Kidnappers Release Minister's Son, Keep American Reporter

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Kidnappers released the son of Lebanon's defense minister and his driver today but kept captive American journalist Charles Glass, who was abducted with them a week ago.

Defense Minister Adel Osseiran told reporters after his son's release: "Charles Glass is still alive. Efforts are continuing to obtain his release."

Asked if he thought Glass would be released soon, Osseiran said: "I hope so."

Ali Osseiran, 40, and his driver, Suleiman Salman, abducted with Glass on June 17, arrived at the Osseirans' home in the coastal town of Rmeileh at 7:30 a.m., said Afaf Osseiran Saidi, the freed man's sister.

Ali Osseiran, dressed in navy blue trousers and a dark blue shirt, appeared briefly on the balcony of the family home in Rmeileh. Asked where Glass was, he paused and then replied sadly, "I don't know."

A bodyguard of Osseiran told the AP that Osseiran had dinner with Glass on Tuesday night, but would not give further details.

Although the elder Osseiran expressed hope that Glass, a former ABC television correspondent from Los Angeles, would be released soon, a Lebanese police spokesman said: "It appears Mr. Glass has joined the list of foreign hostages in Lebanon despite Syria's pressure to free him."

There are 25 foreigners missing and believed kidnapped in Lebanon since March 1985. Terry A. Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent of the AP was kidnapped March 16, 1985 and Glass is the second American journalist held captive.

The defense minister had blamed the kidnappings on the Hezbollah, or Party of God. But the militant Shiite Moslem group issued a statement Tuesday denying it was involved in the abductions, which took place in a Hezbollah stronghold.

The Christian-controlled Voice of Lebanon radio station said the younger Osseiran and Salman arrived today in Rmeileh, 19 miles south of Beirut, in Osseiran's white Volvo. The three men had been traveling in the Volvo last Wednesday in southern Beirut when 14 kidnappers stopped the car and seized them.

Ali Osseiran left Rmeileh today with his sister for "a rest" at the family's home in Bramieh, a Shiite village 22 miles south of Beirut, the family said.

In recent days, Syrian military officials had pressured Lebanon's Iranian-backed Shiite Moslem militants to free all three captives.

"The release of Osseiran and his driver, minus Glass, appears to be a compromise sought by the kidnappers to ease Syrian pressure. But it remains to be seen whether the Syrians will settle for it," the police spokesman said. He spoke on condition he not be identified.

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

Ten percent of the blood being collected in 1987 is not usable for transfusions, so blood collections must increase drastically to meet demands, according to the director of the Greenville American Red Cross blood center.

David Parsons told Bloodmobile sponsors at a breakfast meeting today that testing for AIDS and other blood diseases are finding that only 90 percent of the 13 million units of blood collected throughout the country each year is safe for use in blood transfusions.

Blood tainted with diseases such as AIDS is not safe to be used for transfusions.

AIDS can only be transmitted from one person to another through body fluids, according to Red Cross literature. A donor cannot contract AIDS by giving blood because he doesn't come into contact with any blood other than his own during the process, the literature states.

The Red Cross began AIDS antibody testing in March of 1985, in addition to testing for such diseases as hepatitis and syphilis in the blood, Parsons said.

There is a certain lag time of six to eight weeks before antibodies develop and the disease shows up in the blood. Nationally, there have been three cases of AIDS being transmitted through transfusions when the blood has tested negative for the disease, Parsons said.

A personal medical history is taken for each potential blood donor, Parsons said. The questions on the form are updated as information about AIDS or other diseases is being discovered. For instance, the current form asks the donor if he has ever taken self-injected drugs, been exposed to anyone with AIDS or been to Haiti, Zaire or neighboring African countries. Yes answers to these questions alert the Bloodmobile that the person potentially has been exposed to AIDS and blood will not be drawn from that person.

Parsons said that the medical records are private and confidential, so the donor has reason to be honest about his history. Records have been subpoenaed by the courts on several occasions, but the confidentiality always has been upheld and the records have not been turned over to the courts.

There are 53 hospitals in the Tidewater region of eastern North Carolina and southeastern Virginia which are dependant on the Red Cross program for blood, Parsons said. According to Red Cross literature, in order to serve the 2.5 million residents of the Tidewater region, some 465 units of blood must be collected daily.

Burlington Takeover Averted

GREENSBORO (AP) — A "white knight" investment group has rescued Burlington Industries from a hostile takeover attempt, with 78 percent of the textile giant's stock tendered to the group by midnight Tuesday, Burlington announced today.

A $78-a-share offer for Burlington stock, organized by Morgan Stanley Group Inc. of New York, expired at midnight with 24,981,188 shares of Burlington's common stock tendered, said Burlington Industries spokesman Bryant Haskins.

New York financier Asher Edelman and Dominion Textile Inc. of Montreal were barred by a federal court order from pursuing their $77-a-share offer, which also expired at midnight.

Morgan Stanley announced in New York that 78 percent of Burlington's approximately 30 million shares were tendered to BI-MS Holdlings Inc.

On stock exchanges across the country, Burlington stock closed at $76.50 a share Tuesday, down $1 a share from its closing price Monday of $77.50. Slightly more than 231,000 shares were traded.

"That sort of tells you the thing is over," Jim Compton, a stockbroker for Legg Mason in Greensboro, said Tuesday.

Edelman and Dominion began buying Burlington stock in February and stand to gain $100 million from the sale of the 3.6 million shares they own if they cash in on the $78 offer. They initially offered to buy the company for $60 a share and increased their offer by increments to $77 a share before they were stopped by the court order.

U.S. District Judge Eugene Gordon prohibited the partners from proceeding after finding that they may have used inside company information provided by a former Burlington executive to prepare their offer.

The takeover attempt drove up the price of Burlington stock, benefiting stockholders, Friedman said.

Churches May Hire Only Its Members

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Religious employers are free to hire only members of their own faith even for non-religious jobs, the Supreme Court ruled unanimously today.

The court said a 1972 anti-bias law exempting such employment discrimination is constitutional.

The decision reversed the ruling of a federal judge in Utah that religious employers may refuse to hire people outside their faith for "religious" activities only — and not for "secular" or non-religious jobs.

Today's decision was a victory for officials of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, whose employment policies had been invalidated by the judge's earlier ruling.

"A law is not unconstitutional simply because it allows churches to advance religion, which is their very purpose," Justice Byron R. White wrote for the court.

But the court's ruling left unanswered whether religious employers are free to hire only members of their faith for jobs in profit-making ventures.

The decision said U.S. District Judge David K. Winder was wrong when he ordered Mormon officials to reinstate Arthur Mayson, with back pay, as an engineer responsible for maintaining the Deseret Gymnasium, owned and operated as a non-profit business in Salt Lake City by the Mormon church.

Mayson is a Mormon but was fired for not becoming eligible for a "temple recommend," signifying observance of the church's religious standards.

Winder's ruling struck down a 1972 amendment to the Civil Rights Act of 1964.

The 1964 law generally bans discrimination in employment based on religion, but it made an exception to allow religious employers to restrict employment to "individuals of a particular religion to perform work connected with (their) religious activities."

Bright Belt Warehouse Owners Schedule Pre-Auction Convention

By DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer

Prospects for the 1987 flue-cured tobacco season will be the focus of the Bright Belt Warehouse Association's 43rd annual convention set to begin Thursday in Hilton Head, S.C.

The gathering of Southeastern tobacco auction operators runs through Saturday at the Mariner's Inn.

Norman Swain of Greenville, the association's president, said the theme for this year's conference is "Working Together: Our Foundation for Growth."

"We will hear speakers from different areas of the tobacco economy, including tobacco growers' organizations, leaf dealers' and exporters' groups, cigarette manufacturers, agricultural extension services and U.S. Department of Agriculture," said Swain, owner of Swain & Swain Inc.

"These experts will share their outlook for the 1987 season. Everyone gets together and figures out what's going on in the industry and determines the best thing to aim at."

The Bright Belt Warehouse Association, headquartered in Raleigh, is a trade organization consisting of approximately 200 auction marketers in the five-state "Bright Belt" or flue-cured leaf producing area of Florida, Georgia, North Carolina, South Carolina and Virginia.

Swain said he believes growing allotments are leveling off as auction operators head into the 1987 season.

"It seems to me, we've reached a plateau as far as allotments are concerned," he said. "I believe we have reached a plateau as far as volume being cut more in the future."

In 1976, the volume of flue-cured leaf raised from Florida to Virginia was 1.41 billion pounds, according to Swain, who said that total had dropped to a projected 734 million pounds in 1987.

Meanwhile, Swain said recent prices have buoyed hopes for a strong 1987 season.

"The flue-cured crop (last year) averaged $1.52 per 100 pounds, and that was above the support price of $1.44," he said. "That looks very encouraging."

The Friday session of the convention, featuring six speakers, will begin at 8:45 a.m. The speakers and their topics are:

•Dr. Larry Sykes, director of agricultural programs, Philip Morris USA, "Domestic Purchasing Potential," from 9 a.m. to 9:25 a.m.

•Dr. Glenn Chappell, university development officer, school of agriculture and life sciences, North Carolina State University, "Tobacco Foundation Research Programs," from 9:30 a.m. to 9:55 a.m.

•Dr. Ben Kittrell, extension agronomist (tobacco), Clemson University Cooperative Extension Ser-

Youth Is Killed

A Farmville youth was killed Tuesday night in a one-car accident near Fountain.

The youth was identified by the Highway Patrol as James Louis Cowan III, 16, of 112 Melissa Drive, Farmville.

According to the investigating officer, Trooper C.S. Raines, Cowan apparently lost control of a pickup truck on rural unpaved road 1232 2.8 miles southwest of Fountain. The accident occurred about 9 p.m.

No Charges Filed

The investigation of an alleged rape of an 18-year-old girl reported to Greenville police has been completed and no charges will be filed, Detective J.E. Harris said today.

"The claims have not been substantiated as a rape and no charges will be made," Harris, the investigating officer, said.

According to Harris, the alleged victim, who was attending a freshmen orientation at East Carolina University, told investigators she was raped by three men around midnight Sunday.

The girl had reported that the attack occurred after she attended a party, then entered an apartment near the intersection of Cotanche Street and Reade Circle, Harris said.

Larceny Arrest

Norman Barnhill, 33, of Medical Oak Apartments was arrested by Greenville police Tuesday on a larceny charge.

Officer E.E. Laughinghouse said Barnhill was charged in connection with the theft of a dog from 602 Hudson St. that was reported at 10:44 a.m.

Multiple Charges

A CrimeStoppers tip to Greenville police led to the arrest of James Alexander Spicer, 28, of Route 1, Chocowinity, on multiple uttering a forged instrument and obtaining property by false pretense charges, according to Sgt. Doug Jackson.

Jackson said police had been looking for Spicer for about two months.

A call to CrimeStoppers late Monday afternoon, Jackson said, led police to arrest Spicer in Martin County about 9:48 p.m. Monday.

Detectives W.A. Reid and C.E. Weatherington said Spicer was arrested on 12 counts of uttering a forged instrument and five counts of obtaining property by false pretenses.

Olympic Torch Run

Six rehabilitation patients and 34 hospital employees will carry the U.S. Olympic Festival '87 torch during a 5-mile run around Pitt County Memorial Hospital Thursday evening.

The run, one segment of the U.S. Olympic Festival torch run, will begin at the corner of 14th Street and Dickinson Avenue about 7 p.m. and will be completed about 8 p.m.

Runners will carry the torch up Stantonsburg Road to the hospital, will run twice around the hospital and twice around the rehabilitation center parking lot. The torch will be passed on to the next sponsor along Moye Boulevard. It will come from Kinston and will continue to Washington, N.C.

How They Voted

WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes in the week ending June 19.

House

LABOR ISSUE — By a vote of 227 for and 197 against, the House passed and sent to the Senate a bill (HR 281) promoted by organized labor to outlaw "double-breasting" by employers in the construction industry.

The term refers to the growing practice of employers circumventing collective bargaining agreements by setting up new operations to do similar work without union contracts.

Supporter William Clay, D-Mo., said that by undermining existing labor-management pacts "double-breasting ... distorts the bargaining process and denies workers a voice in the determination of their working conditions."

Opponent Marge Roukema, R-N.J., said, "Double-breasting simply represents a desire to compete in non-union marketplaces where union shops cannot compete."

Members voting yes agreed with organized labor that the bill should be passed.

North Carolina representatives voting yes were Walter Jones, D-1, and James Clarke, D-11.

Those voting no were Tim Valentine, D-2; Martin Lancaster, D-3; David Price, D-4; Stephen Neal, D-5; Howard Coble, R-6; Charles Rose, D-7; W.G. Hefner, D-8; Alex McMillan, R-9, and Cass Ballenger, R-10.

DRUG TESTING — The House adopted, 307 for and 103 against, an amendment requiring drug testing of State Department diplomats holding top security classifications. This was attached to legislation (HR 1777) budgeting $8.5 billion for the department in fiscal 1988-1989, a bill that remained in debate.

Sponsor Clay Shaw, R-Fla., said, "If we do not identify those within our diplomatic community who abuse narcotics, sooner or later our enemies will."

Opponent Steny Hoyer, D-Md., said, "We are not in the Soviet Union, we are in America, and it may be inconvenient sometimes to have Constitutional rights which prevent the state from doing certain things."

Members voting yes favored drug testing of diplomats with top security clearances.

North Carolina representatives voting yes were Jones, Valentine, Lancaster, Price, Neal, Coble, Rose, Hefner, McMillan, Ballenger and Clarke.

THE CONTRAS — By a vote of 103 for and 257 against, the House rejected an amendment to the State Deparment authoritzation bill (HR 1777, above) characterizing the American-backed contra rebels as legitimate insurgents waging civil war in their homeland against the Sandinista rulers of Nicaragua.

This would have expressed the sense of Congress that President Reagan recognize a "state of belligerency" in Nicaragua under international law. Any territory controlled by the contras would have international standing as a state.

Sponsor Robert Dornan, R-Calif., said the contras "are Nicaraguans dying on Nicaraguan soil" whereas the multi-national Marxist Sandinista forces "resemble the bar scene in 'Star Wars.'"

Opponent Barney Frank, D-Mass., said the message of the amendment is that "Ronald Reagan doesn't know how to conduct foreign policy ... in Nicaragua and therefore Congress has got to intervene."

Members voting yes wanted the president to declare a state of belligerency in Nicaragua.

North Carolina representatives voting yes were Coble, McMillan and Ballenger.

Those voting no were Jones, Valentine, Lancaster, Price, Neal, Rose, Hefner and Clarke.

Senate

FILIBUSTER — The Senate failed, 50 for and 47 against, the achieve the three-fifths majority needed to silence a Republican filibuster against campaign finance reform legislation drafted by Democrats.

Although this marked the Democratic leadership's fourth losing attempt in eight days to end the talkathon, Majority Leader Robert Burd, D-W.Va., vowed to keep the bill on the floor.

The measure (S 2) would make public campaign funding available in the general election to Congressional candidates who volunteered to abide by spending limits in primary and general election races.

Repudiating that approach, Republicans have countered with legislation to limit or outlaw political action committee (PAC) contributions to Congressional candidates.

Senators voting yes wanted to debate the Democrats' campaign finance reform bill.

North Carolina Sen. Terry Sanford, D, voted yes. Sen, Jesse Helms, R, voted no.

Alumni Parade

The Parade Committee of the Greenville Industrial-Eppes Alumni Association is planning "Reunion '87," the annual high school alumni parade.

Individuals, clubs, churches and organizations wanting to participate in the parade July 4 may call the Wooten School of Music at 757-1023.

The band will rehearse Saturday at 6 p.m. on the old Eppes High School football field. Rehearsals will be held daily at the same time until the day of the parade.

Church Anniversary

Progressive Free Will Baptist Church held its first anniversary recently with the Revs. Willie Joyner and Hue Walston as speakers during evening services.

A banquet was also held at the Sheraton with the Rev. David Hammond as the speaker, while the Rev. S.D. Clemons and Faith Tabernacle United Holiness Church were guests during closing ceremonies.

The church received a congratulatory letter from state Rep. Ed Warren of Greenville during its anniversary services, according to the Rev. T.L. Davis, pastor.

King Louis XI of France died in 1483.

Court Upholds Kidnapping Conviction

RICHMOND (AP) — A federal appeals court today upheld the sex-related kidnapping conviction and 180-year sentence of James M. DeBardeleben, the so-called "mall passer" of counterfeit money.

A three-judge panel of the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals rejected claims by DeBardeleben of vindictive prosecution, improper evidence and excessive punishment, among others.

DeBardeleben was arrested in May 1983 in Tennessee during a federal probe into counterfeit bills being passed at shopping malls. He subsequently was prosecuted in that state and in North Carolina on counterfeiting charges and received sentences totaling 135 years.

During a Secret Service search for the suspect's counterfeit currency printing press, agents discovered evidence in two northern Virginia storage lockers of crimes against women. Specifically, the agents found photographs of sex acts and tape recordings of such acts that, at least in part, sounded like sexual abuse.

The agents later identified a woman in some of the photographs as the voice on one of the tapes. DeBardeleben's voice also was identified, and his kidnapping prosecution was based in part on the recording and on photographs of the woman being sexually abused.

DeBardeleben — who had a criminal history involving charges of a sexual offense, assault and attempted murder in addition to a counterfeiting conviction in 1976 — represented himself after firing three lawyers.

He contended the evidence found in the storage lockers should not be admitted because the search warrants were for counterfeiting evidence only.

But U.S. District Judge Walter E. Black Jr. of Baltimore allowed the evidence, and the appeals panel upheld Black under the "plain view" exception to warrant searches.

"While it may be true that some of the items seized are legal to possess, the possession of such items by a convicted felon with a criminal background such as defendant's gives these items added significance," the panel said. "The agents were not required to ignore this evidence merely because it was not specifically listed in the warrant."

The panel also rejected DeBardeleben's claim that the tapes should not have been listened to by the agents without a second warrant authorizing their playing.

The panel dismissed the vindictive prosecution claim as without merit and upheld Black's decision to impose the 180-year sentence consecutive to the 135 years imposed in the counterfeiting cases.

The federal kidnapping statute allows a sentence of any term of years or life imprisonment. Black said in sentencing DeBardeleben that it was his intent to ensure the defendant serve a minimum sentence of 59 years before consideration for parole.

"Release of this defendant, at any time, will threaten every woman in this country," the judge said.

The appeals court said that, considering DeBardeleben's background and lack of remorse, the sentence was proper.

RJR Opposes S. African Pullout

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — RJR Nabisco Inc., the second largest U.S. employer in South Africa, remains opposed to pulling out of the strife-torn country despite increasing pressure from apartheid foes, officials say.

"We ... still believe our presence is more beneficial for the non-white population than our withdrawal would be," Jan Cousart, an RJR Nabisco spokeswoman, said in an interview.

With 2,479 employees in South Africa, second only to Mobil Corp.'s 3,013, divestment by RJR Nabisco could play a pivotal role in the campaign to withdraw American involvement and deal a blow to white minority government rule, apartheid opponents say.

Last week, Ford Motor Co., ITT Corp. and Citibank, the only U.S. bank remaining in South Africa, announced they would divest their holdings.

"I think it will further shake confidence in South Africa," said Rosalyn Will of the Council on Economic Priorities, a New York-based group that supports South African divestment.

Welcome Memorial

It really came as no surprise to read a U.S. House subcommittee could only "estimate" between 250 and 300 media correspondents and photographers died in World War II and other armed conflicts including Korea, Southeast Asia, Afghanistan and Central America. It is not a figure at everyone's fingertips.

Somewhere, somebody presumably has an accurate count but we've never even given that statistic the weight it properly carries in terms of national losses in combat. Anyway, the proposal has been made to erect a memorial to honor news people killed in battle.

The role of a war correspondent on the line was immeasurably different from the life — often played for laughs — portrayed on the silver or electronic screens. As an Ohio congresswoman said, they are the forgotten soldiers who took the tough assignments and had to report good news and bad. Hal Boyle knew the scene; so did Ernie Pyle.

A proposed memorial has been endorsed by the American Newspaper Publishers Association, the American Society of Newspaper Editors, the Overseas Press Club of America and General Paul X. Kelley, commandant of the Marines...(welcome aboard, general).

War correspondents didn't write about themselves. The ordeals and heroics, patience and impatience of others were grist for their mills.

Others saw a photographer drag wounded Americans to safety, and how a newsman tended a wounded allied officer while under mortar fire. Stories like that linger in the background, and are infrequently told.

Private funds would build and maintain the memorial which would be erected on federal land in the Washington area under jurisdiction of the National Park Service.

Such a reminder of co-workers who never returned to their desks would be welcomed among those who saw them off and could not welcome them home. Too, it would be a reminder within the ranks that unsung heroism exists. It would be a good addition to our memorials as well as recognition of a treasured tradition.

Only Terror

A computer assisted study tells us that mass starvation and a devastated economy would be the results if the United States came under a nuclear attack which included one percent of the Soviet missiles.

The study indicates that if only U.S. refineries and ports were hit there would be massive deaths from starvation, loss of transportation, energy production and productivity of major industries.

The study's main author, Kosta Tsipis, of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology said, "There would be no more fuel for transportation, and if there's no transportation, there would be no food in the cities. Cities could neither receive nor ship out."

He noted that industry cannot operate without transportation. People would go to the country for food and there would be no labor for industry. The results could be economic paralysis and mass starvation within two years.

Survivors would face near medieval levels of existence for decades.

The Soviet Union would be in even worse shape since its industries are located in more urban areas and are more concentrated.

The study was adopted from an original program designed for the Federal Emergency Management Agency. It was scrapped because it was criticized as being unrealistic.

Of course even a computer can't tell us exactly what the results of a nuclear holocaust would be. Things might not be as severe as this study shows — or they might be worse. If the atmosphere were poisoned there would be no life left on earth. And if it weren't that severe, the nature of life might suddenly be altered forever.

Our mission should be to see that it doesn't occur. There can be nothing but terror in a nuclear war. There is no alternative except to avoid it.

Today's Thought

It appears that the Reagan administration will have its way in protecting Kuwaiti oil tankers, which will fly American flags, in the Persian Gulf. Now the tanker crew members must be wondering if this qualifies them for Social Security and Medicare.

It's OK Not To Pay Taxes

RALEIGH — The word has come straight from the top. If you don't want to pay your property taxes this year, that's okay. If you don't pay the taxes for five or six years running, that's okay, too. Lots of people are skipping out on taxes, so why should you be the fool who pays?

That's Gov. Jim Martin's attitude about Republican party chairman Jack Hawke's failure to pay Wake County property taxes for six years.

For the record, Martin came before reporters last week and said, "Certainly we want to encourage everyone to be prompt in the payment of their taxes." He said political leaders, like Hawke and himself, "have a responsibility to set good examples" by paying their taxes on time.

But Martin's other comments on the matter, and his failure to act, showed his lack of concern that Hawke, his handpicked candidate for GOP chairman, had run up a $4,400 tax bill to the county. Martin agreed with his political director Alan Pugh, who said the press "is making a mightly big mountain out of a mighty small molehill."

Asked to comment on the matter, Martin did not express indignation or anger that one of the state's political leaders had shown repeated indifference to his tax responsibilities. Martin simply said that a lot of people don't pay their taxes, and he noted that Hawke eventually paid up.

Martin was asked at the press conference if he was concerned that this would hurt the GOP's image in the state. He said he wasn't. "I would be very pleased if everybody in our administration was perfect in every way and never made any mistakes."

But a reporter noted that Hawke had not simply made one mistake but had repeatedly failed to pay his taxes, over six years, despite repeated notices from the county. Martin continued to call the tax avoidance "a mistake." Then he said that he understood Hawke had some lean income years during that time "and I don't know if he had the money to pay" his taxes.

In 1985, Hawke, who was Martin's gubernatorial campaign manager, and his wife were both hired by the state and their salaries totaled about $100,000.

Then Martin was asked if he was aware of the state's ongoing problem with the collection of personal property taxes. (Some counties — including Wake — are losing millions of dollars a year.) He said yes. Asked if he'd characterize the problem of the lost property taxes as a "mighty small molehill," Martin said no. But he argued that Hawke's failure to pay taxes is only a small part of the total problem.

So what is Martin going to do about this? He said he thought Hawke's resignation wasn't necessary.

Maybe the governor had taken Hawke aside and told him to straighten up if he wanted to continue running a major political party? Nope, Martin said he hadn't talked with Hawke about the matter. Maybe he would talk to Hawke about paying his taxes on time? Nope, Martin said he didn't think he would, and even if he did, it would be a private conversation.

Martin came to office on a promise of integrity. He campaigned against the previous administration's alleged abuse of office for political purposes. But when Martin's lawyer was caught campaigning for the GOP's chief justice candidate out of the governor's office, he did nothing. Now that his party chairman has shown contempt for the tax laws, he does nothing.

Martin may talk a good line about bringing integrity to government, but he's shown an unwillingness to act decisively when his political hacks practice the same old abuses he so vehemently criticizes in others.

A Reagan Counterattack On Opponents?

WASHINGTON — Prodded by national security adviser Frank Carlucci and congressional allies, President Reagan is considering this dramatic riposte to critics of his Persian Gulf policy: The War Powers Act is unconstitutional and cannot be used to limit presidential initiatives there or elsewhere.

In a mood reminiscent of Reagan's famous "make my day" crack at would-be tax hikes, the White House and its Senate allies seem to be spoiling for a political battle over the 1973 act. They are backed by legal specialists in the State Department and some esteemed Democrats, including Eugene V. Debs Rostow, now a Pentagon consultant.

This White House mood, hinting at a possible out-of-the-trenches offensive, could mean modest political resurgence in this twilight period. It is reinforced by unexpected success in the Senate, where GOP leaders succeeded in blocking a vote on the defense authorization bill, which would shred Reagan's freedom of action. The strategy of Senate Republican leader Robert Dole is to protect presidential power over the ABM treaty and nuclear weapons testing.

Up to now, the White House has simply refused to agree that the War Powers Act applies to the Persian Gulf crisis. The law's requirement for consultation with Congress over re-flagging Kuwaiti tankers has been gently bypassed. Consultation there has been, but not under conditions set by the act.

To correct this, Senate Foreign Relations Committee Chairman Claiborne Pell is pushing a resolution that requires Reagan to admit the relevance of the War Powers act and to comply fully with all its terms in the Persian Gulf initiative.

State Department legal adviser Abraham Sofaer has quietly counselled Secretary of State George Shultz to let Majority Leader Robert Byrd bring Pell's resolution to the floor for a vote in a constitutionality test. Even if it passed (which is highly doubtful), the president's veto could not conceivably be overridden. Rostow, under secretary of state in the Johnson administration and former dean of the Yale Law School, and Sofaer say privately the Senate would have trouble finding a court to take the case.

The president's men are trying to get out of the trenches and, making a virtue of Reagan's foreign policy trouble with the Democratic-controlled Congress, go on the attack. It would aim at transforming a policy of fear over getting trounced by Congress on Persian Gulf policy into a policy of confidence that the Constitution is Reagan's solid ally in giving him the policy-making power. Rank-and-file voters would be with the president.

Dole's success on the defense bill is mortar for this strategy. The quite unexpected defeat of Democratic efforts to bring up the bill was conceded over the weekend when Senate Armed Services Chairman Sam Nunn privately notified Sen. John Warner, the committee's ranking Republican, that the filibuster had worked.

Giving up his fight to invoke cloture, Nunn told Warner he was planning to head down a highly-unusual road. Democratic staffers of Nunn's Armed Services Committeee would begin to write a final Pentagon spending bill in negotiations with staffers of the Senate Appropriations Committee, completely bypassing the customary authorization bill. Republican staffers would not be invited to help.

That signalled at least temporary victory in the Dole-Warner fight to preserve independent action by President Reagan on the weapons front. The Nunn authorization bill would have forced the president to abide by the "narrow definition" of the Anti-Ballistic Missile (ABM) treaty and to drastically reduce the intensity of nuclear weapons tests.

In the House version, even harsher restrictions are placed on the president. Nuclear limits written into the abandoned, unratified SALT II treaty are imposed. Still less acceptable is a provision limiting the new Midgetman strategic missile to congressionally-tailored measurements. Limits on length, weight, circumference and diameter are specifically imposed on the Pentagon in what specialists call an unprecedented congressional intrusion into the president's powers as commander in chief of the armed forces.

The beginning of the end of the debilitating Iran-contra hearings would seem to be the right time for the Reagan presidency to take the offensive, even on a modest level. The paramount issue is presidential prerogative -- so often the sustaining lifeblood of the republic.

Public Forum

To the editor:

A letter writer throbs with hope about happenings in the USSR. If he is right, perhaps the Red Empire will turn away from 70 years of aggressive expansion and attempts to conquer the world. In optimism, he cites what he believes are examples of the Kremlin's new mildness: It accepts China's border claims — not by a long shot; it frees political prisoners — only a handful; and it permits private enterprises — as the only efficient parts of the economy, they have long been tolerated, and in the 1920s flourished far more than they will under the latest decrees. And the genocide in Afghanistan goes on.

The present dictator, Gorbachev, is driven to change by necessity, not by a desire for an open society. If he wants to crush his rivals for power, he must do what his predecessors did in clawing their way to the top. In addition, he has been forced into desperate moves as he tries to save the collapsing socialist economy. But his reforms have been so far only cosmetic patches on the old Communist system.

The letter writer can be sure of his hope only when Moscow has made — not merely proclaimed — basic changes, such as ending the monopoly of power by the Communist Party, dropping the official ideology of Marxism-Leninism, and agreeing to the rule of law. A crucial step, and a tip-off about the future, would be the granting of religious freedom.

A beast seldom turns into a beauty, so let the free societies be alert while they are being hopeful.

Strength For Today

One of the most devastating things about sin is that it blinds one to the best things of life. The Bible often uses the figure of blindness to describe the ravages of sin. For example, the Philistines, after they had captured Samson, put out his eyes. Thus blindness was his fate when his sins, in the form of his victorious enemies, overtook him. Saul on the road to Damascus was struck blind by a vision of the Lord, probably in order that God might show him that up to that time in his life bigotry and intellectual pride had made him blind to the truth.

The preacher Phillips Brooks once said, "All true, healthy, inspiring faith grows dim to the soul, dimmer and dimmer as it gives itself up to sin."

The evil of sin consists not only of the wrong things it makes us do, but of the great blessings it shuts out of our lives.

AIDS Bill Postponed In Senate

RALEIGH (AP) — A proposal to mandate AIDS education in public schools faltered in a Senate committee when some members accused sponsors of trying to load the bill with political rhetoric.

Rep. F.J. "Frank" Sizemore, R-Guilford, backed a version that would have teachers admonish youngsters not to engage in sex outside marriage. He and other supporters said that was the most effective way to combat acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

But Sen. Dennis Winner, D-Buncombe, argued against telling teachers how to do their job.

"I think the purpose of this bill is to give Representative Sizemore and others a platform in which they can stir up the obvious fears and emotions of the public and particularly to appeal to the New Right," Winner said.

After nearly an hour of debate and parliamentary wrangling, the Senate Education Committee voted 14-3 to delay action until the Legislature's staff determines the cost of implementing the bill.

Most panel members showed no inclination, however, to change the position they took last week in approving a version stripped of House-approved provisions that lessions be framed in a moral context and include warnings against illicit sex.

The bill was scheduled for debate Monday night. But when Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir, signaled his intention to offer an amendment to restore the bill's original content, Sen. Bob Warren, D-Johnston, moved successfully to return the bill to the Education Committee.

Warren told his committee he hoped it could work out a compromise that would avert a floor fight. But Winner said he was satisfied that the panel took the correct action last week.

Winner said the Legislature has traditionally refrained from mandating specific curricula for public schools.

"We have never told the State Board of Education how to teach courses," he said. "We've told them some courses they have to teach ... but to my knowledge we have never told them how to do it."

But Sen. Dan Simpson, R-Burke, said AIDS was a special case.

"I think it's incumbent on us not to abdicate our position of setting the policy of this state to any appointed board," he said. "I think we need to take the bull by the horns and decide some policy guidelines for the State Board of Education."

Winner asked Sen. Jim McDuffie, R-Mecklenburg, a supporter of the House version, whether he believed teachers could dissuade youngsters from sexual activity if their parents and churches couldn't.

"If 60 percent of the non-Caucasian babies are born out of wedlock, then we ought to instill something somewhere in society that says that's not proper," McDuffie replied.

Topless Bill Is Criticized

RALEIGH (AP) — A bill to ban 16- and 17-year-old girls from working topless has drawn criticism as a possible bar to artistic performances and an exercise in hypocrisy.

Sen. Jim Johnson, R-Cabarrus, said Tuesday the ban sought by Rep. Bruce Ethridge, D-Onslow, could keep "the good old rednecks that go in Joe's Bar" from seeing topless dancers while people in "exclusive clubs" would be able to see the same thing.

"And then while those people are sitting there, drinking their drinks, whatever it might be, those same kids and everybody in North Carolina are going to sit home and watch television where everybody strips ...," he said.

Ethridge said he introduced the bill after learning some minors in his area were working topless in bars and that there was no law against it.

"You put them in a position where they could be encouraged to go into prostitution, they could be encouraged to use drugs, alcohol," he told the Senate Judiciary I Committee.

But Johnson and Sen. Mary Seymour, D-Guilford, said the bill could apply to young dancers wearing semi-transparent costumes in shows put on by such well-regarded groups as the American Dance Festival.

U.S. Court Will Hear Rainbow Challenge

SYLVA, N.C. (AP) — It was supposed to be a peaceful week in the woods, but controversy over the Rainbow Family's July gathering in the Nantahala National Forest has become a battle of wills.

Superior Court Judge Robert Kirby, set to hear the state's request for an injunction limiting the event to 5,000 people, instead sent the issue to federal court Tuesday.

Kirby acted at the Rainbow Family's request, ending a day marked by accusations of lack of cooperation and bad faith.

"The gathering is in effect and will remain so," Rainbow spokesman Garrick Beck of New York said after the hearing.

At issue is the insistence of state health officials that the Rainbow Family — an eclectic collection of what looks like '60s flower children — abide by a mass-gathering law for events drawing more than 5,000 people.

But the Rainbows, who called their annual outing "a participatory workshop in self-government," say they have no leaders to sign the permit. Up to 10,000 people are expected at the event July 1-7 in Graham County.

Group members think the law, which requires a bond and insurance, may be unconstitutional because it requires they pay money to exercise their right to free assembly, said attorney Michael Moore of Asheville. They think the federal courts are best-equipped to decide such questions, he said.

"We've come to the conclusion that adequate protection for the public cannot be assured at this site," said Dr. Ronald Levine, who heads the North Carolina Division of Health Services.

"Attendance at this function as it is now proposed poses a significant risk of personal health and safety," Levine said.

He said water sources at the gathering site, where about 1,000 people have already arrived, are "purely full of bacteria." The state worries that a large crowd may contaminate a nearby watershed.

But Moore said state officials walked away when the two sides were close to a compromise.

Assistant Attorney General Robert Cansler said state officials ended negotiations after learning — again — that no Rainbow Family member would sign any agreement.

Beck said the group members still want to negotiate "agreements regulating the health and safety of the public."

The Rainbow Family, waiting for the court hearing to begin, captured all attention Tuesday at the green-domed Jackson County Courthouse in Sylva.

Compromise Set In School Merger

RALEIGH (AP) — To the immense relief of most state legislators, Nash and Edgecombe counties have compromised on a mechanism for resolving on the local level a 15-year dispute over public school merger.

"In my short career down here, this is one of the hottest issues I've stepped on," freshman Sen. Sandy Sands, D-Rockingham, said Tuesday after the Senate Local Government II Committee endorsed the compromise.

The compromise would allow voters in the two counties to choose between two merger plans if the local education boards and county commissioners fail to reach a consensus by July 1, 1988.

Six legislators announced their agreement at a mid-morning news conference. A Senate floor vote was expected today.

"Nine weeks ago, no one in Nash or Edgecombe County would have believed that we could be where we are today," Rep. Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, told reporters.

"I don't think anybody ... is really happy with the situation because it's not assured that anyone gets his plan," Rep. Roy Cooper, D-Nash, said. "What it does is let the people decide."

The dispute has gone unresolved for so long, lawmakers said, because state law requires that all the county boards of commissioners agree on a merger plan before it can take effect.

Nash County has been at odds with less populous Edgecombe County over the best way to merge the Nash, Edgecombe, Rocky Mount and Tarboro systems. The problem stems from the fact that Rocky Mount straddles the border between the two counties.

As passed by the House, the bill would allow a merger to take effect if approved by at least three of the four schools boards and two of the three governmental units that levy taxes for schools — meaning the Nash and Edgecombe county boards plus the Rocky Mount city council.

Under the compromise, if all the involved boards agree on a merger plan before July 1, 1988, that plan will be put before the two counties' voters in a November 1988 referendum for an up-or-down vote.

But if unanimity is not achieved, the county or town that dissents will be allowed to have its plan put on the ballot. In that case, voters would choose between the two plans.

Textbook Panel Says Religion Should Be Included In History

RALEIGH (AP) — To omit the role of religion in U.S. history is to rewrite rather than record history, say some members of a state textbook commission who want the board to reject books that don't discuss the issue.

"If we are writing history, or rewriting it, we are doing what totalitarian states do, and that bothers me," said John Langley, principal of Rockingham Junior High and a member of the North Carolina Textbook Commission.

The 14-member panel met in Raleigh Tuesday to embark on a five-month job of selecting history, social studies, visual arts, music and business and marketing schoolbooks to recommend to the state education board for adoption. Local school systems must spend their state allocations for textbooks on books adopted by the board.

The commissioners may move today to list religion among the criteria they will use when they select social studies books this year.

Commissioner Jane Knox, a third-grade teacher at St. Timothy's School in Raleigh, said she had warned publishing company salesmen that she would not select social studies and history books that ignored religion.

"We have got to be willing to say no if it is not in there," Mrs. Knox said.

Mrs. Knox said schoolbooks were remiss when they failed to say that the Pilgrims who came to America were on a quest for religious freedom. Commission member Brenda Sigmon of Catawba County Newton criticized textbooks that described Martin Luther King Jr. without saying that the civil rights leader had been was a minister.

Langley expressed concern that the state's "textbook call," the list of specifications sent to publishers who might want to sell books in North Carolina, does not mention religion. It says social studies books should include information about the political, economic and social behavior of people."

Langley and several other commissioners said they wanted to make it clear in a meeting with social studies administrators at the N.C. Department of Public Instruction today that religion is considered part of that social behavior.

The commissioners' statements were praised by a spokesman for a group that has been critical of the way religion and other controversial topics are treated in schoolbooks.

"It shows an interest on the part of the people who choose our textbooks to hold publishers responsible for what publishers put in textbooks," said James Scarborough Jr. of Raleigh, acting executive director of the North Carolina chapter of People for the American Way, an organization established to counter the political activities of right-wing leaders.

People for the American Way sponsored a review of 31 U.S. history textbooks by a panel of scholars, which concluded that "Religion is simply not treated as a significant element in American life."

Warren Nord, director of the Program in the Humanities and Human Values at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, reached the same conclusion more recently after reviewing nine high school history books used in North Carolina.

More space is given to cowboys and cattle drives than to all religion after 1800, Nord told the News & Observer of Raleigh.

Barbara Tapscott, vice chairman of the North Carolina Board of Education and assistant superintendent for instruction for Burlington City Schools, said she agreed that religion should not be left out of the state's history books and hoped publishers got get that message from the state's textbook call.

"I cannot imagine an educator who would not believe that religion was a social influence for the development of this country," Mrs. Tapscott said in a telephone interview.

Hawke To Keep Post

RALEIGH (AP) — State Republican Party Chairman Jack Hawke, saying he doesn't think politics should be a game of the rich, does not plan to resign because of publicity over his failure to pay some taxes on time.

"During a period of my life, I had some difficult financial times. I never tried to hide it, but neither has it been a real honor either," Hawke said at a news conference Tuesday. "I do not believe that politics should be a game for the wealthy and the rich."

Hawke did not list or pay on time his Wake County personal property taxes from 1979 through 1985. He also didn't list and pay taxes on vehicles and an office building he owned. In August 1985, Hawke paid Wake County $4,417.71 in back taxes, The Raleigh Times reported last week.

Hawke said his problems began when he bought a bankrupt florist out of bankruptcy.

"I did it at a time when I thought, I guess, I had something to prove to myself and to others," he said. Hawke said he later bought a second business and took out a large note to do it.

"I was juggling and I was struggling" to pay bills, he said.

But Hawke said he had conducted his own investigation recently and found "not one creditor, not one wholesaler, not one supplier that my company had that was not 100 percent of what was owed to them."

Hawke said he could have declared bankruptcy or could have made arrangements with creditors to pay them 50 cents on the dollar but chose not to. Instead, he paid some bills, including taxes, late.

"There are times when you do that every best you can do," he said.

He also said that as far as he knows, he owes no more in back taxes. In fact, he said, he has received refunds from two different tax offices, including Wake County, for overpayment of taxes.

Hawke said the only calls for him to resign have come from Republicans who never supported him for GOP chairman. He said he was "very impressed" with the reaction of Democratic leaders, who said the two parties should concentrate on the issues.

But he said that as long as stories about his taxes surface every day, "my ability as a spokesman may be limited."

The whole episode, he said, has been "one of the most personally embarrassing things I've ever been involved in in my career."

Payment

SHELBY, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina filmmaker Earl Owensby has made the final payment of $1.9 million to Duke Power Co. for the former Cherokee Nuclear Power plant construction site in South Carolina, a spokesman for the utility company said.

The utility had filed a foreclosure notice on the property, which Owensby had purchased in 1985. Duke stopped building the plant in mid-construction in 1983 after investing $630 million.

Owensby has announced a news conference for 10 a.m. Thursday at the Cherokee site. He is expected to discuss future plans for the site, including a proposed project for use of the former reactor building as a regional waste-processing center.

Challenge

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — The constitutionality of a new Cumberland County ordinance regulating coin-operated X-rated movie arcades is being challenged in a lawsuit filed by two Fayetteville businesses.

Fountainhead News and Executive News filed the suit, naming as defendants Cumberland County, the county commissioners and Sheriff Ottis Jones. The lawsuit asks that the ordinance be declared unconstitutional and that the court issue a permanent injunction barring its enforcement.

The ordinance, which took effect last month, prohibits managers of the arcades from permitting any unlawful conduct, sets guidelines for obtaining operating permits and requires that all viewing areas be visible and not enclosed by a wall or curtain.

Inmate Suit

GRAHAM, N.C. (AP) — Prison inmate Timothy Boyd Milton has sued two local prison officials for $5.1 million, claiming he was paid late, his supper was delivered late and that he was shuffled around from jail to jail earlier this month.

"I was wondering if he wanted cash or a check," said Capt. Larry Tingen of the prison unit in Graham. "I tell you, I've had some doozies."

Milton was convicted in March on several charges in Guilford County, including three counts of assault on a law enforcement officer and driving while impaired. He was sentenced to a total of three years in prison.

Between June 7 and June 9, Milton alleges that he was shuffled around to different jails in handcuffs and shackles, deprived of his money which was being held in an inmate trust fund, and denied supper until 9:30 p.m. one night.

Road Closed

ELKIN, N.C. (AP) — Authorities sealed off about a mile-long stretch of Interstate 77 near Elkin after battery waste products in a 55-gallon barrel exploded aboard a tractor-trailer. No one was injured in the Monday accident.

Surry County Fire Marshal D. Kevin Dull said the tractor-trailer owned by Duracell USA was traveling north on Interstate 77 carrying a load of waste products when the driver heard an explosion.

Dull said the driver pulled to the side of the road and found a 55-gallon drum smouldering. He said there were no open flames.

Candidate

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Charlotte Mayor Harvey Gantt said he will seek a third term.

"Frankly, I like where Charlotte is going," Gantt said in announcing his bid for re-election. "It's beginning to set an example which numerous other cities are trying to emulate."

So far, no other Democrats have announced a primary bid against Gantt and no Republicans have announced.

Horseback

BURLINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Police say Arnold Gordon Baldwin Jr. was not actually driving when he was arrested for driving while impaired — it was more like the horse just knew the way home.

Baldwin, 26, and his horse were pulled to the curb as they ambled through Burlington. Police said Baldwin registered a .18 on the Breathalyzer and was released on $300 unsecured bond.

As far as the law is concerned, a horse is considered a vehicle, said Lt. William H. Fox of Burlington police.

Sentenced

YANCEYVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A Roxboro man has been sentenced to six years in prison for a Valentine's Day automobile accident that left one woman dead.

John Junior Lawson, 22, agreed to a plea bargain of guilty to involuntary manslaughter, simple possession of marijuana and driving while impaired.

The charges resulted from a Feb. 14 accident on US 158 east of Yanceyville that killed 34-year-old Victoria Hamlett Bradshaw of Route 5, Mebane.

Arrested

MARSHALL, N.C. (AP) — Madison County's tax collector has been arrested on charges he favored some delinquent taxpayers over others, court records show.

Harold Wallin was arrested Tuesday after a two-month state investigation begun at the request of the current Madison County Board of Commissioners.

Wallin was charged with two counts of willful failure to discharge his duties. District Attorney Tom Rusher said Wallin failed to collect interest on late-tax penalties owed by some people. Wallin did not collect them from people "he favored," Rusher said.

Wallin was released on his promise to appear in court.

Bill To Relax Limit On Liquor Rejected

RALEIGH (AP) — A bill that would let people transport any amount of liquor was defeated by the state House despite arguments that the measure would not affect the amount of booze people drink.

"It won't change one thousandth of a percent of the fatalities that happen on the highways," Rep. Alex Hall, D-New Hanover, argued Tuesday. "It's not going to make any difference at all."

But the House voted down the measure 49-61. Rep. Coy Privette, R-Cabarrus, led foes of the bill, saying it could worsen the drunken driving problem despite affecting only three counties and five cities.

Privette said the measure would further erode a safeguard established when the ABC system was created in 1937 and people were allowed to transport only one gallon of liquor.

That was changed to five gallons in 1969 and 10 gallons in 1979, he said.

Under current law, he said, transporting more than 80 liters of beer is evidence that one is a bootlegger. "Yet we're going to say to an individual you can transport a whole truckload of liquor," Privette said. "You're talking about a real inconsistency and sending a wrong message to our people."

He said drunken driving arrests had risen 17 percent in the state since 1983 and highway fatalities last year exceeded the total from 1983, when the Safe Roads Act was enacted.

The bill would apply only to Cumberland, Wake and Mecklenburg counties plus the cities of Greensboro, Durham, High Point, Winston-Salem and Jamestown. The House approved amendments to remove Lexington and Rowan County from the bill.

Rep. David Redwine, D-Brunswick, chairman of the House ABC Committee, said the bill would require that people transporting large amounts of liquor would have to acquire permits for the transportation and the event.

He said there was no limit on the amount of liquor one could have at an event and that defeating the bill wouldn't change that.

"They can get the 300 gallons or the truckload or whatever they want now," Redwine said. "The only difference is they've got to send 10 people or 20 people or (the same person) 10 different times to get the same amount."

Privette said a news article about the Raleigh Chamber of Commerce's request for the bill suggested that chamber officials wanted to make it easier to transport large amounts of alcohol for receptions for legislators.

CHIPPING AWAY — Boone sculptor Wayne Trapp works on an outdoor sculpture that will weigh 10 tons when it is completed. Trapp, who is doing the work for a company locating in Charlotte, is using marble shipped from Italy. (AP Laserphoto)

American Baptist Leader Has Little Sympathy For Television Evangelists

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Television evangelists have cost local churches members and money, a trend that may be reversed by the fight over the PTL ministry, says the president of the American Baptist Association.

"I hope those who have been supporting these television ministries will have the moral fiber to start supporting their home churches instead of these shysters," said Dr. Harry Brooks, president of the 250,000-member group.

Brooks, who opened a three-day convention of the American Baptist Association on Tuesday, said television evangelists "have been stealing people blind" and diverted the attention of good ministers like the Rev. Jerry Falwell.

"I lost my confidence in him when he got involved," said Brooks, who is president of the Texas Baptist Institute in Henderson, Texas.

"The whole thing is totally outside the realm of God's teaching. It's aimed at picking the pockets of people who either don't or can't go to church," Brooks said.

PTL, which stands for Praise The Lord or People That Love, includes television studios and a theme park in South Carolina.

Jim and Tammy Bakker are waging a battle to regain the ministry they surrendered after Jim Bakker admitted to a sexual liaison with a church secretary. Falwell, noting the lavish lifestyle the Bakkers led, is trying to block that effort.

Brooks said the Rev. Jerry Falwell should walk away from the PTL Ministry founded by Jim and Tammy Bakker.

Brooks said the American Baptist Association differs from other religious groups, including the 14.6-million member Southern Baptist Convention, in that it exerts little control over the beliefs or business of its member churches.

It provides funds for missionary work, but it is up to the individual churches to select the missionaries and the countries where they work, he said.

"There's a certain blessing to be small," Brooks said. "I believe I speak for most of my brethren when I say none of us have much sympathy for these television ministers.

"The work of God should be done by the local churches. If preachers are going to be on television, then it ought to be through the auspices of a local church, not a conglomerate like PTL," Brooks said.

In contrast to the Southern Baptist Convention, the largest association of Baptists in the country, the American Baptist Association's convention will have no battled over how to interpret the Bible.

"They've got liberals versus conservatives. We don't have that problem," he said. "The biggest challenge facing us this week is hiring someone to run our publishing business in Texarkana."

Brooks said keeping the American Baptists Association decentralized has helped keep the member churches focused on helping their congregations.

"Personally, I don't recognize the work of television ministries as God's work. They don't teach salvation the way I believe the Bible teaches it. That is, grace through faith, not through works."

Brooks also criticized the excessive concern some evangelists give miracles.

"I'd like to challenge some of these people who talk about miracles to get five loaves (of bread) and two fish and walk across the Atlantic to feed the people of Africa," Brooks said.

Bakkers May Head For The Mountains

TEGA CAY, S.C. (AP) — Jim and Tammy Bakker may leave the PTL-owned parsonage today for a trip to the mountains, but a Bakker attorney says the former PTL leaders will go ahead with their plan to take legal action involving the ministry.

The Bakkers sent word through attorney James Toms on Tuesday that they will move from the $1.3 million parsonage to show that they will put the ministry's health above material gain.

The attorney told reporters outside the home the Bakkers will "leave soon for the mountains," possibly today, to rest before returning to the Tega Cay house and packing their belongings. After that, they will stay at a home in Gatlinburg, Tenn., he said. Toms gave no other details about the Bakkers' plans to move.

When asked whether the Bakkers' move means they are giving up their plan to take legal action involving PTL, Toms said, "on the contrary."

Toms said lawyers have advised the Bakkers that they own the house and they have everything but the title to back their claim, and said it will be up to the courts to decide ownership.

Toms also said the Bakkers hope "trusted friends" will help them work out details of the ministry's leadership with the Rev. Jerry Falwell, PTL's new chairman.

"It is very important that they (the Bakkers) show that they do not want trouble. They do not want a fight. They do not want bitterness and divisiveness and they do not want it said that they are trying to hold a valuable property," Toms said.

"Rather, they are conberned with the preservation of a ministry and the advancement of the Christian gospel," Toms said.

The attorney said the Bakkers want a say in the future of PTL, but that they drop the idea of returning to the ministry themselves.

Sculptor Uses Italian Marble To Create Work For Charlotte

By JENNY SCHRUM
The Watauga Democrat

BOONE, N.C. (AP) — A little bit of Italy is coming to North Carolina, thanks to a sculptor from Boone.

Wayne Trapp was asked to created an outdoor sculpture to complement the newly constructed Apple Computer building in Charlotte.

The marble Trapp chose to use in the sculpture came from a quarry in Italy, near the quarry from which Michelangelo obtained the stone for such masterpieces as "David" and "Pieta."

Since the marble was delivered to Trapp's studio near Boone four months ago, Trapp has been chipping, sawing, sanding and sweating over the two pieces of marble with a combined weight of 10 tons.

By the time the sculpture is completed, it will stand 8 feet high, 7 feet across and 4 feet deep and Trapp will have chiseled off five tons of marble.

Trapp has been sculpting for the past 20 years, but has enjoyed most of his success in the last five years.

For the first 15 years of his career, he was what is commonly known as the "struggling artist." But since establishing his studio in the North Carolina mountains, Trapp has become widely recognized as a sculptor of merit; so much so that he is commissioned for sculptures that he will not be able to finish before next spring.

Trapp has public sculpture works in New York, Florida, Ohio, Virginia, Tennessee, Puerto Rico and North Carolina. He has completed private works for people in Ohio, New York, North Carolina and Germany.

Trapp is affiliated with the Hodges Taylor Gallery in Charlotte and has sold several works to private collectors in Charlotte.

Consequently, when the Jenkins-Peer Architectural firm in Charlotte began looking for an artist who could create a sculpture for the Apple Computer building, Trapp was asked to submit a model for consideration.

"The Apple Computer company is really good in supporting the arts," Trapp said. "They employ a full-time aesthetic advisor who works with the architect and artist."

Trapp was inspired when he went to see the building because the architects designed the building to complement a large piece of sculpture, rather than just saying "here is a space, put something in it," Trapp said.

Also, the architects demonstrated a sensitivity to the area surrounding the building by leaving woods untouched, he said.

Trapp decided that the sculpture that would occupy an island at the entrance to the building should be soft, gentle and organic - not threatening.

Up until now the sculpture that Trapp is creating has remained untitled, but Trapp said the basis for the title will come from the Japanese word "torii" which is an entrance way to an important place.

Smoky Residents Upset Over U.S. Failure To Build Road To Cemetery

By JOSH GETLIN
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Gathering her courage, Gertrude Laney, 70, climbed aboard a barge to cross the choppy waters of Fontana Lake in the Great Smoky Mountains and set out to visit the graves of her husband and son for the first time in 40 years. She walked six miles over steep hills and sank to her knees when she finally reached her little boy's tombstone, weeping softly until it was time to leave.

Like many of her neighbors in the dirt-poor mountain country of North Carolina, Laney had to get to the graveyard as best she could. In 1941, the federal government flooded a road through the area to build a reservoir on the lake's northern shore. Congress agreed to rebuild the highway quickly so that the people of Swain County could at least continue to visit the ancestral cemeteries.

But the promise was never kept. And now, legislation is pending in Congress to ensure that it may never be kept. Under a bill before the Senate subcommittee on public lands, national parks and forests, the federal government would compensate Swain County $9.5 million for its troubles but prevent the disputed road from ever being built.

The proposal has stirred a furor in the region.

"They thought they could break their word to us just because we're mountain people," said Leeunah Vance Woods, who recalled the story about her friend Laney during a Tuesday hearing on the issue before the panel. "For some of us, the memories in those cemeteries are all we've got. Lots of folks have died just waiting for that road to get built."

Yet many others have fought just as hard to block the new road from slicing into the pristine Great Smoky Mountains National Park, which overlaps parts of North Carolina and Tennessee. The emotional clash between a handful of stubborn mountain folk and a coalition of environmental groups shows what can happen when the government seeks to protect the nation's dwindling wilderness areas, even at the price of a community's pride.

At the heart of the issue is a disagreement over how the federal government should protect the vast forest areas of the Great Smoky Mountains, the nation's most widely visited park. The legislation before Congress would declare 467,000 acres of parkland as a wilderness preserve, an area that would include the 28 little cemeteries on the north shore of Fontana Lake. Under the plan, no new development of any kind would be permitted in the park.

The proposal's sponsors, Tennessee's Democratic Sens. Jim Sasser and Albert Gore Jr., and Terry Sanford, D-N.C., said that no new road should be built to the cemeteries because it would be too costly and might trigger landslides on the steep hills above the lake. All in all, Sanford told the subcommittee, considering the $9.5 million compensation that would be provided, it seemed like a pretty fair deal.

"Like hell," complained Hubert Hendrie, after Tuesday's hearing. "That's no deal, because we still don't get the road. We're talking about our heritage here."

Hendrie said that he and many of his neighbors have relatives going back to the Civil War buried in the cemeteries near Fontana Lake. A few date back to the Revolutionary War. Many of the mountain folk living nearby make regular excursions to the cemeteries, some conducting religious services and others just quietly visiting burial sites. All do their best to maintain the cemeteries, which are frequently battered by harsh winters.

"To the folks in Swain County, this is a pretty important place," he said. "It's not being treated that way."

For years, the National Park Service has arranged for Hendrie and other residents to cross the lake and ride in four-wheel-drive vehicles to the remote graveyards, but only by appointment. The round trip takes four to five hours, instead of the 90 minutes an automobile ride might take, residents said. Under an agreement negotiated by federal officials with Swain County officials, that arrangement would continue.

The plan was blasted by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., who is pushing rival legislation that would allocate $9.5 million to the county, but designate only 400,000 acres of the park as wilderness and mandates construction of the cemetery road. Helms told the subcommittee that his bill would earmark $950,000 to build a primitive, dirt road that "would in no way" jeopardize the national park.

"At issue is whether the U.S. government will keep its word," he said. "Is fear of self-proclaimed environmentalists so great that (we) will refuse to honor a promise?"

Helms was answered by a parade of environmental spokesmen, who said that any kind of road in the park, no matter how small, could spell disaster.

"The Great Smoky Mountains National Park contains a priceless natural heritage," said Robert B. Smythe, speaking on behalf of the Sierra Club of North Carolina. "Most of the park must be preserved as wilderness ... the proposed road would be entirely inappropriate and cause considerable environmental damage."

Smythe and others contend that building a road along the steep hills facing Fontana Lake could cause rockslides and pollute the waters with acidic chemicals found in many of the rocks. More important, they said, a road built into the forest might set the precedent for further development and jeopardize the wilderness with new tourist industry.

"I can't see any way we would ever build the road," said Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., chairman of the Senate panel. "The risks are just too great. I think the government has reached an acceptable compromise with these people and it's about time."

But Hendrie, Woods and others who had come before the subcommittee to speak their minds were not impressed. When the hearing ended, they were bitter. Although the issue is a long way from being resolved, they were pessimistic about the outcome. "You know, I think some things have just been overlooked here," said Woods, her voice shaking, as she carefully inserted photographs and maps of her family's mountain burial plots into a briefcase. "We've just been passed by and swept aside."

Electrocution

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A 5-year-old Rowan County girl was electrocuted Thursday after she crawled underneath a neighbor's mobile home to fetch a friend's pet rabbit, authorities said.

Courtney Marie Young and some friends were playing with the rabbit as a baby-sitter watched, according to Janet Heno, an aunt.

"One of the neighbors had bought the rabbit the week before," Ms. Heno said. "The baby-sitter and a whole bunch of kids were olut there when it happened. There was simply nothing they could do when she went underneath the trailer."

Former CIA Agent Says North Tried To Hide Secord Gift Of Security Unit

By JIM DRINKARD
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former White House aide Oliver L. North created bogus documents to cover up the potentially illegal gift of a $14,000 security system for his home, a former CIA employee says.

North's effort, complete with the apparent defacing oftypewriter keys to make the documents appear authentic, came just days after the cover was blown on the Iran-Contra affair last November, with the documents backdated by as much as six months.

Glenn Robinette, the former CIA employee, testified Tuesday that North's effort was intended to make it appear that North, rather than retired Maj. Gen. Richard V. Secord, was paying for the system.

In fact, Secord took at least part of the money for the system from proceeds from the Iran arms sales, which he managed on North's behalf.

The House and Senate committees investigating the Iran-Contra affair were hearing today from former CIA counsel Stanley Sporkin, a close associate of the late CIA Director William J. Casey and the author of a presidential intelligence finding that authorized the arms-for-hostages deal with Iran.

Sporkin was to be followed to the witness table by Assistant Attorney General Charles Cooper, who participated in the early stages of the Justice Department investigation of the Iran affair.

In other developments:

—The two investigating panels planned further discussions on ground rules for North's testimony in early July. North's lawyers have been placing conditions on his appearance, and the panels were trying to pin down final details of a letter outlining the "understandings" governing the length and scope of his testimony and other factors.

—A check by another congressional investigating panel turned up names of several Contras and Contra supporters among those known to be violators or suspected of violating U.S. customs laws. The list was submitted to Rep. Charles Rangel, D-N.Y., chairman of the House narcotics committee.

Tuesday's testimony, together with the revelation that Secord's legal defense fund recently and mysteriously had received half a million dollars from a Swiss bank account, further clouded the motives of the affair's top operatives.

While both North and Secord have been described in earlier testimony as motivated by patriotism, a growing body of evidence suggests that personal profit figured prominently in their actions.

Robinette told how Secord approached him in April 1986 to set up a home security system for North, whose family had been plagued by harassment and who believed he may have been a target for terrorists. The system cost about $13,900, which was paid by Secord. One $9,000 check to Robinette came from Udall Corp., an account used by Secord in Iran-Contra dealings.

North never inquired about payment for the system until early December of last year, about a week after the Iran-Contra scandal had been made public, when he called Robinette and asked to be sent a bill. Robinette sent two backdated bills, and soon afterward received two letters from North, also backdated and designed to look like responses to the bills.

A documents expert retained by the committees verified North's signature on the letters and said defects in the type on the later letter appeared to be caused by an intentional filing down of typewriter characters, in what apparently was an attempt to give the impression that the letters were typed at different times.

When Robinette later told Secord about having sent the phony bills, Secord responded, "You did the right thing," Robinette testified.

Robinette's testimony was directly at odds with previous statements by Secord, who has denied paying for the installation or having anything to do with it.

Sen. Paul Trible, R-Va., told Robinette his testimony "establishes that a government official received a substantial gratuity to which he was not entitled, that the gratuity was paid at least in part from funds generated from the sale of arms to Iran, and that you and Colonel North and General Secord endeavored to mislead and to cover your tracks."

It is a federal crime for a government employee to accept anything besides a federal salary as compensation for carrying out a job, committee lawyers said. Violation carries a maximum penalty of one year in prison and a $5,000 fine.

In later testimony, Noel Koch, a former Pentagon official who had started a legal defense fund for Secord, said he resigned as trustee of the fund last week after being unable to trace $500,000 that flowed into the account over the past six weeks from Credit Suisse, the same Swiss bank used by Secord in the Iran-Contra dealings.

While Koch said he did not know the precise origin of the money, he added: "Money from that particular source ... had a peculiar odor to it."

Koch said he had sought to hire expert legal help to trace the source of the money. When he told Secord about that idea, Secord opposed it, but assured him the money was not coming from the Iran-Contra accounts or from his business partner Albert Hakim, Koch testified.

Koch and Henry H. Gaffney, director of plans for the Defense Security Assistance Agency, also told the committees of extensive doubts among Pentagon officials on the wisdom of the arms-for-hostages plan.

Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger went so far as to term it "a disaster" that "should be stopped" and would be "terrible for the country" in its implications for damage to U.S. counterterrorism policy.

But Weinberger and Secretary of State George P. Shultz, who also opposed the policy, did not do enough within the administration to try to kill the plan, Koch testified.

DESERTER GOES HOME — Douglas Beane, a Vietnam War deserter who recently returned to the United States after 17 years in exile, is welcomed home by his mother, Christine, and his father, Donald, in Rutland, Vt., Tuesday. Beane was released by the Marines Tuesday after the military decided not to conduct a court-martial. Since his desertion, Beane had lived in Australia. (AP Laserphoto)

Court Upholds Law Linking Drinking Age, Road Funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress, with the help of the Supreme Court, is about to succeed in its drive for a national minimum drinking age of 21 — if Wyoming decides the price for holding out is too expensive.

In a 7-2 decision Tuesday, the court upheld a 1984 federal law that says states must comply with the 21-year-old drinking age or forfeit some federal highway money.

Only four states — Wyoming, South Dakota, Colorado and Ohio — currently permit drinking alcoholic beverages by those under 21.

In South Dakota, a drink-at-21 law takes effect next April.

In Colorado, the drinking age will rise to 21 when the state Legislature ends its current session, expected to be some time next week.

Ohio Gov. Richard Celeste, after learning of the court ruling, said, "I think we will have to acquiesce ... to protect the revenue of our transportation department."

He said the Ohio Legislature will consider raising the state's minimum drinking age before beginning its summer recess Friday.

But in Wyoming, legislative leaders who were deadlocked in their last attempt to comply with the 1984 federal law still are split over the issue. The minimum drinking age in Wyoming is 19.

Wyoming House Speaker Pat Meenan said Tuesday that prospects for swift legislative action were poor.

Failure to comply with the federal law is costing Wyoming $3.9 million in highway aid this fiscal year and $7.9 million in the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1.

The Supreme Court said the federal law is a valid use of Congress' spending power to promote public safety by discouraging drunken driving by teen-agers.

The minimum-drinking-age law had been attacked by South Dakota as a violation of the Constitution's 21st Amendment, which in 1933 repealed Prohibition and gave states broad power over liquor distribution within their borders.

But Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist, writing for the court, said the 21st Amendment does not bar Congress from tying highway money to state passage of such laws.

Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole said the court ruling "reaffirms the administration's commitment to eradicate 'blood borders' and rid our highways of drunk drivers."

Under the federal law, those states that do not comply with the 21 drinking age lose 5 percent of the highway funds otherwise due for fiscal year 1987 and 10 percent of such funds during fiscal year 1988.

States that subsequently adopt a 21-year minimum drinking age may be entitled to recoup withheld money.

In other decisions Tuesday, the court:

—Ruled, 6-2, that a Washington state manufacturing tax favoring some in-state businesses discriminates against interstate commerce. The decision could force a major overhaul in the business-tax systems of most states.

—Shut down another potential major source of state revenue by declaring unconstitutional, 5-4, two successive Pennsylvania "flat taxes" on the interstate trucking industry.

—Unanimously overturned a 126-year-old Supreme Court ruling as it decided that federal courts may force states to extradite fugitives to other states.

Lena M. McLamb Weds J.B. Clark

Lena M. McLamb of Greenville became the bride of John Barrett Clark of Reston, Va., Saturday at 3 p.m.

The double ring ceremony was performed in the Holy Trinity United Holy Church by Shady Clark, brother of the bridegroom. A program of wedding music was performed by organists Selina Forbes and Ricky Battle and soloist Marsha Taylor.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Elwood McLamb Sr. of Clinton. The bridegroom is the son of Sarah Clark of Greenville and the late Rev. Shady Clark.

The bride was escorted by her brother, James Elwood McLamb Jr. She wore a formal gown of white satin and schiffli embroidery. The fitted basque bodice accented with seed pearls featured a Queen Anne neckline and puffed satin sleeves of illusion with schiffli embroidery and covered button closures. The full satin skirt and cathedral train were edged in a border of scalloped schiffli lace. She wore a hat adorned with seed pearls and alencon lace with a floor length illusion veil accented with flowered appliques. She carried a cascade bouquet of white roses, miniature carnations and cushion buttons accented with baby's breath.

MRS. CLARK

Maid of honor was Regina Greene of Greenville. Bridesmaids were Dayatra King of Cambria Heights, N.Y., niece of the bridegroom; Keia McLamb of Clinton, niece of the bride, and Linda Owens of Raleigh and Cynthia Reid of St. Albans, N.Y., both cousins of the bride.

They wore floor length gowns of amourette cerise taffeta. The upper bodices featured V-necklines and with ruffles on the shoulders. The A-line skirts had empire waistlines accented with cummerbunds. They carried white lace fans accented with pink and white mixed summer flowers.

Honorary bridesmaids were Evonne Harper and Shonda Hubbard, both of Greenville, Brenda Marable of Clinton, and Vivian Williams of Garner.

Best man was Dave McNeil of Chesterfield, Va. Ushers were Melvin Forbes of Silver Springs, Md., Willie Scott Forbes Jr. of Washington, D.C., Bob Smith of Herndon, Va., and Ronald Williams of Cary.

The wedding was directed by Peggy Ricks.

A reception was held at the Sheraton. Gifts were registered by Joyce Knox, Shirley Moore and Denise Perkins. Cake was cut by Ruby Toodle and punch was poured by Brenda H. Teel and Theresa Tripp-Phipps. Hostesses were Carolyn Robinson and Vada Williams; junior hostesses were Shenetia Clark, Omar King, Diandra McLamb and Adeea Rogers.

An after-rehearsal dinner was given for the wedding party in the church fellowship hall.

The bride and bridegroom are both graduates of East Carolina University. She was employed by the Pitt County Juvenile Services Offices and he is works for Delta Airlines.

Following a wedding trip to Hawaii, they will live in Reston, Va.

Lasting Imprint Of Trauma At Birth

L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

The theory that early life experiences are "imprinted" in the brain has been used to explain a number of phenomena. It is the reason an infant goose, goat or turtle has nearly unerring knowledge of who its mother is and how to behave.

Now, the notion of imprinting is being applied to humans to explain not how babies live their lives but how, years later, they choose to end them.

According to Dr. Bertil Jacobson of the Karolinska Institute in Stockholm, birth trauma may be imprinted on the infant brain and replayed as a suicide or fatal drug or alcohol abuse later in life. In fact, Jacobson will report next month in San Francisco at the International Congress on Pre- and Perinatal Psychology, the specific type of birth trauma — asphyxia, forceps delivery, or obstetrical anesthesia — seems to predict the particular way an adult later takes his or her life.

Jacobson and his colleagues examined the birth records of 412 young Swedes who had killed themselves or died of drug or alcohol abuse between 1978 and 1984. Most of the victims were male and all were younger than 44. They compared those records with those of 2,910 controls who had been born at the same hospitals in the same years.

The scientists found that suicide victims who died by asphyxia — hanging, strangulation, drowning or gas intoxication — were more than four times as likely as controls, and significantly more likely than victims who poisoned themselves, to have suffered birth asphyxia. Asphyxia is lack of oxygen to the brain during delivery, usually caused by a crimp in the umbilical cord.

Similarly, those who chose death by mechanical injury — hanging, strangulation, jumping from heights or firearms — were more than twice as likely as controls to have undergone mechanical birth trauma, such as forceps delivery, breech birth or entanglement in the umbilical cord. They were also significantly more likely than self-poisoners to have suffered this kind of trauma at birth. And they were the only category with a higher-than-expected incidence of twinning, which Jacobson believes might add to the physical trauma of birth.

"Self-destructive behavior has many roots," Jacobson notes. "They could involve either psychological trauma or neurological injuries. ... "

Jacobson leans toward imprinting as an explanation. "The mechanism must be due to an utterly enhanced receptivity during the early period in life," Jacobson says, leading to "an unconscious need to repeat a traumatic experience at birth as an adult."

If his hypothesis is correct, he adds, the increased use of obstetrical intervention may help explain the rising rates of suicide and drug abuse among young people in several countries, including the United States, Canada and Australia. In any event, Jacboson recommends obstetric practices "be carefully evaluated and possibly modified so as to prevent eventual self-destructive behavior."

Every day, almost 2,200 American health workers stick themselves with needles, often after injecting or drawing blood from a sick patient.

Now, medical-equipment manufacturers are designing devices to make such needle sticks — and the accompanying risk of spreading hepatitis B or even AIDS — virtually impossible.

One company, ICU Medical Inc. of Mission Viejo, Calif., last week introduced a line of products designed to prevent such accidents.

Needle sticks often occur as a nurse or technician tries to replace the needle's plastic cap after use, much as one might miss while putting the cap on a ballpoint pen. One of the new devices has a sheath that goes into place automatically from behind.

There have been four recorded U.S. cases of AIDS infection being transmitted by accidental needle sticks, according to the Centers for Disease Control. None of the four people has developed the disease. With hepatitis, however, the risk is greater. A health worker in close contact with blood and needles has three to five times the normal risk of contracting the serious liver ailment.

Dr. Ronald Hershow, a CDC epidemiologist, said a number of designs for needles have been tried, but so far they have been inconvenient and none has been widely accepted.

The CDC's standing recommendation is that health-care workers should never try to recap needles but should dispose of them immediately after use.

Hepatitis B can also by prevented by vaccine, but most health workers have not been vaccinated.

Discouraging news for dieters: The American Journal of Clinical Nutrition reports that even after losing weight, people with a propensity for obesity continue to have relatively low metabolisms. Even during sleep, the study of 32 women found, formerly obese people used 10 percent less energy than the naturally slim. That results in less calorie-burning and more fat-storing, concluded nutritionist Catherine Geissler of the University of London. ... Do guns make households safer? Dr. Garen J. Wintemute of the University of California at Davis conducted a study that indicates just the opposite. He writes in the Journal of the American Medical Association: "Unintentional fatal shootings of friends and family members in the home are as much as six times as common as fatal shootings of criminals." ...

The Home Sergers Have Advantages

Homemaker's Haven

Evelyn Spangler
Pitt County Extension Agent

For more than 20 years, manufacturers have used industrial sergers. They have hit the home sewing industry with a boom. These machines stitch, trim and overcast all in one operation. Overlock machines provide efficiency and quality to the busy home sewer.

Sergers or overedge machines are also used for the overlock machine. These machines can stitch from 1300 to 1500 stitches per minute, depending on the brand. The average top speed conventional machine stitches 900 to 1000 stitches per minute. The long presser foot and feed dogs, found in sergers practically prevent fabric layers from shifting when stitching. This is an advantage when sewing fabric which puckers easily, light weight fabrics, stripes and plaids.

A serger is a companion to a conventional machine, but it does not replace it. These machines stitch the edges only. They do not install zippers. You can expect a reputable brand to fall in the $400 to $600 price range.

The following is what you can and cannot expect from an overlock sewing machine.

CAN:
- Stitch, trim and overcast in one operation.
- Stitch at speeds up to 1300-1500 stitches per minute.
- Produce a professional-looking seam and edge finish.
- Make it easier to stitch stripes and plaids.
- Stitch a flatlock seam popular for sportswear.
- Be a companion to a conventional sewing machine.

CANNOT:
- Stitch anywhere on a project; can only stitch on the edge of the fabric.
- Stitch a seam where fit is critical; should baste and check the fit, then stitch the overlock seam.
- Replace a conventional sewing machine.

GREENVILLE SEWING CENTER OFFERS UNIQUE METHOD OF TEACHING NEW AND REFRESHER SEWERS TRAINING...

Greenville Sewing Center, located in Greenville Square, has announced that they will offer to the general public for the first time a method of either learning or new techniques in sewing starting June 30th.

Miss Diane Gillikin, a rising senior at ECU in the Home Economics education department, who first started sewing as a 4-H student several years ago and now tailors most of her own wearing apparel, will be on duty each Tuesday and Thursday from 10 in the morning until 6 in the afternoon to help solve your sewing problems.

Center manager, Bob Thompson, said that students may bring in their patterns, fabrics and sewing equipment to use their power sewing machines, sergers, and pressers for a modest fee each day. For that person who wants to make a basic garment and is presently knowledgeable about sewing, several outfits can be completed in the eight hour work day; however for those beginners or persons refreshing their skills, one or two garments will be a good day's output. It is emphasized that the teacher will not do the sewing but offer assistance to those desiring it.

Because of the method of teaching being used, it is necessary to have advance registration and reservations. Miss Gillikin pointed out that this program is not to replace the evening classes of students who presently hold down fulltime regular jobs but is an outgrowth of the earlier Teen-Age sewing classes taught in by-gone years but without restricting the student or students to one particular item.

For those in the market for a new machine, this is an excellent opportunity to test beforehand the availability and capability of simple low-priced units to the most advanced and sophisticated computer type machines.

Beginner students, especially young persons, are encouraged to take a day and make one or more garments, learn the techniques without tying up a long drawn-out period of time to complete the chosen project.

To Child-Proof A House, Look From Low Level

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I just read the letter in your column from "Kiki's Mom" who said that her 2-year-old daughter received a frightening shock when she stuck her mother's keys into an electrical outlet. She was indeed lucky her daughter was not more seriously injured – or killed.

"Mom" should go to the nearest hardware store and buy some plugged discs that fit into these outlets. Her child may not have her keys to play with, but there are other objects such as hairpins that could be stuck into outlets with the same results. Mothers should not attempt to cover electrical outlets with tape – a child will quickly learn how to pull it off.

"Mom" should go through her entire house to ensure that no safety hazards exist. Safety latches for cabinets are a good idea. All household cleaners should be stored out of reach – never under a kitchen sink. The best way to spot a problem is to get down on the floor and view a room the way a child sees it.

Grandparents who frequently have little guests should also child-proof their homes. Most grandparents have forgotten what it was like to have an inquisitive, exploring child in the house. -- EVELYN IN TUSCALOOSA

DEAR EVELYN: Thank you for some valuable suggestions. And, readers, wouldn't a half-dozen of these "outlet pluggers" make a fine gift for a baby shower?

DEAR ABBY: My sister and I are both married. We decided to take a weekend trip together – just the two of us. Just as our plans were coming together, she comes up with a "proposition" – if I lose 10 pounds before we leave, she will buy me a new outfit while we're out of town. Mind you, I am 5 foot 6 and weigh 125 pounds. I am by no means "fat," but she would like to make me think I am. She's always telling me that if there is something I want, she'll give it to me if I "tone up" or lose weight.

I am tired of her finding fault with me when she is just one size smaller than I am. Is there some way I can tell her how I feel without hurting her feelings, although she has hurt mine more than once? – UP TO HERE IN CHARLOTTE, N.C.

DEAR UP: Why do you think it would hurt your sister's feelings if you were to tell her truthfully that she hurts your feelings when she suggests that you are overweight when you're not? That's the only way to get her off your back. Try it. You'll like it. And don't worry about whether she likes it or not.

The "weight" you'll lose will be the burden of your sister's hostility. And telling her will "tone up" your self-esteem like no other exercise.

DEAR ABBY: Recently you ran a letter in your column from a woman who wanted suggestions as to what to do about her husband's scratchy beard, short of shaving it off, which he refused to do.

Our residents here at the Good Samaritan Village in Albuquerque, N.M., enjoy having "Dear Abby" read to them, and they had a very lively discussion about that letter. One of the residents suggested that the woman give her husband a permanent, which would curl the ends under and make the beard less scratchy. What do you think of the idea? – MARY A. JOHNSON, ACTIVITIES COORDINATOR

DEAR MARY: Tell that resident that she rates with the professionals. That suggestion was offered by several top-notch barbers and hairdressers.

Marrying Decade Seen In 1980s

By TOWN & COUNTRY
A Hearst Magazine

Big weddings, white gowns and traditional ceremonies are making the 1980s a billion-dollar boom time for matrimonial pomp and circumstances.

In 1985 about 2.5 million people paid out $23 billion for wedding and matrimonial trappings, according to an article in Town & Country, which is 40 percent more than had been spent in the 10 previous years.

The barefoot freeform weddings of the 1970s, are out of fashion, and after a decline in weddings from the late '60s on, the '80s are turning into a marrying decade.

Private planes, sometimes with brides at the controls, have been traveling from Texas, South America, Mexico and Europe to Memphis where Pat Kerr charges up to $30,000 for a wedding dress. Triple-tiered cakes are $1,000 treats. Nearly half the crystal, china and silver sold is bought for brides and they account for a third of the purchases of household appliances.

Caterers, wedding planners, orchestras, florists, wine merchants, hoteliers, stationers and entertainers are all catching a piece of the bridal bouquet.

Brides are getting older today. In the last 10 years, the average age for the first-time bride has risen from 21 to 24, while grooms have gone from 23 to 26. Since almost half the marriages in the United States end in divorce, more than 45 percent of those marrying are repeaters.

The frequency of live-in relationships has changed the pattern of honeymoons. Now, they frequently consist of a long weekend, and those prepared to spend freely may take their friends along.

The ceremonies have returned to the traditional, after more than a decade when engaged couples seemed to shun lifelong commitment.

"They seemed to think there was an exit door there if their marriages didn't work out," said the Rev. Gordon P. Irvine of Chicago's Second Presbyterian Church, "so I changed the vows from 'till death do us part' to 'as long as we share life together.'"

He said today 80 percent of the people he marries have been living together, and they are entering marriage more seriously.

Dr. Charles W. Stewart, professor pastoral theology at Wesley Theological Seminary in Washington, said living together appears to be a precursor to — not a substitute for — marriage.

"There are fewer surprises that way," said Dr. F. Forrester Church at the Unitarian Church of All Souls in New York City.

"The difference is that when the couple marries, they have a covenant with each other; they are no longer playing house. They want to assume the responsibility of having children or have simply grown up, which I define as being able to give away your freedom."

Clergy report a return to traditional ceremonies and settings. Couples are opting for church weddings and traditional liturgy. There is less writing of vows than there was 10 years ago.

Printed programs have become more common and the use of video recorders is increasing. The single ring ceremony is becoming a thing of the past. Weddings are getting bigger. In one Dallas church, "big" means 600 or more guests, medium includes 400 to 600 guests and small about 350.

Public and private parking areas throughout the city have designated spaces for handicapped citizens. Special dashboard permits and license plates may be purchased at the state license agency, 718 Dickinson Ave. Call 758-1193 for information.

Tests Help Deal With Disease

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — New neuropsychological tests are providing hope for victims of head trauma, stroke, tumors and learning developmental disabilities, according to neuropsychologist Glen D. Greenberg.

"With these specialized tests," said Greenberg, staff neuropsychologist at Children's Rehabilitation Hospital, "we can assess the effects of brain disorders on a person's learning, language, spatial relations, memory and motor and sensory-perceptual abilities.

"A significant number of children have some suspected learning disability," he said. "Substantial numbers of car accidents, in which drivers do not wear seatbelts, lead to head injuries.

"As the elderly population grows, we are seeing more Alzheimer's disease and dementia. Neuropsychological testing can play an important role in assessing individuals in these situations."

Testing is available for individuals 5 years old through adulthood at Children's Rehabilitation Hospital, a member of the health services division of Thomas Jefferson University. The hospital has one of very few programs in the Philadelphia area that offers a complete battery of these exams, which last about six hours.

In one exam, the patient is blindfolded and asked to place multishaped blocks into a jigsaw-puzzle frame, using each hand separately, then using both hands. This demonstrates the ability to perform adequately using different sides of the brain as well as the ability to learn.

With information supplied by the tests, inferences can be made about the function of different brain regions; whether the damage is localized to a specific hemisphere of the brain; and how this may affect the person's cognitive abilities and adaptive functioning.

"Neuropsychological testing is sensitive to a patient's complete range of mental functions," Greenberg said. He added that the testing is useful for individuals with chronic diseases, including multiple sclerosis, diabetes, Alzheimer's disease and lupus.

Patient referrals for this kind of testing should be made by a health professional, Greenberg said.

Blood

ville Red Cross, the transfusion rate is increasing higher than the 1 percent national average, he said. There has been a 4 percent increase in the transfusions.

"The idea is to collect more than the amount of blood needed to provide for a referral hospital" such as Pitt County Memorial Hospital, Parsons said. "PCMH uses more blood because it is a referral hospital. Patients come from throughout the east, not just from Pitt County."

PCMH made 13,000 blood transfusions last year, ranking as the second largest user of blood in the Tidewater region. The local hospital relies on over-collections of blood in other areas to meet the demand, Parsons said.

Collections in Pitt County last year amounted to 4,894 pints; the goal was 5,500 pints. This year's goal has been set at 5,500 pints.

"None of us is optimistic about the blood supply," Parsons said. "Unfortunately, more people are stopping than starting" to give blood.

In order to encourage donors, new programs are being developed. A VIP program for persons who agree to donate blood four times a year will be established in the county. Time-saving measures to make blood donation faster also are being implemented, Parsons said.

A permanent Bloodmobile site in the Brody Building of the East Carolina University Medical School will be set up for the donor's convenience. An annual meeting will be held July 16 at the Greenville Country Club to award and recognize Bloodmobile sponsors.

"There is no other place to get blood but human beings," he said.

The first public Bloodmobile for the new campaign will be held July 6 from noon to 6 p.m. at Wahl-Coates School, East Fifth Street, according to Barry Gaskins, blood service committee chairman.

Escapee

GREENSBORO (AP) — A man who walked away from a Central Prison work gang 19 years ago while serving time for manslaughter has been arrested in Greensboro.

Bobby Frank Brown, whose address was not listed, was arrested Tuesday at a Greensboro construction site. "He was a little bit surprised," Det. Jim Ballance said.

A former resident of Forsyth County, Brown escaped July 15, 1968, from an annex of Central Prison in Raleigh, where he had been working with a painting crew.

He had served almost three years of an eight-to-12 year sentence on a manslaughter conviction.

Ballance said Brown evaded arrest for 19 years because he dropped his middle name and changed his birthday after his escape.

"He was going under the name of just 'Bobby Brown,' and he changed his birth date from Aug. 28, 1937, to Aug. 28, 1938," Ballance said. "He had apparently obtained a driver's license and a Social Security (number) under this altered name."

Storm Damage

ROXBORO, N.C. (AP) — A line of strong thunderstorms moved across eastern North Carolina Tuesday night, knocking down trees and causing minor damage to several mobile homes in Person County.

Chatham County officials reported two trees knocked down by high winds.

Panda May Have Had Twin Cubs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ling-Ling, the National Zoo's female giant panda who gave birth to an apparently healthy cub, may have also given birth to a second, stillborn cub, zoo officials said today.

Zoo spokesman Robert Hoage said the healthy 4-ounce cub born Tuesday was "doing fine" and added, without elaborating, that a second cub may also have been born.

"We do have some additional developments," he said. "There is some evidence that a second cub was born. It may have been stillborn."

As for the squealing cub being nurtured by its mother, zoo spokesman Mike Morgan said earlier:

"So far it looks good. The mother has been giving the cub appropriate attention. We're not absolutely sure that it has nursed but it has been in a position where it could have apparently."

If it lives, the cub will be the first panda to survive captive birth in the United States.

While thrilled with the birth, which occurred at 3:33 a.m. Tuesday, officials were careful about gauging the chances of the cub's survival because two of Ling-Ling's previous offspring died.

"People are walking around smiling, pleased that it is going well, but there is a lot of apprehension," Morgan said. "We don't want to be overly optimistic."

The 18-year-old Ling-Ling is the only giant panda in the United States to have given birth, and the new offspring could become the first panda cub in the United States to survive. The 250-pound Ling-Ling and her mate, Hsing-Hsing, 17, were a gift from China in 1972 after President Nixon's historic visit to Beijing.

The only other pandas now in the United States are a pair on loan from China to the Bronx Zoo in New York City.

Officials were monitoring the mother and cub via closed-circuit television. They won't know its sex until they can get close to it and do not intend to interfere any time soon unless something goes wrong. Four ounces is the average weight for panda cubs born in captivity.

Army Tank Hit

FORT HOOD, Texas (AP) — A tank taking part in a military exercise was hit by artillery fire from another tank and exploded, and one National Guardsman was killed, officials said today.

At least five people were reported injured in the accident, the second at the Starburst '87 maneuvers this week.

Sgt. Roger Allen of the Fort Hood Public Affairs Office said an M-60 tank blew up just before midnight Tuesday, killing a member of the Texas National Guard's 49th Armored Division.

One of the injured guardsmen was hospitalized in serious condition, but the other four guardsmen were released after treatment, he said.

Earlier this week, 10 reservists and National Guardsmen were killed in a helicopter crash during the exercises.

Jetties

WASHINGTON (AP) — North Carolina lawmakers have launched a new effort to get congressional approval for construction of two jetties at Oregon Inlet, a key passageway for the state's commercial fishing fleets.

An attempt to gain approval for the jetties in 1984 failed in the Senate after being approved narrowly in the House. And lawmakers introducing Tuesday's legislation said the $100 million project still faced an uphill battle.

"We're going to give it our best shot," Republican Sen. Jesse A. Helms, who introduced the bill in the Senate with Democratic Sen. Terry Sanford. "Everybody knows it's not going to be easy."

Rep. Walter B. Jones, a Democrat from Farmville, introduced the bill in the House.

Obituaries

Battle

QUEENS, N.Y. — A funeral for the Rev. Frank Edward Battle, 84, formerly of Tarboro, N.C., was to be conducted today at 2 p.m. in Hemby-Willoughby Mortuary Chapel, Tarboro, by the Rev. Walter Adkins. Burial was to be in Dancey Memorial Cemetery, Princeville, N.C.

He attended Edgecombe County, N.C., schools and Manhattan Bible Institute, New York. He pastored Elmhurst Church of God in Christ for the past 20 years.

Surviving are his wife, Lucille Battle of the home; a sister, Louise Joyner of Greenville, N.C., and four grandchildren.

Brown

Mrs. Bettie Brown of 322 Clairmont Circle died this morning at her home. Arrangements are incomplete at Flanagan Funeral Home.

Buffkin

VANCEBORO — A funeral for Mrs. Fannie Rich Warren Buffkin, 87, will be conducted at 11 a.m. Thursday in the Wilkerson Funeral Chapel in Vanceboro by the Rev. Claude Wilson. Burial will be in the Vanceboro Cemetery.

Mrs. Buffkin was a music teacher and public school teacher in Epworth and Ernul in Craven County. A native of Columbus County who attended Meredith College, she made her home in Vanceboro for 50 years. In recent years she had lived in Moncks Corner, S.C.

Surviving are a son, Clyde James "Jimmy" Warren Jr. of Moncks Corner, S.C.; three grandchildren, and three great-grandchildren.

The family will receive friends at the funeral home from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. today, and at other times will be at the home on Main Street in Vanceboro.

Cowan

FARMVILLE — James Louis "Jamie" Cowan III, 16, died Tuesday. Arrangements will be announced by the Farmville Funeral Home.

Gutierrez

Mrs. Maria Josefa Mir De Gutierrez, 77, died this morning in Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

A funeral Mass will be said at 11 a.m. Friday in St. Peter's Catholic Church by the Rev. Terry Collins. Burial will be in Homestead Memorial Gardens, Greenville.

Mrs. Gutierrez, a native of Cuba, had been a resident of the United States for the past 27 years. She had been living in St. Petersburg, Fla., and was visiting her daughter in Greenville at the time of her death. She attended Our Lady of Good Hope Catholic Church in St. Petersburg.

Surviving are her husband, Mario O. Gutierrez; a daughter, Nancy Dominick Colville of Greenville; a son, Mario H. Gutierrez of Indianapolis; eight grandchildren, and one great-grandchild.

The family will receive friends at the Wilkerson Funeral Home from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. Thursday. A rosary will be said at 8 p.m.

Hostage Released

Christian-controlled radio stations claimed today that Syrian troops were preventing Shiites in Beirut's southern suburbs from entering the Moslem western sector of the capital.

The stations said the restriction appear to be a prelude to a Syrian blockade of the southern suburbs, where many of the 25 foreign hostages kidnapped in Lebanon are believed held.

Police said they could not confirm the radio reports.

In February, 7,500 Syrian troops entered west Beirut to end months of militia rule, but the Syrians have not taken control of the southern suburbs of the capital. Syria is Lebanon's main power broker and keeps 25,000 troops in the northern and eastern parts of the country.

Sources in the mainstream Shiite Moslem militia Amal, which is allied with Syria, had said Tuesday the Syrians threatened violent action unless the three hostages were freed by sundown. But Syria later discounted the reports.

Among the 25 foreigners missing and believed kidnapped since March 1985 are nine Americans, six Frenchmen, two Britons, two West Germans, an Italian, an Irishman, a South Korean, an Indian and two men who have not been identified.

Also missing is Anglican Church envoy Terry Waite, who disappeared Jan. 20 after leaving a west Beirut hotel to meet with hostage holders.

Glass went to Lebanon to work on a book about the Middle East.

A New King

NBA Draft Makes A Point

NEW YORK (AP) — Five teams got right to the point in the NBA draft.

Point guards were chosen first by Sacramento, Cleveland, Washington, New York and Detroit on Monday as teams recognized the need for quick, intelligent players who are accurate passers.

The Kings grabbed 6-foot-3 Kenny Smith of North Carolina with the sixth selection and the Cavaliers followed immediately by taking 6-1 Kevin Johnson of California. The Bullets took 5-3 Tyrone Bogues of Wake Forest No. 12, the Knicks selected 6-3 Mark Jackson of St. John's No. 18 and the Pistons, with the first pick of the second round, got 6-2 Freddie Banks of Nevada-Las Vegas.

Sacramento, 29-53 last season, went into the draft looking for more speed and quickness, and found it in Smith, who rarely tasted defeat at North Carolina.

"I have never been on a losing team and I'm not going there with a losing attitude," Smith said. "I expect to win. Hopefully, we will be in the playoffs next season."

In Johnson, Cleveland got a point guard not nearly as well known as Smith, but Coach Lenny Wilkens said that hardly matters in the NBA.

"When I was at Seattle and picked Jack Sikma, everybody booed because they didn't know who he was. Well, Jack Sikma's been a nine-time all-star," Wilkens said. "I think you have to give it a chance and see what these young players can do."

The drafting of Johnson, Cal's all-time leader in points, assists and steals, showed some disenchantment with John Bagley, Cleveland's starting point guard for most of the past three seasons.

"If we take a player with the seventh pick overall, we expect him to come in and make a contribution to our team," Wilkens said.

Bogues was the sensation of draft day when he was taken by the Bullets, who will team him with the NBA's tallest player, 7-7 Manute Bol.

"We know his size is a detriment," Bullets Coach Kevin Loughery said, "but his skills and leadership qualities are something we needed. Bogues definitely has the opportunity to start for our ballclub.

"I'm not sure he wasn't the best point guard in the draft, and he was by far the best available at the time we drafted."

Jackson, who grew up in New York and was St. John's all-time assist leader, said he has the mind-set of a point guard.

"I'm a leader," he said. "I can make players around me better. I can create."

Assistant coach Brendan Malone said the Knicks like Jackson because he can "play at two speeds, the halfcourt game and the transition game. He hits the open man, makes excellent decisions and works the ball inside very well."

Detroit was hoping to use its first pick for a big guard, but the Pistons settled for Banks, who could be a backup for Isiah Thomas.

"When I say settled, I don't mean that badly," Pistons General Manager Jack McCloskey said. "Overall, I think Freddie is going to be an excellent player."

After San Antonio took Navy center David Robinson and Phoenix followed with 6-9 Armon Gilliam of Nevada-Las Vegas, 12 of the next 25 selections were guards.

New Jersey grabbed 6-5 guard Dennis Hopson, the Los Angeles Clippers took 6-7 guard Reggie Williams of Georgetown, Seattle selected 6-7 forward Scottie Pippen of Central Arkanasas, Sacramento picked Smith and Cleveland drafted Johnson.

Two more guards, 6-7 Reggie Miller of UCLA and Bogues, were taken 11th and 12th after 6-11 forward Olden Polynice was drafted by Chicago, 6-9 forward Derrick McKey of Alabama by Seattle and 6-10 forward Horace Grant by Chicago. Seattle later traded the rights to Pippen to Chicago for the rights to Polynice and future considerations.

The rest of the first-round selections were 6-10 forward Joe Wolf of North Carolina by the Clippers, 6-10 forward Tellis Frank of Western Kentucky by Golden State, 6-10 forward Jose Ortiz of Oregon State by Utah, 7-0 center Chris Welp of Washington by Philadelphia, 6-4 guard Ronnie Murphy of Jacksonville by Portland, Jackson by New York, 6-8 forward Ken Norman of Illinois by the Clippers, 6-4 guard Jim Farmer of Alabama by Dallas, 6-9 forward Dallas Comegys of DePaul by Atlanta, 6-7 forward Reggie Lewis of Northeastern by Boston and 6-10 forward Greg Anderson of Houston by San Antonio.

Ward Helps The Yanks Top Birds

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Talk about a hitter owning a pitcher, Gary Ward seems to have Doug Corbett in his hip pocket.

"I think the only time I've ever gotten him out was when he hit a double and I picked him off second base," the Baltimore pitcher said after giving up Ward's tie-breaking homer Tuesday in a 2-1 loss to the New York Yankees.

Ward's homer gave him five hits in as many career at-bats against Corbett, who signed with the Orioles as a free agent just hours before the game.

"But I'm still out there after him," said Corbett, who last pitched for the California Angels. "The odds are in my favor I'm going to get him out someday."

The victory kept the Yankees just percentage points behind the American League East-leading Toronto Blue Jays, 8-7 winners over the Detroit Tigers.

Elsewhere, it was Boston 9, Milwaukee 5; Chicago 13, Seattle 3; California 8, Texas 6; Kansas City 4, Oakland 0, and Minnesota 9, Cleveland 4.

Ward's dramatic homer came with two out in the eighth inning as the Yankees won their ninth game in 12 and handed the Orioles their 22nd loss in the last 25 games.

"I was looking for a fastball away, and that's what I got," said Ward, who hit his second career homer off Corbett and was credited with the game-winning hit for the third time in New York's last five victories.

"In that situation, with the ballgame tied, if I could come up there every time ... and hit the ball out, I would do that. The only thing I can do is hit the ball hard."

Rick Rhoden, 9-4, had battled through the first seven innings against Mark Williamson, a 27-year-old rookie making his first major league start.

Rhoden allowed three hits during in seven innings, including a leadoff homer by Terry Kennedy in the sixth, which ended his bid for a perfect game and tied the score at 1-1.

Dave Righetti pitched the final two innings for the Yankees to pick up his 15th save in his 28th appearance.

Blue Jays 8, Tigers 7

Willie Upshaw hit a grand slam and Fred McGriff and George Bell also homered to spark Toronto.

Upshaw's homer off Jeff Robinson, 4-4, keyed Toronto's six-run fourth inning. The Blue Jays had loaded the bases on two-out walks to Jesse Barfield and Ernie Whitt and Bell's single.

The Blue Jays built an 8-1 lead. The Tigers got within 8-3 in the seventh on Lou Whitaker's run-scoring double off Dave Stieb, 6-4, and Kirk Gibson's RBI single off reliever Gary Lavelle. Darrell Evans hit a two-run homer in the Detroit eighth, his 12th, to cut Toronto's lead to three runs.

Toronto reliever Tom Henke gave up two more Detroit runs, on Alan Trammell's 13th homer in the ninth, before recording his 13th save.

Red Sox 9, Brewers 5

Rookie Ellis Burks keyed a six-run sixth inning with a three-run, two-out homer as Boston rallied from a five-run deficit to beat Milwaukee.

Whitson Uses Caution For Win

By The Associated Press

The last few years have taught Ed Whitson to proceed with caution from coast to coast.

Whitson pitched the first two-hitter of his 10-year career Tuesday night as San Diego beat visiting Houston and Nolan Ryan, 4-1.

Whitson, 32, improved his record to 8-6. Not too bad on a club that has a record of 23-48.

"I'm superstitious," Whitson said. "I don't look at the scoreboard, because when I do the very next inning I get roped."

Whitson didn't have to look at the scoreboard. He retired the last seven hitters for his second complete game in his last three starts. Whitson walked five and struck out six.

On June 12, Whitson pitched a four-hit, 5-0 victory over the Giants in San Francisco, his first shutout in the National League in six years. Whitson pitched a three-hitter against Cincinnati on June 15, 1983.

Elsewhere in the National League, Chicago beat New York 4-1, Philadelphia defeated St. Louis 4-1, Montreal trounced Pittsburgh 8-2, Los Angeles edged Atlanta 3-2 and Cincinnati beat San Francisco 4-1.

After finishing 14-8 and helping San Diego win the NL pennant in 1984, Whitson took the free-agent route and signed for about $800,000 with the New York Yankees.

Whitson had his problems on and off the field in New York. After a slow start in 1985, he was booed in Yankee Stadium and eventually had to pitch only on the road.

Near the end of that season, Whitson was in a barroom brawl with Manager Billy Martin — a development that did not help his cause in New York.

After a 5-2 start in 1986, the Yankees sent Whitson back to San Diego for Tim Stoddard where he finished 1-7 with a 5.59 earned run average.

After a slow start this year, Whitson is now the ace of the Padres' staff.

"He's out to prove to evervone that the way he pitched in New York doesn't mean he's over the hill," Padres Manager Larry Bowa said. "He's relaxed. He knows I'm going to give him the ball no matter what he does out there. He's as good a competitor as I've ever watched. I didn't know he was that competitive when I played against him."

The Padres took avantage of poor outfield play by Houston to score three runs.

Ryan, 4-7, pitched six innings, allowing four hits and four runs, two unearned. He struck out four, giving him 109 in 91 2-3 innings.

Cubs 4, Mets 1

Rick Sutcliffe, coming off 5-14 season, improved his record to 10-3 and Chicago rookies Paul Noce and Mike Brumley drove in two runs each to beat New York.

Ron Darling fell to 2-5 and remained winless in 12 starts since April 22. His personal losing string reached a career-high five.

"Last year, I said, 'How could Sutcliffe and (Bret) Saberhagen pitch so lousy?'" Darling said. "I never thought I'd ever have a streak like this.

"It's very humbling, but three of my last four starts were good. I'll win another game before I retire."

Brumley and Noce are filling in for injured second baseman Ryne Sandberg and shortstop Shawon Dunston.

With the Mets leading 1-0 in the fifth, Noce blooped a two-run double to right and Brumley followed with his first major league homer.

Phillies 4, Cardinals 1

Shane Rawley pitched a four-hitter over eight innings and Steve Bedrosian earned his 17th save as Philadelphia snapped a six-game losing streak to give Lee Elia his first victory as manager of the Phillies.

"I haven't been around here long yet, but the attitude of the club has been good," Elia said. "We executed in scoring our first run, we scored our second run on hustle and then our pinch hitter closed it out for us."

Festival Torch Comes To Town

The Olympic Festival Torch will be carried through Pitt County, Greenville and Washington Thursday on its way from New Bern to the Outer Banks.

The torch will overnight in New Bern, departing from there be carried on foot and by bicycle to Kinston early Thursday morning.

It is scheduled to cross the Pitt-Lenoir line around 2:40 p.m. and travel through Grifton at 2:50 p.m.

It should reach Ayden around 4 p.m. and Winterville around 4:40.

It is then scheduled to arrive in Greenville in the area of Pitt Memorial Hospital at 6:20 p.m.

It will pass by both Pitt Memorial and the new Ronald McDonald House, where patients and employees of the hospital will carry it.

Also approximately 60 employees of Burroughs Wellcome, a USOF-'87 Grand Patron, will participate.

All of the Greenville activities will be coordinated by the Greenville Jaycees.

The torch is scheduled to leave Greenville around 8:50, passing through Pactolus around 9:30 p.m.

It will then overnight in Washington, departing from there on Friday morning at 7 a.m.

The torch will pass back through the area after its tour of the Outer Banks on Monday. It will cross Martin County on its way from Edenton to Tarboro on that day.

It will arrive in Jamesville at about 1:30 p.m., where Lindsey Linker, tennis coach at Chapel Hill High School and the top-ranked women's player in the state in her age group, will carry the torch by bicycle.

The torch will arrive in Williamston around 3:30 p.m., pass through Hassell about 4:30 and arrive in Tarboro about 6:20 p.m.

The torch run began in Wilmington on Monday and will wind up at the Opening Ceremonies of the U.S. Olympic Festival in Carter-Finley Stadium in Raleigh on Friday, July 17.

By then, it will have traveled to nearly every corner of the state, over 2,800 miles, and been carried by over 4,000 volunteers.

The torch was lit on Saturday at the Olympic Monument atop Pike's Peak in Colorado, and flown to Wilmington for the start of the run.

Post 39 Loses, 8-2

GOLDSBORO — Mike Lanier scattered three hits over eight innings and recorded six strikeouts as Wayne County took a 8-2 win over Pitt County American Legion Post 39 in an Area I baseball game Tuesday night.

Pitt County had battled back from a 2-0 deficit to tie the game with two runs in the top of the fifth.

Then in the bottom of the inning, Wayne County's Doyle Whitfield reached on a fielder's choice. Nicky Gambella followed with a single. Allen Battle then hit into a fielder's choice that put out Gambella but scored Whitfield to make it 3-2.

Wayne County followed that with five runs in the sixth to put the game away.

Randy Hood started things off by reaching on an error on the shortstop. Hood then stole second and came home on consecutive errors. One out later, Lanier drew a walk. John Peacock then singled to put men at first and second. Kevin Kennedy followed that by reaching on a walk to load the bases.

Whitfield then singled in Peachock and Lanier. One out later, Battle drove in Kennedy and Whitfield to complete the scoing.

Post 39 has lost three games in a row and falls to 5-5 after starting out 5-2.

Jason Galloway led Pitt with two hits. Battle had three hits to lead Wayne County.

Tom Moye took the loss for Pitt. He went the distance and allowed only two hits over the first four innings before getting tagged for six the rest of the way.

Post 39 plays host to Rocky Mount tonight.

Navratilova Begins Quest For 6th Title

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Martina Navratilova began her quest for a record sixth consecutive Wimbledon women's title in quick fashion today, taking just 32 minutes to defeat Claudia Porwik of West Germany 6-1, 6-0 on Center Court.

Also winning easily were Helena Sukova of Czechoslovakia, the women's fourth seed, who defeated Jo Louis of Britain 6-1, 6-4, and the men's 10th seed, Tim Mayotte of the United States, who beat Jean Fleurian of France 6-2, 6-3, 6-3.

Others playing first-round matches in the weather-plagued tournament included the men's third seed, Mats Wilander of Sweden, and seventh seed Jimmy Connors of the United States.

On Tuesday, defending champion Boris Becker opened the tournament with a victory at his favorite spot.

The third day of the two-week-long grass-court Grand Slam tournament opened under the best weather conditions thus far, attracting a large crowd that included the Duchess of York, wife of Britain's Prince Andrew. After 1½ days of rain, brighter skies and even some sunshine were the order.

The London Weather Center said there was a chance of showers later in the day.

Navratilova, rankee No. 1 but struggling without a tournament victory this year, never had any trouble against Porwik.

All of the American left-hander's shots were working, and she allowed her West German opponent just 13 points in the last 11 games.

Navratilova had singled out Porwik last year as a possible future star in women's tennis, but today she was only a very overmatched 18-year-old.

Porwik's final point gave her a 15-0 lead in the fourth game of the second set. From there, Navratilova ripped off the last 12 points of he match, breaking Porwik at love for the victory with a forehand crosscourt return.

Sukova, who handed Navratilova her first British grass-court loss in 35 matches in the final at Eastbourne last Saturday, was equally dominant against Louis.

She charged the net at every opportunity, taking just 16 minutes to wrap up the first set. Louis gave her more trouble in the second set, particularly with her two-fisted backhand, but Sukova had too much for the 20-year-old Briton, breaking for a 3-2 lead and serving out the match.

Mayotte had trouble with the wind on Court No. 1, overhitting groundstrokes, but beat Fleurian at the net. He lost serve just once in the 1½-hour match.

Becker has called Center Court at Wimbledon his tennis birthplace, since it was there that he made his mark by becoming the youngest men's champion of the tournament two years ago at the age of 17.

As he stepped out onto the grass Tuesday, the West German glanced around, smiled faintly, then took less than two two hours to successfully start his title defense without a passing thought to the rain that had held him up for so long.

"I was probably one of the few players who did not really care about the weather," the top-seeded Becker said after his 6-4, 6-2, 6-4 first-round victory over Karel Novacek of Czechoslovakia, the opening match of the tournament.

"I don't feel any pressure here. It is the place of my success. But I'm glad we could get out on court today when we did," he said.

Under still gloomy skies, Stefan Edberg of Sweden made sure he got into the second round fast, posting a 6-0, 6-0, 6-0 rout of countryman Stefan Eriksson in one hour.

Edberg became only the third player in Wimbledon's history known to have scored a triple-love success at the grass-court Grand Slam event.

The world's top-ranked player, Ivan Lendl, also beat the rain but struggled on his least-favorite surface, losing a set against Christian Saceanu, a qualifier, before prevailing 6-2, 3-6, 6-3, 7-5.

Other seeded men to post first-round victories Monday were No. 11 Pat Cash of Australia, No. 12 Brad Gilbert of the United States and No. 13 Joakim Nystrom of Sweden.

On the women's side, No. 7 Gabriela Sabatini of Argentina reached the second round, along with No. 8 Manuela Maleeva of Bulgaria and No. 11 Lori McNeil of the U.S.

Wimbledon being Wimbledon, officials ruled out the possibility of making up for the backlog of matches by allowing play on the middle Sunday, traditionally a rest day.

But, they said, the tennis would start earlier than usual today and thereafter.

Almost 28 hours had been lost before the 101st championships finally got under way, avoiding the first washout of the opening two days of the two-week tournament.

Becker and Novacek were thwarted by a short shower the first time they tried to start and went back to the locker room after warming up for seven minutes.

But the second attempt, an hour later, was successful, and, although he was not at his best, Becker still played like he'd never been away.

With his big serve working well, the two-time defending champion never looked in trouble against Novacek, who reached the quarterfinals of the French Open on clay earlier this month but was not nearly as effective on the grass.

There also were the Becker antics — one, in particular, which had the crowd gasping and surprised the West German himself.

In the middle of the second set, the right-hander suddenly transferred his racket to his left hand and played a cross-court half volley for an outright winner.

It stunned everybody on and around the court.

"Changing hands was the only chance I had of making the point. I just thought I'd try it, and it worked. I've never played a shot like that in my life and probably won't ever again," Becker said. "I don't know what came over me."

Becker said he apologized to Novacek about the unconventional shot.

"It may have looked like I was playing with him, and I did not mean it that way so I said, 'Sorry.'"

While Becker said he did not mind all the waiting around, Lendl was unhappy — and it showed in his tentative performance.

Lendl, who has never won Wimbledon, took two hours, 20 minutes to beat Saceanu, ranked 175th in the world.

Saceanu had appeared in only two previous Grand Prix tournaments this year, losing in the first round each time.

He was limited in shotmaking but nevertheless gave Lendl a tough time, taking the second set and breaking for a 4-2 lead in the fourth before Lendl imposed his game in time to prevent a fifth set.

Lendl, puffy under the eyes and sniffling, appeared to be still suffering from a bout of the flu contracted while practicing on grass in Scotland last week.

Nevertheless, he said, he would have to play far better to wrest the title from Becker.

"I don't think I'll ever feel as good on grass as I do on other surfaces. If I want to win this, I'll have to step up my play," he said.

Edberg, the reigning two-time Australian Open champion and one of Becker's biggest rivals, had looked spotty in his buildup to Wimbledon.

But against Eriksson, he was pure perfection, losing just 34 points.

The other players known to have won at Wimbledon with perfect scores, also Swedish, were Lennart Bergelin in 1946 and Torsten Johansson, twice, in 1947.

"When I was at 5-0 in the third set, I thought about giving him a game," Edberg said. "But then I thought maybe I'll never get another chance to do it in a Grand Slam event. But I feel very sorry for him."

Southern Pitt Chooses Team

The Southern Pitt Little League has chosen its all stars for the 1987 season.

Selected to the team are Troy Brown, Donta Bunn, Bo Carson, Antonio Coppage, Ron Davenport, Travaris Hardy, Dwayne Hines, Brian Hudson, Scooter Mitchell, Todd Peele, William Perkins, Richard Robinson, Cortez Smith, Jeff Wilson and Rob Young. Brian Edwards was chosen as the alternate.

The All-Stars will advance to district play in Farmville beginning July 9.

SMU Back In Trouble?

DALLAS (AP) — Private investigators for Southern Methodist University are looking into unconfirmed reports of rules violations in basketball, track and other athletic programs at the school, according to a published report.

The Dallas Times Herald reported today in a copyright story that investigators have questioned most of the SMU basketball players as well as their high school coaches. The players' parents also are being interviewed, the newspaper said.

A-G, Mast Post Wins

Ayden-Grifton Kiwanis and Mast Drugs took wins in Barnhill Summer Basketball League action Tuesday.

Ayden defeated Collins & Aikman, 80-59. George Burnette led Collins and Aikman with 18. Ayden was led by Ronnell Peterson with 23 points.

Mast Drugs defeated Sam and Dave's Snack Bar, 76-59. Mast was led by Will Sutton with 31 points. William Morning had 21 for Sam and Dav'es.

Elia took over for the fired John Felske last Thursday and had lost four straight games.

Pinch-hitter Greg Gross delivered a two-run single in the eighth. It was Gross' 115th career pinch hit, moving him into sole possession of fifth place on the all-time list ahead of Red Lucas.

St. Louis outfielder Vince Coleman, who had reached base in 50 straight games, fouled out, grounded out twice and struck out to end the streak.

Expos 8, Pirates 2

Neal Heaton pitched five innings, before spraining his right knee, to improve to 10-3.

Heaton, won for the seventh time in his last eight decisions by limiting the Pirates to a run and five hits. After Heaton left, Andy McGaffigan came on and pitched two innings before yielding to Jeff Parrett. Parrett pitched the final two innings for his first major league save.

Montreal Manager Buck Rodgers said Heaton is doubtful for his scheduled start this weekend against St. Louis, but Heaton didn't think he would have to miss a turn.

Reid Nichols and Mike Fitzgerald homered for the Expos.

Dodgers 3, Braves 2

Fernando Valenzuela pitched a five-hitter for his first victory since May 27 and Franklin Stubbs hit a three-run homer for Los Angeles.

Valenzuela, 6-5, struck out four and walked four en route to his fifth complete game, tying him with Pittsburgh's Rick Reuschel for the NL lead.

The victory snapped a personal three-game losing streak for Valenzuela and a three-game skid by the Dodgers. The left-hander improved his career record against the Braves at Dodger Stadium to 7-0.

"I threw hard and my arm feels good," Valenzuela said. "The most important thing is that I feel OK."

Reds 4 Giants 1

Ron Robinson allowed four hits in 6 1-3 innings, and then got some help from his bullpen buddies as Cincinnati beat San Francisco.

"I'm still not up to 100-percent starting capability, so I'm taking it inning by inning now," said Robinson, who had made 100 consecutive relief appearances before joining the Reds' starting rotation last week.

The Giants trailed 2-0 and had only three hits before Chili Davis led off the seventh with a single.

With one out, Frank Williams relieved Robinson. Pinch-hitter Harry Spilman was safe on a throwing error by shortstop Kurt Stillwell, and Rob Murphy came on to pitch. After Chris Speier delivered a run-scoring single, pinch-hitter Bob Melvin hit a sharp grounder to Stillwell, who started an inning-ending double play. John Franco pitched the final two innings for his 15th save.

Weather Hampers Wimbledon Field

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — The weather that played tricks on the players and fans at the Wimbledon tennis championships finally relented and allowed the tournament to start some 27 hours later than scheduled.

With the prospect of more rain to come, tournament organizers decided to move up the starting times on all courts beginning today to catch up on a backlog of some 70 matches already lost to the weather.

The action finally began Tuesday at the All-England championships, with 58 men's and women's singles matches completed.

But first there was a false start.

Boris Becker emerged to an ovation from the Center Court crowd to begin the defense of his singles title. Seven minutes later, with the warm-up almost complete, Becker and his Czechoslovak opponent, Karel Novacek, were walking off again as the rain returned.

Billie Jean King, the American who won a record 20 singles and doubles titles at Wimbledon between 1961 and 1979, said she found early tournament rain breaks beneficial.

"The start of a tournament is always hectic. It helps the top players to have some time off when they first arrive," King, here as a television commentator, said.

For more than three hours after the gates opened, the elements stayed on top. Whenever the tarpaulins were taken off and play set to begin, the rain resumed. When they were put back on again, it stopped.

The continuing weather problems prompted tournament officials to consider refunds for fans. It also sparked more debate on the pros and cons of whether the championships should be put back to later in the summer.

It was a good news-bad news day for those fans planning to come on future days.

Hornets Expected To Name Scheer As GM

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Former NBA general manager Carl Scheer, praised by colleagues for his experience and community involvement, will be named head of basketball operations for the Charlotte Hornets expansion team, according to a published report.

The Charlotte Observer reported in today's editions that Scheer would leave his job as commissioner of the Continental Basketball Association to take the job. Scheer would not confirm that he would be hired, and Hornets owner George Shinn could not be reached for comment, the newspaper said.

But it quoted Topeka Sizzlers president Bernie Glannon as saying that Scheer was leaving for Charlotte, and that the CBA was already looking for a replacement.

"He is very fond of your area there, and he speaks very fondly of your owner and the fans who have bought all those season tickets," Glannon told the newspaper.

Wade Boggs extended his hitting streak to 24 games, tops in the major leagues this year, with an RBI single for Boston's first run in the fifth.

Don Baylor ignited the rally in the sixth with his 14th homer. Burks homered off Bill Wegman, 6-7, to tied the score at 5-5. Jim Rice capped the Boston rally with a two-run single.

Steve Crawford, 3-2, the third Boston pitcher, was the winner although forced to retire after being hit on the pitching hand by Jim Paciorek's single with two out in the seventh. Calvin Schiraldi checked the Brewers the rest of the way for his third save.

The Brewers jumped to a 5-0 lead against starter Jeff Sellers, recalled Monday night from the minors.

White Sox 13, Mariners 3

Carlton Fisk and Harold Baines keyed a season-high 18-hit attack with home runs to lead Chicago.

Fisk hit a solo homer in the third inning and added an RBI single in the eighth, when Baines hit a two-run shot for the White Sox. The homer was the seventh for Fisk and the ninth for Baines.

Bill Long, 4-3, was the winner but needed help in the seventh inning. Scott Bankhead, 7-5, took the loss.

The White Sox trailed 2-1 before scoring three times in the second to take a lead they never lost. Kenny Williams singled in two runs and scored on a suicide squeeze by Ozzie Guillen.

Angels 8, Rangers 6

California's Devon White broke up Charlie Hough's no-hitter with a two-out homer in the sixth inning, his first of two in the game.

Wally Joyner had a solo homer in the sixth and a game-winning two-run double in the seventh for the Angels. Joyner broke a 4-4 tie with his double and Doug DeCinces followed with an RBI single to give the Angels a 7-4 lead.

White later capped California's scoring with his second homer of the game and 13th of the season in the ninth.

It was the second straight start in which Hough had flirted with a no-hitter. The last time out, he pitched no-hit ball for six innings against Oakland before Reggie Jackson led off the seventh with a double.

Royals 4, Athletics 0

Mark Gubicza allowed only three hits and George Brett knocked in three runs, two with a homer, for Kansas City.

Gubicza, 5-8, outdueled Oakland's Jose Rijo, 0-3. Gubicza retired the last 16 batters, matching his career best with the three-hitter and posting his fifth career shutout and first of the season.

Willie Wilson led off the game with a single and advanced to second on a passed ball. One out later, Brett hit an RBI double and then scored on Danny Tartabull's single for a 2-0 Kansas City lead.

Brett he hit his fourth homer in the ninth with Kevin Seitzer on base.

Twins 9, Indians 4

Minnesota's Gary Gaetti drove in four runs with a homer and double, and Mike Smithson won his first game since April 20.

Smithson, who was placed on the disabled list May 11 with an elbow injury, allowed six hits over 6 1-3 innings before George Frazier came on to earn his second save.

Frazier relieved with the bases loaded and two out to get the final out of the seventh. He replaced Keith Atherton, who had hit Joe Carter in the face with a pitch to load the bases. Carter, who was taken from the field on a stretcher, suffered a broken nose.

Tony Bernazard led off the inning with his second homer of the game, both shots into the upper deck in right field at the Metrodome.

Martin Blasts Jackson's Role

BALTIMORE (AP) — Billy Martin, the outspoken four-time manager of the New York Yankees, blasted the Rev. Jesse Jackson for his call for an affirmative action program in major league baseball's front offices.

"Politics don't belong in baseball and Jesse Jackson has no right to bring it in," Martin said.

Martin criticized the possible candidate for the 1988 Democratic presidential nomination at a book signing session Tuesday afternoon, and repeated his statements between innings of the Yankees game against the Batltimore Orioles, which he was announcing on television.

"All he talked about was blacks and Hispanics," Martin said of Jackson. "What about American Indians, Japanese, Chinese, females? Jesse Jackson should stick with religion and keep politics out of baseball. A man or woman should earn a right to be in baseball and not be given the right because of color or creed."

Jackson gave major league owners and operators until June 29 to work out a comprehensive plan to bring minorities into the front office or he said selected baseball teams could expect pickets, boycotts and other economic reprisals from civil-rights activists starting July 4.

Jackson's ultimatum came after former Los Angeles Dodgers vice-president Al Campanis had said on national televison that blacks lacked the "necessities" to handle management-level positions in baseball.

"The time for polite conversation and no results is over. We get along fine, but the issue is not attitude. It's the lack of a plan, the lack of commitment," Jackson said.

Welcome.....8
1st Federal.....5

Tucker Moore, Frank Alford and Jason Tetteston all had two hits apiece to lead Welcome past First Federal, 8-5, in a Tar Heel Little League baseball game Tuesday.

Welcome broke out to a 4-2 lead after three innings of play before pushing across three runs in the fourth to break out to a 7-2 advantage.

In the fourth, Moore and Alford opened with singles before both eventually scored on errors. After one out, Will Pleasants drew a walk. Jarrett Moose followed with a reach on an error. Another error allowed Pleasants to go to third and a wild pitch scored him to give Welcome a 7-2 bulge.

First Federal tried to rally, scoring three runs in the final two innings but it wasn't enough.

Wilbert Levett, Cole Yarborough, Joey Bowen and Maceo Wilkens had two hits apiece for First Federal.

Eveready.....3
Coca-Cola.....2

Edward Braddus doubled in Scott Burrows with the winning run in the top of the seventh to give Eveready a 3-2 win over Coca-Cola in North State Little League baseball action Tuesday.

The teams were tied 2-2 after four innings of play and it remained that way until the seventh when Matt Hagar started things off for Eveready with a single.

Burrows then hit into a fieder's choice, putting out Hagar. Braddus then came up and hit the game winner.

In the bottom of the final inning, Coke threatened.

With two outs, Adam Charlton doubled to put the go-ahead run at the plate but the next batter popped out to end the threat and the game.

Hays Lambert had two hits to lead both teams.

First Citizens blew by Garris-Evans, 14-4, in Babe Ruth League baseball action Tuesday.

First Citizens tallied five runs in the first to take an early 5-1 lead. Garris-Evans later pulled to within 6-4 after three innings, but First Citizens pushed across four runs in the fourth and four more in the fifth to end the game on the 10-run rule.

Hollis Gunn had an RBI single to key the fourth while J Cox and Gene Brown had RBI singles in the fifth.

Dante Mayo, Gunn and Mitchell Brown had two hits apiece to lead First Citizens.

Chad Mills, Matt Aldridge and Josh Potter had two hits apiece for First Citizens.

He was not injured. His dogs, who were riding in the reat of the truck when the accident occurred, returned to the vehicle for an examination of what was going on. (AP Laserphoto)

Navy Battleship May Go To Gulf

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Navy is seriously considering sending the battleship Missouri to the Persian Gulf to back up President Reagan's pledge to protect Kuwaiti tankers, Sen. John Glenn says.

The Ohio Democrat, a supporter of the proposal, said Tuesday that "if there was ever a situation in which the battleship would be useful, it's defending our interests in the Persian Gulf."

The Navy has refused to say publicly what ships it would send to the gulf, beyond telling Congress that three more warships would be added to the five-ship Mideast Task Force now in the gulf.

The Pentagon told Congress last week that it was considering using one of the three World War II-era battleships which have been recalled from mothballs and overhauled, but it did not name the vessel.

The Missouri and the New Jersey are based at Long Beach, Calif., while the Iowa is berthed at Norfolk, Va. A fourth battleship, the Wisconsin, is in drydock.

Congressional critics have questioned Reagan's plan to protect 11 Kuwaiti tankers by putting U.S. flags and captains aboard the ships and escorting them with Navy warships. Because Kuwaiti is an ally of Iraq, some fear the United States will be drawn into the 6½-year-old Iran-Iraq war.

Those worries increased after the May 17 Iraqi attack on the Navy frigate Stark, which killed 37 U.S. seamen. Iraq said the attack was a mistake, an explanation accepted by the United States.

"A battleship has the armor to not be damaged by the kind of hit the Stark took and those 16-inch guns would be perfect for shelling onshore targets," said Glenn, a member of the Armed Services Committee. The nine 16-inch guns can hurl a one-ton shell up to 25 miles.

The battleships have been used only once since they were brought out of mothballs after Reagan took office seven years ago. In December 1983, the New Jersey shelled targets near Beirut in support of the U.S. forces then ashore there. The U.S. troops were withdrawn two months later.

At the State Department, a senior U.S. official said Tuesday that Saudi Arabia has agreed to search for Iranian mines in the waters near Kuwait and also has designated hospitals to receive U.S. personnel in case of emergencies.

But the Saudis have turned down a U.S. request to permit American fighters to refuel at Saudi bases, according to the official, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Earlier, the Saudis had said they would add their U.S.-supplied early warning radar planes to the American effort to protect Navy and Kuwaiti ships. The four U.S. AWACS planes will search the northern half of the 600-mile-long waterway while the five Saudi AWACS will be used over the southern portion.

Mystery Creature Spooks Jerseyites

WOODBURY, N.J. (AP) — Mysterious roars and growls from the darkened woods have spurred residents to form search parties and police to try to trap what may be a wild animal on the loose in the Pine Barrens.

"They think this is just another one of those incidents like the Jersey Devil," said Carol Davis on Tuesday, referring to the mythical creature said to have stalked the Pinelands for generations.

She and her husband, Allen, have been afraid to let their daughters play outside their Pittsgrove Township home, 15 miles south of Woodbury, after they heard the sounds and saw some type of large animal in the woods outside their home last week.

"It's not safe. It shouldn't stay out there," she said.

Police and state wildlife officials are trying to track down the mysterious animal causing the noises, which only are heard at night.

"I personally don't know what it is," said state police Detective Sgt. William Prato. "We've had reports of a large black cat with a large black tail."

Prato said it's possible that a panther could be combing the densely wooded sections of Vineland and Pittsgrove Township near the Maurice River. But it's also possible the sounds disturbing residents since early June could be from wild dogs or domestic cats in heat, he said.

"We've never really had anything like this before," he said.

Vineland Police Capt. James A. Forcinito said investigators have found tracks, but are unable to determine if they are from dogs, foxes, raccoons or possibly bears.

Forcinito also said there have been three reports since January of household animals ripped apart in Vineland by an unknown creature. "People are speculating it's a (wild) cat because of the sightings," he said.

The Davises caught a quick look at the animal June 14 after hearing the sounds from a patch of woods behind their home.

"We walked into the woods and I saw something hit the ground after falling out of a tree," Mrs. Davis said. "Right after it fell and hit the ground, we heard the growls again."

They heard the sounds the next night, but not since.

Mrs. Davis said she and her husband have been ridiculed by some who say the mysterious animal is just a hoax. "We know what we heard," she said. "I know it was a wild cat. It was a roar."

Prato said a trap has been set and police are patrolling, but he's not pleased that some residents have banded together with informal search parties.

"I drove by the area last night and saw five or six people sitting on the river bank with binoculars," Prato said. "Anybody would be crazy to be out there unarmed."

Centuries-Old Seeds Sprouting

By PHILIP J. HILTS
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

Several 365-year-old seeds that sank with the Spanish treasure galleon Atocha have been brought to the surface and have sprouted, according to an archeologist working on the wreck.

It is an "extremely unusual occurrence for seeds that old to sprout and almost unheard of for seeds to be brought out of the sea and still sprout, said Dr. David Hall of the University of Florida.

Apparently the seeds — of a variety of weed — were preserved under dried, caked-on mud that was packed under four heavy planks of the hull of the wreck.

Corey Malcom, an archeologist working on contract with the Mel Fisher Maritime Heritage Society on the wreck, said that he recovered grape seeds, olive and apricot pits, and many other unidentified seeds from the wreck, which lay under 55 feet of water in the Caribbean near Key West, Fla.

Malcom said that when he sifted the seeds out of the mud and put them in fresh water, one of them sprouted. Eventually four of the seeds sprouted.

He planted all four sprouts. Two of them are still living. They have been tentatively identified as plants of a variety of weed called beggar's tick, or Bidens Alba. The weed is very common in the Caribbean. Florida's Hall made the preliminary identification from photographs, but said he won't be certain until the tiny leaves on the two-inch seedling grow out and the plants flower.

There have been other reports of seeds sprouting after hundreds or even thousands of years, said Dr. Raymond B. Taylorson, a plant physiologist at the Department of Agricuture's Beltsville, Md. research station.

Seeds commonly survive for five to 10 years under the right conditions, he said. Some with exceptionally tough outer shells can survive much longer than that.

Seeds of water lotus plants have germinated after more than a thousand years of burial in the mud, he said. A Canadian researcher has reported that he found seeds of the Arctic flower Lupines arcticus that sprouted and grew healthy plants after about 10,000 years of preservation in frozen silt.

But Taylorson said scientists would have to investigate thoroughly the germination of the seeds from the Spanish galleon to verify the report. It is rare for seeds to sprout after being immersed in salt water, which kills seeds that don't have exceptionally water-tight coats.

The Atocha sank in a hurricane 35 miles from Key West in 1622, and its treasure — more than $130 million in gold, silver and emeralds — was recovered in 1985 by treasure-hunter Mel Fisher and his salvage team.

Apologetic Murderer Executed

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A murderer who blamed his problems on drugs was executed by injection early today after apologizing to his family and friends for the trouble he caused them.

The execution of 28-year-old Elliot Rod Johnson took nearly an hour because his veins were not suitable for injection after years of drug abuse, state Attorney General Jim Mattox said.

"I'm very sorry for bringing all the hurt and pain to everyone who loved me so much," Johnson said in his final statement. "I hope all my friends find it in their hearts to forgive me.

"Mom, don't worry about me too much because I'm on my way home now. Just remember one thing, I love you, Mom."

He was pronounced dead at 12:55 a.m., and was the fourth person executed in Texas this year and the 24th since the state resumed executions in 1982.

Johnson was put to death for the 1982 shooting death of Beaumont jeweler Joseph Granado, 67. Granado, and a 45-year-old employee at his store, Arturo Melendez, were gunned down during a daytime robbery.

Granado's daughter, Rosie Moreno, was among his relatives who waited across the street from the Texas Department of Corrections Walls Unit to assure themselves the execution had been carried out.

"I felt I had to be here for this," she said. "I had to see justice is done. I don't want to be mean and ugly to him. I just want to see justice be done."

Johnson, a 10th-grade dropout who also dropped out of the Army because he couldn't cope with military life, unsuccessfully filed appeals to seek a fourth delay of his execution.

"I haven't killed anyone," Johnson said in his last interview two weeks ago. "I feel like I'm being railroaded."

Last Titan 2 Missile Goes To Scrap Pile As Era Ends

JUDSONIA, Ark. (AP) — The last of the nation's Titan 2 missiles has been removed from its silo, ending an era in U.S. military history.

The missile, which had been deactiviated last month, was removed Tuesday, said Capt. James T. Smith, spokesman for the 308th Strategic Missile Wing at Little Rock Air Force Base. Its booster was placed on a truck and was taken away.

The missiles, now considered obsolete, had served as a key ground-based element of the United State's nuclear triad since their deployment in the 1960s. The nation once had 54 of them poised underground in Arkansas, Kansas and Arizona. Each state had 18. They were tipped with the largest hydrogen bombs in the U.S. arsenal.

The Titan 2's were previously removed from their silos in Kansas and Arizona, Smith said.

The 103-foot missile stood vertically inside the concrete, 165-foot-deep silo. The top of the silo was shielded by a 740-ton steel-and-concrete lid that could be rolled away on railroad tracks.

The SALT II treaty requires that the silos be left open for six months so that Soviet photography from satellites can verify that the missiles have been removed. The control consoles also must be displayed above ground for several weeks after they have been removed from the control centers within the silos so that the Soviets will have an opportunity to satisfy themselves that the United States is dismantling the Titan 2 system.

The missile removed from its silo near this central Arkansas town Tuesday was part of the 308th Strategic Missile Wing.

On Sept. 19, 1980, a missile blew up in a silo near the Arkansas town of Damascus after a workman dropped a wrench, which struck and damaged the missile's thin metal skin during a renovation project. The blast killed one crewman, injured 21, destroyed the silo, and pitched the warhead harmlessly into a field about 200 feet away.

'Bad Boy' Sean Penn Is Jailed

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Hollywood bad boy Sean Penn has promised a judge to be a good boy as she sentenced him to two months in jail for violating probation by driving recklessly and brawling with another actor.

In sentencing the 26-year-old Penn on Tuesday for violating probation he received for an earlier fight, Municipal Court Commissioner Juelann Cathey also ordered Penn to undergo counseling for his violent behavior. "I think he's a talented individual, and I don't see any reason for this kind of conduct," she said.

Penn, who was ordered to start serving the sentence July 7, "has to learn that people are going to attempt to goad him into situations where he may react inappropriately," defense attorney Howard Weitzman said.

"He needs to and does understand that incidents like this are inescapable and he can control and will control them."

Penn had been on probation for beating a man he thought was trying to kiss Madonna, Penn's rock-star wife, at a nightclub. Ms. Cathey said he violated that probation by driving recklessly and by beating up another actor during filming of Penn's latest film, "Colors."

She reminded Penn that his probation requires him to obey all laws and asked, "You don't have any difficulty with that?"

"Not from now on, your honor," Penn replied.

"We don't expect this conduct to occur again," Weitzman said.

"Thank you for your consideration, your honor," Penn said at the close of the hearing.

He pleaded no contest to the Memorial Day reckless driving charge, which was reduced from drunken driving, said Deputy City Attorney Alice Hand.

Smithsonian Opens Superman Exhibition

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Man of Steel has come to Washington to mark a half-century of battling for truth, justice and the American way.

The Smithsonian Institution opens a yearlong exhibit today honoring Superman, the orphan from the Planet Krypton who has battled evil and inspired children for nearly 50 years.

Since making his first appearance in April 1938 in the June edition of Action Comics, issue No. 1, Superman has campaigned across the full spectrum of the American media.

It took only a year for him to expand to a newspaper comic strip, and 1940 saw the launch of the daily radio serial that ran for a decade starring Clayton "Bud" Collier.

Collier, playing both Superman and his alter-ego Clark Kent, the mild-mannered reporter for The Daily Planet, was just the first of a series of actors to carry the character forward.

Kirk Alyn took on the role in a series of movie serials from 1948 to 1950, but he turned down the role for television. So the TV series starred George Reeves from 1951 to 1957.

Most recently Christopher Reeve has starred in Superman movies, and the character also is appearing in weekend children's TV cartoons. History also records a hardback book on the life of Superman and even a Broadway musical.

Thus, the Superman exhibit is set in the entertainment section of the National Museum of American History, near Archie Bunker's easy chair and Judy Garland's red slippers.

Nearby is an exhibit honoring the millions of immigrants who helped build America, and to curator Carl Scheele that juxtaposition is just fine.

"Superman is like the other people who came to America ... he is the essence of the great immigrant tradition," Scheele said.

Oldest U.S. Veteran Has 103rd Birthday

GALVA, Ill. (AP) — Sam Leroy Mendel is pretty busy for a 103-year-old man — too busy, he says, to dwell on being the nation's oldest military veteran.

Mendel, a non-combat veteran of the Spanish-American War, just returned last week from a veterans group's meeting in Milwaukee and is scheduled to dine Thursday evening with Gov. James R. Thompson in Springfield. And Mendel plans to attend an annual veterans' convention in Florida in September.

On Tuesday, Mendel serenaded the estimated 200 people who came to his birthday party at the town park, which bears his name.

Mendel cried when the Chamber of Commerce presented him with a birthday cake — inscribed "Happy 103 Birthday Sam. Galva Loves You."

And he advised the crowd: "We should take care of our children. They're the coming generation."

Mendel took in his party from a lawn chair under a shade tree in the park. He told stories and shook well-wishers' hands and kissed babies' cheeks.

Korean Opposition Says Peace Talks Collapse

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Opposition leaders today said talks with President Chun Doo-hwan on halting violent nationwide protests have collapsed, and they vowed to step up their campaign to oust the government.

The Reunification Democratic Party issued a tough statement after party chief Kim Young-sam held three hours of talks with Chun today, the first meeting between the political foes. It followed relatively upbeat statements by the government that the meeting had produced an offer from Chun to resume debate on democratic reforms.

The meeting came amidst two weeks of violent street protests sparked by the government's announcement June 10 that Roh Tae-woo, head of the ruling Democratic Justice Party, would succeed Chun in February.

In southern Seoul today, about 1,000 workers, students and dissidents attempted to stage an anti-government demonstration outside a railway station. But some 2,000 riot police hurling tear gas grenades repeatedly attacked, sending protesters fleeing in terror.

Shouting "Down with the military dictatorship!," the protesters tried several times to reassemble, but each time were quickly dispersed by the overwhelming police show of force. The protesters did not try to resist, and dozens of them were seen being arrested by police.

"We condemn the current regime's scheme to prolong its power and declare strongly (our intention) to struggle together with the democratic forces for democratization in a peaceful and non-violent manner," Kim said in his statement.

Opposition leaders said they would go ahead with plans for major protests against the government on Friday. Radical students have vowed to march on the presidential palace.

The opposition launched a major drive June 10 to oust Chun and force democratic elections, triggering the worst political violence since Chun took power in 1980.

Roh met today with U.S. Assistant Secretary of State Gaston Sigur. Sigur later visited Kim Dae-jung, an opposition leader who has been under house arrest in Seoul since April 8.

Roh said he told Sigur the government was committed to a political solution and compromise.

A presidential official, who declined to be named, said Chun told Kim he was willing to reverse his April 13 decision suspending talks on revising the constitution.

"It would be good to resume immediately debate on constitutional revision and to work out an agreement that would allow democracy by agreeing on constitutional revision," Chun was quoted as telling Kim.

But Kim said after the talks that there had been no agreement and Chun did not appear to understand the extent of the crisis facing South Korea.

"We could not reach any outright agreement on my request for him to revoke the April 13 decision," Kim said.

Kim said Chun rejected a key opposition demand for a national referendum on any proposed future system of government. He said Chun insisted that any change should be approved by the National Assembly, which is dominated by the government.

The opposition is pressing for a presidential system based on a direct vote, while the government favors a parliamentary system.

Chun, a former army general, suspended debate on constitutional reforms April 13, saying it would have to be resumed after the 1988 Seoul Olympics. He said the decision was necessary to safeguard national stability and the staging of the games.

Kim indicated that he still expected the government to release Kim Dae-jong.

Hundreds of supporters gathered expectantly outside Kim Dae-jung's house at mid-afternoon. Scuffles broke out between police and the supporters when word spread of the apparent collapse in the talks, and police arrested about 20 men and dragged them into buses.

Kim also said he urged the president to release some 3,300 political detainees, including 300 still jailed after being arrested during the protests.

Chun agreed to consider releasing detainees, officials said.

Edwin Derwinski, U.S. undersecretary of state for security assistance, told reporters today that he had been assured by officials in Seoul that the military, which has played a prominent role in South Korean politics, would not intervene in the situation.

Defense Minister Lee Kee-baek met today with army commanders. Reports said the meeting focused on the political situation, but officials said it was to discuss readiness against communist North Korea.

There was relative calm in South Korea Tuesday for the first time in two weeks. However, about 20,000 students met at Yonsei University to shout anti-government slogans and plan Friday's protest. It was the largest rally local observers had seen in years.

Police announced Tuesday that 12,686 people had been detained since the protests began, but most were released.

Police said 5,493 officers were injured in the protests, which usually pitted demonstrators throwing stones and firebombs against police firing tear gas. There have been no official figures on civilian casualties, but they are believed to be higher than those suffered by police.

ARRIVES FOR TALKS — Kim Young-sam, leader of the main opposition Reunification Demcoratic Party, waves as he arrives today to meet with Kim Dae-jung in Seoul. He met later with President Chun Doo-twan in an apparently unsuccessful effort to end South Korean's political disturbances. (AP Laserphoto)

Germany To Try Hijack Suspect

BONN, West Germany (AP) — The Cabinet today rejected a U.S. request to extradite Mohammed Ali Hamadi and decided to try the Lebanese hijacking suspect in West Germany instead, a government source said.

Government sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the plan was presented to the Cabinet this morning by Justice Minister Hans Engelhard and supported by Chancellor Helmut Kohl. An official announcement of the decision was expected later today.

The United States was to be informed of the decision in a formal diplomatic note, one source said. A spokesman at the U.S. Embassy in Bonn could not be reached for comment.

"No one in the cabinet opposed this plan," the Bonn government source told the AP.

The source said Hamadi will be put on trial on charges of murder and air piracy as well as possession of dangerous explosives.

"You can assume that Mr. Hamadi will face murder, hijacking and explosive charges," he added.

U.S. Attorney General Edwin Meese III, during a one-day visit to Bonn Tuesday, told West German officials that Washington would accept the decision not to extradite Hamadi, the sources told The Associated Press.

Hamadi, a 23-year-old Shiite Moslem, is wanted in the United States on charges of air piracy and murder in connection with the June 1985 hijacking of a TWA airliner to Beirut.

Hamadi is accused of being one of four hijackers who killed U.S. Navy diver Robert Stethem of Waldorf, Md., and held 39 Americans prisoner for 17 days.

The government sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Meese had sought assurances from the interior and justice ministers that Hamadi would be tried for murder and air piracy in West Germany.

Meese was apparently concerned West German officials would try Hamadi on lesser charges out of fear for the safety of two German hostages held in Beirut, according to the sources.

Hamadi was arrested at the Frankfurt airport on Jan. 13, when a customs official discovered liquid explosives in his luggage.

An Interior Ministry source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Meese was given pledges on the tougher charges by both ministers.

"Meese said the Americans were worried that we would just charge Hamadi with explosives charges," the source said in a telephone interview. "We told him that would not happen, that he (Hamadi) would also be charged with air piracy and murder."

After the two-hour luncheon meeting with Meese, Justice Minister Hans Engelhard told reporters: "It is in our mutual interest that the more serious crimes are addressed."

Waldheim Leaving For Papal Audience

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Kurt Waldheim makes his first foreign trip as the Austrian head of state today, flying to Italy for a papal audience that has been criticized by Israel and Jewish groups.

The Austrian Embassy said Waldheim will arrive in Italy today and stay until Friday. But, apparently for security reasons, neither Austrian nor Italian authorities have given details of Waldheim's plans. He is to meet with Pope John Paul II on Thursday.

Waldheim, who served in the German army in the Balkans during World War II, has been accused of aiding in the deportation of thousands of Jews and partisans who later died in Nazi death camps.

North Carolina's mild climate and open expanses of farm land provide the perfect setting for breeding and training horses, according to supporters of a bill legalizing pari-mutuel horse and dog racing. If the bill survives committee and is approved by legislators and voters, bill sponsor Sen. Kenneth Royall said subsequent development of the horse industry could result in 4,000 new agriculture-related jobs, such as the one held by Kenneth Lamm, farm manager for Holly Ridge, Pitt's sole large-scale thoroughbred breeding facility.*

Against Odds

Enthusiasts Seek Support For N.C. Racing Bill

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

Ayden sportsman Ed Daughtry is part of a growing statewide network whose members are wagering that they can topple opposition to a bill legalizing pari-mutuel horse and dog racing in North Carolina.

But Daughtry and fellow racing supporters seeking grassroots' support for a plan to establish a track in the Traid have their work cut out, according to Sen. Tom Taft, D-Pitt County, who said in a recent telephone interview "odds are against the Senate favoring the bill this session."

Now waiting to be addressed by the state Ways and Means Committee, the bill was introduced in April by Committee Chairman Kenneth Royall Jr., D-Durham County.

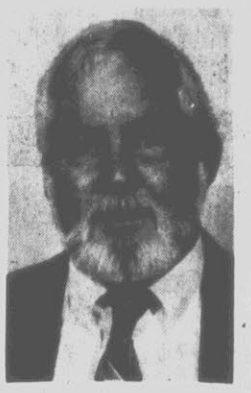
In a prepared statement delivered at the time of bill submission, Sen. Royall said if approved, track activity in the state would produce a minimum of 4,000 new jobs, impact the state economy to the tune of $260 million, increase the state's horse racing crop value to $500 million and create additional uses for 20,000 acres of state farmland.

"This is an agri-business program designed to promote and develop breeding, farmland enhancement and tourism," Royall said. "Eventually it will affect all sectors ... and blend into and contribute to the long-term direction of our state."

Experts say it would take 10 to 15 years for a track to begin to pay off.

While Royall contends that bill passage would be good for the state's foundering farm economy, Taft said opinion in the Senate remains "very mixed with many legislators from urban areas favoring the bill and those from rural areas tending to be opposed.

"Primarily they are opposed because the bill calls for legalization of gambling and, as everyone knows, there is a strong body of opposition to that in North Carolina."



Ed Daughtry

Randall Terry

Taft said, however, that Royall, Daughtry and members of the North Carolina Sports Association — who favor bill passage — have some valid points.

"It (the bill) would help rural areas and farmers by developing a new industry that would create substantial demand for pasture land for certain kinds of grains and related agricultural activities and that is the only reason I might consider it. But my personal feeling is that I'm opposed," Taft said.

The brainchild of Randall Terry Jr., horse owner and president of the High Point Enterprise newspaper, the bill specifically calls for establishment of a year-round, enclosed facility in the Piedmont with access to Charlotte, Greensboro and Raleigh population centers. The bill Terry wants to see approved also would prohibit location of another race track within 150 miles of the one he would like to see located in the Triad.

According to Terry, one tightly regulated track could secure North Carolina a place among the most attractive to outside owners, racers and tourists.

"It would be silly to put tracks in Raleigh, Charlotte and High Point and have the three compete against each other, each offering a smaller purse. That's minor league racing. It causes no economic development, attracts no horsemen and no tourists," he said.

Other bill components call for future construction of two "simulcast" centers, one on the coast and the other in the mountains, where tourists or enthusiasts could watch races on a screen as they occur.

All three facilities would be owned by North Carolina citizens with no more than 10 percent of stock being held by one person, company or corporation.

Under Terry's proposal approximately $84 of every $100 bet at the track would go to pay winning bettors. Of the remaining $16, one-third would go to winning horses' owners, the second third to the track and the remainder to pay the mortgage. When the mortgage on the facility matures, the final third would go to the state.

Terry, former Congressman Ike Andrews and former legislator-now lobbyist Paul Pulley are using such information to try and halt opposition rumbling in legislative ranks. Meanwhile, Daughtry and N.C. Sports Association representatives are trying to educate people at the county level so if the issue gets to the referendum stage voters will be informed. Supporters hope the matter will come up for a public vote in 1988 or 1990.

Before that time comes, Daughtry said local opposition must be handled and the key to that, he said, is to somehow make people see that moral objections to gambling — at least as applied to horse and dog racing — "are based on myth.

"The contention that crime and character decay go hand in hand with the sport is ill-founded. Racing is so tightly monitored that the possibility that there could be such involvement is slim," he said.

Bill Tripp, a Pitt County thoroughbred breeder with annual horse sales totaling between $300,000 and $400,000, said he, too, is concerned that bill opponents and that The Daily Reflector, which opposed the bill in an April 5 editorial, apparently associate bad elements of society with racing.

"Horse people are really super and to oppose the bill on the misguided notion that organized crime will come in is ludicrous. If they're going to oppose the bill they need to find something that holds more water than that."

Although Tripp said he is in favor of the bill and benefits its passage would bring to the North Carolina horse industry, he said he takes exception to a few points of the proposed legislation.

At the top of his list is concern that the state doesn't have the kind of population center needed to support a racing facility.

"In Alabama they're having a problem making attractive purses because there's just not the support," he said.

Robert Fisher, ombudsman for the Alabama attorney general's office, said in a telephone interview that attendance at the state's new track has been dropping, but he attributes the decrease to general economic softness and competition from a newer track in Louisiana, not to the lack of a population center from which to draw crowds.

In addition, Tripp said "a lot of us in the North Carolina Thoroughbred Breeders Association don't feel dog racing should be included because it is not a natural agricultural process."

According to Terry, dog racing is needed because research shows that the state can support only six months of horse racing. He said a winter greyhound season would contribute to the cost of the facility, the horse purse structure and help circumvent seasonal employment.

And while Alabama is having difficulty attracting numbers of racegoers needed to keep purses high enough to bring in the biggest names in horse racing, Fisher said the state has seen no concrete indication that crime has increased. "There's no information to support allegations that crime comes with the track," he said.

Alabama reports concerning crime are not unusual, according to Police Chief Ted Holmes.

Prior to joining the Greenville force, Holmes conducted a study for the Thoroughbred Racing Association and found a "very high level of integrity in terms of protections to ensure that races were not fixed and that the racing was fair and competitive.

"Most of the tracks that belong to the Thoroughbred Racing Association have a very high level of integrity and those where there are very strong state controls do so as well. The people that work at the tracks were real concerned about maintaining a high level of standards within the industry then and I'm sure they still are," he said.

Holmes conducted the study about 10 years ago.

Meanwhile, some remain convinced that gambling in any form is not in the best interest of North Carolinians.

Greenville evangelist Carl Etchison maintains that gambling tends to encourage types of activity that lend to an unwholesome environment.

"I can't say it would cause definite moral degredation, but everyone I've know that has been around that type of atmosphere has gotten very little if any good from it."

In addition, Etchison said he believes that "any type of get-rich-quick scheme appeals to the person who can afford it the least."

But it's the colors, the pagentry and beauty of the horses that draws most people to racing, according to Daughtry.

"Several years ago when we were vacationing in California, I took my family to a track and the last thing we were concerned with was betting," he said.

Master Artist Creates Realistic Environments

By PETER PEGNAM
The Tucson Citizen

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Mervin W. Larson has been deceiving people all over the country for years.

He's suckered them in at such places as the San Diego Zoo, Brooklyn Botanical Gardens, Coyote Point Museum in San Francisco and Tucson's plushest resorts. He'll hoodwink them at offices, malls, golf courses, restaurants, even hospitals.

He designs authentic-looking exhibits and environments, simulating rocks, trees, vines, coral — anything, all seemingly painstakingly real.

Larson, 57, began faking things when he joined the staff of the Arizona-Sonora Desert Museum in 1956. A zoologist with a master's degree in herpetology (reptiles), he started because he wanted to show living animals in their natural environment.

It's educational for people and "it's also nice for animals to have more in a cage than a square box," he said in a recent interview.

Thanks to Larson, museum visitors soon were looking at desert rodents at home inside replicas of their underground burrows. Later came a natural habitat enclosure for the mountain lion. A prehistoric cave and other exhibits eventually awed visitors.

As the projects increased, Larson became recognized as one of the people instrumental in building the museum into an internationally known facility.

After resigning as museum director in 1976, he started The Larson Co., designer and builder of exhibits and simulated environments for an impressive list of clients in North America and Europe.

Why don't they use the real thing?

Well, you can't grow a jungle habitat in the Bronx, or move Antarctic cliffs and snow to San Diego, or wait for Mother Nature to grow a 30-foot tree just where you want it. So you fake it.

How real is this stuff?

During a recent tour of his 8,800-square-foot facility here, Larson listed the merits of one particular fake rock.

"Hrr-umm," one of his workers interrupted. "That's the real one," he whispered to the boss.

The phony rock was there, too, beside the real one, which served as a model. There was no visual difference. The master forger was fooled by his own fakery.

Alligator Mascot Has Returned To Battleship Site

WILMINGTON — Charlie the Alligator, resident mascot of the USS North Carolina Battleship Memorial, has returned from winter hibernation. Although many unconfired sightings were reported earlier, Charlie recently made his first confirmed, official appearance for 1987.

He was spotted by T.J. and Lindsey Thomas, two youngsters from Hammond, Indiana who were visiting the ship with their parents.

Some speculate that it could be Charlene, Charlie Jr. or another cayman, since in recent years, several alligators have adopted the waters around the battleship as their summer home.

The Philantropist, the first abolition newspaper in the United States, was published in 1817 in Mt. Pleasant, Ohio.

Movie Filmed On Site In Nicaragua

By ANDREW SELSKY
Associated Press Writer

GRANADA, Nicaragua (AP) — On Nov. 26, 1856, an obscure American cutthroat and journalist burned this stately old city on the shore of Lake Nicaragua to the ground.

With his ragtag army of misplaced mercenaries, William Walker, a supporter of slavery from Tennessee, invaded Nicaragua, declared himself president and set about to convert this Central American country and its neighbors into a slave society.

Ed Harris (''The Right Stuff,''"Alamo Bay") portrays the American invader in the movie, "Walker," which is being filmed in Granada by maverick British director Alex Cox for Universal Pictures.

Cox, whose movies such as "Repo Man" and "Sid & Nancy" often have a surrealistic glow, has added visual jokes to the story about the "gringo malo" — the bad American. Here and there one sees contemporary props — a bullet saturated plane, a decaying auto — stuck in the 19th century story.

The $6 million project, with Edward Pressman as executive producer, is being filmed entirely in Nicaragua and is full of parallels between Walker's failed attempt to build an empire abroad and American foreign policy in the 20th century.

The New Wave director, who wears torn, faded jeans and has long, lank reddish hair, said he hopes the film will speak out against American interventionism and the Reagan administration's support of the Contra rebels.

Cox does not think his use of modern props in a movie set in the 19th century will distract from the seriousness of the project.

During one recent day's filming he used a Sandinista Air Force helicopter for a scene in which Walker and his men are evacuated from the ruins of a cathedral.

But the aircraft was late for day's shoot because it had been sent to the war zone to pick up soldiers of the leftist Sandinista government wounded in their fight against the U.S.-supported Contras.

"By the time we got it, it had blood stains in it," said Lorenzo O'Brien, one of the film's producers.

Harris portrayed a mercenary in the film, "Under Fire," which was about the revolution that brought the Sandinistas to power in Nicaragua.

It took several takes during a recent night shoot for Harris to deliver a line about quashing a rebellion in Central America. After flubbing the line, he slammed a desk with his fist several times, and, furious with himself, went on to repeat the line with the sort of menace that fit the scene and his character, Walker.

Marlee Matlin, this year's Academy Award-winning actress for her role in "Children of a Lesser God," portrays Walker's fiancee, who has a hearing impairment. Rene Auberjonois ("Big River") plays a soldier of fortune.

Much of the film is being shot in Granada, a lakefront city 30 miles south of Managua that boasts Spanish colonial architecture and was the site of some of the key events in Walker's adventures. The set is a natural for Cox, who had dirt thrown on top of the paved streets and had telephone and power lines taken down to convert part of the town into a 19th century city.

The hundreds of Nicaraguan extras are each making 6,000 cordobas a day, which is the equivalent of $1.

Maria Veronica Sandoval, a resident of Granada who was playing a fruit seller in the market, said she was not complaining about her wages as an extra because her average salary as a cook was 13,000 cordobas per month. The average monthly wage for Nicaraguans is 60,000 cordobas, at best.

Residents of Granada well know the story of William Walker. He spent a year in power until he was forced out of the country. He fled to the United States where Americans, with a fervor whipped up by the yellow journalism of the time, made him a hero.

He returned to Nicaragua a few years later to try to regain power but was captured by the British Navy and executed by a Honduran firing squad.

Jose Joaquin Cuadra, a gray-haired man who owns a printing shop, watched as American actors, many dressed in blue campaign shirts, brown slouch hats and knee-high boots, strode through a building being used as an interior set.

"My grandfather's cousin, Mateo Mayorga Cuadra, was executed by Walker's men," Cuadra said. "He is buried in my family's graveyard." The previous week, the execution had been recreated for the film.

"The character in the film is about a man who is self-obsessed," O'Brien said. "Rambo is the modern version of Walker."

The movie is scheduled for release in the fall.

Atahualpa, the last Inca king of Peru, was strangled in 1533 on the orders of Spanish conquistador Francisco Pizarro.

Sheppard Memorial Library has exciting reading opportunities this summer through the "Soar Into Reading" program, said Alvin Daily, the librarian at the Carver Branch.

Soar, derived from Summer of Adventurous Reading, is a North Carolina Public Libary-sponsored program from June 15 to August 14, he said. During that time, children read as many books as they can and earn a stamp on their reading record for each book they read.

The stamps are in the shape of Orville the flying pig to promote a theme centered around animals and the barnyard.

The books are divided into easy books and juvenile books. The children receive one pig stamp for each easy book read and two stamps for each juvenile book read, and they are rewarded for their efforts during a picnic at the end of the program.

Reading 30 easy books or 15 juvenile books earns a certificate, a balloon and a button during the picnic, Daily said. But, "They can try to double that."

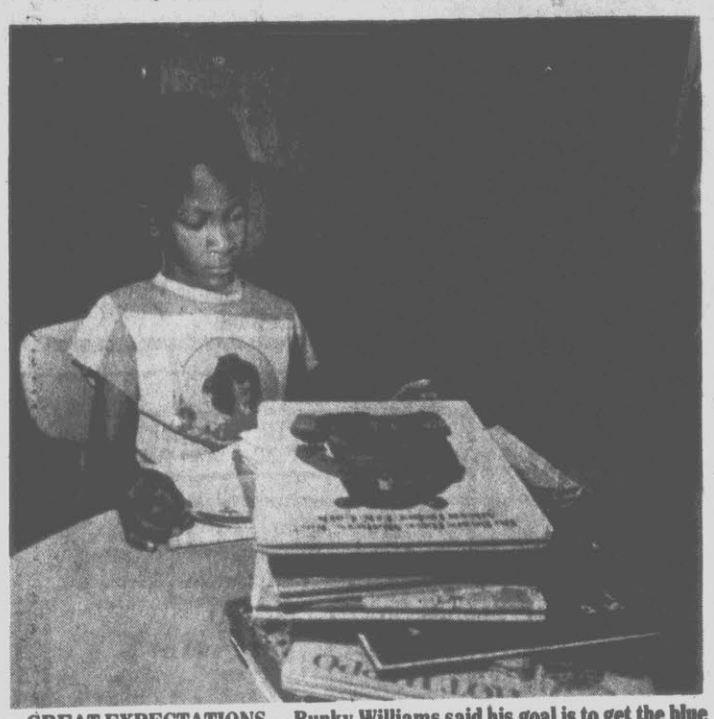
In doubling those figures, their extra effort earns a blue ribbon and a bookmark in addition to the other items.

The "Superstar" readers complete an activity sheet of activities such as crossword puzzles and word searches. "It's all reading related," he said.

Shamika Green, an eight-year-old student at Elmhurst School, said she already has read 16 easy books. Her goal is 80. "It's fun," she said.

Bunky Williams, a seven-year-old student at Sadie Saulter School said "I've read 10 so far." He said he is reading easy books about animals, while Andre Speight, an eight-year-old student at Elmhurst School, has read about 15 easy books, including "Hector Goes To School."

The reading program also includes activites scheduled in Sheppard and its branches such as story hours, the Summer Fun Club, Popcorn Theater, afternoon specials and Showtime.



GREAT EXPECTATIONS — Bunky Williams said his goal is to get the blue ribbon by reading 60 easy books in the Soar Into Reading program at Sheppard Memorial Library and its branches. After three days of reading, Bunky said he had read 10 books in Carver Library. (Reflector Photos by Cliff Hollis).

NCSA Wins Top Award

WINSTON-SALEM — A U.S. exhibit coordinated by the North Carolina School of the Arts, Winston-Salem, for the Prague, Czechoslaovakia, Quadrennial of Scenic and Costume Design 1987 has won the top prize of the international competition.

The North Carolina exhibit won the grand prize of the competition: the Golden Trigue, a gold statue of three horses pulling a chariot. The award is presented to the best overall national exhibit, based on the recommendation of an international jury of designers, directors and other theater professionals.

"We're thrilled that the United States won the grand prize and that we were able to contribute to the success of the exhibit," said John Sneden, dean of the School of Design and Production at the North Carolina School of the arts.

The school, one of four art schools which comprise the NCSA, built and provided technical direction for the U.S. exhibit at the request of the United States Institute for Theater Technology.

This year, more than 30 countries, including the Soviet Union, Australia, France, Great Britain, Mexico and the People's Republic of China sent exhibits and delegations of the artist to the event, which opened June 8 and will close Sunday.

French Group To Perform In Durham

DURHAM — The Compagnie de danse L'Esquisse will again be a special guest performing dance group in the summer season of the American Dance Festival in Durham.

The eight-member group will perform Thursday through Saturday at Page Auditorium on the Duke University campus.

Performances on all three nights will begin at 8 p.m. Tickets are priced at $10, $14 and $17. For details and reservations, call 684-4059.

Mlle. Joelle Bouvier and Regis Obadia, dancers and choreographers for the ensemble, have emerged from France's modern dance to direct, choreograph and perform with L'Equisse, a leading French company.

The name L'Equisse means sketch or rough drawing and reflects the simplistic and primitive quality of the work of the two.

Two evening length pieces to be performed at ADF are "Le Royaume Millenaire" (The Thousand Year Kingdom), on Thursday and Friday evenings, and "Vertee," to be performed Saturday evening.

The company has toured extensively throughout Europe and has returned to the U.S. especially for the appearance at the American Dance Festival.

When the oil crisis hit the world, Brazil was the only nation to switch successfully from gasoline to a renewable resource — sugar-cane based ethanol — for automobile fuel, says National Geographic.

Former 'Men At Work' Lead Singer Returns To Gaelic Roots

By LARRY McSHANE
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The hit singles are missing, and so are the 20,000 fans who filled arenas from coast to coast. But Colin James Hay is just as happy as a man at work as he was with Men At Work.

"In a lot of ways, it felt quite natural to bow out of the band and be a solo person," the former lead singer for the late Australian pop band said shortly after releasing his solo debut album, "Looking for Jack."

Hay, whose pop-eyed visage dominated Music Television when Men At Work arrived on these shores in 1981, harbors no illusions his one-man act will take off like his five-piece band did: five Top 40 hits, a Grammy for best new artist, more than 7 million albums sold in two years.

"I'd be in serious trouble if I thought that was going to happen," he said, his Australian accent intact despite a recent relocation to New York City. "That comes along once in a decade, I think, or maybe even less than that. Anybody who's sold millions of records — that's a phenomenon."

Hay's record bears out his comments. The voice is still there, but there's little of the recognizable Men At Work music, such as "Who Can It Be Now?" or "Overkill."

"I wanted to put out something that was a little bit surprising, a little bit more, 'Who's that? I recognize that voice, but ...,'" Hay said in explaining the record's evolution.

But before the album came together, Men At Work came apart.

"There was a split originally in '84, when we split with the rhythm section. There were two camps really — bullets at 50 paces and all that rubbish you hope won't happen to you but usually does if you're a successful band," Hay said.

"I thought, 'What should I do next? I guess I'll keep going.' I kept going, playing Australia and Japan, and out of that seemingly negative situation, the rhythm section developed," Hay recalled. "That was the best thing about the tour: When it was over, I knew what to do next."

Ham took some time off ("got drunk," he says with a smile) and went back into the studio with that rhythm section — drummer Chad Wackerman and bassist Jeremy Alsop.

"The thread I wanted to create through the whole record was the three people who played the songs. So we cut all the tracks live — basically, just drums, bass and guitar," Hay said.

Part of the record's different sound is a return to his Gaelic roots, Hay said. It turns out the man who sang the praises of the land Down Under is a native of Scotland.

"I was born in Scotland, so that influence carries back quite a long way," said Hay. "Just what it is to be Scottish is something indefineable. At the risk of sounding immodest, Scotland produces great Scotch and good singers."

When Hay and producer Robin Millar (Sade, Big Country) were nearly done with the solo album, the singer says, there was a feeling that he now had an album now, but wasn't quite satisfied.

Hay, who wanted one more song to fill out the album, endured a frustrating stretch where he couldn't come up with a tune. But that satisfied feeling — and the album's title track — finally came after a Simple Minds concert in Los Angeles when Hay met actor Jack Nicholson backstage.

"I went up and said, 'Hi, I'm Colin Hay, I used to sing with a band called Men At Work, and I'm a great big fan of yours.' And he said, 'I can't hear you,'" Hay recalled in a barely passable Nicholson impression.

"I immediately got embarrassed and ran off, and I was talking to these two girls, and he came up and said to me, 'I'm a great big fan of yours too.' So now, the whole night, I keep looking over this girl's shoulder, which is kind of rude, and she said, 'What are you doing?'

"And I said, 'I'm sorry, you'll have to excuse me, I'm just looking for Jack.' And she said, 'Yeah, everybody's always looking for Jack.' And I immediately came home and it all came out from that spark."

Anita Feldman Selected For Dance Grant

DURHAM — Anita Feldman has been selected from among 70 applicants to receive the 1987 Metropolitan Life/American Dance Festival Choreography Commission for Young Talent.

Extending over a three-year period, the $25,000 fellowship was established in 1985 to help the American Dance Festival in its continuing effort to present new works by emerging choreographers.

Pooh Kaye was the 1985 recipient and Robert Kovich received the fellowship in 1986.

Ms. Feldman, in collaboration with Jalalu-Kalvert Nelson will present a new work on July 6-7 as part of the ADF's Young Choreogaphers and Composers Program.

She is the recipient of the New York Foundation for he Arts Choreography Fellowship and the 1987 National Endowment of the Arts Choreographer's Fellowship. Ms. Feldman has performed extensively in California and New York since 1984 and toured Japan with musican Gary Schall in 1986.

12th Season For 'The Liberty Cart'

KENANSVILLE — Entering the 12th season of "The Liberty Cart," the Duplin Outdoor Drama Society announces "Carolina Ghosts" as the summer alternate show and plans a Sunday afternoon children's production, all this summer at the William R. Kenan Jr. Memorial Ampitheater.

"The Liberty Cart," Randolph Umberger's drama about the development of eastern North Carolina, will be performed July 17-August 29 each Thursday, Friday and Saturday at 8:15 p.m. The children's show begins August 9 playing three consecutive Sunday afternoons.

"Carolina Ghosts" is an original production of this state's legends, folklore and apparitions. The stories feature some of the state's ghostly legends as well as other less known mysteries.

Camping hook-ups adjacent to the theater in a shaded area are available. The hook-ups offer both water and electricity.

For more information on the summer productions or overnight camping, phone 296-0721, or write: The Liberty Cart, P.O. Box 470, Kenansville, N.C. 28349.

Banyan trees usually sprout from seeds that animals have dropped into cracks in the branches of other trees, and their roots grow down from the host branches and into the ground, says National Geographic World.

FOCUS

Heal Thyself

Medical research has come a long way in the past two centuries. George Washington's advice to a friend with a cold was to let the illness "go as it came." Such advice was probably preferable to many home remedies of the 1800s, such as one for worms in children that warned, "If the worms are NOT knotted in the stomach, it will be a sure cure. If the worms ARE knotted in the stomach, it will kill the child."

DO YOU KNOW — After what ancient Greek was the famous oath for physicians named?

Horoscope

From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY June 25

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The daytime is good for getting a new slant on old projects, and finding opportunities for advancement. Home and study matters can be wound up in the evening.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Make visits to find backing for a project you have in mind. Enjoy your family at home this evening.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Good fortune is available today, so look around. Consult with an elder on how to proceed.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Contact supporters and follow through with your plans. Advice form a clever friend should be taken seriously.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Armed with the facts, you can complete a promise. Concentrate on civic and private matters.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): Needed purchases can be made at a new place with a lively friend. Fast talking gets the point across today.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Seen from a different angle, you may want to dump a business matter. Improve your relationship with a friend.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): A new contact can give you a real boost toward success. Keep your agreements, but seek out more information.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Hard work finally pays off. Improve your business relations all around by keeping a healthy attitude.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Pay attention to your recreational life, especially where higher-ups are concerned, and do favors if asked today.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Choose a new angle in your work to make life easier, and pick up on an old hobby you've always enjoyed.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Get organized at home with your correspondence. Repay long-owed social obligations this evening.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Home ties can make your financial situation much brighter. Make only necessary visits in the evening.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he, or she, will be full of life and energy, but will need help in channeling this quality in the right direction. With a very fine education, success could be phenomenal. Your child will be very strongly attached to home and family, bringing much joy there for all.

Finding a disastrous trump break can be unpleasant. But instead of moping about your fate, you would do better to look for a way of overcoming it.

East's four-heart preempt was based on the vulnerability and his distribution. North's takeout double was routine, and he had no interest in moving further when South simply bid four spades, since his king of hearts was a doubtful asset. West's decision to defend, even with five trumps, is debatable.

West led a heart and declarer ruffed the second round. When the king of trumps revealed the bad break, declarer realized he would have to bring in the club suit without loss—besides the heart trick he had already lost, he was faced with an unavoidable loser in both trumps and diamonds. So at trick three declarer led the jack of clubs. East covered with the queen and dummy's king won.

The king of diamonds lost to West's ace and a trump was returned, but declarer was in control. He won the jack in hand and started to run clubs. West ruffed the fourth round and declarer took care to discard a diamond from the table rather than overruff. Declarer ruffed the heart return in hand and led his last club. If West ruffed, declarer would overruff in dummy, draw the last trump and score a high diamond for the contract; if West did not ruff, dummy's last diamond would be discarded and the high trumps would take the last tricks.

It might seem that West can beat the contract by refusing to cover the jack of clubs. But declarer can get back to the same position as above by cashing his high clubs before he touches the diamond suit.

CREAMY DIP — A generous mound of Creamy Asparagus Dip is a delicately flavored addition to a fresh summer vegetable tray. This dip can be whipped up in no time with the help of creamy natural soups.

Buffets Serve Needs Of Fast-Paced Adults

Today's active adults are eating leaner and greener. The buzz words for the cooks of the '80s are "grazing" and "spa cuisine," both based on smaller portions and more healthful eating. They also support the need to eat fast but well.

A recent survey of working women found that most objected to spending more than 30 minutes preparing a meal.

Here are three spectacular recipe ideas that will help you serve a trendy and quick buffet brunch for family or friends. The secret to these recipes is condensed creamy natural soup, a convenient ingredient that not only adds flavor, but when prepared with milk, contributes 10 to 15 percent of the U.S. RDA for calcium.

Including a line-up of fresh, crisp vegetables in your diet is essential. Vegetables are one of today's most popular foods and for good reason. The New England Journal of Medicine recently concluded that eating an extra helping of vegetables each day could cut the risk of stroke nearly in half by increasing the body's supply of potassium. A tasty way to enjoy fresh veggies is with Creamy Asparagus Dip, a satisfying mixture made from condensed creamy natural asparagus soup. Blend the soup with mushrooms, chopped green onions, sour cream and fresh dill for a sensational party dish or everyday snack dip.

The next recipe typifies today's lighter style of eating. Mini Croissant Brunch Sandwiches feature lean slices of smoked turkey on mini-croissants, topped with egg sauce made from creamy natural broccoli soup. This "made in under 30 minutes" meal is a feast for the eyes that will make guests think you've spent hours in the kitchen.

Preparing a quiche is easy when you rely on condensed creamy natural spinach soup. Spinach and Crab quiche makes a great hors d'oeuvre or a main course. It combines crab meat and cheese (protein plus calcium!) with a tasty custard made from condensed creamy natural soup, light cream, eggs and a dash of horseradish. For calorie-conscious cooks, use skim mild or plain yogurt in place of light cream.

Armed with these fast and delicious recipes you're sure to delight health conscious guests and family members.

Dieters Do Have Some No-Fat Dessert Choices

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

Do elegant, no-fat, delicious desserts exists? Yes.

Minted grapefruit from the American Heart Association Cookbook, Fourth Edition, provides the perfect feast for dieting dessert lovers with about 75 calories per serving.

The more daring dieter may try Ricotta-Yogurt Pudding With Liqueur and Fruit adapted for Lighten Up Quantity Recipe Cards, AHA. This 155 calorie per serving dessert takes about five minutes to prepare and can be stored in the refrigerator for several days.

These dessert recipes and the bread recipes listed below were among those distributed at a food writer's forum in Chape Hill, "Fast Track Eating — Setting the Pace for Good Nutrition."

Sources for the recipes are the American Heart Association Cookbook, Culinary Hearts Kitchen Cooking Course, Culinary Hearts Kitchen Cooking Course Low Sodium Supplement and Lighten Up Quantity Recipe Cards.

Try the dessert and bread recipes listed below.

MINTED GRAPEFRUIT

2 fresh grapefruits or canned or frozen grapefruit sections
1 1/2 ounces creme de menthe
Mint sprigs

If fresh grapefruit is used, cut in halves and loosen sections with a grapefruit knife, leaving them in the shells. Or if canned or frozen grapefruit is used, pile pieces into dessert dishes. Pour creme de menthe over top and garnish with mint sprigs. Yield: 4 servings with 75 calories per serving.

RICOTTA-YOGURT PUDDING WITH LIQUEUR AND FRUIT

1 3/4 (15-ounce container) cups part skim rocotta
1/4 cup low-fat yogurt
3 tablespoons sugar
1 to 2 tablespoons fruit liqueur
1 pint sliced frozen or fresh strawberries or other fruit

In a medium bowl, mix ricotta, yogurt, sugar and liqueur together by hand, enough to break up the curd. Do not use mixer or food processor as mixture becomes to liquid. Place in individual serving dessert dishes. Top with strawberries or other fresh or frozen fruit and serve.

If desired, liqueur can be mixed with the fruit topping instead. For a non-alcoholic pudding, eliminate liqueur entirely.

MASTER MIX

3/4 cup baking powder
3 tablespoons salt
2 tablespoons cream of tartar
2 1/2 cups nonfat dry milk powder
1/2 cup of sugar
10 cups all-purpose flour
10 cups whole wheat flour
2 pounds corn oil margarine

Stir baking powder, salt, cream of tartar, dry milk and sugar into unsifted flour and mix. Cut in shortening till it resembles course cornmeal. Place in canister with tight lid; store in refrigerator. Yield: 28 cups.

MASTER MIX BISCUITS

3 cups master mix
3/4 cup water

Blend water and mix and knead on a lightly floured board, till slightly elastic. Roll out to a 1/4-inch thickness, cut dough with biscuit cutter. Bake at 450 degrees for 10 minutes. Yield: 12 biscuits with 144 calories per serving.

MASTER MIX MUFFINS

1 egg (or 2 egg whites or egg substitute equivalent to 1 egg)
1 cup water
2 tablespoons sugar
3 cups master mix

Mix egg and water and blend with sugar and master mix. Bake in greased muffin tin for 20 minutes at 350 degrees.

QUICK BREADS: DRIED FRUIT (Apricot, Prune or Date Bread)

2 cups diced and pitted prunes, dates or dried apricots
1/2 cup sherry
3 eggs, beaten
2/3 cup skim milk
2 1/2 cups all-purpose flour
1 1/2 cups whole wheat flour

Chicken Most Like It Fried

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

It can boiled and baked, but most folks like it fried.

Chicken, defined by Webster as the "common domestic fowl," is devoured during banquets, receptions and Sunday dinner. It even is available in "fast food" form.

Studies by the National Broiler Council discovered a wide variety of regional favorite ways to prepare chicken — from oriental stir fry in the West, to chicken'n dumplings in the Northwest, to country captain in the south, to chicken pot pie in the Northeast. But, the national favorite was, of course, fried chicken.

The South and fried chicken seem to go together, but the Viennese are thought to have fried chicken first. They called their fried chicken dish Wiener Backendl.

Frying chicken may be though of as an art to old-time cooks. Some of today's cooks don't seem to have the knack. For a step in the right direction, try these suggestions from Mike Harrison, who oversees the frying of about 220,000 chickens a day for Banquet in Batesville, Ark.

•Use only vegetable oil. It is more healthful than animal fats, and the lower fatty acid level causes the chicken to taste better.

•The quality of oil is important. When frying a lot of chicken, change the oil frequently to keep the fatty acid level down.

•Don't cook the white meat as long as the dark. White meat parts are done at an internal temperature of 165 to 170 degrees. Dark meat needs to cook to 180 degrees. If white meat is cooked as long as dark, it probably will be overcooked and, therefore, dry and tough.

Kathy Kolasa

Ph.D., ECU Dept. Family Medicine

Q. Thank you for the information about the n-3 fatty acid content of local fish, but you didn't tell us about shrimp and other shellfish. Mr. F.C.L.

Sorry. Few analyses of the 3-fatty acids in shellfish have been done. So, these figures are provisional. Brown shrimp has 300 milligrams per 3.5-ounce serving. White shrimp has slightly more. Blue crabs are similar with 400 milligrams per 3.5 ounces. A typical fish oil supplement has 0.5 milligrams per capsule. Shrimp do have more cholesterol than most shellfish, but the brown shrimp has much less than white shrimp.

Dear Readers: My husband said my earlier responses to Mr. F.C.L. about n-3 fatty acids and to Mrs. M.M. about olive oil were too complicated. I assured Patrick it's not difficult information but a new vocabulary he doesn't use daily. Since fat is both an enjoyable food group and troublesome to the health of eastern North Carolinians, I'll provide some columns to describe fats.

Fats are nutrients the body uses for energy or calories. They provide wonderful flavors and cooking mediums such as frying. In foods, fats are visible in items such as lard, butter, margarine, meat drippings and salad dressings. We enjoy these flavors, but we can easily identify these fats and control how much visible fat we eat.

The invisible fats are those that are difficult to determine. They are in foods such as milk, cheese and potato chips. The one thing all fats have in common is the calories they give your body to use — 250 calories for each ounce of pure fat we eat. Eastern North Carolinians who get about half of their daily calories from both visible and invisible fats have trouble keeping their desirable body weight.

Although fats give the same calories, the building blocks or fatty acids that make up fats vary a great deal. Our risks of heart disease or cancer change with the kinds of fatty acids we eat. The vocabulary that describes these fats come from food chemistry.

Fats are saturated (filled with hydrogen) or unsaturated (less filled with hydrogen). The unsaturated fats are either polyunsaturated or monounsaturated. Each food fat such as butter, lard, or corn oil has some amount of all three types of fatty acids. The American Heart Association recommends we balance the amounts of these three types of fatty acids we eat during the day.

Locally, we eat more unsaturated fats, which are linked with higher risks for heart disease. But, we don't want to cut out all unsaturated fats. Eating too much polyunsaturated fats in linked to higher cancer risks. Food labels show the amounts of polyunsaturated or monounsaturated fats in them.

This has nothing to do with cholesterol in food. Plants and animal foods both have saturated and unsaturated fats. Only animal foods have cholesterol.

Each saturated and unsaturated fat is not made up the same way. The n-3 fatty acids in fish oil is an example of the even smaller units that make up saturated and unsaturated fatty acids. Their names also come from their chemical structure.

Recently, researchers showed the amounts and kinds of the smaller units of fatty acids we eat might lower blood cholesterol levels, and perhaps reduce inflammation in arthritis. Foods vary in the amounts of these units. For example, fish oils have more n-3 fatty acids than corn oil, which has more n-6 fatty acid. This type of information is not on food labels. Some of it may be found in food composition labels, and the information is used in some food ads.

Another time, I'll discuss other aspects of fats such as cholesterol, HDLs and LDLs. Remember, eating less fat will help us control or lose weight, and controlling our weight helps reduce risks for some diseases and makes me feel good about ourselves.

Eggs Top Lists For Campsite Cooking

It seems that every year more Americans answer the call of the wild and choose to explore our vast country at its grassroots level by way of tent or RV camping. It you're one of those adventurous souls, you probably know firsthand that roughing it builds hearty appetites and that cooking out-of-doors is a memorable part of the camping experience.

To ensure that meals are satisfying, nutritious and fun, it's important to plan ahead. Before you leave on a wilderness trek, make note of you family's favorite dishes that can be readily adapted for campsite preparation. Start lists of the nonperishable canned and packaged foods that you'll need. Some staples such as biscuit mix, dry milk and coffee can be stored in rigid plastic containers or flexible, sealable bags for the trip. Muli-purpose seasonings such as seasoned salt, pepper and onion powder won't take up much room but will add lots of flavor. Plan to bring along a sturdy portable cooler so you can purchase fresh fruits, vegetables, other perishables and ice en route.

Many trailblazers put versatile eggs at the top of the "must bring" list. They know that you can take eggs, a campfire or camp stove, just about anything on your portable larder and a dash of imagination and create a memorable meal at any time of day. For instance, eggs scrambled with sliced potatoes (canned or baked in the previous night's fire), onions, a bit of hard salami and pasteurized process cheese might make it easier to rise and shine! Or,

BACKWOODS SUPPER — A mixture of eggs, milk, cheese, chives and pepper poured over sausage and cooked until the eggs are set provides a hearty supper that makes outdoor cooking a breeze.

Cajun Craze Rages On In Food Industry

By CAROLE SUGARMAN
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

If a food manufacturer were to formulate a product that combined all the latest trends, it would come up with a nugget-sized, Cajun-flavored ice cream bar. Available with aspartame, Billie Jo's Hot 'N Cold Bite DeLites would be caffeine free and easily defrosted in a microwave.

That's the encapsulated word from the Food Marketing Institute convention, held in early May at Chicago's McCormick Place.

Amid a 5-foot-10 human avocado, Dennis Conner and a Colgate toothpaste robot, the nation's supermarketers browsed, munched and cut deals with the nation's food manufacturers along more than 7½ miles of exhibit space.

Many trends popularized by restaurants eventually trickle down to mass food production and middle America. The Cajun craze is no exception.

"Get ready for an onslaught," said Martin Friedman, editor of New Product News, a publication that tracks new products.

Port Clyde Foods is producing an Atlantic herring packed in Louisiana hot sauce and Delta Pride makes a frozen blackened catfish. In dinners, Kraft is test marketing Makin' Cajun, a line of frozen entrees. As for snacks, The Hershey Import Co. is selling a Cajun trail mix, and Frito-Lay has introduced Cajun-flavored Ruffles potato chips. Cajun spices are catching fire everywhere. In fact, according to exhibitor Robert Weiner of Tone Brothers, a Des Moines spice company, when the firm introduced its full line of Cajun spices in a supermarket in Mankato, Minn., they "completely sold out in a week."

You'll have innumerable opportunities to use those Cajun spices on your microwave popcorn, as Planters Peanuts and Jiffy Popcorn have both entered the burgeoning category.

Jiffy's microwave version only takes 30 seconds less than its stovetop product, but in the time you'll save, you might be able to rent a movie in your supermarket from Vend-A-Video, a computer that dispenses video cassettes in half a minute.

Alternatively, you could be cooking Bridgford's new microwave corn bread, Yohay Baking's microwave Bucket of Fudge or Peerless's microwave peanut brittle. "If you asked 100 top food experts to come up with 100 top microwaveable food products, none would come up with peanut brittle," Friedman said.

Everything is getting quicker. First there were fully cooked chickens; now Maple Leaf is selling fully cooked ducks. (Fully cooked quail can't be far behind.)

You don't even have to wait to boil water anymore — Reames is selling a pre-cooked frozen pasta that you just defrost in cold water. And suburbia will have to adopt the two-toaster mentality to make room for Ore Ida's Toaster Hash Browns.

Quick food means more time for consumers to jog and then splurge on lush ice-cream novelties. Take note: there are plenty coming this summer.

Haagen Dazs introduced its new Special Additions line of ice-cream flavors, which features Chocolate Chocolate Mint, Mocha Double Nut and Macadamia Brittle.

Now that Dove Bar has been bought by M&M-Mars Bars, the firm has changed the name of Dove DeLites to Forever Yours, a former candy bar owned by the parent company.

Practically every ice cream company has a new upscale ice cream bar — except, that is, for Ben & Jerry's, whose latest introduction is a new flavor, Cherry Garcia.

Ben Cohen's favorite flavor — mocha walnut — has been discontinued, according to Jerry Greenfield, who was manning his company's stand. But then again, "Ben's tastes are different than the rest of humanity. His nose is always stuffed up," Greenfield joked, attributing Cohen's condition to "too much nasal spray."

Now that Betty Crocker has turned yuppie, Nestle must have gotten the go-ahead to update its famous Toll House chocolate-chip-cookie recipe. So the company came out with Toll House frozen cookie dough. The cookies come already sliced; all you do is bake them.

Other companies are jumping on the frozen-cookie bandwagon, including Neal's Cookies, a Texas company, and Grandma Gebhard's, a Minnesota firm.

Nabisco has yet to introduce a frozen cookie dough for Oreos, but the cookies are available covered with fudge. And now there's Oreo Big Stuff, pancake-sized cookies that come eight to a pack.

Big is not really beautiful these days, however. The buzzword is bite-sized.

Rondos, Dove Bar's new ice-cream novelty, are calculated to be consumed in approximately two bites, according to Louis Yaseem, co-president of the company.

Keebler's Elfin snack breads, which look like loaves for Munchkins, mark the company's entry into the frozen food department. Similarly, Sara Lee is introducing snack-sized pound cakes.

The company is also competing with T.J. Cinnamon's — the chain store hitting the country with homemade cinnamon rolls — by introducing a frozen microwave version. During the development of his company's product, said Richard Seban of Sara Lee, "we probably shipped more T.J. Cinnamon rolls to Sara Lee than were sent to most cities."

To wash all this down, 7-Up rolled out its new diet and regular Cherry 7-Up, and Riunite was offering samples of its new Sunny Apple fruit-flavored wine beverage. "The next flavor is rutabaga," said Dick Brown of Riunite.

The next wave of supermarket technology is checkerless check-outs, pioneered by a company called CheckRobot and being tested in two Kroger supermarkets in Atlanta.

Shoppers scan their own merchandise, the items proceed down the belt to a bagger and payment is rendered at a pay station (there are four pay stations for every seven lanes.)

Essentially, it saves labor costs for the market while giving shoppers the perception that they're being checked out faster since they're doing it themselves.

In fact, consumers scan groceries about 40 percent slower than trained cashiers, according to Don Dufek, group vice president of Kroger Co. Nevertheless, "perception is reality," Dufek said.

Another gadget in its infancy is electronic shelf-labeling. Developed by Telepanel, Inc., an Ontario company, the small, liquid-crystal monitors — mounted beneath the shelf edge — display the price of each product. Pressing a button on the mini-terminal triggers the unit price to flash. Nutrition information and specials will also be available on the tiny video displays.

American Cuisine Has French Fans

By MARILYN AUGUST
Associated Press Writer

PARIS (AP) — American cuisine is hot in this land of fabled food snobs. Some French people are even giving up chocolate eclairs for fudge brownies and boeuf bourguignon for beef enchilladas.

Restaurants featuring chili, barbecued ribs and apple brown betty are springing up faster than they can be counted, while industrial bakers compete to produce the most authentic chocolate chip cookie.

Food from America — like blue jeans and rock music — is in.

"American food is an alternative to the typical French eating experience," said Marshal Backlar, the owner of a California-style American restaurant near the Champs Elysees. "We take the best from different ethnic cuisines and blend them."

Backlar, a Los Angeles native who once produced movies, said his clientele was 90 percent French.

"Though they still eat ribs with a knife and fork, they enjoy the freedom of being able to order what they want, and not necessarily the three- or four-course meal," he said.

The most popular items on his menu? T-bone steaks, cheeseburgers and brownies.

The growing popularity of American foods has not escaped French food manufacturers.

Cookie companies compete to make the "most authentic" chocolate chip cookie, which they advertise on prime-time television in a typical New England setting.

Ice-cream producers have introduced new flavors and textures which they call "American-style." Even the fancy French caterer Le Notre has launched its own version of the chocolate chip cookie, presented in red, white and blue shop windows against drawings of the Statue of Liberty.

And thanks to a recent spate of cookbooks showing how to prepare typical American dishes using ingredients available here, French cooks will be able to make their own clam chowder and pecan pie.

Two new cookbooks appeared recently: "La Cuisine Americaine," by Julee Rosso and Sheila Lukins, owners of "The Silver Palate," a New York gourmet caterer, and "Le Grand Livre de la Cuisine Americaine" by the Paris-based Americans Constance Borde and Sheila Malovany-Chevalier. Both are selling well, the publishers report.

French cooks, who once had to scour Paris for corn chips and chili powder, find everything they need at "The General Store," the first American specialty foods boutique in Paris.

It has been open for only a year, and owners Elaine and Jean-Pierre Bourbeillon say they have trouble keeping up with the rising demand for buckwheat pancake mix, cranberry juice and Tex-Mex fixings.

Mrs. Bourbeillon says about half her customers, many of whom have already visited the United States, are French.

"Everything about America is fashionable these days," she said. "We have a lot of young people, for example, who tasted peanut butter in the States, and now they want to be able to eat it here."

And more than ever, she said, French customers are ready to fit American foods into their daily culinary routines.

"Instead of buying from a French patisserie, housewives have started ordering platefuls of uncut brownies, which they serve with tea or for dessert at dinnertime," she said. "Now that's a change."

Chicken Is Versatile

When cooking without a meat thermometer, go by the color of the chicken. A dark, golden brown usually means the chicken is done, but the browning will vary with the batter. If a milk product is part of the breading, or if the chicken is dipped in a milk product before being breaded, it will brown more quickly and may look done before it actually is.

Try your hand at frying the chicken and add it to a meal of Broccoli Cheese Bake, Cream Gravy, Sprouted Perfection Salad and Banana Pudding. The recipes are listed below.

BROCCOLI CHEESE BAKE

2 packages (10 ounces each) frozen chopped broccoli
1 jar (8 ounces) pasteurized process cheese spread
1/4 cup milk
2 tablespoons butter or margarine, softened
4 eggs, beaten

Cook broccoli according to package instructions. Drain. In medium bowl, combine cheese spread, milk, butter and eggs. Stir in broccoli. Pour into greased 9x2-inch round glass baking dish. Bake in 375-degree oven 35 minutes or until set. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

CREAM GRAVY

3 tablespoons butter or margarine
1/3 cup flour
1 teaspoon instant chicken bouillon granules
1/2 teaspoon poultry seasoning
1/4 teaspoon ground celery seed
2 cups milk

In small saucepan, melt butter. Stir in flour, bouillon granules, poultry seasoning and celery seed. Stir in milk. Cook, stirring constantly, until mixture is bubbly and slightly thickened. Serve gravy with hot chicken. Makes 2 cups gravy.

SPROUTED PERFECTION SALAD

1 package (3 ounces) lemon-flavored gelatin
1 cup boiling water
3/4 cup cold water
1 teaspoon cider vinegar
1 cup shredded carrots
1/2 cup alfalfa, radish or other salad sprouts
1/4 cup diced celery, green pepper or radish
2 tablespoons sliced green onion

Dissolve gelatin in boiling water. Add cold water and vinegar. Chill until partially set. Fold in carrots, sprouts, celery and onion. Pour into 4-cup mold. Chill until firm. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

BANANA PUDDING

1 package (3 ounces) instant vanilla or banana pudding and pie filling
2 cups milk
30 to 35 vanilla wafers
4 small to medium bananas, sliced
Non-dairy whipped topping (optional)

Prepare pudding as directed on package using 2 cups milk. In 1 1/2-quart casserole, arrange vanilla wafers. Cover with 1/3 of sliced bananas. Top with 1/3 of pudding. Repeat layers twice, ending with pudding. Chill, covered, several hours. Serve with whipped topping, if desired. Makes 8 servings.

Quick-And-Easy Favorite Dishes For Busy Cooks

By BETSY BALSLEY
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

Among the most coveted recipes in any personal collection are those that fit into the quick-and-easy category. No cook can ever have too many tucked conveniently into a handy recipe file. Unfortunately, because recipes of this type fit their description so well, they do tend to be overused, a practice that leads either to boredom or complaints on the part of the diner or diners. And that means there is always room for more.

Where do these recipes come from? They all started somewhere ... whether from desperation when a key ingredient for another planned recipe was missing, or simply because nothing was planned at all. Many are short versions of lengthy, classical recipes that have been adapted to fit a more hectic lifestyle. Others came about simply because imaginative cooks tried new techniques on old standbys.

The following recipes should provide some welcome variety for those in need of fast, fresh and easy menus.

TURKEY-ASPARAGUS ROLLS

6 turkey breast slices, cut 1/4 inch thick
Salt, pepper
7 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 to 2 cloves garlic, minced
1/2 cup soft bread crumbs
1 teaspoon crushed fresh thyme
12 asparagus spears, trimmed and cooked until tender-crisp
Flour
1 cup chicken broth
1/2 cup white wine
1/2 cup whipping cream
1 tablespoon Dijon mustard

Pound turkey breast slices to flatten. Sprinkle with salt and pepper to taste. Melt 2 tablespoons butter, then stir in garlic, bread crumbs and thyme. Spoon onto turkey slices. Place 2 asparagus spears along longer edge of each turkey slice and roll up turkey. Dredge lightly in flour.

Melt 3 tablespoons butter in large skillet. Add turkey rolls and cook until light golden brown. Remove turkey from skillet. Melt another 2 tablespoons butter in skillet. Stir in 2 tablespoons flour and cook 1 minute. Stir in chicken broth, white wine, cream and mustard. Add turkey, seam side down, and cook until tender, about 15 to 20 minutes. Remove turkey and keep warm on platter. Reduce sauce over high heat, if necessary, to thicken. Pour over turkey rolls. Makes 6 servings.

EASY SHRIMP

1 (14-ounce) can clear chicken broth
1 tablespoon cornstarch
1 tablespoon Sherry
2 teaspoons soy sauce
2 tablespoons oil
1/2 teaspoon minced ginger root
1 clove garlic, crushed
1/2 teaspoon minced jalapeno or serrano chile
1 pound medium to large shrimp, shelled
2 cups Chinese pea pods
1 cup julienne-cut jicama
Salt, pepper, optional

Combine 1/4 cup of broth with cornstarch, then set aside. Mix remaining broth with Sherry and soy sauce.

Heat oil in wok or large, deep skillet. Saute ginger, garlic and chile. Add shrimp and cook 1 minute. Stir in Sherry-broth mixture. Cook 2 minutes. Remove shrimp with slotted spoon. Add Chinese pea pods to wok and cook 3 minutes. Stir in jicama and cornstarch mixture. Heat just until thickened. Season to taste with salt and pepper.

Combine shrimp with mixture and serve immediately. Makes about 4 servings.

PUFFY OMELET WITH HAM AND CHEESE

5 eggs, separated
2 tablespoons milk
Salt, pepper
1/4 teaspoon fines herbes or other herb of choice
2 teaspoons Dijon mustard
1/4 teaspoon cream of tartar
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1/2 cup shredded Fontina cheese
1/4 cup chopped cooked ham
2 tablespoons chopped green onion

Beat egg yolks with milk and salt and pepper to taste until very light and fluffy. Stir in fines herbes and mustard.

Beat egg whites with cream of tartar until soft peaks form. Carefully fold yolk mixture into beaten whites.

Melt butter in oven-proof omelet pan or 10-inch skillet over low heat. Spoon egg mixture into pan and cook 3 minutes until puffy and golden on underside when lifted with spatula. Sprinkle with cheese, ham and green onion.

Bake at 350 degrees 10 minutes or until golden and top springs back when tapped with finger. Serve with buttered French bread toast and fresh fruit, if desired. Makes 4 to 5 servings.

Variations: For toppings, substitute tiny shrimp and minced parsley, crumbled cooked chorizo, shredded Jack cheese and chopped cilantro; flaked smoked salmon and fresh chopped dill; thinly sliced blanched asparagus and Parmesan cheese; chopped or thinly sliced drained tomatoes and crumbled cooked bacon or prosciutto. Add toppings sparingly so egg mixture can still puff.

SOUFFLEED EGGS BENEDICT

4 eggs
1 tablespoon minced chives
Salt, pepper
1/4 cup shredded Fontina cheese
3 English muffins, split, buttered and toasted
3 slices ham, halved

Beat eggs until very frothy. Beat in chives and salt and pepper to taste. Fill 6 greased poached egg cups 2/3 full with egg mixture. Sprinkle cheese over tops.

Cover and cook according to manufacturer's directions if using electric poacher, or until eggs have puffed and are cooked to desired doneness. To assemble, place 1 slice ham on each muffin half, top with egg puff and spoon Quick Hollandaise Sauce over each. Makes 3 servings.

Quick Hollandaise Sauce

3 egg yolks
1 tablespoon lemon juice
Dash salt
2 to 3 drops hot pepper sauce
1/2 cup hot melted butter

Place egg yolks, lemon juice, salt and hot pepper sauce in blender container. Blend on high about 20 seconds. With lid off (or center hole in lid open) and blender on high, very slowly pour hot melted butter into egg yolk mixture. Blend until mixture thickens and butter is used up. Keep warm over, but not touching, hot water until ready to use. Makes about 3/4 cup.

DANISH CHICKEN

4 chicken breasts halves, boned and skinned
4 (1/2-inch-thick, 3-inch-long) strips cream cheese with herbs and spices
1 egg
1 cup fine, soft bread crumbs
2 tablespoons oil
1 tablespoon butter or margarine
Salt, pepper

On underside of each breast, tuck 1 strip cream cheese beneath long, thin muscle (or make pocket with sharp knife). Tuck edges of meat under to form smooth oval.

In bowl, beat egg lightly. Dip chicken into egg, then coat with crumbs. Heat oil and butter in skillet. Brown chicken briefly on skin side 1 minute, then on underside another minute. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Transfer to baking pan, cheese side down. Bake at 350 degrees 20 minutes. Makes 4 servings.

Variation: Use chicken breasts with skin and bone. Loosen skin enough to tuck thick strips of cream cheese under it. Proceed as directed above, coating with egg and bread crumbs. Bake at 350 degrees 25 minutes.

RICOTTA-STUFFED PEPPERS

4 large firm green peppers
2 anchovy fillets, chopped
2/3 cup ricotta cheese
2 tablespoons grated Romano cheese
2 teaspoons chopped parsley
1/3 pound finely diced or ground cooked meat
1/4 cup bread crumbs
1 small onion, chopped
1 egg
Salt, pepper
1/4 cup olive oil
2 tablespoons tomato paste
2/3 cup hot water

Wash peppers, then remove stems and seeds. In bowl, combine anchovy fillets, ricotta, Romano, parsley, meat, bread crumbs, onion and egg. Mix well and season to taste with salt and pepper.

Stuff peppers with mixture. Arrange in baking dish, pour oil over and bake at 400 degrees 15 minutes. Blend tomato paste and hot water and add to peppers. Continue baking 10 to 15 minutes or until peppers are tender. Makes 4 servings.

BROCCOLI-SHRIMP PRIMAVERA

1 (10-ounce) package frozen broccoli with cheese sauce in pouch
2 ounces linguine
1/2 clove garlic, minced
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1/2 cup chopped tomato
1/4 cup dry white wine
6 ounces frozen cooked deveined shrimp, thawed

Cook broccoli in pouch according to package directions. Cook linguine according to package directions. Drain linguine.

Meanwhile, cook garlic in butter in large skillet until golden. Stir in tomato and wine. Simmer, uncovered, stirring frequently, about 5 minutes or until liquid is reduced by half. Stir in cooked broccoli with sauce, linguine and shrimp. Cook until heated through. Makes 3 servings.

LAMB PATTIES WITH CURRANT SAUCE

1 1/2 pounds ground lamb
1 cup soft bread crumbs
1/4 cup milk
1 egg, beaten
1/4 teaspoon marjoram
Salt
1/2 cup red currant jelly
1/2 teaspoon grated orange peel

Combine lamb, bread crumbs, milk, egg and marjoram. Season to taste with salt and mix well.

Shape into 6 patties about 3/4-inch thick. Place patties on broiler rack 2 inches from source of heat. Broil 8 to 10 minutes on 1 side. Turn and broil 6 to 8 minutes.

Heat jelly slowly until melted. Add orange peel. Serve over patties. Makes 6 servings.

CREAMY ASPARAGUS DIP

2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 cup chopped mushrooms
1/2 cup chopped green onions
1 can (10 3/4 ounces) condensed creamy natural asparagus soup
1 tablespoon chopped fresh dill weed
1 teaspoon lemon juice
1/4 cup sour cream

In 1 1/2 quart saucepan over medium heat, in hot butter, cook mushrooms and onions until just tender. Stir in soup. Heat through. Remove from heat. Stir in dill, lemon juice and sour cream until smooth. Cover; refrigerate at least 4 hours. Serve with fresh vegetables for dipping. Makes about 1 3/4 cups.

MINI CROISSANT BRUNCH SANDWICHES

2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1/4 cup green or red pepper cut in 1 inch strips
2 tablespoons chopped green onion
1 can (10 3/4 ounces) condensed creamy natural broccoli soup
1/2 cup milk
4 hard-cooked eggs, sliced
6 thin slices smoked turkey (6 ounces)
6 mini-croissants, warmed and split

In two quart saucepan over medium heat, in hot butter, cook pepper and onion until tender-crisp. Stir in soup. Gradually stir in milk. Heat through. Fold in eggs. To serve, arrange a slice of turkey on each croissant. Spoon about 1/2 cup egg mixture over turkey. Makes about 3 cups or 6 servings.

SPINACH AND CRAB QUICHE

4 eggs
1 can (10 3/4 ounces) condensed creamy natural spinach soup
1/2 cup light cream
1 teaspoon prepared horseradish
1 cup shredded Swiss cheese
1 cup cooked crab meat, flaked
1 small red pepper, cut into matchstick thin strips
9 inch unbaked piecrust

In medium bowl, beat eggs until foamy. Gradually stir in soup, cream and horseradish; mix well. Sprinkle cheese, crab meat and red pepper evenly over piecrust. Pour soup mixture over all. Bake at 350 degrees for 50 minutes or until center is set. Let stand 10 minutes before serving. Makes 6 servings.

bake eggs over the coals in aluminum foil cups lined with smoked beef slices.

Eggs are a top-notch source of high-quality protein (2 large eggs provide 30 percent of the U.S. RDA) plus 13 vitamins and many minerals. They're a great package of nutrition to round out the high-energy foods you crave when you're doing lots of hiking, biking, boating, swimming or just plain exploring. So put on the lunchtime kettle and poach eggs in a pot of hot soup (reconstituted canned or dried) or chili. Eggs and cans of tuna or salmon, peas and soup can be combined and "baked" in a skillet for a fabulously easy frittata dinner. Keep some hard-cooked eggs on hand in the cooler or RV refrigerator for pick-up-and-go snacks or as the basis of a sandwich or a skillet casserole. for example, you can turn a reconstituted pouch of noodles and sauce into a meal with the addition of sliced hard-cooked eggs.

The best way to keep eggs fresh in the backwoods is to leave them in the package they came — in the shell is an egg's best protection against bacteria. Many campers use rigid plastic 1/2 or 1 dozen egg carriers to protect eggs. The egg carton is an additional ready-made carrier. Eggs will retain freshness for several days if kept cook in their shells. Store them in a cooler containing ice or chemical refrigerant blocks. For extended wilderness camping, pick up dried egg products at an outfitter. They're easy to reconstitute with portable water.

BACKWOODS SKILLET SUPPER

1 cup (5 ounces) diced thuringer, salami or summer sausage, or 1 can (5 ounces) Vienna sausages, drained and sliced lengthwise
Butter, optional
8 eggs
1/2 cup milk or water
1/4 cup grated Parmesan cheese
2 tablespoons chopped chives
1/8 teaspoon pepper
4 thin green pepper rings

In large skillet over hot coals or medium heat, cook sausage until it just begins to brown, 4 to 5 minutes. Pour off all but 2 tablespoons drippings or add up to 2 tablespoons butter, if necessary.

Beat together eggs, milk, cheese, chives and pepper. Pour over sausage. Top with pepper rings. Cover skillet with lid or aluminum foil; continue cooking until eggs are set, about 15 minutes. Slide from pan onto serving platter or cut into wedges and serve from pan.

Dieters

1 cup granulated sugar
2 tablespoons baking powder
2 teaspoons baking soda
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon cinnamon

Soak fruit in sherry. Drain reserving fruit and liquid. Mix together eggs, milk and reserved liquid. Sift remaining ingredients together. Add egg-milk mixture to dry ingredients; stir to mix. Mix in dried fruit. Pour into 9x5-inch greased loaf pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 1 hour or until cake tester comes out clean. Yield: 2 loaves, 14 slices each with 135 calories per slice.

QUICK BANANA BREAD

6 ounces margarine
1 cup sugar
4 bananas
3 eggs, beaten
2 teaspoons vanilla extract
2 1/2 cups all-purpose flour
1 1/2 cups whole-wheat flour
2 teaspoons baking soda
1 teaspoon salt
2/3 cup skim milk

Cream margarine and sugar. Mash bananas. Mix in eggs and vanilla. Add to creamed mixture; blend thoroughly. Sift dry ingredients. Alternately add flour mixture and milk to creamed mixture. Place in 9x5-inch greased loaf pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 1 hour or until cake tester comes out clean. Yield: 2 loaves, 14 slices each with 155 calories in per slice.

Variations:

Banana Nut Bread: Fold in 1 cup chopped walnuts or almonds after other ingredients have been blended. There are 185 calories per serving.

Raw Apple Bread: Omit bananas. Add 2 teaspoons baking powder to the dry ingredients and 1 tablespoon lemon juice to the milk. After all ingredients are mixed, stir in 2 cups unpeeled apples, seeded and chopped. Optional: 1 cup chopped walnuts. There are 145 calories per serving.

QUICK BREADS: FRESH VEGETABLE (Carrot or Zucchini Bread)

4 cups all-purpose flour
1 cup granulated sugar
2 teaspoons baking powder
2 teaspoons baking soda
1 teaspoon salt
3 teaspoons cinnamon
3 eggs, beaten
1/2 cup skim milk
1/2 cup vegetable oil
3 cups grated carrots or zucchini

Sift together dry ingredients. Mix together the eggs, milk and oil. Stir into dry ingredients. Stir in carrots or zucchini. Pour into 9x5-inch greased loaf pans. Bake at 350 degrees for 1 hour or until cake tester comes out clean.

COFFEE TOFFEE PIE

2 ounces unsweetened chocolate
½ package pie crust mix
¼ cup light brown sugar, packed
¾ cup finely chopped walnuts
1 tablespoon water
1 teaspoon vanilla
½ cup butter or margarine, softened
¾ cup granulated sugar
Instant coffee powder
2 eggs
2 cups whipping cream
½ cup powdered sugar
Chocolate curls

Grate 1 ounce chocolate. Combine with pie crust mix, brown sugar and walnuts. Add water and vanilla and mix with fork until well blended.

Turn dough into well-greased 9-inch pie plate and press firmly onto bottom and sides. Bake at 375 degrees 15 minutes. Cool on wire rack.

Melt remaining 1 ounce chocolate and cool. Place butter in small mixing bowl and beat until creamy. Gradually add granulated sugar and beat until light and fluffy. Blend in cooled melted chocolate and 2 teaspoons coffee powder. Add 1 egg and beat 5 minutes. Add remaining egg and beat 5 minutes longer. Turn filling into baked pie shell, cover and refrigerate overnight.

Combine whipping cream, 2 tablespoons coffee powder and powdered sugar in bowl. Cover and refrigerate 1 hour. Beat cream until stiff. Place in pastry bag with decorator tip and pipe onto pie in desired design. Garnish with chocolate curls. Refrigerate pie at least 2 hours before serving. Makes 8 servings.

SHOP America's Supermarket... FLY American Airlines

Save Winn-Dixie register receipts for discount travel certificates on round trip American Airlines Flights!

FOR ONLY $89 EACH WAY ($178 ROUND TRIP)

AmericanAirlines Destinations

American Airlines

- American Airlines Cities
- American Airlines/American Eagle Cities
- American Eagle Cities
- Admirals Club Locations

Here's all it takes to get you flying:

1. Shop at Winn-Dixie (you've already started saving money).
2. Collect $89.00 in cash register receipts dated from June 24 thru July 28, 1987.
3. Mail receipts along with $1.50 to cover postage and handling. (Pre-addressed envelopes available at Winn-Dixie.)
4. When you receive your travel certificate, simply make your reservations with American Airlines or any authorized travel agent.
5. Pay $178.00 along with your travel certificate and you're on your way round trip to the American Airlines city of your choice.

REMEMBER!

- Orders for travel certificates must be postmarked by midnight, September 30, 1987.
- Travel must be completed by midnight, September 30, 1988.
- Limit four certificates per family, please.
- Travel any day but must include a stay over Saturday night.

Winn-Dixie customers can obtain travel certificates good for the purchase of one round-trip coach class ticket on American Airlines or American Eagle for $178.00. Travel certificates are earned by purchasing $89.00 in merchandise at Winn-Dixie for each certificate.

Customers save $89.00 in register tapes dated June 24 through July 28, 1987, and mail to promotion headquarters along with a $1.50 handling fee. The $89.00 in register tapes and the $1.50 handling fee will be required for every travel certificate requested. Travel certificates must be requested by September 30, 1987, and travel completed by September 30, 1988. A limit of four certificates per family, please.

Travel certificates must be used on the purchase of a round-trip ticket between any two cities served by American or American Eagle via regularly scheduled, direct or connecting service in the 48 contiguous United States (see map above). Travel may be on any day of the week, but must include a stay over a Saturday night. Certain blackout dates may apply around holiday periods.

THE BEEF PEOPLE

of W-D Brand U.S. Choice Beef from The Beef People, of course.

When you get people together for good times and good foods, what you serve is important. That's why the quality of WINN-DIXIE'S W-D Brand Beef is important. It's always U.S. Choice and it's closer trimmed of excess bone and fat, so you get less waste and more beef.

So for everyday meals or special get-togethers, you'll be proud to serve W-D Brand Beef. Bringing you the best in beef is our tradition...we'd never settle for less.

Prices Effective Thru July 4, 1987

It is our intention to maintain the prices in this circular until July 4, 1987. However, special circumstances beyond our control may make it necessary to increase or reduce the prices before this date. For example, unusual market conditions in many commodities may result in price fluctuations after this circular is issued. In such cases, we reserve the right to revise our prices. You will be notified of the changes at our store prior to processing your purchase.

Wickes Lumber Raincheck Policy

Should we be out of stock on any advertised sale item, our manager will be happy to order this item for you at the same advertised sale price. If the same item is not available for reorder, the manager will make available to you a comparable item of the same value at the advertised price.

Wickes Lumber Credit-Terms Details

*If you have an existing Wickes Charge Account balance, addition of any new purchase may or may not change your current monthly payment depending on the highest balance of your account. Delivery charges (if any) and state sales tax may cause quoted minimum monthly payments to be higher.
