Pitt Board Urges 'Determined Stand' On Elections

By MARY C. SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

A certified letter mailed Thursday to Pitt County's legislative delegation from the County Commissioners urges the lawmakers to "take a determined stand" supporting a method of election revision for Pitt County recommended by the commissioners.

Legislators said today they would continue to support the requests of the board.

"So far, everything that has been done has been done at the wishes of the County Commissioners," Rep. Ed Warren said after receiving the letter today.

The "six-three" election plan supported by the commissioners allows for six members of the county board to be elected by districts and three representatives elected at-large.

A compromise plan, agreed to by the commissioners and passed by the N.C. House, also calls for six of Pitt's commissioners to be elected from districts and three commissioners elected at-large — but only after they are nominated by party primaries in three regions created by collapsing the six districts.

The compromise was proposed in a House subcommittee after minority groups voiced opposition to the original six-three plan, saying it would be impossible for a minority commissioner to be elected at-large.

Commissioners, however, withdrew support of the compromise earlier this week, saying they had agreed to the measure only to allow the legislation to pass the House by the May 28 deadline.

Commissioners Tuesday asked a Senate subcommittee to approve the original six-three plan but after hearing minority objections to it, the subcommittee requested a legal ruling on the proposals from the state attorney general's office. A final ruling is expected early next week.

Legislators and minority leaders said the commissioners' reversal left them baffled and they thought the board supported the compromise.

According to Warren, the legislators have acted on the recommendation of the commissioners on the issue and will continue to.

"When the delegation met originally on the issue we did support the commissioners proposal," Warren said. "When the bill went to committee which I have no control over and the commissioners agreed to a compromise, we supported that move at the wish of the commissioners."

Sen. Bob Martin, who had not received the letter this morning, said he had "supported the commissioners' requests up until now and I plan to continue."

"I consider them the official spokespersons for Pitt County, since they were voted into office by a majority of the citizens."

"We can't sit up here in Raleigh and settle things, we have to go by the recommendations of those in authority in Pitt County," he said.

Rep. Walter Jones Jr. said lawmakers in the House "did what we were requested to do and now it is up to the Senate."

"We certainly followed the request of the County Commissioners at the House subcommittee meeting (where the compromise was reached) as it was stated by board spokesman Mike Crowell," Jones said.

Sen. Tom Taft said this morning he had received no correspondence from the County Commissioners and declined comment until the letter arrived.

The letter to the legislators, signed by Charles

McLawhorn, chairman of the commission, states "The Pitt County Board of Commissioners is requesting in the strongest terms possible that you take a determined stand in the North Carolina General Assembly to do everything in your power to guide the requested local legislation on Pitt County's district election plan to fruition."

The letter further states the commissioners "agreed to allow the compromise bill to be introduced, at the advice of legal counsel and our representatives, for the purpose of meeting the required May 28 deadline to have bills passed in one of the two chambers of the General Assembly."

In the letter, McLawhorn states "The Board of County Commissioners regrets very much that this simple local bill was allowed to become an issue of debate."

"The County Commissioners are the duly elected governing body of Pitt County, elected to represent all citizens of Pitt County on county governmental matters," according to the letter. "With this thought in mind, you are requested to follow through with the county's request."

City Discontinues Educational Aid

By DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer

Funding limitations have forced the city of Greenville to discontinue educational assistance for employees pursuing degree programs, according to a memo to all department heads from acting City Manager Mayo Allen.

"The city is facing limited funding more and more each year, and we must adjust our operations in accordance with the amount of funds we receive," the memo said.

"Therefore, it has been necessary to set priorities in expenditures. The educational assistance program is one of the funds affected. Effective immediately, no educational assistance reimbursements will be approved for employees pursuing degree programs."

Despite the cutbacks, city officials urge the employees to continue their education, according to the memo.

"We strongly encourage those currently enrolled and those wishing to enroll to continue their studies and obtain a degree," the memo said.

"We believe personal development and growth through advanced education is beneficial both personally and professionally. However, financial assistance in the form of tuition and books reimbursement cannot be provided by the city at this time."

Meanwhile, the city will continue to support educational programs di-

Military Says Gulf Plan OK

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's top military officer said today the Navy can carry out President Reagan's pledge to keep the Persian Gulf open, but added that the cost could be more American casualties and attacks on U.S. ships from Iran.

"We have the capability to keep the oil line to Kuwait open, to assure our Arab friends of our commitment, and to keep the risks low," said Adm. William J. Crowe Jr., chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Crowe's comments came in testimony before the Senate Armed Services Committee, which was meeting to discuss U.S. military plans in the gulf.

Reagan has promised U.S. protection for Kuwaiti oil tankers. Kuwait is an ally of Iraq in the long Iran-Iraq war, and Iran has pledged to continue to try to attack Kuwaiti tankers.

In his testimony, Crowe said the joint chiefs believe that the Navy can protect the Kuwaiti tankers.

"Of course, there are no absolute guarantees that such an operation will be casualty-free or that Iran will not escalate the sea war, which will present us with further difficult choices," he said.

Crowe did not explain what he meant by difficult choices and declined in public to say what military moves U.S. forces might make to counter Iran.

Crowe did not publicly say whether the joint chiefs were considering a pre-emptive strike against Chinese-made, anti-ship Silkworm

Disposal Costs Escalating

County Urges Public To Help Control Trash

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

In an effort to control Pitt's escalating trash disposal problem, County Commissioners have invited area citizens, schools and church groups to jump with them onto the recycling bandwagon.

"This is a real pocketbook issue. People have got to realize how important this is and realize how much money trash disposal is costing us. It could go as high as $5 million a year, down the road, unless we do something now," Commission Vice Chairman Charles Gaskins said.

"But," he said, "we need more than the current handful of people participating in recycling to really make this thing work."

Cindy Wooten, a member of the Greenville Recycling Project, the League of Women Voters and one of the local "handful" identified by Gaskins, concurred with the commission's stance Thursday at a solid waste disposal workshop.

"It's about time people began to recognize the fact that unless we realize we can't be a throw-away society, we might as well throw society away," she said.

According to County Planner Phil Dickerson, the amount the county pays for garbage collection, management and disposal is increasing at a rate of about 10 percent per year. In fiscal 1986-87, the county budgeted $750,000 for non-toxic waste disposal. Disposal in fiscal 1987-88 will cost $873,000.

Currently, three recycling projects are operating within the county. Together, they account for an approximate 5,000 ton reduction in the county's waste stream. And while 5,000 tons is only a small dent in the 73,000-ton trash pile the county handles annually, "it's still a help," Dickerson said.

Commissioners, however, would like to see recycling figures increase, but said they recognize that for such an increase to occur the number of recycling centers will have to be increased from three to many.

"There need to be a lot of them and they need to be accessible so people will use them and won't decide it's just easier to do it the old way — dump it all," Commissioner Eugene James said.

The area's existing recycling programs are run by the Eastern Carolina Vocational Center, the city of Greenville and the Pitt County Mental Health Center. ECMHC collects newspaper and cardboard. PCMHC collects glass and aluminum at a site on the Old County Home Road and the city picks up glass, cardboard and aluminum on a monthly basis at Overton's Supermarket. ECMHC and the mental health center pick up at Rivergate Shopping Center and Buyers Market once a month.

Other options the county is looking into to handle its growing waste problem include:

•County-city laws requiring separation of trash and closer supervision of dump sites.

•An increase in the current $25 fine for misuse of dump stations.

•The addition of two $33,000 trash compactor stations — one at Bell's Fork and one in Winterville, and replacement of an out-dated trash compactor truck at a cost of $64,000.

Commissioners also have directed Dickerson to approach the state to see if the county can secure a permit to allow operation of portable burning machinery for use at local dumpsites and to look into cost and effectiveness of a shredding machine, which could be used to grind non-garbage debris into mulch.

Youths Charged In Church Thefts

Pitt County sheriff's deputies have arrested two Greenville men on breaking and entering charges in connection with incidents at three local churches, a sheriff's department spokesman said today.

Alan James Ludlow, 17, of 1307 Glen Arthur Ave. was arrested Thursday night and charged with three counts of felonious breaking, entering and larceny, the spokesman said.

John Benjamin Jones, 18, of 315 Glenwood Ave. was arrested Thursday night and charged with six counts of felonious breaking, entering and larceny, according to the spokesman, who said other arrests are pending in connection with the investigation.

The spokesman said about $15,000 in stolen property was recovered Thursday.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said break-ins had been reported at Burney's Chapel, Route 1, Grimesland, the Light-house Baptist Church at Helen's Crossroads, five miles southeast of Ayden, and Hopewell Pentecostal Holiness Church on Route 13, Greenville, earlier this week.

Problems Awaiting

It was to be expected that announcement of Paul Volcker's stepping down as chairman of the Federal Reserve Board would startle financial markets but the disclosure Alan Greenspan agreed to be nominated to fill the post soothed early uncertainties.

Greenspan admirers (of whom there are many) appear convinced the new chairman will not rock the boat.

Volcker's leadership influence had several roots but his efforts and successes during his eight-year service impressed observers in and out of government.

In his drive against double-digit inflation, Volcker sent interest rates soaring with the prime rate peaking at a record high in the summer of 1981, a factor which helped push the country into its worst recession since the Great Depression.

But his supporters remind the Volcker struggle against high prices opened the way for bringing inflation down to its current levels of less than 3 percent. They also credit him with opening the way for one of the longest peacetime economic expansions in history.

Volcker, a Democrat, had vast power over the nation's monetary policy throughout most of his term on the board. He was first appointed to the Fed by President Carter in 1979 and reappointed by President Reagan in 1983.

Alan Greenspan served as chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers under President Ford and was a highly respected New York economic consultant at the time of his selection by President Reagan. He is reputed to be an advocate of minimal government intervention in the economy and favoring financial deregulation. Greenspan is a critic of U.S. trade protectionism and like Volcker has pushed for strong measures to reduce the federal government's deficit. Over the years he has been an adviser to a number of presidents.

He says at present he sees no evidence of a U.S. recession on the horizon.

Greenspan is not another Volcker, but his experience and background almost rules out prospects of sudden and unexpected policy changes when he takes the helm.

Problems are even now awaiting his attention.

The economy today is suffering from sluggish growth. The dollar's decline against other major currencies is continuing beyond desired limits and the inflation threat has been re-raised.

Never Again

The "Downwalk" on the Golden Gate Bridge is behind us and we hope no one ever does that again.

An estimated 250,000 revelers put so much weight on the span they flattened out the normal bridge arch. The president of the bridge district board said support cables were as taut as harp strings while cables elsewhere were "loose and kind of spinning around because the other ones were picking up the strain."

A kind of sick feeling accompanies thoughts of what might have happened if the tide of unthinking revelers had been unchecked. A party for the 50-year-old bridge came perilously close to becoming an historic disaster for a multitude.

The bridge had the greatest load factor it had ever experienced.

When it was over, the party-goers left 40 tons of trash on the bridge and another 100 tons in the area, said officials. More than that, they left a message: Hold no more mob scenes on aging bridges. They could be perilous to the dream of living a long and productive life.

Fresh Fresco

We suspect a bit of wry humor in Bernard Rabin's hoping aloud there will be no controversy similar to the one involving restoration of the Vatican's Sistine Chapel ceiling when he cleans up the fresco of George Washington on the ceiling of the Capitol's famous Rotunda.

The $500,000 Rotunda job is expected to result in brighter, more vivid colors just as occurred with Michelangelo's 16th century ceiling art. Twentieth century critics ... long accustomed to the dark and sombre hues that were the result of centuries of dust and grime ... have complained loudly and often.

The fresco might be disappointing to a lot of Americans who have never seen it; and might stir some borderline cases to violent deeds. The Father of Our Country is depicted with the unlikely combination of maidens in flowing robes and Greek gods.

It is widely known George Washington enjoyed associating with maidens but any association with Greek gods is purely artistic license (we hope).

To Go Or Not To Go

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two years ago a group of Roman Catholic clerics from Cuba were visiting Assistant Secretary Elliott Abrams when he proudly showed them a Havana newspaper clipping vilifying him as a "beast."

Abrams, who takes on communists with relish, has never been Cuba's first choice to be assistant secretary, and now, although their reasons are somewhat different and stated less polemically, a growing number in Congress believe Abrams has overstayed his usefulness.

Since the Iran-Contra affair erupted, President Reagan has appointed a new White House chief of staff and a new national security adviser. Lt. Col. Oliver L. North is gone, and the National Security Council post he once held has been abolished. A new CIA director has been named.

To complete the fresh start, some members of the joint committee investigating the Iran-Contra episode suggested that Abrams' credibility is beyond repair and that he should be replaced.

During his appearance before the committees this week, lawmakers chastized Abrams for misleading the Senate Intelligence Committee last November in not disclosing his solicitation of a $10 million contribution from Brunei for the Nicaraguan Contras last August.

He also came under fire for denying any U.S. government role in Contra air resupply operations even though testimony has established that North played a key role in this activity.

In his defense, Abrams said the diplomatic sensitivity of the Brunei contribution required secrecy and that he frankly was unaware of North's behind-the-scenes efforts on the Contras' behalf.

Abrams, 39, has said he wants to remain until the end of Reagan's term in office and he has a strong ally in Secretary of State George P. Shultz.

When questioned by reporters about Abrams last Thursday, Shultz was noncommittal. But six days later, after Abrams' public testimony, Shultz was effusive in his praise for his embattled aide.

"I have complete confidence in Elliott Abrams," Shultz said in a statement. "He has done a sensational job."

While there is no reason to doubt Shultz's sincerity, his endorsement of Abrams also helps shore up the secretary's standing among conservatives, whose support for Shultz has never been strong. And Shultz will be eager for conservative support if the United States and the Soviet Union reach agreement on a treaty to eliminate most nuclear weapons from Europe.

The proposed treaty now under discussion has far more support among liberals than conservatives.

Abrams has never shied away from attacks on liberal critics, frequently accusing them of trying to stake out a position of "moral superiority" on human rights and other issues.

He has said that much of the criticism directed at him is really an attempt to discredit the Contras. Abrams has been strongly identified with the Contra cause.

His problem now is that many congressional moderates are lining up against him, including Senate Intelligence Committee Chairman David Boren, D-Okla., and House Foreign Affairs Committee Chairman Dante Fascell, D-Fla. Both have supported the Contras in the past.

Abrams' future might be determined by the administration's assessment on whether his departure would help Reagan's goal of winning congressional approval for more than $100 million in aid for the Contras this fall. The existing $100 million program expires at the end of September.

After hearing Abrams' testimony Tuesday and Wednesday, administration officials said they would not be surprised if a delegation of prominent members of Congress called on Shultz and suggested that Abrams be replaced.

If that happens, Shultz would be torn by his loyalty to a trusted aide who has fought hard for the president's policies and by the contention of some that continued U.S. help for the Contras is contingent on Abrams' departure.

Abrams has had the job for 23 months, a relatively short period, but the post of assistant secretary for inter-American affairs has been acquiring a reputation as an unusually challenging, high-risk position.

Abrams is the ninth assistant secretary in 14 years.

Success Of Marshall Plan A Lesson

Friday marks the 40th anniversary of a momentous address, delivered at Harvard University by George C. Marshall, that gave birth to a plan to lift Europe from the ashes of World War II.

As is fitting, there will be renewed expressions of Europe's gratitude and praise for America's foresight. But the passage of time also makes it appropriate to examine the impact of the Marshall Plan on East-West relations, and to ask whether the experience holds any lessons for the future.

To begin with, the Marshall Plan, formulated so soon after the war's end, did not enjoy universal support. Billions of dollars — in those days considerably more valuable and more sought after than today — were to be mobilized for a venture whose economic and political utility seemed dubious to many Americans. After the heavy strain imposed by the war effort, they now saw themselves drawn into a major economic commitment of questionable merit and confronted with the prospect that most of the aid would never be repaid.

The beneficiary of this great and unprecedented initiative was not only Britain, America's ally that had borne so much of the brunt of the war. It was not only France and the other countries that had suffered under Nazi occupation. No, aid was also extended to former "enemy countries," particularly Germany, or more precisely the three western occupation zones that, in 1949, would become the Federal Republic of Germany.

Germany put its initial infusion of aid to especially effective use. Indeed, year after year, Germany's economic life continues to benefit from the continuing influence of the special funding under the European Recovery Plan, as the Marshall Plan was formally known.

Although the U.S. government was acting in 1947 in accordance with what it clearly perceived as the country's own best interest, that does not diminish the undertaking's value. The economic recovery of Europe, specifically Western Europe, obviously made good sense, even to Americans — first for political reasons, later for the lively trans-Atlantic trade that developed.

And, in addition to generosity there were certainly diplomatic considerations that went well beyond immediate ones. We must not forget that the Cold War was getting under way. In fact, political factors initially outweighed future economic benefits. George Kennan, at that time a member of the planning staff in the State Department, has given us a detailed account of the situation in his memoirs. That staff generated the proposals that Marshall, as secretary of state, would give out almost verbatim as his own. The same holds for the initiative of March 1947, which has gone down in history as the Truman Doctrine. With the president's backing, Greece and Turkey were stabilized politically, and — in a kind of anticipation of the aid program for Europe — granted substantial economic support.

In both cases — more so with the Marshall Plan than with the attempts to secure the countries in the eastern Mediterranean — a major objective was curbing Soviet influence during the immediate postwar years. It was a time when Europe found itself in a precarious and confused state. In Western Europe, France and Italy seemed particularly at risk. But independent democratic forces in Europe proved more resilient than they themselves would have suspected. In different ways, but with an underlying unity of purpose, the various peoples displayed an unbroken will to get on with the task. The initial infusion of American aid simply awakened that will.

Stalin and his henchmen took no pleasure in this turn of events; they saw all the fish swimming out of their nets. Their direct influence remained limited to those countries in central and Eastern Europe that were under Soviet military control. The American offer of reconstruction help there had not been definitively rejected. In Prague, the ruling coalition was at the point of asking to participate in the Marshall Plan when Moscow whistled the Czechs back into line. The other countries in Eastern Europe had not even responded yet, and when the plan's first achievements began to appear, the Soviet leadership reacted with nervous fits of aggression. The Prague putsch of February 1948, and the Berlin Blockade, which began in the early summer of that same year made an indelible impression on all who lived through those times.

But the Soviet Union failed to prevent the incipient consolidation of Western Europe. On the contrary, the economic cooperation in the West, which led to the formation of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development and of the Common Market, also bore tangible institutional results, the fruits of the promise set forth in Marshall's Harvard speech.

Indirectly, this cooperation also contributed to the establishment of NATO. There then followed efforts to transform the Common Market nations into a unified political entity.

That political unification is progressing so slowly is another story. It results not only from incompetence on the part of governments but also from the inescapable burden that comes with the history of nation-states.

Willy Brandt, the 1971 Nobel Peace Prize winner, was chancellor of West Germany 1969-74. This was translated from the German by Krishna Winston.

Strength For Today

"Have faith in God and keep your powder dry." These words were uttered by Oliver Cromwell as he urged his troops to do battle with the Cavaliers in England's Civil War.

Some people find in Cromwell's words the cynical implication that faith in God is of relatively small importance compared to dry powder. But from what we know about Cromwell's life and character it seems less plain that he was as sincere in his conviction that faith in God was an equally important prerequisite for victory.

Cromwell had discovered an important truth. God expects us to do our part. That is why he has given us the strength and intelligence to master the everyday problems of living.

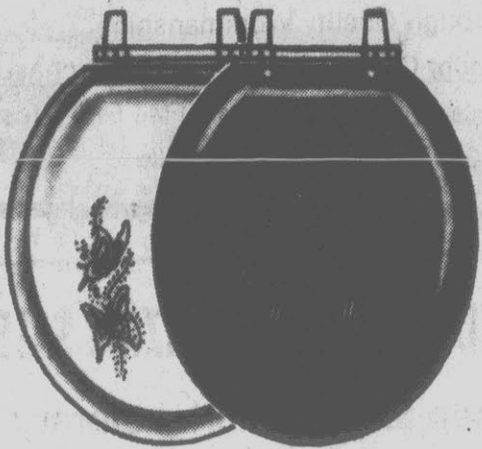

Therefore, sincere effort toward achievement lays a responsibility upon us to have faith in God and keep our powder dry.

'Pork Barrel' Goes Bipartisan

By The Associated Press

More than 700 local appropriation bills have been filed this year in the General Assembly, and for the first time, the hankering for money is broadly bipartisan.

Democrats who dominate the Legislature have traditionally withheld pork barrel goodies from Republicans. But some Republicans have used recent budget process revisions as an excuse to try to dip into the barrel.

"Why give the Democrats all the gravy?" asked Rep. Frank Rhodes, R-Forsyth, who introduced 13 pork barrel bills this year.

"They've decided it's a good thing now," said Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Granville, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee. "They were putting on a show before. They saw that it didn't have much effect and that the general public is for these projects."

Of the 46 Republicans in the General Assembly, 21 have submitted bills for pork barrel projects. Seven other Republicans have co-sponsored bills for local projects.

This year, requests from state lawmakers total more than $100 million. That's about three times the amount asked for last year — and probably 10 times more than what actually will be funded this year.

In recent years, from $8 million to $12 million from the tax-supported general fund has gone for local appropriations, known as "pork barrel."

In past years, Democrats often communicated casually to House and Senate leaders — such as in letters or over lunch — what they wanted for their districts. Democratic Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan, who presides over the Senate, vowed in 1985 to make the process less partisan. Both houses now require that lawmakers submit a bill for each request.

Rep. Ray Warren, R-Mecklenburg, told The Charlotte Observer that he asked for $50,000 partly "to test the sincerity" of Jordan's pledge.

Watkins and his Senate counterpart, Sen. Aaron Piyler, D-Union, say Republicans will get some local money this year if they put in bills.

But GOP lawmakers, even some who submitted bills, are skeptical. "I don't expect to get anything," said Rep. Robert Grady, R-Onslow, who requested money for a visitors center, two libraries, a police training center and the N.C. Seafood Festival in Carteret County.

"Everybody pays taxes. Any of my projects are as worthy as any other appropriation bill."

Watkins said he doesn't know how much has been requested in the House, but Piyler placed the Senate bills at about $82 million.

Republicans requesting nothing charged that Democratic leaders will find a way to enrich their followers — and themselves.

"There is no equal distribution of funds," said Rep. Jim Craven, R-Moore. "It's like a pig trough. The little pigs get squeezed out and the big pigs take it all. That's the way it is in the General Assembly."

Jordan Drops School Bond Plan, Endorses 'Pay As You Go' Proposal

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan says political realism led him to advocate a "pay-as-you-go" plan to generate $2.9 billion for school construction and give up on a bond issue he and Gov. Jim Martin had supported.

Jordan unveiled Thursday a complicated blueprint that combines annual $50 million appropriations with revenue from half-cent local sales tax increases authorized in 1983 and 1986, a windfall from quicker collections of withholding taxes and local funds.

The plan is the third put forward since last fall for raising money to build and renovate school facilities.

Martin proposed a $1.5 billion bond issue but later joined Jordan in supporting a bill sponsored by Sen. Kenneth Royall, D-Durham, to issue $1 billion in bonds for schools and a like amount for other needs such as water and sewer system improvements.

The House has approved a temporary 1-cent sales tax increase to produce $1.7 billion for schools, and Jordan hinted that chances were slim the House would approve bonds for school needs.

"When you look at the political realities of what's happening out there ... if I were starting all over again, this is the way we should have gone," he said.

He said the new proposal is a "pay-as-you-go plan. ... It meets our needs. It builds on resources already available without new taxes or what some would call deficit financing."

Martin chided Jordan for abandoning the bond plan.

"That's very disappointing," the governor told reporters, saying Jordan should exert "leadership that would press that issue with the House members. The fact that some of the House members voted for the sales tax ... doesn't mean they would vote against the bond issue."

The Jordan plan has the backing of the Senate leadership, including Royall, whose bond bill has been approved by the Senate Committee on Economic Growth and is pending in the Finance Committee.

"Politics is the art of compromise and this is a good way to start," Royall said.

Jordan said the Senate leadership still supported the $1 billion bond issue for infrastructure other than schools.

He said he had discussed his plan briefly with House Speaker Liston Ramsey, who was out of town and could not be reached for comment.

Rep. Bob Etheridge, D-Harnett, co-chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, said the plan was an improvement on the bond bill. But he added there was no guarantee that the state could afford the annual appropriations and said counties had spent much of the half-cent sales tax revenue.

Tobacco Suit

RALEIGH (AP) — A Wake County tobacco farmer claims management decisions by directors of the Flue-Cured Tobacco Co-op Stabilization Corp. caused "undue hardships" on member farmers and helped drive some growers out of business.

Horace Tart gave the testimony on the first day of a hearing in Wake County Superior Court before Judge B. Craig Ellis. Tart and farmer Dewey Keith, both of Fuquay-Varina, are suing the cooperative for access to financial and other management records they claim they need to determine whether the cooperative suffers from poor management.

Fred Bond, chief executive officer of the cooperative, and the board of directors have said the farmers are not entitled to view the records.

Tart and Keith base their claims on a law that allows shareholders of the cooperative to inspect its records "at any reasonable time or times for any proper purpose." Both Tart and Keith are shareholders.

Tart said a "general mistrust" of the cooperative management prompted some 700 tobacco farmers to sign a petition seeking access to the records.

Merger Study

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Transportation Department says it has suspended a scheduled formal hearing into the proposed USAir-Piedmont merger and is asking the two airlines as well as any opponents to the deal to submit comments directly to the department.

Nancy Vaughan, a spokeswoman for USAir Group, said the department's announcement Thursday had yet to be closely examined "but we view it as a very positive step."

She said that the merger likely would be completed about two months sooner without the formal hearing process. USAir officials have estimated that the deal would become final about nine months after final government approval.

USAir Group and Piedmont Aviation Inc. reached agreement last March in which USAir would purchase Piedmont Airlines for $1.6 billion, creating the country's 7th largest airline.

Standoff

ASHEVILLE (AP) — A fugitive from California who had barricaded himself in an Asheville apartment for six hours shot himself in the chest just before midnight Thursday after telling his ex-girlfriend goodbye and saying it was "too late to turn it around."

Terry Gilbert Hannum, 56, who is wanted on a murder warrant from Orange County, Calif., in connection with the slaying of his wife in 1984, turned the .38-caliber weapon he used to ward off police officers on himself after talking extensively with law enforcement authorities.

Hannum was listed in critical condition at Memorial Mission Hospital in Asheville following surgery early today, hospital spokeswoman Brenda Burchfield said.

New Trial

ASHEVILLE (AP) — Isaac Welch Jr. won a new trial this week on kidnapping and attempted rape charges that sent him to prison almost four years ago.

U.S. District Court Judge David Sentelle, in ordering a new trial, cited a "tainted juror" who served on the panel of seven women and five men that convicted Welch in Madison County Superior Court in April 1983 of second-degree kidnapping and assault on a female with intent to commit rape.

But indications Thursday were that the state will appeal Sentelle's order, which directed North Carolina to retry Welch by early August or set him free. The charges against Welch were filed in connection with an attack Sept. 2, 1981 on a Mars Hill College coed.

Centennial Campus

RALEIGH (AP) — The Council of State has approved N.C. State University's master plan for the 780-acre Centennial Campus, removing another possible roadblock to the project.

The council also has approved land use plans for parts of the former Dorothea Dix Hospital property that are controlled by the Department of Agriculture and the Department of Health and Human Resources.

NCSU's master plan for the campus — endorsed by the University of North Carolina Board of Governors in January — calls for an unusual combination of private industry and university research with parkland, housing and other amenities.

NCSU hopes to lease portions of the campus to private industry, whose scientists will be able to work near university researchers, and to use some of that lease revenue to pay for costs of putting in the necessary roads, lighting, water and sewer lines.

Newsletter

GREENSBORO (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin said he did not know that a letter he wrote praising Emerald Isle tourist attractions would be used in a publication promoting a business run by two of his top Republican supporters.

The newsletter, which is published by Rouse-Watson Inc. Real Estate, is owned by Frank Rouse, a former state GOP state chairman, and Ronnie Watson, a Republican activist and former mayor of Emerald Isle.

Both Rouse and Watson are major campaign contributors to Martin. Last year, Martin appointed Watson to the Coastal Resources Commission, the panel that oversees the state's coastal management program. Rouse is a frequent informal adviser to Martin.

Convicted

GRAHAM, N.C. (AP) — George Wayne Robertson was found guilty of second-degree murder in Alamance County Superior Court Thursday in the shooting death of a man at his mobile home last December.

Robertson, 33, of Route 3, Graham was charged with second-degree murder in the Dec. 21 shooting death of Monte James Bradsher, 22, Route 1, Haw River.

Bradsher died from a single gunshot wound to the chest as he was outside the mobile home where Robertson lived with Dianne Geyer, who was Bradsher's girlfriend and the mother of Robertson's child.

Injury Research

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Reducing the number of injuries North Carolina residents receive from causes ranging from motor vehicle crashes to house fires is the aim of a new research center at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Research will be conducted through the UNC Injury Prevention Research Center, established with a three-year, $1.1 million grant for from the federal Centers for Disease Control, Patricia F. Waller, center director, announced Thursday.

The center, a joint project of UNC's Highway Safety Research Center and Center for Health Promotion and Disease Prevention, will coordinate research, teaching and service activities for injury prevention, Ms. Waller said.

OLD CANOE — Richard Lawrence, head of the state's underwater archaeology branch at Fort Fisher, inspects a dugout canoe recovered from the Cape Fear River in Bladen County. It is considered one of the more important historic recoveries of boats used on the river. (AP Laserphoto)

Ferry Captain Finds Old Canoe

CARVERS CREEK, N.C. (AP) — A canoe discarded and then recovered by a ferry captain in the Cape Fear River earlier this week is believed to be the first one of historic significance to surface on the river.

The canoe, which actually is a pine tree hollowed out and fashioned into a canoe, was recovered by a team of archaeologists Tuesday.

"It's going to be really difficult to say it was built at such-and-such a time," Richard Lawrence said. "But my best guess is that it dates from the late 1800s or early 1900s."

Lawrence directs the Fort Fisher-based Underwater Archaeology Branch of the state Department of Cultural Resources. He traveled to Bladen County to hunt for the canoe with an assistant, Julep Gillman-Bryan, and an amateur historian, Jerry Dunn of Wilmington.

The canoe was found dangling from the Elwell Ferry's cable Sunday morning when Capt. Bob Mitchell lifted the cable from its underwater resting place.

Thinking the shell of a rotten log had snagged the cable, Mitchell gave naval history a swift castoff.

Moments later, his discovery dawned on him.

"You know how you sometimes wish you'd done something else?" he said. "But there were people waiting to cross the river in a hurry to get to work and all. You know how that is."

Fortunately, a boater waiting on shore also recognized the canoe and took off down river after it. He tied the vessel to a willow tree one mile

Body Found

WILMINGTON (AP) — The body of a 61-year-old Wilmington woman was found Thursday in the Cape Fear River more than 11 hours after a search crew began combing the waters to find her, police said.

Police said the drowning death of Minnie "Roxie" Monroe was being ruled a suicide. Her wig, glasses, sandals and an identification card were found in a neat pile by police near the Wilmington Hilton parking lot.

Police reports indicated that she had jumped into the Cape Fear River near the same location almost 10 years ago, but she was pulled out by passersby.

State's Schools To Retain CAT

By The Associated Press

The president of the North Carolina Association of Educators says testing first- and second-graders is unreliable and labels children at an early age, but the state Board of Education has agreed to continue the achievement tests.

"It is inappropriate for young children," said Karen Garr, president of the N.C. Association of Educators. "The tests are unreliable. They label children at an early age, and the money could be much better spent. I mean, is it really necessary to know what the ranking of a child is in the nation when it's only 6 years old?"

The issue of testing young students has become controversial, pitting state school administrators, led by Superintendent Craig Phillips, against many legislators and the state's largest teacher organization.

Phillips, meanwhile, argues that the test helps the Department of Public Instruction to rate student progress and compare their scores to other students across the nation.

The state school board agreed, voting Thursday to continue giving second-graders the California Achievement Test, an exam that measures students' ability against other students in the same grades nationwide.

That action contradicts initiatives in the General Assembly, where the legislative budget committee has adopted a special provision that would prohibit educators from giving standardized achievement tests to first- and second-graders.

Legislators think the tests create stress in children so young.

"The children are not at a point in their development to know what they're being tested on," Sen. Charles W. Hipps, D-Haywood, who is sponsoring a bill to delete achievement testing for young students, said in an interview. "They are just learning how to learn, if you will."

The budget committee left the money for the achievement tests available to the state Department of Public Instruction, but stipulated that it would have to be used for other types of exams such as diagnostic tests, which point out specific strengths and weaknesses in certain subjects.

The state board said it would continue testing first-graders until it can develop or select a diagnostic test — a further deviation from the legislature's provision.

If legislators pass the appropriations bill, the board's action will be nullified, and it will be forced to follow the provisions as they're written.

Ramsey Misses His First Day

ASHEVILLE (AP) — Something happened Thursday that hasn't since at least 1969 — Liston B. Ramsey missed a session in the House of Representatives.

Ramsey, a 13-term Madison County Democrat, broke his string of perfect attendance dating back at least 18 years when he flew home for the funeral of his brother-in-law, William Weaver Pritchard of Asheville.

"I missed him," said Speaker Pro Tem Jack Hunt, D-Cleveland. "He's a comfort to me."

Hunt has opened and closed House sessions before, and often presides when Ramsey, elected speaker in 1961, sits down for a rest. But Thursday was the first time since Hunt became speaker pro tem in 1965 that he has presided without Ramsey close by.

Ramsey served two terms from 1961-64. But despite his defeat in the 1964 election, he attended the 1965 session as a private citizen.

Voting Rights Meeting Set

SHELBY, N.C. (AP) — The chairman of the Cleveland County Board of Elections has organized a meeting this summer for elections officials in the 40 North Carolina counties that fall under the federal Voting Rights Act.

Tony Eastman said he did not object in any way to the goals of the act, but did question some enforcement procedures. Nearly every action taken by the board, from changing a precinct line to setting the salary for staff employees, must be cleared with the U.S. Department of Justice.

Eastman estimates that at least three-quarters of the 40 counties will participate in the meeting, which will be held Aug. 13 in Winston-Salem.

He said he did not anticipate any immediate results from the meeting, but hopes to "open up channels of communication" among the counties, federal enforcement officials and legislators.

The Voting Rights Act was adopted in 1965 in an effort to eliminate discrimination in voting practices.

Eastman said he knows of no instance in which Cleveland County has sought clearance from the justice department and been turned down. But he said there are apparently no published guidelines on precisely what information the justice department requires or what the grounds for approval or rejection might be.

The relationship between counties that must comply with the act and federal officials who enforce it is adversarial, Eastman said, adding that he hoped the meeting will change that.

"I'm looking for some type of expectation for the justice department to try and understand our problems at the local level," he said. "They need to be more aware."

Eastman said he has been assured by the justice department that it will send at least one or two representatives to the meeting, which he said has been endorsed by State Elections Supervisor Alex Brock.

CLOSED — Brothers Chip, J.J. and Ty Merrick pose with their lemonade stand in Fort Worth, Texas, after it was ordered closed by a city inspector. City officials later relented and said they could reopen the stand today. The boys say they have averaged nearly $200 a week in business. (AP Laserphoto)

Youths' Lemonade Stand Will Reopen

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — City officials who put the squeeze on three young brothers' lemonade stand relented after finding a citrus-sized loophole in the zoning code.

In a statement, city officials Thursday said the three could reopen their stand today. The all-American enterprise had been shut down last week.

"We just got word," Gina Merrick said after learning her sons' stand is legal after all. "We are going to open (this) morning."

The business run by the Merrick brothers — Chip, 14, J.J., 7, and Ty, 5, — had become a familiar sight to neighborhood residents, offering lemonade, other drinks and homemade cookies.

The brothers used the proceeds to contribute to their church and its mission work, buy a home computer and help pay for a family vacation in Florida.

But last week, city code-enforcement officers informed them the stand constituted a commercial enterprise on residential property, a zoning violation. An anonymous caller had complained to city officials.

Chip and J.J. slapped up a sign across the lemonade stand that read, "Closed by city order." The closing prompted a flood of phone calls from residents to city officials protesting the move.

On Thursday, the Merricks got a call from Kay Granger, head of the city's zoning commission. Ms. Granger said she had discovered a provision in the law that allows businesses such as lemonade stands.

In a statement, the city said that Lester Paige Jr., a city building official and "official interpreter of the zoning ordinance," had interpreted the law to permit "single-station lemonade stands operated by children residing on the premises."

"To do otherwise," Paige said, "would require the elimination of other opportunities to earn spending money such as magazine sales, paper routes and lawn-mowing."

PTL Status Challenged

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service is recommending that the religious tax-exempt status of the trouble-plagued PTL ministry be revoked, according to a story today in USA Today.

The confidential IRS report urges revocation of the tax-exempt status of the operation back to 1980 based on what the report terms "unreasonable and excessive" compensation paid to PTL founder Jim Bakker, the newspaper said.

Larry Batdorf, a spokesman at IRS headquarters in Washington, said the IRS would not comment on the story.

Bakker resigned from PTL after admitting to a 1980 sexual liaison, turning the operation over to a new board of directors headed by the Rev. Jerry Falwell. Since then the two have become embroiled in controversy over the operations of PTL, which is based in South Carolina.

According to the story in USA Today, Bakker was paid $1.3 million in 1981-83 and $1.9 million in 1986.

In addition, the story said the report claims, PTL — which stands for Praise the Lord or People that Love — does not qualify as a church because its main business is television.

If the tax exemption is revoked, contributions to PTL would no longer be deductible and the organization could be required to pay back taxes. A final decision could take considerable time, however, the report said.

Acid Spill

RUTHERFORDTON, N.C. (AP) — Fifteen employees of the Rutherford County Courthouse were sent to a local hospital Thursday after some sulfuric acid was spilled in the basement of the building, according to authorities.

Rutherford fire officials said the incident occurred when a community service worker was cleaning a bathroom in the basement and poured out sulfuric acid.

Rudman Says Someone Blocking Info From Iran-Contra Hearings

By ROBERT M. ANDREWS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The vice chairman of the Senate investigating committee charged today that unknown people were orchestrating efforts to block crucial information from reaching congressional panels trying to unravel the Iran-Contra affair.

At the outset of today's Iran-Contra hearing, Sen. Warren Rudman, R-N.H., objected to Iranian-American businessman Albert Hakim's refusal to testify about a meeting he had with his partner Richard V. Secord and White House aide Oliver North last Nov. 24. The meeting occurred the day before Attorney General Edwin Meese publicly disclosed the diversion of Iran arms sale proceeds to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels.

At the time of the meeting, Justice Department lawyers had been searching North's files since Nov. 22, and Meese had interviewed North personally at the Justice Department the day before.

Hakim based his refusal on attorney-client privilege because lawyer Thomas Green was present and Hakim claimed Green was representing him. Secord, a retired Air Force major general who worked with Hakim on arms sales to Iran and aid to the Contras, had earlier refused to discuss the meeting, citing the same privilege because Secord said Green was representing him. But Rudman called Green's representation of Hakim into question. He brought out that within days Hakim hired Richard Janis as his lawyer.

And Rudman got Hakim to acknowledge that Green still has sent Hakim no bill for the services rendered at the time.

The senator disclosed that on the same day, Nov. 24, Green was wrongly telling Justice Department officials that Hakim was to blame for diverting proceeds from U.S. arms sales to Iran to assist the Nicaraguan Contra rebels.

"The man who was representing you on that day is talking to the Justice Department and saying you're responsible for the diversion," Rudman said. "Doesn't that surprise you, Mr. Hakim?"

"Yes," Hakim replied. "It sure surprises me," Rudman said.

Rudman vowed to have the committees discuss further whether to accept Hakim's claim of attorney-client privilege.

"I think this has been orchestrated by someone — I don't know who — to keep these committees from getting information," Rudman said. "We will not be denied the truth."

Rudman read from a committee interview with Assistant Attorney General William Bradford Reynolds who described Green's telephone call to him on Nov. 24 and a subsequent meeting at which Green attributed the arms profits diversion to Hakim.

Rudman said Green was trying to tell Justice Department officials that Hakim was the person to blame for the diversion, "which we know from our records does not happen to be the fact."

North was fired Nov. 25 as a deputy on the National Security Council staff, and his boss, National Security Adviser John Poindexter, resigned.

In testimony Thursday, Hakim said North's "prime objective" in working for the release of American hostages last fall became President Reagan's political standing and the fate of Republicans in the November elections.

He said that as the November elections drew closer, North became increasingly interested in freeing the hostages "to enhance the position of the president" in working for GOP gains. "The subject 3rd graf.

Low Jobless Rate Holding

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation posted a decade-low jobless rate of 6.3 percent for the second straight month in May despite an increase of 46,000 in the rolls of the jobless, the government said today.

The unemployment rate, on the heels of a dramatic 0.3 percentage point drop in April, leveled off as the labor force grew by a "probably somewhat exaggerated" 658,000 people last month, of whom 612,000 found jobs.

Joblessness, however, climbed from 7,500,000 to 7,546,000, the Labor Department said.

At 6.3 percent, the unemployment rate is 0.8 percentage point below its level of a year ago. The number of jobless Americans is about 800,000 less than in May 1985.

The sharp increase in the size of the civilian labor force — people at work or looking for a job — after two months of little change had been expected by many economists.

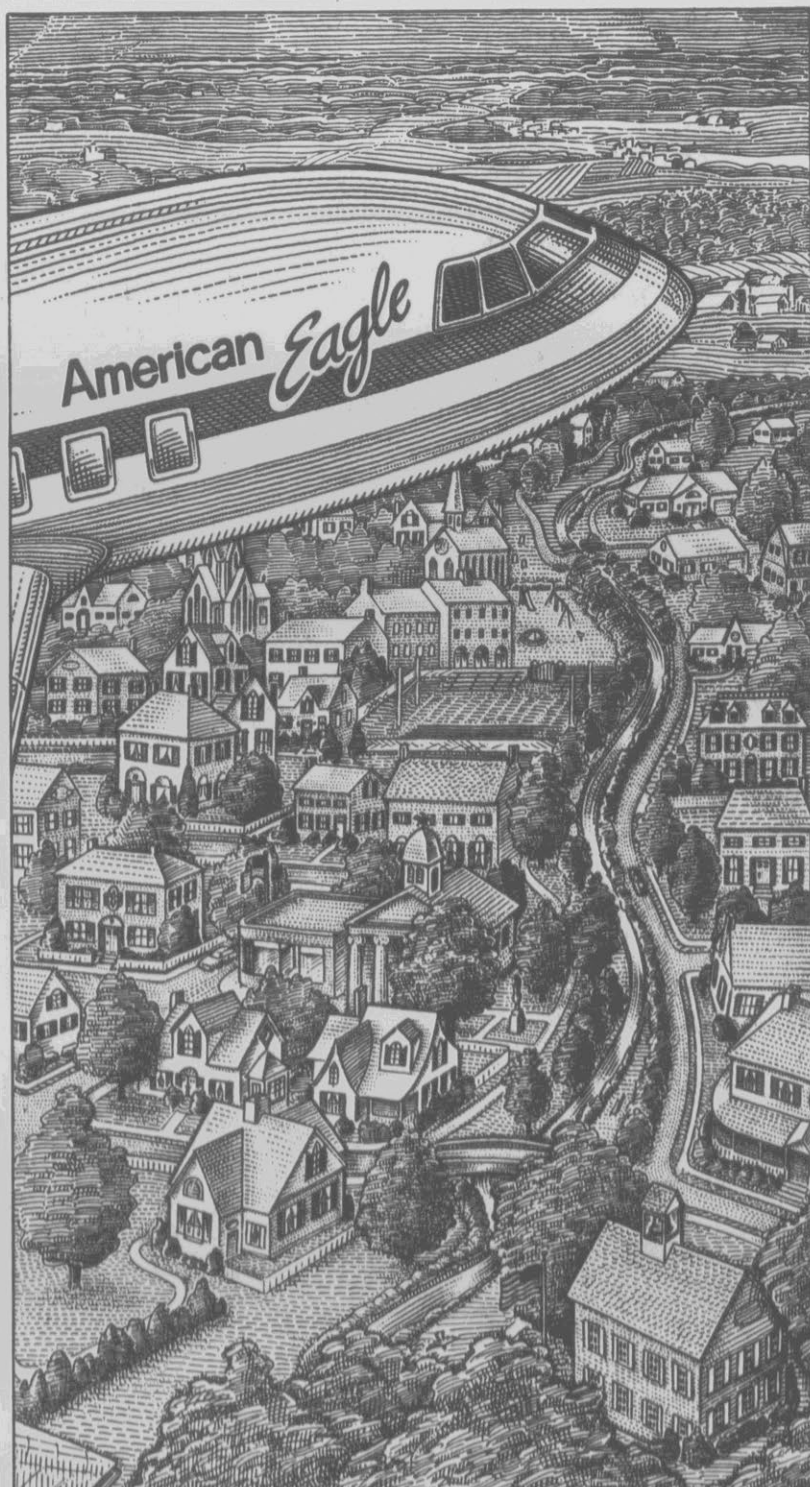

"Even though employment normally increases strongly between April and May as outdoor activity picks up and young people enter the labor market, the size of the April-to-May change is probably somewhat exaggerated," the commissioner of labor statistics, Janet L. Norwood, said in congressional testimony.

In contrast, a separate survey of non-agricultural payrolls showed employment growth of only 123,000, the lowest monthly increase of the year.

The payroll gains were essentially limited to the service side of the economy. Employment in hospital and business services, such as data processing, accounted for more than one-third of the gains. Employment in the finance, insurance and real estate sectors rose by about 15,000.

Bishops To Appeal Contempt Ruling

NEW YORK (AP) — The nation's Roman Catholic bishops will appeal to the Supreme Court a contempt citation for refusing to release records to abortion-rights groups challenging the church's tax-free status, a spokesman says.

In a 2-to-1 decision Thursday, the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals upheld a May 1986 ruling citing the United States Catholic Conference and the National Conference of Catholic Bishops with civil contempt. A spokesman for the Conference of Bishops expressed disappointment, saying that at stake was "the right of all churches and religious groups to express their views on public issues without harassment by groups which disagree with them or punitive action on the part of the government."

"We are hopeful that we will be vindicated by the Supreme Court in this important case involving free speech and religious liberty," the spokesman, Robert Wonderly, said in Washington.

This is a dramatized version of facts taken from the Book of Genesis intending to show some of the customs of these ancient and traditional times

A BRIDE FOR ISAAC

ELIEZER, ABRAHAM'S STEWARD HAS RETURNED FROM HIS SEARCH FOR A BRIDE FOR ISAAC WITH REBEKAH, DAUGHTER OF BETHUEL. ISAAC, ON AN EVENING STROLL, IS THE FIRST TO SEE THE CARAVAN....

IT IS ELIEZER! RETURNED AT LAST WITH MY BRIDE!

AND REBEKAH APPROACHES ISAAC, HER FACE COVERED WITH A VEIL, AS IS THE PROPER CUSTOM OF THE DAY...

HAPPINESS FILLS ELIEZER, FOR HE SUCCESSFULLY HAS ACCOMPLISHED THE MISSION WITH WHICH HE WAS CHARGED.

AND NOW ABRAHAM MAY FINISH HIS REMAINING YEARS IN PEACE AND CONTENTMENT, FOR HE IS ASSURED THAT HIS FAMILY LINE WILL CONTINUE AND BECOME A MIGHTY NATION, AS GOD HAS PROMISED, NOW THAT HIS SON ISAAC HAS A WIFE, WHO WILL GIVE HIM LOVE AND COMFORT THROUGH THE YEARS, ALL OF WHICH HAS BEEN RECORDED IN GENESIS: CHAPTER 24.

Wife Of House Speaker Finds Her Life Exciting

EDITOR'S NOTE — House Speaker Jim Wright, who divorced his first wife after 30 years of marriage, calls his current wife his "best asset." His friends say Betty Wright, who once danced in nightclub chorus lines, is one of the few people able to tell him what to do. She finds her role exciting.

By ANDREW MANGAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Betty Wright, a former chorus girl turned businesswoman, once found it boring to be the wife of a congressman, but now that her husband is speaker of the House she's enjoying her new status.

"I'm really popular now," says the 62-year-old wife of Jim Wright, the Democrat from Texas.

"I've started keeping a diary," she says. "I just thought it might be historical. I started it with the swearing-in day and have been writing personal things in it about what happens to us."

"There are luncheons every day, then when I get home the answering machine is filled with messages. I like change. If you didn't you would be very unhappy in this business."

In a 1978 interview, however, Mrs. Wright was a little less enthusiastic about her role as a congressional wife.

"You don't have the opportunity to make good close friends," she said then. "There's a superficial quality to life here. The social life isn't as glamorous as people think because it's really just a continuation of work. And as a wife you are in such a supportive role, just standing there, smiling a lot and being bored."

Friends of the speaker say Mrs. Wright is one of the few people able to tell him what to do.

"Jim is consumed by his role in Congress," says fellow Texan Bill Newbold, a housing and health-care lobbyist. "If Betty weren't around he wouldn't care where he slept, what he ate, or much of anything other than his responsibilities in Congress."

Betty has upgraded him. He no longer dresses like a racehorse tout. She has forced him to be not just a political leader but a human being as well.

Wright agrees. He calls his wife his "best asset." Mrs. Wright describes her husband as "a man who thinks to himself a lot, who likes to formulate ideas in his mind and carry them to their logical conclusion. He doesn't like to speculate."

With her husband now spending practically every waking minute attending to his speakership, Mrs. Wright has become even more of an overseer, keeping an eye on his health, attending political functions and making sure nothing important escapes his notice.

"Her No. 1 approach to life is to assist Jim," said longtime friend and business associate George Mallick. "She's very supportive by reading things for him and putting those that she feels are important by his bedside for him to read at night before he goes to sleep."

Betty Hay Wright is a woman of timeless features, with crisp brown eyes, brushed-back black hair and a steady, thoughtful gaze. She says she is a homemaker at heart and takes pride in caring for her husband and his four children whenever possible, though she never had children herself. "Jim says I'm a frustrated mother," she says.

She grew up in St. Louis during the Depression, the only child in a broken home. The only father figure in her life was a stepfather who divorced her mother when Betty was 1½ years old and didn't reappear until she was 15.

Her mother had rheumatic fever and was unable to hold a job. To help pay the bills, Betty turned her teenage tap-dance lessons into a moneymaking venture, working in nightclub chorus lines.

When her mother died, the 20-year-old Betty and her first husband, a pilot, moved to Fort Worth. Following their divorce, Betty went to work as an executive secretary at the Hotel Texas, now the Hyatt Regency.

In 1965, the Texas Employment Commission placed her in a secretarial job in Wright's Washington congressional office, where she says she found him to be "very nice, very friendly, very polite, very much a gentleman."

After a short stint in which she left to work for a construction company, Betty returned to Washington as an administrative assistant with the Public Works Committee, on which Wright was a senior member.

Unlike Betty, Wright's first wife never quite made the transition from Dallas-Fort Worth to the tough life in the nation's capital, friends say.

After 30 years of marriage, Wright divorced and in 1972 married Betty. She retained her $24,000-a-year job until the press raised questions of a conflict of interest soon after Wright became majority leader four years later.

Life as wife to one of the country's legislative leaders has meant little time for romance or getaways for the Wrights, but she says neither of them allows that to get them down.

"We have very little time for ourselves," Mrs. Wright said. "Work is his life. He's so dedicated to what he's doing. But I'm independent, and you've got to be. The clinging vine type would be very unhappy here."

"So far we've had a couple of weekends," she said. "We do try to get one week a year, but usually some staffer will call and he'll jet back to Washington or spend the entire time on the phone."

Mrs. Wright has immersed herself in business ventures, including joining a psychological institute that teaches techniques of self-motivation.

Human psychology has always fascinated her, even as a child, and when she came across the teachings of the Pacific Institute in Seattle she saw an opportunity to fulfill a longtime need.

The institute, run by Lou and Diane Tice, offers a video-based curriculum on "how to think like a successful person." The Wrights attended a three-day seminar several years ago and have since become good friends of the Tices.

Mrs. Wright currently serves as a customer representative for the institute.

"I'd really like to see it in the schools, to get children to think about themselves in a positive way," she says.

In addition, Mrs. Wright is vice president of Mallightco, Inc., an investment firm she and her husband formed with their friend Mallick, a Fort Worth developer.

To assuage her interest in the theater she agreed to serve as a financing co-chairman of the National Theater as well as serving as a member of the theater's board.

"I'm constantly growing," she says. "I love change."

Cocktail Waitress Questioned Dining Guest About Selection

Dear Abby

rude, I shoved the toys aside, and asked him to be seated. He stayed for an hour and a half — just making small talk.

I was taught that you don't just drop in on people; you call ahead to ask if it will be convenient. Are men of the cloth exempt from this courtesy? Or are they afraid if they call ahead, their parishioners will make up some excuse for them not to visit? — NO NAME OR TOWN, PLEASE

DEAR NO NAME: Not all men of the cloth drop in as yours do. And after this hits print, yours may not. Ministers are people. And some people are more mannerly and considerate than others. Amen.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 25-year-old female flight attendant who, while on vacation in Los Angeles, went to dinner with some friends. After being seated at the restaurant, the cocktail waitress came by and asked if we wanted something from the bar. My friends ordered cocktails and I ordered my usual non-alcoholic "virgin" strawberry daiquiri. The waitress gave me a strange look, then asked, "What? Are you pregnant? Or are you a Mormon — or a recovering alcoholic?" I was so stunned, I just answered, "No, I'm just a health nut who chooses not to pollute my body with alcohol."

Abby, where does this woman get off questioning me because I didn't order liquor? By the time I left the restaurant, I was furious!

These days when drunk-driving deaths are increasing, cocktail waitresses should not be pushing liquor on those of us who don't drink. How would you have handled it? — SHARI

DEAR SHARI: I would have reported the insolent waitress to the manager.

DEAR ABBY: Our minister and his assistant minister make it a practice to visit their parishioners at different times during the year. They are both very pleasant company. However, they never call ahead of time to say they are coming. Once the minister arrived just as we were leaving to attend a prior commitment. I explained politely that we were just leaving. He said, "This will only take a minute." After 30 minutes, I managed to ease him out the door, but I felt guilty. (We were 30 minutes late for our destination.)

A while ago, the assistant minister rang our bell. It was a rainy day, the children had been playing inside and the house was a mess. I had not been feeling well and had been stretched out on the couch, resting. (Luckily I was dressed.) Not wanting to be wrong with him, and how can I get through to him? He really can't see anything improper about what he says. — CRIMSON IN CLEVELAND

DEAR CRIMSON: Your "fine" husband lacks judgment, common sense and respect for your privacy. If you must spell out the subjects that are taboo, then do so, and be specific! Stress that your personal lives are personal and nobody's business, and he should talk about the weather, sports, current events, or anything, except you and him, and what you do.

Retirees Face Loss Of Money

MIAMI (AP) — A broker who could "charm your shoes off" took in more than $61 million in investments, mostly from retirees who thought they had found a high-yield, tax-free shelter and now fear their life savings may be wiped out.

Investigators believe at least half of the money invested is gone.

"It's a sore subject," Howard Heathman, 81, of Naples, said by telephone Thursday. "We are not wealthy people and we turned over, I would say, 80 percent of our life savings to him."

Heathman, his wife and some 1,400 other customers of broker Charles Phillip Elliott await the outcome of a federally appointed receiver's efforts to liquidate Elliott's assets and recover at least some of their money from holdings that range from stocks and bonds to luxury automobiles and homes in Jamaica and North Carolina.

Elliott, who recently consented to a permanent injunction barring him from violating federal securities laws, maintains he never meant to bilk anyone.

"I'm not sure that apart from market forces and unwise investments that he has an explanation for what happened," said his attorney, David Pollack. "I think (it was) just a series of investments that didn't work out the way he thought they would."

Elliott told The Wall Street Journal in a story published Thursday: "If this investigation had not ensued, I honestly think no investor would ever have lost a dime."

On March 31, U.S. District Judge William Hoeweler appointed the firm of Lyons and Farrar of Miami as receiver of Elliott Enterprises, Elliott Securities Inc. and Elliott Mortgage Co.

On Wednesday, the firm sold a bayfront home Elliott owned for $1.3 million, and the sale of another home for $1.9 million is pending.

That home has 14 rooms with an adjoining five-room guest house, a five-car garage, a swimming pool, gymnasium with spa, game room and an atrium with fountain.

The receiver also sent a Rolls-Royce convertible leased by Elliott back to the dealer and is taking bids on three Mercedes, two Cadillacs, a Corvette and a classic Ford Thunderbird convertible.

Circle Officers Named At Meet

Annie Turner was named president of the Benevolent Circle of the Kings Daughters and Sons at their Wednesday meeting held at the home of Delphia Corbett.

She will be assisted by Lucy Hanford, vice president; Adelaide Shirley, secretary, and Betty Tate, treasurer. The installation will be held in September.

Jeanne Raby reported on a birthday party held at the Creative Living Center and Mrs. Shirley reported on

Engagement Announced

Women's Colleges: 'Better Dead Than Coed?'

By MARCIA DUNN
Associated Press Writer
GREENSBURG, Pa. (AP) — Marilyn Flanagan was a bit uneasy and somewhat suspicious last fall when eight male students moved onto the quiet, shaded campus of Seton Hill College, founded by and for women more than a century ago.

The reason, she and other students were told again and again, was that it was more convenient for the men, who were officially enrolled at nearby St. Vincent College but studied theater, communications, music and art at Seton Hill.

Her fear that Seton Hill was on the way to becoming — ugh! — coeducational was confirmed four months later when the college announced it would begin accepting men as prospective fine arts graduates this fall.

She has been fighting the decision ever since, protesting at meetings and in petitions and, like others, by wearing a sweatshirt reading, "Better Dead Than Coed."

"I feel it is a breach of contract because I came to school wanting an education from a women's college. Now I'm a junior and I'm going to graduate from a school that is going coed. I feel I've been cheated," said Miss Flanagan, 20, an English major.

Adding to the protesters' worry and fury is the wave of coeducation that has swept over several of Seton Hill's sister schools in the past year.

The latest large-scale changeover, Wheaton College in Norton, Mass., announced earlier this year it would begin accepting men in fall 1988 pending a final vote by the board of trustees; the vote was set for Sunday. Last year, similar word came from Goucher College in Towson, Md., and Marymount University in Arlington, Va.

In each case, a need for more quality students was cited.

"It is an area of concern," said Bernice Sandler, director of the Association of American Colleges' project on the status and education of women. "Although most women are educated in a coed institution, the single-sex colleges have played a real role in providing more leaders."

"Graduates of women's colleges ... are two to seven times as likely to go on to whatever their accomplishment is, compared to women who graduate from any kind of coed institution," agreed M. Elizabeth Tidball, professor of physiology at George Washington University.

Tidball attributes this, in part, to the higher proportion of female faculty members and administrators at women's colleges. Other educators point to studies concluding that male students receive more attention and encouragement in a coed classroom than females.

"Since we know the environment of women's colleges are especially promotive of women as well as supportive, it's a very useful and good thing that we at least maintain, honor and support a number of these institutions," Tidball said.

There are 100 women's colleges in the United States, a modern low due primarily to a shrinking college-age population and the opening of all but a few men's schools to women, according to Nicole Reindorf, associate director of the Women's College Coalition. There were 142 women's colleges in 1974 and a record 298 in 1960.

"They (high school graduates) go where everybody's going. And where most people go is a large coed school," said Rebecca Stafford, president of Pittsburgh's Chatham College.

Chatham, one of the nation's first four-year colleges for women, has maintained enrollment levels by offering more pre-professional courses along with the required liberal arts and by developing a program for older women.

High school students who choose single-sex institutions "come because of the reputation despite the fact that it's a women's college," Stafford said. "Then they stay because it's a women's college."

Even the prestigious Seven Sisters colleges reflect the trend. Vassar is now coeducational and Radcliffe has delegated responsibility for faculty to Harvard, where both men and women reside and study. The remaining five — Barnard, Bryn Mawr, Mount Holyoke, Smith and Wellesley — are still all-female institutions but have close ties with nearby coeducational schools.

"All the time, things are shifting. One or two colleges every few years are going to decide to go coed," Ms. Reindorf said.

But, she added, "The women's colleges that have decided to remain women's colleges are very strong. What has happened in the last 25 years, there has been a real consolidation, a kind of shakeout."

"The very fact that the girls at Seton Hill are protesting ... they know what they've got. They know how splendid it is," said David Riesman, a sociologist at Harvard University.

Founded in 1883 by Mother Elizabeth Ann Seton's Sisters of Charity, Seton Hill College entered into a cooperative study agreement in 1969 with St. Vincent College, a men's school 10 miles away in Latrobe. St. Vincent began accepting women in 1983, however, dipping into Seton Hill's pool of candidates.

Since then, Seton Hill's enrollment has dropped steadily. It now has 821 students, compared to almost 1,000 in the late 1970s.

President-elect JoAnne Boyle maintains that despite the decline, economics was secondary when the board of trustees decided late last year to matriculate men in fine arts.

Marketing consultants had recommended that the liberal arts college be more aggressive in recruiting fine arts students due to its strong reputation and the scarcity of similar programs in this pocket of southwestern Pennsylvania. In addition, it was thought, a coeducational program would make life easier for the male students already studying fine arts at Seton Hill but earning degrees from St. Vincent.

"They've had to negotiate with two admissions offices rather than one, two academic deans' offices and so forth," said Gene Saraceni, chairman of Seton Hill's theater-communications department. Seton Hill administrators insist the change won't alter the college's dedication to the education of women.

"Philosophically, intellectually, in terms of our curriculum, our program, our interest in the woman learner, we can remain a women's college and still address the needs of males in our institution," Boyle said.

But some male students are concerned.

Sophomore theater major Shawn Sturnick, for example, wonders whether he will ever have a shot at becoming editor of the campus newspaper or president of the student government association. It also is not clear what will happen if he or other men opt for double majors.

"One of the big arguments is that the women should have the opportunities to develop themselves, their leadership abilities, in an unrestricted atmosphere," said Sturnick, 19, one of Seton Hill's male residents.

"But how can they deny me the opportunity to develop? That is wrong."

Greenville Women Receive Ribbons At Quilt Symposium

Three Greenville women received ribbons in judged quilt shows held during the N.C. Quilt Symposium last week.

Zelda Fasciano was awarded a blue ribbon and red ribbons were received by Vivian Purvis and Carol Volkman. The winners were representing the Greenville Quilters Guild.

"Dancing Tulips" was Mrs. Fasciano's entry in the full size, pieced and applied mixed technique category. Her tulip quilt was done in pink and green.

A variety of floral pastel colors highlighted Mrs. Purvis' entry in the miniature category — "Small Nine Patch From Large Floral."

A full size quilt "No Log Barn Raising" was Mrs. Volkman's winning entry. The quilt colors included navy, violet, tan, coral and gray. Her quilt was also selected by a judge as her choice.

Two quilt shows — one for symposium participants and an invitation show by symposium teachers — highlighted the event which was held at Guilford College in Greensboro.

Judges for the quilts were Georgia Bonesteel of Hendersonville, Kay Bryant of Fayetteville, and Ellen Guerrant of Charlotte.

The Greenville Quilters Guild will have a covered-dish luncheon Tuesday starting at 12:30 p.m. at the Community Building.

Mrs. Fasciano is the newly president of the Greenville group.

Martin Man Kills Wife, Then Himself

Regional Medical Examiner Stan Harris today ruled the deaths of a Williamston couple as a murder-suicide.

Clara Bell Gross Walker, 61, died of a shotgun wound to the head inflicted by her husband, Dan Walker, 66, according to Harris. Walker then shot himself in the chest with the shotgun, the medical examiner said.

"This is a homicide ameliorated by suicide," Harris said.

Martin County Deputy Sheriff Jerry Beach said the bodies were discovered by Mrs. Walker's daughter, Sandra Everett, when she returned from shift work Thursday at 3 a.m.

Beach and Martin County Sheriff Willie Rogers found the body of Mrs. Walker in one bedroom and Walker's body on a bed in another room. Walker "clutched a 12-gauge shotgun and had been shot in the left chest," Beach said.

According to Beach, evidence pointed to Mrs. Walker's having made an attempt to escape "as the door to the bedroom where she was found had signs of having the lock shot through twice. Mrs. Walker had been shot in the back of the head."

Walker was a retired longshoreman who came to Martin County from New York five years.

Sentenced

RALEIGH (AP) — A former deacon at Bazzel Creek Missionary Church near Fuquay-Varina was placed on probation after pleading no contest to charges that she tried to hire a New Jersey man to burn the church and injure a deacon.

Although she has continued to deny the charges, Pauline Beckman, 65, of Route 4, Fuquay-Varina, entered the pleas Thursday in Wake County Superior Court because she was concerned about how a protracted trial could affect her health, said her attorney, George M. Anderson.

missiles, which Iran has purchased apparently for use in the Strait of Hormuz area.

It was Crowe's first Capitol Hill appearance since the controversy blossomed last month after an Iraqi missile attack on the USS Stark killed 37 sailors.

Earlier, two senators just returned from the Persian Gulf said the United States might have to consider a pre-emptive strike against the Iranian missiles if they are deployed against shipping in the Strait of Hormuz.

"You'd have to do it if you're going to have freedom of passage of those straits," Sen. John Warner, R-Va., said on NBC's "Today" show. "...We see no allied assistance that will help us if it's necessary to go in and take out those missiles. We'll go it alone if it has to be done."

Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, who accompanied Warner on a week-long tour of the gulf, said such a strike was one of many options being considered. "I would not want to go in on a pre-emptive strike just right at this point," Glenn said. "But if they start deploying them, we can't take any chance on that strait being closed. It's too vital."

The Washington Post reported in today's editions that the Reagan administration was debating whether to make a strike against the missiles, known as Silkworms.

Greene Central Rally Puts Rams Into State Finals

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

SNOW HILL — Greene Central overcame a case of nervousness and a 3-1 deficit to beat Whiteville, 4-3, Thursday night to advance to the state 2-A high school baseball championship series.

Shay Beaman provided the offense, cracking a three-run double in the fifth inning that put the Rams ahead 4-3. Meanwhile, Anthony Jones came through with a three-hit pitching performance.

"We were tense and tight," said Ram coach Jim Fulghum. "When you get this far, you get tense."

The tenseness showed up primarily in the Rams' offense. They had scored 34 runs in their first three playoff performances but got only four hits off of Whiteville pitchers Alex Best and Ken Nance.

"I think we've been hitting the ball so good, that we were going to have a night where we wouldn't hit that well," Beaman said. "That's when the pitching has to come through."

And come through it did. Jones struck out nine and walked four while picking up his eighth win of the year against one loss. Of the three runs, only one was earned.

"He had a lot of confidence in himself," Fulghum said. "He had to have a good game for us."

The teams were tied 1-1 after the first inning, but the Wildcats pushed across a run in the fourth and again in the fifth.

Greene Central rallied in the bottom of the fifth.

Vance Head opened the inning by drawing a walk. Ervin Collins followed that by reaching on an error. T.J. Johnson then reached on a fielder's choice in which no one was put out to load the bases.

After one out, Beaman came up to the plate. In his two previous at-bats, he hit into double plays.

This time, Beaman cracked a double into left centerfield that cleared the bases.

"That inning, I figured we'd come back," Beaman said. "We had them rattled."

It was the first hit given up by Nance since the second inning.

"He did pretty good," Whiteville coach Linwood Hedgepeth said of Nance's performance. "He threw one bad pitch."

"The boy (Beaman) had hit into two double plays on curve balls. He (Nance) made a mistake. Mistakes will hurt you."

Whiteville had two men on in the sixth but failed to take advantage of it.

Then Chris Threadgill, the Wildcats' best hitter, slammed a shot deep into centerfield to open the seventh.

The shot chased Barry Ginn back deep but the senior centerfielder caught the ball at the fence, saving a run.

"He was real close to the fence," Beaman said. "I had my head down. I thought it was gone."

Jones then struck out Joe Reaves for the second out. Steve Bright followed that by reaching on an error but Herman Jones grounded out to end the game.

Best started the game for Whiteville and faced the first three batters, giving up two walks and a single to Gary Ginn that scored Ervin Collins.

Hedgepeth then replaced Best with Ken Nance, who went the rest of the way. Nance gave up only three hits while recording seven strikeouts.

Hedgepeth said he planned to go with Best as long as possible and to use Nance only if Best faltered.

"I was going to give him (Nance) some rest," Hedgepeth said. "But Best is just inexperienced. He just couldn't get the ball over."

Greene Central improves to 22-4 and will travel to play the winner of tonight's Cherryville-West Wilkes Western Championship game for the state title.

Riley Not Counting Laker Crown Before It Hatches After 141-122 Win Over Celts

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Virtually everyone may be conceding the NBA title to the Los Angeles Lakers, but Coach Pat Riley definitely isn't.

"I've been around this game too long and remember last year when we whipped Houston in the first game (of their Western Conference playoff series) and then we got beat four straight ... period," Riley said when asked if he thought his Lakers would continue to have an easy time with the defending champion Boston Celtics.

But Riley may have trouble convincing others that the Lakers, who took a 2-0 lead in the best-of-seven series with a 141-122 romp over the Celtics Thursday night, aren't unstoppable.

"If you take the attitude where you think it's over with, you're going to get whipped," he said. "I'm not cautious about that, I firmly believe that."

The series now switches to Boston for the third game Sunday, the fourth on Tuesday and the fifth, if necessary, on Thursday.

But Riley had to admit that the Lakers, who beat Boston 129-113 in Tuesday night's opening game at the Forum, are playing great basketball.

"Sure, I'm elated, ecstatic. We're playing championship basketball," he said, adding that the Lakers were playing their best at the most timely of times.

Celtics Coach K.C. Jones seemed to agree.

"I can't remember a team that uses the fast break as well as they do," he said. "They have 12 different ways to come at you with the fast break."

"They could run down the court with their eyes closed and could find (James) Worthy under the basket wide open. They could run down the court with their eyes closed and find (Michael) Cooper in the three-point area licking his fingers ..."

Cooper, the Los Angeles reserve who was voted the NBA's top defensive player this year, continued to spark the Lakers with his offense. As he has often in this year's playoffs, he started them rolling when the game was tight.

This time, Cooper came off the bench to ignite a rally that began late in the first quarter and continued through the second. The Celtics had held a five-point lead, but Cooper's shooting helped the Lakers pull out to a 75-56 lead by halftime.

He finished the game with 21 points in 26 minutes, including an NBA finals record of six three-point baskets, on just seven long-range tries. He also matched the finals record for assists in a quarter with eight in the second-period rally. Laker teammate Magic Johnson also matched that mark, in the third quarter.

"Cooper came in and broke our backs with those three-pointers," said Celtics forward Larry Bird, who led Boston with 23 points and 10 rebounds.

"Here we were up by two or three and all of a sudden he hits a couple of threes and next thing you know, the Lakers are up by nine."

Cooper was one of five Lakers to score more than 20 points. Byron Scott had 24, Worthy and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar had 23 each, and Johnson had 22 points and 20 assists.

After their second lopsided loss to the Lakers, the Celtics found themselves hoping the return to Boston Garden, where they've won a remarkable 84 of their last 86 games, will change their fortunes.

Asked what mysterious aura their home arena seems to have for the Celtics, Jones replied, "I don't know what it is. I just hope it's still there when we get back."

"If it is, we'll be in good shape."

"I'll take my chances on getting three in a row at home," Bird said. "I've always said that Game 5 is the crucial game, and we have to like the fact that we have it at home."

Many observers question whether there will be a fifth game. Late in the second half of Game 2, the fans at the Forum were chanting, "Sweep! Sweep! Sweep!"

"The fans can chant what they want," Johnson said. "But we just have to keep focused and play our game. We know it's going to be tough back there (in Boston). They don't have that record at home for nothing."

Jones, who said he thought the Celtics would simply feel more comfortable back home, joked that he was reminded Thursday night that he was a visitor at the Forum.

"I went in at halftime and started talking about how they were killing us with the fast break," Jones said, "and I heard a lot of noise and looked up and discovered I was in the Lakers' locker room. So I went down to our locker room and told 'em the same thing."

Norman, Rain Storm In Kemper

POTOMAC, Md. (AP) — It took a violent rainstorm to stop Greg Norman's assault on the new home of the $700,000 Kemper Open.

Norman, the defending champion, shot a 7-under-par 64 Thursday to share the lead with Tom Kite in the rain-shortened first round of the tournament. Scott Hoch finished at 65 and No. 2 money-winner Payne Stewart was among a group of four players at 66.

Showers suspended play with exactly half the 156-man field still on the 6,864-yard Tournament Players Club at Avenel course. Of the 78 players who completed the round, 31 broke par and nine finished even.

The tournament was to resume today with the completion of the opening round. Officials hoped to beat the darkness and complete most of the second round before Saturday.

Low scores were common as rain from Wednesday night left the course in ideal condition. The group at 66 included Chris Perry, Howard Twitty and Charles Bolling, while Larry Mize, Mike Bender and Sandy Lyle all had 67s.

U.S. Open champion Ray Floyd, Curtis Strange and Mark Brooks finished at 68.

Earlier this week Norman said he would have preferred playing at Congressional Golf Course, home of the Kemper since 1980 and an ideal place for long-ball hitters. But near-perfect conditions helped Norman breeze through the course with eight birdies and only one bogey.

"Last night's rain left the greens soft and there wasn't a breath of air," Norman said. "I think someone will shoot a 62 or 63 today."

The storm prevented Norman from finding out whether his prediction would ring true.

Kite beat the rain to make five birdies on the front nine and four on the back. Hoch finished without a bogey and Stewart couldn't recall the last time he had seven birdies in a round.

Saberhagen Captures 10th Win

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

Everyone wondered which Bret Saberhagen would pitch for the Kansas City Royals this season. So far, the answer is clear. He's the flashy guy who won the Cy Young Award in 1985, not the impostor who flopped through 1986.

Saberhagen became the first 10-game winner in the major leagues this year, allowing seven singles Thursday night as the Kansas City

Royals beat the Seattle Mariners 6-1. Saberhagen, 10-1, overcame a shaky start in which he gave up a run on two hits and a walk in the first inning and went on to pitch a wonderful game at the Kingdome, a hitter's paradise.

"I'm staying healthy this year, that's the big thing," Saberhagen said. "My foot and shoulder were hurting all last year and I never got started."

Saberhagen burst on the baseball scene in 1985 when he went 20-6 with a 2.87 earned run average and led the Royals to the World Series championship. Last year, plagued by injuries, he went 7-12 with a 4.15 ERA.

"This is the best start for a Royal pitcher I've ever seen," said veteran Kansas City catcher Jamie Quirk. "I don't see any chance of him slowing down."

Saberhagen struck out five, walked four and lowered his ERA to 2.20. In other American League games, California got past Chicago 3-2, Milwaukee trounced New York 9-3 and Boston beat Detroit 8-5.

Danny Tartabull, Steve Balboni and Kevin Seitzer hit home runs that backed Saberhagen. Tartabull, playing his first game in Seattle since the Mariners traded him to Kansas City during the winter, broke a 1-1 tie with a two-run homer in the sixth.

"I wasn't out there for revenge. I was pumped up because they're right behind us in second place," Tartabull said.

The Royals ended their four-game losing streak and lead the AL West by two games over Minnesota. The Mariners, who have lost three in a row, are 2½ games behind.

Tartabull connected for his eighth home run of the season against Mike Morgan, 6-5, after a one-out error by Seattle shortstop Rey Quinones.

A single by Phil Bradley, a walk to Scott Bradley and Alvin Davis' two-out single put Seattle ahead in the first inning. Balboni tied the score in the fifth with his eighth homer.

An run-scoring single by Balboni and Frank White's RBI grounder made it 5-1 in the eighth. Seitzer hit his third homer in the ninth off reliever Jerry Reed.

Red Sox 8, Tigers 5

Wade Boggs, a three-time AL batting champion, hit an RBI triple and two singles that led Boston past visiting Detroit.

Bill Madlock, a four-time National League batting champion signed earlier in the day by Detroit, had a two-run homer and two singles.

The Red Sox broke the game open with five runs in the sixth inning against Walt Terrell, 4-6, and reliever Willie Hernandez. Boggs' game-tying triple sparked the outburst.

Bruce Hurst, 6-4, yielded 11 hits in his seventh complete game, most in the major leagues. He struck out Kirk Gibson with the bases loaded to end the game.

Larry Herndon and Alan Trammell also homered for the Tigers.

Brewers 9, Yankees 3

Rob Deer hit two solo homers and Milwaukee scored seven runs in the fifth inning to beat New York.

Teddy Higuera, 5-5, stopped his five-game losing streak with his first victory since April 24. He gave up three runs on seven hits in eight innings, and the host Brewers backed him with four double plays.

Deer homered in the second and fourth innings against Joe Niekro, 3-4. Greg Brock and Dale Sveum hit two-run doubles in the fifth, the biggest inning against the Yankees this season.

Angels 3, White Sox 2

Wally Joyner's RBI single snapped a 2-2 tie in the eighth inning and lifted California over Chicago.

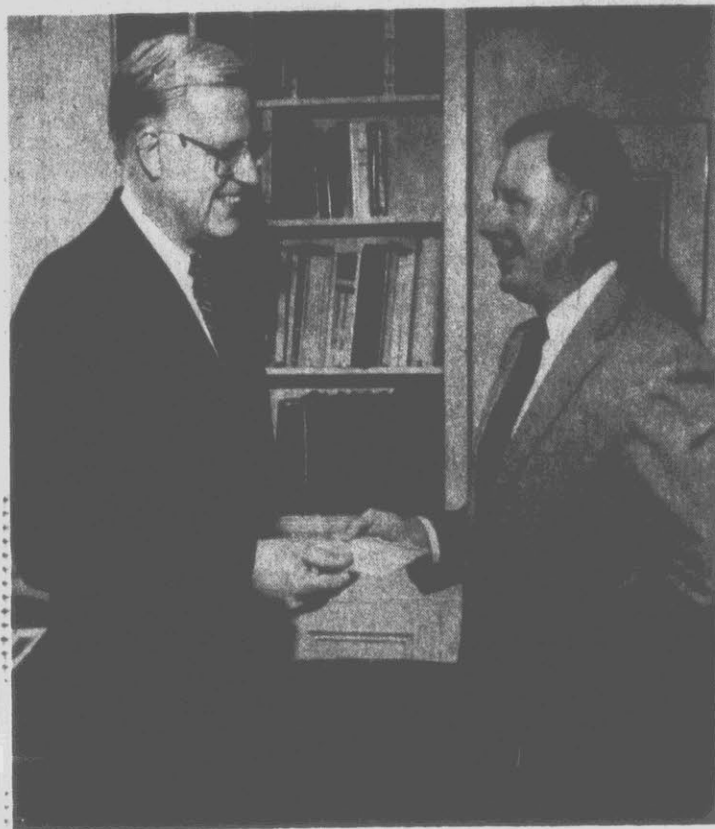

Jose DeLeon, 4-4, checked the Angels on just one hit for seven innings before Gary Pettis led off the eighth with an infield single. Pettis stole second, took third on an infield hit by Devon White and scored on Joyner's sharp single off reliever Ray Searage.

Jack Lazorko, 1-2, won his first major-league game. He pitched a six-hitter in his first complete game, which came in his fifth big-league start.

The host Angels scored twice in the third on a single by Bob Boone, an RBI grounder by White and Joyner's sacrifice fly. Harold Baines hit a two-run homer in the White Sox fourth.

Fenner Holding Termed 'Cruel'

UPPER MARLBORO, Md. (AP) — A Maryland judge's decision to continue holding without bond a University of North Carolina football star who is charged with murder is "cruel," the defense attorneys says.

"It's very disappointing," attorney Joel Worshtil said after a Prince George's County District Court judge refused to set bond for Tar Heel tailback Derrick Fenner, who holds the Atlantic Coast Conference rushing record for a single game with 328 yards.

"I don't think there's any reason to hold Derrick. No bond is cruel, it's just cruel," said Worshtil.

Fenner, 20, of Oxon Hill, Md., was charged Tuesday with first-degree murder in what police said was the drug-related shooting death of Marcellus Leach, 19.

Leach was gunned down May 23 in the courtyard of the Kirkwood Apartments, according to Hyattsville City police.

A 17-year-old youth was injured in the shooting. Police are still seeking three other suspects.

In a separate case, Fenner had been arrested April 9 on charges of possession of cocaine and illegally transporting a handgun, according to prosecutor Jay Creech. Those charges were made after police found vials of a white substance and a .38 caliber revolver in the truck he was driving.

Creech urged Judge Sylvania Woods Thursday to withhold bond on the murder charge to "protect the people of Prince George's County."

According to a police report, a witness who looked at nine photographs said Fenner "looked like the guy in the yellow sweatshirt" who he saw on the scene.

The report said, "Fenner was seen by this witness standing by this tunnel shooting a gun."

Worshtil said he didn't know what tunnel the report referred to.

Creech said the witness, who has not been identified, "was positive as to the identification of Mr. Fenner as being involved in the case. And he had been seen there (at the Kirkwood Apartments) before," he said.

The prosecutor said the witness was certain Fenner was "the one firing the weapon at the time that the victim was shot and fatally wounded."

But Worshtil said Fenner was not wearing a yellow sweatshirt and in fact was "nowhere near Hyattsville, Md." on the night of the shooting.

Maceo Wilkins banged out three hits and Cole Yarbrough scattered three from the mound as First Federal gained a 6-2 victory over Wellcome in the Tar Heel Little League Thursday.

Both teams scored twice in the third inning for a 2-2 tie.

First Federal broke that up with a run in the fifth, however, moving ahead for good. Wilkins singled and moved up on a wild pitch. A pair of errors which followed allowed him to circle the bases for a 3-2 lead.

The other three runs all scored in the sixth with Wilkins hitting a double to drive in all three.

Wilbert Levett added two hits for First Federal. No one had more than one off Yarbrough, who struck out nine and walked eight.

Murphy, Thomas Power Braves

By The Associated Press
Dale Murphy got the Atlanta Braves out of their scoring slump in a hurry.
Murphy and Andres Thomas homered during a four-run first inning Thursday and the Braves went on to beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 8-3.
"We just happened to get some runs early, and that helped," Murphy said after his two-run homer, his 15th of the season.
The Braves had totaled just four runs in their last three games.
"It was just a matter of time until the guys broke out," said winning pitcher Zane Smith.

In other National League games, Montreal beat San Diego 8-5 and St. Louis defeated Chicago 3-1.
Albert Hall led off the first inning for the host Braves with a single and then stole second base. Dion James followed with an RBI double.
One out later, Murphy homered over the center-field fence against Brian Fisher, 2-2. With two outs, Thomas hit his second home run over the fence in left-center.
Atlanta scored two unearned runs in the fourth and Ken Oberkfell delivered a two-run single in the eighth.

"The last few games we hadn't hit the ball well," Oberkfell said. "We got to Fisher early and it gave us a lot of confidence."
Smith, 6-3, gave up three runs on six hits in seven innings. Jeff Dedmon worked the final two innings for his third save.
Junior Ortiz singled home Pittsburgh's first run in the second. Jim Morrison had an RBI groundout in the third and Mike Diaz hit his seventh homer in the sixth.
Expos 8, Padres 5
Tim Wallach hit a three-run homer and Hubie Brooks connected for a two-run shot that helped Montreal sweep a three-game series from San Diego and win for the ninth time in its last 11 games.

The host Expos broke a 4-4 tie in the sixth inning on Vance Law's sacrifice fly. Wallach hit his seventh homer in the seventh against Storm Davis, 1-6.
Floyd Youmans, 4-3, allowed four runs on 10 hits in 7 1-3 innings. He struck out nine and walked three.
Randy St. Claire relieved with the bases loaded and one out in the ninth. He gave up Benito Santiago's RBI groundout before getting his sixth save.
Cardinals 3, Cubs 1
Jack Clark hit a two-run homer and

St. Louis' Danny Cox and Todd Worrell combined to cool off Chicago.
Cox, 6-2, gave up six hits in 7 1-3 innings and Worrell allowed one hit the rest of the way for his 12th save. The Cubs had scored 38 runs in their last two games.
Clark hit his 16th home run in the first inning off Greg Maddux, 4-5.
Shawon Dunston hit an RBI single in the second for Chicago and Vince Coleman had a run-scoring single in the seventh for the visiting Cardinals.

ECU Signs Four Women Swimmers

Meridith Bridgers leads the list of four signees to the highly successful Lady Pirate Swim Team, head coach Rick Kobe announced today.
Bridgers, a senior at East Mecklenburg High School in Charlotte, was the YWCA National Champion in the 100 and 200-yard breast stroke. She becomes one of a number of former Mecklenburg Aquatic Club swimmers who have attended East Carolina.
ECU also signed YWCA national qualifiers Sonya Hemingway and Allison Hodges. Hemingway, a native of Millville, New Jersey, qualified in the sprint free style while Hodges, from Roanoke, Va., made the cuts in the prestigious meets in both the 100 and 200-yard backstroke.
Tracey Bauman, who comes to ECU from Teaneck, N.J., completes the list of signees. She was a New Jersey state finalist in both the 200 and 400-yard individual medley.

"All four of these girls have times that would put them in the finals of last year's Colonial Athletic Association Championship meet," Kobe said. "Tracey and Meredith have already recorded times that are under current ECU varsity records. Our Lady Pirates have had great success over the past couple of seasons and with the addition of these girls ECU should continue to dominate the dual meets. Our goal is to move out of the runner-up role in the CAA and become a true powerhouse."
The Lady Pirates are 22-4 in dual meets over the past two seasons.

Sportline

To The Sports Editor:
Recently, the news has been filled with the concept that values should be taught by our educational institutions. With the outbreak of the Derrick Fenner scandal, I believe that our colleges and universities need a lesson in values.
How is it that a person can be admitted to our of our nation's finest schools with an SAT score of 550, and a less than adequate high school background? The answer: he is an athlete.
Is the University of North Carolina so desperate for students or it it that they want to sell more football tickets? Admittedly, universities need a large amount of funds, but must we raise them while sacrificing our standards and reputation. I think not.
Universities must choose students based on their high school record, personal background and SAT score. The lowest possible SAT score in 400; the highest is 1600. Mr. Fenner's score was 550, yet he was admitted when hundreds of instate students are turned down with higher scores. UNC may have admitted Mr. Fenner because of his personal background, but I seriously doubt the background of a person who is suspected of a drug-related murder. I also doubt the system that the University of North Carolina measures one's background.
I do not blame Mr. Fenner for going to UNC, his admission was a trade off for performance on a football field. Everyone should have the opportunity to go to college, even though their background is inadequate, but must they go to our best institutions while qualified applicants are constantly being turned down? Universities are established by the state to educate its citizens, not to be their entertainment. Reform is desperately needed. This incident is appalling and a slap in the face to students, athletes, and the citizens of this great state.
Grifton
(Editor's Note: Proposition 48, which requires certain SAT scores and class standing has already addressed many of these problems and is now the NCAA standard for incoming athletes. Fenner was in the last class admitted prior to Proposition 48's coming into use.)

Valvano Interviews For Knicks Top Job

RALEIGH (AP) - North Carolina State basketball coach Jim Valvano said he interviewed for the vacant New York Knicks head coaching position last week because he is a longtime Knicks fan, not because he wants the job.
"I just listened to what they had to say because of my background - as a New Yorker, as a longtime Knicks fan," Valvano told The News and Observer of Raleigh Thursday night. "But, as I have said before, nothing has changed for me as far as N.C. State is concerned. I'm very happy here. My family is happy here."
Valvano, who has served as both the Wolfpack's head basketball coach and athletic director since last July, said he was "very interested" in the Knicks job on the ABC program "Monday Sportsnite."
"That's always been the case," he said. "I grew up in New York. What I'm saying is that I'm very interested in what happens with the Knicks - with who does get the job, with what happens to the franchise, with their future progress."
"All I did was listen to what the Knicks had to say. One interview, which was the only one I've ever had since I've been at N.C. State. I've had many calls, many offers, but this was the one time I interviewed," the 41-year-old Valvano said.

Valvano has been N.C. State's head basketball coach the past seven seasons, winning the NCAA title in 1983.

Navratilova Gets Bittersweet Win

PARIS (AP) — Martina Navratilova had just won her way into her 24th Grand Slam singles championship match yet she felt a little sad.

Because the player she beat 6-2, 6-2 in the semifinals of the French Open Thursday was her long-time rival and friend, Chris Evert.

"I felt bad even before we started because I knew I would feel sorry for her if she lost," Navratilova said.

"Of course, I'd have felt sorrier for myself. But I'll be back next year and I don't know if she will."

Evert has hinted this week that she may soon retire.

"When I was about to win the match, it was ridiculous," Navratilova said. "I was asking myself whether Chris would be here again. We've both been there and back and there again so many times. It made me think."

Victory was nevertheless sweet for Navratilova, the world's No. 1 player, who had been struggling with her form before Paris and has not won a tournament in six months.

"I was very nervous today and wanted to win it very badly. I'm excited about being in the final. I think I can win," she said.

In Saturday's championship match, Navratilova plays the world's No. 2 player, Steffi Graf of West Germany, who is unbeaten for the same six-month period but is making her first appearance in a Grand Slam final.

Graf, 17 — almost half Navratilova's age — beat Argentina's Gabriela Sabatini 6-4, 4-6, 7-5 in Thursday's other semifinal, rallying from 3-5, 0-15 in a thrilling, high-quality final. She is the youngest finalist at Roland Garros.

Attention today was to center on the men's semifinals, with defending champion and No. 1 seed Ivan Lendl meeting fellow Czechoslovak Miloslav Mecir and West Germany's Boris Becker facing Mats Wilander of Sweden.

Lendl is appearing in his fourth semifinal in Paris and holds a 3-1 lead in head-to-head matches with Mecir, including last year's U.S. Open final and in Hamburg last month. But Mecir has been in fine form in Paris, and is the only one of Friday's semifinalists not to have lost a set.

Becker, two-time defending Wimbledon champion, is seeking his first clay-court title against Wilander, the champion here in 1982 and 1985.

The Swede's only victory over Becker in five meetings was in the second round of 1985 French Open when he was an emphatic 6-3, 6-2, 6-1 winner.

Navratilova's victory over Evert was her 38th in 72 meetings between the rivals, and one of the most one-sided, lasting just one hour, 14 minutes.

Evert, who had won her last three tournaments, took too many risks as she tried to play deep and keep Navratilova in the back court.

She missed a stream of groundstrokes and netted countless approach shots as Navratilova pressured her and gave nothing away.

Trying for her third consecutive French title and her eighth overall, Evert could not hold serve until the sixth game of the second set. By then, Navratilova had opened up a 6-2, 5-0 lead.

In that game, Evert saved two match points and a second set whitewash and managed to break Navratilova for 5-2. But the next game produced two more match points and only one was needed as Evert put a cross-court backhand narrowly wide.

Evert now has only two tournaments left, Wimbledon and the U.S.

OSU Has Its Hope

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Oklahoma State pitcher Pat Hope has provided a surprise to College World Series opponents who thought the third-ranked Cowboys were nothing more than heavy hitters.

Hope, 13-2, pitched his second complete game of the NCAA Division I baseball championships Thursday night, struck out 11, walked none and scattered seven hits to down No. 2 Stanford 6-2 in the winners bracket finals.

"I felt strong tonight," Hope said. "I knew what I had to do to win and set up the finals. I had to keep it close and then we'd put a big inning together sometime tonight."

And, a six-run sixth inning proved to be all the offense Oklahoma State needed.

Adam Smith singled home two runs on only the fourth hit allowed by Stanford loser Jack McDowell, 12-5. Benny Castillo singled in the game-winning run after Smith's hit, then Brad Beanblossom hit a triple and scored on Anthony Blackmon's sacrifice fly.

"They got those ground balls up the middle," McDowell said. "I was being a little fine. I was pitching behind the whole game. They do explode, and I needed to shut them down. I didn't do that."

The only Cowboy McDowell and Stanford reliever Al Osuna did shut down was All-American third baseman Robin Ventura. Ventura's NCAA-record 58-game hitting streak was snapped by an 0-for-5 night at the plate. He did reach base in the top of the ninth when his one-hop smash was mishandled by Stanford second baseman Frank Carey.

"It was an error," Ventura said. "I knew right then it wasn't a hit." While the end of Ventura's streak drew a round of applause from 14,408 fans in attendance, Hope deserved the attention for the night, his coach said.

"Pat Hope was outstanding," Gary Ward said. "The thing he does is that he is able to keep the ball around the strikezone and not give up many walks. It's fun to play defense behind him because every time he throws the ball there is a chance for it to be put in play. He had really good command and is fearless as a pitcher."

The victory in the winners bracket final gave Oklahoma State, 59-11 and unbeaten in the World Series, an automatic berth in the championship game either Saturday or Sunday.

Open, to extend her record of winning at least one Grand Slam title every year since 1974.

Clay is her favorite surface but she said: "Maybe this will take the pressure off Wimbledon. In previous years, I've won here and lost there."

Evert said she was beaten "fair and square" but added: "I've had bigger letdowns. Perhaps Martina had more to prove than I did. She was really pumped up."

Evert said she probably made the mistake of going for too many winners.

"That's not the smartest thing to do on clay. She just ran down every ball," Evert said. "She's definitely more eager than I've seen her in a long time."

Saturday's championship match will be worth $180,000 to the winner, but Graf very nearly blew her chance in a rain-interrupted, tense struggle against Sabatini.

The teen-agers split the first two sets and after a lengthy rain delay, it was Sabatini who played the steadier, more aggressive tennis.

Only when she was in danger of losing did Graf turn on the style that has won 38 successive matches and six tournaments.

"I thought I still had a chance to win," Graf said. "I tried to hit harder and take more risks. I think I was a little bit lucky to win that match."

Sabatini said she was both tired and nervous, having come as close as at any time in the past to beating Graf. The West German has won all seven meetings, most in three sets.

"It is not my worst loss but it's one of them," Sabatini said.

Jaguar Qualifiers

Farmville Central's track team qualified seven athletes into the state 2-A track and field championships this year. They include, first row, left to right: Victor Gorham (1600 relay); Kevin Barrett (shot put); Marty Baker (3200 run); Gary Tripp (shot put and discus); second row, Greg Blue (400 relay); Alexander Daniels (relay alternate); Tyrone

Joyner (long jump, triple jump, 1600 relay and 400 relay), and Gary Moore (1600 relay, 400 relay). Not shown is Kenneth Johnson, who qualified in the 1600 relay and 400 relay. Joyner won the state championship in triple jump and was third in the long jump. (Reflector Photo)

Alysheba Prepares For A Sweep In Belmont Stakes

NEW YORK (AP) — Woody Stephens has the "fresh" horse in Gone West. Jack Van Berg handles Alysheba who appears none the worse after winning the Kentucky Derby and Preakness Stakes.

The possibility of a Triple Crown is enough to spark interest in Saturday's 119th Belmont Stakes, which caps the series for 3-year-olds. But the presence of the 73-year-old Stephens, who is bidding for his sixth consecutive Belmont, adds to the intrigue.

If Alysheba wins, and he's the 8-5 morning line favorite over nine rivals to become the first Triple Crown winner since Affirmed in 1978, Van Berg's colt will earn the biggest prize in thoroughbred racing history — $5 million.

Stephens' entry of Gone West and Conquistador is the early third choice at 4-1 behind the LeRoy Metolpe-trained entry of Gulch, the Metropolitan Handicap winner, and Leo Castelli, winner of the Peter Pan Stakes, which is at 5-2.

"It's only because of Woody that the odds (on his entry) are that low," Belmont Park oddsmaker Don LaChance said. Before Stephens' string, the longest Belmont streak was three, set by two trainers before 1900.

Gone West, who didn't go in the Derby and Preakness, has four victories in eight starts this year. He finished second (Peter Pan) and first (Withers) in his last two outings, both at Belmont Park.

Stephens feels Conquistador, a winner only once (Feb. 4 in allowance company) in eight starts this year, is a superior mudder and could be a factor if there is an off track Saturday.

It rained Thursday, but the forecast called for sunny, warm weather today and Saturday.

Stephens said he is impressed by Alysheba.

"I'll bet the exacta (1-2 finishers) both ways with Van Berg's horse after what I saw him do in the Derby," he said. "He (almost) fell down, got up again and still won."

Alysheba has been accomplishing what his sire, Alydar, couldn't. Alydar ran second to Affirmed, separated by a total of about two lengths, in the Triple Crown races, the only horse to be runner-up in each of the three races.

"None of us know if any horse will go a mile and a half," Van Berg said, "and if a trainer tells you he does, he's just blowing smoke."

"We'll find out Saturday about 5:30. There might be some horse in there just waiting for (the distance). He might be hiding in the woodwork."

Alysheba has beaten all his Belmont rivals before, some in both legs of the Triple Crown, except for Gone West and Manassa Jack, a 50-1 outsider shipped in from New England.

There also is the controversial

Lasix factor surrounding the Belmont.

Alysheba ran on the anti-bleeding medication in his past four races, but the drug is not permitted in New York.

Van Berg said the medication was used as a precautionary move after the his colt underwent throat surgery March 24 to correct a breathing problem.

Other main challengers to Alysheba's bid to become the 12th Triple Crown winner in history include Bet Twice, 5-1 and Cryptoclearance, 6-1.

Bet Twice finished second to Alysheba in the Derby, by three quarters of a length, and in the Preakness, by a half-length. The colt's erratic stretch run almost caused Alysheba to fall in the Derby, but he had no problems in the Preakness.

Bet Twice has trained at Monmouth Park in Oceanport, N.J. Plans call for him to arrive at Belmont Park on race day.

Cryptoclearance, the Florida Derby winner, ran third in the Preakness after a fourth in the Derby.

Highwaymen Reunite 25 Years Later

By SUSAN OKULA
Associated Press Writer
MIDDLETOWN, Conn. (AP) — Getting together a banker, a college administrator and the No. 3 man in the U.S. Justice Department for a concert may seem odd, unless they are former members of the Highwaymen, an early-'60s folk group.

Best known for their No. 1 1961 hit "Michael" — which was known popularly as "Michael Row the Boat Ashore" — four of the group's original members plan to perform this weekend at their 25th college reunion.

Robert Burnett, Stephen Trott, David Fisher, Stephen Butts and Chandler Daniels, all 1962 graduates of Wesleyan University, met as fraternity brothers and formed the Highwaymen.

The group, with some personnel changes over the years, made eight albums and appeared on the Ed Sullivan and "Tonight" shows before breaking up in 1964.

"We gave ourselves two years," Butts said. "We didn't want to be singing 'Michael Row the Boat Ashore' in third-rate clubs when we were 50 years old."

"Like we're doing right now," he added with a laugh.

On Thursday, Burnett, Butts, Trott and Fisher, who have not been together since a one-shot performance in 1974, rehearsed in a circle at a campus studio.

"It is real fun and we're really close and we're just having a great time. I don't even want to think about it. In two days it will all be over and we'll probably never see each other as long as we live," said Fisher.

"I feel invigorated by this whole thing. I ran seven miles in the rain this morning," said Burnett, a bank executive in Rhode Island.

Trott is associate U.S. attorney general. Butts, who holds a doctorate in Chinese politics, is an academic planner at the University of Wisconsin at Madison. Fisher is a songwriter and record producer in Los Angeles.

Daniels, who became a record company executive, died in 1975.

The Highwaymen recorded "Michael," a pre-Civil War slavery song, in their sophomore year. In the summer of 1961, "Michael" rose to the top of the pop charts.

The five original members, all honor students, spent most of their weekends during their senior year giving concerts and resisting agents' suggestions that they quit school.

Trott was replaced by Californian Gil Robbins after leaving the group in 1962 to attend Harvard Law School. "A lot of times, people go on too long, and it loses some of the freshness and fun of what it started out with," he said.

Their Friday public concert is sold out, they said. A second concert Saturday is open only to Wesleyan alumni.

They plan to perform mostly old, familiar songs, but Fisher said he has written two new songs, one called "No. 1," that is "about a group that is no longer No. 1."

Bigfoot Comedy Copies Spielberg

By MICHAEL WILMINGTON
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

HOLLYWOOD — "Harry and the Hendersons" is a comic fantasy about a Seattle family taking home an injured bigfoot. In it, we watch the mesmerizing spectacle of a film maker immersing himself so thoroughly in the sensibility of another that he disappears, like a drowning man sinking slowly beneath waves of chocolate. The film maker is director, co-writer, co-producer William Dear, and the ocean in which he is drowning is Steven Spielberg, whose Amblin Entertainment produced "Harry," and whose "E.T." provided the definitive inspiration and form.

Dear's debut feature looks and sounds like a Spielberg movie. It has a Spielberg theme: the beneficence and courage of white suburban America in a fairy-tale nightmare invasion. It has a Spielberg cameraman: Allen Daviau, who also shot "E.T." And it has a Spielberg visual style: Disney filtered through Orson Welles, David Lean and Alfred Hitchcock.

It has Spielberg optimism and a high beautiful Spielberg sheen: Every technical credit is superb. In the movie, Spielberg people drive beneath Spielberg trees; Spielberg animals cock their furry little heads, or their furry big ones, and a Spielberg sun smiles down radiantly from a Spielberg sky upon a warm and lovable, if occasionally deranged, Spielberg town. The very houses seem to cry: "Spiel's in his Berg; all's right with the world!"

More than directors Tobe Hooper, Richard Donner or Barry Levinson, William Dear has gotten his boss' look down pat. But he has not captured Spielberg's fairy-tale acumen, audience sense or flair for archetypes. The lovable bigfoot, as fashioned by Rick Baker and mimed by Kevin Peter Hall, is the movie's major triumph. He is a brutish, beguiling lumberer with expressive eyes and a bewitchingly mobile face.

But is a lovable, victimized bigfoot really a good idea? Shouldn't he be less of a persecuted klutz, more of an occasional Promethean hero?

Harry is a nudnik Noble Savage, pursued through town by a fearful populace, hog-wild and gun-crazy; chased through the backwoods by obsessive entrepreneurs. The idea, as in "E.T.," is to contrast the intolerance of communities and the failures of rationalism and bigotry with the gut wisdom of kids and the generosity of families.

But there are only two primary, very thin, comic plays. One: How do you hide a bigfoot crunching around your home while he decimates your refrigerator, furniture and floors? Two: Aren't suburbanites silly? Dear and his writers belabor the first and belittle the second.

Their saga is more sitcomish than legendary, and there are too many jokes where the Hendersons frantically try to disguise Harry's presence, or where Harry clumps around, idiotically unobserved. The wondrous is often trivialized, and Seattle's mass descent into lynch hysteria has the zapped-up inevitability of a video game.

Along with the production values — and "Harry" himself — John Lithgow, as George Henderson, is the glue that holds everything together. Lithgow is an unusually sensitive actor with a genuine gift for frenzy. Sometimes, his constricted voice and pale, bulging eyes seem ablaze with repressed hysteria.

MGM Will License Its 'Leo' Trademark

CULVER CITY, Calif. (AP) — Leo the Lion, MGM's familiar movie trademark, is coming down off the screen to promote consumer products.

MGMUA said Wednesday it plans to license the use of Leo in much the same way Mickey Mouse, the Pink Panther and other characters appear on everything from lunch boxes to wristwatches and bed sheets.

Leo will be licensed for any "reasonable and respectable" use, said Norman Horowitz, president and chief executive officer of MGMUA's telecommunications unit.

"We're maximizing the use of this enormous asset," he said.

The lion originally was selected as a symbol for Samuel Goldwyn's movie company in 1917. During Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's heyday, its movies opened with film of a roaring lion.

The current version — a lion's head in a circle of film with a laughing mask and laurel wreaths underneath — was designed about 1924 by artist Morris Rosenbaum.

MGM subsequently registered it as a trademark, along with the soundtrack of Leo's roar.

Extra Sues Sean Penn

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Tough-guy actor Sean Penn has been hit with a lawsuit by a movie extra who claims the actor cursed and pummeled him during filming of the film "Colors," in which Penn plays a police officer.

Jeffrey Klein, 32, filed the suit Wednesday in Los Angeles County Superior Court. He said the 26-year-old actor assaulted him during a break in filming April 2 after Klein photographed Penn and co-star Robert Duvall.

Penn already faces a hearing June 23 in connection with the incident for allegedly violating terms of probation imposed after he pleaded no contest in February to a misdemeanor battery charge from a scuffle at a nightclub.

The actor also is being sued in connection with that scuffle.

In addition, he was booked for investigation of drunken driving on May 25.

Penn has starred in such movies as "The Falcon and the Snowman," "At Close Range," "Bad Boys," "Racing With the Moon" and "Fast Times at Ridgemont High." In "Colors," he portrays a detective fighting gangs.

But Sa'ad El-Amin, attorney for the man who says emotional distress inflicted by Miss Lynn made him an impotent alcoholic, said dismissal of his client's $2 million lawsuit "gives entertainers carte blanche to humiliate" people who work near them.

The contrasting positions were argued before a three-judge panel of the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

'Nightline' Sets 4-Hour AIDS Show

NEW YORK (AP) — ABC's "Nightline" moves further to the forefront of network news tonight with its unprecedented 4-hour program devoted to the complex and frightening subject of AIDS.

"Nightline: A National Town Meeting on AIDS" will be anchored by Ted Koppel from Los Angeles and air at 11:30 p.m. EDT, live, before a participating audience. Experts on the subject will be quizzed via hook-ups to ABC affiliates across the country.

The show will also hook up to radio call-in shows across the country, and television viewers will be able to question the experts themselves by calling a toll-free number.

"The alarming spread of AIDS creates a mandate for news organizations everywhere to provide and clarify the latest information available," ABC News President Roone Arledge said in a statement. "ABC News 'Nightline's' coverage will be the most comprehensive to date on network television."

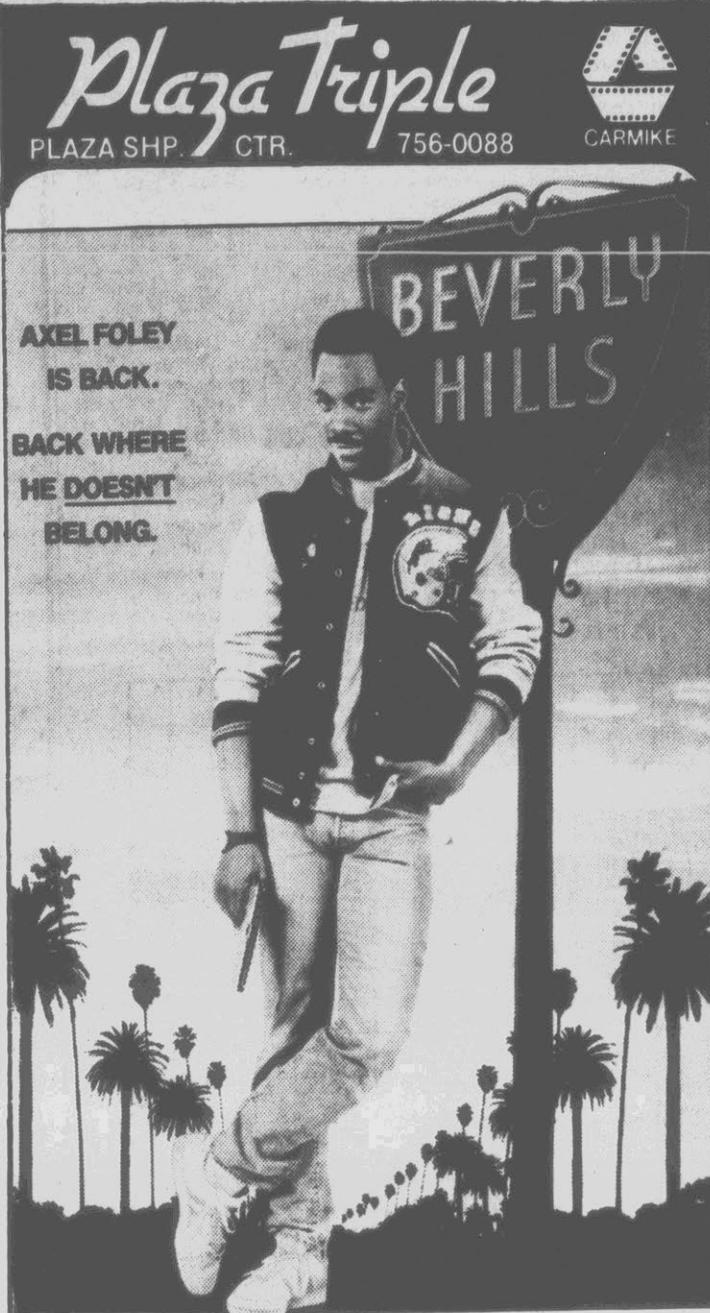

The show follows a national AIDS conference in Washington, that included President Reagan's controversial call for mandatory AIDS testing of federal prisoners and immigrants and "routine" testing of others.

That topic will be covered on "Nightline," as well as most current treatments of AIDS patients, problems facing health-care workers, mandatory testing and the complications of dating in the AIDS age.

AIDS is a virus that attacks the body's immune system, leaving it open to other infectious diseases. There is no cure. It is spread primarily through sexual contact and drug abusers' sharing of needles. As of June 1, it had struck 36,058 Americans, killing 20,849 of them, according to the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta.

'Color Of Money' Top Rental

L.A. Times-Washington Post
HOLLYWOOD — Touchstone's "The Color of Money" is currently America's most popular rental. And while Paul Newman's Oscar-winning performance as pool shark Fast Eddie Felson is one of its attractions, Newman fans know this is not his best performance.

The word in Hollywood was that he did not win the Academy Award — his first for an individual performance — for this film but for all those other great performances, most of which are available on videocassette. Here are some samples:

Newman nearly won an Oscar for CBS-Fox's "The Verdict," playing an alcoholic lawyer who resurrects his life and career through a medical negligence case. In this gritty, expansive role, he gives his finest performance since the '60s. The 1982 courtroom drama was directed by Sidney Lumet.

Newman was also good in RCA-Columbia's "Absence of Malice," an engrossing, 1981 probe of journalistic ethics, but that role was not one of his meatier ones. As the reporter who writes the questionable story about his activities, Sally Field overshadows him.

Most Newman fans contend that he did his best work in the '60s.

A Day In The Life

In a single day, Americans watch a total of about 630 million hours of television, but they still find time to make 998,178,710 local phone calls. They smoke more than 1.3 billion cigarettes each day, guzzle almost 16 million gallons of beer, and eat 75 acres of pizza. Americans read 67 million newspapers while drinking some of the 348 million cups of coffee they consume daily. It's no wonder we generate more than 602,700 tons of garbage per day.

DO YOU KNOW — How many millions are in a trillion?

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY June 6

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Today can be full of arguments and confrontations with others unless you make a conscientious effort to sidestep them and maintain harmony.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Use tact at your home during the daytime and avoid a possible argument there. Get out for fun and recreation tonight.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Be more careful in motion of all kinds since much danger is lurking about. Thoughtless words could bring trouble.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): You could have quite an argument over finances with good friends, but tonight all is well.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Do nothing that will disturb the harmony between you and kin today.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): Be careful not to argue with a partner if you have a private worry. Do whatever will rid you of the anxiety.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): It is better to go out alone and not be with individuals who may be looking to pick a fight.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Don't get into an argument with another in public. The evening is good for making new friends.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): After an argument with a pal, be concerned with the romantic side of life. Show your gratitude to those who are loyal.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Try not to argue over some monetary affair that may be of little consequence.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Avoid a possible argument between a higher-up and a partner. Plan your time well so you can keep promises.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): A co-worker and one from afar may be having an argument, so keep out of it or you could become the scapegoat.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): You had better stay at home with your mate and avoid an argument with one who wants to come between you.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he, or she, will be one of those charming young persons who will find it hard to decide between the mental and emotional, so teach this one to keep the two separate. Upon reaching maturity your progeny will gain the good will of others and be quite successful.

Opening lead: Jack of ♥ Every spotcard could play an important role in your overall campaign. It is not easy to find the extra chance on this deal, even looking at all four hands.

Your final contract of three no trump is impeccable. We like your decision to rebid one no trump rather than two clubs, since it might be important to protect the queen of hearts from being led through.

Were it not for the unfortunate duplication in hearts, which gives you but two tricks from the top three honors, the contract would have been too easy for words. After a heart lead, you now have only eight fast tricks, and you do not have the time to develop a trick in diamonds—the defenders will get at least three heart tricks and two diamonds first.

It might seem that the only chance for your ninth trick is a spade finesse, but if you simply lead a spade to the jack, you will go down as the cards lie. You will not have made best use of those spot-cards in spades.

A superior line is to win the opening lead in hand with the queen and lead the nine of spades. If West plays low, run it, and you will make your contract if West started with either the queen or ten of spades, since you intend repeating the finesse if the nine loses to the ten.

With his actual holding, West should cover the nine. You finesse the jack, East wins the queen and reverts to a heart knocking out your last stopper in the suit. You have one more shot—a finesse for the eight of spades. You lead a spade to the seven and, when that holds, you have your ninth trick. Your fine play has given you two finesses in spades instead of one—considerably better odds than the straight finesse.

Test Scores
RALEIGH (AP) — Scores by North Carolina public high school students on competency tests this year were higher in the writing categories, lower in mathematics and about the same in reading compared with their counterparts' scores last year, according to a report released Wednesday.

More than 97,000 sophomores, juniors and seniors in the state's public schools took the competency test in February, designed to ensure that high school graduates meet minimum levels of achievement. Diplomas are denied to those who do not pass the competency test after several tries — generally about 1 percent of the state's high school students.

McLeod Dies
LUMBERTON (AP) — Malcolm McLeod, Robeson County's sheriff for 28 years until his retirement in 1978, has died after suffering an apparent heart attack while at a dinner meeting. He was 73.

McLeod was at the Rowland Gun Club when the attack occurred Wednesday. He was taken to Southeastern General Hospital in Lumberton where he was pronounced dead.

Los Angeles Police Stage Sweep Through Area Used By Homeless

By JEFF WILSON
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Hundreds of homeless people abandoned their makeshift shelters as a line of about 40 police officers swept through Skid Row, tossing belongings into the street and threatening to arrest those who refused to move.

"I should have done something about this a long time ago," said Police Chief Daryl Gates who initiated the crackdown Thursday in a downtown area of about 50 blocks. The number of homeless there had been estimated at 1,000.

Chanting "Shame, shame, shame, the world's watching," homeless activist Ted Hayes berated the police show of force.

Only one arrest was reported during the sweep, police Sgt. Joe Van Huss said early today. He had no details on the reason for the arrest.

Those living illegally on Skid Row sidewalks had been warned all week they were subject to arrest starting Thursday if they refused to leave.

Legal Aid lawyers had unsuccessfully sought to halt the sweep, but city officials had satisfied the court by assuring that officers would hand out vouchers good for four days' lodging in welfare hotels.

By the time police moved in at 7 p.m., some transients had already left. Wooden pallets used for construction of sidewalk shanties were upended and tossed into the street, along with discarded mattresses, barbecues and worn-out furniture.

Gates said police had received repeated complaints about homeless people disrupting business in the Skid Row area, which includes wholesale fish and produce operations, stores and warehouses.

Retirees Face Loss Of Money

MIAMI (AP) — A broker who could "charm your shoes off" took in more than $61 million in investments, mostly from retirees who thought they had found a high-yield, tax-free shelter and now fear their life savings may be wiped out.

Investigators believe at least half of the money invested is gone.

"It's a sore subject," Howard Heathman, 81, of Naples, said by telephone Thursday. "We are not wealthy people and we turned over, I would say, 80 percent of our life savings to him."

Heathman, his wife and some 1,400 other customers of broker Charles Phillip Elliott await the outcome of a federally appointed receiver's efforts to liquidate Elliott's assets and recover at least some of their money from holdings that range from stocks and bonds to luxury automobiles and homes in Jamaica and North Carolina.

Elliott, who recently consented to a permanent injunction barring him from violating federal securities laws, maintains he never meant to bilk anyone.

"I'm not sure that apart from market forces and unwise investments that he has an explanation for what happened," said his attorney, David Pollack. "I think (it was) just a series of investments that didn't work out the way he thought they would."

Elliott told The Wall Street Journal in a story published Thursday: "If this investigation had not ensued, I honestly think no investor would ever have lost a dime."

Gates said the area's high crime rate also prompted the crackdown on transients violating ordinances against sleeping and amassing belongings on sidewalks.

About 100 street people stood in small groups as police approached, but many more had already left, fearing they would be jailed.

"I don't want to go to the 'Gates Motel,'" transient Al Smith said, stuffing clothes into a plastic bag.

Mayor Tom Bradley promised police would not make arrests when beds and shelter were not available, and the city attorney declared he would not prosecute those arrested because the city had insufficient shelters.

One man was eager to collect a voucher. "Maybe it will give me time to get my thoughts together," said Thomas Shannon, 25, of Memphis, Tenn. "I don't want to go back to the streets."

But Hayes said hotels being offered by the city were unsuitable. "They're dangerous. There is filth, drugs and vermin," he said, adding that jail also was an unacceptable alternative because it is crowded and dangerous.

The mayor and City Council have been working to open up a 14-block area as an urban campground for the homeless, and Hayes said police should "back off until the encampment is ready."

A supporter of the police sweep argued earlier Thursday that the transients had to be removed.

"They are bums — winos and bums who won't work," said Joe Greco, manager of a wholesale liquor store. "It looks like a concentration camp. They have to do these sweeps. These people steal, and it's a supermarket for dope down here."

A sign posted in front of Greco's business declared: "Feel sorry for the homeless?? Adopt one! Take one home with you to day. Let them use your yard for a bathroom."

The Community Redevelopment Agency has said about 1,000 people live on Skid Row streets. A 1984 federal estimate said there were 30,000 homeless in the 50-block area.
