Pitt Election Bill Studied

RALEIGH — A subcommittee appointed by the N.C. House Local Government II committee was set to meet at noon today to discuss compromises in a bill changing Pitt County's method of election.

The subcommittee is then expected to make a final recommendation on the legislation to the Local Government Committee II Wednesday morning.

Pitt County's proposed "six-three" election plan calls for six county commissioners to be elected from districts with voters in the districts — two of which are predominantly black — voting only on the representative from their districts.

The other three board members, who could live anywhere in the county, would be elected by countywide vote. Minority groups in Pitt County voiced opposition to the inclusion of any at-large seats in the method of election.

The N.C. House Local Government II Committee referred the bill to a subcommittee Thursday and asked that a compromise be worked out between the six-three plan supported by the County Commissioners and the six-district plan backed by minority groups.

House subcommittee members Rep. Pete Hasty, D-Robeson, Rep. Sam Hunt, D-Alamance, Rep. Annie Kennedy, D-Forsyth, and Rep. John McLaughlin, D-Mecklenburg, were scheduled to discuss possible concessions on the issue with lawyers for

Two American Diplomats Shot In Ambush In Egypt

By RICHARD H. PYLE
Associated Press Writer

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Unknown gunmen ambushed a station wagon on a busy highway south of Cairo today, slightly injured two American diplomats riding inside and then sped away, U.S. Embassy officials said.

A third American in the vehicle was unhurt. One embassy security official at the scene said the attackers used a shotgun. Egyptian security sources said from 10 to 15 shots may have been fired but did not say what kind of weapon or how many firearms were involved.

The Interior Ministry said the two men were hit by flying glass from car windows in the shooting on the edge of the residential suburb of Maadi.

An embassy spokesman identified the wounded as Dennis L. Williams, the mission's acting security chief, and his assistant, John Huckle.

He said the attackers fired after failing in their efforts to force the Americans' station wagon to the side of the road.

It was the first attack on U.S. diplomats here in recent memory, although there have been occasional threats.

In Washington, State Department spokeswoman Laura

Jehl said of the shooting: "We've heard about it. We're familiar with it. But we don't have anything to say about it at this point."

About five hours after the attack, a Western news agency in Cairo reported receiving a phone call from a man, speaking "perfect Oxford English," who said, "This is Egypt's Revolution. Have you received our statement? We are responsible for the shooting in Maadi."

Later, an Egyptian undercover policeman told The Associated Press someone handed a letter to an errand boy in the street outside the same news agency's office and fled. The detective refused to say what was in the letter.

Egypt's Revolution is the name used by a shadowy group that claimed responsibility for three attacks on Israeli Embassy employees in Egypt in the past three years. In the last attack, in 1986, a woman on the Israeli mission staff was shot to death.

In claiming responsibility for one of those attacks, the group said it was protesting the U.S.-mediated 1979 Egypt-Israeli peace accords. It accused Egypt, the Unit-

Supreme Court Says Bail Can Be Denied For Some

By JAMES H. RUBIN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court, in an important victory for law enforcement officials and the Reagan administration, ruled today that people accused of crimes may be denied bail before trial if deemed dangerous to the community.

By a 6-3 vote, the justices reinstated a federal preventive detention law in the case of two reputed Mafia leaders in New York City.

The court said the government's interest in community safety can in some circumstances outweigh the rights of a criminal defendant — even one accused of a non-violent crime — to remain free pending trial.

Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist, in his opinion for the court, said, "Congress did not formulate the pre-trial detention provisions as punishment for dangerous individuals."

"Congress instead perceived pre-trial detention as a potential solution to a pressing societal problem. There is no doubt that preventing danger to the community is a legitimate regulatory goal," he said.

Congress, over an outcry from civil libertarians, enacted the preventive detention law in 1984. It received strong backing from the Reagan administration and law enforcement authorities.

Before the new law, bail generally would be denied — at least in theory — only if a judge determined the defendant was likely to flee.

In practice, judges could get around the old law by setting very high bail, ostensibly aimed at guaranteeing the defendant's appearance in court but with the effect of keeping the accused behind bars awaiting trial.

Rehnquist said today that the Constitution does not require that judicial decisions on bail be tied exclusively to preventing a defendant from fleeing.

The Constitution's Eighth Amendment forbids excessive bail, he said. But, Rehnquist continued, that only means that when bail is used to restrain flight it cannot also be intended to accomplish any other purpose, such as punishing the defendant.

"We believe that when Congress has mandated detention on the basis of a compelling interest other than prevention of flight, as it has here, the Eighth Amendment does not require release on bail," Rehnquist said.

In a strongly worded dissenting opinion, Justice Thurgood Marshall said laws imposing preventive detention, "consistent with the usages of tyranny and the excesses of what bitter experience teaches us to call the police state, have long been thought incompatible with the fundamental human rights protected by our Constitution."

Also dissenting were Justices William J. Brennan and John Paul Stevens.

Soviets No Longer Jam VOA Signals

MOSCOW (AP) — For the first time in seven years, Soviet citizens can listen to most Voice of America broadcasts in their native languages without interference from Kremlin jamming.

But the Soviets still are interfering with two other U.S. government-funded stations, Radio Free Europe and Radio Liberty, officials said.

Jaroslav Verner, a spokesman at the U.S. Embassy in Moscow, announced Monday that the Soviet Union had apparently given up its practice of jamming VOA broadcasts in Russian and other Soviet languages, including Ukrainian, Georgian, Armenian and Azerbaijani.

Verner said he heard VOA broadcasts in Russian on three short-wave frequencies Monday that were "coming in pretty well. Our monitors tell us that jamming has stopped on most of the languages broadcast into the Soviet Union."

In Washington, Charles Z. Wick, U.S. Information Agency director, said the Soviet action may be an extension of glasnost, a new policy of increased openness on selected topics promoted by Kremlin leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

"We welcome this Soviet decision ending an illegal activity in violation of international agreements to which the U.S.S.R. is a signatory," Wick said.

"We hope that the Soviet decision on VOA signals is a sincere initiative to open up their closed society and to end restrictions on the free flow of information. It is a positive step forward, but it is only a beginning."

Wick said the United States has had no official contact with the Soviets about the decision.

Former Aide Recalls JFK ... And Wonders What He'd Be Like At 70

By CHRISTOPHER CALLAHAN
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON (AP) — John F. Kennedy, eternally young in the memories of millions, would have turned 70 this week.

"I wake up thinking of that all the time, you know, what might have been," said David F. Powers, a longtime Kennedy aide described as being closer to JFK than anyone outside the family.

Powers, 75, joined Kennedy in his first bid for political office 41 years ago, and was in the car behind the president's when Lee Harvey Oswald's bullets cut Kennedy down in Dallas in 1963.

Kennedy had big plans for himself after the White House, the former aide said in a recent interview.

"After four more years, he used to talk about (coming) back here. He loved Massachusetts. He would have come back to write and to teach. But most of all, he wanted to work with the youth of America," Powers said.

He also believes Kennedy would have been active as an elder statesman.

"President Kennedy used to wonder why former presidents weren't put to better use," he said. "I think Kennedy would have gone to the Soviet Union of wherever was necessary."

Powers is the official keeper of the JFK flame as curator of the Kennedy Library. His office is packed with photos, letters and other memorabilia, and he is the author of the book "Johnny We Hardly Knew Ye."

"It's a labor of love," he said. "I'm able now to do something for a man who did so much for me. In a small measure, I'm repaying all those great, great days I spent with him."

Powers is to join Kennedy's widow, Jacqueline Onassis; their children, John and Caroline, and brother, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, on Friday for the formal opening of a 5½-acre park in Cambridge designated as the official state memorial to the late president.

The $2.5 million park near the Kennedy School of Government at Harvard University will include a memorial pool and fountain suggested by Caroline and quotes from a speech Kennedy gave in Massachusetts 10 days before his 1961 inauguration.

In Brookline, just outside Boston, the U.S. Parks Service is celebrating Kennedy's 70th birthday at the three-bedroom home where he was born May 29, 1917. Events during the weekend include a special $2 commemorative post office envelope and cancellation and an essay contest for

South Korea's Prime Minister, Seven Cabinet Aides Ousted

By BARRY RENFREW

Associated Press Writer

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — President Chun Doo-hwan dismissed his prime minister and seven other Cabinet members today in an effort to defuse a crisis over the death of a dissident student tortured by police.

Thousands of students demonstrated nationwide for a second day today to demand action in the case, and on at least two campuses the protesters fought police with firebombs and rocks.

Chun said he accepted the resignation of Prime Minister Lho Shin-yong and other key ministers after the entire 26-member Cabinet offered to quit to atone for the student's death. Official sources indicated the Cabinet members had been asked to submit their resignations.

The president quickly appointed replacements, all Chun loyalists, and the shake-up was expected to have little effect on policy.

National police chief Lee Yong-chang, who has been in his job since January, also submitted his resignation this evening to take responsibility for the torture death, officials said. It was not immediately known if it was accepted. Lee is not a Cabinet member.

There has been a growing national outcry over the death last January of student Park Chong-chul, who suffocated during interrogation when police pressed his throat against the edge of a tub.

Two police officers were charged at the time in the death, and the minister of home affairs and national police chief both resigned.

However, a group of Roman Catholic priests charged there had been a high-level cover-up over the number of officers involved. Officials announced last week that three more police were arrested, and over the weekend said five senior police officials were being questioned in the death.

At Ehwa Women's University in Seoul, about 200 students demanding action in the case hurled firebombs and rocks at police today during a two-hour battle. Police responded with tear gas.

Students also fought police at nearby Sogang University.

Yonhap, the Korean news agency, said 7,000 students took part in protests today at 23 universities and colleges across the country.

Chun said the Cabinet changes would safeguard his plan to step down in February and ensure needed stability for the 1988 Summer Olympics in Seoul.

"President Chun is determined to carry out successfully national goals under stability and harmony by controlling public sentiment over a wave of recent incidents," said a presidential spokesman, who asked not to be identified in keeping with official practice.

Opposition leaders denounced the removals as inadequate, and charged the government still was trying to conceal what happened in the torture case.

"The present regime must step down," said Kim Tae-ryong, a spokesman for the Reunification Democratic Party, the largest opposition party.

In addition to the prime minister, those leaving the Cabinet include the deputy prime minister, the ministers of finance, home affairs and justice, the attorney general, a junior law minister and the head of the National Security Planning Board, the country's main intelligence agency.

The government immediately announced that Lee Han-key, 69, a law professor, had been named as prime minister. Lee is virtually unknown in South Korea, with his only government experience a two-year stint as head of the state auditing board.

Power is concentrated in the hands of the president and the prime minister has limited authority.

Two critical Cabinet changes involved the Home Ministry, which controls the police, and National Security Planning Board, formerly known as the Korean Central Intelligence Agency.

Koh Kun was named as new home minister, replacing Chung Ho-yong, a former general who played a key role in Chun's rise to power in 1980. Koh, a lawmaker of the governing Democratic Justice Party, is considered more moderate.

Chang Se-dong, replaced as head of the intelligence agency, is another former general who was also considered a hardliner. He was replaced by An Moo-hyuk, head of the National Tax Administration.

Chung In-yong, who resigned as finance minister, was appointed deputy prime minister and minister of economic planning. Government officials insisted that he, like the other ministers, resigned to accept responsibility, even though he got another post.

The other ministers are little known civil servants and former government functionaries.

The last major reshuffling of Chun's Cabinet took place on Aug. 26, 1986, when 10 new members were named.

Philadelphia Opens Constitutional Fete

By LEE LINDER

Associated Press Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The summerlong party for the Constitution's 200th birthday opened with pomp and pageantry, speeches and merrymaking by a crowd of 50,000 people packed between the Liberty Bell Pavilion and Independence Hall.

Former Chief Justice Warren Burger, watching from the rostrum Monday as 30,000 helium-filled red, white and blue balloons soared into the sky, said, "I don't know how they're going to equal it on Sept. 17." On that date in 1787, delegates from 12 of the 13 original states signed the Constitution.

The celebration Monday marked the bicentennial of the opening of the Federal Constitutional Convention, four months of often-bitter arguments over a document to replace the Articles of Confederation, which had held the states together loosely during six years of independence.

Vice President George Bush and Burger, who stepped down from the Supreme Court to head the national bicentennial observance, formally opened the celebration with speeches.

"While the concepts of the Constitution may have been commonplace for us, it's important to affirm and reaffirm that our Constitution is special," Bush told the crowd.

"It harnessed the tensions between liberty and authority and bestowed upon the generations that followed a system that yields strengths in a manner to guarantee our freedom," Bush said.

"Because the document lives, it has enhanced our freedoms and supported a system that seeks to unleash the God-given talents of every individual to grow and prosper. The energy that gives our Constitution life and meaning comes from the American people," Bush said.

"I for one am proud to live in the fairest, the freest, the most generous country on the face of the earth."

The ceremony ended with a joint invocation from representatives of four religions.

"Our country was founded in large measure by people seeking religious freedom," said Rabbi Patrice Heller.

One by one came the roll call of the original 13 states, then the crowd joined in singing "The Star-Spangled Banner." The flag was raised up a 100-foot pole, then brought back down to half-staff in memory of the 37 sailors killed in the Iraqi missile attack on the USS Stark. The Olde City Fife and Drum Corps and actors in colonial costumes added historical flavor to the celebration, which also featured 18th century craft and food booths and a soapbox for citizens to speak.

Burger said he believed the people "got a lift" out of all the pomp, pageantry and speeches.

"It will start them thinking," he said. "It was pretty tough to get this Constitution."

Philadelphia Mayor W. Wilson Goode, the grandson of a slave, called the 200th anniversary "an opportunity to reflect on how we have come to this two-century milestone" and pointed out it took a Civil War and an amendment to make the document mean "we the people" as originally stated in its preamble.

But when the trial resumed, Barbie again refused to appear in court voluntarily. After hearing arguments from the lawyers, the three judges called a recess to consider whether to force him to appear.

Barbie announced May 13 that he would no longer attend sessions of his trial on charges of crimes against humanity, claiming he had been kidnapped and brought illegally to France from Bolivia, where he lived in exile for more than 30 years.

Barbie, now 73, is charged with arresting, torturing and deporting hundreds of Jews and French Resistance members to German concentration or death camps.

Weinberger Calls On NATO To Help Out In Persian Gulf

By ROBERT BURNS

Associated Press Writer

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger told the NATO allies today they must share some responsibility for keeping oil traffic flowing through the Persian Gulf, West Germany's defense minister said.

Manfred Woerner quoted Weinberger as assuring a NATO defense ministers' meeting that the United States intended to maintain its military role in ensuring freedom of navigation in the gulf.

"He also mentioned the responsibility of other alliance partners," Woerner told a news conference.

Neither Weinberger nor his aides were immediately available to comment on Woerner's remarks.

Woerner said, without specifically citing Weinberger, that the United States underscored the European NATO members' heavy reliance on Middle East oil, much of which travels through the Persian Gulf.

"They (Americans) underlined that this, of course, implies certain obligations for others" besides the United States, the German minister said.

Woerner said Weinberger made no specific requests of the allies for increased involvement in patrolling the gulf area.

On May 17, the U.S. Navy missile frigate Stark was heavily damaged in an Iraqi air attack while on patrol in the gulf, with 37 American sailors killed. Iraq apologized, calling the attack a mistake.

Earlier today, NATO's top military official said a superpower accord to withdraw nuclear missiles from Europe would force Western governments to spend more money on conventional defense.

West German Gen. Wolfgang Altenberg, chairman of the alliance's Military Committee, told a news conference that he stressed this in an address to the opening of the NATO meeting.

"This was well received" by the ministers, he said, adding he believed all NATO member nations were prepared to reassess their non-nuclear defenses.

The ministers, representing all alliance members except France and Iceland, also "voiced their sympathy" for the Americans killed on the Stark, he said.

Altenberg said the prospect of a U.S.-Soviet agreement to remove their medium- and shorter-range nuclear missiles from Europe made the issue of non-nuclear defense even more important for NATO.

"If arms control talks do come to results, this will put an edge on the need to improve our conventional capability," he said. "It will cost in the budget."

Implications for Western conventional defense of a possible superpower nuclear accord were at the center of discussion at the two-day meeting of North Atlantic Treaty Organization defense ministers, Altenberg said.

Weinberger, who arrived in Brussels on Monday, raised the matter in a speech to Belgium's Royal Defense College.

"We need to continue improvements in the conventional area even as we explore ways to continue the arms reduction process — without, of course, ever sacrificing the means to deter the Soviet Union from aggression," he said.

A chief concern of European governments wary of the proposed superpower nuclear accord is that removal of U.S. Pershing 2 and Tomahawk cruise missiles could leave the alliance more vulnerable to the threat of attack by numerically superior Soviet non-nuclear forces.

Barbie Returns To Courtroom

LYON, France (AP) — Klaus Barbie, the Gestapo chief of Lyon during World War II, was brought to the courthouse today for the first time in 13 days and was expected to face several witnesses who accuse him of torturing and deporting them to German camps.

The man known as the "Butcher of Lyon," arrived in a police van, part of a convoy that immediately whisked him into the 19th century Palais de Justice on Lyon's Saone River.

But when the trial resumed, Barbie again refused to appear in court voluntarily. After hearing arguments from the lawyers, the three judges called a recess to consider whether to force him to appear.

Dodging The Bullet

Pitt County's legislative delegation dodged its responsibility to constituents by allowing a bill changing Pitt County's method of election to go to committees for discussion.

By doing this, Rep. Ed Warren, Rep. Walter Jones Jr., Sen. Tom Taft and Sen. Bob Martin made the bill a statewide issue, which it clearly is not. That action is a disservice to the citizens of Pitt County who must live with whatever compromises this committee debate precipitates — and who expect state lawmakers to act in the best interest of the area they represent.

Pitt's lawmakers should have acted swiftly to ensure this bill's passage. Rather than relinquishing the issue to a committee, they should have encouraged other legislators to treat it as a local matter, requested a suspension of the rules and asked the House and Senate to consider the bill immediately and directly.

By steering clear of committee discussion in this manner, legislators would have demonstrated their support of the legislation to both fellow lawmakers and constituents. Instead, the delegation left the fate of this important issue in the hands of lawmakers from far away whose constituents it doesn't affect.

The delegation's actions make it clear Pitt's lawmakers did not want to take sides in the controversy created by the proposed bill. Instead of firmly supporting the recommendation of the County Commissioners and muscling the passage of the bill, the legislators took the easy way out by claiming the bill was of statewide interest — a position which is not accurate.

It appears the delegation wrongly lacked confidence in the recommendation — a plan of electing officials that would create a balanced county commission, provide minority representation and work to the county's advantage. Although the proposed method of election created some controversy, it received thorough public discussion and drew considerable community support.

Now, rather than having a sound, carefully thought-out method of election devised by local resources and from citizen input, the county may be saddled with a compromise that nobody likes. Furthermore, citizens may be stuck with a plan that's not in the best interest of Pitt County — a plan devised by lawmakers from Winston-Salem, Charlotte, Burlington and Robeson County who don't know the requirements for electing a sound system of public representation in Pitt County.

If that is the case, Warren, Jones, Taft and Martin bear responsibility for putting the county in that disadvantageous position.

Punting

The Big Four teams won't be playing East Carolina University in football next fall — not by Legislative order, anyway.

Rep. David Redwine, D-Brunswick, returned his own bill to the House Higher Education Committee where he says he will allow it to die.

The bill would have required UNC-Chapel Hill, Duke, N.C. State and Wake Forest to schedule games with other Division 1-A football teams in the state — namely ECU.

The bill did rather well. It made it out of legislative committee and, as expected, it brought howls of protest from the affected institutions, as well as from many editorial writers.

After talk came up about amendments such as one urging the Big Four teams to play harder so as not to embarrass the Pirates, Redwine decided to punt on third down — he killed his own bill. He was quoted in the Durham Morning Herald that it was not his intention "to add any fun nor frivolity to the proceedings."

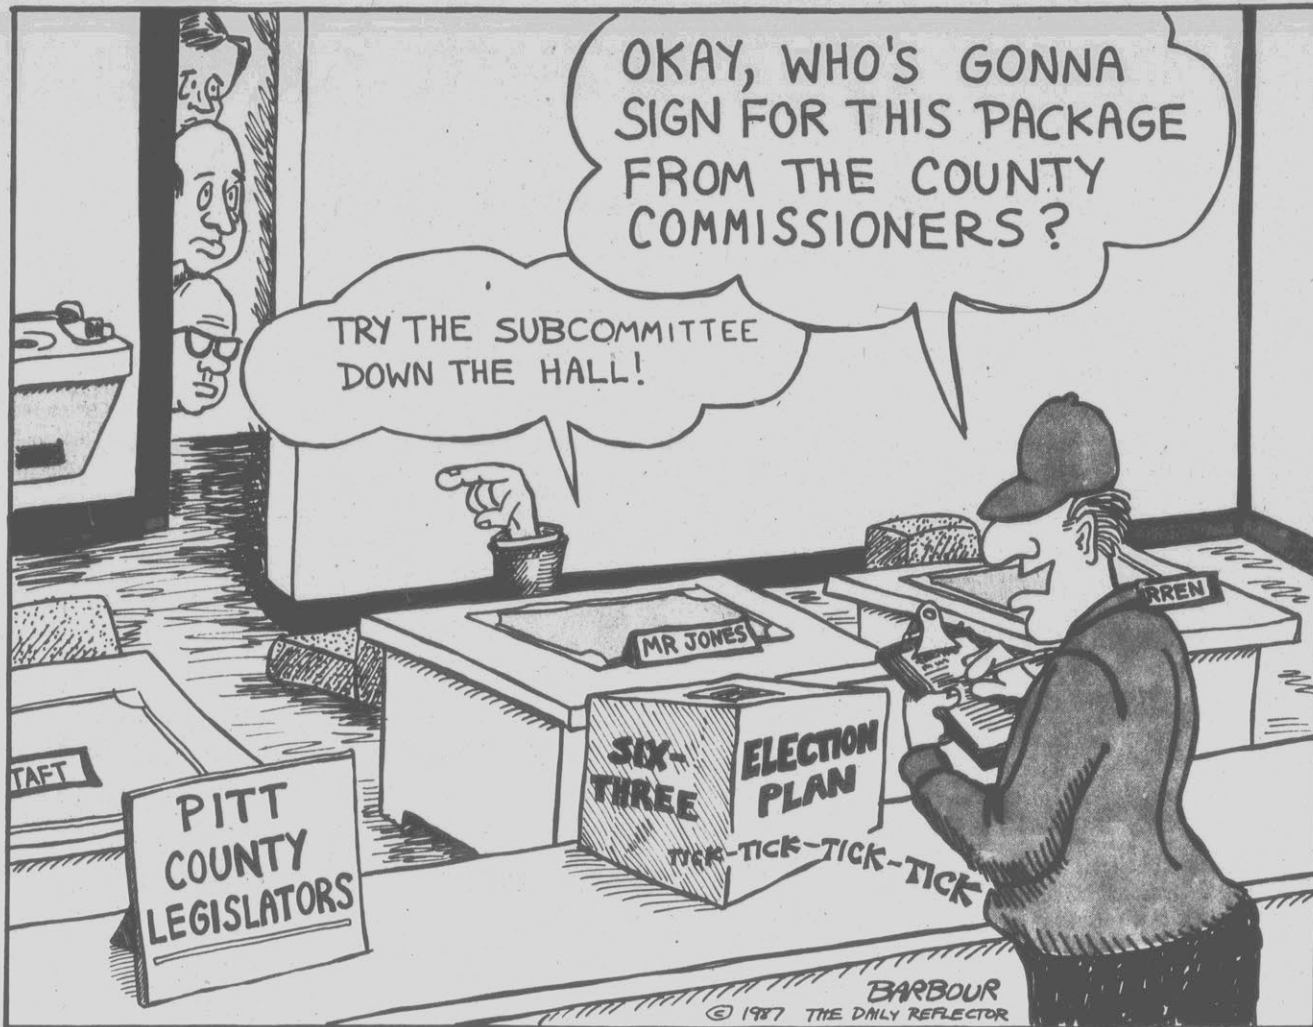

Redwine continued, "There were about 20 Mickey Mouse amendments floating about."

Undoubtedly no one really expected the bill to become law, even though the affected institutions receive state funds ranging from millions to hundreds of millions of dollars which are appropriated by the state legislature.

Anyway everybody won on this one. The legislators got a little relief from the pressing problems of how to fund the needs of the state. East Carolina showed it has many sympathetic supporters in the Legislature. Finally it was reinforced for the public as to just how firmly the major business of big time sports is entrenched at our universities.

Today's Thought

Vice President George Bush formally opened the 200th birthday party for the United States Constitution at Independence Hall in Philadelphia, complete with 30,000 balloons and 50,000 people. If the framers of the Constitution could see us now!

— Edward Luttwak —

Why Not Howard Baker?

WASHINGTON — Just because a politician's career has made him uniquely qualified to serve as our next president, it does not necessarily mean that he should be excluded from even trying to run for the office.

As Ronald Reagan's chief of staff, Howard H. Baker is now learning how the White House itself functions and, more important, the president's business beyond its walls: how to control the executive branch, deal with the media and cultivate public opinion. He is also learning how to cut deals with Congress — not at all the same thing as knowing Congress from the inside, in which Baker needs no instruction.

Nobody becomes prime minister in Great Britain without having served, usually for many years, as a Cabinet minister learning both how to run a government department and how the Cabinet itself works. Each senior minister is therefore the prime minister's understudy whether he seeks the office or not. And, of course, in all countries with parliamentary systems, no government leader can emerge without having survived the prolonged and intimate scrutiny of his colleagues.

In France, with a mixed system, presidents since de Gaulle have nevertheless come out of parliamentary careers, while in the very different conditions of the Soviet Union, it is the Politburo that trains the climbers of the greasy pole.

These various forms of political training do not guarantee talent, and may even exclude it; nor do they favor the exceptionally imaginative or the most energetic. But they do ensure a minimum of competence in dealing with normal problems in normal times.

Only in the United States is a politician expected to function successfully as president without having any previous training for the job, something that the vice presidency most definitely does not provide. As we all know, the vice president enjoys a fair amount of visibility, the chairmanship of important-sounding committees and a suggestive proximity to power. But by now we have learned not to await their rueful memoirs to discover that vice presidents have been firmly excluded from any real presidential business and from genuine experience of the office.

It is an old story that can by now be told in mere cliché, beginning with the fond invocation of the "more leisurely times" when presidents could still learn by trial and error, without intolerable consequences; then a grave recognition of the "exponentially increased complexity" of government that has so greatly increased the costs of inexperience; and finally the recitation of the names of one's own chosen examples of recent presidential failure. No permanent, constitutional solution is in sight, but by virtue of the Iran-contra scandal, at least the Republicans may have stumbled on a remedy this time around.

Unlike the vice president, the White House chief of staff is a genuine understudy, whose position inherently prepares him for the protagonist's role. That would be so even with a president whose "management style" was more activist than Ronald Reagan's. To be sure, most previous chiefs of staff had no record of elected office, no credibility as vote getters with their party (Gerald Ford's Richard Cheney, now a congressman of distinction, was a notable exception). But Howard Baker can claim an amplitude of electoral success. He was the first Republican elected to the Senate from Tennessee since Reconstruction, was reelected with large majorities in 1972 and 1978 and, in smaller but more telling elections, was twice chosen by his fellow senators as Senate minority leader and twice as majority leader, holding that office until he retired from the Senate.

Only in running for the Republican nomination in the 1980 race did Baker fail, and very badly. The man who was chosen four times as their leader by senators with whom he dealt every day, and who knew all his defects and virtues, could not project his personality and political expertise through the frenzied mechanisms of contemporary image-making and the marathon of the presidential primaries.

Whether the Republicans will have an opportunity to nominate Baker as their presidential candidate will, of course, depend on the outcome of the primaries in which he is not a contender; conceivably a deadlocked convention could simply give him the office he is so well qualified for, whether he seeks it or not. But that is a matter for the Republican delegates to decide if and when events allow them a deliberate choice.

For the rest of us, Howard Baker's story so far will give us a ready answer when foreign friends, amazed by the gross inexperience and unlikely background of the latest occupant of the White House, ask us how come our great democracy chooses such bizarre leaders. We too, we can say, have tested politicians well prepared by long experience for the office. It's just that we exclude them from running for the job because the very qualities a president needs also disqualify a candidate for his party's nomination.

Edward Luttwak, a senior fellow at the Center for Strategic and International Studies, served briefly in 1979 as a SALT II consultant to Republicans on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, including Howard Baker.

To the editor:

North Carolina should withdraw from the Southeast Compact. The Southeast Compact consists of an eight-state agreement, choosing North Carolina to receive all low-level radioactive nuclear waste from the eight states for the next 20 years. We should withdraw from the Southeast Compact for the following reasons:

1. Higher risks in transporting low-level radioactive nuclear waste from all over the Southeast.
2. There is no known "no-leak technology" available.
3. All existing low-level radioactive nuclear waste dumps now leak and cost taxpayers for clean up.
4. Smaller is safer, cleaner and easier to monitor.
5. Low-level radioactive nuclear waste dumps continue to leak after dumping stops.
6. The negative effects on tourism and economic development.

Representative Joe Mavretic has introduced a bill in the House to repeal the Southeast Compact (HB 35). There is also a House Bill to ban shallow land burial (HB 69). The deadline for legislation to be passed in at least one House is May 28. It is urgent that you take immediate action to have our legislators and elected officials support these bills. Call and write your representative, senators and Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan today. Legislative switchboard: 919-733-4111.

To the editor:

The people of Greenville are to be commended for their unselfish desire for racial balance in all Pitt County schools and for equal opportunities for all students.

This brings to mind another problem that needs to be addressed: North of the Tar River there is a school called North Pitt High School — a school that seems to have been forgotten — the only predominantly black high school in Pitt County.

Now, if the good people of Greenville are sincere in their burning desire for racial balance in all the schools, they will be delighted to do whatever it takes to correct the racial imbalance at North Pitt High School.

The solution is obvious and simple: There are many black students in the North Pitt attendance area who live very close to Greenville — much closer than to North Pitt. In fact, some of them live within the city limits of Greenville. These students could be assigned to the Greenville schools and an equal number of white students now attending the Greenville schools and living on the north side of town could be assigned to North Pitt.

I expect to see an immediate, concerted effort on the part of all Greenville residents to ensure that this problem is corrected. I also expect Mr. Paul Hartley and Dr. Tom Irons, who have been most vocal in their call for racial balance, to lead this effort.

Strength For Today

There are some men in the world who like nothing so much as the opportunity to confront a difficulty and overcome it.

Caleb was a man of this variety. We are told in the Book of Joshua that when he was an old man he came to Joshua, leader of the armies of Israel and requested that in the Promised Land he be given a mountainous section in which dwelt the Anakim, the wildest and most dangerous enemy which Israel had to confront. Caleb was then in his 80s. He was perfectly willing that other distinguished leaders be given fertile valleys where they could live in security. But as for himself, "Give me the mountain," he said, "in which the giants dwell. It may be that the Lord will be with me and I will drive them out."

That man has an admirable character indeed who covets the opportunity to perform a hard task.

House Approves Open Beer Ban

RALEIGH (AP) — The state House easily approved a bill designed to curb drunken driving and littering by banning open beers in automobiles.

The bill, sponsored by Rep. Coy Privette, R-Cabarrus, was approved 84-4 Monday and sent to the Senate after the House agreed to reduce a proposed 30-day maximum jail term to 24 hours of community service.

"I think it's unrealistic to think you can have a car full of people drinking and the driver won't be drinking," Privette said in explaining why the current law should be changed.

Privette said his bill "speaks to a real inconsistency in North Carolina law" that makes it illegal to possess an open 2-ounce mini bottle of liquor but says nothing about unlimited open beer.

Privette said the state Highway Patrol desperately needs help in enforcing the current law that bans open beers only for drivers.

"They stop an automobile. He (the driver) hands that container to a sweetheart and says, 'Here, you hold this until I get checked out.'"

Rep. Ivan Mothershead, R-Mecklenburg, proposed sending the bill back to a committee, saying he wasn't sure what it meant to allow transportation of beer only in the "manufacturer's unopened container."

"Unless you go to the manufacturer and get a two-ton flat of beer, you will not be able to get a beer and transport it in your car," he said.

Privette, however, said the current law includes bottles and cans in the definition and the motion to delay the bill was defeated 74-23.

The bill would allow a fine of $25 to $500, but the House voted 65-39 to change the prison sentence.

"I think that we need to begin to have a mindset that incarcerating people in jail is not necessarily the best strategy," said Rep. Anne Barnes, D-Orange, who offered the amendment.

Chatham Hospital Turns To Midwives As It Reopens Baby Delivery Service

By DENNIS PATTERSON
Associated Press Writer

SILER CITY, N.C. (AP) — After nearly a year with no obstetric services, Chatham Hospital got back into the baby business this month.

Two babies delivered May 14 and May 17 — one by a family practitioner and the other by a new gynecologist contracted by the hospital — were the first at the hospital since last July.

The hospital had stopped deliveries when the county's only obstetrician moved to Virginia. And when the doctor left, the hospital also had to close down its birthing center, which used three midwives who were backed up by the obstetrician.

"Everyone was really upset when it had to close down before," hospital personnel director Sandra McKinney said Friday. "I put an ad in the paper to make sure we would have enough RNs (registered nurses) to reopen our ob-gyn floor."

"But most of the calls I got were not from nurses, but from people who saw the ad and wanted to know if we had reopened," said Ms. McKinney. "Most of them were women wanting to have another baby and wanting to know if the midwives were coming back."

Ms. McKinney said the 68-bed hospital contracted with a Durham company to provide an obstetrician-gynecologist, in part because the county's family physicians were having to send their pregnant patients elsewhere for deliveries.

Family physicians, like midwives, are required to have an obstetrician for back-up in case of difficult deliveries or an emergency.

Ms. McKinney said the midwives — three of whom are expected to be working by August — will be employees of the hospital. Once a permanent obstetrician is recruited, she said, he may want to take over the entire practice, including the birthing center.

The midwife service, Ms. McKinney said, drew a lot of attention from areas outside Chatham County when it operated before. The two birthing rooms use queen-size or king-size beds instead of hospital beds. There are also couches for family members who can remain in the room during the delivery.

"It was really strange about the center when it was opened before," Ms. McKinney said. "We drew mostly from out of town. People in town seemed to want a doctor to deliver their baby and had the wrong impression that if you came to the birthing center you had to be delivered by a midwife."

"We're trying to make it clear this time that what we have is a full-scale women's health center and will have a doctor for deliveries if that is what they want," she said.

"Ever since the word got out that we're reopening, we've had people calling from out of town — Winston-Salem, Chapel Hill, even as far away as Virginia," she said. "I don't know why it was so popular, but the people that came here loved it."

"A lot of people who are calling say they won't come until we have 24-hour midwife coverage," she said. "They just say it's a different atmosphere here, I guess because we're a small hospital."

AT-HOME GRADUATE — Angela Wyatt, 17, may be the first student to graduate from high school under a home program that meets guidelines of state legislation passed in 1985. She was the top and bottom student in her class of one. (AP Laserphoto)

Home Education Can Be Lonely

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — Angela Wyatt wouldn't trade her senior year in high school with anyone in her class. That's because there's no one else in her class to share it with.

On May 8, Miss Wyatt became the first student in Fayetteville to graduate under a local organization's home instruction program since home study was legalized in North Carolina in 1985, according to the former president of the Fayetteville Association of Home Educators.

At commencement, Miss Wyatt felt as if all eyes were on her as she stepped up to deliver her valedictory speech at a local church. They were — she was the only one in the procession.

"It was kind of embarrassing," Miss Wyatt said of the attention. "I was a little behind, so I walked fast."

"She was the first to do it in Fayetteville," said Ginger E. Porter, who headed the association, a support group for at-home teaching. "The first for FAHE, anyway."

"The trend in the past was for people to keep (home schooling) low-key. There are no real records, since people did home educate before the law was actually passed," Ms. Porter said in an interview.

Miss Wyatt's father, L. Owen Wyatt, established Trinity Academy for his daughter's home education. As principal of the school, it was his priority "to extol the merit of the top person in his class." His top student was his only student: his daughter.

Katherine Fowler, the current president of Fayetteville Association of Home Educators, said 23 families in the Fayetteville area are registered for home instruction courses.

Officials with a state support group say it's hard to determine exactly how many students across North Carolina are opting for home instruction over traditional classroom education.

Susan VanDyke, an official with North Carolinians for Home Education, said there are 1,500 families on their mailing list, but many may not be active participants. Mrs. Fowler said, home schoolers make up "two-tenths of a percent of the students in North Carolina."

"But the number is growing. I think it's just a grass-roots movement," she said. "It's growing through churches, newspapers, magazine articles, through every way."

The idea of home education is to provide another option to public and private schools, Mrs. Fowler said. The Wyatts chose that option and Angela Wyatt left the traditional classroom after the ninth grade.

"When Mom and Dad first suggested home schooling, I thought 'sounds weird but OK,'" she said.

Miss Wyatt said she intends to major in elementary education at Columbia Bible College in Columbia, S.C., next year.

"I want to be able to teach my children at home," she said.

The freedom that home instruction offered was one reason Miss Wyatt supported home education.

"You can go at your own pace," she said. "You can go faster if you're gifted in a certain area. In traditional schools, you sit with the class until it's finished or you're pushed ahead."

She needed only to complete two of her 10 social studies workbooks before moving ahead. Geometry took a little longer, she said. The flexible schedule also gave her time to play the piano and to be secretary for her youth group.

But, she said, there were some down times.

"Like when I'm feeling lonely, and my friends are in school and I need to talk to someone," Miss Wyatt said, adding that she compensated by talking to people outside her own age group.

Miss Wyatt said she misses athletics and band, but she took aerobics with some ladies at the church and made crafts.

Meanwhile, her parents were running into problems with state regulations. "We had to get individual paper towels instead of using cloth ones," Miss Wyatt said.

"And we lost points (in a health inspection) for not having a water fountain," her mother, Nancy Wyatt added. "The state also required separate rest-rooms for boys and girls. But we only had one bathroom."

Fire drills also were required.

Glider Hits Crowd

ELIZABETH CITY, N.C. (AP) — Five people were injured when a hang glider that was taking part in a Memorial Day festival was blown into a crowd of spectators Monday, authorities say.

About 1,000 people were at the Waterfront Park when Gordon M. Ivey of Lanexa, Va., took off about 1:45 p.m., according to Elizabeth City Police Chief W.C. Owens.

"He had taken off and the wind blew him back into a tree," Owens said. "Then he fell back into the crowd."

Ivey was not injured, Owens said. The five injured spectators were taken to Albemarle Hospital where they were treated and released, according to nursing supervisor Diana Johnson.

Janet Malone, 3, of Elizabeth City, suffered a head injury when she was knocked off a picnic table, according to Owen. He said Aliene Stanberry, 63, of Camden, had suffered hip injuries and cuts to her forehead.

Jasen Derr, 12, Paul Runez, 12, and Michelle Kilek, 16, all of Elizabeth City, also suffered injuries, Owens said.

Tropical Depression Shaping Up

MIAMI (AP) — Forecasters tracking the first tropical depression of the 1987 Atlantic hurricane season east of the Bahamas today said they didn't expect it to strengthen any time soon.

The depression, which formed Monday, was centered near 25.5 north latitude and 68.3 west longitude, or about 375 miles east of the central Bahamas at 6 a.m. EDT, according to an advisory from the National Hurricane Center in Coral Gables.

Maximum winds were near 35 mph with higher gusts in squalls north of the center, according to the advisory, which said further strengthening, if any, would be slow to occur.

An Air Force reconnaissance plane was scheduled to investigate the depression, which was slowly drifting toward the north northeast, again later today.

The depression developed from a low pressure system spotted several days ago near Puerto Rico and the Dominican Republic, according to hurricane specialist Gil Clark.

"It's a little early, but every year or so we get storms that form in May," he said.

Taft Bill Advances

RALEIGH (AP) — A carefully balanced compromise bill designed to improve North Carolina's workers' compensation laws sailed through the Senate after lawmakers rejected a last-minute change.

Sen. Tom Taft, D-Pitt, said his bill "is legislation the little man wants" and applauded the Senate's 47-0 vote on the bill, which will go to the House today.

Sen. R.P. "Bo" Thomas, D-Henderson, proposed amending the bill to delete a provision that bars death benefits to a widow who remarries. He said widows under the current law can cohabit with a member of the opposite sex without penalty.

"I think we've got enough sin in North Carolina without encouraging more," he said.

The amendment was defeated 37-11 and the bill was approved and sent to the House.

Retirees Man Police Desk

GRAHAM (AP) — Pauline McCraw was retired when she got the idea to take calls and parking fines for the Graham Police Department, and when her husband couldn't take the job, she got her chance.

Mrs. McCraw, 74, is one of seven part-time employees, most of them retirees, who staff the desk and phones at night and on weekends at the Graham Police Department. That frees the sworn officers of the 16-member force to be on the streets.

Police Chief William Miles instituted the program as the department was switching over to Alamance County's central communications system.

Mrs. McCraw works three nights a week for a total of 91 hours a month. The job pays $4.10 an hour, compared with a starting salary of $15,646, or about $7.52 per hour, for certified officers. Because it is part-time work, employees do not receive city benefits.

Bakkers May Face Eviction

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Jim and Tammy Bakker reportedly are being evicted from the one house they call home — a $413,000 estate in Tega Cay owned by PTL, where they docked their 43-foot houseboat.

"The Bakkers have asked me to help them find a place to store their furniture or a place to live until they can find out what God's will for their lives is," family friend Joanne Thompson said in an interview published in today's editions of The State newspaper.

The new management of the PTL has ordered the Bakkers to be out of home by mid-June, Mrs. Thompson said Monday. She said Bakker told her in a 30-minute telephone conversation on Friday that he had just received the eviction notice.

The couple has been living in Palm Springs, Calif., since shortly after Bakker handed over the PTL ministry to the Rev. Jerry Falwell on March 19, the day before Bakker admitting having a sexual encounter with a New York church secretary in 1980.

Judge Upholds Damage Award

WILMINGTON (AP) — A federal judge has ruled that a jury in Wilmington did not award excessive damages when it made a $133,000 judgment against a Carolina Beach police officer who was sued for the wrongful arrest of a South Carolina woman.

In making his ruling, U.S. District Judge W. Earl Britt denied a motion by lawyers for Sgt. Andrew Dicksey asking for a new trial on the grounds that the amount of damages awarded last January was excessive.

The case has been appealed to the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Richmond, Va.

In 1984, records showed that Dicksey arrested Diana Sevigny, a young, divorced mother of two who was living at Carolina Beach. She had called police to report an accident that occurred when her small son switched on her car's ignition, causing it to lurch into a garage door.

Dicksey testified during the trial of the lawsuit that he didn't believe Ms. Sevigny's story, so he arrested her on charges of willful and wanton property damage and child abuse. Ms. Sevigny was jailed, and her children were handed over to the Department of Social Services.

The criminal charges against Ms. Sevigny were later dismissed, and her children were returned to her.

State Employees Favor HMOs

RALEIGH (AP) — The General Assembly's decision on whether the state employee health plan will include health maintenance organizations as an option is still pending, but the workers have indicated overwhelming pleasure with the system.

In the past five years, 320,000 North Carolinians have joined HMOs. In the past year, three new HMOs began operation in the state. When 47,000 state employees were told this month that legislators had decided to cancel their HMO plans after one year, they raised a ruckus that send lawmakers scurrying to reconsider.

"The people who are in HMOs were by and large satisfied," said Durwood Gunnells, executive director of the State Employees Association of North Carolina.

Salk Challenges Student Group

DURHAM (AP) — Students must develop self-discipline and self-restraint because the world needs a new generation to build a new reality, Dr. Jonas Salk told a group of young people honored for their academic achievement.

Salk, who developed the polio vaccine in 1955, challenged the junior high school age students to be "creative contributors."

"You are the ones who will give back to this world more than you have received," Salk said during ceremonies to honor the students for their high scores Scholastic Aptitude Test or the Test of Standard Written English.

He said each student attending Sunday's ceremony at Duke University should have a "sense of responsibility for yourselves and others. You need to begin to recognize your rights and responsibilities as humans.

"You need self-discipline for self-development. Self-restraint is also required. Not for moral reasons but out of necessity, the necessity for us to become even more human," Salk said.

Car Sets Off Fatal Fire

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — At least one person was killed and a Fayetteville building supply business was extensively damaged by fire Monday night after a car veered off a local street and struck a gas tank, causing an explosion, authorities said.

Identity of the victim, a man, was not available. At least one other person, possibly a passenger in the car, was being treated at Highsmith-Rainey, according to officials.

Police spokesman Lt. Josh Phillips said the driver was believed to have suffered a seizure. His vehicle left the road and hit a gas tank at the building, causing the tank to explode and the fire to ignite.

ACQUITTED — Former Labor Secretary Raymond J. Donovan, accompanied by his wife, Catherine, speaks to reporters in New York Monday after a jury acquitted him of all charges. Donovan had been charged with larceny and fraud in a New York subway contract. (AP Laserphoto)

Former Labor Secretary Wins Acquittal In N.Y.

NEW YORK (AP) — Calling his faith in justice renewed, former U.S. Labor Secretary Raymond J. Donovan emerged exultant yet bitter from his acquittal of charges that made him the first sitting Cabinet member ever indicted.

"Which office do I go to to get my reputation back?" asked Donovan after a state jury found him innocent Monday of the larceny and fraud charges that forced him from office more than two years ago.

The jury found Donovan, seven co-defendants and two companies innocent of all charges that they stole $7.4 million in a Manhattan subway construction contract from 1979 to 1984.

The verdict, after 9½ hours of deliberations during two days, capped a complex and contentious eight-month trial at state Supreme Court. After the jury was dismissed, some jurors offered harsh critiques of prosecutor Stephen R. Bookin's case.

"There was no case. There was no evidence there. There was no proof," said Rosa Edwards, a 55-year-old postal clerk. She said of Donovan, "He should not have been brought down."

The case involved Donovan's position as co-owner of Schiavone Construction Co. of Secaucus, N.J. While unrelated to his government service, it forced his resignation as labor secretary in March 1985, six months after his indictment.

"A 2½-year nightmare that began in September of 1984 is now behind us," Donovan said. "The jury has reawakened my faith in our system. It was shattered here for nine months."

Donovan, 56, a former seminarian, made the sign of the cross as the verdict was read by the jury's forewoman, Rosa Milligan. His wife, Catherine, seated behind him, wept into a handkerchief.

When it acquitted him of the last of the 10 counts he faced — one of grand larceny and nine of keeping and filing false business records — Donovan turned to the jury, nodded and silently mouthed, "Thank you."

Charged with Donovan were five other Schiavone executives and the co-owners of a minority-owned subcontractor: black Democratic state Sen. Joseph Galiber and William P. Masselli, a reputed organized crime associate.

The defendants and their families greeted the acquittals with emotion and glee. Several defendants' wives and one defense lawyer wept. When Justice John P. Collins thanked the jurors, the defendants and their lawyers applauded.

Afterward, Donovan spoke bitterly of the charges against him, which he had said from the start were politically motivated to embarrass President Reagan before the 1984 election.

When asked if he would serve in government again, Donovan replied: "I will not."

Reagan, in Washington, voiced pleasure of the acquittal. "I have always known Ray Donovan as a man of integrity and I am happy to see this verdict," he said in a statement. "I have never lost confidence in him."

The defense called no witnesses, arguing simply that no crime was committed and that Bookin and Bronx District Attorney Mario Merola had acted out of personal ambition.

At a news conference Monday evening, Merola called charges of political motivation "absolute nonsense."

"We have to accept the verdict," Merola said. "There's got to be winners and losers and unfortunately we can't win all the time."

Bookin, who spent 3½ years developing and presenting the case, left the courtroom without comment.

Two Quakes Shake California Coast

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — A mild earthquake and an aftershock shook the East Bay area today, setting off calls to police and radio stations from residents jittery from a larger temblor that struck in the area earlier this month.

Today's first earthquake struck at 12:01 a.m. and had a 3.4 reading on the Richter scale of ground motion, said Anthony Lomax of the University of California seismographic station in Berkeley. An aftershock measuring 3 on the Richter scale followed at 12:59 a.m.

The quake and aftershock were centered in the San Leandro Hills about 10 miles southeast of Berkeley and two miles north of Lake Chabot.

The tremors took place about five miles from the center of a May 10 earthquake that measured 4.3 on the Richter scale, Lomax said.

That quake, which was also felt in San Francisco, caused no major damage but resulted in numerous calls to police stations from worried members of the public.

No injuries or damage was reported after the latest quakes, but Oakland Police Sgt. Leonard White said police headquarters received numerous calls.

"The antenna here shook but it was pretty mild," he said.

San Francisco radio station KGO said it had received calls from scores of people throughout the East Bay area.

The Richter scale is a measure of ground motion as recorded on seismographs. Every increase of one number means a tenfold increase in the strength of the shaking. Thus a reading of 7.5 reflects an earthquake 10 times stronger than one of 6.5.

A quake of a magnitude of 2 is the smallest normally felt by humans. A 3.5 earthquake can cause slight damage and a 4.0 can cause moderate damage.

Acid Rain Foes Top '86 Spending On Capitol Hill

By DAVID GOELLER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Acid rain control legislation barely got out of the starting gate in Congress last year, but that didn't stop energy industry foes from winning the Capitol Hill lobbyist spending sweepstakes for 1986.

The Citizens for Sensible Control of Acid Rain said its lobbying costs totaled $3,028,235, the biggest single chunk of the nearly $60.9 million that individuals and groups said they spent while trying to influence Congress.

The organization, bankrolled largely by electricity and coal companies, paid out most of the money for mass mailings designed to prompt citizens to tell lawmakers they oppose mandating stricter emissions controls on coal-fired boilers.

After spending nothing in the first three months of the year, the acid rain group began moving quickly after some 160 House members became co-sponsors of an acid rain control bill drafted by Reps. Gerry Sikorski, D-Minn., and Henry Waxman, D-Calif.

The legislation was approved at midyear by the Energy and Commerce health subcommittee, but that's as far as it got, eventually expiring in the full committee. In the Senate, an acid rain bill never came up for a committee vote.

Tom Buckmaster, the Washington public relations man who serves as the lobbying group's part-time executive director, declined to say how many pieces of mail were dispatched around the nation.

He also said that "it's too early to tell" how much the group will spend this year, when control advocates on both sides of Congress plan to make a far more concerted effort to get the issue to the floor.

The acid rain lobbyists won the spending sweepstakes by half a nose. In second place last year at $3,011,412 was another mass-mail operation, the controversial National Committee to Preserve Social Security and Medicare.

Some members of Congress close to these issues accuse this group of using scare tactics to get senior citizens to contribute to its operations, which last year deluged Capitol Hill with an estimated 8 million pieces of correspondence.

Both the National Committee and the acid rain lobbyists easily surpassed the previous high spending of $2,087,586 by the Natural Gas Supply Association in 1984.

The aggregate lobbyist spending of $60,869,183, compiled from reports filed with the House clerk and Senate secretary, was almost 25 percent higher than the total that lobbyists spent in 1985 and nearly 45 percent above 1984 levels.

The big outlay, fueled by the huge stakes riding on the tax revision package, worked out to an average of about $113,700 for each House and Senate member.

According to the required spending reports, little of the lobbying money is spent directly on members. Much of it goes for staff salaries, to hire lawyers to visit congressional offices and to pay office overhead.

Doctor Claims There's No Blood Like Your Own

DEAR ABBY: I was glad to see a letter concerning self-blood donating, since this is an important topic few people know much about.

Many patients are nervous about contracting AIDS should they require a transfusion during surgery. Blood bankers worry more about patients contracting certain forms of hepatitis from blood transfusions than they do about AIDS because the sophisticated blood-screening techniques used today have greatly reduced the likelihood of AIDS transmission.

There are other good reasons for self-donation that you might like to let your readers know about. Your own blood is the safest blood you can receive during transfusion. It cannot transmit an illness to you, will not cause allergic or other transfusion reactions, and compatibility testing is not necessary. Even if you have been turned down as a donor in the past, you may still qualify for self-donation since ordinary donor standards don't apply in this case.

Readers facing an operation should consult with their surgeon ahead of time as to whether self-donation is recommended. Blood can be stored for 35 days, so plans for self-donation should be made with this in mind. Blood may be drawn up to five days before surgery, leaving ample time to ensure that more than one unit can be collected from most patients. Obviously, not all those undergoing surgery will require a transfusion, but when the possibility is anticipated, self-donation provides an important measure of safety and security for the patient. — PAUL E. KALISH, M.D., COMMUNITY HOSPITAL, GLEN COVE, N.Y.

DEAR DR. KALISH: Thank you

Dear Abby

for a valuable contribution to this space.

DEAR ABBY: I am 17 years old and will graduate from high school in two weeks. The other day after I got off work, I went over to my boyfriend's house to visit for a few minutes. (He's 21.) His parents were not home at the time. I'd been there for about 20 minutes, when my dad drove up looking for me. He yelled at me in front of my boyfriend, took my car away for the weekend, told my boyfriend not to come to my house anymore, and that I was never to go to his house again. We weren't doing anything, Abby, just talking. I was totally innocent of any wrongdoing.

Now, my dad said that if you agreed that I was innocent, he would reconsider. Please let me know what you think as soon as possible. — WAITING IN BEAVER, UTAH

DEAR WAITING: Innocent of what? If you were told by your parents that you were not to go to your boyfriend's home unless his parents were there, you were not innocent — in fact, you were guilty of disobeying your parents.

CONFIDENTIAL TO LIKES TO GAMBLE: The person who says, "Trust everybody, but always cut the cards," is really saying, "Trust nobody." And the person who trusts nobody is judging everybody by his own character.

Parents Need 'Shot' For DYN Gene

A few years ago, I reported a breakthrough in childhood behavior with the discovery of the DYN gene (Drives You Nuts!). The theory was that some children are born with a proclivity for unscheduled adventure that makes parents want to sit in a fetal position under the sink and braid their own hair.

There were skeptics, of course, who wanted to believe all of it was a "phase." They contended their children climbed the walls from boredom or got a little crazy when they hit the sugar a little too often. Many of them are converts to the DYN theory.

Take the case of the family traveling through Illinois with their 3 1/2-year-old child in the back seat. When the child complained of a "bellyache," the mother rummaged through her purse and said, "Here's a baby aspirin for it." Minutes later, the child complained again and said it wasn't working. When the mother turned around, the youngster had the aspirin stuck in her navel. There was laughter at first as the mother reached

At Wits End

ed over the front seat and tried to remove the tablet. She couldn't. They pulled the car off the road and both began to work in earnest. Finally, the father had to get a pair of long-nose pliers out of the tool box to remove the aspirin. Today, she is a believer.

There was the mother of six who went on a business trip with her husband. The third day out, their housekeeper noted a strong, unpleasant odor in one of the kid's rooms. There, lying flat on its back, feet extended upward, was the family's pet hamster who had obviously bought the farm. She anguished how to tell the 8-year-old of its demise. When he arrived home, she said gently, "Herbie passed away today and has gone to that big lawn of wood chips in the sky."

The 8-year-old looked at her and said, "Oh no, Clara, Herbie's been dead since Monday."

One mother said her son's DYN gene didn't develop until he was 12. Then it was knit potholders time. He never passed a roof without climbing to the top of it, explored drainpipes all over the city and rode skateboards to speed up the aging process in those who watched him.

Mark had the gene. When he was 22 months, his mother changed training pants 35 times a day. When summer arrived, she had a great idea. She put him outside and let him water everything in sight. When winter came, Mark was trained ... but he went to the front door every time he had to potty. She figures if she can potty train the dog, she'll be ahead of the game.

I have survived three children with DYN factor. They built campfires in the base of trees, took my bra to school for "Show and Tell," and poured Orange Crush into a boiling radiator.

Hopefully, science can come up with a new sedative ... a shot in the hip minutes before you are to deliver that will wear off when the kid is out of high school.

Diet Pill System Sweeping U.S.

Super Dream Pill Guaranteed Weight Loss

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH — According to a review of customers' files, here's what people are saying about the amazing, vastly improved "new version" of the world famous Dream Pill System for fast, guaranteed weight loss featuring Super Lite Dreams tablets:

"I lost 25 lbs. with a 30 day supply." Mrs. J.N.S., Ft. Payne, AL.

"Losing 1 lb. per day." Mr. J.G., Pineville, KY.

"I've lost 34 lbs. and I'm still losing." Mrs. J.K., Garden Grove, CA.

"I have been on Dream Pill for one month and feel great ... have lost 27 lbs." Mr. A.D., Anadarko, OK.

The System's Dream Pill combines two natural substances called L-arginine and L-ornithine which can stimulate the body's production of growth hormone. Diet researchers believe that growth hormone may be what's responsible for allowing teenagers to down thousands of calories in hamburgers and other foods and still be thin as a rail.

Growth Hormone is present in people up through the teenage years, then slowly diminishes with age. But L-arginine and L-ornithine make the body "think" it belongs to a teenager again, allowing adults to eat as much as they want — and still be thin and wiry.

Life Extension Authors Confirm Results

Durk Pearson and Sandy Shaw, graduates of MIT and UCLA respectively, introduced these miracle substances to the public in their runaway best selling book, Life Extension. Much to her amazement, while taking L-arginine for its healing effects on a broken foot, Sandy lost 25 pounds of fat and put on 5 pounds of firm-toned muscle in six weeks. According to Durk's calculations, the pill caused Sandy to lose 400 times as much fat as she would otherwise have lost — without dieting!

BROILERS: The North Carolina fob dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 48.50 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pounds birds, with a final weighted average of 44.57. The market tone for next week's trading is steady. The live supply is adequate for a moderate demand. Average weights desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Tuesday was 1,828,000, compared to 1,959,000 last Tuesday.

HENS: Market lower. Supply burdensome for moderate demand. Prices paid per pound, day of negotiation generally for slaughter the following week, heavy types, 7 pounds and up, 6 cents at farm with buyer loading.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market advanced smartly in early trading today, as recent concern about inflationary pressures began to wane.

Bail Ban Reinstated

Today's ruling overturned a decision last July 3 by the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New York City. The appeals court ruled that Anthony "Fat Tony" Salerno, reputed boss of the Genovese crime family, students at the Brookline elementary school Kennedy attended. Powers was a political operative in Charlestown, his working-class neighborhood, in the spring of 1946 when he first met the future president, then a boyish-looking 29-year-old World War II veteran seeking a congressional seat. "People would say to me over in Bunker Hill, 'He's a great guy, but a millionaire's son from Harvard won't get a hundred votes over here,'" Powers recalled. That was just what Powers thought when Kennedy first came to his apartment. But Kennedy, knowing he needed help in working-class neighborhoods, persuaded Powers to attend a speech the following week before a group of mothers who had lost sons in World War II. "I was really overwhelmed," Powers recalled. "Jack was so disarming, to meet him was to like him and to know him was to want to help him. I've never known anyone in politics like that." Powers helped JFK win that first campaign, and was with him as he defeated Republican Henry Cabot Lodge in the 1952 Senate race, then in 1960 in the presidential race against Richard M. Nixon.

Kennedy

Powers, as a special assistant to the president, often was at JFK's side, swimming with him daily, playing games in the White House with the president's son and traveling with Kennedy around the world. On Nov. 22, 1963, Powers was riding in the presidential motorcade when he heard two shots ring out, then saw the president slump down. A few moments later, a third shot smashed into Kennedy's head. As they wheeled the stricken president into the emergency room, Powers recalled in his book, the aide said, "Oh my God, Mr. President, what did they do?" "Dave, he's dead," said the president's wife, Powers, noticing for the first time JFK's fixed, vacant stare, broke down in tears.

the County Commissioners, the NAACP and the Concerned Citizens for Justice, two groups protesting the six-three plan.

Meanwhile, the N.C. Senate Election Laws Committee will meet Wednesday to discuss a companion bill that was introduced in the Senate.

VOA

When asked why they stopped now, he said jamming "is inconsistent with the spirit of glasnost." Wick said 30 million to 40 million Soviets listen to VOA broadcasts, which include news and entertainment programs.

The Soviets have jammed them since August 1980, when U.S.-Soviet relations deteriorated following the December 1979 deployment of Soviet troops in Afghanistan.

Jamming of Radio Free Europe and Radio Liberty continues, said Malcolm S. Forbes Jr., chairman of the Board for International Broadcasting that oversees the two stations. VOA broadcasts worldwide in English and regionally in local languages, while Radio Free Europe and Radio Liberty broadcast only to the East bloc.

Forbes said engineers had "established that at least two of the Soviet jammers previously aimed at VOA have been redirected against Radio Free Europe/Radio Liberty frequencies."

"We welcome the fact that the U.S.S.R. is no longer jamming the Voice of America. A more convincing demonstration of glasnost, however, would be a Soviet decision to cease all jamming," he said.

"Radio Free Europe/Radio Liberty has been the main target of Soviet jamming for decades. More than 70 percent of the total Soviet jamming effort is aimed at RFERL."

Like Wick, Verner said he didn't know why the Soviets had stopped.

"They haven't told us. They don't tell us when they start and they don't tell us when they quit," he said. "We're glad they turned off their jammers, but on the other hand they should not have turned them on in the first place."

Bodies Return Home

DOVER AIR FORCE BASE, Del. (AP) — The remains of 36 sailors who died half a world away on the USS Stark were returned home today to be prepared for burial.

A C-141 carrying the bodies left Rhein-Main Air Force Base near Frankfurt, West Germany, at 10:39 p.m. EDT Monday and completed the sad journey at 8 a.m. today, said a Dover official.

The hangar known as Memorial Hall was ready for the arrival of the flag-draped coffins at this base, site of the nation's largest mortuary east of the Mississippi.

Later, four seven-member teams of pallbearers formed from a Navy honor guard from Washington began carrying the coffins into the hangar.

A 15-minute ceremony honoring the men killed in the May 17 Iraqi missile attack in the Persian Gulf was to be held this afternoon, with the playing of the national anthem, an invocation, a benediction, hymns and a speech by Adm. Carlisle A.H. Trost, chief of Naval Operations, base officials said.

Navy Lt. Cmdr. John Woodhouse, a Pentagon spokesman helping staff a news media center here, said 12 to 13 families were expected to attend.

Thirty-seven sailors were killed in the attack on the Stark.

Thirty-five have been identified. The name of the 36th was not released at the direction of the family, Woodhouse said, and those remains were being shipped directly from Dover to the sailor's home because his family did not want to participate in the ceremony.

American Diplomats Wounded

ed States and Israel of joining "a conspiracy ... to liquidate the Palestinian cause."

Two of the attacks occurred in Maadi, about seven miles south of Cairo, where many diplomats of the United States and other countries live.

The ministry said Williams and Huckle suffered superficial injuries and were released after first-aid treatment at a hospital.

The embassy spokesman, in keeping with embassy regulations, refused to identify himself further or to identify the third American in the car.

Mohammed Reda, an Egyptian member of the embassy security unit, said at the scene that the assailants fled in a French-made, green Peugeot station wagon.

Reda said, "We do not know whether they followed them (the Americans) or were lying in wait, but it appears that it was planned in advance. Until now we don't know who they are, but they did not look like Egyptians."

Reda said witnesses described one assailant as "very ugly."

The attack occurred as the Americans were driving to work from Maadi to the embassy in downtown Cairo.

As reconstructed by embassy officials, the assailants pulled alongside the Americans' vehicle in a station wagon, tried to force the Americans to the side of the road and then opened fire.

Second Quarter Blitz Lifts Los Angeles To 133-102 Victory As Lakers Sweep

SEATTLE (AP) — Michael Cooper can't remember the Los Angeles Lakers ever playing better.

A devastating 22-5 blitz in the second quarter of Monday's 133-102 victory over Seattle gave the Lakers a sweep of the NBA Western Conference finals and sent a strong message to the Detroit Pistons and the Boston Celtics, who are tied 2-2 in the Eastern Conference finals.

"That was about the best I've ever seen us play," Cooper said. "This is about the quickest team, man for man, that I've ever played on."

"They've got so much more energy than they had last season," said Seattle's Maurice Lucas, who was with the Lakers last season. "They're at least two steps better."

The Lakers led 46-40 with 6:51 left in the second quarter after a 10-3 run by Seattle. Then came the Lakers' spurt in a 5:48 span that put the Sonics away.

The Lakers made nine of 10 field goal attempts during the run, including seven layups, a dunk by James Worthy and a 3-point field goal by Byron Scott for a 68-45 lead with 1:03 left in the half. The Sonics could get no closer than 17 points in the second half.

"We are a team of spurts," Lakers Coach Pat Riley said. "We just got a good run going."

Beaten by a total of 14 points in the first three games of the series, the Sonics did everything they could to stop the fast-breaking, ballhawking Lakers in the second quarter.

Nothing worked. Worthy, who led the Lakers with 26 points, scored five points as did Scott. Magic Johnson, 40-year-old Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and A.C. Green each had four points in the back-breaking spurt.

"We tried everything we could," Seattle Coach Bernie Bickerstaff said. "But they had an answer for everything we tried to do. The Lakers are the best team in professional basketball."

Johnson had 21 points and 12 assists while Green and Scott each finished with 19 points. Tom Chambers led Seattle with 20 points, 15 in the first half.

By winning their 11th of 12 playoff games this season, the Lakers advanced to the championship series. The finals will start either Sunday or June 2, depending on whether the Celtics-Pistons series goes six or seven games.

Riley and the Lakers took their sweep over the Sonics matter-of-factly.

Riley said his players won't be happy unless they win the NBA title. Houston beat the Lakers 4-1 in the conference final last season.

"I don't really care who we meet," Riley said. "I'm just happy that we're going to be there."

It makes a difference to Cooper who wins the Detroit-Boston series, though. He wants to meet archrival Boston, led by nemesis Larry Bird.

"I could lie to you but, yes, I want to go back and play Boston," he said.

Johnson, the league's MVP this season, says it doesn't make any difference which team Los Angeles faces for the championship.

"All I know is that the Seattle series prepared us well for anyone we're going to play," he said.

Nobody is playing better for the Lakers than the exciting 6-foot-9 Worthy, who averaged 30.5 points in the four games against Seattle.

Worthy says the Lakers want to put the bitter memory of last season's playoff loss to Houston out of their minds and the way to do it is to win their fourth NBA title since 1980.

"The Houston loss last year really stuck in our minds," he said. "We learned from it rather than dwelling on the negative aspect of it."

"Everybody wrote this team off at the first of the year, but there was a battle cry last year after Houston beat us," Riley said. "The difference between this year's team and last year's team is our attitude. We wanted to get it done. We still do."

The Lakers did an outstanding defensive job on Sonics' playoff hero Dale Ellis. He had only two points at halftime and finished with 12 in Game 4. But Ellis and the Sonics were happy to get to the conference final after the team won 39 regular-season games, 26 fewer than the Lakers.

"The Lakers have been together for a number of years," Ellis said. "We had nine new players this season. We're going to build on this. Our future is very bright."

The Sonics eliminated Midwest Division champion Dallas and Houston before being ousted by the Lakers, winners over Denver and Golden State in their first two playoff series.

Perry's Hitting, Clark's Misplays Help Braves Win

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

The Atlanta Braves got the help of two first basemen in their biggest scoring binge in two years.

Atlanta's Gerald Perry drove in two runs, including a go-ahead single in the fifth inning, as the Braves routed St. Louis 14-5 Monday night.

St. Louis' Jack Clark, meanwhile, tied a major-league record for first basemen by making three errors in the second inning — helping Atlanta score five runs.

In other games, Cincinnati beat Chicago 5-4, New York staged off San Francisco 8-7, Houston trounced Pittsburgh 7-2, Montreal defeated Los Angeles 3-1 and Philadelphia downed San Diego 6-4.

The Braves ripped a season-high 17 hits. They had six doubles, including two by Glenn Hubbard, a triple by Ken Oberkfell and Ozzie Virgil's solo home run, his 15th. Hubbard, who had three hits, and Albert Hall each drove in two runs in Atlanta's highest-scoring game since beating Cincinnati 17-9 on May 1, 1985.

Vikes Are Rained Out

HOLLYWOOD — D.H. Conley's Vikings were rained out Monday night in their first round 3-A State Baseball Playoff game with Southern Nash.

The two teams were to try again tonight at 8 p.m. at Conley.

Elsewhere, Washington's game at Bertie was also rained out. It, too, has been rescheduled for tonight.

In other games set for tonight, North Pitt visits Williamston in the 2-A ranks while Ayden-Grifton is at Roanoke Rapids in another 2-A game.

Rose High School plays host to Southern Wayne in a 4-A contest, set for 8 p.m.

"I've been able to stay in there, even when I went 7-for-60 earlier this year," said Perry, who has taken over for Bob Horner at first base for Atlanta. "When you get that kind of support, you have to produce eventually."

Perry had two hits and drew two walks, raising his average 14 points to .228.

"I guess he's the first baseman now," Tanner said. "He's played there more than anybody else. He never let up, even when he wasn't hitting."

Clark, an average fielder, tied a dubious record held by five other first basemen with his second-inning miscues.

He misplayed a grounder by Hall for the first error and followed by committing a double error, failing to catch a throw that would have completed an inning-ending double play and then throwing the ball into left field.

With the score 5-5 in the fifth, Perry and Bruce Benedict hit RBI singles. Pinch-hitter Ken Griffey and Hubbard had two-run doubles in a five-run seventh inning. Virgil homered and Hall hit an RBI single in the ninth.

The host Cardinals scored twice in the first inning, aided by third baseman Ken Oberkfell's error, and Willie McGee's three-run double made it 5-5 in the third.

Greene Wins; Chargers, Conley Both Suffer Losses

AHOSKIE — Greene Central's girls' softball team had little trouble in its first round of competition in the State 2-A playoffs Monday night.

The Lady Rams romped over Northeastern Conference runner-up Ahoskie, 15-2, to gain the second round of the playoffs. Greene Central is the runner-up in the Eastern Plains Conference.

The Lady Rams pushed over a run in the first, but Ahoskie countered that.

In the second, however, Greene Central struck for five runs which Ahoskie never countered. Angel Harrell opened with a single and Missy Poole doubled. Both of them scored on a double by Joy Albritton. Sabrina Becton singled in Albritton and Latisha Warren doubled. Jenny Har-dison then doubled in both Becton and Warren for a 6-1 lead.

The Lady Rams added two in the third, three in the fifth and four in the sixth while Ahoskie got only one more, than in the second.

Christy Warren led Greene Central's hitting with four while Har-dison, Harrell, Poole and Becton each had two. Erika Craig had three to lead Ahoskie.

The Lady Rams improve to 18-5 and will face Northeastern Conference champion Williamston in the second round of play. The date and time of that game had not been set this morning.

WILLIAMSTON — Williamston cruised past Ayden-Grifton, 7-1, in the opening round of the state high school 2A softball playoffs Monday.

The Lady Tigers pushed across four runs in the third. Keisha Moore singled and then scored on a three-base error. Kristi Barber singled. Lynne Cowan reached on an error. Shelley Harrington reached on a fielder's choice that put out Cowan.

Wendy Johnson then singled home Barber to make it 2-0. Myra Brown singled in Harrington and C.J. Lilly followed that by singling home Johnson.

Ayden-Grifton's only run was scored by Juanita Murphy, who had reached on a fielder's choice and moved up on an error. Tammy Brown singled Murphy home from third.

The Lady Tigers improve to 12-1 and play Greene Central on a date to be decided. Ayden-Grifton ends up with a 7-8 overall record.

STANHOPE — With the game well in hand, D.H. Conley's Valkyries self-destructed in the final innings as Southern Nash rallied from a 5-1 deficit to take a 9-8 eight-inning victory in the first round of the state 3-A softball playoffs Monday.

Conley took the lead in the first with two runs and added three more in the third. Southern came back to score one in the second and trailed 5-1 at that point.

In the fifth inning, Southern put two runners on base, but had two put out. The next batter, Sharon Singletary hit back to the mound for a simple out, but the throw went into right field, allowing both baserunners to score. Theresa Richardson then followed with a two-run homer that tied the game at 5-5.

With one on in the sixth, Richardson came back up and hit a triple, then scored on another three-bagger. A base hit brought in an eighth run.

Conley rallied for three runs in the seventh to tie it up, but couldn't hold on.

Southern came back with one in the bottom of the eighth to win it. Richardson singled, moved up on an error and scored on a base hit by Stephanie Howard.

Richardson led the Southern hitting with three while Lisa Roberson and Howard each had two. Rhonda Jackson led Conley with four while Tabatha Daughton and Gayle Cash each had three for Conley. Trellaney Boyd added two.

The loss ends the Conley season at 17-6 while Southern advances to the second round.

Long Ball Keys Rams To Victory

SNOW HILL — Greene Central used the long ball to defeat Wake Forest-Rolesville, 16-8, in the first round of the state playoffs Monday, rapping out five home runs in 18 hits.

After Wake Forest had taken a 1-0 lead after the top of the first, Ervin Collins opened the bottom of the inning with a home run. T.J. Johnson followed with a single before Gary Ginn then doubled. Johnson scored on a ground out by Shay Beaman before Ginn came home on an error to make it 3-1.

The Rams came back with five runs in the second, keyed by hits by Anthony Jones, Collins, Johnson and a two-run homer by Gary Ginn.

Wake Forest came back with a run in the third to make it 8-2 but Greene Central totaled eight runs in the bottom of the inning.

Gary Ginn had a grand slam in the third, which also included a homer by Eason and doubles by Darren Radford and Beaman.

Anthony Jones went five innings to raise his record to 6-1. He had five strikeouts and three walks. Richie Britt came on in the sixth.

Collins went 4-4 to lead the Rams. Gary Ginn went 3-4 while Barry Ginn, Eason and Johnson all collected two hits apiece.

Greene Central advances to play the winner of the Bunn-Edenton game on a date to be decided.

Saberhagen Continues Rebound

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Bret Saberhagen's simple explanation for his rebound from last year's dismal record is "just being healthy for the most part and getting good defense and a lot of runs."

The 23-year-old right-hander, who skidded from a Cy Young Award 20-6 record and World Series heroics in 1985 to 7-12 a year ago, surpassed his 1986 victory total Monday night when he pitched a six-hitter and became the major leagues' first eight-game winner as the Kansas City Royals beat the Chicago White Sox 6-1.

Saberhagen, 8-1 with a 1.65 ERA, pitched his fifth complete game of the season and had a shutout until Tim Lincecum homered with two out in the ninth inning.

He struggled in the early going, saying, "I wasn't warmed up properly because I didn't expect the game to start on time (because of rain). Usually I take 15 minutes to warm up but I think I only got 10. I got stronger as the game went on."

Baltimore's Ken Dixon produced the day's top relief performance, striking out the side with the bases loaded in the ninth inning to preserve the Orioles' 4-3 victory over Oakland. In other American League games, it was New York 6, California 3; Toronto 6, Seattle 5; Detroit 8, Texas 5; Boston 10, Cleveland 6. Milwaukee and Minnesota had the day off.

In winning for the 16th time in 21 games and opening a 4½-game lead over Seattle in the AL West, Kansas City took the lead with two runs in the fourth off Joel Davis. Jorge Orta hit his second home run of the year with one out and Frank White and Steve Balboni followed with successive doubles. Willie Wilson chased Davis with a two-run triple in the seventh and Balboni hit a two-run homer off Bobby Thigpen in the eighth, his sixth.

The White Sox loaded the bases against Saberhagen with one out in the third on a bunt single and a pair of walks but he struck out Greg Walker and Carlton Fisk to end the threat.

"That's where he won the game," Manager Billy Gardner said. "He pitched around (Harold) Baines and pumped it up for the next two guys."

"He doesn't beat himself," Chicago Manager Jim Fregosi said. "You have to hit to beat him. He has three pitches — a fastball, a curve and a change — and he has good command of all of them."

Orioles 4, Athletics 3
Larry Sheets hit a tie-breaking two-run homer off Dennis Eckersley in the sixth inning but Dixon stole the show with his brilliant ninth-inning relief outing. He came on after Jack O'Connor walked Stan Javier to open the inning, fielded Alfredo Griffin's bunt and threw wildly past first, putting runners at second and third. After walking Carney Lansford intentionally to load the bases, Dixon fanned Jose Canseco, Mark McGwire and Luis Polonia.

"It was an unbelievable game, an unbelievable finish. I don't believe it, that we can get in that situation and not tie or win the game," Oakland Manager Tony La Russa said.

Winner Eric Bell allowed seven hits in seven innings-plus as the Orioles completed a four-game series sweep and headed home after an 8-2 West Coast trip. Sheets' seventh home run of the season came with one out in the sixth and Terry Kennedy on first base after forcing Ray Knight, who led off with a single. Eckersley also gave up Jim Dwyer's game-tying homer in the fifth.

Joaquin Andujar, just activated from the disabled list and pitching in only his second game of the season, worked three strong innings for Oakland after a shaky first in which he walked four batters, including Fred Lynn with the bases loaded to force in a run.

Yankees 6, Angels 3
Rickey Henderson opened the game with a home run for the 33rd time in his career and Dan Pasqua also homered as New York completed a four-game sweep in California. Winner Tommy John blanked the Angels on five hits over six innings before he was chased during a three-run seventh.

Henderson hit the third pitch of the game from Jack Lazorko for his ninth home run of the season and his fifth game-opening homer. His 33 leadoff homers are two short of Bobby Bonds' major-league record. Pasqua hit his sixth home run to lead off the second inning and the Yankees scored three times in the fifth, two on Dave Winfield's single, for a 5-0 lead.

"I think I can get two more before I'm finished," said the 28-year-old Henderson.

Blue Jays 6, Mariners 5

George Bell drove in five runs and hit two homers, including a tie-breaking three-run shot in the eighth inning. Host Seattle had taken a 3-2 lead in the seventh on Rey Quinones' fifth home run of the season. But with one out in the Toronto eighth, Tony Fernandez singled and continued to second on an error by left fielder Phil Bradley.

Rance Mulliniks' single tied the score and Seattle starter Mike Morgan left after walking Willie Upshaw. Bell greeted Steve Shields with his second home run of the game, 15th of the season and his fifth in the four-game series. The rally made a winner of Jimmy Key, who allowed seven hits in seven innings.

Tigers 8, Rangers 5

Matt Nokes homered on his first two at-bats and Lou Whitaker hit a three-run homer as Detroit won for the 10th time in 12 games and reached the .500 mark for the first time since April 20.

Whitaker started the Detroit first with a walk off Edwin Correa, Darrell Evans singled and both runners moved up on Kirk Gibson's grounder.

Alan Trammell singled them home and Nokes hit the first pitch for his seventh home run and a 4-1 lead.

Nokes homered again leading off the third against Ron Meridith. Two outs later, pinch hitter Chet Lemon walked, Tom Brookins singled and Whitaker hit his eighth home run for an 8-1 lead. Jeff Kunkel hit his first home run of the season in the Texas seventh off Frank Tanana, who gave up four runs on seven hits in 6 1-3 innings.

Red Sox 10, Indians 6

Rookie Ellis Burks hit his first career grand slam and Marty Barrett hit a three-run homer as Boston ended a holiday weekend scoring drought. The Red Sox, who managed just five runs and 12 hits in three consecutive losses to Chicago, took a 6-0 lead against Tom Candiotti in the first two innings — Barrett homered in the second — but needed Burks' tie-breaking grand slam after Cleveland pulled into a 6-6 tie with a five-run fifth that chased Bruce Hurst.

Jim Rice opened the Boston fifth with a single of reliever Mark Huisman, Rich Gedman doubled and Spike Owen walked. Burks, called up from the minors in late April, then broke a 2-for-26 slump with his fourth homer, a shot into the screen in left. Pat Tabler homered for Cleveland.

Reds 5, Cubs 4
Bill Gullickson won his sixth game and Nick Esasky's home run helped Cincinnati take an early lead that was enough to hold off visiting Chicago.

Gullickson, 6-2, allowed three runs on six hits as the Reds ended their four-game losing streak.

Esasky led off the second inning with a home run and consecutive doubles by Gullickson, Kal Daniels and Barry Larkin made it 5-1 against Greg Maddux, 3-4.

Ryne Sandberg and Leon Durham homered in the Cubs' third.

Cincinnati reliever Ron Robinson pitched out of a bases-loaded, one-out situation in the seventh but yielded Andre Dawson's 14th homer in the eighth.

The Cubs loaded the bases in the ninth with one out, but John Franco earned his eighth save by getting pinch-hitter Manny Trillo to ground into a double play.

Mets 8, Giants 7
Mookie Wilson drove home three runs and Rafael Santana hit a two-run double, enabling New York to hold off San Francisco.

The host Giants trailed 8-4 entering the ninth, but Candy Maldonado hit a two-run double and scored on Robby Thompson's single, chasing reliever Roger McDowell. Jesse Orosco then struck out Chili Davis on three pitches to end the game for his eighth save.

The Mets scored four times in the first inning and knocked out Mike Krukow, who was 4-0 against New York last season.

Bob Brenly doubled and singled as the Giants rallied to tie, but the Mets scored on a double-play grounder by Kevin McReynolds for a 5-4 lead in the fifth.

Convicts Don't Take Own Advice

By JO ASTRID GLADING
Associated Press Writer
TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — When the documentary "Scared Straight!" made its premiere in 1978, viewers watched nine tough prisoners educate 17 young delinquents about life behind bars.

Nearly 10 years later, its producer has found that all but two of the young offenders have remained out of trouble. But of the five inmates paroled from New Jersey's Rahway State Prison, only one has remained free.

"The vast majority of the kids were, in fact, scared straight. The convicts, however, didn't seem to be able to take their own advice," said Sara Lesch, a spokeswoman for producer Arnold Shapiro.

Shapiro's sequel, "Scared Straight — Ten Years Later," is airing on independent television stations with actress Whoopi Goldberg as host.

Although the clothes, hairstyles and production quality may date the original program, which is being reissued with the sequel, Shapiro said in an interview last week he believes the documentary's message is even more relevant today.

He said nearly 100 television stations, potentially reaching 80 percent of the nation's viewers, have agreed to broadcast the show.

"It's hard enough to get anything on television. When you can produce something you know is helping, or influencing young people, it's a very good feeling," he said.

A total of 24,726 youngsters from four states have gone through the prison orientation, called the Lifers' program, according to Lt. Alan August, who has supervised it since it began in 1976. He said the effort's success cannot be statistically measured because juvenile records are confidential.

"If it helps four out of 10 kids, or just as long as you get to a couple of kids out of each group, it's worth it," August said.

He said that since the program began, youths who go through it have grown tougher and harder to impress, tend to be in worse trouble and are exposed to far more dangerous drugs on the streets.

August also said the poor track record of the inmates who were paroled did not surprise him.

"It's very hard for them to change their ways. Sometimes they're good at giving advice, but they're not that good at following it themselves," he said. He said he sees about half of the Lifer members return to prison after parole.

"Once you're in the prison system, it really eats you up," he said. "If you want to change someone's way, you have to get to them when they're young. The younger the better."

Shapiro said, "It was very sad to find that. It makes a case for intervening at as young an age as possible."

Bruce Willis Arrested

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Moonlighting" star Bruce Willis was arrested during a party at his home after he became involved in an altercation with police called by angry neighbors, a police spokesman said today.

"He supposedly attacked one of the officers," said Sgt. Joe Bustos. Four others at the party were arrested, apparently after they tried to free

Willis from police custody, Bustos said.

The actor was arrested for investigation of battery on a police officer, and the others were arrested for investigation of disturbing the peace, Bustos said.

Willis, 32, plays David Addison, a spontaneous, wise-cracking detective with a sardonic twist of a smile, on the popular ABC-TV series.

'Hour' Now Has Weekly AIDS Report

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Hour Magazine" has launched a weekly segment reporting on the latest developments in research, treatment and prevention of AIDS.

"We're not just jumping on the AIDS bandwagon," said Martin Berman, executive producer of the widely syndicated information talk show. "We were doing AIDS stories for five years, before it was called AIDS."

The reports began earlier this month with "Hour Magazine" host Gary Collins talking with U.S. Surgeon General Dr. C. Everett Koop via satellite.

Berman said he felt the show had an obligation to keep its viewers informed about acquired immune deficiency syndrome, which remains uniformly fatal and has been reported all over the world. The segments will discuss such topics as safe sex, the correct use of condoms, education of children, mandatory testing, AIDS hospices and insurance company discrimination.

"Do we have enough information?" he asked. "We could do something every day — information about safe sex on campus, a mothers' support group, AIDS-related conditions, the buddy system for dying patients and debunking the myths."

Not long ago the show did a piece with Dr. Anthony Fauci, director of the Institute for Allergy and Infectious Diseases at the National Institutes for Health in Washington. "After that segment aired we had a lot of requests for more information," said Berman. "We edited the footage and made tapes available. The interview was about an hour, but we had used only about seven or eight minutes on the air."

Berman said he believes the amiable Collins is an acceptable host for relaying this kind of information. "AIDS patients feel their parents will listen without being critical," he said. "We've found our audience is very sympathetic. It's a non-controversial setting."

town that York single-handedly captured a nest of 35 machine guns. York's grandson, Army Maj. Gerald York of Huntsville, Ala., is at left. (AP Laserphoto)

French Town Dedicates Plaque For Sgt. York

By LAURA KING
Associated Press Writer
CHATEL-CHEHERY, France (AP) — Andrew Jackson York stood on a grassy knoll in the Argonne Forest, looking toward the spot where his father became the most celebrated hero of World War I by single-handedly taking on a nest of 35 machine guns.

"This would be the little creek that he talked about, and there's where he crossed around to slip up behind them," said York, who traveled from Tennessee for the Memorial Day unveiling of a monument to his father, Alvin Cullum York.

About 200 people, including U.S. Ambassador Joe M. Rodgers, gathered in this village 150 miles east of Paris for the dedication of a simple bronze plaque set in a polished granite base.

The plaque, inscribed in French and English and set in front of the tiny town hall, details the feat that earned York the highest French and American military decorations and made him a folk hero at home.

"Armed with his rifle and pistol, his courage and skill, he silenced a German battalion of 35 machine guns, killed 25 enemy soldiers and captured 132," it reads.

Gary Cooper starred in a 1941 movie about York, who died in 1944.

"I'd get asked if I was Gary Cooper's grandson," said Gerald York, 39, a U.S. army major stationed in Huntsville, Ala., who attended the dedication.

He said he didn't really know how famous his grandfather was until a grade-school teacher showed him an encyclopedia entry about him.

Despite his fame as a fighter, Alvin York nearly wound up missing the war. A fundamentalist Christian, he registered as a conscientious objector and asked for non-combat duty.

His commanding officer, knowing of York's skill as a marksman, agreed — but asked him to go to the backwoods family farm and think it over for a few days.

"He wasn't aiming to come and fight," said his son, who at 57 is tall and weathered-looking. Some people say he resembles his father.

"But he went up on the hill and thought about it ... He figured he wasn't any better than anyone. Daddy didn't know whether he could kill anyone or not. He didn't know whether he could take a life."

York finally decided he ought to do whatever he could to get the war over.

On Monday, a brass band drawn from nearby villages raised a ragged but enthusiastic chorus of military marches as the Tennessee flag that had covered the monument was removed.

Flowers were laid at the base, giggling French schoolchildren waved American flags and the villagers repaired to a small auditorium to drink champagne.

"It's very fitting to remember him here," said Russell Hippe, chairman of the Tennessee Historical Commission, which decided to establish the memorial to honor York in the 100th year after his birth.

It was the first visit to France for York's son, who said he had wanted for years to see the Mont York, the name the villagers gave to the hill behind Châtel-Chéhery where Alvin York made history.

"It's pretty country, just like back in Tennessee," Andrew York said. "And peaceful."

Crowd's Weight Flattens Famed Golden Gate Span

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The Golden Gate Bridge's 50th anniversary celebration was one heavy party: an estimated 250,000 revelers put so much weight on the span that they flattened it.

Engineers were so concerned about the excessive load imposed by Sunday's "Dawnwalk" across the bridge that they did rapid calculations to make sure the orange span could support celebrants.

"The bridge had the greatest load factor in its 50-year life," Gary Giacomini, president of the bridge district board, said Monday. "Imagine, the Golden Gate Bridge flattened out by the weight of human beings!"

Concerned authorities turned away 500,000 people.

Giacomini said officials regretted not being able to let so many on the famed bridge, but "in a way, I'm grateful because if they had gotten out there, maybe the bridge would have fallen down."

Giacomini, who was in the middle of the bridge deck, said support cables there were as taut as harp strings while cables elsewhere "were loose and kind of spinning around because the other ones were picking up the strain."

"I thought, 'Wow, this isn't a good idea,'" he said.

He said it wasn't until later, when he returned to bridge district headquarters, that he learned engineers had performed the computations to check whether the span could support the millions of pounds of dead weight.

"Then I was scared after the fact," he said.

The revelers also left 40 tons of trash on the bridge and 100 tons in the area, officials said.

More than a million people participated in the all-day, $3 million celebration, which culminated with a spectacular fireworks show and the lighting of the bridge's 746-foot art deco towers.

Crowds exceeded official expectations at every event. Bridge officials had predicted as many as 100,000 people would show up for the Dawnwalk.

The bridge is built to be flexible and can move 15 feet vertically and more than 27 feet from side to side, allowing for changes in weight or the powerful wind that often howls through the Golden Gate, the mile-wide channel that connects the Pacific and San Francisco Bay.

Millions May Let IRS Offer Expire Without Filing W-4

By JIM LUTHER
AP Tax Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — It's one of those once-a-lifetime offers from the Internal Revenue Service that nobody can refuse. But millions are refusing, and the offer is about to expire.

The bottom line is this: The law requires every wage-earner to file a 1987 W-4 tax-withholding form by Oct. 1. If you file before midnight June 1, the IRS has volunteered, it will waive any penalty you might incur for having too little tax withheld from wages this year.

If you let the June 1 deadline pass, you still will be within the law by filing by Oct. 1. But by waiting, you run the risk of being penalized unless your withholding covers at least 90 percent of your 1987 tax liability.

Millions of people are waiting. In a survey commissioned by the IRS, the Roper polling organization concluded in March that just about half of the 100 million-plus wage-earners had filed a new W-4. The elderly, lower-income earners and those in the West are even slower than most in filing.

Although the figures obviously have risen somewhat over the last two months, the response has been disappointing to the IRS.

"The survey showed that some of the people who have been slowest to file are those that are most likely to be under-withheld," said IRS spokesman Wilson Fadely. He referred specifically to higher-income couples who are accustomed to itemizing deductions, investing in a fully deductible Individual Retirement Account and claiming the special writeoff for two-earner couples.

The new tax-overhaul law, most of which went into effect on Jan. 1, cut tax rates, boosted personal exemptions, repealed the two-earner writeoff, sharply reduced the number of workers eligible for fully deductible IRAs, and scaled back or eliminated some itemized deductions. Especially noticeable to millions of itemizers when they file next year for 1987 will be loss of the sales-tax deduction and the gradual ending of the writeoff for credit cards and other consumer interest.

Air France

This is a view of the first Paris air show, held in 1904. For years, France had led the world in air travel. The first hot air balloon was flown by two Frenchmen in 1783. Another Frenchman is credited with flying the first glider, in 1856. And in 1890, another inventor from France, Clement Ader, actually executed the first engine-powered, piloted takeoff. Flying just a few inches off the ground, Ader's steam-powered plane covered a distance of 160 feet.

DO YOU KNOW — The Wright Brothers made their famous first flight in what state?

MONDAY'S ANSWER — Warren Burger is leading the celebration of the Constitution's bicentennial.

Horoscope

From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY May 27

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The early part of the day finds it possible for you to finish up a series of conditions that need to be out of the way before you can intelligently proceed.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): You can now handle correspondence that has been neglected. Contact those you want as allies.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Apply yourself seriously and handle practical matters. Find the right method to expedite things.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Study your present position and eliminate whatever is outdated. Enjoy the company of friends tonight.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Handle the tasks that can clear the path to greater progress. Save some time for your mate.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): You can gain an aim now that has long eluded you since you have greater enthusiasm than before.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Study your position at home and try to gain some prestige there. A bigwig can give you backing.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Something turns up today that can help you advance and make the future brighter for all.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Keep busy at completing the work that's undone. Small tasks can be done for your mate, also.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Get outside tasks finished before you delve into some new civic affair that can be of help to you.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Show fellow workers that you finish one job before going on to the next one. Gain their respect thusly.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Have long talks with those who like the same amusements as you. Impress others with the right attitude.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Although you have to be out at work, take time to plan how to improve conditions at home.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he, or she, will have every ability at handling emergencies of all kinds. Slant the education here toward police work, medicine and law, for all of these require mental brilliance and physical dexterity. And throw in some lessons on perseverance.

"The Stars impel; they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Opening lead: ?

You can find a table of standard opening leads in any textbook. You will be told that the correct lead in a suit that partner has bid is low from three to an honor or four or more cards in the suit, and high from a worthless holding of three cards or fewer.

That is right enough in most cases. But once in a while your bridge savvy should tell you that the time has come to throw the book out the window.

Consider this hand, where North-South have bid to five clubs after East opened the bidding with one spade. South's jump overcall was, by agreement, intermediate, showing the equivalent of at least an opening bid with a good six-card or longer suit. North judged nicely to go on to game even though he held only a singleton in his partner's suit.

We venture to say that at 99 tables out of 100 the contract would have been made. After the lead of West's fourth-best spade, declarer will have time to draw trumps and discard two hearts on dummy's diamonds, because East won't be able to attack the heart suit profitably.

When we saw this hand played, South never got the chance to make his contract. West realized his side might not get two tricks in spades, and that it might be vital for him to have the opportunity to attack declarer's weakness. So he made the unorthodox lead of the king of spades.

Since East-West were playing five-card majors, it was obvious to West that a spade continuation held no future, and a diamond shift could hardly be a necessity. However, if his side had a heart trick coming, it was vital to set it up at once. So at trick two West shifted to the nine of hearts. Whether declarer rose with dummy's ace or took the finesse, there was no way that the king of hearts would not score a trick. The ace of trumps then became the setting trick.
