Heavy Rain, Lightning Hit Some Sections Of County

By CHERIE EVANS

Thunderstorms dumped rain in several areas of Pitt County Monday, wetting the appetite of thirsty lawns and gardens. But heavy showers accompanied by lightning also brought the county a few problems.

The Greenville Utilities Commission "lost about six to seven small pole-type transformers" during Monday's storm, said Roger Jones, director of GUC Electric Systems.

There also was lightning damage to fuses and breakers, he said. But, most of the damage had been repaired this morning with a few scattered calls still coming in. "Crews worked until about 2 this morning" answering calls, Jones said.

Greenville Utilities Commission recorded .53 inches of rain Monday in north Greenville, while 1.3 inches were recorded in Winterville. The Tar River level was at 2.6 feet above sea level this morning.

Though damaging to the electric system, the rain benefited lawns and crops the county. But Mitch Smith, an agent with the Pitt County Agriculture Extension Service, said the county still needs more moisture.

"The rains were very heavy in parts of the county and almost non-existent in other parts," he said. Areas that received at least a half inch of rain "should see very good response to that moisture" from lawns and crops.

Drought, at this time, affects vegetable gardens, ornamentals in the yards such as dogwood or maple trees, and performance of herbicides on row crops, Smith said.

Because of an extended damp, cool spring, many plants are shallowly rooted, he said. But, row crops surviving should have a better root system after the rain.

The "high heat and breeziness also dries out woodlands," Smith said. And "the lack of rain we've had has meant that we don't yet get above ground growth.

"One inch or more widespread rain would increase the plant growth."

Black Says School Board Vote Taken Improperly

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County Board of Education member Jim Black raised a question about the propriety of the board's recent vote on a "grandfather" school attendance policy at a Monday meeting of the board.

Black said he did not want to challenge the vote, but that he wanted minutes of the meeting to reflect that the vote was improper according to board policy.

At its May 14 meeting, the board revised the policy to alleviate imbalances in the racial makeup of several schools. By a vote of 7-6, the board changed the policy to extend only to students in grades nine through 12 in the 1988-1989 school year.

Board members voting in favor of the change were representatives of the city and minority appointees.

Black, who came from the old county school board, voted against the policy change.

The original grandfather policy allowed any student who was to be changed to a new attendance area the option to continue attending school in his original attendance area. The policy also extended to unborn children of persons residing in an attendance area.

The amended policy was proposed at the May 14 meeting by board member Frank Grooms, a city representative.

At Monday's meeting, Black said that the previous vote on the grandfather policy was out of order.

According to the Pitt County Board of Education policy manual, "When recommendations concerning policies are made to the board, they shall lie on the table for at least 30 days prior to formal action by the board."

"Since the board did not wait 30 days, nor did we vote to suspend this rule, the whole motion and vote was out of order according to our own policy," Black said. "It was the opinion of one individual at the Institute of Government in Raleigh that I have every right to challenge this action on a point of order.

"As a precondition to consolidation parents and students were promised by both boards that they could continue school in the same attendance areas. Obviously there are some of us who feel no obligation to honor those commitments," he said.

"I am not, however, going to challenge this vote even though I have the legal right to do so," Black said. "With the split that now exists over this issue we could continue to reverse ourselves every time the board members' attendance at these meetings changes."

The board is composed of seven county representatives, four city representatives and three minority appointees, who usually vote along city lines. The chairman of the board is a county representative.

"I believe that the final decision should be made by whoever is sitting on the board after the November elections," Black added.

Senate Panel Seeks Ruling On Pitt Bills

By MARY C. SCHULKEN

RALEIGH — A state Senate subcommittee today referred a bill changing Pitt County's method of election to the state attorney general for legal guidance.

Following the recommendation of Sen. Tom Taft, D-Pitt, the eight-member subcommittee of the Election Laws Committee, agreed to seek legal input on the legalities of the original "six-three" plan and a compromise bill, which was approved in the House last week.

Commissioners reversed their position on the compromise plan Monday during a lunch session, in which they decided to continue to support the original "six-three" plan instead of the compromise.

The reversal brought charges of political gamesmanship from D.D.

Garrett, president of the Pitt County NAACP.

"When we (minority groups) came into this building we were not satisfied with the compromise," he said. "As we walked into this room we became more confused because we thought the House bill was one we could live with, but we just learned the County Commissioners changed sides of the street."

"This deception was deliberate."

The "six-three" plan supported by Pitt County Commissioners allows for six members to be elected by districts and three representatives to be elected at-large.

The compromise bill also calls for six of Pitt's commissioners to be elected from districts and three commissioners to be elected at-large, but only after the three are nominated by party primaries in three regions created by collapsing the six districts. Minority groups have voiced opposition to any at-large seats.

"The County Commissioners agreed to the substitute because we (See LEGAL, A-6)

Greenspan Will Take Fed Reins

By TOM RAUM
AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan announced today that Paul A. Volcker will step down as chairman of the Federal Reserve Board in August and that economist Alan Greenspan will be nominated for the post.

The announcement momentarily stunned financial markets, but they recovered quickly.

Volcker, appearing with Reagan and Greenspan at a White House briefing, said he was relinquishing the post voluntarily after eight years. "I had no feeling I was being pushed," he said.

The nomination of Greenspan, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers under President Ford and now a New York economic consultant, came on the eve of Reagan's departure for next week's seven-nation economic summit in Venice.

Analysts had suggested that Reagan wanted to make the announcement in advance of the summit, so that the post would not become a summit issue.

"Filling Paul Volcker's shoes will be a major challenge," said Greenspan, 61.

Volcker, 59, the cigar-smoking, 6-foot-7 Fed chairman who had won wide respect from leaders around the world, told reporters, "I think the time has now come to return to private life."

He said the decision to step down had been taking shape in his mind for some time.

Volcker, who is credited by many economists with playing a key role in formulating policies that helped bring inflation down from its double-digit levels of the early 1980s to its current levels of less than 3-percent, voiced "happiness and delight" with the selection of Greenspan as his successor.

U.S. financial markets were initially jolted by the bombshell announcement because of the widely held belief that the administration would ask Volcker to serve a third, four-year term.

The Dow Jones Industrial Average dropped 24 points in the minutes after Reagan's announcement that (See FED, A-6)

Teacher Charged

An English teacher at J.H. Rose High School was arrested Monday after a student said she offered to raise his grade in exchange for a video cassette recorder, authorities said today.

Greenville police charged the teacher, Madeine Jordan Taylor, with assisting in obtaining academic credit by fraudulent means.

Police said a two-week investigation was initiated after the department received a complaint from a student who said the teacher had offered to raise a grade in exchange for a VCR. The student's identification has been withheld.

Ms. Taylor, who has been employed at Rose since 1983, was taken into custody at her home Monday afternoon and released on $200 secured bond, the records said.

According to the statute, it is unlawful for any person to assist any student in obtaining academic credit by fraudulent means. The offense is a misdemeanor punishable by a fine not exceeding $500, imprisonment for not more than six months, or both.

Barry Gaskins, public information officer for Pitt County schools, said the superintendent's office is investigating the allegations against Ms. Taylor, who was replaced by a substitute teacher today.

Gaskins said no disciplinary measures had been taken.

Pitt Towns Asking County To Solve Trash Problems

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

As the amount of limbs, leaves and other non-garbage debris mounts up in unauthorized Pitt County landfills, so, too, does the likelihood of state intervention.

According to County Planner Phil Dickerson, the county currently has only two authorized trash dumps — one in Greenville and the other in Farmville. Additional sites spotting the Pitt landscape are, "in effect, illegal dumps that may be subject to regulation," Dickerson told County Commissioners Monday.

The board discussed the trash problem Monday after receiving requests from Ayden, Grifton and Farmville that landfills be established at county-owned container sites located near each of the towns.

Commissioners did not act on the requests, but expressed concern that the matter be resolved as soon as possible. "Within a year or two we'll be faced with something we can't handle overnight," Commissioner Kenneth Dewes said.

The board will discuss the issue again at a 2:15 p.m. workshop Thursday at the county office building. (See TRASH, A-3)

Costly Line Replaced Septic Tank

By DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer

The Greenville Utilities Commission extended a water and sewer line to River Park North at a cost of $250,000 when a septic tank could have been installed to serve the science and nature park for about $25,000, a City Council member says.

"I think we danced over a lot of things lightly," Council member Lorraine Shinn said at a council workshop Monday night.

"I think when you go to the taxpayers and ask them for a bond issue to go to further annexation and you have things like this negotiated under the table and present it as council's wishes, I think it is a serious problem."

At Monday's meeting, Mrs. Shinn asked GUC General Manager Malcolm Green who had asked for the sewer line. Green told council members the commission was told the City Council wanted the sewer line instead of a septic tank.

Former City Manager Gail Meeks, who was dismissed by the council on March 16, served as a council liaison to the GUC. She was not identified by name during Monday's discussion.

Mrs. Shinn said the council was never asked about its position on the sewer line.

"I know for a fact that the prior council was not informed of this," she said. "This occurred since we were elected and since we were serving — rest assured of it, and it is a serious matter."

Council member Ed Carter said he never heard about the sewer line and asked that communication between the GUC and the City Council be improved to prevent similar problems from recurring.

"The council never discussed it,"

Carter said. "I think the City Council should have reserved the right to make that decision in conjunction with Greenville Utilities, and if the council were not involved, that's something we need to look at and make sure it doesn't happen in the future."

Buddy Zincon, chairman of the GUC, said he asked about the installation of a septic tank to serve River Park North's three buildings at a commission meeting but was told the council wanted a sewer line.

Housing Authority Moves Ahead On Fund Request

By DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer

The Greenville Housing Authority is moving ahead with efforts to secure $2.7 million in modernization funding from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, according to the GHA director of operations.

"We've passed all the hurdles up until this point," James E. Barnhill told GHA commissioners at their monthly meeting Monday night.

GHA Executive Director Kenneth E. Noland said the HUD funding, which would probably be distributed in two increments, is based on the needs of the housing authority and its management and operational capabilities.

"We have completed a joint review with HUD management and engineering officials," Noland said. "That qualifies us for the next step of approval to submit a final application."

In other business, Barnhill said repairs to a burned out unit in the Moyewood development would be completed in mid-July.

Barnhill told commissioners a $54,000 project to paint 147 housing authority units began Monday and should be completed in the middle of August.

Commissioners approved a request by Noland to redistribute leftover funds from a $15,000 painting project for University Towers.

Noland said $2,400 would be used to install a fire alarm system and $1,930 will pay for repairs to a storm sewer near the towers.

The authority spent only $10,600 of $15,000 appropriated for the University Towers painting project, according to Noland.

Meanwhile, Noland told commissioners the authority expects to receive preliminary documentation on a wage analysis from Arthur Young, a consulting firm, in the middle of June.

The study is part of a joint analysis being conducted for the GHA, the city of Greenville and the Greenville Utilities Commission.

Noland said electrical allowances in a utility analysis study had been completed and officials were working on gas allowances in the study.

"The study is needed to insure that we have appropriate allowances for gas and electricity," Noland said.

Commissioners approved a request to seek a three-year bid for an auditor.

"It will reduce the staff time of educating new auditors and will provide for a better determination of budget costs," Noland said.

Sallye Streeter, director of resident affairs, reported that the average rent at authority developments in May totaled $127.28. Rent at Meadowbrook was $109.25; Kearney Park,

Jobless Rate Falls In April

Pitt County's unemployment rate for April hit its lowest point for that month in at least 15 years, said Jim Hannan, manager of the Employment Security Commission.

The rate, 3.6 percent, reflects a labor force of 50,770 with 48,950 residents of Pitt County actually working, he said. The 1,820 listed as unemployed may not be working because of illness, pregnancy or extended vacation in addition to not being able to find a job.

The low rates may be attributed to "a greater diversity of occupations and businesses" in Pitt County, Hannan said. "We're not solely dependent on agriculture, tobacco or anything else."

"I think this reflects directly on our planners for the past years," he said. "Their being able to see ahead kept us out of one primary business."

April unemployment rates in surrounding counties were higher, Hannan said, which may be attributed to the greater emphasis on agricultural employment. Greene County had an unemployment rate of 7.1 percent during April while Lenoir and Edgecombe counties were at 5.2 and 6.5, respectively.

Council Gets $77 Million GUC Budget

By DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer

The Greenville Utilities Commission's proposed $77 million budget for fiscal year 1987-88 reflects the rapid growth in and around Greenville, GUC General Malcom Green said.

"Construction of new multifamily and single-family units has resulted in an increased demand for new utility services and more customer services," Green said as he presented the budget to the Greenville City Council Monday night.

"The budget also reflects capital outlays required to accomplish needed systems' additions and improvements, which are part of the commission's long-range plans."

The proposed budget, which was reviewed and approved by GUC commissioners, is compatible with the city's growth plan, according to Green.

"The five-year growth plans, developed several years ago and updated each year, have been coordinated with the city of Greenville's long range development plans where available and cover electric, water, sewer and gas systems' additions," Green said.

"The 1987-88 electric and gas budgets provide for continuing assistance to our customers by promoting efficient use of energy. The budget also includes funds for public communications in order to better inform the general public, and utility customers in particular, of the activities, programs and plans of the Greenville Utilities Commission."

Under the proposed budget, adjustment in retail electric rates during 1987-88 will be done only as necessary to directly track proposed increases from the N.C. Eastern Municipal Power Agency reflecting the Shearon Harris Nuclear Plant cost.

The proposed budget provides for no increase in gas rates except as required to track increases or decreases in costs received from N.C. Natural Gas, and no increases in water or sanitary sewer rates in 1987-88, according to Green, who said six additional positions are included in the budget.

According to the proposed budget, an industrial pretreatment coordinator would be added to monitor and control industrial waste and land application of sludge at the wastewater treatment plant.

A part-time drafting technician position and a part-time clerk-typist position would be upgraded to full-time to handle increased work loads in this area, the budget proposal said.

An engineering assistant would be added to handle increasing work load on locating underground utilities for all departments as required by state statutes and an accounting clerk would allow for the centralization of all invoices and accounts, Green said.

An energy services officer is requested in the budget to handle increased volume for energy efficiency certification and energy audit requests by existing customers.

The proposed budget also includes $1,650,000 in turnover to the city from the electric fund and $240,000 from the gas fund, according to Green.

Members of the City Council are expected to consider the GUC proposed budget along with the city's proposed 1987-88 following a public hearing on both budgets Monday night.

In other business, the council appointed a five-member negotiating team to discuss terms of compensation with the Eastern Pines Fire Department and private sanitation haulers in connection with the annexation of Brook Valley.

Members of the team will be Ron Kimble, finance director, Mayo Allen, acting city manager, Jenness Allen, fire chief, Bobby Roberson, director of planning and community development, and Mac McCarley, city attorney.

The council also asked the GUC to appoint a representative to the negotiating team, which will meet with representatives of the fire department.

"A 1983 amendment to the annexation statutes requires that cities contract with or compensate for economic loss to any rural fire department that is adversely affected by annexation," McCarley said.

"The proposed annexation of Brook Valley would significantly reduce the service area of the Eastern Pines Rural Fire Department. We have the choice of contracting with them for first responder service or offering to compensate them for revenue loss directly attributable to annexation during the next five years."

McCarley said similar statutes require negotiations with refuse haulers.

"A 1985 amendment requires that we contract with or compensate for economic loss any private refuse hauler whose business would be damaged by our annexation," he said. "This statute is limited to a two-year restitution."

City officials plan to send letters to all 16 licensed haulers in Pitt County explaining the statute and asking them to contact the city if they have customers in the Brook Valley area, McCarley said.

Two Shot

HENDERSON, N.C. (AP) - No charges have been filed in the weekend shooting that left a 37-year-old Vance County man dead and his brother seriously injured, Vance County Sheriff F.T. McGhee said Monday.

Clem Ray Fleming of Henderson died in the shooting. McGhee said his brother, Michael Lee Fleming, 29, also of Henderson, was wounded in the disturbance.

Clem Fleming, who died after being shot in the head and shoulder, was found lying just inside the front door of his home shortly after 1 a.m. Sunday, officials said. His brother, Michael, was shot in the groin and was in good condition Monday at Duke Medical Center.

Woman Beaten

LEXINGTON, N.C. (AP) - Police are pursuing leads in the weekend beating death of a Lexington woman whose body was found Sunday two blocks from her home.

Mary Davis, 29, was discovered in a field behind Revco Discount Drug Center on East Center Street shortly before 5 p.m., a spokesman for the Lexington Police Department said.

Lt. Larry Smith of the police department said the victim apparently had been beaten, but declined to comment on the cause of death or whether she had been sexually abused.

Ms. Davis was last seen Saturday, when she left work at a hardware store for lunch.

The board approved a policy for staff development of classified personnel including workshops and educational credit for courses taken.

The board voted to give word of intent to hire Construction Management Associates pending further discussion about the firm's construction services.

Dr. Charles Ward, chairman of the Pitt County Bicentennial Committee, presented a painting of the signing of the U.S. Constitution to the student body president at each county high school.

The board approved an audit contract with the certified public accounting firm of Joyner and Hatcher.

The board also approved a gas easement in Farmville and some personnel recommendations.

which Dickerson will present commissioners details of state requirements governing waste disposal and with information obtained from the National Soil Waste Management Association Exposition held recently in Dallas.

Sedimentation and erosion control and assessment of fines for local individuals who have failed to comply with control regulations also will be addressed at the Thursday workshop.

According to Dickerson, the state Sedimentation Control Commission in March placed the Pitt County SEC control program on probation, giving the county 90 days to enforce state standards.

The program was put in place "primarily to keep dirt (generated by construction projects) out of streams, creeks and waterways," County Manager Kramer Jackson said. Fines for failure to comply with standards can cost as much as $100.

Action items on Monday's agenda included a $17,535 budget transfer to cover architectural fees for construction of the Mental Health Center Detoxification Center and the transfer of an additional $3,400 needed for operation of the joint city-county maintained animal shelter.

Commissioners also approved the transfer of $600,000 from the county's unappropriated fund balance to make the initial payment for property located near the county courthouse which was purchased to handle office overflow.

Sewer Line Challenged

"I asked that very same question at a commission meeting," he said. "The answer was that the council wanted a sewer line out there."

Meanwhile, Council member Inez Fridley said the sewer line would serve facilities that would be developed on Mumford Road.

"You pick up Mumford Road along with that," Fridley said.

Tom Tysinger, director of engineering and inspections, said he believes the sewer line was extended to meet the needs of future annexations.

"My memory tells me that the sewer line was discussed as part of annexation plans about four or five years ago," Tysinger said. "That's my recollection, but I was not directly involved in the negotiations."

"There have been discussions about annexing an area on Mumford Road as a second phase of the Brook Valley annexation. Brook Valley has become our number one priority."

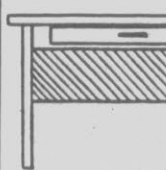

However, the city doesn't have any active plans to annex any property in the River Park North area, according to Green, who said there have been only one or two inquiries and one application for sewer service from the pipe.

Green said the sewer line, which was completed earlier this year, begins on Mumford Road at Venter's Grill and extends to River Park North.

Editorials Tangible Step

A bill prohibiting the misuse of confidential information by public officials is a measure that deserves the support of the N.C. Legislature.

Although this type of bill shouldn't be necessary, and in most instances, probably isn't, the legislation removes any questions concerning right and wrong use of privileged information.

The bill, authored by Rep. Walter Jones Jr., D-Pitt, passed the House and awaits consideration in the Senate. It appropriately makes it unlawful for an employee of the state of North Carolina or a public officer to acquire interest in any property or enterprise based on confidential information that individual has had access to through his official capacity.

Its premise is sound. Certainly using information privileged by office to profit financially or benefit personally is unethical and should be illegal. Forthrightness and integrity are black and white issues, and this bill dispels any uncertainties concerning appropriate conduct. If it passes, those lawmakers whose actions are questionable can no longer tread a thin edge of propriety where this issue is concerned. The bill can be seen as a safeguard of the public interest.

In fact, this bill protects both the public and the integrity of public officers and state employees. Public officials and employees have a responsibility to ensure government operates in the best interest of the people — not the pocketbooks of the legislators. This bill puts that duty into perspective and is a tangible step toward increased ethics for lawmakers.

Using confidential information for profit is wrong. It cannot be justified by long hours, personal sacrifice for office or low salaries. Jones' bill cements this point of view and should be ratified into law by the Senate.

School Financing Spurs Debate

RALEIGH — If the state's sales tax is not raised a penny to pay for new school construction, will counties have to raise property taxes? That's a question that has Gov. Jim Martin locked in debate with Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Granville, and other House leaders who have proposed the sales tax hike.

In pushing the four-year sales tax increase to 6 percent, Watkins, Rep. Bobby Etheridge, D-Harnett, and other House members stressed that the only other plan for building schools — the selling of bonds — would require property tax increases.

"There are other means which have been proposed" for financing school construction, Watkins said during House floor debate. "But they will have to be paid back through ad valorem (property) taxes." On average, he said, property taxes would increase 21 cents per hundred valuation, or by as much as 33 percent.

Martin says that just isn't so. He and Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan propose the sale of state bonds to create a loan fund for local governments. The counties could borrow from the state to build schools and pay back at low interest rates using income from the last two half-cent sales tax increases.

"If it's not necessary to raise taxes, we should not raise taxes," Martin said at a press conference. "We can make better use of taxes that have already been levied," he said in reference to the two half-cent increases which have been approved since 1983. Those taxes are bringing in $130 million a year which is supposed to be spent on schools.

But the Legislature has found that the counties, while following the letter of the law concerning the half-cent sales tax increases, did not follow in spirit. Counties are using that new money for schools but they've cut their other spending for schools. The effect is that county spending for education has increased, but not by the full $130 million anticipated by the Legislature when it passed the tax increases.

Martin says that if the $130 million is fully dedicated to school construction in each of the next 20 years, then no property taxes will be needed to pay back the bonds. But Watkins argues that such thinking is unrealistic.

First, the $130 million is earmarked for schools in general, not just school buildings. Therefore, some of the money is earmarked for curriculum enhancement, teacher supplements and other kinds of capital expenditures.

Secondly, Watkins argues that if county commissioners lacked the commitment to dedicate their full share of the $130 million to new education spending, they will lack the commitment to put it towards paying off bonds. They'll either fail to OK the bonds, and therefore fail to build needed schools, or they'll raise property taxes to pay off the bonds.

Martin answers that if a county decides not to build schools, that is its decision. "The counties ought to have the responsibility to build schools, that's the state tradition," he said.

And Watkins retorts that the state Constitution says nothing about such a county responsibility. "It says that the state shall provide a free and equal system of education," Watkins argued to the full House. Education in North Carolina will never be free and equal, he says, until the state provides its poorest counties with good school buildings.

It may be that each man is right, for at least some of the counties. The financial condition of each county, along with its school needs, might determine how this debate is eventually settled. If it is settled, that is.

Ask The Air Travel Lady

The Air Travel Answer Lady is here to help. Just send your queries to "Dear Airy," and she will favor you with a reply.

Dear Airy: I am taking a flight from Washington to Atlanta. We've been sitting on the runway for four hours. How do I know if I will have enough air to breathe until we take off? — Patty Faye Dimetres

Dear Patty: Four hours is not too long a time to wait on the runway these days. What I always do for my own safety is carry a canary in my pocket. When the canary keels over dead I know it's time to slide down the emergency chute.

Dear Airy: I was told I could fly to San Francisco for $99. But when I arrived at the airport I was informed that particular fare was only good on Columbus Day. I asked them if they had any other bargains and they told me they had a red-eye special to El Paso with intermediate stops in Charlotte, N.C., and Billings, Mont., for $355. Is someone giving me the business? — Jane Cohen

Dear Jane: Your airline is only charging you what the market will bear. Thanks to deregulation its fares must compete with the other carriers on the same route. This is how the fare-war works: The various airlines announce bargain tickets for the same destination, which are sold out just as you get to the counter. You then have the choice of paying the regular fare or canceling the flight, which carries a penalty of five years in prison.

Dear Airy: Are there any regulations spelling out the width of seats and leg room on American carriers? — Philip and Myrna Aiello

Dear Philip and Myrna: There are strict rules concerning the transport of pets and domestic animals in flight, but they do not apply to humans. For example, pets are not required to eat airline food, but human passengers are. The reason for this is the FAA knows every pet is dear to someone. But the government still considers human beings to be excess baggage.

Dear Airy: When the flight I'm on has a near miss in the air, do the people on my plane wave to the passengers on the other plane, or should they wave to us? — Kay Roberts

Dear Kay: In a near-miss situation either side may wave first, but only the pilots can make rude gestures with their fingers.

Dear Airy: Why do you see so many little kids flying on planes these days? — Kathy Bye

Dear Kathy: More children are flying now than ever before because it's cheaper for a mother to travel with her kids than put them into a day-care center.

Most of the mothers you see on planes have no particular destination in mind and are just killing time until their husbands can take them to Burger Chef for dinner.

Dear Airy: Do airborne pilots get extra pay for telling you what cities you are flying over? — John R. Profit

Dear John: No, they are all volunteers who delight in giving a tour of the earth at 40,000 feet. These pilots believe a passenger will lose his sense of awe if he doesn't know he has just flown over Topeka, Kan.

Peaceful Heritage

The son and grandson of an American legend, Alvin York, visited the Argonne Forest scene where villagers and dignitaries gathered to honor the most celebrated hero of World War I.

The occasion was Memorial Day and a bronze plaque set in a granite base was unveiled.

In both French and English the plaque details the story of how Sgt. York single-handedly silenced a nest of 35 machine guns and killed 25 enemy soldiers while capturing 132 others.

Part of the Alvin York lore is that he was a peace-loving man, a conscientious objector who weighed his role as a soldier and finally decided it was best if he did whatever he could to get the war and the killing over.

He did his share.

It was the first visit to France for York's son, who had wanted for years to see where his father made history.

It's pretty country, "just like back in Tennessee", observed Andrew York, "and peaceful". His daddy would have liked that.

He left it that way.

Public Broadcasting Feels A Crunch

WASHINGTON — It has been nearly 20 years since the federal government undertook broad funding of public television and radio. In those two decades, the Public Broadcasting System and National Public Radio have, despite financial worries, carved a class — some would say high-brow or elitist — niche in the broadcasting spectrum.

From TV's "Sesame Street" to the award-winning, liberal news show, "All Things Considered," public broadcasting has pioneered thoughtful and innovative programming that commercial rarely if ever matched. And publicly supported radio is America's primary source for jazz and classical music on the airwaves.

But maintaining these standards has not been easy. Public broadcasting is today feeling the crunch of increased competition from cable as well as other home entertainment sources. Gradually, public broadcasting may be easing toward more popular programming, aimed at broader audiences. It could change the dynamics of American media.

Five years ago, NPR was nearly bankrupt. After a sometimes contentious reorganization, the network paid its debts last year ahead of schedule. Still, as the hours of pledge breaks on public radio attest, the system is barely solvent.

PBS, although relatively more secure, is beset with rising production costs. Maintenance of quality programming will require an expansion of the system's current $1.1 billion funding base, garnered from grants and pledges. A PBS executive recently called the search for revenue that network's "question of the century."

One sign of this concern is the recent effort by PBS New York member station WNET to imitate the Home Shopping Network, which may rake in $1 billion this year.

WNET operates on a frequency not reserved exclusively for public television. Earlier this year, it asked the Federal Communications Commission for permission to run a home shopping program during the hours when the station would otherwise be off the air. After heated criticism from many quarters, including the Corporation for Public Broadcasting, WNET withdrew its request.

Under current broadcasting law, selling products on a public station would be illegal. Any future action on the idea will require congressional approval. But the support voiced by many public television executives for this and other money-making plans suggests that the era of PBS' tasteful vow of poverty may be over.

On the radio front, too, pressure to broaden the listener base may be mounting. Writing in Current, a broadcasting trade paper, CPB researcher David Giovanni suggests there is "no persuasive reason — certainly no audience-based reason — why public radio is programming classical music and jazz. We seem to be doing it today because we were doing it yesterday."

Currently, about 200 of NPR's 325 member stations devote substantial air time to jazz, and nearly all of them concentrate on classical music. Using recent listener survey data, Giovanni argues that what supports NPR's expanding listener hours is its news programming, not its music. Many of those who tune into "All Things Considered" and the like switch to soft rock and easy-listening stations thereafter.

"In fact," writes Giovanni, "it is not rare to see more of public radio's audience listening to the commercial classical station in major dayparts than to the public station."

News like this is bound to influence financially-strapped public broadcasters. Already, many stations emphasize easily-recognizable classical or jazz "hits" on their play lists, to maximize listener appeal. The future may bring more "commercialization" in pursuit of those vital donations.

Throughout its history, public broadcasting has relied on a core of elite, affluent supporters. Yet, even now a station with a donor base equal to two in 10 listeners or viewers is considered fortunate. The logic of mass appeal may in fact alienate some of the industry's long-time supporters. Those who value public broadcasting the way it is would do well to vote with their dollars.

Strength For Today

When should a person retire?

There are many who say early. If a person by the time he or she has reached the middle 50s or 60s could give up the routine connected with making a living, how rich the remainder of life might be when given to cultural pursuits and the unselfish serving of fellow men.

There are others who dislike retirement in principle. They point to the many people who, forced to retire early, become restless and dissatisfied and quickly fall ill and die. Opponents of retirement believe that purposeful work is necessary to health.

It would be unwise to derive a general principle from one or the other of these points of view that would be applicable to everybody. The important thing is for senior citizens not to feel that they are drifting out of life and have nothing more to offer the world.

Public Forum

To the editor: In response to Mrs. W.E. Tripp's recent Public Forum letter, many people in Greenville are sincere in their desire for equity in all schools countywide (definitely including North Pitt) and have spent a great deal of time and energy fighting for this goal!

It is impossible, however, for the city's concerned citizens and board members to make changes in the North Pitt district without the help of people from North Pitt and North Pitt's school board representative. The city board members have only five of the possible 15 votes and can pass nothing on their own! Had we had the support of the North Pitt district and the support of its school board representative, we would have been able to pass the proposals for equity in capital funding and systemwide racial balance, since the two county minority board members were voting with us.

However, Ferrell Blount, the North Pitt district representative, and Beverly Congleton, the representative from one of its feeder schools, Stokes, have voted with the other white county board members in a block vote defeating proposals for systemwide school equity, thus voting AGAINST measures which would have definitely been favorable to North Pitt and Stokes children! Other districts have had questionable representation, also.

We must elect in November school board members who will not be concerned with their loyalty to city or county but with their loyalty to children — all children systemwide.

Only by working together can we solve these problems! We must all be willing to do our part — whatever it takes — fairly and equitably to achieve our goal — the best education possible for all children in Pitt County!

State Report Projects Loss Of Traditional Jobs

RALEIGH (AP) — A study published by the Governor's Office of Budget and Management says about 79,000 jobs in tobacco, textile and apparel work will not exist by the year 2000, but adds there will be plenty of jobs to choose from.

The predictions appear in "The North Carolina Long-term Economic-Demographic Projections."

The new jobs, 510,000 according to the study, will be in manufacturing areas such as non-electrical machinery, rubber and plastics, instruments and printing and publishing.

Released Monday, the report projects that by 2000:

- The population will jump 14.3 percent, from 6.3 million in 1986 to 7.2 million. It says the average North Carolinian will be older — from 31.5 years old in 1986 to 36.5 years old.
- The number of children under 5 will increase, reversing a trend over the last 14 years, as their baby-boomer parents reach child-bearing age. Meanwhile, the number of college-age kids will drop 9.4 percent. Since 1970, that group increased 19 percent.

- Those at retirement age will grow "at a tremendous rate" — 36.2 percent — reaching nearly 1 million.
- Housing starts will decline — peaking at about 88,500 in 1988 and then declining to between 75,000 and 80,000 through the 1990s.

The projection reports were ordered by the General Assembly in 1980 to coordinate gathering and distribution of economic and demographic information throughout state government. This is the third edition published since 1980.

The state's population, which grew 1.5 percent per year from 1983 to 1985, will slow to about 1 percent a year through the end of the century. The projections said much of the growth will come from within the state, not because of migration into North Carolina.

"The median age is rapidly increasing — moving from 26.6 years in 1970 to 31.7 in 1986," the report said. "This ... causes projected births to rise."

The increasing number of children expected in the youngest ages — birth to 4 years old — has significant implications for the state as it deals with such issues as day care.

The report, prepared largely by Mike Kiltie, senior economist for the State Budget Office, says some traditional assumptions about economic growth in the state are fading.

"The conventional logic that significant employment gains would be difficult to sustain without comparable growth in high-paying manufacturing jobs appears finally to have been laid to rest," the report said, "as service-sector employment growth has exploded in a multitude of directions in recent years."

But one concern the forecasters can't get a firm hold on is the impact of changes in manufacturing.

"It is not obvious ... to what extent a stagnant manufacturing sector is cause for concern," the report says. "The issue is further clouded by ... the state's manufacturing sector, which maintains output increases despite stagnant or declining employment levels. ..."

"In the longer term, North Carolina will continue to pay a heavy toll for its historical dependence on textile, apparel and tobacco products."

By the end of the century, according to the projections, 58,000 textile jobs will disappear. The rest will be lost in apparel and tobacco manufacturing.

"At 150,000, textile employment will be only one-half of its 1983 annual level," the report states.

"Were it not for the expectation of significant losses in traditionally dominant manufacturing industries, North Carolina would have a strong manufacturing employment outlook."

Reynolds Investigated For Shipping Tainted Imported Tobacco To Japan

By ANNE SWARDSON
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

WASHINGTON — Federal officials are investigating whether a subsidiary of RJR Nabisco Inc. falsely certified that tobacco in 160 million cigarettes exported to Japan met U.S. safety standards when in fact they contained up to five times the legal limit for one type of herbicide, government and company officials confirmed Monday.

About 1.08 million tainted cigarettes already have been distributed in Japan through a sales promotion to retailers. A spokesman for R.J. Reynolds Tobacco USA, the company involved, said the cigarettes do not constitute a health hazard and said each retailer received only one pack. Reynolds has agreed to dispose of an additional 16,000 cases of cigarettes that were shipped to Japan earlier this year but not distributed. There are 10,000 cigarettes in a case.

In North Carolina, more than 350,000 pounds of Reynolds tobacco and 4,000 cases of cigarettes are being held under seizure orders by federal authorities. All are said to contain levels of the herbicide dicamba that exceed U.S. standards.

The U.S. attorney in Greensboro, N.C., and the U.S. Customs Service are conducting a criminal investigation into the import of the blended tobacco from Reynolds' West German subsidiary. The tobacco is believed to have originated in Pakistan.

Copies of cables that apparently were sent between the State Department and the U.S. Embassy in Japan provided details of the shipments and the investigation. One, from the State Department, says "RJR, perhaps knowingly, gave false certificates that the tobacco was tested and that it complied with legally permissible levels of chemical residues."

The cabled response from the embassy in Japan said Japan has no legal limit on dicamba in tobacco, so that the only possible legal violation would involve importation of the tobacco into the United States. But the cable went on to suggest that "sensitivities in Japan" could lead to a "health scare" that could spread to other U.S. cigarette manufacturers products."

The cable also said the Japanese Foreign Ministry had asked that federal prosecutors keep quiet about the export of the tobacco to Japan and concentrate only on its import to the United States, so that "the Japanese press would be less likely to learn of the incident."

The discovery of the contaminated tobacco comes at an awkward time for U.S. tobacco companies, which are seeking to vastly expand their market share in Japan because that country earlier this year lifted stiff import restrictions on American cigarettes.

Reynolds is cooperating with the U.S. attorney and customs in their investigations.

Bank Commissioner Begins 8-Year Term

RALEIGH (AP) — The state's new banking commissioner acknowledges knowing little about the industry he will regulate, but promises to seek a balance between its interests and those of consumers.

William T. Graham began his eight-year term Monday after a swearing-in ceremony at the state Capitol.

He joked in a brief speech that since Gov. Jim Martin tapped him for the post in March, friends have asked whether Graham could help them secure a loan or balance their checkbooks.

"I am barely, some would say not at all, competent in those two areas, especially the latter," Graham said.

Later, he told reporters he had not had much time to study the banking business or state laws governing it since Martin appointed him to succeed James S. Currie, whose term expired March 31.

"It's going to be a learning experience for awhile, without question," Graham said.

He said he was confident he could learn enough to handle the job of overseeing 51 state-chartered banks which, combined, have assets totaling $12 billion.

Graham said he envisioned his role as striking a balance between a healthy, profitable state banking system and the interests of consumers, as well as those of nationally chartered banks that do business in North Carolina.

"Sometimes their interests are not always the same," he said of state and national banks.

School Bus Recall Asked

RALEIGH (AP) — A national consumer group is charging that since 1977, a High Point bus manufacturer has been building defective bodies that allegedly can split open in a collision, and the group is asking for a recall.

The Center for Auto Safety said that three accidents involving Thomas Built buses, including one in 1985 near Snow Hill, resulted in the deaths of six children and injuries to 45 people. The bus floor separated in all three accidents, the group said.

"School children are being maimed and killed in Thomas school bus crashes while your National Highway Traffic Safety Administration sits on safety standard compliance investigations that could have prevented these tragic deaths and injuries," Clarence Ditlow III, the group's executive director, wrote in a letter to U.S. Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole.

The center has called on the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration to recall 50,000 school buses made by Thomas. But officials with the company denied that their vehicles were faulty.

Officials with Thomas Built Buses, the nation's second largest producer of school buses, said the floor joints in the company's buses "meet or exceed" federal safety standards.

IN THE STATE

Top Salaries

GREENSBORO (AP) — When the former chairman of RJR Nabisco Inc. retired, he received $1.8 million in compensation. But he did not take with him the title of North Carolina's highest paid executive for 1986.

According to a survey of executive pay conducted by the Greensboro News & Record, Leon Levine, chairman of Family Dollar Stores in Matthews, drew $1,840,000. His salary was determined from proxy records filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission by publicly held companies.

Wilson received $1,835,000, according to the survey.

Third on the list was Hugh McColl Jr., chairman of NCB Corp. in Charlotte, at $1,358,995.

The newspaper said executive pay was not necessarily related to a company's size or profits. Hampton Industries, for instance, a Kinston apparel maker, is just one-sixteenth the size of Burlington Industries. But David Fuchs, Hampton's chairman, made more money in 1986 than William Klopman, who retired as Burlington's chairman last year.

Fuchs earned $651,054 in 1986, while Klopman made $640,756.

Sentence

WILMINGTON (AP) — A 23-year-old electrician was sentenced to life in prison after pleading guilty to the first-degree murder of his 17-year-old girlfriend.

Ronald Cleveland Hyatt turned to his weeping relatives and smiled wanly Monday after the sentence was announced.

In a surprise decision Friday, Hyatt pleaded guilty in the death of Alysha Jean Sirmons as his lawyers were preparing his defense in the final days before his trial was scheduled to start.

Accident

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — The security guard who killed a man during a scuffle at the North Carolina School of the Arts didn't intend to fire his pistol, an investigator says.

Tom E. Sturgill of the State Bureau of Investigation said Monday that the security guard, Thomas F. Shore, 45, was attacked by Robert Maurice Williams, 43, Saturday night.

But Brenda K. Williams, the wife of the dead man, said that her husband's condition was diagnosed as schizophrenia and he wasn't violent.

Navy Cruiser Escorts Ship With Female Crew In Gulf

By NORMAN BLACK
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Navy officials say they sent a guided-missile cruiser to escort a tender into the Persian Gulf to work on the USS Stark because nearly one-fifth of the repair ship's 1,300-member crew is female.

"It was a precaution and that's why we did it, because of the female complement," one official said Monday, requesting anonymity.

"There would normally be some kind of escort because the tender is unarmed. But we didn't want to take any chances."

The officials agreed to discuss the matter after the destroyer tender USS Acadia arrived safely in Bahrain to begin repairs on the Stark, which was badly damaged in the May 17 Iraqi missile attack that killed 37 U.S. sailors.

The tender carries about 240 female officers and sailors among its crew of roughly 1,300. It was escorted to Bahrain by the cruiser Fox, which was temporarily detailed away from a battle group supporting the aircraft carrier Constellation.

The Navy declined comment when asked about the propriety of sending female sailors into the troubled gulf region. But a ranking officer who requested anonymity denied the service was ignoring prohibitions against women serving in combat-related jobs.

"This is not a combat zone and the Acadia is not a combat ship," said the official. "And she is not going to be steaming around the gulf. She is going to be tied up in port in Bahrain working on the Stark."

"You can't have it both ways," another official added. "If women are going to be allowed to go to sea on support ships, then they have to be available to go wherever that ship is needed. And the Acadia is needed in Bahrain."

The tender is expected to remain in Bahrain for at least six weeks repairing the Stark so that it can sail home.

Navy Uses 'Spy' Phone Reagan Urges Allies To Stand Together

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Navy, as part of its investigation of alleged espionage by Marine embassy guards, has established a toll-free "800" phone number to encourage reports of suspicious behavior.

The toll-free number went into operation late last month but was not publicly announced until Monday.

Unlike the Army, which established a "spy hotline" in March to field any reports of suspicious behavior, the Navy's new hotline is geared specifically to the continuing investigation of Marine guards and other embassy workers.

The Marine Corps is part of the Navy, and the investigation of the Marine guards is being conducted by a special task force of the Naval Investigative Service.

The hotline was established "for people with information concerning incidents or indications of security breaches by any U.S. citizen serving at any of our diplomatic establishments," the Navy said in a statement.

"The Naval Investigative Service is conducting an extensive investigation of admitted and alleged acts of espionage by Navy people. Personal interviews can be arranged with NIS agents, if desired."

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, prodding reluctant European allies for military help in the tense Persian Gulf, says free nations "should not cower" or be expected to stand alone.

Outlining his goals for the seven-nation summit to be held June 8-10 in Venice, Italy, Reagan made clear Monday he will tell other leaders they have an obligation to help the United States defend merchant ships from becoming targets in the Iran-Iraq war.

"The American people are aware that it is not our interests alone that are being protected," Reagan said in a speech in the East Room of the White House. "The dependence of our allies on the flow of oil from that area is no secret."

Despite pleas from Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger, NATO allies have refused to join U.S. warships in protecting oil tankers in the gulf. Officially, the State Department says consultations with allies have been inconclusive.

Reagan said the subject will be discussed again when he confers in Venice with the leaders of Britain, West Germany, France, Italy, Japan and Canada.

"The future belongs to the brave."

Reagan said. "Free men should not cower before such challenges and they should not expect to stand alone."

Noting that 37 American sailors were killed in an Iraqi missile attack on the frigate USS Stark on May 17, Reagan said, "They died while guarding a chokepoint of freedom, deterring aggression and reaffirming America's willingness to protect its vital interests."

The president's speech came two days before he flies to Venice in preparation for the summit. Originally, he was to have made a state visit to Italy, but that was scrapped because of the collapse of the Italian government.

Aside from a day trip to Rome on Saturday to meet with Pope John Paul II, the president has no major activities scheduled before the summit, giving him plenty of time to rest and adjust to the six-hour time change between Washington and Venice.

One potential summit problem was eased by the conditional acceptance by West Germany on Monday of a U.S.-backed Soviet proposal to eliminate medium-range nuclear missiles in Europe.

AIDS Virus Found In More Heterosexuals, Reports Say

WASHINGTON (AP) — New research from around the world shows AIDS is spreading steadily among heterosexuals, and one study suggests that the ability of AIDS victims to infect others climbs dramatically as their disease gets worse.

Among the findings reported at the Third International Conference on AIDS was one by Belgian scientists concerning a 48-year-old engineer who gave AIDS to 10 women before dying of the disease himself in July 1986.

"The reality that heterosexual contact is an efficient mode of transmission (of AIDS) is established," said Dr. Robert Redfield of the Walter Reed Army Institute of Research in Washington. "It is the major mode of transmission in the world and it will become the major mode in this country."

AIDS testing of military men and women has found, furthermore, that half of those with AIDS infections are single and half are married.

"This is no longer a disease of singles," he said. "It's a disease of the American family."

Redfield reported Monday that the ability to transmit the virus is lower in the earliest stages of the disease, but climbs sharply as the disease progresses.

He studied couples in which one partner was infected with the AIDS virus and the other was not. In 19 couples in which one partner had a mild, pre-AIDS illness, three uninfected partners, or 16 percent of the total, became infected through heterosexual contact.

Abrams Denies He Directed Aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — Assistant Secretary of State Elliott Abrams today disputed ambassador Lewis Tambs' testimony that assistance for the Nicaraguan Contra rebels was directed by a three-member government group chaired by Abrams.

"He doesn't know what he's talking about, and he never attended a RIG meeting," Abrams testified, referring to the Restricted Interagency Group that included former White House aide Oliver L. North and the chief of the CIA's Central-American task force, Alan Fiers. Abrams, 38, heads the State Department's Latin American division.

Tambs, former U.S. ambassador to Costa Rica, last week told the joint House-Senate hearings on the Iran-Contra affair that Abrams, as chairman of the three-member group in Washington, took a close interest in efforts to supply assistance to the Contras. Tambs said this interest included construction of a secret airstrip in northern Costa Rica and the opening up of a "southern front" of Nicaraguan rebels seeking the overthrow of the leftist Sandinista government in Managua.

Manager Enjoys Retail Competing

By ROSALIE TROTMAN
Reflector Staff Writer
 Marilyn Smith as manager of Kroger's Sav-On enjoys competing in the retail industry. She is one of two female managers in three states in the Carolina division in which Krogers operates. She started working at the Greenville store in 1977 as a part-time bakery clerk. Mrs. Smith was a student at East Carolina University and wanted extra spending money. Working in the bakery, she fried doughnuts and baked bread. "This was a scratch bakery then," she said. "I was then given the opportunity to work in a non-food area — in the pharmacy, stocking over-the-counter items," she said.

"After working here for two years and three months, I went to Charlotte to interview for a department head position. When the decision was called back, they had put me into management training," she said. Mrs. Smith was asked to make a decision within two weeks. She left ECU and moved to Charlotte and went into Kroger management training which was completed in 22 weeks. She was then assigned as a co-manager and moved to Sumter, S.C., for a year and four months. Again, she was promoted to an assistant unit manager and transferred to Florence, S.C., where she remained for a year and five months. During 1982 she got married while living in Florence.

"I was then given an opportunity to be part of a new store opening in Charlotte in the same position but in a larger volume store. Here, I did the unheard of — I was a pregnant management person," she said.

STORE MANAGER — Marilyn Smith, Kroger Sav-On manager, talks with Kevin Franklin at the store's courtesy booth.

"I find this a rewarding job. I have always been treated very fair by the company. This is a very demanding job, time wise. Meeting the needs of our customers and personnel is a large part of my responsibility," she said.

Mrs. Smith moved to Greenville when she was 5 years old. Her parents are Wanda Thompson and Jim Thompson, who is retired from VOA. Greg, her husband, is in retail management. She transferred back to the Greenville store in February 1984 as an assistant manager and was promoted to manager March 4.

"When I first went into management training, I was shy and not aggressive. Basically I wanted to prove that I could make it in the business," she said.

Her outside interests are her son, Christopher, husband and parents.

Engagement Announced

GENA CHRISTINE BOWERS — is the daughter of Mary Ann Bowers of Wilmington, who announces her engagement to Patrick Christopher Averette, son of Dr. and Mrs. Roger H. Averette of Wilmington. The bride-elect is also the daughter of the late Mary Ann Bowers. A June 27 wedding is being planned.

The Story Is Told Through Hands

At Wits End
 Erma Bombeck

It is virtually impossible these days to tell how old anyone is. Bodies are nipped, lifted, tucked, folded, bent and spindled until half the female population goes to sleep at night with a surprised look on their faces.

There is only one source left to reveal just how long in the tooth we are. The hands. I don't care if your face looks like the bottom of a newborn, your mother's hands are dangling from your sweater sleeve, are attached to your arm as you drive and hoist a glass of white wine to your lips.

There is no magic elixir for the hands that have had rings slipped on and off of them, flushed diapers in the commode, mixed meat loaf, played patty cake, were wrung at 2 a.m. when the kids had the car out, and felt feverish heads. There is no retardant for the aging process for those appendages that have been bleached by detergents, chapped by the cold, scratched from rose bushes and suffered the burns of a thousand saucepan handles. You earned 'em, Sweetie; they're yours.

In a way, it's good to have a point of reference. Without them, we'd never know how much we have lived and how hard it was doing time. They're the bas relief map of life, so to speak. It's probably the only part of Elizabeth Taylor left over from "National Velvet." If we didn't have hands to remind us of how many winters we had lived, we'd look in the mirror and kill ourselves trying to go around again.

When a chin falls and bruises our knees, who is the first to pick it up? Our hands. When we have the bags removed from under our eyes but our body can't stay awake beyond 9:30, who pries our eyes open? Our hands, that's who. They steady us when we think we look good enough to run marathons. They pull down the shades when the lights are too bright. When we're attracted to men 30 years our junior, they point out that we have a cookie sheet bought the same year Mickey Rooney entered show business.

I've known a few friends who have not been amused to sit and connect liver spots on their hands and have had the spots removed. They've anointed their hands with creams and lotions and basted them in oils, but they still look like the hide of a dying elephant.

It's like my mother once told me when I was a teen-ager looking in the mirror and assessing what I had going for me. She said, "There are some things we can't do much about. Just be neat and clean and develop your personality."

Jewelry Box Caused Family Riff

Dear Abby
 Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Two years ago I bought my mother a beautiful jewelry box. Yesterday I visited my niece to see her new bedroom set when lo and behold, what do you think I saw on her dressing table? My jewelry box! I asked "Betsy" where she got it and she said it was a birthday present from Grandma (my mother)! When I asked Mother where the jewelry box I had given her was, she lied and said it was in her closet. I asked her how it could be in her closet when I saw it on Betsy's dresser. Then she admitted that Betsy had admired it, so she gave it to her. When Mother saw how hurt I was, all she said was, "I'm sorry. I didn't think you'd mind." I haven't spoken to my mother since. I'm through giving her gifts; she'll be lucky to get a card from me in the future.

Am I wrong to feel this way? — HURTING IN BROOKLYN
DEAR HURTING: I can understand your feelings, but please let go of your resentment. Once a gift is given, it's the property of the recipient to do with what he/she pleases. No gift is worth a family rift. Forgive — and try to forget.

DEAR ABBY: I just read the letter you printed from "Desperate in Maryland." Like him, I had a well-paying job, a secure future as an inventory control specialist for a major utility, and no previous history of drug abuse. And, like him, I developed a love/hate affair with cocaine. My $32,000-a-year job wasn't sufficient to pay for my escalating habit (in 1978, when I was all of 22). I turned to dealing, and still couldn't keep up with the ever increasing amount of cocaine I was using.

I knew I had a problem, but, like "Desperate in Maryland," I didn't know how to deal with it. A year in prison didn't help me. A broken marriage didn't help me. Finally, a heart attack at the ripe old age of 24 made me realize that if I didn't stop, I was going to DIE.

An understanding doctor put me in touch with Cocaine Anonymous and helped me get into a treatment program. That was seven years ago, Abby, and I'm now leading a normal, happy life. To "Desperate in Maryland": If you really want out of the trap you're in, help is as close as your nearest phone book. You can call either the Cocaine Hotline, or the nearest group of Cocaine Anonymous or Alcoholics Anonymous (many AA members are also Cocaine Anonymous members). Hang in there, "Desperate," help is out there, if you want it. — GRATEFUL AND STRAIGHT

DEAR ABBY: I am a 26-year-old woman who recently fell in love with a 25-year-old guy. We met at work and discovered a strong mutual attraction on both our parts. Abby, I was never so happy in my life when he told me he loved me and wanted me to be his wife. After spending almost every night together for three months, I get a phone call from his wife who is pregnant and has a 3-year-old daughter by this man.

I don't have to tell you that I was in shock. Now the question, Abby: How does a single girl know for sure if a man is lying or telling the truth when he says he is not married? — USED IN AUSTIN

DEAR USED: A single man will introduce you to some of his friends and relatives. A married man will not. A single man will probably invite you to see his house or apartment. A married man will not. A single man will give you his home telephone number and address. A married man will not.

There's a lesson to be learned here: Don't be so quick to give your love to a stranger. Too fast doesn't last.

Legal Ruling Sought

were told it must pass the House by May 28th to stay alive," Charles McLawhorn, chairman of the Pitt County Commission, told the Senate subcommittee.

"The compromise was not accepted by the opposing side. At a meeting Monday, we voted unanimously to support the original 'six-three' in the Senate."

Kramer Jackson, county manager, said earlier today that commissioners elected to support the original plan.

"Since the compromise apparently wasn't acceptable, the commissioners decided to go back to the original bill and try to get that through," Jackson said.

Garrett and Alonzo Mills, representing the Concerned Citizens for Justice, reiterated minority opposition to any at-large seats.

"Our preference is six districts with no at-large voting," Mills said. "Under some circumstances, we could live with the 'six-three' compromise. It's better than (straight) 'six-three.' We don't really like it, but we'll live with it."

Taft asked for a legal opinion on both plans before proceeding with deliberations.

"The proposals would not hold legal muster," he said. "My suggestion is that we ask the attorney general for a legal opinion on the two proposals to give us some guidance."

Sen. Bob Martin said he thought the issue should be decided at the local level.

"I thought they had done that, but the controversy has arisen again," Martin said.

Neither Taft nor Martin is a member of the subcommittee considering the election proposals.

In promoting the compromise plan in the House last week, Rep. Ed Warren, D-Pitt, said he was acting on what the County Commissioners recommended him to do.

The subcommittee is scheduled to meet on Tuesday after receiving legal advice and report its finding to Election Laws Committee Wednesday.

If the Senate approves any changes to the compromise bill, it must be referred back to the House for consideration.

Highway

ASHEVILLE (AP) — North Carolina wants to join Tennessee in building an interstate highway from Asheville to Johnson City, but it will be at least five years before the project can become part of the state Transportation Improvement Program, Gov. Jim Martin says.

"We've not made any commitment on it yet," Martin said. "All I can say to you is I'm encouraging it. That is a project that I want to push us to get on the TIP. We ought to."

Tennessee's Legislature authorized $97 million last year to improve 15 miles of U.S. 23 in eastern Tennessee to interstate standards by 1992.

But Martin said North Carolina won't be able to move as fast on its side of U.S. 23 because of the decreased allocation in federal highway money authorized for the state by the Federal Highway Act of 1987.

New Center

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Vice President George Bush smashed a champagne bottle at a groundbreaking ceremony Monday for the new Charlotte Apparel Center, calling it a "vision that sets an example for the rest of the country."

Fed Chief Named

(Continued from A-1) Volcker was stepping down, but quickly recovered that loss and was up around 4 points an hour later.

"The immediate reaction is clearly negative," said Hugh A. Johnson, senior vice president at First Albany Corp., an investment firm in Albany, N.Y. "The system really gets shaken when they do something like this."

But other analysts were amazed that the surprise announcement was not causing more turmoil in the markets. The dollar stabilized soon after the news was announced as did bond prices, indicating to some observers at least cautious approval of the decision.

Lacy Hunt, chief economist of Carol McEntee & McGinley Inc., a major New York dealer of government securities, said Greenspan will face "a challenging assignment with regard to both stabilizing the dollar and containing the inflationary upsurge now underway."

He called Greenspan "a first-rate economist," but he also said Greenspan "is not the choice of the financial markets either at home or abroad because he obviously doesn't have the experience or stature of Volcker."

Greenspan, asked repeatedly about his stance on inflation and the dollar and the effect of his appointment on the value of the dollar, told reporters:

"I have to go for Senate confirmation and I intend to withhold substantive comment until that time."

Greenspan was asked how long it took him to accept the position, offered the day before. "Milliseconds," he said.

"The economy at the moment looks reasonably strong" and is likely to remain so for the "indefinite future," Greenspan said.

Asked about the chances of a U.S. recession, Greenspan said: "At the moment, I must say to you, I don't see any evidence of that."

Volcker, who was first appointed by President Carter in 1979 and reappointed by President Reagan in 1983, said he did not know what he would do next. "I have not the vaguest idea this morning."

"There's a time to come and a time to leave," Volcker said. The Fed chief said he told Reagan on Monday that he did not want to serve another term and the president immediately mentioned Greenspan.

Reagan refused to answer any questions about the appointment and left the White House briefing room immediately after making the announcement.

In his letter of resignation, Volcker told Reagan:

"You will recall that, upon my reappointment as chairman in 1983, I felt unable to make a firm commitment to you or to the Congress to remain in office for a second full four-year term."

"Despite my reservations at the time, that term is in fact almost finished. However, I do think, after eight years as chairman, a natural time has now come for me to return to private life as soon as reasonably convenient and consistent with an orderly transition."

"Consequently, I do not desire reappointment as chairman, and I plan to resign as governor when a new chairman is prepared to assume office."

While Volcker has always enjoyed strong support among financial experts, many observers earlier this year thought his chances of holding on to the Fed job were dubious. But his standing received a huge boost with the departure of his longtime foe in the administration, White House chief of staff Donald T. Regan.

Regan had contended that the Fed chief's tight-money policies had made the 1981-82 recession worse than it should have been.

White Sox Blow Another Big Lead; Niekro Brothers Surpass Perrys In Victories

By BEN WALKER

The harder the Chicago White Sox try to protect a lead, the faster they seem to lose.

two-run homer in the top of the 12th, Chicago's fifth home run of the night, the White Sox collapsed.
'I gave every one of our relievers a chance to save the game,' Chicago Manager Jim Fregosi said.

In other American League games, Cleveland beat Detroit 9-6 as the Niekros set a major-league record for most victories by brothers, California defeated New York 9-2, Minnesota downed Boston 9-5, Oakland topped Baltimore 9-6, Seattle got past Toronto 2-0 and Milwaukee edged Kansas City 3-2.

McDowell hit his first career slam after the Rangers loaded the bases with one out against Joel Davis, 1-5. Ruben Sierra led off with a double and Pete O'Brien and Larry Parrish drew one-out walks.

control," McDowell said. "He had already walked two guys and threw two bad pitches to me. I figured he'd come in with something I could hit."

The Rangers rallied in the ninth when doubles by Sierra and O'Brien and a two-run homer by Parrish made it 7-5 with one out to knock out Dotson. Relievers Ray Searage and Neil Allen each walked the only batters they faced before Joel McKeon got the second out.

But Jerry Browne hit an RBI single against McKeon and reliever Jim Winn yielded a game-tying single to Scott Fletcher.

Calderon, who hit a pair of three-run homers Sunday in the loss to Boston, put Chicago ahead again in the 12th against Dale Mohorcic, 5-2.

Greg Walker hit two solo homers and Harold Baines and Jerry Royster also connected for the White Sox.

Leach Limits Dodgers As Mets Pick Up 5-2 Victory

By The Associated Press
Terry Leach has a habit of giving the New York Mets great relief when he starts.

Leach had appeared in 18 games as a reliever this season, pitching a total of 30 1-3 innings. Before Monday night, he had made six starts and relieved 82 times as a major leaguer.

On Monday night, he limited Los Angeles to four hits and one unearned run in six innings as the Mets defeated the Dodgers 5-2 for their sixth victory in seven games on the West Coast.

Since 1981, Leach has had five stints with the Mets in between trips to the minor leagues. He made his first start for the Mets in 1982 and pitched a one-hitter in beating Philadelphia 1-0 in 10 innings. He is the only Met ever to pitch an extra-inning one-hit game.

Following his victory over the Dodgers, Leach has a record of 5-1 and one no-decision as a starting pitcher.

"It was a gutsy performance by Leach," New York Manager Davey Johnson said. "If we can get a couple more well-pitched games, we'll be in business."

Elsewhere in the National League, San Francisco beat Philadelphia 9-2, Houston defeated Chicago 6-5 in 10 innings and St. Louis edged Cincinnati 8-6 in 10 innings.

Starting pitchers Bob Ojeda and Rick Aguilera are on the disabled list for the Mets and New York ace Dwight Gooden spent the first two months of the season in drug rehabilitation and training in the minor leagues.

Gooden's scheduled return Friday against Pittsburgh, means Leach, 4-0, will probably go back to the bullpen.

"He's really more useful coming

East Carolina Signs Nine Freshmen To Swim Grants

East Carolina swimming coach Rick Kobe has announced the signing of nine freshmen that will compete in the 1987-88 Pirate swim program.

The list of impressive prep swimming champions is highlighted by both the first and second place finishers in the 500 freestyle at the North Carolina state meet.

Brian Kingsfield, a senior from High Point Central High School and a member of the High Point swim team, won the state championship in the 500 freestyle. J.D. Lewis, a senior at East Mecklenburg High School and a member of the Mecklenburg Aquatic Club, was the runner-up in the state 500. Lewis took the championship in the 1,650 freestyle which gives the Pirates North Carolina's top two distance freestylers.

backstroke at the state finals, and was a national qualifier in the same events.

The recruiting class also includes: Ted Christiansen, a native of Reisterstown, Md., who was named prep school All-American in the 200 individual medley and 100 breaststroke. He swims for Calvert Hall Academy, winners of the 1987 Maryland state championship, and was a multiple winner at the Atlantic Seaboard Championships held annually at East Carolina.

John Farrell, from Lido Beach, N.Y., who qualified for the nationals in three events.

Tim Frick, of Fairlawn, N.J., a national qualifier in the 400 individual medley.

Tom Holsten, Newark, Del., 400 individual medley national qualifier.

Chip Kline, from South Charleston,

W. Va., a prep school All-American in the 50 freestyle and 100 breaststroke.

Mark O'Brien, of LeHigh, Fla., a national finalist in the 100 and 200 backstroke. He swam for Swim Florida which won the YMCA National Championship this year.

"All nine of our recruits are simply outstanding," said Kobe. "The times they have already clocked would have put them in the finals of our Colonial meet this year. This is by far the largest and fastest freshman class to ever enter East Carolina and we are especially pleased with the fact that the entire class are true freshmen."

"Our recruits are either national qualifiers or state champions and I think that says a great deal about where our swimming program is right now," Kobe said. "We will return 13 swimmers, seven of whom are CAA champions, and we feel like 1987-88 will continue our tradition of excellent dual match records and consistent contention for the conference championship."

Kobe is expected to release his Lady Pirate signees, and Coach Jon Rose, his divers, within the week.

Tribble's Lawyers Have Witness Trouble

UPPER MARLBORO, Md. (AP) — Attorneys representing the man accused of providing former University of Maryland basketball star Len Bias with the cocaine that killed him have encountered difficulty presenting their side of the case.

defense had been altered by the sequence of events at the bench, he said, "That's what I'm going to try to figure out."

Walker said he entered the unlocked car looking for Bias' personal belongings, not drugs, when it was parked in front of Cole Field House on the Maryland campus.

defense asked Rea to drop all charges against their client on grounds that the prosecution's witnesses had not offered evidence to prove the alleged violations.

tended that the state had presented only one witness, 17-year-old Terrence Moore, to back up conspiracy charges. Lias said that because Moore's testimony made him a co-conspirator, corroboration was needed.

Long and David Gregg, who said they were with Tribble and Bias when the athlete died, testified that they did not know who brought the drug into the room.

Lakers Are The Favorites, But Expect Tough Series

By BILL BARNARD AP Basketball Writer INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — The Los Angeles Lakers, who have breezed through 11 victories in 12 playoff games, are the clear favorites in tonight's opener of the NBA championship series against the struggling Boston Celtics.

SuperSonics on May 25 in the Western Conference finals. Riley said that only tonight's game will tell if the layoff was beneficial or harmful.

"I'm happy with our defensive rebounding in the playoffs," Riley said. "Seattle is one of the best offensive rebounding teams in the league, and we swept them. We'll see how we do against Boston."

UNC's Fenner Sought For Involvement With Murder

HYATTSVILLE, Md. (AP) — Derrick Fenner, a tailback for the University of North Carolina, apparently drove himself back to his Maryland home this morning after authorities issued a warrant charging him with first-degree murder in a drug-related shooting, police say.

certainly do. The warrant's right in front of me." North Carolina football coach Dick Crum told the newspaper that his office was contacted by Hyattsville police at 5 p.m. concerning Fenner's whereabouts. Crum said he later advised Fenner to return to his home in Oxon Hill, Md.

While the Lakers rolled to postseason series victories over Denver, Golden State and Seattle, the Celtics needed seven games to eliminate both Milwaukee and Detroit in the Eastern Conference playoffs.

When the three-time MVP was asked if he was afraid it could be a short series, he said, "No, I doubt if we can sweep them."

"Pounding the offensive boards may be the one way to slow them down," Bird said. "You have to rebound, go down and score and then hustle back on defense. We want to do that, but we don't know if we can."

Caldwell told Raleigh television station WRAL that he had questioned Fenner last Saturday in connection with the incident. He said he did not have evidence at the time of the questioning to hold Fenner, but when asked if he had since then found the evidence to issue a warrant for Fenner's arrest, Caldwell replied, "We

Native Citizens
 On this day in 1924, Congress granted U.S. citizenship to all American Indians. Prior to that action, Indians had few protections under the law. Currently, about 1.4 million Indians live in the United States. Roughly half of them live on or near one of 285 federally recognized reservations, mostly in states west of the Mississippi River. In 1980, the Bureau of Indian Affairs was administering about 53 million acres of land.

 1♠ Pass 2♣ Pass
 4♣ Pass Pass Pass

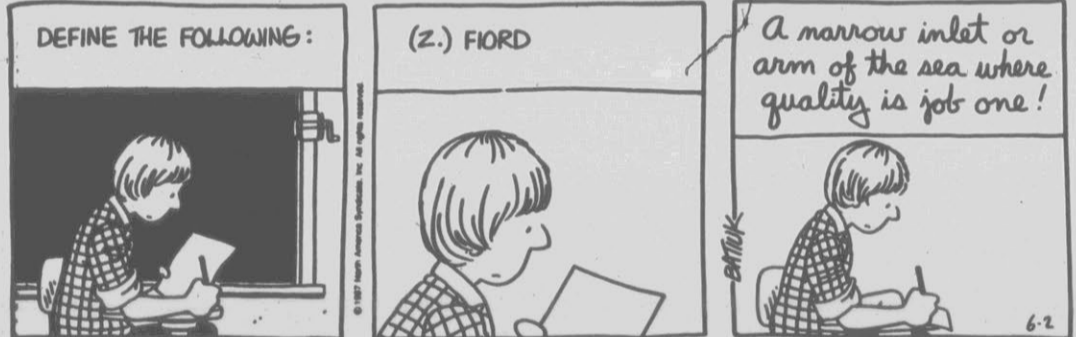

Opening lead: King of ♣
 Prepare for the worst. Then you will be pleasantly surprised if nothing bad happens, but ready to take advantage of any extra chance that might develop.

Suppose that you are sitting South. After North raises your suit, your hand improves considerably, and it is just about worth a jump to game rather than a game try.
 When you get your first glance of dummy after the opening club lead, you like your contract. If spades break evenly, you are laydown, so this is a good vulnerable game. However, you should prepare for the eventuality that you might have a trump loser. In that case you must find a way to avoid losing that trick and three tricks in diamonds.
 If East has three spades to the queen, there is little you can do about it. But if West has trump length, you might be able to circumvent his holding. The key move is to ruff a club after winning the ace at trick one.
 When you next cash the ace-king of trumps and learn the bad news, all is not lost. Cash the ace-king of hearts and lead a heart. If West ruffs, you discard a diamond loser, so suppose he discards a club. Ruff the heart and ruff a club in hand, then lead your last heart. Again West cannot afford to ruff, and if he discards a club he sets up the last club in dummy for a diamond discard. So he must let go of a diamond. That allows you to ruff the heart on the table and the last club in hand for 10 tricks.
 You have telescoped four losers into three. East's third diamond winner and West's high trump both take the last trick and you have collected two spade tricks, two hearts, one club and five ruffs.

Letterman Says Joan Rivers Can Stage Career Comeback

By ROBERT MACY
AP Television Writer
LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — David Letterman says fellow talk-show host Joan Rivers might have made some mistakes going it on her own, but probably didn't do any permanent damage to her career.

Ms. Rivers left an enviable spot as permanent guest host for Johnny Carson on NBC's "The Tonight Show" for her own show on the fledgling Fox network. The move angered Carson, who took a few potshots on the air when Ms. Rivers recently parted company with Fox over low ratings for "The Late Show."

"I think one thing you can't do in show business is burn bridges behind you," Letterman said. "Show business is such an odd, quirky thing that you can be sued for several million dollars one day and then the next day the same company hires you to go to work for them."

"I think show business may be the one area where burning bridges doesn't mean anything."

Letterman, himself a frequent substitute and potential successor to Carson on "Tonight," said Ms. Rivers' saga proves the fragile nature of the late-night, talk-show business. He made the observations while in Las Vegas to tape four nights of his own "Late Night" at a Strip resort.

"It's really a difficult thing to start a new TV show from scratch," Letterman said. "I was really lucky because NBC kept us on the air when we were struggling, and they kept us on two or three years into it when another organization might not have kept us on."

"Joan was dealing with television stations across the country which were not perhaps prime broadcasting outlets, like Channel 85 in Tipton, Ind. We had the support of an established network and we were also following a show ("Tonight") which had been a hit for 25 years, where she was on her own. "If you're on a channel in a city that nobody watches 23 hours a day, there's no reason to believe that for one hour a day they're going to turn over and watch you."

Letterman doesn't think Ms. Rivers was wrong in quitting as Carson's top guest host.

"I don't think anybody begrudges her making a move for success on her own terms," he said. "I just think she handled it in a graceful fashion."

How?

"By suddenly turning on NBC and saying unpleasant things about Johnny and 'The Tonight Show.' I think there were going to be hard feelings regardless of how she handled it. But if it were me, I certainly would have tried to avoid things to generate ill feelings."

Though he has been happy as host of the quirky and popular "Late Night" for five years, Letterman said he would be "stupid" not to consider the "Tonight Show" job, if it were offered. Both Letterman and Carson recently signed new, multi-year contracts at NBC.

"Keep in mind, nobody from NBC has even mentioned it to me. If the chance ever arose I'd be a jerk not to consider it," Letterman said.

"But I think it will be difficult to put somebody in that position and expect them to do the same kind of business Johnny has done for the last 20 years. It will take a long time for people to think of 'The Tonight Show' being hosted by anybody other than Johnny Carson."

The Las Vegas sojourn was only the third for "Late Night" away from

New York City. The show once originated for a week from Los Angeles, and a fourth-anniversary special was taped aboard a jet to Miami.

Letterman spent a week in Las Vegas stalking the stage at Bally's Hotel in casual khakis and polo shirts amid glamorous showgirls — no, they were not representatives of the Las Vegas PTA as Letterman claimed — showcasing the town's celebrities while pecking away at its foibles.

Bally's spokesman Stephen Allen said the show was such a success he is sure the hotel will ask Letterman to play an encore next year.

NBC spokesman Peter Spivey said Letterman was pleased with the Las Vegas shows. Apparently so were fans, who boosted the ratings to a 3.6 from a 3.2 the previous week. The Nielsen rating is a percentage of the estimated 87.4 million households with televisions.

Carson Cuts Back

L.A. Times-Washington Post
WASHINGTON — NBC Entertainment president Brandon Tartikoff told network affiliates meeting in L.A. Monday that "Tonight Show" host Johnny Carson is cutting back to a three-night workweek this fall.

But before the station managers could wreck the Century Plaza ballroom, Tartikoff hastily assured them that during the crucial November, February and May ratings sweeps (which local stations use to establish future ad rates), Johnny will resume his current four-night schedule.

The revised "Tonight Show" lineup will put Jay Leno in charge of the Monday night program, with "The Best of Carson" reruns moving to Tuesday night. Garry Shandling will join with Leno in divvying up the guest host weeks during the year when Carson vacations.

Carson recently signed a new contract with the network and will celebrate his 25th anniversary on the show with a Sept. 24 primetime special.

In 1980, he cut his nightly broadcast from 90 minutes to one hour and reduced his nights on the air from five to four.

Leno, who is a Tartikoff favorite, began guest hosting on the "Tonight Show" last year. Shandling goes back to 1983.

The affiliates also learned that ABC Sports reject Joe Namath has signed a multiyear contract to join Marv Albert on one of NBC's NFL announcing teams starting this fall.

Spoletto Founder Keeps 'Retiring'

By MARY CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Composer Gian Carlo Menotti keeps insisting he will retire from running the Spoleto festivals he founded here and in Italy, but he keeps taking on festival-related projects.

Menotti will be 76 on July 7, and his contract with the Charleston, S.C., festival runs out in 1989.

"I keep asking them to find somebody," he said. "They don't seem to want to. It's foolish of them not to look around. Even if I did want to stay, I might drop dead any time. I think they are looking around, but not seriously. I don't want to put an end to anything. But it wouldn't be fair if I don't."

Besides some commissions for new operas, Menotti plans to write his memoirs.

He'll direct "Parsifal" at this year's Festival of Two Worlds in Spoleto, Italy, next month, but is hesitant about bringing it to Spoleto U.S.A. next year because he thinks the theater in Charleston is too big.

How could any theater be too big for a Wagner opera? "I think of 'Parsifal' as a very intimate tragedy, not as a great spectacle," he said.

This year's festival in Charleston, which began May 22 and runs through June 7, includes two operas: Strauss' "Salome," with Mignon Dunn gamely going on with a broken foot as Herodias; and Rameau's "Platee." Other music includes Honegger's "King David" by the Spoleto Festival Orchestra and Westminster Choir, chamber concerts and jazz — the Basic Band, Stan Getz and Nancy Wilson.

Theater includes Athol Fugard's "The Road to Mecca," and the Colla Family Marionettes from Milan, with costumes reproduced from 1895 designs. The Pennsylvania Ballet and Merce Cunningham's modern dance troupe are also performing.

As for "Parsifal," which probably will be seen in Charleston next year, Menotti said that Wagner wanted it Mediterranean. "He wrote part of it in Ravello, Italy. He wrote on the score, 'A woodland, but not a gloomy one.'"

"It'll be unlike any 'Parsifal' you've ever seen, for sure, but not because it's going to be eccentric. I'm trying to realize what I think Wagner imagined when he wrote the opera. Kundry is going to come out almost naked. Parsifal is really going to be tempted."

The composer has said that "Parsifal" would be the final opera by somebody else that he would direct. "I'm always trying to stage my own. But at the end of 'Goya,' Placido Domingo asked me to do him a favor and do one more staging for him — of 'Tosca' in Washington. I couldn't say no."

Menotti has been commissioned to write an opera to be premiered during the 1988 Olympics. "And I've been most fascinated with my relationship with Bulgaria. Somebody brought a video of 'Goya' there and they invited me there. They want me to direct 'The Consul.' ... They've already made the translation. They'll do it in Bulgarian."

"They also are very much into making a film of 'The Consul' in English. They want Mirella Freni and Nicolai Ghiaurov to be in it. Both said yes. They've done quite a few of my operas," he said.

"They propose to record all my works in Bulgaria. They'd like to perform 'Goya' with Domingo. The European premiere is set for Barcelona in 1989."

When "Goya" had its premiere last fall in Washington, starring Domingo, most critics hated it.

"I don't want to sound pompous about it but now my music does not need the critics," Menotti said. "It is there. You like it or don't like it but I don't think anybody can kill it."

The composer is proud of his opera. "I think it's a good opera." However, he has to repair Act 3.

Horowitz Free

LIVERPOOL, England (AP) — Adam Horowitz of the New York rock group Beastie Boys was freed on $16,200 bail on a charge resulting from a melee that cut short a Liverpool concert.

Horowitz, 20, was charged with hitting a fan with a beer can Saturday night at the Royal Court Theater, during the group's final concert of a British tour. The 20-year-old woman was struck in the face, causing bruises and cuts, a prosecutor said.

Liverpool police said the theater manager called for help after bottles and other objects were thrown in the auditorium, packed with 3,000 fans, only a few minutes after the concert began.
