Ceremonies Mark Road Opening

WILSON — A 3.4-mile section of four-lane U.S. 264 between Wilson and Greenville opened in ceremonies Monday at the intersection of the new roadway with old U.S. 264 west of Saratoga.

According to Gov. Jim Martin, the new four-lane highway "is the response to a genuine need." He said the opening of the section between Saratoga and the N.C. 58 intersection East of Wilson "offers a preview of good things to come."

Martin, who headed the list of dignitaries at the opening, said "Roads such as this are extremely important ... just as vital to our future" as interstate highways. "Such work improves our quality of life and increases our potential as a state.

"But this project symbolizes many other things, as well," Martin said. "It represents my commitment to eastern North Carolina. It represents my commitment to the state arterial system. And it represents my commitment to a balanced transportation program."

Highway improvements do a number of things, the governor said. "Some of them respond to the problems of traffic congestion. Others are needed to stimulate growth, to bring the benefits of economic development to an area."

"Once completed, U.S. 264 will be the kind of magnet that you need to attract the kind of healthy growth we all want to see occur here. And the state's commitment won't end with the construction of this road.

"Like all highway work, the true value of this project rests with what it does for you. What it does to improve safety, what it does to attract industry, and what it does to increase tourism," Martin said.

"The projected benefits of the new U.S. 264 will emerge over time. They will be great, and I am proud to be playing a role in helping this far-reaching project advance."

"I said earlier that this opening is a sneak preview. It is."

"Sometime this fall, I will return to the 264 project for a ceremony to mark the opening of another section of it. At that time, we will formally dedicate a portion of U.S. 264 to the memory of Sen. John East.

"This highway will serve as a fitting memorial to a man who cared so much for North Carolina and his nation."

The section of highway opened Monday is part of a 31.7 mile, $52.5 million project to build a new four-lane road on a new location between Wilson and Greenville. The remainder of the relocation project — with the exception of the Farmville bypass and the northwest Greenville bypass — is scheduled to be completed by mid-October.

North's Security System Detailed During Hearing

By DAVID ESPO
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The congressional Iran-Contra hearings resumed today with details about the installation of a $14,000 security system at the home of Lt. Col. Oliver North, while a key lawmaker said there is "no question" that the former National Security Council aide will testify later this summer.

Sen. Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, said the joint House-Senate committees would meet privately later in the day to discuss terms negotiated backstage with North's attorneys.

The public hearings resumed after a two-week recess, with former CIA employee Glenn A. Robinette testifying that he had the $13,900 security system installed at North's suburban Virginia home in mid-1986 at the request of retired Air Force Maj. Gen. Richard V. Secord.

Robinette said Secord paid him to cover the costs and expenses, and he never asked North for any funds.

But he said North contacted him after the Iran-Contra affair became public last fall, and the two men subsequently engaged in backdated correspondence that made it look like the NSC aide was offering to pay for the installation. When committee lawyer Paul Barbadoro characterized the letters as "phony bills" and "cooked up responses," Robinette agreed.

"I was trying to protect Col. North," the former CIA official said. In fact, North's security system was partially paid from one of the accounts Secord used in the elaborate banking network that received profits from the clandestine U.S. arms sales to Iran, according to the testimony and documents.

At Secord's direction, Robinette received a check for $9,000 from the Swiss money management company, CSF Investments on Aug. 20, 1986. A few days later Secord reimbursed CSF $9,015 from Udall Research Corp., one of the firms set up by Secord and his business partner to handle both the Iran arms

Debt Staggering

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States owed the rest of the world $263.6 billion at the end of 1986, more than double the 1985 total as the country lengthened its lead as the world's largest debtor nation, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said the new debt burden was 135 percent above a revised $111.9 billion in debt to foreigners that the United States was carrying at the end of 1985.

That year marked the first time since 1914 that America was classified as a debtor nation. That means foreigners now own more in U.S. investments than Americans own in foreign investments.

For 1986, foreign investment in the United States shot up 26 percent to total $1.331 trillion. That swamped a 13 percent increase in U.S. investments overseas, which totaled $1.068 trillion at the end of last year.

The new figures confirmed how rapid the country's plunge into debt has been. In 1982, the United States was the world's largest creditor nation with an investment cushion of $141.1 billion, according to revised figures released today.

But a string of record foreign trade deficits has wiped out that surplus as Americans have transferred billions of dollars into the hands of foreigners by buying imported cars, television sets and a multitude of other products.

The country's plunge into the status of a debtor country is directly linked to the merchandise trade deficits. The only way the United States will be able to pay off its foreign debt is by running surpluses in its mer-

Consumer Prices Rose In May

By TOM RAUM

AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A slowdown in energy prices partially offset sharply higher food costs to produce a 0.3 percent increase in consumer prices in May, the smallest increase this year, the government reported today.

The increase in the Labor Department's consumer price index, equivalent to an annual rate of inflation of 4.0 percent, followed increases of 0.4 percent in each of the preceding three months.

So far this year, inflation has been running at an annual rate of 5.6 percent.

The May increase was the smallest monthly rise since a 0.2 percent increase last December.

The report appeared to underscore contentions of economists that inflation would not increase sharply through the rest of the year despite a large decline in the value of the dollar.

The dollar in recent weeks has begun to stabilize on foreign exchange markets. Economic growth throughout the industrial world is sluggish, keeping demand for goods down.

Food prices led the May price increase, up 0.6 percent after a 0.3 percent rise in April. Grocery store prices registered their biggest increase since last August, 0.9 percent, mainly due to a 3.1 percent increase in the price of beef, which offset a 0.3 percent decline in poultry prices.

Gasoline prices, still rebounding from last year's fall in world energy prices, were 0.4 percent higher at the pump in May, following a 0.7 percent rise in April. The gasoline price increase was the smallest so far this year.

Automobile prices were also up - 0.3 percent in May, the same as in April.

While the inflation posted so far this year is a far cry from the double-digit price increases of the late 1970s, it easily is dwarfing last year's near-record 1.1 percent performance.

The falling dollar — now worth only half what it was two years ago against Japanese and European currencies — has been a major factor in wide-ranging price increases this

Shultz, Shevardnadze To Meet

By BRENDA WATSON
Associated Press Writer

GENEVA (AP) — U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze plan to meet in Washington in mid-July to try to resolve obstacles to an arms control agreement, U.S. arms control adviser Edward Rowny said today.

Rowny told a news conference he did not know whether a specific date had been fixed for the meeting.

In Washington, a U.S. official said the two men will probably meet July 10-11. The official, who demanded anonymity, said the United States proposed two sets of dates for the session, July 5-6 and July 10-11. The Soviets turned down the first and are "75 to 80 percent agreeable" to the second, the official said.

A senior U.S. official in Washington said the two men also would discuss human rights and a possible summit meeting between President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev. "I would not exaggerate its relationship to a summit, but view the meeting as a way to move the mechanism forward," the senior official said. The official also spoke on condition of anonymity.

Rowny said talks in Geneva on intermediate-range nuclear forces would continue until the meeting in Washington. Shultz and Shevardnadze will try to resolve remaining problems at their talks, he said.

"There's no way I can see any type of treaty being ready by August. But by late fall, if the Soviets agree to some things, if the mid-July meeting between Shultz and Shevardnadze resolves all of the remaining issues, a treaty could be possible, Rowny said.

"It's still tough, but it's possible," he added.

DSS Report Notes Increase In Cases

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

Protective service cases reported to the Pitt County Department of Social Services have increased this year, according to a report presented to the board Monday.

Social work supervisor Peggy Chandler told the board that 307 child abuse or neglect cases had been reported to the department as of June 19, an increase of 50 percent over the referrals made last year.

There were 379 referrals made for the entire year in 1986.

Of this year's cases, 251 are neglect cases and 56 are abuse cases (20 concerning sexual abuse). The investigations have been completed on 212 of those cases, and 99 have been substantiated.

"The referrals are more serious in nature, so they are more time consuming in investigating," Mrs. Chandler said.

She noted that there has been an increase in referrals from all sources, including the schools, medical community and from relatives and neighbors of the abused children. There also has been an increase in reports made by the victims.

In The Area

Shopping Areas

Construction is in progress on two projects near Carolina East Mall — the first a shopping center across Memorial Drive from Carolina East Mall that will house a 17,000 square foot Tons O' Toys store, and the second a 50,000-square-foot Brendle's discount store adjacent to mall property to the south.

According to building permits issued by the City of Greenville earlier this month, the shopping center — including the toy store and an additional 5,600 square feet for four other shops — will cost about $1.77 million, while the Brendle's building will cost $850,000.

Kent Cockerham, a spokesman for Elkin-based Brendle's, said there are now 38 Brendle's in North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia, Tennessee and Georgia. By the end of the year, he said there would be 42 stores, including the one in Greenville, which is scheduled to open in November.

He estimated that the Greenville store, which he described as "a standard, full-size store," will employ 50 to 55 people full time.

Tons O' Toys, with home offices in Columbia, S.C., is scheduled to open in mid-September, according to company spokesman Rob Pruitt.

Pruitt said the Greenville facility, the 16th store in the chain in the Carolinas, Virginia and Georgia, will employ about 20 to 25 people.

Class Meeting

The 1967 class of H.B. Sugg High School will meet Thursday at 8 p.m. in Edwin's Day Care Center, 405 W. Vines St., Farmville, to discuss plans for the 20th reunion.

Planning Meeting

The officers and steering committee of the Pitt Community College Nursing Alumni Association held a planning meeting recently.

Discussion items included the newsletter, tentative plans for a fall gathering of alumni, and offering discounted membership to recent nursing graduates.

For further information may call the PCC Nursing Department, 756-3130, or Patti Weisenberger, 752-5859.

Completed Program

The Rev. Lynwood Walters of Ayden has completed a comprehensive cancer residency program offered by Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Walters is pastor of the First Baptist Church of Ayden.

Scholarship

Michael T. Brown of North Pitt High School has been named the first recipient of the $500 Bethel Union Scholarship. Brown served as class president and was selected a Morehead scholar.

He also was a member of the Monogram Club, the Concert and Marching bands, the Spirit Club and Student Government. He played baseball, basketball and football and was actively involved in Students Against Drunk Driving.

He is the son of Mrs. Claudette B. Chase.

Bethel Union School will have its first family outing July 5 from 3 p.m. to 7 p.m. at River Park North, Mumfords Road.

NOTICE POSTING — IS IT ALLOWED?

I hope that your lost dog was found, that your yard sale was successful, that your benefit project did a great deal of good, and that your favorite candidate got elected. But people should know that it is illegal to post notices on poles and trees on a public right of way.

People who tack up these unsightly notices seldom take them down. Can't the city enforce its own laws against this practice? Usually the notices have a name and address or phone number. A.A.

Greenville Police Chief Ted Holmes said Public Works, not the Police Department, deals with temporary signs put up by the public.

Mayo Allen, city public works director, said his department uses discretion when dealing with signs. "When they're on one of the major streets, they're likely to come down immediately," he said. "But if they're in a neighborhood and no one calls Public Works and complains, we're likely to leave them up until after the event they promote. If someone complains, however, we go take them down, because it is against the law. If they stay up and begin to get bedraggled, we take them down."

Political candidacy posters, he said, are a whole different ballgame. Each candidate must go to City Hall and get a permit to post signs and must agree to do so not in the public right of way. Each also must agree to go back and take down all signs his organization puts up.

Allen said he feels that signs of the type questioned are for the public good and no one in city government wants to disallow all of them. He said, however, that in order for them to be effective, he encourages everyone who puts up a sign to take it down promptly after it has done its job.

Ball Elected

Dr. John R. Ball has been elected chairperson of the Area Board of Directors of the Pitt County Mental Health Center during a recent meeting of the board.

Dr. Harriet Wooten will serve a second term as vice-chairperson.

Sam Hobgood, Dave McRae and Patty Leary, whose terms expire this month, were recognized by the board for their contributions.

Dr. Ball is a professor in the School of Social Work at East Carolina University. A Franklin County native, he has a master of divinity degree from Southeastern Theological Seminary, a master of social work degree of UNC-Chapel Hill and a doctorate in education from Duke University.

Ronald Rice gave an update of continuation of the detoxification center for substance abusers, which is about 20 percent complete. This facility is to be located adjacent to the Mental Health Center.

Rice also reported that the Z. Smith Reynolds Foundation has awarded the Mental Health Center $40,000 for its preschool programs in Ayden and Greenville.

The board approved the center's interim budget of $3.4 million for the next fiscal year. The final budget will be acted upon once the final allocation of state and local funds is received. Both are expected by July 15.

Staton Injured

Joe Staton, a former resident of Greenville, was injured in an automobile accident in Sydney, Australia, recently, while reportedly traveling to Greenville for a class reunion.

Staton and his wife were said to be on their way to Greenville for the 50th anniversary reunion of his Greenville High School class when the accident occurred.

Mary Lorraine McKenzie of

Greenville has provided his hospital address for anyone who would like to contact Staton: Ward 17, Sydney Hospital, MacQuarie St., Sydney, Australia NSW2000.

Deadline

Taxpayers liable for state privilege licenses should apply before July 1, according to R.B. McLamb, revenue officer. The 1980 census is to be used where the applicable rate of tax is based upon population. Applications for licenses, together with the correct remittance, may be mailed to the North Carolina Department of Revenue, P.O. Box 25000, Raleigh, N.C. 27640, or submitted to the local state Department of Revenue office. The penalty for failure to comply will be five percent for each delinquent month, or fraction thereof, after July 1.

Program Set

There will be a Holy Ghost program Sunday at 4 p.m. in the Holy Church on the Rock Revival Center, 401 Moore St., Greenville. The program is sponsored by the Rev. Dorsey Acklin and Eldress Shirley Shepard.

CLC Opens New Center For Adults In Farmville

FARMVILLE — The Creative Living Center has opened a second day care program for adults, this one at the Farmville Community Center, 417 S. Main St.

The center was developed with support from the East Carolina University School of Medicine, according to Connie Kuenzi, the center director. It operates weekdays from 7:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

Kuenzi said the center will serve adults — usually older members of a family — who require limited medical support during each day. Others who will benefit from being in the program are individuals who are "socially isolated," such as elderly people who spend weekdays alone.

Kuenzi said the center's emphasis is on health services, as well as recreational and education services. She said the staff works as a team to conduct an initial assessment of each participant, then develops a daily activity plan tailored to his or her individual needs.

Although a physician is not included on the staff, each participant is required to have a complete medical exam form completed before enrolling in the program, Kuenzi said.

The director said the Creative Living Center fills a gap in community care services by providing an alternative for people who require some supervision, but not round-the-clock skilled care. Day care is less expensive than residential care and allows the participant to continue to live at home.

The center can also care for family members who require attention while the primary caregiver gets out a while.

Participation in the program can be arranged on an individual basis for up to five days a week. A $20-per-day fee is charged, but the center has a sliding scale based on ability to pay. Included in each day's services are a hot lunch and two nutritious snacks.

The Creative Living Center housed at St. James United Methodist Church in Greenville continues to operate. It has served 27 people since it opened in June, 1986.

The Farmville Center is now accepting referrals and welcomes community and volunteer support. For information, call 757-0303 or 753-2322.

Rain Needed

RALEIGH (AP) — Scattered thunderstorms have brought relief to some North Carolina farmers during the past week, but agricultural experts say the rains have not been widespread enough to snap a two-month dry spell.

Dry weather since early May already has reduced yields on some early vegetables, experts say, and soon could hurt tobacco, corn and other crops unless the state gets a good soaking rain.

"You look at our average rainfall amounts over the whole year and they look pretty good, but the trick is getting the rainfall when you want it," said Katie B. Perry, an extension agricultural meteorologist at N.C. State University.

Areas hit hardest by the recent dry spell include Wake County and the southeast corner of the state near Wilmington, she said, but showers have been so scattered that conditions can vary widely in the same county.

Rainfall is 4.25 inches below normal since May 1 at Raleigh-Durham Airport, according to the National Weather Service office at the airport.

The program consists of a one-week classroom orientation conducted by local business and industry and a second week of working in a local firm to gain an understanding of how a business operates.

Classroom phases are being held his week at Burroughs Wellcome, Dupont, BB&T, Empire Brushes and Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Man Sentenced

A Route 1, Williamston, man was sentenced Monday to nine years in prison during the first day of the current session of Superior Court.

James Felton Bell was tried on charges of three counts of incest and three counts of crimes against nature. He pleaded guilty to two acts of felonious incest.

Camp Victory

Eight junior ROTC cadets from North Pitt High School recently participated in Camp Victory at Fort Jackson, S.C. The group joined about 500 other high school students from Virginia to Florida for orientation to Army life.

Water survival training, rappelling, M16 rifle familiarization and firing, map reading and land navigation training were highlights of the events. Physical fitness training was conducted each day and orientation on Army equipment such as tanks, trucks and helicopters also was provided.

The cadets stayed in barracks usually used for basic trainees, ate in Army dining facilities and participated in a cookout and competitive games.

Cadets attending the camp were James C. Allen, Thomas Cayton, Sabrina Coburn, James Coward, Lydia Kerwin, Mary McCray, Kenneth Wayne Mills and Mitchell Stalls.

Acquaintances Say Accused Parent A Gentle Man

ELIZABETHTOWN, N.C. (AP) — A Bladen County foster parent accused, with his wife, of murder and child abuse, is a gentle man incapable of committing the crimes of which he is accused, two acquaintances say.

"He is one of the most gentle people you've ever talked to in your life," said Curtis Walters, a 46-year-old vacuum cleaner salesman and florist who once supplied the man's church with flowers. "He wouldn't hurt anybody."

Sylvester Phillips, 56, and his wife Anne, 64, are being held in the Bladen County Jail, charged with first-degree murder and two felony counts of child abuse.

"He's not capable of doing that," said John Oxendine, a factory worker in nearby Lumberton. "He's like a little young-un' but he's a grown man. I don't believe he done it."

The Phillipses are members of a secretive religious group that moved into the county several years ago, neighbors said. Oxendine also belongs to the organization.

The group, which owes thousands of dollars in back real-estate taxes, also owned the land where the couple lived, part of 144 acres of rural communal property developed and farmed by the church over the past several years, tax records indicate.

The Bladen County Sheriff's Department says the couple's religious beliefs appear unrelated to charges that they beat and killed 11-year-old Tameka Lehmann last week.

"We haven't found any link yet," Detective Steve Bunn of the Bladen County Sheriff's Department told the Wilmington Morning Star. "It just looks like it is an isolated family thing."

The two were members of the Born Again Church of Jesus Christ Apostolic, a Dillon, S.C.-based denomination. Their one-story home is owned by the church and valued at $81,000, according to county tax records.

In affidavits filed in connection with a search warrant for the house, Bunn reported complaints that the children were beaten, bound with chains, forced to eat hot peppers and soap and were sexually abused.

Tameka Lehmann, a child in their care, was dead when the Phillipses brought her to Bladen County Hospital around 3 a.m. on June 15. An autopsy showed she died from a blow to the head. It also revealed old injuries, which led to charges that the couple abused her before she died.

They are also accused of abusing a second child who lived with them. He and three others have been under protective custody of social workers since the Phillipses were arrested June 16.

The Phillipses had been licensed as foster parents in Chicago since 1975 and had cared for 11 children since that time, according to the Illinois Department of Children and Family Services. In addition to being licensed by the state agency, they were licensed by Catholic Charities and Lutheran Social Services.

"They were screened four different times by three different agencies and they passed with flying colors," said David Schneidman, spokesman for the Illinois Department of Children and Family Services.

The Illinois agency's records show the children moved to North Carolina about six months ago. At a court hearing following their arrest, a lawyer for the couple said Phillips had first come to Bladen County about four years ago and that the couple planned to live here permanently.

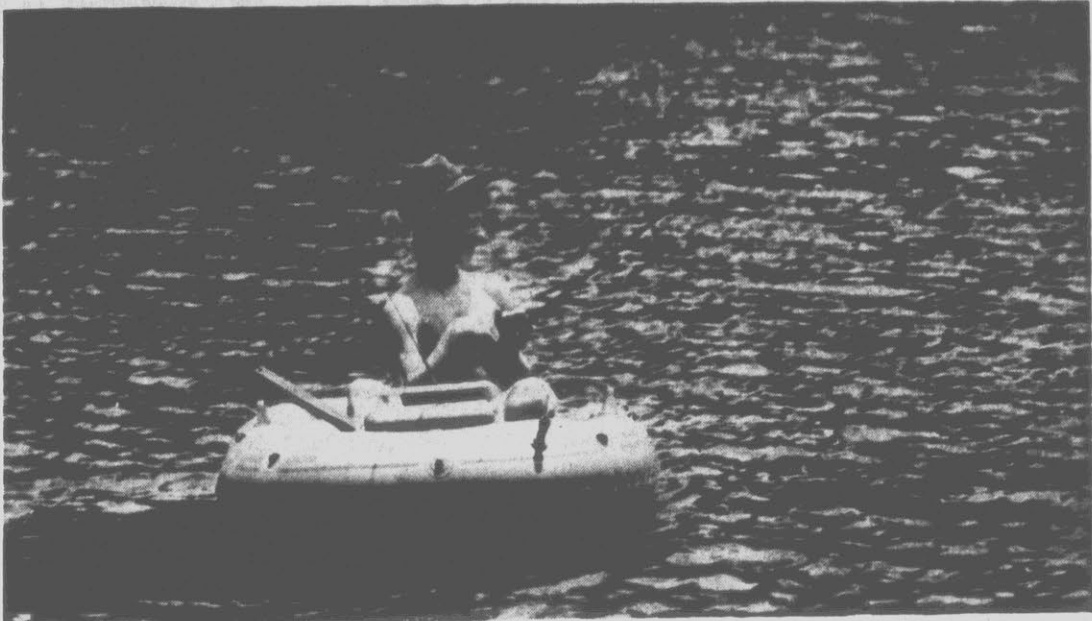

The home is part of a 144-acre tract housing about a dozen families and controlled by church leaders, Bladen County tax records show. The church owes $4,418 for three years of back taxes on the property, according to records in the office of the county tax collector.

The couple — like others in the church — kept to themselves, neighbors across the street from the tract say. Rarely were their children seen outside and other neighborhood children say they didn't know them.

"We stay on this side," said Mary Smith, who has lived across from the tract since the church first bought the land in 1984. "We don't know anything of what goes on on that side."

For most of those who live near the church, the denomination is a mystery. Neighbors say scores of church members, who live on both sides of the Bladen-Robeson county line, keep mostly to themselves, meeting on Sunday in a warehouse in Robeson County.

Cause Of Guard's Death Questioned

DURHAM (AP) — A Durham school crossing guard died because his brain did not receive enough oxygen while he was being prepared for surgery at Duke University Medical Center, not from injuries he received when he was hit by a car, the state medical examiner's office said.

The crossing guard, James Satterfield, 72, died June 7 at the hospital, where he was taken on May 21 after being hit by a car on N.C. 55 in front of J.E. Shepard Middle School.

Satterfield became comatose while receiving anesthesia for surgery on May 21, Dr. Andrew Wallace, chief executive officer of Duke Medical Center, said Monday.

Wallace told The Durham Morning Herald that Satterfield never regained consciousness.

Dr. Carl Smedberg, the state medical examiner who conducted the autopsy, reported that the death was caused because a tube enabling Satterfield to breathe was placed in the esophagus instead of the trachea.

Satterfield was brought to the hospital with multiple breaks in his legs and a head injury, Wallace said. Satterfield had received treatment at Duke since 1962 for high blood pressure and heart problems, including a rapid, erratic heart beat.

Doctors prepared Satterfield for surgery on his legs, giving the anesthetic intravenously, Wallace said. He said Satterfield developed "a disturbance of heart rhythm and a precipitous drop in blood pressure." His heart rate became very rapid, more than 200 beats per minute.

"He had suffered periodic episodes of very rapid heartbeat in the past," Wallace said. "He essentially went into what we call a code, the equivalent of cardiac arrest. A cardiac resuscitation effort was initiated."

What happened next is under investigation.

An endotracheal tube was to be placed in Satterfield's trachea to give him air. However, a few minutes later, the tube was found in the esophagus, rather than the trachea.

"Experienced people placed the tube in the normal position," Wallace said. "It was confirmed by standard procedures that the tube appeared to be in the right place. Several experienced people listened to his lungs and heard the air move in and out."

A few minutes later the results of a blood test indicated that Satterfield's blood oxygen level was extremely low. Wallace said the tube was found in the trachea and was removed and repositioned. Satterfield's oxygen levels in the blood returned to normal.

Wallace said the tube was out of the trachea "somewhere in the range of five to 10 minutes."

He said the tube could have moved during pulmonary resuscitation efforts, or it could have been placed in the esophagus by mistake.

Duke's risk management team is investigating the death, Wallace said. Team members have repeatedly interviewed everyone who was present when the anesthetic was ad-

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Milestone

A Pitt County highway milestone is upon us.

The N.C. Department of Transportation opened a four mile section of the new U.S. 264 between Wilson and Saratoga in ceremonies Monday.

While the new dual-laned section of roadway is not major in itself, it is a significant part of the highway which is currently under construction between Wilson and Greenville.

Additional sections will be open this year to join the completed five-lane Stantonsburg Road west of Pitt County Memorial Hospital. Then, with the exception of the Farmville bypass, a four-laned highway will stretch from Greenville to Raleigh and points beyond.

Work is expected to begin on the Farmville bypass this fall. That is soon to be followed by right-of-way acquisition for the Greenville northwest bypass.

East of Greenville the work of four laning the present U.S. 264 from Greenville to Washington is proceeding.

The most recent development was the awarding of a $1.3 million contract for widening and improving the existing sections of the highway which will provide half of the four lane divided highway. The completed four-lane construction will connect the present four lanes east of Greenville with the four lanes which now extend east from Washington.

Then Pitt County will have an important thoroughfare which connects Washington, Greenville, Farmville and Wilson to the state capital and the interstate highways that lead west.

All this has important connotations for the safety and comfort of travelers and for Eastern North Carolina commerce.

Only four miles of the new highway were opened just west of Saratoga Monday. The sections of this major highway will be opening rapidly, however, and it will vastly improve our access to the nation's major arteries.

Alarming Failure

The failure rate in detecting hand guns and explosives during an inspection of major airport security checks is alarmingly high. There are varying standards of measuring results of the inspection system, but the bottom line is that in 2,419 attempts to carry weapons or explosives onto planes, security workers and screening devices failed to catch 496 (or 20 percent) of them.

All that is according to a subcommittee hearing on random testing.

A congresswoman who was involved in the hearing saw it all as underlining a need for new minimum standard requirements and to penalize airlines for loose security procedures. Those procedures are usually carried out by private security company workers hired by the airlines.

The Federal Aviation Administration has required inspections of airline passengers and their carry-on luggage since 1973. On the whole, those inspections must have been reasonably successful because hijackings are not generally successful in this country. It has been almost a year and a half since the last successful hijacking.

But making a pretty good record even better is what it's all about; so the agency is trying to improve the technology to a point where machines and not people would perform all the searches. (They are aware most of the search-failures are attributable to human error, and that factor is the one continually being targeted.)

That is humiliating.

The highest rate of success for detecting the weapons was 99 percent. Only four airports detected weapons in more than 90 percent of the tests, while two airports found them less than half the time. One caught them on only 34 percent of the tests; another had a 45 percent success rate.

None of the tested airports were identified.

So much for our peace of mind.

Today's Thought

A proposal to build a six-story condominium complex in Waves on North Carolina's Outer Banks has residents' tempers rising higher than the proposed development. It's another case of "you can't see the beach for the building."

The Goetz Verdict: Not Apocalypse Now

WASHINGTON — The stream of self-righteousness that courses through the American psyche ran at flood strength last week. Following the exoneration by a New York jury of Bernhard Goetz, the pistol-packing nerd, on charges of attempted murder and assault against four black toughs, the nation's preachers took to their various pulpits in full cry: politicians, journalists, civil-rights leaders, self-appointed guardians of the nation's conscience and morals — all rose up in righteous fury to excoriate the jury and to draw grand pronouncements from its verdict.

It was an unseemly display. Though from time to time the voice of common sense was heard — Russell Baker, Richard Cohen, William Raspberry — by and large the nation was subjected to a great wave of hysteria. Commentators of every conceivable stripe fell over each other in the competition to see who could draw the most apocalyptic conclusions from the jury's findings, which cleared Goetz on all charges except illegal possession of a firearm. No one was more apocalyptic than the redoubtable Murray Kempton, who exceeded even himself in extrapolating the universal from the particular.

"The trial of Bernhard Goetz is over and the City of New York has been found guilty," Kempton wrote in his syndicated column. "The shame of this judgment is all our own and none of it belongs to these jurors. They heard the case for seven weeks and sought its meaning through upwards of 27 hours of deliberation, and their collective conscience has now impelled them to define the issue in Goetz' own terms and all but announce that law and justice have ceased to breathe as realities in this city." Kempton bled in that vein for several paragraphs, then sucked in a deep breath and drew this lachrymose conclusion:

"Turn your back on the worst and you will in time turn your back on everyone. We just about have. For what else has the Goetz jury said to us except that the time is ripe and rotten ripe to square our shoulders, look straight at the huge rock that lies at the bottom of the hill and all together try to push it up the slippery slope back to the top. There is not much hope we will."

I say that's spinach, and I say to hell with it. Apart from the overwrought prose — "the time is ripe and rotten ripe"! — the essential argument simply does not withstand even moderately close analysis. It is the same argument being put forward by countless other commentators, whether they be lefties slipping their hearts on their sleeves or righties looking for facile proof of their civil-rights bona fides: They're all saying that the verdict by a dozen men and women in New York is an indictment of society itself, that the verdict constitutes a license to shoot — especially if the gun is in white hands and the target is black.

It's an easy argument to advance because it seems so tidy and because it makes the person advancing it feel so good. One of the odder quirks of human nature is that a lot of people get a rush from greeting the apocalypse — remember the '60s? — and from proclaiming themselves gloomier than thou. But there is in fact little reason to believe that, apart from the incredible media hype surrounding it, the Goetz case is anything more than just that: a case at law.

One certainly is entitled to believe, as indeed I do, that the case reached a grossly inappropriate conclusion and that the jury, however conscientiously it may have gone about its business, did a bad job. But to leap from that conviction to a universal condemnation — "The shame of this judgment is all our own and none of it belongs to these jurors" — is as irresponsible as anything the jury did or did not do. There is every reason to believe that the jury, given the particulars of the case as presented by a skillful defense, had reasonable doubt that Goetz was guilty as charged; but there is no reason to believe, unless one is predisposed so to believe, that in thus ruling the jury — or the larger society it ostensibly represented — was endorsing vigilante justice.

The argument is that the jury reached its verdict in a climate of fear and renewed racial animosity, and on both counts the argument is correct; in certain respects, these are bad times for the American social compact. But to inflate the Goetz verdict into a reflection of the times is, at best, facile and faulty logic. Notwithstanding all the media attention the case received, it was heard (by a biracial jury) within the confines of the courtroom and was concluded within the boundaries of the law. Had the opposite verdict been reached, what would the Kemptons now be telling us? That "the honor of this judgment is all our own and none of it belongs to these jurors"?

A Degree In Hypocrisy And Sleaze

"Washington School of Applied Ethics and Morality. Can we help you?"

"My son is coming to Washington this summer and I would like to know if you are giving any courses in hypocrisy, betrayal and sleaze?"

"Yes, we have an excellent curriculum that will lead either to a bachelor's degree in stonewalling or a master's degree in perjury."

"Can you give me some idea of what you're offering?"

"We have a popular class in lying. We hold moot congressional hearings in which the student is challenged to wriggle out of answering any compromising questions."

"How does he do that?"

"By using the Elliott Abrams defense. When asked a question the student is taught to reply something like, 'It probably happened but I don't remember it,' or 'I don't remember it but if you say it took place I'll accept your word.'"

"Is Abrams the instructor?"

"No, he has nothing to do with the school. But the students look on him as a role model."

"It doesn't surprise me. He's everybody's role model."

"If your son is working in Washington this summer I would advised that he take a seminar in special prosecutors."

"I didn't know you could take a (ital) whole (unital) seminar in them."

"It's essential if you're going to work for the Administration. Let's say, for example, your son, while in Washington, gets involved in a defense factory bribery case. In exchange he receives stock and cash as a reward. As soon as it becomes public what he is up to, he is entitled to his own special prosecutor. We demonstrate how he can face up to a prosecutor while keeping damage for himself to a minimum."

"How is it done?"

"The student asks for immunity and then agrees to rat on all the other people involved with his scheme."

"But isn't that dirty pool?"

"No, dirty pool is another course where government officials learn how to help polluters get around the EPA."

"Since we're talking about morality, do you have any studies in adultery?"

"Your son can take adultery, but he won't get any credit for it."

"What about greed?"

"Greed is required, and you can't graduate without it. We teach that there is nothing wrong with being greedy if it's in your country's best interests."

"My son hopes to work with one of the federal agencies. Is there a lot of sleaze involved with this?"

"It depends on how much work he does for the vested interests. We offer all the standard white-collar crimes. What our students do with them is their business."

"My son wants to know if you teach students how to shred incriminating documents."

"Each student is required to own a paper shredder and burn bag. The burn bag can also be used to carry his lunch."

"You have a fun school."

"We try to make our students good citizens, even if they have to lie to do it. As Ollie North said, 'There is more to government than rewarding your friends and punishing your enemies.'"

"How much more?"

"Come to think of it, not much."

Strength For Today

A friend of mine is very nervous and excitable. If the slightest detail of his life is changed without his consent, he is likely to fly into a towering passion. He keeps his home, his business and his friends continually stirred up with his loud voice, his protests and his angry rejoinders.

Some of his acquaintances are certain that because of his emotional conflict he will at any time have a nervous collapse. But it has never happened, and probably never will. People of this kind often cause more break-downs than they suffer. So if you know someone like my friend, don't get too upset when he blows off steam. Subconsciously he is probably trying to transfer his own frustrations to you.

Emotional instability can be as contagious as a communicable disease.

Public Forum

To the editor:

In recent weeks, another top North Carolina Democrat changed his mind amid the mounting pressures of his democratic colleagues. Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan "flip-flopped" on two issues both he and Gov. Martin had originally endorsed — a school construction bond issue and a constitutional amendment making the superintendent of public instruction an appointive office. In doing so, Jordan joins Sen. Terry Sanford and the long list of other leaders as failures caused by their inability to take a stand and stand by it.

North Carolina needs leaders to run our state who will take a stand and stand by it. Our state needs to be progressive and not regressive. We need a fair checks and balance system that keeps our legislature from having too much power. North Carolina is the only state in the U.S. that the governor does not have the veto power. Our governor and lieutenant governor need to be from the same party in order to prevent the power struggle we are witnessing in Raleigh.

I firmly believe in the man and not the party. With President Reagan's term near completion, the upcoming election is of utmost importance. President Reagan has not been perfect. Neither are we. At times, politics may seem trivial, but the futures of all of us depend on good leaders. It is truly a shame that all leaders are not as genuine as our own N.C. Representative Walter B. Jones Jr. He is truly an asset, not only to our community, but to the entire state. He does what our elected officials are elected to do: He represents his constituents and not himself.

When voting, look for substance and not glossy campaigns. Your interest and vote helps ensure the United States will continue to be the "land of the free and the home of the brave."

United States' Role In Europe Must Be Redefined

Analysis

Sir Geoffrey Howe, the British foreign secretary, made a speech earlier this year in which he urged his fellow Europeans to begin thinking of how Europe will defend itself if the Americans leave.

It was good advice, and the rethinking that he prescribed is in fact under way. U.S. policy-makers, instead of ignoring or resenting the growing European spirit of independence, should welcome it.

The notion that the United States would even consider withdrawal from the North Atlantic Treaty Organization — or make a major reduction in our commitment to Europe's defense — is ritually dismissed by most of this country's defense and foreign-policy Establishment. The idea that we might, in effect, be pushed out of Europe by the growth of neutralism or anti-Americanism is dismissed just as impatiently by most pillars of the European political and defense Establishment.

The British and the West Germans have had elections this year in which opposition parties deemed to be soft on defense were convincingly defeated. The truth is, nevertheless, that NATO's political and military foundations are increasingly shaky.

According to the pro-NATO London Times, a Brussels-based "think tank" has predicted that the Atlantic Alliance will not survive in its current form beyond the year 2000. If you look at what has happened since the U.S.-Soviet summit in Reykjavik, Iceland, last October, that is hardly outlandish.

Helmut Schmidt, who supported NATO and its strategy of nuclear deterrence when he was the Social Democratic chancellor of West Germany, would now base European security on a Franco-German conventional army, with the expectation of ultimate British participation. Such a force, Schmidt has said, could defend Western Europe without substantial involvement by U.S. nuclear or conventional forces.

Willy Brandt, the grand old man of the Social Democrats, also betrays a flagging enthusiasm for NATO as it now stands.

In an interview with New Perspectives Quarterly, former French Prime Minister Laurent Fabius, a leader of the basically pro-American Socialist Party, said that the evolution of a European defense system essentially independent of America is probably inevitable.

France, he stressed, will not abandon its own nuclear force as long as the Soviets have nuclear weapons capable of hitting France. But he said the development of an independent European defense system would not necessarily be thrown off track by the return to power of the anti-nuclear Social Democrats in West Germany.

The circle might be squared, said Fabius, by a partnership in which West Germany went "for conventional forces" and France would provide the nuclear muscle. That, he suggested, is really what responsible sensible elements of the German Social Democrats have in mind.

Pierre Lellouche, the highly respected deputy director of the French Institute of International Relations, comes to much the same conclusions.

France does not suffer these days from any special animosity toward Washington. The French reading of the Soviet threat, and the means necessary to cope with it, is very close to ours. But the French, along with European defense specialists, have been unsettled by what they see as the inconstancy of U.S. policy.

Leaving aside what they saw as the naivete of Jimmy Carter, they were shocked by President Reagan's apparent willingness at Reykjavik to bargain away the nuclear deterrent upon which European security has rested for 40 years. Then came the American acquiescence to Gorbachev's proposal to eliminate not only medium-range Euromissiles, but also shorter-range missiles.

The Soviet show of reason delighted man-in-the-street Europeans but frightened the defense professionals, who saw Washington as embarking on the "slippery" slope of denuclearization. And that would leave Europe vulnerable to bullying on the basis of Soviet superiority in conventional arms.

The disaffection shows up in remarks such as those by Howe, who works for Reagan's friend, Margaret Thatcher, as well as in West German conservative ranks, where there is talk of U.S. "betrayal" and an increased tendency to believe that the reunification of Germany might be pursued more realistically through cooperation with Moscow.

You can split hairs, but the basic explanation of the U.S.-Europe schism is that Washington is backing away from its pledge to precipitate mutual nuclear destruction if the Soviets dare to invade Europe — and the Europeans are finally drawing the appropriate conclusions.

As long ago as 1979, Henry Kissinger served notice that the suicide pact was a thin reed upon which to base European security. Former Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara has disclosed that he advised Presidents Kennedy and Johnson not to push the nuclear button under any circumstances other than direct attack upon the United States.

Meanwhile, the enormous U.S. budget deficit forces Congress to ask whether our military commitments have outrun our economic ability to sustain them.

The Europeans cannot be expected not to notice. Rather than wilt into Realpolitik accommodation to Soviet pressures, they are beginning to ask why they should not look after their own defense. From the U.S. perspective, what is wrong with that?

Flaw In The Trade Bill

WASHINGTON — The Senate is about to begin consideration of its version of the 1987 trade bill. On the whole, we believe the bill contains many positive features. However, it also contains one glaring special-interest provision that cannot be ignored. In an effort to protect the domestic oil industry, the Finance Committee bill includes a provision that would expand presidential powers to a degree that we believe most Americans would consider unjustifiable and unwise. Under the amendment, if oil imports exceeded 50 percent of domestic consumption or were to exceed 50 percent of demand within a three-year period, the president could unilaterally:

- Impose tariffs and quotas on oil and gas.

- Decree changes in tax law, regardless of budgetary impact.

- Decontrol natural gas prices.

- Mandate energy rationing or conservation measures.

Each of these measures would necessarily result in price increases to the consumer.

Proponents of this plan claim that it would not really expand presidential authority. It is true that existing trade law gives the president broad powers to "adjust" imports. The president can only exercise these powers in an emergency — that is, when the imports threaten national security. However, it appears that the measures the president could take under this proposal greatly exceed those measures he could take under present law. More important, the new provision demands that the president use what are now emergency powers in situations that may be neither critical nor threatening.

At the heart of the amendment is the notion that when oil imports exceed or are projected to exceed an arbitrary level (in this case 50 percent) of U.S. demand, national security is imperiled. There is no analytical basis for this 50 percent threshold. An energy emergency could occur at a lower level of imports. For example, oil imports made up 35 percent of U.S. demand in 1973, when the OPEC embargo was first imposed. Today, they are at roughly the same levels with no ill effects in the nation as a whole. Alternatively, imports could be significantly higher than 50 percent without putting national security in jeopardy.

America's vulnerability to oil-supply disruptions does not depend on the volume of oil we import. As long as the United States consumes any oil, we will be affected by oil-supply disruptions no matter where they occur.

In the short run, the best protection against a supply disruption is our Strategic Petroleum Reserve. The SPR is the only quick way for the federal government to compensate for a sudden cutback in oil supply. Expanded oil depletion allowances, or tax holidays for certain oil producers, won't create oil in an emergency.

The oil security amendment has a disturbing "Fortress America" quality to it. First, the amendment fails to distinguish among sources of foreign oil. Clearly, oil from the Persian Gulf is less secure than oil from our neighbors in Mexico, Canada and Venezuela. Moreover, many of these countries need to sell us their oil to pay the money they owe American creditors.

Responsible energy policies are crucial to the nation, but these policies cannot deny the reality we face. Oil production in the lower 48 states peaked in the early 1970s. Production is unlikely to reach earlier levels, regardless of tax subsidies or higher prices. Alaska oil production probably has likewise peaked. Barring some fantastic energy breakthrough, such as fusion power, cheap superconductors, a recession or Draconian conservation measures, oil imports will eventually exceed 50 percent. The 50 percent threshold would then trigger quotas, rationing and price controls, and we would be back to the same discredited policies that brought us the long gas lines and protracted recession of the 1970s.

There is an even darker possibility. A president could easily bypass Congress on some of the most sensitive national policy issues. By manipulating the assumptions on which the oil-import projections are based, the president could decontrol natural gas prices, allocate oil supplies from one region of the country to another, or suddenly lease environmentally sensitive areas off the California or Alaska coasts for oil and gas development.

Congress has a constitutional responsibility to involve itself in energy policy decisions whenever possible. This provision would abrogate that responsibility, turning over control of energy policy to the president. No one would argue that the president should not possess emergency powers flexible enough to allow him to deal with a range of true national crises. However, if we grant these powers to the president in unthreatening circumstances, Congress places its traditional powers and responsibilities in jeopardy.

IN THE STATE

Little Support

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — A regional loan-processing center could be in Winston-Salem's future, but don't bank on it.

State officials trying to convince Chase Manhattan Bank to bring the center to Winston-Salem are not getting much support from North Carolina's other banking institutions.

Rep. Stephen Neal, D-N.C., spoke with Chase Manhattan officials several months ago about using RJR Nabisco's corporate headquarters for the processing center. RJR Nabisco is moving its headquarters to Atlanta and has donated its building to Wake Forest University.

Neal says Gov. Jim Martin has written the bank a letter urging them to consider the building, but members of the legislature have not been enthusiastic.

Chase Manhattan officials want to take the processing center and its 1,000 jobs to a state that will grant them full-service banking privileges. In North Carolina, the move would have to be approved by the legislature.

Bankers in North Carolina say that the state should not bend its laws to accommodate Chase Manhattan, which has assets of $60.8 billion, about $8 billion less than the combined size of North Carolina's three largest banking institutions.

Costly Calculator

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina scientists say the state should acquire a supercomputer so it can keep pace with other technological leaders, but state lawmakers say it will take several weeks to see if the state treasury can afford the pricetag of up to $20 million.

"I'd say (the bill) has a good chance of passing, provided we have the money," said Sen. Aaron Plyler, D-Union, chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee.

Sen. Ken Royall, D-Durham, has introduced a bill to bring a super-computer to the Research Triangle by 1988. The machines are the world's most powerful calculators, performing up to 300 times faster than standard laboratory computers. million to bring a supercomputer to the area by 1988.

"What worries me is if we don't do that next year, then we are going to be a year behind everybody else," said Royall, who is also chairman of the Advisory Budget Commission. "Massachusetts, California, Texas, Florida, all those progressive states in this field are going to be ahead of us."

Some North Carolina researchers said they have been hampered for years by the lack of a supercomputer.

Good Peach Forecast

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina's peach industry may never return to the peak production of the 1940s, but growers said they are pleased at this year's reprieve from late spring frosts that have hurt state crops since 1982.

"We're jumping up and down, we're so happy," said Kathy Williams, a horticulture extension specialist at North Carolina State University. "The peach growers need something upbeat."

State officials predict a peach harvest this year of 30 million pounds, about 75 percent of an optimum crop. Except for a 1984 yield of 35 million pounds, late frosts have cut harvests to as little as 2 million pounds in 1982 and 1985.

North Carolina, in its golden era of peach production, turned out a record 152 million pounds in 1941. But since then, the peach industry has been migrating south.

"There's more money in early peaches, and the farther south you go, the earlier you can grow them," Ken Chappell, who grows 90 acres of peach trees near West End in Moore County, told The News and Observer of Raleigh. "As far as being a major shipping market, we'll never be that again."

Burlington Dodges Takeover Try

GREENSBORO (AP) — Burlington Industries Inc. has apparently thwarted a four-month attempt by New York financier Asher Edelman and Dominion Textile Inc. of Montreal to take over the nation's largest textile company.

The end of the battle for control of the Greensboro-based company came into view early Monday afternoon, when a three-judge panel of the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Richmond, Va., upheld an injunction blocking Edelman and Dominion's $77-a-share offer, which expires at midnight.

Burlington's victory seemed even more assured when a U.S. District Court judge in New York late Monday afternoon denied Edelman and Dominion's request to block a competing company-backed offer.

As a result, most Burlington stockholders are expected to surrender their shares today to a group of banks, led by Morgan Stanley Group Inc. of New York and backed by Burlington's management. The group's $78-a-share offer also expires at midnight.

John "Buddy" Howard, an analyst for Carolina Securities in Raleigh, said Edelman and Dominion may have exhausted their options.

"It's hard to figure out what they're going to pull out of their hats next," Howard said. "I can't imagine they've got any other tricks left. I have thought this thing was over and done with several times before, so you just never know."

Efforts to reach Edelman and Dominion were unsuccessful.

The partners could appeal either or both of the decisions handed down Monday. But to remain contenders, they probably would have to get their appeals considered before midnight or at least get a higher court to stay the lower courts' decisions.

Even if the partners remain in the race and are able to raise their offer, analysts said Monday that shareholders were more likely to go with the Morgan Stanley offer because a Burlington lawsuit and recently enacted state laws pose serious challenges to the Edelman-Dominion offer.

Morgan Stanley, which has agreed to keep Burlington's senior management in charge of the company, could extend the deadline on its offer. But it is not clear whether the partners, while enjoined, could extend theirs.

Burlington spokesman Bryant Haskins said company officials were "gratified" by the appeals court decision. He said he had not seen the New York judge's decision and declined to comment on it.

No matter how the battle for control ends, Burlington, with sales of $2.8 billion and profits of $57 million in 1986, will have to sell off some of its businesses to pay off the loans taken out to finance the $2 billion-plus purchase of the company.

Burlington's stock closed at $77.50 a share, up 25 cents from Friday's closing of $77.25, after 177,000 shares were traded.

The stock was trading at $46 a share in February, when Edelman and Dominion first started buying it. The partners stand to gain about $100 million — before taxes and fees — on the 3.6 million shares they've acquired, if they cash in on the $78 offer.

No sooner had the partners revealed their plans in April to take over the company than Burlington sued them in U.S. District Court in Greensboro, alleging that they had wrongfully used confidential company information in their takeover efforts.

In connection with that lawsuit, U.S. District Judge Eugene Gordon found that Burlington probably would be able to prove its allegations at a later trial and issued a preliminary injunction blocking Edelman and Dominion's offer until a trial could be held.

Edelman and Dominion appealed. But on Monday, Chief Judge Harrison Winter and Judges Kenneth Hall and Harvie Wilkinson of the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals affirmed the injunction after an hour-long telephone conference call with attorneys for Burlington and for Edelman and Dominion.

Meanwhile, Edelman and Dominion had asked U.S. District Judge Shirley Kram of New York to issue a preliminary injunction blocking the Morgan Stanley offer. They contended that an agreement between Morgan Stanley and Burlington's board made the acquisition of Burlington more difficult and costly for other prospective buyers.

Kram denied the partner's request Monday, finding that Edelman and Dominion "are not threatened with irreparable injury and are not likely to succeed on the merits of their claims."

In another setback for the partners Monday, a panel of the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New York ordered that the partners' challenge of two North Carolina laws be transferred to a federal court in North Carolina.

One of the laws requires that any merger be approved by the holders of 95 percent of a company's stock.

PTL Comeback By Bakkers Is Unlikely, Claims Falwell

By WILLIAM STRACENER
Associated Press Writer
TEGA CAY, S.C. (AP) — The Rev. Jerry Falwell says that despite Jim Bakker's retaining of attorney Melvin Belli in Bakker's fight to return to the PTL ministry, a bankruptcy judge is unlikely to let Bakker and his wife, Tammy Faye, make a comeback at PTL.

"There is very little chance the court will allow the fox back into the henhouse," Falwell said Monday.

The Lynchburg, Va. minister also dismissed Belli's entry into the matter as "lots of theatrics" and said the ministry has "hard days ahead."

"We're bringing in all the actors and lawyers, but God sits in the heavens and smiles at all this monkey business. The ministry here is the emphasis," Falwell said.

Both sides will have their say when a judge hears PTL's plans for reorganization under the protection of Chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code.

The plan must be accepted by a majority of PTL's creditors, which include contractors and the TV stations that carry the ministry's program. PTL, which stands for People That Love or Praise the Lord, listed 1,400 creditors who are owed $72 million.

Belli said Monday that singer Pat Boone or someone else with "no ax to grind" should temporarily lead PTL while its members decide between Jim Bakker or Jerry Falwell to run the television ministry.

"We have to stop all this bitterness and mudslinging," Belli said. "We ought to get Pat Boone as sort of a caretaker on this and let him sit in. He has no ax to grind."

Falwell said PTL needs no new caretaker and that its board is happy with the current management.

Boone, a charismatic Christian like Bakker, said Monday he hadn't officially been offered the mediator's job and declined to say if he would accept it.

"His hopes are that Jerry and Jim and their attorneys will get together in a room, close the doors, pray and not come out until they have a meeting of their hearts and minds and put the whole thing to rest," said Boone's manager, Pat Swift.

Boone told Cable News Network that Falwell earlier had asked him to be on PTL's board, but that he had declined because of other commitments. He said if the ministry needed him to help host the "PTL Club" television program, he "would have to consider it."

Belli said Falwell, a fundamentalist who heads a ministry based in Lynchburg, Va., should take care of his own business.

Falwell "doesn't have, or shouldn't have, the time to take care of another ministry, particularly when the other ministry is of a different faith," Belli said.

No Offender Plan

GREENSBORO (AP) — More than 1,800 North Carolina prisoners are serving time for sex-related crimes, and experts say untreated inmates could strike again, but North Carolina has no statewide plan for dealing with sex offenders.

"It tends to be an offense that will repeat itself if not monitored closely," said Bill Forbis, a clinical worker with the Guilford County Mental Health Department who treats sex offenders outside the prison system.

North Carolina's prison system offers mental health care for about 2,000 inmates at any given time, but many crime prevention experts say too little time is given to sex offenders.

"The resources we have available for sex offenders is very, very limited," said Dr. Alan Harrop, director of mental health and psychological services for the state's 86 prisons and 18,000 inmates.

The Department of Correction's mental health division has a full-time staff of 60 psychologists, 15 social workers and two psychiatrists, plus 22 part-time psychiatrists and a support staff.

Rapists and child molesters may take a back seat to inmates with severe mental disorders such as manic depression and acute psychosis, but officials say treatment may be just as important for those who commit sex crimes.

Adding to the problem is a state Court of Appeals decision last December stating that the trial court judge can recommend mental health treatment but cannot see that it takes place.

Pennsylvania has contracts with private agencies to provide therapy and rehabilitation for sex offenders at two state prisons, said Dr. Rafael Belford, chief of psychological services for the Pennsylvania Department of Correction. Each treatment program has a capacity of 65 inmates.

By contrast, there is no group therapy available in the North Carolina prison system, Harrop told the Greensboro News & Record. Treatment usually consists of one-on-one sessions lasting 30 to 45 minutes, weekly or bimonthly, with a psychiatrist.

Harrop and others say they are developing a statewide plan that would coordinate services offered by the prison system, local mental health departments and private professionals who would treat offenders on an out-patient basis.

Dr. Bill Tyson of Marion, who has worked extensively with sex offenders, said decision makers in state government who hold the power to make changes are now taking notice.

Wedding Vows Said Sunday

FARMVILLE — Trina Lynn Holloman and Thomas Edward Peacock, both of Greenville, were married Sunday at 3 p.m. in a double ring ceremony in Friendship Free Will Baptist Church. The Rev. Walter Reynolds officiated.

Mr. and Mrs. Johnnie Arthur Holloman of Walstonburg are parents of the bride. Mr. and Mrs. William D. Pelon of Jacksonville are the bridegroom's parents. The bridegroom is also the son of the late Oliver John Peacock.

Wesley Letchworth of Snow Hill was organist and vocalist for the ceremony. He sang "Gentle Shepherd," "The Wedding Song" and "Surely the Presence of the Lord Is in This Place."

The bride, given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, wore an ivory gown of satin and re-embroidered alencon lace. The fitted basque bodice, which featured a Victorian neckline over a sheer English net yoke, was overlaid with alencon lace accented with seed pearls and iridescent sequins. The long fitted satin sleeves featured upper draped pleats and beaded alencon lace wedding point cuffs. The full satin skirt, which fell from box pleats below the lace, extended to a cathedral train edged with an alencon lace border. The bride selected an ivory cathedral length veil of imported illusion accented with beaded pearls. The veil was held in place by a circlet of alencon lace and beaded pearls. She carried a nosegay of white roses, cymbidium orchid, stephanotis, baby's breath and statice.

MRS. PEACOCK

The matron of honor was Kathy Baucom of Farmville, sister of the bride. She wore a tea length gown of imported daphne rose French laticework lace bordered in a floral patterned chantilly lace motif over matching satin. The gown was fashioned with a sheer yoke with the scalloped lace defining the sabrina neckline. The waistline of the gathered skirt was accentuated with a cummerbund and bow of satin. The scalloped border of lace edged the hemline. She wore a spray of silk flower roses in matching daphne to complement her gown. She carried a nosegay of alstromeria lilies, miniature white and variegated carnations, roses, baby's breath and statice.

Bridesmaids were Rose Holloman, sister-in-law of the bride, Donna Moore and Claire Fields, all of Walstonburg, Terri Wade of Snow Hill, Donna Haggerty of Raleigh and Beth Peacock of Jacksonville, sister of the bridegroom. Each wore a gown and headpiece and carried a nosegay styled like that of the matron of honor.

The stepfather of the bridegroom was the best man. Groomsmen were Johnny Peacock, Ivan Peacock and Bill Peacock, all brothers of the bridegroom, Tony Holloman, brother of the bride, Ken Niklason and Richie Haug.

The mother of the bride chose a tea-length gown of mauve crepe designed with a draped bodice. The bridegroom's mother selected a tea-length gown of peach floral-pattern jacquard designed with a jewel neckline. Both mothers wore cymbidium orchids.

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall. Mr. and Mrs. Seth Morgan greeted the guests. Gladys Oakley served cake and Shirley Moore poured punch.

The wedding was directed by Mrs. Cedric Davis of Farmville. Lynanne Thigpen and Martha Anne Nimmo of Snow Hill presided at the register. Craig Baucom and John Holloman, nephews of the bride, distributed programs.

After a wedding trip to Florida, the couple will reside in Greenville.

The bride attended East Carolina University and is employed by Greene County schools. The bridegroom also attended ECU and is employed by Sportsman's World of Goldsboro.

A bridal luncheon was hosted by Kathy Baucom and Rose Holloman at the Baucom home. Several other parties and showers were held to honor the bride and bridegroom before the ceremony.

Marisa Bellisario Is Italy's Top Woman Executive

By JENNIFER PARMELEE
Associated Press Writer

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Marisa Bellisario is dressed for the success she's worked so hard to attain — the sleek dark suit, white silk blouse with pageboy collar and enameled brooch. All harmonize cleanly with the no-nonsense business tactics she has used to pull Italy's leading telecommunications company from the brink of collapse.

Yet there's a last detail. This 50-year-old queen of Italian industry wears a crown of red-blond, short spiky hair, a hairstyle that would seem more at home in a fashionable nightclub than in the board room. She's also noted for a work wardrobe of funky and colorful clothes, including jeans.

A female Italian journalist leaned toward her during a television interview.

"I have to ask you: Why the hair? Why do you dress this way? What's the point?"

The reply: "At the beginning, people told me that if I didn't dress in a certain way, I wouldn't be taken seriously. I wanted to show them otherwise."

Bellisario is not locked into any gray, three-piece-suit way of thinking.

This is the woman who introduced the telephone by Giorgio Armani, one of Italy's top fashion designers. This is the country where style — the flair that shows up in everything from sunglasses to kitchen utensils — has played a pivotal role in its economic recovery.

"Imagination, flexibility and optimism are key factors in the turnaround Italy has had," she said in an interview. "I like people to be concrete, but not too much so. For success, imagination and brains are more important."

"La Bellisario," as she is known, has combined those ingredients in keeping Italtel alive.

When she took over as chief executive officer in 1981, losses were piling up by more than $215 million a year. Like many of Italy's public companies, it was saddled with a bloated staff and huge debts.

One of Bellisario's first priorities was to trim the fat from the payrolls, tricky business in a country of powerful unions. Known to dislike bureaucratic methods, she used an unorthodox approach: she sat down with union leaders and did her own bargaining, ultimately winning their support.

"I was extremely frank," she says in the fluent English she learned in the United States where she headed American operations for Olivetti, the computer giant. "I showed them that unless these modernizations were implemented, even more drastic measures would become necessary."

She also took the unusual step of delivering a blunt corporate newsletter to employees at their homes, seeking to explain why Italtel was cutting its staff, shaking up management, transferring personnel, and upgrading products from mechanical to electronic.

"It was designed to garner a consensus feeling and also to instill a spirit of change," says a top aide, Vera Gandi. "Because in Italy, it is traditional to stay in the same job, perhaps even the same department, for your whole life without thinking of change."

The approach worked. By 1982, Bellisario had halved Italtel's losses. The company has been in the black ever since, last year making more than $56 million in profit.

These days, Bellisario, who went to business school in Milan and is one of the rare women to reach the top ranks of Italian business, is a media darling. She has written her life story ("Women and Top Manager") and is considered a role model for women, whom she describes as Italy's "great untapped resource."

"For a woman, achieving success is more difficult," she is fond of saying, "but much more entertaining."

Although her weekdays combine 12-hours days and shuttling between Milan, Rome and other European capitals, work is strictly off-limits on weekends. She spends them at home with her husband, Lionello Cantoni, a mathematics professor, and their seven cats and dogs.

"Maybe I can show young girls that you can make it and still be a normal woman, with normal attitudes toward your family or husband," she says. "Or for dress, or choosing the color of your hair...."

Alcohol Is Female Issue

Some 66 percent stays afloomen and 80 percent of teen aged girls use alcohol regularly, the spring issue of Changing Woman magazine indicates.

Many women who use alcohol become addicted to and abuse it, the article says.

Many cities, including Greenville, have Alcoholics Anonymous chapters especially for women. To learn the meeting time and place of the local AA for women, call the Mental Health Center, 752-7151.

Today's Women Willing To Share

At Wits End
Erma Bombeck

We are known as the women who "have it all."

We have our own houses to clean, quality time with our very own children, husbands to attend, and meals to plan, cook and serve.

We have our own little gas tanks to fill, our very own ironing boards that we use when everyone else is in bed, and our own personal oven to clean. We have a second career outside of the home and whole weekends to shop, run errands, take the dog to the vet and do all the things we didn't finish during the week.

If we were any more fulfilled, we'd sell our beds. There wouldn't be time enough to sleep anyway.

I hate to say this about my "sisters," but I feel in the process of exercising our many talents, we've become greedy. We just can't go on hogging all this self-esteem and not sharing it. We've become such authoritative role models that when we ask our own children to get us a glass of water from the kitchen, they ask, "Where do I find it?" and when we answer, "The glass?" they reply, "No, the kitchen."

We've been so busy impressing everyone with how we are faster than a speeding bullet, more powerful than a locomotive and able to leap tall buildings in a single bound, we've set a standard for future generations that is downright frightening.

If a woman is ever elected to the Presidency, every time she goes to a summit meeting, there will be a note on the refrigerator for the First Man. It will read, "Take casserole out of the refrigerator. Set oven for 350 degrees. Keep covered and bake for 50 minutes. Salad is in bag in crisper and dressing is in Tupperware bowl. Bon appetit."

If memory serves me, when men "had it all," they shared. Lord, did they share. When my husband went out of town, I can never recall him cutting the grass before he went, or paying someone to come in and take out "his" garbage. He never went around trying to anticipate that I would need a jar of olives opened that only he could budge, nor would he get the hose out of the basement because I was afraid to go down there by myself. He just left.

When his checkbook didn't balance, sometimes he woke me up at 2 in the morning to "share" the deficit with me. He even included me in the exhilaration of his fishing trips. He caught the fish and I cleaned and cooked it. He was never selfish about the children either. Whenever they needed changing or cried in the early morning hours, he feigned ignorance and deafness so I could have some "time" with them.

I want to pay him back. What do you want to bet, he won't even thank me.

Is Mother Being Old-Fashioned?

DEAR ABBY: My ex-husband is planning a weekend at his cabin with his fiancée, and he's taking our 16-year-old son along to meet this woman for the first time. I brought up the subject of their sleeping arrangements, suggesting to my "ex" that he and his lady-friend sleep apart at the cabin.

I told him that I had raised our son to respect women and have high moral standards, and for him to be sleeping with this woman to whom he is not yet married would be setting a very poor example for our son.

He was not very receptive to my suggestions and told me I should not try to inflict my "old-fashioned" moral values on our son. How about it? Am I being old-fashioned? — A MOTHER FIRST

DEAR MOTHER: Not in my book. If your "ex" chooses to ignore the fact that he is giving his 16-year-old son the message that sex before marriage is OK, unfortunately, there is nothing you can do about it. Since your son is living with you, let's hope your values and the example you have set for him over the years will have a greater influence on his character than his father's.

DEAR ABBY: I just read your letter from "Heartbroken Grandpa in Kansas" and am moved to write to you. You see, I also have a 4-month-old baby whom I frequently lay on my waterbed for naps. Although my husband has questioned the wisdom of this practice, I saw no harm.

I consider myself a conscientious mother who would never put her child in danger. I read every article on child rearing, and diligently follow all safety precautions. Never have I read a warning to waterbed owners. In fact, I have seen cribs on the market with waterbed mattresses.

Dear Abby

"Grandpa," I grieve for your loss as if it were my own. It very well could have been. Please know that I am sending copies of that Dear Abby column to my friends who own waterbeds and to parenting magazines I read frequently. Be assured there will be one hanging in my pediatrician's office. I pray that you and your family will learn to live with your loss. Thank you for preventing mine. — SAFER IN SAN DIEGO

DEAR SAFER: Yours was one of many letters I received thanking "Grandpa" for his valuable letter. Please let me repeat that the 4-month-old grandchild who was found face down, asphyxiated on a waterbed, was dressed in a bunting suit and was unable to free his arms or legs to lift himself to breathe.

DEAR ABBY: As the wife of a compulsive gambler, I read with great interest your reply to the woman who complained about her husband spending the welfare check on lottery tickets. You were right! The man is a compulsive gambler. Recommending Gamblers Anonymous could save their marriage.

However, whether the husband attends G.A. or not, the wife should attend Gam-Anon to learn the following:

1. How to protect herself and her children financially, for if she doesn't, the results can be devastating.
2. Why she remains in a relationship with a compulsive gambling man, which is clearly self-destructive behavior.
3. How she can help her husband stop gambling.
4. How to find the serenity, courage and wisdom to do whatever is necessary to "survive alongside him" if he sincerely tries to stop gambling, but to refuse to "own" with him if he doesn't. — A GAM-ANON MEMBER, N. BELLMORE, N.Y.

Debt Is Staggering

chandise trade accounts, something economists don't see happening for a long time.

Because of this view, economists are predicting that total U.S. foreign debt could hit $1 trillion by the early 1990s.

Many economists believe such a heavy burden of foreign debt will reduce Americans' standard of living as foreigners demand higher and higher interest payments just to service the debt.

President Reagan has sought to downplay the change in the country's position, saying it just proves how attractive America is to foreign investors.

But the driving force behind the country's rapid slide into the status of a net debtor has been its huge trade deficits. Foreigners have been more than willing to take American dollars in exchange for sales of their products in this country.

DDS Hears Report

She said she thinks the increase in reported cases is due to increased education and awareness about abuse.

"For every one case (of abuse and neglect) reported, there are probably four to seven that are never reported," DSS director Edward Garrison said.

"There is a serious problem in society about how adults treat children," he said. "The probably will get nothing but worse ... unless funds for crisis prevention" are available."

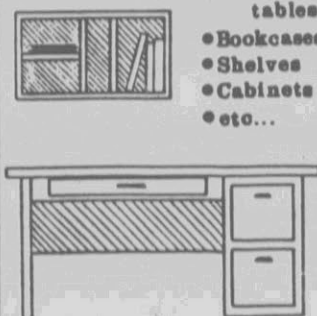

Garrison said a final budget has not been approved by the Pitt County commissioners yet, but that he had met with the board to defend certain items included in the proposed budget. Due to a discussion with the commissioners, a budget item for a social worker II for the Long-Term Screening Program had been reinstated into the DSS budget.

The board approved a policy for non-institutional respite care to be performed by Chore service providers in temporary emergency situations.

year. A lower dollar means higher prices for imported goods and components.

However, over the past month the dollar has appeared to stabilize on foreign exchange markets, and in recent weeks has even increased slightly against other key currencies — leading analysts to reject suggestions of runaway inflation this year.

"People got hysterical a few months ago" in forecasting spiraling inflation based on a plummeting dollar, said Michael Evans, president of a private economic forecasting service.

"The dollar has indeed bottomed out. I don't think it will decline further for the next year or so," added Evans, who is predicting a 5 percent inflation rate for the entire year.

Prices excluding energy and foods — the category that most closely reflects import prices — rose 0.3 percent in May, compared to a 0.5 percent rise in April.

The May increase left the CPI at 338.7, meaning that a market basket of goods that cost $10 in the base year of 1967 cost $33.87 last month. That's $1.24 more than the same goods cost in May 1986, when the CPI stood at 326.3.

NBA Draft Tough To Grade

By BILL BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

The basketball Class of 1987 will be a hard one to grade. David Robinson, the unquestioned star of the college crop, is more than two years away from stepping from a Navy uniform into an NBA one.

And the other players drafted Monday are of such questionable quality that a projected third-round selection became the No. 5 pick with a strong showing in tryout camps and 5-foot-3 Tyrone Bogues was the 12th player taken.

"Beauty is in the eye of the beholder," Marty Blake, the NBA's chief scout, said. "In two years, you will say this is a good draft."

In two years, after his Naval commitment is completed, the 7-foot-1 Robinson will be either a signee of the San Antonio Spurs, who took him No. 1 Monday, or the NBA could be facing a free-agent chase reminiscent of baseball's signing frenzies in the early 1980s.

"We feel very comfortable we can do it or we wouldn't have drafted him," Spurs President Angelo Drossos said. "As far as signing him to a contract we will pay him whatever it takes."

"I'm trying to keep an open mind about it," Robinson said of his selection by the Spurs. "I hope to go down to San Antonio and look around, get to know the organization, and see the people in charge. I don't want to make any decisions right away."

In the meantime, the Spurs will bide their time and try to win enough games and draw enough fans to stay afloat.

With Robinson in limbo, it appears that the Chicago Bulls, with 3,000-point scorer Michael Jordan and little else last season, helped themselves more than any other team.

The Bulls added Scottie Pippen of Central Arkansas, a 6-7 forward who so impressed scouts in postseason camps that he was made the No. 5 pick; 6-10 Horace Grant of Clemson and 38-year-old center Artis Gilmore on draft day.

Pippen was selected by Seattle, who traded his signing rights to Chicago for the rights to 6-11 center Olden Polynice, a second-round pick in 1988 or 1989 and the option to trade first-round picks in 1988 or 1989. Gilmore was acquired from San Antonio for another second-round pick in 1988.

"If our faces are a little red, it's because we stopped off for a sip of champagne to celebrate," Bulls General Manager Jerry Krause said. "Pippen is an outstanding prospect who can do a lot of things. He has a 74-inch arm span and he's a player who will get bigger and stronger. He grew eight inches in the last four years and we think he's going to get better."

Pippen averaged 23.6 points and 10.0 rebounds as a senior at Central Arkansas. He can play guard or forward, but Coach Doug Collins plans on using him at forward.

"I'm very happy with the trade," said Pippen, who was lightly recruited out of high school, then grew six inches during four years in college. "I'm looking forward to playing on the same team as Michael. He is a great player and I hope to learn a lot."

Grant was the Atlantic Coast Conference Player of the Year, leading the ACC in scoring with 21 points per game, in rebounding with 9.6 per game and in field-goal percentage, .656.

"I was very excited when I saw Grant work out," Collins said. "Grant can hit from the 20-foot range and he can block shots."

Gilmore, a six-time NBA all-star, has slowed dramatically in recent years, but Krause said, "We feel he still has some basketball left in him. He fills a hole for us, he's big and he's strong and he's tickled pink to be back with the Bulls."

"He's not coming here to retire, he's coming here to play and he can help some of our kids grow up," Collins said.

Bogues, like Pippen, improved his draft position during postseason camps and all-star games. As the No. 12 pick by Washington, he will join 7-7 Manute Bol on the Bullets, giving them the tallest and the shortest players in the league.

"Having Manute at center to back me up could take a lot of the pressure off me," Bogues said. "It's an honor going in the first round. I think I turned a few heads in the (postseason) camps I played in. I guess somebody believed in me."

Phoenix followed San Antonio's pick of Robinson with 6-9 Armon Gilliam of Nevada-Las Vegas. Then came a run of four guards in the next five picks.

New Jersey grabbed 6-5 Dennis Hopson, the Los Angeles Clippers took 6-7 Reggie Williams of Georgetown, Seattle selected Pippen (who is listed as a forward but could play some guard), Sacramento picked 6-3 Kenny Smith of North Carolina and Cleveland drafted 6-1 Kevin Johnson of California.

Two more guards, 6-7 Reggie Miller of UCLA and Bogues, were taken 11th and 12th after Polynice was drafted by Chicago, 6-9 forward Derrick McKey of Alabama by Seattle and Grant by Chicago.

The rest of the first-round selections were 6-10 forward Joe Wolf of North Carolina by the Clippers, 6-10 forward Tellis Frank of Western Kentucky by Golden State, 6-10 Jose Ortiz of Oregon State by Utah, 7-0 Chris Welp of Washington by Philadelphia, 6-4 Ronnie Murphy of Jacksonville by Portland, 6-3 Mark Jackson of St. John's by New York, 6-8 Ken Norman of Illinois by the Clippers, 6-4 Jim Farmer of Alabama by Dallas, 6-9 Dallas Comegys of DePaul by Atlanta, 6-7 Reggie Lewis of Northeastern by Boston and 6-10 Greg Anderson of Houston by San Antonio.

Bogues Will Let Others Worry

NEW YORK (AP) — Five-foot-3 Tyrone Bogues, the 12th pick in the first round of the NBA draft Monday, said he will let the opposition worry about his defense.

Bogues, of Wake Forest, was selected by the Washington Bullets, who also have the tallest player in the NBA in 7-7 Manute Bol.

Yet in a league where the average player is 16 inches taller than he is, Bogues believes that defense can be his specialty.

"I don't see any problem," Bogues said. "I'm used to guys taller than me. I believe they have to make more adjustments than me."

Bogues' credentials, other than his size, amply qualified him as an NBA prospect.

Bogues finished as the Atlantic Coast Conference's all-time career assist leader and averaged 14.8 points and 9.5 assists last season. Amazingly, he ranked third among ACC guards in rebounds last season and led the conference in assists, steals and minutes for three consecutive years.

But it wasn't until the scouts saw him at postseason camps that teams began to see him as a first-rounder.

"I think I turned a few heads in the camps I played in," Bogues said. "I guess somebody believed in me and I'm glad Washington was one of them."

"During the regular season, there was still a lot of doubt in my mind whether I could play in the NBA. Getting the opportunity to play in Chicago (pre-draft camp) changed my world. A lot of people became believers, and most importantly, I started believing in myself."

Bogues said the success of 5-6 Atlanta guard Spud Webb also improved his confidence.

"Spud has been an inspiration to me for a long time, first at North Carolina State and now with the Atlanta Hawks," Bogues said. "He has done a tremendous job with Atlanta. If he can do it, so can I. That's the way I look at it."

Wake Forest Coach Bob Staak said before the draft that Bogues would fit into the NBA if he is with the right team. With Bol to cover his height liabilities, Bogues believes Washington is that team.

Seaver Retires

Sixteen days after rejoining the New York Mets, pitcher Tom Seaver announced his retirement. The three-time Cy Young Award winner who pitched for 20 years and won 311 games, is 42 years old. (AP Laserphoto)

Seaver Calls It Quits With Mets

NEW YORK (AP) — He has been called "The Franchise" and "Tom Terrific." In five years, Tom Seaver will also be called a Hall of Fame pitcher.

Seaver retired from baseball Monday after a 20-year career with the New York Mets, Cincinnati Reds, Chicago White Sox and Boston Red Sox.

But Seaver will always be remembered in a Mets' uniform as the man who turned a lovable loser into a formidable force.

At the age of 42 and coming off knee surgery, Seaver answered the Mets' call for help when their pitching staff was decimated by injuries.

"I had the opportunity to see if there were another three months or another 15 games left in my arm," Seaver said at a Shea Stadium news conference to announce his retirement. "There are no more pitches there. I've used them all up."

And, he used them very well.

Seaver ended his career with a record of 311-205, a 2.86 earned run average and 3,640 strikeouts. He won three National League Cy Young Awards with the Mets and is the club's all-time winner with 198 victories, including 25 in 1969 when New York won the World Series.

Seaver and the Mets originally hoped he could make his first major-league start this season on June 20. But he was hit hard in an exhibition start against the Mets' Class AAA Tidewater team and in two simulated games against teammates.

"It's with a sense of mixed emotions I'm announcing my retirement," Seaver said. "It was a very easy decision to make. Based on my own evaluation in the way I was throwing the last couple of weeks. I was not pleased with my progress. As a matter of fact, I felt I was regressing."

Seaver's last pitches from the mound at Shea came last Saturday when he faced teammates Bill Almon, Dave Magadan, Barry Lyons and Clint Hurdle, hitters with a combined average of .258. Seaver threw 61 pitches and allowed four runs and 10 hits, including six by Lyons.

"I realized I can't help them as a pitcher and I trust my own intelligence and my own heart in making that decision," Seaver said.

Mistakes Costly As Kinston Tops Pitt

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

By Coach Toby Holiday's account, Pitt County American Legion Post 39 made too many mistakes to win against Kinston Monday night.

Kinston Post 43 took advantage of the miscues to take a 10-7 Area I Legion baseball victory.

"We just made stupid mistakes, mental errors, that cost us," Holiday said. "It looks like they might have wanted it a little more than we did."

Kinston's Felton Mason didn't help matters much, smashing two homers including a three-run homer in the ninth that broke a 7-7 tie and gave Kinston the win.

With one out, Billy Burns singled. Whit Whitley then reached on a field-er's choice but Burns reached second on an error. Mason then smacked his homer over the fence in right center-field. For the night, Mason went 2-4 with five RBI.

Post 39 committed five errors and also stranded 10 men on the night, contributing to its problems.

"We played well enough to win but then again we (also) played well enough to lose," Holiday said. "We have to get the intensity back to the point we potentially can."

Pitt jumped out to a 6-3 lead after five innings and could have expanded that but left two on in the inning.

Hunter Clark started things off in the fifth with an infield single and was sacrificed to second by Axel Smith. David Daniels followed with a single and an error on the throw to first allowed Clark to score.

Eric Jarman then drew a walk before Tom Moye singled in Daniels to give Pitt its biggest lead of the night. Jeremy Copeland then came on in relief of Kinston starter Neal Outlaw and got the final out to end the inning.

Kinston then pushed across three runs in the top of the sixth to knot the score.

With one out, Brian Lang singled. John Hinson followed by drawing a walk before Rick Killinger singled to score Lang. Dave Hinson then came up and lashed a double to drive in two more runs and tie the score at 6-6.

Pitt County put two men in scoring position in the bottom of the inning but couldn't move them home.

With two outs, Clark and Smith reached on consecutive errors. A wild pitch moved them to second and third but Copeland struck out Daniels to end the threat.

After both teams pushed across a run in the seventh, Post 39 blew a golden opportunity in the eighth.

Sherwood Wilder opened the eighth by popping up to the third baseman, Billy Burns, but Burns dropped the ball. Wilder failed to run it out and Burns was able to throw him out.

"That was a crucial one when the guy didn't run out the ball," Holiday said.

Shane Adams then reached on an error and advanced to second on a balk but two straight ground outs ended the inning.

But Pitt County had its chances in the ninth.

David Daniels opened the inning with a line drive smash to centerfield that Lang made an over the shoulder grab to get the first out.

Eric Jarman later knocked a double, followed by Moye reaching on a walk but a strikeout ended the game and gave Kinston the win.

Copeland took the win, going the final four and a third innings with only two hits. Outlaw had allowed eight over the first four and two-thirds innings.

Jarman took the loss, giving up 12 hits and eight earned runs while striking out 10.

Pitt County falls to 5-4 and travels to Wayne County tonight.

Boyd's Return Gives Bosox Hope

By The Associated Press
The Boston Red Sox have reason to feel good about baseball again after watching Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd pitch for the first time this season. "It's good to be back," Boyd said after allowing only five hits and two runs Monday night in his 1987 major-league debut. Boston defeated the Milwaukee Brewers 5-2 in a game called in the eighth inning because of rain. Boyd, 1-0, threw 82 pitches in an impressive return from the disabled list. Except for three rehabilitation starts in the minors, he had not pitched since a Florida exhibition game March 25 because of tendinitis in his right shoulder. Boyd, who left after seven innings, was in a happy mood in the clubhouse after the game was called with reliever Calvin Schiraldi on the mound and the count 1-2 with Dale Sveum batting in the eighth. "I'm on a mission," Boyd said. "I feel I'm still capable of winning 15 ball games, and those 15 games will be credited to the team. I think I'm a big plus. I can help the team get going." Elsewhere in the American League, New York beat Baltimore 7-3, Detroit blanked Toronto 2-0, Seattle defeated Chicago 3-0, Oakland beat Kansas City 4-1 and California defeated Texas 7-3. It's been a struggle since the start of spring training for the Red Sox. They still had the bitter memory of coming within a strike of winning the World Series in Game 6 against New York; ace Roger Clemens held out all spring and got off to a slow start; and heroes from last season, such as Jim Rice, Dave Henderson and Marty Barrett have fought season-long slumps. Boston has a record of 32-37, 10½ games behind Toronto and New York in the AL East. "My arm feels good, no pain at all, no tightening up," Boyd said. "With Roger (Clemens), myself and Bruce (Hurst), it's just like last year. I don't know what will happen, but there's plenty of time to make up ground and have some fun."

Some of Boyd's teammates noticed the difference. "His personality adds a lot to this team," catcher Marc Sullivan said. "He's perky and exciting to be around. Just the way he jokes and smiles picks up the team." Wade Boggs extended his hitting streak to 23 games and raised his average to .380 with two singles in his 25th multi-hit game of the season. He also walked and scored a run in a three-run third and received an intentional walk in the seventh. With Milwaukee left-hander John Henry Johnson making only his second major-league start since 1984, the Red Sox tied the score 1-1 on Don Baylor's 13th homer in the second. Then, Boston shelled Johnson, 0-1, in the third. Barrett singled and came around on two walks and a hit batsman. Dwight Evans drove in the second run with a single off reliever Jay Aldrich's leg and the other run scored on a double-play grounder. Athletics 4, Royals 1 walked, reloading the bases, DeLeon was lifted. Eric Bell fanned pinch-hitter Ron Kittle, but Winfield followed with a two-run single. Terry Kennedy and Eddie Murray homered for Baltimore. The homer was Murray's first in 28 games. Tigers 2, Blue Jays 0 Frank Tanana pitched a five-hitter for Detroit's first shutout of the season and Alan Trammell hit a home run as the Tigers won for the 26th time in 36 games. Tanana, 7-3, struck out six and walked two for his third straight victory, second complete game of the season and his 29th career shutout. Trammell led off the fourth inning with his 12th homer, off starter Jim Clancy, 7-5. Matt Nokes followed with a triple and scored on Pat Sheridan's sacrifice fly.

Winning Homer Was A Mistake

By The Associated Press
One hopes for a little bonus after hitting a game-winning homer, but Keith Moreland expected to be penalized. Moreland missed a bunt sign in the bottom of the ninth inning with Leon Durham on first and then hit his 12th homer of the year on the next pitch to give the Chicago Cubs a 3-2 victory Monday over the Pittsburgh Pirates. It was the only game played in the National League. St. Louis and Montreal were rained out after the Expos held a 2-1 lead through three innings. "I hated missing that sign on a 1-0 pitch and I'm sure I'll get fined because I know Gene Michael (Cubs' manager) does not like being disobeyed," Moreland said. Michael, whose Cubs moved within 4½ games of first-place St. Louis in the NL East, was too happy with the outcome said he wouldn't fine Moreland.

"He's been having trouble swinging the bat this season, but I've been willing to let him hang in there. I wanted to have him swing at the 2-0 pitch, and if he was still up, then I'd move Durham to second," Michael said. Moreland has hit nine homers and driven in 29 runs in his last 18 games. "I passed on the sign to have Moreland move the runner (Durham) to second, and had (Rick) Reuschel's pitch been a strike, I probably would have become angry," third-base coach John Vukovich said. Reuschel was angry with himself. "I played enough games with Moreland to know he's a fastball hitter, but I did not want to walk him on the 2-0 pitch, and while I did not want to get the ball around the inner half of the plate, I did just that and paid for it," Reuschel said. Jamie Moyer, 0-4, pitched his first complete game since last Aug. 16. It also was the Cubs' third complete game this season, and first since April 26. Moyer has won five of his last six decisions while equaling last year's victory mark. Reuschel pitched his NL-leading fifth complete game, walking one and striking out four. The homer was the Cubs 14th ninth-inning homer. It also marked the ninth time they have won a game in the final inning. Andy Van Slyke's two-run homer with two outs in the eighth had given Pittsburgh a 2-1 lead. "I made a mistake to Van Slyke by throwing the ball down the middle on a 3-2 pitch, but I told myself, if they let me pitch the ninth, somehow we would come back and win," Moyer said. "Truthfully, the complete game is unimportant," Moyer said. "It's just like five innings to me — and we won, and that's all that counts." Pirates Manager Jim Leyland was worried about how the loss will affect his club. "This loss has left us groggy, and I just hope it doesn't linger for three or four days and keep us from playing good baseball, because kids tend to take these kinds of defeats hard," Leyland said. "There's nothing you can say, except we didn't get beat on a fluke hit or an error. The Cubs deserved to win, but then so did we." Chicago took a 1-0 lead in the third when Rafael Palmeiro's single scored Dave Martinez, who had tripled.

Dunbar Makes Draft History

BALTIMORE (AP) — Bob Wade seemed pleased, but not surprised, that three players from one of his high school teams had been selected in the first round of the NBA draft. "My wife just called to let me know how the kids did," Wade said calmly Monday afternoon. "I'm very happy." He paused. "Has this ever happened before?" Apparently not. Three teammates from Baltimore's Dunbar High School were among the 23 first-round picks in the National Basketball Association draft. Reggie Williams, Tyrone "Muggsy" Bogues and Reggie Lewis played on teams in their junior and senior years that went 60-0. The Los Angeles Clippers used the fourth pick in the draft to select Williams, who played collegiately at Georgetown. Bogues, of Wake Forest, was chosen 12th by the Washington Bullets and Lewis, of Northeastern, was picked 22nd by the Boston Celtics. To add even more luster to the lofty records of those Dunbar teams, two other players were selected by the NBA, one this year. Gary Graham of Nevada-Las Vegas was chosen by Indiana on the sixth round this year and David Wingate of Georgetown was the second pick last year of the Philadelphia 76ers. Wade, who coached at Dunbar for 11 years before taking the helm at the University of Maryland last season, said his former players owe their success to determination.

"A coach would like to take the credit," he said. "But they've gone on (after high school) to develop their God-given talent. They just believed in themselves and worked hard." Wade said he considered the three's selections a tribute to Baltimore, which he said has been ignored by recruiters. Williams, a 6-foot-7, 180-pound guard-forward, averaged 23.6 points and 8.6 rebounds a game last season. He was named the Big East player of the year and was the most valuable player in the conference tournament. Wade was hard-pressed to think of any weaknesses in the versatile Williams, except for a lack of overall strength. "He might have to pump up with the weights pretty hard," he said. "He handles the ball, he sees the court well and he's a good shooter." Bogues, at 5-3 the shortest player in the National Basketball Association, will have little problem adjusting to professional ball, Wade said. "When he came into the ACC, people said he'd have to adjust, but other players ended up having to adjust to him," Wade said. "He will fit in. This is his type of game, with a wide-open court and a 24-second clock. He'll cause some problems. When the ball is below the knee, that's Muggsy Land." "He's going to do well because he's got a heart as big as a building. He believes he can compete and he'll excel." With the addition of Bogues, Washington will have the NBA's tallest player — 7-7 Manute Bol — and its shortest in Bogues. Lewis, Wade said, had an excellent college career in the Boston area, where he averaged 22.2 points and became the ninth-leading scorer in major college history. "I think it was an outstanding tribute to him to be chosen by the Boston Celtics," Wade said of the 6-7, 185-pound Lewis, who probably will be a big guard. "He's worked extremely hard to combat his deficiency, which is handling the ball. He'll add punch, both offensively and defensively, when (Danny) Ainge and (Dennis) Johnson are out of the game."

Wade declined to take credit for the three players' ability. "They were a coach's dream," he said. "We had an opportunity to be together. That's what I cherish the most."

ECU's Wilson Heads To FSU

Rob Wilson, assistant sports information director at East Carolina for the past three years, has resigned to accept a similar post at Florida State University. Wilson, 26, has been with the Pirate program since July of 1984. He also joined the Pirate Sports Network last year as color commentator for ECU football and basketball games. Wilson will be returning to his alma mater in Tallahassee, Fla., when he joins the Seminole program next month. He was a 1983 graduate of FSU and served as a graduate assistant in the Sports Information office there.

The Ruitans improve to 6-1 and they return to action Wednesday against Chicod.

Herzog And Maxvill Get Their Rewards

ST. LOUIS (AP) — St. Louis Cardinals Manager Whitey Herzog and General Manager Dal Maxvill won contract extensions because of their work over the past few years, Board Chairman August A. Busch Jr. says. Herzog, who had been on a three-year contract that was to expire after the 1988 season, accepted on Monday a two-year extension which carries through the 1990 season. Maxvill was given a one-year extension which runs through 1988. Financial terms of the contracts were not disclosed, but Herzog said he had been given a raise from his previous contract, which was reported to be about $350,000 per year. "I don't think they could have treated me any better than they've treated me," Herzog said. "Dal and Whitey over the last three seasons have formed an excellent combination which has provided St. Louis fans with exciting and winning baseball," said Busch. "Dal has gone out and found quality players to form a winning club and Whitey has molded the players into an outstanding team through his managerial abilities. "After consulting with the executive committee, it seemed only fitting in light of their past record, the club's current success and their commitment to future team excellence on the field that we extend the contracts of a winning team like Dal Maxvill and Whitey Herzog." Herzog, 55, inherited a last-place team when he took over as manager in June 1980. Despite the players' strike, he guided the team to the best record in the National League East in 1981 and led the club to a 92-70 record in 1982, taking the National League pennant and winning the World Series by beating the Milwaukee Brewers in seven games. Under his leadership, the Cardinals also won the pennant in 1985. Earlier this season, he became the 37th manager in baseball history to post 1,000 career wins. Maxvill, who spent 11 of his 14 playing years as an infielder for the Cardinals, was on four winning World Series teams. After stints as a coach for several major league teams, Maxvill was named St. Louis' general manager in February 1985.

Three Make Track Meet

Mike Moore, Ronald Smith and Tony Evans all qualified for the Region III Junior Olympic Track meet to be held in Raleigh July 10-11. Moore qualified in the discus, javelin and shot. Smith qualified in the high hurdles while Evans qualified in the long jump and the triple jump. Moore and Smith competed in the intermediate division while Evans was in the young men's division. Ralph Love and Eric Morris also competed but didn't qualify.

FOCUS

Taking Credit

"Optima" is the first American Express card that allows payment over time — at an interest rate of 13.5 percent. As of June, 1985, outstanding consumer installment debt amounted to $566 billion — $222 billion for cars alone. In the early 1900s, the buy-now-pay-later arrangement was regarded as immoral — or at least as a sign of poor fiscal management. For the first decade of the century, Sears Roebuck made no credit available, even for the purchase of an automobile.

DO YOU KNOW — In credit card contracts, what do the initial "APR" mean?

MONDAY'S ANSWER — The metric temperature scale is called Celsius or Centigrade.

Horoscope

From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY June 24

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Use tact in dealing with associates and friends to protect your relationships. Use common sense and reasoning to please people you encounter today; you may need them later.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Don't be upset by a change in plans. Be alert for accidents, and watch all mechanical aspects of your life.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Not a day to press for payments or collections. Make no new plans concerning property. Enjoy your home life.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Don't alter the conditions of a promise-be honorable. Watch for arguments with your mate and money problems.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Plans with a friend need revision this morning. Have patience with delays and all other matters.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): Avoid depression over a holdup in the fulfillment of your desires. Don't depend on friends to pull you through the day.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Keep priorities in scheduling activities and don't interfere in family arguments. Stay calm instead.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Put aside new ideas which interfere with present schemes, but listen to differing views. Drive cautiously.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Discuss practical matters before concluding business. Avoid monetary discussions with your mate.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Use tact in dealing with a sharp-tongued person if you want to avoid trouble. Examine details of a civic interest.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Set priorities straight first thing today. Making a compromise with a co-worker could be beneficial.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): An unreasonable individual may interfere with group plans, but be constructive and don't let it get you down.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Postpone vital outside matters and focus on the home front. Exclude older depressing person from your home.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he, or she, will have an urge to travel and may be resentful if pinned down, failing to handle obligations. Teach your child to be less judgmental. Being reasonable is the most effective means of instruction here. A good education is necessary, and encourage sports.

"The Stars impel; they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Benito Garozzo of Rome would turn up on every expert's short list of the great players of all time. This hand, from the team event at the recent Cavendish Invitation Tournament, shows he has lost little of his skill.

North's two spade bid was a request for Garozzo to describe his hand further, in case there was a 4-4 club fit. His response of three no trump showed a near maximum with specifically 3-3-4-3 distribution, and the optimum contract was soon reached.

After the normal opening lead of the queen of spades, East made a slight technical error in signaling with the eight, showing an even number of cards in the suit. Declarer needed no more information to land his slam.

He won in hand with the king, crossed to the king of clubs and continued with a low club toward his jack. When East followed low, Garozzo ducked, in the hope that West started with a doubleton queen. Unfortunately, that failed to materialize, and a spade return forced out his last stopper in the suit. With no pause for thought, he unerringly found the winning line. He cashed his three top diamonds but, when everyone followed, he did not squeeze dummy by taking his long card in the suit because that would have forced him to make a discard from the board. Instead, he crossed to the ace of clubs and, when East failed to follow, thanks to the signal at trick one, he decided that West's distribution was 4-2-3-4.

That meant East had four hearts and was, therefore, a 2-to-1 favorite to hold the jack. A finesse of the ten of hearts now became automatic, and when that held, declarer had 12 tricks via two spades, four hearts, four diamonds and two clubs.

At the other table, declarer tried for a 3-3 heart split or a doubleton jack, with a 3-3 club division in reserve. When none of those possibilities occurred, he was down one.

Bush Campaign Denies Rumors

By EVANS WITT
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — People spreading rumors about George Bush's private life "should be ashamed of themselves," the vice president's campaign spokeswoman says. And Bush's Iowa campaign director points the finger of blame at backers of Sen. Bob Dole as the purveyors of gossip.

But Dole's spokesman denied that the Kansas Republican's campaign has been suggesting Bush has had a long-term extramarital affair.

"It is not in our interest and not in anybody else's" to pass along gossip, said Walt Riker, Dole's Senate spokesman.

The flurry of rumors — that stories would be printed accusing Bush of adultery — swept political circles in recent days and drew this from Bush's eldest son, George Bush Jr.: "The answer to the Big A question is N.O."

And that was Bush's response Monday night when he was asked at a photo opportunity if he had any comment on the rumors.

"No" was his answer as he waved to the cameras along with the president of Chad, Hissene Habre. Barbara, his wife of 42 years, was standing behind him outside the vice president's residence in Washington.

For Bush, the rumors were a chilling echo of the controversy that forced Democratic front-runner, Gary Hart, out of the 1988 field last month because of questions about his relationship with a Miami woman, Donna Rice. Since Hart's withdrawal, all the presidential hopefuls have faced the prospect of questions about adultery.

The Bush rumors made it into print with short newsmagazine items.

In their various versions, the rumors linked Bush romantically with a female aide or with the wife of a prominent supporter. Neither Newsweek nor U.S. News & World Report mentioned any women's names in their brief items.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater belittled the rumors, saying, "I hear gossip in the White House press room and I'm sure that's all it is. It's foolish."

"The individuals who are responsible for peddling this false rumor should be ashamed of themselves," Bush's campaign spokeswoman Barbara Pardue said Monday.

George Wittgraff, Bush's campaign director in Iowa, said he believed the rumors were coming from the Dole campaign.

"The only Republican presidential campaign from which any such news came to us in Iowa was the Dole camp," he said.

And Wittgraff added a dig at Dole, playing off his reputation for 1976 as a GOP hatchet man.

"I think that it is unfortunate that any other presidential campaign, and particularly the Dole campaign, is resorting to something that is unsubstantiated by fact," Wittgraff went on. "It is unfair to Senator Dole, who has been trying to move beyond the mean and nasty image he has had in the past."

Riker, Dole's press aide, denied any complicity in spreading the rumor. "We're not in the business of passing along gossip ... and we don't do it."

By RICHARD DE ATLEY
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Fred Astaire, who flunked his first screen test but became the debonair dancer who could even make a hat rack seem graceful, will forever be the symbol of class and style, Ginger Rogers said after his death.

Astaire, who died Monday at age 88, danced million of moviegoers away from reality as he swirled Miss Rogers in elegant penthouses, high above Depression-era streets; glided romantically with Cyd Charisse in a misty park; and, in "Royal Wedding," twirled around a bachelor pad with a hat rack.

It all worked, and those who knew him said everything about Astaire seemed to be choreographed for perfection.

"His talent is one that is going to live forever and I think the centuries that come on, the youngsters will find, they'll look to him for class, style and charm, because he epitomizes it," Miss Rogers said Monday night on ABC News' "Nightline."

"He brought extraordinary intellect, craft, poetry, spontaneity and musicality to his choreography and dancing, which remain a standard for us all and has come to represent the quintessential essence of the American theatrical style," said ballet dancer Mikhail Baryshnikov.

Astaire, who had suffered from pneumonia, died at Century City Hospital.

"I just got in bed with him and put my arms around him and he died in my arms, and that's the way he wanted it," said his wife, the former jockey Robyn Smith, whom he married in 1980.

She said he asked her to share his last moments with the fans of his dozens of hit movie musicals. Burial will be private, but a public memorial service will be arranged.

"There hasn't been such a talent as his," songwriter Irving Berlin said tearfully by telephone Monday from his New York home. "He was an international star ... the purest talent I have ever worked with."

Fellow song-and-dance man Gene Kelly said: "Although we have lost one of the greatest dancers who ever lived, Fred Astaire will always be immortal and an inspiration to all dancers who come after us."

For "Top Hat" in 1935, Astaire and Miss Rogers danced to such Berlin confessions as "Cheek to Cheek," "Isn't It a Lovely Day" and "Top Hat, White Tie and Tails."

"Everything he did was with grace and elegance: The way he moved, the way he spoke, the way he dressed," said Gregory Peck, who co-starred with Astaire in Astaire's dramatic role as a doomed scientist in "On The Beach."

"The last time I saw him, a few months ago, he still had that lightness of step; he was as graceful as ever."

Born Frederick Austerlitz, the son of an Omaha, Neb., beer salesman felt uncomfortable with praise, and said all his achievement came from hard work and rehearsal. He disliked formal wear, and lived a private life.

"I never thought a funny-looking guy like me would be suitable for pictures," Astaire once said, and a studio executive in 1930 dismissed him after his first screen test with the curt words: "Can't act ... can't sing ... balding ... can dance a little." His only Oscar, in 1949, was honorary.

Astaire's top-hat-and-tails style dominated the Hollywood musical genre beginning in the 1930s, when he starred in a series of 11 song-and-dance films with Miss Rogers, beginning with "Flying Down To Rio" in 1933.

The pair captivated Depression-era audiences, and the magic continued with Astaire's later partners, including Miss Charisse, Rita

Monroe To Lead Opryland Event

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A dozen country music groups, headlined by Bill Monroe and the Bluegrass Mountain Boys, will make heel-kicking music during a three-day Fourth of July celebration.

Monroe, the "father of bluegrass music," will be joined by such groups as Max Wiseman and the Wildwood Express, the Osborne Brothers, the Lewis Family and Jim & Jesse and the Virginia Boys at Opryland theme park.

The July 3-5 "Opryland Bluegrass Festival" will accompany an Independence Day fireworks display synchronized to music, said Julio Pierpaoli, Opryland general manager.

"There's no more appropriate way to celebrate Independence Day than with a family-oriented bluegrass festival, and we intend to put on one of the best ever," Pierpaoli said Monday.
