Pitt Election Bill Gets House OK

RALEIGH — A bill creating a new method of electing members of the Pitt County Board of Commissioners was approved by the state House of Representatives Thursday. Routine ratification of the bill was expected today or Monday.

Rep. Ed Warren said this morning that the bill, creating a "six-three" method of electing board members, passed the House by a unanimous vote.

And Warren said the measure "should be ratified ... a matter of the lieutenant governor and speaker (of the House) signing ... today or Monday."

The Senate gave approval to the bill Monday night. Once ratified, the bill becomes law, Warren explained.

The legislation, establishing six new election districts in the county, calls for six commissioners — one from each of the districts — to be elected by voters in the districts voting only on the representative from their district.

Three other commissioners — who could live anywhere in the county — would be elected by countywide vote.

The Senate-passed bill was sent to the House to replace a compromise bill the House approved earlier this month, which also called for six commissioners to be elected from districts.

But the earlier House bill called for the other three board members to be elected at-large only after being nominated by party primaries in districts created by combining Districts 1 and 2, 4 and 5 and 3 and 6 into three regions.

That bill was sent to the Senate, but

Ronald McDonald House To Open

The Ronald McDonald House of Eastern North Carolina will welcome its first guests Sunday afternoon.

A public dedication of the house Sunday at 2 p.m. will honor those who have helped make the house a reality, says Dr. C. Tate Holbrook, director of pediatric hematology-oncology at the East Carolina University School of Medicine. A ribbon-cutting will be held at 3 p.m. and an open house will follow, lasting until about 5 p.m.

The house is located across Moyer Boulevard from the East Carolina University School of Medicine. The street leading to it is to the immediate north of Greenville Villa Nursing Center.

"We began this campaign more than four years ago and it's just so gratifying to be able to share this moment with all the people of eastern North Carolina who this Ronald McDonald House will serve," said Dr. Holbrook. "I hope everyone will come out and see for themselves what a vital asset the house will be to our region."

Construction of the 20-bedroom facility began in June 1986. The two-story traditional red brick house contains a great room, a dining room, a double kitchen, a quiet room, a children's playroom, a teenagers' and adults' game room, a laundry room, an office and a resident manager's apartment.

The full-time resident manager is Tony Price. He and his wife will live at the house.

Like other Ronald McDonald Houses, this one will serve as a home-away-from-home for the families of pediatric patients visiting the Children's Hospital of Eastern North Carolina, Pitt Memorial's regional pediatric referral hospital and the East Carolina University School of Medicine.

The first Ronald McDonald House was established in Philadelphia in the early 1970's. Today there are more than 100 throughout the United States and in several places outside the U.S. More than 200,000 people per year are served.

North Carolina's first Ronald McDonald House opened in 1980. The house in Winston-Salem has recently been completed and a house in Chapel Hill is under construction.

The fund-raising campaign for the Ronald McDonald House of Eastern North Carolina has raised three-quarters of its $1.2 million goal, according to John A. Allison IV, capital campaign chairman.

"We are pleased with the financial support we have received from school children, civic and church organizations, individuals, and businesses large and small," Allison said. "However, there is still work to be done. We need another $300,000 to

High Court Strikes Law Requiring Balance For Evolution, Creation

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court, invoking the constitutionally required separation of church and state, ruled today that states may not require public schools that teach evolution to teach creationism also.

The court, by a 7-2 vote, struck down a Louisiana law requiring that teaching the theory of evolution be balanced by teaching the theory of creation-science, also called creationism.

Creation-science states that the earth and most life forms came into existence suddenly about 6,000 years ago, in a process similar to a literal translation of the Book of Genesis.

Proponents of creation-science say the theory is not based on religion, and that the Louisiana law was an attempt to provide academic freedom. Today the court rejected that argument.

Critics of creation-science have attacked it as religion masquerading as science.

Writing for the court, Justice William J. Brennan said the purpose of the Louisiana law "was to restructure the science curriculum to conform with a particular religious viewpoint."

He added: "Because the primary purpose of the Creationism Act is to advance a particular religious belief, the act endorses religion in violation of the First Amendment."

The Louisiana Legislature enacted the Balanced Treatment for Creation-Science and Evolution-Science Act in 1981 but it was struck down before ever being enforced.

Evolution, first propounded by Charles Darwin, states that Earth is billions of years old, and that life forms developed gradually several million years ago.

Brennan said the Louisiana law was not really aimed at protecting academic freedom but "has the distinctly different purpose of discrediting evolution by counterbalancing its teaching at every turn with the teaching of creation science."

He added that the law is unconstitutional because "it seeks to employ the symbolic and financial support of government to achieve a religious purpose."

The Constitution's First Amendment bans government from bringing about an "establishment" of religion.

Under past Supreme Court decisions, a law or governmental policy violates the constitutional ban if its primary purpose is to advance or inhibit it religion or it unduly entangles government in religion.

Brennan said the Louisiana law does not have a secular purpose.

Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist and Justice Antonin Scalia dissented. In an opinion for the two, Scalia suggested that courts abandon their practice of investigating the "purpose" of laws challenged as violative of the constitutionally required separation of religion and government.

A similar creation-science law enacted in Arkansas was struck down by lower courts in rulings never appealed to the Supreme Court. On the heels of that setback, the creationism movement's future vitality was viewed as at stake in the Louisiana case.

Three Pitt County schools have new principals for the 1987-88 school year while six facilities have replacement assistant principals, school officials announced today.

New top administrators have been named at E.B. Aycock Junior High School, South Greenville High School and Belvoir. Assistant administrators have been named at Aycock, G.R. Whitfield, Greenville Middle, Ayden Middle, Wahl-Coates and the new elementary school.

Dailey, who served as assistant principal at G.R. Whitfield, will be assistant principal at Aycock, replacing Gene Baker, who will move into the alcohol drug education program for the Pitt County schools.

Taking Smith's principalship at South Greenville will be Rebecca Oats, associate superintendent in the Pitt County schools central office.

Taking Ms. Dailey's job as assistant principal at Whitfield will be Laurie Weston. She previously was assistant principal at Greenville Middle School.

Taking over as assistant principal at Greenville Middle will be Howard Williams, a former teacher at Goldsboro Junior High School.

Bruce Gray, who had been assistant principal at Ayden Middle School, will become principal at Belvoir Elementary School; he is replacing Patsy James, who retired this year. His replacement at Ayden Middle will be Larry Simmons, former half-time assistant principal at Grifton. Jean Musslewhite, who was half-time assistant principal at Grifton, will be the full time assistant principal there.

Young Indians Stressing Unity

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

The words "unity" and "pride" kept cropping up in workshops at the eighth annual Indian Youth Unity Conference being held at East Carolina University through today.

More than 250 young native Americans from throughout North Carolina and other states took part in powwows, conferences and workshops designed to teach the participants, aged 14 to 18, about their Indian culture.

The theme of the conference, "The dreams of our forefathers are the realities of today's native American youth," was expressed Thursday at a workshop on Indian youth involvement. The participants discussed their goals and how they can help improve Indian life.

Richard Jones of Hoke County said that in his area of southern North Carolina, "Indians rank dead last" in academic scores, yet are "number one in unemployment, drugs and alcohol."

"I hate to see Indian people getting arrested every day," he said.

His goal is to go into politics to "give the Indian people a voice," he said.

"I think we should bring back traditions," said Tony Clark of Hoke County. "Today's world doesn't know our people." He said he has helped establish an Iroquois dance group in his home county and wants to learn about traditional herbal medicine.

"I plan to become a professional baseball player," said Lumbee Indian Pat Dial. "I only know of one Indian from North Carolina who has played professional baseball — Dwight Lowery. I would like to see more Indians in professional sports."

Tony Blackfox, an art major at Oklahoma State University, said he wants to teach Indian art. "I think we need more Indian artists," he said.

Victoria Woods of Red Springs said she wants to major in psychology at Brigham Young University. "Most white people think they're better than us," she said. "I want to go out of state and show them that we are good."

Election Plan

Following an hour-long public hearing earlier this week, members of the Martin County Board of Education approved a seven-district, single member plan for future board elections.

The plan will be sent immediately to the General Assembly for consideration and a spokesman for the board said it was hopeful that the plan will be approved before the current legislative session ends.

The U.S. Justice Department will have final approval of the proposed plan.

With a view to making the seven-district option most effective, the board additionally approved an approach that will set election years and alter the terms of some members. It provides for the election, beginning with the 1988 school board election and every four years thereafter, of members from districts 3, 4 and 5. An election will also be held in 1988 for a member from district 7, whose term will expire in 1990.

Only residents who live within a district may vote for that district's board member.

Winterville's Budget Proposal Holds Tax Rate At Same Level

WINTERVILLE — The Town Board of Aldermen held a public hearing Thursday on its proposed $2,552,005 1987-88 budget — an amount representing a $108,062 reduction from the previous year.

Under the proposed budget, the town's tax rate will remain the same — 47 cents per $100 of value — and no increases in water, sewer or utility tap rates are recommended.

According to Town Clerk Elwood Nobles, the budget reductions are attributable to decreases in state funding of recreation and water improvement projects that are near completion. He said the reductions represent decreases in a recreation project grant from $95,000 in 1986-87 to $20,000 in 1987-88 and a water improvement grant from $120,000 in 1986-87 to $67,000 in 1987-88.

The town board will consider the budget in a meeting June 30 at 7:30 p.m. in the town hall.

The proposed budget includes funding for capital outlay projects including $17,000 for a computer, $14,000 for a police vehicle, $14,000 for a dump truck $17,000 to paint the town's half-million gallon water tank and $30,000 to remodel the town hall. Nobles said the proposed budget also included $82,000 for street improvement.

The town's revenue sources for 1987-88 include $151,000 from property taxes, $95,000 from interest and investment, $42,000 from power bills, $120,000 from local sales tax, $120,000 from water charges, $101,000 from sewer charges and $1,545,000 from electric charges.

According to Nobles, the town's biggest cost increase is for insurance — health and liability coverage rose $30,000 in 1987-88.

Nobles said three undeveloped subdivisions totaling 56 acres are set to be annexed by Winterville June 30, but he had no estimate of the revenues these annexations would add to town. The subdivisions include Canterbury, 13 acres; Devonshire, 40 acres, and Pitt Acres, five acres.

The town is also set to annex Ragland Acres, a 30-acre development, on Sept. 9.

Thefts Reported

Two thefts were reported to Greenville police Thursday.

Officers said a briefcase containing school materials and books with a combined value of $280, was taken along with a radar detector and two tape recorders, with a combined value of $340, from a car in an incident reported at 6:42 p.m.

A floor stripper, valued at $400, and two extension cords, a tool box and vacuum cleaner parts, with a combined value of $405, were taken from a storage shed at 1601 Chestnut St. in a break-in reported at 8:42 p.m.

Dion Concerts

NEW YORK (AP) — Dion DiMucci is back in town for two reunion concerts of his '60s rock 'n' roll group Dion and the Belmonts, and took the opportunity to return to his old Italian neighborhood, the Belmont section of the Bronx.

DiMucci walked through virtually unrecognized Friday until he started singing, "They call me the Wanderer and I roam around, around, around." A crowd soon gathered to see the man who asked the musical question, "Why must I be a teen-ager in love?"

"Man, he looks great now," said Dave Greco, who was behind the counter at Mike's Deli. "I'm glad he's out of that junkie thing," he added, referring to DiMucci's struggle with heroin.

DiMucci, 48, lives in North Miami, Fla. The shows today and Saturday at Radio City Music Hall are the first here by the group in nearly 15 years. They sold out in 80 minutes.

Two Men Recover From Toxic Fumes

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

WILLIAMSTON — Two Martin county men, hospitalized Thursday at Martin General Hospital after inhaling toxic fumes, were reported out of danger this morning.

Dr. Malcolm Lieverman and John Mylarski were to be released from the hospital today after being treated for inhaling toluene.

"Both patients had a good night's rest and from all indications we will be able to discharge them today," said George Brandt, administrator of Martin General. Brandt said the two had inhaled the toxic chemical toluene and another unidentified chemical.

Williamston Fire Chief Tommy Price and a rescue crew responded to a 10:28 a.m. Thursday call from the United Organics plant, located near the Roanoke River on bypass U.S. 11-13 Thursday.

"The information we received is that Dr. Lieverman and an assistant, John Mylarski had completed cleaning a tank, or a kettle as they called it, used in the process of making the chemical toluene. A bolt was accidentally dropped into the tank and Dr. Lieverman went down a rope ladder into the eight-foot deep tank to retrieve the bolt. He passed out immediately and Mylarski, thinking he'd passed out from the heat, climbed down to see what he could do and he also passed out."

"Price said other plant personnel, seeing what had happened, immediately called the rescue squad and then donned self-contained breathing apparatus before going into the tank to get the two men out.

"When we arrived, these men had already pulled Mylarski from the tank and were giving him first aid. Our team helped pull Lieverman from the tank. We began first aid measures on the way to the hospital. Lieverman was unconscious and was put in intensive care."

"Price said that specialists in chemicals this morning were investigating the scene of the accident in an effort to determine what caused the accumulation of dangerous toxic fumes inside the empty tank.

Nine Shot In Violent Street Row

HIGH POINT (AP) — Nine people, including two children, were shot late Thursday night as they stood on a High Point sidewalk and watched an argument between individuals in a vacant lot, police said.

"It's the most I can remember (being shot) at one time," said High Point Police Capt. Greg Nicholson, a member of the force for 18 years. "Somebody was shooting at someone and just hit the people standing on the street."

No one was killed when the shotgun was fired about 10 p.m., Nicholson said.

Two of nine shot were admitted to hospitals, Nicholson said.

A 6-year-old girl, shot in the throat, was transported to North Carolina Baptist Hospital in Winston-Salem, Nicholson said. Police said she was in stable condition.

Rodney Perry, of Brooklyn, N.Y., was admitted to High Point Memorial Hospital with gunshot wounds to the back, left arm and hand. Perry was listed in stable condition, a spokeswoman at the hospital said today.

A 5-year-old boy was also shot in the incident, Nicholson said.

"We have a suspect, but no one in custody," Nicholson said. "That's all I can say."

Charlotte Men Face Charges

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Five Charlotte men were charged today with possessing an unregistered machine gun in the June 7 shootings at a crowded amusement park that left a teen-age girl dead and a 6-year-old girl wounded.

The U.S. Attorney's Office said in a news release that Gerald Michael Turner, 30; James Joseph Bogatay, 31; Charles Hepburn Kupser, 20; Richard Melvin Caddell, 19; and Richard Phillip Groetzinger, 21, had been charged in federal warrants with one count each of possessing the illegal weapon.

Russ McElwee of the Mecklenburg County Police, said this morning that Turner, Bogatay and Kupser were already in custody and the warrants were being served on Caddell and Groetzinger.

A spokesman for the U.S. Attorney's Office said she did not know which of the five men surrendered an AKS-47 rifle to Mecklenburg County Police the day after the shootings.

Michelle Ann Sexton, 16, of Rock Hill, S.C., was killed while swimming on a raft at a wave pool at Carowinds Amusement Park. Investigators said a large-caliber bullet hit her in the back and exited her chest.

Ahesha Rollins, 6, who was playing about 50 feet away from Miss Sexton, was shot in the abdomen by what investigators believe was a second bullet. She was released from Charlotte Memorial Hospital June 12.

Investigators said a man called police the day after the shooting and said he might have fired the shots from a makeshift target range a half-mile from the amusement park.

The target range, at the end of a rutted dirt road, consisted of a 3-by-3-foot wall of plywood nailed to wooden supports. A pile of tires and plastic soft-drink bottles, shredded by gunfire, was behind the target area.

Officials of Crescent Land & Timber Co., which owns the 88-acre site where the target range was discovered, said no one had been given permission to use the area.

The caller, whom police would not identify, later surrendered the AKS-47 rifle, described as a "semi-automatic, Russian-made rifle."

County Police Capt. Chris Owens said investigators found 15 bullet casings at the range which appeared to match with a bullet that was recovered from the Rollins girl.

But investigators later said they were having difficulty matching the bullet to the rifle because the weapon apparently had been converted from fully automatic to semi-automatic before being surrendered to police.

Feasible Budget

Kudos to the Greenville City Council for removing the residential garbage pickup fee and approving what appears to be a feasible budget for 1987-88.

The Council now needs to begin planning how it can abolish commercial refuse collection charges in 1988-89 and meet the financial needs of an expanding city — as well as keep a balanced budget.

The $21,593,806 budget incorporates no tax increase, no new expenditures for personnel and no new capital projects — a proper approach for an interim period in the city's management.

It would be unreasonable to make dramatic shifts in financial policy before a new city manager is in place. It would be equally unsound to initiate capital spending projects without the direction of a permanent top executive for the city.

This hold-the-line approach may not remain feasible, however, in coming years, as Greenville grows and city services must expand to meet broadening needs. Certainly as the municipality's population increases, the city's responsibilities multiply concurrently. Since Greenville is not a town standing still population-wise, City Hall can expect greater and greater demands on its services.

In some respects city services are already beleaguered by a burgeoning citizenry. Each department has a list of needs — personnel, capital — that must be addressed as pressure from increased growth continues.

It is a fact that more people create the need for more police and fire protection, more sanitation service, more public works commitment. Those demands call for more manpower, more vehicles, more time to provide these basic services.

This expansion is a reality that should be addressed in future budgets, and it is a fact that can be prioritized by the City Council. Greenville's leadership — and its new city manager — must find financially feasible ways of funding growth, protecting quality of life and keeping a balanced budget.

Planned annexations will provide additional revenue for the city, but this measure will also require more services. A means of filling these needs must be anticipated now.

The 1987-88 budget is responsible because it is balanced, holds the tax rate and takes no major steps during a planning period when the city has no top direction. To grow, however, Greenville may require in the future a less conservative — but still fiscally sound — approach to budgeting.

Litter Issue Bugs Legislators

RALEIGH — Throw a beer can or drink cup out the window of your car in the near future and it may end up costing you $500 and a day out of your life.

The General Assembly is considering a bill sponsored by Sen. Bill Staton, D-Lee, which would significantly increase littering penalties.

The current maximum fine for first offense littering is $50 and $200 for second offense. Under a proposal which has already passed the Senate, the maximum fine for second offense littering would be increased to $500. Second offense would also carry a nearly mandatory eight hours of community service.

Staton brought his bill before the House Judiciary II Committee last week and it came under heavy questioning. Several House members said they thought $500 was too severe a penalty for littering. Others said the community service clause was not strong enough. They wanted it clear to judges that almost all second offenders would receive this punishment. The bill was therefore sent to a subcommittee.

But it was obvious that the House committee liked Staton's idea, and that the subcommittee would probably recommend stiffer penalties.

Staton said in a later interview that he had introduced the bill at the request of the Raleigh City Council. (Raleigh is part of his district.) He said the council is concerned with the capital's physical appearance and wants a tool to combat littering. He also noted that last year the city spent $40,000, and the state $400,000, cleaning up litter.

"The council felt that there ought to be something in the statutes to at least put judges on notice that this is a right serious problem," Staton said. "The courts ought to get the impression (from this bill) that (littering) requires more than a simple tap on the wrists."

The committee appeared to agree that only ill or handicapped defendants should escape the eight hours of community service penalty. It was clear that the preferred punishment would be a Saturday on the highway with a litter piker and plastic bag.

From the "News From Home" Department: Over lunch recently, Rep. Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, told a lobbyist about the latest craze in Cobbs Crossroads.

Taylor's Store apparently has amassed a collection of baseball caps emblazoned with witty messages.

Mavretic reported that, "People literally come in to read the hats."

Unfortunately, this newspaper will not publish any of the sayings which Mavretic could remember.

Former Attorney General Rufus Edmisten has made a special request of this reporter. "Anything you could do to convince people that I am no longer attorney general would be greatly appreciated," he said.

Edmisten, who is now in a private law practice, says he gets many calls every day from people who have problems with "their mobile homes, cars or something else. I have to answer every one of them because you never know when there's going to be a fat juicy personal injury case."

Edmisten says many of the callers identify themselves as people who worked in one of his campaigns. "That's the key that they want 30 minutes of free legal advice," he said.

So, in case you didn't hear, Edmisten is not governor or attorney general. He's just a lawyer and lobbyist who charges in 15-minute segments.

The Silkworm Missile Risk

WASHINGTON — Disturbing new signs of terrorism by Iran's Revolutionary Guards, who threatened to cut off the hand of a British diplomat in Tehran and recruited a secret Moroccan cell in Paris, lie at the heart of U.S. concerns that Silkworm missiles in the Persian Gulf may prove lethal in their hands.

The Guards are swaggering street-fighters, haters who fire from the hip. They answer only to the Ayatollah Khomeini, and he regards them as his special heroes.

Even today, with the Iranian revolution devouring its children, the regular armed forces have managed to maintain strict discipline, ruling out attacks on the U.S. or other Western powers. Not so the Guards. Their speedboats, built in Sweden, make hit-and-run attacks on Gulf shipping. It would be natural for the Silkworm launching site now under preparation for the Guards at the Strait of Hormuz, the entrance to the Gulf, to be used with similar indiscretion.

That risk, which would simply enhance these other recent acts of terror by the Guards from Tehran to Paris, has been accepted by President Reagan's national security high command. However, elsewhere there are doubts. These doubts have been growing since private White House polling after Reagan's Monday night TV address showed, in the words of an administration official, that he "did not score well" on his Persian Gulf policy.

White House chief of staff Howard Baker, who catches cold when senators sneeze on Capitol Hill, quietly advised the president not to rush into putting U.S. flags on 11 Kuwaiti tankers until the fractious congressional view crusts over favorably and public opinion turns. "Wait," Baker advised. A major reason for that advice: the hair-trigger Guards will make prophets of congressional critics predicting that American blood may be shed in the Gulf.

But delay would run worse risks, intrinsic because of U.S. responsibility; political because it would cast new doubt on the president's ability to call the hard shots in the twilight of his presidency. National security aides are telling Reagan the U.S. cannot base policy on threats from the Revolutionary Guards.

The rising tide of their terrorism peaked in Tehran with threats to cut off the hand of British diplomat Edward Chaplin three weeks ago. Chaplin's sin was to drive his family home through the streets of the capital. He was lucky to keep his hand, but he was roughed up before Britain's angry demand for his release got him out.

There was a nightmarish quality about this assault, from its unpredictability to its stupidity. That is what makes the Reagan administration so aware of the Silkworms soon to be installed at the entrance to the Gulf. The assault was carried out by an unstructured Guard unit, which claimed it had evidence Chaplin was recruiting "agents" inside Iran.

Another peak was reached in Paris last week, when the French DST, the equivalent of the FBI, rolled up a newly-formed Iranian terrorist cell that included Moroccans and Tunisians. One Moroccan was collecting $30,000 a year to identify qualified North Africans for terrorist training in Iran.

"The surprise about this French discovery was their willingness to tell us about it," an administration insider told us. "We think it shows a degree of real concern that there may be a new dimension coming from the Revolutionary Guards."

The Battle Has Just Begun

WASHINGTON — There is good news on the highways this summer. But it could be better. More and more automobiles are being equipped with air bags, as U.S. automobile manufacturers belatedly install safety restraint devices in new vehicles.

After more than a decade of obstructing federal regulations requiring "passive restraints" in new cars, up to 100,000 driver-side air bags are being placed in '87 model vehicles. Ford, Mercedes, Peugeot, Porsche, Volvo, BMW, and Honda are manufacturing vehicles that contain the concealed air bags that inflate on impact, creating a protective cushion for the driver.

What's difficult to accept is the rah rah enthusiasm that the automobile industry has adopted in the 9th inning regarding air bags. For 15 years Detroit has told the public and Congress one scare story after another that air bags inflate accidentally causing a motorist to lose control of a vehicle.

Yet, there was Donald Peterson, chairman of Ford, in the flesh at the National Auto Dealers Convention in Las Vegas in January, proudly announcing that his company would equip between 500,000 and one million of its passenger cars with driver-side bags by 1990. Moreover, he disclosed for the first time that the price of air bags by 1990 would be only $300. (For years Detroit has said the safety feature was too expensive to produce. As options in some product lines, air bags now cost up to $800).

In the convention exhibit hall, Ford even had a model air bag displayed that it deployed 10 times per day. The company estimates that hundreds of lives have been saved this year alone from the use of air bags.

The fact is — as the auto industry now agrees — air bags work. According to the latest report from the National Highway and Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA), air bag-equipped cars have traveled more than one million miles without a serious malfunction.

What the auto industry refuses to acknowledge is the reason for its sudden change of heart: "competitive pressure" and "favorable experience." The truth is that Detroit had no choice but to install air bags.

It faced strong competition in the marketplace from foreign manufacturers who were introducing cars in the U.S. with air bags. Moreover, as Helen Petraskos, Ford's Vice President for Environmental and Safety Engineering had acknowledged, Detroit was responding to legal mandates from the Supreme Court and the Department of Transportation.

The hypocrisy of the auto industry, in light of its recent behavior, suggests that citizens should be measurably skeptical of Detroit when it opposes other auto safety features.

Even though air bags are slowly becoming a standard feature on new cars, the battle over auto safety is hardly over. Presently consumers are stuck with administrators at the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA) that believe in procrastination and an industry that isn't particularly concerned about auto safety.

Strength For Today

Arnold Toynbee, in his book "A Study of History," lays down the proposition — the result of a lifetime of research — that civilizations disintegrate because of a deficiency in the spiritual life of a nation. By the same token, those nations which make a spiritual emphasis and which are particularly diligent as regards social responsibilities, improve and press on to heights of creative achievement. The first sign of decadence in the life of a nation is the deterioration or absence of these necessary spiritual factors.

All this is pregnant with meaning for students of modern world affairs.

Whither are we bent? If a willingness on the part of citizens to sacrifice makes a nation great, if unselfishness and love have political as well as a moral connotations, then we had better ponder the policies of our own and other nations in modern life.

FmHA Told To Explain Loan Plans

RALEIGH (AP) — New notices will have to be sent to North Carolina farmers with delinquent Farmers Home Administration loans explaining repayment or loan restructuring options available, a judge has ruled.

Until mid-May, FmHA had been sending form letters to farmers around the country who had not paid on their loans in a year or more, asking them to indicate the method of payment they would use to begin settling their accounts or else to contact an FmHA agent to discuss the loan.

Farmers advocacy groups complained about the letters, which they said were misleading and caused many farmers to believe they had to begin selling off their farmland or equipment immediately in order to make loan payments.

However, FmHA officials say they are considering an appeal of a judge's ruling which says the agency must clearly inform farmers of their rights before resuming collection efforts on delinquent loans.

In the meantime, an FmHA official said Thursday the agency will not make any attempt to collect the old debts until at least July 6.

"We are preparing some instructions to go out to our field offices as to what to do until this is resolved," Ron Ence, director of legislative affairs with FmHA in Washington told The News and Observer of Raleigh. "The decision has not been reached yet on whether to appeal."

According to the ruling by U.S. District Judge Bruce Van Sickle earlier this week, FmHA will have to start over with about 65,000 borrowers nationwide who are already in the early stages of possible foreclosure.

The judge ordered the agency to halt its foreclosure proceedings for 13,000 other farmers whose loans have been declared due until those farmers can be informed of their rights.

Eddie Miller, special projects representative with the state FmHA office, said he could not comment on the case because agency officials are were considering an appeal. He said he thought the original notices had been worded clearly.

"We got no complaints here from farmers who didn't understand it," Miller said.

But Betty Bailey, director of the Chatham County-based Rural Advancement Fund, said volunteers with her agency had contacted about 3,000 farmers in the state offering help with the forms so they would understand refinancing options and not promise to sell farmland or equipment in order to pay off their loans.

"It's real common for the farmers home papers to be written in this bureaucratic language that a normal person can't understand," Ms. Bailey said. "These letters frighten people, and a lot of it is so unnecessary. This is the kind of thing that keeps farmers from making a decent living off their work."

FmHA loans are generally a last resort for farmers who are unable to get a loan from a bank but have enough cash flow to handle a low-interest loan. Loans are made for weather-related emergencies, for expansions and new farm purchases and for yearly operating expenses such as feed, seed and fertilizer.

Tobacco Reserves Dropping

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's tobacco supply is edging lower despite prospects for a larger harvest this year, an Agriculture Department report said Thursday.

Officials said a decline in the overall inventory at the beginning of the 1987-88 marketing year probably will more than offset increases in production.

If the 1987 acreage is near what producers have indicated in surveys, and yields are normal, tobacco marketings could rise about 7 percent from 1986's 1.2 billion pounds, the report said.

"Even with a larger crop and price support levels the same or lower, auction prices may edge a little higher if crop quality is good," the report said. "Despite a reduction in cigarette sales, domestic use may increase because of some substitution for imported leaf."

The report added: "Furthermore, exports may rise a little in 1987-88 because of lower U.S. prices and the weaker dollar. Still, competition from countries such as Zimbabwe and Brazil, and reduced consumption in some major U.S. markets, will restrain export growth."

A survey of planting intentions in March pointed to a 7 percent increase in flue-cured acreage this year and a 6 percent boost in burley tobacco plantings.

Some 100 towns and villages in Iran were hit by devastating earthquakes in 1968. The death toll was placed at more than 11,000.

Senate Committee Softens AIDS Education Proposal

RALEIGH (AP) — AIDS education might need to include warnings against sexual promiscuity, but that should be a decision for the State Board of Education to make, a Senate panel has decided.

The Senate Education Committee voted Thursday to water down a House bill mandating AIDS education in public schools based on the premise that avoiding sex outside marriage is the best way to keep acquired immune deficiency syndrome in check.

"I've got enough faith in the ... State Board of Education to decide when these matters ought to be taught and how they ought to be taught," Sen. Dennis Winner, D-Buncombe, said. "They are put there specifically to make education policy decisions, not people in the General Assembly."

The bill's sponsor, Rep. F.J. "Trip" Sizemore, R-Guilford, protested unsuccessfully that the Legislature should send a clear signal that it considers responsible sexual behavior the key to stopping AIDS.

"You won't find an expert an AIDS who will tell you that sexual abstinence is not the important control measure," Sizemore said. "In fact, it's the only fail-safe control measure. And if we put out a mixed signal on that, we're doing the wrong thing, in my judgment."

The House bill would order teachers to tell pupils that keeping AIDS in check requires "responsible sexual behavior within the context of marriage ... based on fidelity, commitment and maturity."

It says that while local educators would develop their own AIDS curricula based on information provided by the state, all of their materials on the subject "shall teach that children should not engage in sexual activity."

Senate committee members, however, said the Legislature by tradition had set down only general policies on public school curriculum, leaving it to the state board and local boards to determine the specifics.

Winner said the Legislature had adhered to that policy in 1985 when it approved the Basic Education Program, voting to establish a standard statewide curriculum but allowing the State Board of Education to decide what it would contain.

Bill To Regulate Vendors Stalls

RALEIGH (AP) — A Senate committee postponed action on a bill to regulate itinerant merchants after supporters found they had exempted enough people to draw objections about the rest.

"I think we have exempted the people we need to regulate and we're regulating the people we need to exempt," Sen. Jim Johnson, R-Cabarrus, told the Judiciary I Committee on Thursday. He said the House-approved bill being debated has been watered down by taking out door-to-door peddlers and other special interests.

"If there's anybody we need to be watching, it's these door-to-door people," he said.

Former Sen. Craig Lawing agreed, saying the bill would hurt small entrepreneurs and "clutter up the statutes."

Johnson also objected to provisions under which a flea-market operator would be responsible for getting names and addresses for every vendor, keeping the records for two years.

"Then you're making a flea-market operator a policeman," he said.

Most people who frequent flea markets and roadside sellers of furniture are "trying to get a good deal" and should be prepared for the possibility that goods may be inferior to those purchased in stores, Johnson said.

But he added that anyone who has seen the mark-up on furniture in most stores would see why roadside vendors are thriving.

Martin Says Hawke Has 'Atoned' For Tardy Taxes

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin says his former campaign manager, Jack Hawke, has atoned for his repeated tardiness in paying property taxes and should not feel obligated to relinquish the state GOP chairmanship.

"I see nothing based on what I know that would lead me to recommend that he resign from the position which he holds," Martin said Thursday. "It is an example of error on his part and he has corrected it."

The Raleigh Times reported this week that between 1979 and 1985, Hawke and his wife, Grace, failed to list and pay on time household property taxes on furniture and other items. They also did not properly list and pay some taxes on vehicles, the newspaper said.

Hawke, a Raleigh resident, has confirmed the reports and said he had "no adequate explanation." He says he has now paid all delinquent taxes and penalties.

"I would be very pleased if everybody in our administration or on our team was perfect in every way and never made any mistakes," Martin said under repeated questioning at his weekly news conference.

"And yet in real life ... we know that people make mistakes ... and they have to meet whatever the consequences of that are. And Jack has done that."

Hawke, a veteran GOP political operative who managed Martin's 1984 campaign, was the governor's handpicked choice to succeed Bob Bradshaw as state party chairman. Last month, the state Republican convention elected Hawke to a two-year term.

Martin said he had not known about Hawke's tax problems until the news reports surfaced this week. Martin acknowledged that the situation might create short-term credibility problems for Hawke and the state GOP, but said he did not consider the development a serious blow to the party or to his own re-election prospects next year.

He also indicated that he felt the issue was being blown out of proportion by the news media. Asked to react to the statement of his political adviser, Alan Pugh, that the media were making "a very big mountain out of a very little molehill," Martin said: "I would not object to that characterization."

On another issue, Martin announced that a survey of corporate executives by Business Week magazine found that North Carolina was the most attractive state for locating new manufacturing facilities.

The governor released the survey results the day after Ken Eudy, the state Democratic executive director, said Martin was not trying hard enough to recruit new industry and that many of the new jobs created under Martin's stewardship paid low wages.

Martin said the Democrats were ignoring the work he was doing and the high-paying jobs that were coming to North Carolina.

Navy Jet Crashes

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — The Navy, searching for two possible crew members of a downed F-14 fighter jet, said the plane is the second to crash at a Dare County, N.C., bombing range in less than a month.

Lt. Bob Rivera, a Navy spokesman in Norfolk, said the jet which crashed Thursday usually carries a pilot and a flight officer.

Rescue workers made their way to the crash site on the wooded, swampy bombing range by afternoon but had not reported on any fatalities, Rivera said.

Rivera said the F-14, based with Fighter Squadron 33 at the Oceana Naval Air Station in Virginia Beach, was on a training mission at the range, which is used by the Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps.

Two Navy fliers were killed May 21 when their A-6E bomber crashed at the range during night training.

IN THE STATE

Rand May Be Threatened

WILMINGTON (AP) — As Houser investigators prepare to comb the campaign finances of Rep. Charlie Rose, D-N.C., a Democrat in the state Legislature may be watching with added interest.

State Sen. Tony Rand, D-Cumberland, a lieutenant governor hopeful who once acted as Rose's campaign treasurer, signed a sworn statement in 1974 claiming the campaign committee was without debt. The Morning Star of Wilmington reported in today's editions. Fourteen years later, Rose is claiming the campaign owed him $50,000 at the time.

During the same period — in 1973 — Rose also apparently failed to file a financial disclosure form, even though the congressman claims to have lent the campaign $50,000 that November, the newspaper said. Federal law at the time required candidates to file reports if they received or spent more than $1,000.

As the House Committee Standards of Official Conduct delves into those situations and charges that Rose diverted campaign money for personal purposes, some Republicans are saying Rand should feel threatened as well.

"I think it certainly throws into question Mr. Rand's credibility," Chris Shields, a North Carolina GOP strategist working with the presidential campaign of Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kansas, told the newspaper. "He was responsible for those reports being absolutely positively correct."

"If (Rand) was involved and (the investigation) showed he was involved and the allegations become fact ... I would think Tony would step back and re-evaluate," said Rep. William Boyd, R-Randolph, who is considering a run for lieutenant governor himself.

Rand disagrees. "I don't think that's an issue at all," he said Thursday. "You're talking about things that I haven't seen for 15 years and that were prepared by somebody else."

Chlorine Hospitalizes Three

RALEIGH (AP) — Three city workers were hospitalized Thursday after trying to contain a leak of toxic chlorine gas at an unused sewage treatment plant that caused the evacuation of 50 to 100 people in southeast Raleigh, authorities said.

The leak was contained shortly after 6 p.m., and authorities pinpointed a ruptured copper pipe as the cause. Authorities did not know why the pipe had burst or how long the gas had been escaping.

The public utilities workers were taken to Wake Medical Center for mild cases of chlorine inhalation, said Karen Barefoot, a nurse in the emergency room. Two of the workers, James Powell and Michael Canary, were in good condition at Wake Medical Center late Thursday night, while Melvin Williams was treated and released.

Former Worker Sues Over Drug Test

GREENSBORO (AP) — A former employee of a Greensboro paving company is suing the firm for invasion of privacy and breach of contract for allegedly making public results of a mandatory drug test.

Elizabeth Travis of Greensboro was fired May 11 from Thompson-Arthur Paving Co. when results of blood and urine tests indicated marijuana use, according to the lawsuit filed Thursday in Guilford Superior Court.

On the same day she was fired, the lawsuit claims, company officials called a meeting of all office employees and told them that Ms. Travis had been sent home because she tested "positive" for marijuana.

Before taking the drug test, Ms. Travis said she signed a written agreement with Thompson-Arthur Paving stating that results of the test would be confidential.

GE Workers Reject Union

HENDERSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — General Electric workers here have turned down the International Union of Electrical Workers by a 2-to-1 margin, officials of the company said.

Employees of GE's lighting systems department voted 553-279 on Thursday to decline union representation — the fifth time workers at the plant have turned down the IUE.

DMV Procedures Investigated

RALEIGH (AP) — The State Auditor's Office is investigating financial irregularities in the sale of vehicle tags and the collection of title fees at the state Division of Motor Vehicles, Commissioner William Hiatt said.

The State Bureau of Investigation has been notified that violations of the law may have occurred, and its investigation is pending, Hiatt said. Hiatt would not say on Thursday how much money was involved.

"Obviously, it's serious — we would have not gone this far," he said.

Handicapped Man Receives Help

RALEIGH (AP) — An anonymous benefactor has kept a handicapped Clayton man from losing the home his mother had left him in her will.

Billy McCalvin, who suffers from spina bifida, faced $2,300 in medical bills after his mother died of cancer in February 1986. McCalvin, who receives a $370 monthly Social Security check, could not pay the bills and was in danger of losing the house he had shared with his mother until her death.

But Clayton attorney Allen Tew said he received seven offers of help Tuesday night and Wednesday after The Raleigh Times wrote of McCalvin's troubles.

"It appears everything has worked out for the best," said Tew, who accepted the offer of a Raleigh man who paid the full debt.

Former Chief Justice Honored

RALEIGH (AP) — Retired state Supreme Court Chief Justice Joseph Branch has been named the recipient of the Judge John J. Parker Award by the North Carolina Bar Association, it was announced Thursday.

The award was presented Thursday during the association's annual meeting in Asheville.

The award is presented to a North Carolina attorney who has "rendered conspicuous service to the cause of jurisprudence in North Carolina." The award honors the memory and accomplishments of Judge John J. Parker, who served as chief of the U.S. 4th Circuit Court of Appeals for 27 years.

Railroads Discuss Merger

RALEIGH (AP) — Preliminary merger discussions have taken place between the North Carolina Railroad and the Atlantic and North Carolina Railroad, according to the president of the North Carolina Railroad.

If the lines combined, they would provide rail service from the state port at Morehead City through eastern North Carolina to the piedmont, including a segment of the primary East Coast freight artery from Greensboro to Charlotte.

The state owns approximately 75 percent of the stock of each railroad, with the balance being held by more than 1,000 private shareholders, more than 80 percent of whom are North Carolinians. Virtually all of the assets of railroads are currently leased to Southern Railway Company or its subsidiaries under agreements which expire in 1994.

Lightning Ignites House Fires

WILMINGTON (AP) — Severe lightning early Thursday afternoon ignited house fires in Wrightsboro, Castle Hayne and White Lake, authorities said.

No injuries were reported but the White Lake home was gutted. Heavy downpours fell throughout the area, flooding streets in Wilmington and elsewhere as drainage systems struggled to deal with the deluge.

The National Weather Service station at New Hanover County Airport reported 1.6 inches of rain between 12:30 and 6:15 p.m. Much of the rain fell before 1:30 p.m., according to a meteorologist there.

Storms Can Boost Fish Food Supply

By JODY TAYLOR
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Winter storms may temporarily hurt the migration of fish larvae, but the meteorological shake-up can bring long-term benefits, a North Carolina State University oceanographer says.
Billions of newly spawned menhaden, croaker and spot make a hazardous journey to the calmer waters of Albemarle and Pamlico sounds during the migrating season. Some of the larvae die in the storms, but recent research indicates that the motion of the water may actually help the migrating larvae by enhancing the production of a food called plankton, said Dr. David M. Checkley.

"During the storms, you have upwelling, which brings food to the surface," Checkley said in a recent interview. "The water, which comes from below the Gulf Stream, promotes the production of food and provides an abundance of food."

The currents also can help the spawning process, and it helps the larvae make a quicker trip to nursing beds.

"Winter weather in general pulls water with larvae toward the shore," Checkley said.

Checkley did his research in conjunction with a national winter storm watch called GALE, or Genesis of Atlantic Lows Experiment, which has been funded by the National Science Foundation. Checkley's sampling came during the first three months of 1986 while he and his team were aboard the vessel Cape Hatteras off the coast of Beaufort.

"The interrelationship between meteorology and oceanography has been the most exciting thing for me," Checkley says of the project, for which he has funding to continue through April. "Storms are by and large meteorological events and these have profound effects on the ecology."

Through the GALE project, Checkley says scientists have been able to compare the effect of storms on the water column on the East Coast and the West Coast.

PTL May Benefit From Publicity

By ROGER BRYANT
Associated Press Writer
FORT MILL, S.C. (AP) — The accusations volleyed by PTL Chairman Jerry Falwell and Tammy Bakker are pitiful and embarrassing to both parties, the head of a religious watchdog association said.
In Fort Mill meanwhile, contemporary Christian singer Gary McSpadden said he will consider an offer to succeed Jim and Tammy Bakker as host of the "PTL Club" television show.

Falwell and PTL Chief Executive Officer Jerry Nims said Thursday the behavior by the Bakkers is hurting the ministry they founded, but Art Kropp of People For The American Way said on the show that PTL is getting free advertising and may actually benefit from the controversy.

"This (television evangelism) movement has always worked best in adversity," he said on Cable News Network's "Larry King Live" talk show Thursday night.

"As you watch all this you can't help but feel pity for both sides," said Kropp. "I think they have both, the Rev. Falwell and the Bakkers, have gotten down into the mud all the innuendos and all the slinging and all that is an embarrassment to them both."

IRS Takes Harder Look At 'Churches'

By JIM LUTHER
AP Tax Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — In the eyes of the Internal Revenue Service, a church can be a coven of witches, a group of sun worshippers, a band of secular humanists or a more traditional collection of Baptists, Catholics or Jews.

There is nothing in federal tax law that defines a church and nothing that gives the IRS authority to question the beliefs of those claiming to be a church. In fact, a church does not even have to apply for a tax exemption — if a church decides it wants to be exempt, it is.

But if you are thinking of creating your own church as a tax dodge, keep in mind:

—The IRS will revoke the exemption of a church if it determines contributions are used for the personal enrichment of any individual.

—There are limits on churches' authority to operate tax-exempt businesses. The business must be related directly to the church's reason for being; it is not enough that earnings from the business are used to finance church projects. As a general rule, a church may not operate a restaurant, for example, without paying taxes on the profits.

—Congress, the IRS and the courts have put the squeeze on "mail-order ministries," which ordain individuals as ministers and counsel them to avoid taxation by turning over all their assets and income to their own personal "churches." In turn, those churches pay all the living expenses of the ministers and the ministers pay no taxes.

The tax-exempt status of churches has been spotlighted by the troubles of the PTL ministry. The IRS is challenging as unreasonable the million-dollar payments made by the ministry to its founder, Jim Bakker. And the agency is questioning the fact that PTL paid no taxes on income from its Heritage USA theme park at Fort Mill, S.C., and rental of PTL's satellite-cable facilities to outside commercial operators.

PTL is negotiating with IRS to retain its tax exemption, since losing it probably would doom the ministry. Even if it revoked the exemption, the IRS is not likely to try to collect back taxes from previous contributors who took tax deductions for their donations.

Churches historically have been free from federal income taxes because of their charitable nature and because the Constitution's First Amendment prohibits government interference in the free exercise of religion. Until 1969, the IRS could not even audit churches, and churches were free to operate every kind of business without paying taxes on the earnings.

There is growing concern that more tax-exempt organizations — churches and others — should be paying taxes on some of their business operations.

Federal law affecting churches is rational "but has not always been as carefully and systematically enforced as it ought to be," says the Rev. Dean Kelley of Long Island, N.Y., director of religious and civil liberties for the National Council of Churches.

"The primary area of abuse has been operation of profit making enterprises in competition with tax-paying businesses," Kelley said. "If that law were appropriately enforced, PTL would presumably be paying federal corporate tax on income unrelated to its exempt function" — including its theme park.

A House Ways and Means subcommittee headed by Rep. J.J. Pickle, D-Texas, opens hearings Monday on the question of tax-exempt businesses, and the panel will devote part of its time to churches. Pickle said in a recent interview with Tax Notes that he is interested especially in church businesses.

"If they build a bowling alley that's a profitable venture for their saints and sinners and for the public in general, then we say that Uncle Sam is entitled to his just portion of it," Pickle said. "I think the Lord would approve of that."

Rep. Byron Dorgan, D-N.D., a member of the subcommittee, concedes the difficulty of probing ministries. "But we can't be blind to the fact that some responsible ministries are using the airwaves to spread the Gospel and some shysters are using the airwaves to bilk people out of their money and put it to their personal use," Dorgan said.

The IRS, which is barred by law from discussing any tax investigation, has said nothing to indicate any stepped-up effort in the wake of the PTL inquiry. "We do follow up on complaints when we hear of alleged abuses and we have an active examination (audit) program," IRS spokesman Rod Young said.

IRS Commissioner Lawrence B. Gibbs has named an 18-member panel of non-government experts to advise him on problems of tax-exempt organizations. The panel's charter is broad enough to cover the more than 900,000 non-church organizations, ranging from the Boy Scouts to the Union Fork and Hoe Foundation, as well as the more than 300,000 churches.

The law and IRS regulations are weighted heavily in favor of churches. Unlike other non-profit organizations, they don't have to ask for an exemption and they are not required to file any kind of report with the IRS. A 1964 law imposes stiff requirements the IRS must meet when auditing churches.

In the four years ending in 1983, the IRS investigated an average of 50 per year and audited fewer than 30 a year, or one per 10,000. By comparison, about 175 of every 10,000 individual taxpayers were audited. A good share of the investigations involved not traditional churches but organizations the IRS suspected of seeking a tax dodge.

Boat Passenger Missing

WASHINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Authorities were searching Friday for a woman who fell overboard after the boat she and her husband were in hit a buoy, throwing her from the craft, authorities said.

Jimmy Raper, who is on the Beaufort County Board of Education, told authorities that he and his wife, Judy, were in their boat about 9:30 p.m. Thursday when she was flung overboard.

Michelle Lewis of the Beaufort County Sheriff's Department said Raper told authorities he went back to pick his wife up and he fell overboard. He swam to shore and called for help.

Mrs. Lewis said several rescue crews and a Coast Guard helicopter were searching for the woman.

Ray Trial

GREENSBORO (AP) — Greensboro lawyer William Ray and one co-defendant were found innocent Thursday after an 11-week federal money-laundering trial.

The third defendant, former U.S. Customs air officer David Jack Vogt Jr., was convicted of racketeering and impeding the Internal Revenue Service.

No sentencing date has been set for Vogt, who could receive 25 years in prison. Vogt, who has Canadian citizenship, has been in custody throughout the trial.

The jury of seven women and five men, which had deliberated since Monday in U.S. District Court, returned its verdict at 5:30 p.m.

Ray and Miami lawyer Burton R. Levey were found not guilty of impeding the IRS and helping Vogt launder as much as $800,000 in bribes from a drug smuggler. Vogt also was found not guilty of the money-laundering charge.

Boat Explosion

HATTERAS, N.C. (AP) — Two men were seriously burned Thursday afternoon when a 32-foot wood cabin cruiser exploded after refueling at Hatteras Marina, authorities said.

Chief Deputy Rodney Midgette of the Dare County Sheriff's Department said the boat, the Zola Fay, was at the dock at Hatteras Fishing Center at the time of the explosion. Three people were on the boat when it exploded, Midgette said, and they were thrown into the water.

Reagan: 'I Can Refuse' Democrats' Budget

By STEVEN KOMAROW
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd today called on President Reagan to "stop pointing his fingers" and instead compromise with Congress on the budget, but the president's budget director said no.

"The president ought to get off his hobby horse and stop pointing fingers," Byrd said today, reacting to Reagan's criticism of the Democrats' spending plan. Unless the president and Congress begin talking, it will be impossible to cut the record deficits of the Reagan years, he said.

"I'm beginning to think it's just a lost cause," said Byrd, D-W.Va.

James C. Miller III, director of the Office of Management and Budget, repeated the administration demand that Congress pass budget reforms that give the president more power.

"We need to sit down and talk about it, but ... we need rules of the game so if we get a budget it will be enforced," Miller said in an interview on NBC-TV's "Today" show.

"We don't want to give up something and have all that we've negotiated go down the tubes."

The president on Thursday issued a harsh statement and sent forth his aides to denounce the fiscal 1988 budget the Democrats produced. The $1 trillion plan envisions a $19.3 billion tax boost — $64.3 billion over three years — and attempts to put Reagan on the spot by tying that to a modest increase in defense spending.

"Their price for meeting our national security needs is this: for every $1 of defense it will cost $10 in new taxes," the president said in a statement. "That's an offer I can refuse."

"Our national defense is at risk, and we simply cannot agree to a plan that will plunge us into another decade of neglect," Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger said in a statement.

Reagan, seeking to turn public attention away from his administration's scandals in foreign policy, plans to begin a series of road trips next week. He's asking the public to pressure Congress to give him more control over the budget.

But Democrats blame the huge federal deficits on Reagan's unwillingness to work with Congress. During Reagan's tenure, the national debt has more than doubled to $2.3 trillion. Interest on that debt is expected to cost taxpayers $140 billion next year.

The Democrats note that Reagan's own budget included some $5 billion in tax boosts, and they contend that spending restraint must be combined with some tax increases to reduce the deficit. But they concede they can't pass those taxes over a presidential veto.

Reagan spokesman Marlin Fitz-dent don't agree on an adequate deficit-reduction plan.

The Democrats' budget plan — like Reagan's — would require more than $130 billion in new government borrowing next year, according to congressional estimates, and officials say those somewhat dated estimates are looking optimistic.

water, who also denounced the Democrats' plan, said the president wants more control over the budget process. A top priority would be the power to veto individual items in spending bills.

The administration on Thursday also began a policy of ignoring Congress' budget when considering whether to veto spending bills as too costly. Instead, the president's budget will be the only yardstick, Miller said in threatening vetoes of four pending money bills.

While it may be possible for Reagan to veto appropriations bills to hold down spending, lawmakers say he can't force Congress to pass more military spending by that strategy.

Witnesses Urge Banking Changes

By JOHN M. BERRY
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

WASHINGTON — Representatives from banking, the securities industry and the Federal Reserve Thursday told the Senate Banking Committee that major changes are needed in the nation's banking and securities laws. But they disagreed, as similar witnesses have for years, over what the changes should be.

people have questioned the wisdom of allowing the financial systems to be dominated by a few large financial giants. With the barriers gone, I don't have any doubt that there will be a lot fewer players in the long run. It has been a good thing that financial power has been split between two industries."

Wriston said U.S. banking laws have made American institutions less competitive.

Trying to force the president's hand, the Democrats are working to load onto the budget bill items they hope will shake Reagan from his no-tax strategy.

Besides the defense-taxes connection, the Democrats also took steps to attach to the bill an increase in the national debt that will be urgently needed by late July — and along with that they plan a still-forming proposal to strengthen the Gramm-Rudman deficit law.

Gramm-Rudman, which was weakened by a Supreme Court ruling, imposes across-the-board spending cuts if Congress and the presi-

Retired Citicorp chairman Walter B. Wriston held up American Express Co. as a model of the financial-services corporation of the future. American Express subsidiaries, he said, include the 49th-largest bank in the country, a major insurance company, a large securities dealer, its credit-card and travelers-check operations and other financial services.

Several federal and state agencies regulate American Express business activities. For example, the Securities and Exchange Commission oversees the company's compliance with requirements related to the issuance of stock. But there is no regulation of what American Express, as a holding company, may own. "It works," Wriston said repeatedly.

American Express is not regulated by the Federal Reserve as a bank holding company because the bank it owns, the Boston Safe Deposit & Trust Co., with assets of $7.8 billion, makes no commercial loans. Under federal law, such institutions are not considered full-service banks.

In contrast, E. Gerald Corrigan, president of the New York Federal Reserve Bank, told the Banking Committee it would be risky to allow commercial corporations to own financial institutions that accept federally insured deposits and can call upon the Federal Reserve as a "lender of last resort."

Corrigan, explaining a comprehensive banking-regulatory-reform proposal he made in January, said the Fed has an obligation "to ensure the safety and soundness" of financial institutions to which it may extend tens of billions of dollars worth of credit. Therefore, the central bank needs to make sure that banks and their owners are creditworthy. "There is government money at stake," he said.

Under Corrigan's proposal, holding companies owning banks would be allowed — as they generally are not under current federal law — to provide through subsidiaries a wide range of financial services, such as underwriting securities issues and operating mutual funds. Other companies could offer a full range of financial services apart from accepting insured deposits. A third group, including commercial companies, could also offer financial services but could not own banks.

John Weinberg, senior partner of Goldman, Sachs & Co., a New York investment-banking firm, declared, "If Congress elects to break down the barriers between commercial and investment banking and let our friends, the commercial banks, do everything — and I know they want to do everything we do — what will that mean for concentration? What will that mean for competition? And what will that mean for risk? This concerns me."

Weinberg added, "Since the founding of our country, the American

JFK Jr. Working As Clerk In U.S. Civil Rights Office

By PETE YOST
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — John F. Kennedy Jr., whose father, the slain president, became a hero to the civil rights movement, is starting a summer job under the Reagan administration's controversial civil rights chief, William Bradford Reynolds.

Kennedy, 26, began work Monday at the Justice Department's civil rights division as a $353-a-week summer law clerk.

The son of former President John F. Kennedy and nephew of the late attorney general, Robert F. Kennedy, is one of seven summer clerks in the honors program.

Reynolds, who has been an assistant attorney general in charge of the division since 1981, reversed long-standing desegregation policies in housing, education and hiring, some of which had been espoused by Democratic and Republican administrations as far back as Kennedy's.

This earned him the opposition of civil rights leaders and liberal Democrats in Congress.

Kennedy's uncle, Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., was among the leaders in a successful effort in 1985 to block Reynolds' promotion to the department's No. 3 job, associate attorney general.

In urging senators to vote against Reynolds' confirmation, Kennedy said, "In my view, Mr. Reynolds has done enough damage to civil rights at his current level in the Department of Justice, and he does not deserve to be promoted."

Reynolds personally made the final decision to hire the son of the former president, said Deborah Burstion-Wade, a spokeswoman for the civil rights division.

The younger Kennedy, a first-year law student at New York University, applied to the attorney general's honors program, which each year hires some of the "highest-ranking law students in the nation," Ms. Burstion-Wade said.

Kennedy and the other clerks will rotate through most of the civil rights division's sections, including those dealing with discrimination against the handicapped and in employment, housing, education and credit. He also could serve in the division's criminal section.

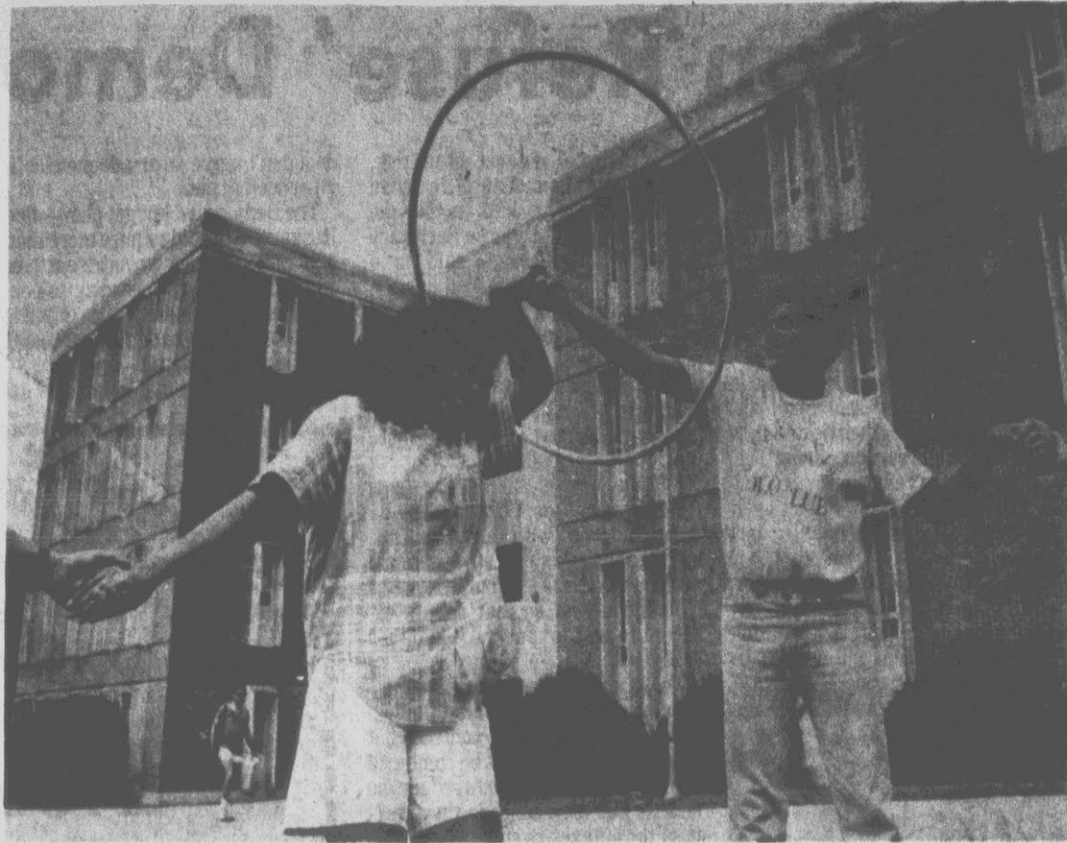

The clerks' duties include appearing in court to represent the government, conducting legal and policy research and assisting in the preparation of litigation.

Reynolds and his aides threw a party for the summer interns Wednesday and Reynolds has met all of them, including Kennedy.

Kennedy could not immediately be reached for comment.

Kennedy and the other six honors clerks were selected from several hundred honors applicants who expressed an interest in working in the civil rights division and who were hired earlier this year after interviews.

Hiring is based on grade point average, class rank, the quality of the law school, relative experience and participation in activities such as law review, Ms. Burstion-Wade said.

Collision Kills 18

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Eighteen people were killed and 84 injured today when a bus collided with a train at a railroad crossing, officials said.

The South African Transport Services said 13 of the injured were in serious condition. All the victims were black.

The transport service said the bus driver appeared to have fled the scene of the accident, but bus company officials later said they had been told the driver was admitted to a nearby hospital.

The accident occurred at 4:30 a.m. about 30 miles west of Pretoria along the border of Bophuthatswana, a tribal homeland the government considers independent.

The Rustenburg Bus Services vehicle collided at the road-level crossing with the first of two joined electric locomotives pulling freight cars, the South African Press Association reported. It said passenger trains do not use the line on which the accident occurred.

The front of the leading locomotive was damaged, SAPA said.

The news agency said that each year about 20 people are killed and 120 are injured in an average of 200 similar accidents at level crossings — places where roads and railways intersect. There are 3,300 such crossings remaining in the country and the government has spent about $3.75 million each year since 1960 constructing bridges, subways and detours around them, SAPA said.

Public and private parking areas throughout the city have designated spaces for handicapped citizens. Special dashboard permits and license plates may be purchased at the state license agency, 718 Dickinson Ave. Call 758-1193 for information.

Indian Conference Stresses Unity

Allison Locklear of Hoke County said she wants to show Indians in her county that they can become whatever they would like to be. "There are no Indians in important positions (in Hoke County)," she said. "If they are, they don't want to be known as Indians."

Elizabeth Smith said she wants to become a fashion model. "I haven't seen any Indian girls who have participated in (beauty) pageants," she said.

In another workshop session, Stanley Knick, director of the Native American Resource Center at Pembroke State University, led participants in a discussion of Indian traditions and symbols such as the peace pipe and feathers. The group also discussed religion, family culture and chants.

Thursday workshop sessions also covered drug and alcohol prevention, leadership and public speaking, drama and life skills.

Most of the North Carolina Indians attending the conference were Lumbees from the southeastern part of the state. However, some participants represented tribes from Oklahoma, Maryland and Michigan.

A pow wow Wednesday was held indoors in Memorial Gymnasium due to inclement weather. Entertainment included traditional tribal dancers and the Kah-Ta-Noh Society Singers.

The conference, sponsored by the N.C. Native American Youth Organization, N.C. Commission of Indian Affairs, ECU and N.C. Tribal Organizations, continued Friday.

Illinois City Alters Plan For Elections

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — A plan to scrap the city's form of government could open up new political opportunities for blacks, says a black resident who successfully challenged the current system as illegal under federal law.

City officials and lawyers representing blacks in their suit against the city on Thursday asked U.S. District Judge Harold Baker to accept a compromise phasing out the government and replacing it with a new one by 1991.

The settlement, which is subject to Baker's approval, would eliminate at-large elections for City Council. No black has been elected under the system, which dates back to 1911.

"For the last 75 years, we have not been fortunate enough to sit around the bargaining table," said Howard Veal, president of the Springfield Urban League and one of the plaintiffs in the class-action suit.

Blacks comprise about 11 percent of the state capital's 100,000 residents.

Baker ruled in January that the current at-large system dilutes black voting power in violation of the U.S. Voting Rights Act. He had threatened to impose a new government this week unless a settlement were reached.

Under the settlement, the current Council of a mayor and four commissioners elected at large would be replaced by a mayor and 10 aldermen elected from districts.

The district map would virtually assure the election of at least one black alderman, but Veal said the map alone would not guarantee political equality in Springfield.

"Black people in this community still have the responsibility to actively participate in the political process," he said. "If people do not register and people do not vote, there's very little impact that we can have."

Mayor Michael Houston warned that without a settlement, the city would face three to four years of costly appeals that would likely reach the U.S. Supreme Court.

"What this means is, once and for all, this lawsuit is behind the city of Springfield," he said before the Council endorsed the plan Thursday.

"There will be no more trauma, no more turmoil, no more costly litigation."

Under the current system, the commissioners run city departments.

The new plan calls for the at-large election this fall of three department heads and the election by district of 10 aldermen. Beginning in 1991, the department heads would be chosen by the mayor, subject to Council confirmation.

Baker set a July 16 hearing to consider objections to the proposal.

Some black residents complained when plaintiffs in the case agreed to allow, even temporarily, at-large election of department heads.

Expert Says TV Distorts Religion

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — By buying into television, the "electronic church" is victimized because TV presents a distorted version of biblical faith, a noted church communication expert says.

Analyzing the predominant preachments and appeals of TV ministers, the Rev. William F. Fore says they play up self-interest.

They make religion the "key to maximizing self-interest," he says, obscuring the biblical demands for community, justice and service.

In a new book, "Television and Religion," published by Augsburg Press, Fore says:

"This corruption of the fundamental biblical concept of conscience into self-interest is perhaps the most serious of all the electronic church's distortions."

With it comes a variety of others, he says, including:

— The "give-to-get ploy," promising contributors will get back more than they give, sometimes called "seed faith," planting dollars to get more in return.

Fore calls it a kind of "heavenly lottery."

— A "strong dualism" that separates everything into light and darkness, spirit and matter, good and evil — an ancient Christian heresy.

"It is rampant on TV religion," Fore says.

— Highlighting of belief by celebrities and successful people, implying that if viewers believe things also will be wonderful for them, and when it isn't, pushing them into self-doubt and alienation.

"The 'successful people' approach is bad psychology as well as bad theology," Fore says.

— Promises of earthly rewards for believers, suggesting they have power to get whatever they desire, so long as they have faith, akin to another ancient heresy.

— The "fallacy of nominalism," that simply to affirm the name of the Lord Jesus Christ is to be saved.

This "fits in nicely with the electronic church's emphasis on the individual," Fore writes.

"At almost every point the underlying theology of the electronic church is at odds with the theologies of the mainline churches," he says.

Fore, a United Methodist minister and long-time communications executive of National Council of Churches, blames the biblical distortions mainly on the demands of television itself.

Television has cultivated a "taste and expectation for instant gratification and simple answers," Fore says, adding:

"The electronic church has had to fall in line, providing trivial and superficial religion, a quick fix to people's anxieties."

He says the TV preachers also have had to succumb to the industry's requirements of effective techniques, whatever psychological or other selling gambits will work and draw audiences.

"Whatever maximizes self-interest works," he says, which is why the electronic church is so "phenomenally successful in fund raising and growth... Its message is finally one of self-interest."

TV religion also pulls out all the accompanying techniques such as slogans, pop songs, the bandwagon, "glad names" and "bad names," Fore says, adding:

"Every technique basic to advertising is part of the stock in trade of the electronic church, which is, indeed, selling something people don't need — a magical 'God'."

Fore exempts evangelist Billy Graham from the criticisms of the electronic church, pointing out that Graham uses television critically, only bringing in cameras to cover some of his crusades.

"He has always kept his distance from the television mold," Fore said in an interview. "He's done that either intuitively or otherwise, not letting it swallow him up. He also has handled his finances completely differently."

Despite the faults Fore sees in TV ministries generally, he credits them for bringing out the "spiritual hunger of millions" that regular churches generally have not reached.

"The television evangelists understand that people are hurting because they feel ignored and not needed, because they are often treated like commodities," he says.

PHARISEES AND SADDUCEES...

THE TWO MOST IMPORTANT POLITICAL PARTIES IN ANCIENT JERUSALEM, THEY WERE DIRECTLY OPPOSED TO ONE ANOTHER IN MATTERS OF SPIRITUAL FAITH—THE PHARISEES BELIEVED IN THE IMMORTALITY OF THE SOUL AND IN THE RESURRECTION OF THE BODY—IN OPPOSITION, THE SADDUCEES DENIED ANY LIFE AFTER DEATH OR RESURRECTION, ASSERTING THAT THE SOUL DIED WITH THE BODY—ALTHOUGH OPPOSING EACH OTHER IN MOST MATTERS, THE PHARISEES AND THE SADDUCEES CAME TOGETHER ON THE MATTER OF JESUS OF NAZARETH AND PLOTTED TOGETHER TO BRING ABOUT HIS DOWNFALL!

AS JOHN THE BAPTIST CALLED THEM, "A GENERATION OF VIPERS" (MATT. 3:7) SO JESUS CALLED THEM AS HE WARNED THE DISCIPLES AGAINST THEM. AND AFTER THE CRUCIFIXION, THE PHARISEES AND SADDUCEES JOINED WITH THE PRIESTS AND THE CAPTAIN OF THE TEMPLE IN THE ACT OF PERSECUTING PETER AND JOHN (ACTS 4:1-22). ALSO, BOTH PHARISEES AND THE SADDUCEES WERE IN THE SANHEDRIN WHICH TRIED PAUL, BUT THIS APOSTLE, TAKING NOTE OF THE FACT THAT THEY WERE OF TWO OPINIONS, CLEVERLY SET THEM AT ARGUING WITH EACH OTHER, SO VIOLENTLY, THAT THE CHIEF CAPTAIN OF THE ROMANS HAD PAUL REMOVED BEFORE ANY HARM SHOULD COME TO HIM BEFORE HE ARRIVED AT HIS TRIAL IN ROME. (ACTS 23:6-10)

Lady Bird Johnson Goes To Wall With Flowers

By BETH SHERMAN
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

NEW YORK — During her years in the White House, Lady Bird Johnson was asked her opinion about politics, women's rights, ecology and Vietnam.

But on a recent visit to New York, the question most asked of her was this: Did you ever think you'd be pushing wallpaper?

The former First Lady was in town to unveil a new collection of wall coverings and fabrics designed by the Hinson Collections. Called "Wildflowers of America," it features 14 patterns adorned with such blooms as poppies, forget-me-nots and cornflowers. The collection was "inspired" by Johnson, who is passionately devoted to the care and propagation of wildflowers. Under a licensing agreement, part of the proceeds from sales of the papers and fabrics will benefit the National Wildflower Research Center in Austin, Texas, which Johnson founded in 1982.

Why the interest in wildflowers as opposed to more cultivated, formal flora?

"I'm in love with this country's natural face," Johnson said. "I want to keep the fields of Texas looking like Texas and Maine looking like Maine. I don't believe in a homogenized landscape."

At a luncheon held to honor Johnson in Hinson's Manhattan showroom last week, the former first lady wore an Adele Simpson dress the color of bachelor buttons and reminisced about her childhood, her years in the White House and her own gardening efforts.

Growing up in the rural town of Karnac, Texas, Johnson said she spent most of her time out-of-doors, "roaming the piney woods" down by the river.

"As a child, I was left to my own devices," she said. "My mother died when I was five, and since there was no woman of the house, we didn't have a formal family garden."

Over the years, Johnson came to learn a great deal about the hardest survivors of the fields. She knows, for instance, that clover will grow only if the blossoms are pollinated by bumblebees, that the roots of fringed gentian make a good spring tonic, that fuchsia is easily reached by hummingbirds.

During her time in the White House, she traveled extensively and contributed greatly to the beautification of the American landscape. But today, she says, she does not miss those years at all.

"When you're there, you give it all you've got," she said. "But you never lose track of the time. You're always aware that you have three more years or two more years or four more months left (in office)."

These days, nature, she said, is a "source of joy, something to lean on as I go through life."

At the luncheon, Johnson passed around snapshots of the meadows surrounding the LBJ ranch outside Austin, where she lives. The photographs showed fields punctuated with Mexican white poppies and fiery red and yellow galdardia. Though Johnson has a special affinity for Texas wildflowers, the wallpaper and fabric patterns encompass blossoms from all over the country. There are brilliant poppies from California and delicate bunchberries from Alaska and gorgeous Indian paintbrush from the Rocky Mountains.

All of the flowers are depicted in their authentic colors, as well as in a number of other shades.

"Mrs. Johnson was quite involved in the whole (designing) process," Harry Hinson said. "She acted as a consultant, telling us which flowers were traditional and which were more modern-looking."

The fabrics are made of glazed cotton and linen and range from $36 to $48 a yard. The wall coverings and accompanying borders are strip-pable and washable; they range from $30 to $75 for a single roll. Beginning next week, the collection will be available through interior designers and architects, department stores such as Bloomingdale's and Lord & Taylor, and select paint and wallpaper stores. Each pattern is named after friends or members of the Johnson family. "Rebekah" (named for Lyndon Johnson's mother) re-creates a sunny meadow blooming with trout lilies, corn poppies and blue flax. "Lynda" (the elder Johnson daughter) features delicate dutchman's breeches, pickerelweed and rabbit foot clover. "Claudia" (named after Johnson, who was christened Claudia Alta Taylor) is splashed with bright blossoms framed in a diamond trellis. And "Helen" (named for Helen Hayes) is an open airy arrangement of graceful stemmed pinks.

The actress, who is the co-chairman of the National Wildflower Research Center, also attended the luncheon and recalled when she first caught the wildflower "bug."

"I can picture a little girl of eight, a trooper with a theatrical company, going out on the road in a train," said Hayes. "The tour always ended in the Southwest, in Texas and New Mexico, where I would look out the window at great fields of color and wonder. It's the fairy tale side of my life."

Nash Castro, president of the research center, had a more practical view. "Wildflowers require very little care," he said. "Once planted they survive on their own. They're a practical, low-maintenance way of landscaping."

The function of the Wildflower Research Center, Castro said, is threefold:

- To encourage the use of native plants.
- To act as a clearinghouse for information on the 25,000 wildflower species in the United States.
- To conduct research on their conservation and cultivation.

"When our forebears settled North America, they were greeted by a vast array of wildflowers," wrote Johnson in the collection's sample book. "As civilization advanced, many of our wildflowers retreated. ... While recognizing that we cannot turn back the clock, we know that we can help assure that our grandchildren will know the special magic of a mountain meadow dotted with alpine forget-me-nots and the brilliant Persian carpet of bluebonnets, phlox and Indian paintbrush."

Should Shopper Be Told To Pay For Cigarettes?

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I saw a young woman slip a pack of cigarettes into her purse while shopping at a market. She did this quite openly, so we thought she intended to pay for them, but after she unloaded her groceries, she didn't bring out the cigarettes. The cashier rang up her groceries, dog food, etc., which she paid for with food stamps, then she left with the cigarettes in her purse — unpaid for.

We asked the cashier if that woman shopped there often, and she said, yes, she had seen her before. Then we told her about the cigarettes and she said we should have said something to the woman before she got to the checkout counter.

Abby, if we had said something to her before we got to the checkout counter, she could have said she intended to pay for them. Or should we have told the cashier about it before the woman got to the checkout counter? What would you have done? — HUNTINGTON BEACH COUPLE

DEAR COUPLE: I would have quietly "reminded" the absentminded shopper to pay for the cigarettes as soon as I saw her put them in her purse.

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem I've been struggling with for years. During my childhood I was sexually abused repeatedly by my grandfather — he's my mother's father. I realize that I was a victim, but I still carry a lot of guilt and shame. Although my mother and I have always been very close, I never could bring myself to tell her. I know that Mom thinks the world of her father so I kept it from her to spare her feelings. (How do you tell your mother that her father molested you? He is still alive.)

I think I may need counseling to get over my feelings of anger and guilt. But should I involve my mother? Would it make me feel better or worse? I am terribly confused. What should I do? — CAUGHT IN THE MIDDLE

DEAR CAUGHT: You need counseling. Perhaps the person who should be confronted is your grandfather. He needs to know that you are still hurting and feeling guilty for something that HE did. It's also possible that there are others in your family who were also abused by your grandfather, and need help as much as you. Call a social service agency in your area and inquire about counseling. There are also support groups for adults who have been sexually abused as children. Please get professional help today, and then decide who should be involved.

Allergy Sufferers Urged To Take Advantage Of Improved Treatment

By JOHN NOLAN
Associated Press Writer

CINCINNATI (AP) — Sufferers of asthma and allergies who fail to take the ailments seriously or seek treatment increase the risk of death, reports an organization that is promoting awareness of the problem.

With the improved medical treatment and drugs available to treat allergies, victims of such ailments should not have to suffer and take unacceptable risks, the Asthma and Allergy Foundation of America states.

The national rate of asthma deaths increased by 23 percent from 1980 to 1985, to 1.6 deaths per 100,000 people, says Richard Remmy, executive director of the foundation's Cincinnati chapter.

"That's staggering," Remmy says. "With all the modern treatment, better programs and better allergists, people shouldn't be dying... Many people either don't take asthma or the allergic diseases seriously, and they should."

On a less dramatic level, allergic diseases can mean chronic suffering for victims and can keep young sufferers out of school. Remmy says 130 million school days were lost nationally in 1986 because of asthma and other allergic diseases.

Between 1979 and 1983, the allergy death rate increased by 47 percent for black males, 42 percent for black females, 10 percent for white males and 33 percent for white females, Remmy says.

"That's terrible stuff," he adds. "It doesn't have to be that way if the people can obtain proper care, either through their allergist or through a university allergy treatment center with a medical card."

He said $1 billion is spent yearly on asthma medication in the United States. There are 30 to 35 brands of non-prescription antihistamines available to treat allergic symptoms. Sufferers can try these prior to visiting a doctor, Remmy says.

Remmy's agency serves as an information and referral service for allergy sufferers in Ohio, West Virginia, Kentucky and Indiana.

Recipe For Style: Add Dash To Workwear

WEEKEND WORKS — Taking widely available workwear, a creative group of design students at New York's Fashion Institute of Technology embellished them for a design competition. Originally a '60s fad, this latest trend has an '80s flair. Uniforms, from doctors' scrubs to workmen's overalls, are popping up at colleges and nightclubs everywhere. At left, this basic hospital candystriper has been given a fresh new look with the addition of a crinoline pouf and a brightly dyed oversized lab coat. At right, a classic waiter's uniform becomes weekend wear with added shoulder pads, knitted cowl and cuffs and decorative buttons; the trousers have been tapered and quilted.

Wedding Vows Said At Noon

LINCOLNTON — The noon wedding of Eva Marie Clewell of Maiden and Gordon Thomas Walker of Greenville was held in Boger City United Methodist Church Saturday.

Parents of the couple are the Rev. and Mrs. Edward M. Walker of Greenville and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Clewell of Maiden.

The parents of the bride gave her in marriage and the father of the bridegroom conducted the double ring ceremony.

The bride wore a gown of white satin with silk Venise lace trim. It had a fitted bodice trimmed in lace and seed pearls. The long tapered sleeves were puffed at the shoulder and trimmed in lace, lattice appliques and seed pearls. It had a high neckline encircled by illusion and the back bodice was accented with lace and satin-covered buttons to the waist. The A-line skirt was enhanced with lattice appliques in lace with seed pearls and sequin trim. The cathedral train was accented with a center panel of set-in lattice lace applique trimmed in seed pearls and sequins. It had a full scalloped hem trimmed in lace, seed pearls and sequins.

Her multi-tiered illusion veil was attached to a crown of silk flowers and seed pearls. Her bouquet was a cascade of peach sweetheart roses, stephanotis, sterling star and gypsophila.

The maid of honor was Cecelia Queen of Gastonia. Bridesmaids were Lisa Walker, sister-in-law of the bridegroom, and Phoebe Caldwell, both of Greenville, Elizabeth Wolfe of Charlotte, and Barbara Smith of Wilmington.

Each attendant wore a tea length dress of deep peach taffeta overlaid with lace. Each dress had a round neckline, long sleeves, a full skirt and a fitted bodice. Each attendant carried a nosegay of peach miniature carnations, lavender refours, daisies and gypsophila.

Ushers were Robert Clewell II of Maiden, brother of the bride, Garry Smith, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, David Tambling, Reid Tripp Jr. and James Caldwell, all of Greenville, and Mike Overton of Raleigh.

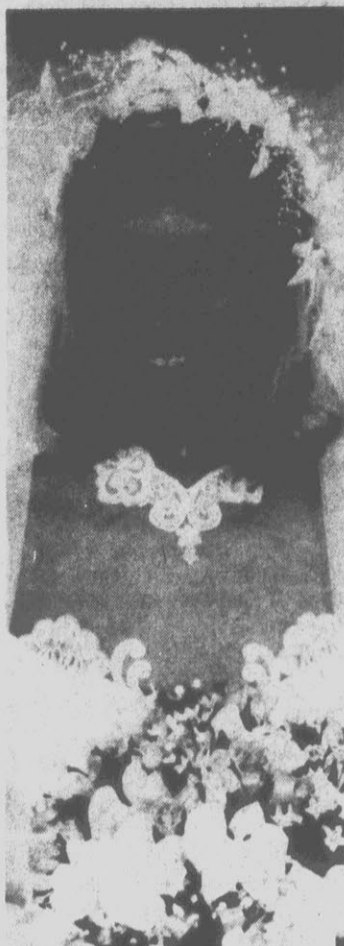

The organist was Jeanne Walker and the pianist was Tim Jackson. Pam Smith, sister of the bridegroom, sang a solo and she and Edward M. Walker Jr., brother of the bridegroom, sang a duet.

A reception following the wedding was held in the Glen Oaks Country Club in Maiden. Hosts were the bride's parents.

A rehearsal dinner was hosted at the country club by the parents of the bridegroom. Several showers and cookouts were given for the couple by friends.

After a wedding trip to Atlanta and Cancun, Mexico, the couple will live in Greenville.

The bridegroom is manager of National Mail Service of Greenville. He attended Campbell University and East Carolina University. The bride is a graduate of the University of North Carolina at Charlotte.

Women Who Settled The West

By MARNI MCENTEE
Associated Press Writer

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Tales of the intrepid men who settled the West have enthralled Americans for more than a century. But traditional accounts tell only half the story.

Women were partners in the struggle, venturing across the Mississippi with or without men. At best, they were given a supporting role in most history books, according to the editors of a new book, "The Women's West."

"If women were there at all, they don't exist as major characters," said co-editor Elizabeth Jameson. "They were the school marm or the nice ladies of the church, sort of off in the background somewhere."

Or, they were the loose women with hearts of gold, the "Miss Kitty" of the local saloon, instead of the very poor, desperate women who sometimes sold their favors in tents that dotted the rough-and-ready cattle towns of the Old West.

The book, published by the University of Oklahoma Press, is a compilation of 21 essays that explore and often puncture such popular myths. All but one of the accounts are written by women.

Their subjects range from prostitution in Butte, Mont., to child rearing on the mining frontier, to Army officers' perceptions of Indian women, to the images of women and men in cowboy art.

Several of the articles are based on those presented at the first Women's West Conference in Sun Valley, Idaho, in 1983, which also inspired the creation of the Coalition for Western Women's History. The second Women's West conference will be in San Francisco August 13-16.

Jameson and co-editor Susan Armitage acknowledge that their work is a revisionist history, relying on the diaries of pioneer women and interviews with them, rather than newspapers and archives.

"I really did think there wasn't much material. Then when I realized how much there was, I really was mad," said Armitage, history professor and director of the American Studies Department at Washington State University.

Women often were the first to initiate public projects such as schools and churches, and were active in women's literary and social clubs. Those clubs were the first to take on the challenge of lobbying for suffrage.

However, most 19th century settlers clung to the Victorian tradition of separate domains for women and men. Men moved freely in the public sphere and women, after establishing the beginnings of education and religious systems, were ushered back to the shadows. Their public history was left unreported, the authors contend.

"A lot of Westerners really want to understand how their particular region developed. They want to know how the earliest settlers coped with all the day-to-day things," Armitage said. "That's the real story. That's the challenge for the social historian — how to present that in a compelling way."

Daily living was just as daunting as doing battle with Indians or a harsh and hostile environment. "It's really hard to build a farm without much water, or to go underground and mine every day," Jameson said. "It was as heroic and courageous as getting up and going to a job every day."

Pioneer women usually outlived their husbands, who often died from job-related hazards such as silicosis, a lung disease. Most didn't understand why the editors wanted to talk to them because they had been made to feel their share of the past was somehow incidental.

Jameson interviewed 88-year-old May Wing nine years ago in the gold mining town of Cripple Creek, Colo. Wing, who talked for hours about the women's role in the strike of 1904-05, had kept mum for half a century because the one-time union town had become a company town.

"They never told their kids, because as long as someone in their family was working in the mines it was dangerous to share that history because the men could lose their jobs. But they didn't want their stories to be lost," Jameson said.

Armitage recalls similar experiences.

"I think oral history is terrific, especially for women," she said. "It allows them to talk about their own lives in ways that they usually don't and that they certainly are not accustomed to thinking of as being history. Somehow you've sort of given a woman's life back to her."

The book also discusses the lowly status of minority women on the new frontier, some of whom lived with or married white settlers. Their names always are absent in obituaries or wedding announcements, where they were referred to as "an Indian woman," or "a Mexican woman."

Jameson, 40, a doctoral candidate in American culture at the University of Michigan, lives in Colorado with her 11-month-old son and two teenage daughters.

Pitt County provided the two-acre site for the house, while the fund-raising drive has engendered support ranging from the volunteer work of school children to generous gifts from major corporations.

TONY PRICE

A "Buy-A-Mini-Brick" campaign sponsored by the Pitt-Greenville school system raised $18,000 for the cause, while another $25,000 came from a trust established by residents of Kenansville for Ashley Quinn, a child who died while waiting for a liver transplant.

McDonald's Restaurants donated $225,000; the Kate B. Reynolds Health Care Trust of Winston-Salem, $100,000; Branching Banking and Trust, $50,000, and Belk-Tyler Stores, $15,000.

In-kind contributions were provided by many other area businesses, including bricks from Cherokee Sanford Group and carpeting from Dupont and Fieldcrest Mills.

The Eastern Carolina Celebrity Golf Classic, initiated in 1984, has raised $100,000 for the house over the past three years. Future proceeds from the annual tournament will be applied to house operating expenses.

"I wish it were possible to list the source of every dollar raised and every minute of volunteer effort directed to this cause," Sue Moffitt, president of the Ronald McDonald House, said.

"This house represents the culmination of so much hard work and so much love. I hope the public will join us as we dedicate this special place on Father's Day."

Floyd Strong, Crenshaw Stronger

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Ray Floyd began the defense of his U.S. Open title with a dream round of golf.

But, still, he fell one stroke short of matching Ben Crenshaw's 3-under-par 67, a score which was posted early in Thursday's first round and remained atop the leader board at day's end.

"I set a target of 70. But when I went to the practice tee and the wind was light, I knew I had to take advantage of an early starting time," Crenshaw said. "I was three ahead of my target."

He did it with the help of two monstrous birdie putts, from 60 and 35 feet, on the back nine and despite a double-bogey 6 at the 14th hole.

Crenshaw labeled both big putts "no-brainers" and added, "You don't expect those things in a U.S. Open. They negated my double bogey."

The 35-year-old Texan, who won the 1984 Masters title, got off to his best start ever in a U.S. Open. The closest he's come to winning was a third-place finish in 1975.

He begins the second round over the Olympic Club's 6,709-yard Lake Course with a one-stroke lead over Floyd, Spain's Seve Ballesteros and Japanese star Tommy Nakajima. Foreign golfers Denis Watson (Zimbabwe), Nick Price (South Africa) and Bernhard Langer (West Germany) were at 69, and four-time champion Jack Nicklaus was with Bob Tway, Scotland's Sandy Lyle and six others at 70.

"I played the kind of round you dream about in a U.S. Open. I reached 16 greens in regulation," Floyd said.

"I went out there with the idea that, no matter what, I was going to enjoy my walk around the Olympic Club as the defending champion."

"It was more enjoyable than I could have imagined, because I haven't played as good a round of golf since last year's Open."

The weather, cool and calm, remained virtually unchanged through the opening round.

"The course was very forgiving, after those practice rounds in the wind and sun. We got lucky with the overcast and fog," Floyd said.

Neither Floyd, 44, nor Nicklaus, 47, have come close to winning a tournament this year.

A three-putt bogey-5 on the closing hole prevented Nicklaus from joining the group under 70.

"I didn't really object to that much. I had made my fair share of putts," said Nicklaus, who in hope of regaining his winning touch on the greens switched recently to a putter he'd put away a few years ago.

He made several birdie and par-saving putts ranging from five to 20 feet Thursday.

"After I made a 15-footer for a birdie at the 15th, I said, 'This is someone I'm not familiar with.'"

Crenshaw's 67 was his fourth consecutive Open round under 70. He opened with a 75 on a stormy Thursday last year at New York's Shinnecock Hills, then posted 69s the last three days to finish in a tie for sixth, four strokes behind Floyd.

Crenshaw had never seen the Olympic layout before arriving over the weekend to begin practice.

"I'm still trying to get to know the course. It's a very stern test. Gosh, it's difficult," Crenshaw said Thursday.

Those finding it a lot more difficult were such former Open champs as Johnny Miller, Tom Watson, Lee Trevino and Fuzzy Zoeller. Miller had two double-bogeys in a round of 71 while Watson came in at 72, Trevino 73 and Zoeller 78.

Australia's Greg Norman, the reigning British Open champ, opened with a 72.

Crenshaw has won over $2.5 million in 15 years on the pro tour, but the Masters title is his only one in one of golf's major championships.

"I couldn't describe how important it would be to me to win another," he said Thursday. "Doing it once was tremendous, but I'd love to do it again."

Trees Are Taking Beating At Open

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The trees are taking a beating at the U.S. Open.

The assault hasn't led to any complaints yet from environmentalists but it has brought a few sympathetic smiles from duffers in the gallery who have clipped a few branches themselves.

The Open began on a chilly, Bloody-Mary Thursday morning as the branches of towering cypress trees hugging the skinny fairways poked menacingly into the fog. Fans sipped their drinks and tramped into the tall, wet rough to see how the pros get out of trouble.

Joey Sindelar gave a fine example on the 10th hole after his drive knocked off some leaves and plunked down five yards outside the ropes on the right of the fairway, about 175 yards from the green.

Sindelar lifted his next shot over the branches of a 50-foot cypress, and got enough distance to reach the green and make par.

Gary Hallberg was equally fortunate on the eighth, where a tree played a critical role in changing the leadership of the 1985 U.S. Open.

Hallberg hit a cypress on the right of the green, but the ball dropped onto the friendly carpet below and he two-putted for par.

Thirty-two years ago, San Francisco amateur Harvie Ward wasn't so lucky. He was near the lead in the third round when he hit into the tree and the ball didn't come down. He took a penalty stroke on the way to a double bogey and never threatened again, finishing the round at 76 and the tournament in seventh place.

The ball, incidentally, fell out of the tree a week later.

There are 40,000 trees on the Olympic Club's Lake Course, and dozens of them were victimized on Thursday. A 25-foot branch behind the 15th green crashed down, apparently from the wind, although there were some suspicions that it might have been loosened by a wild shot.

Golf balls bounced off trunks, snapped branches or scattered leaves, and there were plenty of golfers who didn't escape easily.

Mark Brooks lost a ball in a tree on the 11th. Larry Mize bounced one off a tree on the 14th and had to dig it out of the deep rough. On the 16th, Mize fared better. His second shot careened off a tree trunk way off the fairway and came back onto the fairway.

Bob Tway hit into trees on the right of the ninth fairway and on the left of the 10th fairway.

"I don't think there'll be too many golfers who will escape this week without hitting at least a few trees," Tway said.

Tulane To Renew Play

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Tulane University's Board of Administrators has approved a sweeping proposal calling for reinstatement of men's basketball and a five-year, $25-million fund-raising campaign for all sports.

"It was time that we either fished or cut bait in sports," W. Kennon McWilliams, chairman of the board's athletic committee, said Thursday. "The board decided to go fishing."

Dr. Eamon Kelly, Tulane's president, discontinued basketball on April 4, 1985, because of a point-shaving scandal and admitted NCAA violations.

Since then, virtually every top-level sports administrator at the school has either resigned or retired and the program is now under the leadership of Athletic Director Mack Brown, who also is head football coach.

Kelly called Thursday's developments "significant," but he did not mention the return of men's basketball.

The board ordered McWilliams' athletic committee to prepare a five-year plan to make a national championship contender out of Tulane's athletic program, which has operated without a deficit just twice in the past 20 years.

Though the 92-page report authorized the fund-raising only after a feasibility study and the reinstatement of men's basketball under Kelly's direction, McWilliams said the board's intentions were clear.

"It's part of the normal process to do a study when you're raising a lot of money, but we're going to do it," McWilliams said. "We've already raised pledges for about $5 million just from the athletic committee's efforts."

"And basketball is part of the package," he said.

Snow Hill Edges Edenton, 14-12

SNOW HILL — Gary Ginn and T.J. Johnson both went 3-4 to lead Snow Hill past Edenton, 14-12, in an American Legion baseball game Thursday.

Snow Hill trailed 4-2 heading into the bottom of the fourth but pushed across six runs in the inning to take the lead for good.

Tommy Eason started things off with a single. Uly Russ followed with another base hit before Richie Britt knocked in Eason. Johnson followed that with a walk to load the bases.

Gary Ginn then hit a two-run single to make it 5-4. Shay Beaman finished off the scoring in the inning with a three-run homer to make it 8-4.

Snow Hill pushed across two more runs in the sixth and four more in the seventh to make it 14-4.

Edenton tried to rally in the final two innings, pushing across four runs in both the eighth and the ninth to pull within 14-12 but that was as close as they would get.

Roger Smith, Beaman, Eason and Russo had two hits apiece for Snow Hill.

Woody Stetson went 3-4 for Edenton.

Snow Hill travels to Pitt County for a double-header tonight.

State Could Have Fast Relay

With the U.S. Olympic Festival only weeks away, most of the athletes are in their final stages of preparation, but East Carolina sprinters Lee Vernon and Eugene McNeill still don't even know whether they will be competing.

The track and field teams from the four regions of the country, unlike most of the festival's other sports, are chosen on the basis of performance at the TAC (Track Athletic Conference) Meet June 24-26.

East Carolina track coach Bill Carson has what he thinks would be a natural promotional winner as well as a potentially championship-caliber 4x100 meter relay team composed exclusively of North Carolina-based runners.

The team would feature the McNeills along with Danny Peebles of N.C. State and Harvey McSwain, a former NCSU runner.

"We're sitting here with a lot of hope that Lee and Eugene will run in the Olympic Festival, especially (since it is) here in North Carolina," Carson said. "(It would be) a natural thing to sell tickets and really promote something in North Carolina."

"You would have Eugene lead off the 4x100, with Lee Vernon second, Danny Peebles of N.C. State third and Harvey McSwain, who graduated from N.C. State last year, anchoring. I guarantee you we could run in the low 38.00s. (The United States mark in this event is 37.43). That could be a winner and that would be all four kids from North Carolina. It would be a natural. It'd be a great thing to promote."

But because of the regional qualifying constraints set up by the TAC, it likely will never take place, according to Carson.

Qualifying for the four regional teams (north, south, west and east) is determined by performance at the TAC meet, for which one must qualify to be invited. The top two from each region in the 200 meters and the top four in the 100 meters are the sprinters chosen for each of the teams. The 4x100 relay team is chosen from those six.

"At the NCAAs, I was sitting there and I opened up the entry sheets and I had all the kids listed in the 100 meters," Carson said. "There were 28 athletes entered. Twenty of the 28 were from the South."

Competing for the sprinting positions on the South team are some of the biggest names in track and field today. Carl Lewis, Mark Witherspoon, Wallace Spearman and Harvey Glance are just a few of the sprinters trying out for the South team.

"You have got one sprinter that has qualified for TAC out of the entire East. That's Lee McRae. (Who, ironically is from Pembroke, N.C.) He's the only one that has even qualified (in the East)."

The North, which in reality comprises the Midwest, will send only four sprinters to the TAC while the West will send only a few itself with the majority of sprinters coming from the South, according to Carson.

Because of the disproportionate number of runners from the country's other regions, Carson feels his sprinters may not get a chance to even compete in the Olympic Festival.

"Normally they (the TAC) would take the top two out of the 200 meters and then the top four 100-meter relay runners to run the 4x100 meters (for each of the four regional teams)," he said. "You can see the fallacy of it. You won't have but one sprinter from the East in that meet and that's McRae. That means now they have to go and find some kids from the East and invite them to the Olympic Festival that can't even make the (qualifying times for) the TAC championships."

"They are going to be kids that Eugene and Lee stomped up there at the IC4As... and yet, we run a good risk of being left at home because we have to compete against one out of 20 when they don't even have to compete. I'm saying what they have to do is take the top eight out of each event. Let's take the regional concept and throw it away. It's antiquated. It's wrong."

Carson plans to lobby his point later this month at the meetings which coincide with the TAC meet. He says he has the support of some of the college coaches but not from the coaches of the big-name track clubs.

"I'll tell you right now, Lee is going to make the team because he is going to make the finals of TAC," Carson said. "Eugene has a chance but he's got a tougher chance. What I really want Eugene to do at the Olympic Festival is lead off the relay. And they could do that. They could pick him. They can pick any relay team that they want."

Carson feels it would be a case of a wasted opportunity if these four were unable to compete in the 4x100 relay because they have a good deal of potential.

Lee Vernon, Eugene and Peebles were members of their respective schools' NCAA qualifying 4x100 relay team this past season. McSwain was one of the top sprinters in the ACC during his collegiate career.

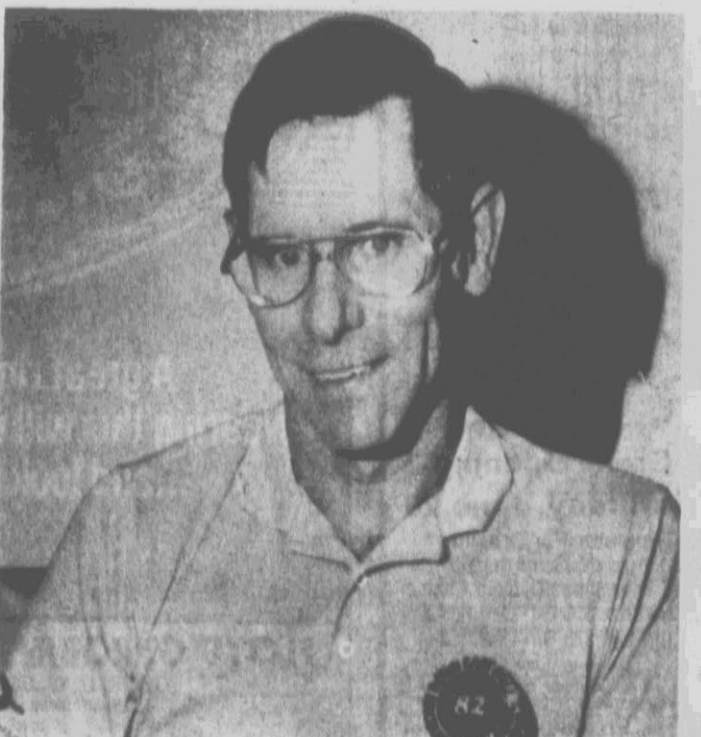

"Danny Peebles is flying right now," he said. "Eugene and Lee are flying. We'll take on any three people in the country that want to come to the Olympic Festival and run it. McSwain is running well but he is not running as well as he was last year. But I guarantee you that if you give Harvey McSwain the baton on the anchor leg and he will run out of his tree. He is a great relay runner."

"That would be three born and raised North Carolina kids in the Olympic Festival. We could win it right here in the state of North Carolina, but politics won't let that happen."

Carson also said he thinks that the McNeills should also be given a chance to compete for the East, since that is their main area of competition during the collegiate season and also since their championship each season is the IC4As in Philadelphia.

"(If) you don't want us to run for the South, let us run for the East. Our conference is in the East," he said. "Let Lee, Eugene and McRae run on the relay and I'll run on the other leg."

"I think it's shame when we set meets up on a very firm basis and let finances mess it up and politics decides who goes."

Moye Second In North State

RALEIGH — Greenville's Simon Moye won a sudden death playoff on the fourth hole to take second place in the North State Junior golf tournament, held at Wake Forest Country Club.

Matt Crichton of Cary took first place in the event, firing his third straight 75 for a 225 total in the 54-hole tournament. Moye, who had led after the second round, finished a stroke back at 226 along with Stan Jones of Halifax, Va.

Crichton caught Moye on the second hole, the players' 11th, when Moye took a bogey to Crichton's par. Moye was never able to move ahead again.

In the playoff for second place, Jones scrambled for a par on the first hole and the two matched shots on the next two to remain tied. Then, at the fourth, a 204-yard par-3, Moye hit a 4-iron within 25 feet and holed out from there while Jones had to settle for a par.

Bernazard, Tribe Making Changes

By The Associated Press
 Tony Bernazard's season has mirrored that of the Cleveland Indians. The second baseman has struggled at the plate and his teammates, who batted an American League-high .284 last year, have followed suit.
 But things might be turning around for both Bernazard and the Indians. Bernazard went 4-for-4 and Cleveland got home runs from Carmen Castillo, Chris Bando and Cory Snyder in a 7-5 victory Thursday night over the Boston Red Sox. The Indians have scored 60 runs in their last 10 games.
 "Once you've hit .300, you want to keep doing it," said Bernazard, who had two singles, a double and a triple and scored a run. "How can you be happy with .216 — which was what I was hitting going into this game — especially after the season I had last year and the year before?"

 Bernazard batted .301 last season and .274 the previous year. He's now hitting .231.
 Bernazard has had soreness in a tendon in his right wrist since spring training. By compensating for that, he also developed similar problems in his left wrist.
 "I worked to build up my strength during the off-season, but then I got this injury," he said. "Who knows what I could be doing if I was healthy?"
 Still, he has eight homers and driven in 23 runs and is on a pace to beat his career-best 17 homers of last year.

 "What good does it do if you hit 20 homers but only hit .220?" he said. "It is frustrating. I want to get more RBIs, and sometimes if you hit for average you can extend some rallies."
 Elsewhere, it was New York 6, Baltimore 3; Milwaukee 6, Toronto 3; and Kansas City 10, California 4.
 Bernazard singled before Bando's two-run homer in the second. His single also helped build a run in the fourth. Castillo homered in the sixth for a 5-3 lead and Snyder finished Cleveland's scoring with a solo home run in the eighth.

Shortstop Julio Franco made two good plays to preserve the victory in the ninth. He went into the hole to throw out Don Baylor on a grounder that scored Wade Boggs from third. Then Franco ranged to his right and grabbed Dave Henderson's hard grounder, throwing to third for the forceout that ended the game.
 "Those were two very good plays in the ninth inning," Boston Manager John McNamara said. "He's a lot more consistent as a shortstop this year. He looks like he's matured. He made an excellent play on Baylor, and then a heads-up play on Henderson when he threw to third. That was his only play on that ball."
 Wade Boggs had three hits for Boston, extending his hitting streak to 19 games and upping his major league-leading batting average to .364.

Yankees 6, Orioles 3
 New York moved within four percentage points of first-place Toronto in the East by winning its sixth of seven games since being swept by the Blue Jays and falling from the top spot.
 Henry Cotto had a double and home run and knocked in three runs. Rick Rhoden got the win even though he crumpled to the ground after Mike Young's hard-hit ball leading off the fourth inning caromed off the inside of his left knee. Rhoden left after five innings.
 "I was conscious of the knee, so I didn't stride as far after I got hit and I had better control," Rhoden said. "Pitching didn't bother me, but in moving around it hurt. It hurt to walk from the dugout out to the mound and back."
 Scott McGregor, 2-7, allowed all of the Yankees' runs and eight hits in 3 2-3 innings. McGregor hasn't won since May 16. In his last five starts, McGregor is 0-2 with a 10.70 earned run average and has allowed 34 hits in 17 2-3 innings.

 Baltimore has lost 14 of the last 15 games and its pitchers have given up six runs or more 17 times in the last 22 games.
Brewers 6, Blue Jays 3
 At Toronto Jim Gantner's two-run bloop single sparked a five-run sixth inning for Milwaukee.
 Billy Jo Robidoux singled and Glenn Braggs walked with one out. B.J. Surhoff grounded into a forceout, stole second and both runners scored on Gantner's single to left field. Juan Castillo's double scored Gantner and Paul Molitor hit reliever Mark Eichhorn's first pitch for a single that scored Castillo. Robin Yount and Cecil Cooper singled for another run.
Royals 10, Angels 4
 Mark Gubicza, who hadn't won in a month, pitched a six-hitter and Frank White had three RBI for the visiting Royals. Danny Tartabull hit a two-run homer and Willie Wilson had a solo shot for the Royals.

Babe Ruth League

Computerland 14
Everette's 7
 Chris Christopher picked up two hits to help lift Computerland to a 14-7 victory over Everette's Pest Control in the Greenville Babe Ruth League Thursday night.
 Everette's took the lead in the top of the first, scoring once, but Computerland came back with four runs in the bottom of the inning. Three more crossed in the second inning for Computerland to raise the lead to 7-1.
 Everette's rallied for two in the top of the third.
 In the fourth, Computerland pushed over five more runs to put the game out of reach. Chris McFarland reached on an error, moving all the way to third. He scored on Drew Johnson's ground out. With two away, Christopher singled and Jon West walked. Shon Gay reached on an error, scoring Christopher. Kelvin Yarrell doubled in West and Gay and scored on Derek Harrell's single.
 Computerland added one more in the sixth while Everette's got four in the fifth and one in the seventh.
 Pat Joyner had three hits to lead Everette's.

Sr. Babe Ruth League

Planters Bank 5
Winterville Mach. 4
 Planters Bank got two hits each from Jay Surles and Hunter Clark to take a 5-4 victory over Winterville Machine in the Coastal Plains Senior Babe Ruth League Thursday night.
 Winterville scored first, getting a run in the top of the first, but Planters matched that with one in the bottom of the inning. Winterville went back out with two in the third, while Planters picked up one in the fourth.
 Winterville added a fourth run in the fifth inning to take a 4-2 lead.
 But Planters came back with three runs in the bottom of the fifth to move ahead for good. Joe Deloach led off with a single and Wes Jackson walked. Surles singled, driving in Deloach, and both runners moved up on an error. Clark then followed with a single, driving in both Jackson and Surles with the tying and go-ahead run.
 Butch Mills led Winterville with three hits.

Little League

Lions 1
 Kary Welch tossed a one-hit shutout as the Jaycees gained a 1-0 victory over the Lions Thursday in the North State Little League.
 Welch, in going the distance, struck out eight, walked two and hit one batter. The lone hit he allowed came in the fourth inning as David Koonce led off with a single. Only two runners advanced as far as second base for the Lions.
 Meanwhile, the Jaycees were being held in check by the combined pitching of Deke Herrin and Brian Fields, each of whom pitched three innings. Herrin, in the first three, struck out seven and walked one, allowing only one runner past first. Fields, who took the loss, struck out six, walked two and gave up the only hit the Jaycees picked up.
 That came in the sixth inning and resulted in the game's only run. Jeff Alligood led off with the single. He moved to second on a passed ball, stole third and then scored on a balk.

True Value

Pepsi-Cola 20
Pepsi-Cola 19
 Jonathan Adams got only one hit on the day. But, he mercifully drove in the winning run in the bottom of the eighth inning to allow True Value Hardware to take a 20-19 victory over Pepsi-Cola in the Tar Heel Little League Thursday.
 The victory was a boon to the idle Moose, allowing them to clinch the Tar Heel Little League championship. While Pepsi could still mathematically tie with the Moose, the Moose won two of the three meetings between the two teams and would get the title even if a tie does occur.
 And for a long time Thursday, it looked like a tie might never be broken.
 Pepsi started off with a bang, scoring six times in the first inning. True Value came back with two in the bottom of the frame. Pepsi added four more in the second for a 10-2 lead, then added another in the top of the third. True Value rallied for 11 in the bottom of the third, taking a 13-11 lead.
 Pepsi pushed over five more in the fifth to take a 16-13 lead, but True Value rallied for three to tie it up on the sixth. Both teams then scored

Winterville Bambino

 WINTERVILLE — Michael Pilgreen went the distance to get the win and lead Aldridge & Southernland to a 9-8 win over Alex Electric in a Winterville Bambino League baseball game Thursday.
 P.J. Corbett led A&S with two hits. Alex was led by Dean Nelson and Eugene LeGrande with two hits apiece.
 Both teams are now 6-6 on the year.
 Dennis Electric defeated Hastings Ford by forfeit. Dennis improves to 3-8 while Hastings falls to 2-9.

Pitt Co. Babe Ruth

Winterville Ruitans 16
Chicod 12
 HOLLYWOOD — Travis Clemons got the win in relief, coming on in the third and going the rest of the way to help the Winterville Ruitans to a 16-12 win over Chicod in a Pitt County Babe Ruth baseball game Thursday.
 Clemons scattered six hits and also went 4-5 to help his own cause. Bryan Smith also went 4-5 for Winterville while teammate Hal Conger added three hits.
 Chicod was led by Brent Elks with two hits.
 Winterville improves to 5-0 while Chicod falls to 3-2.

Winterville Pee-Wee

Jaycees 18
Evans Realty 10
 WINTERVILLE — The Jaycees rolled past Evans Realty, 18-10, in Winterville Pee-Wee League baseball action Thursday.
 The Jaycees were led by Jason Spencer and Nathan Townsend while Ziggy Craig and Chris Rexford paced Evans Realty.
Roberts Welding 10
Crow's Nest 9
 WINTERVILLE — Roberts Welding gained a 10-9 victory over Crow's Nest in the Winterville Pee-Wee League Thursday night.
 Roberts was led by Adam Lambert and David Essell while Crow's Nest was led by Gretchen Clark and Eric Parrish.
Home Federal 14

 WINTERVILLE — Home Federal romped to a 14-5 victory over Sunnyside Eggs in the Winterville Pee-Wee League Thursday.
 Matt Parker and Matthew Gunn led Home Federal while Chris Scott and Lauren West paced Sunnyside Eggs.

Utah Football Is Put On Probation

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The University of Utah football program has been placed on probation for one year and the NCAA has ordered other sanctions against the school for allowing an illegal recruiting visit and altering documents to hid it.
 The visit was made by Jason Buck, a tackle, who wound up playing at Brigham Young University, the NCAA charged. Buck was the Cincinnati Bengals' first-round choice in the NFL draft in April.
 The NCAA penalties, imposed Thursday for recruiting violations, prohibit Utah from conducting any football recruiting during the week of Dec. 1-8 and reduce the number of athletes allowed for recruiting visits from 95 to 75.
 Under NCAA rules, an athlete is allowed one visit to each school, but can visit no more than five schools.
 Utah, of the Western Athletic Conference, recruited Buck in December 1984 and he made an official visit to the campus in late 1984. By that time, Buck had used his allotment of five visits.
 Dave Didion, the NCAA's assistant enforcement director in Kansas City, said the university was cited for allowing the visit, then altering documents to delete any reference to it. Head coach (Jim Fassel) ordered the staff to discontinue the visit, but his orders were not carried out, he said.

 Didion said the NCAA also found that athletes were provided improper transportation on two occasions.
 University officials said they would not appeal the decision.
 "The university has cooperated fully with the NCAA in this matter and will not appeal the NCAA's decision," President Chase Peterson said.
 In a written statement, Peterson said while the circumstances are unfortunate, "we have taken steps to ensure they will not be repeated."
 "We continue to have confidence in our coaching staff, and in the integrity of our program overall," he said.

Padres Continue New Trend

By BRIAN TRUSDELL
Associated Press Writer

The Padres have won six straight games, their longest winning streak since May 1985, but the smile on Manager Larry Bowa's face only lasts a little while.

"I remember," Bowa said Thursday night recalling San Diego's worst start. "There are scars everywhere, scars that will last forever. I'll remember that start for as long as I live."

Carmelo Martinez hit two homers and Storm Davis pitched a three-hitter giving San Diego a 3-1 victory over the San Francisco Giants. But despite all the Padres' recent success, the still have baseball's worst record, 21-46, and are 10 games behind the fifth-place Los Angeles Dodgers in the National League West.

Elsewhere, Chicago beat Philadelphia 9-7 in Lee Elia's debut as the Phillies' manager, and it was New York 10, Montreal 7; Cincinnati 8, Atlanta 4; St. Louis 8, Pittsburgh 6 in 10 innings; and Los Angeles 6, Houston 4 in 11 innings.

Unlike San Diego, Roger Craig's San Francisco Giants have lost six straight, but are only 3½ games out of first place behind Cincinnati.

That's not much comfort to Craig.

"I know it's supposed to turn around, but when?" Craig asked rhetorically. "It's tough on a manager when you're doing everything you can. You've got to keep battling. I'm trying different lineups and different things."

The Giants have scored just eight runs in their last seven games and have struck out 43 times, including nine Thursday.

Davis, 2-7, took advantage of the Giant's slump, allowing one run, three hits and striking out a season-high seven in six innings. But, after the sixth, he asked to be pulled.

"Sometimes you have to put personal aims aside for the good of the team," said Davis, who won for the first time since May 4. "I'd given them everything I had. We have a lot of guys fresh out there in the bullpen. Next time hopefully if I'm in the same situation I'll go farther."

"I'd rather him be honest with me than try to be a hero and go out there and get lit up," Bowa said. "It's as far as he's gone in a long time. I'd just as soon him leave with a good taste in his mouth. Confidence-wise it might help him a lot."

Candy Maldonado gave the Giants a 1-0 lead in the first inning, hitting an RBI single after Jeffrey Leonard doubled for his first extra-base hit since May 31.

San Diego scored an unearned run off Atlee Hammaker, 3-4, in its half of the first. Chris Brown's error at third put Randy Ready on base and with two out, Martinez walked and Benito Santiago hit a run-scoring single.

Then Martinez led off the fourth and sixth innings with homers, his seventh and eighth, to be the first Padre to hit two homers in a game since May 30, 1985.

Cubs 9, Phillies 7
Rafael Palmeiro and Keith Moreland both hit two-run homers and Jerry Mumphrey hit a three-run shot, powering the Cubs to their third straight win.

Elia replaced John Felsch, who was fired earlier in the day.

The Phillies' three-run seventh inning chased Rick Sutcliffe, 9-3. Mike Jackson, 1-5, took the loss.

Mumphrey's homer in the eighth gave Chicago a 9-5 lead but Philadelphia scored twice in the ninth.

"It was fun," Elia said. "I was proud of the way they broke their tails and came back twice."

Dodgers 6, Astros 4
Steve Sax drove in three runs in the final two innings, including a two-run single off Ron Mathis, 0-1, in the 11th, for Los Angeles.

Sax's 10th-inning, run-scoring double gave the Dodgers a 4-3 lead, but Kevin Bass' RBI single tied the game. Sax's double broke Dave Smith's streak of 27 2-3 scoreless innings.

Alejandro Pena, 1-6, entered in the ninth inning and pitched two innings before Brian Holton worked the 11th for his second save.

Glenn Davis hit his 12th homer, a two-run shot in the third, to give Houston a 3-0 lead. John Shelby and Mike Marshall also homered for Los Angeles.

Cardinals 8, Pirates 6
Jack Clark hit a pair of two-run homers, the second in the bottom of the 10th inning, leading St. Louis over Pittsburgh.

Tom Herr singled to open the inning off Don Robinson, 5-5, and Clark homered to left, his 20th, on a 1-2 pitch for his fourth two-homer game this season. Bill Dawley, 4-4, the fifth St. Louis pitcher, earned the victory after entering the game in the tenth. Clark's four RBI gave him 64 and the major league lead.

Mets 10, Expos 7
New York hit five home runs, two by Darryl Strawberry — including a three-run shot in the first inning.

Gary Carter hit a two-run homer, and Howard Johnson and Kevin McReynolds added solo shots for New York. Doug Sisk, 3-1, gave up four hits and two runs in three innings, winning in relief of Ron Darling, who stretched his winless streak to 11 games since last winning on April 22.

Roger McDowell pitched two innings for his seventh save. Tim Wallach and Mitch Webster homered for the Expos.

Reds 9, Braves 4
Eric Davis hit a three-run homer, his 21st of the season, but first since June 3, to cap a four-run fourth inning that paced Cincinnati over Atlanta.

Guy Hoffman, 6-1, won his sixth straight game, allowing nine hits and four runs before leaving with two outs in the sixth inning. Frank Williams worked two innings before John Franco pitched the final 1 1/3 for his 14th save.

Dale Murphy also hit his 21st homer in the second inning, tying him with Davis for the league lead. David Palmer, 4-8, lost his fourth consecutive game.

KENNY PHILLIPS

Phillips To Catawba

SALISBURY — Kenny Phillips of Greenville has been named as a new member of the football staff at Catawba College in Salisbury.

Phillips was one of four new assistants named by head coach Bill Mauldin.

Phillips, 27, will handle the defensive line for the Indians. He is a 1985 graduate of East Carolina, earning a bachelor's degree in physical education. He is scheduled to earn his master's degree this summer.

A former D.H. Conley High School star, Phillips played linebacker on the 1983 East Carolina football team that went 8-3 and lost only three close games to some of the best teams in the country, including national champion Miami, Fla. That team was overlooked, however, when bowl invitations were handed out.

Following his high school career, Phillips earned all-star honors at Chowan Junior College in 1979-80, then lettered for the Pirates in 1982 and 83.

He served as a graduate assistant with East Carolina in 1985-86.

Fans And Friends Mourn Howser During Service

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Never once in his losing battle against brain cancer did Dick Howser ask, "Why me," says an official of the Kansas City Royals.

"He said, 'Why not me?'" Royals president Joe Burke told about 1,300 mourners Thursday who gathered for a memorial service to the former Royals manager. Burke, who named Howser as Royals' manager in 1981, said he spent his final months counting his blessings, not cursing his fate.

Howser died Wednesday at 51, almost 11 months after doctors partially removed a malignant tumor from the left side of his brain.

"Dick said, 'I have lived a good life. God has blessed me,'" said Burke, one of several speakers at the 45-minute service. "He said, 'I have so much to be thankful for. God has blessed me.'" As Howser neared the end, Burke said, "He once told me, 'Joe, keep laughing. Keep smiling. I am not afraid to die.'"

American League President Dr. Bobby Brown; Howser's widow, Nancy, and twin daughters Jana and Jill; and Royals' co-owners Ewing Kauffman and Avron Fogelman were among those in attendance.

Funeral services and burial will be Saturday in Howser's hometown of Tallahassee, Fla.

"Dick's fight is over," said Paul Splittorff, a retired Royals' pitcher who represented the players. "We can all take comfort in knowing that tonight, our skipper is safe at home."

Several speakers noted the courage Howser showed in his ordeal, which began last July 22 when doctors partially removed a malignant brain tumor. The operation was just one week after Howser, suffering persistent headaches and memory lapses, guided the American League to victory in the All-Star Game in what turned out to be his final appearance.

"Dick Howser learned in these last eleven months what life and life's priorities are all about," Burke said. "He went from baseball, family and God, to God, family and baseball. Burke noted that Howser became deeply religious in his final months.

"He was ready for the final road trip," Burke said. "He was tired. He was ready to go home."

Serving as pallbearers for Thursday night's service were Royals broadcaster Fred White; public relations director Dean Vogelaar; general manager John Schuerholz; trainer Mickey Cobb; Howser's neighbor Gerry Winship and Burke.

"There is no doubt that Dick left us too soon, and that's very difficult to understand," White said. "God, we commit to you the soul of a precious friend."

Howser's clergyman, the Rev. Jim Wells, read several passages from Howser's own Bible.

"Good guys occasionally do finish first," Wells said. "Dick finished first. He was a winner."

Wells noted that more than 14,000 cards and letters had come in from all over the world for Howser and said the stricken manager frequently prayed "for all the people who had sent him cards."

"He once told me 'Jim, I'm going to be okay. One way or another, I'm going to be a winner in this thing. But please take care of Nancy.'"

"Every Christian knows that because of Dick's faith, he's in a better place tonight than he was yesterday morning," Splittorff said.

The Royals were in California Thursday night for a game with the Angels.

King Hopes Ankle Doesn't Give Out

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP) — Betsy King was hoping her sprained ankle would heal enough for her to play in the LPGA's $300,000 Lady Keystone Open.

King, who has earned $302,806 as the tour's top money winner this year, sprained her left ankle Wednesday.

"The sprain isn't as severe as we first thought," King said Thursday. "If this were any other tournament, I'd pull out. Because it's so close to home, I'm going to give it a try."

King lives in Limekiln, about 30 miles from the 6,348-yard West Course of the Hershey Country Club, where the tournament began today.

King said trainers at the LPGA's traveling medical van taped her ankle after treatment Wednesday.

"They advised me to stay off it until I try to play," King said. "It's going to be interesting to see what happens."

There are 21 of the top 25 money winner hoping to pick up the $45,000 first-place check in the 54-hole tournament.

Included in the full field of 144 golfers are two-time defending champion Juli Inkster and former champs Nancy Lopez, Amy Alcott, Susie Berning and Jan Stephenson.

Inkster won in 1985 with a 7-under-par 209. Last year, she was one of three players to finish tied at 210.

Inkster defeated Debbie Massey and Cindy Hill on the first hole of the playoff.

"I think I can make it three in a row," said Inkster, who has not won this year but is 11th on the money list. "This is my kind of course. I feel like I'm ready to win."

Other strong contenders include Ayako Okamoto, who is third on the money list; Colleen Walker, who won for the first time last week at the Mayflower Classic; Cindy Rarick, who is having the best season of her career.

Astronomers Say Gaseous Bodies Found Outside Solar System

By MALCOLM RITTER
AP Science Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Gaseous bodies up to 3,000 times as massive as Earth may be orbiting seven stars, say astronomers who call their observations the best evidence yet that there are planets outside our solar system.

The objects appear to resemble planets more than stars, but too little is known yet to label them planets, said Bruce Campbell, research associate at Dominion Astrophysical Observatory in Victoria, British Columbia.

The question may be settled more by semantics than observations anyway, since astronomers disagree on just what constitutes a planet, another astronomer said.

Campbell spoke in an interview before presenting the work Thursday at a meeting of astronomers in Vancouver, British Columbia.

Scientists have long tried to find planets outside the solar system to better understand our planetary system and explore the possibility of life elsewhere. Previous claims of finding other planets have not withstood scientific scrutiny.

Campbell said he believes his evidence is stronger because of a new method that allowed the detection of smaller celestial bodies, and because seven out of 16 stars studied showed evidence of such bodies.

In interviews, other astronomers said they would have to examine the evidence, which is based on six years of observing 16 stars with sun-like masses 59 trillion to 295 trillion miles from Earth.

But "I think that it is a strong observation," said William Baum, director of planetary research at the Lowell Observatory in Flagstaff, Ariz. "It appears to be a solid piece of work."

The work was done at the Canada-France-Hawaii Telescope in Hawaii. Working with Campbell were Gordon Walker and Stephenson Yang of the University of British Columbia in Vancouver.

The researchers measured tiny variations in the speed at which the stars were moving toward or away from Earth. Such variations would betray the gravitational tugs of bodies orbiting the stars.

Campbell said researchers were able to measure changes as small as 25 miles an hour, representing 50 to 100 times more sensitivity than previous techniques allowed.

The evidence suggests one orbiting body per star, with masses anywhere from one to 10 times that of Jupiter, he said. Jupiter, the largest known planet, has about 300 times the mass of Earth.

Whether the orbiting bodies should be called planets depends on how the term is defined, said Robert Harrington, astronomer at the Naval Observatory in Washington.

"When we get outside the solar system, I'm going to be extra conservative," he said. "I probably won't call it a planet until I can get out and walk around on the surface of it."

But Jupiter and Saturn, composed largely of gases, would not qualify as planets under that definition, he noted.

Another definition leans on how an object was formed, whether it condensed from a gas cloud as stars do, or congealed from a huge rotating disc of matter, as the planets of the solar system apparently did, he said.

Low Cholesterol Can Open Clogged Vessels

Study Indicates Drugs, Low-Fat Diet Can Decrease Risk Of Heart Disease

By WARREN E. LEARY
AP Science Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A study showing that reducing blood fats actually opens up some clogged blood vessels offers hope that drugs and a low-fat diet can decrease the risk of heart disease in millions of people with high cholesterol, researchers say.

A major study of heart bypass patients published today in the Journal of the American Medical Association contains the first solid evidence that past blood vessel narrowing can be reversed with a combination of cholesterol-lowering drugs and low-fat diets, the scientists said.

Previous smaller studies hinted that sharply lowering blood fats might reverse some effects of atherosclerosis, the narrowing of blood vessels caused by a buildup of fatty deposits or lesions, they said. But the new study is the first providing definitive evidence of such an effect, they said.

Dr. Claude Lenfant, director of the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute, said the Cholesterol Lowering Atherosclerosis Study has major implications for hundreds of thousands of people with heart and blood vessel disease and millions more at risk because of high blood fats.

"For the first time, we are presented with evidence regarding regression of lesions in humans," Lenfant said at a news briefing on the study sponsored by his agency.

Studies sponsored by the National Institutes of Health indicate half of all adults have cholesterol levels higher than desirable and 25 percent have moderate to severe elevations.

Restricted vessels deprive the heart of oxxygen-rich blood and can lead to painful angina or heart attacks. When heart arteries become clogged, doctors can bypass them with transplanted veins to carry blood past the blockage.

The two-year study by University of Southern California Medical School scientists found that in 162 bypass patients, 16.2 percent of those getting the combination treatment showed regression in their restricted vessels, versus only 2.4 percent of control patients.

In the treated group, total cholesterol levels fell 26 percent and other blood fats called triglycerides were down 22 percent. Cholesterol is a waxy substance in the blood that, depending upon the fatty proteins attached to it, can contribute to heart and blood vessel disease.

So-called low-density lipoprotein cholesterol, a major component of the fibrous plaques that clog blood vessels, decreased by 43 percent, researchers reported. High-density lipoprotein cholesterol, the "good" cholesterol that protects against heart disease, was up 37 percent.

The Los Angeles researchers said their results were dramatic enough to prove "that therapy after coronary bypass surgery should routinely include measures to lower blood cholesterol levels." More than 200,000 people undergo bypass operations each year.

Dr. David H. Blankenhorn and colleagues said people who have bypass operations often find these new vessels begin narrowing within a year or two of surgery.

Their study is the first providing clear evidence that aggressively reducing cholesterol will slow or reverse the clogging of natural or transplanted arteries, they said.

The bypass patients in the study, 95 percent of whom were nonsmoking white males aged 40 to 59, all were placed on appetizing low-fat diets developed by staff dietitians, Blankenhorn said.

The drug group had a diet limited to 22 percent of calories from fat, compared with 40 percent in the typical American diet, and less than 125 milligrams of cholesterol daily. The control group had a 26 percent fat calorie intake and 250 milligrams of cholesterol daily.

Half the participants received a prescription cholesterol-lowering drug called colestipol hydrochloride in combination with high doses of niacin, a B-complex vitamin naturally found in lean meats, fish, poultry and cereals.

Colestipol is a resin that binds bile acid from the digestive system and removes it from the body, reducing the levels of cholesterol by forcing the body to use the fats to make more bile acid. Niacin in doses of a gram or more daily lowers low-density cholesterol and raises the high-density variety.

Blankenhorn warned against people taking high doses of niacin, available without prescription as a vitamin in milligram doses, unless they are under care of a doctor. In high doses, the drug can cause hot flashes, elevated uric acid, joint pain, increased symptoms of arthritis, gout and other problems, he said.

Diet was a significant part of the therapy and people should not think they could use cholesterol-lowering drugs alone to reduce the effects of atherosclerosis, the researchers said.

Every drug used to lower blood fats has some risks, they added.

Vaccine Unused

ATLANTA (AP) — Five years after it was developed, a vaccine for hepatitis B is not reaching those who need it most, federal health researchers say.

Hepatitis B, the most common and serious variety of the liver disease, is transmitted most often through the bloodstream. It occurs most often among homosexual men, injectable drug abusers and sexually active heterosexuals.

"There has been little progress in developing vaccination programs" for those risk groups, the national Centers for Disease Control said Thursday. "None of these groups is being reached effectively by current vaccine programs."

The CDC encouraged new hepatitis B vaccine strategies two years ago, but little has changed since then, said Dr. Steve Hadler, a CDC hepatitis specialist.

"Everyone accepts the difficulty" of vaccinating drug addicts, he said, adding that homosexual men may be more concerned with preventing AIDS and health officials have been "just slow" in trying to vaccinate sexually active heterosexuals.

Another stumbling block to hepatitis B vaccination remains the high cost — more than $100 for a three-shot series, said Hadler.

Hepatitis can cause fever, rash, pains and a yellow, or jaundiced, color in the skin and eyes.

Soviets, U.S. Agree To Study Ozone Layer In Antarctic Area

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Concern over a common threat is bringing cooperation between American and Soviet scientists to study the ozone layer which protects the Earth from potentially deadly ultraviolet radiation.

The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration announced Thursday that an agreement has been reached for a cooperative study concentrating on the Antarctic, where a hole in the ozone layer has been detected.

Soviet and American scientists agreed to launch detailed studies of the ozone layer from both the ground and atmosphere and to share their findings, NOAA reported.

NOAA officials said the new agreement expands current programs for the exchange of weather information.

Ground and rocket-based measurements will be undertaken by the Soviets from their Molodetzchnaya station in the Antarctic, while the Americans will undertake detailed daily studies from instruments on polar orbiting satellites.

The Soviet scientists will use an array of instruments supplied and calibrated by NOAA's national research laboratory in Boulder, Colo. That will allow all the data collected to be comparable, so that scientists from both countries can more easily share the findings.

The so-called hole in the ozone over Antarctica appears in the spring in that hemisphere — September and October — and closes in the winter. But scientists report that the hole seems to deepen each year, and they fear that it reflects ozone depletion over much of the globe.

While there is not universal agreement, most scientists consider chemicals such as chlorofluorocarbons, released into the atmosphere from refrigerants and other uses, to be a likely culprit. When those chemicals are broken down by sunlight they release chlorine, which reacts with the ozone.

The United States banned use of the chemicals in aerosol sprays which contain chlorofluorocarbons in 1978, but they still have other uses, and are common in other nations.

On the other hand, some scientists blame the ozone depletion on natural nitrogen oxide compounds in the atmosphere, which vary in 11-year cycles. And others blame the wind for moving the ozone-rich air out of the Antarctic area at certain seasons.

The new study may help resolve some of this disagreement over a potentially dangerous phenomenon.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency reported last fall that depletion of the worldwide ozone layer could cause an added 800,000 skin cancer deaths by the year 2074, by removing the current protection from sunlight.

The new U.S.-Soviet agreement also could lead to investigations of desert dust in the atmosphere, an arctic gas and aerosol sampling program and a chemical and radiation experiment in the Arctic.

Meanwhile, a tentative agreement has been reached among 31 nations discussing ways to reduce the amount of chlorofluorocarbons released into the atmosphere.

Interior Secretary Donald Hodel drew sharp criticism, however, for suggesting that an alternative approach to coping with ozone depletion could include using hats, sunscreen lotion and sunglasses.

After environmentalists, members of Congress and the EPA denounced the suggestion, Hodel protested that he had been misunderstood and was only trying to make sure that President Reagan was not given only a single option in making a final decision on the international agreement.

CASTS BALLOT — Prime Minister Lynden O. Pindling of the Bahamas makes his way through a crowd of voters to cast his ballot today in Nassau. Pindling's 20-year rule of the island nation was threatened by charges of corruption in his government. (AP Laserphoto)

Japanese Panel Blames JAL Crash On Faulty Repairs By Boeing Co.

TOKYO (AP) — Faulty repairs by the Boeing Co. on a bulkhead of a Japan Air Lines jumbo jet caused it to crash in 1985, killing 520 people in history's worst single-airplane disaster, a government commission said today.

The Aircraft Accident Investigation Commission also said in its official report on the tragedy that JAL's failure to detect the cracks in the bulkhead during regular maintenance inspections "had a part" in the accident.

The 556-page, two-volume report describes in detail the damage suffered by the Boeing 747-SR that caused it to crash into a mountain northwest of Tokyo.

The report blamed the accident on a rupture in the rear pressure bulkhead on which Boeing made faulty repairs in 1978.

The report said the bulkhead, a circular wall separating the pressurized cabin from the non-pressurized tail cone section, developed cracks that weakened it so it could not contain the pressurized air in the cabin.

The rapid release of pressurized air into the plane's tail section destroyed its vertical tail fin and all four hydraulic systems — components vital to controlling the plane — the report said.

Japan Air Lines President Susumu Yamaji said the company would "take to heart" the report's recommendations and already has implemented safety measures.

"We hope that through these measures we can succeed in restoring public confidence and credibility in JAL," he said.

Later, at a news conference, he said that "in the future we will check all aircraft after repairs have been done on them, with a suspicion that the repair may have been faulty. This includes repairs made by Boeing."

Boeing has admitted flaws in the repairs it conducted on the bulkhead after the plane scraped its tail during a landing in 1978 and has said those flaws were partly to blame for the accident. The company said metal spliced over two pieces of the bulkhead was too short and did not have enough riveting.

The commission's report said the faulty repairs gave rise to cracks that decreased the bulkhead's strength by about 30 percent.

The plane, on a one-hour flight from Tokyo to Osaka on Aug. 12, 1985, lost control shortly after takeoff and veered violently for about 30 minutes before crashing into a remote mountain ridge.

Four people survived the crash. The 22-member commission issued several recommendations.

One said the government should consider adopting additional regulations requiring "fail-safe" mechanisms so that damage such as destruction of a pressure bulkhead would not affect other structures and safety systems nearby.

Larry Rapeta, a Seattle lawyer who represents the families of 67 crash victims in a compensation suit, against Boeing, questioned the completeness of the investigation.

"The public cannot be confident that it is getting the full picture because the investigation occurred in secret and involved the interested parties," he said.

"The government relied on the wrongdoers for information and guidance ... and didn't have the power to compel any Boeing officials to testify," he said in an interview.

Bahamian Minister Faces Major Challenge At Polls

By IKE FLORES
Associated Press Writer

NASSAU, Bahamas (AP) — Prime Minister Lynden Pindling faced his toughest political challenge since 1967 as voters weighing opposition charges of government corruption and complicity in the drug trade cast ballots today.

At stake were the 49 seats in the House of Assembly, which will in turn determine whether Pindling, 57, is retained or forced to give way to challenger Kendal Isaacs, 61, a wealthy Nassau lawyer.

The election was considered a toss-up, and both sides predicted victory.

The U.S. Senate Foreign Relations Committee sent three observers to determine whether the balloting was fair and to ensure both candidates understood U.S. concern about stopping the drug trade, said Allan Weinstein, president of Boston University's Center for Democracy and head of the observer group.

Pindling's Progressive Liberal Party, which won 32 of 43 seats in the 1982 elections, controlled redistricting this year that resulted in expansion to 49 constituencies. Opposition leaders claim PLP officials deliberately fouled up registration to invalidate votes that would go to Isaacs' Free National Movement.

Independent observers, foreign diplomats, opposition candidates and Pindling himself agreed there were irregularities in voter registration.

This group of nearly 700 islands southeast of Florida has an estimated 99,000 registered voters out of a population of about 225,000. U.S. Embassy officials predicted 80 percent of the voters would cast ballots.

The graying prime minister was revered as a hero by the Bahamas' black majority for ending white minority rule when he first took office in 1967 and for leading the nation to independence from Britain in 1973.

Opposition to Pindling mounted after a 1984 commission of inquiry reported that he had spent $4 million, or eight times his government income, from 1977 to 1983. The panel said he could not account for $180,000 in his bank accounts.

The report also linked two of Pindling's Cabinet ministers and some of his cronies to drug trafficking money. Five ministers resigned or were fired.

Among those resigning was Deputy Prime Minister Arthur Hanna, who has become one of Pindling's leading critics even though he remains a member of the ruling PLP. He was re-elected without opposition.

On the eve of the election, Pindling lashed out at Isaacs and dissidents in his own party in a radio and television address to the nation.

"No Bahamian is prepared to risk 20 years of hard-earned, unmatched prosperity for this pig-in-a-bag called the Free National Movement," Pindling told supporters.

Pindling accused Isaacs and other leaders of the Free National Movement of selling out to "colonialist interests" by telling their supporters "only America can guarantee democracy for the Bahamas."

Later Thursday, Pindling said forged letters were being widely distributed saying he is seeking residency in Jamaica or Britain if he loses. Pindling said Isaacs and other officials of the Free National Movement were "personally responsible ... for this last, desperate lie of the campaign."

Isaacs said drugs and corruption are "prime issues in this election, and if we do not understand that and accept that and deal with that, then we are pipe-dreaming."

Pindling, in turn, has accused the opposition of being supported by drug smugglers.

Both sides promised to increase their cooperation with American agencies to block drug smuggling. The U.S. State Department says 40 percent of the cocaine and much of the marijuana entering the United States passes through the Bahamas.

American officials have expressed neutrality on the outcome.

"Our No. 1 concern has been to eliminate the trafficking of drugs," Ambassador Carol Hallet said Thursday. "I would hope we would continue the cooperation and that it would increase, whoever is elected."

South Korean Minister Says Street Riots Creating Chaos

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Prime Minister Lee Han-key warned today that the nation faces "chaos" and said the government would take "extraordinary measures" to stop anti-government violence that continued for a 10th straight day.

Lee's warning was the first major government statement on the street violence that began June 10. Today, thousands of students hurling firebombs and rocks again battled police in the capital and several provincial cities.

"Should it become impossible to restore law and order ... it would be inevitable for the government to make an extraordinary decision," the prime minister said in a nationwide television address. He did elaborate.

"The current disturbances, the violent and illegal activities which are precipitating social chaos, will not help attain the goal of genuine democratic development desired by all citizens," Lee said.

Korean newspapers have speculated that President Chun Doo-hwan's government is considering ruling by emergency decree or martial law to curtail the protests.

Lee, who reports to Chun, urged Koreans to return to their homes, jobs and schools and end the disturbances. "I hope the public clearly realizes that if we should fail to overcome the present difficulty in a peaceful manner, the nation would plunge into a major crisis," he said.

President Reagan sent a letter Chun urging him not to overreact to street demonstrations. The New York Times reported today. The letter called for a resumption of discussions with the political opposition, said an unidentified senior administration official quoted by the newspaper.

Fierce clashes erupted in the streets around several universities in the capital as students set up barricades and pelted riot police with firebombs and rocks. Police armored cars used multiple tear gas launchers to fire thousands of gas bombs.

"Down with the military dictatorship!" the students chanted as they called for the fall of Chun's government and immediate democratic elections.

Earlier, students threw firebombs, stones and chunks of pavement to break through police lines into the surrounding streets. Faculty members issued a statement demanding the government respect the national will and usher in full democracy. "The peoples' will has been confirmed," said the statement.

The clashes today followed massive street battles in Seoul and other cities Thursday when opposition groups held an "anti-tear gas" day to demand the government stop using the powerful gas. Street battles had erupted when police using tear gas broke up largely peaceful marches.

New clashes also erupted in provincial cities today. Several hundred protesters took to the streets in the southern port city of Pusan as police repeatedly fired volleys of tear gas to break up the crowds.

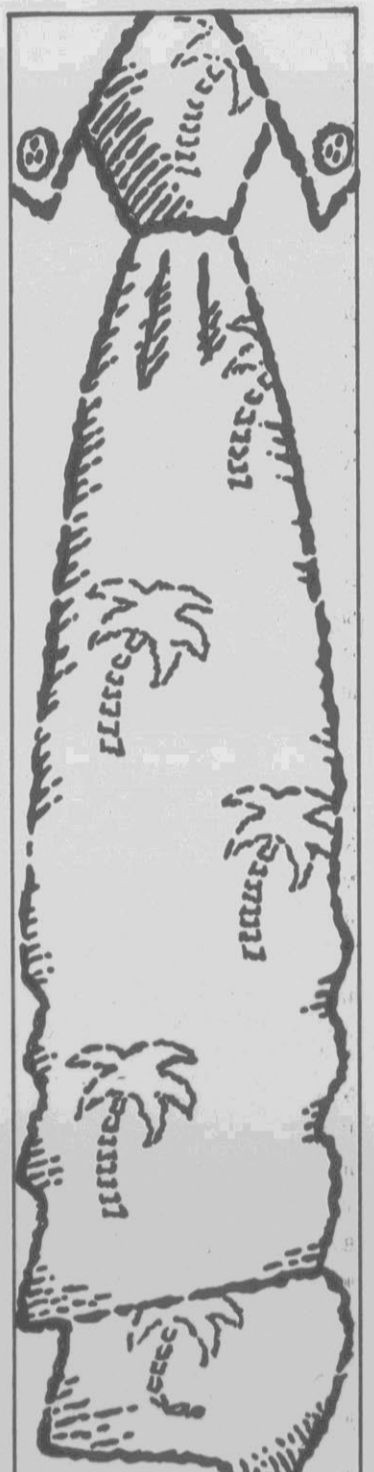

Earlier, about 100 seminarians marched peacefully through Pusan, the country's second-largest city, singing the national anthem before police persuaded them to disband peacefully.

Clashes between students and riot police also were reported in Kwangju, Chongju, Junsan and Chonju.

Students armed with wooden and metal clubs battled police for more than four hours in vicious fighting around Korea University in Seoul.

Riot police and students sprawled in the streets exhausted as they unasily eyed each other when the fighting finally subsided.

Pentagon To Review Plans For Persian Gulf Activity

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon will review its Persian Gulf plans to make sure U.S. servicemen and ships are safe from terrorist attacks in the face of CIA warnings that such strikes are likely, congressional sources say.

The reassessment was promised during an informal meeting Thursday between top administration national security officials and a group of senators worried about President Reagan's plan to protect 11 Kuwaiti tankers starting next month, the sources said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

"It is clear that the risks are larger than the administration is willing to concede at this point," said Sen. James Sasser, D-Tenn., one of the participants in the closed-door, two-hour session.

Sen. William Cohen, R-Maine, vice chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee, said, "We need to get all the intelligence together. I want to see an integrated analysis of the threat, one that includes not only military risks, but also the capabilities and intentions of carrying out the threats.

In recent days, differences have developed between the CIA and the Pentagon over the threat from Iran. The Pentagon says the risk is low to moderate from direct military-type attacks.

But the CIA says the risk is higher because Iran may use a terrorist-style attack such as an explosives-laden speedboat, either against U.S. ships or against oil tankers that won't be protected by the United States.

Shultz Says Vietnamese Changes 'Snuff Out' Hope Of New Policies

By HENRY GOTTLIEB
Associated Press Writer
SINGAPORE (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz said today he was discouraged by Vietnam's choice of new leaders and asserted the changes "snuff out" the possibility of new policies from that government.

Efforts to isolate Vietnam would continue as long as it retains control of Cambodia, he said.

In his first comment since the Vietnamese assembly named as prime minister Pham Hung, a veteran of Hanoi's decades-long struggle to unify the country under communism, Shultz told a news conference:

"As far as we can see, the nature of the people who have now emerged seems to snuff out what seemed like possible, potential flexibility in the situation and doesn't seem consistent with their posturing."

"So it is discouraging," he added.

Hung succeeds Pham Van Dong, 79, who served as prime minister since 1955. Vo Chi Cong was appointed to the largely ceremonial post of president in place of Truong Chinh, 80, who held the office since 1981.

Both new leaders are in their 70s.

The secretary made his remarks at the conclusion of three days of meetings with foreign ministers of the six-nation Association of Southeast Asian Nations.

ASEAN consists of Thailand, Malaysia, Singapore, Indonesia, the Philippines and Brunei.

During the meetings, participants called for Vietnamese withdrawal from Cambodia, which it took over in 1979. They also lamented the flood of refugees who have come from communist Indochina since 1975 and renewed their commitment to help them.

Some 140,000 of the refugees live in temporary camps. The United States will let 32,000 Indochinese refugees enter the country in the fiscal year ending Sept. 30.

The United States and its Southeast Asian allies had been hoping that as the figures who led Vietnam's Communist Party since the 1930s aged and retired, a new generation of leaders would arise and institute new policies.

Vietnamese officials were quoted privately as saying the appointment of Hung, who is said to be suffering liver and heart ailments, is a transitional measure.

"If there comes a time ... that Vietnam is ready to talk sense — meaning, get their troops out of Cambodia and participate in arrangements whereby the people of that country can establish their own government ... and is ready to talk about that, we're ready to do so," Shultz said.

In the meantime, he declared, the United States and its Southeast Asian friends will "do everything we can to isolate the aggressor, Vietnam, economically and diplomatically."

Vietnam's Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach said today that the Cambodian issue could be settled "if the stances of both sides are respected."

Thach made the comment at a news conference when asked about ASEAN's discussions of the Cambodian issue, the Voice of Vietnam radio, monitored in Bangkok, said.

The broadcast gave no details. But Thach evidently was echoing comments made by Communist party chief Nguyen Van Linh in an interview with a West German journalist this past week.

Hanoi says it invaded Cambodia because the Khmer Rouge government then in power in Phnom Penh threatened its security. The Khmer Rouge is now one of three guerrilla groups fighting the Vietnamese and backed by ASEAN, China and other countries.

MIAMI (AP) — Jewish leaders said they may follow the American Jewish Congress in boycotting a meeting here with Pope John Paul II because of the pontiff's plans to receive Austrian President Kurt Waldheim at the Vatican.

"It might endanger our visit to Miami," said Rabbi Gilbert Klapperman, president of the Synagogue Council of America. "Everything is an option. We will be considering the matter very seriously."

On Thursday, the 50,000-member American Jewish Congress said its leaders will boycott the Sept. 11 conference. Waldheim has been accused of taking part in Nazi war crimes during World War II.

The Vatican "must have known that a meeting with Waldheim would outrage anyone with a memory of the Holocaust," said Henry Siegman, executive director of the congress. "Their disregard of such predictable reactions is utterly incomprehensible."

"For Jewish representatives to meet with Pope John Paul in these circumstances would be a desecration of the memory of the victims of the Holocaust in whose destruction Kurt Waldheim has been accused of complicity," he said.

The congress sponsored the research on Waldheim's war record and produced the charges, which Waldheim has vigorously denied.

The Greater Miami Rabbinical Association said it would meet with other Jewish leaders in New York today to discuss whether the conference should still be held.

Timothy Dolan, a secretary to Archbishop Pio Laghi, papal representative in the United States, said it's unlikely the Vatican will reconsider the Waldheim visit.

"(The Vatican) would hope that the meeting with Mr. Waldheim and the Holy Father would not threaten the September meeting," he said. "If anything, the controversy might show the need for continuing dialogue and discussion with Jewish leaders."

Jewish-Vatican relations already were troubled because of the pope's meeting with Palestine Liberation Organization chief Yasser Arafat and the Vatican's refusal to recognize Israel.

Waldheim, former secretary-general of the United Nations, was elected president of Austria last July. In April, the U.S. government barred him from entering the United States, citing accusations that during World War II he aided in the deportation of thousands of Jews and partisans who later died in Nazi death camps.

"There really is a deep sense of outrage, almost betrayal, in the Jewish community," said Rabbi Marc Tanenbaum, director of international relations for the American Jewish Committee.

"We are absolutely dumbfounded as to why the most significant leader of world Catholicism would want to consort with someone who most of the civilized world considers a war criminal," said Rabbi Haskell Bernat, president of the Rabbinical Association of Greater Miami.

Bernat and Jeffrey Berkowitz, a leader of the Greater Miami Jewish Federation, have written Laghi to urge that the Waldheim visit be reconsidered.

Some Jews, especially Orthodox rabbis, have opposed meeting with the pope during his U.S. tour all along, Tanenbaum said.

The Waldheim meeting also threatened to affect an address by a rabbi who is to meet the pope on Sept. 16 in Los Angeles with representatives of the city's Hindu, Buddhist and Islamic communities.

Cover Girl

NEW YORK (AP) — Cosmopolitan readers may do a double-take when they see the July issue next week with singer Madonna on the magazine's cover, which usually features models with little fame.

"Madonna just seemed to have many of the Cosmopolitan girl qualities," said editor Helen Gurley Brown.

"There's really no statement being made and we don't have any juicy details about her personal life," advertising director Seth Hoyt said Thursday. "I think Helen just felt like doing it."

Jazz Fest Honors Gillespie

NEW YORK (AP) — That architect of bebop and emperor of trumpet Dizzy Gillespie will be honored at the upcoming JVC Jazz Festival with a special concert featuring Grammy award-winning Wynton Marsalis.

It is just one of the featured events at the annual jazz fest which opens today with Sarah Vaughan and closes June 28.

The June 23 concert is titled "Young Master-Old Master: Wynton Marsalis Salutes Dizzy Gillespie on his 70th Birthday." However, Gillespie, who turns 70 on Oct. 21, won't just be in the audience listening to Marsalis blow his horn. He'll be working, too, conducting a big band and blowing his own horn with its jauntily upturned bell.

Now that Carnegie Hall is renovated — it was closed at the time of last year's festival — this year's event is back with its usual bursting-at-the-seams schedule.

While the two master trumpeters are at Carnegie Hall Tuesday night, Rolling Stones drummer Charlie Watts and a band of 30 of England's finest jazz musicians will play at Avery Fisher Hall. And at Town Hall, saxophonist Ornette Coleman will play with his quartet from the late 1950s: trumpeter Don Cherry; bassist Charlie Haden; and drummer Billy Higgins. He'll also feature his current seven-man group, the Prime Time Band.

The festival begins on a busy note. Sarah Vaughan will sing with her trio and scat singer Bobby McFerrin will accompany himself with slaps and taps at Carnegie Hall. Marian McPartland gives the first of nine solo piano recitals in Weill Recital Hall at Carnegie Hall. And trumpet legend Miles Davis and Kenny G., an up-and-coming saxophonist, give two performances in Avery Fisher Hall.

Opening night also has a moonlight Blues Cruise starring Texas blues guitarist Albert Collins, with saxophonist David "Fathead" Newman as guest soloist.

Piano concerts during the festival feature Oscar Peterson, George Shearing and Hank Jones. Peterson's will be a solo recital on June 20 in Carnegie Hall. Shearing will be joined by friends, including Dizzy Gillespie, Hank Jones, Jimmy Heath, Ron Carter, Slam Stewart and Oliver Jackson, in "Musical Amusements of Chef George" at Town Hall on June 22.

The last night of the festival places "David Chertok's Giants of Jazz on Film" at the YMHA opposite "The World of Hank Jones" at Town Hall. Jones also will be joined by some of his musician friends.

As for vocalists, the entire evening June 24 at Avery Fisher Hall will be devoted to Ella Fitzgerald with her trio.

FOCUS
Piping For Oil
 Ten years ago, oil began to flow through the $7.7 billion Alaska pipeline. Workers spent months building the 789-mile-long pipeline. The Alaska pipeline is the longest in the United States. The longest pipeline in the world is the Interprovincial Pipe Line Company's crude oil pipeline from Edmonton to Buffalo. The line runs 1,775 miles. Upon completion, the Trans-Siberian Pipeline in the Soviet Union will be the longest in the world — an incredible 2,319 miles.

DO YOU KNOW — Between what two cities does the Alaska pipeline run?
THURSDAY'S ANSWER — The 55-mph speed limit went into effect in 1974.

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY June 20
GENERAL TENDENCIES: A wonderful day to enjoy some favorite activities, and possibly to get a new angle on them. If you're enthusiastic today, you could win a lot of support from friends.
ARIES (March 21 to April 19): It's a good day to stick with what you know and to proceed in a familiar manner. New friends can make this a great day.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Keep your romantic nature on the surface today; your mate has seen far too little of it lately.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): You love to socialize, so get out and visit. Today is a good day for lively activities, friends, and fun.
MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): You can accomplish much today if you look for the chances. Ask for help or support if you need it.
LEO (July 22 to August 21): Be extra willing to make changes if they're beneficial, and finally arrange that trip you've put off for so long.
VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): If you get the help of a business expert, a scheme you dreamed up can become reality. Try to work with your mate.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Community prestige can be yours if you enlist the support of some well-known personalities and close friends.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): If you think your ideas have a lot of merit, they probably do today. You may need extra rest for tomorrow.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Some special thought for your mate can alleviate the tension which has been building up.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Start a home project that can be finished quickly. This will help the whole family feel a sense of accomplishment.
AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): A good day to stay around people who please you, as long as you please them. These friends can help you.
PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Someone nearby is successful in your area of interest. Seeking out this person's help would be extremely prudent.
IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he, or she, will have an innate ability to recognize and understand developing trends. Your child's enthusiastic nature, however, may create a tendency to leave projects unfinished. Teach your progeny to be reliable—early training in mathematics would help.

 The books will tell you that the chance for a finesse succeeding is 50 percent. That is true when you know little or nothing about the hand. Those odds, in some circumstances, can be improved to an absolute certainty.

The auction was routine. East took advantage of the vulnerability to make a light overcall and South introduced his suit. North's raise was automatic, and South had more than enough to venture to game.

The defenders were quick to collect their book. With the club lead marked, East took his high clubs and gave his partner a ruff. West exited with a spade to the ace, and the contract now hinged on declarer being able to avoid losing a diamond. To complicate matters, declarer could take the finesse either way.

While the tendency is to play the overcaller for the queen, declarer decided to learn all he could about the hand before committing himself in diamonds. He started by drawing the trumps, and learned that East had started with five clubs and four hearts. On the fourth trump declarer made a key play—he discarded a diamond from dummy, not a spade.

To complete his count, declarer cashed the king of spades and ruffed the spade he had preserved so carefully. When East followed to these two tricks, he could not have more than one diamond. So declarer cashed the king and confidently continued with a diamond finesse to score his contract.

Note that, had declarer not kept the spade to ruff, his count of the hand would have been incomplete.

Willie Nelson Asks Senate To Provide More Farm Aid

By MIKE ROBINSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Country singer Willie Nelson says his farming skills can be summed up in the batch of hogs he bought years ago for a quarter each.

"I think I sold them for 17 cents apiece," the bearded and pony-tailed singer said Thursday following a Senate farm hearing at which he appealed for action to ease the economic plight of U.S. farmers.

Nelson's self-proclaimed lack of farming skills did not deter him from delivering a strong message to the lawmakers.

In his second appearance before the panel in a year, Nelson, who organized two Farm Aid concerts that raised $8 million, said the woes of rural America seem to be getting worse and that farmers must get more money for their crops.

That view was at variance with latest estimates showing land values bottoming out and crop prices on a slight upswing. Some lawmakers at the hearing noted the tentative improvement over last year.

But no one pressed Nelson or rock star John Cougar Mellencamp, who works with him on the Farm Aid concerts, to reconcile the conflicting views.

"Just keep on doing what you're doing," said Sen. John Melcher, D-Mont., chairman of the Senate agricultural production and price stabilization subcommittee.

"The farmers in this country are dropping out — they're dropping like flies," Nelson told the panel.

Nelson conceded he is "not a farm policy expert" and stopped short of putting his stamp on any specific piece of farm legislation, including the mandatory production-control bill sponsored by Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, which was the nominal subject of the hearing.

"You are the smart guys — you tell me how we're going to do it," Nelson said. He stressed, though, that farmers are not getting enough money for their crops and that changes of some kind should be made.

"The people who have come up to me after the show, before the show have told me the farm crisis is getting worse, not better," Nelson said. "One hundred percent of the people have said this."

Mellencamp told lawmakers he thought "a lot of the problems are being approached from the rear end forward." He said it was obvious that wealthy, large-scale farmers are in good economic condition. But he said the story was far different for poor farmers in South Carolina where he is spending the summer.

"People don't know what poor people look like until they go down there," Mellencamp said. "Those black farmers don't have a chance."

Mellencamp told the lawmakers that it "just seems funny that after my show and Willie's shows they're coming to us" for help with individual farm problems.

"They have no one else to turn to," he said. He said some farmers had even telephoned his office seeking to borrow money.

"We voted for you guys to do what's morally right," Mellencamp said.

The two entertainers raised $8 million in recent months by organizing Farm Aid concerts in Champaign, Ill., and Austin, Texas. Another Farm Aid concert is tentatively set for this fall in Nebraska.

Private Trade Group Plans Meat Promotion In Japan

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A private trade group says it will use $6.5 million in government financing to promote American beef, pork and lamb in Japan, a closely regulated market that has withstood previous U.S. liberalization efforts.

The U.S. Meat Export Federation, a non-profit trade association having the support of agriculture and industry, said the promotion will be financed by the Agriculture Department's Targeted Export Assistance program, or TEA.

Congress authorized the program to help private groups carry out trade promotions abroad on behalf of U.S. producers, particularly in countries that have high tariffs, quotas or non-tariff trade barriers.

"The promising Japanese beef market could be one of the bright spots for U.S. agricultural exports," the federation said recently. "Japanese beef quotas expire in March 1988, and meat industry officials hope for increased access to growing consumer demand."

As it is, sales of U.S. beef to Japan are limited to 58,400 metric tons of high-quality beef, the kind of meat sold in the better hotels and restaurants.

"Current sales of U.S. beef to Japan are nearly $480 million annually, but sales could top $2 billion by 2000 if Japanese quotas are eased and consumers are educated on the attributes of American beef," the federation said.

Beef consumption in Japan averages less than 10 pounds per year, retail weight, compared with about 78 pounds for the average American. The federation said Japanese beef consumption is expected to nearly double by the turn of the century, however.

"The Japanese import quotas, imposed to protect domestic farmers and beef production, are costly to Japanese consumers," the federation said.

It is not a new assertion. The USDA for years has been noting the disparity in food prices around the world, figures that have shown that American consumers usually have the edge over shoppers in other major world capitals.

Agriculture Secretary Richard E. Lyng and U.S. Trade Representative Clayton Yeutter recently were rebuffed in Tokyo when they once again sought open-door treatment for U.S. commodities, including beef, citrus and rice. Lyng included pictures and charts shown how much cheaper food is in the United States.

In response, the Japanese minister of agriculture, Mutsuki Kato, said Japan's "food self-sufficiency rate is low and that it is essential to maintain the present level of domestic agricultural production," according to the Japan International Agricultural Council's newsletter.

But food price comparisons continued with another report this week by the department's Foreign Agricultural Service. It showed that boneless sirloin steak in Tokyo cost $24.30 per pound last month, compared with $4.80 per pound in Washington, D.C.

A boneless pork roast in Tokyo was listed at $6.11 per pound against $2.60 in the U.S. capital. Broilers, at $2.62 per pound for whole birds, compared with 67 cents per pound in Washington, D.C.

How They Voted

WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes in the week ending June 12.

House

HOUSING BILL — By a vote of 179 for and 246 against, the House rejected a Republican alternative to a bill drafted by Democrats (HR 4) authorizing housing and community development programs next fiscal year at a cost of $15.9 billion.

The bill, which was sent to conference with the Senate, funds more than 50 programs and goes nearly $6 billion beyond President Reagan's budget request.

This amendment sought to trim its pricetag by $1.7 billion, cutting spending for programs such as public housing and "Section 8" rental assistance for the poor. And it tried to eliminate a new $100 million "Nehemiah" program under which moderate- and low-income persons would get forgivable $15,000 loans for home purchases.

David Dreier, R-Calif., who voted for the substitute, called the bill "a menace to those who benefit from, administer and pay for our housing and community development programs."

Amendment for Henry Gonzalez, D-Tex., said the bill's outlay for housing is less than was spent before the Reagan Administration took office.

Members voting yes supported the GOP substitute.

North Carolina representatives voting yes were Tim Valentine, D-2; Howard Coble, R-6; Alex McMillan, R-9, and Cass Ballenger, R-10.

Those voting no were Walter Jones, D-1; Martin Lancaster, D-3; David Price, D-4; Stephen Neal, D-5; Charles Rose, D-7; W.G. Hefner, D-8, and James Clarke, D-11.

COLLECTIVE BARGAINING — By a vote of 176 for and 249 against, the House rejected an amendment to eliminate language in behalf of collective bargaining from the fiscal 1988 omnibus housing and community development bill (above).

At issue was a requirement in the bill that existing bargaining agreements be preserved when management of a public housing project is transferred from a housing authority to a tenant-run corporation. The bill enables tenants to take control of their complexes and hire new personnel for maintenance and other tasks.

Supporters of the amendment said the bill's collective bargaining language would make it difficult for tenants to manage their units efficiently and economically, while opponents said the requirement only preserves existing legal agreements.

Members voting yes wanted to strike the language in behalf of collective bargaining.

North Carolina representatives voting yes were Valentine, Lancaster, Coble, McMillan and Ballenger.

Those voting no were Jones, Price, Neal, Rose, Hefner and Clarke.

Senate

CAMPAIGN FINANCE — By a vote of 52 for and 47 against, the Senate failed to achieve the two-thirds majority needed to end a GOP filibuster against Democratic legislation overhauling campaign finance laws.

This kept a freeze on legislation (S 2) to begin a system, voluntary for candidates, of public financing of Congressional general election campaigns coupled with spending limits on primary and general races.

Public funds would be raised by a tax return check-off similar to the mechanism for public funding of presidential races.

Total political action committee (PAC) contributions to Congressional candidates during an election cycle would be limited, even for candidates refusing public funding and the accompanying spending limits.

While Republicans generally opposed the bill's spending limits and public financing, most were sponsoring alternative reform bills, such as a GOP measure to prohibit PAC contributions directly to Congressional candidates.

Most senators voting yes supported public financing of Congressional races and campaign spending limits.

North Carolina Sens. Terry Sanford, D, voted yes; Jesse Helms, R, voted no.

BUDGET WAIVER — The Senate voted, 46 for and 42 against, to loosen fiscal restraints in the 1988 Congressional Budget Resolution to make room for $76 million in new spending expected if the bill (above) providing public financing of Congressional campaigns becomes law.

Senators voting yes wanted to waive the Congressional Budget Resolution to accommodate public funding of House and Senate campaigns. Sanford voted yes and Helms voted no.

What Better Way To Launch An Open House Than With A Boat Show

On June 20th & 21st At Your Port For Waterfront Living

It's not just an open house with balloons and refreshments. It's an open house with a boat show. Some of eastern North Carolina's leading marinas and boat manufacturers will be there displaying run-a-bouts, cruisers, day sailers and sailing yachts.

Pamlico Plantation is a collection of waterfront townhomes and homesites with amenities such as tennis, a waterfront pool, a cedarlined clubhouse and it can all be found just outside your front door. Each property owner also enjoys his own personal boat slip so you can really experience all the pleasures that waterfront living has to offer.

Join us at Pamlico Plantation this Saturday and Sunday for our open house and boat show. Enjoy refreshments, boat rides and the many boats being displayed, but most of all enjoy the beautiful surroundings of our waterfront community at Pamlico Plantation. Now...could you think of a better way to launch an open house? See you there...
