Greenville's Air Service To Broaden

Piedmont Has London Route

By CLAY DEANHARDT

As of Monday, for the first time ever, Greenville area residents can leave from the Pitt-Greenville Airport and arrive in London with only one layover.

That layover is in Charlotte, where a connection can be made with a daily flight to Gatwick Airport in London. The new flight is to be offered by Piedmont Airlines.

Don McGuire, public affairs spokesman for Piedmont, said the company is excited about the future of the London flights. "The more you think about this the more you realize what the ramifications can be (of the flight)," he said.

He said the new London gateway should change people's way of thinking in North Carolina and increase business ties between the state and England.

"There are now about 150 businesses in North Carolina with ties to England, which is about the same number there were in Georgia before they got the international gateway. Today there are 600,000 people employed by 500 firms (in Georgia) with ties to London," he said.

He also said the new route would provide better opportunities to export. "We manufacture many things in North Carolina that we can sell there," he explained.

McGuire said the first three inaugural flights of the service were sold out and that bookings were ahead of schedule. With only one of the 211 Charlotte-based Pied-

American Set For Opening

American Eagle is cleared for landing at Pitt-Greenville Airport, according to airport officials, who say the facility is ready for the commuter airline service scheduled to begin Monday.

"As far as we're concerned ... we're ready, we've been ready," James G. Turcotte, airport manager, said.

American Eagle, which has scheduled six incoming and six outgoing daily flights to American's new hub at Raleigh-Durham Airport, has been making preparations for the initial flights, according to Turcotte, who said about four or five American Eagle employees will be working at PGA.

"American has come in and commenced leasehold improvements to the area that they are leasing and utilizing for ticket counter and office space," he said.

American Eagle service will help regionalize Pitt-Greenville Airport operations, Turcotte said.

"We know with American coming in and servicing only Greenville and Pitt County in the east that their service area will be extremely large," he said. "For example, with Piedmont (commuter airlines) passengers can fly from Pitt-Greenville, Kinston, Rocky Mount, New Bern or Jacksonville."

"With American, passengers will either fly Pitt-Greenville or drive to Raleigh."

John Paul Draws Communists' 'Concern' Over Union Praise

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Two ranking Communist Party officials met with Pope John Paul II in Poland's holiest shrine Saturday and expressed concern about his vocal support for the outlawed Solidarity union, a church official said.

Kazimierz Barcikowski and Stanislaw Ciosek met with the Polish-born pontiff at the chapel of the Black Madonna in Czestochowa, a shrine spokesman, the Rev. Jerzy Tomzinski, told The Associated Press in a telephone interview.

"They (the communist officials) expressed their concern" about the tone of the pope's speeches during his week-long visit to Poland, Tomzinski said.

But he said the pope's remarks, including praise of the Solidarity union movement, were "only expressions of the church's social teaching."

Barcikowski is a member of the Communist Party Politburo and a top aide to Poland's Communist leader Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski. Ciosek is a Communist Party Central Committee secretary and the former labor minister who negotiated with Solidarity during its existence in 1980-81.

The Roman Catholic pontiff ends his third visit to Poland as pope on Sunday.

John Paul returned to Warsaw Saturday night for a rousing recpeption from more than 2,000 artists and intellectuals. Many had been involved with Solidarity, the only independent labor union in the Soviet bloc until it was outlawed in 1982.

"We offer you, holy father, our hearts beating in solidarity," Andrzej Lapicki, actor and rector of the Theater Academy in Warsaw, told the applauding crowd in the capital's Holy Cross church.

"Work is threatened when the freedom of man is not allowed to function correctly," the white-robed pontiff told the crowd in his speech, which was followed by more than five minutes of rhythmic clapping.

The church, where the heart of 19th century Polish composer Frederic Chopin is enshrined, is regarded as the main church for Warsaw's intellectuals.

Others attending the meeting included Bronislaw Geremek, historian and Solidarity adviser; Warsaw Solidarity leader Wiktor Kulerski; award-winning filmmaker Andrzej Wajda, lawyers who defended Solidarity activists in court, and the chairmen of several cultural associa-

Graduates Focus On Achievements, Future Hopes

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

Over 800 Pitt County students reached a milestone in their lives Friday — receiving diplomas at high school graduation exercises throughout the county.

Rose High School's graduation was held in Minges Coliseum. The other four commencement ceremonies were held on the athletic fields of the respective high schools at 8 p.m.

Graduation speakers from the five county high schools focused on the seniors' past accomplishments and their future challenges.

At Ayden-Grifton High School's commencement, speaker Melissa Rose told the graduates, "Each of us has a different perception of what the future holds. We have many decisions to make regarding our lives. No matter which role we choose, each will be of equal importance. From the president of the United States to the homemaker, everyone makes a difference.

"We have had many influences in our lifetimes, each having a distinct effect on our perception of the future. ... This guidance and tender loving care has directed us toward many doors of opportunity," she continued. "We shall try to prove to you that your efforts have not been in vain.

"We are not perfect, nor can we change the world overnight. These two factors alone create a lifelong challenge for us," Miss Rose said.

Ayden-Grifton speaker Mike Shafer asked the graduates, "What have we learned these past four years? Of course, we have learned from our classes — the math, the science, the English, and so forth. But have we learned anything else? Have we learned anything about ourselves? About others? About life? Yes, I believe we have."

Shafer noted that the graduating students have learned "values that will help us succeed in life," such as hard work and dedication, communication and friendship.

D.H. Conley High School valedictorian Brian Joyner, recalling high school experiences, said, "We have gained knowledge, matured and defined our values. We have made new friendships and strengthened old ones. Together, we have experienced the joys of happiness and the sadness of disasters. ... The whole of our high school experience will soon become the past which we will cherish while we set our goals and focus on our future.

"As our lives move onward, there are two challenges which each of us will face everyday," Joyner said. "Those challenges, the challenges for the individual, are to maintain our identities and to strive to reach our fullest potential.

"As we all go our separate ways in the years to follow, we will have our share of problems. But, as long as we face the challenges of maintaining our identities and realizing our potentials, success and happiness will surely accompany us along life's journey," he said.

The challenge to contribute to society was the topic of a speech made by Conley salutatorian Amy Verreault.

She said, "Society has given a lot to all of us. It has shaped the way we see ourselves, others, and the world as a whole. And now we can give something back — pay our debt, so to speak. We can give to society in two ways: through our work and through our charitable efforts."

Valedictorian David McKnight told the graduates at Farmville Central High School, "After tonight, I wish for all of you to take full advantage of the freedoms and rights that have been ensured to you in our nation's Constitution.

"It is the Class of 1987's duty to become concerned, productive members of American society," McKnight said. "This duty is one that you can carry out regardless of your race, sex or social class. The nation is dependent on you to continue its democratic tradition."

"What makes this night so special is that it is the last achievement we will share as a class," said Farmville Central salutatorian Tracey Walston. "From this night forward our achievements must be as individuals.

"Graduation is ony a small step in the right direction," she said. "By having overcome the trials of high school, we realize that we have the ability to conquer the challenge — our challenge to ourselves."

She continued, "The world, with its many opportunities, is available to us, but these opportunities are not handed to us on a silver platter. They must be earned by hard work and determination. We then have the reponsibility to ourselves to make the most of each opportunity we are granted."

Valedictorian Lisa Polard told North Pitt High School graduates, "People differ from one another in the quality rather than in the quantity of life. It is true, some people are granted more years than others but, after all, the number of years is not so important."

She encouraged the graduates to live their life to its fullest potential. "Each new life experience is a multiple of those from our past, not merely an addition to them," she said.

"Each memory of each significant moment, day or week of our lives should help us to realize that we have lived, not so many days, not so many years, but we have made our lives significant to others and to ourselves through so much work and love and struggle and joy and heartache," she said.

North Pitt salutatorian Kelly Noble wished for the graduates "things that are not overwhelming or earth-shattering individually, but taken

Former Justice Brock Is Dead

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Walter E. Brock, a former N.C. Supreme Court justice and chief judge of the N.C. Court of Appeals, died Saturday at North Carolina Memorial Hospital. He was 71.

Brock died at 12:05 a.m. Saturday in the coronary care unit at the hospital, a hospital spokesman said.

Brock, of Raleigh, was one of the original six members when the appeals court was formed in 1967 and was designated its chief judge in 1973. He served until elected to the Supreme Court in 1978.

After being hospitalized twice for heart-related problems, Brock retired as an N.C. Supreme Court justice in 1980 serving only two years of his eight-year term. Funeral services will be held 3 p.m. Monday at the Church of the Good Shepherd. Burial will be at Raleigh Memorial Park.

A native of Wadesboro in Anson County, Brock earned his undergraduate in 1941 from the University of North Carolina and his law degree in 1947.

He began practicing law in Wadesboro in 1947 and served as an Anson County Criminal Court judge from 1952 to 1954. He was also a state superior court judge from 1963 to 1967. Brock rarely missed casting his ballot during elections. While a patient at Rex Hospital in 1980, his wife drove him to the polls after he missed the filing deadline by one day for casting an absentee ballot.

Even his brother Alex K. Brock, executive secretary of the N.C. Board of Elections and state election director, told the Wake Board of Elections it could not issue an absentee ballot after the deadline.

Walter Brock won election to the Supreme Court after a close Democratic primary that required an audit of the returns. Described at the time as the closest statewide race in history, he defeated Judge Robert M. Martin of the Appeals Court for the nomination by only a 1,029 vote difference out of more than 500,000 votes cast.

A U.S. Army Air Corps veteran, he was a retired lieutenant colonel in the U.S. Air Force Reserve.

Survivors include his wife, Mrs. Sarah C. Brock; three daughters, Mrs. Elaine B. Rogers of Morganton, Mrs. Fran B. Moore of Lexington and Mrs. Beth B. Lovette of Winston-Salem; a son, Walter E. Brock Jr. of Raleigh; three sisters, Mrs. Mary Helen B. Thompson of Chatham, Va., Mrs. Elizabeth B. Poole of Raleigh and Mrs. Fody B. Duline of Orlando, Fla.; a brother, Alex K. Brock of Raleigh; and seven grandchildren.

Pope Is Cautioned

Martial law was imposed in December 1981 and Solidarity was suspended. It had been formed during nationwide strikes in August 1980. Solidarity subsequently was outlawed and martial law lifted, replaced by strict new measures.

The crowd at the Holy Cross church held up a red-and-white Solidarity banner and unfurled another saying "Warsaw Publishers in Solidarity with You in Truth and Hope." Later, the pope retired for the night.

In Czestochowa, Barcikowski and Ciosek had come out of the Black Madonna chapel seconds before the pontiff emerged. Also attending the meeting were Vatican Secretary of State Cardinal Agostino Casaroli and Polish Primate Cardinal Jozef Glemp, church sources said.

Asked whether the officials had warned the pope to tone down his speeches, government spokesman Jerzy Urban told reporters: "I have nothing to say." Asked if he thought such reports would affect the pontiff's trip, Urban replied: "I don't think so."

Church sources said the officials also might have asked the pope to meet again with Jaruzelski. The pope and the Polish leader were not scheduled to meet again before the pope's departure.

The pope planned to make an unofficial visit Sunday to the grave of the Rev. Jerzy Popieluszko, a pro-Solidarity priest who was abducted and murdered by secret police agents in 1984.

The grave has become a rallying point for members of the political opposition.

In Lodz on Saturday, the pope visited Poland's largest textile mill, telling about 500 of the factory's mainly female workers exploitation of women laborers hurts the family. The factory was once a hotbed of Solidarity.

Also Saturday, Warsaw opposition activists said the a letter to the pope signed by 12,000 factory workers called for the right to form free trade unions.

Police released 32 people detained in Friday's clash between marching Solidarity supporters and police after the pope's open-air Mass in Gdansk, the director of Solidarity's legal aid committee said.

Zbigniew Romaszewski said some were fined $200 — equal to two month's average pay.

Police swinging clubs and sticks had injured at least a dozen people when they charged into several thousand demonstrators marching toward a workers' monument. During the Mass in Gdansk for an estimated one million people, the pope had praised Solidarity, which was created in Gdansk in 1980 and where Solidarity founder Lech Walesa lives.

At the Uniontex plant in Lodz, the pope told women workers he was concerned that many "still work all three shifts, so also at night, which contributes to the development of occupational diseases.

"It also has an impact on the growth in the number of broken marriages," he said. "Due to this, many women are forced to bring up their children alone and care for their material existence."

The Uniontex work force is made up in large part by unskilled women from the nearby countryside.

John Paul said that in recent years, Poland was swept "by the great solidary calling to which women, including women textile workers in Lodz, made their great contribution for respecting the dignity of man."

While the pontiff did not use the word solidarity, he was referrring to the labor federation. The word "solidary" is defined as characterized by or manifesting a community of interests and responsibilities.

During 1980 and 1981, many of the 6,000 workers at Uniontex took part in Solidarity marches protesting food shortages.

After Solidarity was outlawed, many Uniontex workers were shifted to other factories and the plant's work force lost its radical edge.

Ward System

FREMONT, N.C. (AP) — The Fremont Town Board has approved a newly introduced ward election system which enlarges the town board from five to six members and elects all members from single-member districts rather than at-large.

This was done despite a letter from Jack Holtzman of Eastern Carolina Legal Services which objected to the board's election plan. The approved plan was the fifth plan introduced to the town aldermen.

All five plans introduced to the board, town attorney Jean Werner said, were acceptable under the Voting Rights Act of 1965. The chosen plan must now be cleared by the U.S. Justice Department before implementation.

Nuns Protect Church

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Dozens of nuns holding pink flowers and singing hymns guarded the Roman Catholic cathedral Saturday to prevent a government attack on students holding the complex. In nearby streets, riot police tear gassed thousands of sympathizers.

"Down with the military dictatorship!," protesters yelled as fighting swirled around the downtown district for a fourth day.

SHARING MEMORIES

A "visitation" or "wake", or what others refer to as "calling hours," is a practice which allows family and friends — in the presence of the viewable body — to express together their feelings about the deceased.

This sharing experience is nearly always important to the survivors. When the survivors do not share their grief, they face their grief alone. When they share their grief, "one touch of sorrow makes the whole world kin."

Of course the survivors should have the opportunity to express their own emotions, in their own way. At the same time, it can be very enlightening and helpful for the family to hear what the deceased has meant to others. The visitation seems to provide a proper setting and climate for such sharing, a setting and climate which generally does not exist in any other way at any other time.

Doctorate Authorized

Dr. Seymour Bakerman, chairman of the pathology department of the East Carolina University School of Medicine, has expressed delight that the University of North Carolina Board of Governors approved ECU's bid to offer a doctorate in pathology.

He said the pathology Ph.D. program has been several years in the planning. Pathology now joins pharmacology, biochemistry, physiology, anatomy and microbiology as the programs within the ECU School of Medicine which are approved to offer Ph.D.'s.

"You could say," he said, "that this program is very important as a Ph.D.-offering one in that it is a bridge between the basic sciences and the clinical graduate programs. The pathologist studies the mechanisms of disease, how it works on human tissue. Pathology deals both with basic science and service to people. We will be training people both to teach and to do research into the effects of disease."

He said he believes the program will begin during the coming school year.

Garner Wholesale Rents P&G Space

Garner Wholesale Merchandisers Inc. of Greenville, which recently merged with Richfood Inc. of Richmond, Va., has rented 70,000 feet of storage from Procter & Gamble at its plant in the industrial park, north of Greenville, a company official said.

"We're taking over all of Richfood business immediately, and to meet temporary needs in terms of space, we have rented 70,000 feet of space from them," Griff Garner, president of Garner Wholesalers, said.

"We can't handle it all in our current facility."

Garner Wholesalers is a non-foods distributor which has been located in Greenville since 1951. Richfood is a retailer-owned food distributor serving more than 600 independent food retailers in North Carolina, Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland, Delaware, and the District of Columbia.

According to the merger agreement, Garner became a subsidiary of Richfood and is expected to continue to do business as Garner Wholesale Merchandisers.

Garner said the company is hoping to have a new facility in operation in Greenville within 18 months.

"We're doing everything we can to locate everything in Greenville," he said. "It was part of the agreement with Richfood."

In addition to Richfood products, Garner distributes about 8,000 general merchandise and health and beauty aid items to more than 1,500 supermarket convenience stores, drug, discount and department stores in North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia, Georgia, Washington, D.C., Maryland, and Delaware. Its 1986 sales amounted to more than $23 million.

Six-Three Method Best Voting Plan

A North Carolina Senate panel's acceptance of a "six-three" election method for Pitt County was a positive step toward progress for the county. It is a step, however, that should and could have been taken earlier in the legislative process.

Pitt's legislative delegation appropriately supported the commissioners recommendation of a six district, three at-large method of election rather than a compromise bill passed by the N.C. House.

Rather than allow a compromise to occur, the delegation should have emphatically backed the commissioners' stance from the beginning, circumventing any concessions. The compromise bill was a weak, confusing election plan and would not have worked to the benefit of the voters.

Firmly supporting the recommendations of the county's elected officials was the correct approach to the issue. Pitt's commissioners are voted into office by a majority of the citizens and are charged with the responsibility of making decisions in the best interest of the entire populace. The legislators were right to strongly uphold the views of this duly-elected board.

Besides, the original six-three plan is the soundest method of election for Pitt County and should be accepted on that basis. By utilizing district voting, it provides for minority representation on the County Commission and gives minorities a tangible voting voice. It also ensures the commission keeps a countywide perspective by including three at-large seats. This approach preserves the integrity of the individual vote and is consistent with the one-man, one-vote concept.

In addition, minority backing of the compromise was shaky. Leaders of the black community said they could "live with" the plan — a statement which hardly resembles a ringing endorsement. Without a stronger stance by minorities, adopting a compromise would be futile.

Charges that the original six-three plan will not pass U.S. Department of Justice scrutiny are inappropriate speculation. The Justice Department's record on approving election plans is ambiguous and defies prediction. Theories on the plan's legality are merely guesswork.

Once the Senate acts on the Election Laws Committee's recommendation, the county's representatives in the House should work with vigor to ensure the House concurs with the Senate bill.

The county's legislative delegation can be satisfied it has acted in the best interest of the citizens of Pitt County by guiding the commissioners' six-three proposal toward fruition.

Court Ruling Needs Limits

A ruling by the United States Supreme Court has municipal planners quaking.

The court ruled that property owners must be compensated when new restrictions are placed on the use of their land which denies the landowner full use.

The ruling applies even though the restrictions may be temporary.

The ruling specifically applied to a church camp in California which burned. Reconstruction was denied.

Where it goes from there is anybody's guess. Does land that is zoned residential restrict individual use? How about preserving highway right-of-way for future acquisition? And what about requiring that billboards be removed? All those questions — and many more — will have to be answered by future court decisions. The best opinion is that the U.S. Supreme Court will narrow the situations in which municipalities can be dunned for damages when use of property is restricted.

Still it is a time for concern for municipalities and counties. If the Supreme court decision were carried to the ultimate then governments could not afford to zone and regulate. Simply requiring setback lines for residences or business buildings could be seen by some as a deprivation of use of property. Requiring greenery or runoff holding ponds in the case of large parking lot developments could be argued as a restraint on the use of the property to make money.

Such broad interpretations would be disastrous for metropolitan planning and likely would halt the process of planning. If that were to occur we would see equally disastrous results for metropolitan areas. There would be a hodge podge of building designed solely to fatten the property owners' pocket books.

The U.S. Supreme Court has thrown urban planning, zoning and regulation into a legal turmoil and it will require years of refining before governmental units can determine how they may proceed under the law. Hopefully the court will not delay in deciding further cases which will limit this recent decision.

Courthouse Provides Bond With Past

Alvin Taylor

Sunday Morning Notes

If there is anything that anchors Greenville it has to be the stately courthouse on the block bordered by Third, Evans, Second and Washington streets.

The building, which still towers over all others in the downtown area, hasn't been there forever; it only seems so. The cornerstone gives its date as 1910.

For years it housed most of the county offices. Pitt County, however has long since outgrown that and now the clerk of court, register of deeds, the sheriffs offices and magistrates are there. The old courthouse is not to be confused with the newer annex on Washington Street which, though it is a logical extension of the old building, architecturally just isn't a part of it.

Our subject here is the three story and basement building with columned portico and the magnificant clock on its soaring roof. It was built with style, as local government buildings once were. Then when the bell in the clock rang local people knew that important legal business was about to take place in its second floor court room.

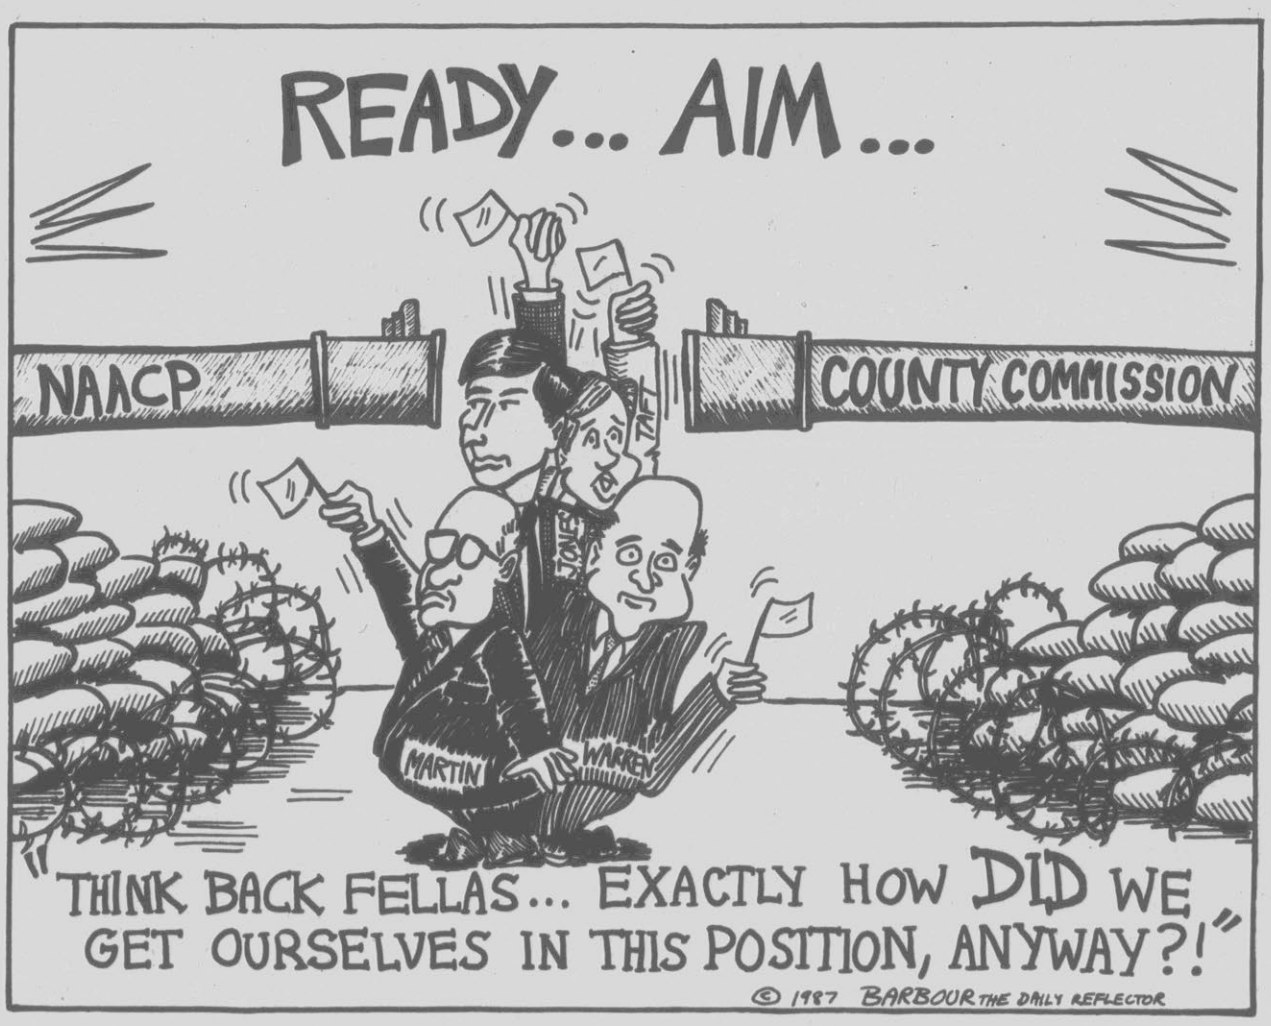
Now the courthouse and its annex have the entire block as a location and the complex doesn't have any space to spare at that. Once, however, the courthouse shared the block with a variety of structures. There were several residences on the block, one dead in the block's center which could only be reached by an alley from Washington Street. There was also the Edwards building, a sometimes occupied office building, the National Guard Armory and St. Peter's Catholic Church.

In addition there was a standpipe just behind the court house which soared higher than the courthouse and contained the town's water supply. Finally there was a separate building where the annex now stands which housed the jail and also provided living quarters for the county sheriff.

All that one one block? It was indeed there. Now it has all disappeared with the county acquiring the property and a good deal more on adjoining blocks.

Both Pitt County and Greenville have changed enormously since the Pitt County courthouse came on the scene. The building, however, has stood majestically through it all forming a bond to the Pitt County of old that is somehow comforting.

There are various monuments on the court house square. One commemorates George Washington's visit. There is the Confederate memorial and memorials to World War I, World War II, Korean and Vietnam war dead. Once there was a World War I cannon which was retrieved from the war effort and mounted on the square. Alas, the cannon gave its final salute to World War II when it was sent off as scrap metal to help fight the Nazis.



What Is U.S. Up To In Philippines?

Cody Shearer

WASHINGTON — Since the collapse of peace talks last February between the Aquino government and the National Democractic Front (NDF), the two-decade-long civil war in the Philippines has taken a turn for the worse. In addition to intensified military operations against guerrilla strongholds, right-wing vigilante groups have been formed to assassinate suspected left-wing sympathizers.

Last week Bernabe Buscayno, a former communist guerrilla chief who was brought back into the political system by President Aquino, was wounded during an assassination attempt. In response to vigilante attacks, communist guerrillas have increased their own attacks on police, soldiers and law enforcement officals.

What role, if any, is the United States playing with the Aquino government in fighting the guerrillas?

Former attorney general Ramsey Clark, who returned last week from a fact-finding mission to the Philipines, contends the CIA is deeply involved in assisting Aquino's military operations.

According to Clark, the CIA has been instrumental in overseeing and coordinating the following operations: overflights with heat-measuring cameras to locate and target guerrilla camps; the introduction of U.S. Special Forces advisers; a program to improve the record-keeping ability of the Philippine intelligence services through the use of new computer technology, and the development of political disinformation campaigns.

Clark adds that U.S. officials were present at peace talks in Lanao del Norte last February, even though this violated agreements between the NDF and the Philippine government. It is no secret, he contends, that U.S. policymakers were against the cease-fire and the peace talks.

Moreover, in February, Clark says the CIA sponsored the first national conference of anti-communist vigilante groups at the Manila headquarters of the Trade Union Congress of the Philippines, an AFL-CIO affiliate.

One Aquino adviser who monitors right-wing organizations claims that one such group, CAUSA, is being financed by the CIA. "It is never healthy to allow another country to have influence over us to the extent that they can literally dictate to us," the adviser told the Manila Chronicle last March.

In the meantime, if what Clark says is even partly accurate the U.S. seems to be on the wrong foreign-policy track once again. Clearly, such behavior warrants the need for closer congressional scrutiny of the CIA and its possible ties to private organizations that are engaged in covert activities in the Philippines.

Is anyone now willing to deny the power of rock music?

Nearly 4,000 young East Germans were attracted to the sealed Brandenburg Gate between East and West Berlin last week by the British rock group Genesis, which performed only 300 yards away in West Berlin. Many young people had come from cities as far away as Rostock and Dresden just to hear the music, which was blasted through loud speakers into the East.

When the enthusiastic crowd reached police cordons they were ordered to disperse — they didn't. As the police entered the crowd swinging their nightsticks, the young people started chanting "Gorbachev, Gorbachev, Gorbachev," which confused the East German state security officers even more.

William Broadhurst, the little-known Louisiana lawyer who gained national prominence through his friendship with former senator Gary Hart (D-Colo.) is disbanding the law firm he founded in 1978. The 65-lawyer company will spin off its five offices into three separate practices. And Broadhurst's name will not appear on the nameplate of any of the three new firms.

Maggie Is A Hit In Venice

Rowland Evans & Robert Novak

WASHINGTON — Although President Reagan's aides tried to put the best spin on their boss's performance, they could not contain their admiration for a foreign leader: British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher.

On a cameo appearance of nine hours interrupting her re-election campaign, she arrived without full briefing but immediately jumped into debate with her peers. She engaged in spirited and detailed arguments about economic growth, arms control and Mikhail Gorbachev.

What impressed Reagan aides most was that Thatcher came to Venice with just one assistant — in contrast to the vast retinues of the other leaders.

A footnote: The president's aides were sizzling that the congressional Iran-Contra probe chose to put Fawn Hall on the witness stand, televised via CNN back to Venice, during the summit. The White House had hoped the hearings would shut down while Reagan was attending an international conference.

Hugel's Casey Dinner

Max Hugel, friend and confidant of the late CIA director William J. Casey, angered former senator Barry Goldwater and some other old Casey comrades with his $250-a-plate Casey memorial dinner June 22, most of the proceeds to go to Hugel's tax-exempt "Americans for the Reagan Agenda" fund.

Goldwater sent word through his friend, retired Air Force Gen. William Quinn, that he would not attend even though Hugel's invitations to more than 1,000 prominent Americans listed Goldwater as honorary chairman of the dinner. Others among Bill Casey's intelligence community buddies, turned off by Hugel's fund-raising angle, have regretted, including fomer CIA director Richard Helms.

Hugel lasted several months as Casey's deputy director for operations, the clandestine service, before he was eased out in a storm of protest by CIA professionals. But Hugel told us that Mrs. Casey will attend along with at least 750 others — possibly including President Reagan.

Bush's Empty Chair

Vice President George Bush's absence from the Senate rostrum as presiding officer is causing more grumbles than usual in a Senate under intense partisan pressures, with the Democratic majority sometimes riding roughshod over Republican leader Bob Dole.

Bush is privately accused of making things more difficult for the Republican minority by staying away. That was particularly true, say critics, when Dole had trouble getting recognized by Democrats, temporarily presiding over the Senate during the long Republican filibuster on the defense bill.

Dole's supporters claim that Bush's absences are tied to their rivalry for the Republican presidential nomination. The more Bush helps Dole look good as Republican Senate leader, the better Dole will do against Bush in the presidential race.

Volcker More Lucky Than Smart

Lester Thurow

The hyperbolic rhetoric used to describe the role of Paul A. Volcker at the Federal Reserve Board — Czar of the American Money Supply, The Man Who Cured Inflation — should not be confused with reality. Being chairman of the Fed "ain't what it used to be," and "what it used to be" wasn't ever the way it often is portrayed in the financial press.

Legally, the Federal Reserve is in charge of determining the American money supply. But with the development of a world capital market, "the American money supply" has ceased to exist. The reality is a world money supply of which the dollar is only one part.

One can do business in the United States using German marks, Japanese yen or any other convertible currency. One can borrow Eurodollars in London that are not subject to the controls of the Fed. You and I can do a deal in the Bahamas without either of us being there. Real interest rates are more affected by Japanese decisions about whether to lend in American capital markets than they are by the actions of the Federal Reserve chairman.

Rather than being the czar of the American money supply, the Fed chairman is at best a leader of a team of central bankers who determine the world's money supply. But the chairman of the Fed is not at his best.

With the U.S. having become the world's largest net debtor nation, it is not at all clear that the Fed chairman is first among equals. The first among equals, if he chooses so to be, is the central banker who represents the nation that is the world's largest net lender and that is Japan. As all of us have learned in our own personal dealings, borrowers always hold a subsidiary position to lenders.

Moreover, given a little-known quirk in American banking regulations, the Fed chairman is not even the leader of the American team in determining the world's money supply. By law, the U.S. Treasury determines all American decisions to manage the money supply by buying and selling currencies. The Fed is merely the operating arm of the Treasury when it comes to international maneuvers.

The Treasury also conducts all international financial negotiations. Internationally, the Fed has no independent powers of action. It must follow the instructions of the Treasury and ultimately the policies of the president.

Yet the power to buy or sell currencies is the power to control the number of dollars issued by the Fed. If the Treasury orders the Fed to sell dollars, the world's supply of dollars increases. If the Treasury orders the Fed to buy dollars, the world's supply of dollars contracts.

Because of the importance of international capital markets, the Fed essentially has lost its importance. It retains the legal ability to control the domestic money supply, but there is no domestic money supply that can be isolated from the international money supply. The regulations remain, but what is to be regulated has disappeared.

Even in the past, the Fed's independent powers were limited. The Fed has preserved its legal independence from the executive arm of the president by never using its independence when an incumbent administration knew what it wanted and was determined to get what it wanted.

The Fed's only independence comes when the administration doesn't know what it wants. When the Carter administration wanted restrictions on credit cards in 1980, it got them even though the Fed did not agree with the action.

Occasionally, the president and the Fed chairman have played out an elaborate charade where the president pretends to be opposed to some Federal Reserve policy so that it can take the political blame for what the president knows must be done (President Johnson played out such charades several times during the Vietnam War), but I am aware of no instance in post-World War II history where the Fed chairman ever defied a determined president. If they ever did, they wouldn't long have their jobs and the Fed wouldn't long be independent.

Despite the rhetoric and praise, Volcker did not cure inflation. The rate of inflation fell because the prices of energy and farm products started to fall and because the Reagan administration was willing to tolerate a very severe recession in 1981-82 that forced labor to accept much lower wage gains.

In 1980, the price of energy rose 31 percent in the consumer price index; in 1986 it fell 13 percent. In 1980, the price of food rose 12 percent; in 1986 it fell 5 percent. None of this was caused by anything done at the Federal Reserve. Put a 31 percent increase in energy prices and a 12 percent increase in food prices back into the economy and no one doubts that inflation would be back up to double-digit levels.

It is not clear whether Volcker jumped or was pushed off the bridge of the Fed, but to go down in history as the man that "cured" inflation, there never was a better time to jump.

With a falling dollar and a stagnant world economy, the United States can cure its balance of payments problems only by having inflation. The price of imports must go up to the point that Americans cease buying $170 billion of imports. Toyotas must be priced like Mercedes and Mercedes must be priced like MX missiles.

The best that the Fed can hope to do is to keep import prices from spreading to domestic wages or prices. Expected inflation rates for 1987 are more than double those measured in 1986, and 1988 is expected to be still worse. When it comes to curing inflation, Volcker has been more lucky than smart, but then there is nothing quite so good as good luck to make one look like a genius.

To the editor:

I think it is wonderful that, out of something as negative as the grandfather issue, something positive has come. The positive outcome I speak of is CEEEPCO — Citizens for Excellence and Equity in Education in Pitt County. This is an organization which offers an opportunity for city and county parents and educators to work together in positive ways to improve public education in Pitt County.

I would hope that all those from both the city and county who have, in the past several months, cared enough for our children and our schools to attend the meetings, write letters and discuss the issues, would go that one step further and attend the group's first organizaional meeting. It will be held at 8 p.m. Thursday, June 18, at St. James United Methodist Church in Greenville.

Anyone who would like more information about the organization may write to CEEEPO, 307 Kenilworth Drive, Greenville, 27858, or call me at 752-8281.

To the editor:

Senator Proxmire periodically gives a "Golden Fleece" Award to the governmental agency that grossly misuses the taxpayers' money. In that same spirit, I am establishing an award for the local governmental body that grossly wastes our money.

The very first winner of the "Golden Flush" Award is Parks/Recreation and Greenville Utilities for their innovative use of $250,000 for a sewer line when a $25,000 septic tank would have sufficed at River Park North. It isn't fair for GUCO to get all the glory for this idea since they wouldn't have installed sewer service unless Parks/Recreation asked for it.

Honorable mention for the "Golden Flush" Award goes to Eddie West and the County Board of Education for paying him the highest supplement in the state ($30,000). We taxpayers realize how hard it is to make ends meet on a $60,000 salary. A school like Sadie Saulter could be air-conditioned each year for the cost of his supplement alone. Now which is more important?

Currently the front runner for the next "Golden Flush" Award is our City Council. They are having a hard time deciding what to do with the garbage tax. Hopefully this year they will heed the wishes of the people and send this ridiculous idea to its final resting place at the landfill. If not, then "Look out, here comes the Golden Flush again!"

From Dominance To Partnership

Abraham Lowenthal

The Iran-Contra hearings have focused on whether U.S. government officials and private citizens violated this country's laws in their efforts to carry out what they took to be national policy toward Iran and Nicaragua.

This is obviously a significant question. The chances of reestablishing a bipartisan foreign policy depend on restoring congressional trust in the administration as well as public faith in the integrity of senior officials. This restoration of trust in turn may depend at least in part on establishing clearly who did what and on whose authorization, if any.

But it is important not to become so concerned with the issues of responsibility and credibility as to lose sight of even more basic questions. Last week's testimony by Assistant Secretary of State Elliott Abrams, for example, provoked extended colloquies regarding exactly what Abrams told various congressional committees and what his motives were.

What has thus far escaped much discussion, however, has been what Abrams' testimony showed about the prevailing attitudes of senior U.S. officials. Even if one were to assume that Abrams' testimony was entirely candid and truthful, it was extraordinarily revealing.

Abrams said, for instance, that it had not occurred to him that the permission of the Costa Rican government might be required for the establishment on Costa Rican territory of a military airstrip to be used to launch attacks against Nicaragua. Abrams also admitted that when he presented an appeal to a representative of the government of Brunei for a $10 million contribution by that government to the Contra insurgents, he had not thought to ask himself what the government of Brunei would obtain in exchange for the proposed donation.

This testimony, glossed over because it does not illustrate illegal conduct, speaks volumes about Abrams' basic attitudes. Imagine these two events occurring in reverse. Is it conceivable that a foreign government would plan, finance and construct a military airstrip within the territory of the United States, to be used for attacks on a neighbor of this country, without considering this a matter in which the U.S. government would take a major interest? Is it imaginable, even for the most imaginative of us, that a foreign official would ask for a $10 million contribution from the U.S. government without arguing that such a contribution would be in this country's vital interest?

The plain truth is that many senior officials of the Reagan administration have been so committed to the Contra policy that they have abandoned their critical faculties in its pursuit. A Harvard Law School graduate who would surely not imagine that an airport could be built in suburban Virginia without governmental approval assumes that a clandestine airstrip could be set up in Costa Rica without that government's permission. A senior State Department official could ask the representative of a foreign government to commit funds to support U.S. policy without bothering to ask himself whether such a commitment would be in the foreign government's interest.

Reagan Wants A Deal

Bryan Brumley

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Ronald Reagan who is willing to do business with the Soviet Union on arms control showed he is still the Ronald Reagan who is willing to say things that will make the Soviets angry.

Reagan, in a speech to commemorate his appearance today at the Berlin Wall, challenged Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev to extend his reform campaign to the barricade erected by the Russians to prevent East Germans from fleeing west.

"General Secretary Gorbachev, if you seek peace, if you seek prosperity for the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe, if you seek liberalization: come here to this gate!"

"Mr. Gorbachev, open this gate!"

"Mr. Gorbachev, tear down this wall!"

The speech, which Reagan said was for broadcast in East and West Europe, came three days after thousands of East Berliners clashed with police at the barrier, shouting, "The Wall Must Go!"

The demonstrators were angry because a crowd had been chased away from a street on the east side of the wall where they had gathered to hear a weekend rock concert in West Berlin.

The speech also came only days after White House aides said a summit meeting was possible by the end of the year whether or not the superpowers conclude an agreement to remove medium-range nuclear weapons from Europe.

Reagan's remarks probably will not endanger the agreement, or the possible summit. But they could only fuel East German resentment against the wall, and they appeared intended to draw Western European attention to the continued Soviet occupation of the nations of Eastern Europe.

Recent polls in West Germany and Britain show a majority consider Gorbachev more sincere than Reagan in seeking world peace.

"Behind me stands a wall that encircles the free sectors of this city, part of vast system of barriers that divides the entire continent of Europe," Reagan said in his speech.

"The gash of barbed wire," the checkpoints and the guard dogs, Reagan said, are "an instrument to impose on ordinary men and women the will of a totalitarian state."

Leadership And Altered Design Could Help Allied Summit

Robert Hunter

The seven-nation summit meeting of Western industrial powers is an opportunity for heads of state to air, in genteel tones, their grievances against one another. This year there are many such grievances, centering mostly on foreign trade and the efforts that each nation is making to export its troubles. But, like most of its 12 predecessors, next week's summit in Venice is unlikely to produce much of merit. With the state that the world is in, this is a pity.

When these annual summits began, at Rambouillet in 1975, there were hopes of turning them gradually into means for coordinating the domestic economic policies of the key Western countries. The idea was both sensible and ambitious. Only if each nation will accept some discipline over its fiscal and monetary policies can there be any effective joint planning for the global economy, try as finance ministers might to tinker with the system.

As has become all too clear, unless the major industrial nations can develop the political courage to pull together, they will surely pull apart. In theory, each of the seven leaders should take difficult decisions, sharing the pain, and justify them at home by reference to the need for accommodating his and her economic partners.

The summits have rarely worked this way, for foreign and domestic reasons. In the late 1970s the second oil shock, plus hyper-inflation and high interest rates radiating outward from the United States, led leaders to look to their own economic defenses instead of a broader effort that might have been more effective in cushioning the effect of turmoil. And letting any key economic decisions be defined by an international grouping would require great political courage at home.

Nevertheless, the economic summits could be effective if they had leadership. That of the United States has been on a steady decline, and the Reagan administration's attitude hasn't helped with its pursuit of domestic economic policies, come what may, and its low priority on cooperating with other countries. Japan and West Germany, which have grown apace in economic power, have not yet developed the political stomach for a major role in global economic management. Nor is it clear that the United States, which has enjoyed the psychological benefits of leadership, would be pleased if Tokyo and Bonn moved to take over.

It may now be too late for this administration, and difficult even for a successor that is international-minded, to restore U.S. leadership and thus to inject new life into the economic summits. Power has shifted dramatically in this decade, and the Reagan administration has done little to check the tilt. What is characterized as the administration's "unilateralism" may help deal with frustrations about obdurate allies — a "we'll show 'em" attitude — but it cuts no ice in gaining their cooperation.

The United States has tried to broaden the scope of the economic summits to include political and security subjects, while France and Japan have been reluctant to see themselves entangled in such issues in this forum. In the Carter administration, this broadening of scope was designed to organize support in foreign-policy areas where allied help was needed. To the Reagan administration, the foreign-policy aspect is an opportunity to exercise summit leadership — which it won't provide in painful economic decision-making.

In Venice, the shifts in power will be apparent in both economic and security issues. The West German government has just given the United States what it wants on a Euromissile agreement with the Soviet Union. That was predictable. No West German government can take a nuclear decision or oppose the United States on strategic matters. But on the question of West Germany's reflating its economy to help with the U.S. trade deficit, a far more important U.S. goal, President Reagan will gain little more than pieties masking West Germany's silent scorn for U.S. unwillingness to face economic realities.

Nor will the president gain much allied support on the country's new security project of defending neutral shipping in the Persian Gulf. Just as he got mostly lip service from his summit partners last year on the issue of Middle East terrorism, he will get less than he demands this year. The reasoning is the same. Almost without exception, the allies believe that the threat is not that significant, that the United States is overreacting, and that the remedy could be worse than the disease. In both cases — terrorism and the threat to Persian Gulf shipping — the allies are right, but they will be made whipping boys in the United States if they do not accede to the "Washington knows best" attitude.

If the Venice gathering isn't very promising, its successors could be made more effective. What is needed is a return to the original vision of a group that can strengthen the political spines of each leader by their all taking difficult economic decisions for mutual benefit. Also needed is U.S. leadership that sees the summit meetings as tools of policy on common concerns more than public relations. Otherwise they will continue to be little more than what the British call "talking shops."

together as a whole, can bring so much happiness."

She said, "Let us be filled with the will to work with the God-given gifts we possess, work with real value that will enhance our world."

She also said, "I wish for open minds, minds unafraid to travel, to pursue pathways of thought and inquiry that have yet to be explored. The courage to be inventive and innovative is important in that it will allow us to believe that we are capable of ideas that will make a difference to our generation as well as those who shall follow.

She added that she wished for her peers' "patience — to wait for a few good friends, work of real value, a daring mind, an understanding heart, the sight of beautiful things, a sense of humor and a time of leisure — and let us wish for the wisdom to know them when they come and to accept them as they are."

Rose High School graduation speaker Bella Kang said, "We've all heard of the pot of gold that lies at the end of a rainbow. Everyone here has potential to, and hopefully will, achieve the success, as in the pot of gold, using his or her many talents and abilities ... The colors of the rainbow symbolize the elements in life which lead to success."

She said that red represents love; orange stands for peace; yellow for wisdom; green for youth; blue for honor, and purple for integrity.

"The values behind the spectrum are valuable ones which will help us in achieving the pot of gold — the success of the future. We must never give up in our quest for prosperity," she said.

"Each member of this class possesses a wealth of unique gifts upon which he will draw throughout his lifetime," said Rose speaker Jamie Moore. "Each one has truly been blessed with very special gifts, many of which we are still in the process of discovering.

"The many lessons that we have learned over the years go much deeper than merely challenging our academic potential," she said.

She thanked the teachers, parents and friends of her graduating classmates for their assistance.

"Each member of this class has reached a different level in his own life, and our personal aspirations will soon lead us in many different directions, but for my classmates, in whatever you choose to do with your lives, I wish for you the complete realization of the potential hidden deep within," she said.

Rose speaker Adonica Smith said, "Those years of education that we have thus undergone were not to prepare us to end a portion of our lives, but they were to prepare us to begin new lives.

"After this evening, we will greet each other no more as students in our school, but as citizens of the world. Therefore, let us take what we have learned and use it," she said. "We must use it as we meet new challenges; we must use it as we accept new responsibilties and demands; we must use it now and throughout the remainder of our lives."

Film Losses

WILMINGTON (AP) — De Laurentiis Entertainment Group, which runs a production studio in Wilmington, operated at a loss of more than $7.4 million, before taxes, in the fiscal year that ended Feb. 28.

After taxes, the loss totals $7.5 million.

The company is reporting its after-tax loss for the year as $1.036 million, however, because of a $6.5 million profit it made on the sale of newly issued stock in its Australian subsidiary, De Laurentiis Entertainment Limited. De Laurentiis is building a studio in Australia.

The stock sale is a one-time source of income, however, and cannot be counted on to support the studios' continuing operations. DEG's financial summary for the 1986-87 fiscal year shows that the studio generated $70.7 million in income but that its costs and expenses totaled $78.2 million.

DEG says the loss is due to the cost of pictures produced but not yet released.

County Board Receives Plans For Limited Expansion Budget

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Four department heads discussed their proposed expansion budgets with members of the Board of County Commissioners Friday afternoon as commissioners continued work on a list of expenditures for the 1987-1988 fiscal year which begins June 1.

Commissioners, for the first time this year, received two proposed budgets — an operating budget (intended to reflect the cost of operating county government next year at the same level as the current budget, with no new positions, no salary increases, no new or expanded programs and no capital outlay items) totaling $35.55 million, and a supplementary or expansion budget amounting to $6.12 million (which includes a proposed 5 percent pay raise for all county employees and money to expand services and programs).

But County Manager Kramer Jackson, in his budget message to the board last month, pointed out that because $4.68 million included in the supplementary budget has already been committed (such things as school capital outlay money and money to pay for property being purchased by the county) only $1.44 million is available to meet other expansion requests.

Gene Windham, who heads the county's data processing department, told commissioners that his request for $1.5 million for a new computer and software ($495,600 per year over a five-year period if the purchase is financed), which was not recommended for funding by Jackson, must be filled if computer services to the various county departments and agencies are to be expanded.

But Windham acknowledged that the county could save $35,000 if the computer mainframe now being used by Pitt County Memorial Hospital could be purchased for $275,000.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said a request for $24,312 for new equipment, recommended by Jackson in the expansion budget, is his first priority. But Tyson said "new positions" he requested at $124,326 and not recommended for funding, would be his second priority.

John Chaffee, executive director of the development commission, told the board that the $126,200 supplemental budget requests from the development group were made as a first step in implementing recommendations resulting from a study of how to improve the county's industrial recruiting efforts.

While $48,513 was included in the supplemental budget recommendations, $30,000 for a new employee and $43,850 for brochures and advertising were not included.

Development Commission member Bill Clark told commissioners that the $50,000 Fantus study was done "to tell us what to do" in Pitt County to increase our chances to attract new business and industry. "The request that you have in front of you is the end result."

What they had, Clark said, is "a bare-bones request to get the job done. We've got to be more competitive ... more aggressive, to get our share."

Elections board Chairman Nelson Crisp suggested to commissioners that a $360,000 request to purchase new voting machines — which was not recommended by Jackson for funding — would be an investment which would pay for itself over a period of years.

She said ballots for the present vote tabulating machines — bought in 1984 at a cost of about $89,600 and improved at the request of the previous elections board the following year at a cost of about $37,700 — cost about $20,000 a year.

The proposed new machines would not require printed ballots, and, Mrs. Crisp said, "I can't see these ... becoming obsolete in 20 to 30 years."

She suggested that the sale of the present vote tabulators and voting booths (which would not be needed with the new machines) for an estimated $30,000 to $40,000, and the savings realized by not having to have printed ballots, would help offset the cost of the new units.

Commissioners, who took no action at Friday's workshop, have a regular meeting scheduled for 10 a.m. Monday at the county office building at 1717 W. Fifth St.

Included on Monday's agenda is consideration of an occupancy tax ordinance and appointments to various boards and commissions — including the Pitt-Greenville Convention and Visitors Authority which will determine how money from the motel occupancy tax will be spent.

Harassment Suit Filed

Mary Haughn, a teller at First-Citizens Bank and Trust Co.'s Greenville branch, has filed a lawsuit in Wake County Superior Court accusing a bank vice president of sexually harassing her on the job over a three-year period.

According to the complaint filed Thursday, Mrs. Haughn is seeking more than $20,000 in punitive damages for intentional and malicious infliction of mental and emotional distress.

The complaint lists the bank and William C. Glidewell Jr., former manager of the Greenville branch, as defendents.

In the complaint, Mrs. Haughn said Glidewell, now employed at First Citizen's Kinston office, sexually harassed her from 1984 to 1987 and pressured her to stay late after work.

The suit also claims Glidewell tried to force himself on her sexually while they were in the bank's vault on or around Feb. 26.

Glidewell declined to comment on the suit.

Dean's List Recognized

Several local students have been named to the dean's list for the spring semester at North Carolina State University.

To make the dean's list, a student must earn an academic average of 3.25 or higher if they are carrying at least 15 hours of coursework or a 3.5 or better if they are carrying 12 to 14 hours.

Students receiving a perfect A record for the semester are Joseph Rouse of Route 2, Greenville, Dewey Overton of Route 2, Ayden, and William Harding of Route 1, Chocowinity.

Lenses Taken

Officer E.M. Haddock of the Greenville Police Department said reflective lenses were taken from the rear of a vehicle parked at 518 Crestline Drive in an incident reported at 11:05 Saturday.

Haddock estimated the cost of replacing the lenses at $150.

Officer J.G. Bridges said a bicycle valued at $35 was taken from 1700 Evans St. in an incident reported at 11:10 a.m. Saturday.

Fatalities Down

RALEIGH (AP) — Despite an increase in the number of boats on North Carolina's waters, boating fatalities have dropped to the lowest number since the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission began keeping records in 1960.

From 1981 through 1985, the number of boating fatalities in the state varied from 38 in 1981, down to 31 in 1983, then up to 39 in 1985. But in 1986, the number dropped to 23.

The 40 percent decline the number of fatalities may be attributed to several factors — increased awareness of safe boating procedures through volunteer and state boating education programs, the manufacture of safer boats and public compliance with boating safety laws and regulations, the commission said.

Derailment

KINGS MOUNTAIN, N.C. (AP) — At least 11 cars from a Norfolk and Southern Railway train derailed south of this Cleveland County town late Friday afternoon.

A spokesman for Cleveland County Communications said seven cars were completely overturned while at least another four remained upright but surrounded by about a quarter of a mile of damaged track.

The spokesman said there was no word on the cause of the derailment, which occurred around 6:30 p.m. just off N.C. 216 South. Some of the cars were empty, he said, while others were carrying gravel.

There were no injuries, the spokesman said, and no hazardous materials were involved in the derailment although firefighters and rescue squads from the surrounding area were called to the scene.

Tobacco Farmers Again Look To Skies For Help

By THE Associated Press

Much like last year, North Carolina tobacco farmers are looking up to the skies and hoping for a significant rainfall to ease worries that this growing season will be a difficult one.

Dry weather in the last several weeks has caused some fragile plants to flower prematurely. Although that won't affect the crop's quality, it will lead for more work for the farmer.

"Tobacco is suffering, not drastically, but we need some good general rains now across the state," said Carlton Blalock, executive vice president of the Tobacco Growers Association of North Carolina. "If they come, we'll be in good shape."

While the early spring was quite wet, soil moisture in the piedmont and eastern portions of North Carolina has dropped, according to Greg Johnson, an agricultural meteorologist with the N.C. Agricultural Extension Service. Raleigh has the lowest soil moisture with 26 percent.

"When you're getting into the 20 percent range, you're talking about crop stress," Johnson said. "It's pretty dry, (but) so far it hasn't gotten critical."

Tobacco experts said Friday that, sometimes, too little rain actually can strengthen the tobacco plant. Driven by a search for water, the plants put down strong, deep roots that lead to a quality crop. That doesn't mean that the plants don't need water, however.

"If we don't get the rain within the next three to five days, we'll begin to suffer rather severely," Blalock said. "We need some rain."

In Pitt County, the state's largest tobacco producer, farmers are complaining both of premature flowering and an increase in insects, said Mitch Smith, the county's extension tobacco agent.

Smith said that neither problem posed a serious threat to the crop. But he said it did lead to more expense for farmers, who will have to treat their crop with more pesticide and go into the field to de-flower the plants.

Blalock is predicting that this year's tobacco crop could be one of the best ever. He said there could be a slight increase in prices over last year, but that the market could be shaken by the revelation that some tobacco imported by R.J. Reynolds USA carried unacceptable levels of the herbicide dicamba.

He said officials were assuring companies that they would get "good, clean tobacco."

Asian Clam Clogging Lake Pipes

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — As if out of a Grade B horror flick, clams are invading the Carolinas. And almost nothing can stop them.

The freshwater mollusks are the dime-size Asian clam, called corbicula. They were brought to this country around the turn of the century by Chinese immigrants who considered them a delicacy.

The species is infesting lakes and rivers and clogging water pipes in at least 35 states at a cost of more than $1 billion a year for power failures, reductions in efficiency, investment in equipment, labor and chemical control.

"It is taking over the freshwater environments of much of North America," said Rowland Shelley, curator of invertebrates at the N.C. State Museum of Natural Science.

In the Carolinas, the clams inhabit almost every river system and lake. They are particularly common in newly created lakes because the ecosystems are not well-established.

Biologists have found high concentrations of the clams in Catawba River, which forms Lake Wylie and Lake Norman; Roanoke River; Neuse River; and Cape Fear basin. Bill Adams, a biologist with the Army Corps of Engineers in Wilmington, said he has stuck his hand into these waters and pulled out clams "by the zillions."

Scientists have speculated that the clams have spread quickly with the help of ducks and raccoons, which feast on clams and sometimes carry them to other bodies of water. The clams are also popular in some areas as bait, so they can move from lake to lake by way of fishhook.

And because the clams have few natural predators in this part of the world, their growth is limited only by the food supply. The clams are hermaphroditic — it takes just one clam to begin the reproductive cycle, and that one clam can produce 300,000 to 400,000 larvae in temperate waters.

"It's everywhere. I don't know a river system in (North Carolina) that it's not in," Shelley said. "And once it's in there you won't get it out."

That means problems for some businesses and industries near lakes and rivers.

"We're up to our elbows in clams," says an official at Duke Power, which operates steam stations and nuclear plants on lakes and rivers.

The plants take in water for cooling and for generating steam. When the clams started to show up in 1968, Duke spokesman Andy Thompson said, they clogged intake pipes and infiltrated the generating machinery, causing some plants to reduce their power loads until they could de-clam.

The clams, which require more oxygen than other mollusks, are fond of pipes because they provide turbulent water that carries more dissolved gases than normal lake water.

Many Duke plants now have screens over intake pipes to stop clams from entering. The plants routinely back-flush intake pipes to clear the screens. Thompson said the plants will occasionally flush their internal lines and use chlorine to clear out clams that have entered the plant.

At Lake Norman, the clams are eaten by muskrats and other animals, which leave mounds of empty shells.

Pool Where Girl Shot Is Reopened

CHARLOTTE (AP) — The wave pool where a 16-year-old teen-ager was shot and killed and a 6-year-old wounded one week ago reopened Saturday, and officials at Carowinds attempted to ease the fears of their customers.

"I think the public is going to treat this as a very unfortunate accident that really could have happened anywhere," said Garry Bickett, Carowinds marketing director.

Ocean Island was closed this week after Michelle Sexton of York County, S.C., was killed and 6-year-old Ahesha Rollins of Charlotte was wounded, apparently from bullets fired from a nearby makeshift firing range. Patrons of the pool were searched with hand-held metal detectors as they left Sunday, and police partially drained the pool to search for clues in the shooting.

The pool was reopened at 10 a.m. Saturday. But Bickett said crowds were down because the day was cloudy and a light drizzle was falling on the park, which straddles the North Carolina-South Carolina border.

"Conditions today would prevent any sort of comparison," Bickett said.

Southern Baptists Face Showdown Over Control

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Observers say fundamentalists and moderates at odds over interpretation of the Bible won't settle their dispute when the annual meeting of the Southern Baptist Convention opens in St. Louis Tuesday.

Southern Baptists overcame heated conventions in Dallas in 1985 and Atlanta in 1986. Next week's meeting in St. Louis is expected to be the decisive round in a nine-year fight for control of the nation's largest Protestant denomination.

While no formal split is anticipated in the 14.6 million-member body, the battle may be changed for a long time to come.

"This is the watershed convention," said the Rev. Robert Tenery of Morganton, longtime fundamentalist leader, in an interview with The Charlotte Observer. "We have turned it around.

"Even if we lose every vote in St. Louis, the convention will never be the same. The conservative resurgence is going to be a reality for at least the next 20 years."

Fundamentalists, who insist on the literal truth of the Bible, announced a 10-year plan to take over leadership of the SBC in 1979. They have elected eight consecutive presidents and filled vacancies on influential boards with like-minded trustees. Their stated goal is to make belief in an error-free Bible a requirement for thousands of SBC employees.

Moderates, who believe scripture is open to scholarly interpretation, have fought for diversity while denying they allowed liberalism to creep into Southern Baptist teaching.

The SBC Peace Committee, appointed two years ago in Dallas to resolve differences between the two groups, has struggled. Deadlocked at some points and now a month past the deadline for filing its report, the committee will meet Sunday in St. Louis to prepare the final draft.

"The Peace Committee report is not going to resolve the theological issue," said Charlotte lawyer Bill Poe, a committee member. "There is no way to get a consensus on that."

The St. Louis convention is expected to draw 28,000 voting delegates, called messengers. That's down from 41,000 in Atlanta and 45,500 in Dallas. Some say battle fatigue explains the smaller crowd; others blame fundamentalist complacency or moderate resignation.

"A lot of people think the game is over," says Bill Boatwright, communications director for the N.C. Baptist State Convention. "Those who were motivated to go to Dallas or Atlanta to save the convention, one way or the other, aren't going to St. Louis."

Fundamentalists are expected to elect their ninth consecutive president and win a voting majority of trusteeships on the boards of all but one of 20 SBC agencies and schools.

"The word 'inerrancy' will be the acid test," Tenery says. "That means everybody employed by this denomination is going to have to honestly adhere to the Baptist Faith and Message statement that the Bible is truth without any mixture of error."

Moderates, uncomfortable with that agenda, already have begun to regroup.

Some still are working through the SBC political system — challenging the reelection of the Rev. Adrian Rogers of Memphis with their handpicked candidate, the Rev. Richard Jackson of Phoenix.

Others, led by the Rev. Henry Crouch of Charlotte, have organized the Southern Baptist Alliance as a nonpolitical "fellowship group" with its own system for raising money, producing literature and supporting female pastors.

"We have decided not to be political, so we're not running any candidates this year," Crouch said. "We're accepting, in a sense, that the convention is in the hands of the fundamentalists.

"Everybody's tired of the controversy, and it's not going away, so I think we'll just learn to live with it. I think what you'll find is that the moderate churches will become more independent."

IN THE STATE

Suit Filed

WASHINGTON (AP) — A veteran's group and five congressmen, including Sen. Terry Sanford, D-N.C., has filed a lawsuit to prevent the Veteran's Administration from closing nine Vietnam War veteran outreach centers across the nation.

The nine outreach centers, including one in Fayetteville, N.C., are scheduled to close by July 1, and relocate at Veterans Administration hospitals, officials said.

The other centers included in the suit are in Wilmington, Del.; Rochester, N.Y.; Oak Park, Ill.; North Ridge, Calif.; Houston, Texas; Milwaukee, Wisc.; Avon, Mass.; and Sioux Falls, S.D.

The lawsuit, filed in U.S. District Court in Washington, D.C., claims the VA is violating the intent of Congress by closing the centers without congressional consent.

Rates Increasing

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina drivers will pay at least 1 percent more for their auto insurance — and those who have only liability coverage will see much steeper increases — under new rates announced by the state's auto insurers.

The industry said it would implement the rate increase recently approved by state Insurance Commissioner Jim Long, while at the same time asking the state Court of Appeals to overturn Long's rejection of a larger rate hike request.

The new rates approved by Long will take effect July 15. They will increase the cost of overall liability coverage by 14.4 percent. That includes a 13.7 percent hike for bodily injury coverage and a 8.7 percent increase for property damage, which are required by state law.

The increase also includes a 41.5 percent hike for medical payments and a 40.2 percent increase for uninsured motorists, both of which are optional.

The new rates will lower the costs for types of coverage that are not required by law but often are required for new car loans. Physical damage coverage would decrease by 13 percent, including a 17.8 percent drop in comprehensive coverage and an 11.5 percent decrease in collision coverage.

Guilty Pleas

GASTONIA, N.C. (AP) — Twenty-five of the 63 men arrested last month during the city's largest prostitution crackdown have pleaded guilty to soliciting sex from a Gastonia police officer who posed as a prostitute.

None of the men will go to prison on the charges, which were misdemeanors. Instead, District Judge Berlin Carpenter allowed them to pay $40 court costs each and withheld sentencing on the condition they break no laws in the next two years.

Quaker Series

GREENSBORO (AP) — Friends United Meeting, one of the largest international Quaker organizations, has opened a series of summer programs at Guilford College to emphasize Quakerism's diversity.

"Guilford is perceived as a center for thought, writing, research and ministry," said William R. Rogers, Guilford's president. "We're proud of the sort of meeting ground that's provided here. That's been true for a number of years, and is especially illustrated this summer."

The college is celebrating its sequicentennial.

Friends United Meeting is composed of 17 national and regional Quaker bodies that meet annually. This session brings 709 Quaker delegates from North America, Jamaica, Cuba and East Africa to Guilford. The session, which began Friday, runs through June 19 and includes a special program for young people.

Horns Return

BLOWING ROCK, N.C. (AP) — Folks in Blowing Rock just couldn't stand the silence.

After 40 years of sending workers to lunch and kids home from play, officials stopped blowing the fire department horns at noon. Parents had complained that the sound, directed into a park, hurt children's ears.

But less than a week after the last noon blast, residents mounted a petition drive. Town council members restored the noon-hour toll.

It blew again Wednesday.

Loggerheads

GREENSBORO (AP) — Female loggerhead turtles have begun lumbering onto North Carolina beaches, as they have for eons, to lay their eggs in the soft sand at the edge of the dunes.

To help protect the turtles, the 892 acres of Hammock Beach State Park — a prime nesting area near Swansboro — were closed to the public Wednesday through Friday nights, and will close again July 9-11, and Aug. 8-10, so the loggerheads can make their procreative pilgrimage ashore undeterred by the flashlights and fires of summer visitors.

Park superintendent Sam Bland said these dates were chosen because loggerheads, which nest only every two or three years, prefer nights with a full moon and the corresponding high tide.

Find The Fine

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Judge Hiram Ward intended for Terry Lee Smith to pay a fine as part of his sentence on federal drug charges with money that the government seized during a raid on Smith's home in Rural Hall last year.

But Ward learned from U.S. Attorney Douglas Cannon that the U.S. Attorney's office had given it away as part of the Comprehensive Crime Control Act of 1984. Under that act, assets gained through illegal drug activity can be seized by federal agents and distributed to local law enforcement agencies.

The money was divided among law enforcement agencies, some of it to the Winston-Salem Police Department and the Forsyth County Sheriff's Department.

"That's not right," Ward said. "The prosecution of this case cost the United States a lot of money, and I intend to reimburse the treasury of the United States for that $132,000 that was seized to be applied to this fine. I want to see the taxpayer at least partially reimbursed."

Now, the U.S. Attorney's office is trying to figure out how to comply with Ward's order. Richard Robertson, the assistant U.S. attorney in charge of forfeitures said, "It's an order we'll have to carry out."

Birthday Cake

RALEIGH (AP) — A 10-foot, three-tier cake sponsored by the North Carolina Restaurant Association will be baked to help commemorate the 400th Anniversary of the birth of Virginia Dare by the Professional Chefs of the Carolinas.

The cake will be adorned with 13 icing paintings depicting the state flag, seal, tree and bird; Sir Walter Raleigh, several John White drawings of the first colonists, the 400th Anniversary logo and a likeness of Virginia Dare.

Crowning the cake will be a rotating 20-inch portrait of Virginia Dare.

Chefs estimate it will take eight hours to assemble the cake before the anniversary celebration on Aug. 18. The celebration concludes the four-year Quadricentennial Commemoration of Sir Walter Raleigh's Roanoke Voyages of 1585-87.

PTL Files For Reorganization, Faces Cancelation By Stations

By JANET POPE
Associated Press Writer

FORT MILL, S.C. (AP) — While officials of the PTL ministry prepared a reorganization plan for a bankruptcy court, a spokesman for banished evangelist Jim Bakker said Saturday the Bakkers will move out of a PTL-owned home but not by a Monday deadline.

Within hours after PTL filed a bankruptcy petition for protection from creditors, a television station in Fresno, Calif., canceled PTL's programs. The station was one of the top 20 unsecured creditors of the ministry.

The Rev. Jerry Falwell, who took the ministry over from Bakker, said Friday night that he hoped PTL's filing for reorganization would give him time to stop a movement of cable television operators to cancel PTL's air time.

The Chapter 11 petition filed in U.S. Bankruptcy Court in Columbia showed 1,400 creditors are owed $72 million, while assets were listed at $179 million.

The non-profit religious organization's filing in bankruptcy court "is certainly novel," said Stuart Hirshfield, a member of the American Bar Association's bankruptcy committee and the New York law firm of Shea & Gould.

However, Hirshfield said Saturday in an interview from his home, the case poses a potential constitutional conflict of the separation of church and state because a court could be asked to supervise PTL's operations.

Some family and friends of Bakker, PTL's founder, want him to remain at the Christian retreat and television ministry he lost in March after a sex scandal. Bakker and his family returned Wednesday night to a PTL-provided residence in Tega Cay where they had lived for eight years.

Don Hardister, Bakker's security chief, said Saturday that the family will not meet the Monday deadline but definitely will leave and return to the home they own in Palm Springs, Calif.

"I am speaking as their spokesman and I'm telling you we are making steps and progress in this matter. To me it means we will be packing and we will be moving," Hardister said Saturday.

"We'd like to receive some friends and visit some people. So no, there's not a mad dash to start packing boxes," he said, adding that he thinks the Bakkers "are coming to terms with" the fact they have to leave.

The packing and moving, he estimated, would take about a week.

KMSG-TV in Fresno, which specializes in religious broadcasting, was paid $12,000 by PTL for shows aired last October, but is still owed $87,000, station manager James Zahn said Saturday.

The station, he said, had filed a formal demand for payment last month after PTL got six months behind on a contract to pay $10,000-$12,000 a month to have its shows aired locally.

According to PTL's reorganization petition, KMSG is owed $74,971.

"The bankruptcy was the final straw," Zahn said Saturday. "With Chapter 11, Lord knows when that money will be coming — that back pay."

The station had been carrying the "PTL Club" twice each weekday and once on Saturday plus "Camp Meeting U.S.A." every afternoon and Sunday services from PTL headquarters in Fort Mill.

PTL officials also are faced with criminal investigations by the Justice Department, the IRS and the Postal Service.

Roy Grutman, PTL's lead attorney, told PTL employees and the media that some of the ministry's operations could lose their tax exemption.

The bankruptcy court petition is not a sign or shame or admission of failure, he said Friday. "For the people who believe in PTL, it will be business as usual."

PTL officials, who have blamed the fiscal mismanagement on Bakker, said they are going to try to keep the hotel, television studio, theme park and other ministry operations intact as a single entity.

But under reorganization, the court and creditors will determine which of the ministry's assets will be kept and which will be sold to pay off debts.

The federal bankruptcy judge assigned to PTL's case is Rufus Reynolds of Greensboro, N.C., who will hear the case in Columbia.

The documents do not include any obligation to PTL's 120,000-plus lifetime partners, whose "status will be determined in the proceeding," according to the petition.

Within 15 days, PTL must file a more comprehensive list of assets and liabilities and a statement of financial affairs. Creditors will be able to file claims against PTL immediately. PTL has 120 days to give the bankruptcy court a plan to repay its creditors.

Such plans often include sales of assets, and PTL officials alluded Friday to the ministry's holdings of undeveloped land.

The bankruptcy court ordinarily appoints trustees to oversee Chapter 11 filings only if there is "evidence of gross mismanagement or fraud" by the management, Hirshfield said.

If the court or creditors deem a Chapter 11 filing not viable, the court may convert the case to a Chapter 7 filing, in which a debtor's property is liquidated and the business ceases to operate.

Adoption Bill May Face House Battle

RALEIGH (AP) — When Sen. Tony Rand's adoption bill came before the House Children and Youth Committee last week, chairman Ruth Easterling made a thorough search for opposition.

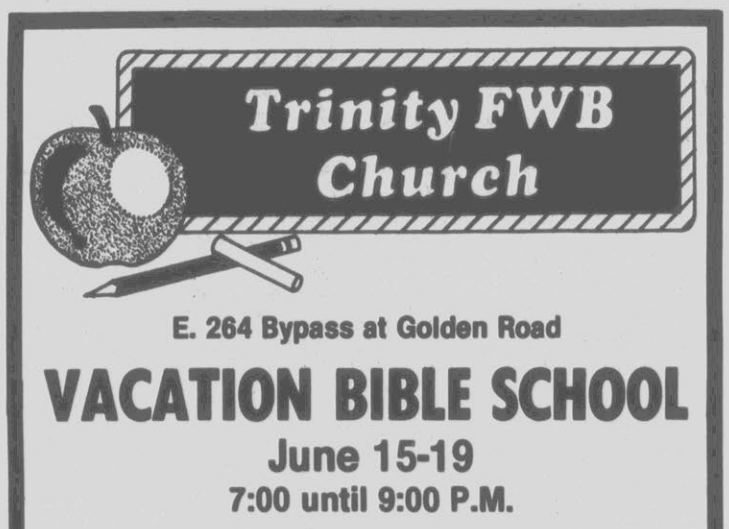
"Is there ANYONE who wants to speak against this bill," she asked during a Friday meeting.

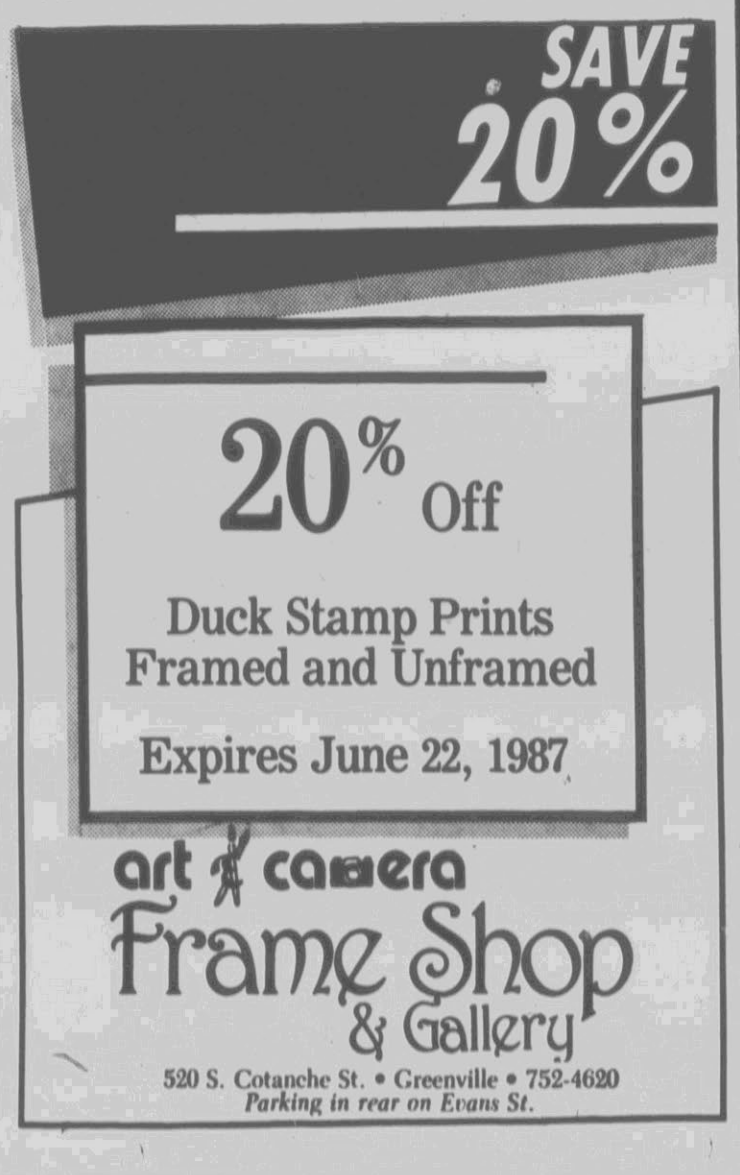
The bill was unanimously approved by the committee, and no one spoke in opposition to it. But that's expected to change by the time the measure reaches the House floor. Rep. Marie Colton, D-Buncombe, is getting ready for a battle.

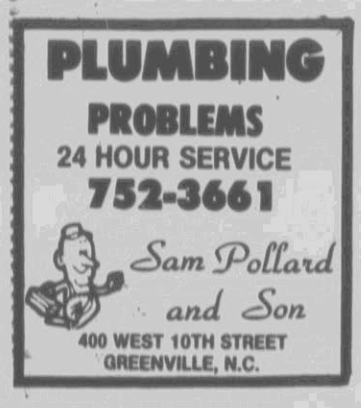
"I hope you all will speak up on the floor," she said, after committee members were prolific in their verbal praise for the measure.

Rand's bill says that children under the age of 12 could not be adopted in North Carolina unless written certification is obtained from a county director of social services or the director of a licensed child placement agency. The officials would assess the prospective parents and would determine if there were circumstances that appear detrimental to the child's welfare. Counseling would also be available to prospective parents.

The measure already has passed the Senate, and has the support of many social services departments. Department personnel who testified before the committee said they had seen too many children who were hurt because the adoptive parents did not know what raising a child would entail.







Pravda Mocks Reagan's Use Of 'Crocodile Tears' On Wall

MOSCOW (AP) — The Communist Party daily Pravda mocked President Reagan for crying "crocodile tears" in calling on the Soviets to tear down the Berlin Wall and said Saturday that the West made building the wall necessary.

It called Reagan's speech, delivered in West Berlin on Friday, a threat to the sovereignty of Moscow-aligned East Germany.

Speaking with the wall and East Berlin's Branenburg Gate behind him, Reagan called on Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev to destroy the barrier that has divided the former German capital for 26 years.

"General Secretary Gorbachev, if you seek peace, if you seek prosperity for the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe, if you seek liberalization, come here to this gate," Reagan said.

"Mr. Gorbachev, open this gate. Mr. Gorbachev, tear down this wall," he declared.

The Pravda commentary said Reagan seemed to have mistaken the Berlin Wall for the Wailing Wall in Jerusalem and that he gave expression to copious amounts of "crocodile tears."

The Soviet newspaper said his words were a call for changes in German borders and constituted a threat to East German sovereignty.

West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl was quoted in a Hamburg weekly Saturday as saying that France and Britain approved Reagan's speech in advance.

The two countries, together with the United States, hold sovereignty over West Berlin under the post-World War II Allied treaty with the Soviets, who control the divided city's communist eastern sector and East Germany.

Kohl also said West Germany supported Reagan's proposals, including holding regular international conferences in Berlin.

"The federal (West German) government will do everything it can to contribute to a realization of the president's initiative," Kohl was quoted as saying in an article in the Welt am Sonntag newspaper. The Sunday weekly provided the article to news agencies in advance of publication.

"I hope both the Soviet Union and the GDR (East Germany) are ready to take up these proposals," Kohl said.

The Western Allies staged a military parade in West Berlin Saturday, an annual event designed to demonstrate their commitment to the preservation of the city's Western sector. Reporters estimated some 75,000 people watched the parade.

Pravda said the wall, which it called an "anti-fascist barrier," was needed because of the past policy of the United States and it allies. The East Germans put up the wall with Soviet aid.

The paper said the Western countries had used West Berlin, which is encircled by the wall and by East Germany, as a "front city" to the harm of East Germany, but did not elaborate.

Pravda said it was impossible to consider Reagan's speech as anything other than a "provocation," whose obvious intention was to trouble the relative calm in West Berlin.

The newspaper noted that Reagan came to Berlin after attending a meeting of the leaders of the seven largest non-communist industrial powers in Venice, Italy.

It said the Western leaders meeting in the Italian city had shown "glimmerings of a healthy approach" to recent Soviet arms control proposals, and that Reagan's remarks in Berlin were a compensation for that.

Pravda said that among those listening to Reagan's speech were 10,000 heavily armed police officers, including 1,000 it said were brought into Berlin from West Germany in violation of international accords on the city.

President Will Challenge Congress To Change Budget-Making Process

By DAVID HOFFMAN
L.A. Times-Washington Post
Mews Service

WASHINGTON — President Reagan, home from the economic summit in Venice, is preparing for a new season of combat with the Democratic-controlled Congress over the budget, trade and other domestic policy priorities.

Reagan plays his opening hand in a nationally televised address from the Oval Office Monday night in which White House officials say he intends to challenge Congress to overhaul the budget process.

The president may also suggest to Congress the adoption of a set of economic principles that would lock in his priorities after he leaves office in 20 months.

One senior official said Monday's address is an attempt to "get the debate focused on our domestic economic policies and get Congress to face facts — to put in place a budget process that is reliable and credible."

Reagan is also facing a series of potential veto confrontations with Congress over a money bill which includes arms control restrictions he opposes, trade legislation which he has labelled protectionist, and a housing bill that exceeds his budget request.

The senior official said there are "more rather than less potential conflicts" facing Reagan between now and the August congressional recess. Reagan is planning to visit Capitol Hill this week to lobby on the trade bill that is expected to reach the Senate floor shortly, and he used his weekly radio address Saturday to speak out against restrictive trade provisions.

Also this summer, Reagan is expected to devote his efforts to building support for a prospective treaty to eliminate medium and short-range missiles from Europe. Reagan said Friday in Bonn that he expects Gorbachev to come to the United States this year to sign such a treaty, which would require Senate ratification. Reagan is expected to announce in the Monday address that he has ordered an affirmative response be sent to the Soviets on the "double-zero" plan for wiping out the missiles in Europe, with some conditions attached to satisfy the allies.

White House officials also say they expect to spend part of the summer grappling with the Iran-contra hearings. Since the hearings began in May, Reagan has attempted to advance his policy agenda regardless of the controversy, but the televised proceedings remain a source of attention and concern to his advisers.

Last week, at his Venice news conference, Reagan devoted about as much time answering questions on the Iran-contra affair as he did about the summit and the Persian Gulf. Also, White House officials have been angry at Secretay of State George P. Shultz for his vigorous defense of Assistant Secrety Elliot Abrams after Abrams admitted misleading Congress.

On budget priorities, Reagan and the congressional Democrats have been at odds since the begining of the year, with Reagan continuing to oppose tax increases or defense cuts. White House strategists have watched with some satisfaction as the Democrats have been unable to agree among themselves on an alternative to Reagan's priorities. During this period, Reagan spurned Democratic appeals for a summit or negotiations on the budget.

As White House officials view it, the next phase is for Reagan to launch a public campaign for his own budget priorities and for some kind of overhaul of the budget process. Reagan intends to make a series of appearances around the nation in the next few weeks to highlight this theme.

The White House has yet to embrace a plan for overhauling the budget process, but Chief of Staff Howard H. Baker Jr. has had extensive talks with congressional leaders. White House officials say an agreement on the process changes could pave the way for a compromise on the budget itself.

However, there are few signs that Reagan is willing to offer any concessions, such as increased taxes or defense cuts. Some White House officials said he is so intransigent on these points that he would prefer to leave office next year defending his priorities rather than make progress reducing the deficit by compromising on these points.

Despite his claim that the United States reduced the deficit by $40 billion last year, allied leaders in Venice complained to Reagan that the U.S. fiscal imbalance was also hindering their economies.

The push for an overhaul of the budget pocess stems in part from the gridlock that has developed between Reagan and Congress over defense, tax and domestic spending priorities in recent years, resulting in a final, climatic catch-all spending bill.

The budget reform effort is also motivated by Reagan's repeated claim that Congress failed to cut domestic spending as much as promised after the big 1982 tax increase. While this is disputed by congressional analysts, aides say Reagan has accepted it as fact and he is unwilling to negotiate with the Hill unless given assurances that the deal is "enforceable."

House Panel Says Boths Sides At Fault In Attack On Frigate

By DAVE SKIDMORE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The attack on the USS Stark was an accident waiting to happen because of sloppy Iraqi procedures in the Persian Gulf and a lax attitude by American forces toward Iraqi planes, a congressional report said Saturday.

The House Armed Services Committee report, released by chairman Les Aspin, D-Wis., concluded that the attack, which killed 37 of the Stark's crew, "was almost certainly inadvertent."

But it faulted both the Iraqis and the Americans with what Aspin called "failures of omission."

The accident "was caused by things both the plane and the ship did not do," he said.

On the Iraqi side, standard procedure is for warplanes to fire at blips on a radar screen rather than to first visually identify targets as the Iranians do, the report said. The Stark attack was at night, but Iraqi pilots usually don't bother to make visual identification even during the day, it said.

The Iraqis also fail to consistently monitor radio channels specifically set aside for warnings from warships, it said. The Iraqis said their pilot did not hear either of the two radio warnings broadcast by the Stark.

On the American side, U.S. personnel seemed to regard Iraqi aircraft, if not as "friendly," then as less threatening than Iranian planes, even though written rules treat aircraft from the two nations equally, the report said. Prior to the attack, Iraqi jets overflew U.S. ships without incident.

"Given our attitude toward Iraq and Iraqi planes and given the way the Iraqi planes operated, the wonder is not that this incident occurred, but the wonder is that an incident like this has not occurred before now," Aspin told a news conference.

The report faulted the Stark for not warning the Iraqi Mirage F-1 jet until it had flown within 13 miles, well within missile range, even though a U.S Air Force AWACS (surveillance) plane had informed the Stark when the Iraqi jet was 200 miles away and the Stark's own radar had picked it up at a distance of 70 miles.

"With 20-20 hindsight it is now pretty clear the Stark should have done a lot more to warn off the Iraqi plane," Aspin said.

The committee also said the Stark, a highly maneuverable frigate, should have turned broadside to the plane so that all its weapons would be available in the event of a missile launch.

A seaman acting as a forward lookout told committee investigators that two missiles struck the Stark 10 to 15 degrees off the port bow. At that angle, the missiles would have been in the radar blind spot of the Stark's Phalanx system, a Gatling-gun style weapon used as a last-ditch defense against missiles, the report said.

The committee found no evidence to conclude that the Navy's rules of engagement unneccesarily restricted the Stark from defending itself. It also found no evidence indicating the equipment on the Stark failed to work as designed.

The report, based on a trip to the gulf by four committee aides a week after the May 17 attack, was signed by Reps. Aspin, William L. Dickinson of Alabama, the senior Republican on the panel, and Bill Nichols, D-Ala., the chairman of the investigations subcommittee.

Aspin stressed that the report could not "allocate responsibility on board the ship" and must be considered preliminary because the committee did not speak to the frigate's four principal officers. They are being investigated by a Navy review board and refused to be interviewed on the advice of their attorneys.

However, Capt. G.R. Brindel did submit a written statement in which he said he left the bridge before the attack "to make a head call" even though the ship had been warned by the AWACS when the Iraqi plane was 200 miles away.

Brindel said the key questions to be answered by an investigation are: why he was not informed when the Stark's search radar picked up the plane at 70 miles out, why the ship's Combat Information Center was unable to defeat the attack and why the ship's radars did not detect the Exocet missiles separating from the Iraqi plane.

The committee said the ship's SLQ-32 electronic countermeasures equipment should have detected the lock-on signal from the missiles' radar.

Jurors Get New Charge

NEW YORK (AP) — The judge in the Bernhard Goetz trial reread his instructions to the jury Saturday, making changes Goetz's lawyer said helped defend the shooting of four teen-agers on a subway train.

The sequestered jurors failed to reach a verdict after nearly nine hours of deliberations during its second day Saturday and will resume Monday at 9:30 a.m.

Earlier, the jury asked acting state Supreme Court Justice Stephen Crane to reread his instructions concerning the charges of second-degree attempted murder and first-degree assault.

At the request of defense attorney Barry Slotnick, the judge altered two passages in his charge to the jury, which had been issued Friday, but Crane did not tell the jury he was making the changes.

Goetz, 39, faces charges of attempted murder, assault and reckless endangerment for shooting Barry Allen, Darrell Cabey, Troy Canty and James Ramseur on Dec. 22, 1984, plus four weapons charges.

In his revised instructions, Crane told the jurors they could consider the testimony of Dr. Bernard Yudowitz, a neurologist who had testified about role of autonomic nervous system in stressful situations.

The physician had testified that in a stressful situation, "the mind might go on automatic pilot" and the body might act by reflex.

Crane also deleted a portion of Friday's charge in which he told the jurors they could not find that Goetz was justified in shooting the teenagers if they find that Goetz was aware that he could have taken less drastic measures, such as merely showing his gun.

Slotnick had argued for the changes during the charge conference involving the judge and attorneys and repeated his objections Friday and again Saturday.

"I think the charge (Friday) was one in which the jury would have had a very hard time acquitting Bernhard Goetz," Slotnick said.

He said he was "pleased" with the changes, but would have been happier if the judge had told the jury he was making them.

Assistant District Attorney Gregory Waples called the changes a "slight modification" and maintained it was not unusual.

Earlier Saturday the jurors had asked the judge to review testimony regarding two guns that Goetz left with neighbor Myra Friedman shortly after the shooting.

Goetz faces two counts of fourth-degree criminal possession of a weapon, a misdemeanor punishable by up to a year in jail, for owning the two guns, a .38-caliber revolver and a 9mm automatic handgun, neither of which was registered in New York State. The gun used in the subway shooting was buried in Vermont, Goetz has said.

Second-degree possession of a weapon is a felony punishable by up to 15 years in prison, third degree weapons possession up to seven years and attempted murder carries a sentence of up to 25 years on each of the four counts.

Goetz maintains that the youths intended to rob him and beat him "to a pulp" after Canty approached him and asked for $5. Canty testified that the youths were only begging money to play video game machines, which they intended to break into and rob.

The jury received the case Friday after a seven-week trial. The jurors' first request, after asking for pens and paper, was for an explanation of the elements of fourth-degree criminal weapons possession.

Light Earthquake Strikes Missouri

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A light earthquake measuring 4.1 on the Richter scale rattled pictures on walls in southeast Missouri on Saturday, but no damage was immediately reported, the National Weather Service said.

The tremor was centered about 130 miles south of St. Louis near New Madrid, along the Mississippi River. The area is on the New Madrid Fault, where the nation's strongest series of recorded earthquakes occurred in 1811-1812.

Saturday's light earthquake was not related to one measuring 5.0 on the Richter scale that occurred Wednesday in southeastern Illinois and was felt in 15 states and the Canadian province of Ontario, said Sean-Thomas Morrissey, a geophysical instrumentation consultant at St. Louis University.

Saturday's tremor, located about five kilometers below the earth's surface, rattled picutres from walls at Kennett, which is located about 40 miles southwest of New Madrid, but caused no injuries that were immediately reported, the National Weather Service said.

It was felt in New Madrid, Kennett and Portageville.

USGS scientists said the quake occurred about 4:17 p.m. and was centered about five miles southwest of New Madrid.

Wednesday's quake, centered near Lawrenceville, Ill., caused no major damage.

The Richter scale is an open-ended gauge of energy released by an earthquake as measured by ground motion recorded on a seismograph. Every increase of one number means that the ground motion is 10 times greater.

A quake with a magnitude of 4 can cause moderate damage in a populated area, a quake of magnitude 5 considerable damage, a magnitude 6 quake severe damage, one of magnitude 7 widespread, heavy damage and a magnitude 8 quake, a "great" earthquake capable of tremendous damage.

U.S. Says Will Hold Iran Responsible

Beirut Report Says Some American Hostages Now Being Held In Iran

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Some of the eight American hostages in Lebanon have been taken to Iran, where a powerful anti-American faction wants to put them on trial, a Beirut weekly magazine reported Saturday.

Ash-Shiraa, which last year broke the story of secret U.S. arms sales to Iran, added that a more moderate Iranian faction favors freedom for the hostages, but only in return for U.S. weapons bought by Iran and never shipped.

In Washington, State Department spokesman Pete Martinez said, "if such reports were indeed true, we would consider it a matter of the utmost gravity and would hold the Iranian government directly responsible for the safety and well-being of the hostages."

"The very notion of a 'trial' for the hostages is outrageous," he added. He renewed U.S. demands that American hostages be freed, saying they are innocent victims.

Al-Ittihad, a semi-official newspaper in Abu Dhabi, meanwhile said that missing Anglican Church envoy Terry Waite was twice taken to Iran for talks with officials. The paper did not say if Waite was still in Iran.

The Lebanese magazine said Hussein Ali Montazeri, the man chosen by Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini to succeed him, "demands that the American hostages ... be brought to trial, especially since some of them have already been taken to Iran."

Ash-Shiraa, which reportedly has good sources in the Iranian government, attributed its information to unnamed sources "close to Montazeri's office" in the holy city of Qom.

The American hostages in Iran are "being subjected to thorough interrogations by the Iranian intelligence under the direct supervision of Minister of Security and Intelligence Sheik Mohammad Mohammadi Rey Shahri," the magazine said.

Rey Shahri's official title is minister of information.

The magazine indicated Montazeri and his radical followers have rejected the views of a top-level committee formed by Khomeini to supervise the negotiations for the foreign hostages' release.

Ash-Shiraa reported earlier this month that the panel included President Ali Khamenei; Parliament Speaker Hashemi Rafsanjani; Khomeini's son, Ahmad; and Revolutionary Guards commander Mohsen Reda.

It said the commitee, influenced by Rafsanjani, believed "a settlement to the hostages issue could be achieved ... if the United States delivered to Iran weapons that had been purchased and paid for by Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi."

The late, pro-Western shah was toppled by Khomeini's 1979 Islamic revolution.

Ash-Shiraa also reported earlier that Iran wanted the United States to release Iranian assets frozen in American banks.

The United States has already paid Iran $451 million of an estimated $3.6 billion in frozen assets, as ordered by a special tribunal in The Hague. The transfer of the funds was completed last month.

The Americans have repeatedly said the financial dispute is not linked to the hostage issue.

However, Rafsanjani has declared several times in recent months that Iran would be prepared to help free the hostages if the United States released Iranian assets frozen by Washington after the U.S. Embassy in Tehran was seized and American diplomats were held as hostages.

Hassan Sabra, Ash-Shiraa's editor-publisher, said in an interview a week ago that the Iranians "hold the key to the hostages."

Sabra said the Iranian government wants "money and arms. In no case can their Lebanese jailers take the decision to free them. Only Iran can do that." Al-Ittihad daily said in Abu Dhabi that Waite was flown to Tehran for talks with Rafsanjani while "intensive contacts" were under way between the Church of England and Iran for the release of British hostages kidnapped in Lebanon.

It quoted sources close to Waite's family as saying Rafsanjani "made positive steps" toward freeing Waite, the personal envoy of the archbishop of Canterbury, but Rafsanjani suddenly ended his contacts before a final agreement could be reached.

The Anglican Church said in London that it could not confirm the report.

"This is another example of the many reports which come to us from the Middle East. We do not know if there is any truth in it," said a church spokesman, who demanded anonymity.

Waite dropped out of sight Jan. 20 after leaving a hotel in west Beirut. He was reportedly on his way to negotiate with a pro-Iranian group holding two American hostages.

No group has claimed responsibility for Waite's disappearance.

Apart from the eight Americans and Waite, 16 foreigners are missing and believed kidnapped in Lebanon. They are six Frenchmen, two Britons, two West Germans, an Italian, an Irishman, a South Korean, an Indian and two unidentified foreigners.

Firemen Fear Some Trapped In Flames

PATERSON, N.J. (AP) — A fire raged out of control for nearly six hours Saturday at a apartment-business complex, and fire officials said two or three people may have been trapped and killed inside.

"We're making a search of the building now," fire battalion Chief Thomas K. Coppo said Saturday evening. "We had to get the fire under control before we could go in."

Earlier, fire battalion Chief James Tice said the fire had caused the building roof and some walls to cave in, hindering search efforts.

Fire broke out in the three-story brick building, which housed at least one apartment, a bar, a beauty school, a delicatessen, a furniture store and several offices, about 11 a.m. It was brought under control shortly after 5 p.m, Tice said.

"We believe there are two to three residents inside the building," he said. "If they are in there, they're dead."

Police helped firefighters rescue several people who were trapped by flames on the upper floors, said officer Charles Huntington. He said he was not certain how many people needed help.

Firefighters brought in a construction jack capable of lifting 10,000 pounds to lift the heavy roof beams, Coppo said. Firefighters also were cutting through the wreckage with chain saws in their hunt for bodies.

At least two firefighters were treated at a hospital for smoke inhalation, he said.

About 40 firefighters from Paterson and another 40 from seven nearby fire departments were called in to battle the blaze, Tice said. The cause had not been determined, he said.

Presbyterian Panel Alters Statement

BILOXI, Miss. (AP) — A committee of Presbyterians Saturday adopted a statement defining Judeo-Christian relations but softened language some churchmen said backed Israeli land claims.

Meanwhile, a separate committee voted to consolidate the headquarters of the 3 million-member denomination in Kansasic City, Mo.

The paper, "A Theological Understanding of the Relationship Between Christians and Jews," was designed to foster understanding between Judaism and Christianity.

But it sparked controversy at the 199th General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (USA) over worry that it could be interpreted as giving Biblical support to Israeli land claims in what was once Palestine.

The Rev. Benjamin Weir, a former hostage in Lebanon and church official, had criticized the original language, which referred to "the continuity and irrevocability of God's promise of land to the people Israel."

A committee of laymen and ministers revised the paper to make it clear Palestinians should be included in peace discusions in the regions. The new language also says God's promise of land is "a Biblical metaphor for sustainable life, prosperity, peace and security."

Weir said adoption of the original language would embarrass Middle Eastern Christians as well as the United States.

Other changes made by the committee included rejection of specific language calling for creation of a Center for Reconciliation in Jerusalem in favor of directing denomination officials to support reconciliation "in as broadly and ecumenical way as a way as possible."

The amended paper asks for a conference next spring between a church committee and the Middle East Conference of Churchs "to discuss and negotiate an acceptable understanding between the church and the conference concerning its status and function in our ongoing work together."

The paper, if adopted by the full assembly on Tuesday, will be a "provisional understanding of the subject."

Congregations will be urged to "undertake educational programs designed to foster understanding and better relationships between Christians and Jews" and studies in Judaism will be expanded in the denomination's seminaries.

Dr. Eugene March, who chaired the task force that developed the original paper over four years, called Saturday's decision "an historic moment."

Although he admitted he had reservations earlier when the paper had been referred to a revision committee, he said Saturday the results reaffirmed his faith in the Presbyterian system.

He said the changes "clarified the paper" and "rendered it more usable,"

Two clerics from Middle Eastern churches who had originally spoken against the paper praised the work of the committee, which cheered as it unanimously adopted the amended version.

Meanwhile, the assembly's Committee on Office Location and Mission Design agreed Saturday with a study committee's recommendation that the offices be joined in Kansas City.

The 73-member committee also heard presentations from Atlanta, Louisville, Ky., New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and St. Louis.

Submarine Launched

NEWPORT NEWS, Va. (AP) — The nuclear-powered attack submarine Albany was launched Saturday as Former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger questioned President Reagan's decision for a naval buildup in the Persian Gulf.

"The political leaders of the United States must define the objectives that military force can serve and those objectives cannot be open-ended," Kisinger said.

The Albany, named for New York's capital, is designed to destroy enemy submarines. It is the fifth Navy vessel to bear the name. The most recent was a cruiser commissioned in 1946 and retired in 1980. The sub is 360 feet long, 33 feet wide.

It will remain at the shipyard for an additional 18 months of work at an outfitting pier before joining the fleet.

After the launching, Kissinger said the United States should "defend freedom of navigation when it is really threatened."

"But what we have to determine is, is it really threatened at this moment?" Kissinger said. "Up to now, less than one-half of 1 percent of all ships coming through the gulf have come under attack and a much smaller number have been sunk.

"At this moment, I do not believe there is an immediate threat to the oil supply."

Texans Sog Through Unusally Wet Spring

By PAUL LONG
Associated Press Writer

DALLAS (AP) — In a state where rain is usually rare, torrential storms have pounded Texas day after day after day for more than a month, wreaking millions of dollars in damage and forcing hundreds to flee rampaging floods.

It is the soggiest spring in 50 years, and at least nine deaths have been blamed on the excess of water.

Bexar County Sheriff Harlon Copeland said he knows better than to predict when the sun will shine again.

"The only people in Texas that try to predict the weather are ... fools and newcomers, and I'm neither one," Copeland said.

A storm system moving from the north was expected to bring more rain to central and southern Texas during the weekend, said National Weather Service forecaster Cristy Mitchell.

More heavy rain fell early Saturday across south-central Texas, with 3.50 inches near Hondo, and flood and flash flood watches remained in effect. Luce Bayou outside Houston got 9.49 inches in 24 hours Friday, the weather service said.

Thunderstorms also moved across north-central Texas on Saturday, and the weather service said there was water 2 feet deep in parts of Sulphur Springs, east of Dallas.

Dennis Winright thought he was leaving behind the constant soaked-through, sticky-all-over feeling that accompanies a tropical monsoon season when he left Thailand in 1967 after completing his Air Force hitch.

Now it's so bad in Texas, "it's like the monsoon season, exactly like that," said Winright, who lives near Bandera, about 30 miles northwest of San Antonio. "It's just a torrential rain that rains almost constantly."

Southeastern Texas has been hardest hit by the seemingly endless rain, but thunderstorms have caused problems from Corpus Christi on the Gulf Coast and the bayous that ring Houston to the Texas-Oklahoma border.

In addition to the rain, hail piled up a foot deep during one thunderstorm, and funnel clouds have skipped across the state.

People have been forced to flee homes in communities across the region, highways have been blocked by water or washed out and people have had to be rescued from vehicles stranded in deep water.

From January to June, San Antonio got 28.76 inches of rain, exceeding its average yearly rainfall of 28.13 inches, said Ms. Mitchell.

It hasn't been that wet since 1935, when the city got 30.49 inches in six months, she said.

San Antonio also broke the record for any 30-day period, with 18.41 inches of rain recorded from May 13 through June 11, eclipsing the old record of 17.82 inches set from Aug. 29 to Sept. 27, 1946.

The unusually heavy rain has been triggered by a stagnant low pressure system over southern New Mexico and northern Mexico, said weather service forecaster Al Moller in Fort Worth. He said the system hasn't moved because wind around it hasn't been strong enough to nudge it.

"It's not unusual for this to happen but this pattern has led to unusually long and severe periods of rainfall," Moller said.

Flooding has caused more than $1 million to city streets and other facilities in San Antonio alone, Public Works Director David Steitle said.

The city of Beaumont distributed some 2,500 sandbags Thursday and Friday to help keep water out of homes. "We're only allowed to give out 10 bags to each vehicle," said crew leader Kirk Reidelberger. "Some people ask us if they can buy extra sandbags, and we have to tell them no."

In the Gulf Coast region near Corpus Christi, crops have been saturated with an average of 16 inches of rain in two weeks, and fields of corn, cotton and beans are standing in water.

Malcolm Maedgen, who lives near Mathis, about 35 miles north of Corpus Christi, says his navy bean crop may be a 50 percent loss.

"One more good rain and most of my crops will be on the verge of drowning," he said.

In the New Braunfels area, about 25 miles north of San Antonio, river outfitters say high water is cutting their rafting business by more than half for some.

The Guadelupe River is "pretty exciting at that level," said Betty Walls of Texas Canoe Trails. "The eight-mile course usually takes about 3½ hours, but when it's at that level, you can do it in one hour and 15 minutes, so it's just hold on and 'Yahoo.'"

Probe Will Shift To White House

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional investigators, having pulled many of the Iran-Contra affair's leading figures out of the shadows, are preparing to turn the spotlight into the heart of Ronald Reagan's presidential establishment.

Even more than the first six weeks of hearings, the upcoming sessions figure to be increasingly uncomfortable for Reagan.

While the president last week dismissed the references to him so far as mere "hearsay," the questions being asked in the next round of hearings will increasingly focus on the Oval Office. And they will be asked of people in a position to know.

Can the tale get worse for the Reagan administration? Yes, says the chairman of the House investigating panel.

"Hold on," Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., said last week. "A lot of remarkable things that have happened will come out."

Public hearings are to resume after another week of recess, and witnesses expected to be called include Secretary of State George Shultz, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, and Attorney General Edwin Meese III.

In between these public sessions, the CIA is being called into account in what already has become the most extensive congressional look at the spy agency since the Church commission inquiries of 1974 into the CIA's activities in Chile.

The main mystery men of the affair, former National Security Adviser John Poindexter and fired national security aide Lt. Col. Oliver North, will also tell their story in public under a limited grant of immunity.

Already, 18 witnesses in six weeks have produced testimony that Reagan approved payments to terrorists to secure the release of American hostages in Iran, that a high-ranking State Department official deliberately misled Congress about efforts to aid the Nicaraguan Contra rebels, and that a high-ranking CIA official misled Congress about the spy agency's involvement in supporting the Contras when that was illegal.

Many of the witnesses said they believed they were acting on the highest authority.

Myths And Legends Play Role In U.S. Heritage

By MIKE OWEN
Associated Press Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Tourists this Flag Day may hear that Betsy Ross made the nation's first flag, or that the Liberty Bell cracked during the funeral of Chief Justice John Marshall, or that statesmen sweated through an unusually hot summer while putting the Constitution together.

Well, maybe she did, and maybe it did, and probably they didn't, historians say.

Those are just some doses of legend — not necessarily false, but unproven things that have found their way into history books or onto postcards — that tourists may get during the Constitution bicentennial this year, historians say.

"We don't really have any problem with myths or folklore or things like that, as long as people realize that's what they are," said David Dutcher, chief historian at Independence National Historical Park.

"That's a very important part of our heritage. ... That we have built up these myths and lores is just a part of our becoming a people."

At the Betsy Ross House, where officials expect as many as 600,000 people this summer, visitors can view a room said to be where Mrs. Ross was commissioned to make the first flag.

"There isn't enough evidence to point to her conclusively. It's known that she did make flags for the Pennsylvania Navy," Dutcher said.

William A. Kingsley, director of the house a few blocks from Independence Hall, said he's convinced enough does point to Betsy Ross.

Besides the seamstress' flag-making experience, Kingsley said the evidence includes such items as paintings that predate the 1870 claim by her grandson William J. Canby that she told him George Washington led a committee that asked her to make the first flag.

One, he said, is an 1834 portrait of an older woman that artist Samuel Waldo wrote was Betsy Ross, a name the twice-remarried woman had not used since 1777.

"Why would Waldo paint her unless she had done something when she had used that name?" he said.

Some believe Francis Hopkinson, a statesman and artist, designed the flag, but Kingsley said he didn't make his claim until 1783.

Robert Coykendall of Youngstown, N.Y., an administrative law judge, supports Hopkinson as the designer and Betsy Ross as maker of the first flag, and said both will be honored Sunday in Flag Day ceremonies there.

Coykendall's version of the story is that Mrs. Ross' uncle, George Ross, asked her to make the first flag, for his ships in the Pennsylvania Navy.

"So far as the Betsy Ross legend is concerned, if three errors were corrected it would be approximately right," he contends. "No. 1, George Washington had nothing to do with it. It was Francis Hopkinson who designed it and George Ross asked her to make it."

Dutcher noted the widely held notion that the Liberty Bell cracked while tolling for Marshall's funeral in 1835.

National Park Service historians have scoured for evidence and say nothing shows when the bell cracked. They say two of the earliest versions of that story were in 1876 and cite no documentation.

Historians also don't know if the bell was rung upon adoption of the Declaration of Independence, which has myths of its own.

"Most people think it was adopted and signed and read to the public on July Fourth, while in fact it wasn't read before the public until four days later, on July 8," Dutcher said.

Historian James H. Hutson, chief of the manuscript division of the Library of Congress in Washington, said writers must have wanted to enhance Constitution framers' achievements by describing hot days in a closed room.

"You can hardly read an account of the Constitutional Convention that doesn't assert that it was insufferably hot," he said. "We have learned ... that the summer of 1787 was an unusually cool one."

Park Service historians agreed recent research supported that, but one, Dave Kimball, noted, "even a relatively cool Philadelphia summer is fairly brutal."

A saying by "anonymous" has it that "Anybody who isn't confused isn't well-informed."

Congress Studies Possible Curbs On Campaign Costs

By DAVID GOELLER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress is taking its first serious look in a decade at a gut-level issue all too familiar to every member — the escalating cost of getting elected.

Campaign expenses, fueled by slick television spots, have risen like Third World inflation rates: In 1976, the average senator spent $610,000 to win a place on Capitol Hill. Last year's average for winners was $3 million.

This, however, is almost small change in California, where Democratic Sen. Alan Cranston spent more than $8.5 million last year fending off the $8.9 million challenge of former Republican Rep. Ed Zschau.

In New York, Republican Sen. Alfonse M. D'Amato spent $5.8 million winning a second term. Not all the big bucks go into statewide races in big states. It cost Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., $2 million to keep his House seat and his presidential ambitions alive.

A popular incumbent facing an ill-financed challenger does not guarantee a low-spending campaign. The 10th most expensive Senate contest last year was in Oregon, where Republican Bob Packwood spent $5.6 million to beat Robert Bauman and his $44,886.

Not only are congressional reformers, led by Senate Democrats, criticizing the amounts being spent on winning jobs that pay $89,500 a year, they are taking aim at the fastest rising sources of campaign money.

These are the political action committees run by business, labor and ideological groups — PACs, the controversial entities spawned by post-Watergate changes that banned direct corporate campaign contributions.

PACs are booming. In 1976 they gave $5.4 million to Senate candidates. Last year, the total reached $45.7 million. Fourteen of the 34 senators elected last year got more than $1 million each from PACs. More than 200 House members get at least half their election funds from them.

Legislation now stalled by a Republican filibuster in the Senate proposes PAC limits that would have cut the special-interest money going to winning 1986 Senate candidates from $28.9 million to $10.2 million, according to Common Cause, the self-described citizens' lobby that has been prodding Congress to change the system.

Critics charge that the status quo requires candidates to spend an inordinate amount of time raising money and makes them appear increasingly beholden to special interests. The worst ramification, they say, is cynicism that leads to low voter turnout — 37 percent last year.

This could be the year Congress puts itself on a diet for the 1990 elections. When the Senate returned to Democratic control, it got in Robert Byrd of West Virginia a majority leader preaching limits on overall spending and how much a Senate candidate can take from PACs.

The majority leader is the gatekeeper. Byrd's predecessor, Bob Dole, R-Kan., kept the gate closed. Byrd has swung it wide open, bringing a campaign finance bill to the floor June 3 and showing no signs of withdrawing it despite a filibuster that has stopped almost all other business.

Byrd, Sen. David Boren, D-Okla., 43 other Democrats and two Republicans are pushing their colleagues to support their legislation that calls for a controversial step: installing for Senate races a limited public financing system similar to the one used for presidential campaigns.

Participation by candidates would be voluntary in order to get around a Supreme Court decision that says mandatory spending limits violate constitutional free-speech rights.

Under the Democratic plan, a candidate could get up to 40 percent of general election expenses paid from the Treasury by agreeing to limit PAC receipts and restrict overall spending to from $950,000 to $5.5 million, depending on a state's population.

Republican opponents are not publicly denouncing the idea of reform, only the Democratic route.

Scientists Charge PHS Diluting Report

L.A. Times-Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Two scientists hired by the Public Health Service to prepare a report for Congress on lead poisoning in children have resigned in protest, contending that the federal agency plans to delete and dilute critical portions of their work.

The scientists, who resigned June 5, said in interviews Friday that their draft report, which details the adverse health effects of lead at blood levels common to 17 percent of urban preschool children, suggested the need for more far-reaching and costly remedies than the Reagan administration is willing to consider.

They said a condensed version of a draft sent out last week for interagency review fails to detail the health consequences or present the national scope of an environmental problem once thought to be confined to poor, inner-city dwellers.

"No way in hell you can comprehend the complexity of this problem in a boiled down, very misleading, essentially neutral document," said Paul Mushak, senior author of the draft and adjunct professor of environmental pathology at the University of North Carolina School of Medicine.

"It's one of the most subtle, nastiest rewrites I've ever seen," said co-author Annemarie F. Crocetti, retired associate professor of community medicine at New York Medical College.

Frank Mitchell, chief medical officer of the PHS' Agency for Toxic Substances and Disease Registry, said the 330-page draft has been cut to 46 pages to create a "readable, usable" document for Congress complete with all vital findings, such as the Mushak-Crocetti estimate of 2.4 million urban pre-school children who have lead levels associated with growth and developmental problems.

"We're not suppressing anything," Mitchell said. He said the 46-page version dated June 5 is not in final form, although he expects no substantive changes. The excised charts, appendices and judgments of the two authors will be made available to Congress as "backup data," he said.

Mushak and Crocetti were hired by PHS in November to write the report, which Congress requested last year.

New-Rich, Old Money Handed Thatcher New Term

By MAUREEN JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — On the votes of a little old money and a lot of new people buying modest homes and a few hundred shares, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher has a fresh mandate to complete her revolution.

It promises to be another five years of Mrs. Thatcher attacking union powers, building up nuclear weapons and fulfilling her dream of making Britain a nation where socialism can never again hold sway.

Voting patterns in Thursday's general election, which handed the 61-year-old Conservative Party leader a third term with a narrowed but thumping majority, also show a Britain perhaps even more starkly divided than when she won power eight years ago.

But now the demarcations are drawn more by wallets and region than by divisions of class, still-thriving, but blurring at the edges.

The Tories always had the landed gentry, the self-made rich, many professionals, financially strapped but genteel retirees, and a slice of the working class.

To these bedrock supporters, Mrs. Thatcher added millions who prospered under a leader who will diminish what is left of union power and who restored British prestige internationally.

"Since she came, there's just more money left at the end of the month," said David Browne, 34, a $18,000-a-year clerk, who watched the Thatcher campaign bus arrive in Nelson, a north England town.

His father, a retired blue-collar worker, is buying the state-subsidized home he rented from the local council. Browne himself is buying a house and has a few thousand dollars invested in stock in British Gas and British Telecom.

Those are two of the state-owned utilities Mrs. Thatcher sold off. The water and electricity utilities are due to go next under what she calls "people's capitalism."

Mrs. Thatcher, the grocer's daughter who next year will overtake Winston Churchill and Lord Asquith as the longest serving prime minister this century, got 42.3 percent of the vote Thursday. It yielded a solid 102-seat majority in the 650-member House of Commons.

The Conservative share of the popular vote was almost unchanged from the 1983 election, which gave Mrs. Thatcher a landslide 144-seat majority.

Nearly 60 percent of Britons voted against Mrs. Thatcher but this served simply to increase her power in Parliament — she started in 1979 with a 44-seat majority — because the anti-Conservative vote is split.

The main opposition socialist Labor Party pushed its vote up by 3.3 percent from its 27.5 percent debacle in 1983. The centrist Social Democratic-Liberal Party Alliance, squeezed by the big parties, fell 3 percent to 22.5.

The result, 376 Conservative seats, 229 Labor and 22 Alliance, raised serious doubts about whether the socialist movement can win an outright majority again.

Labor ditched many radical policies, though keeping its pledge to ban British and U.S. nuclear weapons, but failed to woo back millions who have prospered under "Thatcherism."

For example, Battersea, a rapidly gentrifying south London borough, threw out its moderate Laborite legislator, Alf Dubs, in favor of a Conservative.

"I think the yuppie element was almost the entire explanation for the loss," said Dubs.

It's not just the yuppies who wanted what will be 13 years of government by the forceful, determined woman.

A Harris poll of nearly 5,000 people as they left voting stations underlined Labor's problems with a platform to reduce the 3 million unemployed.

Labor also pledged higher taxes to bolster the overburdened National Health Service, recognized by all parties as a sacrosanct part of the Welfare State, and to restore union rights such as secondary picketing and immunity from prosecution over strikes.

Only 43 percent of trade union members voted Labor, the Harris survey indicated, up from 36 percent last time, but still under half. The rest split near evenly between Conservatives and Alliance.

Home-owners, now two-thirds of Britons compared with half when Mrs. Thatcher took power and enabled tenants to buy state-subsidized homes, were 47 percent Conservative.

First-time stock owners — tripled to 8 million since 1979 — went 56 percent Conservative, 16 percent Labor.

Mrs. Thatcher scoops up all these votes despite being disliked personally. Gallup's latest poll indicates only 10 percent think she is likeable as a person.

"The British have looked at Margaret Thatcher for eight years. They have heard her and hated her, been repelled by her lecturing . .. often insulted by her patronizing indifference for common concerns," said commentator Hugo Young in the Guardian newspaper.

But, the liberal newspaper added in an editorial, "She still speaks for voters across the dominant part of the nation: the people of England of all classes — City (financial district) slickers, country ladies, blue-collar trade unionists — who are in work and doing well."

Mrs. Thatcher's first comment in the flush of victory in the early Friday, surrounded by champagne-drinking party workers, was, "We have much to do in the inner cities."

It was an acknowledgment that whole swaths of Britain have missed the benefits of the Thatcher revolution. The Tories swept southern and central England. In Scotland and much of northern England they were trounced.

In five great northern cities, Manchester, Liverpool, Sheffield, Newcastle and Glasgow, not one Tory won a seat.

Mrs. Thatcher will sell off more state-owned industries; she will try to return in spirit to the pre-1970s system where some schools attract the best teachers and brightest pupils and others don't; she will clip further the powers of left-wing councils in the big cities whom she accuses of driving out possible employers with high property taxes.

But question marks lie ahead. The North Sea oil revenues that have helped pay the welfare bills start running out in 1990s. More difficult and pressing will be the challenge of finding jobs for the 10.9 percent unemployed despite a rein on state spending.

British Cabinet Named

LONDON (AP) — Conservative Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher named a new Cabinet on Saturday as she embarked on her third term, bringing back an ally dropped in a sex scandal nearly four years ago and firing a top liberal.

In addition, Norman Tebbit, 56, the Conservative Party chairman who masterminded Mrs. Thatcher's victory in Thursday's general election, resigned, citing family reasons.

Tebbit's wife was paralyzed from the neck down in a 1984 bombing by the outlawed Irish Republican Army, which was trying to assassinate Mrs. Thatcher. Tebbit had been chancellor of the duchy of Lancaster, or minister without portfolio, in the Cabinet.

Cecil Parkinson, 55, who quit in 1983 when news broke of his extramarital affair with his then-pregnant secretary, was named energy secretary.

Parkinson, who stayed with his wife, replaced Peter Walker. In what was regarded as a demotion, Walker, a noted liberal, got the vacant job of secretary of state for Wales.

Walker was the only leading member of the Conservative Party's liberal wing, dubbed "wets" in political slang, remaining in a new Cabinet dominated by politicians closely allied with Mrs. Thatcher.

Mrs. Thatcher fired the other leading Cabinet liberal, John Biffen, leader of the House of Commons. Biffen, who reportedly said during the campaign that he would not "crawl" back to Mrs. Thatcher if she fired him, was replaced by the former chief whip for the party in the Commons, John Wakeham.

Two other Cabinet ministers went.

Lord Hailsham, the 79-year-old lord chancellor, the nation's chief law officer, retired and was replaced by former Attorney General Sir Michael Havers, who was not previously in the Cabinet.

Agriculture Secretary Michael Jopling was dismissed and replaced by John MacGregor, who served as chief secretary to the treasury in the previous 22-member Cabinet.

The new Cabinet has one less member than the previous one. The minor post of paymaster general and minister of employment has not been filled.

As then-chairman of the Conservative Party, Parkinson masterminded Mrs. Thatcher's second election victory in June 1983. She called him the "best chairman the party has ever had." Aides have said privately she long wanted him back in the Cabinet.

On the June 9, 1983, night of the second election victory, Parkinson confided to Mrs. Thatcher that his secretary, Sara Keays, then 36, was having his baby. Miss Keays said later Parkinson had promised to marry her.

Mrs. Thatcher, who reportedly urged Parkinson to stay in the Cabinet — and not to leave his wife — named him trade secretary. But four months later, news of the affair broke in newspapers and Parkinson quit.

There were no other women in the Cabinet, now dominated almost entirely by men from the right wing of Mrs. Thatcher's party.

The appointments were announced after Mrs. Thatcher, 61, broke the news of their appointments or dismissals individually to the politicians who trooped in and out of her Downing Street office through the day.

Afterward, Mrs. Thatcher was driven in drizzling rain to nearby Buckingham Palace for the traditional audience with Queen Elizabeth II by the head of a new government.

VICTORIOUS — Britain's Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher waves to the crowd in Downing Street and Whitehall, in London as she celebrates her victory in last week's elections. Mrs. Thatcher was returned for a third term in office. (AP Laserphoto)

Panama's Rebels Get U.S. Backing

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — When anti-government protests broke out in Panama last week, the Reagan administration moved quickly to distance itself from a regime that many officials regard as one of the most corrupt in the hemisphere.

The State Department called for the withdrawal from politics of the Panamanian military, respect for human rights, full press freedom and an early end to the suspension of constitutional guarantees. The U.S. ambassador to Panama, Arthur Davis, spent three hours Thursday at the home of an opposition leader who had been under house arrest.

The moves appeared calculated to put the United States on the side of the demonstrators, who turned out in large numbers to express opposition to Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, the chief of Panama's Defense Forces and the country's most powerful political figure.

U.S. officials have long viewed Noriega as a troublesome figure.

Norman Bailey, a former National Security Council staff member, has said that Noriega has made a fortune in drug smuggling activities and has been confronted directly on this issue by American officials, including former NSC chief John Poindexter.

According to Bailey, Noriega once attended a conference of "high-level drug traffickers" in Peru. There is also some evidence that Noriega supplied weapons to Cuban-backed rebels in Colombia.

A former U.S. ambassador in Central America has said that Noriega was the richest man in the region.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., has also complained about Noriega's alleged drug trafficking but congressional concern over the general is not limited to Helms and his conservative allies.

Rep. Stephen Solarz, a liberal Democrat from New York, was the author of an amendment approved by the House Foreign Affairs Committee that would link future U.S. assistance to the holding of free and fair elections in Panama.

State Department officials generally have kept their concerns about Noriega to themselves. A senior official said several months ago there was not much the United States could do about the situation given the absence of any vocal, broad-based opposition to Noriega in Panama.

Beyond that, the administration approach was dictated by caution because a hostile Panama might be tempted to retaliate against the 40,000 Americans, including 10,000 U.S. military personnel, living in that country.

Panama is a country of considerable strategic importance because it serves as headquarters of the U.S. Southern Command and is used as a base for intelligence gathering activities throughout Central America and the northern tier of South America. Panama's cooperation also is needed for the defense of the Panama Canal.

When the demonstrators turned out last week, the administration decided for once to make clear its concerns about Panama's leadership. It was a case of "seizing an opportunity," said one official, insisting on anonymity.

Germans Protest Nuclear Weapons

BONN, West Germany (AP) — About 100,000 people gathered in a muddy Bonn park Saturday to demand nuclear disarmament, in the biggest anti-nuclear protest in West Germany since NATO bolstered its nuclear forces throughout Europe in 1983.

The protest was organized by a loose coalition of left-wing parties, pacifists and ecological groups, including the anti-NATO Greens party. No disturbances were reported.

The protest began with a peace march in central Bonn and ended with a rally in Hofgarten park.

It was the West German peace movement's biggest rally since 1983, when repeated demonstrations were organized to protest the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's deployment of new U.S. Pershing II and cruise medium-range missiles in Europe.

West German anti-missile activism lost momentum after protesters failed to stop the deployment.

Saturday's rally focused on the U.S.-Soviet arms-control process now, with speakers saying much remains to be done.

Among the speakers were Hans-Jochen Vogel, chairman-designate of the opposition Social Democratic Party, and Petra Kelly, a Greens parliamentary deputy.

Former Social Democratic Chancellor Willy Brandt also appeared on the stage, but did not speak.

Vogel, flanked by two aides with umbrellas to ward off eggs thrown at him by leftist militants, called for both superpower alliances, NATO and the Warsaw Pact, to disarm to a point where neither would be capable of military aggression.

He assailed the conservative-led Bonn government for insisting that the West German army's Pershing 1A medium-range missiles be exempted from an East-West accord removing medium-range missiles from Europe.

Ms. Kelly said the bid by Chancellor Helmut Kohl's government to keep the 72 Pershing 1As was "a bold grab for one's own nuclear weapons."

The Social Democrats and Greens have charged that insistence on retaining the Pershing 1As could hold up a historic nuclear disarmament accord. The Soviets have demanded the inclusion of the 1As in any agreement. The Pershing 1A nuclear warheads are U.S.-controlled.

Election Plan

WILSON, N.C. (AP) — The U.S. Justice Department has raised no objections to a new five single-member district election plan for the city of Wilson, clearing the way for city council members to be elected by districts in November.

The Justice Department's preclearance, which is required under the 1965 Voting Rights Act, was received by city attorney Bobby Jones Thursday.

Experimental Alzheimer's Treatment Falls Short During Follow-Up Studies

By MALCOLM RITTER
AP Science Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — An experimental treatment for Alzheimer's disease that gained wide publicity for its initial results has proven disappointing in follow-up studies, researchers say.

The new research found too little improvement in patients to justify the risks of the treatment, which involves surgically implanting a pump that supplies the brain with a drug called bethanechol chloride.

"I would be very pessimistic that bethanechol is going to have any future for treating Alzheimer's disease," said Dr. Robert Harbaugh of the Dartmouth-Hitchcock Medical Center in Hanover, N.H.

Researchers are now looking for a more effective drug to use with an implanted pump, he said in a recent interview.

Harbaugh was to speak Saturday at a conference on implanted drug pumps, sponsored by the New York Academy of Sciences.

Alzheimer's disease afflicts some 2.5 million Americans and kills more than 100,000 every year. It is a progressive, irreversible disorder that causes gradual memory loss, disorientation, personality change and loss of language skills.

Most victims are over 65, but it can strike people in their 40s and 50s. Among those to die of the disease was actress Rita Hayworth.

The bethanechol treatment gained widespread press coverage in 1984 when Harbaugh published results of an initial study with four patients. Members of the patients' families said they noticed that the drug eased the disease's symptoms.

In the interview, Harbaugh said those assessments may have been biased by psychological cues given unintentionally by investigators.

His follow-up study, designed to eliminate that possibility, involved 12 patients. A pump about the size of a hockey puck was implanted in the abdomen, and a tube leading from it was inserted into the brain.

Each patient got bethanechol for three months and an inert saline solution for another three months. Researchers tested each patient during both periods for comparison.

The drug produced some improvement in performance on an overall test that considers such abilities as orientation, language, short-term memory and attention, Harbaugh said.

But more specific tests for short-term memory, language and other abilities failed to show any difference, he said.

"There is improvement on some of the functions with the drug infusion, but realistically not enough improvement to make this a viable treatment," he said.

Similar results emerged from another follow-up study of 10 patients. Bethanechol produced no improvement in memory or other mental abilities, and only slight improvement in such behavioral disturbances as agitation and delusions, said Dr. Robert Wilson of Rush Medical College in Chicago.

Piedmont Opens London Route

mont flights heading for London each day, he said the addition of the London flight has more qualitative than quantitative value to the company.

"Europe is now a couple of hours closer than before. You can get on a plane (in Charlotte) at 2:35 p.m. and be in London at 6:35 a.m. the next morning. The reaction has just been phenomenal," he said.

Pat Anthony, travel consultant for Quixote Travel in Greenville, said tickets for the flights are selling like hot cakes. "It's been phenomenal, the number of people who have bought tickets," she said. Package plans are selling well also.

According to Ms. Anthony, it is now possible to get round-trip tickets from Greenville to London for $539. Piedmont is offering two London packages, both for week-long trips, and have just cut the price of both by $200 to entice more travelers.

Still, the packages have not been a tremendous seller at Travel Express, according to Ginger Longino, president of the company. "The packages were a little late coming out to get the summer crowd," she said.

However, she noted that bookings on the regular flights have been tremendous. "Low fares have stimulated a lot of activity in the area we might not have seen," she added.

Ms. Longino mentioned that people are sometimes hesitant to try something new. "We never really realized it was going to go this well. It is more than we had hoped for, really and truly," she said.

Ms. Longino also said that she doesn't see the new flight having very much immediate effect on Greenville businesses. She said she has booked lots of Pacific-Asian travel in the past, but that there are not a lot of corporate trips to the London area.

Burroughs Wellcome is one Greenville company with ties in London. That's where the international corporation is based.

"I'm sure we'll use it (the new service) quite often," said Jim Goes, the general manager of the Greenville site. "The schedules are pretty good. It's a lot easier to get from Greenville home. It will be nice not to go through the international airports in Washington, D.C., and New York," he said.

Although six people from his site made trips to London last week, the Burroughs Wellcome facility in the Research Triangel Park will make much more use of the Charlotte hub, sending about four or five times the number of people from Greenville that make the trip, Goes said.

Two other large Greenville industries, Procter and Gamble and the East Carolina University School of Medicine, say the new flight will have little, if any, impact on their operations.

Bob Griffin, plant manager of P&G, said it would have no effect on business operations since most of the company's international work is done in Germany, Canada and Japan.

At the school of medicine, spokesman Tom Fortner said there are only 25 to 30 trans-Atlantic flights by staff members to Europe each year, usually for academic reasons such as lecturing or presenting a paper. He said there also are students each year who participate in a student exchange program in Bristol, England, and that some of them might use the flight. "Our first priority is to get the best rate," he said.

Jim Turcotte, the manager at the Pitt-Greenville Airport, said he thinks the new service will have a positive effect on the airport. "I can't say that it will be substantial," he said, "but it will have a positive effect. It's just another route — historically people have had to go to New York to make connections. Now they don't."

American Eagle Service Opens

The first American Eagle departure from PGA is scheduled for 9:05 a.m. Monday, according to Turcotte, who said flights to Raleigh should take about 28 minutes.

American Eagle plans to service PGA with Metro 3, 19-passenger, pressurized airplanes manufactured by Fairchild in San Antonio, Texas, according to Larry Rednaur, vice president-marketing for American Eagle, who said the airline is pleased with the community's response already.

"Everything looks to be right on target," Rednaur said. "I think it's just a matter of the finishing touches.

"We're enthused by the advanced booking and the community support. It appears the community is very excited about the new service and the opportunities it will give the community."

The increase from 10 daily departures of commuters to 16 may create some airport congestion, but the airport staff is prepared to handle it, Turcotte said.

"We're going to anticipate that there may be some congestion at certain times of the day," he said. "It depends on the success of American. We can project all the numbers we want, but we really have to see what's going to happen."

Greene Central's Anthony Jones, shown here in earlier playoff action, was named the Most Valuable Player in the State 2-A Baseball Championships Saturday after he pitched the Rams to a 4-0 win over West Wilkes for the title. Jones Named Most Valuable

Rams Win, 4-0; Take Title

MILLERS CREEK — Anthony Jones slammed the door on West Wilkes and pitched Greene Central to the 2-A North Carolina High School Athletic Association baseball championship Saturday, 4-0.

Working the first part of the game in the a light drizzle, Jones, who had won the first game of the best-of-three series, gave up only three hits while striking out eight and walking just three.

Only three Black Hawks reached as far as second base and none got further. Greg Church doubled in the first inning and repeated that effort in the fourth to account for two of those runners on second. Then, in the sixth, Andy Blevins singled and moved to second on a passed ball.

Aside from that, it was all Greene Central.

After two scoreless innings, the Rams pushed over three runs in the top of the third frame. Vance Head led off with a bad-hop double to left. Jake Barrow followed with a single that drove in Head. Ervin Collins sacrificed Barrow up and Gary Ginn walked, then stole second after Barrow had gone to third. Shay Beaman followed with a single, driving in both runners.

The other Ram run crossed in the fifth inning. Barrow doubled and was sacrificed up by Collins. T.J. Johnson grounded out, with Barrow scoring on the play.

"Most of our hits came in the innings that we scored in. But we did hit the ball three times right to the fence only to have it caught," Ram Coach Jim Fulghum said. "Right after Beaman singled in those two in the third, Tommy Eason followed with what was probably the best hit ball of the day. He hit a line drive that they caught right up against the fence."

Aside from those few innings, Fulghum said, "It was quick in and quick out."

The coach praised his pitcher, who was named as the Most Valuable Player following the game. "Anthony had his good fast ball today. He did get a little tired in the last two innings. His game wasn't quite as good as the one he threw against Whiteville, but it was on a par with it."

Jones wound up the season with a 10-1 record, including a 5-0 mark in the playoffs.

Fulghum said that it rained on in off at the field from 10 a.m. until around 2:30 p.m. "Their field held the water well, and after it quit, about the third inning, the field got better. We were a little doubtful that we would get to play, but both teams wanted to play, so we went at it," Fulghum said.

For the Rams, it marks the third state championship in the last 15 years. They won the title in 1972 and 1980 also. The 1987 state champs finished the season with a 24-5 record.

The Rams won the opening game on Wednesday, 3-2, then fell to the Black Hawks on Thursday, 9-7. They traveled back to Snow Hill Thursday night, arriving around 1:30 a.m., then the seniors went through graduation exercises on Friday night.

Immediately after that, they reboarded the bus to return to West Wilkes, arriving at their motel at around 1:20 a.m. "They got to bed immediately and slept until 9:30 when we gave them a mini-meal. So I don't think the trip took much out of us the way it was."

And, instead of a mini-meal after the game, the Rams celebrated with steaks on the way back to Snow Hill — the 2-A title trophy nestled in a safe place on the bus.

Celtics Face 'Must-Win'

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — The Boston Celtics believe they can stop their six-game road losing streak Sunday for one simple reason — they have to.

The Los Angeles Lakers lead the best-of-seven NBA championship series 3-2 and can win their fourth title since 1980 with a victory at The Forum either Sunday or Tuesday night. Easy wins at home in the first two games of the series have made the Lakers an overwhelming favorite to dethrone the defending NBA champions.

"This team has never quit since I've been on it and I don't think we'll start now," Celtics forward Kevin McHale said Saturday. "There's no secret we have to play our style and get everyone involved in the offense."

"We know it's our final chance, so I really believe we'll play well," Larry Bird said. "I don't see us getting blown out by 20."

Los Angeles won the first two games of the series by scoring 267 points in an impressive display of fast-break basketball.

The Lakers averaged only 106 points in the three games at Boston Garden, but managed to bring a 3-2 lead back to California because they won 107-106 in Game 4 on a hook shot by Magic Johnson with two seconds left.

"This series is the same situation as last year when we were up 3-2 against Houston and went home for two games," Bird said. "We knew it was over and that's probably the way the Lakers feel. They've been through it before and they should win it."

Asked if the Celtics lacked confidence on the road after the six straight playoff losses on the road and a nine-game road losing streak during the season, Celtics Coach K.C. Jones said, "We should be feeling good about ourselves. We were not supposed to make the finals and we did, and we were not supposed to make it back to Los Angeles for the sixth game, but we did."

"Now the line's been drawn. We have to win on the road, or it's over," Jones said.

Bird said the Celtics' road woes have occurred because "teams definitely play better at home. In the past, we've been able to overcome that because we had the firepower. With all our injuries, we haven't had the firepower. But we would like to get this into a seventh game and see how the Lakers will react."

For now, the Lakers are relieved that the Boston Garden portion of the series is over.

"Those seven days in Boston were a killer for me," Lakers Coach Pat Riley said. "It was a distracting week for us. I don't think we accomplished much, other than to play three games.'g

The Lakers, virtually injury-free all season while the Celtics struggled with injuries to key players, may have suffered a setback to their fast-break attack, which was so devastating in the first two games.

Guard Michael Cooper suffered a sprained right knee in Thursday's 123-108 loss when he collided with Dennis Johnson of the Celtics.

"We'll see what the doctors say on Sunday," Cooper said after practice Saturday when asked if he would play. "The knee is hurt and they may have to roll me out there in a hospital bed."

"He'll be dragging that leg, limping around, but he'll be there," Riley said of Cooper.

Cooper said that with the Lakers needing only one victory to win their fourth NBA title in this decade, one more than Boston in the same span, fans at The Forum would be inspirational.

"It's our home, our fans," he said. "And we're going to need all our fans. They hoped we wouldn't be back, but unfortunately we're back, and we need them."

Cooper said the two losses in Boston "may have hurt the confidence of the people in Los Angeles who said we would sweep, but the team's confidence is good."

Lakers center-forward Mychal Thompson, who scored 18 points and led a short-lived Los Angeles rally in the fourth quarter of Game 5, said the 'Showtime' atmosphere at the Forum could provide some help.

"The lighting will be better, just from all the glitter of the celebrities," Thompson said.

Riley said he suspected during pregame practice Thursday that the Lakers wouldn't play well in Game 5.

"I didn't sense a seriousness," Riley said. "I didn't sense the same thing we had before Game 1 and Game 2. At first, I thought, "This is great, we might go out nice and loose.' But we played comfortable, like we had a cushion game. Even though we talked about it, we played a cushion game."

Magic Johnson said the Lakers would gladly take any kind of victory on Sunday, "whether it's a one-point win or a 20-point win. We still have to play good basketball. The fans won't put the ball in the basket for you."

Reid Holds Shot Lead In Tourney

HARRISON, N.Y. (AP) — Mike Reid and Seve Ballesteros went head-to-head in Saturday's third round of the $600,000 Westchester Golf Golf Classic — and it was Ballesteros who blinked first.

Ballesteros, a long-hitting Spaniard who has won two Masters and a pair of British Opens among his 51 international titles, looked like he was going to take command after he eagled the par-5 ninth hole.

But he followed with consecutive bogeys, allowing Reid to catch up.

Reid, a short-hitting non-winner in 11 years on the PGA Tour, birdied the 14th hole and hung on to lead Ballesteros by a stroke after 54 holes.

"I lost my momentum. I lost some confidence. I didn't play very well after that," Ballesteros said after finishing off a round of par 71.

Reid played just about as well as he had to. He deftly nudged the ball around the Westchester Country Club course in 2-under-par 69 and, at 203, 10 under par, held a one-shot advantage going into Sunday's final round of the chase for a $108,000 first prize.

And possibly his first victory.

"And you can't win a golf tournament on Saturday.

"Tomorrow, I have the opportunity to win. I've got to take the bit in my teeth and run with it.

"With a player like Seve on my heels — he's a great, world-class player, maybe the best in the world — one shot is like no lead at all.

"To win, I will have to play boldly, more aggressively than I did today.

"I can't go out there thinking about what not to do; I can't go out hoping and wishing. I detected some of that today and I'm not at all pleased with it," Reid said.

"Seve was very kind today.

"He let quite a few opportunities slip away from him. I can't expect him to be that kind tomorrow," Reid added.

"I don't feel I played very good," Ballesteros said. "But I am still there, still very close.

"But to win tomorrow, I must play better."

Ballesteros said he was questioned by officials after he finished play about a possible rule violation which was discussed by national television commentators.

Numerous viewers telephoned officials claiming that Ballesteros' ball moved when he grounded his club behind it while in deep rough near the 14th green.

"The ball shook a little because the grass was very fluffy," Seve said.

"It shook. But it did not change position.

"I know the rule very well. It does not matter if it shakes and does not change position. If it changes position, that is something else."

After questioning Ballesteros and viewing film, officials determined there was no violation.

Chris Perry, son of former major league pitcher Jim Perry, had a tie for second until he put his third shot on the par-5 18th into a bunker and eventually settled for a bogey.

He finished with a 67 and was two off the pace at 205.

J.C. Snead, who had a 65, and former Westchester winner Roger Maltbie, with a 68, were at 206.

It was another two shots back to Sandy Lyle of Scotland and Loren Roberts at 208. Each had a round of par-71.

Ballesteros was one in front when the day's play began, but Reid caught him by hitting a wedge shot to within six feet and making a birdie on the seventh.

The powerful Ballesteros, however, reached the par-5 ninth in two and holed a 10-foot putt for eagle. Reid made birdie on the hole, but was one back.

But Ballesteros drove into trouble on both the 10th and 11th, and bogeyed both holes. Reid also bogeyed the 11th, taking three from the fringe, and they were tied again.

"Those two bogeys, I lost my momentum. I lost some confidence. I didn't play very well after that," said Ballesteros, who had to one-putt for par on three consecutive holes coming home.

Reid, meanwhile hit a 7-iron to within two feet of the flag on 14 for the birdie that put him ahead.

Tyson, Tucker Set To Meet

NEW YORK (AP) — Mike Tyson and Tony Tucker, both undefeated, will meet Aug. 1 at the Las Vegas Hilton in a heavyweight unification title bout, Don King Productions announced Saturday.

Tyson is the World Boxing Association and World Boxing Council champion. Tucker stopped James "Buster" Douglas May 30 to win the International Boxing Federation championship.

The bout will determine one heavyweight champion for the first time since Leon Spinks took the title from Muhammad Ali Feb. 15, 1978.

Tyson, from Catskill, N.Y., has a 30-0 record with 27 knockouts. Tucker of Houston has a record of 34 wins, with 21 knockouts, and one draw.

Tyson, at 20, became the youngest heavyweight champion in history when he captured the WBC title by stopping Trevor Berbick in the second round of their fight on Nov. 23, 1986. He added the WBA title by taking a 12-round decision over champion James "Bonecrusher" Smith last March.

The 28-year-old Tucker, in beating Douglas, took the title vacated when the IBF stripped Michael Spinks for not defending against Tucker, who was the top-ranked contender.

HBO will telecast Tyson-Tucker bout, which will be scheduled for either 12 or 15 rounds, King spokesman Murray Goodman said.

The fight had been lined up for some time, with only Tucker's signing of the contract needed to wrapup the deal. Goodman said that had now been done.

Celebrity Golf Moved To June '88; Clark To Chair

Joe Clark, who will retire as director of the East Carolina University Student Stores, has been named as the chairman for the 1988 Eastern Carolina Golf Classic, which benefits the Greenville Ronald McDonald House.

The tournament, which has been held in the fall since it began, will be moved to late spring in 1988, skipping this fall, Clark has announced.

The next tournament will be held on the weekend of June 18-19, 1988. "This change in schedule was due to the considerable expansion of the tournament and conflicts which did not allow us to get top-rated celebrities," Clark said. "In June, more stars and professional athletes are accessible than in September. Also the change of date will enhance participation."

Clark said that some celebrities have already been signed up for the tournament, and those would be announced at a date in the future.

Clark has served on the tournament committee since it began in 1984 and served as vice-chairman for the 1986 tournament.

The tournament has been one of the major fund-raisers for the Ronald McDonald House which will open shortly adjacent to Pitt Memorial Hospital. The house will serve as a home-away-from-home for the families of children being treated at Pitt Memorial.

Some $100,000 has been raised in the three years of the tournament.

Clark has been active in civic affairs for many years, serving as president of the local chapter of the Red Cross, of the Greenville Jaycees, the United Fund, the Eastern Sheltered Workshop Association for four years, and as general chairman of the 1984 fund campaign of the Heart Association.

Joe Clark

In 1967, Clark was named the Outstanding Young Man of the Year by the Greenville Jaycees, having served as Jaycee president the previous year. He has been active in the ECU Alumni Development Fund and as chairman of the gifts committee for Pitt County Memorial Hospital. He is a member of the PCMH Foundation.

Professionally, he was a founder and a former president of the College Stores Association of North Carolina and is certified as a Store Professional by the National Association of College Stores.

A Greenville native, Clark is a graduate of East Carolina. He served 2½ years in the U.S. Air Force as a B47 pilot with the Strategic Air Command. He is married to the former Patti Devine of Greenville and is a member of St. James Methodist Church. He and his wife have three children and two grandchildren.

Cooney, Spinks Go For Non-Title

That time arrives Monday night at Convention Hall — Cooney vs. Michael Spinks for the heavyweight championship.

At least, promoter Butch Lewis is calling it a heavyweight championship, and boxing commissions in Florida and the District of Columbia are recognizing it as such.

"We're not a sanctioning body, but we're allowed to approve fights for 15 rounds," Larry Hazzard, head of the New Jersey State Athletic Board, said. "They can all it whatever they want to call it."

Many boxing people are simply calling it an interesting fight, one which will put the winner in position for a major-money match against Mike Tyson.

"Michael Spinks is the heavyweight champion of the world," Lewis contends. "The man who beat Larry Holmes is the heavyweight champion. Titles are won and lost in the ring."

The unbeaten Spinks won the International Boxing Federation title on a close, but unanimous, decision over Holmes on Sept. 21, 1985, then won the rematch on a split decision on April 19, 1986.

After one more defense, the IBF withdrew championship recognition when Spinks refused to agree to a mandatory defense against Tony Tucker, who now holds the IBF title. Tyson is recognized as champion by the World Boxing Council and World Boxing Association.

"It isn't the alphabets that matter to me," Spinks said. "It's the people ... the fans who buy a magazine to read about me, who take time out from a busy day to watch me."

When his career ends, Spinks said, "I want to be claimed by the public to be the champion, and to be undefeated."

Just what is the public view of this fight, which will be seen throughout the United States on closed-circuit television?

Lewis said a sellout at the 16,000-seat Convention Hall seems assured, but he admitted closed-circuit ticket sales were slow. They were practically nonexistent in some areas late in the week. For instance, the telecast at the 20,000-seat Joe Louis Arena at Detroit was canceled after fewer than 30 tickets reportedly were sold.

Lewis blamed the poor sales on four factors:

— He said he has refused the requests of many exhibitors to make racial rivalry the basis of his promotional campaign, to bill it as a match between a white challenger (Cooney) and a black champion.

— "A lot of people think it's on HBO," Lewis said. The cable company has televised the last 12 heavyweight title bouts.

— "The nature of the guys," Lewis said. Neither fighter has lit up news conferences with the kind of gestures and heated words that make headlines.

— "People wonder, 'Will Cooney show up?' " Lewis said. "They all expect him to fight when he is in the ring. But will he show up?"

Cooney's career is peppered with postponements and cancellations for various reasons.

The 30-year-old Cooney has fought just seven rounds since his only defeat, when he was stopped in the 13th round of a WBC title bid against Holmes on June 11, 1982.

"I feel good, I feel happy," Cooney said. "I'm doing what I want to do. I just feel it's my time."

"I'm optimistic that if we overcome the hurdle of Gerry being there, I won't suffer," Lewis said.

Spinks is guaranteed $4 million and Cooney $2.5 million, although the announced guarantees were much higher. Donald Trump, who operates two hotel-casinos at Atlantic City, paid $3.5 million for the live gate.

Cooney certainly is the most financially successful fighter never to win a title. He reportedly has earned $18 million, most of it in the 1980's, although he has fought only 26 rounds in the decade.

Cooney's last fight was a first-round knockout of Eddie Gregg on May 31, 1986, at San Francisco. That was his 24th knockout in 28 victories.

The 30-year-old Spinks' most recent fight was last Sept. 6 at Las Vegas, Nev., when he retained the IBF title on a fourth-round knockout of Steffan Tangstad.

Spinks has a 30-0 record. He has scored 20 knockouts, but 19 of them were against light heavyweights. He is the only light heavyweight champion ever to become a heavyweight champion.

Cooney holds advantages in both size and power. At 6-foot-7, he is 4½ inches taller than Spinks and has a five-inch edge in reach. He also probably will outweigh Spinks by 30-35 pounds

The fighters will weigh in at noon on Sunday.

"Cooney only knows how to fight one way — that's on the bull," Lewis said.

"If I hit him, I'll hurt him," Cooney said. "He'll know what it feels like to get hit by a real heavyweight."

What the fight seems to boil down to is: can Spinks, an intelligent boxer, dodge the bullet long enough to tire and frustrate Cooney?

Spinks has an awkward style and at times he appears to be stumbling about.

"I take pride in defense," he said. "I let them label it. I don't know what to call it. That's pretty much how I win, make an opponent miss and capitalize on his mistakes.

For The 'Bama Fan Who Thinks He Has Everything

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — If you're looking for a gift for an avid Alabama football fan who already has a red and white tie and a stuffed elephant, why not try a slab of pavement and two nice, white lines?

That's right, a parking place — only this parking place is adjacent to Birmingham's Legion Field. And for a one-time payment of $7,500, plus a yearly fee of $100, your favorite Alabama fan can own a "tailgate condo" that will forever end the worry of where to park.

Luverne businessman Gerald Stough and two friends, Stan Owens and John Harris, have acquired a 1.4-square mile tract of property northeast of Legion Field and are developing parking condos, complete with a pavilion for large-screen televisions, bathrooms and ice machines to facilitate tailgate picnics before the big game. In addition, the parking condos will be fenced and will have security patrols before, during and after the games.

"Everybody knows that the enjoyment of a football game isn't limited to the game itself," Stough said. "It's a big social gathering, where you sit around before the game and eat, drink and fellowship with your friends. Our condos are just going to improve the idea of tailgating. Our facility's going to be real nice."

Stough expects to have the parking spaces ready for Alabama's season opener Sept. 5 against Southern Missisippi, which will be the first of six Alabama games played in Birmingham this year because of the remodeling of Bryant-Denny Stadium in Tuscaloosa. Even after the renovation is complete, Alabama has a contract to play three games a year in Birmingham for the next nine years.

The idea of tailgate condos did not originate with Stough and his partners. They read a story in the Wall Street Journal in January about how two Columbia, S.C., businessmen had made a tidy profit off selling parking spaces near the Gamecocks' stadium.

They sold all of the 260 spaces in their two parking condos — appropriately called Carolina Park and Cocks' Corner — for $8,000 each, plus a $100 yearly fee.

"The three of us read the story and thought that as avid as football fans in this state are, it would work here," Stough told The Alabama Journal.

"It does cost a good bit, but it's been a good investment for the folks in South Carolina," he said. "Poeple have bought them for the initial price of $8,000 and turned around and sold them for as much as $15,000."

Coke scored all it needed in the first inning, pushing over three runs. Ken Coward reached on an error and moved up on a wild pitch. Charlton singled him to third and stole second. A wild pitch scored Coward and another brought Charlton around. Alex Darden kept it going with a double, scoring when Ebron reached on an error.

Coke then added one each in the second, third and fourth, and finished it off with three in the fifth.

The lone run for the Jaycees scored in the sixth inning.

Pepsi added three in the fifth and four more in the sixth. First Federal added one more in the fifth.

Jarman's Auto 7

Mike Howard hit a grand-slam home run to help lead the Moose to an 8-7 victory over Jarman's Auto in Tar Heel Little League action Saturday.

Jarman's struck first, getting two runs in the first inning. The Moose came back with two in the second to tie it up, then added another in the third for a 3-2 lead. Howard's grand-slam accounted for four more runs in the fourth, but Jarman's rallied for two in the bottom of the fourth.

The Moose then got what proved to be the winning run in the fifth. Jason Krause singled and John Tipton walked. Jared Krause reached on a fielder's choice and Todd Mitchum singled to drive in Jason Krause.

Jarman's tried to rally, scoring three times, two of them on a homer by Omar Jordan. The rally fell short, however, leaving the potential tying run on second.

Montez Barrett had two hits to lead the Moose while no one had more than one hit for Jarman's.

Evans Sparks Tiger Win

DETROIT (AP) — It was fitting that Lakeland Mayor Frank J. O'Reilly threw out the ceremonial first pitch because it was in his Florida city, three months ago during spring training, that Detroit slugger Darrell Evans put in motion the gears that beat Boston on Saturday.

Evans hit a three-run homer that snapped a sixth-inning tie and carried the Tigers to a 6-4 victory over the Red Sox, who also train in Polk County, just 20 miles down the road from Lakeland in Winter Haven.

"In spring training, I started working on that and hit the ball the other way real well," said Evans, a left-handed hitter who in the past pulled almost everything to right field. "He threw the ball up and I stayed on it and hit it good.

"They've been pitching me away. I stand up (close) on the plate anyway. I just stayed with the pitch and went with it. In this park, if you hit the ball hard it will go out in any field."

Boston Manager John McNamara, who had left-hander Tom Bolton ready in the bullpen when Evans came to the plate, was asked why he elected to stick with an obviously faltering Crawford.

"I'm not going to second guess myself," McNamara said. "I got the matchup I wanted. To the best of my knowledge, that's the first home run Evans has ever hit to that part of the ballpark against us.

"The pitching is only one phase of the ballgame. We didn't score a lot of runs when we had opportunities."

Dan Petry, 3-4, who had given up 12 runs while lasting a total of six innings in his previous two starts, pitched seven innings and allowed seven hits as the Tigers beat the Red Sox for the fifth time in six games this season. Petry walked three, struck out six and threw two wild pitches, one of which let in a run.

"This ballclub has been playing well for a long time now. I want to be a part off it," Petry said. "I wasn't any help last year and, so far, I haven't been this much this year. I just want to get in there and do something."

Willie Hernandez, who pitched 1 2-3 innings, picked up his first save.

"That's the best I've seen Willie throw since 1985," Detroit Manager Sparky Anderson said. "He could really help us down the road."

Boston's Ellis Burks hit his eighth home run to lead off the game, but Detroit tied it 1-1 in the second when Matt Nokes singled off the shin of Boston starter Bob Stanley, moved up on a single by Sheridan and grounder by Evans, then scored on an RBI grounder by Larry Herndon.

Stanley finished the inning, then Crawford took over to start the third.

"Losing him didn't help," McNamara said. "He's kept us in a lot of ballgames, pitching into the seventh inning this year. All of a sudden, I've got a bullpen shortage."

In the Boston third, Wade Boggs extended his hitting streak to 15 games with a single, Jim Rice singled, then Petry hit Don Baylor for the second time to load the bases. Petry then walked Dwight Evans on four pitches to force in Boggs.

The Tigers answered with two runs in the fourth to take a 3-2 lead. Trammell led off with his eighth home run, extending his hitting streak to 18 games, highest in the American League this season.

Sheridan walked and was thrown out at the plate trying to score on a double by Evans, then Herndon singled Evans across with the go-ahead run.

But Dwight Evans walked in the Boston sixth, went to third on Mike Greenwell's single and scored when Petry threw a wild pitch while facing Spike Owen to tie the game 3-3.

struck out two men to retire the side," Tunnell said.

Tunnell, 3-1, had pitched 6 1-3 innings in 97-degree heat, limiting the Cubs to six hits when Shawon Dunston and Dave Martinez singled, threatening the Cardinals' 4-2 lead.

Dawley, who was ineffective against the Cubs last week in Chicago, came in and struck pinch hitter Gary Matthews and Paul Noce to end the Cubs threat.

"I got them on hard sliders," Dawley said. "All I was trying to do was get into the eighth inning so Todd Worrell could come in, but we didn't have to use him today."

Rick Horton finished up the game, as the Cardinals widened their lead over the Cubs to five games in the National League East.

Tunnell, who couldn't hold a 9-0 lead last Sunday against the Cubs, said he didn't mind the heat.

"I grew up in Texas so I better be used to this," he said.

Tunnell struck out five and walked only one as the Cardinals thwarted the bid by Rick Sutcliffe, 8-3, to become the National League's first nine-game winner.

Tunnell said his best pitch was his fastball, but he threw four straight curveballs to Jody Davis when the Cubs had two men on in the sixth.

Davis grounded out to short to end that threat.

"I didn't want to let him hit a fastball in that situation," Tunnell said. "He likes that pitch too much."

Terry Pendleton hit a solo homer and Vince Coleman and Tommy Herr each had three hits to lead the Cardinals' 14-hit attack.

Three of Pendleton's four home runs this season have been off the Cubs.

The Cardinals turned a 2-1 deficit into a 3-2 lead in the fifth with the help of aggressive baserunning by John Morris and Tony Pena.

With one out, Morris blooped a double to center and stole third. He scored the tying run on an infield hit by Pena.

Pena moved to second on a balk and scored on an infield hit by Vince Coleman. Pena kept running as second baseman Paul Noce fielded Coleman's grounder and attempted to throw Coleman out at first.

St. Louis added a run in the sixth on a double by Herr and an RBI single by Willie McGee and scored three more in the seventh on three hits, an error, a squeeze play and two walks. Hits by Coleman and Herr drove in the Cardinals' final two runs in the eighth.

Cubs second baseman Ryne Sandberg, who drove in the second run in the second inning with an infield hit, was injured when he stumbled while trying to avoid a collision with Cardinal first baseman Jack Clark.

Sandberg suffered a sprained right ankle on the play and had to leave the game. The Cubs said X-rays were negative and that Sandberg's condition would be evaluated Sunday.

Casper Leads Crowd In Seniors

PONTE VEDRA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — With eight players within three shots of the lead after three rounds of the Senior Tournament Players Championship, frontrunner Billy Casper is bracing for a real battle on the final day of the $400,000 tournament.

"I think it's going to be a dogfight," Casper said Saturday after shooting a 72 to take a one-stroke lead over defending champion Chi Chi Rodriguez and three others with 18 holes to play.

"Whoever gets going, gets a lead and can hold on will win," added Casper, who'll resume the chase for the first-place check of $60,000 Sunday.

The winner of one tournament and $75,115 this season, Casper started quickly on the par-72, 6,636-yard Oceanside course at Sawgrass Country Club, then survived two double-bogeys and one bogey to hold on to the lead with a 54-hole total of 6-under-par 210.

"I feel very, very fortunate to have had two double-bogeys and a bogey and still shoot 72," said Casper, who also had five birdies. "You don't do that very often. I feel fortunate to be leading."

Rodriguez, Gary Player, Charlie Owens and Bruce Crampton followed Casper at 5-under 211.

Rodriguez, seeking his fifth straight victory on the Senior Tour, saw his streak of consecutive rounds of par or less end at 14. He struggled to a 74, while Player carded a 69 and Owens and Crampton both shot 71.

Two-time Senior TPC champion Arnold Palmer, Gay Brewer and Walter Zembreski were next at 213. Palmer had a 72, while Brewer and Zembriski shot 71s.

Cowboys Top Deacs For Title

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Brian Watts shot a final-round 66 to match the course record and earn medalist honors, leading Oklahoma State to the team title at the 90th NCAA men's golf championships at Ohio State University's Scarlet Course on Saturday.

Watts finished at 8-under-par 280 for a 6-shot margin of victory.

Oklahoma State fired a final-round even-par 288 to finish at 8-over-par 1160 shots for the tournament. The Cowboys won by 16 shots over defending national champion Wake Forest.

Watts, a junior at Oklahoma State, began the day at 2-under par through 54 holes. Rounds of 74, 71 and 69 on the 7,104-yard, par-72 layout gave him a 1-stroke lead over teammate Michael Bradley.

He turned the first nine in 2-under, then took control with a birdie on 11 and a chip-in eagle from 50 feet on the par-5 12th hole to go to 7-under.

His 66 matched the competitive course record set by Tim Norris of Fresno St. in the 1980 NCAA championship and tied by Ohio State's Clark Burroughs in 1985.

Tied for second in the individual race were Nolan Henke of Florida State and Barry Fabyan of Wake Forest with 2-under 286.

At 2-over 290 came Colin Montgomerie of Houston Baptist, Chris Little of Arkansas and Tim Fleming of Oklahoma State.

Other scores for the champion Cowboys included E.J. Pfister at 304 and Brian Montgomery at 312.

Oklahoma State, which captured its fifth national championship, began the day with a 14-shot lead over second-place Oklahoma. But a 4-stroke penalty against junior E.J. Pfister for carrying too many clubs in his bag brought the Sooners into a tie with the Cowboys midway through the final round.

But they regrouped on the back nine to avoid a repeat of last year, when they led Wake Forest by 16 strokes going into the final round but ended up second by four shots.

The victory marked the 13th time in the last 15 years that Oklahoma State has either won or finished second in the NCAA championships.

Wake Forest was second with 1176 strokes, followed by Oklahoma, third with 1177; host Ohio State, fourth with 1185; Houston Baptist, fifth with 1186; Arkansas, sixth with 1187; Florida State, seventh with 1191; North Carolina, eighth with 1194; Fresno State, ninth with 1195; and Houston, 10th with 1196 strokes.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Shane Mack hit his first major-league homer and drove in three runs Saturday, leading the San Diego Padres to an 11-2 victory over the San Francisco Giants.

Carmelo Martinez had two doubles for three RBI and leadoff batter Randy Ready scored four runs as the Padres, 17-46 this season, won for the fifth time in their last nine games. Padres starter Andy Hawkins, 3-7, allowed six hits and two runs in five innings, and Craig Lefferts finished up for his second save.

Mack, playing in his 18th game since promotion from the minors, put the Padres ahead 2-1 with a leadoff homer in the second inning. He added had a two-run single in the fifth, when San Diego scored four runs to take an 8-1 lead.

Giants starter Atlee Hammaker, 3-3, allowed the first eight runs. He had allowed only one homer in 44 innings before Mack connected.

The Padres scored two more runs in the second on Garry Templeton's two-run single.

Ready opened the game with a single and scored when Martinez doubled. He also came home in the sixth on a two-run double by Martinez.

Chris Speier and Will Clark singled to open the Giants' first and Speier came around to score on groundouts by Jeffrey Leonard and Candy Maldonado. The Giants scored in the fifth on a double by Robby Thompson and single by Clark, who had three hits.

Patty Rizzo Eagles 18 To Take One-Shot Lead

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Patty Rizzo made a 75-foot eagle putt on the final hole Saturday to take a one-stroke lead over Betsy King after three rounds of the $350,000 LPGA Mayflower Classic.

Rizzo's eagle gave her a 2-under-par 70. She was at 9-under-par 207 after 54 holes.

King, the leading money-winner on this year's LPGA Tour, had charged into the lead by making a 6-foot birdie putt on the 429-yard, par-5 No. 18 hole, finishing with a 66 — the day's best round.

Colleen Walker, who began the day tied for the lead with Rizzo, was tied for third with Patty Sheehan and Bonnie Lauer at 209.

Juli Inkster, Deb Richard and Debbie Massey were another stroke back at 210, followed by Kathy Postlewait, Muffin Spencer-Devlin, Lenore Muraoka and Laurie Rinker at 211.

Rizzo, who last won in 1985, was at 8-under and had only one birdie and one bogey before her final hole.

"It was a pretty consistent day," said the 26-year-old Rizzo, whose best finish this year is a tie for fifth. "I was getting a little frustrated (over having only one birdie) and I felt there was nothing I could do, that those holes were over ... That was my attitude going into 18."

The tournament concludes Sunday with the winner earning $52,500.

King, who has earned $297,818 in 14 events, began the day five strokes behind Rizzo and Walker.

King started quietly with four pars and her only bogey of the day. A hot putter fueled her climb up the leader board as she needed just 26 putts for the 18 holes, and only 11 on the back side.

"I putted well," said King, who had a pair of 15-foot and two 10-foot birdie putts in her round. "The greens are holding better. I guess because of the (Friday) rain."

King began a string of three consecutive birdies with a 15-foot putt on the 315-yard, par-4 sixth hole. She left an 8-iron shot eight inches in front of the flag on the 130-yard seventh hole and tapped in for another birdie. On the next hole, King put a 6-iron 10 feet from the cup and made the birdie.

Her longest putt of the day came on the 17th, hole when she saved par by making a 20-footer.

Like King, Lauer and Sheehan moved out of the pack at the 6,156-yard Country Club of Indianapolis course with strong third rounds.

Lauer had a 3-under-par 33 on the back nine to finish with a 67. Sheehan birdied the final hole to finish at 69. Walker, who was 8-under after her opening hole, overcame a double-bogey on the second hole to finish with a par 70.

Richard, the first-day leader, had birdies on the last two holes to keep her hopes for her first title alive with a par-72. Cathy Gerring, who began the day tied with Richard, faded to 215 with a 77.

Massey, who had a 6-under-par 66 Friday, moved into the title chase with birdies on two of her first three holes to go 6-under for the tournament. She moved to 7-under on the 12th but followed with two consecutive bogies before finishing with a 70.

Muraoka, who missed the cut in her last three tournaments and nine times this year, is No. 135 on the money list with only $2,566 in earnings.

Sandra Palmer, seeking to be the first winner to successfully defend her championship in the tournament's 11-year history, shot a 69 and was seven strokes off the pace at 214.

Labonte Takes Miller Pole

Pole Sitter

LONG POND, Pa. (AP) — Terry Labonte set a track record of 155.502 mph Saturday to win the pole position for Sunday's Miller 500 Winston Cup race at Pocono International Raceway.

Labonte, 30, of Corpus Christi, Texas, circled the 2.5-mile tri-oval in 57.877 seconds. His qualifying speed topped the former record of 154.392 set by Harry Gant on July 19, 1986.

"I'm really excited, because I think our car will be awful good at Pocono," Labonte said. "We have had things going in the right direction the last four or five weeks."

Labonte is third in Winston Cup point standings behind Dale Earnhardt and Bill Elliott. He is the fourth-leading money winner this year at $275,595.

Benny Parsons will chase a share of the $457,000 purse from the No. 2 position after qualifying at 155.438. Tim Richmond, making his first start since a severe bout of pneumonia earlier this year, qualified third in the 40-car field at 155.341.

Rounding out the top 10 qualifiers are Elliott, at 154.865; Geoff Bodine, 154.520; Gant, 154.363; Earnhardt, 154.329; Cale Yarborough, 153.838; Darrell Waltrip, 153.770; and Alan Kulwicki, 153.754.

Davey Allison, who won the Budweiser 500 at Dover, Del., on May 31, qualified 26th in a backup car after smashing his primary car during practice Friday.

"This car's not quite near where the other one was, that's for sure," Allison said. "But we're gaining on it."

Friday's wreck occurred when Allison rounded the first turn too quickly and lost control. "It crinkled up the rear end pretty good," he said.

Starting 18th in Sunday's race will be veteran Richard Petty, who had been expected to sit out the race with two broken ribs. Joe Ruttman drove Saturday's qualifying round for Petty and is expected to take the wheel after Petty drives a few laps.

By starting the race, Petty is assigned whatever Winston Cup points the car wins. He is eighth in the Winston Cup standings and within a few points of moving up to fifth.

Here is the lineup for Sunday's $457,000 Miller 500 Winston Cup race with driver, car, qualifying time and speed.

Connors Gains Queens Finals

LONDON (AP) — Jimmy Connors, playing on the same court where he won his first overseas title 15 years ago, reached the final of the Queens Club grass-court championships Saturday by beating Australian Pat Cash 7-6, 6-4.

Connors, who has won a record 105 Grand Prix tournaments but has not won since October, 1984, produced his best service returns to nullify Cash's serve and volley game.

His opponent in the final of this Wimbledon tuneup will be determined Sunday.

The other semifinal, between defending champion Tim Mayotte and Boris Becker, had just started when torrents of rain drenched this picturesque site in West London and suspended play.

Before the rain, Mayotte broke Becker in the opening game and led the two-time Wimbledon champion 2-1 in the first set.

Their match will resume Sunday afternoon, with the championship match put back until Monday to prevent the winner of Mayotte-Becker from having to play twice on the same day.

Connors, a three-time champion at Queens Club, outmaneuvered his Australian opponent despite giving away 12 years in age.

The key to the 34-year-old American's victory was his service return, a renowned Connors weapon that was at its sharpest against Cash and frustrated the Australian, who was uncharacteristally slow around the court.

"He's got five or six different types of serves but every time I touched the ball today, I felt I had a chance to return it," Connors said.

"I'm enjoying myself but I'm also taking my tennis seriously. I'm not under any strain."

Cash had lost only one previous match on grass this year and eliminated No. 2 seed Stefan Edberg of Sweden in the quarterfinals here.

Against No. 5 seeded Connors, he made 21 unforced errors, three times as many as he hit against the Swede, and frequently mistimed his shots as Connors kept him pinned at the back of the court. When he did manage to rush the net, Cash's volleys lacked their usual precision.

The Australian staved off two break points in the ninth game of the first set and took the game into a tiebreaker where he saved a set point with a strong serve into Connors' body.

But the veteran American won the set on his second set point.

The players exchanged breaks in the third and fourth games of the second set and, surprisingly, it was the younger Cash who tired, netting the kind of strokes he hit as winners the previous day against Edberg.

Ex-Phoenix Sun Player Killed

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Former Phoenix Suns player Johnny High was killed in an automobile accident early Saturday morning, Phoenix police officials said.

Spokesman Sgt. Brad Thiss said High's sports car slammed into a utility pole on the city's east side about 2 a.m. MST, and he was pronounced dead at 3:30 a.m. at the Maricopa Medical Center.

High, who played college ball at Nevada-Reno, was the Suns' second-round draft pick in 1979.

He had played for the Suns until he was placed on waivers in 1984.

Suns' General Manager Jerry Colangelo called the death a shock, and said it was a sad occurence.

Twins, Jays Keep On Winning

By The Associated Press

Both teams have ridden hot streaks to the top of their respective American League divisions. Toronto set a team record with its 10th straight victory Friday night, an 8-5 win over Baltimore, which has lost nine in a row.

Minnesota swept a pair at Chicago, sending the White Sox to their fourth and fifth straight defeats. The Twins, who have won seven consecutive games, took the doubleheader 5-2 and 7-4.

The Blue Jays lead the East by three games over the Yankees, while Minnesota has a 1½-game edge on Kansas City.

Elsewhere in the AL Friday night, it was Kansas City 1, California 0 as Bret Saberhagen won his major league-high 11th game; New York 8, Milwaukee 3; Detroit 11, Boston 4; Cleveland 10, Seattle 6; and Oakland 6, Texas 1.

Blue Jays 8, Orioles 5

"We've got an awful lot of talent on this team and everyone can contribute," Toronto catcher Ernie Whitt said. "I think we proved that during the streak. This year we know what we have to do. We have to go into a series looking to take two out of three. If we do that, we will be in good shape come September."

They are in pretty good shape in June, owning the best record in the majors, 38-20.

Lloyd Moseby hit a three-run homer, Willie Upshaw had a solo shot and Tony Fernandez' looping fly ball in the eighth inning fell between left fielder Alan Wiggins, third baseman Ray Knight and shortstop Cal Ripken, scoring Garth Iorg and breaking a 5-5 tie.

Reliever Mark Eichhorn, 8-2, has the most wins of any relief pitcher in the majors.

"We're playing aggresive and taking advantage of all of the breaks," Iorg said.

The Orioles aren't doing that at all. While Toronto has won 13 of 14, the Orioles have lost 13 of 14. But they won't being laying down.

Twins 5, White Sox 2

Twins 7, White Sox 4

Frank Viola pitched seven strong innings, while Roy Smalley had a three-run homer and Greg Gagne added a solo shot in the opener. Minnesota upped its West lead to 1½ games over Kansas City with its second-game win as Dan Gladden and Gary Gaetti each hit two-run singles and Juan Berenguer won his fourth consecutive decision with 2 2-3 innings of scoreless relief.

"We're pitching better. Our staff is pointing us in the right direction," Minnesota Manager Tom Kelly said.

"We are also getting the pitchers some runs and we're playing better defensively."

Second baseman Steve Lombardozzi was impressed by the way the Twins have been winning.

"We've pulled out some games like a team of destiny, but I'm not saying we are a team of destiny," he said.

True Value.....12
Exchange.....3

Henry Clark, Monte Roundtree and Alan Colombo each collected two hits as True Value Hardware romped to a 12-3 victory over the Exchange in the Tar Heel Little League Friday.

Exchange scored first, getting a single run in the third. True Value matched that in the top of the fourth, but the Exchange went back out with two in the fifth. True Value scored twice in the sixth to tie it once more.

Then, in the top of the seventh, True Value exploded for nine runs and the win. Chris Ball opened with a walk and Heath Boyer also walked. Clark singled to drive in Ball and stole second. Roundtree walked, loading the bases. Colombo singled in Boyer and Craig Brannon walked, scoring Clark. A wild pitch plated Roundtree. Beau Williams walked to load the bases again and Jonathan Adams singled in Colombo. Ball reached on an error, scoring Brannon, Williams and Adams with the final runs.

No one had more than one hit for Exchange, which got only three off the pitching of Roundtree.

Lions.....4
Sportsworld.....2

The Lions, despite getting only four hits on the day, slipped past Sportsworld, 4-2, in a North State Little League game Friday.

Sportsworld took the lead in the first inning with a single run, but the Lions matched that in the second. Sportsworld again went out with one in the third, but again the Lions came back to tie it up with one in the fourth.

Then, in the sixth, the Lions pushed over the winning runs. Kevin Hardy reached on a one-out error and was safe on another misplay on Scott Briley's grounder. Both then scored when Carlton Holder singled.

The Lions got only five hits off the combined pitching on starter Deke Herrin and the winner in relief, Brian Fields.

Coca-Cola.....13
Wachovia Bank.....1

Maurice Hines tossed a two-hitter as Coca-Cola rolled over Wachovia Bank, 13-1, in the Babe Ruth League Friday night.

Wachovia scored first, getting what was to be its only run in the bottom of the first inning, when Tim Moore, who got both of the Wachovia hits, tripled and scored on an error.

Coke came back to score two in the second and take the lead for good. Hines opened with a single and Chad Adams singled. Both moved up on an out and Jeff Wilkins reached on an error, scoring Hines. Edwin Manning also reached on an error, allowing Adams to score.

Coke added four in the third inning and pushed in seven in the fourth.

Adams led the Coke hitting with four, driving in three runs. Hines added three hits, while Manning had two hits and four RBI.

Hendrix & Dail.....14
Garris-Evans.....9

Ben Edwards banged out five hits, including two doubles, and Jay Kuykendall added four, including two doubles and a triple, as Hendrix & Dail took a 14-9 victory over Garris-Evans in the Greenville Prep League Friday night.

Hendrix & Dail took the lead with two runs in the first, with Garris-Evans coming back with one in the bottom of the inning. H&D picked up five more in the second for a 7-1 lead, then added one in the fourth.

Two more crossed in the fifth, and that proved the difference. Eric Smith was hit by a pitch and with two outs, Kuykendall doubled. An error allowed Smith to score and Jeffrey Freeman singled in Kuykendall to make it 10-1.

H&D added two each in the sixth and seventh innings. Garris-Evans picked up three in the bottom of the fifth, four in the sixth and one in the seventh.

Freeman added three hits for H&D, while Matt Aldridge had three and Al DeBiase had two for Garris-Evans.

Reluctant Bosworth Goes To Seattle; Asks For Trade

SEATTLE (AP) — The Seattle Seahawks own the NFL rights to All-American linebacker Brian Bosworth. But now comes the hard part — they have to sign him.

The Seahawks selected Bosworth on Friday with the No. 1 pick in the NFL's supplemental draft. Although the former Oklahoma star hadn't listed the Seahawks among the teams he'd play for, Seattle doesn't intend to give up without a fight.

"We have him and we're going to make every effort to sign him," Seahawks Coach Chuck Knox said. "There's going to be a lot of posturing and rhetoric in the days coming up."

"He has the leverage of playing or not playing," Seattle President and General Manager Mike McCormack said. "He's the same as any other player. I think his ability is what gives him the leverage."

Both Knox and McCormack said they would try to sign Bosworth rather than trade his rights to one of the teams on his "wish" list.

"We're not even going to speculate on the possibility of a trade," McCormack said. "We've got players on our football team, some of whom are starting, whose agents sent out similar letters." He referred to a letter that Bosworth's agent, Gary Wichard, had mailed before the supplemental draft naming the teams his client would prefer.

Bosworth, in a news conference at New York, said he'd rather sit out the season than play for the Seahawks.

"Seattle doesn't fit the mold I want to put myself in," Bosworth said.

"Basically, it's up to Seattle to work something out," Wichard said. "We have no intentions of negotiating with Seattle for the 1987 season. We're hopeful of a trade.

"We're not bluffing; we'll sit out the year if he doesn't get one of the teams he wants," Wichard said, adding that he made that point to McCormack after the supplemental draft.

Bosworth on Friday revised his list of preferred teams to four — Tampa Bay, Philadelphia, the New York Jets and the Los Angeles Raiders. Bosworth said Tampa Bay was tops on his list because he wanted to play with quarterback Vinny Testaverde, the No. 1 pick in the regular NFL draft in April, and he likes Bucs Coach Ray Perkins and owner Hugh Culverhouse.

"I hope something can be worked out by one of my preferred teams," Bosworth said.

Bosworth had previously included the Los Angeles Rams and New York Giants. Wichard said the Rams were out because they didn't have a first-round pick and the Giants were eliminated because "they wanted to use him as only as a backup or on special teams."

"If he wants to play this year, he has to play with us," McCormack said. "If he goes back in the draft next year, he doesn't know who is going to draft him. Maybe it would be Buffalo. And if he sits out this year, I think his skills would really be diminished."

"If he doesn't play this year, he loses one year of earning power," Knox said. "He also has no assurances that he won't be picked by one of the teams he doesn't want to play for. So I think we're in a very, very good position."

Seattle, which won the first choice in a lottery involving the 28 NFL teams, was the only club to make a selection. Passed over were the other five players eligible for the draft — running back Curtis Jeffries of Northwest Mississippi Junior College, kicker Jeff Valder of Arizona and defensive backs Rorery Perryman of Boston College, Titus Turner of Morris Brown and Gary Morris, who did not play college football.

Kinugasa Surpasses Gehrig Mark

HIROSHIMA, Japan (AP) — Sachio Kinugasa of the Hiroshima Toyo Carp broke Lou Gehrig's record as the most durable man in baseball, playing in his 2,131st consecutive game Saturday.

When the game became official in the fifth inning, the game was stopped and a taped message of congratulations from Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone was played. Nakasone was out of the country, attending the Venice summit and visiting with European leaders.

In the sixth inning, Kinugasa hit a home run, his eighth of the season and 495th of his career. Despite the effort, his team lost to the Chunichi Dragons 8-3. The Carp still lead the Central League with a record of 25 victories, 13 losses and 8 ties.

On Thursday, Kinugasa tied the record set 48 years ago by the New York Yankee first baseman.

"I think I could have achieved it only with the idea that I like to play baseball," he said after Thursday's game.

This is the third time in history that a Japanese athlete has broken a significant American major league record. In 1977, Sadaharu Oh topped Hank Aaron's record of 755 career home runs, finishing with 868, and on June 3, 1983, Yutaka Fukumoto of the Hankyu Braves beat Lou Brock's record for career stolen bases with 938.

Kinugasa has never missed a game since joining the Carp full-time on Oct. 19, 1970.

To break the record, he had to battle a slump that saw his batting record slashed in half, bouts with the flu and a fractured shoulder.

In an interview with The Associated Press shortly before breaking the record, Kinugasa said he didn't realize until several years ago that he was even close to Gehrig's mark. But he said breaking Gehrig's record was never his goal.

"I just wanted to play baseball," he said. "For me, baseball is my life. Baseball is everything."

In 1979, Kinugasa went into a severe slump and his batting average dropped to .100, far below his .271 lifetime average.

Later that year, a pitch fractured his shoulder blade. Kinugasa said he taped up his shoulder, walked onto the field and started swinging a bat to show he could still play. He said it was more painful to stay at home than to play ball.

During the time he has been with the Carp, the team has won five Central League pennants and three championships.

In 1984, Kinugasa was named the Central League's Most Valuable Player after leading the league with 102 RBI.

McGee Sparks Cards By Cubs

By The Associated Press

Willie McGee says baseball can be a funny game. And, after driving in 25 runs in his last 20 games, the St. Louis center fielder has reason to smile.

McGee drove in three runs with a triple and double as starter Bob Forsch and three relievers combined on a six-hitter to beat Chicago 4-1 Friday night.

The Cardinals' victory increased their lead over the second-place Cubs to four games in the National League East.

In 1985, McGee was named the MVP when he hit .353 and drove in 82 runs as the Cardinals won the pennant. But the speedy McGee was slowed by injuries last season and slipped to .256 and 48 RBI.

But McGee doesn't use injuries as an excuse for the Cardinals' hitting problems last season.

"I don't think injuries were the big reason," McGee said. "Baseball is a funny game, and sometimes your offense just isn't there. That's what happened last year."

Last season, the Cardinals finished last in batting in the league as the New York Mets romped in the NL East. But a healthy Jack Clark and improved contributions from Vince Coleman, Tom Herr, Terry Pendelton and McGee have St. Louis running and scoring.

"The injuries can do it to you," Pendelton said. "But we had some injuries in 1985, too, and overcame them.

"Last year, everybody tried to do too much, especially after a few guys got hurt. Then the situation got even worse."

Elsewhere in the NL, New York pounded Pittsburgh 10-2, Philadelphia ripped Montreal 13-6, Atlanta beat Cincinnati 4-3, Houston defeated Los Angeles 5-1 and San Diego blanked San Francisco 5-0.

Coleman led off for St. Louis with a bunt single in the first inning but was erased on Ozzie Smith's double play grounder. Herr then singled and Clark walked to set up McGee's triple against Jamie Moyer, 6-4.

The Cardinals added two runs in the eighth when Clark led off with a walk and McGee doubled to right against Frank DiPino, scoring Clark and advancing to third on Andre Dawson's fielding error in right. Pendelton sent McGee home with a single. McGee has 47 RBI this season.

"I'm just trying to get on base and drive in runs, which I'm supposed to do," McGee said. "I've been kind of relaxed. I've just been trying to swing at strikes. If you do that in the big leagues, you're goig to be more successful."

Expos 13, Phillies 6

Hubie Brooks went 5-for-5 and drove in six runs as Montreal ended Shane Rawley's personal six-game winning streak.

"I've been getting a few hits here and there, but I need to find my consistency," said Brooks, "I don't think I've been too consistent yet."

Brooks hasn't had too much time to find a groove. He missed most of the

N. Nash Evens Up

ROCKY MOUNT (AP) — Left fielder April Langston ripped two two-run home runs to lead Northern Nash to a 9-6 victory over McDowell County Friday in Game 2 of the state 4-A softball championship series.

The third and deciding game will be at Northern Nash Saturday. McDowell won Game 1 Thursday by a 9-6 score.

McDowell blew past Northern Nash in the first inning Friday, putting six runs on the scoreboard in the bottom of the first. The Titans were the designated home team for the second game. McDowell used six hits, one a bases-loaded triple, and one error in the uprising.

But the Knights scored two in the third, two in the fourth and three in the fifth to go ahead. Langston, who was 3-for-4 at the plate, knocked in the tying and winning runs in the fifth with her first home run. She added another two-run shot in the seventh as the Knights padded their lead.

Felicia Joyner also hit a home run for Northern Nash, now 26-3. McDowell enters the deciding game 25-2.

"He (Rawley) didn't have a very effective change and he got the ball up," Phillies Manager John Felske said. "But give the Expos credit because they did a super job of hitting."

Bryn Smith, 4-2, went 6 2-3 innings. He struck out seven and walked three before giving way to Andy McGaffigan and Bob Sebra.

Astros 5, Dodgers 1

Houston's Nolan Ryan struck out 11 in 7 2-3 innings to give him a major league-leading 107 strikeouts in 80 2-3 innings.

Glenn Davis drove three runs for Houston with an RBI single in the sixth and a two-run double in the eighth.

Ryan, 4-5, walked none while extending the Astros' string of scoreless innings pitched at Dodger Stadium to 26 before Los Angeles scored with two out in the eighth. It was the 167th time in his career Ryan has struck out at least 10 batters in a game, improving on his major league record.

"I had no way of knowing how I'd pitch at 40," the major league's all-time strikeout leader said. "I'm fortunate that I'm throwing as well as I have at my age," Ryan said.

Mets 10, Pirates 2

Howard Johnson and Kevin McReynolds also homered as the Mets defeated the Pirates for the 25th time in their last 28 meetings. The Mets are 7-2 against the Pirates this season.

Fernandez, 8-2, allowed only Mike Diaz's second-inning solo homer and Johnny Ray's eighth-inning sacrifice fly in lowering his league-leading earned run average to 2.17.

Braves 4, Reds 3

Rick Mahler allowed four hits in seven innings to snap a personal seven-game losing streak and Andres Thomas broke a fifth-inning tie with a two-run single as Atlanta beat Cincinnati.

Mahler, 3-7, had not won in his last 12 starts going into Friday's game after beginning the season 2-0. Jim Acker pitched the final two innings for his sixth save.

The Braves took a 4-2 lead by scoring twice on three consecutive hits in the fifth inning off starter Jerry Reuss, 0-5. The Reds have lost all seven games that Reuss has started since he was signed May 12 as a free agent.

Padres 5, Giants 0

Ed Whitson pitched a four-hitter and did not allow a runner past first base in beating San Francisco. It was Whitson's first complete game since 1985, when he played for the New York Yankees.

Whitson, 7-6 for the last-place Padres, struck out six and walked none.

Tim Flannery had three singles, an RBI and scored a run, and Kevin Mitchell hit his fourth homer of the season for San Diego.

Fishing Fluctuates Along With The Temperatures

By The Associated Press

As temperatures fluctuated this week along the North Carolina coast, anglers found fishing action equally hot and cold, pier operators said.

"We've been going good and bad for a couple of weeks now," said Tony Myers of Southport's Long Beach Pier.

"We had been going just fine until a north wind came in on Tuesday night and things slacked up since then," said Steve Hissey of Pelican's Roost in Cape Hatteras.

When the weather conditions cooperated, anglers enjoyed some of the finest Spanish mackerel fishing in years and pier managers have reported fishermen carrying out buckets and coolers overflowing with the popular table fish.

Here are some reports from locations along the North Carolina coast:

SWANSBORO

"We've been doing really well with Spanish mackerel," said John Dudley of Dudley's Marina. "We had a trip go out on Saturday and they loaded up on sea bass and snapper."

The last two or three days an east wind blew into the area and hasn't helped conditions.

"Pete McCall of Swansboro caught an 87-pound cobia last Saturday," Dudley said. "All in all, the fishing has been good."

HATTERAS

"We had a south wind from Sunday through Tuesday and we were catching cobia up to 48 pounds. There were 20-25 very big fish caught in three days," Hissey said.

Anglers have enjoyed spectacular Spanish mackerel fishing when the lighter south wind has blown in. Some boats were pulling in upwards of 100 Spanish mackerel along with some small cobia, Hissey said.

SOUTHPORT

Myers of Long Beach Pier reports a lull in king mackerel fishing, but an increase in Spanish mackerel and spot.

"Actually, we are doing real good on spot and whiting right now, and the flounder are picking up. They're ranging from 1 to 3 pounds," Myers said.

Myers also said they are seeing a few bluefish from time to time, but they've slowed down after a big run a few weeks ago.

TOPSAIL ISLAND

Hollis Whitley of the Jolly Roger Pier reports some of the coast's best fishing.

"It's been good, real good," Whitley said. "We've seen a lot of Spanish mackerel, blues, and the flounder are starting to come in real good. One guy caught 42 last week."

Bottom fishermen have been catching some pompano, spot and mullet, he said..

"Overall, the fishing has been super good. Last Friday was a super day for Spanish, there must have been 300-400 of them, and that's a modest estimate." Most of the Spanish are running from 1 to 4 pounds, Whitley said.

CAROLINA BEACH

"Spanish mackerel are everywhere," Fred Phelps of the Carolina Beach Fishing Pier Northern Extension said. "They're hitting as good as I've seen in the past seven years.

"And we also had some real big blues in the 11-12 pound class last weekend."

A 36-pound king mackerel was reeled in by Richard Moore of Wilmington last Friday, Phelps said. "We've also seen quite a few spot and Virginia mullet, pig fish and flounder. All in all, fishing has been excellent. And with school out, the crowds are starting to pick up."

WRIGHTSVILLE BEACH

George Fokakis of Crystal Pier said that early morning anlgers had been catching plenty of Spanish mackerel up until Wednesday.

"But that's about it," Fokakis said. "I haven't seen any kings or flounder and only a few blues and spot."

NAGS HEAD

Morning fisherman have been catching trout, sea mullet and spot, reported Andy McCann of the Nags Head fishing pier.

"After being real good for awhile, things have slowed down a little bit recently," McCann said.

"The flounder have been biting all week. They're averaging about 10-14 inches and people have been catching them on squid and flounder belly," he said.

Outdoor News

Any group or organization that would like to charter bus service through the Greenville Area Transit (GREAT) system should call the city's Public Works Department at 752-4137. Charters can arranged to destinations within a 50 mile radius of Greenville. The service is available 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

Education Must Be Conservation Goal

By BILL SCHULZ
Associated Press Writer

Protecting habitat and educating the public about the threats to destroy it must be key goals of the conservation movement today, according to C.R. "Pink" Gutermuth, honorary president for life of the World Wildlife Fund.

Protection of the land "has to be the No. 1 priority in conservation," Gutermuth said. This is particularly true of valuable, productive wetlands.

Wetlands "are constantly and continuously being encroached upon and destroyed by man's activities," he said. Conservationists must work "to conserve this habitat that is needed, to constantly and continuously acquire prime land which is needed to offset that which is being lost each year."

One example is acid rain, which is not only destroying wetlands but is killing off wildlife and will threaten man himself, he said.

"I don't think the average person comprehends or understands at all the seriousness" of the problem, he said.

To explain, he added, it is necessary to demonstrate how it is destroying one animal, such as the black duck.

"Their whole food chain is being destroyed and the black duck population is going down and down and this is all happening beyond the comprehension and understanding of the people," Gutermuth said.

Education programs must be aimed at "people who are in a position to do something about it, and we're not getting that message fully across to the legislators, the people who appropriate the funds, who authorize the programs," he said.

Gutermuth, 87, was honored by the National Wildlife Federation with its J.M. "Ding" Darling Medal this year for more than six decades in conservation.

"I started out as a young fellow in the banking business. When my father saw me heading into conservation, he didn't understand it," Gutermuth said.

He started in Indiana, where he eventually became director of fish and game. He was part of the founding of the wildlife federation 50 years ago.

He went to Washington in 1945 and began working for various conservation groups.

He was a founder of the National Resources Council of America and as a trustee of the North American Wildlife Foundation from 1945 until 1973. For 26 years, until his retirement in 1971, he was vice president of the Wildlife Management Institute.

He has left a permanent mark in conservation.

He initiated programs that raised more than $3 million in private funds to buy lands in Florida, New Jersey and Ohio. They were donated to the Fish and Wildlife Service and became integral parts of the Key Deer, Great Swamp and Cedar Point national wildlife refuges.

"I have a reversionary clause in the deed that the land must be maintained for wildlife conservation purposes," Gutermuth said.

Today Gutermuth is intent on exporting the conservation movement which began in this country through the World Wildlife Fund.

"We're raising millions of dollars to do something about the wildlife of Africa which is disappearing, to do something about probably the most significant thing in the history of the world, the destruction of our tropical forests," he said.

Those plants and animals are invaluable, he said.

Winner Connors Will Not Quit

LONDON (AP) — Jimmy Connors has been asked the same question before. But now, at age 34, it comes his way more often.

When will you retire, Jimmy?

The veteran American, winner of a record 105 Grand Prix tournaments, still hasn't made up his mind.

"How can I stop when I'm still playing this kind of tennis?" Connors said after reaching the semifinals of the $300,000 Stella Artois grass-court championships at Queens Club in West London.

"If I stopped now, I'd look back with regret. Once I fall out of the top 10 or 15 in the world, I'll probably say that's enough. But I'm still fighting my way up the ladder."

Connors, currently ranked seventh, said he was surprised to be winning so many matches.

"The way it's going, I've had a couple of chances to win tournaments this year and that's not supposed to happen at 34," he said.

"I got to the quarters of the French, my toughest tournament, I'm playing well on grass plus I'm earning a hell of a living."

Today, Connors was facing Australia's Pat Cash in the semifinals of this pre-Wimbledon event, a tournament Connors has won three times.

Win or lose, he said his attitude would remain the same.

"Everything around my tennis now is a lot different now than it was 10 years ago, and it should be," Connors said.

"It's different in my attitude towards the matches, during them and after them. My lifestyle is a lot different, up to the point where it has helped me. I'm really in London on vacation and just playing some tennis."

In Friday's quarterfinals, Connors ended the run of West Germany's unseeded Eric Jelen, beating the West German 6-4, 6-4.

Jelen, who had eliminated No. 3 seed Mats Wilander and No. 14 Amos Mansdorf of Israel on his way to the last eight, couldn't produce the same form against Connors.

Although he served eight aces and showed great volleying ability, Jelen made 34 unforced errors against a generally steady Connors.

Cash upset No. 2 seed Stefan Edberg of Sweden, 7-6, 7-6, eliminating the Swede who beat him in the Australian Open final last January.

The match was dominated by serve, with only one break point throughout, but Cash was more aggressive and agile and used those qualities to pull out both tiebreakers.

In the other semifinal, two-time defending Wimbledon champion Boris Becker of West German was matched against defending Queens Club titlist Tim Mayotte. Becker beat American David Pate 6-4, 7-6 Friday while Mayotte downed Ramesh Krishnan of India 6-2, 6-3.

The Becker-Mayotte match is a repeat of last year's quarterfinals when the American saved a match point and went on to win the match and the tournament.

"We always have close matches," Mayotte said, "and it should be exciting. I'm looking forward to it."

Becker was not at his best against Pate and was broken when he served for the match at 6-5 in the second set.

But he stepped up the pace in the tiebreaker, ripping off three of the last four points.

"My main problem was my concentration," Becker said. "I was too loose and not eager enough. But one of my qualities on grass is that I can pump myself up when the going gets tough."

Award winner but only 7-12 last season, continued his sensational comeback with a three-hitter for his fifth successive victory. He fanned eight and walked none in outdueling Mike Witt, who also pitched a three-hitter.

Saberhagen's 11 victories are three more than anyone else in the major leagues. He suffered his only loss on May 14 at Baltimore, 4-3, and now has a 2.00 earned run average.

"I'd have to say my stuff was A-plus," Saberhagen said. "I really don't think it gets any better than this."

Yankees 8, Brewers 3

Dennis Rasmussen shrugged off the threats of Yankees owner George Steinbrenner that the left-hander would be demoted to the minor leagues if he continued his poor pitching. Rasmussen, an 18-game winner last year but 0-2 with a 10.34 earned run average in his previous five appearances, carried a no-hitter through 6 2-3 innings.

But Jim Paciorek's slow roller down the line hit the third-base bag for an infield single and Rasmussen left soon after.

He had all the support he needed on home runs from Ron Kittle, Henry Cotto and Mark Salas.

"I knew we needed somebody to pick us up, to pitch a good game," Rasmussen said. "You just don't let yourself get caught up with the things going on around you. That's the way it is around here."

The Yankees won for the first time since being swept in a three-game series by Toronto and being outscored 22-3. The Brewers were without Paul Molitor, Robin Yount, Rob Deer, Jim Gantner and Greg Brock, all out because of injuries.

Indians 10, Mariners 6

At Seattle, Joe Carter's two-run homer highlighted a five-run sixth inning and Julio Franco added a three-run shot. Brook Jacoby also homered for the Indians, who got standout relief from Mark Huismann and Scott Bailes after starter Greg Swindell left in the fourth inning with stiffness in his shoulder.

Former Mariner Huismann, 1-3, pitched four scoreless innings, striking out five of the first six batters he faced and seven in all. He allowed just two hits. Bailes pitched the final two innings.

Red-hot Alan Trammell and Kirk Gibson each hit three-run homers for host Detroit, which routed 1986 Cy Young Award recipient Roger Clemens. Trammell, riding a 17-game hitting streak that is the longest current string in the majors, is hitting .357 — he was at .282 on May 5.

Tom Brookens also homered for Detroit. Frank Tanana, 5-3, allowed seven hits, walking five and striking out five.

Athletics 6, Rangers 1

At Arlington, Dave Stewart pitched a four-hitter for his seventh victory and Reggie Jackson hit his 554th career home run as Oakland won its fourth consecutive game. Jackson's sixth homer of the season was the 43rd of his career against Texas.

The Rangers' Oddibe McDowell also two singles, giving him six consecutive two-hit games and a nine-game hitting streak.

Here's The Answer

Q. — We get a very restricted flow of water from our faucets and all the other plumbing fixtures in our old house. A neighbor says it is caused by the pipes having narrow passageways because of a buildup of scales on the inside. He says there is no cure except to have new pipes installed. Is he right or can the pipes be cleaned in some way?

A. — If the cause is what he says it is, then only new piping will correct the condition. The other possibility is low water pressure from the outside into the house. You need a plumber to test for the actual cause. If it were low water pressure, chances are your neighbors would have similar trouble. But don't try to guess. Have a licensed plumber make the analysis.

Q. — I will be making a picket fence. How far apart should the pickets be, or does it make a difference? Should I cut the angled top parts of the pickets myself, or can they be purchased that way?

A. — While it really doesn't make too much difference how far apart the pickets are, the standard distance usually is the width of a picket. In fact, it makes it easier to use one of the pickets as a spacer. As for cutting the pickets to shape, you can do it yourself from standard stock or buy them already cut. It depends on how much money you want to spend. Those already shaped obviously cost more.

Q. — I read that, when using a file, you should move your hands and arms and not your body. I have considerable filing to do, and I wonder about that no-body warning. Can you tell me what it means?

A. — It is a wise instruction if you are doing any kind of precision filing. First of all, as you undoubtedly know, pressure is exerted on the file only on the forward stroke. You release the pressure on the return stroke, except in certain specialized cases that only professionals are likely to encounter. Why should you use only your arms and hands on the forward stroke and keep your body perfectly still? Because when you move your body, the file is inclined to rock, resulting in a rounded surface rather than a flat one. In many filing jobs, this doesn't mean very much, but in some, it produces a poor result. To avoid trouble at any time, get into the habit of keeping your body still while filing.

Q. — Can a wood patching material be stained after it has hardened?

A. — There are many different kinds of wood patching compounds. Some can be stained, some can't. Check the directions before you buy. If it says it can be stained, fine. But if it doesn't mention the subject, chances are it cannot.

Q. — A white spot has developed on a lacquered coffee table. I think it will come out with lacquer thinner. Am I right?

A. — Yes. But if you use too much of it, the spot may have to be refinished. Rub lightly with a pad that has just the tiniest bit of lacquer thinner on it. Once you put the thinner on a pad, do the rubbing immediately or the thinner will evaporate.

Q. — The gutters on our house are becoming clogged with the mineral granules that were on the shingles. Is this a sign of something wrong?

A. — Yes. It means the roof has become "weathered" over a long period of time and probably needs replacement. If the roof is made up of standard shingles applied 20 years ago, it is probably a candidate for reroofing.

("A Homeowners Guide to the Selection of Quality Roofing," including an asphalt shingle color chart, can be obtained by sending 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, NY 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column.)

Marketing Honor

Danny Brew, owner of Burger Kings in Greenville and Tarboro, has won the "Local Store Marketing Award" given annually by Burger King to franchisees who have been involved in their communities in various ways.

The honor marked the second straight year that Brew has received the award, which was presented at a business information meeting held recently in Orlando, Fla.

Brew's 1986 award was won in the Charleston division of approximately 135-150 Burger King units. This year the local stores were placed in the Virginia-North Carolina area, which includes 100-110 Burger Kings.

Cardboard Boxes Are Easy Way To Create Special Storage Areas

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

A near universal goal nowadays is to be better organized, says Carolyn Jabs, an author who has written on recycling materials for new uses.

Ms. Jabs, a spokesman for the American Paper Institute, sees corrugated cardboard boxes as an ideal material with which to create the kind of specialized storage that most people buy.

"Almost every kind of storage you need to be better organized is a variation on corrugated cartons," she says. People can create their own storage systems with the right size box or with corrugated panels cut from boxes.

"Since the material is usually free for the asking, if you mess up the first few, it is no problem," adds Ms. Jabs, whose book, "Reuses" deals with creative recycling of many materials of modern living.

Her favorite source for corrugated cardboard is appliance dealers who have the large cartons that are most desirable for substantial projects. Since the boxes are bulky, they often already have been cut flat, thus saving the recycler a step.

"My most recent project was a playhouse for my son. I used separate panels, drilled holes in the sides, and laced the playhouse together with clothes-line cord." An old sheet furnished a "roof" which light can penetrate.

The sheet is attached to the sides by lacing, and the whole thing can be unlaced and folded flat when not in use. Ms. Jabs gilded the lily by decorating the box exterior with paint.

Other projects have included bedside and end tables, pedestals for plants, holders for video and audio cassette tapes, under-bed storage boxes, containers for children's artwork and Christmas ornaments. She has also made files for back issues of magazines, using old detergent boxes.

Succeeding with corrugated requires learning some simple techniques, she said. For example, she always weights a box with magazines, cat litter or bricks when stability is required. She has painted corrugated with both latex and oil-based paint and for a successful paint job often first applies a primer coat. If the material will come in contact with moisture, she recommends sealing it with a polyurethane spray.

Some locales where cardboard "furniture" is not out of place include children's rooms, college dormitory rooms, summer cottages, the garage and any temporary location.

"The key is to spend the time to create something that doesn't look tacky. If you cut good sharp lines and cover the piece with paint or wallpaper or fabric, it works out fine," she said.

Ms. Jabs offered several other tips for working with corrugated materials. "First of all, you need a good sharp blade on a retractable utility knife."

Since the surface on which the cutting will be done can be cut too, if not protected, she usually cuts the boxes into panels on the driveway. She places a scrap piece underneath to avoid dulling the knife.

She often fastens sides together by a combination of interlocking tabs and grooves. These are reinforced with white glue on all surfaces that touch. The best results occur when the glue is applied with a brush and when the glued pieces are clamped together over night.

For many of her projects, Ms. Jabs uses a spring clamp about two inches across. "I wouldn't go out and buy special equipment. You could use a wood clamp or even one of those clips that hold potato chip bags closed. I tend to use what I have on hand," she said.

Asked to explain her urge to find new uses for items other people throw out, Ms. Jabs says she doesn't remember a time when she wasn't recycling something or other.

"We were a family of five children and my parents encouraged us to be ingenious. My father would putter around in his workshop and use baby food jars to hold nails. It was assumed that you looked around to see if you could make what you needed from what you had."

She adds that "so much of what we throw away is really a resource. We have blinded ourselves to that and have lost the opportunity to be creative, to save money and to save resources."

Ms. Jabs points out that in many communities, the local recycling center won't take corrugated because it is too bulky. Some people collect it and sell it to waste paper dealers to make extra money.

According to J. Rodney Edwards, vice president of the paperboard group of the American Paper Institute, about 45 percent of the corrugated material used each year is now recycled, either by waste paper dealers who sell it for reprocessing or in secondary uses, such as those Ms. Jabs described. He added that demand for recycled corrugated is expected to grow.

Know what a 2-by-4 is? It's a piece of lumber 2 inches by 4 inches, right? Wrong. It's a piece of lumber 1½ inches by 3½ inches.

That's the sort of thing you encounter when you first find it necessary to buy lumber. And just why isn't a 2-by-4 what it says it is? Because it was 2 inches by 4 inches before it was milled and dried. Taking the roughness and moisture out of the wood reduced it to 1½-by-3½.

This discrepancy occurs not only in 2-by-4s, but in most sizes of lumber. The difference between the nominal sizes and the actual sizes makes it imperative that you take this into account when planning and buying. It could be very important in laying out and measuring the parts of your project to know that a 1-by-10 actually will be ¾-by-9¼ and that a 2-by-8 will be 1½-by-7¼.

There are a number of other things you should know about lumber. One is that lumber is graded, meaning that there are various categories of quality from which to choose, based on the intended use of the product. Another is that lumber is divided into softwoods and hardwoods.

Softwoods generally come from trees which keep their foliage yearround and generally are softer than hardwoods. Hardwoods come from trees which shed their leaves sometime during the year and generally are harder than softwoods. Typical examples of softwoods are pine, fir, cedar and redwood. Typical examples of hardwoods are oak, mahogany, walnut and maple. Mostly, the hardwoods are used for specialized work, such as furniture, fine cabinets and flooring. Softwoods are for almost everything else and sometimes for furniture, cabinets and flooring.

With some varieties of wood, such as plywood and hardboard, the stated dimensions are also the actual dimensions. A 4-by-8 sheet of ¾-inch plywood, for instance, measures 4 feet by 8 feet and is three-quarters of an inch thick. Until you get used to what's nominal and what's actual, ask questions and-or carry a tape or ruler with you when buying wood. In case you wondered why plywood and hardboard are classified as wood, they are both made with real wood and are not, as some people think, synthetic products.

Whether you are a novice or an old-timer in the ways of buying lumber, it's a good idea to write down what you plan to buy. The way to do it is to specify 1) the number of pieces of a particular item, 2) its thickness, 3) its width, and 4) its length. Not only will it help you remember what you need, you are answering four questions, in order, for the lumber dealer: How many? How thick? How wide? How long? Of course, you have to bear in mind those are the nominal dimensions, except for the length, which is actual.

If all this sounds a bit puzzling, take heart. Like anything else, you'll soon get used to it.

You can save yourself money if you buy only the kind and grade of lumber needed for the job. It is poor economy to buy select lumber when common will do. Some woods are more expensive when sold far from their point of origin. Get wood that comes from your own region whenever possible. Most lumber yards stock mostly softwoods, and that is the type you generally will need. But if you want a particular hardwood and you do not see it in stock, ask the dealer. He may be able to get it for you very quickly from a nearby distributor.

(Do-it-yourselfers will find helpful data on a variety of subjects in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," which can be obtained by sending $2 to this newspaper at Box 5, Teaneck, NJ 07666.)

Early Spring Is Best For Planting

CROSSETT, Ark. (AP) — Although they're often able to endure adverse weather and soil conditions, most young trees have a better chance for survival when carefully selected and planted during early spring.

Mild weather conditions are less likely to injure the fragile root systems of newly planted trees, according to Georgia-Pacific Corp.

Stock Market Takes Week's Events In Stride

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — With all the events of the past few weeks, many analysts say the stock market has been most remarkable for what it hasn't done.

Of late, investors have been confronted with an inflation scare, wide swings in interest rates, a change in the top job at the Federal Reserve, and a seven-nation economic summit meeting.

Yet stock prices have spent most of that period quietly plodding ahead in slow trading.

"The market is B.U.D. — boring, uninspired and dull," said A. Marshall Acuff, analyst at Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Co., in a commentary published this past week.

"Judging by recent trends in volume, investors seem to be losing enthusiasm for stocks. The excitement of making money in the first quarter is past," Acuff said.

"An overall trendless market fraught with numerous internal reversals and divergences does not do much for one's performance or conviction," said Edward Nicoski, analyst at Piper, Jaffray & Hopwood Inc. "We suspect that this indecision is a major cause of recent low volume days."

Perhaps one primary explanation for the sluggish pace of the market is that views of the economic outlook have remained pretty much the same for some time now.

When President Reagan nominated Alan Greenspan to succeed Paul Volcker as chairman of the Federal Reserve Board this summer, there was naturally a lot of commotion on Wall Street.

But in the many analyses subequently turned out on the subject, the words "doesn't change our forecast" appeared over and over again, whether the subject was stocks, interest rates, corporate profits or the economy as a whole. For the most part, the bulls stayed bullish and the bears stayed bearish.

As is often pointed out about the stock market, the most common motivation to buy or sell is a change in expectations.

The mood of calm faces a formidable challenge in the week ahead, with the arrival of the quarterly "triple witching hour" involving expiring stock index futures, index options and options on individual stocks.

Because of changes in the procedures involving some of the index options and futures contracts, many analysts say this particular witching hour poses the threat of fierce volatility all through the latter part of the week.

But if there are storms ahead, there was little sign of them in the week just concluded. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, with gains in each of the past five trading sessions, closed Friday at 2,377.73, up 51.58 from the week before.

The New York Stock Exchange composite index rose 4.36 to 169.85, and the market value index at the American Stock Exchange was up 6.14 at 335.64.

Consumer spending may be slowing, analysts say, but most or all of the slack is being picked up by a very gradual improvement in international trade.

By most economists' reckoning, overall economic figures for the second quarter will not be as strong as the first three months of the year, when a marked buildup in business inventories took place.

Nevertheless, hopes are high on Wall Street that second-quarter earnings reports will be generally impressive, reflecting in part the benefits of many corporate restructurings in the last couple of years.

As analysts at Salomon Brothers Inc. observed, "Strong corporate profits have been an important foundation for the continuing equity bull market."

OPEC Nations Prepare For Meeting With Complacency The Big Problem

By DONALD WOUTAT
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

In the wake of last year's free-fall in the price of oil, both OPEC and its traditional leader, Saudi Arabia, appeared in disarray. Even the cartel's December agreement to boost prices and cut production seemed an exercise in wishful thinking.

But as the OPEC ministers prepare for their mid-year meeting June 25 in Vienna, their principal problem, other than military tension in the Persian Gulf, might be complacency arising from their own surprising success in managing the world's oil markets so far this year.

Already, there are fresh signs of excess production by some OPEC members and scattered demands to raise prices above the $18 per barrel level that the cartel has already achieved. Economists say that such impatience could undermine oil prices all over again.

The Saudis, by most accounts back in command of OPEC strategy, appear to agree. And the organization is expected to reject such demands and hold to the plan put in place last December, calling for a nominal third-quarter production increase but no change in official price.

"Most of the members are producing at levels they feel comfortable with, and there is a sense that their situation can only improve as demand increases later this year. They know that if they tamper with the agreement, it will open a can of worms that will be hard for them to digest as an organization," says Bijan Mossavar-Rahmani, assistant director and OPEC analyst at the Harvard Energy and Environmental Policy Center.

Another student of OPEC, economist Philip K. Verlager of the Institute for International Economics in Washington, concurs:

"If they're smart, they'll make it short and sweet and get out of Vienna as fast as possible."

Apparently chastened by the self-induced price collapse that devastated the economies of its own member nations, OPEC has convinced many observers that it is had indeed gotten smart. And much of the credit is now being given to the Saudis and their new petroleum minister, Hisham Nazer.

The long-time planning minister, Nazer was chosen last September to replace Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani in what has been one of the world economy's most influential posts. Yamani presided over OPEC's rise to power over more than two decades years until being fired after a series of disputes with King Fahd. It was a time when Iran appeared to be gaining power within OPEC and the Saudis, with more oil than anyone else, appeared to be confused about oil policy.

Nazer remained in the background during the OPEC meeting last December that forged an agreement to cut crude oil production by about 7 percent to 15.8 million barrels a day, and fix per-barrel prices at an average of $18 versus then prevailing prices of $13 to $14. It was an agreement with so many weak links, notably the refusal of Iraq to abide by it, that OPEC's customers, the world's oil companies, doubted it would work.

But after initially balking at long-term contracts to buy oil at an official price that they didn't believe would hold up, oil traders gradually came into the fold when key OPEC members refused to offer discounts and told customers to take it or leave it — a position that was critical to the success of the agreement.

And when prices threatened to weaken in the spring as seasonal demand fell, the Saudis, though refusing to lock themselves again into an official role as OPEC's "swing producer," temporarily slashed their own production more than 1 million barrels a day below their quota. That eased fears of a renewed flood of oil, supported the $18 price, and persuaded oil markets of the Saudis' resolve.

After a glut drove down crude-oil prices from $30 to $10 a barrel in the first half of 1986, the idea was to bring the world's oil supply and demand into a balance that would result in a stable price high enough to satisfy the economies of OPEC's disaparate members and head off political unrest.

But the price had to be low enough to encourage the industrial world to start using more oil, reverse the energy conservation mentality that had put OPEC on the defensive since 1981, and make it unrewarding for the world's oil companies to explore for new sources of petroleum.

OPEC bargainers thought $18 a barrel would fill the bill, and the December pact quickly brought prices to the $18 range for OPEC crudes where, after several volatile months, it has settled. By holding the line — Saudi King Fahd has said he hoped to see oil prices remain in that range for two years — most economists and oil company executives believe that OPEC can regain its dominance within a few years because non-OPEC oil production will drop and be replaced by the Middle East's abundant, cheaply produced oil.

"They've held this thing together for the toughest part of the seasonal downswing in demand," says William D. Hermann, chief economist at San Francisco-based Chevron, the third largest U.S.-based oil producer and a major Saudi customer. "I guess we underestimated the religion they got from the low prices last year. I'm getting more and more to the point where I think there's a possibility of holding these prices for a couple of years. My guess is we'll see demand for OPEC oil at 20 million barrels by 1990 or 1991."

As recently as 1979, the world needed 31 million barrels of OPEC oil each day. That plummeted to 16 million barrels by 1985. Now it is going back up.

In the United States alone, overall oil demand has already risen by 200,000 barrels per day over the past year while oil production has fallen by 800,000 barrels. That has created a need for another 1 million barrels a day from other countries, and most of the need is being filled by OPEC members.

SAFETY DEVICE — Former truck driver Wayne Brown demonstrates the Red Arrow TT-600, a device designed to prevent tractor-trailer trucks from jackknifing. New Device Takes Danger Out Of Truck Jackknifing

By DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer

When truck driver Wayne Brown was negotiating a winding West Virginia mountain road in 1973, he had only his driving skills to help him avoid a potentially fatal accident.

Today, Brown is the North Carolina distributor of a device he considers invaluable to the safety of America's truck drivers.

North Carolina and Virginia have been chosen as test marketing sites for the Red Arrow TT-600, a device designed to prevent tractor trailer trucks from jackknifing, according to Brown.

"For the driver, having this device is almost like having a co-pilot," said former long-haul trucker Brown, who is distributing the device through Jackknife Control Inc. of Raleigh.

Brown, who traveled the nation's highways as a commercial driver for 33 years, said he became interested in preventing jackknife incidents following the frightening experience in 1973.

"It was the scariest moment I've ever had behind the wheel of a truck," the 60-year-old Wake County native said.

Negotiating the mountain highways near Charleston, W.Va., Brown found his path suddenly blocked by an automobile which spurted into the traffic lanes from a side road.

To his left was the vertical stone wall of the mountain. To his right was a sheer drop of over 1,000 feet. Ahead was an intruding vehicle he was approaching at about 45 mph.

Brown hit the brakes, and almost immediately, he felt his rig drifting into a skid with the trailer pushing straight ahead and whipping the tractor unit off to one side — folding back on itself like a jackknife.

Burlington Suitors Ask Court To Overturn Tar Heel Laws

By JAMES F. PELTZ
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The partnership attempting a hostile takeover of Burlington Industries Inc. is urging a federal judge to invalidate two laws that the North Carolina legislature recently passed to help Burlington's defense.

In a separate move the partnership, led by New York financier Asher B. Edelman and Montreal-based Dominion Textile Inc., said Friday it might be willing to raise its bid above $78 a share.

The group, which already owns 12.3 percent of Burlington, currently is offering $77 a share for the remaining stock.

But Burlington is backing a rival offer from a group led by Morgan Stanley & Co., the New York investment bank, that on Wednesday sweetened its offer to $78 a share, or $2.16 billion, from its initial bid of $76 a share.

Burlington is the nation's biggest textile company and based in Greensboro, N.C. The company also employs about 22,000 people in the state, but is incorporated in Delaware.

In recent weeks, the North Carolina General Assembly enacted two laws aimed at helping Burlington.

One, the Shareholders Protection Act, requires that purchasers of North Carolina companies pay the same price for all the stock unless 95 percent of the company's stockholders waive the provision or the company exempts itself.

The other new law, the Control Share Acquisition Act, denies a suitor the right to vote stock purchased in a local company until a majority of the other stockholders approve, a process that could take up to 50 days.

That law was modeled after an Indiana law that was upheld April 21 by the U.S. Supreme Court. But North Carolina's law differs in one key respect: It would apply not only to companies incorporated in North Carolina, but also to companies incorporated elsewhere but that have a major presence in North Carolina.

In a hearing here before U.S. District Judge Shirley Wohl Kram, lawyers for Edelman and Dominion argued Friday that the law is unconstitutional in Burlington's case because it conflicts with state laws in Delaware and violates federal interstate commerce rules.

Delaware law requires that stockholders have one vote for each share they own, unless the stockholders have previously decided otherwise, said Cameron Clark, a lawyer for Edelman and Dominion.

"The North Carolina act must yield," Clark said. "It's not up to the legislature in North Carolina to fiddle with Burlington's (stockholder) voting rights."

But lawyers for Burlington and North Carolina argued that the North Carolina laws are constitutional in Burlington's case, and rejected the claim that the laws conflict with Delaware statutes.

In addition, Burlington lawyer William Rosoff asserted that Edelman and Dominion "have not provided any evidence that the Control Share Acquisition Act poses any burden on interstate commerce."

After the hearing the lawyers said a ruling might come early next week.

But Burlington has asked the court to delay any ruling until another lawsuit — this one filed by Burlington in federal court in North Carolina — is decided.

Last week U.S. District Judge Eugene A. Gordon in Greensboro, acting in response to Burlington's suit, issued a preliminary injunction that blocked Edelman and Dominion from proceeding with their tender offer.

Gordon ruled the injunction was necessary because Burlington might be able to prove its allegations that the partnership illegally used inside information about Burlington as a basis to launch its bid.

The partnership has denied wrongdoing and appealed the ruling.

But at the same time, Gordon required Burlington to post a $500 million bond to protect Edelman and Dominion in the event Burlington's allegations proved groundless.

Morgan Stanley has said that if Burlington posts the bond, it might hurt the firm's ability to secure the outside financing necessary for the proposed takeover, and Burlington has sought to have the bond reduced.

Rosy Jobs Scene Projected Locally

Greenville area employers are painting a rosy hiring picture for the summer months, according to an Employment Outlook Survey recently released by Manpower Inc., the world's largest temporary help firm.

"Our third-quarter 1987 survey indicates that 43 percent of area employers intend to increase staff during July, August and September, and none plan cutbacks," said Kay Warren Gay, manager of Manpower's Greenville office. "The other 57 percent foresee no changes."

Last summer, 52 percent of the employers polled anticipated staff additions, while none expected to decrease their work force. Three months ago, 37 percent intended to add workers and 3 percent planned reductions.

For the next three months, the national outlook is also encouraging, as 29 percent of nearly 13,000 employers polled anticipate hiring additional people, while 8 percent foresee cuts, according to the survey. In the South, 29 percent also predict staff increases while 8 percent will reduce employment rolls.

In Greenville, employment opportunities are predicted by wholesalers-retailers, the services sector, both durable and non-durable goods manufacturers, and the construction industry. Other industries should remain stable, the survey said.

Geographically, the job outlook improvements exist in all regions, with the Northeast and the South showing slightly greater increases compared to prior periods than the Midwest and Western areas, the survey said.

Manpower Inc. conducts the Employment Outlook Survey on a quarterly basis. It is a measurement of employer intentions to increase or decrease the permanent workforce, and during its 11-year history has been an indicator of employment trends.

The survey, conducted during the last two weeks of May, is based upon telephone interviews with nearly 13,000 public and private employers in 393 U.S. cities.

Renovation Loans Available Locally

Greenville is one of 42 North Carolina communities eligible to apply for part of $1.81 million allocated by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development to the N.C. Housing Finance Agency's Rental Rehabilitation Program.

The funds will be loaned to local property owners for renovating substandard rental property. They are available for up to 50 percent of renovation costs, with a $5,000 per unit limit. Property owners invest the balance. Local city governments determine loan repayment terms.

At least 70 percent of the allocated funds will benefit families earning 80 percent or less of each community's median income level. More than 75 percent of the renters earn 50 percent or less of their community's median income, with 50 percent of median income averaging $13,691 for participating localities.

The agency will sponsor a workshop explaining the program and application procedures on July 7 in Raliegh. Application deadline is July 25. Selected communities should receive rehabilitation funds in August.

Brown eased off the brakes, saw an opening and hit the accelerator, straightening the truck out and shooting by the car with only inches to spare.

"I thought it was all over with," Brown said. "I could have knocked that car off the road and followed it right over the side."

Brown's experience is not unique, according to the American Trucking Association, which ranks the jackknife as the third most common non-collision accident.

Meanwhile, the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety indicates that nearly 4,500 people die every year from injuries involving big trucks.

The TT-600 is a heavy-duty, trailer-mounted hydraulic unit which reduces the angle at which a tractor can turn when under way with a trailer in tow, according to Brown.

When engaged, the safety device, which was invented in Greenville, S.C., reduces the maximum turning angle to 12 degrees in either direction, preventing the possibility of jackknife even in extreme emergency braking situations, Brown said.

While the device, which sells for about $1,850 and can be installed for $100, prevents jackknifing when activated, it does not interfere with normal highway maneuvers, such as changing lanes, passing or routine obstacle avoidance, according to Brown.

"If he (the truck driver) is watching the traffic in front of him and he doesn't know what's happening to that trailer behind him, this alarm will sound and alert him that the trailer is trying to come around on him," Brown said.

While some states may consider passing legislation requiring the use of the TT-600, Brown said trucking firms should be interested in it before it becomes mandatory.

"We have had some states, like California, that said they would probably make it mandatory, like seat belts, but we're not going to try to make it mandatory," he said. "This should be a concern of every company for saving property, reducing injury, and saving lives.

"Also, by cutting down on accidents, it should reduce their insurance premiums considerably. In our opinion, in three years time it will more than pay for itself by the reduction in insurance premiums. There are some of them out there that have had several jacknifes. They are on the threshold of having their insurance canceled. When they cancel insurance, they go out of business."

The safety unit has been submitted to three years of testing and improvement at independent facilities such as the Transportation Resource Center at East Liberty, Ohio, Brown said.

"When I saw the results of those tests, I knew this was something the trucking industry had been waiting for," Brown said.

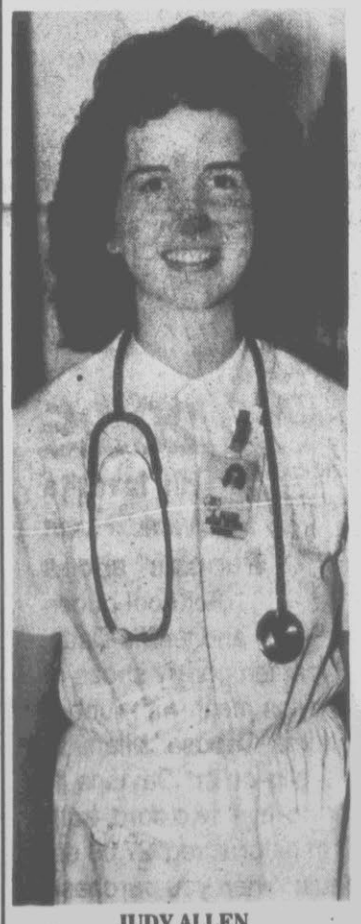
Student Nurses Work In Extern Program

By ROSALIE TROTMAN
Reflector Lifestyle Editor

A summer shot of reality is provided by Pitt County Memorial Hospital's nurse extern program.

Started in 1979, the nurse externship program takes students who have completed their junior year in a baccalaureate (four-year) school of nursing program and puts them to work in a hospital environment. The students are employed full time and perform all the duties of a professional nurse, with the exception of passing out medicine, starting IVs and advanced level skills.



JUDY ALLEN

According to Linda Burhans, director of nursing recruitment and retention at the hospital, the program lasts from mid-May through the end of July. While the externs are getting employment experience, they also are being educated in seminars and through the practical, hands-on duties they perform.

Posters, cover letters and relevant information about the hospital are sent to schools of nursing throughout the United States. There are 44 externs in this year's program at PCMH, with 30 from East Carolina University.

"The extern program has demonstrated its effectiveness as a nurse recruitment strategy; in fact, 50 percent of the 1985 externs returned here — as registered nurse applicants following graduation," said Mrs. Burhans.

"PCMH nursing services have developed a formal preceptor program, which prepares experienced RNs to guide, direct, and supervise the practice of new nurses, including the nurse externs. An RN preceptor has undertaken a training workshop to learn the preceptor role, and is an acknowledged expert nurse in the clinical area. Each nurse extern functions under the supervision of a preceptor," said Mrs. Burhans.

Extern nurse Lisa Brett of Murfreesboro is working in the ambulatory surgical unit. "Everybody, before leaving nursing school, should do an externship — it gives a better aspect of nursing and a lot of opportunity. Both learning and communication skills are re-enforced," she said.

"I could not imagine my summer without the program. I have nurses in my family and they favored me doing this — it was like a must. My cousin did an externship at Duke and said, when she went back to school, she felt so much better confidence wise," Miss Brett said.

Miss Brett has been accustomed to long-term care. "It's exciting to see patients come in, have surgery, and be able to return home the same day," she said.

CHRIS YELTON

"Monitoring IVs, doing simple preps, documenting information on patients' charts, answering telephones, participating in pre-admissions and admissions care and discharging and pre-admission teaching are some of the things we do. Within a few weeks, I will be functioning much like a registered nurse with the exception of a few procedures," said Miss Brett. She is a student at East Carolina University.

Chris Yelton of Greensboro, also a student at ECU, is working on surgical floor — 2NB.

"The opportunity to be exposed to good role models and develop professionalism are two of the program pluses," said Yelton.

"I think it is a needed experience between the junior and senior years — to avoid reality shock when entering the work place as a graduate nurse," he said.

"The program attracted me because I can approach health care from a holistic standpoint. I enjoyed classes in psychology, sociology and biology and nursing incorporates each of," he said.

"I enjoy working with families of patients. Families are an important part of patient care — if they receive support they are better able to be supportive of the patient," Yelton said.

"Primarily my focus at this point is to work in a critical care area because of the challenge professionally and personally," he said.

Judy Allen lives in Portsmouth, Va., and attends Roberts Wesleyan College in Rochester, N.Y.

"I knew the extern program would provide optimal experience at this stage of my education. A major reason for coming to this area to work was to be nearer my parents. I wasn't able to find work experience programs in the northern states as well developed at the one here at PCMH. I learned about the extern program here from an extern of last year, who attends Roberts. It was highly recommended," Miss Allen said.

"While a student, I have worked for two years as a student nurse assistant. The PCMH program is giving me experience beyond basic patient care," she said. Miss Wise is working in cardiac care on 3NA.

Maggie Wise of San Anselmo, Calif., applied to a number of extern programs. "I wanted to have the experience in a large hospital and see a different part of the country. I have relatives in Pennsylvania and New Jersey and will be visiting them," she said. She is a student at Humboldt State University in Arcata, Calif.

"My day-to-day work experience and learning is supervised by Janet Ellis, my nurse preceptor — someone who takes an extern under her wing for teaching. We work together in patient care and problem solving," she said.

"Medical intensive care is a lot different from other experiences at nursing school — learning about technology and intersive care nursing. The extern program is a great experience," Miss Wise said.

Lawyer Thinks Premarital Pacts Will Continue

By DAVID STREITFELD
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — First comes love, then comes marriage, then, in about seven years, comes a messy divorce. The likelihood of breaking up — nearly half of all marriages don't last — is bringing increasing prominence to the premarital agreement, where the couple decides before they've wed exactly what will belong to who after they're not.

A second marriage used to be called the triumph of hope over experience. A premarital agreement is exactly the opposite. You forget that you're in love and want to spend the rest of your life waking up next to this person. Instead, you take a hardnosed attitude and cut the best deal you can. It's sort of like divorce, although you're not even married yet.

"It's simple. Since time immemorial, when people have decided to get married, they have always talked over things and tacitly agreed on them," says Joan Wikstrom, a Northern Virginia private counselor and a part-time professor of personnel management at Catholic University.

"An informal prenuptial agreement is just going a step beyond — and to write it down and have it legalized, witnessed and all the rest of it, is a step beyond that. ...: It comes under look before you leap, and is a really good way of ensuring extensive ongoing communication."

Since these agreements are generally private matters among the spouses and their respective lawyers, they are not filed with the local courthouse. As a result, it's hard to say exactly how many newlyweds are using them — but the count is definitely up. Most experts believe the percentage of weddings that come with some form of contract has risen in the past decade from under 1 percent to between 2 and 3 percent.

"It's something that will increase. In a number of different situations, it makes sense," says James McConville, a D.C. family probate and general litigation lawyer. "It used to be something done only when there was a lot of money. Now there doesn't have to be a huge sum, but a need to take care of children from a previous marriage."

And, since these contracts are also a seasonal phenomenon, they're reaching a peak right now.

"Come May and June, the phone rings off the hook," says Marna Tucker of the D.C. law firm of Klores, Feldesman and Tucker. "That's when most prenuptial agreements certainly get signed-even if they're negotiated earlier."

typical contract used by a previously divorced couple might run something like this: She's 38, he's 40. Each has a small savings account, a pension plan and children from a previous marriage. He sells his old house, and puts up $80,000 of the down-payment on the new mansion. She forks over $25,000 of her own for the house. They agree that on their deaths or the death of their marriage, that proportion will be recognized. So they call the lawyers and put it in writing.

This is especially likely to happen if one or both spouses had a protracted or expensive divorce the first time. "To somebody who spent $20,000 litigating a divorce," says Tucker, "it's well worth it to spend $1,000 for a prenuptial agreement the next time around."

Not everyone agrees. If someone gives you a box of chocolates, you're probably going to eat them — no matter how fattening or sugary they are. Likewise with a premarital contract, say the cynics: they tend to be a self-fulfilling prophecy. If you want one, subconsciously you must know you're going to use it.

Nonsense, says Joseph Zwack, a Dubuque, Iowa, lawyer who wrote "Premarital Agreements" (Harper & Row, $7.95). "A talk about finances is kind of like a parent's talk to their children about the birds and the bees. You might as well face up to it, get it over with and go on to other things.

"The man should not feel that he's going to be bothering the pretty little lady's head about finances. And the woman shouldn't feel that her husband's ego is too sensitive to talk about money. I've found people who put off the financial talk before remarriages are doomed to have a lot of financial talks and arguments afterwards."

Aside from the once-burned, premarital agreements are also increasingly used by two other groups:

. — Couples marrying for the first time in their mid- to late-thirties, and who already have sizable estates powered by a dozen years of earning.

— Widows and widowers. "They're living longer, and are financially independent. Parents used to live with their children when their spouse died. Now they want companionship of the opposite sex, and they don't want their finances entangled," says Zwack.

With older couples, the contract is often in the form of a "complete mutual release" contract, where each spouse gives up all rights to the other's assets. For younger people, the agreement is often much more complex — as is the negotiating.

A lawyer will try to protect his client's interests by telling him dire things the other spouse could possibly do, says attorney Tucker. "And yet when you tell them these things, you're talking about the person they love and want to marry.

"They don't want to hear it. That's what makes it so difficult. You have to assure your client's interests but also make sure no one is offended. It is a business proceeding — and sometimes an adversarial one — in the framework of a romantic relationship."

Yet attorney McConville adds that "in some ways, (a contract) is a good sign, because there's a disclosure of what everyone has. I'm constantly amazed at the number of people out there who just don't know what their spouse earns."

In her counseling business, Wikstrom has seen more couples before a first marriage than before a second. Their discussions don't often result in the type of agreement that requires a lawyer. "They're the very careful people. If you and I say, 'Hey, let's get married,' we will have, in essence, a prenuptial agreement — that we will get married, and will have talked about what your role will be and what my role will be.

"In the more formalized area, you can write down what each of our responsibilities will be at any given point in time — you're going to wash the dishes, and I'll clean the house. Those are trivial, but then there's 'the first 10 years I'll raise the children, and then we switch, and you'll be the househusband.' The prenuptial agreement can touch on any aspect of the relationship, not just monetary ones."

Regardless of the exact scope of their agreement, couples generally don't discuss it with outsiders, their lawyers report. "Some people feel funny about it — that they negotiate with their spouses," says Tucker. "There's some discomfort."

Another reason for the reluctance to talk is the stereotype that premarital contracts reinforce inequity — that the poor wife is essentially coerced into signing away any rights to her husband's fortune. Zwack feels this is a misapprehension.

"Of the agreements I've drawn up, about half involve a wealthier woman than man," he says. Furthermore, "the wealthier person, whether man or woman, is usually trying to protect someone — usually children of the first marriage. If we're talking about public policy — whom we should protect — there's a pretty strong argument to provide for one's own children, and after that make adequate provision for a new spouse."

Many people execute a premarital agreement with the wish that the marriage will work out, he adds. If that happens, they can terminate or amend the agreement. But if the union fails to survive, at least they've protected themselves. (Incidentally, the 48-year-old Zwack doesn't have a premarital agreement himself. "I didn't have any money" when he got married 24 years ago, he says. "Neither did my wife.")

Finally, Zwack points out that these contracts are not always all-or-nothing propositions — where you come in with your own property, have no claims during the marriage, and leave with your own property.

How Can Parents Remember?

At Wits End

Erma Bombeck

One of the things they never tell you about child raising is that for the rest of your life, at the drop of a hat, you are expected to know your child's name and how old he or she is.

Usually, you are given no chance to count on your fingers, make a phone call or dig out a certificate. Out of the clear blue sky, someone will ask, "How old is what's-his-name now?" and you're expected to spit it right out.

With the firstborn, it's a piece of cake. Everything is significant about the firstborn. But for the children who follow, most parents have to associate the year of their birth with something of major significance. I remember our second child was born the same year we paid off the freezer, and the third one came along the year Sara Lee came out with carrot cake. Or maybe it was the year we put a window fan in the attic. I get a little fuzzy on that one.

As far as I am concerned, their names are interchangeable. If I yell at the wrong one for something the other one is doing, they credit my account, and the next time they do something rotten, I blame their sibling for something they didn't do. It beats going through three or four names before I get the right one.

I suppose all of this belies the stereotype Hallmark mother, but give us a break. Mothers have to remember what foods each child likes or dislikes, who had roseola and mumps, which one is allergic to penicillin and hamster fur, who gets carsick, and who isn't kidding when he stands outside the bathroom door and tells you what's going to happen if he doesn't get in right away. And if they all have the same color hair, they tend to run together.

Middle names were always hard for me. Maybe if I used them more, but every time I enrolled the kids in a school, they were asked for their FULL name. To this day I cannot remember their confirmation names.

One of my sons, who is ... let us just say he is older today than he was 10 years ago, accuses me of telling the wrong stories on the wrong kid. I thought he was the one who said cute things that I used to submit to Reader's Digest, but it turns out it was his brother. Whatever.

The other night I said to one of them, "Your birthday is coming up. Just think, you're going to be twenty ... eight!"

"Nine," he said.

"Don't use that tone with me," I said.

"Mom, I was there."

"What do you think I did ... phone it in? Don't you think I know how old my own child is?"

When he left the room, I said to my husband, "What's his name?"

(Editor's Note: A few weeks ago this column quoted a reader who said, "Poisonous snakes have vertical eyes and nonpoisonous snakes have round eyes." This is NOT a proven fact. I have no intention of checking it out.)

"SOMETHING BEAUTIFUL IS ABOUT TO HAPPEN"

Wives Earning High Salaries Causing Stress In Marriages

By JOHN NOLAN
Associated Press Writer

CINCINNATI (AP) — Some married couples are finding a new challenge in the era of two-income marriages: coping with a situation where wives earn more money than their husbands.

For those who cannot adjust, the result could be divorce. In some cases, the women choose to quit their jobs or take lower-paying jobs to remove the source of conflict, say sociologists who are studying the phenomenon.

Sociologists say couples are encountering new, and occasionally threatening, pressures in situations where women in professional careers earn more than their spouses.

"We have moved to a point now where men want women to work. Everybody wants a two-income marriage," says Dana Vannoy-Hiller, a University of Cincinnati sociologist. "But the men still want to make more."

The challenge is one of the latest during the 30 years in which American couples have had to adjust to the growing absorption of women into the work force, according to sociologists.

Marriages get into trouble when the spouses decide to become competitive about their salaries and careers, Ms. Vannoy-Hiller says.

"That gets you in trouble. That doesn't have a place in that kind of relationship. That's a downer," she says. "The real upper ... is for the male who is supportive and caring in the relationship."

The problem has become more acute in the era of widespread two-income marriages. More than one wife in five in two-earner households makes more money than her husband, Ms. Vannoy-Hiller found in a 1983 study she conducted with 489 couples in Hamilton County.

Those couples have to overcome traditional concepts of marital partners which generally hold that the man is the household's breadwinner and major supporter. Men aren't the only ones who can have trouble adjusting when their wives out-earn them, Ms. Vannoy-Hiller says.

"It's not just the men. Women are part of the system. They've grown up in it," she says. "They expect the men to do better than them."

Wives who become the top earners in the family can face even greater pressures if they feel they should still be better parents and homemakers than their husbands. "Our concepts are tied to those traditional gender roles," Ms. Vannoy-Hiller says.

She conducted her 1983 study with sociologist William Philliber, formerly of the University of Cincinnati and now with the State University of New York-New Paltz. They are collaborating on a book, "Successful Women, Successful Marriages," that will be based on the results of the study, which was financed by the National Science Foundation.

For comparison purposes, the sociologists included single-earner and double-earner couples in the study. Wives earned more than their husbands in 58 of the 489 couples studied.

Ohio State University researchers studied 132 women in professional or managerial positions in fields dominated by males. After seven years, only one in three of those women was still married to the same person and had a job of equal or greater status than before. The study found that 33 percent had switched to a lower-status job, 5 percent had taken a traditionally female job, 11 percent had quit working and 14 percent were divorced.

Couples who must adjust to a wife's greater career success are moving into new social territory, Ms. Vannoy-Hiller says.

"There are really no role models yet for couples to follow in dealing with a wife's career success. They have to understand the potential danger of such a relationship and be mature enough to work through their feelings openly," she says.

Cascading tiers of chantilly lace flowed to a chapel length train. She wore a chapel length veil of illusion attached to a wreath of silk flowers and carried a bouquet of red sweetheart roses and white carnations tied with white satin ribbon.

The mother of the bride chose an aqua chiffon street length dress, and the bridegroom's mother wore a dusty rose chiffon street length dress with a draped and beaded bodice. They each wore a corsage of white carnations.

Lawyer Thinks...

Younger people, especially, will still pool all income and property accumulated during the marriage. And there's another common set-up: The parties agree to each keep their previous assets, but the wealthier spouse will take out a $250,000 life insurance policy, of which the other is the beneficiary.

The inequity issue is scrutinized very closely by courts whenever a premarital contract is challenged. "Judges want to make sure it's an arm's-length contract," says Tucker.

"Was it done fairly, with full disclosure, both sides having attorneys — those questions move to the forefront" from a court's point of view, says McConville. "If it's down in writing, it's cleaner." Which is not to say that these contracts are frequently contested. "You do an agreement that gets signed, and then you close the file. For the most part, I haven't heard from the people once I've done it."

The couples themselves should review their contract periodically, the lawyers suggest. Think of it as a living will, adds counselor Wikstrom. "In principle, it's much the same. Because life goes on and situations change, every now and then you're going to go back and see if you both feel that way."

In McConville's experience, a premarital agreement either happens quickly, or the pair gives up on getting hitched. "A couple times," he says, "it becomes too convoluted, and the marriage doesn't happen. Or they go back and forth, and say, 'Hey, we don't need this, let's just get married.'"

Couple Marries In Charleston

CHARLESTON, S.C. — A gazebo on the battery in Charleston was the scene of the double ring wedding ceremony of Paula Worthington Bassos of Winterville, N.C., and Barry Glenn Kearney of Greenville, N.C., Saturday at 6 p.m.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Milton Kennedy Worthington Jr. of Grifton, N.C., and Mr. and Mrs. Josha L. Kearney of Snow Hill, N.C.

MRS. KEARNEY

The bride selected a tea length gown of white matte taffeta designed with an open sweetheart neckline accented with a floral patterned silk Venise lace. The dress featured short petal sleeves and a full circular skirt which extended from the dropped basque waistline. She wore a bridal hat trimmed in satin with accents of embroidered lace with a French pouf at the crown. She carried a bouquet of white rosebuds and baby's breath accented with blue streamers.

A reception, formal wedding dinner and cake cutting were held on the roof of the Mills House in Charleston.

After a wedding trip to Hilton Head, S.C., and Savannah, Ga., the couple will live in Greenville, N.C.

A lingerie shower was given by Mrs. Tom E. Doty.

The bride attended Ayden-Grifton High School, Pitt Community College and East Carolina University. She is computer systems coordinator for Computing and Information Services at ECU.

The bridegroom attended ECU and graduated from American College in Bryn Mawr, Pa. He is president of Barry Kearney, CLU and Associates in Greenville, affiliated with Prudential.

Wedding Ceremony Performed Outside

Green Springs Park was the scene of the outdoor wedding ceremony of Julia Lee Arnett and Michael Timothy Campbell, both of Greenville, Saturday at 5 p.m.

The bride is the daughter of Bunny Redgate of Richmond, Va., and James Samuel Arnett of Greenville. She is employed by Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

The bride is the son of Lillie Campbell of Farmville. He is employed by Georgia Pacific in Greenville.

MRS. CAMPBELL

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Adrianne Campbell was maid of honor and Michael Aaron Campbell was best man; both are from St. Albans, W. Va. Bridesmaids were Pattie Lucindo of Atlanta and Beth Massey of Littleton. Ushers were Barrick Scott Campbell of Greenville and Joshua Nile Campbell of St. Albans, W. Va.

The bride wore a floor length gown of traditional bridal satin with reembroidered alencon lace and imported schiffli embroidery. The fitted bodice featured an off-shoulder sweetheart neckline, leg o'mutton sleeves and a torso waistline. The bodice featured alencon lace daisy designs. The floor length skirt extended into a cathedral train.

The attendants wore formal tea length gowns of aqua designed with an off-shoulder neckline and a skirt of two flounced layers. They carried bouquets of peach and aqua roses accented with peach streamers.

Victoria Harris directed the wedding.

A reception followed at the park. Cake was served by Linda Shepard and punch was poured by Donna Stancill, both of Greenville.

An 8-ounce package of macaroni yields 4 to 5 cups when cooked. An 8-ounce package of noodles or spaghetti yields 3 to 4 cups cooked.

Warns Noise Is Health Threat

NEW YORK (AP) — Americans must reduce their exposure to loud noise in the environment and workplace to conserve their hearing power — or face permanent hearing damage, warns the medical director of the Deafness Research Foundation.

"In the past 12 years the number of Americans with hearing problems has grown one-third, to a staggering 22 million people," says Dr. Walter A. Petryshyn of the foundation. "And much of the loss is ascribed to noise damage.

"Reducing exposure to loud noise is the key to conserving hearing power, and the sooner you start, the better," he points out. "Because of overexposure to excessive noise, too many people are losing their hearing — and too soon."

Petryshyn says a person can avoid noise damage by being aware of loud noises that cause these types of hearing loss:

— Temporary hearing loss, which follows exposure to excessive noise for short periods and dissipates within minutes or hours.

— Permanent hearing loss, the result of sustained and repeated exposure to loud noise. The degree of loss is dependent on loudness, measured in decibels, type of noise and distance from it; and duration, exposure in hours per day and in months and years.

"The younger you are, the stronger your hearing ability is likely to be," says Petryshyn. "But almost all adults begin to notice some erosion by 30, and by 65 at least one out of six people will have severe hearing loss."

Petryshyn explains why it is vital to protect your hearing against noise damage:

To reach the brain, sounds enter your outer ear and strike the eardrum, causing vibrations to move inside the inner ear, where they pass over 30,000 microscopic hair-like cells.

These delicate nerve endings convert vibrations into electrical signals the brain needs to give meaning to sound.

Decibel and duration overloads kill the tiny irreplaceable hair cells, an event that can occur suddenly in an explosion.

The foundation suggests these steps people can take to protect themselves against noise damage:

— Use ear protectors or ear plugs. They are able to reduce up to 20 to 30 decibels of noise from chain saws, power lawn mowers and vacuum cleaners.

— Stay noise conscious, reducing threats to your family's hearing; set TV and radio controls lower and space out or shorten exposure to sources of dangerous noise levels.

— If you're having trouble, see a hearing specialist for a complete examination and evaluation.

NOT TO WORRY

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — What makes your knees knock and your hands tremble? Being alone in the dark? Looking down from the top floor of a skyscraper?

How about standing up in front of a room full of strangers to make a speech?

Getting a case of the pre-speech jitters is normal, say some speakers at R.J. Reynolds. Ralph Angiuoli says he uses any nervousness he feels to make his speech more dynamic. "I don't get nervous, I get excited," he says.

Janet Wheeler says some nervousness can work to a speaker's advantage. "You don't want to become so overconfident that you feel that giving a speech is a piece of cake," she says.

Club Gives False Security

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: A friend of mine in Michigan recently joined a singles club (it's more like a dating service that introduces people to each other), and guess what? The idea of the club is to assure members that nobody gets in unless the applicant submits to a test to make sure he or she is AIDS-FREE!

I don't believe in treating people who test positive for AIDS like lepers, but I think every city — even small towns — should have a club like this. I am a 29-year-old divorced woman who has been sexually active for the last four years. I am not promiscuous, but I am not totally monogamous, either.

I think clubs like this are badly needed in every community. Please help to publicize such clubs. — BETSY IN SOUTHFIELD

DEAR BETSY: Such clubs can give its members a false sense of security because the AIDS test does not guarantee the person who tests negative that he or she is free of the AIDS virus, as it can take several months for the AIDS antibodies to show up in a test.

The day after a person tests negative, that person can have a sexual contact and become contaminated — which will not show up in testing for many months. So, card-carrying AIDS-free members may or may not be as safe as they think they are — nor are their sexual partners.

The only foolproof way for a sexually active person to stay "clean" is to be monogamous with a partner who can be trusted to be monogamous.

DEAR READERS: There has been a great deal of information and misinformation concerning AIDS. Here are the facts, directly from the mouth of C. Everett Koop, the surgeon general:

"How to protect yourself against AIDS — as far as it's humanly possible:

"Don't have sex with someone who already has AIDS or who indulges in high-risk behavior. Such a person might be a prostitute or an intravenous drug user who borrows used needles. It would also include any sexually promiscuous person — whether homosexual or heterosexual.

"And if you do decide to have sex with such an individual — a profoundly serious health decision — then, if you're a man, use a condom from start to finish. If you're a woman, make sure your male partner uses a condom.

"A condom won't provide 100 percent protection — few things in life do. But, short of monogamy and abstinence, condoms seem to offer the best barrier to the transmission of AIDS.

"If we are truly concerned about teen-agers' lives and the future life of our society, this is the kind of information we need to get across to those members of our teen-age population who, each year, are sufficiently sexually active to produce over a million unwanted pregnancies each year."

DEAR READERS: I need your cooperation for an important survey.

Question: Have you ever cheated on your mate? How long have you been together?

You need not sign your name, but please state your age and indicate whether you are male or female.

Please send your letter or postcard to: Abby's Survey, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069.

(For Abby's booklet, "What Every Teen-Ager Ought to Know," send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.)

Isaia: Stretching To Success

By RALPH DiGENNARO
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

NEW YORK — Isaia startles. Maybe it's the clothes he wears: On a recent afternoon he greeted visitors to his New York showroom in tie-dyed jeans, Day-Glo striped sweat shirt and flame-print baseball cap balanced precariously atop a riot of wayward braids.

Then again it could be the incurable giddiness that gives people pause. The Cincinnati-born designer erupts into laughter at anything even remotely funny, the deafening guffaws ending in a toothy smile as wide as Seventh Avenue.

More likely, however, it his sudden success. At 31, with virtually no formal fashion schooling, he is fast becoming a master at using stretch fabrics to sculpt spare, tight clothes that are young, sexy and spirited. His following, it seems, multiplies almost daily. And though he has been designing for nearly a dozen years, it is only his recent designs that have the fashion world buzzing.

Says Patricia Field, owner of the boutique in Greenwich Village that bears her name: "Isaia is hot right now because his clothes answer all the questions — with a yes. His clothes make girls look sexy, they're easy to take care of and they travel well — six or seven pieces can be shoved into a tiny weekend case."

Touted as America's answer to Paris designer Azzedine Alaia (a comparison that makes him cringe), Isaia nonetheless understands and appreciates the subliminal flattery.

"Alaia is known for his seaming but my clothes are all about the absence of seams," said the designer during a recent interview in his one-floor walk-up studio on the fringes of the garment district. "In that way I don't feel my clothes are like his at all. Cotton and Lycra blend fabrics are my favorite and enable me to get those interesting clean lines."

With his name on the lips of top fashion editors across the county, Isaia's designs can be found in some of the most fashionable stores in the United States, including Barneys, Charivari, Patricia Field and Fiorucci in New York and the Spirit Storehouse in Southampton. Even European and Japanese retailers are now clamoring for his clothes. His stretchy sportswear is selling out at Brown's in London and Biffi in Rome and is now the rage in the Tokyo fashion boutiques.

"But Isaia is still indigenously American," said Barbara Wiser, vice-president of Charivari.

"He's creative and has a spirited point of view that I like. His clothes have always been sexy and playful but now that he's using cotton and Lycra, the look is more understandable... The time is right for Isaia because everyone is looking for newness from the American market."

Isaia is clearly giving it to them. For this coming fall, working with just two fabrics — stretch wool crepe and stretch cashmere — and four colors — black, brown, pink and green — the designer turned out one of his most confident collections to date. Included in the small but well-edited line are high-waisted miniskirts, empire waist and trapeze dresses, cropped tops with exaggeratedly long sleeves, tube dresses, pouf skirts with crinolines sewn inside and a series of sexy tops.

Prices for the cashmeres are not cheap: $500 for a tube dress, $300 and up for the various tops. The same items in stretch wool crepe are about half the price.

"A lot of the store buyers thought the cuts were too daring at first," said Isaia. "But now that they're selling we don't hear that too much anymore. In fact, it's kind of nice to hear people in the industry saying, 'You've got to see Isaia.'"

But that's not all they're saying. Because he has no financial backers or partners, Isaia handles design, part of sales and most of the production himself, a practice some of his store customers say could be his downfall.

"If he had the right contractors he could be tremendously successful," said Wiser. Isaia, for his part, isn't interested in going anyplace fast. To wit: Saks Fifth Avenue would only give Isaia an order this fall if he could produce enough for the entire store chain, a feat Isaia can hardly accomplish, considering his limited production.

"That's my only peeve about keeping the business small," he said. "Because when it rains it pours. I just can't ship forty-six Saks stores all of a sudden." A huge fashion show at one of New York's tonier hotels is also not in his plans.

"I don't need that gratification," he said matter-of-factly. "I want to be able to get more of my clothes out the door and into the stores." Still, when Isaia was one of two designers asked to participate in a major fashion show extravaganza in Tokyo last year, he admitted that seeing his designs on the runway was "the most exhilarating moment" of his life.

"I have to admit I sometimes have anxiety attacks, wearing so many hats in this business," he said.

Seamstress Enjoys Sewing For Churches In Illinois

By LOU MARRA
Elgin Daily Courier News

ELGIN, Ill. (AP) — Doing God's work keeps Katie Hassi in stitches.

Mrs. Hassi designs and sews vestments, banners, altar cloths and palls for St. Joseph parish of Elgin — a labor of love she's been performing for four years.

She also has made vestments for churches in Aurora and Rockford, Ill., and Grand Rapids, Mich. Mrs. Hassi's creations also are used in services at the chapel at the University of Notre Dame in South Bend, Ind., her hometown.

How did a person with no background as an artist or seamstress get involved in the vestment venture?

As Mrs. Hassi recalls, she was complaining to the Rev. William Schuessler, the former pastor of St. Joe's, that he was wearing the ugliest vestments she had ever seen.

He replied, "If you can do better, do it."

She did, and she's been doing it ever since for the parish, which is celebrating its centennial through October of this year.

Word-of-mouth advertising has brought her new clients, including Russian and Greek Orthodox churches. But Mrs. Hassi says she has to follow a prescribed liturgical pattern when creating vestments for the Orthodox churches.

Mrs. Hassi, who did a rush job for last year's Synod of Bishops, has made 88 full sets of vestments, including 10 for St. Joe's and 63 for Orthodox churches.

One of her favorite sets of vestments was fashioned from a serape she bought in Mexico. It was worn for the first time during the Our Lady of Guadalupe celebration last year at the parish.

"I don't follow any pattern," says Mrs. Hassi, who lets her creativity run wild.

She says she gets much satisfaction from making the vestments and seeing them worn at Mass.

Mrs. Hassi and her husband, Rick, who is a product planner at Honeywell in Arlington Heights, have been members of St. Joe's since 1972. They have two children attending the parish school, Debbie, 11, and Steve, 8.

Mrs. Hassi, who taught first grade in Elgin public schools for seven years, now does substitute teaching at St. Joe's grade school.

The Hassis serve as eucharistic ministers and coordinate the marriage preparation program at St. Joe's.

But the vestments are her labor of love.

Use Common Sense In Choosing Sitters

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Selecting a teen-age baby sitter for your children is a matter of common sense, says Dale Dannefer, an associate professor at the University of Rochester's Graduate School of Education and Human Development.

When hiring a baby sitter, parents should make expectations and rules explicit; use a trusted reference; and, for a long-term position, make the job provisional on the performance of the first few days.

Above all, adds Dannefer, parents should monitor the baby sitter's performance closely and listen to what their child says about the relationship.

SELF-IMPROVEMENT COURSES

NEW YORK (AP) — From flower arranging to fundamentals of investing for women, the David Schwartz Fashion Education Center of Parsons School of Design is offering a variety of skill-building courses this summer. Among the classes scheduled are sessions on the magic of makeup and personal color profiling.

Processed cheese is a pasturized cheese made by mixing and heating several types of natural cheeses with emulsifying agents.

Village Of The Tiger Widows

EDITOR'S NOTE — It's called the "Village of the Tiger Widows," a sad community on the edge of a forest in India where the Royal Bengal tiger is protected by the government. Try to explain that to the women of Arampur, a village where most of the men have fallen victim to the endangered beast of the jungle.

By DILIP GANGULY
Associated Press Writer

ARAMPUR, India (AP) — The 10-year-old girl's shriek of terror stilled the villagers' loud chatter about collecting honey in the lush jungle.

The girl, named Laxmi for the Hindu goddess of wealth, was serving food in a tiny village cafe when talk turned to honey, to the fearful jungle where it is found, and then to a man killed by a tiger weeks earlier.

"My father was eaten by a tiger," Laxmi screamed.

As she stood sobbing by the table, her mother stopped washing dishes nearby and gently led the girl away. "Please don't mention tigers in her presence," the mother says.

One does not talk idly of tigers in Arampur, known as the "Village of the Tiger Widows" because in the past decade most of the village men have been killed by the graceful but dangerous beasts.

Arampur is on the edge of the Sunderbans, a 1,034 square-mile forest in eastern India, one of 15 areas where the government is trying to save the lordly Royal Bengal tiger from extinction.

The $23 million project to save the big cats is succeeding. The latest tiger census three years ago — based on paw marks that are as distinctive as the human fingerprint — showed more than 4,000 tigers roaming India.

That was up from 1,827 in 1973 when Project Tiger Was launched with aid from the World Wildlife Fund.

Sunderbans has 264 of the cats and tiger conservation has sparked a bitter controversy between man and beast in this area where poor villagers depend on the jungle for their living.

"The government is breeding man-eaters and under the laws we cannot kill them," complains Surya Kanta Roy, the village leader in Arampur.

The government imposes a fine of $7,692 for killing a tiger, but pays compensation of only $384 to the family of a tiger's victim.

"I have survived because I do not go to the jungle," says Roy, who runs the village school. He hopes his 16-year-old daughter will find a husband outside the village because, "I do not want to see her becoming a widow."

In key areas, the government has set up electrified human dummies, powered by car batteries, that give a 230-volt shock to the tiger that touches them. That is to convince tigers that man is dangerous, too.

Honey collectors are given clay face masks to wear on the back of their heads to confuse the tiger as to which side to attack. The Royal Bengal tiger never attacks from the front.

The growing tiger population that necessitated these steps comes after years of decline. At the start of the century, there were some 100,000 tigers of eight species in the world.

Now perhaps 2,000 Indochinese tigers are left in Thailand, Malaysia and Cambodia. Sumatran, Siberian and Chinese tigers number in the hundreds.

There are some Caspian tigers, but no one has seen a Javanese tiger for years. The last Balinese tiger was shot in 1937.

India once had the highest tiger population in the world, about 40,000 at the beginning of this century.

But an insatiable lust for trophies among India's sporting maharajas, and later the British rulers, took a heavy toll of the cat.

"The scene is changed now. Man is at the receiving end," says Nimai Das, who sells candy and tells folk tales to passengers from ferries that make brief stops in Arampur.

Arampur is about 45 miles southeast of Calcutta, reachable only by waterways. At the nearest port town of Canning a boatman insisted his craft be anchored offshore — not tied to a jetty — as a condition for a trip to the Sunderbans.

"Otherwise we may be eaten by tigers," explains the boatman, Kanai Debnath.

Arriving in Arampur, he hold his five-man crew, "Be careful when you move." Then he and his men prayed with folded hands to Ma Bon Bibi, the Hindu forest goddess, and sprinkled holy water on the launch to keep evil away.

Arampur, meaning "the resting nest," once was a bustling place where traders came to buy honey and fish. Villagers recall life then as easy and relaxed.

But since Project Tiger began, Arampur has been transformed. About 80 percent of the village's 300 homes have no man.

"All eaten by tigers," says Roy, the village headman.

"Three years back," he adds, "someone said this is no more Arampur, but 'Bidhava Palli,' the village of the tiger widows."

The tigers roam the dark estuarine forest where crisscrossing rivers, lagoons, sticky swamps and an abundance of mangroves make a formidable habitat.

But the forest attracts men, too, those who depend for a living on fishing, collecting honey and felling trees.

Tigers prey mostly on deer, antelope and wild boar. But once a tiger accidentally attacks a man, it discovers humans run far more slowly than other animals. The tiger is tempted to try again and becomes a man-eater.

Official records show 579 people killed by tigers in the Sunderbans since 1973. Of those, 373 were fishermen, 107 honey-gatherers and the rest woodcutters.

Villagers say many more, as many as 2,500, have been killed. Bodies of most of the victims have never been found.

On March 13, a man-eater took Arampur's latest victim, fisherman Shaki Charan Mondal, and another woman became a widow.

Mondal's 24-year-old son, Uttam, described his father as a daredevil and expert fishermen.

"Ma Bon Bibi has been protecting him, but this time she did not...It was her wish," Uttam says.

His mother, Nirmala Devi, sat on the porch weeping. "I am one of the widows now, one more among many," she says.

Mondal died when he went ashore to collect firewood for cooking aboard his small fishing boat.

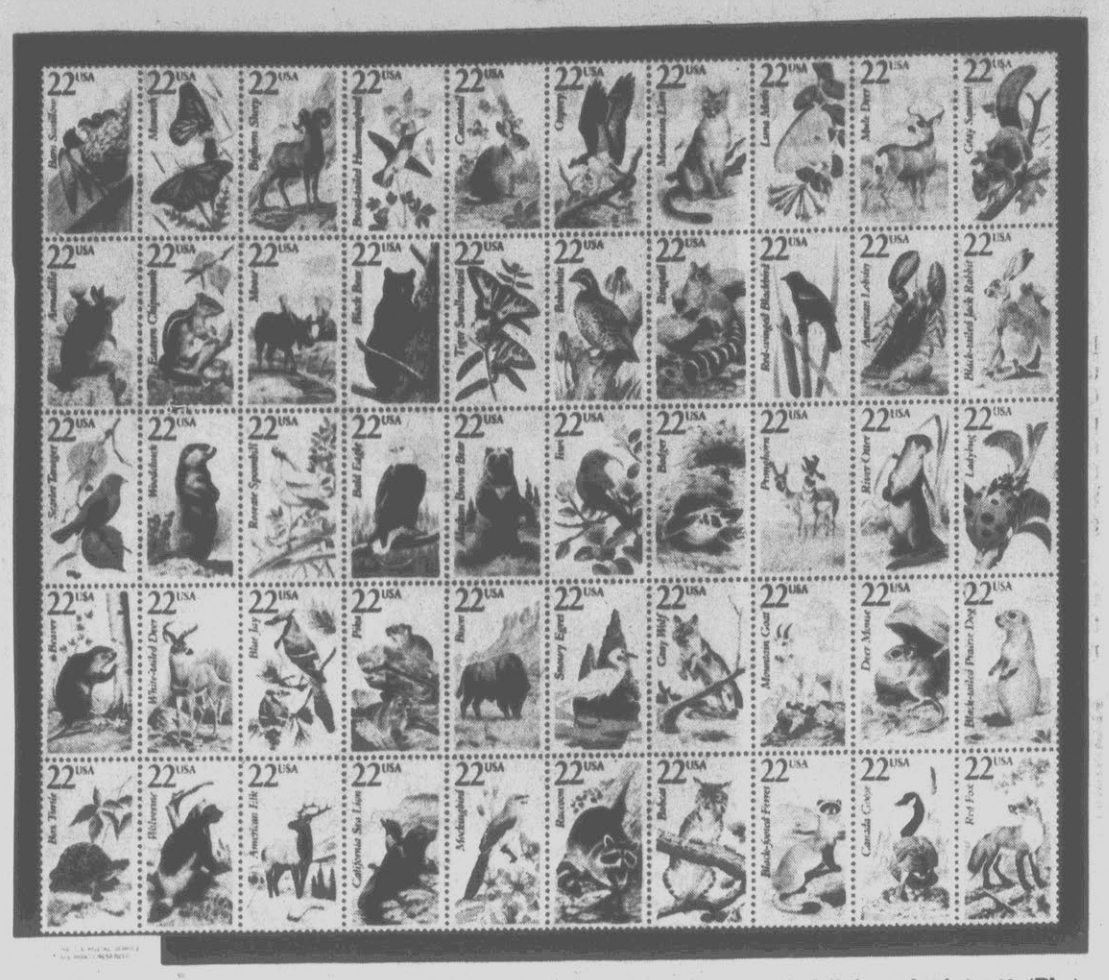
"He was collectng twigs on the river bank. Suddenly a tiger came and took him away," says Haradhan Debnath, a fellow fisherman. "We were on the boat and could do nothing."

No sign of Mondal or his clothes were found.

"The worst part is that some of the young widows do not believe that their husbands are dead," says Pradip Ghosh, a guide. "Since bodies are rarely found, they think he wil come back."

Ghosh says one 24-year-old woman, Maharani Adhikari, still tells her two children that their father will return soon. Her husband, Kanu, was eaten by a tiger two years ago.

The widows are left to their fate. Many toil the whole day fishing on the village river to get one square meal. The young go to Calcutta in search of work and some become prostitutes.



WILDLIFE PANE — The U.S. Postal Service on Saturday issued a pane of 50 different North American Wildlife stamps. The stamps will go on sale in all post offices on Monday. Cost of a full sheet of 50 is $11.00. (Photo courtesy U.S. Postal Service)

Wildlife Shown On New U.S. Stamps

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The U.S. Postal Service on Saturday issued a North American Wildlife pane of 50 colorful stamps to commemorate the natural heritage of North America. The 22-cent stamps, which represent all areas of United States, from the Alaskan tundra to the Florida Everglades, were issued at CAPEX '87 international philatelic exhibition in Toronto, Canada.

The stamps will be available at post offices and in philatelic centers throughout the United States beginning Monday.

Ten national parks across the country will kick off the North American Wildlife stamps first days of sales with events of their own.

National parks that will hold celebrations are: Acadia, Maine; Denali, Alaska; Everglades, Florida; Grand Canyon, Arizona; Great Smoky Mountains, Tennessee; Haleakala, Hawaii; Isle Royal, Michigan; Shenadoah, Virginia; Yellowstone, Colorado, and Yosemite, California.

The North American Wildlife stamps mark the most recent portrayal of American experience through postage stamps. In 1869, the U.S. became the first nation to picture a wild animal, the bald eagle, on its 10- and 30-cent postage stamps.

The Stamps' Artist

Wildlife artist Chuck Ripper, designer of the 1981 Wildlife Habitats block of four, the 1984 Louisiana World Exposition stamp and last year's pane of five fish stamps, and whose work has appeared on the covers of more than 100 outdoor magazines, is the designer of the North American Wildlife pane.

Hiw artwork reflects the diversity of North American topography and climate, in stamps that show each animal in its native habitat.

The North American Wildlife stamps were printed by the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, using the gravure process. All of the topography is by Bradbury Thompson.

Love Underlies Short Stories

YOU LIVE AND LOVE. By Valentin Rasputin. Vanguard. 208 Pages. $16.95.

Russian readers have valued the stories of Valentin Rasputin since he became generally known inside the Soviet Union a decade or more ago as one of the best of that group of Russian writers who find their material in village and rural life.

American readers can now enjoy his work in this collection of short stories. But they need not search the book for political views or analysis of Soviet life on any broad scale. Rasputin is more concerned with the subtleties and human traits found in rural and provincial Russia and particularly in Siberia, near Lake Baikal, where he was born and still lives.

Rasputin clearly loves his part of the world and the Russian peasant traditions still found there. His rich, appreciative descriptions of the vast Siberian forest — the taiga — and the people who live there, will provide new insights for those who previously thought of Siberia in terms of deportations and labor camps.

The title story, "You Live and Love," tells of 15-year-old Sanya and his introduction to the taiga for berry picking under the tutelage of a crusty old veteran of the wilderness. Sanya's mystical response to the ancient, unspoiled forest is described at one point: "He fancied that he had unwittingly recoiled, then yielded to some eternal summons."

Another story, "French Lessons," takes a village youth to the district town for schooling. There he is encouraged by a young teacher whose unconventional devices to thwart his peasant wariness eventually gets her into difficulty.

The theme of adolescent love is examined in "Rudolfio," and a reunion of former adult lovers is examined in "Meeting."

And love underlies "Vasili and Vasilisa," the only story in the collection confined solely to village life. It tells of the tender affection that survives long alienation in a peasant marriage.

North Carolina Conservancy Strives To Protect The State's Native Habitat

By SALLIE CLOTFELTER
Greensboro News & Record

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — In late 1976, Tom Massengale got an unusual job offer from the Nature Conservancy. He could work without pay for his first three months as executive director of the fledging North Carolina chapter. Only after raising $35,000 to launch the effort would he get his first paycheck.

"I took the job," Massengale said.

Now 10 years later, Massengale is vice president in charge of the national organization's Southeast region.

And the program he helped to start in Chapel Hill — with a staff of eight, a board of directors and a recent $2 million fund drive behind it — is well past adolescence.

The private, non-profit Nature Conservancy saves land that provides a habitat for threatened or endangered plants and animals. It buys, leases, manages or accepts gifts of land. Then it maintains the land, donates it or sells it at cost to state or federal authorities for parks, refuges or reserves.

The first goal of the conservancy is to snatch a sensitive natural system out of harm's way. The next step is to arrange for its continued well-being.

To date, the organization has more than 290,000 acres in more than 70 projects in North Carolina. It also has 9,000 contributing members.

"North Carolina's program is certainly the best in the Southeast and one of the two or three best in the country," said Massengale, whose regional office is also in Chapel Hill.

Nature Conservancy chapters exist in every state but Alabama and Mississippi. North Carolina's protected acreage accounts for 10 percent of the national total.

Massengale credits much of the North Carolina program's success to early support from many prominent people "with long histories of land conservation and an ability to get things done."

In 1977, Federal Paper Board Co. donated 14,000 acres of that area to the conservancy. In December 1986, the company turned over another 1,872 acres. The centerpiece of the gift, valued at over $700,000, is the 92-acre Big Island Savannah.

"Big Island Savannah is one of only a few documented sites with over 35 species per square meter currently known in the Western hemisphere," the state chapter's spring newsletter reports.

In 1985, the Alligator River National Wildlife Refuge was created from a 120,000-acre gift from Prudential Insurance Company. The value of the gift, passed from the conservancy to the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, was $50 million.

"This is the largest single private gift ever made," said Katherine Skinner, 32, who joined the N.C. Nature Conservancy last year as its executive director.

Another early acquisition was Bluff Mountain in Ashe County, one of the prime botanical areas in the Appalachians. That tract was purchased through a combination of private donations and foundation grants.

Nags Head Woods, a maritime forest, runs from Jockey's Ridge Sand Dune to the Wright Memorial on the Outer Banks. It shelters several rare and endangered plant and bird species under its canopy of windblown hardwoods. It was acquired in 1981 using a combination of grants, gifts and land donations.

Other areas set aside through conservancy efforts include several state parks, the Great Dismal Swamp in Camden, Gates and Pasquotank counties; Roan Mountain in Avery and Mitchell counties; the Currituck Outer Banks, Bald Head Island, Carrot Island and Bat Cave near Hendersonville.

The Nature Conservancy's approach is simple in concept, but can be complicated in execution.

Working closely with the state's Natural Heritage Program — which inventories the state's natural resources — the conservancy sets its sights on sites worth saving. Most are undisturbed areas on the coast or in the mountains. Few such tracts are left in the well-cultivated Piedmont.

If the land is already on the market, the conservancy acts quickly. With money on hand and close ties with granting institutions or donors waiting in the wings, the organization can move faster than government officials.

"Nature Conservancy filled a real need in the acquisition of endangered habitats," said Dick Hamilton, assistant director of the N.C. Wildlife Commission.

"They put the money up front, while it takes us a while to get it together. If we had to wait until we had approval from the Legislature and Council of State, the land might be gone.

"They help the landowners figure out the best deals. We get the land cheap, and the owner gets the tax breaks."

Negotiations can be delicate and time-consuming. They also are confidential. Even the best-laid plans can fall through, Skinner says, and price is always important.

"We're not going to pay over the appraised fair-market value for a piece of land," Skinner said.

In 1986, the conservancy added to four existing preserves: the Big Island Savannah addition in the Green Swamp, a 138-acre addition to the Bluff Mountain preserve in Ashe County; a 31-acre addition to the Big Yellow Mountain Preserve in Avery County, noteworthy for rare-plant species, including Gray's lily; and a 10.3-acre gift from James W. Mason and F.H. Simmons to the Carolina Bays Preserve in Scotland County.

Massengale says at least 100 more significant sites in North Carolina deserve saving.

LOVELY WAY TO SPEND A SUMMER DAY — One of the better things about nice summer days is going fishing with a friend in a quiet place away from work and worries. The two unidentified men shown here were drifting along the shores of Swift Creek in Craven County with the boat's motor cut off. Hours of quiet fishing are also ideal for observing wildlife in outdoors areas of eastern North Carolina. (Reflector Photo by Jerry Raynor)

Portion Of Civil War Camp To Be Partially Restored

By ELLIOTT MINOR
Associated Press Writer

ANDERSONVILLE, Ga. (AP) — Workers soon will begin rebuilding a portion of the log stockade where up to 45,000 Union prisoners were confined, including 13,000 who died under the care of Confederate soldiers during the Civil War.

Without adequate shelter, food or medical care, 12,912 prisoners died during the 14 months that Confederates ran the camp. The prisoners suffered mostly from disease, poor sanitation, malnutrition and exposure.

Their hardships sparked widespread indignation in the North after the war, and the camp's commandant, Capt. Henry Wirz, eventually was executed for war crimes.

The land occupied by the prison is now a grassy field stretching between two hills and divided by a small stream. It is part of a 475-acre national historic site.

Although the camp's original log stockade has vanished, some of its earthen gun emplacements remain.

The prisoners who died were buried shoulder-to-shoulder in mass graves in what is now a national cemetery. Their graves, along with the graves of more than 3,000 later veterans, are marked by simple granite headstones.

Park Superintendent John Tucker said reconstruction of the prison's northeast corner should begin in about a month and could be completed in July. First archaeologists must complete excavating the area to preserve artifacts and learn more about the prison's original log wall.

The 26½-acre prison, surrounded by a 15-foot high stockade of hewed pine logs, was built in early 1864 to house federal prisoners who were being moved from the Richmond area.

Known officially as Camp Sumter, the prison was designed to hold 10,000 prisoners. By August 1864, however, the population had climbed to more than 32,000.

"There is so much filth about the camp that it is terrible trying to live here," Michigan cavalryman John Ransom wrote in his diary. "With sunken eyes, blackened countenances from pitch pine smoke, rags, and disease, the men look sickening. The air reeks with nastiness."

Wirz, a Swiss immigrant who served as a Louisiana infantryman before becoming commandant, was charged with conspiring with high Confederate officials to kill prisoners and destroy their health. After his conviction by a military tribunal, he was hanged in Washington on Nov. 10, 1865.

The first phase of the reconstruction project will include a 200-foot section of wall at the northwest corner of the camp. Workers also will rebuild guard towers, known as "pigeon roosts," and the "dead line," a small wooden barrier located about 19-feet inside the wall. Prisoners who crossed the line were likely to be shot.

"We want the public to go away with a better understanding of what conditions were like in 1864," said Tucker. "We think reconstruction will accomplish that."

If the first phase is considered a success, workers could begin rebuilding the southeast and southwest corners and the camp's north gate by next spring.

Guy Prentice, one of five archaeologists working at Andersonville, said the excavation has turned up evidence that contradicts earlier information on the spacing of stockade posts.

The excavation has focused on a a 5-foot-deep trench that was dug by slaves who built the camp. The slaves placed the stockade posts in the trench and then filled it with dirt.

The archaeologists have found a 42-inch section of an original log — the first discovered in more than a century — and the decomposed remains of many other logs.

From their spacing, it is likely there were gaps between the posts, contrary to earlier reports that the prisoners could see no light through the stockade because the logs were jammed tightly together.

The Vietnamese Government Seeks Tourist Dollars

LAND DISPUTE — Navajo Indian Annie Y. Begay holds a photo of her son as she poses outside her cinderblock home near Teestoh, Arizona. In her native Navajo, Begay says, "My son went to war and defended our country and therefore I don't think I shold leave my homeland because he defended my homeland." Begay is protesting the eviction of Navajo Indians from land which the Hopi have successfully argued is rightfully theirs. (AP Laserphoto by Scott McCartney)

HANOI, Vietnam (AP) — Vietnam is opening its doors to foreign tourists, making pitches even to Americans and their dollars and to former Vietnamese boat people who have become affluent abroad.

"Acquaint yourselves with inscrutable Vietnam," says a glossy color brochure that lists 16 package tours. Vietnam, the brochure says, is rich in natural scenery as well as vestiges of both an ancient civilization and modern wars and revolution.

Soviet tourists have been visiting Vietnam for years, but Hanoi's new leadership is inviting Westerners because the country badly needs their currencies.

December's the Communist Party's National Congress called for developing tourism and in April, the government announced it would issue visas speedily, ease customs formalities, and expand flights and tourism facilities. New wings are being built at the Thong Loi and the Thong Nhat, Hanoi's leading tourist hotels.

No one is expecting an immediate flood of tourists, though. Vietnam, one of the world's poorest countries, is critically short of almost everything that attracts tourists: hotels, transportation, consumer goods, service industries, developed tourist attractions. Another problem is that the non-Communist world has isolated Vietnam since 1979 to protest its invasion of Cambodia.

"By promoting tourism, we hope to expand our ties to the rest of the world ... in a political, economic and social sense," Dang Dinh Ky, deputy director of the government's Vietnamtourism, told visiting Western journalists recently.

Ky said Vietnam expected 30,000 tourists this year, up from 20,000 in 1986 and 15,000 in 1985. Two-thirds, he said, are from East bloc nations, while those from the West included Japanese, French, Italians and West Germans. He said Vietnam earned $15 million from tourism last year.

By comparison, neighboring Thailand last year drew in 2.7 million tourists and $1.5 billion in foreign exchange.

Ky said more tourists were expected from the United States, whose forces the North Vietnamese communists fought in South Vietnam. Only 22 Americans visited in 1985-86, he said, but dozens already have come this year and monthly tour groups were expected beginning in June. He said most American tourists are Vietnam War veterans returning for a look at old battlefields, bases and resorts.

The Vietnamese say they also welcome all overseas Vietnamese, including the more than 600,000 people who illegally fled the country by boat and resettled in the West since the Communist victory in April 1975. Some 300 overseas Vietnamese visited last year, Ky said.

The only Vietnamese barred from returning, he said, are "war criminals who committed crimes before they left Vietnam or people working overseas against Vietnam."

Ky said Vietnamtourism charges travel agencies $800 a person, all expenses included, for the most popular package tour — the three-week "Trans-Vietnam," which takes in the length of the country from Hanoi in the north to Ho Chi Minh City, formerly Saigon, in the south.

Areas recently opened to tourists include parts of the Ho Chi Minh Trail, which North Vietnam used to supply its own troops and the Viet Cong during the war.

Ky said Vietnam hoped to build new hotels in Hanoi and major beach areas through joint ventures with Japanese, French or Indian companies. It also is negotiating with the Thai airline to add a new route from Bangkok to Ho Chi Minh City to Hong Kong, he said.

Otto Heisen, a 52-year-old engineer from East Berlin, said conditions have improved for tourists since his last visit four years ago.

"There are more rooms, more cars, more means of getting around," he said.

A Soviet couple who identified themselves only as Mikhail, a 49-year-old metalurgist, and Katiya, a 45-year-old government worker, said they enjoyed the scenery and friendly people but wished their room at the Thong Nhat had a television set and more lighting.

Suites at the Thong Nhat, however, do have "Vietronics" television sets, as well as new sinks, toilets and showers. The suites are priced at $37.50 a night — 50 times the average basic monthly salary of a civil servant.

June Snowfall

BEIJING (AP) — A rare snowfall in northern China has destroyed nearly 76,000 acres of crops and killed 13,310 sheep and 141 draft animals, the official Chinese news agency reported.

Up to 3.5 inches of snow fell June 5 and 6 on Zhangjiakou prefecture in Hebei province, about 60 miles northwest of Beijing, Xinhua said Wednesday.

Authorities have sent nine teams to the area to direct relief work, Xinhua said.

The Erie Canal opened in 1825. It connected the waters of Lake Erie and the Hudson River.

Scientists Study Migrating Monarch Butterflies

By CHRIS ANGELO
Associated Press Writer

SIERRA CHINCUA, Mexico (AP) — Why do you weigh a butterfly? Take the temperature 49½ feet off the ground in a forest before dawn? Feed mice chemically doctored puffed rice?

For scientists studying monarch butterflies high in the Sierra Madre, these are ways to learn what the brilliant black and orange insects need to survive in the fir forests where millions of them wait out the winter.

At the edge of one five-acre colony, ecologist William Calvert folds a plastic bag of fluttering butterflies into a small, flat square, taking care not to bend their wings, and clips it to the bottom of a scale hanging low in a bush.

Fifteen males, 10.6 grams, about as much as three new No. 2 pencils.

Then, one by one, he frees them.

Back at camp, a few hundred feet up the nearly 11,000-foot-high mountain ridge from the colony, he hangs a tin of soil from the scale. Later, he'll dry and reweigh it to determine how much was water.

Some butterflies, too, will be dried to learn their fat and moisture content.

"Very basically what I'm interested in is habitat quality, factors that are important to the butterflies," says Calvert, who has been doing research on the monarchs here for 11 years.

Arriving around Nov. 1 from southeastern Canada and the United States east of the Rocky Mountains, the monarchs roost in colonies in fir forests northwest of Mexico City.

They cling to the trees, showing only the dull, tan undersides of their wings when it's cold, spring to life in shimmering, soaring flurries of orange when they're warmed by the sun.

As spring fills the air, they begin to mate and return north to lay eggs on the year's new crop of milkweed. Then they will die.

Only those born at the end of the summer migrate. How they find their way to the same patches of forest each year, in a migration unique among insects, is one of their mysteries.

Scientists do not know if the butterflies could move or adapt if the forests were destroyed or damaged.

Their weight loss during the season is one of what Calvert calls butterfly "indexes of well-being." Mortality is another.

He tries to correlate them with differences in conditions in the colonies, asking such questions as: Does the density of the forest relate to weight decline? Or is it the dryness of the soil, an indication of a drier environment that would cause them to lose more moisture? Or do they have to fly farther for water?

Two National University of Mexico students, working with Calvert, and two University of Florida graduate students helped study which flowers were blooming in the colonies, how many monarchs drank nectar from them and whether those butterflies are lighter.

"What is certain is that they lose weight but they may be keeping their weight within a critical level," says Calvert, an adjunct associate professor at Florida.

To survive the winter in semidormancy without freezing, monarchs need the warmest nighttime and coolest daytime temperatures.

With a thermometer on a 49½-foot-long extendable pole, Calvert takes the temperature at five places in the colony at 10 different heights at 6 a.m., the coldest time, 1 p.m., the hottest time, and 8 a.m. and 4 p.m., when the temperature changes.

Thinning a forest reduces its low temperature enough that more butterflies will die if the temperature drops to a critical level, Calvert has found. Now he's looking at its warming effects.

A Comic Texas Novel That Touches The Heartstrings

TEXASVILLE. By Larry McMurtry. Simon & Schuster. 542 Pages. $18.95.

Larry McMurtry rides again. And in grand style.

"Texasville" takes the reader back to Thalia, 30 years later. The high school kids of "The Last Picture Show" have grown up and now have kids of their own. Thalia is no longer a backwater town. Its landscape is strewn with idle oil rigs and bankrupt millionaires, among them, Duane Moore.

Duane is weary. His 21-year-old son deals drugs. His 19-year-old daughter has been married three times. His 11-year-old twins are living terrors. His wife, Karla, has a closet full of T-shirts with messages printed on them. Messages such as: PEOPLE WHO THINK MONEY CAN'T BUY HAPPINESS DON'T KNOW WHERE TO SHOP. MARRIED BUT STILL ON THE LOOKOUT. "It must have been 10 years since I've seen you wear anything I didn't have to read," Duane tells his wife. She ignores him.

Karla spends money faster than Duane can lose it. And he's losing it pretty fast. Along with the mansion, hot tub and satellite dish, Duane has debts of $12 million.

Getting rich was tiring. But nothing is as tiring as going broke.

The only seemingly bright spot on the horizon is the return of Duane's first love, Jacy Farrow, who went off years before and became a movie star in Europe.

Texasville was the name of the town that was abandoned shortly after Thalia came into existence. As Thalia prepares for its centennial celebration, which includes a recreation of Texasville, everyone is in a frenzy of activity — much of it sexual. Like a lot of small towns, everyone knows everything. Partners may be swapped behind closed doors, but gossip is exchanged daily at the local Dairy Queen.

"Texasville" is a comic novel, but one that touches the heart. It is an affectionate and moving story by McMurtry, the Pulitzer Prize-winning author of "Lonesome Dove."

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Get home conditions improved today. Keep the conversation light if you have guests into your home.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Take a little trip with a friend in the morning, but be with your family in the evening.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Think about how to handle practical matters more wisely. Enjoy the company of charming personalities.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): You can gain a cherished wish, so go after it. Set up a more practical budget tonight.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Get your feet on the ground and you can handle practical affairs more efficiently. Be social tonight.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): A wise friend can give you excellent advice today. Do something that will please a good pal in the evening.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he, or she, will understand how to whittle imaginative ideas down to a practical working level and handle them successfully, so encourage this. Give as fine an education as you can afford. Teach this child the importance of controlling the temper.

"The Stars impel; they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

FORECAST FOR MONDAY June 15

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Morning brings a good opportunity to analyze your goals for new angles of attainment. Support from influential persons helps you put your plans into motion.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): An elderly person with a different background can give you good advice. Be ready for a trip to see a friend.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): More work on a plan to cheer up your mate may be needed. Put your business affairs in order, and make needed changes.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): A senior partner improves your public image. Revise your promises, but only if necessary.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Enthusiasm in activities aids your success today. An important friend of a friend can give good advice.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): Focus on recreation and happiness in your life. Involve your mate in your plans more, and introduce him or her around.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Involve your family in a home improvement project. Better communication with your mate will result.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Meet with friends to be more productive in business. Handle your communications this evening.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Organize finances with your family this morning. Cooperation with fellow workers will build efficiency.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Handle correspondence carefully and be appreciative in your answers. New ideas are useful tonight.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Modernize your home physically and financially. Invite friends in for dinner, and all will enjoy themselves.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Help get a good friend out of the dumps, and stay near people who interest you. It will pay off today.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): A surprise for your family will brighten everyone's mood. Solving practical problems will be easy today.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he, or she, will be very wise for his or her years. The education should be focused toward understanding modern attitudes, so involvements in business and social affairs will be quite natural. Don't try to change this child, be understanding and limit discipline.

"The Stars impel; they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	1 ♡	1 ♠	2 ♡
2 ♠	Pass	5 ♠	Pass
6 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Five of ♡

Even if you think you have only one chance for your contract, don't take the plunge before you need to. Sometimes just running a long suit can do wonders.

South's jump to five spades asked specifically about heart control. Theoretically, the correct action with the North hand was a cue-bid of six hearts, which would have led to the same contract.

The bidding made it easy for West to get his side off to a good start with a heart lead—any other salvo would have given South considerable breathing room. After winning the ace, it seemed that the only hope for the contract was to find an even diamond split so that declarer could take a discard on the long diamond in the North hand. However, that represented only a 36 percent chance for his contract, so declarer elected to postpone touching that suit in favor of running all his spades.

With one trump to play, all hands had been reduced to six cards. In dummy, declarer retained four diamonds and king and another club, while West came down to four diamonds, the ace of clubs and a heart. When declarer led his last spade, West had to make an unfortunate discard. He had to keep all four diamonds to protect against dummy's suit, and he could not let go of the ace of clubs; so he was forced to part with his last heart.

Reading the cards perfectly, declarer discarded a diamond from dummy and then led a club. West won the ace, but he was now forced to return a diamond. Declarer scored the last four tricks with three diamonds and the king of clubs.

1988 Chevrolet Corsica.

Lower CD than the Ferrari Testarossa. Lower Price than the Honda Accord, etc.

The new Chevrolet Corsica has a lower drag coefficient (CD) than the Ferrari Testarossa. It also has a lower drag coefficient than the Lamborghini Countach. It's also about $90,000 less.

But if you're looking for a five-passenger family sedan, you probably don't care about that kind of information. You're more likely interested in seeing how the new Corsica compares with other cars in its class. So, we've shown you.

The new Corsica offers an optional V6 engine the others don't. Plus, Corsicas got room where the others don't even have room for room. It's got a powertrain warranty that lasts so much longer we're almost embarrassed to mention it. (Well, almost.) And, best of all, the new Corsica is priced under $9,000. And in base prices, as in golf, low score wins.

All in all, the new Chevrolet Corsica compares rather well, don't you think? To compare for yourself, stop in at your nearest Chevrolet dealer's and take one out for a test drive.

Oh. One hint. Don't drive the Corsica first. We've always believed in saving the best for last.

$500 Introductory Cash-Back Offer*

Not to gloat over Corsicas' obvious advantages, but to celebrate its introduction Chevrolet's put a $500 cash-back introductory offer on all new 1988 Corsicas. Which means that the sleek, five-passenger sedan designed to take on the imports now comes with an introductory offer that does the same.

*You must take actual retail delivery out of dealer stock by June 12. Dealer financial participation may affect consumer cost. See your participating dealer for details.

A GARDEN OF WARM COLORS — Denyce Brooks' large paintings on view at Gray Gallery furnish interior views of soft, warm colors in exciting textures and patterns created through her use of oils combined with beeswax in four large paintings. Brooks also shows a few small paintings.

A Reflector Review

Ten Graduate Students Are Exhibiting Their Work At East Carolina University

Splendid Use Of Space In Gray Gallery

Text And Photographs By Jerry Raynor

Gallery director Perry Nesbitt has made capital use of the large, well-lit space, giving us the visual pleasure of what may well be a contemporary equivalent to the palatial showplaces of art in Renaissance Italy.

In this show, she has been fortunate in having at her disposal mostly large pieces of art eminently suitable to the gallery's spacious modified rectangular display area.

The good fortune here arises from the fact that with one or two exceptions the works by the ten student candidates for the MFA degree exhibiting are on a large scale. And the variety is such that Ms. Nesbitt has been able to coordinate to exceptional advantage a well-balanced mixture of black and white, color, and wall and floor pieces.

The only interruption of the gallery's open space has been a minimal diagonal placement of dividers used to exhibit the small works by Catherine C.E. Walker.

A quartet of color filled canvases painted in oil and beeswax have impressionistic color applied to patterned areas, much in the manner so successfully used by the early 20th century French master, Pierre Bonnard.

Brooks' use of oil and beeswax is a happy combination of soft warm colors and interesting textures. She shows also a few small paintings, interiors pared down, for example, to the simplicity of three straightback black chairs in an airy enclosure of pale cream and green walls.

The central space near the gallery's entry door is occupied by sculpture — that of Louisiana's William Smith and Pennsylvania's Matthew Savino.

In addition to these introductory pieces, Savino in other gallery areas shows earth color free-standing sculptures of ceramic and steel; strong organically oriented pieces that evoke a sense of the presence of components from nature knowingly orchestrated to sculptural forms by the artist.

In the front area of the gallery, Smith shows a pedastal sculpture of stone, metal and wood in a mood both wistful and joyful. A versatile artist, Smith shows steel sculpture and constructed pieces of painted and unpainted wood in the further reaches of the gallery.

One piece in particular, a lyrical flow of metal executed in a near-ornate manner, can be conceived by the viewer as a happy encounter with a very lean dragon about to become airborne from the floor.

The work of two artists, both related in that one implies a celebration of dance, the other a stated of celebration — are placed so that they face and complement each other.

These are West Germany native Susanne Nielson's group fashioned of tulle material gathered loosely around partial torsos of hand made paper. The poses are light, airy, 19th century romantic — of a genre associated with the studio of Degas or creations ideal for a Fifth Avenue shop window.

Nielson's grouping faces — in the gallery's recessed area, Norfolk, Va. native Roberta Brown's stage setting of a large construction, a "Sylvan Celebration" comprised of ribbon-wrapped uprights.

Brown's theme is further accentuated in the placement of thin ribbons from ceiling to floor on two walls behind her structures. Cherry pink lighting in this area is exactly right for this art.

Also on the walls of the recessed area are the works of another West German native, Heidi Gentry. She shows one portrait and several studies of the female figure — in watercolor and acrylics. The figures, drawn in black, presented in typical studio poses, are further adorned by the addition of spattered paint that comes distractingly near to obscuring the figures.

Pamela Stevens' contribution is a selection of stark black and white pieces in mixed media. Constructed of clear fragments of glass and painted black paper, these small pieces reflect a high degree of artistic order and emphatic statements made through a fascinating use of materials. This group has a consistency that works well for a restrictive format.

Artist Ludwig Bradley shows four large canvases of abstracted designs, basically black and white with touches of silver, pale tans, blues and faded browns.

These powerful paintings bring to mind dream worlds of the sky and stars, of wind and the sea. He employs to good effect occasional diagonal lines that sharpens the emphasis of the surface. The way in which Bradley intersperses highlights of light and dark results in a dramatic luminosity that heightens the visual impact of his work. They view well both from a distance and near at hand.

Just down the wall from Bradley's work is that of Cincinnati's Julie Mitchell. Hers too are paintings in black and white infused with subtle touches of silver and bits of color. One painting, a charcoal landscape viewed rising above clouds is vividly bright with spaces of pure white.

It is undoubetly no accident that in deciding on the arrangment of the show, Nesbitt chose to place the work of Mitchell and Bradley so that they play against each other.

Theirs is a kinship approach in creating vitality-infused contemporary art — hers a feminine version embodying curved lines; his a musculine version of the same basic concept.

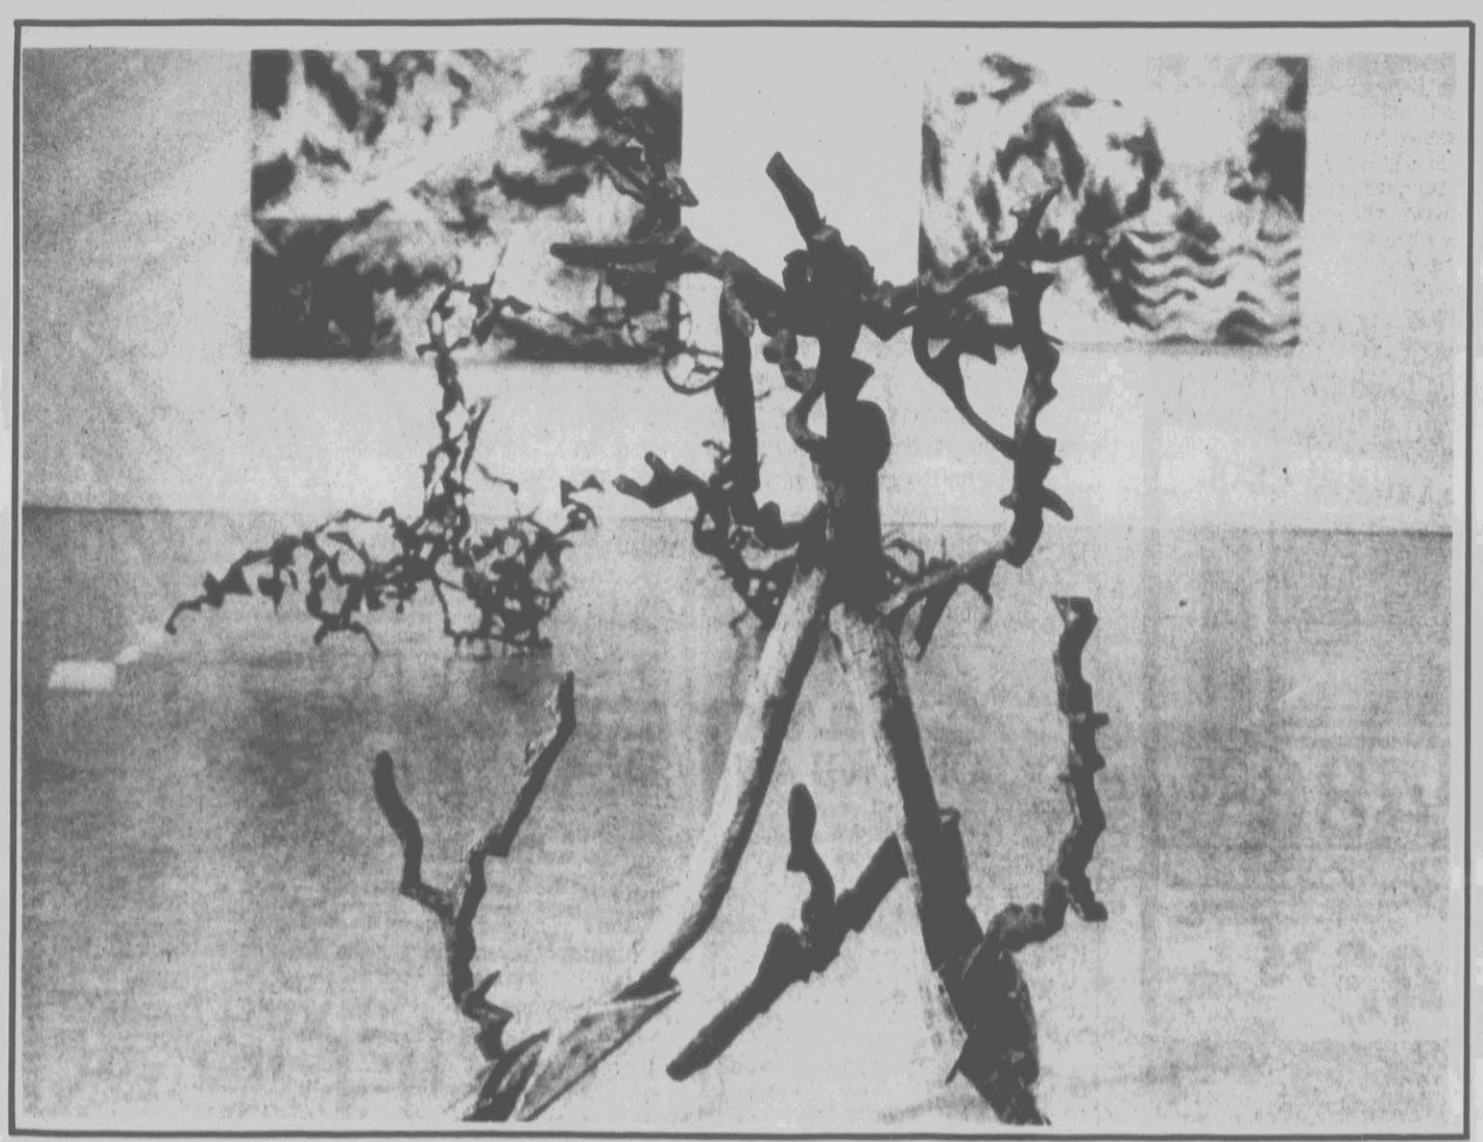
Catherine C.E. Walker, a London, England, native, has about a dozen small works on the dividers mentioned earlier. These are small, charming photographically-derived etchings featuring dogs and the feet and legs of the people accompanying the dogs. The colors she employs range through the spectrum of moss greens, fog grays, rusty browns — bordered by mats of lovely pale gray (handmade?) paper. Walker's art is the only section of the show requiring close-up spectaror viewing. This group at Gray reveals an approach to her work quite different from the suite of larger, more complicated work she showed earlier this year in a Greenville Gallery.

"Primary Sources" is an excellent achievement — from the standpoint of the artists and from the manner in which Ms. Nesbitt and her assistants have used the gallery space to give the show a framework worthy of the art of these talented graduate candidates.

The artists are young people who have evidently reached a point in their careers in which their formative efforts are beginning to take definite directions. Hopefully, it will be possible to see more of their future art at some date, some place. At this point, their output shows distinct promise.

Again, it's a handsome installation, a show that easily deserves an hour or more devoted to looking and enjoying.

Gallery hours during the summer months are from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Mondays through Fridays. Parking is available in the area and admission to the gallery is free.



A TYPICAL VIEW — Two pieces of free-standing sculpture by William Smith, foreground, and two large paintings on the gallery's back wall, both by Ludwig Bradley, provide one of several pleasing vantage points of viewing the graduate student art in the summer show now at Gray Gallery.

Uruguay's Pedro Figari Was A Noted Artist Enamored By Brilliant Color

By RANDALL HACKLEY
Associated Press Writer

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay (AP) — Pedro Figari was a renaissance man — an artist, lawyer and philosopher who colorfully captured the folk customs of South America.

Although he is well-known in European and Latin American art circles, he remains a secret to most American art collectors. Only last year was his brilliantly chromatic work shown, to widespread acclaim, in New York's Center for Inter-American Relations.

However, art aficionados are trying to promote the works of the painter who depicted the customs of the gauchos, or cowboys of southern Brazil, Argentina and Uruguay, and the sensual candombe dance.

Candombe, a dance with black folkloric origins in Africa, much like the samba is to Brazil, started in Uruguay in the 19th century during slavery. It continues to be danced today, especially during Uruguay's annual Carnival festival.

The hot pinks, reds and sultry blues, melded with his distinctive style of oil on cardboard, are presented best by Figari in his scenes of candombe ceremonies.

The women in his paintings wear gowns "with silk sashes wafting to the floor, playing the piano in a formal drawing room or fanning themselves in a salon on a summer afternoon, with two bored black cats, like bookends, stretching in opposition directions," wrote art critic Margaret Moorman.

Such Figari works fill most of Blanes Museum, set on pleasant wooded grounds in this seaside capital of 1.5 million. He died in 1938 after 17 years at the easel.

"He was one of the most notable colorists in the art world," said critic Fernando Garcia Esteban, director of the municipal art museum in Montevideo.

In "Creole Dance," men dressed in black and women in light blue and white sway, arm in arm, in a circle under thickly painted tall trees that form a thatch of green foliage running across the top of the painting like a velvet curtain.

A woman in red leans against a tree trunk and a dog with a red tongue dances at the feet of the crowd. Another woman at left wears a red scarf, and to the right is a woman in a red and white striped dress.

A multi-dimensional man who did not begin painting until he was 60, Figari was an accomplished criminal lawyer, a House of Deputies legislator for many years and in 1917 wrote the influential book, "Art, Aesthetics and the Ideal." The book argued that art was not an adornment, or something idly purchased by the wealthy, but a necessity of life.

Figari painted from 1921-25 in Buenos Aires when it was at the height of its cultural influence on the Latin world, then spent the next nine years painting in Paris.

At first, he painted technically along the lines of Pierre Bonnard and Vuillard but in time took on a more personal, picturesque tone, sometimes bordering on fantasy.

Figari drew most of his motifs — the gauchos and candombe — from the region of the Rio de la Plata, the estuary that separates Uruguay from Argentina, documenting an era that was passing into history.

"Figari paints the Argentine memory," writer Jorge Luis Borges said a half-century ago.

"The clouds painted by Figari are abstract clouds, a lyrical abstraction," added Angel Kalenberg, director of the National Museum of Plastic Arts in Montevideo.

In some cases, Kalenberg noted, Figari substituted a moon for a streetlamp or painted clouds a garish blue-purple. "He was equal to Gaughin in the color contrasts that excited the eye."

However, Figari also was touched by his own life: After his son's death in 1927, he added funeral scenes to some paintings.

His most fruitful period spanned the last seven years of his 77 years.

President Julio Sanguinetti of Uruguay described Figari as a multi-dimensional man with a "kaleidoscopic vision" and "no parallel in the American world. He is a strange species and a singular renaissance man at the head of the 19th and 20th centuries."

Uruguay, a country of 3 million, has a surprisingly strong art tradition that first began with Juan Manuel Blanes, who is considered the country's first artist. Blanes chronicled the independence movement and was a portraitist who first painted the Creole themes of the region, focusing many works on the gauchos.

Blanes, along with the Mexican Velasco, and Argentina's Prilidiano Pueyrredon, are considered the three greatest Spanish-American painters of the 19th century, according to art historian Leopoldo Castedo.

Other notable Uruguayan artists of the last 100 years include Carlos F. Saez, Gilberto Bellini, Rafael Barradas and Joaquin Torres-Garcia.

Life Among Prostitutes

By TARA BRADLEY-STECK
Associated Press Writer

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Life among prostitutes, strippers and massage parlor workers is sometimes seedy and sometimes glamorous. It's often dangerous and, in the rare times police aren't a threat, the work is fairly steady and can be high-paying.

But it's rarely sexy.

So say about 30 women in the book, "Sex Work: Writings by Women in the Sex Industry," which recently was published by Cleis Press, a small feminist press based in Pittsburgh and San Francisco.

The anthology chronicles the womens' experiences in their own words, sometimes gritty and raw, sometimes pained and poetic. Despite the authors' diverse backgrounds and observations, the underlying thread uniting the tales is that the selling of sex is work, complete with uniforms, contracts and rules.

"The work isn't sexy at all. You just act sexy," former prostitute Cecilia Wardlaw, 48, of Pittsburgh, said in a recent interview. "It's like being an actress. You go through the rituals and the motions to give men what they come for, which is to be satisfied sexually."

While some of the women, such as Wardlaw, are attracted to the business out of a desire to "walk on the wild side," or have gravitated to it after years of sexual abuse or incest, most are lured by the promise that a lot of money can be made with little effort or skill.

Sex itself is secondary. "The assumption that women who go into sex work are uncontrollably sexual, that it's something intrinsic to their nature, like a disease" is nonsense, says Peggy Morgan, a stripper in Boston.

"The bottom line is money," Morgan writes. "The fact is, there's a livable wage to be made in the sex business. ... And we don't have to put up with anything we don't want. Compared to the alternatives — slinging hamburgers for minimum wage, assembly-line drudgery, or trying to subsist on paltry government subsidies — putting up with the groping hands of a few drunk men looks pretty good."

The impetus for the book came from Frederique Delacoste, co-publisher with Felice Newman of Cleis Press. Delacoste, who helped edit the book, said she felt prostitutes and other sex workers — stereotyped in books, television and movies as victims — had been silent for too long.

"What came through was that these women were not victims," she said. "They were very strong women, they had very complex lives and their lives were not all sex work."

Articles were solicited in feminist publications, writers' newsletters, sex papers, and through prostitute's rights organizations. Delacoste said the anthology represents a generous cross-section, from the feminist, lesbian stripper to the street-smart, uneducated streetwalker. Some used pseudonyms or first names only.

"It was a huge risk for a lot of women to write," Delacoste said. "But I think they were tired of carrying the secret and tired of having to be ashamed of something they really didn't feel ashamed of. One woman said it was really important for her not to act as a victim, and you're acting as a victim if you have to hide."

One woman in the book turned to stripping to pay for college tuition, while another became a prostitute to pay the medical bills for her son, who had cystic fibrosis.

"It makes me angry when feminists lump all sex industry workers into a pile of poor, exploited, brainwashed victims without minds of their own. I was a young woman who needed to earn a living and chose to pursue the highest paying, least demanding jobs I knew of," said Judy Helfand, 41, a former nude model and topless dancer in San Francisco.

Others said they were attracted to the sex business because they felt more powerful and in control of their lives when sex was bartered rather than given freely.

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By DIANE TAYLOR

Unexplained occurances, especially the possibility of extraterrestrial visitations, have always intrigued people — from the true believers to the cynical skeptics. Two new books at the library explore the possibility of alien encounters. Each book cites extensive scientific investigative results that further add to the evidence that aliens may indeed be visiting, and even abducting, people on our planet.

"Intruders: The Incredible Visitations at Copley Woods" is the result of over two years of investigation into the claim of a young woman that she has been visited by aliens for many years and has even been abducted by them to be used in genetic experimentation. She even claims to have held her own daughter, which was conceived and raised by alien visitors. Other people relate similar stories including incidents of being abducted, physically marked and examined. The author, Budd Hopkins, relied on medical reports, psychological tests, hypnosis and interviews in order to come to the conclusion that hundreds of people all over the country have been abducted by alien beings.

"Communion," by Whitley Streiber, is the author's personal account of his repeated abduction by alien creatures. Streiber is a best-selling author known for his horror stories, but this horror story is true. Like so many others claiming to be victims of alien encounters, Streiber recalls humiliating physical examinations and subsequent nightmares. He undergoes hypnosis to try to help him remember the experiences and takes psychological tests to prove he's not crazy. Streiber also claims that more and more people each year have similar experiences. These people end up suffering both physically and mentally for years.

Whether one believes in UFOs or not, these books will certainly make interesting reading.

Award To ECU Writer

ECU News Bureau

A book about the Civil War, co-authored by historian William N. Still Jr. of East Carolina University, is the recipient of a literary award given by the The Museum of the Confederacy, Richmond, Va.

"Why The South Lost The Civil War," published by the University of Georgia Press, received the Museum's Confederate Memorial Literary Society's Jefferson Davis Award for 1986.

The award is given annually to honor outstanding research and writing of a book-length narrative in the period of the Confederate States history from 1861 to 1865. It was presented in Richmond on June 3, the birthday of Confederate President Jefferson Davis.

Still is a professor of history at ECU and is co-director of the program in Maritime History and Underwater Research. He is the author of numerous books and articles about the Civil War and about Union and Confederate ships and naval warfare.

Still wrote the book with Richard E. Beringer, a professor at the University of North Dakota; Herman Hattaway, of the University of Missouri; and Archer Jones, a professor emeritus and former dean at North Dakota State University.

Their book traces the course of the Civil War from Bull Run to Appomattox and examines all previous theories for the defeat to conclude the South's loss was due to a lack of will to endure a long, bloody war.

The book has been chosen as a main selection of the History Book Club.

Ancient Maya Subject Of Museum Symposium

RALEIGH — Recent discoveries concerning the ancient Maya, a highly developed civilization of Mexico and Central America, will be the focus of a symposium June 20 at the North Carolina Museum of Art.

The program, "Discovering the Ancient Maya," is scheduled from 9:45 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Program tickets are $12. For more information call the museum at 833-1935.

The Maya, who flourished from about 150 B.C. to about 900 A.D., were thought for many years to be a peace-loving civilization. However, recent advancements in the decoding of Mayan hieroglyphics reveal that violence and bloodletting were integral to the religious and political life of the Maya.

The symposium will open with a lecture by Dr. Sidney Markman, professor emeritus of art history at Duke University, who will discuss the great architectural masterpieces of the Maya. Dr. George Stuart, an archaelogist with the National Geographic Society, will survey the major excavation of Maya sites, focusing on current projects.

Following a lunch break, which allows time to view the Mayan and other pre-Colombian works in the museum's collection, the symposium will conclude with a talk by anthropologist Steve Houston of Yale University. Houston will discuss the ongoing effort to decipher Maya hieroglyphs, considered to be the most difficult to read of ancient writing systems, and what is being learned from them.

Building Donated To Arts Council

A Farmville building has been donated to the Farmville Community Arts Council by the disbanding Farmville Art Society.

The building is located behind the National Guard Armory off W. Horne Avenue. Its keys were presented recently to Dr. Dan Heizer and Pat Carr, members of the Farmville Community Arts Council board of directors, by Joe Willoughby, the disbanding group's president, and Evangeline Murphrey, its secretary.

The Farmville Art Society was formed in 1966 by a local painting group. The building was built for the society by Sue Todd Holmes, then a Farmville resident, on land donated by Dan R. Morgan. Art Society members say the donation of the building is in honor of Mrs. Holmes, now a Wendell resident.

When North Carolina Was Not A Part Of The United States

By DEBBIE SELINSKY
Duke University News Service

It's tough to comprehend in 1987 — the year of the 200th anniversary of the adoption of the Constitution — that for a period of time between September, 1787 and November, 1789 a brother living in North Carolina didn't reside — technically speaking — in the same country as his sister in Virginia.

She lived in the United States.

He lived in one of the two states — the other was Rhode Island — that had refused to ratify the new Constitution of the United States.

"Most people like to think that this country was formed in 1776, but the United States was actually formed when the Constitution was ratified," reminds Dr. Clarence Gohdes, James B. Duke Professor Emeritus of English at Duke University.

Gohdes, a scholar interested in North Carolina history, believes early evidence of both political and economic isolation were important factors leading to the Tar Heel State's eventual ratification of the country's new government in 1789.

Duke has some of the more interesting details of the machinations that resulted in that historic event at its fingertips in the form of documents in the manuscript department of Duke's Perkins Library.

These documents, according to principal cataloguer William R. Erwin, include 26 original county petitions signed by North Carolinians in 1788 and 1789 seeking to ratify the Constitution after it was initially voted down in the first state convention in August, 1788.

Printed on oversized sheets, including several pieces of imported paper bearing the coat of arms of George III, the petitions stated a number of reasons for ratification.

The primary reasons appeared to be disenchantment with "anarchy and miserable misgovernment" under the Articles of Confederation, the fact that 11 states had already accepted the new plan, and the desire to participate in the benefits derived from the union.

Camden County's petition was concerned with the national debt and public and private credit, while Randolph County refers to the interest on the foreign debt of the states.

Erwin said modern-day North Carolinians are likely to find names of ancestors on the petitions. The names on the petitions also tell much about the people of the time, and about how the signatures might have been gathered.

In Carteret County, the movement appeared to have been led by Col. John Easton and Caleb Bell, while the Surry County petition contained many Moravian names, one of whom, Gottlieb Shober, was an extensive landowner.

On some of the petitions, persons unable to write signed their Xs while others witnessed them or signed their names for them.

Gohdes said it appears that the petitions were brought forward at militia musters, following church services and public meetings and on other occasions on which large numbers of citizens might have gathered together.

The petitions in the Duke library represent Camden, Carteret, Chatham, Dobbs, Duplin, Edgecombe, Hertford, Hyde, Johnston, Lincoln, Martin, Mecklenberg, Onslow, Randolph, Richard, Rowan, Sampson, Surry and Tyrell counties.

There is every reason to believe petitions were circulated in every county that existed at the time, Erwin said, but only those from 19 counties were in the group the late collector Winston Broadfoot purchased for Duke years ago.

Gohdes, who is 85 and has been at Duke since 1930, said the Federalists, or conservatives, were aided in their push for ratification by events that illustrated the problems North Carolina would encounter as a state outside the union.

For example, just two months away from North Carolina's ratification of the Constitution, the coastal trade of the state suddenly found itself treated as foreign tonnage in ports of the United States. Hugh Williamson, a leading Federalist and N.C. member of the Constitutional Convention of 1787, drew up a petition to address this situation which was a peril to local bankers, merchants and shipowners.

That document is also in the Duke manuscript department.

On the other side of the coin, Anti-Federalists argued that the adoption of the Constitution would lead to the destruction of state rights and to the removal of government from popular control and that capital and industry would be promoted at the expense of agriculture.

Gohdes, who isn't sure the Constitutional anniversary is getting as much attention as it should, said he believes ratification must have been a big step for independent North Carolinians.

It's hard to blame them for being reluctant to — as they viewed it — give up their rights to a body with which they'd had no experience and about which they had certain doubts. They'd grown up thinking of themselves as North Carolinians, Virginians, Georgians and New Yorkers, and sometimes they resented the ways of their neighbors. To fuse with them to make what Patrick Henry called a consolidated government was an idea to which they had to grow accustomed."

New Austrian Stamp

Austria has issued a new stamp commemorating the centenary of adult education in Vienna. The 5-shilling stamp features a painting by Professor Arnulf Rainer, "The Educated Eye." The Viennese Adult Education Organization was founded in 1887 to establish and promote public libraries, vocational schools and to disseminate relevant printed works.

DYE IN THE WOOD

The forest products firm says the bark of red maple produces a dark blue dye, while hemlock bark yields a tan shade. Apple tree bark creates a yellow tint and black birch produces a reddish-brown hue.

Vinegar or strong tea will set the colors in fabrics.

Baseball Cards Popularity Reaches An All-Time High

By BEVERLY ROBINSON

Media Service Book Communication

NEW YORK — A 1952 Mickey Mantle Topps Baseball card in mint condition is worth $3,300 today because it was the first regular issue Mickey Mantle card in the Topps series. The complete set of the 1952 Topps series is worth $18,000 in mint condition.

While millions of card collectors would love to get a hold of the Mickey Mantle card, there are only a couple of thousand in existence today, according to Dr. James Beckett, author of "The Official 1988 Price Guide to Baseball Cards" (House of Collectibles, $4.95). The guide is a gold mine of pricing information for America's 250,000 active collectors who attend hundreds of trade shows and conventions a year.

The popularity of baseball card collection is at an all-time high, Beckett says. The cards themselves have been around since the mid-1800s and have been distributed with products ranging from chewing tobacco to bubble gum to chewy granola bars. Today's versions of the cards, with their color fronts and statistics-laden backs, are a far cry from their earlier ancestors, which were crudely printed on heavy cardboard and of poor quality. Topps Chewing Gum of Brooklyn began producing baseball cards in the early '50s and remains the leading manufacturer of the two billion baseball cards issued each year. Other major card companies producing cards today include Donruss, Fleer and Sportflics.

Beckett bought his first baseball card in 1956, at age seven, for a penny. He went on to become the most industrious card collector in the neighborhood. Because he didn't have lots of money to spend on cards, he'd get them by "flipping." A group of kids would flip the cards against the wall and the kid who flipped closest to the wall would win the cards.

Invariably, Beckett won. He also became adept at bartering. "I was so obsessed back then," he recalls, "I'd buy a pack of gum, and I'd trade the gum for more cards."

Today, having amassed one of the finest card collections in the world, Beckett makes a living writing books that assess the value of baseball cards and other sports memorabilia.

After completing his Ph.D. in statistics in 1975, Beckett decided to produce his first price survey. "It was a four page, shrunk down Xeroxed thing, he says, but in those days it was the only thing collectors had." The success of his pricing surveys prompted Beckett to write a full-fledged book and in 1979, his first price guide to baseball cards was published. A new edition has been released annually ever since.

"Not to brag," the author comments, "but I get a kick out of hearing collectors at trade shows say, 'We'll buy at 150 per cent of Beckett' or 'We'll sell at 80 per cent of Beckett.' They take the price in the book and pay above or below what's listed in the guide. Of course, that's input for me for the next book." Besides listing prices in three different gradings (mint; very good to excellent; fair to good), Beckett's price guide includes a history of card collecting, tips on buying and selling, advice on preserving cards, and for the novice, suggestions on how to begin collecting.

"Baseball collecting is like a miniature stock market," notes the author. "Many factors can affect a card's value." For example, when New York Mets pitcher Dwight Gooden won the Cy Young award two years ago, his '85 card automatically increased in value. While the value of '85 cards for most players average only a few cents, Gooden's '85 Donruss card is worth $10. His '86 and '87 Donruss cards, however, are only worth $1.25 and $1, respectively. The value of Gooden's cards will undoubtedly be affected by his recently publicized treatment for drug addiction.

Card collectors apparently are eager to let Beckett know what they think of his prices. "I get well over 1,000 pieces of mail a month and in many cases readers are indicating satisfaction or dissatisfaction over the relative prices. The majority feel the prices are fair," he reports.

Is card collecting a man's domain? Not at all, says Beckett. "There are more women collecting than one might imagine. And at shows and conventions you come across a number of husband and wife teams where over the years, as the hobby's grown, the wife's role has become a more integral part."

A passion for collecting baseball cards is often passed from parent to child. Beckett's father was a collector and the author recently began purchasing cards for his four-year-old daughter, Christina. One of the things Beckett likes best about the price guide is that a "little kid can read it from cover to cover and if he's got a memory like mine, he's an instant expert.

When he's not pricing baseball cards, Beckett is a statistical consultant who gives expert witness testimony — often in court cases involving multi-million dollar lawsuits. "Testifying in court is a totally different tone from collecting and pricing baseball cards. It's a switch in gears that I really enjoy."

A Reflector Review

ECU's Tar River Poetry Volume Strong On Poems About Birds

TAR RIVER POETRY. Fall 1986, Vol 26, Number 1. Editor, Peter Makuck. Greenville, N.C., Paper, 62 pages. Illustrated. $3.00

The spring issue of Tar River Poetry has just arrived. But first, a look back at the fall 1986 issue, not earlier noted in this paper.

One pleasing coincidence soon caught my eye in the poems in this issue. A number of the poets used as their subject, or made reference to, birds. The volume's first poem, Robert Cording's "Exterior View With Goldfinches," contains a graphic mirror image of goldfinches and yellow sunflowers — "Sunflowers, their yellow bills opening/ Black seeds, their yellow and black/ Bodies more than their usual colors . . ."

Jim Peterson, in "Flight," writes of his longing to hold a bird, but "never had one/ Fallen wounded outside his window/ To be nursed back to health and inevitable/ Flight . . ."

Later the dreamer of bird flight entertains a hope some bird will "sense/ His harmlessness, to light on his head. . .To perch in the palm of his hand with lingering/ Head-cocked glances. . . His hands open and waiting, cradles of seed./ Aching for the feel and weight of a feathered body."

Peterson's evocation of longing has a harsh counterpart in William Trowbridge's "Bad Birds," about noisy starlings, who barge "into the nearest maple or forsythia/ with the skree and skrinch of their/ non-stop squabbles. Not one/ can sing a note . . ."

And again, Nancy Bearden opens her poem, "Things I Can't See" with "Blackbirds cry in the persimmon trees./ I can't see them/ But I know that they are there. . . ." She develops the theme of things unseen to parallel the presence of a lover, more real when unseen "Perhaps even more than when/ Your shadow lies next to mine/ On the soft earth."

I do not know, but can imagine that Makuck, his assistant editor Phyllis Zerella and three advisory editors did not consciously select poems for this issue based on birds as poetic subjects. Nonetheless, at least six more of the poems have themes or incidental lines about birds — dead, living, bird music, etc.

Whatever the reason, the fall 1986 issue of "Tar River Poetry" is a keepsake treasure both for poetry fanciers and bird lovers.

Other facets of nature play a significant role in this volume. Dennis Sampson, for example, pens these lovely soft-spun lines in "Blue Flowers." — "I have brought you these because I love/ what the world has done in the darkness/ with no hope of praise, sprouting blue flowers."

Nature as nostalgia is finely etched in Philip Paradis' "Semper Fidelis." In recollections of a leatherneck friend of World War II, Paradis touches on the familiar events of those days: K-rations, "new pics of Grable and Lamour" after beginning the poem with childhood memories shared between two boys — "Remember the green smell of pine,/ the glue from pitch blacking/ your hands long after the climb/ down broken limbs. . ."

In reviewing an issue of "Tar River Poetry" I find the temptation to resort to quoting favorite lines or passages irresistable; at the expense of attempting to present an overview of contemporary trends represented in a particular volume.

Nevertheless, the fall 1986 issue, in line with the expected excellence of Tar River Poetry, offers readers a rich variety of poems as well as informative reviews of new volumes of poetry. This issue has reviews by well-known poets of today — Brendan Galvin, Richard Simpson and George Looney.

A random number of small pen and ink sketches by an illustrator named Pegi adds to the visual appeal of this collection.

An added feature is an in-depth 14-page interview with poet Jonathan Holden conducted by poet and critic Judith Kirchen and Sanvel Rubin, director of the Brockport Writers Forum. This feature alone is worth the modest price of the fall 1986 issue.

Tar River Poetry is available at local bookstands or can be subscribed to from: Tar River Poetry, Department of English, Austin Building, East Carolina University, Greenville, N.C., 27858-4353. Rates are $6 a year (2 issues) or $10 for two years.

Pitt Writers Published In 'Crucible'

Two writers from Pitt County, Ida Wooten Tripp of near Pactolus and Jerry Raynor of Greenville, have works of fiction published in the 1987 issue of 'Crucible," the annual literary-art magazine of Atlantic Christian College of Wilson.

Both items are short stories. Mrs. Tripp's story, "Fancy Fanny," is about the adventures of a young lady whose reputation is enhanced by fancy tattoos placed on a part of her anatomy not generally seen by the public.

Raynor's story, "The Lavender Parasol," is of a romance between a United States soldier and a young Japanese girl in the occupation days of Japan. When the girl's father refuses to let her see the young soldier, she travels to an ancient gravesite of ill-fated lovers where she commits suicide.

Both writers are members of the Greenville Writers Club.

The 1987 issue of "Crucible" contains fiction, poetry, photographs and art work. Copies are available at $3 from: The Department of English, Atlantic Christian College, Wilson, N.C., 27893.

MUSEUM RENOVATION — In the summer of 1987, a different kind of art — that of renovation, is the predominant activity at the Greenville Museum of Art as the facility's interior gets a face-lifting. Here, Don Twitty of Washington, N.C., with the Renova Construction Company, pauses in his work for a moment to be photographed. The interior renovation work is scheduled to be completed about Sept. 1. Until that time, no art shows are being presented. (Reflector Photo by Jerry Raynor)

Change In Attitudes Toward Viet Veterans Noted

By PAUL OLSEWSKI
Press Syndicate
Book Communication System

NEW YORK — Few armies in history have been as vilified as the American forces that served in Vietnam from 1964 to 1973. Harassed by one faction for even being in Vietnam, derided by another for not winning the war, the criticism has had a profound negative effect on the public's perception of the warrior's role in America's most debated war.

In 1919 and 1945 when America's troops returned from fighting overseas, huge throngs of citizens welcomed them back home. The heroes of those wars received special recognition, with their pictures splashed across magazine covers and their exploits reviewed in newsreels. America was proud of her heroes.

America seemed ashamed of the men she sent to Southeast Asia. Her collective conscience wanted to forget the Vietnam veteran. Particularly ignored were the men who fought so gallantly in Vietnam. "When I began researching the history of the Medal of Honor and its recipients over 20 years ago," says Edward F. Murphy, head of the Medal of Honor Historical Society, "I found it easy to find material on the heroes of earlier wars. But I could find very little on the heroes of Vietnam."

Murphy, who served in the Army during the Vietnam War, set out to correct that. He began tracking down living recipients and the families of deceased heroes. After gaining their confidence he got them to tell their stories.

"In spite of the political divisions at home, and the morale problems that plagued the American fighting forces in Vietnam in the war's later years," Murphy said, "the individual fighting man in Vietnam displayed tremendous courage — a courage that rivaled the gallantry of their fathers fighting across Europe or storming the Pacific islands and their grandfathers battling in the Argonne Forest during World War I."

It took time, though, before the public was willing to hear these stories of raw courage, Murphy says. "Not until the homecoming of the Iranian hostages in 1980 and the unveiling of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial in Washington in 1982 was the country ready to acknowledge the bravery of the men it sent off to fight a war it didn't want to win."

Some 238 men earned Medals of Honor in the ten years of American involvement in Vietnam. One hundred and fifty of them died performing the deed that brought them the award.

The heroes represent a cross-section of America. They come from nearly every state, from all walks of life, from high school dropouts to graduate students, and from young draftees to career military professionals. They range in age from 18 to 47. They were all different, but they shared one trait — selfless heroism.

Many young men avoided military service during the Vietnam era by fleeing to Canada or claiming conscientious objector status. Some who were COs still served. One was Thomas W. Bennett, a 21-year old West Virginian, who was assigned to duty as a combat medic. Bennett died three weeks after arriving in Vietnam. Ignoring his own painful wounds suffered in an ambush on February 9, 1969, Bennett continued treating his comrades for two more days until he was killed trying to rescue a fallen comrade from under heavy enemy machine gunfire.

Chopper pilot Mike Novosel had flown B-29's in World War II and been a commercial airline pilot when he volunteered to go back on active duty in 1964 at age 42. "There was a war going on and I felt I had to do my part," Novosel explained. Five years later, on his second tour of duty, Novosel rescued 29 soldiers from the midst of an enemy dominated battlefield. Altogether, Novosel is credited with rescuing over 5,500 men during his two years in Vietnam.

Another example of incredible fortitude was displayed by John P. Bobo, a 24-year-old platoon leader with the 3rd Marine Division. When the enemy attacked his night defensive position south of the DMZ on March 30, 1967, he rallied his men in a spirited defense.

"These men represent the average American," says Murphy. "They weren't Rambos. They were just individuals doing jobs they felt needed to be done."

Sunday In The Park Concert Today Inaugurates New Site

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

It can be considered something on the order of a gala downtown affair. At seven o'clock this evening, the 15th season of Greenville's Sunday in The Park gets under way — this time at a different location, the newly constructed stage on the Town Common.

To celebrate the inauguration of the outdoor amphitheater (called that in anticipation of future hillside tier seating), music director Barry Shank has put together a program of music traditionally appropriate to a festive outdoor occasion.

The instrumental ensemble under Shank's direction, The Wind Machine, is comprised of about 50 players drawn from student and faculty members at East Carolina University, community players and musicians from various parts of eastern North Carolina including Wilmington and Rocky Mount.

The program today features also an octet of male singers, drawn from the university faculty and area singers.

The program will open with Copland's "Fanfare to the Common Man," to be following by the playing of "The Star Spangled Banner." In a brief interlude, Stuart Aronson will announce the name chosen for the amphitheater.

The program will continue with the playing of Carter's "Proclamation" and Strauss's "Death and Transfiguration."

A chorus of male vocalists of Greenville and the area will be featured in the next selection, Mendelssohn's "Festgesang an die Kunstler." The singers are Charles Moore, Philip Evancho, Jim Rees, Charles Maxwell, Jack Thornton, Norman Pierce, Clyde Hiss and Stuart Aronson.

The next selection, Rodgers' "Camelot," will feature soloist James (Jim) Parnell. This will be the last public appearance in concert in the Greenville area by Parnell, a French horn player who has just retired from the faculty of the East Carolina University School of Music after 31 years of teaching. Parnell plans to leave Greenville at an early date.

"Music students, Jim's many friends and myself will sorely miss him," Shank said. "He's been a faithful support and steadfast friend, a capable and talented performer in concerts, for plays and for the Summer Theater. We shall all hate to see him go."

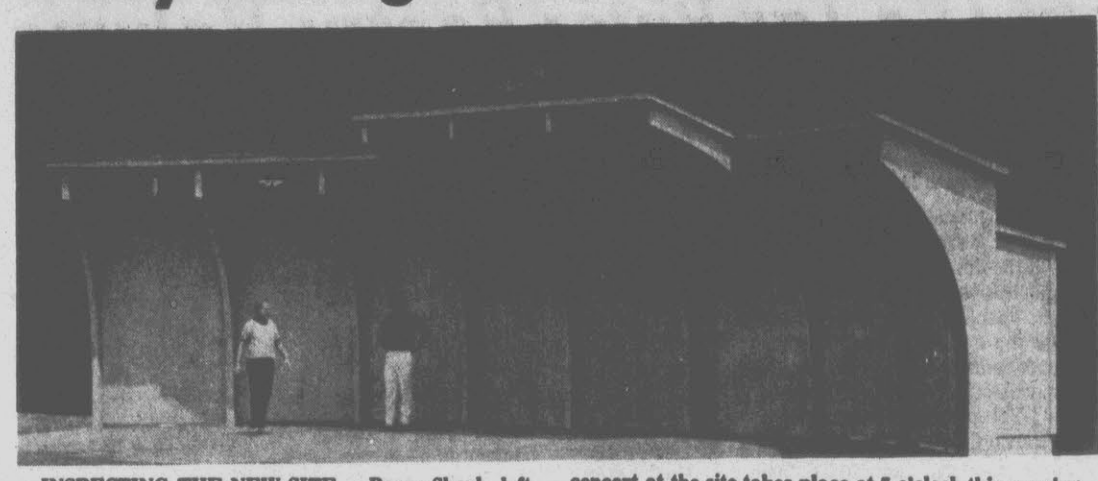
The final four compositions to be performed in this inaugural concert will be "Three Jazz Melodies" by Lewis; Murssorgsky's "Great Fair of Kiev," Goldman's march, "On The Mall," and the military march, Sousa's "Stars and Stripes Forever."

The annual summer Sunday in the Park series continues to be funded by the City of Greenville, presented under the auspices of the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department, coordinated by Stuart Aronson.

The concerts are free and open to the public.

Ample Sunday parking is available to patrons in parking lots south of First Street. No parking is permitted along First Street.

Patrons are encouraged to bring children (no pets please) and to bring folding chairs and blankets.



INSPECTING THE NEW SITE — Barry Shank, left, and Stuart Aronson, right, inspect the stage of the newly completed facility on the Town Common that will be the site of Sunday in the Park performances. The inaugural concert at the site takes place at 7 o'clock this evening. The concert is free and open to the public. Seating will be on the grass facing the band shell. Anne Murray Loved By Canadians

By JEFF BRADLEY
Associated Press Writer

TORONTO (AP) — From the rustling rhythm of her first hit, "Snowbird," to a new album of love songs for the '80s, Anne Murray has proven to be one of Canada's most enduring exports.

"The only way anybody knows I'm not American is I say 'out' and 'about,'" she said, pronouncing the words the Canadian way — "oot" and "aboot."

Revered at home as Canada's pop superstar, the 41-year-old singer said most fans don't know she's a coal miner's granddaughter from Springhill, Nova Scotia, who still chooses to make her home outside Toronto with her husband and two children. It's a life that allows for privacy and plenty of time off for tennis, swimming and golf and an annual summer holiday in Pugwash.

"This is my home, and my escape," she said.

After 10 gold albums, 10 No. 1 hits on the country music charts and a stream of pop and country Grammy nominations, Miss Murray's nationality seems incidental and she disagrees with those demanding protection for Canada's "cultural identity" under a free-trade pact with Washington.

"I would like to think there was one, but I don't think there is," she said. "We've been so influenced by the American music scene, as has every country in the world, we are all the same now."

The singer's new album, "Harmony," is the centerpiece of her first coast-to-coast tour of Canada since she appeared on a TV singalong program 20 years ago and decided to quit her job as a high school gym teacher. She later married the show's producer, Bill Langstroth.

Within three years, Miss Murray had a Capitol Records contract and was out in 1970 with "Snowbird." Other chart-toppers have included "You Needed Me," "Could I Have This Dance" and "A Little Good News" in a crossover repertoire that has brought sales of more than 20 million records.

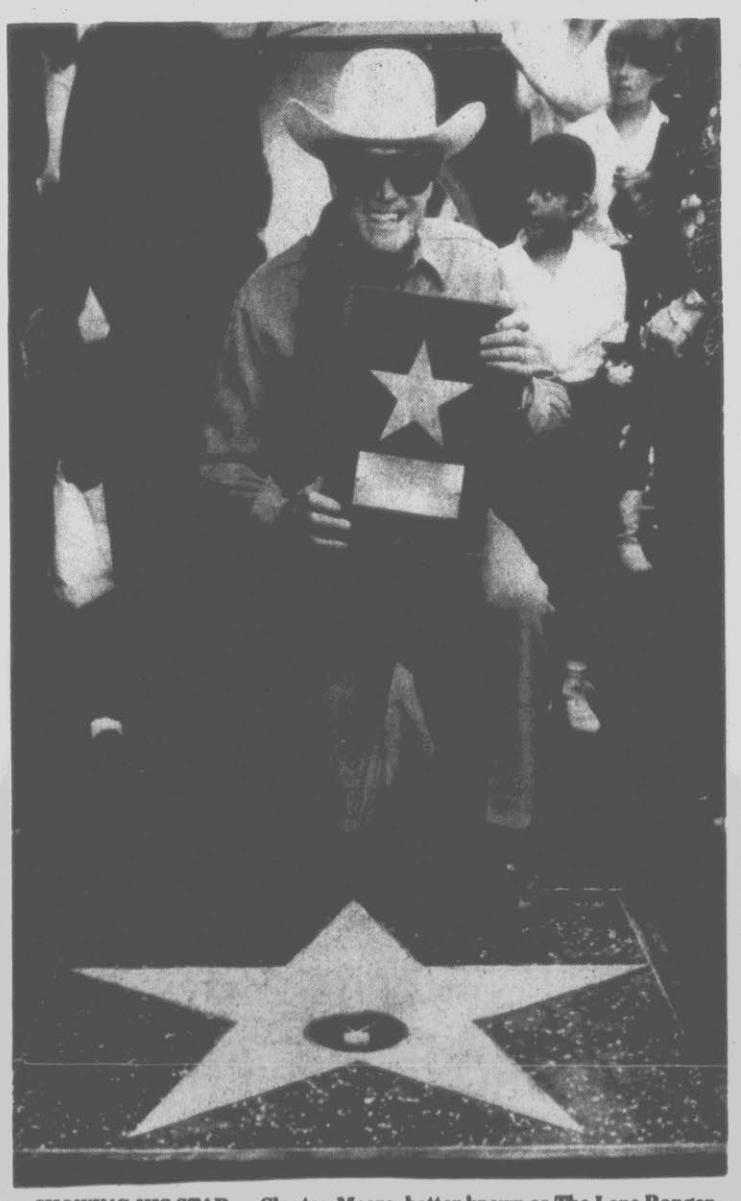
Blessed with a voice smooth and deep, but hard-edged and agile enough for today's synthesized rock, Miss Murray poses a dilemma for radio stations and retailers: Is she country or pop?

It's a subject that gets the singer heated up.

"People have put labels on me, and what frightens me is that 'Are You Still in Love With Me' won't become a hit because somebody decided I'm a country singer and won't play it," she said, referring to a single taken from the new album.

With its frank lyrics about fading love, the song marks a breakthrough for the artist known as "One-Take Annie" because of her studio professionalism.

Reputed to have been Elvis Presley's favorite female singer, her own all-time choices include Dusty Springfield and Harry Nilsson. She still likes opera but hates jazz and blues. "I can't sing the blues. They get me down and I don't feel that way."



SHOWING HIS STAR — Clayton Moore, better known as The Lone Ranger, was honored June 4 with his own star on the Hollywood Walk of Fame. Moore, 73, received his star in the category of television. (AP Laserphoto by Douglas C. Pizac)

Playwrights Conference Opens June 26

OPENING FRIDAY — Neil Simon's "Promises, Promises," a play about a young corporate member whose rise is due not to ability, but to his willingness to make available to older men the key to his apartment, opens Friday in the auditorium of Ayden-Grifton High School. Shown here are five members of the cast in rehearsal. Performances are set on Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m. and on June 21 at 3 p.m. Admission is by season or single show ticket, available at Hungate's in Greenville, Edwards' Pharmacy in Ayden and Murphy Brothers Furniture in Grifton. While they last, tickets will also be sold at the door. Seating will be on a first come, first served basis. (Photograph by John Griffin)

The third annual Playwrights Fund of North Carolina Southeastern Playwrights Conference will be held June 26-28 at the Robert Lee Humber House in downtown Greenville.

Richard Laing, PFNC president, who is also director of cultural development at ECU's Regional Development Institute, describes the focus of the conference as "process."

"This is the point where artists of all disciplines have been ignored. It's nurturing the developmental stage of the work that makes the difference in quality of the product."

Nancy Distefano organized the conference activities, which include in-progress workshops, panel discussions, and showcase readings of two new works, "Phantom of the Blue Letter," by Asheville's David Hopes, and "Ain't We Got Fun?" by Marcia Savin.

The conference will encompass receptions for playwrights and PFNC members, and presentation of the Golden Script Award, given to an individual whose efforts have significantly helped promote playwriting.

The Greenville based PFNC, sponsors of the annual regional conference, is a not-for-profit corporation supported by the Theater Arts Section of the North Carolina Arts Council, as well as by foundation contributions and corporate and individual memberships.

Four Major New Programs Offered By Durham's ADF

DURHAM — Four major new programs, ranging from introducing modern dance to dancers in Guangzhou (Canton), People's Republic of China, to assuring the preservation of dance masterpieces by America's black modern dance choreographers, have been announced by American Dance Festival President Charles L. Reinhart in plans for the Festival's 10th anniversary year in Durham.

"Since the 53 year old festival moved to Durham ten years ago, it has also extended its borders to countries on four continents," said Reinhart. "And now, thanks to grants from The Rockefeller Foundation and the United States Information Agency, we are able to expand our International Choreographers workshop to commission a series of new works by former workshop artists, and, probably most dramatic, establish a modern dance program in China, which will lead to the creation of that country's first modern dance company."

Funds from a $53,000 grant from The Rockefeller Foundation will help the ADF to establish a modern dance department in the Guangdong Dance Academy in Guangzhou (Canton) China. During the program's first year, two American choreographers and teachers — Ruby Shang and Sarah Stackhouse — will each spend three months teaching at the Guangdong Academy. The Asian Cultural Council will provide funds for a teacher/choreographer from the Guangdong Academy to be at the ADF and in New York City for nine months during 1987-88. The final goal of the program is to create a modern dance company in China by the early 1990's.

A $51,200 grant from USIA, along with the Rockefeller monies, will be used to expand the International Choreographers Workshop that will include participants from 16 countries. Established in 1984, the workshop brings dance artists from around the world to study in Durham during the festival.

On July 12, the ADF will also present a performance by four former workshop participants, from Argentina, Indonesia, India and Spain, who will again spend a summer in Durham deepening their experiences with American modern dance. The artists will use ADF dancers to create new works for the July 12 concert.

Extending its borders even further this summer, the ADF has been invited to prepare a project that includes playing host to seven French choreographers between the ages of 20 and 25, who will spend ten days at the festival before traveling to Washington, Philadelphia, New York City and the Berkshires under the auspices of the ADF. The invitation came from the USIA as part of its youth exchange program. The following year calls for sending seven young American choreographers to France.

Reinhart also announced a $100,000 grant for 1987 from the Ford Foundation to assure the preservation of imperiled black dance classics. The project includes selecting ten dances over a three year period to be taught to American dance companies. These dances will then be videotaped for archival purposes and will include interviews with the choreographers of the works. The selected companies will be invited to perform the dances at the American Dance Festival in the summers of 1988 and 1989.

The ADF has additionally received a $20,000 planning grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities to develop treatments for three one-hour television programs. These programs will examine the historical and cultural context from which these imperiled dances emerged, as well as their conribution to American culture.

Wilmington Sets Play Competition

WILMINGTON — The North Carolina Writers' Network is soliciting original one-act play scripts in a new competition open to North Carolina playwrights.

Submissions are to be sent in between July 15 and Aug. 15 and are to be mailed to: NCWN One-Act Play Competition, P.O. Box 1207, Wilmington, N.C., 28402.

Two winning playwrights will each receive $100 and a workshop production of their plays at the network's fall conference in Wilmington Nov. 13-15.

Plays should have six characters or less and an uncomplicated setting. The author's name is not to appear on the script, but on a separate, attached sheet of paper containing the playwright's name, address and telephone number, as well as the title of the play.

No material will be returned unless accompanied by a stamped, self-addressed return envelope.

Walrus bulls eat an average of 100 pounds a day, and may grow to weigh as much as a medium-size car, says National Geographic World.

And if you think the driveway is a bit pricey, wait until you hear about the house that goes with it, owned by billionaires Yoshiro Nakamata and Kitaro Watanabe.

Bought in 1945 for $20,000, "Lifestyle's of the Rich and Famous" reports that this architectural masterpiece is now worth over $500,000,000, making it one of the most expensive homes in the world.

Inside are several priceless pieces of furniture, including a lacquered wardrobe chest inlaid with mother-of-pearl, and a multi-million-dollar kimono collection — one covered with emeralds, another with diamonds — 150 one-carat stones, to be exact, which is valued at $300,000.

And that's not all. The Tokyo home also boasts a $21 million tennis court, probably the most expensive in the world. It's not so much the architectural costs as it is the premium placed on space — having a tennis court in your backyard in the middle of downtown Tokyo is an unheard of luxury.

And if you're wondering about transportation, you're better off on the bullet train. You can't even buy a car in Tokyo unless you prove you have a place to park it. And in Tokyo, a garage space can cost up to $500,000, about twice as much as the car itself, even if you're buying a custom-built imported model. So if you thought the price of American real estate has skyrocketed over the past few years, just be thankful you don't live in Tokyo.

Grace Kelly with Prince Rainier in 1956—shortly before she married and left behind former flames Ray Milland, Bing Crosby, Jean-Pierre Aumont and William Holden (l-r)

Q I've been reading about film star Grace Kelly, who was born in 1929 and died in 1982. Supposedly she fell in love and had affairs with most of her leading men, among them Paul Douglas, Gary Cooper, Ray Milland, James Stewart, Bing Crosby, Clark Gable, Cary Grant and William Holden. Did she really fall in love with each of these men? And if she did, why did she end up marrying a short roly-poly like Prince Rainier? —Jay Martinez, Colorado Springs, Colo.

A Grace Kelly's most serious affairs were with the actors Ray Milland, Bing Crosby, Jean-Pierre Aumont and William Holden. She also was ardently pursued by dress-designer Oleg Cassini. She married Prince Rainier, however, because he proposed quickly and filled all the religious and romantic requirements she had set for a husband. They were married in Monaco in a civil wedding on April 18, 1956, and the next day in a church ceremony. Their first child, Princess Caroline, was born on Jan. 23, 1957. Years later, in an interview with a PARADE reporter, Princess Grace confided that she was lucky not to have married an actor.

Q Of our nine Supreme Court justices, how many were appointed by Republican Presidents and how many by Democratic Presidents? —Howell Davis, Carrboro, N.C.

A Justice Byron White was appointed by President Kennedy, a Democrat. Justice Thurgood Marshall was appointed by President Johnson, another Democrat. The other seven were appointed by Republican Presidents: Justice William Brennan Jr. by Eisenhower; Justices Rehnquist, Blackmun and Powell by Nixon; Justice Stevens by Ford; and Justices O'Connor and Scalia by Reagan.

Q Great Britain's Queen Mother, Elizabeth, has been a widow since 1952, when King George VI died of lung cancer. Has the Queen Mother ever considered marrying again, or has she had a "dearest friend" to be her companion through the years? If so, who is he?—Janet Weaver, Oshkosh, Wis.

A The Queen Mother, 86, has never been coupled with a so-called "dearest friend" since her husband's death. She has devoted herself to her family and her country.

WHAT PEOPLE EARN

Why do secretaries in Boston make more than those in San Antonio? Lawyers more than teachers? Should CEOs earn more than Senators? Why are we so curious about it? And how did you do in 1986?

BY MICHAEL VERMEULEN

IT'S A GOOD THING WE'VE GOT PEOPLE LIKE Wyoma Haywood around. She makes $12,500 a year as the housekeeping supervisor for a Houston hotel, and she says, "I like my job so much, I feel I get double-paid for what I do. I love the people I meet." She probably wouldn't mind a raise, but such sincere contentment goes a long way to restore faith in the notion of a just reward for an honest day's labor. This idea is part of the American way, but it has taken a considerable beating over the last year.

We've all learned about investment bankers who apparently couldn't make it on $2 million a year, so they traded inside stock tips for satchels of cash. We've put spies on trial who passed secrets to the other side—not for ideological reasons but for money alone.

Yet the greed of inside traders like Ivan Boesky and spies like Jerry Whitworth doesn't diminish the enthusiasm of Carlos Quinteros, who came here from El Salvador. Quinteros makes $19,500 a year as a shop supervisor in Los Angeles. "I think Americans do constantly look for money," he says, "but this is a consequence of how they live. Americans are a practical and creative people. They work hard. That's why, here in America, people live good."

Or listen to Nan Bailly, a Minnesota vineyard owner who will make about $15,000, depending on the grapes: "Greed can really distort people's perspective on life. I see quite a bit of that. But greed also goes hand in hand with ambition. And people need ambition to get anywhere."

Simply getting by was harder this year than in the past, reveals PARADE's annual informal survey of salaries across the nation. According to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, the median (true midpoint) household income in America is 7.2 percent lower than it was in 1973, even with the rise of two-income families. In 1973, it was $25,447; in the latest survey, with the figures adjusted for inflation, it was $23,618.

Last year, the median U.S. wage was $18,616. Unemployment was down, but so was consumer spending. Personal income rose 4 percent, which just beat the cost-of-living increase. The gross national product dropped, the trade deficit rose. Depending on your place in the economy, the overall picture was one of stability or stagnation.

Teenagers, for instance, suffered unemployment of more than 17 percent; blacks, 14 percent; and Hispanics, 10.5 percent. Women did moderately better in 1986; they now earn 65 cents for every male's dollar, up from 60 cents in 1980. A survey of top management in 119 small companies showed that pay raises dropped to 6 percent last year, from 8 percent in 1985. Still, this beat raises for top management in general, which averaged less than 5 percent.

Not surprisingly, the white-collar bosses still did a few points better than their clerical employees. Salaries for office employees went up 3.2 percent last year, down from the 4.8 percent raises in 1985. The average salary for office personnel was $15,184. Executive secretaries/administrative assistants did best, averaging $19,968, followed by legal secretaries at $18,980. Word-processing operators averaged $18,148.

Regional differences continue. Some middle-management salaries for the same job in different parts of the country vary by as much as 35 percent. But that's still better parity than others enjoy. Systems managers in small to medium-sized companies, for example, are paid 40 percent better on the West Coast than in the Southeast. More specific yet, messengers in Anaheim, Calif., average $14,118 per annum; those in Boston earn just $11,518. Tractor-trailer operators in Corpus Christi, Tex., earn $7.81 an hour; in Albany, N.Y., they pull in $13.11. Janitors in Chattanooga, Tenn., make $187.20 for a 40-hour week; the same work in South Bend, Ind., returns $303.60.

It's hard to feel sorry for a starting attorney in Washington, D.C., where the average is $48,000 the first year out of school. But imagine how he or she feels to learn that in New York it's $63,500. Victims of slumping industries like oil and farming have more claim to our pity. Top officers at Houston's American Exploration took 25 percent pay cuts. And at Dickey-John Corp., a farm-equipment maker in Auburn, Ill., times are so tough that the brass hasn't had a raise in two years. Of course, things could be worse; they could themselves be farmers.

If there's one rule of economic life, it's that salaries are unfair. What sense is there, for instance, that food engineers working in candy made a median salary of $44,000 last year, while those in seafood—which, as every mother knows, is so much better for you—only got $39,000? Why is first base the highest-paying position in baseball, last year averaging $764,544 for players with 100 games or more, while catchers got $694,661, pitchers with 19 starts or more $525,398, and shortstops $443,915?

Did you get a smaller raise this year than last? So did most American workers.

Ballplayers and rock stars notwithstanding, America's many millionaires—would you believe there's one for every 100 households?—got that way through long hours over 15, 20 or even 30 years. Statistics show that 80 percent of them come from working- and middle-class families and less than 10 percent are under 40. For all their troubles, they do live in nice areas. Florida has the highest concentration (19 per 1000 households), then the District of Columbia (17 per 1000) and Connecticut (16 per 1000). California has the most in sheer numbers—129,480.

Certainly, not everyone gets the money he ought to. "The way we decide who should be paid most is totally out of whack," says Katy Abel, who makes $45,000 as a radio news director in Boston. "People who should be paid most are those in human services, those we entrust with the care of our children—teachers, day-care workers—and also people who work in nursing homes. They are on the lowest end of the scale, yet they have the hardest jobs of all." Indeed, Working Woman magazine advised its readers that public-school teaching was one of the worst careers they could contemplate, with the "silver lining" for those unfortunate enough already to be teachers being that they might be able to jump into corporate training.

But, fortunately, money isn't the sole motivation for most people. Take Mike Frasch, who earns $25,500 as a nurse in New York. "I think the personal satisfaction of helping people is the most important part of my job," he explains. "I leave most days with the feeling that I've accomplished something." Says Austin Noto, a $40,000-a-year horticultural consultant in the same city, "The best part about my job is that I love working with plants, and that's what I get to do every day. It's why I quit my job in the computer field—so I could do exactly what I wanted."

Walt Disney

Movie stars: Benji and cougar cub

Benji Is Back

In Benji the Hunted (which stars the daughter of the original Benji), the remarkable pooch saves a litter of cougar cubs from the predators of the Oregon forest. Since the movie has few scenes with people, one of writer-director Joe Camp's big expenses was for 12 animal trainers for the wolves, eagle, bear, frog, etc. "You take animals who are inherently mortal enemies," says Camp, "and you're teaching them not to be mortal enemies, so you can put them together in the same scene—to play the part of mortal enemies!" When they want Benji to look sad, Camp adds, "her trainer says, 'Shame on you, bad dog!' and her head goes down, and you'd think she'd lost her last friend. But the minute you call, 'Cut!' she jumps right up. It's just a routine—like you say, 'Sit!' and your dog sits."

Martin Wins by a Nose

You'll be relieved to hear that Steve Martin doesn't play a jerk in Roxanne, a contemporary version of Cyrano de Bergerac. He's the brilliant and witty C.D. Bayles, captain of a small-town fire department. Hampered romantically by an enormous nose, C.D. writes love letters for a handsome but tongue-tied friend to send to the beauteous Roxanne (Daryl Hannah), whom C.D. also loves. "Steve really is bright and sophisticated," says Shelley Duvall, C.D.'s friend in Roxanne. "And funny. In one scene, he does 20 nose jokes, and he broke us all up."

GUIDE TO Better Fitness

BY MICHAEL O'SHEA, PH.D.

Q I've heard that I should be careful to avoid heat exhaustion and heat stroke when exercising in warm weather. What do these terms mean, what are the symptoms and what can I do if they occur?

A Normally, your body functions at about 98.6°F and works to maintain that temperature. When you exercise, the work done by your muscles, heart and circulatory system creates extra heat, which the body removes through sweat, increased breathing and heat dissipation through the skin. But when the heat produced exceeds your body's ability to remove it, problems can arise. This often happens during the first heat waves of summer or when people not yet adjusted to hot weather try a hard workout on a hot day.

Heat exhaustion is an early warning that the body is in trouble—the person is becoming dehydrated, and his circulatory system is losing its effectiveness in removing heat. The symptoms commonly are a weak, rapid pulse; headache; dizziness and general weakness. Someone experiencing these symptoms should stop exercising, move to a cooler place and drink fluids.

Heat stroke is much more serious. The body temperature has become dangerously high, and its heat-regulating mechanism has failed: Sweating stops, the skin becomes dry and hot, and the circulatory system is under great strain—death can result from circulatory collapse. If you sense that someone may be suffering from heat stroke, find medical help immediately! Attempt to lower the person's temperature using ice packs, alcohol rubs and immersing the entire body in cold water.

To avoid heat exhaustion and heat stroke: Always drink fluids during exercise. In hot conditions, exercise only for brief periods, and rest in a cooler, shaded area.

Mitchell Focus On Sports

Q I plan to run in a couple of 10-kilometer (10K) races this summer. What should I look for in choosing a good, safe race?

A There are hundreds of 10Ks and other fun runs around the country, and there are wide differences in quality. A well-organized race should:

- have medical personnel at the finish (and ambulances for transport) and at least two first-aid stations along the route;
- have water/fluid stations at regular intervals—at least three for a 10K race;
- have water and nutrient-replacement fluids available at the finish, as well as fruit and high-fiber food;
- be safe from traffic, pedestrians and animals—factors usually controlled by race officials and police;
- have a mandatory pre-race meeting—either just prior to the race or the day before—to describe the course and explain the rules and safety features.

In addition to these basics, try to choose races in areas where the terrain is not too difficult and the environment is aesthetically pleasing.

Zaibel Focus On Sports

Michael O'Shea, Ph.D., is founder and chairman of the Sports Training Institute in New York City.

Intelligence Report

How Will History Rate Nancy Reagan?

Nancy Reagan (l) ranked low with historians in 1982, when they named Eleanor Roosevelt and Lady Bird Johnson (r) as the two top First Ladies: Has Mrs. Reagan's rating risen?

Of the 42 women who have served the nation as First Ladies, surely Nancy Reagan is one of the most controversial, influential and feared. Mrs. Reagan, of course, doesn't believe such adjectives apply to her, and she ridicules reports describing her as a power-hungry Machiavellian wielder of excessive White House influence. She concedes, however, that she primarily is interested in her husband's well-being and sees nothing wrong in her priorities.

"Although I don't get involved in policy," Mrs. Reagan stated last month in New York at a luncheon of the American Newspaper Publishers Association, "it's silly to suggest my opinion should not carry some weight with a man I've been married to for 35 years. I'm a woman who loves her husband, and I make no apologies for looking out for his personal and political welfare. We have a genuine, sharing marriage. I go to his aid. He comes to mine."

In contrast to the President, who is almost constitutionally incapable of firing personnel, his feisty Nancy demonstrates relatively little reluctance in dispatching to the guillotine almost anyone who makes or threatens to make her man look bad. She is fiercely protective of him and has said many times, "My life began with Ronnie."

Mrs. Reagan, it's believed, was deeply involved in stimulating the resignation of Donald Regan as her husband's chief of staff and replacing him with former Sen. Howard Baker Jr. of Tennessee. The First Lady has had four chiefs of staff of her own, as well as three press secretaries, since 1981. One chief of staff, Lee Verstandig, resigned after only 24 days and subsequently was dubbed "The 24-Day Wonder."

How will history treat Nancy Reagan as First Lady? In 1982, early in the first Reagan Administration, Profs. Thomas Kelly and Douglas Lonnstrom, directors of the Siena Research Institute at Siena College in Loudonville, N.Y., requested history professors at 102 colleges to rate the 17 First Ladies of this century on 10 different qualities and questions. The historians ranked Eleanor Roosevelt No. 1 and Lady Bird Johnson No. 2. Nancy Reagan was near the bottom, at No. 15 (see chart).

Three months ago, however, a Gallup Poll revealed that a majority of Americans (58%) approved of Mrs. Reagan as First Lady, while 23% disapproved and 19% were undecided.

It will be interesting to note how historians and the public rate her in five or 10 years.

Windsor Fortune

Two months ago, when the late Duchess of Windsor's jewelry was auctioned off in Geneva, it brought more than $50 million to her estate. It had been expected to raise only $7.5 million. Now the Pasteur Institute in Paris —the major beneficiary in the Duchess' will—must decide how to spend the windfall.

Before June is out, the institute's administrative council has to vote on whether to build a new center specifically for AIDS research or to allocate the funds to several different research projects. When the Duchess made out her will in 1974, AIDS was unknown.

HOW TO RETIRE ON $400 PER MONTH!

Most Americans have no idea that even a minimal retirement income could enable them to live graciously in beautiful surroundings, a climate that is comfortable year-round and in a community of many others with like interests. But many thousands are discovering that it can be done south of the border.

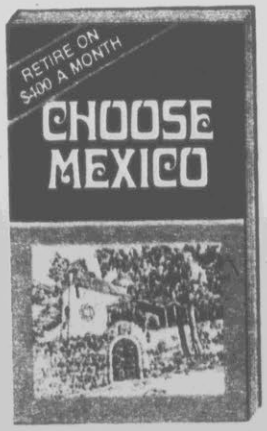
This book provides detailed information on retirement havens in all parts of Mexico—the housing, recreation, health care and community service opportunities they offer. It tells how to avoid the costly mistakes that many tourists and retirees make and instructs in how to become a happy resident of this neighborly land.

CHOOSE MEXICO explodes myths that have kept many Americans from discovering how delightful life can be in Mexico. The authors who have visited every corner of the country draw upon conversations and correspondence with hundreds of retired Americans there. The book is loaded with up-to-date information on almost everything you need to know to take advantage of this greatest of retirement bargains.

Food, finances, laws, travel, recreation, community service opportunities, health services—where to live, how to get there, what it will cost—all are covered in detail.

The value of the dollar has skyrocketed from about 12 to well over 400 Mexican Pesos in the last few years. Retirees who made the mistake (cautioned against in this book) of converting their funds into Mexican currency were severely hurt. Those who continue to draw upon dollars deposited in the U.S. are prospering. CHOOSE MEXICO is full of useful advice on managing your funds so as to make the most of Mexico's bargains and maintain your financial security.

Four hundred dollars a month will provide a couple with a two-bedroom house, ample and delicious food and full-time help! Any money left over from this $400 can be used for travel and entertainment, including trips back to the US for visits with family and friends.



Why struggle with high living costs, winter snow and cold or summer heat and humidity, unsafe city streets and lonely evenings when in Mexico you can find:

- Food, housing and recreation costs a small fraction of those in the U.S.
- Springlike weather year round.
- Friendly communities of retired Americans.
- Safety and security in a country where violent crime is far less common than in the U.S.
- A government and a people who extend a gracious welcome to Americans who choose to settle there.

ARE WE WINNING AGAINST CANCER?

FOUR HUNDRED THOUSAND people in the U.S. will die from cancer this year. And of the 240 million Americans now living, 74 million eventually will get some form of cancer.

Can the recent advances in diagnosis, drugs and surgery change any of this? The answer is yes.

"In the past 40 years, the overall cure rate for cancer has risen from 30 percent to around 50 percent," says Dr. Vincent T. DeVita Jr., director of the National Cancer Institute in Bethesda, Md.

To find out the status of cancer, I visited more than 20 leading hospitals and research laboratories across the country and talked with nearly 30 authorities on cancer. Here are some of the most notable advances in treatment and research for different forms of cancer. One of them may save your life.

Breast cancer used to mean certain mutilation and, for most women, death. Now three out of four women with breast cancer can be saved, depending on the stage of the disease. And the great majority of them no longer have to lose their breasts.

A study of the different kinds of surgery for breast cancer, sponsored by the National Cancer Institute, found that mastectomy—removal of the entire breast—is not necessary in the early stages of the disease. The study, which followed 2163 women at 89 hospitals across the country for more than six years, endorsed lumpectomy—removal of the tumor and the surrounding tissue only—followed by radiation, instead of radical surgery.

"The bottom line is survival," says Dr. Bernard Fisher of the University of Pittsburgh, who headed the study, "and our results to date indicate that, regardless of the tumor's location and size—it can be as large as 2 inches in diameter—you get no significant difference in survival rates between lumpectomy and when you take off the whole breast. A woman who finds a lump in her breast no longer has to panic and say, 'I'm going to lose my breast and die.'"

Roger Ressmeyer

Yeast grown in this fermenter will become a vaccine that can stop liver cancer.

Leukemia is most often treated with chemotherapy. But some patients need new bone marrow to survive. The problem lies in finding a compatible donor. When doctors attempt to transplant, or graft, healthy but incompatible marrow, the "warrior cells" of the immune system (called T lymphocytes) attack the leukemia patient. The result is a fatal condition called graft vs. host disease. For the bone-marrow transplant to succeed, marrow must come from an identical twin of the leukemia patient or from a brother or sister with closely matched blood. Only 30 percent of leukemia patients have such a suitable donor.

If current experiments succeed with soybean agglutinin—a unique compound that removes the T lymphocytes from mismatched marrow—doctors soon may have an ample supply of healthy marrow and may save many more lives. Dr. Richard J. O'Reilly of Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center in New York has had promising results using treated marrow in tests on 33 patients with adult and childhood leukemias.

Cancer of the ovaries and stomach cancer together kill more than 25,000 Americans a year. A new, highly potent chemotherapy created by Dr. Isaac Djerassi of Mercy Catholic Medical Center in Philadelphia may drastically reduce these numbers. Dr. Djerassi tested

At Johns Hopkins Hospital, scanner (l) translates patient's cancer into red images on screen (r), allowing doctors to adjust radiation dose to tumor's size.

THE LATEST GAINS: AN UPDATE

- Seventy-five percent of women with breast cancer can be cured with a combination of surgery, radiation and/or chemotherapy.
- Women may not have to lose their breasts to cancer anymore: Depending on the stage of the disease, a less extreme form of surgery, followed by radiation, may be as effective as removing the entire breast.
- A vaccine that can prevent liver cancer is now available.
- A revolutionary new operation is helping men with prostate cancer without leaving them impotent.
- Radiation—the time-honored cancer treatment, whose side effects once inspired more fear than hope among patients—is more effective and less harmful, thanks to a variety of new ways to administer radiotherapy.
- Scientists are identifying subtle differences in cancer-causing abnormalities within patients' cells—making diagnoses and treatments more reliable.
- Early diagnosis is the key—regardless of the type of cancer. For breast cancer, the American Cancer Society says that a mammogram (a low-dose X-ray of the breast) is still the most effective and reliable means of early detection.
- About a third of all cancer deaths may be related to what we eat, says the National Cancer Institute. For a free copy of its guidelines, Diet, Nutrition & Cancer Prevention, send your name and address to the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 33, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

a combination of high-dose Methotrexate and Cisplatin on nine women whose inoperable ovarian cancers had spread to their abdomens and lungs. These patients had failed to improve with prior treatment, and their life expectancy was eight months. After treatment with what Djerassi calls his "anti-cancer cocktail," the tumors completely disappeared in five of the women.

Djerassi tested a similar drug combination on five patients with advanced stomach cancers that had metastasized to their abdomens. Surgeons had been unable to clean out all of their tumors, and their average life expectancy was just six months. After treatment with high-dose Methotrexate and 5-Fluorouracyl, three of the five patients were still alive two years later.

"This treatment will be even more effective on newly diagnosed patients who have not had prior chemotherapy," Dr. Djerassi says. Tests with these drug combinations against cancers of the colon and bladder and against mesothelioma (cancer of the chest lining and abdomen, caused by exposure to asbestos) also have been successful.

Cancer of the prostate gland strikes 96,000 American men annually—making this form of the disease second only to lung cancer among men—and more than 27,000 die from it each year. Most can survive if it is caught early enough, but less than 10 percent of those with newly discovered prostate cancers submit to surgery. Why? Apparently they fear impotence because, until now, nine out of 10 men lost their ability to achieve an erection after the surgery.

Dr. Patrick C. Walsh of Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore has devised an operation that removes cancerous prostate glands yet preserves a man's sexual function. Dr. Walsh has performed nerve-sparing radical retropubic prostatectomy on more than 400 patients, and 72 percent retained their potency.

A quick, painless way to diagnose very early prostate cancer with ultrasound is undergoing tests at St. Joseph Mercy Hospital in Ann Arbor, Mich., and at the University of Buffalo. Doctors meanwhile can feel almost any prostate cancer during a digital-rectal exam, which should be part of a regular check-up every year after the age of 40.

Liver cancer is the most widespread cancer on earth and one of the most deadly. The vaccine that is being hailed as a preventive actually was developed to combat the hepatitis B virus, which damages the liver. Tens of millions of people worldwide get hepatitis B every year, mostly from contaminated blood; an alarming number then develop liver cancer. The hepatitis B vaccine helps to prevent both diseases. (A newer, safer form of the vaccine is made with genetically programmed yeast, rather than with human blood infected with the hepatitis B antigen.)

CANCER/continued

Who should take it? The American Cancer Society advises people preparing for major surgery that may require substantial blood transfusions to ask their doctors about the hepatitis B vaccine.

New discoveries about genes, chromosomes and cancer are making diagnoses more reliable and treatments more effective.

Dr. Janet D. Rowley of the University of Chicago Medical School has identified five chromosomal abnormalities that are linked with five particular types of acute nonlymphocytic leukemia; she also has tracked down the missing part of a chromosome associated with chronic myeloid leukemia. These findings already are helping doctors to accurately diagnose the many subtypes of leukemia. Dr. Rowley says that chromosome analysis also can help doctors determine in advance which patients will—and which won't—benefit from a specific cancer therapy.

At the Preventive Medicine Institute-Strang Clinic in New York, doctors are analyzing changes in DNA—a major component in chromosomes—in a test telling if one is susceptible to colon cancer. A technician takes a sample of blood, separates the white cells and exposes them to a potent cancer-causing substance. Then he measures the body's ability to repair the damage done to the cells' DNA by the carcinogen. The less able the body is to repair the DNA, says Dr. Daniel G. Miller, the more likely the person is to contract cancer of the colon.

Monoclonal antibodies are man-made copies of the natural antibodies our bodies make to combat disease. Specific to one particular germ or cancer, almost like a "bullet" aimed at a specific target, they commonly are called "magic bullets." Monoclonal antibodies can track down cancer cells anywhere in the body. Now researchers are binding drugs to monoclonal antibodies, creating constant and powerfully efficient drug-delivery systems.

Dr. Lynne Spitler and others at the Xoma Corp. in Berkeley, Calif., linked monoclonal antibodies to a ricin A chain—a toxin so potent that it can only be used with "magic bullets"—to fight deadly skin cancer. One 39-year-old woman whose melanoma had metastasized to her lungs is still cancer-free 2½ years after treatment. A second patient showed no increase in cancer growth 13 months after treatment.

At Johns Hopkins Hospital, Dr. Stanley Order is using a similar technique to deliver radiation to cancer cells. (See "Radiation" box, next page.)

The frontier. Among the bold new approaches to cancer is the work of Dr. Steven A. Rosenberg of the National Cancer Institute with immunotherapy—mobilizing the body's defense system to fight cancer. He removes the cancer patient's "warrior" white cells and treats them with interleukin-2 (Il-2), a hormone derived from T lymphocytes. Twenty-nine of 157 patients treated with Il-2 saw their tumors reduced by half. Nine of these patients, some with deadly melanomas and kidney cancers, had complete remissions. Four patients, however, died from the side effects.

"We used to think cancer was irreversible," says Dr. Alan C. Sartorelli of the Yale Comprehensive Cancer Center in New Haven. "Now we know that chemicals can alter the genetic message of cancer cells and turn them into cells that cannot grow anymore." This principle—transforming cancer cells into benign cells—is behind another radical and still purely experimental approach to cancer called differentiation therapy. It is undergoing clinical trials at the New Haven center and elsewhere.

"We have new treatments for a number of brutal cancers that were once considered incurable," says Dr. Frank J. Rauscher Jr., senior vice president of the American Cancer Society. "And we have new approaches to cancer research that could revolutionize the treatment of all cancers."

RADIATION: IT'S SAVING MORE LIVES

ADVANCES IN RADIATION therapy by prominent researchers are saving more lives than ever before. Among the most promising experimental uses are:

• Radioactive-labeled isotopes. When attached to antibodies from animals, radioactive isotopes can be directed like guided missiles to seek out and destroy cancer cells, according to Dr. Stanley Order of Johns Hopkins Hospital. Carried directly to the tumors, isotopes provide continuous radiation for several days, so cancer cells can't repair themselves.

• Interstitial implants. Rather than aiming an external beam of radiation at patients, doctors implant radioactive sources directly into malignancies. At the University of California at San Francisco, Dr. Philip Gutin uses a futuristic procedure to insert radioactive implants into inoperable brain tumors. He drills holes in the skull and inserts tubes loaded with radioactive beads into the growth.

• Interstitial hyperthermia. By heating cancer cells, Dr. Don Goffinet of Stanford University hopes to make cancers of the head, neck, colon and rectum more vulnerable to radiation. After inserting tubes into tumors, radio-frequency waves are pulsed through to heat the malignancies to 108° to 110°. Radioactive seeds threaded down through the tubes continue radiating for several days.

• Intraoperative radiotherapy. Because conventional radiation damages normal tissues as well as cancer cells, doctors must limit dosages. But by radiating a patient during surgery, they can aim 20 percent to 30 percent more radiation at the cancer cells. "We move the healthy organs aside and use a cone to direct radiation at the tumor for several minutes," says Dr. Alfred Goldson of Howard University in Washington, D.C.

• Radiosensitizing and radioprotective drugs. A way to maximize radiation's impact and reduce side effects is with drugs that make cancer cells more vulnerable or normal cells more resistant. One radiosensitizing drug disables the genetic machinery of cancer cells and has shown promise in patients with inoperable tumors. A radioprotective drug, which shields normal tissues from radiation's effects, is being tested by Dr. Morton Kligerman at the University of Pennsylvania.

• Particle therapy. Tumors also can be bombarded by "charged particles." "These particles penetrate to a specified depth, stop abruptly and deliver their energy with almost no scattering of radiation to normal tissue," says Dr. Joseph Castro of the Lawrence Laboratory in Berkeley, Calif. Because of this precision, doses the equivalent of more than 100,000 chest X-rays can hit tumors located in the eye or near the spine without damaging normal tissue.

Kim Alexis

BY JAMES BRADY

Kim Alexis in '86 Sports Illustrated swimsuit issue and with son, Jamie.

Landrock/Hanner's World

THE TIME-LIFE BUILDING IN NEW York is a serious place where serious people publish (mostly) serious magazines. Yet here was this little kid, about a year old, wearing his Dr. Dentons and toddling in and out of offices to the end of a corridor that one of the secretaries had blocked with a chair to keep him from wandering out into the hallway.

The little boy's name is Jamie—James R. Stockton IV, actually—and his father is James III. What really matters is that his mother is Kim Alexis (the First), who is one of the most beautiful women in the world and without whom a Sports Illustrated swimsuit issue is hardly official.

Kim is also not a time-waster. Jamie was born April 1 of last year; six months later, Kim was back modeling swimsuits in the Dominican Republic and running a 4:27 New York City marathon. "I really wanted to break four hours," she told me. "But Lynn Swann [of ABC-TV] stopped me at the nine-mile mark to do a television interview, and it was a cold day, and I chilled and never did get loose again."

She grew up in Lockport, N.Y., up near Niagara Falls and the toxic Love Canal ("I guess I drank some of that water," she said somberly). She played basketball in school and was a competitive swimmer and came to New York to get into modeling. I'm told that today she is paid $10,000 for one day's work. She and husband Jim Stockton, a builder and developer in Jacksonville, Fla., live near a golf course down there. Kim commutes to New York on modeling assignments. She has a job as a "fitness reporter" on the morning news over WTLV-TV in Jacksonville.

Kim is deadly serious about staying in shape, and she wants to do a fitness video and book. One reason she snapped back so quickly after Jamie's birth was that she had worked out all during her pregnancy. "Jim thought I was doing too much, and he'd come to the window of the aerobics class and rap on the glass," she recalled. McCall's put Kim on the cover when she was seven months pregnant, "but only from the shoulders up, thank goodness," she said. Within a week of Jamie's birth, she was on a stationary bike.

Jule Campbell of Sports Illustrated once told me that the first order she gives her swimsuit models is: "Go out and get an allover tan." Said Kim, "Not me. I get tan, but I wear these little triangles here and there." She prefers one-piece suits to bikinis. "I'm sportive, a real swimmer," she said. "And when I'm swimming, I don't want anything falling off. Or falling out."

Oh, yes, she's learning to fly. "I haven't soloed yet," she said. "And landings just terrify me."

BORN: July 15, 1960, in Lockport, N.Y.
PERSONAL: Married Jim Stockton in 1983; one son, Jamie.
STATISTICS: 5 feet 10, 120 pounds.
FIRST MODELING JOB: For Italian edition of Harper's Bazaar, 1979.
FIRST COVER: Glamour magazine.
NUMBER OF COVERS: More than 400, in the U.S. and abroad.
INTERESTS: Sports, especially running; the two health clubs that she and her husband own.

BRADY'S BITS

I first met her a few years ago for a television interview, after which she was flying back to Florida. We chatted as she carefully scrubbed off every bit of makeup, then pulled back her blond hair into a schoolgirl's ponytail. "It discourages guys on airplanes from trying to start a conversation and pick me up," she said. Listen, we've all got problems. Even cover girls who look like Kim.

What Does Your GARBAGE Say About You?

IT'S A SPARKLING AFTERNOON in Tucson, and Barbara Teso, a pretty University of Arizona senior, is up to her elbows in coffee grounds, eggshells, fish bones, cereal boxes, aluminum foil, used paper towels, candy wrappers, sweet-potato peels, TV-dinner trays, carrot tops, soda bottles, grapefruit rinds and other discards. In a word, it's garbage.

And she loves it.

"It's fun," she says, though she concedes that this haul is "pretty average." Nothing on the table today compares with the unusual items she and other students have found in previous garbage-sorting sessions, including false teeth and a cheap diamond ring. "We found a frozen lizard once," says Teso. "We put it in the sun, and it thawed out and ran away."

Welcome to the new science of garbology. Its founder and biggest booster is William Rathje, 41, a professor of anthropology at the University of Arizona and a Harvard Ph.D. whose premise is simple but revolutionary: "If we can learn about ancient civilizations from the debris they left behind, we can learn important information about people today from their garbage."

Propelled by Rathje's vision, some 700 of his students have meticulously sorted and logged 120 tons—more than a million individual items—of Tucson's residential garbage since 1973. They also have examined the refuse of Milwaukee, New Orleans and Mexico City. The information dredged up has been used by the Department of Agriculture, the Environmental Protection Agency and the American Paper Institute, among others. "We supply information they can't get anywhere else," says Rathje proudly.

Garbage, you see, doesn't lie. For example, when people are polled about how much food they throw away, they insist that they discard little or none, says Rathje. "But the garbage bags tell a different story. The first bag I ever opened had a whole T-bone steak in it, fully cooked and wrapped in a paper towel." The project found that Americans waste 15 percent of all solid food brought into the home. "We're talking about $11.7 billion worth of edible food wasted in homes in a year," he adds.

The spoils of research? Students of "garbology" document the facts—here, mostly leftovers.

The subject may be sloppy, but the research is precise and careful. It starts when Tucson residents deposit their garbage at curbside, at which time it legally becomes city property. Garbage collectors under contract with the project collect samples from rich, poor and middle-class neighborhoods and whisk them to the sorting center, a corrugated-steel shed with plywood tables and scales. Here, 20 of Rathje's students inspect and categorize the garbage. For example: "Milk carton, code 011, 64 fluid ounces, cost 87 cents, brand Carnation, type skim, composition paper."

Such results are logged in a computer, which burps out conclusions that are nearly always surprising:

- Conservatives tend to drink Pepsi, while liberals prefer Coke. Rathje reached this conclusion by correlating the cola cans with the political bent of the newspapers also found in a household's trash.
- While Americans do waste food, we waste less than in our past: The current 15 percent figure is down from an estimated 25 percent to 33 percent during World War I. Rathje attributes this to modern America's better refrigeration, transportation, processing and packaging.
- Middle-income families waste more food than upper- or lower-income families. They also buy more name brands. Upper-income families buy more generic brands; lower-income families mix the two.
- Poor people pay more for standard food and household goods than the wealthy do. "In [wealthy] neighborhoods, you find the 181-ounce economy-size laundry detergent," says Rathje. "In poor neighborhoods, where the families have six or seven people, you find the 20-ounce size. Apparently, poorer people just don't have the money to buy ahead."

The subject may be sloppy, but the research is precise

Some of the trends uncovered are more than surprising—they are cause for concern. Consider:

- The percentage of plastics in garbage increased 40 percent from 1980 to 1985. And plastics are difficult to recycle, don't break down, use up nonrenewable resources (i.e., petroleum) and produce toxic chemicals when burned.
- Increasingly, the chemicals found in wells near landfills used for residential garbage resemble those found near toxic-waste dumps. That's because many of the substances in residential garbage—pesticides, herbicides, paints and caustic cleaners—are toxins. Eventually, they seep into the groundwater and are used for drinking and irrigation.
- The average U.S. household each year discards 1800 plastic items, 850 steel cans, 500 recyclable all-aluminum cans, 500 glass bottles and more than 13,000 individual items of paper, most of it packaging, says Rathje. Nationally, our municipal waste totals 180 million tons a year.

What can the average American do about the sheer volume of today's garbage? Rathje suggests that, when we shop, we should keep in mind that garbage does not disappear: "Conveniences like plastics will be with us a long time."

On the subject of recycling, Rathje says: "I can't think of a better place to begin than with kids. We should teach them that recycling improves the quality of the environment—and, in the case of collecting aluminum cans, can get them some money." Many cities are making progress in their programs: Berkeley, Calif., passed a referendum to raise its recycled-trash rate, now 15 percent, to 50 percent by 1991; and there are more than 500 curbside-pickup recycling programs nationwide.

It seems like a good idea, especially if you spend some time around the sorting tables. Certainly, we should pay more attention to our garbage, because Americans casually toss out not only useless junk but also some of the best products of our civilization. For example, the last item sorted on this particular afternoon was logged as "Newsprint, code 181, 50 grams."

It was a PARADE magazine.

David Haughton's Wisecracking Role

By Evan Levin

"My Sister Sam" was one of CBS's most successful new shows last season, probably because it aired on the network's successful Monday night lineup. But the show went through a change of title (from "Taking the Town"), leading name (from Chris to Sam) and an almost completely new writing and producing staff before settling in. David Naughton, who plays roving photographer Jack Kinkaid, and who is probably best known for urging people to be a Pepper on the Dr Pepper commercials, says that the actors' roles were safe after the pilot, but before that, he almost didn't make it onto the show at all.

"I auditioned at the 11th hour," he says. "I went in on Friday, and we starting filming on Monday. The producers weren't sure what they were looking for at that point. They had auditioned actors who were older, fatter, taller, you name it. But I went in and tried to be light and funny, and it just worked out."

Naughton's role allows him the chance to wander in and spout a number of the show's punchlines, many having to do with the fact that while Sam (Pam Dawber) photographs print ads of tissue boxes, Jack is often off photographing the Pope playing golf.

The cast of "My Sister Sam" includes (clockwise from top left) Joel Brooks, David Naughton, Jenny O'Hara, Pam Dawber and Rebecca Schaeffer. The sitcom airs Mondays on CBS.

"I loving playing Jack," Naughton admits. "I envy him. He's this diehard, carefree bachelor, very different from me. (Naughton is marred with a baby.) One thing I wish is that the supporting cast would be used more. I have nothing against a guest cast, but sometimes I feel like saying, 'We're here! Use Us!' I spend a lot of time going to Sam's apartment to borrow salt and pepper shakers. I'm always coming up with great ideas for Jack, but I'm abouit two for 26 on what I've actually been allowed to use."

Naughton says that often the initial difficulties — the pilot was completely reshot and updated before it was aired at the end of the season — his character started having more to do.

"It's often difficult to come up with new ideas in a situation comedy," he explains "So I'd love to see more interplay between the characters. My favorite scenes are those when the whole ensemble is on stage together.

"I hope that next season there will be a lot more of those scenes. The writers are always threatening that Jack will go on permanent assignment. I'm afraid that in one show, Sam will hold up a card and say, 'Oh, look, a postcard from Jack. He's in Uganda.' It's certainly something to hold over my head.

Michele Will Tell

Dear Michele: Please list the names of Mary Tyler Moore's husbands. — J. BALLOW, MERIDEN, CT.

Moore was married to salesman Richard Meeker from 1955-1962. Their one son, Richard, died in 1980 when a shotgun he was holding accidentally discharged. In 1963, Moore married Grant Tinker, the future president of NBC, who was then an advertising executive. The marriage ended in divorce in 1980. In 1983, the actress married Dr. Robert Levine, a New York-based cardiologist 16 years her junior. The Levines reside in New York City, where Moore most recently starred on Broadway in "Sweet Sue."

Dear Michele: Does Bill Cosby really have five children, and is he really a doctor? — DWIGHT DAVIS, FEASTERVILLE, PENN.

Cosby and his wife Camille are the parents of five children: Erika Ranee, Erinn Chalene, Ennis William, Ensa Camille and Evin Harrah. Listed among the credits on "The Cosby Show" is a Dr. William H. Cosby Jr., Ed.D. That's Cosby's full name and title, which he earned by attending the University of Massachusetts and receiving his doctorate in education in 1976.

Dear Michele: I would like to know if Joan Collins, Jackie Collins and Loretta Young are sisters? — C.S. KOZIOL, CARY, ILL.

Joan and Jackie are sisters. Young is not related to them. The Collins sisters also have a younger brother, Bill, a real-estate broker.

Dear Michele: I recently heard that "60 Minutes" was going off the air because they dropped out of the top-10 ratings. Please, tell me this isn't so, because I love that show! — ELSIE STERLING, ATLANTIC CITY, N.J.

It's not so! News shows may come and go, but "60 Minutes" is a CBS staple. As a matter of fact, CBS's Sunday-night lineup for the 1987-88 season remains the same — "60 Minutes," "Murder,She Wrote" and "The CBS Sunday Night Movie." Incidentally, "60 Minutes" finished No. 6 for the year in the Nielsen ratings.

Dear Michele: Please straighten out a question concerning Loretta Swit, who played Margaret "Hot Lips" Houlihan on "MASH." Did she marry a Dennis Holahan, who played an episode of "MASH," or am I all mixed up? — MARION PARKER, CHILTON, WISC.

Swit married actor Dennis Holahan on Dec. 23, 1983. According to her, she first sighted Holahan during the filming of one of the final "M*A*S*H" episodes, and was instantly enamored. "Dennis was a guest star playing a Swedish U.N. delegate and I (as Hot Lips) was to take one look and say, 'Oh my Lord, let me have that!"

DICKIE ROOK

Tanning Cream Stains

Sun bathing is one of summer's most popular non-activities, to the point that the omnipresent scent of suntanning creams is almost the aroma of summer itself. But those generous applications of lotions can spell trouble for your summer garments.

Tanning creams contain oils that can affect different fabrics in different ways. Some oils are removed readily in drycleaning solvents because they do not oxidize. Other oils instead become insoluble with age, heat and light, and are very difficult if not impossible to remove.

Because the degree of oxidation can determine how difficult the stain will be to come out, A Cleaner World advises you to be careful when using suntan lotions and have any stains removed promptly.

'Uncle Tom's Cabin' Strives For Accuracy

By Andrew J. Edelstein

Pay-cable is on a roll with its original films. In the past month, HBO has presented two fine original productions, the quirky baseball drama "Long Gone" and the multimedia docudrama, "Conspiracy: The Trial of the Chicago 8." Now, it's Showtime's turn to offer a quality production that makes it worth the effort to shell out those extra bucks each month.

To be fair, Showtime's latest production is not strictly an original. In fact, it's an American classic — an adaptation of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," Harriet Beecher Stowe's antislavery book, originally published in 1848, that helped inflame passions before the Civil War.

But what is exciting about this version is that it seems almost new, because it remains faithful to Stowe's book. It's hard to believe but there has never been a sound motion picture made of "Uncle Tom's Cabin." Previous stage and/or silent-screen versions distorted Stowe's intentions (almost all the black roles in the silent movie, for instance, were taken by whites performing in blackface).

'At The Wheel' Probes Automobile Accidents

By Bill Anderson

CBC's "At the Wheel," as viewers of last week's first episode can testify, is not for the faint of heart, but it's hard to imagine a more gripping or more memorable TV program. The second of four consecutive programs, airing Tuesdays, continues this week.

"At the Wheel" is about automobile accidents — the common, ordinary kind of accidents that happen every day to people all around us. It is the very banality of the car accident — and yet its often horrific consequences — that give "At the Wheel" its power.

The first two episodes in this series, a National Film Board/Ideacom Inc. co-production, followed the lives of several real-life crash victims, including some who were paralyzed. And as the story unfolds, a rare thing begins to happen:

The detachment of TV viewing is erased and one comes to realize that the whimpering, brain-damaged patient on the screen could be you.

TV Chatter

What really killed "The Late Show Starring Joan Rivers"? Former staffers believe the talk show's demise had little to do with its host's brassy style and a lot to do with the weakness of the fledgling Fox network. The network owns major VHF stations in big cities, but many of its affiliates in smaller towns tend to be on the UHF band. Picture reception on many of these UHF stations is terrible if cable is unavailable. Staffers joked that the only way you could watch some of Fox's UHF stations was if you were sitting in the TV station studio watching the monitor. Nonetheless, relations between Rivers and Fox executives were becoming increasingly strained. Toward the end, one staffer says, the backbiting became so puerile that Fox execs spread a rumor that Rivers was demanding a separate limousine for Spike, her Yorkshire terrier who frequently appeared on the show. Wedding belle

In a case of life definitely not imitating art, Richard Gilliland plays Annie Potts' steady beau on the CBS sitcom "Designing Women." Off-screen, Gilliland and another "Designing Women" star, Jean Smart, are engaged to be married. Smart confesses to some very definite emotions. "It's real hard when I see Richard and Annie smooching on screen," Smart admits. "I hate it. I get very jealous. Fortunately, I love them both very much. And I've gotten to kiss a few fellows on the show so I can't complain." Smart, a native of Seattle and the only star of the show who isn't a real-life Southerner, says she fell in love with Gilliland the moment he set foot on the set. "For me it was right away. It took him a day. I plied him with Oreos and asked him to help me with my crossword puzzle," she says, sounding like the coquettish Southern belle she plays on the CBS sitcom. "It worked!" she adds. The couple got engaged last Christmas and plan to wed this month.

To cut back on rising costs, the nighttime soaps have cut a lot of cast members. Cliffhanger endings are the perfect way to dispose of expensive stars. Sheree J. Wilson, who plays bad girl April Stevens on "Dallas," may have been one of the few supporting cast members who wasn't worried about being dumped during the season finale. April, the ex-wife of Jack Ewing (Dack Rambo), sued for half of her former hubby's $100 million estate — and won! "(Executive producer) Leonard Katzman bumped into me before we shot the last show of the season and said, 'Wait 'til we see what April does, now that she has all that money and power!' So, I wasn't sweating it out," Wilson says. While she wasn't sweating out her future on the soap, the actress was sweating profusely while on location in Dallas, where the thermometer hit 100 degrees with 100 percent humidity. A particularly grueling scene took place at a Southfork barbecue. The cast would stay barricaded in a trailer they called "the refrigerator room," while their hapless stand-ins dehydrated under the hot lights. Just before shooting began, the actors would run out of the refrigerator room and go to the set. "Within minutes," Wilson says, "we were in complete meltdown."

To play evil businessman Richard Channing on "Falcon Crest," David Selby researched the lives of business tycoons. "I modeled Channing on Rupert Murdoch, William Randolph Hearst and Ted Turner. I found they all had hard-driving fathers who didn't have time for their families."... Jackee Harry has made such a splash on "227" that some are predicting that a year from now she'll be starring in a spinoff. "227" star Marla Gibbs isn't sure that would be a good idea, and not just because she'd rather not lose Harry's services on her own show. "I know she'd like to do a show — who wouldn't?" says Gibbs. "She's really talented, and I would be pulling for her. But when you get a show, there's a certain amount or responsibility you need to be able to take, and the more time you have under your belt the more assured you are. Having been one of the bananas down the line on 'The Jeffersons' for 11 seasons, I know. That's not saying that she wouldn't be able to do it. But I think after three seasons it's a little bit premature."

SOAP OPERA WEEK

Did 'DOOL' actress wed one of her co-stars?

By Kimberly Redmond

I was told that Lisa Trusel (Melissa Jannings on "Days of Our Lives") has married in real life, and that her husband is in the soap's cast. Who did she marry? – L.D., Andrews, N.C.

Lisa Trusel

When Trusel turned 18 in December 1986, she married former "DOOL" cast member David Wallace, who played Tod Chandler. He currently plays Tom Hardy on "General Hospital."

My friends tell me that Julianne Moore plays both Frannie Hughes and Sabrina Fullerton on "As the World Turns." I think the roles are played by two different actresses. Who's right? – T.B., Oxford, Maine

Your friends are correct, T.B. Moore portrays both Frannie and Sabrina. She changes hairstyles and mode of dress, and as Sabrina she uses an accent.

Please give me some facts about Robin Mattson, who portrays the evil Gina Capwell on "Santa Barbara." – J.S., Jamestown, N.Y.

Mattson began appearing in TV commercials as a child. After attending Santa Monica College, she devoted herself full time to her career. Mattson has had roles in the TV movies "Are You in the House Alone?" and "Doctors' Private Lives." She has guest-starred on nighttime series such as "Charlie's Angels." Mattson has played such memorable soap-opera villainesses as Heather Webber on "General Hospital" and Delia Ryan on "Ryan's Hope." She also played Hope Bauer on "Guiding Light."

ATTN: Joe Styron - Display Advertising

Dear Joe,

There are many ways for me to spend my advertising dollar. But to find an effective way is an entirely different story.

Last year you gave me an opportunity to advertise in The Daily Reflector's TV Showtime publication. I was, to say the least, hesitant; after all, I rarely sign a 52 week agreement of any sort much less an advertising one.

The program proved however, to be a most effective one. My ad is in the same position every week, all year long. This allows my customers to see what the mall has to offer every day. This consistant form of advertising has proven to be a good performer, therefore I am pleased to renew my position for the 1987/1988 year.

Your continued attention in helping my advertising campaign to be as effective as possible is greatly appreciated.

Sincerely,

Lisa V. Tapp-Daughtry

Ten Low-Rated Shows Will Be Back In The Fall

By Jon Burlingame

The networks' recently announced fall lineups contain a sizable number of low-rated series that have been given another chance at success. Ten shows that finished in the bottom half of Nielsen's 107 programs during the regular season will return.

Third-place ABC is following NBC's tactic of sticking with what it perceives to be "quality" shows in hopes that they will find audiences despite their poor ratings.

"Sledge Hammer!" has the distinction of being the lowest-rated show to win renewal. It finished an abysmal 92nd for the season. The series, starring David Rasche as an offbeat cop, airs on Fridays this summer. However, it will move into the unenviable spot opposite NBC's "Cosby Show" this fall.

Even more surprising were two additional ABC renewals: the fantasy sitcom "The Charmings" (which ranked 86th) and will air after "Sledge Hammer!" on Thursdays, and the Pat Morita police drama "Ohara" (tied for 82nd), which will continue on Saturdays.

The critically acclaimed "Max Headroom" (tied for 63rd) created so much publicity with its high-tech look and satiric style that its renewal was expected. The bad news: It will do battle with "Dallas" and "Miami Vice" on Fridays this fall. "The Disney Sunday Movie" (tied for 72nd) will also return, although it will be cut to one hour. Thanks in part to a fan letter-writing campaign, the Robert Urich series "Spenser: For Hire" (tied for 83rd), has also been renewed. But it will now air on Sundays against CBS's "Murder, She Wrote" and NBC's "Family Ties."

CBS's lowest-rated entry is the glitzy news-magazine "West 57th" (tied for 82nd), which is scheduled for Saturdays this fall.

NBC had no problem: It renewed all of this season's starters except "Easy Street." The absorbing medical drama "St. Elsewhere" (tied for 63rd) will return, as will the family drama "Our House" (tied for 69th).

DESIGNATED HITTERS

NBC will be experimenting with a new scheduling ploy that Entertainment President Brandan Tartikoff calls the "designated hitter" experiment. The maneuver will allow for three series — "Mama's Boy," "Beverly Hills Buntz" and "The Bronx Zoo" — to be broadcast on a once-a-month basis at the start the network's 1987-88 prime-time schedule, with each eventually to find a regular weekly slot.

Hagman Isn't Trying To Woo Back Principal

By Ian Harmer

HOLLYWOOD — "Dallas" is now firmly embarked on its summer rerun cycle, but don't look for headlines telling how Larry Hagman has saved the show from another casting crisis. Hagman was instrumental in persuading Barbara Bel Geddes to return to her role as Ellie Ewing after a season in which the late Donna Reed stood in. Last year, he engineered Patrick Duffy's resurrection as Bobby Ewing.

But Hagman insists he's not about to use his considerable clout on the latest cast defector, Victoria Principal, who played long-suffering Pamela Barnes Ewing. Pam was apparently incinerated in her red Mercedes in May's cliffhanger episode. But if Principal does a Duffy-style about-face between now and September, it won't be hard for the writers to cook up a miraculous recovery for the start of the show's 10th year.

There has been speculation that interviews with substitute Pams — including Morgan Fairchild — were publicized to pile a little extra pressure on Principal, but this time Hagman is not going to bat for "Dallas."

"I think a big reason for the success of the show has been the integrity of the Ewing family," explains Hagman, "and it has to be maintained. I did what I could with Momma and Bobby, but I don't think Victoria will be back. She's got her own career outside of the show and she's doing very well. Everything she touches turns to gold. I guess if I thought my going after her to change her mind would help, I'd give it a try, but I don't think it would work."

Hagman's unquestioned position as the lead actor of "Dallas" permits him to adopt a proprietary air. He admits that as far as he's concerned, the bottom line is "winning my time slot."

Golf In Westchester; A Fight In Atlantic City

By Adam Beckerman

On Sunday, June 14, CBS airs the final round of the Westchester Classic from the Westchester Country Club in Rye, N.Y. This year's classic serves as a tune-up for the U.S. Open, which begins Thursday, June 18, at the Olympic Course in San Francisco. Some of the big names have chosen to sit Westchester out because it is played right before the U.S. Open, but it's a great place to spot up-and-coming golfers.

U.S. Open action begins Thursday, June 18. ESPN will be covering the action on Rounds 1 and 2, while ABC airs third- and final-round coverage on Saturday, June 20, and Sunday, June 21.

* Gerry Cooney is healthy and has gotten himself a heavyweight title fight. The 6-foot-7 mauler from Huntington, N.Y., known as much for inactivity as for brute force, meets Michael Spinks, who has made a career of defying the experts, on Monday, June 15, in Atlantic City. HBO will air a tape of the fight at a later date.

Spinks fought only two fights to win the 156-pound Olympic gold medal in 1976. Five years later, he knocked down Eddie Mustafa Muhammad and won the WBA light-heavyweight title. In '83, he outpointed Dwight Muhammad Qawi to become the undisputed 175-pound champion. Then he gained almost 20 pounds of muscle, and on Sept. 21, 1985, outpointed undefeated Larry Holmes for the heavyweight title. In a rematch six months later, he again outpointed Holmes.

Leon Spinks' little brother wasn't going to turn pro after the Olympics, says manager Butch Lewis.

"He'd won what he thought was his ultimate goal and got a job at a Monsanto Plant," says Lewis. "It was Leon who'd call Michael and say, 'I could sure use you. This professional stuff frightens me.' Finally Michael said, 'OK, I'll come be with you and give it a shot.' "

Spinks is guaranteed $7 million for this fight. Lewis figures on a $30 million gross, most coming from closed-circuit sales. But does the world still care about Gerry Cooney?

"Could I pay Michael $7 million, or Cooney $5 million, minimum, if it didn't?"

So far, Lewis has done a credible job of steering Spinks out of harm's way, i.e. the fists of Mike Tyson.

"The winner of this fight," Lewis promises, "will fight Mike Tyson, and that fight will go down in box-office history."

BASEBALL GREATS

Joe DiMaggio, Whitey Ford, Warren Spahn, Willie Mays, Hank Aaron and Bob Feller are some of the baseball greats participating in this year's National Old Timers Baseball Classic, to be broadcast on a special edition of "CBS Sports Saturday" on July 4. This is the fourth consecutive year CBS has broadcast the game, which has allowed many old timers to show their talents once again — like Luke Appling, who hit a homer in the 1984 Classic at the age of 77.

Relax Outdo

Your Eckerd pharmacist reminds you to take care in the sun.

Remember, a tan is your body's response to injury. Your Eckerd Pharmacist reminds you that long-term exposure, even without severe burning, can cause premature aging of the skin, precancerous skin conditions, and may eventually lead to skin cancer.

A tan MUST be acquired gradually.

- Determine your skin type. There are six skin types, ranging from I (always burns, never tans) to VI (never burns).
- Choose the product with the appropriate sun protection factor (SPF).

Eckerd has a full line of sunscreen and suntan products for your skin type. Also, don't forget lips, ears, and eyelids — they are very sensitive to the sun and need sunscreen products made especially for these areas.

To an Eckerd Pharmacist, nothing's more important than your health.

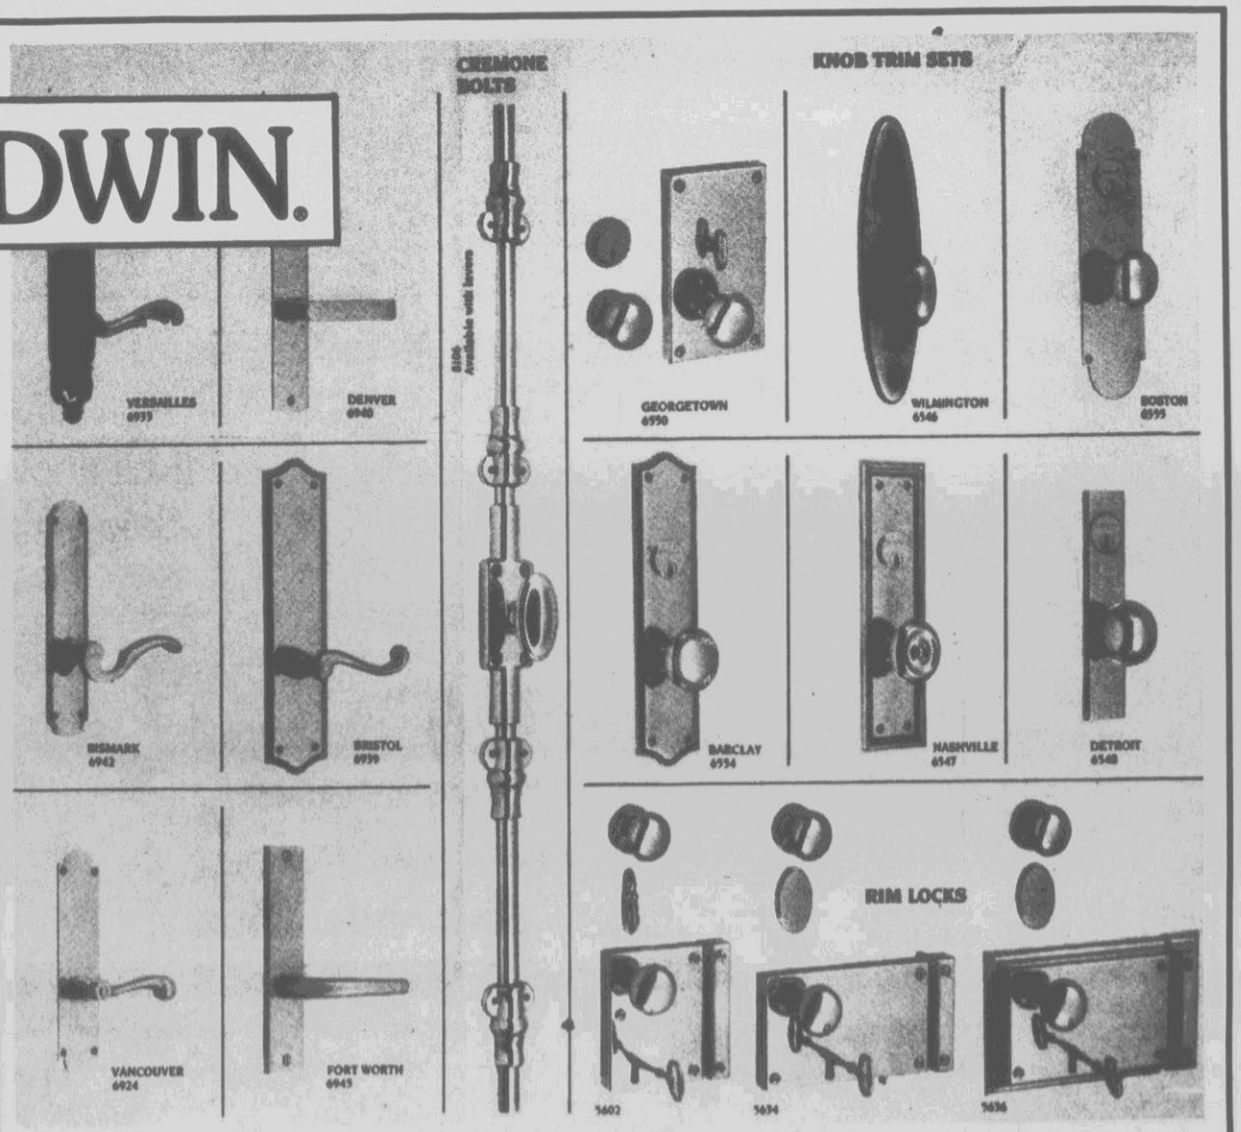
Baldwin Design

Designed to fulfill your decorating needs, Baldwin hardware offers a wide range of architecturally correct styles. Choose from colonial, classic or contemporary to create a customized touch to every door in your home.

In addition to polished brass, we offer most of the trims shown here in other popular finishes including polished chrome and antique brass. This choice allows you to fashion distinguished thresholds throughout your entire home.

HOME BUILDERS SUPPLY, INC.

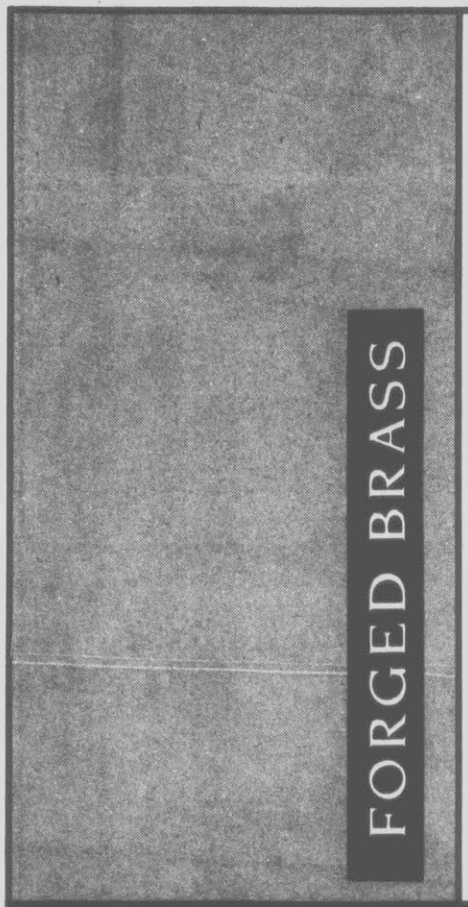
BALDWIN.



Baldwin Quality

In Baldwin architectural hardware, design and quality are bound together. Our hot forging process yields a more solid and detailed brass, free from the imperfections found in less exacting methods. Carefully polished and protected with baked-on clear enamel, Baldwin hardware has an unsurpassed beauty.

Baldwin quality is further defined by the performance of expertly engineered products. Our mortise locks feature smoothly operating hot forged brass parts, a rust proof case, and an extra long throw deadbolt with sawproof hardened steel inserts. They provide the confidence of strength and durability.



Nothing becomes your home like The Art of Baldwin.

And nothing says welcome more eloquently than Baldwin. The warmth of a Baldwin solid brass door knocker and the substantial feel of Baldwin knobs and levers are the details that say the most about you.

Your love for aesthetic purity. Your eye for exquisite detailing. Your absolute insistence on the finest quality.

Today, these extensive selections can be used in each room to create a Baldwin Home. The beauty and security of a Baldwin door. The classic charm of Baldwin heirloom quality candlesticks and lamps. The brilliant accents of a whole new line of classic and contemporary Baldwin bath accessories.

Baldwin. Trusted and cherished for generations. Certain to be treasured for years to come.

It's the fine art your home deserves.

After all, when you strive to acquire the best, there is no reason to compromise.

First Impressions

The warm welcome of a Baldwin door knocker is subtle confirmation of your sophisticated style. Baldwin's two dozen designs span the range from classic Georgian to a contemporary ring. Each is crafted of hot-forged brass, hand polished and protectively enameled.

CAN YOU TRUST YOUR EYES? There are at least six differences in drawing details between top and bottom panels. How quickly can you find them? Check answers with these below.

Differences: 1. Tree limb is missing. 2. Pole is shorter. 3. Number is different. 4. Name is missing. 5. Curls are missing. 6. Hair is missing.

- READY WITS! Four numbers are needed to complete a magic square, right, which total 39 across, down and diagonally. Two of the missing numbers are 9, the lowest, and 17, the highest. Insert these numbers correctly, add two more and the problem is solved. P.S.: No number is used twice.

Answer: Across — 17, 6, 14; 10, 13, 16; 12, 18, 8.

- FACE DRIFT! Facing west, you obey these orders: 1. Right face. 2. About face. 3. Left face. In what direction are you now facing?

PONDER THIS: WHAT AM I?

I'm just a little letter, still,
I often say: "Please pay this bill."
If off you take my tail and make,
A period to mark the
Though I am shorter,
I am not.
Don't look below,
To find the answer:
"What am I?".

P.S.: I'm something you may write.

I'm a note (minus a leaves not).

WHA DOT? What's tied to the back of the newlyweds' car? To find out, draw lines from 1 to 2 to 3, etc.
