Council Votes To Restrict Manager's Use Of Funds

By DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer
The Greenville City Council has approved a $21.6 million budget for fiscal year 1987-88 which includes ordinances limiting the powers of the city manager to transfer funds.

By a 4-2 margin Monday, council members voted to follow a recommendation by the Mayor's Ad Hoc Budget Advisory Committee to require that the city manager receive council approval before making any line item transfers between categories within departments.

Council members Janice Buck, Lorraine Shinn, Ed Carter and Bill Hadden voted in favor of the measure, while Council members Inez Fridley and Nancy Jenkins voted in opposition to the move at a special call meeting Monday night.

The mayor's ad hoc committee recommended that individual departments be limited to appropriations within personnel, operating and capital outlay categories respectively within a division, rather than on a division-wide total that would include all three categories.

"The transfer of money between personnel, operating and capital has not been done as a practice in the past, but it has not been done by ordinance," Ron Kimble, finance director, said. "This would do it by ordinance."

Kimble said previously the budget included a "lump sum total for each division in the General Fund."

The new restriction will protect the work of the City Council, which has been reviewing the budget for about six months, according to Carter.

"It seems that we've really reviewed the budget," he said. "We've given a lot of input in terms of what we think should be appropriated ... and if we give the city manager an open hand, in other words of transferring money from one fund to the other, it seems like we are defeating the purpose of scrutinizing this thing."

Mrs. Buck said the council should know about the transfers ahead of time.

"I think the council should know about the transfer of funds before it takes place," she said.

Some council members said the restrictions may hinder the effectiveness of the city manager.

"I think the issue here is that that person is employed to manage the city, and I think that is that person's job," Mrs. Fridley said. "I really don't perceive that as too much of a problem."

"I think the city manager would use that judiciously. I don't think it's going to be just a free-for-all of moving funds around. I don't think we've ever seen that."

"I think we need to be very careful that we and future councils don't lock in so that we look at everything and tie the hands of efficient city government," Mrs. Jenkins said.

The $21,593,806 budget, which includes $1,803,232 in interfund transfers, will eliminate $4 per month residential refuse collection fees on July 1, while continuing $15 per container per month fees for commercial pickup.

"This is a balanced budget with no tax increase," interim City Manager Mayo Allen said. "The budget you

County Approves Occupancy Tax

By STUART SAVAGE

An ordinance establishing a 3 percent motel room occupancy tax — effective July 1 — was given final approval by the Pitt County Board of Commissioners at a meeting Monday.

The board then appointed five people to an 11-member Pitt-Greenville Convention and Visitors Authority created by the ordinance to oversee the spending of the occupancy tax revenue.

The tax, which will be collected from customers by motel and hotel operators, is expected to bring in about $200,000 a year and will be used to promote the travel and tourism industry.

The legislation giving commissioners the authority to levy the tax was passed by the General Assembly earlier this year. It, and the ordinance adopted Monday, calls for five members of the authority to be appointed by the County Commissioners, five to be appointed by the Greenville City Council, and one by the chairman of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce board.

Two of the city and county appointees — a total of four — must be owners or operators of hotels or motels; two must be residents who are not directly involved in a tourist or convention-related business or a taxable accommodation. One person appointed by the commissioners and the City Council must be directly involved in a tourist or convention-related business, but not a motel or hotel owner or operator.

After adoption of the ordinance — which provides for a $10 per day penalty for late payment of the tax to the county — the board named Ruth Matous, manager of the Sheraton hotel, to a two-year term and William Pittman, manager of the Cricket Inn, to a three-year term as operator-members of the authority, and appointed Rudolph Alexander, director of the university unions at East Carolina University, to a one-year term as its convention-related representative.

Election Bill Gets Senate Backing, Returns To House

RALEIGH — The North Carolina Senate Monday night approved a bill changing Pitt County's method of electing members of the Board of Commissioners, Sen. Tom Taft said this morning.

Sen. Bob Martin said the bill — supported by the Pitt County Board of Commissioners — "passed on a voice vote and sounded unanimous."

The bill creates a "six-three" method of electing board members, under which six commissioners — one from each of six new districts — would be elected by voters in the districts voting only on the representative from their district.

Three other commissioners — who could live anywhere in the county — would be elected by county-wide vote.

Taft and Martin said the bill was sent to the House by messenger immediately following its passage.

Rep. Ed Warren said this morning that he expects the bill, which "has to go back through the committee system before we finalize it," to pass the House, "probably by Wednesday."

"We'll expedite it," Warren said. Earlier this month the House approved a compromise bill which called for six commissioners to be elected from districts, just as the Senate version provides.

But under the compromise proposition, the other three board members would be elected at-large only after being nominated by party primaries in districts created by combining Districts 1 and 2, 4 and 5 and 3 and 6 into three regions.

That bill was sent to the Senate, but the original bill, supported by Pitt's board, was substituted in committee and ultimately gained Senate approval.

But blacks in the county have voiced objections to any at-large seats, saying they prefer to have only six commissioners elected from districts, two of which are predominately black.

Sales Tax To Help Pay For Annexation

By DON REUTER

Money generated from a 1-cent sales tax increase will be used to offset some of the $5 million cost associated with annexing Brook Valley into the Greenville corporate limits, according to city officials.

If the Greenville City Council approves a resolution of intent to annex the area, the property would be included in the city limits one year later, according to Bobby Roberson, director of planning and community development.

"What they'll do is set the date one year from the date of the resolution," Roberson said. "The reason they'll do that is there will be some deep sewer cuts and that will allow the Greenville Utilities Commission some extra time."

The council is expected to consider a resolution of intent in two months, according to officials.

According to statutes, all sewer service must be available to residents within two years following the annexation, Roberson said at a special call meeting of the City Council Monday night.

Meanwhile, Malcolm Green, general manager of the GUC, asked council members to continue designating 40 percent of the funds raised through the 1-cent tax increase to sewer construction.

While council members were unable to make commitments for future councils, the panel voted unanimously to continue allotting the 40 percent in a good faith gesture, according to Roberson.

Green said money from the tax increase, which is expected to total $1 million in 1988 and 1989, would be added to $1.58 million designated to the project in 1986-87, a $400,000 transfer from the sewer operating fund in 1988, $750,000 in Senate Bill 2 funds, interest, and $1.25 million in transfers from other funds to pay for the project.

Roberson said the city staff is in the process of negotiating with the Eastern Pines Fire Department and private sanitation haulers in

Farmville Board Faces Bias Suit

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

The U.S. Department of Justice filed a civil suit Monday charging the Farmville Housing Authority with discriminating against blacks in selecting tenants for Pine Grove Apartments.

The suit was filed in U.S. District Court in Raleigh against the housing authority and Doris Winstead, executive director of the public housing complex. Pine Grove Apartments is run by a five-member housing authority.

U.S. District Judge Franklin Dupree issued a temporary restraining order on Monday prohibiting Farmville Housing Authority employees from "altering or destroying any record or document in their possession which pertains to tenants or applicants for tenancy at the Pine Grove Apartments."

The Justice Department alleges that the housing authority discriminates by rejecting black applicants in order to keep the 150-unit complex racially mixed, a Justice Department spokesman said. At present, 135 of the families housed there are black and 15 are white.

"They've used race-based practices and methods of selection," said Deborah Burston-Wade, a spokeswoman for the department's civil rights division. "That's totally illegal."

Ms. Burston-Wade said anything but a first-come, first-served policy is illegal.

Contacted this morning at the Piney Grove office, Mrs. Winstead refused to comment on the suit, saying she has been advised to refer all comment to Robert Rouse III, attorney for the housing authority. Rouse said Blackwood has also been advised to refer those requesting comment to him.

Rouse issued the following statement:

"This law office has been in contact with the Justice Department for the last two months requesting specific information regarding any and all allegations. At this time, we do not have the information that we have requested nor a copy of any legal proceedings. The Justice Department called this office on Monday, June 15, and graciously consented to make themselves available to us within the next two weeks. "We anticipate that at such time as a meeting can be held and all information made available that this matter will be quickly resolved."

Justice Department officials said they asked for the restraining order after a secretary and bookkeeper for the authority discovered in late May — one month after the authority was notified the department might file suit — that rent payment records and other documents relevant to the suit had disappeared.

Asked specifically about the destruction of documents allegation, Rouse said he would not comment other than to say that he believes all will be resolved when the meeting be-

Panel Recommends School, Rose Names

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Board of Education Monday accepted a committee report recommending the new Rose High School athletic facility be named in honor of two Greenville leaders and designating the new school on county home road Wintergreen Elementary School.

The committee recommended the athletic complex be named the Minges-Farley Athletic Complex in honor of Dr. Ray Minges and John "Boley" Farley. The football field, based on the committee report, would be named Percy Daniels football field, and the baseball area the May-Scales Field in honor of Reynolds May and William M. Scales Jr. The committee suggested that the access road leading to the complex be named Marvin Jarman Drive.

The board is expected to vote on the committee's recommendations at the board's July meeting.

Meanwhile, employees of Construction Management Associates gave the board a presentation on the services they offer the system and the way in which they would assist with the construction projects.

At the board's last meeting, more information on the company was requested. Following the presentation, board member Frank Grooms asked that a contract for the construction management firm be brought to the next meeting.

CMA representative Rick Ott told the board that the company charges 3.5 percent of construction costs for their services, which include overseeing every facet of the construction operations — from letting the bids to overseeing the site work.

"We will save you enough money to pay for our fee," Ott said.

CMA has built 120 schools with a combined cost of $700 million; each completion date has been met, Ott said.

He said that CMA would plan to combine construction projects based on geographical area to expedite construction.

The estimated cost of school construction projects which CMA will oversee is $4.8 million, Ott said.

Grooms suggested that a committee be formed to establish the criteria for naming facilities in the future.

The federally-funded summer food service program which will be held at Wahl-Coates, Greenville Middle, Grifton and Bethel Elementary schools, also was discussed.

The board also discussed insurance and raising the price of school lunches.

Leadership College

Six officers of the Greenville Jaycees attended the North Carolina Jaycees Local Officers' Leadership College held recently in Greensboro.

The six attending were Rick Cannon, president; Michie Faulconer, administrative vice president; Tom Johnson, individual development vice president; Phil Tanzio, secretary; Jim Peedin, treasurer, and Tom Jenkins parliamentarian.

The college is held each year to train incoming chapter officers in management skills and programming responsibilities. More than 300 Jaycees from across North Carolina participated.

Youth Drowns

Searchers recovered the body of Louis Thomas Williams, 16, of Greenville, this morning from the waters of the Atlantic Ocean near the rock jetty at Ft. Macon State Park. Williams apparently drowned in heavy surf here Saturday afternoon.

Atlantic Beach Police Chief W.R. Duke said Williams had been swimming with friends at the west end of the main strand and was last seen in neck-deep water about 2:15 p.m.

Friends, who had warned Williams not to venture too far into the surf reported to lifeguards that he was missing, according to Duke, who said police, rescue squad members, N.C. Park Service rangers and N.C. Marine Fisheries Division officers then began searching for the youth.

His body was discovered 60 feet from shore about 6:05 a.m. today by police and N.C. Wildlife Commission officers — about 3-miles east of his last known location.

Anniversary

Progressive Free Will Baptist Church will celebrate its first church anniversary Wednesday through Friday nights. Guests include the Rev. Hue Walston, Wednesday; the Rev. Willie Joyner, Thursday, and Bishop T.L. Davis, Friday.

New Apartments

Wedco I Inc., a Greenville-based building contractor, has initiated construction on a 144-unit apartment complex to be located on N.C. 43, across from Pitt County Memorial Hospital, a company spokesperson said.

Dave Gordon, vice president of Wedco Enterprises, said LionsGate Apartments will include one and two-bedroom three-story units on the 24-acre lot in the first phase of the project.

The apartments are expected to feature a Victorian-style exterior, according to Gordon.

Number Reduced

The Greenville City Council began reducing the number of viable candidates for the vacant city manager's position during an executive session Monday night, Council member Inez Fridley said today.

"There's no formal list at all," Mrs. Fridley said. "We're still in the discussion stages."

The council, which received about 170 applications for the position, is prepared to initiate a list in the future, she said.

"We'll put together a list of about 10 or 20 people," Mrs. Fridley said.

Local Recipient

A Greenville-based hunger alleviation organization is the recipient of a portion of the money raised by the Hands Across America effort held May 25, 1986.

Bread for the World was given $2,500. This organization and 106 others in North Carolina were given amounts totalling $292,950.

The funds are part of the money raised when more than six millions Americans joined hands to focus attention on the plight of the nation's hungry and homeless.

According to Marty Rogol, Hands Across America executive director, North Carolina is one of the 35 states that utilized the Hands Across America committee-coalition grant process. He said $15 million was netted on May 25, 1986, to be given away.

Videotape Showing

A videotape on "The Course on Miracles" will be shown Wednesday at 8 p.m. at Unity Christ Church, 204 W. 10th St., Greenville.

County Board Sets Hearing On Budget

The Pitt County Commissioners will hold a public hearing on the proposed 1987-1988 budget at 7 p.m. Wednesday at the county office building, 1717 W. Fifth St.

The board finalized plans for the public hearing at a meeting Monday, when it also named several people to various boards and commissions and approved two July 4 fireworks displays.

Jack Farrior of Farmville was reappointed as a member of the Pitt-Greenville Airport Authority for a four-year term, while Stanley Peaden was reappointed to the Sediment Control Commission for a three-year term.

Mike Bell of Greenville was named to fill the unexpired term of Earl Burton as a county representative on the Greenville Planning and Zoning Commission, while Mrs. Lloyd Hudson was appointed to fill the unexpired term of W.C. Sanderson as a county representative on the Greenville Board of Adjustments.

Clifton Brock, Robert Briley Jr., Thomas Forrest and Willard Finch were reappointed for three-year terms as members of the Winterville Planning and Zoning Board, while Tillie Cullipher of Winterville was appointed as a member of the Pitt County Board of Health.

Permits allowing the Greenville Jaycees and the Town of Farmville recreation department to hold fireworks displays on July 4, were approved, as were petitions to add Huntingridge Road, off N.C. 43 3 miles west of Greenville, and Mizell and Slaughter streets in Eastwood Country Estates near Belvoir Road west of Greenville, to the state system.

Citibank Selling S. African Firm

NEW YORK (AP) — Citibank, the biggest U.S. banking concern, announced today it is withdrawing from South Africa by selling its subsidiary in the racially divided nation.

The New York-based banking giant said it had agreed to sell the subsidiary, Citibank N.A. Ltd., to the First National Bank of Southern Africa Ltd., a former unit of Barclays Bank of Britain, which pulled out of South Africa in November. The sale was expected to be completed by the end of this month, Citibank said.

The sale was valued at about $64.5 million at current exchange rates. Citibank chairman John S. Reed said in a statement he "expressed regret at terminating the corporation's presence in South Africa, which has had a positive effect upon the environment within that country."

The statement said Citibank felt compelled to withdraw because "current constraints on Citicorp have made it increasingly difficult to meet the needs of its South African clients in manner they have a right to expect."

Although Citibank's operations in South Africa are relatively small, the company joins a list of large U.S. corporations that have been leaving the white-minority ruled nation at an accelerating pace.

More than 60 companies have left South Africa in the past two years, most notably International Business Machines Corp. and General Motors Corp.

are about to adopt is a conservative budget and will allow the city to continue providing good service if not better.

"The budget does include a contingency fund, and also funds for an employee classification study and/or cost of living increase."

Several major projects have been approved in late 1986-87 and will be under way during the 1987-88 year, according to Allen.

"These include a data processing system, installation of new radio equipment for police and fire-rescue, construction of a science and nature center, and the acquisition of two much-needed fire pumper trucks," Allen said.

"Also set to be completed and opened by July 1 is the new fire-rescue substation located at the intersection of N.C. 43 and Red Banks Road."

Several new positions were requested in the 1987-88 budget, but were denied because of the number of additional positions added in recent years in preparation for anticipated annexations, according to Allen.

"Only one new position, a computer operator, will be authorized to be effective January 1, 1988, to assist in the data processing division," Allen said.

The city has 435 full-time employees effective July 1, Allen said.

Meanwhile, the council unanimously adopted the Greenville Utilities Commission $77 million budget for the coming fiscal year.

The GUC budget includes $64.51 million for the electric department of which $51.3 million is for the purchase of electric power and $6.4 million for the gas department, including $4.44 million for the purchase of natural gas.

The water department's share of the new budget totals just over $3.85 million, while the sewer department budget includes $2.54 million.

The budget also includes $1.65 million in turnover to the city from the electric fund in 1987-88, compared with a turnover this year of $1.62 million, and $240,000 in turnover from the gas fund, compared with a turnover this year of $227,198.

Under the newly adopted budget, an industrial pretreatment coordinator to monitor and control industrial waste and land application of sludge at the wastewater treatment plant site will be among six positions added to the GUC staff.

An existing part-time drafting technician position and part-time clerk/typist position are to be upgraded to full time to handle increase workloads, and an engineering assistant will be added to handle increasing workload on locating underground utilities for all departments as required by state statutes.

An accounting clerk and an energy services officer will also be added, according to the GUC budget.

preparation for annexation proceedings.

Meanwhile, the council unanimously approved resolutions of intent to annex Quail Ridge, section 8, and Tucker Estates subdivision, section III, phase III.

Roberson said 100 percent of Quail Ridge, section 8, signed petitions accepting the annexation, while five property owners in the Tucker Estates subdivision refused to sign petitions.

The five property owners, who will not receive city services when the area is annexed, will be forced into the city limits under the Standard and Services provisions of the General Statutes.

The Quail Ridge property includes 3.07 acres, while the Tucker Estates property includes 11.81 acres.

The council also asked the Pitt-Greenville Airport Authority to petition to bring all of its owned property into Greenville's corporate limits.

"To do that, they have to ask the county to petition with us because the property is jointly owned by the city and the county," City Attorney Mac McCauley.

In addition, Roberson unveiled annexation priorities which were concurred to by the GUC for the next five years.

Roberson said the annexation priorities to begin in 12 months include Planters Walk; Heritage Village; Tucker Estates, section III, phase III, to include those lots which are not part of the signed property owner petition; Bedford, sections II and III; Treetops, sections 1 through 4; Westhaven, sections 6 and 7, and Oakdale, section III.

Morris Brody of Greenville was appointed for a three-year-term, and Joseph D. Joyner of Farmville was named to a two-year-term, as authority members with no direct involvement with motels or travel-convention businesses.

The ordinance calls for the members of the authority, after the initial appointments, to serve three-year staggered terms.

At a public hearing on the ordinance earlier this month, Ed Walker, president of the chamber of commerce, said there are now 1,328 taxable rooms in the county, that 3,900 people in Pitt are employed in the hospitality industry and that travel and tourism brings $40 million a year into the county.

All the tracts have water and sewer available, according to Roberson.

In addition, the city will consider Oakhurst and adjacent property; Colonial Mobile Home Park and vicinity; property between Bedford, section III and Treetops that can be served, and property along Rabbitt Run subdivision to include Tuckahoe for future annexation.

"This proposal can be adjusted by either adding or removing areas that are not feasible," Roberson said. "However, please keep in mind that once the resolution has been adopted by City Council, the areas under consideration may not be increased in size but can be reduced."

Green said the GUC is prepared for potential growth areas, specifically, the medical district area and the areas south of Greenville Boulevard.

In other business, the council unanimously denied a request by the N.C. Department of Transportation to reconsider the deletion of Third Street from the city's Thoroughfare Plan.

NCDOT staff members asked that the deletion of Third Street from Memorial Drive to Reade Street be reconsidered in order to handle anticipated traffic associated with hospital complex and medical school development.

The council voted unanimously to take up from the table a $10,000 request from the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce to pay for costs associated with pursuing an All American city designation for Greenville.

The matter, which was tabled at a previous meeting and required approval from a majority of council members, is to be considered at a future meeting.

Council members also unanimously voted to pursue a state grant for mosquito control.

Navy To Allow Women To Work Aboard Submarines In Sea Trials

WASHINGTON (AP) — Women will have the right to work aboard submarines during sea trials as the result of an order by Navy Secretary James H. Webb, who was criticized earlier for his views against having women in military academies.

Webb on Monday ordered that female technicians be allowed aboard submarines during sea trials to test new equipment.

The action came in the case of Pamela M. Doviak Celli, a civilian engineering technician at the Portsmouth, N.H., Naval Shipyard who had accused the Navy of sex discrimination.

The Navy made clear that Webb's ruling would apply to any similarly qualified woman.

Webb declared that "female civilian employees shall have full opportunity to embark in naval vessels on non-operational, short-term sea trials on the same basis as male civilian employees," the Navy said.

Ms. Celli said she will be pleased if the Navy follows through on its statement, but questions whether it will.

"I tend to be very guarded about any statement the Navy makes about what it's going to do," she said. She said her attitude is, "OK, let's see you do it."

The announcement was unexpected, because the Navy had been preparing to fight such an order in federal court and because of Webb's previous opposition to the admission of women into military academies. Webb expressed his views on that subject in an article published before he became Navy secretary.

Ms. Celli, with the backing of the American Civil Liberties Union, filed suit in U.S. District Court in Portland, Maine, on March 20 to enforce a ruling by the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission that affirmed her right to go on test runs by the submarines she helped overhaul.

Ms. Celli spent one week aboard the submarine

USS Benjamin Franklin during sea trials in 1982, but was barred from another trial run later that year. Navy officials said allowing women on board submarines would deprive male crew members of privacy and impair the ship's readiness.

Webb's decision will not change the all-male rule for operational deployments.

The Navy said Ms. Celli will be "awarded all back pay, overtime pay and benefits she would have received had she been permitted to embark in the USS Kamehameha sea trial in November 1982... along with reasonable attorney fees."

Webb also specified that Ms. Celli "not be subjected to any act of reprisal or retaliation for having filed and pursued her complaint, and that Ms. Celli and any similarly situated female employee be given full opportunity to embark on future submarine sea trials."

The Navy was unable to say immediately how many other women technicians work in the field of submarine systems.

Lawyer Argues For Barbie's Freedom

LYON, France (AP) — Defense lawyer Jacques Vergès argued today that Klaus Barbie should be set free, no matter what the verdict in the former Lyon Gestapo chief's trial for crimes against humanity.

Vergès' motion to the court hinged on a point of French law concerning multiple sentences. It was the only subject of today's brief session.

Final arguments by civil party lawyers begin Wednesday. They are expected to take about eight days, followed by the prosecution's summation, final defense arguments and verdict in early July.

Barbie, 73, has not been attending the trial. He is accused of arresting, torturing and deporting Jews and French Resistance members to Nazi death or concentration camps while an SS lieutenant here from 1942 to 1944. Testimony ended Monday.

By law, a convicted criminal cannot serve consecutive sentences. In a case where a man is convicted more than once, he serves only the harshest sentence, which absorbs any lesser penalty, on condition that all of the crimes were committed before the first trial.

Barbie was convicted in absentia of war crimes in 1952 and 1964 and sentenced to death. Vergès' argument is that the death penalty already handed down to Barbie is harsher than any sentence he might receive in the current trial.

The death penalty was abolished in France in 1981, meaning Barbie faces a maximum of life imprisonment.

Under the 20-year statute of limitations, the 1964 death penalty Barbie received expired in 1974. Vergès argued that expiration under the statute is equal legally to implementation of the sentence.

Cox 'Promotes' Departing Teachers

they will not return to Cox next year due to attendance line changes.

Fourth grade teachers moving from Cox to the new elementary school on the former county home property are Nancy Williams, Maxine Whitener and Joyce Weathington. Fifth grade teachers being transferred to the new school are Dot Seay, Joann Campbell and Lena Spells. Fourth grade teachers being moved to W.H. Robinson School are Frances Wilson, Jackie Mosley, Beverly Belcher and Kim Bunn.

"We are gathered here today in these hallowed halls of learning to recognize, sympathize with and honor these students who will soon be leaving this institution," said Cox Principal Johnny Pinner in his tongue-in-cheek commencement speech. "For some it has been a short stay of a few years, but for others it has been a much longer time... but... we feel they are ready for promotion to another school."

Pinner recounted several numerous incidents concerning the "graduating" teachers, bringing laughter from the audience of teachers and staff members.

"Our school will not be the same without you," he concluded. "Please remember all you have learned here and carry it with you as you go on to greater challenges and endeavors."

Pinner presented each of the teachers with a certificate and a long stem red rose. They also received a paperweight featuring their name, their years at Cox and a red apple, cross-stitched by a faculty member.

The commencement took place during the faculty's annual steak luncheon in the school cafeteria.

Staff members pretended to play instruments while a tape played the graduation music.

The event was planned and coordinated by Rachel Welborn, Janice Hardee and Joanne Robertson.

Also included in the program was a slide show narrated by Mrs. Robertson and featuring piano music played by music teacher Libby Sellars. The slide show featured all the members of the faculty and staff participating in school events throughout the year. The pictures and the text, written by Mrs. Robertson, often brought hoots of laughter from the staff members.

Humorous "Last Will and Testament" items submitted by the graduating teachers also were read.

"I am not one for silliness, but I thoroughly enjoyed" the mock graduation, said Mrs. Spells, a teacher at Cox for 17 years. "I love everyone here and I am going to miss everyone."

"Going through everything I have accumulated over the years, as I throw away things and keep things, it brings back tears and a lot of memories," she said.

"It is going to be difficult to move because the faculty here has been wonderful — wonderful to work with professionally and to be around socially," said Mrs. Wilson, a teacher at Cox since 1971. "The administration has been so supportive. It will be hard, since I have been here so long and seen so many positive changes, to leave here now."

Suit

tween his office and the Justice Department is held.

Frank Bradham, Farmville town administrator, contacted this morning, said he had no idea that a suit against the housing authority was in the works until he was told by a newspaper reporter Monday that it had been filed. He said the housing authority is appointed by the town council, but operates as an independent entity totally responsible for the public housing administration. The apartment complex's ownership will revert to the town well after the year 2000, he said.

Serious Flaws

It's almost becoming a pattern. The administration in Washington wants a favorable "re-interpretation" of a treaty ... and gets it; a favorable study (running counter to the record) ... no problem.

Interior Secretary Donald Hodel has told Congress that developing the 1.5 million acres of tundra in the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge as a producer of petroleum was desirable as well as feasible.

His department produced a "study" to support the plan. Then the study hit the fan.

The Environmental Protection Agency and the Library of Congress said that study is flawed.

The EPA noted its own experience with major operators of the oil industry in the Prudhoe Bay project showed a reluctance to restore damage done to the North Slope; and indicates a similar attitude was observed by the Army Corps of Engineers in the area.

The Library of Congress research service said the impact statement did not identify the likely volumes of waste that would be created in the refuge. The research service also observed at some North Slope sites water quality contamination may have resulted from leaching, breaching or overtopping of drilling waste pits.

The EPA critique and the research service's report observed the Interior impact statement did not identify the waste that would be created in the refuge and noted a thorough siting analysis is a prerequisite for minimizing environmental damage.

Both also said that while Interior acknowledged shortages of fresh water in the refuge (necessary for petroleum production) the impact study did not address where the required large quantities of water needed for drilling would be obtained.

The news account of fault-finding goes on and on. One might conclude the Interior Department hired petroleum industry public relations people to do their report-writing for them. Stranger things have happened.

Good News

We all know that wrecks, disastrous storms, and killer earthquakes are news. They are events that affect people's lives and the public wants to know the details.

Many times, however, news is the disaster that didn't happen.

Such good news was the message in the North Carolina Department of Labor's annual awards for outstanding on-the-job safety records. State Labor Commissioner John C. Brooks presented the awards to area businesses recently. Special safety awards went to firms which have compiled a million or more hours with no disabling injuries. A special award went to Procter & Gamble Paper Products Co. for compiling 2,379,155 hours without an injury at its Greenville plant from June 23, 1984, to December 31, 1986.

Special recognition was also made to the Eveready Battery Co., Greenville plant, which has earned an annual safety award for the 22nd consecutive year. Other area firms received awards ranging from one to 14 years.

Brooks told the representatives of 36 area firms that the banquet was a way of thanking them and "recognizing your major achievement in protecting the health and well-being of your fellow workers."

The awards are most important to our community because the represent the industrial accidents that didn't occur. And the accident that didn't happen means an employee who didn't experience the pain of an injury and one who didn't lose time from the job because of an injury.

Every business should have a safety program and it should be a time of celebration when a year passes without a time-loss injury. Safety may not be spectacular, but an outstanding safety record is surely good news.

Manufacturing Is The Economic Heart

For too long a time American economists, business executives, politicians and editorial writers were overly impressed with the argument that manufacturing was not very essential to the health of an advanced industrial country like the United States. Fortunately for us all, the mythology is beginning to fade.

Business Week, reflecting the return to realism, has this to say: "Unless the United States gets its manufacturing operations back in shape — and fast — it could lose any hope of maintaining the foundation on which tomorrow's prosperity rests."

Back in the golden, olden days after World War II the United States was virtually unchallenged as an industrial leader. "Made in America" was a hallmark of quality. Export-oriented companies could sell whatever they made, and in most industries foreign inroads into the U.S. market fell within tolerable limits.

In the early 1970s things began to change. The economy grew more slowly. Productivity increased, but at a slower pace than our foreign competitors. Consumer goods produced in Japan and West Germany, especially, came to be regarded as both cheaper and better.

The U.S. trade balance slid increasingly into deficit, reflecting the fact that we were consuming more than we were producing. Just six years ago the United States sold $18 billion a year more to foreigners than they managed to sell to us. Now, at last count, foreign manufacturers sell $151 billion more per year in this country than we manage to export.

Prudence called for a period of belt-tightening, of living within our means while we channeled more of national income into new, more productive equipment and development of new markets.

Instead, the U.S. consumer merely used his charge accounts to buy more and more Japanese autos, cameras, video recorders and the like. Labor unions continued to demand, and get, higher and higher wages — regardless of the effect on unit costs. And U.S. corporate leaders sat on their arrogant duffs and ignored, for too long, what was happening in the world marketplace.

Businessmen, pressed by foreign competition, found it easier to move production abroad, to force take-it-or-quit pay cuts on their workers or to play the takeover game than to invest in the development and marketing of better home-made products.

Economic theoreticians told us that it didn't matter. Manufacturing was old hat, they said. In something called the post-industrial economy, advanced countries like ours would do high-tech manufacturing, but the production of most things would be farmed out to other, less developed, countries. We would concentrate on the development of new technology and the vast new area of computer-based services.

It was baloney. U.S. manufacturers cut costs by reducing wages, closing supposedly inefficient plants and turning to cheaper overseas suppliers. But the service sector didn't perform as advertised.

Services include everything from hotel clerks, fast-food cooks and truck drivers to computer programmers, airline pilots, lawyers, accountants and insurance adjusters.

The service sector did indeed produce a lot of new jobs. But most were in the low end of the wage scale. According to a study by the Joint Economics Committee, almost half paid $7,000 a year or less.

The results have been felt squarely in our pocketbooks.

Your typical 30-year-old male actually earned one-fourth less last year than in 1973, after adjustment for inflation. The pain has been eased by charge-account buying and by the mass entry of women into the work force. But the extra paycheck has not allowed the average family to live any better. It just means that most families need two breadwinners now to produce the same standard of living that one person provided before.

Indeed, the median household income is lower now than in the early 1970s. And a large number of Americans, especially single-earner families headed by women, are fighting a losing battle against poverty. The gap between rich and poor is getting wider, with alarming implications for social and political stability in the years ahead.

More and more economists recognize that we can't work our way out of this hole with a service-based economy, that healthy, home-based manufacturing is essential even to a robust service sector.

Why The Peace Movement Fails

WASHINGTON — Few people probably remembered the anniversary last weekend of the largest disarmament rally in the U.S. history. But five years ago, on a brilliant Saturday, three-quarters of a million people covered on New York's Central Park to protest the nuclear arms race and call for a bilateral freeze on the production of nuclear weapons.

It was not your typical '60s crowd marching along Fifth Avenue. There were farmers, office workers, professionals, union members, young couples pushing babies in strollers and middle-aged parents with teenagers in hand. They were singing, clapping and carrying homemade signs — all united in their fear of nuclear holocaust.

Remembering that Central Park rally is important because it illustrates what happens to a potentially potent political movement that is inherently undisciplined and disorganized.

From its inception, the Nuclear Freeze movement was on shaky ground. Its founder, a 45 year-old Alabama-born school teacher, Randall Forsberg, was introduced to radical politics while doing graduate work at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT) in 1975. In writing "The Price of Defense," a book that called for a radical reorientation of U.S. defense policy, Forsberg became intrigued by the idea of a bilateral freeze on the production of nuclear weapons.

After all, the United States and the Soviet Union had stockpiled 50,000 nuclear weapons and were planning to produce tons of thousands more, she reasoned. Unless the superpowers froze this production, the world would be in greater danger.

With the election of Ronald Reagan, a hard-liner and arms-control opponent in 1980, the peace movement and Forsberg had a catalyst. Joining hands with Randy Kebler, a Vietnam War resister, the two began in 1981 to test the nuclear freeze proposition in referendum form on local town ballots.

By the beginning of 1982, nuclear freeze activity had been generated in 43 states and almost two-thirds of the nation's congressional districts. Sixty-nine Catholic bishops had endorsed the concept. So had the National Council of Churches, the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, and the United Presbyterian Church. At the time, freeze organizers estimated that 20,000 activists nationwide were involved in the cause.

But after the House of Representatives passed a symbolic but meaningless endorsement of the freeze resolution in 1983, there was no leadership to direct the political movement the freeze proposition had sparked. Subsequent efforts to get Congress to eliminate funds for the production of nuclear weapons failed. And though a freeze PAC was formed to raise funds for peace candidates, no new peace activists were elected to Congress in 1984 or 1986.

The freeze movement failed on two counts: the popularity of Ronald Reagan and the movement's seemingly inherent desire to fail. When Ronald Reagan began to appear more accommodating toward arms control, as subsequent meetings in Switzerland and Iceland proved, the movement had already wilted.

Its inability to adapt to changing political conditions and agree on new initiatives is indicative of its organizational mid-life crisis. After the 1984 election, the movement virtually disappeared; it couldn't straighten out its own decision-making apparatus and subsequent turf battles. And there is scant evidence to suggest it has made major strides in this area in recent years.

Strength For Today

Some time ago a woman rushing for a subway train slipped and fell, and her leg became wedged between the edge of the platform and the car. A hero appeared at that moment in the form of a middle aged chap who knew what to do in a time of crisis.

He held open the door so the train would not start and told half the people to stay in the car and throw all their weight on the side opposite that on which the woman was pinned. He then got the others outside to shove the car away from the platform. They were able to move it only a fraction of an inch, but this was enough to free the woman.

Here was a prosaic individual who used observation and common sense to perform a rescue worthy of a decoration. Heroism rubs elbows with us every day. Greatness abides in little people.

Figures Don't Prove School Construction Spending

RALEIGH — Ever since the 1983 General Assembly approved a local option sales tax increase to, in part, help counties with local school construction, some legislators have been suspicious of how its revenues would be spent.

Those suspicions have been voiced repeatedly in legislative hearings, and in other public comments. Now, the N.C. Association of County Commissioners has new ammunition with which to deflect this legislative criticism. The new tax revenue has been spent on schools, or it has been set aside for such spending, NCACC says, and the proof is in a report from the State Treasurer's Office.

In 1983, a portion of a one-half cent sales tax increase was mandated for school spending. By 1986, it was clear that that new money wasn't enough, so another half-cent increase was okayed. Even that hasn't ended the call for new school construction money. Gov. Jim Martin says bonds are needed, Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Granville, wants to add a full cent to the sales tax, and Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan seeks new state appropriations, all for school construction.

Many legislators feel that all these new plans wouldn't be needed if the counties had kept their end of the bargain after 1983. They say the 1983 schools money was spent elsewhere, and they have backed that contention with numbers collected by the legislature's Fiscal Research Division.

But NCACC says the treasurer's report shows that counties have made major additions to their school budgets. "A large percent of counties are not only setting aside the mandated portions of the local half-cent sales taxes, most are giving more than the mandated amount while still maintaining strong support for local current expenses," the association says in its late May newsletter.

The treasurer's report shows that county spending for capital school needs increased by 83 percent from 1983 until 1986. (The report does not cover the period following implementation of the second half-cent increase.) Over the same period, counties increased spending for school operations by 33 percent, the association says.

While these percentage increases are significant, it is unclear whether or not they disprove the suspicions of legislators. That is, the counties may not have maintained their previous effort when the new money, which was mandated for schools, arrived. Fiscal Research and Department of Public Instruction figures indicate they reduced their previous spending.

Debra Holley, spokesman for NCACC, says even if that happened, it doesn't indicate that the counties didn't maintain their effort. Several counties quickly applied their half-cent revenues to new schools, but others felt the need to carefully plan where schools would go. They held their money back, putting it in reserve accounts, while plans were drafted, she said.

Ms. Holley also argued that some counties took their money, which was restricted to school use and not just school construction use, and put it towards operating expenses. When the state begins paying more operating expenses through steps three and four of the Basic Education Program, she said, the counties will be able to shift that money into construction funds.

In its newsletter, NCACC told the stories of 19 counties which have spent far beyond the mandated levels on schools.

But legislators have always known that some counties were willing to do all possible for their schools. The association's job in the closing weeks of the session is to prove that the unwilling counties are in a small minority.

Iran-Contra Hearings Tell A Tale Of Two Governments

WASHINGTON — Six weeks of the Iran-contra hearings have given the world a disturbing portrait of Ronald Reagan's presidency. In the apt description of Sen. William S. Cohen, R-Maine, the testimony has provided "a tale of two governments—one elected, the other procured."

Both governments, however, were the responsibility of the president, which is why these hearings already have had such a profound impact on Reagan's presidency.

What has unfolded from the 18 witnesses who have appeared so far is a story of contempt — for Congress, for the public, for legalities, for the normal processes of government and diplomacy. The Iran-contra testimony reveals a classic example of an end-justifies-the-means mentality at work secretly in the White House.

In this, the Iran-contra hearings both resemble and markedly differ from the Watergate inquiry 14 years ago that ended Richard Nixon's presidency.

As with Watergate, the attitudes that led to these hearings have entrapped the president and his administration in a situation from which there seems no escape.

The latest example of the pervasive effect of the hearings was Reagan's press conference in Venice last Thursday concluding the economic summit meeting of western allies.

Normally such an occasion, in such a setting, offers a president an opportunity to demonstrate his world leadership role. Instead, it showed Reagan's inability to extricate himself from Iran-contra hearing disclosures. He was peppered from beginning to end with questions stemming directly from the more than 100 hours of congressional testimony to date.

A striking difference exists, though, between Iran-contra hearing witnesses and those of Watergate.

New Mood In South Korea

SEOUL, South Korea — It was a handful of students who began the rally that took place shortly after noon Monday outside Seoul's Myongdong Cathedral. But within a half hour, thousands of solidly middle-class office workers, lunch-time strollers and shoppers had joined in, blocking the street with a high-spirited festival of songs and anti-government slogans.

Women leaned from high-rise buildings to shower roses and confetti down on the crowd. People talked spontaneously to strangers. A man stood atop a stool and led the crowd in cheering, thousands of fists stabbing the air with each round.

"Initially people are afraid," said a trading company employee in suit and tie. "But when they get together, there is no fear."

Until this week, common belief in South Korea was that the middle class could never make common cause with the rock-throwing radicals of the campuses. Five days of demonstrations here have drawn that wisdom into question and could rewrite the rules of politics here.

Invariably there are comparisons to the "people's power" revolution in the Philippines last year.

So far, the numbers of people in the streets are tiny compared to those who toppled Ferdinand Marcos in Manila. The turn-out near the cathedral Monday afternoon, for example, was probably statistically insignificant in a city of almost 10 million inhabitants.

Yet, the public participation is raising talk of a new mood prevailing in South Korea, in which more people may act on long-repressed hostility toward the government of President Chun Doo Hwan.

As an Army general, Chun seized power in stages starting in 1979. Many South Koreans have never accepted his legitimacy as president, especially in view of the deaths of more than 200 people in demonstrations in the city of Kwangju the following year.

The imperial airs that the short, balding man affects add to public hostility. Koreans appear not to mind such behavior if they feel the leader has earned the right to office. But in many people's minds, Chun has not.

South Korea's paradox is that while development of its political institutions has remained stifled, its economy has raced ahead into the industrial age. Gross national product has roughly doubled since Chun came to power.

Chun is not credited for any of this by ordinary people. But it has long been said that as people acquire houses, automobiles and prospects for promotion in thriving companies they will be less inclined to risk it all by taking to the streets for political protest.

Now, a confluence of traumatic events seems to be pushing many people to do it anyway.

In January, a student died during police torture and the extent of official involvement in his death was covered up. In April, Chun suspended debate with the opposition on constitutional reform, ending a year-long period of cautious but nonetheless unusual optimism for a long-term political settlement.

Last week, the ruling party formally nominated for president another former general who helped Chun carry out a coup d'etat in 1979, Roh Tae Woo. Chun has presented this first "peaceful transfer of power" in South Korean history as a monumental event.

But many South Koreans see it as simply replacing one dictator with another. "The bald man with a wig," is what some of them are calling Roh, signifying he is just Chun in disguise.

Public anger has also been stirred up by indiscriminate tear gassing by police during the protests of the past six days. The fumes have settled over thousands of homes and workplaces, choking children walking to school and people heading for markets. A press campaign against it has got underway.

Police battling with students on the streets have had repeatedly to contend with anger and insults from onlookers.

Radical students who took refuge in Myongdong cathedral last week were showered with provisions of food, drink, first aid equipment, and clothing. Cash donated has totalled about $25,000 so far, according to press reports.

Public anger also rose against a popular comedian named Kim Pyong

Analysis

In the Watergate hearings, many witnesses testified to a feeling of contrition for violating public trust and circumventing, or breaking, the law. Most notable was remorseful White House aide Jeb Magruder, who publicly apologized to the country and to his family for the actions that led him to the witness stand and, ultimately, to jail.

With one exception — the tormented, half-apologetic, half-defensive testimony of former national security adviser Robert C. McFarlane — Iran-contra witnesses have been strikingly unrepentant on the witness stand. Their testimony has been characterized by a near-uniform degree of certainty about the rightness of their actions regardless of legalities — an attitude best exemplified by the remark of Oliver L. North's former secretary, Fawn Hall, that there are "times when you have to go above the written law."

In the first phase of the hearings, the committees focused on the way in which American officials and their private operatives enabled arms and cash to flow secretly to Nicaraguan contra forces despite a congressional ban on such aid by the government. This concentrated approach resulted in the single most important disclosure to emerge from the hearings so far: a serious breakdown in the system of political checks-and-balances between executive and legislative branches.

Short of evidence that could lead to an impeachment proceeding — which the committee members interviewed for this article uniformly said they do not expect — the most likely effect of the hearings involves the redressing of that balance in favor of Congress and at the expense of the president.

Strong and unrefuted evidence of extended, deliberate efforts to mislead and deceive Congress about the reality of administration actions in Central America has produced virtual unanimity of opinion on the committees that a grave betrayal of trust occurred. Congressional members of both parties express determination to check what they regard as abuses of power in the future.

This is true even among those on the committees who have argued that the congressional ban on aid to the contras, as expressed in several versions of the now-famous Boland Amendment, does not apply to the president or National Security Council members — and will not stand legal review from the courts. The hearings have documented beyond argument that officials involved believed they were operating illegally — which is why they went to such extraordinary lengths of secrecy, employing code names and cash and Swiss bank accounts and planes and ships that supposedly could not be traced back to U.S. agencies, whether the Central Intelligence Agency, Defense Department, National Security Agency or the NSC, which had daily clandestine operational authority.

In that respect, the testimony of Assistant Secretary of State Elliott Abrams was critical and symbolic.

Abrams, the highest official to appear so far and the person charged with carrying out the president's Central American policy, acknowledged he had repeatedly misled Congress about the extent of U.S. involvement in the secret efforts to supply the contras.

His testimony infuriated many committee members of both parties. It led to a broad, bipartisan consensus that he must be removed from his position. Despite the strong public backing Abrams subsequently received from Secretary of State George Shultz, the president's tepid endorsement of him in response to press questions in Venice make it unlikely he will survive.

If he stays, Congress has made it clear that the president's contra-aid policy, already seriously imperiled, will be in danger of extinction.

Other consequences of the hearings' impact on the president's conduct of foreign policy are apparent. Strengthened congressional resolve in insisting on greater and far more candid consultation over critical issues has forced the White House to hesitate over planned U.S. naval escort missions in the Persian Gulf. It also forced the administration to withdraw its plan to sell 1,600 antitank missiles to Saudi Arabia.

Nor are the effects of this new congressional reassertion of powers limited to foreign policy. The administration faces increasingly rigorous examination of all its proposals and policies in the aftermath of Iran-contra revelations of administration double-dealing.

The hearings have resulted in two other significant disclosures.

Before they began, the administration attempted to leave the impression that any wrongs committed were limited to a few people — or even one, Lt. Col. North — operating out of control from the White House basement and acting without higher authority.

Iran-contra testimony has demolished that contention.

We weren't even on the ballot in a Sales and Marketing Management survey rating major airlines, but came in second after respondent write-ins.

It seems that more and more airlines these days are vowing to offer travelers "something special" — great service and low fares. A special something that Piedmont has been offering the flying public for years — documented not only in surveys and government reports, but in untold thousands of letters from satisfied Piedmont passengers. So next time you plan to travel, don't take the airline that just claims to be special. Take Piedmont. And see what being special is really all about.

PIEDMONT AIRLINES

Restrictions apply to fares shown above. Fares shown are one-half of required round-trip purchase and travel must take place between June 15 and July 15. Tickets must be purchased by June 22. Florida state fuel tax surcharge, $1.00 per person from all Florida cities. Seats are limited.

IN THE STATE

Sentenced

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — An Alabama prison guard said he was sorry and wished he could turn back the hands of time after being sentenced to nine years in prison for his part in the suffocation death of a federal inmate.

"I only wish I could turn back the hands of time," Lt. Gerry Dale told U.S. District Judge Terrence W. Boyle on Monday, "but I know that is impossible. I am sincerely sorry."

Dale, 32, who had been indicted in the death of inmate Vinson P. Harris of Charlotte, faced a maximum of 10 years in prison for his March guilty plea of assault of Harris in a prison bus. A second charge was dropped as part of a plea bargain.

Dale was supervising a bus bound for Virginia when Harris' face and mouth were wrapped with an elastic bandage and duct tape.

Harris, a convicted bank robber, was handcuffed and chained to his seat at the time, inmates who witnessed the incident said.

He was removed from the bus at the federal prison in Butner, but could not be revived.

Motorist Shot

WILSON, N.C. (AP) — A Kenly man was shot by a state Highway Patrolman when the man waved a handgun after being stopped on suspicion of driving while impaired, the patrol reported.

William Henry Bass, 21, was in stable condition after he was shot Saturday night by Sgt. C.H. Mercer, said Capt. Tony Spainhour of the Highway Patrol.

Man Found

LEWISVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A 76-year-old man missing since Friday was found Sunday, dehydrated and weak but otherwise unharmed, officials said.

Vance Williams was found by a search party led by his son, Vance Williams Jr.

"He was dehydrated and weak, but in good spirits," the younger Williams said. "Our prayers were answered."

Rehearsal

RALEIGH (AP) — Contestants in the 50th annual Miss North Carolina Pageant have begun a weeklong rehearsal for the final competition Saturday during which a new Miss North Carolina will be crowned.

Thirty-five past title winners will appear in the final program to celebrate the pageant's golden anniversary, pageant officials said.

The 47 contestants, who arrived at Peace College Sunday, will compete all week.

Distributon

RALEIGH (AP) — More than 100 North Carolina groups working for the hungry and homeless will share $292,950 awarded Monday by USA for Africa-Hands Across America, officials announced.

The money is part of some $12 million grants approved since May 25, 1986 when more than 6 million Americans joined hands to focus attention on the plight of the hungry and homeless.

North Carolina is one of 35 states that used the committee-coalition grant process designed to foster statewide approaches to the problems.

Dole Visit

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Sen. Bob Dole says he won't align himself as closely with President Reagan in his own expected bid for the presidency in 1988 as he has in the past.

"I think it was appropriate in 1986 to run as a team," Dole said Monday at a $500-a-plate fund-raising dinner in his honor at a Winston-Salem hotel.

Dole has not declared his candidacy officially, but the event raised money for his race. "It hasn't been announced officially," he said. "But there's not much doubt about what I'll do in the fall."

PTL Hopes Suits Will Be Delayed

FORT MILL, S.C. (AP) — The new leaders of the PTL ministry filed for bankruptcy protection in part to stave off further lawsuits that could have led to the liquidation of PTL, the Rev. Jerry Falwell said.

"The first thing we had to consider were lawsuits already filed against us with (potential) judgments we were unable to pay," Falwell told viewers of the "PTL Club" on Monday.

The major lawsuit was filed by builder Roe Messner, who claims PTL owes him $14 million.

"Many, many lawsuits were imminent which could have caused the assets here to be savaged, sold off, taken away from the ministry," Falwell added in his first "PTL Club" appearance since the ministry filed for reorganization Friday under Chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code. "I don't believe anyone wanted that to happen."

Reorganization would protect the ministry from legal action by creditors — including stations carrying "The Inspirational Network," the backbone of PTL's fundraising and a symbol of the ministry's credibility.

Falwell also urged viewers Monday to mail the ministry an extra $50 each in addition to their monthly pledge for June and told them protection in bankruptcy court could help keep the television ministry stay on the air.

In May alone, television appeals brought $8.5 million to the ministry. If the 200,000 people who responded to a "May Emergency" fund-raising campaign heed Falwell's latest plea, it would raise $10 million for the ministry.

Telecommunications Inc., a cable television company based in Denver, canceled PTL's programs June 5, "under the premise that the ministry had lost its credibility," Falwell said.

Eleven of the ministry's top 20 unsecured creditors listed in the bankruptcy court petition are television stations and one is a cable company.

House Panel Alters Road Funding Bill

RALEIGH (AP) — Supporters of a bill to prohibit municipal involvement in state road projects are offering to make a partial exception for North Carolina's five largest cities.

Approved Monday by a subcommittee of the House Transportation Committee, the amended bill would let cities with a population of 100,000 or more contribute up to 25 percent of a road project's right of way cost. Other cities could not assist in buying rights of way.

Another change would allow any municipality to spend proceeds from local bond issues to improve the state road system — if the city was willing to bear the entire cost of the project without help from the state.

"These changes ... allow cities to do some of the things they've told us they need to do" to bring traffic snarls under control, Rep. Bob Hunter, D-McDowell, said.

The subcommittee, chaired by Hunter, approved the rewritten bill unanimously. Hunter said the panel would meet Wednesday to consider any last-minute proposals for further change, then report to the full committee Thursday.

Spokesmen for the state Department of Transportation and the North Carolina League of Municipalities, which have fought the bill, said the amended version was an improvement but stopped short of endorsing it.

DOT "considers it to be a step in the right direction," spokesman Jim Sughrue said, adding that its chief virtue was its recognition that "cities have a role to play in road construction."

But George Wells, the state highway administrator, said the bill would cost the department's road resurfacing budget $5 million by shifting that amount to compensate for the loss of local funds.

Also, he said, allowing cities of 100,000 or more to contribute only 25 percent of a project's cost could deprive the highway budget of another $1.25 million.

Fred Baggett, spokesman for the municipalities league, objected to the proposal to keep cities of fewer than 100,000 residents out of the road business.

Growers Assessed 2 Cents

WASHINGTON (AP) — Flue-cured tobacco farmers and buyers each will pay an assessment of 2 cents per pound on the 1987 crop to help pay for government price supports, the Agriculture Department said Monday.

The assessment last year was 1½ cents per pound for 1986-crop flue-cured tobacco. In addition, producers last year were required to contribute an additional 1 cent per pound to cover support operations for the 1982, 1983 and 1984 crops.

Milton Hertz, head of the department's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, said the 1987 assessments will ensure that the tobacco support program operates at no net cost to taxpayers, as required by law.

Hertz said USDA consulted the Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corporation, the producer-owned association that handles the support program, before determining the 1987 assessment.

Flue-cured producers must pay the assessment as a condition for receiving tobacco price supports.

No Race

RALEIGH (AP) — The executive director of the National Congressional Club says he would love to see Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., run for president, but it appears the state's senior senator won't be running for the nation's top office.

"I would still love to see him run and be a candidate, but I think he prefers to stay in the Senate," said club Executive Director Carter Wrenn.

The Congressional Club, Helms' Raleigh-based political organization, sent a fund-raising letter to its supporters in March seeking money and encouragement for a possible draft-Helms movement. Wrenn said he was encouraged by the response, but Helms expressed no interest.

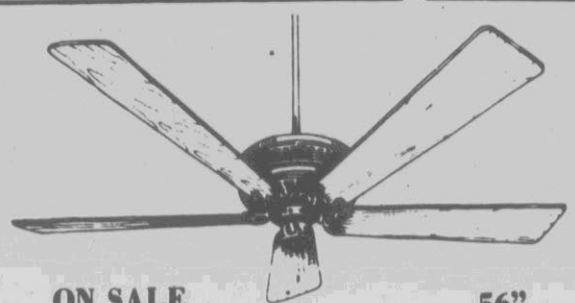

"I don't think you can do that unless the senator is willing to make some sort of gesture that he is interested in the race, and I don't think he is interested in the race," Wrenn said.

Reagan Says Congress Showing 'Lapse Of Faith'

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, denying that he came home empty-handed from the Venice summit, says a congressional "lapse of faith" is threatening progress that he and other world leaders made toward economic health.

"The truth is we came home from this summit with everything we had hoped to accomplish," the president said in an 18-minute nationally broadcast speech Monday night from the Oval Office.

"I was particularly gratified, for example, for the support our allies gave to our Persian Gulf policy; it was extended without hesitation," the president said, although the support was limited to diplomatic rather than military backing.

Reagan also outlined a new global arms control initiative, argued his case for worldwide elimination of agricultural subsidies, and renewed his plea for a constitutional amendment requiring a balanced federal budget.

The president answered critics of his plan to protect oil tankers in the Persian Gulf with American warships by saying, "If we don't do the job, the Soviets will." He said U.S. national security will be jeopardized if the Kremlin becomes the guardian of gulf oil.

Reagan said the United States, in negotiations with the Soviets for reductions in intermediate range nuclear weapons, will seek "global elimination" of the shorter range missiles in that class. The offer comes in addition to proposals already on the table to eliminate the longer range intermediate missiles in Europe.

Reagan disputed reports that "nothing was really accomplished at the summit, and the United States in particular came home empty-handed" while saying he "felt among the other six summit leaders a sense of unease about America's commitment to a consistent, enforceable plan to reduce our deficits."

He said he had "a special message, one that is about our own economy, about actions that could jeopardize the kind of progress we made toward economic health last week in Venice as well as the prosperity that during the last six years all of us here in America have worked so hard to achieve."

The president recalled the passage two years ago of the Gramm-Rudman deficit reduction legislation which he supported, but added, "And what's happened to that restraint on wasteful domestic spending solemnly promised under Gramm-Rudman-Hollings? It vanished. And to pay for this lapse of faith you, the taxpayers, are going to be saddled with an approximately $100 billion bill over the next four years."

Reagan said a budget-balancing constitutional amendment is needed, and he urged Congress to let him veto specific items in appropriation bills. He said he would spell out other budget reforms which he called "an economic Bill of Rights."

Following the speech, Democratic leaders in Congress attacked his fiscal policies and said his Persian Gulf plans are deceptive.

Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., said the president's budget picture "was like his early explanation of the Iran-Contra misadventure. It was long on rhetoric, short on facts and left a misleading impression."

"What the president did not tell the American people were all the facts about the results of six years of Reagan economic policy. He did not tell the American people about his unbroken string of triple-digit deficits. He did not tell them that he had more than doubled the national debt. And he did not tell them that he has never in six years submitted a balanced budget," Byrd said late Monday.

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, said Reagan "is a master at delivering these speeches and he gave his usual performance." Reagan's remarks on the gulf held "nothing new," Nunn said.

"What we're really trying to do is find a way to tilt towards Iraq, and we're basically describing it as a freedom-of-navigation problem," Nunn said. "It seems to me that the administration has to put its cards on the table in this regard and tell the American people what we're really doing."

However, Senate Republican leader Bob Dole of Kansas said Reagan's emphasis on the federal budget "was right on target."

"We need all the tools the president talked about — a constitutional amendment to balance the budget, the line-item veto and budget process reform — but we've also got to make the tough choices. We've got to cut spending," Dole said.

Reagan said the world leaders agreed to continue working against trade barriers and "made significant progress" against agricultural subsidies, adding that it was "a real step forward" to get this issue on the agenda at all.

Pressing the administration's case that such subsidies shrink the market for American goods, Reagan said he would continue to seek their elimination by the year 2000, a goal the allies failed to embrace during the summit of seven industrial democracies last week in Venice, Italy.

On arms control, Reagan noted that NATO foreign ministers agreed, in a post-summit meeting at Reykjavik, Iceland, to support the United States in formally proposing "the global elimination of all U.S. and Soviet land-based shorter-range INF (or intermediate range) missiles."

Negotiations with the Soviets, he said, could lead to a "historic arms reduction treaty" calling for a 30 percent cut in the superpowers' strategic forces.

On the economy, he said, "It's time for action, and I urge the Congress to move ahead and come up with a package of reforms that will correct some of the glaring deficiencies of the current budget process."

"In the meantime, I'm going to be stepping up my own public commitment to this cause. I'm going to take the case to you, the American people."

White House aides have said Reagan plans one speaking trip per week on behalf of his economic policies, starting next week and lasting until he leaves in mid-August to vacation at his California ranch through Labor Day.

SHIP HIT — The West German military supply ship 'Neckar,' shown in this file photo, was struck by naval artillery fire from a Warsaw Pact vessel Monday as it observed military exercises in the Baltic Sea. German officials said they are considering the incident an accident. (AP Laserphoto)

W. German Ship Hit By Gunfire

L.A. Times-Washington Post

BONN, West Germany — A West German naval vessel was hit Monday by gunfire from a Warsaw Pact warship, the Defense Ministry here reported. Three men on the West German ship were reportedly injured, but none critically.

A spokesman for the West German defense Ministry described the incident as an accident. It occurred while the West German vessel, the tender Neckar, was observing Warsaw Pact naval exercises in the Baltic Sea off the Polish-Soviet coast.

Friedhelm Ost, a spokesman for the West German government, said at the incident is being regarded with "great composure" by officials here. He would not say whether West Germany will file a protest.

The Defense Ministry spokesman, Ulrich Hundt, said: "We definitely think it was an accident. This is the first incident of this kind. We believe it was caused by either human or technical error."

The Neckar, a 2,370-ton vessel with a crew of 98, serves as a tender for the 7th Fast Boat Squadron, based at Kiel. It was observing maneuvers by a group of Tarantul-class anti-missile corvettes, one East German and two Polish, in international waters about 25 miles off the coast north of the Bay of Gdansk.

The East bloc ships apparently were firing machine guns at a pilotless drone launched from shore, simulating defense against a missile attack. Five rounds hit the Neckar, a Defense Ministry source said, two of them piercing the hull below the waterline near the stern. One round hit a gun mount on the after deck and caused a small fire.

According to the Defense Ministry spokesman, the crew extinguished the fire and headed back toward Kiel, where it is expected to arrive Tuesday morning. The three injured crewmen, all with injuries caused by metal splinters, were taken by helicopter to the naval hospital at Kiel.

The Defense Ministry said it believes that the gunfire that hit the Neckar came from one of the Polish corvettes. The corvettes are surface action ships larger than sloops and smaller than frigates.

As of late Monday, no Warsaw Pact country had contacted Bonn to take responsibility, the Defense Ministry said.

Korean Students Step Up Attacks As Riots Spread

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Thousands of students battled riot police with firebombs and rocks in Seoul and six other cities today, and mobs attacked at least three police stations in a southern city.

Students armed with wooden and iron clubs surged out of Seoul universities as rifle squads fired volleys of tear gas and police in armored cars pelted the crowds with tear gas grenades.

Hundreds of onlookers booed the police whenever they fired tear gas.

"Down with the military dictatorship," students yelled. Police huddled behind their shields as bottle bombs exploded in bursts of blazing gasoline.

Yonhap, the Korean news agency, reported that 42,000 students took part in anti-government rallies around the country, including protests in Seoul, Pusan, Kwangju, Chonju, Chonan, Chonju and Wonju.

Some of the worst fighting today was reported from the southern city of Chinju, where thousands of people took to the streets. At least three police stations were attacked by roaming bands of students, and one was gutted with firebombs.

About 1,500 students armed with rocks and firebombs battled police firing tear gas around the train station in the central city of Chonan.

Seoul and other cities have been hit by a wave of anti-government protests since opposition groups began a drive last week to oust President Chun Doo-hwan's government and force direct elections.

The center of Seoul, site of the worst battles in recent days, was relatively quiet. Police hurled tear gas grenades to break up hundreds of people demonstrating in front of Myongdong Cathedral when some of them attempted to march to city hall.

Most of the clashes today broke out around university campuses when students attempted to march into the streets. Political protests are common on South Korean campuses, but the violence appeared much more intense than usual.

Students took over the streets in at least two outlying areas of Seoul, pushing police back and bringing traffic to a halt.

Baptists Receive Peace Report

By LORI DODGE
Associated Press Writer
ST. LOUIS (AP) — Recommendations by a 22-member peace committee attempting to bring feuding factions together and the election of a president were the major items on the agenda today for the opening of the 130th annual Southern Baptist Convention.

About 25,000 delegates are attending the three-day convention. The denomination has become divided over whether the Bible should be interpreted literally or symbolically. Conservatives believe biblical stories should be considered historical fact, while moderate leaders have argued that Baptists should be free to interpret certain passages.

The peace committee, chaired by the Rev. Charles Fuller of Roanoke, Va., was to make its second attempt today to bring together the two sides when it presented its report. At last year's session, delegates found the committee's report unacceptable and asked for another one.

SBC President Adrian Rogers said he expected delegates to be ready to vote on the report today because it was uncomplicated and because it would "touch" the people.

Fuller said the committee worked until 4:15 a.m. Monday in an attempt to iron out differences in the dispute. He said the report reflects the "diversity of the committee."

"Not everyone got all he or she wanted in this report," he said.

Thus far, the fundamentalist side of the religion, which numbers 14.6 million members, has held control in a nine-year battle. The peace committee was formed two years ago to help resolve the dispute.

Conservative and moderate factions met separately Monday to prepare for the convention.

A North Carolina minister called on members of the Southern Baptist Convention to acknowledge diversity of Christian experience and find a compromise.

John Harris Hewett, of Asheville, N.C., in an address Monday to the Southern Baptist Forum, the moderate group, asked the pastors to choose harmony over dissonance and to pray that an indivisible union comes out of the three-day convention.

The conservative minister is expected to be nominated for a second one-year term. The Rev. Richard Jackson, of Phoenix, Ariz., considered a moderate, also has announced that he would accept a nomination.

Also on Monday, in an address to the conservative group of ministers, the Southern Baptist Pastor's Conference, the president of the New Orleans Baptist Theological Seminary warned against relying on human actions to achieve spiritual goals.

"It is significant that we take some truths of the Christian gospel and twist them beyond recognition," said Landrum P. Leavell II. "Jesus taught us the dignity and worth of the human, but we take his teachings and use them to reject him ... We have taken what God has given in rich abundance and compromised those gifts. We spend our time, money and energy jockeying over who will run the machinery."

On Sunday, evangelist Bailey Smith, of Del City, Okla., former president of the Southern Baptist Convention, told the pastors to quit "apologizing for God's Word."

"If the whole world would vote that the Bible is not the infallible, inerrant Word of God, it still would be the infallible, inerrant Word of God," he said. "I'm sick of reading about whether the Bible is infallible. I can end the debate with two words: it is."

Another potential problem emerged Monday when the Missouri Religious Coalition for Abortion Rights announced it would picket the convention to protest the Baptists' strong anti-abortion stance.

Presbyterians Agree To Hold Major Conference On Abortion

BILOXI, Miss. (AP) — Representatives of the nation's largest Presbyterian denomination have agreed to talk about abortion and have called for a ban on chemical weapons, but delayed discussing the issue of homosexual clergy.

The 199th General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (USA) also delayed until today discussions on relations with Jews and Muslims, and was to debate the location of the church's main office.

A committee has recommended that most of the offices be consolidated in Kansas City, Mo., but a minority report recommends Louisville, Ky.

The General Assembly of the 3-million-member denomination adopted a committee report Monday calling for the United States and Soviet Union to negotiate a treaty banning development and use of chemical weapons.

The abortion resolution, adopted 307-264, calls for an ecumenical conference, probably in late 1988 or early 1989, to promote "dialogue among the varying and diverging Christian perspectives on the abortion issue."

"That's a small step in the right direction," said the Rev. Bart Tarman, of Santa Barbara, Calif., vice president of Presbyterians Pro-Life, a church-sanctioned organization.

The abortion decision came at the end of a 14-hour session, during which the assembly's 650 commissioners also debated a paper on peacemaking and reversed a 25-year-old decision defrocking a peace activist.

Tarman said anti-abortionists within the denomination have gained strength since 1983 when it adopted a statement that abortion is a decision between a woman and her physician. Later modifications have condemned abortion as a method of birth control and urged women to seek other ways to deal with unwanted pregnancies.

North Gets Immunity In Probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lt. Col. Oliver L. North has been given limited immunity from prosecution in a move to compel his testimony before congressional committees investigating the Iran-Contra affair.

Also receiving limited immunity Monday was a former CIA official who installed a security system at North's house. Meanwhile, the Iran-Contra grand jury interviewed one of North's former colleagues at the White House.

Though the public Iran-Contra hearings are in recess until next week, there were these developments:

—North, a central figure in the affair, was granted limited immunity at the request of the congressional investigative committees, a move aimed at forcing him to testify about his role in sales of weapons to Iran and private military support for the Nicaraguan Contra rebels.

—The committees also obtained a court order granting limited immunity for former CIA official Glenn Robinette. The committees are trying to learn whether Robinette, who installed a security system at North's home in Great Falls, Va., was paid from a secret Swiss bank account controlled by retired Air Force Maj. Gen. Richard V. Secord. Secord has denied any such connection.

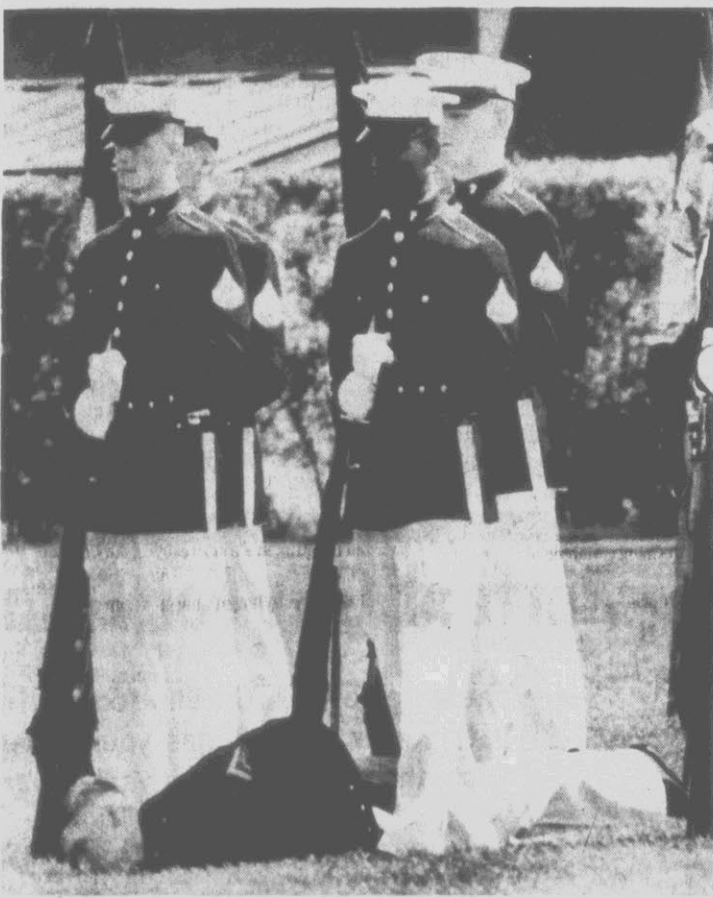

—Vincent Cannistraro, former National Security Council director for intelligence programs, appeared before independent counsel Lawrence E. Walsh's grand jury in its continuing probe into the activities of North and others on the White House-based NSC.

Cannistraro, who left the agency when Frank C. Carlucci took over in January as President Reagan's national security adviser, declined to answer a reporter's questions about his appearance. Cannistraro had been assigned to work with North on Contra activities, but documents disclosed by the presidentially appointed Tower commission suggested he was "not witting" of the scope of North's private supply network for the rebels.

North's immunity grant from U.S. District Judge Louis Oberdorfer means that nothing he tells the congressional panels can be used against him in criminal prosecution unless the special prosecutor had already obtained the information.

Walsh had asked the committees not to seek immunity for North, who was fired as an NSC aide for his role in resupplying the Contras. The panels rejected Walsh's request but agreed to put off public testimony by North until at least July 16.

North has been named as a fellow conspirator by two fund-raisers who pleaded guilty to charges they illegally used a tax-exempt foundation to raise millions of dollars for military aid to the Contras.

PARADE REST — A member of the U.S. Marine Corps Ceremonial and Guard Company lies on the parade field Monday at Fort Myer, in Arlington, Va., after being overcome by heat during a retirement ceremony honoring Marine Gen. Paul X. Kelley and Army Gen. John A. Wickham. Kelley cut short his speech because of the heat. (AP Laserphoto)

General Shortens Talk As Heat Hits

WASHINGTON (AP) — Outgoing Marine Corps Commandant Gen. P.X. Kelley cut short a speech critical of Congress and the news media, taking pity on troops wobbling in the muggy heat at his retirement ceremonies.

Monday's ceremonies, also marking the retirement of Army Chief of Staff Gen. John A. Wickham, featured a 19-gun salute, military honor guards and music from Army and Marine Corps bands.

"My first concern is with a growing attitude in the Congress which places more credence in the views of staff members on matters dealing with national security than in the views of the service chiefs," Kelley said in the text of his prepared speech.

"This attitude is driving a wedge between the members of Congress and the nation's principal military advisers."

Kelley and Wickham, both stepping down at the end of the month after 37 years in uniform, were honored at Fort Myer, an Army post adjacent to Arlington National Cemetery.

As temperatures climbed toward 90, several soldiers on the field in dress uniforms collapsed in the heat and humidity. Some had to be taken off the field.

Several were taken out of line before they passed out, and one nearly collapsed directly in front of the reviewing stand, where Vice President George Bush, Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger and the military brass were seated.

"I had a long speech, but the troops have been out in the sun for about an hour," Kelley said as he discarded his 800-word text.

"There is no prouder commander than the commandant of the Marine Corps, and I salute you. Carry on."

Kelley had been ready to express concern about "a feeling among some members of our Congress that you can buy the defense of our country on the cheap."

In his undelivered speech, Kelley complained about the news media, attacking the "unbalanced treatment of our armed forces by many, not all, but many members of our fourth estate."

Candidates Back Mayors' Call For Federal Money

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — President Reagan's cuts in aid to cities drew fire from the head of the U.S. Conference of Mayors, but the administration's top urban official says mayors should innovate and stop looking for handouts.

"If our national government seeks to relieve itself of its partnership responsibilities with our cities, then the ability of this great urban nation to compete in the world economy is lost," Joseph P. Riley, Democratic mayor of Charleston, S.C., said in his keynote speech Monday to the group's annual meeting.

Riley, saying the administration had cut urban aid by 70 percent when compared to 1979, asserted that big-city mayors must make 1988 presidential candidates promise to reverse the trend. "It is up to us to convince them that our country must again return to a wise, thoughtful and modest urban policy," said Riley, whose group represents 800 cities of 30,000 or more.

Three Democratic hopefuls — the Rev. Jesse Jackson, Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis, and Missouri Rep. Richard Gephardt — on Monday backed Riley's call for renewed aid to cities, and decried worsening urban ills under President Reagan.

The first Republican hopeful to appear before the mayors, the Rev. Pat Robertson, was to speak today, followed by announced GOP candidate Pierre DuPont IV, the former governor of Delaware.

Three other Democrats — Sen. Albert Gore, an announced candidate, former Virginia Gov. Charles Robb, who has insisted he isn't running, and Sen. Joseph Biden of Delaware — also were to appear at the meeting today. Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois and Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton, both Democrats, speak Wednesday.

The administration's urban record was being defended by Samuel Pierce, secretary of the U.S. Housing and Urban Development.

"We do not always agree," Pierce said in remarks prepared for delivery today. "But, examine our record, and I hope you'll agree that we've made progress toward our shared goals, even if we didn't always take the approach you might have favored."

Pierce, responding to calls for increased aid to cities, urged the mayors to look to innovative private and local financing for housing and other projects instead of continuing to look for handouts.

"Cities whose leaders and citizens have learned to innovate will need to turn less often to the federal or state level for financial assistance," he said. "You will be better able to chart a more independent course, working as equal partners with Washington, not dependents or poor relations."

In a speech Monday, Gephardt attacked the administration for trying "to starve to death all of the domestic programs."

Dukakis called for new spending on low- and middle-income housing, saying new housing has slowed to a trickle under Reagan, contributing to homelessness.

Jackson urged the mayors to find ways to tap public workers' pension funds to form a pool of capital that could be used for urban redevelopment and other job-producing projects.

Chicago Mayor Harold Washington called Jackson's proposal ingenious, but said it might not be practical because of tight controls on the billions of dollars in pension funds.

Washington, a second-term Democrat, said he was meeting with each of the seven Democratic hopefuls appearing before the mayors and was confident all would support "our urban agenda" of housing, education and jobs.

Banks Face Worst Quarter In History

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. banking industry is facing its worst quarterly performance in history as billions of dollars are drained into reserve funds to guard against Third World loan losses, federal regulators say.

More than 12,000 of the nation's more than 14,000 banks are making a profit, according to figures released by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. on Monday. But reserves for potential defaults by Brazil and other developing countries may more than offset those profits in the quarter now ending.

"The amounts they're allocating for reserves, just in the second quarter, are so tremendous that the aggregate net income for the industry will be around zero" and could well be a net loss, said John Quinn of the FDIC's research division.

FDIC Chairman William Seidman said it appears the quarter "will be the worst quarter in history" for the commercial banking industry, in both the rate and amount of earnings decline.

A loss would follow a record first quarter for the banking industry.

The FDIC's regular quarterly report said the 14,061 banks reporting data showed total net income of $5.29 billion for the three months ending March 31, the largest profit ever for a single quarter.

The FDIC said 2,019 banks reported a loss in the first quarter, down from 2,824 for the year 1986.

With Initials In Purple On Rose, She's A Trucker

By LANE LAMBERT
The Huntsville Times
HUNTSVILLE, Ala. (AP) — The first time Kimberly C. Wheelless climbed into the cab of the tractor-trailer, she knew she wanted to drive one — for a living.

That was several years ago. She was in her early 20s and she and her husband were living in North Carolina, their home state; the 18-wheeler in which she perched that day belonged to her father-in-law, who had been a truck driver for years.

"I felt the gearshift, and looked at all those gadgets on the dashboard, and thought ... Lord," the Huntsville woman recalled in a recent interview.

This month "KC" finally hit the highway to North Carolina — for a living — in a tractor that she will someday own, a brand-new International "cab-over" model, painted in rose with her initials on the doors in purple.

The two-week circuit she is now riding is her first as a certified independent trucker, a distinction that is still not commonplace for women in the region.

Women are a growing presence in the driver's seat these days, but they are still a minority out on the interstates.

Almost 30 percent of thousands of independent haulers are women now, most of them half of husband-wife teams, according to Wheelless. Her own driver training class in Tampa, Fla., might be more typical: Of 60 students, only four were female. But Wheelless said she hasn't really thought much about that. She had her own reasons for enrolling.

"It's always been a fantasy, even when I was little," she said. "It's the only thing I've ever really wanted to do. My husband knows that. I told him, if I can't be a truck driver, I don't wanna be anything."

"Sittin' behind a desk is not my idea of a career," she said. "I've done that, before I got married and after. It's boring."

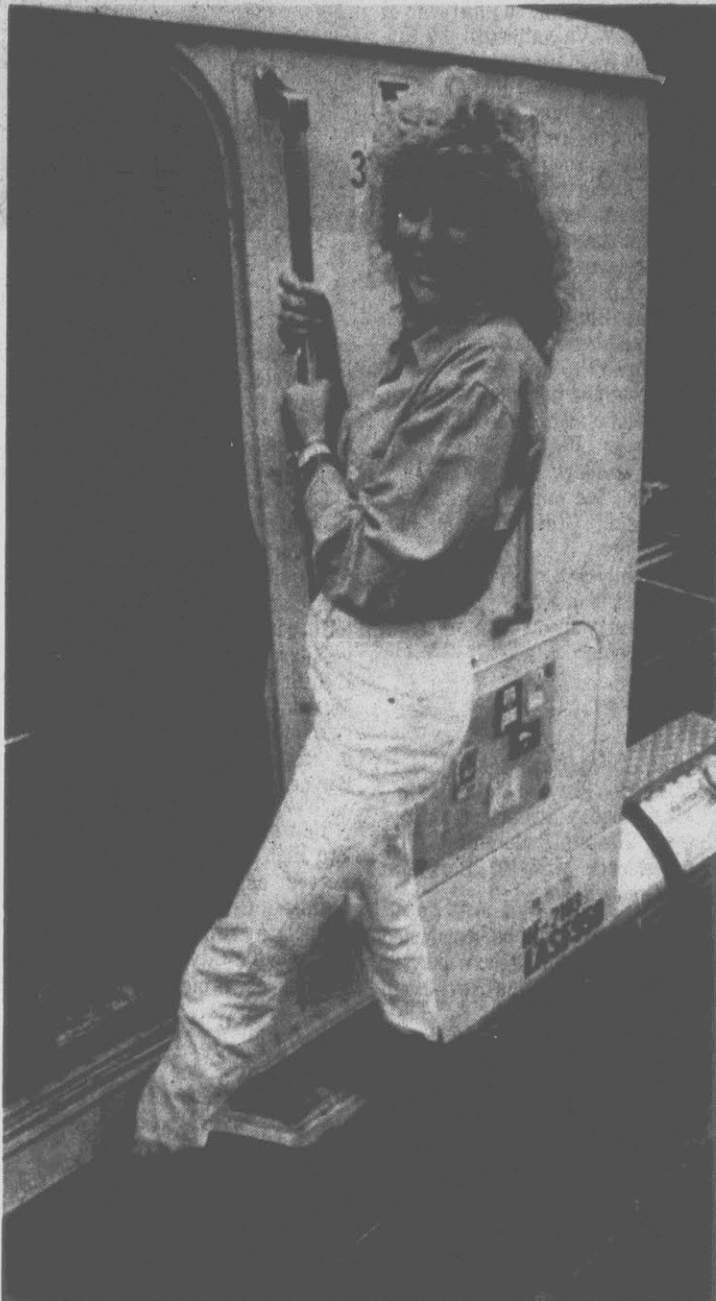

As it turned out, she got her chance to drive by accident in Huntsville.

One day last spring, while her husband was at work and their children were at school, she was sunning herself at their apartment complex's pool. A man and a woman came by and passed out brochures for the United Truck Master School.

She was instantly interested. She called a UTM agent in Decatur, and he encouraged her to write the school. She took the initial instruction at home last fall, studying textbooks and manuals and sending in the mail-order exams. Then, early this April, she went to the Tampa school for an intensive two weeks of instruction on handling the big trucks — gear shifting, braking, backing up, hooking and unhooking trailers, first on a school track, then on the highway.

An 18-wheeler, she soon learned, is every bit as athletic a vehicle to pilot as it looks.

"It's not like it looks on 'The Dukes of Hazzard,'" she said. "They're always difficult, especially the

"KC" ON THE ROAD — Kimberly Wheelless ("KC") from Huntsville, last week took off for North Carolina in an International tractor-trailer as a certified independent woman trucker, one of the few from this area. double-clutching, and it's not an easy ride, either. You're constantly being jarred, bounced up and down, and you constantly have to watch who's around you, and keep the trailer lined up with the tractor — because it's the trailer that really guides the tractor. The trailer is in charge of a truck."

She said she'll consider herself an apprentice for the first few months: She'll learn the rest of the business from her partner, a 25-year highway veteran. Wheelless will begin by spelling him driving — by law, no trucker is to drive more than 10 hours a day — and keeping the log book that every independent operator must keep.

She said the pay is pretty good — most drivers average $400 to $500 per week, and the best get up to $1,200 — and she'll never be away from her family longer than two weeks at a stretch. ("My partner is being really good about that," she adds.)

Eventually, if the business goes well, she will own the rose and purple truck herself, when her partner buys a second one.

She does plan to "go solo" eventually, and she isn't worried about her safety around truck stops, where the business still seems like a man's world.

"I can take care of myself," she said. "Besides, the majority of these people are nice. You just behave yourself — go in, get a cup of coffee and don't ask for trouble, and nine times out of 10 you won't get it."

Nor is she concerned about the attitudes she'll find there.

"Women are good drivers," she said. "The instructors told me at school that the women they train do better jobs. We pay attention more. We're not gonna show out. We're more dedicated — we've gotta prove ourselves more, I guess."

Seal Lips About Vacations

My husband says vacationers' houses are ripped off every summer because too many people broadcast they are leaving. I couldn't agree more. To tell someone you're going on vacation for two weeks is like sending crooks an engraved invitation to come in and take anything they want.

It's like I told him, I didn't tell anyone we were leaving town for two weeks with the exception of my next-door neighbor who comes in to make sure the plants don't die and to turn the porch light on and off each day.

And I'm certainly not stupid enough to let the papers pile up outside the door, so I told our paperboy to hold off on the deliveries. Face it, the more people who know you're leaving ... the more your chances are of being burgled.

As I was saying to the woman in the waiting room where I was making arrangements to board our dog, "You have to make sure the house looks lived in even when you're not there." She told me long grass was a dead giveaway. I hadn't thought of that. If it hadn't been for her, I probably wouldn't have thought to put an ad on the bulletin board in the supermarket for a boy to cut the grass the first two weeks of July.

At Wits End

When I told the postman we were leaving and to hold the mail, he said you couldn't trust anyone to keep a secret. That's why he recommended his nephew to come in and start the car while we were away, and if he couldn't come he'd get one of his friends at the gas station.

My husband asked, "How many people have you told already?"

I told him I hadn't told anyone with the exception of the travel agent where I picked up our tickets and, of course, the dry cleaners who wondered why I was having so many things cleaned, and I may have mentioned it to the woman at the department store where I bought a new piece of luggage, but my lips have been sealed.

Of course, I had to tell the people at the beauty shop where I have my standing appointment. You couldn't let them sit there holding the bag. That's ridiculous. We're all grown people here. And I did give the door key to the water softener man so he could deliver the salt, but he's very quiet. Rarely talks.

My husband took a deep breath as he asked softly, "How many people do you calculate you have told that we are going on vacation?"

"Thirty-five or 40 unless you're counting that nice lady at the bank where I got the traveler's checks, the 7 o'clock class at aerobics, the column I did on security and..."

"What column?" he asked. "Are you saying you mentioned it in a column which reaches..."

"Thirty-one million," I said, "but I didn't tell them where we're going!"

Gift From The Heart Is Best

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR READERS: This Sunday is Father's Day. You're broke? Not to worry. Here's a suggestion for a Father's Day gift that won't cost you a dime, but will probably be the best gift your father has ever received for any occasion.

It doesn't matter if you're 8 years old or 60, if you're lucky enough to have a father, sit down and write him a letter. It doesn't have to be a literary masterpiece; just a few sentences telling him how much he means to you, and why, will do. Of course, if you are in a chatty or sentimental mood, go ahead and express the thoughts you may have found difficult to verbalize. And when you sign it, be sure to add the date. Long after the neckties, shirts, sweaters and wallets are worn and discarded, I'll bet your Father's Day letter will remain — tucked away for safekeeping with the rest of Dad's important papers.

How do I know? Mine were.

DEAR ABBY: Please rerun the enclosed letter so your young readers can see it. It may help them to see the light. — SAVANNAH SENIOR

"DEAR ABBY: My father wrote to you at least 12 years ago, and you put his letter in your column. You printed it twice on request. My father had it framed, and when we brought him here to live with us, he carried it in his hands for fear it might be damaged or lost.

"When he heard his letter had been framed and hung in the chapel of a cemetery, he said, 'What a pity it will be seen only by those for whom it is too late. It would accomplish more on the bulletin boards of high schools and colleges.'

"Abby, he made me promise that after he died I would write to you and ask you to run it again.

"He died one week ago at age 72. Please print it once more for my beloved father. — FAITHFUL READER

"DEAR READER: The letter that meant so much to your father has been requested more than any other. And here it is:

"DEAR ABBY: I am the most heartbroken person on earth. I always found time to go everywhere else but to see my old, gray-haired parents. They sat home alone, loving me just the same.

"It is too late now to give them those few hours of happiness I was too selfish and too busy to give, and now when I go to visit their graves and look at the green grass above them, I wonder if God will ever forgive me for the heartaches I must have caused them.

"I pray that you will print this, Abby, to tell those who still have their parents to visit them and show their love and respect while there is still time. For it is later than you think. — TOO LATE

DEAR ABBY: I can relate to the wife who's approaching 40 and announced to her husband: ("Frustrated in Downers Grove") that she had lost all interest in sex. "Frustrated" wants to know why. Let's give him a few reasons:

1. Does he bathe regularly?
2. Does his breath turn her off?
3. Does he wear clean clothes?
4. Does he consider her needs when having sexual relations?
5. Does he consider her needs when NOT having sexual relations?
6. Does he stimulate her desire for sex with "I love you," "You are wonderful," "You are all I need," before and after sex?
7. Does he remember special occasions?
8. Does he prevent her life from becoming a bore?
9. Does he share the problems that she has with the kids?
10. Does he consider her a "lovmate," not just a housekeeper?

If he will take a look at himself, I'm sure he can find plenty of love and sex at home. — SEX AT HOME AT 65 (For Abby's booklet, "What Every Teen-Ager Ought to Know," send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Mob Families Rounded Up MIAMI (AP) — Federal agents moved in today on suspected South Florida members of major organized crime families, and officials said 50 people could be arrested before an extensive undercover investigation comes to a close.

Federal officials said seven people had been arrested by early today as a result of Operation Cherokee.

"Operation Cherokee involved the penetration by undercover detectives of groups tied to the Gambino, Genovese and Bufalino crime families, all of whom operated under the fictitious name of Cherokee Enterprises," said George Crollius, a spokesman for the Broward County Sheriff's Department.

"Their activities included narcotics violations, infiltration of legitimate businesses, hidden business interests, skimming, extortion, solicitation for homicide, firearms violations and manufacturing of silencers."

Crollius said 14 arrests were expected today.

"This is only the first phase of an ongoing effort and some 50 additional organized crime figures operating in South Florida have been targeted for future arrests," said Broward County Sheriff Nick Navarro.

Crollius said the suspects were involved in conspiracies from South Florida into New York State, Massachusetts, Nevada and Pennsylvania.

Operation Cherokee was a cooperative effort against organized crime organizations in South Florida involving the FBI, the Drug Enforcement Administration, the U.S. attorney's strike force, the U.S. Secret Service, the Florida Department of Law Enforcement, the state Division of Alcohol and Tobacco, with assistance from Broward's Metropolitan Intelligence Unit.

FBI spokesman Paul Miller said the investigation resulted in federal indictments being returned in Fort Lauderdale.

Miller said those arrested were taken to the FBI office in North Miami Beach.

24 Killed As Ferry Sinks

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — A sightseeing boat carrying 81 people caught fire and sank off South Korea's southern coast today. The navy helped rescue 40 people, but officials said 24 others died and 17 were missing.

The Yonhap News Agency said 28 of those rescued suffered serious burns.

The agency said many of those aboard the vessel were women and elderly people. It said some jumped overboard, but many others, who apparently could not swim, stayed aboard and were burned or went down with the stricken vessel.

Yonhap said the crew members tried to put out the blaze with fire extinguishers, but they did not work and there was panic when passengers tried to reach life jackets that were roped together at the ceiling of the cabins.

Navy officials said the fire broke out in the engine room of the 25-ton Kukdong-ho as it was returning from an island off Koje, 170 miles south of Seoul. The ship quickly sank, they said.

The navy officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said a preliminary investigation indicated the fire began when an engine overheated.

Yonhap said six naval and maritime police boats joined in the rescue operation, which was expected to continue through the night.

News reports said all the passengers aboard the sightseeing boat were Koreans, mostly tourists from the southern part of the peninsula. There were three crew members and 78 passengers, the reports said.

Economist Walter Heller Dies At 71

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Walter Heller, an economic adviser to Presidents Kennedy and Johnson, has died of a heart attack in Washington state, his daughter said today.

Heller, 71, died Monday night while visiting relatives in the Seattle area, said his daughter, Kaaren Davis.

Heller was chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers from 1961-64, and served as a consultant to Johnson until the end of the Democrat's administration.

He was a governor of the Federal Reserve Board, and most recently was professor emeritus at the University of Minnesota.

Heller advocated deficit spending to spur economic growth and supported federal revenue sharing with states. His writings include "Monetary vs. Fiscal Policy," written with Milton Friedman in 1969, and "The Economy" in 1976.

At the time of his departure from the Council of Economic Advisers in 1964, Heller was regarded as one of the most influential economists in history, due to his close relationships to Kennedy and Johnson.

Heller persuaded Kennedy to push for an unprecedented tax cut. Under Johnson, Congress passed a $14 million income tax cut known as the "Great Tax Cut of 1964." The cut, championed by Heller, was credited with stimulating the economy.

Born in Buffalo, N.Y., in 1915, Heller graduated from Oberlin College and received advanced degrees from the University of Wisconsin.

Weinberger Says U.S. Ships Can Use Force In Gulf Duty

By JIM DRINKARD
 Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger told Congress today the U.S. vessels in the Persian Gulf protecting Kuwaiti tankers will be authorized to use force "in the face of attack or hostile intent indicating imminent attack."

Weinberger maintained that risks to U.S. naval forces from protecting the reflagged vessels are "moderate."

"There are some risks, particularly from unconventional threats, such as Iranian terrorism or sabotage," he said.

Weinberger publicly released an unclassified version of an administration proposal sent to Capitol Hill late Monday describing plans to provide Navy protection to 11 Kuwaiti oil tankers which are being allowed to fly U.S. flags.

Presenting the report in a closed session of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, Weinberger defended the administration's gulf policy and called the decision to reflag the Kuwaiti tankers and defend them from possible Iranian attack "a limited response to a very real threat."

He said U.S. forces in the region will be bolstered by the addition of three vessels outfitted to meet potential sea, air and land-based missile threats. They will be operating under orders to counter force with force "in the face of attack or hostile intent indicating imminent attack," he told the committee.

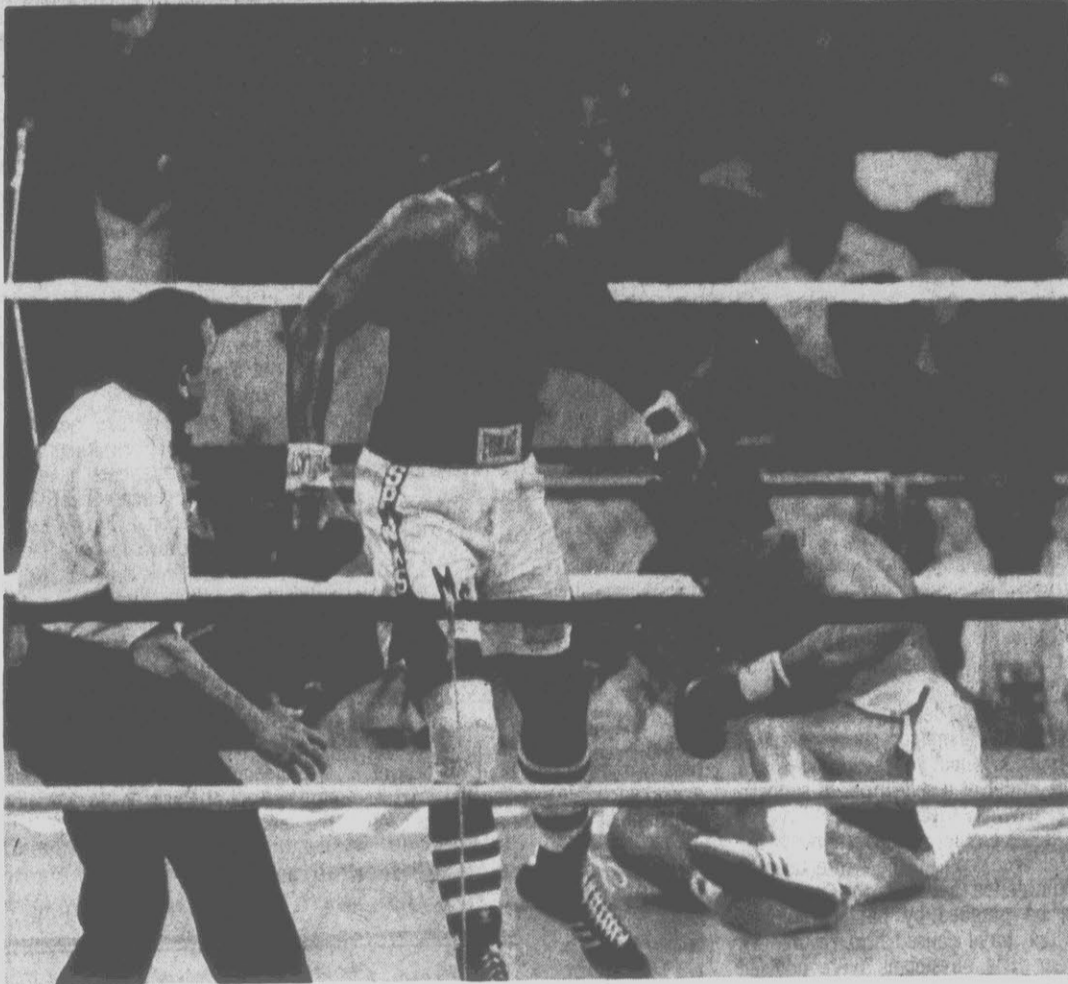

"Given the stakes and the consequences, a retreat by the United States now would have a profoundly negative effect," he said, one that would raise questions about U.S. commitments to gulf states and signal the Soviet Union that the United States is no longer serious about protecting its interests in the region.

He said President Reagan has emphasized the need for careful military planning and preparation and adequate cooperation from allies, as well as full consultation with Congress in implementing the protection plan.

"We understand the risks involved in our strategy, particularly the protection of shipping arrangements with Kuwait. But we are convinced that the risks of alternative courses of action or inaction are greater — with Iran stepping up its intimidation of (gulf) states, conducting attacks on non-belligerent shipping, and possibly feeling emboldened to use the Silkwood missile..." Weinberger said in the report.

Rep. William Broomfield, R-Mich., senior Republican on the panel, said he went into the session deeply anxious about the administration's decisions.

Cooney Goes Down

Spinks Pounds Cooney To Canvas In 5th; Must Now Wait For New Title Bout

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Michael Spinks answered questions about his credentials as a heavyweight the best way any heavyweight can — with power punching against the power puncher of yesterday. Now he must do it again against the power puncher of today.

If he succeeds in that, there will be no disputing his claim as world champion.

Mike Tyson owns the World Boxing Association and World Boxing Council titles. Spinks has only his own claim to the title after a very impressive beating of favored Gerry Cooney on Monday night.

Spinks knocked down Cooney twice before stopping him in the fifth round. For Spinks, the first light heavyweight champion ever to move up and take the heavyweight crown, it matched the kind of punching power more associated with Tyson — and, for that matter, the reluctant warrior Cooney.

Spinks, 30, landed 182 of 278 punches, including a devastating 84 of 101 in the fifth round. He staggered Cooney with a vicious right hand after Cooney missed a looping left hook. And Spinks kept battering the rusty Cooney, who had fought only seven rounds in three fights in five years, with a series of rights and some hard lefts. Twice, Cooney went down from rights; twice he got up only to find Spinks waiting to hit him some more.

When Spinks landed 15 consecutive punches to the head, Cooney's legs sagged and referee Frank Cappuccino stopped it.

"I slammed him with a lot of rights to the side of the head," Spinks said. He landed so many punches that even he wasn't sure which ones did the damage.

"I think it was a left hook or a right outside hook that first dazed him. I shook him up with jabs or the outside right hands or straight rights. I was hitting him hard, but I was surprised he went down."

In his two IBF title fights with Larry Holmes, Spinks showed little power. As a light heavyweight, he had 19 knockouts, but the question was, could he hit like a heavyweight? Ask Cooney, when and if he decides to talk about it.

"I felt, with my jab and hitting off my jab, I knew I could get him," Spinks said. "It was working very good. I had a sure shot throughout the fight."

Spinks will be anything but a sure shot against Tyson, who he was accused of ducking to fight Cooney. Now Spinks will have to wait for Tyson, and it probably will be at least a year.

Tyson is committed to fighting International Boxing Federation champion Tony Tucker, who Spinks refused to meet en route to the heavyweight unification showdown against Tyson. That led the IBF to strip Spinks of the title. Tyson also has two other bouts planned, starting in the fall with 1984 Olympian Tyrell Biggs.

"It's important for us to fight him," Spinks said of the 20-year-old Tyson. "I don't give away any fight plans. I'll fight like I fight everybody else — with all my heart and guts."

Spinks said Cooney showed those same qualities.

"Gerry came to fight," he said. "He said once he got in the ring, he'd bring his all. I tip my hat to him. Gerry has nothing to be ashamed of. He can walk with his head high. He didn't lose to just anybody."

Cooney, who was the Invisible Man at a post-fight news conference, was, according to Spinks, fighting the Invisible Man.

"I didn't feel I just wanted to run around the ring," Spinks said. "I wanted to be there and not be there. When he punched, I wanted to be gone. I had to make Gerry miss."

Which he did. Cooney connected on only 68 of 220 punches, including just five of 26 in the final round.

Cooney never could trap Spinks on the ropes or in the corner. Cooney did land some good lefts in the third round, but couldn't take advantage of a cut over Spinks' right eye.

It was Spinks who did the punishing.

"I fought smart," he said. "The ropes were really the place he wanted me to be. He cut the ring on me good, but he couldn't do what he wanted with it."

"It took me a long time to map out how I would fight Gerry. I didn't watch one film. I knew I wouldn't get much out of seeing all those knockouts. It would frighten me a little bit."

But Spinks wasn't being overly defensive. In fact, he considered it critical that he, the boxer, be the aggressor, the puncher.

"I wasn't thinking decision," he said.

Cooney was "disgusted and disappointed," with his performance, according to spokesman Rich Rose. After a few fights since losing to Holmes in a WBC title bout in 1982 and after such a weak showing against Spinks, Cooney isn't likely to be back in the picture — or the ring.

Which seems to leave Spinks and Tyson. Kevin Rooney, Tyson's trainer, has no problem with that matchup.

"Mike Tyson," Rooney said, "would eat this guy up."

Pitt Legion Evens Mark In 16-9 Romp By Kinston

KINSTON — David Daniels slammed three hits — two of them triples — to help pace Pitt County's American Legion baseball team to a 16-9 romp over Kinston's Post 43 Monday night.

The victory allowed Pitt to even up its record on the young and crowded season. Pitt lost its first two games after coming back from most of its players being involved in state high school playoff action, but has won its last two — both against Kinston.

Pitt jumped ahead in the first inning of the game, scoring two runs. Eric Jarman walked with two outs and stole second — the first of three successful attempts on the evening. He scored when Daniels singled, advancing on the relay home. Jason Galloway followed with a hit, driving in Daniels.

But Kinston came right back to score three times and take the lead. With one out, Neal Outlaw walked and Billy Burns singled. Both advanced on a passed ball and Felton Mason grounded out, scoring Outlaw. Brian Lang reached on an error which plated Burns, and he came around when Neal Russell also reached on an error for a 3-2 lead.

Pitt quickly regained the lead, however, scoring four times in the second inning — never to trail again. With one out, Tim Clark singled and Ty Little got a hit. Axel Smith walked to load the bases and Hunter Clark singled in Tim Clark. Jarman grounded out, driving in Little with the go-ahead run. Daniels followed with a triple to score both Smith and Hunter Clark for a 6-3 lead.

Pitt picked up four more in the third. Bronswell Patrick reached on an error and stole second and third. Tom Moyer walked and stole second. Tim Clark singled to drive in Patrick and Little followed with a hit, scoring Moyer. Smith singled, driving in Tim Clark, and Hunter Clark reached on a fielder's choice. Jarman grounded out, driving in Little.

That made it 10-3.

Kinston came back in the fifth to score five times and cut the margin to 10-8, but Pitt County added two more in the seventh. Kinston got one in the bottom of the seventh, but Pitt picked up three more in the eighth and one in the ninth to complete the rout.

Pitching table with columns: Name, ip, h, r, e, r, bb, so. Rows include Pitt County, Wilder, Patrick, Kinston, Horn, Hamm, Copeland, and Hinson.

Hamm pitched to five batters in the third inning; Copeland pitched to four batters in the eighth inning.
WP—Wilder, Copeland; PB—Smith, Cauley; Save—Patrick.

Ty Little had four hits to lead the hitting for Pitt, while Hunter Clark, Galloway, Moyer and Tim Clark each added two to go with Daniels' three.

Burns led Kinston with three while Neal Russell and Rick Killinger each picked up two.

Pitt County returns home tonight to play host to Wilson, when will meet Snow Hill on Wednesday, also at home. Both games will begin at 8 p.m.

Tyson Still Said Champ

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

Detroit's Walt Terrell got the Toronto batters to hit the ball at his fielders. Jimmy Key did the same thing to the Detroit batters, but got different results.

Alan Trammell, leading the American League with a .357 average, hit a line drive that Blue Jays right fielder Jesse Barfield did not see Monday night, and it went for a fourth-inning triple that gave Detroit a 2-1 victory in Toronto.

"I've never seen it happen before," said Key, who lost despite pitching a four-hitter.

Terrell and two relievers combined on a five-hitter for the Tigers in a game between two of the hottest teams in the American League East.

Detroit has won four in a row and 22 of its last 30 games. Toronto has lost two straight after a team-record 11-game winning streak.

In other games, New York routed Baltimore 9-2, Texas defeated California 9-7, Seattle trounced Chicago 8-2, Minnesota downed Milwaukee 5-0 and Oakland got past Kansas City 7-6.

The Tigers and Blue Jays were scoreless in the fourth inning with Bill Madlock on first base and one out. Trammell then hit a low liner to right, and Barfield lost the ball in the setting sun and stood with his arms up in the air as the ball rolled to the wall for a triple. Trammell scored when Larry Herndon hit a sacrifice fly.

"I just never saw the ball," said Barfield, a Gold Glove outfielder. "If the ball doesn't get above the stands here you just don't have a chance. If it had been another few feet in my direction, it would have killed me. I just never saw it. If I had seen the ball I would have caught it."

Terrell, 5-6, gave up four hits in 7 2-3 innings. He came out after Rick Leach doubled in the eighth and Tony Fernandez hit a one-out sacrifice fly.

Willie Hernandez got the final out in the eighth and Eric King pitched the ninth for his fourth save.

"I did nothing different," Terrell said. "I just threw it in there and they were hitting it at our guys. I have to keep the ball down and tonight I kept it down and had good control."

Key, 8-4, struck out six and walked none.

"It was one of those games where you figured a big break was going to decide it and we never got it," Key said.

Twins 5, Brewers 0
Bert Blyleven pitched a four-hitter for his 55th career shutout and Minnesota won in Milwaukee.

Blyleven, 5-5, did not allow a home run for the first time in 21 starts. He extended his own team record with his 29th shutout for the Twins. Blyleven struck out six and walked two.

Randy Bush hit a three-run homer in the fourth off Bill Wegman, 5-6. Wegman gave up 11 hits in a complete game.

Athletics 7, Royals 6

Tony Phillips hit a two-run homer in the top of the ninth that put Oakland ahead and right fielder Mike Davis preserved the lead by throwing out Kansas City's Danny Tartabull at the plate in the bottom of the ninth.

After Kevin Seitzer's RBI single gave the host Royals a 6-5 lead in the eighth, Phillips connected for his seventh home run of the season against Steve Farr, 2-2.

Davis threw out Tartabull, who tried to score on Bo Jackson's one-out single.

Dave Leiper, 2-0, got the victory and Jay Howell got his 13th save.

Jackson hit his 13th homer, Tartabull and Steve Balboni homered for Kansas City. Rookie Mark McGwire hit his 21st homer and Carney Lansford also homered for the Athletics.

Rangers 9, Angels 7

Pete Incaviglia, who had struck out six straight times, homered in his first two at-bats and powered Texas over California.

Ask some fans who deserves the title, and they'll say Spinks "because he's fought better opposition than Tyson," said Harry Dubin of Princeton.

But a bout between the two heavyweights would be a different story:

"If the two of them fight, I'd have to go with Tyson because he's such a tremendous punching power," Dubin said.

Still, after watching Spinks declared the winner over Cooney in just five rounds, some in the Convention Center stands were impressed.

In many minds, Spinks has earned the title. He won a gold medal in the 1976 Olympic games and is undefeated in 10 years as a pro. But the International Boxing Federation recently stripped him of his heavyweight title because he refused to fight Tony Tucker, whom he did not consider enough of a challenge.

"Spinks is the champ," said Lou DiFrancesco of Eastchester, N.Y. "They took the title away from him."

And in some fans' minds, it didn't matter that the Spinks-Cooney fight was not sanctioned as a title bout.

Joe DiMarino of Wilmington, Del., said, "That's just boxing politics."

Scott 'K'O's Astros For Reds

By BRIAN TRUSDELL
Associated Press Writer
Mike Scott's memory must be failing him.

With a no-hitter and a Cy Young Award at the end of last season and an 8-3 start already this year, his performance Monday night against Cincinnati is the one that sticks out.

"It's the best I can remember pitching in a while," said Scott, who tied a career high with 14 strikeouts in a 4-0 Houston victory. "I wasn't getting behind the hitters."

In other games in the National League, it was Philadelphia 3, Chicago 2; Pittsburgh 3, St. Louis 1; and Montreal 4, New York 0.

Scott didn't walk one batter and allowed seven hits before Hal Lanier brought in Dave Smith in the ninth.

"Hal made a good move in calling for Smitty before he even talked to me because I would have probably tried to talk him out of it," Scott said.

Smith entered after Bo Diaz led off the ninth, reaching base on Terry Puhl's error. He then struck out three straight.

"I felt good from the first inning on," Scott said. "I had my good stuff tonight and when you have your good stuff, you should win the game."

Scott, who pitched a no-hitter in a 2-0 victory over the San Francisco Giants on Sept. 25 to clinch the NL West, has had good stuff much of this season.

His 14 strikeouts ties him with Seattle's Mark Langston for the major league lead with 116.

The 32-year-old right-hander struck out 14 on Sept. 14, 1986, in a 3-2 loss against San Diego and repeated the feat on Oct. 8 in Game 1 of the National League playoffs, beating the New York Mets 1-0.

"We had two guys who got the 'Golden Sombra' tonight," Reds Manager Pete Rose said. "You know what the Golden Sombra is don't you? It's the hat trick plus one. Our No. 1 and No. 8 hitters struck out four times each."

Ron Oester and Tracy Jones struck out three times each against Scott and once more to Smith.

Bill Doran, who was 2-for-26, homered off Bill Gullickson, 7-4, in the sixth for Houston's first run.

The Astros scored again in the seventh, off Frank Williams.

Scott hit a fielder's choice grounder to shortstop Kurt Stillwell, who stepped on second to force Dickie Thon but tossed it wide of first allowing Scott to go to second. He later scored on Billy Hatcher's single to left field.

Glenn Davis singled in the eighth and was followed by a triple Kevin Bass and Ronn Reynolds' sacrifice fly.

Expos 4, Mets 0

Dennis Martinez allowed only three hits and Dwight Gooden lost for the first time since returning from drug rehabilitation.

Martinez, 1-0, struck out six and walked three in his first complete game of the season. Martinez did not allow a New York runner past second base.

Gooden, 2-1, allowed seven hits and four runs in seven innings.

Tim Wallach, who was 3-for-26 against Gooden in his career before the game, had a double, single and walk, scoring a run and driving in one.

Pirates 3, Cardinals 1

Mike Dunne pitched a three-hitter in his third major league appearance and Mike LaValliere and Andy Van Slyke hit RBI doubles to end St. Louis' four-game winning streak.

Dunne, who was traded along with LaValliere and Van Slyke to Pittsburgh from the Cardinals before the season, struck out four and walked seven.

Mike Diaz hit his 10th homer in the eighth for Pittsburgh's final run.

Phillies 3, Cubs 2

Steve Bedrosian pitched the ninth inning to earn his National League record ninth consecutive save, handing the Cubs their fifth straight loss.

Glenn Wilson scored from third on

Lee Smith's ninth-inning wild pitch after Juan Samuel had apparently scored the lead run in the eighth on Von Hayes' double but was ruled out on an appeal play for not touching home plate.

Smith, 2-4, threw the wild pitch with pinch batter Rick Schu at bat.

Kent Tekulve, 2-2, was the winner and Steve Bedrosian, who pitched the ninth inning, picked up his 16th save.

Back Pains Halt McEnroe

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Three-time champion John McEnroe will skip Wimbledon this year because of a persistent back ailment.

"There is no reason for me to come to Wimbledon unless I'm 100 percent fit," McEnroe said in a telex Monday to officials at the All-England Club. "I have not been able to train since I returned from Paris and I'm tired of walking onto the court wondering whether I shall be able to give it my best effort."

McEnroe complained of injuries when he walked off the court in the final of the World Team Cup at Dusseldorf, West Germany, last month. Two days later at Paris, he was eliminated in the first round of the French Open by unseeded Horacio de la Pena of Argentina.

In his last Grand Slam tournament before Paris — last year's U.S. Open — he was upset in the first round by Paul Annacone.

Dr. Michael Cindrich, a New York chiropractor who has been treating McEnroe, as has his wife, Debra Keimman-Cindrich, told the New York Times Monday that he wasn't surprised by McEnroe's decision.

"He would not be breezing through Wimbledon in perfect physical health," Cindrich said. "And there was a chance of reinjury.... He loves to play well at Wimbledon, and it is difficult to do that while nursing an injury."

Cindrich described the problem as a sprained weight-bearing ligament in the lower back.

"It has begun manifesting itself in other places — the calves, ankles, hips," Cindrich told the Times. "The nature of the sport is giving him the problems. He's got to take it easy. The back has got to have some time to heal."

In his last appearance at Wimbledon, McEnroe lost 6-2, 6-2, 6-4 in the 1985 quarterfinals to American Kevin Curren.

The left-hander, who also has won the U.S. Open four times, skipped Wimbledon last year when he was in the midst of a self-imposed sabbatical of nearly seven months.

Peter Lawler, a representative for McEnroe, said in the same telex to Wimbledon that McEnroe "continues to be plagued by back problems, which have caused him trouble all year. His physicians have advised him to take at least four more weeks off."

McEnroe is expected to return in the United States' Davis Cup matches against West Germany at Hartford, Conn., July 24-26.

Wimbledon officials said that, while McEnroe's withdrawal would not affect attendance, his absence would be a loss.

"All things being equal, one would like to see all the top players participating," said Chris Gorringer, chief executive of the All-England Club. "But they've got to be fit. Otherwise, there's no sense in them sacrificing themselves in any tournament."

The announcement that McEnroe would miss the prestigious grasscourt tournament for the second straight year came as organizers were announcing the seedings for the tournament, to be held June 22-July 5.

Defending champions Boris Becker of West Germany and Martina Navratilova of Fort Worth, Texas, were made the top seeds, Navratilova as expected and Becker in a surprise.

Becker is ranked second in the world behind Czechoslovakia's Ivan Lendl, but has won Wimbledon the past two years and is at his best on grass courts. He won the Stella Artois tournament on grass at Queens Club on Monday, beating American Jimmy Connors 6-7, 6-3, 6-4. Connors, a two-time Wimbledon winner, is seeded seventh.

Although seedings are normally done on computer rankings, the Grand Slam tournaments have the authorization to change them. Two years ago, when Chris Evert defeated Navratilova in the French Open final and took over the No. 1 computer ranking, Wimbledon made Navratilova and Evert co-No. 1 seeds.

Lendl and West Germany's Steffi Graf, the men's and women's champions at the French Open earlier this month, were seeded second at Wimbledon. Mats Wilander, runner-up to Lendl at Paris, is No. 3 among the men.

Woody Peele

The North Carolina High School Athletic Association has announced a couple of new rules for the coming 1987-88 sports season that will make for a lot of changes in the sports world.

First off, just about everyone now knows, that the three-point goal will become a part of both boys' and girls' basketball this winter. The rule has been adopted by the National Federation, of which North Carolina is a member.

The same distance as now used by the NCAA for colleges will be used, 19 feet, 6 inches from the center of the basket — roughly equivalent to the distance from the basket to the top of the key.

How much of a difference this will make in how the game is played is still to be seen. It is not that difficult a shot for many boys who play the guard position, but it is somewhat more difficult for the girls.

However, it should prove to be a good tool for collegiate coaches looking for good three-point shooters for their teams.

And with the three-point goal in, we must wonder how long it will be before the time clock flows. We suspect it will come in the next four years.

The other big change in the rules will come in the spring sports. Until this time, spring sports could begin after the first of March and many baseball, softball and tennis teams were getting their action underway by scheduling games at that time.

Many too, were scheduling games for them, then postponing them until a later date. The old rule allowed no more than two scheduled games a week, but a third game could be played, if postponed. Some coaches used that "postponed game" rule to get around the three-per-week rule by never planning to play those early games when they were scheduled.

But now, the state has revised the rule to allow up to three games a week to be scheduled, with that also as the limit per week. However, play will not begin until March 15, which allows most of the winter sports championships to be concluded before spring sports begin.

Wrestling will have a change coming up this winter, too. New weight classifications, which would have been mandatory a year from now, will come into use this year. The new weight classes are 103, 112, 119, 125, 130, 135, 140, 145, 152, 160, 171, 189, and 275. There is no change in the number of weights, just their limits. And, in a departure from the past, there will be no growth allowances. Until now, each weight added on a pound or two on two specified occasions during the year. That will be no more.

And two Pitt County athletes were honored as Players of the Year in their sports by the NCHSAA. Leisa Lang of Farmville Central was named as the 2-A basketball player of the year, while Trelaney Boyd of D.H. Conley was honored as the 3-A volleyball player of the year.

And Bud Phillips, athletic director at Rose for the past 17 years, was named as the athletic director of the year by the state.

The state will again sanction championships in 21 different sports this coming year. They include, for fall: women's golf, women's volleyball, women's tennis, men's and women's cross country, men's soccer, and football; for winter, men's and women's indoor track, wrestling, men's and women's swimming and diving, and men's and women's basketball; for spring, women's soccer, men's and women's track, men's tennis, men's golf, women's softball, and baseball.

Finally, the state 4-A football championships may become another fixture in Chapel Hill — where many of the NCHSAA championships are already played. There will probably be a two-year test of playing the championship game in Kenan Stadium starting this fall. All eight of the basketball titles (four men's and four women's) are now played in Chapel Hill, along with men's and women's golf, volleyball, men's and women's tennis, men's and women's indoor track, 3-A wrestling, men's and women's swimming, and men's track.

Chicod 13
Bethel 12

CHICOD — Chicod rallied for five runs in the bottom of the seventh to take a 13-12 win over Bethel in Pitt County Babe Ruth baseball action Monday.

Brent Elks keyed the rally, lashing a two-run double that gave Chicod the come from behind win.

Howard Jackson was the winning pitcher, scattering three hits in relief to get the win.

Chicod was led by Stuart Roach with three hits while Paul Jackson and Elks added two hits apiece.

Bethel was led by David Rhodes and Larry Hines with two hits apiece.

Babe Ruth

Coca-Cola 11
Everette's 0

Walter Gatlin tossed a no-hitter to lead Coca-Cola to an 11-0 win over Everette's in a Babe Ruth League baseball game Monday.

Gatlin recorded seven strikeouts and got support from teammates Maurice Hines and Joe Norris with two hits apiece.

Coke pushed across one run in the first, three in the second and six more in the fifth before finishing off with two in the fourth.

Hines keyed the third with a RBI single.

Brown & Wood 10
Computerland 6

Brown & Wood pushed across four runs in the bottom of the sixth to come from behind to defeat Computerland, 10-6, in Babe Ruth League baseball action Monday.

Computerland pushed out to a 6-5 lead after five innings but with one out in the bottom of the sixth, Heath Clark reached on a walk and Alphonso Freeman singled to put two men on. Clark later came home on a wild pitch to tie the game. Grant Harmon then doubled in Freeman to put Brown & Wood up, 7-6.

Aaron Tschetter drew a walk and then he and Harmon came home on Rodney Williams' two-RBI double.

Clark went 3-3 to lead Brown & Wood. Harmon, Freeman and Williams added two hits apiece.

Drew Johnson and Shon Gay had two hits apiece to lead Computerland.

Little League

Moose 4
Pepsi-Cola 3

Moose took advantage of three errors in the sixth inning to score a come-from-behind, 4-3, win over Pepsi-Cola in a Tar Heel Little League baseball game Monday.

Pepsi led 3-1 after five innings of play before Moose pushed across three runs in the top of the sixth.

With one out in the top of the sixth, Jason Brulet started things off with a walk. One out later, Blair Warren also walked. Michael Howard followed that with a single.

Brulet, Warren and Howard then all came home on consecutive errors to give Moose the win.

Howard had two hits to lead Moose.

Optimist 15
Jaycees 11

Jonathan Clark and Dyrnon Langley had three hits apiece to lead Optimist to a 15-11 win over the Jaycees in a North State Little League baseball game Monday.

Optimist pushed across nine runs in the opening inning, keyed by Kevin Kirkland's two-run double and RBI singles by Clark, Aaron Dixon, Sean Gordon and Mike Beland, along with another RBI from Gordon.

The Jaycees countered with two runs in the first and two in the second to draw back within 9-4.

Optimist scored two runs in the third but the Jaycees pushed across four runs in the bottom of the inning to make it 11-8. That was as close as they would get.

Daryl Powell and Brad Williams added two hits apiece for the Optimists.

Brandon Moore had three hits to lead the Jaycees. Bryan Hill and Jen McAllister added two hits apiece.

Incaviglia hit a two-run homer during a four-run first inning and connected for a solo shot, his 15th, in the third. Incaviglia and Pete O'Brien, who homered in the first and had an RBI double in the third, had three hits apiece.

Reliever Jeff Russell, 1-1, held the host Angels to one run in 5 1-3 innings. Chuck Finley, 0-3, took the loss.

Doug DeCinces hit a three-run homer for the Angels.

Yankees 9, Orioles 2

Mike Pagliarulo drove home four runs, three with a double in the sixth inning, and Tommy John won again as New York beat visiting Baltimore. The Orioles have lost 11 of their last 12 games.

John, 7-2, gave up two runs on seven hits in 5 1-3 innings before leaving with a cramp in his left calf. Pat Clements finished with two-hit relief for his second save.

Eric Bell, 5-5, gave up five runs and left in the fourth.

Pagliarulo, who had an RBI groundout in the second, capped a four-run sixth with his bases-loaded double that made it 9-2.

Mariners 8, White Sox 2

Lee Guetterman and Jerry Reed combined on a five-hitter and Domingo Ramos hit a three-run, inside-the-park homer that helped Seattle over Chicago.

Guetterman, 4-0, yielded two runs on four hits in 5 2-3 innings. Reed pitched one-hit relief for his first save.

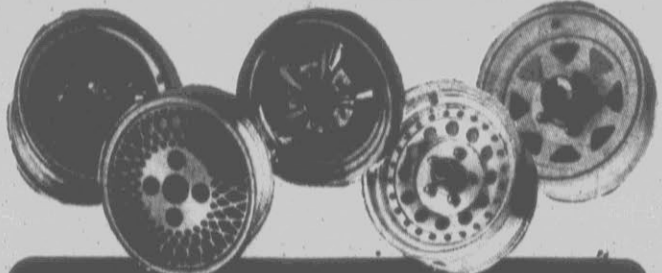

John Christensen hit a two-run homer and Phil Bradley and Mickey Brantley also connected for the host Mariners.

Ramos' sixth-inning homer came on a ball that caused right fielder Ivan Calderon and center fielder Ken Williams to collide.

Open Could Be Won With Illegal Clubs

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — There's a good chance that the man who wins the U.S. Open this week will be playing with clubs likely to be declared illegal.

Tom Watson estimates as many as 90 percent of golf's touring pros carry at least one or two clubs with the controversial "box" or "square" grooves.

A spokesman for the U.S. Golf Association, John Morris, said the clubs — more specifically a method of measuring grooves on these clubs — will be considered at a U.S.G.A.

executive committee meeting early next week.

"If the proposed method is approved, some of the clubs — specifically the Ping I-2 — will not conform to the Rules of Golf," Morris said. Any such ruling, however, will not be retroactive and will not affect players in the 1987 Open.

The "square-grooved" clubs, along with the one-piece ball, represent the "greatest change in golf equipment since the shift from hickory to steel shafts" a half-century ago, Watson said.

Both Watson, a five-time British Open champion and once the leading player in the game, and Jack Nicklaus point to the equipment change as a principal reason for the exceptionally low scoring produced on the PGA tour this year.

And both object to the phenomena. "Maybe it is progress," Watson acknowledged.

"But there has to be a time to say, 'no more.'"

"The USGA has to do something. We can't let the integrity of the game be destroyed," Watson said.

The controversial clubs, now produced by most major manufacturers of golf equipment, first came on the market about two years ago.

Instead of the traditional "V" shaped grooves, these clubs contain square or box-shaped grooves which impart a greater spin to the ball and allow the player to exert greater control over his shots, particularly out of the rough in wet conditions.

"You can get in the rough and stop the ball on the green. Shot-making is reduced," Watson said.

"You spend years, hitting thousands of balls, learning to play different shots under different conditions. Now, someone comes along and can hit the same shot immediately just because of his equipment."

"I don't like it."

"It's making an ordinary golfer a good golfer and that's what the manufacturer wants. Did you ever hear an ad that didn't say it would make you hit it longer and straighter?"

Nicklaus agreed.

"It's taking shot-making out of the game," he said.

And that deeply concerns the USGA, the spokesman said.

"We believe that a player should not have an advantage because of equipment. It is a consistent policy. A player should win on the basis of skill, not equipment, not technology," Morris said.

Various tests of the clubs were made in USGA laboratories, Morris said, "and we went down to Florida and had Greg Norman try the clubs."

"It makes a great deal of difference," Norman said. "You can put spin on the ball you never could before."

Norman, Nicklaus and Watson all agreed that the clubs greatly enhance the performance of weekend amateur players and suggested that perhaps those players should be allowed to continue to use them.

All agreed, however, that they should not be allowed in professional tournament golf.

"Maybe we should have a (PGA) tour rule," Watson said.

"As much as he wants to dominate golf (PGA tour Commissioner Deane) Beman is allowing the USGA and the R and A (Royal and Ancient of Britain) to take the lead in this. He's probably right to do so," Nicklaus said.

"I wish the players could change the rules for the PGA tour," he said.

Lakers, Fans To Celebrate With Downtown Parade

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Showtime moves from Forum in nearby Inglewood to downtown Los Angeles as the Los Angeles Lakers and their fans celebrated the team's fourth NBA championship of the 1980s.

A parade to honor the Lakers was scheduled today through downtown, ending on the steps of City Hall, with Mayor Tom Bradley and other dignitaries speaking to the team and its fans.

After that, a rally was planned in the Forum parking lot.

"This is a great victory," Bradley said Monday. "It is a great day for the city of Los Angeles. This Laker team is one of the best ever, and I was so confident they'd bring home the world championship that I had my staff begin planning for our traditional Laker Day celebration three weeks ago."

The Lakers made sure there would be a Laker Day celebration by beating the Boston Celtics 106-93 on Sunday, giving the Lakers the best-of-seven NBA championship series four games to two.

By winning the title, the Lakers saw to it that Bradley won a bet with Boston Mayor Ray Flynn. Bradley put up two boxes of oranges against two pots of Boston baked beans. Mayoral spokesman Fred MacFarlane said that Bradley was awaiting his prize.

The jubilation even made it into the halls of Congress.

"An awesome third-quarter surge allowed the Lakers to blow the game open and eliminate any doubt just who is the pre-eminent power in the National Basketball Association today," Rep. Mel Levine, D-Los Angeles, told his colleagues in the House of Representatives on Monday.

"James Worthy's inspirational steal and diving pass to a streaking Magic Johnson ignited the Lakers' second-half show. Kareem Abdul-Jabbar led the Lakers with 32 points, and blocked shots and puled down rebounds with strength and power that belied his age."

"Mychal Thompson's play proved that Jerry West is as talented a general manager as he was a player," Levine gushed.

"Mr. Speaker, I am honored to represent the Fabulous Forum, the home of the Lakers and the site of yesterday's blowout. I am pleased to ask my colleagues to join with me in complimenting the Los Angeles Lakers on their richly deserved championship victory," the congressman concluded.

At that point Rep. Gerald Solomon, R-N.Y., said: "Would the gentleman yield?"

"I'd be delighted to yield."

"We do congratulate you," Solomon said, "and on behalf of all the Boston Celtics fans, let me say, 'Wait 'til next year.'"

Next year, the Lakers will attempt to become the first team to repeat as NBA champions since 1969. And the Celtics, who won the title a year ago, will be among the teams trying to keep them from doing so.

Early Rumors Don't Pan Out, But Spinks-Cooney Fight Does

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — The week before the Michael Spinks-Gerry Cooney fight, rumor had it that Bruce Springsteen was going to sing the national anthem.

A call to Springsteen's manager's office produced laughter and disbelief.

Several days before the fight, a news release touted the impending arrival of television star Tom Selleck, actor Sylvester Stallone and his wife, Brigitte Nielsen, even the likes of political powerhouse Henry Kissinger.

Like Springsteen, they didn't show up. The "War at the Shore" was this seaside resort's first premiere fight, and unlike Las Vegas, it's a long way from Hollywood.

Still, the crowd wasn't left without a smattering of the rich and famous, even if many of the names announced from the ring were political figures.

House Speaker Jim Wright, who opted for the fight over President Reagan's nationally televised address, didn't get a favorable reaction from the boxing fans, who responded mostly by booing.

But the crowd responded with cheers to "Miami Vice" star Don Johnson, who kept his dark sunglasses on for most of the fight and was surrounded by security of ficers.

Matt Dillon, star of "The Flamingo Kid," hung around in the press room and in the ringside press area, undisturbed by boxing writers and photographers who apparently had no idea who he was.

Donald Trump, the developer and casino magnate who sponsored the fight, for a while was the most notable personality present at a pre-fight celebrity banquet which he also hosted.

Then New Jersey Gov. Thomas H. Kean entered, surrounded by security guards. The Rev. Jesse Jackson, nodding formally at guests, also walked in, surrounded by aides.

Contemporary artist LeRoy Neiman, clutching a long cigar and a sketch pad for the fight, posed for photographers, smiling widely.

Former Philadelphia Eagles Coach Dick Vermeil chatted over drinks with high rollers invited to the banquet. Also in the crowd were youngsters seeking autographs.

Character actor Danny Aiello participated in a sports talk show before the fight.

Football commentator and former Oakland Raiders Coach John Madden wasn't promoting beer or carrying credit cards, but was spotted smoking a large cigar. Vinnie Testaverde, the 1986 Heisman Trophy-winning quarterback and University of Miami star, was a crowd pleaser.

Spinks and Cooney were not the only boxers getting attention. New Jersey's Bobby Criz hugged guests at the banquet. Sugar Ray Leonard and three-time boxing world champ Alexis Arguello also sat near ringside and drew a loud round of cheers.

Earlier in the day, heavyweight champion Mike Tyson, regarded as a likely opponent for the winner, was wheeled around in a rolling chair on this seaside resort's famed Boardwalk.

1-Handed Cooney Gets Pounded

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — In the two-fisted business of boxing, Gerry Cooney fought a one-handed fight against Michael Spinks. All it got him was knocked out.

Cooney relied on one of the best left hands in boxing Monday night against Spinks but ignored his right, and the strategy doomed him.

"His right hand surprised me," Spinks said. "It's a load-up punch and I was never there. When he throws it, he's off-balance. He was saving it and relying on the big punch."

Cooney kept after Spinks with lefts. And when he missed a big one in the fifth round, he was wide open for a Spinks right that started him toward the knockout.

Cooney's strategy amazed some boxing observers.

"He's 6-7 and he's ducking down, giving away his height advantage and letting Spinks out-jab him," said Richie Giachetti, who trained ex-heavyweight champion Larry Holmes.

"You've got to throw the right, even if it's got nothing. Gerry had to come out and take the play away. He never established himself as boss. He never took charge."

Slim Jim Robinson, trainer of former heavyweight champ Tim Witherspoon, noticed the same thing.

"Michael out-jabbed him, even though Gerry is so much taller," he said. "Cooney was looking for the big punch, that left uppercut. But Michael was covering it."

Cooney threw 131 jabs but landed only 35. Spinks' jab was more efficient, with 61 of 102 landing.

Spinks allowed Cooney to carry the fight, content to counterpunch until the opening developed. Then the boxer turned into a slugger to win the fight.

Sandberg Out For 3-5 Weeks

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago Cubs will have to break a losing streak without All-Star second baseman Ryne Sandberg.

The ankle sprain suffered by Sandberg over the weekend is more serious than first diagnosed and he could miss three to five weeks.

Sandberg suffered the injury in the third inning of Saturday's game at St. Louis when he sprained his right ankle trying to avoid a collision with Jack Clark at first base.

On Monday, the Cubs lost their fifth straight game, 3-2 to Philadelphia.

Sandberg was placed on the 15-day disabled list Sunday, but Cubs trainer John Fierro said Monday that Sandberg will be out "three weeks at best, five weeks at worst" after the ankle was re-examined and additional X-rays were taken.

"Three ligaments in the right ankle have been damaged to some degree," Fierro said.

Sandberg, hobbling on crutches in the dressing room prior to Monday's game against the Phillies, complained of pain.

"I'm lucky nothing is broken," said Sandberg, who landed on the disabled list for the first time in his five-year major league career.

"It's pretty sore and it's pretty swollen," Sandberg said. "I haven't had much sleep the last two nights. It's been troubling and it is painful."

Sandberg said he couldn't compare the injury to anything he has suffered in the past.

"I've been lucky, I haven't had any serious injuries in the past. I had a hip pointer a couple of years ago and missed two or three games."

Sandberg has watched replays of the mishap and said, "It turned out to be a combination of things. Clark was in my path and I tried to avoid him. When he jumped for the ball, I got around him and tried to touch the bag. I'm surprised I saw that I hit the middle of the bag."

Sandberg's ankle is not in a cast, but it has been wrapped tightly and heavily.

"The idea is to keep the swelling down," Sandberg said. "I've had ankle sprains before but they have only lasted a day or two."

In addition to Sandberg, shortstop Shawn Dunston suffered a sprain of his right ring finger Monday in the ninth-inning of the loss to Philadelphia.

Dunston was injured when he slid into second base on a steal and left

Scott Takes Sixth Place

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. — Barry Scott of Greenville finished sixth in the East Coast Triathlon, held this past weekend in Virginia Beach.

Scott finished in a time of 1 hour, 43 minutes in the event, which included a nine-tenths of a mile swim, a 20-mile bike race, and a 6.2-mile run.

Scott has been competing in triathlons for the past two years and this was one of his best finishes. "I finished within seven minutes of Dave Scott, so I'm very pleased with my time," Scott said.

Dave Scott is a five-time winner and the defending champion in the Hawaiian Ironman Triathlon, considered one of the toughest of its kind in the world.

Barry Scott will compete in the national championship, to be held in September at Hilton Head, S.C.

TV Vignettes Help Highlight Sections Of U.S. Constitution

By BOB DVORCHAK
Associated Press Writer
PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Barbara Walters talks about the men who signed the U.S. Constitution. Celeste Holm discusses women's suffrage. Dick Cavett highlights Colonial travel. George Plimpton recalls the "four-month miracle."
They and other celebrities narrate a series of 26 one-minute television vignettes called "Constitution Minutes" made for the 200th anniversary of the writing of the framework of American democracy.
"Too much of the information coming out about the Constitution is stuffy and pompous. I wanted to generalize it so everybody could learn," said Lou Reda of Easton, Pa., executive producer of the series.
"I'm interested in informing the brown baggers of this country what the Constitution is all about. The people I like to reach are the people who watch 'Laverne and Shirley,'" said Reda.

watch them or listen to them. The message is there," Reda said.
At WWOR, the vignettes are used as part of the noon newscast during the bicentennial celebration.
"They convey in layman's terms the different parts and important footnotes to the Constitution. The more information we can supply to our viewers the better we are and the better informed our viewers are," said Farrell Meisel, director of programming at WWOR, which reaches 20 million households.
"In an uncomplicated way, these one-minute vignettes will give everyone some insight into what our nation stands for," said Pat Servodidio, president of RKO General.
"This is one of the strongest ways to use television. This will give greater reach and cover a variety of topics," Servodidio said. "There's a need to educate without doing it in a boring fashion."
Richard Morris, professor emeritus at Columbia University, was a consultant to the series and narrated one of the minutes. He was also a consultant to CBS on the "Bicentennial Minutes," a series that aired in 1976 during the nation's 200th birthday celebration.
"These are done as least as well," said Morris.

Lynn Redgrave even manages to get a mention of sex into her minute.
"In these days, when it seems to take 100 lawyers to write a contract for the sale of a chicken coop, it is astounding to realize that the Constitution, including the eloquent preamble, was cast into its final draft largely by one man. No, not by James Madison, remembered as the father of the Constitution, but by Gouverneur Morris, a New York dandy and a notorious womanizer," Mrs. Redgrave said.
Philadelphia Newspapers Inc., publisher of The Philadelphia Inquirer and the Philadelphia Daily News, is underwriting the vignettes on WHYY, the local public television station.
PNI had sponsored a series on the First Amendment, and the "Constitution Minutes" helped explain the document in human terms, according to William White, director of public affairs.
"It seemed to convey so much good information about the Constitution, we wanted to promote it," said White, who recommended the series to editors at other Knight-Ridder newspapers.

Troupe Issues Call For Funds

LONDON (AP) — The world-renowned Royal Shakespeare Company says that despite two Broadway hits, it is plagued by financial problems that may force the closure of its theatrical base at Stratford-upon-Avon.

The company issued a statement Monday saying its "only hope" is that private companies and banks will heed its urgent call for increased sponsorship.

"We have put out a lot of feelers in the City," London's financial district, the statement said. "All our efforts between now and December will go into finding an alternative solution to closing a theater."

The company, whose shows "Les Liaisons Dangereuses" and "Les Miserables" are big Broadway successes, confirmed a report in the London Sunday Times that its deficit could lead to closure of its theatrical base at Stratford-upon-Avon. William Shakespeare was born in the central English city in 1564.

"It's something that's being considered," said the company's spokesman, Peter Harlock. He said the Royal Shakespeare Company operates six theaters.

But he added that closing the Stratford-upon-Avon headquarters was less likely than closing its London base, the London Theater, at the Barbican arts complex.

Cartoon 'Voices' Out On Strike

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The major film animation studios have been struck by about 200 actors who create the voices for such Saturday morning cartoon characters as The Smurfs, Fred Flintstone, Scooby Doo and Boo Boo Bear.

The actors, represented by the Screen Actors Guild, say they want more money for doing more than one principal character's voice for a cartoon show. They also want the standard work day cut from eight hours to four.

Affected by the strike are the top animation houses: Disney Studios, Filmation, DIC, Hanna-Barbera and Marvel.

The guild has been bargaining separately for cartoon voice characters since 1967. The current contract actually was to have expired June 30, but was extended while there was hope for a settlement.

The guild's national executive committee voted unanimously Saturday to call the strike, which officially began at 12:01 a.m. Monday.

Under the current contract, voice character actors receive a base fee of $361 a day for doing the voices of up to three characters on a show. The guild wants to change that to one main voice and two incidentals for one day's pay, and an additional day's pay for each additional main character's voice.

Producers offered a 5 percent increase over the current $361 rate. Ed Prelock, chief negotiator for the five animation houses, said the guild actually seeks better conditions for the voice-actors than it has for members covered by its television contract.

"It's unfortunate," said Prelock, "that a small group of SAG members feel they should be treated in a more favorable way than the general membership."

Don Messick, the voice of Papa Smurf, Scooby Doo and Scrappy Doo, Boo-Boo Bear and Jellystone's Ranger Smith, said a four-hour workday is needed because of the vocal strain of "doing the crazy, squeaky things we do."

Among the shows affected by the strike are "The Smurfs," "Cabbage Patch Kids," "The Jetsons," "The Flintstones," "Gummibears," "Teddy Ruxpin," "Ghostbusters," "Huckleberry Hound," "Yogi Bear's Treasure Hunt," "Scooby Doo," "Top Cat," "The GoBots," "Rambo," "Lazer Tag Academy," "Popeye," "Masters of the Universe," "Heathcliff," "Punky Brewster" and "The Wuzzles."

Radio Listeners Pounce On FCC To Protest Drive On Language

By DEBORAH MESCE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some people are hopping mad at the Federal Communications Commission's crackdown on raunchy radio, and they're making their point with some of the same blankety-blank language banned from the airwaves.

Though the FCC has received far more thanks than criticism in letters reacting to its decision on indecent broadcasts, a few of the complainers grabbed attention but not sympathy with their dicey words.

A letter from students running WWQC-FM at Quincy College in Quincy, Ill., told the FCC, "We feel this country was founded on the rights and freedoms which your fascist organization can never take away."

They close by saying, "We have but one thing to say to you ... (expletive deleted) you, we do what we want."

An unsigned postcard from New Jersey used the same obscenity in directing action at the FCC, and went on to say: "What are you trying to prove? What big (another expletive deleted) you are?"

The issue has generated an unusually large number of letters — about 1,300 — and by a margin of about 8-to-1 they applauded the FCC for trying to clear the airwaves of smut and make them safe for children's ears, said Edythe Wise, chief of complaints and investigations of the FCC's mass media bureau.

The decision also produced an unusually hostile reaction from critics who say the FCC is breaching the First Amendment by regulating what the public can hear on the radio.

"It's that kind of an issue," she said with a shrug.

But FCC officials are taking the randy writings in stride, enjoying a chuckle over a few of them.

Some of the crudest were sent to General Counsel Diane Killory, who appeared on ABC-TV's "Nightline" program to explain the commission's position after it approved the new policy April 16.

A critic from Duluth, Minn., wrote: "Do (expletive) yourself. Let the radio DJs go where they want and you (expletive) at the FCC just crawl back under your rock."

Another from Los Angeles was even briefer: "Don't (expletive) with my First Amendment rights. No censorship."

Still another used no vulgarity but offered to buy Ms. Killory a plane ticket to Moscow. On the envelope in a note to the post office, the author wrote: "Sorry I don't know the ZIP (code) ... I believe the FCC is now located in the Soviet Embassy."

'Bad Rap'

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Run-DMC and the Beastie Boys say their concerts are getting a bad rap for rowdiness and hope this won't put a damper on their nationwide "Together Forever" tour.

The rap music groups and publicist Bill Adler told a news conference Monday prior to a joint concert at Portland's Memorial Coliseum that the groups provide double the security of most rock acts.

Adler said his preconcert publicity, including a description of the Beastie Boys as "thugs whose performance is guaranteed to make parents of every nationality tremble," was "just rock 'n' roll hype."

Members of Run-DMC said their music gives positive messages to their fans. "We stand for good," said a member known as Run.

Horoscope From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY June 17
GENERAL TENDENCIES: You will find new ways to handle matters of importance to you. Patience and cleverness will be necessary to cope with delays and sudden pressures.
ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Although difficult, persevere and handle private affairs. Put off favors for your mate to avoid difficulties.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Allow time for delays in obtaining your wishes. Don't bring up moot points with friends, try to harmonize.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Handle your public duties conscientiously. To show your superiors you have tact, talk less and listen more.
MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Mull over new plans before getting involved. Get facts on a newcomer before making any judgements.
LEO (July 22 to August 21): Easy-looking problems have strings attached, so be careful. Be honest in answering questions from your mate.
VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Keep a chat with your partner impersonal to reach an accord. If your reputation is at stake, stay uninvolved.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Handle routine tasks more efficiently. Act amused at a co-worker's mood swings, then you'll get along well.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Put your creative ideas to work, allowing for delays. Show patience with your mates moods and drive carefully.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): The weather will effect home affairs: pleasant one moment, bad the next. Have only cheerful guests into your home.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): The morning will start smoothly, but be careful handling later situations. Visit friends, but drive carefully.
AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Money matters take priority today, so use common sense. Advice from a scheming elder could cause trouble.
PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Handle personal goals, and don't feel others are against you. Friends may be sullen over private matters.
IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he, or she, will be artistic and sensitive. Teach your child to be objective and to accept criticism. With this ability, your son or daughter will excel in any job requiring precision and perception. Discipline should not be harsh, and good food is very important.

"The Stars impel; they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

 One of the more unusual new bridge books (Tops and Bottoms, by Matthew and Pamela Granovetter. Granovetter Books, 180 pp, paperback, $11.95. Available from The Bridge World, 39 West 94th St, New York N.Y. 10024) brought back fond memories. Among its 52 hands, featuring the world's great players of yesterday and today, is this one played in a tournament many years ago by our senior scribe. It features one of his favorite plays for one of his worst results.

He offered North every encouragement to bid a grand slam with his cue-bidding sequence. Note that, because of his void in clubs, he studiously avoided asking for aces with four no trump. When North refused to cooperate, South reluctantly settled for a small slam.

West led a trump and, when dummy appeared, declarer was happy with his cautious approach. He won the opening lead, drew the rest of the trumps and cashed the ace-king of diamonds. Suddenly even 12 tricks became doubtful because of the 4-1 diamond split.

There was a chance. If West held the ace of clubs and declarer could create a second entry to dummy, a high club would be his 12th trick. To accomplish that, he embarked on a spectacular line. He cashed the ace of spades and then boldly finessed the ten of spades. When that won, declarer continued with the king of clubs, discarding the king of spades from hand! West won, but had only black cards to return and that gave declarer his second entry to dummy while allowing him to discard two diamonds on the black-suit winners.

What did this brilliant play earn our senior scribe? A cold bottom! At the other tables the lead was invariably the ace of clubs, allowing declarer to score all 13 tricks.

We found the book an enjoyable, if expensive, read.

Murderer Executed
ANGOLA, La. (AP) - A double murderer was put to death in the electric chair early today after giving the thumbs-up sign, declaring his innocence and saying he forgives those who were making him the fourth man executed here in 10 days.
"I am an innocent man," Jimmy Wingo said after four guards led him into the death chamber at the state penitentiary. "You are murdering me this day. I do still love you all in Christ. God bless you all."
Wingo, 35, was the 11th person put to death in Louisiana since it resumed executions in 1983, and the nation's 11th this year.
Another execution is scheduled here for tonight.
Wingo was a former Boy Scout who had served for a year as a park ranger before he turned to crime and wound up in jail on burglary charges. He escaped along with cellmate Jimmy Glass on Christmas Eve 1982.

Give your Dad some all day everyday lovin' with fragrances!

Like a long-lasting hug, a gift of fragrance will constantly remind Dad that someone loves him. Everyday. Throughout the year! Fragrances find a way of becoming a part of each other's lives... a part of his identity. Who leaves him as well as you do! So a new cologne or aftershave becomes a very personal way to say, "I love you, Dad." And whether he likes spicy, woody scents or prefers something a little sweeter, we've got a fragrance that'll suit him perfectly. Choose his favorite or give him something new - either way, he'll know that you chose a special gift with him in mind. For more information, call 1-800-848-8888.

The Lowe's Commitment

GREAT PRODUCTS & PRICES

10% Low Price Guarantee Policy:

Lowe's guarantees our everyday low prices. If you find an identical advertised item at any retail competitor currently priced lower than ours, simply bring us written proof of that price. We'll match that price PLUS give you an additional 10% of the difference between the two prices when you buy from us. It must be an identical in-stock item. Close-out, discontinued and other clearance type sale items are excluded from this offer.

Satisfaction Guaranteed Policy:

Lowe's guarantees that you will be satisfied with your purchase. If you are not completely happy with your purchase, simply return it along with your original sales receipt to any Lowe's store. We'll repair it, replace it, or refund your money.

Lowe's Raincheck Policy:

If an advertised item is temporarily out-of-stock, we will gladly issue a raincheck (except for items marked limited quantities, discontinued or closeout). When we restock you will be notified so you can buy at the previously advertised price. Some stores may not stock all advertised items; however, every item shown can be ordered for you.

Lowe's Fair-Purchase Policy:

In order to provide fair purchase opportunity to all our customers, Lowe's reserves the right to limit quantities sold to individual customer. No dealers, please.
