Ill-Fated Crossing To Get Warning Signals

By CLAY DEANHEART
Reflector Staff Writer

Railroad signals and crossing guards reportedly are en route to Greenville from Kentucky for a crossing on state road 1726 near Eastern Pines — a crossing where four major accidents have occurred in the last 13 months.

The signals will be coming too late for Radinravindra V. Raju, 27, who was killed Wednesday when his car and a westbound CSX train collided at the intersection.

Until the signals do arrive and are installed, the Department of Transportation has erected stop signs on either side of the crossing in what Board of Transportation member Randy Doub says is a stop-gap effort to stop the accidents.

Highway Patrol Sgt. C.E. Pearce noted that Raju's death occurred in just one of a series of accidents that started in May 1986 when a train smashed into a school bus, injuring 12 elementary school students.

That was followed by accidents in March and in April involving automobiles. Raju's death was the first at the cross.

Doub observed the crossing Wednesday afternoon, only hours before the stop signs were put up.

"It's amazing to me that few cars slowed down to look (at the crossing) and even fewer cars stopped," Doub said. "I was amazed. It wasn't just the kids, it was grown people just not even slowing down and going right through."

Doub said drivers have a responsibility to keep the roads safe. "We (the DOT) can only do so much to make the road safe and drivers have to exercise their responsibility at unsignaled crossings to slow down, stop, look and listen," he said.

Sgt. Pearce agrees. "The driver has a responsibility, too," he said. "Most drivers assume a train is not coming if they don't see cross arms or lights. They don't hear the whistle until it's too late."

Emmett Stafford, signals and geometric projects engineer with DOT, said the crossing signals were authorized on April 22.

According to Doub, the crossing became a high priority with DOT after the school bus accident, but funds for the project couldn't be obtained until the new fiscal year began in Ocober of 1986. Still, DOT authorized Norfolk Southern Railroad Co., the firm that owns the tracks, to draw up plans for the crossing in September 1986. Then in April 1987, after the plans had been reviewed, the funds were released for the construction. "We have been pushing on this for the last several months because of the accident history of the spot," he said.

Dick Dulaney, general superintendent of construction with Norfolk Southern, said the crossing project has taken first priority with the company. "We hope to try and get this thing (the guard rails and hanging lights) in before the last part of June. As soon as the materials show up, we'll get it installed," he said.

Dulaney noted that the contract for the installation was awarded on Wednesday to the W.E. Russell company of Atlanta. Although Dulaney had not been able to reach Russell by Thursday morning, he said the company would be on the site as soon as possible after the materials arrived. Efforts to reach Dulaney on Friday were unsuccessful.

Reagan Axes Permanent 'Fairness Doctrine' Rule

By MERRILL HARTSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan vetoed legislation to make permanent the nearly 40-year-old "Fairness Doctrine" rule that broadcasters have condemned as a violation of their First Amendment rights, the White House announced Saturday.

"This type of content-based regulation by the federal government is, in my judgment, antagonistic to the freedom of expression guaranteed" by the Constitution, Reagan said in his veto message, and he noted the Federal Communications Commission had found against its own rule.

"In any other medium besides broadcasting, such federal policing of the editorial judgment of journalists would be unthinkable," he said. "The framers of the First Amendment, confident that public debate would be freer and healthier without the kind of interference represented by the 'Fairness Doctrine,' chose to forbid such regulations in the clearest terms," he said.

Reagan pointed to the constitutional language ordering that Congress "shall make no law ... abridging the freedom of the speech, or of the press."

More recently, he noted, the Supreme Court struck down a "right-of-access" statute — a sort of fairness doctrine for newspapers. Reagan said the court had spoken of "the statute's intrusion into the function of the editorial process. ..."

Reagan called the rule "unconstitutional" and said the doctrine "defeats its own purpose" of encouraging the airing of divergent points of view. He said "history has shown that the dangers of an overly timid or biased press cannot be averted through bureaucratic regulation, but only through the freedom and competition that the First Amendment sought to guarantee."

The Fairness Doctrine requires radio and television broadcasters to cover issues of public importance and present opposing views.

Reagan vetoed the bill Friday before leaving for a weekend of rest at Camp David, Md., but his action and veto message were not released by the White House until Saturday.

Rep. John D. Dingell, D-Mich., chairman of House Energy and Commerce Committee and sponsor of the bill, said he was not going to give up his fight to put the doctrine into law.

"President Reagan's veto of the Fairness Doctrine bill flies in the face of urgings from citizens of all political persuasions and from all parts of the political spectrum," Dingell said. "We will move forward and will give the president many opportunities to reconsider the misguided judgment shown by this veto."

Andy Schwartzman, executive director of Media Access Project, a public interest law firm, accused Reagan of "provoking an unnecesary confrontation" with Congress and said "it's only a matter of time" before the president's veto is overriden.

"Supporters expect that the bill will become law one way or another," he said.

Branch To Speak At Dedication

EVERETT

BRANCH

Retired N.C. Supreme Court Chief Justice Joseph W. Branch will be the guest speaker for dedication ceremonies of the Clifton W. Everett Building at Pitt Community College June 28 at 2 p.m.

Branch served on the N.C. Supreme Court from 1966 until 1986 and was chief justice from 1979 until 1986. Prior to his service on the Supreme Court, he was legislative counsel for governors, a representative to the N.C. General Assembly and a practicing attorney.

The Clifton W. Everett Building houses PCC's Learning Resources Center, which includes the library, learning center, audio-visual services center and small business center. The 34,747-square-foot building opened in April. The total project cost was $2,260,590. The facility primarily is used by Pitt Community College students, faculty and staff, but is available for use by the public.

The building is being dedicated in honor of Clifton W. Everette, who has served as a member of the Pitt Community College board of trustees since 1962 and as the board's chairman since 1977.

A native of Robersonville, Everett has practiced law in Greenville and Bethel for many years. He was president of the N.C. Bar Association in 1983-1984.

The dedication ceremony will be held on the second floor of the Everett Building, located on N.C. 11 south of Greenville. An open house and tours will follow the ceremony.

Filing Period In Municipal Elections To Open July 3

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The filing period for candidates for municipal elections to be held later this year will begin at noon on July 3, according to Margaret Hardee, supervisor for the Pitt County Board of Elections.

The filing period for candidates for seats on the Pitt County Board of Education will also begin July 3.

Mrs. Hardee said that although July 3 will be a holiday for other county offices, the elections office will be open for the start of the filing period. And the filing period for all offices will end at noon on Aug. 7.

Candidates for office in Greenville, Falkland and Simpson, and for the education board, will file at the elections office on Second Street in Greenville. Candidates for office in other towns in the county will file at the various town offices.

Voters in Farmville, where a mayor and three commissioners will be elected — the mayor for a two-year term and the commissioners for four-year terms — will vote on Oct. 6.

All other Pitt County towns will hold elections on Nov. 3, the same date as balloting for school board members.

Ayden, Bethel and Fountain voters will elect a mayor and five commissioners for two-year terms, while voters in Falkland will choose a Three-Time Entrant Is Miss N.C.

RALEIGH (AP) — Lori Wrenn Boggs, Miss Cabarrus County and a contestant for the third time, won the 50th Miss North Carolina Pageant Saturday night.

The 26-year-old native of Kannapolis, who described herself as the oldest contestant in the pageant, received a $5,000 scholarship.

Miss Boggs was representing the county for the second time after entering the pageant in 1983. She was the pageant's second runner-up as Miss Western Piedmont in 1985.

At age 26, Miss Boggs was competing in the last year she was eligible for the pageant.

Miss Boggs and Alicia Ann Lassiter, the only double winner in two days of preliminary competition, led 10 contestants into the finals Saturday night.

Miss Lassiter, 22, won a talent award in the pageant's opening round Wednesday night and took the swimsuit competition Friday night.

Also chosen for the semifinals were Donna Lee Ashley, Miss Fayetteville; Mary Bridgette Parker, Miss Johnston County; Pamela Page Sheffield, Miss Kinston-Lenoir Co.; Connie Teresa Bradshaw, Miss Rocky Mount; Christina Carole de Matteis, Miss Greater Raleigh; Altman Ann Allen, Miss Western Piedmont; Dedra Rae Tart, Miss White Lake Water Festival; and Deborah Faye Earp, Miss Wilson.

Miss Parker was a winner in the talent competition Friday night. Miss Boggs and Miss Tart were winners in Thursday's preliminaries.

The winner will represent North Carolina in the Miss America pageant in September.

Kinsey Says ECU Will Grow

By CLAY DEANHARDT
Reflector Staff Writer

Eight years ago, Charlotte lawyer C. Ralph Kinsey Jr. was asked by Gov. Jim Hunt to take a role in the growth of East Carolina University as a member of its board of trustees. Four and one-half years later the board named him chairman.

Friday, as the trustees met in a closed executive session, his active role in ECU's growth came to an end. Kinsey's second term as a board member will end on June 30, and according to the rules, he has to step down for at least a year.

From an office in the Spilman Building on campus Friday, Kinsey talked about the last eight years and the future of ECU as he prepared for his last board meeting.

"I think that two of the most significant contributions that the boards I have served on have made to the university have been the selections of Dr. (John) Howell and Dr. (Richard)Eakin as chancellors of this university," Kinsey said.

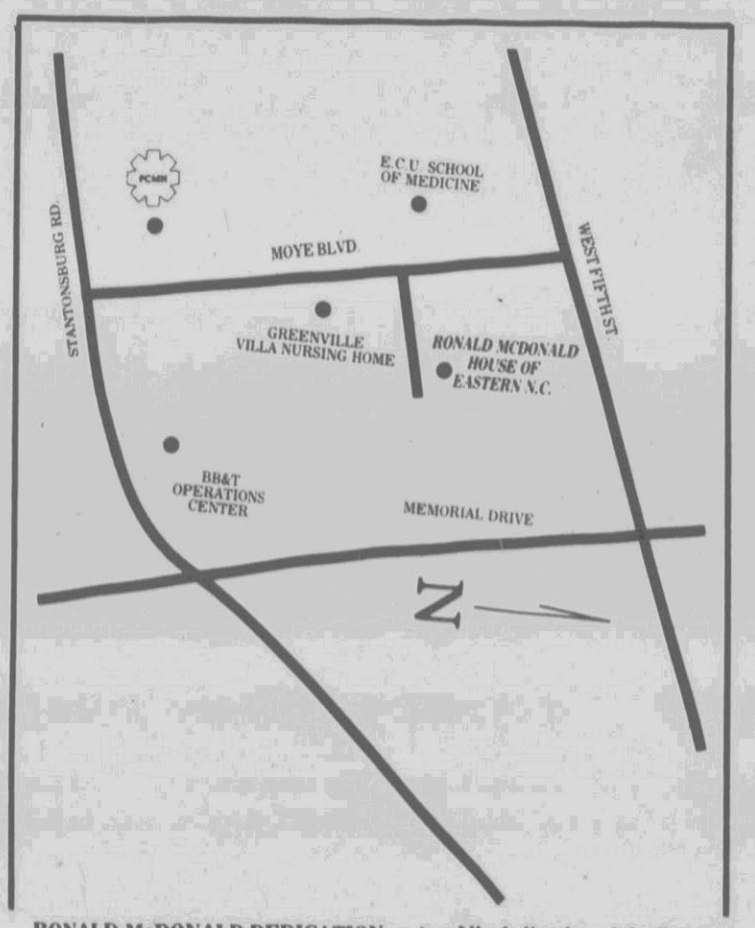

"We have experienced Dr. Howell's chancellorship and will benefit for many years to come," he continued. "I personally would like that this university's destiny under the Eakins — our destiny — will be even greater under their leadership."

Kinsey noted that the board has been instrumental in helping to change the public image of ECU. He said he is proud of the way that the board has worked with Howell and Ken Karr, athletic director at the university, to try to bring academic and fiscal responsibility to the athletic program, saying there has been considerable improvement in both areas over the last several years.

Board members have also helped ECU's image in fund-raising campaigns, by giving of their own and in soliciting contributions, he said. "We've been good ambassadors out in the business community and in our own community in terms of sharing with friends and constituencies the real quality that is here," he noted.

Over the last eight years, the university has gone through major changes, the most notable being the growth of the medical school to the point where Kinsey says it is being

Rebel Grenade Attack Kills Man At Police Station

CEBU CITY, Philippines (AP) — Suspected Communist rebels threw two grenades at a police station in a busy section of the city Saturday, killing at least one civilian and injuring 30 other people, officials said.

Ten of the injured were in serious condition following the blasts in the Carbon district of Cebu City, the Philippines' second-largest city, police said.

Police identified the dead civilian as Carlos Cagaanan, 62, a Commissions of Elections employee who happened to be walking past the station at the time of the attack. The injured included seven police officers and 23 civilians.

No group immediately claimed responsibility.

But Brig. Gen. Edgardo Abenina, the area military commander, immediately blamed Communist guerrillas of the New People's Army for the 7 p.m. attack.

Abenina told reporters the military had received reports that the guerrillas, with the support of unidentified local politicians, were planning a series of attacks in the city 360 miles southeast of Manila.

Police and military reinforcements rushed to the area, which is about 600 feet from City Hall and the site of the Carbon Market, the city's largest.

The first grenade hit the one-story police station's iron fence and bounced onto the middle of the street, Patrolman Josephus Baliguat told The Associated Press in a telephone interview.

The grenade exploded near where the station's commander, Lt. Neville Campos, was briefing his men before sending them out on patrol, Baliguat said. The second grenade, thrown less than a minute after the first, landed on the roof of the Carbon Market behind the station, Baliguat said.

Campos suffered shrapnel wounds in the arm and chest. In an interview from his hospital bed, Campos said he heard two large explosions but that there could have been more.

The other victims were passersby and market stall owners who were putting their wares away for the night.

Initial reports said the two grenades had blown the roof off the police station, but police later said the station and the market suffered only minor damages.

Witnesses told police they saw about seven men acting suspiciously around the station shortly before the attack, but authorities said they had no idea how many assailants there were.

Police made no arrests, but Baliguat said they suspected two people he declined to identify for fear of jeopardizing the investigation.

An hour after the attack, four men shot and seriously wounded an off-duty policeman, Patrolman Jesus Negapatan, as he was headed for a shop less than a mile from the targeted station.

Officials had no information on the identity of the attackers.

Wisconsin Junior Miss Wins Title

By GARRY MITCHELL
Associated Press Writer

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — Chuti Tiu, a 17-year-old Wisconsin pianist, won the 1987 America's Junior Miss title Saturday night and the $30,000 college scholarship that accompanied the honor.

"I'm so incredibly surprised," Miss Tiu said, emerging from a crush of hugs from the 51 other contestants. "We're all just equal. I am going to do the best job I can."

First runner-up was 17-year-old Kimberly Johnson, Indiana's Junior Miss and second runner-up was Paige Porter, Oklahoma's Junior Miss.

Miss Johnson of Goshen, Ind. received a $10,000 college scholarship and Miss Porter of Bethany, Okla. took home a $7,000 scholarship.

Miss Tiu was chosen from the five finalists selected Friday night, including Karen Klotter, 17, of Lexington, Ky.; Christine Clarkson ,17, of Greeley, Colo.; Indiana's Miss Johnson, Oklahoma's Miss Porter, 17, of Bethany, and Oklahoma's Miss Porter.

Miss Tiu accepted the title from 1986 Junior Miss Lori Jo Smith of Vienna, Va., at the televised final. The judges this year were all former Junior Miss winners.

Miss Tiu said she would use her scholarship at Northwestern University. She said she hopes to go into politics "move into the House of Representatives, the Senate, governor — wherever it will take me."

Miss Tiu said she traveled to China to pursue her ethnic past and returned more knowledgable about her father's homeland.

Her father, Dr. Alfonso Tiu, and mother, Lou Divina Tiu, who is Filipino, embraced their daughter on stage.

Former NFL quarterback Joe Namath was the master of ceremonies for the program at the Mobile Municipal Auditorium.

This year's field, comprised of girls from the 50 states, the District of Columbia and Puerto Rico, competed for $85,850 in scholarships and prizes awarded annually.

Fourteen preliminary winners were chosen Thursday in five categories — poise and appearance, creative and performing arts, spirit of Junior Miss, physical fitness, and scholastic achievement.

On Friday, Miss Porter and Miss Johnson won in the creative and performing arts category; Carole Koizumi of Hawaii and Miss Tiu were chosen as the spirit of Junior Miss winners; and Deanna Duncan of Tennessee and Beth Howell of Mississippi won in the scholastic achievement category.

Bath Board Gets Five Members

Gov. Jim Martin has announced five appointments to the Historic Bath Commission.

Appointed were George C. Bailey, Jane Alligood and Christina Williams, all of Washington, N.C., Anna Douglas Biggs of Elizabeth City and Toni S. Pegg Doub of Greenville. Terms for these appointees will expire June 30, 1992.

Bailey is a plasterer-contractor who has been very involved in the restoration of historic projects in and around Washington and Bath. Mrs. Alligood is media coordinator at John Small School in Washington and is on the city planning board. Mrs. Williams, a ballet mistress, owns the classical balet school Ballet Arts Workshop in Washington and has been active in historic preservation in the Davidson and the Washington areas.

Mrs. Biggs, originally from Washington, is a reading and math teacher at J.C. Sawyer School in Elizabeth City. Mrs. Doub is a teacher with the Pitt County school system.

The 28-member commission is charged with acquiring, disposing, restoring and maintaining historic properties in and near the town of Bath in Beaufort County. It also advises the secretary of cultural resources on the administration of Bath State Historical Site.

Jumbo Jets Hit While Taxiing

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — A South African Boeing 747, taxiing toward the runway Saturday, struck a parked Jordanian jumbo jet, causing considerable damage and injuring a woman from Utah, an airport spokesman and police said.

Harald Kuntner, an official at Vienna's Schwechat airport, said the right wing of the South African Airways jetliner sliced into the forward left side of the Boeing 747 of the Jordanian airline Alia that was preparing to depart for New York.

A police spokesman, reached by telephone at the airport, identified the woman as Patricia Terry Holland, 45, of Provo, Utah.

The policeman, who declined to give his name, said the victim also suffered "a slight shock" but she was released after being treated at Vienna's Lorenz Boehler hospital.

According to an airport press release, the South African plane was bound for Johannesburg via Zurich, Switzerland.

It said the South African jet had 20 passengers and a crew of 17 while the Alia plane had 232 passengers and a crew of 21. The report said the Alia passengers would be flown to New York on another plane but plans for the Johannesburg flight had not been completed.

Kuntner was asked how the accident occurred despite radio guidance of the two pilots and he said, "It need not have been the (South African) pilot alone. Several factors may be involved."

He said a commission was investigating the cause of the accident and both planes would be grounded for repairs.

Roderick M. Phillips
DIRECTOR

DIFFERENT STYLES OF MOURNING

The impact of death on a family can vary widely. It depends on many factors including closeness of the family, age of the members, whether the death was expected or unexpected. Individuals and families also have different styles and attitudes toward grief and mourning.

Therefore, it is important not to define too narrowly what funeral rites or behaviours are appropriate for the bereaved. To do so can lead to confusion, tension, or anguish on the part of the survivors. The modern funeral director takes the lead in acknowledging that there are such differences, and that the funeral service must be flexible enough to account for them.

Whether we like it or not, there is a changing social and intellectual environment in which death is experienced today. It is wrong for the funeral director, and the community at large, to insist that the bereaved display the traditional forms of grieving if this goes against their beliefs or feelings.

Elections

Officer elections for District 97 of the State Employees Association of North Carolina representing East Carolina University will be held on Tuesday. Polling locations and times are: the Brody Building, 11 a.m. to 2 p.m.; Joyner Library, noon to 2 p.m. and 4 p.m. to 5 p.m.; and the Student Supply Store, noon to 2 p.m.

NEW CHURCH — This is an architect's rendering of the front of the new Peace Presbyterian Church complex to be completed in six to eight months. Groundbreaking ceremonies are scheduled for Sunday at 7 p.m. at the building site on N.C. 11 across from Pitt Community College.

Peace Presbyterian To Hold Groundbreaking For Building

The congregation of Peace Presbyterian Church is scheduled to break ground in an open ceremony Sunday at 7 p.m. for the first stage of a multistage sanctuary, education, recreation and fellowship complex, according to the Rev. W.C. Goodnight, pastor of the church.

The new building will be located on N.C. 11 across from Pitt Community College.

In addition to classrooms, kitchenette, preschool center and administrative offices, the first unit will contain a sanctuary with semi-circular seating for 175, expandable to 300 in the next phase of development.

James G. Hite of Greenville, the architect for the project, has used a combination of triangular windows in the eaves and a 12-feet wide circular window at the front of the sanctuary in his plans to provide natural lighting in the building. The exterior is designed with a celtic cross, an often-used symbol of the Presbyterian Church, on the top.

On May 31 the congregation unanimously voted to award Farrior and Sons of Greenville the $350,000 contract for construction. Construction should be completed in six to eight months. Including purchase of land and furnishings, total cost for this first phase of development will be approximately $500,000.

The new building will provide the first permanant structure for the congregation, which will meet in the Rotary building until the building is completed.

Peace Presbyterian Church was organized in June 1984.

L. Barry Harrell, a consultant for over 12 years, is president of Carolina Management Consultants. The firm is located at 107 Oakmont Drive.

Men's Day

Bethel Chapel Free Will Baptist Church, Bethel, will have its annual Men's Day services Sunday at 11 a.m.

Revival services will be held Monday through Friday at 7:30 p.m. with the Rev. W.J. Best of Kinston as the speaker.

Friday Thefts

Greenville police said their were six thefts in the area Friday.

Officer L.R. Kepler said the larceny of a microwave was reported at South Greenville school at 7:45 a.m. An unknown suspect broke in the window in the boy's restroom to gain entrance to the school, Kepler said.

A car stereo-cassette player and approximately 30 cassette tapes were reported taken from a vehicle at 107 Shiloh Drive, Apt. 7, at 8:25 a.m. according to Officer J.M. Jones.

At 2:20 p.m. Dodge Stores reported a larceny by an employee of $299, according to Officer T.E. Nevelle. The money possibly was taken from a deposit drop box, he said.

A 12-gauge shotgun was reported taken at 6:30 p.m. from 1009 Forbes St., said Officer K.M. Smeltzer.

According to Officer M.A. Joyner at 7:36 p.m. a red push lawn mower was reported taken from a shed at 1601 Chestnut St. A lock was removed from the shed, Joyner said.

Officer J.A. Bartlett said that at 7:55 p.m. a gray men's 10-speed bicycle was reported stolen from 207 N. Eastern St.

Purse Taken

Officer C.G. Alphin said a pink wicker pocketbook that contained $55 in cash was taken from a car at Ringold Towers. The theft was reported at 1:09 a.m. Saturday.

Workshop

The need for a state geological survey and an assessment of phosphate as a world resource were addressed Saturday at a seminar concluding a weeklong workshop for earth science teachers conducted by the geology department of East Carolina University.

State geologist Steve Conrad also presented a report on problems of compliance with regulations governing the mining industry in North Carolina. Frederick Allen, executive director of the N.C. Aggregates Association, said that aggregates for the construction industry are an "indispensable commodity."

McAuliffe Study Fellowships Ready

The newly established Christa McAuliffe Fellowships are available to North Carolina public educators for the 1987-1988 school year, providing one $25,000 fellowship and two $5,000 fellowships to three outstanding teachers in September.

The Christa McAuliffe Fellowship Program is a federally funded program honoring the late Sharon Christa McAuliffe, the teacher-astronaut who was killed on the Challenger space shuttle in January 1986.

The fellowships are awarded to encourage teachers to continue their education, to develop innovative programs and to engage in other educational activities that will improve the knowledge and skills of techers and the education of students.

Full-time private and public school teachers who are U.S. citizens are eligible to apply for the fellowships. Fellows will be selected by a seven-member statewide panel, representative of school administrators, teachers, parents and institutions of higher learning.

The application deadline for the Christa McAuliffe Fellowships is July 15. Interested teachers should contact their local superintendent or Grace Drain, Division of Teacher Education, State Department of Public Instruction, at 733-4736.

Kinsey Sees ECU As Area Leader

recognized as one of the finest growing medical schools in the country.

"The board has played a strong but silent supportive role in the development of the medical school," Kinsey said. "Members of the earlier boards were instrumental in the establishment (of the school). But the development of that medical school is for the professionals."

Kinsey gives all the credit for the actions of the board to the board as a whole, and to the foundations set for them by earlier boards.

"When I came here as a student (he graduated in 1964 with a bachelor's degree in business administration) — I came into a situation that was made available by those before me. The same thing happened when I joined the board.

"We inherited an institution that was very strong. We've been able to harness growth and collect it — growth that was destined to come simply had to bear fruit," he said.

He also said it has been important for ECU to have trustee members from other regions of the state, as he is. He noted that while the university's primary area of service was eastern North Carolina, it in fact serves the entire state. Being from the western part of the state, he said, had helped him and his wife build ties for ECU with that area.

Kinsey sees the future of ECU having a direct impact on the region and the entire state. "I see for East Carolina a role of being at the forefront in the economic development of eastern North Carolina, at the forefront of providing health care and delivering health care services at a level eastern North Carolina deserves," he said.

C. RALPH KINSEY

He said he also sees an opportunity for ECU to help obliterate illiteracy in North Carolina through its school of education.

Speaking about the role of ECU in the universty system, Kinsey said that it should be reclassified as a doctoral degree-granting university, noting that in a number of areas the faculty is already qualified.

But, he said, the university should be selective in the doctoral degrees it persues and not take degrees on simply to have doctorates to give. He does not see the university as a research institution at the level of UNC-Chapel Hill or N.C. State, but that it does have potential to define research and service on its own terms.

The role of the board, Kinsey said, will continue to be vital to the university. He said the board must provide leadership and direction, financially support the university, be the chancellor's best friend and stay informed about the university and issues facing higher education.

"The board must work within the system to make sure that ECU continues to receive the level of financial support and support of its academic endeavors that are neccessary to insure its mission of service," he said.

Prison Dorm

MOUNT PLEASANT, N.C. (AP) — A new dormitory that opened last week at Cabarrus County's state prison unit represents the state's success at meeting a challenge to improve prison conditions, state Correction Secretary Aaron Johnson says.

The new dormitory will house 100 prisoners in four wings. Each wing contains double bunk beds and a daytime recreation area.

mayor and three commissioners for four-year terms.

In Grifton and Simpson voters will select three board members — Grifton's commissioners for four-years and Simpson's council members for two-years.

Five aldermen will be elected for two-year terms in Grimesland, while Winterville voters will choose two aldermen for four-year terms.

A mayor and six council members will be chosen by Greenville voters for two-year terms in new district-at-large voting.

Greenville voters will be selecting five council members from districts — one each from five single-member districts — as well as a mayor and one council member through at-large voting for the first time this year.

And a new method of electing members of the education board — two from each of six new districts — will be in effect in November.

The new city election plan, designed to increase minority voting strength, was approved by the City Council in July 1986 to replace the present at-large election method. Districts 1 and 2 are predominatly black, while Districts 3, 4 and 5 are predominantly white.

The school board election plan — including the establishment of two predominately black districts and four predominately white districts — was created by an act of the General Assembly in mid-May.

Board of Education candidates, according to Mrs. Hardee, must file and run for a particular seat. People elected initially to Seat A in each of the districts will serve for a term ending in 1992, while Seat B winners in each district will serve a term to expire in 1990.

Maps defining the elections districts for the Greenville City Council and the county school board have been ordered and will be mailed to registered voters as soon as possible, Mrs. Hardee said.

With the maps will be a request for voters to mark the location of their residence on the maps, give some information and sign and return the maps — either in person or by mail — to the elections board office so that each voter will be assigned to the correct district, according to Mrs. Hardee.

"As the maps are marked, signed and returned, revised voter registration cards, showing the responding voters exactly what district they will be eligible to file as a candidate from and in which they will be eligible to vote, will be issued," Mrs. Hardee said. The maps and revised voter registration cards will also show what County Commissioner election district the voter lives in.

The General Assembly last week passed bills creating a new method of electing members of the Board of Commissioners — six from districts which are identical to new districts established for the Board of Education, and three at-large representatives who can live anywhere in the county and will be elected by countywide vote.)

Mrs. Hardee said the last day for persons to register to vote in the Farmville municipal election will be Sept. 7, while the last day for voters to register to cast ballots in the other municipal elections and in voting for members of the Board of Education will be Oct. 5.

DURHAM (AP) — Dr. Doyle Graham, a professor of pathology and director of the Integrated Toxicology Program, has been appointed dean of medical education at Duke University Medical Center.

Boards To Meet Over Budget

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — The Cumberland County boards of education and commissioners will meet Monday in a final effort to settle a budget dispute before going to the court system.

The school board Thursday voted to initiate a state appeals process in reaction to a commissioners' decision Monday to withold $3.5 million intended for educators' salary supplements in the 1987-88 budget.

State law requires the boards to meet and make a "good faith effort" to settle the dispute. But if a compromise cannot be reached Monday, the school board may appeal within three days to the clerk of superior court. The clerk must hear the case and render a decision within 10 days. Either side may then appeal to Superior Court within 10 days.

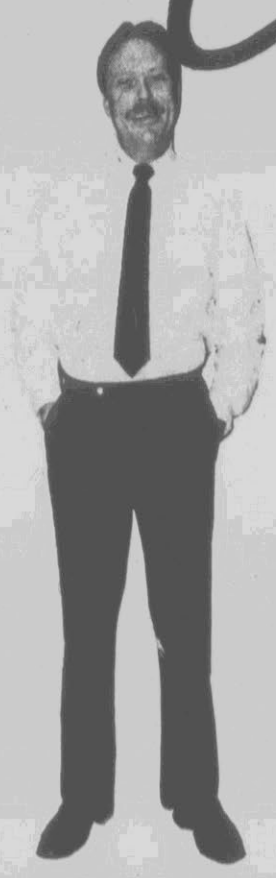

The commissioners want the school board to adopt a supplemental pay plan that would freeze the local salary portion of top administrators' pay. The school board has adopted a plan that will raise teachers' supplements and hold the line on top administrators' supplements but does not keep local salary from being increased according to state pay raises.

Bakker Endorses Effort To Restore His Ministry

By WILLIAM STRACENER
Associated Press Writer

FORT MILL, S.C. (AP) — Former PTL president and chairman Jim Bakker has pledged his "total endorsement" to a grassroots movement to have the deposed minister and his wife restored to the television ministry they founded, the head of the newly formed group said Saturday.

Vicki Goodman Meadows, 34, of Collinsville, Ill., president of the Bring Bakker Back Club, also said the decision by Jim and Tammy Bakker to sell their Palm Springs, Calif., house was another sign the couple would fight to keep their lakefront home in Tega Cay. PTL has said it owns the house, but the Bakkers say it was given to them by the ministry.

Mrs. Meadows said she met with Bakker for more than an hour Friday night and received his support for the club, which was formed earlier this week.

"He gave his total endorsement to this organization," Mrs. Meadows said. "We will have that in writing."

She also predicted the Bakkers would be back at PTL within four months.

"In 90 to 120 days, our job will be over because Jim Bakker will be back in office," Mrs. Meadows said.

The group is working out of a two-room suite at the Holiday Inn across the street from Carowinds theme park, which is less than 10 miles from the Bakker home. Mrs. Meadows, speaking in the hallway outside the suite, said Bakker is planning to visit the club's offices "occasionally" and that his daughter, Tammy Sue Chapman, will begin working for the group Monday.

A 3-by-15 red-white-and-blue banner that says, "Welcome Home Jim and Tammy. The BBB Club Sign-in Here," is in front of the hotel. Another banner hangs from the club's balcony. Inside the hotel signs lead people to the suite, which doesn't have a bank of telephones but just one phone in each room.

The Rev. Jerry Falwell, who took over PTL at Bakker's request in March, has said he won't allow Bakker to return to the television ministry, which owes creditors $72 million and has filed for protection under Chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code.

Mrs. Meadows also said the Bakkers' decision to sell their home in Palm Springs meant they weren't planning to give up the $1.3 million home they're living in now. Reporters have been outside the home since the Bakkers returned to it last week.

"That (the decision to sell the house) should speak for itself, that Mr. Bakker's intention is to stay," she said. "We have no intention of leaving. He doesn't need a house. He has a house here."

The California home will be shown to interested buyers beginning Monday, said Marge Reynolds, a sales associate for Cherokee Real Estate in Bermuda Dunes. She said the home is listed for $600,000, the same price paid for it in February by a trust controlled by the former television evangelists.

Mrs. Meadows said the BBB Club has 200,000 supporters, including many of the 120,000 lifetime partners.

A person must give PTL a one-time gift of $1,000 to become a lifetime partner.

Mrs. Meadows said she was basing her estimate on the number of telephone calls, telegrams and letters from supporters of the Bakkers to the couple and to her parents, Harold and Vestal Goodman, former PTL personalities.

Martin Urges Renewed Southern Commitment To Boosting Schools

By JOSEPH B. FRAZIER
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — North Carolina Gov. Jim Martin, who says he can remember a time when the South lagged so far behind in education that "it was as if we had no interest if the South ever rose again," was elected chairman of the Southern Regional Education Board Saturday.

"We have made measureable progress during the past two years in enhancing academic standards, increasing teacher performance and salaries and improving the preparation of our students to become responsible and productive citizens," Martin said. "However, the true test of our success will be our determination to sustain quality edcucation through our continuing committment of resources and energy.

"It is widely acknowledged that our southern states are leading the nation in strengthening the quality of education in all of their schools and colleges." Martin said in his acceptance speech.

Martin succeeds Georgia Gov. Joe Frank Harris. Martin will preside over a July meeting of the Local Government Advisory Council in Naples, Fla., which will be attended by 10 to 12 representatives from each member state. He also will host an executive committee meeting of the board in north carolina in December, according to Martin's press secretary Tim Pittman.

Former South Carolina Gov. Richard Riley told the board that educational gains should be made as visible as possible in the South to avoid losing the momentum of improvements made in recent years.

Riley, chairman of the SREB's Commission for Educational Quality, said that despite the gains, the group's 15 member states face stiff problems, especially dropouts.

He said 10 of the 15 states have dropout rates above the national average of 29.4 percent.

"There are more students droping out of high school each year in the SREB states than there are freshmen entering all of the public two-year and four-year colleges and universities as full-time students in SREB states," he said.

An SREB study said there about 2,200 dropouts a day in the 15-state region.

Riley compared improving an educational system to building a house. It is easy to see the progress when the foundation is being laid and the walls are going up, he said, but when the finer points are being finished, progress is less visible.

"We are nearing the end of the visible phase," he said, noting that voters and legislators prefer to see progress when allocating more money to education.

Martin said the South once claimed its education was bad because the region was poor.

"It was a poor excuse, and we cannot hide behind it any more," he said.

But Martin said a high rate of illiteracy or functional illiteracy continues to plague the region.

He recalled a recent look through his high school yearbook. "The eighth grade class picture was larger than the ninth grade picture," he said, adding that classes got smaller as they progressed because of dropouts.

"We weren't really aware of it at the time," Martin said. "Most of them left to take jobs in the mill and we just didn't see them anymore."

He said colleges should start immediately to recruit the brightest high school students as potential teachers. But he said pay would have to go up and other incentives be brought in to keep them in education.

Speakers at Saturday's meeting urged closer liaison between high schools and two- and four-year colleges.

An SREB study urged that high school testing be re-done to better assess whether a student is ready for college-level work. It said most of the 15 states have increased the requirements for admission to four-year colleges or are preparing to do so.

The SREB was founded in 1948 as the nation's first interstate compact fr education. Its goal is to increase the quality of education in the region.

Trucking Lobby Backs Low Speed

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Trucking association officials say the 55 mph speed limit saves lives, gas and money, and they hope federal officials will put the brakes on raising the speed limit to 65.

"We are on record opposing the 65 limit," Eb Peters, executive director of the North Carolina Trucking Association, said. "We have more than a generation of people who are indocrinated to the 55 limit and we just feel more comfortable at that speed."

Sam Boylston, executive director of the South Carolina Trucking Association, agrees.

"We found out a long time ago that trucks could operate safer and have less maintenance and fewer accidents at 55 than at 65," Boylston said.

The 135-member executive committee of the American Trucking Association, the nation's largest trucking lobbying group, voted last week to fight raising the speed limit where states have not already done so. The ATA also says it opposes extending higher speed limits beyond rural interstates.

Standard Trucking Co.'s 500 trucks operate most efficiently at about 58 miles per hour so the Charlotte-based carrier has no plans to change its driving patterns, said president G.A. Sywassink.

"Our fuel economy is significantly better at 55 than a 60," said Sywassink. "I see the guys running down the road 80 miles an hour like you do, but very seldom is it a driver with one of the industry's major companies."

ATA President Thomas Donohue said he was mostly concerned that speed limits will next be raised on suburban interstates, turnpikes, connecting roads and good secondary highways. Thirty-two states, including neighboring Tennessee, have raised limits on rural interstates since Congress acted April 6.

"I'm worried about safety, I'm worried about how many people we can keep at 55, but I'm also very worried about the second generation of 'let's get rid of the 55 mile an hour speed limit," Donohue said.

Transportation Departments in North Carolina and South Carolina are studying which interstate sections merit higher speeds, with the change likely to occur in July in South Carolina and in August in North Carolina.

"Basically, at 55 they (highway patrol officers) can get you faster with a speeding ticket than at 65," said Rayshon Caldwell, an Ansonia, Conn., driver for Interstate Van Lines.

"The same guys who drive 75 to 80 will do it at 55 or 65," said Caldwell.

Lumberton Doctor Gets New Pig Pets

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — Dr. Raymond Sattler says that after the death of his debutante sow, Norma Jean, he just couldn't stand the thought of returning to a more conventional pet.

So Sattler and his wife, Deborah, picked out two replacements for Norma Jean and brought the pigs home to Lumberton last week.

"'They're so pretty," Sattler said. "We've had so much fun with pigs, we can't let them go, so we decided to get more."

Elizabeth Margaret, or Ellie Mae, and Amelia Louise, or Amy Lou, were taken from their 12 litter mates Sunday when they were just six days old.

And Thursday, at 10 days old, the tiny pigs were happily running around Sattler's neurosurgery office in Fayetteville.

During the day, the Sattlers keep the pigs in a baby's playpen in their office so the pigs can be fed every four hours. Amy Lou is already drinking from a bowl, but Ellie Mae still requires bottle-feeding, Mrs. Sattler said.

The little pigs weigh just 10 pounds now, but are expected to grow to at least 600 pounds each in a little over a year, the Sattlers said.

"Part of the effect of a pig is the size," Sattler said. "Everybody loved Norma Jean's large size."

The new pigs are Durocs, the same breed as Norma Jean. And the Sattlers plan to hold a debutante ball for Ellie Mae and Amy Lou similar to the bash held for Norma Jean in March 1986.

Mrs. Sattler said the two piglets will have their "coming out party" next March.

But the more immediate problem, Mrs. Sattler said, is feeding, housebreaking and training the pigs to obey commands. The piglets will be taught how to walk on a leash, so it will be possible for one of the Sattlers to take both pigs for a walk.

Mrs. Sattler said they decided to get two pigs instead of one because they felt Norma Jean died partly out of loneliness. She said Norma Jean had arthritis in her front leg and was confined to a small area of the house. She then became depressed and grew more ill until she finally was put to sleep in May.

The normal life expectancy of a pig is 15 to 20 years, but Norma Jean lived only 2 years and 9 months.

Ellie Mae and Amy Lou are the daughters of a North Carolina grand champion sow and an Ohio grand champion boar. They were born on a North Carolina farm owned by Norman Denning.

Manager In Probe

BOLIVIA, N.C. (AP) — Brunswick County Commissioners say they had no idea that the man they hired as the county manager this week was the focus of a State Bureau of Investigation probe while he was Halifax County manager.

The board met in emergency session behind closed doors with Barnes Friday night to hear his side and ask him why he hadn't mentioned the probe when he interviewed for the job. The probe ended without charges being filed.

The board voted to defer any decision until Monday when the county attorney returns from a trip.

The commissioners learned of the SBI investigation from a reporter for the Star News of Wilmington, and they had no immediate response when they received copies of newspaper articles from the Roanoke Rapids Daily Herald written about Barnes.

Barnes said he thought anyone involved in county government would know about the investigation, which looked into duplicated sets of Halifax County Commissioners' minutes and allegations that Barnes used his office for personal gain.

Barnes said Brunswick County Commissioner Jim Poole asked him during the interview why he left Halifax County, "and the way he was asking, very carefully, I just assumed that they were aware of it."

The Quebec Bridge on the St. Lawrence River near Quebec City collapsed in 1907 and carried 75 workmen to their deaths. The bridge was started in 1900 and was then the world's largest cantilever bridge. After the accident, construction work was continued and both cantilever sections had been completed when the center span fell into the river, taking the lives of another 13 workmen.

Secret Ballots Ruled Out For UNC Board Elections

RALEIGH (AP) — The General Assembly is about to elect eight members to serve on the University of North Carolina Board of Governors, and Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan says it will not be a secret ballot election, a practice the state Attorney General's Office calls unconstitutional.

Jordan, who presides over the Senate, said he intends to follow the "letter of the law." Secret ballots are a thing of the past in the Senate — unless the Senate votes to overrule him, Jordan said.

Jordan served on the Board of Governors from 1971 to 1976, and he was elected to the post using the secret-ballot system.

"It is our preliminary opinion that any secret ballot violates the spirit of Article VI, Section 5 of the North Carolina Constitution and probably violates the letter of Article VI, Section 5," Attorney General Lacy Thornburg's office said in an opinion issued Friday.

The opinion was drafted by Thornburg's chief deputy, Andrew Vanore, in response to a question from Sen. Richard Conder, D-Richmond, about secret balloting for trustees of the state Board of Community Colleges.

In past Board of Governor elections, legislators have used secret ballots to disguise vote-trading or other political maneuvers.

The state Senate will elect four members for the board and the House will elect the other four.

There will be secret ballots in the House of Representatives to narrow down the field of two candidates for each slot to a single candidate, said House Speaker Liston Ramsey, D-Madison.

Then, by open voice vote, the House will elect its four members, he said.

In Article VI, Section 5, the state Constitution says: "All elections by the people shall be by ballot and all elections by the General Assembly shall be viva voce." That is Latin for "the living voice."

In the four-page opinion, Vanore cites various legal authorities on what viva voce means.

Black's Law Dictionary says: "As descriptive of a species of voting, it signified voting by speech or out-cry, as distinguished from voting by a written or printed ballot."

With reference to a Nebraska case, it says, "The word 'ballot' is used as a symbol of secrecy, while viva voce is used as a symbol of publicity."

The same definition has been followed by the state Supreme Court. Vanore's opinion referred to two cases — one in 1929 involving the Harnett County Board of Commissioners and and one in 1920 involving the State Board of Elections.

"Any attempt to allow indirectly the secret election by either house of the General Assembly ... violates the spirit and probably the letter of our State Constitution," the opinion said.

"I'm not a constitutional expert," Ramsey said. "If that's unconstitutional, then they could challenge everybody on the Board of Governors."

Bladen Couple Held In Abuse-Murder Of Foster Child

ELIZABETHTOWN, N.C. (AP) — A Bladen County couple has been accused of murder in the death of an 11-year-old foster child who was beaten, bound and suspended from the ceiling in chains, and allegedly forced to engage in sex with another child while one parent watched.

Court documents also indicate that the couple allegedly beat other foster children with belts and boards, and forced them to eat hot red peppers and soap. The sworn statements by a sheriff's detective also describe an incident in which two of the children allegedly were forced to abuse each other sexually.

Sylvester Phillips, 56, of Bladenboro and his wife Anne, 64, had their first appearance Friday morning on first-degree murder charges in Bladen County District Court.

Two felony counts of child abuse accuse the couple of abusing the dead girl prior to her death and a 13-year-old boy, who was in their care.

U.S. District Judge Jack Hooks ordered the Phillipses held without bail. A probable cause hearing for both was set for July 7, according to the Wilmington Star-News.

The couple were arrested Tuesday night on two felony counts of child abuse. They were charged Wednesday with first degree murder for the death of 11-year-old Tameka Lehmann, who died early Monday morning.

A closed hearing was held Friday to determine whether there were reasonable grounds to believe the Phillipses had abused the dead girl's 10-year-old brother and three other children who were also under the Phillipses care. The hearing was closed to the public because of the ages of the children. The results were not made public.

A 13-year-old boy and an 11-year-old girl, who had been adopted by the Phillips', along with the couple's 2-year-old grandson, have been placed under protective custody of the Bladen County Department of Social Services.

According to documents filed in the case, an autopsy revealed that Tameka Lehmann died from blows to the head and that there were a "multitude of minor scrapes, abrasions, and bruises all over the body."

The findings were detailed in an autopsy report from Dr. Carl Smedburg of the N.C. Chief Medical Examiner's Office in Chapel Hill, according to an affidavit by Bladen County Sheriff's Department Detective Steve Bunn. The affidavit was submitted in an application for a warrant to search the Phillips house.

Smedburg also found recent injuries and scars in the girl's genital area, according to Bunn's statement.

The autopsy also noted that her kidneys were badly bruised and that Smedburg found "large abrasions on both ankles and feet (that) were not fresh and were consistent with the feet being tied up or bound."

Bunn's affidavit stated that Smedburg told him the fatal injuries "were not a result of accidental falling, but they were a result of intentionally inflicted blows by a broad, blunt instrument."

Also in his affidavit accompanying the search warrant, Bunn made these statements:

— Mrs. Phillips told him that the child and the 13-year-old boy were "hard to discipline" and were both "emotionally disturbed problem children" and that she had recently discovered Tameka and the boy having sex with each other. She said they had been punished, but denied beating them.

— One child said he was frequently beaten as he lay on the floor on his stomach. The boy said Mrs. Phillips beat him with a "batter board" used to wash clothes in a wash pot and that her husband beat him with a two- to three-inch wide black leather belt.

The "batter board" was described as a "small paddle board" in the affidavit.

— The boy also said he had been forced to eat red pepper and not allowed to drink anything after having to swallow it.

In a second affidavit filed by Bunn, he stated that he talked by telephone with Glynne Gervais, a supervisor with the Illinois Department of Children and Family Services in Chicago and Mark Pondoler, a social worker with the same department.

The Phillipses were licensed in Chicago as foster parents. Bladen County Department of Social Services workers said they were unaware the couple had foster children in their home and that the Phillipses were not licensed as foster parents here.

According to Bunn's affidavit, Mrs. Gervais said the boy talked to her on Sunday, prior to the girl's death, and told her that Phillips had beaten both children repeatedly during the day with the board and the belt.

The second affidavit states that Bunn was given the following information:

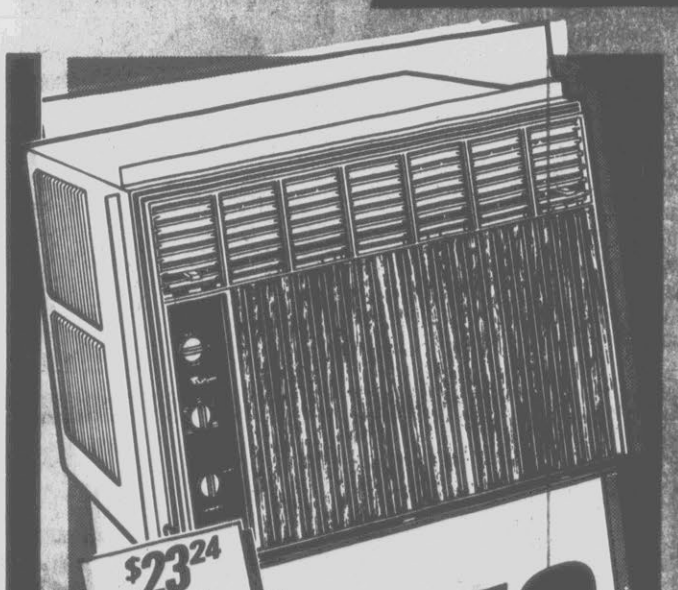

— The dead child was forced to eat a bar of soap and to drink a jar of Kool-Aid during the day Sunday. The girl passed out and regained consciousness on several occasions during the day and after dark was put out of the house.

Overseer

DURHAM (AP) — Duke University Professor Peter Wood has been elected to a six-year term on Harvard University's Board of Overseers.

Wood, an associate professor of history, was one of five candidates supporting South African divestment to be elected by alumni of of Harvard and Radcliffe to the governing board.

Wood, who received both his undergraduate degree and Ph.D. from Harvard, was nominated by a petition circulation by Harvard and Radcliffe Alumniae Against Apartheid.

Officials said this is the first time in Harvard's history that two candidates nominated by petition — Wood and Consuela Washington — were elected to the university Board of Overseers, a 30-member body that is one of Harvard's two governing boards.

Hit Charge

STATESVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A Mount Mourne man has been arrested after authorities said that he gave a State Bureau of Investigation agent posing as a hit man a down payment for the murder of his estranged wife.

Darryl DeWaine Jordan, 24, was charged with solicitation to commit murder for contracting with W.R. Foster, an agent with the SBI, to kill his wife, Patricia, 23.

Jordan and Foster met at a parking lot off U.S. 21 north of Mooresville, where Jordan gave Foster an undisclosed sum of money as a down payment to kill his wife, said Lt. Guy Griffin of the Iredell County Sheriff's Department.

Griffin said that Jordan offered to pay Foster $5,000. Sheriff's deputies and agents with the SBI arrested Jordan after he turned over the down payment, Griffin said.

Jordan, an unemployed factory worked, told authorities that he wanted his wife dead to collect on insurance money, Griffin said.

Jordan is being held in the Iredell County Jail with bond set at $75,000, Griffin said.

Ex-Chief Charged

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A former High Shoals police chief and town manager was arrested Thursday and charged with selling cocaine to state undercover agents.

Marvin Ray Metcalf, 43, was arrested by State Bureau of Investigation agents and taken to the Gaston County Jail. He was freed on $10,000 bond. The arrest followed a four-month SBI investigation, according to a statement from the bureau's district office in Kannapolis.

Metcalf, who works as a bail bondsman, is charged with selling an undisclosed amount of cocaine to SBI agents on March 4 and March 10, according to the statement. If convicted on the felony charge, he would face up to 10 years in prison and a fine.

He became High Shoals' first town manager and police chief, a combined post created in 1974. Metcalf resigned on June 18, 1980, citing personal reasons.

Peaches Late

RALEIGH (AP) — Peach growers in the Sandhills region say while this year's crop is late in maturing because of a cool spring, recent hot weather should help bring the crop to normal, according to the state Department of Agriculture.

A mild freeze in early April impacted some of the early clingstone varieties, but semi-cling and freestone peaches were unaffected by the cold. U.S. Department of Agriculture reports predict that the 1987 peach crop could reach approximately 30 million pounds in North Carolina, about 80 percent of a normal crop.

"Peach growers in North Carolina have not seen a 'normal' year since 1981," said NCDA horticultural marketing specialist Jeff Morton. "This year's crop will be slightly better than the 25 million pounds produced last year, and that extra production will be needed to offset a bad year for peach farmers in other Southeastern states.

Legislator Wants Bill Clarifying State's Laws On Marital Rape

By JODY TAYLOR
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — State Sen. Wanda Hunt says it is legal in North Carolina for husbands to rape their wives, but supporters of a bill to end spousal defense in rape cases must fight the notion that marital rape charges are the ravings of hysterical and vengeful women.

Now supporters are fighting to keep a watered down version of the bill alive. Opponents are concerned that the measure means that innocent husbands will face rape charges.

The present North Carolina law says marriage is a defense in spousal rape cases unless the couple is legally separated. Ms. Hunt, a Moore County Democrat, introduced a measure that would have repealed that statute.

"Rape is not an act of love. It's an act of violence," Ms. Hunt said. "Marital rape should be treated like all other abuse cases."

But when the bill got to the Senate Judiciary II Committee, Ms. Hunt said she saw that the measure would not get out intact.

"I realized that the members of that committee were not presently willing to eliminate ... (spousal defense) at this time," Ms. Hunt said. "There were just too many questions arising and I don't think that we could have gotten it through the House. So we made a lot of compromises."

The bill has been amended to say that a victim's legal spouse cannot be prosecuted for rape unless the couple is living separate and apart. It would eliminate the present need for a legal separation agreement.

"The problem under the present law is that many married couples, living apart, have neither a court order (requiring one spouse to stay away from the other) or a separation agreement," Ms. Hunt said.

Some attorneys tell their clients not to obtain a written separation agreement until the financial situation has been resolved, Ms. Hunt said. Others cannot afford an attorney, she said.

The bill has passed the Senate 35-7 and went last week to the Judiciary III Committee, where opponents said the law would be used as leverage in divorce settlements.

"... the question was raised that a lot of innocent husbands would have rape charges filed against them by angry, vengeful wives who hope to bargain for a better property settlement, perhaps in a divorce action," Ms. Hunt said. "That is a myth.

"I think that the myth is built on the ill-founded belief that women are innately vengeful and are willing to go through the tortures of a courtroom trial in order to get back at a man."

The legal system has devices to ensure fairness — police investigations, prosecutors' discretion, and jury trials, Ms. Hunt said.

Ms. Hunt said she had tried to keep a low profile with the bill, and added that she was reluctant to turn the fight for passage into a battle of the sexes.

"The male legislators are not familiar enough with what the current law does and what would happen should the defense be taken away," Ms. Hunt said. "I think it's going to be difficult to educate them, even though we have tried.

"The men have been open to discussion on this bill. They have been receptive to listening to us. They have allowed us to present why we think this law should be changed or eliminated. I think that's a step forward at this time."

But Ms. Hunt admits that even the women's groups, which urged the bill's introduction, are not pleased with the measure in its present form.

"The women that talked in the community the other day wanted it to go back to the original bill," Ms. Hunt said.

Forsyth, Cumberland Lead Divorce Race

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Forsyth and Cumberland counties have a dubious distinction. They share the highest divorce rate in the state.

For every thousand people in these two counties, 6.8 get a divorce, according to 1985 figures supplied by the N.C. Department of Health Statistics. Forsyth has 260,000 people; Cumberland has 262,000.

In Guilford County, with a population of 320,000, the divorce rate is 6.5 per thousand. Mecklenburg County, with a population 446,000, has a 6.1 per thousand divorce rate, while Wake County, with 363,000 people, has a 5.4 rate.

Marian Ackerman, the executive director of the Winston-Salem-Forsyth County Council on the Status of Women, said that the divorce rate in the city more than doubled between 1970 and 1980, census records show. It grew from 3.4 to 7.1 per thousand. The county experienced a 94 percent increase, from 3.3 to 6.4.

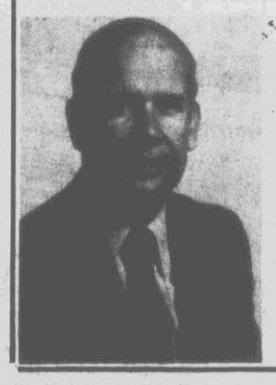

The divorce rate and the rate of increase were higher in Winston-Salem than for the state or the nation in the same period. In North Carolina, the divorce rate went from 2.7 to 4.8, an increase of 78 percent. In the United States, the increase was 51 percent, from 3.5 to 5.3 per thousand.

GOETZ PROTEST — A woman holding a placard protesting what she called a light sentence for Bernhard Goetz joins about 250 demonstrators outside Goetz' apartment in New York on Saturday. Marchers Protest Goetz' Verdict

NEW YORK (AP) — About 250 people protesting what they called light treatment for Bernhard Goetz marched Saturday on the apartment building where the subway gunman entered his fifth day of seclusion.

The 39-year-old electronics technician was cleared last week of all but a weapons possession charge in the shooting of four black teen-agers on a subway train on Dec. 22, 1984.

The demonstrators, calling themselves the June 20th Coalition Against Racist Violence, said Goetz was acquitted because he was white.

"Hey, New York, Goetz walked because he was white!" the predominantly white crowd of demonstrators chanted as they marched in a circle in front of the building. Goetz's apartment is in the rear.

"If Goetz were black and he shot four white boys, he'd at least be in jail," said one of the demonstrators, high school teacher John Goetz, 24, who is not related.

Sally Schneider, 33, a typesetter who is head of the John Brown Anti-Klan Committee, said the case was "the latest in a long line of signals that black lives are valueless in our society. We want to take this into our own (white) community and fight it."

The demonstration was timed to mark the six months that have passed since the death of a black man who was hit by a car as he fled a group of white attackers in the Howard Beach section of Queens.

Since his trial ended, Goetz has remained inside his apartment, appearing only occasionally to gaze out the window at the slowly dwindling crowd of reporters and photographers on the sidewalk at the rear of the building.

On Friday night, he briefly walked out onto the balcony to hang a horseshoe, apparently the gift of a well-wisher, that was decorated with the message, "Good Luck Bernhard Goetz."

"I saw him this morning," said the superintendant of the apartment building, Augustine Barquet. "He was in good spirits."

The Daily News reported Saturday that Goetz had told a neighbor, Allan Horwitz, that he was concerned about civil lawsuits that have been filed against him on behalf of the wounded teens and that he has no intention of leaving New York, a city he has excoriated in the past.

"I plan on staying in the city," Horwitz quoted Goetz as saying. "I couldn't afford to move."

Pit Bulls Being Killed

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Pit bulldog owners are having their pets killed in the wake of publicity over several vicious attacks and abuse from fearful neighbors, animal control officials said Friday.

"There's just hysteria in the community right now," said Kathy Snow of the Santa Clara County Humane Society, where seven pit bulls were turned in for euthanasia within three days of the fatal mauling of a 2½-year-old Morgan Hill boy last Saturday.

Snow said usually no more than three dogs a week are turned in for death by lethal injection, and those are usually strays. Several of the pit bulls had belonged to owners for years.

"These dogs are in some cases getting unfair treatment," said Snow. "People are overreacting. I have known some pit bulls who make lovely house pets, and I hate to see them maligned."

Three dogs were dropped off at Marin County Humane Society this week to be put to death. One owner, who had kept the dog for eight years, said it was too aggressive.

Another of the dogs had many scars and was so vicious that humane officers have been unable to touch it. The dog was left anonymously in a cage Monday night.

The attack on the Morgan Hill boy has prompted not only fear, but renewed calls in many communities for restrictions on the breed.

During World War II, King Christian X of Denmark was interned by the Nazis in 1943 as the Danes rebelled against occupation forces.

'I Feel A Closeness With Them'

The Mayor Has Family Of Six And 5 Dozen Foster Children

By CAROLYN LUMSDEN
Associated Press Writer

PITTSFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Mayor Charles Smith will toss an extra hamburger on the grill at this year's Father's Day cookout for his adopted Japanese son, the latest addition to a family of six children and five dozen foster children.

Kazou comes from an orphanage Smith helped build while with the Marines in Japan more than three decades ago.

"Anytime I approach a child anywhere, I don't care if it's a foreign country, I seem to glow," Smith said. "I feel a closeness to them. I feel responsible for helping and teaching them, to do whatever I can for them."

Smith, 54, has been mayor for eight years in this Berkshire Hills city of 50,000 people, a job that "can fill your head with a lot of negative feelings," he said in a recent interview.

"Children clear your head out very quickly."

For 30 years, his household has been a refuge for children caught in the storm of parents separating, dying or becoming too poor to care for them. Many eventually return home; some are adopted by other couples.

"You never know what you are going to give," Smith said. "Oftentimes you wonder and worry. But whatever you give, at least it's more than what the children had."

Smith himself grew up without a father or grandfather. A week before his birth, both were killed when they were hit by a car while changing a tire.

Thirty-four years ago, as a Marine based near Mount Fuji in Japan, he became fond of twin girls living in a cold, barnlike orphanage. He and a few buddies stole materials from the base to build a new shelter.

They were caught, and their punishment was to beg donations from servicemen standing in line for paychecks. They built a modern brick orphanage complete with dormitories and classrooms.

Four years ago, the Japanese government invited Smith to lecture on world issues for reasons the small-city mayor has never figured out.

But he grabbed the chance to see the orphanage again. "I never had a lot of money and I still don't," he said. "But I knew that someday I would find a way to get back."

He found that the mess hall was still donating food to the shelter and Marines had put up four more buildings.

He also met Kazou, then almost 3 and shunned by other children because of his dark skin, which would consign him to life as a farm laborer, Smith said. The adoption took $8,000 and three years, delayed by red tape and a heart attack Smith suffered last year.

His wife, Patricia, worried that the couple had grown too old to raise another child.

"I kept asking Charlie, 'Are you sure we did the right thing?' and he would say, 'Of course, or else we wouldn't have him.'"

There are two children in the Smiths' two-story home now, Kazou and the couple's 18-year-old son.

But at least 40 people are expected for Sunday's cookout, an annual event when all his children, as well as some grandchildren, foster children and other relatives come to Pittsfield for a barbecue, games and swimming in nearby Pontoosuc Lake.

Each child contributes a covered dish or other food, and Mrs. Smith said Saturday she was buying 20 pounds each of hamburgers and hot dogs to feed the brood.

Over all the years and all the children, few have been disappointing to Smith.

"I recall one or two who may not have turned out to be 100 percent like we wanted them to be," he said. "But they're still fine people, working and not spending time in jail or heavy into drugs."

Researcher Says This Dad's Day 'Saddest Ever'

By G.G. RIGSBY
Associated Press Writer

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — The "me" generation is producing men who think that fathering a child is an act that can be completed in minutes, and the result is one of the saddest Father's Days this country has ever known, a researcher said.

"The frontiersman ideal, rugged individualist runs in conflict with the family ideal," said George Rekers, a researcher at the University of South Carolina specializing in the role of families. "There's a lot of men who quote 'fathered' children who are out spending their money on themselves.

"When you think of mothering a child, you think of nuturing — feeding a baby, dressing a pre-schooler, giving emotional support, providing for their needs," Rekers said.

"When you think of fathering a child, you tend to think of the initial biological act, sexual act — just getting the child started," he said. "Even our language is skewed to the fact that mothers raise a child and fathers just get them started and drop off the scene."

That, said Rekers, is a shame, because the effects a father has on a child are deep and enduring.

Children with a positive and continuous relationship with the father, from birth through age 18, have higher levels of self-confidence; higher career aspirations; more impulse control, over such things as drinking and driving; lower rates of teen pregnancy; better self-concept and self-esteem; and higher levels of maturity, Rekers said.

Children without fathers are more likely to develop a homosexual orientation, he said. "Fathers care more when boys play with dolls or girls play with trucks," Rekers said.

Girls whose parents are divorced have higher rates of involvement with male peers and teen pregnancy, get married younger, get divorced sooner and tend to marry men with less education, lower income levels and less ability to hold a job, research shows.

"We have a cultural attitude about fathers not being necessary," he said. "But that's not what the research shows. Fathers have a unique role in child adjustment."

Rekers said it is possible to grow up well-adjusted without a father, but it's growing up with a handicap.

"A child without a father is as handicapped as someone going through life without one arm," Rekers said. "You can compensate, you can make it, but there is a lot of extreme effort that has to be made."

Divorce is the leading cause of children not having fathers, followed by unwed mothers, he said.

Now, 23 percent of children in the United States live in single-parent homes, and 90 percent of those homes are headed by mothers, Rekers said. By 1990, the Census Bureau estimates half of all children in this country will have spent part of their lives in single-parent homes.

"Our country is rapidly becoming one where the vast majority of children spend some time without a father in the home," Rekers said.

In terms of sheer numbers, "This is probably the saddest Father's Day we've ever had," he said. "Children are much worse off this year than ever before in this country in terms of amount of nurturance, financial support, involvement they are getting from their fathers, on the average."

Children without fathers have an especially tough time because not only is the father not there, the mother is under stress from having to do everything by herself — make money, run the house and raise the child — and is less able to meet the child's emotional needs.

And once again, society's reactions aren't much help. Neighbors are more likely to offer to help a single father with his laundry, or offer to babysit the child — than a single mother.

Single mothers often need counseling as badly as their children do, he said. "The single-parent mothers who do well have a good support network — church, neighbors, relatives," he said.

But no matter how rotten dad is, mom should promote a relationship with the non-custodial father.

"Many times the father was a rat, but for the child's sake, she should do everything she can to promote that relationship," he said. "She should not criticize or run down the dad who's not there, even if he deserves it."

Deadbeat dads suffer on their own, he said. "They have lower self-esteem, guilty feelings, worse psychological adustment. The children provide some stability to them."

Bachelor Father Says Son's Smile Made 'Sucker Of Me'

CHICAGO (AP) — One gesture of kindness changed two lives forever.

"His smile made a sucker of me the first time I picked him up," said Jack Murphy. "He smiled at me and bam! I thought, 'What am I getting myself into? I love this little boy.' There was immediate bonding between us."

So began the relationship between Murphy, a 52-year-old bachelor and court reporter, and Terry, his physically and mentally handicapped adopted son.

Murphy was looking through the Chicago Sun-Times a few days before Christmas 1981 when he saw a photograph of a 5-year-old boy named Terry wearing a shirt identical to one he owned.

Moved by the coincidence of the shirt and the spirit of the season, Murphy made inquiries about the boy and learned he lived in a nursing center in Canton, Ill.

He decided to take Terry a Christmas present. For most of the next three years, he drove 360 miles round-trip each week to visit Terry. He was, he says now, afraid to admit he wanted to adopt the child because of the struggles he knew he would face.

"Adopting Terry wasn't courage, I can tell you," said Murphy. "I'm one of the world's great cowards. It's just that there was no alternative. I had to adopt Terry. I loved him, and love doesn't come too cheaply."

Murphy had been corresponding for years with Mother Teresa, the Nobel Peace Prize-winning nun based in India, and sought her guidance when he decided to try to adopt Terry.

"She said, Jack, if you can handle it, why not?" he recalled. She also agreed to be his son's godmother.

These days, Murphy keeps 11-year-old Terry at his Southwest Side home on weekends, then visits him four days a week at the Chicago Augustana Center across town. Murphy also cares for his 87-year-old mother, balancing shopping, cleaning and other chores while still devoting his attention to Terry.

"At first, I tried never to let more than two days go without seeing him because I was afraid he would forget me. Now I know he won't," said Murphy.

"I say, 'Where are poppa's glasses?' and he reaches up for my glasses. The first time he did that I knew."

Waldheim's Daughter Weds

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — President Kurt Waldheim on Saturday led his daughter Christa, 28, into a village church, where she married politician Othmar Karas.

During the ceremony, one of two officiating priests read a telegram with blessings from Pope John Paul II, sent by the Vatican's State Secretary Cardinal Agostino Casaroli.

Waldheim meets the pope in the Vatican on Thursday on his first official visit abroad since taking office last July. The audience has drawn protests from Jews because of Waldheim's alleged role in deporting Jews and Balkan partisans to Nazi death camps during World War II. Waldheim denies any wrongdoing.

Karas, 29, is a parliamentary deputy of the conservative Austrian People's Party, which supported Waldheim's presidential campaign.

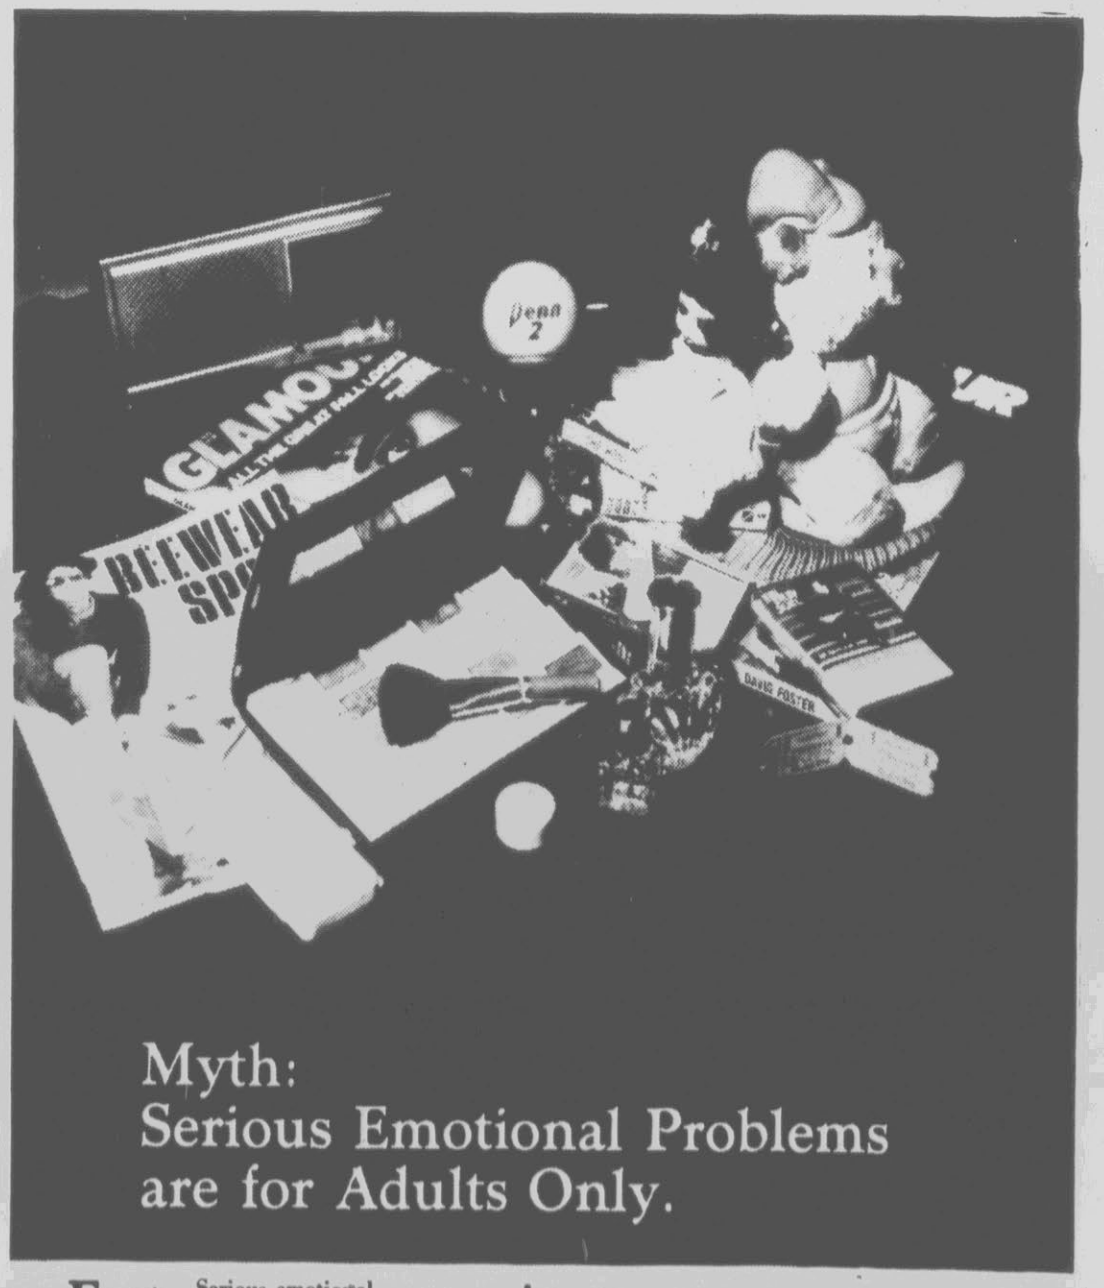

The wedding took place at Nussdorf on Lake Attersee, 25 miles east of Salzburg, the Austria Press Agency reported. Waldheim, former secretary-general of the United Nations, owns a lakeside house there.

Mayor Sues Attorney

WASHINGTON (AP) — District of Columbia Mayor Marion Barry Jr. is suing the Justice Department and U.S. Attorney Joseph diGenova for prosecutorial abuse in allegedly leaking material to the news media in an investigation into city contracting.

The lawsuit seeks unspecified sanctions against diGenova and investigators, as well as news organizations that have have reported on the federal investigation since it was disclosed last month.

Backed by a stack of press clippings as exhibits, the lawsuit filed late Friday night asks that all information about the investigation be released publicly immediately.

Myth:
Serious Emotional Problems are for Adults Only.

Fact: Serious emotional problems ARE NOT for adults only. Adults do not have an exclusive claim on serious emotional problems; in fact, the same proportion of teenagers as adults suffer from emotional problems.

As adolescents slowly move from dependence to independence, they struggle with education and career decisions, peer pressure and emerging sexuality.

Some adolescents can't handle the pressure of "growing pains" and consequently some become angry and depressed. Some may abuse drugs, become delinquent or run away. Still others become extremely depressed - enough to try suicide. It is estimated that suicide ranks as the second leading cause of death among adolescents.

A child or adolescent having emotional or behavioral problems should be taken seriously.

Magazine Says North Discussed Attacks On Iranians

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lt. Col. Oliver North, the White House aide fired in the Iran-Contra affair, told a U.S. military official that one of his plans was to accomplish the assassination of Iranian officials, it was reported Saturday.

A U.S. News & World Report article also said that in discussions on how to undermine the regime of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, one Iranian group asked for assistance in a plot to assassinate Khomeini himself.

The magazine said congressional investigators are checking allegations of assassination plans and whether any Americans were involved in such discussions.

A presidential executive order forbids direct or indirect participation by U.S. government employees in assassination attempts abroad.

The discussions occurred, the magazine said, during 1985-86 talks in which U.S. and Israeli representatives attempted to establish relations with so-called moderate elements in Iran who might assume leadership if Khomeini could be ousted. The talks led to the clandestine arms sales by first Israel and then the United States to Iran.

A significant portion of the arms-sales profits was siphoned off to subsidize pro-Western Iranian politicians, who, the magazine said, were thought to be willing to change the Iranian government.

The magazine cited congressional sources and foreign documents, including transcripts of secretly recorded meetings in Europe, letters of Iranian officials, and classified Israeli documents.

Congressional sources have information that North told a military official last year of his plans to assassinate Iranian officials. It did not name the military official.

North's attorney Brendan Sullivan declined on Saturday to comment on the report.

The magazine reported that sources close to an Israeli participant in the talks said a group of Iranian clerics led by Khomeini adviser Hassan Karoubi requested help in the Khomeini assassination plan, and that an explosive device was even readied to blow up a briefcase that was to be given to the ayatollah.

Congressional investigators also plan to look into reports that the CIA and the National Security Council staff, which included North, initiated several covert operations in 1985 and 1986 to destabilize the Khomeini regime.

The magazine said Karoubi got $600,000 in $100 bills in an attache case from the $5.1 million the Iranians paid for TOW missiles from Israel in August and September 1985.

In all, more than $15 million in kickbacks went to Iranians involved in the arms-sale operation, the magazine said.

By the late summer and fall of 1985, the meetings that had begun between Israeli representatives, Karoubi and Iranian arms dealer Manucher Ghorbanifar, also included Michael Ledeen, a consultant to the NSC staff.

An Israeli participant who took notes told the magazine that in an Oct. 27, 1985 meeting, Ledeen told Karoubi the Americans would provide equipment and training to strengthen the Karoubi faction, and suggested certain targets be bombed such as Iranian oil fields.

Ledeen denied participating in any assassination talks, but acknowledged discussing providing small arms and training for the Iranians, the magazine said. There was no answer at his house on Saturday.

The reported assassination plans and efforts to undermine Khomeini are expected to be a subject of congressional questioning of North next month. He has so far refused to be interviewed by the congressional investigators in private, even though he has been granted limited immunity.

That leaves open the possibility that North will be questioned for the first time in public hearings by the select House and Senate committees investigating the arms sales to Iran.

The hearings resume Tuesday after a 1½-week recess.

Navy Relieves Stark's Commander, Two Of Its Officers Of Duty Posts

By GEORGE C. WILSON
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — The Navy has announced that the captain, executive officer and tactical action officer of the USS Stark have been relieved because of dissatisfaction with their performance on May 17 when the ship failed to react to an Iraqi fighter-bomber that fired two missiles into the ship, killing 37 sailors..

The Navy said Adm. Carlisle A.H. Trost, chief of naval operations, relieved the officers after the theater commander, Marine Gen. George B. Crist, "requested that these officers be detached based on his lack of confidence in their performance."

Pentagon sources said a Navy investigating panel, headed by Rear Adm. Grant Sharp, has recommended courts-martial for the three officers, but the Navy did not confirm this. The relief of the officers at this stage, however, suggests courts-martials have been recommended. Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger will have the final say on whether to conduct the courts-martial.

Capt. GLENN BRINDEL

35, of Rockville, Md., executive officer, and Lt. Basil E. Moncrief, 32, of Corpus Christi, Tex., tactical action officer. The executive officer is the captain's right-hand man, while the tactical action officer runs the combat center of the ship where weapons are ordered into action.

Brindel has been ordered to the Atlantic Fleet's surface force in Norfolk, Va., while Gajan and Moncrief have been sent to the staff of Destroyer Group 12 in Mayport, Fla.

The Sharp panel also investigated the performance of the Stark's weapons officer, whom the Navy has not identified, but no action has been announced as to him. Navy officials said this suggests he had the weapons in condition to fire.

In a statement to House Armed Services Committee investigators, Brindel seemed to fault Moncrief for not keeping him informed about the approaching Mirage F1 fighter-bomber. Brindel said he had told Moncrief "to keep a close eye on the contact." Brindel recommended that Navy investigators determine why he was not kept informed.

The committee report said a first class petty officer had asked Moncrief if he should radio a warning to the Iraqi aircraft when it was 43 miles from the ship. "The TAO instructed him to wait," the committee said. "The TAO said he expected the Mirage wuld be turning at any moment, according to the watch supervisor." The TAO waited until the plane was only 15 miles away before he ordered a warning be radioed to it, according to the committee report.

The heavy damage done to the Stark as it was steaming on patrol at night in the gulf has generated warnings in Congress that the Reagan administration is asking for trouble if it goes ahead with its plan to escort 11 Kuwaiti tankers flying the U. S. flag through the waterway.

While portraying the risks of the escort operation as modest, the Pentagon said Friday it has sent a team of about 20 Navy experts from Charleston, S.C., to the gulf to assess the danger from Iranian mines which the administration has said Iran is sowing in Kuwaiti ports. Floating mines have hit ships in the gulf, but a Pentagon official Friday said this danger "is manageable."

Another source of concern is the Silkworm missile which Iran has received from China. The weapon with a range of 50 miles and a warhead of 1,100 punds has been tested in the gulf at the Strait of Hormuz, which is only 40 miles wide at its narrowest point. The Reagan administration has been debating with how to combat the Iranian Silkworm if it becomes operational at the edge of the strait. Adm. William J. Crowe Jr., chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, opposes a preemptive strike against the missile, according to Pentagon officials.

The Pentagon in its public version of a report on how it plans to handle threats to shipping in the Persian Gulf cited the Iranian Silkworm several times. The secret version of the report said Iraq also has the Silkworm, defense sources said.

Congress Appears To Be Shifting Reluctantly To Support Gulf Plan

By BRYAN BRUMLEY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress appears to be swinging from outright hostility to unenthusiastic support for President Reagan's plan to provide naval escorts to 11 Kuwaiti oil tankers in the Persian Gulf.

"If the Congress were to reverse him, by cutting off the money or perhaps other courses of action, it would add another negative chapter to U.S. credibility in the Persian Gulf region," said one of Reagan's key backers, Sen. John Warner, R-Va.

Aides to four top Democratic lawmakers said sentiment appeared to be shifting toward what one called "the Warner thesis," that Reagan has made a weak case but that reversal by Congress could further cripple U.S. foreign policy.

"We've got no good options," Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., said at the end of the week.

Arab diplomats, watching the debate closely, said failure to fulfill Reagan's promise to Kuwait would undercut the American position in the region, which was badly damaged by the Iranian revolution in 1979-80, the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan, the taking of U.S. hostages in Iran and Lebanon, bomb attacks that forced the Marines to withdraw from Beirut and the secret sale of arms to Iran for its war against Iraq.

The chances that Congress will wind up endorsing Reagan's plan, or reaching a compromise, were far from clear, Senate Majority Whip Alan Cranston, D-Calif., said through a spokesman. And an aide to another top Democrat said that "the process of consultation could go on for weeks before this thing goes through."

Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd of West Virginia said at the beginning of the week that Reagan's plan is "half-baked and poorly developed," and the Senate Republican leader, Robert Dole of Kansas, said "the administration needs to do a better job of explaining it."

After a week of explanations, an aide to a Democratic committee chairman said that "opinion has not crystallized." Despite misgivings, "people aren't sure they want to jerk the rug out from under the president."

Capitol Hill opposition to Reagan's plan was channeled into resolutions that would either bar the reflagging altogether, or invoke the War Powers Act, which requires congressional approval for putting U.S. forces in a combat area for more than 90 days.

A chief opponent of Reagan's plan, Senate Foreign Relations Committee Chairman Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., postponed until next Thursday a panel vote to bar the reflagging and ask the United Nations to guard the oil lanes.

Reagan generated little enthusiasm for his warning, in a nationally televised speech Monday night, "that if we don't do the job, the Soviets will."

But in numerous hearings and meetings and a Pentagon report sent to Capitol Hill, the administration message came through that, in the words of Frank Carlucci, the White House national security adviser, "we cannot afford to let hostile powers — either the Soviets or the Ayatollah (Ruhollah Khomeini) — gain a choke hold in so central a region."

Backing away from the deal "would cause us problems" in the Arab world at a time when the United States is working across the board to curb growing Soviet influence in the region, said one White House official, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The United States has been trying for several months to garner Arab support to limit the Soviet role in a proposed United Nations conference on tempering the Arab-Israeli conflict.

And administration officials said they agreed to reflag the Kuwaiti vessels last spring "before all the policy pieces were in place" because the Kuwaitis had agreed to lease three Soviet tankers.

Lawmakers reacted cautiously to briefings by CIA and Pentagon officials, who said that the danger of Iranian attacks on U.S. ships in the gulf were "low to moderate," in the 20 percent to 40 percent range of likelihood.

Pentagon officials said that to reduce the risk, they would boost the U.S. naval force in the region from six to eight ships, and that they were near agreement with Saudi Arabia to expand airborne surveillance toward the mouth of the gulf, where Iran may deploy Chinese-made Silkworm anti-ship missiles.

The greater danger, said intelligence officials, was that Iranian-backed terrorists would strike Americans elsewhere in the Middle East.

In what may have been a warning, gunmen last week kidnapped journalist Charles Glass in Lebanon, making him the ninth American believed held by terrorists with links to Iran.

King Louis XI of France died in 1483.

Robertson, Kemp Vow To Oppose Abortions

NEW ORLEANS, (AP) — The Rev. Pat Robertson and U.S. Rep. Jack Kemp told an anti-abortion audience Saturday that they would do whatever it took to overturn the U.S. Supreme Court decision allowing abortions.

Delegates to the National Right to Life convention also heard a videotaped address from President Ronald Reagan and from a representative for Vice President George Bush.

Kemp, who has announced his candidacy for the Republican presidential nomination, received a standing ovation from the more than 1,000 delegates when he decried politicians who "voice personal opposition to abortion but refuse to lift a finger to do anything about it."

"Shame on them, shame on them," the New York congressman said as the audience sprang to its feet applauding and cheering.

Robertson, a television evangelist who founded the Christian Broadcasting Network, has not yet officially declared his candidacy.

But he said the upcoming presidential election was crucial to pro-life forces because three of the sitting justices of the Supreme Court are close to retirement and "the next president of the United States is going to have the opportunity to set judicial policy into through the rest of this century and possibly way into the next century.

"That's why the election in 1988 is of vital significance to every one of us who support the pro-life cause," he said.

Robertson criticized Friday's Supreme Court ruling striking down Louisiana's creation science law saying, "The Supreme Court of the United States decided that they would not permit the little children in school to learn of their origins, because they ruled that this was an impermissible establishment of religion."

He linked Friday's ruling to the 1973 Roe vs. Wade decision, which legalized abortions.

"So long as we teach that men and women and little unborn children are the creation of God and entitled to life then that makes a mockery of Roe vs. Wade that says they can take the life away from them."

Robertson said that despite scandals concerning the Iran-Contra arms deal, or activities of TV evangelist Jim Bakker, "the true scandal is the perversion of the establishment of religion clause of the First Amendment and the equal protection clause of the 14th Amendement by the Supreme Court. This is a first-class intellectual scandal."

Robertson said that by the turn of the century abortions would have a $1.4 trillion impact on the nation's gross national product and would mean the loss of $333 billion in taxes that would have been paid otherwise.

"In Germany right now the birth rate has gone so low because of abortion that it is estimated that by the year 2020, 60 percent of the work force will be made up of retirees. In just seven years they will not be able to man their requisite divisions in NATO.

"In other words, Western democracy is creating racial suicide," he said.

Wreck Kills 2, Hurts 32

WOODVILLE, Texas (AP) — A Jeep and a chartered bus carrying teen-agers from church camp collided head-on Saturday, killing the two men in the Jeep and injuring 32 people aboard the bus, officials said.

The men were killed instantly in the accident, said Department of Public Safety dispatcher Sheila Swan.

The accident occurred at about 6:45 a.m. on U.S. Highway 69, five miles south of Woodville, authorities said. The driver and 31 bus passengers were taken to Tyler County Hospital.

The bus was returning from a church camp in Glorieta, N.M., where the youths had been for the past week, said one of the passengers, Wilton Wall, pastor of the Red Oak Baptist Church in Livingston, La.

Most of the passengers were teenagers from that church and the First Baptist Church of Independence, La. They were accompanied by about six adults, Wall said.

The dead were identified as James Arthur Bell, 34, and Marvin Edward Stubblefield, 32, both of Lufkin, officials said.

The bus driver suffered a leg fracture and was to remain hospitalized for the next few days. The rest of the injured were treated and released by Saturday afternoon, said hospital administrator James Molsbee.

Leopard seals, walruses and some sea lions eat other seals, says National Geographic.

Reagan Sees Need For 'Economic Bill Of Rights'

By MERRILL HARTSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan lashed out Saturday against a $1 trillion spending plan proposed by congressional Democrats, saying the budget "is as bad as they come."

In his weekly radio address to the nation, broadcast from his mountaintop retreat at Camp David, Md., Reagan declared that the American people need an "Economic Bill of Rights" to protect them against excessive taxes, government spending and overregulation.

Among other things, the budget would raise taxes by $64.3 billion over three years, allow a modest increase in defense spending but increase spending on an array of domestic programs.

Noting the existence in the Washington area of cicadas, 2-inch-long insects that only surface once every 17 years, Reagan sent a sort of political pest-control alarm about the Democratic budget proposal for fiscal 1988, which begins Oct. 1.

"Almost everyone can agree, things will be much more pleasant when the cicadas go back underground," he said. "Well, I'm afraid ... the big spenders are hatching out again and threatening to overrun Congress."

"For a while they seem to have gone underground," the president said, noting the attention Congress gave to heavy federal deficits when it passed the Gramm-Rudman Act calling for mandatory spending restraints.

"Now, however, the tax-and-spend crew is back," he said, "and they seem to have lost all embarrassment about taking your money on a spending spree."

Rep. Butler Derrick of South Carolina, giving the Democratic Party response to Reagan's radio message, said that "with this budget, the Congress is saying the time for talk is over and the time for action is here. We cannot afford to keep fiddling while the fire of the federal deficit is raging out of control."

"But the Congress cannot put out that fire by itself," Derrick said. "I hope the president will make my day by abandoning the confrontational strategy urged on him by his political advisers and, instead, will sit down with congressional leaders to cooperate on a budget that the American public needs and deserves."

Reagan has steadfastly refused to consider any major tax increases as a solution to a federal deficit that ranges over $200 billion a year. Instead, Reagan has said, the deficit should be curbed through spending restraints.

"This budget is as bad as they come, like a bad sequel to the tax-and-spend follies of the 1970s," he said.

Reagan on Thursday issued a harsh statement and sent forth his aides to denounce the fiscal 1988 budget the Democrats produced. The $1 trillion plan envisions a $19.3 billion tax boost — $64.3 billion over three years — and seeks to put the president on the spot by tying that to a modest increase in defense spending.

The Treasury Department reported Friday that the federal government ran up a $35.7 billion deficit in May, the largest imbalance in a year. The deficit followed a record surplus in April, the one month each year when the government is in the black because of the huge flow of tax payments.

For the first eight months of the current budget year, the deficit totals $119 billion. The 1986 deficit hit a record $220 billion, and the administration is forecasting that it will decline to $173.2 billion at the end of the current budget year on Sept. 30.

During Reagan's tenure in office, the national debt has more than doubled, to $2.3 trillion. Interest on that debt is expected to cost taxpayers $140 billion next year.

But on Saturday, Reagan laid responsibility for deficits at the Capitol's doorstep.

"Some say the deficit is the responsibility of the president," he said. "Well, the fact is, according to the Constitution, the president can't spend one nickel. Congress appropriates every cent of the budget. And every cent that makes up our budget."

Reagan complained that every year, members of Congress pronounce his proposed budget "dead on arrival" and then put together their own spending blueprint.

"I have a choice. Take it, pork and all, or veto and see the entire United States government grind to a halt. This is no way to run a country," he said. "This is why in the coming weeks I'll be taking my case to you, the American people, asking for your support to bring fiscal sanity back," he said.

Reagan again touted the balanced-budget amendment and line-item veto authority for the president as possible solutions.

He said it's time the "cicadas in Congress" were made to "go back underground."

Cicadas are 2-inch-long, colorful and harmless insects that spend 17 years underground, then surface, mate and die.

Farmer Gets $50 Million Judgment

YUBA CITY, Calif. (AP) — A farmer who says he was given bad financial advice by the Bank of America has won a $50 million judgment.

The jury verdict Friday awarded $20 million in compensatory damages and $30 million in punitive damages to rancher Robert Stanghellini and his family.

Chester Morris, who represented Bank of America during the seven-week trial, said the bank will appeal the decision.

"There were a lot of unfortunate circumstances the family had, but they weren't the fault of the bank," Morris said.

"Oh man, it feels great," Stanghellini said, adding that the decision will save his 1,500-acre row-crop operation from foreclosure.

Last week, a Monterey County jury found Wells Fargo Bank guilty of fraud, breach of contract and bad faith in its handling of loans to Castroville farmer Garth Conlan. Conlan was awarded $10 million in compensatory damages and $50 million in punitive damages. The bank said it will appeal.

Stanghellini alleged that Bank of America enticed him to borrow millions of dollars and expand his farm operation. After heavy losses on tomatoes in the early 1980s, the bank assumed management by deciding what Stanghellini would be allowed to spend money on, he contended.

The Stanghellinis said that the bank promised operating loans for the next growing season if they would put up additional security. But after Stanghellini's mother and aunt put up $800,000, the bank cut off their credit.

The $50 million in damages awarded by the jury included $19 million for each of the elderly women.

Louisville Chosen

BILOXI, Miss. (AP) — Money and momentum moved Presbyterians to reject committee recommendations and choose Louisville, Ky., as the new home of the 3 million-member Presbyterian Church (USA).

The topic dominated the church's 199th General Assembly, which drew 650 commissioners, or delegates, for a nine-day session that ended Wednesday at the Mississippi Coast Coliseum and Convention Center.

At the meeting, the delegates also adopted "for study and reflection" a paper setting out guidelines for Christian-Jewish relations and another calling on Presbyterians to fight bigotry against Moslems.

Democratic Hopefuls Plan 'Super Tuesday' Strategy

By DAVID PACE
Associated Press Writer

(AP) — Five Democrats who would like to live in the White House will be looking for support from party officials meeting here Sunday and Monday to plan for next year's "Super Tuesday" presidential primary.

Sponsored by the Democratic Leadership Council, the session originally was planned as a way to get state and local party officials involved in a campaign to increase the Democratic turnout on March 8, when 20 states hold presidential primaries and caucuses.

The prospect of several hundred Democratic officials in one place attracted the attention of the party's presidential hopefuls, and several are scheduled to attend.

Announced candidates Rep. Richard A. Gephardt of Missouri and Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis staked out places at a Sunday evening reception, and Delaware Sen. Joseph Biden was scheduled to attend the Monday session.

Also planning to be on hand Monday are Tennessee Sen. Albert Gore and the Rev. Jesse Jackson, who are both considering presidential bids.

Another announced Democratic candidate, former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt, is sending his wife. Georgia Sen. Sam Nunn, who may become a candidate later this year, planned to be there as well.

Former Virginia Gov. Charles S. Robb, DLC chairman, said the candidates' interest demonstrates that Super Tuesday has become more important since Gary Hart dropped out of the race.

"We have a more diverse field and a likelihood that more candidates will emerge from the early screening in Iowa and New Hampshire as still viable entities," Robb said.

"As they campaign in Iowa and New Hampshire, they will be looking at the whole process through the prism of Super Tuesday ... and thinking about the impact of what they say and do on the voters in all the Super Tuesday states," he said.

Robb said the DLC wants to get the party's presidential candidates to spend more time in the Super Tuesday states to generate interest among voters, particularly those traditional Democrats who have deserted the party in recent presidential elections.

If those defectors can be brought into the nominating process, they will be more likely to vote for the party's nominee, Robb contended.

To attract those voters, who tend to be more conservative than the mainstream Democratic voter, Robb said the DLC is attempting to "subtly influence the candidates" to address broad national issues rather than those important to special interests.

The DLC hopes to use state and local elected officials to lure those traditional Democrats back into the fold.

"We want to energize those officials, state and local officials and party leaders, to go back to their own states and agree to work with others who want to increase turnout on Super Tuesday," Robb said.

Unit Reopens

HENDERSON, N.C. (AP) — Maria Parham Hospital's intensive care unit will be reopened on July 3, ending a shutdown of more than three months, according to hospital officials.

C. Swanson Dodd Jr., associate administrator of the hospital, said the unit had to be shut down late in March because of a shortage of nurses. However, he and director of nurses Shelva Christian said in telephone interviews that the hospital has hired enough new nurses to staff the unit and they are now learning about the hospital and the equipment.

Dodd said while the new nurses will relieve the situation greatly, the hospital is still looking for additional registered and practical nurses.

"We still have some areas (where) we won't be up to 100 percent, but very seldom are you up to 100 percent," Dodd said.

AMA Expands Test Policy

CHICAGO (AP) — Mandatory testing for the AIDS virus should be extended to prison inmates and immigrants but not to everyone getting a marriage license or entering a hospital, trustees of the American Medical Association said Saturday.

Nor should testing be required for homosexuals and drug abusers, even though those groups represent most of the nation's more than 35,000 recorded cases of AIDS, the trustees said on the eve of the AMA's annual meeting.

Report Says Farm Trade Could Help Cut Deficit

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Joint Economic Committee report released Saturday predicts the overall U.S. trade deficit with Japan would be cut by up to 13 percent if the Japanese lifted barriers to American agricultural products.

The report, requested by Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, chairman of the Finance Committee, also suggests that the Japanese would have more money to buy other U.S. goods if they were spending less on foodstuffs.

"The reduction of Japanese barriers to food could increase U.S. exports by nearly 30 percent, or $7.5 billion," according to the report.

In 1986, the United States exported a total of $27 billion to Japan while imports totaled $85 billion, leaving a $59 billion U.S. trade deficit with the Japanese. Twenty percent of those exports were agricultural.

"Virtually all those commodities faced strict Japanese government trade barriers which severely limited sales," according to the report. "By limiting supply, these barriers push food prices in Japan up sharply, victimizing consumers there by reducing real incomes."

Consequently, the Japanese spend much more on food than Americans.

"At the present time we are exporting about $5.5 billion worth of agricultural products to Japan," Bentsen said in a statement.

"Now, if ... you tore down all of those barriers to agricultural products, it would mean that the Japanese would be able to buy steak — instead of paying $24 a pound as they do in Japan now, they'd pay $3 a pound — as we do in this country," Bentsen said.

The trade barriers are in place to assure Japanese farmers parity of incomes with urban workers and to ensure self-sufficiency in rice, which has essentially amounted to a ban on imported rice, the report said.

"Farmers receive about 10 times the world price for rice in Japan. Retail prices are considerably lower, however, because elaborate government subsidies are then applied to moderate commodity prices when sold to wholesalers and later to consumers."

Japanese government farm subsidies last year totaled $40 billion, plus another $20 billion in food overcharges to consumers, and pushed farm incomes 40 percent above urban families, according to the report.

American farmers were given $27 billion in farm subsidies last year.

Bentsen said his trade bill seeks to tear down trade barriers including the agricultural tariffs in Japan. His bill is scheduled for debate in the Senate on Tuesday morning.

The Reagan administration has submitted 30 pages of objections to specific items contained in what is to be an omnibus trade bill.

Midsummer: It's Year's Longest Day

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Summer Solstice, that annual event that marks the year's longest day — and some people call the start of summer, occurs Sunday.

The moment of the solstice will occur at 6:11 p.m. EDT, when the sun reaches the northernmost point on its apparent annual travels, and pauses before heading south again.

This is both the year's longest day and shortest night, depending on the point of view of the observer. It is an event prominent in folklore for thousands of years.

Many people consider this day as the first of summer, a season they count as lasting until the autumnal equinox on Sept. 23.

"But if you are a traditionalist or a purist, you're going to know better," points out Gail S. Cleere of the U.S. Naval Observatory in her monthly newsletter.

Because this day and night also are known as midsummer in folk tradition — the end of the time when daylight was increasing.

"It marks the time of year when the sun begins to wane, the days become ever so much shorter, the sun starts his merciless march toward the southern hemisphere," she reports.

The celebration of the solstice as Midsummer's Day remains popular in Northern Europe, with festivals and bonfires common in Germany and Scandinavia, and other countries.

In Iceland, far to the north where the sun shines virtually constantly on this date, Midsummer night was celebrated as a time when trolls and other evil spirits remained hidden away — avoiding the constant daylight.

To Icelanders, the morning dew of Midsummer Day has magical properties, and persons who roll in it naked can make a wish, and may be cured of itching and other maladies.

Midsumer festivities were immortalized by William Shakespeare in the play "A Midsummer Night's Dream," in which lovers are caught up in the magic web spun by the moon, the forest and fairy creatures on that special night.

It was the astronomer Geminus of Rhodes who, in 70 B.C., first declared the solstice the start of summer, and today many almanacs follow his lead.

The solstice occurs when the sun's apparent northward movement reaches its zenith at the Tropic of Cancer and seems to stall for a few days. This provides the longest days of the year in the northern hemisphere, and the shortest south of the Equator where winter is beginning.

Astronomers now know that the sun's apparent movement doesn't actually stop, but is so slow as to be barely noticed during this period.

However, the northward movement of the sun has been giving extra warmth to this hemisphere since it crossed the Equator March 20, and many residents of the United States have already experienced plenty of summertime weather.

For that reason, meteorologists often divide the seasons differently from astronomers — listing the months of June, July and August as "summer."

That comes close to actually marking the warmest weather of the year — the definition most individuals probably consider summer.

Shultz Says General Is Out Of Line

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz said Saturday that the retiring commander of U.S. and NATO forces in Europe was "way out of line" when he accused the Reagan administration of pushing a Soviet arms deal for domestic political reasons. Shultz said the comments of Supreme Allied Commander Gen. Bernard W. Rogers were "obviously ridiculous."

"Let Gen. Rogers put that in his pipe and smoke it," Shultz said in an uncharacteristically blunt attack on a fellow U.S. official.

The secretary of state spoke during a flight from Singapore to Sydney, where he and Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger will meet Australian leaders Monday for talks on Pacific security issues.

Shultz had visited Singapore for a two-day meeting of foreign ministers of the six-member Association of Southeast Asian Nations.

Relations between the United States and Australia are "good and strong and the reason for our regular consultations with them is to keep it that way," Shultz told reporters on his Air Force jet.

But his remarks about Australia contrasted sharply with his response to a question about Rogers. The general retires June 26 after eight years as NATO commander of allied forces in Europe, which include 325,000 American servicemen.

Rogers has urged that the United States show more restraint in superpower negotiations aimed at eliminating medium-range missiles in Europe.

The general has warned repeatedly that North Atlantic Treaty Organization forces in Europe will be vulnerable to a massive Soviet conventional attack without adequate nuclear defenses to deter aggression.

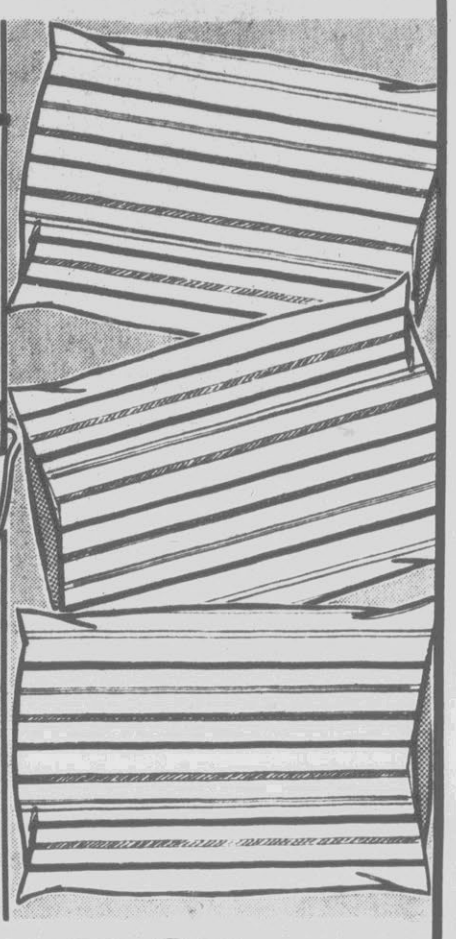

Under the proposed agreement, the Soviet Union will withdraw its SS-20 missiles targeted on Europe if the United States removes its Pershing II and cruise missiles now aimed at the Soviet Union from five European countries.

Rough-House Police Show Strength In Seoul Protests

By BARRY RENFREW
Associated Press Writer

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Tens of thousands of riot police hit, kicked and fired tear gas at demonstrators Saturday in a major show of strength after the government threatened "extraordinary" measures to stop nationwide protests.

Special martial arts attack squads and riot police hurling tear gas grenades charged into thousands of protesters demonstrating in Seoul. They also beat and tear gassed pedestrians and onlookers.

The unusually rough police tactics came after a government warning that protests that have swept the country for 11 days must end and after a riot policeman was killed in disburbances on Friday.

"Down with the military dictatorship," chanted protesters, some of whom hurled firebombs and rocks at attacking police in a clash around the Bank of Korea in the city center. Similar running clashes erupted elsewhere.

Police firing tear gas clashed with a procession of Buddhist monks who tried to march in Seoul after calling a "Save the Nation" rally. Thousands of police surrounded Chogye Temple to prevent the protesters from getting through, and some of the monks fought with officers.

Regiments of police in green combat uniforms and black, visored helmets lined main streets and intersections as columns of officers in buses and trucks patrolled the capital. Officials said the entire 120,000-man national police force was fielded to halt protests.

But the protests themselves appeared smaller and less violent than the vicious street battles that have flared in Seoul and other cities since opposition groups launched a drive June 10 to oust President Chun Doo-hwan and force democratic elections.

Clashes were reported Saturday in at least eight cities. Police blasted protesters and sympathizers in the southern port of Pusan, quickly moving in to break up crowds when they tried to form.

At least five police stations were attacked nationwide and a unit of riot police was overrun and stripped of their equipment by protesters in the southern city of Kwangju.

Several riot police units have been overrun in the recent violence. A riot police officer became the first person to die in the protests when he was hit by a bus commandered by a protester Friday in the central city of Taejon.

About 3,000 protesters surged through the streets of the central city of Chongju and stoned a government building and a police motor pool. Clashes were also reported in Chunchon, Sunchon, Songnam and Taegu.

Dozens of injuries were reported, but officials declined to give any overall figures.

Many protesters in Seoul yelled "Yankee go home!" and other anti-American slogans Saturday. Many opposition supporters contend the United States has helped keep Chun in power. Washington has about 40,000 troops in South Korea under a mutual defense pact.

"Let's rise up to punish the U.S. and Chun," said a leaflet distributed by protesters.

Prime Minister Lee Han-key, in an address to the nation Friday night, said the government would have to take an "extraordinary decision" if the protests do not end, but did not give details.

The National Coalition for a Democratic Constitution, the opposition alliance that launched the protests, issued an ultimatum Saturday demanding the government meet four demands by Monday or face new demonstrations. The coalition called for political reform, release of all political prisoners, guaranteed freedom of speech and assembly and a ban on tear gas.

The coalition said it tentatively would call for a grand march June 26 if the government refused its demands.

Roh Tae-woo, president of the ruling Democratic Justice Party, met with leaders of two minor opposition parties Saturday to discuss the situation. Roh has been selected as the government candidate to succeed Chun when Chun's seven-year term expires in February.

But the main opposition Reunification Democratic Party refused to meet with Roh until the government reverses its decision suspending talks on political reform.

"The only way to solve the current turbulent situation is to withdraw the April 13 presidential decision to freeze constitutional revision debate," said party spokesman Kim Tae-ryong.

Chun suspended talks on political reform April 13 until after the 1988 Seoul Olympics. He said the decision was necessary to safeguard national stability and the games.

Opposition groups are demanding direct, democratic elections and an end to the electoral college system that favors the government. But the government has said it will not reverse its decision.

Iran Warns U.S. Targets After Iraq Strikes Tanker

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iranian Prime Minister Hussein Musavi on Saturday threatened "crushing blows" against U.S. targets in the Persian Gulf after Iraqi planes attacked an Iran-bound oil tanker to end a one-month lull.

Iran has evidence that Kuwait provided the facilities for an air strike at dawn Saturday against the tanker in the northern gulf, Musavi said in a Tehran Radio broadcast monitored in Nicosia.

He did not elaborate, but the Iranians have charged in the past that Iraqi warplanes regularly fly through Kuwaiti air space on their way to attack ships and that Kuwait aids Iraq in its 6½-year war with Iran.

"Following this provocative move, insecurity in the Persian Gulf will be much greater than in the past," Musavi said. "Everyone should know that we will not shirk making America's military prestige in the region a target for our crushing blows."

Musavi said the attack on the tanker was designed to "pave the way for America's presence in the region."

Gulf-based shipping executives told The Associated Press in Bahrain that the vessel was the 74,000-ton Liberian-registered Tenacity. Tehran radio said the ship was sailing from Bandar Abbas in the strait of Hormuz to Iran's Kharg Island terminal in the northern gulf.

The Iraqi raid was the first against shipping in the gulf since one of Baghdad's fighter-bombers fired a missile into the frigate USS Stark May 17, killing 37 crewmen. Iraq has said the Stark was mistaken for an Iranian warship and apologized.

The first of 11 Kuwaiti tankers being registered in the United States to give them protection from Iranian attacks is expected to reach the gulf by the end of June.

Iran has warned the reflagging will not deter its forces from attacking Kuwaiti vessels or those trading with the emirate.

Baghdad Radio announced that Iraqi fighter-bombers hit "a large maritime target," which usually means a tanker, off the Iranian coast at 5 p.m.

Quoting a military spokesman, the state radio reported an "accurate and effective hit," indicating the vessel was probably hit by a missile.

Baghdad Radio also reported a "violent and daring" air raid on Kharg. The gulf-based shipping executives, who confirmed the terminal had been raided, said a pumping station was hit but the extent of the damage was unclear.

The Tehran broadcast made no mention of casualties or damage.

The official Iraqi News Agency quoted a military communique as saying that "today's two strikes are in line with the implementation of Iraq's resolve to deprive the Iranian regime of all wicked means that enable it to continue the war."

The Iraqi agency reported that Iraqi warplanes flew 32 combat missions against Iranian troop concentrations all along the war front Saturday, inflicting losses in the troops and equipment.

Iraq imposed a sea blockade on Kharg three years ago, seeking to choke off Tehran's oil exports, its economic lifeline. The Iranians retaliated by attacking merchant ships trading with the Arab gulf states. Nearly 250 vessels have been hit by both sides. In a separate incident, gulf-based marine salvage officials reported that the 247,408-ton Liberian supertanker Stena Explorer hit a mine off the Kuwaiti coast Friday after leaving the emirate's al-Ahmadi terminal with a cargo of oil.

The tanker, which was not believed to have been seriously damaged, was reported heading back to al-Ahmadi.

It was the fourth tanker hit by mines since May 16. Iran's Revolutionary Guards have mined the shipping lanes into al-Ahmadi in recent weeks, gulf shipping sources have reported.

U.S. defense officials consider Iran's Chinese-made anti-ship Silkworm missiles a major threat to shipping in the strategic Strait of Hormuz, the gulf's southern gateway. More than one-fifth of the non-Communist world's oil supplies pass through the strait.

Tehran Radio said 50 battalions of Revolutionary Guards paraded through Tehran Friday vowing to carry out suicide attacks against U.S. ships.

Apart from the disabled Stark, the U.S. Navy has six warships patrolling the gulf. Another three are expected to reinforce the task force shortly.

The Soviets have at least two warships in the gulf and are reported to be sending three minesweepers after Iranian mines hit the Marshal Chuikov, one of three tankers Moscow has leased to Kuwait to carry its oil exports under the protection of the Soviet flag.

Nearly 1,000 persons drowned in 1782 when a British man-o-war sank while being repaired in the harbor at Portsmouth, England.

Bahamians Return Pindling To Power

NASSAU, Bahamas (AP) — Prime Minister Lynden Pindling's resounding victory in parliamentary elections partly reflected grass-roots resentment against Americans' interference, leaders of the victorious party said Saturday.

Pindling, 57, in power since dumping a white-dominated coalition in 1967, weathered charges of corruption to lead his Progressive Liberal Party to a surprisingly comfortable victory and nail down his fifth five-year term.

Out of 49 seats in the House of Assembly, the PLP was projected to win at least 31. Unofficial and incomplete returns gave 16 to the opposition Free National Movement and two to former PLP Cabinet members who ran as independents. The PLP had 32 seats going into the election.

Pindling told a radio reporter who interviewed him at his home constituency on Andros Island that he thanked the Lord "for another great miracle."

He said the opposition party's campaign "propaganda" seriously harmed the country. He said the FNM was aided in these efforts by Americans, but did not identfy them.

PLP Chairman Sean McWeeney attributed the victory to a combination of factors that included grass-roots resentment against "American elements intruding themselves in domestic affairs."

He would not identify the elements by name, but said they included right-wingers and members of Congress who wanted Pindling replaced.

He also criticized comments made by U.S. Ambassador Carol Hallet and other American diplomats in the Bahamas.

"I don't think the U.S. government per se directly involved itself in the election," the PLP chairman said.

The election, Pindling said, had proved "who really, in fact, were supported by drug elements in the country," meaning members of the FNM.

Opposition leader Kendal Isaacs, 61, said he was perplexed that there was little erosion of support for the governing party. Isaacs, who narrowly won re-election to his own House seat, said he would resign his leadership role but remain in Parliament.

"It seems as if we just weren't in tune with the electorate," he said.

Relying primarily on a 1984 report by a Commission of Inquiry, the FNM attempted to link Pindling, some of his cronies and present and former government officials to drug-trafficking money.

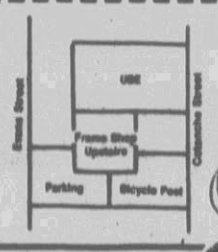

Trinidad won independence in 1962.

Syrians Demand Release Of Glass

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Syria said Saturday it would not wait long for kidnappers to release American journalist Charles Glass, but a Shiite Moslem leader reportedly warned he might be killed if Syria attacks.

Meanwhile, two rival Shiite factions battled in south Beirut's slums, where many of the 25 foreign hostages are believed to be held.

The Syrian military command in Beirut called for the quick and unconditional release of Glass, 36, of Los Angeles, and Ali Osseiran, 40, son of Lebanon's Defense Minister Adel Osseiran, said sources close to the command who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Fourteen kidnappers grabbed the pair Wednesday in south Beirut's seaside Ouzai district. It was the first abduction of a foreigner in Lebanon since the Syrians entered Moslem west Beirut Feb. 22, and it raised the number of kidnapped Americans to nine.

Syria deployed 7,500 troops in west Beirut to curb three years of anarchy caused by fighting between Lebanon's Moslem and Christian militias. The kidnappings were a major challenge to its attempt to pacify the city.

The Ouzai district is a stronghold of Hezbollah, or Party of God, the Iranian-backed Shiite extremist faction.

The Syrians telephoned their demand for the release of the two men Saturday to Sheik Mohammed Hussein Fadlallah, the nation's most influential Shiite cleric and spiritual guide of Hezbollah, the sources said.

The sources said the Syrians also called other Shiite factions in Beirut and repeated the demand.

"The Syrian command has warned that it's not going to wait too long for its demand to be met," said one source close to the command. "It made it plain ... that it wants both men freed unharmed quickly and unconditionally. The Syrians simply cannot afford to let the kidnappers get away with it."

Another source said, "The Syrians will take whatever measures required to gain the release of the two men."

It was unclear what action the Syrian would take if the hostages were not freed. Several radio stations in the capital's Moslem and Christian sectors said the Syrian army might move into the southern suburbs.

The Christian-controlled Voice of Lebanon radio station quoted Fadlallah as warning the Syrians against any military action in the south Beirut slums.

"I will not be able to guarantee Glass' life in the case of a Syrian military assault," he was quoted as telling officers of the Syrian command.

Fadlallah's office refused to comment on the report and on Syria's demands.

Fadlallah said in a statement published earlier by several Beirut newspapers that neither he nor fundamentalist Moslems in general should be blamed for the abduction of Glass and Osseiran.

In south Beirut, police said three combatants were killed and 11 wounded before a truce was declared in fighting between the prominent Shiite Mokdad clan and supporters of Akel Hamieh, military commander of the Moslem sect's mainstream Amal militia.

The fighting erupted over a territorial dispute, according to police.

The staccato of gunfire and shell blasts echoed across the capital as the rival militias fought street battles in the densely inhabited suburbs of Roweiss and Haret Hreik.

The sprawling Haret Hreik is widely believed to be the area where pro-Iranian Shiite extremists are holding many of the 25 foreign hostages kidnapped since March 1985.

The hostilities were not connected with the hostages, police said.

In addition to Glass and the other eight Americans, the foreigners missing and believed kidnapped in Lebanon include six Frenchmen, two Britons, two West Germans, an Indian, an Irishman, an Italian, a South Korean and two people of unknown nationality.

In addition, Terry Waite, a British envoy of the Anglican Church who has been seeking the release of foreign hostages, dropped from sight in Beirut Jan. 20 and his whereabouts are unknown. No one has claimed involvement in his disappearance.

Envoy Refused

PARIS (AP) — President Francois Mitterrand said Saturday he was defending a French citizen jailed in a South African tribal homeland "in my own manner" by postponing the new South African ambassador's presentation of credentials.

In Pretoria, South African Foreign Minister R.F. Botha called the postponement "cynical and a slap in the face."

Also Saturday, about 10,000 demonstrators marched through the main banking district of Frankfurt, West Germany, calling on banks to cut all business ties with white-led South Africa because of its apartheid system of racial segregation.

Mitterrand said he considered the actions of volunteer worker Pierre-Andre Albertini "noble," while South African authorities believed them a threat to "the sad system which prevails in that country."

Albertini, 27, has served eight months of a four-year sentence in the black tribal homeland of Ciskei for refusing to testify in a case in which the defendants were convicated of aiding the outlawed African National Congress guerilla organization.

Mitterrand's aides disclosed Friday that a symbolic decision had been made not to accept the credentials of South African ambassador-designate Henrick Geldenhuys as planned on June 24.

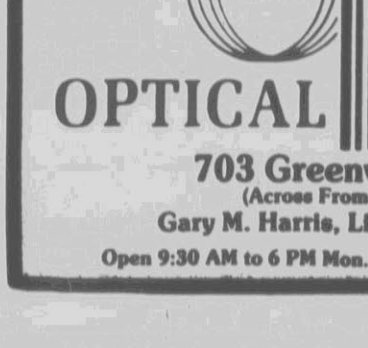

Tourist Thaw

ASHEVILLE (AP) — Buncombe County tourism officials have begun a campaign to heat up a tourist season chilled by April snows.

The spring slump attributed to the weather carried over into May, according to preliminary estimates offered by members of the Buncombe County Tourism Authority.

The Asheville Area Chamber of Commerce reported a 20 percent drop in inquiries in April from more than 20,000 in 1986 to 16,000 in 1987. Buncombe County hotel and motel sales declined 4 percent to $2.67 million from $2.79 million in April 1986.

Tourism is Buncombe County's second largest industry. In 1986, it accounted for an estimated $305.5 million in sales revenues, up from $288 million in 1985, according to the N.C. Department of Travel and Tourism.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Another Dream Becomes Reality

One more dream will be realized for eastern North Carolina this afternoon.

The Ronald McDonald House of Eastern North Carolina will be formally dedicated at 2 p.m. A ribbon cutting will be held at 3 p.m., and an open house will follow, lasting until about 5 p.m. After that the house will welcome its first overnight guests.

Those who will be using the house are special. It is designed as a place where parents can stay to be near a child who is receiving treatment at Pitt County Memorial Hospital. It will provide support for the Children's Hospital of North Carolina, the hospital's pediatric care component.

Pitt Memorial will be in select company by having such a support facility. In North Carolina there are Ronald McDonald houses at Durham and Winston-Salem and one under construction at Chapel Hill. There are over 100 in the nation. That has number has grown from the first house constructed in 1973 near the Children's Hospital of Philadelphia. The projects have the support of the McDonald Corp. which contributed $225,000 toward the construction of the local house.

There has also been an extensive campaign throughout eastern North Carolina with civic groups, businesses and other organizations contributing in various ways. Even though the house is complete, the fund raising is not and Children's Services of Eastern North Carolina, Inc. will continue the campaign in hopes of paying off construction costs in the next six months.

This will indeed be the house that love built. Major businesses and industries of the state have pledged large amounts of money to the house. In eastern North Carolina churches, civic clubs and a variety of organizations have provided for decorating rooms or other specific projects.

Everyone recognizes the needs of families who have a seriously ill child receiving treatment at the Children's Hospital of Eastern North Carolina. Not only do they need the living facilities that the Ronald McDonald House provides, but they need the moral support that people experiencing the same trauma can provide.

There is not enough thanks to go around to all the people, businesses and organizations who are participating in this project. The appreciation will come from the thousands who will use the facility in future years. It is a project that should give us all a great deal of pride.

Decision-Making Time In Raleigh

It's time for North Carolina's legislators to close the 1987 session of the General Assembly and come home.

The state's representatives and senators should begin wrapping up business in the Legislature and tying up loose ends. The legislative session needs to come to a close soon, before costs — and issues — pile up needlessly.

There is no reason for the General Assembly to operate halfway through the summer. Decisions must be made, compromises must be reached to facilitate adjournment.

The longer lawmakers remain in Raleigh, the more it costs taxpayers. Granted, it's imperative state issues demanding attention be taken care of and this session had a lion's share of significant legislation. But it is also important reasonable deadlines for addressing these issues be adopted and observed.

It's easy for lawmakers to bog down in the muck of decision-making. What is more difficult is to stay out of that mire by adhering to a schedule. Doing that requires homework and limiting the hours absorbed by lobbying efforts.

To put it simply, decisions must be made by lawmakers and made quickly. Taxpayers don't have enough money to keep legislators in Raleigh indefinitely.

Besides, the longer they stay in Raleigh, the more tangles the state's lawmakers can get into.

The time for winding down the General Assembly has arrived. Lawmakers, put the final legislative seal on issues, and save constituents some money. It is expensive and unnecessary to keep the session going all summer.

Lives Mapped, Lies Told At Riggs House

Alvin Taylor

Sunday Morning Notes

Hal Smith of Pitt Community College called with a sad bit of news last week.

He reported that the old Riggs House restaurant was being demolished. The restaurant has been closed for some time. The boarded-up building had stood there as a reminder to many a person of his or her single days when a date ended with coffee and a hamburger at the all-night restaurant.

Hal said a landmark was gone. He used to come over from Vanceboro where he grew up and, of course, soon came to visit the Riggs House Restaurant.

"I had my first cheese omelette there," he chuckled. And he confided, "Nobody in Vanceboro knew what an omelette was. I didn't either but I didn't want anybody else to know that I didn't know."

Omelette was perhaps the most exotic thing on the Riggs House menu. Mostly then people ordered their eggs fried over easy with bacon, grits and an order of toast. Keep the coffee coming was the request of the guys who gathered there following their dates to discuss how things went, or just to talk about sports. (Back then they had to take their dates home to their parents at midnight or so).

Of course there was also the mandatory ham sandwich either with mustard or mayonaise, lettuce and tomato and the hamburger with all its garnishments. One could stay as long as he wanted since the place was open all night.

Your columnist rode past the location of the old restaurant on Dickinson Avenue next to Carolina Gulf station near 14th Street. Sure enough it was as Hal had said. The old building was being demolished. For many of us a little of the carefree days of youth were to be no more. It was a feeling like when Old Austin disappeared from the East Carolina University campus.

There are, of course, successors to the Riggs House restaurant. In fact, you can go to all night supermarkets and buy what you want for a midnight snack. There is nothing around with the character of Riggs House, however. Lies were told, careers were mapped out and once in a while a young man would admit that he really cared for the young lady he had been seeing. You had to be there to understand it all.

Public Forum

To the editor:

The businesses of Greenville deserve recognition and praise for their cooperation in the sign ordinance. As you know, this ordinance, passed in November, 1986, defined the usage of and limitations placed on signs in our community. After a three-month awareness and information campaign conducted by the Engineering and Inspections Department of the City of Greenville, our local businesses were in complete compliance with the ordinance. Chief Building Inspector Jim Kaufman highly praises the efforts of Jesse Ebron, who was helpful in distributing and explaining information to the various businesses.

We do applaud the businesses of Greenville for their cooperation in the sign ordinance. It has greatly improved the overall appearance of our community.

To the editor:

I double dare you to print your policy on putting names in your paper.

I recently submitted a story to you about the 45th year class reunion of the Greenville High School Class of 1942, including 44 names of classmates who came from as far away as El Cajon, Calif. There is no doubt that the names of these people would be of a great deal of interest to a lot of people.

You stated that it is against your policy to print so many names. In Tuesday's paper, your report of the district court included about 250 names. Why don't you simply say that 14 were charged with DWI, 20 with speeding, 10 with assault, etc.?

If you refuse to print names about happy occasions, why do you print names of people who have been arrested?

To the editor:

Having grown up in a rural part of North Carolina, I have learned to appreciate a lot of things that the City of Greenville offers to the public. Sepcifically, the recreational activities that are offered. I have been reading the Public Forum and the letters and comments that various people have made concerning the Recreation and Parks Department and find it very unsettling to read some of the comments.

If the citizens of Greenville only knew what it was like to be in an area that offers little or no recreational activities, they would really aporeciate what a fine job the Recreation and Parks Department really does.

Also, I would like to comment on the outstanding parks that the department maintains and allows the citizens of Greenville to use. When you want to have a picnic or an outing, there are many beautiful parks for you to choose from. Sure, you could just picnic on the patio, but nothing is as much fun and as relaxing as going to a park, enjoying a meal and than maybe playing a little ball or taking a stroll around the park.

So, come on folks, give this fine department a break and a little support and we will all benefit in the end.

Mullahs Of Iran Vie For Power

G.H. Jansen

NICOSIA, Cyprus — Under increasing pressure at home and abroad from a large variety of opponents, Iran's ruling clique, the singularly non-other-worldly mullahs, are engaged in fierce struggles for power.

The chief protagonists are the Speaker of the Majlis, or Parliament, Hashemi Rafsanjani, and the president of Iran, Ali Khamenei. There is no clear dividing line of policy or ideology between these two men, or between any of the contestants, because a mullah who is "moderate" on the Gulf War can be "radical" on economic reform and "extremist" on Islamization. It is power, and the power of absolute leadership after the passing of the imam, the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, that is the name of the game and the prize.

In what is a key development, Rafsanjani scored heavily against Khamenei June 1 when he persuaded Khomeini to order the disbandment of the Islamic Republican Party, which had been led by Khamenei. The IRP, created by the mullahs as their political machine immediately after the Revolution, became omnipresent — through it the mullahs captured the Revolution and ruled Iran for the past 7½ years. That Rafsanjani should take the risk of wiping out the regime's main power base merely to weaken a competitor indicates that the internal struggle is total and no-holds-barred.

Rafsanjani outflanked Khamenei by arguing that the IRP had worked itself out of a job by successfully completing the unification of the revolutionary forces. Though this was obviously not the case, it was difficult for Khamenei not to step into the enticing trap. Underscoring his success, Rafsanjani, with his usual combative arrogance, said just two days later that Iran needed "a strong, indestructible political party." But he went too far when, at the same time, he tried to get Khomeini to dissolve the 12-member Council of Guardians, a highly conservative group that has vetoed the most important reforms approved by the Majlis under Rafsanjani's sponsorship.

Khamenei has countered by asking Khomeini to change the constitution so as to permit him to have a third term of office. Khomeini, who likes to keep all the contesting factions in play, is unwilling to tamper with either the Council of Guardians or with the constitution. What is more, the imam seems to be quietly promoting his own choice of successor, his son, Ahmad, who has been steadily accumulated powerful official posts: He now has almost total control of all the media in Iran. Above all, he is not only the person closest to his all-powerful father, he is his doorkeeper, which for millennia has always been the most influential key position in Middle Eastern power structures, whether imperial or revolutionary.

No one can predict the outcome of this leadership struggle, but what is certain is that it is continuous and increasingly bitter, thus making it that much more difficult for the regime to respond to ever more dangerous challenges.

One of these challenges is the steadily increasing military activity inside Iran of the People's Moujahedeen (Holy Warriors), an Islamic group slightly to the left of center. This movement, which was in the forefront of the struggle against the shah, was smashed and driven underground by the Islamic Republican Party. Moujahedeen leader Massoud Rajavi fled to France in 1981. Last year the French, under Iranian pressure, pushed him out and he and his followers are now based in Iraq, just across the frontier and thus better placed to carry out attacks inside Iran.

There have been 60 of these attacks reported this year, urban guerrilla actions like bombings and individual assassinations, and in the countryside, ambushes and increasingly large set-piece clashes with units of the regime's Revolutionary Guards. In the last three months the Moujahedeen claim to have overrun guards's camps and to have captured 50 guardsmen and their arms and equipment.

Rafsanjani has been so angered by the Moujahedeen that he has complained publicly to West Germany for allowing the movement to function there.

Pope John Paul's Moral Vision Has Political Impact

Jim Hoagland

PARIS — The protests about Pope John Paul II receiving Kurt Waldheim at the Vatican next week miss the point. As a religious leader, the pope turns no sinner away. As a political leader, this pope has rightly made it his duty to confront rather than shun those with whom he disagrees, from Chile's Pinochet to Poland's Jaruzelski.

In an era when Reagan and Gorbachev are styled as the Great Communicators, John Paul is the Great Confronter. He wants to illuminate an international moral order as an alternative to the corrupting political structures of the temporal world. The pope does not allow those who try to find legitimacy by meeting him to get away unscathed, Waldheim will discover.

The protests demonstrate another important reality about the pope. Most of us tend to focus on this remarkably multifaceted pontiff through the one or two prisms that matter most to us at the time, and fail to grasp the integrated, long-term political and ethical vision of a man who will mark the closing years of the 20th century as much as any other leader we can identify today.

If we disagree with him on birth control or his tough rejection of the Sandinistas, he comes on like a Catholic ayatollah. If we don't like his message on redistributing wealth or oppose having his cardinals challenge prowestern military regimes, he is a meddling do-gooder.

The sense that there is a broader pattern in all this has been growing for me since a trip through Asia last year provided a chance to listen in the same week to Cardinal Stephen Kim in Seoul and Cardinal Jaime Sin in Manila. They described in detail the moral collapse of the elites ruling their nations and the church's refusal to colloborate in the efforts of those elites to keep power through repression.

The differences between the two prelates, and between their societies, are greater than the similarities. But John Paul's determination to have his church be the alternative moral authority to government in societies swept up in social upheaval was clearly enunciated by both men.

In the Philippines, Cardinal Sin, acting with John Paul's encouragement, played the key role in mobilizing "People's Power" to depose the Marcoses. We may be witnessing a similar process at work right now in South Korea and in Panama. And the pope's trips to his native Poland, including the one he concluded earlier this week, have fundamentally reshaped politics in Eastern Europe.

Despite open displays of disapproval by General Jaruzelski and the quiet discomfort of the more conservative and accommodation-minded national church hierarchy, John Paul publicly celebrated the regime's failure to break the moral authority of the outlawed Solidarity movement. He extolled the courage and intellectual honesty that have kept Solidarity from being bought off or intimidated out of existence. And he refused to extend legitimacy to nuclear-disarmament proposals made by Gorbachev and Jaruzelski.

The pope's persistent and patient chipping away at the evils of Communist rule in Poland stands in sharp contrast to the kind of rhetorical challenge that Reagan threw at Gorbachev in inviting him to apply the ultimate in transparency to the Berlin Wall by tearing it down.

Some at the State Department counseled against the "tear down the wall" line as being too provocative at a time when progress is being made on an arms-control summit with the Russians. That objection misses the point, it seems to me.

The White House continues to look for dramatic gestures that will persuade Americans and foreigners alike that there is still life in the administration, rather than developing a serious analysis of how to deal with the Soviets in the years to come.

The White House underscored this in another way recently by sounding out Zbigniew Brzezinski about becoming the next U.S. ambassador to Poland. Brzezinski, Jimmy Carter's national security adviser and a red flag to the Russians, was not interested in discussing this bizarre proposal and urged the White House instead to send an experienced professional, which it is now doing.

History is likely to record the challenge to tear down the wall as a meaningless taunt, delivered as a grand gesture that was not conceived as part of a coherent policy. The Reagan administration, heading into a summit with a clever and manipulative Soviet leader, continues to be unwilling to put in the kind of hard work and steady attention that John Paul devotes to the same set of problems.

When Reform Backfires

Ronald Brownstein

When his big problem was debt, not sex, former Sen. Gary Hart often said his presidential campaign had so many unpaid bills because he would not lower himself to accept money from pernicious Political Action Committees.

As an explanation for his campaign's financial problems, that line belonged in the "we-slept-in-separate-boats" school of political rationalization.

Though most political activists don't realize it, PACs play almost no role in presidential politics. When presidential candidates say, as many do, that they won't take PAC money, they are practicing the kind of morality that politicians (like most of us) prefer: cheap and easy.

In the past three elections, PACs provided only 1.2 percent, 1.4 percent and 1.1 percent, respectively, of the funds raised by the presidential candidates, an amount so small as to be inconsequential. In this campaign, even Establishment Republicans such as Vice President George Bush and Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole of Kansas expect to receive only a minuscule percentage of their funds from PACs. Hart's 1984 debt of $4.7 million was almost four times as much as PACs contributed to all candidates in that election.

The virtual elimination of PACs from the presidential nomination process is one of the principal victories of the campaign finance reform law passed after Watergate. Since almost the day that law went into effect, reformers have wailed ever more loudly about the rising cost of congressional races, and the candidates' growing reliance on special interests to pay the bills. Like an alcoholic recovering from a bender, many legislators came out of the last election convinced that something had to be done. And so legislation is now under consideration on the Senate floor to impose public financing and limit PAC contributions in congressional races.

But the bill ignores the most sensitive political contest of all: the presidential race. Two factors explain the omission: By and large, in the presidential race, the campaign finance reforms have worked. And what many consider the principal remaining problem, a contribution limit set too low, is not the sort of issue that attracts reformers.

Though regulations covering presidential campaign financing are complex, basic rules are simple. In the campaign finance law, Congress limited the amount candidates for the presidential nomination could spend, and the size of contributions they could receive. It barred contributions to the general election presidential campaign and instead provided public financing for the nominees.

Those rules explain why PACs, which play such a significant role in congressional battles, stay out of the White House race. Because they can only give money to candidates in primaries, PACs are forced to select not between the parties, but among them. To most PACs, that doesn't make sense: Why should a business PAC pick Bush over Dole?

Labor bends this rule. It spends heavily to rally members behind its favored candidate. In the last election, labor efforts on behalf of Walter F. Mondale amounted to an electoral jihad. University of Southern California political scientist Herbert E. Alexander, author of "Financing the 1984 Election," estimates that unions spent $10 million in the nomination and $20 million in the general election to prop up Mondale. Unions are unlikely to play as great a role in this election, because labor leaders — faced with a field of unknowns — do not seem to be heading toward anointment of a single candidate.

In theory, PACs can affect the presidential race through independent expenditures. But in practice they do little.

Consider the 1984 presidential campaign. Eight ideologically conservative PACs reported an impressive-sounding $16.2 million in pro-Reagan or anti-Mondale independent expenditures. The numbers were a mirage. During the presidential campaign, these groups did virtually nothing but raise money for themselves; 85 percent of the National Conservative Political Action Committee's pro-Reagan independent expenditures, for example, went into massive direct-mail appeals that used the presidential campaign as the hook. With conservative direct mail fund-raising still struggling, the prognosis for 1988 is for more of the same.

All this notwithstanding, special interests are heard in presidential politics. But their influence comes from the ability of groups such as unions, environmentalists, feminists, religious fundamentalists and anti-abortion activists to provide candidates with people — volunteers who make phone calls and voters who cast ballots.

People, quaintly enough, are at least as important to presidential candidates as money; with equal deference, Democrats and Republican presidential candidates routinely align their positions with the litmus tests of their party's most powerful constituency groups. No current Democratic contender wants to ban abortion; no Republican wants to leave the law unchanged. No Democrat supports aid to the Nicaraguan contras; no Republican would cut them off.

But constituency groups who represent a real slice of the community are always going to influence politicians — there's no reason they shouldn't — and it has to be considered positive if the groups lure the candidates with voters not dollars.

The law has had a similar effect by limiting individual contributions to $1,000. Before the limits, multimillionaires on the left and right regularly made campaigns viable with a stroke of the pen. Now, big contributors have been replaced by big collectors — people whose political strength is in the size of their address books, not their checkbooks.

Like the big donors, the collectors are routinely rewarded for their labors; former Secretary of Labor Raymond J. Donovan apprenticed by collecting funds for Reagan in New Jersey. But the fund-raisers play a fundamentally different role than the huge donors did: Now, to produce funds, the money players have to convince other people to invest in their candidate. Ultimately, a successful presidential campaign requires tens of thousands of donors. In that way, the contribution limit has made fund-raising much more of a grass-roots activity.

The contribution limit, though, has also had a perverse effect and created the reform's great unintended consequence. The law allowed the spending limit to rise every four years with inflation; but Congress did not index the contribution limit. "There has been such an erosion of the dollar since 1975 that a $1,000 contribution today is worth just over $400 in constant dollars," says Alexander.

The frozen contribution limit has forced all candidates to devote more of their limited campaign time to raising money. The time demands are greatest on the least-known candidates — without the name recognition to attract direct-mail donors or the star fund raisers. Thus dark horses who most need to meet voters are forced, perversely, to spend the most time rubbing elbows at cocktail parties.

It's counter-intuitive for reformers to believe that increasing contribution limits could improve the political process. But now many experts see that as the answer.

Choosing Number Two

Patrick Thomas

Since World War II, half of our eight presidents have come up from the vice presidency, and two other vice presidents have won presidential nominations. Yet there is something quite cavalier about the way running mates are selected. The last time the public had a say was in 1956, when Adlai E. Stevenson allowed the Democratic delegates to decide the matter.

Accidental U.S. presidents have ranged from monumental mediocrities like Millard Fillmore to Mount Rushmore types like Theodore Roosevelt. Only 15 years ago, the nominees of both parties made critical mistakes in picking running mates. George McGovern's campaign self-destructed when the electorate learned that his first choice, Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton, D-Mo., had undergone psychiatric treatment. Winner Richard Nixon was eventually no luckier; Spiro T. Agnew was forced to resign as vice president in 1973 after a tax fraud indictment.

Originally, the office was awarded to the runner-up in the general election. And a look at history adds more weight to Supreme Court Justice Thurgood Marshall's argument that the Founding Fathers were not necessarily the last word on good government.

In the 1800 election, Thomas Jefferson and Aaron Burr tied with 73 electoral votes each, and the race was decided in the House of Representatives where Alexander Hamilton swung the decision to Jefferson. The perilous nature of original intent was illuminated in 1804 when Vice President Burr killed Hamilton in a duel. Just before the killing, in a climate of rancor, the Constitution was amended to allow the presidential nominees to name their own running mates. Since then, nominees have normally exercised autocratic power and most often selected someone to woo a specific group. Geraldine A. Ferraro's nomination, for instance, was a classic case of political symbolism to appeal to women voters.

The logical way to a running mate would be to choose the runner-up from the primaries, as Ronald Reagan did in 1980 and John Kennedy in 1960. The only other time this has happened, however, was in 1876, when Samuel Tilden was the Democratic candidate.

Instead, presidential nominees usually ignore their serious primary rivals, often at the expense of their own chances. A Jimmy Carter-Edward F. Kennedy slate in 1980 or a Gerald Ford-Ronald Reagan team in 1976 could conceivably have changed the outcomes. Yet personality conflicts precluded practicality. Now, it's almost picking time for next year's No. 2 nominees, sometimes called the sidecar candidates.

On the Republican side, we know at least who is not likely; George Bush can hardly relish the idea of being history's first 12-year veep. Sen. Bob Dole, Kan., had an unpleasant experience running for second place in 1976; besides, he has a better job now as Senate minority leader. Howard H. Baker Jr., former Senate leader and present White House chief of staff, is overqualified. Two serious contenders could be retired Nevada Sen. Paul Laxalt, the president's close friend, and New York Rep. Jack Kemp, the supply-siders' ardent signal caller. But Laxalt has been wounded by a messy libel suit and Kemp so far demonstrates no broad appeal.

The Democrats have an embarrassment of potential riches because all the presidential candidates seem quite suitable for second place. Any one of the so-called "Seven Dwarfs" might do.

But with a large field of presidential candidates and could-be candidates, what is beginning to worry Democrats most is a nightmare vision of a truly open convention, with no candidate coming to Atlanta with more than 35 percent of the delegate votes.

In that case, the power broker could be Jesse Jackson, who could take as much as 90 percent of the black vote in the Southern regional primaries next March. If Jackson's secret ambition is to be the first black vice presidential nominee, the Democrats could again be in big trouble. Since the day Gary Hart dropped out, Jackson tides have menaced the party mainstream.

Hamilton Jordan's Memo

Rowland Evans & Robert Novak

WASHINGTON — In the last secret memorandum he left for the incoming Reagan team, Hamilton Jordan prophetically warned that if the law permitting wide-ranging probes by special prosecutors was not severely amended it would rear up and "bite" the new administration, no matter how scrupulous it tried to be.

President Carter's chief of staff tried to pass that word directly to now-Attorney General Edwin Meese, who was President Reagan's counselor, and to incoming staff chief James Baker III and his deputy, Michael Deaver. They were too busy for Jordan, so he wrote a memorandum. Both Deaver and Meese have since become targets of special prosecutors.

Jordan, who was also targeted for investigation by a special prosecutor, and cleared, has not changed his mind that the law should be radically softened. That is what Assistant Attorney General John Bolton last Tuesday told Congress, where the law is up for renewal.

Bush Or Kemp?

No fewer than seven "Members of the George Bush for President Committee" in Iowa, announced by George Bush Jr. early this year, have no intention of backing the vice president but, despite word from political insiders in the camp of Rep. Jack Kemp, have not become Kemp backers either.

Showing their versatility at getting the most out of the "commitment" game, one of the seven, Paul Liebbe, Louisa County GOP chairman, told us candidly that he does not know "whether I am on the Bush committee or some one else's." As of today, he told us, Sen. Bob Dole "would win" the Iowa caucuses.

The Kemp camp was correct on Harold Trupp of Waterloo, erroneously claimed by Bush. Trupp told us: "I have switched to Jack Kemp." When asked about that, a Bush operative produced a letter from Trupp stating: "You can count on me when you run for president."

McPherson Challenged

Peter McPherson's nomination to become deputy secretary of the Treasury has been put on "hold" by Sens. Jesse Helms and Malcolm Wallop, with Helms demanding a full-fledged audit of his activites.

Panama's Weakened Military Survives Challenge

By BRYNA BRENNAN
Associated Press Writer

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — The powerful military establishment has survived the strongest challenge to its 19-year control over Panama and remains the leading force in a nation of strategic importance to the United States.

But opposition critics say the military's days are numbered following a public show of displeasure.

Thousands of Panamanians recently demonstrated in many cities of the isthmus to demand the ouster of Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, the head of the Panamanian Defense Forces. As boss of the defense forces, Noriega is leader of the country.

The disturbances followed charges by Col. Roberto Diaz Herrera that Noriega was linked to the 1981 plane crash death of strongman Gen. Omar Torrijos and the 1985 killing of political foe Hugo Spadafora. Diaz Herrera also alleged Noriega was involved in election fraud.

Similar charges against Noriega had previously surfaced here and in Washington, but it was the first time they had been lodged by a high-ranking Panamanian military officer.

The demonstrations got widespread support for the first time from a people seemingly tired of the control wielded by the military, which took over in a 1968 coup that brought Torrijos to power.

Wealthy and middle-class Panamanians wore white as a symbol of their demands for Noriega's ouster and attended Roman Catholic Masses to evade a ban on assembly imposed under a state of emergency. Poor in the dilapidated French-style tenements banged pots and pans to show their displeasure at Noriega.

The normally conservative Roman Catholic Church called for an investigation of the charges. The 130 institutions in the nation's banking center, one of the largest in the world, closed down.

"Noriega may not go this time," said Ruben Carles, an editor of La Prensa, one of three opposition newspapers that chose to suspend publication rather than submit to the censorship ordered under the state of emergency. "But he has been weakened."

The United States, which usually exercises caution when dealing with Noriega, also backed an investigation and called for "free and untarnished elections, and the full development of an apolitical, professional military institution."

Last year, following allegations against Noriega, the State Department diplomatically urged Panama to follow a democratic path.

Panama's importance to the United States is highlighted by the largest concentration of American military in the region. More than 10,000 troops are stationed at bases along the 50-mile long Panama Canal, which links the Atlantic and Pacific oceans.

Panama also is home to the U.S. Southern Command, responsible for Latin American military operations and maneuvers.

Military officials in the region acknowledge that the bases in Panama have been used to aid Contra rebels fighting the leftist Nicaraguan government and to track guerrillas battling the U.S.-supported government in El Salvador.

The American-built canal, in accordance with 1977 treaties signed by Torrijos and former President Jimmy Carter, will be turned over to Panama at the end of 1999.

Strong nationalist feelings reached a fever pitch and turned to riots over the issue in 1964. Torrijos gained enormous support for winning back what the Panamanians viewed as their territory.

The former Canal Zone, which was treated as if sovereign by the United States, was turned over to the Panamanians in 1979. Many Americans still live there in single-family homes with manicured lawns along tree-lined streets with names still in English, not Spanish.

The United States insists it will comply with the treaties. But Noriega and civilian President Erie Delvalle claimed the recent demonstrations were instigated by Americans opposed to the transfer. They both spoke of "intervention."

The United States had been reluctant to act on the reports, the sources said, because of security issues and the lack of public outcry.

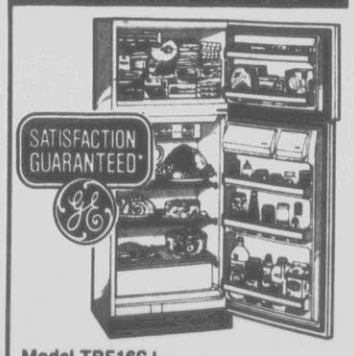

"For the first time we have a nationwide — geographically and socially — rebellion against the regime," Ricardo Arias Calderon, head of the opposition Christian Democratic Party, said last week.

Despite The Uncertainties

Spurs Will Still Take Robinson

NEW YORK (AP) — The San Antonio Spurs and David Robinson know what uniform he will be wearing the next two years.

What they don't know — and what Monday's NBA draft won't help resolve — is what basketball uniform he will wear by 1989.

Despite Robinson's two-year Navy commitment and the uncertainty of how long the Spurs will retain exclusive rights to sign him, the team has not wavered in its determination to draft him No. 1.

"Nothing has happened since the draft lottery to change our minds," said Angelo Drossos, Spurs president.

Last month, the 7-foot-1 Robinson was commissioned as an ensign after four years at the U.S. Naval Academy, where he was one of the nation's top scorers, rebounders and shot blockers.

Under NBA rules, the Spurs would retain the rights to sign him for a year, but they contend a bylaw that predates the current collective bargaining agreement gives them more than two years to sign Robinson.

"The bylaw states that a team which drafts a player in the armed services retains the rights to sign him until 30 days after he gets out of the service," Drossos said. "Our lawyers feel very strongly about getting at least a second year."

Several developments in recent weeks will complicate the Spurs' efforts to sign Robinson.

The Navy has said Robinson is free to sign an NBA contract and receive salary or bonus money before his two-year, active-duty commitment is finished.

The NBA said on June 2 that a judge or an arbitrator would have to resolve any dispute over whether signing rights continue beyond a year.

"The point may become academic because we hope to sign him very quickly," Drossos said. "He's a very intelligent young man and we believe he will make a very intelligent decision."

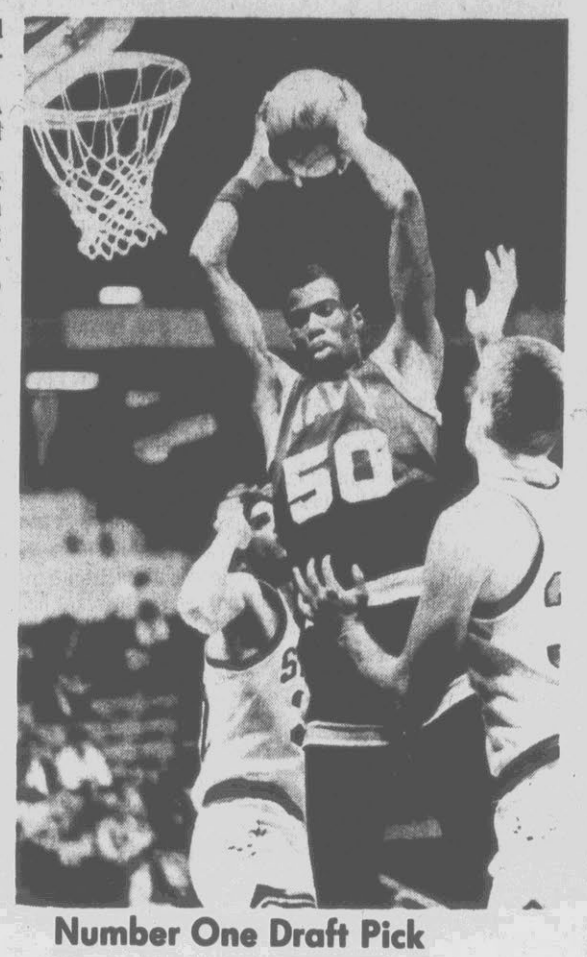

But because of a signing freeze that lasts until Oct. 1 to help contract talks between the league and the players' union, the Spurs already have lost more than three months of their first-year "signing window."

Even if a judge gives the Spurs an extra year to sign Robinson, the NBA contends he would become a free agent eligible to sign with any NBA team after that time.

"All these things will make it a little tougher to sign him, but they haven't changed our minds," said Bob Bass, the Spurs' general manager.

Also, Larry Fleisher, general counsel for the NBA Players Association, plans to demand an end to the entire draft system, making free agents of all rookies. If that happens, Robinson's chances of winding up with the Spurs would be slim indeed, considering that talented and wealthy teams like the Lakers and Celtics would covet him.

"Having David Robinson sign with another team besides the Spurs is a scenario that the national media has created, but we don't have the feel that is what's going to happen," Bass said. "We will start discussions with him when he gets an agent to represent him."

Number One Draft Pick

Navy's David Robinson grabs off one of 25 games he had in a 78-53 win over Fairfield in May, 1986. Robinson, despite a two-year committment to Navy service, and the uncertainty of how long San Antonio will retain his rights, is still slated to be that team's number one pick in the draft. (AP Laserphoto)

Monday's first-round draft order after the Spurs is Phoenix, New Jersey, Los Angeles Clippers, Seattle, Sacramento, Cleveland, Chicago, Seattle, Chicago, Indiana, Washington, Los Angeles Clippers, Golden State, Utah, Philadelphia, Portland, New York, Los Angeles Clippers, Dallas, Atlanta, Boston and San Antonio.

"If David Robinson is out of the league for the next two years, our guy is going to be the most talked about rookie in the league," said Suns General Manager Jerry Colangelo.

He said the Suns will choose between 6-9 forward Armon Gilliam of Nevada-Las Vegas and 6-5 guard Dennis Hopson of Ohio State, both of whom were invited back for second interviews a few days before the draft.

Other players expected to go high in the draft are 6-11 Olden Polynice of Virginia, who played last season in Italy; 7-0 Chris Welp of Washington, 6-3 Kenny Smith of North Carolina, 6-10 Horace Grant of Clemson, 6-9 Dallas Comegys of DePaul, 6-7 Reggie Williams of Georgetown, 6-9 Derrick McKey of Alabama, 6-8 Ken Norman of Iowa and 6-3 Mark Jackson of St. John's.

Marty Blake, the NBA's director of scouting, said that the 1987 rookie crop is deep, but does not have the quality to make an immediate impact on the league.

"You'll have to look back at this draft in two or three years to get a real understanding of just how good it really is," Blake said. "I think you'll see an awful lot of these players in the league."

"I wish we could get Michael Jordan with the third pick the way Chicago did three years ago," Nets General Manager Harry Weltman said, "but there's no one of that caliber available."

The Nets, picking third, have a big hole at guard and could take either Williams or Hopson.

"We like them," Weltman said, "but we haven't made up our minds yet. Drafting for 'need' is important, but bigger men are generally more valuable than smaller men. We also like Derrick McKey of Alabama and Gilliam."

Weltman said Williams and Hopson both played forward in college and would have to adjust to the backcourt. He praised Williams as the type of player "who can shoot 6-for-18 and still do things that will help the team win."

Weltman said he expects some trades to change the draft order, but that the deals probably won't come until the last minute.

"It's the law of convergence," he said. "You want to get everything you possibly can out of a deal, so you wait until the last possible moment."

Grant Awaits 1st Round Call

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Horace Grant knows he will be sweating come Monday in New York when the National Basketball Association holds its annual draft.

But the Clemson star thinks he has the answer to his problem.

"I'm going to try not to sweat," Grant said. "I'm going to be wearing my Ban deodorant — you know, don't let them see you sweat."

Grant can joke. He knows he will be drafted — in the first round, if projections are correct.

The question is, who will pick Grant? Will it be the Los Angeles Clippers, who have the fourth selection? Or Seattle, who picks fifth? Or Chicago, who has the 10th choice?

Doesn't matter, Grant said. What's important is not who or when — what's important is this: it's the NBA.

"I'm nervous and excited. Nervous because I don't know where I'm going to end up," Grant said. "I'm excited because I'm just one step from making my dream come true, which is playing pro basketball.

"I feel all the running up and down the court, the wind sprints, the suicides ... they're all finally paying off," he said. "But I'm still having a hard time believing it.... It's not that I never really thought it would happen. It's just happened so quickly."

Grant, a 6-foot-10, 215-pound center-forward, said he's being told by NBA officials that he could be drafted as early as fourth or as late as 10th. San Antonio has the No. 1 pick and is expected to pick Navy center David Robinson.

"I feel that Seattle or Chicago will draft me," he said during a recent telephone interview from his cousin's house in Sparta, Ga. "But it doesn't matter what team drafts me as long as I get an opportunity to play."

Grant's NBA opportunity comes on what was his best season at Clemson.

Grant was named Atlantic Coast Conference player of the year after leading the league in scoring (21 points per game), rebounding (9.6) and field goal percentage (65.6). Grant is the first player to lead the league in all three categories in the same year.

Grant's performance this past season only enhanced his stock among NBA teams. In recent weeks, several teams — including Phoenix, Chicago and Seattle — have looked Grant over during tryout sessions.

"They give you a lot of tests. They give you a physical, and they work you out, such as shooting the ball and doing a couple of post-up moves," he said.

"I didn't shoot the ball as much this year at Clemson, and a lot of teams wanted me to shoot the ball for them," Grant said. "I shot extremely well."

In preparing for the NBA, Grant said he spoke recently with Larry Nance, a former Clemson player who now plays for Phoenix.

"He told me it's very physical," Grant said. "He told me it was going to be rough, but he said there was no doubt in his mind I could handle it."

Watson's Birdie Puts Him Up

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Tom Watson is back.

"Over the last three days I've done enough to prove to myself that I'm back," Watson said Saturday after his dramatic, last-hole birdie gave him the third-round lead at the 87th U.S. Open golf championship.

Watson, a non-winner since capturing the Western Open in the summer of 1984, is one round away from recapturing the glory that was his in the early 1980s, when he was the dominant player in the game.

But Watson, a 5-time British Open champion and a 6-time Player of the Year, may have cured the doubts that have accompanied him during the non-winning streak with his play over the first 54 holes.

"I have to play a round of golf tomorrow that is probably the most important of my career," said Watson. "I know that. You know that. It's anybody's guess what's going to happen."

But he has an advantage over his closest challengers. Of the 22 men closest to him, none have won a U.S. Open. Watson captured the title in 1982.

"I've been there before, and I'll be there again," Watson said. "You get nervous trying to win a U.S. Open.

"I was very nervous the first time I had a chance, in 1974. I'll be nervous again tomorrow. There are lots of mind games, lots of mental things that happen in the final round of a U.S. Open," he said.

It finished off a hard-won round of 71 and enabled him to complete three trips over the Olympic Club's changing, increasingly difficult Lake course in 208.

Clearwater, 27, whose first PGA victory came at the Colonial National Invitation earlier this year, tied the record on the Lake course at the Olympic Club with a 64.

"I thought the golf course played a little easier today. The greens were softer and held better," said Clearwater, whose bogey-free effort, recorded early in the day, tied the course record set by Rives McBee in the 1966 U.S. Open.

Clearwater, who climbed from 56th place and came from eight shots back, played about three hours in front of the other contenders and benefited from playing before the sun came out and the winds kicked up, making the course considerably tougher.

"The sun dried it out the greens and the fairways. They kept getting harder and harder. And the golf course just kept getting tougher and tougher," Australian Greg Norman said.

Norman struggled to a 74 that dropped him seven shots back with one round to go.

But he was not alone in his difficulties.

West Germany's Bernhard Langer, the 1985 Masters champion, was not as kind as Norman in his observations of the greens.

"They were worse than they've been," said Langer, who had a 73. "They spiked up. There were many spike marks and footprints. They were not the same speed. They were very difficult."

They were so difficult, late in the day, that none of the last 10 men on the course — the men who led through two rounds — could break par.

Lennie Clements, who has yet to win in seven seasons on the PGA Tour, matched par-70 and was fourth alone at even-par 210.

Seve Ballesteros of Spain and John Mahaffey, both of whom also played early in the day, shot 68 and 67, respectively, and were in a group at 211 — very much in the hunt.

Also at 211 were Ben Crenshaw, Langer, Jim Thorpe and Larry Mize, the current Masters champion. Crenshaw and Mize each had a 72.

Thorpe also shot 73, which included a bizarre episode on the 18th hole, where a spectator caught his errant drive, then threw it back to the fairway. After a drop, Thorpe saved par.

Tommy Nakajima, Japan's leading player, also had an adventure on the 18th — one that was much more costly that Thorpe's.

Nakajima, who at one time had the lead to himself, put a shot in a tree. Spectators, up in the limbs for a better vantage point, attempted to shake the ball out, but it didn't work.

Instead, it was a lost ball and led to

Jones Aids In Ceremony

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — The Olympic torch was lit atop Pikes Peak here Saturday by Olympic gold-medal swimmer Rowdy Gaines and brought down from the 14,110-foot peak by a relay of 32 runners to begin its journey to the U.S. Olympic Festival in North Carolina.

After the first quarter mile, Gaines and U.S. handball team member Leorna Sam Jones, a North Carolina native, handed the torch to volunteer runners who carried the symbol for the bulk of the 35-mile run. Gaines and Jones then rode the cog railway down the mountain and drove to the U.S. Olympic Training Center.

Gaines and Jones then carried the torch the last mile to present it to Hill Carrow, executive director of the North Carolina Amateur Sports Association, which is promoting the Festival. The event will be held in Raleigh, Durham, Chapel Hill and Greensboro July 17-26.

The torch will be flown back to North Carolina, where it will be carried by runners for 26 days through 400 towns in that state.

Final Tributes Paid To Howser

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Dick Howser was remembered Saturday as a man whose battle against brain cancer reflected the qualities he brought to baseball as a player, coach and, ultimately, the manager of the Kansas City Royals.

"Dick Howser was a winner," said the Rev. Jim Wells, pastor of Oakwood Baptist Church in Kansas City, Mo. "And contrary to what the world says today, good guys do finish in first place."

About 400 people, including team officials, family and friends, paid final respects to Howser during a 50-minute service at Fellowship Baptist Church in his adopted hometown of Tallahassee.

Burial followed in Tallahassee Memory Gardens during an afternoon thunderstorm that cleared as the service was ending.

Howser, who managed Kansas City to the World Series Championship in 1985, was eulogized by Royals President Joe Burke as a man whose faith in God never wavered during his 11-month fight to overcome the illness that struck him last July.

Howser died Wednesday at St. Luke's Hospital in Kansas City, and Burke said his friend was "ready for his final road trip."

"In life as in baseball, the thing that really counts is that we reach home safely," Burke began.

"Dick Howser has reached his final goal. He has met his God," Burke added. "His statistics of life have been approved and accepted. He has been recalled to join the super saints managed by God, the only perfect manager."

Wells recalled a conversation he had with Howser and his wife, Nancy, a short time after doctors performed surgery to remove a malignant brain tumor from the left side of his brain on July 22, 1986.

"He looked at his World Series ring, looked back up at me and said, 'Jim, when you're facing what I'm facing, world championships don't mean a lot,'" Wells remembered. "Dick knew this day would come."

Bobby Richardson, a former New York Yankee infielder, spoke on behalf of Howser's former teammates and players.

"I can think of no one who had more friends," said Richardson, adding that Howser was a man of integrity and character who sometimes called him to talk about his religious faith.

Kansas City General Manager John Schuerholz and Royals broadcaster Fred White also spoke briefly during the service.

Among those in attendance were Boston Red Sox President Haywood Sullivan; Bob Fishel, executive vice president of the American League, and retired broadcaster Red Barber.

Florida State football coach Bobby Bowden and FSU president Dr. Bernie Sliger were among the honorary pallbearers.

Howser, who never managed a team that finished worse than second, led the American League to a victory in the 1986 All-Star Game in his last game as a manager.

Players and coaches at the game in Houston noticed he was often forgetful, had trouble recognizing people and complained of headaches. The next week doctors performed a left frontal craniotomy to remove a malignant tumor.

The native of Miami never gave up hope of returning to manage the Royals in 1987. He reported to spring training in February determined to do the job, but resigned three days later.

When the Royals opened their home season on April 6, Howser made his last public appearance. He was hospitalized for the last time on June 3, and died there with his wife at his bedside.

Howser spent 28 years in professional baseball after earning All-American honors at Florida State in 1957 and 1958.

He was a coach with the New York Yankees for 10 years before becoming only the fourth manager in history to win 100 games in his first season.

Under Howser, the Yankees won 103 games in 1980 to win the American League Eastern Division title. New York lost to Kansas City in three straight playoff games, however, and Howser eventually resigned after refusing to follow owner George Steinbrenner's order to fire Yankees third-base coach Mike Ferraro, a long-time friend of Howser.

The Royals appointed Howser manager on August 31 of the strike-shortened, 1981 season. He led the Royals to the second-half AL West title that year and won division titles in 1984 and 1985.

Kansas City overcame a 3-1 deficit to beat Toronto in the 1985 AL Championship Series, and also fell behind 3-1 before coming back to defeat the St. Louis Cardinals in the 1985 World Series.

His career record as a manager was 507-425, a winning percentage of .544. As a player, he hit .248 in eight major-league seasons with the Kansas City A's, Cleveland Indians and New York Yankees.

He was named to the AL All-Star team in 1961 when he was The Sporting News' Rookie of the Year.

Moose.....4

Derrick Hopkins' sacrifice bunt brought in the winning run as the Exchange handed the Moose a 5-4 defeat in the Tar Heel Little League Saturday.

The Moose, who have already assured themselves of the league championship, had rallied for three runs in the fifth inning to tie the game at 4-4.

Exchange struck first, getting two runs in the second inning, then adding two more in the third for a 4-0 advantage.

But the Moose came back with one in the third, then picked up three more in the fifth to tie it up.

But Exchange got one in the sixth to win it. Daniel Daniels led off with a double and moved to third on a wild pitch. He scored from there on Hopkins' sacrifice to put Exchange up for good.

Hopkins and Daniels led the Exchange hitting with two each. The Moose were held to only two hits by D.J. Miles.

True Value.....9
Wellcome.....3

True Value Hardware rolled to a 9-3 victory over Wellcome in the Tar Heel Little League Saturday afternoon.

True Value pushed over a run in the first, but Wellcome matched that in its half of the frame. True Value added two more in the third while Wellcome came back with only one to trail 3-2.

In the fourth, True Value put it away with two more. Chris Ball walked as did Brandon Moye. Both moved up on a wild pitch and Henry Clark singled in Ball. Moye scored on a double by Monte Roundtree for a 5-2 lead.

True Value added three in the fifth and one in the sixth while Wellcome picked up one more in the fifth.

Clark, Ball and Craig Brannon each had two hits for True Value, while Jon Paul Devoe and Tucker Moore each picked up a pair for Wellcome.

Coca-Cola.....9
Kiwanis.....2

Coca-Cola moved within one game of clinching the North State Little League title Saturday with a 9-2 victory over the Kiwanis.

A single win in either of its two remaining games would clinch the title for Coke.

Coke scored all it needed in the first inning of the game, pushing over five runs. Ken Coward opened with a single and moved up on a passed ball. He took third on a wild pitch. Adam Charlton walked and stole second. A passed ball scored Coward and moved Charlton to third. Charlton crossed when Alex Darden reached on an error. James Ebron singled and both moved up on a passed ball. Robert Barnes reached on an error, scoring Darden. Another error scored Ebron and moved Barnes to third. He scored on Lee Jordan's groundout.

Coke added three in the second and one in the fourth. The Kiwanis got one each in the second and sixth, the latter on a solo homer by Jarrett McGalliard.

Barnes, Ron Clemons and Charlton each had two hits to lead Coke, while McGalliard had two to lead the Kiwanis.

Sportsworld.....13
Optimists.....4

Sportsworld kept its fading title hopes alive in the North State Little League with a 13-4 romp over the Optimists Saturday.

Sportsworld can only win the title by taking its final two games and having Coke lost its final two.

Sportsworld scored five times in the first to put the game on ice. Joel Fickling opened with a single and Richard Ray reached on a two-base error. A wild pitch scored Fickling and put Ray on third. Russell Oats singled in Ray and moved up on an error. Donte Daniels singled in Oats. Shea Harper singled and both runners advanced on a wild pitch. Kevin Smith's sacrifice fly scored Daniels and Harper came home on a wild pitch.

Sportsworld picked up one in the third, two in the fourth, four in the fifth and one in the sixth. The Optimists got two in the first and two more in the fourth.

Harper and Shep Skinner led Sportsworld with three hits each, while Oats added two. Mile Beland paced the Optimists with two.

Lions.....9
Eveready.....3

Deke Herrin collected two hits to help pace the Lions to a 9-3 win over Eveready in the North State Little League Saturday.

The Lions moved ahead with one in the second, only to see Eveready rally for three in the third and a 3-1 lead.

But the Lions scored five times in the fourth to move back out, 6-3. With one out, Carlton Holder walked and moved up on a passed ball. Granger Hill singled and stole second. A wild pitch scored Holder and put Hill on third. Dean Barrett walked and Kevin Hardy singled in Hill. David Christian reached on an error loading the bases. David Koonce was hit by a pitch, scoring Barrett. Herrin then singled in Hardy and a walk to Scott Briley brought in Christian.

The Lions then added one in the fifth and two in the sixth.

Atlanta Rallies To Nip Cincinnati Reds By 8-6

ATLANTA (AP) — When Atlanta's Dale Murphy hit his 22nd home run of the season, it gave him solo leadership in the National League. But his home run was not the one he wanted to talk about after the Braves 8-6 victoryover Cincinnati Saturday.

"Benny's home run was the big one," said Murphy, referring to a two-run shot Bruce Benedict hit in the second inning. "When you're down by four runs, that's quite a few. He got us back to within two and that definitely was a big lift."

Atlanta Manager Chuck Tanner agreed.

"He (Benedict) gets the star of the game from me," Tanner said. "He knocked in three runs and got us back in the game."

Benedict's home run was his first since 1984.

Seven home runs sailed out of Atlanta Stadium during the game, four on pitches by Atlanta starter Doyle Alexander, 4-1.

"That's what happens when you get the ball up and over the plate on a hot day in Atlanta," said Alexander.

The Braves trailed 4-2 when Dion James walked with one out in the third. James went to third on a single by Ken Oberkfell and scored on a double by Gerald Perry before Murphy connected against Bill Gullickson, 7-5, for his 22nd home run.

After Ken Griffey followed with his 10th homer, Gullickson hit Andres Thomas in the back with a pitch. Thomas charged toward the mound but was restrained by Reds catcher Bo Diaz just as Thomas and Gullickson met. Gullickson landed one punch before players from both teams ran onto the field. Thomas and Gullickson were ejected from the game.

Alexander allowed just six hits in seven-plus innings. Gene Garber earned his seventh save.

Kal Daniels and Tracy Jones opened the game with consecutive homers for Cincinnati. The homer gave Daniels 16, Jones 8. The Reds doubled the margin in the second when Diaz led off with a single and Kurt Stillwell followed with his third home run.

Atlanta cut the the deficit to two runs in its half of the second when Murphy led off with a walk and scored two outs later when Bruce Benedict hit his first homer since 1984.

The Braves added a run in the fifth when Rafael Ramirez doubled and scored on a singleby Benedict.

The Reds got a run in the seventh when Ron Oester hit his second home run of the season, and they scored their final run when Daniels walked and later scored on double-play grounder by Davis.

Pittsburgh.....8
Chicago.....2

CHICAGO (AP) — Rookie pitcher Mike Dunne was pumped up again, but this time he kept it under control for fear of embarrassing himself in front of friends.

"I left over 30 passes, and I guess there were another 75 or more friends up here from Peoria," Dunne said Saturday after pitching the Pittsburgh Pirates to an 8-2 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

It was Dunne's fourth major league start since coming up from Vancouver and his third straight complete game victory. He allowed seven hits and struck out four but more important he didn't walk a batter.

In his previous three games he had walked 17 in 24 innings while allowing only two earned runs.

"The first game was in New York and I was really pumped up," Dunne said of his only major league loss, in which he gave up six walks.

"In the St. Louis game, I really wanted to beat them badly because they had traded me," said Dunne, who is from Bartonville outside of Peoria, Ill. "I was pumped up here, too, because I didn't want to choke in front of my friends, but you learn from your previous outings."

The Pirates backed him with five home runs, two each by Barry Bonds and Jim Morrison and another by R. J. Reynolds, but it wasn't as easy as the score would indicate.

Bonds opened the game with a homer but the Pirates led only 2-1 after the first inning. Not until the sixth did Dunne have breathing room when Morrison hit a two-run homer.

Three more homers came in the ninth when Bonds hit his ninth, R. J. Reynolds his third with a man on, and Morrison his seventh.

It was Bonds' first two-homer game in the major leagues and the first time since June 3, 1979, against San Diego that the Pirates had hit five home runs in one game.

"We have a good feeling for hitting in this park," said Manager Jim Leyland. "The place is always packed and that makes it an exciting place to play."

Bonds called his two-homer game "a thrill, a great feeling. The last time I hit two in one game was was in 'A' ball and that also was the first time in pro ball. I had done it in college."

Dunne allowed a first-inning run then held Chicago scoreless until Leon Durham hit his 14th homer with one out in the ninth.

Bonds hit his first homer off Greg Maddux, 4-6, to open the game. Andy Van Slyke followed with a double and scored on a single by Johnny Ray for a 2-0 lead before Maddux had retired a batter.

Maddux didn't allow another run until the sixth when Reynolds walked and scored ahead of Morrison's first homer. Davis came on in the ninth for Chicago and allowed four runs on five hits, including the three homers.

Dunne, who had allowed only two earned runs in three previous starts covering 24 innings, yielded a run in the first when Martinez tripled and scored as Dawson grounded out. Martinez had three of Chicago's hits.

Houston.....3
Los Angeles.....2

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston's Mike Scott trailed Los Angeles 1-0 after the first pitch of Saturday's game. But Scott wasted little time showing the Dodgers why he won the National League's Cy Young Award last season.

Scott surrendered the first-pitch homer to Dave Anderson, but allowed only two hits the rest of the way, struck out nine and finished with a three-hitter as the Astros nipped the Dodgers 3-2 on Kevin Bass' two-run homer in the sixth.

Scott regained the major-league lead in strikeouts with 125, two more than Seattle's Mark Langston.

He also endured another afternoon of having opposing hitters checking for scuffed baseballs.

"Let them check them as much as they want to," Scott said. "I don't know why they do it and I don't care. The only theing it does is lengthen games.

"The hitters see how the ball reacts," Dodger Manager Tommy Lasorda said.

"They see pitchers every day and when they see the ball react funny, they know something's wrong.They ask to see the ball when it reacts in a different way."

"We think some of the balls are scuffed," said Anderson. "But as far as I'm concerned there're no use thinking about it because they keep throwing them back."

With the Astros trailing 2-1 in the sixth, Bass followed a walk to Glenn Davis with a smash over the right-field fence off loser Tim Leary, 1-3.

"The main thing was it came at the right time," Bass said. "Scotty was in a groove and it was just the perfect time. We needed a lift. As long as someone does it, it doesn't matter."

Billy Hatcher, mired in a slump, provided the Astros' other run with a game-tying homer in the third inning.

"I've struck out on enough breaking balls the last few days, it was nice to finally hit one," Hatcher said. "I don't really call it a slump. They were just throwing some good pitches and I was swinging at some bad ones."

Anderson said he went up to the plate in the first inning looking for a pitch to drive.

"Against this guy, you've got to be aggressive," Anderson said. "He likes to get ahead of you and if you get behind, he's really tough."

The Dodgers got their other run in the fourth when Steve Sax singled to right, stole second and scored on Mike Marshall's single to left in the fourth.

Blue Jays, Yankees Both Lose

TORONTO (AP) — Both managers agreed. It was one of the best pitched games of the season.

Jimmy Key tossed a three-hitter for Toronto but was a victim of two seventh-inning errors by third baseman Kelly Gruber as the Milwaukee Brewers, spurred by the hot hitting of Bill Schroeder, beat the Blue Jays 3-2 Saturday.

"It was the best pitching I've seen all year," said Brewers Manager Tom Trebelhorn. "It was amazing to beat him."

"I don't know if he can pitch any better," Toronto Manager Jimy Williams said of Key, who dropped to 8-5.

Bill Wegman, 6-6, scattered seven hits over 7 1-3 innings. Dan Plesac finished up for his American League-leading 16th save, getting Tony Fernandez to ground into a game-ending double play with the tying run on third.

On the strength of a two-run, third-inning homer by Lloyd Moseby, Key was cruising until Jim Paciorek grounded to third to start the seventh. Umpire John Hirschbeck ruled first baseman Willie Upshaw was pulled off the bag on the throw by Gruber. Upshaw and Williams argued without success.

Gruber then booted Glenn Braggs' potential double-play ball, and Schroeder, 10-for-16 during a four-game hit streak, scored Paciorek with a single. Jim Gantner followed with a sacrifice fly to deep left, scoring Braggs.

"All I can say is the Milwaukee Brewers didn't beat the Blue Jays, the umpires didn't beat the Blue Jays, Kelly Gruber beat the Blue Jays," Gruber said.

Key said he had nothing to say. "Write what you want," he said.

Tony Fernandez, playing in his club-record 393rd consecutive game, singled in the third and Moseby followed with his 10th homer of the season off the screen on the right field foul pole.

The Brewers scored in the first when Mike Felder led off with a fly ball that left fielder George Bell misjudged into a double. Felder moved to third on Robin Yount's grounder to second and scored on Paul Molitor's squeeze bunt.

In the Toronto ninth, Cecil Fielder worked Plesac for a two-out walk and pitcher Dave Stieb was inserted as a pinch runner. Manny Lee singled to left and Stieb, despite falling face-forward on his way to third and crawling the remaining 15 feet, was safe at third.

Plesac then got Fernandez on a double-play grounder to second.

"We got the breaks today, that was the key," said Plesac. "Toronto is such an explosive ballclub, the best power in the East.

"Some of those guys can crush the ball. It is dangerous messing around with the middle of the plate. I'm not going to give in to a power hitter (like Fielder) and see how far he can hit it."

The Brewers have taken two of three games from the Jays in the four-game series at Exhibition Stadium.

With a crowd of 38,465, Toronto passed the one million mark in attendance in its 33rd home date, the earliest in the franchise's history.

Boston.....9
New York.....4

BOSTON (AP) — Right-hander Al Nipper of the Boston Red Sox has been fooling around with a knuckleball for a couple of years.

The fluttering pitch came to his rescue Saturday as he settled down after the first inning and led the Red Sox to a 9-4 victory over the New York Yankees.

"After they got three runs in the first innings, I decided to just let the ball go and see what happens," said Nipper, 6-6, after his first complete game victory at Fenway Park since Sept. 18, 1985.

"I started throwing more knuckleballs after the first inning," he said. "I must have thrown 25 or 30, maybe more. It was way more than I usually throw. I just felt comfortable throwing it, even when I was behind in the count."

Boston second baseman Marty Barrett said Nipper had "a little trouble with his control in the first inning, but then he had a great knuckleball."

"The Yankees have a lot of guys who like to hit the fastball. They don't like slow stuff. So Nipper wasted his fastball a lot and got them with the knuckleball and other off-speed pitches," Barrett said.

After allowing three runs on two hits and three walks in the first, Nipper retired six batters in order before Dave Winfield doubled with one out in the third. He didn't surrender another hit until Mike Pagliarulo homered, his 10th, with one out in the ninth.

Mark Salas followed with a single, but, with the bullpen heating up, Nipper settled down to finish with a five-hitter that ended New York's five-game winning streak.

"After the first inning, I thought it was going to be a long afternoon," Boston Manager John McNamara admitted. "But Nipper turned himself around with a gutty performance."

Wade Boggs extended his hitting streak to 21 games and keyed a four-run fifth inning with a double for Boston.

Barrett, Don Baylor and Dwight Evans each had three hits in Boston's 16-hit attack. Boggs, Ellis Burks and Jim Rice had two hits apiece. Evans had three RBI, two on a home run.

New York jumped to a quick lead on a walk, a double by Willie Randolph, Mike Easler's RBI ground out, two more walks, a bloop single by Gary Ward and Pagliarulo's sacrifice fly.

A single by Rice, a throwing error by Randolph and an RBI single by Evans gave Boston an unearned run in the second.

The Red Sox picked up another run in the third as Barrett singled with two out, stole second and scored on a single by Boggs, who equalled the longest hitting streak in the major leagues this season. Detroit's Alan Trammell had a 21-game streak earlier.

Rice grounded a two-run single, took second on the throw and scored on Don Baylor's ground single, finishing John.

The Red Sox continued the assault against reliever Rich Bordi, scoring one run on an RBI double by Barrett in the sixth and two more on Evans' 10th homer into the screen in left in the seventh.

CLEVELAND (AP) — Brook Jacoby homered twice and doubled, and 42-year-old Steve Carlton scattered seven hits for his 328th major league victory as the Cleveland Indians defeated the Seattle Mariners 9-2 Saturday.

Carlton, 5-4, struck out seven and walked three in his second complete game this season. The left-hander moved past John Clarkson and into ninth place on the all-time victory list.

Carlton held Seattle scoreless on three hits until the Mariners scored in the eighth on doubles by Mickey Brantley and Dave Valle. The Mariners got another run in the ninth on a double by Bob Kearney and Howard Reynolds' single.

Mike Morgan, 5-8, who gave up three runs on nine hits in 4 2-3 innings, was the loser as Seattle's five-game winnig streak ended.

Brett Butler and Pat Tabler had three hits each as Cleveland had 16 total, most this season.

Butler gave Cleveland a 1-0 lead when he led off the first with a triple and scored on Julio Franco's single. The Indians added a run in the third. Rick Dempsey doubled and took third on Butler's bunt single. Dempsey was later out in a rundown, but Butler scored on a bunt single by Joe Carter.

Jacoby doubled home a run in the fourth for a 3-0 Cleveland lead, then started a four-run sixth with a homer, his 12th.

Singles by Dempsey, Butler and a walk to Franco set up Pat Tabler's two-run single, making Tabler 26-for-49 with the bases loaded in his career for a .531 average. Cory Snyder capped the rally with a sacrifice fly.

Jacoby hit his 13th homer and sixth in eight games in the seventh inning, and in the eighth, Cleveland got another run when Carter doubled and Mel Hall singled.

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Pete Incaviglia hit a two-run homer and Oddibe McDowell added a two-run double to highlight a five-run fourth inning and the Texas Rangers held on for a 7-6 victory over the Oakland Athletics Saturday.

Bobby Witt, 2-3, made his first start for Texas since May 20 and lasted five innings. Witt, who was on the disabled list with a shoulder injury, allowed three runs on two hits and six walks. Jeff Russell and Mitch Williams pitched the final four innings, with Williams earning his first save.

Trailing 2-0 in the fourth, the Rangers tied the score with two out on Incaviglia's 16th homer of the season, scoring Ruben Sierra who had singled.

Pete O'Brien followed with a single and Don Slaught walked setting up McDowell's double. Steve Buechele doubled to drive in McDowell, giving the Rangers a 5-2 lead.

Leadoff back-to-back homers by Scott Fletcher and Sierra in the fifth gave the Rangers a 7-2 lead and knocked starter Curt Young, 8-4, out of the game.

Luis Polonia scored the Athletics' first three runs by walking three times and stealing a base in the first, second and fifth innings. Reggie Jackson was hit by a pitch to drive in the first run. Mike Davis singled for the second-inning run, and Carney Lansford drove in Polonia in the fifth with a double.

Hillin Is Fastest On Second Day

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (AP) — Bobby Hillin Jr. of Midland, Tex., was the fastest second-day qualifier Saturday for the Budweiser 400 stock car race at Riverside International Raceway.

Hillin, 23, and in his fifth year of Winston Cup competition, took his Piedmont Oldsmobile around the 2.62-mile road course at an average speed of 114.322 mph.

He will start from the 22nd position in Sunday's 400-kilometer (248.9-miles) NASCAR event.

Sterling Marlin, 29, of Columbia, Tenn. will start 21st, but he elected to use his time from Friday's initial qualifying session. That qualifying speed of 114.322 mph was good enough to prevent any of the second-day qualifiers from displacing him on the grid.

Veteran Sports Car Club of America road racer Jim Fitzgerald qualified for his first Winston Cup event. Fitzgerald, who co-drives a Nissan 300 ZX Turbo with actor Paul Newman, qualified 37th in a Levi Garrett Chevrolet, averaging 112.062 mph.

Terry Labonte set a race qualifying record Friday to take the pole position for the event. Labonte's Budweiser Chevrolet averaged 117.541 mph, breaking Darrell Waltrip's record set in 1986 at 117.006 mph.

The Budweiser 400 gets underway at 12 noon PDT on Sunday.

HERE'S WHO MAKES OUR LIFETIME GUARANTEE ON CAR REPAIRS POSSIBLE.

Herbert Powell

Because we offer the free Lifetime Service Guarantee on car repairs, my job as service manager is a little tougher. I have to make sure car repairs are done right the first time. Because if they're not, it's our problem, not yours.

Here's how the Lifetime Service Guarantee works. If you pay for any covered repair and it has to be done again, we fix it free. That's free parts and free labor. For as long as you own your Ford, Lincoln, Mercury, Merkur or Ford light truck.

The Lifetime Service Guarantee covers thousands of parts and repairs. And it doesn't matter how old your vehicle is, how many miles are on it, or even where you bought it. Add all this up and you've got the best car repair guarantee in America.

Ask us to see a copy of the Lifetime Service Guarantee. Then give us a chance to turn our guarantee into a lifetime reality.

Sukova Dumps Navratilova

EASTBOURNE, England (AP) — Martina Navratilova's seven-month string of frustration continued through the last tuneup for Wimbledon Saturday when she was beaten by Helena Sukova 7-6, 6-3 in the final of the Eastbourne grasscourt championships.

Navratilova, in the first set, squandered a 5-0 to Sukova, her victim in the previous two finals. Navaratilova had won the last five Eastbourne titles.

The loss ended Navratilova's streak of 69 victories on English grass courts, where she had not lost since the 1981 Wimbledon semifinals.

It also meant that going into Wimbledon, which she also has won for the past five years, Navratilova has not won a title since the Virginia Slims championships last November.

"Right now I'm not exactly brimming with confidence. But I'll still go into Wimbledon as the favorite," she said.

"I'm sure I'll get that extra bit of inspiration from playing on the center court. But right now, I'm feeling down."

Navratilova always had placed great importance on the pre-Wimbledon tournament. On each of the six occasions she won it, she went on to win the Wimbledon title.

This time, she said, "At least this means I should get to the final."

She also struggled against Shriver, winning 6-4, 4-6, 6-3 after trailing 0-2, 0-40 in the third set.

"I could have lost that easily. It was a tough day and I had to expend a lot of energy playing Pam," she said.

"But I'm really disappointed that I seem to be falling apart in the middle of matches."

Navratilova reeled off five games at the start of the final before Sukova began her comeback. Sukova tie it at 5-5 and, after both players held, the 23-year-old Czechoslovak opened up a 3-0 lead in a tiebreaker.

Navratilova fought back to tie but never was able to edge ahead. She saved a first set point with a forehand pass down the line but then double faulted to hand her opponent the opening stanza.

Sukova broke serve in the second game of the second set and carved out a 3-0 lead.

At 2-4, Navratilova engineered a chance to break back. But Sukova saved it with an ace down the middle which Navratilova argued was a fault.

Her chances of a break gone, Navratilova had to save two match points in the next game on her own serve before she held for 3-5.

Sukova beat Chris Evert in the semifinal after being 5-2 down in the final set.

"To beat the No. 1 and No. 3 in the world is a dream come true," she said.

Ku, Player Hold Leads

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP) — South Korea's Ok-Hee Ku, finishing her round in semi-darkness after a 140-minute rain delay, shot a 3-under-par 69 Saturday for a three-stroke lead after two rounds of the LPGA's $300,000 Lady Keystone Open.

Ku, the first-round leader with a 5-under-par 67, was at 8-under-136 after 36 holes.

Cindy Hill and Marta Figueres-Dotti were next at 140, one stroke ahead of Shirley Furlong and Missie McGeorge.

Sally Little, who started the day one shot behind Ku and was tied for the lead after nine holes, finished with a 74 and a two-round total of 142 after a bogey at 16 and a triple-bogey 6 on the 165-yard 17th.

Ku, a non-winner in two years on the LPGA Tour, had a chance to widen her lead, but missed a 4-foot uphill putt on the final hole.

Ku had pars on the first eight holes, then birdied the ninth just before the rains came. She added birdies at 15 and 17.

Ward's 67 was the best round of the day and the best of her two-year career, while Nause shot a 68 and Gerring birdied 16 and 17 for a 2-under 70.

Seniors Tour

JERICHO, N.Y. (AP) — Gary Player, playing what he called his finest round of golf since winning the 1978 Masters, shot a 4-under-par 68 Saturday and retained the lead after three rounds of the $300,000 Northville Invitational seniors tournament.

Player, a 51-year-old native of South Africa, had a 54-hole total of 205 after three trips over the par 72, 6,475-yard Meadow Brook Club course.

Watson's...

a double-bogey that finished off a round of 74 and dropped Nakajima to 212, four strokes behind Watson.

"That's golf," said Nakajima.

Jack Nicklaus, one stroke off the lead going into the day's play, hurt his chances for a record fifth Open title with a 76 that left him at 214. He bogeyed three of the last six holes.

Also at 214 was Mark Wiebe, who held a share of the 36-hole lead and was alone in front after four holes of the third round.

But Wiebe bogeyed six of the next 12 and finished with a 77.

PGA champion Bob Tway ballooned to 79 and was at 220, while the defending Open champion, Ray Floyd, shot a 76 and was at 217.

"I three-putted three holes in a row and I've never done that before in my career," said Floyd, a 25-year PGA veteran.

Watson was tied for the lead starting the day, but quickly gave it away.

He three-putted two of the first three holes, then misscd the green and bogeyed the fourth.

But he got one back with a 25-foot birdie putt on the seventh, saved par with a 10-footer on the ninth and was only one stroke back at the turn.

After 10 holes, six men shared the top spot.

One by one, they fell back — Langer due to his putting problems, Nakajima in the trees, Wiebe in a cash of bogeys, Clements in club-pounding frustration and Crenshaw with consecutive bogeys at the 13th and 14th.

Watson got to 2-under and grabbed sole possession of the lead with a 20-foot putt on the 15th — but he three-putted for bogey on the next hole and dropped back into a tie with Simpson and Clearwater.

He broke it with the wide-breaking, downhill putt that found the cup and made him the man to beat over the last 18 holes Sunday.

Moye, Patrick Shut Out Snow Hill; Adams Slams Two Homers In Twinbill

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Tom Moye and Bronswell Patrick overpowered Snow Hill and picked up a couple of shutouts as Pitt County's American Legion baseball team swept a Friday night doubleheader, 14-0, and 6-0.

Moye, going in the first game, held Snow Hill to only two hits as he struck out six and walked two. Only three balls were hit out of the infield, and only one of them went for a hit.

Patrick, in the second game, scattered six hits, walked one and fanned eight as he added to the shutout parade. The two games marked the third straight shutout for the Pitt team — giving them 25 consecutive innings without allowing a run.

And while the moundsmen were doing their job, the defense was performing flawlessly to handle hit balls.

And — to say the least — the batters were doing their jobs also. Shane Adams put on a stellar performance in the first game, smashing two home runs and a triple, scoring four runs and driving in four. He added two more hits in the second game. Jason Galloway had three hits as did Moye in the first game, while Eric Jarman and Ty Little each added two. Jarman, Alex Smith and Robbie McDonald each added two along with Adams in the second game.

"I knew that we'd have to play well tonight, and I think we did," Coach Toby Holiday said after the sweep. "We just hit the ball well and Tom and Bronswell did a good job on the mound. I think just playing seven inning games helped too.

"We just got the hits with the people on base and executed well. We had good hitting, good pitching and good defense," Holiday added.

He also praised the work of Snow Hill pitcher George Green in the second game. Green was tagged for nine hits, but only three of the six runs against him were earned as he walked one and struck out four.

"I thought George did a good job for us," Snow Hill coach Jim Fulghum said. "But they wore it out on us in the first game, and I think we got a little down. That was the first time either of our pitchers had gone in a while.

"But we've still got a lot of games to play and I think we'll do better. There were a couple of times in the second game where, if we could have gotten a hit at the right time, we could have made a difference in the game. We just didn't think they'd wear it out like they did. And also both Patrick and Moye pitched very good games."

In the opener, things got off on the wrong foot for Snow Hill and never got better. T.J. Johnson opened the game with a single to center. Roger Smith sacrificed him to second, but he overran the bag and was caught in a rundown for the double play. Snow Hill had only four more baserunners after that, and none of them advanced past first.

Pitt County, meanwhile, was wearing out the ball. Adams opened the first with a solo homer on the second pitch. Hunter Clark followed with a double to left, then stole third. He scored on Jarman's ground out for a 2-0 lead.

Four more crossed in the second. Galloway led off with a double to right and Moye followed with a double to center. Galloway, however, had to hold up on the play and only got to third. Greg Jones reached on a fielder's choice when his sharply hit grounder back to third was played there in an abortive attempt to get Galloway off the bag. Little then grounded to short, scoring Galloway, but getting Jones. A pair of wild pitches scored Moye and moved Little to third. Adams walked and took second on the second of the wild throws. Both then scored on a single to right by Jarman.

Adams accounted for three more in the third, running the score to 9-0. Moye and Little both scored before Adams again jacked the ball out of the park in left.

Robbie McDonald beat out an infield grounder in the fourth, moved up on a hit by Galloway and scored when Moye reached on an error.

Little hit a homer in the sixth to account for the 14th and final run.

In the second game, Snow Hill made more of a game of it, threatening on several occasions. Their best chance went down the drain in the third when Barry Ginn led off with a double. He moved up on an out, then tried to score from second on Roger Smith's single to left. However, McDonald's relay home was in time for Smith to put the tag on Ginn.

Gary Ginn reached on a third-strike wild pitch to open the fourth, advancing to second with none out on a passed ball. But Patrick got a strikeout and a ground ball to put two out and Tony Eason flew out to end that threat.

Smith and Gary Ginn both singled to open the sixth, but a fielder's choice and two strikeouts again got Patrick and his teammates out of a jam.

Pitt got its first run in the third. Brian Joyner reached on a fielder's choice that left one away and moved up on a wild pitch. Adams reached on an infield hit and Joyner raced home on an error on the play.

Three more scored in the fourth. Jarman singled and Smith beat out a bunt. Galloway, attempting to sacrifice, reached on an error, loading the bases. Patrick's grounder back to the mound got Jarman at home, but McDonald followed with a single, scoring Smith and Galloway and moving Patrick to third. McDonald stole second and when the ball was thrown into center on the attempt to get him, Patrick trotted home.

Single runs scored in the fifth and sixth. Jarman tripled and scored on a single by Smith in the fifth. Joyner walked, moved up on a hit by Little and scored on a single by Adams.

The sweep moved Pitt to 5-2 on the year, tying the Post 39ers for first place with Rocky Mount. Snow Hill falls to 2-2.

Pitt was to play at Wilson Saturday night, then host Kinston in Greenville on Monday. Snow Hill plays host to Rocky Mount on Sunday evening.

Whoops!

Not In Time

Pitt County baserunner Hunter Clark (3) tags the plate as Snow Hill catcher Tony Eason waits for the ball during first inning action in the first game of a doubleheader Friday at Harrington Field. Clark scored on a ground out from third base as Pitt rolled to 14-0 and 6-0 wins in the American Legion games. (Reflector Photo by Cliff Hollis)

Pitchers' Night In The National

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

It was a night of pitching firsts in the National League — by four pitchers and an outfielder.

—Pittsburgh's Brian Fisher hurled his first major-league shutout as the Pirates beat the Chicago Cubs 4-0.

—New York's John Mitchell, backed by four home runs, finally got his first victory as the Mets defeated the Philadelphia Phillies 8-1.

—Montreal's Jeff Fischer, making his major-league debut, held St. Louis to one run and four hits in 5 1-3 innings, with the Expos winning 8-7 in 11.

—Orel Hershiser of Los Angeles struck out a career-high 14 batters but was the loser as Houston edged the Dodgers 3-2 in 11 innings.

—And Cincinnati outfielder Paul O'Neill took the mound for the last two innings of the Reds' 16-5 loss to Atlanta, allowing a three-run homer to Ozzie Virgil.

San Francisco's six-game losing streak and San Diego's six-game winning streak ended when the Giants nipped the Padres 7-6.

Pirates 4, Cubs 0

Fisher pitched a six-hitter, walked two and struck out six in snapping a personal three-game losing streak as Sid Bream hit a two-run homer.

Barry Bonds led off the game with a single, stole second and scored on Johnny Ray's single. In the third inning, Bobby Bonilla doubled and Bream hit his ninth home run and first in 93 at-bats since May 20.

Loser Dickie Noles went seven innings in his first start since Aug. 27, 1985, allowing all four runs.

"After Fisher was beaten by the Mets last Sunday, I took him aside and helped him work on a changeup for 15 minutes on three successive days," pitching coach Ray Miller said. "He mainly only had to throw a fastball in New York (with the Yankees) and an occasional slider as the setup man, but after losing three straight it became necessary to make him throw a change."

Fisher said he "was throwing hard in the first four innings, but it then became imperative that I start throwing the change, and the Cubs did not get another hit until two were out in the ninth and both hits came on fast balls."

Mets 8, Phillies 1

Mitchell pitched a five-hitter and Howard Johnson started the scoring with the first of a record-tying four New York home runs. Mitchell blanked the Phillies until Glenn Wilson's RBI single in the ninth.

Kevin McReynolds, Mookie Wilson and Rafael Santana hit solo home runs as the Mets sent Philadelphia to its fourth straight loss and the second in a row under Manager Lee Elia, who replaced the fired John Felske on Thursday.

All four homers came in the first four innings against Don Carman as the Mets, who hit five home runs against Montreal on Thursday night, tied a club record with nine homers in two consecutive games.

"I'm happy I finally got the win," Mitchell said. "The big lead helped me. I've had a few leads like this before and teams came back and tied us. I had a chance for the shutout, but didn't get it. That's okay. Now I can go out and have confidence."

Expos 8, Cardinals 7

Casey Candaele and Tim Raines hit run-scoring singles with two out in the 11th inning. Andres Galarraga started the inning with the game's only extra-base hit, a double off Bill Dawley. Two outs later, Dawley walked pinch-hitter Vance Law and Candaele singled to break a 6-6 tie. Law scored on Raines' single.

It was Montreal's third victory in as many games against St. Louis this season. Winning pitcher Bob McClure, 4-1, worked two scoreless innings and Lary Sorensen pitched the bottom of the 11th for his first save. He gave up an unearned run on a double error by shortstop Hubie Brooks and left fielder Raines.

Two RBI singles by Brooks and one by Candaele helped Montreal take a 6-1 lead, but the Cardinals scored five times in the bottom of the eighth, tying the score on pinch hitter Rod Booker's two-run single.

Astros 3, Dodgers 2

Kevin Bass' 11th-inning sacrifice fly enabled Houston to overcome Hershiser's 14 strikeouts. Bill Doran, who tied the score 2-2 with an inside-the-park homer in the sixth, opened the 11th with a single and went to third on a single by Craig Reynolds, the seventh hit off Hershiser.

Ken Howell relieved and struck out Glenn Davis but Bass' fly ball off Matt Young scored Doran. Jose Cruz homered for Houston's first run as the Astros climbed within 1½ games of first-place Cincinnati in the NL West.

Braves 16, Reds 5

Virgil drove in four runs and Gerald Perry, Ken Oberkfell and Andres Thomas had three RBI apiece. Dale Murphy's 15-game hitting streak ended.

Perry had a run-scoring triple to ignite a four-run first inning, an RBI single in the fourth and a run-scoring double in the sixth when the Braves scored six times to turn a 7-5 game into a rout.

Oberkfell doubled a run across in the fourth inning and hit a two-run triple in the sixth. Thomas had three singles, driving in one run in the first inning and two in the sixth. Glenn Hubbard also contributed an RBI single to the big sixth inning in which the Braves had four hits and four walks. Ken Griffey hit a solo homer in the third inning, his ninth.

The victory went to Zane Smith, who gave up five runs and nine hits in 5 1-3 innings, including two home runs by Nick Esasky and one by pinch hitter Barry Larkin.

O'Neill allowed two hits, walked four and struck out two in his two-inning stint, his first pitching appearance since he was in high school six years ago.

"I threw better than that, I'll tell you," O'Neill said. "It was fun, but I guess I hope it never happens again. I was a little rusty. They got my fastball at 88 (mph) in the first inning but only 68 in the second. I was tired."

Giants 7, Padres 6

Will Clark, who struck out in his three previous at-bats, doubled home two runs to cap a four-run eighth-inning rally. The Giants entered the eighth trailing 5-3 but Jeffrey Leonard hit a one-out single off reliever Lance McCullers and scored on Candy Maldonado's double. Chili Davis doubled to tie the game 5-5 and, after Bob Brenly walked, Craig Lefferts was greeted by Clark's double.

Scott Garrelts allowed a run in the bottom oif the ninth on Tony Gwynn's triple and a grounder by Carmelo Martinez. San Diego starter Dave Dravecky had a three-hit shutout through six innings. The Giants began their comeback with three runs in the seventh when Dravecky walked Maldonado and Davis broke an 0-for-25 slump with a single.

Johnson Is U.S. Champ

Johnson, despite a flawed dismount on his last event, piled up 114.70 points to take his first national championship.

"I'm going to get that high bar dismount, believe me," said Johnson, 25. "I missed it at the American Cup. I missed it at the meet against the Soviet Union, and now I missed it here. So in three big meets I've missed it. That's kind of disturbing. I know what I've got to do. It's just a matter of making the body do what I need to do."

The recent University of Nebraska graduate collected 57.5 points in the optionals for a point total of 114.70, edging Charles Lakes of New Hall, Calif., who had 112.65. Tim Daggett, the defending national champion, finished third with 112.45 points in his first competition since suffering a career-threatening neck injury last February.

Johnson, a 5-foot-3 native of Cincinnati, said he came into this competition knowing he could be in for big things.

"Personally, I've never been ranked No. 1 anywhere. This is a great accomplishment to know that you are the best in the country in what you do," he said. "It's an honor that I've never had the privilege to hold. Now I can say my gymnastics career is totally complete — except for one thing, an Olympic gold medal."

Johnson began gymnastics in 1972 and competed at the University of Nebraska, where he earned a degree in public health. He placed sixth overall in the 1987 McDonald's Challenge and has collected 22 total medals at the U.S. Olympic Festival, more than any other athlete in any other sport.

The top 18 finishers won spots on the U.S. National team to compete in the Pan American Games in August. This four-day competition for men and women, which concludes Sunday, is the first step in selecting the 1988 Olympic team.

"I trained harder for this event than I ever have," Johnson said. "I knew if I could just time my compulsories, get my compulsories down, that I had a good chance to win the all-around title."

Banyan trees usually sprout from seeds that animals have dropped into cracks in the branches of other trees, and their roots grow down from the host branches and into the ground, says National Geographic World.

Number Change Works For Jackson

By The Associated Press

Kansas City's Danny Jackson changed his uniform number, his locker and eventually his luck.

After wearing No. 25 for a number of years, Jackson got a new uniform with No. 15 on it, matching his January birthdate, and moved his gear to another locker to break out of a three-game losing streak.

"I seriously started thinking about the change after my 10th start. Maybe I was hoping people wouldn't know who was out there," the left-hander said Friday night after pitching a four-hit shutout in the Royals' 3-0 victory over California.

"So far, so good," Jackson said. "I hope I can keep it up. All the way around, this is a tremendous boost to my confidence."

In other games, New York beat Boston 10-5 in 13 innings; it was Seattle 7, Cleveland 4; Toronto 15, Milwaukee 6; Detroit 5, Baltimore 3; Minnesota 7, Chicago 6, and Texas 4, Oakland 2.

Jackson allowed four walks, three of them to Brian Downing, and struck out three in getting his first shutout and third complete game this season.

"The big difference was throwing the fastball where I wanted to," Jackson said. "The last start, the ball was flying all over the place. I decided to hold the ball deeper in my palm, and it worked. The fastball was much more consistent."

Jackson used two of his strikeouts to work out of a sixth-inning jam.

Downing and Dick Schofield hit consecutive singles before Jackson, 3-9, struck out Doug DeCinces and George Hendrick. Catcher Jamie Quirk helped out, throwing out Downing, who attempted to steal third as Hendrick struck out.

The Royals took a 1-0 lead in the first when Kevin Seitzer hit a one-out single, advanced to second on Don Sutton's wild pitch and scored on Tartabull's single to left.

Sutton, 3-8, gave up another run in the third. George Brett doubled with one out, Tartabull hit his second of three singles and White followed with his run-scoring single.

Sutton allowed nine hits and struck out a season-high seven batters in six innings, before being relieved by Gary Lucas.

Yankees 10, Red Sox 5

Mike Pagliarulo hit a lead-off homer, Dan Pasqua hit a two-run double and Gary Ward a two-run single in the 13th inning to pace New York to its fifth straight victory.

Charles Hudson, 7-2, scheduled to start Sunday's game, won his first game since May 15 by pitchers the final three innings.

Ward hit his ninth homer to give the Yankees a 3-2 lead in the eighth and, after a two-run single by Ed Romero and an RBI single by Dwight Evans in the bottom of the inning, Pasqua tied the game 5-5 in the eighth with a two-run homer.

Wade Boggs' went 3-for-5 to raise his league-leading average to .369 and extend his hitting streak to 20 games.

Mariners 7, Indians 4

Ray Quinones hit a homer and a two-run single and Mark Langston pitched a seven-hitter as Seattle extended its winning streak to a season-best five games and won for the first time in six tries at Cleveland Stadium.

Langston, 8-6, struck out seven to increase his major league lead to 123 and walked two for his seventh complete game.

Cleveland scored its runs on Joe Carter's three-run homer, his 16th, and a solo homer by Brook Jacoby, his 11th.

Rangers 4, Athletics 2

Hough, 7-2, walked five and did not strike out a batter, while Moose Haas, 2-2, took the loss.

Reggie Jackson had Oakland's first hit, a lead-off double in the seventh, before Mohorcic pitched hitless relief over the final 1 2-3 innings for his ninth save.

Blue Jays 15, Brewers 6

Lloyd Moseby's two-run triple and Tony Fernandez' two-run single highlighted a nine-run seventh inning that helped Toronto to rally from a 5-0 deficit to beat Milwaukee.

Toronto broke a 6-6 tie in the inning off reliever Mark Clear, 5-2. Six Blue Jays drew walks off three Milwaukee pitchers preceding Manny Lee's RBI single, Moseby's triple, Fernandez' single and an RBI double by Jesse Barfield.

Rob Deer and Bill Schroeder homered for Milwaukee while Barfield and Cecil Fielder homered for Toronto.

Jeff Musselman, 5-1, entered in the fifth inning and pitched 2 1-3 innings for the victory.

Tigers 5, Orioles 3

Jack Morris won his ninth straight game, pitching a six-hitter over eight innings, and Alan Trammell hit a home run and tie-breaking RBI groundout in the eighth inning to give Baltimore its fifth straight loss.

It was the Tigers' sixth victory in their last seven games and the Orioles' 19th loss in their last 21. Darrell Evans and Matt Nokes also homered for Detroit.

Morris, 10-2, allowed a solo homer by Fred Lynn. Willie Hernandez pitched the ninth for his third save.

Twins 7, White Sox 6

Tim Laudner's seventh homer came on the first pitch in the ninth inning off Jim Winn, handing Chicago its fifth straight loss and 16th in its last 19 games.

Jeff Reardon, 4-4, earned the victory after coming on with one out in the eighth. Kent Hrbek hit his 15th home run to help the Twins take a 3-0 lead in the first. Minnesota led 4-1 entering the sixth, but Chicago scored four times, capped by Jerry Hairston's pinch three-run homer off the right-field foul pole.

ECU Coaches Set For Cage Camps

New East Carolina Lady Pirate basketball coach Pat Pierson will hold her first summer camp session on July 12-16, and will then participate in a day camp along with new men's coach Mike Steele later in the month.

Pierson, highly successful in her former program at Northeastern University in Louisiana, will have a staff of highly successful high school and college coaches to provide instruction.

The camp is open to girls who will be in the sixth through 12th grades this coming school year. Supervision and instruction will be according to age groups.

Registration will be held on July 12 from 2 to 4 p.m., with daily sessions from 8:30 to 11:30 a.m., from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. and from 6 to 8:30 p.m. Monday through Wednesday. Camp will break up at 3 p.m. July 16.

Cost of the camp is $180 per person, or $160 if six or more from the same school register. For day campers, the charges are $140 or $120 with six or more from the same school.

IOC Hopes Time Solves Problem

LONDON (AP) — With 15 months to go, members of the International Olympic Committee are counting on time to help stage the Summer Games as scheduled in Seoul next year.

Violent clashes between anti-government demonstrators and police have been reported in Seoul for the last 10 days, with some of the action within five miles of the primary Olympic venues.

The protests have resulted in opposition leaders in South Korea and U.S. politicians calling for a possible move of the Games, and hints from Moscow that it might boycott the 1988 Olympics unless security conditions improve.

The IOC says it has no plans to change the site and notes that the Olympic Charter gives only one ground — a state of war — for removing the Games from a city to which they have been awarded.

And in interviews, IOC members worldwide said they were confident that the South Korean government and its people could resolve their differences in time for the opening of the Games on Sept. 17, 1988.

"We must wait for developments," Willi Daume, an IOC member from West Germany and head of the 1972 Games in Munich, said. "It is too early to consider moving the Games, although many negative things can be surely said about the government of South Korea."

Anita DeFrantz, an IOC member from the United States and a silver medalist in rowing in 1976, said the 15 months before the Games "is a long, long time in the life of world events. ...

"Now, the current situation is a very difficult one. It's an internal matter with the people of Korea, which they will have to resolve. But I'm very confident that, 15 months from now, the Games will go on there."

Jim Worrall, an IOC member from Canada who is working on a full rewrite of the century-old charter, said the demonstrations "could have a serious impact on the Games, up to the point of cancellation if worse came to worst."

But Worrall also said that time was on the IOC's side.

"The IOC and Olympic Games have been in difficult situations before. ... I personally am not one to panic," he said. "I think that time will tell just how serious this thing is going to be ... whether the government will fall, whether they will be able to make compromises or make adjustments."

Student protests against the regime of Chun Doo-hwan have occurred sporadically for some time. Last fall, during the 10th Asian Games in Seoul, police used tear gas to quell demonstrations on several college campuses.

Union To File Grievance

NEW YORK (AP) — The baseball players union will file a grievance on behalf of pitcher LaMarr Hoyt if the San Diego Padres do not restore him to the active roster.

Earlier this week, arbitrator George Nicolau ordered the Padres to rehire Hoyt, who was removed from the roster in January because of his substance abuse problems and was placed on waivers Wednesday for the purpose of giving him his unconditional release.

But Players Association Associate General Counsel Gene Orza said Friday he would ask Nicolau on Monday to clarify his ruling, which is to take effect June 5.

"We expect, as a result of the meeting, that he will be reinstated. If not, the union will file a grievance," said Orza.

The team, while sticking to its policy of no second change for players with drug problems, said it would pay the 32-year-old right-hander for the remaining three years of his contract, about $2.8 million.

In his decision, Nicolau ended the 1983 Cy Young Award winner's termination, reduced Commissioner Peter Ueberroth's one-year suspension to 60 days and set conditions for Hoyt's return.

"His continued participation in baseball shall be conditional on his participation in treatment until completed, his compliance with his court-ordered probation, and his participation an appropriate drug-testing program supervised by the commissioner's office for the duration of his playing career," Nicolau said in his decision.

The arbitrator also ordered Hoyt to file the details of his treatment program with commissioner's office and the club.

Louis Melendez, associate counsel to the Player Relations Committee, said representatives of the owners' labor relations arm would attend Monday's meeting to hear "what they have to say."

"But what Nicolau said is pretty clear to us. He said Hoyt will have to undergo rehabilitation and treatment," Melendez said.

Nicolau warned that failure to continue treatment and testing or a positive test result would subject the pitcher to the "full range of discipline in accordance with the commissioner's authority under the major league agreement."

"The Padres feel LaMarr is not ready to play professional baseball, phyically or mentally," Melendez said.

"He has not played in seven or eight months. He has to be in a treatment program that attacks his problems."

Melendez said if other clubs "want to sign him and afford him the opportunity to get himself into shape, they are free to deal with him."

The PRC lawyer said it would be 12-18 months before Hoyt was ready to resume his big league career.

Hoyt was convicted last November in a misdemeandor drug case involving the smuggling of painkillers and tranquilizers across the U.S.-Mexico border. He served about a month of a 45-day term in a minimum security prison in Florida.

He previously had spent 28 days in a drug and alcohol rehabilitation center after he being cited twice in February, 1986, for misdemeanor drug violations.

Public and private parking areas throughout the city have designated spaces for handicapped citizens. Special dashboard permits and license plates may be purchased at the state license agency, 718 Dickinson Ave. Call 758-1193 for information.

Governor Made Illicit Payments

DALLAS (AP) — High-ranking Southern Methodist University officials participated in an elaborate scheme to conceal the fact that Gov. Bill Clements approved illicit payments to student athletes while the school was under probation for similar activities, a bishops' committee reported.

The cover-up included misleading a university faculty member charged with investigating the SMU athletic program, lying to the NCAA and approving generous termination agreements with head football coach Bobby Collins and Athletic Director Bob Hitch to avoid lawsuits and publicity, the committee reported Friday.

Details were released in a 48-page report from the special committee of United Methodist Church bishops, who have spent the past three months investigating a $400,000-a-year slush fund provided by SMU boosters.

The play-for-pay scandal prompted the NCAA in February to suspend SMU's 1987 football season with the so-called "death penalty" in the harshest collegiate football penalty ever. A total of $61,000 was paid to 13 football players, the NCAA said.

The SMU Board of Governors was content to "win football games, trust the leadership and look the other way," the bishops' report said. The board of governors, which was abolished in March, previously served as an executive committee to the larger SMU Board of Trustees.

"Clements maintains that every member who knew of the payments prior to August 1985 must have known of the payments after," said Bishop Louis W. Schowengerdt. "That is his conclusion, and that is our conclusion."

Clements told reporters when he emerged from his office at the state capitol late Friday night that he feels the bishops' report will clear the air.

"I think it will put SMU into a new phase and on a new plateau to move forward, which is what they should do," the governor said.

Clements said he hadn't seen the report, but added, "I'm glad that they made the report, and I'm sure it's a good report."

Named as knowing of payments before August 1985 were Clements, Dallas banker Robert H. Stewart III, Dallas businessman Edwin L. Cox and former Dallas Mayor Robert Folsom, all former members of the board of governors; former SMU President L. Donald Shields, who resigned last November, and board of trustees member O. Paul Corley.

Besides confirming that several members of the SMU board had knowledge of the slush fund, the bishops' report detailed how Cox and Corley, working with William L. Hutchison, an oil company executive who succeeded Clements as chairman of the Board of Governors, set up and carried out the cover-up to protect Clements.

Clements was elected Texas governor last November and resigned from the Board of Governors in January.

"It is clear that, beginning in November 1986, Clements, Cox, Corley, joined by William Hutchison, engaged in a concerted effort to protect Clements and to prevent disclosure of his participation in the decision to make payments to ... athletes and ... to protect others who had knowledge of the payment scheme," the report said.

Clements and other board members became aware as early as 1983 that SMU was under investigation by the NCAA for recruiting violations. That investigation was completed, and sanctions imposed, in the summer of 1985.

A number of players, who had received promises of monthly payments from SMU boosters, remained on the team, and Clements and other board members decided to continue the illegal payments as part of a "wind-down" program, the report said.

The bishops said SMU officials concluded that key players would quit the football team and reveal additional violations if the payments were stopped.

Hitch testified he was doing only what he was told. He said he talked with Clements on the SMU campus in August 1985 and Clements asked him if the payments could be continued. Hitch replied affirmatively. Clements told him, "Then do it," the report said.

The panel also urged new university President A. Kenneth Pye to begin an immediate investigation into all other university-supported sports — specifically track, basketball and tennis.

The bishops said Friday they concentrated on the football program and uncovered no conclusive evidence about improprieties in other sports during their investigation. They said their recommendation

Martina Rallies To Gain Finals

EASTBOURNE, England (AP) — Defending champion Martina Navratilova rallied from an 0-2 deficit in the final set and beat her doubles partner, Pam Shriver, 6-4, 4-6, 6-3 today to reach the final of the $200,000 women's Eastbourne grass court tennis championships.

The result meant that, later Saturday, Navratilova met Helena Sukova of Czechoslovakia for the third consecutive year in the final.

But Shriver was furious with herself for squandering four chances for a 3-0 lead in the final set.

The defending champion wrapped up the first set in nine more minutes, but at the end of a second set dominated by serve, she dropped her serve in the last game.

Shriver won four consecutive games to lead 2-0 in the deciding set before her game fell apart.

She squandered another game point by volleying some six feet over the baseline and Navratilova hit back to break serve and win five consecutive games.

Shriver threatened to hit back when she saved a match point in the eighth game and then broke for 3-5.

But in the next game, Navratilova engineered her second match point with a wrong-footing forehand pass and then produced an identical shot to clinch her place in the final.

Sukova earned her meeting with Navratilova by upsetting Chris Evert 4-6, 6-4, 8-6 in the semifinals Friday.

Labonte Takes Riverside Pole

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (AP) — Terry Labonte broke a qualifying record that had stood for only a few minutes to lead qualifiers for Sunday's Budweiser 400 NASCAR Winston Cup stock car race.

Labonte's Chevrolet Monte Carlo averaged 117.541 mph Friday on his qualifying lap around the twisting Riverside International Raceway road course.

It was the second pole position in a row for Labonte, 30, of Corpus Christi, Texas. He also took the pole for last week's Winston Cup race at Pocono International Raceway.

Neither Bodine nor Labonte was able to crack Tim Richmond's track record speed of 118.247 mph, which he set during qualifying for the Winston Western 500 in November of 1986.

Bodine toured the 2.62-mile circuit at an average speed of 117.397 mph in his Chevrolet, good enough for second place in the starting field.

Waltrip's Chevrolet was clocked at 117.327 mph for his single-lap run, putting him in third place on the grid.

Charlie Saied, 40, of North Hollywood, Calif., escaped injury when he hit the wall in turn six. The wall was demolished and track safety crews took 30 minutes to repair the damage.

For 1987, NASCAR has set up single-lap qualifying at many circuits. Only the top 20 positions were locked in during Friday's initial qualifying session.

Final qualifying for the Winston Cup event was to be held Saturday, prior to the 200 NASCAR Southwest Tour race.

The Budweiser 400 is set for a noon PDT start on Sunday.

The top 20 qualifiers for Sunday's Budweiser 400 NASCAR Winston Cup stock car race with driver's name, car type and average speed around the 2.62-mile road course: (final qualifying to be held Saturday):

1. Terry Labonte, Chevrolet Monte Carlo, 117.541 mph
2. Geoff Bodine, Chevrolet Monte Carlo, 117.397.
3. Darrell Waltrip, Chevrolet Monte Carlo, 117.327.
4. Ricky Rudd, Ford Thunderbird, 117.041.
5. Tim Richmond, Chevrolet Monte Carlo, 116.919.
6. Morgan Shepherd, Buick LeSabre, 116.769.
7. Rusty Wallace, Pontiac Grand Prix, 116.647.
8. Dale Earnhatdt, Chevrolet Monte Carlo, 116.490.
9. Bill Elliott, Ford Thunderbird, 116.378.

20. Dave Marcis, Chevrolet Monte Carlo, 114.434.

When the oil crisis hit the world, Brazil was the only nation to switch successfully from gasoline to a renewable resource — sugar-cane based ethanol — for automobile fuel, says National Geographic.

Title Unlikely Before 1990

RALEIGH (AP) — A college football championship game probably won't be established before 1990, according to University of North Carolina Athletic Director John Swofford, a member of the NCAA subcommittee studying the one-game title match.

"I can't see it happening before that under any circumstances," he said.

Swofford said he believes there are more important issues facing collegiate athletics.

"The timing is simply not very good," Swofford said. "There are other issues that have a much higher priority in this given point in time than a national championship game in the sport of football.

"The bowl structure has traditionally been good for college football," he said Thursday. "On the other hand, I think the membership should have the opportunity to take a look at the proposal."

A five-page report completed by the subcommittee in April says a national football champion could be selected as early as 1990 using a one-game playoff between selected winners of post-season bowl games.

Swofford said the subcommittee's report will be presented to the NCAA extra events committee in August. The committee will decide whether it should be sent to the full NCAA council, which would then decide whether it should presented to the membership for a vote at the 1988 convention.

"There is a feeling that this is an issue that has been around for a while and the membership needs to act on it one way or the other," Swofford said. "Some people feel it needs to be put to rest or developed.

"The subcommittee has put together a report," Swofford said. "But the process still has a considerable ways to go before a game would become a reality.

"It (the report) just has some of the particulars, like (holding the championship game) two weeks after the bowl games on January 1 and the week preceding the Superbowl," Swofford said. "It would recommend the establishment of an NCAA football committee that would work like the NCAA basketball committee."

Allen Handed 15 Year Term

MAYS LANDING, N.J. (AP) — A judge has sentenced a remorseful Kevin Allen to 15 years in prison, citing the severity of the sexual assault inflicted on a Massachusetts woman by the former Philadelphia Eagles offensive lineman.

Allen, who could have received 20 years in connection with the Sept. 1, 1986, attack at a Margate beach, said Friday he hoped the victim and her companion, Joseph Milone of Philadelphia, "can forgive me for what happened."

"I can never forgive myself," said Allen, who pleaded guilty to first-degree sexual assault in February, a day after his former roommate, Scott Cartwright, pleaded guilty to beating Milone. Cartwright, a former school teacher, was sentenced to seven years in prison.

"When I went down to the beach that night, my only intention was to relieve some pressures I was feeling up until that point," Allen said. "If there's any way I could take back that night, I would."

During Allen's brief statement to Superior Court Judge Paul D. Porreca, the athlete's mother and sister wept. Both Allen and Cartwright, wearing suits, were handcuffed with chains around the waist and shackled at the feet.

Allen's attorney, Lloyd Levenson, told the judge, "There are bad people that do bad things and good people that do bad things. I respectfully submit that Kevin Allen is a good person who did a bad thing."

He said the assault occurred after Allen had been drinking heavily and was "completely and totally out of character for this man."

But Atlantic County First Assistant Prosecutor Albert J. Garofolo said, "What is so horrible about this crime is that it just doesn't end when the crime is over."

He said the victim is still receiving counseling for post-traumatic stress disorder and is afraid to leave her house.

Porreca said he had received many letters on Allen's behalf, but said the "extensiveness of the sexual attack" was an aggravating factor.

Allen was an offensive tackle at Indiana and the ninth player taken overall in the 1985 National Football League draft. He started the first four games of his rookie season before a demotion to special teams and was cut by the Eagles last year.

Brook Valley Country Club

The American Cancer Society's Pitt County chapter held its annual golf tournament at Brook Valley Country Club this week. There were three separate divisions of the tournament, with the winners in each division advancing to the state tournament to be held later this year.

The team of Buzz Sawyer, Buster Johnson, Lang Hardison and Richard James took first place in the Superball Division. Tommy Cook, Bill Johnson, Jim Hilliard and Eddie Maroles took second place. The team of Lester Brown, Skip Wright, Bill Mitchum and Chip Casey finished in third place.

The best ball division went to the team of Dorson White, Gene Briley, Rich Modlin and Edwin Clark. Second were Mack Worley, Gary Hess and Harry Pawlik. The third place team was Phil Bateman, Don Edwards, Waighty Scales and Charles Ellis.

Winning the women's division were Missy Decker, Pam Kachmer, Janice Vincent and Wanda Bonds.

Brook Valley will hold its junior golf championship on Monday and Tuesday. Those junior members wishing to play should report Monday at 8:30 p.m. for pairings and tee times.

The Greenville City Junior Championships will be held July 16-17 at both Greenville and Brook Valley. The first round of play will be at Greenville on the 16th and the second on the 17th at Brook Valley. The tournament is open to junior members of the two clubs. Those wishing to play should sign up in either pro shop by July 13.

Greenville Country Club

Greenville Country Club held its annual Member-Guest Tournament last weekend. First place in the gross event went to Mike Aldridge and John Tuttle, while low net went to David Nichols and Eddy Jones. Second low net went to Grady Strickland and Robert Berkley, with Ray Edwards and Cleve Branch in third.

Nichols and Jones won the first flight's low net, with Bill Mitchum and Jerry Peagram taking the second flight. Clifton Edwards and Shep Edwards took the third flight, while Rhett Honeycutt and John Moore won the fourth. The fifth flight went to Charles Vincent and John Horne.

On Senior's Day, a best ball of pair tournament was held. First place went to Clarence Johnson and Carl Woxman, while H.I.A. Sugg and G.H. Leslie took second.

Murky Waters Slow Fishing

By The Associated Press

A strong southwest wind stirred up waters along the North Carolina coast this week creating murky conditions unfavorable for most summer fishing, pier operators said.

Anglers were forced to surrender their hopes of landing Spanish mackerel and turn to bottom fish like spot and flounder.

"When the water is churned up and murky, you can't catch anything on a lure ... because they can't see it," said Steve Hissey of Pelican's Roost in Cape Hatteras.

On Wednesday, pier operators noticed an improving weather trend that indicated less wind heading into the weekend and the return of Spanish mackerel that kept anglers busy the past few weeks.

"The Spanish will hang around here to varying degrees all summer long," said Robin Orr of the Jolly Roger Pier at Topsail Island. "I know they're still out there and they will be back."

SWANSBORO

"All that wind held us up for a week," said John Dudley of Dudley's Marina. "When we can get our boats out there, they've been biting pretty good, but it's just been so rough."

Dudley reported some good offshore bottom fishing for sea bass and some very nice sized cobia.

"Things looked a little nicer (on Wednesday), winds have died down to about nine or 10 knots from the 25 or 30 it was blowing last week," Dudley said..

HATTERAS

Hissey reported a slow start to the Hatteras Marlin Tournament which runs through the end of the week.

"A flat southwest wind has made it very sloppy up to this point. We've pulled in a few white marlin but haven't seen any blues yet," Hissey said.

Anglers can expect a return of the Spanish mackerel if the winds stay calm, Hissey said.

"The forecast looks good for the next few days," Hissey said. "I expect to see some good king mackerel fishing off Hatteras pier in the next few weeks."

SOUTHPORT

"The spot have been about the only good fish lately," said Jim Ratcliffe of Long Beach Pier. "We've also seen some small flounder, but no real big catches all week."

Ratcliffe said that if the water clears, he expects to see a return to normal, but as of Wednesday, spots were providing the only action in the murky waters

TOPSAIL ISLAND

Orr of the Jolly Roger Pier reports some off and on fishing that was severely affected by the strong southwester.

"The strong winds out of the southwest just killed off the Spanish," Orr said. "It was more wind than you can deal with for good fishing. Spanish scatter when it blows like that," he said.

Orr did report a good run of spot that hit well for three days during the mid-afternoon and at night.

CAROLINA BEACH

"We're catching some mullet, spot and a lot of flounder," said Laura Phelps of the Carolina Beach Fishing Pier Northern Extension.

"The water has cleared up some and the winds have calmed a great deal," Ms. Phelps said.

Ms. Phelps also reported some of the state's better catches of blues and Spanish for the week.

WRIGHTSVILLE BEACH

George Fokakis of Crystal Pier said everything has been very quiet recently with only a few catches of bluefish and flounder around to stir up the crowds.

"The water is still a little bit muddy, but it looks like it's starting to clear up," Fokakis said.

Trumpeters Back In Wisconsin

Outdoor News

By BILL SCHULZ
Associated Press Writer

Hand-painted to make their foster father happy, the first of a new generation of trumpeter swans is paddling on Wisconsin lakes.

Three trumpeter swans were hatched this week and three others in late May after being slipped into the nest of another breed of swan, the mute.

The cob, or male, swan immediately suspected some sleight of hand when the first three cygnets hatched. They were gray while his previous cygnets were brownish.

"We painted some dye lightly on their backs because the cob was pecking at them when they first went into the water," biologist David Matheys said. "We mixed up the dye and went out there and slapped it on their backs with a paintbrush.

"It worked just slick. He didn't know the difference. It calmed him right down, and we haven't had a problem since.

"They're growing, swimming around. Mom and dad are taking real good care of them," Matheys said.

Trumpeter swans, pure white birds with an eight-foot wingspan, once migrated from summer breeding grounds in lower Canada and the northern tier of the United States to wintering grounds in the sunbelt. They weigh 30 to 40 pounds. Their only marking is a black bill.

They were hunted to extinction in most areas for their feathers and meat. Habitat destruction finished off most survivors. Several states, including Michigan and Minnesota, are trying to bring them back.

"The niche was available" in the Wisconsin ecosystem, said Matheys, who works for the Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources Bureau of Endangered Resources. He was interviewed by telephone from his office in the Kettle-Moraine State Forest.

Mute swans, an import from Europe, have established themselves and "on several lakes there are healthy populations," he said. "We figured if this non-native bird could survive and has a very similar biology to the trumpeter swan, why not the trumpeter? We prefer the native bird."

The mute swan is a little smaller, has a yellow bill and black knob on its forehead. It tends to hold its neck in an S-shape, while the trumpeter holds its neck straight. The mute also lacks the trombone-like call which gave the trumpeter its name.

Trumpeters are totally water oriented. They eat water plants and do not, like geese, raid farm fields for corn and grain.

So biologists developed a program to have 20 breeding pairs in Wisconsin by the year 2000. They obtained two batches of 10 eggs from a game farm. Only three of the first 10 made it. Three of the second 10 hatched early with more expected within a week.

"It was felt these birds were not that far removed from the wild," Matheys said. "The eggs were removed three weeks through a 35-day incubation period and the cygnets, all they know is the wild."

Biologists don't know whether the trumpter swans will take up the long migration routes of their ancestors or stay closer to home like the mute swans, who fly only a few hundred miles south to escape the Wisconsin winter.

If the birds migrate, biologists hope hunters farther south won't shoot down their efforts, as has happened with a couple of Minnesota birds.

The trumpeter swan is one-third to half as large as a Canada goose and twice the size of a snow goose, both legal game.

"There should be no mistaking the bird," Matheys said. At 50 yards, a long shot with a shotgun, "it would be like misidentifying a Piper Cub as a B-52.

"They are just huge," he said. "When they are 50 yards away, that's one very big bird flying in front of you."

grew only out of "comments and rumors" from witnesses who appeared before the committee.

The report disclosed for the first time that SMU paid more than $860,000 in severance pay to three members of the athletic department — $556,272 for Collins, $246,442 for Hitch, and $60,299 for former Hitch assistant Henry Lee Parker.

"Hitch was willing to go to the NCAA and confess to the payment program — but only if SMU agreed to pay out all three contracts," the bishops said.

On one occasion, two athletes broke into Parker's desk and stole the monthly payoff money, the report said. Athletic department officials quickly learned who took the money, but the athletes refused to give it back, knowing they were beyond punishment because the slush fund was secret, the bishops said.

Boating Fatalities Drop

Despite a dramatic increase in the number of boats on North Carolina's waters, boating fatalities have dropped to the lowest number since the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission began keeping records in 1960.

From 1981 through 1985, the number of boating fatalities in the state varied from 38 in 1981, down to 31 in 1983, then up to 39 in 1985. But in 1986, the number dropped to 23.

The 40 percent decline in the number of fatalities may be attributed to several factors — increased awareness of safe boating procedures through volunteer and state boating education programs, the manufacture of safer boats and public compliance with boating safety laws and regulations.

"We can't exactly pinpoint the reason for the decline in fatalities, but this decline is part of a basic trend we've been seeing since the 1970s," said Ed Jenkins of the commission's Enforcement Division.

As federal boating safety grants became available to states, the commission created a program to educate people in the safe operation of a boat, as well as "water ethics." Water ethics is behavior by boaters and others using the public waters.

In the early stages of North Carolina's boating education program, the news media helped get the world to the public. As additional grant money was available, the commission produced and distributed booklets, posters, films and other publications on the hazards of careless boating. The final step was to go to the schools.

Since 1974, students have helped spread the boating safety message. In 1986, for example, 77,844 seventh graders took the commission's safety course through their health and physical education courses. This group of better educated boat operators is on our waters in record numbers and the results in fewer boating fatalities are paying off.

In a survey of 15 states in the south and central regions of the country, only Missouri had a higher number (100,000) of students who took a boating course than had North Carolina. Next year, the commission expects to train another 75,000 students, and reach the one millionth student in 1988.

Commission boating safety lieutenants provide school teachers with information and deliver enough of the 65-page manuals to give each student.

"The long-term effect is that the kids take these course books home and show it to their parents and other family members, and it reached a lot more people," Jenkins said.

The increasing number of students taking the course may indicate that the number of boats on North Carolina's waters may continue to increase. When the commission began keeping records in 1960, 37,542 boats were registered. At the end of May, 1987, 230,467 boats were registered with the commission.

Another factor in declining fatalities may be stiffer safety standards placed on boat manufacturers by the Coast Guard. For example, a new requirement is a foam flotation feature that keeps a boat in an upright position even after it fills with water. Older boats usually capsize under these conditions.

Visible law enforcement also curbs the number of accidents and fatalities.

"Our efforts usually have a calming effect on what could be wild boat operators," Jenkins said. "People aren't as likely to be careless with an officer on the water."

Then, there's boating while impaired.

A law passed in the 1985 session of the N.C. General Assembly makes it illegal to operate a boat while under the influence of an impairing substance. In recent months, enforcement officers have placed more emphasis on locating drunk boaters. North Carolina was one of the first states to do studies of alcohol and boat operations. Statistics indicate that alcohol may be a contributing factor in up to one-third of all fatal boating accidents.

Boating accidents that injure people occur most often when people are careless. But officers most often issue citations because boaters don't have the required safety equipment on board.

"We write more tickets for not having things like life-saving devices and fire extinguishers on board than anything else," said Operations Lt. Tyson Laney.

People are often injured when boats capsize or when people fall overboard.

"People fall overboard when a boat has been loaded improperly or when people are walking around in a boat," Jenkins said. "Boats may capsize from overloading or if a wave washes over the stern when the boat is anchored improperly.

"Most damage to boats comes from fire and explosions. Boats aren't usually destroyed in collisions. Almost every boat fire occurs after fueling. Gas fumes settle in the bottom of the boat and can't escape. Then, when someone lights a cigarette or sparks come from the battery, you've got a fire.

"Boaters should fill portable tanks away from the boat for outboards," Jenkins said. "Inboards should have a blower that flushes out fumes that settle inside."

For information on the commission's free boaters course, call 1-800-336-BOAT. Boat owners will get a 15 to 20 percent reduction in boat insurance for completing a course.

New Duke Power Survey Irks Lake Property Owners

Now they have found that a .17-acre strip of land that is about 10 feet wide at its widest point stands between their property line and the lake.

The Howards say when they bought the land in 1964 from Duke Power Co., they were told that their land extended to the lake. Their deed said the same thing.

Now Duke Power has told the Howards that they own lakeview property. The company offered about a month ago to sell that strip of land to the Howards for $4,150, Mrs. Howard said. She said the couple has been given 90 days to decide if they want to buy.

After that, the price could change, a spokesman for the company says.

The Howards have balked, though Mrs. Howard said that she and her husband "don't see any choice but to buy it."

"They told us they could sell the land or put up a fence," Mrs. Howard said of Duke Power. "That's not much choice."

Offers similar to the Howards' and the surveys on which Duke Power's claims of ownership are based have eroded an alliance between the company and Lake Norman residents, the Charlotte Observer reported Saturday.

"First they tell me my property isn't mine. Then they tell me that if I don't buy it, they'll put up a chain-link fence. So I just went ahead and paid them. It was just easier," Raymer said.

Joe Maher, a spokesman for Duke Power, acknowledged that at least one homeowner was told by an employee of Duke Power that a chainlink fence could be built between their home and the lake, but he said the statement was made "in jest."

Maher said the land would not be sold on the open market.

"It is something for which we apologize," Maher said. "There is no intimidation by Duke Power people. This is not a case of Duke Power telling people, 'You have got to hold title to this land.' And no one is being denied access to the lake."

The company issued a written "clarification and response" May 26 because of the remark. The statement told homeowners that there is no "requirement to purchase the land, and Duke Power will not restrict a property owner's access to Lake Norman because the owner chooses not to buy the land."

"Generally speaking, however, it is in the property owner's interest to have title to the land down to the project boundary."

Lake Norman's full-pond level is 760 feet above sea level. This boundary, called the 760-contour line, was determined before the land was cleared where the lake would be dug, said Maher and surveyors who participated in the project. Deeds show that Duke Power retained 10-foot easements on properties, allowing Duke to flood the land to the 770-contour line.

The second set of surveys, Maher said, has been done over the past 10 years to correct errors in the first survey, which failed to mark the absolute 760-contour line.

The surveys are being done at the request of lending institutions, real estate companies and homeowners who want a more accurate description of their land, Maher said.

Only a few dozen surveys have been done so far, and there are no plans to survey the entire 520-mile shoreline, Maher said.

"When we surveyed that property back in the '50s, it was simply impractical to survey the 760-line precisely," Maher said. "We did it to suit our needs back then."

But surveyors, including one surveyor who participated in the initial surveys, said the 760-contour could have been determined precisely without difficulty at that time.

Robert Kestler Jr., the surveyor, said that Duke Power told him and other surveyors to err on the high side, giving Duke Power a slight cushion of land.

"We knew all along that the 760-contour is off," Kestler said. "The surveyors then didn't survey the absolute line. They approximated and then added a few feet. Now, we wouldn't use Duke's 760-contour because we know it's probably wrong."

House Enacts Bill Setting Waste Limits

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Attempts to limit chemical discharges from hazardous waste treatment plants shifted back to the federal level with the enactment of legislation in the General Assembly.

Opponents of the law to require that every gallon of discharge be diluted by 1,000 gallons of water said the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency may have the final word.

"If EPA meant what they said, they will void that provision," said former Rep. Al Adams, who lobbied for GSX Corp. against the bill enacted 81-19 by the House on Friday. "There will be no protection for drinking water."

Adams said lawmakers overreacted to the preliminary approval of a GSX plant to be placed in Scotland County.

"We think they were unjustifiably alarmed at things we think were not going to happen," he said.

But Sen. Richard Conder, D-Richmond, sponsor of the bill, said it was not intended to derail GSX.

Rep. Don Dawkins, D-Richmond, agreed, saying,"It fits the water in the river to the contaminant that comes out."

Adams, however, said the new law would raise questions about North Carolina's commitment to handle its own hazardous waste. He speculated that the company might not go ahead with a Scotland County plant.

"They came here because North Carolina wanted a plant," he said. "I'm not sure that North Carolina wants them to treat the waste any more."

The House vote came after members voted 60-37 against an amendment that would have phased out the mandatory dilution after one year of a plant's operation. The amendment also would have required that state health standards be established for all hazardous chemicals.

Rep. Martin Nesbitt, D-Buncombe, said a similar amendment was defeated Thursday because of unfounded fears.

"The textile industry was scared of the drinking water standards and proponents of the bill were scared of anything going into the river," he said.

Nesbitt said the standards would not automatically apply to any plant unless it discharges into a water treatment system.

"If we're to the point that we can't set standards for what we drink in this state and can't know what we're drinking, I can't help you," he said.

Dawkins argued against the amendment, saying, "We're trying to put two bills into one bill and we don't need to do that."

"It will go over to the Senate, in my opinion, and it will be peaceably put to death over there," added Rep. Sidney Locks, D-Robeson.

Rep. Joe Hackney, D-Orange, said the governor and the secretary of the Department of Human Resources favored the amendment.

But Rep. Dan DeVane, D-Hoke, replied, "The governor and the secretary of Human Resources and all those people are in favor of GSX."

Supporters of dilution have argued that hazardous chemicals often have no known levels at which they are safe. But opponents said dilution is an arbitrary and unscientific way to deal with the problem and would not be upheld by the EPA, thus jeopardizing North Carolina's ability to regulate all hazardous wastes.

After the House action, DeVane, chairman of the House Water and Air Resources Committee, said he was relieved to no longer face the strong lobbying the bill sparked.

"It's been a heavy bill for us," he said.

Disciplined

RALEIGH (AP) — A former stockbroker at the Raleigh office of E.F. Hutton & Co. has been disciplined by the New York Stock Exchange after he cashed checks on a company account "due to his gambling habits."

An exchange hearing board said in a June 15 listing of recent disciplinary actions that James Garland Weaver wrote 10 checks totaling $72,550 on Hutton's cash management account, even though he "knew that he did not have sufficient funds ... to cover those checks."

Although he did not admit or deny guilt in the matter, Weaver, 36, was censured by the exchange and suspended from securities activities for 18 months.

In 1654, Rhode Island forbade the sale of liquor to the Indian population.

Laws Have Held For Two Decades

Congress To Open Hearings On Tax-Exempt Enterprises

By ANNE SWARDSON
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — On the face of it, the two enterprises seem like twins. Both are computerized services that forecast the effects of federal budget actions on state finances. Both are based in Washington, and both have been selling their information to states since the early 1980s. They are competitors for the same business.

But one has a bottom line and the other doesn't. Fiscal Planning Services is a private, tax-paying business; Federal Funds Information for States (FFIS) is a non-profit entity exempted by law from taxation.

As distinctions between the business activities of tax-exempt institutions and taxpaying commercial businesses become increasingly fuzzy, a chorus of unfair competition complaints has come from business. Last August, the report of the White House Conference on Small Business listed competition from tax-exempts as the third-biggest problem facing small business.

In recent years, the competition between the taxable and the tax-exempt has cropped up among a wide range of interests, including universities, hospitals, athletic clubs, veterinarians, computer services, nurseries, research labs, laundries and travel agents.

This week the House Ways and Means Committee oversight subcommittee is scheduled to jump into the middle of this increasingly emotional debate with five days of hearings.

"I would like to know whether, if they (FFIS) did this by themselves and set up their company and rented the furniture and paid the taxes and paid the staff, they could do it without the subsidization they currently receive," fumes Stuart I. Rabinowitz, president of Fiscal Planning Services, the private company.

"As far as our dealings with the states are concerned, we are a state organization providing a service to the states," said Victor Miller, director of FFIS, which is affiliated with the National Governors' Association and the National Conference of State Legislatures.

The laws governing tax-exempt organizations and their business activities have been unchanged for nearly 20 years, and many on both sides agree they are confusing and inconsistent. Generally, such entities as charities, hospitals and universities are subject to tax on income from "unrelated" business activities, but determining what is related and what is not has been a subjective process.

The Internal Revenue Service ruled in one case, for example, that veterinary services offered by a tax-exempt humane society were taxable because they had no direct relationship to preventing cruelty to animals. Then it ruled that a similar operation elsewhere was not taxable, because the second humane society relied less on the veterinary services and did not promote them.

As the confusion grew over the years, so did the non-profit sector. About 870,000 non-profits are now registered with the IRS, more than double the number in 1963. And, according to a survey by the General Accounting Office, income-producing activities have grown as a share of revenue for non-profit organizations, from 57 percent in 1946 to 75 percent in 1978.

Non-profit hospitals, for example, have begun contracting out laundry services, purchasing ad agencies and operating real-estate developments. College bookstores sell blue jeans and computers, museums rent out their facilities for parties, alumni associations offer tour packages and trade associations sell computer software to their members.

A lobbying group was formed in 1983 to give voice to the complaints of such disparate industry groups as research laboratories and hearing-aid manufacturers. And individual businesses have challenged the tax-exempt status of their perceived competitors in court.

The business-advocacy groups are concerned about competing against entities that pay no tax, but also say they have an unfair disadvantage against non-profits that are taxed on their unrelated income.

A non-profit's expenses often can be deducted from income, reducing tax. According to the IRS, more than half the 29 non-profits reporting income of more than $2 million in unrelated business paid no tax. And there are other breaks, business groups say: lower postal costs, volunteer labor, property-tax exemptions and a good-guy image.

"Taxes are only the beginning of our concerns," said Joseph O'Neil, chairman of the Business Coalition for Fair Competition, the lobbying group. "It is, you might say, the host of advantages that are linked to tax exemption. There is an aura of public service, quality and concern that attaches to a non-profit simply because it is associated in the public mind with a church, a charity or a university."

Non-profit groups generally respond that they are happy to pay taxes on their "unrelated" income if so asked by the IRS; meanwhile, their new enterprises generate revenue that makes it possible to pursue charitable activities in an age of budget cuts and austerity.

By taking their pets to a humane-society clinic, customers are "helping pay for the humane work on animals that are not being paid for," said Patricia Forkan, senior vice president of the Humane Society. "All the money goes into charitable work."

Robert A. Boisture, associate general counsel of the YMCA of the USA, says the fundamental question is "the role of non-profit, voluntary organizations in society. ... We were doing this long before anybody thought about making a profit on it. When the fitness fad fades away and the health clubs fold, the YMCA will still be there."

Despite the hearings, Congress is considered unlikely to move to significantly restructure the laws governing tax-exempt activities.

But the hearings are likely to draw attention to the evolution in the non-profit sector since the tax laws governing it were last examined nearly 20 years ago.

And they should provide good theater: The panels are structured so that each witness from a taxable business will appear side-by-side with his counterpart in the non-profit sector.

Canada Rushes To Implement 'Big Bang' Stock Market Rules

By JEFF BRADLEY
Associated Press Writer

TORONTO (AP) — The Japanese are paying record prices for membership in the Toronto Stock Exchange and Canadian financiers are forecasting a rush of mergers and acquisitions as Canada heads for "Big Bang" deregulation June 30.

Borrowing the name given to changes in the London market in October, the Canadian event heralds the deregulation of the traditional four pillars of finance — banking, trust management, stockbroking and insurance.

Although viewed from Wall Street as a "Little Bang" because of Canada's limited capital base, the reforms are designed to make Canada a global player in a capital market dominated by New York, London and Tokyo.

These are some of the changes expected under new regulations laid out by Ontario Province and the Canadian federal government in Ottawa:

—Banks and corporations will be allowed to set up as investment dealers, reversing rules in force since banks were accused of causing the 1929 stock market crash by investing in over-priced stock. Toronto Dominion Bank, the Bank of Nova Scotia and Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce are the first to set up securities subsidiaries.

—Restrictions that have kept foreign companies out of Canada's financial markets since 1971 will be lifted. Subject to federal approval, foreign companies will be permitted to acquire 50 percent of Canadian securities firms as of June 30 and 100 percent a year later. The previous limit was 10 percent. They may also set up their own wholly owned subsidiaries.

—A federal Office of the Superintendent of Financial Institutions will regulate federally chartered banks and trust and insurance companies, while individual provinces will regulate stock and securities trading. For the first time, universal registration of all participants in capital markets will be required.

"It is what I would call a grand experiment in free trade," said Anthony Fell, president of Dominion Securities Inc., Canada's largest investment dealer.

Banks will be able to sell stocks over the counter, and trust companies expect to take loan customers away from the banks. There will be new investment packages and virtual one-stop financial shopping, but in a notable exception to the freer climate, banks will not be selling insurance — the insurance lobby saw to that.

The regulations are expected to address conflict of interest hazards within a financial conglomerate. For instance, a bank might find itself lending funds to a company and then advising clients whether to invest in it.

"The potential for abuse of the system is enormous," said Fell.

The biggest beneficiary of the Big Bang could be the city of Toronto and its Bay St. financial district, with the fourth largest capital market in the world, 70 percent of Canada's securities trading and 150,000 financial jobs.

"We asked ourselves, did we want people sitting in New York making decisions about where to invest in Canada?" said Ken Rosenberg of Ontario's Ministry of Financial Institutions. "No, we want them in Toronto."

With companies such as Japan's Nomura Securities and the U.S.-based Goldman, Sachs & Co., First Boston and Salomon Brothers positioning themselves in the new market, Bay St. executives have signed a dozen merger and takeover deals and more such alliances are expected.

Seasoned bond traders are asking salaries of 200,000 Canadian dollars ($150,000) to transfer their loyalties.

"One firm has lost 10 salesman signed up by a new company which gave them a guaranteed return paid in foreign currency," said Andrew Kniewasser, president of the Investment Dealers Association of Canada which has 60 members but has received 50 new applications because of the Big Bang.

In April, Daiwa Securities became the first Japanese firm to buy a seat on the Toronto Stock Exchange, paying a record 361,000 Canadian dollars ($270,750), and the other big three Japanese investment houses — Nomura, Nikko and Yamaichi — planned to follow suit.

"There's going to be a great number of new people entering the business in Canada, competing very aggressively for a market share," Kniewasser said. "You're going to have people with very, very deep pockets."

Coupled with Finance Minister Michael Wilson's tax reform package keeping pace with lower U.S. base rates, Canada is introducing a more relaxed financial regime in a bid to attract capital and prevent a brain drain.

With investors' money bouncing by computer from continent to continent, Canadian banks sought deregulation after leading customers started raising their own funds internationally through negotiable securities such as treasury bills.

The Toronto securities market lacked the capital to compete with New York or London unless Canada's richest institutions — the banks — entered the fray.

The government's conclusion was that it was best to have major foreign and Canadian companies contributing to the capital market inside the country, even if some smaller dealers will go down in the process.

"The game is all about raising money for governments and corporations cheaply and to do that, you have to be part of a global connection," said bond trader Al Smith of Discount Corporation of New York (Canada) Ltd.

The one-year delay before foreigners can fully control dealerships is designed to give Canadian companies a head start, commented David Getz, an assistant to the federal minister of state for finance in Ottawa.

"It gives Canadian investment firms a chance to align themselves with strong players and get the extra backing they need to compete," he said.

The Big Bang date of June 30 was set by Ontario, Canada's richest province.

The other nine provinces, especially Quebec, British Columbia and Alberta, dispute the federal government's right to regulate securities, traditionally a provincial jurisdiction. It is uncertain what effect their position will have. Ontario's changes require no legislation, while federal powers are in a bill before Parliament in Ottawa.

Merrill Lynch Canada Inc., a U.S. subsidiary, is well placed after concentrating on corporate and government finance, institutional equities and mergers and acquisitions since 1984, said spokesman Jim Coutts.

But he predicted there would be losers when the full impact of the Big Bang is felt. "The losers are the companies that don't have global vision but still want to play on that field."

Banks entering the investment field are expected to show caution by sticking to blue chip stocks, treasury bills and mutual funds.

"We don't want to get into the business of advising people to buy Moose Pasture Mines," said Charles Baillie of Toronto Dominion.

Some analysts expressed fears about Canadian sovereignty and lack of reciprocity in the United States and Japan.

Business Notes

Petition Filed

Yale Materials Handling Corporation, based in Flemington, N.J., with a plant in Greenville, announced that it has filed a "Petition for Relief From Import Injury With Respect To Certain Industrial Forklift Trucks," generally referred to as a "201" Petition.

The objective of the "201" is to seek relief from import injury on behalf of an industry manufacturing in the United States. According to Yale officials imports accounted for 70 percent of the sales of the trucks within the United States in the first quarter of 1987. They say that although there is an awareness in the last few years of Japanese-sourced trucks shipped into the United States, insufficient attention has been paid to the increasing units being imported from the United Kingdom, West Germany, and South Korea.

Yale has requested an increase in tariffs for a five-year period, during which time they can make their company and product competitive at the end of the relief, the company said. The current tariff duty on lift trucks into the U.S. is zero.

COECO Manager

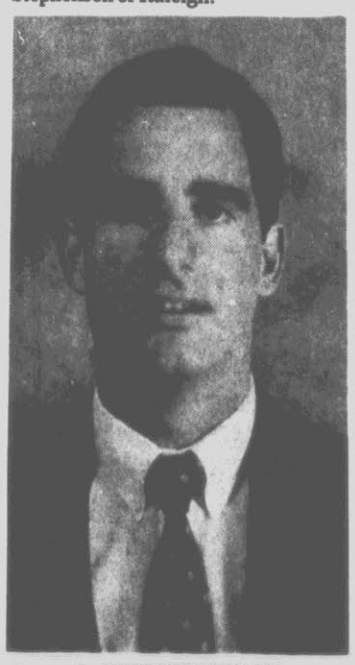

A. Jeff Newton III has been named vice president-manager of Carolina Office Equipment Company of Greenville, the company has announced. He was formerly operations manager with COECO in Rocky Mount.

Newton will be in charge of all sales and operations of COECO of Greenville.

A Chapel Hill native, Newton received his bachelor's degree in business administration from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. He joined COECO in Rocky Mount in 1983.

He is a member of the Rocky Mount Luncheon Lions Club, of which he is past second vice president and director. He has also served on the Rocky Mount Area United Way Allocations Committee for the past two years.

He is married to the former Betsy Stephenson of Raleigh.

A. JEFF NEWTON III

General Manager

Martin Gaither has recently been appointed general manager of Homestead Funeral Home, Inc., of Greenville, according to the company. A funeral director and embalmer, he comes to Greenville from Atlanta where he served on the faculty of Gupton-Jones College of Funeral Service, the company said.

MARTIN GAITHER

A native of Enfield, Gaither is a graduate of Western Carolina University and Gupton-Jones College of Funeral Service. He was employed with Branch Funeral Homes, Inc. of Enfield and Roanoke Rapids before moving to Atlanta. He is a Mason, Shriner, Eastern Star and past president of the Exchange Club of Roanoke Rapids. He is married to the former Susan Drew of Roanoke Rapids.

Promotion

Fast Food Merchandisers Inc. of Rocky Mount has announced that Pamela B. Croom has been promoted to senior financial analyst. Mrs. Croom is responsible for developing computer modeling systems which will analyze sales and profit trends, the company said. She joined FFM in 1983 as financial analyst.

She is a 1978 graduate of Greene Central High School and earned her bachelor's degree in economics and her master's degree in marketing at East Carolina University.

She and her husband, Chris, live in Tarboro.

New Chair

Edna K. Morris of Rocky Mount has been elected to serve as chair of the Eastern North Carolina Industrial Council.

She is employee relations director for Hardee's Food Systems.

Made up of top management in industry, the organization had been headed by James A. Hackney III of Washington, N.C., president of Hackney Industries Inc., until the election of Ms. Morris.

A native of Rutherfordton and a Phi Beta Kappa graduate of the University of South Carolina, she has been a member of the Industrial Council's Executive Committee for three years. She is also a member of the American Society of Personnel Administrators, the Eastern Carolina Personnel Association, the Rocky Mount City Schools Vocational Advisory Committee, the Rocky Mount Area Women's Network Steering Committee and the YWCA Board of Directors.

Ms. Morris coordinates employee relations programs for the Hardee's 35,000 employees working in facilities across the nation.

Court Will Decide On Burlington Bid

NEW YORK (AP) — A federal judge said she would rule Monday on whether to issue an injunction blocking a $2.16 billion merger agreement between Burlington Industries Inc. and Morgan Stanley & Co.

District Judge Shirley Wohl Kram said Friday her ruling would come after oral arguments on related issues before federal appeals courts in New York and Richmond, Va.

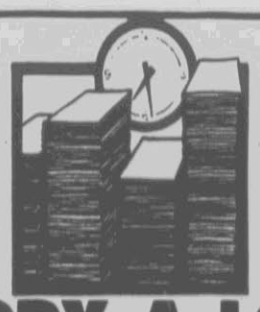

The injunction is being sought by a partnership, led by New York-based financier Asher B. Edelman and Montreal-based Dominion Textile Inc., that is mounting a $77-a-share hostile takeover bid for Burlington.

On Thursday, the partnership asked Kram to enjoin Burlington and Morgan Stanley from closing their deal as planned next Tuesday on the grounds that Burlington's management backed the $78 a share tender offer without "fair and open" bidding.

Both offers expire next Tuesday, unless extended.

The Edelman-Dominion group already owns 12.3 percent of Burlington's 27.3 million common shares outstanding.

Its offer has been stalled since June 7, when a federal judge in North Carolina issued a preliminary injunction barring the bid on the grounds that Burlington might be able to prove the partnership illegally used inside information in making its bid. The partnership has denied wrongdoing and is appealing the injunction.

Kaypro Computers Announces the Enhanced KAYPRO 286i.

Free software now includes WordStar Professional Release 4.

More Bytes. More Keys. Same Price.

The KAYPRO 286i/C is still AT compatible. It still microprocesses at a 10-MHz clip. It still features 640 KB of RAM. But a few things have changed.

Its hard drive now holds 40 million bytes. And its enhanced AT-style keyboard now sports 101 keys. So, more bytes, more keys, more money? Nope. Just more bytes, more keys, and the same fair Kaypro price.

See the KAYPRO 286i/C. It just might be the change you (and your business) are looking for.

Alaskan Dreams Put On Ice As Oil Prices Fall

By JAY MATHEWS
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

ANCHORAGE, Alaska — Like spendthrift playboys cut off from the family fortune, the people of America's most oil-dependent state have begun to experiment with life as it is lived in the rest of the country — paying taxes, struggling with deficits, getting behind on the mortgage and looking for work.

After two years of hoping that their favored lifestyles can survive the long fall of oil prices, Alaskans have begun to lower their sights and accept new taxes, fees and financial difficulties unthinkable five years ago.

Leading the change is a new rough-edged governor, Steve Cowper, D, a Fairbanks lawyer who grew up in North Carolina and Virginia. He has dared to suggest cutting back the flow of oil checks to Alaskans of every walk of life and persuaded a recalcitrant legislature to reduce, at least slightly, some favored state benefits.

"There are a number of programs in this state that are simply not available to anyone else in the country," Cowper said. In an interview, he acknowledged that his stand has created an enormous outcry, but insisted that "persistence usually pays off and people do what is necessary."

Whether the price of oil stays at its new $20-a-barrel level or not, Alaskans already are resigned to an economy that may never return to the boom days of the early 1980s, when oil stood above $35 a barrel. This week, the state is celebrating the 10th anniversary of the first flow of oil from Prudhoe Bay on the north slope through the Trans Alaska Pipeline. That flow continues, at reduced prices, and a rich new field may come on line by the year 2000. But, just as in Louisiana, Texas and other states whose fortunes as oil producers have ebbed, everyone is adjusting to worse times.

Several hundred hard-pressed Anchorage residents formed long lines this spring to sign over their annual state permanent-fund dividends — expected to bring each of them about $750 this fall — to private speculators for $325 in immediate cash. People in line told local reporters of long-overdue mortgage payments on their trailers and related other stories "that just broke your heart," said Cowper spokeswoman Laury Roberts Scandling.

The unemployment rate is up to 11.8 percent, housing prices have slumped 20 to 30 percent, mortgage foreclosures have soared and an economy that once attracted a steady stream of hopeful young workers from the lower 48 states is losing nearly 1,000 jobs a month.

Local governments have begun to consider sales taxes, unheard of in most of the state, and to cut such accustomed luxuries as out-of-state trips for the local high-school band and basketball team — no small item when the border of the nearest state is 450 miles away.

The state government is about to lay off 1,000 more employees, and the legislature has agreed to seek repayment of liberal college loans immediately after graduation and no longer forgive half the loan of anyone who stayed in the state for five years after receiving a degree.

There have been no serious efforts to follow through on Cowper's more-radical proposals — a state income tax or restricting $250-a-month state senior-citizen bonuses to the needy. But Cowper, 48, has confidently called the legislature back for a special session July 1 to handle a $317 million deficit. He proposes taking the money from earnings of the $9 billion state permanent fund, the nest egg set up to help the state through the difficult future days when oil no longer flows.

The special session marks the latest battle between Cowper and legislative leaders, particularly Senate President Jan Faiks, over handling the drop in oil revenues. Despite the recent surge in oil prices, the state estimates next year's oil price at about $14 a barrel. The state Senate majority based its revenue projections on $16 a barrel instead and adjourned without dealing with the deficit the official state per-barrel price projected.

Faiks, 41, a Republican businesswoman from Anchorage, has concentrated on budget matters and supports lower state spending, but has resisted calls for tax increases.

"Our future looks very bright," she said. She pointed to new mineral enterprises, such as the Red Dog lead and zinc mine, and the recent plentiful harvest of bottom fish. A predicted drop in production this year as Prudhoe Bay's ancient oil pools begin to dry up has been postponed to 1989. And the proposed opening to wildcatters of a portion of the Artic National Wildlife Refuge could bring another surge of oil revenues in a decade.

George L. Whyel Jr., president of the First National Bank of Fairbanks, said the recession there will be cushioned by the arrival of a brigade of the new 6th Light Infantry Division, bringing 7,000 soldiers and dependents and $300 million in construction projects.

The sharp drop in the state's construction industry probably would have happened without an oil-price decline, University of Alaska economist Scott Goldsmith said, due to "overstimulation of the industry" in the early 1980s.

Cowper, Faiks and other Alaska politicians agree they must diversify the economy through more tourism, fishing, minerals and natural gas. Just what they will do with the oil money, which continues to pay most of the state's $3 billion budget and add to the permanent fund, remains to be seen.

Former Gov. Jay S. Hammond, R, proposed the annual permanent-fund dividend payments to every state resident in order to protect the fund from raids by greedy politicians. If voters had a regular stake in the interest from the fund, he argued, they would fight any attempt to drain the principal.

Cowper has not proposed ending the annual dividend, but has suggested voters be asked to choose between that or new taxes. He thinks such handouts are luxuries in a state trying to balance its books. "The fund has a faithful and attentive constituency," he said, "that has no relationship to the dividends."

Oil Field Battle Rages

PRUDHOE BAY, Alaska — This sprawling Arctic oil field celebrated its 10th anniversary Friday — a steel and gravel monument to the quest for American oil independence that faces another major battle on another flat, marshy plain just 60 miles away.

Ten years after the 138-degree petroleum from beneath the frigid Alaska north slope first headed south through the Trans Alaska Pipeline, few of the many predicted disasters have occurred. There have been no major spills. The permafrost — permanently frozen subsoil — remains intact. The caribou who come through here or traverse the pipeline are enjoying a population boom.

Prudhoe Bay has become the largest oil field in American history and with nearby wells is producing today one-fifth of all U.S. petroleum. Yet, with the nation's most promising new areas for oil exploration just to the east and with American oil imports again climbing, the experts who brought this off find themselves blocked by some of the same environmentalist forces that fought the pipeline.

"The oil we will need to carry us into the 21st century," said Standard Alaska Production Co. President George N. Nelson, is "being held hostage" in the battle over the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge, a 19-million-acre tract down the coast.

Environmentalists charge that caribou in that refuge will be unable to adjust to drilling, particularly in their calving grounds and the ice flows where they escape summer mosquitos. They say the growth of the caribou population in the pipeline area only proves the natural disruption oil brings, for it has come at the expense of wolves and grizzly bears killed or frightened away by the influx of humans.

Prudhoe Bay, now pumping about 2 million barrels of oil a day down the pipeline to Valdez at the speed of a brisk jog, is expected to become a busy way station this August for legions of federal visitors flying on fact-finding missions to the refuge. This summer also marks the beginning of vacation bus tours to Prudhoe Bay up the 416-mile Dalton Highway, which until now carried only truckers supplying the pipeline.

A PROGRESSIVE PROJECT — Progressive Free Will Baptist Church, pastored and founded by the Rev. T.L. Davis, assembles in a building that has housed a Pentecostal church and a fraternity. Progressive has done extensive remodeling to the building by installing new floors, ceiling, windows, paneling, furniture and the church sign. (Reflector Photos by Cliff Hollis).

AIR CONDITIONER — The old-fashioned "water cooler" air conditioner still "works fantastic," Davis said. "The water recycles and it cools" the church.

Frat House Now Church

Building Of Several Faces

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

From church to fraternity house to church again — the buildings and grounds now known as Progressive Free Will Baptist Church have had several faces.

"It was first a Pentecoastal Holiness church," said Herb Corey who owns the property on the corner of Cotanche and 13th streets. The church moved out in October 1973.

"I bought the building in 1973," Coresy said, along with the parsonage and the lot behind it. The lot belonged to Eva Mobley, his great-aunt.

The parsonage was used as a day care center, Children's World, in 1974, Corey said. But, he lived in Maryland then and found it difficult to operate an endeavor long distance.

In 1976, Corey said he agreed to remodel the church and parsonage into houses for Sigma Nu fraternity. The organization leased the property for 10 years, "then the Progressive Free Will Baptist group came to me last October," he said.

Progressive Free Will Baptist Church was organized June 15, 1986, Father's Day, said pastor and founder the Rev. T.L. Davis. "We started out in the Roxy Theater."

The theater was a place for the church to organize, charter and register in North Carolina and Pitt County, but it was not a place to call home.

Winter was approaching, and the high ceiling made the theater expensive to heat, he said. "We had capacity crowds there. We needed somewhere to go."

The old fraternity house seemed like the perfect place.

After an agreement to lease the property with an option to buy was made between Corey and the church, another remodeling process began. The only reminder that the fraternity once occupied the building is a room upstairs that will be the church mother's room, once renovated, and the garbage dumpster behind the building that reads "Property of Sigma Nu."

"Inside what is now the church sanctuary, they had rooms, showers and baths," Davis said. "All the windows were out in the church."

A low ceiling had been built in the santuary, he said. "They made it like a loft or balcony."

Progressive removed the walls that divided the rooms and the lowered ceiling. They enlarged the choir stand, extended the pulpit, carpeted the sanctuary, installed new ceilings with sheetrock and hanging ceiling fans.

"The remodeling process took about five weeks," Davis said. "We worked day and night on it" with supervision from Joyner's Construction. "The men of the church did the work, and the women provided food for us," he said of the 330-member congregation. "We saved ourselves so much money by doing the work ourselves."

The church held a procession from the theater to its new church building for its first service on Nov. 23, Davis said. "We had approximately 100 cars in the procession. I do have videos of the whole entire (remodeling) process."

An adjoining building to the sanctuary houses a dining area, kitchen, pastor's office, trustee and secretary rooms, which also have been remodeled. "The deacon and mother's rooms are being worked on," he said.

A cornerstone of the building reads "The J.N. Williams Educational Building Erected 1953."

Davis, his wife and their two children live in the nine-room parsonage.

The church is paying for the renovations through its building fund by selling dinners and sponsoring a King and Queen contest to raise money. Initially, "a lot of the food was donated by members," Davis said. "But, once we got it going, it feeds itself."

Some furniture in the church such as the copying machine, the water fountain, the piano and the organ was donated, he said.

"All of our pulpit set was given to us by Cornerstone Missionary Baptist Church," Davis said. "They remodeled their church" and changed their pulpit set.

Furniture in the pastor, trustee and secretary rooms was donated by Burroughs Wellcome, while J.H. Rose High School donated the furniture for the mother's room.

The pews are those once used in the old York Memorial AME Zion Church on Albermarle Avenue. "We bought those from them," he said. Furniture in the dining area was bought from Corey, who owns a furniture equipment supply store.

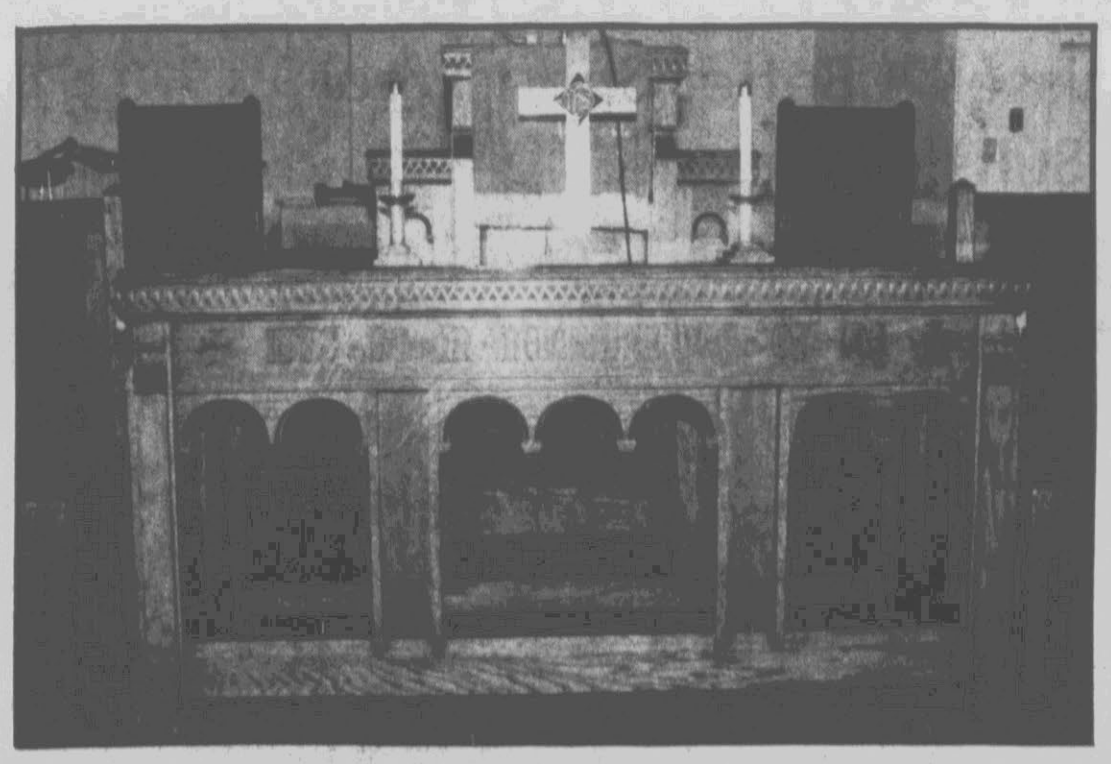

In addition to remodeling the mother's room, other renovations include installing stained glass windows in the santuary, Davis said. "We just frosted them (windows made of plexiglass) until we're able to purchase our windows." The plexiglass windows will be used as storm windows to protect the stained ones, he said.

The garage behind the parsonage will be renovated into a baptistry, Davis said.

With new and planned renovations, it appears the buildings may grow to a ripe old age with its new facade, Davis said.

MORE WORK — The church still is remodeling the building. This upstairs room will be the mothers' room once repairs have been made to the ceiling and the walls have been painted, Davis said.

PULPIT — The pulpit set in the church was donated by Cornerstone Missionary Baptist Church. In addition to carpeting the area, the church extended the choir stand.

SANCTUARY — The sanctuary of the church once was divided into seven rooms and a bath. The pews are those that were used in the old York Memorial AME Zion Church building on Albermarle Avenue.

Outdoor Wedding Performed Saturday

LOUISBURG — Sandy Creek Ranch was the setting for the outdoor wedding ceremony of Sylvia Sutton and John David Hendrix Jr., both of Chapel Hill. The double ring ceremony took place Saturday at 2 p.m. and was conducted by the Rev. R. Graham NaHouse of Our Redeemer Lutheran Church, Greenville.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Boyd Sutton of Sandy Creek Ranch, Louisburg, the bride was given in marriage by her father. Vinnie White was matron of honor for her sister.

MRS. HENDRIX

Dianne Sutton of Chapel Hill, sister of the bride, and Karen Hendrix of Philadelphia, sister of the bridegroom, were bridesmaids.

The bridegroom's parents are Dr. and Mrs. John D. Hendrix of Greenville. Whitney Tope of Cambridge, England, was best man. Ushers were Clint Burgess, Michael Friday and Trent Blackman, all of Chapel Hill, John McDonald of Raleigh and Hal Warren of Wilmington.

The bride wore a white tea length gown of schiffli lace over white satin with a drop torso waistline and satin sash trimmed with an off-center satin bow. The white satin bodice was covered with schiffli lace and her jacket was adorned with pearls and had full length tapered lace sleeves.

The bride's attendants wore gowns of peach and white rachelle lace over peach satin. Fitted drop torso bodices featuring modified sabrina necklines dropping to V-backs and short puffed sleeves were adorned with a pleated satin cummerbund and was trimmed with off-center front satin bow. The full lace and satin tea length skirt flowed from gathers at the waistline.

The couple will be living in Chapel Hill after a wedding trip to the mountains of North Carolina.

The bride and bridegroom are fourth-year medical students at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. She was a Morehead School at UNC-CH and graduated cum laude and Phi Beta Kappa. The bridegroom graduated from Davidson College, cum laude, Phi Beta Kappa.

The bridegroom's parents entertained at a barbecue and dance Friday evening at the Green Hill Country Club in Louisburg. A party for the couple was given by friends of the bridegrooms' parents at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Richard Gavigan in Greenville.

Pope-Smith Vows Said In Charlotte

MRS. POPE

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bruce Smith of Brevard, the bride was given in marriage by her father. Lillian Corrine Pope of Richmond, Va., sister of the bridegroom, was maid of honor. Deborah Price Hall of Brevard, cousin of the bride, and Patricia Randall of Charlotte were bridesmaids.

The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. John Edward Pope Jr. of Greenville and the late Mr. Pope.

Elaine Rogers, organist, and the Rev. Harold Shoemaker, vocalist, provided a program of wedding music.

The bride wore a formal gown of white organza designed with a Victorian neckline, fitted waist and long tapered sleeves. The dress was trimmed with chantilly and Venise lace, seed pearls and sequins. The full circular skirt ended in a chapel length train of cascading chantilly lace ruffles. Her two tiered veil of illusion was trimmed with re-embroidered chantilly lace and was attached to a cap of chantilly lace and seed pearls. She carried a cascading bouquet of white roses and lilies.

Each of the attendants wore a floor length gown of tampico pink satin designed with a portrait neckline and short gathered sleeves. Each carried a cascading bouquet of mixed spring flowers, including roses, alstromeria and baby's breath.

The mother of the bride wore a tea length dress of mauve crepe de chine and the mother of the bridegroom wore a pastel blue tea length dress with a blouson top.

The wedding was directed by Arzelle Mitchell.

The couple will live in Charlotte after a trip to the South Carolina Coast.

The bride is employed by Celanese Corp. in Charlotte and the bridegroom is a registered architect with Dellinger-Lee Associates, P.A. in Charlotte. The bride is a graduate of Asheville-Buncombe Technical Insitute. The bridegroom attended East Carolina University and graduated from Virginia Polytechnical Institute and State University.

Adding Warning To Container Labels

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Putting warning labels on alcoholic beverage containers could curtail drunk driving, says Charles Phelps, a public policy analyst at the University of Rochester.

Phelps surveyed college students and found they underestimated the risk of a fatal crash when a drinking driver is at the wheel. Actually, says Phelps, the risk of a fatal accident increases 100 times for a driver aged 16-24 who has consumed six or more drinks in an hour; but students thought the risk was only about seven-and-a-half times.

Couple Marries In Elm City Saturday

ELM CITY — Tammy Lynn Gardner of Elm City and Curtis Dean Cone of Greenville were united in marriage Saturday at 7 p.m. in the Oak Grove Free Will Baptist Church.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Gardner of Elm City and Mr. and Mrs. J.C. Cone of Wilson.

The double-ring ceremony was conducted by Dr. Allan Sharp. Wedding music was provided by Marice Totherow, organist, and Phil Hansley, trumpeter. Vocalists were Randy Jennings and Lou Flora.

The bride, escorted by her father, wore a gown of white crystalline organza. The beaded lace bodice featured a Queen Anne neckline, long sleeves puffed at the shoulder and a basque waistline. The gathered organza skirt was accented with motifs and tiers of ruffles down the cathedral train. She chose a white pleated satin hat with a beaded alencon lace crown, a turned-up brim accented with a satin rose and a shirred pouff with waltz-length crystal illusion. She carried a silk cascading bouquet of peach roses and white orchid sprays accented with ivy and narrow white ribbon.

The matron of honor was the bride's cousin, Sherry Harrell of Saratoga. She wore a floor-length gown of apricot lace over satin. The fitted bodice featured a V-neckline and shirred pouff sleeves. An asymetrical satin drape accented with a bow at the side encircled the torso waist. She carried a nosegay of white fuji poms, baby's breath and peach silk roses with streamers.

Bridesmaids were Donna Jones of Wilmington, Yvette Butts of Roanoke Rapids, and Kellie Turner, Beth Wilkinson and Jeannie Ferrell, all of Wilson. The junior bridesmaid was Michelle Watson of Wilson. Each was attired like the honor attendant and carried an identical bouquet.

Flower girl Brook Summerlin wore a white floor-length gown of chantilly lace and organza. The lace bodice featured a jewel neckline accented with a standing ruffle, short puff sleeves and an apricot sash at the natural waist. The bouffant scalloped lace over a tiered organza skirt was encircled with apricot ribbon. She carried a white wicker basket filled with silk flower petals. She is the cousin of the bride from Elm City.

Honorary bridesmaids were Angie Council of Elm City, Melinda Williford of Bailey, Karen Pridgen and Susan Pridgen, both of Cary, Cathy Joyner and Teresa Joyner, both of Oxford, all cousins of the bride, and Sharon Durham and Tanya Craft, both of Wilson.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers were Dwayne Lucas of Camp Lejeune and Corky Lucas of Wilson, both cousins of the bridegroom; Randy Gardner of Elm City, cousin of the bride; Allen Riley of Rocky Mount, and Johnny Sullivan of Bailey. Justin Russ of Rocky Mount, cousin of the bride, was the ring bearer.

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall following the ceremony. The bride's parents were hosts. Music was provided by pianist Dallas Montague. Amy Tripp of Ayden was rice maid. Photographs of the bride were distributed by Bobby Joyner, cousin of the bride.

The parents of the bridegroom entertained at a rehearsal dinner in the church fellowship hall Friday.

The bride is a graduate of Beddingfield High School and received an associate degree in radiologic technology from Edgecombe Technical College. She is a registered radiologic technologist with Eastern Radiologists Inc., Greenville.

The bridegroom is a graduate of Hunt High School and attended East Carolina University. He received a bachelor's degree in business administration from Atlantic Christian College. He is a field representative for Jefferson Pilot Life Insurance Company, Greenville.

After a wedding trip to Myrtle Beach, S.C., they will live in Greenville.

STAINLESS ONLY A SILVERSMITH COULD HAVE CREATED

Nouveau... a contemporary design fashioned from the early twentieth century Art Nouveau movement. The long, slender lines with subtle curves and raised linear decorations are at ease in any setting.

Tristan... a classic design of commanding style and grace. A gleaming faceted column creates an impressive example of design simplicity to fit any mood or decor.

Melon Bud... graceful lines supporting sensitive sculpted curves with an accent floral bud completing the pattern. Truly a design for all seasons.

Colonial Tipt... meticulously crafted to capture the look and feel of the Colonial Period, "Tipt" is characterized by simple clear lines, sleek dimensions, and bright finish... a classic pattern of timeless quality for today.

Double Ring Vows Spoken

KINSTON — Laura Cameron Brinson of Greenville became the bride of Webb L. Geer of Wrightsville Beach Saturday at 2 p.m. Dr. John Bunn officiated at the double ring ceremony in the Queen Street Methodist Church.

The bride was given in marriage by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Royce C. Brinson. She is a graduate of East Carolina University and is a medical social worker with the ECU School of Medicine, Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology.

The bridegroom, also a graduate of ECU, is a sales service representative with Georgia Pacific Inc. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. P.H. Geer of Morehead City. His father was best man.

MRS. GEER

Meg Crawford of Tampa, Fla., sister of the bride, was honor attendant. Bridesmaids were Lois Geer of Kernersville, sister of the bridegroom, Suzanne Rouse of Wilmington, Sam Caines of Leland, and Karen Slegall, Shirley Lyerly and Karen Warren, all of Greenville. Jill Brinson, niece of the bride, was flower girl.

Ushers were Paul Geer of Morehead City, brother of the bridegroom; Steve Brinson of Wallace, brother of the bride; Bobby Rains of Greenville; Scot Cutchin of Virginia Beach, Va.; Arnold Lynch of Durham, and Brent Brewer of Wrightsville Beach.

A program of nuptial music was presented by organist Bess Saywer. Soloist Rick Pridgen of Goldsboro sang "One Hand, One Heart," "The Wedding Song" and "The Lord's Prayer."

The bride wore a formal length gown designed by Illissa with an open V-neckline in alencon lace, beaded with pearls and sequins. The fitted bodice was overlaid in the beaded alencon lace which extended over the torso to a basque waistline. A medallion of pearls and sequins accented the center front of the gown. The long tapered sleeves were fashioned of shirred taffeta and featured self-button closures. The back bodice was designed with a deep open V outlined in the alencon lace. The full circular skirt accented with motifs of alencon lace flowed to a cathedral length train. The train was accentuated by cutwork patterned appliques of alencon lace. She selected a fingertip veil featuring a fluted ruffle edging held in place by a tiara headband of scalloped pearls interspersed with rhinestones. A French pouf of ruffled illusion accented the crown. She carried a classic English cascade bouquet of white larkspur and bridal pink roses accented with ivy and exotic greens.

The attendants wore tea length gowns of royal blue fantanza designed with one-shoulder basque bodices accented with a bow and bouffant skirts. They carried clutch bouquets of carnations, alstromeria lilies and gerbera daisies in shades of pink and peach.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in Cameron's at Frenchman's Creek. Music was provided by Mark Johnson. Amy Rains, Lura Graham and Ann Brinson attended the register. Mr. and Mrs. Carroll Wiggs greeted guests. Mrs. Ed Hardy and Mrs. L.B. Stephenson poured punch, and Mrs. Dave Callaway served cake. Mr. and Mrs. D.J. Faircloth said goodbyes.

The couple will take a wedding trip to Isle of Palms, S.C.

The parents of the bridegroom hosted a rehearsal dinner at the Sheraton in Kinston. Mrs. Blackie Kincaid and Mrs. Wade Pridgen were hostesses of a bridesmaids' luncheon in Goldsboro, and several other parties and showers were given in honor of the bridal couple.

Hair Cuts To Benefit Society

A "Get Your Hair Cut" will benefit the American Cancer Society starting Monday and continuing through Saturday.

Area beauty salons including Cut Above, Heads Up Hair Salon, Gorham's Beauty Salon, Milady Beauty Shoppe, Paradise Hair Design, Roli 4 Hair and The Salon and the American Cancer Society are sponsoring the second annual event. Approximately 38 costemologists will participate in giving the hair cuts.

Posters will be displayed in participating salons and each will have literature including Cancer Facts for Men and Women and Skin Cancer as well as other phamplets. The literature tells of early detection and prevention of cancer.

In addition to funding research, a large of the money raised in Pitt County will be used in the county.

In Westernized countries, men lose their hearing more than women do, but the reason may not be biological. It could result from exposure to more noise in the workplace.

JULIA ANN SMITH — is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carter G. Smith of Fountain, who announce her engagement to Ricky Lynn Mewborn, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Ray Mewborn Sr. of Farmville. A Sept. 5 wedding date is planned.

Avert Your Eyes When Shopping

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — When shopping in countries where bargaining is the accepted style, don't let your eyes give you away, says a travel expert.

"An important key in getting a good price is to pretend disinterest," says Will Berg, tour director of the cruise ship M-S Pearl of Scandinavia. "When bargaining, it's your eyes that most often betray you. Vendors watch your eyes. If they catch a gleam, they know you are hooked."

Berg's advice: "When bargaining avert your eyes. Don't let a vendor look into them. Better yet — wear dark glasses."

Couple Exchanges Wedding Vows

WASHINGTON, N.C. — Joyce Anderson became the bride of Lewis Alford Singleton Saturday at 3 p.m. The double-ring ceremony took place in the Fifteenth Street Church of God. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Elmer Bauman.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Anderson of Route 4, Greenville. The bridegroom is the son of Dorothy Singleton of Route 3, Washington.

A program of music was presented by Roy Lewis.

The bride was given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father. She wore a formal gown of imported white silkened organza over taffeta designed with an open portrait neckline accented with appliques of floral patterned schiffli embroidered organza beaded in pearls and iridescent sequins. The gown also featured short French pouf sleeves trimmed in tiers of fluted ruffled organza. Appliques of the beaded lace emphasized the fitted bodice. A full circular skirt extended from the basque waistline, which had tiers of fluted organza at the hemline on the underskirt with an overskirt of the sheer organza creating a draped edging in an antebellum effect. The attached cathedral train was layered in ruffled tiers of the fluted organza.

Susan K. Bullock of Greenville, matron of honor. wore a velvet floor-length gown. She carried a bouquet of flowers with a rose which was given by the bride to her mother.

The bridesmaids were Angie Singleton, sister-in-law of the bridegroom, and Norma Tyson, Teresa Braswell and Melissa Haddock, all of Greenville.

April Glasson, niece of the bride, was flower girl. She wore a white floor- length gown and carried a bouquet of flowers. Mark Rowe, nephew of the bridegroom, was ring bearer.

John Singleton, cousin of the bridegroom, was best man. Ushers were Thomas Singleton, brother of the bridegroom, Randy Manning, Gene Beddard and Ray Beddard.

Shelby Bullock of Greenville directed the wedding. Rita Rowe, sister of the bridegroom, and Amy Tyson presided at the register and presented scrolls to the guests.

MRS. SINGLETON

An after-rehearsal dinner was held at the home of the bridegroom's uncle in Washington. Several showers were given in honor of the couple.

The bride is a graduate of North Pitt High School and will attend Pitt Community College in the fall. She is employed by Greenville Villa Nursing Home.

The bridegroom is a graduate of North Pitt and is employed by Frankie Singleton.

After a wedding trip to Myrtle Beach, the couple will live in Washington.

Miss Edmundson, Mr. Ivey Speak Vows

FREMONT — Tracey Dianne Edmundson and Mitchell Alan Ivey were united in marriage Saturday in the Fremont United Methodist Church. Officiating at the noon double-ring ceremony was the Rev. Bill Cotingham.

A program of wedding music was presented by Louise Newsome, organist, and Kimble Pate, vocalist, accompanied by Pat Alford.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Edmundson of Fremont. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. O.W. Ivey of Lumberton.

The bride was escorted by her father and given in marriage by her parents. She wore a formal gown of white satin, re-embroidered alencon lace and pearls. The gown was fashioned with a fitted bodice, sweetheart neckline and leg 'o mutton sleeves closing with lace cuffs enhanced with pearls. Re-embroidered alencon lace and pearls enclosed the full skirt and chapel train. Her fingertip mantilla highlighted with lace medallions and pearls was attached to a lace covered Juliet cap. She carried a colonial nosegay of silk gardenias, stephanotis, picardy roses, gypsophila and satin streamers tied in love knots.

Deborah Yelverton of Alexandria, Va., was maid of honor for her niece. Bridesmaids were Lisa Edmundson of Fremont, sister-in-law of the bride; JoAnn Aldridge of Swansboro; Susan Matthews and Phyllis Jarrett, both of Greenville; Eleanor Rogers of Bennettsville, S.C., and Randi Friday of Charlotte. Melissa Edmunston served as junior bridesmaid for her cousin.

The bridegroom's father served as best man. Ushers were Daren Ivey of Wilmington, brother of the bridegroom, Don Edmundson and Chuck Edmundson of Fremont, brothers of the bride, Russ Quick of Greenville; Walter Stone of Raleigh, and Rob Congleton of Ayden, cousin of the bride.

The wedding was directed by Nanelle Congleton of Ayden, aunt of the bride. Tammy Ann Holland, cousin of the bride, and Donna Mason presided at the register.

Following the ceremony the bride's parents entertained at a reception at the home of Dixie Edmundson, grandmother of the bride. Guests were greeted by Mr and Mrs. Joe Brown Sr., great-aunt and great-uncle of the bride. Marjorie Singleton and Molly Ellis, great-aunts of the bride, served cake. Punch was poured by Florence Eatman, Grace Elmore and Daphne Fulkerson, great-aunts of the bride, and Caroline Ellis, cousin of the bride. Birdseed roses were distributed by Lisa Pate, Shanna Newman, Allison Newman, Beth Ellis, Kelly Musgrave, and Julie Langley, cousins of the bride. Jenna Bowie assisted. Goodbyes were said by Mr. and Mrs. Rudy Edmundson, aunt and uncle of the bride and Steve Yelverton, uncle of the bride.

After a wedding trip to Hilton Head, S.C., the couple will reside in Ayden.

The bride is a graduate of Charles B. Aycock High School, Peace College in Raleigh and East Carolina University. She is employed as a teacher in the Pitt County schools.

The bridegroom is a graduate of Lumberton High School and ECU. He is employed by Sherwin-Williams in Goldsboro.

The parents of the bridegroom entertained at a pig-picking after the rehearsal at the home of the bride's parents.

The Colonial Inn in Farmville was the setting for the bridesmaids' luncheon given by Nanekle Congelton, Karen Edmundson and Deborah Yelverton. A miscellaneous shower, a cookout, two steak suppers, a barbecue and a luncheon were all held prior to the wedding in honor of the couple.

Celebrations Honor States

NEW YORK (AP) — A program to honor the role of the individual states in the formation and evolution of the U.S. Constitution begins Dec. 7 in Dover, Del.

It will continue through 1988 on the anniversary of each state's ratification for statehood.

"The program will honor state government and judicial leaders — the people who make the Constitution work for all of us on a daily basis," says William A. Schreyer, chairman of Merrill Lynch & Co. Inc., sponsor of the events.

It was decided to honor the states because the Constitution would not have become the supreme law of the land unless the states had ratified it. The program is called "A Ratification Celebration."

In 1917, the Canadian Press was formed as a cooperative to exchange news among Canadian newspapers.

Wedding Vows Exchanged

Delores Ann Elks, daughter of Frances Hardee Elks and David Lee Elks, both of Greenville, married George Arthur Oakey Jr., son of George Oakey Sr. of Wilson and Avon L. Barrow of Clayton, Saturday at 2 p.m.

The double ring ceremony conducted by the Rev. Caswell Shaw took place in St. James United Methodist Church.

The bride was escorted by her father. Her matron of honor was her sister-in-law, Wanda Elks of Greenville. Bridesmaids were Sharon Harris of Goldsboro and Kim Koonce of Greenville.

The father of the bridegroom was best man, and ushers were Ronnie Elks of Greenville, brother of the bride, and Chris Oakey of Raleigh, brother of the bridegroom.

A program of wedding music was performed by organist Frances Cain and vocalist Alice Medlin. The wedding was directed by Barbara Morris of Vanceboro. Guests were registered by Kathryn Harris of Greenville.

The bride wore a floor length gown of organza, schiffli embridery and alencon lace over taffeta. The fitted organza bodice featured a Victorian neckline and an illusion yoke and was appliqued with alencon lace motifs etched with seed pearls and sequins. The gown had bishop sleeves. The full skirt extended to a chapel train, which featured garlands of scalloped alencon lace edging the schiffli-embroidered organza ruffled hemline. She wore a tiered waltz length veil of illusion wth a small scalloped edge accented with seattered embroidered flowers. The veil was attached to a schiffli lace caplet etched with seed pearls and sequins. She carried a cascade bouquet of white silk roses, daisies, stephanotis and baby's breath centered with a miniature white Bible accented with streamers of lace and satin ribbons.

The matron of honor wore a tea length gown of imported royal blue French latticework lace bordered in a floral patterned chantilly lace motif over matching satin. The gown was fashioned with a sheer yoke with the scalloped lace defining the sabrina neckline and edging the hemline. The short caplet sleeves were enhanced with the patterned lace. The waistline of the softly gathered skirt was accented with a cummerbund and bow of satin. She carried a nosegay bouquet of mixed summer flowers, miniature carnations and baby's breath with royal blue satin streamers.

The bridesmaids wore dresses and carried bouquets idential to that of the matron of honor.

A bridesmaids' luncheon was given by Kim Koonce and Wanda Elks at the Colonial Inn in Farmville.

The bride is a graduate of J.H. Rose High School and Mitchell's Hairstyling Academy. She is self-employed at The New Image, Inc. in Greenville.

MRS. OAKEY

The bridegroom is a graduate of James B. Hunt High School, Wilson, and attended Chowan College. He is employed by Teledune Thermatics in Elm City.

After a wedding trip to Nags Head, they will live in Greenville.

Pugh-Walston Vows Solemnized

FARMVILLE — Jennifer Lynn Walston of Farmville and Samuel Vernace Pugh Jr. of Franklinville were united in marriage Saturday at 2 p.m. in the Farmville First Baptist Church.

The Rev. Ronald Lee Davis conducted the double-ring ceremony. Wedding music, including "Through the Eyes of Love" and "The Wedding Prayer," was performed by organist Sue Mercer and soloist Cordelia Deans.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Donald Nelson Walston of Farmville and Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Vernace Pugh Sr. of Franklinville.

The bride was escorted by her father. The father of the bridegroom was the best man.

Mrs. Eddie Jones of Farmville was matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Shawn Fahey of Baltimore, Ashley Jones of Farmville, Lee Anne Smith of Matthews and Vicki Pugh of Franklinville, sister of the bridegroom.

Ushers were Keith Coble of Goshen, Ind., Craig Hyatt of Pinehurst, Tommy Kirkman of Climax and Greg Walston of Farmville, brother of the bride. The ring bearer was Mark Hudson of Franklinville, cousin of the bridegroom.

The bride wore a floor-length gown with a chapel train of traditional bridal satin and re-embroidered alencon lace. The fitted bodice featured a scoop neckline outlined with scalloped alencon lace motifs. Alencon lace motifs encrusted with seed pearls appliqued the leg o'mutton sleeves and the torso waistline. The satin circular skirt extended into a chapel train. Scalloped lace bordered the hemline of the skirt and train. She wore a tiered waltz-length illusion veil with a fluted edge accented with scattered floral motifs flowing from a lace bandeau edged with seed pearls and crystals. She carried a traditional cascade bouquet of pink roses, white carnations, baby's breath and ivy.

The attendants wore tea-length gowns of daphne rose satin designed with a sweetheart neckline. The fitted bodices were accented with gathered ruffles and matching bows at the shoulders. The basque waistlines were defined with corded satin and small gathers which flowed into full circular skirts. They carried bouquets of white daisies, miniature pink carnations and baby's breath.

Elaina Rego of Matthews and Phillip Matthews of Charlotte attended the guest register and distributed wedding programs. Ashley Harris of Farmville passed out birdseed bags. Mrs. Sammy Barnes of Farmville assisted the bride and her attendants prior to the ceremony. The wedding was directed by Mrs. Arthur Joyner and Mrs. Cedric Davis, both of Farmville.

Immediately following the ceremony, a reception was hosted by the bride's parents in the fellowship hall of the church. The cake, made by the bridegroom's mother, was served by Ida Mae Stout, aunt of the bridegroom of Randleman. Mrs. Lionel Ginn of Goldsboro and Mrs. Otha Joyner of Farmville, aunts of the bride, served punch. Guests were greeted by Mr. and Mrs. Billy Gregory, Mr. and Mrs. Otha Joyner and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Jones Jr.

The parents of the bridegroom gave a pig-picking following the rehearsal at the home of the bride's parents. The bride was honored with a luncheon at the Colonial Inn, Farmville, by Mrs. Walter Jones Jr. Several showers also were given in honor of the couple.

The bride and the bridegroom are both cum laude graduates of Wingate College, Wingate. He is an office manager at Interior Enterprises, Greensboro.

After a wedding trip to Charleston, S.C., they will live in Franklinville.

Teacher Mixes Love With Lessons In The Classroom

By REBECCA MABRY
The Champaign News-Gazette

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — It seems everybody's childhood contains memories of a favorite teacher.

To many Champaign students, that teacher is Rose Forrester.

"I'm sure there are many students who to this day remember Rose because she cared," says Mike Cain, her former principal at the old Columbia Elementary School.

"Aside from being a very solid teacher...she's the type of person who would have her arms around a student, whether it was complimenting him on a piece of clothing he had on or whether it was comforting a scratched knee," he says.

Mrs. Forrester, who has taught first grade for the past eight years at Westview Elementary School, has been guiding young children for more than three decades.

"I just love little children," she says. "I like reading to them. I like seeing them challenged...They're all very precious to me. Sometimes we have a little problem now and then, but it works out.

"It seems as though they want to do things to make me happy."

The PTA at Westview nominated Mrs. Forrester this year for the national PTA Phoebe Apperson Hearst Outstanding Educator Award.

"She is an exceptional teacher in every area," says Westview principal William Freeman. "She has a tremendous reputation throughout the community and actually throughout the entire district."

Parent Ann Bechtel said older students often drop by Mrs. Forrester's classroom.

"She always has the time to talk to a child and listen," says Bechtel, whose own daughter, Katie, was a pupil of Mrs. Forrest two years ago.

"She still goes back for at least one hug a week and more if she can fit it in," she says.

Mrs. Forrester has decided to retire at the end of this school year. She plans to do some substitute teaching, possibly take some piano lessons, visit her son who lives in Australia and become a volunteer tutor for a literacy program.

She began her career in southern Illinois, teaching a class of first-, second- and third-grade students in Palmer, near Taylorville, for $90 a month.

When the school board decided to include fourth-grade students in her class, she bravely told the board president that she couldn't take on the extra students on her current salary.

She got a $20 raise.

"It was a very small town, and I really enjoyed it," she says.

On weekends, she played piano with a small swing band for $3 a night.

Her first year of teaching in 1942 was difficult, she recalled. She'd go home after school tired and depressed. She told her mother she couldn't do it.

"But the people liked me, and I liked them and I've always liked children, so it just worked out," she says. "And it was difficult, but then, the second year, and from then on, it was easy."

Between then and now, she married, had three daughters and two sons and taught in parochial schools in Effingham and Quincy, Ill. She then taught in Tuscola, arriving in Champaign schools 20 years ago.

Mrs. Forrester said if she has any concerns about teaching, it's only that she worries children are being pushed too much.

And she said she hopes young men and women coming into the profession put in the time it takes to be a good teacher.

Teachers can't just work between 8 a.m. and 3 p.m., Mrs. Forrester said.

"Here I am, having taught 32 years, and I still do complete lesson plans every week," Mrs. Forrester says. "And my husband gets upset with me sometimes, but I grade papers every night."

Hictory Trees Are Favored For Tools

THOMASVILLE, Ala. (AP) — Hickory trees are used to produce about 80 percent of the wooden tool handles in the United States, according to Georgia-Pacific Corp.

Valued for its strength and stiffness, hickory is favored over other woods for such tools as hammers, axes, hatchets and picks, according to the forest products firm.

Sandra Liggins Weds W.G. Chapman

GLEN RAVEN — The Glen Raven First Baptist Church was the setting of the Saturday wedding ceremony of Sandra Ann Liggins and William Gary Chapman, both of Greenville.

MRS. CHAPMAN

The double ring ceremony was conducted at 3 p.m. by the Revs. L.H. Brooks of Glen Raven First Baptist Church and Arlee Griffin of Cornerstone Missionary Baptist Church, Greenville.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Gurnie Liggins Sr. of Burlington and Mr. and Mrs. John Patrick Chapman of Greenville.

The bride, escorted by her father, wore a full length formal gown of white taffeta with a cathedral train. The gown featured a basque waistline and a ball gown bodice designed with a scoop neckline accented with re-embroidered alencon lace and seed pearls. The long fitted white taffeta sleeves were trimmed in lace and pearls. The full taffeta skirt featured pick-ups around the bottom of the skirt, which was trimmed in matching lace. She wore a face-forward wreath of pearls, orange blossoms and silk flowers to which was attached a waltz length veil of illusion with a hand-rolled edge accented with an illusion pouf etched with scattered pearls. She carried a cascade bouquet of calla lilies and ivy.

Angie Cannon of Greenville was honor attendant. She wore a tea length red taffeta dress designed with a sweetheart neckline enhanced with white bows on the shoulder and a flared pleated skirt. She carried a double calla lily accented with red and white ribbons and baby's breath.

Bridesmaids were Alice Liggins Daye of La Verne, Calif., sister of the bride, Tamika Liggins of Burlington, niece of the bride, Tonja Atwater of Philadelphia, and Cathy Chapman, sister of the bridegroom, and Lillian Outterbridge, both of Greenville. Junior bridesmaid was Erica Bowie of Greenville, niece of the bridegroom. They each wore a dress designed like that of the honor attendant and carried a single calla lily with white and red ribbons.

Gregory Chapman of Greensboro served as best man for his brother. Ushers were Martin E. Perkins and Kevin Williams, both of Greenville, Jackie Savage of Greensboro, Gurney Liggins Jr., brother of the bride, and Donovan Liggins of Burlington, nephew of the bride, both of Burlington. Anthony B. Daye of La Verne, Calif., nephew of the bride, was ring bearer.

A program of wedding music was provided by organist Timothy B. Liggins, brother of the bride, and vocalists Anthony Turner and Angela Curry, cousin of the bride.

Program attendants were Tonya and Kendra Jones of Greenville. Guests were greeted by Anne Holland and Clarissa Grady of Burlington and Regina Alston of Raleigh.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held by the pool at the Best Western Motel in Burlington. Music was provided by the Final Touch Band. Guests were greeted by Aleshia Miles and Maxine Liggins of Burlington. Cake was served by Paulette Dove of Winston-Salem and Debra Howard of Durham. Assisting in serving were Debra McRae and Harvette Jenkins, both of Fayetteville, Patricia Cannon and Lorene Anderson, both of Greenville, and Donna Matthews of Raleigh. Gifts were received by Teresa Everette of Raleigh and Cookie Belle of Greenville. Guests were registered by Pamela Frye of Fayetteville and Octavia Matthews of Charlotte.

A rehearsal dinner was hosted by the parents of the bridegroom at The Cutting Board. Several showers were given in honor of the couple.

The bride is a graduate of North Carolina State University and the bridegroom attended Winston-Salem State University. She is a management engineer at Pitt County Memorial Hospital and he is employed by the receiving and shipping department at PCMH.

After a wedding trip to Williamsburg, Va., they will live in Greenville.

Lady Separates Voodoo

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Voodoo isn't evil, but it is misunderstood, says a St. Louis born psychic who wants to exorcise the public's misunderstanding of the ancient practice.

"Too often Americans consider voodoo to be a form of black magic, witchcraft or satanism, based on what they see in movies and on television, much of which is 'hoodoo,' or making fun of voodoo," said Jo Ann McShane Jennings.

Jennings is better known to her followers as Lady Bishop, the name she uses in her voodoo practice.

She is a Vietnam war widow who claims to have received the gift of psychic powers and prophecy when she was in second grade.

She was trained and licensed in voodoo by teachers in Haiti, St. Lucia and the Dominican Republic and has now decided to cast her lot, and her spells, in New Orleans.

"St. Barbara asked me to bring her here," she says. "And New Orleans is the voodoo capital of the United States, even though many wrong voodoo practices are perpetuated here."

St. Barbara is just one of many Catholic saints to whom Lady Bishop prays for help. After 18 years in parochial schools and convents, the 37-year-old voodoo priestess still considers herself a Catholic, despite her current vocation.

"Some of these saintly spirits are unrecognized holy men from West Africa while others are the same saints we pray to in Roman Catholicism," she said.

She calls voodoo "an African science tied into the laws of nature, dealing with spirits and the saints." She also refers to it as a religion, deriving its name from vodun, which means "spirits" in some African dialects. Different spirits, she says, are sought to answer different needs.

Lady Bishop wants to be known as a "membo, or voodoo priestess, and not as a voodoo queen, as the famed Marie Laveau, whose memory I love and respect greatly, was mislabeled."

She is building a voodoo church in suburban New Orleans but currently works with clients in an incensed filled motel room on Tulane Avenue.

There she proudly displays newspaper articles from various cities and boasts that she has spent time in 46 states and several foreign countries, honing her skills and spreading the news about her religion.

"The primary purpose of voodoo is healing with herbs, prayers, rituals and spiritual intercession," she says. Too many people correlate voodoo with pins and needles stuck in dolls to create pain and suffering. That is witchcraft, not voodoo. But it also can be an extension of voodoo in the hands of a person who was evil to begin with."

She is quick to criticize people who falsely claim knowledge of voodoo, saying she has encountered many pretenders who avoided her after learning that she was taught by priests and teachers in Haiti and West Africa. And she does her best to dispel what she says are false images of voodoo perpetuated by the movies.

"Biting off heads of chickens is not voodoo, but is a misunderstood, minor form of synthetic magic, bordering on witchcraft."

She offers this advice to everyone: "The Psalms are very important, almost as much as some of the contents of Mojo bags, herbal potions or voodoo cemetery ceremonies. For instance Psalms 9, 67 and 112, prayed together, are helpful in money matters." And her advice on Psalms 5 and 91 is, "Don't leave home without them."

Futrell-Stancil Vows Said

FARMVILLE — Rita Faye Stancil and Steve Lewis Futrell were married Saturday afternoon in a 3 p.m. ceremony in the Marlboro Free Will Baptist Church. The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. William Scott Sowers.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Stancil of Farmville. Mr. and Mrs. Carrol Futrell of Conway are the parents of the bridegroom.

Given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, the bride wore a floor length gown with a chantilly lace train. The bodice was accented with pearls and chantilly lace. The gown featured a sweetheart neckline with half-puffed sleeves. The veil was of chantilly lace with pearls accenting the cap and train. The bride wore a lace necklace made of pearls with matching earrings, a gift from her grandmother.

Terry Gibson of Middlesex was her cousin's matron of honor. Her floor length gown of lavender chiffon and taffeta featured an off-shoulder ruffle and a ruffled skirt. She carried a bouquet of lavender and white silk flowers accented with lavender satin ribbon and white lace and wore a hat of white lace with lavender silk rosebuds.

Tammy Stancil of Farmville was her sister's maid of honor. Her floor length gown of lavender chiffon and taffeta was styled similarly. She carried a bouquet of lavender and white silk flowers accented with lavender satin ribbon and white lace. She wore a hat of white lace with lavender silk rosebuds.

Bridesmaids were Jamie Holliday of Tarboro and Tammy King of Battleboro, both cousins of the bride, and Barbara Shackleford of Farmville. Their gowns were floor length pink chiffon and taffeta styled like the other attendants. Their bouquets were pink and white silk flowers accented with pink satin ribbons and white lace and a hat of white lace with pink silk rosebuds.

Chrissy Ivey, cousin of the bride of Rocky Mount, was flower girl. She wore a white lace floor length dress with lavender sash and hat of white lace and lavender silk rosebuds.

The father of the bridegroom served as best man. Groomsmen were Ricky Vick, brother-in-law of the bridegroom of Rich Square; Gene Stancil, brother of the bride of Falcon; Joey Blake, uncle of the bride of Rocky Mount, and Jeff Stancil, brother of the bride of Farmville. Eddie Stancil, brother of the bride, served as ring bearer.

MRS. FUTRELL

The mother of the bride chose a yellow dress of polyester crepe, featuring a V-neckline. She wore a corsage of white silk roses. The mother of the bridegroom chose a mint green dress of polyester creper featuring a round neckline. She wore a corsage of white silk roses accented with pink roses and baby's breath.

Wedding music was rendered by Kathy Howell of Farmville. Vocalists were Jimmy Ivey of Wilson and Jimmy Ivey of Rocky Mount, both uncles of the bride, and Carla Pearson of Lucama. Danny Pearson of Lucama played the guitar. The trumpet was played by Steve Cobb of Farmville.

The register was attended by Calvin and Lois Moore. The wedding was directed by Jackie Holliday and Teresa Blake, aunts of the bride of Tarboro. Bobby Ivey of Whitakers, uncle of the bride, and Gene Futrell of Conway, brother of the bridegroom, greeted guests.

Immediately following the ceremony, a reception was given by the bride's parents at the church. Ivey Gibson of Middlesex, Mandy Ivey of Whitakers and Tracy Holliday of Tarboro, cousins of the bride, assisted in serving the guests. Cake was served by Jackie Holliday of Tarboro, assisted by Lois Moore of Battleboro; both are aunts of the bride. Punch was poured by Carry Barnes, aunt of the bridegroom, assisted by Sharon Blake, aunt of the bride.

Several showers were given for the bridal couple.

High Noon Wedding Performed

RALEIGH — The wedding of Valerie Grace Doggett and Peter Nelson Purcell, both of Greenville, was conducted at noon Saturday. The Rev. Michael G. Clay performed the double ring ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Wesley O. Doggett of Raleigh and the Rev. and Mrs. E.G. Purcell of Pikeville.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. The best man was Christopher L. Johnsrude.

Maid of honor was Susan L. Morgan of Greenville. Bridesmaids were Nydia Doggett, sister of the bride, and Denise D. Williams, both of Raleigh; Betty B. Purcell of Atlanta, sister of the bridegroom; Barbara A. Schwab and Mary An Lucyk, both of Greenville, and Anita M. Wheeless of Rocky Mount.

MRS. PURCELL

Ushers were Joshua R. Sonnett of Greenville, Robert D. White of Wilson, Wesley M. Satterfield of Pikeville, and Stephen Doggett and Glenn Doggett, both brothers of the bride from Raleigh.

Wedding music was performed by organist Val Parker of Greenville, soloist Joyce Shannon and trumpeteer Van Zimmerson, both of Raleigh.

A reception was held at the North Carolina State University Faculty Club in Raleigh.

After a wedding trip to Europe, the couple will live in Greenville.

Wedding Vows Are Conducted

FARMVILLE — The First Christian Church was the scene of the wedding ceremony Saturday at 11 a.m. of Jean Wells Blair and Charlie Herbert Swanner. The Rev. Tom Tunstall conducted the double ring ceremony.

Parents of the bridal couple are Russell Wells and Dorothy O. Wells, both of Farmville, and Mr. and Mrs. C.G. Swanner Jr. of Washington, N.C.

Andy Swanner of Washington, son of the bridegroom, was ring bearer. Acolytes were Briston Blair of Farmville, son of the bride, and Matthew Swanner of Washington, son of the bridegroom.

The bride wore an ivory polyester crepe tea length gown styled with flared sleeves with lace applique at the shoulders. The waistline was accented by matching appliques and a sash which tied in back. The V-back featured covered buttons. She carried a bouquet of yellow daisies.

The couple will live in Washington after a wedding trip to Pebble Beach, Emerald Isle.

The bride is a graduate of the University of North Carolina at Charlotte and is a teacher in the Pitt County schools.

The bridegroom attended East Carolina University and is president of Swindell Jewelers in Washington.

Researchers in Sweden have cautioned that noisy toys may harm hearing. A University of Goteborg study found that squeaky rubber squeeze toys held close to the ear emitted noises in the 108-decibel level, equivalent to the sound made by a chain saw. Some toy guns and firecrackers were much worse.

Response To Mother's Death Puts Her In The Doghouse

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My mother passed away, and six weeks later my much-loved dog died. When friends would tell me that they were sorry to hear about my mother's death, it would remind me of my dog, and I have replied, "Thank you, but my wonderful dog also died, and I miss him very much." I would see their eyebrows rise, then silence. But the truth of the matter is, I really loved my dog more.

My husband tells me not to mention our dog at these times. "People will not understand," he says. "They probably will think that you are strange."

Abby, why should I not say exactly how I feel? People who know me well are aware that I am a fairly straightforward person. And I don't care what the others think.

In order to spare my husband embarrassment, what do you think I should say? My dog was 14 years old, and his death left a great emptiness in my life. My mother was sick and elderly, and her passing was a relief. I hope you will say that I have a right to my honest feelings. — STRAIGHTFORWARD

DEAR STRAIGHT: Everyone has a right to his "honest feelings," but when someone expresses sympathy on the death of your mother (as sick and elderly as she may have been), for you to bring up the death of your "wonderful" dog, and how much you miss him, is demeaning to the memory of your mother.

In order to spare your husband embarrassment, just say, "Thank you" and let it go at that.

DEAR ABBY: What's wrong with me? I am very much attracted to men who smoke cigars. It doesn't matter how old the man is, or whether he's good-looking or not; if he has the aroma of a cigar on him, I just can't resist wanting to get close to him.

I'm 28 years old and considered attractive. Ever since I was a little girl I have loved the smell of cigars. My father never even smoked cigarettes, but my grandfather smoked cigars constantly, so that's probably what turned me on to loving them. I can barely remember my grandfather. He died when I was 8 years old.

Now I'm going to tell you something you won't believe. Unless there is cigar smoke around, I can't get excited about the man. I had a boyfriend who smoked cigars just to please me, but cigars made him sick and that ended our romance.

Now I think I should try to overcome this cigar mania. Would hypnosis help? Or should I see a psychiatrist? With so many people complaining about pollution and the evils of smoking, it's hard to find a cigar smoker these days. — CIGAR LOVER

DEAR CIGAR LOVER: Hypnosis might help, but I think you should see a psychiatrist. Preferably one who doesn't smoke cigars.

DEAR ABBY: I married a very wealthy man, and whenever he is angry with me, he says I married him only for his money. This isn't true and it hurts my feelings. Why does he do this, and how can I stop him? — N.T.

DEAR N.T.: You can't. He says you married him only for his money because he probably thinks that's all he has going for him.

DEAR READERS: I need your cooperation for an important survey.

Question: Have you ever cheated on your mate? How long have you been together?

You need not sign your name, but please state your age, and indicate whether you are male or female. Send letter or postcard to: Abby's Survey, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069.

WE'RE RICH.
Our Silver Solarium tanning systems deliver the richest, most natural tans this side of a tropical paradise. Because Silver has balanced the tanning rays to bathe your skin in more of the gentle UVA rays and reduced the harsher, potentially burning UVB to the absolute barest minimum.
WE'RE COOL.
Silver tanning beds feature advanced cooling systems with high power fans to keep you comfortable while you tan. And keeping the tanning tubes cool means they operate at maximum efficiency. The fans even go to work between tanning sessions, when the exclusive Aftercool system kicks in to divert any warm air away.
WE'RE FAST.
Do you remember when you had time to cultivate a suntan? It probably took weeks of careful timing out in the sun. Now you can not only tan in a way that's gentler to your skin, but you can get it fast. If you tan at all in the sun, you'll get a good base tan with just a few relaxing sessions with us. Then just a short session or two a week to maintain that great looking bronze.
YOU'RE ON.
We'll stop talking about ourselves, because we want you to get the best tan you ever had. Stop by and we'll be glad to show you how. Or call today for an appointment.

Icelandic Scholars Choose New Words

By MARCUS ELIASON
Associated Press Writer

REYKJAVIK, Iceland (AP) — Professor Baldur Jonsson holds up two typed pages of proposed Icelandic words for AIDS. As one of the keepers of the national language, it's his job to decide which word should become official.

The debate, which has been going on for two years, reflects the reverence with which Icelanders treat their language. Not for them an imported English-based acronym. Only the genuine, home-grown article will do.

Icelandic is one of the rarest of linguistic phenomena — a language that has defied the evolutionary odds to remain almost unaltered over 1,000 years. As Icelanders are fond of remarking, it is as though Anglo-Saxons were still speaking the English of Shakespeare.

To this nation of 240,000, the language brought by the Vikings embodies independence and cultural identity. Like the rugged, lava-strewn landscape itself, it is austerely beautiful, hostile to foreign implantations, steeped in its own ancient heritage.

So determined are Icelanders to keep it that way that Icelandic passports carry not just name and date of birth but also language, even though citizens whose first language is not Icelandic are rare.

Foreign words seldom take root here, unlike in the cousin countries of Scandinavia. Even the Danes, who occupied Iceland for 538 years, left few linguistic traces.

"People feel uncomfortable with words that don't sound Icelandic," explained Jonsson, who heads the Icelandic Language Committee at the University of Iceland. "They always prefer a word of their own."

The thirst for their own words produces fascinating linguistic oddities. "Skjar," a sheep's placenta, once used by farmers as window panes, has become the word for television screen. "Tolva," Icelandic for computer, fuses "tolur," or number, with "volva," an ancient prophetess.

Telephone is "simi," from an ancient word for thread. A jet plane is a "thota," from the verb "thjota," to zoom.

Even "video," which has become international coinage, did not last long here, quickly yielding to the locally evolved "myndband," or picture band.

Jonsson's list of words for the disease AIDS — acquired immune deficiency syndrome — has been culled from dozens of suggestions from around the country. It has been narrowed to about 15 possibilities, two of which are on the short list: "alnaemi," which connotes "total vulnerability," and "eythni," which connotes "total destruction."

A recent opinion poll found "eythni" was preferred by 60 percent of the public. Said Jonsson, "Officially I am neutral, but personally I think 'eythni' would be best."

Once the committee makes its decision, the chosen word will be transmitted to the state-controlled and private media, schools and the university's computerized dictionary, which already lists a staggering 600,000 words — 100,000 more than the largest Oxford English Dictionary.

The fact that people in all walks of life sent in proposals for an AIDS word demonstrated the depth of public involvement in language.

Iceland is a virtually classless society, with none of the variations of accent common in countries like Britain or Germany. Totally literate, the populace is schooled from childhood in the sagas, the written 12th- and 13th-century legends of Viking derring-do that are the source of many modern Icelandic words.

In fact, having a language so similar to the ancient Norse of the sagas gives Icelanders a constant link into their past and helps explain their passionate devotion to its preservation.

The state radio has regular programs on which listeners can debate about correct usage and, where necessary, invent Icelandic words to stave off foreign intruders.

Jonsson bemoans a tendency among newspapers to translate English sentences too faithfully, regardless of Icelandic syntax rules.

Realistic Viewpoints Of Russia's Ukraine Province

National Geographic News Service

WASHINGTON — It is time to amend the old geography textbook description of Ukraine are "the Breadbasket of the Soviet Union."

Yes, Ukrainian farms still make a huge contribution to the Soviet dinner table. On the average, they produce 26 percent of the nation's wheat, 32 percent of the corn, 58 percent of the sugar beets, 22 percent of the cattle, 27 percent of the hogs — all this from only 2.7 percent of the nation's land.

But as Mike Edwards points out in a recent issue of National Geographic, the 50 million residents of the Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic, who make up nearly a fifth of the Soviet population, also are responsible for other, very different, statistics.

From Coal to Computers

"Hard by Ukrainian grainfields rise big cities, five with a million or more people," writes Edwards. "They pour 35 percent of Soviet steel. Ukrainian factories produce automobiles, aircraft, locomotives, tractors, computers. Ukrainian mines yield nearly a third of Soviet coal, half of the iron ore, as well as manganese and titanium."

This turn to modernism has costs as well as benefits. In 1949, two-thirds of the Ukrainian population lived on farms; today it's one-third. And one of the byproducts of modernization is the presence of five nuclear power plants, one of which, Chernobyl, exploded into the world's consciousness a year ago in history's worst nuclear accident.

"Ukraine" means frontier, and many Westerners say "the Ukraine," but some expatriate Ukrainians dislike the construction because it implies that their homeland is merely a region.

Edwards and photographer Steve Raymer visited Ukraine for two months, and were offered access to areas where the official Soviet tourist agency rarely takes anyone. Raymer, for example, was permitted to photograph the modern steel mill at Krivoy Rog.

The National Geographic team also traveled to the major cities: Kiev, third largest in the Soviet Union; Odessa, a Black Sea port which handles 30 million tons of cargo a year, and Lvov, once part of Poland, part of Austria-Hungary before that, and ever the fount of Ukrainian emotion.

Ukrainians look back upon a confusing and disturbing past. They enjoyed only a brief period of independence from the end of World War I until the Soviets took control in 1920. For most of its history, Ukraine has been a land of many masters. Mongols, Lithuanians, Poles, Tartars, Ottoman Turks and Russians have ruled all or part of its 231,990 square miles. What, Edwards wondered, holds the Ukrainian people together?

Frown On Easter Eggs

"Language, yes, and old songs about Cossacks and love, and a body of literature (especially poetry) and a few art forms," he writes. "Ukrainians excel at embroidery, and created exquisitely decorated Easter eggs until the Communists frowned.

"And one thing more: faith. The people of the Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic are among the most devout in the Soviet Union."

Edwards visited numerous Ukrainian churches — Russian Orthodox, Roman Catholic and Baptist — and concluded that, though the number who attend services is small, "behind them is a thousand years of tradition."

Most priests, who work under heavy restrictions, asked about the relationship between church and state, responded diplomatically: "Normal." But one, more forthright, told Edwards: "Normal for a socialist country. And much better than in Albania."

Ukrainian steel workers and coal miners seem to thrive on the challenges. At a grassy, grimy seam of coal 2,200 feet below the surface, Edwards asked a miner why he kept such a job.

"The pay, for one thing," the miner replied. With production bonuses, he may earn more than 500 rubles a month, 200 more than a factory foreman. "But the money isn't the only thing. My father and grandfather were coal miners. We're a dynasty."

Perhaps such grit and pride were what allowed Ukrainians to deal with the nuclear disaster at Chernobyl. The government evacuated 116,000 inhabitants within 18 miles of the reactor, resettling most outside that zone. Elementary schools in Kiev were closed, and arrangements were made for thousands of children to go to Young Pioneer camps far from the city.

Children Play 'Radiation'

When Edwards and Raymer visited Kiev last fall, they found homes bearing wet cloths at the doorway — to clean radioactive dust from shoes. Kievans were advised to bathe frequently and wash their windows and walls. But adults made jokes, and children played "radiation," thrusting sticks at parked cars as if they were Geiger-counter wands.

Ukrainians had dealt with disaster before. In World War II, their land bore the brunt of the German drive to Stalingrad and the Red Army counteroffensive. The republic lost 7.5 million people, including almost 4 million civilians killed and 2.2 million taken to Germany as laborers.

The Black Sea port of Yalta, site of the final conference of the war's Big Three — Roosevelt, Churchill and Stalin — still attracts Soviet visitors to the Livadia Palace, where the conference was held.

Officials hope to lure tourists from western Europe to the rocky shores of the Crimean Peninsula, the warmest in the Soviet Union. Edwards told one official that such resorts in the West rely on four S's: sand, sea, sun and sex.

"We lack only sand," the official replied.

Stamps In The News

BY SYD KRONISH
AP Newsfeatures

Hail to the first state ratifying the U.S. Constitution — Delaware.

To commemmorate the bicentennial of Delaware's ratification, the U.S. Postal Service has issued a new 22-cent stamp. The stamp is the second postal item to be issued this year in celebration of the nation's bicentennial. A 14-cent postal card was issued on May 25 to honor the Constitutional Convention.

Upcoming on the Bicentennial agenda are statehood stamps for Pennsylvania on Aug. 26 and New Jersey on Sept. 11. A Constitution Preamble booklet pane of five stamps will be issued Aug. 28 and a "Signing of the Constitution" stamp on Sept. 17.

The upper two-thirds of the new vertical adhesive depicts a rendition of the Delaware state seal. Two Delaware native sons flank a large red plaque. At the bottom of the plaque, a white ribbon carries the state motto, "Liberty and Independence." The central portion of the plaque shows an ox, representative of the importance of animal husbandry to the state's economy.

The design description continues with the explanation that just above the ox is a strip of blue symbolizing the Delaware River. A sheaf of wheat and a stalk of corn rest near the top of the plaque as examples of Delaware agricultural products. The man at the left is a colonial farmer who cradles a scythe in his right hand and a model of a sailing ship in his left. The man at the right is a militiaman from the Revolutionary War.

Delaware is called the "First State" because its state convention, the sole such group to cast a unanimous vote, ratified the U.S. Constitution on Dec. 7, 1787 — before the ratification by the other 12 original colonies.

First-day cancellations are available to collectors.

You may purchase the stamp at your local post office and affix to your own envelope. Address the envelope on the right side at the bottom. It must be postmarked no later than Aug. 3. Send to: Customer-Affixed Envelopes, Delaware Statehood Stamp, Postmaster, Dover, DE 19901-9991.

If you prefer to have the USPS affix the stamp, enclose a money order or personal check for 22 cents per stamp — with a limit of 50 envelopes. Send to: Delaware Statehood Stamp, Postmaster, Dover, DE 19901-9992. The deadline is Aug. 3.

U.S. STAMP NOTES:

The original date of issuance for the New Jersey Statehood stamp, a 22-cent commemmorative, was July 15 but has now been changed to Sept. 11.

The first day for the William Faulkner stamp is now set for Aug. 3 in Oxford, Miss. It was originally announced for Sept. 25, the author's birthday, but was changed to coincide with a Faulkner conference at the University of Mississippi.

A special design format is being used for first-day cancellations of stamps marking the bicentennials of the nation's first 13 states. Delaware, New Jersey and Pennsylvania will have their bicentennials this year. The normal circular "bull's eye" portion of the postmark, including the date, city and ZIP code, also will appear at the left of the design.

ROCKFORD, Ill. (AP) — A policeman accused of playing six holes of golf wearing only a shirt and golf shoes has pleaded innocent to a misdemeanor charge of public indecency.

Circuit Judge Craig Peterson set bond at $1,000 for Marlin "Mongo" Peterson, said Assistant State's Attorney John Hooley.

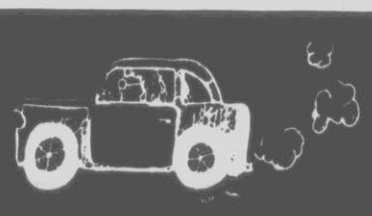

Peterson's attorney, Daniel Cain, entered the innocent plea for his client, whose appearance was waived. A pretrial hearing was scheduled for Aug. 14, Hooley said.

BETSY DRAKE LEWIS' DECORATING TIPS
Plants can add so much to any room. Remember, variety in height and color is important for the best result.
A eucalyptus tree that is 7 feet tall in a corner, combined with a 5 foot ficus tree and a 3 foot schefflera plant is a good combination. The eucalyptus adds a unique feature to a room in that it filters the air and keeps it smelling fresh. There are, however, some people who are allergic to eucalyptus. To add, color try a silk flower arrangement with coordinating colors. This adds a different medium and can be very nice.
At Betsy Drake Interiors, we offer a wide variety of plants and flower arrangements for your consideration.
We have increased our inventory dramatically and are now bursting at the seams. The spring market purchases are coming in daily and we have some really exciting new looks on display. And, for the remainder of June, everything is reduced 40 to 60 percent. I look forward to seeing you soon.

FORECAST FOR SUNDAY June 21

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Consider practical aims, ambitions and how to extend routines to include creativity. Discussing the future with influential people culd be very helpful today.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Develop idealistic goals without thought to present affairs. Socially, you could really shine tonight.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Concentrate on personal goals and future plans to achieve them. This is vital to your success in the future.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Check your partner's plans in the A.M., but keep your desires to yourself if you want them to become reality.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Plan your personal goals before the week's business, and fulfill your obligations to an influential person.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): Handle credit and community affairs conscientiously, then gain support from a superior. Enjoy your mate.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Enjoy yourself, but strengthen ties. Group activities and informal entertainment are a good way to proceed.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Balance your assets and liabilities. Stress efficiency and relationship with close friends. Be very honest today.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Start a new project, but keep old promises. Organize long-term plans for your future success.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Handle menial tasks before your romantic interests. Avoid troublemakers, and stay near people you like.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Plans for recreation and your family's future should be made. Focus on your talents and ignore your shortcomings.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Put your imagination to work planning the week's activities. Strengthen some old bonds of friendship.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Know the details of coming activities, and talk over finances with an expert to plan your future strategies.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he, or she, will have a strong talent for money and property matters, but will be a slow decision maker. Your child will have much foresight in developing new avenues of expression which can easily be made profitable. Stress education and sports requiring concentration.

FORECAST FOR MONDAY June 22

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Use common sense in organizing financial matters to start the week off right. Outline your plans n the morning, and develop the details this evening.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Consult with an expert to put your budget into shape. Practicality and money-saving is important to you now.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Find a way of making conditions suit your needs early today, and put off socializing until this evening.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): An opportunity for progress and security is available but be logical. Build your loved one's ego by being caring.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Personal desires and wishful thinking take a backseat to interpersonal relationships this evening.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): It's a day for outside activities and checking into your credit. Get to bed early after such a draining day; you'll need the rest.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Study details of a new plan thoroughly. A new contact can become a firm friend if entertained properly.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Don't procrastinate in business today. Recover on piled up work. Humor your mate today and you'll both be happy.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Be a model citizen and handle an ignored civic matter. Work hard with a partner to come to an agreement.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Get your work done early before you're worn out. Delegate responsibility to progress smoothly.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Plan plesurable appointments early, and include your mate. Don't neglect important bills and obligations.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Attend to pressing matters in order to retain all-around harmony. Postpone entertaining until later.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): To maintain harmony, keep promises on supplying important data. Finish the shopping and errands you've put off.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he, or she, will be very magnetic, but may be a procrastinator. Teach your child early to avoid this tendency, and training in psychology will help him to understand himself and others better. A business career is indicated, but don't push him or her into anything.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
6 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Three of ♠ Life is a simple finesse; or, to be more accurate, a choice of one of two simple finesses. After a spade lead, covered by the queen and king and won by the ace, which finesse should South take to make his contract of six clubs—trumps or hearts—and why?

North's jump to three clubs was a slight stretch. South made the value bid of six clubs. He was correct to select the suit slam rather than no trump. Even though his hand was perfectly balanced, North rated to have distributional features.

Obviously, after the spade lead and finding the king with East, declarer cannot afford a losing finesse because the defenders will then cash the setting trick. Should declarer first take the trump finesse, or should he cross to dummy and go after hearts immediately?

The answer to that problem becomes obvious if you ask yourself one additional question: Should either finesse succeed, would that in itself guarantee the contract?

If you take a winning trump finesse, you still won't know whether your slam is secure. Even though you have avoided a trump loser, you are still dependent on the heart finesse to get rid of your spade loser on the third heart.

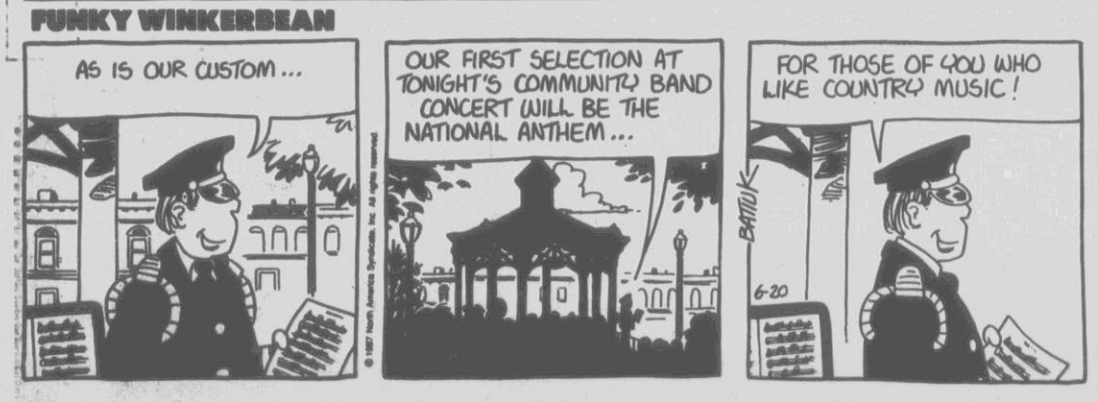

Now consider what would happen if the heart finesse were to succeed. You would repeat the finesse and discard your spade loser on a high heart. Now you could attempt the trump finesse for an overtrick, and you really wouldn't care much whether it won or lost.

Obviously, there is no point in taking a finesse which might cost the contract when another is available which would guarantee the hand. So postpone the trump finesse and cross to the table to run the jack of hearts.

If you're ready to make your mark, select this striking home. A handsome profile, unusual interior angles, and a tremendous feeling of openness create an exceptional plan. A dramatic entryway leads to an oversized foyer that faces the sunken living room. The massive fireplace, the striking angles of the room, and the sweeping views through the glass are thrilling. The theme of openness continues in the kitchen-family room combination that spills out to the deck. Upstairs, each bedroom overlooks the open space below through huge windows and along the hallway.

Designer Likes To Purchase House 'Wrecks' For All-Out Renovation

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

Most people want to move into a house that is in apple pie order. Suzanne Brangham, on the other hand, enjoys the challenge of a wreck. She has proven it by moving into 26 of the 71 homes she has renovated for profit since 1972.

Though the career of house renovation and resale is far from new, this divorced mother of one appears to have honed it to high art. In the process, she claims to have turned an original investment of $9,600 into more than $1 million worth of property and other assets.

But instead of taking a well-earned rest, the Binghamton, N.Y., native who now calls San Francisco home, has written a book about her methods. She continues to renovate at least one house a year, far below the rate that used to be typical for her each year.

Not surprisingly in one whose bright idea has proven successful, Brangham says that others can do it, too, and her book offers a map for succeess. In Brangham's opinion, the career she calls "housewrecking" is particularly appropriate for women who don't like their current home and have time to seek out a wreck they can fix up for resale or personal use.

She said such a career is most appropriate for people desiring a better home than they can afford presently, individuals who want to make a career of renovating houses and those seeking property to invest in as a sideline.

It is not necessarily appropriate for those who are happy in the home and career they already have.

The advice offered in "Housewise: The Smart Woman's Guide to Buying and Renovating Real Estate for Profit" (Clarkson N. Potter) makes it sound easy, but the self-taught interior designer admits there are some pitfalls along the way. She cautions readers to select properties carefully, making sure to obtain qualified guidance on the salability of the residence in terms of neighborhood, physical condition and financial factors at play in the community.

"I always hired a designer and an architect when I was puzzled, paying them by the hour at $50 to $100," Brangham says. She asked these professionals to look at the place and tell her what they would do if it were their own. Then she did her own legwork to bring thir ideas to fruition.

"I also read every magazine I could find and I copied a lot," she adds. She found a contractor and workers she liked and then stuck with them, usually working alongside the carpenters, plumbers and electricians to renovate the houses.

These ploys and her pursuit of quality workmanship, lots of light and arrangements that were likely to appeal to a wide range of people have resulted in sales of properties at their full asking price as a rule after being listed by real estate brokers for less than a month.

Since experience usually is the best teacher, Brangham was asked to share some of the information she had garnered from the 140 homes she has renovated. "I can usually tell in a half hour what to do and what not to do," she says.

Recently, for example, she visited a house outside Boston. The house cost $170,000, had a bathroom on the first floor but no bathrooms on the second floor, where there were three bedrooms, one with no closet. An undesirable feature of the main floor was a warren of small rooms, including a tiny kitchen.

The ground floor's tiny rooms would be opened by tearing down walls. In place of the small rooms there would be an enlarged kitchen and a large open living area. The existing old fashioned walk-in pantry would be kept and some of the old kitchen cabinets would remain with their doors removed for open storage.

Brangham points out that this house's dilapidated condition and old fashioned layout were not so much of a drawback as might be imagined. "I look for the potential in totally derelict buildings. When they are in terrible condition, I don't feel guilty about ripping everything out. I prefer to do lots of renovation to get exactly the quality and layout I want."

Warm Weather Costs You More

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans confronting their May electric bills are finding that unusually warm weather cost them some $300 million more than normal for air conditioning, a government study shows.

The monthly Climate Impact Assessment for May estimates residential air conditioning costs for the month at $2.8 billion, or $300 million more than would have been expected in normal May weather.

The result was an average cost of air conditioning for May was just over $68 per home, nearly $7 more than normal.

The increase stemmed from temperatures which averaged 3 degrees to 6 degrees Fahrenheit above normal during the month.

While air conditioning costs were above normal in every part of the nation, the biggest departure was in the east south central states, where bills averaged more than $17 above normal.

And next was the east north central region, where customers paid more than $10 more than would have been expected during average May weather.

The Climate Impact Assessment is issued monthly by the Assessment and Information Services Center, a division of the National Environmental Satellite, Data and Information Service.

On The House
By ANDY LANG

Planning to paint the outside of your house? Remember the truism that no paint is better than the surface underneath it. If the surface isn't properly prepared, it makes very little difference how skillful the painter is.

Surface preparation is the name of the game. Neglect it and you are half way to poor results. The trouble usually shows up in the form of blistering, peeling, alligatoring, checking or flaking — sometimes all of them.

While paint failures generally are attributed to poor paint or the failure of the painter to handle the brush or roller properly, both of which sometimes occur, water or moisture usually is the major culprit.

If water gets behind the paint — whether because of faulty gutters, openings in the roof or walls, or through interior passageways — it lifts the exterior coat. For instance, excess moisture in the house that can't escape can seep through the interior walls to the outside. That's why peeling sometimes occurs on the outside wall of a house adjacent to the kitchen or another room from which moisture is generated.

A vapor barrier is needed to stop the moisture from getting outside. This barrier can be placed inside the outer wall. Some interior wall paints are formulated to act as a barrier. Vents in the outside wall can prevent the trouble, or a kitchen exhaust fan that draws out moisture.

When latex paint is applied over an oil paint designed to chalk, it may not bond properly. An oil-based primer should be applied before the latex. In most cases the surface should be dry, but that's not necessary if a latex paint designed for damp surfaces is used.

Blistered, peeled or alligatored surfaces must be scraped and sanded before repainting the outside of a house. Professionals may use a torch or strong chemical, but extreme care should be taken.

Moisture is but one reason why exterior house paint can be problematic. Applying a second coat before the first dries and using non-compatible primers and top coats are two others. If different brand primers and paints are used, read the labels carefully and get the dealer's advice.

The two aforementioned problems create what is called checking or alligatoring, so-named because the surface resembles the skin of an alligator. Checking is a milder form of alligatoring.

If exterior wooden shakes or shingles are stained once, continue to stain them. If you want to change to paint, a priming is essential. Be sure of what you want because removing paint from shingles and shakes is a messy procedure.

Surface preparations for painting include caulking gaps where rain can enter, preceded by a thorough check of areas around doors and windows, utility outlets and exhaust pipes. Also make sure to remove mildew, dull glossy spots and steel-wool loose rust before painting.

Getting your house ready to paint usually takes more time than painting it.

(All matters pertaining to painting your house are included in Andy Lang's booklet, "Paint Your House Inside and Out," which can be obtained by sending 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, NY 11743.)

Atahualpa, the last Inca king of Peru, was strangled in 1533 on the orders of Spanish conquistador Francisco Pizarro.

Here's The Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — I will be putting underlayment plywood over an old attic floor so I later can install resilient floor tiles on top of the plywood. The directions call for the use of special adhesives rather than nails to hold the underlayment in place and remove them later. It seems to me it would be better to allow the nails to remain where they have been put rather than going to the trouble of taking them out again. What is your advice?

A. — Presumably, you are being instructed to use adhesives to avoid the later possible problem of nail popping, which does not occur very often. The "temporary" nails are to hold the plywood to the old floor until the adhesive has set thoroughly. If you allow the nails to remain, you are defeating part of the purpose of the procedure, which is to prevent nail-popping. It is important you use an adhesive specially formulated for use with underlayment. Sometimes it is the same kind used for interior applications.

Q. — I recently took up woodworking. I always read about drilling a pilot hole for a screw, especially when working with hardwood. My problem is I have to drill more than one hole in order to make the screw fit tightly. Is there some special way to do this?

A. — Yes. Rather than using a regular bit or bits for the job, buy a few pilot-hole bits of different sizes. These bits make pilot holes that take care of the different diameters of the same screw, which means that you have to drill only once to get a pilot hole that will do the job.

Q. — I cut up an old felt hat and found the pieces excellent for rubbing wood finishes with pumice powder and oil. I thought I read somewhere that the powder should be rubbed in with a circular motion. Doesn't that contradict the old advice about rubbing with the grain?

A. — It sure does. And if that's what you really read, the advice was incorrect. Pumice powder and oil should be rubbed in the direction of the grain.

(The techniques of using varnish, shellac, lacquer, stain, bleach, remover, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," which can be obtained by sending 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P. O. Box 477, Huntington, NY 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column.)

Q. What is the difference between BT and milky spore disease?

A. Bacillus thuringiensis, commonly called BT, is a bacterial disease of caterpillars. It affects gypsy moths, cabbage looper, armyworms, imported cabbageworms, corn earworms and certain other caterpillars. Milky spore disease is the common name for a disease caused by the bacterium Bacillus popilliae. The diease affects Japanese beetle grubs and certain other grubs. Products containing both of these biological controls can be purchased from various sources. Products containing milky spore disease need to be used over a wide area to be most effective.

Q. Is there a national society for people interested in palms?

A. Contact The Palm Society, Inc. It is located, surprisingly, in Kansas. The full address is The Palm Society, Inc., Box 368, Lawrence, Kansas 66044.

Q. I have round pellets in the soil of all the shrunbs I bought from a local nursery. Are these eggs of some pest?

A. They sound like pellets of Osmocote, a slow-release fertilizer. Slow-release fertilizers are sometimes formulated with a resin coat that allows the fertilizer to be slowly released into the soil. When most of the fertilizer has been released, the pellet becomes transparent and swollen to about the size of an imagined pest egg. Slug eggs are transparent at one stage of development, but slug eggs are sticky, moist and usually laid in batches with the eggs stuck together. Fetilizer pellets are not sticky. Some insect eggs are about the size of fertilizer pellets, but insect eggs are not transparent (translucent sometimes, but more often opaque).

From Single Family Homes To Townhomes & Condominiums

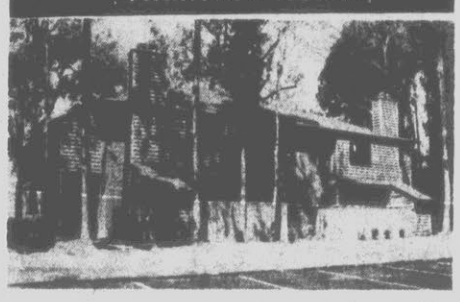

... Another Reason To Feel At Home With Ball & Lane

Treetops

A Neighborhood For All Seasons.

Treetops is a unique neighborhood of townhomes, condominium Villas and single family homes. It's rare in the Greenville area to find such prestigious and affordable new homes nestled in a quiet wooded setting. Plus, all of our new homes are backed by a Ten Year Home Owners Warranty. And the Treetops lifestyle has never been better since you can enjoy the new swimming and tennis recreation center.

TREETOPS VILLAS

Villas are stylish and spacious new homes. The list of special features is impressive and makes owning your own Villa a pleasure. Also, with today's low interest rates and Villa prices from $45,900, you can't afford to rent these days! Builder pays up to 2½ points and $1,000 closing costs.

Priced From $45,900 To $46,500

TREETOPS TOWNHOMES

Our Treetops Townhome sales have been brisk. So brisk that we ran out! Roomy two bedroom designs, umcompromised quality and an unsurpassed wooded setting are the reasons why. But more Treetops Townhomes are being carefully handcrafted and will be ready soon. To make it even better, the builder pays up to 2½ points and $1,000 towards closing costs. All this makes a Treetops Townhome a satisfying investment.

$59,900 to $66,900

TREETOPS SINGLE FAMILY HOMES

All prices include up to 2 points

All these new homes deliver the space and comfort of individual homes, but offer the convenience of townhome living...a nominal community service fee provides for lawn care and long term maintenance of your home. They're perfect for the busy professional or people who don't want the bother of yard work or tedious exterior maintenance. Sell your lawn mower and extension ladder and join us at Treetops.

THE DAILY REFLECTOR

Greenville, N.C. Sunday, June 21, 1987

AN EXTERIOR VIEW — The house located off Moye Boulevard near Pitt County Memorial Hospital is of red brick. Guests using the drive-through front entrance will be greeted by a statue of Ronald McDonald, McDonald's Corporation's mascot for which the house is named.

Ronald McDonald House To Open This Afternoon

Text By Carol Tyer
Photos By Tommy Forrest

The first Ronald McDonald House, built in Philadelphia in 1973, was referred to as "the house that love built" by the many people who worked on that support facility for the Children's Hospital of Philadelphia.

This afternoon the eastern North Carolina "house that love is building" is being dedicated, displayed and opened for service. The non-profit "home away from home" for the families of children hospitalized or having outpatient care at Pitt County Memorial Hospital is located across Moye Boulevard from Pitt County Memorial Hospital. It will serve as a support facility for the Children's Hospital of Eastern North Carolina, the pediatric care component of PCMH.

The operator of the house will be the Children's Services of Eastern Carolina Inc., the private non-profit corporation formed by hundreds of volunteers from throughout this region to build the house. The corporation's board of directors consists of volunteer parents, hospital and East Carolina University School of Medicine representatives, and officials of the McDonald's Corporation which originally funded the project.

Members of the board of directors emphasize that, while the house is built and will serve its first guest families tonight, the project is not complete. There's still money to be raised to pay off the debt and there will be ongoing costs and volunteer skills and services needs.

The two acres of land on which the Greenville house is located is owned by Pitt County. The cost of the house is approximately $1.2 million, and it's anticipated that it will cost about $75,000 a year to operate it.

According to Robert Adams, a member of the board of directors, it's hoped that the remaining construction costs can be paid off by donations given within the next six months.

With the opening of the Greenville house, there are more than 100 Ronald McDonald houses throughout the United States and in several other countries. This house has 20 guest bedrooms, one specially equipped for the handicapped. Other houses' guest space varies from eight to more than 30 bedrooms.

North Carolina now has Ronald McDonald houses completed in Durham and Winston-Salem. Chapel Hill has one under construction.

People who stay at the house will have full use of the common area on the first floor including a large living area, a self-service double kitchen, a self-service laundry room, a dining room, a children's playroom, a teen-agers' and adults' game room, and a quiet room for meditation and consultation.

Each bedroom will be assigned for whatever period each family needs it. Each family will be responsible for room care while they are guests and when they leave. Most rooms have two double beds, but a few have a double bed with pullout trundle beds. Portable cribs and rollaway beds will be available.

Each bedroom in the house is decorated and furnished through donations. Each has cost approximately $5,000. Funds were provided by various individuals and groups from throughout the East — groups as varied as Hyde County residents led by their volunteer rescue squad members and the Down East Gold Wing Motorcycle Association.

Many common areas of the house are also gifts of various community groups. For instance, the foyer was furnished by the University Kiwanis Club, the quiet room by Cornerstone Missionary Baptist Church, and the reception area by persons honoring the memory of Greenville native Robert Clark. Books available in several different rooms are from Waldenbooks. Carpeting throughout was a joint gift of the Dupont Company which provided the fiber and Fieldcrest which did the weaving.

A focal point of the foyer is a large wall sculpture of hand-made red clay which displays plaques with names of the individuals, organizations and businesses whose financial contributions made the house possible. The wall was created by Susan Clellan, a Winston-Salem sculptor, who presented the winning design in a state-wide juried artists competition. A built-in aquarium is a memorial to the late Mark Potter, a Pitt County child.

Guest families who can afford to pay will be charged $10 a night to stay there, but no one will ever be turned away for not having money and those who can pay more per night will be encouraged to do so.

A spokesman for the Children's Services organization said it is hoped that the house will serve not only as lodging for the families who use it, but as a setting for and a source of emotional support among them.

The McDonald Corporation contributed $225,000 toward the construction and has promised ongoing financial support. The remaining construction funds are being raised by the Children's Services of Eastern North Carolina from individuals, service clubs, civic groups, and private business and industry from throughout the 30 counties that the Children's Hospital serves as a regional referral center.

The house manager is Tony Price. He and his wife will live in an apartment on the premises. Cleaning and other services will be contracted with Pitt Memorial Hospital and other businesses in the communities. Many services like linen service are in-kind donations, as were many of the components of the house.

Other staffing of the house, including full-time responsibility for receptionist duties, will be handled by volunteers.

Today's dedication and opening of the house are the realization of a dream held by thousands of people in this region since the late 1970's. The Children's Services organization was formed in March, 1984 and money-raising began about that time.

Public participation in the dedication ceremony at 2 p.m. and/or the 3 p.m. ribbon-cutting is invited. Tours will be available from 3 to 5 p.m.

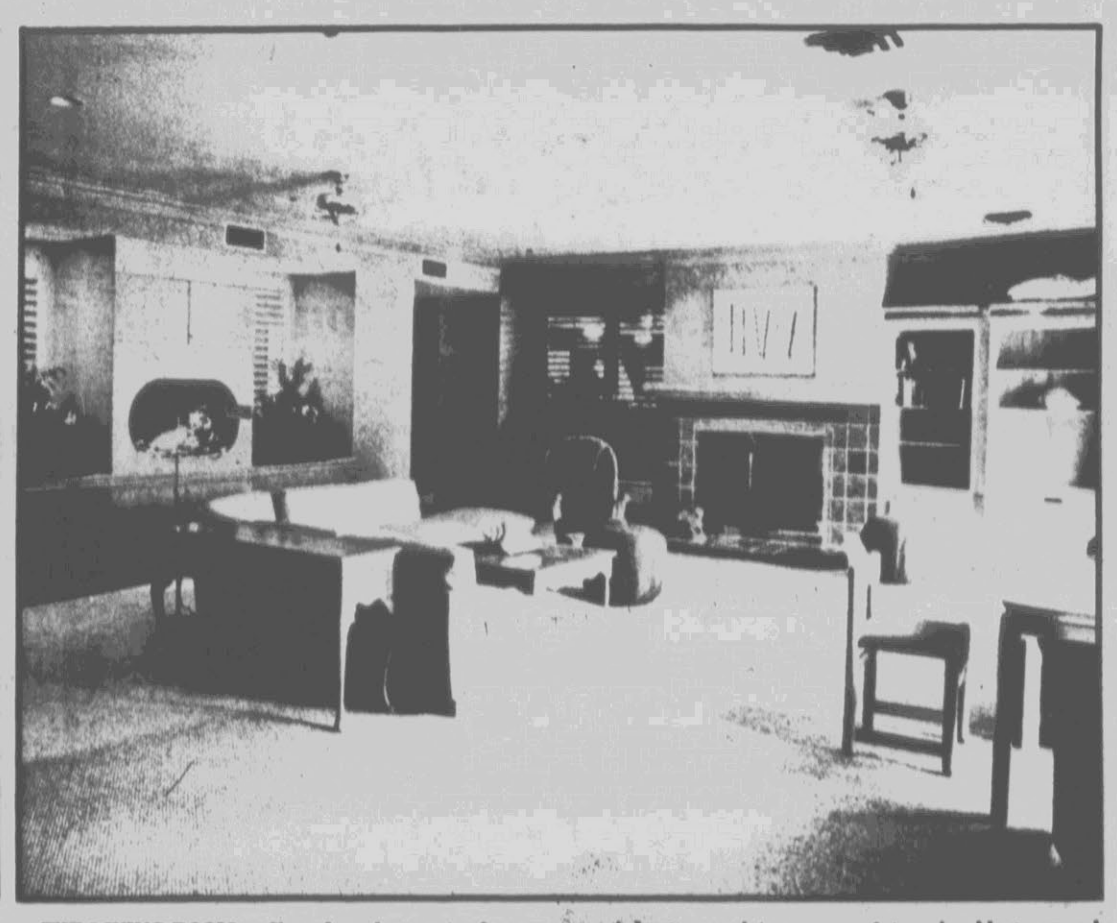

Anyone who would like to help in the continuing gift to Eastern North Carolina children and their families may contact the Children's Services of Eastern Carolina office, P.O. Box 7087, Greenville, N.C. 27834; phone, 757-1241.

CHILDREN'S PLAYROOM — Decorated in vivid colors, the playroom offers an array of toys, books and games, and even an imaginative car bed for children not feeling up to moving around the room. It was decorated and furnished with money raised during a gala reception soon after the building was completed.

THE FOYER — A red clay recognition wall which displays plaques with names of people who have made sizeable donations to the house is a focal point of the front entrance area of the house.

THE LIVING ROOM — Shared use by guests of common areas of the house will be encouraged. The living room is large enough to accommodate a sizeable group and joint or varied activities.

Wildlife Prints Available

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

The time is now for North Carolina hunters and collectors of wildlife art prints to order the 1987-88 stamps and prints for both the North Carolina sportsman's license and the North Carolina duck stamp.

The Arts & Camera Shop in downtown Greenville is one of the outlets for purchase of these items authorized by the North Carolina Wildlife Resources Commission.

Meg Laughinghouse, agent at Arts & Camera for these items, says "the deadline for ordering the stamps and prints is June 30 in both instances."

The stamps are valid for use in North Carolina during the 1987-88 fiscal year beginning July 1, 1987 and ending June 30, 1988.

"The prints for both the sportsman's license and for the duck stamps are on high quality paper, are signed and numbered by the artists," Ms. Laughinhouse said.

"Both are limited edition of North Carolina wildlife prints. Based on production figures for the past few years, this new issue will run to about a total of 2,000 prints for each edition."

The price for the North Carolina sportsman's license print is $90 and for the duck stamp, $140.50. "The size of each print, in full natural colors, is six and one-half by nine inches," Ms. Laughinghouse said, "That price is for unframed prints."

Prices for the duck stamp is $5.50, and for copies signed by the artist, $8.50. The sportsman's license stamp is $7.50, and signed by the artist stamp, $9.50.

"Signed stamps and unsigned are both valid for hunting use," said Ms. Laughinghouse. "People who are collectors as well as some hunters generally like to have the stamp signed by the designer."

The firm Sport'En Art of Sullivan, Illinois is the publisher of the two prints of wildlife art.

For more information and to order the above items, visit the Art & Camera Frame Shop and Gallery at 528 South Cotanche Street, or call Meg Laughinghouse at 752-4620.

Indian Museum Opens At Frisco

FRISCO — A new Outer Bank attraction has opened in the village of Frisco on Hatteras Island. The Frisco Native American Museum, which opened in mid-June, features authentic collections of Indian artifacts.

The museum was conceived by Carl Bornfriend to house the numerous items he has collected over a period of more than 40 years. On display are an ancient dugout canoe, baskets and intricate weavings, bead work and jewelry, rare pottery, collections of peace pipes, art work and religious artifacts.

Bornfriend, a teacher in the Dare County schools, has frequently used the material in classroom lectures, for films and for hands-on demonstrations and educational projects.

The museum center will be the site this summer of several special presentations and activities including classes for adults sponsored by the College of the Albemarle, Elizabeth City, and a Saturday youth program with limited available registration.

From now until mid-August, the museum will be open daily. After mid-August, it will oepn Fridays through Sundays. Admission is free.

Frisco is located about 60 miles south of Nags Head, or about 175 miles from Greenville via highway.

For more details call 995-4440 or write to Bornfriend at: P.O. Box 399, Frisco, N.C., 27936. For information about Hatteras Island and the Outer Banks, call 473-2138 or write to: Dare County Tourist Bureau, P.O. Box 399, Manteo, N.C., 27954.

Mollie Was One Of The Guys

By MARNI McENTEE
Associated Press Writer

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Few women among the first settlers of the American West have been portrayed by historians as individualists.

And those who have been were often considered notorious or crazy. One such was Mary Sawyer, also known as Mollie Monroe.

Sawyer arrived in central Arizona in about 1860 when she was 20 years old. Historical accounts link her to a prospector named George Monroe. While Sawyer and Monroe probably never married, the census taker noted they lived together in 1870 in Wickenburg.

Sawyer's story has been resurrected by Susan L. Johnson, a writer and Yale University graduate student in history, in an article on cohabitation in central Arizona mining towns from 1863-73. It is included in a collection of essays about the role of frontier women, "The Women's West," edited by Susan Armitage and Elizabeth Jameson.

"Whatever the nature of their relationship, it is clear that Sawyer did not confine herself to a traditional wifely role," Johnson said.

"The 'boys' were out last week prospecting. George Monroe, Joe Fuggit, Wm. Gellaspie, Tom Graves and Molly struck the galena lode, and styled it the 'Knock Down,'" she wrote, citing an 1872 newspaper article in the Prescott "Miner."

Sawyer's name is otherwise absent from historical records until 1877, when she was declared insane. She spent the remaining 25 years of her life in asylums, except for a brief escape in 1895.

"For several days (Phoenix) area newspapers reported on the sheriff's attempts to trail her through the hot sand and mountain rocks, reminding readers of her younger days in central Arizona when she 'would invariably dress in male attire' and 'could ride anything with four feet, chew more tobacco and swear harder than any man' in the territory," Johnson writes.

But Sawyer eventually was caught by Indians and turned over to authorities.

New Shows On View At St. John's

WILMINGTON — Two new exhibitions are currently showing at St. John's Museum of Art, 114 Orange Street, Wilmington, to be on view to August 29.

Claude Howell, retired chairman of the art department at UNC-Wilmington, is showing for the first time a group of sketches of nude male models, drawn between 1956 and 1981. The human figure has played an important role in Howell's art, which is owned by numerous museums including the Greenville Museum of Art and the North Carolina Musuem of Art, Raleigh.

The other exhibition is that of artist Michael Van Hout, titled Aquarium.

Admission to St. John's is free. Gallery hours are from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesdays through Saturdays.

Remains Of Numerous Dinosaurs Found In Central Texas

By BORIS WEINTRAUB
National Geographic News Service

WASHINGTON — The remains of large numbers of dinosaurs, from hatchlings to adults, have been found in central Texas, giving scientists a rare opportunity to study the growth of the prehistoric reptiles and to investigate the behaviour patterns of young dinosaurs.

Because so many dinosaur offspring, all of a single type, were found together in what appear to be holes or dug pits, scientists excavating them believe that they have found clues to dinosaur nesting, or at least to the ways in which the ancient animals gathered in a group shortly after hatching.

Two-Legged Vegetarians

The dinosaur bones, about 115 million years old, are from a primitive, two-legged, fruit-and-vegetable-eating creature known as a hypsilophondont. They were found last fall in sedimentary deposits on the shores of Lake Proctor, about 85 miles southwest of Fort Worth. Lake Proctor was created by the Army Corps of Engineers as a flood-control project in the early 1960s.

Dale A. Winkler of Southern Methodist University, who is leading the scientific study of the fossilized bones, says the site is unusual because, except for a handful of ancient crocodile bones and a single tooth from a carnivorous dinosaur, it has produced only hypsilophodont remains.

Winkler's team, with support from the National Geographic Society, had expected to find at least some bones or teeth of primitive mammals, or the bones of a variety of dinosaurs. "I don't really understand why they're not there," Winkler admits.

The team includes Louis L. Jacobs, also of SMU, and Phillip A. Murry of Tarleton State University in Stephenville, Texas.

But the absence of other animals is one factor that leads Winkler to believe that the site can provide information about hypsilophodont behavior. He speculates that the dinosaurs returned over a long time period because the locality had certain characteristics that attracted only them and no other creatures of that period.

"There may have been some particular resource there," he says. "Perhaps they had their nest where there was a certain abundant food available, or water, or a lack of predators. Since the site was semi-arid, they may have gone there to seek out fresh water, and the environment was limiting to most other dinosaurs, particularly predatory ones."

"They were fast runners who lived in semi-arid environments," Horner says. Their remains have been found in groups only from Egg Mountain, the Isle of Wight, and an African site that hasn't been studied yet. "The rest that have been found are isolated finds," he says.

Winkler's team has prepared one complete adult specimen, other adult bones and numerous juvenile specimens, including at least 10 that were found together in one small block of sediment. By comparing the size of the creature's thigh bones, from the thin tiny bone of a very young dinosaur to the longer, thicker bone of an adult, the scientists will be able to learn how dinosaurs grew and how they functioned as they matured.

The juveniles were the size of chickens or turkeys, and adults were 10 to 12 feet long from head to tail, Winkler says.

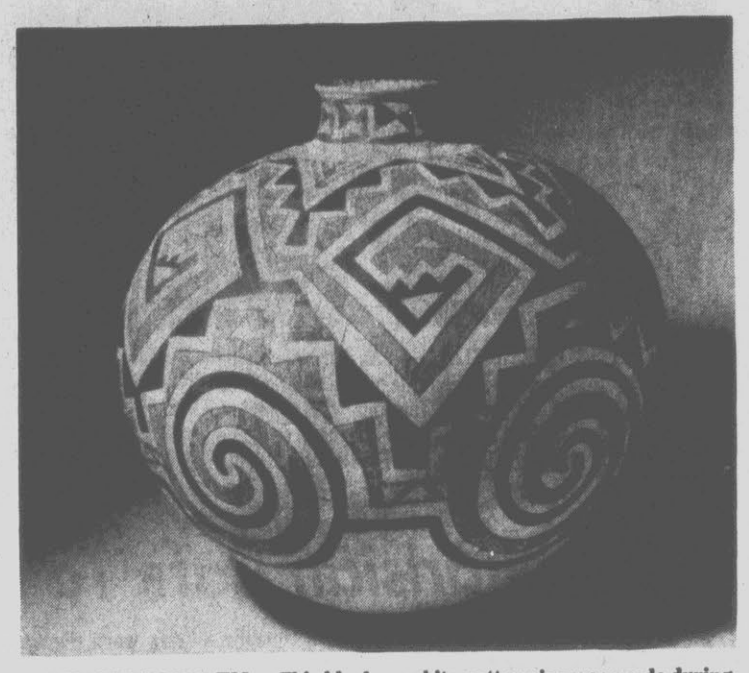

Scientists began studying the Lake Proctor site in 1985, seeking the remains of poorly understood mammals from the early Cretaceous period. Instead they found dinosaur bones, leading them to start mapping and quarrying.

Lake Level Fluctuates

Work stopped for a while in 1986 because the lake's level rose, burying some of the areas where the team was digging. But when the level dropped last fall, the scientists discovered that new fossil-producing sites had been exposed.

Lake Proctor was opened in 1963. The area where the dinosaur remains were later found was maintained at the time by the Corps of Engineers as a recreation site for off-road vehicles.

Since the bones were found, the Corps has cooperated with the scientists in preventing vehicles from using the area. But the site is isolated, and the scientists are concerned about further damage from erosion and human intrusion.

A MAJOR PROBLEM — This black-on-white pottery jar was made during the high point of the cliff-dwelling Anasazi Indian civilizatin of the southwestwrn United States about A.D. 1100. Largely because of looters' depradations, such intact pieces are extremely rare and valuable. Archeologists agree that public education is an effective way to deter well-intentioned amateur collectors. But exploiters who sell artifacts for huge profits are another matter. GONZALEZ GETS PRIZE

NEW YORK (AP)—Xavier Gonzalez, muralist, draftsman and sculptor, has received Columbia University's Brevoort-Eickemeyer Prize.

Gonzalez, 89, of New York City, received a certificate and $1,000. The prize is awarded every five years to an artist selected by the National Academy of Design in New York.

Gonzalez' work is represented in the collections of the Metropolitan Museum of Art and the Whitney Museum of American Art, both in New York City; the Witte Museum in San Antonio, Texas, and the Museum of Fine Arts in Seattle, among others.

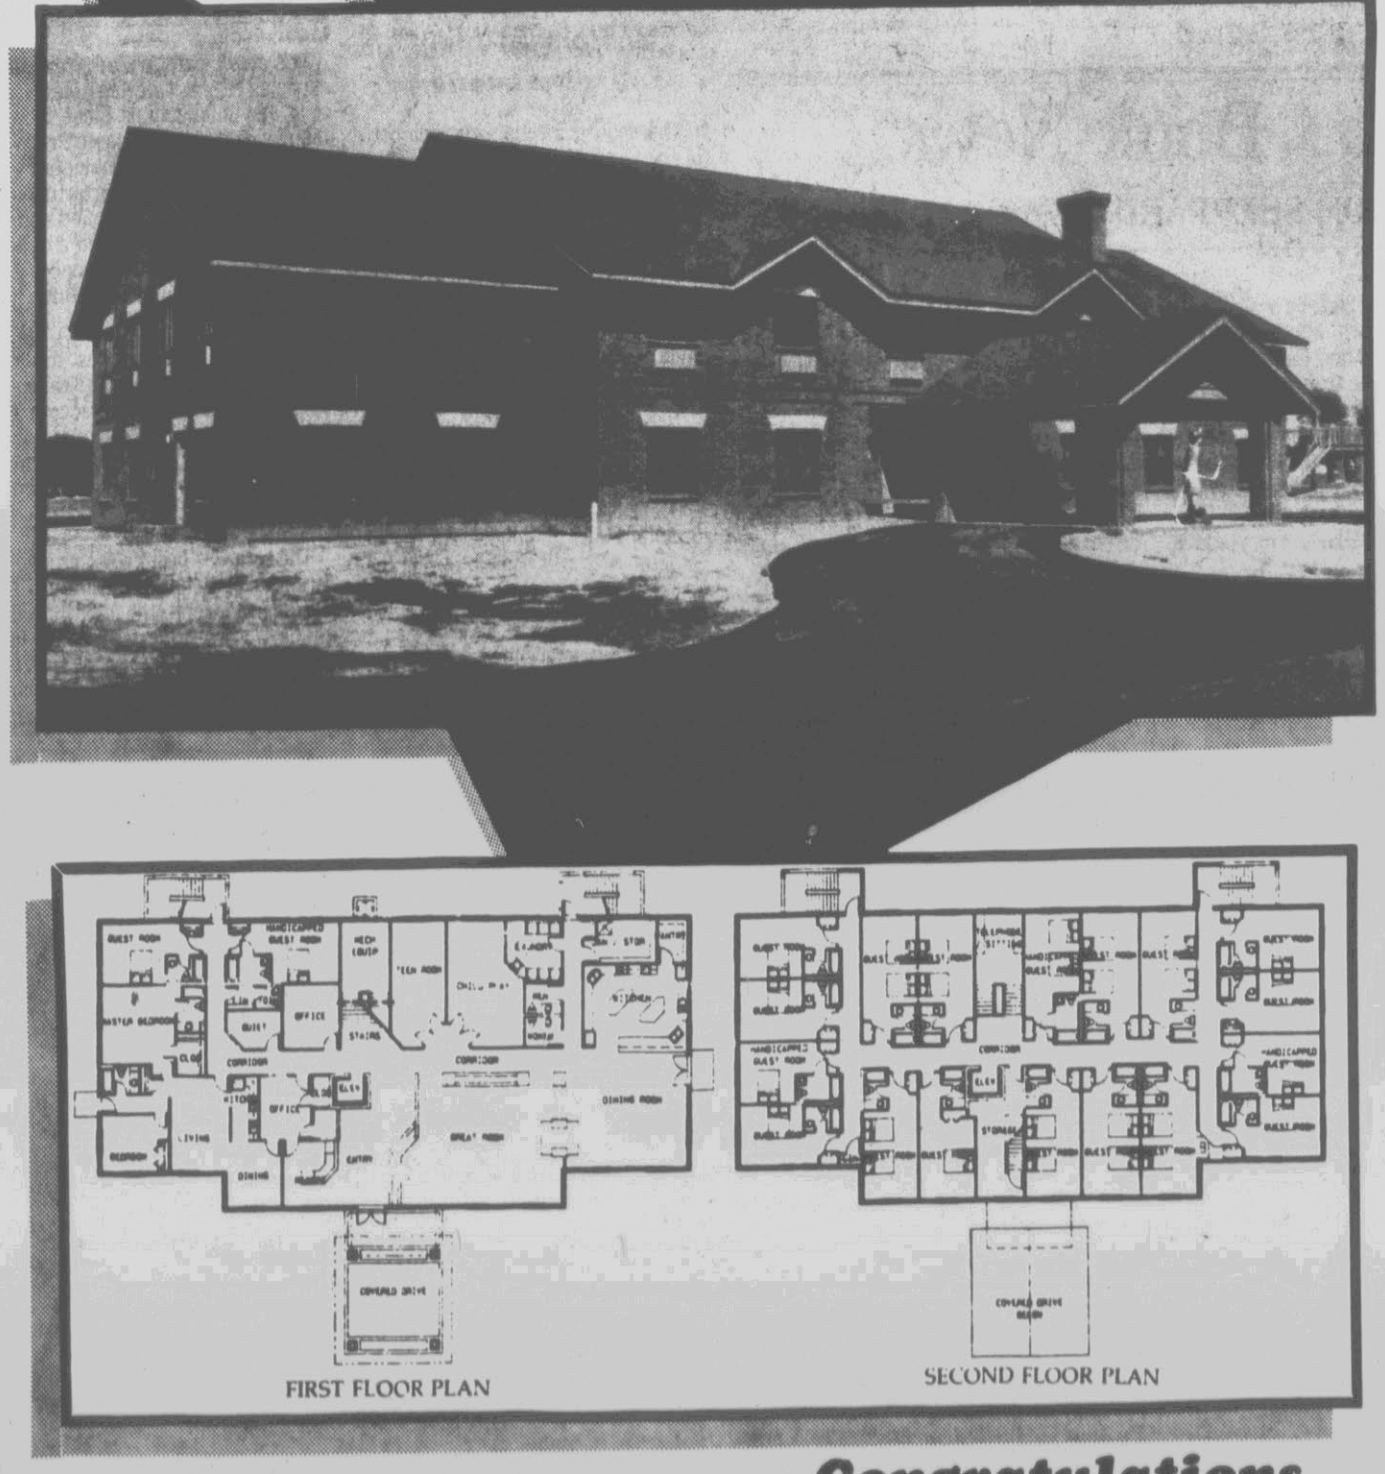

PIANO IS FAVORITE

NEW YORK (AP) — In the United States, 57 million people play one or more musical instruments.

Of those, 20.6 million play the piano, making it the most popular musical instrument, according to the American Music Conference.

A BEDROOM — Each of the 20 guest bedrooms of the Ronald McDonald House is simply but tastefully furnished. Each had a private bath adjoining.

$5,000 Reynolds Grant To Greenville Museum Of Art

Mary Anne Pennington, executive director of the Greenville Museum of Art, has announced the award of a $5,000 grant by the Z. Smith Reynolds Foundation of Winston-Salem.

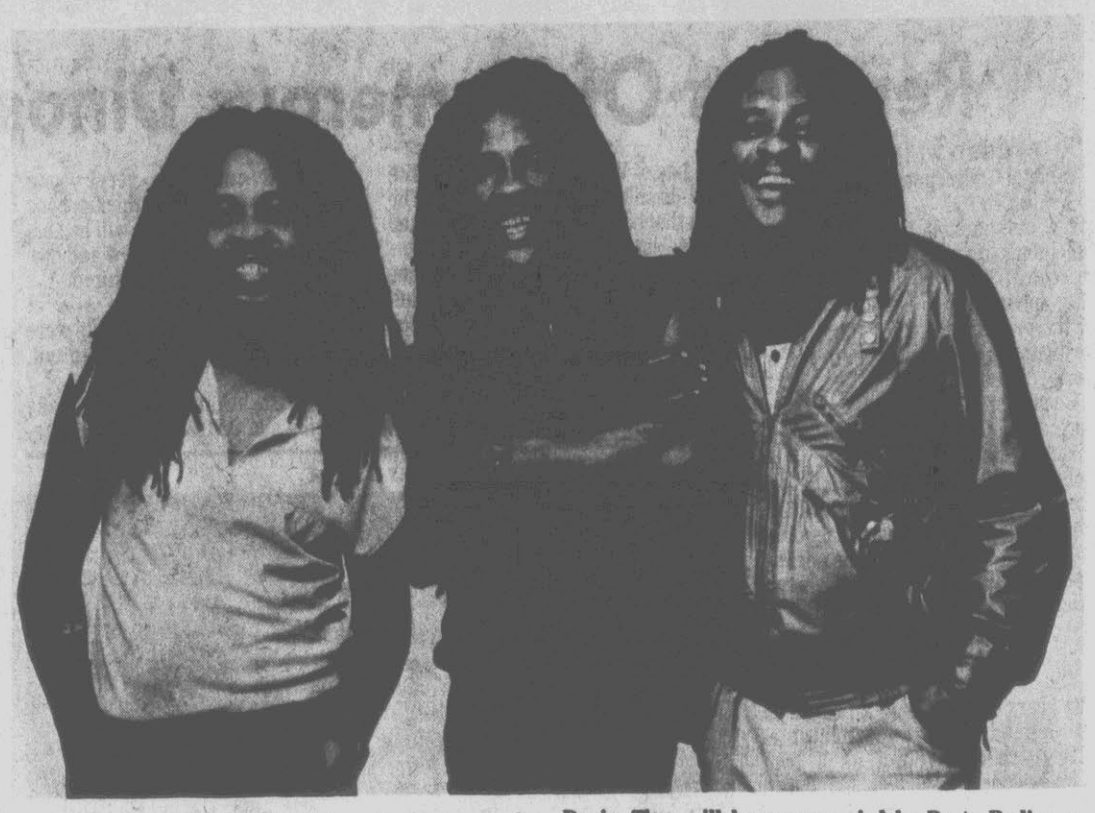

The grant funds will be used for conservation treatment of the "Landmarks of North Carolina" portfolio etchings by Louis Orr and art works in the WPA Graphics Collection.

The Center for Conservation and Technical Studies at the Harvard University Museums will carry out the conservation process which includes treating fungal growth resulting from years of exposure to high humidity levels prior to installation of air conditioning at the museum.

Other treatment procedures will cover the removal of masking tape applied in the 1950s and restoration of original paper color which has yellowed due to high wood pulp content.

This is the second grant awarded the Greenville Museum of Art by the Z. Smith Reynolds Foundation. The first was awarded in 1985 for the purchase of the museum Artmobile used in the Museum in the Schools Program and for assistance in museum exhibitions.

The Z. Smith Reynolds Foundation was established in 1936 as a memorial to the youngest son of the founder of R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Company. The Foundation, as the beneficiary of the income from the Zachary Smith Reynolds Trust and the William Neal Reynolds Trust, has now made grants totaling more than $132 million to recipients in all of North Carolina's 100 counties.

A FIRST FOR GREENVILLE — As far as can be determined, the concert in Greenville on Tuesday will be the first time that a troupe from Jamaica will be performing here. The Itals, the three singers of the group, are — left to right, David Isaacs, Keith Porter and Ronnie Davis. They will be accompanied by Roots Radics, a five-member instrumental group. The concert, sponsored jointly by Comfort Inn of Greenville and The Attic, will begin at 10 p.m. Tuesday at The Attic. Admission is $4 per person.

Fenley And Dancers To Perform At Reynolds Theater In Durham

WINS AWARDS — Kipper Hair of Down East Dance and Atlantic Dance Theater, Greenville, recently won three regional first places in showstopper national talent compeitions. He won at competitions held in Lexington and Durham. His choreography for "Fabulous Feet," "The Chicago Overture" for two trios, and a duet "Opus 1" took the honors. Hair is shown performing with fellow teacher Lainey Tant. The two will next perform at a national talent competition event July 5-10 at Myrtle Beach, S.C.

DURHAM — Molissa Fenley and Dancers will perform at Reynolds Industries Theater on the Duke University campus on Monday and Tuesday.

All performances are at the Reynolds Industries Theater and begin at 8 p.m. Tickets cost $10 and are on sale at Page Auditorium Box Office. For more information call 684-4059.

Ms. Fenley last appeared at ADF in 1981 as a part of its Emerging Generation Program which has commissioned and presented works by such choreographers as Twyla Tharp, Laura Dean and Pilobolus.

Ms. Fenley is also a member of the 1987 ADF faculty.

The company will perform "Second Sight" and "Esperanto" parts 1, 2, and 3. "Second Sight" has a ritualistic quality harkening back to Fenley's Nigerian childhood.

"Esperanto," in three parts is created for three women and certain forms of Asian dance.

After studying in New York with teachers from the Erick Hawkins School, Fenley formed her own company in 1977. Athleticism and speed are integral to Fenley's work.

Her choreographic work has been commissioned by the Kitchen Dance Theater, BAM's Next Wave Festival, Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival as well as the American Dance Festival. She and her dancers have toured nationally and internationally since 1980.

Writers To Meet Tuesday Evening

The second meeting for members of the Greenville Writers Club in the month of June will be at 8 p.m. Tuesday at the home of Mrs. Helen Parks, 1609 Oaklawn Drive.

Those who plan to attend and wish to share rides are to meet at 7:30 p.m. at the Krispy Kreme Doughnut Shop on East Tenth Street.

Famed Parisian Cafe To Be Restored

By MARILYN AUGUST
Associated Press Writer

PARIS (AP) — Danton and Robespierre plotted the French Revolution from the velvet-covered benches of the Cafe Procope while Voltaire and Diderot pondered the human condition.

A century later, the cozy cafe became the favorite haunt of novelists George Sand and Honore de Balzac, and in the era of romanticism, Alfred de Musset, Theophile Gautier, Paul Verlaine and Arthur Rimbaud were seen at its tables.

The Cafe Procope, on the Rue de l'Ancienne Comedie in the heart of the Latin Quarter, is having a birthday. Instead of a party with cake and candles, its owners announced plans for renovations to make the historic watering hole more like it once was.

"We want the Procope to be a real cafe-tea salon during the day," Pascal Massoni said in an interview.

Starting this summer, Massoni said, workers will put up new pomegranate-red velvet wallpaper, restore luster to tarnished bronze fixtures and coat the centuries-old ceilings and ornate moldings and paneling with fresh paint.

The cafe will continue serving typical French food at mealtimes, Massoni said.

The oldest cafe in Paris, the Procope has been a watering hole for artists and intellectuals since it was founded in 1686 by Franceso Procopio dei Coltelli, a Sicilian nobleman who came to Paris to make his fortune.

Coltelli served sherbet and coffee, a "new aroma" considered a delicacy because it "heightened the senses," instead of dulling them like wines and brandy.

The cafe's success was assured when, in 1689, the Comedie Francaise opened its new theater across the street, drawing actors, theater-goers, critics, writers and chess players to its three floors of crowded tables.

The cafe was best known as a hotbed of revolutionary conspiracy. According to legend, the June 10 order to burn the Tuilleries Castle was given at the Procope and the first red bonnet — symbol of the newborn French republic — was worn there soon after.

The Procope was also a meeting place for 18th-century philosophers such as Denis Diderot and Jean D'Alembert, who supposedly decided to publish the monumental "Encyclopedia" over mugs of hot coffee.

The Procope's clientele over the years has included famous Americans like Benjamin Franklin, Thomas Jefferson and Henry Wadsworth Longfellow.

Ralph Waldo Emerson was a frequent patron, describing the Procope in his 1832 journal as "filled with newspapers, blazing with light."

But the cafe has also suffered its share of misfortune. It stopped serving beverages in 1890 and closed. It later reopened as a vegetarian restaurant and for many years was famous only for serving up cheap food to students.

Today, the Procope is a comfortable, moderately priced restaurant which caters mainly to Parisians and American and Japanese tourists.

Though prices are not what they once were, patrons can still order a "boeuf bourgignon" to be enjoyed at the table Prussia's Frederick the Great gave to Voltaire.

PIANO BANK

NEW YORK (AP) — Steinway & Sons operates a national lending institution for more than 500 performing artists.

Referred to as the "piano bank," it includes more than 400 pianos, with a collective value of more than $12 million. The bank provides Steinway concert grands to performing artists throughout the United States and Canada.

Book News

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By TAMMY LEE JOLLY

A new book by a new author is "Due East" by Valerie Sayers. The book is about a willful 15-year-old girl named Mary Faith Rapple who decides to have a baby. Mary Faith then finds herself pregnant after she seduces a fellow student, who then commits suicide behind the movie house. Mary Faith decides to keep the baby and tells her father that she is having a virgin birth.

Convincing her widowed father to let her keep the baby seems quite simple compared to the other obstacles she soon faces. To top it all off, her father's affair with a 50-year-old widow leaves the widow also expecting.

This all takes place in the small, sleepy town of Due East, S.C., where most everyone knows everyone else. The characters soon unfold into a real life cast of people.

The novel is at times comic, at others deeply heart touching.

"Summertime" by Maureen McCoy is another new novel at Sheppard Library. It tells the story of a family during one summer. The family is the Morrows, and 85-year-old Jessamine, a widow, has just eloped from the nursing home.

Her granddaughter, Carla, who lives deep in the woods, near the Mississippi River, growing vegatables and stocking up food for when the bomb drops, has run away from her husband because of his initial reaction to the announcement of her pregnancy.

They had both decided not to bring a child into the world, and when she told him, he simply stood there staring at her menacingly with a large wrench in his hand. Of course at the time he was working on the truck.

And then there is Alice who works at a craft mail-order company and collects everything possible, throwing nothing away, and believes Alfred Hitchcock holds the answer to the meaning of life. She is being pursued by a man who grows soybeans. He is intent on introducing Americans to the usefulness of soybeans. His plans include his tofu burgers, his tofu ice cream, and of course his soybean cupcakes. This is a truly delightful family worth getting to know this summer.

A Man's Children Are At The Heart Of Father's Day

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Like many young working fathers, John McNeill Jr. can be hard pressed for spare time. But he makes certain he has "lots of time to be with my two young boys." It is not just at special times, like Father's Day, birthdays or Christmas that McNeill schedules time with the children.

"They enjoy getting outdoors with me, as much as I enjoy being with them," he says. ""We spend lots of time playing and walking in Greenville parks like River Park North, Green Springs Park and other places."

The two sons are John D. McNeill III, who is three and Shane, a toddler of 16 months. "Shane somehow spends much of the time being carried by me, and especially likes being perched on my shoulder," McNeill said.

McNeill's wife is Patricia McGrath, daughter of former Greenville City Councilwoman Mrs. Millie McGrath. Whenever time permits, which fortunately is quite often, Mrs. McNeill accompanies her husband and sons on the outdoor ventures.

"Sometimes," McNeill said, "we have time to go outside Greenville. One of our favorite places is the waterfront areas of Washington. All of us enjoy watching the birds that come into the waterfront."

Somerville, Mass. native McNeill, a self-employed roofer, came to Greenville a few years ago after serving a three-year tour in the U.S. Navy in the early 1980s. "I liked Navy life," he says, "but decided I didn't want it for a career."

He said his love for the outdoors goes back to his early years. "I have two sisters. My youngest sister was a tomboy type who liked being outside, the older sister didn't often tag along with me."

To keep in shape, McNeill jogs regularly and lifts weights. And to keep the boys occupied in an outdoors setting while he's at work, McNeill said "I've built a big sandbox, ten by ten feet. It took five tons of sand to fill it. But it's worthwhile, they love it."

Mrs. McGrath admitted at times it seems "a little difficult to get an opportunity to be with my grandsons. You know how grandmothers are. But I don't get to spoil them. They're too busy being with their father. I'm not complaining, I think it's wonderful, both for Patricia and the boys, that John takes so much time with them. They're lucky. Lots of fathers in today's rush and bustle can't seem to find time to be with their children very often."

Tobacco Festival At Kenly

KENLY — The fourth annual Kenly Pride in Tobacco Heritage Festival is scheduled for Friday, Saturday and Sunday, June 28.

The festival will be held at the Tobacco Museum on Highway 301 and will be a three day event.

The festival will begin on Friday night with a family hoedown at the Kenly Elementary School gym.

There will be no admission charge, but a barbecue supper is planned which will require tickets. Al Batten and the Blue Grass Reunion will provide music for the Debra Baker School of Dance cloggers.

On Saturday morning Commissioner of Agriculture Jim Graham will greet area residents at a breakfast at the Tobacco Museum. Admission is $5.

Festival activities will get under way at 2 p.m. Saturday and will continue until 9 p.m. Craft booths will be on view. A children's pedal tractor pull is one of the day's events with trophies to be awarded.

Other activities include a basketball shoot, a dunking booth, and children's games.

During the afternoon the Bill Lyerly Band and the band Centerfield will be performing on the stage of the R.J. Reynolds Pride in Tobacco caravan. Other entertainment will be featured.

Sunday afternoon will feature Heritage Crafts demonstrations, with heritage games of past years for youngsters.

The Buttons and Bouquets Contest will be featured again this year. A prize will be given for the best arrangement of tobacco leaves, suckers and flowers. The arrangements will be on display Friday night with judging Saturday morning.

Returning for the second year will be the Tobacco Grading Contest. Expert and amateur participants can try their hand at grading tobacco. Awards will be given to winners.

During the festival, Kenly Ford will again host the annual festival antique car shcw on the firm's car lot.

CARVINGS FROM THE PACIFIC

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — An exhibition of carvings from the South Pacific island of New Ireland will be on display at the Minneapolis Institute of Arts Oct. 10 through Jan. 3, 1988.

The exhibition, "An Assemblage of Spirits: Idea and Image in New Ireland," will present 50 rare wood carvings created by New Irelanders in the 19th and early 20th centuries.

The sculptures include wood masks, heads, figures, multi-figured poles and dance ornaments.

After its Minneapolis showing, the exhibition will travel to the Brooklyn Museum, the Kimbell Art Museum in Fort Worth and the Fine Arts Museums of San Francisco.

Commerce Chambers Sponsor Publication

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

The chambers of commerce of Greenville, Goldsboro, Kinston, Rocky Mount, Tarboro, Washington and Wilson have underwritten the issuance of a magazine-format publication put out by Williams & Simpson, Inc. of Greenville.

The spring 1987 issue of NCEast — The Magazine of Eastern North Carolina Heartland, is now available. The 62-page issue is priced at $2.50

Plans are, according to editor Thomas A. Williams, to publish NCEast twice annually — a spring and a fall issue.

This issue deals in depth on business and business achievements. In this context, there is an article "Business is Booming;" "Mayo Boddie: Profit is the by-product of doing things right", and "Up and Coming," which looks at the achievements of eastern North Carolina businessmen who are "making it big."

Sightseeing and cultural attractions of the region are also given fairly extensive coverage, with Gary Bryant's articles on "Artisans, Artists and Entrepreneurs;" suggestions for "A Driving Tour of the NC East Heartland" by Vera Van Kamp; W. Frank Howard's story of fellowship in Pamlico River expeditions in "Communion on the East Fork", and historic preservation efforts to preserve worthwhile places from the past, written by Claire Pittman.

Completing an overview of contents in this issue, there is a "Sportsman's Calendar to the NC East Outdoors" written and with color photographs by Joe Albea; a look at "Those Country Stores" by Jayne Silliman with illustrations by Clyde Owens; a survey of shops and dealers in antiques in eastern North Carolina by Grigg Denton, and in education, Hobart Hawkins' "Groves of Academe Flourish in NC East." A couple of short article on health issues round out the publication's contents.

SHEET MUSIC COLLECTION

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — The University of Michigan Library says it has acquired a "distinguished collection" of popular sheet music, including 4,500 compositions by black musicians and another 1,500 reflecting attitudes toward blacks in America."

The 22,000 items in the Michael Montgomery Collection of Popular American Sheet Music include songs by some of America's best and most prolific composers.

The library says the collection will "form an important resource for musicians and scholars of American culture between 1900 and 1950."

LITERARY AWARDS

NEW YORK (AP) — Four literary figures have been named winners of the 1987 Elmer Holmes Bobst Awards in Arts and Letters.

Specially designed medals and cash prizes worth $2,000 each were presented to Flora Lewis for nonfiction, John Updike for fiction and Louis Simpson for poetry. Memorialist, historian and critic Sir Harold Acton was given a special award for lifelong contribution to arts and letters.

The awards are given for "vital and enduring contributions to arts and letters."

'The Lost Colony' Is Celebrating Its Fiftieth Anniversary

MANTEO — Paul Green's "The Lost Colony" opened its 50th anniversary season on June 12 in the Waterside Theater in Manteo. The annual production of the oldest outdoor drama in America will run for 68 performances this summer, playing nightly except Sundays through August 29.

50TH ANNIVERSARY — Paul Green's outdoor symphonic drama, "The Lost Colony," is now playing nightly except Sundays at the Waterside Theater in Manteo. This year marks the 50th anniversary of the 1937 premiere of the drama featuring early colonists, members of the British court and native Americans on the coast of what is now North Carolina. Shown here is a scene with Queen Elizabeth and Sir Walter Raleigh from last year's show. (Photograph by Foster Scott)

Performed on the site where a band of Elizabethan pioneers settled in 1587, Paul Green's drama explores the history and possible explanation for the mysterious disappearance of England's first American colony.

"The Lost Colony" premiered on Roanoke Island on July 4, 1937, to commemorate the 350th anniversary of the birth of the first English child in the New World, Virginia Dare.

The drama was initially intended to run for one season. However, public response and national media attention created a demand for repeat performances. By the end of this summer, the drama will have been performed over 2,600 times for more than two million people.

"The Lost Colony" is produced by the Roanoke Island Historical Association. Mark Sumner, producer of the drama, has been associated with the production in a variety of capacities since the 1940s.

Directing "The Lost Colony" for a second season is Fred Chappell. He's on the faculty of the theater department of Florida State University, Tallahassee, where he teaches acting and directing.

The choreographer is Frank Rey, known for his work on the outdoor dramas "The Cross and Sword," "Home is the Hunter," "Unto these Hills," and "Drumbeats in Georgia."

Music direction is by Rosalind MacEnulty, who has composed and arranged much of the music used in the drama and has directed its chorus since 1976.

Principal performers in this year's production include David Jefferson as the Historian, Robert Midgette as Manteo, Pete Peterson as Wanchese, Tom Hull as Old Tom, Frank Roberts as Sir Walter Raleigh, Barbara Hird as Queen Elizabeth, Keith Tyree as John Borden, Sara Stevenson as Eleanor White and Robin Brooke as Agona.

A highlight of the summer will be the "Lost Colony" cast reunion, scheduled for the July 4 weekend. Over 500 former cast and crew members, some dating back to the original 1937 production, are expected to gather during the anniversary weekend to attend the July 4 performance and other functions throughout the two-day reunion.

Tickets to performances of "The Lost Colony" are $9 for adults, $4 for children under 12 and $8 for senior citizens, military personnel and disabled patrons. Tickets may be purchased by calling 473-3414. Group rates are available with discounts of up to 15 per cent depending on the size of the group.

The Waterside Theater is located in the Fort Raleigh National Historic Site, Highway 64, Manteo, Roanoke Island.

TWO CAROLINA CONCERT — Gospel singer and recording star Cristy Lane will appear in two North Carolina concerts during the coming week. On Thursday, she will sing at the Crystal Coast Civic Center at 7 and at 9 p.m. For tickets, priced at $10, call 247-3883. On Friday, she will be in concert at 8 p.m. at Hedrick Stadium, Fort Bragg, Fayetteville. Tickets will be available at the door.

Cherokee Indians Foster Their Old Culture

CHEROKEE — As close as historians can judge, it's believed that the forefathers of the Cherokee Indians migrated to America from Asia over a narrow strip of land now covered by the Bering Strait. Arriving at the close of the Ice Age nearly 10,0000 years ago, the tribe which became known as the Cherokees was once the largest and strongest group of Indians in the southeastern United States.

The tribe traveled southward over the centuries, populating most of what is now the southeastern United States, and had developed a highly civilized culture by the time they peacefully greeted their first white "visitor," Hernando DeSoto, in 1540.

Today you can step into that past by visiting Oconaluftee Indian Village, at the Cherokee Reservation in the Great Smoky Mountains in western North Carolina. One scenic way of getting there is via the Blue Ridge Parkway which terminates at the southern entrance to Cherokee.

YOUNG CHIEF — Dennis Wolfe, a young Cherokee chief, is often photographed with visitors to the Cherokee Indian Reservation. In the past, Cherokee Indians who inhabited this region did not actually wear headdresses or live in teepees as did the Indians in the west. However, today a number of native Cherokees, such as Wolfe, don traditional Indian gear in order to entertain many of the 9,000,000 vacationers who visit the Smokies each year.

At Oconaluftee, which means "By the Water," there is a faithfully restored and working Indian Village operated by tribal members of the Eastern Band of Cherokees, direct descendants of some of the Indians migrating to the United States 8,000 years before Christ. Here you can watch the Cherokees perform the ancient crafts of their forefathers.

Women's crafts include intricate beadwork, basketweaving and pottery.

Men's crafts cover crafting canoes from yellow poplar, chipping arrowheads, forming darts and routing river cane for blowguns. Though the blowgun was never used for warfare, a good shot could nail a squirrel or a bird at 50 feet, for food, not sport.

Working bear and fish traps also are on display.

The Cherokee Council House is where the seven clans gathered to formulate governing decisions. Hardly anyone today knows the clans were named Bird, Deer, Wolf, Paint, Blue, Long Hair and, yes, Wild Potato.

Ocanaluftee Indian Village also features a square ground for ceremonial dances in which a fire burned perpetually, and a "sweathouse" where the medicine man used herbs and heat, much like a sauna, to cure all known ills. Until the introduction of smallpox by the white man, which wiped out half the Cherokee population, the common cold was the worst illness experienced by the Indian.

The Cherokees did not reside in teepees. Being a settled tribe and not nomadic, farmers rather than roving herders, the Cherokee built permanent dwellings, much like adobe houses. You will see one of these made of sapling poles woven with mats and plastered on both sides with red clay. Such shelter would endure for five or six years before requiring renovation.

Ocanaluftee Indian Villiage provides the Indians an earned income, while maintaining their dignity, and it helps them preserve their proud and cherished culture of centuries ago.

The village is located on the Indian Reservation in Cherokee. It's open to the public daily from May 15 to October 25 for a nominal fee of $6 for adults and $3 for children. Last year over 150,000 visitor toured this authentic 1750s Cherokee Indian Village.

For more information contact the Cherokee Visitor's Center, P.O. Box 465-24, Cherokee, N.C., 28719, or call toll free 1-800-222-6157.

Mitchell Riggs To Perform In Illinois Drama

BLOOMINGTON, ILL. — Mitchell Riggs of Ayden has been selected through national auditions to perform in the 10th anniversary season of the Illinois Shakespeare Festival at Illinois State University in Bloomington.

The anniversary season of the festival will include productions of "Twelfth Night," "Romeo and Juliet" and "Measure for Measure." Performances begin July 2 and continue to August 8.

Riggs, a rising senior at the North Carolina School of the Art, appeared in stage productions locally for several years with the Ayden Theater Workshop, the Curtain Players, East Carolina University's Playhouse and in the Blackbeard outdoor drama at Bath.

Today's Sunday In The Park Spotlights Barbershop Music

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Vocal music in old-fashioned harmony is the musical attraction to be heard this afternoon at the second in the summer series of Sunday in the Park concerts.

Beginning at 7 p.m. at the amphitheater site on Greenville's Town Common, the City of Greenville through the auspices of the Recreation and Parks Department, will present a program of Barbershop Quartet Festival sounds highlighting the Pamlico Sounds, the Sweet Adelines and local quartets.

The concert is free and open to the public. Seating will be on the grass before the newly constructed stage shell. No parking is permitted along First Stgreet.

Singers from Greenville's 22-member group of lady barbershoppettes, the Sweet Adelines, are directed by Jo Broadway. They have listed for their program mostly older songs rich in nostalgia and readily adaptable to the barbershop style of vocalizing.

Their songs are: "I Feel A Song Coming On," "Carolina in the Morning," "When I Take My Sugar To Tea," Peggy Lee's noted lament, "A Good Man is Hard to Find," a rousing patriotic number, "This Is My Country," and a spiritual, "Good News."

In addition to the larger group, the four members of the Premium Blend Quartet will perform. The singers are Mary Vars, Jo Broadway, Janice Hardee and Sandra Johnson.

Sweet Adelines, formed several years ago, have to date had a successful career in their field. They have been invited to perform throughout North Carolina at festivals, in churches, schools, before civic clubs, in hospitals and nursing homes.

They have taken part in three regional competitions held for women's groups representing singers in North Carolina, Virginia, Maryland and Washington, D.C. In their first year of competition they won the Novice Award of the Year.

The male contingent of barbershop singers, the Pamlico Sound, is directed by Philip Evancho.

For their portion of the program, they will open with "Show Me Where the Good Times Are." This will be followed by old favorites such as "Alabamy Bound," "Mandy," "I Want a Girl Just Like the Girl That Married Dear Old Dad," "Margie" and "Girl of My Dreams."

The next offering will be a medley of tunes, none new — "Sweet Adeline,""Rosie O'Grady" and "Don't Throw the Past Away."

Two novely tunes are next on their list — "Dem Bones" and "Doin' the Raccoon," with "South Rampart Street Parade" as the closing number.

The Sunday in the Park series is funded by the City of Greenville and coordinated by the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department. A total of seven concerts are scheduled for the summer of 1987, with five more due after today's performance.

THE SWEET ADELINES — Greenville's ladies barbershop group, Sweet Adelines, will open the Barbershop Music Festival being presented at seven this afternoon as the Sunday in the Park concert. Shown here are 15 of the 22 members photographed during a rehearsal last year. The lady singers will be joined by the Pamlico Sounds, a men's barbershop group. The concert is free and open to the public.

Details Listed For 1987 Cribbage Tournament

RALEIGH — The 14th Annual National Open Cribbage Tournament, to be played at the North Raleigh Hilton and Towers in Raleigh on August 8-10, is expected to draw a national field of more than 350 players and will offer approximately $30,000 in prize money in various competitions.

The event is co-sponsored by Capitol Broadcasting Company of Raleigh and the U.S. Playing Card Company of Cincinnati. The tournament grand patron is Budweiser beer.

This year's Championship Tournament purse will be augmented with an added $4,000. The tournament is the only one in the United States that is a double-elimination tournament making it the largest such formated event of any type in the country. Head-to-head matches in each round consist of the best four-of-seven games and a player must lose two matches before being eliminated.

The defending champion of the National Open is Tom Salyards of Mundelein, Ill. Other defending champions in the secondary competitions held at the National Open are Jim Arblaster of Kissimmee, Fla., Buster Forbes of Raleigh and Art Boulette of Surfside, Fla.

Last year's field of 342 players represented 32 states and two Canadian provinces. Since its inception in 1974 the National Open has awarded a total of $128,507 making it by far the highest paying cribbage tournament in the United States.

Entry information may be obtained either by writing or calling Nick Pond, Tournament Director, P.O. Box 12,800, Raleigh, N.C., 27605, telephone 890-6064.

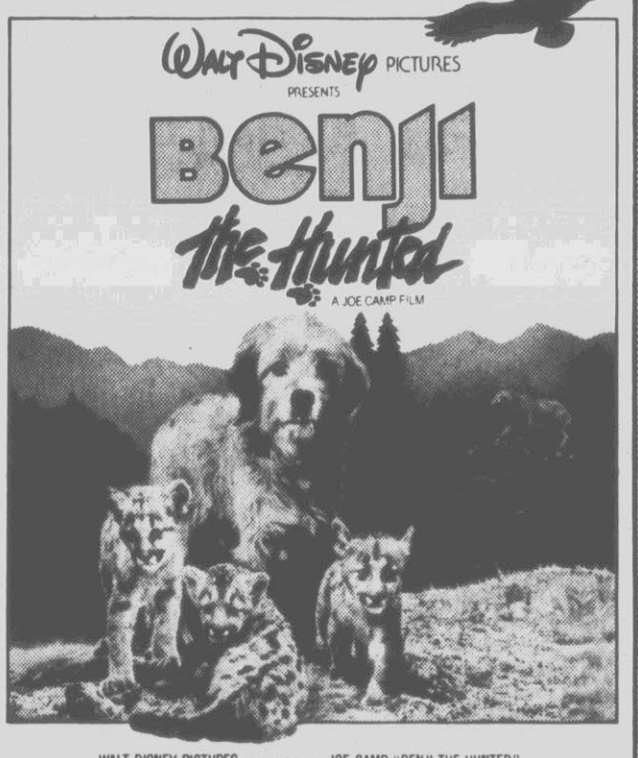

Entry deadline is July 24.

Two Plays For Playwrights Conference

Two plays will be showcased by the Playwrights Fund of North Carolina, Inc. during the fund's annual Southeastern Playwrights' Conference to be held in downtown Greenville at the Humber House on Friday and Saturday.

The two one-act plays selected for reading performances at this year's conference are Marcia Savin's "Ain't We Got Fun?" and "The Phantom of the Blue Letters" by David Brendan Hopes.

"Ain't We Got Fun?," which was developed with Arthur Kopit and which has been read at Lincoln Center, concerns a Brooklyn widow (Hazel Stapleton) whose affair with a retired baker (Greg Ange) does not meet with her son's (Jeffrey Scott Jones) approval.

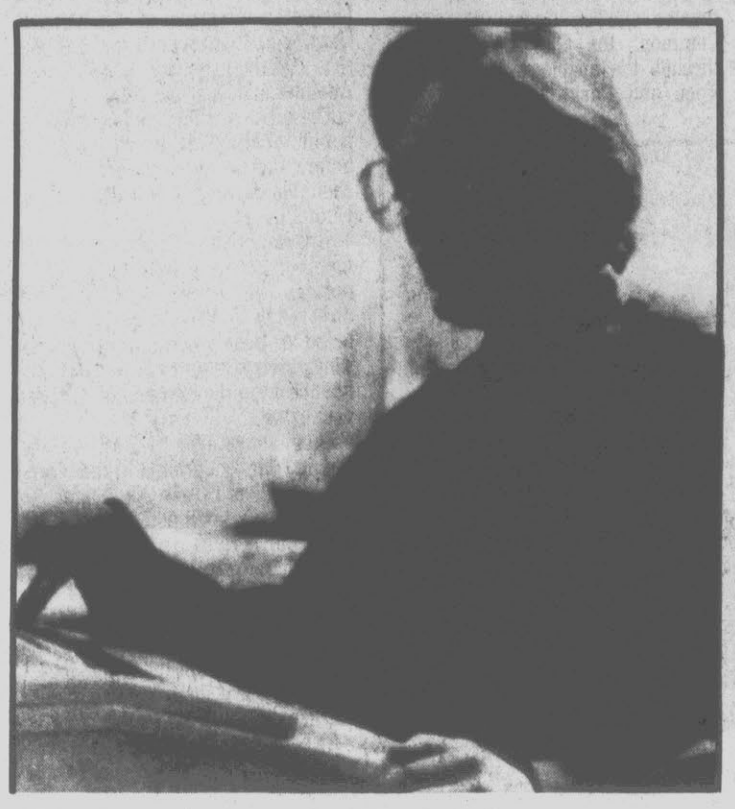

The performance, directed by Don Roebuck, will be presented at 8 p.m. Friday at the Humber House, corner of Fifth and Washington streets.

At 8 p.m. Saturday, Hopes' "The Phantom of the Blue Letters," will be given a reading performance. The play, under its previoius title, "Waiters," received the Playwrights Fund of North Carolina best play of the year award in the 1987 competition.

Hopes' play, a comedy, will be directed by Heath Gill of East Carolina University. Cast members are: Anita Brehm, Hazel Stapleton, Sidney Horton, Brett Hursey, Brendan Medlin, Lisa Solick, Glen Hendricks, Robin Bolande, Mary Thaxton, Anne Coatney and Pam Harris.

Seating in the Downtown, Downstairs facility at the Humber House is limited and will be available on a first-come, first-served basis with priority given to members of the Playwrights Fund.

For more information, call 756-3628.

'Sword Of Peace Drama Features A Cast Of 75

SNOW CAMP — "The Sword of Peace" is now playing for the summer season. William Hardy's outdoor drama, with a cast of 75, is directed by F.C. Wadas Jr.

One of several outdoor dramas in North Carolina, "The Sword of Peace" is the story of events leading to the Revolutionary War and how those events affected North Carolina settlers, particularly the Quakers.

The drama is presented each Thursday, Friday and Saturday evening at 8 p.m. except for the dates of July 22-25 at which time the musical "Godspell" will be presented.

The Children's Theater will perform "The Pied Piper" and "Rumpelstilskin" on Wednesday evenings beginning July 1. The season will conclude with performances of the Rodgers and Hammerstein musical, "The Sound of Music" from August 25 to 29.

Admission prices are $6 for adults, $3 for children under 12, and $5 for senior citizens. Group rates are available for groups of ten or more with advance reservations.

For reservations and more information call 376-6948.

Mountain Programs

BOONE — Singing on the Mountain, a free, day-long annual gospel sing will take place at McRae Meadows on Grandfather Mountain on Sunday, June 28. The event runs from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. with featured entertainment and a speaker between 12 noon and 2 p.m.

Another mountain event is the Blue Ridge Mountain Fair Week in Sparta which begins Saturday and continues Sunday, June 28 and on through July 5. Numerous outdoor competitions such as sheep shearing, games, musical entertainment and craft fairs will be featured.

For more information on these and other western North Carolina events call I-800-222-7515.

Hampton Festival

HAMPTON, VA. — The line-up for jazz, rhythm and blues artists have been announced for the 20th annual Hampton Jazz Festival to be held at the Hampton Colisuem during the coming weekend.

Artists scheduled to perform during the three-day festival on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, June 28 are:

- Friday — Ray Charles, Sarah Vaughn, Wynton Marsalis and Stanley Jordan.
- Saturday — Freddie Jackson, The Crusaders, Phyllis Hyman and Stan Getz.
- Sunday, June 28 • Gladys Knight and The Pips, Grover Washington, Jr. and the Neville Brothers.

Tickets for the festival are $16.50 and $17.50 each. All seats are reserved. For tickets and additional information call 804/838-4203.

Elected To Board

Elizabeth Pope has been elected to the statewide board of the North Carolina Association of Arts Council.

She will represent arts organization and volunteer arts administration in support of continued development of community arts council in the state.

Ms. Pope is artistic director of Atlantic Dance Theater and Down East Dance, both based jointly in New Bern and Greenville. She is a graduate of UNC/Chapel Hill and studied in the dance program at East Carolina University.

PARADE

Walter Anderson, the editor of 'Parade,' and Vitaly Korotich, the editor of 'Ogonyok,' two journalists with distinctly different and opposed philosophies, visit one another's country and, as their journeys end, each finds himself pursuing the answer to a single question:

CAN WE WAGE PEACE?

Q Is it true that Gary Hart and his close Hollywood friend, Warren Beatty, have both been womanized? Can you provide the name of the plastic surgeon who performed the operations? —N.R., Santa Fe, N.M.

A Hart and Beatty are as masculine as men come. They have been referred to as "womanizers," in the sense that a womanizer is a man who indulges himself in the pursuit of women.

Gary Hart (l) with wife, Lee, and Warren Beatty in '82

Q When Gerald Ford became U.S. President in 1974, he pardoned Richard Nixon. Has it ever been established just what Nixon was pardoned for, and whether the pardon was part of a deal? —Arthur D. Penser, Huntsville, Ala.

A Ford's pardon proclamation reads as follows: "Now, therefore, I, Gerald R. Ford, President of the United States, pursuant to the pardon power conferred upon me by Article II, Section 2, of the Constitution, have granted and by these presents do grant a full, free and absolute pardon unto Richard Nixon for all offenses against the United States which he, Richard Nixon, has committed or may have committed or taken part in during the period from January 20, 1969, through August 9, 1974." Gerald Ford and Alexander Haig Jr.—Nixon's chief of staff, who conferred with Ford before Nixon resigned his Presidency—both have denied that they negotiated a deal which provided a pardon in exchange for Nixon's agreement to step aside so Ford, as Vice President, could succeed him. Many diehards still believe, however, in the "You give me the job, I'll give you the pardon" theory.

Q Watching Sen. Daniel Inouye of Hawaii on television, I am moved to ask how he lost his right arm. Was he in an accident? —Mel Campbell, Rochester, N.Y.

Senator Inouye

A Senator Inouye, 62, lost his right arm in World War II, fighting in Italy and France with the all Japanese-American 442nd Infantry Regimental Combat Team.

Q Larry Hagman, who plays J.R. Ewing in the "Dallas" TV soap opera, is how many years younger than his wife, Maj? And how does she pronounce her name? Is it true that the Hagmans fly an erotic-type flag over their house in California? Where do they live in the film colony? —T.T., Weatherford, Tex.

A Larry Hagman was born on Sept. 21, 1931, making him 55. His wife, the former Maj (pronounced "My") Axelsson, is two years his senior. Larry and Maj were wed in a Swedish ceremony in 1954. The flag that flies over their house in Malibu carries the motto "Vita Celebratio Est," which translates from the Latin into "Life Is a Celebration" or "Life Is a Ball."

The Hagmans: Life's still a ball, 33 years after wedding

Q Has Yves Montand—the French motion picture star whose wife, actress Simone Signoret, passed away almost two years ago—discreetly gotten married to actress Brigitte Bardot in the south of France? That's the rumor circulating around Paris these days. Is it true or false? —D.S., Newport, R.I.

A False. Yves Montand, 65, has a new ladylove in his life, but she is not Brigitte Bardot. She is Carole Amiel, 29, an attractive young woman whom the actor hired as his private secretary and with whom he has been seen recently on the French Riviera. The Oscar-winning actress Simone Signoret died on Sept. 30, 1985.

Harry Hamlin gazes at the lovely Mrs. H, Laura Johnson

Q Harry Hamlin of the "L.A. Law" TV series—is he the father of a child born out of wedlock to a famous foreign actress? Is she Catherine Deneuve, the French beauty? —N.D., Carlsbad, Calif.

A Hamlin, 35, is the father of a 7-year-old son, Dimitri, by the Swiss actress Ursula Andress, 51. Hamlin currently is married to actress Laura Johnson, 28, formerly of the "Falcon Crest" TV show.

Q Who were the two shortest and tallest U.S. Presidents? —H. Ritchie, Bridgeport, Conn.

A James Madison was the shortest, at 5 feet 4. Martin Van Buren and Benjamin Harrison were tied for second, at 5 feet 6. The two tallest Presidents were Abraham Lincoln, at 6 feet 4, and Lyndon B. Johnson, 6 feet 3.

We not only give you the money for college. We also give you the time.

If you think the best way to pay for college is to put it off for a few years and join the military, you're half right.

Because with the New GI Bill, you can join the Army National Guard and get a guaranteed minimum of $18,000 for college.

But best of all, you serve two days a month and two weeks a year. Which means you can go to school full-time. Right now. On us.

So the question you have to ask yourself is not, can you afford college.

Several weeks ago, at the invitation of the Soviet Union and with the encouragement of the United States government, Walter Anderson, the editor of Parade, and Vitaly Korotich, the editor of the Soviet magazine Ogonyok, visited each other's country. It was agreed beforehand that each would write his impressions of the other's land and that the two articles would be published side-by-side in Parade and Ogonyok. This is the first time an American editor's view of the Soviet Union has appeared in a magazine like Ogonyok, an illustrated weekly with a circulation of 1.5 million. Korotich, who has published material previously banned by the authorities, is credited with introducing the idea of investigative reporting to the Soviet press, and Ogonyok has become its country's most controversial and eagerly sought publication. The Soviet editor's trip to the United States, on which he was accompanied by his wife, included visits to Washington, D.C., Knoxville, Chicago, New Orleans and New York.

TWO EDITORS VISIT EACH OTHER'S COUNTRY

How Different Are We?

IT WAS GRAY, COLD AND wet, a prickly March afternoon, when I stood at the foot of the great statue in Volgograd, the Stalingrad memorial, the statue of a woman, sword in her hand, imploring her citizens to join her, defend her, give their lives if they must. It was here, in the heavy, dark and lonely silence this place commands, that I began to understand.

No American, I realized, can come here and talk to these people about war. They know war in a way that is intimate and personal. Twenty million of them were killed in World War II. No family was untouched. Yet a question tugged at me: Can they survive peace?

Although the Soviet Union has housed and clothed millions of people since the Germans invaded, today many buildings seem to crumble at the edges, food shortages still occur, and the quality of consumer goods is suspect. More, a black market thrives, life expectancy declines, alcoholism and absenteeism in the workplace rise. I met people in the Soviet Union at the most crucial time since the war years, a dramatic moment when this country is trying a new policy, a concept called glasnost, a policy that could, if it succeeds, improve lives.

What is glasnost?

I went to the Soviet Union to try to find out. I went with some expectations and, no doubt, a few prejudices.

In two weeks I visited Moscow, Leningrad, Volgograd, Kiev and Tbilisi. Now, as I sit down to write this article, aware that it will appear both in Parade and in the Russian-language magazine Ogonyok, I find myself facing the challenge of telling American readers what Soviet citizens are like and, at the same time, telling Soviet readers, because I speak only for myself, what I'm like. I also want the Soviet people to know what I think of them and their country.

What remains with me most forcefully are the contrasts of the Soviet Union. Although religion is universally discouraged, its icons, like those by Andrei Rublev in the Troitskaya Cathedral in Zagorsk, are treasured. Although some of the finest literary masterpieces of my country—works of Twain, London, Faulkner, Hemingway, Mailer and Updike, among hundreds of others—are accessible in schools and libraries, straight news about America is rare. Although divorce and abortion occur with stunning frequency, probably at a rate even higher than in the United States, the family bonding and the love among people is palpable, enviable, the people often seeming to be as much a family as a nation.

I found most Soviet citizens to be without pretension and, like the best people in my own country, capable of genuine warmth and love

But the sharpest contrast has been provided by war.

The individuals I met do not want war and they do not want it in a way that is profoundly personal, often based on childhood memories. I was riveted when Ilya Glazunov, a prominent painter, described to me the deaths of his parents by starvation in the siege of Leningrad when he was a boy, when Vitaly Korotich, the poet and editor, told me of his fear when one day in Kiev, alone as a child, he was summoned by a Nazi soldier who, slowly, reached into his jacket and withdrew not a pistol but a harmonica, when a guide in Volgograd explained how children, friends of his, died after World War II when buried explosives detonated in the rubble on which they played.

Unfortunately, though, and here's the contrast, it is equally clear that no one can miss the young soldiers on leave, strolling the streets, whether in Kiev, Tbilisi, Volgograd, Moscow or Leningrad—or ignore the war the Soviet Union can't seem to stop in Afghanistan, a conflict that nearly every citizen I spoke with predicted would end within two years. It undoubtedly will surprise many Americans, as it did me, to learn that there are Soviet citizens, intellectuals and workers alike, who actually fear, expect in some cases, a nuclear attack from the United States:

Left: Kindergarten children enjoy a session in a Moscow playground. Above, a young lieutenant in the Soviet armed forces, on leave from his unit, takes his girl for an afternoon stroll in Moscow.

A railway conductor told me, "Your leaders have a war mentality." It undoubtedly will surprise him and other citizens to know that millions of Americans think exactly the same thing about Soviet leaders.

A teacher in Moscow argued, "Even if your President never presses the button, your country is using the arms race, all the money we have to spend to keep up, to prevent us from raising the standard of living for our people." Again, this view may surprise many Americans.

No one, certainly not I, can tour the Soviet Union, travel through five cities in two weeks, and really know enough. People are too complex to be known that easily, a shell within a shell, like the popular little wooden dolls on sale all over Russia, each layer concealing a more interesting layer, then another. Also, I'm an American, an American with an unyielding bias favoring the guiding principles upon which my own nation has been founded.

This in mind, do I understand the Soviet Union?

I understand the Soviet Union better.

Enough?

No, better.

Is "glasnost" real?

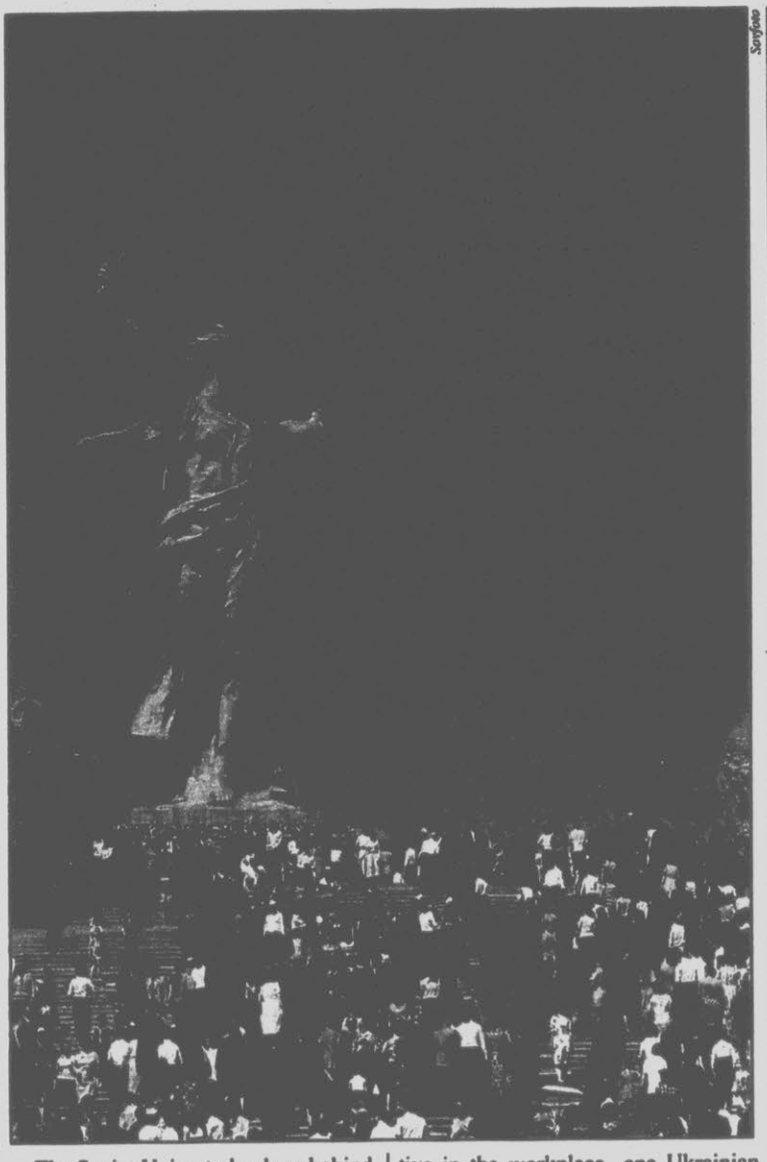

Yes, I believe it is. It is also one of the most significant and dramatic stories of our time, the struggle of a country that has fallen behind, of a leader who's trying to revitalize a society by attacking problems at their roots, bringing citizens into the process, with criticism and introspection. It is not democracy—the power's still firmly at the top—but glasnost is an opportunity to challenge some rigid bureaucratic controls. What the Soviet system has lacked, in my view, is the very discourse, open discourse, that gives the United States its vitality. No one knows whether glasnost will work in the Soviet Union—or what will happen if it does not.

What, actually, is "glasnost"?

Strictly defined, it is publicity, which V.I. Lenin, the man who founded the Soviet state, once described as a sword that heals the wound it inflicts. Today, though, it means something more than publicity; it means openness. Yuri Andropov, General Secretary of the Communist Party in 1982, started the process, but it has been enlarged by and is most associated with the current General Secretary, Mikhail Gorbachev, who has welcomed, even demanded, criticism and the expression of ideas. Glasnost, as I see it, is a major effort to restore citizen participation in government, to encourage people to play a larger role throughout the system. One Communist, a well-educated man, said, "Now, for the first time, where I've always been silent, I find myself participating, really participating—and I've been asked to represent others and lead, even to be critical."

We see glasnost when we read disclosures in the press about the Chernobyl disaster or the sinking of a nuclear submarine, when we hear the news reports about domestic problems like prostitution and other street crime—and it's reflected in the release of Soviet prisoners like Andrei Sakharov, Yuri Orlov and Anatoly Shcharansky, as well as the publication of previously banned work by authors like Vladimir Nabokov and Boris Pasternak. A Russian writer, who before the war had been imprisoned for three years without a specific charge, told me, "With glasnost, I think we have a future."

Why is "glasnost" happening now?

Sovfoto

The Soviet Union today lags behind the West in consumer technology and, even after seventy years, it is still challenged by food shortages. Surprisingly, this country so rich in culture and natural resources can at times resemble a Third World nation. Simple water drainage in some cities is poorly engineered, for example, requiring teams of workers to chop ice off streets in winter. Initiative in the workplace, one Ukrainian explained, has been diminished by decades of orders from above. "As you can see," a well-traveled Russian told me, "our standard of living should be higher. Now, with more people participating—not just the bosses giving orders—I really believe we will have progress with our reconstruction, what we call perestroika."

Should the United States cooperate?

If glasnost works, the Soviet Union will, of course, be stronger. I believe Americans need to decide for themselves who are more dangerous: the people who will rise to power if Mikhail Gorbachev fails or those who will rise if he succeeds.

Will "glasnost" last?

I don't know. A reading of history raises doubts when one considers Stalin's purges, Khrushchev's fall, Brezhnev's rise. If, however, General Secretary Mikhail Gorbachev is as committed to glasnost as he appears to be, if he's able to inspire more support than opposition in the Kremlin, then the citizens' fervor for it just might make a difference. Almost without exception, the citizens I spoke with craved openness, heatedly insisting that it must continue.

Georgi Tovstonogov, director of the Maxim Gorky Drama Theater in Leningrad, told me, "We can choose plays now without permission. The performance for tonight, called Theatre of the Days of Nero and Seneca, was not permitted before glasnost. Now we have less bureaucracy involved. My dream is that this process will go on. It is the dream of all intellectuals. We need to learn more about other countries and encourage their people to learn about us. After seeing a performance of our play called Story of the Horse, German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt said, 'This was worth five international conferences.' You see, then he understood!"

"What," I asked, "are the problems?"

"There is resistance to glasnost," he said, "stiff resistance in the bureaucracy, and questions from people who are used to the old way: 'Why,' some ask, 'do we need this?'"

An author in Moscow explained, "There are writers and painters, a few others in the arts, who oppose glasnost because all their careers they have supported a point of view. They became very secure, unchallenged, in their positions. Now, they face competition in the world of ideas, and personally I think they feel threatened; they fear losing control, losing the ability to decide so easily what citizens will see and hear. Maybe they worry that the people will like the new talent more and will like them less. As for the bureaucrats who, before glasnost, got their power through political favors and payoffs, in the past they were very comfortable making decisions, telling people what they could and couldn't do, giving but never taking blame, almost always saying no. Now these bureaucrats are held accountable for their decisions—and they must share with, delegate, listen to and, in some cases, even heed workers. This means the bureaucrats can't hide behind their desks. They must share. Some have lost their jobs. I think more will."

The Faces Of 'Glasnost' in Today's Russia

Why would others resist?

"A few people don't like the change," a teenager in Volgograd told me, "because, like my parents, they're used to the old way. Others made decisions for them. It's easier when you can blame somebody else, when you don't have to think. So many times I have heard: 'Why should we read bad news? What good comes of it?' My parents did what they were told, read what they were told, saw what they were told. This is hard for them, but, for me, glasnost is better."

In Kiev, the Ukraine's Deputy Minister of Culture, Alexander Tribushny, said, "We have rock music and breakdancing and many more plays, more views now. Glasnost is growing."

Will it continue?

"Yes," he told me.

"Since you've had short-lived periods of openness before, as you did with Nikita Khrushchev," I asked, "why do you believe today is different?"

"Because so many people are included in this process now," Tribushny said. "Khrushchev had only a narrow circle of leaders involved. Also, what has been said and revealed can't be undone or taken back. Most important are the vast numbers of people who support this."

Soviet citizens, I learned, despite hearing more than forty years of half-truths and near-truths about the United States, have a curiosity, a thirst for things American. I remember how two teenage girls, both deaf, excitedly responded in sign language to the Wyeth family art exhibit in Leningrad, how a prominent theater director in the same city casually lit his cigarette with an "I Love New York" lighter, how a Moscow cabdriver hummed along to "Bess, You Is My Woman Now" from the George Gershwin opera "Porgy and Bess" as it played over his radio, how he shook his head to the heavy-metal melody that followed it—how the pride swelled in the voices and faces of Georgian students and teachers, a Volgograd librarian, a family of actors and a poet in Kiev, and Communist Party officials in nearly every city when they were able to display gifts created in my homeland, gifts given to them by other Americans, and the respect, rarely grudging, for the quality of our products, and the questions, questions upon questions, about America.

That this article is being read by Soviet citizens is in itself a genuine expression of glasnost, and, in this spirit, I'd like to help my hosts know at least one American better—me. I started to realize early in my trip that the people I met in the Soviet Union understood much about the culture in which I was raised, more, perhaps, than many Americans may know about the Soviet Union, but what may not be clearly understood about us is deeper.

Although we quarrel among ourselves in America, race with race and among religions, no matter how many times we fail each other, the quest for tolerance is as much a part of our fiber, I told a Georgian journalist, "as your love of motherland, rodina as you call it, is yours." Americans like myself, I said, support Soviet Jews and others who seek to emigrate today, because we feel we must. I described to him the human joy, the pride I had found in the conference room of the Volgograd Polytechnic Institute. There I had talked, shared tea with sons and daughters of the peasants who had built this building with their own hands, sons and daughters who today are graduates who hold scientific patents throughout the world, evidence one more time that there are extraordinary possibilities in ordinary people. How can I accept that a society that has literally rebuilt itself from dust in less than half a century, has clothed and housed its people in a remarkable triumph of human will and spirit, can't rise above the denial of freedom? You are better than that.

"Strong," he said, "and smart and tough." He paused, then added with emphasis, "And we don't want war."

"That," I told him, "could also define the American character."

Are we, as a people, so different?

I don't think so.

I found most Soviet citizens to be direct, without pretension and, like the best of people in my own country, capable of genuine warmth and love. When the distinguished actor Alexander Zadneprovsky of Kiev sang a compelling, haunting duet with his wife Ksenija after dinner in their home, I felt a sense of sharing, the same feeling I had when the Georgian film genius Revaz Chkheidze candidly described to me his personal religious beliefs, what he saw as the spiritual significance of a Christian icon in his office. I was impressed by the depth of culture, the superior education of young children, the gentle physical touching among adults, the holding of hands, the gracious hospitality and the generosity, sometimes totally unexpected generosity. Take Ilya, a small boy on spring recess, a boy who reminded me of my own son when he was younger. We met in a Volgograd hotel lobby when he left a group of students to shyly, hesitantly ask me if I would speak with him so that he could learn about America and practice his English. He confided that he loved soccer, that he had a great deal of homework, that when he grew up he wanted to be a microbiologist. Then Ilya, thanking me, reached in his pocket and thoughtfully handed me a gift, a souvenir keychain he had purchased for himself.

Bombed-out building left standing as a stark reminder of the Battle of Stalingrad.

Are we, as countries, so different?

Yes.

Never was it so apparent to me how different we are than when I listened to Soviet Minister of Education G.A. Yagodin in his office on my last day in Moscow. The policy of glasnost is good, he said, and it will help reveal, and ostensibly correct, the mistakes of people in government—but it presents a problem: "If someone says that I'm not right, but I feel that I am right, what should I do?" That, sir, touches the very essence of democracy, particularly the relationship between free speech and a responsive government. I'm reminded how Minister Yagodin sought to persuade me of the failure of the American system of justice by describing to me a recent and famous trial in New York:

"The Mafia was found innocent because," he insisted, "they were afraid to convict them. You call that justice?"

Yes, I said, and they have a name. We call them a jury—and that jury did something that, whether we agree or disagree with its verdict, we can do in America: It rejected its government's case.

More, the trial and the verdict are public.

If an educated person like Minister Yagodin does not seem to grasp the importance of this freedom and this responsibility—when he is unaware of so many other cases in which American juries have rejected the government's position—the weakness of the Soviet information network is glaring: What, I wondered, do others learn? I asked a Russian to tell me how he'd go about reporting corruption. He did not know. I asked others: No one knew. One admitted, "We have problems in our legal system, but glasnost will help."

I hope so.

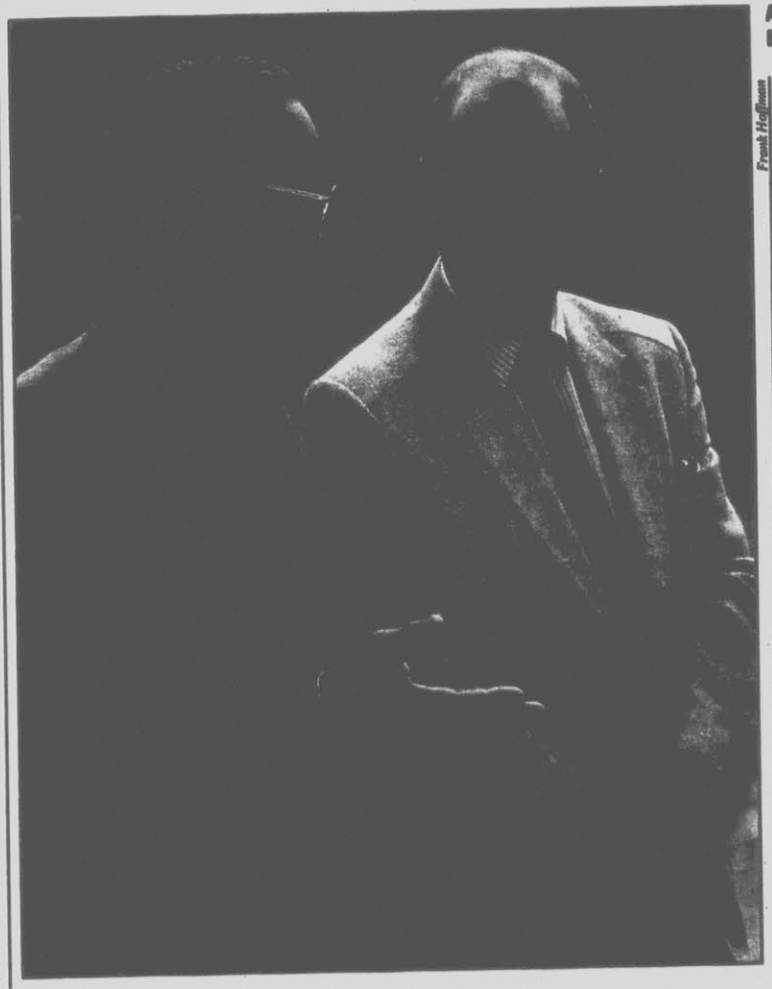

Clearly, the Soviet Union and the United States face serious challenges aside from the threat of war. We have much to learn from each other. Don't we have similar concerns, like alcohol and drug abuse and crime? How can we improve the quality of health care? Don't we share the important task of educating and encouraging young people?

Can we survive peace?

"One can only imagine the progress if we work together on common problems," I was told by Yuri Babansky, Vice President of the Soviet Academy of Pedagogical Sciences. Or, I thought, the devastation if we are forced to war. P

How Should We Live?

Alex Haley (l), plays host to Vitaly Korotich at his farm in Norris, Tenn.

WHEN I WAS SHOWN the enormous granaries on the border of Illinois and Ohio, I thought they reminded me of oil tanks, these great gray cylinders, and I knew they contained an energy source no less important: food.

I was intrigued when local farmers explained to me how much effort it took to harvest all this grain, how the grain elevators themselves were observation towers to the endless flatlands, how from their roofs one could see vast distances.

Thus, when asked if I'd like to go up to the very top of one of these grain tanks—I may even have suggested the journey myself—I said yes.

A small elevator compartment came down the gray cylinder, and the three of us—two Americans and I—stepped inside.

The cabin crawled upward, twitching like a fly climbing a steep wall. When it had risen more than a hundred feet, almost to the very top, the little cabin shuddered, then suddenly stopped. I recalled how my wife, who was safely on the ground below, had warned me that this journey was a dubious adventure; I wondered what she was thinking as she looked up at this little gray box that was trembling very high up along the side of the grain elevator. Just when it seemed that we would be stuck for some time, one of my companions slipped out of the cabin and climbed to the roof where, very high up, he began repairing something. Shortly, the cabin shuddered again and continued up, this time without any stops, with our companion riding on the roof.

In Tennessee, we talked, sang, even danced, all the while sensing the common background to our existence as human beings

There always has to be a man who appears, who is willing to face risk for someone else's sake. He thinks about what he can do, his capability, and he gets to it.

Mikhail Gorbachev, I believe, has turned out to be just such a leader for my country. He is courageous, ready to take risks—but for the well-being of our people, not for his own sake.

As I traveled through America, I thought about how great were our common links, our mutual responsibility, how critically important are the decisions that can affect us all. Perhaps the greatest "superpower" should be our common desire to survive on earth, to work together.

I know this is not simple.

I remember a woman at the Atlanta airport, a frightened woman who bolted away when she heard I was from the Soviet Union. I'm not sure what she was afraid I was going to do. I only know her fear. I've seen it before. It costs billions of dollars to instill that fear. It has taken legions of hostile journalists from many countries—and filmmakers who create movies like Amerika—to reinforce that terrible fear.

I believe, though, that at every level—the head of state, a farmer, a journalist—each of us can do a great deal today to help the world survive, to help us become wiser and better.

Chernobyl taught me quite a bit. When that terrifying, murderous force broke out, young firemen—just kids, really—went into the flames, perishing but saving millions of lives in the process. Their sacrifice made my sense of life more acute. What greatness, I thought: These courageous young people were willing to die for the sake of others, for those who live nearby, a lasting example of self-sacrifice for me and, I hope, for you.

Chernobyl became a tragedy because of some disgracefully irresponsible people. The reactor that exploded is to me a symbol of an evil force which forever exists beside us. Human beings were dying, and the danger remained enormous—until these young firemen stopped it at the cost of their own lives.

I remember when Soviet cosmonaut Georgy Grechko told me how a Soviet spaceship was saved only seconds before exploding. It could have been a disaster like Challenger, he said, but, fortunately, at the last instant, the emergency system worked. Time and time again, people and their nations wind up on the edge of survival because of someone's indifference, because situations required heroism when the most ordinary and responsible decision, made in a timely fashion, would have accomplished much more. Like Chernobyl.

Today we speak of glasnost, of the politics of openness in my country, as if there's something extraordinary about publishing books that previously were prohibited and by the release of wrongly convicted people from prison. The thing is, such publications and releases should be seen as normal, completely normal. I think that the abnormal, what was lawless, was that books by Pasternak and Gumilev were missing from our bookshelves. There existed a void for plays and books that were prohibited even recently in my country. Such openness should have been the norm, instead of the necessity. Houses, books and atomic power plants should not burn. We should not have to carry children from a fire; there should be no fire. That is all. It's very simple.

Spiritual Chernobyls are no less dangerous than that fiery nuclear reactor. The cry "S-O-S" is more relevant today than ever before. but as Save Our Souls.

The people of America I met on my tour across your land impressed me with their sincerity and their broad understanding of the importance of good relations between our countries.

This understanding, I believe, has grown in the last few years. It has been a joy to sense this. In the fall of 1982, America surprised me with its dourness. Its anti-Sovietism, I felt, had penetrated the very pores of American life. Rambo: First Blood Part II had not been released yet, nor had Red Dawn or Amerika been filmed. But one could foretell that they would make their appearance.

I think that America has survived the appeal to hatred. America did not become animalistic; nor did it allow itself to become obsessed with animosity toward my country.

Yet, as you know, some politicians attempted to build a lightning rod out of hatred. The face of hatred showed its fury. It shook in the river of time, then slowly began to drift away. It was good to sense this, good to know that my worst fears did not come true. A spiritual Chernobyl did not consume America from within; this great country remained just as diverse in its interest and appreciation, from Rambo to Mickey Mouse, understanding the value of each and relating to each appropriately.

I took part in a farmers' holiday near one of the world's best museums of folk life, the Appalachian museum created by John Rice Irwin at Norris, Tenn. With me was Alex Haley, author of one of the most profound books of our time, Roots. We talked, sang, even danced, all the while sensing the common background to our existence as human beings—for him, the victory he had described over slavery and the difficult and honest trek toward freedom; for me, the victory over a hatred which some have tried to foist upon our people—and the joy each of us felt from the farmers' handshakes and smiles.

How much paper and film has been wasted in the attempt to divide people speaking different languages, people who only work and hope for a future? It would be possible, I'm sure, to feed all of the starving people of Africa with the cost of one movie dedicated to hatred. The investment that has been made in hatred, as I see it, has not paid off: Though there still may be pieces of shrapnel flying around from the bombs of hatred that continue to explode, the number of their victims grows smaller and smaller.

I recall my encounters in Chicago and New Orleans, in Washington, D.C., and New York. We were far from agreeing with one another on everything, but each time we attempted to understand each other more sincerely. This is the essence of our reconstruction, our openness. Even if you know what the world can give you, to paraphrase John Kennedy, you must ask what you can do for the world.

I am a realist.

I know that there are people in America who are not interested in improved relations with my country. I know such people in my own country as well. By creating, inflating and inflaming tensions between us, these people in both nations attempt to justify their own existence. Any step toward mutual understanding makes their lives, everything that they did and continue to do, seem senseless. They profit in loss. Hatred is much simpler than love; war is much simpler than peace. The confrontationalists, fueled by personal and powerful ambition, know how to use newspapers and television studios. Those who seek cooperation are learning, though. If we stick at it, I believe, we will be stronger.

I dislike it when some people bring a conspiratorial attitude into the meetings of people of goodwill from our nations.

It really rubs me the wrong way when, at Soviet-American meetings, people begin to talk about who's buying whom, who will obtain more benefit from improved relations between our nations.

The benefit is obvious. It will benefit me, my wife and children very much. New Orleans dockworkers will profit, the farmers of Illinois and Tennessee as well. And, along with them, the winemakers of Soviet Georgia.

Some people, though, will lose: It has been a long time since I've seen unemployed bureaucrats.

You may not believe in the openness for which my country's current leadership is fighting. You may distrust me, because I tell you I am a Communist. Nevertheless, it is not at all difficult to understand that no one will benefit from an explosion in Chernobyl or a bad harvest in Ohio. We must hold hands in the darkness. If fewer people die in Afghanistan and Nicaragua, in Angola and El Salvador, then life will improve for all of us.

We need to foster healthy feelings of humanity within ourselves. Otherwise, we will not survive.

Nations—all nations—must give their citizens the freedom to choose their place of residence. This must be the individual's choice. To me, that is obvious.

Those of us who have chosen their countries forever, though, how should we live? How do we learn to share common joys, common pain, to hope for all?

Korotich and Anderson on the campus of Mercy College in Dobbs Ferry, N.Y.

I believe that at every level—the head of state, the farmer, a journalist—each of us can do a great deal today to help the world survive

This evening, when Americans watch their televisions, then retire to bed, it will be morning, the beginning of a new day in my country. I would like to do all I can so that you sleep peacefully. When night comes for me in my country, I will retire to sleep in the faith that America, which I know and love, will see to it that my peace—my children's peace—is not disturbed.

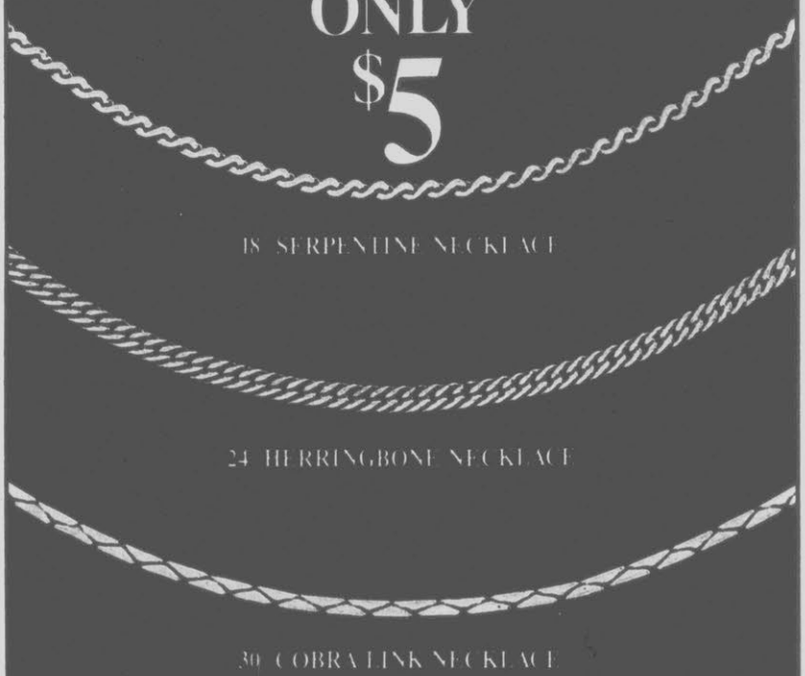

It is very good that we grow closer.

In spite of everything. JC

A New Dragnet Goes Beyond the Facts

Universal Pictures

Aykroyd (l), Hanks: Unlikely partners in Dragnet

Do you remember, "Just the facts, ma'am," intoned deadpan by the relentlessly incorruptible Sgt. Joe Friday? Now, director Tom Mankiewicz brings us the perfect actor—Dan Aykroyd—to play the nephew of Jack Webb's hard-boiled original in Dragnet, a loving parody of the long-running TV series. "We used the dum de dum dum, the style and the rhythms of the old show," says Mankiewicz, "in a plot about a maniacal band of hedonistic zealots who try to take over Los Angeles. Naturally, it's up to Danny and Tom [Tom Hanks, who plays Friday's irrepressible new partner] to stop them." Modern touches? "Sergeant Friday finds the one woman in the world for him and falls in love," says Mankiewicz. This we gotta see.

Goofy Planet Joins The Space Wars

Mel Brooks' new comedy, Spaceballs, is about Spaceball, a planet of ruthless idiots who have squandered all of its air. The plot—both a takeoff of Star Wars-type movies and a satire of how we live today—involves Spaceball's scheme to steal air from the peace-loving planet Druidia. One of the movie's targets, says Brooks' co-writer, Thomas Meehan, is the merchandising of movies: "Our products are within the movie. The characters use 'Spaceballs: The Towel,' 'Spaceballs: The Shaving Cream'..." Brooks plays both President Skroob, "an egomaniacal fool patterned after all of our Presidents," says Meehan, and Yogurt, "a 2-foot-tall wise man."

Rock Stars Paid Off in Peanut Butter, Too

What's great about being a big rock star isn't only the big bucks, says an article in the July Glamour. It's the delicious feeling of having every little whim taken seriously and catered to by other grown people. For example, when Bruce Springsteen is on the road, his contract stipulates, he must have a certain brand of peanut butter candies. Van Halen's deal calls for a favorite candy-covered chocolate. Public Enemy must have flavored chewable vitamins. And Prince's contract calls for a specific kind of corn chips and chocolate chip cookies. Is this the generation whose mothers were all into vegetables for snacks?

Announcing the world's first porcelain and crystal bell

24 karat gold embellishment / $69

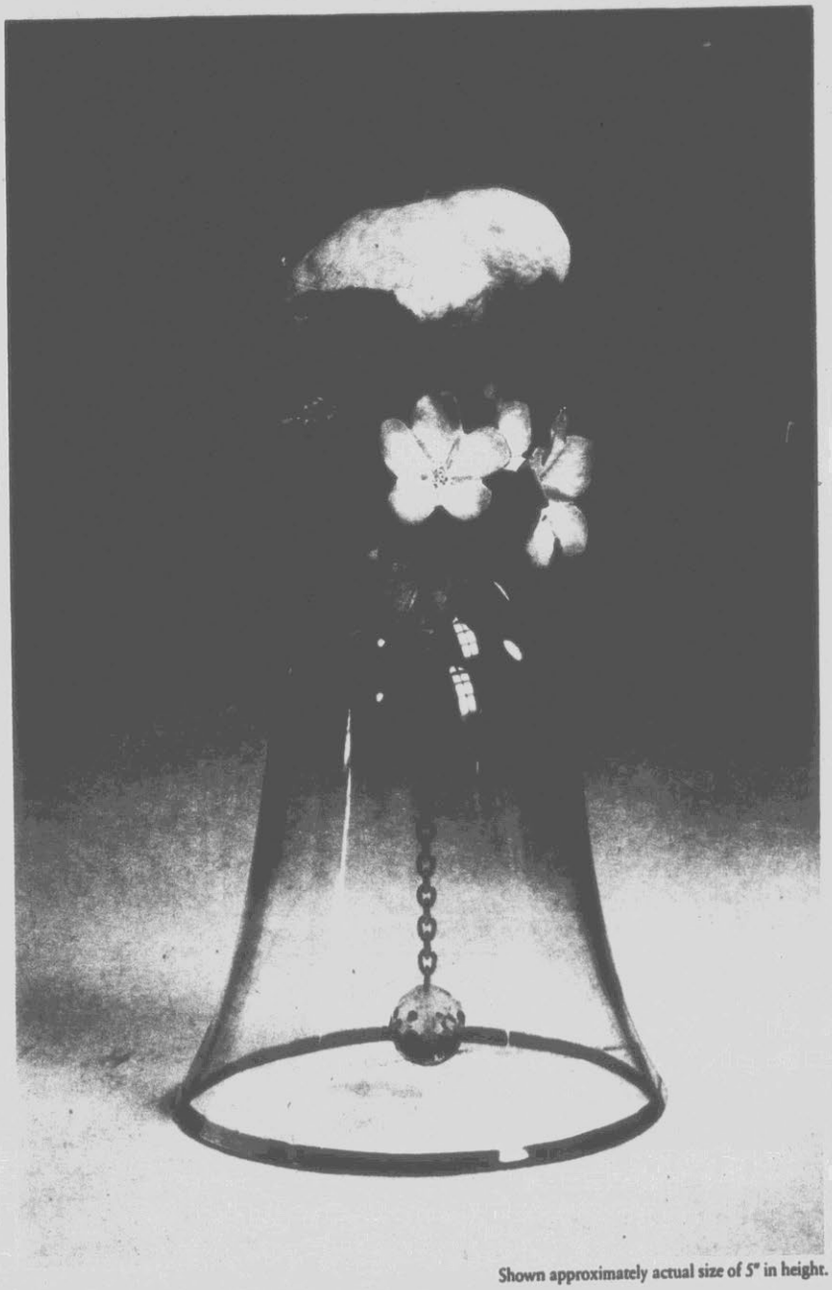

The loveliest and most unusual bell ever created. You've probably never seen a work of art so tempting. A delightful goldfinch of hand-painted porcelain nestles on a sprig of flowering apple. His perch seems to dance on air. And his song is the note of full lead crystal.

This is the joy of owning the world's first porcelain and crystal bell. Impressively wedding the two artistic mediums most cherished by collectors. And wonderfully affordable at just $69, in three monthly installments of $23 each.

Created by Wilhelm Buehler, the internationally renowned bird artist, "Goldfinch" is a work of stunning realism. The golden plumage, black cap and tipped feathers of the American goldfinch are all precisely defined. As are the petals of each flower and the serrations on each leaf.

Its crafting is equally remarkable. The sculpture is hand assembled from individual porcelain castings. After firing, it is painted by hand—each feather, leaf and petal. Full lead crystal is tinted to a blush of apple-blossom pink... and hand gathered to form the bell. Pure 24 karat gold rims the bell. And a faceted crystal clapper, on a 24 karat gold electroplate chain, provides the lilting ring and an elegant touch.

An important first for collectors, and a treasure of rare enchantment to display in your home, this imported porcelain and crystal bell is available only from The Franklin Mint. To enter your order, simply sign and return the accompanying form by July 20, 1987.

Shown approximately actual size of 5" in height.

Cost of Royalty

For those interested in how much some members of the British royal family are voted by the government to fulfill their public duties, herewith the latest annual figures from the Civil List, the British document that reveals who gets what. Most include raises of 4.8% to cover inflation, and all were converted into dollars (at $1.61 for a pound).

The Queen: $6,965,021; the Queen Mother: $603,750; Prince Philip, the Queen's husband: $336,490; Princess Anne, their daughter: $209,944; Princess Margaret, the Queen's sister: $204,470; Prince Andrew, the Queen's second son: $80,500; Prince Edward, her youngest: $32,200.

Andrew and Edward got no raises this year. As for Prince Charles, heir to the throne, he receives no payment. His income is derived from the Duchy of Cornwall estates.

She's an Authority on Rape

If you're a young man dating a young lady, and she says "stop!" or "no!" in the course of your togetherness, you had better listen, because some young ladies today are of a mind to sue you for assault or even accuse you of rape.

That's the warning from Susan Estrich, 34, who is on leave from the Harvard Law School, where in 1981 she became the first woman to teach criminal law and the first professor to include rape law in her lectures. Professor Estrich is an authority on rape and the author of Real Rape, a pioneering work on the subject, published earlier this year.

Estrich wrote her book, she recently explained to this reporter, because she feels strongly that the law—particularly as it relates to "simple rape"—is unfair to women and must be changed. A "simple rape" is one in which a man engages in intercourse with a woman who isn't his wife, against her will and without her consent. There are no witnesses except the participants, who often have had a prior relationship. There are no threats with weapons and no multiple assailants, as in gang rapes. It is the kind of rape case that many district attorneys are reluctant to try, because the conviction rate is so low.

Professor Estrich empathizes with the victims of rape, because she herself was one. As she sat in her car on May 31, 1974—a few days before she was scheduled to graduate from Wellesley College, said Estrich—"a man held an ice pick to my throat and said, 'Push over, shut up, or I'll kill you.'" She added: "I did what he said, but I couldn't stop crying. When he was finished, I jumped out of my car as he drove away."

The Boston police never found the man who raped her, but the trauma she suffered apparently has been unforgettable. A lawyer's daughter, Estrich entered Harvard Law School, was the first woman elected president of the Harvard Law Review and was graduated in 1977. She clerked for U.S. Supreme Court Justice John Paul Stevens and federal appellate Judge J. Skelly Wright, then decided to ration her time between teaching at Harvard and supporting such top Democrats as Sen. Ted Kennedy, Walter Mondale and now Gov. Michael Dukakis of Massachusetts. Last year, she married Martin Kaplan, a vice president at Walt Disney Pictures.

When asked if she had any idea how to decrease the rape rate in this country, Estrich said: "I think much of it depends on how we educate our young men. If women today are liberated enough to say 'yes' when we want sex, we deserve to be respected and not raped when we say 'no.'"

Biggest Taxpayers

In Japan, anyone who pays a yearly income tax larger than 10 million yen (U.S. $71,428) has his or her name printed on a list, copies of which are posted in local tax offices throughout the country.

Last year, Shigeo Takahashi, 68, a retired real-estate tycoon from Hayama, paid 1.58 billion yen ($11,285,714), making him the No. 1 taxpayer in Japan. Takahashi was followed by two widows: Shinako Mitsui, 76, and Shiro Egusa, 86, both of whom derived most of their income from land sales.

In 1986, Japan boasted 88,306 persons who had paid more than 10 million yen in taxes.

—John Barkham Reviews

A QUICK & DIRTY GUIDE TO WAR

Take just a moment. Look at the book. Few people know it exists. It has never made the bestseller list. Yet, A QUICK & DIRTY GUIDE TO WAR may be the most eye-opening book you will ever read.

Blunt Answers to Hard Questions

Imagine for a moment that you are appointed to a high position at the Pentagon, the State Department, or even the White House. You call in your staff and tell them you want to know "Where are the hot spots in the world today? Who is involved? What are the sources of the conflict? What are the critical geographical and historical factors? What are the strategies of the adversaries? What do they have to gain? Or lose? And how will the superpowers be affected?"

Yes, you want to know all of this. But your time is limited. So you demand that your briefings be limited to 25 pages.

Yes, you have some familiarity with history, politics and geography. But you are not an expert. So you tell your staff to start at the beginning, with unfamiliar terms fully explained. And, above all, you will settle for nothing less than plain-spoken English free of military jargon, and fancy five-dollar words.

The Geo-Political Bottom Line

But most of all, you want to know the bottom line. For example: What are the chances of a major Israeli-Syrian War? (A QUICK & DIRTY GUIDE TO WAR says the probable outcome is a 17% chance leading to a 95% chance of an Israeli victory and a 65% chance that Assad's government will fall.) Who will win the Persian Gulf War? (A QUICK & DIRTY GUIDE TO WAR says the probable outcome is a 65% likelihood of a military stalemate ending in a diplomatic charade that lets both sides look victors; 25% chance of Iranian victory; 10% chance the Iraquis win, but make that 50% if the Ayatollah's regime falls.)

Then, once you believe you have the best expertise money can buy, you may still want to form your own independent judgments. So you request statistics covering the key factors in the international balance of power. Relative populations, economic outputs, weapon strengths.

You Don't Have to Work at the White House to Experience the View From the Top.

Yes, the kind of explosive information we have been talking about is what you get when you purchase A QUICK & DIRTY GUIDE TO WAR. It's really a series of briefings—15 in all. Briefings on the world's deadliest trouble spots. Areas where regional conflicts have already erupted—like Lebanon, Afghanistan and Central America. And places where tensions may cause a major war in the not-too-distant-future—like Central Europe, Southern Africa and the Philippines. All in all—a harsh, unsentimental, yet undeniably fascinating book.

Yet the most startling thing about this book may be its cost. Usually information of this nature and clarity is hard to find at any price. When you are lucky enough to find it in a book, you can end up paying twenty-five, thirty-five, even fifty dollars. But A QUICK & DIRTY GUIDE TO WAR costs only $9.95. And it's every bit as good as we say it is. Or we give you your money back.

"Each chapter, written in a simple and direct style is like an intelligence briefing: useful for anyone who doesn't have time to become an expert but wants a concise report on the world's current hot spots."
—Publishers Weekly

"It is a chilling book, the more so for its sheer lack of bias or emotionalism. If any book deserves to be an international bestseller, this is it."
—John Barkham Reviews

"Dunnigan and Bay, military strategists who have worked for the Pentagon and the Army War College, wrote this book to place 'present and potential wars' in their proper context. They have succeeded, demonstrating that books can do more than study past wars and provide 20/20 hindsight."
—Los Angeles Times Book Review

" . . . blunt, insightful appraisals and wide coverage."
—Library Journal

" . . . a horrifying scorecard of ongoing battle . . . "
—Claudia Rosset, Wall Street Journal

IN STEP WITH:

BY JAMES BRADY

Mickey Rooney

MICKEY ROONEY CAME INTO the big rehearsal hall with a shout of laughter. He is a short, stocky fireplug of a fellow with white hair and a dancer's nimble feet, and he was wearing plastic eyeglasses attached to an elastic strap, like skiers' goggles. When I told him my name, he said, "God bless you, Jim. God bless you," and went past me to sit down at an upright piano and bang out a tune. The eyeglasses, he said, were always falling off during dance rehearsal, so he'd contrived this method of keeping them on—unbroken.

He has been in show business since the age of one, when he crawled out onto a vaudeville stage during his parents' act. A year later, he was a regular. At 5, he made his first film, playing a midget. That was in 1926. He is now in his late 60s, and one of the chorus girls in his current show told me, "He never stops talking. He never stops, period."

For a time, he was down and out. Broken marriages, alimony, age—all seemed to be catching up with him. Then came a corny musical called Sugar Babies, with Ann Miller. It ran on Broadway and on tour for seven years and reestablished Rooney not only as a star but also as a big money-maker. Five years ago, he won an Emmy for his TV role as Bill, a retarded older man. Now, he is going out on a national tour again with A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum, and we were talking in New York, where he was rehearsing.

Rooney was born in Brooklyn. I asked if he ever went back. There was near-ferocity in his answer: "Never! Never look back. Always look ahead." I looked back for him: the Andy Hardy films; Boys Town, with Spencer Tracy; Babes in Arms, with Judy Garland; National Velvet, with Elizabeth Taylor; The Human Comedy, for which he received an Oscar nomination; The Bridges at Toko-Ri; Breakfast at Tiffany's; and The Black Stallion, with another Oscar nomination.

In his time, he played with most of the big names—and was, and is, a big name himself. As an actor, he can make you laugh, he can make you cry. He's also a gifted musician. He plays nearly every instrument, has composed several popular songs and has written a symphony. Knopf, a serious publisher, will bring out his new book. Yet he still plays the clown, clapping an Irish tweed country hat on his head and cracking jokes. Without drawing breath.

Behind the tomfoolery, there is a serious man who has, at long last, grown up. Get him talking about religion sometime, about having found faith, about straightening out a tangled life. Remember that old movie, Life Begins for Andy Hardy? It has just begun again.

BORN: Sept. 23, 1920, in Brooklyn, N.Y.
PERSONAL: Eight marriages—the first to Ava Gardner, 1942-43, and the most recent to Jan Chamberlain; seven children.
STAGE: Sugar Babies, 1979-86.

Eddie Adams

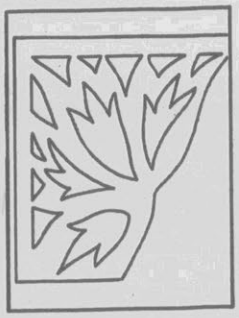

Sixty-six years after he made his first appearance in vaudeville at age one, Mickey Rooney is back on tour. Right now, he's playing the Pantages Theatre in Los Angeles in a farce set in Rome 2000 years ago.

BRADY'S BITS

"You know what?" he said. "They've got a Mickey Rooney doll. You wind it up, and it gets married." He knows about marriage. His bio reports that his height is 5 feet 3, but he adds: "I was 6 feet 4 when I married Ava Gardner." Yet for nine years now, he has been married to Jan Chamberlain, a singer and songwriter. They have a house in the San Fernando Valley and a ranch where Mick has just started yet another career—breeding horses.

Over 450 Woodworking Patterns!

Patterns are the woodworker's most important tool, and now you can own the biggest collection for scroll saws ever put into a single book—over 450 patterns, all of them imaginative and easy to copy, with complete step-by-step instructions, plus lots of handy shortcuts and money-saving tips.

Never again pay $2.00, $3.00 or more for woodworking patterns, when you can get over 450 in this book for less than three cents each! Most of these patterns are simple enough for beginners, or for teaching kids the basics of using a scroll saw. But dozens of advanced designs will assure you the most beautiful and valuable projects you've ever made.

CHOOSE FROM:

Practical gifts for the home—

Handmade gifts for all ages—

Jewelry (necklaces, pins, bracelets, key chains, name badges); Christmas tree ornaments, jigsaw puzzles, toy animals and birds (bears, cats, dogs, elephants, deer, eagles, giraffes, horses, owls, peacocks, pelicans, pigs, rabbits, swans, roosters, tigers, turtles, whales); clowns, masks, pets-on-a-stick, Humpty-Dumpty, Gingerbread Man, wall designs and plaques with silhouettes.

And if you like to challenge your skills, you'll want to try the beautiful recess, relief, marquetry, and inlay techniques.

Handy tips show you how to experiment with a whole range of paint and stain color schemes, woodburning, stencilling, and decal applications—everything you need to add your own distinctive personal touches.

You can even adapt these 450 patterns to discover literally thousands of new project possibilities, with the simple instructions for enlarging and reducing, cropping and flopping, repeating and inverting the designs.

Here's a lifetime of ideas in a book you'll pick up again and again. It's always your first stop whenever you're looking for great woodworking projects! Order your copy today!

A Sumptuous, Sugarfree Recipe

BANANA WALNUT CAKE

Banana Walnut Cake

Rich banana flavor with a light walnut crunch. Delicious with banana jam.

- ⅔ cup mashed banana (mash ripe banana with a fork)
- ½ cup butter, softened
- 3 large eggs
- ¾ cup water
- 2 cups unbleached white flour
- 2 teaspoons baking powder
- 1 teaspoon baking soda
- 1 teaspoon cinnamon
- 1 cup chopped walnuts, or ½ cup walnuts and ½ cup raisins

In a mixing bowl beat together mashed banana and butter until creamy. Add eggs and water. Beat well. Stir in flour, baking powder, baking soda, and cinnamon. Beat until smooth. Add chopped walnuts. Spoon batter into an oiled and floured 9" by 13" baking pan. Spread batter evenly in pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 20 minutes or until a knife inserted comes out clean. Cool and cut into squares. Serves 8 to 10.

What mother does not want wholesome and nutritious foods for her family? My interest in nutrition led me to discover enough disturbing facts about sugar to make me firmly resolve to keep America's #1 high calorie non-food out of the mouths of my children. And honey can be just as unhealthful. In fact, it even contains more calories per cup than sugar! And I wasn't willing to serve my family artificial sweeteners. So I simply stopped serving cakes, cookies, candy and other sugar-sweetened desserts.

But my family was unhappy about it. Even my husband dropped hints like "Remember how good chocolate cake tastes?" And I had to admit I too missed desserts. So I found a way to treat my family's sweet tooth—without using a spoonful of sugar. And without honey or artificial sweeteners. And now you can too.

No Sugar—No Honey—No Artificial Sweeteners

SWEET AND SUGARFREE is the cookbook that tells you how. It offers you 207 different recipes for cakes, cookies, breads, sherbets, custard and much more. Try my Banana Walnut Cake above. I've developed a few hundred SWEET AND SUGARFREE recipes but this is the one people ask for most. Or my sweet and chewy spicy Apple Raisin Coffee Cake. Or create a luscious pineapple cream pie (it only sounds rich), banana nut pancakes topped with apricot syrup, or easy-to-make peach cheesecake.

"I love what you are doing and the way that you do it."
—Lendon H. Smith, M.D.
author of FEED YOUR KIDS RIGHT

"I strongly recommend this book for every person who wants to be healthy while enjoying the sensation of sweetness as nature meant it to be enjoyed—with good, whole, safe food."

author of ORTHOMOLECULAR NUTRITION AND NUTRIENTS TO AGE WITHOUT SENILITY

207 Sugarfree Recipes In All!

The secret is simply using natural fresh fruits and fruit juices—nature's most wholesome sweetener, available in a variety of tangy flavors, all rich in vitamins and minerals . . . and with considerably fewer calories than sugar or honey.

So give it a try. I think it will open up a whole world of new desserts for you. What have you got to lose, except sugar, calories or pounds? Order your copy of SWEET AND SUGARFREE today!

SENTRY 100ZX RADAR DETECTOR

FOR ONLY $29.95? IF YOU GIVE US YOUR OPINION ON THE NEW 65 MPH SPEED LIMIT

Unbelievable But True!

As part of an enormous nationwide publicity campaign, the USA Buyers Network will offer one million of its most expensive radar detectors — the famous "SENTRY" 100ZX™ — for the unprecedented low publicity price of only $29.95 each — only to the first one million (1,000,000) readers who write to the company address (below) before Midnight July 30, 1987.

National Speed Limit Survey

- ☐ REINSTATE THE 55 MPH LIMIT ON ALL HIGHWAYS
- ☐ CURRENT SPEED LIMITS ARE ADEQUATE
- ☐ INSTATE 65 MPH LIMIT ON ALL HIGHWAYS
- ☐ THERE SHOULD BE NO SPEED LIMITS

These are the same technologically advanced, widely popular RADAR DETECTORS that have been "showcased" in leading magazines and newspapers across America! Designed for use on dashboard or visor, they are suitable for any motor vehicle — cars, vans or trucks. They are the most expensive, top-of-the-line RADAR DETECTORS ever offered by this multi-million dollar firm. Yet they are now being made available — in conjunction with this special "publicity" campaign — at just a fraction of the selling price you'd expect to see by others!

PICKS UP POLICE RADAR INSTANTLY!

The "SENTRY" 100ZX™ RADAR DETECTOR has been especially designed for the professional driver. Housed in a sleek, protective black steel casing are state-of-the-art electronics that pickup — and alert a driver to — the presence of operating police radar. Its controls are simple — just turn it on...and wait for near by police radar to trigger the DETECTOR's two immediate warnings — both a red signal light and audio tone. And because it monitors microwave frequency (the most commonly used radar frequency), the "SENTRY" 100ZX™ RADAR DETECTOR is very discriminating against "false alarms" or unwanted interference.

Each RADAR DETECTOR comes complete with power indicator light, a built-in 7½ foot power cord adapter (to plug into your vehicle's cigarette lighter), plus easy-to-install mounting hardware and instructions. As with every item offered by this major publicity firm, the "SENTRY" 100ZX™ RADAR DETECTOR is covered by the company's money-back guarantee and has a full 2-year consumer warranty. There is a limit of (2) units per address at this low price, but if your request is mailed early enough (before July 25), you may request up to five units. These famous "SENTRY" 100ZX™ RADAR DETECTORS will not be sold at this low price by the company in any retail or department store.

To order, mail your name and address and only $29.95 for each unit. Add just $4.00 for priority one shipping, handling and insurance no matter how many units you are requesting. (Sales tax included in price). Allow up to 60 days for shipment. Void where prohibited by law. Please check with local authorities regarding legality in your area. Mail to:

Susan Ruttan Stars On 'L.A. Law.'

TV secretaries often exist—when they do exist—to show that their bosses, really do something, even if it's asking through the speakerphone for the Jones file. There was efficient but amorous Susie McNamara played by Ann Sothern in "Private Secretary," kooky Tina from "The Courtship of Eddie's Father," stalwart Della Street from "Perry Mason," and the temptresses who flood the offices of soap-opera husbands. But there hasn't been a secretary like Roxanne.

As played by Susan Ruttan, Roxanne, the nurturing, long-pining secretary to Arnie Becker (Corbin Bernsen), on NBC's "L.A. Law," has brought a new dimension to the TV secretary to Arnie Becker (Corbin Bernsen), on NBC's "L.A. Law," has brought a new dimension to the TV secretary.

"She's a real person," says Ruttan. "I identify with her strongly. Even though she's hooked on Arnie, she's been getting stronger. I was happy to see her assert herself and ask for a raise. I get letters from secretaries praising Roxanne, saying "That's what happened to me.' When Roxanne was negotiating the raise, people would come up to me and yell, 'Did you get it?'"

Roxanne underwent a dramatic change at the end of last season, threatening to quit unless her demands were met. "I was so proud of her," says Ruttan. "Sometimes I get so wrapped up in the character that I forget it's not me. Once I was doing a secne where Arnie (Bernsen) yelled at Roxanne. When the scene was over, I started to cry. When he asked me what was wrong I said, 'You hurt my feelings.' He said, 'But it's just a scene,' but it was more than that to me."

Ruttan did everything from waitressing ("I spilled things") to casting ("I missed performing") before turning to acting. "I was so lucky with 'L.A. Law,'" she says. "I started out as a bit player, and I was the first actor to be offered a contract.

"I'd love to see Roxanne get even stronger next season. I'd like to see her have more involvement with the other female cast members. I'd like to see new directions in her life. Maybe she could even have a child."

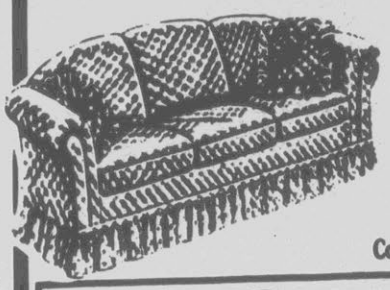

Susan Ruttan stars as needy, nurturing secretary Roxanne on NBC's "L.A. Law." The show airs Thursdays.

But Ruttan has no desire to see Roxanne become ambitious to the point where she decides to go to law school. "She's a secretary," asserts Ruttan. "That's what she does. I'd like to see her stay a secretary, just become more independent. She's not a secretary who's a struggling something else. That's what makes her real.

"It's funny," days Ruttan. "When I'm talking about her, I feel like I'm talking about me several years ago. I'd like to see us both keep growing."

Michele Will Tell

Dear Michele: Last year, Brian Dennehy starred in a TV movie about a chemical leak in a plant located in the United States. What was the name of this film? Also, please provide a short bio of this wonderful actor. — MEGAN DAVIDSON, MARION, VA.

Dennehy likes to work. In 1985, he co-starred in three films: "Cocoon," "Silverado" and "Twice in a Lifetime." No sooner had he wrapped these three, then he was back in front of thecameras in "F/X," "Legal Eagles," and "Best Sellers." Sandwiched in between was the ABC movie, "Acceptable Risk." Dennehy portrayed the manager of a plant that was devastated by a chemical leak.

Dennehy, born July 9, 1938, in Bridgeport, Conn., moved to Mineola, N.Y., with his family at age 12. Dennehy's father was an Associated Press editor for 40 years and he briefly considered a career in journalism. A member of Columbia University's football squad, Dennehy graduated that school in 1960 with a degree in history. He then enlisted in the U.S. Marine Corps, and served a six-yearstint. The actor saw action in Vietnam, where he was wounded twice.

Dear Michele: Please, what is the exact title and year of a made-for-television movie about Lizzie Borden that starred Elizabeth Montgomery? — MICHELLE TRUMBLE, NEW LONDON, CONN.

"The Legend of Lizzie Borden," which aired on ABC in 1975, earned Montgomery an Emmy nomination for her well-honed performance as the sinister ax murderer. Also appearing in the TV moviewere Ed Flanders, Fritz Weaver, Don Porter, Katherine Helmond, John Beal and Fionnula Flanagan.

Dear Michele: Was Dennis Cole ever a series regular on the Western "Wagon Train"? — H.M. FOSTER, WALSH, COLO.

Cole, a former stuntman and double for Troy Donahue on the detective series "Hawaiian Eye," was never a member of the "Wagon Train" cast. Cole's starring series credits include "Felony Squad" (1966-69), "Bracken's World" (1969-70) and "Bearcats" (1971). Off-screen, his most famous starring role was as Jaclyn Smith's second husband.

Dear Michele: I hope you can answer this. What was the title of the film in which Cary Grant portrayed a doctor? Hume Cronyn also appeared in this movie. — TIM ROWLEY, YOUNGSTOWN, OHIO.

I believe you are referring to "People Will Talk" (1951). Grant portrayed a doctor, and Jeanne Crain played the patient who became his wife. Also appearing in this excellent comedy/drama were Hume Cronyn, Walter Slezak, Finlay Currie and Sidney Blackmer.

THE Rook Look AT GARMENT CARE

DICKIE ROOK

Care for Winter Garments

Would you store your dishes without washing them, and then clean them just before serving a meal? Why do this with your winter clothes?

A Cleaner World and the International Fabricare Institute advise you to never store your winter garments over the Spring and Summer without having them cleaned first.

Many types of soil and stains will attract moths and other insects. Others will become harder to remove and some may be impossible to clean.

Bring your winter clothes to A Cleaner World. Your clothes will be cleaned for storage and they will be better protected to give you more wear.

NEW 'GUNSMOKE'

James Arness and Amanda Blake will star in a new "Gunsmoke" TV movie currently in production in Calgary, Alberta. The film, in which Arness and Blake re-create their roles as Marshal MattDillon and Miss Kitty, respectively, takes place 12 years after the series ended, with Dillon now retired as town marshal and leading the life of a mountain trapper. Also returning from the original series are Fran Ryan as the owner of the Long Branch saloon, Steve Forrest as Mannon and Buck Taylor as Newly O'Brien.

HOLIDAY STORY

"The Little Match Girl," an NBC movie based on a Christmas story by Hans Christian Andersen, is currently in production in Vancouver, British Columbia. Starring Keshia Knight-Pulliam ("The Cosby Show"), Rue McClanahan ("The Golden Girls") and William Daniels ("St. Elsewhere"), the film will be broadcast during the 1987 Christmas holidays. "The Little Match Girl" tells the story of a poor streetwise little girl and her effect upon a powerful businessman.

BROTHERS

Real-life brothers Robert and David Carradine will star as on-screen brothers in "I Saw What You Did," a suspense drama scheduled for future broadcast on CBS. Robert Carradine plays a disturbed young man who has just committed a brutal murder. Tammy Lauren and Shawnee Smith also star as two girls who make a series of prank phone calls and unwittingly call on Carradine's disturbed character, telling him, "I saw what you did and I know who you are." The fun is over for the two when the anguished murderer seeks to silence them.

TV Chatter

When she isn't playing newspaper reporter and mother Maggie Seaver on "Growing Pains," Joanna Kerns is busy at home doing some real writing. Kerns is peddling the fruits of these labors — an autobiographical screenplay, "Freestyle." It's based on the sibling rivalry she had with her sister Donna de Varona, a 1964 Olympic gold medalist swimmer, who is now an ABC sports commentator. "When I was growing up, our family was very goal-oriented toward one child, my sister. It's real hard when you have a child in a national sport, not to have the entire family focus on that child. It affected me a lot." In the screenplay, Kerns' younger version of herself feels that if she also wins a place on the Olympic swim team, then perhaps her father will love her as much as he loves her sports-star sister. Kerns says her sister has read "Freestyle" and feels the script is "very accurate." As for the sibling rivalry described in the story, it doesn't exist anymore, Kerns says. "Whatever I had to resolve with my sister I did a long time ago. I don't have a better friend than her."

Although he once owned a palatial home in suburban Los Angeles and now has a penthouse condo on Waikiki beach, John Hillerman, who plays the irascible Higgins on "Magnum, P.I.," recently took a trip down memory lane that was more like a walk through nightmare alley. While visiting New York, he returned to the Lower East Side tenement where he occupied a fourth-floor, cold-water walk-up during his days as a starving actor. "I was shocked at how poor I was," Hillerman says. "There was this tiny bedroom about 10 feet by 10 feet with a bathtub in the kitchen. I was so poor I couldn'tafford to eat out, and I had to teach myself to cook for survival." As for his current luxurious lifestyle, he boasts, "I always knew how to live well. I just didn't have the money to do it." But even if he had had the cash, Hillerman insists he would have gone the starving artist route anyway. "When you're broke and haven't got a job, you have all the incentive to go out and look for work.It's a very bruising process. You go out and face daily rejection. You have to be really hungry to put up with all the abuse you get on auditions."

"Jeopardy!" recently aired a special week featuring senior citizen contestants. Although the senior citizens were a big hit with viewers, don't expect to see another group of special contestants — celebrities — on the game show considered to be the most challenging on TV. The public may love celebrity sports shows like "Battle of the Network Stars," but when it comes to general knowledge, the stars definitely belong on the B-team. "We thought of doing celebrities the first year, but I was concerned about having them be embarrassed about not being bright enough to answer the questions," says host Alex Trebek. "And we didn't want to have to tailor the questions to fit their intelligence levels." At first, Trebek considered giving would-be celebrity contestants the same written test that all potential "Jeopardy" contestants must take to qualify. "It would be better to be rejected at the test stage than to wind up on camera doing poorly." That idea was axed when it was realized that the stars wouldn't take kindly to getting an "F" on their trivia tests.

Jason Bateman turned 18 last January, and he's moving out of the family home in the San Fernando Valley into a bachelor pad in yuppie Brentwood, Calif., near Beverly Hills. Bateman, who plays Valerie Harper's super-cool son David on "Valerie," says he has been looking forward to his freedom for the past year. "Life's not that bad at home, but midway through my 17th year I thought, 'In six months I'm going to be able to do anything I want to — when I want to.'" Bateman's plans don't sound all that wild, however for one of Hollywood's most eligible bachelors. He plan to travel by himself and "stay up all night, every night, if I want to."

Mary Frann ("Newhart") on the joys of self-indulgence: "I never met a chocolate cookie I didn't like."... And this is George Hamilton will never win the Alan Alda Sensitive Male Award: "When I take a woman out to dinner, I always order for her. Women like to have decisions made for them." So that's how Liz Taylor lost all that weight!

BEHIND THE SCENES

A teen actress works with George C. Scott

By Frank Lovece

Great Scott! At least that's what they used to call George C. before he took the title role in Fox's witless "Mr. President" (airing Sundays). That the show was created by "Mary Tyler Moore" alumnus Ed. Weinberger, and boasts the respected comedy screenwriter David Lloyd ("Cheers") as a consultant, makes its banality all the more perplexing.

Maddie Corman

Maddie Corman, who plays the First Daughter, tries not to think about these things. At 17, she was born long after Scott's only other TV series – the much-acclaimed "East Side, West Side" – finished its one-season run in 1964. Besides, she says, it's a thrill just to work alongside someone of Scott's stature.

"He doesn't put on any airs," says Corman. "On the other hand, he doesn't try to pretend he's just one of the gang. But we all laugh together and try to crack each other up."

Naturally, given Scott's reputation not only as a world-class performer but as a tempestuous perfectionist, "Some people do tiptoe around him," Corman reports. "But he's a lovely guy. Yes, he's very respected and powerful, but if that's going to be the case, better George C. Scott than some 23-year-old flash."

Corman has already built up a long list of credits, including "Twelve Dreams" at New York City's Public Theater. She went on to do two films, the quick-run "Seven Minutes in Heaven" and the well-received "Some Kind of Wonderful."

Episodic television was a change of pace. "Faster!" she says in mock-shock. "Much faster. We do a half-hour show in four days; there's a different director and writer every week. You really have to do your homework; nobody has time to pat you on the shoulder. And you don't really have time to explore your character. I don't really feel I'm there until I've tried something five ways."

That someone of her age can come up with five ways to do a scene says a lot about her abilities. And despite the giggles, she understands the business end of TV, too. "A long run (of 'Mr. President') scares me – TV contracts commit you to a long time," she explains. Fortunately for Maddie Corman's career, she has a long time.

ATTN: Joe Styron - Display Advertising

Dear Joe,

There are many ways for me to spend my advertising dollar. But to find an effective way is an entirely different story.

Last year you gave me an opportunity to advertise in The Daily Reflector's TV Showtime publication. I was, to say the least, hesitant; after all, I rarely sign a 52 week agreement of any sort much less an advertising one.

The program proved however, to be a most effective one. My ad is in the same position every week, all year long. This allows my customers to see what the mall has to offer every day. This consistant form of advertising has proven to be a good performer, therefore I am pleased to renew my position for the 1987/1988 year.

Your continued attention in helping my advertising campaign to be as effective as possible is greatly appreciated.

Sincerely,

Lisa V. Tapp-Daughtry

'Molly Dodd' Is Trying A Different Approach

By Jon Burlingame

Veteran TV producer-writer Jay Tarses says "The Days and Nights of Molly Dodd" is easily his best work. That's quite a statement coming from a man, who with his former partner, Tom Patchett,produced "The Bob Newhart Show," the cult favorite "Buffalo Bill" and a half-dozen other TV comedies.

"If you watch the show every week you never know where it's going to go," says Tarses. "Viewers should laugh and they should choke up a bit. I want people to be puzzled, I want them to be annoyed. There are loose ends, and there should be."

Indeed, "The Days and Nights of Molly Dodd" is the best thing to happen to summer TV in years. Intelligent, sometimes witty, frequently bittersweet, "Molly Dodd" (airing Thursdays on NBC) offers mature television.

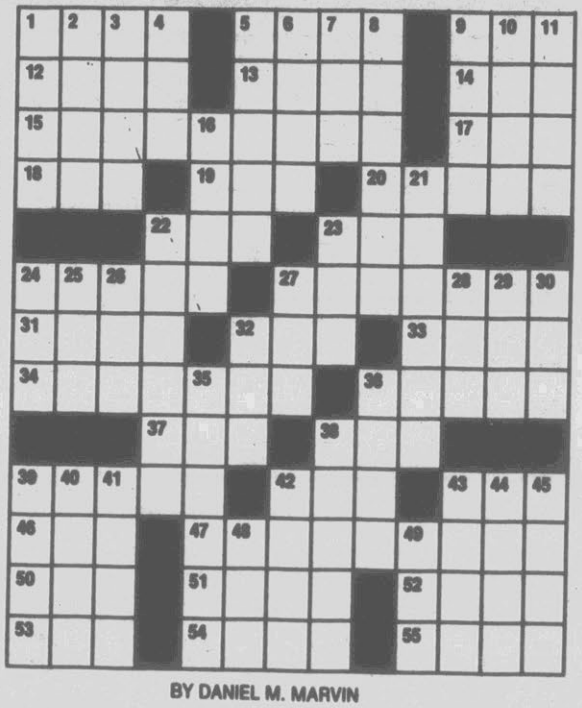

From the usually disapproving voice-over commentary by Molly's mother (Allyn Ann McLerie) in the teaser to those predominantly melancholy main-title shots of red-haired Blair Brown over Patrick Williams' unusual jazz-violin theme, "Molly Dodd" signals viewers they're about to see something different.

Molly, a New York career woman on the brink of 35, articulates the fears and insecurities of a generation of women. Her marriage failed (although she can't stay away from her ex-husband). She's victimized by her boss (and finds herself unemployed). Her poetry is rejected (and criticized by her building's elevator operator). She hasn't had a baby yet (and everyone around her seems to be pregnant).

Tarses says it wasn't difficult to write from the point of view of a sensitive, sometimes confused woman at the crossroads. "Outside of the obvious biological differences, I think men and women are the same," he says. "They're in the same state of flux, the same floundering in choppy seas. They're human beings with insecurities and uncertainties, facing the vicissitudes of life."

"Molly Dodd" is an outgrowth of a failed pilot he had done with Brown called "The Faculty."

Actor Chris Lemmon: Making His Own Way

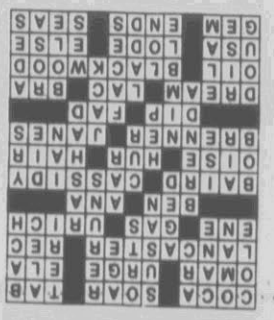

By Ian Harmer

HOLLLYWOOD — Chris Lemmon spent a large part of his adult life immersing himself in music and resisting the temptation to become an actor like his father, Jack Lemmon. As a kid, he'd often been made to feel like "a thing ... an appendage" by people who prejudged him because of his father's stellar status. Although he envied and admired his father's talent, he stubbornly kept running in the opposite direction.

Lemmon says that music remains an important part of his life, and he has no regrets about the years he used it as a refuge from his father's profession.

"I still intend to become incredibly famous as a musician and a songwriter," jokes Lemmon, "but acting gives me a kick that I would not want to be without. I have a face, a voice and mannerisms that people recognize very quickly, and for a while I felt cheated because I thought I wasn't being allowed a style and a personality of my own.

"Then I realized that there's nothing wrong with a son being compared to his father — millions of guys go through it, and it just happens that my dad is known by more people than most!"

BACK AGAIN

Nine of the original stars of "Eight Is Enough" will reprise their roles in an NBC movie, "Eight Is Enough: Reunion," scheduled for telecast during the 1987-88 season. Dick Van Patten, Willie Ames, Grant Goodeve, Dianne Kay, Connie Needham, Lani O'Grady, Adam Rich, Susan Richardson and Laurie Walters will be joined by Mary Frann ("Newhart") in the role of Abby Bradford in this two-hour movie which began production June 3 in Los Angeles. Harry Harris, Gwen Bagni-Dubov and Bill Blinn, each behind-the-camera veterans of the highly successful series, have also returned as director, writer and executive producer, respectively.

U.S. Open Site Has Had A Few Fluke Finishes

By Adam Beckerman

There's no more likely event a sudden upset than the U.S. en, which has been played all s week at the Olympic Club's keside Course in San Fran- co. And there's no more like- time than during the final nd, which airs Sunday, June on ABC.

The other two times the Open s held at Lakeside, (1955 and 6), the leader lost in a final- nd playoff. And at last ar's U.S. Open, held at Shin- cock in Southampton, N.Y., eg Norman entered the final holes as the leader. He then lf-destructed as Raymond oyd took the final round, and e tournament.

This year Norman, a favorite make it to the the final nd, has seen lightning strike ice. In April, he lost two con- cutive major tournaments be- se opponents holed winning ts from off the green.

At the PGA tournament held Inverness, Scotland, he led ng into the final round, only be deprived of victory when b Tway sank a 25-foot bunk- shot at the 18th hole.

And at the Masters, held in gusta, Ga., he watched help- ssly on the second hole of a sudden-death playoff as Larry Mize, once an Augusta score- keeper, chipped a sand wedge from 140 feet that bounced onto the green and rolled 50 feet into the cup for a birdie 3. Norman failed to sink a 50-foot putt that would have prolonged the playoff.

The U.S. Open kicks off a busy summer golf season for ABC. The network will broadcast the U.S. Senior Open July 11 and 12, the British Open July 18 and 19, and the U.S. Women's Open July 25 and 26.

* Also on June 21, the Formula One Grand Prix auto race takes to the streets of Detroit, Mich. Two-time defending world driving champion Alain Prost will seek his 28th Grand Prix victory. With a win in the Motor City, Prost would surpass Jackie Stewart as the all-time winningest Grand Prix driver. The 32-year-old Frenchman leads the world drivers' points standings with 18.

In second place, with 15 points, is a possible heir to the throne, 27-year-old Ayrton Senna of Brazil. Senna is the defending Detroit Grand Prix Champion, and apparently likes the Motown streets. In his Camel-sponsored gold Lotus, he is favored to garner his sixth Formula One victory. CBS covers the race beginning at 1 p.m.

The BETTER HALF®

by HARRIS

Featuring HARRIET & STANLEY PARKER

"The dentist hasn't inspected your teeth in three years! Should we just wait until they fall out and mail them in?"

"The bridge on the road to ruin is being repaired. We have to run the detour through your basement."

"Time for another report card! You get an 'A' in 'trust', but I'm signing you up for 'remedial necking'!"

"There's this wishing well at the mall. I wished I would lose 100 pounds."

"I'd like to have my wife de-programmed. She belongs to a cult that believes men should wash dishes."

HOCUS-FOCUS

CAN YOU TRUST YOUR EYES? There are at least six differences in drawing details between top and bottom panels. How quickly can you find them? Check answers with those below.

Differences: 1. Hair is different. 2. Paper is shorter. 3. Sleeve is shorter. 4. Arm is moved. 5. Bow is missing. 6. Magazine is missing.

Junior Whirl®

by Hal Kaufman

• DUCK SOUP! Challenge: Deliver six shots to score exactly 100 on the firing line at right. Hit any of numbered ducks as often as necessary.

Remember, objective is to shoot six times, and score a total of exactly 100 in the process.

Can you comply?

Time limit: 2 minutes.

Two sixteens and four seventeens will do it.

• MURKY MATH! One-third of twelve may be added to four-fifths of seven in such a way that the result is eleven. How is that?

ADD-A-LETTER CHALLENGE

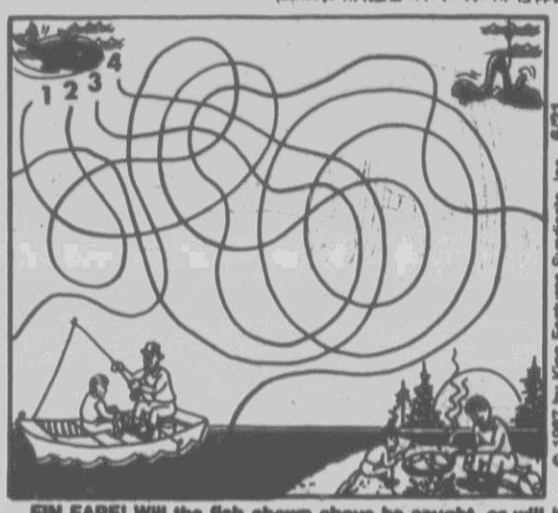

Beginning with the letter A in the diagram above form new words by adding one letter in each step and rearranging letters as necessary.

Definitions:

1. There, or near.
2. Running game.
3. Fence opening.
4. Kind of fright.
5. Shreds for cooking (as lemon rind, cheese, etc.).
6. Objects marksmen check for bull's-eyes.

Remember, one letter is added to form each new word.

1. At. 2. Tag. 3. Gate. 4. Siege. 5. Grate. 6. Target.

FIN FARE! Will the fish shown above be caught, or will it swim away? Trace through lines to find out.

ON THE NOSE! What's better than a pat on the nose? An apple perhaps, or a lump of sugar? Code: 1—Red. 2—Gray. 3—Dk. brown. 4—Lt. brown. 5—Flesh. 6—Green. 7—Black.

SPELLBINDER

SCORE 10 points for using all the letters in the word below to form two complete words:

ENFILADE

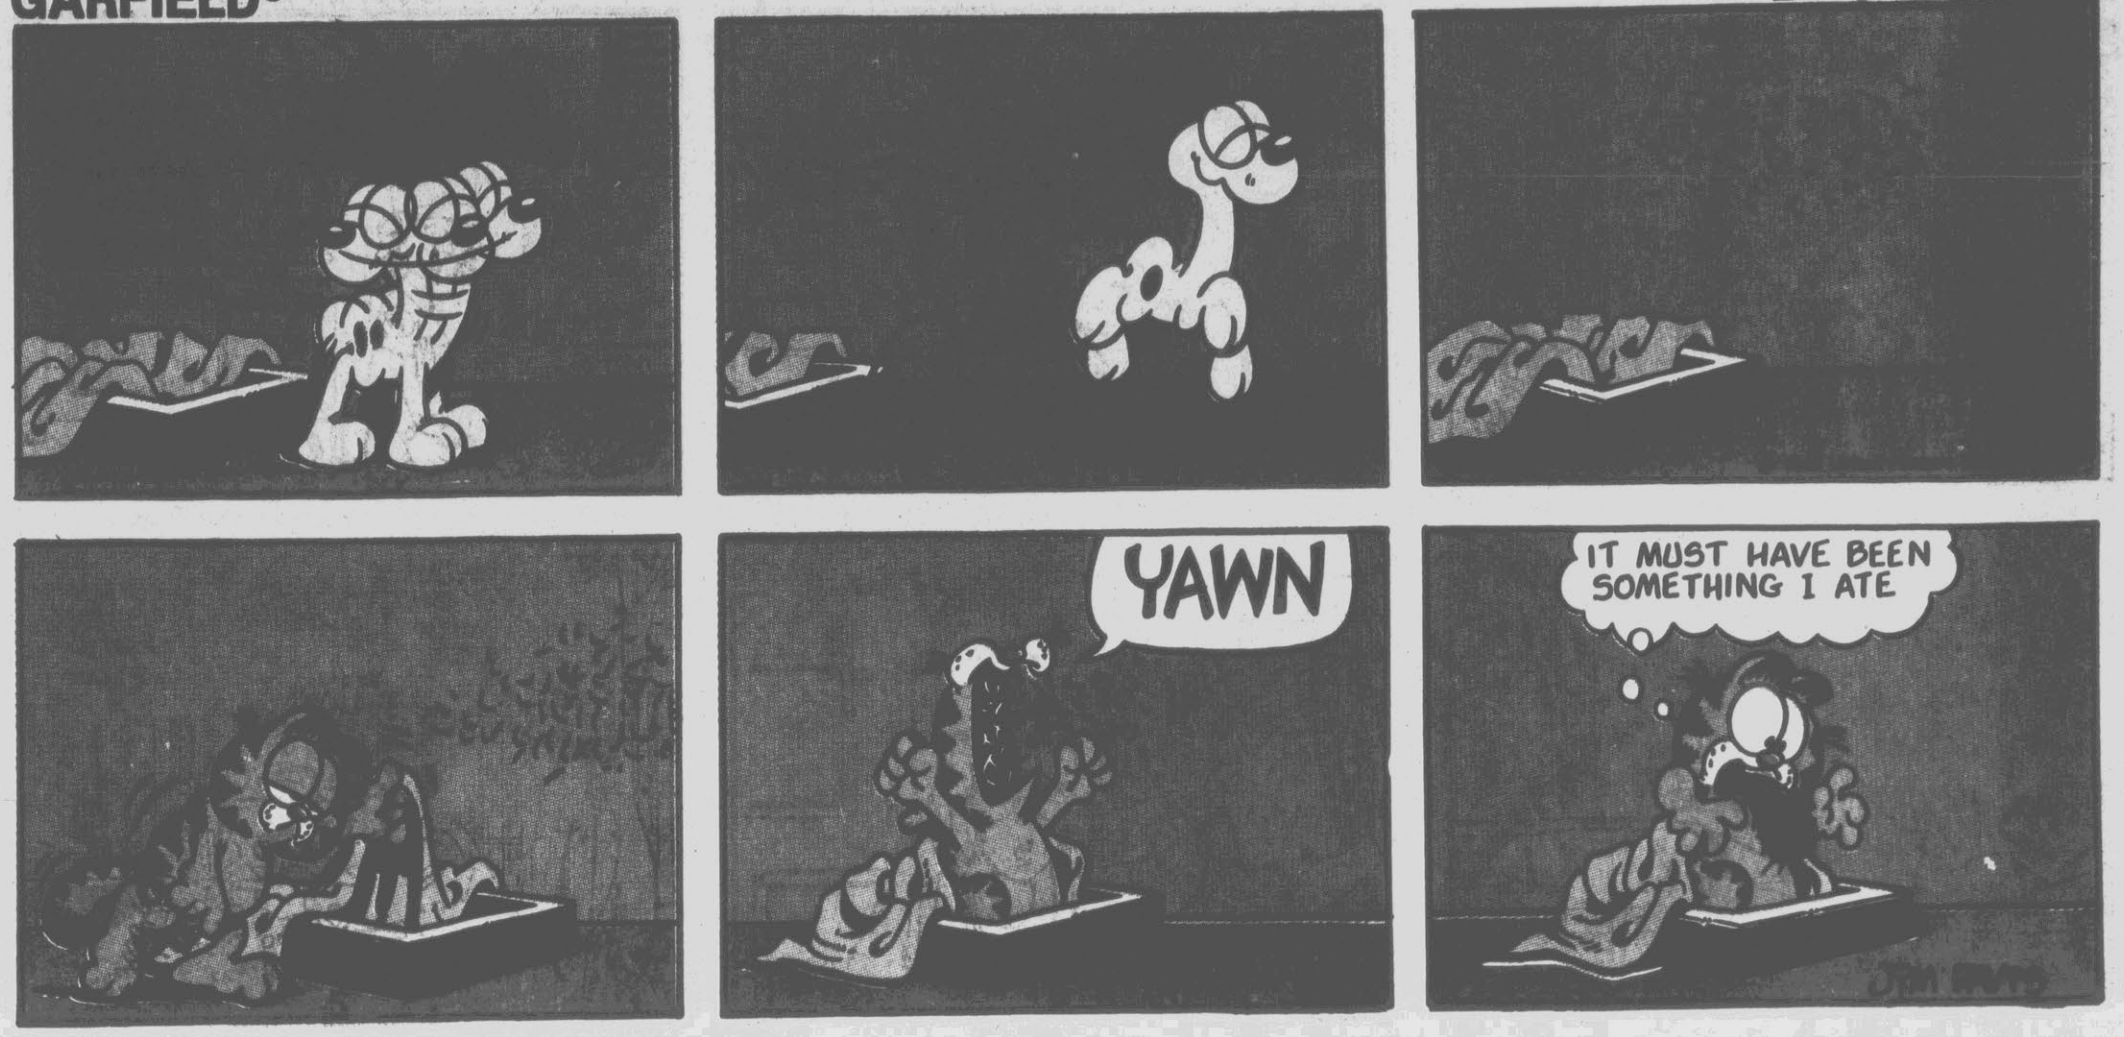

. . . . . .

THEN score 2 points each for all words of four letters or more found among the letters.

Try to score at least 30 points.
