some changes will be made after those tests are complete.

Altman estimated that the new tax law, most of which is taking effect this year, requires creation of about 40 new forms — only eight to 10 of them affecting individuals — and modifications in about 200 existing forms. Virtually every individual form will require some updating.

Altman was asked whether filing a return early next year on the new forms would be more difficult than it was this year. "It depends on how the 1986 tax law affected you," he replied.

That new law affects virtually every individual and business taxpayer in one way or the other. It cut tax rates significantly, raised the personal exemption and standard deductions and eliminated or reduced several itemized deductions.

The new law and the new forms give the IRS the capability for the first time of estimating how much tax-exempt interest is earned each year by Americans. Each of the three basic forms requires that tax-free interest be listed. That interest will not be taxed, although higher-income Social Security recipients will continue to use the figure in calculating how much of their Social Security is subject to tax.

Some other major changes:

—Schedule A, filed last year with 39 percent of all returns, has been revised to show repeal of the deduction for sales taxes; the phasing out of the writeoff for credit-card and other consumer interest; new limits on some new home-mortgage interest; restriction of the moving-expense deduction to those who itemize, and limiting most miscellaneous deductions, such as union dues and work clothes, to those that exceed 2 percent of adjusted gross income.

—Standard deductions, which formerly were listed as a "zero bracket amount" in the tax tables, will be stripped out of the tables and claimed on the basic form.

—Forms 1040 and 1040A have new lines and instructions to show that a person under age 14 who receives more than $1,000 of interest or other unearned income may now be taxed at the parent's tax rate. This will require as many as 800,000 children to file a new form, 8615, on which the tax is calculated.

—The forms reflect that a person — such as a student — who may be claimed as a dependent on another's return may no longer qualify for a personal exemption on his own return.

CAMPAIGN BEGINS — U.S. Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., reacts to the crowd as he announces his candidacy for the Democratic presidential nomination. Simon chose the campus of Southern Illinois University in Carbondale, Ill., to make his announcement Monday. (AP Laserphoto)

Simon Says Race Featuring More Emphasis On Trust

CARBONDALE, Ill. (AP) — Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois, formally joining the Democratic presidential field, said voters are paying more attention to his character following the Iran-Contra affair and the controversy that forced Gary Hart to quit the race.

"There is kind of a basic question that has been addressed by a series of things, both on our side and on the Republican side," said Simon, 58, after announcing his candidacy before about 1,500 supporters Monday.

"It goes to the fundamental question of can you trust whoever it is to be a leader. The Gary Hart thing is a part of that mood," Simon said, also citing the Iran-Contra affair.

Hart dropped out of the race after published reports said he spent time with a Miami woman while his wife was absent.

Simon made his announcement on the Southern Illinois University campus, a move aides said was meant to underscore his commitment to education. Later he made a campaign sweep in Iowa before returning to Carbondale for an evening fund-raiser.

In his speech, the freshman senator said 1988 "is not going to be the year for the candidate slickly packaged like some new soft drink."

Simon told supporters, many wearing lapel pins bearing a bow tie, his trademark, that his image is perfect for voters who are tired of image-oriented candidates.

"To become fashionable, some people tell me to get rid of my bow tie and my horn-rimmed glasses and — most of all — to change my views," Simon said.

He said he has picked up backers since Hart, who had been the front-runner, quit the race. "We're still way behind, but we're moving," said Simon. "We're ahead of most of the others who have been out there a long time."

A New York Times-CBS News poll released over the weekend showed Simon with the support of 5 percent of 453 registered voters surveyed who said they planned to participate in the Democratic primaries.

Aides agreed Simon is little known outside Illinois and said he must score well in early tests to establish himself as a national candidate.

Simon, born in Eugene, Ore., has spent most of his life in southern Illinois where he ran a group of small newspapers. He served in the state Legislature and as lieutenant governor, and was elected to the U.S. House in 1974 and the U.S. Senate in 1984.

In declaring his candidacy, he repeatedly stressed his theme that government must be involved in solving social and economic problems.

During interviews, Simon was reluctant to discuss Hart's problems but said he doesn't fear the kind of personal scrutiny which drove Hart from the race.

Rehnquist Expects New Appeals Court

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist predicted today that Congress eventually will create a new national appeals court to handle important cases that the Supreme Court is too busy to resolve.

Rehnquist said the proposal for the new court "has caused a good deal of debate and engendered considerable opposition. Any proposal which has engendered this much opposition will undoubtedly be more difficult to enact than that which achieves consensus."

But, he added, "I remain confident that in due course we will have a national court of appeals."

The proposal was urged by Rehnquist's predecessor, retired Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, and Rehnquist previously endorsed the idea.

Rehnquist, in a speech to the American Law Institute, compared the idea to building a new airport to ease overcrowding at an existing one.

He also said overcrowding at the Supreme Court could be relieved in part by diverting "some of the traffic ... to already established airports elsewhere."

Rehnquist referred to a form of appeals that the Supreme Court is barred by law from rejecting summarily without giving a reason.

He said Congress should repeal the law that places this burden on the court, giving it a free hand in turning down all appeals.

The justices hear arguments and issue signed opinions in approximately 150 cases each year, turning away thousands of other appeals without full-scale review.

"We are simply unable to take and decide many cases which raise important and undecided issues under the Constitution and the statutes of the United States," Rehnquist said.

General Dynamics Escapes Prosecution

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite grants of immunity, the Justice Department will not prosecute General Dynamics Corp. on allegations it cheated the government in construction of nuclear submarines, a department source says.

The source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Monday investigators could not find sufficient evidence to warrant prosecution of the nation's largest defense contractor.

The department planned to take the unusual step of announcing today that its investigation is closed and that it will not prosecute, the source said.

Patrick Korten, a department spokesman, declined to comment late Monday.

In March, the department revived the stalled investigation by granting immunity from prosecution to a company official and a retired executive, according to other federal law enforcement sources who also declined to be identified.

Those said to have been granted immunity were G. E. MacDonald, 60, a retired General Dynamics executive, and Arthur M. Barton, 56, vice president for finance and strategic planning at the company's Electric Boat division in Groton, Conn.

The department was investigating whether General Dynamics, based in St. Louis, defrauded the Navy out of hundreds of millions of dollars in the construction of nuclear attack submarines.

P. Takis Veliotis, an indicted former General Dynamics vice president who is a fugitive in Greece, refused to come to the United States for the investigation.

Veliotis insisted he would testify only if the U.S. government dropped unrelated kickback charges against him. Department officials wanted him to enter some kind of guilty plea.

The government was investigating Veliotis' assertions that General Dynamics submitted a false $843 million claim against the Navy for costs incurred in building submarines at Electric Boat in the 1970s.

The company says the claim, eventually settled for $534 million, reflected a legitimate cost stemming from design changes ordered by the Navy.

Veliotis, who replaced MacDonald as manager of the Electric Boat shipyard in 1977, fled to Greece in 1983 to escape prosecution on the unrelated kickback charges.

General Dynamics won defense contracts valued at $8 billion last year, making it the nation's largest defense contractor, according to the Pentagon.

Reconciliation

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Vicki and Danny Bennett couldn't settle for a small intimate ceremony when they remarried for the third time, or even for an ordinary big wedding with a church full of guests.

Instead, they were wed on 50,000-watt, clear-channel KAAY-AM early Sunday, and the radio evangelist who performed the service said the potential audience extended from Canada to Mexico.

The ceremony was broadcast during the Rev. Troy Snowden's religious program, which runs from midnight to 4:30 a.m. seven days a week.

Bennett, a truck driver, said he heard Snowden's program last winter and was motivated by his message to attempt a reconciliation with his former wife. The couple first married in 1972, were divorced, and remarried in 1976, a union that ended in divorce again 10 years later. They have two sons ages 8 and 12.

Kennedy Unveils Insurance Package

WASHINGTON (AP) — All employers would be required to offer a basic minimum package of health insurance benefits under a plan unveiled by Sen. Edward Kennedy, chairman of the Labor and Human Resources Committee.

Coverage would have to include hospital care, physician care, diagnostic tests, prenatal care and well-baby care, according to a statement the Massachusetts Democrat's office issued Monday in advance of a formal announcement today.

Some 37 million Americans have no insurance coverage; about two-thirds of that number are workers or dependents of workers, Kennedy's office said. An aide said the Kennedy bill would cover employees working at least 17.5 hours a week, along with their dependents.

Under the Kennedy proposal, employers would pay at least 80 percent of the premium for the coverage. For very low-wage workers, the employer share would be 100 percent. Small employers would be able to form larger insurance units to reduce costs.

Kennedy's office said the measure would reduce costs for "the vast majority of employers" who currently provide health insurance because they wouldn't have to subsidize charity care for uninsured or underinsured workers from other companies.

Contra Leader Says 'Foreign Sources' Gave Funds

By DAVID ESPO
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Adolfo Calero, the Nicaraguan rebel leader summoned to testify at congressional Iran-Contra hearings this week, plans to say his forces accepted money from foreign donors when Congress banned U.S. assistance.

"Yes, we set up front companies" to receive aid during the U.S. ban, Calero says in a copy of his opening statement made available in advance.

"We received monies from foreign sources; that was the only way to survive after U.S. aid was cut off by Congress."

Calero is expected to be the second witness to testify this week when the televised Iran-Contra hearings resume after a three-day weekend recess. The first man in the witness chair today was Robert W. Owen, who began answering questions last Thursday about his role as middleman between fired White House aide Lt. Col. Oliver L. North and the Contras.

Owen, who is testifying under a grant of limited immunity, described shuttling back and forth among North, a former deputy on the National Security Council, Calero and others involved in the effort to funnel aid to the Nicaraguan rebels when U.S. aid was officially banned from October 1984 to October 1986.

As Owen prepared to resume his testimony, The Wall Street Journal today quoted sources as saying that North personally cashed more than $2,000 in traveler's checks he received from Calero. Associates of North told the newspaper he didn't use the money himself.

One unidentified lawmaker the newspaper described as sympathetic to North was quoted as saying that investigators have learned that North used the traveler's checks to give a "bonus" of $1,000 to Owen when Owen was married more than a year ago.

Owen last week testified that he cashed traveler's checks provided by North to pay Contra leaders. Calero attorney Joseph Portuondo said in an interview that Calero was the source of about $75,000 in traveler's checks.

Following Owen and Calero, the joint House-Senate hearings are expected to hear either from retired

Gen. John Singlaub, who played a role in finding weapons for the Contras, or Robert C. Dutton. Dutton was a close associate of retired Air Force Maj. Gen. Richard V. Secord, who headed the secret resupply effort under the direction of North.

In his prepared remarks, Calero seems to liken congressional investigators to the Sandinista government in their effect on the Contras:

"In addition to the sea of troubles brought on Nicaraguans by the Sandinistas, we have been unfortunately dragged into an internal inquisition involving opposing views, technicalities and fine points of laws or amendments that we do not fully comprehend, and apparently neither does world opinion," he said.

He said the use of secret companies and third-nation contributions was necessary in a spirit of "self-preservation." Calero also is expected to put in a word of thanks for "patriotic Americans and citizens of other countries who understood our plight and the serious implications of our defeat."

The House-Senate Iran-Contra hearings are probing the secret sale of U.S. arms to Iran and the subsequent diversion of proceeds to the Contras battling the leftist Sandinista government. Although direct and indirect U.S. aid to the Contras was banned for two years, Secord testified earlier in the hearings that the Contras received about $3.5 million in arms sales proceeds during that time.

In other developments Monday:

—The House panel asked a federal judge to grant limited immunity to fund-raiser Carl R. Channel and public relations executive Richard Miller. Both men have pleaded guilty to charges brought by independent counsel Lawrence E. Walsh that they conspired illegally to use a tax-exempt foundation for a non-exempt purpose — raising funds to help provide arms to the Contras.

—Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., said President Reagan may have committed an impeachable offense if he acted under the assumption that he was exempt from the law that banned U.S. aid to the Contras. Reagan said Sunday the law did not apply to him, but added, "I have never done anything that encroaches on or violates it."

Portuguese President Says U.S. Curbs Harming Trade

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Portuguese President Mario Soares says his country's goal of expanded U.S. trade is being impaired by recent legislation that places strict curbs on Portuguese textile exports to the United States.

At the same time, National Security adviser Frank Carlucci says Portugal will be among a number of countries affected by an 8 percent cutback in a fiscal 1988 budget resolution passed by the Senate.

Soares, speaking Monday night at the opening of a four-day conference on Portugal at the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars, said he was dissatisfied with the state of Portuguese-American trade relations.

words, to Portugal," Soares said in his prepared remarks.

After Soares spoke, the chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., told the dinner gathering that during the 1974-76 struggle for democracy in Portugal, "no one provided greater cause for inspiration than Mario Soares, whose contribution was an elegant demonstration of the adage that one committed man can truly make a difference."

Soares was continuing his private visit here today, with separate meetings scheduled with Vice President George Bush and Secretary of State George Shultz.

During a meeting Monday morning, President Reagan and Soares discussed shortfalls in the U.S. aid program to Portugal caused by budgetary constraints.

Hours later, National Security adviser Frank Carlucci, a former ambassador to Portugal, warned of dire consequences if the Senate budget resolution for 1988, which calls for $132 million in cuts from the State Department request, is allowed to stand.

"If this level is sustained, it will be devastating," Carlucci said. "... We will have to reduce at least 50 percent or eliminate altogether programs in a number of key areas, including Africa, Central America, the moderate Arab states, South America, the Caribbean, and Spain and Portugal."

"Unfortunately, these programs are not being weighed on their merits," Carlucci added. "They are being held hostage to a much larger issue. But in engaging in this game of chicken, we are doing serious damage to our foreign policy."

Portugal is one of a number of allied countries where U.S. aid programs have been cut back by congressional budget cutters.

The United States is providing only $80 million of $125 million in military aid promised under a 1983 base agreement with Portugal. The administration asked for $221 million in overall aid for Portugal for the current year, but only $145 million has been allocated.

Hijacking Attempt Fails Fiji's Coup Leader Agrees To Plan For New Elections

By PETER O'LOUGHLIN
Associated Press Writer
SUVA, Fiji (AP) — Fiji's 6-day-old military regime appeared on the verge of collapse following an announcement today by the governor-general that the coup leader had agreed to call new elections and that coup participants would be pardoned.

Governor General Ratu Sir Penaia Ganilau, who represents head of state Queen Elizabeth II in this Commonwealth nation, issued a statement saying that coup leader Lt. Col. Sitiveni Rabuka also agreed Ganilau should exercise executive power.

Troops fired shots today to disperse supporters of the South Pacific nation's ousted government, the Australian Associated Press reported, but there was no word of any injuries.

It quoted four witnesses as troops fired two shots when a crowd of supporters of ousted Prime Minister Timoci Bavadra gathered near Bavadra's house and defied a soldier's orders to move away. The news agency said several people were struck by soldiers' rifle bullets.

A spokesman for the military office at the Queen Elizabeth Barracks expressed surprise at the AAP report.

Ganilau's statement was read today over army-controlled Fiji Radio by a woman announcer, who said Ganilau would pardon those involved in seizing power last Thursday from a month-old elected government.

"He (Ganilau) has taken this position in accordance with his judgment that no useful purpose would be served by vindictiveness, which might hinder the complete restoration of legitimacy," the announcer said.

The statement said Ganilau would appoint a council of advisors to assist him in administering the South Pacific nation until elections are held, but set no date.

There was no immediate comment from Rabuka, but the broadcast ended with the words: "This message has been endorsed by Lt. Col. Rabuka."

In other developments:

—A 6-hour-long hijacking ended at Nadi International Airport when three crewmen of an Air New Zealand jumbo jet overpowered a man who entered the plane while it was on the ground, said he had dynamite strapped to his body and demanded Rabuka release arrested members of the government he ousted. No injuries were reported.

—In Washington, State Department spokesman Charles Redman said two American journalists were detained for up to three hours by Fiji soldiers who seized some of their notes. He did not identify the reporters, but The Honolulu Star-Bulletin said one was its correspondent, Linda Hosek.

Shortly before Ganilau's broadcast, Fiji Radio reported what sounded like a valedictory speech by Rabuka to 7,000 army reservists.

The radio said Rabuka told the soldiers that death was the penalty for treason in all Commonwealth countries, and that he was ready to die for his actions.

"Brigadier Rabuka said he knew for a fact that he could not stay with the army after this. He said although this fact saddened him he hoped the support and allegiance soldiers had shown him so far would continue unabated," the broadcast said.

Rabuka, who was the third-ranking officer in the Fiji military before the coup, promoted himself to brigadier. He seized power Thursday when he and 10 soldiers burst into Parliament and arrested Bavadra and his 11-member Cabinet.

A crowd began to gather today in the main square in front of the building where the Great Council of Fijian Chiefs was to meet today to discuss the coup. The chiefs wield great influence in Fiji villages scattered over the 100 inhabited islands of the 300-island archipelago.

Some in the crowd of 2,000, blaming foreign press coverage for the apparent imminent failure of Rabuka's regime, punched and kicked several Australian journalists, including Associated Press photographer Russell McPhedran.

Soldiers forced a path through the crowd to rescue McPhedran, photo editor of the AP Sydney bureau.

Bavadra's government was elected April 11 and was the first since Fiji gained independence from Britain in 1970 to be dominated by ethnic Indians. Indians, who comprise 49 percent of the population of 715,000, traditionally have dominated the economy while ethnic Fijians, who make up 47 percent of the population, have controlled the government.

The election results sparked racial violence, and Rabuka had said he wanted to establish a new constitution that would guarantee ethnic Fijians control of the government.

Ganilau has been regarded as the chief obstacle to Rabuka consolidating his new regime. He refused to swear in a 16-member Council of Ministers appointed by Rabuka, consisting mainly of ministers of the Alliance Party government defeated in April's election.

A complicating factor has been the fact that Ganilau is Rabuka's paramount tribal chief. Under Fiji tradition, Rabuka cannot disobey or harm him without offending many Fijians.

Soviets Ship Space Cargo

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviets launched a cargo craft today loaded with supplies for the crew in the manned space station Mir, the official Tass news agency reported.

Tass said the Progress-30 cargo craft would deliver "expendable materials and various cargoes" to the orbiting Mir station, where cosmonauts Yuri Romanenko and Alexander Laveikin have been at work since February.

The Progress-30 is the third supply ship launched since Romanenko and Laveikin occupied the space station. Another cargo load, aboard the Progress-27, was launched in January before the two astronauts blasted off on their mission.

Tass said the cargo ship was "functioning normally" after launch this morning. The news agency did not give any more details about the contents of the Progress-30 or when it was expected to dock with Mir.

Australia Closes Libyan Embassy

CANBERRA, Australia (AP) — Prime Minister Bob Hawke today ordered Libya to close its embassy here, charging its staff had engaged in unspecified "clandestine activity" in Australia and the South Pacific.

He gave diplomats at the embassy, called the Libyan People's Bureau, 10 days to leave the country.

Hawke said the Libyans had engaged in "clandestine activity which has become more intense during the course of the year."

"The government has previously voiced concern about the nature and direction of Libyan activities in the South Pacific region," Hawke said. "Libya has begun to intrude into our domestic affairs, too."

He gave no specifics. Hawke's announcement followed controversy over a visit by an Australian aborigine to a "revolutionary" meeting in Tripoli last month held by Libyan leader Col. Moammar Gadhafi.

The aborigine, lawyer Michael Mansell, told the Tripoli conference he needed support to establish an aboriginal nation within Australia. Australian press reports said Gadhafi offered to provide financial support for a revolution.

In recent weeks, Australian officials said Libya has provided funding to rebels in New Guinea and separatists on the French territory of New Caledonia in the South Pacific, about 1,000 miles east of Australia.

More recently, the island nation of Vanuatu, north of New Caledonia, said Libya had offered foreign aid.

Syrians Arrest Druse Official

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Syrian troops arrested a Moslem Druse militia official and eight aides suspected in more than 100 dynamite attacks in west Beirut since February, a newspaper reported today.

Police reported three more explosions during the night when unidentified gunmen tossed bundles of dynamite from a speeding car in three different neighborhoods.

The blasts, like the previous ones, caused no casualties or serious damage, police said.

In a separate development, a four-story apartment building collapsed this morning in west Beirut, killing at least 12 people, injuring one person and trapping several others, authorities said. Beirut's mayor said digging at an adjacent construction site caused the collapse.

The An-Nahar daily said authorities arrested Imad Saab, also known as Abu Sheib, on suspicion of being the leader behind the dynamite attacks. He is a security official in the Progressive Socialist Party of Druse warlord Walid Jumblatt.

The newspaper quoted Brig. Gen. Ghazi Kanaan, Syria's military intelligence chief in Lebanon, as saying Abu Sheib had engineered 108 bombings in predominantly Moslem west Beirut in recent weeks. Kanaan did not identify the arrested aides or say when the arrests took place.

The saboteurs apparently have been seeking to discredit Syria's effort to stop militia warfare in west Beirut. Syria deployed 7,500 soldiers and hundreds of plainclothes security men in the Moslem sector on Feb. 22.

Understanding Tribal Language

At Wits End
 Erma Bombeck

No one communicates better than Americans. Maybe it's because we were born to a free and open society that permits us to express exactly how we feel. That and the fact that we all share a universal language.

There are possibly only two exceptions to the universal language theory. One was an elderly neighbor of ours from Mississippi who didn't have a tooth in his head. The other exception is communication between women and their hairdresser. Few can speak the tribal language fluently.

I've seen women sit in chairs and, using every bit of body language they can move, say, "I want a pouf here and then wave it around to hump over the ear and make this glob go back with a soft tapered swirl so this bunch of hair can go choo choo into a bang. Do you know what I mean?"

It's a time when vagueness is sent out to do battle with a man with a razor blade in his hand.

Even simple instructions like how much hair to cut off is lost to ambiguity. When a customer says, "Just take a little off," "a little" means nothing to a man who buys shampoo by the case and cotton by the bale. "Even it up" is even worse. Even it up to what?

Throughout the years, there is possibly only one phrase that is mutually understood by hairdresser and customer alike. That is, "It'll grow out." I don't know why, but it seems to make everyone feel better.

Some women have given up on the language altogether. They communicate by pictures ripped out of magazines. They sit in the chair, take the picture out of their billfold, point to it and then say clumsily, "Me Victoria Principal too! Comprehend?" If there is extreme laughter, it is wise to fold it and put it back in your billfold until another day.

A risky form of exchange is the expression, "I'm bored." This is interpreted by hairdressers to mean, "This is a good time to try out the Madonna look," where they apply three primary colors to the hair and use a saber and pinking shears to cut it.

Once when I was in another city away from my regular hairdresser, I needed a trim and said to the woman, "Surprise me." This is another phrase that should never be tossed around lightly. She interpreted the "S" word to mean "shock," and for three months I looked like George Shultz with a migraine.

Hairdressers are professional. We wouldn't presume to tell our doctors how to stitch, our lawyers how to write a brief or a priest how to do his job. Yet we try to give explicit instructions to a man or woman who only knows three words in English: "It'll grow out."

Verbal Blunder Embarrassing

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: In all the years I've been reading your column, I've never come across a problem like mine. Maybe you or one of your readers have been in a similar situation and can tell me how to get over this nagging, regrettable experience.

Last summer I went to my 50th high school reunion. It was wonderful seeing classmates I hadn't seen in many, many years. We had the banquet at the country club, and each person was asked to stand and give a 50-second verbal resume of what he or she had done in the last 50 years. That was pretty tough for me because I never could talk in front of a lot of people.

I started out OK, telling about how I married my childhood sweetheart right after graduation, went to live on a farm (which I loved), and even after my husband's heart attack less than a year ago, he was now working hard as ever. I said we were building a golf course that I hoped we could finish — if I didn't kill him first! Everyone laughed. I sat down real fast when I realized what I had said. I was devastated all evening and ever since, because I had meant to say "if he didn't kill HIMSELF first" (from all that hard work).

I can't forget that terrible blunder and I'm wondering what my classmates must have thought of me. The next day, I tried to tell a few people what I really meant, but I just couldn't.

Abby, how would you have handled it? — DEVASTATED IN MINNESOTA

DEAR DEVASTATED: I would have pretended that what I had said, I had said in jest — which obviously is the way it was perceived by your classmates. Please, don't give this another moment's thought. I can assure you, none of your classmates have.

DEAR ABBY: I am a fairly attractive 16-year-old female. I have, I think, a good personality. I do have a problem, however. I have a "mustache." I am of Lithuanian descent and have fairly dark skin. I don't really need advice on how to get rid of it because I am already familiar with most of the methods — both permanent and temporary. But what does one say to people who comment, "Did you know you have a mustache?" — MUSTACHED

DEAR MUSTACHED: You appear to be quite comfortable and self-accepting of your mustache. Congratulations.

You ask what one says to people who comment, "Did you know you have a mustache?" Look that person squarely in the eye and say, "Yes. And thank you for reminding me."

DEAR ABBY: Would it not be a safeguard and a good protection against murder for all persons with AIDS to be forced by law to be branded, tattooed or made to wear a bracelet so their condition would be obvious immediately? That way there would be no danger of having sex with them. — D.B. IN COCOA BEACH, FLA.

DEAR D.B.: AIDS is an incurable disease — not a crime. And your suggestion is inhumane, and in itself a crime against the dignity of humanity.

Most Valuable

Magic Johnson Named Most Valuable In NBA

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Earvin "Magic" Johnson plans on telephoning Boston's Larry Bird to express his gratitude to the Celtics forward for "helping" him win the NBA's Most Valuable Player award. The gesture hardly seems necessary. "I should thank Larry Bird for having a slightly off-season," Johnson said with a smile Monday at a news conference after his selection as MVP. "I'm going to call him up and thank him. "I've got to catch up with him." Ever the team player, Johnson, who now trails Bird 3-1 in MVP awards, quickly added, "We don't battle each other for individual awards, we battle each other for NBA championships." Such might be the case in a couple of weeks if the Lakers beat Seattle in the Western Conference finals and the Boston Celtics get past Detroit in the Eastern Conference finals. Johnson, who averaged a career-high 23.9 points a game this season and led the league in assists for the fourth time in the last five years with a 12.2 average, received 65 first-place votes and a total of 733 points from the media panel. Michael Jordan of Chicago, the NBA's leading scorer, had 10 first-place votes and 449 points to finish second. Bird, the MVP the last three years, had one first-place vote and 271 points to finish third. The only other first-place votes went to Charles Barkley of Philadelphia, who finished sixth in the voting, and Akeem Olajuwon of Houston, who was seventh. The 6-foot-9 Johnson is the first guard to win the award in 23 years and only the third since the award was started in 1956. The others were Boston's Bob Cousy in 1957 and Cincinnati's Oscar Robertson in 1964. "This award I dedicate ... it belongs to my father," Johnson said. "I'm living for him, in a sense, playing in the NBA. I'm going to give this to him. I hope he'll be proud. I know he will. "It's really nice. I don't know how to express my feelings ... I feel really good." The Lakers posted a 65-17 record, best in the NBA, and have won eight of their nine playoff games. They lead Seattle 1-0 in the conference finals. Johnson's scoring average was 10th-best in the league and he shot 52.2 percent from the field and 84.8 percent from the free-throw line. He also led the Lakers with 138 steals and was third with 6.3 rebounds per game. Although Johnson is only 27, he is completing his eighth season with Los Angeles, having turned pro after leading Michigan State to the NCAA title as a sophomore in 1979. "This is more than I ever dreamed of," he said. "I think I'm still living the dream now. I hope I never wake up. It's like a fairy tale ... It just took off. Eight years ago, I never thought I'd walk in and win a championship and it's gone from there." The Lakers are shooting for their fourth NBA championship since Johnson joined them. They won titles in his rookie year, 1980, as well as 1982 and 1985. In addition, they reached the finals in 1983 and 1984, when they lost to Philadelphia and Boston, respectively. Los Angeles was beaten by Houston in the Western Conference finals last season. Before this season, Johnson was asked by Coach Pat Riley of the Lakers to contribute more on offense than he had in the past. "It was something that had to be done to make us a better team," Johnson said. "He asked me to score and that's what I did. He told me I just had to go for it, look for my shot a little more. "I didn't change my game. It didn't disrupt the team cohesiveness. Everybody accepted it." Johnson acknowledged that Riley's request, and his compliance, had a lot to do with his winning the award. "I always thought I would never win it," Johnson said. "I didn't know what it took to win the award. I always felt I had to score more if I had a chance to win. "I wanted to win it, yes, as long as it was in the team concept. The championship is more important. "I didn't deserve to win it (before). I think Larry deserved it the last three years. Everybody that won deserved it. I didn't deserve it. I'm happy to win it this year, though. Everything went well. I guess it was my turn." Johnson was also the only player named on all 78 ballots by the voters, who were asked to vote for the league's top five players. Following Johnson, Jordan and Bird in the top 10 were Kevin McHale of Boston, Dominique Wilkins of Atlanta, Barkley, Olajuwon, Isiah Thomas of Detroit, Lafayette Lever of Denver and Moses Malone of Washington. Johnson's best scoring average prior to this season was 21.6 in 1980-81 when was limited to 37 games because of a knee injury. His second-best scoring average before this season was 18.8 last year.

Pirates Face Seminoles In Opening Round Game

East Carolina's baseball Pirates will travel to Tallahassee, Fla., to face Florida State in the first round of the NCAA Regional Baseball Tournament Thursday. The Pirates, who won the Colonial Athletic Association, will face the Seminoles in a 7 p.m. game Thursday on FSU's home field in the Atlantic Regional. Florida State, the top seeded team in the field and eighth-ranked nationally, brings in a 50-15 record while the Pirates are 26-15. Miami, Fla., 35-21, and Georgia Southern, 31-28, will open the double elimination event at 11 a.m. Thursday, followed at 3 p.m. by South Alabama, 36-28, and Central Michigan, 39-13. Play will continue on Friday with three more games, with another three scheduled for Saturday. The finals are scheduled for Sunday. The winner of the tournament will advance to the College World Series, to be held at Omaha, Neb., starting May 29.

All East Carolina games will be broadcast locally over WRQR-FM, 94.3 on the dial. Frank Gardina will handle the play-by-play. Florida State's offense is led by Steve Taddeo, who played in 58 games and is hitting .361. He has 2 homers and 39 RBI playing both as right fielder and designated hitter. Ed Fulton, the catcher, has played in 64 games, and is hitting .360. He has 15 homers and 60 RBI. The home run leader is Jose Marzan who is hitting .326 in 65 games with 16 homers and 63 RBI. The top pitcher for the Seminoles is Richie Lewis, 14-2, with a 3.10 ERA, and 165 strikeouts. He started the final game of the College World Series last year and is expected to go in the first round of the professional draft. Next in line for the Seminoles is Jerry Nielsen, 9-2, 3.49 ERA, with 97 strikeouts. The Seminoles won the Metro Conference tournament last week to qualify for the regionals.

Clancy Continues Streak With Shutout Of Angels

By The Associated Press The Angels are having a devil of a time with Jim Clancy. So is the rest of the American League. The Toronto right-hander won his fifth straight game, blanking California 12-0 on two hits Monday night. That raised Clancy's lifetime record against the Angels to 11-5. He's 6-2 overall this season and hasn't lost in a month. The Blue Jays gave Clancy plenty of support, building a 5-0 lead on a three-run homer by Ernie Whitt and a two-run shot by Lloyd Moseby. Then they put together a seven-run seventh inning, getting all of the runs with none out. "Well, I'm on a roll now," Clancy said. "I'm able to hit corners and throw my fastball with good velocity. They like to swing the bat. That helps you out. Everything feels good now. I was able to hit the corners with both my fastball and slider, which is what I throw mostly." "I'm able to throw whatever pitch I want wherever I want to." The only Angels to get hits were Mark McLemore in the sixth and Devon White in the seventh. "He is in the upper echelon among the pitchers we face," California's Brian Downing said. "All he has to do is throw his glove out there and we're in trouble. Combine that with 12 runs and you know it will be a rough night." Also having a rough Monday night were the Seattle Mariners, who managed just three hits off Mike Boddicker in a 6-0 loss to Baltimore. The Orioles hit two homers, giving them a record 32 in 11 consecutive games. In other AL games, it was New York 2, Oakland 1; Detroit 6, Texas 3; and Kansas City 4, Boston 2. In his last start, Clancy had problems after a rally similar to Monday night's. At Minnesota, Clancy had a one-hitter through seven innings, but his shoulder stiffened after a long rally and he had to be removed after getting only one more out. "I was thinking about that, and went out wondering if I did stiffen up again. But it felt all right," Clancy said.

CMS To Protect Mother Goose

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Charlotte Motor Speedway officials are willing to go the extra mile to protect an invited feathered guest and her offspring from a half million fans who will attend races at the track in May. In late April, track spokesman Mel Poole explains, drivers in a go-cart race complained that they were being attacked by a Canada goose. "We had to stop the race two times because the goose was running out on the track at the drivers," Poole said. It was then that track officials noticed the nest and six eggs. "The nest is right in the infield near the race course," Poole said. "We're going to have to do something." Plans call for the construction of a protective structure to shield the goose and her eggs from the 500,000 fans who will invade the track for several events this month, including this Sunday's Coca-Cola 600 stock car race. "We may erect a fence and possibly even hire a security guard to patrol the area," he said. "It's readily visible on the infield."

The bird's safety is on the minds of everyone at the track because NASCAR drivers are practicing for Sunday's race. More than a few drivers have expressed their concern for the bird's plight. "The drivers are very interested in protecting them," Poole said. "We're doing goose updates." Track officials are considering ways to inform the fans about the nest. "We hope we can appeal to people's better instincts to leave them alone," Poole said. "We may put the word out on the public address system or hand out leaflets." Poole said as far as he knew this was the first time that a Canada goose has ever decided to nest at the race track. But after investigating the matter, he said it really shouldn't have come as a big surprise. "Apparently we're located right on their migratory path," he said. Everyone who has come into contact with the goose has been trying to figure out ways to protect it and its eggs, Poole said. "We look at it as an asset," he said. "This is not an inconvenience."

Mother Goose Race driver Robbie Faggart finds out the hard way how protective a mother can be. The Canada goose recently laid six eggs on the infield of the Charlotte Motor Speedway, only days before the first of several races at the track. Track officials announced plans for a protective structure to shield the mother and her eggs from some 500,000 fans expected at the track this month. (AP Laserphoto)

Mets Beginning To Look Hapless

By HERSCHEL NISSENON
AP Sports Writer
"Can't Anybody Here Play This Game?" was the title of a book about the lovable, losable 1962 New York Mets, who lost a record 120 games in their first season. Perhaps it's time for a sequel.

Seeking to get well against the hapless San Diego Padres, the struggling Mets looked like anything but world champions Monday night, committing four errors and bowing 7-5. It was their 18th loss in the last 28 games.

"We were sloppy," said Manager Davey Johnson, whose club is six games from the top of the National League East and only one game ahead of the last-place Philadelphia Phillies, who beat Los Angeles 5-3. "Our defense is hurting, but we are not pitching up to capabilities. That's our biggest problem."

Loser Ron Darling gave up four runs, three earned, and six hits in five innings as his earned run average climbed to 5.57.

"I'm not sure what Darling's problems are," Johnson said. "He was sloppy. We were sloppy."

Catcher Barry Lyons made a wild pickoff throw in the first inning, John Kruk's single skipped past left fielder Kevin McReynolds in the third as a run scored and shortstop Rafael San-tana's second error helped the Padres increase their lead to 5-0 in the sixth.

"Santana usually makes the plays," Johnson said. "We were sloppy on defense, but I don't get angry about errors."

Pittsburgh 4-1 and Montreal defeated San Francisco 7-2.

New York and San Diego made a seven-player deal during the off-season and some of the principals played prominent roles in the outcome Monday night. The Padres' Stan Jefferson was 3-for-5 with three stolen bases and Kevin Mitchell was 2-for-4 with an RBI while the Mets' McReynolds was 0-for-4.

"For the Mets, the deal is for now and for the next two or three years. They got an established player," Jefferson said. "The Padres are looking for the future. In the long run, with the young guys we have, we'll be all right."

Ironically, errors by Jefferson and Mitchell each cost the Padres two runs. Dave Dravecky had a shutout until center fielder Jefferson's two-out error in the sixth inning preceded Darryl Strawberry's 10th homer. And third baseman Mitchell booted a grounder with two out in the ninth as two runs scored.

Despite the Mets' problems, they had a chance to win in the ninth, putting runners at first and third with two outs after Mitchell's error. But McReynolds popped up on a 3-0 pitch from Lance McCullers with Strawberry on deck.

"I'd do it again," Johnson said about giving McReynolds the green light. "But he wasn't very selective. He went after a bad pitch. I thought he'd know better."

The Padres, with the worst record in the majors, won for only the 10th time in 40 games.

"I hope the next 10 are easier than the first 10," rookie Manager Larry Bowa said.

Astros 4, Pirates 1

Dickie Thon's two-run homer helped Mike Scott, who pitched a three-hitter, beat the Pirates for only the third time in 11 career decisions. He struck out eight, walked two and didn't allow a hit after Sid Bream singled to lead off the fourth inning.

Since a 2-1 loss to the Mets on April 29, when he was periodically checked on orders from NL President A. Bartlett Giamatti to see if he was scuffing the ball, Scott said the umpires have been leaving him alone.

"After the league said they'd be checking me more, I've been checked less," he said. "It got a little ridiculous there for a while. They've been checking me for 2½ years, and if they want to keep checking me, they can."

That never crossed the mind of Pirates Manager Jim Leyland.

"I don't even care if he is doing it," Leyland said. "If he's doing it, we ought to be teaching it to all our pitchers because I know he's one great pitcher. We had some well-hit balls and stole four bases and we got one run. That's a credit to him."

The Astros took a 2-0 lead in the third inning on Phil Garner's RBI single and Kevin Bass' triple. Glenn Davis singled off Bob Kipper in the fourth before Thon, who had one hit in nine previous at-bats this season, hit his first home run since last Sept. 3.

Expos 7, Giants 2

Neal Heaton pitched a six-hitter for Montreal's first complete game of the season and helped his own cause with a two-run single as the Expos stretched their winning streak to four games and climbed over .500 for the first time this season.

The Giants, who have lost six of their last seven, took a 2-1 lead in the second inning on Bob Melvin's two-run homer. But the Expos scored four times against Kelly Downs in the third to regain the lead. Montreal got RBI doubles from Andres Galarraga and Vance Law plus Heaton's infield hit, a chopper up the middle that shortstop Matt Williams fielded behind second base as two runs scored. Heaton also doubled and scored in the eighth.

Phillies 5, Dodgers 3

Philadelphia pitcher Bruce Ruffin starred with his bat as well as his arm. His two-run double and a two-run triple by Von Hayes keyed a five-run sixth inning as Philadelphia handed the Los Angeles its fifth straight loss.

Ruffin allowed seven hits in 7 2-3 innings before Steve Bedrosian came on for his sixth save. Loser Rick Honeycutt went 5 2-3 innings, allowing eight hits. All the Philadelphia runs were all unearned because of an error by Los Angeles third baseman Bill Madlock.

With the Dodgers leading 1-0 on Pedro Guerrero's RBI single in the first inning, Mike Schmidt opened the Phillies' sixth with a single and reached second when Madlock threw high trying for a forceout after fielding Glenn Wilson's grounder.

After Lance Parrish fouled out, Chris James singled to tie the score. Madlock fielded Luis Aguayo's smash and forced Wilson at third but Ruffin, who got his first hit of the season when he singled in the fifth, doubled to right over a shallow outfield, scoring James and Aguayo. Milt Thompson walked and Hayes tripled, making it 5-1 and chasing Honeycutt.

"I kept looking at tapes of last year's games," said Ruffin, who hadn't been pitching well. "I watched three or four different games and then compared them with tapes of this year's games. I got a mental picture of what I did last year as against what I was doing now and worked on imitating last year's style. I noticed that last year I had a short leg kick, this year a long one."

Woody Peele

For Colonial Athletic Association commissioner Tom Yeager, now ending his second year, one big question comes up for next year — is there life after David Robinson?

Unless you've been hiding in a coal mine somewhere, you know that Robinson was a near unanimous choice as the Player of the Year nationally out of the CAA's Navy.

But Robinson, who brought a ton of prestige and recognition to the CAA is gone now, and there is no one about to step into his big shoes on the horizon.

"It's a big challenge to replace the premier player in the country," Yeager said. "His presence created a lot of prestige and notoriety for the conference and I think we will benefit from that for years."

In his two years as commissioner, Yeager has presided over its emergence from the old ECAC-South as an independent league with four automatic berths into the NCAA tournaments — men's and women's basketball, soccer and baseball.

"I think the conference is more solidified as a unit now," Yeager said. "Having the basketball tournament at Hampton (a neutral site) and the baseball (in Richmond — also on a neutral field) has helped the league. I think the schools have a sense of conference membership now too. And we are developing some rivalries within it."

Yeager says he wants to see a continued growth pattern for the conference, which currently sponsors some half-dozen plus championships. At this point, however, he sees no new championships on the horizon. "The bylaws say we must have at least six teams participating to have a championship. The only other sport close is men's track. That's a possibility in the next few years."

"We want to firmly establish our basketball tournament, make it a paying event. We need to get more organized in our support of it, and gain more recognition for the conference, too."

Yeager said he was happy with the television contract with Home Team Sports for its basketball coverage. "That helps all our schools," he said.

The commissioner added that while work still needs to be done to improve the basketball tournament situation, it did show more of a profit at Hampton in a neutral site situation than the year before when the first round was played at four home sites and then finished at another school site.

"We are committed to making it go at a neutral site. I think people want it that way. We want to make it more of a social event, something the fans can really enjoy. And we like the Saturday, Sunday, Monday format too. It allows the fans to see six of the seven games without missing any work."

He is also pleased with the way the baseball tournament went in Richmond this past weekend. "It's a real plus for the kids to play in this type of facility," he said.

And, too, he's happy with the plan to expand to allow all six teams to participate. "It's better when everyone comes to the party," he said.

And one team that liked it especially was James Madison, which wouldn't have even been at the tournament under the old four-team format. Madison went to the finals of the tournament through the winners' bracket before finally losing to East Carolina which rallied for a two-game sweep on Sunday.

Everette's.....8

Wachovia.....7

William Gibbs' RBI single brought home Jamie Brewington with the winning run in the top of the seventh to give Everette's a 8-7 win over Wachovia in a Babe Ruth League baseball game Monday.

With Wachovia leading 7-6 after six innings of play, Everette's started its rally with a single by Patrick Joyner, who stole second and went to third on a wild pitch before scoring on a fielding error that allowed Brewington to reach.

Jonathan Powers followed with a single before Gibbs came up and drove in Brewington with what would be the game-winning shot.

Wachovia got two men on in the bottom of the seventh but couldn't get a man home.

Joyner and Gibbs had two hits apiece to lead Everette's.

NASCAR To Investigate

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — NASCAR officials and representatives of five driving teams that were involved in several different altercations during and after The Winston will meet Tuesday night in Charlotte, N.C., the organization announced Monday.

Sunday's 10-lap, $200,000 race at the Charlotte Motor Speedway was won by Dale Earnhardt.

But front-row starters Bill Elliot and Geoff Bodine collided in the first turn after the start for the first altercation.

The second confrontation occurred when Elliott, who cut a tire in a collision with Earnhardt in turn four on the fourth lap, hit Earnhardt's car on the back stretch during the cool-down lap, then moved in front of him on pit road as Earnhardt drove toward victory lane. The crews of the two drivers exchanged heated words as well.

The third was when Kyle Petty and Rusty Wallace got into a fight in the garage area after the race and the two had to be separated by Kyle's father, Richard Petty, as the action on the track carried over after the race had ended.

"At the meeting, a thorough review of videotapes of incidents that occurred both during and after the conclusion of the race will be made," NASCAR said in a release.

"NASCAR officials will determine what steps should be taken to prevent such incidents from occurring the future."

"This meeting is necessary to gather more information since tempers were flaring and emotions were high immediately following the event," NASCAR President Bill France, Jr. said.

ABC 'Comedy Awards' Pokes Fun At Other Awards Shows

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — You'd think we need another awards show like we need another fad diet. Nevertheless, here comes the first annual "The American Comedy Awards" on ABC.

George Schlatter, who thought up the whole thing and is executive producer, was asked why.

He laughed and said, "There are a lot of awards shows and they all take themselves so seriously. We need another one to make fun of all the others." Schlatter also feels strongly that the country's comic talent is overlooked in other awards shows.

"It's a serious award but it's a funny show," he said. "The selection of the nominees was by comedians and the voting was by comedians. And Mark Russell is coming out to talk about the unsung comedians in Washington."

Schlatter has had a lot of experience poking fun at sacred cows. He was the creative mover behind "Laugh-In," the first truly innovative comedy show on television. In a less humorous vein, he came up with "Real People." This fall he has a new syndicated show called "The Laugh Machine."

"The American Comedy Awards" will be telecast live Tuesday night on ABC from the Hollywood Palladium. Lily Tomlin is host of the two-hour show, which will honor the top comic performers.

Every comedy performer who worked in 1986 was eligible for the awards. The nominees and the winners were selected by ballots submitted to 700 comedy performers.

"When you've got all those crazy comedians locked in the Palladium for two hours you don't know what they're liable to say," said Schlatter. "Sam Kinnison is among those nominated. If he wins I'd love to hear his acceptance. He was bleeped on 'Saturday Night Live.' So we have a censor standing by with a bleep button. I can't even say her name — it would get bleeped."

The censor is Susan Futterman, from ABC's Standards and Practices, who has the unenviable task of trying to anticipate anything that might offend the airwaves.

There are a few special awards. Norman Lear will receive the first annual American Comedy Award for lifetime achievement. Harvey Korman will receive the Top Banana Award, which is the Timmy. The award will actually be Tim Conway.

Among those who will be on the show are Bette Midler, Whoopi Goldberg, Robin Williams, Carol Burnett, Betty White and David Letterman. Bobcat Goldthwaite will read the rules of the voting.

"I think this show is long overdue," said Schlatter. "Films, television, cable, night clubs are all supported by standup comics. Yet they rarely get any attention. I think the standup comic today is in the position where rock stars were in the 1960s. The focus today is on the little clubs and the comics."

"Back when I was booking talent for night clubs there were probably only 200 comics in the whole country. Today there are probably 2,000 people making a living in comedy. Comedy clubs are proliferating all over the country."

Schlatter said he began thinking about the lack of recognition for comedians when he began work on "The Laugh Machine."

"We spent two years taping every standup performance," he said. "We have a great library of talent."

Fox Lists Guest Hosts

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Songwriter Carol Bayer Sager will replace Joan Rivers at "The Late Show" when a new guest-host format begins Friday, but otherwise the show will look the same, Fox Broadcasting Co. said.

Other guest hosts next week will be Suzanne Somers on Monday, George Carlin on Wednesday and Buck Henry on Friday, said Brad Turell, Fox Broadcasting vice president for publicity.

Sager, who has never hosted a talk show before, will inaugurate the new format. But Turell said Monday that aside from the different hosts the show will look the same.

Negotiations were continuing with representatives of Miss Rivers for her role as "permanent guest host," the same function she previously performed on NBC's "Tonight Show," said Michael Binkow, Fox vice president for corporate communications.

"Discussions on details of her future role on the show continue amicably," said Turell.

Sager's guest will be her husband and collaborator, composer Burt Bacharach, said Linda Dozoretz, spokeswoman for the songwriters. The couple won an Academy Award in 1981 for "Arthur's Theme" and a Grammy this year for "That's What Friends Are For."

Meantime, Fox has scheduled reruns with guest hosts through Thursday.

Shopping Channels Booming On Cable

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Shopping from home is cable television's hottest sensation, offering viewers bargains on everything from safaris in Africa to upscale brand-name fashions.

The fledgling industry has roared full speed ahead since Home Shopping Network launched a nationwide service in 1985, executives said Monday at the National Cable Association's annual convention here.

Today, Home Shopping's two networks reach 15 million of cable's 40 million households and there are at least 15 other nationwide shopping services available. Last year they generated about $450 million in orders and are expected to hit $2 billion this year.

"It's a form of retailing we've never seen before," said Larry Gerbrandt, an analyst for Paul Kagan Associates, a Carmel, Calif., media research and investment firm. "And it does work."

Most shopping channels give viewers a video sampling of their products and a toll-free telephone number for orders.

Though there have been some casualties among the home shopping services and more are expected, analysts say the industry can accommodate more players.

One new entry is The Travel Channel, launched in February by TWA Marketing Services Inc., a wholly owned subsidiary of Trans World Airlines. Channel officials say it will reach 7 million subscribers by the end of June and they expect to turn a profit by the end of the year.

"Cable operators always assumed somebody would do a travel channel, but it wasn't economically feasible until we came up with the idea of combining with the home-shopping concept," Jim Trecek, executive vice president of the channel, said.

A channel devoted exclusively to travel might not generate enough advertising, he said, noting that ad-supported cable channels usually take about five years to become profitable. Shopping channels have made profits in one to two years.

The around-the-clock channel takes its viewers around the world — from ancient tombs in China to the jungles of Africa to pastures in England. Viewers are offered travel packages that while not always bargains usually include something extra, like a car rental deal.

The Los Angeles-based Fashion Channel, another new entrant, expects to begin operations 12 hours a day in August with 5 million subscribers.

Back Yard Park

Millions of Americans will flock to national parks for vacations this summer. Most national parks cover many square miles of empty wilderness. But one "national park" is only six feet square. In the 1950s, Gene Fowler, a Los Angeles reporter, built a garden behind his home and named it "St. Agnes National Park" in memory of his wife. Fred Seaton, U.S. Secretary of the Interior under President Eisenhower, actually dedicated this "unofficial" national park.

 Don't commit yourself to a line of play until it is absolutely necessary. Sometimes you can afford to take your tricks as they come and see what develops.

With just a single stopper in the enemy suit and a hand that he judged too strong for a one no trump overall, North elected to double first and then invite with two no trump. South felt that his six-card suit and singleton merited trying for the suit game.

West led a low club, and declarer was not sure he liked his contract or how to proceed. He decided he would simply take what tricks he could and see what transpired. So he took three high clubs, discarding two spades from hand, cashed the ace of spades and ruffed a spade.

Since West was marked with most of the high cards, declarer continued with a low diamond. Rising with the ace would only have solved South's problems for him, so West played low and the queen won. Declarer used his entry to ruff another spade, and then he led a trump.

West perforce won the ace, and whatever he chose to do would help declarer.

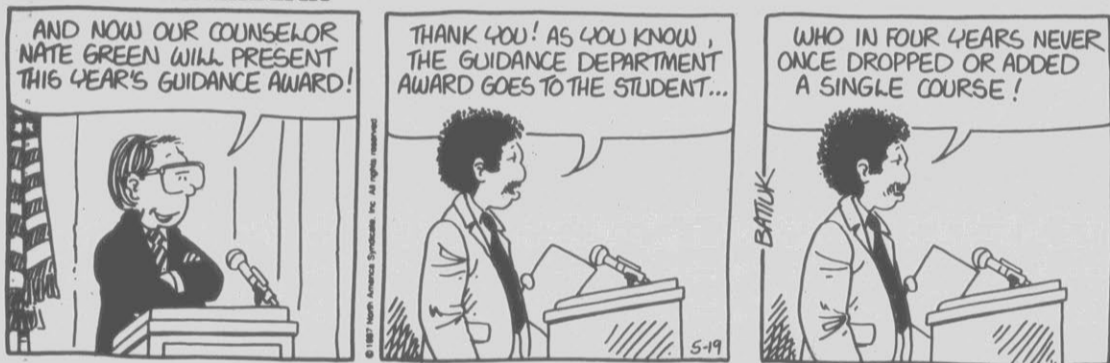

Declarer had seven tricks in the bag, and West was caught in an end play. If he continued with the ace and another diamond, he would set up declarer's king and South would simply concede a trick to the queen of hearts and claim his ten tricks. But leading a black suit proved to be no better. If West led a club, declarer would follow low from dummy, and East would be helpless. If he ruffed high, declarer would have three high trumps. If he did not ruff, declarer would ruff in hand, cross to the king of trumps and lead a club to score his last trump en passant. On a spade return, he could adopt this elegant line, or ruff with the king and make two more trump tricks in hand performe.

Playboy Features Paraplegic Actress

CHICAGO (AP) — A pictorial on a paraplegic actress may have sparked an internal debate at Playboy magazine, but the woman who posed semi-nude for the pictures says the focus is on who she is, not that she is disabled.

Ellen Stohl, 23, a student at California State University-Fullerton, is the subject of a planned eight-page layout in the July issue, said Playboy spokesman Bill Paige.

"The focus is on who I am, not the fact that I'm disabled," she said. "It's the same way I feel about acting roles — if I can't stand on my ability, don't let my disability get me in there."

Her views were echoed by Speed Davis, a spokesman for the National Spinal Cord Injury Association of Newton, Mass.

"She has the same right to pose for Playboy as any other woman who thinks she has the qualifications," Davis said. "It's a step forward for a disabled woman, and I see no reason to feel different about it because it is in a magazine like Playboy."

Ms. Stohl is nearly nude or partially clad in all of the photos except for one, which has her sitting fully clothed in her wheelchair. The magazine is to go on sale the first week in June.

Ms. Stohl was studying acting when she broke five neck vertebrae in a 1983 automobile accident and was temporarily paralyzed from the neck down. Her legs remain paralyzed.

"Two centuries ago, the disabled were hidden so other people couldn't see them, and only seven or eight years ago the Easter Seal Foundation received a lot of negative comment when it skipped their usual 'little girl on crutches' poster and showed a young man in a wheelchair sitting in a park with his girlfriend in his lap," he said.

Telephone calls to Playboy editors were not returned Monday, but the internal debate was aired Sunday by Chicago Tribune columnist Bob Greene.

"For a while, I tried to sublimate my desire to act and model by going to art school, but I came to terms with myself and decided I wanted to make a statement that I was a total woman," she said in a telephone interview from a soundstage where she was making a videotape Monday.

"This is precisely the kind of attention Playboy doesn't need," Playboy Associate Editor Barbara Nellis was quoted as saying. "The only thing people are going to say is 'Have you seen what Playboy is doing?' Girls in wheelchairs."

"She wrote to the magazine, suggesting the article, and part of her letter is reproduced as part of the feature," said Paige. "She wanted to show that her sexuality was still part of her."

Editorial director Arthur Kretzschmer defended his decision to run the layout, telling Greene: "I may be naive, but I don't see this as exploitation."

Ms. Stohl's letter read, in part: "Sexuality is the hardest thing for disabled persons to hold onto."

"I didn't want to be treated specially when I approached Playboy, and I was happy when the first thing they asked me was 'What do you look like? Are you Playboy material?' I think I am," she said in the telephone interview.

Computer Vandals Sabotage Bulletins

NEW YORK (AP) — Unsuspecting computer users are falling victim to a new breed of vandals who sabotage computer bulletin boards with sophisticated programs that erase and scramble computer files, according to a published report.

The programs, known as trojan horses, pretend to be something useful, like a word processor or game program, but instead erase or scramble data stored in computers. The New York Times reported in today's editions.

The vandals, using telephone links from their computers, are transferring the destructive programs onto the electronic bulletin boards hoping to fool thousands of people into using them in their own computers at great harm, the Times said.

The practice is stirring mistrust and anger among business executives, academics and hobbyists who exchange free computer software on the bulletin boards.

"It's like poisoning the candy in the supermarket on Halloween," Ross M. Greenberg, a Manhattan computer consultant, told the paper. "I guess the people who devise these things take pleasure in destroying other people's work."

The paper said the programs began appearing several years ago and have reached a level of sophistication that allows them to sometimes outfox computer experts who are on guard for them.

Some of the dozens of trojans in circulation begin their destruction within minutes, while others perform as legitimate software for weeks or months and then touch off an electronic time bomb, the Times said.

The trojan software represents another chapter in the exploits of computer hackers, who devote countless hours to computerized subterfuge. Yet unlike hackers who amuse people with their cleverness, "the hacks who write trojans are simply mean-spirited and malicious," Dave Bayer, an assistant professor of mathematics at Columbia University told the paper.

The people who write and distribute trojans enjoy the same anonymity as prank phone-callers, the Times said. Even if a writer were identified, it would be a vexing task to find an applicable state or federal law for prosecution.

Greenberg said there are several defenses against the trojans, including software programs that alert computer users to suspicious activity.

Publicist Hugh Waddell said Cash flew back to Nashville in a private plane after being released from the hospital Monday, and plans to rest after canceling two concerts, in Ohio and Illinois, on advice of doctors.

The country music star plans to resume his concert schedule in Memphis on May 30, Waddell said.

"It's actually a time bomb that will wipe out your hard disk after it's more than 70 percent full," said Eric Newhouse, an 18-year-old computer expert in Los Angeles.
