Reagan To Ease Japan Sanctions

VENICE, Italy (AP) — President Reagan, in a gesture of harmony at the opening of the annual seven-nation economic summit, today announced he will partially lift U.S. sanctions on Japanese electronics goods.

Reagan said he would remove 17 percent, or $51 million, of the $300 million in penalty tariffs he imposed April 17 on Japanese computers, television sets and power tools.

The president said in a statement that the reduction of the duties is in response to some improvements made by Japan in complying with a 1986 semiconductor pricing agreement.

"As we open this economic summit, one of our primary concerns must be the removal of barriers that seek to maintain trade imbalances and lead to protectionism," Reagan said in a statement announcing the move.

The goodwill gesture came as allied leaders gathered amid extraordinary security for the start of summit talks already dominated by danger in the Persian Gulf.

Reagan's announcement on the sanctions followed a face-to-face meeting with Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone.

While agreeing to lift some of the sanctions, the president said in his statement that, "unfortunately, the initial review of the data relating to the semiconductor is not sufficient for me to remove the full range of sanctions which were imposed."

The tariffs were imposed to retaliate against alleged Japanese violations of a 1986 agreement on semiconductor, or computer chip, pricing. The United States contended that Japan had refused to stop selling computer chips in foreign markets at prices far below their true value, or to give U.S. chip makers more access to Japanese markets.

Reagan said his order to ease the sanctions was based on improvement by Japan on just one type of memory microchip, the so-called D-RAM chip, a relatively unsophisticated chip used in many modern computers and electronic devices.

The president said Japan had raised the prices of these chips in overseas market from 59 percent of their market value when the tariffs were imposed, to about 89 percent.

Reagan said that his action "is strictly proportional to progress to date."

Key congressional leaders of both parties had urged Reagan to leave the sanctions in place. "I am aware of congressional concern," Reagan's statement said.

Secure Embassy Will Be Costly

By MARK J. PORUBCANSKY

Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — A presidential troubleshooter said today it will take at least 2½ years and tens of millions of dollars to secure the new U.S. Embassy against Soviet spying devices.

James Schlesinger spoke to reporters at the new embassy at the end of a 10-day visit to inspect the facility. He will report to Secretary of State George P. Shultz later this month.

The embassy chancery, built with Soviet precast concrete, is riddled with sophisticated bugging devices that were not detected in initial X-ray inspections by U.S. officials, Schlesinger said.

He said in retrospect it had been a mistake to allow the Soviets to use precast concrete. At the time, he said, U.S. officials did not believe the Soviets could employ technology sophisticated enough to evade detection by X-rays.

Schlesinger said he stressed in meetings with senior Soviet officials that the bugging is a serious obstacle to improving relations with the United States and that revisions are needed in a 1972 agreement allowing both countries to construct new embassies.

He said the Soviets understand they will not be allowed to occupy their new facility in Washington until the United States moves into its new

Seal Hunt Proposed

VICTORIA, British Columbia (AP) — Up to 6,000 harbor seals could be slaughtered under a proposal by provincial government officials to reduce the sea mammal's population explosion.

Premier Bill Vander Zalm, however, promised that environmentalist concerns will be considered before any animals are killed.

Environment Minister Bruce Strachan has said he is convinced that thousands of adult harbor seals will have to be destroyed.

"I believe we will be forced to address a method of culling the herds where they are injurious to fisheries stocks," Strachan said. "Where they are not a problem they will be left alone."

Federal fisheries officials estimate that the province's seal population has jumped from 4,000 in 1970 to as many as 60,000 last year, and is climbing by at least 10 percent annually.

The seals compete with fishermen for salmon and herring; fisheries officials estimate the mammals eat $75.4 million worth of salmon and herring each year.

Vander Zalm, when told Saturday that as many as 6,000 seals could be slaughtered in a coastal hunt, said no hunt will occur until there has been a full report "from all concerned parties."

It's imperative that environmentalists be involved in the decision, he added.

Lawyer Defends Exempt Opinion

By JIM DRINKARD

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Reagan administration lawyer, testifying at the Iran-Contra hearings, today defended his 1985 legal opinion declaring that the National Security Council was exempt from a ban on aid to the Nicaraguan rebels because it is not an intelligence agency.

"I think that was a fair conclusion then and I think it is a fair conclusion now," Bretton Sciaroni said of the opinion he wrote in 1985 in his capacity as legal counsel to the president's Intelligence Oversight Board.

But Sciaroni also conceded that he was never informed of wide-ranging, secret activities in support of the Contras by Lt. Col. Oliver North, then an aide on the National Security Council. Asked whether covert support for the war in Nicaragua was an intelligence activity, Sciaroni replied tersely, "That would seem to follow."

Earlier testimony has indicated that North and others in his private Contra aid network relied on this legal opinion to justify their actions during the two-year ban voted by Congress.

But Sciaroni said that as far as he knew his classified legal opinion was never shown to Congress. And House majority counsel John Nields introduced a copy of a legal opinion by a Republican staff attorney on the House Intelligence Committee — found in North's files — that flatly contradicted Sciaroni's opinion. It said NSC was covered by the ban.

Sciaroni said he undertook his legal research after questions were raised in the press and elsewhere about activities on behalf of the Contras by North. Sciaroni said he concluded that North's activities "as portrayed to me, did not constitute a violation" of the ban "even if it applied to the NSC staff."

Sciaroni said that at the time he wrote the opinion, he was not aware of some documents regarding North's involvement in the Contra effort that are now in the possession of congressional investigators. He said he was not told that the NSC was involved in an operational intelligence activity.

But the documents would not have changed his basic legal opinion, he said.

The documents included North's "Fallback Plan for the Nicaraguan

Missile Threat Lead Topic As Summit Starts

By TERENCE HUNT

AP White House Correspondent

VENICE, Italy (AP) — Allied leaders gathered amid extraordinary security today for the start of summit talks already dominated by danger in the Persian Gulf, and President Reagan said U.S. warnings to Iran were not a bluff but "a statement of fact."

"I haven't bluffed once since I've been here," said Reagan, questioned briefly by reporters as he left the country villa where he has stayed for five nights before moving into Venice for the summit in this lagoon city.

Reagan refused to say what he would do if the Iranians deploy anti-ship missiles in the Persian Gulf that could threaten oil tankers. Administration officials earlier had urged Iran not to "run the risk of retaliation" by deploying the weapons, known as Silkworm missiles.

When a reporter suggested that warnings voiced by his key aides here had amounted to a threat against Tehran, the president said, "No. It's just a statement of fact."

The Iranian navy said it would attack any military bases established in the gulf by the United States, the official Islamic Republic News Agency said today.

The agency, monitored in Nicosia, Cyprus, quoted the naval command headquarters in Tehran as saying that any use by U.S. forces of bases in the gulf would be a violation of the interests of Iran.

Teen Is Killed At Theme Park

By PAUL NOWELL

Associated Press Writer

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Witnesses watched in horror as a 16-year-old girl slumped off her raft into the bloodied waters of a theme park wave pool after being shot and killed with what police think might have been a stray bullet from someone target shooting.

"It was like she was floating dead," said 13-year-old Bryant Artis. "Nobody knew what was going on."

Barbara Barnette, a spokeswoman at Charlotte Memorial Hospital, identified the victim as Michelle Ann Sexton of Rock Hill, S.C., which is 12 miles from Carowinds theme park. She suffered a gunshot wound to the back which exited through her chest.

Mecklenburg County police had no suspects Sunday night, no witnesses who heard the shots and no idea where they came from.

Another shot wounded a 6-year-old playing 60 feet away in shallow water, authorities said.

The second victim was identified as Ahesha Rollins of Charlotte. She underwent surgery Sunday afternoon for a gunshot wound to the abdomen and was listed in serious but stable condition in the hospital's pediatric intensive care unit early this morning, according to hospital spokeswoman.

Laura Brown, 37, of Kernersville told The Charlotte Observer that Ms. Sexton was on a raft in the middle of the wave pool and Ahesha Rollins was in the shallow end, about 60 feet apart. The swimmers were noisy, Ms. Brown said, and the "White Lightning" roller coaster ride thundered by in the background.

Ms. Brown and other witnesses said they heard no shots.

"We heard a little girl screaming,"

Court Rejects Acid Rain Rules

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today refused to force the Reagan administration to adopt rules for reducing acid rain pollution.

The court, without comment, rejected appeals by eight northeastern states, a Canadian province and environmental groups seeking to bind the government to a pollution-control commitment made by the former Carter administration.

The dispute stemmed from a Jan. 13, 1981, letter by Douglas M. Costle, then the administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, in the waning days of the Carter administration.

Costle wrote to then-Secretary of State Edmund S. Muskie that acid rain, or acid deposition as it is also called, "is endangering public welfare in the U.S. and Canada."

The question that arose was whether Costle's letter amounted to formal action that bound future administrations under the 1977 Clean Air Act to identify states where pollution occurs and to take steps to reduce it.

Costle based his conclusion about acid rain's dangers on a report by the International Joint Commission, which has U.S. and Canadian representatives and advises both nations on matters affecting the Great Lakes.

When the Reagan administration took office, it refused to act on Costle's recommendation. EPA officials say they are awaiting the outcome of additional research on the causes and effects of acid rain.

The current administration was sued by environmental groups, the province of Ontario, eight states and others seeking to force federal action.

The states are New York, Maine, Massachusetts, Vermont, New Jersey, Rhode Island, Connecticut and New Hampshire.

Lawyers for the states said acid rain is a dire threat to "the health of fisheries, forests and human populations in large areas of eastern Canada and the northeastern United States."

Acid rain, they added, is being generated by huge quantities of sulfur dioxide and nitrogen oxide from electric power plants and smokestacks.

Ontario officials said a crackdown on the pollution that causes acid rain "could have an enormous beneficial impact on environmental quality in eastern North America."

But the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals here ruled last September that Costle's 1981 letter does not bind the Reagan administration to act.

The appeals court said the letter lacks the force of law because the Carter administration did not follow the necessary procedural steps for adopting federal regulations. Such rules must be published in the Federal Register and the public must have an opportunity to comment, the appeals court said in an opinion by Antonin Scalia.

Stiff Sentences

Two men — Hatem Mahmoud Hamad, 30, of Miami and Donald Clay Wells, 33, of Tarboro — were given stiff sentences Friday after a Pitt County Superior Court jury found them guilty of trafficking in cocaine and conspiracy to traffic in cocaine.

Judge Thomas Watts sentenced Hamad to a total of 34 years in jail — 20 years for trafficking in cocaine and 14 years for conspiracy to traffic — and ordered him to pay a $200,000 fine. Wells was given 28 years in jail and ordered to pay $300,000 in fines for his convictions.

State Bureau of Investigation agents, assisted by Greenville police, arrested the two in a Greenville Boulevard grocery store parking lot on Oct. 3, 1986.

Some 394 grams of cocaine, with an estimated wholesale value of $20,000 was confiscated at the time the two were taken into custody.

The arrests resulted from an SBI undercover investigation.

Books Distributed

As part of a nationwide anti-drug campaign being waged by the Boy Scouts of America, thousands of booklets entitled "Drugs: A Deadly Game" are being distributed to youth members of the East Carolina Council, BSA, headquartered in Kinston.

Council Scout Executive John Bush said the material is designed to reach all youth from 7 to 20, urging them to "say no" to drugs, and to encourage their peers to do likewise.

A 16-minute video tape is available to Scout leaders and others who are being encouraged to support the program through anti-drug sessions in Cub Scout Packs, Boy Scout Troops and Explorer Posts. In addition to the 18-page booklet and the video, a teacher's guide is also available, as the Scouting organization seeks to encourage the program's use in schools, churches and synagogues, drug rehabilitation centers, and among other youth agencies.

Bush said the local scout council had received 10,000 booklets for free distribution to youth members in the twenty counties of Eastern North Carolina served by the East Carolina Council.

New Organ Distribution System Offers Hope

By MARCIA DUNN
Associated Press Writer

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Transplant patients and their families, frightened and confused in the increasingly competitive field of organ donation, are hoping a new scoring system for distributing organs will provide justice for all.

"I keep asking, 'Where am I? When am I going to be next?'" said Mary Ann Randazzo, 56, who has been waiting since April to undergo a heart transplant at the University of California-Los Angeles Medical Center.

The new standardized scoring system "will relieve the tension. You do become frightened when you leave that hospital and you don't have your heart yet," Mrs. Randazzo said from her home in Cypress, Calif.

"It's terrifying," agreed Edna Howell, 44, of Westfield, N.J., whose 2-year-old daughter, Jadwiga, received a new liver Saturday at Children's Hospital here. The child had been on a waiting list since February.

More than 9,000 people are awaiting kidney transplants in the United States. More than 300 need new hearts, another 300 livers.

The United Network for Organ Sharing approved mandatory sharing and distribution policies two weeks ago during the annual meeting of transplant surgeons and physicians in Chicago.

Factors taken into consideration will be medical urgency, time on the waiting list and proximity to the donor.

The system "will take away that fear that one is considered more than another" because of media or White House attention, said Mary Shannon, president of the Pittsburgh Liver Support Group. Her daughter, Katie, now 9, underwent a liver transplant in 1982.

Beginning Oct. 1, about 200 transplant centers nationwide will be forced along with organ procurement agencies and transplant tissue-typing laboratories to participate in the national Organ Procurement and Transplantation Network or risk losing federal Medicare reimbursements.

Network members will have to share kidneys considered near-perfect matches, which comprise fewer than 5 percent of all donated kidneys, and follow a standardized point system for distributing other organs.

Pittsburgh's scoring system, in place for more than a year, was the prototype for the national system. Although most transplant centers take such criteria into account when distributing organs, Pittsburgh is believed to be the only place that actually attaches points for priority.

The computerized network, established last fall under a federal contract awarded to the Virginia-based UNOS, was recommended last year by the National Task Force on Organ Transplantation, formed under the 1984 National Transplant Act.

Frank Rowe, 37, of Philadelphia, who's been waiting in Pittsburgh for a heart-lungs transplant for 2½ years, favors such a system although he realizes he could lose out.

"Transplantation is a world of paradoxes," he said. "A new system is going to assure that the organs go to the sickest patients. (But) it could take away an opportunity for me."

"It's worth a try," agreed Jose Gonsalves, 28, of New Bedford, Mass. His 7-week-old daughter, Falcia, has been waiting for a liver transplant since May 22. A son, Eric, died of liver failure in 1984, 43 days after he was born.

"This waiting is killing me," Gonsalves said Friday outside the intensive care unit of Children's Hospital.

The new system "sets the stage for a very objective way of allocating a scarce resource," said John Newmann, 45, a health policy analyst in Washington, D.C., who needs a kidney transplant. "It's a good beginning."

Congress Eyes Traveler Protection

By ALAN FRAM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Many members of Congress are itching to pass legislation that would protect air travelers against poor service, and a recent squabble at Washington's National Airport didn't help the airline industry.

About a dozen passengers were bumped from a flight to Louisville, Ky., at the last minute. While a ticket agent began calculating how new connections could be made, one passenger began shouting that he wouldn't have lost his seat if he were a senator.

"I walked over to him and introduced myself," another of the displaced fliers, Sen. Wendell Ford, D-Ky., recalled last week.

The nation's airlines can ill afford to alienate any member of Congress these days. In recent months, legislators' calls for laws to pressure the carriers to improve their service have been exceeded in volume only by their complaints about late and canceled flights, lost baggage and misleading advertising.

The House aviation subcommittee holds two days of hearings this week on proposals aimed at forcing better service by the nation's air carriers. A week later, the Senate aviation subcommittee — chaired by Ford — begins writing legislation to do the same thing.

Some airlines acknowledge that a problem exists and concede that some government action will be taken. They are focusing their efforts on ensuring that whatever is done is reasonable.

Confusion arose Thursday when the Department of Transportation said it was considering new disclosure regulations for the airlines. Some lawmakers said that would not be enough, while others said it might be wise to see what rules the department imposes before new laws are passed.

But support for some sort of legislative action runs deep, stretching across party and even philosophical lines.

"I'm a conservative, pro-business guy," said Rep. Bud Shuster, R-Pa., who wants to penalize airlines with poor on-time and baggage-handling records. "It's not like I'm some crazy left-wing liberal."

The more liberal Sen. Frank Lautenberg, D-N.J., who wants to require the carriers to submit quarterly on-time reports to the government, said "airlines need to know there's somebody watching over their shoulder and looking out for the consumer."

The rising decibel level of congressional displeasure matches the public's mood. The Department of Transportation says it received 2,816 complaints about airline service last month, up from 952 in May 1986.

Lawmakers who fly back to their districts frequently don't have to rely on their constituents to know there are problems.

Boating Week

Greenville mayor Les Garner has proclaimed Sunday through Saturday to be National Safe Boating Week in the city of Greenville. This is in conjunction with the national proclamation made by President Reagan.

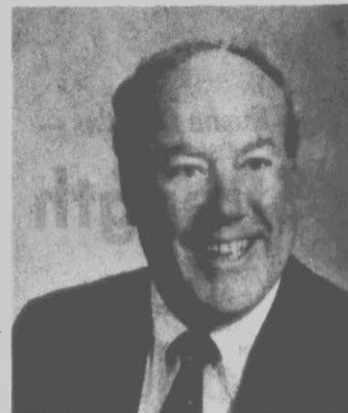

The proclamation cites the increased number of recreational boaters and the number of boating accidents every year as reasons to raise the safety consciousness of the boating public.

Liability

The role of physicians in medical liability lawsuits will be discussed Wednesday during a presentation, "Courtrooms Are For Lawyers, Not Physicians," sponsored by the department of family medicine at the East Carolina University School of Medicine.

The talk to be presented by Dr. Richard Inskip, immediate past president of the American Academy of Family Physicians, will begin at 12:30 p.m. in the auditorium at Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Inskip, also a private practice family physician in Reno, Nev., has done extensive study on issues relating to medical liability and will discuss several situations in which a physician can become medically liable. He will also discuss minimizing medical liability among physicians.

Public Meeting

The North Carolina Hazardous Waste Treatment Commission will have a regional public meeting for citizens in Edgecombe, Johnston, Nash, Northampton, Pitt and Wilson counties June 18 at 7 p.m. in Tarboro.

The meeting, to be held in the auditorium of Edgecombe Technical College, is to provide information to citizens on the commission's work toward selecting a site for a comprehensive hazardous waste treatment facility.

The commission is considering 55 sites in 25 counties as possibly suitable for the facility, which would include an incinerator and a chemical treatment plant. It would not include nuclear wastes, PCBs or a landfill.

Other regional public meetings scheduled are in South View Senior High School in Hope Mills, June 23; Northwood High School in Pittsboro, June 25; and Mooresville Senior High School in Mooresville, June 30. For more information, call Kathy Neal at 733-5420.

The national unemployment rate, seasonally adjusted, remained unchanged at 6.3 percent for May.

The U.S. Department of Labor figures for May show North Carolina's labor force at 3,240,000 with 3,101,000 employed and 139,000 unemployed. In April, these figures were 3,267,000, 3,112,000 and 155,000 respectively.

where it will be available to any one wishing to sign it until June 17.

Anyone having questions may call Ms. Elks at 752-2439 or 757-6387.

Census Study

Census Bureau representatives will visit area residents June 15-20 to collect data on employment and unemployment, according to William Hill, director of the bureau's Charlotte office. Interviewers also will collect data on fertility and birth expectations.

The labor force data will contribute to June's national labor force figures to be released July 2 by the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

4-H Camp

A camp to give children ages 10 to 16 an opportunity to learn more about electricity and technology will be held at Betsy-Jeff Penn 4-H Center near Reidsville July 26-31.

Topics to be discussed include electric experiments, new cooking techniques, conserving energy, new energy sources and the mysteries of lighting. Recreational activities include swimming, dancing, canoeing, archery and crafts.

Tax Effective

The Pitt County Commissioners have formally approved a 3 percent tax on hotel and motel room rentals in the county.

The levy will be effective July 1 and the proceeds will go to promote travel and tourism. The commissioners established a Pitt-Greenville Convention and Visitors Authority.

Ed Walker, president of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce, said there are now 1,328 taxable rooms in the county. He said there are 3,900 people employed in the hospitality industry in the county.

Statewide travel and hospitality is the no. three industry with $4.6 billion spent each year in the state for travel and entertainment.

The convention and visitors authority will be governed by an 11-person board.

With no natural attractions such as beaches or mountains, Pitt County does not think of itself as a tourist mecca. But travel and hospitality includes meetings, conventions and other gatherings and Pitt is ideally situated to attract these.

It already does, in fact, and N.C. Division of Travel and Tourism, N.C. Travel Survey, figures shows Pitt County ranked 21st in the state in travel spending with a total of $45,256,000 annually. Travel employment as a percent of private sector employment is 13.38.

Mecklenburg was first with $804,571,000 annual spending, Wake second at $500,049,000, Guilford third at $408,466,000. The Outer Banks resort county of Dare was fourth with total spending of $348,051,000.

The figures tell us that Pitt County is doing well in attracting travel dollars. We can do much more. With adequate promotion, which we should now be able to develop travel spending can grow amazingly in Pitt County.

Careers Crashed

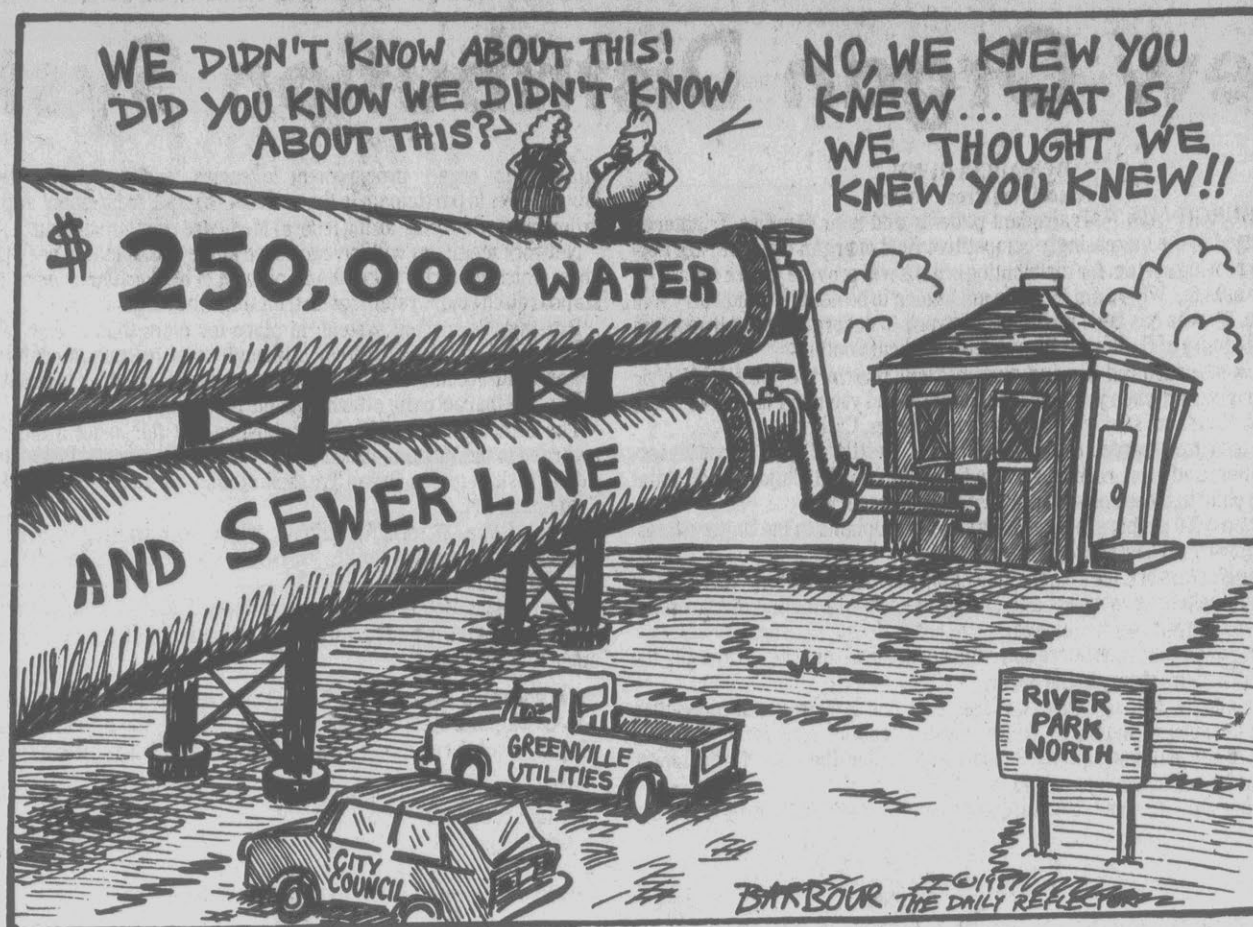

Military careers of two high-ranking officials in the Soviet Union crashed recently because their respective commands allowed a small foreign and private aircraft enter Soviet airspace and fly unmolested to Moscow's Red Square.

The defense minister and the chief of air defenses were removed from their posts for failing to stop the intruder. It was inexcusable in eyes of the Politburo. After all, their prime role in life was to assure no one violated Soviet air space. There could be no exceptions to that order.

The teenaged German pilot crossed 420 miles of what our Pentagon people call the world's most extensive air defense system. We're told radar detected the small craft approaching the USSR border but nothing was done about it. Soviet interceptors were said to have twice flown around the Cessna but did not shoot it down.

Even from here one can imagine the confusion and bewilderment among the jet pilots who responded to the alert. One might have remarked "We've been ordered up to defend our country from a young man flying a slow, unarmed recreational aircraft? Somebody is pulling our legs, Comrade." Too, memories of global criticism when a Korean airliner was shot down a few years ago by trigger-happy defenders may have surfaced.

It was no joke inside the Kremlin.

Kuwaiti Appeal Confuses Arab Efforts

KUWAIT — Kuwait's bold decision to involve Moscow and Washington in protecting its oil tankers from Iranian attack has thrown into confusion years of efforts to create a viable joint defense pact among the Arab oil states of the Persian Gulf.

The Kuwaiti plan — which has been denounced by Iran, secretly encouraged by Iraq, heatedly debated in the United States and intentionally ignored by western Europe — has now also caused a lot of embarrassment to the six-year-old Gulf Cooperation Council.

Arab and Western diplomats and analysts expect little to emerge from a meeting in Jeddah, Saudi Arabia, on Saturday of the foreign ministers of the council member states of Bahrain, Kuwait, Oman, Qatar, Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates.

One council ruler privately vented his anger by denouncing Kuwait as "a vulnerable little country which insists on acting as if it was a big power." He said Kuwait was endangering them all by involving the superpowers in a long shot gamble to end the nearly seven-year-old Iran-Iraq war.

At the heart of the council's disarray is the tacit understanding that despite a decade-long accumulation of more than $25 billion in sophisticated weapons, its members still feel too weak and divided to provide for their own defense or to let outside powers help out.

For Washington, that knowledge also reinforces apprehensions of those who see the dangers of the United States defying on its own — or in unwanted tandem with Moscow — an unpredictable Iran in the narrow confines of the gulf.

Ever since the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan in 1979 prompted the Carter administration's concern about Moscow's designs on the gulf, Kuwait had been the most outspoken Arab gulf country in opposing overt military cooperation with the United States.

Contributing to this record was Kuwait's dedication to "positive neutrality" in its relations with the superpowers, its pioneering regional role in establishing diplomatic relations with Moscow in 1963 and its refusal to accept an American ambassador-designate on grounds he had served as consul general in the Israeli-occupied West Bank.

When a reluctant Reagan administration agreed in principle to protect Kuwait's tanker fleet by registering 11 ships under the American flag, it acted largely to prevent the Soviets from doing likewise, an alternative that was seen as allowing the Soviets a major and unopposed entry into the long Western-dominated gulf and its seemingly limitless oil reserves.

But the other gulf council members — made wary by what they see as U.S. blunders ranging from the fall of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi in Iran to the deployment of Marines to Lebanon, increasing identification with Israel and clandestine arms sales to Tehran — found reasons not to seize on Kuwait's major change of heart toward Washington, barely disguised as a new form of "balance" with Moscow.

U.S. credibility, as viewed from the gulf, is simply too suspect to risk openly defying Tehran and its Shiite Moslem revolutionary zeal for the Sunni-run gulf council governments. These governments know most of their oil is found in areas with large Shiite minorities not immune to Tehran's call for subversion.

As in the past, the gulf council prefers U.S. military muscle to be the "over the horizon" kind, which means out of sight and stationed mainly on Diego Garcia island in the middle of the Indian Ocean.

The need for land-based aircraft to protect American warships and U.S. commercial shipping was voiced immediately after Iraq's air attack May 17 on the USS Stark. Providing air cover from U.S. aircraft carriers, which for safety's sake must be stationed outside the gulf, is considered by military specialists as a make-shift solution.

Nonetheless, Adm. William J. Crowe Jr., chairman of the joint chiefs of staff, recently went on record as saying no air cover was needed to protect U.S. vessels. Analysts and diplomats suggest he was making a virtue of necessity.

A hesitant Saudi Arabia, the most populous and powerful gulf council member, reportedly has turned down U.S. requests for American aircraft to use its airfields or to commit its own largely U.S.-supplied Air Force to provide air cover.

Public Forum

To the editor:

I watched in awe Tuesday night (The Larry King Show on CNN) as Judie Brown (an almost unknown zealot) assiduously proclaimed how to control the spread of AIDS among our adolescents. She suggested we change the moral standards and preach abstinence, abstinence, and abstinence.

While this might be a reasonable approach for a large number of our teens, the realities of life dictate that many will engage in sexual activity (as some teenagers always have and always will).

When confronted with an imagined scenario in which her own teenager advised Mrs. Brown that sexual activity was imminent that very night, Mrs. Brown had the unmitigated gall to state that she would not recommend that her teen wear a condom! After stating that condoms are not 100 percent effective, she lapsed into a fit of hebeephrenia.

Submissions to the Public Forum should consist of no more than 300 words and should deal with public issues. The editor reserves the right to cut longer letters. Signatures and phone numbers should be included on all letters.

The Press, Politicians And Sex

'European politicians, journalists and others ... have professed shock not over Hart's Saturday night and Sunday morning with Rice, but over America's apparent moral hypocrisy in singling out one politician for punishment for a human, forgivable foible.'

What are the cultural differences that divide Europe and the United States on the interplay of public morality, sex and the independence of the press when it comes to examining the private lives of politicians?

It is partly a matter of cynicism on the part of Europeans, asserts Christine Ockrent, France's most prominent television journalist. "Nobody here believes that lying is a sin, or that it is even a mistake. And besides, the French think they are great lovers, so anything to do with sex is a plus," not something to be exposed as scandal.

It is also a matter of politics. Europe's newspapers, magazines and radio and television networks remain to a surprising extent supported by subsidies from political parties or by governments through tax breaks or direct funding. They are party to the tacit understandings among the political leaders themselves that private lives are out of bounds in political warfare.

Themselves part of "the political class" in a way their American counterparts have not traditionally been, journalists follow the convention from necessity and as a matter of personal taste. They sense that if they were to ask a politician about his record on adultery, their own private lives and that of their editors would quickly become fair game for public inquiry and disclosure. They have found it difficult to understand how Hart could appear to be so helpless in a direct confrontation with journalists.

But the Monkey Business Photo Archives have shifted the focus of reaction here, swinging it away from an automatic assumption that the U.S. media conducted a politically inspired lynching for the benefit of a puritanical American public and on to the ex-presidential candidate's own poor judgment. Posing for sappy photos at a time when he was insisting that he was so happily married sharply diminishes Hart's standing as victim in worldly wise European eyes.

The growing move in Europe, and in France in particular, to encourage private ownership of television and radio broadcasting networks is clearly causing concern among politicians about the future. For them, the outcome of the Hart case outweighs the fine points about who should have been shocked by what. For former Prime Minister Raymond Barre the question is nothing less than whether "the fourth estate has not become so powerful that it is hindering the normal working of the other three."

This view of an all-powerful media is largely a myth imported from the United States, French writer Jean-Francois Revel responds, "but the politicians believe it, the public also, and the journalists in the media even more. The fundamental fact is that they are now all adapting their behavior to this mirage and thus turning it into a reality."

Strength For Today

Many years ago missionaries among a tribe of South American Indians persuaded their converts to build a beautiful church. But the Indians were determined not to give up those idols which their ancestors had been worshipping over the centuries. They built the church according to specifications, but secretly they placed these idols between the inner and outer walls.

And so as the centuries have passed, these Indians have knelt in the church, ostensibly Christian worshippers, but as they pray to Christ and the saints, they also give their obances to the idols of their ancestors.

How many of us follow the same procedure? On the surface we are solid Christians, but many of us also worship secret idols of wealth, power or self-indulgence.

Man Arrested After Firing Cap Gun At Klan March

By DENNIS PATTERSON
Associated Press Writer
GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Greensboro Police yelled “get down” as a shot went off, but the only weapon fired in the Ku Klux Klan parade this time around was from a cap gun.

“At the moment it was fired it appeared to be a real weapon,” Greensboro Police Lt. J.L. Hightower said Sunday as approximately 150 Klansmen were participating in the first KKK march in Greensboro since a deadly 1979 confrontation left five communists dead. “It had a loud but subdued report. But afterwards, it looked like a starter pistol or a cap gun.”

The Greensboro Coalition for Unity and Justice, which held a anti-Klan march Saturday along the same route the Klan used Sunday, also sponsored a peace festival and love rally Sunday at the same time the Klan marched. About 300 people attended the festival, authorities said.

Near the end of the Klan march, the bystander who apparently fired the cap gun was quickly arrested, authorities said.

No one was injured, and Klansmen appeared unaware that a gun had been fired, authorities said. Three others also were taken into custody for trying to break into the parade line, and a fifth person was arrested for carrying a concealed weapon.

James Joseph Faulkner of Greensboro, 21, was charged with disorderly conduct, said Lt. W.R. Stafford of the Greensboro Police Department. He was jailed under $10,000 secured bond.

The man, who said nothing when he was taken into custody, was grabbed from behind by a plainclothes officer who knocked the revolver out of his hand, Hightower said. Other officers knocked the man to the ground and handcuffed him, Hightower said.

Three other people — two black men and a black woman — also were arrested when they tried to break into the parade line.

The woman, Sydney Smith, 25, of Greensboro, was charged with disorderly conduct and placed on $100 bond, said Magistrate James D. Vaughn.

John Willie Horne, 47, of Greensboro was charged with interfering with a parade and released on his own recognizance.

“I just stepped out and tried to shake the grand dragon’s hand and tell him I love him,” said Horne, who was carrying a flag and a Bible when he was arrested. “These fellows say they’re Christians and I just wanted to find that out, but he refused to shake my hand.”

A third man, Van Simpson, 34, of Raleigh, was charged with interfering with a police officer. He’s being held under $3,000 secured bond.

Richard Lynn Loyce, 29, of Greensboro, who is white, was charged with possession of a weapon — a knife — within 500 feet of a parade. Authorities said Loyce, who was carrying a knife on his belt, was “a victim of circumstance” and released him on his own recognizance.

A couple of protesters held up a sign as Klan marched into the plaza which read “If ignorance is bliss, these are some happy Klansmen.”

One Klansman responded, “I’ll remember you in my prayers.”

The Klansmen, who handed out membership cards to anyone who asked, were led by Virgil Griffin of Mount Holly, the imperial wizard, and Carroll Crawford of Mount Ulla, the grand dragon.

At the rally at Governmental Plaza, Griffin made an impassioned speech through a bullhorn against abortion, saying there were “slaughter clinics” on every street corner.

“America is going down the tubes, ladies and gentlemen,” Griffin said. “And whose suffering? The children are, white and black.”

Before the march began, Crawford said the Klan did not pick Greensboro for the march because of the 1979 confrontation. He said the Klan was exercising its right to march in Greensboro, as they have in many other towns over the last several months.

Many Klansmen wore civilian clothes such as T-shirts, but others were dressed in red, green, gold and purple robes or white robes with hoods.

Griffin said the purpose of the march was “to organize white people to stand up against communism, abortion, integration and drugs. I’m working for my racist people. The NAACP is working for theirs.”

The march ended about 3:05 p.m., about an hour after it began.

Ervin Brisbon, a black resident of Morningside Apartments, where the 1979 shootings took place, said he refused to be intimidated by the Klan. He watched the march with his two children Ervin II, 7, and Marieno, 9.

“I brought my kids down to show them you do not have to be intimidated,” Brisbon said. “These people (the Klan) are teaching their children to intimidate people. I’m going to teach mine not to be intimidated.”

PTL Donors Protest

DECATUR, Ga. (AP) — About 150 PTL donors gathered to pray, protest and proclaim they’ll go to court to bounce the Rev. Jerry Falwell out of the PTL picture.

“It’s ours, it belongs to us. We paid for it!” said Joe Haviland, president of the Association of PTL Partners, formed a month ago to boost the influence of PTL donors over the organization.

The group held its Georgia organizational session Sunday in a suburban Atlanta church. The group claims 5,000 members nationwide and has announced plans for chapters in several states.

The group contends the estimated 517,000 contributors own PTL, which stands for Praise the Lord or People That Love.

“We believe a minister can resign any time he wants to, but we don’t believe a minister has the right to give away the church. And Heritage USA is a church,” Haviland said.

PTL broadcasts round-the-clock religious programming and owns nearly $200 million in property around Fort Mill, S.C., concentrated in Heritage USA, a Christian theme park.

To raise money, PTL founder Jim Bakker offered contributors of $1,000 or more three nights’ free stay each year in the Heritage Grand Hotel at Heritage USA. Those people were honored with the title “lifetime partners.”

The association’s attorney, Robert G. Zanesky of Bridgeport, Conn., indicated this is the basis for the contributors to claim ownership.

Deadline Extended

GREENSBORO (AP) — By having a Tuesday federal court order deadline extended, Burlington Industries Inc. was given additional breathing room in an attempt to raise $500 million to block a hostile takeover attempt.

New York financier Asher Edelman and Dominion Textile Inc. have extended their $77-a-share tender offer for Burlington, effectively giving the Greensboro textile company additional time to implement a federal court order that could block the takeover attempt.

The offer, scheduled to expire Tuesday, has been extended to June 19.

U.S. District Judge Eugene Gordon on Friday prohibited Edelman and Dominion from proceeding with their tender offer until a trial to determine whether the partners had used illegally obtained inside information about Burlington to mount their takeover attempt.

But Gordon said his order would not take effect until Burlington posted a $500 million bond to compensate Edelman and Dominion for losses a delay might cause them should Burlington not prevail over the partners at trial.

11 Die On Highways

By The Associated Press
A 6-year-old Salisbury girl, who was killed when she fell from the back of a pickup truck, was among the 11 victims killed in traffic accidents in North Carolina this weekend, the state Highway Patrol said.

Ashlee Deanne Harwood was killed at 2:50 p.m. Sunday in Rowan County on a rural road about one mile southwest of Faith. Troopers said Miss Harwood was killed when she fell out of the back of the pickup truck and was struck by a vehicle.

The death toll on North Carolina roads now stands at 591 for 1987, compared to 664 on this date last year.

“Unfortunately Tobacco And Soybeans Don’t Look Good Every Year. Fortunately My Chickens Do.”

“As a tobacco farmer, I realized a while back that I would need something to supplement our income. Tobacco can be real inconsistent from one year to the next.

“So a few years ago we built two Perdue chicken houses, and looking at the overall agricultural situation today—I’d like to build another.

“Considering the time I put into these houses, my chickens are earning as much or better than our tobacco crop.

“The Perdue company is always looking for ways to make the job easier and more profitable for the producer. We’ve got computerized scales in our houses that allow the company to keep up with the birds’ weight. And they monitor the temperature around the clock. So all I do is spend a few hours a day looking after the birds. Of course when they’re younger it takes more time. However this still allows me plenty of time to work my other farm operations.

“I’d recommend Perdue’s program to other farmers who want to supplement their income. The poultry business has really helped me.

“In fact, when it comes to my farm, growing Perdue pullets is the best thing I’ve ever done.”

MEMORIAL AQUARIUM — This lobby embellishment was given in memory of the son of Mr. and Mrs. Josh Potter of Greenville by school children of this area led by the staff and PTA of South Greenville School. It was examined by Sally FreeLove, house furnishings chairperson, during the preview gala for the Ronald McDonald House Saturday night.

Sylvia Allen Wed In Fountain Sunday

FOUNTAIN — Sylvia Lynn Allen was wed Sunday to William Edwards Jones Jr. in a double-ring ceremony conducted by the Rev. Robert White. The 4 p.m. wedding took place in Fountain Baptist Church.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. William Edward Jones of Farmville and Mr. and Mrs. Willie Warren Allen, also of Farmville.

The bride was given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father. She wore a floor-length gown with a chapel train of organza with venise lace over taffeta. The fitted bodice featured a scoop neckline, juliet petal lace sleeves and natural waist. Seed pearls and sequins adorned the lavishly applied lace bodice. Bridal buttons accented the back of the gown. Garlands of lace bordered the hemline of the gown. Her veil was of tiered illusion with a hand-rolled edge flowing from a bridal bandeau of venise lace etched with seed pearls accented with silk flowers and pearls sprays on the side of headpiece. She carried a cascade bouquet of white daisies, white miniature carnations, and yellow statice, interspersed with greenery.

Beverly Allen, the bride's sister, was the maid of honor. The bridesmaids were Jerri Jones, the bridegroom's sister, Lisa Tugwell of Durham, a cousin of the bride, Jennifer Walston of Farmville, and Brenda Little of Falkland.

The bridegroom's father, William Edward Jones, was the best man with ushers Ricky Tugwell of Durham, a cousin of the bride, Roland Allen of Greenville, another cousin of the bride, Barry Martin of Ayden and Jay Tyson of Farmville.

The bridal attendants wore teal-length dresses of sapphire blue satin designed with open sweetheart necklines and short elbow-length pouf sleeves. The fitted torso was enhanced by an off-centered draped bodice. The full circular skirt extended from the dropped basque waistline. Each of the attendants carried a colonial bouquet of daisies, baby's breath and blue statice with white satin streamers.

The mother of the bride wore an icy blue crepe de chine tea-length dress trimmed with delicate scalloped lace. The mother of the bridegroom selected a pink tea-length dress. Both were given white orchids. The grandmothers and a great-grandmother wore orchid corsages.

Jeff Hargett of Greenville presented selections of organ music. Soloist Brian Hester of Greenville also performed.

Immediately following the ceremony, the bride's parents hosted a reception in the church fellowship hall. Ruby Nethercutt, the bridegroom's aunt, and Jesse Shaw, the bride's aunt, served cake and punch. Mary Stoddard attended the guest register. Programs were distributed by Mrs. Mary Melin.

An after-rehearsal dinner was given by the parents of the bridegroom at their home. Other events honoring the couple included several showers, a morning party and a dinner party. A bridesmaids luncheon was held at the Colonial Inn.

The bride is a graduate of East Carolina University with a bachelor's degree in accounting. She is employed at Medical Park Associates. The bridegroom is employed at North State Company in Farmville. He attended ECU and Pitt Community College.

After a wedding trip to Myrtle Beach, S.C., the couple will live in Farmville.

Ronald McDonald Gala Held

A black tie gala was held Saturday evening at the Ronald McDonald House of Eastern North Carolina. Proceeds from the cocktail buffet will finance the game room in the house.

Mr. and Mrs. William S. Corbitt Jr. and Mr. and Mrs. Michael P. Flanagan greeted approximately 250 guests for a first-time look at the facility. The donor recognition wall in the entrance hall is highlighted by an original terra cotta sculpture by Susan Clellan. Names of donors having given $500 or more to the house will also be recognized on the wall.

The Mark Potter aquarium is a memorial located in the central area of the house. It was sponsored by school children of the area, assisted by teachers and staff of South Greenville School.

Music for the gala was provided by Joe Distefano and Associates.

The dining table was decorated with mirrored tiles and centered with a European flower arrangement of star gazer lilies, gerbera daisies and ginger lilies.

Committee members from Eastern N.C. were hostesses for the evening and introduced Tony Price, house resident manager.

"I've never worked on a project with any better response and the generosity of the volunteers has been overwhelming," said Mrs. Corbitt. Mrs. Corbitt and Mrs. Flanagan were co-chairwomen for the gala.

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

Ours was the only house on that street that wasn't burglarized. — JOHN HALL JR., HOUSTON
P.S. We never owned a snake.

DEAR ABBY: If you thought "Appalled in Sacramento" was overreacting to her son's teacher's error in grammar, you are fortunate in your lack of experience with same. As a parent, I have conversed frequently with teachers. Your hair would curl at some of what I hear.

I once heard a first-grade teacher tell a child, "You done real good." A third-grade teacher said to me, "He really seen me comin'." Trust me, Abby. These are not isolated occurrences.

A friend who taught in New York for more than 20 years once showed me a paper another teacher had "corrected." Next to a word the teacher had marked wrong was printed: "I advice you to look this up in the dictionary." (Ironically, the child had spelled the word correctly.)

When I attended school, assignments in any subject were expected to be punctuated and spelled correctly or points were deducted. When my son was a third-grader, his teacher showed me a story he had written. I was appalled at the errors in spelling and punctuation, and said so. The teacher prosed on about the wonderful creativity and imagination the boy displayed, until I asked if my son could not have been just as creative if he had been made to write and spell correctly. Abby, if you had seen the teacher's face, you would have thought I had suggested death by slow torture!

Learning to spell and punctuate correctly did not seem to have stifled Stevenson, Whitman, Poe, Millay, Dickinson, Tennyson, Austen and a host of others who have given so much pleasure with the written word. — CAROLYN GOLD, CLEARWATER, FLA.

DEAR ABBY: My husband of 26 years has had the same mistress for eight years, and I'm all for it. Here are my reasons: I am able to spend a lot of time alone (which I prefer), and anything I do is fine with him, because he's able to spend more time with her. He is not aware that I know what's going on and he treats me like a queen because he has such a guilty conscience he feels compelled to make it up to me.

He's an excellent provider, and I have total freedom. I figure he will die at a much earlier age due to the constant stress he is under trying to hide his affair from me. Also, he doesn't take care of his health. (He averages about three hours sleep a night.) When he finally drops dead, I stand to collect several hundred thousand dollars in insurance money, and all of our assets will be 100 percent mine.

The other woman is doing me a great favor. — LOVE BEING CHEATED ON

DEAR L.B.C.O: The lovely scenario you have written in your head may, in reality, have a surprise ending. For example: He could lose his money. Or instead of dropping dead, he could have a stroke or heart attack, leaving him incapacitated for many years. Or, YOU could drop dead or become incapacitated.

Lost time cannot be replaced, so why not tell him you know what's going on, then see a lawyer and make an honest man out of the guy? That way all three of you can be happy.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices sagged in light trading today, faced with a weak bond market.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 8.90 to 2,317.35 in the first half hour of trading.

Losers outnumbered gainers by about 7 to 4 in the overall tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 385 up, 652 down and 432 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 15.39 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

In the credit markets, prices of long-term government bonds, which move in the opposite direction from interest rates, dropped $5 to $10 for each $1,000 in face value.

Traders in the currency, bond and stock markets apparently were leery of doing much buying until they could get some indication of the course of this week's economic summit in Venice.

Stockmarket watchers also have been unhappy lately over the low level of trading volume, which has suggested an absence of widespread enthusiasm even when prices are rising.

Last Friday's session was the quietest since Jan. 2, when many investors were taking an extended New Year's holiday.

Losers among the blue chip and technology issues included General Electric, down 1/2 at 52 1/2; International Business Machines, down 1/2 at 159 1/2; and Hewlett-Packard, down 1/2 at 62 1/2.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks lost .55 to 164.94. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .59 at 328.91.

On Friday the Dow Jones industrial average dropped 10.93 to 2,326.15, trimming its gain for the week to 34.58 points.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by about 8 to 7 on the NYSE, with 714 up, 807 down and 416 unchanged. Big Board volume totaled 129.11 million shares, against 140.30 million in the previous session.

Schlesinger refused to detail the work needed at the embassy or say how it should be done, but he suggested the United States would seek Soviet permission to use American workers to finish the building. The chancery was built by Soviet labor.

Missile Threat Overshadows Summit Start

"We have consistently said that we support freedom of navigation in the gulf. We are not threatening anybody. gulf," national security adviser Frank Carlucci said today. "We are not threatening anybody."

Asked what kind of response the United States is weighing in the event of an attack by Iran against ships in the gulf, Carlucci, interviewed on NBC-TV's "Today" show, replied, "I don't think it's useful to speculate on military options. We are not provoking anyone but we are prepared to defend shipping in the gulf. We are prepared to defend ourselves."

White House chief of staff Howard Baker said today that if the Iranians deployed the antiship missiles, the United States would have "a serious serious situation on our hands."

Appearing on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America," Baker said "this whole situation can be avoided" if the Iranians do not deploy the missiles. "It's important, in my view, that the Iranians stop and think" about the consequences of escalating the threat of warfare in the gulf, he said.

Baker said that world peace and Persian Gulf security "would be best served" if the Iranians made no use of the Silkworm missiles that U.S. officials said they have purchased from China.

Amid the controversy over the Persian Gulf, there were strong suggestions that Reagan would partially lift trade sanctions against Japan. The president began his day with a meeting with Italian Prime Minister Amintore Fanfani.

Reagan, posing for pictures with Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone before their meeting, refused to announce whether he would lift sanctions — partially or completely — against Japan. "Keep your money in your pocket," Reagan advised a reporter who asked if it was a sure bet he would.

However, Nakasone told Japanese reporters, "There might be something in the pocket of Ron." Reagan and Nakasone are on a first-name basis.

In addition to his talks with Fanfani and Nakasone, Reagan met with West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl before the 13th annual economic summit got under way.

The seven summit partners had in their hands, even before starting their deliberations, a U.S. draft expressing concern over threats to shipping in the gulf. Besides Reagan, Nakasone and Kohl, the other summit participants were Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher of Britain, President Francois Mitterrand of France, Prime Minister Brian Mulroney of Canada and Jacques Delors, president of the European Communities Commission.

The draft was circulated last week. A U.S. official, who demanded anonymity, said it was "normal pre-summit" procedure to provide a basis for discussion. He said the statement was not a threatening one, but simply "a general expression of concern over developments there."

After a formal welcoming ceremony tonight at the imposing Palazzo Ducale on St. Mark's Square, the leaders will assemble with translators — but no aides — for a political discussion over dinner.

White House officials said Reagan would seek a unified position on a U.S.-Soviet proposal for the removal of hundreds of medium-range and short-range nuclear missiles in Europe and Asia.

"I think things look good," Baker said Sunday. He said he expected a consensus not only on those missiles but on long-range strategic weapons and perhaps on chemical and biological weapons as well as conventional forces.

Celts Rebound To Top Lakers

BOSTON (AP) — Boston's task appeared so hopeless that even the Celtics' usually raucous rooters seemed to have lost hope. Now those fans have found reasons to believe and to scream again.

The Celtics, who got run off the court twice in Los Angeles, stopped the Lakers' running game in Boston Garden. The Celtics, who never led in the last three quarters of the first two games, never trailed in the second half Sunday.

After a slow start, Boston used 81 percent shooting from the field in the second quarter to take the lead and won 109-103. The victory cut the Lakers' lead in the best-of-seven NBA championship series to 2-1 and ended talk of a possible sweep.

"While the National Anthem was playing, they (the fans) were loud and then they got quiet," said Larry Bird, who led Boston with 30 points and 12 rebounds. "I've never been in the Garden in a big game when it's been quiet."

But he's never been in the Garden after the Celtics were crushed on the road in the first two games of the finals by a much healthier, more talented team that Bird called "the best in the league."

"I think the reason they were so quiet is because they thought the Lakers would come in here and sweep us, not all of them, but a fair bit," Bird said. "If we win all three (at home), we will have more noise than we know what to do with."

The suddenly competitive series continues in Boston Tuesday night and Thursday night. If necessary, it will return to the Forum in Inglewood, Calif., for two more games.

"They played a more patient offense" than in the first two games, Lakers' Coach Pat Riley said of the Celtics. "Their quickness and reaction (on defense) were a lot different."

"If we have any chance of winning this thing we have to win our home games and steal one there," said Celtics forward Kevin McHale, who had 21 points and 10 rebounds. "We rely on our homecourt too much. We have to start relying on ourselves."

Boston has won 85 of its last 87 games at the Garden. It also is 103-5 there starting with the 1985 playoffs against Los Angeles, but just 3-3 against the Lakers in that span.

"We gain a lot of confidence from the crowd," said Boston's Dennis Johnson, who had 26 points. "Home is the best of everything."

The difference between the Celtics' home and road performances is startling. They are 4-16 in their last 20 games away from home. They have lost their last six playoff games on the road by an average of 15.7 points.

"We have to win games here because we're not a great road team," Bird said. "You just can't turn it around at this stage of the game."

Boston, trying to become the first team to win consecutive titles since the 1969 Celtics, did turn around the series Sunday despite injuries that have hindered or sidelined five key players. It held the Lakers to just six fastbreak baskets after they had scored about half their 267 points in the first two games on fast breaks.

"When we can't run like that, we don't get the easy baskets," Los Angeles center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, who had 27 points, said.

Boston slowed down the Lakers' fast break by hitting 17 of 21 shots in the second quarter, which kept them from running off misses, and dropping back quickly on defense.

The victory revived Boston's hopes for its 17th NBA title and ended the Lakers' chance of having the best playoff record in league history. Had they swept the Celtics, they would have been 15-1. Philadelphia's 12-1 playoff mark in 1983 is the NBA's best. Los Angeles is 13-2.

In the first quarter Sunday, the Celtics made just eight of 25 shots and trailed 29-22. In the second quarter, Bird and Johnson each hit six of seven shots as the Celtics took a 60-56 halftime lead.

Trailing 41-36, Boston made nine consecutive shots to take the lead for good on Bird's jumper from the foul line that made the score 56-54 one minute before intermission.

"That's just poor defense," Magic Johnson, who led the Lakers with 32 points, 11 rebounds and nine assists, said of Boston's second-period shooting. "You can be hot, but come on. That's super hot and I feel it was our fault defensively as well as them shooting well."

Boston's biggest lead was 82-69 with 2:56 left in the third quarter after a 22-11 run in which Dennis Johnson had nine points. Los Angeles, which had scored at least 69 points in the first half of each of the first two games, had just one fastbreak basket to that point.

The Lakers cut the margin to 86-78 after three quarters. A three-point play by Magic Johnson got it down to 104-99 with 3:03 remaining, but they could come no closer.

The Lakers, who seemed invincible in the first two games, now must try to bounce back against the Celtics, who have been nearly invincible at home.

"They leave their blood and guts on the floor for their fans," Los Angeles forward Mychal Thompson said. "We knew we had to come back here and fight for our lives."

Fenner Defended By Former Coach

GREENSBORO (AP) — After taking Derrick Fenner under his wing four years ago, Oxon Hill, Md., football coach Mike Pearson refuses to believe that the All-Atlantic Coast Conference running back is a murderer.

"This is not the Derrick Fenner I know," Pearson told the Greensboro News & Record upon hearing of the 20-year-old's arrest for first-degree murder. "He may have had some crazy ideas, but a murderer? No way. It's crazy."

On May 23, according to witnesses, four men charged into a grassy courtyard in Kirkwood, Md., announced they were taking over that area's drug trade and opened fire.

Bullets caught 19-year-old Marcellus Leach in the back of the head and left shoulder and he collapsed beneath a large, shady oak tree. A 17-year-old male, who has identified Fenner as one of the gunman, was wounded in the leg.

Leach died the next day. And Fenner, a University of North Carolina sophomore who many believe had an illustrious professional football career in his future, is in a Maryland jail without bond.

"Derrick, I think, has the potential to be one of the greatest football players — ever," said Pearson, who compared Fenner to Eric Dickerson, who pro football's top running back.

It was 1983 when Pearson spotted a tall, powerful sophomore playing basketball. He found out it was Fenner and talked him into going out for football the following year.

"He is a kid destined for greatness, but he had to have his energies channeled in the right direction," said Pearson, a former Washington Redskin. "I took him under my wing and really worked with him. He improved with every game (his junior year). It was amazing."

But that year, Pearson said, Fenner was too immature to handle success. His attitude was poor and his grades were worse. He had a 1.6 grade-point average going into his senior year.

"He had to pull a 3.0 (B average) his senior year to get his overall average above 2.0 so he could get a college scholarship, and he did," Pearson said. "He chose not to go out for basketball so he could get his grades up. He stayed home and studied, and it worked for him."

"I confirmed what I always believed in Derrick: when his back was to the wall, he could do it."

But when the coach reads the newspapers these days, he can't believe what's being printed.

Emilio Garcia-Ruiz, sports editor of The Prince George's Journal, followed Fenner's high school career closely. In the past week, he has spoken to many of Fenner's high school friends and former teammates. They all say the same thing: Fenner was drug-free then.

"What people want to know around here is what happened to him in the past two years since he went to Chapel Hill," Garcia-Ruiz said. "He seems to have undergone a transformation. I don't think the answer is here; I think it's down there."

If that is indeed true, few people in Chapel Hill are talking about it.

Dick Crum, Tar Heel head football coach, acknowledged Fenner has had some disciplinary problems on the team and academic problems in the classroom, but nothing that would explain Fenner's predicament.

Schultz To Take Over For Byers

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Dick Schultz is the NCAA's executive director-designate. But for the time being, Walter Byers is still the boss.

Schultz, who was being introduced at a news conference today, will work with the 65-year-old Byers for about a year until he assumes full power.

"Walter has made it clear he will remain in charge until he vacates his office," a senior NCAA official said. "There is no mistake about that."

Schultz, a 58-year-old Iowa native, became University of Virginia athletic director in 1981. He was chosen over the weekend by the NCAA Executive Committee over three other finalists — Indiana University President John Ryan, Southeastern Conference commissioner Harvey Schiller, and former NCAA President Jack Davis of Oregon State.

Byers, who has run the NCAA since 1947, became executive director when the post was created in 1951. At the time, it was a two-person operation crammed into a corner of the Big Ten Conference offices in Chicago. Shortly afterward, Byers moved the NCAA to Kansas City, his hometown, and supervised its growth into one of the world's most powerful sports organizations.

All four finalists underwent day-long interviews with representatives of the NCAA Executive Committee, Presidents Commission, Council and staff. Schultz, who is also chairman of the powerful selection committee for the NCAA men's basketball tournament, is seen as a popular choice.

"Dick is a natural leader," Jim Delany, commissioner of the Ohio Valley Conference and member of the basketball committee, said. "He's low key when he chairs meetings, but everyone is aware of who's in charge. He has that capacity for giving people instruction without making them feel dominated."

Schultz, a native of Kellogg, Iowa, received his bachelor's degree from Central College of Iowa in 1950 and a master's degree from the University of Iowa. He played football, basketball and baseball at Central and coached Iowa's freshman basketball coach in 1960.

He became Iowa's head baseball coach in 1964 and basketball coach in 1970. He was athletic director at Cornell University from 1976 to 1981 before moving to Virginia. He is married and the father of three.

Lendl Overcomes, Wins French Open

PARIS (AP) — Rain, darkness, a strangely quiet Center Court crowd and his critics could not stop Ivan Lendl from continuing his love affair with the French Open.

After four hours and 17 minutes of play, plus an additional 35-minute rain delay, Lendl, who for once had not been the clear favorite coming into the tournament, raised aloft the silver trophy Sunday for the third time.

Lendl's 7-5, 6-2, 3-6, 7-6 victory over Mats Wilander may not have been a classic in terms of quality but it was just as pleasing to the winner, who had won only one Grand Prix tournament this year and wanted to prove that when it comes to this Grand Slam event, he has few rivals.

"Many people said I couldn't win — that I wasn't fit, that I wasn't confident, that I didn't play hard, that I wasn't mentally tough," Lendl said. "I am glad to prove them all wrong."

While it was Lendl's third French title in five appearances, the women's title went to a new champion.

On Saturday, 17-year-old Steffi Graf of West Germany became the youngest women's titlist at Roland Garros with a 6-4, 4-6, 8-6 victory over top-seeded Martina Navratilova.

Graf trailed 5-3 in the final set and rallied to win her first Grand Slam title and extend her unbeaten streak to 39 matches through seven tournaments.

After losing the first two games in Sunday's championship match, Lendl, the world's No. 1 player since late 1985, showed that he was not about to be blown away by Wilander as Yannick Noah and Boris Becker had been in the previous two rounds.

Using his powerful serve and forehand, Lendl traded groundstrokes with Wilander, hitting deeper and harder to win a marathon opening set in 1:20.

The second set lasted just 39 minutes as Lendl held serve at love three times and broke Wilander twice. The Swede got back into the match in the third set as he took more risks.

The fourth set was going with serve, 3-2 to Lendl, when the rain that had been threatening since mid-match finally arrived.

As the skies remained gray, it looked as if the match would be suspended and resumed today. However, 35 minutes later, the match resumed.

Wilander immediately won a love game but Lendl went ahead 5-4 on a running forehand pass.

Twice Wilander served to save the set. Twice he succeeded, and the set went into a tiebreaker.

The rain came down again but play continued and the defending champion took charge.

Wayne County Slips By Post 39

GOLDSBORO — Rovin Kennedy singled in two runs in the ninth inning to give Wayne County a 3-2 win over Pitt County in the American Legion baseball opener for both teams Sunday.

Pitt County led 2-1 heading into the ninth but Bronswell Patrick walked leadoff batter Randy Hood. James Roderick then was hit by a pitch to put men at first and second. Dexter Evans followed by reaching on a fielder's choice that put out Hood. West Waller then drew a walk to load the bases before Kennedy hit his game winner against Sherwood Wilder, who had replaced Patrick.

Post 39 had forged out to a 2-0 lead by pushing across one run in the first and another in the fifth.

Shane Adams started things off with a single and went to second on a passed ball and came home on a single by Axel Smith.

Post 39 made it 2-0 in the fifth when Ty Little singled and was sacrificed to second by Tim Clark. Little later came home on a single by Adams.

Wayne County rallied in the sixth when Tony Tillman doubled and scored on a single by Hood.

Pitt County had a chance to increase its lead in the eighth when Hunter Clark singled with one out and then stole second. After two outs, Brian Joyner drew a walk. Both runners were stranded when Robbie McDonald stuck out to end the inning.

Patrick went eight and a third innings, giving up three hits and two runs, both earned. Tillman and Roger Calvin combined for the win, giving up eight hits, all by Tillman.

Adams and Smith had two hits apiece to lead Pitt County.

Hood and Kennedy had two hits each for Goldsboro.

Friend Offers 'Actual Truth' Concerning Hart-Rice Events

NEW YORK (AP) — Gary Hart spent nights with Donna Rice on a yacht in Bimini and at his Washington townhouse, then turned ashen-faced and coldly ended the affair when confronted about it by reporters, according to a friend of Rice's.

In cover stories published Sunday, Rice wrote in Life magazine that "I'm not a party girl," while her friend Lynn Armandt told People magazine The Miami Herald stories of the relationship between Hart and Rice were true.

"The actual truth is that some of that back-door stuff they talked about never really happened and Donna actually stayed in Gary's townhouse Friday night," Ms. Armandt said in People.

Hart quit the presidential campaign May 8, five days after the Herald's story.

Hart denied that Rice spent the night of May 1 at his Washington townhouse, saying Rice left through a back door and stayed, along with Ms. Armandt, at the home of his friend William Broadhurst.

Rice, 29, on the advice of her lawyer, did not write about the relationship in her bylined Life article.

"I feel like a hunted animal," Rice said. Since the story broke, she wrote, "I have averaged less than four hours sleep a night and been under a great deal of stress. I have very bad mood swings. I'll be fine and then just start crying hysterically."

According to Ms. Armandt, a 29-year-old bikini shop owner, she spent the night of May 1 at Broadhurst's house, but Rice did not.

The next night, she said, Hart called, saying reporters were outside his house and asking her and Broadhurst to come over.

"He looked pretty shaken — he was white," Ms. Armandt said.

From then on, Hart and Rice were "finito," Ms. Armandt said. "The mission was just to get her out of there. It was very cold — not even a kiss on the cheek, which really upset Donna," said Ms. Armandt. "She just didn't understand the finality of everything."

Back at Broadhurst's, Broadhurst went over the Herald account with the women.

"It wasn't like, 'We have to get the story straight,' but he said it like, 'This is what happened,'" Ms. Armandt said.

Rice, she said, "was worried about the wrong things, like how he's going to feel about her, whether he'll call again. She wasn't worried about the realistic thing that was happening, which was this huge scandal that was exploding."

The four first got together in March, Ms. Armandt said. Rice called her to say that Hart, whom she'd met in Aspen, Colo., at a New Year's party, had invited her on a cruise. She invited Ms. Armandt along.

Aboard the yacht "Monkey Business," she said, Rice and Hart "were sitting kind of close and seemed to be having a very intimate conversation." That night, at a bar, the four got on the empty bandstand and performed "Twist and Shout."

Later that night, Ms. Armandt slept in the cabin where she and Rice had stowed their bags.

"I awoke at 7 o'clock in the morning ... and I was alone," she said. "There were only three guest bedrooms, and I assume she didn't sleep with Broadhurst."

Hart and Rice have said the women slept on the yacht and the men slept on another boat.

On land, the women spoke at lunch. "It was absolutely clear that she had slept with Gary," Ms. Armandt said.

"She's not one to detail, but she said she had a wonderful time with him ... that he was very gentle and romantic," Ms. Armandt said. "She said she really liked him and thought the feelings were mutual." After that, Ms. Armandt said, Rice told her Hart telephoned every few days.

Rice, meanwhile, wrote in Life that she works diligently as a saleswoman for Wyeth Laboratories, although she is currently on leave. Her $400-a-month Miami apartment is stocked with second-hand furniture, and she goes out about one night a week.

"How many jet-setters do you know with that lifestyle?" Rice wrote. "Contrary to popular belief, I've always kept a full-time job. I'm not a party girl."

Responding to previous reports, she said her one date with Prince Albert of Monaco was a blind date, and never dated race car driver Danny Sullivan or actor Don Johnson.

"My TV commercials are down the tubes," she said. "Sponsors won't touch my 'scandalous' image with a 10-foot pole."

The former Colorado senator did not return a telephone message left at his office Sunday, and Broadhurst's housekeeper said he was not at home. Rice's telephone number is unlisted, but her lawyer, Thomas McAliley, said he did not believe Ms. Armandt's comments were true.

In a related story Sunday, The New York Times reported that dozens of lithographs donated by artist Robert Rauschenberg to Hart's campaign will be sold by a bank that held the prints as collateral for a loan.

The Times reported that the debt-ridden Hart campaign owes the National Bank of Washington $556,824 and that the bank hoped to sell the 92 art works for $1,000 or more apiece.

Communist Poland Hopes To Benefit From Pope Visit

By VICTOR L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Writer

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Pope John Paul II started his third pilgrimage to his Communist homeland today with a promise to serve his fellow countrymen, and he recalled the "the joy and the suffering" of the Polish people.

The Roman Catholic Church and the Communist leadership are both hoping to benefit from the seven-day tour, which for the first time will take the pontiff to the city of Gdansk. The northern port city is the birthplace of the now-outlawed independent trade union federation Solidarity.

In his welcoming remarks at Warsaw's military airport, Polish leader Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski said he hoped the visit would lead to "strong national agreement."

The remarks apparently referred to the nationwide calm the Communist leaders hope to bring about after Solidarity was suppressed by martial law in 1981.

The pontiff's Alitalia DC-9 jetliner arrived at 10:40 a.m. local time at Warsaw's military airport. Jaruzelski and Cardinal Jozef Glemp, the primate of Poland, led the delegation greeting the pontiff, who kissed the ground after descending from his plane.

"I greet you, fellow countrymen, who know the joy and the suffering of living in this land," the pope said, speaking in his native Polish in the nationally broadcast welcome ceremony. The Vatican provided an official translation of the remarks.

A crowd of several thousand greeted the pope singing, "We welcome you, hallelujah." Many carried crucifixes and pictures of the Catholic leader.

Many government and local Communist officials bowed and kissed John Paul's hand as he greeted them.

Thousands of people lined the pontiff's motorcade route into the city center, and young girls, many dressed in traditional folk costumes, lined the streets with red, yellow and white flowers.

Hundreds of red-and-white Polish flags, yellow-and-white Vatican flags and portraits of the pope hung from apartment windows and lamp posts.

As the pontiff got off his special popemobile at the Visitation Church near Warsaw's old town, about 60 people unfurled Solidarity banners and chanted, "Democracy!"

The pope, who was about 50 yards away, waved to the crowd but did not visibly acknowledge the chanting. Dozens of uniformed and plainclothes policemen witnessed the scene but made no attempt to break up the group.

The pope's week-long tour of eight cities, which begins in Warsaw, will include a meeting with Lech Walesa, the former Solidarity leader. It will also include the pope's second meeting this year with Jaruzelski, who led the martial law crackdown in December 1981 that crushed Solidarity.

John Paul and Jaruzelski were scheduled to hold talks this afternoon at the former royal castle in the Polish capital.

On the first day of his 35th foreign pilgrimage, John Paul also was scheduled to open a National Eucharistic Congress, a series of major religious meetings that will be held along the route of the pilgrimage.

Jaruzelski made several pointed remarks in his welcoming statement at the airport.

"It (the visit) confirms the positive development of dialogue between the Holy See and the Polish People's Republic," said the Polish leader, dressed in a somber gray suit.

Jaruzelski said that during his last meeting with the pontiff in the Vatican in January, a wish was expressed "that the visit produce fruit for Poland, Europe and peace."

"I am confident that this intention remains valid," Jaruzelski said. He said he was hoping for a "strong international position for Poland."

Roman Catholic bishops see the visit as a way to fight pessimism and passivity and consolidate spiritual values linking the people of the overwhelmingly Roman Catholic nation.

Wind Shear Is Suspected In Fatal Crash Of Balloon

GAITHERSBURG, Md. (AP) — Federal and local officials are checking the possibility that a sudden burst of wind caused the fiery crash of a hot-air balloon, killing a teen-age girl and seriously injuring her pilot father.

The Federal Aviation Administration is looking into the Saturday incident in which a balloon trying to land after a fund-raising race struck a power line and burned near Gaithersburg, about 15 miles northwest of Washington, D.C.

A sudden downshift in the wind, known as wind shear, might have caused the balloon to hit the power line, Montgomery County Fire Capt. Ray Mulhall said.

"There are all kinds of assumptions from the other balloonists that there might have been a wind shear," Mulhall said Sunday.

Witnesses said the 75-foot-tall balloon was approaching an open field for a landing when it drifted on to the power line. After hitting the line, a propane tank on board exploded, fire officials said.

The balloon's pilot, Robert van Newkirk, 39, an elementary school teacher from North Hills, Pa., was thrown from the gondola by the collision, but his daughter Kristine, 16, was trapped in the basket and was engulfed in flames, fire officials said.

Van Newkirk remains in serious condition at Washington Hospital Center intensive care unit with second-degree burns over 40 percent of his body.

Van Newkirk and his daughter had participated with 52 other balloonists in a fund-raising event for Kids Inc., a local group that raises money for terminally ill children. The rest of the weekend-long fund-raiser went off without incident Sunday, organizers said, and officials decided to donate money raised to the Van Newkirk family.

The accident was one of three hot-air balloon accidents nationwide on Saturday that killed a total of two people and injured four.

Ambassador Picked

JERUSALEM (AP) — The coalition government has broken a stalemate by approving the appointment of career diplomat Moshe Arad as ambassador to the United States, an Israeli official said.

Arad, whose appointment was approved Sunday, has been serving as ambassador to Mexico. His new appointment must be approved by the U.S. government, said the official, who demanded anonymity.

Since the outgoing ambassador to the United States, Meir Rosenne, ended his term of office May 31, Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir of the rightist Likud bloc and Foreign Minister Shimon Peres of the left-centrist Labor Party had been unable to agree on a candidate for the key post.

The Romanian-born Arad, 52, immigrated to Israel in 1950 and joined the foreign service 25 years ago.

He served in the Israeli Embassy in London and the Israeli consulate in New York and was minister for information at the embassy in Washington.

Arad was appointed a deputy director-general of the Foreign Ministry in 1976. He headed the director-general's office and then was made general supervisor of the ministry's activities in Israel and abroad.

Arad was appointed ambassador to Mexico in 1983.

The daily Haaretz reported earlier that Shamir rejected a long list of Peres' candidates for the ambassadorial post, including Arad.

Analyst Sees Early Peak For Gas Prices

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The average pump price of gasoline may soon reach $1 a gallon, but the retail price should peak this month rather than at the end of the summer driving season, as it normally does, an analyst says.

Wholesale price increases have moderated, after jumping an average of a penny a gallon in the two weeks since Americans started hitting the road for their summer vacations, said Trilby Lundberg, president of the Lundberg Survey.

The average price for all grades of gasoline, including taxes, was 98.7 cents a gallon for the two weeks ending Friday, Ms. Lundberg said.

That was up 1.15 cent a gallon from the price May 22, the eve of the Memorial Day weekend, when Americans traditionally hit the road for summer trips, but down 25 cents a gallon from the price June 1985.

"It is very likely that American motorists could pay over a dollar a gallon on average this year," Ms. Lundberg said Sunday. But she also noted that wholesale price increases have moderated, and suggested that prices might peak this month.

Many drivers already pay well over a dollar a gallon, particularly the 23 percent who pull up to the full-service islands at gas stations.

The survey, based on checks of 13,000 gas stations nationwide, calculated the following average prices, including all taxes:

For self-service; regular leaded, 87.21 cents a gallon; regular unleaded 91.18 cents a gallon; premium unleaded, $1.0432 a gallon. For full-service; regular leaded, $1.1329 a gallon; regular unleaded, $1.1761 a gallon; premium unleaded, $1.2719 a gallon.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ
Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠73 ♥AQ872 ♦954 ♣654
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 ♠ Pass 1 NT Pass
2 ♣ Dbl Pass ?
What action do you take?
A.—Is partner's double for penalties or takeout? Had he wanted you to bid, he would have doubled the one spade opening. Since he did not do that, his double this time is for penalties. Pass happily. With what you can contribute to the defense, you can expect a whopping penalty.
Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠6 ♥A8752 ♦AQ95 ♣J108
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♠ 2 ♣ ?
What action do you take?
A.—Because of a potential misfit, it is by no means certain that your side can make game. You can turn the spade shortage to your advantage by making a penalty double. On a good day, that will earn you a bonanza. At worst, it won't be too costly even if the opponents make their doubled contract, since you won't have doubled them into game.
Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AK98 ♥7 ♦Q1072 ♣AQJ9
What is your opening bid?
A.—Despite the discrepancy in the quality of your minor suits, the correct opening bid is one diamond—the suit below the singleton. That preserves bidding space, and gives you the best chance of assuring that you don't miss a fit.
Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

1 ♥ 2 ♦ ?
What do you bid now?
A.—With an ace, a king and a ruffing value, you must do something, but you cannot afford to bid three clubs since that would create a game force. Whether or not you play five-card majors, you have only one choice—a raise to two hearts.
Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K95 ♥AJ6 ♦93 ♣AQJ72
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♠ Pass 2 NT Pass
What do you bid now?
A.—For shame, thinking we're trying to trap you. This is really no problem. Your combined holding isn't enough for slam, even if partner is maximum, and your hand is balanced. Therefore, three no trump is the only bid that should be considered.
Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AJ1054 ♥Q987 ♦7 ♣K94
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
Pass Pass 1 ♥ Pass
What do you bid now?
A.—This is not a question of whether you should bid three or four hearts. As a passed hand, even four hearts may not be enough. In view of the fit, your hand revalues to a full opening bid, and we suggest a jump shift of two spades. By a passed hand, that is forcing for one round. (For those who employ them, we would also accept a splinter bid of four diamonds)

Bernsen Lands Movie Role

THRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Corbin Bernsen, the actor who plays sharklike divorce lawyer Arnie Becker on "L.A. Law," struggled for years in New York before going home to Los Angeles to land the standout role on the hit NBC show.

So imagine coming back here with a big part in a major movie, "Hello Again," with top stars Shelley Long and Judith Ivey and noted director Frank Perry.

"That's the best! That's the best!" Bernsen exclaimed, clinching his fists and interrupting for the moment his laid-back status on the sofa. "On the plane back here I was going, 'I'm gonna shove it to this person, and I'm gonna shove it to that person, and I'm gonna tell them what I think.'"

When it came down to it, though, he admitted he couldn't "shove it" to anyone, though he said he was still lying in wait for a couple of unidentified unfortunates who had never even let him in the door, believing rumors he was "cold and calculating."

"Because I'm a lot of things, but I'm not those things," he said, "and those people I can't wait to see."

When not licking his chops over the prospect of meeting up with persons who slighted him in leaner years, Bernsen comes off more as earnest and unassuming than cold and calculating.

Though he had his pick of movie roles, he says he chose a part not too removed from his TV self, because that's what he thinks people expect to see. He describes the movie character, a plastic surgeon, as "to medicine what Becker is to law."

He talks eagerly about his continuing efforts to write — he has a master's degree in play writing from UCLA — and how he likes the writing style on "L.A. Law," which he finds reminiscent of his favorite play, Murray Schisgal's two-character, black comedy, "The Tiger."

In his six years in New York, he took acting lessons and did some work on stage. He even built a theater in a loft for his acting school.

'Les Miserables' Wins Eight Tonys

By MARY CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — "Les Miserables" was the big Tony Awards winner, taking eight of Broadway's top honors, including best musical, as "Fences," August Wilson's drama of a 1950s black family, won best play and three other Tonys.

"Me and My Girl" won three Tonys on Sunday, for Robert Lindsay and Maryann Plunkett as best actor and actress in a musical, and for choreographer Gillian Gregory. Lindsay plays a Cockney scamp who discovers he's a lord, in a pre-World War II London musical finally making its debut on Broadway.

"Les Miserables," also an import from London, yielded Tonys for Alain Boublil and Claude-Michel Schonberg, who in 1979 in Paris came up with the idea of turning Victor Hugo's epic novel of social injustice into a musical. They won for best book of a musical and they and Herbert Kretzmer won best score.

Michael Maguire and Frances Ruffelle took best featured actor and actress in a musical; Trevor Nunn and John Caird won for direction, and David Hersey for lighting, all for "Les Miserables."

The 41st annual awards, nationally televised on CBS and including a tribute to the late Robert Preston, capped a season in which Broadway reversed a five-year decline in attendance.

John Napier won the Tony for costume design, the only award garnered by the $8 million musical "Starlight Express," which has rollerskaters garbed as engines and cars, for a train race.

Napier, who also designed the "Starlight Express" scenery, took a second Tony for his "Les Miserables" set as though it were an insult.

He said in his second acceptance speech: "One is not supposed to feel things. But it seems a little peculiar to me that 'Starlight' wasn't nominated (for set). I'd give this back to you but it would be a little rude."

Resonant-voiced James Earl Jones won the best actor Tony for his role as a former baseball player and head of a family in "Fences," the Pulitzer Prize-winning play. Mary Alice, who plays his wife, won for best supporting actress, and Lloyd Richards for director.

While playwright Wilson was accepting the best-play Tony, "Fences" producer Carole Shorenstein Hays, in a maternity evening gown, suddenly looked perturbed. "I think I'm going to give birth right now," she said.

John Randolph, accepting the Tony for best featured actor for playing the grandfather in Neil Simon's "Broadway Bound," said the character "represents those of us past 70 who are full of life and fighting spirit, no matter what the body looks like on the outside."

Linda Lavin, who plays the mother of the budding playwright in "Broadway Bound," won her first Tony, as best actress. "I thought of nothing else for two months," she said of her anticipation. "I missed entrances and exits."

Arthur Miller's "All My Sons," starring Richard Kiley, won best revival.

The evening's emotional highlight was the presentation of a special award to director George Abbott, who turns 100 on June 25.

"I am really ashamed at all the fuss that's being made over my birthday," he said. "I didn't plan it. But I'm glad I lasted so long. I tell people it's because I love the theater so much that I thought I'd stick around."

Also receiving a special Tony was comedian Jackie Mason, whose one-man show, "The World According to Me!" was a surprise Broadway hit.
