Justice Powell Retires

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Supreme Court Justice Lewis F. Powell, a moderate who has been the pivotal vote in many of the court's close decisions, today announced he is retiring from the nation's highest court.

The announcement was such a surprise that the White House learned of his intentions only this morning.

Powell, who has suffered from prostate cancer, made the announcement in a printed statement shortly after he left the bench for the last time.

"I have advised the chief justice and associate justices that I have elected to retire as an associate justice. The president will be advised today," the statement said.

Powell's departure gives President Reagan the chance to change significantly the court's ideological balance with his third appointment. His most recent appointment, naming William H. Rehnquist to replace Warren Burger as chief justice, merely replaced one conservative with another.

At the White House, presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the first indication of Powell's resignation came in a telephone call to White House chief of staff Howard Baker from Rehnquist.

Baker immediately informed Reagan, Fitzwater said.

"We will search and have a nominee very soon" to succeed Powell, Fitzwater said.

There has been speculation that conservative Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, might be in line for a Supreme Court nomination. Other names most often named in such speculation include two federal appeals court judges, Robert H. Bork of Property Rights Backed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court, in a victory for land developers, today limited the power of government regulators to grant public access to private property.

By a 5-4 vote, the justices overturned a decision by California officials that gave the public the right to walk along beachfront property between the ocean and a couple's home without compensatng the home owners.

The ruling, handed down as the court concluded its 1986-87 term, may curtail governmental authority to impose other restrictions and obligations for property owners.

But the ruling was couched in terms that make it far less sweeping than some government regulators feared would be the outcome of the closely watched case.

Justice Antonin Scalia, writing for the court, said granting public access to private property — or any government limitation on private property development — must be tied directly to a specific, justifiable public purpose.

A condition placed on development is unconstitutional if it "utterly fails to further the end advanced as the justification for the prohibition," Scalia said.

Today's case involved the right of James and Marilyn Nollan to bar people from crossing back and forth across their beachfront property overlooking the Pacific ocean in Ventura, Calif.

The Nollans decided in 1982 to replace a deteriorating bungalow on their Faria Beach property with a three-bedroom, two-story house.

The California Coastal Commission said in exchange for the building permit, nearly one-third of the 3,800-square-foot property must be set aside for the public to cross back and forth.

The commission was created in 1972 to protect the state's coast line as "a natural resource belonging to all the people."

Generally, the public owns a state's shore line up to the part covered by mean high tide. In California and most other states, the dry portion of the beach above the high-water mark can be privately owned.

The Nollans said that if the public is to have access to their property, they should be paid.

Korean Opposition Leader Is Arrested

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Students hurled rocks and firebombs at riot police today as tens of thousands of people shouting "Democracy" marched to protest the government of President Chun Doo-hwan.

About 25,000 riot police in padded green combat fatigues and black-visored helmets were mobilized in Seoul, and street battles flared in at least four parts of the city as police threw tear gas and demonstrators responded with firebombs and rocks.

Demonstrations and clashes were reported in at least 32 other cities, with police using tear gas in many areas to break up marches.

Police seized top opposition leader Kim Young-sam and other officials of the Reunification Democratic Party as they tried to march out of their headquarters carrying a large South Korean flag.

Dissident Kim Dae-jung, freed Thursday from 78 days of detention in his home, was placed back under house arrest to keep him from taking part in the marches. The opposition is demanding democratic reforms, including direct presidential elections to replace the electorgl college system which guarantees victory for the ruling Democratic Justice Party.

Chun, a former army general, has rejected the call for direct elections.

Kim Young-sam, who met with Chun earlier this week in an unsuccessful bid to head off further protests with a political compromise, was seen being pushed into a police van as he tried to hang on to the vehicle's door.

He later was returned home by police after being taken on a long drive to Kimpo International Airport outside town.

The U.S. Military radio station advised Americans, including about 40,000 service personnel, to stay away from possible trouble spots. On Wednesday, U.S. envoy Gaston Sigur said the United States opposed a military solution to the crisis, which

Olympic Torch Makes 30-Mile Trek Across Pitt

By DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer

About 170 area residents carried the Olympic Torch over more than 30 miles of Pitt County roads Thursday as the flame continued its trek through 400 North Carolina communities en route to Raleigh for opening ceremonies of the U.S. Olympic Festival July 17.

The U.S. Olympic Festival 1987 Torch Run, which began Monday in Wilmington, is expected to travel through 88 of the state's 100 counties in the hands of more than 4,000 runners on a 2,800-mile route before it is delivered at Carter-Finley Stadium.

"The reason we're doing the torch run is because North Carolina Amateur Sports is hosting the U.S. Olympic Festival 1987 for the state of North Carolina and so we're traveling 2,800 miles around the state to make people aware of this event which is held every year except the Olympic year," Jack Hughes, statewide coordinator for the Torch Run 1987, said.

"Our aim is to travel 2,800 miles, go through 400 communities in 26 days and get as many people to opening ceremonies and to the events. It gives them the chance to come and see athletes who will be in the '88 Winter Olympics, the '88 Summer Olympics and on down the line in '92 — our young up-and-coming athletes."

Pitt County participants, who made minimum donations of $25 each, took advantage of the opportunity to carry the torch while scores of others lined the streets to observe.

"I am pleased, everybody who signed up, showed up, and everybody's excited about running," said Ricky Langley, who organized the Greenville leg of the torch run for the Greenville Jaycees. "I thought we had a good turnout of people watching."

The torch run is designed to acquaint people with the U.S. Olympic Festival, organizers said.

"We're hoping that everybody that sees this will be able to come to the opening ceremonies or watch it on ESPN, come and see some of the events, and be a part of it even more than just this torch run," Hughes said.

"It's designed to make people aware of what's coming to North Carolina," Langley said. "The festival is sort of a tryout for the Olympics."

The torch, which came into Greenville on N.C. 11 and U.S. 264 before heading downtown and out to Pitt County Memorial Hospital and then to Burroughs Wellcome at dusk, went through the hands of some 170 citizens representing area businesses and smaller groups.

Patients and staff people at the hospital participated in the event, which circled the facility twice covering about five miles.

"We thought it went quite well," said Craig Quick, assistant vice president for community and regional affairs. "It was a thrilling time. We had 33 employees involved and six rehab patients in wheelchairs.

"I think everyone was really thrilled. It gives a feeling of patriotism. We had a good representation of people in the hospital."

Robersonville Board Eyes Long Fight Over Pigeons

ROBERSONVILLE — Members of the Town Board of Adjustments have scheduled more testimony in their effort to resolve the great pigeon fight.

A hearing began this week, without a solution, into the year-long battle between pigeon fanciers Clifton and Lorene Leggett and their next-door neighbor, E.B. Whichard.

The hearing will resume Wednesday when additional witnesses will be called by Waylon Sermons, attorney for the Leggetts.

The dispute dates back more than a year when the Leggetts, both bird fanciers, decided to make raising and training homing pigeons their home hobby. The couple built a large loft for the birds near Whichard's property line.

Whichard claims that the birds leave droppings and feathers in his yard, and their presence has complicated his wife's allergies. Whichard first brought his complaint to the town office last year.

The town board in turn referred the complaint to the zoning board. Zoning officer Mike Roberson ruled last spring that since the town's zoning ordinances, health laws or animal control ordinances make no mention of pigeons, the Leggetts had not violated the law in keeping the flock of birds.

Whichard and his attorney, Clifton Everett, appealed the ruling by Roberson and brought the matter before the town board Wednesday night.

Thursday Thefts

Four thefts were reported to Greenville police Thursday.

Officer F.G. Pruitt said a purse containing a necklace valued at $200 and a wedding band valued at $100 was taken from Hollowell's Drug Store at the intersection of Sixth Street and Memorial Drive in an incident reported at 10:20 a.m.

Officer J.A. Bartlett said a bicycle parked at Kerr Drug Store on Jarvis Streeet was taken in an incident reported at 8:13 p.m., while a ring was taken from 112B Riverbluff Road in a break-in reported at 11 p.m.

According to Officer K.M. Smeltzer, a carton of cigarettes was taken from the Piggly Wiggly store at 2105 Dickinson Ave. in an incident reported at 10 p.m.

Larceny Charges

Five people, including four juveniles, were taken into custody by Greenville police on theft charges Thursday.

Officer K.D. Lingerfelt said Evelyn Bernadette Wooten, 27, of Greenview Drive was charged with larceny in connection with the theft of a pack of cigarettes from the Food Lion store at Stanton Square Shopping Center about 4:21 p.m.

Officer C.S. Candler said three juveniles were turned over to the department's juvenile division in connection with a shoplifting incident at K mart at Greenville Square Shopping Center about 6:49 p.m., while Officer R.S. Sawyer said one juvenile was turned over to juvenile officers in connection with a larceny incident at Farm Fresh on Greenville Boulevard about 10 p.m.

Assault Count

Greenville police said an exchange of words led police to arrest a Grimesland man early today on an assault by pointing a gun charge.

Officer K.M. Smeltzer said Joe Thomas Pilgreen, 31, of Route 1, Grimesland, was taken into custody about 12:45 a.m. after a pistol was allegedly pointed at a man at the intersection of Second and Cotanche streets.

Smeltzer, who said Pilgreen was also charged with driving while impaired, said a .357 caliber pistol and six rounds of ammunition were confiscated.

Jamesville Budget

Jamesville commissioners recently adopted a budget of $151,170 without changing the town's 70-cent tax rate.

The 1987-88 budget provides for a pay raise of 25 cents an hour for the town's five employees and a cut of $9 per month in insurance premiums for the employees. A new insurance plan to go into effect Wednesday was approved.

Funding for the budget comes primarily from water revenues estimated at $36,000 and sewer revenues estimated at $30,000. The general fund, derived primarily from the anticipated collection of $38,000 in taxes, will be supplemented by an anticipated revenue of $9,500 in sales taxes.

About $14,000 is expected from the Powell Bill for street and sidewalk improvements, and $1,000 is projected from the sale of cemetery lots.

Committee To Meet

The executive committee of the Pitt County Council on Aging will hold its regular monthly meeting at noon Monday at the Pitt County Senior Center, 1717 W. 5th St.

The accident occurred as Mizell was turning left onto N.C. 43 from state road 1725. There were no injuries. (Reflector Photo by Cliff Hollis)

Board Grants Webb Permit For Temporary Storage Unit

The Greenville Board of Adjustment has approved a request by Fred Webb for a special use permit in order to continue operating a temporary grain storage facility 240 feet south of Mumford Road on Azalea Street.

The property, located to the east of River Park North, is zoned residential-agricultural.

The board approved three other requests at its monthly meeting Thursday night.

The panel approved a request by Ryder Truck Rental Inc. for a special use permit to allow major truck repair at the Ryder Truck terminal proposed for a 3.8-acre tract on the southeast corner of North Greene Street and Industrial Boulevard. The property is zoned unoffensive industry.

A request by Carl Darden and Christopher Browning for a special use permit in order to operate a fitness center on the west side of Charles Boulevard between the Crows Nest Restaurant and Family Dentistry was approved. The property is zoned commercial downtown fringe.

The board continued a request by Clyde Simmons for a special use permit allowing the operation of a floral shop on the south side of Stantonsburg Road, 560 feet west of Moye Boulevard across from Pitt County Memorial Hospital. The property is zoned for medial and medical support uses.

In other business, the board adopted the 1986-87 annual report. According to the report, the board granted 44 special use permits, while denying three.

The panel also granted one variance and upheld an inspector's decision during the year, the report said.

Road To Close

The N.C. Department of Transportation's division of highways will close secondary road 1735, which connects N.C. 43 1½ miles south of Bells Fork with SR 1736 (the McLawhorn Farm Road), July 6.

The road will be closed for three days to allow crews to replace a bridge a half-mile west of N.C. 43.

Traffic will detour over N.C. 43, the McLawhorn Farm Road and SR 1711 (Worthington Road).

Leaders Institute

Bruce Eckert of Greenville attended the Institute for Future Agricultural Leaders recently at North Carolina State University.

The institute was designed to introduce high school seniors to career opportunities in agriculture and life sciences and to develop leadership skills.

Students Helped Out

To assist the American Red Cross in a public relations campaign, students at Eastern and Sam D. Bundy elementary schools recently decorated and colored flyers advertising the Liberty Bloodmobile.

The flyers feature smiling picnic foods such as a hamburger, a pickle and a tomato.

A picnic with hotdogs, potato chips, drinks and desserts will be served during the bloodmobile, which will be held in the auditorium of Wahl-Coates School July 6 from noon until 6 p.m.

Seniors Enter Games

A delegation from Pitt County will participate in the first United States National Senior Olympics in St. Louis Saturday through July 4.

Eleanor Ford will compete in the 1,500-meter walk and Reba Cannon will compete in horseshoes.

Ann Lee Hardee will assist the N.C. Senior Games Board of Directors with a special recognition reception honoring the N.C. delegation that is being sponsored by NCNB.

Several thousand senior citizens will participate in the event. Special guests such as Bob Hope will be at the National Senior Olympics to honor the athletes at the closing ceremony.

The major site of the games is Washington University. Other locations include four private country club golf courses, Shaw Park Pool and the city of St. Louis facilities.

Mrs. Ford, Mrs. Cannon and Mrs. Hardee competed in the Greenville-Pitt Senior Games and the North Carolina Senior Games finals for the past four years. They are involved in year-round training programs and have represented the Pitt County delegation at many functions throughout the year.

Also attending the national event will be Catherine Bolton of East Carolina University, and Alice Keene, Carol Shields and Rita Roy from Pitt County Community Schools.

Centenarian Month

Gov. Jim Martin has proclaimed the month of July as "Centenarian Month in North Carolina" to honor those citizens age 100 and older.

The proclamation said that "These people are the custodians of our nation's traditions, culture and history and are among our most valuable resources."

According to David T. Flaherty, secrerary of the N.C. Department of Human Resources, there are some 300 centenarians living in North Carolina.

Williamston Board Passes New Budget

WILLIAMSTON — The Town Board has approved a $4.5 million budget after a brief discussion with no objection voiced by members of the public attending a recent hearing.

Principal focus of the meeting was centered on a town ordinance relating to night parking on public parking lots.

An ordinance was passed which makes use of parking lots between 8 p.m. and 6 a.m. illegal unless specific permission is granted by the chief of police. Previously, the non-parking time had been from 11 p.m. to 6 a.m.

Under the new ordinance, offenders face a $50 fine and/or 30 days in jail.

The ordinance was drawn up to deal with widespread complaints about teenagers using the parking lots as meeting places at night. Williamston Police Sgt. R.M. Hollomon told board members that the parking lots have become a haven for teen-age drug traffic and underage drinking, with vandalism rampant on the lot.

In another action, the board rescinced an action taken on June 1 that authorized the use of night lights at the West End and Smithwick Street tennis courts. The new ruling is that lights at West End can be turned on at night, but those at Smithwick Street will not be turned on. Smithwick Street residents at the meeting complained the lights attrack vandals, noise and offensive language.

VA HOAX

Oscar L. Moore, district Veterans Service officer, advises that, for more than 25 years, the Veterans Administration has been trying to stifle the hoax about a GI insurance dividend for World War II veterans.

There is no such dividend, he said, but at regular intervals the hoax begins again and thousands of veterans write to the VA to apply for the non-existent dividend. Now the hoax has surfaced again — this time aimed at Vietnam Era veterans. The VA Insurance Center in Philadelphia is receiving about 15,000 applications per week from Vietnam Era veterans inquiring about the non-existent dividend.

Flyers are appearing mysteriously and are being picked up by veterans' publications. The hoax promises dividends of several hundred dollars, "whether or not insurance is still carried."

The VA has stated again, as it did with the WW II hoax, that there is no special dividend for Vietnam veterans. Nor is there any pending legislation in Congress to grant one. The entire story is a hoax.

Scholarship Winner

Melody Meeks, a graduate student at East Carolina University seeking a master's degree in rehabiliation counselling, recently received the Beth Lambeth Memorial Scholarship.

The $300 scholarship was established in memory of an ECU graduate student who died during the last semester of her studies.

Ms. Meeks is president of the ECU Rehabilitation Association and a member of the Omega Chapter of Rho Chi Sigma national rehabilitation counseling and services honor society.

She is an alumna of Atlantic Christian College and the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lynwood Meeks of Wilson. She was selected for the award based on academic achievement, character, and enthusiasm for the rehabilitaion profession.

Paris Study Program

Nineteen East Carolina University students have departed for a five-week summer study program at the Sorbonne of the University of Paris.

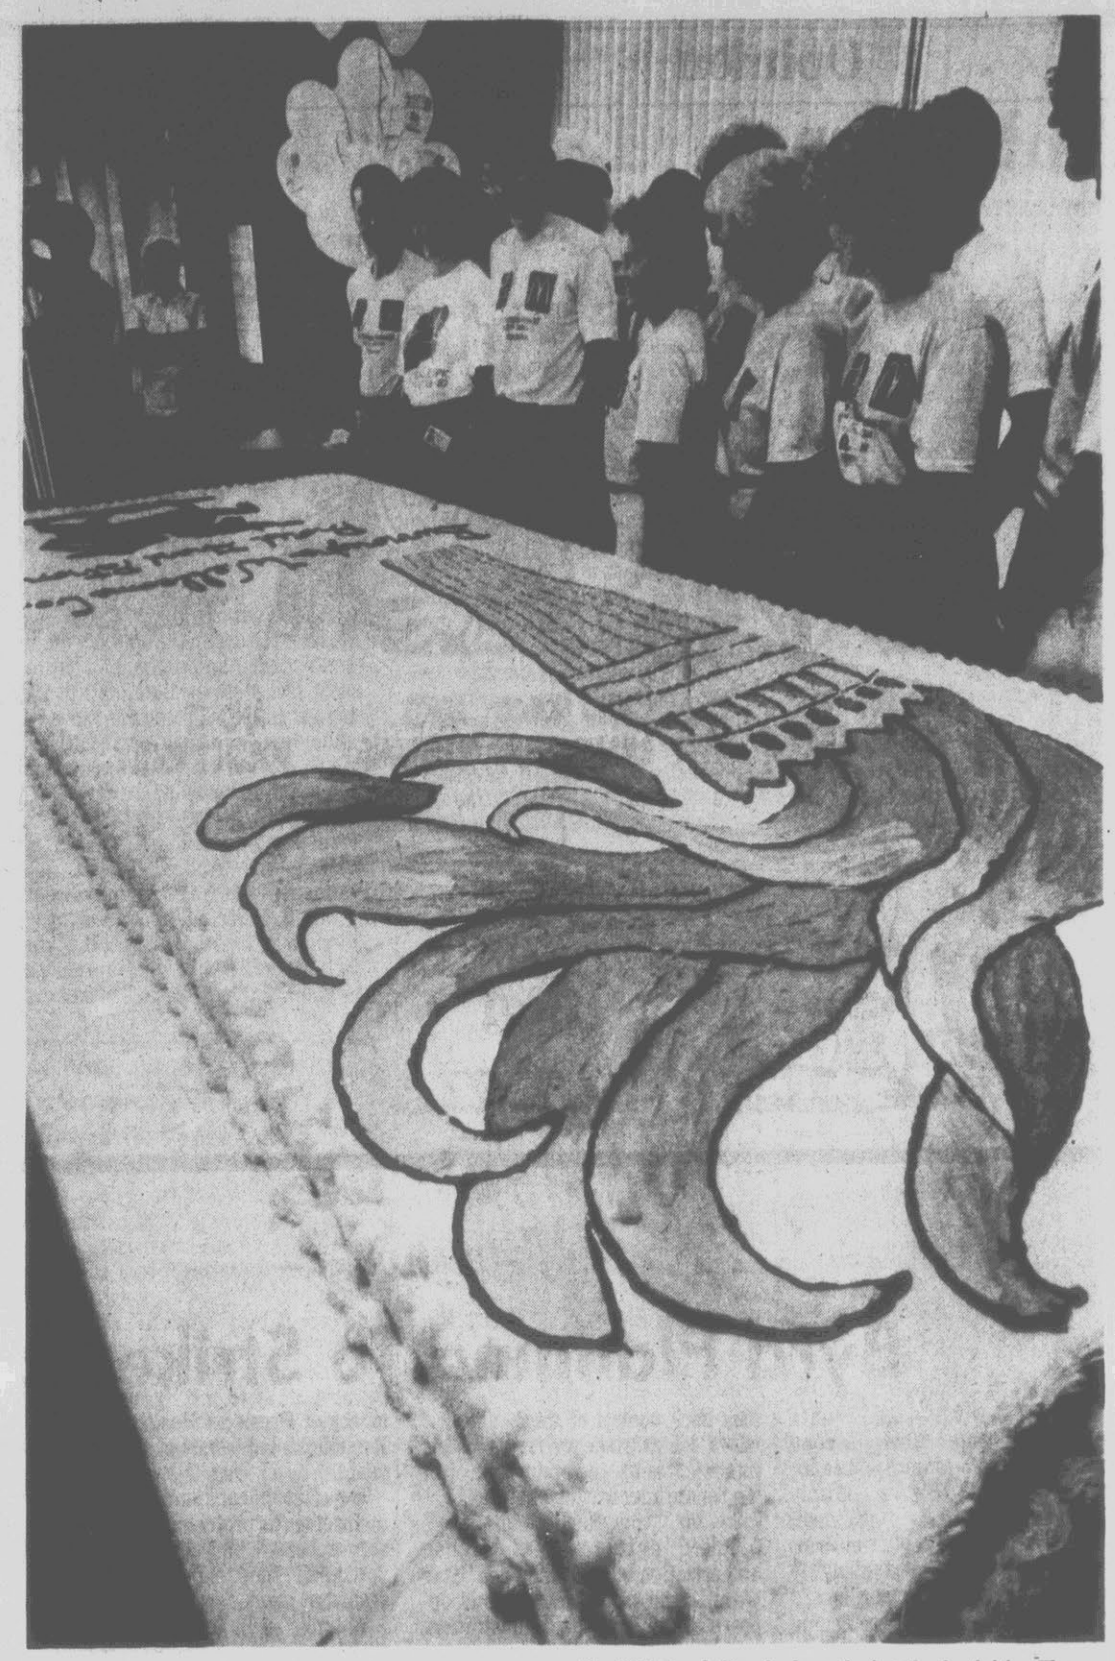

The group, accompanied by two ECU faculty members, left Greenville by chartered bus Monday for Dulles Airport, Washington, D.C., where they boarded an Air France flight to Paris.

Participants include Carol Dykstra and Cynthia Kittrell, both of Greenville, Stephen Dock of Washington, N.C., and Terry Tingen of Snow Hill.

At the end of their studies, the students will receive certificates from the Sorbonne and six hours of college credit from ECU.

Leading the ECU group are professors Stephen V. Dock and Karine Sparrow-Ginter of the ECU Department of Foreign Languages and Literatures. The ECU-Sorbonne summer study program is expected to become an annual event.

The ECU group includes students from various academic fields of study and graduates who wish to improve their language skills.

Soviets Add Three Politburo Members

MOSCOW (AP) — The Communist Party leadership appointed three new members to the Politburo today, raising the ruling body's membership to 14, the official Tass news agency reported.

Party propaganda chief Alexander N. Yakovlev, economics secretary Nikolai N. Slyunkov and Viktor P. Nikonov, party secretary in charge of agriculture, were elevated to the Politburo during the second day of the party's Central Committee meeting.

Slyunkov and Yakovlev were promoted from alternate or non-voting members of the Politburo, Tass said. Nikonov was a secretary of the Central Committee.

The committee also fired former Defense Minister Sergei Sokolov as an alternate member of the Politburo. Dmitri Yazov, his successor, was appointed an alternate member.

Sokolov was fired as defense minister last month after a West German teen-ager flew a private plane into Red Square.

On Thursday, Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev invoked the will of the people in his struggle to reform society and the economy and accused top-level officials of fear, complacency and bungling.

In his 111-page speech to the 300-plus members of the Central Committee, Gorbachev claimed the Soviet people have outdistanced their leaders in the pursuit of social and economic reform.

Libyan Jets Approached U.S. Ships

WASHINGTON (AP) — A U.S. Navy cruiser conducting a routine exercise went to battle stations twice last week when Libyan jet fighters flew 100 miles into the Mediterranean Sea to observe the ship, Pentagon officials say.

The officials, who agreed to discuss the matter Thursday only if not identified, described the incidents as the first such overt military moves by Libyan forces since the United States bombed Libya last year.

The Pentagon, while refusing to confirm the crew of the USS South Carolina had been scrambled to battle stations, said in a statement:

"While conducting exercise operations in international waters on the afternoon of June 17, the nuclear-powered guided missile cruiser USS South Carolina was approached by two Libyan MiG-23 'Floggers' on two separate occasions.

"Each approach was conducted by a separate pair of aircraft. The aircraft did not demonstrate hostile intent. However, South Carolina ... was ready for any eventuality had the MiG-23s demonstrated hostile intent."

According to the Pentagon, the cruiser was steaming with two other smaller Navy ships in the central Mediterranean, approximately 100 miles from the Libyan coastline and north of Libya's so-called Line of Death, at a time when no U.S. aircraft carrier was in the region.

Two Libyan jets first approached around 1 p.m. local time, flying within seven miles of the cruiser, the Pentagon said. A second flight by another pair of MiGs occurred around 4 p.m., and this time the fighters flew over the ship at an altitude of approximately 6,000 feet, the Pentagon said.

Torch Makes 30-Mile Pitt Trek

The Pitt County leg came to an end at the Burroughs Wellcome plant on the U.S. 264 bypass, north of Greenville, where 1,000 balloons were released as East Carolina University Chancellor Richard Eakin and Dr. Gabe Cipau, vice president of production and engineering at Burroughs Wellcome, crossed a mock finish line.

Burroughs Wellcome Co., a grand patron of the U.S. Olympic Festival, sponsored 60 runners in the torch run in Greenville.

"It was a tremendous experience," Cipau said. "I really enjoyed it. It kind of gets you into the Olympic spirit. Even if you can't be one of the participants per se, you can participate in the spirit of the games and become part of a team. It's a great effort by the state of North Carolina."

Eakin, who ran a two-tenths of a mile segment with Cipau, said he found the experience exhilarating.

"It was truly a thrill, it was great fun," Eakin said. "I enjoyed it tremendously. I would have to say you get a little bit of a high out of it, you really do. When you grab hold of that torch, it makes you feel like part of a much larger enterprise. We're very proud to be a part of it."

Another paticipant in the torch run, Annette Chauncey, covered her segment of the trip in her wheelchair.

"It was strange with everybody looking and hollering," said Ms. Chauncey, an administrative assistant at Burroughs Wellcome. "It felt good though. It was very exciting. I think it is fantastic that Burroughs Wellcome let me do that."

Meanwhile, one organizer said the people of eastern North Carolina have been supportive of the torch run.

"This is my third torch run, and the response we're getting in the first three and four days of the torch run is the same kind of response we got the last three and four days in both Louisiana and Texas," Hughes said. "It is really building and we're excited about that."

After leaving Greenville, the torch was expected to travel through Washington, Belhaven, Swan Quarter, Ocracoke and Elizabeth City before heading to destinations in the western part of the state.

Waldheim Pleased After Papal Visit

ROME (AP) — Austrian President Kurt Waldheim says his widely assailed audience with Pope John Paul II should help diminish controversy over his wartime past and silence talk of his diplomatic isolation.

"The fact alone that that the pope did receive me in such a cordial way speaks for itself," Waldheim said Thursday night at a reception at the Austrian embassy to the Holy See. "For Austria and for me, this is a very positive development."

Earlier in the day, Waldheim met for 35 minutes with the pontiff at the Vatican in his first state visit since being elected president last July. That election campaign was marked by allegations of his complicity in Nazi war crimes.

The papal audience sparked demonstrations in Rome and drew bitter reaction from Jews in Israel, the United States and elsewhere.

Vatican officials have said the pope agreed to the meeting only after repeated request from Waldheim, a former U.N. secretary-general. They have pointed out that the Polish-born pontiff has spoken out strongly against the Nazis, most recenty in a May visit to West Germany.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Serious Need

If anything is certain these days it is serious need for blood.

At a Bloodmobile meeting recently David Parsons, director of the Greenville American Red Cross blood center, said that ten percent of the blood being collected is not usable. After testing for AIDS and other diseases only 90 percent of the 13 million units collected annually can be used for transfusions.

"None of us is optimistic about the blood supply," Parsons said. Pitt County's goal last year was 5,500 pints and only 4,894 pints were collected. Pitt County Memorial Hospital, which as a referral hospital uses more blood than most, made 13,000 blood transfusions last year. It was the second largest user in the Tidewater region which includes 53 hospitals in eastern North Carolina and southeastern Virginia.

Even though the blood is tested for AIDS, donors do not contract the disease from giving the blood. It is only through receiving blood that contains the AIDS virus that the disease is contracted.

Nevetheless Parsons said more people are stopping rather than starting to give blood.

Because Pitt County Memorial Hospital is a regional facility a part of its blood supply comes from other counties in the Tidewater region. Still, we must do our part here to maintain the blood supply. While many people consider stockpiling their own blood for future personal or family emergencies, the need for a general supply of blood is essential. An individual severely injured in a wreck might not have time to wait for his or her own blood to be brought to the scene.

The AIDS spread has affected the American Red Cross blood program; yet there is no substitute for the blood in many cases. The program has done what it could to protect the blood supply by devising tests for AIDS just as it has had for other diseases.

It is a difficult situation but there is simply no alternative to maintaining an adequate blood supply.

Send The Best

Teacher recruiting is in again.

North Carolina has chosen eight teachers from various subject fields to spend a year recruiting middle, junior high and high school students into the teaching profession.

The teachers are winners in North Carolina's eight regional Teacher of the Year competitions. State Superintendent Craig Phillips named them to be recruiters for 1987-88. The teachers are: Lois Chenault of Beaufort County Schools, Diane Price of Wayne County Schools, Todd Harris of Durham County Schools, Ruth Gurtis of Lee County Schools, Nancy McNeil of Winston-Salem Forsyth County Schools, Beth Clary of Anson County Schools; Patricia Washam of Mooresville City Schools and Sue Carpenter of Swain County Schools.

The group, which obviously represents our best in classroom teachers, will work with the Teacher Recruitment office hoping to persuade the brightest students to consider public school teaching as a profession.

North Carolina has also designated one teacher in each of the state's 341 high schools as a teacher recruiter. Scholarships are available for prospective teachers.

There is obvious concern about an impending shortage of teachers particularly in the math and science fields. While much is heard about the negative aspects of teaching there are also positives to following a career in education. Hopefully the teacher-recruiters can convince bright and ambitious teenagers to consider the profession because the teachers themselves are enthusiastic about what they are doing.

Peachy Dandy

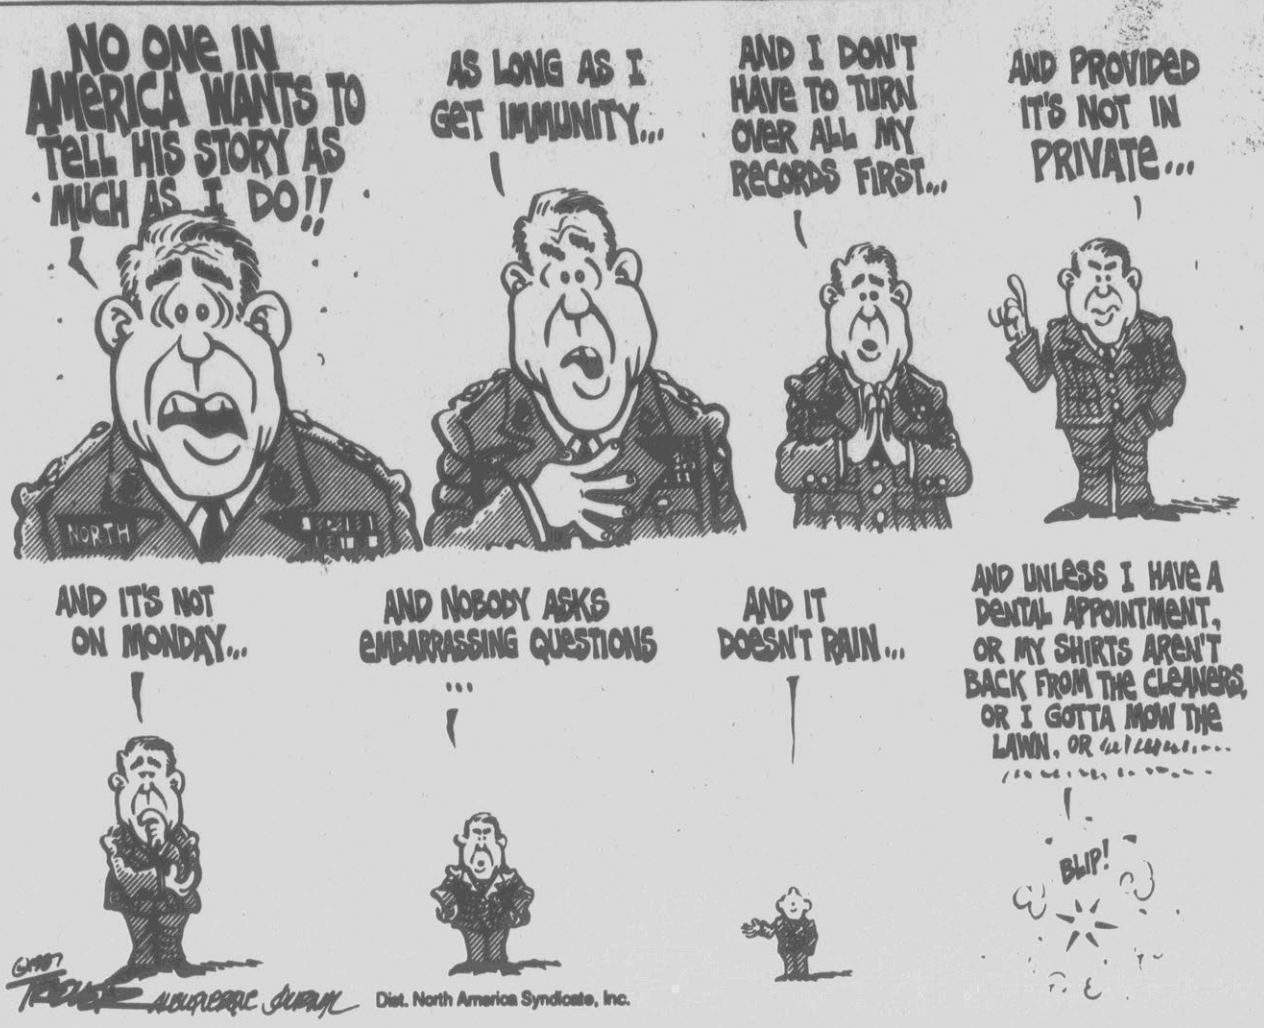

Finally, North Carolina will get a chance to be bullish on peaches.

For the past several years, the state's peach harvest has been the pits. Profit margains have been fuzzier than the fruit itself.

But North Carolina's peach crop looks rosy this year, and that's good news for both growers and lovers. Makers of peach preserves, peach pies and peach ice cream all agree on one thing — there's no fruit like peach fruit.

Of course whatever fruit happens to be in season gets the same due. Strawberries, blueberries and apples all have their day in this state. But when you haven't had peaches in two years, that delicacy takes on a certain appeal.

So go ahead, North Carolinians. Peel your peaches, cook your cobblers and churn your ice cream. Peach season won't last long.

Byrd Planning To Strike Back

WASHINGTON — As Senate Republicans enter their second month of what Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., grimly calls an "obstructionist ... scorched-earth" strategy to thwart Democratic initiatives, Byrd is planning to strike back where it could hurt most.

For starters, Byrd is threatening senators with loss of recess time — including a delay of their month-long August vacation and an indefinite postponement of the early-October adjournment target — if Republicans continue to block action on Democratic proposals from arms control to campaign financing.

Moreover, he is serving notice he will keep the Senate working on legislation to overhaul congressional campaign funding laws — with vote after vote to call attention to the stalling tactics — even if it means delaying action on other popular measures, such as trade legislation.

"They're going to have to keep coming back to the lick-log," said the West Virginia lawmaker. "If the Republicans are going to obstruct and stall on the nation's business, they'll have to take the blame." As for the campaign bill, he added, "I'm not in any big hurry to put it aside."

Senate leaders often resort to such threats to bring discipline to the chronically undisciplined chamber — a task that former majority leader Howard H. Baker Jr., now White House chief of staff, once likened to "pushing a wet noodle."

But Byrd has already shown a stubborn streak about Senate work habits that has resulted in what one colleague derisively called Friday morning "bed-check" votes to keep senators from sneaking away early for weekends. And with Republicans resorting to resourceful guerrilla tactics to challenge his leadership only six months after the Democrats took back control of the Senate, he has a lot at stake in terms of his future capacity to retain control of the Senate agenda.

So far, the Republicans have blocked action on a defense authorization bill that includes "Star Wars" arms-control constraints opposed by the Reagan administration, in addition to stalling the campaign financing measure. In doing so, they have gotten around the Democrats' 54-vote majority, which has held together with remarkable cohesiveness, by resorting to filibusters that can be broken only by 60 or more votes. Using other tactics, they stalled a catchall spending bill for several weeks of public flogging as a "budget-buster."

By mustering the 34 votes necessary to sustain a veto, they have also hoisted warning flags over a number of measures, including the wrap-up spending bill if it includes arms-control provisions sought by the House.

They stood aside from drafting the Senate's version of a budget for next year, contributing to current difficulties in working out a budget compromise between the House and Senate, and Byrd fears a Republican filibuster if the budget produces legislation to raise taxes in any major way.

Regardless of whether Byrd follows through on the threats, his response to the GOP tactics, which he discussed in an interview, underscores the tensions building in the 100th Congress as it moves toward next year's campaign season, where control of the Senate as well as the White House will be at stake.

The GOP strategy aims in part at preventing the Democrats from using Congress as a platform for mounting a campaign focusing on their ability to produce results, especially when those results undermine the legacy of President Reagan and the Republican-led Senate of the last six years.

The Republicans are portraying themselves as protectors of the faith, outnumbered but not outmaneuvered, as they expose what they regard as weak spots in Democratic initiatives, such as "taxpayer" financing of senatorial campaigns and arms-control "meddling" just before an expected U.S.-Soviet summit.

Some Republicans hope to kill the Democratic plans outright; others, especially those who share some of the Democratic goals but disagree over the methods of achieving them, as in the debate over campaign finance revision, want to force the Democrats to deal with their ideas and include them in a final compromise.

But the Senate GOP as a whole exposes itself to charges of "negative" and "obstructionist" tactics, as Byrd is charging, after having invested six years in building a reputation as constructive players in the Washington game.

It is a risk that has not gone unnoticed by Sen. John F. Kerry, D-Mass., chairman of the Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee for next year's elections, who said the Democrats intend to focus in a major way on the GOP tactics as they prepare for the '88 campaign. "They (Republicans) are playing a very risky game," Kerry said. "This isn't governing ... this is obstruction."

Some Republicans are clearly apprehensive about being tagged as obstructionists. Although Minority Leader Robert J. Dole, R-Kan., continues to insist on blocking any movement on the defense-with-arms-control bill, some members of the Armed Services Committee, including ranking Republican John W. Warner, R-Va., have indicated they would feel more comfortable if the Senate could at least move to consideration of the measure.

On campaign finance revision, Dole has stuck with Republicans who are adamantly opposed to spending limits and public financing, but has gone out of his way to stress his desire for a bipartisan compromise with Byrd.

The GOP strategy could be particularly tricky for Dole in his expected bid for the Republican presidential nomination. Having worked hard to lose the negative, "hatchet-man" image he had in earlier days, he has earned a more recent reputation as a skillful achiever of results. And on campaign finance revision, he is expected as a presidential candidate to take the same public financing that he is trying to bar for senatorial campaigns.

There are also risks for the Democrats, especially now that Byrd has decided to join the Republicans in hardball tactics that call for a degree of group discipline and self-sacrifice that does not always come naturally in the Senate.

Byrd's strength thus far has been the unanimous and near-unanimous votes of Senate Democrats on key issues, a stark contrast with the splintering of party ranks in the early Reagan years and even in the pre-Reagan days when Democrats controlled the Senate by a larger margin than they have now. If Byrd has to deliver on his threats, he could find trouble in his own ranks. Democrats who were restive over "bed checks" on Fridays may not take kindly to hanging around through August or doing their Christmas shopping during quorum calls.

Just What Is Being Discussed?

RALEIGH — Legislators can easily get lost during floor debate. Maybe another legislator is lobbying them on a bill, or they're preparing an amendment. When the voting light comes on, they have to ask their colleagues, "What are we voting on?"

But it is unusual to see an entire committee get lost on a bill, especially when the committee chairman has firm control of the meeting. It happened in a recent Senate Finance Committee meeting when state income tax reform was up for discussion.

The bill is 40 pages long. It would tie the state and federal tax codes together and simplify the tax filing. A subcommittee got hold of the bill and turned it into a vehicle to repeal the inventory and intangibles taxes, to raise the corporate income tax and to adjust personal income taxes.

Sen. Dennis Winner, D-Buncombe, sponsor of the bill, proposed one amendment but warned the committee that he didn't really understand it very well. "If you want to get into the details of that, you'll have to ask Martha Harris (staff attorney) because I can't remember."

The amendment was so confusing that Sen. Bill Goldston, D-Rockingham, got quite upset at a potential revenue loss for his county. Goldston started ranting about the inequity of the amendment when committee members stopped him. As it turned out, his county would benefit from the amendment and he should have been arguing for it, not against it.

Sen. Ted Kaplan, D-Forsyth, another architect of the tax reform plan, then stepped forth with a mind-boggling amendment that would affect the corporate income tax which out-of-state companies pay. Having read the amendment, Kaplan said, "This is a little bit easier to understand than it sounds." But still Goldston, maybe only half in jest, asked for a blackboard so everything could be put in order.

That led Sen. Tony Rand, D-Cumberland, to demand, "I'd like to know what we're doing."

Kaplan, seeing that he had a sympathetic although confused committee, tried to bring the bill to a vote after the amendments were completed. But Rauch decided that committee members needed another few days to read the bill over again.

This month's ward for loyal soldier goes to Cultural Resources Secretary Patric Dorsey. At a recent press conference, Gov. Jim Martin was coming under tough questioning about GOP Chairman Jack Hawke's failure to pay his taxes, so Mrs. Dorsey jumped up, interrupted the governor, and began praising a state library program. Eyes glazed over and Martin stood there looking a bit embarrassed.

Mrs. Dorsey spoke for almost five minutes. "I guess she was trying to rescue me," Martin said later. It didn't work. As soon as she sat down, the questions about Hawke started up again.

Marc Findlayson, a textiles lobbyist, was standing around in the Legislative Building last week when a woman mistook him for Rep. Coy Privette, R-Cabarrus, who is 54. Having corrected the woman, Findlayson, 30, said, "I'm honored that you would think that I look as distinguished as Rep. Privette." Both men are about the same height and suffer from heavily receding harilines.

Findlayson is a former reporter for UNC-TV and, maybe this is the difference between reporters and lobbyists, but non of his former colleagues could recall reporter Findlayson ever speaking so loftily of any legislator.

Strength For Today

Abraham Lincoln once said that a man is just about as happy as he makes up his mind to be.

Lincoln knew what he was talking about. Adverse circumstances had pressed upon him with such insistence through the years that he might have been forgiven if he had resigned himself to despair and had declared that happiness was never meant for him.

But evidently Lincoln had made up his mind early in life that he would not allow contradiction and sorrow to make him hopeless and sour on life. He had periods of despondency, but on the whole he lived a remarkably cheerful life. And that was because he had made up his mind to do so.

Will power has a great deal to do with any human situation. Happiness depends primarily on whether we have the determination to be happy regardless of how life treats us.

Waldheim Visit With Pope Brings Painful Holocaust Memories

Analysis

The pope receives ambassadors and heads of government as the sovereign of a diminutive state, just large enough to secure his independence and enable him to keep watch over his far-flung flocks and to shepherd a universal church that transcends national boundaries, classes and time itself. As a sovereign, the pope must deal diplomatically with states and political bodies, with organized religions and ideologies, with which he may at some times be more or less in accord than others. The president of Austria, Kurt Waldheim, is thus in the sheerly diplomatic perspective no different from South African President Pieter W. Botha, Palestine Liberation Organization Chairman Yasser Arafat, Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard A. Shevardnadze or President Reagan, all of whom and so many others John Paul II has received in audience.

But the pope from Poland, where the largest extermination camps were located, himself a former university professor of ethics and as pope a universal teacher of morality, is looked to by his church and indeed by all men and women of good will for precepts of how the Christian world is to deal with the horrendous legacy of Nazi violence perpetrated near the very heart of old Christendom.

John Paul II has evidently chosen, as with his intending assassin, Ali Agca, to exemplify forgiveness. But, unlike Ali Agca, Kurt Waldheim is not a penitent in prison but, until now, a head of government diplomatically isolated within the confines of his republic. He had been barred from the United States by reason of the discovery of his tap root in the Nazi past, gravely compounded by his studied prevarication and concealment of his history when called on to serve the world as U.N. secretary-general.

If the government of a great nation constitutionally neutral in the realm of religion has been moved to debar the president of an ideologically neutral republic and reject appeals for reconsideration, surely the pope and his secretary of state, Cardinal Agostino Casaroli, should have reflected much longer before responding favorably to the pressures of the Christian Democratic Party of Austria to rehabilitate their president's reputation on the world scene by what promised to be an uncommon display of diplomatic ceremony, pomp and even cordiality.

It is hard to believe that the raging dismay in the United States and elsewhere should have come as a surprise to the Vatican. It is painfully sensitive to the fact that its concordat negotiated with the Third Reich in early 1933 was the first diplomatic success of Adolf Hitler. The papal invitation to the president of the land of Hitler's birth, while no doubt correct in the strict sense of protocol, evokes excruciating memories for American Catholics and Protestants no less than for Jews.

'But as the abominations of Nazism were crimes against humanity, we are all morally involved in what took place at the audience in Rome.'

Austria, unlike the Federal Republic of Germany, has undertaken no sustained act of reparation for the Nazi period. Nor have its churches, like those in Germany, made any declaration of collective remorse for their relative silence, or even indirect implication, in what went wrong in their homeland. Instead, with a certain contempt for world opinion, the Austrian people, despite the mounting evidence of concealed documentation, persevered in electing Waldheim in a kind of national referendum that now makes of their president more than a standard head of state. The president of Austria has himself become a collective and symbolic figure, unlike his bland and neutral image as the secretary-general of the United Nations.

But as the abominations of Nazism were crimes against humanity, we are all morally involved in what takes place at the audience in Rome on Thursday. Rather than the Jewish community speaking up alone, American Catholic bishops and many other Christian groups should join in a measured, grave and reasoned ecumenical expression of dismay, and in the formulation of an interfaith appeal to the pope to make some reparation.

Jeremiah, who anticipated the New Covenant no longer graven on the tablets of stone but written on the heart, also warned: "They have healed the wound of my people slightly, saying 'peace, peace,' when there is no peace."

Among the Lord's people are the Austrians themselves, who had indeed been grappling with their past and had sought several innovative ways by which their neutral republic could play a role as mediator between East and West, Jew and Moslem. And among the same Lord's people are the Jews and the Christians of the United States who await the second pilgrimage of the pope in September. The churning emotions that have been aroused can be assuaged only by some signal act and some deeply interpretive word from the pope, who, having received the president of the native land of Hitler, might well in due course receive the president of Israel, the recovered homeland of the Jews, an Israel whose recognition the Vatican has so far studiously avoided.

In the meantime, a pope who as a seminarian in Nazi-occupied Krakow is remembered for his deeds of mercy toward the Jews, and who as pontiff joined in prayers with the chief rabbi of Rome, and who three times prayed in Polish death camps, and whose forthcoming American pilgrimage inspired great hopes for further advances in Jewish-Catholic relations, will surely find some way to relieve the fresh seizure of painful memories, to reach out tactfully and fraternally to the survivors of the Holocaust.

George Huntston Williams, the Hollis Professor of Divinity Emeritus at Harvard University, is the author of "The Mind of John Paul II" (Harper & Row).

Jordan Confident Over School Construction Bill

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Nothing is final, but legislative leaders are close enough to a compromise school construction package to promise that the General Assembly won't adjourn without enacting a bill, Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan says.

"There will be a school financing package if we have to stay here 'til Christmas," Jordan told reporters Thursday.

The Legislative Building has been awash with rumors that a deal between the House and Senate is imminent. Jordan said such talk was premature but that he hoped a settlement would be reached next week.

Meanwhile, the chairman of the Senate Finance Committee said there was a growing consensus among Democrats that a tax increase would be the centerpiece of an eventual compromise.

"I do see a meeting of the minds, a common ground right now" on proposals that lawmakers privately have said were likely candidates for a stopgap plan that would raise about $100 million, Rauch said.

Among them are increasing the corporate income tax from 6 percent to 7 percent, eliminating the property tax on manufacturers' inventories, and speeding up the deadline by which businesses must pay state income taxes withheld from employee paychecks.

"It's just beginning to jell and there's nothing definite, and no one really knows at this time" what all the details will be, Rauch said.

Meanwhile, Republican Gov. Jim Martin said he was not giving up on a $1.5 billion bond issue for school construction although Democratic leaders say it's out of the question.

"A bond issue has the virtue that we would ... only sell the bonds as the counties actually need" school construction money, Martin said at a news conference. It is "a major solution to the school needs that doesn't require a tax increase."

He described the developing compromise bill as "a good-faith effort to try to do something about schools," but said it was "relatively modest. It doesn't come close to the needs. It will do something one year and says we will come back another year and do some more. I would hope so."

Martin said he hoped the Legislature would at least vote on his bond plan, which is bottled up in a Senate committee.

In another development, House Speaker Liston Ramsey said the compromise package might also include a reduction of the amount some businesses are paid for collecting state sales taxes.

Under existing law, businesses keep 3 percent of the sales tax revenue they forward to the state. The tax — 5 cents on the dollar, 2 cents of which goes to local government — generates about $2 billion annually. The businesses save betweeen $50 million and $60 million per year on the 3 percent state sales tax, Ramsey said.

Nineteen states don't give business any discount for collecting the sales tax, Ramsey said in an interview, adding that North Carolina's was among the most generous.

He said he would oppose eliminating the payment to businesses, but that a ceiling on the total that they could keep would generate money that could bolster the school construction fund.

"You don't want to bother the little fellow that's running the service station or the hot dog stand and sending in $50 a month to the state," Ramsey said. "It's just as much trouble to him to collect these taxes as it is for the big outfit — more, because he's got to do it with pencil and paper."

Ramsey and Rauch said they hoped that next week the House and Senate leadership would reach a compromise and present it to the rank-and-file membership.

"I think most of the members ... realize that we're running out of time," Ramsey said.

WENDY SWINK

Little Girl's Body Found In Woods

MORGANTON, N.C. (AP) — Investigators say they do not know how a 3-year-old Morganton girl who had been missing about 36 hours died.

"We don't suspect foul play at this time," said Major Larry Whisnant of the Morganton Department of Public Safety.

The body of Wendy Dawn Swink was found at about 9 a.m. Thursday by the Rockingham County Search and Recovery team in a wooded area next to a small creek several blocks from her home.

The girl reportedly was wearing the same blue "Care Bears" bathing suit she had on when she disappered.

Wendy disappeared, reportedly after following her dog down a Morganton street, at about 7:30 p.m. Tuesday. Officials began organizing searches at about 8 p.m. after the girl's father and stepmother, Glen and Amanda Swink, telephoned police.

A neighbor who said she told Wendy to go back home was apparently one of the last persons to see her alive.

"She was in my yard playing, and I told her, 'Wendy, you better go back home,' but then I saw her going right through yonder," Irene Powell said Tuesday night.

Ms. Powell, who lives two doors down the street, said by the time she went to tell the girl's parents, Wendy had already disappeared.

"She was just gone so fast," she said.

Court Says Abortion Rules Faulty

RALEIGH (AP) — A Wake County Superior Court judge says the state Social Services Commission exceeded its authority in enacting rules that critics say are designed to cut the number of state-funded abortions.

Ruling on a suit filed June 1 by Planned Parenthood of Greater Charlotte and others, Wake County Superior Court Judge Henry Barnett ordered a preliminary injunction enforced until a court resolves the case.

The rules passed by the state commission are not necessary for the administration of the state abortion fund, Barnett said. He also said the new rule mandating the reporting of rape and incest to local district attorneys "clearly" violated the intention of laws passed by the North Carolina General Assembly.

"In this state and country, agencies do not make policy," Charlotte lawyer Leslie Winner, an attorney for the plaintiffs, said in arguing for the preliminary injunction. "Legislators do. Agencies implement policy."

The suit, which named the commission and the State Department of Human Resources as defendants, challenged two commission-supported rules that went into effect June 1.

One of the rules requires county social service counselors to ask low-income women applying for a state-funded abortion whether they would like to see fetal models. Counties have been using charts because the state has received only 70 of the 100 "fetal model kits" it ordered from a Wisconsin company.

Case Of Love

NAGS HEAD, N.C. (AP) — A retired policeman, distraught over the recent paralysis of his wife of 57 years, apparently shot and killed her and then turned the gun on himself in a Dare County nursing home, authorities say.

"It was just a case of a man who loved his wife, and who didn't want to see her suffer anymore," said an employee of the nursing home who declined to be identified. "That's all it was."

Nags Head Police Chief Lonnie Dickens identified the couple as Victor Legg and his wife, Lena, both 79. Police identified a firearm found in the room as a .38-caliber handgun.

Bakkers Take Up Refuge At Resort

By STEVE BAKER
Associated Press Writer

GATLINBURG, Tenn. (AP) — Vendors began hawking Jim and Tammy Bakker T-shirts while the curious kept a watch for the deposed evangelists, who have sought refuge in this mountain resort from a holy war over the PTL ministry.

A gold van carrying a driver and two passengers pulled into the Bakkers' walled compound Thursday evening and spent 45 minutes parked next to the house before three men slipped back into the vehicle and left.

A pickup truck driven by one of the workmen refurbishing the home blocked reporters' cars as the van drove on the only road down the mountain from the exclusive neighborhood.

Ben Humphries, assistant director of the Gatlinburg Chamber of Commerce, said an associate had spoken with the Bakkers after they arrived in the city of 3,400, which has swollen to double that size during this tourist season.

"All I know is they are here," said Humphries.

The Bakkers' search for refuge also led them to cancel a dinner reservation at an Italian restaurant operated by Jeffrey Kalt, who said the couple have been regular customers on their trips to Gatlinburg.

"First they wanted me to come to their place and fix dinner. Then they were going to come here at 8, but they called back and said they just didn't want to get out," said Kalt, who declined to say where the Bakkers were staying.

The Bakkers are planning to make this city their home while they fight to regain control of the PTL television ministry they founded but handed over to the Rev. Jerry Falwell after a sex scandal involving Jim Bakker surfaced.

The home is half a day's drive from the Tega Cay, S.C., residence that the Bakkers insist is theirs, but plan to vacate soon to show they place the ministry ahead of their personal comfort, their attorney, James Toms of Hendersonville, N.C., has said.

The Gatlinburg residence is ringed by a 12-foot high wall made of mountain stone and topped with iron bars. An elaborate security gate separates reporters from the house, where a crew of four workmen have been finishing a $300,000 renovation, including the addition of a hillside swimming pool.

From the pool's deck the Bakkers will be able to see downtown Gatlinburg, where they have been a topic of great interest since Toms announced they would make the city their new residence.

A steady stream of cars, most with out-of-state license plates, has driven by the Bakkers' home in the last three days. Gatlinburg police made several appearances to control traffic and Police Chief Harry Montgomery said he was worried that the extra attention given the new citizens may shoot his overtime budget.

Among those joining reporters outside the Bakkers' gates have been real estate men with prospective buyers in tow, church buses loaded with young people, and the owner of a security company looking for new business.

A welcome sign hung for the Bakkers became an autograph sheet for some visitors. Two young men claiming to be Hare Krishnas who tacked their own note to the cardboard sign urging the couple to give up their worldly possessions.

Legislators Favor Spanking Rules

RALEIGH (AP) — Lawmakers have taken steps to repeal regulations barring corporal punishment in child day-care centers and to make sure a bill to require local rules on spankings in public schools doesn't tie the hands of educators.

The state House voted 64-36 Thursday to let parents decide whether day-care centers can spank their children. Earlier, the Senate Education Committee amended a House-passed bill to make sure corporal punishment could be used in schools without first trying alternative punishments.

"If corporal punishment is appropriate, there's no reason it shouldn't be the first thing you resort to," said Sen. Dennis Winner, D-Buncombe, who offered the amendment in a Senate subcommittee.

Winner acknowledged his efforts would further thwart those of Rep. Marie Colton, D-Buncombe, who favors statewide abolition of corporal punishment in schools.

"What Representative Colton would have liked to have done would be to put in a provision to give me a swift kick," he said.

Rep. Ray Warren, R-Mecklenburg, proposed allowing day-care spankings during House debate on a bill that would make several technical changes in North Carolina's day-care laws. Warren's amendment would repeal a rule by the N.C. Day Care Licensing Commission prohibiting spankings in day-care centers.

Warren said the rule was being interpreted to prohibit even having children stand in the corner. He said some church-school officials were risking imprisonment by defying the regulations.

Rep. Ruth Easterling, D-Mecklenburg, argued that the commission was doing what is best for children. She said it would be ponderous to try to consider each parent's wishes in a crowded day-care center.

"I believe this amendment would create chaos throughout the day-care business in this state," she said.

After the amendment was approved, Ms. Easterling urged the House to approve the bill, which was passed 98-5 and sent to the Senate.

Recorders Allowed

RALEIGH (AP) — An experiment allowing cameras in the courtroom has been a success, so state Supreme Court judges have relaxed the rules to allow hand-held tape recorders at trials and the use of cameras outside of specially designed booths.

Chief Justice James Exum said there had been "good cooperation between the courts and the media" since the experiment began in October 1982.

"We hope and believe this cooperation will continue and we have no reason to believe it won't," he said.

The order, which was approved unanimously by the court, was signed Thursday by Associate Justice Willis Whichard. It extends the experiment of cameras in the courtroom from July 1, 1987, to June 30, 1988.

Chief Justice James Exum Jr. said the new plan "provides enough safeguards for judges to control proceedings so they don't get out of hand."

Since 1982, the experiment has been updated and changed as the Supreme Court saw fit.

In the biggest change from previous rulings, the most recent order says the presiding judge may allow electronic media and still photography coverage without booths or other restrictions.

Previously, photographers had to set up specially designed booths from which they could film and take pictures of judicial proceedings.

The change is conditional upon a determination by the judge that the coverage can be allowed "without disruption of the proceedings and without distraction to the jurors and other participants."

POW Relatives Claim U.S. Mishandling MIA Search

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — The admission by a military agency that the remains it returned to a woman may not be those of her husband shows that there could be many more cases like it, says an attorney who says the U.S. government has covered up evidence of American servicemen missing in Southeast Asia.

"This corroborates our assertion of the lawsuit that some of the remains returned to family members are fraudulent," said Fayetteville lawyer Mark Waple, who represents 25 family members of American servicemen missing in Southeast Asia.

Kathryn Fanning was told by the Armed Services Graves Registration Board there is insufficient evidence that remains given to her are those of her husband, Marine pilot Maj. Hugh Fanning, shot down over North Vietnam in 1967, the Fayetteville Observer reported Thursday.

Mrs. Fanning, of Oklahoma City, Okla., is one of 25 family members who have filed suit, alleging a coverup of information on servicemen missing in action. The suit also accuses the Reagan administration of not doing everything possible to secure the release of prisoners of war.

Waple said Mrs. Fanning was the second plaintiff in the suit whose husband's remains possibly have been misidentified. She was notified June 18 about the May 19 finding by the registration board, and said Thursday she plans to return the set of bones to the government sometime in July with as much publicity as possible.

"Our government has given all this information about live sightings to Vietnam, giving them the opportunity to kill or remove those men from those locations. And yet we can't get those records for ourselves," she said.

Waple filed suit in September 1985 on behalf of two former Special Forces soliders: retired Maj. Mark A. Smith, a prisoner of war during the Vietnam War, and Sgt. Melvin C. McIntire.

U.S. District Court Judge Terrance Boyle ruled in June 1986 that Smith and McIntire did not have standing to bring the suit and dismissed them from it. But more than two dozen family members of missing servicemen have joined the suit as plaintiffs.

The lawsuit charged that the Reagan and past administrations have not done everything possible to bring home living American captives in Southeast Asia. Smith and McIntire said they had learned of American POWs living in Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia through Special Forces missions in southeast Asia since the end of the Vietnam war.

Federal attorneys have argued that the POW issue involves foreign policy, which comes under the realm of the executive branch, and that sensitive and classified information would be divulged if the issue was aired in court.

Government lawyers asked Boyle to reconsider his June 1986 decision affirming judicial jurisdiction in the matter. On Tuesday, Boyle issued his second order affirming the court's jurisdiction in the case.

Boyle also ruled the government's position that only the executive branch deals with issues involving foreign affairs is "in excess of the constitutional authority vested in the executive branch."

Boyle said the question is whether POWs captured in 1960s and 1970s exist. The judge said in his ruling that the plaintiffs' allegations bring the case under the scope of the Hostage Act. The judge said the law meant the president has responsibility to do everything short of war to bring home United States citizens held captive by foreign governments.

Waple said the matter will be reviewed by the 4th Circuit Court of Appeals and couldn't say when the case would come to trial.

"We'll do everything possible to expedite the matter," he said.

Lighthouse

RALEIGH (AP) — A nine-month delay in on a decision on how to protect the Cape Hatteras Lighthouse probably will not put the light in any more danger than it already faces, proponents of a proposal to move the historic structure said Thursday.

"I feel the chances are pretty moderate of anything happening," said Orrin Pilkey, a Duke University marine geologist, responding to questions about a recently announced study on how to save the lighthouse by The National Academy of Sciences.

Pilkey said the spiraled structure's beachfront — which shrank to a width of 70 feet a few years ago but slowly has rebounded to about 150 feet — should be adequate to protect the light during the review.

Pilkey and others want to mount the lighthouse on rails and move it 2,800 feet inland, while proponents opponents of that plan want to see it protected by a seawall that eventually would leave the structure on an island.

Fatality

BURLINGTON, N.C. (AP) — A 24-year-old Caswell County man accused of robbing a Burlington Manufacturer's Outlet store Monday died Wednesday from injuries sustained in a wreck following the robbery.

Burlington police said Michael Stefan Walker, of Route 1, Providence, died at Duke Medical Center's trauma unit from head injuries.

Walker was injured in an automobile accident that occurred after Manhattan Factory Outlet was robbed. Police said they chased a car driven by the suspect to speeds of up to 80 mph.

The suspect's car flipped over in a curve, throwing the driver from the car.

Auto Taxes

RALEIGH (AP) — A House Finance subcommittee was created Thursday to consider four bills aimed at ensuring that all automobile owners pay property taxes on the vehicles.

Rep. Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, said 10 percent of car owners avoid paying the taxes by not listing their automobiles on property tax forms.

Mavretic has proposed removing cars from property tax rolls and instead charging a 4 percent sales tax on new automobiles. Half the tax would go to the state and half to local governments on the basis of where the cars are registered. Mavretic said two-thirds of the states levy similar sales taxes.

Seafood Park

WANCHESE, N.C. (AP) — An agri-business specialist with the N.C. Department of Commerce hopes to attract a major food processing company into the state's only industrial seafood park here, but success may hinge on whether stone jetties are built at Oregon Inlet.

James R. Oliver, an agriculture adviser to Gov. Jim Martin, told the N.C. Seafood Industrial Park Authority meeting Thursday that the seafood park has "great potential."

"A lot is going to depend on whether we can get that inlet stabilized with jetties," he said.

Oliver said there is a possibility that one and perhaps two major food processors would be interested in locating a seafood processing plant at the park. He said only informal talks have been held with officials of the company to this point.

Agent Killed

MEDINA, Ohio (AP) — The Federal Aviation Administration began its investigation Thursday into the crash of a single-engine plane that killed a federal agent and his passenger.

The State Highway Patrol identified the victims as Bernard Butkovich, 36, an agent for the federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms of the U.S. Treasury Department, and Rebecca Attwood, 23, of Mentor. Authorities declined to give Butkovich's address because of his occupation.

Goldsboro Mother, Son Killed

GOLDSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A 7-year-old boy bled to death before he could summon help for him and his mother, both of whom were shot to death in their Goldsboro home, police.

Vanessa Rouse Craddock, 26, and her son, Rasean Lamonte Rouse, were pronounced dead at the scene, Goldsboro police report. Both had been shot several times with what appeared to be a semi-automatic pistol about 9 p.m. Wednesday.

Ms. Craddock, dressed in a nightgown, was found dead in her bedroom, said Maj. O.N. Weaver, head of police investigations. Her son was found on the doorstep of an apartment just 75 feet from his front door.

Weaver said police believe the boy tried to call someone, perhaps police, when the shooting occurred, since they found the telephone off the hook. He apparently was shot in the house and ran for help, but bled to death before rescue workers arrived, he said.

Weaver said there was no sign of forced entry in the house. "We have no leads and no suspects at this time," her said.

Ted McDonough, police coordinator for Goldsboro-Wayne Crime Stoppers, said Crime Stoppers is offering a $1,000 reward in the case.

Rasean was a first grader at North Drive School last school year and his teacher remembered him and his mother well.

"He was probably one of the smartest students I had," Mary Frances Posey said Thursday.

Martin Says Stay In Waste Compact

RALEIGH (AP) — Lawmakers who are pushing for North Carolina's withdrawal from a regional compact for low-level radioactive waste disposal are letting their hearts rule their heads, Gov. Jim Martin says.

"I would characterize it as a proposal to make a political decision as opposed to a technical decision as to where the waste should be placed," Martin said Thursday. "I think that's unfortunate."

The governor voiced strong opposition at his weekly news conference to a bill that would remove North Carolina from the eight-state Southeast Compact for Low-Level Radioactive Waste Disposal.

Under the bill, pending in the House Water and Air Resources Committee, North Carolina would establish its own facility and put it in one of three counties where nuclear power plants are located.

"Ninety-seven counties are ganging up on three counties," he said. "It sure is a sorry way to make a decision as to where any kind of waste ought to go."

The compact commission has chosen North Carolina to host a regional waste disposal facility beginning in 1992. The member states would use the facility for 20 years, after which another state would open a facility.

If North Carolina quits the compact, it will have to operate a facility "forever" with no guarantee that it can exclude wastes from other states, Martin said.

"I think we'd be better off to take our 20 years and close ours down and let somebody else have the honor," Martin said.

On another issue, Martin laughingly said he was not dismayed by an alternative newspaper's description of him as the "state vegetable," but disputed its contention that he had no legislative agenda.

"The Independent," a biweekly publication distributed in the Triangle area, last week published an article headlined, "Is Jim Martin the Real State Vegetable?" The article contended that Martin had been relatively inactive during this year's legislative session, putting forward few substantive initiatives with which even Republican lawmakers were familiar.

In response, Martin's research director, Charlie Hughes, distributed to legislators Wednesday a list of some 39 proposals the governor has made this year.

Philippine Crash Kills 50

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — A Philippine Airlines plane crashed today into a mountainside in the northern Philippines, killing all 50 people aboard, including at least one American, officials said.

Mary Carlin, spokeswoman for the U.S. Embassy, said there could be up to nine other Americans among the 46 passengers on board the plane. She refused to release the names pending notification of families and confirmation of nationality.

The passenger list also included six to nine names that appeared to be Japanese, while the rest appeared to be Filipino.

Airline spokesman Reuben Navarro said the twin-engine HS-748 aircraft was on a one-hour flight from Manila to Baguio City, a resort about 130 miles north of the capital, when it crashed in Benguet province around 11 a.m.

Antonio Babijes, director of the Rescue Coordination Center, said two helicopters landed at the site about seven hours later and reported no survivors.

The plane took off from Manila at 10:19 a.m. with 46 passengers and four crew members aboard, Navarro said. He said the Baguio control tower lost contact with the plane 15 minutes before it was to have landed in Baguio at 11:10 a.m.

Officials originally reported 49 people were aboard but later said the passengers included one infant whose name was not on the passenger list.

The plane crashed about five miles south of the Baguio City airport on the slope of Mount Ugu, about 6,000 feet above sea level.

It was the first crash of a commercial airliner in the Philippines since Sept. 1969, when a Philippine Airlines BAC-111 slammed into a wooded area of Rizal province, killing 45 of the 47 people aboard.

Richard Aspillaga, engineering services manager for Benguet Management Corp., said by telephone from Baguio City that lumberjacks from his firm were the first to reach the site and found only one survivor, who later died.

Aspillaga said the lumberjacks reported by radio that fuselage was intact but had been burned. He said all the bodies were charred except for the person who eventually died.

He said he ordered the lumberjacks to remain in the area pending arrival of other rescue teams.

Leslie Espino, senior airline vice president, said the plane's pilot, Capt. Rosauro Bustamante, radioed the Baguio City control tower shortly before the crash that visibility was poor due to bad weather.

Three U.S. Air Force HH-3 helicopters were sent from Clark Air Base, 50 miles north of Manila, to assist in rescue operations. Aerial rescue operations were suspended late today due to darkness and bad weather.

Espino said the cause of the crash had not been determined but "one could not rule out weather as a contributory cause." He said the pilot had been with the airline since 1979.

"We are very, very heartsick at the occurrence of this incident," he told reporters. "We are doing everything we can, and we will spare nothing to ensure that we get to the crash site as quickly as possible."

Witness Says North, Poindexter Tried To Deceive Congress, Meese

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lt. Col. Oliver L. North, Rear Adm. John M. Poindexter and other administration leaders orchestrated an effort last November to deceive Congress and the Justice Department about U.S. arms sales to Iran, according to testimony to Congress and a transcript released today.

Assistant Attorney General Charles Cooper, who was a central figure in Attorney General Edwin Meese's fact-finding inquiry into the arms sales, said Thursday it became apparent to him that at least North and Poindexter were lying when they helped prepare congressional testimony for then-CIA director William J. Casey.

Casey, according to the transcript, was less than candid to the House Intelligence Committee when he testified on Nov. 21, just as he did the same day to the Senate Intelligence Committee.

Before the House committee, Casey at least partially carried out cover-up plans that had been cooked up the day before on Nov. 20. His only reference to a HAWK anti-aircraft missile shipment a year earlier was in saying the CIA had recommended a "reliable airline" to the Israelis for transportation of unspecified "bulky cargo." The HAWKS were never mentioned.

He went on to describe the sale of 2,008 TOW anti-tank missiles and various HAWK spare parts to Iran for $12 million under authority of Reagan's Jan. 17 intelligence finding. But Casey continued to describe the move as initially an attempt to achieve a diplomatic opening to Iran, at odds with CIA documents that show the initial focus was entirely on release of American hostages.

Casey's declassified testimony also revealed that he told the panel that the National Security Council was involved in arming the Nicaraguan rebels, although he gave few details.

"The NSC has been guiding and active in the private provision of weapons to the Contras down there," he said at one point. "I have kept away from the details because I was barred from doing anything," Casey added in a reference to the congressional ban on military aid to the rebels.

On Thursday, in a day full of revelations that ended the seventh week of the Iran-Contra hearings, it also was disclosed:

—At least one additional major shredding incident, in addition to North's previously described destruction of National Security Council documents, took place as the affair unraveled last fall.

Sen. Warren Rudman, R-N.H., hinted at the shredding, saying figuratively that it could "fill up a half of a boxcar." But he said he was "not at liberty to discuss" it further until the incident is detailed in later hearings.

—Former National Security Adviser Robert C.McFarlane, in an interview with Meese as the attorney general carried out his investigation last November, withheld some details of the affair because he was "trying to protect the president," Cooper said. McFarlane made the comment privately to Meese, who recounted it to Cooper.

—President Reagan expressed "complete surprise" when told by Meese that a memo had been found in North's files that outlined a diversion of Iranian arms sale monies to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels, Cooper said Meese told him. Reagan has contended that he knew nothing of the diversion of funds.

At a meeting on Nov. 20 called by Meese to review Casey's testimony, North inserted language into the draft testimony stating that no one in the U.S. government knew a flight into Iran a year earlier by a CIA-linked air cargo company was carrying U.S.-made Hawk anti-aircraft missiles from Israel.

The original statement had been false, maintaining that the CIA was not aware of the weapons shipment, but North's change broadened the deception. In fact, the weapons were being carried on a plane manned by CIA agents and directed by Duane Clarridge, the agency's covert operations director for Europe.

Oral Says He Has Raised Dead People

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Television evangelist Oral Roberts says he has raised people from the dead.

"I can't tell you about the dead people I've raised," Roberts told more than 5,000 people Thursday at the closing session of the Charismatic Bible Ministries conference. "I've had to stop a sermon, go back, and raise a dead person. It did improve my altar call (audience response) that night."

But he told his audience that medicine also was important. "Let's be honest," he said. "Not everybody we lay hands on gets well. I pray for the doctors."

He said he had been taking antibiotics which made him better and "makes the devil mad. I'm not a candidate for illness anymore."

Roberts, who as endured ridicul and criticism in the past for his descriptions of visits from God, also said God told him that Roberts "will be coming back with my son (Jesus) to reign."

The evangelist said after God told him that he, too, would return to Earth during the Second Coming of Christ, Roberts "got this picture that I would be coming to Tulsa."

"I got a picture in my mind that he's going to position us to rule and reign. Maybe we'll have more power in the second try. ... We're not going to stay over there. Watch what happens to (Oral Roberts University) when I get back."

Reba Files For Divorce

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Grammy Award-winning country singer Reba McEntire has sued for divorce from her husband of 11 years, rodeo champion Charlie Battles.

Miss McEntire, 31, filed the divorce papers Thursday in Atoka County, Okla., said her press agent, Jennifer Bohler. Ms. Bohler did not give details of the suit or reasons for the divorce.

Battles is a former world champion steer wrestler who has helped manage his wife's career. The couple live in Stringtown, Okla.

Miss McEntire won a Grammy this year for best country female vocal performance for "Whoever's in New England." The Country Music Association named her entertainer of the year in 1986.

Service Scheduled For Jackie Gleason

NORTH MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — A closed-casket viewing today for Jackie Gleason offered fans of the "Great One" a chance to pay final respects to the entertainer who brought laughter to millions and glamour to South Florida.

Gleason, who helped usher in television's Golden Age as the blowhard bus driver Ralph Kramden on "The Honeymooners" and won an Academy Award nomination as a pool player in "The Hustler," died of cancer Wednesday at age 71.

At least 1,000 people were expected at the Lithgow Funeral Home for the viewing, said Ronald Siders, a spokesman for the funeral home. No formal ceremony was planned. A private funeral was scheduled for Saturday.

The Brooklyn-born comedian, who died at his home in nearby Lauderhill, broke into television on "The Cavalcade of Stars," before getting his own variety show and developing "The Honeymooners."

A top TV star from the 1950s to the 1970s, Gleason also earned a Tony Award on Broadway but never won an Emmy. His movies included "Requiem for a Heavyweight," "Gigot," the "Smokey and the Bandit" films and "Nothing in Common."

In 1964, he brought his comedy-variety show from New York to Miami Beach, which the announcer each week plugged as the "Fun and Sun Capital of the World." Gleason helped bring celebrities and tourists to the resort town.

"TOTALLY ENCHANTING. It's easily Steve Martin's best picture and firmly establishes him as an authentic comic genius." – George Kirgo, CBS-TV, THE MORNING PROGRAM
"'Roxanne' is a charmer – it's a sun-dappled romantic comedy...stunningly beautiful. Steve Martin is one of the screen's funniest guys...his amazing, bouncy grace makes the film blossom. Daryl Hannah is an intoxicating, intelligent love object." – David Ansen, NEWSWEEK
"Steve Martin is a wonder, he seems to crossbreed the skills of W.C. Fields, Buster Keaton, and Fred Astaire. Daryl Hannah makes a spectacular Roxanne. You want to go to the town; you want to go back to the movie." – Pauline Kael, THE NEW YORKER
"A romantic lark that touches the heart while it tickles the funny bone with the exuberant ring of fresh comic thinking." – Peter Travers, PEOPLE MAGAZINE

JACOB'S WELL

ON THE OUTSKIRTS OF THE ANCIENT SAMARITAN CITY OF SYCHAR, IS JACOB'S WELL WHERE JESUS OF NAZARETH ASKED THE WOMAN OF SAMARIA FOR A DRINK OF WATER. IT IS SITUATED AT THE EASTERN MOUTH OF THE VALLEY BETWEEN MOUNT EBAL ON THE NORTH AND MOUNT GERIZIM ON THE SOUTH. THE WELL IS MORE THAN 75 FEET DEEP BEFORE WATER IS REACHED BUT IT IS STILL USED AND ITS WATER IS PURE AND IS SUPERIOR TO THAT OF NEARBY SPRINGS AND STREAMS. THE DEPTH OF THE WELL CERTAINLY AGREES WITH THE STORY OF THE SAMARITAN WOMAN ADMONISHING JESUS THAT HE HAD NO WAY TO GET WATER FROM SO DEEP A WELL AS THIS ONE WAS! (JOHN 4:11)

THE WELL WAS PROBABLY DUG BECAUSE THE MANY SPRINGS IN THE VALLEY DRIED UP IN THE SUMMER AND PEOPLE NEEDED A GOOD SOURCE OF WATER SUPPLY WHICH A DEEP WELL WOULD GIVE THEM.

United Church Of Christ Observes 30th Birthday

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The United Church of Christ, an American denomination that began a new kind of adventure in church history, is still venturing and probing its special frontiers.

"A future-driven church," its president, the Rev. Avery Post, cals it, "an adventurous people of God."

That company of Christians, 1.7 million of them, this week marks the 30th anniversary of formation, the first and only U.S. church merger to blend denominations of different national origins and of governing systems.

As was the case 30 years ago, "we invoke the word adventure" anew, Post says, still "reaching for and hoping for a journey of change and surprise."

That ferment is particularly evident on the social and theological fronts as the denomination's biennial, representative synod meets June 25-30 in Cleveland, Ohio.

There the 700-plus voting delegates and thousands of other members are expected to take part Sunday in the denomination's biggest processional and worship service, re-enacting the church's founding events.

They took place in Cleveland on June 25, 1957, combining the British-derived Congregational Christian Churches and the German-derived Evangelical and Reformed Church.

Other church mergers have rejoined divided church families, such as the 1983 merger of Southern and Northern Presbyterians into the Presbyterian Church (USA) and the 1987 fusion of three Lutheran branches into the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America.

But the United Church cuts across not only different national origins, but also different creedal heritages and functioning polities.

Congregationalism stemmed from the Puritan "Pilgrim Fathers" in America. In the united body, the autonomy of each of the 6,408 congregations is preserved, but national and regional units provide connecting, operational ties.

The aim of the merging Christians, as defined in their constitution, was to "express more fully the oneness in Christ," to "make more effective their common witness" to him and "to serve his kingdom in the world."

Has it worked? Post, the church's president for 10 years, compares the outcome to a painting described as "every inch alive and worth framing."

While not claiming the unified church is a "masterpiece," he said, "every inch of the canvas of our ministry and mission is alive and worth framing."

It is especially jumping in the doctrinal arena, where a quest for "theological self-understanding" has spurred a recent flood of doctrinal forums, both right and left, conservative and innovative.

A "spiritual renewal" drive has been on for two years in a denomination sometimes criticized as overly concentrated on issues of social justice.

Post terms these theological discussions a "difficult and urgent time. It is clear that God is in the midst of us, shaking us out of our theological lethargy, judging us for pining after cheap grace."

A conference on the church's mission last January presents its declaration for action by the Cleveland synod, asserting the church's commitment to "follow the way of the crucified and risen Christ" by such pursuits as these:

"To praise God, confess our sin and joyfully accept God's fogiveness; to proclaim the Gospel of Jesus Christ in our suffering world; to embody God's love in all people; to hear and give voice to creation's cry for justice and peace ...

"To join oppressed and troubled people in the struggle for liberation; to work for justice, healing and wholeness of life; .. . to discern and celebrate the present and coming reign of God."

Other proposed documents on theological matters call members to a "life of simplicity," rejecting modern obsessions with materialism, and urge a combining of evangelism with work for justice and peace.

LOCAL GRADUATE — L. Earl Stocks Jr. of Snow Hill recently graduated from Ohio University in Athens, Ohio, without ever setting foot on the campus. Stocks completed the university's Prior Learning and External Student programs to receive his degree at the June commencement exercises.

Snow Hill Man Receives Degree

ATHENS, Ohio — When L. Earl Stocks Jr., 47, received his diploma at Ohio University's 223rd commencement this month, it was the first time he'd set foot on the Athens campus.

The quality control specialist completed the 62 hours needed to earn his bachelor of general studies degree through Ohio University's Prior Learning and External Student program.

In addition to transferring credit earned at Pitt Community College and Georgia Southern College, Stocks, a resident of Snow Hill, N.C., received credit for work experience documented in a portfolio and completed correspondence study and course credit by examination work.

"I started the Ohio University work to fulfill personal goals and a promise to my Daddy that he's see me graduate," said Stocks, whose father and setpmother, Earl Sr. and Margaret Stocks of Greenville, N.C., attended the commencement exercises.

Earning a bachelor of general studies degree in engineering management became a goal in itself when circumstances forced Stocks to go into business for himself as a consultant. He is a certified quality control engineer and certified manufacturing engineer in manufacturing management.

Stocks and his wife Beverly are the parents of a son, David, who earned a bachelor's degree in May from the University of North Carolina-Charlotte, and a daughter, Nancy, who attends East Carolina University.

Farmville Youth Attending Summer School At Harvard

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Scott Strickland believes in leaving all his options open.

The 17-year-old Farmville Central High School rising senior has systematically for the past several years taken full advantage of every educational and experiential opportunity that has come his way. He's even investigating fields he suspects he does not want as a career so he will be more sure about the one he does choose.

The idea of leaving all your options open is one he heard a lot about while he was attending Governor's School East at St. Andrews College in Laurinburg between his sophomore and junior years. "That was stressed a lot," he said, "and it sounded like good advice to me. It also sounded like something I was already doing, but it cemented my determination to do it even more fully."

Scott is a honor student, has been throughout his school life. He's been in gifted and talented programs since whenever they were started in the Pitt County Schools. He cannot remember whether it was fourth or fifth grade. He attended elementary school at Falkland, and transferred to Farmville for middle school.

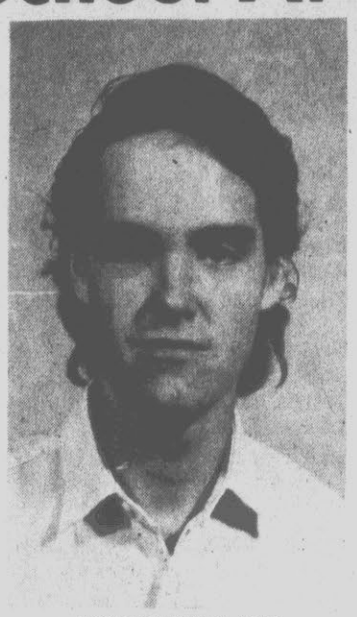

Tomorrow he will fly to Boston to attend summer school at Harvard University. He will be in class for eight weeks with regular Harvard freshmen, taking courses in psychology, creative writing and linguistics. He will live in The Old Yard on campus and have some free time for touring in the Boston area.

He will be there by invitation and because of the generosity of the people of Farmville, he says.

Some time last year he got a letter from Harvard inviting him to take part in the summer program for students who had scored extremely high on their preliminary college board tests. He sent in the necessary applications and soon got word of his acceptance, along with specific information and costs.

"The cost floored me for a while," he said. "I knew there was no way my mother and I could afford that."

But he was encouraged by people at school to start making presentations to Farmville civic clubs. He appeared before both the Kiwanis Club and the Rotary Club and received generous donations from both. These gifts, coupled with donations from other Farmville individuals who have requested to be anonymous, are making his attendance at Harvard possible. The cost is $2650 and his mother has paid only the initial $300 deposit.

SCOTT STRICKLAND

"Before this, I could have thought I could be a beach bum all my life if I chose to," he said. "But the impact of this gift on me is that, though I may never directly repay these people, I will do the most I can with my life. I will pass on what they have given me to as many young people as I can, both in money and in other ways,"

Prior to going to Harvard, he's had two other educational experiences this summer that came out of his commitment to take advantage of every educational opportunity. He applied for and was chosen to attend Boys' State, an American-Legion-sponsored leadership and citizenship awareness program. And he wrote a winning essay that won him a trip to Washington, D.C., for a week, along with other high school students from 26 states. His essay, "What Is A Cooperative secured for him the representation of the Pitt-Greene Electric Membership Corporation on a "Youth Tour" of the District of Columbia. He and 33 other essay contest winners from other electric co-op areas in the state went on a bus to take part in the tour and its related seminars on the value of cooperatives.

During his senior year, he will be taking part in the Honors Medical Program at the East Carolina University School of Medicine each afternoon. Mornings and early afternoons he will be in class at Farmville Central taking an all honors program.

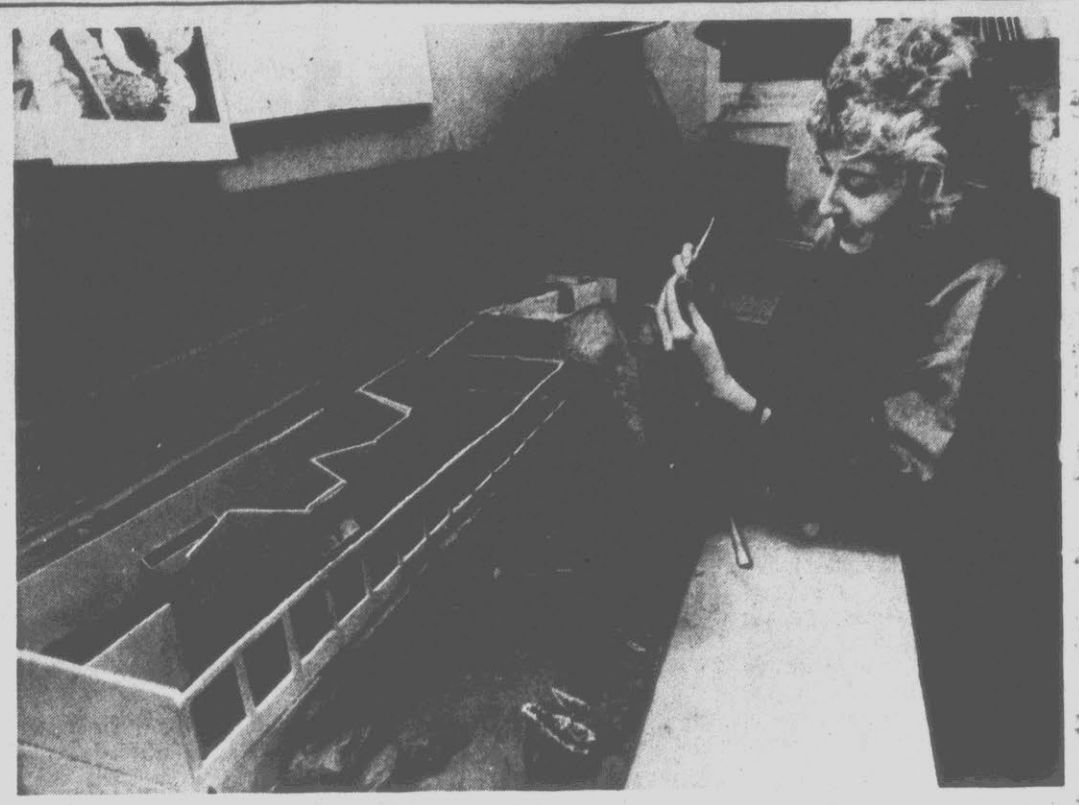

Last year he participated in the Exodus career exploration program and in the Pitt County Teen Leadership Institute. He also played French horn in the school band and was in the school show choir and its color guard.

He's on the school tennis team.

A major motivation for his excelling, he says, is "to bring peace of mind" to his mother, Joan Windham Strickland. "My mother's a rural mail carrier and she gets up early and works very hard to give me everything she can," he says. "I made up my mind a long time ago, I'm going to do everything I can to do well, make her feel good about what I do, never cause her any pain if I can help it, and have a good career so I can give her the things she deserves."

He's not sure what college he will attend. He's made preliminary application to several, including several that will be a challenge both academically and in the price of their tuition. "I know I can do the work if I can just get the scholarships or whatever financial assistance to go," he said.

Another option he's opening up for himself, he hopes, is attendance at the United States Naval Academy. He's passed the first cut and will, if he gets further along in the selection process, be calling on local U.S. senators and representatives to recommend his appointment. "This would be a really good thing, I think," he said, "because I'd get an excellent education and I'd pay for it all myself by fulfilling my military obligation afterwards."

TIME TRAVEL — Sandra Toombs, Cincinnati Museum of Natural History director of exhibits, works on a scale model of an exhibit that will take visitors into the Ice Age. It is scheduled to open in 1991.

Visitors Can Walk Through Ice Age In Cincinnati Exhibit

By JOHN NOLAN
Associated Press Writer

CINCINNATI (AP) — Specialists at the Cincinnati Museum of Natural History are shaping an exhibit that will allow visitors to walk through an Ice Age environment of 19,000 years ago.

The $2.8 million exhibit will cover nearly 20,000 square feet and feature a landscape filled with animals and vegetation of the late Pleistocene Epoch, the last period when glaciers covered much of North America.

The museum says the exhibit will be unique because of its size and scale. Visitors will enter an interpretive area where panels will explain the scene through viewing windows. Then, the first hand contact begins.

"In this exhibit you open the gate and walk in," museum director DeVere Burt says. "You're turned loose on the landscape."

Other museums have smaller, walk-through exhibits of the Ice Age — referred to as "ice fronts" — and walk-through dinosaur exhibits. The Cincinnati Museum of Natural History has a walk-through cavern that shows visitors models of underground rock, mineral formations and marine creatures.

The exhibit is scheduled to open in 1991, when the museum and the Cincinnati Historical Society move into Union Terminal. The old railroad station is being converted into a historical center, with the help of a public bond issue, after failing as a shopping mall.

Greg McDonald, a paleontologist at the museum, is working with experts on the period and artists who are crafting scale models of the exhibit animals. He is drawing on information obtained about prehistoric vertebrates from scientific literature and excavation sites, including the Big Bone Lick site in Boone County, Ky., across the Ohio River from Cincinnati.

Gravel deposits in those sites hold valuable clues left behind when the region's glaciers melted and withdrew, clearing the continent for the appearance of modern man. At the Ice Age's peak, the glaciers covered an estimated 5 million square miles of the North American continent.

The world's sea levels dropped about 300 feet because so much of the water was frozen in the glaciers. The great melt afterward raised sea levels, and the oceans covered huge portions of what had been dry land masses.

McDonald says his goal for the exhibit is to be as realistic as possible to encourage scientific interest in youngsters.

"I want to get kids turned on to science as a discovery," he says. "We hope to have so much in here that you'll think you need numerous trips to find it all."

As part of the realism, McDonald and Sandra Toombs, the museum's director of exhibits, want to show the sabertoothed tiger in a role other than that of a violent predator. They plan to display a mother of the species with young in a cave, with freshly killed meat nearby.

"What we're trying to do is be much more realistic in our portrayal of the prehistoric era," McDonald says.

Ms. Toombs, who envisioned the exhibit and has been planning it since 1978, is planning a simulated ice cave. The landscaping will feature waterways and vegetation, along with reptiles.

The detail will take time to create. On-site work won't begin until 1989. A diorama artist will need two years to paint realistic background scenes on 5,000 sauare feet of wall and ceiling that will sorround the exhibit.

Artists and workmen will use vinyls, plastics and other durable materials for the recreation, Ms. Toombs says. The exhibit is intended to withstand the probing hands of visitors, young and old.

"There will not be any rails, or barbed wire, or mine fields," McDonald says. "But in certain areas that are susceptible to damage, we'll use natural barriers such as streams."

The exhibit is intended to portray the Cincinnati area as it looked 19,000 years ago. The area is believed to have been along the southernmost edge of the last glacial advance.

Over a period of nearly 2 million years, the glaciers helped reshape topography. They turned some of the region's rivers, including the Ohio and the Licking in what is now northern Kentucky, into large freshwater lakes by blocking and damming them.

The Ice Age exhibit will be part of some 230,000 square feet of exhibits to cost a total of $5.13 million, Ms. Toombe says.

The Quebec Bridge on the St. Lawrence River near Quebec City collapsed in 1907 and carried 75 workmen to their deaths. The bridge was started in 1900 and was then the world's largest cantilever bridge. After the accident, construction work was continued and both cantilever sections had been completed when the center span fell into the river, taking the lives of another 13 workmen.

Elliott Fathered Half-Brothers; Let Him Tell Other Family

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am 23. "Elliott" is 45. I am single. Last year he celebrated his 25th wedding anniversary. He and his wife get along very well. He just happens to love me, too. She knows nothing of me, yet I know so much about her. I have known (and loved) Elliott for three years and we have a beautiful 7-month-old son. Elliott paid my way through school and helps me with my bills. He never led me to believe he would marry me, and I never pressured him to. All I want is for him to be a part of my son's life. For now, he sees his son every day and loves him very much.

Elliott is basically living a double life. We spend a lot of time together. I am a Catholic and know it was wrong to get involved with a married man, but it's too late to feel guilty now.

Abby, should his wife be told about this? I don't want her to be hurt, but something like this could give her a heart attack. Elliott and his wife have a 24-year-old son whom I have met. Wouldn't it be nice if he knew he had a half-brother? Should this be brought out in the open? Or is silence the best solution? -- KEEPING QUIET IN ARIZONA

DEAR KEEPING: What are Elliott's thoughts on the matter? And what will you tell your son when he gets old enough to know that his "Daddy" is not married to his mother -- but to some other lady? As I see it, if Elliott loves your child and continues to see him daily, there is no way he can keep the truth from his wife and family. Nor should he. But he should be the one to inform his family.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I live in a nice suburban neighborhood. Our next-door neighbor is a very pleasant young woman who lives alone.

She comes home from work in the middle of the afternoon and often sunbathes in her yard for an hour. We are the only ones who can see into her yard. Sometimes she wears a bikini swimsuit and sometimes she wears an ordinary brassiere and a short panty girdle with the garters tucked up out of sight.

I once made some catty remarks to my husband about the bra and panty girdle outfit, and he asked me to explain what was wrong with it. He said it actually covered about twice as much of her as the bikini. What are your thoughts on this? -- FRIENDLY NEIGHBOR

DEAR NEIGHBOR: How much is covered is not the issue; more to the point, a bikini is appropriate attire for sunbathing -- lingerie is not. However, since your neighbor was sunbathing in the privacy of her own yard (at least she thought she was), she is not accountable for her attire.

DEAR ABBY: What is wrong with kids today, anyway? I am talking about grandchildren. You go to visit friends and their grandchildren come into the living room and turn on the television so loud you can't be heard when you talk -- and you can't hear what the other person is saying either!

I don't care for the television programs the kids turn on. Besides, if I wanted to watch television I would have stayed home.

Please print this. A lot of people need to see it. -- DISGUSTED

DEAR DISGUSTED: The problem is not the kids -- it's the adults in charge of the kids who permit the kids to run the show.

CRASH SCENE — Firefighters and investigators search a residential area in Boston today after a twin-engine plane crashed into one house, bounced into another and then ignited a fire that destroyed three homes. One person was killed and three others were injured. (AP Laserphoto)

Plane Hits Boston Home, Killing One In Fiery Crash

By JOHN J. MULLINS
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON (AP) — A twin-engine plane struck a house and bounced into another in a residential area early today, killing at least one person and touching off a fire that destroyed three homes, officials and a witness said.

Three people were hospitalized with severe burns, and Fire Chief of Operations John White called it "miraculous" that about 20 people safely fled their homes.

Firefighters searched through the debris for other victims. White said one resident was missing, but may not have been home at the time the plane crashed. The dead person was believed to be the pilot.

The plane crashed in Dorchester, a middle-class neighborhood of tightly packed wooden row houses commonly called "triple-deckers" in Boston because they usually are three stories high. The houses are separated from each other by 10- to 15-foot strips of lawn.

Three houses were destroyed, along with six cars and a van, and four homes were damaged in the nine-alarm fire, White said.

The plane, which crashed shortly before 1:30 a.m. was owned by Cash Airlines of Lawrence, said police spokeswoman Nancy Sterling Gleason.

The Federal Aviation Administration said it believed the twin-engine Piper Seneca, with only the pilot on board, was carrying bank notes and other financial papers from Teterboro, N.J., to Logan International Airport.

FAA spokesman Michael Ciccarelli said the pilot was making an instrument approach to Logan and checked in with the tower, then suddenly veered off. He said there was no indication from the pilot that anything was wrong.

An answering service operator at Cash Airlines said she had no information about the plane or how to reach the airline's owner.

Glenn Austin, 25, a mechanic who lives about a quarter-mile from the crash scene, said he was going to a store when he heard the engine of a plane he estimated to be about 400 feet away make a loud hissing noise, and then stop.

Then, he said, "I heard a loud roar and then it (the plane) went up .... It missed my house by about 40 feet."

He said the plane's engine stopped again, and the plane came down, hit one 2½-story house and appeared to bounce into the house next door. "I saw it stick right into that house," he said.

"I ran down the street," he said. "It was blazing all over the place ... I just seen things flying. There were pieces all over the place," he said.

"This one just burst into flames. It just exploded," he said of the middle house of the three destroyed. "I started seeing cars explode," he added.

"The flames were all over the place," said Officer Wayne Williams, one of the first police at the scene.

"When I got here the place was an absolute inferno," said Mayor Raymond Flynn. "I've never seen anything like it. If there had been any wind, it would have taken the whole block."

An unidentified witness told radio station WEEI that the plane stalled twice before it crashed. "It looked like a toy plane coming down," the man said.

It was not known immediately if the plane hit the ground and slid into the three, 2½-story homes, or hit the homes directly. Six cars and one van parked on the street were also destroyed.

A resident who asked not to be identified said the crash woke him up. "When I got there, the entire building (nearby) was in flames," he said. "No one could get in there, and no one could get out."

"All you could see was flames. Flames. That's all it was. Orange flames," said Wayne Donnelly. "Like it was gas on fire or something, you know? It was unbelievable."

Seoul Protests Mount

erupted June 10 with daily anti-government protests.

One policeman and one student have been killed and thousands injured.

In Seoul, huge crowds shouting "Down with the military dictatorship" swarmed through the center of the capital waving South Korean flags as onlookers cheered and motorists honked their horns in a massive show of support.

"Democratic government now!" and "Down with the military dictatorship!" the protesters chanted. Some sang the national anthem.

Many people tried to demonstrate peacefully, shouting "No violence!" But police brutally dispersed the crowds, hurling exploding tear gas grenades. Riot squads trained in martial arts repeatedly charged, punching and kicking.

Christian priests and ministers headed many of the marches and appealed to police not to attack.

"We're doing this for democracy. We want an end to violence in our country," said a Presbyterian minister, his face contorted with pain from tear gas.

A mob of students surrounded a unit of about 70 riot police in front of the Hilton Hotel and pushed some officers off an 8-foot wall into a parking lot. At least 10 officers were injured.

Students set fire to at least one police bus with firebombs in street battles around Namdaemun Market, and clashes erupted outside Seoul Railway Station.

Students fought police in the narrow streets around the city's Roman Catholic cathedral. Officers fired volley after volley of tear gas and charged the protesters.

Many students took refuge in the compound of Myongdong Cathedral, and hundreds of protesters entered the lobby of the Hilton to escape the police.

Hundreds of people were detained and many were seen being beaten by officers. Police filled buses with demonstrators, pushing and shoving to fit more into the packed vehicles.

Scores of people were injured, many hit by tear gas canisters or grenades, flying rocks and firebombs, but there were no immediate reports on the number of casualties.

In the southern city of Kwangju, site of an armed rebellion in 1980, some 20,000 people marched through the streets. A column of thousands of people headed by 110 Catholic priests and nuns marched in the southern port of Pusan.

All security forces were on highest alert nationwide. Authorities were reported to have mobilized up to 60,000 police, about 25,000 of them in Seoul.

Police looking for firebombs or other weapons earlier carried out saarch-and-seizure operations in 22 cities. Patrols in Seoul stopped pedestrians to check identity papers and searched bags for anti-government literature and weapons.

The call for the marches came after the opposition said it was unsatisfied with steps the government took this week to ease tension. The steps included an unprecedented meeting between Chun and Kim Young-sam. Both Chun, who is to step down in February, and his designated successor, Roh Tae-woo, are retired army generals backed by the armed forces, which traditionally have been a powerful political force here.

Chun on April 13 declared an end to discussion of constitutional reform until after his term expires and Seoul stages the 1988 Summer Olympic Games.

Powell Is Retiring

Washington and Richard Posner of Chicago. Both are conservatives.

Reagan previously has named Justices Sandra Day O'Connor and Antonin Scalia to replace Rehnquist, already a member of the court.

On the bench to conclude the court's 1986-87 term, Rehnquist noted the retirement of Powell.

Since his appointment by President Richard M. Nixon, Powell has been a pivotal member of the court's moderate center since 1972.

Powell once said, "I try very hard to reconcile views I may have to help put a court (majority) together."

Indeed, in an important case decided today, one limiting the power of government regulators to grant public access to private property, Powell was part of a 5-4 majority.

"I will miss being an active justice more than I can say," Powell said in his statement.

He will be 80 years old on Sept. 19, and recently has suffered from prostate cancer.

"My health has not been robust," Powell's said in the statement. But he added that a recent check-up at the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn., yielded "favorable" results.

"Both of the physicians in charge concluded that I am presently in good health. But my past illnesses have created problems for the court and for litigants," Powell said. "In sum, I am motivated by ... concern, based on past experience, that I could handicap the court in the event of reoccurences of serious health problems."

Almost from the beginning of his tenure, Powell was a man in the middle.

The soft-spoken Virginian perennially cast fewer dissenting votes than any of his eight brethren.

Although the consummate gentleman, Powell has been fiercely loyal to the institution he served for more than 15 years.

"Justices with varying degrees of widsom and legal scholarship, come and go," he once said. "The institution, nourished by its inherited traditions, is what merits respect and confidence."

Powell was no stranger to the legal community when appointed by Nixon in late 1971 to replace the retired Hugo Black. Before joining the court on Jan. 7, 1972, Powell had served as president of the American Bar Association, the American Bar Foundation and the American College of Trial Lawyers.

A trial lawyer for 34 years, he had been a senior partner in the prestigious Richmond, Va., law firm of Hunton, Williams, Gay, Powell & Gibson.

"I am primarily a lawyer," Powell said in his early days on the court. "I would rather play the game than be the umpire."

Flim-Flam Arrests

Two people were arrested on larceny charges by Greenville police Thursday in connection with a March flim-flam incident.

Detective G.W. Williams said Adriene Evans, 42, and Steven Craig, 46, both of Cleveland, Ohio, were arrested about 5 p.m. on West Third Street.

Williams said the two allegedly took $350 in cash from a woman in a flim-flam scheme that occured March 27 in a supermarket parking lot on North Greene Street.

Pigeons

The hearing lasted three hours and included sworn testimonies.

Everett maintained that the Leggetts had not procured a building permit before erecting the loft. Sermons said no permit was needed because of the size, cost and purpose of the structure.

In his remarks, Whichard spoke of the extent of bird droppings on his car and lawn, damage to his roof and the anxiety the birds have caused him and his wife. Whichard also maintains that the pigeons, now numbering about 100, could be considered a health hazard.

Another neighbor, Wilson Wynne, asked "Why should I, or anyone else, have to put up with this. If we let everyone do his own little thing in his backyard, we'll have an open safari here."

Eight other witnesses are scheduled to give testimony next Wednesday, including some neighbors who have said they do not object to the presence of the birds.

Court

ernment from taking private property without just compensation.

The court today agreed with the Nollans.

Scalia said the coastal commission did not justify the public access requirement by claiming "that the public interest will be served by a continuous strip of publicly accessible beach along the coast."

He said, "The commission may well be right that it is a good idea. But that does not establish that the Nollans (and other coastal residents) alone can be compelled to contribute to its realization."

He said if the commission "wants an easement across the Nollans' property, it must pay for it."

Scalia was joined by Chief Justice William A. Rehnquist and Justices Byron R. White, Lewis F. Powell and Sandra Day O'Connor.

For Powell, who's retirement from the bench was announced today, it was one of his last votes on a major case.

In a dissenting opinion, Justice William J. Brennan said that the ruling "imposes a standard of precision for the exercise of a state's police power that has been discredited for the better part of this century."

Brennan said that the ruling gives the Nollans "a windfall at the expense of the public."

Also dissenting were Justices Thurgood Marshall, Harry A. Blackmun and John Paul Stevens.

Rain Curtailing Wimbledon

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Martina Navratilova is right where she expected be at Wimbledon — in the third round.

The problem is, nobody else is there, and some players have yet to emerge from the locker room.

The reason: Rain, and more rain.

As a result, attention was focused Thursday on the groundsmen, the referee and the state of the courts at the All England Club rather than on Navratilova, who kept on course for a record sixth consecutive title by beating Etsuko Inoue of Japan, 6-1, 6-2 in just 41 minutes.

The match was the only one to beat the showers completely.

"I am so lucky to have been able to finish," Navratilova said. "The worst thing is to be stopped in the middle."

That's exactly what happened to Ivan Lendl, the world's top-ranked men's player, who was in trouble on Centre Court against Italy's Paolo Cane in the only other match that started.

Cane led 6-3, 5-5 when rain, which already had interrupted the second-round match for one long stretch, returned for good and suspended play.

Cane, ranked 40th in the world, broke for a 3-1 lead and clinched the set with a short lob.

The two were on serve in the second set, Cane saving two set points at 4-5, when rain halted play.

Officials said they would consider making "contingency plans" if the inclement weather continued into today. After the rainout, however, they announced that the first round of men's doubles would be reduced to best-of-three sets, rather than the usual best-of-five.

Pending the conditions, Cane and Lendl were to complete their match, followed on Centre Court by Steffi Graf, the No. 2 women's seed, against Tine Scheuer-Larsen of Denmark, as organizers pushed back Thursday's washed-out program by 24 hours.

Defending men's champion Boris Becker was to play Peter Doohan of Australia on Court No. 1.

With three of the first four days badly hit by rain, 44 players had yet to start or complete first-round matches.

Among those who had seen no action were three seeded players in Navratilova's half of the draw, No. 13 Barbara Potter of the United States, No. 14 Katerina Maleeva of Bulgaria, and No. 8 Claudia Kohde-Kilsch of West Germany.

Mills said the tournament was 139 matches behind schedule and that some events could be changed or canceled.

Besides the changes in men's doubles, Mills said other ways of offsetting the backlog of matches would be by extending the tournament championships into a third week. Also conceivable, he said, was asking players to complete two rounds in one day.

However, there was no need to panic, he said.

"In 1982, we had only two clear days out of 13," he said. "By the end of the first week, we had only played 152 matches." The 1982 tournament ended on time with all matches played.

With two more days to go to complete the first week of this year's tournament, 108 matches had been completed.

"We'll make a decision depending on what happens Friday. That's when we'll make contingency plans. The weather is supposed to be getting better next week," Mills said.

Jim Thorne, the head groundsman, said the canvass tarpaulins were keeping the courts green and true.

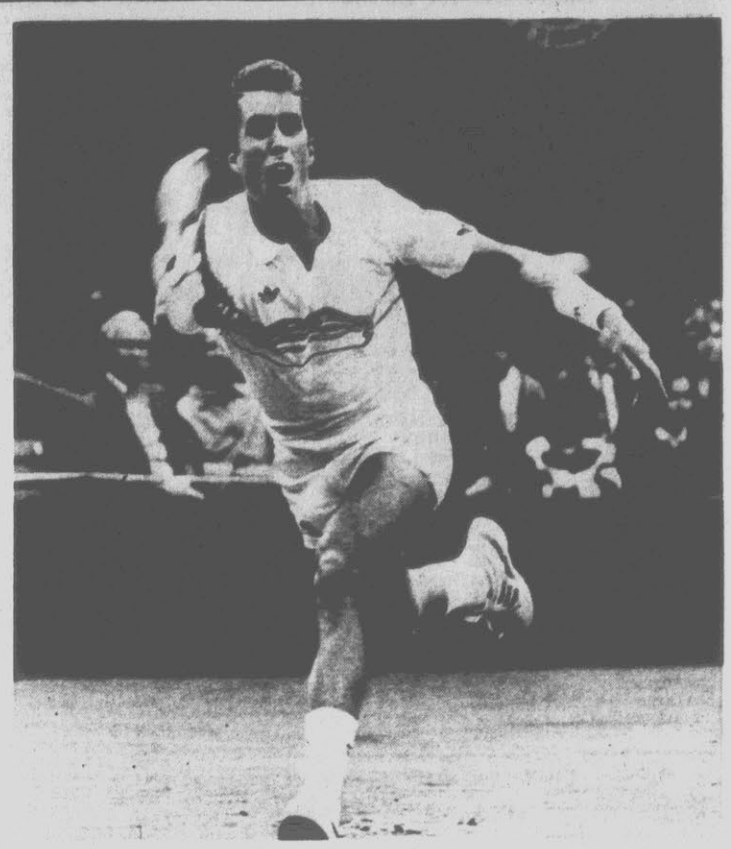

"Even with all this weather, they're not really getting wet," he said. "It's probably more soul destroying for us, the groundstaff, because we've worked the 50 weeks for it."

The British Broadcasting Corp. reported that, with only the 108 matches played, the tournament had gotten off to its worst start.

The statistic could not be verified with the Wimbledon museum or other officials.

Navratilova took nine minutes more to beat her Japanese opponent than she needed to beat her first-round opponent, West Germany's Claudia Porwik, on Wednesday.

Rain interrupted the match for 3½ hours in the fifth game of the first set but when the players returned, Navratilova carried on where she had left off.

Tom Morris

Former East Carolina. coach and present Auburn head coach and Athletic Director Pat Dye was in North Carolina recently speaking to Tiger booster clubs in Raleigh and Charlotte.

Dye, as always, shot straight from the hip while fielding reporter's questions and may have hit the nail right on the head when asked about his day's at East Carolina and the current status of the Pirate football program.

Dye posted a 48-18-1 mark during his six-year stint in Greenville. During that time, the Pirate football program was as competitive as it ever was while playing against a more reasonable schedule as opposed to the meatgrinder schedule the Pirates now face.

"The thing that has happened at East Carolina is unfortunate," Dye was quoted in the Greensboro News and Record as saying. "It's really not fair to whoever coaches there, Ed Emory and now Art Baker. There's not a school in North Carolina that could stand up under the schedule they play and survive. The top football coaches around— Paterno, Switzer, me, Tom Osborne— if they were overloaded like that they wouldn't do any better.

"There aren't any miracles out there. We (at East Carolina) played on even terms with some of the teams in the ACC because we were as good some of the teams in the ACC. I think East Carolina ought to play a good schedule. We played a good schedule when I was there. But I think they ought to play a realistic schedule too. They ought to play four of five good teams every year and then bring it down and play close to their own level— the Richmonds, William and Marys, Southern Mississippis— somebody they've got a chance with."

After last year's Auburn-ECU game, in which the Tigers stomped the Pirates, 45-0, Dye was asked whether the series would continue. "I would love to play East Carolina but it's got to be a situation where it's good for both teams," he said following the debacle.

Dye hits the nail squarely on the head.

But as in any case, there is more than one way of looking at this situation.

When ECU travels to play a school such as Penn State, Miami or even Auburn, as the Pirates did in 1986, there is a substantial monetary reward. This money allows the Athletic Department to fund a lot of the non-revenue sports at ECU. Take away these big payoffs and the non-revenue sports could suffer.

So there are positive points to both arguments.

Caught in the middle are head coach Art Baker and the Pirate players. Its no secret that football is the sport at East Carolina. It receives the most attention from both fans and media alike.

Baker deflected statements about the schedule at nearly every stop of the 1986 schedule.

The schedule was put in place before the present players or he arrived in Greenville, he would say. There was little they could do about it except play hard, he would add.

The players themselves rarely griped about the schedule. Most say they enjoy the challenge.

Still, The Pirates have to walk a fine line. Do they go for the big-money payoffs with college football powers and the recognition that comes with beating them, or do they tone down the schedule for the sake of improving the won-loss record.

It's a tough question.

ECU assistant sports information director Rob Wilson leaves for a similar post at Florida State University in June. Wilson will be returning to his alma-mater and we wish him all the best.

Ronnell Peterson and Eric Blount of Ayden-Grifton, Robin House of Greenville Christian Academy and Phil Medlin of D.H. Conley recently returned from a Five-Star Basketball camp in Radford, Va.

All four made their mark at the camp, which competes on three different levels— NIT, NCAAA and NBA. Peterson, a 6-0 guard, was in the NIT level. Blount, a 5-10 guard, and House, a 6-1 guard, were in the NCAA level while Medlin, a 6-7½ center, competed on the NBA level.

Medlin was chosen one of the top 20 All-Stars at his level, while House was named to the All-Star team at his level.

For House, it was a chance to show he belonged. He averaged 21 points a game last season but is a relative unkown primarily because he plays at a private school. He may not always get the recognition the players at the public schools might get.

"He's a kid with talent who has an opportunity to do something with it," said GCA coach Dale Thatcher. "I've always know how good he is. We don't play the caliber of people the other schools do but we stress the same fundamentals."

Well, the NBA draft and all its hype as come and gone once again. The Colonial Athletic Association had three players selected. The first one was, of course, David Robinson. He was followed by UNC-Wilmington's Brian Rowsom, a third-round choice of the Indiana Pacers and the final CAA pick was American's Frank Ross. Ross was taken in the fifth round by Philadelphia.

East Carolina's Marchell Henry, an All-CAA pick in 1986-87, was ignored in the draft. Henry, who made the United States Basketball League's Long Island Knights as an alternate, and former ECU center Leon Bass may be headed to Europe to play professionally.

Simmons Sinks His Own Team

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

To Atlanta Manager Chuck Tanner, it was a "a billion-to-one" shot. Actually, Ted Simmons had a hard time believing it, too.

"As soon as I hit it, I saw it was going right at him. He had no where to go. It was unbelievable," Simmson said after his line drive hit teammate Glenn Hubbard between first and second base in the ninth inning of Thursday night's game with the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Simmons got a base hit on the play, but Hubbard was declared out and Braves wound up losing 2-1.

"In 41 years of pro ball, I've never seen a game end like that," Atlanta Tanner said. "Someone asked me what were the odds of something like that happening. One in a hundred years, and all the games played everywhere. So, how many billions of games is that?"

The Braves-Dodgers game wasn't the only one to end on a bizarre play Thursday night. In San Francisco, the Giants pulled out a 7-6 decision over the Cincinnati Reds with two runs in the ninth. The deciding run scored when Will Clark hit a bases-loaded ground ball through the middle into center field for an apparent game-winning single.

But Cincinnati's Eric Davis came running in to snag the ball and step on second base. However, he had no play at first as the winning run scored.

In other games, it was St. Louis 3, Philadelphia 0; Montreal 7, Pittsburgh 2; New York 8, Chicago 2, and San Diego 4, Houston 1.

John Shelby's leadoff homer and Mike Marshall's RBI single in the seventh inning broke a scoreless tie, and Dodger right-hander Orel Hershiser went into the ninth with a 2-0 lead.

But a walk and an error got Hershiser into trouble, and the Braves pushed across a run on Ozzie Virgil's groundout. They had men on first and third when Simmons hit a line drive that was headed for right field. But it struck Hubbard on the back of the right shoulder, ending the game.

Hershiser, 8-7, allowed eight hits, struck out seven and walked one. Doyle Alexander, 4-2, failed in his attempt for a fourth consecutive victory.

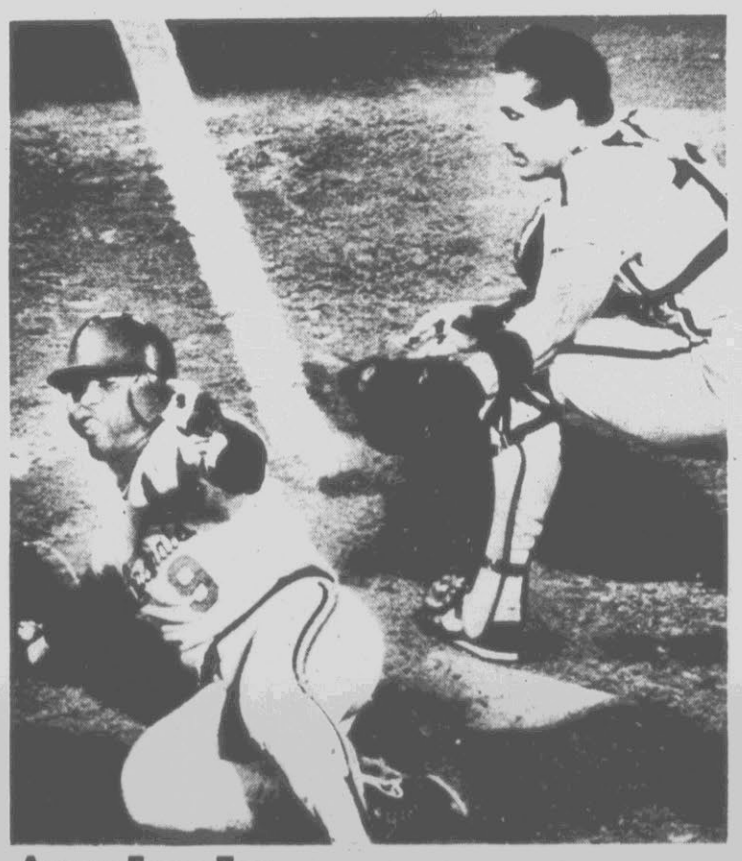

Giants 7, Reds 6

The Giants, who hit five solo homers in overcoming a 4-0 deficit, entered the bottom of the ninth trailing 6-5. But Bob Brenly walked with one out and pinch-hitter Chris Brown singled off reliever Rob Murphy, 4-3.

Frank Williams took over and Joel Youngblood doubled to tie the game. After Robby Thompson walked, John Franco took over and Clark won the game with his bizarre fielder's choice grounder.

The Reds had gone ahead in the top of the ninth when Davis doubled off

Reardon's Fastball Too Much For Tribe

By MIKE NADEL
AP Sports Writer

Jeff Reardon liked the look and feel of his fastball in the bullpen.

The Cleveland Indians weren't too fond of it, however, when the Minnesota reliever started throwing the pitch from the mound to start the eighth inning.

"I felt like I had a good fastball when I was warming up in the bullpen and I went out with the most confidence that I've had since I came here," said Reardon, who pitched two perfect innings Thursday to nail down the Twins' 4-3 victory over the Indians for his 15th save. "I got everybody on fastballs. I only threw a couple of curves. I just went right at them."

Reardon, who came to the Twins in an offseason trade with Montreal, had a rough start to the season. But he has pitched well as the Twins have won 15 of 18 games to take a 4½-game lead over Oakland in the American League West.

"That's the toughest job in baseball — to close out a game against good major-league hitters," said Minnesota's Roy Smalley, who went 3-for-4 with a homer. "He got roughed up early this season but he kept wanting the ball. I have nothing but respect for him."

The Twins-Indians game was the only American League game played Thursday.

Reardon retired the side in the eighth on two strikeouts and a popup. He struck out Chris Bando to start the ninth, but pinch-hitter Carmen Castillo gave Reardon a scare by hitting one deep to center field.

"With this ballpark, I thought it was gone. I just put my head down," Reardon said. "But when I looked back up and saw (Kirby) Puckett was under it, I let out a big sigh of relief."

Reardon then struck out Tony Bernazard to end the game.

The Twins gave starter Bert Blyleven, 6-6, a 3-0 first-inning lead.

Dan Gladden led off with a homer against Cleveland's 48-year-old knuckleballer, Phil Niekro, 5-7. He had gotten some advice from Niekro's brother, Joe, a Minnesota pitcher.

"I asked Joe before the game if Phil stays with the knuckler when he gets behind in the count," said Gladden, whose fourth homer of the year came on a 3-1 pitch. "Joe said, 'No, he'll more or less throw you the fastball.' That's what he threw me and I hit it pretty good."

"I had to throw Gladden a fastball," said Niekro, who has a 316-268 career record after allowing eight hits in the complete game effort. "I didn't want to walk the first man in the first inning."

One out later, Puckett blooped a single and Kent Hrbek followed with a line drive over the right-field fence, just inside the foul pole. It was the 18th homer for Hrbek, who has four homers and eight RBI in his last six games.

Hartford A Convenient Stop For Langer

CROMWELL, Conn. (AP) — The Greater Hartford Open doesn't amount to much more than a stopover on the way back to Europe for Bernhard Langer.

But if the West German keeps playing the way he did in the opening round of the $700,000 tournament, it could amount to a $126,000 first prize and his first PGA Tour victory this year.

On his way from the U.S. Open to next week's Irish Open, Langer and three others shot 6-under-par 65s to enter today's second round one stroke behind Wayne Levi.

"It's on the way over there," Langer explained of his presence. "Instead of facing a nine-hour time change, now I'm only facing a six-hour time change.

"But the main reason is I have to play 15 tournaments to stay a member of the PGA Tour. ... This tournament was as good as any and it fit into my schedule."

Levi made five straight birdies on the back nine Thursday as he took the lead over Denis Watson, Dan Forsman, Jim Thorpe and Langer.

Levi, who has been struggling recently because of inconsistent putting, had just one birdie on the front side before going on his tear from the 12th through 16th holes and adding another on the 18th.

He had no bogeys on the par-71, 6,786-yard Tournament Players Club of Connecticut course and finished the round with a 7-under-par 64.

"I've been struggling all year, especially with the putter. That's been basically the problem. It was a little bit better today," Levi said.

Watson, who has missed the cut in eight of 17 starts this season, birdied the second hole then had his own five-birdie streak starting at No. 4.

He added an eagle on the par-5 10th hole but then bogeyed 15, 16 and 17 to finish at 65.

"It was a lot of fun for a while ... unfortunately I woke up on the last five or six holes," said Watson who, like Tom Watson, won three tournaments in 1984 but hasn't had a victory since.

Langer, who had seven birdies and one bogey, has six finishes among the top 10 but no victories on the PGA Tour since 1985.

He has won twice in Europe this year and acknowledges being the best golfer in Germany, but adds "I'm not a Boris Becker, who has probably millions of fans."

"Golf isn't that popular over there. There's probably only a few hundred thousand who care ... A few years ago when they said Bernhard Langer the golfer, they might have thought I played mini golf or putt-putt."

Forsman, who had six birdies, credited some pre-round tips on the driving range from defending champ-round.

Krzyzewski Announces Team For World University Games

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Head coach Mike Krzyzewski announced Thursday night the 12-man basketball roster that will represent the United States July 8-19 in the World University Games in Zagreb, Yugoslavia.

Sixteen players competed for positions on the team during a training camp at Duke University this week. The U.S. has not won a gold medal in World University Games competition since 1981.

Named to the squad are: B.J. Armstrong, Iowa; Mark Bryant, Seton Hall; Matt Bullard, Colorado; Sean Elliott, Arizona; Danny Ferry, Duke; Billy King, Duke; Eric Leckner, Wyoming; Troy Lewis, Purdue; Perry McDonald, Georgetown; Mitch Redmond, Kansas State; Anthony Taylor, Oregon; and Curtis Wilson, Ohio State.

The four final players who were cut following Thursday's practices were George Ackles of Garden City, Kan., CC; Todd Jadlow of Indiana; Kevin Strickland of Duke; and Chuckie White of Dodge City, Kan., CC. Jadlow and Strickland were named alternates for the squad.

"It was tough to make a cut because everyone worked hard," said Krzyzewski. "This is not the biggest group we would like as far as height and strength ant that's a concern. Not to downgrade the inside players we have, it's just that we don't have the numbers there.

"If this was the Pan Am team we could probably get away with that. But in playing the Russians, the Yugoslavians, the Italians, those are big basketball teams that like to pound you. I believe this is a team that can win, but the margin between victory and defeat could be a narrow one," Krzyzewski added. "A lot will depend on if we can sustain our aggressive defensive attitude. It isn't the type of team things will come easy to. It will have to work hard."

The squad includes four players who were involved in gold-medal winning U.S. programs last summer — Elliott, a member of the World Championship team, and Ferry, Bullard and Bryant, teammates on the Jones Cup team.

Kimrey's Coaching Began With Notice

By WILLIAM A. SHIRES
ECU News Bureau

A notice on a bulletin board seeking an American student to coach a U.S.-style football team in Ferrara, Italy, caught the eye of Baker Lee Kimrey of Graham just before last Christmas.

Kimrey is a 23-year-old health and physical education major at East Carolina University who aspires to a coaching career. He had never been abroad and did not speak a word of Italian. But the job in Ferrara sounded like a challenge.

"It caught my attention," Kimrey said. "I said, 'this sounds like a good deal.' It really was."

It called for a student in the cooperative education program to apply for the position. Kimrey immediately contacted Bill Barrett, a co-op education coordinator, and signed up. He needs 11 hours of course work at ECU before getting his undergraduate degree.

The football coaching job at Ferrara was offered to an ECU student at least partially because of a cultural and academic exchange program between ECU and the University of Ferrara and close ties between Ferrara officials and Dr. Eugene E. Ryan, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences at ECU.

But as Kimrey discovered, football in Italy is not an intercollegiate sport and his team, the Ferrara Aguile (Eagles) represents the city, not the university.

In Italy, where U.S.-style football has taken hold in the past 10 years, the cities obtain sponsors to organize and finance the respective teams. With well-heeled sponsors, the players are paid as in professional football.

Unfortunately, Kimrey found out, Ferrara players are not paid. They play for the love of the sport, coming to practice and to games on their free time from their jobs. They may be teenagers or, in some cases, in their thirties.

"It wasn't what I expected," Kimrey said. "It was completely different."

His contract paid for Kimrey's visa and passport, his airline transportation to Italy, an apartment, a car, a bicycle and reduced meal rates in addition to some spending money.

And in Ferrara, he found a bleak situation. Most of the Ferrara players did not return to the team this year after a 1986 season in which they won only one game and lost 11. Kimrey had only 28 or 30 players and only one month of practice before the opening game on Feb. 4.

In 1986, the Eagles suffered some blowouts. They lost four games by more than 50 points each with scores like 78-12, 68-8 and 60-0.

"I saw our job as one of maintaining the team as a unit," Kimrey said. "We wanted to get a few wins, restore our confidence and build back our spirit.

"I believe we did that. It was very difficult but we made some gains. Our team became very competitive and at the end, the townspeople were turning out to watch us play. That was very encouraging," Kimrey said.

Most of the Italian football teams hire American coaches, but because of his age Kimrey was remarkable. "They didn't expect someone so young to get results so soon," he said.

Basically, he said, the Ferrara players were not physically conditioned "as we know conditioning. And, at first, they were inclined to ignore the fundamentals of football — blocking, tackling, short passes and the running game.

"They lived for the long pass and quick scores — forget the short stuff that gains steady yardage," Kimrey said. "Skip the fundamentals." He sought to change that and instill the importance of fundamental football play.

"We had some big, bulky guys — some with a pasta gut — and the idea of bodybuilding and conditioning soon began to catch on.

"They know American-style football from watching television and they know how the game is played. But they did not know the fundamentals of the game or about getting in shape," he said.

With opponents such as the fearsome Grossetea Angels, the Bologna Towers, the Ancona Dolphins and two teams in Rome, the Gladiators and the Grizzlies, Ferrara managed to win three games while losing nine.

They lost in Rome after a six-hour bus ride. But then when the Roman team came to Ferrara, the Eagles triumphed.

"Everyone seems very pleased," Kimrey said. "It was a great experience. They are talking about my coming back next year, and I would like to if I can work it out." Kimrey will get his degree next December and admits that finances will be a problem.

"I have a student loan that I will be repaying. So I will have to be making money."

The language barrier proved rather easy to overcome. He was given a high school student who spoke perfect English to act as an interpreter. Several of the players also spoke English as did one of two assistant coaches. Then, too, Kimrey picked up basic Italian.

On the football field in Italy, as might be imagined, there is quite a bit of conversing. Calling signals verbally and with one's hands is accepted gridiron-procedure, Italian-style.

Snow Hill Falls, 6-4

GOLDSBORO — Wayne County jumped out to an early 4-0 lead and went on to take a 6-4 win over Snow Hill in Area I American Legion baseball Thursday.

Wayne County scored three runs in the first.

Allen Battle opened with a single. Tommy Winston reached on a walk. Randy Hood sacrificed both batters up. Dexter Evans reached on an error that allowed a run to score. Mike Lanier reached on another error that allowed another run to score before Heath Whitfield singled home Evans with the final run of the inning.

Wayne County added another run in the third before Snow Hill got on the board with two runs in the fourth.

In the fourth, with one out Gary Ginn drew a walk. Shay Beaman singled. Craig Patterson then doubled in Ginn. Uly Russo followed that by knocking in Beaman.

Hook added a two-run homer for Wayne County in the sixth.

Beaman went 3-4 to lead Snow Hill, which falls to 3-5 and travels to Kinston tonight.

SMU Still Having Scandal Problems

DALLAS (AP) — Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox has privately advised Southern Methodist University officials that severance payments to three former athletic officials who resigned after a football scandal may have to be returned, the Dallas Times Herald reported in a copyright story today.

Mattox is required by law to monitor charitable trusts to ensure they are administered properly. He told SMU officials through an intermediary that money paid as part of termination agreements to former Athletic Director Bob Hitch, former football coach Bobby Collins and Hitch's assistant, Henry Lee Parker, may have to be repaid to the university.

Terms of the agreements were made public last week in a United Methodist bishops' committee report.

The report said three former members of SMU's Board of Governors negotiated agreements to pay Hitch, Collins and Parker a total of $863,013 to end their contracts with the university. About $150,000 has been paid so far.

The report said evidence indicated the agreements were made with the expectation that Hitch, Collins and Parker would not reveal details of the illicit payments to football players, including Gov. Bill Clements' role.

As the former chairman of the Board of Governors, Clements allowed payments to football players to continue while the school was on probation for NCAA rules violations.

The National Collegiate Athletic Association banned the SMU football program for 1987 because of the continued payments, and limited the Mustangs to seven road games for 1988. SMU subsequently decided not to field a team for that season.

Elna Christopher, a spokeswoman for Mattox, confirmed Thursday that the attorney general advised someone associated with the university it would be improper for SMU to pay Hitch, Collins and Parker if the payments were connected with a cover-up.

She declined to identify the person, but sources said Mattox spoke with Dallas businessman Charles Terrell, the Times Herald reported. Terrell could not be reached for comment. Ray Hunt, chairman of the SMU Board of Trustees, declined to comment.

Christopher said the telephone conversation occurred shortly after Mattox began a review of the bishops' report to determine whether laws had been violated.

"Those are some of the concerns that he expressed after a thorough reading of the report," she said. "There hasn't been any deal made with SMU and there are no set terms because we have too much to look at yet."

Collins, reached at his home in Hattiesburg, Miss., Thursday night, said he was unaware of Mattox's position and would have no comment on his severance pay. Hitch also declined to comment. Parker could not be reached.

SMU interim President William Stallcup also could not be reached for comment.

SMU professors said they plan to deliver a letter to incoming school president A. Kenneth Pye asking that he consider cutting off payments to Hitch, Collins and Parker.

Peter Winship, president of the SMU Faculty Senate, said he will deliver the letter today.

The attorney general has authority to file a civil lawsuit against anyone with responsibility for administering funds of a charitable trust if he believes the person has misused money entrusted to him. Trustees can be sued for misapplication of funds entrusted to them.

Christopher said Mattox advised SMU that payments already made may have to be returned, and that future payments would have to be stopped.

Mets Might Have Said No To Dr. K

NEW YORK (AP) — If the New York Mets knew Dwight Gooden had used cocaine in high school, would they still have taken him in the first round of the 1982 draft?

"No," Mets vice president Joe McIlvaine said Thursday.

To try to ensure that draft picks are clean, the Mets now compile dossiers on all potential amateur draft choices which include information on possible drug and alcohol use.

"If I knew he was involved in cocaine in high school, then you probably would not have taken him," McIlvaine said Thursday, the day Gooden's first public interviews on his cocaine use and rehabilitation appeared.

Gooden said he first used cocaine during his senior year at Hillsborough High School in Tampa, Fla., and also had used marijuana since high school, according to interviews that appeared Thursday in the New York Post and Newsday.

McIlvaine, the Mets vice president for baseball operations, said in his mind there was a distinction between the use of cocaine and the use of marijuana.

"How many of today's high school students have used marijuana? Fifty percent?," McIlvaine said. "It certainly would have been a factor in our decision. I don't want to say that would have caused us not to take him. But cocaine use ... no, we would not have."

McIlvaine, who was New York's director of scouting from 1981 to 1985, said he had not known the extent of Gooden's drug use before the interviews appeared Thursday.

"I got to my office and the newspapers were there. I haven't even read them yet," McIlvaine said in the Mets clubhouse after Thursday's 8-2 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

He said that it had become standard operating procedure for the Mets to check into the personal life of potential draft choices.

"We don't tell everybody, but we've got a pretty good dossier on every guy we've picked," McIlvaine said.

"There are eighty-five factors when you draft a player. Number one is physical abilty. Does he have the talent inside to make him successful? Does he have the desire, the aggressiveness? Does he have the instinct to play the game?

"Then there are the personal factors. What kind of home does he come from? There's no perfect player. You have to put all the plusses on one side and put all the minuses on the other side.

"If I know a guy's deeply involved ... if he's going out every night and getting high and is a pothead, that's a reason not to take him," McIlvaine said.

McIlvaine said that the Mets had not drafted certain players because they knew of drug use and said that he suspected "one or two" players the Mets had drafted may have used drugs.

"But I can say there hasn't been one player I definitely knew about," he said.

McIlvaine said he was not aware that the Mets were contacted by the Commissioner's Office last year and told that several Mets were using drugs. He said he doesn't wonder if there are others, but the thought is in the back of his mind.

"I guess it's like a parent who worries about his children," McIlvaine said.

Omar Jordan pitched a four-hitter as Jarman's Auto defeated True Value Hardware, 2-1, in Tar Heel Little League baseball action Thursday.

True Value went ahead first, scoring a run in the bottom of the third when Chris Ball reached on a walk, went to third on consecutive wild pitches and scored on an error.

Jarman's came right back to knot the score when Jordan tripled in the bottom of the third and scored on an error.

Jarman's pushed across the winning run in the sixth when Troy Greene opened with a triple. One out later, Dante Randolph drew a walk. After a strikeout, Beth Vincent drew another walk, this one forcing home the winning run.

Jordan had three hits to lead Jarman's. Greene added two more.

The Lions scored eight runs in the bottom of the sixth inning to break open a tight game and roll to a 11-1 win over Kiwanis in North State Little League play Thursday.

The Lions led 3-1 when Dean Barrett reached on an error to start off the sixth for the Lions.

The Lions took advantage of eight walks, one error and base hits by Scott Briley and Deke Herrin during the spurt.

Herrin, Brian Fields, Darlton Holder and Barrett all had two hits apiece for the Lions.

Scott Garrelts, 6-5, and scored on Kurt Stillwell's sacrifice fly.

Cincinnati starter Bill Gullickson surrendered solo home runs by San Francisco's Candy Maldonado, Chris Speier, Mike Aldrete, Robby Thompson and Bob Brenly in a span of three innings and was not involved in the decision.

Cardinals 3, Phillies 0

Greg Mathews pitched a three-hitter and Jack Clark singled in the go-ahead run, leading St. Louis over Philadelphia.

Mathews, 25, evened his record at 5-5 with his second career complete game. He struck out five and walked five.

Clark singled home a run in the third and Tito Landrum had an RBI single for the Cardinals off Bruce Ruffin, 4-6, in the fourth. Terry Pendleton doubled in the eighth and later scored on a fielder's choice by Curt Ford for the Cardinals' final run.

By winning, the Cardinals increased their lead in the National League East to 5½ games over the New York Mets, Montreal Expos and Chicago Cubs.

"I give (catcher) Tony Pena as much credit as I give (Mathews)," said Phillies Manager Lee Elia. "Pena called a heck of a ballgame. Right now they (the Cardinals) are hot.

Expos 7, Pirates 2

Tim Raines hit a two-run homer and Mitch Webster went 4-for-5 with three runs batted in as Montreal defeated Pittsburgh.

Dennis Martinez, 2-0, earned the victory by limiting the Pirates to two runs and six hits over 5 1-3 innings. He left with a torn fingernail on his pitching hand one batter after allowing Johnny Ray's two-run single in the sixth.

Andy McGaffigan pitched hitless ball over the final 3 2-3 innings for his seventh save.

The Expos hammered Pittsburgh starter Mike Dunne, who had a 3-1 record and 1.09 earned run average in his first four major-league starts, for five runs and seven hits in 3 2-3 innings.

"I had a good feeling about this game, with Dunne on the mound, some speed in our lineup and seven left-handed batters to face Martinez," said Pittsburgh Manager Jim Leyland said. "But for some reason the club was flat. Mike had trouble with his control and for some reason he worried about the runners too much."

Mets 8, Cubs 1

Dwight Gooden allowed three hits in seven innings to lead New York over Chicago. Gooden, 4-1, allowed one unearned run, struck out five and walked five in his fifth start since returning from drug rehabilitation.

"Dwight's 95 percent if you're talking about quality performances," said Mets Manager Davey Johnson. "He's close to being the Gooden of last year and the year before. Dwight's had some trouble in day games in the past, but he's already beaten Chicago twice now and that's a good sign."

Mookie Wilson had a single and triple to drive in two runs, and Kevin McReynolds and Rafael Santana each had two RBI on two singles.

Steve Trout, 4-2, who had won his previous four starts, was the loser, allowing five runs on nine hits in 3 2-3 innings.

Padres 4, Astros 1

A bloop single by Carmelo Martinez that Houston second baseman Bill Doran lost in the sun led to two runs in a four-run sixth inning as San Diego beat the Astros.

Martinez' popup would have been the third out in the inning and would have sent the game into the seventh tied 1-1. All four runs were scored after Houston starter Mike Scott, 9-4, retired the first two batters.

San Diego left-hander Dave Dravecky, 3-6, who pitched 6 1-3 innings, allowed four hits and one run, Chuck Jackson's first major-league home run. Lance McCullers pitched the final 2 2-3 innings for his ninth save.

Scott walked Stanley Jefferson with two out in the sixth. Jefferson stole second and scored on a single by Tim Flannery. Tony Gwynn reached on an infield single, then Martinez hit what appeared to be a routine pop fly behind second base. Doran lost the ball in the sun and two runs scored.

After an intentional walk, Kevin Mitchell singled to drive in the final run.

"Any time you go against Mike Scott," said Dravecky, "you know it's a tough ballgame. You've got a guy on the hill who you know most of the time is going to win. Your level of concentration increases. Then you hope you get a break somewhere down the line. That's exactly what happened."

Putt-Putt

Jerry Butts took top honors in the $200 Putt-Putt Skins Game Tournament Thursday night.

Butts won $130 with $110 carrying over to the last hole.

Bobby Ipock won $40 and Ray Taft won $30. Jake Lofton, the final entrant, failed to win any money.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING TO AMEND THE SUBDIVISION ORDINANCE OF THE CITY OF GREENVILLE, NC TITLE 9, CHAPTER 5, ARTICLE C, SECTIONS 9-5-106 AND 9-5-110

Pursuant to Article 19, Chapter 160A of the General Statutes of North Carolina, notice is hereby given that the City Council of the City of Greenville, NC, will conduct a public hearing in the City Council Chambers of the Municipal Building in the City of Greenville, NC, on Thursday, July 9, 1987, at 7:30 p.m. on the question of the adoption of an ordinance amending the Subdivision Ordinance as follows:

Section 1. That Title 9, Chapter 5, Article C, Section 9-5-106 is amended by rewriting said section to read as follows:

"Section 9-5-106 Reservations for recreation areas; generally.

All subdivisions shall indicate recreation area in accordance with section 9-5-107 at the time of submission of the preliminary plat. If such subdivision is developed in sections, such recreation area shall be contained within the first section unless as otherwise approved by the Planning and Zoning Commission upon recommendation of the Director of Recreation and Parks. At the time of submission of the final plat, the owner shall give the city a valid option on the land provided for as recreation area in accordance with section 9-5-110. The total development area shall be used as the basis for computation of the area reserved for recreation purposes."

Section 2. That Title 9, Chapter 5, Article C, Section 9-5-110 is amended by rewriting said section to read as follows:

"Section 9-5-110 Same; owner to give option to city; provisions of option.

At the time of submission of the final plat, the owner shall give to the city a valid option on the land provided for as recreation area. This option shall be a separate agreement, to be drawn by the owner and approved by the city attorney as to form and effect. This option may contain such terms as shall be mutually agreed to by the owner and the city but shall contain the following:

(1) Provision for payment of one hundred (100 dollars to the owner upon execution of the option, which shall be applied to the purchase price if the option is exercised.
(2) Provision that the owner shall sell the land at an agreed raw land value. The raw land value is the fair market value of the recreation area before improvements or development. Should the city and the owner fail to agree on the raw land value, each shall nominate a person and those two shall designate a third person, and these three shall appraise the recreation area. The sum per acre determined by a majority of these shall constitute the price per acre for the option. Cost of this process shall be equally divided between the city and the owner.
(3) Provision that the option shall have a term of at least four (4) years unless terminated by exercise of the option to purchase by the city, or unless sooner terminated by the city by an instrument in writing.
(4) Provision that in addition to the stipulated purchase price if the option is exercised, the owner shall be entitled to interest on the purchase price from the date of execution of the option at six percent (6%) per year.
(5) Provision that the option shall become effective upon recordation of the final subdivision plat in the Pitt County Register of Deeds."

During this public hearing, objections or suggestions will be duly considered by City Council. All interested persons are requested to be present at the hearing, and they will be afforded an opportunity to be heard.

A copy of the proposed ordinance is on file at the City Clerk's office located at 201 W. 5th Street, and is available for public inspection during normal working hours Monday through Friday.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip: BARBER, ON WEEKENDS, LIKES TO LET HIS HAIR DOWN.

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

FOCUS

Passageway

On this day in 1959, President Eisenhower and a number of other dignitaries formally opened the St. Lawrence Seaway. The waterway uses a series of locks, dams and canals to connect the Great Lakes with the Atlantic. The idea of linking these bodies of water first began to be discussed in 1535, when Jacques Cartier searched the area in vain for the Northwest Passage. Today, the St. Lawrence Seaway can accomodate ships up to 730 feet long.

DO YOU KNOW — Which of the Great Lakes is farthest from the Atlantic Ocean?

THURSDAY'S ANSWER — The gorilla family belongs to the order primates.

Horoscope

From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY June 27

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You'll have all the energy you need to get all your affairs in order--especially those dealing with family. But your judgment won't be too clear in the evening.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Have patience and avoid altercations at home. Avoid pursuing personal goals in the evening, but do get organized.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Schedule your time wisely to include all necessary activities. Handle worrisome matters very quickly.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Supress the temptation to go on a spending spree; you'll need the money later. Avoid socializing tonight.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Control your temper and energy, plan time wisely. Don't add extra worry to your personal problems.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): Get rest in the evening--don't go off on any wild tangents. Plan activities very carefully for now.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Avoid pressure by deciding on a course of action and accepting criticism calmly. Do some reading tonight.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Be objective, not upset, over outside matter. Steer clear of an egotistical partner to avoid trouble.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Don't try to escape form your promises, they'll only follow you. Avoid an angry co-worker.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Be economical in your recreational activities, and be careful not to upset your mate in the evening.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Avoid arguments with an associate, or a possible severence could result. Have no guests in this evening.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Move constructively and accurately today. Avoid arguments and be cooperative with friends.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): You want to have a good time, but don't go overboard with spending. Keep the reins on your emotions.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he, or she, will have an incredible amount of energy and should get into a field which helps to channel it in the right direction. Education may be directed toward merchandising, or perhaps sales or advertising. This child should be involved in sports.

Opening lead: King of ♡

Psychologically, there is a block about giving up a trick in a suit in which you have no loser. Technically, though, it can be the right play. Consider this hand.

In a competitive auction North-South did well to reach five clubs. South's hand improved offensively once his suit was raised, and at the same time his defensive capabilities diminished. His choice to bid on, therefore, meets with this department's approval.

West led his king of hearts and it was immediately apparent to declarer that the contract was in danger only if West held the ace of spades and East could gain the lead to play though the king. So declarer developed a plan of campaign that would allow him to set up the diamond suit while keeping East off lead.

It started at trick one, when he allowed West's king of hearts to hold the trick! In an effort to cut down on dummy's entries, West shifted to a trump, won by dummy's eight. The ace of hearts was cashed for a diamond discard, followed by the ace of diamonds and a diamond ruff. When both defenders followed, the contract was unbeatable.

After crossing to the table with the ten of trumps, declarer ruffed another diamond high to set up three long cards in the suit. He entered dummy with a trump to take three spade discards on the long diamonds. The defenders still got their ace of spades, but that was the second and last trick for the defense.

For the technically minded, South's technique is known in the trade as an "avoidance play."

IN THE GENERAL COURT OF JUSTICE SUPERIOR COURT DIVISION
87-SP-119
STATE OF NORTH CAROLINA
COUNTY OF PITT

In the Matter of the proposed Foreclosure of a deed of trust executed by William LaDon Rhodes and wife, Nancy J. Rhodes in an original amount of $38,000.00 dated April 29, 1981, recorded in Book Y-49, Page 16, Pitt County Registry by Richard C. Poole, Substitute Trustee See Appointment of Substitute Trustee as recorded in Book 129 at Page 704 of the Pitt County Registry.

NOTICE OF SUBSTITUTE TRUSTEE'S SALE OF REAL ESTATE

Under and by virtue of the power and authority contained in that certain Deed of Trust executed and delivered by William LaDon Rhodes and wife, Nancy J. Rhodes, dated April 29, 1981, and recorded in the Office of the Register of Deeds for Pitt County North Carolina, in Book Y-49 at Page 16 and because of default in the payment of the indebtedness thereby secured and failure to carry out or perform the stipulations and agreements therein contained and pursuant to the demand of the owner and holder of the indebtedness secured by said Deed of Trust, and pursuant to the Order of the Clerk of Superior Court for Pitt County, North Carolina, entered in this foreclosure proceeding, the undersigned Richard C. Poole, Substitute Trustee, will expose for sale at public auction on the 9th day of July, 1987, at 12:00 noon on the front steps of the Pitt County Courthouse, Greenville, North Carolina, the following described real property (including the house and any other improvements thereon):

Lying and being in Grifton Township, Pitt County, North Carolina and being all of Lot No. 9 in Block "B" in Section 2 in that certain subdivision known as "Pleasant Ridge Subdivision", according to map thereof made by Dickerson-Adams & Associates, dated March 1, 1978, which map is recorded in Map Book 27, Page 5 of the Pitt County Registry; reference to which map is hereby directed for a more detailed and accurate description.

Property address: 204 Mildred Avenue, Route 3, Ayden, NC 28513.

The sale will be made subject to all prior liens (including attorney's fees, foreclousre expenses and trustee's fees), unpaid taxes, restrictions and easements of record and special assessments, if any.

The record owners of the above-described real property as reflected on the records of the Pitt County Register of Deeds not more than ten (10) days prior to the posting of this Notice are William LaDon Rhodes and wife, Nancy J. Rhodes.

Pursuant to North Carolina General Statutes 45-21.10(b), and the terms of the Deed of Trust, any successful bidder may be required to deposit with the Substitute Trustee immediately upon conclusion of the sale a cash deposit of ten (10%) of the bid up to and including $1,000.00 plus five (5%) percent of any excess over $1,000.00. Any successful bidder shall be required to tender the full balance purchase price so bid in cash or certified check at the time the Substitute Trustee tenders to him a deed for the property or attempts to tender such deed, and should said successful bidder fail to pay the full balance purchase price so bid at that time, he shall remain liable on his bid as provided for in North Carolina General Statute 45-21.30(d) and (e).

This sale will be held open ten (10) days for upset bids as required by law.

This 19th day of June, 1987.

USDA Task Force Wants Crop Study

WASHINGTON (AP) — Early in the next century, American farmers could be producing many crops with exotic names to fulfill what a special Agriculture Department task force believes will be a rising industrial demand.

The New Farm and Forest Products Task Force recommended that $1 billion worth of surplus commodities owned by taxpayers be sold by USDA to set up an independent, non-profit foundation to develop new farm and forest products.

Foremost, is said, should be a national goal "to develop and commercialize within 25 years an array of new farm and forest products, utilizing at least 150 million acres of productive capacity, to meet market needs representing net new demand for agricultural and forest production."

A goal of 150 million acres would be equal to almost half of the 312.6 million acres that farmers harvested last year. The bumper corn crop, for example, was harvested from 69.2 million acres.

The 26-member task force estimated that achieving the goal today would generate about 750,000 new jobs, increase farm income by about $30 billion per year and contribute about $100 billion a year to the nation's economy.

Some of the examples cited in the report have been discussed for years by scientists looking at new crop possibilities:

—Pulp and fiber products from trees and kenaf for newsprint, paper, composite structural materials and other products. Kenaf is a fast-growing tropical or subtropical plant related to cotton and hibiscus.

—Rubber, resins and waxes from guayule for use in tires, coatings and other products. Guayule is a perennial shrub native to deserts of the Southwest.

—Industrial oils from the Chinese tallow tree, crambe, cuphea, jojoba, meadowfoam, rapeseed and soybeans for use in lubricants, cosmetics, soaps and detergents, plastics and coatings.

—Alcohol from corn, other starchy crops and similar sources for use as fuel additives.

—Absorbents and other chemicals from corn and other starch crops.

—Carbon char and chemicals from the burning of hardwoods and other woody sources to make high-grade metallurgical products and an array of organic chemicals.

The report said that in addition to the industrial products cited as examples, significant opportunities appear to lie in developing products for use in pharmaceuticals, insecticides, herbicides and disease-control agents for both plants and animals.
