DRIVER KILLED — A train-car collision killed a Greenville man Wednesday morning near Greenville. According to Trooper Brad Ward, Radinravindra V. Raju, 27, of Brook Valley was headed north on rural paved road 1726, in the Eastern Pines community, when his car and a westbound CSX train engine collided. Ward said the small car skidded 15 feet before being struck. Raju, according to Ward, sustained head and chest injuries and was killed instantly. Two stop signs were installed at the railroad crossing early today, according to Randy Doub, a member of the state Board of Transportation. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Pitt Elections Proposal Nears Final Approval

RALEIGH — A bill changing Pitt County's method of electing members of the Board of Commissioners passed a House committee Wednesday and was expected to be approved by the full North Carolina House today.

Rep. Ed Warren said the House's Local Government II committee — on a motion made by Rep. John Church of Vance County — "passed ... without a dissenting vote."

And Warren said the bill was "on the calendar for today for concurrence" by the full House.

"We'll know more about it after it's addressed on the (House) floor today," according to Warren, who said he expects the bill to be approved by the House, then ratified.

The bill would create a "six-three" method of electing board members. Six commissioners — one from each of six new districts — would be elected by voters in the districts voting only on the representative from their district.

Three other commissioners — who could live anywhere in the county — would be elected by county-wide vote.

The bill received Senate approval Monday night and was sent to the House to replace a compromise bill the House approved earlier this month, which also called for six commissioners to be elected from districts.

But the House-passed bill called for the other three board members to be elected at-large only after being nominated by party primaries in districts created by combining Districts 1 and 2, 4 and 5, and 3 and 6 into three regions.

That bill was sent to the Senate, but the original bill, supported by Pitt's board, was substituted in committee and ultimately gained Senate approval. And it is the original bill that won House committee approval Wednesday.

Koop Says AIDS May Be At 'Explosion' Point

By JILL LAWRENCE
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Surgeon General C. Everett Koop said today he would know in six to eight months whether there will be an AIDS explosion in the heterosexual community.

"We're on the verge of knowing more," Koop told the House Select Committee on Children, Youth and Families. "We may be on the verge of an explosion (among heterosexuals). I hope not."

"We will know in six to eight months," Koop said.

Koop told the committee he believes young children should be taught to abstain from sex until they are ready for marriage. He said adolescents — the focus of today's hearing — must be approached in a different way.

Koop called adolescents "extraordinarily difficult to deal with." He said 70 percent of them are sexually active and unlikely to change their behavior. "You have to introduce such things as condoms, knowing that it offends the sensibilities of some people but that as a public health officer ... the only thing I can do is offer them," he said.

Koop denied a committee member's suggestion that political pressure within the administration had forced him to focus more on abstinence and monogamy as means of combatting AIDS.

"I've tried to be as apolitical as possible," he said in response to remarks by Rep. Ted Weiss, D-N.Y. "I have not altered my message ... I am quite aware of the fact that when I'm talking to teen-agers I have to stress the use of condoms more than abstinence and monogamy."

Koop testified a day after a $605 million AIDS education, treatment and research package sailed through a Senate committee on a unanimous vote, with its bipartisan sponsors promising to follow up with an AIDS testing bill.

The main bill, passed 15-0 Wednesday, declares AIDS a public health emergency.

Sen. Edward Kennedy, chairman of the Labor and Human Resources Committee, and Sen. Orrin Hatch, its ranking Republican, said their planned follow-up bill would expand voluntary testing and counseling. They did not say when it would be introduced.

The legislation approved Wednesday would, among other things, give states $150 million for public information programs and $100 million for home health care, mental health services, provider training and other needs.

The bill would double the Public Health Emergency Fund to $60 million, authorize a stepped-up research effort, and require agencies to respond to requests for AIDS-related personnel or space in 21 days.

Both Kennedy, D-Mass., and Hatch, R-Utah, said there were provisions with which they disagreed. But they called their compromise a balanced and responsible approach to stemming the spread of AIDS, or acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

In an opening statement, Rep. George Miller, D-Calif., chairman of the House committee on children and families, said more than 70 percent of American youth are sexually active before age 20. Though only 145 teens had AIDS as of June 1, he said, "we face the serious likelihood of a large-scale infection of adolescents."

Reporter Missing In Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — American journalist Charles Glass is missing and feared kidnapped in a Syrian-policed suburb of Moslem west Beirut, security sources said Thursday.

The sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Glass disappeared before noon Wednesday as he was traveling back to Beirut from Sidon, provincial capital of south Lebanon.

If confirmed, it would be the first abduction of a Westerner in Lebanon since Syria sent 7,500 troops to west Beirut on Feb. 22 to quell factional fighting.

Glass is a veteran ABC correspondent who quit four or five months ago and is believed to be working on a book about the Middle East.

One source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Glass was kid-

Speakers Support Schools' Budget

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Only three speakers — all voicing support for education funding — appeared at a public hearing Wednesday night on a proposed $41.68 million 1987-1988 Pitt County budget.

In his budget message to the board last month, County Manager Kramer Jackson told County Commissioners his recommendations for spending in the coming year — $3.22 million or 8 percent more than this year's $38.46 million — included a recommendation for a 5 percent increase in spending ($119,000 in new county dollars) for public schools.

Because of previous obligations (school capital outlay money and money to pay for property being purchased by the county), Jackson said only $1.44 million is available to meet requests for expanded services and programs in the new year.

And he told commissioners that an 18 percent budget increase requested by the schools alone (from $12.5 million this year to $15.2 million in 1987-1988) "is $874,000 more" than all money available for expansion of county services.

But Mary Alsentzer, representing the Greenville-Pitt County League of Women Voters, along with Annette MacRae of Bethel, president of the Pitt chapter of the North Carolina Association of Educators, and Judy Kornegay, speaking for the recently formed Citizens for Excellence and Equity in Pitt County, all suggested that the board fund the requests of the Board of Education.

The three speakers specifically asked commissioners to fund a requested increase in teachers' supplements. (The current year's budget includes $523,966 for supplements, while $673,966 — which would increase the supplement from 1.75 percent to teachers' salaries to 3 percent — has been requested.)

And all three urged commissioners to fund all capital outlay requests from the schools.

March Of Dimes Chapters Merge

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

The Coastal Plains chapter of the March of Dimes Birth Defects Foundation approved its consolidation with three other eastern North Carolina chapters at a Wednesday awards banquet.

The Greenville chapter will join with chapters in Wilmington, Fayetteville and Raleigh on July 1 to become the Eastern Carolina chapter of the March of Dimes. The local office will be a division headquarters for the area.

According to Connie Bowes, coordinator of chapter services, "the consolidation won't affect any services provided, it will enhance them."

The following officers and board members were elected at the meeting: executive committee for the 1987-1988 fund-raising, Andy Beacham, chairman; Sarah Ashton, vice chairman; Linda Asbell, secretary; Rich Morrison, treasurer; Dick Jones, campaign director; Nancy Verzer, health professional advisor; Herbie Swanner, volunteer development, and Fouad Atallah, member-at-large. New board members are Rich Morrison, Brenda Bullock, Tom Melvin, Wendy Smith and Phillip Tanzilo.

Chapter ambassador and local poster child Jennifer Howell and her mother Vonda were recognized at the dinner. Jennifer was pictured in the 1987 Calendar of Hope, which raised $3,000.

Plaques and awards for volunteers in the Walk America fund-raising event were presented to Julian Weston, Mayor Les Garner, Brenda Bullock, Gary Jackson and Andy Beacham.

Also recognized were state director Jack McGee and board members Linda Asbell and Fouad Atallah and Nancy Verzier. Wendy Smith, Greenville chairperson for Bid for Bachelors event, also was honored.

Gifts were presented to Rosalyn Locklear, a March of Dimes employee for eight years who will leave the staff in July.

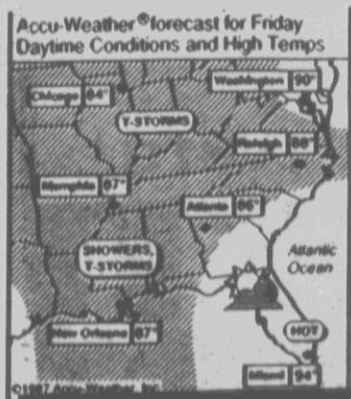

Other awards will be presented to March of Dimes volunteers at a later date.

"WE THE PEOPLE" — Janice Faulkner, left, talks with Charles Ward, chairman of the Pitt County Committee on the Bicentennial of the Constitution of the United States, and Mrs. Walter C. Latham at a bicentennial awareness breakfast at the Sheraton today. Ms.

Faulkner spoke on identifying resources for programs and funding for the bicentennial celebration and Mrs. Latham spoke about why the Constitution was needed. (Reflector Photo by Cliff Hollis)

Vietnam Changes Top Leadership

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Vietnam today named a new prime minister and a new president, replacing the revolutionaries who helped found the Indochinese Communist Party and led it to victory over the Japanese, French and Americans, Voice of Vietnam radio said.

Pham Hung, the second-ranking Communist Party official, was named prime minister to succeed Pham Van Dong, 79, the prime minister since 1965, the radio, monitored in Bangkok, said.

Vo Chi Cong was appointed president, a largely ceremonial post, the radio said. He succeeds Truong Chinh, president since 1961 and a leading political figure for decades.

Both new leaders are in their 70s and ranked No. 2 and No. 3, respectively, on the party's all-powerful politburo.

The announcements came as the 496-member National Assembly elected in April met today for a second day in Hanoi.

Within the senior leadership, Dong and Chinh were the last of the clique of revolutionaries who helped the late Ho Chi Minh found the Indochinese Communist Party in 1930. The tightly knit group guided the party through decades of turmoil and war against Japanese occupation forces during World War II, French colonialists and U.S. forces fighting alongside South Vietnamese troops.

Dong and Chinh had resigned their top party posts at last December's sixth national party congress after publicly admitting "serious mistakes" in handling the country's economic crisis. Economic reformer Nguyen Van Linh replaced Chinh as party general secretary.

"Chairman Pham Hung, on behalf of the national assembly, read the commendation of the national assembly in recognition of the great services of State Council Chairman Truong Chinh and Chairman of the Council of Ministers Pham Van Dong," today's broadcast said.

The brief broadcast said Hung and Cong were selected by the 496-member 8th national assembly today. But analysts believe the decision actually was made by the party leadership, which holds supreme power in Vietnam.

The changes were widely expected.

Barge Gets New Tug

NEW YORK (AP) — The tug that pushed and pulled a garbage barge up and down the Eastern Seaboard in search of a dump has gone on to other, as-yet-unknown missions, leaving the hapless scow off the city coast, still waiting to unload.

"We're taking her home," said Robert Vosbein, attorney for Harvey Gulf International Marine Co. of Harvey, La., the company hauling the waste. "We just got fed up with waiting."

The Break of Dawn, which towed the 3,100 tons of trash rejected by six states, including North Carolina, and three countries since March 22, left New York waters around 6 p.m. Wednesday, Coast Guard Petty Officer W. McGeever said today.

The tug had stood by in New York waters for more than a month. Local officials have been unable to agree on where to put the trash.

Vosbein said in a telephone interview from Louisiana today that the tug was heading back to Harvey "and probably won't ever grace the waters of New York Harbor again."

The vessel was relieved by the Chummer III to meet federal regulations against leaving the barge unattended, he said.

Air Advantage

Consider what recent developments in commercial air travel will mean for North Carolina, and Pitt County in particular.

The state now has connections with London through Piedmont Airlines direct flight from Charlotte. North Carolina also has connections to American Airlines flights to London and Manchester, England, Paris, Duesseldorf, Frankfurt, Munich and Zurich.

It is likely that there will be more international destinations either through direct flights from Charlotte and Raleigh-Durham, or through convenient connections via the Piedmont Charlotte hub and American's Raleigh-Durham hub.

While this means more pleasurable flights for the tourist who wants to visit Europe, it can also have unimaginable impact on North Carolina's future economic development. Our state now has ties with the great markets of Europe that it has never had in the past. This won't affect our economic picture overnight but will be a tremendous tool in improving the ties with an international market which is becoming increasingly important to the economic development of North Carolina.

At last, many of the world's commercial centers will know where we are because they can reach us by way of the international air lanes. In an age when travel is centered around the passenger plane this will be of great benefit to us.

There are many advantages for North Carolina with the development at Piedmont's Charlotte hub and Raleigh-Durham's American hub. Travel will be more accessible for all of us. In terms of economics, however, we will have an extremely useful tool for selling our products internationally.

Locally the benefits are available through Piedmont Commuter flights to Charlotte and American Eagle flights to Raleigh-Durham. Pitt County has plugged into the international routes of two major airlines in the most convenient way.

Why Bother?

We had the impression those Venice summit talks would be largely preoccupied with economic problems — and they were. But when President Reagan came home to report on results of his summitry has biggest concern appeared to be his Persian Gulf strategies.

Actually, the allies in Italy gave most of their time to economic issues. For instance, they called for easier credit terms for the poorest of nations and appealed to commercial banks to loan more money to developing nations that take steps to stimulate their economies.

There was also an undefined agreement calling for an end to protectionism and urging closer coordination of their economies as well as reform agriculture subsidies. Countries with trade surpluses said they would stimulate demand for more foreign goods.

The unkindest barb was saved for the United States advising a reduction of the nation's massive budget deficit. Finance ministers also let it be known further substantial shifts in exchange rates could be counterproductive.

All these laudable suggestions omitted mention of a timetable or hard-and-fast guidelines on their implementation. They turned out to be largely a case of paying lip service to the obvious.

The gathering of spokesmen for the world's most powerful industrial nations called on South Africa to abandon its apartheid system, voiced support for the government of Philippines President Corazon Aquino, endorsed the campaign against drugs and prescribed respect for human rights in combatting AIDS, "one of the biggest potential health problems in the world."

President Reagan touched all those bases in his televised report to the nation. Despite the overwhelming importance attached to charting economic policies of the world's industrial giants, he also chose to bring up the NATO meeting in Iceland, the upcoming nuclear weapons discussion with the Soviet Union and the Persian Gulf strategies.

Inclusion of those other topics tended to water down even more the Venice summit meeting. If it's to be taken so lightly, one wonders why the seven leaders bothered to attend.

Today's Thought

It's that time of the year again. This is the season when farmers look skyward for the rain which is so critical to tobacco, corn, soybeans and various other crops. They hope for the proper amount of rain — but then they pray that it won't be too much.

AIDS Legislation Continues To Advance

RALEIGH — Despite defeat of the most controversial bills relating to the AIDS disease, several significant bills continue to advance in the General Assembly.

Amendments to the state's Communicable Diseases Act are probably more significant than the three testing bills. They deal with emergency testing and AIDS patient rights. A bill establishing public school AIDS education programs has passed the House. A $10 million two-year appropriations bill which would fund public education and prevention programs is also alive.

One amendment to the Communicable Disease Act would ban mandatory AIDS testing for individuals or groups of citizens unless the legislature specifically orders the testing. But another section gives the state's Health Services Commission authority to order mandatory testing "when necessary to protect the public health."

While that second clause would appear to create a giant loophole to circumvent the first, Rep. Trip Sizemore, R-Guilford, sponsor of the three failed testing bills, says it is unlikely to be used to any great extent. Public health officials have given little support to the notion of mandatory testing and aren't likely to order it, he said.

But supporters of the amendment, including Dr. Ron Levine, head of the state Division of Health Services, say it gives the state authority to order needed testing if the AIDS epidemic gets considerably worse. This authority might be needed if the public health problem worsens considerably while the legislature is not in session.

Another amendment would require that all organ, blood and semen donations be tested for AIDS before they can be transferred to another person. In the case of organ donations, a recipient has the right to take an AIDS infected organ, however. The thought here is that someone dying of liver disease might take an AIDS infected liver and prolong his life.

The amendments also restate authority which the Division of Health Services says it already has to quarantine certain infected persons.

Finally, the amendments protect a patient's rights. One specifies procedures which must be followed in the reporting of an AIDS infection. A lengthy section of the amendments bill addressed procedures for keeping the reports confidential. Another states that an AIDS test result cannot be used as the basis for denying someone a job, housing or the use of public services or accommodations.

The education bill, which is before the Senate Education Committee at this writing, provides that AIDS education shall begin in the public school beginning in the seventh grade. The state is to provide appropriate instructional materials, under the bill, but is not to draft a curriculum. That is to be left to the local school boards and to parents. The bill says that the texts shall stress the importance of abstinence and fidelity.

The appropriation bill would fund many counseling and treatment programs which county health departments are to establish, along with public education program. The money would also be used to implement the amendments to the Communicable Diseases Act.

'Smoking Gun' Phrase Haunts Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) — When President Reagan says there is no smoking gun in the Iran-Contra affair, he is echoing a phrase from a Sherlock Holmes yarn that haunted Richard M. Nixon during his last days in the White House.

In Watergate days the words used were usually "smoking pistol," the same phrase employed in the Sherlock Holmes passage.

Reagan said "smoking gun," a variation that was also used at times in the Watergate era.

Either way it means the same thing. If you find somebody with a smoking weapon in his hand, it looks like he's the culprit.

Watergate investigators were looking for the culprit in a White House coverup of administration involvement in the 1972 burglary at the offices of the Watergate offices of the Democratic National Committee. Iran-Contra investigators are trying to determine, among other things, what Reagan knew about the diversion of funds from secret Iranian arms sales to aid rebels in Nicaragua.

Reagan says he didn't know anything about it.

"There ain't no smoking gun," he told an inquiring reporter Tuesday as he walked down a hallway in the Capitol before having lunch with Republican senators.

According to the Oxford English Dictionary, the phrase Reagan was echoing was first used by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle in "Sherlock Holmes" in 1894.

The exact words were: "The chaplain stood with a smoking pistol in his hand."

Nobody seems to remember who first applied the phrase to Watergate.

"I remember what it became," said Howard Liebengood, then an aide to Sen. Howard H. Baker Jr., a member of the Watergate committee and now White House chief of staff.

"The first person I ever heard use it that I recall was Jim Neal, who was up here working in the special prosecutor's office," Liebengood said.

Neal, now practicing law in Nashville, Tenn., could not be reached for comment Wednesday.

At any rate, use of the phrase became common as evidence in the case reached ever closer to Nixon.

Finally, on Aug. 5, 1974, in response to a court order, the White House released tape recordings of Oval Office conversations by Nixon and his aides regarding Watergate.

In a conversation on June 23, 1972, six days after the Watergate break-in, Nixon and his chief of staff, H.R. Haldeman, had agreed to order the FBI "not to go any further into this case."

The revelation contradicted Nixon's previous statements that he did not know of White House involvement in the Watergate coverup until White House counsel John Dean told him of it on March 21, 1973.

"Here was the 'smoking pistol' the investigators had been looking for — the direct, undeniable evidence that from the very beginning Nixon had been in on, had approved, had condoned and supported the attempt to bury the Watergate mess out of sight of the prosecutors, the courts, the Congress and the public," U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica wrote in his memoirs.

On Aug. 9, 1974, four days after release of the tapes, Nixon resigned.

In the Iran-Contra case, no such dramatic evidence has surfaced.

Hush Money For Heaven

Things are really bad in the TV fundamentalist business. I didn't know how bad until the Rev. Juniper Tube, the "King of Video Prayers," knocked at my front door and asked for a donation.

"Reverend, I didn't expect to see you working door-to-door for contributions."

"I'm in Chapter 11 and I need $4 million by Friday or they are going to take my chapel with the Rolls-Royce on top away from me. If you donate $50 a month for life I'll give you this picture postcard of the Holy Mercy Mud Baths in Palm Springs."

"I don't believe I want a postcard of mud baths. Why are you in such dire financial straits?"

"It all started when the Rev. Jimmy Bakker committed adultery and got kicked out of his PTL empire. Jerry Falwell took charge from Jimmy and Tammy to prevent Jimmy Swaggert from making a hostile takeover. Then everyone without sin started throwing stones and all our donations dried up."

"But Reverend, you did nothing to have your viewers turn against you."

"It doesn't matter. One fundamentalist preacher looks like another on TV. We got tarred with the same expense account. In the old days all I had to do was promise parishioners that if they sent in $10 I would wipe out the killer bees in their gardens and the checks rolled in. I once offered a key chain of our dog Babel riding the merry-go-round in the Noah's Ark amusement park and I raised $5 million in an hour. But you don't see money like that anymore. I would love to get Tammy and Jimmy by their throats and smite them with a sword."

"That's no way for a TV man of the cloth to talk," I said. "Remember, when television donations fall off, a man of God must turn the other cheek."

"Where did you hear that?" "It was either on channel 4, 5, 7, 9 or Johnny Carson. I remember it because I was so impressed I sent in $100."

"How about giving (ital) me (unital) $100?" the Reverend said.

"I can't believe you have stooped to asking for a paltry $100 when you are known as the Good Shepherd of VISA cards."

"Tammy didn't do me any good either," the Rev. Juniper moaned. "Once they showed the price of her clothes and the size of her closets, people started calling her a greedy Imelda Marcos. I'm desperate. If you don't give me a large contribution right now God is going to call me home."

"That's an old Oral Roberts trick," I told him. "If you want to play with the big boys in the evangelical game you have to come up with something more original."

"What if I said I need cash so I can run for President of the United States?"

"Pat Robertson beat you to that one. He's got the hell and damnation electorate all tied up."

"Suppose I told you I need the money because Jimmy Swaggert is putting out stories about my one-night stand in Patachello?"

"You didn't have a one-night stand in Patachello, did you?"

"Of course I didn't. But after all the stuff that's been in the papers people believe every TV Minister had a one-night stand in Patachello."

"Good point," I said. "Well, I guess there is nothing wrong with giving you a few bucks since you can't get it from TV. What do you intend to do with it?"

"I'm going to give it to God as hush money."

Strength For Today

The Greeks had a word, "idiotes," which meant a superior person who insisted on living a selfish life by himself and for himself, instead of putting his gifts at the service of his fellows. From the Greek "idiotes" we get the English word "idiot."

To us an idiot is an imbecile. But there are a lot of idiots in the world who are listed in the social register, inscribed in the tablets of the mighty, living in fine houses, and yet are idiots just the same. Every snob is an idiot, every gifted man or woman who refuses to use these gifts for a useful social purpose is an idiot.

And why are they idiots? Because, as "idiotes" they insist on living by themselves or for themselves instead of putting their gifts to the service of their fellowmen.

All except the snob, who is an idiot because he is a snob.

Turmoil Casts Doubt

SEOUL, South Korea — In the best of times, President Chun Doo Hwan never enjoyed widespread popular support — and these are not the best of times.

Many South Koreans think Chun, an obscure major general when the late President Park Chung Hee was assassinated in 1979, has no legitimate right to rule. He came to power seven years ago after a military uprising and has stayed on as the result of an election in which the people took no part.

Now Chun has taken a step toward relinquishing power, but a series of mishaps and blunders has touched off widespread demonstrations indicating that many South Koreans have run out of patience with military rule in general and with Chun in particular.

For a week now, Koreans have been demonstrating against Chun's government, first in Seoul and then in cities throughout the country, with shouts of "drive out the dictator" and "bring down the fascist dictatorship."

Doubt is being expressed that Chun's heavily advertised "first peaceful transfer of power" in recent South Korean history can be brought off as planned. And questions are being raised about South Korea's ability to put on the 1988 Olympic Games as scheduled.

Chun's immediate troubles began in January, when a doctor exposed the torture-murder of a student who was being interrogated by the police.

In April, Chun made things worse by dashing hopes for a real presidential election, which his party had promised a year earlier. He suspended talks with the opposition on revising the constitution until after the Olympic Games in October 1988.

In May, an official apology for the student's torture-death and a promise of police reform were exposed as a farce; the police, it was disclosed, had been involved much more extensively than had been thought. There was another apology; the Cabinet was reorganized.

Then, on June 10, Chun made it clear that the "peaceful transfer of power" he had promised would take a different form. As a foreign diplomat put it, the baton was to be passed simply from one former general to another.

Chun's Democratic Justice Party, at its convention, confirmed the nomination of former Gen. Roh Tae Woo, the party chairman, as its candidate to succeed Chun next February. Under the terms of the authoritarian 1980 constitution, the president is to be elected not by the people but indirectly, by an electoral college.

Chun said that the ruling party, by naming a candidate for president while there is a president in office, had taken a "historic step." It was Act I, he said, of a scenario that will be played out "no matter what sacrifice may be necessary."

Among the sacrifices may be the Olympic Games. Chun told a group of reporters last fall that he was giving priority to domestic stability over the Olympics.

Lesser sacrifices have already begun. Thousands of people have been detained since the demonstrations began June 10. Hundreds have been formally charged, including 13 leaders of the National Coalition for a Democratic Constitution, which had called for peaceful protest rallies to coincide with the ruling party's convention.

Even the moderate Roman Catholic Church here has sided with protesters, allowing dissident students to take shelter in the church's headquarters in central Seoul. Monday night, after a two-month silence, Cardinal Stephen Kim demanded that Chun reopen talks on revising the constitution and permit a free choice of government.

According to Western diplomats here, Chun's scenario might have won some sympathy from the great majority of Koreans in the center, between revolutionary students on the left and military die-hards on the right, if it had included at least the promise of genuine reform.

But as one put it, "What Chun offered were bread crumbs so tiny they were invisible to the naked eye." This diplomat, who said he is increasingly concerned about political stability in South Korea, said Chun "should have offered more, and could have offered more."

Another diplomat pointed out that ever since 1980 Chun has been talking about local autonomy, but when it was suggested that the people be allowed to elect mayors, government officials responded: "Oh! An opposition man might win! We can't have that."

Chun has promised legislation this fall that would let the people in a limited number of smaller cities elect municipal assemblies (there are none at present), but Seoul, the capital, which includes 25 percent of South Korea's population, would not be included.

No mayoral elections are planned for any cities at all. The president will continue to appoint mayors.

On another front, a committee of newspaper publishers is considering revisions in the repressive Press Law, but an insider says that any revision will be only cosmetic. At present, news organizations function under licenses, at the government's pleasure, and no one is talking about a truly free press.

"We couldn't afford to have that kind of freedom here," Lee Jong Ryool, Chun's press secretary, has said.

The ruling party has also said it would consider reforming the Presidential Election Law, to broaden the process of choosing about 5,000 electors. But it attached conditions that the opposition is not likely to accept.

Moreover, virtually no one puts any faith in the government's promises.

"Time and again," a diplomat said, "this government has failed to deliver on its promises. It's almost as if they believe a promise itself is enough."

The other diplomat said that Chun and his military clique pay lip service to "liberal democracy" but obviously do not believe in it.

"It's just like free trade," he said. "They don't trust it. They don't trust processes that are messy, sloppy, disorderly and unpredictable."

In the past week, signs have emerged that elements of Chun's government are beginning to share these critical views.

A third foreign diplomat said his embassy had been told by the Agency for National Security Planning, the old Korean CIA, that the agency has doubts that Chun's scenario for reform can be acted out without changes. The agency did not spell out, though, what changes it thinks might be necessary.

Doubts have also been expressed in the past few days as to whether South Korea will be able to go ahead with the Olympic Games.

Lee Man Sup, president of the conservative opposition Korea National Party, said, "Unilaterally pushing a political timetable while rejecting constitutional revision might make it impossible for the nation to conduct the 1988 Olympics successfully."

In Washington, Rev. Jesse Jackson, a possible contender for the Democratic presidential nomination, said the Games should be moved to another site if South Korea refuses to allow democracy to develop. It was the first such call from an American.

In Seoul, Robert H. Helmick, president of the U.S. Olympic Committee, told reporters Wednesday that he had seen nothing since he arrived Sunday to indicate that "we should be considering alternative places."

Meanwhile, the opposition shows no sign of compromising on its demand for a direct, popular presidential election, and at least one diplomat says that Chun may well be forced to escalate the use of force as February and the planned change of leaders gets nearer.

Other analysts agree that some kind of government overkill, perhaps martial law, which was threatened over the weekend, is a real possibility.

Ramsey Suggests Income Tax Surcharge For Schools

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Legislative leaders are still searching for a mutually acceptable way to fund a statewide school construction program, and House Speaker Liston Ramsey says an income tax surcharge might break the deadlock.

Ramsey said Wednesday he had given Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan a memorandum showing how a 10 percent surcharge on personal and corporate income taxes could raise $1.5 billion over four years.

Ramsey, D-Madison, insisted he was not endorsing the idea but wanted it discussed. Jordan reacted cautiously, while other Senate leaders and Republican Gov. Jim Martin said they did not favor the surcharge.

"I'm not pushing that forward, not pushing it back," Ramsey said. "I'm just saying here's another way we could possibly raise some money and let the federal government pay 25 to 30 percent of it."

Gov. Jim Martin, who is still pushing his bill to issue $1.5 billion in bonds to pay for new school buildings, immediately rejected Ramsey's idea.

"That's a tax increase," Martin said of the surcharge, according to press secretary Tim Pittman.

Jordan has been adamantly opposed to the 1-cent, four-year sales tax increase passed by the House and voted down by the Senate Finance Committee last week. He said he still preferred to avoid any tax increase.

"But right now I'm not saying 'no' to anything while we sit down and discuss the options," he said.

The plan put forward by Ramsey would boost the individual income tax rate from 7 percent to 7.7 percent for people earning $12,000 more per year. Corporations, which now pay 6 percent, would pay 6.6 percent.

Taxpayers could deduct the increases on their federal tax returns. Most individuals could write off about 25 percent of their increase and corporations 30 percent, Ramsey said.

The House leadership has argued that a tax increase or a bond issue are the only ways to generate new revenue for a large-scale school construction program. House leaders say a tax increase is the better approach because it involves pay-as-you-go financing. Bond issues, they say, mean borrowing money and paying steep interest charges.

Jordan said he had met with Ramsey for a second time Wednesday to discuss the issue, and said he also had talked with about 20 House members.

Apparently trying to avoid another outbreak of public feuding between House and Senate Democrats, Jordan emphasized that he was not pressuring the House, but simply making a pitch for his plan.

Jordan favors annual $50 million appropriations for 10 years, combined with revenues from half-cent sales tax increases authorized in 1983 and 1986 and from local coffers. He says his plan, pending before the Senate Appropriations Committee, would generate $2.9 billion.

The co-chairmen of the Senate Appropriations Committee, Sens. Tony Rand, D-Cumberland, and Aaron Plyler, D-Union, reacted coolly to the income tax surcharge idea.

"It doesn't strike me very well," Plyler said. "I don't want a tax increase under any circumstances."

Senate Finance Committee chairman, Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, said he would prefer an income tax surcharge to the sales tax increase. "That's the lesser of two evils," Rauch said.

But he added, "Why have a tax increase when the proposal we have before the Senate handles the need for school buildings without a tax increase?"

Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Granville, sponsor of the sales tax increase, said he liked his plan best but would accept the income tax surcharge if the majority of the House membership preferred it.

Martin Blasts Jordan's Stance

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin has called Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan's plan to finance school construction "rinky-dink" and urged legislative leaders to bring his own plan to a vote.

"Like he says, it's no new taxes no new borrowing," Martin said, referring to Jordan at a GOP campaign rally Tuesday at Freedom Park in Charlotte. "That means no new money and therefore, no new schools."

Martin, a Republican, and Jordan, a Democrat, likely opponents in next year's gubernatorial race, began fighting over school construction last week. The lieutenant governor withdrew his support for a $2 billion school bond package Martin favors.

Martin also announced that former state GOP chairman Bob Bradshaw of Charlotte, would head his 1988 re-election campaign committee.

"In case you haven't heard, we're going to need your help next year, too, because we're on for re-election," Martin said.

To The Editor:

I read with interest the article in your paper about the IRS saying that PTL did not qualify as a church because of television.

If they meant that TV productions, etc., had become their main business, they may have a point.

But if they are saying that television can not be a means of church growth or having a larger congregation, they need to re-evaluate their thinking and opinions.

In a day when churches have stock portfolios, schools, daycare centers, hospitals, retreats, theme parks, book stores, supper clubs and many other interests; it is hard sometimes to know where the gospel stops and secular efforts take over. I do not say that I know where to draw the line. I guess each case must be decided on its own merit. I do know that the "Great Commission", not only authorizes Christians to use every legal means to spread the gospel, it requires us to do so. I also know that I have always felt and still feel today that when churches enter into competitive business for business sake that they should be subject to taxes like everyone else.

PTL may have made mistakes. Sometimes it is a matter of intent. Who is to say what the motive of a local church is when it raises funds for kids to go to Disney World or some other place. Is it to promote the gospel or have fun or both? When we start judging, we have to be very careful because our own judgment can fall back on us.

Anyone who has seen the Vatican and the beautiful churches of Europe with all their splendor should be slow to judge PTL and Heritage USA.

Why should a successful person be penalized because he is a "Preacher" or a "Preacher" be penalized because he is successful. After all, here in these United States we can all dream, can't we? We pay sports figures millions annually. We don't refuse to sell a ticket to a person because they are below the poverty level. Rock stars make millions annually. We don't refuse to sell records to kids because their parents are on welfare. Media people make millions annually, they don't cut their salaries so people on a fixed income can be given a discount on products that sponsor their program or the news. States sell lottery tickets by the millions so that someone can become an instant millionaire.

They don't refuse a ticket to some little lady just because she only gets a small social security check each month. Why can't we give people more credit and realize that most people give simply because they want to and that they receive a blessing from giving and from that particular ministry?

It also should be noted that the percentage of income used by most churches for their minister's salary, housing, etc. is much greater than the percentage received by the Bakkers from PTL.

The IRS has to be wise enough to know that we all must adapt to change in this electronic world. North Carolina is one of several states where one can now file their taxes electronically by computer. If I file taxes by computer I'm just as much a tax payer as one who still mails their return in. And if I worship in front of a television or radio, I'm just as much in church as if I physically sit in a pew. The results are the same, the methods are just different.

If I can't go to Church via television, how can I be at a Presidential Press Conference, the World Series, the Super Bowl, the Senate Hearings or any other event via one?

The critics of PTL should read about the temple that Solomon built in I Kings chapters 5 and 6. They also should read about Solomon's (the preacher) personal life in Ecclesiastes chapter 2:1-10.

And last but not least, what about Public Educational Television; in my opinion one of the best things going today.

Do I have to give up the credit I got in school because I was in a pilot class that was taught to various such classes by a teacher from a studio via television? All of Public Educational Television is through that means so I guess now the IRS will have to revoke its tax exempt status and non-profit charter. I know that the IRS certainly wants to be unbiased and fair.

Sincerely,

IN THE STATE

Sentenced

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — White supremacist Stephen Miller was sentenced Wednesday to 25 years in prison on conspiracy and weapons violations, but his sentence may be reconsidered after a psychological evaluation.

U.S. District Court Judge Terrence Boyle gave Miller, the former chaplain of the White Patriot Party, the maximum sentence on two counts of conspiracy and one count of firearms violations. He then said another sentencing hearing would be held after a 90-day psychological observation.

Miller and four other former White Patriot Party members were indicted in January on charges of conspiracy to obtain weapons, explosives and equipment stolen from a U.S. military installation. The indictment said the five planned to get military weapons to equip and train a paramilitary group that would "further the goals of the white supremacist movement."

Experiment

GREENSBORO (AP) — A non-partisan, non-profit public policy institution based in Washington, D.C., said it picked North Carolina as an experimental state to better-inform the 1988 electorate because of its importance in the South.

"We knew we wanted to go into North Carolina because it's such an important state," said Larry Hansen, director of the project. "And we thought it better to wander away from the Research Triangle area because it might not be altogether representative of the state."

The project, called "U.S. 88," is sponsored by the Roosevelt Center for Public Policy.

It is designed to sharpen the public's views on important issues and prepare voters to confront the candidates with well-informed questions, officials say.

Oldest Twins

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Twin sisters Allie Hill and Maggie Lambeth spent a lifetime quietly farming and raising their families in Davidson County's Cid community, but it wasn't until they turned 103 that they were recognized.

The Guinness Book of World Records plans to include the pair as the oldest twins in the world in its 1988 edition due out in October.

The two are prominently featured in a film about centenarians scheduled to be shown July 1 in Washington during the 100th anniversary celebration of the National Institutes of Health. Gov. Jim Martin plans to visit them July 3 as part of an effort to recognize the state's residents who are at least 100 years old.

Tests Negative

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — Tests on 238 infants who stayed at Cape Fear Valley Medical Center in February and March have shown no signs of exposure to a bacteria that causes tuberculosis, hospital officials say.

The hospital has asked that about 600 infants who stayed at Cape Fear Valley in those two months be tested after an employee in close contact with infants in the newborn nursery came down with the disease.

So far, negative results have shown up in 184 infants tested at Cape Fear Valley, 34 tested by private doctors and 20 tested at the Cumberland County Health Department, Clinton Weaver, hospital public relations director, said Tuesday.

Over 70 employees have also tested negative, Weaver said.

Surplus Stores

RALEIGH (AP) — The state Court of Appeals has upheld a lower court's ruling declaring unconstitutional a 1985 state law requiring military surplus dealers to be licensed and bonded.

The law, meant to deter theft from military bases, "creates substantial obstacles to the free carrying on of... business, while its benefit to the public is disproportionately minimal," the appeals court said in a 2-1 ruling Tuesday.

The opinion affirmed a March 1986 ruling by Orange County Superior Court Judge F. Gordon Battle. Because the decision of the appeals court was not unanimous, the state can appeal the ruling to the state Supreme Court.

House Ethics Panel To Investigate Rose's Use Of Campaign Money

By ROBERT M. ANDREWS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Mary Rose Oakar has escaped disciplinary action by the House ethics committee for improperly keeping an aide on her congressional payroll, but Rep. Charlie Rose will be investigated for alleged financial irregularities.

The decisions were made Wednesday by the House Committee on Standards of Official Conduct, the formal name of the 12-member ethics panel headed by Rep. Julian Dixon, D-Calif.

The ethics panel voted to conduct a preliminary inquiry into allegations that Rose, a seven-term Democrat from Fayetteville, N.C., violated House rules by diverting $63,995 in campaign funds to his personal use since 1978.

The 12-member panel adopted a resolution that the allegations "merit further inquiry." It said a preliminary inquiry will be held "to determine whether such violations have occurred."

Rose said he welcomed the inquiry and would cooperate "in substantiating the loans I made to my campaign committee in the early 1970s."

Rose added: "I am fully confident that once the ethics committee has reviewed all the facts, that they will conclude that no violation of House rules has occurred."

The committee acted on a complaint filed by the North Carolina Republican Party last year, before the November elections, that Rose had borrowed $63,995 from his campaign account since 1978, at little or no interest.

GOP officials said Rose appeared to have used the money to buy beach property in 1983 and a four-wheel drive vehicle in 1985.

At the time, Rose argued that House rules against personal use of campaign funds do not apply to loans.

The committee said its inquiry will include allegations that Rose wrongfully converted campaign funds to personal use in eight transactions over seven years starting in 1978. It also will investigate Rose's alleged failure to report non-payment of interest on loans from his campaign committee during the period.

The panel said it also will investigate Rose's possible violation of the Ethics in Government Act by failing to report on his annual financial disclosure forms obligations of more than $10,000 to his campaign committee and to "an unrelated individual."

The panel concluded that Ms. Oakar, D-Ohio, a six-term House veteran from Cleveland, violated House regulations and federal law by keeping aide Mildred A. Vinicor on her payroll for nearly two years at an annual salary of $24,000, after the aide had moved from Washington to New York.

House rules and statutory provisions require members to maintain office staffs only in Washington or their home districts.

"The committee concludes that your actions with regard to the continued payment of salary to an individual while that person resided in New York directly violated controlling House and statutory guidelines," Dixon said in a letter to Ms. Oakar.

But the ethics committee voted against punishing her for the violation, partly because of lack of evidence that she had intended to act improperly.

Moreover, the panel noted, Ms. Oakar had reimbursed the Treasury for the more than $45,000 involved.

Ms. Oakar has acknowledged she made a mistake in not seeking guidance from the House before agreeing to keep the aide, Mildred A. Vinicor, 58, on her payroll from January 1985 to October 1986.

Ms. Oakar said Wednesday she was "delighted" with the panel's decision. "As I have stated over the past months, I would never knowingly violate the rules of the House or the trust of my constituents."

The ethics committee acted in Ms. Oakar's case after stories published by The (Cleveland) Plain Dealer raised questions about the congresswoman's staff arrangements.

EMPTY BUS — School bus driver Edith Owenby and her two passengers, first grader Dylan Stamey and fifth grader Carolyn Seale, make their last trip from school Wednesday. Buncombe County schools were forced to remain open this week to make up days lost during an April snowstorm, but officials said only 16 percent of the students attended classes. (AP Laserphoto)

Buncombe Schools Make Up Lost Days, But Kids Don't

ASHEVILLE (AP) — State education officials required the Buncombe County schools to operate for three additional days this week to make up for days lost in April because of snow, but it didn't mean the students turned out.

"Certainly it's a burden that the taxpayers should not have to bear," school board chairman Vernon Dover said Tuesday. "But it's the only way that we can comply with the State Board (of Education) requirements."

The Buncombe board waived two of the 13 days students were out and asked the state to waive two more. The state refused because students hadn't missed 15 days, so local officials had to tack makeup days on the end of the calendar.

Tommy Koontz, director of pupil accounting, estimates that 16 percent of the students countywide attended school Monday. "I would have a feeling that it would be worse (Tuesday) and even worse Wednesday," he said.

Only about 20 of Reynolds High's 1,400 students showed up Tuesday, according to principal Ronald Dalton, and most of them were making up exams.

"This points out to me probably one of the clearest examples of bureaucracy," Dalton said. "I think local boards of education ought to have some leeway in operating their schools."

Dalton added that application of the guidelines wasn't applicable in this instance.

"We've been looking at the letter of law and not at the common sense application of what can be done. Let's face it, if I were a kid and I'd finished all my tests (and) turned in my books...I think I'd be fishing or swimming. I wouldn't be at the schoolhouse and that's what most of the kids have done."

Democrats Rap Martin Job Record

RALEIGH (AP) — The Democratic Party has renewed attacks on Gov. Jim Martin's recruitment of industry, saying North Carolina has been trading high-paying jobs for more supermarket checkers and waitresses under Republican leadership.

"We should be thankful for the jobs," said Ken Eudy, executive director of the state Democratic Party, at a news conference Wednesday. "But they aren't jobs that pay the kind of quality of wages that families need to make ends meet."

Martin spokeswoman Karen Rotterman said the governor had no comment on the claims, although he has often said the state is gaining jobs of all types.

Eudy's salvo was the latest in a war of words and numbers between the Democratic Party and the Martin administration over North Carolina's economic health, which will be a key issue in the expected 1988 gubernatorial race between Martin and Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan.

The Democrats point to the loss of 15,849 jobs in 1986 and the relocation or closure of major businesses such as the American Tobacco Co. and Fieldcrest Mills as evidence that the state's economy is troubled.

They say the Martin administration has done little to ward off those losses, lure new plants to North Carolina and stimulate expansion of the state's existing businesses.

"North Carolina needs more than a governor who sits twiddling his thumbs, just talking economic development," said Eudy. "We need a governor who'll roll up his sleeves and go to work recruiting better-paying jobs for our state."

Martin has fired back with statistics of his own, noting that the 1986 state jobless rate was 5.3 percent — lowest since 1979. Earlier this month, he reported that despite the job losses, new and expanding businesses invested more than $5.2 billion and announced plans to create 54,800 new jobs in North Carolina.

Eudy, however, said more than 12,000 of those new jobs were low-paying service positions.

The state's per capita income continued to rank 37th nationally last year while other Southeastern states improved their rankings, he added.

Asked whether he meant to imply that Martin was not trying, Eudy replied, "I don't know what he's trying to do. I'm just interested and concerned about the results."

Eudy said he agreed with national publications that describe North Carolina's economic climate as the best among states for new industry.

"We're simply saying, where are they? Why aren't they coming to North Carolina with good-paying jobs?"

"I understand that Jim Martin is something of a good yachtsman," Eudy added. "But the good ship North Carolina, under the helmanship of Jim Martin, is adrift. Other Southeastern states are leaving North Carolina in their wake."

Panel Backs City Funding Of Roads

RALEIGH (AP) — Big cities have spent large sums of money on right-of-way purchases in recent years, a move one legislator says gives the state Board of Transportation incentive to approve big-city road projects ahead of ones needed by smaller towns that can't afford to help pay for them.

However, a House subcommittee agreed Wednesday to let municipalities with 10,000 or more residents make limited contributions toward right-of-way purchases for additions to the state highway system.

The subcommittee approved the provision as it completed work on a bill curtailing municipal involvement in state highway projects. The panel will present the bill to the full House Transportation Committee on Thursday.

"I think the bill allows the municipalities to do the things they really need to do," Rep. Bob Hunter, the subcommittee chairman, said in an interview. "But it doesn't allow them to buy a higher priority for their road projects."

As originally proposed, the bill — a combination of several measures put together by the subcommittee — would not have allowed cities to share right-of-way costs for road projects involving the state highway system.

The version approved by the subcommittee would prohibit towns of 10,000 or less from making any contributions toward right-of-way purchases. Towns of 10,001 to 25,000 could pay 5 percent of a project's costs; towns of 25,001 to 50,000 could pay 10 percent; cities of 50,001 to 100,000 could pay 15 percent; and towns of 100,000 or more could pay 25 percent.

Under another amendment approved Wednesday, the board would be barred from considering a municipality's ability to pay for all or part of a project as the board develops its annual long-range blueprint for highway construction.

City officials have protested that the ban would cripple their efforts to deal with worsening congestion on state highways that go through or near metropolitan areas.

On Monday, the subcommittee voted to let cities of 100,000 or more contribute up to 25 percent of a project's right-of-way cost.

CAR TALK

From Joe Cullipher Chrysler Plymouth, Dodge, Peugeot

By James Phillips

ENGINE WON'T STOP RUNNING

Ever experience the annoyance of a car engine that won't stop running after you've switched it off? "Dieseling" is the technical term. It happens when a combination of heat and compression causes fuel to burn in car cylinders without a spark. This problem is more common in late model cars because of the changes designed to control emissions.

You can correct dieseling in cars with standard transmissions by setting the brakes, engaging any gear and then releasing the clutch. If your car has an automatic transmission, make certain to set your brake and put the car in drive. This method is nothing more than stalling your car, so be careful of putting an extra strain on it.

Dieseling can be prevented. High octane gas may do the trick. If the problem remains after two full tanks of high octane gas have been used up, the car should be turned over to a mechanic. He'll probably recommend readjustment of the carburetor idle and ignition settings.

Vows To Keep Home

Tammy Says She Prefers Death To PTL Ouster

By ROGER BRYANT
Associated Press Writer

TEGA CAY, S.C. (AP) — Tammy Faye Bakker is accusing PTL of rummaging through her home, sending her dogs to the pound and selling her son's go-cart, and says she wishes the ministry's new leaders had killed her instead.

A PTL official denied Mrs. Bakker's tearful allegations and said it was embarrassing to do so.

Mrs. Bakker, wife of deposed TV evangelist Jim Bakker, vowed Wednesday to fight a PTL attempt to evict the couple from the $1.3 million home she claims the ministry gave them.

Addressing reporters outside the palatial parsonage she has called home since 1981, she also said she and her husband have started a new ministry.

Despite millions of dollars in compensation the couple reportedly received from PTL before Bakker stepped aside in March because of a sex scandal, Mrs. Bakker said they have only $37,000.

She also accused PTL's new leaders of shredding letters from PTL contributors and maliciously burying hundreds of record albums she recorded, and said she and her husband have been "hunted like a scared animal" since the Rev. Jerry Falwell took over PTL at Bakker's request.

"I hope that Jerry Falwell and his family never have to suffer the way that they've made our family suffer. I wake up every morning wishing that they had killed me and Jim does too. It would have been much kinder for them just to have put a bullet in us. But they didn't and so we're still here."

Falwell's spokesman, Mark DeMoss, denied the allegations.

"I'm embarrassed, frankly, to stand here and answer them," DeMoss said. "Mrs. Bakker's books and records remain on sale at Heritage USA, and the ministry's new managers have not entered the home."

"We're talking about an enormous problem with millions and millions of dollars and she keeps talking about albums and go-carts."

PTL officials have said it was the Bakkers' mismanagement that caused the ministry, saddled with a $72 million debt, to file for protection from creditors under Chapter 11 of the federal bankruptcy code.

An associate of the Bakkers, meanwhile, said Wednesday he resigned as their security chief after they announced their intention to fight for the home instead of collecting their belongings. "I see the war coming, and it looks like ... unless there's a miracle it's going to happen," said Don Hardister, a Bakker associate for 11 years. "It's going to come to a showdown and I don't think either side wants that."

PTL stands for Praise The Lord, or People That Love.

The Bakkers returned to the lakefront home near PTL headquarters a week ago from their home in Palm Springs, Calif., where they had been in seclusion since March.

Mrs. Bakker said she and her husband will try to talk to PTL before filing a lawsuit seeking to keep the house. Asked why they don't buy the house, she said, "Well, we don't have any money. And that's the honest truth."

"Everybody says we have all this money. Well, if we've got it, I don't know where it is. Jim and I have exactly $37,000 left to our name and that's the truth. And I don't think we could buy that house for $37,000."

DeMoss said the PTL board in November 1986 approved letting the Bakkers accrue ownership of the house at 10 percent each year. The Bakkers would own 5 percent now, and the ministry "would be happy to work that out," he said.

Mrs. Bakker accused PTL managers of insensitivity, saying they used a bulldozer to bury her albums, "just took and sold" her son's go-cart and an air conditioned dog house and searched her home.

"They also took two of our dogs and took them to the dog pound," she said.

The couple's new ministry is called New Covenant Partners, Mrs. Bakker said. "The reason that we call it New Covenant is we made a covenant with our partners, with the PTL partners," the term for PTL contributors.

"I want to tell our partners that we love you more than anything in the whole world," she said. "We miss you. I don't know how God is going to work this whole thing out. But I know somewhere he has a great plan."

DABBING THE EYE — Tammy Bakker, wife of former PTL leader Jim Bakker, dabs her eye with a handkerchief as she spoke at a news conference Wednesday outside the home in Tega Cay, S.C., where the Bakkers are staying. Mrs. Bakker said she wishes the PTL's new leaders had killed her rather than attempting to banish her. (AP Laserphoto)

Southern Baptist Schism Continues

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The Southern Baptist Convention winds up its 130th annual meeting today without achieving the unity that its leaders had sought.

With conservatives firmly in control of the 14.6 million-member denomination after nine years of struggle and a controversial Peace Committee report passed handily, there were still murmurs of dissent among moderates. The dissenters have bridled at what they see as fundamentalists' efforts to freeze moderates out of positions on boards in the SBC's 26 agencies and seminaries.

The moderates are also unhappy that the Peace Committee was granted three more years of activity to monitor compliance with its 10 recommendations.

The committee originally had 22 members, but one, Winfred Moore, of Amarillo, Texas, a former first vice president of the SBC, resigned moments after the report, a product of two year's work, was accepted by a show of hands Tuesday night.

Moore said Wednesday that he found it "impossible to continue" because of the changed nature of the committee's work.

"As I have stated at the end of our meeting in St. Louis, I do not believe the committee should be continued as an 'oversight' or 'police' committee to monitor or judge the work of our institutions and agencies, their trustees and our trustee system," Moore said.

He said he felt his truthfulness and integrity would be at stake if he continued on the committee.

A recently organized group of moderate-conservative Southern Baptists protested the committee report Wednesday, saying that it "violates the heart of what it means to be a Baptist, namely, religious liberty."

The leader of the Southern Baptist Alliance, the Rev. William Henry Crouch of Charlotte, N.C., said Recommendation 10, which extends the life of the committee, "has transformed the Peace Committee into an investigatory, enforcement committee for doctrinal uniformity."

The issue of interpretation of the Scriptures has been the focus of the two sides' disagreement. The peace report included statements affirming the conservative view that the Bible is inerrant and leaves no room for broader interpretation of any of its passages.

Crouch, flanked by other members of the Alliance, told a news conference that the report "presents a clear double standard in that the individual freedom of denominational employees will not be protected or ensured, while no restrictions are placed on other Baptists, such as pastors, church members and convention officers."

He said that two-thirds of the appointments of SBC president Adrian Rogers, a conservative who was re-elected to a second consecutive one-year term Tuesday, were openly identified with the leaders of the inerrantist movement within the denomination.

Charles G. Fuller of Roanoke, Va., chairman of the Peace Committee, defended the work of the committee Wednesday and said its mandate to oversee denomination institutions does not give it "policing" powers over seminaries and other agencies. He said that it should be viewed as "an interruption" of normal denomination procedure and said the committee may disband before its mandate expires in 1990.

Fuller also took exception to suggestions that some committee members "lacked courage" to stand up for their convictions inside the panel.

"I do not know of a sanctified wimp in the entire lot," Fuller said.

In other action in a shortened session Wednesday, messengers to the convention gave narrow approval to plans to hold the 1989 convention in Las Vegas. Some of the delegates had argued that Las Vegas, with its open gambling and prostitution, was not an "appropriate" site for the SBC.

Next year's meeting of the SBC, which is the largest non-Catholic denomination in the United States, is scheduled for San Antonio, Texas.

Victor M. Kaneubbe, a Choctaw Native American and retired pastor of the First Indian Baptist Church in Phoenix, was elected second vice president of the denomination, defeating four other nominees.

Unanimously re-elected were Lee Porter of Nashville, Tenn., SBC registration secretary, and Recording Secretary Martin Bradley, also of Nashville.

The 25,000 Southern Baptists were to end their meeting today after hearing a talk by evangelist Billy Graham and final reports from a number of seminaries and agencies.

Cigarette smoke in airliners is so noxious that American scientists have recommended that smoking be banned on all commercial flights, says National Geographic.

Budget

Mrs. Alsentzer, saying "we would like to express our extreme disappointment that the League of Women Voters' request for a similar public hearing on the school board's proposed budget was denied," said "we hope the County Commissioners will see fit to fully fund the capital outlay plans proposed, both for school expansion projects and equipment in the entire amount requested."

"Regarding the request (some $360,000 that was not recommended by Jackson for inclusion in the new budget) for voting machines from the Pitt County Board of Elections, we hope the board ... will carefully consider the long-term cost effectiveness of purchasing these machines at this time," Mrs. Alsentzer said, and "as regards the county's budget proposal for waste management" the league "was very pleased to see the inclusion of equipment for a cardboard recycling unit ..."

Suggesting that any action taken to cut down on the generation of paper, glass and aluminum is "commendable," Mrs. Alsentzer said the league feels "an all-out program to educate our county about solid-waste management and encourage the separating and recycling of all recyclable materials would mean additional long-term savings, and would make environmental sense."

The board, which met in executive session to discuss legal and personnel matters following the hearing, scheduled another budget workshop meeting for 9 a.m. Wednesday.

Woman's Deathbed Story Frees Man After 12 Years

DOVER, Del. (AP) — A man freed after 12 years in prison by a woman's deathbed recantation of rape charges says he doesn't "hold any hatred" and wants only to get out of Delaware and back to his family.

"I felt like I weighed about half a pound," Wayman E. Cammille, 50, said from his mother's home in Townsend shortly after his release Wednesday from the Sussex Correctional Institution near Georgetown.

"It's a good feeling when all that weight gets off your back and you're living free. You can go to the refrigerator and get a soda," he said.

Cammille, who could get $1 million from the state under legislation introduced Tuesday in the state House, said he wants to "get out of Delaware" as soon as possible and return to his family in McKee City, N.J.

"I really feel great. I don't hold no grudges. I don't hold any hatred ... If I had been bitter all these years, I would have torn my own life up. God kept saying to me to keep on. He wanted me to make it," he said.

Cammille was charged with first-degree rape after he was arrested in a drunken stupor in the bed of 64-year-old Alice Mock on May 17, 1975. The charge carried a maximum sentence of 45 years in prison. He pleaded guilty to a lesser charge of sexual assault and second-degree burglary and was sentenced to 15 years in prison.

Cammille maintained his innocence all along, but said he could not remember the events of the day of his arrest because he had been drunk.

Ms. Mock, partially clad, had run to a store near her apartment that day and reported being attacked by a man who had forced his way into her house after she answered a knock at the door.

But on Nov. 28, 1986, a postal worker known for her compassion to the sick and elderly was summoned to Ms. Mock's home across from the post office. The postal worker,

No claim of responsibility has been made in his disappearance.

Eight Americans are among 24 foreigners missing after being kidnapped in Lebanon in the past two years. Also missing is Anglican Church envoy Terry Waite, who disappeared in Lebanon while on a mission to negotiate the release of hostages.

No group has claimed responsibility for Waite's disappearance.

although most diplomats had thought Cong would assume the premiership, or head of the council of ministers, and Hung the presidency, or head of the council of state.

As a member of the Politburo since 1956 and vice premier since 1958, Hung is regarded as a transitional figure who could ease the break with the old guard.

He played a key role in the war against the U.S.-backed government of South Vietnam. Hung was sent south in 1967 as the political commissar of the South Vietnam Liberation Armed Forces, better known as the Viet Cong.

In 1975, he served as the political commissar of the Ho Chi Minh campaign, the final North Vietnamese offensive, which climaxed in the capture of Saigon and the end of the civil war.

Hung also served as interior ministry from 1980 until a government reshuffle in February this year.

Cong held a number of top government and party posts, and made his name as agriculture minister from 1977-79, when he presided over reforms that allowed farmers to market whatever they produced above state-assigned quotas. Those reforms, which heralded reforms in other areas of the economy, were widely credited with boosting agricultural production.

The assembly also elected to the council of ministers, now headed by Hung, Defense Minister Le Duc Anh, Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach and Interior Minister Mai Chi Tho, the radio said. All three rose in the party hierarchy at the December party congress, and Anh and Tho received their cabinet posts in a major government reshuffle in February.

The changes capped off a major overhaul of the top party and state apparatus to promote greater administrative efficiency and carry out economic reforms the party has deemed the country's top priority.

Gorbachev Changes Soviet Military Command In Strengthening Control

By BRYAN BRUMLEY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The replacement of the Soviet defense minister with a relatively junior general and a subsequent shake-up in the Moscow air defense command signal that Kremlin leader Mikhail Gorbachev is determined to take control of the armed forces, government and academic experts say.

at Gorbachev may be going too far too fast, one scholar adds.

Defense Minister Sergei Sokolov was forced to retire, and air defense chief Alexander Koldunov was fired after a West German teen-ager flew more than 400 miles across Soviet territory in a single-engine Cessna on May 28 and buzzed the Kremlin, an area closed to all air traffic.

More dismissals were disclosed Wednesday by the Defense Ministry newspaper Krasnaya Zvezda (Red Star), which said Marshal Anatoly U. Konstantinov had been replaced by Col. Gen. V. Tsarkov as air defense chief of the Moscow district.

The newspaper also reported that other top-ranking officers in the Moscow district — including two lieutenant generals, a major general and a colonel — were expelled from the Communist Party, severe discipline that entails disgrace and loss of privilege.

The Cessna incident "was a pretext to force Sokolov out," said Stephen Meyer, a Soviet military expert at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

In replacing the 75-year-old Sokolov with Dmitri Yazov, at 64 the most junior of the 14 deputy defense ministers, Gorbachev was seeking to "bring younger, more dynamic blood into the bureaucracy" as part of his campaign for moderate reforms, Meyer said.

Yazov is viewed as "an outsider ... absolutely beholden to Gorbachev," said one senior government analyst who spoke on condition of anonymity. Yazov had never served on the general staff in Moscow, which is more powerful than any comparable body in the American military.

Yazov was commander of the Far East Military District from July 1984 until early this year, when Gorbachev promoted him to be deputy minister of defense for personnel, a position from which he could promote officers sympathetic to Gorbachev.

Experts say the Politburo appears to be trying to limit the power of the military, and that the effort began more than three years ago.

"The first step in defanging the military," said the government analyst, was the demotion of Chief of Staff Nikolai Ogarkov in 1984 after he had urged more money for conventional weapons and had criticized other Soviet institutions.

Another milestone was the decision to appoint Sokolov, then 73, as a caretaker to replace Defense Minister Dmitri Ustinov in April 1985, the month before Gorbachev succeeded Konstantin Chernenko as Communist Party general secretary.

After Chernenko died, party leaders sent the military another signal by not allowing any officers to join them atop Lenin's Mausoleum for the Red Square funeral.

Unlike Ustinov, Sokolov was not made a voting member of the ruling Politburo, and it appeared unlikely that the new defense minister, Yazov, would move quickly into the ranks of the supreme body.

"I get the impression that Gorbachev is taking on the whole military," said Ilana Kass, a scholar on Soviet military affairs at Georgetown University.

Party leaders apparently thought "the military was getting too big for its britches. Especially under Ogarkov, it was pushing its nose into places it didn't belong, such as resource allocation and education.

The military was criticizing other institutions, and that is taboo," Kass said.

Gorbachev's efforts to curb military authority may make enemies among senior officers who until now have backed his efforts to stimulate and modernize the economy, Kass added.

"He is moving very fast, with unprotected flanks," like Nikita Khrushchev, who was toppled from power in 1964, she said.

The military gained influence under Khrushchev's successor, Leonid I. Brezhnev, who died in 1982.

Under Brezhnev, the military share of the Soviet gross national product rose from 12 percent to 14 percent in 1970 to 15 percent to 17 percent in 1982, according to a joint report by the CIA and Pentagon's Defense Intelligence Agency presented to Congress in March.

Gorbachev apparently has not tried to cut defense spending, according to the intelligence report, which estimated that defense spending rose by 3 percent in 1986, compared with a 3.9 percent growth for Soviet industry as a whole.

The CIA said "it does not appear that this growth represents any change in defense spending since Gorbachev's arrival. Rather, it was driven largely by the start-up or acceleration of production of several new weapons systems that were under development before Gorbachev took office," and which increased Soviet defense spending by 3 percent in 1985 as well.

British-Iranian Diplomatic Dispute Threatens Relations

LONDON (AP) — Britain today cut its diplomatic ties with Tehran to a caretaker basis and ordered all but one of Iran's diplomats in London to leave by the end of June.

A Foreign Office statement cited "unacceptable Iranian behavior" but said, "This decision does not constitute a breach of diplomatic relations."

Four British diplomats returned home today, leaving two in Iran. Britain's top-ranking diplomat in Tehran, Christopher MacRae, will return to London by the end of this month, the Foreign Office said.

Tehran radio said today Iran was calling home all but one of its 16 diplomats in London and accused Britain of failing to observe the Vienna Convention on diplomatic immunity.

There was no answer to telephone calls to the Iranian Embassy in London.

A Foreign Office spokesman, who by custom is not named, said Britain had not been informed officially of Tehran's decision to cut its staff.

The statement said Britain is ready to improve relations but "only on the basis of reciprocity and if the British diplomatic presence in Tehran is allowed to do its job without hindrance and with its safety assured."

"Despite unacceptable Iranian behavior throughout the current dispute, Britain sought on June 10 to make a fresh start in relations with Iran by putting them on a clear, reciprocal basis," the statement said.

Instead, the Iranians "further escalated the dispute" by expelling four British diplomats and making it impossible for British diplomats to carry out their functions in Tehran, it said.

The one British diplomat to remain in Tehran, Paul Ramsay, a 31-year-old visa officer, will have the sole task of looking after British Embassy buildings, while the Swedish Embassy will handle diplomatic relations for Britain, the Foreign Office spokesman said.

The British move will make it difficult for Iranians to get visas to come to Britain. Last year, Britain gave 15,000 visas to Iranian businessmen and other visitors.

The dispute erupted with last month's arrest on shoplifting charges of Ali Qassemi, Iran's vice consul in the northern English city of Manchester.

Qassemi claimed diplomatic immunity but Britain said his protection related only to his official duties.

Goodacre Is $6000-A-Day Model

By STEPHEN SINGULAR
(c) 1987, The Denver Post

Jill Goodacre's first visit to Bernard Grant's studio in Denver turned into a disaster. Once before, the 15-year-old aspiring model from Boulder, Colo., had posed for a professional photographer; she'd been too mortified to smile, but managed to keep control in front of the camera. At Grant's she lost it, bursting into tears and ending the session.

"When I was growing up," says Goodacre, "they always wanted me to smile, but it was almost impossible for me to smile because I was very, very shy. It was awful."

Over the past several years the young woman has learned how to grin on cue, to mold her body to the camera's demands, to deal with the constant rejection that comes with the modeling territory, to overcome her shyness and toughen up. She has done far more than just survive in the harshly competitive world of commercial beauty.

Goodacre, 23, has conquered it. Lately she has appeared on the covers of Self and Cosmopolitan and in swimwear in The New York Times Magazine, and she was featured in the April issue of Mademoiselle.

Richard Avedon and Francesco Scavullo have photographed her, she's been in virtually every fashion magazine in the world, and her schedule would exhaust you just reading about it. In January she worked in Santa Fe, Aspen, New York, San Francisco, Los Angeles, New York again, Miami and Barbados. One day last year she flew on the Concorde from New York to Paris and back to pose for a few pictures in France.

The green-eyed beauty is considered the hottest swimsuit model in the nation, earning up to $6,000 a day.

"I'm obviously not here," says the answering machine in her Manhattan apartment. "I'm never here."

The message reveals a lot about the model. It says that she's in a grinding, high-pressured profession (a career that is usually short but not very sweet, not after the eyes lose their sparkle and the chin starts to sag). It says that she's adapted well to life in the fast lane, likes being pampered and coddled, likes playing the jaded star. And it says that she is very young.

Her voice is that of a defiant girl's — 16 at the most — a teen-ager testing her limits. She giggles often. When not modeling, she wears fashionably torn blue jeans, black T-shirts and a big silver Western buckle on her belts: street-urchin chic. She does not look sexy or act particularly attractive. Given half a chance, she will put you on or put you down and say a number of snooty things that indicate you aren't nearly as cool as she is. Some people find that charming; others would call it the hard surface that comes with success; still others would say she was immature.

She is spectacularly photogenic. When modeling, her face is young, too, at least the lower half of it. The nose and full pouty lips could be in high school, but not the sultry green almond-shaped eyes. They're womanly and rather wise, the LOOK that gazes out from magazine ads and stops you from turning the pages. It conjures up an image of a sleepy hothouse grape. It has that arresting combination of woman and child — of worldliness and little girl-fishness — that has long delighted and disconcerted the American male, with his forbidden fantasies of Lolita, or any woman like her.

The body is voluptuous, exactly the figure that is currently in. Nature and timing have blessed Jill Goodacre. Ambition and hard work have done the rest.

"She expects to be a star," says Steven Vannoy, head of Denver's Vannoy Talent Agency. "If you come in expecting to fail, people will let you fail. If you think you're going to be a star, they get on the bandwagon."

Words like "rejection" or "failure" do not figure heavily in Goodacre's vocabulary.

"I was just released from a Revlon commercial," she said recently. "So what? I'll get the next one. I'm not as affected by this as some people. If you take it too seriously, you don't last. I'm happy when something cancels, because then maybe I'll get a day off."

When Goodacre was 10, her family moved from Lubbock, Texas, to Boulder, Colo., because they wanted to live in a more athletic environment. The Goodacres were attracted to physical activities: Her mother Glenna, who now lives in Santa Fe, was gaining renown as a sculptor; father Bill is a successful Boulder real-estate developer and former hockey player at Colorado College; brother Tim was a high-school basketball standout; and Jill liked gymnastics, tennis and ballet. Water- and snow-skiing were big in the family.

"When she was a child," Bill Goodacre says of his daughter, "she was so shy that if you laughed at her, she ran into her room and cried. And she was not the easiest kid to get to do what she should do. At times, she was rather obstinate."

At times, she still is. During modeling sessions for swimwear, she has been known to show up late for work, to complain at length about everyone and everything, to have to be cajoled into putting on her suit, to hide behind the props, and to refuse to get in the water. Yet when the lens is before her and the shutter is clicking, she responds magnificently. Any bad mood she may have had cannot even be guessed at from the resulting pictures. Goodacre changes from a three-dimensional prima donna into a two-dimensional fantasy.

By age 15, the girl's physical presence was being noticed. Denver sculptor Ken Bunn, a friend of her mother's, suggested a modeling career. Bunn knew a local photographer, Cratie Sandlin, who agreed to shoot Jill in his studio above the Wazee Supper Club.

"Her mother wanted to know if she had any potential," recalls Sandlin. "I saw her and said, 'Oh, my God.' Glenna burst out laughing."

"The goods," Bunn elaborates, "were good."

Jill was soon working for Denver's Light Company and appearing in Karman Western Apparel ads in Playboy, Gentlemen's Quarterly, Esquire, Seventeen and Sports Illustrated.

"She had a face like no other in Denver," says Kathy Roberts, a booking agent at Vannoy who used to hire models for Fashion Bar ads. "She was different from the plain old Colorado Look: blond, blue-eyed, the fresh outdoorsy type. Jill's more exotic. Unique eyes. And she was very serious about her modeling."

In spring 1981, the editor of the Colorado Sports Monthly, Alan Katz, hired Goodacre for her first swimsuit job. Before any photos were taken, Katz had to ask her mother for permission, which he received.

"After some persuading," he says, "Her basic concern was that her daughter wasn't going to be exploited."

The resulting pictures were tasteful, glamorous and sensual. Few people could believe Jill was 16 years old.

"The paper was just a free tabloid," says Katz, "but for two weeks it was the most popular publication in Boulder."

After graduation from Fairview High School, Goodacre had planned to attend Southern Methodist University in Dallas, where her brother had gone. That spring she met a prominent Italian modeling agent, Lorenzo Pedrini, who had traveled to Colorado to ski. He fell in love with her looks, advised her to go to Europe and put together a portfolio. Three days after receiving her diploma, she flew to Paris.

"I didn't feel very good about that," says her father. "I thought both my kids would go to college. That's a rough life over there. You struggle from the bottom up and it's not safe. I expected her to come home with her tail between her legs."

Her father did not realize how much Jill had wanted to get out of Boulder. Modeling became for her a kind of revenge.

"I had a hard time through high school," she says. "People thought I was a snob. I didn't have a lot of friends, because my first modeling job was a national ad (for Karman). People at my high school saw that and really hated me. Isn't that ridiculous? In high school, most of my friends were guys."

Glenna Goodacre accompanied her daughter abroad, just until Jill was settled and had landed her first assignment. For a number of days, nothing happened, except the young brunette became sick from nerves. One afternoon she and her mother were drinking coffee at a sidewalk cafe when two attractive women drifted by. Glenna thought they must be models, so she got their attention and introduced her daughter. They took Jill to their agency, Mademoiselle Prestige, and she was soon featured in a number of high-fashion French magazines. Her apartment was a "small dump" — she shared a single bed with another model — but at least Goodacre was working.

Jill appeared in the French edition of Vogue and in Femme magazine, but claims she was "too sexy" for Elle.

"I'm glad sexy is in now, because that's why I'm doing well," says the model, with characteristic immaturity. "Before, it was the All-American look: blond, flat-chested, and anorexic." Now that curves are back, "and sexy's in, I work like crazy."

She stayed for a year in France, found plenty of jobs, and had an affair with Yannick Noah, the world-class tennis player. Their relationship was stormy and left Goodacre so depressed she gained 25 pounds, bumping the scales up to 141.

In August 1983 she returned to the United States and rendezvoused in New York with Noah, in town for the U.S. Open. After one huge final argument, she left him and hid out in a cheap Manhattan hotel for three days, lost to the world.

"What a disaster!" she recalls. "I was a wreck."

When she composed herself, she applied for work at New York's prestigious Elite Models. While she was standing in the front office, John Casablancas, the agency's head, walked by and did a double take, then called Vogue to say he was sending her over. Twenty-four hours later, she had a swimsuit job at the magazine.

Her first apartment had only a bed and a black-and-white TV that didn't work. City traffic kept her awake.

"It was awful," she says. "Cockroaches crawled on me at night."

Communication Is Good In A Change

At Wits End
Erma Bombeck

Changing a baby's diaper has always (excuse the expression) ranked right up there with following a garbage truck too closely. It wasn't something a mother refused to do, but she didn't put it on her resume either.

Now an authority on children has suggested if a mother hurries through the job and treats it as a distasteful chore, her attitude could send a negative message to her baby. She says mothers are foolish to waste all that valuable time when they could use it as an opportunity to verbalize with their babies and involve them in the entire process.

You should never scoop the baby up from behind without warning and start to remove his diaper, she says, but should greet him and say, "You are having such a good time with your rubber giraffe, but I'd like to pick you up and change you. Is that all right with you?"

This should be followed by eye contact and more dialogue asking for the baby's complete attention and the mother's undying ecstasy throughout the process.

I don't care what anyone says about laying the foundation for a child's positive self-image ... unless the kid can roll up his own diaper and hook-shot it into a garbage can and put a lid on it, I don't see how we have anything to talk about.

Besides, it's a two-way street. What's to prevent a kid from verbalizing over a diaper change, "Snap it up, frozen fingers, and give me my rubber giraffe back or I'm going to dilute the paint on your newly painted ceiling."

There are a couple of things wrong with this theory. Assuming a mother talked herself into using this time as a celebration of plumbing, what happens when the kids meet other people? No one loves a baby who makes your eyes water, and kids better get used to rejection. It is a lesson that is either learned early or haunts them when you threaten them with a hole in their folding chair at graduation.

Surprise is one of the best things a mother has going for her. Many's the time I've swooped down on a child with a red face like a bald eagle and deposited him, diaper and all, on the bathroom throne just because he "looked" like he was going to "make disgusting."

Frankly, I resent the fact that someone would think I could diaper babies all those years and not have some rapport with them. There wasn't a time when I did not lean over and whisper in their little ears, "You owe me big for this for the rest of your life. Wet again and the giraffe dies."

Good Intentions, Poor Judgement

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a college tennis coach. Last month our state championship fell on the same Saturday as my girlfriend's brother's wedding. The wedding was scheduled for 4 p.m. at a small church, which was about a 30-minute drive from where the tournament was to take place.

The tournament finally ended at 3:30 so I decided to drive directly to the wedding in my tennis clothes.

I arrived at the church door and asked the mother of the groom (my girlfriend's mother) if it would be OK if I went into the church and sat in the back. I apologized for my appearance and explained that I had rushed over directly from the tennis tournament. She didn't say a word — she just looked at me in amazement. (I guess you could say I was snubbed.)

Abby, I know I wasn't appropriately dressed for the occasion, but if I had showered and changed clothes, I would have missed the ceremony. Was I wrong? — IN THE DOGHOUSE

DEAR IN: Your intentions were good, but your judgment was poor.

DEAR ABBY: I was saddened by the letter from your reader whose canary lost its feet due to tight leg bands. The saddest part is that this need not have occurred.

Leg bands on canaries (usually one on the right leg of the males and the left leg for females) are a means of identifying the year the bird was hatched as well as the identity of the breeder. It also is proof that the bird is free from disease and is in this country legally. Bands are specifically sized for different species of birds since there is a wide variety in the size of their legs. Articles on banding always caution that in the event of any swelling under a leg band, the band must be removed immediately. The canary whose owner wrote to you lost its feet because gangrene set in when blood circulation was cut off.

We will be happy to provide a free leaflet on proper leg-banding techniques to any of your readers who write to us requesting one. — ARTHUR FREUD, AMERICAN CAGE-BIRD MAGAZINE, ONE GLAMORE COURT, SMITHTOWN, N.Y. 11787

DEAR MR. FREUD: (Any relation to the late Sigmund?) People who are in the business of selling birds and, therefore, must "band" them routinely, should know how to band them humanely. I hope you get a flock of requests in response to your offer.

DEAR ABBY: The letter about the canary who lost its feet because of too-tight leg bands brought back painful memories. In your answer you wisely suggested that a vet should have been consulted, but in our case it didn't help.

Some years ago, I had a beautiful talking budgie — a clever, loving pet who had a vocabulary of more than 100 words and phrases. My husband and I adored him.

One day, when he had just turned 3 years old, I noticed the banded leg had swollen just above the band. I took him to the vet who had to anesthetize him in order to remove the band. The doctor said, "I wish these breeders would either use plastic bands, which are easier to remove, or use a band large enough to allow for the growth of the legs." My poor baby recovered from the anesthetic and I took him home, but later that night he became very sick and finally died lying in my husband's hand. Apparently, a blood clot had formed due to the restriction of the band, and when the band was removed, the clot moved and killed him. We were heartbroken. It's the only time I ever saw my husband cry.

Abby, until people who attach these bands realize the problem and try to improve the situation, I would respectfully suggest to anyone purchasing a young bird to have the band removed immediately while it is still loose on the leg. — STILL MISS HIM IN VANCOUVER, B.C.

Dallas Reward

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — About $22,000 in reward money was paid for information leading to the latest arrest of convicted game-warden killer Claude Dallas, the sheriff says.

Ada County Sheriff Vaughn Killen said he could not disclose details because that would endanger the people involved. The FBI and sheriff's deputies were involved in the payoff, he said.

Dallas pleaded innocent on Tuesday to escaping from the Idaho State Prison on Easter Sunday 1986. He is serving a 30-year term for voluntary manslaughter in the deaths.

Dallas was arrested by FBI agents March 8 outside a convenience store in Riverside, Calif.

Towns Still Dangerous

KIEV, U.S.S.R. (AP) — The government has called off decontamination work in 27 towns near the Chernobyl nuclear plant, judging them too dangerous for people to inhabit in the foreseeable future, an official said.

Two other towns in the 18-mile danger zone have returned to normal more than a year after the region's devastating nuclear accident, and 16 towns have been decontaminated but still lack public services, said Konstantin T. Fursov. He is deputy chairman of the Kiev regional government committee in the Ukraine. The remainder of the 69 towns and villages evacuated after the April 26, 1986 disaster will be gradually repopulated, he said.

Former Manager Dead At 51

Cancer Takes Royals' Howser

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Knowing Dick Howser was near death did little to ease the grief of his friends.

"No matter how you prepare for this day, when it actually happens, it's a shock," George Brett said.

Wednesday afternoon, 11 months after doctors partially removed a malignant tumor from the left side of his brain, the former Kansas City Royals manager died at age 51.

Howser's condition had deteriorated rapidly this spring after a short-lived effort to return as manager of the team he led to victory in the 1985 World Series.

Although obviously weakened by three operations, Howser was there to greet the Royals when camp opened. He resigned three days later.

"I just couldn't get it done," he said. "It wouldn't be fair to the team."

A public memorial service was scheduled today in Kansas City. A funeral will be held Saturday in Tallahassee, Fla., at the Fellowship Baptist Church. Burial will be in the Tallahassee Memory Garden.

Howser is survived by his wife, Nancy, and twin daughters, Jill and Jana.

"This is a sad day for baseball. Dick Howser was one of the great men of our game," Commissioner Peter Ueberroth said.

Howser's long fight against cancer was closely followed by baseball fans throughout the world. The tumor was discovered just one week after Howser, suffering persistent headaches and lapses in memory, managed the American League to victory in the 1986 All-Star Game.

Doctors performed three operations in a vain attempt to halt the disease.

"It's a sad day. We all have heavy hearts," Royals General Manager John Schuerholz said. "Even though we've known this was coming, everyone still feels sad. His attitude always was 'Let's get it done.' That is the attitude he has left with the team; that's the attitude he has left with the players."

Howser's mother, Marjorie Howser, of Palm Springs, Fla., urged her son's friends to put aside their grief.

"It's going to be a great loss to us, but I don't think he would want us to be sad or grieve a long time," she said. "He enjoyed life. He got the fullest out of every day."

An undersized shortstop in the 1960s, Howser was known as a scrappy battler throughout his careers as player and manager.

After 10 years as a New York Yankees coach, he became head baseball coach at Florida State University, where he had been an All-American player.

In 1980, the Yankees made him their manager, and he guided the team to 103 victories and the American League East title. He won the AL West title with the Royals in 1984 and reached the pinnacle of his career when Kansas City came back from a 3-1 deficit to win the 1985 World Series over the St. Louis Cardinals in seven games.

"I'm going to try to remember him standing on that podium (after winning the 1985 series)," said Brett, the Royals' all-star third baseman. "That was probably the happiest I had ever seen Dick. Or maybe I'll remember him the day we won our first playoff game."

Howser's major league managerial record was 507-425, and he was proud of his .544 winning percentage.

"A manager's value to a team is underrated," he said in an interview in 1985. "I'm never going to be one of those who sits tongue-in-cheek and says anybody can manage a big league ballclub."

Howser resigned from the Yankees under pressure from owner George Steinbrenner after New York was swept by the Royals in the 1980 playoffs. But Steinbrenner was one of the first to contact Howser after he fell ill.

"He was a man of pride and integrity and he battled cancer with the same fervor he battled the opposition, with an aggressive spirit he exemplified both as a player and as a manager," Steinbrenner said Wednesday.

Yankee second baseman Willie Randolph had his best year under Howser, hitting .294 in 1980.

"He was quiet," Randolph said. "Some people said he was too quiet, but he had an inner strength. I can sit all day and talk about what kind of a good man he was, but that's not necessary. He made you feel like a human being; that's the highest compliment I can pay him."

"I'm not going to remember him the way he was in spring training," Brett said. "He was too weak."

Whitey Herzog of St. Louis managed against Howser in the 1985 Series and in last year's All-Star Game. He said baseball "lost a great man and I lost a good friend."

Legion Rained Out

Pitt County's American Legion baseball game against Snow Hill was rained out Wednesday night.

The contest has been rescheduled as part of a doubleheader to be played Friday at Snow Hill starting at 6:30 p.m.

Pitt's next home game will be Monday, when Post 39 entertains Kinston.

Saddened Royals Overcome Sorrow

By BEN WALKER AP Baseball Writer

In their time of despair, the Kansas City Royals tried to overcome their sadness by doing what came most naturally — playing baseball.

Five hours after hearing that former Manager Dick Howser had died following a year-long fight with brain cancer, the Royals beat the Oakland Athletics 10-5 Wednesday night.

"Once the game starts, you have to be able to put aside everything else," said George Brett, one of Howser's closest friends on the team. "I thought about it occasionally. I think we had to go out and put Dick out of our mind."

Brett, Bo Jackson and Frank White hit home runs, helping Bret Saberhagen become the first 12-game winner in the major leagues.

"Before the game, I was going out there thinking, 'Maybe this one is for him?'" Saberhagen said. "I don't know if other guys in here were thinking that or not. We just went out to play a good game tonight."

The crowd of 26,780 at Royals Stadium observed a minute of silence in memory of Howser, who began spring training as Kansas City's manager. The Royals will wear arm-bands in tribute to Howser starting July 3, the day the team had previously planned to retire his uniform No. 10.

"In the moments that you're not busy, you think about what's going on," White said. "But I don't think we went into the game with that idea (winning for Howser)."

In other American League games, Detroit downed Toronto 3-2, New York beat Baltimore 4-3, Milwaukee defeated Minnesota 8-5, Boston beat Cleveland 5-0, California topped Texas 6-1 and Seattle stopped Chicago 2-0.

Saberhagen and Brett, who helped carry Howser and the Royals to the World Series championship in 1985, again led the Royals.

Saberhagen, 12-1, gave up seven hits in his eighth complete game. He struck out seven and walked two.

Brett, who had three hits and scored three runs, put Kansas City ahead 6-5 in the fifth inning with his second homer of the season.

Jackson hit his 14th homer in sixth, finishing Dave Stewart, 7-7. Pinch-hitter Hal McRae hit an RBI single later in the inning. Danny Tartabull and White had sacrifice flies in the seventh.

Mark McGwire's two-run triple and an RBI single by Carney Lansford gave Oakland a 3-0 lead in the third.

Brett and Tartabull had run-scoring singles that set up White's three-run homer as Kansas City rallied for a 5-3 lead in the bottom of the third.

Mike Davis hit a two-run homer, his 17th, that lifted the Athletics into a 5-5 tie in the fifth.

Red Sox 4, Indians 0 Roger Clemens pitched a four-hitter and struck out a season-high 12 for his first victory in three weeks as Boston won in Cleveland.

Clemens, 5-6, pitched his third shutout and sixth complete game of the season. He raised his career record against the Indians to 5-0. Clemens had gone 0-2 in three starts since beating Cleveland 1-0 on May 27.

Mike Greenwell homered and drove in all four Boston runs as they ended a four-game losing streak. Greenwell, who had an RBI groundout in the second inning, hit a three-run homer in the eighth off Tom Candiotti, 2-7.

Brewers 8, Twins 5 Robin Yount hit a two-run homer and Milwaukee ended a 10-game losing streak against Minnesota in a brawl-interrupted afternoon.

After Gene Larkin's home run gave the visiting Twins a 5-4 lead in the top of the sixth inning, reliever Mark Clear hit Steve Lombardozzi with the

Fitzgerald Has Mets' Number

By The Associated Press

Mike Fitzgerald just kept on doing what he does so well against the New York Mets. Bryn Smith simply did something he thought he might never do again.

Fitzgerald and Smith were key figures as the Montreal Expos routed the Mets 9-1 Wednesday night. The Expos are 4-2 against the Mets this year.

"I'm tired of beating up on the Mets," said Fitzgerald, who was New York's regular catcher in 1984 before being included in the trade which sent Gary Carter to the Mets. "I wish I could do some of that against some of the other clubs."

What Fitzgerald did Wednesday was hit a grand slam and up his average against his former team to .295 with three home runs and 25 runs batted in. Against the rest of the NL, he is hitting .220 with 14 homers and 95 RBI.

Smith pitched his first complete game since last Aug. 30, losing his shutout in the ninth inning. The right-hander had undergone elbow surgery in the off-season and didn't get past the seventh inning in his nine starts this year.

"It's a big thing for me to know I can go nine innings and win," Smith said. "Six months ago, I didn't think I'd ever pitch again in the majors."

In other games, it was San Diego 8, Los Angeles 7; Atlanta 6, San Francisco 1; Pittsburgh 4, St. Louis 1; Cincinnati 9, Houston 1, and Chicago 5, Philadelphia 3.

While Smith was prospering, New York's Sid Fernandez was having his worst outing of the year. Fernandez, 8-3, allowed seven earned runs, the most he has ever surrendered in a major league game, and Fitzgerald's slam was the first Fernandez has yielded.

"He's been our best pitcher, but he didn't have it tonight," Mets Manager Dave Johnson said. "We just got an old-fashioned shellacking."

The host Expos got going when Tim Wallach and Hubie Brooks led off the second inning with singles. Andres Galarraga doubled home a run and Vance Law walked, loading the bases for Fitzgerald.

"I was just trying to get it in play and drive in some runs," Fitzgerald said. "But I hit it real well."

Montreal added four runs in the fourth, helped by errors by right fielder Darryl Strawberry and center fielder Len Dykstra.

Padres 8, Dodgers 7 San Diego, which had won only 15 games a week ago, now has won 20. The Padres' fifth consecutive victory also was the Dodgers' third straight loss.

John Kruk's two-run single in the seventh inning was the decisive hit for the Padres. Kruk broke an 0-for-17 slump with his hit off Ken Howell. Fernando Valenzuela lasted six innings for Los Angeles, giving up seven hits, including home runs by Carmelo Martinez and Kevin Mitchell. John Shelby hit two home runs for the Dodgers.

"It seems like a lot of people have been kicking us and throwing sand in our face," Padres Manager Larry Bowa said. "But what goes around, comes around."

Braves 6, Giants 1 Slumping San Francisco lost its fifth game in a row — did anybody say June Swoon? — as Rick Mahler retired 18 of the 19 batters he faced and Dale Murphy homered for Atlanta.

In the seventh inning, Giants Manager Roger Craig brought in right-hander Randy Bockus to face Murphy and sent left-handed reliever Keith Comstock from the mound to right field. Murphy hit the first pitch over the right field fence and Craig then removed Bockus and brought Comstock back to pitch.

"I've heard of that, but I've never been involved in a game when it happened before," Murphy said of the move.

Bob Brenly homered for San Francisco.

Pirates 4, Cardinals 1 Rick Reuschel pitched an eight-hitter for his first win in St. Louis since 1980. Reuschel, 5-3, struck out one and walked one. He carried a shutout to the ninth inning, but Willie McGee tripled, Terry Pendleton was hit by a pitch and Curt Ford grounded into a fielder's choice for the only St. Louis run.

Catcher Mike LaValliere, a former Cardinal, had two RBI with a sacrifice fly and a single.

"He was ahead of all the batters; he didn't get behind," LaValliere said of Reuschel. "He gets out there, and he's not going to overwhelm anybody, but he throws strikes."

Vince Coleman had two hits for St. Louis and now has reached base in 46 straight games.

Reds 9, Astros 1 Kal Daniels had four hits and Tracy Jones hit a three-run homer in a 19-hit attack for Cincinnati, which held on to first place in the West. The number of assistant coaches to six through 1990. SMU was not allowed to appear on television or in post-season games in 1988 and off-campus recruiting was limited to the head coach and four assistants through 1990.

Southwest Conference Endures More Problems

DALLAS (AP) — NCAA sanctions against the University of Texas are mild compared with those meted out to three other Southwest Conference schools, but to one coach, they're just another black eye for the troubled league.

"The conference is going through some real difficult times right now, and this is another detrimental blow to our image," said Rice football coach Jerry Berndt, whose program is one of only two in the nine-school league not on probation or under investigation.

"It's kind of a continuing black eye for the conference and the schools," Berndt said Wednesday. "I feel that we've slipped backwards again, and hopefully we'll climb out of this hole."

"Perhaps the other schools can use Rice as a model to do that." Despite the competitive pressures of the football-crazy SWC, and its own mediocre football record, Rice has refused to compromise its high academic standards in an attempt to catch up. Rice routinely has the highest grade-point average and graduation rate for football players.

Texas was placed on probation for two years, with the loss of five scholarships in 1988-89 and 20 campus visits for prospective recruits. The NCAA said it found a significant number of violations, the most serious involving recruiting rules and the gift of "very substantial, improper extra benefits to a very talented enrolled student-athlete."

Southern Methodist University received the stiffest football sanctions in NCAA history in February, when its 1987 football season was canceled and its 1988 season limited to seven road games. It was restricted to 15 scholarships though 1990 and the

Howser Had Time For Everybody

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

In the hurry-up world of professional sports, Dick Howser had time for everybody.

Win or lose, World Series or exhibition game, he was his unflappable self with a genuine smile and a kind word for all.

"He was a very strong human being," said New York Yankees second baseman Willie Randolph, who played under Howser. "He treated people with respect and, as a manager, he was always there to listen to you."

Once described as the prototype talk-show host because of his genial demeanor, Howser was a modest man in a sport where egos often run amuck.

If his team won, he gave the credit to those around him. When he lost, he took the blame.

"What I remember most is that when (Yankees owner) George Steinbrenner wanted him to chew out a player or coach for making an error, a mental mistake or just using bad judgment, Howser refused," said Chicago Cubs pitcher Ron Davis, who played for Howser. "He stood by his men and told Steinbrenner that he would take the heat."

In an era when baseball people increasingly make themselves unavailable or unpleasant to talk to during tough times, Howser never ducked.

When his personal postseason losing streak reached 11 games after his Kansas City Royals fell behind 2-0 to Toronto in the 1985 American League playoffs, Howser was out early on the field the next night.

As Kansas City took batting practice, he stood in front of the first-base dugout at Royals Stadium for nearly an hour, surrounded by a horde of reporters. Even when asked about his losing streak for the umpteenth time, he did not speak a cross word or give a disparaging stare, as many would.

"It'll come eventually," he said. "I have to face up to it, but it'll come."

A few hours later, Howser escaped his rut as the Royals won Game 3 and then went on to win the playoffs.

In the 1985 World Series, faced with a crunch of attention that often pushes the most mild-mannered of men to the edge of anxiety, Howser was more accessible than ever. He spent hours before each game against St. Louis talking about developing young pitchers — one of his favorite topics — and anything else anyone wanted to talk about. All the time, he was managing to help deflect the pressure on his players.

"He told us, 'I still feel like we can get this thing done,'" said Royals second baseman Frank White. "There wasn't much more to it. He didn't yell. He didn't scream. But he really believed what he was saying. And then we believed it."

Howser liked to talk about getting things done. When he was preparing to manage the Royals in spring training, he talked about his brain cancer in those terms.

"Now we know what this thing is and we're going to try to beat it," he said in Fort Myers, Fla., a week before he would see the whole team. "I think we can get this thing done."

him best that it probably wouldn't work out that way. His face was thinner, his speech slower and his stamina lessened.

One day after welcoming the Royals, he stepped aside. In a tearful scene, he hugged each player on the field and took off his uniform for what would be the final time.

"He's going to be missed," said Royals leader George Brett, one of Howser's closest friends on the team.

"I'm not going to remember him the way he was in spring training. He was too weak. I'm going to try to remember him standing on that podium (after the Royals won the World Series). That was probably the happiest I had ever seen Dick."

Small Fry Champs

next pitch. Lombardozi tried to charge Clear, but was restrained by home plate umpire Ken Kaiser. Dan Gladden, who left the Minnesota dugout, was ejected.

Later in the inning, Sal Butera grounded into a double play and Lombardozi wrestled with Brewers second baseman Jim Gantner, triggering a bench-clearing incident. Gantner and Twins coach Tony Oliva were ejected.

Tigers 3, Blue Jays 2

Lou Whitaker homered on the first pitch of the game and Matt Nokes also hit a solo home run, leading Detroit past Toronto before a crowd of 46,227, the second-largest at Exhibition Stadium.

Frank Tanana, 6-3, gave up one run on three hits in 7 2-3 innings. Willie Hernandez got his second save by retiring Tony Fernandez on a fly ball with runners on first and third to end the game.

Yankees 4, Orioles 3

Gary Ward hit a tiebreaking sacrifice fly in the seventh inning and Dave Winfield followed with an RBI single, leading New York over visiting Baltimore.

The Yankees won their third straight while the Orioles lost for the 13th time in 14 games.

With the score 2-2, Wayne Tolleason led off the seventh with a single off Mike Boddicker, 5-4. A throwing error by third baseman Ray Knight on Willie Randolph's sacrifice set up Ward and Winfield.

Dennis Rasmussen, 5-4, pitched three-hit ball for seven innings. He gave up solo home runs to Ken Gerhart and Mike Young, giving the Orioles 100 homers this season.

Angels 6, Rangers 1

Mike Witt pitched four-hit ball for eight innings and California parlayed four Texas errors into four unearned runs.

Witt, 8-5, won for the third time in four decisions. Greg Minton pitched a hitless ninth.

Mariners 2, White Sox 0

Scott Bankhead pitched four-hit ball for 8 2-3 innings and Seattle sent visiting Chicago to its fourth straight loss and 15th defeat in 18 games.

Bankhead, 7-4, held the White Sox hitless for 4 2-3 innings. He left after Harold Baines singled and Greg Walker doubled in the ninth. Edwin Nunez struck out Ivan Calderon to end the game for his eighth save.

The Mariners scored twice in the fifth off Bill Long, 3-3. Domingo Ramos' double set up an RBI grounder by Rey Quinones and a sacrifice fly by Mickey Brantley.

Royals Couldn't Pass On Eisenreich

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Kansas City Royals couldn't resist taking a chance on a player hitting as well as Jim Eisenreich.

The former Minnesota Twins outfielder, making a comeback from a nervous disorder that had limited him to 48 major league games in four years, was recalled from the minor leagues on Wednesday.

Eisenreich made the jump from the Class AA Memphis Chicks to Kansas City after batting .382 in 70 games this season.

"(Memphis Manager) Bob Schaefer said I had to get out of Memphis," said Eisenreich, who did not play Wednesday for Kansas City against Oakland after arriving 45 minutes before the first pitch was thrown.

"I've always had fun playing ball. I'm trying to make a living at it now. One year, I guess it wasn't so much fun. But that is all past now."

It was 1982 when Eisenreich, a 16th-round draft choice of the Twins in 1980, made the jump from Class A Wisconsin Rapids to become the starting center fielder for Minnesota.

He was put on the disabled list 32 games later because of the nervous disorder, which caused him to twitch uncontrollably in the outfield.

Eisenreich was back with the Twins in 1983, but lasted only two games before telling then-Minnesota Manager Billy Gardner that the condition was back. He was disabled the rest of the season.

A dozen games into 1984, Eisenreich was placed on the voluntarily retired list.

The Royals claimed him on waivers last October and assigned him to Memphis. He rejoins Gardner, now the Kansas City manager.

"He's feeling good. He feels at ease out there," Gardner said. "And he's hitting the ball."

Eisenreich said he thought he might be sent to the Kansas City's AAA club at Omaha.

Moyer doubled, and an error allowed Cherry to score. Moyer took third on a wild pitch. Sam Jennings walked and both runners scored on a triple by David McKeel. A wild pitch plated McKeel with the fourth run.

Eveready added five more in the second, another four in the third and finished up with four more in the fourth.

But Pepsi pushed ahead for good with three more in the fourth inning. Kevin Hardee reached on an error to open the inning, moving up on a wild pitch. Matthew Cagle walked and Abram Lang reached on an error, scoring Hardee. Kirk Welch walked to load the bases and Kendall Hardee singled in both Cagle and Lang for a 6-4 lead.

Pepsi added three more in the fifth, one in the sixth and three more in the seventh. Wachovia picked up one more run in the fourth.

Astros, who had beaten the visitors the previous two nights, could have taken over the top spot with a victory.

But the Reds got strong pitching from Ron Robinson, in his first start of the season, and Bill Landrum, who earned his first major league save. And the Cincinnati bats were red hot as every starter had at least one hit. It was the Reds' second 19-hit game this season in the Astrodome.

"You don't ever expect to come here and get 19 hits," Manager Pete Rose said. "But all those hits were ropes, we hit the ball hard."

Cubs 5, Phillies 3
Jamie Moyer, 7-4, won for the fifth time in his last six decisions and, in that same stretch, he has not walked a batter in five games. Moyer allowed six hits in eighth innings and struck out seven before Lee Smith pitched the ninth for his major league-leading 17th save.

"I know my changeup was working because the hitters were always trying to guess when I'd throw the fastball," Moyer said. "But my problem has been and still is to get the change over without walking a lot of batters."

Keith Moreland drove in three runs and Andre Dawson had three straight singles for host Chicago.

Speeding Along

Several states have recently reinstated the 65-mph speed limit on rural interstate highways, enabling travelers to spend less time on the road. Before the automobile, it took the fastest stagecoach service about 15 hours to travel from New York to Philadelphia. Slower services stopped for the night at Trenton or Bridgeton, New Jersey. The first cars didn't improve matters much. Normally, they only reached speeds of 8 to 10 miles per hour.

DO YOU KNOW — In what year did the 55-mph speed limit go into effect?

WEDNESDAY'S ANSWER — The bear is often used as a symbol for the Soviet Union.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Find a new and different way to endear yourself to your loved one. Home conditions will improve considerably.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Avoid arguments concerning business affairs. An opportunity to achieve a goal arises, so don't miss it.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Keep busy with planned activities, and don't change methods which have always worked well in the past.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Be sure you can afford the recreations you desire, but gain the approval of those who really count.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Don't get involved in an altercation between an outsider and a family member. Ignore demands made of you.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): You may miss out on something important if you don't stay near the phone. Confirm your alliances.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Schedule your time wisely, leaving space for recreation. Don't burn any bridges today, there may be a flood coming.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he, or she, will find it difficult to know whether to follow the head or the heart. A good education will help your child strike an equitable balance.  We tend to dismiss spot cards as unimportant. Just how catastrophic that could be is highlighted by this hand.

The North-South auction is a lesson in simple arithmetic. Once North's Stayman inquiry failed to uncover a heart fit, North simply bid what the combined point count told him was probable opposite partner's 21-22 point two no trump. Declarer had 11 fast tricks, and the 12th could come from an even break in either red suit. However, after declarer had followed with dummy's low spade and West showed out, discarding a club, the possibility of good breaks in the red suits became less likely.

There was an alternative line. By stripping out West's side suits and reducing him to nothing but spades, declarer could engineer an end play. He cashed his top cards in the side suits and exited with a low spade. West won with the ten and returned a spade, and declarer's predicament became obvious. If he overtook dummy's nine of spades, he would be stranded with a losing spade in his hand. If he left the lead in dummy, there was a losing red card on the table.

Declarer had learned the hard way that all spot cards are not equal. His mistake had come at the very first trick. Instead of following to the first spade lead with the table's three, declarer should have unblocked one of the higher spotcards—let's say the eight.

Observe what a difference that would have made. When declarer later tried for the end play by leading a low spade, he could unblock dummy's nine spot when West gains the lead with the ten. That would leave West with J-6 and declarer with K-7. Now there was no way declarer could be prevented from scoring the last two tricks in spades, and the slam would have sailed home.

NEW ROLE — Actress Jennifer Beals and actor Craig Sheffer pose for a photo on the set of their new movie "Kid Gloves." The actress, who was in "Flashdance," has resumed her movie career after graduating from Yale University. (AP Laserphoto)

'Flashdance' Girl Back In Hollywood

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jennifer Beals, that "Flashdance" girl, is back in Hollywood to resume her movie career after graduating from Yale University.

It was four years ago that the slender, darkly beautiful Beals leaped to fame as the career girl with a penchant for disco dancing in the movie hit from Paramount Pictures. To the film world's astonishment, she didn't follow up her sensational debut. She opted instead to complete her college education. She has made only one film during that time — the quickly forgotten "The Bride," with Sting as the mad Dr. Frankenstein.

With her finals over, Beals came West to appear in "Kid Gloves," a New Century Film about a boxing dynasty. She plays a nurse who is romantically involved with two boxing brothers, Craig Sheffer and Jeff Fahey. Gene Hackman is their ex-fighter father.

On a day off from the movie, Beals, who is 23 years old and married to New York filmmaker Alexander Rockwell, talked about her career in an interview with The Associated Press.

Q: You've starred in two films, but you have a supporting role in "Kid Gloves." Why?

A: It was good for me to take a supporting role at this time as opposed to a lead role, because I hadn't worked for a while. I thought it would be helpful to ease back into an acting credit.

Q: Now that you have graduated, do you intend to pursue acting?

A: Yes, I think so. I don't think I'll ever be the type to do six or seven pictures back-to-back; I don't feel the need to do that. But I certainly will pursue acting more vigorously than I have in the past.

Q: You could be a lot richer if you hadn't continued your education. What motivated you?

A: I needed to go back to school. I needed to have that experience for myself as a person. A lot of people thought it was foolish, given the fact that "Flashdance" was so successful. Yes, I had offers, but you should consider the fact that ever since I was a child I was preparing to go to school. That's what I've learned to do well, and that's what I was moving toward. To give up that dream for something that had just entered my life would have been strange for me.

Q: How were you chosen for "Flashdance"?

A: I auditioned originally in New York, then I had several tests in Hollywood. I started my first year at Yale not really thinking that I would get the part. When I found out, I deferred a term.

Q: What were you studying?

A: American literature. ... It comes under American studies, so it becomes even more interesting when it's placed in a historical and social context.

Cyndi Lauper Sees Image As Threat To Her Talents

By RICHARD DE ATLEY
Associated Press Writer
BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — Behind the orange hair, the crazy clothes, the Queens accent, the clanking jewelry and the winking send-ups, Cyndi Lauper knows a danger lurks.
Her fears are not about her talents, which are formidable, but the image that has shared the spotlight with Miss Lauper since 1983 when she burst forth with the multi-hit "She's So Unusual" album.
"I was afraid of becoming a personality above my talent, above my singing, which is what I really feel I was born to do," she said in an interview.
Fans and doubters can watch Miss Lauper's knockout singing upstage her image in a Home Box Office special, "Cyndi Lauper in Paris," filmed March 12 at Le Zenith theater.

the last concert of a world tour that took her to Australia, Italy and Japan.
"This tour was about being a musician," Miss Lauper said. "It was ... about trying to sing something as accurately as you can."
The one-hour show premieres at 10 p.m. EDT June 20, which also happens to be Miss Lauper's 34th birthday. The TV concert will be repeated June 23, 25 and 28.
"France was so terrific because I always loved (Edith) Piaf, and I've always loved Jacques Tati, and I've always loved Cocteau, and so to actually play there and achieve something in France was something very important to me," she said, with an odd way of phrasing that makes her speech as interesting as her music.
The concert show features Miss Lauper singing her first big hit,

"Girls Just Want To Have Fun," plus the recent "True Colors," and her newest single, "Boy Blue," which she has, without fanfare, dedicated to a friend who died of complications of AIDS.
"Every night, it evoked something," she said of the song. "But in Paris I felt at home with showing that kind of emotion, because they're used to singers like that. The voice is more developed, and I took more risks, more chances showing that part."
"My artist royalties and part of my writing royalties (from 'Boy Blue') will go to benefit AIDS research and care, in honor of my friend," said Miss Lauper. "That's what I promised to do." She did not identify the friend.
She said she surprised herself on the tour by doing some of her best work after feeling ill just before she was to go on stage. She recalled throwing on a pair of comfortable jeans and going out to give a falling-off the face of the earth performance.
"Part of the reason in this special I wore jeans at the end, just an old pair of jeans, was because of that relaxed feeling," she said. She may be relaxed, but Miss Lauper shows enormous energy and fire when she sings.
She says she relies on a diet and exercise regimen, as well as vocal training, to push her voice.
"No matter how strong you sing," she said, "when you're dealing with your body, you always feel like, 'Gosh, if I did those push-ups, or if I had lifted those weights, I could have done this little move and held the note and then come right back.' It's physical strength. It's the daily ritual."
The concert show is being touted by HBO as Miss Lauper's first "full-length solo TV concert," but she has been regarded as a trendsetter in music videos since "Girls Just Want to Have Fun." She will make her feature-film acting debut later this year in "Vibes," a romantic comedy-adventure starring Jeff Goldblum.
Miss Lauper, whose widely imitated, eclectic clothing style stemmed from the days of shopping in thrift stores when she could afford little else, said it's a habit fame can't chase.
"Even now that I can afford to go in a store and buy what I like, I don't find dressing with things off the shelf appealing," she said. "I like to mix and match. A fashion maven, that's what I am."

The Erie Canal opened in 1825. It connected the waters of Lake Erie and the Hudson River.

Jackson Can't Buy Skeleton

LONDON (AP) — The London Hospital Medical College says it will not sell the skeleton of John Merrick, the so-called Elephant Man, to Michael Jackson no matter how much the American pop star offers.
College secretary David Edwards said Wednesday that the college had rejected the 28-year-old Jackson's original $500,000 offer and would also reject his second offer of $1 million.
The British domestic news agency Press Association said the singer has reportedly stated he is determined to acquire the skeleton for his private museum.

The agency said Jackson is reportedly creating a "chamber of horrors" at his Los Angeles home, with items including deformed skulls, skeletons and a library of medical books on strange diseases.
"There is a very strong feeling that it would be quite wrong on ethical grounds to sell John Merrick's remains for money. We are always desperate for research funds and sums of this size are attractive, but we are not in the business of selling his remains," Edwards said.
Merrick was dubbed the Elephant Man because of his terrible deformities stemming from a twisted spine and huge lopsided skull. He died in 1900 and his remains were later acquired by the college.

Meteorite Crater Found In Atlantic

By MALCOLM RITTER
AP Science Writer
NEW-YORK (AP) — A 28-mile-wide depression in the Atlantic, previously considered a sign of volcanic activity or geological faults, is the first meteorite crater to be identified beneath an ocean, scientists reported today.

The crater, about 124 miles southeast of Nova Scotia, formed some 50 million years ago from the impact of a meteorite or nucleus of a comet, they wrote in the British journal Nature.

Further study could help explore the hypothesis that mass extinction can follow huge meteorite impacts, said Lubomir Jansa of the Bedford Institute of Oceanography in Dartmouth, Nova Scotia, and Georgia Pe-Piper of St. Mary's University in Halifax, Nova Scotia.

They calculated that the meteorite or cometary nucleus must have measured about 1 1/4 to nearly two miles in diameter.

The crater lies under about 370 feet of water near the edge of the continental shelf. It stretches at least 28 miles across, with an uplifted portion in the center that stands about a mile tall and seven miles across.

The crater holds rocks that bear evidence of having undergone tremendous shock, a sign of meteoritic impact.

Dr. Blyth Robertson, a research scientist with the Geological Survey of Canada, said it is the first documented finding of such a crater. A partially translated paper suggests Soviet scientists have found some presumed undersea craters, he said.

The mass-extinction theory cites unusually high levels of the element iridium in sedimentary rock laid down an estimated 65 million years ago as evidence of a meteorite impact at that time.

If scientists find high iridium levels in material ejected long distances from the newly found crater, it will be the first verification of what such levels mean, Robertson said.

Scientists can also see if the fossil record corresponding to the time that material settled shows evidence of extinctions, he said.

Discarded Plastic Threatens Sea Life

By CHRISTOPHER CALLAHAN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — New laws are needed to stop boaters from tossing tons of six-pack containers and other plastic throwaways into the sea, garbage that is killing hundreds of thousands of marine mammals and seabirds, coastal lawmakers say.

An estimated 1 million seabirds and 100,000 sea turtles and other marine mammals are killed annually by choking on the floating plastic objects or becoming tangled in them, said a report by the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries subcommittee on fisheries and wildlife conservation.

"There seems to be a prevailing attitude that we can't do any harm by throwing plastic refuse into the ocean," Rep. William J. Hughes, D-N.J., said Wednesday. "It's the same 'out of sight out of mind' mentality that has turned our oceans into the repository of last resort for sewage sludge, chemicals and other refuse."

Plastic trash is suspected of aiding in the decline of several species, including the northern fur seal, steller sea lion, Hawaiian monk seal and certain sea turtle and seabird species.

The subcommittee estimated the amount of plastic garbage dumped into the sea each year at more than 1 million pounds.

U.S. law prohibits the disposal of garbage from ships within three miles of the coast. But a measure by Rep. Gerry E. Studds, D-Mass., would ban disposal of plastic garbage by U.S. flag vessels in all ocean waters and prohibit plastic disposal by foreign vessels within 200 miles of the U.S. coast.

In addition, all types of garbage would be banned within 12 miles of the shoreline under the measure.

The Studds bill mirrors the provisions of an international agreement now being considered by countries in the International Convention for the Prevention of Pollution from Ships.

The agreement would halt all plastic garbage dumping worldwide and ban the disposal of all types of trash within 12 miles of land.

Nations would be bound by the agreement when countries representing 50 percent of the world's shipping tonnage have ratified it.

Twenty-seven nations representing 41.9 percent of the world's shipping have approved the agreement. President Reagan sent it to the Senate for ratification in February, where it is pending before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

The United States makes up about 4.8 percent of the shipping, according to Coast Guard Rear Adm. J. William Kime.

Studds said his measure would create the necessary U.S. law to implement the international agreement domestically, but Kime and other Reagan administration officials told two subcommittees of the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee that they opposed the measure, largely on technical grounds.

Kime said the Coast Guard soon would offer its own legislation designed to implement the agreement.

Both the Studds bill and the international pact would exempt government vessels, but Rep. Don Young, R-Ala., said he believes the U.S. Navy is one of the biggest plastic polluters.

It seems that more and more airlines these days are vowing to offer travelers "something special"—great service and low fares.

A special something that Piedmont has been offering the flying public for years—documented not only in surveys and government reports, but in untold thousands of letters from satisfied Piedmont passengers.

So next time you plan to travel, don't take the airline that just claims to be special. Take Piedmont.

No airline has lower fares to more cities east of the Mississippi.

Restrictions apply to fares shown above. Fares shown are one-half of required round-trip purchase and travel must take place between June 15 and July 15. Tickets must be purchased by June 22. Florida state fuel tax surcharge, $1.00 per person from all Florida cities. Seats are limited.

If your banker changes the subject when you ask about money market rates, maybe it's time to change your account to First Federal.

Our First Insured Money Fund pays higher rates on a low minimum balance.

It's never been quite clear why big banks reporting millions in earnings every quarter consistently pay lower rates on money market accounts than First Federal. But it's a fact.

So, the next time you're checking rates on money market accounts, check the rates on our First Insured Money Fund. You can open a First Insured Money Fund account with $1,000 and earn our highest money market interest (as long as your average balance remains above $1,000). You'll also get unlimited personal withdrawals and up to three checks per month. There are no service charges, access to your funds through our 24-hour teller, no-fee travelers checks and even free notary services. All insured to $100,000 by the FSLIC.

All in all, First Insured Money Fund pays more interest and offers you more services. So, we don't want to change the subject when you mention money market rates. We want to change where you bank.

FIRST FEDERAL

The best place to bank.

What Better Way To Launch An Open House Than With A Boat Show

On June 20th & 21st At Your Port For Waterfront Living

It's not just an open house with balloons and refreshments. It's an open house with a boat show. Some of eastern North Carolina's leading marinas and boat manufacturers will be there displaying run-a-bouts, cruisers, day sailers and sailing yachts.

Pamlico Plantation is a collection of waterfront townhomes and homesites with amenities such as tennis, a waterfront pool, a cedarlined clubhouse and it can all be found just outside your front door. Each property owner also enjoys his own personal boat slip so you can really experience all the pleasures that waterfront living has to offer.

Join us at Pamlico Plantation this Saturday and Sunday for our open house and boat show. Enjoy refreshments, boat rides and the many boats being displayed, but most of all enjoy the beautiful surroundings of our waterfront community at Pamlico Plantation. Now...could you think of a better way to launch an open house? See you there...
