Tyson Adding Three Blacks To Sheriff's Staff

By DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Sheriff's Department has hired a black female deputy and plans to swear in two additional black officers on Monday in an effort to create a more balanced ratio of minorities on the force, Sheriff Ralph Tyson said today.

The department has asked the Pitt County Board of Commissioners to add seven positions to the force which could be filled with minorities, according to Tyson, who denied reports that he had received a letter from the U.S. Equal Employment Opportunities Commission regarding minority hiring practices.

"I have no knowledge of any letter from the EEOC," Tyson said.

Meanwhile, D.D. Garrett, president of the Pitt County chapter of the NAACP, said his group has been notified about improprieties in the treatment of minorities within the sheriff's department.

"We're aware of the situation," Garrett said. "The situation brought to the attention of the NAACP is that there has been discrimination in hiring and firing and promoting practices."

"This has come to our attention. We've had several complaints in that regard."

While the NAACP has not taken an active stand on the complaints due to the urgency of other issues, Garrett said, there are plans to voice concerns about minority hiring policies in the Pitt County Sheriff's Department.

"We have not, at this point, voiced our concerns," he said. "Our hands have been tied in other areas and with other concerns. We have not really voiced our displeasure with the sheriff, but it is on our back burner to do so."

According to Tyson, the department employs 11 blacks — six males, five females. It employs a total of 21 women, six of which are sworn deputies. In addition, the department hired a total of 17 minority employees, eight of which are sworn deputies.

House OKs Bill Changing Schools' Top-Level Posts

By MARY C. SCHULKEN

RALEIGH — A bill sponsored by Rep. Ed Warren, D-Pitt, changing the management structure of the N.C. Department of Public Instruction was approved by the N.C. House of Representatives Wednesday.

The bill, which stipulates that the state superintendent of public instruction remain an elected official and serve as the full-time, non-voting chairman of the State Board of Education, passed the House by a 2-1 margin. The legislation now moves to the N.C. Senate for its consideration.

In addition, the bill creates a new position, commissioner of public schools, that will be filled by appointment by the State Board of Education at the recommendation of the state superintendent.

The bill also abolishes the position of the state controller and transfers the duties of that office to the State Board of Education — a move suggested frequently in the past by educators in the state.

A bill changing the superintendent's job to an appointed one was considered earlier by the N.C. Senate. That legislation is currently under study by the Constitutional Amendment Committee.

According to Warren, both the House and Senate bills address problems with the current department structure, but the House bill is more feasible. "It does not require a constitutional amendment to achieve the desired end" of placing a professional education administrator in the state superintendent's position, Warren said.

"The bill does provide unitary management of education at the state level under a strong State Board of Education," Warren said during House discussion of the bill Wednesday.

"It also eliminates current dual management and resulting inefficiencies and duplication," he said.

The bill also empowers the state board to set a competitive salary for the commissioner of public education. "This will enable them to employ the best qualified individual as commissioner," Warren said.

Warren said the bill strengthens the governor's role in public education "since all members of the State Board of Education will be appointed by the governor and that board has full authority over the commissioner of public education."

"That enhances the position the position the governor plays in the system," he said.

An amendment to the bill proposed by Rep. Anne Barnes, D-Orange, which stipulates the state superintendent would approve all administrative appointments at the recommendation of the commissioner of public education, was also approved.

Senate Action Awaited

State House Approves Pitt Election Proposal

By MARY C. SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

RALEIGH — The N.C. House of Representatives on Wednesday unanimously approved a compromise bill changing Pitt County's method of election.

The bill was to be discussed in the N.C. Senate at 1 p.m. today.

The revised method of election, which was proposed by a subcommittee appointed by the House Local Government II Committee, calls for six county commissioners to be elected from districts, and three commissioners elected at large — after the three are nominated by party primaries in districts created by collapsing Districts 1 and 2, 4 and 5 and 3 and 6 into three regions.

Nominees must reside within those districts. The compromise was suggested to give minorities a better chance of election to an at-large seat.

Pitt County's proposed "six-three" election plan had called for six county commissioners to be elected from districts with voters in the districts — two of which are predominantly black — voting on only the representative from their district.

The other three board members, who could live anywhere in the county, would have been elected by countywide vote. Minority groups in Pitt County voiced opposition to the inclusion of any at-large seats in the method of election.

The N.C. House Local Government II Committee referred the bill to a subcommittee May 21 and asked that a compromise be worked out between the six-three plan supported by the County Commissioners and the six district plan backed by minority groups.

Michael Crowell, a Raleigh lawyer representing the Pitt County Commissioners, offered the compromise to the subcommittee.

According to Sen. Tom Taft, D-Pitt, the Senate was set today to refer the bill to the Election Laws Committee. Taft said this morning Sen. Ted Kaplan, D-Forsyth, had appointed an eight-member subcommittee chaired by Larry Cobb, R-Mecklenburg, to consider the bill. A time for the subcommittee meeting had not been set.

Taft said he is pleased the compromise passed the House. "I'm a pragmatist and I have to be pleased with what happened because the bill now must move forward," he said. "Even though the bill is not exactly the one approved by the County Commissioners, it does appear to have their support."

"I look forward to receiving the House bill and moving it through the Senate quickly," he said.

Although minorities attending the House subcommittee meeting consented to the compromise, representatives of the black community said they aren't positive local blacks can support the compromise.

Byrd Wants U.S. Protection Halted

By TIM AHERN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd today called on the Reagan administration to halt next week's plans to protect Kuwaiti tankers in the Persian Gulf until Congress is assured that U.S. servicemen will be protected.

The West Virginia Democrat offered his sharpest criticism yet of the administration's policy in the wake of warnings by other senators that the plan is as risky as putting U.S. Marines into Beirut into 1983.

"No new commitments should be entered into, in my opinion, until we're completely satisfied that a militarily effective plan based on capabilities as well as past practices, with an insurance factor for the unpredictable, has been developed and will be implemented," Byrd said in a speech on the floor.

U.S. Says Iraqi Talks Progressing

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — The leader of a U.S. team investigating the attack on the USS Stark said today there had been differences with Iraqi military officials — reportedly over how many planes carried out the raid — but that most were ironed out.

"The talks are going well," Rear Adm. David Rogers, chief of the State-Pentagon team probing the May 17 missile attack, told reporters today after a new round of closed-door meetings.

"There are always two sides to a story. We're working very hard to document exactly what happened from both sides and we're very much in agreement at this point."

Rogers, who arrived in Baghdad on Monday at the head of the eight-man investigating team, said: "The Iraqis have been extremely forthcoming."

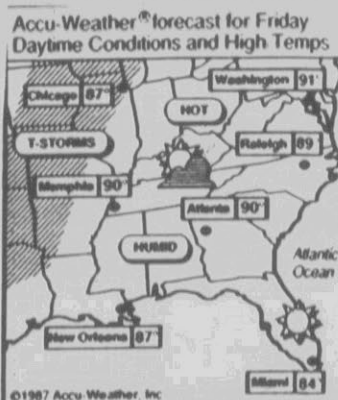

"We had differences of opinion along the way on some of the circumstances, but we've ironed most of them out. At this point, we're progressing very well."

The investigators have not commented on the probe and Rogers today declined to specify what the differences have been. But diplomatic sources said a hitch resulted from Iraq's refusal to specify what weapons they have adapted their French-built Mirage jetfighters to carry.

Iraq says a single Mirage F-1 mistakenly carried out the attack in the Soviet Farmhand Steals Plane

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — A Soviet farmhand seeking political asylum after stealing a crop-dusting plane and flying it to Sweden was in custody today, police said.

The Soviet Union accused the man, identified as Roman Svistonov, 24, of hijacking the aircraft and demanded that the Swedish government return both the pilot and the plane.

Svistonov stole the single-engine biplane from an airfield in the Soviet republic of Latvia and flew it toward the Swedish island of Gotland, about 100 miles to the west, police said Wednesday.

Svistonov ditched the plane, an AN-2 Colt, in the Baltic Sea and waded ashore, police said.

Uno de Fine Licht, the chief of police in Visby on the island of Gotland, said the Russian asked for asylum and was being held in custody. He said Svistonov was from Nikolayev, a town near Odessa on the Black Sea.

The official Tass news agency issued a brief statement in Moscow today calling the action "criminal" and accusing Svistonov of hijacking the plane. The report said Soviet officials had appealed to Sweden to send Svistonov back.

"The Soviet side has appealed to Swedish authorities with a request that the criminal be returned, as well as the aircraft and the property contained on it," Tass said.

Defense Ministry spokesman H.G. Wessberg said Swedish jetfighters were scrambled to investigate when the low-flying plane was picked up on radar, but the plane apparently had

Safe Boating Week

Greenville Mayor Les Garner has proclaimed June 7-13 as National Safe Boating Week.

"More Americans each year are choosing recreational boating as an ideal way to relax with their families and friends," Garner said in the proclamation.

"However, what starts out as a pleasant cruise often ends in tragedy because boaters fail to teach their families to swim, fail to properly equip their craft with personal flotation devices and other protective equipment, or fail to instruct their passengers in the use of such devices prior to a boating cruise," the proclamation said.

"Every year hundreds of lives are lost in boating accidents," Garner said. "These fatalities can be reduced and boating made more pleasurable if those who engage in it will emphasize knowledge, care, and courtesy necessary for safe boating."

Warsaw Pact Nations Discuss West's Reponse To Arms Cuts

BERLIN (AP) — Warsaw Pact nations opened a two-day meeting in East Berlin today that is expected to focus on Western responses to Soviet nuclear arms proposals.

East German President Erich Honecker convened the session at 10 a.m. with a welcoming speech to the leaders of the six Warsaw Pact nations attending.

Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev also was expected to give an address today. The meetings, at a downtown East Berlin hotel, are held behind closed doors.

Western diplomats have speculated Gorbachev will use the annual meeting of the military bloc to announce a pullout of some of the 500,000 Soviet troops in Eastern Europe.

But Valentin Falin, head of the official Soviet news agency Novosti, told reporters Wednesday that troop reductions would have to be on the basis "of mutual agreement" between East and West.

Gorbachev and the leaders of Poland, Hungary, Czechoslovakia, Romania and Bulgaria arrived in East Berlin on Wednesday.

The Soviet leader flew to East Germany after wrapping up a three-day visit to Romania with a speech urging improvement in the quality of products that East bloc nations sell one another.

"Goods have been carefully selected to go to the West, where they have earned hard currency," he told workers outside Bucharest's August 23rd factory. "And to one another, we have supplied the worst. Is this really the way to reinforce socialism?"

Romanians' daily life has become increasingly austere as the government drives hard to increase exports to pay off hard currency debts. Gorbachev said that in the Soviet Union, he has encouraged private enterprise and production incentives because "we needed fundamental, radical reforms so as to throw off the fetters and eliminate the brakes on the country's developments."

President Nicolae Ceausescu of Romania has openly criticized Gorbachev's reforms.

Speaking to reporters Wednesday in East Germany, Falin complained that the NATO alliance has not responded to Warsaw Pact calls for reductions in conventional forces.

At the last meeting of Warsaw Pact leaders in Budapest in June 1986, the military bloc proposed deep cuts in both NATO and Warsaw Pact troops in Europe. But East-West talks on the so-called Budapest Appeal, taking place in Vienna, have made no headway.

Falin also accused the United States of obstructing medium-range missile talks between the superpowers, but said the American "obstacles" still could be overcome.

The United States and Soviet Union have discussed a plan to remove their medium-range missiles from Europe while allowing each country to keep 100 on its own territory, probably in Soviet Asia and Alaska. The Soviets also have suggested eliminating all short-range missiles in Europe.

Washington has delayed a response while it consults with its NATO allies. Medium-range missiles are defined as having a range of 600 to 3,000 miles, while shorter-range missiles have ranges of 300 to 600 miles.

"One can believe that difficulties arising from the U.S. position are tactics and are not insurmountable obstacles to a (East-West) agreement," Falin said.

Contra Airlift Agents Told Government Backed Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two managers of an airlift for the Nicaraguan Contra rebels say they were told the Reagan administration supported their clandestine efforts, while the congressional committees hearing their testimony have released a memo from the late CIA director William J. Casey outlining a private aid plan.

Felix Rodriguez, a veteran of the abortive 1961 Bay of Pigs invasion in Cuba and numerous other CIA operations, testified Wednesday that Lt. Col. Oliver L. North bragged that his activities were protected at high levels in the Reagan administration.

Retired Air Force Col. Robert C. Dutton, who had been hired by retired Maj. Gen. Richard V. Secord in the spring of 1986 to make the air resupply effort work, said North, a National Security Council aide at the time, indicated that both were working for the president.

The committees have released a March 1984 memorandum from Casey to former national security adviser Robert McFarlane, Knight Ridder newspapers reported today.

The two-page memorandum explored the alternatives for helping the Contras should Congress cut off assistance from the U.S. government, which Congress did from October 1984 to March 1986.

Among the alternatives in the memo was creation of a private foundation to seek "nongovernmental funds." Testimony has shown how private donors were found to aid the Contras during the congressional ban.

The memo endorsed a proposal, apparently from McFarlane, that a member of the National Security Council staff work with a CIA officer in overseeing the plan, Knight Ridder reported.

Rodriguez, who went by the pseudonym of Max Gomez, told about being with North when he watched a televised House debate on Contra aid on June 25, 1986.

"Those people want me," Rodriguez quoted North as saying. "But they can't touch me, because the old man loves my ass."

Dutton said he had no doubt that the directions for the Contra support effort were coming from the top of the U.S. government.

He said North had broader contacts among high officials than any military official of similar rank in his experience, and said North had mentioned specific contacts with Casey and Attorney General Edwin Meese III.

"He indicated to me that we were working for the president of the United States," said Dutton, who testified with grants of immunity from both the committees and a separate investigator, independent counsel Lawrence E. Walsh.

Rodriguez was scheduled to continue testifying today, followed by a closed-door session of the committees to take testimony from Joe Fernandez, the former CIA station chief in Costa Rica who went by the pseudonym of Tomas Castillo.

Fernandez left the agency after being disciplined for his activities on behalf of the Contra support effort, which came during a congressional ban on such aid.

Also to testify today was Lewis Tams, who retired last year after two years as U.S. ambassador to Costa Rica. Tams maintained close ties with the Contra aid network and saw it as his mission to help the Contras strengthen their southern front against the Nicaraguan government.

The testimony Wednesday also represented a new round of what was becoming a common refrain in the hearings: distrust by various factions in the Iran-Contra affair.

Aid Cut Off To Fiji

SUVA, Fiji (AP) — The United States and New Zealand have suspended aid to Fiji to protest the military overthrow of the elected government, officials announced today.

"United States law prohibits use of foreign aid funds to provide direct assistance to any country whose duly elected head of government is deposed by military coup or decree," the U.S. Embassy said in a statement.

"As a result, U.S. assistance programs for Fiji are in suspension."

Soldiers led by Lt. Col. Sitiveni Rabuka overthrew the Indian-dominated government of Prime Minister Timoci Bavadra on May 14. Rabuka said he wanted to preserve the political power of ethnic Fijians, who are slightly outnumbered by ethnic Indians.

In New Zealand, Prime Minister David Lange also announced he was cutting off aid to the South Pacific nation, and he ordered 47 Fijian soldiers training in New Zealand to go home.

No Shortage

We doubt anybody could be wholeheartedly pleased by results of North Carolina's release of inmates to reduce prison overcrowding.

It was the Legislature's response to threatened lawsuits against North Carolina and a threatened federal takeover of its prison system.

To ease the crisis, North Carolina freed 24 murderers, 12 rapists, 10 child molesters and 14 armed robbers. Another 30 were serving time for manslaughter. Many or most of them were said in line for parole at an early date.

In all, the prison population had reached 18,067 and the Parole Commission was given 60 days to reduce it to at least 17,280. Last week the state of emergency was lifted after the prison population fell to 17,238. During a seven-week period officials had paroled 1,875 prisoners.

N.C. Parole Commission Administrator Sam Boyd reminds "the prison system is full of people who have done terrible things. These are the people we have to select from."

Almost 300 of the freed inmates were serving time for driving while impaired; another 115 had committed traffic offenses such as driving while license revoked, reckless driving and failing to stop at an accident. Others had committed crimes such as shoplifting, speeding, trespassing and prostitution.

Prison officials said dangerous criminals would not be freed under the emergency measures.

Nobody wants this to happen again, but there is no ready answer in sight. Eventually the problem works down to just not having enough money to meet expenses of all the other North Carolina needs and then meet costs of increasing the capacity of our penal institutions.

Having our penal system under the gun was one of the less appreciated memories of the recent past. Of course, if North Carolina did expand its prison capacity it would also fill that space in short order.

There's no shortage of takers.

Tobacco Ally

North Carolina's tobacco interests have a powerful ally in the U.S. Senate who hails from Kansas: Robert Dole.

The Senator has a way of cultivating political IOUs. One instance was last year when it appeared efforts to raise the excise tax on cigarettes from 16 cents to 24 cents was gaining steam. Dole urged his Senate Republican colleagues to back off in an effort to help Jim Broyhill's senatorial campaign. Broyhill lost to Terry Sanford, but the cigarette tax stood pat.

On another occasion Jesse Helms and John East provided crucial votes for a 1982 tax package pushed by Dole that included doubling the cigarette tax. Helms' vote drew heavy protest among Tar Heels but he and other observers say it proved crucial to Dole's continued support for tobacco.

The Senate Minority Leader says policymakers must think about tobacco farmers when anti-smoking advocates raise health questions in attempts to restrict smoking or raise cigarette taxes. He says he's aware "real people" grow tobacco, and observes "They've got burdens like every other farmer".

Make no mistake about it, Senator Dole is politically talented and politically ambitious. He is aiming high. He'd like to have a goodly share of North Carolina's votes.

A George Bush campaign memo carries a reminder that in the last session of Congress, Dole voted with John East and Jim Broyhill 100 percent of the time on tobacco issues, and 88 percent of the time with Helms.

The Dole record on tobacco is not all-important to his campaign efforts but it is an indicator that he is a man who touches all the bases in the world of politics.

Gorbachev Tough Study For '88 Hopefuls

WASHINGTON (AP) — He's not a candidate, but a man likely to play a major role in the 1988 presidential campaign is an astute politician named Mikhail Gorbachev.

The Soviet leader and his policies are certain to be issues in the U.S. political debate.

Far more skillfully than his recent predecessors, Gorbachev is confronting U.S. political leaders with difficult choices on questions such as deployment of a missile defense system and the wisdom of arms control proposals that would drastically reduce nuclear missiles in Europe.

And with his pursuit of "glasnost," or openness, as a path to domestic reforms in the Soviet Union, Gorbachev could make it more difficult for U.S. politicians to persuade voters to accept a view of the Soviet Union as an "evil empire."

What U.S. political advantage would there be for any of the 1988 candidates to echo President Reagan's early views of the Soviet leadership?

In his first news conference as president, Reagan said Soviet leaders "reserve unto themselves the right to commit any crime, to lie, to cheat" in order to attain their goals.

Two years later, Reagan told a convention of Evangelical ministers that they should not "ignore the facts of history and the aggressive impulses of an evil empire."

Rep. Jack Kemp of New York, a candidate for the Republican presidential nomination, would agree with Reagan's views — even if the president seems now to have set them aside if not discarded them.

In a recent speech, Kemp expressed the conservative dilemma in dealing with the Gorbachev era.

The New York congressman conceded that Gorbachev's proposal for removing medium-range nuclear missiles from Europe, at first glance, "is the best arms control deal the West has ever seen — indeed, an agreement weighted strongly in our favor, an offer too good to refuse."

But Kemp went on to argue that such an agreement must be rejected for a number of reasons, including what he called "a decade of experience with Soviet cheating on arms control agreements."

Beyond the question of compliance,

Kemp expressed what may be an even greater concern with the impact of an arms control agreement on the Strategic Defense Initiative, Reagan's proposal for a space-based missile defense system.

"How long can we sustain support for SDI in the midst of expectant arms control negotiations, much less in the afterglow of a new agreement in Europe?" asked Kemp, whose demand that SDI be deployed at the earliest possible time has made him an even more ardent SDI backer than Reagan.

Candidates who are more willing to consider Soviet initiatives also must proceed cautiously.

Sen. Albert Gore Jr. of Tennessee, who has said he will seek the Democratic presidential nomination, will deliver a speech on arms control in Moscow on Friday.

Announcing plans for the trip, Gore said it would provide "an opportunity to explore the private reality in the Soviet Union behind their expansive new offers."

The Tennessee senator has been an active congressional participant in arms control matters since his days in the House.

But what does he mean by "the private reality?"

Perhaps, as with Kemp, it is a question of trust. How far can any U.S. politician go in trusting the Soviets?

Kemp would say any degree of trust is unacceptable.

Gore and others like him are still trying to determine whether the Soviet interest in an arms control agreement stems from a genuine internal need or whether it is a ploy designed to gain some advantage over the West.

Before Gorbachev, the answer seemed simple. It often was provided by the Soviets when they reverted to armed force in Czechoslovakia and Afghanistan. But after two years in power, the 56-year-old Gorbachev has offered no easy answers for American politicians.

Donald M. Rothberg, the chief political writer of The Associated Press, has reported on the impact of U.S.-Soviet relations on presidential campaigns since 1968.

A Spectacle With Significance

WASHINGTON — Andy Warhol's all-American syndrome — that in the Television Age, each of us is entitled to 15 minutes of fleeting fame — seems to have set in for the Iran-contra hearings.

Granted, there's a difference. Warhol gave every citizen 15 minutes before the glaring arc lights. The televised congressional investigation into activities of the patriots-for-profit group lasted three weeks before the public's supposedly increasingly short attention span came into play.

Now, to hear critics, the public has tired of the real-life Washington TV political drama. It's old stuff, and nobody cares anyway. So what? On to the next spectacle.

Even if Americans are becoming bored by the hearings, a most dubious proposition given the increasing TV audience, the argument that they have lacked significance is absurd.

Already, two areas of critical concern have been highlighted. The first involves a constitutional clash of great magnitude between the executive and legislative branches.

The most important aspect of the hearings has been the documentation of the Reagan administration's elaborate official efforts to deceive Congress and the public about its true activities on behalf of Nicaraguan contra forces.

It has become clear that all the secret activities, from fund-raising and covert Swiss bank accounts to weapons shipments, were undertaken with that purpose in mind. They were designed to thwart the will of Congress and to nullify laws prohibiting such activities. These facts will not be lost on members of Congress seeking to clarify administration intent in employing U.S. warships in the Persian Gulf.

That the deceit even extended to some of the president's most ardent true-believer friends is only one of many ironies in this sorry story.

Ellen Garwood, for instance, the wealthy and eager benefactor of anticommunist causes, has testified how Lt. Col. Oliver L. North painted a grave picture of the contras' condition. "He said that they were in such a bad condition," she recalled, "that they were out of food, they were out of clothes and medicine, other necessities. And also out, practically out, of weapons."

It was not true, but North's con-man pitch served splendidly for the intended purpose. Garwood coughed up more than $2 million for the contras.

The second most significant aspect of the hearings involves the sordid behavior of people operating in the president's name. The record of official sleaze more resembles Harding administration behavior or that of Nixon's.

William B. O'Boyle, an oil and gas entrepreneur and anticommunist contributor, testifying with wide-eyed fervor, told about how he was approached to fly from New York for a private White House "briefing on the political and military situation in Nicaragua." While being wined, dined and briefed, he received illuminating information from conservative fund-raiser Carl R. "Spitz" Channell, who worked with North in soliciting contra donations that went into bank accounts in Switzerland.

"There was a small group of people in the United States," O'Boyle recalled Channell telling him, "that the president relied on to make that kind of contribution, that this was a cause that was very dear to the president's heart. And he thought that perhaps I might be interested in joining this group of people."

Strength For Today

Some months ago an apartment house in this city had to be abandoned by its occupants because the foundations were sinking and cracking and the building was becoming unsafe. The reason was that part of the land upon which the building stood had many years before been a landfill. Therefore, the structure had been built partly upon rubbish.

Many people have been building their satisfactions and successes on rubbish. Down underneath the superstructures there lies not the deep bedrock of noble purpose, but the rubbish of selfishness and superficial interest.

What we build upon such a foundation will eventually be condemned. A house built on rubbish will sink and at last fall of its own weight.

Contributors Duped

WASHINGTON — While congressional investigators ponder the legality of millions of dollars of contributions to a tax-exempt foundation providing support to the Nicaraguan contras, another element of the controversial program is becoming clear:

The contributors of huge sums of money to the cause of the contras were taken to the cleaners.

Take, for example, Ellen St. John Garwood of Austin, Texas, an author and supporter of conservative causes, who testified that she was so committed to helping "the freedom-seeking people of Nicaragua" that she gave $2.4 million to a tax-exempt foundation last year.

The largest of many contributions last year, Garwood's $2.4 million is more than twice the amount that actually reached the leader of the contra movement from all contributions. Most of the rest disappeared into "professional" fees and expenses, fund-raising commissions and overseas corporations.

The Nicaraguan contras "are trying to achieve a noncommunist alternative in Central America," Garwood told the Iran-contra investigating committees. "It is of vital importance to the United States of America."

To live up to her commitment, she not only put up cash, but transferred thousands of shares of stock in Exxon, Deere & Co., Pennzoil Co. and other firms to the foundation, the National Endowment for the Preservation of Liberty (NEPL).

However, while Garwood alone put up $2.4 million in 1986, Adolfo Calero, the contra leader, testified that the total amount of money he received in 1986 and 1987 from this source was $944,746.

Separate documents, which have not been introduced in evidence at the congressional hearings, show that large chunks of the money contributed by Garwood and other major donors were siphoned into "professional fees" and "program expenses." Some of the program expenses are documented, but it is not clear how the "professional fees" were used.

The NEPL, to which Garwood gave her money, is a tax-exempt foundation set up by conservative fundraiser Carl R. "Spitz" Channell. Channell, in turn, worked closely with Richard R. Miller, president of a public relations firm called International Business Communications (IBC).

Both Channell and Miller have pleaded guilty to conspiring to defraud the federal government of taxes by using the NEPL to raise tax-deductible contributions that in fact were used to buy military equipment for the contras, in violation of tax law.

A document prepared by Miller to show how IBC used money it received from Channell's NEPL shows that the foundation deposited $3.43 million with IBC last year. That money was paid to IBC after Channell had taken out cash for his commissions and expenses from contributions received from Garwood and other major donors. It is not known how much money went for commissions, but Garwood testified that she had been told that it was as much as 35 percent of receipts.

Miller's IBC collected $1.04 million in professional fees and program expenses from the $3.43 million, leaving $2.39 million.

Most of the money, $2.35 million, was then transferred to a Cayman Islands corporation set up by Miller called Intel Co-operation Inc., along with another $450,000 paid directly by NEPL to Intel Co-operation, for a total of $2.8 million.

Miller, however, set up another company, World Affairs Counselors Inc., which then collected $442,000 in fees, bringing the total of fees and expenses collected by Miller's companies to $1.44 million. In other words, more than $2 of every $5 — 42 percent — of the $3.43 million transferred from the NEPL to IBC was paid out in fees and expenses to companies controlled by Miller.

Miller's Intel Co-operation did pay $944,746 to a bank account in Miami and a company called Alpha Services S.A., both controlled by Calero. In addition, $1.1 million went to the Swiss bank account of Lake Resources, which was controlled by Lt. Col. Oliver L. North, then a White House national security aide, and retired major general Richard V. Secord, but Calero testified that he received no money from Lake Resources last year.

The rest of the money transferred to Intel Co-operation went in smaller amounts to a host of foundations and unidentified organizations.

Legislators Go Into Extra Sessions To Beat Deadline

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — The state House was gearing up for its third marathon session in as many days as it battled to preserve dozens of bills that faced death unless approved by the House or Senate today.

Wary lawmakers stopped work around 10:30 p.m. Wednesday with half a dozen bills remaining on the House calendar. They planned to reconvene at 9 a.m. today and stay in session all day to meet the unpopular deadline.

"This is ridiculous," one legislator growled as he strode from the House chamber after adjournment Wednesday.

Under a new rule designed to shorten this year's General Assembly session, all measures except those dealing with the budget or taxes must have been approved by one chamber and been introduced in the other by today to stay alive.

The deadline has led to frantic activity on both sides over the past week, with committees doubling or tripling the length of their meetings and scheduling late-afternoon or evening meetings to deal with pending bills.

It also has prolonged drastically the length of floor sessions, especially in the House, which met from 1:30 p.m. until about 10:30 p.m. Tuesday and did likewise Wednesday.

At midafternoon, House Speaker Liston Ramsey urged lawmakers to keep the debate speeches brief. "We've got a long way to go," he said. "The time has run out for anything frivolous."

After a dinner break, the House reconvened at 7:20 p.m. Shortly before adjournment, Rep. Sharon Thompson, D-Durham, drew cheers when she moved to postpone debate on controversial workers' compensation bills.

Many legislators have grumbled about the situation. But House Speaker Pro Tem Jack Hunt, D-Cleveland, praised them for their diligence.

"I think from a leadership standpoint we have to be real proud of how the members have stuck with this. They've kept their morale up and they've put in some long hours," he said.

Hunt said he had encouraged Ramsey to consider letting the House out early on Friday and canceling the Monday session next week.

The deadline appeared to have caused somewhat less agony in the Senate, which met only slightly longer than normal Tuesday and Wednesday. Being a smaller body — it has only 50 members to 120 in the House — the Senate has produced fewer bills.

Even so, senators say they've picked up their pace.

"It's just like the end of the session, only compounded because we've got so many more bills to deal with," said Senate Minority Leader Larry Cobb, R-Mecklenburg. "By that time, people have given up on lots of things. Folks aren't giving up on too much now."

Abortion Bill Gets House OK

RALEIGH (AP) — Minors would have to get parental consent for abortions under a bill tentatively approved 70-30 by the House over objections it could force teens to flee their homes.

"The consent of a parent is required even for the simple procedure of piercing an ear in North Carolina," said Rep. Richard Wright, D-Columbus, during Wednesday's debate. He said his bill simply would make the common law accepted for decades conform with recent Supreme Court rulings.

But Rep. Harry Payne, D-New Hanover, said the only person affected would be the girl who is already too frightened to tell her parents she is pregnant.

"Reconsider how much more pressure you're putting on a young girl locked upstairs in her room ... who cannot bring herself to walk downstairs," he said.

"This bill, in some ways, forces her in the hands of the abortionists of days of old."

Payne said the bill could require that the girl tell a judge or social worker how she became pregnant and who fathered the child.

"The father could be some neighbor," he said. "Do you really think that an 11-, 12-, ... 14-year-old is going to stand up in court before a judge she doesn't know and point out the father?"

Payne said such girls might join the ranks of missing children. He said the bill provides little more than a "shortcut to the back of a milk carton."

"Grownups hire lawyers to go to court," he said. "Think about when you were that age. The biggest issue was the prom."

Wright, however, said the number of pregnancies among young girls had declined in states that require parental consent for abortion. He also said there was no evidence that minors turned to neighboring states when such laws were enacted.

Opponents of the bill tried unsuccessfully to have the bill sent to the Finance Committee and the Appropriations Committee. They said a proposed fine for doctors violating the law might need to be studied for its revenue impact and that the state might have to pay more money for legal assistance to the poor if the bill becomes law.

"It's not going to help us at all to keep dodging this issue and the resolution of this question," countered Wright.

DEADLINE CHECK — House calendar clerk Jean Hicks lays out copies of draft bills that were filed Wednesday and were to have their first reading on the floor of the House today. Legislators stepped up their pace Wednesday as they tried to beat a deadline for approval by at least one house of most bills. The deadline was aimed at shortening this year's General Assembly session. (AP Laserphoto)

Senate Passes Proposal To Shift State Elections

RALEIGH (AP) — A proposal to shift state elections to non-presidential years, derided by Republicans as a move by Democrats to distance themselves from their national tickets, has gained state Senate approval.

The Senate passed the bill 36-6 along party lines Wednesday. It now goes to the House. If enacted, it would move elections of the governor and Council of State officials to even-numbered years in which there are no presidential elections.

In 1985, lawmakers approved an amendment to move state elections to odd-numbered years. Voters soundly defeated the proposal in a statewide referendum as Republicans formed a citizens' committee to fight it.

Rep. Bill Martin, D-Guilford, sponsor of the ill-fated 1985 plan, said he hoped the latest version would be more palatable to voters.

He noted that South Carolina, Georgia, Florida and Tennessee hold elections in even-numbered, non-presidential years.

Under the bill, the governor and Council of State would be elected in 1992 — a presidential election year — and serve six-terms. The first non-presidential year election would be held in 1998.

Martin said the bill grew out of the recommendations of a study commission appointed after the defeat of the 1985 bill.

"This would separate national issues from state issues when it comes to statewide elections," Martin said.

Tobacco Bill Dies

RALEIGH (AP) — A House committee Wednesday voted to kill a proposed ban on student use of tobacco products in public schools, effectively snuffing out a similar Senate bill.

Sen. R.P. "Bo" Thomas, D-Henderson, said the Education Committee's action was probably the last gasp for both his bill and the House version sponsored by Rep. Ruth Easterling, D-Mecklenburg.

"If your interpretation of the rules is the same as mine, church is out," he said. House rules prohibit considering a Senate bill that is the same as a House bill already voted down.

House Backs Lower Credit Card Rates

RALEIGH (AP) — Despite protests that it would unfairly penalize small North Carolina banks, a bill to cut the ceiling on bank credit card interest rates from 18 percent to 16 percent has gained tentative House approval.

A final vote was scheduled for today on the measure, which if approved would go to the Senate. It passed tentatively 59-37.

Critics attacked the bill, saying it could lead banks to leave North Carolina for states such as Georgia that don't regulate interest rates.

Supporters, led by Rep. Dave Diamond, D-Surry, said the threat was a bluff. He said banks that move their headquarters from one state to another usually have reasons for doing so other than interest rate regulation.

Diamond said his bill was necessary because banks have failed to reduce interest rates on their own.

"For the life of me I cannot undersstand ... why interest rates have not come down," he said, noting that in recent years banks have reported decreases in fraud, credit losses and operating expenses and increases in profits.

"I wish the government didn't have to be involved in it, but apparently neither the banks nor the consumers are going to bring (the rates) down without a little nudging," Diamond said.

He said consumers were partially to blame for the situation. By failing to shop around for the lowest possible rates, they have given banks little incentive to woo customers by cutting rates, he said.

Rep. Harold Brubaker, R-Randolph, proposed an amendment that would establish a floating interest rate of percentage points above the yield on Treasury bills, with the provision that the rate would never fall below 16 percent.

His amendment was tabled 52-37

despite his argument that the Diamond bill would penalize small North Carolina banks without helping the consumer.

The measure would not affect larger banks incorporated in other states that offer credit card service to North Carolinians at interest rates of 21 percent or higher, Brubaker said.

"We're only affecting state-chartered banks," he said. "We're affecting Central Carolina Bank, located in Durham. We're affecting Planters National Bank (of) Rocky Mount, BB&T, First Citizens, Peoples Bank. ... These are banks, ladies and gentlemen, that don't have large credit card operations. And they cannot afford to go out of state.

CAR TALK

From Joe Cullipher Chrysler
Plymouth, Dodge, Peugeot

By James Phillips

QUIT CHECKING WATER

It used to be that when you drove into a service station for a tank of gas, the attendant routinely unscrewed the radiator cap and checked to see whether you were low on water (or the water-antifreeze mixture now called "coolant"). Today, if yours is a late-model car, manufacturers say you should check only about once a month or at oil-change time.

Sudden releasing of pent-up hot air, vapor and liquid, depressurizes the cooling system which is designed to operate at 10 to 18 pounds. Then the system may boil over and lose a considerable amount of coolant. Moreover, the hot vapor and liquid can scald you.

So, while it's vital to check the engine oil each time you buy gas, it's best not to check the radiator unless there is a definite indication of leakage or engine overheating. Make sure the engine is cool; the car should be parked for at least 15 minutes.

GOP To Select Party Chairman

RALEIGH (AP) — More than 2,500 North Carolina Republicans are on their way to Asheville to resolve the battle for the party chairmanship between Jack Hawke and Barry McCarty and hopefully avoid developing a rift among the ranks in the process.

The main draw at this year's convention is the fight between Hawke, Gov. Jim Martin's choice, and McCarty, a teacher at Roanoke Bible College in Elizabeth City.

Hawke, Gov. Jim Martin's choice, his 1984 campaign chairman and former special assistant to the governor, is supported by the party's traditional wing. McCarty, a teacher at Roanoke Bible College in Elizabeth City, has the backing of the National Congressional Club, the fund-raising organization born out of Sen. Jesse A. Helms' 1978 re-election campaign.

Paul Shumaker, party spokesman, said the chairman's race is attracting unprecedented interest in the convention. Two years ago, 600 people had registered a day before the convention. Three days before this year's gathering, 1,800 have registered and more are expected, Shumaker said.

"We've been working on trying to turn out people as far as Jack Hawke supporters go," he said. "There are just more people getting involved."

Hawke, a longtime GOP activist from Knightdale, claims to have a 5-1 lead for the loyalties of the 6,194 delegates who were elected to attend the convention at 100 county conventions held this spring.

McCarty disputes Hawke's assessment — but only by degree, estimating that Hawke's advantage is 3-to-2.

The outcome of the convention cannot be called certain because delegates were elected as individuals, not as pledged supporters of Hawke or McCarty. McCarty could make a race of it if most of his highly organized supporters register.

"We have been the underdog all throughout this race, but we feel pretty good," McCarty told the Winston-Salem Journal in an interview published in today's editions.

"It's a toss-up. Nobody knows what's going to happen, and nobody really knows who's going to show up in Asheville."

Bakker Says He's Ready To Save PTL, Start Anew

By WILLIAM STRACENER
Associated Press Writer
FORT MILL, S.C. (AP) — Disgraced evangelist Jim Bakker dared anyone to prove he is homosexual, and said if the Rev. Jerry Falwell won't let him return to "save" the PTL empire, he may start a new ministry in California.

"I believe in miracles and I would like to have my ministry back if the people want us back," Bakker said Wednesday night in an appearance with his wife, Tammy Faye, on ABC News' "Nightline."

"If Jerry Falwell won't let us go home," he said, "I dream of building another city, maybe in California."

"I dream of maybe going back on television someday."

In March, Bakker handed his multimillion-dollar PTL television network and Heritage USA theme park over to Falwell and admitted to a sexual encounter in 1980 with church secretary Jessica Hahn.

Falwell said Wednesday he learned that Bakker and an associate had sex with Ms. Hahn and that a third person tried to, and that Bakker had had homosexual problems as far back as 1956. Bakker's denomination, the Assemblies of God, cited the allegations of bisexuality when it defrocked him last month.

"I've looked into the homosexual charges," Bakker said. "I would again say if anyone has these charges against me I want them to come forward publicly with this proof."

Mrs. Bakker added, "I've been married to this man for 26 years, and I can tell you one thing: he's not homosexual or is he bisexual."

Falwell, on ABC's "Good Morning America" program today, said, "I have deepest sympathy for Jim and Tammy Bakker."

"Obviously, I would not have said what I said yesterday without incontrovertible evidence," including taped and sworn statements, Falwell said.

Along with the sex scandal, a financial scandal at PTL materialized soon after Bakker's departure. Falwell said Wednesday the ministry is $70 million in debt.

"If I had known then of the other moral stories and financial disasters, I would have run to the nearest airport and come home," Falwell said on "Good Morning America."

But Bakker said there was no financial disaster when he was at PTL. "Why is now it being talked about going into bankruptcy?" he asked. "I would come back today to save the ministry that we spent a lifetime building and to honor the commitment to our wonderful partners and friends."

It was Bakker's second "Nightline" appearance in as many nights from the couple's home in Palm Springs, Calif.

On Tuesday, he accused Falwell of misleading him into giving up 518,000-member PTL by arguing the move was needed to prevent a hostile takeover by the Rev. Jimmy Swagart.

Falwell denied he hoodwinked Bakker and said Bakker either has a terrible memory or is dishonest or emotionally ill.

Better-Safe-Than-Sorry Mood

Health-Care Crews Tighten Up On AIDS Precautions

By DENNIS PATTERSON
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Health care educators say the infection of three workers with the AIDS virus after simple exposure to patients' blood will make no difference in what they teach, but others say the cases will make a difference in how that teaching is applied.

"Quite honestly, we've always taught EMS folks that anytime they're dealing with a patient where they come in contact with blood, to wear rubber gloves," said Mike Eddinger, deputy chief of the state office of Emergency Medical Services, which trains rescue squad members. "We're not recommending anything different because of the AIDS scare, but I think what you're going to see is a much higher index of suspicion."

"Even before AIDS, we were concerned with things like hepatitis, but with AIDS I think some of the technicians are taking a better-safe-than-sorry approach," he said.

Federal officials last week announced that three health care workers became infected with the acquired immune deficiency syndrome virus after their skin was briefly exposed to blood from in-fectured patients. Each of the three had small breaks in the skins through which the virus might have passed.

"We've known all along that it was a blood-borne disease and direct contact with the blood of people with IHV (the AIDS virus) poses a small, but real risk," said David Jolly of the state AIDS control program. "It's an important development and we're concerned about it, but it doesn't alter the recommendations we've been making right from the beginning."

"Even though the contact was more casual, those individuals who came in contact with the blood had some minor wound," Eddinger said. "We don't want it to be such a scare that it affects the way we treat patients, but at the same time we don't want to be stupid with it either."

"We require that one pair of rubber gloves be carried on the ambulance, but I suspect we'll be seeing them carry a lot more," Eddinger said. "You've got to play with your eyes open."

Maj. Robert Barefoot of the state Highway Patrol said troopers are now getting training from a doctor on how to avoid contracting infectious diseases while on the job.

"What we're doing now is being very cautious in what we do when there are body fluids involved with someone injured," Barefoot said. "We tell our people to use as much caution as you can, but we do not at this time use rubber gloves and we don't use a mask."

Barefoot said the recent cases "sure got my attention."

"They had not been saying that before from our standpoint," Barefoot said. "As a result of this, we've asked for medical people to come in and teach a course. It's still so new to us and there are a lot of problem areas — like mouth-to-mouth resuscitation." Raleigh fire officials last week issued goggles and face masks to all stations, and will probably supply smocks as an extra precautionary measure. Fire Chief Sherman Pickard has ordered firefighters to wear the extra gear on all rescue calls.

"All the doctors we have talked to about what we can do to prevent getting this thing, this is what they're recommending we do," District Chief J.B. Sandy told The Raleigh Times. "We're taking every precaution we can."

UNCC Gets Major Bequest

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Before her death, Nordica Adelaide Jamieson never visited the campus of the University of North Carolina at Charlotte. But because she left her estate with the school, others will be able to see what she missed.

For nearly 25 years, the retired Charlotte secretary of apparently modest means kept secret her intentions to leave her estate to UNCC. School officials say that estate is worth $610,000 and will be used to fund student loans.

Miss Jamieson, a retired legal secretary, died in December at age 74. She had sworn her attorney to secrecy when she made out her will in 1963.

"She was adamant about that," said William Woolard, her longtime attorney and friend. "She insisted I tell no one."

Though Miss Jamieson had no ties to the university and did not attend college herself, Woolard said she admired educator Bonnie Cone, who helped establish and then headed Charlotte College, the predecessor to UNCC. The two women never met.

Woolard said Miss Jamieson also had a strong belief that students who want to attend college should be given the opportunity.

Robot Begins Monitor Examination

HATTERAS, N.C. (AP) — Researchers have achieved their first major objective as they begin a two-week expedition to examine the wreckage of the Civil War ironclad Monitor to determine if its remains should be raised from the ocean floor.

An underwater robot began examining wreckage of the USS Monitor Wednesday.

"Today, we were just trying to get the equipment up and running," said Dane Konop of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration in a telephone interview. "We've accomplished that major objective."

Konop said the drone is in the water, but as yet there are no pictures from the ocean bottom.

Archaeologists and scientists will spend the next two weeks using the submersible robot, called Deep Drone, to explore the wreckage about 16 miles offshore. Using the remote controlled vehicle instead of human divers, researchers will map the site, locate and photograph any artifacts nearby and examine the physical condition of the wreck.

The USNS Apache, a salvage ship that was used to recover parts of the space shuttle Challenger after it was destroyed in an explosion in January 1986, is anchored over the site of the Monitor wreckage.

Court Asked For New Trial

GREENSBORO (AP) — Lawyers for Bobby Ray Brown, condemned to die for the shotgun slaying of Clarence Wayne Tilley, have asked the state Supreme Court to order a hearing to determine whether Brown should get a new trial.

In their motion filed late last week, the lawyers say Brown was convicted solely because of one witness who now swears his testimony was a lie.

That witness, Richard Lee Hopper, told the Greensboro News & Record earlier this year that he lied and that he and his wife, Michelle Hopper, received $7,500 from authorities in reward and relocation money several weeks after the trial.

Brown's lawyers also filed an affidavit signed by Hopper with the Supreme Court. In the affidavit Hopper says he has "no personal knowledge that Bobby Ray Brown ever shot Clarence Wayne Tilley or was involved in Tilley's death."

Tilley, a drug informant for the FBI, was gunned down in the front yard of his home in Eden on Aug. 4, 1961. He was scheduled to testify before a federal grand jury investigating a large drug smuggling ring operating out of Rockingham County and southwestern Virginia.

Medical Flight Crews To Meet

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Medical helicopter flight teams will gather here June 6 for disaster management training.

About 50 nurses and paramedics from all five of North Carolina's medical helicopter programs will be attending, said Elizabeth Lay, chief flight nurse for North Carolina Memorial Hospital's Carolina Air Care program.

Teams from Asheville, Charlotte, Durham, Greenville and Winston-Salem will attend the meeting, she said.

Guilty Plea Entered

DANBURY, N.C. (AP) — Christian David Dettle of Greensboro has pleaded guilty in Stokes County Superior Court to charges of raping a hiker at Hanging Rock Park last October.

Dettle, 26, was arrested last October after a search of the park, which was closed after the assault was reported.

He pleaded guilty to first-degree rape, first-degree sexual offense and first-degree kidnapping.

Mountain Trail To Be Dedicated

RALEIGH (AP) — Ten miles of trail in the Balsam-Highlands will be dedicated in a ceremony May 30 as part of the Mountains-to-Sea Trail System in North Carolina.

The trails are on land managed by the Blue Ridge Parkway, the National Forest Service and the Balsam-Highlands Task Force.

The trail extends from Ben Pen Gap to N.C. 215 near Beech Gap and will be used as a hiking-walking trail only.

Amnesty Centers Opening

RALEIGH (AP) — Centers to help the government process illegal aliens for its amnesty program have opened or are about to open in 11 North Carolina cities, legalization officials said.

The offices will help aliens with the paperwork and documentation needed to qualify for permanent-resident status and possible citizenship under the immigration law enacted in November. Most applicants must show, using evidence such as rent receipts and utility bills, that they lived in the United States since Jan. 1, 1982.

The amnesty program began this month by letting illegal aliens who have lived in the United States since 1981 apply for permanent resident status, officials said Tuesday.

Starting June 1, illegal migrant field workers who worked in the United States at least 90 days a year between May 1, 1983, and May 1, 1986, can apply to become legal under the program's Special Agricultural Workers guidelines.

Texas Executes Killer For Girl's Rape, Death

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Anthony Charles Williams, asking his brothers to "watch over Mother," jumped on a gurney with a smile before being executed by injection today for abducting, bludgeoning to death and raping a teen-age girl.

"Mother, I'm sorry for causing you all the pain," Williams, 27, said in a final statement. "I want to thank all those who helped me. I thank you all."

A jury in 1978 took six minutes to convict him and nine minutes to sentence him for the slaying that year of 13-year-old Vickie Lynn Wright of Houston. She was beaten with a 2-by-4 board and strangled, and was raped after she was dead.

Williams, who was pronounced dead 10 minutes after the lethal injection began at 12:12 a.m., went to his death after the U.S. Supreme Court, on a 7-2 vote, refused an emergency request Wednesday for a fourth stay of execution.

"Ernest and Otis, watch over Mother," Williams said, addressing his brothers. "Watch over the family. I want to thank all those who helped me. I thank you all." No one represented his family at the execution.

The execution was the nation's fifth this year and state's third. Twenty-three people have been put to death in Texas since it resumed executions in 1982.

Miss Wright's mother, Beth, waiting outside the prison, and received word of the execution in disbelief from prison officials.

"We've gone through hell," she said. "I don't believe he's dead. I'm going to have to have an autopsy. I want to see him in his coffin."

Mrs. Wright, accompanied by two daughters, complained bitterly that prison officials would not allow her in the death chamber or permit a videotape to be made of the execution.

"There's no provision for the victims," her daughter Tina said.

Williams was calm Wednesday as he awaited execution, playing dominoes with guards, said Texas Department of Corrections spokesman David Nunnelee. He also visited with a sister and brother, each for about an hour, and read a newspaper.

Officers Capture Long-Sought Fugitive In Oklahoma

ADA, Okla. (AP) — A man who fled prison in 1984 and eluded a three-week manhunt in Missouri in April was captured early today at a motel where he had been living for about two weeks, officials said.

John David Brown, 32, sought in the wounding of a police officer and the killing of a church volunteer in Missouri, was arrested without incident after 30 local, state and federal officers evacuated part of the motel.

said Ada police detective Sgt. Mike Baskin.

He was transferred to Oklahoma City, where he was being held, authorities said.

Brown was the object of one of the most intensive manhunts in Missouri history after a police officer investigating the discovery of a stolen car in a Rolla, Mo., motel parking lot was shot and wounded March 30.

Brown has been on the run since his 1984 escape from a Fordland, Mo., prison. Authorities said he expertly exercised the skills of a cagey woodsman in eluding law enforcement officers during the manhunt.

Visitors Defacing Monuments In Washington

By LINDA WHEELER
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

WASHINGTON — Visitors to Washington's monuments recently have left ugly scuff marks on the statue of the Lincoln Memorial, stolen impossible-to-duplicate brass letters from the Jefferson Memorial and, Tuesday, scrawled a religious message at the base of the Washington Monument that once removed will leave a distinct swath.

At the top of the monument, visitors have inserted thousands of personal mementos behind a protective glass that was constructed in 1976 to stop people from chipping off parts of the walls as souvenirs.

Park Service officials say that scuff marks left by adventurous tourists climbing the Lincoln statue is an annual problem. But the recent theft of the four Jefferson letters, which will cost $6,000 to replace, and the littering and graffiti on the Washington Monument are new concerns caused in part by a shortage of staff to monitor the national memorials.

"We are upset about the letters being taken," said Bill Ruback, Park Service superintendent. "It is the first time that has happened. We will put up new letters and make them not takeable."

The first three-inch letter was stolen last year, followed by three this year. The most recent one was taken last month, Ruback said.

A new set of letters spelling Thomas Jefferson's name and the eight numbers that give the dates of his birth and death will have to be purchased, Ruback said. The original casting was destroyed years ago.

Most of the problems of theft, statue climbing and graffiti occur late at night or early in the morning when the park rangers are not there, according to Ruback. The tourist attractions are considered closed at those hours because there is no staffing and the lights are turned off, except for those that shine over the statues of Lincoln and Jefferson. But anyone can still easily visit the sites.

Sandra Alley, a Park Service spokeswoman, said, "We would like to staff them around the clock, but we are unable to fully staff them during the day. We have never had the budget to go through the night and now we are having trouble finding people to hire for the day shifts."

Some of the damage on the memorials is difficult, if not impossible, to erase. Wednesday, workmen at the Lincoln Memorial said they were limited to water and a mild soap to get off dark scuff marks from the white marble base and the statue, because abrasives do more harm than good.

They are more optimistic, however, about removing a lengthy biblical passage left on the cement-covered light boxes at the base of the Washington Monument early Tuesday morning because they can use chemicals to remove the inked-on letters. Those chemicals will leave a lightened area in place of the scrawl, they said.

The deposit of more than 1,000 personal souvenirs including business cards, love notes, family pictures, blank checks and crude sketches at the top of the Washington Monument has officials baffled.

About a year ago, someone managed to slip a card or note behind the protective glass installed during the Bicentennial to prevent further chipping of the five masonry walls that support the pyramid roof of the Monument. Since then, the littering has become common.

"The whole thing just snowballed and now we have a major project on our hands to fix it," said Earl Kittleman, a Park Service spokesman. "It is impossible to clean all that stuff out without removing the protective glass."

Kittleman said there was no estimate available for the cost of installing new, tamper-proof glass.

Wednesday, the subject of the unwanted souvenirs was part of the brief lecture park ranger Tom Bell gave as he escorted 30 tourists clutching maps and cameras to the top of the Monument.

"Have a nice visit and please do not add to the garbage already on the walls," he said as the visitors pushed their way off the cramped elevator.

Most of the visitors to the monument about noon Wednesday seemed interested only in looking out the windows at the panoramic scene of federal Washington. A few inspected the jumbled mass of cards, pictures and notes inside the glass wall, which included a message that said, "I love you! Love, Debbie 1-6-87" and cards advertising dog kennels and airlines.

Joanne Curtiss, a 19-year-old visitor from Thousand Oaks, Calif., called the personal messages "really poor."

"It's unbelievable that people would do something like this," she said. "I think all the businesses who left cards should be publicized as places not to shop."

Four States Miss Out On Honors

WASHINGTON (AP) — There won't be any new federal flags of excellence for secondary schools in North Dakota, Oklahoma, South Carolina or West Virginia to fly in the coming school year.

But educators are celebrating today at 271 junior high, middle and high schools in the 46 other states. They were named winners Wednesday in the Education Department's annual search for outstanding schools.

North Carolina winners included Kinston High School in Kinston.

Schools were also cited in Puerto Rico and as far away as Bonn, West Germany, where a Department of Defense dependents' school won the laurels.

The four states that came up empty-handed in the Secondary School Recognition Program had, like the rest, had schools nominated for the honor by their chief state school officer.

Some schools in those and other states were ineligible because schools that have won in the past are barred from competing again for three years.

The schools were judged by a panel of 71 reviewers — two-thirds of them from outside the field of education — on a wide range of attributes, from test scores to dropout rates. They checked attendance rates for both students and faculty and the school's civil rights record. Schools got points for being drug-free. And in this bicentennial year, they also were judged on how well they taught citizenship and the U.S. Constitution.

The winning school principals and superintendents will be invited to come to Washington at their own expense this fall for a ceremonies bestowing on each a "flag of excellence."

"Excellent schools like these renew our faith in American education. They have worked extraordinarily hard and, as a result, they have much to show for it," said Education Secretary William J. Bennett in announcing the winners.

Asked why four states had no winners, department spokeswoman Jane Glickman said, "The reviewers and site visitors did not think the schools warranted recognition."

The schools nominated in those four states were good, she said, but not good enough to make the final cut.

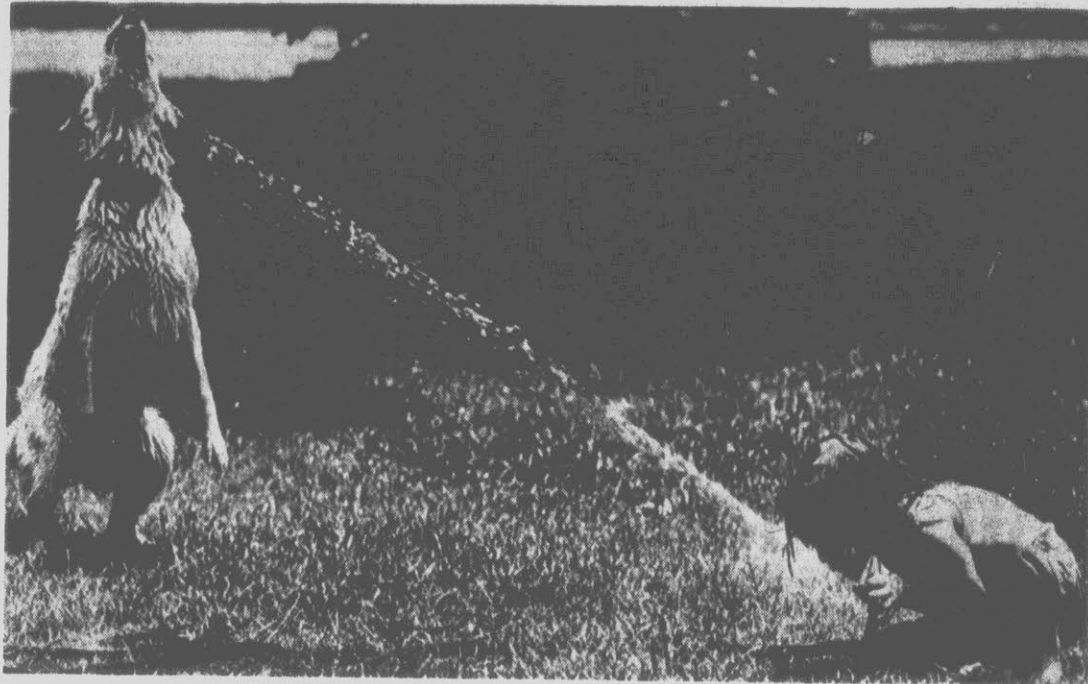

It was the fifth year for the recognition program, which costs taxpayers $728,000.

Glickman noted that South Carolina — a state Bennett has praised for its wide-ranging school reforms — has had a dozen winners in previous years, many of them ineligible for this year's awards because of the three-year waiting period before they can compete again.

Each state was allowed to nominate as many public schools as it has senators and representatives in Congress. In addition, the Council for American Private Education nominated 130 private schools.

Principals then filled out detailed packets of information about their schools, and these dossiers were rated by the review panel. In March, that panel recommended 370 schools in 49 states — North Dakota was passed over — for site visits.

A separate group of experts, many of them principals of schools honored in the past, went out in pairs in the spring to spend two days at each of the 370 schools.

Organ-Sharing Network Sets Rules For Donor Distribution

CHICAGO (AP) — Transplant agencies will be forced this fall to standardize procedures in deciding who should receive organs, or face loss of funding under the guidelines of a new national organ distribution network.

The new system, announced Wednesday night at the annual meeting of the American Society of Transplant Physicians, was devised in an attempt to make distribution of organs more fair, and could result in fewer public appeals.

"The idea that 'I retrieved it and it's mine' is simply not defensible," Dr. John McDonald, president of the United Network for Organ Sharing, or UNOS, said in announcing the guidelines.

"Not only is it the law, it is the right thing to do."

Beginning Oct. 1, all of America's approximately 110 organ procurement agencies, 200 transplant centers and numerous transplant tissue-typing laboratories will have to participate in the Organ Procurement and Transplantation Network or risk losing federal Medicare reimbursements.

The computerized network was established by UNOS last fall under a $300,000 federal contract. The network also was one of many recommendations made by the National Task Force on Organ Transplantation, which was formed under the 1984 National Transplant Act.

Under the contract, UNOS is required to collect data on all organs donated in this country, maintain a list of all those awaiting transplants and serve as a watchdog for centers with unusually poor results.

About 10,000 Americans are awaiting organ transplants, including 9,000 in need of kidneys. Because of donor shortages, only about 20 percent actually get kidneys, according to Dr. Robert J. Corry, president of the American Society of Transplant Surgeons.

"The thrust is that a patient in New York will be evaluated for an organ on the same basic scheme as anywhere else, that the public will know there's a common denominator in which the decision is being made," said Dr. Robert Gordon, a transplant surgeon at the University of Pittsburgh, which has been using a similar scoring system for more than a year.

However, some doctors are opposed to the new system.

"I am willing to fulfill any criteria. But somebody must show me that they do better than I do. And until that time comes, I don't want anybody to tell me what I have to do," said Dr. Folkert O. Belzer of the University of Wisconsin.

Under the new system, organ procurement agencies and transplant centers will have to distribute most organs based on a point system approved Tuesday by the UNOS board of directors.

The agencies also will have to share access to kidneys considered near-perfect matches, which comprise fewer than 5 percent of all donated kidneys. Such organs will go to those patients hardest to match.

Among the factors to be considered in the point system will be the patient's time on the waiting list, medical urgency and proximity to the donor.

"All recipients must have equal access to available organs," McDonald said. "Equal access implies that transplantation is to be formed for medical reasons, that there be no preferential treatments, that organs not be purchased, that there be no profiteering in the distribution of organs."

Depression Weakens

MIAMI (AP) — The first tropical depression of the year, born just days before the official start of the 1987 Atlantic hurricane season, was expected to weaken, a forecaster said today.

At 6 a.m. EDT, the depression was stalled about 650 miles east of Miami and about 550 miles southwest of Bermuda, according to the National Hurricane Center in Coral Gables. It was centered near latitude 25.5 north and longitude 70 west, the center said.

Thunderstorm activity associated with the depression, which has top winds of 35 mph, decreased, said hurricane specialist Bob Case.

A decrease in strength was likely throughout the day, he said, and slow and erratic movement was expected to continue today and into tonight.

The depression, which began forming from a low pressure area about a week ago near the Dominican Republic, was detected Monday, exactly one week before the start of the six-month Atlantic hurricane season.

NASA Objecting To Free Press Ad

WASHINGTON (AP) — NASA is asking that a public service advertisement showing the Challenger explosion be withdrawn because the ad's wording implies the full story of the disaster would not have been told if there weren't a free press.

The space agency is worried its reputation may be damaged by the ad. NASA has been buffeted in the past year not only by the space shuttle tragedy but also by the forced destruction of a faulty Delta rocket and the loss of a $161 million rocket-satellite combination launched into lightning.

The copy shows the familiar picture of the Challenger fireball and carries the legend: "If the press didn't tell us, who would?"

The mere announcement of the forthcoming advertising campaign by the Advertising Council caused the National Aeronautics and Space Administration to launch a preemptive strike.

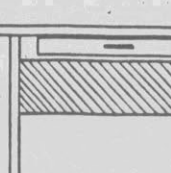

"We believe the advertisement suggests that without investigative press reporting, the public would not have learned the facts about or reason for the Challenger accident," Shirley M. Green, director of NASA public affairs, said in a letter to Robert P. Keim, president of the advertising council.

The big banks would be a lot smaller if they didn't require such high checking balances.

We'll give you free checking and interest with a Prestige Checking account at First Federal. All for a low minimum balance of $300.

If you do business with one of the big banks, examine the service charges on your checking account. We think you'll be surprised.

If you check with anyone but First Federal, you're probably paying more in service charges than you're earning in interest...if you earn interest at all.

Now examine the benefits of First Federal's Prestige Checking account. When you maintain a balance of only $300 or more, you receive interest, no-fee travelers checks, free notary services, our no-charge Prestige Place 24-hour teller and Prestige Emergency Cash in over 5500 locations nationwide. All insured to $100,000 by the FSLIC.

Maybe we could be a lot bigger if we require higher minimum balances on our interest checking accounts. But at First Federal, we'd rather be better than bigger.

Greenville Service League Gives Money To Pitt Hospital

The Greenville Service League has given $49,650 to Pitt County Memorial Hospital. The gift will be used to purchase a neurosurgical diagnostic instrument.

The Brown-Robert-Wells CT stereotaxis equipment will be used by the division of neurosurgery at the hospital.

"The funds to purchase this equipment are realized throughout the year through sales in the gift shop and from the league cart," said Mrs. Charles Wilkerson Jr., league president.

The recognition of service highlighted the annual luncheon meeting of the group. The Ormond Service Cup recipient was Mrs. Frank Layne, which was presented by Mrs. Howard Dawkins Sr. The service cup was given to the league in 1948 by Mrs. Lyman Ormond and is awarded yearly to a non-board member. Mrs. Bernard Vick received the President's Tray, as a board member, from Mrs. James W. Carter. The tray was given to the league by Mrs. James T. Little Sr. in 1950.

Mrs. Wilkerson reviewed accomplishments of the past year in her report. She announced 139 members gave a total of 11,814½ volunteer hours to league projects. Forty members gave over 100 hours each; seven members had over 200 hours, and one member volunteered more than 800 hours.

Members participated in 26 visits of the Bloodmobile, working 1,800 hours and collecting 3,700 units of blood in Pitt County. Funds of $13,406.66 were donated to patient care through the Laughinghouse Fund and 19 layettes were sewn and donated to needy newborns. Twenty-seven arrangements and 2,536 tray favors were given to hospital pa-

Today's Limos Cause Changes

At Wits End
Erna Bonbeck

There's something significant about the fact that there are more ads for limousines listed in the Yellow Pages than there are for plumbers, but I'm not sure what it is.

It might mean we're becoming more interested in flash and dash than in bubble and trouble. Maybe it's an attitude of, "If it doesn't show, don't fix it." And then again, superficial trappings could be winning the war against reality. Live it up today, for tomorrow it could be a "Dallas" dream.

Limousines used to be reserved for the ruling class or, on special occasions, for the working class. Tinted windows shielded the rich, the famous, the soon-to-be-wed or the soon-to-be-buried. Today, limousines are like taxicabs with the door handles still intact. There is no town too small anymore for a limousine. They transport kids to the prom, birthday celebrants, sightseers, couples observing a special anniversary, travelers en route to the airport and pampered women to the hairdresser.

As well as I can remember, the trend got a real shot in the arm back at the inaugural of President Reagan in 1981. I was in Washington at the time when a limo driver said, "Thank God, we've got a President who believes in limos. We've gone through four years with a leader who took cabs and carried his own garment bag. Trust me, limos are on the move again."

The man was an oracle. Before limousines "went public," I used to be so impressed with people who rode in them. A successful writer friend of mine never drove herself anywhere. She had her own limo. One night she picked me up at a hotel for dinner. As I climbed into her car, she was nestled in a corner of a stretch limo wrapped in a fur coat. I felt like Melanie Hamilton taking Belle Watling's tainted money in "Gone With the Wind." My mouth hung open as I touched the velvet, the built-in bar and the fresh flowers. All I could utter was, "Have you lived here long?"

Later, everyone rode in limos. Morris the Cat had one to ride around in to make his appointments. Game-show contestants rode in them. Even Robin Leach rode in them. I was met by a limo once in a town no bigger than my coffee table. The driver apologized for being late as the services for his last "client" lasted longer than he had anticipated. He presented me with a carnation from the "grief blanket."

I do know they change your entire personality. I never climb into one that I don't become a woman of mystery. My status is elevated to new heights, and I lapse into blessing people on the curb waiting for the traffic light to change. I fight the urge to buy a wolfhound with a jeweled choker.

Limos have become everyone's fantasy. It's only a matter of time before Lt. Col. Oliver North turns in his station wagon for one. He's only human.

Tar Heels Think People Should Be More Tolerant

Most North Carolinians think people should be more tolerant of those whose moral standards are different from their own, according to a poll conducted by journalism students at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

More than half the respondents, however, also believe that changes from traditional lifestyles are signs of moral decay.

The survey asked 497 persons to agree or disagree with the statement, "We should be more tolerant of people who choose to live according to their own moral standards, even if they are different from our own."

Three-quarters of the respondents agreed. Of Piedmont residents, 71 percent agree, while 77 percent of Coastal Plain residents agreed and 80 percent of those from the mountains agreed.

Dr. Richard Richardson, chairman of the UNC Department of Political Science, said he accounts for the higher percent of agreement from the mountain people by believing that "the fierce independence of the mountain area is very sympathetic to privacy, to individual behavior that's not probed into by society."

Mountain resident also were more likely to agree with the statement, "Changes in lifestyle, such as divorce and men and women living together without being married, are signs of moral decay." Sixty-five percent of the mountain residents agreed; 55 percent of the Piedmonters and 53 percent of those from the Coastal Plain.

Men and women responded almost equally to the two questions, with 76 percent of men favoring more tolerant behavior and 73 percent of women. Fifty-five percent of men and 55 percent of women cited changes in lifestyle as signs of moral decay.

Education levels appeared to make little difference in viewpoints. About 78 percent of people with education beyond high school said people should be more tolerant, while 73 percent of those who attended or graduated from high school agreed. Seventy percent of those who did not attend high school agreed.

Richardson said increased education appeared to make people more aware of and opposed to authoritarian aspects of intolerance. Education beyond high school did not correspond to a decrease in the perception of moral decay in changing lifestyle, however. Fifty-five percent of the high school graduate respondents said changing lifestyles were signs of moral decay. Sixty-eight percent of respondents who did not attend high school agreed.

Richardson cited the state residents' strong feelings on the sanctity of marriage as a possible reason for the findings. "This is a very homogenous state," he said, "and it has very close cultural ties to religion."

The poll was sponsored by the School of Journalism and the Institute for Research in the Social Sciences at UNC. The sample was provided by KPC Research, a subsidiary of the Knight Publishing Company in Charlotte.

The poll's margin of error was said to be 4.5 percent, meaning that in 95 of 100 such samples, the results should vary by no more than 4.5 percent from what would have been obtained had every telephone number in the state been dialed.

Wedding Guests Included A Lot Of Bride's 'Exes'

DEAR ABBY: You recently published a letter from a woman who was upset because her stepdaughter had invited her husband's ex-wife to her bridal shower.

I laughed. Five years ago, I remarried in a church ceremony, and I did it my way. My stepson was my ring bearer, my teen-age son gave me away, and my guests were all friends of ours. These friends included my ex-husband, my ex-in-laws and my ex-husband's first ex-wife. (I did not invite his second ex-wife — I was his third!) Also invited (and attended) were several people who had been significant people from the groom's past as well as my own. Many of the people I worked with were there, and you should have seen their faces when I introduced these people around!

Abby, my ex-husband and his present wife are friends of mine now. He was at one time an important part of my life, and it seemed only proper that he should be present to share my joy. I suppose this is rather unusual, but my present husband's first ex-wife gave me a beautiful bridal shower.

Life is too short for grudges. — I DID IT MY WAY

DEAR DID IT: It would be ideal if all divorced persons would do it your way, but your way is the exception. Pity.

DEAR ABBY: Are pantyhose considered undergarments? I work for a company that requires its female employees to wear pantyhose under their dresses. Abby, does an employer have the right to insist on it? I personally think it's degrading for a woman to be told what to wear under her dress. Your opinion, please. — ARIZONA WOMAN

DEAR WOMAN: I would say that pantyhose qualify as undergarments. And I think an employer has the right to require the female employees to wear hosiery as opposed to appearing bare-legged. But the employer wouldn't have a leg to stand on to insist on pantyhose specifically.

DEAR ABBY: The "Washingtonian" who complained that his wife is a dud in bed sounds like my husband. He treats me like a dog all day, and expects me to be wildly passionate the minute he drops his pants. Through the years he has asked me what he can do to make me more responsive. I have repeatedly told him to please treat me as though I were special to him, and the response would come naturally. He obviously can't do it. One night I prepared a delicious dinner, complete with chilled wine and candlelight. He walked in and proceeded to yell at me for leaving the basement light turned on! Needless to say, that left me as cool as the wine.

A friend once told him he shouldn't be out looking for hamburger when he had steak home in the refrigerator. I would give the same advice to "Washingtonian." He should show his wife the same consideration and tenderness he shows his ladyfriends, and his wife might surprise him. If he doesn't, he will end up with nothing but hamburger. — WISHING IN WALLA WALLA

DEAR WISHING: Today, the issue is not the difference between steak and hamburger — it can be the difference between life and death! Any person who knowingly shares a spouse with anonymous others is taking an enormous risk. You need to be tested for exposure to the AIDS virus — and so does your philandering husband. And you both need to be educated concerning safe sex practices, and follow the instructions to the letter.

Young People Encouraged To Start Own Business

WASHINGTON — Not that we shouldn't have expected it, but the entrepreneur era has already trickled down to the next generation. Forget those bygone days when neighborhood youngsters would peddle lemonade from the street corners. That's kids' stuff. As dated and quaint as a Norman Rockwell painting.

Today's pint-sized entrepreneur is more likely to buy out a lemonade stand than start one. And chances are the kid already owns a dozen of them around town and stocks them from the fresh citrus he buys in bulk and squeezes at a makeshift factory in his parents' basement.

While the Barry Minkows of the world are exceptions, they are also inspirations to youngsters who would otherwise spend summer months bagging groceries. A California kid, Minkow started cleaning carpets part-time when he was 15 to earn spending money. In 1985, at age 19, he had more than 100 employees and was grossing about $3 million a year.

"I think if kids have a good idea for a business they should go for it," says Sarah Riehm, who got her start as an entrepreneur at age 8 playing the pipe organ at churches in Clinton, Iowa. Since then, she put herself through college by playing music in clubs, helping to set up a typing service, a student bookstore, two restaurants, a bus system and a legal office. And this month, what Riehm calls her ultimate entrepreneurial venture paid off: Her book "The Teenage Entrepreneur's Guide" (Surrey Books, $8.95) started to appear on bookstore shelves.

"The teen years are a perfect time to be an entrepreneur," says Riehm, 34, now a Plano, Texas, mother of two who believes too many American youngsters get stuck in the low-paying and menial youth job rut. Her answer: Operate a small start-up business venture rather than take a job.

"They won't be risking their families' financial security," says Riehm. "And, at least in the teen years, if they fail, they'll get over it and may even gain some insight into their future. Starting a small business can be a good way to discover self-worth and responsibility at an early age."

Riehm says she wrote the book "to make the idea of entrepreneur more comfortable" for young people who typically are timid about taking the giant conceptual step of turning "things they are already doing" into "money-making opportunities." Besides providing some basic business tips on getting started, she identifies the three biggest mistakes (undercapitalization, lack of advertising and failure to understand the market) and tells how to avoid them. She also has devised a 20-question test to measure a youngster's "entrepreneurial quotient." Among the questions:

— Do you have at least 10 hours a week of spare time you can devote to a small business?

— Are you confident and usually successful when asking people for help, money or support?

— When you tackle a project, do you budget enough time to complete it, so you don't face last-minute crises?

— Do you relate to adults well?
"It is not for everybody," Riehm says. "Teens have some practical considerations — like school — that can get in the way." To help activate entrepreneurial brainstorming in kids, she analyzed 50 money-making, low-risk business ventures that are suited to youngsters. Most require five to 15 flexible hours a week, provide steady income of at least minimum-wage levels and can be operated out of the kid's own home with little expertise. And because transportation is a barrier to the job market for most teens, most are neighborhood businesses.

"The most expensive one I suggest is the painting business, in which buying an electric paint sprayer is something they can do after they start making money using simpler tools," Riehm says. "The majority of them require zero investment." The ideas range from house cleaning to birthday-party services, from general errand services to publishing a neighborhood directory. For painting house numbers on curbs, for instance, Riehm recommends the teen possesses personal traits of neatness and starts with a few basic materials (paint brush and paint plus cardboard number stencils). She says the service requires "no experience," and should be marketed with door-to-door flyers or by canvassing. Expected wages: At least $5 an hour. Not bad. And, as Riehm says, just starting a business is itself a success that shows more initiative and "looks a lot better on a resume than flipping burgers."

One award Sandro Piazza doesn't deserve is a gold brick — or maybe he does. In April, the 18-year-old high-school senior traveled to Baltimore to represent Prince George's County, Md., in the masonry competition of the annual skills olympics sponsored by the Vocation Industrial Club of America (VICA). Judges handed 16 Maryland finalists blueprints and specifications for a 3-by-5 foot brick wall with a design in the middle, and gave them two hours to build it. Piazza finished first, with 15 minutes to spare.

"I was probably more experienced because my dad has got the business and they don't work on Saturdays and Sundays and late hours like I do," says Piazza, who has been laying brick part-time for four years for father Tony Piazza of Mar-Pia Masonry Contractors. So far, Sandro has won a gold medal, $100 and a three-year scholarship to an apprentice program. In June, he is headed to Wichita, all expenses paid, for the VICA nationals to vie for a trip to the international olympics to be held in Australia. He is enthusiastic about the chance to lay bricks Down Under. But he says VICA can give his scholarship to someone else: "My dad has a job for me already."

Reagan Expresses Concern Over Poll Showing Europeans Trust Gorbachev

By TERENCE HUNT
AP White House Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says he hopes Europeans who trust Mikhail Gorbachev more than him "wake up soon" but at the same time he says he hopes to have a summit meeting with the Soviet leader this fall.

"It is up to General Secretary Gorbachev now to set the date," Reagan said Wednesday.

In an interview, Reagan said he is optimistic about prospects for an agreement to abolish medium-range missiles from U.S. and Soviet arsenals in Europe.

"I do believe that great progress has been made (in negotiations), more than in all the years since World War II, and that we have the best opportunity for beginning the reduction of nuclear weapons that we've ever had," Reagan said.

The president was questioned for 29 minutes in the Oval Office by television reporters from the six countries that will be represented along with the United States at the economic summit next month: Canada, Britain, West Germany, Italy, France and Japan.

Asked if he is worried by recent polls in West Germany showing that people think Gorbachev is more popular and credible than he is, Reagan said, "Yes, and I hope they'll wake up soon."

While saying he did not mean to insult Gorbachev, Reagan said, "I do believe that on the record of abiding by treaties, on the record of striving for peace, that the United States' record is one that the people should have confidence in, more confidence than the Soviet Union, which has a wrong record of violating treaties and of using subversion in order to spread its influence throughout the rest of the world."

Reagan noted that Gorbachev has accepted in principle a summit meeting in the United States. "Now it's simply a case of when will that take place."

He said the United States has been closely consulting with its allies on a Soviet proposal to eliminate medium-range nuclear missiles in Europe.

"There seems to be some pretty general agreement on the basic terms of what we're negotiating,"

Reagan said, adding, "We're hopeful of getting rid of those in the world."

However, Reagan said, "There is no thought on our side of totally denuclearizing Europe at the same time that this would leave the Soviet Union with a great superiority in conventional weapons."

On other points, the president said: —His credibility has been damaged by the Iran-Contra affair but "it has not been done by anything that has been proven — quite the contrary. It has been the image that has been created by our own, particularly Washington, press corps in describing what took place."

—"The dollar is at the place where it should remain. We don't look for any further serious drops in the value of the dollar."

"It's always referred to as the dollar being overvalued and then suddenly the dollar losing value," Reagan said.

Pitt Plan Approved

"We are not happy with the fact that the bill passed the House because at this point we don't know what's going to happen," according to D.D. Garrett, president of the Pitt County Chapter of the NAACP.

"For example, if a black person were nominated from the region that incorporates the two black districts and another person from another race and party is also nominated, we don't know whether people would vote for the black over a person of another party," Garrett said.

The Pitt County chapter of the NAACP is scheduled to meet June 14 to consider the bill, he said. "We do not know until it is taken to a full vote of the membership whether we will take legal action or not," Garrett said. "We will definitely bring up this issue (in June)."

Rep. Ed Warren, D-Pitt, who introduced the bill in the House, said he is pleased the bill will progress to the Senate. "It is a compromise I supported that the County Commissioners agreed upon," Warren said.

Crowell said although the County Commissioners feel the original three plan would have been in the best interest of Pitt County, the compromise is "an alternative the board can live with."

Talks Progressing

Persian Gulf that killed 37 U.S. sailors and wounded 21 others.

However, U.S. naval officials have said that two missiles hit the Stark, setting it on fire. The Mirage normally carries only one Exocet.

U.S. Navy officials question how two missiles, one a surface-skimming Exocet, could hit the Stark if only one plane was involved. Officials have said the other weapon could have been an AS-30 laser-guided bomb, which a Mirage can carry, but not usually in tandem with an Exocet.

"We're well on track," Rogers said. "At this point, we're hopeful we'll achieve the objectives we came over here for. A few differences remain. We hope to resolve them by this evening."

Western sources in Bagdad with knowledge of military affairs earlier noted that the Iraqis are very sensitive about security matters. One said: "Obviously there are things they would prefer the Americans not know."

It is not known whether the U.S. investigators have questioned the Iraqi pilot. Iraqi officials say the pilot thought his target was Iranian.

Iran and Iraq have been at war since September 1980, and both sides regularly attack commercial shipping in the gulf. The raid on the guided-missile frigate was the first on an American vessel and the deadliest on any ship since the war began.

U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger had demanded the Americans be allowed to question the pilot. But Western diplomats, speaking privately, said Wednesday an interview no longer was considered top priority.

Plane

crashed by the time the warplanes reached the area.

The Gotland police chief said Svistonov told interrogators he planned his escape from the Soviet Union for "a long time," although his reasons were still unclear.

He said Svistonov was a trained pilot but left his job to work as a laborer on a state collective farm. Two weeks ago, Svistonov went to Latvia to visit a friend, also a pilot.

"Early this morning, around 4 a.m., there was only one guard at the (airfield) gate. He told the guard that he was going to do some repairs on the plane," de Fine Licht said Wednesday.

The guard realized he had been fooled when he heard the motor start up and saw that the plane appeared to be preparing for takeoff, the police official said.

Svistonov "saw the guard raise his weapon," but the defector didn't believe the guard fired, de Fine Licht said.

The aircraft was running out of gasoline as it approached Gotland, Sweden's largest island. De Fine Licht said Svistonov ditched the plane in shallow water when he couldn't find a place to land and waded about 10 yards to shore.

He said the defector refused to see a Soviet Embassy official who came to Visby to see him.

Svistonov left a wife and two children in the Soviet Union but said he had not been living with them recently.

The police chief said the defector would be held in custody "for a few days" until it was decided what to do with him.

Break-In

The Bethel Police Department is investigating an early morning break-in at the Bethel Pharmacy on Main Street, Chief J.B. Buell said today.

Buell said a plate glass window in the front of the store was shattered and about 500 tablets of dilaudid were taken in the incident reported at 3 a.m. today.

Niekro Sharp, But Not Enough

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

With his younger brother watching, 49-year-old Phil Niekro pitched a four-hitter. But Boston's Roger Clemens was there, too, and his performance was good enough to keep the brothers Niekro out of the record book.

"He's one of the best pitchers in baseball," the elder Niekro said of Clemens, who gave up six hits Wednesday night as the Red Sox beat the Cleveland Indians 1-0. "He's overpowering. We were overmatched tonight."

Phil and his 42-year-old brother Joe will have to wait until Saturday before they have a chance to become the winningest brothers in major league history. Together, they have won 529 games, matching Gaylord and Jim Perry.

"A loss is a loss, whether it's by one run or 10 runs," Niekro said. "Joe was here with the permission of the Yankees and I wanted him to be a part of it. Now I'll go to New York to watch him pitch Saturday. Hopefully, he'll fare a little better than I did tonight."

In other American League games, it was Seattle 6, New York 5; Baltimore 8, California 6; Detroit 4, Texas 3; Oakland 4, Toronto 1;

Chicago 3, Kansas City 2, and Minnesota 7, Milwaukee 2.

"Our guy pitched a very good ball game, their guy pitched a better one, that's all," Cleveland Manager Pat Corrales said.

Clemens, 4-4, struck out eight and didn't walk a batter. He got out of four jams with third base occupied and earned his second shutout of the year and fifth of his career.

"It's just amazing to see him go out there and pitch," Clemens said of Niekro. "He's a great pitcher. I didn't have much time to rest between innings because he throws a lot of strikes."

The game's lone run came on a single by Jim Rice, a wild pitch, a walk, a fielder's choice grounder and a sacrifice fly by Bill Buckner.

Niekro, making his 700th major league start, also lost his bid to move into a tie with Gaylord Perry for 11th place among all-time winners. Niekro has won 313 games.

Tigers 4, Rangers 3

Jack Morris, Eric King and Mark Thurmond combined on a three-hitter and Kirk Gibson hit a two-run homer for Detroit, which swept a three-game series with Texas.

Morris, 6-2, gave up all three hits, all solo home runs — two by Pete O'Brien and one by Ruben Sierra — to gain his 150th major league victory.

The Tigers have won 12 of their last 14 games, including their last four. The Rangers have lost 10 of their last 13.

Athletics 4, Blue Jays 1

Mark McGwire hit his league-leading 17th homer and Luis Polonia added a solo home run to lead Oakland. Starter Moose Haas, 2-1, got the victory, while Joe Johnson, 2-4, took the loss for Toronto.

Polonia extended his hitting streak to 13 games when he led off the fifth inning with his second homer to give Oakland a 3-1 lead.

Orioles 8, Angels 6

Cal Ripken Jr.'s two-out single in the sixth inning drove in the tie-breaking run for Baltimore. It was the Orioles' fifth straight win and their 16th in the last 21 games. California has lost five straight.

The Orioles added a run in the seventh when Mike Cook was charged with a balk before delivering his first pitch in relief.

Jack Howell hit two home runs and Brian Downing had a solo shot for California, while Baltimore's Rick Burleson hit his first homer.

Mariners 6, Yankees 5

David Valle drove in two runs and Lee Guetterman earned his first major league victory for Seattle.

Valle drove in a fifth-inning run with a sacrifice fly to tie the score 4-4 and singled in the go-ahead run in the seventh off reliever Ron Guidry, 0-1. Guetterman, 1-0, came on at the start of the sixth and pitched two hitless innings, striking out two and walking none in his first appearance of the season.

New York's Dave Winfield hit his 16th homer, into the upper deck in left field at Yankee Stadium.

White Sox 3, Royals 2

Harold Baines and Jerry Royster hit home runs for Chicago. Baines' homer, which broke an 0-for-10 slide, came off loser Charlie Leibrandt, 6-3, with two outs in the sixth inning. It tied the game 1-1.

Ozzie Guillen led off the Chicago seventh with a triple to center and scored on Fred Manrique's single to give the White Sox a 2-1 lead. After Manrique was picked off at first and Ron Karkovice struck out, Royster homered into the left field bleachers.

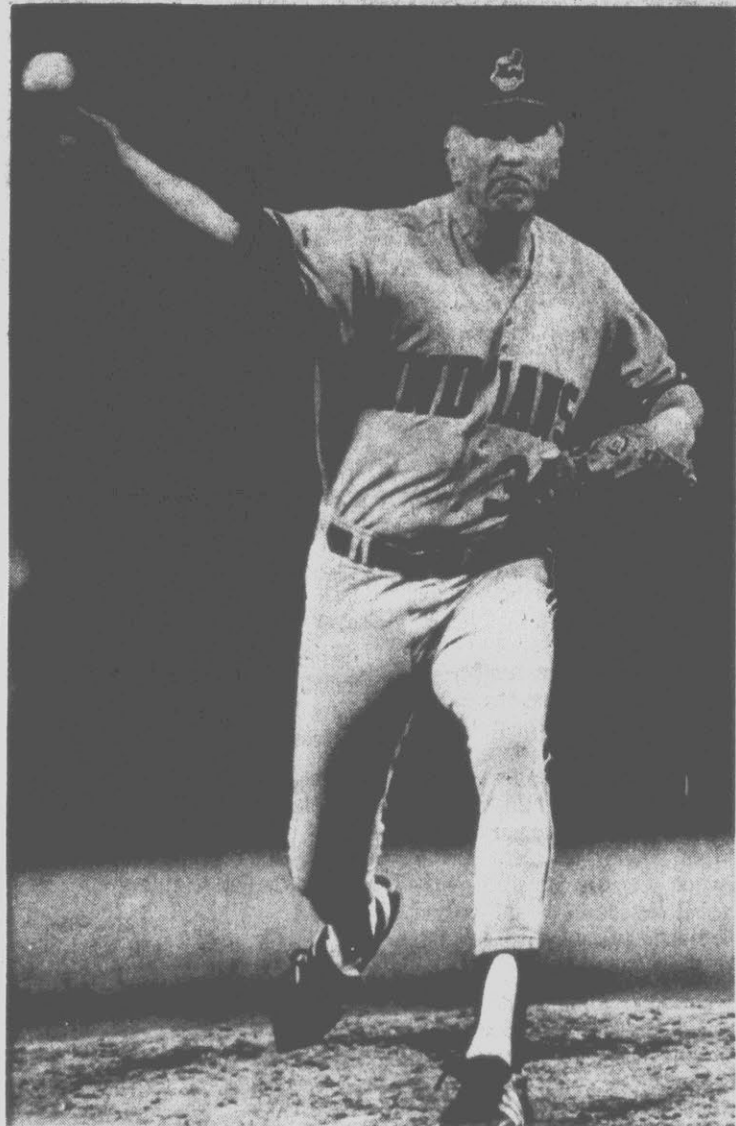

Frank White and Steve Balboni homered for Kansas City.

Twins 7, Brewers 2

Gary Gaetti homered in the second inning and two Milwaukee errors highlighted Minnesota's four-run sixth.

Frank Viola, 3-5, allowed five hits, walked two and struck out seven in six innings to win his first game since May 7. George Frazier pitched the last three innings, giving up just one hit, to record his first save and help the Twins to their first two-game winning streak since April 26.

Milwaukee has now lost four straight games and 16 of its last 18.

WILLIAMSTON — Williamston High School romped to a 10-0 victory over North Pitt Wednesday night in the first round of the state 2-A baseball playoffs.

The Tigers, the champions of the Northeastern Conference, got shutout pitching from Guy Spruill, who went the first five innings and Robert James, who finished off the action. Each of them gave up two hits during their tours of duty on the mound.

Williamston got all the runs it would need in the third inning of the game when it scored three times. Doug Manseau led off with a single and Tyrone Rodgers followed with a walk. Guy Spruill then singled, driving in both runners. An error on the play allowed Spruill to circle the bases.

The Tigers put the game on ice in the fifth inning when the exploded for seven more runs for the final 10-0 margin.

In the 2-A ranks, Eastern Plains Conference champion Greene Central will play host to Bunn Friday at 7:30 p.m.
Greene Central defeated Wake Forest-Rolesville in the first round, while Bunn, the Capital Area champ, downed Edenton.

Meanwhile, Williamston, a 10-0 winner Wednesday night over Eastern Plains third-place finisher North Pitt, advances to face Roanoke Rapids. That game has been scheduled for 8 p.m. Friday night.
Williamston won the Northeastern Conference title while Roanoke

Rapids was the runner-up in the league.
Rounding out the area teams in the baseball playoffs, Washington's Pam Pack will play host to East Wake in the second round of the 3-A playoffs.

Washington, the Coastal Conference third place finisher, beat Bertie in the first round, while East Wake, the Triangle number three, beat East Carteret, the Coastal runner-up.

In softball, the only two area teams remaining will face each other, as Greene Central visits Williamston at 7:30 p.m. Friday. Williamston, the northeastern champ, beat Ayden-Grifton, while Greene Central, the Eastern Plains runner-up, eliminated Ahsokie.

Winners will advance into the third round of play, due to be completed by Tuesday.

French Oust Open Favorites

PARIS (AP) — It must be that French home cooking. Three relatively unknown French players registered impressive upsets of seeded players Wednesday in the French Open tennis tournament.

In men's play, Eric Winogradsky eliminated third-seeded Stefan Edberg of Sweden 7-6, 7-6, 7-5, and Tarik Benhabiles upset last year's runner-up, No. 13 Mikael Pernfors of Sweden, 4-6, 6-3, 6-4, 6-0.

In the women's draw, Nathalie Herremen defeated No. 4 Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia 6-4, 7-6.

Cox, Chicod Win Titles

WINTERVILLE — A.G. Cox rolled up a 4-1 victory over Greene County to win the Pitt-Lenoir-Greene Junior High School baseball championship Wednesday.

Hal Conger tossed the win, striking out nine hits.

Scott Coleman paced the win, hitting a three-run triple. No one had more than one hit for either team, however.

The win finished the season for Cox at 11-0. It also allowed the Raiders to sweep the male championships in the league for the 1986-87 year, taking football, basketball, wrestling and baseball.

Girls Softball
CHICOD — Chicod gained a 9-5 victory over Woodington to win the Pitt-Lenoir-Greene Junior High School Conference softball championship Wednesday.

Valerie Mills tossed the win for the Chicod team.

Stephanie Haddock led the Chicod hitting with three, including a solo home run. Nikki Adams and Donna Jones both added two hits for Chicod.

Woodington was paced by Kelly Davenport and Julie Durham, each with two hits.

The title marked the first time Chicod has won a softball championship.

On a rainy, chilly day, the home team had a distinct homecourt advantage.

"Home crowds and courts are always different," said Edberg, who like Mandlikova is the reigning Australian Open champion.

"Things were in my favor," said Winogradsky, a 21-year-old from suburban Neully and ranked 152nd in the world.

Herremen said she was nervous going onto the court with the crowd still buzzing after Winogradsky's victory.

"But I said to myself, 'This is France's day, so I've got to do the same thing,'" she said.

The rain, which halted play early Tuesday, interrupted matches for about 2½ hours Wednesday, enough time to force postponement of several second-round matches.

Among those put off until today were defending women's champion Chris Evert of the U.S. against Isabelle Demongeot of France, top-seeded American Martina Navratilova against Adriana Villagran of Argentina, and men's fifth seed Miloslav Mecir of Czechoslovakia against Horst Skoff of Austria.

Other seeds had better luck Wednesday than the trio of French victims.

Men's defending champion and top seed Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia struggled for the second consecutive match, but beat Jonathan Canter of the United States 3-6, 6-1, 6-1, 6-2 to lead the march into the third round.

The dropped set was Lendl's second of the championships, one more than he lost en route to the title last year. He did not stay around to talk about it.

The women's second seed, Steffi Graf of West Germany, won her 34th consecutive match, trouncing Iva Budarova of Czechoslovakia, 6-1, 6-1.

Boris Becker of West Germany, the men's No. 2 seed, completed a rain-interrupted first-round match with a 6-0, 6-1, 7-5 victory over Diego Perez of Uruguay, while eighth-seeded Jimmy Connors downed fellow American Todd Nelson 7-5, 6-2, 6-2.

France was not perfect on the day.

In second-round men's play, 10th seed Andres Gomez of Ecuador beat Thierry Champion 7-5, 6-2, 6-2 and No. 14 Martina Jaito of Argentina beat Thierry Pham 6-4, 6-2, 6-2. No. 11 Kent Carlsson of Sweden completed a 6-1, 6-0, 6-3 first-round victory over Arnaud Boetsch.

And seeded players did not have to face a French opponent to run into trouble.

Sweden's Catarina Lindqvist, the women's 11th seed, was eliminated by Helen Kelesi of Canada 7-5, 7-5, and 13th-seed Mary Joe Fernandez of the United States, a quarterfinalist a year ago, was a second-round loser to countrywoman Stephanie Rehe 7-6, 1-6, 6-4.

But overall, it was a day for French players.

Benhabiles, a former French open junior champion born in Algeria, took apart Pernfors' serve, breaking the Swede seven times and taking advantage of a lack of mobility caused by a recurring ankle injury.

The loss in the match meant that three of last year's semifinalists — France's Henri Leconte, American Johan Kriek and Pernfors — had been eliminated in the first round, the first time that has happened since the open era began in 1968. Lendl is the only one of the quartet left.

Winogradsky took Center Court for his second-round match thinking he had received a break from the rain.

It made the clay heavier than usual and took one more piece out of Edberg's arsenal, which is better suited to faster surfaces.

"Nothing worked today," Edberg said. "I knew from the start he would give me problems."

The ovation for Winogradsky, a third-generation Frenchman whose great-grandparents came here from Russia, had hardly died down when Herremen continued the home attack.

She zipped through the first set, then came back from 5-2 in the second set as Mandlikova made errors of stroke and strategy.

Parish Benched, Fined By NBA

NEW YORK (AP) — Any question about whether Robert Parish is physically able to play Game 6 of the Eastern Conference final tonight became moot when the Boston center was suspended by the NBA for punching Bill Laimbeer.

"Fighting has no part in our game and we will do whatever it takes in terms of increased fines and suspensions to see that it is eliminated," NBA executive Rod Thorn said in announcing the one-game suspension and $7,500 fine.

Parish reinjured his left ankle in Tuesday's 108-107 victory over Detroit and was not expected to play in Game 6, tonight at Pontiac, Mich. But Thorn said the NBA suspended Parish anyway "so he is ineligible to play no matter what his physical condition."

Laimbeer and Parish were battling for a rebound in the second quarter when Parish hit the Detroit center three times and knocked him down. Officials said they didn't see the blows, so Parish was not called for a foul or a technical.

The Pistons, incredulous that the punches were not seen, asked the NBA to take action against official Jess Kersey.

Kersey and another official, Jack Madden, both said they didn't see the incident. They consulted with the third official at the scorer's table, but no foul was called.

"I cannot comment on the other officials, because I am not aware if they saw the violence," Pistons General Manager Jack McCloskey said. "I have urged and expect the league to take strong punitive action against Parish and referee Kersey."

"This protest would have been made regardless of the outcome of the game."

McCloskey said Kersey's failure to act "has to be an embarrassment to every man or woman who has ever officiated any contest from the Little League to the Super Bowl."

Long Claims Bias Led Him To Cocaine Use In 1984

UPPER MARLBORO, Md. (AP) — Testimony at the drug trial of Brian Tribble has revealed new insight into All-America basketball star Len Bias' involvement with cocaine.

Terry Long, testifying in Prince George's County Circuit Court Wednesday in the third day of the trial, said he first tried cocaine in late 1984 at the suggestion of Bias, then a University of Maryland teammate of Long's.

"I was introduced to cocaine through Len Bias," Long said without emotion.

Tribble, 24, is charged with cocaine distribution and possession charges in connection with Bias' cocaine-induced death last June 19. Long, giving the first public account of Bias' final hours, said he, Bias, Tribble and former teammate David Gregg had been snorting the drug for more than three hours before Bias suffered a fatal seizure.

Earlier Wednesday, 17-year-old Terrence Moore testified that he saw Bias five or six times in a well-known drug dealing area in Washington.

Testimony by Moore and Long came one day after prosecutors had accused Bias of being a "courtesy middleman" in a drug network run by Tribble.

Long said he first tried cocaine when Bias approached him during his sophomore year. Long claimed Bias came up to him with a rolled-up dollar bill and said, "Try this."

Long, who had charges against him dropped in exchange for his testimony, said he used the drug "seven to 10 times" and that Bias was with him "on most of the occasions."

Long testified that the early-morning party on June 19 began around 2:30 a.m. when Bias woke him up and asked him to help celebrate his new contract with the NBA's Boston Celtics.

Long said he left his room for a moment, and when he returned Bias and Tribble were standing around a large quantity of cocaine. At the request of prosecutor Robert Bonsib, Long poured about one-half cup of coffee creamer onto a mirror to demonstrate how much of the drug he saw when he walked into the room.

His testimony, however, did not tie the drug directly to Tribble. Long said that when Gregg asked where the cocaine came from, he was told by Tribble that "they got it from the bottom of the stash and said they were going to pick up a kilo tomorrow."

There was also malt liquor and cognac at the table, Long said.

Long said the party was interrupted when Jeff Baxter, another Maryland player, walked into the room. Long said he told Tribble to hide the cocaine in a desk drawer because Baxter "did not do drugs."

Long said Baxter stayed for about 45 minutes, and after he left the cocaine snorting continued. Around 6:30, Long said, Bias appeared "messed up."

"After we saw he couldn't make it to the bathroom on his own, we told him to recline on the bed," Long said.

Five minutes later Bias went into convulsions, and moments later Tribble called his mother, then called paramedics to the scene.

Long testified that Gregg removed the drug from the room. Long said he later "cleaned up" on his own.

During the cross-examination, Long was asked if he feared that cocaine would show up on the drug test given to all players.

"The urinalysis is basically a joke," he said.

Alan Goldstein, Long's lawyer, said afterward that his client had fulfilled his obligation to the state. "I think my client gave honest testimony," he said. "It speaks for itself."

Moore, meanwhile, said Tribble told him after Bias died that the drugs used at the party "came from two girls he (Tribble) was holding for."

Moore also said he was in daily contact with Tribble and helped him distribute cocaine in northeast Washington and in Prince George's County.

Tribble could be sentenced to 20 years in jail and a $25,000 fine if convicted of the charges.

Gregg was expected to testify today as the defense completed its case.

Relaxed Davis Sparkles In Leading Houston Win

By BRIAN TRUDELLE
Associated Press Writer
Relaxation and simplicity apparently are the keys to Glenn Davis' strength.

Feeling at ease, Davis extended his hitting streak to a career-best nine games, driving in five runs on three hits, including a two-run homer and a two-run double Wednesday night as the Houston Astros beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 7-2.

"I feel relaxed and things are falling in for me," Davis said. "It was a special feeling tonight. I was in a natural flow and I was making good contact."

"It has been an exciting week for me," said Davis, who started slowly this season. "I learned some valuable lessons during the slump. One of my biggest problems was thinking too much."

And when things go well for Davis, Houston enjoys the ride.

"When Glenn's hitting the ball it makes it a lot more simpler for the rest of us," teammate Denny Walling said. "All we have to do is get on base for him."

In other games, it was New York 4, San Francisco 3; Chicago 4, Cincinnati 1; Philadelphia 6, San Diego 4, and Los Angeles 6, Montreal 4.

Davis was a major part of Houston's third straight victory, but Nolan Ryan, Aurelio Lopez and Dave Smith contributed by combining on a three-hitter.

Pittsburgh scored both runs off Ryan, getting two hits in the first six innings. Lopez, 2-0, earned the victory by pitching the seventh and Smith allowed one hit over the last two innings for his seventh save.

Trailing 2-1, Davis put the Astros ahead in the seventh with a two-run double and Craig Reynolds added another two-run double to give Houston a 5-2 lead.

Davis' two-run homer came an inning later.

Don Robinson, 4-2, took the loss for the Pirates, who dropped their third straight.

The Pirates led 2-1 in the fifth on pitcher Rick Rueschel's two-run single. Houston had taken a 1-0 lead on a double by Walling, who had four hits, and an RBI single by Davis.

"When you have a person like Davis, he can carry a club because he can hit the long ball," Houston Manager Hal Lanier said. "I knew it was just a matter of time for him."

Mets 4, Giants 3
Darryl Strawberry and Gary Carter hit consecutive homers leading off the ninth inning, giving New York a sweep of its three-game series with San Francisco.

Strawberry hit his second homer of the game and 13th of the season off Mark Davis and Carter hit his fourth, first since April 20, off Jeff Robinson, 3-4. Roger McDowell, 2-1, pitched 2-3 innings and Jesse Orosco got the final out for his 10th save.

Phillies 6, Padres 4
Greg Gross hit his first home run in nine years, a two-run shot, and Juan Samuel had a solo homer and an RBI single, leading Philadelphia over San Diego and giving the Padres their fifth five-game losing streak this year.

Don Carman, 3-3, allowed five hits over 5-2-3 innings for the Phillies, who won their third straight. Steve Bedrosian, Philadelphia's fifth pitcher, got the final two outs for his 10th save.

Dodgers 6, Expos 4
Fernando Valenzuela pitched an eight-hitter and helped himself with a two-run single and Franklin Stubbs hit a two-run homer, enabling Los Angeles to beat Montreal for the first time in six games this season.

Valenzuela, 5-2, struck out three and walked two while getting his third complete game and ending Montreal's three-game winning streak.

Cubs 4, Reds 1
Brian Dayett hit a two-run, first-inning single and four Chicago pitchers held Cincinnati to five hits.

Jamie Moyer, 5-3, allowed four hits and over five-plus innings for the win. Ed Lynch allowed one hit in 1-2-3 innings, entering in the sixth and defusing a bases-loaded, none-out threat by allowing just one run.

Lee Smith earned his 13th save, pitching the final two innings in relief of Frank DiPino.

Station To Help Geoff

GREENSBORO (AP) — A Greensboro radio station said Wednesday that they have offered to help raise money to pay Geoff Bodine's $15,000 fine levied against him by NASCAR for rough driving in a weekend race.

WBIG-FM has been joined by WBTV in Charlotte and a radio station in Dover, Del., in asking callers to pledge money to pay Bodine's fine, said WBIG-FM program director Kevin O'Neal.

"We've got a very worthwhile cause," O'Neal said. "Our phones have rung off the hook and we're going to make every attempt to raise the money."

NASCAR officials announced Tuesday that Bodine was being fined $15,000 and placed on probation until Dec. 31 for rough driving during the Winn-Dixie 300 Busch Grand National race last Saturday at the Charlotte Motor Speedway. NASCAR officials ruled that Bodine made unnecessary contact with Dale Earnhardt during the race.

Bodine lives in Julian, just outside of Greensboro.

Gasoline Prices May Go Higher

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wasn't it fun while it lasted, watching the gallon dial spin faster than the price dial?

The average price of a gallon of gasoline should rise to a dollar a gallon this summer, the Energy Department predicts, and reach $1.04 by the spring of 1988.

That's an increase after inflation of 11 percent over last summer, the department says. The average, counting taxes and lumping together all grades and kinds of service stations, was 87 cents in the summer of 1986.

The quarterly forecast from the department's Energy Information Administration was released Wednesday. It says the higher prices will slow the growth of summer driving and reduce the use of gasoline this summer.

Driving increased by 5 percent from summer 1985 to summer 1986, when prices were falling and overseas travel dropped because of terrorist attacks abroad, but this year's summer increase over 1986 should be 2.1 percent. Gallons used in the summer should decline 1.2 percent to 7.18 million barrels per day, about 51.6 million gallons per day, the forecasters said.

In its previous quarterly forecast issued in January, the department had predicted oil prices, then about $17 a barrel, would fall to $16 by summer and recover to $17 by year's end.

Gorbachev Accents Change In Formal Visit To Romania

By CELESTINE BOHLEN
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

BUCHAREST, Romania — There were moments during a three-day visit to Romania this week when Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, who exudes gregarious self-confidence, looked uncomfortable, even awkward.

One of those was during a 45-minute speech by Romanian President Nicolae Ceausescu at the Palace of the Republic, when 5,000 Romanian Communist Party officials, in unison and on cue, rose to their feet 19 times and in a deafening and eerie display of conformity, clapped their hands and chanted party slogans — all of which began, "Ceausescu..."

The repetitions were so extended that an unsmiling Gorbachev at one point hesitated, not knowing whether to stand or sit.

Such old-fashioned, regimented displays of political adulation have been gone for long in the Soviet Union, pushed farther aside by Gorbachev — who favors a more natural, off-the-cuff style.

Outwardly, the visit stayed on course, with the Romanians giving an elaborate welcome, the front page of all official newspapers and warm wishes for success in Gorbachev's program of change.

Gorbachev's speech, deftly worded, made no criticism of Romania's highly centralized economic system and the tight governmental grip on its society. But in laying out the case for perestroika at home, he imparted a clear message to Romanians who, through the official press, have heard little about the Soviets' "restructuring" and loosening of controls on information.

While Romanian newspapers before this visit had carried reports on Gorbachev's speeches, they left out some of the more trenchant parts, western diplomats here said. And while Soviet publications can be found, they are not widely distributed.

Tuesday, as Gorbachev spoke of the need for full information, for paying attention to the individual, not just broad classes, for improving living standards, his words apparently registered.

"It wasn't a speech, it was a lecture," scoffed one Romanian afterward.

Gorbachev, in other speeches, has stressed that the Kremlin will not force allies to follow its reforms. He told the rally here that the Soviet Union watched the experience of its allies "with close interest." He added, "And in our turn, we are glad if the fraternal countries find something useful in the creative effort underway in our country."

A joint communique issued Wednesday upon Gorbachev's departure put the emphasis on mutual exchanges. "The sides stressed the importance of studying the experience of building socialism on a reciprocal basis," the communique said.

NEW TREND — Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, carrying out his government's new emphasis on human contact and openness, engages in a lively conversation with students in Bucharest during his visit to Romania. Gorbachev's emphasis on reform stirred resentment among some hard-liners in Romania. (AP Laserphoto)

FOCUS

Bigwigs?

Hairstyles and attitudes have often been closely related. In the eighteenth century, for example, a man's wig and his social aspirations often went up together. After all, maintaining elaborate coiffures was expensive and time consuming. Women also went to great extremes to adorn their tresses for high society. To protect her wig, a woman occasionally had to ride with her head out the window or kneel on the floor of her carriage.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Plan what you can do to help a good friend who has a difficult problem to solve and needs your assistance.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Although a civic matter may annoy you there is little you can do about it. Use tact in stating your views.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): You are very anxious to get into something that appeals to you, so start action on this early.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Try to compromise in some business matter. Don't try to force your mate to do what you desire.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): You want to be blunt in a practical affair, but use more tact for the best results.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Study your varying activities early and set up a wise schedule so you can give each one its proper attention.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): You are anxious for pleasure at any cost and it could be most expensive if you don't relax and be wise.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he, or she, will have much ability for doing work that requires a good deal of energy to get the right results, but teach this one to make sure this vitality is placed in constructive and ethical channels. Also teach your progeny to be more objective.

"The Stars impel; they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

The bidding:

- North East South West
 1 ♦ Pass 2 NT Pass
 3 NT Pass Pass Pass

Opening lead: Nine of ♠

In this column we have frequently suggested to our readers that aces were made to capture kings, not to be wasted on air. A reader from Virginia writes that he followed our advice, and it got him into the doghouse. He submitted this hand.

HOLD YOUR HORSES

The auction was routine. With 15 HCP and no four-card major, South's jump to two no trump was automatic, as was North's raise on a balanced minimum.

We do not know what inspired West to find a spade lead—we would have made the more plebeian lead of a heart and declarer would have had no problem. Realizing the lead was obviously top-of-nothing, marking East for the ace-queen, declarer countered elegantly by offering East a juicy piece of bait, which East found irresistible. Declarer called for dummy's king. East won and continued with queen and another spade. When West turned up with the ace of diamonds, an over-trick was there for the taking.

"Had I ignored your advice," complains our Virginian, "and allowed dummy to win the first trick, the contract would have been defeated. I think I will quit reading bridge!"

We feel the cure might be worse than the disease. Our bits of advice are generalisms, and are, in principle, sound guides—but not gospel. Had our correspondent put as much thought into his play as he did into his letter, he would have found the winning defense at the table, and would have had no need to enter into correspondence with us.

Since he had no entry to his hand and South was marked with the remaining spade honors, the holdup play at trick one was mandatory. Now if his partner had a trick, the spade suit would serve as the line of communication.

Comedy Hits TV's Top 20

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Viewers didn't need a laugh track to know that "The Days and Nights of Molly Dodd" was funny and they put the off-beat comedy in the top 20 last week in the A.C. Nielsen Co. ratings. True, the NBC short-run series, a sophisticated comedy shot on film without a laugh track, made its debut in the hit hatchery NBC maintains on Thursday nights following the blockbuster "The Cosby Show." "Molly Dodd," ranked 14th for the week, stars Blair Brown as a divorcee contending with predatory men and a nagging mother. The series is from Jay Tarses, the co-creator of another off-beat NBC comedy that didn't last, "Buffalo Bill." Tarses' former partner, Tom Patchett, is the creator of another NBC comedy, "ALF." "Molly" isn't on NBC's fall schedule but might be added as a replacement during the season. NBC continued its winning post-season ways last week with an average, prime-time rating of 13.8 to CBS' 12.7 and ABC's 11.5. The networks' season-to-date averages are NBC, 17.3; CBS, 15.4; ABC, 13.7. With two days to go, NBC was on its way to its ninth sweeps win in a row, dating to May 1985. May is one of four months when local ratings are measured to determine advertising rates for network affiliates. After 26 days of the sweeps period, NBC led with an average, prime-time rating of 14.6, CBS was second with 13.7 and ABC was third with 11.2. Each rating point is a percentage of the nation's estimated 87.4 million households with televisions. The last time a network had such a long sweeps win streak was 1979, after ABC had 11 in a row. Overall network ratings were down the first 26 days of the May sweeps to 39.4 rating points from 42.1 for the period last year, indicating a drop in viewers. But news ratings were up last week, perhaps because of coverage of the missile attack on the USS Stark. ABC was the prime beneficiary, almost surpassing CBS for second place. "NBC Nightly News" won the week with an average 10.8 and 23 share, its sixth weekly win in a row. The "CBS Evening News" had a 10.0 and 21 share. ABC "World News Tonight" had a 9.9 and 20 share. The share is a percentage of the audience viewing during a particular time period. In prime time, a rerun of NBC's "The Cosby Show" was first in the rankings with a rating of 23.4 and a 42 share. A rerun of NBC's "Family Ties" was second, followed by "Perry Mason: The Case of the Sinister Spirit" with a 20.5 rating and 35 share.

Fred MacMurray Says Role Change Nearly Kept Him From 'Indemnity'

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Fred MacMurray read the script. Then he told writer-director Billy Wilder he couldn't do the picture. "I thought it was a wonderful script and would make a wonderful picture," he said. "But I didn't think I could do it. I thought I had the image of a hero. I was the good guy, and I got the girl at the end. "Billy wanted me to play a part where I kill the husband. I didn't think my fans would like it." But MacMurray's fans loved it. So did Barbara Stanwyck's. The movie, "Double Indemnity," is a film classic. Many consider this movie about a wife and an insurance agent plotting to kill the husband to collect the insurance as the best film noir of the 1940s. "Double Indemnity" was one of four movies MacMurray made with Miss Stanwyck, who is honored in "The American Film Institute Salute to Barbara Stanwyck" Friday on ABC. Jane Fonda is host of the one-hour retrospective of Miss Stanwyck's 60-year career. Among the guests are Ann-Margret, Robert Cummings, Linda Evans, John Forsythe, Charlton Heston, John Huston, Shirley MacLaine, Walter Matthau, Robert Wagner, Wilder and, of course, MacMurray. MacMurray, in the living room of his Brentwood home, said that after he turned down the role he ran into Wilder the next day at the Paramount commissary. "I told him I didn't want to play it because of my image," he said. "The next day he asked me again. I said it would require acting, which I hadn't done much of up to then. Finally, I agreed to do it. And I'm thankful I did." MacMurray confessed that after nearly 50 years his memory was a little rusty. He was coached by his wife, actress June Haver. The other three movies he made with Miss Stanwyck were "Remember the Night" in 1940, "The Moonlighter," a 1953 Western filmed in 3-D, and "There's Always Tomorrow" in 1956. "So many things have been said about Barbara," he said. "There's very little left to say, except she was probably the most loved of anyone in the industry. From the littlest guy on up. She was just part of the team. Whenever she did a picture, she wasn't just a star." MacMurray said he had known Miss Stanwyck from parties given by mutual friends before they made their first film. "In one picture I was the D.A. and she had stolen a jewel from a shop," he said. "That was 'Remember the Night.' It was Christmas time, and rather than let her spend time in jail, I take her home to meet my mother, Beulah Bondi, and my aunt, Elizabeth Patterson. And I fell in love with her, of course. "I remember it was at Niagara Falls. No, I didn't push her over the falls. I don't know where that rumor came from. I was in love with her." What about the other films? MacMurray pondered for a minute. "This was 50 years ago," he said. "There was one where I didn't kill her husband." His wife, June Haver, prompted him. "What was that one you did in Apple Valley and we had just gotten married?" "That was 'The Moonlighter,'" MacMurray said. "Someone thought if we made it in 3-D it would clean up. We made this Western. Just before it came out, 3-D fell on its face. Nobody would put the glasses on." He later made another picture with Billy Wilder, "The Apartment" in 1960. MacMurray was a heel who borrowed Jack Lemmon's apartment for an illicit love affair. "I didn't hesitate to work with Billy," MacMurray said. "Then he later told me he had asked Paul Douglas to play the part, but Douglas had died.

But I think I was better for the part." The last movie he made was "The Swarm" in 1978, but, "We don't talk about that one," he said. MacMurray turned down a role as one of the rambunctious oldsters in "Cocoon" a few years ago. Another memorable film he starred in was "The Caine Mutiny" in 1954. Later, he starred in a number of films for Walt Disney, and a generation of television viewers knows MacMurray best for "My Three Sons," the popular comedy that ran from 1960-72. "We've talked about doing a reunion of 'My Three Sons,'" he said, "but I have an aversion to actors doing reunions. The kids have grown up and it's in syndication and everybody was younger than. I don't think it's a good idea."
