Elections Unit Says Tabulators Could Save $40,000

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County could save more than $40,000 budgeted for tabulator ballots next year if advanced electronic voting equipment is bought to process county elections, according to Margaret Hardee, supervisor of the Pitt County Board of Elections.

The Board of Elections sponsored a demonstration for county, Greenville and precinct officials Tuesday of the Shouptronic Electronic Voting System — a system Ms. Hardee wants to implement. The Board of Elections has requested $360,000 for 1987-88 from the Pitt County Commissioners to pay for the machines.

The electronic system "would certainly speed everything up," she said. But, "the big thing is the savings. You cannot ignore the savings to the county."

In addition to the ballot expenses, the Airmac Retrofit tabulators the county now uses will cost about $10,875 to maintain and repair for next year, according to Board of Election figures. The voting system would eliminate the need for tabulators.

The demonstrated electronic voting system, a product of R.F. Shoup Corporation of Pennsylvania, is centered around the 185-pound Shouptronic 1242 Voting Machine, which cost about $4,500, according to Dr. Robert J. Boram, the corporation director of engineering who help develop the system.

The Shoup Corp. "recommended 96 machines (for Pitt County), but we were trying to get by with 80," Ms. Hardee said. With proceeds from the sale of tabulators, voting booths and ballot boxes, "enough money would be made to make the first year's payment on a lease-purchase agreement."

But, county commissioners attending the demonstration said the cost of the machines is a main stumbling block to adopting the system.

"The machines are nice," said Charles McLawhorn, chairman of the Pitt County Board of Commissioners. "But I'm not sure the county can afford them at this point. We're looking at all options whether we can use what we have or lease or purchase them."

Echoing the budget consideration, Commissioner Tom Johnson said, "This is a very difficult year budget wise. We intend to keep the tax rate at the present level, and there's no money in the budget" for the machines.

But, the machines, which are used in Wilson and Macon counties in North Carolina, would more than pay for themselves through the error-proof, speedy services they offer, Boram said.

The machines have built-in error-proof precautions that record data such as the amount of time the machine is in operation and the time the power fails and the batteries continue providing power.

"There are over 100 different routines inside ... that do nothing but catch mistakes," Boram said.

Avoiding mistakes would be a big plus in manning the polls during elections, said Janet Davis, a precinct judge in Bethel. "With this (elec-

GOETZ MANIA — A New Yorker who told reporters he was homeless engages in a shouting match with two members of the Revolutionary Communist Party in Manhattan Tuesday. The communists were protesting the sign the man carried in support of Bernhard Goetz, who was acquitted of attempted murder charges in the shooting of four youths he said were trying to rob him in a subway car. (AP Laserphoto)

Goetz May Skip Jail In Shootings

By SAMUEL MAULL
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Jurors who cleared Bernhard Goetz of shooting four men on a subway felt he was a man living a nightmare, not a hunter on the prowl, when he opened fire.

Goetz, who had been charged with attempted murder and assault in a case that gained international attention, was convicted Tuesday only of illegally possessing the gun he used to shoot the four on Dec. 22, 1984. He could be jailed for up to seven years, or avoid prison altogether.

As he left the courthouse, some of the jurors asked for his autograph. "I'm glad it's over," Goetz told the limousine driver who sped him away. "The last two years have been hell."

The shooting raised basic issues of self-defense, crime, vigilantism and the right to carry guns.

Some people saw Goetz as a thug-buster fighting back against urban crime, while others said he was a menace for firing five rounds in a crowded train. On the videotape, Goetz told police that he feared he was about to become a victim of a crime, and wanted to make the young men suffer.

"The public may wonder why we reached this verdict. They may wonder why we didn't believe Goetz when he said he did it, himself," said juror Mark Lesly, 27. The four-woman, eight-man jury included two blacks. Six of the jurors had been victims of crimes, three of them in the subway.

Lesly said they discounted the confession, because "it was obvious he was a man close to a nervous breakdown. He was living and reliving." (See GOETZ, A-18)

GNP Spurts 4.8 Percent In Sizzling First Quarter

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. economy grew at a sizzling 4.8 percent annual rate in the first three months of 1987, substantially higher than previously thought, the government said today.

Analysts, however, cautioned that the performance of the gross national product deceptively overstated the strength in the economy and they continued to predict a sharp drop in the growth rate for the current April-June quarter.

The new report reflected an upward revision from a month ago, when the government estimated GNP growth at 4.4 percent in the January-March quarter.

All of the improvement came in an additional decline in the nation's trade deficit above what had been estimated previously. The report said the trade deficit shrank for a second consecutive quarter, something that has not occurred since the spring and fall of 1980.

The trade improvement is good news for the Reagan administration, which has been basing its hopes for stronger growth this year on a substantial drop in the trade deficit.

While growth was up in the first three months of the year, inflation shot up as well, with an inflation index tied to the GNP rising at a 4.2 percent annual rate, the fastest pace in three years. This GNP deflator had risen just 0.7 percent in the fourth quarter. The big jump in prices was blamed on rising energy costs.

The 4.8 percent GNP growth in the first three months of the year was more than four times the 1.1 percent growth rate turned in during the final three months of 1986. It was the fastest performance since a 5.0 percent GNP increase in the second quarter of 1984.

Since the spring of 1984, the country has been mired in an extended period of sluggish economic activity stemming primarily from huge trade deficits that have robbed American manufacturers of sales at home and abroad.

Even with the improvement in trade, economists discounted much of the GNP increase in the first quarter because it came from a huge $69.2 billion rise in business inventories, concentrated in a build-up in unsold cars.

That advance in inventories came as consumer spending was plunging at an annual rate of $25.7 billion. This led to a decline in final sales of $25.7 billion, a 2.7 percent rate of decline that represented the first drop in sales since the low point of the last recession in the third quarter of 1982.

The weakness in sales included a 1.1 percent drop in consumer spending, an 11.5 percent fall in business capital spending and a 2.4 percent decline in residential construction.

The decline in consumer spending, which accounts for two-thirds of all economic activity, was particularly worrisome to economists because it was the second consecutive drop in spending, something that has not happened for 13 years.

With sales falling and inventories rising, analysts believe the second quarter of this year will be a period of very weak growth as businesses are forced to cut production to work down high levels of unwanted inventories.

Some economists are even forecasting a declining GNP, something that has not occurred since the last recession.

But analysts do not believe this will signal the start of another recession. Instead, they are predicting that the GNP will strengthen to a respectable pace again in the final half of the year, once businesses have trimmed inventory levels.

The Reagan administration is forecasting the GNP will grow 3.2 percent this year, up substantially from the 2.5 percent growth rate turned in during 1986, the poorest showing since the recession year of 1982.

Many private economists, however, believe overall growth will be little changed from last year. They have grown more pessimistic, contending that a sharp rise in interest rates will dampen consumer and business spending in the months ahead.

The various changes boosted GNP at an annual rate of $43.3 billion in the first quarter.

Children's Show Raised $107,000

The Children's Miracle Network Telethon was extremely successful, according to a report presented by Dr. Jon Tingelstad to the Pitt County Memorial Hospital Board Tuesday.

Tingelstad, medical director of the Children's Hospital component of Pitt Memorial, said more than 2,600 pledges amounting to more than $107,000 were made from throughout eastern North Carolina. He said $57,027.89 has been deposited so far.

The local giving through the local-national network effort was about $42,000 greater than during the previous year's telethon. All locally given money is kept here. Tingelstad said he thinks further education about the medical needs of children in this region and about the national telethon itself will enhance the local hospital's participation in future years. He thanked the volunteers who took part. Some of these were hospital board members, he said.

The board amended the hospital's investment to allow up to $5 million to be kept in one bank. Previously the limit has been $3 million.

Approval was given for the purchase of a neonatal ambulance. The vehicle outfitted especially for medical care of seriously ill newborn infant during transport will be bought from the Wheel Coach Company for $72,760.

Capital budget requests totalling $101,939 were approved. Among these are a microscope with attachments for the operating room for $15,998; pulse oximeters for the respiratory therapy department for $10,200; bedside monitor upgrades for the neonatal intensive care unit for $9,298; monitors with battery packs for the neonatal unit for $11,723, and pulse oximeters for the recovery room for $54,720.

Dave McRae, senior vice president, reported that patient days in May were up to 14,748 from 14,350 a year ago. He said admissions were 1,936, in contrast to 1,818 a year ago. The average daily census of patients was 456 in May, in contrast to 442 a year ago.

It was reported that the guest relations program of the hospital is getting under way, with surveys of patient satisfaction being done and plans being made for employee training in the fall.

Board member Kathryn Lewis reported that the human organ transplant committee is looking toward bone marrow transplants and liver transplants being done at Pitt Memorial in the not too distant

ECU Trustees To Meet Friday

By CLAY DEANHARDT
Reflector Staff Writer

The East Carolina University Board of Trustees will meet in Greenville Friday in a closed session to discuss personnel and property matters, according to Bill Shires of the ECU News Bureau.

The meeting will be the last for Chairman Ralph Kinsey of Charlotte and board members Harvey Beech and James Dixon Jr. They will be leaving the board on June 30 as their second four-year terms expire.

According to Dr. Mary Ann Rose, assistant to the chancellor at ECU, there are 13 seats on the board. Members can only serve two consecutive terms, she said, and after that must wait at least one year before they can be reappointed.

Louis Singleton, who is finishing his first term at the end of the month, would have to be reappointed if he is to serve a second term, she noted. William R. Roberson III of Washington, N.C., and Samuel J. Wornom III of Sanford, whose terms also expire at the end of the month, have already been re-elected for second terms by the UNC Board of Governors.

The board of governors has also selected two eastern North Carolina businessmen, Wayne Peterson of Tarboro and Vincent Lowe Jr. of Wilson, to begin terms July 1.

According to Dr. Rose, the last two appointments to the board will be made by Governor Jim Martin sometime in the future. The 13th member of the board comes from the ECU Student Government Association, she said, and therefore changes from year to year.

Instead of stopping, the driver tried to elude the officer and a chase resulted, which ended when the stolen car ran into the median on U.S. 264 at the N.C. 33 intersection.

The spokesman, who said one of the two juveniles was taken into custody and the other ran, said the car had been stolen from a parking lot at 314 S. Evans Street.

Planning Board Giving Priority To Cooperation With County

By SUE HINSON

Reflector Staff Writer

City planning commissioners took what board member Willie Pate called a "long overdue step" Tuesday and targeted long-range planning association between the city and county as a priority.

One of three county representatives on the city's nine-member Planning and Zoning Commission, Pate said prioritization of joint planning was necessary to overcome Pitt officials' perception that Greenville for "too long has dictated to the county."

"They're resentful of this and it's got to be overcome. What's good for Greenville is good for Pitt County," Pate said.

In related business, the board concurred that more time needs to be spent on future planning for the city itself and agreed to schedule an additional monthly meeting when warranted to discuss long-range issues.

Action items Tuesday included a request by R. Guy Mayo and Janice R. White to rezone a 7.16 acre tract located on Memorial Drive, abutting Lincoln Park Subdivision. Petitioners asked that the property be rezoned from shopping center (CS) to highway commercial (CH). Commissioners unanimously voted to recommend that the City Council not approve the request, saying highway commercial uses were less compatible with adjoining residential properties than CS.

In other rezoning matters, the board approved a request by Parker's Chapel Free Will Baptist Church to rezone its lot on SR 1534 from residential-agricultural to office and institutional. Church representatives requested the change to

Stick With Facts

A $250,000 water and sewer project or a $25,000 septic tank for the River Park North facilities?

Council member Lorraine Shinn complained at a recent meeting about the expenditure of $250,000 to provide water and sewer service at the park. In answer to Mrs. Shinn's questions Greenville Utilities officials said the commission was told it was the council's wishes that the sewer line be built rather than a much less expensive septic tank. Mrs. Shinn maintained that the council was never asked its position on the sewer line.

Since the line has been decided, who told who what is moot at this point.

There are a couple of things that are clear, however. One is that communication always needs to be open between the City Council and Greenville Utilities Commission and everything possible should be done to implement that.

The other certainty is that any major water and sewer projects should be determined by a feasibility study to direct the most efficient way to carry out the project.

There may be reasons why a septic tank wouldn't work well in River Park North given its proximity to the Tar River. And there might be good cause to build the sewer line to the area if it will serve foreseeable development. We have no way of knowing without the guidance of engineering studies.

It appears from the comments at the recent council meeting the sewer line was built because of an understanding that a sewer line was what the city wanted. Any major project should be justified first on the basis of efficiency evaluation.

Priorities

Beginning around Oct. 1 about 200 transplant centers nationwide will be forced — along with organ procurement agencies and transplant tissue-typing laboratories — to participate in the National Organ Procurement and Transplantation Network or risk losing federal Medicare reimbursements.

It has taken a long time to get even this close to an orderly system of life-saving organ transplants.

Meanwhile, over the years there have been disappointments and even deaths of loved ones because the procedures for priority in assigning available organs simply did not exist. Sometimes, patients who captured public attention appeared to enjoy an "edge" on a chance to live.

A computerized network, established last fall under federal contract awarded to the United Network for Organ Sharing, has been set up. Network members will have to share kidneys considered near-perfect matches, which comprise fewer than one percent of all donated kidneys, and follow a standardized point system for distributing other organs.

Frank Rowe of Philadelphia, who has been waiting in Pittsburgh for a heart-lungs transplant for 2½ years, favors such a system although he admits he could lose out.

"Transplantation is a world of paradoxes", he says. "A new system is going to assure the organs go to the sickest patients. (But) it could take away an opportunity for me."

Factors taken into consideration will be medical urgency, time on the waiting list and proximity to the donor. The system will take away that fear one is considered more than other because of media or White House attention, says a mother whose daughter is alive today because of a liver transplant.

To borrow the words of a health policy analyst who needs a kidney, "The new system sets the stage for a very objective way for allocating a scarce resource. It's a good beginning."

To the editor:

Bravo for your "Think Twice" editorial in Monday's paper. Some of your readers attended the public hearing last February and remember the overwhelming opposition to the Girl Scouts' plan to further pollute the Pamlico. Against the recommendation of the hearing officer, R. Paul Wilms (director of N.R.C.D.'s Environmental Management Division) facilitated issuance of the permit to discharge. To the editor:

Our press buzzes. Mostly positive — plus fear that Gorbachev won't last against entrenched bureaucracy, military. Some major voices hope he won't. One was Henry Kissinger's. I write against Kissinger, who argues: Gorbachev is smart, can make his system strong. That system is our enemy. Strong enemies are dangerous. Therefore, Gorbachev is dangerous.

What is this dangerous strengthening of the Soviet system? Alcoholism is reduced. Wasteful (anti-ecology!) production is curtailed. Criticism in TV, movies, stage, newspapers, journals, and books has widened, once-jailed critics in charge. Political prisoners were released. Chinese border claims are accepted. East Europeans hear their Communist parties called unconditionally independent. Gosplan will move from microeconomic toward (Fed-like?) macroeconomic intervention. Students, housewives, pensioners may work full-time in new private sector. There's novel rhetoric about secret ballot in competitive elections; self-management of factory, office and farm; withdrawal from Afghanistan. U.S. and French position on nuclear arms deployment are accepted.

Omitting further details of scholars Archie Brown, Stephen Cohen, Loren Graham, Ed Hewett, etc., some brief conclusions: Robert Tucker (Princeton, both forthcoming on Soviet leadership (Lenin to Gorbachev)); "When a government is willing to openly confront the existence of profound internal problems, it becomes free to take a less combative and more cooperative stance in external relations ... the world has a stake in the success of this new Soviet leader's reform enterprise and his... new approaches in international affairs." Yet Gorbachev said, "Our enemies ... won't start a war. One thing causes them anxiety: if democracy develops in the Soviet Union, if we succeed, then we will win." "He may be right," writes Matthew Evangelista (University of Michigan Soviet specialist), thus supporting Kissinger's fears.

"Let's both win," write I, for I think we wish better life for the Russian people. Let us, with Sakharov, root for Gorbachev's success.

Vaudeville Alive On The Campaign Trail

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vaudeville is not dead. It lives in towns large and small all across America, everywhere presidential candidates bring their traveling shows.

See the vice president of the United States don a white apron to roll tortillas along with the minimum wage workers at a South Phoenix factory. He's the one with the striped watch band and armed guards and no experience at minimum wage employment.

For a little magic, watch the governor of Massachusetts raise $2 million at a single dinner. Or listen to Rep. Jack Kemp tell how to turn paper dollars into gold.

Or comedy? How about pin-striped Al Haig cuddling a pig on an Iowa farm?

Such moments may have little meaning to people worried about record budget deficits, trade imbalances, the state of schools or the threats of nuclear war and AIDS.

But to the folks who program campaigns they are bids for a picture of their candidate on the front page of the local newspaper or a few precious moments on the evening television news.

They are part of the funny-hats tradition of American campaigns and are harmless enough.

For those who yearn for discussions of issues, fear not. That too shall come to pass. For this campaign will see more debates, forums and carefully promoted speeches before learned councils than any in recent or faint memory.

Even the candidate's wives — spouses, if Rep. Pat Schroeder, D-Colo., enters the race — will participate in a forum this summer in Iowa.

The sense is that along with all the usual vaudevillian trappings, this will be a campaign of substance filled with discussion of serious issues, because that is what the candidates and their programmers believe the voters want.

That doesn't necessarily mean the public is in for serious debates over how to deal with national concerns.

Think back to the 1980 campaign when candidate Ronald Reagan offered his detailed plan to cut taxes, increase defense spending and eliminate the federal budget deficit.

People said it couldn't be done, but Reagan offered pages of numbers that said it could.

The skeptics were right, of course, but what mattered at the time was that Reagan convinced people he had a substantive plan for dealing with major national concerns.

Four years later, when it was clear the nation was struggling with record budget deficits, voters didn't care. They liked the job Reagan was doing and re-elected him by a massive landslide.

So far in this campaign, no one has done much better than Reagan did in 1980 to come up with a plan to eliminate, or even drastically reduce, the deficits.

The president might have pointed the way for some candidates Monday night in a nationally broadcast speech in which he referred to the progress he had made reducing the deficit as a percentage of the gross national product.

The time may be right for a political debate on deficits that goes beyond candidates throwing up their hands in horror, calling for constitutional amendments and other gimmicks.

How much of a deficit matters in a $4 trillion economy? That question isn't being debated because the safest political stance is opposition to the red ink that has been a way of life for the government for generations.

On foreign and defense policy there is a lot of talk for and against the missile defense system the president calls his Strategic Defense Initiative.

Strength For Today

Years ago, when most of us were children, there was a swashbuckling tale in some of the books we read about a villain who wore his hair long to conceal the fact that he had no ears. As a penalty for crime, his ears had been cut off.

The years have brought all of us knowledge of myriads of people in a worse plight — people without ears for the finer sounds of life. They cannot hear the beauty in the music of an orchestra or in the song of a bird. They are deaf to sentiments of nobility and the counsels of wisdom.

Far worse is the lot of those whose ears have become dulled to the still small voice of the inner whisperings of the Spirit of God. Spiritually, they are as marble statues.

To keep the ear of the soul functioning, sensitive and alert is the secret of possessing God's good gifts.

No Compromises Around, Just Political Twisting

RALEIGH — Politicians don't care much for the true meaning of words. They'll twist and distort any word's meaning if it will fit their needs.

In the current political battle over who has the best plan for building new schools in North Carolina, the word "compromise" is quickly becoming a victim of such political twisting.

Webster's defines a compromise as a "settlement in which each side gives up some demands or makes some concessions." Gov. Jim Martin, Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan and Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Granville, the three major players now in the school construction battle, all have been talking of how much they're compromising, but it's hard to see a compromise on the horizon.

Martin opened the school construction discussion with a school bonds plan announced last fall. Jordan then offered a similar proposal. The two reached a compromise between themselves relatively quickly and appeared to be heading in the same direction.

Then Watkins, chairman of the House Expansion Budget Committee and the second most powerful representative, dropped in his bill to fund new schools with a four-year, one percent, sales tax increase.

The Martin-Jordan side appeared to be at an impasse with the Watkins side, so Jordan struck out on his own with his "compromise." But if it was a compromise, how come Jordan didn't think to discuss it with Martin, or with Watkins? These are the two men with whom he was supposed to be compromising, yet they knew nothing of it until after he'd released it to the press.

Maybe Jordan didn't think it would do any good to tell them his plans, since both men appeared to be set in concrete on their own ideas. For example, Martin said he was willing to "compromise" but the only concessions he made were to Jordan on matters concerning bonds. Martin hasn't made any gestures toward Watkins nor to the state House which backs him.

After Martin and Jordan spent a day calling each other names, Watkins offered his "compromise."

But he didn't discuss it with either Jordan or Martin before going to the press. His "compromise" did not involve either a lower tax, or one of shorter duration. He said his major concession would be to allow the extra tax to run for longer than four years. That prompted one reporter to ask why Martin and Jordan, who both oppose a tax increase, would consider a longer running tax to be concession. Watkins said, "You never know what people are thinking."

So here is the situation. Three guys, all of whom are running for governor, say they're willing to compromise. But all say they are resolute in their opposition to the major elements of the others' proposals. They're not talking with each other, but at each other, through the news media. The atmosphere for a compromise is further undermined by Martin's inability to keep his party chairman's mouth shut. Jack Hawke, GOP chairman, did the state's children no good when he reduced this debate to a political mudslinging party by calling Jordan a "wimp."

But then Hawke's job is to win elections. He probably couldn't care less about resolving this problem.

There are three weeks left to this year's legislative session. That's ample time for the three gubernatorial candidates to work out a compromise, one that involves concessions by all involved. If, on an issue of this importance, they can't do the jobs to which they've already been elected, then maybe it is time for North Carolinians to begin looking elsewhere for the person who'll occupy the Governor's Mansion in 1989.

Bakkers Show No Signs Of Leaving PTL Home

By WILLIAM STRACENER
Associated Press Writer
TEGA CAY, S.C. (AP) — One week after Jim Bakker and his family returned to his former PTL parsonage here, nobody seems to how long the former television evangelists will stay.

"They're just really praying about what to do and aren't coming up with anything yet," family friend Vi Asvedo said Tuesday night after a dinner outing with Bakker, who refused to answer questions from reporters.

He also wasn't talking to his new landlords.

Bakker has not responded to numerous telephone calls and letters from PTL officials, Mark DeMoss, a spokesman for new PTL Chairman Jerry Falwell, said outside the $1.3 million lakefront house.

"I don't think they're packing up nor do I think they're unpacking," he said Tuesday. "I don't have any reason to believe they're going to leave in the next few days."

DeMoss also said the ministry would continue to provide security for Bakker "for as long a time as there was a need for it, whatever time that would be."

"I don't think it's a secret that there are people that might do bodily harm to him (Bakker) just as there are to Dr. Falwell, and we protect him," DeMoss said Tuesday.

Bakker's PTL-provided bodyguard, Don Hardister, was surrounded by about 50 shouting Baker supporters Sunday after he told them Bakker shouldn't appear at a rally.

Meanwhile, a moving van from Charlotte, N.C., pulled up to the Tega Cay home about 9:30 a.m. today, but the two movers were at the house only minutes before leaving.

Bill Cochran, manager of Christian Moving, said his company was asked by telephone last night to estimate moving expenses. No moving destination was given, and Cochran said the call came from "a guy who didn't want to give me too much information. He said he was a Jim Bakker aide and we'd have to trust him."

The two movers who went to the house didn't answer reporters' questions as they left the house.

DeMoss said he hoped there would be a meeting between a representative of Bakker and a representative of the television ministry by late today to discuss what intentions Bakker and his wife, Tammy, have for the house.

"We won't settle it in 24 hours," he said Tuesday afternoon. "We hope to achieve some response of any kind about their intentions with this home."

That would be a big step at this point."

DeMoss said there "is a point" at which the Bakkers would no longer be able to live in the house in Tega Cay, which is about 10 miles from PTL's Heritage USA Christian retreat and television studios.

"Maybe I'm crazy," he said, "but I still have to believe that they have no intentions of staying there months and months and months... I'm willing to believe they don't intend to stay in a home they don't own."

DeMoss spoke twice Tuesday to reporters, who since last Wednesday have remained in front of the home in hopes the couple would talk with them.

DeMoss said the Bakkers knew he was outside Tuesday but that he didn't ask to meet with them and they didn't offer to.

"They've been invited to talk," DeMoss said. "There have been regular attempts by letter and telephone, all of which have gone unanswered so far. But we'll keep trying."

"As recently as (Monday) a letter was hand delivered over here, asking for some kind of meeting," he said. "I don't want to say they've resisted, but it (a meeting) hasn't happened yet."

He said the letter "was an effort to establish communications, no more than that."

The letter was from Harry Hargrave, chief operating officer for PTL.

Bakker gave up the ministry

March 19 when he admitted to an extramarital liaison with a church secretary in 1980. He named Falwell to succeed him, and the independent Baptist minister subsequently barred his return to power at PTL, citing mismanagement of the ministry's finances and allegations of homosexuality.

PTL officials had given the Bakkers a June 15 deadline to leave the house, but DeMoss said it wasn't a firm deadline.

"We're not overly concerned about a timetable or a deadline, nearly as much as we're concerned about simply opening communications and discussing the matter," DeMoss said.

Prosecution Ruled Out

ATLANTA (AP) — A U.S. attorney said today there is insufficient evidence to prosecute Mayor Andrew Young or other city officials for obstruction of justice in the handling of drug allegations against civil rights activist Julian Bond.

But federal prosecutor Robert Barr said an investigation of narcotics allegations against a number of prominent Atlantans is continuing. He declined to identify any of those involved.

allow placement of a larger church identification-information sign.

Also approved were six annexation requests, which if given council approval will bring an additional 30.3 acres into the city's corporate limits.

Annexation requests receiving favorable commission recommendations encompass the following areas:

- Medical Oaks Subdivision: approximately 6 acres. The subdivision is located in voting District 1, a predominantly black district, and has a black population of 52, a white population of 20 and one Chinese resident. City staff said addition of the area to District 1 would not adversely affect minority voting strength.
- Linbeth Grove, section 2, phase 1: approximately 2.8 acres. Located in voting District 2, also a predominantly black district, section 2 of Linbeth has a black population of two and a white population of 17. Staff also said this annexation would not adversely affect minority voting strength.
- Quail Ridge, section 8: approximately 3 acres. Quail Ridge is located in District 5, a predominantly white district in which black-white voter mix is not a factor.
- Heritage Village Subdivision, section 5: approximately 4.5 acres. Located in District 5.
- Tucker Estates, section 3, phase 3: approximately 11.8 acres. Located in District 5.
- A 2.6 acre tract located on N.C. 43 east of the Jehovah's Witness Church on which petitioners plan to establish a residence for the mentally retarded. As the population would be insubstantial in nature, city staff said it would have little to no impact on voting mix.

PTL TV Changes Emphasis To Take Focus From Host

By WILLIAM STRACENER
Associated Press Writer
FORT MILL, S.C. (AP) — PTL is changing the format of its main television program, the "PTL Club," to decrease the emphasis on the host, soften the fund-raising pitch and increase the pace, a ministry official said.

"It's important the host should never become the center attraction," said Warren Marcus, acting chief operating officer for television. Evangelist Jim Bakker founded PTL and hosted "PTL Club" along with his wife, Tammy Faye, before he was banished because of a sex scandal.

The ministry does not need a celebrity preacher to survive its woes in bankruptcy court, Marcus said Tuesday. "Mainly what we are doing is going back to the original roots of the 'PTL Club.'"

The "PTL Club" has been redesigned to move at a faster pace, include more music with popular Christian performers and return to brief interviews with authors and people who have testimonies to give, Marcus said. "The featured performers should be the guest stars and authors."

"We are trying to keep the pace moving," he said in a corner of the studio where the program was being fed live via satellite to about 160 affiliates and 1,700 cable systems across the nation.

The "PTL Club" appeals to the over 50 group, and the ministry needs to develop programming to attract teen-agers and yuppies, he said.

"It had been wall-to-wall fund-raising, which nobody liked, particularly the employees. They are so much happier now."

The pitch for money is still there, but it is more low-key and less hysterical than in previous years.

The Bakkers used the program to market their records, books and tapes and would not book other competing authors and singers, Marcus said.

"Nobody felt it was truly representative of Christian television," said Marcus, who assumed his job 10 weeks ago at PTL Chairman Jerry Falwell's request.

"A lot of stars did not appear on it the past six years because of the way it was structured. They wouldn't refuse. They'd just say they were busy," he said.

Walter Richardson, director of ministry marketing at PTL, said the television network is operating at a profit. It earns money by selling satellite time to other programmers.

"The TV show was trying to pay for everything here (when the Bakkers used it for fund-raising)," Marcus said. "It can't do that. There's not enough of an audience to do that."

Bakker gave up the ministry to Falwell March 19 when he admitted to an extramarital liaison with a church secretary in 1980.

PTL filed Friday for reorganization under Chapter 11 of the federal bankruptcy laws, saying it owed 1,400 creditors $72 million.

"PTL — The Inspirational Network" once produced a variety of Christian shows and is still the only strictly religious cable television network. The Christian Broadcasting Network founded by evangelist Pat Robertson airs predominantly advertised-based secular programs.

Except for the "PTL Club" and "Tammy's House Party," the Bakkers canceled the network's other original programming several months ago.

Presbyterians Adopt Statement On Jews

BILOXI, Miss. (AP) — Christians shouldn't try to force their views on Jews but are free to try to convert them, the nation's largest Presbyterian denomination said in a position paper adopted after extensive revisions.

The paper, approved overwhelmingly in a voice vote Tuesday at the 650-member 199th General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church (USA), also affirmed "God's promise of land" to the Jews.

But in a concession to Mideast Christians, the paper — the first-ever statement on Christian-Jewish relations by the 3 million-member denomination — explicitly refused to endorse the Jews' Biblical claim to what is now Israel.

The language was added because "the modern state of Israel cannot be validated theologically," said David Lenegar, a delegate from Bethel, S.C., who worked on the revisions.

"We wanted to get God out of the real estate business," he said.

The document also said Christian "teaching of contempt" for Jews contributed to the Holocaust, that Christians and Jews have a special relationship and that they worship the same God.

The assembly today was scheduled to discuss a paper calling on the church fight bigotry against Moslems and Arabs.

In other business Tuesday, the assembly:

- Voted 332-309 to relocate the church headquarters to Louisville, Ky., accepting a businessman's offer of free office space overlooking the Ohio River. The delegates picked that city over Kansas City, Mo. The headquarters currently are in New York and Atlanta. Most of the move will be completed by mid-1988.
- Voted to ask federal and state governments to rescind laws governing private sexual behavior between consenting adults and pass laws forbidding discrimination based on sexual orientation.
- Voted to undertake a study on sexuality without prohibiting the study from recommending the ordination of homosexuals. The church currently refuses to ordain "unrepentant" homosexuals as elders or ministers but allows them membership in the denomination.

Charlotte Expects London Air Link To Boost Investments

By PAUL NOWELL
Associated Press Writer
CHARLOTTE (AP) — Business leaders here are banking on the success of this week's inaugural non-stop flight from Charlotte to London to stimulate foreign investments in North Carolina and South Carolina.

"We're at bat. Now we have to hit the ball," said Carroll Gray, president of the Charlotte Chamber.

"One flight's not going to do it," Gray said in an interview before departing on Piedmont Airlines' maiden trans-Atlantic flight Monday afternoon out of Charlotte-Douglas International Airport.

"We'll need three or four flights," he said. "Maybe one to Germany, maybe to France or Holland, to have a real impact."

Piedmont officials have noted that international service had a measurable impact in Atlanta. In 1978, when Delta Airlines won its first trans-Atlantic flight from Hartsfield International Airport to London, there were 67 British firms in Georgia.

By 1985, they said, there were 151 British companies in Georgia.

Jack Messer, director of the Charlotte Chamber's international division, said direct air service was a key reason for Atlanta's success in luring the foreign companies.

"If you can get a businessman from Point A to Point B with the least amount of hassle he'll do it," Messer said. "You need to give him quicker access to Charlotte. You can't expect him to come if he has to change 10 planes to get here."

Piedmont has already started the ball rolling in England. The airline has planned several sessions in London this week with British business executives who have expressed an interest in trade with the Southeast.

"There's already tremendous interest, even without the nonstop," said Piedmont spokesman Ken Carlson. "When you combine the nonstop, the potential is endless."

Carlson said Charlotte may not be able to match the success of Atlanta, which is a much larger city.

"But the parallel exists," he said. "Nonstop service between Charlotte and England can't help but help. It should increase investment in the United States by British firms and it also should encourage U.S. firms to increase their foreign investment markets."

Currently, 27 firms with British roots have operations in Charlotte. About 73 British firms have invested in North Carolina and 35 in South Carolina.

"This is just the beginning point," said Gray. "We're going to need all of our numbers and be able to perform to make it a success."

On Monday's first flight from Charlotte to London's Gatwick Airport, there was evidence that local businessmen planned to take advantage of the flight.

John Yopp, vice president of international sales for Conbraco Industries Inc., of Mint Hill, was making the trip to drum up some new business for the company, which manufactures valves.

"This is great," he said before boarding the Boeing 767. "It's a much easier flight than sitting around (New York's) Kennedy Airport for three hours eating hot dogs."

Another businessman, Ramnik Sangani of Newberry, S.C., was flying to England to check up on his chain of grocery stores. He also owns several convenience stores and motels in the United States.

"This saves a lot of time and money," said Sangani, who was also bringing along his family. "It's very convenient."

Royall Heads Senate Panel Studying Bill On Hearings

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — A bill to strengthen the state's new Office of Administrative Hearings would have a better chance of passing the Senate if boards that regulate occupations could continue to hear appeals of their rulings, a senator says.

"This could help," said Sen. Kenneth Royall, D-Durham, who Tuesday was appointed chairman of a Senate subcommittee that will study the bill further. "I've gotten more mail on this than about any issue before the Legislature."

The bill would revise a 1985 update of the Administrative Procedures Act, which established the OAH to give people an impartial forum for challenging decisions by executive-branch bodies that regulate everything from the depth of wells to hunting and a variety of occupations.

Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Granville, is sponsor of the bill. He has led a push in recent years to rein in agencies, boards and commissions that he says have overstepped their regulatory authority.

Critics say his bill is another in a series of "stripping" measures designed to erode the power of the executive branch and the governor's office.

Under current law, OAH hears the appeal of a decision by an occupational board or commission only when the panel doesn't want to hear the case itself. Watkins' bill would require an OAH hearing if either the board or the person appealing the ruling wanted it.

But on Tuesday, Watkins told the Senate Judiciary IV Committee he would not object if his bill were amended to remove from OAH's jurisdiction all appeals of rulings by the boards and commissions.

"If you feel that it's best not to bother those boards, that suits me 100 percent," Watkins said. "Let them go their way and handle their membership like they want to handle them in whatever style they want to handle them."

But Watkins stuck by another provision in the bill, opposed by the Martin administration, under which citizens who appeal rulings by state government agencies no longer could opt to have an agency hearing officer handle the case. The hearing automatically would take place before an OAH hearing officer.

He said that since OAH began operating last year, a small minority of the people who have appealed state agency rulings have chosen to have a department officer hear the case instead of an OAH hearing officer.

"It is just absolutely, pure and simple, do you think people should have impartial hearings or now have an impartial hearing," Watkins said in an interview.

J. Ward Purrington, Martin's legislative lobbyist, said agency hearing officers were best qualified to hear appeals of the agency rulings. "The OAH lawyers have zillions of cases, they don't have the expertise on all of them that agency lawyers do," he said.

Purrington said he hoped the Senate would kill the bill because even with Watkins' proposed amendment it would give OAH too much power.

"We could amend it and amend it, but you're talking almost about a fourth branch of government," Purrington said. "It sets up another court system with no constitutional authority."

The Judiciary IV Committee voted to create the subcommittee to continue work on the bill.

Gov. Jim Martin has filed a lawsuit challenging a provision in the 1985 law under which the chief justice of the state Supreme Court appoints the director of the OAH, who in turn chooses the other hearing officers.

Martin contends that the OAH is part of the executive branch and that the governor, as head of that branch, should name the director.

The suit is pending before the state Supreme Court.

Manufactured Homes Bill Stalls In House

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Efforts to ease local zoning restrictions on manufactured homes have faltered after a watered-down version was nearly killed in a House committee.

"It was a bad idea in the beginning," Fred Baggett of the North Carolina League of Municipalities told the Finance Committee Tuesday. "It's better now, but in principle it's still bad."

The bill originally would have forced local governments to free manufactured homes from trailer parks if they met quality standards. But it was amended to allow a veto of qualified homes if their appearance or value fall short of neighborhood standards.

"You're still interfering in what has historically been a local area," said Jim Blackburn of the N.C. Association of County Commissioners.

Rep. John Church, D-Vance, House sponsor of the controversial measure, said it would help the poor, the elderly and young people get low-cost housing without being confined to undesirable areas.

After the committee voted 20-18 against approving the bill and deadlocked 19-19 on a motion to kill it, Church said he was uncertain whether he would try to get it through the House this session. A similar Senate bill has passed one Senate committee.

"This bill has consumed several hours of debate on the floor and it's getting a little tiresome," he said.

Church said the attention already given to the bill may have helped address the problem facing people looking for low-cost housing outside trailer parks.

"I think the bill woke up a lot of people to a need," he said. "It's alerted local governments to their responsibilities."

Samaritan's Widow Wins Court Appeal

RALEIGH (AP) — The widow of a Thomasville good Samaritan who was killed while helping an injured stranger on the roadside should be eligible for workers' compensation benefits, the North Carolina Court of Appeals has ruled.

In a 3-0 decision Tuesday that expands North Carolina's workers' compensation laws, the court held that Rosemary Roberts should be able to collect death benefits because her husband, Timothy, was killed while offering emergency assistance in a situation that arose out of his employment.

The court said its decision "fosters the sound public policy of encouraging humanitarian acts by employees which directly or indirectly benefit employers."

Roberts, a 29-year-old furniture designer for Burlington Industries, was returning home from a business trip on Nov. 18, 1982, when he stopped on the Interstate 85-Holden Road exit ramp to help an injured man. The man, William Winters, was a transient from Tennessee who had been hit by a car while walking down the ramp.

After notifying the state Highway Patrol, Roberts returned to the accident scene to direct traffic away from Winters' body. He was struck and killed by two cars while standing on the exit ramp.

Roberts' wife filed for benefits for herself and their young daughter in February 1983. The Industrial Commission denied the claim in April 1986, on the grounds that Roberts' accident was not a result of his employment.

In an interview on Tuesday with the Greensboro News & Record, Rosemary Roberts said she was thankful for the ruling.

"I'm so glad that the court saw that what Tim was doing was good," she said. "To me, that's what life is about — the good Samaritan rule."

"It's never been the money," she said of her appeal. "It's because of what Tim stood for — helping people. I wanted to prove that what he did was right."

The court's decision was based on two primary grounds: that Roberts was driving home from a business activity when the accident occurred, and that his employer, Burlington Industries, benefited from the good publicity about his good Samaritan act.

"It is hard to see how the good will of Burlington Industries could not have benefited from the publicity in the Greensboro area surrounding Mr. Roberts' tragic death," the court said.

The defendants in the case, Burlington Industries and Lumbermen's Mutual Casualty Co., have 30 days to appeal the decision to the state Supreme Court.

The law, meant to deter theft from military bases, creates substantial obstacles to the free carrying on of ... business, while its benefit to the public is disproportionately minimal," the panel said in a 2-1 ruling.

BILLS PILE UP — Billy McCalvin of Clayton, who is disabled with spina bifida, faces losing his home unless he can pay $2,500 in medical bills to settle his mother's estate. Creditors have cut the bill by more than half, but the $2,500 is more than he can pay, a lawyer says. (AP Laserphoto)

Handicapped Man Faces Loss Of Home

RALEIGH (AP) — A handicapped Clayton man says he may be left out in the cold if he can't come up with enough money to pay his deceased mother's medical bills.

Nannie Lou McCalvin wanted her son to have a place to live if she should die, so she left him the Clayton home they shared.

But Billy McCalvin, 31, who suffers from spina bifida, may lose that home.

McCalvin said he must pay about $2,500 to close the estate of his mother, who died of bone cancer in February 1986. He gets $370 a month in Social Security, he said, which leaves him little after the monthly bills are paid.

"It bothers me a lot," McCalvin told The Raleigh Times. "I just pray the good Lord will take care of it somehow."

Clayton attorney Allen Tew, who is handling the estate, said Mrs. McCalvin's medical bills after insurance payments were almost $6,000.

"I wrote all of the creditors a letter and advised them of the circumstances ... and the concern for William McCalvin," Tew said.

One creditor canceled his bill and most others discounted their bills by 50 percent or more, he said. "It's down now from about $6,000 to $2,300 to $2,500, and I believe it's closer to $2,300."

Tew said the estate is overdue and should be closed within a week. He said he talked with a bank on behalf of the family, but they did not qualify for a loan.

Elizabeth Rowland, McCalvin's twin sister, said she and her sister both work, and their older brother is in the military. All of them have families of their own, she said, but had offered to help their handicapped brother pay back a loan.

"It's just for him to have some place to stay because Mama worked so hard for that house, you just hate to see it go like that," she said. "It's not a lot of money, but when you don't have it, it's like a million dollars."

Although 65,000 commercial compounds — some of them proven carcinogens — enter the environment each year, only eight chemicals are listed as hazardous and regulated at their source by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, says National Geographic.

Alcohol Foes Kill Plans For Wet Sunday Brunch

RALEIGH (AP) — A bill to allow alcoholic beverage sales one hour earlier for Sunday brunch was killed by alcohol foes who first sharpened their teeth on a measure to allow liquor sales in a remote Alleghany County resort.

Rep. David Redwine, D-Brunswick, chairman of the House Alcoholic Beverage Control Committee, argued in vain for both bills, saying they would help business.

"I think it's merely a convenience for the people in this state who may choose to indulge in refreshments ... and to the restaurants and hotels that do already have mixed beverage permits," he said. "I don't think it's going to cause any more (alcohol) to be sold."

Rep. Coy Privette, R-Cabarrus, who speaks against virtually all liquor-romoting bills, said the Alleghany County measure passed by the Senate would have far-reaching implications. He said the bill would set a precedent that would cause "a terrible erosion of our alcoholic beverage control laws in North Carolina." The House then voted 53-50 against the bill.

After that defeat, Redwine argued that changing the start of Sunday sales from 1 p.m. to noon would not encourage more drinking.

"I don't think we are, in this body, sending a signal to anybody whether or not they should or should not partake of that once they arrive there," he said.

But Redwine acknowledged, "If you philosophically are going to be against alcohol, you're going to be against this bill."

Rep. Jo Graham Foster, D-Mecklenburg, then criticized the raft of alcohol-related bills that have been considered this session, often with only Privette speaking against them.

"I believe we have spent more time debating alcoholic beverage control bills that seemingly are going to destroy what the alcoholic beverage commission has done ... than we have on education or almost any bill that has come to the floor of this House," Ms. Foster added.

The House voted 64-37 against the bill.

IN THE STATE

Flight Canceled

RALEIGH (AP) — The British Air Concorde, the world's fastest passenger jet, will not make its scheduled July 18 landing at Raleigh-Durham Airport as previously planned, the airport's director says.

American Travel Corp. announced in December that passengers could buy four packages to London ranging from $2,975 to $12,000 each for travel on the supersonic jet.

"Whether they intended to re-schedule, I don't know," Airport Director John Brantley told RDU authority members Tuesday.

Beth Collins, manager of the agency's main office, told The News and Observer of Raleigh that not all of the jet's 100 seats had been sold.

She said only the company's president, George Newsom, could provide details, however, he was traveling Tuesday and could not be reached for comment.

The Concorde made its first flight to RDU Sept. 24 for a similar tour, drawing an estimated 15,000 spectators to the airport, officials said.

Speed Limit

GREENSBORO (AP) — North Carolina drivers will soon be able to travel 65 mph on some rural interstates without worrying about getting a speeding ticket.

The state is expected to begin raising the speed limit from 55 mph to 65 mph on some stretches of highway as early as August, said state Transportation Department spokesman Jim Sughrue. The Legislature approved the higher speed limit earlier this year.

Traffic engineers have spent the last two months trying to determine which highway areas can safely carry the 65 mph speed limit. The study should be completed in July, and will be forwarded to Transportation Secretary James Harrington who will make the final decision, Sughrue said.

Homeowners Sue

JEFFERSON, N.C. (AP) — Ten homeowners have sued the Ashe County commissioners, seeking a ruling on the legality of the commissioners' repeal of a mobile home ordinance at the request of Bob McCoy, a former commissioner.

The homeowners are residents of the Wild Acres subdivision on N.C. 153, near a three-quarter-acre lot where McCoy wants to place a mobile home park. McCoy's nephew, Mon McCoy, is on the homeowners filing the suit.

The suit, filed Friday in Ashe County District Court, argues that the commissioners repealed the 14-year-old law "without the matter appearing on the prepared agenda for said meeting; without notice having been given to the plaintiffs or other members of the public; and without a public hearing being held."

Phone Rates

CHARLOTTE (AP) — AT&T will reduce prices for a long-distance call within North Carolina by an average of 4 percent beginning July 1, company officials say.

The company said Monday the price reduction is a result of savings from tax revision and an increase in operating efficiency.

B.C. Morrow, AT&T assistant vice president in Charlotte, said the company will save about $7.4 million in North Carolina this year because of a 20 percent staff reduction and a 10 percent increase in long-distance calling. He said the company will have an additional $1.4 million because of a decrease in federal corporate tax rates from 46 percent to 34 percent effective July 1.

The July 1 in-state price cut coincides with a separate 5 percent reduction of out-of-state long-distance rates. The July 1 in-state price follows a 12 percent reduction May 1. Combined, the reduction of in-state rates will save callers in North Carolina about $35 million, the company said.

Fine Donated

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — The Triad Chapter of United Cerebral Palsy of North Carolina has found out that sometimes playing rough pays off, at least indirectly.

The group will get the $3,260 that racing fans and sponsors contributed to pay off a drivers' fine.

Geoff Bodine was fined $15,000 last month by NASCAR after he rammed his car into one driven by Dale Earnhardt at Charlotte Motor Speedway. WBIG-FM appealed to its listeners to make contributions to pay the fine.

Bodine called the station and said all the money would be donated to cerebral palsy whether or not the fine was lifted. Bodine appealed, and the fine was lifted.

Bodine presented the check to United Cerebral Palsy Monday. Included in it was $2,000 from Bodine, $1,000 for Levi Garrett Tobacco, one of Bodine's sponsors, and $102 from the radio station. The remaining $158 was contributed by listeners.

Food Stamps

WILMINGTON (AP) — A Duplin County woman has won her legal challenge of food-stamp eligibility rules in a victory that could mean three months' worth of food stamps to more than 200 North Carolina households and less stringent federal guidelines for the program.

U.S. District Judge Earl Britt of Raleigh, in a decision handed down Friday, ruled that the U.S. Department of Agriculture and the North Carolina Division of Social Services are enforcing an eligibility standard for food stamps that is stricter than the one prescribed by the federal Food Stamp Act. He ruled the stricter standard invalid.

The Food Stamp Act disqualifies a household from receiving stamps for 90 days if the "head of household" voluntarily quits a job without good cause. The USDA and the N.C. Division of Social Services, on the other hand, have been disqualifying households if the "primary wage earner" quits a job without good cause.

Port Revenues

WILMINGTON (AP) — Revenues at the State Ports at Wilmington and Morehead City will fall more than $1.3 million short of the amount budgeted for the fiscal year that ends June 30, cutting profits to less than 25 percent of the $1.7 million ports officials had expected.

Members of the State Ports Authority board heard a report of the results Tuesday at their monthly meeting.

The board also approved a 1987-88 budget that sets the ports' revenue goal at $25.9 million, slightly more than the $25.3 million goal set for the current year, but cuts their profit goal to $1.08 million.

Most of the 1986-87 budget shortfall occurred at the Wilmington port, where officials estimate profits for the year will be $259,368 instead of the $979,215 budgeted. Wilmington's revenues for the year are projected at $15.2 million instead of the $16.7 million budgeted.

Goldsboro Sues Over Church's Zoning

GOLDSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Goldsboro church leaders say the city's denial of a Baptist church rezoning request borders on a denial of religious freedom and vow to fight the suit.

The city of Goldsboro filed suit this week against the state and the Edgewood Evangelical Baptist Church, asking the court to declare unconstitutional a state law slipped through the Legislature that rezoned the church property.

City Attorney Harrell Everett told the city council Monday that the suit filed in Wayne County Superior Court does not attack the church but fights what the city sees as an unreasonable law.

State Sen. Henson Barnes of Goldsboro used an amendment to an obscure local bill for the town of Grifton to rezone the church's property after the city had denied the rezoning.

Learning of the bill at the last minute, city officials accused Barnes of subverting the city's zoning authority. But Barnes defended his action as "a heavenly cause."

The bill changes the zoning for the church, built on a small residential lot in the 1950s, from residential to office-and-institutional for one year and allows the church to build the two-story addition over the city's objection.

The city argues in its lawsuit that allowing the expansion of the church would cause "irreparable harm, damage and injury" to the city and residents living nearby, some of whom have joined the suit.

Everett said the law arbitrarily grants the church special favors not given any other church or property owner in the city and gives an exclusive privilege to the church forbidden by the state constitution.

But the Rev. David Crawford said the church just wants to complete the original plans made when the church was built 35 years ago.

"The church did not have the finances to complete the facilities at that time," he said. "All we have asked for is the opportunity to add the educational building. This would be a great help to us and would in no way be a problem to the community or the city of Goldsboro."

He said church officials see the lawsuit as an attack against them, as well as Barnes.

"When they hit Sen. Barnes, they hit us," Crawford said. "He is our hero and we think he deserves a medal."

Hospital Stays Growing Longer

RALEIGH (AP) — The average length of a hospital stay is increasing in North Carolina, which hospital officials say is a sign that physicians are putting patients in the hospital only when they are too sick to be treated anywhere else.

"This is more evidence that inpatient hospital care plays a different role now than in years past," said C. Edward McCauley, president of the North Carolina Hospital Association.

"Whenever appropriate, care is given in an outpatient setting," McCauley said. "Virtually 100 percent of North Carolina general hospitals offer outpatient surgery, for instance.

The only patients spending the night in a hospital truly need to be there."

The hospital association said North Carolina inpatients stayed in the hospital an average of 6.94 days in 1986, compared to 6.63 days a year earlier, a 4.7 percent increase. The average length of a hospital stay increased both for patients aged 65 and older, and for those younger than 65.

During the same period, the number of patients admitted to North Carolina hospitals declined 5 percent, continuing a downturn that began in 1981. The number of outpatient hospital visits increased by 10.5 percent, hospital association figures show.

Task Force Studies Leaf Ripening Agents

RALEIGH (AP) — Agriculture officials in North Carolina said a task force formed by Gov. Jim Martin has met three times since June 5 and is taking steps to ease companies' fears about buying artificially ripened tobacco.

"I don't really think we've got a serious problem, and yet some of our customers are concerned," said Carlton Blalock, executive vice president of the Tobacco Growers Association of North Carolina. "They don't know how widespread it is, and so they're cautious."

Blalock also said this year's tobacco markets could be disrupted if farmers use dicamba or other chemicals to artificially ripen green tobacco.

"When our buyers are buying golden tobacco, they're thinking they're buying tobacco with sugar and nicotine," he said. "It (dicamba) creates a false impression of the quality of tobacco."

Dicamba, a herbicide used to kill weeds, poses no health problem to smokers. But the chemical is not approved for use on tobacco because it turns the leaf more yellow, which usually indicates a better quality and raises prices.

The federal Department of Agriculture to increase penalties for using them, Blalock told The News and Observer of Raleigh.

Last year, the USDA found that 5 percent of tobacco samples it took had been treated with dicamba and other weed-killers in the five flue-cured states, Blalock said.

R.J. Reynolds Tobacco USA recently blamed American-grown tobacco for dicamba-tainted cigarettes shipped to Japan. But Rep. Charlie Rose, D-N.C., has disputed that claim, saying the tainted tobacco could have come from foreign sources.

The task force recommendations include urging growers not to use such chemicals and asking the

Dare Area Balks At Condo

WAVES, N.C. (AP) — Residents of Hatteras Island and surrounding communities have launched a petition drive urging the Dare County commissioners to "just say no" to a proposed high-rise condominium complex along the Outer Banks.

"A seven-story-high building (counting the first-story parking area) just is out of place on this island, period. How, aesthetically, can you put seven stories on Hatteras Island," Barton Decker, a leader of the protest drive, told the Virginian-Pilot and Ledger-Star of Norfolk, Va.

"The thing is, we're opposing development, we're opposing the style," said Decker, who runs a surf shop across the road from the eight-acre oceanfront building site.

As word of the condominium proposal spread through this tiny community last week, leaders of the local volunteer fire department issued a statement saying they are not equipped to fight a fire in a building that would reach up to 69 feet high.

However, Dare County officials say there is little they can do to block the condominium complex.

"I don't see any way that the county has any control over this," said Elmer Midgett, chairman of the county planning commission. "What they're (developers) doing now is within the law. They're not doing anything that anybody else can't do."

Midgett Realty, which is obtaining permits for owner Gilray Fabrics of Gibsonville, originally proposed the construction of three six-story condominiums, each with 30 two-bedroom units.

Because there is no zoning on Hatteras Island, the company's plans did not need to go before the county planning commission.

But the initial proposal was rejected by the state Division of Health Services, which ruled that the project would require such a large septic field that its edges would be too close to wells on adjacent land.

Subsequently, Midgett Realty reduced the application for septic permits to involve only one building of 30 units.

"There's always the possibility they can build phases two and three," said Harry Johnson, the county public health director. "But they're going to be a little touchy. The probability of building them is based on getting the public water system."

Stockton Midgett of Midgett Realty had no comment Monday on the construction plan.

State Credit Union Adds Services

The Associated Press

The Center for Community Self-Help has negotiated an agreement with the State Employees Credit Union that will soon allow center depositors to use the credit union's automatic teller machines, the center's associate director says.

The Durham center also has launched a venture capital fund to finance riskier investments, such as home loans to low-income residents who do not qualify for traditional bank loans, Katharine McKee, the center's associate director, told the Greensboro News & Record. Last month, the fund got a $20,000 grant from the Kathleen Price and Joseph M. Bryan Family Foundation of Greensboro.

Founded in 1980, the center first dedicated itself to boosting worker-owned businesses in rural areas. Textile mills in Burlington and Thomasville, an Asheville restaurant and a Carrboro construction firm have all been helped by the center.

The home loans now being offered to low-income North Carolina residents are using grants from the Bryan Foundation and a $125,000 gift from the Ford Foundation.

About 40 such loans, averaging about $25,000 each, have already been made, mostly in the Charlotte area, McKee said.

The center's credit union has savings accounts that offer 5 percent interest rates, as well as Individual Retirement Accounts. Most customers bank by mail, she said.

While the rates are somewhat competitive, McKee said, most of the group's customers deposit money because they agree with the center's political philosophy.

First Union National Bank has given the center a $25,000 grant and a $25,000 interest-free deposit to support the low-income housing program.

"We see it as our foot in the door," McKee said of the bank grants. "We're making the types of loans that are realistically hard for them to do."

Late Taxes

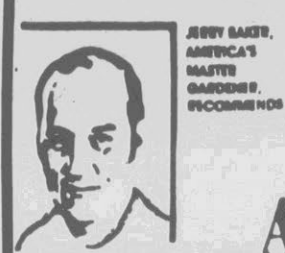

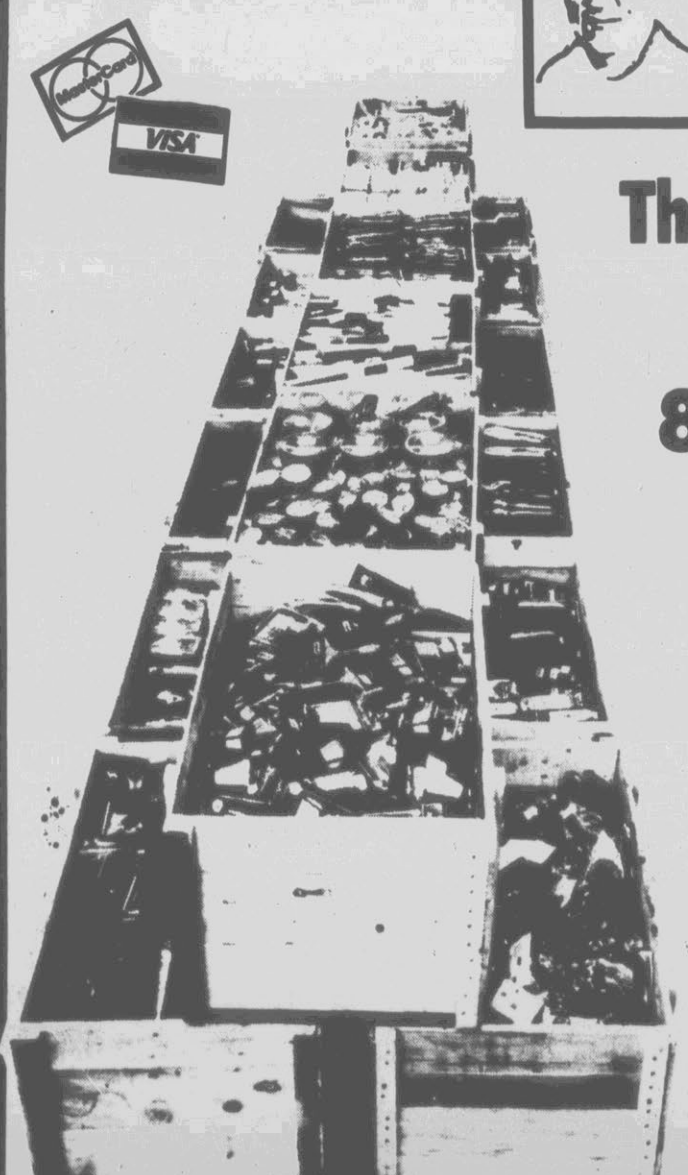

RALEIGH (AP) — State Republican Party Chairman R. Jack Hawke Jr. has failed to list and pay his personal property taxes on time for several years, The Raleigh Times reported Tuesday.

Wake County tax records show that between 1979 and 1985, Hawke failed to list and pay on time his household property taxes on furniture and other items, and that he also hadn't properly listed and paid some taxes on vehicles he owned, the newspaper reported.

"I have no adequate explanation," Hawke said. "My wife and I have shared these responsibilities over the years. We obviously had an oversight, and did not timely file."

"What can I say other than I am sorry that it has happened," Hawke said.

U.S.-Soviet Arms Talks Snagged Over Missile Launchers In Asia

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer
QUEENSTOWN, Md. (AP) — The United States and the Soviet Union are entering a critical new phase of arms control negotiations apparently snagged over whether the Soviets are willing to dismantle 40 nuclear missile launchers in Asia.

The issue is important because it involves the credibility of Soviet General Secretary Mikhail S. Gorbachev and U.S. efforts to shield China and Japan from nuclear attack.

The new phase begins today in Geneva when Max M. Kampelman, the chief U.S. negotiator, arrives for talks with his Soviet counterpart, Yuli Vorontsov.

The contested missiles are SS-12 and SS-23 Soviet rockets with a range of about 300 miles to 600 miles. Following talks in Moscow in mid-April, Secretary of State George P. Shultz was convinced that Gorbachev was willing to dismantle these so-called shorter-range missile launchers, according to a senior U.S. official who spoke only on condition of anonymity.

But the official, speaking with reporters Tuesday at a U.S.-sponsored arms control seminar in Queenstown, said the Soviets are now saying Shultz misunderstood Gorbachev.

The Soviets have about 140 of these missile launchers overall. About one-third are in East Germany and Czechoslovakia, another third in Soviet Europe and the last and controversial third in Asia.

The Asian weapons can be easily transported and sent to sites within range of China and Japan.

Gorbachev in April announced he would unilaterally destroy the missile launchers in East Germany and Czechoslovakia. The Soviets confirmed the missiles in the European area of the Soviet Union also would be dismantled.

But a senior Soviet official informed an American diplomat this week in Moscow that Gorbachev had not promised to remove the 40 remaining launchers in Soviet Asia, the U.S. official said.

The United States, on the other hand, is not inclined to give up its demand that the missiles be scrapped, reducing the Soviet shorter-range missile arsenal to zero.

"We will hold out to that," the official said.

There are no U.S. missiles with a range of 300 miles to 600 miles in Western Europe. Under terms of Shultz's understanding with Gorbachev on so-called Intermediate-Range Nuclear Forces, the United States would give up the right to deploy such missiles among the NATO countries.

West Germany has 72 aging Pershing 1A shorter-range missiles whose nuclear warheads are under U.S. control.

Because of the dispute over the Soviet shorter-range missiles in Asia and problems in deciding how to police an accord, the INF treaty may not be finished before next year, possibly in March, the official said.

Another potential obstacle is U.S. insistence on the right to retain 100 warheads in the 600-to-1,500-mile range in Alaska. These would balance the 100 warheads with that range that Reagan has agreed the Soviets can keep, for the time being, in Asia.

Both the 600-mile and the 1,500-mile missiles are considered intermediate-range nuclear forces.

When Kampelman meets with Vorontsov, the Soviets are expected to insist that the missiles not remain in Alaska, within possible range of the Soviet Union.

But, the official said, "We see no reason to make such a concession now."

He said Gorbachev may have to decide whether to accept President Reagan's invitation for a summit meeting late this year in Washington without a nuclear weapons limitation treaty to sign.

"If they are waiting for an INF agreement before there is a summit, they are going to have to wait a bit," the official said.

His account took some of the gloss off Reagan's speech to the nation Monday night that the two superpowers were on the brink of a historic treaty.

Newspaper Shows Profit

WASHINGTON (AP) — USA Today, the national newspaper with a distinctive blue and white logo, turned its first profit six months ahead of schedule, according to Gannett Co. executives.

Founded nearly five years ago, USA Today recorded a $1.09 million profit for May. In April, the paper lost $899,999.

Gannett Chairman Allen H. Neuharth told a news conference Tuesday that the figure for the month "confirms that USA Today is here to stay, if, in fact, there has been any lingering doubt about that."

John J. Curley, Gannett president, said the newspaper was in the black six months ahead of the projections that the company had made when USA Today was launched in September 1982.

He predicted the newspaper's average daily circulation would top 1.6 million for the six-month period ending Sept. 30.

Kuwaiti Tankers Carry U.S. Names

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Kuwaiti tankers to be outfitted with U.S. flags and captains also will be given new names, introducing such American notions as "Surf City" to the Persian Gulf.

Under the plan, four of the reflagged tankers will be named for New Jersey towns, according to a House report. They'll go from Arabic names like Al Rekkah and Casbah to Surf City, Ocean City, Sea Isle City and Bridgeton.

"All of a sudden, the Kuwaiti fleet reads like a road map of southern New Jersey," Rep. William J. Hughes, D-N.J., said Tuesday.

The Reagan administration plans to reflag 11 oil tankers to protect them from attack in the Iran-Iraq war. The policy, which may also include U.S. Navy escorts, has drawn sharp congressional criticism.

Other tankers are proposed to become the Chesapeake City, Middleton, Townsend, and a string of gas royalty: Gas Queen, Gas Princess, Gas King and Gas Prince.

According to the report by the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee, ownership of the tankers — originally held in Kuwait — will be transferred to a Dover, Del., corporation, Chesapeake Shipping Co.

U.S. law requires any ship under the American flag to be owned by an American company, said Coast Guard spokesman Nicholas Sandifer. He said the Coast Guard is awaiting bills of sale proving that ownership of the Kuwaiti vessels has been transferred.

Gene Miller, the Washington-based lawyer for Chesapeake shipping, said he is unsure who proposed the names.

Sandifer said the ships' new owner has no legal obligation to change the names.

Baptists OK Peace Report

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Conservatives in the Southern Baptist Convention have staved off efforts to alter or delay a vote on a controversial Peace Committee report, approving the report as written.

Southern Baptist fundamentalists tightened their grip on control of the 14.6 million-member denomination earlier Tuesday by re-electing the Rev. Adrian Rogers as president. Jack Stanton, director of the Institute of Evangelism at Southwest Baptist University, was re-elected first vice president.

Rogers, a conservative who will serve his second one-year term, defeated the Rev. Richard Jackson of the North Phoenix Baptist Church by 13,980 to 9,331 in a vote that mirrored the split between the factions in the SBC, the nation's second-largest denomination behind Roman Catholics.

USDA Says Farm Values Bottoming Out

WASHINGTON (AP) — After five years of brutal decline, the nation's farmland values apparently are bottoming out, the Agriculture Department says.

But officials are cautious about making predictions, indicating that no boom is in sight and that what happens through 1988 also depends of a host of economic factors including commodity prices and federal programs.

praisers and several surveys by Federal Reserve banks in April noted a leveling in values in areas where values were still falling late last year," the department's Economic Research Service said in a report Tuesday.

Bill Heneberry, the principal author, said the number of farmland transfers also has started to rise for the first time since the early 1980s. Although voluntary sales and estate sales account for most of the transfers, foreclosures made up an estimated 26 percent of the total, up from 22 percent last year, he said.

"We think that 26 percent is a conservative figure, that it probably does not include some farms where it was a voluntary (sale) to avoid foreclosure," Heneberry said.

Other farmers continue to make up the largest category of farmland buyers, he said, accounting for 56 percent of the purchases so far this year, compared with 57 percent in 1986 and 63 percent in 1985.

No new dollar figures were available, but Heneberry noted in an interview that two months ago that the agency published national and state figures showing the average value of U.S. farmland and buildings on Feb. 1 was at a 19-year low of $548 per acre, down from $595 a year earlier.

Farmland prices rose to a peak of $823 per acre in 1982 before starting their five-year slide.

Israeli Jets Strike Sidon Camp Site

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli warplanes today raided Palestinian targets near south Lebanon's provincial capital of Sidon.

State-run Beirut Radio and the Christian-controlled Voice of Lebanon said the attack at 12:10 p.m. (5:10 a.m. EDT) was focused on a residential neighborhood of the Mieh Mieh refugee camp on the southeastern outskirts of Sidon.

But in Jerusalem, the army command said Israeli planes attacked a guerrilla target in the Ein Hilweh refugee camp outside Sidon, and a building in the village of Qabriha about 10 miles north of the Israeli border.

The building in Qabriha served as a headquarters for the radical Shiite Hezbollah guerrilla organization, an army spokesman said.

The spokesman, who insisted on anonymity in keeping with Israeli military regulations, said the raid on Ein Hilweh came several hours after the strike on Qabriha.

The spokesman said the Ein Hilweh target, which he did not identify, served as a headquarters for guerrilla organizations.

The army said all pilots returned safely to base and reported accurate hits on target. There was no immediate report of casualties in the attacks.

"Ambulances rushed from Sidon to the Mieh Mieh camp shortly after the air attack," Beirut Radio said.

Israel has carried out 16 previous air attacks into Lebanon this year, killing 53 people and wounding 171, according to police records.

Earlier in the day, Israeli forces and their Christian-led Lebanese militia allies pounded six Shiite Moslem towns and villages in south Lebanon with field artillery.

Police said one woman was killed and six people were injured in the barrage.

The 45-minute barrage began at 11:30 a.m. (4:30 a.m. EDT), a police statement said.

The artillery attack, according to the statement, covered the inland market town of Nabatiyeh and the adjacent villages of Kfar Roumman, Habboush, Arabsaleem, Jabaa and Jarjou.

The statement identified the source of fire as "positions manned by Israeli forces and South Lebanon Army militiamen in hills southeast of Nabatiyeh."

The Israeli-backed South Lebanon Army militia mans a narrow strip of Lebanese territory along the border with the Jewish state to prevent cross-border guerrilla attacks into northern Israel.

Israel maintained the so-called "security zone" when it withdrew the bulk of its occupation army from south Lebanon in the summer of 1985. Israeli forces help the SLA in patrolling the terrain.

Korean Students Holding Center

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Three hundred students held a nine-story Roman Catholic center today after fierce anti-government protests in the southern city of Pusan, officials reported.

The occupation began a second week of daily, often violent demonstrations against the government of President Chun Doo-hwan.

Students moved into the building, which houses offices and meeting rooms, in Pusan overnight during a lull in demonstrations in South Korea's second-largest city, said the government-controlled Yonhap News Agency.

Witnesses and news reports said 5,000 students took to the streets Tuesday in Pusan, 200 miles southeast of Seoul, many defying tear gas to chant anti-government slogans and hurl rocks and firebombs. At least one police bus was burned and a police station damaged.

Hundreds of students occupied Seoul's Myongdong Cathedral compound last week and held it for six days, sparking anti-government protests across the country.

The Roman Catholic Church has supported opposition demands for direct presidential elections and other reforms.

In Seoul on Tuesday, thousands of students shouting "Down with the military dictatorship" sought repeatedly to defy the police posted around their campuses.

Vietnam Communists Plan 'To Purify' Party, State

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Vietnam will reorganize and "purify" the Communist Party and state so they can implement economic and social reforms, party chief Nguyen Van Linh told the opening session of the National Assembly today.

The Vietnam News Agency, monitored in Bangkok, carried the speech, which did not include announcement of any leadership changes. The week-long session is widely expected to identify replacements for Pham Van Dong, 79, who has been premier since 1955, and President Truong Chinh, who has been a national leader for decades.

The leaders resigned their top party positions last December. Their retirement from government would strip the senior leadership of the last revolutionaries who helped Ho Chi Minh found the Communist Party in 1930 and then guided it through five decades of turmoil, including the victory over U.S. and South Vietnamese forces.

The Vietnamese agency provided the text of Linh's keynote speech before the assembly, which was elected April 19.

In the speech, Linh said last December's sixth national party congress had offered solutions to serious social and economic problems, but added that these could not be implemented without changes in organization and personnel. The party championed economic reforms based on decentralization of management, material incentives, and limited private enterprise.

Vietnam announced a major Cabinet reshuffle in February and over the past year, in a nationwide crackdown, authorities have purged, disciplined and tried in court numerous officials for alleged corruption, inefficiency and sloth.

"Since the Congress, the party and state have focused on making structural and personnel adjustments in central and local offices," Linh said.

"Only when order and discipline is re-established in the party and all state bodies will we be strong enough to re-establish order and discipline in society," Linh said.

He repeated previous statements that the party's all-powerful Politburo was "actively preparing to purify the party and state machinery." He added without elaborating that the state apparatus will be further consolidated during the assembly session.

Linh said "imperfect management," along with crop damage due to bad weather this year made it difficult to implement the party's priority goal of removing restrictions on the distribution and circulation of goods. "So the important thing now is to strengthen leadership," he said.

Linh also said Vietnam has decided to shift its economic relations with the Soviet Union, its main ally, from loans and trade to "mutually profitable production cooperation" in agriculture, consumer goods, mechanical engineering and other fields. Moscow has criticized Vietnam for wasting large amounts of Soviet assistance.

Linh also expressed hope for a political settlement of the conflict in Cambodia, Japan's Kyodo news service reported from Hanoi. Vietnam invaded Cambodia in late 1978 and maintains tens of thousands of troops there.

Kyodo said Linh also called for normalized ties with China, with whom Vietnam fought a bloody border war a few weeks after the Cambodia invasion.

The assembly opened a day after foreign ministers of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations, in a joint communique, condemned Vietnam for its occupation of Cambodia. The ministers this year focused on the continued flow of boat refugees from Vietnam, saying the migrations threatened the region's stability.

Lifestyle

Selling To Fashion Kids

By ANN NOWAK

L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

This fall, fashion-conscious kids will be able to wear what they eat.

Taking the cue from Murjani International — the company that put the Coca-Cola symbol on clothing and then persuaded the public to buy $250 million worth of it by the end of last year — apparel manufacturers have scrambled to scoop up licenses for everything from Jello-O to Lifesavers to Mayor McCheese for their fall childrens-wear lines.

Leading the pack is Sears, Roebuck & Co., which last week introduced McKids — a line of colorful, casual clothing produced under a licensing agreement with McDonald's. A spokeswoman for Sears said the company plans to devote up to 70 percent of its childrens-wear floor space to McKids, with small boutique-like areas, colorful graphics, and McDonaldland characters. The collection of separates, accessories, shoes and pajamas is moderately priced, ranging from $5 for a toddler T-shirt to $17 for washed-cotton pants. And fear not that your kids will look like walking billboards when wearing the stuff: only 10 to 15 percent of the items will have any visible tie-in to the golden arches.

Sears plans to spend $10 million on television and print advertising to promote McKids, beginning July 26. The apparel, designed for children through age 7, also will be featured in a 24-page section of the Sears fall-winter catalog, to be released later this month.

Retail analysts predict McKids will bring in more than $100 million in sales during its first year, an amount equal to last year's sales of Sears' popular Winnie-the-Pooh clothing, which it has licensed from Walt Disney since 1965. McKids is the first major children's brand that Sears has introduced since Winnie-the-Pooh.

David Stewart Sears vice president in charge of men's and childrens-wear, said the company does not intend to abandon the dressier, more traditional Winnie-the-Pooh line in favor of the trendier, sportier McKids. "They are intended to complement each other," he said.

But McDonald's and Sears will not be alone in their quest to capture the fancies of kids and pocketbooks of parents. Burger King has a line of kids' clothing in the works; General Foods has sold the licensing rights for Jell-O. And Nabisco Brands has completed licensing agreements with Dobbie Originals, a division of West Point Pepperell, to introduce a fall line of children's clothing with logos of products that include the Baby Ruth candy bar, Bubble Yum bubblegum, Barnum's Animals, the 85-year-old cracker, and Oreo, the 76-year-old cookie. Peter Knitzer, manager of licensing ventures for Nabisco Brands USA, said the arrangement would help to "enhance equity in our brand names."

The Burger King clothes, sized toddler to 16, are priced from $12.99 to $15.99. Some of the sweatshirts will say "Burger King Kids" or "Have It Your Way" on the front, while other fleece and jersey separates will bear a small replica of the company's hamburger-shaped emblem.

The Jell-O clothes, for children through age 8, will be sold at J.C. Penney beginning next month. According to Paula Heullitt, a spokeswoman for General Foods, some of the clothes will bear the words "Breakin' the Mold"; all will be brightly colored, "reminiscent of our product line," she said.

But for all this new competition in the licensing of consumables for children's apparel, the company that started it all says it is not concerned. "The wonderful thing about Coca-Cola is that there is 100 years of positive lifestyle imagery associated with it," said Carol Fox, a spokeswoman for Murjani. "We did a bunch of research and found that Coca-Cola has nothing but positive images: values, honesty, energy, youth ... Coca-Cola stands for something; that's something very few other brands could claim."

She added that since 1985 when the line of Coca-Cola clothing was launched, Murjani has received "tons of phone calls from companies who would like us to do for their brands what we did for Coke. And our feeling is certainly one of pride because we were the first to do it."

Fox said the idea to launch a line of Coca-Cola clothes came from lawyers looking for a way to protect the company's trademark.

Meanwhile, those who follow licensing say they are not surprised by the new rush to cash in on the childrens-wear market.

Arnold Bolka, publisher of the Licensing Letter, a Scottsdale, Ariz., newsletter, said sales of licensed products have soared from $4.9 billion in 1977 to $54.3 billion in 1986, and are expected to reach $90 billion by the early 1990s. Apparel and accessories, including childrens lines, are the most lucrative category — with annual sales of licensed items reaching $18.7 billion for 1986.

Says Bolka, the field is "hot and it's still growing."

Murjani expects sales of Coca Cola clothes to reach $500 million for 1987. This includes both children's and adults' lines, encompassing everything from sportswear, swimwear, and sleepwear, to maternity-wear, shoulderpads, sunglasses, socks and watches.

Although neither McKids nor Burger King clothing will be sold in adult sizes, some of the Nabisco items will be. Mayfair Industries is expected to sell Life Savers and Oreo Cookies apparel in August. Mayfair is also coming out with adult sweatshirts featuring Hershey Bars and Reese's Pieces, under a licensing agreement with Hershey Foods Corp. Teens Need Attitude Check

DEAR ABBY: Will you please reprint that letter you ran beginning "Dear Kid"? It was signed "The Boss" — explaining why he picked "the other kid" who had applied for a job. It appeared in your column several years ago, but with summer here it would be helpful if you ran it again. I am a businessman, and you wouldn't believe what comes in here applying for a job. Thank you. — PORTLAND, ORE., BUSINESSMAN me for a job. From the look of your shoulders as you walked out, I suspect you've been turned down before, and maybe you believe by now that kids your age can't find jobs.

Dear Abby

"But I hired a teen-ager today. You saw him. What was so special about him? Not experience; neither of you had any. Attitude, son. A-T-T-I-T-U-D-E. He did his best to impress me. That is where he edged you out.

"He wasn't dressed like Easter Sunday, but then that wasn't necessary. His clothes were clean, and he had gotten a haircut. He filled out the application form neatly and completely. He did not ask to borrow a pen. He carried his Social Security card, had basic identification and did not ask, 'What's a reference?'"

"He didn't have two friends waiting for him by the pop machine. He didn't start to chew gum or smoke while being interviewed. He didn't keep looking at his watch, giving me the impression that he had something more important to do.

"He took the time to find out how we 'operate' here, and what his day-to-day tasks would be. I think he'll keep his eyes open and work for me like he'd work for himself.

"He was willing to start at that point where I could afford to pay. Someday, perhaps, he'll get to the point where he'll have more authority over others and a better paycheck.

"You know, kid, men have always had to get a job like you get a girl: case the situation, wear a clean shirt, and try to appear reasonably willing.

"Maybe jobs aren't as plentiful right now, but there are jobs. You may not believe it, but all around you employers are looking for young men and women smart enough to go after a job in the old-fashioned way.

"If you have even the vaguest idea of what I'm trying to say, let it show the next time you ask for a job. You will be head and shoulders above the rest.

"For both our sakes, get eager, will you? — THE BOSS"

Peach, Strawberry Are Designed As Fun Project

The shaded fruits on these needlepoint pictures look good enough to eat. The peach and strawberries can adorn your walls in no time because they are designed to be worked quickly on 10-mesh canvas to fit four-by-six-inch frames.

You have two options in creating this fun project — either work from a simple chart using your own canvas and yarn, or send for the complete kit, which includes the preworked fruit designs on cotton canvas along with the tapestry yarn needed to fill in the background with continental or half-cross stitches.

To obtain chart and directions for making the Delightful Needlepoint Fruit, send your request for Leaflet No. Z-060787 with $2 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler Crafts, The Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 419148, Kansas City, Mo., 64141.

Or you may order Kit No. N-060787 by sending a check or money order for $12.95 to Pat Trexler Crafts at the same address. The kit price includes shipping charges, full instructions, tapestry yarn, needle and canvas with the fruit designs already worked for you. Frames are not included.

If you are a newcomer to the art of needlepoint, you may not be aware of the variety of canvas available, or you may be confused as to the type best suited to your needs.

Years ago, most needlepoint canvas in this country was the two-thread or Penelope type. This has two threads woven close together horizontally and vertically. To put it another way, there are two warp and two weft threads woven in pairs.

The advantage to this type of canvas is that it allows you to use small and large stitches on the same piece.

For example, on 10-mesh Penelope, you can work details in a finer count of 20-to-the-inch by separating the threads and working a stitch over each thread. The background and larger design areas would be worked at a 10-to-the-inch count over the double threads. The finer stitches are usually referred to as petit point.

In much wider use today are mono and interlock canvases, both with single threads in each direction. Perhaps I should say that both appear to have single threads. Interlocking canvas actually has two threads twisted very tightly together. These cannot be separated for working petit point, so it is simpler to consider it a single-thread canvas.

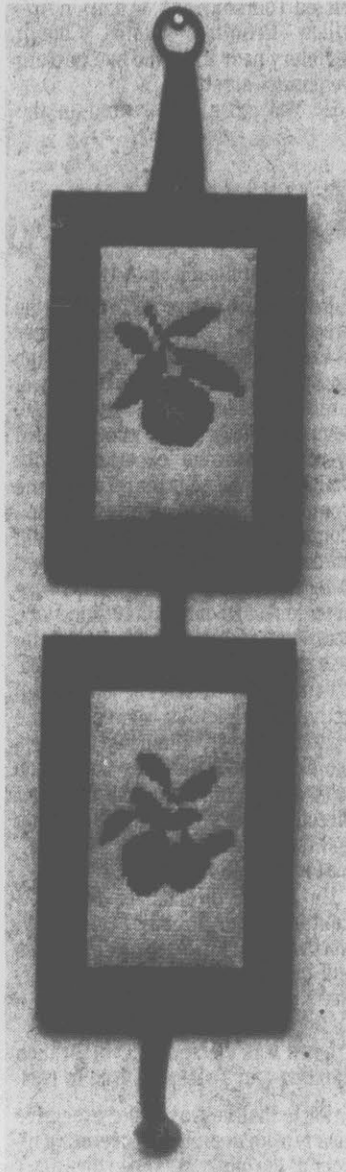

Many needlepoint experts prefer mono to interlock because of its greater durability, which makes it a better choice for any needlepoint that will receive hard use or might become an heirloom.

There is one quirk to mono canvas that you should be aware of: as a general rule, it is not a true even-weave fabric. For example, on 10-mesh mono, you may have a true count of 100 threads over a 10-inch span while in the other direction, the thread count may be only 95.

Personally, I prefer interlock for working decorative stitches and for doing Bargello stitchery. It is not only a more even weave, but it also has less "give" than mono so that the depth of the long, straight Bargello stitches is more even and there is less canvas distortion.

Technically, needlepoint is surface embroidery so it can be worked on any even-weave fabric, and many creative stitchers today are using a wide variety of materials. Linen and congress cloth are becoming very popular.

Finally, for a wide variety of casual and functional items, there are the plastic canvases extremely popular

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed today, encountering some resistance after Tuesday's rise to record highs.

The 10 a.m. Dow Jones average of 30 industrials stood at 2,407.35, unchanged from its close Tuesday.

Gainers held a 7 to 6 lead over losers in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 580 up, 500 down and 487 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 27.99 million shares after the first half hour of trading.

The government said today the U.S. economy grew at a sizzling 4.8 percent annual rate in the first three months of 1987, substantially higher than previously thought. Analysts, however, cautioned that the performance of the gross national product deceptively overstated the strength in the economy and they continued to predict a sharp drop in the growth rate for the current April-June quarter.

Among actively traded blue chips, DuPont rose 1/4 to 117 1/2 and Eastman Kodak was up 3/8 at 87 3/8, while General Electric slipped 3/8 to 53 1/2 and American Express lost 1/8 to 36.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks edged up .15 to 171.50. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index added .82 to 338.14.

ing a nightmare." The case also had racial overtones, because Goetz victims — Barry Allen, Darrell Cabey, Troy Canty and James Ramseur — are black.

"We didn't feel it was racial," juror Michael Axelrod said on ABC's "Nightline." "We didn't lower ourselves to that. ... To say that this is a racism thing or this is a vigilante thing is a bunch of garbage, because it just wasn't there. This was another attempted murder case."

Mayor Edward I. Koch said, "Some may be apprehensive that the verdict is a signal that vigilantism will be condoned. They are wrong."

"Vigilantism must be condemned and those who have engaged in such acts must be punished to the fullest extent of the law," Koch said in Nashville, Tenn., where he was attending a mayors' conference.

"The law is the law," said Gov. Mario Cuomo.

Defense attorney Barry Slotnik, asked on NBC's "Today" show what kind of message the verdict sends out, replied, "I'm troubled by that. I don't think the case should send out a message. I think what it's done is it chips away a bit of urban blight." "The message it may send out is to predators who are preying on those in our society that somewhere, somehow they may find themselves in difficult spot one more time," he said.

Goetz, a 39-year-old electronics specialist, had been charged with four counts each of attempted murder, assault and illegal possession of weapons; and one count of reckless endangerment.

The prosecution portrayed him as an enraged man who shot with vicious intent; the defense painted a picture of a reasonable man perfectly justified in pulling the trigger under the circumstances.

Goetz did not testify, but the jury saw his videotaped confession.

When he decided he was going to be robbed, Goetz said on the tape, "My intention was to do anything I could do to hurt them. My intention — you know, I know this sounds horrible — but my intention was to murder them, to hurt them, to make them suffer as much as possible."

He said his only problem was that he ran out of bullets.

Train Fatality

A motorist was killed today when the vehicle he was driving collided with a CSX train east of Greenville.

The identity of the victim had not been determined by mid-morning, according to trooper Brad Ward of the N.C. Highway patrol.

According to Ward, the vehicle was traveling north on state road 1726 when the accident occurred. The train's engineer was H.I. Johnson Jr. of Williamston.

tronic equipment) you don't have ballots as such. I've been there as late as 5:30 in the morning" because of discrepancies in figures.

The time element in manning polls and tabulating results have made it difficult to recruit people to work during elections, Ms Hardee said. "Nobody can stand those hours not to mention the stress and frustration."

The electronic system simplifies the voting and tabulating process by eliminating paper ballots, Boram said. A ballot, determined according to the election and candidates, is drafted by a ballot plotter with the aid of IBM computer components. It then is programmed electronically into a cartridge. The cartridge is inserted into the voting machine, which records the selections of the voters.

Votes are entered into the machine electronically, and results are printed out by each voting machine, recorded on the cartridge and are read by a computer. Election results usually are sent to a central location for tabulation.

The entire tabulation process may take about an hour and a half, Boram said. It takes about "a half a second" to read each one (cartridge), which may be inserted into any machine. The totals from each cartridge are compiled, and the results are printed onto paper tape. A precinct total cartridge is then inserted to permanently record precinct totals.

Most poll workers at the demonstration agreed on the benefits of the system, but several were cautious with their endorsement because of the effect it may have on some voters.

For example, the machines may intimidate older or less educated voters, said Rufus Huggins, chairman of Precinct Four. "It (the voting process) is hard enough as it is. I like it (the machine), but maybe there is some kind of education process" that familiarizes voters with the electronic system.

The Shoup Corp. provides up to a year of live demonstrations of the machines in shopping areas and malls, Boram said.

To date, 150 kidney transplants, one kidney-pancreas transplant and one heart transplant have been done at Pitt Memorial. The survival rate for all transplants here is 94 percent, better than the state and national averages, she said.

Ralph Hall, vice president for facilities services, reported that bids for a birthing center component of the hospital will be taken July 23. He said that consideration is being given to requesting that the county build an office building adjacent to the hospital and lease it to the hospital. A similar arrangement with the county for hospital storage space has been successfully carried out, he indicated.

Approval was given for placing Dr. Mary Beth Foil on the hospital's inactive staff. A surgeon, Foil plans to study in San Diego for some time and then intends to come back here to work.

Golfers Predict High Scores If Weather Stays Sunny And Windy For U.S. Open Tourney

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The world's best golfers, millionaires who follow the sun, would prefer that it stay out of sight during the 87th U.S. Open Championship.

"After today, I don't know if anyone can feel confident about this course," defending champion Ray Floyd said after his Tuesday practice round. "If it stays sunny and windy, I think we could see some of the highest Open scores in years."

Jack Nicklaus predicted, "Par will be a very good score. I'm not sure if it's going to win, but it will be a good score."

Spain's Seve Ballesteros added, "A lot depends on the (weather) conditions. If they were good, I'd take even par right now."

He meant "good" from the spectator's standpoint. The players would welcome chilly fog through the four rounds of play.

The Open will begin Thursday on the Olympic Club's par-70 Lake course, a quarter-mile from the Pacific Ocean. On most spring and summer days, fog covers the course at least through the morning and keeps fairways and greens relatively soft.

An overdose of sunshine firms up those fairways and greens, and that's what has happened this week.

"The greens are firm and fast and they're not going to be very easy," said Nicklaus, adding that because of putting troubles he hasn't found any green in the country easy lately.

"The fairways are very firm, and it will be important to keep the ball in the fairway. If you don't, you're not going to be able to get it on the green," he said.

Most of the Lake course's greens are very small by modern Tour standards. And, even compared to other Opens on other courses, those targets will appear even smaller on approach shots from off the fairways.

Ballesteros described the four-inch rough as "about the same as for any Open, big and fluffy and difficult."

"The most difficult thing will be just putting the ball in play. It always is on an Open course."

Nicklaus, winner of four Open titles, said he believes this year's champion will be "a plodder, a guy who keeps the ball down the middle, gets it on the green and doesn't try to be a hero on too many holes."

On an Open course, Floyd said, a golfer off the fairway often has to lower his goals.

"You have to try to make bogey sometime, because if you go for a par you might end up with a double- or triple-bogey," he said.

Floyd, Nicklaus and Trevino are all in their 40s. Floyd, who won his first Open title at 44 and collected $380,000 in Tour winnings last year, is 62nd on the money list this season with $84,673. Nicklaus, 99th with $47,431, and Trevino, 187th with $6,134 have played in only seven Tour events apiece this year.

Younger players such as Ballesteros, Greg Norman, Payne Stewart, Ben Crenshaw and Lanny Wadkins — all looking for their first U.S. Open victories — are generally considered the favorites this week, regardless of the weather and course conditions.

Nicklaus was 66th in his own Memorial Tournament last month and last week missed the cut at Westchester with rounds of 77 and 76.

"Last week, I played about as badly as I can ever recall playing," he said. "My golf game should be decent. I've got two days to find out whether I can play better."

Floyd believes he has regained his putting touch, the strongest part of his game. He was 13th at the Kemper event two weeks ago after missing the cut in three straight tournaments.

"I didn't make the kind of critical errors I had been making, and that gave me some confidence," he said.

Trevino, fourth in the 1986 Open, was asked Tuesday if he thought he had a chance this year to win his third Open title.

"Not at all," he said. "I haven't been playing well and I'm almost 48 years old."

Besides, he added, "I've never won a major championship when the greens were hard. I won in the mud."

Sampson Is Given Deal

HOUSTON (AP) — The Rockets went free agent Ralph Sampson in a Houston uniform next season, and General Manager Ray Patterson thinks he has offered the 7-foot-4 forward a contract that exceeds the one signed by teammate Akeem Olatunji.

"The difference in the contracts is the difference in the way you treat money — annuities, up front bonuses, interest on money loaned," Patterson said Tuesday.

"The difference is in the interpretation of the contract. I'd say his (Sampson) contract exceeds Akeem's in the way we interpreted it."

"But that's about as specific as I want to get because we're still negotiating in good faith and I want to keep it that way."

After struggling through an injury-plagued season, Sampson announced last week he had reached an impasse in contract negotiations and would seek his value on the free-agent market.

Sampson said the Rockets had failed in a pledge to match Olatunji's contract.

Templeton Quits EC Post; To Enter Private Business

Gene Templeton, associate director of athletics for internal affairs at East Carolina University for the past two years, has resigned his position effective July 15, it was announced Wednesday.

Templeton will assume the position of business manager and operations officer of Westec Communications, Inc., a privately-held corporation that specializes in research, development and production of microwave oscillators in Scottsdale, Ariz.

Templeton joined the ECU athletic staff in the fall of 1985 after serving as director of athletics at the University of Alaska-Anchorage for more than four years.

His duties with the Pirate athletic program included overseeing all internal operations within the athletic department.

"It is with regret that I leave the athletic program at ECU," Templeton said. "Athletics has been a part of my life for more than 30 years and it's been very good to me, but this opportunity was one that I could not pass up."

Prior to his position at Alaska-Anchorage, Temple held the title of associate director of athletics at San Diego State University from 1970-80, where current ECU director of athletics Ken Karr was the SDSU AD at the time.

The Odessa, Texas, native is a 1957 graduate of the University of Texas. Templeton also holds M.S. and Ph.D. degrees in physical education from the University of New Mexico.

Pitt, Jarman Blank Wilson

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Eric Jarman had not taken the mound since completing last year's American Legion baseball campaign until last night.

His return was as if he had never laid off for nearly 12 months.

Jarman scattered seven hits as he led Pitt County's Post 39 to a 4-0 victory over Wilson Post 13 Tuesday night at Harrington Field.

A freshman at N.C. Wesleyan, Jarman was not involved in any pitching this past year. "I thought he did a super job," Coach Toby Holiday said.

Late in the game, Jarman began to struggle, giving up two hits to open the ninth inning, but Holiday made his only trip to the mound at that time. "I just wanted to see if he was OK," Holiday said. "I didn't want him to be too tired. But mainly, I just wanted to calm him down and get him to throw strikes."

"It was close all the way," Holiday said of the game. "I thought we hit the ball well at key times, and David (Daniels) hit the ball well. We did make a couple of mistakes in baserunning, but I thought we've played better defense the last couple of games."

Jarman, in going the distance for Pitt, struck out four and walked only one. Wilson did threaten on several occasions, but he and his teammates were able to get out of each jam.

Wilson put a man on second with two outs in the second inning on an infield hit and a stolen base. In the third, Chris Davis singled, moved up on a passed ball and took third on a two-out single by Jay Lamm. But an infield grounder ended that threat.

Johnny Hinnant led off the fifth with an infield hit and was sacrificed to second, only to die there. Doug Flowers reached on a chopper to third that was then thrown away to allow him to reach second, but again, Wilson got no further. Pinchhitter Brent Barnes led off the eighth with a walk, moving up on a out, but again got no further.

Perhaps the best Wilson threat came in the ninth. Steve Schmidt opened with a double to center and Jerry Smith got an infield hit to put runners on the corners with no one out.

But Jarman struck out the next batter, got the following one on a fly ball to short right, and fanned the final man on a strike out, ending the game.

Pitt, meanwhile, was picking up a run here and there to take the win. The first came in the second inning.

With one away, Jarman helped himself with a single to left. He moved up on an out and scored when Ty Little singled to left for a 1-0 lead.

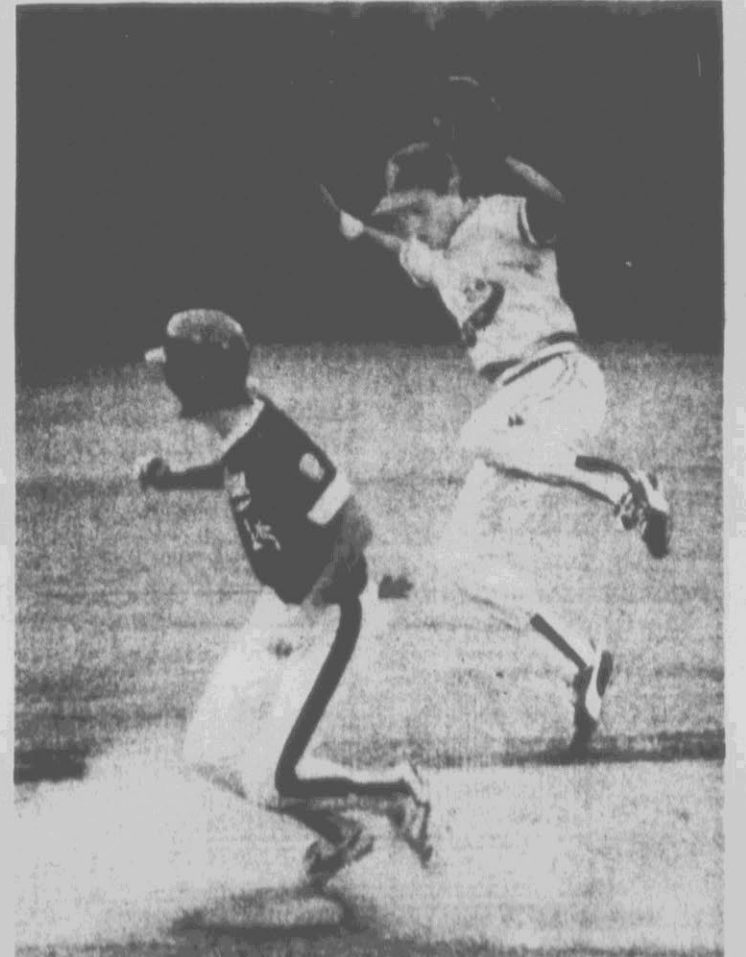

Two more crossed in the sixth. Daniels opened things up with a triple off the fence in deep center, easily scoring on Robbie McDonald's single to center. Jarman followed with a ground-ruled double to right, putting runners on second and third with none out. Then, after an infield out advanced no one, Little's fly ball to left scored McDonald to up the lead to 3-0.

The final run came in the eighth.

Where's The Ball?

Daniels was hit by a pitch and stole second. He advanced to third on a wild pitch and Jarman walked. Jarman then allowed himself to be caught in a rundown as Daniels came home.

Jarman and Shane Adams each had two hits to lead the Pitt attack.

Wilson had no one with more than one hit.

The win boosted the Pitt County record to 3-2 on the season while Wilson falls to 4-3.

Pitt will return to action tonight, playing host to Snow Hill at 8 p.m. at Harrington Field.

Winfield's Homers Help Yanks

By The Associated Press
Embarrassed by a one-sided sweep of a three-game series last week at the hands of Toronto, the New York Yankees are determined to turn things around. So far, they're getting the hitting and pitching when they need it.

On Tuesday night, it was the hitting which came through. Dave Winfield had two homers and Willie Randolph's opposite-field single drove in the key runs in a 6-5 victory over the slumping Baltimore Orioles. Since being outscored 21-3 by the Blue Jays, who moved past the Yankees and into first place in the American League East, New York has changed direction. The Yankees have won four of their last five games.

"It shows that we did not concentrate all of our hopes on the one series," Randolph said. "We have played really good ball since then, especially with all the guys out." Even without stars Don Mattingly and Rickey Henderson, both on the disabled list, the Yankees have had a solid offense in the five games. They've scored 31 runs in those games.

Trailing 4-2 after Cal Ripken's two-run single in the sixth, New York sent nine men to the plate in the bottom of the inning off starter Ken Dixon and Mark Williamson, 2-4.

Winfield and Dan Pasqua tied the score with consecutive home runs, and Mike Pagliarulo and Salas greeted Williamson with consecutive singles. New York loaded the bases with two outs when second baseman Alan Wiggins failed to cover the bag on a grounder to shortstop by Wayne Tolleson.

Randolph followed with a single, driving home Pagliarulo and Salas. "I was determined to hit the ball hard somewhere," Randolph said. "You have to take advantage of breaks like that."

Elsewhere, Jose Guzman pitched 7 1-3 innings of no-hit ball, then Texas had to hold off California 5-4, Oakland routed Kansas City 11-1, Minnesota beat Milwaukee 7-3, Cleveland edged Boston 8-7, Toronto took Detroit 10-4 and Seattle beat Chicago 8-6.

Randolph has 42 RBI this season, eight short of his 1986 total and 19 short of his career high, set in 1979.

"I've always been very selective," he said. "But instead of being too fine, I'm trying to be more aggressive and hit the ball where it's pitched. I'm sick and tired of hitting line drives right at somebody. I've become pretty well known for that."

The victory kept the Yankees within two games of Toronto in the East. The plummeting Orioles suffered their 12th loss in the last 13 games. Baltimore opponents have scored six or more runs in 16 of the last 20 games.

The losses hurt. The way they lost Tuesday was especially painful to Manager Cal Ripken Sr.

"There's no excuse for them in my book," Ripken said of the mistake by Wiggins and several other lapses.

Rangers 5, Angels 4
Guzman's no-hit bid ended on a double by Doug DeCinces, who added a ninth-inning two-run homer off reliever Dale Mohorcic to scare the Rangers. But they held on.

Guzman faced the minimum number of batters, striking out nine in 7 1-3 innings. He walked Brian Downing leading off the second inning, but DeCinces then hit into a double play. Dick Schofield walked leading off the third, but Bob Boone also hit into a double play.

Guzman struck out nine.

"I won't kid you," he said. "I started thinking about the no-hitter in the third inning. As soon as I went back to the field, I reminded myself to keep concentrating."

Athletics 11, Royals 1
While Oakland bats were potent, the Royals' pitching continued to falter. Kansas City has allowed 34 runs in the last four games, all losses.

Jose Canseco two solo home runs and both Reggie Jackson and Mike Davis added two-run shots for the Athletics, who have won seventh of their last eight games. Jackson's home was his seventh of the season.

Twins 7, Brewers 3
Minnesota moved 10 games over .500 for the first time since July 24, 1979, when the Twins were 53-43. Shortstop Greg Gagne had two doubles and a triple and knocked in four runs as the West leaders won for the 10th time in their last 11 games and 16th in 21. Frank Viola, 6-5, won his fourth straight decision.

Gagne tripled home two runs in the second and, after Kent Hrbek led off the eighth with his 14th homer, Gagne lined a two-run double.

"It was my turn tonight. Tomorrow it will be someone else's turn," Gagne said.

Indians 8, Red Sox 7
Brett Butler provided the spark for Cleveland with a bunt single, a double and a triple, and scored three runs.

Butler was disabled for most of April after fracturing the middle finger on his left hand when it was hit while he was attempting a bunt. The center fielder struggled at the plate after he returned, but now is hitting .271.

"Today was the first day I put my batting gloves on with no pads (around the finger)," Butler said. "I was having to use more pine tar before, and it's not as easy to slide your hand up the bat to bunt. I have only three bunt hits this year. My goal every year is 20."

A 4-for-4 effort by Wade Boggs, who has a 17-game hitting streak, and Don Baylor's two home runs were wasted by Boston.

"That's the way it's been going. We're not exactly happy. Nobody likes to lose," Boggs said.

Blue Jays 10, Tigers 4
Toronto, held to one run the previous night, unleashed a 16-hit attack, led by Tony Fernandez and Jesse Barfield with four hits apiece.

Fernandez drove in three runs and Ernie Whit capped a six-run fourth with a two-run single.

The loss snapped the Tigers' winning streak at four games and ended the Blue Jays' losing skid at two. Toronto has not lost more than two straight games this season.

"We had to come alive today and we took it to them," Barfield said. "We executed well tonight. We lost a tough one last night and bounced back."

Gary Lavelle, 1-0, pitched two innings of two-hit relief for his first win since September 1985.

Alan Trammell had a home run and a double, and Bill Madlock also homered for Detroit. Trammell extended his hitting streak to a career-high 21 games.

Mariners 8, White Sox 6
Manager Dick Williams got his 1,500th career victory (against 1,366 losses) as Mickey Brantley drove in five runs, three with a home run. Mike Kingery's two-run triple in the eighth inning snapped a 6-6 tie.

Williams is 13th on the all-time victory list for managers.

Chicago starter Neil Allen had to leave the game after suffering a pulled left hamstring in the third inning.

Nobles, Potter and Measmer had two hits apiece for Garris Evans while Mitch Jones led First Citizens with two hits apiece.

Knicks Won't Be Hamstrung

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Knicks won't be hamstrung entering Monday's NBA draft without a general manager or head coach, says club president Richard Evans.

He's put his trust in Dick McGuire, the club's chief scout for 20 years and a former Knicks and Detroit Pistons coach.

"We've had more intensive scouting and background checking than ever before," said Evans, who admitted Tuesday that neither a coach nor a general manager would be hired by draft day.

The Knicks, who traded what turned out to be their lottery pick (No. 5) to Seattle early last season for guard Gerald Henderson, have the No. 18 pick in the first round. They choose No. 2 in the second round.

New York finished 24-58 last season. The day after the season ended, April 20, Evans, who had recently left Radio City Music Hall to head the Madison Square Garden Corp. and the Knicks, fired General Manager Scotty Stirling and Coach Bob Hill.

In a conference call Tuesday, Evans said he expects to make progress in filling their spots because "there are a number of interested individuals who will not be available until after the draft."

Jimmy Rodgers, top aide to K.C. Jones with the Boston Celtics, is expected to be interviewed for the coaching job after the draft, although Evans was noncommittal.

Evans said the signing of a general manager is his first objective and that the job would have been Jack McCloskey's had he accepted it. McCloskey decided to remain as general manager of the Detroit Pistons.

"The fact is only one (general manager's) offer was made and that one person declined," Evans said, adding, "New York (lifestyle) became an issue late in the process."

McCloskey has said that his wife's reluctance to move was a major factor in turning down the Knicks.

Evans said that the man he is looking for might handle both general manager and player personnel duties, or that he could hire two men, in addition to the coach.

Bias' Legacy Continues To Live

By FRED BAYLES
Associated Press Writer
HYATTSVILLE, Md. (AP) — Lonise Bias stares at the rows of faces, young faces she has seen in hundreds of high school audiences in the 12 months since her son passed from All-American to American tragedy.

She explodes in a burst of evangelistic fervor.

"I am on a mission from God!" she shouts.

It is a mission, she explains, to rescue America's children from the drugs that took her son, and from the lack of self-esteem and love she sees at the core of the problem.

"The greatest love of all," she says, paraphrasing a popular song, "is the love you have for yourself."

The crusade by this former assistant bank manager began shortly after last June 19, when Len Bias, an All-American forward made second pick in the National Basketball Association's 1986 draft by the Boston Celtics, died in a cocaine-induced seizure.

The talk Lonise Bias gives this night at Northwestern High School, Len's alma mater, is similar to the 25 she delivers monthly around the country.

"But Mrs. Bias," she shouts, imitating critics. "If you know all the answers, why couldn't you save your own son?"

Again, the pause. Again, the explosion.

"I know Len Bias was part of a plan," she says. "Here was the No. 2 player going to the No. 1 team. What better way to get attention?"

"Len Bias had to go!"

In the year since Bias died, the dangers of drugs have become a national chant. Cities stage "Say No to Drugs" days. Television networks pitch similar messages in prime time.

Four months before Bias' death, 2 percent of the people questioned by The Gallup Poll picked drug abuse as the most important national problem. A month after his death it rose to 8 percent. This April, it was 11 percent.

This month has been hard for Mrs. Bias. The recent trial of Brian Tribble, who was acquitted of providing Bias with drugs, included testimony that Bias was a frequent user who supplied others.

"It's been a year since my baby's been dead, and people are wondering how I am standing with the things that are going on," she said. "But I'm fine. God has given me divine strength."

A born-again Christian, Mrs. Bias is not discouraged by publicity given drug use by such athletes as Houston Rockets guards Mitchell Wiggins and Lewis Lloyd and New York Mets pitcher Dwight Gooden, or by the cocaine-related death of Hernel "Jeep" Jackson, a basketball star at the University of Texas-El Paso.

Just as she is convinced her son had to die to show the problems of drug abuse, Mrs. Bias believes these cases are a reminder the problem still exists.

"There is no progress or change without struggle," she said.

Charles "Lefty" Driesell's new office at the University of Maryland's Cole Field House is a cramped rectangle of ersatz wood paneling between offices for women's volleyball and men's soccer.

Basketball coach at Maryland for 17 years and a powerful figure in the Atlantic Coast Conference, Driesell resigned in the uproar over Bias' death. Now, as assistant athletic director, he oversees public relations, promotion and sales.

This was the first season in three decades Driesell was not on the sidelines.

"I missed it, sure," he said. "You don't do something 31 years and don't miss it."

There have been offers and rumors of offers. But at 55, Driesell says he isn't in any hurry to move. "It would have to be the right job," he said. "I don't necessarily have to coach to fulfill my ego."

Driesell defers questions about Bias' use of drugs, about supervision of a player who after four years of college was 21 credits short of graduation. But he does say he hopes something of value will come from his star player's death.

"I think it woke up not just the drug users but the general public to the fact that drug abuse is a big problem in our society," he said. "Now there's youngsters who think if it killed Leonard Bias who was a great physical specimen..."

And he will talk about Bias, whom he calls "the greatest athlete I've coached."

"Sometimes I can't hardly believe that Leonard is gone," he said.

A successful high school coach in Baltimore, Wade came to Maryland with seven previous starters ineligible or under suspension. His team consisted of two freshmen, two sophomores and a junior.

The team won no ACC games but finished with a 9-17 record.

"I was very, very proud of them," he said. "They wanted to show people they could compete regardless of what had happened in the past."

The past was hard for players to put behind them, Wade said.

"The first few weeks of class there was constant talking behind their backs, little groups making slurs like, 'That's one of those basketball players, you know, the drug addicts,'" he said.

But the scorn gave way to admiration for the team's determination.

"I think a lot of the team made an oath within themselves," he said. "They wanted to do well for Lenny."

John Slaughter, chancellor of the university, calls the last year "a very, very intense and unenjoyable period."

The death of Len Bias made the school the focus of debate on the excesses of college sports. Ironically, Maryland was not a big offender. The school has graduated basketball players at a rate slightly higher than the average for male students.

Yet Bias' death brought change. Driesell and Athletic Director Dick Dull resigned. The school instituted tough admission and eligibility standards, including the requirement that seniors have a 2.0 grade-point average to play.

Slaughter believes the furor raised by Bias' death has already reached its half life. To rid itself of the stigma, Slaughter said, the school must show "athletics are not one of this institution's major priorities."

Ask Red Auerbach if Len Bias was really that good, and the Celtics president closes his eyes and nods.

"He was a helluva player," he said softly. "Six-foot-eight with the speed of a back court man. Jump out of sight. Good touch. Very good competitor."

Auerbach believes the big power forward would have made the Celtics' run to another Eastern Conference title a lot easier. The aging team made it through the season with injury after injury.

"If we'd had Len Bias, we would have been a much better ballclub," said Auerbach. "He was a good kid. A helluva kid."

But down on the floor of Boston Garden, Larry Bird had a different opinion when asked what might have been with Bias in Celtic green.

"I really don't know," he said. "You can sit here and think about it, but if he was on drugs, and obviously he was, he could have destroyed our whole team."

He paused, then added, "But at least he would have been alive and maybe we could have got some help for him."

Abdul-Jabbar Signs On With Lakers For Two More Years

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Two more years of the sky hook.

That will give Kareem Abdul-Jabbar 20 years worth of his personal shot before he retires from the NBA, something Los Angeles Lakers owner Jerry Buss obviously wanted to see.

Abdul-Jabbar, who has made enough sky hooks already to become the NBA's all-time leading scorer, signed a contract Tuesday night to play the next two seasons with the Lakers.

He will receive more than $5 million in salary for the next two years. A $3-million salary for 1988-89 would be the most lucrative ever in team sports.

"I'm very pleased about the fact I'll be able to continue with the Lakers through the 1988-89 season," said Abdul-Jabbar, who at 40 played a key role in the team's championship this season. "I'm very flattered the Lakers had the confidence to sign me for that long, and I hope that the relationship will continue to be mutually beneficial."

Buss thinks it will.

Instead, Abdul-Jabbar will become the first ever to play 20 seasons in the NBA.

"Playing 20 seasons wasn't something I was trying to do, but it looks like I'll have a shot at it," Abdul-Jabbar said. "It's already enough being I'm the only 18-year man."

The 7-foot-2 center left the Lakers' victory celebration Tuesday — missing an afternoon pep rally held at the Forum — to read over the agreement, said Josh Rosenfeld, the team's public relations director.

Buss told the rest of the team about the agreement at a dinner given at his Pickfair home Tuesday night. He also said the Lakers are close to reaching a multi-year contract extension with forward James Worthy.

Armato said he and his client were very pleased with the contract, and said he thought the second year of the pact was particularly appropriate.

"This agreement is a fitting tribute to the final year of Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, the most financially rewarding contract ever for the greatest athlete in sports history," Armato said.

The agreement also calls for Abdul-Jabbar to be a coaching consultant, working with the centers, for five years after he quits playing.

The deal caps an excellent year for Abdul-Jabbar on the court, one in which he won his fifth NBA title. Off the court, he's had his troubles.

He has sued his former agent, Tom Collins, for $55 million, claiming that Collins lost $9 million through mismanagement. But a source close to the negotiations with the Lakers said Abdul-Jabbar didn't decide to play an extra year because of financial need.

"The great agreement was of course a factor," the source said.

"But I think it had more to do with the fact that he's been appreciated by the Lakers and they demonstrated to him that they need him."

"He's responding to that need. I think the support of the LA fans for Kareem also played a part in his decision ... and he's of course still playing very well."

By signing Abdul-Jabbar for the next two seasons, the Lakers have filled their needs at center until David Robinson, who is expected to be the first pick in this year's college draft, becomes a free agent.

Robinson, the Navy center who may become a free agent after serving his two-year military obligation, is the obvious man the Lakers would like to replace Abdul-Jabbar.

The $3 million the Lakers are going to pay Abdul-Jabbar for his final year would allow them — under the NBA's salary cap — to pay Robinson $1.5 million the following season.

"Naturally, we're very happy to have Kareem back for two more years," Buss said. "He remains a major force in the league and on this team, and there is no reason to believe that his productivity will diminish in the near future."

Abdul-Jabbar, a six-time Most Valuable Player in the league, averaged a career-low 17.5 points a game this season. He also averaged 6.9 rebounds, up from 6.1 a year ago.

He had planned to retire after next season, his 19th in the NBA, before he and attorney Leonard Armato finalized the deal Tuesday in a meeting with Buss.

McGhee, Cards Playing Like Amateurs

By BRIAN TRUDELL
Associated Press Writer

Willie McGhee says he and his St. Louis teammates, who have won nine of their last 12 games, are playing like amateurs.

"This is like a high school team, scoring runs the way we are," McGhee said after the Cardinals got 16 hits in an 11-1 rout of the Pittsburgh Pirates on Tuesday night. "I've never seen anything like it."

In other National League games, it was Chicago 7, Philadelphia 2; New York 7, Montreal 3; Atlanta 7, San Francisco 2; Houston 4, Cincinnati 1; and San Diego 3, Los Angeles 2.

St. Louis, which averages a league-best of nearly six runs a game, enjoyed its most productive inning this season by scoring nine times in the sixth when Jack Clark hit a three-run homer and John Morris a bases-loaded triple.

Pinch-hitter Jose Oquendo, Tony Pena and Ozzie Smith also drove in runs with singles in the inning.

"It was good to make some noise with our bats," said Clark, who tied Chicago's Andre Dawson for the league lead with 60 runs batted in. "Hopefully, we can keep it up."

Cardinals starter Tim Conroy walked four of the first five men he faced, including a bases-load pass to Jim Morrison. But Bill Dawley, 3-4, pitched 5 2-3 innings of scoreless relief and Rick Horton went the last three innings for his sixth save.

"Being a pitcher on this team, you know you've always got a good chance of winning," Dawley said. "You know we're going to score some runs."

The Cardinals sent 13 men to the plate and collected nine hits in the sixth inning to break open a 2-1 game.

The victory put St. Louis six games ahead of second-place Chicago in the NL East.

The Cardinals tied the score in the fourth when Tommy Herr reached base with two outs on an error by first baseman Sid Bream, Clark singled and McGhee hit an RBI single.

St. Louis made it 2-1 in the fifth on Vince Coleman's run-scoring infield hit.

Astros 4, Reds 1
Jim Deshaies pitched a five-hitter for eight innings, struck out nine and walked one for his fourth straight win, pulling Houston within a half-game of division leading Cincinnati in the West.

Glenn Davis homered and had an RBI single to help the Astros win for the seventh time in their last nine games.

Ted Power, 5-3, went six innings, allowing four runs on 10 hits, while striking out six and walking none.

Braves 7, Giants 2
Atlanta's Doyle Alexander allowed hits to the first three men he faced and then retired 20 of the last 21. He finished with a five-hitter against San Francisco, which lost its fourth straight game and sixth in its last nine.

Ken Griffey hit a three-run homer off Kelly Downs, 5-3, in the fourth inning and Ozzie Virgil hit his 17th homer, a two-run shot, and first since May 29, in the sixth.

Alexander, 3-1, began the game allowing a single to Chris Speier, a homer to Will Clark and a single to Jeffrey Leonard. After a single by Clark in the third, Alexander allowed only a seventh-inning walk to Chili Davis.

Cubs 7, Phillies 2
Steve Trout pitched a six-hitter over 8 2-3 innings and Jerry Mumphrey and Dave Martinez homered, snapping Chicago's five-game losing streak.

Trout, 3-1, who made his first start since going on the disabled list May 4 with a deep thigh bruise, walked four and struck out five before Ed Lynch relieved him with two men on in the ninth.

Superball division of play. The winners in each of three classifications qualified for the state tournament, to be held later this summer. (Reflector Photo)

Mets 7, Expos 3
Terry Leach gave up seven hits over eight-plus innings and Kevin McReynolds and Darryl Strawberry both homered, lifting New York over Montreal.

Leach, 5-0, began the year in the

Pitt Players May Lose Eligibility

ATLANTA (AP) — University of Pittsburgh running back Charles Gladman and defensive back Teryl Austin will be declared ineligible for athletic competition because they signed contracts with sports agents, according to a published report.

The announcement will be made by the university this week, The Atlanta Constitution said in today's editions.

The newspaper quoted unidentified NCAA sources as saying Gladman will be suspended, pending confirmation of evidence he signed with Norby Walters, and Austin will be declared ineligible immediately. Both will be seniors this fall.

Gladman is No. 4 on the Panthers' all-time rushing list. He gained 1,085 yards as a sophomore in 1985.

The NCAA was informed Tuesday of the situation. Pitt head Coach Mike Gottfried uncovered evidence that Gladman and Austin received money during their junior season in 1986, the newspaper said.

Gottfried declined to comment on the case Tuesday night, the paper said.

Pitt linebacker Tony Woods, a first-round draft choice of the Seattle Seahawks, also took money from Walters and, his associate, Lloyd Bloom, last year, the agents claim. They are suing Woods for breach of contract.

The newspaper has reported that both Gladman and Austin had been subpoenaed to appear before a federal grand jury in Chicago which is probing Walters' business dealings with athletes.

Both denied taking money, but the newspaper quoted sources as saying Austin admitted late last week he did sign with Walters. Gladman continued to deny any such signing, but the evidence will lead to his suspension and ultimate ineligibility, the newspaper quoted sources as saying.

At least one basketball player, Derrick McKey of Alabama, has been declared ineligible for his senior season because he signed with Walters and Bloom.

He was declared ineligible just before the NBA deadline for undergraduates to enter its draft.

The NFL has no rule permitting the drafting of undergraduates.

Attorneys involved in the case have said Assistant U.S. Attorney Howard M. Pearl, who is handling the grand jury probe, has indicated fraud and tax evasion charges could be filed against the athletes.

The newspaper's sources said some athletes could be charged with perjury for making false statements to Pearl.

In addition, a charge of obstruction of justice is being considered against Walters and Bloom because of telephone calls they allegedly made to athletes involved in the probe, the newspaper said.

Walters called the charge "ridiculous."

SEC Exec Calls For Tough Punishment

ATLANTA (AP) — The assistant commissioner of the Southeastern Conference said athletes who sign contracts with sports agents in violation of collegiate rules should face tax evasion and fraud charges.

Bob Harrett, a former FBI agent, called Tuesday for indictments of athletes who violate terms of their scholarship agreements by signing with agents. NCAA rules prohibit student athletes from signing with agents until they complete their college eligibility.

A grand jury in Chicago is investigating allegations of college athletes signing contracts with agents while still eligible. About 60 present and former college athletes have been subpoenaed to testify.

Athletes, Harrett told a conference of sports lawyers in Orlando, Fla., are under the jurisdiction of a federal court when they reach 17, "whether the charge is stealing a car or robbing a bank or defrauding a school by wire or evading income tax. They (federal officials) don't care whether you're an All-America or not. You're an adult under federal law and as such are responsible for your actions."

His comments were reported in today's editions of The Atlanta Constitution.

Whether or not the courts decide a scholarship is a legally binding contract, Harrett insisted there is a "moral obligation there. If you tell somebody you're going to do something — go to school for four or five years in return to get an opportunity to get an education — then I think it's an obligation the athlete should fulfill."

He said colleges have an obligation to tell athletes "they have certain responsibilities in connection with the U.S. government. Namely, they have to report taxable income just like any other citizen, and they can't be involved in any scheme like fraud where messages cross state lines, whether by telephone, wire or in the signing of fraudulent contracts."

The Chicago grand jury may be a way to get athletes' attention.

"Obviously they haven't paid any attention to other warnings," Harrett said. "I think if they had done some indictments it will open some eyes. The threat of an indictment could open some eyes."

Texas Reportedly To Be Put On NCAA Probation

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The University of Texas football program will be placed on probation for violation of NCAA rules by providing team members with improper benefits, according to a published report.

Alan Williams, a member of the NCAA Infractions Committee, confirmed the probation Tuesday, but would not provide details, the Austin American Statesman reported today.

An official letter detailing the length of the probation will be given to university president William Cunningham today, the newspaper said.

The probation notification follows news from Longhorns head Coach David McWilliams that three members of the team flunked out of school. Seven others, including All-Southwest Conference running back Eric Metcalf, are in danger of losing their eligibility because of academic problems, he said.

The NCAA had charged Texas with 51 rule violations after dropping 11 other allegations. The charges stem from newspaper stories reporting Longhorn team members were selling complimentary tickets at inflated prices, receiving car loans and small amounts of money from coaches, boosters and alumni.

"We are using probation of this particular type to allow the institution to follow up in their procedures," Williams said. "We're using it more and more to provide a kind of a follow-up because the NCAA does not have a compliance staff."

Amtrak's Small Problems Are Beginning To Mount

By DAVID LIGHTMAN
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

WASHINGTON — Most of Amtrak's day-to-day problems would hardly bother most passengers.

But little by little, the problems are multiplying, and there is concern among many rail experts that what has been barely noticeable will soon become a serious impediment to running an efficient, popular national rail passenger system.

Many of these small problems suggest larger ones. The ashtrays may not be cleaned regularly, and there may not be soap available — because employees and equipment are often spread too thin.

On-time performance slipped in the last fiscal year to 74 percent, a drop of 7 percentage points from the previous year, largely, Amtrak officials say, because locomotive maintenance was cut back.

On some Northeast corridor trips, passengers often have to stand during busy holiday periods, because Amtrak does not have the money to buy as many cars as it wants.

In short, said Timothy P. Gardner, Amtrak vice president in charge of marketing, "the service we're running is less reliable than we'd like."

However, W. Graham Claytor, Amtrak chairman and president, voiced optimism about the system's future.

"I don't think our existence is at risk," he said. "That was the problem two years ago and a little bit last year, but not at all this year."

Even the Jan. 4 collision of Amtrak and Conrail trains in Chase, Md., which killed 16 people, seems to have had little effect on ridership or operations, Amtrak officials and independent railroad analysts said.

Amtrak is under political siege, though. The Reagan administration is in its seventh year of trying to cut or eliminate the federal subsidy that is a large part of Amtrak's operating budget.

Amtrak got $896 million in federal money in 1981, before the Reagan administration effort to trim the subsidy began. Since then, Amtrak's subsidy has fallen to $602 million.

Revenues from passenger fares and other non-government sources accounted for 62 percent of Amtrak's operating expenses in the last fiscal year, up from 53 percent in 1982.

The administration contends that the federal cuts have helped the system, a senior White House official who asked not to be identified said. "It's helped Amtrak economize and operate more efficiently," the official said.

But Amtrak's problems, experts say, are not just financial. Critics say Amtrak's operators lack a clear vision of the rail service's future.

"There are a lot of ideas and theories on how to run Amtrak that are testable, and they can be tested at very little cost," said Andrew C. Selden, a Minneapolis lawyer who writes about rail issues. "But Amtrak will not think about testing ideas, because the status quo is fairly stable and Amtrak has never been accused of being politically dumb."

The people who run Amtrak vigorously dispute such criticism. "The future for this company is better than it's ever been," said Ross E. Rowland Jr., an Amtrak board member from New Jersey who represents the business community.

Amtrak's promise and problems are typified by its 1986 annual report. After reciting glowing statistics for several paragraphs, the report then noted that fiscal 1986 "was not without warning signs" that Amtrak had better pay attention to the "quality and efficiency of our service."

Probably the most ominous warning sign involved on-time performance, the backbone of any successful transportation system. Since 1981, Amtrak's on-time performance had held at an annual rate of from 77 percent to 82 percent.

But last year, it slipped to 76 percent for short-distance trains, 69 percent for long-distance trains and 74 percent systemwide.

Company officials attributed the problem to a maintenance policy, since changed, that allowed less-frequent routine maintenance of locomotives.

That created trouble. "We have a bare-bones fleet. You don't have slack if something goes haywire," Gardner said.

Since the change in maintenance procedure, on-time performance has begun to improve. In March, it was 81.2 percent, up from 78.3 percent in March 1986.

Over the long run, part of the solution to the maintenance problem would be to buy new cars, but Amtrak officials say the company does not have the money to buy all it needs.

Ironically, one problem involves Amtrak's popularity. Amtrak officials say that sleeping accommodations on trains west of Chicago need to be booked months in advance for summer use, and standees are not unusual on Northeast corridor trains during holiday periods.

To keep up with the crush, Amtrak will add to the Northeast corridor some of the new Amfleet cars it had bought for high-speed service in the Northeast 11 years ago. Since those cars were not needed in that region at the time, they were scattered across the country where needed.

Amtrak Chairman Claytor seems willing to keep Amtrak running as it is this year and next, hoping things will get better in the future.

gress to increase government revenues," he said.

At the start of the year, there was fear that things were going to be far worse. President Reagan, in his 1987-88 budget proposal, suggested not only ending Amtrak's subsidy, but also disposing of "some or all of Amtrak's assets, the majority of which are in the Boston-to-Washington corridor."

Congress has taken neither proposal seriously, despite Secretary of Transportation Elizabeth H. Dole's appointment of a commission to study the idea of disposing some of Amtrak's assets.

Anti-Dropout Program Is Spreading

By JAY MATHEWS
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

LOS ANGELES — An effort to reduce dropouts by guaranteeing a job or college admission to every inner-city youth with a good high-school record has begun to spread nationwide, with programs to begin here and in seven other cities next fall.

The scheme — patterned after a five-year-old joint private and government program in Boston — is under way in Baltimore.

Los Angeles' Genesis program is scheduled to begin next fall in six high schools — three predominantly black and three predominantly Latino. Seniors are to be promised jobs within a year of their graduation if they complete the school year with at least a 2.5 (C+ to B-) grade-point average and 95 percent attendance.

In Boston, which last year found jobs or colleges for 967 of the city's 3,000 graduating seniors, program managers say the truancy rate has dropped.

James Darr, executive director of the Boston Private Industry Council, which helps to sponsor the effort, said the average daily attendance rate in the city's schools has climbed from 77 percent to 85 percent, an average increase of 17 more days of school a year for each student.

The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services has set aside $170,000 a year for the next three years to provide technical assistance for similar programs in Albuquerque, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, Louisville, Memphis, San Diego and Seattle.

The National Alliance of Business granted an additional $100,000 for the seven-city program's first year. Los Angeles, with the support of the city school board, teacher's union and Chamber of Commerce, is pursuing its program with public and private funds.

According to Clemson University's National Dropout Prevention Center, each year more than 700,000 students drop out of public schools, at an eventual yearly cost of $7 billion in lost tax revenues, welfare, unemployment and crime costs.

Los Angeles school officials have estimated dropout rates of up to 40 percent in their inner-city schools, although they acknowledge that this calculation is very rough.

Like the original Boston Compact, the anti-dropout program in Baltimore has been fashioned by local business and school leaders to provide a real incentive for graduation.

"There was not apparent reward for extra effort," said Jeff Valentine, deputy director of the Greater Baltimore Committee. "You had very good students who said, 'Why should I put out if I'm not going to get anything?'"

As is planned in Los Angeles, the Baltimore program is limited to graduates who maintained 95 percent attendance and an 80-point (C+ to B-) grade average after the program began in the fall of 1985.

In last year's senior class of about 5,200 students, 471 qualified, Valentine said. Of those, 125 failed to seek help from the program's counselors, but the rest were trained and guided to jobs, or in some cases college placement. The rate of success for students outside the program is unknown.

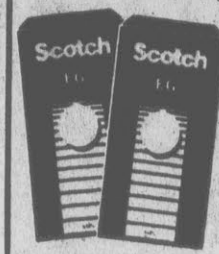

Valentine said he would like to see a better balance of the sexes. Last year's qualifying students were "overwhelmingly female," he said.

Organizers in different cities also disagree on the need for precise standards of attendance and academic achievement. Darr said Boston considered, and then rejected, precise standards early in its program and decided instead simply to require a high-school diploma. The compact, he said, is designed to encourage high schools to raise their own graduation requirements, so that all of their graduates will be prepared to enter the workplace.

In each city, business participation has proved essential, and emphasis is being placed on teaching students how to dress and behave in the workplace. Boston began with 350 companies promising money or jobs. Now 600 companies are included.

Rear Auto Seat Belts Considered

L.A. Times-Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration is trying to determine if it should force auto makers to do what most of them are already doing or planning to do voluntarily — install rear seat belts with shoulder harnesses in new cars.

In an "advanced notice of proposed rulemaking" published Tuesday in the Federal Register, NHTSA said it is looking for "comments on whether the agency should require manufacturers to install lap-shoulder belts in rear seating positions of passenger cars, multipurpose vehicles, and small buses. ... The agency is specifically seeking comment on the cost-effectiveness of requiring rear seat lap-shoulder belts, by vehicle type."

Auto safety advocates favor such a rule, noting that both federal and private studies conclude that seat belts with shoulder harnesses offer better protection in crashes than single lap belts that fit across the waist.

However, since most major auto makers are installing the shoulder-harness belts in front and rear vehicle seats, safety advocates said they did not understand why NHTSA did not proceed directly with a rulemaking rather than going through this preliminary comment stage.

"NHTSA is just playing a silly bureaucratic game," said Brian O'Neill, president of the Washington-based Insurance Institute for Highway Safety, a research and lobbying group for most of the nation's major auto insurers.

"It's beyond me why we're going through this" information-gathering step, O'Neill said. "I don't think that there's any argument anywhere about the superiority of shoulder-harness belts over lap belts."

NHTSA officials Tuesday agreed that their procedure "is unusual in that it would specify regulations even though many auto manufacturers already are installing lap-shoulder belts in the rear seats of their vehicles, or have made commitments to do so."

Laboratory Research Indicates DES Effects May Last Three Generations

By SUSAN OKIE
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

Research findings in mice by a Michigan scientist raise the possibility that the cancer-promoting effects of the drug DES, a synthetic estrogen once prescribed for an estimated 2 million pregnant women, might affect not only the women's female offspring — known as "DES daughters" — but also the granddaughters.

The concern about "DES granddaughters" stems from surprising studies by Dr. Bruce Walker, a professor of anatomy at Michigan State University. Walker found an increase in cancers of the reproductive organs that occurred late in life in the daughters of mice treated with DES during pregnancy. He also found an increase in such cancers in the granddaughters of treated mice — animals that had never themselves been exposed to the drug.

Walker's findings in mice are of more than passing interest because he has shown in several studies that when DES is given to pregnant mice, its effects on their female offspring mimic many of the problems found in human DES daughters. Female mice exposed to the drug before birth show changes in the types of cells lining the vagina and cervix similar to the changes seen in exposed women. They also show reduced fertility and an increase in spontaneous abortions and stillbirths.

Unlike DES daughters, the mice exposed to DES before birth show no increase in cancer rates until they reach old age — about two years. In a 1983 study, Walker compared cancer rates in 143 such DES-exposed female mice raised to old age with 64 controls. He found 14 adenocarcinomas of the uterus and five adenocarcinomas of the cervix in the exposed mice. None were found in the controls, and Walker said such tumors are virtually non-existent in normal mice.

Walker then raised a group of mouse "DES granddaughters" to old age. In 40 such granddaughters, which he calls DES-lineage mice, he found 10 adenocarcinomas of the uterus and five cystadenocarcinomas of the ovary. No such tumors were found in a group of controls.

Walker is conducting further experiments to explore how DES might exert an effect across two generations. One possibility is that the drug might have caused mutations in the genes of eggs in the ovaries of "DES daughter" mice, eventually affecting their offspring.

Another is that it might have disrupted hormonal control of the reproductive system both of the DES mother, during her pregnancy, and of the developing DES daughter mouse in her womb. If the DES daughter mouse's hormonal system was permanently damaged, that in turn could have affected development of her offspring, putting them at risk for reproductive tumors.

To test the two theories, Walker said he is now transplanting embryos from DES-daughter mice into normal, unexposed mice. He is also performing a mirror-image experiment, transplanting embryos from unexposed mice into DES daughters. Comparing the two groups of granddaughters should help establish whether the increased cancer rate is genetic or results from an altered hormonal environment.

For human DES daughters, the National Cancer Institute recommends a pelvic examination at least once a year, including a Pap smear, careful palpation, and visual inspection of the cervix and vagina after use of an iodine solution to stain the tissue. Some women may need tissue biopsies, more frequent examinations, or use of a special viewing instrument called a colposcope.

EXTINCT BIRD — This is a 1964 photo of the last pure dusky seaside sparrow that died Tuesday on Discovery Island at Walt Disney's Magic Kingdom attraction near Orlando, Fla. The death of the male bird completed the long-inevitable extinction of the species. (AP Laserphoto)

Organs Of Last Seaside Sparrow To Be Preserved

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) — The dusky seaside sparrow is extinct today, the last pure one having died in captivity, but the tiny animal's heart and lungs will be frozen for possible use in cloning experiments.

The death Tuesday of the last survivor, Orange Band, ended a steady drift toward extinction by the brown, 6-inch birds, whose demise was guaranteed in 1980 when all that remained were five males.

The seaside sparrows were so stubborn they never left their habitat, a 10-mile stretch of eastern coastal marshes near Titusville, even as the space program at nearby Cape Canaveral brought man increasingly into the area.

Orange Band collapsed in its dish Tuesday in its special cage on Discovery Island at Walt Disney World, said Charles Cook, director of a program to perpetuate as pure a species as possible.

The bird, named for the colored band used to tell it from the four other males, was about 12 years old and died apparently of old age, Cook said.

"It's a very, very sad thing to think about," said Florida Conservation Foundation spokesman Bill Partington. "The lesson that people need to learn is that we must not destroy habitat."

The species has not been found anywhere else, according to Cook. Orange Band's heart and liver will be frozen for genetic experiments that may someday restore the species, he said. "We had had that recommended by lay people and scientists for years, but not until this year had technology advanced to where people had contacted us about saving tissue for that purpose."

Orange Band had not fertilized an egg for about two years, and the next-to-last pure male died in March 1986.

However, a program under which dusky seaside sparrows were cross-bred with the similar Scott's seaside sparrow at Discovery Island produced one healthy male and four healthy females, Cook said.

"The offspring look identical to the dusky," he said. "A relative like that would be an acceptable surrogate species to populate the wild. The progeny are fertile and we are hoping to breed a new population."

The surviving offspring at Discovery Island include one male, which is 75 percent dusky, and four females, which range from 25 percent to 87.5 percent dusky.

But Herb Kale, Florida Audubon Society ornithologist, who led a 20-year battle to save the fragile bird, said the efforts were "too little, too late."

About 6,000 dusky birds were counted in a study during the 1940s, but their number had dropped to 2,000 in the 1960s, Cook said. Pesticides and road construction were factors, but the final blow probably was a wildfire in the mid-1970s.

"There was no solution in the field," Cook said. "From 1975-80 the population was decreasing at a rate of 50 percent per year."

No decision has been made on where the bird's preserved remains will be sent. The Smithsonian Institution and several universities have expressed interest, Cook said.

Synthetic Material Virtually Identical To Human's Bone

By THOMAS H. MAUGH II
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

Scientists at the University of Texas have developed a new type of synthetic bone that is virtually identical to natural bone. The new material is much stronger than previous bone substitutes and better able to withstand stress, the Texas researchers said Tuesday.

Tests have shown that once the new material is implanted in animals, it is slowly broken down by bodily processes and replaced by living bone. This stimulation of new bone growth suggests that the grafts should last indefinitely, the researchers said.

Experts predicted that the new material may prove useful in orthodontics, reconstruction of shattered bones and replacement of bones or bone fragments removed in cancer surgery.

"The potential is enormous," said biomedical chemist Alan Davison of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. "I don't know anything that comes even close to matching it."

About 65 percent of living bone is composed of a mineral known as hydroxyapatite. This mineral provides strength and rigidity and acts as a porous matrix that supports bone marrow, bone-synthesizing cells and blood vessels. Tooth enamel is a pure, nonporous form of hydroxyapatite.

Researchers have synthesized hydroxyapatite in the past as a replacement for bone, said pediatric surgeon F. Judah Folkman of the Children's Hospital Medical Center in Boston, but the synthesized form has been very brittle and broke easily. Researchers have tried to strengthen the hydroxyapatite by reinforcing it with sil-ca, alumina, or organic polymers, but those materials increase the risk of the body rejecting the bone substitute, he said.

Surgeons also use bones from cadavers for repairing or replacing bones, but these bones are even more likely to be rejected and are not generally available to most surgeons, according to plastic surgeon Marc Gottlieb of City of Hope Medical Center in Duarte, Calif.

"No bone graft material around now is ideal," Gottlieb said.

Chemist Richard J. Lagow and graduate student Paul J. Capano of the University of Texas have devised a technique to synthesize pure hydroxyapatite in a form that is very strong, Lagow said in a telephone interview. They can produce it in a porous form "virtually identical" to natural bone, he said, or in a denser form like that found in tooth enamel.

When they implant the porous material in animals, he said, the animal's own natural bone covers and grows into the pores over a two- to four-week period and blood vessels grow into the pores. Over longer periods of time, the synthetic bone is broken down by specialized cells and replaced with natural bone — just as the body's own bone is continually replaced.

"This is the only material I know of that, if you put it in the body, capillaries vasculate it, cells grow ... and real bone replaces it," said MIT's Davison.

The material has so far had very limited tests in humans. Oral surgeon Edward T. Farris of the Baylor Medical Research Center has used it in a few patients for reconstruction of the jaw in oral surgery and has found that it worked very well, Lagow said.

House Panel Says Drug Costs Should Be Paid By Medicare

By SPENCER RICH
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

WASHINGTON — Despite threats of a possible presidential veto, the Democratic-controlled House Ways and Means health subcommittee voted Tuesday to add an outpatient prescription drug benefit to the "catastrophic" health insurance bill for the nation's 31 million Medicare beneficiaries.

Rep. Willis D. Gradison Jr., R-Ohio, said all Republicans voted against as Democrats pushed the provision through the subcommittee, headed by Fortney H. (Pete) Stark, D-Calif., on a straight party-line vote, 7 to 4.

In a letter to House Energy and Commerce Committee Chairman John Dingell, D-Mich., Secretary of Health and Human Services Otis R.

Bowen warned Congress that he would recommend a veto of the bill if Congress keeps adding new benefits such as the drug provision.

"Should this legislation reach the president's desk in its current form, other senior advisors and I would be forced to recommend a veto," said Bowen, who, ironically, first proposed adding catastrophic insurance to Medicare.

The original Bowen bill had proposed unlimited hospital care after an initial $520 deductible and a guarantee that no beneficiary need pay more than $2,000 a year out of pocket for Medicare-covered expenses.

The Stark measure, in provisions already approved by the full Ways and Means Committee, would lower that threshold to $1,700, and also would include mental health, nursing, hospice, home health and other benefits.

Under the drug provision added Tuesday, the Medicare program would pay outpatient prescription drug costs exceeding $800 a year per beneficiary. The recipient would have to pay 20 percent of the cost in excess of the $800 limit. The proposal, estimated to cost about $835 million in 1990, the first full year, by the Congressional Budget Office, would be financed by a flat premium of about $1.80 a month initially for all beneficiaries and a small increase in the separate income-related supplemental premium that already was in the bill to help finance the other catastrophic benefits.

Committee members said about 1.5 million people were estimated to receive benefits. The committee included language specifying that Congress must provide added financing if the cost of the drug benefit ever exceeded Congressional Budget Office estimates by over $1 billion a year. A drug benefit is heavily favored by organizations of the elderly.

The health subcommittee of Dingell's committee has already recommended its own more generous outpatient drug benefit, sponsored by Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif., paying costs exceeding $400 a year.

Rare Illness Plagues Boy With Strokes

By MARCIA DUNN
Associated Press Writer

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Every week, sometimes several times a week, Doris Sittler trudges to the calendar hanging on her bathroom wall, picks up the pencil dangling from a string and scratches an X on the date. Once again, her 11-year-old son has suffered a stroke or seizure.

She has marked the X's 194 times. Each time, she has come a little closer to losing her son, Chris, to a rare neurological disease known as moyamoya.

"He doesn't get angry. He just gets depressed," Ms. Sittler said on a recent trip to Children's Hospital of Pittsburgh for tests for her son. "He hangs his head and he looks so sad."

"He's to the point now where he can tell me when he's having a stroke," she said. "He goes, 'I'm, I'm ...' And that's it, right there."

Because moyamoya is so rare in the United States — it is far more prevalent in the Orient — few American doctors are acquainted with the disease.

Japanese neurologists believe a progressive constriction of the two carotid arteries causes abnormal net-like vessels to form at the base of the brain, restricting cerebral blood flow and causing strokes. In X-rays, the vessels resemble puffs of cigarette smoke drifting in the air, expressed in Japanese as "moyamoya."

The Handbook of Clinical Neurology, one of the few sources of statistical information on moyamoya, reports that about 1,000 people worldwide suffer from the disease. Two-thirds of them are children. More than half of the victims, for reasons unknown, are Japanese. Some improve as they grow older, while others gradually weaken because of the seizures and die of a major stroke.

Dr. James Mellinger, a pediatric neurologist at the Mayo Clinic, feels many victims are not even counted in the statistics.

"In a large number of areas of the world, Third World areas, they just die and never even are discovered to have the problem," he said. "The strokes will often do them in."

How Chris got moyamoya is a mystery, although Dr. Howard Jonas, a neurosurgeon at Children's Hospital, suspects an infection may have caused the major arteries at the base of Chris' brain to constrict.

In artery bypasses, Jonas has twice built new vessels to Chris' brain in hopes of increasing cerebral blood flow.

"It's hard to know why it's progressed," he said. "Every time there's a flurry (of spells), he's not as good as before."

The chubby, bespectacled boy has difficulty walking and speaking. He has little use of his left hand, and a fluid buildup has enlarged his left leg and foot.

"Hopefully, if we can stabilize the problem, he can continue at the level he's at," Jonas said.

"At the moment, about the only thing available is something far from superior and that is the bypass," Mellinger said. Chris' care has largely been covered by the government medical assistance received by his mother, a former factory worker who is on disability.

Although hyperactive and asthmatic since birth, Chris led a fairly normal life, attending school and collecting animals at his home in Foundryville, Pa., until age 8.

Without warning, he suffered a stroke Aug. 23, 1984, and was left speechless and partially paralyzed on the left side.

"When they told me he had a stroke, it hit real hard. ... The bottom fell out of the world," recalled Ms. Sittler, 32, who lives with Chris at her parents' home.

After nearly a week of hospital tests, Chris was diagnosed as having moyamoya, she said. "I asked, 'Do you have any information on it?' They had one piece of paper with a little bit of writing on it and that was all."

By mid-October 1984, Chris had suffered four more strokes and seizures. On Oct. 29, neurosurgeons at Geisinger Medical Center in Danville took vessels from his temple and laid them on the surface of his brain in hopes new channels would form. None did, and the spells continued.

"Chris was like a little baby. He could not sit up on his own. He could not feed himself," Ms. Sittler said. "He had involuntary movements. He was throwing his arms, kicking his legs."

In March 1986, after 115 strokes and seizures, Chris underwent his first artery bypass in which Jonas took vessels from the boy's scalp and sewed them onto the arteries on the left side of the brain. The procedure was repeated last October on the right side.

The seizures began occurring again in December. Before the bypasses, Chris had at most two spells a week. He's now averaging two to six a week, sometimes more than one a day, according to his mother.

The count, as of last week, was 194. About six have been major strokes.

In less severe episodes, which last a few minutes, Chris becomes weak and his speech is more slurred.

"There's not much you can do other than keep an eye on him," his mother said.

Doctors tell her Chris might continue to have ministrokes or could someday suffer a fatal one.

Ms. Sittler and her parents have tried to raise Chris like any child. They tutor him at home and take him for rides and to the amusement park. The boy's father, who never married Ms. Sittler, has no contact with his son.

Chris' greatest joy comes from helping his grandfather, Clair Sittler, 56, around the house and in the workshop.

"He keeps us all going. He gives us determination," his grandmother, Dorothy Sittler, 50, said. "He's got a lot of love."

More than anything, Chris wants to return to school and become a doctor.

"I want to help people," he explained in a heavy, slurred voice, resting his head on his mother's shoulder.

Centenarians

WASHINGTON (AP) — The number of Americans who live past age 100 could quadruple by the turn of the century, presenting the nation with a new set of challenges as this segment of society grows rapidly, a government study shows.

The extension of life will probably result in ever larger numbers of economically and physically able very old people along with large numbers of chronically ill, dependent persons," observed the report, "America's Centenarians."

As of 1986 there were an estimated 25,000 Americans aged 100 and over, but that could easily jump to more than 100,000 by the year 2000, according to the study published by the National Institute on Aging.

What Better Way To Launch An Open House Than With A Boat Show

On June 20th & 21st At Your Port For Waterfront Living

It's not just an open house with balloons and refreshments. It's an open house with a boat show. Some of eastern North Carolina's leading marinas and boat manufacturers will be there displaying run-a-bouts, cruisers, day sailers and sailing yachts.

Pamlico Plantation is a collection of waterfront townhomes and homesites with amenities such as tennis, a waterfront pool, a cedar-lined clubhouse and it can all be found just outside your front door. Each property owner also enjoys his own personal boat slip so you can really experience all the pleasures that waterfront living has to offer.

Join us at Pamlico Plantation this Saturday and Sunday for our open house and boat show. Enjoy refreshments, boat rides and the many boats being displayed, but most of all enjoy the beautiful surroundings of our waterfront community at Pamlico Plantation. Now...could you think of a better way to launch an open house? See you there...

Model Flying Takes Interest, Money, Time

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

Radio-controlled airplane flying or "R/C Modeling" is a fascinating sport for people in any age group, said Tony Allen, who has been flying the miniature aircrafts about five years.

"I've known people to learn to fly at age 14," he said. "It's a fascinating sport. It's something that basically any age group can do."

But, R/C modeling is not a hobby that can be learned overnight, said David Gibbs, who has been flying models for about 10 years. His first plane was Styrofoam. "I would fly it and crash it and put it back together," he said. "A lot of people invest the money and get turned off" when their aircraft crashes because of their inexperience.

The best way to learn is to ask questions, he said. Seek information from experienced modelers, model clubs, hobby shops or through magazines on the subject.

Modelers may invest from $150 to more than $400 in an aircraft, Allen said. "The plane kit itself is the expensive part."

Balsa wood is the construction material in most kits, combined with small amounts of plywood, wire, plastic or foam in limited areas of construction. Kits usually are furnished with plans, parts and construction materials to build the frame of the aircraft. The radio, engine, fuel tank, wheels, covering material, paint and glue are purchased separately.

Low-price models, those ranging from $150 to $200, usually are gliders with very small engines and one or two-channel radios. Models ranging from $200 to $400 may be larger gliders or have medium-sized engines with two or three-channel radios.

The larger plane and engine models have radios with four or more channels and cost about $400 and more.

"The radio is where the big money is," Allen said. The most inexpensive two-channel radio may cost about $60.

The number of channels a radio has refers to the number of controls it operates on the model. A two-channel radio may have a rudder to steer the craft and a motor, while a four-channel radio would have the four primary controls that a full-size airplane has — the rudder, the elevator, which makes the craft go up and down, ailerons, which stabilize the plane, and the motor control.

A radio with five channels or more would include added controls such as flaps and retractable landing gear.

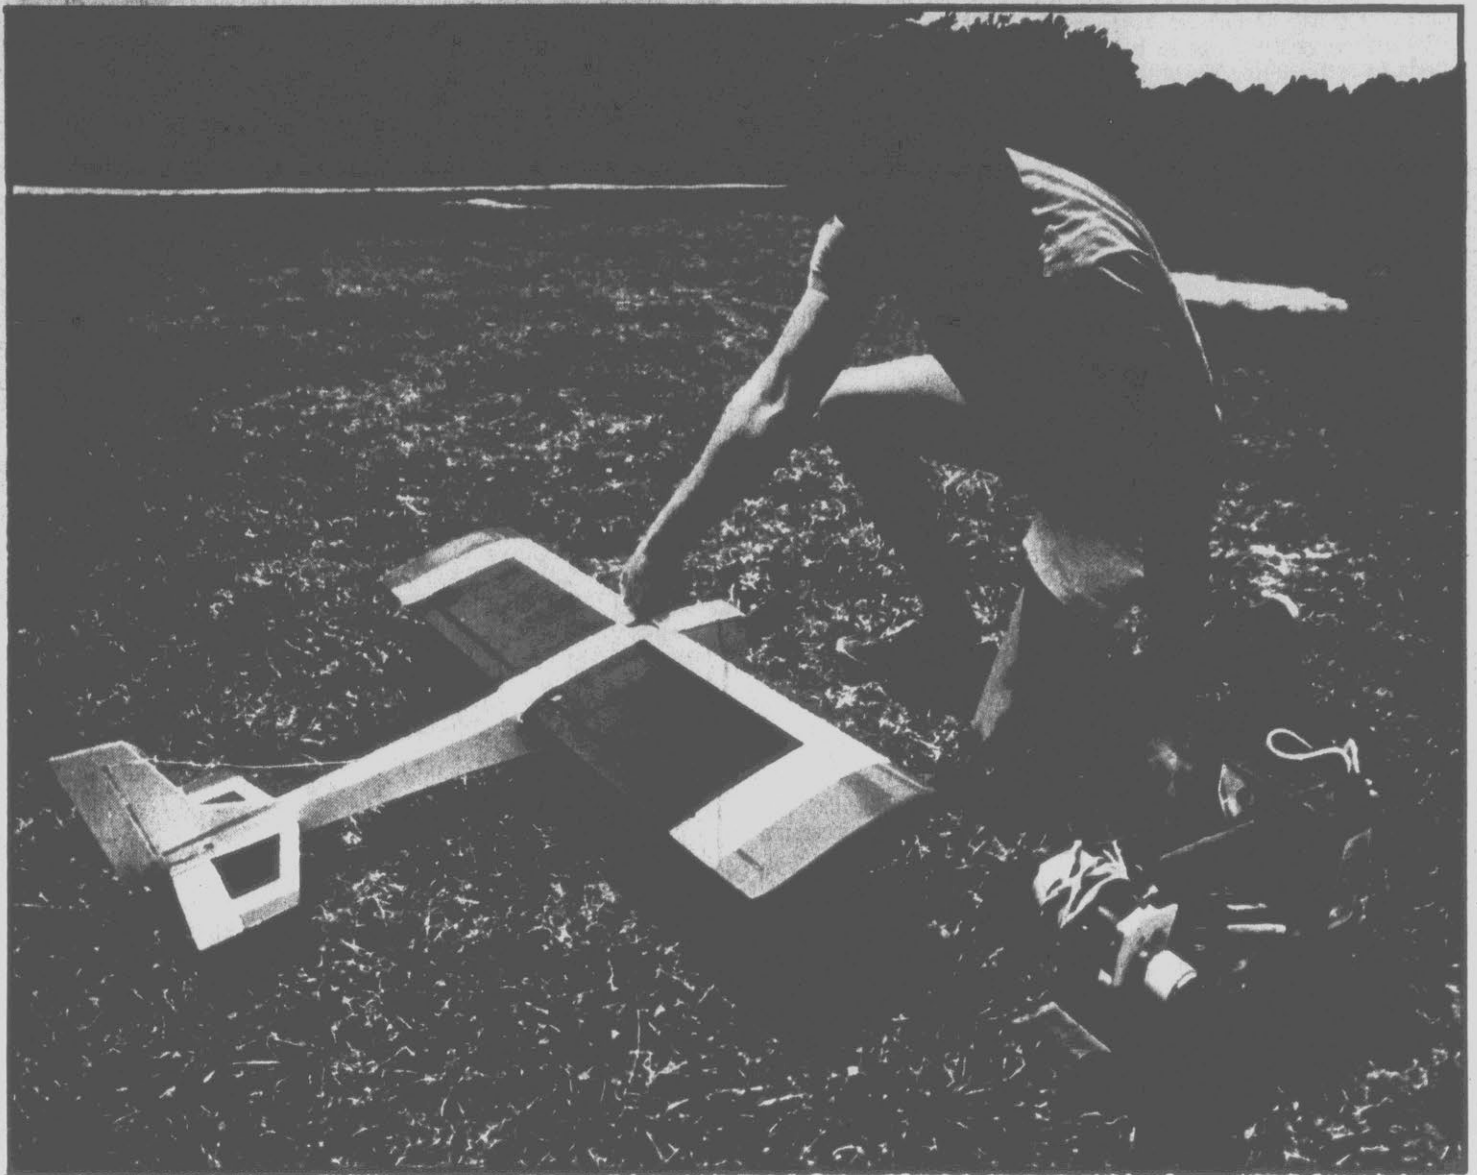

Most radios have a range of 1 1/2 to 2 miles, but flyers usually keep models within a couple hundred yards of themselves.

In addition to R/C airplanes, there are radio controlled helicopters, cars, boats, tanks and submarines among other forms of miniature replicas.

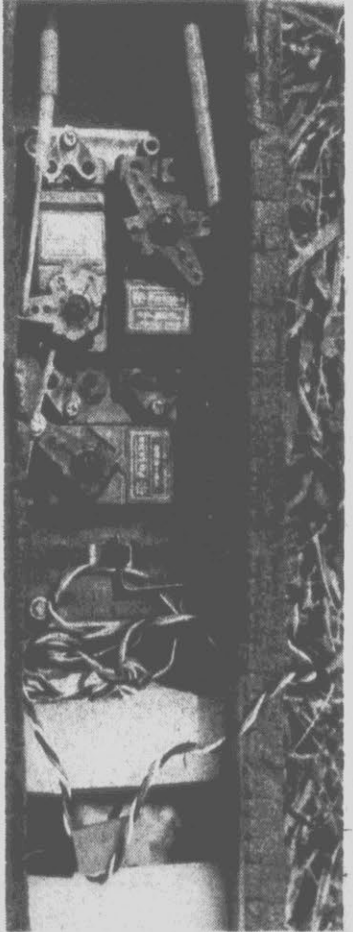

R/C cars have "been like the big boon for the last few years," Allen said. "Just about any age group can run them."

Cars, unlike planes, can be operated in the backyard, he said. Aircraft should be operated in a cleared field of about four to five acres for aircraft and personal safety, he said. Boats also should be operated in a cleared area.

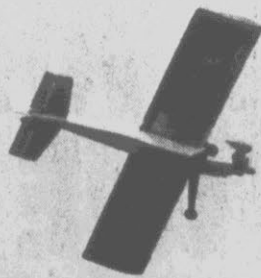

The biggest liability in R/C airplanes stems from damage to the plane, Allen said. But, people and property also may be damaged

PREPARE FOR TAKEOFF — David Gibbs prepares his radio-controlled airplane, "Martha," for flight. Gibbs said he has been flying R/C models for about 10 years. He says it is not a hobby that can be learned overnight. (Reflector Photos by Cliff Hollis).

THE WORKS — Removing the wings gives a clear view of the equipment that allows the plane to get airborne. The servos to control direction are at the top, with the receiver and coiled antenna at bottom.

FLYING HIGH — Most radios have a range of 1 1/2 to 2 miles, but pilots rarely fly those distances because it is difficult to see the model and how it is functioning. Pilots usually keep models within a couple hundred yards of themselves.

through the sport. Like full-size airplanes, accidents usually are pilot error. "I've seen a guy actually fly a plane into himself," because he was not familiar enough with the controls and their functions.

A license is not required to operate R/C equipment, but there is a governing body for R/C activities, the Academy of Model Aeronautics. AMA provides members with liability insurance protection in case their model should get out of control and injure the flyer, someone else or damage property.

The AMA and model clubs also sponsor model events that contests such as racing, stunt flying, combat and percussion flying.

"It never gets boring," Gibbs said. "You can always go to different classes, and there are all kinds of competitions."

TAKEOFF — Gibbs watches his R/C airplane as it takes off from a field behind the Belk Building at East Carolina University. Gibbs said he also has flown R/C planes one-quarter and one-third the size of a full-size plane.

'Penturbia' Is New Land Of Opportunity

'Caring Conservers' May Hold Key To Life Beyond The Suburbs

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Out beyond the giant metropolitan areas and their suburbs, the small cities and towns that once were America's heartland may again represent its future, reports an expert in urban development.

Jack Lessinger, a professor of real estate and urban development at the University of Washington at Seattle, calls this emerging region of opportunity "Penturbia," contending that the shift to these communities represents the nation's fifth major migration.

"Look for penturbia beyond the normal commuting range of the nation's central cities. It is small cities and towns, new subdivisions, home-steads, industrial and commercial districts interspersed with farms, forests, rivers and lakes," Lessinger reports in the June edition of American Demographics, a magazine specializing in population issues.

This shift represents "a change in priority systems," Lessinger said in a telephone interview. "In the 19th century, we ... were a kind of society and economy interested in saving for the future and building up a vast industrial plane. We did it too well, and developed the problem of over-production," he explained.

"As an antidote, we developed a consumption economy that put all the stress on the present rather than the future.

"Again, we went too far with that kind of economy, and as a result of the excesses of consumer economy we have begun developing a conserving economy. It is ... just beginning to manifest itself, and the penturbs are just one of the many features of the new economy," Lessinger said.

Leading the way to this new promised land is a type of American whom Lessinger calls the "caring conserver," people who save and guard their resources, work for preservation of air, water, buildings, parks and cultural artifacts.

These conserving Americans will succeed those consumers who settled the suburbs from 1929 to 1958 in the last major migration on Lessinger's list.

Before that, he said, the major national migrations included movement away from coastal cities into colonies such as Vermont and the Carolinas in the 1700s; the westward movement along the Ohio and Mississippi waterways in the early 1800s, and the rapid growth of the great industrial cities in the late 19th Century.

Throughout most of this century the major cities and suburbs have been the booming growth centers, Lessinger wrote in the magazine, published by Dow Jones & Company.

Just as the cities were nursemaid to the suburbs, those city-suburb cores are nursemaid to the new penturbs, he said. But over time, jobs will follow to the more rural communities.

The "rural renaissance" with rapid growth reported by many smaller towns and cities in the 1970s was the first sign of the emerging Penturbia, Lessinger said.

Recent studies indicating that since 1980 that rural movement has diminished are "more apparent than real," wrote Lessinger. "The flight from the suburbs will continue."

Counties most likely to emerge as penturbia are those that grew rapidly early in the nation's history, hit a plateau between 1850 and 1910, and then decelerated until about 1970, with particularly low growth rates from 1950 to 1970. Since then they have grown faster than the national average, Lessinger reported, and they are "where the action will be."

"Counties meeting these criteria were home to only 4 percent of the 1980 population, but they are everywhere, from Shelby County in Alabama to Amador County in California," Lessinger wrote.

His report gives a few examples, but does not list all of the counties in each of the classes discussed.

In addition to primary penturbia, Lessinger says other counties will form groups he calls "secondary penturbia" and "latent penturbia."

The secondary counties have had histories similar to the primary ones, but their growth since 1970 has been less rapid.

They have strong growth potential and are heavily represented in the Mississippi Valley, he said. Examples include such counties as Cape Girardeau, Mo., and Pike County, Miss., he wrote. The group extends to other regions also, such as Grafton County, N.H.

Latent penturbia counties are those that barely grew between 1980 and 1985 but which may increase in the future as more people become caring conservers, Lessinger speculated.

These, he says, are counties like Caswell, N.C.; Coos, N.H., and San Miguel, N.M., he said.

In addition to his work at the University of Washington, Lessinger is president of SocioEconomics, a Seattle research and consulting firm, and author of the book Regions of Opportunity.

Zoo Features Elephants

ASHEBORO — Elephants are being featured during June as the North Carolina Zoological Park joins other zoos around the country in celebrating "Zoo and Aquarium Month."

The N.C. Zoo will focus its programs on elephants because of their plight in the wild. The highlight of the celebration will be the weighing of the zoo's five African elephants.

Many special events are planned for Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays throughout June. Each Friday at 1:30 p.m. at the elephant habitat overlook, Dr. Jayne Owen Parker, zoo education coordinator, will present a talk on elephants. She will discuss the physical attributes of elephants, the differences between the African and Asian species, their current status in the wild and the N.C. Zoo's conservation efforts.

The N.C. Zoo is located six miles southeast of Asheboro off U.S. 220, U.S. 64 and N.C. 159. It is open 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays and 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. weekdays and holidays. For more information call 879-5606.

SUMMER FASHION NOTE — The latest rage in millinery creations for female scarecrows for the 1987 summer season is shown here. The elegant double-tiered chapeau is modeled by a buxom female scarecrow inhabiting the old-style English and early American vegetable garden at historic Newbold-White House near Hertford. A padded facial covering of genuine natural burlap is imaginatively topped by a stylish cloche of Albemarle straw provocatively fluted by a wide ribbon of linen. Color is minimal, predominated by neutral shades of tan and earth colors. The milliner fashioning the trend-setting creation chose to remain anonymous. (Reflector Photo by Jerry Raynor)

Crusader Has Good Word For Fat People

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — Overweight Phyllis Nilsson campaigns for fat people, saying they don't want diets or sympathy — just acceptance.

"The only reason they are not happy is because they're not accepted. If they were accepted by society, I can't see any reason why they would not be happy about the way they look. It's a matter of being accepted by this world," she says.

Mrs. Nilsson, 49, is somewhat of a crusader for fat people. She works as a medical transcriber at a Toledo hospital and has organized three singles groups, one for the overweight.

"Overweight people have been so maligned for so long. We need to stop sitting back taking cruelty and insensitivity," she said.

"I've been turned down for jobs when I was a lot thinner than I am now. I've seen an overweight woman laughed at in a bathing suit on a beach. I have heard her own mother say to a woman, 'Why bother wearing makeup? You're still going to be fat.'

"I would love to get back to the time of Reubens and Botticelli, when larger women were considered healthy and attractive."

Since that's not likely, Mrs. Nilsson is devoting her time to changing the way Americans perceive the overweight. She is the founder of several dating services and Very Special People, a group for overweight singles.

Expert Travels World In Search Of Insects

HONOLULU (AP) — Packing for a trip poses special problems for Marianne Early, who hauls around about 90 pounds of equipment: things like nets, vials, a hand lens, malaria antibiotics, plastic containers and premixed powdered food for insect larvae.

Early travels around the world hunting for enemies of Hawaii's plant and insect pests.

"I was going to try to cut back this year, but it's getting worse," she said as she prepared to leave for Venezuela and Jamaica to look for insects to attack the lesser cornstalk borer, a moth that affects about 60 species of plants, including sugar cane and corn.

Early still looks much like the student who majored in art some years ago at Carleton College, Northfield, Minn., with her petite figure, gamine hairstyle and bright smile.

She is the first woman exploratory entomologist at Hawaii's Department of Agriculture and is believed to be the only woman with such a job in the United States.

Her varied career went from an interest in art to two years of teaching in the Peace Corps in Liberia and a number of years as a travel agent.

Early said she "became drawn to the natural areas of the world" as she traveled. And she became interested in biological control — using natural enemies instead of pesticides to control harmful plants and insects.

She said she knew Hawaii was well known for biocontrol, so she enrolled at the University of Hawaii in 1980 and earned a master's degree in entomology in December 1984.

While going to school, she collected insects as a paying volunteer in Earthwatch expeditions in Belize, Central America, and Suriname, South America. She became a state exploratory entomologist in July 1985.

She went on her first collecting trip last year, spending 2½ months in Costa Rica, Panama, Venezuela and Brazil searching for predators for the sugar cane lacebug.

"The hardest part was worrying whether I could succeed at this," she said, explaining that there are no known parasites for the lacebug. She looked for wasps that attack related insect species. But these parasites are barely visible to the eye, she said.

"I was scared to death coming thousands of miles to look for something about half a millimeter that may or may not exist," she added.

In some ways, she said, she was more anxious about her current trip because the lesser cornstalk borer is a bigger problem and difficult to find, she said. "You don't see it until it's too late to do anything about it."

The pest was first found in Hawaii in July 1986 and is infesting crops on Oahu, Kauai and Maui. It caused about $1 million damage last summer on one Maui sugar plantation.

Venezuela and Jamaica have flies and parasitic wasps that prey on the insect, she said.

Devil Meets His Match In 'Witches Of Eastwick'

"Who are you, really?" — Sukie.
"Anybody you want me to be." — Darryl.

"The Witches of Eastwick," based on the novel by John Updike and now playing at the Plitt, is full of black magic, charm, wit, sophistication and Jack Nicholson.

In this film, Nicholson is playing the role he was born for: the devil, who, in the sleepy New England hamlet of Eastwick, goes by the name of Darryl Van Horne. Nicholson gives a mercurial performance as Van Horne, rising above the normal stereotyped movie-devil to portray a character that is as funny, brash and stylish as he is evil.

Darryl swoops into the unsuspecting town on the heels of a sudden rainstorm and moves into the oldest, nicest house there. A house that was formerly a place where witches were burned.

He is literally the answer to the passionate wishes of three young single women — Cher, Michelle Pfeiffer and Susan Sarandon. One by one he seduces them, and then together they live in the house in a menage a trois that suits them all. Strange things happen at the house as Van Horne shows more and more of his power to the women, and tells them that they have the same kinds of power.

That's his fatal mistake. When they ultimately turn on him, the devil has finally met his match. These are three tough women.

Cher, Pfeiffer and Sarandon skillfully perform their roles of the neurotic single women of the town: Alex, Sukie and Jane, respectively. Alex is a widow sulptr who makes love idols that don't sell. In portraying her, Cher has shown once again what a screen talent she has become. Pfeiffer's Sukie is a bundle of laughs. A divorcee with six children, Sukie is a frazzle of nerves as she works for the local newspaper to make ends meet. When Sukie tells Van Horne that she gets pregnant with incredible ease, and then likes it when Van Horne doesn't care, you have to laugh at the innocence and naivete of this woman with six kids.

Jane is a recently divorced, frustrated cellist who directs the school band part time and can't let her emotions loose. When Van Horne frees those emotions, she becomes a wild thing and suddenly a sophisticated woman of the '80s. Sarandon is perfectly cast in this role of neurotic turned nymph.

And of course, there's Nicholson. No other devil will ever compare. He is evil, sexy and hilarious all at the same time. Nicholson has a range of facial expressions that light up the screen, and he is the commanding presence at all times in this film.

The movie is well paced and directed by George Miller of "Mad Max" fame. Miller seems to have a penchant for the bizarre, and it works well here. The little details such as hand movements, a disturbed weathercock and animal reactions make this a well coordinated movie.

More importantly, perhaps, he proves three important things that producers and directors should note. One, you can make a humorous drama and not use Eddie Murphy or gross humor. Two, a seduction scene does not have to rely on gratuitous nudity to be sexy. There is no nudity in this film, yet Nicholson seduces the audience at the same time as he does the three women. And three, the audience will still like the film. Or at least they loved it when I saw it.

The only real fault of this film is in the special effects. The last duel between Van Horne and the girls is overdone and serves to spoil slightly the flavor of this otherwise tight, well-acted film. The performances up to that point are so strong that Miller should have let them carry the film to its conclusion instead of relying on "Poltergeist"-like effects.

Still, this is a film well worth seeing. It is rated R for its vulgarity

Second-Stringers May Get Their Own Shows On TV

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Rebecca Arthur plays Mary Anne, the wide-eyed, ditzzy blond who trades goo-goo eyes with Balki Bartokomos on "Perfect Strangers." She gave up a budding career as a private investigator to become an actress.

Scott Valentine plays Nick, Mallory's monosyllabic boyfriend on "Family Ties." He was hit by a truck in New York City six years ago and has an artificial hip that leaves him with a slight limp. He's already shot a pilot for a possible spinoff from "Family Ties."

Arthur and Valentine are among those taken-for-granted players who populate the background on popular network shows. Both are hoping to parlay their small but choice roles into bigger and better things.

NBC has been talking spinoff with Valentine since last year, after he completed his first season on "Family Ties" in the recurring role of Nick, a Rambo-esque conceptual artist whose potential for joining the family as a son-in-law is a recurring nightmare for the Keaton family.

A pilot, "All the Way Home," was completed, but Herschel Bernardi, who was to have played Nick's grandfather, died.

Valentine, visiting here recently, was hoping to try again with a new premise in which Nick moves back to New York and goes to work in an East Village bookstore run by a wealthy, intellectual older woman.

"Nick moves back to New York to further his art career," Valentine said. "Which I always thought was interesting, a guy with aspirations in art going to Columbus, Ohio (where the fictional Keatons live). That was a little obscure to me."

Valentine said he was headed back to Los Angeles to say yea or nay on the casting of the pilot, a decision that could make or break some struggling colleague's career.

"I'm glad I'm on this side of the table now instead of that side of the table," Valentine said.

Valentine was almost on neither side of the table after the 1981 accident. A truck rear-ended his bicycle on a midtown Manhattan street, flipping him, then running over him and dragging him several blocks.

"I don't mind talking about it, and obviously, from fan letters I've gotten, from hospital visits I give, it has helped some people to hear my story, and it inspires them," said Valentine.

now married and the father of a 1-year-old son.

"I just don't want people to think, like, I'm using this as a publicity ploy to further the career, or feel sorry for me — OK bring out the violins now."

A New York native, Valentine worked on stage before moving to Los Angeles two years ago. He said he was amazed at the effect "Family Ties" has had on his career. He's already done one movie, a campy horror flick called "My Demon Lover."

The new spinoff was not on the NBC schedule, but could turn up later as a replacement series. In the meantime, Valentine is slated to appear in 15 of the 22 episodes a year on "Family Ties."

Arthur was supposed to have only one appearance on "Perfect Strangers," but now has a 5-year contract. She plays one of the stewardesses who lives in the same building as Balki and his cousin, Larry.

Arthur, a descendant of the McCoys, as in the Hatfields and the McCoys, left the University of Maryland for the bright lights of New York.

Times were tough, and after a series of odd jobs, she said, she answered a classified ad — "Wanted: Real-Life 'Charlie's Angels.'"

The ad was for a detective agency that specialized in missing persons. The owner of the agency liked to hire actresses for undercover work.

On one assignment, Arthur said, she posed as a high-school student to learn the location of a runaway.

"The worst part was homework," she said. "What I'd do was go back to the office and say, 'OK, who's good in algebra?'"

She quit after three years to pursue acting again, landing some guest-starring roles on television and a small part in the movie "About Last Night."

HERTFORD VISITORS — Two of the personalities on the scene Saturday at Hertford's "Year of the River" festival were, at left, Ben Cherry as the pirate Blackbeard and Alice Copeland as the King of the Indians. Festival activities were held at the Missing Mill Park site on the Perquimans River and at the Newbold-White House, North Carolina's oldest house, a few miles outside Hertford. Hertford Takes Look Back in Time With 'Year of River' Celebration

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer
HERTFORD — Hertford, one of the historic towns of the Albemarle Region of eastern North Carolina, located on the Perquimans River a dozen miles upriver from the Albemarle Sound, was the site of a special celebration held Saturday.

The event, coordinated jointly by the Perquimans County Committee for the Celebration of America's 400th Anniversary and the Newbold-White House near Hertford, had as its theme the "Year of the River."

Appropriately, festival activities were geared to history-related events of the past. At the primary festival site, Hertford's Missing Mill Park, spectators waited under the shade of a cluster of maples or beneath the picnic shelter for the anticipated excitement of the riverfront arrival of impersonators of pageant scenes from the past.

The first to arrive at the park's small dock was a pontoon boat flying colorful flags and banners, with ladies and gentlemen in 18th century clothing being greeted by early Albemarle settlers as they stepped shore.

The next arrival, via a small motorized flat boat was the colorful pirate, Blackbeard. Ben Cherry, who for several seasons portrayed Blackbeard at the outdoor drama in Bath, was the festival's pirate — living up to the popular image of a dandily dressed seaman with red ribbons tied into his beard.

Blackbeard had in tow a King of Indians in buckskins — actually a lovely young maiden, Alice Copeland.

The Civil War was represented by a contingent of soldiers under the command of Captain Bill Potts of Edenton, commander of the 1st North Carolina Volunteers of the 11th Regiment of North Carolina Troops. The contingent waited dutifully for the appearance of their foes by river who failed to arrive at the scheduled time.

A few miles from the Missing Mill riverside park at Newbold-White House, North Carolina's oldest house, located on a farm site, visitors were treated to a tour of the small, four-room glazed brick house which features interior walls of oyster shell plaster and choice old furnishings. Mrs. Emily Harrell of Hertford, the leading southern practitioner of creating Armenian needle lace, explained the techniques of making the intricate work for which she has won several national awards.

As an added attraction, David McCall, caretaker of Newbold-White, and his wife, Bonita, held open house in the 1820s caretaker cottage. The cottage, caretaker home as well as a fine example of early 19th century architecture, is furnished with a mixture of authentic pieces and personal decorative items owned by the McCalls. In mid-afternoon, they served visitors a strawberry tea.

The June 13 events were essentially low-keyed, informative relative to the early history of the Hertford area, as well as being carried out leisurely, in keeping with the pace demanded by the humidity characteristic of a hot, humid, cloudy June day in eastern North Carolina.

Hobby Gives Man The Hands Of Time

By DEAN GOLEMBESKI
Associated Press Writer
TORRINGTON, Conn. (AP) — George Bruno has made a hobby of turning, making and repairing the hands of time.

He is a horologist, a maker of clocks, and an expert on the wooden-gear clocks manufactured by early Connecticut industrialists during the 19th century.

Bruno can look at the guts of any wooden-gear box and identify its maker, age and problems. He can just as easily pop open a wooden-gear box and send its parts tumbling in disarray, then quickly put it together with hardly a thought.

It's taken the 64-year-old Bruno 15 years of collecting, tinkering and what he calls "re-inventing" to reach his level of expertise.

Re-inventing is what he refers to as the six years he spent researching the methods and equipment used by Connecticut's early clock makers.

Combining what he learned from research with his own inventiveness, Bruno has created machines that enable him to mass produce replacement parts that will fit any wooden-gear clock.

As far as he knows, he's the only person, other than his son, who knows how to machine-produce wooden gears.

"I was working in a foundry as a sales agent, and I saw many guys hanging around after they retired, and it was a waste of time, ridiculous," Bruno said, recalling how his hobby began. "I didn't want to be down in the park just watching the girls going by. I wanted to have something to do."

A friend got him started by giving Bruno a wooden-gear clock, an 1825 model made by Norris North of Torrington. The clock raised in Bruno's mind questions about how the time-piece was made.

"In asking questions, I found there was little known as to the actual production methods," he said. "I started to go back and dig into it and I found out for myself that there was nothing really available."

Rather than give up, Bruno took his clock apart, measured its parts and set out to develop designs for the machines needed to duplicate the gears and pinions. A former machine and tool designer, Bruno collected unwanted equipment from local machine shops and went to work.

"I was just interested in making the drawings of the items as a record, just to keep out of mischief. And from then out it developed. I decided to re-invent the machinery," he said during a recent interview.

His basement is full of machines, each a conglomeration of different parts. Some make pinions, others make the different gears.

Throughout the basement, gears with tags hang from the ceiling and wood is neatly stacked in a drying area. Bruno harvests his own lumber, wild black cherry for the gears, laurel or dogwood for the pinions, and pine for the gear base. He also mills it into the various dimensions he will need for cutting parts.

Also scattered about the basement are sketches of clock parts. The artistic drawings, done freehand by Bruno, carefully detail all dimensions of the parts in the event Bruno should ever forget. He might someday use the drawings for a book.

Blind Featherweight Is Karate Black Belt

By JOHN PLATERO
Associated Press Writer
MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Arms outstretched, David Jainchill walked across the room and felt along the wall until his fingers touched the championship trophy the Black Belt karate expert recently won.

Jainchill can't see the 6-foot award — he's blind. "He's very courageous, an intense human being," says John Giordano, who has been Jainchill's trainer and friend for 17 years.

At 50, Jainchill remains a featherweight in the 120-pound range. Physically, he's lithe and sinewy; spiritually, he's animated and secure.

It wasn't always that way. Jainchill was declared legally blind in his late 20s. A congenital disease, retinitis pigmentosa, began when he was a teen-ager in Paterson, N.J., and gradually claimed 95 percent of his vision. He has no depth perception and sees only shadows.

"Going blind is a bummer," says Jainchill, a 5th-degree Go Dan Renchi Black Belt. "It's an emotional shock to the ego. I felt inadequate; unable to function — then paranoia." When Jainchill's career as a hairdresser ended with blindness, it was replaced with a destructive lifestyle. "I was carousing, drinking, living the fast life," he recalls. "I did drugs, including cocaine."

Karate, he says, was his salvation. In 1970, while visiting relatives in Florida, Jainchill recalled a childhood fantasy he had of being a Black Belt. "I walked into Giordano's place and said, 'I want to be a Black Belt.' "I figured I'd chase him out," says

Giordano, "by being tough on him." He remembered Jainchill was so out of shape he was stooped and couldn't kick more than two feet off the ground.

"When I would stretch him, David would scream bloody murder," says Giordano, a 6th degree Black Belt.

The physical contact was particularly tough.

"He was scared. Close your eyes and have someone hit you," Giordano suggested, to experience the impact of Jainchill's handicap. "Now you can hit him with a chair and he'll whack you one."

The initial problem Giordano faced with his newfound friend was to get him to use a cane.

"He didn't want anyone to know he was blind. I remember him walking into poles and once he walked off a pier with his tackle box and fell 25 feet into the ocean," Giordano says.

"I look like I see," says Jainchill, "but I can't." His eyes are clear and he does not wear eyeglasses.

While Jainchill's expertise is kata, the sport's art form, he had to take part in contact competition as a novice.

"I remember the first tournament I put him in. He wouldn't let me tell the other fighter he was blind," says Giordano.

"The guy was twice David's size. David beat him and when the guy found out David couldn't see, he cried."

Jainchill lives alone in a one-room efficiency apartment. The walls are covered with plaques and awards he's won in karate competitions over the years.

Two nights a week, Giordano picks up his friend and takes him to a North Miami Beach gym where Jainchill trains Black Belts of lesser degrees.

FOCUS

A Bad Character?

In 1782, the Continental Congress selected the eagle as the new nation's national symbol. However, Benjamin Franklin vehemently opposed the choice. The eagle, he insisted, was too common a bird to be a national symbol. Furthermore, he said that the eagle is "a bird of bad moral character; he does not get his living honestly; he watches the labor of the fishing hawk (waiting to steal that bird's food)." Franklin's choice for a national symbol was the turkey.

DO YOU KNOW — What animal is often used as a symbol for the Soviet Union?

TUESDAY'S ANSWER — Sally Ride was the first American woman to travel in space.

Horoscope From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY JUNE 18

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Although anxious to begin some new interest or activity, you should study your plans carefully to know what is expected of you. Not a day to ask for favors. Rely on yourself.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Be considerate of others, even if you're busy or worried. Make a new influential friend, and improve your lifestyle.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Be alert—don't let worry cloud your vision. Your mate may want a change, but remain firm and logical.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Don't let a disgruntled friend influence your opinion, but jump on a career advancement opportunity. Stay cheerful.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Don't tell others how to do their jobs. Do well at yours so you're not criticized. Drive carefully.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): Study a new project before involving yourself—know the facts. Be careful of a newcomer, and be cautious all day.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Fulfill a promise—don't try to change the terms. If your mate is restless, use kindness and patience to alter the mood.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Don't allow a dynamic partner to change an agreement, but be tactful. Watch troublesome public matters.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Study new ideas before using them in your work. Listen to gripes from fellow workers, but don't act on them.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Don't give up a proven pleasure for an unknown. Take no risks today, and don't daydream while driving.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Study the matter before making a big change at home, then let it wait. Allow no strangers in your home.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Get to the source to find the facts. Not a good day to visit a prominent person as you may have planned.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Changes in business to increase income are risky—set up a wiser budget instead. Enjoy time with your mate tonight.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he, or she, will have insight into modern advances to find ways of making them work to great advantage. Your child will have great ideas, so give him or her an education suitable to the brilliant mind he or she has. Training in psychology and sports are beneficial.

"The Stars impel; they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

there could be a place for someone who can make things seem to be what they aren't.

North-South bid quickly to an excellent heart slam. South's bid of six clubs was a Grand Slam Force, since five no trump was not available for this purpose. With only one of the top three honors, North signed off.

West got his side off to an excellent start with his lead of the jack of clubs, covered by the queen and king and taken by the ace. Declarer wanted something better than just the heart finesse for his contract, so at trick two he showed the devious side of his nature by leading a diamond to the queen, looking for all the world like a man taking the diamond finesse. Next came the ace of trumps, in the hope of dropping the king.

When the monarch failed to appear, declarer had to rely on his backup line—discarding a club on the fourth diamond. All would be well if the suit broke 3-3, or if the hand with the king of trumps also held the long diamonds. But what, if, as was more likely, the remaining trump was in the hand that was short in diamonds?

The object of declarer's play at the second trick was to cater for that possibility. He continued now by cashing the ace of diamonds and leading dummy's low card in the suit. East saw no point in ruffing—surely West held the king and declarer was going to ruff, so it would simply be wasting the king of trumps while permitting South to discard. He was rudely jolted when South produced the king, then crossed to the ace of spades to get rid of his club loser on the good diamond.

Grits On Menu Gives Southerner Feeling Of Home

By STRAT DOUTHAT
Associated Press Writer

Grits. If Southern folks can't find 'em on the menu, they soon gits. They head back down to Dixie where the revered corn concoction decorates the plates, and delights the palates, of true Southern gustophiles most every morning.

Yankees and other foreigners may think that grits are just mushy piles of white stuff, a Southern version of Cream of Wheat, perhaps. If so, they're dead wrong.

Grits (the name derives from grist) are ground hominy. And, as every good Cracker knows, hominy is made from kernels of dried field corn from which the hulls have been removed.

However, before being ground into grits those kernels first were soaked for hours — often in a weak lye solution to add calcium — and then boiled for another 30 minutes or so. Then, and only then, would the hulls come off.

Some people, especially the ones living north of the Mason-Dixon Line, might think this is an awful lot of trouble, considering that the final product is just a sort of gritty corn meal. Generations of Southerners would be quick to differ, however.

"They are a staple food in Florida, backwoodsmen eating them three times a day and considering a day without grits, a day wasted," observed the late Majorie Kennan Rawlings in her "Cross Creek Cookery," published in 1942.

This is still true in many areas of the rural South, old-timers will tell you. Charles Wilson, who helped compile the soon-to-be published "Encyclopedia of the South," even maintains that grits play a crucial role in defining the boundaries of the region.

"When you're in the Grits Belt you're in the South," says Wilson, a member of the staff at the University of Mississippi's Center for Southern Culture. "If ever you're not sure where you are just go into the nearest restaurant. If they serve grits instead of hash browns, those greasy globs of cholesterol, then, in all likelihood, you're somewhere in the South."

Southerners season their grits with butter, gravy, cheese, molasses or anything else they happen to have handy. Ms. Rawlings recalled being aghast by a friend who adorned his grits with raw onions and sardines.

But Southerners don't just eat their grits. They also celebrate them in song and story, even in movies.

"It's Grits," a 1978 movie documentary by Stan Woodward, was sponsored by The South Carolina Arts Council. A humorous homage to hominy, the film chronicled national and regional attitudes toward the dish, which dates to the time before Columbus sailed.

Turner Catledge, a former editor and vice president of The New York Times, asserted in a 1982 article that grits are "the first truly American food."

Ice Cream Can Be A Breeze

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

Fathers are so wonderful. They read bedtime stories, supervise the first bike-ride or car driving experience, pay college tuitions and let you eat the "precious" homemade ice cream when Mom is not around.

Homemade ice cream does not have to take the time, the fuss and the special equipment once required to achieve a taste-tempting, creamy-smooth texture. It can be a breeze to prepare using everyday kitchen tools and fool-proof procedures.

Even Dad and the children team can't botch it up! Team up with Dad or surprise him with homemade ice cream made from recipes by Kraft Inc. listed below.

Sauces Can Add Variety To Any Meal, From Fish To Cauliflower

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

Sauces can add so much to a meal. For example, cauliflower or potatoes can be spruced up with Mornay Sauce while Basic Cheese Sauce and Dressing may accompany poultry and fish.

These heart-healthy recipes are among others that were distributed during a food forum in Chapel Hill, "Fast Track Eating — Setting the Pace For Good Nutrition."

Sources for the recipes are the American Heart Association Cookbook, Culinary Hearts Kitchen Cooking Course, Culinary Hearts Kitchen Cooking Course Low Sodium Supplement and Lighten Up Quantity Recipe Cards.

Add the sauces and their variations to your meals by trying the recipes listed below.

The Basic Bechamel (White Sauce)

2 tablespoons margarine
2 tablespoons flour
1 cup skim milk
1/4 teaspoon salt
Dash of white pepper
Melt margarine in a saucepan. Add flour and cook, stirring constantly, until mixture bubbles. Cook and stir an additional two minutes. Do not allow to brown. Add skim milk and continue stirring until mixture comes to a boil and thickens. Add seasoning. Remove from heat. Makes 1 cup with 341 calories per recipe.

Variations:

Mornay Sauce — In a saucepan, combine 1 cup bechamel sauce with 1 tablespoon grated Parmesan cheese, 1 tablespoon grated brick cheese, 1 tablespoon margarine, and either 1/8 teaspoon nutmeg or 1/2 teaspoon Dijon mustard. Cook over moderate heat, stirring until cheeses and margarine are melted.

Tart White Sauce — For cooking green vegetables such as broccoli, green beans and spinach. After removing Basic Bechamel from heat, add 1/4 cup low-fat unflavored yogurt.

Veloute Sauce — For fish or poultry. Substitute 1 cup chicken broth for the skim milk in the Basic Bechamel. This will be thinner as not as rich as a traditional Veloute, which is completed with heavy cream.

Duglere Sauce — For fish. Simmer for 10 to 12 minutes, 1/2 cup chopped tomatoes, 1/4 cup sliced onions, 2 tablespoons white wine and 1 tablespoon lemon juice. Add to 1 cup basic white sauce.

Basic Cheese Sauce and Dressing

2 cups (1 pound) low-fat cottage cheese

2 tablespoons lemon juice

1/4 cup skim milk
Salt to taste (optional)

Put all ingredients in a blender jar. Blend until creamy, adjusting the amount of milk to produce the desired consistency. Keep refrigerated. Makes 2 cups with 54 calories per 1/4 cup serving size.

Variations:

Horseradish Dressing — Add 1 tablespoon prepared horseradish to the Basic Cheese Sauce recipe.

Herbed Green Dressing — Add the following ingredients to the Basic Cheese Sauce recipe and blend again: 1/4 cup fresh parsley, chopped; 1/4 cup watercress, chopped; 2 tablespoons chopped green onion; 1 tablespoon mayonnaise, and 1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce.

Onion-Dill Dressing — Add the following ingredients to the Basic Cheese Sauce recipe and blend again: 2 tablespoons fresh dill, snipped or 2 teaspoons dried dill (not seeds), and 2 tablespoons finely minced onion.

Hot and Spicy Dressing — Add the following ingredients to the Basic Cheese Sauce recipe and blend again: 2 to 3 tablespoons skim milk, depending upon thickness desire; 1/2 teaspoon Dijon mustard; 3 drops of Tabasco sauce; 1/2 small white onion, minced; 2 tablespoons parsley, and 1 tablespoon minced chives (optional).

Quick Mustard Vinaigrette

1 tablespoon Dijon mustard
1 clove garlic, peeled and crushed
1/4 cup cider vinegar
Salt and pepper to taste
1/2 cup vegetable or olive oil
Blend the mustard, garlic, vinegar, salt and pepper together. Slowly add the vegetable or olive oil. Makes 3/4 cup with 163 calories in a serving size of two tablespoons.

For two people, reduce ingredients to 1 teaspoon Dijon mustard, 1 small clove garlic, salt and pepper to taste, 1 tablespoon cider vinegar and 2 tablespoons vegetable or olive oil. Mix this dressing right in the salad bowl. Add greens and toss.

Buttermilk-Herb Dressing

1 cup buttermilk
1 tablespoon prepared mustard
1 teaspoon minced onion
1/8 teaspoon dried dill weed
2 teaspoons finely chopped parsley or 1 teaspoon dried parsley flakes
Freshly ground black pepper
Combine all ingredients in a jar; cover tightly and shake to blend. Chill overnight or for several hours. Shake well before serving. Makes 1 cup with 14 calories per serving of two tablespoons.

Kathy Kolasa

Ph.D., ECU Dept. Family Medicine

Q: I want to lose weight fast, what do you recommend? Mr. M.P., Greenville.

A: At the Eastern Carolina Family Practice Center we recommend an individualized program that results in slow, safe and hopefully permanent weight loss. The program would include: 1) reviewing your current food habits to see where changes can be made, 2) eating about 500 — 1,000 fewer calories per day, 3) and increasing activity levels like walking, swimming, aerobics or other exercise for at least 20 minutes daily. We recommend a goal of 1-2 pounds weight loss per week along with a change in eating habits. Changes in eating habits, such as using less fat in seasoning greens, are needed to maintain weight loss when it is achieved. We also would evaluate your diet before suggesting any supplements.

Dr. Carolyn Lackey, of the North Carolina Agricultural Extension Service provided the following checklist to evaluate diet plans.

Check the weight control diet using the diet evaluator. The more yes answers you get, the more likely the diet is a well devised approach to weight control.

- Does the diet meet your nutritional needs for all nutrients while lowering calories?
- Are foods the basis of the diet instead of diet pills or supplements?
- Are forbidden foods kept at a minimum?
- Is suggested weight loss kept at no more than 1-2 pounds per week?
- Does the diet emphasize portion control?
- Does the diet contain a sensible balance of protein, carbohydrate and fat?
- Is the diet based on lowering daily calorie consumption?
- Can you afford the diet?
- Are healthful snacks allowed?
- Is exercise part of the diet plan?
- Does the diet plan suggest you check with your family doctor?
- Does the diet have long term possibilities — one you can follow until you reach your desired weight?
- Are you learning how to eat for the rest of your life for permanent weight control?
- Does the diet leave you with a satisfied feeling and not too hungry or tired?
- Is the diet plan easy to follow whether at home or away without making you feel "different?"
- Is the plan easily adaptable if you find yourself at an unscheduled place during meal times?

Salad Has Starring Role In Summertime

By NANCY BYAL

Better Homes and Gardens
Summer puts salads on center stage in a starring role. Main-dish salads add variety to hot-weather menus and can be as nutritious and satisfying as your favorite hot entree.

For the scalloped edge that makes this salad a show-stopper, scoop out the melon balls. Then lay the shells on their sides. Using the melon-ball cutter, press down onto the edges of the shells, cutting a series of scallops.

CHICKEN-MELON SALAD

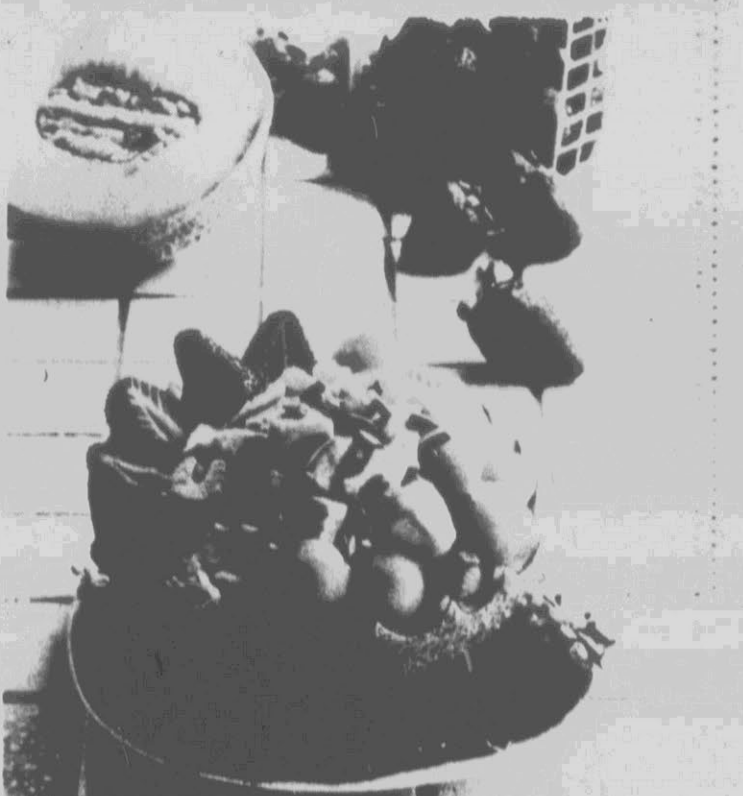

1/2 cup pineapple yogurt
2 tablespoons mayonnaise or salad dressing
1/4 teaspoon ground ginger
2 cups cubed cooked chicken or turkey
1/2 cup sliced celery
2 small cantaloupes
Leaf lettuce
1 cup strawberries, halved
1 tablespoon sunflower nuts

In a mixing bowl combine yogurt, mayonnaise and ginger. Stir until well blended. Add chicken or turkey and celery. Toss lightly to coat. If desired, cover and chill for up to 8 hours.

Meanwhile, cut cantaloupes in half lengthwise. Remove seeds. Using a melon-ball cutter, scoop the pulp out of the cantaloupes. Set aside and chill 2 cups of the cantaloupe balls until serving time. (Cover and refrigerate remaining balls for another use.)

To serve, line 4 salad plates with lettuce leaves. Place cantaloupe shells on plate. Divide reserved cantaloupe balls among shells. Mound salad mixture in centers. Garnish with strawberry halves. Sprinkle with sunflower nuts. Makes 4 servings.

Onion Is Aromatic Vegetable With Drawing Power

By BETSY BALSLEY
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

If one could package the potent drawing power of the odor of frying onions, it might well be worth a fortune. One whiff of this earthy aroma, and anyone within "nose-shot" will, usually without being aware of it, gravitate toward the kitchen to see what is going on. Add a little garlic, another member of the allium family, to the same skillet and you will be fighting off a veritable stampede.

Members of the onion family — from the familiar long green salad onions to the common "dry" round variety to the glitzy sweet type such as the Maui, Walla Walla, Vidalia and Imperial Sweet — all have this unusual universal appeal. Neither glamorous nor particularly pretty, onions are used extensively in nearly every cuisine known to humans. Throughout the centuries they have been the subject of myths and touted as curatives for certain medical problems, but their main claim to fame for thousands of years has been their role as a delicious food.

That an onion can be difficult to deal with on occasion is no myth, however. Hundreds of solutions have been noted for ways to avoid tearing up when chopping or slicing fresh onions. None really works, however, so philosophical cooks just gird up their courage by anticipating how wonderful this root vegetable is going to taste and get on with the tearful task.

Although usually used as a flavoring ingredient for other foods, there are some dishes that make the most of onions in their own right. A sampler of some of the more interesting onion recipes that have surfaced recently follows.

LEEK SOUP

1/4 cup plus 3 tablespoons butter
4 leeks, sliced
1 quart chicken broth
3 potatoes, cubed
3 tablespoons flour
2 cups milk
Salt, white pepper
2 carrots, shredded

Melt 1/4 cup butter in large soup pot. Add leeks and saute a few minutes. Pour in chicken broth. Bring to boil. Add potatoes. Cover and simmer until potatoes are tender.

Melt remaining 3 tablespoons butter in small saucepan. Stir in flour and cook 2 to 3 minutes. Stir into soup. Slowly add milk and bring to slow boil. Cook just until slightly thickened. Season to taste with salt and white pepper. Sprinkle with carrots. Makes about 9 1/2 cups.

JACKIE OLDEN'S ONION MARMALADE

1/2 cup butter
6 red onions, sliced
6 shallots, sliced
3 tablespoons sugar
1 cup red wine
1/4 cup balsamic vinegar
Melt butter in skillet. Saute red onions and shallots until tender. Add sugar, red wine and balsamic vinegar. Simmer until liquid is almost gone (Mixture freezes well, or can be canned). Serve with hamburger or meat loaf, if desired. Makes about 8 servings.

ALBANIAN ONION PIE

Olive oil
6 medium onions, thinly sliced
3 tablespoons chopped fresh mint
Salt, freshly ground pepper
6 eggs
1 cup milk
20 sheets filo pastry
Heat 1/4 cup olive oil in large skillet. Add onions. Saute until golden but not browned. Add mint and salt and pepper to taste. Beat eggs in large bowl.

Beat in milk. Add onion mixture.

Butter 13- by 9-inch pan or 9-inch round deep dish. Trim stack of filo pastry sheets to fit pan. Cut in halves if sheets are large. Cover with plastic wrap to prevent drying out.

Heat 1-3 cup olive oil in small skillet. Layer 11 filo pastry sheets in prepared pan, brushing each with hot oil. Pour onion mixture over filo layers. Top with remaining 9 filo sheets, brushing each sheet with oil. Brush top sheet with oil.

Bake at 350 degrees 45 minutes to 1 hour or until golden and firm. Cut into 3-inch diamond or square shapes from rectangular pan or wedges from deep dish. Makes about 12 pieces.

HERBED ONION BREAD

1/4 cup butter or margarine
3 cups finely chopped onions
6 cups buttermilk baking mix
2 eggs
2 cups milk
2 teaspoons minced fresh basil
2 teaspoons minced fresh dill weed

Melt butter in skillet and saute onions until tender. In large bowl, combine with baking mix, egg, milk, basil and dill weed, mixing just until blended. Spoon into greased 9-inch round pan (2 inches deep). Bake at 375 degrees 60 to 70 minutes. Brush top with butter. Makes 1 loaf.

GREEN ONION PIE

3 tablespoons butter or margarine
4 cups sliced green onions
3 eggs
1 1/2 cups milk or half and half
1 cup cottage cheese
1/2 teaspoon salt
Dash white pepper
1 (9-inch) unbaked pie shell

Melt butter in skillet and saute green onions until tender, but not browned. Beat eggs and add milk, cheese, salt and pepper. Fold in onions and pour mixture into pie shell. Bake at 400 degrees 10 minutes. Reduce heat to 325 degrees and continue baking 30 to 45 minutes or until filling is firm. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

COSMAS KAPANTZOS' ROMAINE SALATA

2 heads romaine lettuce
2 bunches green onions, thinly sliced
1/4 cup chopped fresh dill weed
Salt, pepper
1-3 to 1/2 cup olive oil
1-3 to 1/2 cup lemon juice
Greek olives

Discard tough outer leaves from romaine leaves. Reserve several leaves for garnish. Rinse well and pat dry. Cut crosswise into 1-inch wide slices.

Toss together romaine, green onions and dill. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Combine olive oil and lemon juice. Drizzle over greens. Toss well to coat. Spoon into serving bowl. Garnish with reserved romaine leaves and Greek olives. Cover and chill until serving. Makes about 6 servings.

Note: If desired, 2-3 cup bottled Italian dressing may be substituted for olive oil and lemon juice.

BAKED-IN BLUEBERRY SHORTCAKE — Bake fresh blueberries in shortcake. Serve warm, with more blueberries and dollops of whipped cream.

Shortcake Bonanza

By NANCY BYAL

Better Homes and Gardens
Some folks prefer a rich biscuit as a shortcake base; others say sponge cake is better. I stand with the biscuit backers. This all-in-one blueberry shortcake has lots of the fresh fruit baked right into the biscuit. Cut it into wedges and serve it warm with whipped cream.

BLUEBERRY SHORTCAKE—

2 cups all-purpose flour
2 tablespoons sugar
2 1/2 teaspoons baking powder
1/2 cup margarine or butter
1 slightly beaten egg
1/4 cup milk
1 teaspoon finely shredded lemon peel

1 cup fresh blueberries
2 tablespoons sugar
Sweetened whipped cream
Fresh blueberries (optional)

In a large mixing bowl stir together the flour, 2 tablespoons sugar and baking powder. Cut in margarine until mixture resembles coarse crumbs. In a small mixing bowl stir together egg, milk and lemon peel. Stir egg mixture into flour mixture just until moistened. Spread half the dough evenly in a greased 8 by 1 1/2-inch round baking pan. Top the dough with the blueberries. Sprinkle blueberries with 1 tablespoon of the sugar. Dot remaining dough over blueberries; sprinkle with remaining sugar.

Bake in a 400-degree oven for 25 to 30 minutes or until shortcake is light golden brown. While shortcake is still slightly warm, cut into 6 wedges. Serve warm topped with whipped cream. Sprinkle with additional fresh blueberries, if desired. Makes 6 servings.

Nutrition analysis per serving: 384 cal., 7 g pro., 45 g carbo., 20 g fat, 56 mg chol., 331 mg sodium. U.S. RDA: 17 percent vit. A, 20 percent thiamine, 15 percent riboflavin, 12 percent niacin, 12 percent calcium, 11 percent iron, 10 percent phosphorus.

Nature's best...

Most people love orange juice and most people need more calcium in their diet. But nature forgot to put calcium in ordinary orange juice. That's why Citrus Hill has fortified 100% pure orange juice with calcium. So now there are three reasons to serve Citrus Hill Plus Calcium to your family every day.

One. Citrus Hill Plus Calcium starts with naturally delicious juice, squeezed from the heart of the orange.

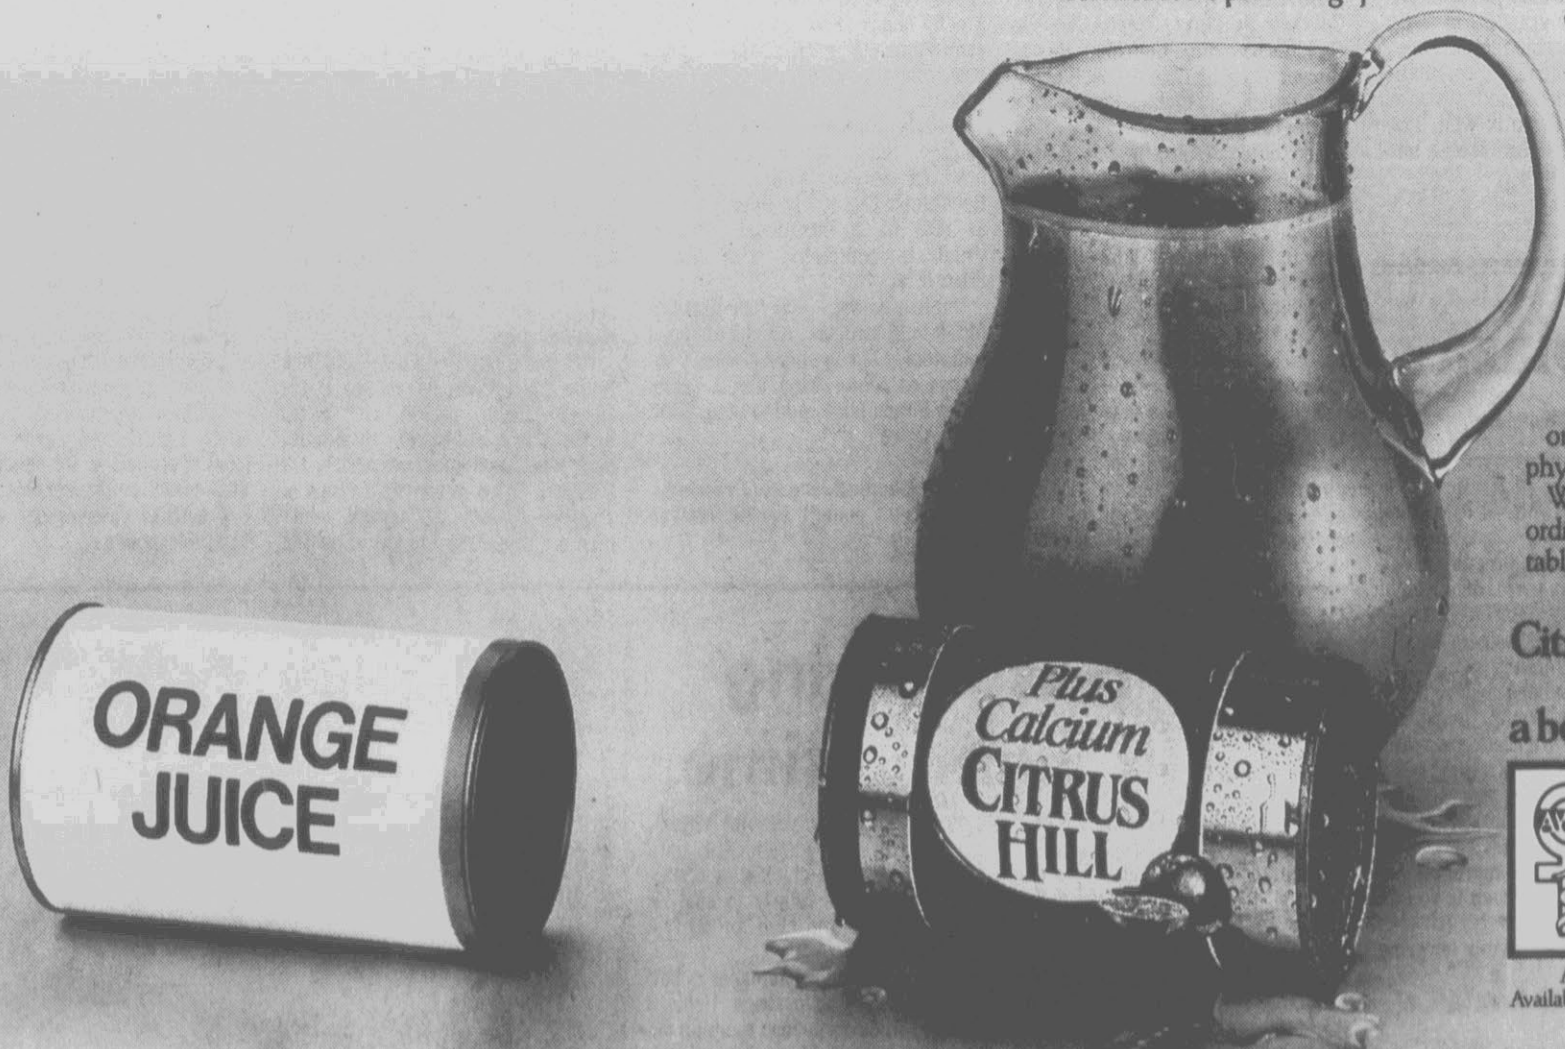

Two. Citrus Hill Plus Calcium is a better source of calcium because it has a unique calcium delivery system, CCM, that's even more absorbable than milk. In fact, Citrus Hill Plus Calcium is the first calcium product accepted by the AMERICAN MEDICAL WOMEN'S ASSOCIATION, a national organization of 10,000 leading women physicians.

Which leads to three, why would you want ordinary orange juice on your family's breakfast table?

Cook Meal And Cookie In A Hurry

L.A. Times-Washington Post

One can cook a meal in 30 minutes, but it takes planning to top it off with warm, freshly baked cookies.

Make and freeze a cylinder of refrigerator-cookie dough on the weekend. Then, when you rush in after work on a weeknight, you can turn on the oven, slice off a dozen cookies and bake them, filling the house with the ravishing smells of butter and brown sugar.

Planning is all. Turn on the oven the instant you walk in the door, even before you take off your coat. Put your packages down and get the spinach going.

While that simmers, taking on the flavors of garlic and oil, get to work cutting and chopping for the chicken dish, which is a very non-Oriental stir-fry.

As soon as the oven is up to temperature, put in the cookies. Somewhere, you'll find 3 minutes to set the table and slice some crusty bread.

STIR-FRIED CHICKEN BITS

- 2 whole chicken breasts
 - 2 cloves garlic, minced
 - 3/4 cup chopped parsley
 - 3/4 cup chopped scallions
 - 1/4 cup olive oil
 - 1/2 teaspoon salt
 - lots of black pepper
 - juice of 1 lemon
1. Skin and bone the chicken breasts and cut them into 1- to 2-inch chunks. Combine the garlic, parsley and scallions. Set aside.
 2. In a large frypan or a wok, heat the olive oil. When the oil is very hot, drop in the chicken and toss it rapidly over high heat. Keep it moving and keep the heat up or the chicken will stew. Season with salt, pepper and lemon juice, add the minced vegetables and toss for 1 minute more. Makes 4 servings.

NEAPOLITAN SPINACH AND BEANS

- 1/4 cup olive oil
 - 2 cloves garlic, sliced
 - 1 10-ounce package frozen spinach salt and lots of pepper
 - 2 16-ounce cans cannellini beans, drained
 - 1/2 cup grated parmesan or romano cheese
- In a saucepan, heat the oil and garlic. Put in the package of frozen spinach, cover the pan and cook over low heat until the spinach is defrosted. Season with salt and pepper. Add the cannellini, stir well and cook 5 minutes more. Toss with cheese and serve immediately. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

BUTTERSCOTCH COOKIES

- 1/4 pound butter
 - 1 cup brown sugar
 - 1 egg
 - 1 teaspoon vanilla
 - 2 cups flour
 - 1/2 teaspoon salt
 - 1/2 teaspoon baking soda
 - 1/2 cup chopped walnuts
1. Cream the butter and sugar. Add the egg, mix well and add the vanilla. Sift the flour, salt and baking soda together and add to the batter. Stir in the chopped nuts. (You can substitute coconut or chocolate bits if you prefer.)
 2. Divide the dough in half. Using wax paper, roll each half into a tube about 1 1/2 inches in diameter. Wrap tightly and freeze.
 3. When you are ready to bake the cookies, preheat the oven to 350 degrees. Using a sharp knife, slice off disks and place them on a cookie sheet. Bake for 8 to 10 minutes. Makes about 30 cookies.

ONION LOVERS TWIST

- 1 package dry yeast
 - 1/4 cup warm water
 - 4 cups flour
 - 1/4 cup sugar
 - 1 1/2 teaspoons salt
 - 1/2 cup hot water
 - 1/2 cup milk
 - 1/2 cup butter or margarine, softened
 - 1 egg
 - 1 cup finely chopped onions
 - 1 tablespoon grated Parmesan cheese
 - 1 tablespoon sesame or poppy seeds
 - 1 teaspoon garlic salt
 - 1 teaspoon paprika
- In large bowl of electric mixer, dissolve yeast in warm water. Add 2 cups flour, sugar, salt, hot water, milk, 1/4 cup butter and egg. Blend at low speed until moistened. Beat 2 minutes at medium speed.
- By hand, stir in remaining 2 cups flour to form soft dough. Cover and let rise in warm place until doubled in bulk, 45 to 60 minutes. Stir down dough. Toss on floured surface until no longer sticky. Roll out to 18- by 12-inch rectangle.
- Melt remaining 1/4 cup butter. Add onions, Parmesan cheese, sesame seeds, garlic salt and paprika and mix well. Spread on rolled dough. Cut lengthwise into 3 (18- by 4-inch) strips. Starting with 18-inch side, roll up each strip. Seal edges and ends.
- Place on greased baking sheet and braid 3 rolls together. Cover and let rise in warm place until doubled in bulk, 45 to 60 minutes. Bake at 350 degrees 30 to 35 minutes until golden brown. Serve warm or cool.

Grills Are Good To Cook Just About Everything

Outdoor barbecuing is definitely a part of our "summer fun" lifestyle in North Carolina. From a large barbecue for a crowd, to steaks for two on the deck, Tar Heels love to tantalize everyone with that irresistible smoky flavor coming from grills.

If, up to now, your outdoor cooking repertoire has consisted of hot dogs, hamburgers, steaks and marshmallows, why not expand your talents this summer. Just about everything can be prepared on a grill, especially when it comes to beef.

A slow fire cooks beef to its most flavorful, tender and juicy best because of the low to moderate temperatures. Less tender steaks (like round and chuck) and roasts are really tasty when cooked slowly over coals or in a covered pan with a small amount of liquid on the grill.

Marinades are a great way to tenderize and add unique flavor to your beef all at the same time. Liquids such as lemon juice, wine and vinegar are good marinade ingredients because they contain acid which penetrates the meat fibers to help tenderize them. Marinate your beef cuts for at least six hours before cooking, turning at least once to let flavors penetrate.

Once your beef reaches the grill, marinades and sauces can be brushed on for more flavor. One tip worthy of remembering though — recipes high in sugar or with a tomato base burn easily and should be brushed on during the last 20 minutes of cooking.

Now's the time for summer fun, light the grill, get out of the kitchen and enjoy some great tasting beef all season long!

SAVORY BEEF ROAST
6 to 8 pound beef tip roast
1 tablespoon chopped garlic
1/2 teaspoon freshly ground pepper
1/2 teaspoon salt

Combine garlic, pepper and salt. Rub spice mixture evenly over surface of roast. Insert rotisserie rod lengthwise through center of roast. Balance roast and tighten spit forks so roast turns only with rod. Insert meat thermometer (at an angle so it will clear the cooking unit) so the tip is centered in the roast and does not rest in fat or on the rod.

Place on rotisserie and roast over low to medium coals to desired degree of doneness — 140 degrees for rare and 160 degrees for medium. Allow 25 to 30 minutes per pound.

SUNNY SIRLOIN STEAK
1 beef sirloin steak, cut 1 inch thick (about 2 pounds)
1/2 cup fresh orange juice
1/4 cup soy sauce
1 clove garlic, minced
2 dashes ground cloves

Combine orange juice, soy sauce, garlic and cloves. Place steak in plastic bag; add marinade, turning to coat. Tie bag securely and marinate in refrigerator 2 to 4 hours, turning at least once. Drain marinade from steak. Broil steak over medium coals 16 to 20 minutes to desired doneness (rare or medium), turning once. 4 to 5 servings.

STEAK MARINADE

1/4 cup sesame oil
2 tablespoons cider vinegar
2 tablespoons soy sauce
1 tablespoon honey
1 clove garlic, minced
1/2 teaspoon grated ginger root
1/4 teaspoon dry mustard
Combine oil, vinegar, soy sauce, honey, garlic, ginger root and dry mustard. Yield: 1/2 cup.

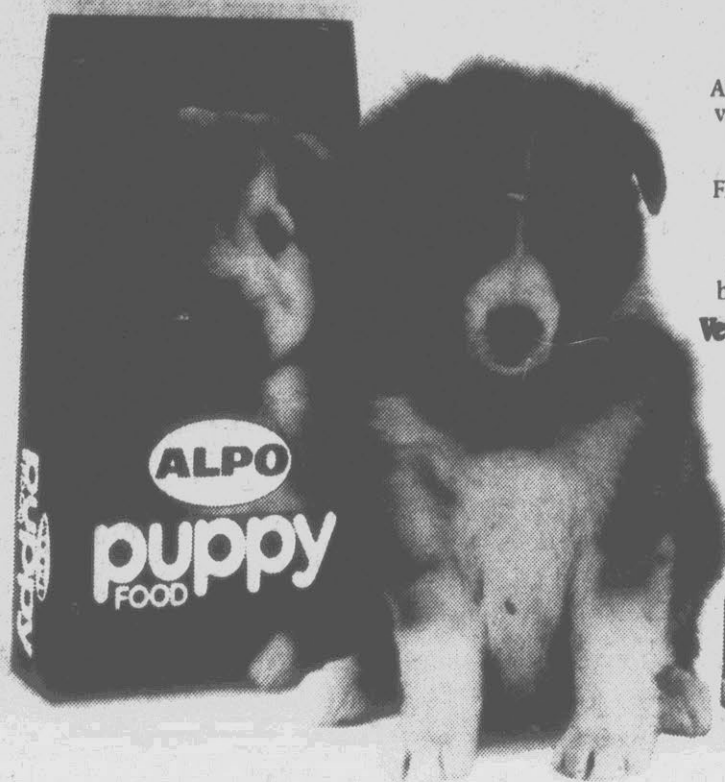

ZESTY BEEF STEAK

1 1/2 pound boneless beef chuck blade steak, cut 3/4 to 1 inch thick
1 cup tomato juice
1/4 cup lemon juice
1 tablespoon honey
3/4 teaspoon seasoned salt
1/4 teaspoon celery seed, crushed
Dash pepper

Combine tomato juice, lemon juice, honey, salt, celery seed and pepper in small saucepan and cook slowly 5 minutes, stirring occasionally. Cool. Place steaks in plastic bag; add marinade, turning to coat. Tie bag securely and marinate in refrigerator 6 to 8 hours (or overnight), turning at least once.

Drain marinade from steak; reserve. Broil steak over medium coals 14 to 20 minutes to desired doneness (rare to medium), turning once. Brush steak with reserved marinade occasionally. 4 to 5 servings.

Rice Adds Good Touch To Dishes

The arrival of spring calls for a fresh new approach to mealtime. Without sacrificing fast preparation, we look to dishes which combine fresh vegetables with exciting ingredients which seem particularly in tune with the season.

Lamb and fresh green beans combine with long grain and wild rice in a skillet dish which has special appeal now and for months to come. The versatile blend of wild rice and quality long grain rice is perfectly flavored with 23 herbs and seasonings to add sparkle to fresh vegetables. Lamb cubes, cut small enough for quick cooking, are the ideal meat ingredient in this easy meal-in-a-dish.

The zesty seasonings of Creole cooking add new flair to chicken combined with long grain and wild rice for a quickly prepared dish for family or guests. The rice blend cooks perfectly into plump separate grains of white and luxurious wild rice. Chopped fresh tomato and green pepper are added for color and "crunch." Hot pepper sauce offered alongside adds an appropriate New Orleans touch.

COUNTRY FRENCH WILD RICE SKILLET

1 pound lamb shoulder, cut into 1-inch cubes
1/2 teaspoon rosemary
1/4 teaspoon thyme
Salt, to taste
Pepper, to taste
1 garlic clove, minced
1 tablespoon butter or margarine
1-2/3 cups water
1/3 cup dry vermouth

8 cherry tomatoes, cut in half

Sprinkle lamb with rosemary, thyme, salt and pepper. Cook lamb and garlic in butter in 10-inch skillet over medium heat just until browned, about 2 minutes. Remove lamb from skillet. Add water, vermouth and contents of rice and seasoning packets to skillet. Bring to a boil. Return lamb to skillet. Cover tightly and simmer 20 minutes. Add beans and continue simmering until all liquid is absorbed, about 5 minutes. Stir in tomatoes before serving. Makes 6 servings.
