Romania Thaws

Gorbachev Draws Warm Reception

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev and President Nicolae Ceausescu, who has openly attacked recent Kremlin reforms, greeted each other warmly today as Gorbachev began his first visit to this maverick East bloc nation.

The two leaders embraced and kissed each other three times on both cheeks. Neither made any public statement.

A crowd that state television said numbered in the thousands shouted, "Hurrah" and "Ceausescu, Gorbachev" for about 20 minutes as the leaders reviewed the honor guard and met diplomats.

Tens of thousands of people lined the motorcade route from the airport to downtown Bucharest, many of them children dressed in folk costumes or the uniforms of the Communist Party Young Pioneers or other official youth groups.

Gorbachev was accompanied by his wife, Raisa. The Romanian leader's wife, Elena, attended the welcoming ceremony.

The cheering crowd was reminiscent of warm receptions given U.S. presidents Richard Nixon in 1969 and Gerald Ford in 1975. Ceausescu's face beamed while welcoming Ford and Nixon, but he appeared more solemn when greeting Gorbachev.

Ceausescu's relatively independent foreign policy decisions have been welcomed by the United States and are thought to irritate Soviet officials.

More recently, the Romanian leader has openly criticized Gorbachev's efforts to stimulate the Soviet economy by encouraging initiative and private enterprises. Romania's tightly controlled arts and news media show no sign of adopting "glasnost," the Soviet leader's policy of openness on selected social topics.

The state Agerpres news agency described the visit as "a moment of outstanding importance in the history of Romanian-Soviet relations." However, Romanian officials gave little advance publicity to the trip.

Soviet flags appeared on some main boulevards late Sunday afternoon, but there were none of the portraits and slogans that traditionally herald the arrival of a Soviet leader.

The Communist Party daily Scinteia waited until Sunday to print a portrait and short biography of Gorbachev.

But officials made sure the capital

House Panel Probing Stark Attack

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — A U.S. senator visiting the missile-ravaged USS Stark expressed horror at the human suffering inflicted by Iraq's attack but said it was too soon to assign blame for the ship's failure to defend itself.

Sen. James Sasser, D-Tenn., is one of three senators appointed by Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., to visit the Persian Gulf region because of the May 17 raid, which killed 37 American sailors.

A 10-member delegation from the House Armed Services Committee, led by Chairman Les Aspin, D-Wis., arrived in Bahrain today to conduct an inquiry. Another eight-member team from the State Department and Pentagon today reached the Iraqi capital of Baghdad to investigate the attack.

Sasser said that despite the efforts of a 10-man Navy investigating team that arrived last week, it was not clear whether the Stark could have prevented the Iraqi missile attack.

"A lot of the ship's records which contained this vital evidence had been destroyed," he told reporters Sunday after touring the ship.

The Navy investigators have been examining whether the Stark's Phalanx anti-missile system failed, preventing the crew from knowing that one or more Iraqi warplanes had fired two missiles at the ship. Iraq, which has apologized for the attack, said it was a case of mistaken identity.

U.S. Navy officials in Bahrain first denied the computer system that runs the Phalanx was faulty, then refused to comment on the matter.

Sasser said he could not shed light on the subject, "simply because (of) what I perceive to be some confusion as to what has occurred aboard" the ship after the missiles struck.

Sasser said that on boarding the Stark, anchored three miles off Bahrain, his first impression was one of "horror as to what occurred with those who were in compartments

Poles Cheer Kennedy

GDANSK, Poland (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy won thunderous cheers from thousands of Solidarity supporters when he declared, "I am a Pole," and recalled visits to Poland by his slain brothers.

In an appearance Sunday in a sunny Gdansk courtyard with Solidarity founder Lech Walesa, Kennedy praised the banned free trade union movement for fighting "against tyranny (and) repression and for human rights."

Pinning a Solidarity button on his lapel, the Massachusetts Democrat declared to thunderous cheers, "Jestem Polakiem" — "I am a Pole" — stirring memories of his brother President John F. Kennedy, who told the people of Berlin, "I am a Berliner."

Kennedy and more than a dozen members of his family are in Poland on a four-day trip to present the 1986 Robert F. Kennedy Foundation human rights award to two Solidarity activists, Zbigniew Bujak and Adam Michnik.

They leave today for Rome, where Kennedy is scheduled Tuesday to meet Pope John Paul II.

Speaking in a courtyard near St. Brigida's church in Gdansk, a Solidarity stronghold, Kennedy noted that his brothers Joseph and John came to Poland before World War II and that his brother Robert visited in 1964.

"My family has had a special feeling for your country," he said. "And we're having such a good time now; we're going to come back again and again and again."

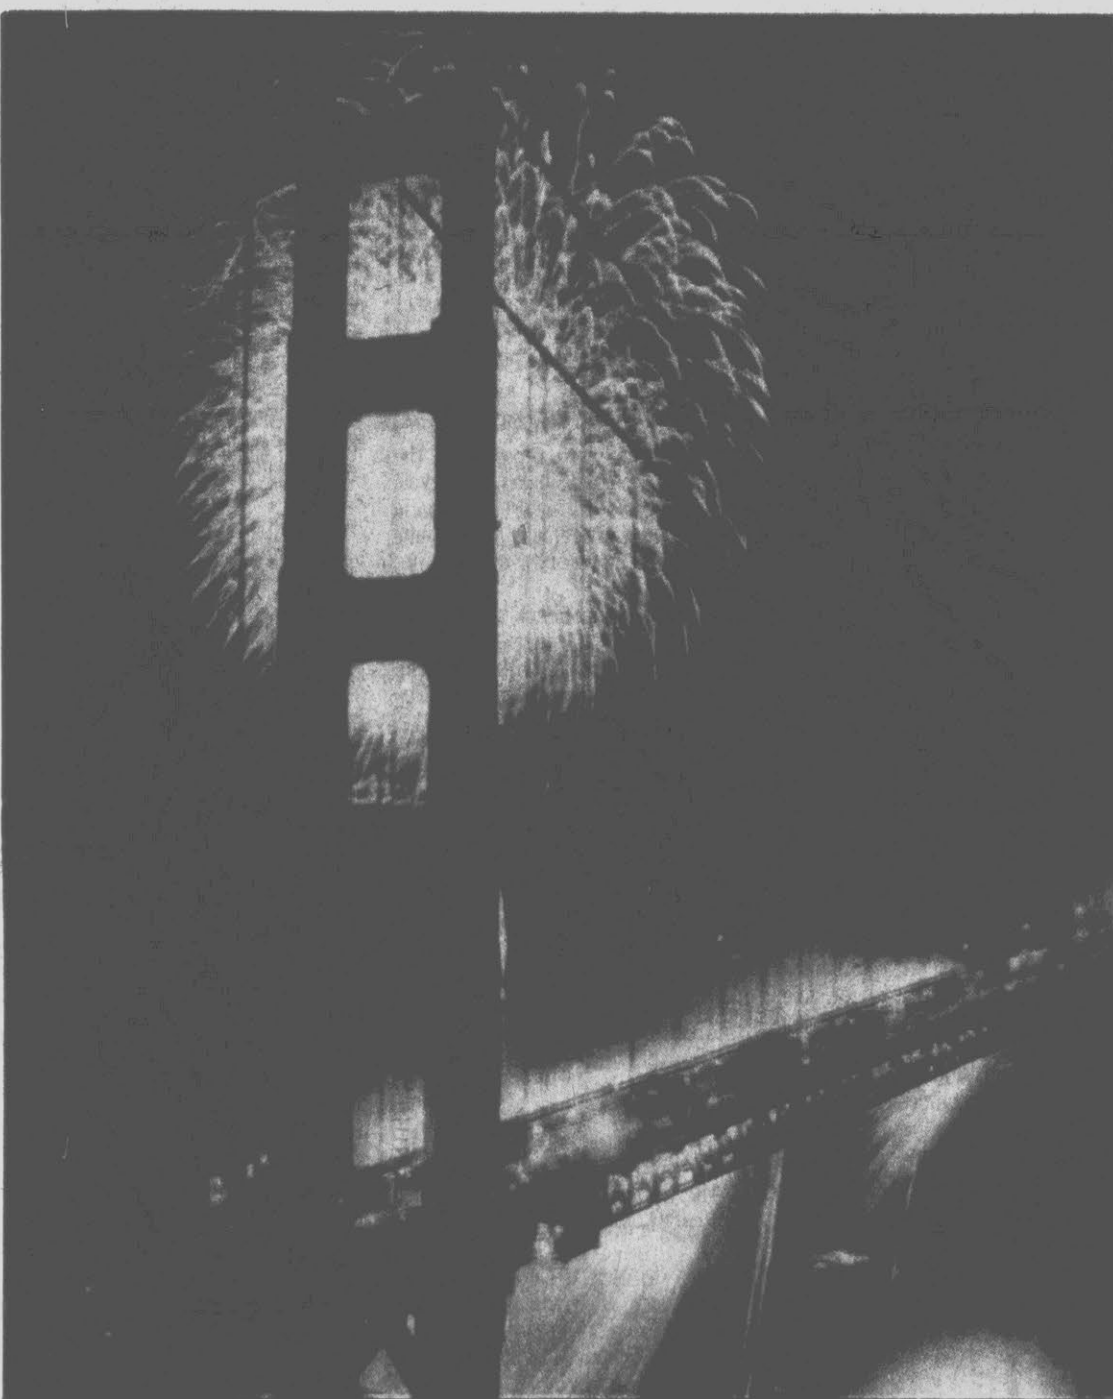

As he introduced family members, the crowd began singing a traditional Polish song of welcome, "Sto Lat" — "May You Live 100 Years" — then broke into cheers for President Reagan, with whom Kennedy often has disagreed.

"Greetings for Reagan, greetings for Reagan!" they cried.

Color photographs of John, Robert and Ted Kennedy were passed out, setting off a mad scramble by the crowd. An eight-piece band played the Polish and U.S. national anthems, and the Kennedys flashed V-for-victory signs, the symbol of Solidarity.

The facade of the red brick rectory was adorned with large Polish and American flags and a photograph of the pope, a native of this overwhelmingly Roman Catholic country. John Kennedy was the first Roman Catholic president of the United States.

Walesa, taking the microphone from the Massachusetts senator, said: "I want to thank Mr. Senator for visiting our city, and I want to ask the senator to pass greetings from Gdansk to the American nation and tell it that Solidarity lives and Solidarity will win."

U.S. Marks Memorial Day, Anniversary Of Constitution

By HOWARD GOLDBERG
Associated Press Writer

Americans approached the sad, proud tradition of honoring the nation's military dead with fresh grief over the USS Stark, but Memorial Day also brought celebrations of the Constitution's 200th birthday and the Golden Gate Bridge's 50th.

The holiday weekend sent millions of people to backyard barbecues, beaches, parades and other outdoor activities including the Indianapolis 500, which Al Unser Sr. won Sunday for the fourth time.

Vice President George Bush was the scheduled keynote speaker in Philadelphia for today's official opening of a 16-week bicentennial commemoration of the Constitutional Convention.

Bush, joined by former Chief Justice Warren Burger, was to speak in front of Independence Hall on the mall facing the Liberty Bell Pavilion. A soapbox has been set up nearby to demonstrate the freedom of speech that so many U.S. servicemen have died to protect.

The USS Constitution, known as Old Ironsides and the oldest ship in the Navy, was to fire its traditional 21-gun Memorial Day salute in Boston Harbor.

Fisherman from Depoe Bay, Ore., planned to cast 500 wreaths into the Pacific Ocean today in the 42-year-old Fleet of Flowers tradition.

The nation's 110th National Cemetery for veterans and dependents was to be dedicated today at Fort Mitchell, Ala., about 10 miles from Columbus, Ga.

In Comer, Ga., about 8,000 veterans and members of their families were expected at a seven-day campout planned by the "LZ Friendly" Vietnam veterans support group, who named themselves after the military term for a safe landing zone.

"It's worth driving up here to meet our brothers and sisters, and to laugh and cry and dance under the stars

Pitt Observes Day For Veterans

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Veterans and non-veterans in Pitt County marked the observance of the 1987 Memorial Day weekend in activities honoring military veterans of today and of the past.

Harold McMillion, team leader of the Greenville Veterans Outreach Office, said a contingent of area people attended Memorial Day services and the unveiling of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial statue Saturday on the grounds of the State Capitol.

"It was a very impressive event, and for some veterans, a high emotional ceremony," McMillion said. "A huge turnout attended, and stayed for the two and one-half hour ceremony despite the 90 degree heat."

"For all who were there, I think I can say we felt it was a ceremony very well done in paying tribute to all who have served their country."

Throughout Pitt County, the primary focus of the annual program carried out by the local American Legion Post was that of placing small American flags on the graves of all known veterans.

Dr. Marshall Helms, commander of District III of the American Legion, which includes Pitt, Beaufort and Hyde counties, said "more than 1,200 flags were placed on the graves of those who served in the military."

"We had a contingent of six young ROTC men from D.H. Conley High School along with about 15 Legionnaires taking part.

"Friday we worked throughout the county, placing flags on graves in town, church and some family cemeteries. On Saturday and Sunday we placed flags on graves in cemeteries throughout Greenville," Helms said.

Greenville Woman Killed In Wreck

By The Associated Press

Five people have been killed in North Carolina traffic accidents during the Memorial Day weekend, two people killed in separate accidents 20 minutes apart, the N.C. Highway Patrol said this morning.

Stevie Murray Alston, 24, of Bear Creek, was killed at around 5:30 p.m. Sunday when the motorcycle he was operating collided with a car turning onto a rural paved road inside the Goldston town limits, the patrol said.

Twenty minutes earlier in Currituck County, the patrol said Leann Ward Singleton, 26, of Greenville was killed when the car she was driving ran off the right side of U.S. 158 north of Kitty Hawk, struck a ditch and overturned.

Gilmer Craig Simmons, 22, of Greensboro, was killed at 9:50 p.m. Friday in Guilford County, on a rural paved road about 1.5 miles north of Greensboro. Troopers said Simmons was thrown from his car after he ran off the right shoulder of the road, swerved back onto the road and crossed the center line, hitting an oncoming vehicle.

Christopher Eugene Belk, 28, of Monroe was killed at 3:46 a.m. Sunday on a rural road in Union County about 11 miles north of Monroe. Troopers said Belk's car ran off the road and struck a tree.

The N.C. State Motor Club is predicting that 17 people could lose their lives in North Carolina traffic accidents over the long Memorial Day weekend.

The club counts the holiday toll over a 78-hour period from 6 p.m. Friday until midnight Monday.

Last year 23 fatalities were recorded on North Carolina roads over the 78-hour period, while 19 deaths occurred in 1985, and 11 in 1984.

Troopers said 529 traffic fatalities have been recorded this year in North Carolina by the N.C. Division of Motor Vehicles, down from the 615 recorded at this time last year.

Weekend Telethon To Benefit Hospital

Stories of Down East children and the medical challenges they have overcome will highlight a weekend telethon benefitting the Children's Hospital of Eastern North Carolina.

The fifth annual Children's Miracle Network Telethon, to be broadcast live this year from Disneyland, will air on WITN-TV Channel 7 beginning Saturday at 9 p.m. and running through 6 p.m. Sunday.

In a split-location format, the last 20 minutes of each hour during the telethon will be devoted to local programming broadcast live from the Brody Medical Sciences Building at the East Carolina University School of Medicine.

David Crabtree, Dick Jones, Gail Paschal, Linda Shore and other WITN-TV news personalities will once again host the telethon, which raised more than $65,000 for the hospital last year. Overall, the 1987 national telethon is expected to set a record by generating $38 million in pledges to support the work of pediatric hospitals in the United States and Canada.

This year's local programming will tell the story of the Children's Hospital of Eastern North Carolina through the experiences of its patients — youngsters from places like Creswell and Swan Quarter, Jacksonville and Grimesland, Wilson and Rocky Mount. The one-year-old hospital, a division of Pitt County Memorial Hospital and the eastern region's pediatric referral center, provides advanced medical care to cope with the often devastating health problems that can strike children.

Among this year's celebrity guests will be Karen Bloomquist, Miss North Carolina 1986; Pittsburgh Steeler lineman and former ECU All-America Terry Long; former Steeler star and Rocky Mount native Jim Clack; former professional baseball pitcher Mike Caldwell, and Dr. Richard R. Eakin, chancellor of East Carolina University.

Eastern North Carolinians can call in a pledge by dialing 1-800-227-2084 (551-2084 in Greenville).

Although no monetary goal has been set for this year's telethon, coordinator Margaret Sullivan said she hopes last year's total will be exceeded. The hospital took a major stride toward that goal with the recent announcement of a $15,000 pledge from Tarboro-based Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Co.

A limited amount of seating for a live audience will be available in the Brody Auditorium from 7 a.m. to 6 p.m. Sunday.

INHERITED GUM DISEASE

If one of your children's gums bleed occasionally, this may be an indication of gum disease. If this happens in spite of good oral hygiene, it may suggest that he or she has inherited a tendency to gum disease.

Juvenile periodontitis or gum disease can advance rapidly if left untreated. It can also result in loss of permanent teeth in children and teenagers who are otherwise healthy. If the tendency is inherited, it may be traced to an x-linked gene present in the mother's chromosomes. Both boys and girls can inherit this trait, though it is more common among girls.

In one case, the history was traced to a great-grandmother on the mother's side of the family and several other female family members. In the present generation there were four girls and one boy in the family. Three of the daughters showed evidence of gum disease before they reached their teens. Whether there is a history of gum disease in your family or not, prompt treatment of this condition is needed to prevent soft tissue involvement and loosening of permanent teeth.

If you are concerned about your children's gums, call our office for an evaluation.

Note: We invite all participants of the Blue Cross/Blue Shield personal care plan to come by our office. We are a member of Cost Care.

Farm Scene

By LEROY JAMES

County Extension Director Since huge capital outlays are needed to buy all of the assets included in a farm business, many farmers rent all or part of the land they operate.

Renting is a way to enlarge the land base without large investment. Cash leases are the easiest to use. A disadvantage for the tenant is the risk of sinking a substantial cash amount before harvest. An alternative is a flexible cash lease with a share of the crops paid to the landlord at harvest. A base cash rent may be part of the flexible cash income.

The objective of a lease should be to provide fair and reasonable returns for both parties for input contributions. There is no easy way to do this.

A fair share arrangement exists when each party is paid for the use of inputs (in cash, crops or livestock) according to the contribution the inputs make toward producing income. To do this you should identify and value all inputs contributed by each party.

Rates of depreciation and repairs are difficult to judge. Current farm records can help. The valuation of the tenant's labor and management depends, in part, on his bargaining power.

Amounts for remaining expenses depend on business size and enterprise mix. They should be split on the same basis as other input contributions, which are 50-50. In the example these include fuel, fertilizer, seed, chemical supplies, utilities, hired labor, feed, livestock expenses, accounting fees and machine hire.

Divers Searching For Plane's Crew

By The Associated Press
Navy divers searched Atlantic shoals today for two crew members lost in the crash of a Georgia National Guard airplane on a drug-suppression training mission about 110 miles south of Miami, the Coast Guard said.

In Washington, federal investigators ordered blood-alcohol tests for the body of a pilot who died Sunday with his wife and daughter when his plane collided with a plane carrying his son and in-laws, officials said.

And in Canada, four people were killed in central British Columbia when their small plane crashed Sunday near a remote airstrip, authorities said.

The Georgia National Guard propeller plane crashed Sunday afternoon in Cay Sal Bank, an uninhabited group of islands and shallows in the triangle formed by Florida, Cuba and the Bahamas, the Coast Guard said.

Metro-Dade County police divers began the search of the wreckage, found in 30 feet of water, said Coast Guard Lt. Paul Benvenuto. "The only debris on the surface was a helmet, a personal flotation device and a raft," he said.

The names of the missing crew members were not released.

A spokesman for the Georgia agency, Col. Harry Heath, said the crew of the downed plane was stationed at Dobbins Air Force Base in Marietta, Ga., and was working with the Coast Guard on "drug suppression."

In Ritzville, Wash., the National Transportation Safety Board was attempting to determine the cause of the collision that killed Kenneth Lavern Sager, his wife Gloria, and their daughter Karla.

The collision and crash occurred shortly after noon just after the planes took off from Ritzville Airport on a one-hour flight to Athol, Idaho, said NTSB investigator Dan Daily.

Daily said he ordered a toxicology examination of Sager.

Three other family members, Mrs. Sager's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Moritz of Ephrata, and a son of the Sagers, Kirk, were in the second plane, which landed safely, authorities said.

The identities of the British Columbia crash victims were not immediately released, and the accident was under investigation by The Royal Canadian Mounted Police and the Ministry of Transport.

The small plane apparently crashed on approach to the gravel Silver Can airstrip at Takla Lake, about 100 miles northeast of Fort St. James.

Unions Merging

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Seven trade unions representing 130,000 black metalworkers and autoworkers announced they have merged and plan to campaign for a socialist economy.

The National Union of Metalworkers of South Africa, formed Sunday, became the country's second largest trade union after the black National Union of Mineworkers, which claims 360,000 members.

The 600 delegates who met over the weekend to organize the new union endorsed the principles of the Freedom Charter, which was drawn up by anti-apartheid leaders in 1955 and calls for an integrated democratic South Africa with a socialist economy.

The new union draws most of its membership from the 65,000-member Metal and Allied Workers Union.

The new union's president, Daniel Dube, said it would apply for affiliation with the predominantly black Congress of South African Trade Union, the country's largest labor federation.

Reagan's Role In Arms Scandal Is Still Unclear

By WILLIAM M. WELCH

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Iran-Contra hearings, despite three weeks of sometimes absorbing revelations, still haven't painted a coherent picture of what went wrong in Ronald Reagan's presidency.

In the meantime, poll figures indicate the public doesn't entirely believe Reagan in the affair — but that the public hasn't turned on him either. Pollsters agree his overall support is beneath earlier levels but that the decline has leveled out.

However, the scandal may have left Reagan's presidency disabled by a preoccupation with its own defense and an uncertainty about what further testimony holds, particularly from former National Security Adviser John M. Poindexter and his aide, Oliver L. North, who was fired when the Iran-Contra connection was revealed.

If North and Poindexter testify that Reagan knew of the diversion of money from the Iran arms deal to the Nicaraguan Contras — something Reagan has continued to deny — sentiment could turn against him.

"If he knew, then it means just a much, much worse credibility problem for him that would spill over into the political world," Norman Ornstein, congressional scholar at the conservative American Enterprise Institute, said last week. "At that point, you're going to have Republicans saying, 'Gee, this ship is sinking, we'll look out for ourselves.'"

Amid disclosures suggesting Reagan was far more familiar with the covert aid to the Nicaraguan rebels than he had previously acknowledged, the White House last week made an important shift in position. Reagan said he was not only aware of the private aid but, "It was my idea."

At the same time, the White House asserted that the congressional restrictions on U.S. aid to the Contras, known as the Boland amendment, did not apply to the president or other White House officials.

Laurence H. Tribe, a Harvard law professor and constitutional expert, called the case "even more fundamental" than the Watergate scandal that led to President Richard M. Nixon's resignation.

A News Analysis

"It's hard to imagine this unfolding in a way that extricates the president from what I think is a grave charge of abuse of power, in the form of presiding over a shadow treasury that circumvents Congress' control over the purse strings," Tribe said.

He described as "untenable" the White House assertion that the Boland amendment ban on aid to the Contras did not cover the president and his National Security Council staff. The ban applied to the CIA, Defense Department and "any other agency or entity of the United States involved in intelligence activities."

Tribe argued that even if Reagan weren't covered, he was under constitutional obligation to see that the laws were faithfully executed.

Philip Heyman, a Harvard law professor and head of the Justice Department's criminal division in the Carter administration, said violations would have to be clear-cut to bring criminal charges. But, he said, even if Reagan weren't covered by the Boland amendment, involvement with those who broke it would touch him.

"Anybody's covered, including the president, if he takes part in activities that the Boland amendment forbids, together with other people who are plainly covered," Heyman said. "You're just as guilty as they are."

"It seems quite likely that it's going to be a very rough summer for Ronald Reagan," Ornstein said. "But impeachable offenses? ... There is no stomach for it."

"There is no political advantage to be gained by anybody to moving forward with it. ... You'd have to go much further than this before you get people willing to move for impeachment," Ornstein said.

The Iran-Contra affair began to unravel in early November with the revelation that the administration was selling weapons to Iran in exchange for release of hostages.

The money trail, however, quickly led to U.S. support for the war of resistance against Nicaragua's Sandinista regime.

The affair is basically one of "two fundamental misrepresentations," said James David Barber, political science professor at Duke University.

"One is the misrepresentation to the rest of the world about not dealing with hostages," he said. "The second is misrepresenting to Congress what was going on here."

It is in the dealings with the Contras where most discussions of illegality lie, and where independent counsel Lawrence E. Walsh has brought charges resulting in guilty pleas by two private fund-raisers who worked with North to aid the Contras.

But it is not clear whether a presidential pardon could be indicted.

"Walsh may find himself with a theory that includes the president when he's comfortable with prosecuting others, but not (prosecuting) the president, for any number of good reasons," Heyman said.

Fitting Memorial

There was a new work of art on the Capitol grounds in Raleigh last weekend.

A memorial commemorating the United States' involvement in the Vietnam war was dedicated Saturday afternoon.

The sculpture was done by Abbe Godwin of Greensboro and its $300,000 cost is being paid for by Vietnam veterans.

The last time a monument was placed on Capitol square was in 1948 when President Harry S. Truman dedicated a memorial honoring Tar Heel born presidents Andrew Jackson, James K. Polk and Andrew Johnson.

The new memorial honors 206,000 North Carolinians who saw military service in Vietnam. Some 1,600 state residents lost their lives in the conflict.

America's involvement in Vietnam was long and torturous. Virtually every community of North Carolina saw its young people go off to a war that was indefinable and little understood at home. Most communities faced the inevitable fact that some who went would not come back alive.

Now most of those who returned have long since resumed their civilian roles in various careers, professions and family life. It must be difficult, however, to totally forget a war which caused so much divisiveness at home and in the end led to no significant military victory.

It should not be forgotten that great individual sacrifices were made by the young people of the Vietnam era. If nothing else our future leaders learned important lessons from that costly, frustrating and sapping experience. Certainly it is fitting that the North Carolinians who had their lives disrupted to become a part of Vietnam now have a memorial of their own. It will be a place for memories ... and perhaps a place to put an end to the past.

Competition

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration originally planned to resume shuttle flights in July of this year ... then moved the date back to February 1988 and now says June of 1988 is the new target date.

It's reasonable to assume the target date is just that: a target. Maybe they can make it and maybe not. NASA says there are major system tests that require attention before scheduled flights can be resumed.

The latest announcement left little doubt but that safety of the crew is still very much on the space agency's collective mind.

There have been no manned U.S. space flights since Challenger exploded shortly after liftoff on Jan. 28, 1986 and while public impatience exists, it is secondary to NASA's concern for rebuilding an aura of competence.

The confidence and pride of NASA were wounded by the 1986 tragedy and findings of subsequent investigations added salt to their wounds.

The new schedule calls for three launches next year and seven in 1989. France and the Soviet Union are aggressively marketing their rockets for the business of hosting satellites into orbit, and Japan is preparing to enter the field. To regain a realistic role in that business will require much effort.

Disclosure of a new delay in shuttle launching plans coincided with Russia airing its plan to bring back rocks from Mars to Mother Earth. We wish them success if only because competition makes Americans buckle down.

Today's Thought

State lawmakers are telling municipalities they must either pay up or put up with billboards. That's a far cry from the rezone, get-rid-of theory.

Local Officials Claim State Meddling

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin isn't the only one complaining about legislative encroachment on his turf.

Officials of local governments, especially towns and cities, grumble that this year's General Assembly is meddling in issues that historically have been considered off-limits to state lawmakers.

"I don't know if it's all that different from past years and it may not be a definite trend, but it's something to be concerned about," said Ellis Hankins, a lobbyist for the 475-member North Carolina League of Municipalities.

Several pending bills have led to charges of legislative trespassing. Among them:

•A measure sponsored by influential Sen. Aaron Plyler, D-Union, to curb the authority of municipal governments to limit placement of mobile homes. It has been endorsed by the Senate Judiciary IV Committee and awaits consideration by the Finance Committee.

A House committee has approved a compromise version that would permit exclusion of manufactured homes from neighborhoods whose quality and appearance standards they cannot match; but the League of municipalities is unconvinced.

•A bill that would require local governments to compensate billboard owners when city ordinances force them to remove their signs.

That measure provoked fierce debate in the House, as opponents charged it would make enforcement of billboard regulations prohibitively expensive. It narrowly passed after being amended to exempt cities such as Raleigh and Durham that already have billboard ordinances, and is pending in the Senate.

•A bill to require compensation of property owners whose land is "down zoned," lowering its value, for a public purpose.

•A bill to bar cities from doubling or tripling rates for electricity or water and sewer services to customers who live outside the municipal limits.

These bills, Hankins says, boil down to state intrusion in one of local government's most prized prerogatives: zoning.

Additionally, local officials are still steaming over a law enacted last year that forces cities and counties to pay increased retirement benefits for law enforcement officers. They've made repeal of the law a top priority for this year's session.

"We think these are local issues and should be handled by local officials," Hankins said. "To see the Legislature getting involved with them is very disturbing."

Legislative leaders say they keep their hands off local matters except when necessary. "There's certainly no conspiracy and no effort" to rob cities and counties of power, said Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, sponsor of the billboard and down-zoning bills.

He noted that he has introduced legislation to impose a statewide land-transfer tax, giving local governments another revenue source, and a bill to let them form liability risk management pools.

"When I introduce a bill like that, I'm a good fellow," he said. "Then I support bills to provide property owners just compensation ... and I'm not."

Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan, a former Mount Gilead city council member, says there's nothing chiseled in stone about where local authority ends and the state's begins. Disputes have to be settled on a case by case basis, he said.

"I basically oppose state government further restricting the authority of local governments," Jordan said.

But he said local governments sometimes "become innovative with their authority" to the point that some allege abuse. In such cases, he said, "there are two arenas for (resolving such issues). One is the court system and the other is the Legislature."

When presenting his bill to the Judiciary IV Committee, Plyler said cities and counties persistently had discriminated against manufactured homes, banishing them to the boon-docks and ignoring dramatic improvements in their quality.

Jordan promises no easy resolution of the state-local feud.

"Those who have power will try to get more," he said. "That's true of cities, towns, counties, states ... (and) the federal government. The courts, in most instances, have to draw the line."

Hankins says state officials should remember that their local counterparts are closest to the people.

"Our operating philosophy is that the system works best when the General Assembly presents reasonable and general guidelines ... then leaves the specifics to us."

Nations Confused By Seeming Policy Shifts

WASHINGTON — The four-star Air Force general was trying to explain why the crew of the USS Stark was not as alarmed as it might have been at the approach of a French Mirage that had been positively identified as an Iraqi Air Force fighter-bomber.

"Iraq is our friend," Lt. Gen. Richard A. Burpee, operations director of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, told the House Foreign Affairs Committee last week.

To the Persian Gulf nations involved, that statement underlined what they see as President Reagan's shifting diplomacy in the region. Only a year ago, Reagan was secretly supplying Iran with weapons and battlefield intelligence that — despite the president's denials — aided the government of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini in its war against Iraq.

Reagan's secret dealings with Iran have contributed to continuing turmoil in the region and among administration policymakers. "We never supported Iran — that was never U.S. policy," said a senior State Department official. "That was the work of those zany in the White House."

Disputes over Reagan's proposed next move — providing U.S. protection for Kuwaiti oil tankers — have caused widespread concern among both Democrats and Republicans in Congress. "We just want to know exactly what they have in mind," said a Senate Foreign Relations Committee staffer. He was explaining a bipartisan Senate vote last week requiring detailed plans for defending the tankers before providing Kuwaiti ships with American flags.

Since Khomeini seized power in 1979, the United States has maintained an expanded American naval presence in the gulf to ensure a flow of oil to industrialized nations in Asia and Western Europe. U.S. policy has been keyed to keeping open the Strait of Hormuz, a gulf choke-point where Iran recently deployed Chinese-made Silkworm rockets capable of striking Strait shipping.

Despite Khomeini's threats, Iran has never attempted to close the Strait. U.S. naval forces have been largely a passive presence that has remained outside the tanker war in which both Iraq and Iran have pum-

'The apparently accidental attack on the Stark, leaving 37 crewmen dead, was a reminder of the hazards U.S. naval forces would face in escorting Kuwaiti ships into the Iraq-Iran war zone.'

meled the shipping lanes. The apparently accidental attack on the Stark, leaving 37 crewmen dead, was a reminder of the hazards U.S. naval forces would face in escorting Kuwaiti ships into the Iraq-Iran war zone.

While State Department officials insisted that the United States was not taking sides in the 6½-year-old war, the move would put the United States squarely on the side of one of Iraq's most important allies. According to U.S. defense officials, Kuwait's port has been the transshipment point for Iraqi supplies of weapons, food and other bulk materials since Iran cut off the Baghdad government's access to the gulf.

Khomeini's Revolutionary Guards blocked Iraq's only opening to the gulf in February 1986 when 30,000 troops seized the southern tip of Iraq's Faw peninsula. Less than two weeks before that attack, Reagan's National Security Council provided Iran with CIA intelligence showing battlefield deployments of Iraqi troops.

According to the Tower commission report, the intelligence was turned over to Iran despite heated protests from CIA officials who warned that the information could alter the balance of the conflict.

At the time of the Iranian assault, Iraqi diplomats say that the CIA was advising Iraqi President Saddam Hussein to ignore the Iranian attack, terming it a feint. Only later did the CIA concede that bad weather in the area prevented U.S. spy satellites from accurately seeing the attack, an Iraqi diplomat explained. Iraq lost an estimated 10,000 troops in trying, but failing, to dislodge the Iranian forces from Faw.

Since seizing Faw, Iran has threatened to attack nearby Kuwait and Saudi Arabia unless both Gulf countries halt their support of Iraq. U.S. officials believe that Iran is responsible for a series of terrorist bombings in Kuwait, including one attack that severely damaged Kuwait's oil production capacity. At the same time, Iran has used launches and patrol boats, some equipped with guided missiles, to attack 24 ships serving Kuwait since last September.

"While not a belligerent, Kuwait's size and location make it highly vulnerable to intimidation," said Richard Murphy, assistant secretary of state for the Mideast. Murphy's warning that an Iranian attack on U.S. warships could result in a "second front" for the Khomeini government angered White House officials who are attempting to minimize the dangers of coming to Kuwait's aid.

While Kuwait acts as a transshipment point for Iraq, the Saudis have permitted construction of oil pipelines over their territory by Baghdad, ensuring continued production, shipment and revenues for the Iraqi war machine.

At the same time, the Saudis have financed Iraq's purchase of more than 20 French Mirage jets as well as extensive training for Iraqi pilots in France. Saudi officials say that the Kingdom has spent $20 billion in the past four years upgrading the Iraqi Air Force.

With the Saudi support, Iraq in 1985 began steadily increasing a strategic bombing campaign against Iranian oil terminals, forcing a sharp drop in Khomeini government oil shipments at a time when world oil prices were plummeting.

But that campaign was cut back earlier this year when Iran began downing the Iraqi Mirage jets with Hawk anti-aircraft missiles. The Hawk system, bought by the Shah of Iran from the United States, was crippled until Reagan sold Iran $6.5 million worth of spare parts to reactivate the system.

As a result, Iraq has turned to the Soviet Union for electronic hardware to counter Iran's Hawk missile system. "We will be provided with the very latest from the Russians," an Iraqi diplomat said.

Strength For Today

John Ruskin is one of the most attractive figures in the history of British literature. The son of a wealthy merchant, he was brought up amid surroundings of comfort and culture and was given an excellent education.

Early in life he wrote primarily on art and architecture, but during his last 30 years he turned his attention to social and economic problems. He gave away most of his inherited fortune, and for some years before his death lived entirely on book royalties. When he died the British government offered a formal burial in Westminster Abbey among the greatest men in British history, but in accordance with his previously expressed wishes he was buried in his parish churchyard near his humble home.

Ruskin waged a constant warfare against injustice, and did much to raise the moral tone of his age.

U.S. Persian Gulf Role Justified, The Approach Correct

It is impossible to view any military incident involving the loss of American lives without thinking of the agony of Vietnam and the loss of the U.S. Marines in Beirut. It is almost inevitable, therefore, that the attack on the U.S. frigate Stark has raised issues concerning whether the United States should have forces in the Persian Gulf, whether these are the right forces for that part of the world, and whether our military forces are effective.

There are a number of answers to the question of why the United States should be in the gulf — the first being that we are the only Western power still capable of significant power projection into that area.

Despite 15 years of trying to find new oil sources, the gulf has a larger percentage of the world's total energy reserves today than it did in 1973. Even by conservative estimates, it has more than 50 percent of all the world's proven oil reserves.

It is true that America gets only about 800,000 to 1.2 million barrels a day of oil from the gulf, out of its worldwide total of 4 million to 6 million barrels. The West and Third World nations, however, get 10 to 14 million barrels a day from this source. Any major interruption in the flow of oil through the gulf would force the other nations to compete with the United States, leading to major rises in oil prices and probably to a major global recession. Thus the gulf is an absolutely vital American strategic interest.

Equally important, U.S. military forces are in the gulf because an explosive war is taking place between Iraq and Iran that constantly threatens to expand into the southern gulf states. Already battlefield successes by a fanatic and hostile Iran have brought its troops within shooting range of Kuwait. There is now a real threat that Iraq's defenses could at least partially collapse and Iranian troops could suddenly be on the Kuwaiti border.

It is absolutely essential for Kuwait to keep performing as a major transshipment point for Iraq, which has been cut off from the gulf. Thus any Iranian move that would end the transshipment function or cause the Kuwaitis to abandon their support for Iraq might be serious enough to trigger the very Iraqi defeat that the United States fears. Meanwhile, the Saudis have equal reason for fear and caution. They are being asked to fund much of Iraq's defense, and their critical oil facilities are vulnerable to Iranian air and naval attacks and sabotage.

Further, the Soviet Union is actively trying to expand its influence over the Free World's main source of oil imports. It has shown that it is more than willing to replace the U.S. military presence in the region, and the potential leverage it could eventually gain over gulf oil could do immense damage to the West. Without keeping forces in the area, Washington could offer little assurance to Kuwait and Saudi Arabia that they would be protected in the event of an Iranian victory over Iraq. Without such assurances, it is clear who the Kuwaitis and the Saudis would have to turn to.

Thus we cannot wait for a massive Iranian victory or the escalation of the war in the gulf to deploy our forces. If we do, we risk creating a disaster through our own inaction and making that disaster almost impossible to contain.

But are we using the right amount of force? Since 1980, we have had roughly the same limited military presence in the gulf: A small task force of six ships and five E-3A airborne warning and air control aircraft. In spite of constant Iranian rhetoric and threats, this force has been strong enough to force Iran to act with consistent caution. It has served to protect U.S. interests without any prior exchange of fire.

This force has also been small enough to avoid having to overtly take sides between Iraq and Iran and minimize the risk of military encounters with Iran. It has also minimized the inevitable charges by hostile states that the United States is "imperialistic" and that friendly regimes like Kuwait and Saudi Arabia have become American "stooges."

With luck, something close to the present force may still be large enough to convince Iran that the United States will protect tankers going to Kuwait that are flying the U.S. flag. If so, this will balance out similar Soviet support of Kuwait, help Iraq avoid defeat and reassure Kuwait and Saudi Arabia that they can count on U.S. support even if Iraq should lose the strategic city of Basra. Such U.S. efforts should be enough to reassure the oil industry and avoid panic buying and price rises.

But we have also spent the last decade building up contingency capabilities to increase our forces in the region. We have a carrier task force outside the gulf, and the ability to rapidly deploy massive amounts of air power to Oman, Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and/or Turkey.

If we overreact, however, we risk creating the active military confrontation with Iran that we want to avoid. We risk a build-up race with the Soviet Union. If we do not act with caution and let others fire the first shot, we also risk trying to project power before friendly regimes have the clear cause that will allow them to counter the political charges of strong radical anti-U.S. regimes and political movements.

There are excellent political and military reasons to deploy a minimum of force and use it very cautiously. This, however, means we must put Americans in harm's way, and ask them to act with great restraint. It means we cannot rely simply on automatic defenses and cannot shoot until some incident has occurred that gives us clear cause. The strategic situation in the gulf makes us use our military forces as a human trip wire and exposes them to the risk that they may have to die for their country and its vital strategic interests.

When reacting to the fact that men died doing their duty, we need to be extraordinarily careful when criticizing their mission, U.S. military planning or the overall effectiveness of U.S. military forces. We need to be even more cautious about calling for sudden withdrawals, sudden military build-ups and a sudden willingness to escalate our military involvement in the Iran-Iraq War. The fact is that the men on the Stark died for the right mission and as part of the right force, and did so in a climate where the United States acted with proper caution and restraint.

Anthony H. Cordesman, author of "The Iran-Iraq War: 1984-87" to be published in July by Jane's, is an adjunct professor at Georgetown University.

Transplant Surgeons Cite Shortage Of Kidney Donors Among Blacks

By The Associated Press
In 1980, less than 10 percent of kidney donations to the South Eastern Organ Procurement Foundation were from blacks. In that same year, 70 percent of patients on dialysis in the Southeast were black.

These statistics underscore an alarming problem of blacks' reluctance to donate potentially life-saving organs, and in some cases, to accept life-saving new organs from strangers, according to a Washington, D.C., doctor.

"Blacks aren't donating. We're taking, we're not giving back," said Dr. Clive O. Callender, 50, a black transplant surgeon at Howard University Transplant Center in Washington.

"Blacks have more renal failure than any other group because of their high incidence of high-blood pressure," he said. Yet many blacks languish on dialysis rather than undergo a kidney transplant.

Dr. Paul R.G. Cunningham is doing all he can in North Carolina to increase organ donations and transplants among blacks. But he must deal with deep-seated religious beliefs and organ donors' fear of mutilation.

"I've heard ... that people fear that you may be slaughtered, basically, or you may have your life terminated prematurely to give up precious organs," the 37-year-old surgeon said in an interview last week. "There is that fear, but it is not based on fact."

Nonetheless, the suspicion that "something isn't right" or that "they're being taken advantage of"

is real. For those and other reasons, experts say, blacks, more than any other group, are reluctant to donate organs.

Callender says about 97 percent of transplanted organs in the nation come from whites.

Blacks typically mistrust hospitals and government agencies, often seeing them as "white bastions," Cunningham, an assistant professor of surgery at East Carolina University, said.

Hanging in the balance are "precious" organs, he says, and if a potential donor doesn't trust the system, he or she won't easily consider donating them.

Yet blacks who choose transplantation are 10 to 20 percent more likely than whites to experience rejection or other problems, according to Callender. Occasionally there are problems matching antigens — the substances to which the body reacts by producing antibodies — in using organs from a white donor to help a black patient, although the surgeon said most blacks tolerate white organs without complications.

But there are complications other than physical ones.

Education is a culprit, said Jean Harrington, transplant coordinator at the Carolina Organ Procurement Agency in Chapel Hill. She noted that a correlation has been shown between people's level of education and their willingness to donate theirs or loved ones' organs.

Many blacks don't know if organ donation is permitted in their religion, she said; sometimes people aren't sure if they'll need their organs "after they leave this life."

Carolyn Webster, technical director of the N.C. Eye and Human Tissue Bank Inc., agreed, saying there is a misconception over the "rites and rituals" people have been taught.

One concern she's heard is that people who donate their eyes won't be able to see their loved ones when they get to heaven.

Reactions to efforts to persuade blacks to become organ donors have run the gamut from disinterest to hostility, Donovan Phillips, a Greenville mortician and one of two black members of the Carolina Organ Procurement Agency's advisory board, explained.

One doctor, he recalled, asked the family of a woman who had died after a long illness, to donate her eyes. Feeling their loved one had been through enough trauma already, the family told the doctor, "Hell, no."

On another occasion, Phillips visited an elderly black man on the verge of death at a local hospital. When he asked the man if he would consider becoming an organ donor the response was: "I've been here for 72 years in one piece, and I intend to leave the same way I came."

Black people need to be approached very carefully, Phillips suggested, because they are "emotional folk, caring people." Phillips said he didn't know if blacks' reluctance to donate organs was due to superstition, in the way blacks were being asked to donate organs, religion, or just "wanting to remain whole after death."

But, he said, when it comes to removing body parts from someone's mother or father, "there's a lot of anger there."

Transplant surgeon Cunningham, who believes he's the state's only black transplant surgeon, says blacks, especially black physicians, can give other blacks the compassion, understanding and support no one else can.

"There have been several circumstances when the patients show initial reluctance, and that has melted away when there was contact with a black physician," Cunningham said.

Odds May Be Building For Killer Hurricane To Hit Land This Year

By A.J. DICKERSON
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI (AP) — The 1987 Atlantic Hurricane Season begins June 1, the names of yet-unformed storms have been selected, and forecasters say the odds may be building for a killer whirlwind to hit land.

Insurance officials already are fearful about a killer storm like the 1928 hurricane that killed 1,836 people after slamming into Palm Beach, or Hurricane Camille, which left 256 dead after hitting Mississippi and Louisiana in 1969.

"We've been lucky. It's just amazing how long we've gone without any major damage," said Gil Clark, senior forecaster at the National Hurricane Center.

More storms hit land in 1985 than any year since 1916, but last year was relatively quiet. Normally, of 100 foul-weather systems, 10 develop into named storms — that is, get winds of more than 39 mph. In 1986, only six developed. Four were hurricanes, two of which were deadly.

Hurricane Bonnie in the Gulf of Mexico blew ashore last June in Texas near the Louisiana border, killing three. Hurricane Charley contributed to five deaths in August. Tropical Storm Andrew was blamed for a drowning.

There is no prediction of how severe this year's six-month season might be. "We can't do that," Clark said. "There's no way to tell."

But he said that if a killer storm hits, people will regret tempting nature with beachfront homes on barrier islands.

"If and when it does — and it does have to happen ... Key Biscayne and Miami Beach would go underwater," Clark said. "The water can move concrete, anything. That's why we try to give lots of early warning."

Insurance companies worry about beach buildings, too, and forecasters field lots of questions from them during the off-season. Even Lloyd's of London representatives have visited several times during recent months.

"They're concerned about big buildings right on the beach, what damage might occur, what building codes do they need," Clark said.

Last year, insurers paid $21 million for damage from Bonnie and $7 million for Charley, said Bill Davis, of Atlanta's Insurance Information Institute. But 1985 storms, especially Elena and Gloria, wrought more than $4 billion in damages and were blamed for 30 deaths, according to hurricane center data.

Unlike 1985, fast-moving streams of wind blowing west to east literally sheered off the tops of storms as they developed last year.

"There's still a strong shear. You don't see any indication it's going to let up," Clark said. "But this time of year, it's too early to tell."

In the summer, trade winds blowing east get into the upper atmosphere, creating thunderstorms, which give off heat and drop air pressure as they develop.

These low-pressure pockets can become a storm, and depending on heat, moisture and winds around them, can become a hurricane. The deadliest storms are usually the "Cape Verde" hurricanes, spawned off the African coast in August and September, Clark said.

Once formed, rivers of air guide a hurricane's path. Since hurricanes go whichever way the wind blows, predicting landfall is not exact, Clark said.

Forecasters will have more help tracking hurricanes this season because of a second weather satellite, Clark said. The satellite launched this winter will follow storms from when they first form over Africa until they die, he said.

Last year, forecasters had only one such satellite.

Names For The Year

WASHINGTON (AP) — People living along the Atlantic and Gulf coasts of the United States would rather not hear from Arlene this year.

Adrian is equally unwelcome near the Pacific.

That's because Arlene will be the name of this year's first East Coast hurricane, and Adrian, the first one on the West Coast, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration announced.

The names of men and women alternate on the two lists, which are established by international agreement and used to help differentiate the storms.

Hurricanes are major tropical storms, with sustained wind speeds of 74 miles per hour or more. They are sometimes called typhoons in the Pacific.

Here are the storm names for this year:

East Coast: Arlene, Bret, Cindy, Dennis, Emily, Floyd, Gert, Harvey, Irene, Jose, Katrina, Lenny, Maria, Nate, Ophelia, Philippe, Rita, Stan, Tammy, Vince and Wilma.

Alligator Snack Too Much

WILMINGTON (AP) — The alligator that settled on Bald Head Island recently knew a good thing when he found it.

The big reptile didn't have to deal with traffic on the exclusive island — except an occasional golf cart — and spent most of its time sunning in a lagoon.

But when the alligator chomped a pet spaniel that happened to swim by, it bit off more than it could chew.

Now the alligator is being evicted.

Charlie Wilson, an island security guard, said state Wildlife Commission officers have been called in to trap the creature and move him. Wilson said there are many small alligators on the Brunswick County island, but the one that ate the spaniel is eight to 10 feet long.

He said wildlife officials will try to snare the alligator and move him where he won't snack on people's pooches.

Clean Care Chat

INSTALLATION MAGICIANS

Unfortunately, most consumers spend their time choosing color, pattern and texture; and proper installation is never given a second thought. Here are several important "second thoughts":

1. "Ripples, buckles and bulges developed a few months after installation."
2. "My carpet is raveling or losing tufts at the seams."
3. "The edge of my carpet along the baseboard has gotten grey and dingy over the years."
4. "The seams separated the first time my carpet was cleaned."

Two possibilities exist: first, installers occasionally get in a hurry and may move their seaming irons too rapidly across their hot-melt seaming tape. Inadequate adhesion between the tape and the carpet back results. The second involves shrinkage-sensitive woven constructions. Woven carpet is usually back-coated with a glue compound which will not bond to hot-melt seaming adhesives. The slower, more expensive, latex-seaming technique must be used. If done, then when shrinkage tension is produced by thorough cleaning, seam separation is unlikely.

Near Miss

LINTHICUM, Md. (AP) — There was a near miss involving a passenger jetliner and a small plane at Baltimore-Washington International Airport Sunday morning, according to the Federal Aviation Administration.

The incident occurred at about 11:30 a.m. as a Piedmont Airlines 737 jetliner was coming in for a landing at the airport, said Stephen Hayes, an FAA spokesman in Washington. A small, unidentified single engine plane allegedly crossed the path of the jetliner as the plane was approaching the runway, Hayes said.

The FAA is continuing its investigation into the incident, he said. Piedmont flight 484, which was coming in from Fayetteville, N.C., had 61 passengers on board and a crew of seven, Piedmont officials said.

Design Contest

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Thanks in part to some hard-working students from North Carolina, the United States will compete for the first time in 12 years at the prestigious Prague Quadrennial of Scenic and Costume Design.

The competition, which is held every four years, features the works of the top designers from more than 30 countries. It will be held June 8-28 in the Czechoslovakian capital.

The American entry, considered a contender for the national exhibit award, was built over a six-week period by student carpenters and stage managers from the School of Design and Production at the N.C. School of the Arts in Winston-Salem.

The U.S. exhibit, "Work in Process," illustrates the creative processes that occur in the studio. The exhibit, which features the work of some 300 American designers, was designed by John Lee Beatty, John Conklin, Carrie Robbins, Douglas Schmidt and Jennifer Tipton.

New Machines

GREENSBORO (AP) — The Guilford County Board of Elections, which was criticized for voting irregularities after a close congressional race last November, wants to buy new voting machines that would provide almost instant election results.

Richard Conner, elections board chairman, told the Guilford County Board of Commissioners that elections officials were considering voting machines capable of keeping constant count during even the heaviest of voter turnouts.

The machines would cost the county $480,000. Elections officials also are asking the commissioners for 200 new voting booths at a cost of $60,000.

The state Board of Elections earlier this year faulted the county board's handling of the November election. In particular, the criticism was aimed at irregularities uncovered after a loud protest by Democrat Robin Britt, who lost the 6th District congressional election to incumbent Republican Howard Coble.

Plane Crash

SPARTA, N.C. (AP) — A small single-engine plane crashed Saturday about three miles south of Sparta in Allegheny County, but authorities said no one was seriously injured in the accident.

According to witnesses, the pilot was attempting to make an emergency landing on a small dirt road when the plane overturned, coming to rest near a telephone pole.

The pilot, Homer Dee Skelton of Memphis, Tenn., sustained minor cuts and bruises and his wife, a passenger, sustained minor injuries, according to the state Highway Patrol. Both were transported to Allegheny Memorial Hospital in Sparta for treatment.

Federal Aviation Administration investigators are expected to arrive on the scene Sunday, authorities said.

Dedication

BOONE, N.C. (AP) — Samaritans Purse and World Medical Mission, two companion mission organizations based in Boone, dedicated their new interanational headquarters here Saturday, a spokesman for the two missions said.

Evangelists Billy Graham and his son, Franklin Graham, were on hand for the ceremony.

The new 15,000 square foot building will enable the groups to be more effective in helping hurting people, said Franklin Graham, president of the organizations.

"The thing I like about Samaritans Purse is that they use physical help to reach people for Christ," Franklin Graham said. "They say we're doing this because we love Christ. This is the way Christian charity ought to be."

Critic

GREENSBORO (AP) — Growing criticism of public education and teachers is in danger of obstructing educational reform, the director of a teacher improvement drive warned.

"Education bashing has nearly become a new art form," said Donald J. Stedman, director of the state-mandated University of North Carolina Task Force on Teacher Preparation.

"I refer to the widespread practice of ridicule, sarcasm and prejudicial statements — in schools and universities alike and outside the educational establishment — that cast unfavorable comment on the discipline of education, on teacher educators, on education majors, on schools, teachers and school leadership and on the prospects for successful improvement of the public education scene."

Stedman, speaking at an educational reform conference, said such "attitudinal barriers... constitute the most difficult obstacles to productive change."

Lobbyists

RALEIGH (AP) — An effort by the General Assembly to strengthen its ethics rules and regulate lobbying more closely has been dropped due to an apparent lack of interest.

After examining the issue for a year, the Legislative Ethics and Lobbying Committee in 1986 recommended a series of reforms, including a $50 limit on the value of gifts and services legislators could accept from lobbyists. But an effort last June to get the House to adopt the reforms failed, and the measure was shipped back to committee, where it quietly died.

The co-chairmen of the legislative study committee, Sen. Marshall A. Rauch, D-Gaston, and Rep. Annie B. Kennedy, D-Forsyth, decided not to reintroduce the legislation this year.

North Carolina's first Baptist Conference was organized in Greenville in 1830.

Towns Crack Down On Cruising

GREENSBORO (AP) — The wheels of tradition are about to grind to a halt in Salisbury as residents there are trying to preserve their right to cruise the city streets.

Since April 20, cruising has been banned in Salisbury, and Mount Airy could be the next to lose the right to cruise.

Under Salisbury's new "anti-cruising" ordinance, any car or truck passing a downtown checkpoint three or more times within any two-hour period between 6 p.m. and 4 a.m. will get a traffic ticket and a $25 fine. Get

"It used to be a way to come and meet people, but lately it has turned into something different," Conner said.

Numerous complaints from citizens and merchants moved the City Council to pass the cruising ban.

Flo Schneider, assistant for development with the North Carolina Civil Liberties Union, said it was unclear whether Salisbury officials have the right to ban cruising.

"It is unfortunate that the city wants to control the people in such a matter," she said. "I would urge the caught again within seven days and the fine is $50.

"As citizens of the United States, I think that we have a constitutional right to travel on any street day or night," said James Lloyd of Salisbury, who describes himself as a "46-year-old cruiser with a 21-year-old son who is a cruiser."

Lt. D.A. Conner of the Salisbury Police Department acknowledged that cruising had been a traditional downtown activity in the city of 22,515 people. Lately, the fun had been marred by public urination and littering.

people to put pressure on the city and let them know they don't like it."

Opponents of the ban don't intend to surrender.

"We are mad down here, and we plan on really rocking the boat," Lloyd said.

A repeat of the Salisbury scene is about to take place in Mount Airy. Chief Leo Shores of the Mount Airy City Police said city commissioners should approve a cruising ban within about two weeks.

"Most of the people who cruised here were from out of town," Shores said. "The problem was getting so bad that if people came from out of town to our funeral home on a weekend night, they were already grief-stricken before getting to the funeral home to view the remains."

Tammy Bakker Says She And Jim 'May Come Home' Again To PTL

By WILLIAM STRACENER
Associated Press Writer

FORT MILL, S.C. (AP) — Tammy Faye Bakker says she and her husband Jim may "come home" to the PTL ministry one day if that's what their followers want.

The prediction was in a letter dated May 2, one day after Bakker told reporters outside his home in Palm Springs, Calif., that he and his wife would not fight to regain control of the cable television ministry he turned over to the Rev. Jerry Falwell.

"Maybe someday, if the people insist and want us, we will come back home," Mrs. Bakker said in a letter to Joanne Thompson, who operates a religious television station in Greenville.

Mrs. Thompson read the letter Saturday to a small group of reporters outside the Bakkers' former lakefront home at nearby Tega Cay.

In the letter, Mrs. Bakker also accused Falwell of betraying her and her husband by taking over the PTL ministry for himself.

"He was so smooth, so kind, and I guess we were so gullible," Mrs. Bakker wrote.

Falwell, who took over the ministry in March after Bakker resigned amid disclosure of a 1980 tryst with Jessica Hahn, denied the allegations.

He said Friday the ministry had raised $3.5 million toward its goal of $10 million by May 31 and $25 million in 90 days to pay its debts.

An auction held at PTL's Heritage USA on Saturday raised about $200,000, including $27,000 for a restored 1927 Franklin car, $4,500 for an air-conditioned dog house and $2,900 for a 6-foot copper and brass giraffe that stood in Bakker's office.

Some of the items came from the executive offices and penthouse suite used by the Bakkers. Auction officials said about 900 people bought $1 tickets for the bidding.

A white French Provincial desk that was in Mrs. Bakker's office brought $625.

"It's just the fact that it was her desk and had something to do with the Bakkers," said purchaser Richard Manlove, 45, of Seaford, Del.

In another matter, Falwell said he will purge the PTL network of preachers who promote a "prosperity theology" that celebrates luxuries and instant gratification.

"I think this prosperity theology, what some call 'health and wealth' theology, is the most damnable heresy being preached in the world today," Falwell, an independent Baptist fundamentalist, said in an interview published Sunday in The Charlotte Observer.

"The philosophy that all Christians who are living in the perfect will of God are going to be physically healthy and financially wealthy is not only heresy and unbiblical, it is very frustrating and debilitating to millions of believing Christians," he told the newspaper.

"There are millions of poor people in this country who sincerely love God," he said. "There are millions of sick people in hospitals and convalescent homes who sincerely love God. When they hear these health-and-wealth preachers and then look at themselves, they say, 'God must be angry with me.'"

"We also are going to look very carefully at the personal lifestyle and quality of Christian testimony of persons who appear as guests on the PTL Club show. In the past several years, the conduct of some persons appearing on the show — and I'm not talking about the Bakkers — was atrocious."

Falwell wouldn't name those who are no longer welcome on the show. He said the problem is not church preference, but Christian moral standards.

Falwell also is taking his housecleaning to the water park at Heritage USA, where he says ultra-skimpy swimsuits will be banned.

"A dress code is coming" at the water park, said Falwell, who founded the Moral Majority and the 22,000-member Thomas Road Baptist Church in Lynchburg, Va. "It is not going to be prudish, but it is going to be reasonable and modest."

Meanwhile, Bakker has been offered $100,000 a year and Mrs. Bakker has been offered $75,000 a year to host a Christian television show that would be sent by satellite to cable

Golf Attack

SOUTHERN PINES, N.C. (AP) — The Southern Pines Police Department was called to the Pine Needle Country Club golf course Thursday morning when two women golfers said they were attacked on the 18th tee.

Mitch Kahills of Glen Mills, Pa., and Ann DeCasaris of Latrobe, Pa., were playing in the golf school when they were chased by two men who asked them what time it was, and then pulled a knife, said Police Chief David Ford.

Ford said the knife was he to the throat of Mrs. Kahills by one man while the second man searched their golf bags.

Regrouping Tornado Survivors Bury Their Dead

By JODY COX
Associated Press Writer
SARAGOSA, Texas (AP) — The homeless survivors of a tornado that destroyed this community prepared to bury their 29 dead and seek help for themselves as they wondered how to return to a town that no longer exists.

"People who established this town were pioneers ... the people of Saragosa are pioneers again," said Rep. Ron Coleman, D-El Paso, who was among the 500 people attending an outdoor Mass on Sunday in memory of those killed.

More than 120 people were injured, and six of those killed were children. About half the deaths occurred at a Head Start preschool graduation.

The first funeral for the victims was scheduled this morning, for a 25-year-old woman and her son, who would have been a year old on Sunday. Two mass funerals are planned for Tuesday.

Friday's tornado reduced this 76-year-old farming community, whose 350 residents were mostly poor Mexican-Americans, to rubble.

"I really don't expect it will be rebuilt. I don't think they can afford it," said the Rev. Ralph Barranger, who serves Christ the King Church. Some said they would move away.

"I don't like this place anymore. Too much has died," said Frank Ramirez, who escaped serious injury when the tornado leveled his house.

As front-end loaders and dump trucks hauled away splintered houses, crumpled cars and cracked adobe, volunteers in nearby

Balmorhea were being trained to interview the survivors in preparation for today's opening of a disaster relief center.

"We'll be here as long as it takes to meet people's needs," said Dan Wagener, director of the American Red Cross effort in Balmorhea.

Offers of aid have been received from as far away as Canada. Bishop Raymond Pena said he has asked all 76 churches in his El Paso diocese to make a special appeal for help.

Wagener said that although response has been good, the needs of victims stretched beyond food.

"You can't measure a disaster by the number of houses that are destroyed. You have to look at how it affects the community," he said.

At the site of what used to be Our Lady of Guadalupe Church, about 500 people gathered Sunday, some weeping, to hear a Mass by Pena.

"While our hearts are heavy, God is still with us," he said, standing on a flat-bed truck.

"Non-believers now will question our faith in God. But for us, the words that Jesus speaks to us in the gospel today, 'I will not abandon you,' is a sign that God hears our prayers."

On either side of the bishop stood statues of Jesus and Joseph that somehow survived with only slight damage.

"The fact that the statue of the Lord remained intact was of great comfort to the people," Pena said. "The first thing they said to me was, 'Look, our altar is still there, the statues are still there.' I looked at the statues' survival as a sign of God's love."

Sunday morning, 36 hours after the tornado hit, 12-year-old Ramiro Ramirez found his pet chihuahua under debris in his house, alive and uninjured, although shaking.

The boy and his father were home when the tornado struck but were not badly hurt.

Most of the more than 120 injured had been treated and released from hospitals by Saturday afternoon. A few were hospitalized in serious condition.

The tornado leveled a community hall where about 100 people had gathered for a graduation ceremony for preschool children in a Head Start program.

Among those killed there were Elsa Lara Herrera, and her son, Jonathan. About 250 mourners said a rosary Sunday, which would have been Jonathan's first birthday, for them in Pecos. They were at the ceremonies with Mrs. Herrera's husband, Joey Herrera Jr., a Pecos School Board trustee and guest at the graduation who survived.

Their funeral was scheduled for this morning in Pecos.

Also Sunday, about 75 people attended a memorial service in Balmorhea, where some victims had lived.

"It says in the Bible the poor shall confound the rich, the wise. I think this is a very good example of God's work in the world," said Barranger, whose ministry includes Balmorhea.

"Maybe this disaster is being used by God to teach the rich, to teach the wise, what true Christian life is."

One Year Later, Hands Across America Goes Into Low Profile

By DENNIS McDOUGAL
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service
LOS ANGELES — What a difference a year makes.

Today, one year after Hands Across America, the only official event commemorating the linking of some 5.6 million Americans across the country last Memorial Day was the dedication of a monument at the site of the Queen Mary in nearby Long Beach.

The Hands line ran from New York to the luxury liner-turned-amusement park.

"There are a lot of photos ... something like a collage," said Dave DePinto, public affairs spokesman for Coca-Cola, which underwrote the $10,000 cost of the Queen Mary exhibit. "About 1.5 million people every year will pass through it."

He described the monument as an 8- by 10-foot back-lit wall where about 60 photos shot on Hands Across America day will be on display. In front of the wall will be a separate relief map of the United States depicting the route of the Hands line.

"It's almost like a photo opportunity for the family. They can stand next to it and have their picture taken," DePinto said. "Also, we'll put a little box there with envelopes for contributions."

In the last six months, the pop charity has disbursed almost all of the $33.9 million that it raised with its 15-minute transcontinental singalong last May 25. After expenses, the organization had $15 million to give away in grants.

The sponsoring USA for Africa Foundation has about $3 million in Hands grants left to award and expects to give all of it away to projects aiding the homeless and hungry by the end of September. About 500 applications for the last $3 million have been winnowed to 75 finalists, said foundation communications director Joyce Deep.

As the Hands staff has pored over these final proposals, the foundation has evolved into a low-profile, down-scale operation. The public image and private reality of USA for Africa is subdued. Outside of the irregular grants announcements and the unveiling of the Hands monument, there are no major public events in the immediate future, said foundation president Ken Kragen.

Gone are celebrity-studded press conferences and other media events. Gone are the flood of Coca-Cola sponsored TV, radio and magazine commercials that urged Americans to stand in the line. Gone, too, is most of the Hands Across America staff which, at its height, numbered more than 450 full-time and dozens more part-time and temporary employees.

But the foundation has no intention of putting itself out of business. In a board meeting Tuesday, the 12 directors talked about future fund-raising plans. Because foreign royalties on sales of "We Are the World" continue to come in from overseas ("About $3 million so far this year," Kragen said), generating immediate income is not a problem.

But the man who came up with the idea in the first place refuses to let the Hands legacy become just a photo opportunity at the stern of the Queen Mary.

"The really legitimate question to ask is whether or not any of this has done any good," Kragen said last week. "That's what this is really all about. Not whether our offices ... were plush."

Because USA for Africa has been battling the public's perception of the Los Angeles-based organization as glitzy and glamorous almost from its inception, scant media attention has been paid to the $50 million in both African and U.S. relief grants that his foundation has delivered, Kragen said.

Along with everything else that has plagued the public image, Kragen pointed out, the offices on two floors of an expensive Los Angeles high-rise have also vanished. These days, a crew of 27 full-time employees works out of 12th-floor offices in a less expensive area of Los Angeles. But Kragen and his staff emphasize, the old offices were comfortable, but never plush.

Since moving into the new offices in March, employees have made a point of trying to ignore such criticisms. They have been more involved in meeting a self-imposed May 25 deadline for giving away $12 million of the $15 million netted by Hands Across America.

The foundation is continuing to solicit donations. The music video-documentary of "Hands Across America" went on sale May 13 in record stores for $14.95. A portion of that price will go to the foundation and each videocassette contains a postage-paid "Keep the spirit alive!" envelope for mail-in contributions.

The second edition of a quarterly eight-page newspaper, "USA for Africa-Hands Across America Update," was mailed out to 75,000 businesses and individuals last week. In addition to reports on how several million dollars in foundation funds are being spent on both African and American relief projects, the newspaper contains clip-out coupons asking for donations ranging from $10 to $100.

But lately the emphasis has been on spending rather than raising money, Kragen said. Last summer, executive director Martin Rogol created a complicated, multitiered grant review process that involved months of volunteer effort from thousands of relief professionals.

A national 37-member panel of relief experts drafted grant guidelines that were distributed to organizations in each state. Committees formed at the state level authored proposals on how to spend the money and the proposals were then reviewed by the foundation staff and a second national organization of experts known as the Program Review Board. Proposals were often sent back two and three times to the state committees to be revised but, ultimately, they went to the foundation board of directors for final approval.

The grueling process was designed to maximize equitable distribution of the money to as many of the most-needy organizations, foundation officials say.

Vietnam Veteran Proposes Trade For American MIAs

By STEPHEN W. BELL
Associated Press Writer
WELLSVILLE, N.Y. (AP) — Mission Impossible: Persuade Vietnam to let U.S. veterans rebuild the country in return for American MIAs.

The idea, created by a man with a "Why me?" wonderment at surviving the Vietnam War and loyalty for fellow Americans who may be captive, has been embraced by a group of New York veterans.

The Allegany County Vietnam Veterans wrote to Vietnamese officials on March 26, and Kevin E. Collins' proposal is making rounds at Vietnam veterans' gatherings this Memorial Day.

A spokesman for Vietnam's ambassador at the United Nations, Bui Xuan Nhat, confirmed receipt of the proposal and said it was being considered by the government in Hanoi.

"We appreciate any sympathy of the American people toward the Vietnamese people," said press attache Bhan Dhanh. "We have many difficulties to be overcome. We should do these ourselves. But the Vietnamese people would like all American people to understand that we want to resolve all situations now between the two countries."

Michael Leaveck, a spokesman for the Vietnam Veterans of America, praised the project but said he does not expect it to go far.

Supporters say the proposal they call Project Recovery is simple and revolutionary. They are proposing a business deal to the Communist leaders of a country with which the United States does not have diplomatic relations: You help us, we'll help you.

"What we really need is to get the support of the American people, so we can show the Vietnamese that we have that support, that we're not just a bunch of hillbillies from a county of 53,000 jousting at windmills," said project director Collins, 41, a former helicopter gunner.

The group will seek negotiations with Vietnamese representatives after a national petition drive concludes Sept. 30.

Army Bugler Is Retiring From Long Funeral Duty

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — After playing taps for 10,354 military funerals, Army Staff Sgt. Duane Finch is laying down his horn forever. The daily practice and the dedication, he says, "take so much out of you."

"I've quit playing completely," said the 39-year-old career bandman and bugler. "I don't conceive of ever playing taps again, or even the horn again."

The saddest of all those thousands of funerals, Finch said, were the ones "when nobody (was) there. Just the coffin. I hate doing those."

Finch is on final leave from Fort Bliss while awaiting his July 1 retirement.

His parents gave him a trumpet for high school graduation and he used it during his entire 20-year Army career.

The trumpet has been his "bugle" for playing taps at all those funerals, conducted in all kinds of weather.

"You have to play it in any kind of temperature," he said. "I had to go up to Fairbanks, Alaska, once to play and it was 38 below, with a wind-chill factor of 75 below."

"I played from a staff car. Just rolled the window down and played from about 75 feet away," Finch said, recalling that he had no choice.

"I checked out my horn before the funeral and I found the spit valve froze up in seconds," he said.

His most unusual service, he said, was when he had to play for two funerals at once. That was at Fort Bliss, where he has been with the 62nd U.S. Army Band for most of the past 12 years.

"At Fort Bliss National Cemetery, they schedule funerals 30 minutes apart," he said. "On that day, the one on the east side was 15 minutes late, the one on the west side 15 minutes early."

"They pulled the caskets out at the same time," said Finch, whose central location was between both services. "It was very quiet. There was no wind at all. I was watching both ways and saw the salutes go to both firing squads at about the same time.

"They fired ... pop, pop, pow, pop. And when both firing squads finished, I faced between them and started playing as loudly as I could," he said.

"And when I was finished, the lieutenants in charge of both funerals came over and thanked me."

Finch, who is studying for a degree in business retail management at El Paso Community College, said his most memorable services were a memorial service in Korea for General of the Army Omar Bradley in 1981 and a funeral earlier this year at Fort Bliss for the next-to-the-last survivor of the Spanish-American War.

Couple Marries On Sunday

WINTERVILLE — Sherri Renee Waters of Winterville and Gregory James Churchill of Greenville were married Sunday in services in the Winterville Free Will Baptist Church. The Rev. Bobby Parker and the Rev. Ed Taylor officiated at the double ring ceremony at 3 p.m.

The parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. Monroe Waters of Winterville. The bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Billy R. Churchill of Greenville.

MRS. CHURCHILL

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a floor length gown with a chapel length train of traditional bridal satin and re-embroidered alencon lace. The gown's fitted bodice featured a scoop neckline outlined with scalloped alencon motifs, leg o' mutton sleeves, and torso waist. Alencon lace motifs encrusted with seed pearls applied the bodice and sleeves. The skirt and train were bordered along the hemline with scalloped lace. The bride chose a layered waltz length veil of illusion with a hand rolled edge flowing from a wreath of silk flowers tied with pearls. Her bouquet included roses, gardenias, pink sweetheart roses, lilies, baby's breath, ivy and ivory streamers.

Michelle Waters of Winterville, sister of the bride, served as maid of honor and wore an apela taffeta and lace floor length gown of azalea. The lace bodice featured an open neckline, petal sleeves and torso waist encircled with crushed taffeta accented with a bow. She carried a nosegay of azalea roses, pink sweetheart roses, off-white lilies, shades of pink carnations and azalea, pink and off-white streamers.

Dressed identical, the bridesmaids were Lori Anne Waters, sister of the bride, and De Anne Bowen, both of Winterville; and Sandra McCoy and Paula Buck, both of Greenville.

The flower girl was Cheryl Buck of Winterville, cousin of the bride. She wore a long gown of candlelight taffeta with a close fitting lace bodice featuring an open neckline trimmed in lace, capped sleeves, and bow. She carried a basket adorned with gardenias, lilies, azaleas, and baby's breath accented with a bow.

The father of the bridegroom served as best man. Ushers were Gary Churchill, brother of the bridegroom, Ishan Sehgal, Dan Woodard, and Jim Hamilton, all of Raleigh.

The mother of the bride wore a teal green floor length gown with a lace bodice. The bridegroom's mother wore a formal length gown of rose pleated chiffon.

Music for the ceremony was provided by organist Gladys Corbett and pianist Debby Gray. Mrs. Gray and Erwin Hines sang "All in the Name of Jesus" and "Household of Faith." "The Wedding Prayer" was sung by Wayne Vincent.

The wedding was directed by LaRue Hill, great-aunt of the bride.

Several showers were given in honor of the couple by friends before the wedding. Brenda Buck and Michelle Waters held a bridal dinner, and a rehearsal dinner was given by the bridegroom's parents at the Colonial Inn in Farmville.

After the wedding, a reception was held in the church fellowship hall with Susan Conner of Grifton presiding at the registry. Mr. and Mrs. Karl McGlawhorn greeted the guests.

The couple will live in Winterville after a wedding trip to Kiawah Island and Charleston, S.C.

The bride, a graduate of D.H. Conley and recipient of a degree from Pitt Community College, is presently employed by Stuarts. An employee of River and Associates, Inc., the bridegroom is a graduate of J.H. Rose High School and N.C. State University.

Weddings Are Family Affair

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to the letter from "The Rev. Farrell" who objected to babies crying in church during the wedding ceremony.

Lighten up, padre! The "sacred ceremony" has a 50-50 chance of ending in divorce anyway. My husband and I have three small screamers of our own, and I recall that there were many little ones crying at our wedding — and some big ones, too, including the bride, who sobbed right along with them.

My point, Abby: Marriage is a family affair. Would the good reverend disallow wheelchairs, arthritics with canes, obese bridesmaids or pimply-face ushers if he thought the aesthetic perfection of the sacred ritual was in danger of being marred?

If this so-called man of God feels that crying babies are "an invasion of the sacred ceremony," he is denying those small family members (and their parents) the joy of sharing in this beautiful tradition as a family. Sign me ... ONE OF THE FLOCK

DEAR ONE: Ewe must be kidding. Wheelchairs, obese bridesmaids or pimply-face ushers would in no way detract from the aesthetic perfection of the marriage ceremony, but any shepherd with half a brain would carry the bleating lamb out the door after the first bleat.

DEAR ABBY: We heah in Na Hampsha is very disappointed in youwa reply to "Appalled in Sacramento" (her son's school teacha had written across his essay, "Is this original? What does this got to do with insects taking over?") "Appalled" wanted to correct the teacher's grammar and have her son return it to the teacher. You rejected that idea.

We's very concerned that ouwa kids learn correct grammah.

Too many folks these days have a tough time communicatin' things right. We agree that the child should not hafta return the essay to the teacha, but it definitely ain't right for teachas of the English language to make such a big goof and let it go uncorrected.

Please reconsidera your advice to skip it. — PRO-GRAMMAR, KEENE, N.H.

P.S. Please excuse ouwa careless erras.

DEAR PRO: I gotcher message. You and about 500 other readers objected to my advice to "skip it."

Take Two: The student's mother should take it up with the teacher personally instead of asking her son to return the essay with her corrections of the teacher's grammar. And if she finds that the teacher's "error" was an accurate indication of her English grammar skills, it should be called to the attention of the school principal. Teachers cannot teach what they do not know.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 35-year-old woman who has worked at the same desk for 12 years. I am not even what you would call a secretary; I control billing and inventory for a company.

I dread the month of April, and it's not because of the tax deadline. It's because of National Secretaries Week.

The owner of this company thinks he's God's gift to women. Because I am divorced, he assumes that I am man hungry. (I'm not.) I once needed a day off to take care of some personal business, so he let me off. The following week he told me I could "repay" him for the day of my meeting him at his beach house while his wife was out of town. Frankly, I wouldn't touch this man with a 10-foot pole, so I just told him I would have to ask my "boyfriend." Well, that blew out his candle in a hurry.

I love my job. The money is great, but this boss is the bad part of the job.

Thank God for my imaginary boyfriend. — NO NAME IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR NO NAME: Should you ever misplace your 10-foot pole, be aware that your boss is guilty of sexual harassment.

DEAR ABBY: I am an ordinary guy and a corporate accountant. A major part of my job is hearing complaints from employees who perceive that errors were made in the area of accounting.

More and more, as I listen to these complainers, I fantasize smashing them with my fists, knocking them to the ground and stomping them to death!

Of course I would never do such a thing in real life, but I enjoy these daydreams so much, I'm becoming concerned about my mental health.

Am I in trouble? — CONCERNED IN HOUSTON

DEAR CONCERNED: Not necessarily. "Fantasizing" acts as a safety valve, allowing us to blow off the steam of suppressed desires without actually acting out anti-social behavior for which we would become accountable.

However, if you are genuinely concerned about "enjoying" these violent fantasies too much, I think you should consult a mental health professional — if only to put your mind at ease.

Romania Thaws

was spick-and-span for Gorbachev's visit, as soldiers and civilians worked round the clock Sunday to paint fences, clean shop windows, sweep streets and pave over subway construction.

Gorbachev signaled on his last East bloc visit to Czechoslovakia in April that he is not forcing his allies to copy his reforms, and any strong disagreement with Ceausescu is not expected to surface in the open during his three-day stay.

However, the style of the 56-year-old Kremlin leader differs markedly from that of Ceausescu, who has held power since 1964 and is the object of public adulation in his country.

Romanians' contact with foreigners is severely limited, making it difficult to assess what Romanians expect from the visit of a man whose reforms have excited many in Eastern Europe.

Soviet Ambassador Yevgeny Tyazhelnikov said Saturday his embassy has received "a lot of letters" from Romanians to Gorbachev.

Clusters of Romanians have topped in recent months outside the downtown offices of the Soviet airline Aeroflot, reading Romanian texts of Gorbachev speeches not printed in full in their own media.

Some Romanians will have a chance to watch Gorbachev in action when he visits a Bucharest factory Tuesday and addresses a Romanian-Soviet friendship rally later that day.

It is not clear whether Romanian television — which usually operates only for two hours each evening on weekdays — will broadcast Gorbachev's activities in full.

But a senior diplomat who spoke on condition of anonymity said many Romanians "are eager to have these new winds from the Kremlin blow here."

The diplomat said that while Gorbachev still faces some resistance to his changes in the Soviet Union, he is unlikely to push Ceausescu into rapid change.

Soviet academician Yevgeny Primakov told reporters in Bucharest on Saturday that the Kremlin is not imposing change on any of its allies. "All the socialist countries are developing as they think best," he said.

In Romania, this has traditionally meant independence from the Kremlin in foreign policy. Ceausescu drew Western praise, for example, when he opposed the 1968 Warsaw Pact invasion crushing reform in Czechoslovakia.

Disagreements between the Kremlin and Romania now focus on domestic policy and the economy, despite growing trade ties.

"You cannot speak about the reform of socialism through the so-called development of small private property," Ceausescu said May 5. "Capitalist property, small or large, is capitalist property."

Romanian officials have stressed they adopted joint ventures with the West and economic self-management years ahead of the Kremlin. But Romanian economic planning remains highly centralized and the role of the Communist Party is supreme.

Stark

when missiles penetrated and exploded in their sleeping area."

A U.S. Navy source has said the first Iraqi missile punched a hole in the Stark but failed to detonate. The second missile exploded and sparked an inferno, trapping sailors asleep in their bunks.

Navy sources said today that Navy personnel have begun minor repairs on the ship, but that a decision has yet to be made on whether the frigate will be brought to Bahrain's Asry shipbuilding yard for major repairs.

The bodies of 35 sailors killed aboard the Stark will be flown to the United States on Tuesday from West Germany, where they were taken after the attack. Two other sailors are missing and presumed dead.

During their 6½-year-old war, Iran and Iraq have attacked hundreds of commercial vessels in an effort to choke each other's economies. But the central sector of the gulf, where the Stark was hit, was outside the usual hunting ground of Iraqi fighter-bombers.

Sasser said the attack probably would have been less tragic if the Stark had taken evasive action, fired chaff to distract the missiles or activated its anti-missile system.

"But let's not prejudice the situation," he said. "It's not something to make a snap judgment on."

He met aboard the Stark with its commanding officer, Capt. Glenn Brindel, and Adm. Grant Sharp, who heads the Navy probe.

Two other senators, John Glenn, D-Ohio, and John Warner, R-Va., are expected to fly to the area this week.

Sasser said the United States possibly could work with Britain and France to develop a gulf task force to protect shipping, but he said the Soviet Union should not be included. All four countries have warships patrolling the gulf to protect commercial vessels flying their flags.

Sasser left Bahrain today for Kuwait, where he is scheduled to discuss a plan to register up to 11 of Kuwait's state-owned tankers under the American flag to protect them from Iranian attacks.

On Sunday, the Iranian ambassador to the United Nations, Said Rajaie-Khorassani, ridiculed the plan.

"If my country has the intention of attacking a Kuwaiti tanker, it will continue with that policy, regardless of whose flag it is carrying," he said on ABC-TV's "This Week With David Brinkley."

GM Lawsuit

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — A jury has awarded a woman $403,000 in back pay and damages in a sex discrimination lawsuit against General Motors Corp.

The jury found that the world's largest automaker discriminated against Beverly Pittman when she was laid off from her job as a production supervisor in July 1981 from the Pontiac Motor Division assembly plant in Pontiac.

Ms. Pittman, 44, was idled for 22 months before returning to GM as a security guard. She was reinstated to her supervisor's job in March 1984.

Missile Talks Create New Crisis Among NATO Allies

By NORMAN KEMPSTER
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

WASHINGTON — When NATO Secretary General Lord Carrington complained about a year ago that the Atlantic Alliance was splitting into timid "Eurowimps" and belligerent "American cowboys," nobody paid much attention. That concern, with only minor variations, had been voiced regularly for at least 30 years.

But today, the North Atlantic Treaty Organization is facing what may be its most severe crisis because of a sudden reversal of roles. The United States is nearing an agreement with the Soviet Union to remove hundreds of nuclear warheads from Europe, and many of the "Eurowimps" have discovered that they love the bomb.

"The (U.S. government's) official line is that NATO is as healthy as ever and it always is in some sort of crisis," a State Department official said. "All that having been said, however, the alliance faces a new set of challenges that are different from what it has seen before."

Ultimately, European members of NATO are expected to go along with U.S. arms control efforts, aimed currently at eliminating medium-range nuclear missiles from Europe. In reality, they have very little choice. But the debate has already put new strains on the alliance.

The controversy has shredded the protective covering that once obscured a basic truth: Because Western Europe is unable and unwilling to defend itself with conventional forces against a conventional attack by the Soviet-led Warsaw Pact, it relies on nuclear forces that will either prevent war from breaking out or result in a holocaust that might destroy the planet.

From the Europeans' standpoint, this all-or-nothing gamble results from a sober assessment of the odds. Conventional weapons have grown far more effective since World War II, when they devastated the continent, and it is easy to see why many European leaders are as frightened by the prospect of a conventional war as by the specter of a nuclear one.

But the American interest is far different. Although the United States would surely suffer from a new world war fought with conventional arms, it could hope to survive with its civilization more or less intact. It could have no such expectation if the war was fought with nuclear arms.

No one doubts that the Soviet Union and its allies have a far more formidable force than NATO for fighting a conventional war.

The usual explanation holds that the democracies of the West are unwilling to use massive peacetime conscription to equal the standing armies of the East and to spend the huge sums necessary to match the Warsaw Pact tank for tank. But the current debate indicates that the Europeans have even more deep-seated reasons for resisting a buildup in conventional forces.

"The Europeans have always wanted to have more nuclear and less conventional defense because they didn't want a conventional war ever to be fought," the State Department official said.

Brent Scowcroft, former President Ford's national security adviser, put it even more starkly:

"The Europeans really don't want a conventional defense of Europe. The Europeans rely heavily, psychologically at least, on what they consider the deterrent value of nuclear weapons. They don't want a nuclear war which would be fought solely on European territory, nor do they want to fight World War II over."

Scowcroft said that European members of the alliance are concerned that if the West came close to matching Soviet conventional power, that might lead Moscow to believe that a conventional war would not necessarily lead automatically to a nuclear one. By the inverse logic of nuclear deterrence, this could lead the Soviets to take chances that they would not otherwise take.

"One can test and probe with conventional forces if one is free from the risk of inviting nuclear retaliation," he said.

David P. Calleo, director of European Studies at the Johns Hopkins University School of Advanced International Studies, said that the United States "has maintained a military protectorate over Europe since the end of the Second World War." Although European leaders sometimes complain about this American dominance, most of them are happy with the arrangement, he said.

"The nightmare is that there will be a war limited entirely to Europe," Calleo said. "They (European leaders) feel that the best way to prevent that is to make sure that if there should be a war, the Americans would retaliate against the Soviet Union with nuclear forces so that neither superpower would be tempted to try out their toys at the expense of the Europeans. The U.S. interest is far different: If a war starts, it should be kept as small as possible so it would stay in Europe."

Although there is nothing new about this division of interests, the prospect of a U.S.-Soviet agreement to ban medium-range missiles from Europe has forced the alliance to face the issue squarely for the first time.

And now the West cannot rely on a threatening and ham-fisted Soviet Union to cement its alliance.

and know we're safe," said veteran Sam Dailey of Savannah. "Nobody's going to attack us here."

Other Memorial Day weekend fun included the 40th annual Spray Rodeo in eastern Oregon, in which spectators lined a two-block parade route. The parade, long on horses and short on marching bands, wound around the block twice to give everyone a chance to wave.

On a larger scale, more than a million people turned out Sunday for the Golden Gate Bridge's 50th birthday bash. The party started with a walk across the span by 250,000 people and continued into the night with a $400,000 fireworks show and singer Tony Bennett crooning "I left my heart in San Francisco."

As in other recent Memorial Days, veterans who participated in the Vietnam War urged the nation to honor their service and remember their comrades who remain unaccounted for. In Madison, Wis., Vietnam veterans clad in army fatigues set up a bamboo cage near Capitol Square as a reminder.

In Washington, the Vietnam Veterans Memorial drew thousands of visitors. Some took rubbings of the names of loved ones etched on the black granite. Sen. Albert Gore Jr., D-Tenn., a Vietnam veteran, was to speak there today.

The 37 sailors killed in last week's Iraqi missile attack on the Stark were remembered Sunday with presentation of a wreath in a ceremony at Arlington National Cemetery in Virginia and elsewhere.

"I'm sure Memorial Day will be more on people's minds this year because of the recent tragedy," said Don Pierce, whose son Randy was among the Stark's casualties. "We are more aware of what it stands for. Every time I see a flag flying at half mast it chokes me up," Pierce said Sunday in Midwest City, Okla.

In Macomb County, Mich., residents tossed 37 roses into the Clinton River on Sunday to honor the Stark's dead.

Thirty-seven white doves were released Sunday during a USS Stark memorial in Chicago that drew about 200 families.

"You can see that there's only a handful of people here," said John B. Mahoney, past state commander of the American Legion, lamenting that others "seem to forget that these old men used to be 19-year-old kids and that the ones marching in front of us are the ones that are left, the ones that weren't killed fighting so others can have their barbecue."

Strike Vote

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Teachers in the nation's second-largest city will hold a strike authorization vote despite a fact-finding report that the district cannot afford to pay the 14 percent raise the teachers demanded.

The report, issued by a three-member panel including a neutral chairman and chief negotiators for the Los Angeles Unified School District and the United Teachers of Los Angeles, supported the district's position that it cannot afford the raise demanded by teachers.

The panel backed the district's offer of an 8 percent raise, and also proposed an alternative two-year settlement providing a 10 percent raise this year and next if state financing is available.

Executions

BELJING (AP) — Three people convicted of stealing were executed in Shanghai after their appeal was rejected, a local newspaper said.

The Xinmin Evening News, seen in Beijing, said Qi Yun, Zhao Feng and Zong Xiaoping were shot after the Shanghai Middle Court sentenced them to death.

Unser Pulls Off Indy Surprise

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Al Unser is more than the oldest winner of the Indianapolis 500. He's more than only the second four-time winner of the Indianapolis 500. Al Unser is the luckiest winner of the Indianapolis 500.

And Mario Andretti is the unluckiest loser. "Lady Luck has to run your way sometimes, and this was one of those times," said Unser, who won in 1970, 1971 and 1978 but was without a ride after his contract with the Penske Racing team expired last season.

Unser, who will be 48 on Friday, never thought he would be in Sunday's race, let alone win it. He got the ride, supposedly a one-shot deal, just three days before the second weekend of time trials when Danny Ongais suffered a concussion in practice, and promptly qualified 22nd, in the middle of the seventh row.

Then came the race, marred by the first spectator fatality since 1960. Unser barely avoided a first-lap crash by two other drivers, then found himself in the right place when Andretti and then Roberto Guerrero were unable to hold leads that surely seemed safe late in the race.

"It's hard to believe," said Unser, who matched A.J. Foyt's record four victories and surpassed his brother, Bobby, as the oldest winner by nine months. "It's something you dream about. But it seemed it wouldn't come true because of all the problems. I feel for Danny (Ongais), because it should have been his ride. ... Thank you, Danny."

But Unser was equally certain this one was his greatest victory.

"They don't all blend together. This one here is more special. The older you get, the more you learn to appreciate them. The harder it gets, the more you realize it's not easy," said Unser, who was rewarded by car owner Roger Penske with the promise of rides in the other two 500-mile races this season at Michigan and Pocono and in next year's Indianapolis 500.

It was the sixth victory for the Penske team.

"In no way was I thinking of not coming (to Indy)," he said. "But if I didn't have a ride by a certain date, I was going to go home and come back for the race. I was tired of standing around. It gets boring."

It was Andretti, who set an unofficial lap record of more than 218 mph in practice and easily won the pole position for his 22nd Indy start, who was expected to run away with his second Indy victory. And he nearly did, until his streak of bad luck continued with a broken fuel seal 23 laps from the finish.

"I couldn't touch him. There was nothing I could do with Mario at all. He ran off and left us all," Unser said.

Andretti grabbed the lead at the beginning and was almost unchallenged until disaster struck. He led 170 of the first 177 laps, the most dominant pace since 1930 and even in the end the fifth-most dominant race ever from the standpoint of laps led.

Unser, meanwhile, almost never survived the first trip around the track, barely avoiding a spin and crash by Josele Garza.

"Josele passed me low," Unser said. "He was on the paint and spun. I barely made it by. I tensed up because I thought he would get me in my left rear. It scared me."

Andretti lost the lead only briefly twice when he came in for routine pit stops. When he built a lead of more than one lap with a full third of the race to go, the question was not whether he would outrun the other cars, but whether he would outrun his perennial bad luck.

"There was no one who could challenge us today," he said. "I truly felt I was in control of the situation. ... We just got cheated. ... It was the best car I've ever had here. I've never driven an Indy car so perfect. It was the easiest race of my life. We couldn't be on top of the world. I've lost a lot of races like this. I never feel I have it made until the checkered flag."

He wouldn't make it to the checkered flag this year, finally quitting after 180 laps. Officially, Andretti finished ninth. Five times in his long career, he ended in crashes. Twice he was runnerup, including the most controversial Indy race in history in 1981, when he was teased with victory as Bobby Unser was penalized a lap the day after the race.

Four months later, a special U.S. Auto Club hearing panel restored Bobby's victory, dropping Andretti to second.

"The fuel system just pitched. The thing backfired, so we brought it in and fuel was pouring out," Andretti said. "It was a seal or some stupid thing like that."

When Andretti went out, the last driver between Unser and the checkered flag was Guerrero, who took the lead for five laps and seemed in control. But again Unser benefited from someone else's bad luck.

After the 182nd lap, Guerrero came in for a pit stop and couldn't get the car out of gear.

"The clutch was giving us problems. I tried to start it up, but the engine stalled on it," Guerrero said. "The car was working well, and we didn't need tires, so we just wanted to make a quick stop for fuel."

"Sometimes those quick stops don't turn out the way you hope."

Unser had more than a lap lead over Guerrero, but the Colombian driver unlapped himself and closed the gap behind Unser when the final yellow came out as Andretti stalled again.

When the green flag was waved with five laps to go, Unser held a four-second lead and Guerrero couldn't make up the difference. The unofficial margin of victory was 4.496 seconds — fifth-closest in history.

Unser's winning time was 3 hours, 4 minutes, 59.147 seconds, an average speed of 162.175 mph.

Guerrero finished second for the second time in his four years at Indy. He also has finished third and fourth, and the 200 laps he drove Sunday gave him the most completed laps — 798 of a possible 800 — of any driver over the past four years.

Rookie Fabrizio Barbazza of Italy was third, followed by Al Unser Jr., Gary Bettenhausen, Dick Simon, rookies Stan Fox and Jeff MacPherson and Andretti. Tony Bettenhausen was 10th, followed by Johnny Rutherford.

Petty Rolls To Coca-Cola Win

HARRISBURG, N.C. (AP) — The Coca-Cola 600 stock car race had been billed all week as a showdown between bitter rivals Dale Earnhardt and Bill Elliott.

It ended on a more heart-warming note.

Instead of becoming another round in the ongoing feud between Elliott and Earnhardt, Sunday's race at the Charlotte Motor Speedway featured Kyle Petty being ushered to victory by his famous father, Richard Petty.

In doing so, Kyle Petty became the first third-generation driver to win a major NASCAR race in Charlotte. His grandfather, Lee Petty, won 53 races. Richard Petty has 200 career victories.

Kyle Petty, 26, earned $89,405 in posting the first superspeedway victory of his career and his second NASCAR Winston Cup victory. His average speed was 131.483 mph.

Petty, driving a Ford Thunderbird, finished a lap ahead of Morgan Shepherd and Lake Speed, who raced each other to the checkered flag for the runner-up position before a record crowd of more than 160,000.

Ironically, Richard Petty was the last driver in the Coca-Cola 600 to lap the field. He did it while winning in 1975, and also won the race in 1977.

Kyle Petty was a 15-year-old crew member when his father won in Charlotte for the first time — a victory that ended years of frustration.

"Charlotte always was a big race because daddy never won here until 1975," he said. "It was one of those races that beat you rather than you beating it."

He said Sunday's weather reminded him of that day 12 years ago.

"It was a hot day like this was," he said. "It got so hot that I went over and sat down in the garage. Boy, did I get chewed out."

Richard Petty finished in fourth place Sunday, followed by Darrell Waltrip, Terry Labonte, Buddy Baker, Phil Parsons, Jim Sauter and Rusty Wallace.

Wallace had built an eight-second lead with 22 of the 400 laps remaining on the 1.5-mile tri-oval, but fell off the pace when he dropped a cylinder.

Kyle Petty moved into the lead for the final time on lap 384 when his Wood Brothers crew got him out first during a pit stop on the final caution of the day.

He became an easy winner after Wallace's mechanical problems left him as the only driver on the lead lap.

Although he was more than a lap behind, Richard Petty was right behind his son across the finish line.

"He did a super job and he ran good all day," said the elder Petty. "He did exactly what was needed to win the race."

Richard Petty said he enjoyed the final few laps, even though he knew he would not be the winner.

"I just idled along and watched him," he said.

Kyle Petty said he was relieved that it was his father's car behind him. But he said it could have been much different.

"I'm just glad he was a lap down because I wouldn't want to have to hold him back," he quipped.

The younger Petty was able to avoid problems that plagued numerous top teams during the race. Earnhardt, Elliott, Geoff Bodine, Benny Parsons and Ricky Rudd either left the race or spent several laps in the pits with mechanical trouble.

Earnhardt, the reigning Winston Cup points champion and the current leader, suffered a flat tire in the first lap. He also was in the pits for 89 laps while his crew worked on a cracked cylinder head, then was black-flagged twice later in the race for driving too slowly. He finished 20th, 95 laps off the pace.

Elliott was leading the race at the midway point, but retired with a broken rear end suspension on lap 266.

Mechanical problems also cost rookie Davey Allison a chance at victory.

Allison was in the lead before he lost a cylinder on lap 327 and fell off the pace. He pulled into the garage after 351 laps and finished 16th.

Only 16 of the 42 cars that started the race were running at the end.

Richard Petty said the high attrition rate reminded him of his early days on the circuit.

"This is more like the races we used to run here," he said. "Lots of racing at the beginning and then it's a matter of survival."

Pistons Top Celts, Even Up Series

By The Associated Press

The expected final-round matchup of the NBA's top two teams in the regular season might not materialize.

The Los Angeles Lakers, who had the league's best record at 65-17, are holding up their end. They lead the Seattle SuperSonics 3-0 in the Western Conference championship series, which the Lakers could clinch with a victory in Seattle today.

But the Boston Celtics, who were 59-23 this season, lost twice in Detroit this weekend, with the Pistons scoring impressive 122-104 and 145-119 decisions. The way the Pistons handled the Celtics in those games, they would seem to have the edge in the Eastern Conference finals, which resume Tuesday night at Boston Garden.

But the Celtics lost only once during the regular season at the Garden and are 7-1 there in the playoffs. And Detroit hasn't won on the parquet floor since 1982.

"The odds of winning in Boston aren't really good, but I say let it all hang out," Detroit Coach Chuck Daly said. "At this point, that's all we can really do. I say let's just fire it up there."

If Adrian Dantley, Vinnie Johnson, Isiah Thomas and Bill Laimbeer continue to be fired up, Detroit could pull off a surprise.

Dantley scored 23 of his game-high 32 points in the second half and reserve guard Vinnie Johnson added 25 points in Sunday's rout. Thomas scored 22 points and Laimbeer, who was ejected from Game 3 for fighting with Boston's Larry Bird, added 20 points and 13 rebounds.

"We have to come up with something," Boston Coach K.C. Jones said. "Dantley's driving to the basket, he is going to the free-throw line, he's putting the ball in the basket with great consistency. One thing is, we give help on him and we leave somebody else open and he fires it up."

"We try to cover Bill Laimbeer and that leaves Johnson open. They have a lot of people who can shoot the ball well outside. They also have the fast break. That makes it rather difficult to deal with."

Randolph Finds Gap, Lifts Yanks

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

Three Yankees found the seats with balls they hit. Willie Randolph found "a hole," and it was enough to give New York its third straight victory over the California Angels.

California had rallied from 5-0 and 8-2 deficits to tie the game 8-8 and send it into extra innings Sunday. But in the top of the 10th, Wayne Tolleson walked and moved to second on a disputed play at first base.

With Tolleson on first, Rickey Henderson hit a checked-swing ground ball to first. He dove to first base, trying to elude Wally Joyner's tag, and was ruled safe by first-base umpire Nick Bremigan. After a discussion with home-plate umpire Dale Ford, Bremigan reversed his call.

"He (Bremigan) called Rickey safe and never asked for any help. The home-plate umpire just volunteered," Yankees Manager Lou Piniella said. "The first-base ump had a perfect angle. But it's forgotten now."

Randolph made it a forgotten play as he singled home Tolleson with the tie-breaking run.

"I just got my hands out. I was in there looking for a decent pitch to hit," Randolph said. "I found a hole. That's all I was looking for."

After Angels reliever Donnie Moore, 2-2, walked Don Mattingly intentionally, Gary Ward singled to left, scoring Randolph with the final run.

"We know the game isn't over until the last out," Henderson said. "We just kept battling to the end. I think that's what makes us a great ballclub."

In other American League games Sunday, it was Chicago 4, Boston 1; Detroit 7, Minnesota 2; Cleveland 5, Milwaukee 3; Kansas City 5, Texas 2; Baltimore 4, Oakland 3; and Seattle 5, Toronto 2.

Even with the loss, California Manager Gene Mauch was pleased with his team's refusal to quit.

"Coming back from 8-2 isn't easy," Mauch said. "We've done it a lot of times. It's a reflection of what we've been doing earlier and an indication of what we'll do again."

Mike Pagliarulo and Dan Pasqua each hit two-run homers and Joel Skinner added a solo shot for the Yankees. California got home runs from Dick Schofield with two men on, Jack Howell and Joyner.

Orioles 4, Athletics 3

Ray Knight scored on Ken Gerhart's sacrifice fly to boost Baltimore to its third straight victory over Oakland. Knight had reached base on a fielder's choice and moved to third on Terry Kennedy's single.

Gerhart's fly to deep left appeared to be going out of the park, but Jose Canseco leaped and caught the ball at the top of the wall. Kennedy failed to get back to first in time and was doubled up for the final out of the inning. But the run counted since Knight crossed the plate before Kennedy was out at first.

Knight hit his fifth homer of the year, a solo shot in the fourth, while the Athletics scored all of their runs on solo homers: Mark McGwire hit his 16th in the second, Mike Davis his 10th in the fifth and Carney Lansford his third in the sixth.

White Sox 4, Red Sox 1

Tim Luetz scored in the 10th inning when Ken Williams hit a double that was misjudged by left fielder Jim Rice, giving Chicago its victory and a sweep of the three-game series with Boston. Harold Baines added a two-run single in the inning.

The Red Sox scored first in the fourth when Wade Boggs walked and scored on singles by Mike Greenwell and Rice. Chicago tied it in the sixth on Daryl Boston's leadoff double and Harold Baines' single.

Tigers 7, Twins 2

Kirk Gibson's RBI single and John Grubb's two-run single were the only hits in Detroit's five-run seventh inning as the Tigers downed Minnesota for their ninth victory in 11 games.

Rookie Jeff Robinson, 3-2, allowed just an unearned run in the second inning and a solo home run to Kent Hrbek in the eighth before Mike Henneman relieved in the ninth. Robinson gave up five hits, struck out nine and walked three.

Indians 5, Brewers 3

A two-out, ground-rule double by Julio Franco was the big blow in Cleveland's five-run fifth inning. Franco's hit, grabbed by a fan sitting in the first row along the right-field line, scored two runs to snap a 1-1 tie.

Right-hander Ken Schrom, 4-4, gave up six hits in 7 2-3 innings. Left-hander Teddy Higuera, 4-4, went the distance and suffered his fourth straight defeat.

Juan Castillo homered for Milwaukee.

Royals 5, Rangers 2

Danny Tartabull's seventh homer of the season, a two-run shot in the second inning, and Kevin Seitzer's two-run single boosted Kansas City over Texas. Jerry Don Gleanon got the victory, his first of the year, in relief of starter Mark Gubicza.

Gubicza walked seven batters, including two in three different innings, the last in the fifth when Gleanon came on with runners on first and second with one out. But none of them scored.

Mariners 5, Blue Jays 2

Mark Langston pitched a three-hitter and struck out 14, a season-high, giving him the AL lead with 79. Langston, 5-4, won for the fifth time in his last seven decisions. It was the 16th time in Langston's career he has struck out 10 or more in a game.

In the Seattle fifth, leadoff batter Ken Phelps walked and Alvin Davis singled. Mike Kingery then doubled to drive in two runs. Dave Valle and Harold Reynolds added run-scoring hits in the inning.

George Bell's two-run homer in the sixth inning provided Toronto's runs.

Cardinals Roll By Houston

By DAVE GOLDBERG
AP Sports Writer

The St. Louis Cardinals are so hot they even caught Mike Scott on a bad day.

The Cardinals won their fifth straight game and 10th in 11 Sunday, beating the Astros 8-2 as just about everything went right — from Scott's wildness to Jack Clark's grand slam that was thought to be a foul ball by the Astros and most of the Astrodome crowd.

Even Clark wasn't sure until third-base umpire Charlie Williams called the ball fair.

"I thought maybe it went foul but I couldn't tell," Clark said of his 12th homer. "I was doing what everyone else was, looking to the ump for the call. Then I ran fast around the bases before he changed his mind."

In other NL games Sunday, it was Chicago 3, Atlanta 2 in 12 innings; Los Angeles 8, New York 6; Pittsburgh 7, Cincinnati 3; San Francisco 6, Philadelphia 3; and Montreal 2, San Diego 1.

Clark's homer followed four straight walks and was one of just two hits surrendered by Scott, 5-3, in 1-3 innings. The other was Terry Pendleton's first-inning single that extended his major-league high hitting streak to 18 games.

Scott, last year's NL Cy Young Award winner, allowed six walks and was charged with seven runs, the most since he permitted since he was charged with six against Montreal on May 4, 1986.

As St. Louis Manager Whitey Herzog put it: "We didn't see the real Mike Scott today."

The loss was the fifth straight and eighth in nine games for the defending NL West champions.

It was also an easy victory for Joe Magrane, his fourth straight since being called up to replace John Tudor, who suffered a broken leg in a dugout accident. He allowed seven hits and gave up both runs in the fourth inning on three hits and two walks.

"I was just going to relax and try to get the ball over the plate when we got the big lead," Magrane said. "I wasn't exactly throwing smoke today and didn't really have very good stuff, I guess I was aiming the ball and lost my control."

Cubs 3, Braves 2

The Cubs stayed within one game of the Cardinals in the East with their second straight extra-inning victory over Atlanta, whom they beat in 16 innings Saturday.

Andre Dawson singled home Bob Dernier from third to win it.

After the Cubs took a 2-1 lead on Brian Dayett's two-run double in the eighth, the Braves tied it in the ninth on Ozzie Virgil's RBI single off Lee Smith, who was going for his 13th save.

The only other run of the game came on a homer by Atlanta starter Charlie Puleo off Rick Sutcliffe, who was seeking his major-league leading eighth victory.

Dawson's game-winner came on a 2-0 pitch with two outs and first base open and the Braves were willing to pitch around him. But he stroked a high pitch into left.

"I felt if I could hit the ball, I was going to swing," he said. "I wasn't going to chase a bad pitch, only one that I could handle."

Pirates 7, Reds 2
Converted reliever Brian Fisher hit a three-run homer for his first major-league hit and threw a five-hitter as the Pirates won their fifth straight and swept a series over the Reds, who won last year's season's series 10-2.

Bobby Bonilla added two solo homers as the Pirates won their 10th game in their last 13. Tom Browning, 4-6, allowed six runs in four innings as the Reds' losing streak was extended to four straight, eight of nine and 11 of 15.

"It's kind of ironic," Fisher, 2-1, who was acquired from the Yankees in the off-season, said. "There were a bunch of firsts — my first home run, my first hit, my first RBI, my first complete game."

Giants 6, Phillies 3
Robby Thompson's three-run eighth-inning homer off Kent Tekulve broke a 3-3 tie and gave the Giants a three-game lead in the West.

Philadelphia's Darren Daulton, making his first appearance since injuring a knee last June 21, hit a three-run homer in the seventh off Mike LaCoss, 5-1, to erase a 3-0 Giants' lead.

Scott Garrelts struck out Mike Schmidt with the bases loaded to get out of a jam in the eighth, then Jeff Robinson relieved Garrelts with two on and no outs in the ninth and retired the side for his seventh save.

"Big guys know when they hit them," the 5-foot-11, 170-pound Thompson said of his homer. "When you're a little man, you never know. I thought at least it was in the gap, and I was hoping it would go out."

Expos 2, Padres 1
Mitch Webster keyed a two-run sixth-inning rally with an RBI single and Floyd Youmans and Tim Burke combined on a four-hitter for the Expos.

With game scoreless, Youmans, 2-3, opened the sixth with a single off Eric Show, 1-6, and went to second on a sacrifice by Casey Candaele. An error by second baseman Joey Cora and two walks forced home the second run.

The Padres scored in the seventh on Garry Templeton's double-play grounder with the bases loaded.

Cade To Consider An Appeal

GREEN BAY (AP) — Green Bay Packers defensive back Mossy Cade, convicted of sexually assaulting a relative's wife, wants to spend time with his family while considering an appeal, his lawyer says.

The woman says she was an overnight guest in Cade's home when she was assaulted. Attorney Donald Zuidmuller says he was surprised that a Circuit Court jury acquitted Cade on one count of second-degree sexual assault but convicted him on two other counts.

The verdict was based "strictly on the information we had in court," jury foreman Ray Schleis said. "We didn't go into any theories or anything like that; just the facts."

Cade, 25, was a 1983 All-America at the University of Texas. He was a first-round draft pick of the San Diego Chargers, but played two seasons for the USFL's Memphis Showboats. The Packers acquired his rights in a September, 1985, trade with San Diego.

Two months later, a 44-year-old Houston woman, who had flown to Green Bay to watch Cade play, said she was assaulted in his home in De Pere, Wis., after a game.

Cade insisted he was in a restaurant in nearby Ashwaubenon. Zuidmuller told jurors the woman was getting a divorce and wanted to use Cade to get back at the family.

The Brown County jury of seven women and five men deliberated about four hours Saturday before finding Cade guilty on two counts of second-degree sexual assault.

Jury Selection For Tribble Case Begun

UPPER MARLBORO, Md. (AP) — The lawyer for the man accused of several drug violations in connection with the death of University of Maryland basketball star Len Bias has put a larger-than-usual premium on finding the proper panel to judge the case.

Jury selection in the trial of Brian Lee Tribble was to have gotten underway today in Prince George's County Circuit Court, a task that the defense attorney for Brian Lee Tribble did not take lightly.

"The outcome of the case depends upon whether we can find a truly fair and impartial jury," said Thomas Morrow, who has frequently criticized the negative exposure his client received from the media in the 11 months since Bias' death.

Tribble is believed to have been one of three men in the room with

NBA ...

The Lakers have been virtually impossible for NBA opposition to deal with this year. They took command of their series with the Super-Sonics with a 122-121 victory Saturday as James Worthy scored a career-high 39 points.

Worthy has 96 points in the three games.

"James usually does it in a quiet way," Magic Johnson said of his teammate. "He isn't flashy. But he is a different player right now. All through the playoffs, James has been taking control."

Worthy thinks the three tight games with Seattle — the Lakers' other wins were by five and eight points — will help his club.

"We've had some close games and have been tested several times," Worthy said. "We haven't finished with Seattle yet, but those close games we've had have helped us."

Seattle Coach Bernie Bickerstaff wasn't conceding the series, but he admitted being down 3-0 to the Lakers is imposing.

"I think we've played about as well as we can," Bickerstaff said. "We have to be perfect to win, but there are degrees of perfection. But I think we've proven that we can compete with them. They might sweep us, but I can say they swept a good basketball team."

Barr Puts His Doubts To Rest

ATLANTA (AP) — Dave Barr's doubts were put to rest after the long-hitting Canadian's record-tying performance in the Atlanta Golf Classic.

"You always wonder if you're ever going to win again," Barr said Sunday.

Geddes Whittles Way To Victory

MASON, Ohio (AP) — With three holes remaining in the 1987 LPGA Championship, 142 of the 144 golfers who started the tournament had been eliminated from a chance at winning. And that was just fine with Jane Geddes.

Geddes, playing her best with the second of the women's tour's major championships hanging in the balance, birdied two of the last three holes Sunday to edge Betsy King by one stroke at the Jack Nicklaus Golf Center.

"I'm an aggressive player and a close race makes me stay aggressive," Geddes said. "When I've had the lead, I have had a tendency to let up at times. When I need to play well to stay in it, like today, my shots seem to get better."

In the battle between the tour's top two money-winners, Geddes and King each shot final-round 67s, five under par on the 6,202-yard Grizzly Course. Geddes finished with a 72-hole total of 275, 13 under par.

Two strokes behind King were second-round leader Laurie Rinker, Ayako Okamoto and Rosie Jones.

The victory was Geddes' second major this year. The other came just 40 miles away from her triumph Sunday, last July in the U.S. Women's Open at the NCR Country Club in Dayton.

day after shooting a final-round 65 for a 23-under-par 265 total in capturing the $108,000 first prize over the 7,007-yard Atlanta Country Club course.

Barr, a 35-year-old from the Vancouver suburb of Richmond, has

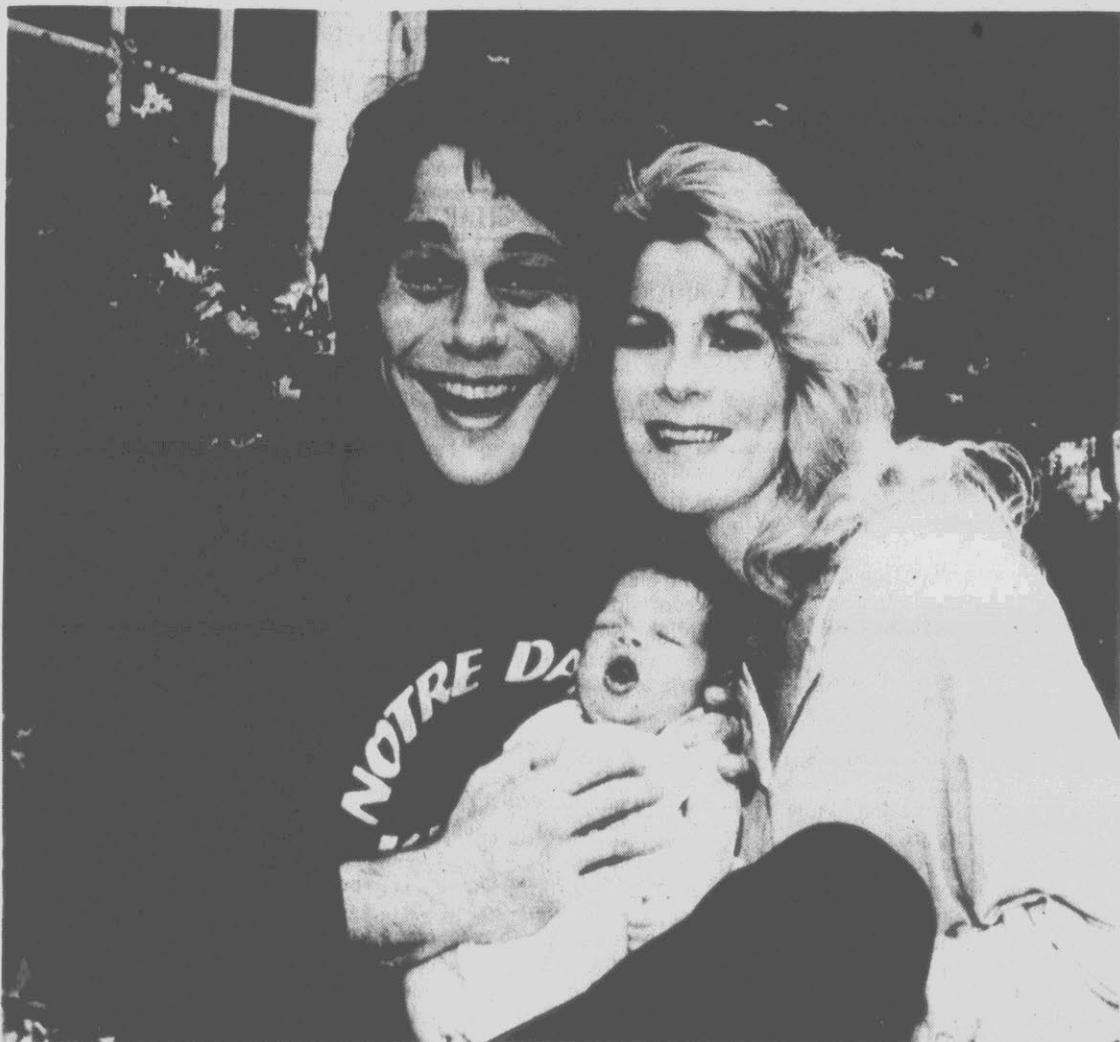

"Let's play all the big ones here," Geddes laughed. "This is like my favorite state now."

Geddes started the day tied for third, two shots behind Cathy Morse. She grabbed a share of the lead at 10-under on the 11th hole with a birdie — after a birdie and nine straight pars — while King was bogeying the 11th

Hermione Gingold Dies

NEW YORK (AP) — Hermione Gingold, the veteran English character actress whose credits included Broadway's "A Little Night Music" and the films "Gigi" and "The Music Man," has died at age 89.

Miss Gingold, who lived in Manhattan, died Sunday morning at Lenox Hill Hospital, where she had been admitted April 30, said administrator Sophie Perini. The cause of death was pneumonia complicated by heart disease.

Miss Gingold made her stage debut in London as Cardinal Wolsey in a kindergarten production of "Henry VIII." By age 14, she had appeared with Noel Coward in "Where the Rainbow Ends."

She also acted in Shakespearean plays at the Old Vic and starred in British revues and on radio and television. During World War II, Miss Gingold became known to American G.I.'s as a comedian in the long-run London review "Sweet and Low."

Her career in this country was launched in March 1951, in the Brattle Theater production of "It's About Time" in Cambridge, Mass.

In 1955, she was signed by CBS-TV, appearing on "The Ed Sullivan Show," "The Jack Paar Show," "Omnibus" and "Person to Person."

She won the Broadway theater Donaldson Award in 1954 for her performance as a caricaturist in "John Murray Anderson's Almanac." She also appeared around that time in the English films "Mary Goes to Town," "Somebody at the Door," "Cosh Boy" and "Pickwick Papers."

Her U.S. film appearances included "Around the World in 80 Days" in 1956, playing a Parisian wag; "Gigi" in 1958, co-starring with Leslie Caron and Maurice Chevalier; and "The Music Man" in 1962.

Gleason Gets Tests

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Comedian Jackie Gleason was in a hospital for tests today, three days after experiencing complications with his medication for emphysema and diabetes, officials said.

Gleason, 71, was being treated at Imperial Point Medical Center, said hospital spokeswoman Debra Rand. "He just came in for some tests," she said, adding she did not have a condition report on Gleason.

Gleason, a resident of Lauderdale, a Broward County community west of here, entered the hospital Friday because he was experiencing of the complications from his medication, according to Sydel Spear, his secretary of 25 years.

Gleason, who underwent triple bypass surgery in 1978, was discharged from Broward General Medical Center on April 21 after a six-day stay for tests following a bout with fatigue.

Gleason is best-known for his "Honeymooners" television series, which is still being broadcast in many areas.

ABC Movie On Suicide Has Impressive Movie Pedigree

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — It sounds like a real downer, a woman with a terminal disease trying to get somebody to help her commit suicide, but William Hanley's thoughtful script makes "When the Time Comes" more tribute than tear-jerker.

The 2-hour movie tonight on ABC has an impressive television-movie pedigree. Hanley's credits include the acclaimed "Something About Amelia," the Emmy-winning movie about incest, and director John Erman was responsible for the Emmy-winning movie about AIDS, "An Early Frost."

Sherry Lansing is producer. She was president of 20th Century Fox when star Bonnie Bedelia was nominated for an Oscar for her portrayal of race-car driver Shirley Muldowney in "Heart Like a Wheel." And Hanley wrote the first movie Ms. Bedelia appeared in, "The Gypsy Moths," in 1969.

Ms. Bedelia said in an interview it was Hanley's script that made her want to do "When the Time Comes."

"I read it, and it was a wonderful script, truly wonderful," she said. "I'm really hard on that aspect of it. I read so little that's even in the realm of decent."

"He just writes the kind of dialogue that makes you want to stick to every article."

She's right. There isn't a phrase, not a word that doesn't ring true.

Ms. Bedelia plays Lydie Travis, a Kansas housewife struggling against cancer. When doctors tell her the end is near and, at her insistence, tell her the truth about what her death will be like, she decides to enlist someone to help her commit suicide "when the time comes."

She has gotten this idea from a magazine article, something someone was talking about at the beauty parlor that she had seen on TV.

Lydie's sweet, loyal husband, Wes, played by Terry O'Quinn, cannot even face the idea. At one point he collapses, weeping, in her arms, and she promises to drop the subject. But she turns to her life-long buddy, Dean (Brad Davis).

"He plays my best friend, which I also really like, because it's a male instead of a female," Ms. Bedelia said. "It was unusual. Not in life, I don't think it's unusual. Traditionally it would be a woman's part."

Dean resists the idea at first, too.

"It's like murder," he tells Lydie. "It's like murderin' you." After he goes to the hospital and sees what happens to terminally ill patients near death, he changes his mind. But not before arguing the point one last time with Lydie's sister, played by Karen Austin. She says she believes in the concept. "But I couldn't do it," she says, adding meaningfully, "and I wouldn't want to know about it."

Hanley's dialogue is enormously touching in its realism. When Lydie has to tell Wes her prognosis, she tries to soften the blow like a lot of people would — "It looks like I'm not gonna make it, I guess."

When Lydie drives out to Dean's house to tell him she has only a few months to live, she says she envies him, he'll probably live to be 98. "I'd give you half the 98 if I could, Babe," Dean tells her, and he means it.

The movie is set in Kansas, but was filmed in Waxahachie, Texas, a popular small-town movie locale near Dallas.

"After I climbed on board, I thought, why did I do this? I don't want to live like this woman for the next four or five weeks," Ms. Bedelia said. "I just pictured that it was going to be kind of depressing. Terry O'Quinn and Brad Davis and I were like the Three Musketeers. We laughed. We just had a wonderful time making this picture. That's the only way you can get through something like this. You have to leave it at the end of the day."

Conventional Defense

Two hundred years ago on this date, the Constitutional Convention opened in Philadelphia. For months, the leaders who gathered there fought and argued over the precise wording of the Constitution. At one point, a delegate suggested that the new nation should have a standing army of five thousand men. George Washington said that proposal was fine with him — as long as all future invaders would promise to limit their armies to no more than three thousand.

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY May 26

GENERAL TENDENCIES: It's a very good day to quietly think in terms of whatever obligations of a practical nature you have. Get rid of them through a conscientious endeavor.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Although you like to get into creative affairs it is better to handle whatever is of a practical nature.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): You have several avenues to follow that will bring you greater popularity, but choose the wisest.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): You may feel hemmed in by the situation around you, but a little ingenuity can free you from this condition.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Don't ask favors of others today or you could get into troublesome arguments.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): Don't feel put off by influential people. Realize that bigwigs have problems worse than your own.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): You are anxious to get into new projects, but this is not the right time to do so. Get your routines improved.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Don't take any risks with your mate or you can lose much of the harmony that has been so carefully built up.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Outside partners are not in the mood to do what you would like, so don't call them today.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Although your work may seem boring, keep at it. Take any health treatments you may need.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Instead of planning recreations, finish those practical tasks that have to be completed now.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): You have to have more patience and consideration at home now, so don't lose your patience.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Much more care than usual has to be exercised in motion. Be careful of any errors in your reports.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he, or she, will be deliberate and take much time at doing everything, so it would be wise to teach this one to be faster in order to keep up with others. Your progeny could do well along business lines and should have the education slanted this way.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠6 ♥A93 ♦KJ873 ♣J632
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♥ 1 ♠ ?
What do you bid now?
A.—Had you held a fourth heart, your hand would have qualified for a limit raise of partner's suit (by whatever methods you use). However, with only three-card support we think you are good enough only to raise to two hearts, because a trump lead would reduce the effectiveness of your hand considerably. You are far too weak for two diamonds.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠872 ♥KQJ93 ♦A9 ♣K86
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♥ Pass 1 ♠ Pass
1 NT Pass 2 ♣ Pass
What action do you take?

A.—Don't insult partner either by persisting in no trump—he has shown an unbalanced hand. For the moment you should choose a suit, and you shouldn't pass even though partner's two club bid is not forcing. You owe him preference to his first suit. Bid two spades.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠J8 ♥KQ7 ♦AQ952 ♣K104
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 ♣ 1 ♠ 2 ♣ ?
What do you bid now?
A.—You have the best hand at the table, and your partner has made a vulnerable overcall. We don't know what the opponents are bidding on, but you should trust your vulnerable partner. With a stopper in the enemy suit, jump to three no trump. If his hand is unbalanced, he can correct to four spades.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠8 ♥AKQ92 ♦AKJ103 ♣94
Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with one spade. What action do you take?
A.—You have a very good hand, but two-suited hands are not easily shown if you start with a takeout double. Bid two hearts, with the intention of showing your second suit when the bidding gets back to you. A takeout double will just invite preemption from the opponents.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠83 ♥J976 ♦AJ942 ♣93
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 ♣ Dbl 2 ♣ ?
What action do you take?

A.—You have enough to compete, so it is simply a question of which suit you should bid. If your side does have the values for game, it is more likely to be in the major than in the minor. Therefore, bid two hearts.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠K1083 ♥AJ83 ♣K9652
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 ♥ Dbl Pass ?
What do you bid now?

A.—You certainly want to be in game, and perhaps in slam if partner has the right cards. The first order of business is to advise partner of your aspirations, and the way to do that is to cue-bid two hearts.

Fijian Minister Rejects Leaders

SUVA, Fiji (AP) — Fiji's caretaker government met for the first time today faced with restoring order after a military coup, but the ousted prime minister refused to recognize the new leaders, raising fears of further unrest.

Governor General Ratu Sir Penaia Ganilau met with his 19-member council of advisers this morning at Government House, said Peter Thompson, his spokesman. He did not give details of the meeting.

Ganilau, the representative of the British crown in this Commonwealth nation, was named interim leader of Fiji last week by the Great Council of Chiefs in a compromise intended to end a power struggle that followed the May 14 coup.

The coup leader, Lt. Col. Sitiveni Rabuka, was named head of the council of advisers, which was ordered to administer the country until elections late this year.

Deposed Prime Minister Timoci Bavadra announced Sunday that he was rejecting an offer to serve on the council of advisers because only two members of his government — he and his deputy Harish Sharma — had been named to it. They both boycotted today's meeting at Government House.

His statement raised fears of further conflict between ethnic Fijians and Indians. The normally peaceful island nation has been troubled by ethnic violence since elections April 11 led to Fiji's first Cabinet dominated by ethnic Indians.

Ethnic Indians make up 49 percent of Fiji's 715,000 people, while ethnic Fijians comprise 47 percent and traditionally have controlled the government and military. Bavadra is an ethnic Fijian.

Rabuka said he staged his coup to preserve the rights of ethnic Fijians. There was no sign of unrest in the capital city of Suva today. Indians, who closed their shops to protest the coup, were doing a brisk business. Banks were changing money and cashing checks.

After a daylong meeting Sunday with his ousted government, Bavadra said he was retracting an earlier offer to work with the council of advisers. He said the Great Council of Chiefs' compromise agreement was "made with those who have committed, aided and abetted a terrorist act."

His change of mind appeared to result from arguments put to him by Indian supporters who feared their role was diminished by the compromise. Indians, whose ancestors came to Fiji in the 19th century as indentured laborers on British-run plantations, control commerce.

Rabuka and other soldiers stormed Parliament on May 14 and arrested Bavadra and his Cabinet. The ousted ministers were freed unharmed Wednesday night.

Rabuka wanted to name his own council of ministers, but Ganilau refused to swear them in. The council of advisers was established as a compromise.

Japanese Firms Asked To Buy Imported Chips

TOKYO (AP) — The trade minister asked 10 major electronics companies today to buy more foreign-made semiconductors, an official at the ministry said.

International Trade and Industry Minister Hajime Tamura made the request in a meeting with executives from NEC Corp., Hitachi Ltd. and other leading electronics firms, said MITI's Tatsuo Sato.

Sato said the executives replied that they would try to comply with the request, which came several days before Japan was to resume talks with the United States to review an 8-month-old semiconductor trade agreement.

President Reagan imposed 100 percent tariffs on $300 million worth of Japanese electronics goods on April 17, saying Japan had violated the agreement by selling semiconductors, or computer chips, at unfairly low prices in third country markets. He also charged Japan had failed to keep its promise to increase purchases of American-made chips.

Kyodo News Service quoted Tamura as telling the executives, "Whether you like it or not, the bilateral issues on semiconductor trade have become a symbolic matter."

The 10 companies, which also included Sony Corp., Mitsubishi Electric Co. and Fujitsu Ltd., purchase about 40 percent of all semiconductors bought in Japan.

Last week, MITI said it had obtained data that showed increases in computer chip prices in third country markets and a steady rise in the share of foreign-made computer chips in Japan, but refused to disclose details.

The United States has indicated it may lift at least some of the sanctions once it sees evidence that Japan is complying with the trade pact. The talks on semiconductor trade are to resume Washington on Thursday and Friday.

Syrian Denies Report French Hostage Sold

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Syria's military intelligence chief in Lebanon has denied reporting that Moslem kidnappers sold one or more French hostages to Libya, Beirut radio stations said.

Brig. Gen. Ghazi Kanaan said he never mentioned Libya during an interview with a correspondent from the French magazine Le Figaro, state and private radio stations reported Sunday.

"Naming Libya by the magazine is an attempt to disturb relations between Syria and that sister country," Kanaan was quoted as saying.

On Saturday, Le Figaro quoted the general as saying that "one or more French hostages were sold to the Libyans. They served as a means of pressure against the French government in the conflict pitting the troops of (Chadian) President Hissene Habre against the Libyan army."

The Habre government recently routed thousands of Libyan troops from northern Chad. France has 2,800 troops in Chad, a former French colony, to back Habre in his fight against the Libyans.

Kanaan has been supervising the pacification of Moslem west Beirut for the past three months.

Meanwhile, a West German newspaper said Sunday that the Bonn government had sent an envoy to Iran to seek the release of two West Germans kidnapped in Beirut in January. Although no group has publicly claimed responsibility, they are believed held by pro-Iranian kidnappers.

Welt am Sonntag, published in Hamburg, said Hans-Juergen Wischniewski, a member of Parliament, flew to Tehran last weekend to try and negotiate the release of the two hostages.

A senior government official, speaking on condition of anonymity, confirmed that Wischniewski was "active" in the hostage case, but he declined further comment.

Twenty-four foreigners are reported missing in Lebanon and presumed kidnapped.

South Korean Students Staging Demonstrations

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — More than 7,000 students staged rallies at universities around South Korea today to protest an alleged cover-up in the death of a student in police custody, according to news reports.

At Sungkyunkwan University, riot squads firing tear gas engaged in running battles with about 700 students, who hurled firebombs and rocks. There were no immediate reports of arrests or injuries.

Most other demonstrations appeared peaceful. Five student leaders shaved their heads in protest at Hanyang University in Seoul and a group of students began a hunger strike at Seoul National University.

The Yonhap news agency said 7,400 students took part in protests at 24 universities held to denounce an alleged cover-up of the torture death of Park Chong-chul, a student dissident who died during police interrogation in January.

At the time of Park's death, the government said only two police officers were involved in the torture. The home minister and national police chief resigned to assume "political and moral responsibility" for the incident.

Last week, after a Catholic group accused the government of covering up the number of police involved, the prosecution announced the arrest of three more police officers in connection with torture. Then over the weekend, officials said five senior police officers also were being questioned about the death.

We'll make sure you're happy with your mortgage loan because we've got to live with you.

Since all First Federal offices are in and around Pitt County, we've got to deliver the best rates and the most efficient service. You're our only customers.

If we don't make home loans in and around Pitt County, we don't make home loans at all. That's because First Federal offices aren't located all around the state and the country like other mortgage firms. We have to make an extra effort to get you the best rates, the best programs and the most efficient service on your mortgage loan. That's why more people in this area come to us for home loans than any other bank, mortgage company or savings institution.

So, if you're in the market for a home, drop by and see one of our friendly mortgage loan officers. We're conveniently located, probably right around the corner. And we'll make an extra effort to help you get settled.

FIRST FEDERAL

The best place to bank.
