Pitt Election Review To Focus On Compromise

By MARY C. SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

RALEIGH — A subcommittee appointed by the N.C. House Local Government II Committee is scheduled to meet Tuesday to discuss compromises in a bill changing Pitt County's method of election.

The subcommittee is set to make a recommendation on the legislation to the Local Government Committee Wednesday, according to Rep. Ed Warren, D-Pitt.

Pitt County's proposed "six-three" election plan calls for six county commissioners to be elected from districts, with voters in the districts — two of which are predominantly black — voting only on the representative from their district.

The other three board members, who could live anywhere in the county, would be elected by countywide vote. Minority groups in Pitt County voiced opposition to the inclusion of any at-large seats in the method of election.

The N.C. House Local Government II Committee referred the bill to a subcommittee Thursday and asked that a compromise be worked out between the six-three plan supported by the County Commissioners and the six-district plan backed by minority groups.

The N.C. Senate Election Laws Committee postponed action Thursday on the bill and is not expected to consider the issue until its regular meeting Wednesday, Sen. Ted Kaplan, D-Forsyth, committee chairman, said today. Members were set to discuss appointing Senate members to a joint subcommittee composed of members of the N.C. House Local Government II Committee.

The Senate committee delayed action until Sen. Tom Taft, D-Pitt, who was ill, could be present. Taft said earlier Thursday he hoped to get the legislation into a subcommittee that would concur with the House subcommittee.

The House subcommittee is scheduled to meet at noon Tuesday with lawyers for the County Commissioners, the NAACP and the Concerned Citizens for Justice, minority groups protesting the six-three plan, and to report its recommendation to the Local Government II Committee Wednesday.

If the Local Government II Committee OK's the recommendation, the bill could be introduced in the House by the May 28 deadline, according to Warren. Once the Senate Elections Laws Committee approves the bill, companion legislation can be introduced in the Senate.

Members of the Pitt County legislative delegation, which includes Warren, Rep. Walter Jones, Taft and Sen. Bob Martin, voiced unanimous support for legislation submitted by the County Commissioners.

According to Warren, local legislation rarely faces a challenge in the House but bills changing methods of election spark unusual scrutiny from state legislators. "The problems with election methods experienced in areas such as Greensboro a few years ago and the difficulties now being experienced in the Nash and Edgecombe county area have created a great deal of interest in issues relating to electing public officials and that interest is growing," Warren said. "That is why the bill was referred to a subcommittee when the committee couldn't reach an agreement."

Helms Nominates Howard As Federal District Judge

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

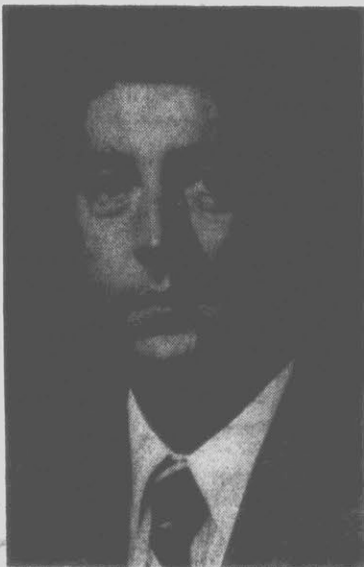

Greenville lawyer Malcolm J. "Mack" Howard has been nominated by Sen. Jesse Helms for a federal judgeship.

If confirmed following Department of Justice, American Bar Association and U.S. Senate Judiciary investigation and review, Howard will serve in the Eastern District of North Carolina.

Howard's nomination comes within 48 hours after U.S. Attorney Samuel T. Currin's withdrawal of his name from consideration for the judgeship.

Contacted Thursday afternoon, Howard said he was pleased about the nomination. He said that further comment would be inappropriate as the confirmation process will be thorough and long, taking at least five months and possibly more than a year.

Howard is a senior partner in the law firm of Howard, Browning,

Veterans Joining Statue Ceremony

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

About 20 local Vietnam veterans will attend ceremonies in Raleigh this weekend to dedicate a memorial to state soldiers who served in that war, said Ray Autenrieb, president of Vietnam Veterans of America Chapter 272.

"Our sole purpose (for going) is the POW-MIA issue," he said. "There are two dedications and ceremonies pertaining to that."

The raising of the POW-MIA flag above the state Capitol was to be at noon today, Autenrieb said. There also is a ceremony at 7:30 p.m. in Union Square to honor the soldiers.

The memorial dedication is Saturday at 2 p.m. in Union Square. Other activities during the weekend include a veteran's reunion and concert Saturday night and ecumenical worship and the Vietnam Film Festival, Sunday.

Three representatives from the local Veterans of Foreign Wars chapter also will attend the ceremonies, said Commander Louis Tyson.

There were 206,000 North Carolinians who served in Vietnam, said Harold McMillion, team leader for the Vet Center in Greenville. About 1,600 of that number died in Vietnam.

There is a total of "2,417 (American) soldiers not accounted for," he said. "Sixty-one people in North Carolina are unaccounted for."

The POW-MIA issue needs to be resolved, said Linda Furbush, the public relations spokesman for the chapter.

"Vietnam has pledged to work with the United States in getting this resolved by the end of 1987," she said.

"If we could bring them home, one way or another, we could help to write the final chapter."

Volunteers have worked five years to plan and create the state memorial named "After The Firefight," Ms. Furbush said. "It is a memorial of men."

A bronze, life-size sculpture of two white men and one black man, the memorial depicts two of the soldiers carrying a wounded comrade off the battlefield to be picked up by a helicopter.

"This is the first monument placed on Union Square since 1948," Ms. Furbush said. The local VVA chapter

Freighter Attacked

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — An Iranian gunboat attacked a small Qatari ship in the Persian Gulf, critically injuring three crewmen and gutting the engine room and crew quarters, shipping executives said today.

The gunboat fired rocket-propelled grenades into the 2,596-ton Rashidah and raked it with machine-gun fire Thursday night, despite Saudi Arabian air control and Kuwaiti navy patrols in the area, the executives said.

The disabled freighter, which was headed for Kuwait, was drifting in gulf waters, said the executives, who spoke on condition they not be identified by name.

The vessel's owners, Qatari National Navigation and Transport Co. of Doha, the capital of Qatar, issued a statement confirming the attack. They said the Rashidah was attacked with about 12 rockets and raked by about a hundred machine gun volleys.

The company statement, distributed by the Qatari News Agency, described the injuries sustained by the three seamen as "critical."

It said the vessel was in danger of sinking after sustaining "tremendous damage," with its engines, generators, accommodation quarters and lifeboats destroyed.

It said a Saudi vessel helped save 15 members of the crew and was transporting them to the Saudi city of Jubail for treatment of minor injuries. The attack took place 45 miles from the Saudi coast at 10 p.m., it said.

Reagan Leads Service Honoring Slain Sailors

MAYPORT NAVAL STATION, Fla. (AP) — A consoling President Reagan today told the families of sailors killed on board the USS Stark that their loved ones "were ordinary men who did extraordinary things. Yes, they were heroes."

Reagan, speaking at a memorial service for the 37 sailors killed in Sunday's missile attack in the Persian Gulf, also declared that "peace is at stake" in the troubled region.

"Were a hostile power ever to dominate this strategic region and its resources, it would become a chokepoint for freedom — that of our allies and our own," the president said in a speech prepared for delivery at a memorial service in a hangar at the frigate's home base.

Reagan lamented that "the burden of our time is so different" from that faced by earlier generations.

Recalling the casualties of World War II, he said, "while our sorrow was great in those days, I cannot help but tell you this morning that, in some ways, it was easier to bear then because it was easier to understand why we were there, why we were fighting."

The president's remarks came amid increasing controversy over the U.S. role in the troubled gulf, where the United States has agreed to have Kuwaiti tankers fly the American flag and come under the protection of U.S. warships.

On Thursday, the Senate voted overwhelmingly to require the administration to inform Congress before committing U.S. forces any more deeply in the gulf.

"Our aim is to prevent, not to provoke, wider conflict; to save the many lives that further conflict would cost us," Reagan said.

"The men of the USS Stark stood guard in the night," the president declared.

"And these fallen — whom we knew and loved but rarely thought of as great men or legends — can we

Fijian Chiefs Compromise

SUVA, Fiji (AP) — Fiji's top chiefs today endorsed a military coup that toppled the elected government but, in a compromise, declared that the governor general would run the country until elections later this year.

Coup leader Lt. Col. Sitiveni Rabuka announced that the Great Council of Chiefs, concluding three days of meetings, decreed that a committee would assist Governor General Ratu Sir Penaia Ganilau in ruling the country.

Ganilau is the appointed representative of Queen Elizabeth II, the formal head of state of this former British colony. After Rabuka and other army personnel stormed Parliament May 14 and took the prime minister and his ethnic Indian-dominated Cabinet hostage, Ganilau refused to swear in the coup leader's Cabinet.

The governor general has contended that he, not Rabuka, has the right to rule in the absence of the elected government.

But it appeared today that Rabuka remained firmly in control behind the scenes. The 38-year-old lieutenant colonel, the army's third in command before the coup, was designated head of the 2,000-man army and the police, and chairman of a committee to rewrite the constitution to guarantee political power for ethnic Fijians.

Rabuka said he carried out his coup to prevent ethnic warfare between native Fijians, who make up 47 percent of Fiji's 715,000 people, and Indians, who make up 49 percent.

Since independence in 1970, the government has been in the hands of native Fijians, while commerce has been controlled by the descendants of Indian laborers brought here by the British. After his election last month Bavadra named Fiji's first Indian-dominated Cabinet.

Sponsor Says ECU Football Bill Dead

RALEIGH (AP) — Rep. David Redwine has deflated his own political football, killing a bill that would have forced the state's Big Four colleges to play East Carolina University in football each year.

"Fourth down and 20 votes, it's time to punt," Redwine, D-Brunswick, said Thursday after he returned the bill to the House Higher Education Committee. Redwine said later he will let the bill die in committee, but might ask for a resolution to draw attention to the issue.

The same committee approved Redwine's bill last week and sent it to the House. He had argued it would have a positive economic impact on eastern North Carolina, but others had ridiculed the bill as frivolous and an intrusion on football scheduling by Duke, Wake Forest, North Carolina State and the University of North Carolina.

"There were about 20 Mickey Mouse amendments floating around," Redwine said after the House session.

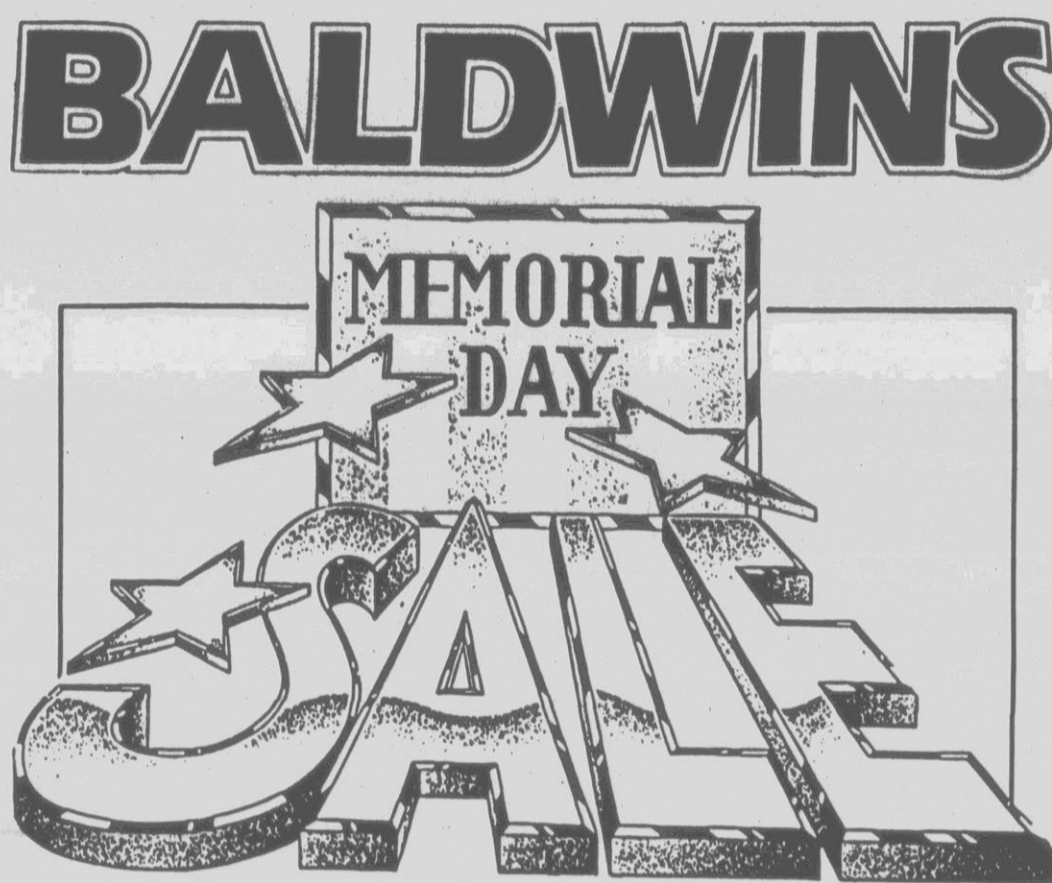

Rep. Alex Hall, D-New Hanover and a UNC graduate, said an amendment he had prepared would have required the Big Four schools to pretend they were playing hard against ECU so the Pirates would not be embarrassed.

PCC Conducts Pinning Ceremony For 45 Nurses

Pinning ceremonies for 45 Pitt Community College nursing students were held Thursday at The Memorial Baptist Church. The students will be awarded the associate degree in nursing at PCC's graduate exercises tonight.

The speaker for the pinning ceremony was Audrey Williams, a 1985 graduate of PCC. She is a clinical instructor in the operating room at Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

"There is much more required to be successful in the nursing profession than just graduating with an academic education," Ms. Williams said. "Now that you are to be awarded a degree may not be the end of your studies."

"You must implement your plans for the future to continue the learning process since there are many new techniques developing daily in your chosen profession," she said.

"Since the practice of nursing today offers a sophisticated challenge, it matters a great deal that you must handle your new position in a highly professional way," Ms. Williams added.

The Arlene Collins Clinical Excellence Award was presented to Sallie Hardy of Ayden. This annual award is a memorial to Mrs. Collins, a member of the PCC nursing faculty who was killed in an automobile accident in 1981.

The invocation was given by Susan Denton and the welcome by Kandis Hill. Melanie Abbott introduced the speaker and Lisa Sutton pronounced the Benediction. Rhonda Hockaday led the class in the pledge of the International Council of Nurses.

Judith Kuykenall, director of Allied Health and Nursing Education at PCC, made the special presentations.

Twenty-five of the nursing graduates will be employed at Pitt County Memorial Hospital and five have been accepted by Lenoir Memorial Hospital in Kinston. One of the graduates will work at Martin General Hospital in Williamston, one at a nursing home in Kinston and two will be employed in private practices in Greenville. One graduate will work at Memorial Hospital in Chapel Hill and one will be employed by Baptist Hospital in Winston-Salem. One of the graduates will enter the military and three will work out of state.

Color Added

There could be grounds other than preserving the purity of original artistry in motion picture products that have stirred protests against giving color to old black-and-white movies.

In retirement, the golden-olies have largely been stored away and seldom seen because there was no market, no demand for them except for special showings by those who shared in the making of pioneer films.

Adding color — and maybe detracting an aura from the original — probably created even larger audiences than saw the original versions, and in the showing presumably exposed some of the actors, directors, writers and technicians for what they really were: experimenters and innovators in an unfamiliar and still new field of entertainment.

Most of them were not the polished and trained filmmakers that turn out the better-crafted movies of today. We're sure a lot of them would rather forget the rough edges in their efforts of 40 or more years ago. (Being hailed as "legendary" is ever so much more satisfying.)

Moviemakers of the present are frequently products of specialized schools and apprenticeships in which they learned lessons their forebears acquired through misadventure and inspiration.

Today's audiences comprise a whole new generation who have never seen the old film classics that are becoming available in color. They (the oldies) will be seen largely on the "tube" at home; but most importantly, they will be seen. That is something that was not entirely true until they became properties of media magnate Ted Turner. We can only hope black-and-white prints will not disappear from the scene, if only for sentimental reasons.

There are a lot of arguments supporting the premise of artistic right to bar changes in original works but there is an audience of many millions of people who will never know what the fussing is all about unless they have the opportunity to judge for themselves.

Keep Trying

A General Accounting Office study of Veterans Administration hospitals looked into the VA's system of reporting patient injuries and found the system wanting.

A patient injury control program was established to track patient injuries and unanticipated deaths, and to identify causes of such incidents. On paper it looked good; in practice there was a human element to spoil things.

There were disincentives for reporting — relying on doctors, nurses and others to report on themselves, peers and superiors — said the GAO.

The study said it found 613 cases (or 86 percent of 714 cases it selected for review) of patient injuries or deaths that were not reported by hospital officials for investigation. The cases selected as warranting review were from nine of the VA's 172 hospitals during 1985, the report said.

The study found nurses usually reported incidents during their care for patients but were reluctant to report physician-related incidents. "Incidents involving physicians that led to malpractice claims ... generally were not reported", it said.

Examples of unreported incidents included that of a 71-year-old patient observed upon admission to be "constantly playing with his tracheostomy tube". Four hours after he was admitted and that observation was noted in his record, he was pronounced dead due to a dislodged tracheostomy tube.

And that was but one such tale among many. Whatever happened to the old idea of striving for excellence?

There are some who keep trying.

The Risks Of Reagan's Tilt Toward Iraq

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, by tilting toward Iraq in the Persian Gulf war without publicly spelling out why, may be signing on to another foreign policy debacle.

For the first time in the 6½-year conflict, President Reagan has identified Iran as "the villain" and ordered the seven U.S. warships in the gulf to shoot back if threatened by either Iranian or Iraqi aircraft. But the administration has not explained how it intends to avoid getting drawn into a tit-for-tat escalation of hostilities with Tehran, or where that could lead.

If Congress and the American public would not support U.S. participation in the Persian Gulf war, the administration could be forced to back down, an embarrassing reversal that could further dim the U.S. light in the region.

On the positive side, if Iran chooses not to accept the American challenge and curbs its attacks on gulf shipping, Reagan could be seen as a peacemaker and champion of free navigation.

The gain may be worth the gamble, but Reagan could make a mistake if he does not explain the risks in advance.

The United States has been officially neutral since Iraq began the war in September 1980.

After a million casualties, the battlefront lies a few miles inside Iraq. It appears Iraq cannot win the war, but Iran could. And an Iranian victory would not only cost Iraq its access to the gulf, it would also threaten neighboring Arab monarchies, which fear Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's militant Moslem fundamentalism.

Iraq has fought back with air strikes against Iranian oil installations and tankers.

Iran has responded by sending warplanes against neutral shipping, especially that of Kuwait, the Arab sheikhdom that has been serving as a port for Iraq.

There are sound arguments why the United States should defend freedom of navigation in the gulf, through which the United States receives 7 percent of its oil, Western Europe about half and Japan about 70 percent.

Reagan tilted secretly toward Iran in 1985-86 by selling arms to Tehran in an attempt to win back influence lost there when Khomeini took power in 1979. Public disclosure of those sales and the diversion of arms payments to the Nicaraguan Contras precipitated congressional and administration investigations.

"In light of the Iran-Contra revelations, we had found that the leaders of the gulf states were questioning the coherence and seriousness of U.S. policy in the gulf along with our reliability and our staying power," Assistant Secretary of State Richard Murphy told a congressional panel on Tuesday.

Seeking to regain the confidence of the gulf Arabs, including Iraq, the Reagan administration has agreed to register 11 of Kuwait's 22 oil tankers under the Stars and Stripes, meaning U.S. Navy ships would accompany them from the head of the gulf through the Straits of Hormuz at its mouth.

While "Iran lacks the sophisticated aircraft and weaponry used by Iraq in the mistaken attack on the USS Stark" on Sunday, it has positioned Chinese-built Silkworm missiles astride the straits and warned Washington not to meddle, Murphy told the House Foreign Affairs subcommittee on Europe and the Middle East.

"To date, Iran has been careful to avoid confrontations with U.S. flag vessels when U.S. Navy vessels have been in the vicinity," Murphy said.

How would the United States respond, he was asked, if Iran did attack an American warship or a Kuwaiti tanker under the U.S. flag?

The most specific answer he could offer was, "A good deal of work is going into that."

Throughout his presidency, Reagan has sought to overcome the reluctance that Congress and the American people have shown since the end of the Vietnam War in 1972 to engage U.S. military forces overseas.

The apparently mistaken Iraqi attack on the Stark, which claimed 37 America lives, has sharpened fears of foreign entanglements.

Gary Sick, a White House aide in the Carter administration, says, "We may be pulled into a military role in the Iran-Iraq war."

"We have a role to play, to defend freedom of navigation," Sick said in a telephone interview. "But there is a political dimension. We are never going to solve the problem militarily."

He urged the administration to enlist the United Nations to help negotiate an end to the war.

Henry Schuler, a Mideast expert at the Center for Strategic and International Studies, said: "If the U.S. wants to back the Iraqis, which is what this amounts to, we should say that our intention lies in the preservation of Iraq, and that we are prepared to commit military forces to do it."

"If the going gets tough, and the administration decides they want to get out, we are going to face a disaster in the gulf."

"Before we undertake a contrivance such as this, which puts our forces in harm's way, I would hope the administration would give consideration as to whether they will have congressional and public support."

Mikhail Gorbachev's Slow Transfusion

MOSCOW — Unprecedented though Mikhail Gorbachev's rapid replacement of Communist Party officials has been, from Central Committee down to regional and local cadres, transfusion of new blood may not be going fast enough.

The need for more speed lies in the "radical" (Gorbachev's word) nature of changes he has promised. The key to political-cultural "freedoms" and the major economic reforms (perestroika) is installing party cadres who draw power from and owe their whole loyalty to Gorbachev. Josef Stalin, who knew, said, "Cadres decide everything."

More than two years into what will become the Gorbachev era — or, the Gorbachev blip — very little has been accomplished. That is bad news for the Soviet leader. Failure to show that his policies are working will cost him the support of constituencies he needs and whose loss could mean failure.

One such constituency is the military — strong for Gorbachev at his outset and still behind him. The military in recent years has had everything its way, from space to strategic missile production. But the Soviet brass know this era of plenty may be ending. It fears the end of military parity with the U.S. if Gorbachev's reforms fail, following years of economic sterility at end of Leonid Brezhnev's long reign.

The military knows that consumer demands must begin to be satisfied or the flaccid economy will worsen as low productivity goes still lower. Easing consumer needs can be done either by making (SET ITAL) perestroika (END ITAL) succeed or by cutting military spending.

But economic reform that includes radical market incentives, decentralization, rewards for productivity and punishment for low performance absolutely depends on throwing out party hacks from the Brezhnev

'Military leaders here see only two ways to catch up in the struggle to maintain conventional superiority: persuading the West to transfer technology now embargoed; or massive investments that will depend on the success of perestroika.'

period. Only true believers — zealous cadres totally committed to Gorbachev's policies — can make them work.

While impressive, turnover on the ruling Politburo and the Central Committee has been far from total. Last January's Central Committee plenum failed to replace Vladimir Shcherbitsky the powerful boss of the Ukraine who has no stake in Gorbachev's success. High-level speculation here points to further delays in easing him off the Politburo and ending his control of the Ukrainian party apparatus and administrative officials.

So entrenched is Shcherbitsky that Gorbachev loyalists may even be having trouble finding a contender willing to challenge him in the Ukraine. Earlier forecasts that Gorbachev would go after Shcherbitsky in next month's Central Committee plenum look badly in error. He now seems secure at least into 1988, and his own cadres with him.

Party propagandists flatly deny to us that Gorbachev's call for an extraordinary All-Union Party Conference early next year, three years ahead of the regular 28th Party Congress, is to reverse the slowdown of his bloodless purge of party hacks. Its sole purpose, they claim, is to light fires under perestroika and start getting results.

Diplomats here are skeptical. They say the purge was set back in January and has not been put into high gear yet. If so, the effect on perestroika could be fatal. Party apparatchiks not committed to Gorbachev's radical reforms will get co-opted by skeptical administrative units they are supposed to whip into line.

Success of perestroika and Gorbachev's parallel policy of easing East-West tensions are crucial for the Soviet armed forces. Top military planners need large investments for new non-nuclear weapons. They must keep pace with stunning U.S. breakthroughs in tank warfare and new battlefield weapons using directed energy, micro-circuitry and other futuristic technology.

Soviet technology is far behind the West in this next generation of weapons that deliberately veers away from nuclear deterrence. Military leaders here see only two ways to catch up in the struggle to maintain conventional superiority: persuading the West to transfer technology now embargoed; or massive investments that will depend on the success of perestroika.

Thus, to protect his alliance with the military, Gorbachev's policies must succeed in conditioning the West to sell its technology or energizing the Soviet economy so that the new high-tech weapons can be produced at home. He is trying to do both. But unless he tightens his grip on the cadres, he may end up doing neither.

Strength For Today

All of us have seen the sign over certain doors in public buildings, "This Way Out." This designation over doors has a figurative as well as literal meaning. All of our lives, but particularly when we are young, we will be going through doors. It can mean opportunity, service and happiness when the doors lead into something beneficial.

But there are other doors which lead only to frustration and unhappiness. One of these doors opens the way to quick wealth by dishonest means; another to attractive sensual gratification; another to satisfying revenge. Doors opening the way to experiences of this type are unfortunately more numerous than those opening upon a happy life.

When we approach a door which we think will lead us to a new dimension of life, we should look up before we pass through. Above many will be the sign, "This Way Out."

House Tentatively Approves Change In Death Penalty Age

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — When debate on a bill to ban the death penalty for minors grew heated, Rep. H.M. "Mickey" Michaux offered House members a sobering thought — even drunken drivers don't face a possible death sentence if their actions kill.

"Why are you gonna take that adult and slap him on the wrist when he has created mayhem ... and now you're gonna take (someone) 16, 15 ... who watches television and sees the mayhem on television or who reads about it in the newspapers and put him to death," said Michaux, D-Durham.

The House eventually voted 64-37 Friday to tentatively approve the bill to bar the death penalty for those younger than 17.

The vote culminated several days of haggling over the age at which capital punishment should be allowed, and came after a debate about whether minors are responsible for their actions. A final House vote was expected today.

Rep. Dave Redwine, D-Brunswick, said age should remain something for the courts to consider in sentencing.

"We are taking away the discretion of the jury," Redwine said.

He also said levels of maturity don't always coincide with biological age.

"There may be people out there who are 15 or 16 but are very, very mature," Redwine said.

But Rep. Sidney Locks, D-Robeson, who had originally sought to limit executions to those 18 and over, said children are the most vulnerable segment of society and deserve special consideration.

"In 20 years or 25 years (of a prison term) there is a chance that youth will see the error of his ways," he said.

Rep. Trip Sizemore, R-Guilford, tried to compare the issue of capital punishment for the young with abortion — something many death penalty supporters also favor. But Speaker Pro Tem Jack Hunt said he would not allow debate of abortion during consideration of an unrelated bill.

Before the debate, Locks announced a compromise with Rep. Bill Alexander, D-Cabarrus, who had successfully amended the bill earlier this week to apply only to those under 16. The House agreed 73-13 to set the limit at 17.

In other legislative action:

The House Manufacturers and Labor Committee approved a bill to provide a way for consumers in North Carolina to be compensated when a new car turns out to be a lemon.

Rep. Charles Beall, D-Haywood, said representatives of the automobile industry, consumers and the attorney general's office agreed to a proposal that would include a right of a complete refund if a car can't be fixed within its warranty period.

The bill now goes to the House.

The House voted 79-28 to tentatively approve a bill that would allow the merger of public schools in Nash and Edgecombe counties after a vote of the people.

The vote came after amendments were defeated that would have given Nash County a stronger voice in the plan.

The bill would allow a referendum if three of the four school systems in the two counties and two of the three taxing authorities agreed on a plan to put before the voters. But Rep. Roy Cooper, D-Nash, argued that would be tantamount to allowing a takeover of Nash County because Tarboro and half of Rocky Mount are in Edgecombe County.

Rep. Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, said three of Nash County's seven county commissioners approve of the bill without amendments and noted that half of Nash County's population is in Rocky Mount, which straddles county lines.

A final House vote was scheduled for today.

The House voted 86-0 to tentatively approve a bill to establish a state fund to clean up leaking underground storage tanks.

Rep. Dennis Wicker, D-Lee, told the House his bill would raise up to $15 million through an increase in the fee to inspect tanks used for motor fuels and kerosene. He said the bill would end up costing the average driver about $2 a year in higher gasoline prices.

The inspection fee would be rolled back once the fund reaches $15 million and would be reinstated if it falls below $5 million, Wicker said.

Possession of anabolic steroids without a prescription would be a felony under a bill approved 83-0 by the House and sent to the Senate.

Rep. Larry Justus, R-Henderson, said the bill would help control the illegal drug problem in North Carolina. Steroids are used by athletes to enhance muscle growth but can have lethal side-effects.

Greenville's current city council is headed by Mayor Leslie H. Garner. Council members include William J. Hadden Jr., who also serves as mayor pro tem, Janice B. Buck, Edward E. Carter, Inez Fridley, Nancy M. Jenkins and Lorraine G. Shinn.

Committee Wants Driver's License Tied To School

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Denying driving privileges would be the most effective way to deter young people from dropping out of school, a state legislator and former Superior Court judge says.

"You can put them in prison and it doesn't wound them as badly as when you take their license away," Sen. Dennis Winner, D-Buncombe, said Thursday after the Senate Education Committee approved his bill.

The measure would deny a license to anyone under age 18 who is not a high school graduate or who is not passing enough subjects to graduate, or who has not completed or enrolled in a vocational course of study at a community college. Exceptions would be made for people working on a General Equivalency Diploma or on active military duty.

The measure was watered down to delete a provision denying a license to any student suspended longer than 10 days. Also, the bill was amended to expire in two years.

"I want to try this and see if it works and doesn't cause the world to fall down," Winner said.

Joe Price of the state Division of Motor Vehicles urged the committee not to approve the bill, saying it would create an administrative nightmare.

He said the division would have to dispatch its process servers to collect licenses of students who fall out of compliance with the bill. "We have no idea how many people we're talking about," Price said.

He said the division already was swamped by a law enacted during the 1985-86 session that created a new class of punishment — infractions — for certain motor vehicle violations.

Winner acknowledged that the bill might reduce state revenues by reducing the number of licenses issued. He said he would ask the Legislature's fiscal staff to analyze the bill.

Under legislative rules, if the measure is found to have a fiscal impact it must be considered by the Appropriations Committee. Otherwise, floor action was likely today or early next week.

Martin Asks Legislators To Act On Anti-Drunken Driving Bills

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Nine of 10 anti-drunken driving measures proposed by Gov. Jim Martin are bottled up in Senate committee, and he has urged lawmakers to untie the traffic jam before a deadline for action on pending bills.

"I'm concerned that the deadline for acting on legislation will come and go without anything being done" about the drunken driving bills, Martin said at his weekly news conference.

The Senate Wednesday approved a bill sponsored by Sen. Austin Altran, R-Catawba, that makes second-degree murder resulting from drunken driving a factor that a judge could use to stiffen the defendant's punishment if he is charged with a subsequent DWI offense.

Awaiting committee approval is a proposal to create a new offense of impaired driving of a commercial vehicle, for which the threshold for intoxication would be a blood-alcohol level of 0.04 percent instead of 0.10 for ordinary DWI. The Senate Judiciary

IV Committee postponed action on the bill Thursday.

Other pending bills would change from 10 days to 30 days the period for which a drunken driver's license is suspended upon arrest; require judges to revoke limited driving privileges if the defendant violates the terms or is convicted of a motor vehicle violation; increase the penalty for felony death by vehicle to the same as for second-degree murder; and lower the threshold for mandatory screening for substance-abuse problems from a blood-alcohol level of 0.20 to 0.15.

Tougher measures were needed, Martin said, because highway deaths related to alcohol are on the rise. The death toll had been declining following enactment of the 1983 Safe Roads Act.

"I think we need to draw attention to this and move forward," he said.

He said he had no reason to suspect that partisanship was behind the Legislature's inaction.

"I don't see it as ... a partisan issue and I hope it will not be," Martin said. "In fact, I think if it were reported out to the (Senate) floor, it would have bipartisan support."

Martin also called on lawmakers to approve his proposal for a state income tax return checkoff that would enable people to contribute all or part of their refunds to a new fund for abused children.

Also, Martin reiterated his opposition to the 1-cent sales tax increase passed by the House to generate funds for school construction. He has endorsed a pending Senate bill to issue $1 billion in bonds for schools, as well as another $1 billion in bonds to finance other local government capital projects such as landfills, jails and wastewater treatment facilities.

The sales tax "was increased last year (and) it was increased in 1983," Martin said. "I don't think we need to do it again. That's a bad habit to get into, to raise the sales tax every time you turn around — or any other tax."

N.C. Asks Compact To Select Next Site

OAK RIDGE, Tenn. (AP) — North Carolina's representatives have renewed pleas for an eight-state low-level radioactive waste compact to continue selecting who will follow their state's upcoming 20-year turn as disposal host.

The Southeast Compact Commission's Host State Identification Committee declined on Wednesday to take action toward identifying the next host state.

George Miller, one of two North Carolina members of the commission, asked Thursday that the commission "encourage the committee not to wait for five or 10 years until we get on with this job."

Miller, a member of the committee, has unsuccessfully urged fellow committee members to set timetables and take other action toward identifying a state to replace North Carolina in the year 2012.

"It's very, very important that North Carolina know before that 10 years who their brethren are going to be," Miller told the commission Thursday.

Miller noted that the General Assembly is in session and might decide whether the state should remain in the Compact.

William Briner, North Carolina's other representative on the commission, said after the meeting that the feeling about withdrawing among his state's legislators "changes from minute to minute." He said that if North Carolina withdraws it may cause the entire compact to fall apart. If that happens, he said it would have national implications.

Compact member states are North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia, Tennessee, Alabama, Georgia, Florida and Mississippi. Two representatives from each member state comprise the commission.

North Carolina Gov. Jim Martin said if the commission waits until 1996 to select a state to replace North Carolina for the low-level radioactive waste dump, he still wants the state to remain a compact member.

Martin indicated through spokeswoman Karen Rotterman that the lack of a schedule does not change his desire for North Carolina to remain in the compact.

"If the Compact Commission picks the host state now, the state still could pull out in the future," Mrs. Rotterman quoted Martin as saying. "A decision five years after North Carolina already has the site suits me."

The Compact Commission agreed Jan. 27 at the request of its two North Carolina members to have a committee begin considering which state will handle disposal after North Carolina's turn. They said selection of the next host state would be a gesture that the Compact would not collapse in the future.

If North Carolina remains a Compact member it is scheduled to open a regional low-level radioactive waste disposal site in 1991 to replace a facility operated in Barnwell, S.C., that is scheduled to close by Dec. 31, 1992.

The dissolving of the Compact is feared because officials from Alabama, the second-rated state as host, have said they would withdraw before accepting host state duties, Briner said.

The location of Thursday's meeting drew criticism from some North Carolina residents, while North Carolina is soon to become the host state, the commission was meeting in Oak Ridge, despite the Compact's own procedures which call for extensive public participation, according to one man.

The Oak Ridge meeting site was defended by commission chairman Richard S. Hodges of Florida. He said Oak Ridge has waste management facilities that may or may not be important for the Compact and that they came to see that. He also pointed out that the commission should meet in all the states.

"In another matter, the commission adopted unanimously a bylaw change that will allow individual states to withdraw from the Compact up to five years after the next disposal site opens.

Senate Backs Utilities' Bill

RALEIGH (AP) — A bill to let utilities automatically adjust rates to reflect fuel-cost changes drew debate over how to protect consumers and treat electric companies fairly before it was approved 35-7 by the Senate.

Supporters Thursday said the bill would result in a $90 million refund to customers of Carolina Power & Light Co. due to unexpectedly low fuel costs over recent months. But opponents argued that automatic adjustments would eventually take away the incentive for utilities to operate efficiently.

"It's not in anybody's best interests but the private interests of utility companies," said Sen. Charles Hipps, D-Haywood.

IN THE STATE

Award Taken

HOUSTON (AP) — Jane Smith's decision to file a lawsuit against NASA in connection with the death of her husband in the Challenger explosion has moved a national organization to strip her of a good citizen award, the woman's attorney says.

The decision by the Naval Reserve Association to give the award to Mrs. Smith was made about four weeks ago by the Reserve's Space Center chapter, said her lawyer, William F. Maready of Winston-Salem, N.C. But officials then withdrew it after she filed suit seeking $1.5 billion in damages from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration and other defendants, Maready said Thursday.

A statement issued by the Naval Reserve Association headquarters in Washington said the award was withdrawn "to remove any doubt that the award was in any way a Naval Reserve Association endorsement of the validity of the lawsuit."

The "Twice a Citizen" award was to have been presented at the association's annual banquet Wednesday night.

Red Wolves

MANTEO, N.C. (AP) — The release of eight red wolves at the Alligator River National Wildlife Refuge will likely be postponed until July because of problems in the manufacture of special collars for the animals, federal officials said Thursday.

Refuge manager John Taylor said executives with 3M Co. in St. Paul, Minn., have notified the Fish and Wildlife Service that the collars — which will contain radio-activated tranquilizer darts — will not be ready until early July.

The red wolf was declared extinct in the wild in 1980, and only about 75 exist today in zoos or captive breeding facilities.

Doctor

RALEIGH (AP) — The North Carolina Board of Medical Examiners cannot revoke the medical license of an Asheville doctor simply because he practices an unorthodox form of medicine that sometimes involves potions of rattlesnake venom and bloodroot, a judge has ruled.

Wake County Superior Court Judge Robert Farmer reversed the state board's ruling and reinstated Dr. George Guess' license. Farmer said the revocation against Guess was "arbitrary and capricious."

Guess, 39, caught the state board's attention because he practices homeopathy, which uses products derived from plants, minerals and animals that induce the same symptoms they are supposed the cure. Homeopathic doctors believe by inducing the same symptoms, the body's own healing process is triggered.

Bald Eagles

RALEIGH (AP) — A record number of bald eagles has been spotted in the Jordan Lake area, continuing a phenomenon that has made the lake the largest summertime home of bald eagles in the eastern United States.

Fifty-four of the birds were spotted May 17 — one more than the previous record set in August. And a member of the New Hope Audubon Society says this year's number should increase as the summer months approach.

The society has been making monthly counts of bald eagles since 1985, when large numbers of the birds were seen at the lake.

The most eagles normally are counted in July and August.

House Approves Wide-Ranging Education Bill

By JILL LAWRENCE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Months of negotiations over bilingual education and other potentially explosive topics culminated in near-unanimous House passage of a wide-ranging education bill.

The School Improvement Act, passed 401-1 on Thursday, consolidates 14 programs that touch nearly every elementary and secondary school child in the nation, expanding in some areas and renewing all programs until 1993.

"We've expanded our commitment to the nation's children and closed the gap between the haves and the have-nots in education," said Rep. Augustus Hawkins, D-Calif., chairman of the House Education and Labor Committee.

The sweeping bill contains programs for low-income and low-achieving children, preschoolers and high-school dropouts, gifted and talented students, math, science and foreign language teachers, students with limited English skills and many other groups.

The overall budgets approved by the Senate and House contain enough money to pay for the higher spending authorized in the omnibus House bill. Actual fiscal 1988 outlays for the House-approved programs will not be determined until an education appropriations bill is passed.

The education authorization bill calls for $779 million in education spending above current levels — the first time the House has backed a real increase in domestic spending in several sessions of Congress, according to Hawkins.

Rep. Phil Crane, R-Ill., was the only lawmaker voting against the bill.

"We tried to work out the controversies behind the scenes," Hawkins said. He said the overwhelming bipartisan vote makes it likely the Senate will act quickly on a companion measure and unlikely any significant opposition will arise.

One of the only floor debates Wednesday concerned an unsuccessful attempt by Rep. Bill Grant, D-Fla., to bar federal funds for youth suicide prevention courses until the Education Department studies such activities further. School districts are allowed to use education block grants to develop the courses if they wish.

Grant said many experts fear "death education" courses could spark suicide epidemics among teens. "It's not that we don't want to deal with the problem, we don't want to aggravate the problem," he said.

Rep. Charles Bennett, D-Fla., said his son committed suicide the day he was released from a hospital and his teen-age granddaughter is hospitalized now after trying to kill herself. He said it would be "a very great mistake" to delay federal aid for voluntary grass roots education efforts.

The amendment was rejected by voice vote. A floor battle over bilingual education was averted by a delicate compromise between the demands of the Reagan administration and members of the Hispanic caucus. It authorizes more money in the future for teaching methods that use English, as the administration had sought. But the native-language programs now required of almost all grant recipients will continue to receive at least as much money as they get now.

The largest single item in the bill is the government's Chapter 1 program for low-income and educationally disadvantaged children. The bill authorizes $4.1 billion for basic grants for Chapter 1 services, $200 million higher than current spending.

More money would be targeted to the poorest areas, and districts would have to prove they are getting results to keep getting money. New Chapter 1 services would include a $100 million dropout prevention program and a $50 million "even start" program combining literacy training for parents with preschool education for their children.

In addition, the bill calls for $30 million to help pay for vans, mobile classrooms and other equipment needed to provide Chapter 1 services to religious school students. A 1985 Supreme Court ruling barred public school teachers from teaching in the private schools.

Other major authorizations:

—$759 million to offset the revenue loss suffered by school districts that contain tax-exempt federal installations. Current spending is $685 million. A lengthy floor dispute over the distribution formula ended with a decision to resolve the problem in conference with the Senate.

—$580 million in education block grants, about $50 million higher than current spending.

—$246 million for bilingual education, nearly double current spending.

—$200 million for adult education, almost twice the $109 million currently being spent.

—$25 million for a new gifted and talented program named after the late Sen. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y.

Other programs renewed or expanded in the bill are drug education, $250 million; math and science teacher training, $400 million; magnet schools aimed at desegregation, $115 million; the Women's Educational Equity Act; immigration education; Indian education; and various fellowship programs.

Defense Offered For Goetz

NEW YORK (AP) — The defense opened its case in the trial of Bernhard Goetz with testimony portraying him as a crime victim who once had been jumped and beaten so badly that he was plagued by a painful "crunching" in his knee.

Defense attorney Barry Slotnick called to the stand Thursday a Sanitation Department law officer who witnessed three men punching and kicking Goetz on a street in 1981, and the doctor who treated him for his injuries.

The attack occurred four years before Goetz opened fire on a subway train, wounding four young men who he said were about to rob him. One of those shot, Troy Canty, 20, has testified he asked Goetz for $5 and was merely panhandling. Goetz, 39, is charged with attempted murder, assault, reckless endangerment and weapons violations in the 1984 shooting.

The Sanitation Department law officer, Charles Cozza, said he saw Goetz chased and attacked by three men on Jan. 21, 1981.

He said two assailants fled as he approached, but the third continued kicking Goetz, who had fallen to the ground, Cozza said. The officer said he grabbed the man, Fred Clark, and handcuffed him.

Clark was charged with assault, criminal mischief and harassment, and later pleaded guilty to criminal mischief.

Cozza said Goetz told him the three had tried to rob him. Cozza said he saw only the beating, and there were no witnesses to the alleged robbery.

Dr. Murray E. Burton, an orthopedic surgeon, testified he treated Goetz for 15 months in 1982 and 1983 for a kneecap problem characterized by "pain and crunching." He said he believed the condition was caused by the 1981 mugging.

Assistant District Attorney Gregory Waples suggested during cross-examination that Goetz was unhappy with police because Clark was not charged with robbery.

Cozza, under questioning by Waples, said he couldn't remember Goetz telling police, "Whatever you want me to say, I'll say. If you want me to lie, I'll lie."

Earlier in the day, the defense asked for dismissal of all charges against Goetz, arguing that the prosecution had not proved its case.

The judge, Stephen G. Crane, refused to dismiss charges of criminal possession of firearms, but reserved decision on the more serious counts of attempted murder, assault and reckless endangerment. He did not say when he would rule.

The defense has said it will call seven or eight witnesses. The lawyers have not said whether Goetz would testify.

The judge rejected a defense request to present as witnesses up to five people who had been crime victims more than once.

Defense attorney Mark Baker had argued that they could testify how their experience helped them recognize that they were about to become victims a second time.

WRONG HOUSE — Mary Rhodes, 79, stands in front of her half-demolished cottage in Oakland, N.J., after a wrecking crew knocked it down by mistake on Wednesday. The cottage, which she was trying to sell, was in an area being cleared for an interstate highway project. (AP Laserphoto)

Bulldozer Mistakenly Razes Widow's Vacant Cottage

OAKLAND, N.J. (AP) — A 79-year-old widow couldn't find a buyer for her vacant cottage, but a bulldozer operator decided to move in.

A crew cutting a path for a six-lane interstate highway mistakenly demolished it on Tuesday, police say.

About 200 homes in the future Interstate 287 extension's right-of-way are being razed. Mary Rhodes' cottage was not supposed to be among them.

Less than half of the 10-by-10-foot house Mrs. Rhodes moved out of five years ago still stands. What had once been her porch and living room is a pile of rubble.

The bulldozer operator who plowed through the cottage assumed it was slated for destruction because it was in disrepair, had no electrical wiring, and workers already had razed two sheds in the backyard, said Bill Steele, project manager for Green Construction Company of Irving, Texas.

The 45-year-old bulldozer operator, whose name was not disclosed, realized his mistake when he smelled gas and discovered he'd broken a gas line, officials say.

Now it looks like Green Construction will be buying the house in a formerly quiet wooded area. Mrs. Rhodes said she couldn't get rid of the home for $2,000 because of its future neighbor.

Someone from the construction company's insurance carrier came by Oakland police headquarters on Thursday for a copy of the report on the incident and was to appraise the bulldozed house, said police Sgt. Jerry Tobia.

"I hope she gets something out of it," he said. "What can a house be worth on the edge of a highway?"

Mrs. Rhodes told The Record of Hackensack on Wednesday that she had hoped after she moved to her current home, also in Oakland, that the state would condemn the cottage

Nofziger Probe Expanded To Include Virginia Firm

WASHINGTON (AP) — The independent counsel investigating former White House aide Lyn Nofziger has expanded his inquiry to include Nofziger's ties to Fairchild Industries Inc., a Virginia defense contractor, a company spokeswoman said today.

Deborah Tucker said the company had been contacted by the office of independent counsel James McKay and subpoenas had been served on Fairchild Industries.

She said the investigation centers on Nofziger's activities on behalf of the Chantilly, Va.-based company shortly after he left the White House.

At that time, Fairchild Industries was attempting to persuade the Air Force to extend contracts for the A-10 aircraft and Nofziger was involved in this effort, a federal law enforcement source said today.

Tucker said that the investigation involving Fairchild has been going on a number of weeks and predates the expansion of McKay's investigation last week to include Attorney General Edwin Meese III.

The company is cooperating fully with the probe, Tucker said.

Meese was added to the probe after acknowledging that he intervened on behalf of Wedtech Corp., to insure that the Bronx defense contractor got a fair hearing from the Army on a $32 million small engine contract.

The Washington Post, quoting sources in today's edition, said Nofziger became involved with the company early in 1982, and that grand jury witnesses have been questioned about Meese's support for Fairchild efforts to prolong A10 production.

Production of the A-10 was extended for a year, and Fairchild also received a new contract for spare parts for the plane, said Verne Orr, secretary of the Air Force in 1982.

Meanwhile, Henry Zuniga, a former White House aide who advocated that Wedtech receive the $32 million no-bid federal contract, conceded that he may have violated office policy by favoring the firm.

Zuniga said Wedtech's proposal to build small gasoline engines for the Army represented "a special case, ... an exception to the policy" that resulted in new jobs in a high-unemployment area.

"Let me just say this: I never received one penny from Wedtech," Zuniga, who is now a Small Business Administration district director in El Paso, Texas, said in a telephone interview Thursday.

Zuniga worked in Elizabeth Dole's public liaison office at the White House in 1981 and 1982 when he was special assistant to President Reagan for Hispanic affairs.

Zuniga and Pier Talenti, an assistant to then-White House political director Lyn Nofziger, attended a January 1982 meeting at the Small Business Administration to advocate that Wedtech be awarded the Army contract.

At the meeting, SBA Administrator Michael Cardenas and his special assistant, David Gonzales, resisted White House suggestions that Wedtech receive the contract.

Solon Says 'Poker Is More Fun'

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Buddy Roemer, like a couple of earlier-day politicians named Winston Churchill and Harry S. Truman, loves to play poker. He's so good at it that his winnings show up regularly on his income tax forms.

In 1986, the Louisiana Democrat went home $8,706 ahead from the friendly little group of Capitol Hill politicians and reporters that gathers once or twice a month to draw to inside straights and hope that two-of-a-kind turn into trips.

He dutifully made note of that fact in the "unearned income" section of the financial disclosure form required of all members of Congress. He's done it in each of his seven years on Capitol Hill.

"I used to play chess, but poker is more fun," said Roemer, interviewed by telephone in Louisiana where he's campaigning to become governor. "We start at 8 and quit at midnight and nobody talks about an impending bill or how he goofed up on the House floor."

The disclosure forms, made public Thursday, require only that a member of Congress show finances in broad ranges. Roemer volunteered that his "hobby" is playing poker, last year grossing him from $15,000 to $50,000. But Roemer said his net, after deducting his losses, was $8,706.

"I play seven-card stud, high-low, and hold 'em, Texas version," he said. In that variation, two cards are dealt to each player with five common cards in the middle.

On average, Roemer said, he wins $400 to $500 a game and "occasionally I lose." The games, which rotate among the homes of the players, set $50 as the maximum bet. A player can lose $200 to $300 or $400, Roemer says and "if you can't afford to do that, you ought not to be playing."

"I love to play occasionally and I'm good at it," he said. "I watch my money carefully, I read the cards well."

Roemer listed assets in the range of $145,000 to $350,000 and liabilities ranging from $190,000 to $430,000. He made more from speeches, $13,000, than he did from poker.

He said he started playing poker "in that corrupting school, Harvard" at the age of 16. "I'm not into gambling," he said. "I've never done business with a bookie, I never bet on basketball or football, but I love bridge and poker. The money is irrelevant."

The front-runner in the governor's race — incumbent Edwin Edwards — wants to allow casino gambling in Louisiana, Roemer said. Roemer is against it because "we don't need to be 'taxing' the poorest people among us with a lottery or have organized gambling in the state."

He figures that if he is elected, he'll be out of poker for four years. "I don't think I'll have the time then," he said. "Being governor is a full-time job, seven days a week."

Fujitsu Plant

RALEIGH (AP) — The largest North American subsidiary of Fujitsu Ltd., Japan's largest computer maker and a leading manufacturer of telecommunications products and semiconductors, has selected Raleigh for its fifth U.S. research and development center.

Fujitsu America Inc., which is based in San Jose, Calif., will initially employ 20 professional workers plus support workers at the new center.

The company will develop telecommunications technology for use by regional telephone companies to transmit basic voice and data messages.

Cocaine Bust

RALEIGH (AP) — Three Orange County men and five Alamance County men were arrested on cocaine-trafficking charges this week as a result of a three-month investigation, a State Bureau of Investigation agent said Thursday.

The investigation by the SBI and the Graham vice unit stemmed from the arrest of a Franklinton man in December, authorities told The News and Observer of Raleigh.

About 22 to 26 pounds of pure cocaine with a street value of about $8 million was sold in the two counties in 1986, SBI agent Fred E. Tucker said. The drugs came from a major smuggler involved in Florida, Tucker said.

An arraignment for the eight men has been set for June 1 in Superior Court in Graham.

House Members Add Zest To Their Incomes With Speechmaking, Gambling, Writing

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — An Illinois congressman's mystery rugs and a Louisiana lawmaker's mastery of the poker chips put spice into the House of Representatives' annual show-and-tell of personal finances.

The financial disclosures of all but about two dozen of the 438 House members and non-voting delegates revealed Thursday the broad contours of their outside income and holdings, but some turned up interesting details as well.

The mystery rugs belong to Rep. Henry J. Hyde, R-Ill., a member of the House committee investigating the Iran-Contra scandal. He secured permission to keep secret which foreign government gave the rugs to him, saying disclosure might adversely affect relations between the United States and that country. The rugs are displayed in Hyde's office.

If the constituents of Rep. Buddy

Roemer, D-La., had any doubts about his favorite pastime, they know now. Roemer grossed more than $15,000 at what he listed as his "hobby — poker playing."

But after losses, Roemer's net winnings reportedly came to around $8,700. He is running for governor of Louisiana this year against the Cajun State's best known gambler, Gov. Edwin Edwards.

The reports demonstrated once again just how lucrative a sidelight speech-making can be for lawmakers.

The undisputed king of the lectern is House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., who commanded $177,500 in honoraria. Rep. William Gray III, D-Pa., the Budget Committee chairman, pulled in $111,950 for 75 speeches.

Both men, like the rest of their colleagues, had to give everything over $22,530 to charity.

If talk wasn't cheap, the written word generally was.

Several lawmakers reported being paid $100, $150 or $250 for op-ed pieces in leading newspapers. Rep. David Bonior, D-Minn., didn't fare much better in the book business. He earned $235 in royalties for a book on the plight of Vietnam veterans.

When the Senate disclosed its finances Tuesday, about one in every four senators appeared to belong to the millionaire class. The House's batting average of wealth was not so high, but it also has its share of politicians who don't have to live from paycheck to paycheck.

Freshman Rep. Joseph Kennedy, D-Mass., earned more than a quarter-million dollars last year, much of it flowing from his partnership in Chicago's huge Merchandise Mart, the cornerstone of the Kennedy family fortune. He reported assets of more than $2.5 million.

Rep. Bill Green, R-N.Y., is worth anywhere from $6 million to $12 million or more. Rep. Jimmy Quillen, R-Tenn., is worth at least $3.5 million, and Rep. Norman Sisisky, D-Va., has a fortune of $7 million to $12 million or more from his days as a Pepsi-Cola bottler.

Rep. John R. Miller, R-Wash., took a bath on a $10,000 bond he purchased in Wedtech, the South Bronx, N.Y., defense contractor at the center of a bribery-kickback scandal. Anna Perez, Miller's press secretary, said the congressman bought the bond on the advice of his broker before the scandal erupted last year, and lost $8,500 when he unloaded it recently.

Rep. James V. Hansen, R-Utah, had one $2,000 speaking engagement before the Turkish Americans Association, but he also spoke for $35 at Weber College and for $25 at his alma mater, the University of Utah.

Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., had more than $64,000 in outside income last year, including $10,142 in Social Security benefits. He also earned $150 for an article for The New York Times.

The lawmakers don't have to report home equity or mortgages or car loans.

Rep. Tommy Robinson, D-Ark., a former sheriff, listed assets of no more than $15,000 and liabilities of at least $500,000. Reps. Les Aspin, D-Wis., and Daniel Lungren, R-Calif., showed no assets and no liabilities. Rep. Mickey Edwards, R-Okla., reported no assets but as much as $50,000 in liabilities.

Freshman Rep. Fred Grandy, R-Iowa, the former actor, received $392,000 in 1986 for his final days as the purser Gopher on television's "The Love Boat."

Rep. Fortney Stark, D-Calif., a millionaire banker and vineyard owner, picked up $250 from The Washington Post for writing an article about wine. Rep. Silvio Conte, R-Mass., sold some hay for $250. Rep. James A. Hayes, D-La., made more than $250,000 from the sale of coins.

Apartment Fire Kills Six People

CHICAGO (AP) — A smoky fire broke out in a basement apartment early today, killing six people, including four children, and critically injuring one other child, authorities said.

The fire, which broke out about 2 a.m., was confined to a bedroom in the apartment and brought quickly under control, said Fire Department spokesman Jerry Lawrence said. The apartment did not have a smoke detector, he said.

The victims were asleep when the blaze started and died apparently of smoke inhalation, Lawrence said.

"Detectors ... might have provided the early warning necessary for the residents to escape, particularly considering how minor the fire was," he said.

Officials at five hospitals listed six dead in the fire — four children, ages 4 to about 7, a woman about 25 years old and another woman in her late 20s.

A 1-year-old was in critical condition at Children's Memorial Hospital, said spokeswoman Karen Shepherd.

The cause of the fire was under investigation, Lawrence said. The three-story brick building was being remodeled, he said.

"I saw about five (bodies), small babies. ... They had them in bags," said Samuel Williams, who lives two houses away. "People were fainting when they were bringing out the bodies."

"When I first saw it, there was flames and smoke," he said. "But there was more smoke than anything else."

He called the fire a "terrible, terrible tragedy, a terrible thing to happen, young kids lost their lives before they even start living."

Cora Hansbrough, who lives next door to the building, said her husband and landlady reported the fire. She said she was awakened by screams.

"I heard some people ... and they were saying those people won't come out and there's a fire in the basement," she said. "I thought it was in the building where I am, but it wasn't."

"I just jumped up, running and screaming, 'Get up! Get up! There's a fire in the building!'"

"When we ... got downstairs, it was just a flame of smoke coming out, and you could just see a little blaze. Then we started screaming and going on and saying, 'Lord, is there anyone in there, is there anyone in there? And somebody said, 'There's got to be someone in there because there's a lot of kids in there.'"

After the fire was put out, she said: "They brought a little child out. ... I saw them (firefighters) taking out two bodies on stretchers."

Mrs. Hansbrough said her daughter made her leave the scene "because I was taking it so hard. She made me leave because she was afraid I would have a heart attack to see those kids."

Jury Refuses To Indict Man

NEW YORK (AP) — A grand jury has refused to indict a policeman's son whose car struck and killed a black man fleeing white attackers in the Howard Beach section of Queens Dec. 20.

State special prosecutor Charles J. Hynes said Thursday there was insufficient evidence to warrant criminal charges against Dominick Blum, a 24-year-old court officer.

Blum's car killed Michael Griffith, a 23-year-old from Brooklyn who was attacked along with two companions by a gang of white youths.

Blum maintained he thought he had hit a tree and continued home, returning to the scene only after consulting with his father, a police officer. The driver was not charged with leaving the scene of an accident.

Alton Maddox and C. Vernon Mason, lawyers for Griffith's companions, had charged that the motorist was part of the white gang and that the district attorney's office and the police were covering up for Blum, who is white.

Consumer Prices Maintain Slow Movement Upward

By TOM RAUM
AP Economics Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer prices, nudged upward by higher costs for food, energy and imported goods, rose 0.4 percent in April, the government said today.

The increase in the Labor Department's Consumer Price Index, equivalent to an annual inflation rate of 5.5 percent, matched the 0.4 percent price increases of February and March.

Analysts said the stagnant inflation rate reflects in large part steady declines in the value of the dollar, making imports more expensive.

Indeed, prices for goods other than energy and food — the category that economists say most accurately reflects the dollar's value — were up 0.5 percent, the same as in March.

April's price increases were wide-ranging. Food costs were up 0.3 percent, while energy prices, still rebounding from last year's collapse in world oil prices, also rose 0.3 percent.

For the first four months of 1987, consumer prices have risen at an annual rate of 6.0 percent — compared to the 1.1 percent increase for all of 1986. Economists have said they expected inflation to continue in the 5 percent to 6 percent range for most of the year.

As import prices rise, some domestic manufacturers, in turn, have raised their prices.

"The declining dollar is putting upward pressure on foreign producers to raise their prices. To the extent that they do that, it does give domestic producers the opportunity to raise their prices," said Donald Streizheim, chief economist for Merrill Lynch of New York.

While the falling dollar "is not going to cause inflation to go through the roof," he added, "We're going to have about a 5 percent inflation rate in 1987. Let's face it, the best news on inflation is over."

The increase in the CPI was not nearly as sharp as April's 0.7 percent surge in wholesale prices, equivalent to an 8.9 percent annual inflation rate.

"The markets clearly overreacted to the 0.7 percent gain," said Donald Ratajezak, a Georgia State University economist who specializes in price activity.

With today's report, he said, "the markets may be relieved that inflation at the retail level," while higher generally than it's been for the past four years, "has not intensified any further."

The Labor Department gave these other specifics on April price activity:

—Gasoline prices were 0.7 percent higher at the pump after increasing 2.3 percent in March. Home heating oil prices rose 2.5 percent after a 1.4 percent gain the previous month.

—Grocery store prices were up 0.4 percent while restaurant meal costs rose just 0.2 percent. Vegetable and fruit prices rose 1.4 percent; meat prices gained 0.2 percent.

—New car prices were up 0.3 percent. Used car prices gained 2.1 percent.

—Housing costs rose 0.3 percent, despite a decline of 0.3 percent for home maintenance and repair expenses.

—Clothing prices were up 1.5 percent in a sharp reflection of the rising cost of imports.

—Natural gas and electricity prices, taken together, declined 0.3 percent.

The April increase left the index at 337.7, meaning that the same goods which cost $10 during a 1967 base period cost $33.77 last month. That's $1.24 cents more than the same goods cost in April 1986, when the index stood at 325.3.

The full index is not adjusted to eliminate predictable seasonal price fluctuations; the other figures in the report are.

Economic Growth Sets Faster Pace

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. economy grew at a 4.4 percent annual rate from January through March, the fastest pace in almost three years, the government said today.

The advance in the gross national product, which followed a lackluster 1.1 percent rise in the final quarter of 1986, left many economists unimpressed, however, because the strength came almost entirely from an unwanted buildup in business inventories.

The Commerce Department estimate of overall economic strength represented only a slight revision from a month ago, when the government said the economy grew at a 4.3 percent rate in the first quarter.

A companion report on inflation showed that prices shot up at an annual rate of 4.2 percent in the first quarter, the fastest price spurt since the first quarter of 1984. The increase in the GNP deflator was blamed on sharply higher energy costs.

In other reports, the government said that: —Consumer prices, nudged upward by higher costs for food, energy and imported goods, rose 0.4 percent in April. The increase matched the 0.4 percent gains of February and March and amounted, analysts said, to a further indication of the effect of the declining dollar.

—Orders for "big ticket" durable goods edged up a slight 0.1 percent in April. It was the weakest showing in three months and would have been even worse except for strength in defense orders.

Analysts said the poor showing for factory orders in April supported their belief that economic growth during the current April-June quarter will slump considerably from the 4.4 percent first quarter pace.

Some economists are even forecasting a negative GNP performance in the current quarter as businesses slash production in order to work off the huge increase in inventories.

Analysts are not now forecasting a recession, generally defined as two consecutive quarters of declining GNP. They believe that growth will strengthen in the second half of the year.

But economists admit there is a good deal of uncertainty in their forecasts, noting increasing worries about rising inflation and a plunging dollar.

The Reagan administration is forecasting the economy will grow at a 3.2 percent rate this year, up from a 2.5 percent increase in GNP during 1986, the weakest showing since the last recession ended in 1982.

The 4.4 percent increase in the GNP from January through March was the fastest rise since a 5.0 percent advance in the second quarter of 1984.

Greenville's first public library was established in 1904.

Texas Ties Record For Bank Failures

DALLAS (AP) — Banks are failing faster in Texas than in any other state, with a record-tying 26 going under this year so far, and the number is expected to climb even as the Lone Star State recovers from turmoil in the oil industry.

"It's getting to be a matter of how long they can hold on," said State Banking Commission spokesman Richard Nun.

The state's 25th and 26th bank failures were recorded Thursday with the collapse of a bank in Austin and another in Houston. Texas last year had 26 bank failures, more than any state in any year.

Officials refused to predict how many more of the 2,000-plus banks in Texas will fail by the end of the year.

So, far 81 banking institutions have failed across the country this year, and the number could soar as high as 200 by Dec. 31, said Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. spokesman Bill Olcheski.

Last year, nearly 140 failed across the nation, the most since the FDIC's founding in 1933.

In Texas, Nun said, "up through 1986, 90 percent of failures were primarily the result of poor management, but at least half of the failures now are no longer caused just by poor management."

"It's the hanging-on of poor economic conditions," he said. "Even the strong bank — if he's got two or three tackles hanging on him — sooner or later he's going to come down."

During the state's boom years in the late 1970s and early 1980s, many lenders got accustomed to widespread land speculation. But when oil prices took a nosedive in late 1985, energy and real estate industries fell apart.

Layoffs mounted in depressed cities throughout Texas. The state is facing a multibillion-dollar budget deficit, and there are mounting calls to enact an income tax for the first time.

"The banking system is more or less reflective of the economy as a whole," said Frank Anderson, a Dallas banking analyst with Ferguson & Co.

Anderson said he expects the bank failure trend to continue through 1987, despite an improving state economy, because of a lag effect.

"We're seeing some improvement — in agriculture, in oil, even in real estate — as we work our way through the cycle," he said.

However, Anderson said he wasn't overly distressed at the record number of banking failures.

"Texas has 14 percent of the total number of banks in the country, more than 2,000," he said. "We've had less than 1.5 percent of that number fail."

Professor Says Today's Preachers Are Leaving Out Stylish Imagery

By JOHN A. BOLT
Associated Press Writer
ATLANTA (AP) — Stylish sermons don't have to be shallow, says a seminary professor who believes passionate preaching has been usurped by fundamentalists and television ministers.

"Speaking with a passion on a subject has almost been totally evacuated by moderate or liberal preachers because they don't want to be identified with fundamentalist preachers," says the Rev. Dr. Fred Craddock.

Craddock, who teaches preaching at Emory University's Candler School of Theology, a major United Methodist seminary, says many ministers shun dressing up their points with style and imagery, considering it superfluous.

He said in an interview that Sunday-morning sermons also suffer because some ministers think the importance of what they say makes it unnecessary to say it well.

"They feel that 'playfulness with words, imagination with the English language ... is really nothing but embroidery, decoration and peripheral to the matter, and in the opinion of some people, insulting to the importance of it,'" he said.

Those ministers, he said, ask, "Don't you believe the message is like a seed, carrying its own future in its bosom?" His answer: "Well no, not really."

Craddock said the growth of television ministers, with their often flamboyant styles, has caused some mainline ministers to shy away from stylish preaching.

"I think some mainline church ministers, not wanting to appear like the public evangelist-type, have minimized their preaching," he said.

Craddock, an ordained clergyman of the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ), who holds the Bandy Distinguished Chair of Preaching and New Testament at Candler, said:

"Too many ministers in the mainline pulpits are trying to show what they are not linked to instead of what they are. Preaching is suffering from that."

It's not that the TV and fundamentalist ministers, such as Jimmy Swaggart, Jim Bakker and others, are particularly good at preaching the word of God, Craddock said.

"I think this fellow Swaggart, if you listen carefully as I have forced myself to do recently, uses intimidation and works on the guilt factor, which is powerful leverage. I'd not opposed to properly placed guilt, but all the time it is a harangue," Craddock said.

Bakker "did not preach, he witnessed and referred to the Bible, but he did not preach," he added.

"Robert Schuller ... is more of 'religion success and happiness,' the marriage of the best of American life to the Christian faith. As a total menu, I think it misses a lot," Craddock said.

Bakker formerly headed the PTL organization, which stands for People That Love and Praise The Lord, and appeared with his wife, Tammy, on PTL's nationally distributed television show. He resigned in March after the disclosure of a sexual encounter with a church secretary seven years ago.

Swaggart, whose television ministry is based in Louisiana, has denied accusations he engineered the scandal in order to take over Bakker's ministry.

Schuller operates from the Crystal Cathedral in California.

Craddock, who is author of five books and who lectures at various other seminaries, said many sermons have become one-dimensional.

"Preaching serves more purposes than simply to get somebody to make a decision," he said, adding that a sermon can be "destructive, comforting, encouraging, correcting."

Boone Says 'Maybe'

ADVANCE, N.C. (AP) — Entertainer Pat Boone says he would have to be "a masochist" to become host of the PTL television program, but he said if people in authority could convince him that he was needed, he would consider the job.

"I do think I might have something to bring it (the show)," Boone said Thursday during a practice round for The Crosby celebrity benefit golf tournament near Winston-Salem.

"It's not an assignment I want. I think I'd have to be a masochist to want to step in."

Boone said he didn't see himself as

"The focus has been so much on making some primary decision or conversion, some people don't call it a sermon if it doesn't do that one thing every time."

Craddock said ministers are "the keepers of the vocabulary of the church" but must get rid of some "old phrases and words that are veterans and have gotten tired in usage."

"Not all attend to that and sort of keep in the line of march some old phrases that are just dead."

Some dead and meaningless phrases he cited were "in this day and age in which we live," "as we live our lives today" and "in our midst."

"You get a lot of that, of just not keeping up with the trend of the vocabulary," he said.

He said preachers must "use light and color and sound" to make the setting "not just sturdy and useful, but attractive."

FOCUS

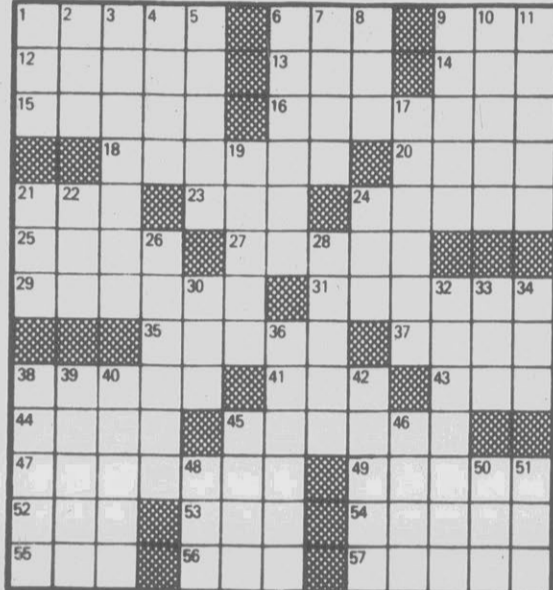

Ball of Confusion

The Iran-contra hearings will continue throughout the summer. The investigation reminds many of the Watergate hearings of 1973. Let's hope the fact-finding process this time isn't as exasperating as White House spokesman Ron Ziegler expected the Watergate hearings to be. He once told investigators, "If my answers sound confusing, I think they are confusing because the questions are confusing, and the situation is confusing and I'm not in a position to clarify it."

DO YOU KNOW — What organization did the Watergate burglars break into?

THURSDAY'S ANSWER — The headquarters of the International Red Cross is in Geneva, Switzerland.

 Give some players a seven-card suit and they feel they have carte blanche to preempt. Nothing could be further from the truth. A pre-emptive opening bid, and that includes a bid of four in a major suit or five in a minor, describes a specific type of hand. Besides the long suit, all or most of the strength must be in that suit, otherwise partner will not know when to defend and when to sacrifice. And if you have defensive strength, you cannot be sure the opponents have a game, or will make it if they bid one.

North-South were playing against a pair of experts, and South thought he could "take advantage of the vulnerability" by opening with a preemptive bid of four hearts on a hand that qualified in all respects for a one-heart opening bid. West doubled for takeout, and East took the opportunity offered to convert to penalties.

The defenders picked declarer clean. West led the king of diamonds and continued with the ten to partner's ace. With no need to do anything dramatic, East simply continued the suit for declarer to ruff. Declarer tried to salvage something from the wreck by leading the ace and queen of trumps, but nothing good happened.

East took the king and shifted to the jack of spades. West captured the king with the ace and tried the queen, and declarer still had to concede a trump trick and two clubs for down four, minus 700. And East-West were still 3-to-1 favorites to win the rubber.

A sensible opening bid of one heart would have avoided the catastrophe. After a takeout double by West and a probable one no trump response by East, a bid of two hearts by South would have been adequate to describe the hand. Left to their own devices, there then would be no guarantee that East-West would reach game!

Egyptian Crafts Turn Commercial

By DALIA BALIGH
Associated Press Writer
CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — With an iron hammer and nail, bespectacled Aly Mohammed bends over a copper plate and painstakingly engraves a portrait of pharaonic Queen Nefertiti.

In his tiny workroom in a maze of 300-year-old narrow stone corridors and staircases, it will probably take him four days to finish his masterpiece, which he will then offer for about $19.

A few doorways away, youths use acid and molds to produce up to 500 almost identical plates daily, to be sold at $1.80 each.

Mohammed belongs to a dying breed of craftsmen in the 600-year-old Khan el-Khalili souk. Largely in the last decade, the market has changed slowly from a center of handicrafts — gold and silver jewelry to mother-of-pearl ornaments — into a commercial market offering mostly imitation souvenirs for tourists and Egyptians.

Whether working with gold or wood, the old craftsmen are finding it hard to compete with the onslaught of mechanization into Khan el-Khalili, a waystation for tourists who come to see the Great Pyramids of Giza and other treasures of ancient Egypt.

"There are very few craftsmen who have guarded their art," said Mohammed, who has been engraving brass and copper for 33 years. "Today, the young want to make money quickly without much work."

Khan el-Khalili, or el-Khalili's market, originated as a guest house built in 1382 by Garkas el-Khalili, a senior officer under Turkish Sultan Barquq, for visitors to nearby el-Husseini Mosque. Thousands of Moslems annually make pilgrimages to the mosque, where the head of the grandson of the Moslem prophet Mohammed is believed to have been buried since 1153.

The centuries turned "the Khan" into a bazaar traditionally attracting foreign visitors. Today, there are around 1,000 sales shops and almost 5,000 workshops.

Tourists walking through its dark, narrow corridors still catch glimpses of a long-gone Turkish lifestyle, although illegal currency dealers' whispers of "change money, change dollar" quickly dispel the image.

"Today, lots of the bazaars are owned by dealers in the money black market and drug dealers. There is even an electrician who owns one now," 49-year-old Michael George Tewfik said as he put the final touches on a pearl-and-gold necklace he had made. "What do they know about handicrafts?"

Tewfik says he has read extensively about jewelry throughout Egypt's history and bemoaned the standard of gold pieces glittering in today's shop windows.

"In some shops, you can find a pharaonic cartouche with Islamic inscriptions inside," Tewfik said, a blatant contradiction since the cartouche is an oblong seal in which the names of pharaohs were written in hieroglyph.

"Whether I am working with silver and gold or clay beads, I make sure a Coptic (Christian) necklace is made in the true Coptic design and a pharaonic necklace is a true copy of what the pharaonic queens wore."

Tewfik designs his jewelry, then uses deft fingers and a handful of instruments to turn flat sheets and thin coils of pure gold into necklaces and bracelets of intricate design.

He says he no longer shows his pieces in the bazaars because other shopkeepers copy his models and make rough imitations with molds, which they then sell cheaper. Several jewelers still are careful about what they sell, Tewfik said, but most sell the cheaper items.

Because of the intricate work necessary for making the real handicrafts, craftsmen quickly develop sight problems. Almost all of them wear thick glasses.

"A craftsman in my workshop usually works until he is 30, but after that he can no longer perfect the small details," said Mustafa Hafez, who owns a workshop specializing in wooden boxes inlaid with bone and mother-of-pearl in Islamic designs.

"They used to make these boxes of ebony, with real ivory and mother-of-pearl, but today we make it with beech, with bone and plastic and sometimes mother-of-pearl," he said.

Although he still makes a few special boxes, Hafez said, his workshop mass-produces most of its products, which sell more quickly because they are cheaper.

Hafez said because today's workmen do not want to ruin their eyesight for work that needs "special customers" to appreciate, they usually turn to more profitable but less artistic mechanized workshops.

"After our generation dies, there will be no one else to continue our tradition," said Hafez, who has been in the business for 39 years.

"Mechanization will have won."

Should Baby Sitter Do More Than Just 'Sit'?

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Last night, my husband and I went out and left our two children with a baby sitter who arrived as I was dishing up dinner. We returned to find leftover food still on the stove and dirty dishes on the table. I didn't say anything because the girl did perform the job she was paid to do — baby-sit the children.

We've had some sitters who take advantage of the quiet hours after the children are in bed to do the dishes, or at least clear the table and tidy up the toy room. I always thank them and pay them a little extra.

It seems to me that these jobs are an opportunity to develop the good work habits that will carry throughout a career. Rather than just fulfilling the minimum requirements, some young people really make an extra effort.

Am I wrong to expect more from sitters? I feel it's not my place to suggest that they do more than just sit, but it would be great if their parents would! Your comments, please. — SUE

DEAR SUE: A sitter should not be expected to do anything more than just "sit." Further, the sitter who cleans up the kitchen, folds the laundry or does anything besides "sit" should be paid accordingly.

When a sitter is engaged, the ground rules should be established. Some guidelines: What precisely are the sitter's responsibilities? Feed the children? Bathe them, put them to bed? Is the sitter allowed to have company? If so, how many friends? Is the sitter allowed to eat and drink whatever she finds in the fridge, or do you set out the "snack"? May the sitter pass the time talking on the telephone after the children are asleep? If so, how much time? Do you leave a number where you can be reached in case of an emergency? (And does the sitter have the name of your physician or someone to call in case you can't be reached in an emergency?) Also, do you tell the sitter what time you will be home? And are you as good as your word?

DEAR ABBY: I have never smoked, and I am very sensitive to cigarette smoke. Many of my friends are smokers, but I don't allow anyone to smoke in my car or house.

I'm planning a party in my home for about 20 people. It will be winter-time, and I do not have a separate room that could be set aside for smoking. Abby, I cannot bear the thought of my house, draperies, rugs and furniture smelling of smoke for days afterward!

Some of my friends have indicated that they would not attend my party if they weren't permitted to smoke.

Is it unreasonable of me to maintain my long-standing no-smoking rule? — RED-EYED IN INDIANA

DEAR RED-EYED: No, it's unreasonable of them to refuse to attend unless they are permitted to smoke. Your objections are valid. Accept their regrets and tell them you'll miss them.

DEAR ABBY: I am writing in the hopes that you will print this as a warning to parents of infants.

The last day of February my son and daughter-in-law laid their 4-month-old son on their waterbed with his bunting suit on. The baby was asleep, so they chose not to remove the bunting for fear of awakening him. Within an hour my little grandson was dead! He was found face down against the waterbed, which had folded around his face. Being unable to free his arms and lift himself to breathe, the child was asphyxiated.

I hope that everyone who has an infant — or knows someone who has — will never lay a child on a waterbed, especially if the child is wearing a heavy garment that restricts natural movement.

And to mothers who nap with an infant on a waterbed: Don't do this, I beg of you. — BROKENHEARTED GRANDPA IN KANSAS

DEAR GRANDPA: I offer my heartfelt sympathy to you and your family. How incredibly generous you are to warn others of this freakish trap while you are still mourning the loss of that precious child. Pity you will never know how many babies will be spared because you cared enough to write. God bless you.

now truly say they were heroes?" he asked.

Answering his own question, Reagan said, "They were great. And those that died did embody the best of us: they were ordinary men who did extraordinary things. Yes, they were heroes."

Reagan called the Persian Gulf "a crossroads for three continents and the starting place for the oil that is the lifeblood of much of the world economy."

"Even more important, this is a region critical to avoiding larger conflict in the tinderbox that is the Middle East; and our role there is essential to building the conditions for peace in that troubled, dangerous part of the world," he said.

This objective has guided the United States in seeking a negotiated end to the 6 1/2-year-old war between Iran and Iraq, he said.

"Peace is at stake here, and so too is our own nation's security, and our freedom," the president said.

"The fallen sailors of the USS Stark understood their obligations — they knew the importance of their job," he said.

"So, too, I believe that most Americans today know the price of freedom in this uneasy world," he added. "They know that to retreat or withdraw would only repeat the improvident mistakes of the past and hand final victory to those who seek war, who make war."

To continue its emphasis on the POW-MIA issue, the chapter also has planned activities around the movie "Hanoi Hilton," which starts June 6 at the Buccaneer Theater, Autenrieb said.

"We will be participating and have a simulated POW camp set up in the lobby" during the first weekend of the showing, he said. There also will be a premier showing and a reduced-price night for veterans.

Seminoles Pop Pirates, 10-5

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer
TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Florida State coach Mike Martin said earlier in the week that there would be no way his Seminoles would overlook East Carolina.

In 1984, ECU beat Florida State in the NCAAs, 7-4.

There would not be repeat this time, as the Seminoles rolled by the Pirates, 10-5, in opening round play of the NCAA Atlantic Regional.

"We went over that in detail," Martin said. "In 1984, we sat around and came out flat and really went through the motions."

Due to a rain delay, the game didn't start until 11:20 p.m. By the time it was over it was 2:05 a.m.

Florida State lefty Chris Pollack threw seven innings of two-hit ball, striking out seven while walking one. He effectively kept the Pirates off the bases before giving way to Ed Porcelli in the bottom of the eighth.

"What can you say about Pollack," said ECU coach Gary Overton. "He gave up just two hits. He was masterful."

Martin, too, praised his lefthander.

"Pollack was very effective. He was very sharp," Martin said.

Though Porcelli promptly gave up three runs, Rod Byerly replaced him and went the rest of the way without giving up a hit.

"When they came back with Byerly, they shut the door," Overton said.

Gary Smith started the game for the Pirates and went three innings, giving up eight hits and four runs, before giving way to Brian Berkman.

"Our pitching staff was tired," Overton said, alluding to the overtime work the entire staff put in at the Colonial Athletic Association Championships last weekend. "Smith was tired. Our bull pen was tired. I think the story of the game was the way Florida State swung the bats."

The Seminoles had 11 hits, compared to just four by the Pirates.

Ed Fulton singled home Edwin Alcega with the Seminoles' first run in the opening inning.

Florida State added two more runs in the second when Alcega and Jose Marzan each had RBI singles, scoring Deion Sanders and Rafael Bournigal, respectively.

East Carolina rallied within 3-2 with two runs in the third. With one out, Dean Ehehalt singled.

John Thomas then rapped a two-run home run to make it a one-run game. The homer was his third round tripper of the season and second in three games.

"We felt good (at that point)," Overton said. "We felt it was anybody's ball game."

That anybody turned out to be the Seminoles.

Florida State expanded its lead to 5-2 in the fourth, loading the bases to chase Smith. Berkman came in and got Alcega to pop out but Sanders scored on the resulting sacrifice fly and Fulton later singled home Bournigal to give the Seminoles a three-run advantage after four.

After getting out of the jam in the fourth, Berkman pitched two scoreless innings before giving up three runs in the seventh.

Marzan opened the seventh with a single. Fulton then walked before being put out on a fielder's choice that allowed Barry Blackwell to reach.

One out later, Mark Giordano, who was in to pinch hit for Mike Skoutelakis, ripped a three-run homer over the right centerfield fence to make it 8-2.

Berkman was replaced by Craig Van Deventer in the eighth. Berkman went four innings, giving up two hits, but one of them was the three-run homer.

The Pirates added a run in the eighth off Porcelli, who pitched one-third of an inning.

Ehehalt opened the inning with a walk, followed by a single by Thomas. John Adams then doubled in, Ehehalt. Adams added a second run when he scored on Steve Sides' groundout. Chris Cauble then singled home Adams to make it 8-5.

No sooner had the Pirates pulled within three runs then they gave away two runs in the ninth.

Don Erickson reached on a walk and after one out Sanders lined a shot to Steve Sides at second base. Sides then bobbled the ball allowing Sanders to reach. Then Thomas, the centerfielder, bobbled the ball to allow Erickson to score and Sanders to reach third. Bournigal followed by singling home Sanders to give the Seminoles a 10-5 advantage.

"We negated every inning they had," Martin said. "We came back and scored every time they scored."

Bournigal led the Seminoles with three hits. Thomas' two hits led the Pirates, who fall to 26-16.

East Carolina takes on Central Michigan this today at 11:00 a.m. while Florida State goes on to play Miami, an 11-6 loser to Georgia Southern, at 3:00 p.m.

NCAA Notes:

In the opening game of the day, South Alabama topped Central Michigan, 2-0.

The Jaguars did all their scoring in the fourth inning when Kevin Farmer lined a single into center to score Wayne Jones and Luis Gonzalez.

A rain delay moved the second game between Miami and Georgia Southern back to a 7:30 p.m. start, but Georgia Southern knocked off the second-seeded Seminoles, 11-6.

Georgia Southern spotted the Hurricanes a 4-0 lead before rallying to tie it in the fourth.

The Eagles went ahead for good with a six-run ninth inning spurt. Jeff Shireman scored the first run on a bases-loaded walk. Joel Bananno then singled in Dan Gealy. Mike Shepherd followed that by scoring on an error.

Kim Lovett then lashed a two-run single, scoring Brett Hendley and Bananno. Shireman ended the scoring by knocking in Frank Vashaw.

Bodines Lead Second Day Runs At Charlotte Loop

HARRISBURG (AP) — Brett Bodine watched his older brother, Geoff, lead second round Coca-Cola 600 time trials Thursday at Charlotte Motor Speedway, then went on the track and duplicated the feat for the Winn-Dixie 300.

Brett, 28, drove his Olds to a lap of 167.328 mph, taking the pole for Saturday's Winn-Dixie 300, a NASCAR Busch Series sportsman stock car race.

In the second round of qualifying for the Coca Cola 600, Geoff Bodine will start 21st in the 42-car field. Neil Bonnett was second fastest Thursday, posting a speed of 168.481 mph. Rusty Wallace at 168.424 mph, Sterling Marlin and Ricky Rudd at 167.400 rounded out the top five on the second day.

Richard Petty, who had blown an engine Wednesday, was eighth Thursday and will start 28th Sunday.

Darrell Waltrip was 11th in Thursday's session and will start in the 31st position.

Allan Grice of Australia qualified in the 36th spot — the lone driver among three in Charlotte this week from that continent that made the field.

Brett Bodine's clocking easily topped that division's time trial record for the 1.5-mile track, a listing of 165.874 that had been put in the book in 1980 by David Pearson.

Also beating the old mark in taking positions 2-4 for Saturday's 200-lapper starting at 1 p.m. were Dale Earnhardt in a Chevrolet, Buick-driving Morgan Shepherd and Geoff Bodine, wheeling a Chevy. Larry Pearson, David's son, just missed surpassing his dad's record, qualifying fifth fastest at 165.868 in a Chevy.

Rolling to positions 6-10 as the first 20 starting spots were determined were Rick Mast, Dale Jarrett, Rusty Wallace, Mike Alexander and Neil Bonnett.

Jack Ingram, leading the Busch Series point standings toward a sixth national championship, qualified in the 12th position.

"I knew we had a shot at the pole since we'd tested real strong here two weeks ago," Brett said of his Asheville-based Thomas Brothers team. "In just a one-lap qualifying run, like our series had today, you have to hit your combination right, and we did."

"We really got the horsepower we needed, and that's a nice surprise because this is the first time we've ever run a six-cylinder engine on a superspeedway."

Brett Bodine is the second fulltime sportsman driver to win the 300's pole since 1979. L.D. Ottinger did it in 1984. It is Brett's fourth pole on the circuit this season, and this one was worth a bonus $5,300.

Foyt Crash
The championship race car driven by A.J. Foyt Jr. slams into the first turn wall at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway Thursday. Foyt was not injured and was cleared to drive after the crash. The car suffered moderate damage to the left front in the crash during the final practice session for Sunday's Indianapolis 500. See story on B-4. (AP Laserphoto)

Rosie Thompson To Join Lady Pirate Cage Staff

Rosie Thompson, who still ranks as the Lady Pirates' all-time leading scorer and rebounder, has joined Coach Pat Pierson's staff as an assistant coach. Dr. Ken Karr, director of athletics at East Carolina University, has announced.

A native of Blounts Creek, Thompson's 2,352 career points and 1,183 career rebounds rank as school records. She also holds ECU records for scoring in a season (723) and rebounds in a season (358), as well as the distinction as the most accurate free throw shooter in ECU history at 74 percent. Her jersey number (10) was retired at the end of her senior season. Her achievements were not limited to the court, however, as she was named the Outstanding Physical Education student as a senior at ECU in 1984.

Thompson, 29, served as a graduate assistant coach at East Carolina in 1982 after playing a year of professional basketball with the St. Louis Streaks. She comes to the athletic department after serving as Assistant Director of Admissions at ECU since 1984.

"We are very excited to have Rosie join our staff at East Carolina," first-year coach Pat Pierson said. "She was an outstanding student-athlete at ECU and she has a very complete knowledge of the game. Her recruiting expertise will be a tremendous asset to the Lady Pirate program."

Thompson will serve as recruiting coordinator as well as working with the Lady Pirate inside game during the season.

Foyt Fails To Follow Own Advice

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A.J. Foyt, the most experienced driver in the history of the Indianapolis 500, should have taken his own advice.

"I had a meeting with all my rookies and told them, 'Don't be out there racing cars in traffic.' And then I turn around and do it myself," Foyt said.

Heading his first four-car race team since 1970, Foyt crashed during the final two-hour testing period Thursday, sending his crew back to Gasoline Alley for round-the-clock repairs to the damaged car.

The track is closed today and Saturday. The next time the 33 cars are fired up on the track will be just before the 11 a.m. EST start of the race on Sunday.

Foyt, at age 52 the second-oldest driver in the lineup, has motored more than 10,000 miles around the Speedway's 2½-mile oval, and he has won the race a record four times. He will be making a record 30th consecutive start on Sunday and, although his car sustained moderate damage in the crash, he said it is repairable.

Foyt had just cautioned his rookie teammates, Stan Fox and Davy Jones, not to take any unnecessary chances during Thursday's practice when he got caught in the turbulent air behind drivers Derek Daly of Ireland and Dick Simon, the oldest driver in the starting field at age 53.

"The car was running good, just a little loose," Foyt said. "I was going to pull it in and I thought I'd see what the car does in the dirty air, and it just took off."

The rear end of Foyt's Lola wiggled to the right and the car took off into the first-turn wall. He suffered a leg cramp but was checked at the Speedway's infield hospital and was cleared to drive.

Foyt's top lap in Thursday's practice was 205.714 mph. The fastest speed was 211.515 by pole-winner Mario Andretti.

Assuming Foyt's car can be repaired by Sunday, he will keep his starting spot on the inside of the second row. But another crash on Thursday, by former Formula One champion Emerson Fittipaldi, forced him to the back of the field and set off a shuffling of the rest of the lineup.

Fittipaldi's car was damaged too severely to be repaired, and car owner Pat Patrick said a backup would be substituted for the race. It's the second straight year that a crash during the final practice period forced a lineup change. Last year, Dennis Firestone crashed and had to withdraw altogether because he had no backup car.

Simon, who then was the 34th fastest qualifier, got into the race as the first alternate.

"We'll definitely use the backup," Patrick said. "We've had plenty of time to test it. We tested it last week, and it's ready to go."

Fittipaldi qualified for a fourth-row start, but the backup car would have to start the race in the 33rd position.

"I just lost the back end, and the right rear hit (the wall)," said Fittipaldi, who spun once in turn three, went 400 feet into the wall and continued along the wall another 420 feet. "I don't know why it happened. I wasn't going fast. I was trying some new tires."

"I was by myself and there was no traffic," he said.

Foyt's car hit the wall, crossed the track and came to rest in the infield. Foyt got out of the car by himself, limped a few steps and fell to the ground. After a few minutes, he got up and walked to an ambulance.

He said he was limping because of a leg cramp. Otherwise, he was unhurt, and was pronounced fit to race.

"A.J.'s OK," car sponsor Jim Gilmore said. "He went through the hospital OK. He's limping a little bit, but he's fine. I think what'll have to be done is the men will have to put in many good, hard hours to put the car back in shape. I would say the car is in need of repair from front to rear."

Thursday's crashes increased to 23 the number since practice for the race began May 2.

Four drivers were hospitalized, including Firestone twice. His latest crash, last Friday, totaled his race car and sent him back to the hospital with neck fractures and a concussion.

The Speedway said Thursday that he was continuing to improve and was being fitted for a neck brace. Drivers Johnny Parsons and Jim Crawford, also injured in earlier crashes, were expected to be released and would attend the race, the Speedway said. Danny Ongais also suffered a concussion in a separate crash and was ruled medically unfit to drive.

Three-time winner Al Unser took over Ongais' car and qualified for a seventh-row start. Unser's teammate, two-time winner Rick Mears, had the second-fastest practice speed, 207.134, on Thursday.

Other speeds during the final practice included 205.855 mph by Michael Andretti, Mario's 25-year-old son; 203.389 by three-time winner Johnny Rutherford, 203.297 by defending champion Bobby Rahal; and 202.794 by former winner Danny Sullivan.

Burns Fires 8-Under 64 For Atlanta Classic Lead

ATLANTA (AP) — George Burns, a 12-year veteran of the PGA Tour, says the competition is much tougher today than it used to be.

"The kids today are better, stronger and are taking care of themselves better," Burns said Thursday after shooting an 8-under-par 64 for the first-round lead in the $600,000 Atlanta Golf Classic.

Burns posted his score early in the day, and withstood a torrid birdie-birdie-eagle finish by one of those youngsters, 23-year-old Davis Love III, who shot a 65.

"They play for keeps," Burns said of the younger players. "They're mentally tough."

Burns had no reason to anticipate his score on the hilly, 7,007-yard, par 72 Atlanta Country Club course.

No one should have been surprised at Love's effort. He was playing on the course he grew up on when his father was the club pro at the Atlanta layout.

"This is a total surprise to me," said Burns, who had missed the cut in four of his six previous tournaments.

"I've never played well here," added Burns, who got his fourth career victory at the Andy Williams Open earlier this season. "This is a real plus for me."

"I just came here with more of an aggressive attitude," he said. "You have to be aggressive. The days of making pars (and winning) are probably over."

Breaking par wasn't a big deal in the ideal conditions — overcast 80 degree weather with no wind.

Brett On WD's Pole

HARRISBURG (AP) — Brett Bodine drove his Oldsmobile to a record lap of 167.328 mph Thursday, taking the pole for the Winn-Dixie 300, a NASCAR Busch Series sport-smen stock car race.

Bodine's clocking easily topped that division's time trial record for the 1.5-mile Charlotte Motor Speedway track, a speed of 165.874 set in 1980 by David Pearson.

Also beating the old mark in taking positions 2-4 for Saturday's 200-lap race at 1 p.m. were Dale Earnhardt in a Chevrolet, Buick-driving Morgan Shepherd and Geoff Bodine in a Chevrolet. Larry Pearson, David's son, just missed surpassing his dad's record, qualifying fifth fastest at 165.868 in a Chevy.

Jack Ingram, leading the Busch Series point standings toward a sixth national championship, qualified in the 12th position.

"I knew we had a shot at the pole since we'd tested real strong here two weeks ago," Brett said. "In just a one-lap qualifying run, like our series had today, you have to hit your combination right, and we did."

"We really got the horsepower we needed, and that's a nice surprise because this is the first time we've ever run a six-cylinder engine on a superspeedway."

Brett Bodine is the second fulltime sportsman driver to win the 300's pole since 1979. L.D. Ottinger did it in 1984. It is Brett's fourth pole on the circuit this season, and this one was worth a bonus $5,300.

Qualifying continues Friday with positions 21-36 at stake. Among those scheduled to run is 600 pole winner Bill Elliott, who blew an engine in his Ford during practice Thursday and didn't get to make a run in the first round.

Boston Gains Win

By The Associated Press
 Holding 2-0 advantages in their best-of-seven series, the Boston Celtics and Los Angeles Lakers are moving closer to their third meeting in four years for the NBA title.

Miami Aide Arrested

MIAMI (AP) — A University of Miami football strength coach has been implicated in a nationwide ring trafficking in illegal body-building steroids, but school officials doubt any of their players are involved with the drug.

Coach Pat Jacobs was among 34 people indicted in San Diego on Thursday for allegedly manufacturing, smuggling and distributing 70 percent of the steroids illegally sold in the United States.

"We're stunned," Miami Athletic Director Sam Jankovich said. "But I would be even more surprised to learn any of our student athletes are involved. I'm not ruling out that possibility, but we've tested and we don't have a major problem with steroids."

Jacobs was the only person in the indictment directly tied to college athletics, authorities said. He has been suspended from the athletic department pending the outcome of his case.

Customs agents arrested Jacobs on Thursday at his Miami apartment after seizing boxes of liquid and tablet steroids, hypodermic needles and a stack of cash marked "profits," authorities said.

"These are steroids manufactured for use by veterinarians on animals to put more meat on them," said Customs spokesman Patrick O'Brien, adding the drugs were made at two laboratories in Tijuana, Mexico, and stamped with phony labels listing legitimate U.S. manufacturers.

Police pried open the back of Jacobs' television set and found a green university notebook that apparently lists customers' names, O'Brien said. He said university officials were cooperating in tracking down the names.

"He was a small-time guy who got caught in the wrong place at the wrong time," O'Brien said. "We have no reason to believe at this time that Jacobs was passing the drugs on to athletes."

Jacobs was freed Thursday on a personal bond of $100,000 by a federal magistrate in Miami, and a removal hearing was set for June 8 on the San Diego warrant.

Members of the Hurricane football team described Jacobs as an even-tempered, hard-working coach who preached "the natural way" to gain size with weights.

"I'm not here to judge anybody," said senior defensive end Daniel Stubbs. "All I can say is I can't believe it."

Defensive back Don Ellis said steroids are a fact of life in big-time college football. "They're here, they're everywhere you look."

Jankovich said Miami and the NCAA tested the school's football players for steroids 96 times in the last year, and Jankovich said "less than two" tested positive.

Two other Floridians also were indicted but, like Jacobs, they were both "spokes in the wheel" of the ring centered in Southern California, O'Brien said.

Toivol Mansen, 26, owner of a Miami health food store, was described in the indictment as a major distributor. Court documents say he allegedly picked up a $600,000 shipment of steroids for distribution in Florida. Mansen turned himself over to authorities in San Diego on Thursday.

Mark Depew, 24, of New Smyrna Beach, also was named in the 110-count federal indictment.

Anabolic steroids normally are prescribed to help anemia and cancer patients gain weight and strength. But in the past three decades, their use among athletes in several sports, particularly football and the weight events in track, has spread greatly, experts say.

Health problems associated with steroids include liver tumors, heart disease, hypertension, premature baldness and scarring acne. They can also increase aggression.

Rizzo Fires 66 For Lead

MASON, Ohio (AP) — Patti Rizzo took advantage of an early tee time for a 6-under-par 66 to take the first-round lead before rain suspended play in the LPGA Championship at the Jack Nicklaus Golf Center.

Play was stopped with 69 of the 144 starters still on the course.

The 26-year-old Rizzo held a 1-stroke lead over Jane Crafter, who was at 5-under 67. Deb Richard, at 68, was another shot back.

margin in the Western Conference. Boston defeated the Lakers 4-3 two win the NBA title three years ago. The following year, it was the Lakers downing Boston 4-2. Last year, the Celtics defeated Houston 4-2 in the championship round.

The Lakers, who have used just eight players in each of the first two games, will play the Sonics in Seattle on Saturday in Game 3. Game 4 also will be at Seattle on Monday, with the two teams playing again, if necessary, in Los Angeles on Wednesday.

The Celtics-Pistons series now moves to Detroit where the next two games will be played Saturday and Sunday. A sixth game, if needed, will be played in Boston on Tuesday. Larry Bird scored 31 points and led Boston to victory Thursday night. The Celtics survived a 38-performance by Detroit's Isiah Thomas and a late Pistons rally. The Celtics began the fourth period with a 15-7 run to take a 97-88 lead with 3:47 left. But Detroit came back on Rick Mahorn's free throw and a field goal, and Vinnie Johnson's jumper to close to 97-93 with 2:55 left.

Detroit never was able to get any closer and Boston wrapped up the victory with a 7-2 run at the end of the game.

Boston has won the first two games of all seven of its playoff series last year and this year. It won the first six of those series.

The victory was the Celtics' 34th in 35 games at Boston Garden. Detroit is 0-16 there since winning on Dec. 19, 1962. Adrian Dantley added 24 points and Joe Dumars 18 for the Pistons. For Boston, Parish scored 20 points, Kevin McHale 19 and Dennis Johnson 18.

'Beverly Hills Cop' Sequel Likely To Be Movies' Summer Blockbuster

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The summer movie season starts this weekend, and the film trade agrees that "Beverly Hills Cop II" will be the blockbuster. The only question remaining is: What will be No. 2?

Not "Ishtar," the $40 million whale that tried to swim the Sahara. Theater owners are now looking with hope to such TV nostalgia projects as "Dragnet" and "The Untouchables," the Steven Spielberg adventures "Immerspace" and "Harry and the Hendersons," as well as the return of such reliables as James Bond, Superman, Snow White, Jaws and Benji.

"We didn't have a good summer last year, and this one is not too promising," says Tom Sawyer, who buys movies for the 500 screens throughout the South operated by the Atlanta-based Carmike chain. "Beverly Hills Cop II" will dominate the summer, but that's not bad; we need every hit we can get."

If a few other attractions catch the fire of the Eddie Murphy comedy, the industry can look forward to a record year.

Daily Variety's Art Murphy reports that the box office is well ahead of last year. With the Memorial Day holiday earlier this year and Labor Day later, an additional $100 million in receipts could help 1987 surpass the record $4.03 billion of 1984.

As usual, the summer brings movies aimed at the widest audience possible, especially the young, but the season is not bereft of more serious fare.

Stanley Kubrick makes his return to the screen after a seven-year absence. His Vietnam War drama, "Full Metal Jacket," was filmed in England under the usual secrecy, and so far not even the powers at Warner Bros. have seen it. The release date is June 26.

Also promising in a more serious vein are: "Maurice," another E.M. Forster tale from the "Room With a View" team; "Witches of Eastwick," with Jack Nicholson as the devil; "No Way Out," with Gene Hackman and Kevin Costner; "Good Morning, Babylon," an Italian-made film about D.W. Griffith's shooting of "Intolerance"; "Amazing Grace and Chuck," Gregory Peck and Jamie Lee Curtis in a hopeful fantasy about a worldwide nuclear protest.

But otherwise, it's mostly a pop summer. "The Living Daylights" will introduce a new James Bond, Timothy Dalton. Michael Caine will be battling you-know-who in "Jaws — The Revenge." Christopher Reeve flies again in "Superman IV."

"Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" will return with much hoopla over its 50th anniversary. Disney also has joined forces with another favorite and is offering "Benji the Hunted." Also aimed at the kiddie trade: the animated "The Chipmunk Adventure" and Cannon Films' "Hansel and Gretel."

Comedy will be plentiful. Mel Brooks returns with "Spaceballs," starring himself, John Candy and Rick Moranis. Steve Martin and Darryl Hannah appear in an update of Cyrano de Bergerac, "Roxanne." Less promising are: "Revenge of the Nerds II"; "Ernest Goes to Camp"; and "The Disorderlies."

Theater owners are delighted to find Spielberg active again. The summer brings two of his presentations: "Harry and the Hendersons," a thriller about a Big Foot that invades a family's home; "Immerspace," the adventure of a test pilot (Dennis Quaid) who is miniaturized and injected into a rabbit.

Action-adventure fans will have plenty to cheer about. Arnold Schwarzenegger will appear in two films: "Predator" with Carl Weathers, and "Running Man." There's also "Masters of the Universe," based on the hit TV cartoon and popular toys.

There will be plenty of machine-gunning in "The Untouchables," the big-budget update of gangbusting in Chicago, with Kevin Costner playing Elliot Ness. "Dragnet" takes a more comic approach to the oldtime Jack Webb series, with Tom Hanks and Dan Aykroyd as the L.A. cop sidekicks.

Also promising in the summer fare: "The Believers," Martin Sheen and Helen Shaver; "Adventures in Babysitting," Elizabeth Sline and Keith Coogan; "Summer School," Mark Harmon and Kirstie Alley; "Nadine," Jeff Bridges, Kim Basinger.

Sawyer is bullish on what he has seen so far: "The Untouchables" — "I was disappointed," "Ishtar" — "did not screen well, won't be around long"; "Dragnet" — "I have no feeling about it"; "The Living Daylights" — "typical Bond, in and out in two weeks"; "Superman IV" — "they do less business each time"; "Spaceballs" — "too much ethnic humor"; "The Predator" — "good"; "Benji the Hunted" — "cute."

He did have hopes for "Full Metal

Jack" — "It might be somewhere between 'MASH' and 'Platoon'."

Morton Lipp, buyer for the screen Metropolitan Theater chain of Southern California, said he thought "Beverly Hills Cop" will probably be a major hit. "I think 'The Untouchables' is very good and 'Harry and the Hendersons' should sweep across middle America."

"Witches of Eastwick" is a good script, and God knows we need more now," he said. "The Believers" should do well in urban areas. "The Predator" is "The Terminator" sideways. I don't know about 'Full Metal Jacket.' 'Platoon' was big, but neither 'Gardens of Stone' or 'Hanni Hilton' did well."

Lipp's choice for sleepers: "No Way Out," "Summer School" and "Adventures in Babysitting."

'Baby Girl' Is Certain Tearjerker

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — John Lithgow is such a sympathetic figure in "Baby Girl Scott" on CBS this Sunday, you'll want to climb through the screen and slug the insensitive clod who is mean to him in one small scene.

In town recently for an encore appearance as host of "Saturday Night Live," Lithgow took time out from thinking comedy to talk about his somber role as the anguished father of a premature infant in the two-hour, made-for-television movie.

Lithgow and Mary Beth Hurt are eager, expectant parents until their baby is born three months early, weighing only 1 1/4 pounds. The critically underdeveloped girl is rushed to a state-of-the-art neo-natal care unit and is kept alive on machines.

As the baby's condition worsens, more procedures are tried. The parents struggle against guilt before deciding it would be better to let the baby die.

Make no mistake, this is a message movie. References to pictures on the hospital wall of healthy babies who started out just as tiny are the only attempts at even-handedness.

And while realism would seem to allow a tiny bit of bleak humor, to wit, "Joe Egg," a play about the parents of a severely handicapped child, "Baby Girl Scott" is unrelentingly sad. Lithgow thinks people will want to watch anyway. Get out your tissue boxes.

"I think people like to watch human drama, and this is unusually good human drama," he said. "People are so familiar with the clinical syndrome-of-the-week television movies. What I think is so good about this one, it's such an intense story of these characters. Their story kind of transcends the subject."

"People love to be made to cry. You don't think of 'Terms of Endearment' as a cancer movie, for instance."

Lithgow was nominated for an Oscar for "Terms of Endearment," in which he played the good-hearted Nebraska banker with whom Debra Winger had an affair.

He was nominated for an Oscar for his role as the transsexual former football star in "The World According to Garp," in which Hurt played Garp's wife.

He has played weirdo bad guys in "Blow Out" and "The Adventures of Buckaroo Banzai Across the Eighth Dimension." He was the tormented preacher who doused the teen-agers' fun in "Footloose." In a movie due out in June, he plays an average guy whose family meets up with a creature called "Harry."

"I'm not allowed to tell you what exactly it is. I'll give you a hint." Said the 6-foot-4 actor, "He makes me look like (midget actor) Billy Barty."

In "Baby Girl Scott," Lithgow is nice-guy Neil, a small-business man who helps his wife paint the nursery apricot and plays tapes of Mozart for his unborn child.

Fox Denies It Wants Bakker

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Ousted PTL leader Jim Bakker says he and his wife have been contacted about hosting Fox Broadcasting's "The Late Show," but Fox officials deny such an idea is in the works.

In an interview in a Palm Springs bicycle shop, Bakker told The Desert Sun of Palm Springs that while he and his wife, Tammy Faye, have had a number of lucrative offers, the talk show spot is the only one they are seriously considering.

"Lots and lots of agents have approached us," he said.

Brad Turell, Fox Broadcasting vice president for publicity, said Thursday he was unaware of the offer.

"There has been no offer to Jim and Tammy Bakker to host 'The Late Show,'" Turell said. "Whether someone asked them if they were available or would consider sitting in for a night, I can't confirm that. I don't know."

"In a situation that would be as an invitation to ... Jim and Tammy, I think I would have been notified."

Earlier this month, Bakker said he and his wife would never minister again, barring a miracle from God, but they did say they were considering taking jobs to help pay the mortgage on their $600,000 Palm Springs home.

If the couple accepts the offer from the fledgling fourth TV network, they would sit in the seat formerly occupied by Miss Rivers and appear opposite "The Tonight Show Starring Johnny Carson" on NBC.

Miss Rivers was fired last week as permanent host on the show, which has struggled in the ratings since its October debut. Fox officials announced this week they would feature rotating hosts, including songwriter Carole Bayer Sager, actress Suzanne Somers and comedians George Carlin and Buck Henry.

Bakker, in the bike shop with his 11-year-old son, Jamie, to have a flat tire repaired, refused to comment on his ongoing problems with Falwell, the Internal Revenue Service and the PTL.

Revelations of Bakker's sexual tryst with a church secretary and allegations of homosexuality and wife-swapping in the PTL have cast a pall over the PTL. PTL, which stands for Praise the Lord or People That Love, is now headed by the Rev. Jerry Falwell.

Mr. T's Saw Bothers Neighbors

LAKE FOREST, Ill. (AP) — The burly Mr. T, who annoyed his neighbors when he put up a stockade-like fence around his house, now has taken a chainsaw to his trees.

That does not sit well with some members of this wealthy Chicago suburb, which happens to be named after its trees.

"I believe a man's home is his castle, but if Mr. T does not like trees he chose the wrong town to move to," said Carl Kitzerow, Mr. T's neighbor directly to the north. "If this is an indication of what kind of neighbor he's going to be, I'd just as soon he moved out."

Kitzerow said he has not ventured next door to confront his Mohawk-wearing neighbor, but he has taken up the matter with the City Council. Earlier, the Council stopped Mr. T from topping his gate with a large, iron "T's" logo. The star of the NBC action show, "The A-Team," moved to his four-acre estate last fall.

Mr. T, who was born Lawrence Tureaud, could not be reached for comment by telephone because he has no telephone listing in the Chicago area. His accountant and spokesman, Lawrence Soldering of Chicago, said Thursday he had not heard from his client since the tree dispute surfaced.

Kitzerow said Mr. T's property was a virtual nature preserve, with 100-year-old firs and hardwood trees, before someone cranked up the chainsaw about 1 1/2 weeks ago.

Kitzerow said he is now "looking out on a vast wasteland," from his second-story window. "He is cutting down just about every living tree, bush and evergreen on his property," Kitzerow said in a telephone interview Wednesday night. "What's taken God and nature a hundred years or more to create,

he's taken about a week and a half to destroy."

Approximately 75 percent of the 100 or more trees have been leveled, some by Mr. T himself, according to Kitzerow.

Other neighbors contacted by The Associated Press refused to discuss the trees.

Students Serve As Commencement Speakers At Bowdoin Ceremonies

By JERRY HARKAVY
Associated Press Writer
BRUNSWICK, Maine (AP) — Commencement speakers at Bowdoin College over the years have included poet Henry Wadsworth Longfellow and sex researcher Alfred Kinsey. At the time, though, they were mere students.

Unlike most colleges, Bowdoin selects speakers from the ranks of its graduating class. When Bowdoin holds its 182nd commencement Saturday, it will hold to the tradition, which began with its first graduation in 1806.

Bowdoin is comfortable with the practice, and there is virtually no pressure for change, officials at the liberal arts college say.

"I think parents and alumni enjoy hearing what's on the minds of students today," said President A. LeRoy Greason, describing the speeches as "a demonstration of what the college is about."

"Parents can listen to celebrities on television," he said, "but when can they listen to the classmates of their sons and daughters — or in some cases their sons and daughters themselves — deliver a talk about an issue that's very important to them?"

The speakers Saturday will be Suzanne Colburn of Boothbay Harbor, Matthew Cordes of Westfield, N.J., and Moira Kelly of Van Buren.

"Outside speakers often have a tenuous link to the college — if they have any link whatsoever," Ms. Kelly said.

She suggested that other schools stage "entertainment extravaganzas" to generate publicity and forget that "a commencement is for students and their families."

While Bowdoin does not seek out celebrities, some speakers have eventually achieved prominence.

Speaking in 1825, before he had written the poetry that assured his fame, Longfellow expressed concern that American culture was not providing the proper atmosphere for literature to develop.

"We are a plain people, that have had nothing to do with the mere pleasures and luxuries of life," he said, "and hence there has sprung up within us a quick-sightedness to the failings of literary men, and an aversion to everything that is not practical, operative and thorough-going."

Kinsey, who directed a landmark study of American sexual behavior, told the class of 1916 about lessons he learned observing the gray squirrels on campus.

"Great laws of creation and life, I learned from my squirrel ... great truths of trust and fear, of troubles and delights, of delightful peculiarities, of friendship," Kinsey wrote.

Other Bowdoin graduation speakers included Civil War Gen. Joshua Chamberlain (1852); U.S. House Speaker Thomas Brackett Reed (1860); Gov. Percival P. Baxter (1898); U.S. Supreme Court Justice Harold H. Burton (1909); U.S. Sen. Robert Hale (1910), and poet Robert P. Tristram Coffin (1915).

All commencement essays, whether by Longfellow or someone long forgotten by history, achieve an immortality of sorts: they are kept in the library archives.

"Some are never looked at, others are pulled rather frequently," said Susan Ravdin of the library's special collections. The heaviest usage, she said, comes prior to commencement, when seniors choose their essay topics.

Men More Likely To Say 'I Love You'

HOUSTON (AP) — "I love you," the bold statement that can cement a developing relationship, is more likely to come first from the man, says a professor who studied dating couples.

"It is somewhat surprising for some people since we often think in society it's females who are emotional," said William Foster Owen, a professor of speech communication at Texas A&M University.

"But it's males, like it or not — and this may sound sexist — who are saddled with leading the way."

Owen surveyed 18 unmarried students, nine men and nine women, ages 18 to 25. Only one of the women was the first to tell her partner, "I love you," the professor said.

He acknowledged the survey is not statistically significant.

"But I have a hunch this is more common than the limited sample would indicate," he said Thursday in a telephone interview from College Station. "I found it repeatedly in the diaries and taped conversations of other studies."

He also noted that when he mentions his findings to his students, most nod in agreement.

"Relationships are constructed two ways — slowly over time and sometimes suddenly and impulsively, what we call a critical communications event," Owen said. "And one important event is that phrase."

"Males first utter it in society because they're expected to lead the way and females are expected to react," he said. "Sometimes males sense the female is slipping away."

Uttering "that magical phrase," he said, may be a way to keep the relationship going.

CONSUMERS DIGEST CALLED THE PEUGEOT 505 A "BEST BUY" TWICE

$275 monthly leasing on a 1987 2.2i Peugeot GLS

3.9% Financing Available

For the second year in a row, Consumers Digest magazine chose the Peugeot 505 as a "Best Buy" in the luxury sedan category.

And now, you can turn a "Best Buy" into a great lease. Because until June 30th, you can lease a 1987 2.2i Peugeot GLS for as little as $275 a month. With no down payment. And no security deposit. So if anybody else tells you they can give you more car for the money, don't buy it.

Based on MSRP for GLS 2i manual for a 60 month period (closed and lease or participating dealers). No purchase option. First month's lease payment due upon lease inception. Taxes and registration are extra. Total lease $8,500 plus 8 cents a mile over 90,000 miles. Subject to credit approval. Other options and dealer participation may affect price.
