Panel Sees Need For City Planning

By DON REUTER
 Reflector Staff Writer

Greenville's rapid growth dictates the need for a panel to study and update long-range planning issues which have been neglected in recent years, according to members of the city's Planning and Zoning Commission.

"We need long-range planning, and we need some attention given to it," board member Chuck Ziehr said at the commission's monthly meeting Tuesday night. "There's a desperate need for some long-range attention."

"There is no question that long-range land use planning needs in Greenville require attention," board member Ruth J. Leggett wrote in a letter to fellow board members.

The commission was asked to discuss a draft ordinance to establish a Land Use Planning Committee designed to study proposals for change or expansion of the East Carolina Medical Park, protect the Pitt-Greenville Airport from incompatible surrounding land uses, and review rezoning requests which appear to be inconsistent with the Comprehensive Plan.

No formal action was taken by the commission.

According to the draft, the committee would also be asked to review new or updated community development or community redevelopment plans, to evaluate major land use policy changes, to monitor the Comprehensive Plan to insure that it is current in light of changing trends or growth patterns, and any other study assigned by the City Council or the Planning and Zoning Commission.

Commissioners voiced concerns about creating another layer of bu-

Slain Crewmen En Route Home

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — The bodies of 35 USS Stark crewmen killed in an Iraqi missile attack began their journey home today after a brief ceremony at Bahrain International Airport.

Five-year-old John Kiser crossed his heart at his mother's bidding as the remains of his father, electronics mate Stephen Greg Kiser of Elkhart, Ind., and the other dead were saluted.

The 35 bodies, each in a metal casket draped with the American flag, were placed on a C141 transport plane heading for Frankfurt, West Germany, en route to the United States.

Eleven of the bodies have not been identified. In addition to the 35, two crewmen are missing and presumed dead.

The Stark had remained about five miles offshore overnight but moved into Bahrain territorial waters early today, anchoring at Sitra Bay next to the USS Lasalle, a flagship destroyer.

The frigate bore a gaping hole in its port side and its bridge was a tangle of twisted metal from the Iraqi missile attack Sunday night. Twenty-one sailors were injured in the attack.

Rear Adm. Harold J. Bernsen, commander of the Navy's Persian Gulf task force, said a Navy damage assessment team from Norfolk, Va., would go to the vessel today. The team hopes to provide answers to such questions as why the ship's approximately 200-member crew failed to respond to the attack.

Asked Tuesday if he knew why no weapons were fired in self-defense, Bernsen replied: "No, I really don't. I think that the surprise was incredible, quite frankly."

He said the crew knew an Iraqi pilot had the frigate locked on radar, but not that he had fired until "the crewman on lookout saw a missile coming and gave a warning." Bernsen added, "A great deal of detail needs to be worked as to why it (the Stark) did not respond."

The Stark's crew had not determined "hostile intent" by the Iraqi warplanes and they were considered "friendly aircraft," he said.

The attack was the first on an American warship in the Gulf since U.S. vessels began operating in the area in 1949 and the deadliest on shipping since Iran and Iraq went to war in September 1980.

Reports Challenge Fighting Status Of Stricken Frigate

By BRYAN BRUMLEY
 Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, fighting congressional criticism of its Persian Gulf policy, says keeping American warships in the waterway and registering Kuwaiti tankers under the U.S. flag will counter Iranian and Soviet threats.

Administration officials also said Tuesday that the seven U.S. Navy vessels in the Gulf were preoccupied with the threat of attack by Iran, helping explain why one of the ships, the USS Stark, did not defend itself Sunday against an Iraqi missile which claimed 37 American lives.

A report in today's edition of the San Francisco Examiner, in another possible explanation of what happened, quotes an anonymous administration source as saying that sophisticated radar aboard the ship was unmanned or failed to operate properly during a crucial moment in the attack.

A dispatch by Hearst Newspapers, quoting an unnamed administration source, reported that the wife of Stark Cmdr. Glenn Brindels had written a letter to an unidentified person complaining that "nothing worked on the ship" and that the 5-year-old ship was "in terrible shape."

The Hearst report had no other details about the letter from Donna Brindels, including the basis for her opinions about the ship. The contents of the letter were described by a source familiar with the allegations.

Lt. Alice Prucha, a Pentagon spokeswoman, said today she was unaware of such a letter. She had no comment on the radar report.

In Baghdad, meanwhile, Iraqi Foreign Minister Tarek Aziz said the fighter pilot who attacked the Stark believed he was firing on an Iranian vessel.

At a news conference Tuesday night, Aziz said the Iraqi pilot did not receive any signals from the frigate before he fired his missiles.

The newspaper Ash-Sharq in Beirut, Lebanon, today reported that two Iraqi pilots who fired on the Stark were arrested by Iraqi authorities and interrogated. The paper is aligned with Syria — Iraq's main Arab rival — and has frequently been wrong regarding Iraqi affairs.

Shortly after the attack, U.S. officials joined with Iraqi officials in calling the incident a mistake.

State Department spokeswoman Phyllis Oakley said Tuesday the United States was willing to join with Iraq in a joint investigation of the attack.

The mild U.S. reaction to the attack and the decision to protect ships from Kuwait, a non-belligerent Arab ally of Iraq, were signs of a growing American tilt toward Baghdad in its nearly 7-year-old conflict with Iran.

Senate Republican leader Bob Dole of Kansas called for "a special, renewed examination" of the Kuwait deal. "That plan may still make sense, but at the least, in light of Sunday's tragedy, we need to take a new look," Dole said.

"Are we becoming a silent party to the Iran-Iraq war?" said Rep. Tom Lantos, D-Calif., chairman of the

Nurses' Shortage Cited

By CAROL TYER
 Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County Memorial Hospital trustees heard Tuesday about the hospital's nursing shortage.

Diane Poole, nursing services vice president, told the board the hospital has recently recruited 73 new R.N. applicants, but still has 90 vacancies. There are 25 more good prospects, she said, but many more nurses are needed and certain departments of the hospital have acute shortages.

Action on setting aside money for nursing recruitment incentives was tabled by the board. Some of its members indicated, that even though timing of hiring newly graduated nursing school graduates is critical, they did not feel they had been given enough time to consider the pros and cons of providing recruitment bonuses before acting.

Trustee David Speir voiced the opinion that providing bonuses for nurses recruited from other hospital staffs is not the way to go, that it's not in the best interest of the larger community. This practice apparently had been considered by those at the hospital responsible for recruiting.

Roy Clark, vice president for financial services, said the hospital continues to have patient days in excess of projections. He said the hospital has so far this year had 102,506 patient days, 3,339 more than were projected. Admissions for April were 1,905, in contrast to 1,741 for the previous April. He said the hospital is $2,837,672 ahead of budget because patient care is exceeding projections.

A contract with Dr. Jack Welch was approved. He will serve as medical director of the hospital's

Defendants Answer Ex-Patient's Suit

Defendants in a civil suit filed in February by Clarence Earl Ormond, a former patient of the University Nursing Center on N.C. 43 west of Greenville, have denied the charges of negligence alleged by the complaint in an answer filed with the Pitt County Clerk of Court.

Ormond, a patient in the center from 1980 until 1986, named the University Nursing Center, Hillhaven Inc. (operators of the center), Kyle W. Dilday (the nursing center's manager at the time), and Dr. Joseph W. Ward, medical director for University Nursing, as defendants.

The answer filed by the defendants, which categorically denies Ormond's allegations, and moves to have the case dismissed, says further that Ormond "contributed to the injury and damages."

The answer charges that Ormond "failed to cooperate with his health care providers in that he refused treatment and ... generally failed to exercise ordinary care for his own safety and well being ..."

The complaint alleges negligence on the part of the defendants resulted in Ormond having to have a colostomy and have one leg amputated, and seeks "in excess of $10,000 as compensatory and punitive damages."

Wise Move

The Greenville City Council acted soundly when it voted to purchase a computer for city use.

The board also acted responsibly by not delaying the purchase any longer and by opting for a system separate from Greenville Utilities Commission.

Sharing a data processing system with GUC would not adequately meet the needs of both organizations. A municipality serving a potential population of 50,000 people needs the flexibility of its own data processing system. GUC, in turn, needs the same independence.

The needs of the two organizations are too diverse to effectively blend computer use. Hardware demands and software needs differ sharply. This dissimilarity makes it difficult for one computer to do both jobs without sacrificing efficiency. In addition, sharing personnel in a joint data processing center would create conflicts over supervision, priorities and delegating responsibility.

The City Council wisely saw through the flawed argument that one system would cost less, thus saving taxpayers money. True, purchasing one large computer might initially be less expensive, but as both the city and GUC grow, their escalating demands would likely render the system ineffective and necessitate additional personnel to operate efficiently.

Selecting two smaller computer systems, each designed to fill the individual needs of separate organizations, is a more feasible approach.

Greenville's need for a computer has increased sharply in the past five years. That need will continue to grow as city services escalate. Not having a data processing system has hindered city staff in the past. Delaying the purchase of a computer any longer would have further hampered growth and efficiency.

The council's action will enhance the city staff's ability to use facts and figures to effectively plan for Greenville's needs.

Biggest Prize

Neither Republicans nor Democrats have locks on messing up golden opportunities to dominate the political picture in our country.

Watergate, Irangate and other assorted political blunders attest to what Republicans can do to themselves.

Gary Hart's recent fall from his position as Democratic presidential frontrunner shows what can happen on the Democratic side.

There is, however, plenty of time before the primaries, conventions and election of 1988. That means adequate opportunity for presidential candidates to establish themselves — and also time for future political missteps.

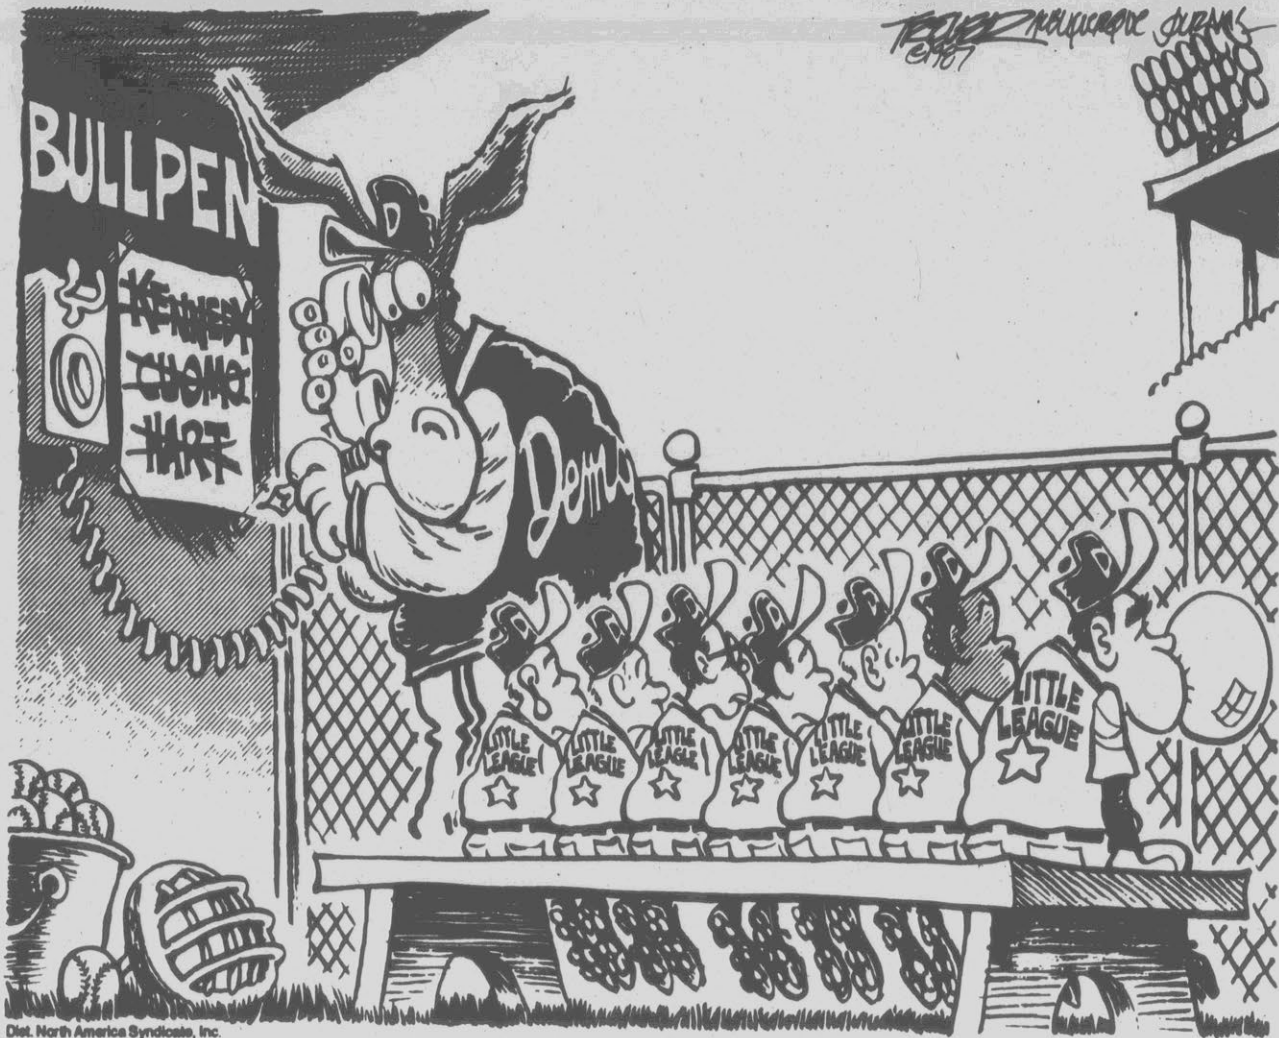

James Van Hecke, chairman of the North Carolina Democratic Party, told a Democratic rally here recently that his party can win the N.C. gubernatorial race and the presidency in 1988.

He said, however, the party must go through a healing process and it had banded together following the 1984 losses. Now the party is healed, he said, as evidenced by Terry Sanford's U.S. Senate win in 1986. Van Hecke took note of Gary Hart's fall but said the party has a "stable full of good race horses."

The chairman advanced his party as the education party and the pay-as-you-go party, as well as the party of opportunity.

"It's going to be an exciting time next year," he said. "If we band together we can make it happen."

The possibilities are there for the Democrats. It must be recognized, however, that the Gary Hart demise was a major setback. There is a certain amount of disarray following the fall of the leading candidate. It will be incumbent upon the party leaders to demonstrate that the Democrats can regroup and provide the leadership which will be worthy of the biggest prize of all — the White House.

Stark Attack Shoots Holes In Gulf Policy

'For now, the Navy should keep its distance, and we should reserve the U.S. flag for our own ships. If we have to fight in the Persian Gulf, it should be for our interests, not someone else's.'

Six and a half years after it began, the Persian Gulf war has come home to the United States. Iraq's attack on the American frigate, the Stark, appears to have been an accident, but it was no less deadly for that. It also shot holes in the Reagan administration's policy toward the region and the war.

Ever since the revelations about U.S. arms-for-hostages deals with Iran, the administration has sought to reassure its moderate Arab friends that its trafficking with Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini was an aberration. Thus the United States has revived its "tilt" toward Iraq and placed on Iran the full burden for preventing a cease-fire and resolution of conflict.

Washington has tried to restore an arms embargo against Iran — but not Iraq. It has warned Iran about attacking oil tankers and pledged that it will keep open the Strait of Hormuz. It also is about to conclude an agreement with Kuwait, whereby 11 tankers will be transferred to U.S. registry and thereby to American protection.

The risks in this approach were revealed when the wrong side struck. It wasn't supposed to happen this way and, indeed, Washington has been quick to dismiss anything other than pilot error on Iraq's part. That is probably so. But the loss of life and the continuing danger argue for a new circumspection about getting ourselves involved "in harm's way" in this conflict.

We should imagine what would now be happening if the culprit had been an Iranian aircraft. The president would be summoning his key advisers. The fleet would be racing toward the Persian Gulf. Politicians and pundits would be talking about the when and how of retaliation. And chances would be good that Reagan would order some form of military strike against Iran. In the process, eight years of U.S. popular frustration would be released.

Looking at events in this mirror image leads to a bigger question: What does the United States want in the Persian Gulf? The answer has been clear throughout the war. We want the war to end or, failing that, to be contained. We want to prevent the collapse of either Iraq or Iran. We want to keep the oil flowing. And we want to minimize opportunities for the Soviet Union to increase its influence in the region.

These objectives argue for keeping emotions under control in viewing the war. They argue for maintaining as neutral a position as possible. And they argue for keeping out of the line of fire, except when something important is at stake.

"Something important" does include keeping oil flowing, and Iran has attacked some tankers — though not any belonging to the United States. Yet Iraq began that tactic; it has been responsible for most attacks on shipping, and it makes no bones about trying to strangle Iran economically. Indeed, the odds for an accident have always favored Iraq as the source.

The attack on the Stark also raises doubts about the U.S. decision to "re-flag" some Kuwaiti tankers. It clearly is in the United States' interest to deter Iranian attacks. Washington also wants to counter Soviet influence in Kuwait, which is growing because Moscow also has offered to protect Kuwaiti tankers. But Kuwait wants it both ways: to support Iraq in the war but not to be liable to Iranian retaliation.

The creeping exposure of U.S. ships and men also increases the chances that we will be drawn in through a different form of accident. Recently an Iranian vessel fired on a Soviet oil tanker. Yet by all accounts it was not the Iranian navy but the Revolutionary Guards, zealots pursuing their own interests and not necessarily those of strategists in Tehran. Should that happen to an American-registered vessel, what then? There is a haunting parallel to terrorist attacks against American citizens, where a military response could cause more damage than it provides relief.

The best authority for caution is Ronald Reagan himself. When he first spoke about the arms sales to Iran, he stressed Iran's strategic importance and the compelling U.S. interest to contain Soviet influence. That interest continues; it would be damaged by U.S. military action against Iran, especially if that took place in response to actions that might be designed to drag the United States into the conflict. At some point we might have to use force against Iran, but not, surely, in response to an accident or provocation.

The tragedy of the Stark thus provides a chance to think again. There are proposals to provide fighter escorts for U.S. Navy vessels, and to send larger ships with more potent anti-aircraft systems. Reagan has already changed the rules of engagement to permit more latitude in firing on potentially hostile aircraft. That's a natural reaction.

Wisdom and prudence, however, call for lowering the ante, not raising it. If we want to help protect shipping in the Persian Gulf, it should be all shipping, not just that of one side, and we should have international help. For now, the Navy should keep its distance, and we should reserve the U.S. flag for our own ships. If we have to fight in the Persian Gulf, it should be for our interests, not someone else's.

Rejection Of Gay-Rights Bill Ironic

'But there is no denying that McKinney, regardless of his sexual orientation, displayed far more courage than the Connecticut General Assembly; he made sure the world knew he died of AIDS.'

There is a bitter irony in the timing of the Connecticut General Assembly's rejection of a gay-rights bill. That stunning display of fear, ignorance, intolerance and callous disregard for a highly vulnerable segment of the citizenry came just one week after the dean of the Connecticut's congressional delegation died of AIDS.

Stewart B. McKinney, the nine-term member of Congress who began his political career in the Connecticut legislature, would have shuddered at the bill's defeat.

On April 2, when, we now know, McKinney was in the final throes of the deadly disease that is decimating the gay community in this country and now infecting heterosexuals as well, he sent a letter to each of Connecticut's lawmakers urging them to accord homosexual men and women the same civil rights enjoyed by the rest of us.

"I do not believe people should be discriminated against for their sexual preference any more than for their skin color or religious affiliation," McKinney wrote. But homosexuals "do not have legal recourse when they encounter discrimination. Apartments or jobs can be denied them solely on the basis of their personal beliefs and private activities."

Many of McKinney's former colleagues did not agree. Following the lead of Connecticut's Democratic Gov. William A. O'Neill, opponents of the gay-rights bill argued that it was superfluous because, they contended, there is no such discrimination.

They ignored or disbelieved ample evidence to the contrary — the rising incidence of violence against homosexuals and the personal testimony of people who have lost their jobs and apartments because of who they are. They also dismissed the most compelling evidence of all — the hateful rhetoric of some within their own august legislative bodies.

"I think they're sick," state Sen. Michael L. Morano declared on the Senate floor. "I think they're perverts."

Morano's statement was uttered May 6, the day before McKinney died, when the state Senate did pass the gay-rights bill. Charlotte Kinlock, co-chairwoman of the Coalition for Gay and Lesbian Civil Rights, was so sickened by what she heard that she did not return for the House debate one week later, when a tie vote sent the bill to its ignominious death. She couldn't stomach it.

"I did not want to hear myself called an animal again," she says. "I decided it was not in the interest of my mental health."

Kinlock says the coalition debated whether to refer to McKinney's death from AIDS — and the reports that he may have contracted the disease through homosexual encounters — in pleading for legislative support of the gay-rights bill. The group decided not to, fearing it could backfire.

One might think the news of McKinney's death in itself would have shocked the folks back home into realizing that homosexuals, however foreign their lifestyle may be to most of us, are hardly a fringe element of our society, that they are neither "sick" nor "perverts," that some are among the most revered of our public servants.

But reports in both The Washington Post and The New York Times that McKinney engaged in homosexual activity only spurred public outrage that such a scurrilous charge could be leveled against such a good man.

"The real irony to me is that society could've said, 'We know Stewart McKinney, and we know how much he contributed to our state and to our nation. Therefore, we were wrong about who gay and lesbian people are,'" says Kinlock. "Instead, it was considered a horrible insult. That's the exact same attitude that killed the bill."

How much do you pay for your money?

In periods when the prime rate for business loans is high, the question has an immediate economic significance. But it also has broader connotations. The price some people pay for money is lying, stealing, embezzling. Other people who will not pay this high a price will give up friendships which bring no financial or social profit, or turn their backs on occupations which are more socially

Some, like Kinlock, regret that if McKinney was homosexual, he never publicly acknowledged it. But there is no denying that McKinney, regardless of his sexual orientation, displayed far more courage than the Connecticut General Assembly; he made sure the world knew he died of AIDS.

And, with simple eloquence, he told his former colleagues in the state legislature what many of them were either too frightened or too bigoted to heed:

"There are some 20 million homosexual men and women in the United States," McKinney wrote. "And like most Americans, they work hard and contribute to society."

beneficial but less remunerative.

Money is something we all need, if only because we cannot fulfill social and family responsibilities without it. But no fortune is worth having if it arouses hatred against the man who makes it, or separates him from his family, or gives him a troubled conscience. Money that keeps one awake at night tossing in sleepless anxiety is a worse curse than poverty.

Reagan Says U.S. Ships Should Defend Themselves

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. — President Reagan Tuesday paid an emotional tribute to "our heroes" who died in the Iraqi attack on the USS Stark and said Iran "was the real villain in the piece" because it had refused to negotiate an end to the 6½-year gulf war.

Reagan ordered that flags be lowered to half-staff in memory of the 37 crew members killed when one or more missiles launched by an Iraqi fighter struck the guided missile frigate Sunday. And in an interview and a speech to high school students, Reagan vowed that the United States would keep oil supplies flowing through the Persian Gulf.

"It's a vital mission," the president said. "From now on, if aircraft approach any of our ships in a way that appears hostile, there is one order of battle — defend yourselves; defend American lives."

He was loudly applauded by an audience that had sat quietly through a speech in which Reagan exhorted American students to work harder and denounced the glamorizing of drug use.

Earlier, Reagan said in the interview with local reporters that "we're going to do what has to be done to keep the Persian Gulf open" because it is "international waters — no country has a right to try and close it off and take it for itself."

Reagan's comments blaming Iran for loss of life in the gulf, where 230 ships have been hit by Iranian or Iraqi attacks since 1984, were similar to those he made a week before the attack in written responses to questions submitted by the Kuwaiti newspaper El-Qabas. In those responses, the president reiterated his call for a negotiated settlement to the Iran-Iraq war and blamed Iran for its continuation.

Without making any reference to the clandestine U.S. sale of Hawk and TOW missiles to Iran as part of the Iran-contra operation, the president insisted that the United States was neutral in the conflict.

Analysis

"We do not now ship weapons to Iran or Iraq, nor do we intend to do so," Reagan said, "This policy is firm."

Reagan said the U.S. government was continuing through "Operation Staunch" to persuade third countries from sending arms and munitions to Iran.

"Operation Staunch is not directed towards Iraq — that country for some time has agreed to negotiate a settlement to the war," Reagan said.

"Iran remains the intransigent party and is occupying Iraqi territory and trying to take more."

Reagan said Tuesday he would await the findings of a board of inquiry and further explanations from Iraq before making a determination on why the Iraqi plane fired its missile and why the Stark's crew did not defend itself.

But Reagan emphasized that Iraqi planes had often flown a similar course in the past without attacking and said the commander of the frigate probably believed that the attacker was a "a totally friendly plane."

Earlier, on Air Force One en route from Andrews Air Force Base, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said that the apology for the attack from Iraqi President Saddam Hussein "does not deal with the compensation issue, so we'd like to hear from them on that."

In a message to Reagan late Sunday, Hussein expressed "deepest regret over this painful incident."

Reagan's speech here Tuesday, to a commencement gathering of 13 area high schools, compared American schooling unfavorably to Japanese education. The president said that in this country "everyone made excuses," such as poverty or family problems, when a student performed poorly.

"In Japan, the message to students was always, you're responsible for what you make of your life," Reagan said. "In the United States, too often, it was that you aren't."

PTL Network Changes Name To Save Image

By DEBORAH MESCE
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The PTL ministry is changing the name of its cable television network to protect it from possible fallout from the scandal and multi-million dollar debt that are plaguing the ministry.
"It's basically an image change," Neil Eskelin, a PTL spokesman told reporters at the National Cable Television Association's annual convention here.
He said: "We want to show that the network is different from the PTL Club," the network's flagship program whose former leader, Jim Bakker, left the program and the ministry after admitting to a tryst with a former church secretary and making $265,000 in payments to keep her quiet about the encounter.

The ministry, which will continue to control the network, plans over the next three months to drop the PTL from the name of its cable channel, called PTL-The Inspirational Network.
It also plans to keep revenues generated by the network within the network's operations, not allowing it to funnel through the ministry as it does now, he said.

In addition, the ministry, which receives its program time free, eventually will have to buy time for its programming, just as other programmers on the network do, said John McEntee, director of PTL's cable marketing. The network derives its revenues from programmers who buy time on the network.
"We have to reposition ourselves with the ministry so they (cable operators) don't feel we're in a precarious situation," McEntee said.

"The cable industry feels that if the PTL ministry should fold that the cable network will fold also, and that's not true," he said.
McEntee said that while he's confident the ministry will raise the money necessary to pay off a $66.7 million debt, "if anything should happen, the industry will know the network is standing on its own."
The Rev. Jerry Falwell, a fundamentalist, took over the 518,000-member PTL ministry in March. He appointed his own board to replace the Pentecostal-oriented board that had worked with Bakker.

The new board has been investigating PTL expenditures in the wake of disclosures about missing funds and the extravagant lifestyle of Bakker and his wife, Tammy Faye.
McEntee and Eskelin maintained that the ministry's money problems have had no financial impact on the network, which they said reaches 13 million cable subscribers and has 168 broadcast television affiliates.
They acknowledged that the network lost three of its broadcast affiliates since the scandal broke, but also said that during the convention here they picked up 18 new cable systems to carry the network.

McEntee said, "The network will become a lot more monetarily strengthened because most of the money will come into the network to perform its marketing effectively. Up until this point, most of the money went into the ministry."
Eskelin said the network plans to begin an aggressive marketing campaign to boost cable subscribership to 20 million by the end of 1988.

School Bond Bill Moves In Senate

RALEIGH (AP) — Republican Gov. Jim Martin and Democratic Senate leaders are in basic agreement on a $2.1 billion plan to finance school construction and expansion of other government facilities, but major differences remain with the House.
The Senate Committee on Economic Growth endorsed the bill Tuesday, and it was referred to the Finance Committee where chairman Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, promises rapid consideration.
"I would almost stake my Senate career that it would pass the Senate," Sen. Bill Staton, D-Lee, chairman of the Economic Growth Committee, told reporters.
If enacted, the measure would authorize bond issues of $1 billion for school construction and $1 billion for other infrastructure needs such as improvements of jails, streets, airports and other government facilities. If approved by the state's voters, the bonds would be sold by the state and the proceeds used to purchase bonds or other obligations of local governments to finance the projects.
The bill also would appropriate $120 million in fiscal 1987-89 for loans and grants to improve water and sewer services.
Last week, the House approved an alternative plan for generating funds for school construction: a 1-cent state sales tax increase that would expire after four years. House leaders said their pay-as-you-go approach was better than borrowing money, which they said would bring interest costs that would inflate the program's price tag.
Staton predicted that the issue eventually would wind up before a House-Senate conference committee.

House Tentatively Backs Higher Death Penalty Age

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Capital punishment for minors would be limited under a measure which received tentative approval in the state House Tuesday, but just how limited continued as a subject of debate.
At issue was whether capital punishment should be prohibited for everyone under 18. Rep. Bob Brawley, R-Iredell, recounted a story of a 15-year-old who killed a girl and "in jail now he's talking about when he gets out he'll go get her parents."
"I think capital punishment is a deterrent to crime," he added.
The House adopted an amendment to ban executions for those under 16, although the sponsor, Rep. Sidney Locks, D-Robeson, sought to bar the death penalty for anyone under 18.
"Even the country of South Africa does not execute persons under the age of 18," he said. "Both history and the sciences ... have proven that children are not fully responsible ... for their emotions, for their understanding or for their actions."
Locks said children "watching movies, television become participants in what they watch, so many times they begin acting out the things they see."
He also noted that those under 18 are already treated as special cases, barred from voting, buying guns or drinking alcohol.

Rep. R.D. Beard, D-Cumberland, said North Carolina has not executed a minor since 1944 — a record he attributed partly to the deterrent effect of the death penalty.
Rep. Bill Alexander, D-Cabarrus, proposed an amendment to ban the death penalty for those under age 16, saying most violent crimes are committed by those over 16.
"The juries that consider the trial of capital offenses are really best suited to look at age as one factor as to whether to give the death penalty or a life sentence," he said.

Alexander's amendment was approved 70-32 and the amended bill was tentatively approved 66-35. But House Speaker Liston Ramsey later ruled that the amendment was out of order because it did not conform with the bill's title that says no death penalty for 17-year-olds.
Locks said the amendment would have to be reconsidered Wednesday.

Panel Backs Wiretapping

RALEIGH (AP) — Law enforcement officials are divided on the idea of using electronic surveillance to trap drug traffickers, but a state Senate committee has approved a measure which would allow state judges to authorize such activities.
State Bureau of Investigation director Robert Morgan opposes the idea, but district attorneys like it. Attorney General Lacy Thornburg fought the bill two years ago, but hasn't taken a public stance in 1987.
The bill, which is similar to one that failed in 1985, cleared the Judiciary IV Committee by a unanimous vote. A floor vote could come this week.
Sen. Tony Rand, D-Cumberland, sponsor of the measure, said reports that drug abuse and trafficking were on the rise made his bill even more important this year than in 1985.
"I think we all realize that that's one of the more significant problems of our society right now," Rand said.
He said law enforcement officers on the federal level, where wiretapping is permitted, have credited electronic surveillance with providing evidence that has convicted some major crime figures.
"We've all seen the big mafia prosecutions the federal government has done in the Northeast," Rand said. "Most all of that was obtained through electronic surveillance."

Henderson Senator Delays Vote On Utilities' Fuel Bill

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Parliamentary procedure has delayed a final Senate vote on a bill which would let utility companies recover all their fuel costs.
Sen. R.P. "Bo" Thomas, D-Henderson, invoked a Senate rule enabling him to request that the legislative staff analyze the bill's possible impact on state government revenues. Thomas, one of the upper chamber's most outspoken consumer advocates, said his request was designed to slow down the bill's march through the Senate until more is known about it.
Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan said the move would hold up a vote until Thursday.
Thomas said Sen. Joe Johnson, D-Wake, sponsor of the bill, had "bragged about its being the greatest utility-consumer bill since the discovery of piped water to houses. I just want to see if that's really true."
Lawmakers have voiced skepticism that the measure would benefit consumers as its supporters say.
The bill won tentative approval Monday night, 46-4, but several senators acknowledged they were confused about what the bill would do. Johnson said it was in the consumer's best interest and that Ruth Cook, a member of the state Utilities Commission known for her pro-consumer outlook, had endorsed it.
If enacted, the measure would allow the Utilities Commission to adjust electric rates once a year based on what utilities actually pay for fuel to run their plants.

If a company paid more in a year than it predicted, it could assess its customers to recover the loss. If it paid less than expected, the company would rebate the overcharge to its customers.
Currently, utilities cannot increase rates to compensate for unexpectedly high fuel costs. But they also are not required to return excess collections resulting from lower-than-expected fuel costs.
The bill would require the Utilities Commission to establish standards for efficient plant operation. Companies failing to meet the standards could not recover their losses.
Even so, critics say the bill would remove an incentive for utilities to operate efficiently. They say inefficiency forces the companies to buy more fuel, and if they can recoup the costs there's no reason for them to strive for efficiency.

If enacted, the bill would reverse a recent state Court of Appeals ruling denying recovery for fuel costs.
Carolina Power & Light Co. officials say their customers would get a $60 million refund if the bill were passed.

Driver Dies In Tanker Fire

KINSTON, N.C. (AP) — The driver of a tanker truck carrying 8,700 gallons of gasoline died Tuesday when the truck overturned on U.S. 258 south of Kinston, causing an explosion and fire that blocked traffic for eight hours and threatened to dump fuel in the Trent River, the N.C. Highway Patrol said.

Flames shot 60 feet into the air as state workers placed a buffer in the nearby river to trap an estimated 100 gallons of gas that seeped into the water. Firefighters extinguished the blaze to remove the victim's body from the charred wreckage and then intentionally burned the remaining fuel to keep it out of the river.

Trooper J.R. McLawhorn of the N.C. Highway Patrol identified the victim as Lennis Kermion Turnage, 31, of Four Oaks. He said Turnage had been driving the tanker truck for A.G. Lee Oil Co. of Smithfield when it overturned about 8:45 a.m. while trying to avoid a collision with a car making a left turn.

The driver of the car was not injured, he said.

GSX Blocked

RALEIGH (AP) — The state Senate tentatively approved Tuesday a bill designed to block the placement of a hazardous waste treatment facility in Scotland County.

The measure passed 40-8. Opponents objected to an immediate final vote, postponing it until Wednesday.

It would limit the volume of material that a hazardous waste treatment facility could discharge directly into a river upstream of a public water supply.

Officials of GSX Services Inc., which is seeking a permit to operate a facility near the Robeson County-Scotland County line, say the bill would impose such severe restrictions that it would make operating the facility economically unfeasible.

School Scuffle

ROBBINSVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Assault warrants have been issued against a former school board member and the Graham County school superintendent after a scuffle between the two in the superintendent's office.

Ira Rogers Jr. was charged with assault on school superintendent Lowell Crisp. He was released under $1,000 unsecured bond. According to police, Rogers took out a warrant against Crisp Tuesday morning charging him with assault and "striking him about the face and arms" in connection with the altercation Friday. Crisp was released on personal recognizance.

Rogers was ordered to stay away from the superintendent's office until after the case goes to trial in District Court on June 11.

Attorneys for Rogers and Crisp said the incident apparently arose out of a dispute over the employment status of Rogers' wife, Jan, who works for the school system.

Chemicals

ATLANTA (AP) — The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency has ordered a coastal developer to submit a plan for removing about 100 barrels of toxic chemicals from a warehouse he owns in Holly Ridge, N.C.

EPA officials sent the order to developer Marlow Bostic last week on the request of North Carolina officials, who said they had tried unsuccessfully to get Bostic to remove the chemicals.

"We gave him five days to respond, from whenever he received the letter," said Jan Rogers, chief of site control for the Emergency Response and Control Section at the EPA's regional office in Atlanta.

"We need to know whether or not Bostic will remove the material in a responsible manner," Rogers said. "If he doesn't respond to the letter within the designated time, we'll take action."

Firefighters discovered the chemical when they responded to a March 2 fire at the warehouse off U.S. 17, north of Holly Ridge. State officials identified the material as 1,3-dinitrophenol, a highly toxic and explosive chemical used in the manufacture of wood preservatives.

Sentence

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — A South American man described by federal authorities as a major smuggler of cocaine into the United States has been sentenced to 15 years in prison and fined $1 million.

Daniel Garcia, 43, most recently of Miami, was sentenced Monday in U.S. District Court in Fayetteville.

U.S. Customs Agent Michael John Lemon testified Garcia had been moving between 500 and 1,000 kilos of cocaine from his native Colombia into the United States.

Miller Moved

WILSON, N.C. (AP) — Former White Patriot Party leader Glenn Miller is confined in the Wilson County Jail and his attorney expects him to remain there for the duration of his trial.

Miller's court-appointed attorney, Thomas Manning, said his client had been transferred from Butner Federal Prison to the Wilson County jail because of overcrowding at the federal facility.

No trial date has been set for the 46-year-old Miller, but Manning said he expected the grand jury to meet soon.

Miller was arrested April 30 in Missouri after a fugitive warrant was issued charging him with violating his bond conditions. Miller, who allegedly threatened a war against blacks, Jews and the federal government, was convicted in 1986 of operating a paramilitary training camp.

The former Army Special Forces member was sentenced to six months in prison but was freed on bond pending appeal.

Tobacco

WASHINGTON (AP) — Smokeless tobacco sales have risen sharply in recent years, especially among teen-agers, Health and Human Services Secretary Otis R. Bowen said Tuesday in a report to Congress.

"It is estimated that there are currently more than 12 million users of smokeless tobacco in the United States, with 3 million of these users under 21 years of age," Bowen said.

Bowen said sales of the type tobacco used to manufacture moist snuff more than tripled from 1970-81 and that moist snuff sales themselves were up 29 percent from 1981-85.

Interstates

RALEIGH (AP) — Sections of Interstate 40 west of Winston-Salem, parts of Interstate 85 between Greensboro and Lexington and portions of Interstate 77 north of Charlotte likely will become 65 mph zones, a traffic engineer for the state Transportation Department says.

The department is studying the state's Interstate highway system now to determine where the speed limit should be increased. The engineer, James M. Lynch, said the new speed limit probably will go into effect in July or August.

The speed limit will remain at 55 mph on heavily traveled sections such as I-40 between Winston-Salem and Greensboro and I-85 between Greensboro and Durham, Lynch said. "You can almost use common sense and tell with a lot of them," he said.

Red Wolves Adjusting To Coastal Life

MANTEO, N.C. (AP) — Eight red wolves brought to North Carolina for a six-month acclimation project are already showing signs of change, according to the manager of the Alligator River National Wildlife Refuge.

"I think we've seen changes in their behavior," said John T. Taylor, explaining that the wolves became

"extremely nervous" during a recent inspection inside the pen at the 118,000-acre refuge. "They indeed seem to be less tolerant of man."

The refuge staff has attempted to minimize human contact with the wolves, limiting visits to visual observations every two weeks to check on the animals' health and to assure they could not escape.

"We don't want them to develop a tolerance to man," Taylor said. "We want them to be scared to death of people and run when they see people."

Taylor said that part of the acclimation process seems to have worked.

A final objective has been to introduce the wolves to the muggy, warmer climate of their adopted

North Carolina home. This remote coastal region of swamp and forests is much different from the colder, mountainous climate of Washington state, Taylor said.

"We want to make sure that the first pair doesn't go swimming off to Tacoma, Washington."

Prison Population Crisis Eases

RALEIGH (AP) — By having recent parolees serve 30 percent instead of the average 34 percent of their prison sentences, the state prison population fell to 17,238 and helped prison officials meet a deadline set by the General Assembly.

But while state officials breathed a sigh of relief, state Correction Secretary Aaron Johnson said the population soon could climb to the point that emergency conditions might have to be reinstated.

"We're not saying the problem is solved," Johnson told a news conference at Central Prison Tuesday. "It's fixed for now. ... It's possible it will be an on-and-off thing."

The North Carolina Parole Commission had until next Monday to reduce the population to at least 17,280. In March, the General Assembly set an 18,000 limit on prison population and passed emergency legislation requiring immediate steps be taken to relieve overcrowding when the population exceeds 17,460 for 15 consecutive days.

Early releases of certain prisoners began on March 26, when the prison population reached 18,067. Prison officials also stopped accepting prisoners convicted of misdemeanors and sentenced to six months or less.

Johnson said such prisoners again would be accepted. But he warned that accepting those prisoners from crowded county jails might drive the prison population above the cap again.

"There's a possibility that in a couple of weeks, we'll be back up there," he said.

Johnson said sheriffs would be notified immediately that offenders serving 30 days to 180 days for misdemeanors could be sent to state prisons again. The new law had prohibited such offenders from going to state prisons during the emergency period.

Johnson again urged judges across the state to be selective in sending criminals to prison and to consider alternatives, like intensive probation, before imposing prison sentences.

Johnson said 1,875 prisoners were paroled between March 26 and May 14. During the same period last year, 1,269 prisoners were paroled.

Prison officials said dangerous criminals — like those convicted of first-degree murder, first-degree rape and drug trafficking — weren't freed under the emergency measures.

"We have not reduced our standards," Parole Commission Administrator Sam Boyd said Tuesday. "I am confident we have released no one the commission deemed as a threat to society."

Senate Confirms Webster As CIA Chief

By PETE YOST
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — William Webster, who as FBI director built good relations with Congress, takes over the CIA at a time when the spy agency's reputation on Capitol Hill has seldom been worse.

Webster was confirmed Tuesday by the Senate, 94-1, becoming the 14th director of the Central Intelligence Agency which has agents throughout the world and a corps of analysts at its Langley, Va., headquarters near Washington.

Webster promised in confirmation hearings last month that he would keep congressional oversight committees fully informed of the CIA's activities, which cost an estimated $3 billion last year.

His confirmation comes as the Iran-Contra hearings bring to light details of the CIA's role in covert U.S. arms sales to Iran and its involvement in assisting the Nicaraguan rebels under the late director William J. Casey.
Webster's confirmation is "important for the country and the administration," said President Reagan's chief spokesman, Marlin Fitzwater. "At this crucial juncture in world affairs, we need thoughtful and strong leadership at the CIA."

The search continues for a successor to Webster at the FBI. Former Pennsylvania Gov. Dick Thornburgh turned down the job two weeks ago.

In late March, sources said five candidates were being considered.
Webster's nomination for the CIA post was delayed for three days earlier this month when Sen. Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C., used a prerogative allowed any senator and put a "hold" on the nomination. Hollings demanded FBI investigation of civilians at the U.S. Embassy in Moscow in connection with espionage allegations against Marine Guards; Webster promised such an inquiry.

Webster's promises to work with Congress helped him win a unanimous endorsement May 1 from the Senate Intelligence Committee. The panel's chairman, Sen. David Boren, D-Okla., on Tuesday called Webster "fully qualified in all respects."

Webster "is a man of extreme capability, dedication, idealism and integrity," added the intelligence committee's vice chairman, Sen. William Cohen, R-Maine.
Casey, who resigned 3½ months ago following surgery for a cancerous brain tumor and died May 6, used his influence within the Reagan administration to support the covert sale of arms to Iran without informing Congress. Supplying weapons to Iran was contrary to stated U.S. policy.

Casey also was instrumental in the development of the Nicaraguan Contras as a fighting force against that country's leftist Sandinista government. Casey's death came the day after retired Air Force Major Gen.

Richard V. Secord testified before Congress that the former CIA director helped in an operation to send weapons to the Contras after Congress had prohibited such aid.
While many in Congress see Webster as a welcome change from Casey, even the former FBI director was unable to escape some of the fallout from the Iran-Contra scandal.
In his confirmation hearings in April, Webster underwent extensive questioning about the FBI's involvement with National Security Council aide Oliver North.
It was disclosed that North on numerous occasions over a period of two years attempted to find out about or interfere with various FBI investigations that touched on aid to the Nicaraguan Contras. Webster said North was never successful in his efforts to interfere.

It also was disclosed at Webster's confirmation hearings that North acknowledged nearly two years ago to an FBI agent that he was involved in directing private fund-raising operations for the Contras during a congressional ban on aid to the rebels, and that North said he was informing President Reagan of his efforts. FBI officials were never alerted about the activity, however, because a teletyped summary of the agent's interview was garbled and never retransmitted to FBI headquarters.
Webster conceded that there were "individual situations that on examination and 20-20 hindsight we might have done differently."
But for the Iran-Contra scandal, Webster likely would not have succeeded Casey as CIA director.

The 63-year-old former federal judge was the second man to be nominated by President Reagan to replace Casey. Deputy CIA Director Robert Gates withdrew from consideration in March after questions were raised about his role in preparing Casey's congressional testimony on the Iran arms sales.

ENCOURAGEMENT — Robert W. Owen gets a kiss of encouragement from his wife, Beth, Tuesday as he prepared to resume testimony before a congressional panel probing the Iran-Contra arms-money deal. Owen acted as a middleman between Lt. Col. Oliver North of the National Security Council in the dealing for arms sales to Iran. (AP Laserphoto)

Owen Says Casey Knew About Aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — Robert W. Owen, a key operative in the clandestine U.S. aid program to the Nicaraguan Contras, says former CIA Director William J. Casey knew in detail about Lt. Col. Oliver L. North's activities and agreed that North would be the "fall guy" should the covert scheme become public.
Testifying Tuesday for 4½ hours before a House-Senate committee, Owen also said he had heard complaints from Contra leaders that U.S. middlemen had taken heavy markups on the prices of weapons sold to the Contras — as much as 300 percent in one instance, according to one senator.

Those complaints are likely to be echoed today when Adolfo Calero, leader of the largest rebel fighting force, appears at the witness table.
In a prepared opening statement, Calero will compare the Contra movement to the American Revolution and say some of his exploits were not unlike those carried out by the founding fathers of the United States.
"Yes, we set up front companies; we had to mask our identity," says Calero's statement, a copy of which was obtained in advance. "We received monies from foreign sources. That was the only way to survive after U.S. aid was cut off by Congress."

In additional testimony, Owen: —Said he believed his frequent memos to North, detailing internal Contra dealings and plans, were sent "across the street" by North to former National Security Adviser Robert C. McFarlane and his successor, Rear Adm. John M. Poindexter. He said he believed President Reagan had "at least a general idea" of the group's activities.
—Offered new details about his job as a courier in the Contra support network and as North's eyes and ears in Central America. He said he almost always acted on North's instructions or orders, clandestinely making three cash pickups in New York City and traveling to Costa Rica to inspect a rural site to be used as a secret air base for supply drops.

—Said it was he who handed to a Saudi Arabian official the bank account number later used for that country's contributions to the Contras.
—Said he and North occasionally joked about being caught breaking the law and going to jail, although he added he did not believe there was any serious question of lawbreaking for him because he was a private citizen.

In a related development, Swiss authorities said that some records of bank accounts allegedly used to launder money from the arms sale would be turned over to independent counsel Lawrence E. Walsh. The documents should be made available within two weeks, Swiss Justice Department spokesman Juerg Kistler said.

Other banking records naming Iranian-American businessman Albert Hakim and Iranian arms dealer Manucher Ghorbanifar will be withheld pending their appeal of an April 15 order releasing the accounts, Kistler said.

Owen, under oath and with a grant of limited immunity from prosecution, told the committees investigating the secret sale of U.S. arms to Iran and the diversion of payments to the Contras that North spoke with Casey frequently. Owen said he met Casey at times coming and going from North's office in the White House complex.

Economists Think Fed Will Boost Its Discount Rate

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Reserve Board may be preparing to raise a key interest rate for the first time in three years as a way to dampen inflationary fears and bolster the sagging dollar, many economists believe.
Top Fed policy-makers met behind closed doors Tuesday to map monetary strategy. While the minutes of that meeting will not be made public until early July, private economists believe the central bank is preparing to raise its discount rate, the interest it charges to make loans to financial institutions.

These analysts said they did not expect the action immediately, saying that the Fed will probably wait until sometime in June, possibly timing the decision to coincide with the June 8-10 economic summit in Venice.
An action to increase the discount rate, which currently stands at 5.5 percent, would be the clearest signal the Fed could give of its intentions to push interest rates up as a way of bolstering the value of the dollar, which at times this year has threatened to go into a free-fall on world currency markets.

Bears Kill Child

NEW YORK (AP) — Two polar bears killed and partially ate an 11-year-old boy who went with two playmates to their lair for a swim, and police shot to death the half-ton animals as they fought over the remains, authorities said.
Police initially thought the bears had devoured the other playmates, whose clothes were found inside the fenced-in compound Tuesday night at Brooklyn's Prospect Park Zoo. The boys had returned home safely, police said.

Police needed 20 blasts from four shotguns and six rounds from a .38-caliber pistol to kill the animals, one of which had dragged the boy, Juan Perez, into its lair, said police spokesman Officer Peter O'Donnell.
The boy and two other 11-year-olds had decided to take an after-hour dip in the moat inside the fence, he said. They took off their clothes, but the two lost their nerve, O'Donnell said.

Du Pont, Republicans Top Wealth Among Candidates

By EVANS WITT
AP Political Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Gov. Pierre S. du Pont IV of Delaware isn't running for president for the money.

Du Pont is far and away the wealthiest of the presidential contenders, financial disclosure documents revealed Tuesday, leading the Republican candidates with assets certainly in excess of $6.3 million and probably greater than twice that much.

The Republicans are well ahead of the Democratic presidential hopefuls, at least in terms of personal wealth. At least three of the GOP candidates are millionaires, while only one of the Democrats is in that class.

Based on disclosure documents and campaign releases, the wealthiest Democrat is former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt, with a net worth "in the neighborhood of $1 million," said spokesman Mike McCurry.

Babbitt, whose family made a mercantile fortune in northern Arizona, has not filed his disclosure papers, McCurry said, since he got an extension of the deadline from the Federal Election Commission.

All candidates for president — which sports a $200,000-a-year salary — are required to file the forms with the FEC by May 15 of the year in which they announce their candidacies or within 30 days of their announcement, whichever comes later.

The candidates' income, assets and liabilities must be listed, but only in broad ranges, not specific figures.

Du Pont's disclosure form ran for 35 pages, covering five trust funds.

He listed at least $6.3 million and a minimum income of $693,045 for the reporting period of between Jan. 1, 1986 and May 15, 1987.

But since some of his assets, including stock in E. I. du Pont de Nemours Co., were in the category of "over $250,000" it was impossible to estimate his total holdings. Using the upper range for most of his holdings, du Pont's assets could be $12,613,000 or higher. The upper range for his income was $1,570,800 or more.

Du Pont was far ahead of any other hopeful, but he wasn't alone in the millionaire class.

Another GOP hopeful, former Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., easily made the top group. The retired general listed assets of at least $3.7 million and liabilities of at most $1.1 million.

His forms disclosed his income over the last 18 months was at least $3.2 million. Among Haig's income was his Army pension of $82,190. He also received $2.7 million in income during the past two years from his consulting firm, Worldwide Associates.

Senate Minority leader Bob Dole of Kansas, an announced candidate, also apparently moved into the seven-figure club.

The senator and his wife, Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Hanford Dole, listed combined income of at least $299,226 and assets of at least $642,277.

However, income and asset value were listed in ranges and the Doles' income on the upper range could have been $335,326 or more and their assets might have been as high as $1,439,277. The Doles received $100,000 from Simon & Schuster for a biography to be published next year.

Vice President George Bush, who has not yet announced his presidential bid, is required to file a disclosure form by virtue of his current office. No form had been filed Tuesday. Previous filings showed he was a millionaire.

One Republican candidate who is not a millionaire is Rep. Jack Kemp.

The New York hopeful reported assets of at least $365,006 and perhaps more than $525,000, versus liabilities of between $115,002 and $300,000. John Buckley, Kemp's press secretary, said Kemp was not in the millionaire group. Kemp reported income between $71,007 and $163,500 last year, not including his House salary.

The Rev. Pat Robertson and former Nevada Sen. Paul Laxalt have not yet announced their candidacies for the Republican nomination and therefore were not required to file a disclosure report.

Among the Democratic hopefuls who filed reports were Sens. Paul Simon of Illinois, Albert Gore Jr. of Tennessee, and Joseph Biden of Delaware and Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri.

Simon listed assets of $369,377 and liabilities of $230,886.

Biden's assets were listed as at least $433,004, with liabilities of $265,000 or more.

Gore's assets totaled $554,701, including $80,351 in trust funds for his four children.

Gephardt reported assets between $215,000 and $550,000 in three houses. The mortgages on the houses totaled between $165,003 and $400,000.

The FEC had not yet received a report from Gov. Michael Dukakis of Massachusetts, who entered the race for the Democratic presidential nomination on April 29.

The Rev. Jesse Jackson has not yet announced his candidacy and did not file a form.

Baker And Carlucci Show Top White House Earnings

By TERENCE HUNT
AP White House Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) — White House Chief of Staff Howard H. Baker Jr. earned more than $1.2 million last year as a lawyer, while President Reagan's national security adviser, Frank Carlucci, was paid nearly $1 million as chairman and chief executive officer of Sears World Trade Inc.

Details of their finances were disclosed Tuesday in reports released by the White House.

In addition to his income as an attorney, Baker also was paid $393,611 as a consultant and board director for various companies, including AT&T, Merrill Lynch & Co., MCA Inc., TENNECO Europe Inc., and Gannett Co. Inc.

Baker also listed $121,500 in income from making speeches, usually receiving payments of $14,000 per appearance and never less than $9,500. In addition, the former Senate Republican leader received $41,216 in federal retirement benefits.

Carlucci received a salary of $427,653 as the top executive of Sears World Trade Inc. He was paid an additional $525,853 in a termination settlement when he quit to go to work at the White House last Jan. 2.

Baker and Carlucci took over top White House jobs in the widespread staff shakeup following the early disclosures of the Iran-Contra affair.

A.B. Culvahouse, Baker's law partner, who joined the White House as Reagan's counsel, earned $260,791 as an attorney last year in the Washington office of Vinson & Elkins, according to his disclosure form.

It said he will receive more money later from distribution of profits under a partnership agreement and the refund of money contributed to a retirement plan.

Baker, abandoning a bid for the 1988 Republican presidential nomination to work for Reagan, severed ties with two law firms in which he was a partner: Vinson & Elkins, and Baker, Worthington, Crossley, Stansberry & Woolf of Knoxville, Tenn.

The disclosure report said Baker earned $243,735 from the Knoxville firm, and is to receive a lump-sum payment later for his share of profits earned before he joined the White House on Feb. 27.

From Vinson & Elkins, Baker received $1,046,427, which included his share of partners' profits, the report added.

Senators Report Millionaire Status

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here are senators who listed at least $1 million in assets in their 1986 financial disclosure statements.

Because the reporting form allows officials to hide the real magnitude of their wealth, some millionaires in the Senate may not be reported as such.

For example, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., listed assets of only $144,000 and up. But his assets, most of which are held in trust, earned more than $632,000 last year.

Those listing assets of at least $1 million:

Sen. Brock Adams, D-Wash., $1,023,000 and up.

Sen. William L. Armstrong, R-Colo., $2,192,019.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, $1,848,021.

Sen. Rudy Boschwitz, R-Minn., $1,052,020.

Sen. Lawton M. Chiles, D-Fla., $1,818,000 and up.

Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., $1,070,105.

Sen. John C. Danforth, R-Mo., at least $7,240,269.

Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., $6,527,175.

Sen. Alan J. Dixon, D-Ill., $1,029,000.

Sen. Bob Graham, D-Fla., $3,317,088.

Sen. Chic Hecht, R-Nev., $1,624,000.

Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa., $9,300,000.

Sen. Nancy Kassebaum, R-Kan., $1,364,043.

Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., $1,178,959.

Sen. Frank H. Murkowski, R-Alaska, $1,016,017.

Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., $5,423,000.

Sen. Harry M. Reid, D-Nev., $1,841,023.

Sen. John D. Rockefeller IV, D-W.Va., at least $3,741,022.

Sen. Terry Sanford, D-N.C., $2,200,000.

Sen. Richard Shelby, D-Ala., $1,335,014.

Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., $1,090,000.

Sen. John W. Warner, R-Va., $3,120,000.

Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., $5,798,200 and up.

President Unveils Proposal For Schools In Poor Areas

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
AP Education Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan today unveiled a guide intended to help transform schools in inner cities and other pockets of poverty into a "ladder for success" for disadvantaged children.

The how-to booklet, "Schools That Work: Educating Disadvantaged Children," is the third in a series of guides for parents and educators prepared by the Department of Education.

It profiles nearly two dozen schools and programs that have rung up sterling achievement scores and low dropout rates in the depressed surroundings that are usually synonymous with failure and fractured lives.

Reagan was scheduled to receive the report today at a White House ceremony attended by civic leaders and some of the educators whose accomplishments are praised in the handbook.

Reagan, who urged students in Chattanooga, Tenn., Tuesday to join him in a drive to reduce the national high school dropout rate of nearly 30 percent, wrote in a preface to the report:

"Generations of Americans who began life in the humblest of circumstances counted on our schools to help them and their children enjoy the personal and material blessings this nation offers ... We have an obligation to see to it that this ladder to success works as well for young people today as it did for those in our past.

"This book explains how schools serving children in poverty can be strengthened I am pleased to recommend this book to every citizen concerned with the education of disadvantaged children."

The booklet says the federal government plays "a significant role in educating disadvantaged children" and should continue funding the $4 billion Chapter One program to offer remedial instruction for disadvantaged children, as well as bilingual education aid.

Education Secretary William J. Bennett has visited some of the schools highlighted in the book, including William Lloyd Garrison Elementary School in the South Bronx, which ranks in the top 12 percent of New York City schools on reading scores.

One student, asked what the rules at Garrison are, said, "No fooling around, no messing around, no mistakes, and everybody hugs you."

Bennett said, "Americans have always believed that good schools make a difference. It is the purpose of this small book to show that our faith is justified. Good schools can save lives.

"These schools hold to the traditional American view that no immutable law dooms a child to failure simply because he or she is born into poverty."

He said the schools cited in the booklet "do not trade fundamentals for novelty, and they tend to avoid what is not tried and true."

The education chief said, "Too many schools serving disadvantaged children are characterized by low test scores, poor achievement, lax discipline, and an inability to retain and graduate their students."

The report says dropout rates are three times higher for poor children than for their affluent counterparts, and 47 percent of poor children score in the bottom quarter on achievement ment tests compared to just 19 percent of non-poor children.

"High school boys with poor grades are more than six times as likely as boys earning above-average grades to be in trouble with the law. Low achievers are five times more likely than other students to become dependent on welfare," it says.

Some 12.5 million children — one in five — live in poverty. The child poverty rate is 45 percent in central cities and 28 percent in rural areas.

"Poor children come from all racial and ethnic groups. Almost half are white, a third are black and the rest are Hispanic or from other minority groups," the booklet says.

The handbook is available free by writing "Schools That Work," Pueblo, Colo. 81009. The two previous handbooks in the "What Works" series summarized expert advice on teaching and learning, and on keeping schools drug-free.

Mississippi Executes Man For Town Marshal's Death

PARCHMAN, Miss. (AP) — Professing his innocence and urging officials to hurry, convicted murderer Edward Earl Johnson died in the gas chamber early today, the first inmate to be executed in Mississippi in nearly four years.

"I guess nobody is going to call, I guess nobody is going to call," witnesses heard Johnson say minutes before his death.

Authorities dropped sodium cyanide crystals into a sulfuric acid solution at 12:06 a.m., releasing poisonous fumes into the chamber.

Witnesses said that seconds before the pellets were dropped, Johnson said, "Let's go with it. Let's go with it."

Johnson, 26, was pronounced dead at 12:21 a.m., said state Corrections Department spokesman Ken Jones.

Prison Superintendent Don Cabana said Johnson maintained his innocence as he was being led into the silver-colored chamber.

"He was thankful that the process was coming to a close for himself and his family," Cabana said. "He stated he was not guilty."

Johnson, convicted of killing of a small-town marshal, sang hymns, read the Bible, talked and played chess with relatives in a cell about 30 feet from the gas chamber Tuesday, as his attorneys filed eleventh-hour bids to save his life.

The appeals were turned down Tuesday by the U.S. Supreme Court, the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals and a federal district judge. Gov. Bill Allain then denied clemency 90 minutes before the 12:01 a.m. scheduled execution.

Johnson was the first person put to death in Mississippi since September 1983 and the state's second since the U.S. Supreme Court allowed states to restore the death penalty in 1976.

About 20 people sang hymns and marched outside the prison during the penitentiary. Another group of about 50 held a candlelight vigil outside the Governor's Mansion in Jackson.

On Monday, the Mississippi Supreme Court and the U.S. Supreme Court refused to block the execution.

In a 20-page opinion Tuesday morning, U.S. District Judge William F. Barbour denied a stay. Among contentions were that Johnson had ineffective counsel, that he had become insane or incompetent and that Mississippi's capital punishment law at the time was unconstitutional because it limited consideration of mitigating circumstances.

Several hours later, the 5th Circuit also refused to stop the execution when it upheld Barbour's decision, and the U.S. Supreme Court then voted 7 to 2 against the stay.

Johnson's mother, Betty Lou, pledged Monday to file a lawsuit against the state if her son was executed.

"If he had committed the murder, I would have been more than happy to say you have to pay your dues," Mrs. Johnson said. "He no sooner murdered that marshal than I did, and I was 90,000 miles away."

Johnson was convicted of murder in the June 2, 1979, slaying of Walnut Grove marshal J.T. Trest, who was shot five times, twice in the head with his own pistol, as he was investigating a burglary report.

The U.S. Supreme Court, which turned down one appeal on March 30, refused Monday to reconsider its earlier rejection.

The gas chamber was last used for the execution of Jimmy Lee Gray on Sept. 2, 1983, for the murder and molesting of a 3-year-old girl.

Johnson had asked that his family not witness the execution. No member of Trest's family would be a witness, either, relatives said.

Liver Transplant Gives Dawn Life

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Seven-year-old Dawn Pope is alive today because of a liver transplant last July.

The oldest of the three children of David and Barbara Pope, the tiny girl was close to death July 21 when the word came from Dallas Medical Center that the liver of a drowned 2-year-old boy could be hers.

Her parents got the final call at their Route 3, Selma, home in the late hours of July 21. They raced to an airport and had their daughter in Dallas at 3:30 a.m. July 22.

Dawn had always been very small for her age, but the Papes did not know that she had liver disease until after their son, Joshua, now a 2-year-old, was born. Joshua became jaundiced in May 1985, and was diagnosed as having Alpha I antitrypsin deficiency, an inherited blood disorder which often causes liver damage.

The Papes were advised to have their other two children evaluated. Their son, Derek, now a 5-year-old, was said not to have the condition, though he may be a carrier. But Dawn was diagnosed as having the condition. The Papes were told what to watch for so they would know if the condition became acute.

By March 1986, it was acute. Dawn began hemorrhaging from the mouth one evening. Her frightened parents rushed her to the emergency room of Wilson Memorial Hospital. Once stabilized there, she was taken to North Carolina Memorial Hospital in Chapel Hill, where she remained for four days.

Dawn's parents were told that her condition was acute and, because her liver was shunting blood away from itself, she was having other blood vessels to rupture.

A short time later, while she was in the hospital in Chapel Hill, her esophagus burst and required major surgical repair and the need to feed her by vein for the next two and one-half months. A search for a new liver for her began in earnest. And the Papes were sent to Dallas, now the second largest and the second most highly successful liver transplant center in the world.

Dawn's doctor in Chapel Hill told her parents that five years ago, had he seen a child as seriously ill with liver disease as Dawn, he would not have recommended a transplant. He said his reasoning would have been that the odds were very great against its being successful in one so sick, so he wouldn't have wanted to put the child or her family through the experience.

He said by mid-1986, however, Dallas, Pittsburgh and a few other medical centers were having success rates of 85 to 90 percent on their liver transplants. He felt there was good reason to recommend the transplant.

Dawn was judged in Dallas to be a good candidate, though a very sick one. Her portal vein to the liver couldn't be seen when dye testing was done. She was sent back to Chapel Hill for further circulatory evaluation and waiting. It was clearer than ever that death was imminent. She had to have a liver soon.

From the time she got back to North Carolina, her condition worsened. Her mother got on the phone more than once telling her new allies in Dallas that she had to have a liver and have it soon for her child.

On July 21, the word came that the 2-year-old's liver was available, but at first it was not clear whether the organ of a child so young would be suitable for transplant in Dawn, then 6 years old. Within hours, though, doctors there determined that, because of her small body size, she could use the smaller liver that was an ideal match for her in every other way.

From the time it became apparent that Dawn was going to need a liver transplant, she had become the darling of the Johnston-Wayne counties area. Fund-raisers from barbecue dinners to auctions to gospel sings to reach-in-the-pocket appeals began. News people throughout the area publicized her plight and what activities were being held on her behalf.

By the time the Papes went to Dallas, about $106,000 had been placed by their friends and neighbors in the Children's Transplant Association of North Carolina account for use by the Pope family for medical and related expense.

"I can't describe how wonderful it makes you feel to know that people can be that loving and generous on your behalf," Barbara Pope said.

"David and I can't ever thank people enough for all that's been done for us and for what might be done in the future for our children and others like them."

Mrs. Pope said she is also very thankful for the support given by her and her husband's employers. She got a leave of absence from Servodyne Industries, makers of air conditioner filters, when Dawn became ill. Though the company did not pay her during her absence from work, they continued to carry her family's medical insurance, which has paid hundreds of thousands of dollars for Dawn's medical care.

David Pope's employer, Lowe's building supplies of Cary, continued to pay him through the two months he and his wife and sons spent in Dallas with Dawn during her most critical time from July 22 through Sept. 21.

The two months after the transplant were critical ones and the Papes lived moment-to-moment at the Ronald McDonald House in Dallas. About 10 days after the transplant, major rejection of the transplanted liver set in and the Papes once again feared for Dawn's life. New treatments for the rejection worked, however, and gradually improvement began.

By the time Dawn arrived back in Johnston County on Sept. 21, she was hardly recognizable to the people there who love her. During the two months, her body weight had increased from less than 30 pounds to more than 40. She now has the chubby-cheeked look that most children on major anti-tissue-rejection medication have. She looks healthy and appears energetic, in joyful contrast to her previous wan appearance.

During her visit to Greenville Tuesday, she spent much of her time cutting paper hearts from pink notebook paper and stringing them together with gold ribbon. She was enjoying a day away from her first-grade classroom at Micro Elementary School.

She has missed more than 100 days this year, her mother says, and probably will repeat the first grade next year, a small problem compared to those the family continues to face.

The Papes live with the very real possibility that Dawn could have further health problems and they also know that there's a 25 percent chance that everything they've gone through with Dawn, they may have to face with Joshua.

Mrs. Pope, not yet 26 years old, says, "You just cope with what you have to. I think David and the children and I have done real well."

Mrs. Pope has returned to her job at Servodyne. She works nights, so her days are free to be at home with her children and to take them to Chapel Hill for checkups.

She says she believes that, along with herself and her husband, her children are learning to cope, too. She says Dawn is very independent, relating well to all the medical personnel in Chapel Hill and Dallas she's come to know so well. She isn't afraid and can be trusted to go through all her frequent lab work at Chapel Hill, once she's delivered to her friends in the lab, while her mother takes her brother to another clinic operating at the same time.

The Papes are members of the American Council for Transplantation and work to promote organ donation. They recently attended a national convention in Washington, and have made public appearances on behalf of the Carolina Organ Procurement Agency.

"Dawn's living proof that transplantation can give individuals and whole families new leases on life," Mrs. Pope said. "We'll always do all we can to let people know that we think organ and tissue donation is a good idea. It's something everyone should think about and do something about."

Money Ties Wife To Boring Man

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a small-town minister's daughter who married a very nice but boring man. When I first met "Steve," he was a young lawyer who had just lost his license to practice and was building houses at the time. I taught school. We did all kinds of crazy and fun things, and after a while we were married, much to the displeasure of my parents. A year later we had a beautiful daughter. I continued to teach because being home with a small child was not my idea of fun. Steve got his license back and continued to practice law, spending long hours at the office. He has gained a lot of weight and now looks like the late W.C. Fields — bulbous nose and all.

I want out of this marriage, but the money is really rolling in right now, and I hate to walk away from it. I can't talk to a lawyer because the only ones I know are friends of Steve's.

I need to know a few things: If I retain custody of our daughter, will Steve be responsible for the payments and upkeep of our new home? Will I be given a living allowance or alimony? Or will I just get child support? Please help me because I don't want to jeopardize my situation before I know where I stand. — DYING OF BOREDOM IN TEXAS

DEAR DYING: I can't predict the terms of your settlement should you divorce this "nice but boring" man.

As long as the money is "really rolling in," spend a little, and take a trip to another Texas town and consult a lawyer who doesn't know your W.C. Fields lookalike, my little chickadee. Only a lawyer can answer your questions.

DEAR ABBY: On behalf of all hearing-impaired people like me who have to read lips, will you please remind professionals such as doctors, lawyers, actors, lecturers, clergymen, etc., to trim their mustaches and beards? In order to read their lips, we must SEE them.

Dear Readers: I was introduced to ragpoint only recently, so I am writing these tips today from one beginner to another. On my first try, I made a few mistakes — all the result of my eagerness to begin.

Mistake No. 1: A plastic yarn needle was recommended to me, but I had only the large-eyed steel needles on hand and wanted to start right in. By the time I was on my second row, I saw why the plastic needles would be better. I had to be careful not to pierce the fabric from previous rows with my needle, and I realized this would be no problem with a plastic needle.

Mistake No. 2: Although I always bind the edges of canvas with masking tape or something similar before starting any needlepoint project, the canvas I had was the interlock type and I thought I would have no problem with raveling, so I started without binding the edges.

After the first three or four stitches, the edges of my fabric strips began raveling and the loose threads were not only annoying but unsightly too. Then I realized the fabric was catching on the raw canvas edge. As soon as I bound the edges, this problem all but disappeared. I found that if I kept a pair of small scissors handy, I could clip away loose threads as they showed up and I had no further problems.

Mistake No. 3: My tension was too tight. After the third row, I could already see my canvas pulling out of shape. I started over on another piece and worked nice loose stitches, and it held its shape very well.

Some general tips: You can use longer lengths for the rag strips than you would with yarn. The main reason for short lengths of yarn in needlepoint is that the yarn fibers wear thin as they are pulled through the canvas over and over. This is no problem with fabric, so you can use whatever length is comfortable for you to work with. I found 40 inches to 44 inches to be a good length for me.

You can simply fold the 1-inch strips of rag in half to thread the needle, but if you are having trouble, place a small strip of cellophane tape over the end.

You have to make no special effort to keep the fabric from twisting slightly — the little folds that appear as you stitch just add to the country charm of this craft. After a while, however, the strips may become too tightly twisted. When this occurs, just let your threaded needle hang free and it will untwist.

Also, I would recommend that you use the "stitch and stab" method of stitching: bring the needle up through the canvas in one motion and take it down in a separate motion instead of working from the top and taking the needle in and out of the canvas in a single motion.

I goofed! It has just been called to my attention that there was a typographical error in my instructions for the "mile-a-minute" crochet trim in a recent column. I apologize for any inconvenience this may have caused you. The correct instructions follow.

Row 1: Chain 4 and make a single crochet in the 4th chain from the hook; chain 2 and make 2 double crochets in the same space where the single crochet was made.

Row 2: Chain 3 stitches, turn your work. In the chain-2 space made on the previous row, work one single crochet, chain 2 and work 2 double crochets in the same chain-2 space. Repeat Row 2 over and over until the trim is the desired length.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market lost more ground today in the wake of Citicorp's decision to add $3 billion to its reserves against bad foreign loans.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down 104.21 points in the last three sessions, dropped another 8.66 to 2,212.62 in the first half hour of trading today.

Losers outnumbered gainers by nearly 3 to 1 in the overall tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 310 up, 890 down and 380 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 27.77 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

After the close on Tuesday, Citicorp announced the increase in its loan-loss reserves, saying it would result in a loss of $2.5 billion for the second quarter.

The market's drop late in Tuesday's session was attributed to rumors and speculation about what the big bank holding company was about to do.

The news served to focus fresh attention on the international debt situation and the potential problems it poses for the banking system.

However, several Wall Street analysts applauded Citicorp's action, arguing that it was a prudent move that effectively reduced the company's exposure to risk of default on the loans in question.

Citicorp shares, which fell 1% Tuesday, rebounded 2% to 52 3/4 after a delayed opening today.

Among other leading money-center bank issues, J.P. Morgan rose 3/4 to 41 1/2 and Chase Manhattan slipped 1/4 to 34 1/2.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks dropped .56 to 157.37. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down 1.76 at 323.31.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average fell 37.38 to 2,221.28.

Declining issues outpaced advances by nearly 4 to 1 on the NYSE, with 337 up, 1,319 down and 344 unchanged. Big Board volume totaled 175.35 million shares, against 174.16 million in the previous session.

Gene Paramore, the trustee following the hospital's continuing negotiations to upgrade its computer system, said Tuesday announcements by IBM about the facets of new computers it will be coming out with do not appear to offer any reason to change any of the tenets of the negotiation under way. A new computer system was installed last fall and it soon became evident that it was not sufficient to meet the medical center's needs. This is the reason for the immediate efforts to deal with the supplier about an upgraded-capacity system.

Dr. Robert Brame, reported that the medical staff, after hearing in two meetings the requests of two local chiropractors to have hospital staff privileges, have recommended to the hospital board that the requests be denied. The board concurred with the medical staff's recommendation.

Various types of staff privileges for 63 medical doctors and one dentist were approved, based on the medical staff recommendations.

House Foreign Affairs subcommittee on Europe and the Middle East.

But Richard Murphy, assistant secretary of state for Near East affairs, said the Soviet Union has leased three tankers to the Kuwaitis, putting them under the protection of its hammer-and-sickle banner.

"We do not want the Soviet Union to obtain a strategic position from which it could threaten vital free-world interests in the region," Murphy told Lantos' subcommittee. "We believe our arrangement will limit Soviet advances."

In other developments: In a speech in Tennessee, President Reagan said U.S. military forces in the gulf had been told to "defend yourselves" against possible attacks spilling over from the Iran-Iraq war.

"We're going to do what has to be done to keep the Persian Gulf open," Reagan said. "It's international waters. No country there has a right to try and close it off and take it for itself. And the villain in the piece really is Iran. And so they're delighted with what has just happened."

Rear Adm. Harold J. Bernsen, speaking to reporters in the gulf state of Bahrain, said the Stark had about a minute's warning that the Iraqi warplane had turned on its weapons radar and had locked in on the frigate. But based on preliminary reports, the admiral said, there was "no indication" to the crew that a missile had actually been launched. He said an official Navy board of inquiry into the attack will begin today.

Bernsen said 24 of the dead were identified, 11 identifications remained to be made and two crew members were missing and presumed dead. The bodies were on the USS LaSalle and a U.S. Air Force C-141 transport jet was to take them home by way of Europe.

A memorial service for the victims will be held Friday at the Mayport Naval Base near Jacksonville, Fla.

reacuracy through the proposed board.

"The Planning and Zoning Commission spends most of its meeting time on short-range issues, such as rezoning requests and subdivision issues," Mrs. Leggett said in her letter.

"Being a reactive board, rather than a proactive board, we are subjecting the city to fragmented responses to very difficult issues. However, adding another layer to the maze serves only to create additional bureaucracy and defeats the very purposes we are trying to attain."

Ms. Leggett recommended an alternative to the proposed seven-member Land Use Planning Committee, which would include five appointees from the city and two from the county.

"I am certain that (City) Council has in mind trying to alleviate some of the problems to which I allude; however, this proposal is not the best route. If City Council is truly interested in establishing and pursuing long-term goals, the machinery is already in place to accomplish this task. The Planning and Zoning Commission has the power under the General Statutes by which it can organize committees for specific purposes."

Meanwhile, other members of the panel recommended the appointment of at least one planning and zoning commissioner as an ex officio voting member on the proposed seven-member committee proposed in the draft ordinance.

Board members also emphasized the importance of having the proposed committee report directly to the Planning and Zoning Commission.

Willie Pate, a Pitt County appointee to the Planning and Zoning Commission, asked that the city seek county input before creating the committee.

"I know that the county people have a real problem at this point with the zoning down the 264 corridor," Pate said. "I think what they are wanting is some committee — some body a joint committee from us and county planning — to have a mutual agreement as to what is going to happen, particularly in that area, and in the Medical District."

"I think what we need to do is to get some harmony between the two governing bodies or planning boards. We could have a meeting with the county planning board and get to know some of their feelings and some of their anxieties."

The goals of the proposed Land Use Planning Committee would remain the same no matter where it originates, according to Bobby Roberson, director of planning and community development.

"I think regardless of whether it is a land use committee or a separate committee under the planning commission, the city needs to look at long-range plans," Roberson said. "The Comprehensive Plan was done in 1980, and the council and the commission constantly refer to it. It should be updated."

In other business, commissioners approved an amendment to the Zoning Ordinance which would allow a 30 percent reduction in the minimum front, side and rear setbacks for churches built before 1984 when they

Two Saudi Arabian F-15 fighters were in the air and asked to force down the Iraqi plane, but the fighters couldn't get clearance from their ground controllers to do so before they ran low on fuel, administration officials said. The officials, speaking only on condition they not be named, said the request was relayed from an U.S.-manned AWACS radar-surveillance plane either during or just after the attack.

Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger acknowledged that "we don't know why" the Stark did not return fire on the Iraqi warplane which hit it with at least one French-made Exocet missile.

To 3-1 Win Over Hunt

Daniels, Jones Spark Rose

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

David Daniels and Greg Jones provided all the punch necessary with a pair of home runs as Rose High School took a 3-1 baseball victory over Wilson Hunt Tuesday night.

The victory meant little to the Big East Conference race since Rose had wrapped up the 1987 championship in its last game on Friday. It did, however, provide a little momentum toward the state playoffs which begin next week.

Rose has one more regular season game left, Thursday at Elizabeth City Northeastern. Then, on Tuesday, the Rampants will entertain Southern Wayne, the number three team from the Mid-Eastern Conference, in the first round of the playoffs. That game will be played at 8 p.m. at Guy Smith Stadium.

For the most part, it was a pitcher's game. Tim Clark started for the Rampants and was replaced by design in the fifth by Tom Moye. Clark, who allowed only two hits, walked none and struck out three, got the win. He allowed the only run Hunt scored, and it was unearned.

Moye, in his three frames, gave up one hit, walked one, fanned four and was called for a balk.

"We planned it (the rotation) to help get us in the right situation for the playoffs," Coach Ronald Vincent said. "I thought both of them threw well and I was real pleased with the effort they gave."

Vincent admitted that the Rampants were somewhat laid back in the game after being out from under the pressure of the pennant race. "We've had some pretty tense games in the last few weeks. Still, it was a good win for us. I thought our defense played well, but we really didn't have a lot of pop in our bats."

"I thought Scott Davis played well at shortstop for us tonight, and David Daniels continues to hit the ball well."

Hunt's starting pitcher, Chris Davis, went five plus innings, giving up seven hits and three earned runs. He struck out three and walked none. Greg Griffin went the final three outs, setting down Rose in order.

Offensively, there was little action in the game. Rose did all of its scoring in the second inning.

Daniels led off the frame with an opposite-field home run to right. With one out, Curtis Perkins singled to center and moved up on an error. He scored when Greg Jones followed with a two-run homer to left.

Rose put only three more men into scoring position, in the third, fourth and sixth frames.

Hunt, which left men at second in the second and third, used a couple of Rose mistakes to score in the fourth. With one down, Greg Winborn reached on an error. Courtesy runner Rodney Little stole second and moved to third on a passed ball. He scored when Richard Tucker grounded out.

Another error also put a man in scoring position in the fourth, and runners reached scoring position in the sixth and seventh without damage.

Daniels led the Rose hitting with a perfect three-for-three evening. He was the only hitter with more than one.

Hunt falls to 9-12 overall and 5-6 in conference play while Rose boosts its record to 18-3 overall and 11-2 in league play.

ECU, FSU Set For Opening Game

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Last year, Florida State and Miami took their rivalry all the way to the College World Series. This year, only one of the two baseball powerhouses can make it out of the state in the playoffs.

The Seminoles, 50-15, are the host and the top seed in the six-team Atlantic Regional, which begins

Thursday at Dick Howser Stadium. The Hurricanes, 35-22-1, are the second seed.

"The fact that we have a chance to play our chief rival makes it very exciting," said Florida State Coach Mike Martin. "Each team will have to do its job and win its first two games to meet in the third round."

In Thursday's first round, Miami plays Georgia Southern, 31-28, at 3 p.m. and Florida State takes on East Carolina, 26-15, at 7 p.m. The regional opener at 11 a.m. pits South Alabama, 36-28, against Central Michigan, 39-13.

The winner of the regional advances to the College World Series in Omaha, Neb. Last year, the state of Florida made up 25 percent of the eight-team CWS field as Florida State won the South II Regional in Tallahassee and Miami claimed the Atlantic Regional title in Coral Gables.

That won't happen again. Miami's lackluster record prompted the NCAA selection committee not to pick the Hurricanes as a regional host this year. Hurricanes Coach Ron Fraser wasn't too upset at the way things worked out.

"I'd rather go there (Tallahassee) than anywhere else," Fraser said. "We've played there before and we've done well there. It's better than going someplace where we're not familiar with anything."

The Hurricanes played in regionals in Tallahassee in 1983 and 1984 and advanced to the World Series in 1984. This season, they won two of three games against the Seminoles in Tallahassee. Florida State returned the favor by winning two of three in Coral Gables this season.

The Seminoles, who breezed through the Metro Conference tour-nameant unbeaten last week, are making their eighth straight playoff appearance and hosting their fifth consecutive regional. Miami has gone to the playoffs for 15 years in a row and won the national championship in 1982 and 1985.

But the two Florida teams aren't the only ones in the regional.

Central Michigan, winner of the Mid-American Conference, has made eight regional trips without making it to the College World Series.

East Carolina, the Colonial Athletic Association champ, earned its fourth post-season berth in the past decade despite an injury plague which knocked out three starters.

South Alabama was runner-up to Miami in the South Regional in 1984. Jaguars left fielder Mike Maksudian is hitting .417 with 57 RBI in only 38 games.

Georgia Southern, the Trans American Conference tournament champ, rebounded from an 11-18-1 start by winning 17 of 22 games in April. But the Eagles, who are making their sixth regional appearance, lost five straight at the end of the regular season.

"We're going in with a feeling of confidence after this past weekend," East Carolina coach Gary Overton said. "We know we have a formidable task in front of us. Florida State is ranked eighth and they do a lot of things well and have a lot of speed. We are going to have to shut down their running game."

"We've also confirmed that Richie Lewis (who started the championship game in the World Series last year for FSU) will throw in the first game. His stats are about as close to awesome as you can get." Lewis, 14-2, has a 3.10 earned run average and has recorded 165 strikeouts.

"We're certainly not in awe of them and we will approach it like any other big game...and it is a big game," Overton said.

The Pirates, who battled injuries through the final half of the regular season, will still be missing at least three regulars. While John Thomas has pretty well recovered from cracked ribs, pitcher Daniel Boone is out for the rest of the season. Boone suffered a shoulder injury during warmups for Sunday's championship series with James Madison. "That could hamper our pitching staff somewhat," Overton said. Third baseman David Ritchie and catcher Jim Riley continued to be sidelined from injuries sustained earlier this year, and back-up catcher Dom Digiralamo is also sidelined with arm problems.

Overton said the Pirates must do two things to win — aside from playing well. "We have to take a few chances, take some extra bases especially the trail runners, when the situation arises. But we also have to be somewhat conservative in playing for one run an inning or for small numbers of runs rather than hoping for a big inning against a guy like Lewis. Hopefully it will be a low-scoring game. That's the kind we like to play."

Overton said that from what he understands, Florida State cannot be compared with anyone on the Pirate schedule. "N.C. State would be in the ball park with them," he said. N.C. State routed the Pirates, 17-1 and 17-8, in two games this year. "This late in the season, though, you never know what will happen. We played well last week and we could use that as a kicker. I don't think we played our best against State, and obviously, we will have to play our best to have a chance against Florida State."

Should the Pirates lose, they will face the winner of the Miami-Georgia Southern game on Friday. A win would send them against the loser of that game.

Cary Tops Rose, 2-0

CARY — Cary High School scored two early goals and coasted to a 2-0 victory over Rose High School Tuesday in the first round of the State 4-A Girls Soccer playoffs.

It was the first trip to the playoffs for Rose, which is fielding a soccer team for only the third season. Ironically, it was also Cary's first trip into the playoffs.

Bev Baleer opened the scoring for the Lady Imps only four minutes into the game. Erica Freas added a second goal at the nine minute mark.

"From then on, our nerves settled down and we played them dead even," Coach Walt McCauley said. "We forced them to take all their shots from way outside and outplayed them in the second half."

Rose got only eight shots on goal in the game and Cary goalie Joanie Suggs recorded seven saves. Cary, meanwhile, had 26 shots on goal, with Rose goalie Adrienne Harrington recording 19 saves.

Rose closes out the year with a 9-4 record. Cary will advance into the second round of the tournament later this week.

BETHEL — Ayden-Grifton exploded for 12 runs in the sixth inning to top North Pitt, 18-13, in high school baseball action and clinch the number-two playoff spot in the Eastern Plains Conference.

The Chargers trailed 8-6 after five innings of play but Stacey Cole and Ronnell Peterson each had a two-run homer in the sixth-inning spurt.

North Pitt tried to rally, pushing across three runs in the bottom of the sixth as Chuck Doak slapped a two-run homer to make it 18-11.

The Panthers then held the Chargers scoreless in the seventh and pushed across two more runs in the bottom of that inning but it wasn't enough.

Tony McLawhorn had four hits to lead Ayden-Grifton. Ty Little, Gary Eubanks and Peterson added three hits apiece while Andy Swanson, Steven Tucker and Todd Miller chipped in two hits apiece.

Calvin Hunter had three hits to lead North Pitt, while Lee Eakes, Jarvis Massenburg, Roosevelt Hines and Steve Strickland all added two hits apiece.

The Chargers improve to 12-8 overall and 8-4 in the EPC. They open the playoffs at Roanoke Rapids while North Pitt travels to Williamston with times to be announced.

PIKEVILLE — Charles B. Aycock held off Greene Central to hand the Eastern Plains champs a 6-5 defeat in the final game of the regular season in baseball Tuesday.

Greene Central took the lead with one in the top of the first, but Aycock came back with two in the bottom of the frame, then added two more in the second and one in the third for a 5-1 edge. All of those runs scored on home runs. Corey Dickerson singled and Greg Chase hit a two-run shot in the first, Danny Miller reached on an error and Dion Battle homered in the second, and Dickerson led off the third with a homer.

Greene Central came back with three in the top of the fifth to close to 5-4, but Aycock scored once in the bottom of the fifth to win it.

Marvin Ford led off the fifth for the Falcons with a walk and was sacrificed up. He scored when Michael Odom's outfield fly was dropped.

Greene Central came back with one in the seventh, only to have two thrown out at third in the frame.

Aycock was led by Dickerson, who had two hits. Shae Beamon led the Rams with three hits, two of them doubles, driving in four runs. Tommy Eason added two hits.

Giants Continue To Reap Success

By HERSHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

The San Francisco Giants are doing it with mirrors and Manager Roger Craig thinks they look mighty good atop the National League West. "We haven't played well, but the amazing thing is we're still in first place," Craig said after the Giants beat the Montreal Expos 6-2 Tuesday night for only their second victory in the last eight games.

But Cincinnati's 9-2 loss to Chicago not only allowed the Giants to move a half-game ahead of the Reds but also gave the Cubs a one-game lead in the NL East over St. Louis, which lost to Atlanta 6-5.

The Giants have played much of the season with three-fourths of their infield — second baseman Robby Thompson, shortstop Jose Uribe and third baseman Chris Brown — on the disabled list. And their starting pitchers may as well have been disabled; Mike LaCoss' seven-inning effort marked the first time in nine games a starter has lasted past the sixth inning.

"I was thinking about it, especially when they loaded the bases in the first inning," said LaCoss, who got Tim Wallach to hit into a double play and escaped allowing only one run. "But we got a big lead pretty early and that always helps you pitch."

In other NL games, Pittsburgh beat Houston 5-2 and New York edged San Diego 5-4. The Los Angeles-Philadelphia game was rained out.

Cubs 9, Reds 2

Rick Sutcliffe became the NL's first seven-game winner as the Cubs won their fifth in a row. Chicago rapped out 15 hits, including four singles by Andre Dawson and three by Jody Davis, and got two RBI apiece from Shawon Dunston, Keith Moreland and Jerry Mumphrey.

Sutcliffe went six innings-plus, giving up five hits and two runs. Dawson, Davis and Moreland each singled a run home in the first inning against Tom Browning. Leon Durham, Mumphrey and Dunston each had an RBI in the fifth and the Cubs added three more runs in the sixth.

The Cubs, who lead the league with 53 homers, settled for 14 singles and a double.

"It just proves you don't have to hit home runs to score a lot of runs," said Dawson, who boosted his average to .307 and is among the league leaders with 12 homers and 35 RBIs. "It's phenomenal, hard to explain. I just want to stay healthy, sit back and enjoy it."

The Reds have dropped four in a row since slugger Eric Davis injured his shoulder, but Manager Pete Rose refused to use that as an excuse.

"The guy playing in his place (Tracy Jones) is doing a fine job," Rose said. "We're not losing because of a lack of offense. Our starter went four innings again."

Only one Cincinnati starter has made it to the sixth inning in the last 12 games.

Braves 6, Cardinals 5

Dion Clinch doubled with one out in the ninth inning off St. Louis relief ace Todd Worrell and scored on Ted Simmons' single. The Braves, who trailed 3-0 before they came to bat, tied the score 5-5 in the eighth on pinch hitter Graig Nettles' two-out, two-run single off Worrell.

"I got jammed, but got just enough of it," Simmons said of his game-winning hit. "With a count of two strikes and a ball with Worrell on the mound, you can't play offense. You've got to play defense, just make contact."

Worrell said he "felt good. I was getting the ball where I wanted to. You have games where they hit the ball just enough to get it in, like Simmons. It was the same thing with Nettles' ground ball. It seemed to skip at the last minute, which was unfortunate for us."

Atlanta's Ozzie Virgil hit his 13th home run of the year and sixth in seven games.

Pirates 5, Astros 2

Pittsburgh scored the go-ahead run in the seventh inning with the help of Houston shortstop Dickie Thon's error, and Mike Diaz hit a solo homer. With the score tied 2-2, the Pirates loaded the bases with one out when reliever Dave Meads hit Rafael Belliard with a pitch, pinch hitter Bill Almon singled and Barry Bonds walked.

Larry Andersen replaced Meads and Bobby Bonilla grounded to second. It probably would not have been a double play but Thon dropped Bill Doran's throw. Belliard scored and Johnny Ray's sacrifice fly scored Almon. The final Pittsburgh run scored on Mike LaValliere's single in the eighth.

John Smiley got the victory despite squandering the 2-0 lead he inherited in the fifth inning from starter Brian Fisher, who didn't return after a 1:27 rain delay in the top of the fifth. Glenn Davis homered for Houston.

Diaz's sixth homer of the season in the fourth inning off Jim Deshaies reached Three Rivers Stadium's third tier of left-field seats.

Mets 5, Padres 4

Howard Johnson's bases-loaded sacrifice fly in the seventh inning broke a tie, but winning pitcher Roger McDowell almost gave the game away on a freak play.

The Padres loaded the bases with two out in the ninth on pinch hitter Marvell Wynne's single, a walk to pinch hitter James Steels and Stan Jefferson's infield hit, which McDowell failed to handle. Disgusted with himself, McDowell attempted to slam the ball into his glove — and missed.

Robinson's Rep Gets Pan-Am Spot

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — David Robinson's reputation was good enough to get him on the U.S. team for the Pan American Games to be held at Indianapolis in August.

Robinson, a 7-foot-1 center from Navy, was granted a waiver from the five-day tryouts that wrapped up Monday at the U.S. Olympic Training Center.

Louisville's Denny Crum, head coach of the Pan Am team, and a selection committee led by Bob Knight of Indiana, picked the 12-man team after tryouts attended by 51 college players.

Joining Robinson on the team are Indiana teammates Keith Smart, a 6-1 guard whose jumper with five seconds remaining gave the Hoosiers the victory over Syracuse in the national championship game, and Dean Garrett, the Hoosiers' 6-10 center.

Also selected for the team were: Willie Anderson, 6-7, University of Georgia; Ricky Berry, 6-8, San Jose State; Fennis Dembo, 6-5, Wyoming; Pervis Ellison, 6-9, Louisville; Rex Chapman, 6-4, Kentucky; Jerome Lane, 6-6, Pittsburgh; Jeff Lebo, 6-3, North Carolina; Danny Manning, 6-11, Kansas; and Jerome Richardson, 6-1, UCLA.

"We picked the 12 young men we felt would fit into our style of play. All are versatile," Crum said after returning to Louisville from Colorado Springs.

Ellison, who attended the news conference with Crum, said he concentrated on playing defense "because that's what coach likes."

In the final scrimmage, Ellison blocked seven shots and pulled down a team-high eight rebounds while scoring 12 points.

Syracuse had three players at the tryouts — center Rony Seikaly, forward Derrick Coleman and guard Sherman Douglas — but none made the squad.

Syracuse assistant coach Wayne Morgan expressed surprise that at least Seikaly, who made last summer's U.S. team which won the World Championships, was not chosen.

"I would say I'm surprised that Rony didn't make it," Morgan said. "I'm not as shocked that Sherman and Derrick didn't."

"He didn't pass the ball as well as the others," Crum said of Seikaly. "But I believe he can make the Olympic team. Seikaly had some good and bad nights. He could have been our next selection, but in the end it came down to numbers and the final number was 12."

The United States is the defending Pan Am champion, having won the title in Caracas, Venezuela in 1983. Five members of that gold medal team went on to play for the United States' gold medal Olympic team in 1984.

The United States won the world championship with a victory over the Soviet Union in Spain last summer with a team led by Robinson.

The Pan Am Games are scheduled for Aug. 9-23 in Indianapolis and the U.S. team opens the tournament against Panama on Aug. 9 at Market Square Arena. Exhibition games between the Pan Am team and teams comprised of current NBA players still are being negotiated.

Brewers Lose 12th Straight Game

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

The Milwaukee Brewers go for unlucky No. 13.

The Brewers, who started the season by tying the major-league record of 13 consecutive victories, lost their 12th straight Tuesday night, 5-1 to the Chicago White Sox. The Brewers hosted the White Sox this afternoon.

"You have to ask are the 13 previous games so emotionally draining that the well's dry?" asked Chicago's Carlton Fisk, who hit a two-run homer. "There's no legitimate reason for losing 12 in a row."

Greg Walker also hit a two-run homer and Tim Lincecum had a solo shot for the visiting White Sox.

"I hate to harp. We had some opportunities," Milwaukee Manager Tom Trebelhorn said after ace Teddy Higuera took the loss.

In other AL games, Kansas City beat Boston 4-1, Baltimore trounced Seattle 15-4, Cleveland rallied past Minnesota 4-3, Texas bounced Detroit 10-8, California edged Toronto 2-1 and Oakland downed New York 4-2.

The Brewers have fallen from first place to third in the American League East. Tonight, they can match a 13-game streak — this time going the wrong way — when Juan Nieves starts at home against Chicago's Joel Davis. It was Davis who ended Milwaukee's season-opening success.

Higuera, 4-3, remained winless since April 24, including three losses and two no-decisions, despite tying a personal high with 13 strikeouts. He gave up eight hits.

Royals 4, Red Sox 1
Bret Saberhagen pitched the AL's first seven-game winner, becoming a six-hitter and Kansas City won its fifth straight game by beating Boston.

Gondrezick Recharged

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Grant Gondrezick, one of three Phoenix Suns players indicted April 16 on drug charges, faces cocaine charges under a new indictment.

The latest indictment, issued last Thursday by a Maricopa County grand jury, accuses the 24-year-old rookie reserve guard of transferring or offering to transfer "a quantity" of cocaine to a woman between Dec. 1 and Jan. 15. The previous indictment charged Gondrezick with conspiracy to possess a narcotic drug, transferring or offering to transfer a narcotic drug and attempting to possess a narcotic drug.

Those charges accused Gondrezick of supplying cocaine to Suns guard Walter Davis, who testified before the grand jury and who was not indicted.

Also charged in the Thursday indictment were two restaurant employees, 30-year-old Terrence Patrick Kelly of Phoenix and 28-year-old Kevin Charles Anolik of Tempe. Each was accused of conspiring to traffic in a narcotic drug.

Kelly was one of the 12 defendants charged in the April 16 indictment. The other two current Phoenix Suns players charged in the April 16 indictment were guard Jay Humphries and center James Edwards. Former Suns players Garfield Heard and Mike Bratz also were charged in that indictment.

Saberhagen, 7-1, struck out four and walked one as the Royals won their ninth straight home game, four short of the team record. The Red Sox are 5-17 on the road this season.

Frank White, Angel Salazar and Steve Balboni hit RBI singles in the Kansas City fourth against Bob Stanley, 2-5.

Orioles 15, Mariners 4

wrestled with Detroit catcher Mike Heath after they exchanged words in the fifth inning. Incaviglia was ejected and no serious blows were struck.

Texas, trailing 8-2 in the fifth inning, rallied with the help of three errors by third baseman Darnell Coles. Parrish drove in four runs. Alan Trammell drove in four for the visiting Tigers with a homer and double.

Dale Mohoric, 3-1, got the victory. Eric King, 2-3, was the loser.

Indians 4, Twins 3

Cory Snyder, benched at the start of the game because of a prolonged batting slump, hit a two-run homer with one out in the ninth inning, giving Cleveland its victory over visiting Minnesota.

Snyder began the night in a 6-for-67 slump and entered the game in the sixth as a pinch hitter, but grounded out with the bases loaded against Mark Portugal to end the threat.

But after Chris Bando opened the Indians' ninth with a single and Brett Butler struck out, Snyder hit his sixth home run off Portugal, 1-3. Cleveland ended its four-game losing streak and won for the third time in 15 games.

Ken Schrom, 3-4, allowed seven hits in his third complete game.

Angels 2, Blue Jays 1

Mark McLemore drove home both California runs, including the tiebreaker with an infield single in the eighth inning against visiting Toronto.

With runners on first and third and two outs, McLemore hit an apparently routine grounder to shortstop Tony Fernandez, but beat the throw in a close play. Blue Jays Manager Jimmy Williams was ejected for arguing the call.

McLemore went 3-for-3 with an RBI single in the third.

DeWayne Buice, 2-2, got the victory and Donnie Moore earned his fifth save. Jeff Musselman, 2-1, took the loss.

Athletics 4, Yankees 2

Rookie Mark McGwire hit his AL-leading 13th home run and Jose Canseco also homered, leading host Oakland over New York.

Canseco, who hit 33 home runs as a rookie last year, hit his fifth in the first inning. He added an RBI single in the fourth.

McGwire hit a solo shot in the third off Dennis Rasmussen, 3-3.

Dennis Eckersley, 3-2, pitched two-hit relief for 4 2-3 innings. Jay Howell worked the ninth for his seventh save, allowing a solo homer to Gary Ward.

Lakers And Celts Take Playoff Wins

By The Associated Press The Boston Celtics and Los Angeles Lakers could be heading toward their third meeting for in four years for the NBA championship.

The Celtics, who beat Los Angeles in 1984 and lost to the Lakers in 1985, defeated the Detroit Pistons 104-91 in the opener of the Eastern Conference final Tuesday night. The Lakers took a 2-0 lead over Seattle in the Western Conference with a 112-104 decision.

Robert Parish scored 15 of his 31 points in the decisive third quarter and Larry Bird had 18 points, 16 rebounds and 11 assists despite a dismal 7-for-22 shooting performance.

"I try to play the total game every night," Bird said. "If I'm not scoring, I try to make up in other areas."

Pistons superstar Isiah Thomas also had a miserable shooting night, but in a losing cause. He had two points in the first half, when he was 1-for-12 from the field, and finished with 18 points on 6-for-24 shooting.

"I'll never shoot this way again," Thomas said. "Next time I don't know if they'll leave me that open but if they do, they'll pay."

"It was one of the weirdest games I've been in in a long time," Boston Coach K.C. Jones said. "As long as we won, I can't complain."

Boston led only 48-47 early in the second half before Parish scored 13 points in a 26-14 run that gave the Celtics their biggest lead of the third quarter, 74-61, with 1:05 left. The Celtics led by at least seven points the rest of the way.

Game 2 of the series will be in Boston on Thursday night. Games 3 and 4 of the Lakers-Sonics series will be in Seattle on Saturday and Monday afternoons.

James Worthy scored 25 of his 30 points in the first half and Magic Johnson, selected as the NBA's Most Valuable Player on Monday, had 12 of his 20 in the fourth quarter for the Lakers against Seattle.

Johnson, who also had 10 rebounds and 10 assists, made a foul shot with 2:05 remaining and a pair of free throws with 1:14 to go to extend a 104-100 lead to seven points.

After Seattle's Dale Ellis made two free throws with 1:03 left to make it 107-102, Johnson drove the lane for a layup with 48 seconds remaining to clinch the victory.

Swindell One Short Of Making It

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Sammy Swindell was the 34th-fastest qualifier for Sunday's 33-car Indianapolis 500.

Swindell, a veteran sprint car racer with more than 400 career victories, qualified for his rookie Indy 500 last Saturday, then waited nervously as the field was completed with faster cars. Now, he is the first alternate for the $4 million race.

On Sunday, after the final three spots were filled, the three slowest cars were bumped from the lineup by three faster cars. Swindell, who had qualified at 201.840 mph, was the last to go, bumped by veteran Ed Pimm in the closing minutes of qualifications.

"It was close, but not close enough," said Swindell, whose average speed was .648 mph slower than the 33rd-place qualifier, Steve Chassey, who was at 202.488.

"It was a lack of horsepower," said Swindell, who was driving the only Pontiac-powered race car entered for this year's race. "I ran only 207, 208 mph down the straights, so I ran as good a lap as I could. But I had to be a good 60 horsepower down from anybody else here."

The only chance for Swindell to get into the race now is if one of the qualified drivers is injured or if a car is too severely damaged to be repaired following Thursday's final two-hour practice period. A year ago, Dennis Firestone's qualified car was wrecked during that final pre-race practice, and he had to withdraw.

The withdrawal allowed first-alternate Dick Simon to start his 15th Indy in the 33rd position.

"The tension to qualify was high," said Swindell, hoping, somehow, he might still get into the race. "It was a struggle. I wish we had another week (to qualify) ..."

"I've gained a lot of knowledge from driving the Pontiac, and it has a lot of small problems. Being a pioneer, you have to do with it what you can," he said.

Swindell, 31, from Bartlett, Tenn., began racing modifieds in 1971. He made his Indy-car debut at the Michigan 500 in 1985 and was ninth in A.J. Foyt's backup car at the Pocono 500 last year.

He has not yet driven in an Indy car this season.

"I'm disappointed because I wanted very much to make this race," he said of his failed effort at Indianapolis. "But I'm satisfied, too. I'm convinced I got the most that was in the car and that (car-owner) John (Buttera) and the crew had the car as close to perfect as it could be."

Three other Foyt drivers are in Sunday's lineup, along with Foyt, a four-time winner himself. Rookies Stan Fox and Davy Jones, along with perennial Foyt backup George Snider, qualified for the race.

Pimm, Snider and Chassey will start from the 11th and final row. Foyt, extending his record to 30 consecutive starts in the 500, joins Roberto Guerrero and Simon in the second row.

Pimm, the third-slowest qualifier at 203.284 mph, said he was embarrassed by his slow speed.

"I think I underestimated time trials this year," said Pimm, whose four-lap average was more than 7 mph slower than his qualification speed a year ago.

"The problem that everyone is having is not just with the (new radial) tires ... The problem is just getting them to work with the chassis, and it's a problem that everyone is having this year."

"We're embarrassed that we ran this slow, but we're going to run all day (in the race)."

Speedway crews Tuesday continued getting the track ready for the race, including the placement of the giant fuel tanks behind the cars' respective pits and the lettering of each driver's name at the proper spot on the pit wall.

Rookie Dominic Dobson, who was the 35th-fastest qualifier at 201.240 mph and would be the second alternate, said, "I went as fast as I could. We had so fewer miles than anyone here ... I think we only ran 400 miles all month."

"It's not that we didn't make an effort, the team did a heck of a job. We just put this program in less than a month. So we're going home to regroup and hope to make some other races this year."

Flyers Need To Win, Don't Know Howe

EDMONTON, Alberta (AP) — The Philadelphia Flyers know who they need to win, they just don't know if they can count on Howe.

"After the torture (therapy) I went through, I don't want to miss it," injured All-Star defenseman Mark Howe said Tuesday as he prepared for Game 2 of the Stanley Cup final against the Edmonton Oilers.

Howe's injured knee continued to be a sore point for the Flyers — along with the revelation that center Pelle Eklund had suffered a "mild charley horse."

However, according to Coach Mike Keenan, both will be available for tonight's game, along with previously injured players Murray Craven, Lindsay Carson and J.J. Daigneault.

"The progress of our injured players from the last game has improved and we're expecting that two, and possibly three of them are ready to play in terms of health," Keenan said.

Keenan said that actually everyone would be available with the exception of right wing Tim Kerr, who is possibly out for the rest of the playoffs with an injured shoulder.

Howe of course is the biggest name of the bunch and his situation became of prominent concern to the Flyers after he suffered a so-called "charley horse" in his left knee in Philadelphia's 4-2 loss in Game 1 Sunday night. A trainer translated the injury into "stretched muscles."

Howe was unable to practice either Monday or Tuesday and will test the sensitive knee for the first time in pre-game warmups tonight at the Northlands Coliseum.

"I expect Mark Howe to play," Keenan said. "He has a contusion and hasn't skated since (Sunday night). But he is recovering from the injury."

However, if Howe can't play,

Keenan said the Flyers "would have to make some adjustments. You could never replace Mark Howe."

Eklund, star of the Flyers' Wales Conference final series against the Montreal Canadiens, didn't show up for an optional practice Tuesday, either. And neither did captain Dave Poulin, who has played in the last two playoff games for the Flyers after recovering from broken ribs.

"Physically I feel really good," Poulin said, "but I don't think by any means that I'm on top of my game. But that can't be expected playing three games in the last five or six weeks. (He played one game in the Patrick Division final against the New York Islanders)."

"Each day I do feel better, though, and I think my timing is coming back."

For Keenan, the injury situation is nothing new.

"We've gone 80 games making adjustments for injuries," Keenan said. "It's a fact of life in Philadelphia."

As much of a concern to the Flyers as their injuries is the explosive offense of the Oilers, the most potent scoring machine in NHL history.

"They probably have the greatest potential of any team in the world to play a fine game and when you allow them to do that, certainly they become the most explosive team in hockey," Keenan said.

Based on what happened in Game 1, the Flyers figure to make some adjustments against the Oilers.

"Obviously, to get to this point, they have a good hockey club and can make adjustments," Oilers center Wayne Gretzky said. "There is no question that they are going to make some minor adjustments and do things differently than they did last game."

"That's what makes hockey teams good. We know that they are going to be a different team (tonight)."

Gretzky and many of the other Oilers felt that winning the opening game gave them a psychological advantage in the best-of-seven series which will continue with Games 3 and 4 in Philadelphia on Friday and Sunday nights.

"It was very important to us," Edmonton defenseman Paul Coffey said. "We played a bad game against Los Angeles (in the first game of the Smythe Division playoffs) and lost; we were lucky to win against Winnipeg in overtime and we didn't play well against Detroit (in the opener of the Campbell Conference final) and lost again."

"We didn't want to sit around for two days and stew about a loss."

Peach Wants ACC Tie-In

ATLANTA (AP) — Lee Ayres, executive director of the Peach Bowl, is hoping persistence and patience will pay off in his quest to woo the Atlantic Coast Conference football champion to the holiday season game in Atlanta.

Ayres didn't even get his foot in the door with the proposal this year. The ACC would not discuss the matter officially at its meeting in Myrtle Beach, S.C., Tuesday.

Ayres said he'll be back, though he understands some of the league's reservations about an agreement to send the ACC champs to the Peach Bowl each year.

"I think we ought to go to it. I'll suggest it again next year," Ayres said after the ACC meeting.

Leftists Staging All-Out Drive To Stop Thatcher In 3-Way Race

By MARCUS ELIASON
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — In her bid for re-election, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher may have less to fear from her traditional opponent, the Labor Party, than from what's going on in Nina Fishman's cluttered north London apartment.

Armed with a computer and reams of electoral statistics, Miss Fishman is running a campaign from her home for what is officially known as "tactical voting," but in fact amounts to all-out war on Mrs. Thatcher.

Her goal is to persuade opposition voters to ignore their own differences and band together behind those candidates statistics show are most likely to defeat candidates of Mrs. Thatcher's Conservative Party.

What this 40-year-old college lecturer in industrial relations is doing illustrates the changed face of British politics as old class and party loyalties crumble and the tidy two-party system is transformed into a volatile three-way race.

For the first time since World War II, Britons are having to familiarize themselves with the notion of coalition government, in case none of the parties wins an outright majority on June 11.

The chief catalyst in this new ferment has been the alliance, a centrist union of the old Liberal Party and the more recently formed Social Democratic Party, which is trying to seize the middle ground between the increasingly polarized Conservative and Labor blocs.

The effect was already felt in the 1983 election when the alliance, then just two years old, ate deep enough into Labor's support to give Mrs. Thatcher a landslide victory on an uncommonly low 42.4 percent of the popular vote.

TV 87, as Miss Fishman's organization calls itself, grew out of a letter she wrote to the Guardian newspaper in January suggesting that tactical voting could achieve what many left-wingers regard as the main priority: stopping Mrs. Thatcher from winning a third term.

If one of the Tories' main assets was a divided opposition, Miss Fishman reasoned, why not pool that opposition through tactical voting — cast your vote not to elect the candidate you like, but to keep out the one you hate.

For example, in the London constituency of Putney, David Mellor of the Conservatives won in 1983 with 21,863 votes. The Labor candidate got 16,844 and the alliance candidate got 7,668. This time, if alliance voters back the Labor candidate instead of their own, Mellor could lose.

The approach is nothing new to most West European democracies, but in Britain it borders on the revolutionary, which may explain why politicians of both big parties are hostile to tactical voting and some Conservatives have suggested that advocating it is somehow illegal.

Says Labor Party leader Neil Kinnock: "I ask people: are you really willing to make such a gamble, take such a risk, go for such a flutter on the future of our country ... just hoping that enough people in enough places will spontaneously, coincidentally and in the secrecy of the ballot booth, vote together to turn out the Tories."

The alliance, which could benefit from tactical voting, supports the strategy, but David Steel, leader of its Liberal Party half, prefers to call it "thoughtful voting."

Miss Fishman reckons there are more than 100 constituencies which, if targeted for tactical voting, could produce a significant power shift in the 650-seat Parliament. Mrs. Thatcher now has 398 seats, Labor 207 and the alliance 27.

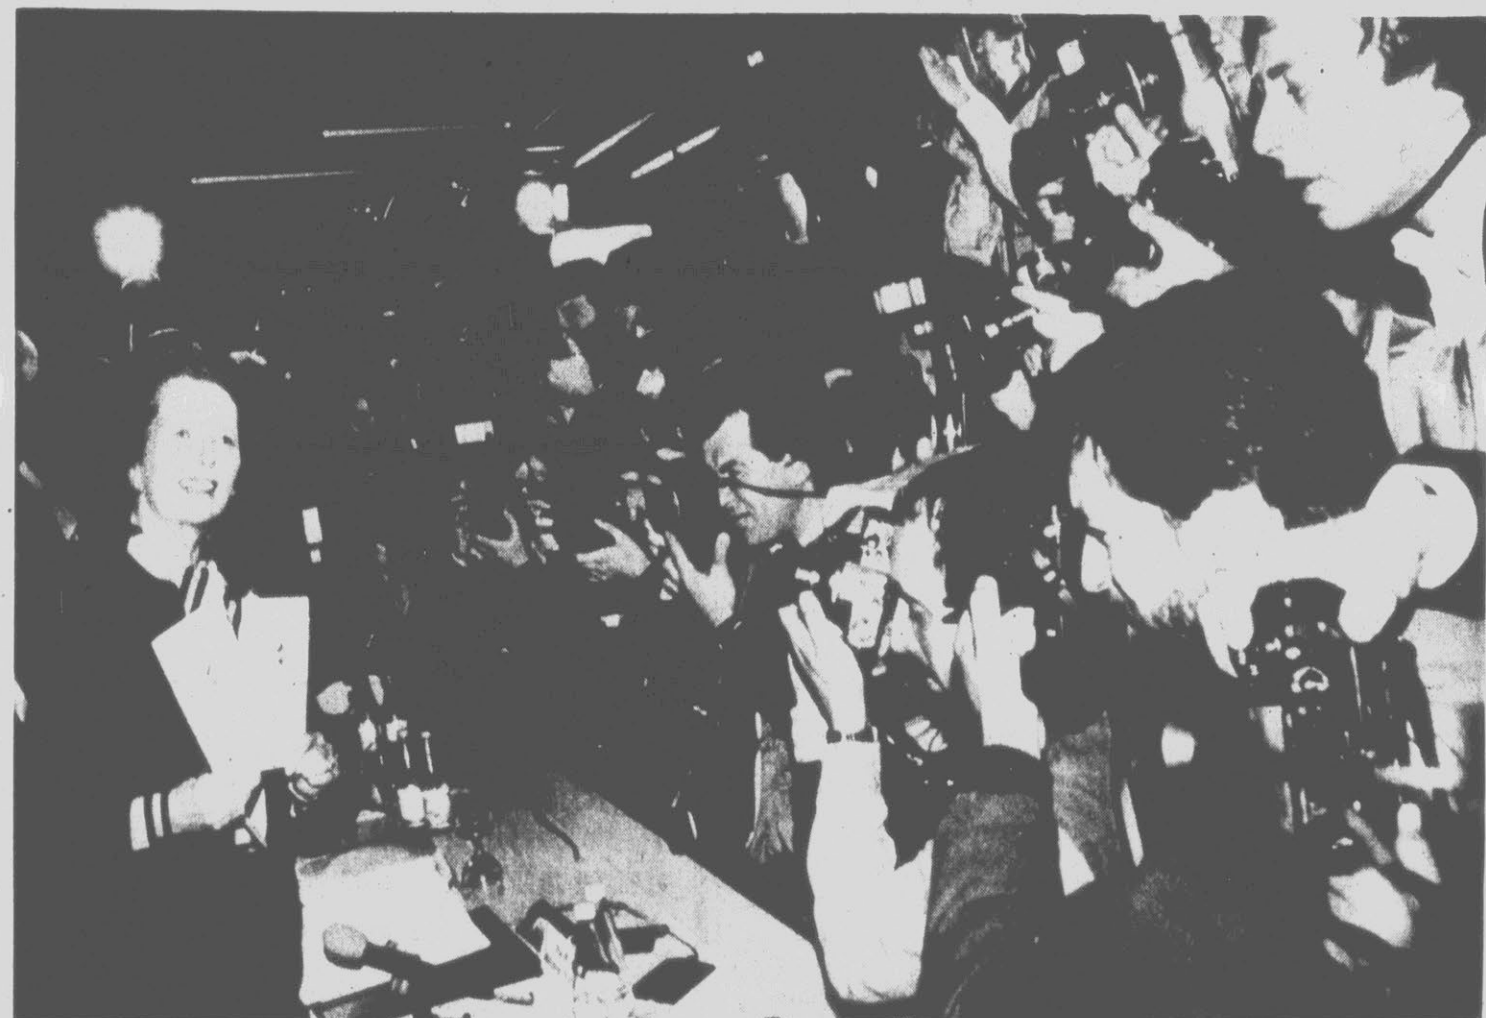

TV 87 campaigners are trying to propagate their ideas through the media, by word-of-mouth and by commissioning opinion polls to demonstrate to voters that they can sway the outcome by voting tactically.

"That is the exciting aspect of tactical voting. It enables us to use our democracy actively, rather than responding passively to the tightly controlled choices to which the parties seek to confine us," says Peter Crouch, an Oxford University political scientist and supporter of TV 87.

The weekly Economist newsmagazine reckons tactical voting "could make a huge difference to the overall result."

TV 87 enthusiasts say critics are just posturing. "Politicians, like boxers before the big fight, must on no account admit that they could not knock the other fellow out of the ring," Eric Hobsbawm, a veteran Marxist theoretician whose support for tactical voting has given the campaign a big boost, wrote in the monthly Marxism Today.

"Like it or not," Hobsbawm wrote, Britain now has "a three-way system of politics."

CENTER OF ATTENTION — British Prime Minister Margaret Thacker faces a barrage of press cameramen at the Conservative Party's Central Office in London Tuesday as she launched her campaign for re-election. She called the general elections last week for June 11, setting the stage for her campaign for a third term. She is running on a campaign theme of "Power to the People." (AP Laserphoto)

Tokyo Police Accuse Four Japanese Men Of Spying On U.S. For Soviets

By MAGGIE JACKSON
Associated Press Writer

TOKYO (AP) — Four Japanese passed on U.S. military documents to Soviet and Chinese buyers for several years, police charged today, and U.S. military authorities investigated the extent of the security damage.

The four suspects include a current and a former employee of U.S. military facilities.

Police said the men are suspected of selling documents to Soviet diplomats and Chinese buyers, but that no details were available on the alleged deals with the Chinese, who may or may not have been government officials.

The four men were arrested Tuesday after one attempted to give U.S. military documents to a Soviet diplomat in a Tokyo park.

Police said they seized documents and equipment that pointed to a longtime operation that included transactions in a cemetery and orders issued by short-wave from the Soviet Union.

They said the four received a total of more than $714,000 for the documents.

U.S. military officials, who initially alerted Japanese police to the matter, refused to comment on the nature of the documents involved.

The United States is studying the damage caused by the ring but leaving the investigation to the Japanese, said Lt. Col. John T. Kirkwood, deputy director of the Fifth Air Force public affairs division.

Police arrested Hiromi Date, 62, when he met V.B. Aksenov of the Soviet Trade Representative's office at a park in western Tokyo to hand over documents, said a police official, who could not be identified in keeping with regulations. Police refused to describe the documents.

Date was described as a counselor at the private China Technical Center in Tokyo.

Aksenov, who police said claimed diplomatic immunity, left Japan today aboard an Aeroflot Airlines flight to the Soviet Union, said an Aeroflot official.

On Tuesday night, police arrested Hiroshi Osumi, 65, an employee in the technical library of Yokota Air Base in western Tokyo, on suspicion of stealing documents on the repair of maintenance of U.S. transport planes.

Also arrested were Masateru Tachibana, 59, a writer on military affairs and a former employee at another U.S. air base, and Sadao Gotoh, 60, the president of Sanko Ltd., a trading company doing business with China, police said. Both were charged with purchasing stolen goods, the police official said.

Police seized a radio receiver and technical documents describing U.S. military aircraft from the men's houses, officials said.

Tachibana admitted today under questioning that he participated in espionage, police said.

Soviet Embassy information officer Alexei Panteleev had no comment on the allegations.

Chinese Embassy spokesman Han Zuomin said he did not know of any China Technical Center, where Date supposedly worked, and said he did not know whether any of the four men had contacts with Chinese officials.

Among the documents seized Tuesday was a map showing a hole at the foot of a tree in a Tokyo cemetery, which police believed was used as a hiding place for documents or money.

Police also said a memo found in one of the men's homes indicated transactions were made between the Soviets and Japanese based on orders given by short-wave radio broadcasts from the Soviet Union.

The arrests came as the governing Liberal Democratic Party prepared to introduce an anti-espionage bill in Parliament, despite objections from some Japanese that the proposed law could curtail free expression.

Soviet KGB agent Stanislav Levchenko, who defected in 1979, called Japan "a paradise for spies," and said 50 to 60 Soviet agents were operating in Japan, particularly in areas of high technology.

The U.S.-Japan Mutual Security Treaty calls for a jail term of up to 10 years for anyone convicted of collecting classified information on U.S. forces in Japan "for purposes injurious to mutual security."

Bomb Kills South African Policeman

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Two bombs exploded today outside a courthouse in Johannesburg, killing a white policeman and injuring 11 officers and civilians, police said.

The blasts occurred about 12:30 p.m. at the magistrate's court building at the edge of the financial district.

A policeman at the scene said one bomb — apparently the more powerful of the two — had been placed in a car parked across from a side entrance to the courthouse.

More than 13 other cars along the street and in an adjacent parking lot were damaged by the flying debris from the exploded car. The hood of one car was blown off, and the back end of another was crumpled into a mass of twisted, black metal.

The police public relations office in Pretoria said four policemen were seriously wounded and two policemen were slightly wounded. Five civilians also were injured, the office said, but the extent of their injuries was not immediately known.

The independent South African Press Association said about 20 photographers and television crewmen were taken into custody to police headquarters after they took pictures from the roof of a nearby building.

Today is the fourth anniversary of the deadliest guerrilla bombing attack in South Africa, when 19 people were killed and more than 200 injured by a car bomb that exploded outside an office building in Pretoria.

The outlawed African National Congress, the main guerrilla movement fighting to overthrow the South African government and end apartheid, claimed responsibility for the Pretoria bombing four years ago. The ANC has made no specific comment on the nearly 50 bombings in South Africa since a state of emergency was declared June 12.

Today, rescue workers carrying medical supplies could be seen rushing into the courthouse and treating a woman for shock on the sidewalk. Witnesses said they saw an ambulance carry away one injured person and that three other people were taken out of the courthouse on stretchers.

"It was terrible. There was this huge bang and I looked round and saw this woman flying through the air," said a man who was at the scene. He spoke on condition of anonymity.

Windows of shops up to two blocks away were shattered, and police ordered nearby snack shop owners to close for fear of more explosions. Police with sniffer dogs checked vehicles outside the Rand Supreme Court building 10 blocks away after the explosions at the magistrate's court.

Tree branches and pieces of metal littered the street outside the magistrate's courthouse.

Chevrolet announces a very special cash-back offer.

$500 Cash Back

The whole idea behind engineering cars like the new Corsica and Beretta was to give you more than expected. In that spirit, we decided it was only appropriate to make the introduction of Corsica and Beretta more than expected as well. Which is why we've added a $500 cash-back offer on both $500 cash back on any new 1988 Beretta, the sophisticated two-door sport coupe with a natural instinct for the road. And $500 cash back on the new 1988 Corsica, the four-door, five-passenger sedan that's remarkably aerodynamic with a coefficient of drag lower than a Ferrari Testarossa. The 1988 Corsica and Beretta. The cars engineered to be more than expected now come with an introductory offer to match.

Plus, five other ways to go.*

Fijian Youths Stage Riot In Capital

SUVA, Fiji (AP) — Fijian youths rampaged through this capital today, beating up ethnic Indians in the first violence since last week's coup.

Despite the riot, the governmental crisis that began when the army stormed Parliament on Thursday and arrested the Cabinet appeared headed for resolution. Prime Minister Timoci Bavadra — freed from detention Tuesday — indicated he would not insist on continuing as head of government or on punishing those involved in the military takeover. He said new elections could come in "a couple of months."

The Great Council of Chiefs, made up of 66 paramount chiefs from Fiji's 14 provinces, met today in an attempt to stave off communal bloodshed and decide how to end the crisis.

They were thought to be discussing the possibility of amending the constitution to ensure the ethnic Fijians' political dominance over ethnic Indians, who slightly outnumber them.

Such an amendment was among the goals of coup leader Lt. Col. Sitivani Rabuka. Bavadra's left-leaning government, elected April 11, was the first dominated by Indians since Fiji became independent from Britain in 1970.

About 200 Fijian youths shouting support for Rabuka beat up ethnic Indians holding a prayer meeting in a Suva park. The Fijians then ran through the streets punching Indian bystanders and smashing car windows.

Women and children were hit with sticks and fell to the ground bleeding.

The Australian Associated Press said about 50 people, apparently all of them ethnic Indians, were injured. The central hospital reported it had treated 21 people for various injuries.

Rabuka appeared in Sukuna Park, where the Indians had gathered to pray, to appeal to Fijians to go home and not cause trouble. He later went on Fiji radio and repeated the appeal. The park is in front of the chiefs' meeting place.

The rampage ended when troops appeared, but there appeared to be no attempt to arrest anyone. At midday, the streets of Suva were deserted and virtually all stores were shuttered.

There were no reports of violence in any other towns on the 100 inhabited islands of the 300-island archipelago, 1,400 miles east of Australia.

Governor General Ratu Sir Penaia Ganilau postponed his appointment of an advisory council until after the chiefs made their recommendations.

Ganilau, who as the British crown's representative in this former British colony is normally a figurehead, said Tuesday he had dissolved Parliament, assumed executive powers and ordered new elections. He said he would establish an advisory council to function as an interim administration.

The Fijian-dominated army and Fijian nationalists want constitutional guarantees of Fijian dominance in government.

Ethnic Indians, descendants of indentured laborers brought to Fiji by the British in the 19th century, make 49 percent of the 715,000 population. Fijians make up 47 percent, with Europeans and other Pacific Islanders comprising the remainder. The Indians traditionally have dominated commerce.

Bavadra and his Indian-dominated Cabinet were released by Rabuka on Tuesday night after six days of house arrest.

Scouts Cite Surrogate 'Mom's' Help To Pets

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

If there was an award for surrogate motherhood, Dawn Fitts of Greenville could be one of its recipients.

She was recognized Tuesday night for her maternal services with a citation from the Boy Scouts of America during its Roundtable program.

A volunteer with the Scouts, "she had three kittens and kept them in her tent" during a recent camporee in Beaufort County, said Irene Lee of the Boy Scouts. "She does beautiful work like that."

Ms. Fitts has mothered abandoned dogs, cats, snakes, lizards, turtles, ferrets, chinchillas ... the list goes on.

"I grew up with animals" in Swansboro, she said, explaining she has cared for abandoned animals since she was in high school. A veterinarian technician of nine years and a registered laboratory technologist, she is listed with the Pitt County Humane Society to take care of animals.

Currently, Miss Fitts is caring for the kittens along with her own two cats and dog.

"A young man at Bob's TV found them" in a garbage can, she said of the kittens. "They're big now. I got them when they were 3 days old."

The 5-week-old kittens already have homes and will be leaving once they get a little bigger, Ms. Fitts said. The two female kittens, Miss Piggy and Spot, probably will leave before their brother, Tom, "because they're eating well."

Tom is fed through a bottle about four times a day, she said.

"When I first got them, it'd take about three to four hours a day" to feed them, Ms. Fitts said. "I get them on my schedule real fast."

The kittens have their shots, and they have been dewormed, she said. "As soon as they open their eyes, I get them dewormed."

The kittens are kept on a bed of carpet, covered with plastic, newspaper and a towel, surrounded by a large white cage furnished with food, water and a litter box.

Cats usually do not need to be litter trained. "That's an instinctive behavior," Ms. Fitts said.

Spring is the time of year when many puppies and kittens are born and are abandoned, she said. She recently cared for puppies that were abandoned in a dumpster. "They were dehydrated" and weak, Ms. Fitts said.

They suffered with a virus, she said. "From the time they got sick until they died was about four hours."

Ms. Fitts encourages pet owners to have their animals spayed. And, "call the Humane Society if something happens to momma. Call them or put them (the babies) to sleep. Don't throw them in the dumpster," she said.

Those interested in parenting orphan animals may call the Humane Society at 756-1268.

ADDING POUNDS — After a bottle-fed meal, Tom cooperates as Ms. Fitts weighs him on a scale. The weighing process is not official, she said, but it gives a good approximation of the animal's weight. Tom is "right at 8 ounces," she said.

SURROGATE MOM — Dawn Fitts of Greenville introduces these 5-week old female kittens, Miss Piggy and Spot, to sunshine. Registered with the Pitt County Humane Society to care for abandoned pets, Ms. Fitts has nursed the kittens, along with their brother, Tom, since they were found in a dumpster. (Reflector Photos by Cliff Hollis).

BOTTLE FED — Kittens are bottle fed until they are old enough to eat on their own, Ms. Fitts said. The formula Tom is drinking may be compared to that used for babies as it provides the nutrients he needs to grow.

Patients Squawk As Feathers Fly

By SHARON COHEN
Associated Press Writer

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — The patient enters the operating room, draped in a pink towel, warily eyeing the doctor in his white coat and the shiny needle on the counter. She squawks.

She is not happy, but no one seems to mind her feathers are ruffled. Lots of patients squawk around here. This is a hospital for the winged wounded.

It's the Raptor Research and Rehabilitation Program at the University of Minnesota, the nation's oldest and largest healing center for birds of prey and a temporary nest for grounded birds from across the Midwest.

Brunhilda, a snarling bald eagle, is being examined to determine how well she's recovering from a broken leg. She is a problem patient: she was taken in with a broken wing, then hurt her leg thrashing about while convalescing.

She is one of nearly 4,000 eagles and hawks, owls and falcons, swans and pelicans who've been brought here in need of some mending magic so they can soar once more.

"There's nothing that makes me happier than seeing a patient released," said Dr. Patrick Redig, veterinarian and co-founder of the program.

Each year, 300 to 400 raptors, or predatory birds, are brought in for treatment, most from the five-state area of Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa, Illinois and North Dakota. A few, however, have been sent from as far away as Alaska, California and Maine.

Some have broken wings or legs. Others have battered beaks, eyes poked out or bodies bruised from being shot or caught by traps or power lines. About half the injuries are accidental. Birds hit by cars are most common.

Great horned owls are most numerous. But more than 400 bald eagles and 1,500 non-raptors have also been admitted since the program began in 1972.

Many injured or sick raptors Redig sees have been sent to him as a last resort; they've failed to heal elsewhere or are cases no one wants.

"We get several birds who come in totally emaciated ... unable to stand up, unable to hold their heads up," he said. "The worst ones have been caught in traps and have literally pounded themselves to a pulp."

About two of five recover and return to the wild. "If you go down to a field hospital in a war zone, I don't think you'd have a much higher percentage," Redig boasted.

The raptors, most of whom use their legs to kill, are not released unless they are 100 percent healed. Otherwise, they would not survive.

Those who don't make it are divided into two categories: the disabled who are used for education or shipped to nature centers and breeding programs and those who die or are humanely destroyed.

Many birds arrive in boxes, shipped by conservation officials or concerned citizens. Others are driven to the door by hunters or motorists.

Redig, too, gets involved, making late-night airport trips to pick up birds. Once, after a severe storm, he traveled to a lake where hail stones had broken the legs or wings of 30 pelicans.

The raptor program treats birds as hospital patients. The regimen includes tests, intravenous feedings, vitamins, antibiotics, X-rays, meals — usually rodents — and rehabilitation.

But these are no ordinary hospital halls. Feathers are strewn on the floor. Wading pools are set up for eagles to splash in. And new patients, their wings often wrapped in gauze, are housed in cages, hissing or snorting through wooden slats when visitors stop by.

Once they're well enough, they begin spreading their wings in a room with padded walls. They next move to an 7-foot-wide hallway with two perches, 65 feet apart, where they can fly from end to end while doctors count the laps and check their breathing rates.

Doobie Brothers Are 'Takin' It To The Streets'

By ALAN L. ADLER
Associated Press Writer
SAN DIEGO (AP) — The Doobie Brothers, that good time band whose good time music won Grammys and legions of fans a decade ago, is "takin' it to the streets" once again, five years after leaving the rock scene.

The group, who aren't brothers or related in any way, have reunited to do a charity tour for Vietnam veterans. Promoters hope to raise $250,000 for a Hollywood Bowl concert on May 22.

The catalyst is Keith Knudsen, the Doobies drummer from 1973-82. Knudsen was so moved after reading about Meshad's book, "Captains for Dark Mornings," that he volunteered to help the author in his work for disadvantaged Vietnam War veterans.

In 1968, Knudsen refused induction into the Army, was indicted and went to trial three years later. He was acquitted on a technicality.

That was before he joined the Doobies, a biker and bar band out of the San Francisco Bay area that evolved to become one of the most successful groups of the 1970s and who helped define a new era with their bluesy street rock.

"We were a good-time band. We tried to stay away from too much politics in our songs," Knudsen said in a telephone interview from Los Angeles, where the Doobies are rehearsing for their concert tour.

The band, which has gone through numerous personnel shifts, originally was fronted by singer-guitarist Tom Johnston, percussionist John Hartman and singer-songwriter Patrick Simmons.

Their first LP, "The Doobie Brothers," came out in 1971. The Doobies first commercial hit was "Listen to the Music," a song written by Johnston. They followed with other Johnston hits, "China Grove" and "Long Train Runnin'" from "The Captain and Me" LP.

Jazz and rhythm and blues came when guitarist Jeff Baxter joined. The ex-Steely Dan member was featured on 1975's "Stampede" LP.

With "Takin' It to the Streets" in 1976, the Grammy award-winning singer-songwriter-keyboardist Michael McDonald joined with his rhythm and blues styling and raspy, Ray Charles voice.

The group's 1978 "Minute by Minute" LP was a runaway success with McDonald's "What a Fool Believes" — the Grammy record and song of the year in 1979.

With pressure for McDonald to go solo, the group broke up in 1982. They gave their farewell concert at the Greek Theater in Berkeley, Calif.

Knudsen said they parted on good terms. "I believe we could have not broken up and still be milking the Doobie Brothers for all it's worth," he said. "But the decision was 'Let's go out with some class, do a farewell tour and a live album.' I'm talking for myself, but it was time for a change."

Knudsen said he received enthusiastic support when he called the former Doobie members with his idea of a reunion for Vietnam vets. He had hoped for a festival-type event, possibly at the Los Angeles Coliseum. But time and energy would not permit such a grand return.

"This concert has nothing to do with the Vietnam War, won or lost, right or wrong. It has to do with the warriors, the plight of the Vietnam veterans," Knudsen said. "I think I would have compassion for that no matter what my personal experience was."

Ten shows are scheduled in California, Nevada, Oregon, Washington and Colorado. Michael Coates of Bruce Cohn Management said promoters hope some East Coast dates can be squeezed into the schedule.

Except for Dave Shogren, who played only on the first Doobie Brothers LP, and Willie Weeks, anyone who ever took the stage as a Doobie will be present for the shows.

One almost needs a scorecard to keep the players straight. The Doobies taking part in the reunion are Knudsen, drums and vocals; Simmons, guitar and vocals; McDonald, lead vocals and keyboards; Johnston, lead vocals and guitar; Tiran Porter, bass and vocals; Baxter, guitar; John McFee, guitars and violin; Cornelius Bumpus, saxophone, keyboards and vocals; Hartman, drums, and Michael Hossack, drums; Bobby LaKind, percussion; and Chet McCracken, drums.

McDonald went on to a solo career; Knudsen and McFee play with the group, Southern Pacific; Simmons went solo; Johnston has had 2 solo LPs; and some of the others have performed as studio musicians.

Finding room for four drummers on stage is either a logistical nightmare or, as Coates says, "the production of the century."

Knudsen said the shows will feature at least two hours of Doobie Brothers hits, some rearranged by McDonald.

"We're not going to be on stage all at once, except maybe at the end. We really don't have it structured yet," he said. "The obvious choice would be to go chronologically, but we'll probably mix and match it a little and come up with a show that's well-paced."

Hollywood Teachers Help Keep Safety

By LYNN ELBER
Associated Press Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The director of the movie, "Electric Blue," asked a teen-age actor to breakdance on top of a tractor — while it was rolling.

Studio teacher Linda Elster, who's responsible for the welfare as well as education of her young charges, quashed the plan although the director insisted the youth wanted to try. Later, the boy said he really didn't want to do the stunt but was afraid to tell the director.

"This industry is so competitive. When kids do get the job, they're not going to risk it by complaining," Ms. Elster said.

With multimillion-dollar productions at stake, Ms. Elster and other Hollywood teachers know why movie and television companies put on the pressure. But the teachers say they must balance show business with the well-being of the children. Most companies cooperate.

Children are a significant part of the entertainment industry. Between January and October 1986, the California Department of Industrial Relations issued 13,804 work permits for minors.

Studio teachers enforce state labor regulations that set child actors' working hours and mandate that a teacher be present on the set as monitor and social worker for children under 16. A parent or guardian also must be present.

"Nothing is typical in studio working," said Miriam Richards, who taught Ricky Schroeder, 16, for five years he starred in the TV series, "Silver Spoons."

"Ricky likes a challenge," Ms. Richards said. "Most of these kids like challenges — that's why they are where they are."

Classes are often held in cramped trailers or small offices on movie sets, with lessons given to up to 10 children, and at different grade levels. Pen, paper and books are on hand, but there are none of the high-tech computers common today in many classrooms.

Flexibility is important. "You can't come down hard on a kid who has to do a scene," Ms. Elster said.

The director doesn't want somebody who's in a bad mood because his teacher yelled at him. ... You can believe the same standards, but you have to do it in a roundabout way."

Some parents say teachers are vital to the children's well-being, and point to the "Twilight Zone: The Movie" tragedy in which a helicopter crashed during filming of a battle scene, killing two children and actor Vic Morrow. Director John Landis and four colleagues were charged with involuntary manslaughter.

Landis admitted in court that he and the other defendants knowingly broke the law when they hired Myca Dinh Le, 7, and Renee Chen, 6, to work in a nighttime scene in violation of the labor code. They were not charged with the code violation.

"You just think they're going to take care of your kids," said Dolly Keehne, whose 12-year-old daughter, Virginia, has been acting since she was 7.

But pressure can sometimes overshadow concerns about young actors, Ms. Elster said. "They (producers) make you think every shot is crucial. On 'Twilight Zone,' if he (Morrow) had carried stuffed dummies under his arm, it wouldn't have mattered," she said.

A director may push for a child to work a bit longer if a production is behind schedule, a request a teacher can grant, said Ken Stump, senior vice president in charge of production for Embassy Communications. But a teacher can say no. Stump's company turns out a number of TV shows with child actors, including "The Charmings" and "Who's the Boss?"

"The law's the law and the teacher's the final law. It's our fault we didn't get the shots, not the teacher's," he said.

California's child actor laws are among the strictest in the nation. As the No. 2 movie and TV production state, New York has no rule requiring that a teacher be on a set employing children. The state instead requires parents to be present and holds them responsible for monitoring the education and safety of the young actors.

During the 1920s and '30s, child actors were generally treated like any other performers and were expected to work long hours and sometimes under dangerous conditions. That began to change after the Screen Actors Guild won recognition in 1936 and brought better working conditions for all actors.

'Saturday Night Live' Has First Producer Back In Tow

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Deja vu.
There are scandals in the government, and celebrities are being indiscreet. What a time to launch an upstart, late-night show and a group of unknown but talented performers and writers.
The show isn't new. It's 12 years old. But the flow of the universe being what it is, "Saturday Night Live" is taking off again, with its original producer, Lorne Michaels, back home and happy at the helm.
Michaels, a former comedy writer, launched the show in 1975, and with it, the careers of Chevy Chase, Dan Aykroyd, Jane Curtin, Bill Murray, Larraine Newman and the late John Belushi.
He came back to the show in 1985 after a 5-year absence with an all-new cast. The critics hated it. "Saturday Night Dead," they said.
"We had to sort of scramble to put that season together, and we survived it, and we came out with, I think, the nucleus of a new group both in writers and in cast," Michaels said in a recent interview in his office at NBC. "This year the additions have added both a stability and a certain kind of brilliance."

Jon Lovitz, Nora Dunn and Dennis Miller remained from last year. This year, Michaels added Dana Carvey, Jan Hooks, Victoria Jackson, Phil Hartman, A. Whitney Brown and Kevin Nealon.
And this year, he has "Iran-gate," Gary Hart and Jim Bakker, to name a few targets of the show's satire.
"Last year, it was like dissent was rudeness. It was just bad form," Michaels said. "And people would say it was a little aberrant period of time, this little window of opportunity, as it were, that 'Saturday Night' came out of right after Watergate."
After five years, when the original cast's contracts were up, Michaels left to pursue other projects, including the underrated and short-lived "The New Show," a prime-time satirical review that featured many of the "SCTV" players. "I don't think I ever felt as out of style, and to a certain extent out of tune, as when we were doing 'The New Show' in 1984," Michaels said.
He said he was surprised that NBC kept "Saturday Night Live" on the air — and jealous of the success of "Late Night with David Letterman."

"Letterman, when it came on the early '80s, I think overwhelmingly took the mantle of hipness away from the show," Michaels said. "They were so much more adventurous and youthful, in the best sense. They did everything you could do within a box."
Except for the year before Michaels returned, when Dick Ebersole put together the cast that included Billy Crystal, Martin Short and Christopher Guest, "Saturday Night Live" was spiritless. And the Ebersole season, despite some innovative sketch humor, didn't have the same dangerous, on-edge quality of the old show.
Michaels has brought back a "full-swing-at-the-ball" feeling, thanks to an enthusiastic cast that rivals the original for sheer talent.
Phrases like, "Well, isn't that special?" and "Yeah, that's the ticket," are finding their way into water-cooler conversations.
Carvey has been the standout newcomer in the public's mind, with his

Olmos Role
LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Miami Vice" star Edward James Olmos says he's going into his best role ever in playing an inner-city Los Angeles school teacher.
Olmos, who won an Emmy for his portrayal of the brooding police Lt. Martin Castillo, will play real-life Garfield High School teacher Jaime Escalante in "Walking on Water."
The role is that of a calculus teacher who pushes his inner-city students to achieve. "When he sees the light in a student's eyes, it's a natural high, like adrenalin. He needs it, like a performer who needs applause," Olmos said.
The $1 million film is financed by PBS' "American Playhouse," Atlantic Richfield Co. and the Corporation for Public Broadcasting. It will be released to theaters in October or November and broadcast eventually over PBS.

Since 1960, Pitt County's population has increased from 69,942 to approximately 95,000.

Critics Pick 'Fences' As Best New Play

NEW YORK (AP) — "Fences" by August Wilson has been chosen by the New York Drama Critics Circle as best new play of the 1986-87 theater season.
"Les Liaisons Dangereuses" by English playwright Christopher Hampton was picked Monday as best foreign play, while "Les Miserables" was named best musical.
"Fences," a black family drama and winner of the 1987 Pulitzer Prize for drama, won the critics' top award on the first ballot. It received 14 out of a possible 21 votes.

In other voting for best play, four votes went to "Les Liaisons Dangereuses" and one each to Neil Simon's "Broadway Bound," Tina Howe's "Coastal Disturbances" and George C. Wolfe's "The Colored Museum."
In the voting for best foreign play, "Les Liaisons Dangereuses" had 11 votes with six for Simon Gray's "The Common Pursuit," three for "Asinamali!" by Mbongeni Ngema and one vote for Michael Frayn's "Wild Honey."

Breakfast May Include Cook's Pets

By LISA PERLMAN
Associated Press Writer
WESTFIELD, Ind. (AP) — Mozelle Schaffer doesn't always give fair warning to potential guests inquiring about her bed-and-breakfast inn.

She doesn't mention that they will be sharing her home with some permanent guests, including her "baby"
— a 6-month-old, 80-pound Siberian tiger; the tiger's best friend, a Doberman pinscher; a large German shepherd and a varying number of cats.

Ms. Schaffer also fails to mention the four zebras, six llamas and deer that roam her out-of-the-way, 48-acre farm about 20 miles north of downtown Indianapolis.

She doesn't include in the description of her Hamilton County home that the breakfast nook overlooks the tiger pen, which holds Boris, her other Siberian tiger — this one weighing in at a mere 500 pounds.

"I'm so used to the animals that I don't even think about it," Ms. Schaffer says. "Sometimes they (the guests) go into a state of shock when they get here and see the cats."

Even the forewarned can't help but be somewhat stunned when Natasha, the smaller of the two tigers, comes barreling out of the back door toward the tiger pen — unharnessed.

Ms. Schaffer, who lives alone, refers to the tigers as her "babies" — she bottle-fed them as cubs — but still treats them with the respect they deserve.

"Tigers are the most affectionate animals I've ever known. I love 'em to death. But one little friendly cuff and you'd be in downtown Chicago," she says, only half-jokingly.

With a federal license for breeding endangered species, Ms. Schaffer has also kept kangaroos and camels.
The latter gave her home its name:
Camel Lot. She hopes to breed the tigers in about two years.

The Birmingham, Ala., native got into the European bed-and-breakfast business about five years ago to help subsidize the hearty appetites of her permanent guests.

She rents out a three-room suite complete with antiques and four-poster bed and, in the sitting room, an ivy patch and blooming camellia tree that grow out of the floor. Zebra, tiger and panther portraits line the walls of her home.

While some guests are apt to panic when they see the Doberman — that's before they even hear about the tigers — Ms. Schaffer says that for most of her guests, "the attraction is the animals."

Hospital

be exercised outside on a 100-foot tether.

Some raptors, such as red-tailed hawks, take captivity in stride, Redig said. But "bald eagles tend to be very wild and fractious," he said. "They will never be complacent about their circumstances. They fight you tooth and nail."

Raptors generally want food, not companionship. But "if you sit and talk to them and cut up their meat ... they'll very hesitantly reach over," Redig said. "From that point on, they'll think you're just great. ...
Slow-moving gentleness goes a long way."

But there are hazards. Brunhilda, for example, is so strong that in one examination, she buried a talon in a staff member's arm and would not let go until she was anesthetized.

In addition to treating raptors,
Redig is working to restore the Midwest peregrine falcon population eliminated by DDT and other pesticides by releasing them from tall buildings in Minneapolis,
Chicago and Grand Rapids, Mich.

Tall buildings with ledges make ideal homes for nesting and perches.
Today, the raptor program, co-founded by Dr. Gary Duke, a bird physiologist, has grown from a bare-bones operation to one with a staff of seven, a $245,000 budget and 190 volunteers. Next year's projected budget is $345,000.

The highlight, though, remains the same — the release, which takes place in areas where raptors are likely to find food. For bald eagles, that means along the St. Croix or Mississippi rivers.

Twice a year, the public is invited to the mass releases.

"It's a celebration," Redig said.
"It's just completely exhilarating.
Big or small, I don't give a darn. It's a great feeling to give another creature a chance at surviving."

'Reaganomics'

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Michael
Reagan, adopted son of President Reagan and actress Jane Wyman, says he knew about Reaganomics long before it became a household word.

Reagan told the Nebraska Bankers Association on Saturday that his mother made him get a job to earn the money for a bicycle when he was young. She wouldn't buy it, telling him "I build men. I don't build little boys," he said.

Charleston's Spoleto Festival Opens Friday

By BRUCE SMITH
Associated Press Writer
CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — A decade of the Spoleto Festival U.S.A. has brought to historic Charleston larger-than-life Italian puppets and a 19th century circus, world drama premieres and high opera, breakdancers and ballet, symphonies and jazz.

The festival has lit skies over an antebellum plantation and Charleston Harbor with dazzling fireworks, brought medieval drama to a high-ceiling cathedral and thrown a 75th birthday gala and floating reception for festival founder and artistic director Gian Carlo Menotti.

The festival, beset in its early years with money problems, has come of age in this coastal city.

It has pumped millions of dollars into the state and local economies and in late May each year put Charleston into the international arts spotlight as organizers stage what they consider "the world's most comprehensive arts festival."

The curtain rises on this year's festival Friday with a brass fanfare and traditional speeches from the steps of City Hall. It closes June 7 with a symphony performance and fireworks at Middleton Place Plantation.

In between there will be more than 100 opera, music, theater and visual arts events. Piccolo Spoleto, the companion festival staged by the city, will offer 600 other performances ranging from organ recitals to film festivals and from folk music to art shows.

While the festival is celebrating its 10th anniversary, General Manager Nigel Redden says there's no fear the event, known for its spontaneity, will become stodgy and tradition-bound as it matures.

"At this point the festival is kind of a train and we're on it and it's moving pretty fast," he said. "It doesn't for a minute feel like we've been doing this for a decade."

"We all have the feeling we have to hold on tight and not let the white knuckles show too much," said Redden, who is in his second year as general manager.

Consider some of the untraditional aspects of this year's festival:

—The opera "Salome," usually set in the Holy Land during biblical times, will be set in Germany between the two world wars. It's being staged by four French directors and designers, and rehearsals are held in two languages and sometimes three.

—Spoleto will feature the American debut of "The Road to Mecca" by noted South African playwright Athol Fugard. He also will perform in the production.

—The Colla Family Marionettes will perform. They're 3-foot-tall puppets dating to early 19th century Milan. More than 400 will appear in two different performances, and Redden said tickets may be among the most sought-after at this year's Spoleto.

—Musical performances will range from jazz artists B.B. King and Nancy Wilson to the Orchestra of Saint Luke's from New York City to the traditional chamber music concerts.

—The festival also will feature a work called "Cymbal" by Liz Phillips in which the audience interacts with ultrasonic beams and electronic sounds in the rotunda of the Gibbes Art Gallery.

Redden said the mix of programs and artists converging on the city for two-and-a-half weeks each spring "is something that makes this place enormously exciting."

Last year's festival set Spoleto box office records, won wide critical acclaim and finished with a box office surplus of $30,000.

This year's festival should measure up, Redden said.

"It's a broad mix of programs. We don't want to only perform a certain type of thing. We have to challenge the audience and we have to provoke the audience thoughtfully and with a good deal of care and passion," he said.

Carolina Events

Cherokee May Fest Day

CHEROKEE — Saturday is May Fest Day on the Qualla Indian Boundary Reservation in western North Carolina. Theme of the festival is "Two Hundred Years of Southern Appalachian Culture."

The one-day tribute to Cherokee culture and pioneer heritage has been scheduled to include observance of the 200th anniversary of the U.S. Constitution.

Events scheduled include Cherokee arts and crafts; crafts from the John C. Campbell Folk School, Brasstown; archery and blow gun demonstrations; musical performances every half-hour, and traditional Indian and mountain folk dances.

The Saturday May Fest Day is the kickoff event for the summer season at Cherokee.

The Cherokee Indian Reservation is located at the southern entrance of both the Great Smoky Mountain National Park and the Blue Ridge Parkway.

For more details, write to: Cherokee Visitor's Center, P.O. Box 465-24, Cherokee, N.C., 28719 or Call 1-800-222-6157.

Roanoke River Raft Race June 6

HALIFAX — The fourth annual Great Roanoke River Raft Race will be held June 6 beginning at a point between Gaston and Roanoke Rapids and ending at Weldon. Five categories of water races will be held. The canoe race begins at 9 a.m., the sleek craft race at 9:45 a.m., the speed craft at 10:30 a.m., and inner tubes and Huck Finn rafts at 11:30 a.m.

The inner tubes and Huck Finn rafts divisions are generally for fun seekers. The speed and sleek craft are more competitive for setting speed records over the eight mile race course. Some of the entries can reach speeds of 15 to 20 miles per hour.

The race is a benefit event for the Juvenile Court Counselor's Fund of the Sixth Judicial District, Inc., a nonprofit corporation in Halifax which works with juveniles in various ways.

Mark Givens is in charge of a full day of entertainment at the festival. The non-racing site for the festival is in Weldon, near the race finish line. Major activities include a tug-o-war, a keg toss, pony riders, helicopter rides, a dunking machine and several other events. The day will be climaxed with the awards ceremonies about 3:30 p.m.

Entry blanks, rules and regulations for the race can be obtained by writing to: Great Roanoke River Raft Race, P.O. Box 407, Halifax, N.C., 27389, or by calling 583-5371. Persons interested in renting a sales booth should contact the same address or telephone number for details.

Bluegrass Festival Scheduled

BURLINGTON — The ninth annual Memorial Day Weekend Bluegrass Music Festival at Bass Mountain Music Park in Burlington will be held Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

Groups scheduled to perform include the Boys From Indiana; Jimmy Martin and the Sunny Mountain Boys; the Sullivan Family; Virginia Squires; Raymond Fairchild and the Crowe Brothers; Osborne Brothers; Jim and Jesse; Lewis Family; Dave Evans and Riverbend; Goins Brothers; Lone-some River Band, and several other groups.

For more details, call 228-7344.

Busy Golf Course

HONOLULU (AP) — It's 5 a.m. and overnights at the Ala Wai Golf Course are stirring in their cars.

A key-laden custodian rattles open the clubhouse gate in the predawn chill. The first of 22,000 morning telephone calls finds its way through a computer system to Jean Haraga, assistant manager.

"Ala Wai Golf Course," she sings. "How many? Yamada? Thank you. Ala Wai Golf Course ..."

Another day has begun at one of the nation's busiest golf courses.

Nearly 200,000 rounds of golf were played on the 18-hole course last year. The National Golf Association lists the national average for 18-hole courses at 30,000 rounds. More than 16,000 rounds were logged at the Ala Wai during a recent month.

Competition for some 100 daily tee times is fierce. Hawaiian Telephone Co. recently logged 30,000 calls to the city's three 18-hole courses in one frantic hour between 6:30 and 7:30 a.m.

Stamp Of Approval

The Postal Board of Governors recently announced that the price of mailing a first class letter will go up to 25 cents next spring. Fourteen years ago, a first class letter could be mailed anywhere in the United States for only 8 cents. In England, the first postage stamps were used in 1838, following a British postal reform. Before the advent of postage stamps, the receiver, not the sender, of a piece of mail had to pay for its delivery.

DO YOU KNOW — What is the current price of mailing a first class letter?

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY May 21

GENERAL TENDENCIES: If you have anything of particular importance to be attended to, it should be done now to avoid the delays and obstacles on the horizon. Don't do anything drastic.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): You can handle a private affair very wisely. Roll up your sleeves and get to work with a vengeance. TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Listen to the views of a good friend. Your mate may be disturbed, but keep poised and take this in stride.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): You can handle an outside matter with alacrity. Don't try to get the aid of others with you projects.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): You get an inspiring idea today, so get in in motion. Use tact and tenacity for best results.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): Settle an account wisely. Should your mate be moody, blame it on the planets. Show that you can be patient.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): An outside associate has good ideas for your mutual advancement. Don't invite guests into your home now.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): It's a good day to listen to what an outside partner has to advice. Much care in driving is needed today.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Try a new tact with the tasks before you and get good results. Try not to commit yourself now.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Get out to fun places and forget your worries, but don't try to force your ideas on others.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Place your efforts on home and family today. A close tie may be upset, but take this in stride.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Place more effort on your regular duties. Forget the social life all together. Get your wardrobe in order.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Think about how to handle your material affairs in a better way. Don't try to gain favors from bigwigs.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he, or she, will be one of those charming young people who should be taught to think along more conventional lines. By not completing things, your progeny could find much trouble, especially in school. Add psychology courses to help curb this child's spunk.

Just because a line of play has a high probability doesn't mean that it must succeed. Conversely, long shots do come in once in a while, and you should consider that possibility.

South's jump to three no trump showed a hand stronger than an original one no trump opening bid. Despite his six-card suit, North had nothing to add to the auction.

After West's natural lead of the top of his broken sequence was won in dummy perforce, declarer was delighted with his prospects. While his only entry to the clubs had been removed at trick one, he had a better than 73 percent chance of bringing in the suit (all 3-2 breaks plus the possibility of a singleton jack in either defender's hand). And if clubs did not behave, he could always fall back on the spade finesse. So he gaily led a club to the king and continued with another club, only to find that, when West showed out and the spade finesse failed, the contract was irretrievably lost.

chance for his contract. Have you spotted it?

If declarer can develop three tricks from the diamond suit, he has nine regardless of what happens in clubs and spades. That can be managed if diamonds break 3-3, or if East started with two of the three missing honors in the suit unguarded.

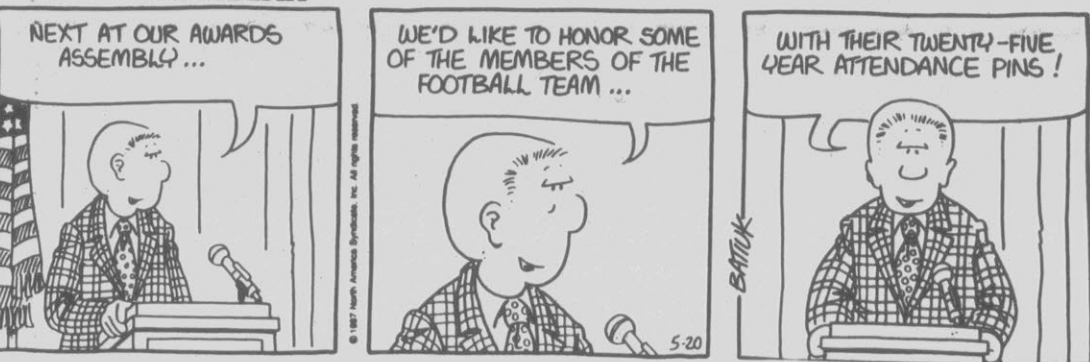

At trick two declarer should have led a diamond to the king and continued with the ace. As the cards lie, the contract is now assured. Declarer simply continues with the suit, going in with the table's nine if West follows low to the third lead. That would have brought in the contract for a substantial profit.

Once there lived a scuba diver. His name was Ken and he had a wife named Lucille. Well one day, Ken went scuba diving. He saw seaweed, shells and fish. Then he felt something behind him. It was an octopus. He tried to swim away, but the octopus caught him. He tried to scream, but the bubbles came up.

Lucille saw the bubbles and she put on her scuba suit and went in a submarine to look for Ken. She found him and said, "Ken what are you doing down here? I see you got a new friend the Octopus. Do you want a candy bar?"

"No! Just get me out of here!"

"OK, if that's what you want. Here's a knife, kill the octopus!"

"OK" So he did.

Failure

Don't worry about failure.
It happens to us all.
The first time you stood up.
didn't you soon fall?
You didn't hit a home run

You probably took three quick swings and back on the bench you sat.
The famous publishers had disappointments, too.
They had to try many times

So, don't worry about your

Friction

Turn a small wagon over on its top side. Hook the end of a spring scale in the handle and pull the wagon along a level board. How many pounds of force are necessary to move it? Now put a layer of water on the board. Repeat the experiment. Did it take less force? Turn the wagon right side up on its wheels. Measure the force needed now. What does this prove?

The resistance between two moving objects is called friction. There is more friction between sliding objects than rolling ones. Water is a form of lubrication, it makes surfaces smoother. This cuts down on the amount of friction produced. Try a variety of liquids, oil, syrup, or juice, instead of water. Record the force needed to pull the wagon the same distance.

Meatless Meals Provide Good Health Ingredients

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

Vegetarians or those watching their fat and cholesterol intake may appreciate the Quick Garden Pizza recipe listed below.

This recipe, along with the Warm Beef Steak Salad recipe, was presented recently by Dr. Nadine Tope, specialist in charge of foods, nutrition of the North Carolina State University Agriculture Extension Service at a food forum in Chapel Hill.

During the forum, "Fast Track Eating — Setting The Pace For Good Nutrition" sponsored by the North Carolina affiliate of the American Heart Association, Dr. Tope encouraged consumers to "once a week, try a meatless meal."

Meatless meals are low in saturated fat and cholesterol; they add variety to the diet and may be economical, she said.

They also are highly nutritious as vegetables are dependable resources of vitamins, minerals, carbohydrates and starch — all necessary for good health. Try the recipes listed below.

QUICK GARDEN PIZZA

Crust:
Spread one can of whole wheat French bread (the kind packaged like biscuits) on a pizza pan that has been greased.

White Cheese Sauce:

1 1/2 cups low-fat cottage cheese, or part skim ricotta
1/2 cup mozzarella cheese
1 egg
2 tablespoons parsley
2 tablespoons fresh basil (2 teaspoons dried)
1 large garlic clove
Combine all ingredients in a mixing bowl or food processor and blend well. Spread on pizza crust.
1/4 cup pepper, finely diced and sprinkled over sauce
1 green onion, sliced thin and spread over toppings
1 tomato, thinly sliced
1/2 cup broccoli (steam flowerettes for 5 minutes, until bright green)
1 small carrot (slice thin and steam 2-3 minutes until tender crisp)
1 small zucchini, sliced thinly
1/4 cup parmesan cheese
Arrange vegetables on the cheese topping. Top with parmesan cheese. Bake at 500 degrees, for 10 to 15 minutes, or until crust is brown.
1 pizza serves 4. 400 calories per serving.

A Top 10 Listing Of Those Overrated Luxury Dishes

By RUTH REICHL
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

Champagne, caviar, pheasant under glass. Rolling off the tongue, the words sound wickedly delicious as they whisper promises of the good life. Merely print them on a menu, and they spell out instant luxury.

Champagne and caviar are rather wonderful, but the last time I tasted pheasant under glass it bore a striking resemblance to dried-out chicken. A lot of luxury foods, in fact, sound a whole lot better than they taste. The following, for example:

1. Abalone: "And tonight we have something very special" When a waiter begins on this approach, you can almost bet it is going to be abalone. And that it is going to cost a small fortune. And that you are going to be disappointed.

For years I thought I was merely the victim of poor cooking. Then one day a friend went diving for abalone. Now, I thought, I will discover what all the hoopla is about. We cooked it right there on the beach, I took a first excited bite ... and my face fell. It wasn't bad, you understand, but this impeccably fresh abalone was every bit as tough and tasteless as what I'd been served in restaurants all along.

2. Black Truffles: It was the pig that did it In a wonderful mystery story by Patricia Highsmith, a porcine hunter, enraged by the fact that he never got to eat any of the truffles he unearthed, one day decided to do away with his master.

Had he been my pig, this would never have happened. As far as I'm concerned, he would have been welcome to eat his fill. I've never understood the mystique that makes otherwise sane people pay obscene sums of money for black lumps that look like coal and taste like smoked tires.

Black truffles do, however, have an appealing toothiness. Which makes

This Bread's For Garlic Lovers

You'll savor the fragrant aroma and delicate blend of flavors in Fresh Garlic Herb Bread. The tender slices of this pull-apart loaf are coated with seasoned melted butter.

Fresh Garlic Herb Bread takes just a few minutes to prepare with frozen ready-dough. It can be made the night before or in the morning and then placed in the refrigerator to rise slowly throughout the day. Bake the loaf while getting dinner ready and in 30 minutes you have hot, Fresh Garlic Herb Bread. Be prepared for a quick disappearing act!

FRESH GARLIC HERB BREAD
1 (one-pound) loaf ready-dough
1/4 cup melted butter or margarine
2 cloves fresh garlic, minced
1/2 teaspoon dill weed (if fresh dill, use 1 tablespoon chopped)
1/2 teaspoon dill weed
(if fresh parsley, use 1 tablespoon)
1/2 teaspoon garlic powder
2 tablespoons Parmesan cheese

Let frozen ready-dough thaw slightly, about 20 minutes at room temperature. Slice loaf crosswise into 12 pieces. Combine melted butter or margarine with all remaining ingredients. Dip dough pieces in butter mixture and press back together to form loaf. Place dough in a lightly greased loaf pan and let rise until doubled in size. Bake at 325 degrees for 30 to 35 minutes or until golden brown. Remove from pan immediately. Pull apart slices.

FOR GARLIC LOVERS ONLY — Fresh Garlic Herb Bread offers a fragrant aroma and delicious blend of flavors. The best part is that it takes just a few minutes to prepare with frozen ready-dough.

GARDEN PIZZA — Fresh vegetables from the garden are the main ingredients needed to make this nutritious, economical meal. The recipe, which uses an array of cheeses and spices, is listed. (Reflector Photo by Cliff Hollis).

Labels Take The Guesswork Out Of Calculating Calories

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

Labels may be very helpful for heart-healthy consumers concerned about the source of calories they eat.

U.S. government regulations require that all enriched or fortified food, and food for which a nutrition claim is made, include "Nutritional Information per Serving" and "Percentage of the U.S. Recommended Daily Allowances" on the label.

The number of calories per serving must be listed along with other nutritional information.

The American Heart Association suggests that no more than 30 percent of the daily calorie intake come from fat.

For example, if 2,000 calories are consumed a day, no more than 600 of these should be fat calories.

Fresh foods, such as fruits, vegetables, legumes, grains, low-fat dairy products, fish, skinless poultry and lean meats, make the recommendations simple to follow.

But, when eating packaged convenience foods, it is important to read the label to determine the amount of fats consumed.

Calories are computed from the amount of fats, proteins and carbohydrates that are in food by using simple formulas.

Fat, which has the most calories, supplies nine calories per gram. Protein and carbohydrate each supply four calories per gram.

Multiplying the grams per serving by the calories per gram gives the total calories per serving for each. Add the figures to get a total of calories.

For example, on the label of a food item, there may be 5 grams of protein, 25 grams of carbohydrate and 10 grams of fat per serving size of one-half cup. Multiplying those figures by

Q: I love fish and have read that the n-3 fatty acids in fish are good for lowering blood cholesterol. The articles always mention fish from Alaska. Do any of our fish have n-3 fatty acids? Mrs. F.C.L., Greenville.

A: Unfortunately, the n-3 fatty acids content of many of our local fish have not yet been determined by analysis. I have seen reports that king mackerel and the Spanish mackerel are very good sources with 1.9 milligrams per 4 ounces of fish. The American eel has 1.2 milligrams per 4 ounces and the red snapper is a moderately good source with 0.6 milligram per 4 ounces. Most of the fish oil supplements on the market have 0.5 milligram per capsule. We hope to have more information about our local fish in the near future. How important dietary fish oils are in lowering blood cholesterol has yet to be seen for the average American.

Q: My husband is on a diet to lose weight. Should he stop eating eastern barbecue? Mrs. J.D., Ayden.

A: We get lots of questions about our favorite local barbecues. If you save your Daily Reflector, pull out the Food section of February 4, 1987. Cherie Evans, staff writer, did a great feature on barbecue.

You won't find information about eastern barbecue in the diet books. Last fall we asked Dr. Margi Lee Gallagher, ECU Home Economics, to analyze some of the local pork barbecue for its calories. The barbecues from different restaurants were not all the same.

But, an average 4 ounce serving of the meat alone might have 324 calories (about 68 of those calories from fat). For comparison, a 4 ounce lean hamburger patty has about 200 calories and a 3 ounce broiled lean pork chop has 196 calories.

So, the barbecue is not a low calorie meat. Pork does add important nutrients to the diet such as zinc, iron, thiamin and B vitamins. If your husband eats the whole barbecue meal, add 182 calories for a 1/2 cup of coleslaw; add 100 calories for the hamburger bun; 57 calories for each teaspoon of mayonnaise; and add 73 calories for each hushpuppy. That totals over 800 calories for a small eastern barbecue meal. If your husband wants to lose weight, he needs to determine how this meal fits into his overall food intake and exercise plan.

As a rule of thumb, you have to reduce your calorie intake by 500 calories over the amount of calories your body uses each day to lose one pound in a week.

Q: My sister has started using olive oil for cooking. She says it's better for you. It is so expensive, is it that much better? Mrs. M.M., Greenville.

A: Some medical researchers tell us that the "Mediterranean" lifestyle — which includes the use of olive oil — reduces heart disease. All cooking oils have saturated fat, polyunsaturated fat, and monounsaturated fat. You probably use corn oil now, and if you compare olive oil and corn oil, they are similar in the amount of saturated fat (13-14 percent). But, olive oil is much more monounsaturated (77 percent) than corn oil (25 percent). It's thought that monounsaturated fats might lower blood low density lipoprotein cholesterol. That would lower the risk of heart disease, so it would be more healthy. A new oil is available in our area — canola oil. It is not as expensive as olive oil and is about 62 percent monounsaturated. It also has less saturated fat (6 percent). It also has less flavor than olive oil. You might try it. In our area, canola oil is available in the New Puritan oil. The oil comes from the rape plant, an annual herb grown in cool climates.

Luxury Dishes Come Up Short

The fact that restaurant-goers are willing to spend outrageous sums for canned black truffles that have lost their bite even more puzzling. And the appeal of canned black truffle shavings, which some restaurants consume by the case in an effort to add dollars to dishes, leaves me completely at a loss.

This does not, let me hasten to add, in any way reflect upon white truffles, which are, as far as I am concerned, among the wonders of the world.

3. Eggs Benedict: What a way to start the day! Rich rich with rich on a soggy roll.

One day around the turn of the century, Mrs. LeGrand Benedict, a regular at Delmonico's restaurant in New York, became bored with the menu. The maitre d' asked what she might suggest for lunch, the two put their heads together, and eggs Benedict were born.

All well and good. But why, three-quarters of a century later, we should still consider the recipe of a rich, aged and overfed woman a good idea is a mystery to me. Mrs. Benedict took ham and eggs and put them on a toasted muffin, thereby making the muffin sort of wet and unhealthful. She then covered the whole thing with a sauce made of still more eggs and butter. Eat it in the morning and you're likely to be uncomfortable for most of the day. And millions do.

4. Food on fire: We continue to consider it highly romantic when our spouses are doused with alcohol and set on fire. Why this should be so is a mystery to me.

Already cooked when it comes out of the kitchen, the stuff is then plunked into a pan and cooked again. This is decidedly too much of a good thing. Worse, the waiters are usually clumsy while they do this (it is a lot of time and trouble and rarely leads to bigger tips), so they keep looking over their shoulders and ordering their minions off to other tables. Meanwhile, they barely pay attention to what they are doing; one waiter of my acquaintance was so annoyed at being forced into flames that he inadvertently poured a lot of brandy into the pan, thereby setting fire to the contents.

And, in the end, what do you have? A dish with the ghost of good liquor and none of its punch.

5. Gourmet Pizza: Once upon a time, pizza was a delicious dish eaten by poor people in Naples. It consisted of bread baked with tomatoes. A few centuries went by. Then, in 1889, in honor of the visit of Queen Margherita of Naples, a great innovation was introduced. Mozzarella cheese was sprinkled on the top — and pizza Margherita became the toast of the town.

Pizza came to America and turned into pizza pie. It got bigger — and bolder. New ingredients suddenly sprouted on the top. It was still a delicious dish.

But then the humble pizza began to have pretensions. It moved uptown to a better address and started calling itself Gourmet Pizza. It received a great deal of attention; it was interviewed a lot. Suddenly, ordinary onions are no longer enough. "Make mine Maui," says Mr. Gourmet Pizza in the latest profile.

I can live with barbecued chicken pizza. Lox and cream cheese pizza is something I can swallow. But I recently received news of what is being touted as "the newest and most exciting pizza in town". And when pizza starts dressing up in Belluga caviar ("made with cream cheese, chopped onions and capers"), I say it's gone too far.

6. Lobster tails: Lobster tails (not to be confused with the clawed creatures of the same name, which arrive alive and kicking instead of boxed and frozen) are another luxury that leave me cold. They are normally devoid of flavor and possessed of a texture most kindly described as chewy. And yet you find them occupying a place of honor on perfectly respectable menus.

Three things make lobsters wonderful. The first is the fresh sweetness of their flavor. The second is the contrast of the texture, from the curly firmness of the meat in the tail to the soft slipperiness of the claws. And the third is the sheer fun of eating them — putting on bibs, cracking the claws, getting butter on your fingers and generally making a mess. Lobster tails, you will note, share none of these attributes.

with a piece of meat, thereby turning into dread surf-n-turf.

7. Pasta primavera: I have never been particularly fond of this dish of sauteed vegetables thrown together with spaghetti, butter, cream and cheese but, until a recent press release invited me to celebrate the anniversary of its creation, I held no grudges against it. According to this release, however, when pasta primavera was invented at Le Cirque 12 years ago in New York, it paved the way for other pasta innovations.

Pasta is unquestionably one of the world's great foods. Covered with no more than a bit of butter, it is absolutely delicious. Add a bit of garlic, a sprinkle of cheese, and it is even better. But why must we see it tortured in so many restaurants, covered with a whole host of battling ingredients that hate the very sight of one another?

8. Radicchio: The first time I had radicchio was at the home of a friend in Venice. Leaf by leaf, he put the red chicory on a grill and seared it. The flavor was extraordinary — simultaneously sweet and sour, bitter and delicious.

The next time I had radicchio was in a restaurant in California. It had been thrown into an ordinary salad, thereby doubling the price of said salad. It certainly looked lovely, but what, I wondered, had happened to its taste?

The truth is that the trendiest salad green does not much like being used as lettuce. It picks up a lot of flavor when subjected to heat (The same, I might add, can be said for spinach, which also seems to be doing time in salads). Thrown in among the uncooked garden greens that we all so eagerly eat, radicchio just seems to sit there and look pretty and pink.

9. Souffles: Isn't it time that somebody pointed out that all they are is a lot of hot air? And that, timing aside, they are ridiculously easy to make?

10. Veal Parmigiana: It is not an Italian dish. It rarely contains Parmigiana cheese. And if you wanted to disguise the already minimal flavor of veal, it would be hard to come up with anything more effective than pounding the veal, covering it with crumbs, sauteeing it, covering it with a strong tomato sauce and then adding a gooey topping of cheese.

Labels Eliminate Guessing

calories per gram or 4, 4 and 9, respectively, gives the total calories per serving for each item or 20, 100, or 200, respectively.

Adding those figures equal 156 total calories in the item. But, under current Food and Drug Administration regulations, calories are rounded to the nearest 10, so the label would show the total calories at 160.

With these figures, the fat contains about 20 percent of the total calories in the product.

During a recent AHA forum in Chapel Hill, Beth Ferrell, a registered dietitian, said present labeling regulations allow two kinds of fats to be listed, saturated and polyunsaturated. "Saturated means that the fat molecule contains all the hydrogen it can," while "polyunsaturated means that it has more than one."

Monosaturated fat, which usually is not listed on the label, means that the molecule has one place where hydrogen may be added, she said.

"Manufacturers like to use saturated oils or fats in their products because they have a longer shelf-life than unsaturated fats. Also saturated fats are cheaper."

"This means the shopper should read the fine print before putting a food product in the basket," she said. Another heart-healthy concern is the amount of cholesterol consumed in a daily diet.

Cholesterol content does not have to be listed on food labels. But, when it is listed, it must be shown in milligrams of cholesterol per serving and as milligrams per 100 grams of food.

For example, a food item may have 10 milligrams per tablespoon serving and 50 grams per 100 milligrams of food.

Put A Little Spring In Your Homemade Soups

By MARIE BIANCO

L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

This is no time for a lentil-sausage soup or black beans stewed to thick, warming perfection. Not these days, when fresh asparagus is making an appearance, when hefty globe artichokes and tender sweet peas beckon from the produce shelves.

A spring soup needs to capture the essence of the season in a clean-tasting, refreshing broth that showcases the pure flavors of these ingredients.

Like soup of any season, however, these should begin at the beginning, with a homemade stock.

Basic Chicken Stock

To make your own chicken stock, buy whole chickens and save the backs, necks and wing tips until you have a sufficient quantity, keeping them well wrapped in the freezer.

When ready to make your stock, place the chicken pieces in a stockpot, cover with water and add a carrot or two, an onion, a few celery ribs with their leaves, several sprigs of parsley and a tomato. Cook these for about an hour, leaving out any salt and pepper.

Pour the mixture through a strainer and discard the vegetables and chicken. Allow the broth to cool and then refrigerate. The fat will solidify on top and can be removed easily.

Here are some soups to get you into the spring mood.

SPRING VEGETABLE SOUP

1 tablespoon butter
1 small zucchini, sliced thin
1 carrot, cut julienne
1 cup tiny green peas
4 cups fat-free chicken stock
1/2 chicken breast, poached
2 scallions, chopped
salt and pepper to taste

In large saucepan heat butter and saute zucchini, carrots and peas 1 minute. Add stock and simmer 10 minutes or until tender. Shred chicken breast and add to pot. Add scallions and season with salt and pepper. Makes 4 servings.

FRESH PEA SOUP WITH MINT

2 tablespoons butter
1/4 cup chopped shallots
3 pounds fresh peas, shelled
2 cups beef or chicken broth 12 mint leaves, or more to taste
salt and pepper to taste
2 egg yolks
1 cup heavy cream
creme fraiche or sour cream for garnish

1. In a medium saucepan heat butter and saute shallots 2 minutes. Add peas and cook 2 minutes. Pour in beef or chicken broth, mint leaves, salt and pepper to taste. Cook 10 minutes or until peas are tender.

2. Process soup in a blender or food processor until smooth. Return to pan.

3. In a small bowl combine egg yolks and heavy cream with a whisk. Add to soup and slowly bring to a simmer. To serve, ladle into bowls and garnish with a dollop of creme fraiche and sprig of fresh mint. Makes 6 servings.

CURRIED ASPARAGUS SOUP

2 medium potatoes
1 leek
1 1/2 pounds asparagus
4 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons curry powder or to taste

4 cups chicken broth
salt and pepper to taste
1. Peel potatoes and dice. Discard upper green of leek, wash well and cut into strips. Cut woody ends from asparagus and discard; cut into 2-inch lengths, reserving several tips for garnish.

2. In a large saucepan melt butter and saute vegetables 5 minutes. Add curry powder and cook 1 minute longer. Add chicken broth and bring to a simmer. Cook 20 minutes or until vegetables are tender. Process soup in food processor until smooth. Season with salt and pepper. Garnish with asparagus tips. Makes 6 servings.

ARTICHOKE-OYSTER SOUP

4 large artichokes
4 tablespoons butter
1/4 cup chopped shallots
1/2 cup chopped celery
1 carrot, chopped
3 tablespoons all-purpose flour
4 cups chicken broth
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
1/4 teaspoon thyme
1/8 teaspoon nutmeg
1 bay leaf
1 cup heavy cream
juice of 1/2 lemon
salt and pepper to taste

24 oysters shucked or 1 pint oysters
1. Rinse artichokes. If they have stems, leave them attached. Cook artichokes in a large amount of lightly salted water for about 1 hour. They should be quite tender. Remove from water and set aside to cool.

2. In a small stockpot melt butter and saute shallots, celery and carrot 5 minutes. Stir in flour and cook over low heat 1 minute. Add chicken stock, parsley, thyme, nutmeg and bay leaf. Stir well and simmer 20 minutes. Remove bay leaf.

3. Remove leaves from artichokes, discarding choke. Using a spoon, scrape edible portion from leaves; chop artichoke heart coarsely. Add both to stock mixture.

4. Puree mixture in several batches in food processor until smooth. Return mixture to stockpot, adding cream and lemon juice. Season with salt and pepper. Bring mixture to a simmer and add oysters. Cover pot and remove from heat. Wait 2 minutes for the hot soup to warm the oysters and then serve. The soup can also be simmered for 2 minutes to cook the oysters, if desired. Makes 6 servings.

TANGY SPINACH SOUP

2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons olive oil
1 cup minced onion
2 cloves garlic, minced
1/2 cup chopped celery
1 carrot, chopped
1 Granny Smith apple, peeled, shredded

1/4 cup chopped fresh Italian parsley
1/4 teaspoon thyme
1/4 teaspoon tarragon
1/8 teaspoon cayenne pepper
2 cups chicken stock
1/2 pound fresh spinach
2 cups buttermilk

1. In a medium saucepan heat butter and oil. Add onion, garlic, celery and carrot; saute 5 minutes. Stir in apple, parsley, thyme, tarragon and cayenne pepper and stir-fry 1 minute. Pour in chicken broth, bring to a simmer, and cook until vegetables are tender, about 10 minutes.

2. Wash spinach and trim off stems. Cut spinach into long strips. Add spinach to saucepan and cook 5 minutes. Add buttermilk and reheat, but do not boil. Makes 6 servings.

Florida Fruit Growers Take Aim At Yuppie Market

EDITOR'S NOTE — Mix a splash of vermouth, 1 1/2 ounces of vodka and a dash of Florida star fruit juice. That's the recipe for a "startini," named for one of a half-dozen exotic tropical fruits South Florida growers have begun hawking in the yuppie market.

By A.J. DICKERSON
Associated Press Writer

HOMESTEAD, Fla. (AP) — Fruit growers in South Florida are gambling that a yuppie demand for something new and different to eat will establish a market for some exotic tropical fruits with funny names.

From this farm belt near Miami, they have begun shipping out such rare crops as star fruit (carambola), mamey sapote, atemoyas, sugar apples, monastera and low-calorie longans and lychees.

"They're yuppie fruits," says Marc Ellenby, owner of the Comfort Grove.

"We are gambling that a good deal of these are going to hit and become staple items," says Bill Schaefer, marketing director for J.R. Brooks & Son, Inc., a Homestead fruit and vegetable shipper. "And I think they will."

"We are responding to the 1980s call of 'What do you have that's new and different?'"

Schaefer says that in 1983 his company shipped only mangoes, limes and avocados. Last year, the rare tropical fruits comprised about 5 percent of Brooks' $35 million gross sales.

"It's a very exciting time for tropical fruit growers in South Florida," says Ellenby.

Growers concede there are problems. Some fruits have short shelf lives or don't ship well. Also, with supply lagging behind demand, one piece of fruit may cost several dollars.

No Bananas, Peggy Kenney's fledgling Miami fruit distribution firm, in fact sells no bananas. She ships rare fruits to restaurants and grocers in New York, Texas and Colorado.

"The demand is good," she says. "It's the gourmets. But many shoppers are hesitant to buy because of the high prices."

About 10 years ago, California's kiwis languished on shelves. Then the price came down and kiwis are selling like hot cakes, says Max Nisson, co-owner of Fresh World, an Atlanta specialty-foods distributor who does a lot of business with South Florida growers.

Schaefer thinks the tastes of the times are changing and that kiwi-like popularity is just around the corner for the new South Florida crops, especially the pretty carambola, which comes in sweet and tart varieties.

The specialty food market started about a dozen years ago. Growers wanted new crops, grocers wanted new produce and consumers wanted a change.

Why?

"Boredom with the run-of-the-mill," says Murray Corman, president of the Rare Fruit Council International, Inc., a Miami-based study group. "Increased disposable income for the yuppies. And better marketing."

"Compare these with fruits popularized in recent history," he adds. "Kiwi, a mediocre fruit, or cranberry, basically a terrible fruit."

Dade County growers say their business sense tells them to plant rare fruits and keep pace with the trend, according to agriculture agent Mary Lamberts.

Vegetables brought in $180 million in 1984-85, the last year for which statistics are available from the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Growers earned $44.39 million from their 22,230 acres of fruit that year.

Avocados brought in $12.5 million, limes $19.9 million, mangoes — a peach-like fruit — $5.6 million. Other top sellers were papayas, bananas, lychees, carambola and mamey sapote, the latter a custardy fruit that comes in two flavors.

Carambolas, which when sliced fall into five-pointed stars, were listed separately for the first time in new statistics because their production had increased.

"They've caught on," Lamberts says. "Carambolas are sexy. You open them up and they're pretty."

Growers are excited. "Business is wonderful," says Joan Green, the owner of Green's Gourmet Grove. "People are anxious to try new food."

She said her 5-year-old business this year should ship out some 70,000 pounds of carambola, plus longans, a lychee relative, and atemoyas, a pudding-sweet pulpy hybrid of sugar apples favored by Hispanics.

"We think there's a great future for this fruit," she says.

Nisson, of Fresh World, which markets specialty foods to restaurants and groceries in 14 Southeastern states, agrees that rare fruit sales have surged. But his enthusiasm doesn't match that of the growers.

"Carambola is wonderful," he says, "but it's not for everybody. Growers don't understand what's happening at the other end of the delivery truck."

Corman disagrees.

"With proper marketing," he says, "it's going to be a boon for South Florida."

Schaefer thinks proper marketing and advertising will create a niche for rare tropical fruits. And crops planted this year mean lower prices in a few seasons.

"The market for tropicals is everywhere," he says. "Consumers will buy without having the first bit of information about what it is."

He remembers a Pittsburgh woman who called to ask him what to do with the carambola she had just bought. Her call led to Brooks sponsoring a carambola recipe contest. "We tested them and had horrible results," he says.

Pineapple Shells Are Handy Servers

By NANCY BYAL
Better Homes and Gardens
Food Editor

An impressive way to serve this lunch or supper salad is right in the fresh pineapple shells. Some of the cutout pineapple goes into the salad, with enough extra for breakfast or a fruit salad the next day. Pass the dressing so diners can serve themselves.

PINEAPPLE-HAM SALAD

- 1/4 cup mayonnaise or salad dressing
- 1/4 cup dairy sour cream
- 2 tablespoons finely chopped cucumber
- 1/4 teaspoon garlic salt
- Dash bottled hot pepper sauce
- 2 small fresh pineapples (about 2 pounds each), chilled
- 3 cups torn lettuce
- 2 cups diced fully cooked ham

1 avocado, peeled, seeded and sliced

In a small bowl combine mayonnaise, sour cream, cucumber, garlic salt and hot pepper sauce; set aside. Halve pineapples lengthwise. Using a sharp knife, cut out pineapple meat, leaving shells intact. Reserve shells. Cut hard core from pineapple meat; cut pineapple into large chunks.

Combine lettuce, ham and 3 cups of the pineapple chunks (cover and refrigerate remaining pineapple chunks for another use); toss. Spoon ham mixture into pineapple shells. Garnish with avocado slices. Pass dressing. Makes 4 servings.

Try A Mexican Buffet That's Low In Calories, But Just As Delicious

By TONI TIPTON
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

Whenever you plan a Mexican buffet, be careful — calories in Mexican meals can add up fast.

This menu is not the usual fare of tacos, enchiladas and burritos, which can be pretty high in fat because of the combination of meat, cheese and fried tortillas. What is suggested here is food that is colorful and varied, slim and delicious. What's more, much of it can be prepared ahead and simply reheated when the party begins.

It starts with shrimp marinated in tequila, green taco sauce and lime juice. Serve with a cold gazpacho soup, if desired, for a deliciously slim first course. Chicken Sesame With Sausage is the entree suggestion. Quick green onions, brushed with olive oil and charred slightly, are a good accompaniment.

Serve with tri-colored rice mold, a combination of red, green and white cooked rice, colorfully decorated with strips of red and green pepper. Mocha Flan, a chocolate-coffee variation on the Mexican dessert favorite, rounds out the menu.

TEQUILA-MARINATED SHRIMP

1 1/2 pounds medium to large shrimp

2 teaspoons salt
1/2 cup bottled green taco sauce
1/4 cup olive oil
1/4 cup tequila
1/4 cup lime juice

Place shrimp in large pot with water to cover and 1 teaspoon salt. Bring to boil, then reduce heat and simmer 3 minutes or until shrimp turn pink. Drain, then rinse with cold water. Peel and devein shrimp.

Mix taco sauce, olive oil, tequila, lime juice, remaining 1 teaspoon salt and paprika in bowl. Add shrimp, tossing gently to coat with sauce. Cover and chill several hours. Serve on wood picks. Makes 6 appetizer servings.

CHICKEN SESAME WITH SAUSAGE

1 small onion, chopped
2 tablespoons sesame seeds
2 cloves garlic, minced
1/2 pound Italian sausage
2 tomatoes, chopped
Sprinkle chicken pieces with salt and pepper. Place in Dutch oven. Add chicken broth and salsa. Bring to boil, then reduce heat and simmer, covered, 30 minutes or until chicken is almost tender.

Meanwhile, in another large saucepan, heat oil. Cook onion, sesame seeds and garlic 2 minutes. Add sausage and saute 10 minutes more to cook sausage through, stirring frequently.

Add sausage mixture to chicken in Dutch oven. Add tomatoes and spoon sauce over chicken. Cover and simmer 10 minutes more. Serve chicken with sauce. Makes 5 servings.

Note: To reduce calorie and fat totals, drain sausage and chicken mixtures before combining.

Bring remaining 1 3/4 cups chicken broth and taco sauce to boil. Stir in remaining 1 cup rice and chopped green pepper. Cover and simmer 20 minutes. Remove from heat.

Dear SOS: We had a delicious dish called Charleston chicken at the Ritz Grill in Pasadena, Calif. The chicken was made with lemon butter and it was barbecued. —EMILY

Dear Emily: It passed our tasters' taste test with flying colors. You could, if you want to vary this dish, substitute veal or turkey breasts or any firm-fleshed fish for the chicken.

RITZ GRILL CHICKEN CHARLESTON

1/2 cup extra-virgin olive oil
1/4 cup chopped rosemary
Salt, pepper
6 tablespoons dry white wine
2 shallots, minced
1/2 cup butter
Juice of 2 medium lemons
1/4 cup chopped Italian parsley

Brush chicken breasts with olive oil and sprinkle with rosemary. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Place under hot broiler or on barbecue grill and cook 3 to 4 minutes or until just done.

To prepare sauce, combine white wine and shallots in saucepan and cook over high heat until liquid is reduced to half. Add butter, lemon juice, parsley and salt and pepper to taste. When butter is partially melted, remove from heat and whip to thicken slightly. Pour some sauce over chicken breasts and serve rest with chicken. Makes 6 servings

Dear SOS: Since commercial frozen sirloin tip has gone off the market, I have tried to find a recipe with no success. Could you help? —EVELYN

Dear Evelyn: The Los Angeles Athletic Club shared its recipe for braised sirloin tips several years back. It is an old-fashioned, classic recipe, and we hope you enjoy it as much as we do.

BRAISED SIRLOIN TIPS

rump or flank, cut into 1-inch cubes
1/4 cup oil or bacon drippings
2 large onions, chopped
2 large carrots, cut julienne or in small rounds
1 stalk celery, cut julienne or in small rounds

3 cloves garlic, finely chopped
Flour
Pepper
1 teaspoon paprika
1 tablespoon ground oregano
2 cups beef broth
Salt, optional

Parsley
Cook meat cubes in oil until golden brown. Remove meat from pan. Cook onions, carrots, celery and garlic until browned. Garlic should turn deep golden brown.
Add meat to browned vegetables. Sprinkle with about 1/2 cup flour, pepper to taste, paprika and oregano. Add beef broth and salt, if needed. Simmer, covered, until tender. Serve garnished with parsley. Makes 10 to 12 servings.

Only recipes of general interest will be printed. We are unable to answer all requests. Please include restaurant address when requesting recipes from restaurants.
