'The Pack Is Back' On The Highways

Patrol Plans Holiday Crackdown

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The North Carolina Highway Patrol will be "wolfpacking" — in Pitt County and across the state — over the July 4 holiday in an effort to reduce the number of accidents, and thus the number of injuries and deaths caused by traffic mishaps.

Joe Dean, secretary of the N.C. Department of Crime Control and Public Safety, said this morning that the Highway Patrol will be using the technique over the holiday period "to make our highways safe for the motoring public."

Dean and Col. Jack Cardwell, commander of the Highway Patrol, were at Highway Patrol Troop A headquarters in Greenville for a press conference today.

Cardwell said wolfpacking is not new to the Patrol. It was used "extensively" in the state in the 1950s.

He explained that "a large number of troopers are assigned to a given area." Some will operate a driver's license checking station, while others will patrol the roads looking for speeders and drinking drivers.

And to keep motorists on their toes, Cardwell said the wolfpacks will "move selectively from place to place."

"We will concentrate our efforts in areas with a high incident of speeding, DWI (driving while impaired) and other highway safety problems," Cardwell said, adding,

"Our objective is to encourage drivers to comply with the traffic laws."

According to Dean, wolfpacking is "a technique to compensate for a lack of manpower."

"Our job is to make our highways safe for the motoring public, and additional manpower is needed to meet the ever-increasing demands of combating the drinking drivers and speeders," Dean said.

The 50 new troopers added to the Patrol by the General Assembly last year were the first increase in the Patrol's manpower since 1973, according to Dean. "We asked for 100 and got 50."

This year, he said, Gov. Jim Martin has again asked the Legislature for 100 new officers.

"The best possible solution," Dean suggested, "is to have enough men spread evenly across the state."

But until the Patrol gets its strength back, Dean said the organization will use such tactics as wolfpacking — selective enforcement — to reduce the number of speeders and drinking drivers on the state's highways.

And selective enforcement is effective.

Dean said that over the three-day Memorial Day weekend in 1986, 23 people died on North Carolina highways. "This year, the highway death toll was predicted to reach 17."

But Dean said the patrol — for the first time statewide in over 20 years — returned to wolfpacking.

Only seven highway deaths were reported during that holiday weekend, and "wolfpacking made the difference by slowing motorists down, keeping drunk drivers off the roads and urging motorists to buckle up," Dean said.

And because it worked so well over the Memorial Day holiday, the patrol is wolfpacking again over the Fourth of July.

"The pack is back. Don't drink and drive, or speed," Dean emphasized.

WOLFPACKING — The state Highway Patrol over the Fourth of July holiday will concentrate troopers in areas with a high incidence of speeding, driving while impaired and other highway safety problems to encourage drivers to comply with the state's traffic laws. Some troopers assigned to the "wolfpacks," which will be moved from place to place, will operate driver's license checking stations, while others will be patrolling the roads in the area. This driver's license checking station, as viewed from a Highway Patrol helicopter, was in operation on U.S. 264 west of Greenville this morning. (Reflector Photo by Stuart Savage)

MORNING WRECK — Rescue personnel remove wreckage from a car to free the driver this morning after an accident caused damage to four passenger vehicles and a tractor-trailer truck. Identification of the accident victims and the cause of the accident were not available. The wreck occurred on N.C. 43 south of Greenville in front of Branch's Mobile Home Park. Pitt County Memorial Hospital's EastCare helicopter was called to help transport one of the victims. Rescue units from Eastern Pines and Winterville were called to the scene. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Jobless Rate Hits '80s Low

WASHINGTON (AP) — Civilian unemployment fell to 6.1 percent last month, the lowest rate of the decade, as fewer teen-agers than expected sought summer jobs, the government said today.

Total employment actually fell by 198,000 last month, the Labor Department said, but the losses were more than offset by a seasonally adjusted decline of nearly 500,000 in the labor force.

The drop in the labor force — all those at work or actively seeking a job — was expected following a May gain of 612,000, which analysts had said was "probably somewhat exaggerated."

The number of people listed as officially unemployed also fell last month, down 286,000 to 7,260,000, the lowest since March 1980.

And the department said the number of "discouraged workers," those who have given up the search for work in the belief a job cannot be found, dropped 130,000 to 1,000,000 in the period of April through June.

Pitt GOP Blasts Hawke For Board Nominations

By DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County Republican Party Chairman Carlton Smith today lambasted state GOP Chairman Jack Hawke for his role in appointments to the county's Board of Elections.

"Jack Hawke, state Republican Party chairman, has purposefully ignored the decisions of the duly elected Republicans of the Pitt County Republican Party as well as the decisions of the 1st Congressional District Executive Committee as regards the selection of the Pitt County Board of Elections," Smith said during a news conference at the Riverside Steak Bar.

Smith's comments came in response to the N.C. Board of Election appointments of Nelson Crisp, Andy Andrews and Myra Cain to the county elections panel which were announced Tuesday. Mrs. Cain is a Democrat, while Mrs. Crisp and Andrews are Republicans.

Mrs. Crisp, a Greenville lawyer, was not included in a list of recommendations submitted by the executive committee of the Pitt County Republican Party, according to Smith.

Smith said the committee submitted a list in order of preference recommending Paul H. Rasberry, Andy Andrews, and Martin Kilcoyne.

Meanwhile, Hawke presented a list to the five-member state board Monday recommending Andrews, Mrs. Crisp and Rasberry, according to officials at the State GOP headquarters in Raleigh.

While Hawke has the power to make such recommendations, Smith said the opinions of the local

Police Say Area Project 'Success'

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Greenville police say a new problem-oriented policing program initiated by the department to curb criminal activity in an area centered around the intersections of Fifth and Ford streets and Fifth and Tyson streets is bringing results.

Sgt. C.J. Hardy, assigned to coordinate the program, said the most striking result has been a decrease in the number of people "hanging around" the area.

Compared with three months ago, Hardy said the number of people "still trying to hang out in the area" has been reduced. And he estimated that drug sales in the area are "down about a third ... on the surface," although he conceded "there is no way to accurately measure the damage to the illegal drug trade."

Another result of the program, Hardy said, is that "a lot of neighbors are sitting on their own porches now (and) kids are playing in their front yards."

Residents also are calling the department in greater numbers to report drug users and drug drops, Hardy said.

Accused War Criminal Dies

MOSCOW (AP) — Karl Linas, deported from the United States and facing a 1962 death sentence for Nazi war crimes in the Soviet Union, died today of heart failure, the official Soviet news agency Tass reported.

Linas, 67, a retired draftsman and land surveyor from Greenlawn, N.Y., had been imprisoned in his native Estonia since April. He was transferred to a Leningrad hospital last Thursday for treatment of a peptic ulcer and other unspecified illnesses, Tass said.

"The illness developed and to render him more qualified medical assistance, Karl Linas was transferred to Leningrad," Tass said. "As a result of a weakening of his heart's activity, he died July 2."

Family members had been notified his condition had deteriorated and had come to the Soviet Union to be with him, Tass said.

Linas was convicted in absentia in 1962 in an Estonian court of taking part in mass killings of Soviet nationals imprisoned at the Tartu concentration camp in Nazi-occupied Estonia. He was sentenced to death.

Soviet officials have said Linas was in charge of the camp.

Tass, in a dispatch based on a report from the Soviet Supreme Court, said Linas recently had undergone two operations. He had been taken to the Leningrad regional hospital from the Tallinn investigatory ward in Estonia's capital.

The U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service said Linas passed himself off as a displaced person in Germany after World War II. He later emigrated to the United States and became a citizen.

In 1982, Linas was stripped of his citizenship on charges that he entered the country under false pretenses, and deportation proceedings began.

Linas battled deportation for the next five years. But he was deported from the United States April 20 after the Supreme Court rejected an appeal from his daughter.

Tass said May 13 that Linas had asked Soviet judicial authorities for a pardon because the acts he was found guilty of took place more than 40 years ago. The news agency said June 25 that Linas' appeal was still being reviewed.

Bond Sale Approved

Robersonville town commissioners authorized the sale of $200,000 in bond anticipation notes during the board's public hearing Monday on the town's 1987-1988 budget.

The money from the bond sale will go toward retiring $150,000 in bills amassed by the town's sewer plant.

The new budget approved by the commissioners will maintain the tax rate for the town at 60 cents per $100 property valuation. The budget went into effect Wednesday.

Martin's Tax Rate Will Hold

WILLIAMSTON — The Martin County Board of Commissioners have tentatively approved the 1987-88 county budget. Final approval, however, will have to wait for the next meeting of the board at 9 a.m. Tuesday.

The board approved a continuing county property tax rate of 77 cents per $100 and a current expense budget of $10.5 million. The tax rate is based on a total property value of $820 million.

District tax figures were also approved, with no changes except for an increase to 5 cents for the Hamilton fire district.

Commissioners also passed a resolution supporting the N.C. Department of Transportation plan to make US 64 four lane from Williamston to Jamesville.

County manager Donnie Pittman informed the commissioners that two projects — the parking lot across from the Governmental Center and the animal shelter at the landfill — were not completed and would have to be moved to the current year. He told them that neither would involve new money, though.

Banyan trees usually sprout from seeds that animals have dropped into cracks in the branches of other trees, and their roots grow down from the host branches and into the ground, says National Geographic World.

South Korean Opposition Calls For 'Total Amnesty'

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Opposition leader Kim Young-sam told the governing party chief today that President Chun Doo-hwan must enact a "total amnesty" of political prisoners to prove he is sincere in promising democratic reform.

At least 28 political prisoners were freed today and more releases were expected in the coming days.

Police said today they arrested 30 radical students who staged a violent demonstration near an industrial complex in southern Seoul on Wednesday. The protest was the first reported anti-government demonstration since Chun announced Wednesday that he would accept opposition demands for wide-ranging democratic reforms. No injuries were reported.

Authorities said the country was quiet today with no reports of demonstrations.

Newspapers reported today that the government was considering moves, including a memorial or compensation, to heal wounds from the bloody military repression of a 1980 uprising in the southern city of Kwangju. In the eyes of many South Koreans, that military action cost Chun's government its legitimacy.

Meanwhile, the nation's two main opposition leaders pledged to remain united in the drive for democracy.

Justice Ministry officials said Wednesday that about 1,100 political prisoners would be released, 100 of them this weekend. The move was part of reforms Chun agreed to following 18 days of widespread protest.

Relatives and supporters shouted "Welcome" and "You have done well" as several students detained for taking part in the protests were released from Seoul Prison.

The officials have said only prisoners serving terms for treason or major criminal offenses would serve out their sentences.

Kim Young-sam, leader of the main opposition Reunification Democratic Party, brought up the subject of political prisoners today when he received a surprise visit from Roh Tae-woo, head of Chun's Democratic Justice Party.

Kim Tae-ryong, a spokesman for the opposition, said Kim Young-sam congratulated Roh on the government's decision to back democratic changes, but added that "it is a fact that some of them (the people) still do not trust 100 percent the government and ruling party."

"So, the government must carry out a total release of political prisoners, total amnesty ... Those professors dismissed must be allowed to return to campuses, those dismissed journalists to newspapers and students to schools without delay."

Roh's responded, "I understand you well," the spokesman said. He did not provide any other details of the talks, which lasted 20 minutes.

On Wednesday, Kim Dae-jung, another top opposition leader, said there were 3,000 political prisoners, and demanded all but declared Communists be freed.

Justice Ministry officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, said apart from the 1,100 prisoners to be released, there were only a few political prisoners who were not being freed because they were convicted of treason or serious crimes.

The students arrested Wednesday were among 60 to 70 radicals who took part in an anti-government protest and hurled firebombs and stones at police, authorities said.

Radical college students advocate the overthrow of the government and establishment of a government dominated by workers and the poor. They say other dissident groups and opposition politicians are opportunists who are not working for real change. The protest appeared to be an isolated incident.

Newspapers reported today that the government was considering measures to heal the wounds of the Kwangju rebellion.

CLEANING UP — A car owner used a broom to sweep off some of the dust in a futile effort to clean up after heavy rains caused flash flooding near Arth-Goldau, Switzerland, this week. Haitians Demand New Government

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Organizers of a strike that shut down the capital and sparked widespread violence this week are demanding that Haiti's ruling military-civilian council resign.

The general strike, which began Monday and had a 24-hour hiatus Wednesday, was to resume today.

This week's protest is the largest anti-government action since dictator Jean-Claude Duvalier fled the country in 1986.

The strike was organized by dozens of student, political and civic groups to protest a new electoral decree that allowed the three-man ruling council to seize control of upcoming elections from the constitutionally-appointed electoral commission.

At least seven people died in clashes with soldiers Monday and Tuesday.

"The council should step down," said Jean-Claude Bajaux, leader of a coalition of students, peasants and unions called the National Committee of Democratic Forces, at a Wednesday news conference broadcast on national television.

Rene Theodore, the leader of the United Party of Haitian Communists which endorsed the strikes, said, "We are demanding the resignation of (council president Lt. Gen.) Henri Namphy, all of the council and government ministers."

Strikes in Haiti have occurred sporadically since Duvalier's ouster, but this week's action had the broadest popular support, a government official acknowledged.

"It's the first time moderates have joined the strikes," the official said, speaking on condition of anonymity. "We're in a critical period."

The official added that the government had no intention of stepping down or enlarging the council.

The government met Wednesday afternoon and evening with the nine-member electoral commission to "initiate a dialogue on the electoral process," the Ministry of Information said in a news release. There was no word on the results of the meetings.

Namphy promised in a televised speech Tuesday to negotiate with the commission after two days of protests.

Organizers suspended the strike Wednesday to allow people to buy groceries and gas.

Think Safety

It's an old message for holidays such as July 4: be careful and avoid accidents.

Particularly is this true on the highways. Literally millions of people will be in cars traveling to far off destinations. They will be on the way home to visit relatives, to the beaches and to other resorts, particularly so this weekend because July 4 falls on Saturday making it a long holiday weekend.

For those who want to arrive safely the traffic crush means exercising extraordinary care. Defensive driving is the best approach which means watching out for careless moves by other drivers and allowing that extra split second of time which can mean avoiding a collision.

It is also the driver's responsibility to watch for the ball rolling in the street which could be followed by a running child. Vehicle operators must watch for sudden moves by pedestrians and bicyclists which could send them swerving into a vehicle. Most of all, careful drivers must watch for erratic moves by other vehicles which might indicate the approach of a driver under the influence of an intoxicant.

Careful driving also includes the proper use of seat belts, not only by the driver but by all passengers. Small children should be properly strapped in.

Observing the speed limits is one of the best ways to reduce accident possibilities. The risks of speeding far offset the expectation of getting to one's destinations a few minutes sooner.

While safety on the highways is all important, thinking safety does not end when we get out of the automobile.

At the beaches and swimming pools care should be taken to avoid disaster. Don't swim alone and swim in areas which are covered by life guards. Know your swimming abilities before getting into difficult waters.

Fireworks injure many people every year and in North Carolina they are illegal. The best advice is to attend one of the many fireworks shows around the state where the displays are done under supervised conditions.

There is even danger in the backyard cookout. A small child can turn over a grill and suffer burns.

There are plenty of ways to enjoy ourselves over this July 4 holiday. We can have a good time, travel, swim and cook out ... but while we are doing those things we only have to remember, be careful.

Warning

This country is moving into an era of high-risk economic problems which neither Congress nor the White House appears anxious to resolve; at least, nobody's talking about it.

As late as 1982 the United States was the world's largest creditor nation with a surplus investment that year of $136.2 billion. Today we owe other countries $263.6 billion and the U.S. ranks as the world's largest debtor nation. Many economists are saying we're on our way to rolling up a trillion dollar debt to the rest of the world in the next few years. That debt burden is seen to be so heavy that Americans' standard of living will be severely endangered as foreigners demand higher and higher interest payments just to service the debt.

Reduce this, in your own mind, to a household budget and the impact of interest payments on family indebtedness and you can begin to appreciate the picture.

Some economists are saying the swollen national debt may mean interest payments of $50 billion or more annually. The transfer of such large amounts of money raises concerns the U.S. economy could become captive to whims of foreign investors.

The country's plunge into the status of a debtor nation is directly linked to its merchandise trade deficits and the only way the U.S. can pay off its foreign debt is by running surpluses in its merchandise trade accounts — something our trading "partners" resist with promises that somehow never become reality.

David Hale, chief economist of Kemper Financial Services, says America is going to find itself in a similar position to the late 19th century when decisions by British investors to pull their funds out of the United States triggered recessions in America. "The great financial crises of the 19th century were all tied up in interruptions of the flow of British capital to this country", he says. "President Reagan's policies have taken us back to a time when American financial markets have more in common with the world of 1887 than 1977."

We have enough domestic economic problems already; and nobody is coming forth with recognizable answers. The logical place for that to begin would be in Washington but finding anybody ready to "bite the bullet" is never easy.

They shun hard decisions up there as though those choices are the political equivalent of AIDS.

Opinion

— Haynes Johnson —

A Celebration Of Foresight

WASHINGTON — Gather round, fellow citizens. The question before the house, and before the fireworks start, is: Aside from longevity, what should we be celebrating?

For instance, what do you suppose those old-looking young Americans would think about the country they created 211 years ago this Fourth of July or the constitutional system of government they adopted 200 years ago this September?

They were an unlikely bunch of rebels, seeming so stiff and formal and proper in pictures that survive them. If they materialized now, they would appear unbelievably old-fashioned to 20th century eyes. Yet there was nothing outmoded about their thinking or limited about their vision. As current events make dramatically clear, they were remarkably farsighted in anticipating the kinds of problems present-day Americans confront and in fashioning means to deal with them, if we choose to use them.

Two contemporary questions of great magnitude are illustrative: the Iran-contra hearings and the advice-and-consent process about to begin on a president's nominee to the Supreme Court.

Each goes to the heart of the constitutional system, and each presents a special challenge for the nation's elected officials and citizens. Together, they pose the central question addressed by the Founding Fathers two centuries ago, the one they knew would always be with us. It is about power: how best to exercise it, how best to check it.

The founders understood two things from bitter experience as colonial serfs and from what history had taught about rulers and regimes. First, those who wielded great power would inevitably abuse it. Second, safeguards were needed to counter and correct such abuses when they occurred. Without these, freedom of mind, spirit and action could not flourish. Their elaborate system of checks and balances was constructed with those facts in mind.

There's no doubt that those first citizens of the United States of America would instantly grasp the significance of the congressional hearings into executive abuses of power exemplified in the Iran-contra affair.

A recurring refrain about the hearings, echoed recently by the president and accepted by some in the news media and country, is that they are boring and insignificant — soporific, in one writer's view — a waste of time and taxpayers' money. Nothing could be less true. Far from finished, they have documented what will likely stand as one of the most sweeping attempts in American history by the executive branch to employ extralegal secret means, hidden from public scrutiny and beyond any political debate or accountability, to achieve ends that the policy-makers were unwilling to submit to the democratic process for decision.

With this has come a sordid tale of official deceit, falsification and destruction of documents, concocted cover stories, plotting by high officials on how to mask their actions, backdated legal findings that subsequently disappeared after being drafted for submission to the president, deliberate misleading of Congress and the American people and a pervasive attitude that the policy-makers were above the law.

The scope of these actions is virtually unprecedented. Had such presidential failure to "take care that the laws be faithfully executed" become known at a different time in Ronald Reagan's term, the ultimate constitutional check on presidential power — impeachment — might well have been employed.

Instead, operating for every citizen to see is the remedy foreseen 200 years ago — Congress or the courts can act to redress the altered balance of power.

The founders would have been gratified to see that process at work. They would also be reassured to know that their evenhandedness in balancing power permits even a weakened president like Reagan the opportunity to try to influence American life for decades through judicial appointment, which is what the forthcoming Supreme Court nomination deliberations will be about.

That these two events, each of critical importance for present and future, could occur almost simultaneously without undue stress to the nation is a testament to how effectively the system formed so long ago by those practical, tough-minded, independent young Americans continues to function. It is as modern as it needs to be.

That, fellow citizen, provides reason enough to celebrate.

Carving A Niche Carefully

HOUSTON — "Each of them has to find a way to break out of the chorus line," media consultant Robert Squier said before the house lights dimmed and the television lights flashed on at the first nationally televised Democratic presidential debate here Wednesday. "But none of them can afford to make himself look foolish."

As it turned out, the performances of the seven contenders were shaped by the collective dilemma they all faced as they tried to carve out a niche for themselves on the national political landscape.

So in a sort of political cost benefit analyses, each of the candidates had to balance the advantage of making a strong impression against the risk of a negative reaction if they seemed to overplay their hand.

For the most part they stayed away from the perilous course of baiting each other, but beyond that they each took a different tack.

For example, it was clear from the answer to the very first question that at least one candidate was willing to strike out boldly.

Former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt, still at single digits in the polls and with his financial ledger already in the red, ticked off the names of some of those whom he would appoint to the Cabinet. Presumably not by accident, the list was nicely balanced, including a Southerner, Georgia Sen. Sam Nunn, who is considering making the race for president himself, a black, Pennsylvania Rep. William Gray, chairman of the House Budget Committee, and former Trade Ambassador Robert Strauss, who was co-host of the debate along with conservative commentator William Buckley.

He did not say what posts he had in mind for them. But by identifying some of his Cabinet preferences so early in the game, Babbitt was trying to show that he is "gutsy, decisive and prepared" to serve in the nation's highest office, his consultant, Sergio Bendixen, said.

But in the case of Tennessee Sen. Albert Gore, who also has had a slow fund-raising start, natural caution seemed to override the opportunity to make up ground in a few minutes on national television. "He doesn't have to do anything more than be himself," campaign manager Fred Martin said before the debate began.

Gore did permit himself one moment of passion, when host Buckley touched on the field in which the 39-year-old senator has won a reputation for expertise — the arms race. Buckley mentioned a report by what he said was a panel of scientists which had kind words for President Reagan's controversial Strategic Defense Initiative, or "Star Wars" program.

"That really wasn't a distinguished panel of scientists," Gore snapped. "Those were partisan advocates of the Star Wars program." And his rejoinder won him a handsome round of applause.

Temperament also seemed to guide Illinois Sen. Paul Simon, another slow starter in the race. Simon did not plan "any tricks," his campaign manager Floyd Fithian said before hand.

But Simon did score points with his response to the pre-arranged question about which past president's portrait he would hang in the Cabinet room. Rather than a president, Simon said, he would hang the portrait of a "steel worker ... a coal miner ... a farm family, a working mother. I want to see America on that wall and I want to remind the Cabinet members that they work for those people."

In sharp contrast with the low-keyed Simon was Delaware Sen. Joseph Biden, naturally flamboyant, and naturally given to taking chances. "He'll be the one to try to hit the home run," one Democratic strategist had predicted earlier Wednesday.

But Biden did not swing from the heels. He did take a jab, though, at Missouri Rep. Richard Gephardt, whose tough amendment to the House trade bill has led to criticism of him as protectionist. Biden said he preferred the Senate trade bill to the House legislation, because the Senate bill did not have an amendment whose name, Biden said coyly, he would rather not mention.

Gephardt leads the polls in Iowa and, some believe, enjoys an organizational lead in the South. Maybe that is why Gephardt did not respond to Biden's sniping, or to other criticism of his proposal for an oil import levy. But his answers were for the most part crisp and confident. And when Buckley seized upon a comment he made about the bleakness of economic conditions under Reagan and asked him "How can it get darker than midnight?" Gephardt quickly responded: "In the Reagan administration it can."

With more than $4 million in his campaign treasury Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis could afford to be relatively relaxed and look upon the evening as a chance to "talk directly to the American people," as his campaign manager John Sasso said. And he put his time to good use with a vigorous condemnation of Reagan administration policy in Nicaragua, thus implicitly answering those critics who who contend that as a governor he is weak on foreign policy. American aid to the Contra guerrillas, Dukakis charged, violated U.S. treaty obligations.

As for Jesse Jackson, he has a somewhat different problem than his rivals. Because of his race, his rhetorical skills, and his lead in the polls, he has less trouble setting himself apart than the rest.

Still Jackson had a point he wanted to make — that he is more of a moderate than most people think — and he set about doing it by talking knowledgeably about Wall Street and the need for investments to make American industry more competitive. When Buckley demanded to know how he could go to Cuba and praise Castro, Jackson responded that at least he had gotten the Cuban ruler to go to church for the first time in 30 years.

Strength For Today

Someone has said that the neatest trick the devil ever perpetrated was to spread the story that he was dead.

Yet despite rumors of his demise, the spirit of evil seems to be abroad in the world just as much as it has always been. The word "Satan" means "adversary." In the Bible he is pictured as hostile to all goodness, a being who aims to undo the work of God by leading men into evil ways.

This may be a naive, personalized conception. But this characteristic does not alter the fact that evil is a gigantic enterprise which still thrives in the world. Although our environment is more enlightened than it was a thousand years ago, it is doubtful whether there is less evil in the world today.

We may not be sure as our ancestors about the personality of the "Adversary," but we can be certain that he is present in the world.

Time Will Tell On Bork Appointment

WASHINGTON (AP) — Robert H. Bork's nomination to the Supreme Court is arousing fears among liberals of a court reconstruction as dramatic as Richard Nixon's appointment of four justices nearly two decades ago.

One liberal group, People for the American Way, said Bork's appointment Wednesday "would dramatically shift the balance ... turning back the clock on individual protections that Americans have relied on for 30 years."

The National Abortion Rights Action League says Bork's nomination "is the greatest threat to a woman's right to choose an abortion since 1973" when a Supreme Court decision legalized abortion.

Bork, in Senate testimony prior to his confirmation as an appeals court judge in 1982, said he was convinced that the 1973 abortion ruling was "an unconstitutional decision, a serious and wholly unjustifiable judicial usurpation of state legislative authority."

Bork's conservatism alone would not generate such intense reactions.

— Merrill Hartson —

Another Fight

WASHINGTON (AP) — At 76, and in the seventh year of his presidency, Ronald Reagan shows no reluctance to do battle with Congress.

What boggles some people's minds is not that Reagan has set himself up for another duel with liberal Democrats by nominating conservative jurist Robert H. Bork to the Supreme Court or that he committed himself to an enervating fight over tax-and-spend policies in the 1988 budget process.

What seems more astonishing is that Reagan, facing lingering Iran-Contra questions and enmeshed in these budgetary and foreign policy fights, already has poised himself for his consummate political battle: helping to keep the White House under Republican Party control in 1988.

"Let me just say, I don't plan to sit on the sidelines," Reagan told political activists gathered at the White House on Monday. "I plan to campaign for our party's nominee next time around."

Two other moments in Reagan's week spoke even louder of his determination to remain vigorous.

To that audience of political activists, he boasted that many battles already had been won, but acknowledged that "our brows are covered with sweat, our bodies have wounds."

"But let our hearts remain full and strong. We have more battles yet to win, and standing shoulder-to-shoulder, we will win them," Reagan said.

Last Friday, Reagan had another, in a series of exams as a follow-up to his colon cancer surgery in July 1985, and doctors found and removed two benign polyps. As he headed toward his helicopter for a trip to Camp David, Md., Reagan, asked how he felt, did a skip, and then resumed a slow and measured gait.

A crucial question remains: Why does Reagan prefer the collision course at an age when many men find the golf course too taxing?

Thomas C. Griscom, White House communications director, said the Instead, they are sparked by concern over whom Bork would replace and whom he would join.

Since 1981, President Reagan has appointed two generally conservative Supreme Court justices: Sandra Day O'Connor and Antonin Scalia. He also elevated the court's most conservative member, William H. Rehnquist, to chief justice.

O'Connor succeeded Potter Stewart, and the nine-member court grew slightly more conservative. Scalia succeeded Warren E. Burger, barely affecting the ideological mix.

But Bork has been nominated to replace the newly retired Lewis F. Powell, the court's pivotal vote in many of its most controversial decisions. In the balance: the court's balance of power.

At age 60, he would join Rehnquist, O'Connor and Scalia as the court's youngest members.

Analysis

Justice William J. Brennan, the court's senior and most powerful liberal force, was able to corral Powell's vote in two key cases during the just-completed court term. By 5-4 votes in both, the court extended the concept of affirmative action.

In a key 1986 abortion ruling, the court reaffirmed a woman's constitutional right to an abortion while striking down by a 5-4 vote Pennsylvania laws that would have made abortions more difficult to obtain. Powell voted with the majority.

The liberal-moderate coalition Brennan has engineered counts on Justices Thurgood Marshall and John Paul Stevens most often, and Justice Harry A. Blackmun an increasing share of the time. Less often, the coalition is joined by Justice Byron R. White and O'Connor.

With Powell gone, the court's middle ground may be defined by where White and O'Connor stand — a more stringent test for Brennan's persuasive powers.

At 81, Brennan gives every sign of being up to the challenge. Once the voice of a solid liberal majority on the court whose titular head was Chief Justice Earl Warren, Brennan has fared well since.

The Nixon court revolution, expected to bring sharp, conservative breaks with liberal Warren court precedents, never occurred. The court instead has moved back to a more conservative middle ground over the past two decades.

And the four Nixon appointees?

Burger and Powell are gone, after performances probably not as conservative as hoped for by the president who named them.

Rehnquist remains, but so does Blackmun. In the just-completed 1986-87 court term, Brennan and Rehnquist disagreed on 46 issues decided by 5-4 votes. Blackmun sided with Brennan in 37 of those cases.

And it is Blackmun who wrote the 1973 decision legalizing abortion, the ruling many conservatives find most appalling.

Reagan's appointment of Bork could encounter more difficulty than any high court nomination since Nixon's attempt to fill the vacancy left in 1969 by Abe Fortas' resignation.

The Senate rejected two Nixon appointees — Clement Haynsworth and G. Harrold Carswell — as the court labored for more than a year with only eight members. The Senate then confirmed Blackmun, the third pillar of Nixon's court reconstruction.

Thousands Watch As Bragg Crash Kills Five

By JODY TAYLOR
Associated Press Writer
FORT BRAGG, N.C. (AP) — About 1,000 horrified spectators watched as five men were killed and two were injured when a cargo plane on a military exercise destroyed three military vehicles, careened over an em-bankment and crashed in a fireball into woods.

"There were people crying when they realized what happened," said Neil Vanstory of Greensboro, who was watching the annual exercise. "We were just horrorstruck. We saw five young paratroopers and they were crying too."

Some people put their heads in their laps and cried while others hugged people around them or covered their faces in horror. Military officials pleaded with the crowd to remain calm and stay away from the crash site as pieces of melted garbage drifted through the air in the thick black smoke.

"It's one thing to see it on the news, on television and another to be there, to feel the effect," Vanstory said. "It was horrible."

Among the crowd was a Congressional delegation led by Army Lt. Col. Jim Hopson, who said he and another officer saw the accident coming.

"Both of us were saying 'Get it up, get it up,'" he said. "I'm no expert, but it looked like it was just coming in too hard and too steep."

The Lockheed C-130 Hercules plane passed within feet of the bleachers before skidding off a dirt landing strip and into the pine trees at 10:23 a.m. Wednesday, exploding into an orange ball of flames.

The accident occurred as the plane was dropping a 17-ton M-551 Sheridan armored reconnaissance vehicle in a LAPES, low-altitude parachute extraction system, during the annual display of Army and Air Force airborne capability.

In a LAPES, a routine method of getting equipment into a combat area, a transport airplane normally flies about five feet above the ground, a heavy load is dragged out of its rear door by a parachute and the plane re-ascends.

"I knew something was wrong when the drogue chute came out too high an altitude," said Ron Diehl, an eyewitness who said he had seen several of the demonstrations.

"As soon as I saw that, the pilot quickly put the nose down at a steep angle of attack. Then he had to recover, to get it out. ... I don't know whether something busted loose, but it looked like he lost control," he said.

"I knew he was fighting for control to keep from going into the crowd," Diehl said. "Then he slid past us, behind the trucks, toward the tree line. I saw the tail stay down. It appeared that the plane was folding at the middle and at the wings. There was a tremendous amount of debris, then an explosion.

"We could feel the heat where we were sitting," Diehl said. "Smoke came over us and particles of soot landed on everybody. At that point, the crowd started to panic. People started running away, crying, screaming."

Four of six Air Force crewmen on the plane were killed, as well as an Army soldier on the ground, said Capt. Brian Irving of Pope Air Force Base, where the four-engine turboprop was based.

Master Sgt. R.C. Barnes of the public affairs office at Pope Air Force Base identified the dead as Capt. Garry M. Bardo Jr., 31, the pilot, born in Bloomsburg, Pa.; 1st Lt. John B. Keiser III, 28, the navigator, born at Plattsburg Air Force Base near Clinton, N.Y.; Technical Sgt. Timothy A. Matar, 32, loadmaster, born in Mansura, La.; and Airman 1st Class Albert G. Dunse, 23, born in Savannah, Ga., additional loadmaster.

The Army soldier killed on the ground was identified today as SSgt. Douglas L. Hunter, 25, of Charlotte, Tenn. He was assigned to the 3rd Battalion, 73rd Armor Regiment at Fort Bragg.

The airmen were assigned to 40th Tactical Airlift Squadron, 317th Tactical Airlift Wing, at Pope Air Force Base.

Those injured were 1st Lt. Marc A. Lenke, co-pilot, and Sgt. Tony T. Holmes, flight engineer. Their ages and hometowns were not available, Barnes said.

Lenke and Holmes were admitted to Womack Army Hospital at Fort Bragg, and were transferred Wednesday night to Brooke Army Medical Center at Fort Sam Houston, Texas. They were in stable but serious condition.

Vote Buying

ASHEVILLE (AP) — Robbinsville town Alderman Kenneth Carver has pleaded innocent to perjury and vote-buying charges in federal court.

Carver, 50, entered his plea in U.S. Magistrate's Court to two counts of perjury and two counts of election fraud. Magistrate J. Toliver Davis set Carver's trial for July 20 in federal court in Bryson City.

Indictments charge Carver with trying to influence the 1982 general election in Graham County by giving Ricky Carver liquor to give to residents in exchange for their votes. Kenneth Carver is also charged with lying to a grand jury meeting in Asheville Sept. 2.

The cause of the accident was uncertain, but an investigating board of officers was being convened to investigate the crash, said Col. Richard Heinzman, base commander at Pope Air Force Base.

But Irving said the results of an investigation may not be available for months, "and the root cause (of the accident) may not be releasable."

"There was a malfunction," Irving said. "Where the malfunction was, or what caused it, I really couldn't speculate. Something just went wrong."

John Bishop, vice president of WFCT-TV, who witnessed the crash and is a pilot, told The Fayetteville Times, "it seemed he was higher than normal before taking a steep approach (to the landing strip)."

"His wings were dipping as if he was trying to adjust before going down," Bishop said. "He seemed to be coming in too fast and steep. My stomach tightened when I saw that. Normally he would level off at five feet above ground. He began to level off, but he was much closer than five feet, it appeared to me."

"That's when the bottom of the plane hit the ground. It appeared to me the plane actually fractured. It looked like the rear door fell off in front of the stands. From there, it (the plane) skidded and went out of control."

The plane's tail section was nearly 3/4-mile from where the tank was dropped on the runway. Debris was scattered down the runway, with the plane's tailgate only a few hundred feet from the tank.

Senator Says Race Tracks Could Boost State Income

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — When Sen. Kenneth Royall delivered his sales pitch for bringing organized horse and dog racing to North Carolina, he apparently hoped that, as the old saying goes, money talks.

Royall told fellow members of the Senate Ways and Means Committee that a large-scale racing industry, when fully in operation, would pump $260 million into the state's economy.

He tossed out other figures: 4,000 new jobs; a $125 million capital investment; 20,000 acres of land for horse pastures.

But the veteran Durham lawmaker mentioned only in passing the issue that likely would take center stage should his bill reach the Senate floor: gambling. Royall's proposal is to allow pari-mutuel wagering on horse and dog racing.

The Ways and Means Committee, of which Royall is chairman, approved the bill 8-5 Wednesday. It was referred to the Appropriations Committee, which must decide whether to spend $150,000 to establish a regulatory commission and pay other start-up costs.

Royall told reporters he gave the bill a 50-50 chance of passing — especially since it would let the state's voters make the final decision in a referendum. But some of his Senate colleagues were skeptical.

"Prospects are extremely doubtful, I'd say," Senate Majority Leader Tony Rand, D-Cumberland, said. "The lottery has failed repeatedly and I just don't think we'd be ready to go forward with this (betting on races)."

Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan tried to sidestep the issue, jokingly telling reporters he didn't "have a horse in that race." But he signaled his opposition by saying that if called upon to break a tie in the Senate — the only condition under which he votes — he'd probably vote no.

Rep. Coy Privette, R-Cabarrus, summed up the basis of his opposition to the bill — the same argument he and other legislators have used to thwart recent proposals for a statewide lottery.

"The government ought to be appealing to the strengths of the people rather than to their weaknesses," Privette said. "Pari-mutuel betting tends to destroy people rather than to build up people. We do not need the tentacles of the gambling industry getting at this great ... state."

In pari-mutuel betting, the take is divided only among people who cast their bets at the facility and attend the races, as opposed to people who would bet from afar.

Royall and his allies hope that the potential economic benefits will prove so alluring that North Carolinians will overcome their historical aversion to betting.

"It's one of the greatest things that could happen to our farm population in this state," Royall said, adding that it would launch an entirely new agribusiness — breeding dogs and horses.

Several speakers whom Royall invited to address the Ways and Means Committee described the racing industry in glowing terms. Richard W. Wilcke, executive vice president of the Maryland Horse Breeders Association, said it had become the third-largest industry in his state.

"It's a wonderful industry to promote for economic development," Wilcke said. "There are no smokestacks, we promote no congestion, and we're utilizing agricultural resources."

He said horse breeding and racing had rescued agriculture in New York when that state's dairy industry fell on hard times. "I think it's a natural for North Carolina."

John Wayne, who oversees security at Kentucky's race tracks, said the state had a strict regulatory system to guard against criminal infiltration.

The bill would establish a three-member commission to operate North Carolina's racing program.

Right-Of-Way Bill Clears House

RALEIGH (AP) — The House sponsor of a bill to curtail city funding of state highway projects appeared optimistic that he could answer any Senate objections in time to have the measure enacted this session.

"I think it will receive fair hearing over there, and I expect them, once they understand the bill, to be supportive," Rep. Bob Hunter, D-McDowell, said after his bill was approved 86-16 by the House and sent to the Senate.

Hunter said he would be willing to discuss any changes the Senate might want to make.

"All along we've tried to be flexible," he said. "If something is reasonable we've tried to do it. ... I suspect the bill is in pretty good form the way it is, but that doesn't mean it's perfect."

Li. Gov. Bob Jordan said he would assign the bill to the Senate Transportation Committee and was non-committal about the prospects, saying, "I really have not looked at it in detail."

The bill received little debate before its final House passage Wednesday. Opponents, who argued at length Tuesday against what one described as the "anti-city" measure, remained quiet.

Hunter said the measure had undergone such significant revision that the state Department of Transportation and the North Carolina League of Municipalities, which had led opposition, now support it.

Jordan said he agreed with Hunter that the Department of Transportation had been giving preferential treatment to cities that could afford to share costs of highway projects. Hunter said DOT has moved those projects ahead of others on the Transportation Improvement Program, the annual long-range blueprint for highway construction.

He says that is unfair because most towns cannot afford to contribute to state highway projects but feel they must do so or see projects in their area fall further behind on DOT's priority list.

"I'm very anxious that we recognize the urban problems, that they (cities) need to move forward, and at the same time we do need to be sure that people do not buy priorities," Jordan said.

Municipal officials have defended their contributions to state road projects, saying a state-local partnership is essential for North Carolina's rapidly growing urban areas to deal with congestion on highways that go through their borders.

Originally, the bill would have prohibited cities from paying any portion of the cost of state road construction or right-of-way acquisition. Cities say their participation in right-of-way purchases is especially crucial because the costs can escalate drastically with development along future roadways.

As approved by the House, the bill would allow limited contributions to right-of-way acquisition. Cities of 10,000 to 25,000 residents could give 5 percent of the cost; cities of 25,001 to 50,000 could give 10 percent; cities of 50,001 to 100,000 could give 15 percent; and cities above 100,000 could give 25 percent.

The measure also would let cities pay the full cost of any construction project, but only with proceeds of bond issues floated specifically for that purpose. The bonds would have to be approved in local referendums.

Rate Bureau Seeks Auto Rate Hike

RALEIGH (AP) — The North Carolina Rate Bureau Wednesday filed for an overall 3.5 percent rate increase in the rates for personal auto insurance, effective Jan. 1, 1988.

The bureau's filing proposes a statewide average rate level increase of 15.8 percent for liability coverages and a decrease of 11.6 percent for physical damage coverages, averaging an increase of 3.5 percent over rates that become effective July 15.

John W. Watkins, general manager of the bureau, said an increase in liability rates was needed because N.C. Insurance Commissioner Jim Long granted about half of its requested rate in the 1986 filing. Long announced on June 1 approval of an overall average increase in liability rates of 14.2 percent. The bureau had requested a statewide average level increase of 26.9 percent for liability coverage.

"For the third year in a row, the bureau has been unable to implement fully rate increases requested in filings," Watkins said. "As a result, we are in a constant state of trying to catch up to where the overall rate level ought to be."

Office Calls

RALEIGH (AP) — Phone records at the state Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission indicate that 413 calls were made from ABC offices in Raleigh to the Charlotte law office or home of ABC Commission Chairman Charles Knox during the 12 months ending in March, a Raleigh newspaper says.

The phone records do not show who made the calls to Knox' law firm, but Knox told the News and Observer of Raleigh that he did not make them. He said the calls were made by subordinates at the ABC Commission.

"I've been up there (Raleigh) every week," said Knox, who earns $58,716 a year in the full-time chairman's job. "And sometimes it's one day. Sometimes it's four days. I haven't kept any record of it. I go when I'm needed."

"I regard myself as full time, because I'm always available, 24 hours a day," said Knox, who was appointed to the post by Gov. Jim Martin in 1985. Knox is the brother of Eddie Knox, a Democratic gubernatorial contender who lost a fierce primary battle in 1984 and signaled his support for Martin, the Republican candidate.

IN THE STATE

Indictment

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — A Dubuque, Iowa, man wanted by authorities in at least two other states has been indicted by a U.S. District Court grand jury on charges that he defrauded NCNB National Bank and others of $40,722 while pretending to open an Archdale video store.

James Albert Lawhorne, 45, was named in a 10-count indictment that charges him with defrauding NCNB, three Pennsylvania video stores and a woman who sold him a Rolex watch.

Lawhorne also is sought by the Duval County Sheriff's Department in Florida and the FBI in Indianapolis. Indianapolis authorities want Lawhorne on a charge of interstate transportation of stolen property.

Florida authorities had Lawhorne in custody briefly within the last month. He was wanted in Jacksonville for obtaining a $275,000 boat with a worthless check, said Officer Mike Kee of the Duval sheriff's office.

DTP Vaccine

RALEIGH (AP) — Lederle, a pharmaceutical company, has reduced its price to North Carolina for DTP vaccine, making the cost to the state the lowest in the country, Gov. Jim Martin said.

Martin said the action "will result in a state savings this year of between $1.25 million and $1.5 million."

Martin said Lederle reduced its price to North Carolina for the diphtheria, tetanus and pertussis vaccine from $115.35 per 15-dose vial to $39.60 as a result of recent amendments to the N.C. Childhood Vaccine-Related Injury Compensation Program.

The program, which became law in 1986, provides health care and monetary awards to children who suffer severe reactions to required doses of vaccine.

Scanner

HIGH POINT (AP) — High Point Regional Hospital is ready to spend $2.6 million for an advanced diagnostic scanner that produces a detailed picture of internal organs.

The hospital will be the third Guilford County facility to offer magnetic resonance imaging, a sophisticated scanning process that uses a large magnet, radio signals and computers to produce clear images. The machine is used primarily to study the brain and nervous system.

Phone Subsidy

RALEIGH (AP) — The North Carolina Utilities Commission issued an order Wednesday to consider participating in the national phone connection fee subsidy program called Link-Up America.

As proposed by the commission, the state version of this program — to be called Link-Up Carolina — would qualify for funds distributed under the Link-Up America program set up by the Federal Communications Commission.

The heart of the program is a discount of up to $30 on the phone connection fee for qualifying low-income individuals. There also would be an interest-deferred payment schedule offered by the local telephone company. In turn, the local phone company would collect from the national program the money it had not received from qualifying individuals.

Bank Merger

CHARLOTTE (AP) — NCNB Corp. of Charlotte and Centrabank Inc. of Baltimore officially completed their merger Wednesday.

Centrabank, with $260 million in assets and eight branches in metropolitan Baltimore, will operate as a subsidiary of the Charlotte-based bank holding company.

Under the terms of the merger agreement, NCNB paid about $9.7 million in cash and issued warrants to purchase 700,000 shares of NCNB Corp. common stock to Centrabank's qualifying deposit account holders. Each warrant entitles the holder to purchase one share of NCNB common stock at $2.525 per share.

H. Lee Boatwright will continue as president of the Baltimore institution.

New President

ROCKY MOUNT, N.C. (AP) — Rocky Mount Undergarment Co. Inc. Wednesday announced that Herbert Greenberg, a vice president at the company has been named president.

The appointment of Greenberg, who is a member of the family that founded Rocky Mount 28 years ago, is effective immediately. The Greenberg family is a majority stockholder in the company.

The announcement was made by Rocky Mount's chairman, Kimball H. Dunton. Dunton, who had acted as president, said he would remain as chairman.

Public Hearing Called On Waste Bill

RALEIGH (AP) — The public will again be heard on a bill that would remove North Carolina from an eight-state compact on low-level radioactive waste while setting up criteria and the authority to site a waste facility in the state.

Next week's hearing was scheduled Wednesday after some lawmakers, concerned that their three counties would be targeted for a waste facility, successfully petitioned House Speaker Liston Ramsey.

"I think the speaker wants to give them a fair shake," said Rep. Dan DeVane, D-Hoke, who had earlier denied a request that his Water and Air Resources Committee call another hearing on the issue. DeVane said most of the issues in the bill had already been debated.

Later, DeVane said the speaker's ruling did not necessarily reflect Ramsey's position on the bill.

"I didn't ask him not to grant the hearing," he added.

The petition came after the committee voted to retain a provision that, barring a volunteer county, would require that a state radioactive waste site be located in one of those counties with nuclear generating plants that create most of the waste.

Rep. Peggy Stamey, D-Wake, warned the panel against making an emotional decision.

"I think that we may hasten to have a bill enacted in this session of the legislature that may be premature, may not be reasoned or well thought out," she said.

In addition to repealing the Southeast compact and targeting three counties for the state's waste site, the bill would set up the criteria and the state authority for choosing a site for handling North Carolina's waste. It also would shift 25 percent of the taxes on nuclear power plants to any county chosen for the waste site.

Rep. Casper Holroyd, D-Wake, offered a committee amendment designed to open all 100 counties to consideration for a waste site.

"We simply want a level field," he said. "Why should three counties be singled out and designated by that area?"

But Rep. Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, said a fair selection process was used in choosing those counties for the power plants, "guaranteeing an inordinately profitable plant facility would be placed in those three counties."

He said electric ratepayers all share the expense of property taxes paid by utilities to those three counties.

"Now when those same three counties are asked to take the waste that extraordinarily profitable facility produces, they want to put it somewhere else," Mavretic said. "They want all of the good, none of the bad."

Rep. Bruce Ethridge, D-Onslow, agreed, saying, "It would reduce the transportation which is a potential problem and also balance the economical risks and benefits of such a facility." The committee voted 12-10 against Holroyd's amendment.

'TEA PARTY' — Bob Levy, right, and Tom Green join other opponents of Florida's new state sales tax on services in tossing tea bags into Biscayne Bay Wednesday in a symbolic re-enactment of the Boston Tea Party. Levy is coordinator of S.T.O.P., or Sales Taxes Oppressing People organization. (AP Laserphoto)

Opponents Of New Florida Tax Re-Enact 'Tea Party'

MIAMI (AP) — In a 1980s version of the Boston Tea Party, protesters dumped tea in Florida harbors Wednesday to launch a drive aimed at repealing a tax on services that was collected for the first time Wednesday by everyone from lawyers to hair stylists.

Tallahassee lawyer Dexter Douglass said he was not half as riled by the new tax on his services as he was by the new tax on his morning newspaper. When he plunked down a quarter at a newsstand, the clerk told him to cough up 2 cents more.

"That irritated me a lot more than paying tax on legal fees," he said. "I cuss the newspapers, but I read three or four of them."

The $750 million tax signed into law April 23 extended Florida's 5 percent sales tax to dozens of previously untaxed services such as construction, advertising and pest control.

Lobbyist Bob Levy of Miami donned a tricorne hat and Indian jacket for a gathering of about 35 tax opponents in business suits and shirtsleeves along Miami's Biscayne Bay.

"The parallels are very clear,"

Levy said. "The Boston Tea Party was in opposition to a bad tax. This is a bad tax."

In Pensacola, about 80 people poured Lipton's Instant Tea into Pensacola Bay. Other "tea parties" were organized in Jacksonville, Fort Myers and Cape Canaveral.

The protest group, calling itself Sales Taxes Oppressing People or STOP, needs 343,000 signatures of registered voters to force a constitutional amendment to a vote in 1988. The measure would bar a levy on any services that hadn't been taxed before June 5, 1986.

The average tax bite per household will be $74 this year and $120 next year, said Gov. Bob Martinez, who engineered the levy to raise money in a state that has no income tax.

A government watchdog group, Florida TaxWatch Inc., contends it will be more than double — $161 this year and $243 the next.

In Tampa, customers grumbled about paying the extra pennies at the downtown Zack Street Newsstand.

"Every single person has mentioned it," said salesman Dennis Pupello.

By MICHAEL L. GRACZYK
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Americans got their first long look at seven Democratic presidential candidates as they plugged themselves in folksy video clips and engaged in "Reagan-bashing" in an extraordinarily early campaign debate.

"There were no losers," pronounced former Democratic National Committee Chairman Robert Strauss, who joined William F. Buckley as host Wednesday night of the first nationally televised debate of an election year still six months away.

There also was no obvious winner, but neither did it produce the kind of blunder that could doom a candidacy.

"Everyone did well," Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., said after the two-hour, expanded version of the Public Broadcasting Service's "Firing Line" program. "Most of us are unknown and it was our first chance to get known."

Gephardt, Sen. Albert Gore of Tennessee, the Rev. Jesse Jackson, former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt, Sen. Joseph Biden of Delaware, Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis and Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois each fielded eight questions as an audience of 2,000 watched at Wortham Theater.

The topics included arms control, energy policy, the economy and budget, trade policy, tax reform and Central America.

NEA Grappling With AIDS Policy

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
AP Education Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — More than 7,600 teachers gathered for today's opening of the largest U.S. teachers union's convention are grappling with what to teach children about the deadly AIDS epidemic.

The challenge of AIDS emerged as a major topic at the National Education Association's 125th annual meeting even before its president, Mary Hatwood Futrell, opened the conference.

The union plans to distribute to each of its 1.86 million members this October a detailed booklet on acquired immune deficiency syndrome prepared with advice from the U.S. Public Health Service.

One of the first items of business facing the delegates was a resolution by teachers from Hingham, Mass., to endorse U.S. Surgeon General C. Everett Koop's call for making AIDS education part of public school curricula.

The Massachusetts Education Association, an NEA affiliate, recently called for distributing condoms to high school students in the state to help prevent the spread of AIDS. Futrell said that idea caught her by surprise.

An NEA resolutions committee is drafting a comprehensive AIDS policy that will go before delegates Saturday, the day before the convention ends.

The NEA also planned today to release a Gallup poll showing strong public support for spending on education and pay raises for teachers.

Four Democratic presidential hopefuls — former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt, the Rev. Jesse Jackson, Sen. Paul Simon of Illinois and Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri — were making the journey west after their first nationally televised debate in Houston on Wednesday to court the teachers' support.

None of the politicians will get a chance to address the full convention, planning instead to make the rounds of state caucuses. The NEA will not make any endorsements until December.

Futrell, running unopposed Friday for an unprecedented third two-year term, said the union also invited Republican candidates, but only Democrats accepted.

Asked why the NEA meeting is such a drawing card for White House hopefuls, she said, "Our members are in every town, every county, every community in the United States of America. ... They realize we're politically powerful."

In virtually each instance, the answers turned into a criticism of the Reagan administration and how the candidates would offer better leadership.

Buckley, the conservative columnist, called it "Reagan-bashing."

The questions were supplemented by sometimes folksy, 90-second autobiographical videotapes provided by each candidate and a 60-second sample of the candidate in action on the campaign trail.

Each had two minutes to make his case at the end of the program, and each touched on the themes that lie at the core of his candidacy.

"I believe my generation's time has come," said Biden.

Said the bow tie-wearing Simon, "If you want a slick packaged product I'm not your candidate."

"A lot of folks knew them only as the seven dwarfs," Jody Powell, President Carter's press secretary, said afterward. "I doubt folks would come away with that impression. But I got a sense they didn't want to spend much time beating up each other."

"And that's sort of a new departure for Democrats."

In the opening question — in which Buckley asked whose presidential portraits should hang in the Cabinet room — Babbitt said he would include James K. Polk as a reminder that a dark-horse candidate can win. Gore apparently meant to say the same thing, only he identified the man as James K. Knox.

Polk's middle name was Knox. Biden accused Reagan of failing to confront the AIDS epidemic and planning to "nuclearize the heavens" with his Star Wars anti-missile defense program.

Iacocca Apologizes For 'Stupid' Policy

HIGHLAND PARK, Mich. (AP) — Chrysler promised in newspaper ads today to improve warranties on 60,000 vehicles test-driven with odometers unhooked and sold as new in what chairman Lee Iacocca called a "dumb" practice.

Iacocca, in a news conference Wednesday and in the ads, also promised to replace, free of charge, any vehicle damaged in testing but sold as new.

The Chrysler Corp. chairman's admissions came a week after a subsidiary and two executives were indicted in St. Louis on federal charges of odometer fraud for test-driving the vehicles with disconnected odometers in the 18 months ending in January 1987.

Iacocca said the charges will be dealt with in court, but the damage to Chrysler's image must be dealt with immediately because the nation's third-largest automaker was being tried first in the "court of public opinion."

He called test-driving cars with disconnected odometers "dumb" and said selling some damaged cars as new "reaches beyond dumb to stupid."

U.S. Attorney Thomas E. Dittmeier said in St. Louis that he would not have any direct comment about the announcement, but added, "this office is always happy to see compensation for victims."

An industry analyst said Iacocca's action was a good move. "For Lee Iacocca it was the right way to go. It is a very positive and wise move," said Chris Cedergren of J.D. Power & Associates in Westlake Village, Calif.

Cedergren said he would have advised Chrysler to "admit they made a mistake, don't try to cover it up, immediately resolve it and get it past them. Clearly that's what Iacocca did."

In fact, Cedergren said, Iacocca could turn the issue into a marketing coup. "People will say, I like this guy even better now."

Honda Will Send U.S. Motorcycles To Japan

DETROIT — In one of the most impressive signs that the rapid rise in the value of the Japanese yen is helping to improve American competitiveness, Honda said Wednesday that it would begin exporting U.S.-built motorcycles to Japan early next year.

Honda officials also hinted that the motorcycle export project may be the first step in the company's larger plan to export U.S.-built compact cars to Japan within the next two or three years. Company officials noted that Honda traditionally tests out new ideas in its motorcycle business first; successful projects are often later expanded to the company's automotive division.

Honda officials said the rise in the yen's value against the dollar has made it possible to produce motorcycles in the United States that are cost-competitive with those built in Japan. As a result, the company said it planned to send an initial shipment of 500 U.S.-built Gold Wing touring motorcycles to Japan in early 1988.

Shinichi Tanaka, a Honda spokesman in Detroit, said Honda has not yet decided how many motorcycles it would export on an annual basis but added that the company was "committed to continuing our exports beyond the initial 500."

Honda produces the motorcycles in Marysville, Ohio, in a plant adjacent to its auto assembly facility; it builds the engines for the motorcycles in Anna, Ohio. It already exports its Ohio-built motorcycles to 14 countries, including Great Britain, Australia and Canada, and it exports lawn mowers from the United States as well.

Honda, which has been rapidly expanding its U.S. manufacturing operations over the last few years, began exporting U.S.-built Accord compact cars to Taiwan early this year and is now waiting to see if the yen's value stabilizes in its current trading range to determine whether to go ahead with exports to Japan. With the yen's rise, the costs of producing cars for export at Honda's Japanese plants have increased to such an extent that the Marysville, Calif., complex is now on an equal cost footing with Honda's Japanese facilities, company officials say.

Meanwhile, Honda also said Wednesday that the rise in the yen's value had prompted the company to raise its car prices by an average of 1.5 percent, or $152 per car. Since the yen began its rapid upward climb in September 1985, Honda and the other major Japanese automakers have increased their U.S. prices by an average of about 20 percent.

Wilson Pickett Faces Jail Term

HACKENSACK, N.J. (AP) — Soul singer Wilson Pickett has been convicted of carrying a loaded shotgun in his Stutz Bearcat automobile, and could receive up to five years in prison.

A jury returned the verdict Wednesday against the 46-year-old singer of such hits as "Land of a Thousand Dances," "Mustang Sally" and "Midnight Hour."

Pickett, of Englewood, had testified he didn't know the shotgun was loaded when he returned with it to the scene of a fistfight he had had with another man outside a bar in 1984.

The singer testified he left after seeing someone give the man a knife. He said he drove back because a companion asked him for a ride there.

Pickett was arrested when police saw the shotgun on the seat.

Sentencing was set for Sept. 18.

Soviet Jews

GENEVA (AP) — Authorities allowed 790 Jews to emigrate from the Soviet Union in June, a slight drop from the previous month's figure, the resettlement agency reported today.

LaRouche Indicted On Conspiracy Charge

By WILLIAM M. WELCH

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Political extremist Lyndon H. LaRouche was indicted by a federal grand jury on a charge of conspiracy to obstruct justice, according to court documents released today.

The indictment, handed up by a grand jury in Boston, accused LaRouche of ordering subordinates in his political organization to stall the grand jury's investigation and of plotting to "fix" and "quash" the grand jury.

LaRouche himself, who testified before the grand jury last Monday, left the country after his testimony and is now in West Germany, according to prosecutors. They said his attorney, Odin T. Anderson, has told the government LaRouche will surrender to federal authorities early next week.

The grand jury in Boston has heard evidence from a nearly 3-year-old investigation into alleged fraud by LaRouche followers in raising money for his 1984 presidential campaign, and of allegations that top aides in the LaRouche organization conspired to block that investigation.

The grand jury late last year indicted 13 of LaRouche's followers and five corporations and campaign committees tied to him on charges of fraud and conspiracy to obstruct justice. Prosecutors have said LaRouche himself controlled the network of organizations.

The new indictment was the first to name LaRouche himself as a defendant.

It said he and others attempted to "spike," "stymie," "block," and "stall" the grand jury investigation into LaRouche fund-raising activities between 1984 and 1986.

It said those efforts included burning and shredding financial records that had been subpoenaed, moving LaRouche followers out of the Boston area so they could not be questioned, refusing to produce records and witnesses, and making false statements.

A LaRouche spokeswoman, Dana Scanlon, said today she would neither confirm nor deny that LaRouche had left the country.

"Expect the unexpected," she said. "... Lyndon LaRouche promises the press corps not a dull moment."

LaRouche, a self-proclaimed Democratic candidate for president who has run fringe campaigns three times in the past, returned to the United States after seven months in Europe and elsewhere to testify before the grand jury last Monday.

LaRouche left his Leesburg, Va., headquarters in early December and remained with supporters in Europe, where he heads small but vocal political movements in several countries. In a telephone interview on a U.S. radio call-in show a month ago, LaRouche described his location as "by the Rhine" River.

The indictments handed down last year charged that LaRouche's organization and followers used a fraud scheme to bilk more than $1 million through 2,000 unauthorized charges on credit cards held by individuals around the country. The conspiracy charges accused top aides to LaRouche, including his inner circle of advisers, of trying to impede that initial investigation.

Beth Parsons Plans Involvement

By CLAY DEANHARDT
Reflector Staff Writer
After attending a conference of the Committee for National Security (CNS), Beth Parsons of Greenville has decided to get involved again.

When she lived in Asheville, Mrs. Parsons had been involved in Peace Links, a national group of women against nuclear war founded by Betty Bumpers, wife of Arkansas Senator Dale Bumpers. Since she moved to Greenville so her husband could go to the medical school, she says she has been too busy with her family to get involved here.

Not any more. Last weekend she attended the fifth Women's Leadership Conference in Washington, D.C., sponsored by CNS. There she heard speeches and presentations from leading figures in the fields of foreign and domestic policy talking about the Reagan era, the current state of foreign policy and the effect they have had on the nation and its future.

The three-day workshop covered such subjects as Responding to the Nuclear Threat, Redefining National Security, and A Question of Priority: Domestic Focus. Also included were environmental issues and workshops on organizing peace movements across the nation.

Mrs. Parsons said the main ideas stressed at the conference were education and action. "We all need to start being concerned and being more active — start making our voices heard in Washington," she said.

"I'm real concerned about nuclear issues and environmental issues," Mrs. Parsons noted in explaining how she became interested in the leadership conference. She said she went to one two years ago, and wanted to go again to renew her personal drive to get a new peace group working in Greenville.

Apparently it worked. By the end of the month, Mrs. Parsons plans to begin regular "peace breakfast" meetings for women to discuss national issues and peace. Ultimately she wants to start a Peace Links chapter in Greenville, and organize all of the area peace groups already in existence into a coalition.

"Peace groups, lobbying, are so much more ineffective (than other groups) because they haven't formed coalitions," she said. "That's what I think Greenville's groups need to do."

According to Mrs. Parsons, the idea for the coalition came from the conference, where they also discussed ways for individuals to get involved in national issues and to make their voices count.

She also mentioned that the coalition could bring well-known speakers to the Greenville area and hold open forums at which citizens could intelligently discuss national issues affecting their lives.

The conference, Mrs. Parsons said, reaffirmed her beliefs on several key issues. She noted that one of these was the effect that shifting money from domestic programs to spend on weapons was having on children and families today and in the future. As a nurse, she said she has already seen both quantitative and qualitative changes in prenatal care among people that can't afford today's rising medical costs. She attributes that to the lack of government funds available, which she connects with the rising cost of defense.

Therefore, she reasons, create peace and understanding between the Soviet Union and the United States, and you're not only more safe, the quality of your life increases.

The goal of CNS, she said, is to educate people about national issues to help create that understanding. She said it is a non-partisan group made up of mostly retired military people.

For One, Summer Jobs Were Cruddy

At Wit's End
Erma Bombeck

We always had a house rule regarding kids during the summer months. They either had to go to summer school or get a job.

Our children are walking around today with such varied expertise as Hebrew Flower Arranging, the History of the Croissant Before World War II, Disney Architecture Adapted to the Suburbs and Remedial Breathing Skills.

Work took away their professional status as a bum, and they wanted no part of it. Besides, they had heard from their friends how you had to show up on time, go to lunch when they told you, put in seven-hour days and other horror stories too scary to repeat.

One summer, when one of them was vacillating between taking a course in Foundry Management and U.S. Foreign Policy in Monaco, we talked him into getting a job instead.

Armed with three years of French, two years of biology, one year of botany, three units of English, two of math and awards in three major sports, he was matched to a job commensurate with his education: clearing tables and filling water glasses in a restaurant.

"Do you have any idea," he complained, "how disgusting it is to handle all those dirty plates and glasses with crumbs floating around in them, and as soon as they're washed, someone dirties them again. It's a no-win job. It's cruddy!"

The next job was delivering pizzas.

It was not fulfilling. "You don't know what it's like to drive around in a car for hours dropping off pizzas to people who don't even say thank you. I feel like a non-person. All they say is, 'He's late. He wants to be paid. You don't expect him to have change, do you?' I could be a robot for all they care. It's cruddy."

The city playground supervisor job should have worked out, but the title sounded better than the work. "Kids!" he said. "They drive you nuts. You tell 'em not to do something and two minutes later, they do exactly what you told 'em not to do. They went in the wading pool with grass on their feet, clogged up the toilet with paper and fought with one another like World War III. All I get done is picking up wet towels and all their junk. It's cruddy."

A friend got him a job in an office running errands and answering the phones during lunch hour. "Can you believe all I do all day long is take down messages for someone else? And hustle food. First they want coffee and Danish around 10. Just when I get all that cleaned up, they order lunch. I run and fetch and clean up. It's real cruddy."

I felt good about his summer. He had probably taken one of the most valuable courses in his academic career: Mother Appreciation. All the things he had done, I had been performing for 20 years. Cruddy? Maybe for amateurs who didn't know what they were doing. But when you do it well, I prefer to call it a "career."

Low Pressure Playtime

LOW PRESSURE JOB — Small fry firefighters Will Cox, 5, Holly Harvell, 6, and Stephen Wilson, 6, wouldn't let low pressure get the best of them as they hose a non-burning tree in their Greenville, S.C., neighborhood. Pressure in

This Dog Groomer Makes House Calls

By CINDY WOJDYLA
Joliet Herald-News
ROMEOLVILLE, Ill. (AP) — Jean Fleming deals with some pretty hairy customers in her line of work — and she has the scars to prove it.

"I had a German shepherd corner me in the garage years ago. It took me an hour to get out to call the owner to come and hold him," she says.

"I put a phone in the garage the next day."

Fleming escaped being bitten that time, but she has had many battles with reluctant canines during her 17 years as a dog groomer. "It comes with the business."

"I have a girl who works with me, and if we get a mean one, she holds him and we (wash) his face and put a muzzle on him. Once you put the muzzle on, he has no choice but to sit there and be good."

Even with the bites, the 38-year-old Fleming says she still loves dogs. She owns a Rottweiler, three poodles and a dachshund.

For years, Fleming groomed dogs in her garage. That changed in March, when she began making house calls in her grooming van.

Inside the van, Fleming can bathe, clip, dip and brush dogs. She has a 55 gallon holding tank for the dirty water and a high-powered blow dryer. The electric grooming tools are powered by a generator.

Firming bought the van at auction for $400. One year and $10,000 later, the van was ready to roll.

"We can do any breed of dog or cat in the bus," she says. "We did a St. Bernard yesterday."

Diaries Tell Of History

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I have kept a diary — never missed a day — since Jan. 1, 1933. I'll be 69 this year and have been sorting my belongings and dividing them for my three children.

My problem is what to do with all these diaries. There are some things I wrote that could hurt some feelings, but it is also a record of my thoughts and the activities of my life and the lives of family members. Much of it could even be boring to them.

Should I burn them all? Or give them to my eldest? I am still writing every day — it's a habit. Now, what should be done with more than 50 diaries? — MRS. G. IN ST. JOSEPH, MO.

DEAR MRS. G.: Don't burn them! Regardless of what they contain, they are a part of history. But why should the eldest inherit them all? Perhaps the youngest or middle child would have more interest in them. Discuss it with all your children, and then decide.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I sent a postcard in response to your survey asking, "Have you ever cheated on your mate?" Please tell us how that survey is coming. — BOTH FAITHFUL IN JUNEAU, ALASKA

DEAR FAITHFUL: The response has been overwhelming! So far the results show that not everybody is cheating. Far from it! The scales are tipped in favor of the "faithfuls." Most "faithfuls" are over 40, and have been together for 25 years or longer. The eldest couple has been married for 72 years. He's 91 and she's 88. The youngest have been married 3 months. He's 21, she's 19.

More men than women admitted to cheating. (I've been asked, "Can it be that the women are lying and the men are bragging?" To which I respond: It's doubtful; there's no reason to lie in an anonymous voluntary survey.)

Last chance for those who would like to be a part of this survey. Send a letter or postcard to Abby's Survey, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. Please indicate whether you are male or female, your age, and how long you've been together. You need not sign your name.

DEAR ABBY: Back in 1942, when I was 18 years old, I had an affair. He was 21. It lasted two years. World War II was raging. He went to war and we went our separate ways.

I never forgot him. I married someone else and had two children. He married and had four. Although we lived in the same town, we never saw each other until three years ago when we met by chance in a drugstore. We spoke briefly about what we had been doing in the past, said goodbye and never saw each other again, until nine months ago when out of the blue he called me and asked to see me again.

We met in a parking lot. That night, sitting in his car, he took me in his arms and we both knew that old feeling was still there. I know I still love him, and he said he still loves me. This has been going on for nine months — at least once a month. (No sex involved.) I've never done anything like this before and he said he never had either. We can't believe this is happening to us after 45 years. We've both been married for 41 years. I would never leave my husband for him and he would never leave his wife. All we want to do is meet occasionally and hold each other in our arms and experience that old feeling again. I am 63 and he is 66. — TRUE STORY, KEEP ME NAMELESS

DEAR TRUE STORY: Write again in a year and let me know if you're still in a "holding pattern." Personally, I think you're heading for trouble. But since you asked for no advice, I shall offer none.

(39 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Popularity, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.)

program — described by Chief Ted Holmes as "one of the most innovative and progressive police techniques that exists in the country today" — was started because of the large number of complaints received from area residents about drugs and other illegal activity.

Activities, such as buying and selling drugs and stolen goods, alcohol use and prostitution, were visible in the area and changed the neighborhood into a high crime area, according to Hardy.

"The neighborhood was suffering," he said.

But increased police patrols and other efforts — such as property owners signing forms giving police the right to search all exterior property and porches, and another form making officers the agent of the property owner, with the power to arrest people who are on the property without authorization and who refuse to leave — were started to curb the illegal traffic.

And a meeting with residents of the area was held earlier this month to discuss the problems and to solicit support from neighborhood residents.

But even though improvements have been made in the amount of crime in the neighborhood, Hardy said "there is still a lot of work that needs to be done."

He said as a result of the neighborhood meeting, a Crime Watch program is being started in the area and "a neighborhood cleanup will be held on July 11 — with all the departments in the city ... volunteers ... participating — to help area residents clean up" such things as bushes, trees, old cars.

Hardy said efforts also are under way to begin regular community meetings and "area residents and people with problems who visit the area are being polled on their feelings about starting a special drug (treatment) program."

And police are continuing to patrol, "with heavy emphasis on stopping potential buyers."

"The job is not finished," Hardy said. "It will take everyone working together to completely turn the problem around."

and ranged from 101 to 106 percent of face value.

Choreographer Bennett Dies Of AIDS-Induced Lymphoma

NEW YORK (AP) — Director and choreographer Michael Bennett, the mastermind behind "A Chorus Line," the longest-running musical in Broadway history, died today of lymphoma caused by AIDS, according to his lawyer. He was 44.

Attorney John F. Breglio said Bennett died at about 4:50 a.m. at his home in Tucson, Ariz. He had moved to Arizona last December, 11 months after he had been diagnosed as having acquired immune deficiency syndrome, and had been treated at the Arizona Health Science Center.

Bennett was the ultimate Broadway "gypsy," a dancer in the chorus who went on to become a successful choreographer, director and producer, associated with such hit shows as "Promises, Promises," "Company," "Follies," "Dreamgirls" and, of course, "A Chorus Line."

"I went from dancer to choreographer to director to producer to sometime writer," he once said. "But I never had to deviate from my ambition, which was to work in theater."

It was Bennett's experience in the chorus that gave him the idea for "A Chorus Line," which won nine Tony awards and the 1976 Pulitzer Prize for drama and is still running at Broadway's Shubert Theater. It opened there on July 25, 1975.

The musical grew out of a marathon talk session Bennett held in January 1974 with a group of dancers. They talked candidly about their careers, lifestyles and childhoods. Out of some 30 hours of tape-recorded discussions, "A Chorus Line" was born.

GOP

Republican officials were not taken into consideration.

"Jack Hawke has twice altered the list of Pitt County Republican Party official nominees for county Board of Elections," Smith said. "It is unprecedented for a state chairman to ignore the Board of Elections nominees of a county chairman."

According to Robert Jones, communications director for the state GOP, Hawke met Monday with Smith, Andrews and Rasberry in an effort to appease the group.

"Hawke agreed he would call the State Board of Elections and ask them to include the names of the two candidates Andy Andrews and Rasberry," Jones said. "Nowhere did he withdraw his recommendation of Crisp."

Jones said Mrs. Crisp was recommended on lists from other party representatives. "Hawke was reviewing lists from various factions he had received from Pitt County. Almost everyone endorsed the continued service of Nelson Crisp," Jones said.

Reports that Hawke and Smith reached a compromise on the appointments are false, Smith said.

"It has come to my attention that Jack Hawke said that he and I reached a compromise regarding the final decision on the Board of Elections," he said. "This is a lie."

"Since March 24, the officials of the Pitt County Republican Party have been repeatedly singled out for punishment by the state Republican Party because conservatives were elected at the county convention," Smith said.

"Jack Hawke is generally excluding and ignoring the conservative voice of North Carolina."

Smith also said county representatives were mistreated at the state GOP convention.

"Jack Hawke's appointee, George Little, chairman of the State GOP credentials Committee, violated due process in ruling that the Pitt County delegates should not be seated at the state GOP convention in Asheville," he said.

"George Little has threatened that the state GOP was intent on making an example of Pitt County."

Some members of the Republican Party have been disgruntled with the chain of events, according to Smith.

"Since the state convention, four prominent Pitt County Republicans have reported to me that if the state GOP continues their punitive actions, they will be forming a 'Republicans for Bob Jordan' committee," he said.

In addition, Smith said Hawke's actions have weakened support for Gov. Jim Martin.

"As you can see, Jack Hawke has purposefully excluded conservatives," Smith said. "He seems to listen to the ones who lost at the Pitt County convention more than to the winners."

"Jack Hawke is centralizing power through patronage rather than emphasizing unity around principles. He seems to have no understanding of a grassroots organization. Such tactics can only hurt Governor Martin."

Into The Semis

Jimmy Connors moves across Wimbledon's Number One Court to reach a shot from Slobodan Zivojinovic during their Men's Singles quarterfinal match Wednesday. Connors won, 7-6 (7-5), 7-5, 6-3 to advance to the semifinals of the tournament. (AP Laserphoto)

Gain Wimbledon Semifinals

Lendl, Connors Advance

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Ivan Lendl is getting closer to the two things in tennis he craves so much: respect and a Wimbledon championship.

Among those trying to keep him from the latter is Jimmy Connors, almost 35, who has attained both of Lendl's goals and is still going for more.

Lendl, the hungry Czechoslovak, and Connors, the American street-fighter, both advanced to the semifinals of the world's most prestigious grass-court tournament Wednesday.

Lendl, serving and volleying like a seasoned grass-courter, overpowered Henri Leconte of France, 7-6, 6-3, 7-6.

"That match is maybe the best I have ever played here," Lendl said. "I am a player who plays solid tennis without the spotlight on him, but I get the job done."

Most of the spotlight was on Connors, without a tournament title for almost three years, who withstood 25 aces from Slobodan Zivojinovic of Yugoslavia before prevailing 7-6, 7-5, 6-3 to reach the semifinals for the 11th time.

Only 24 hours earlier, Connors had rallied from the brink of elimination to beat Mikael Pernfors of Sweden in five sets.

"The reply from the guys in the locker room has been respect and amazement," Connors said. "To be respected by your peers like that is something that is important to every player."

In his semifinal on Friday, Connors will play Australia's Pat Cash, aiming for his first Grand Slam title. He beat Mats Wilander, last month's beaten French Open finalist, 6-3, 7-5, 6-4, and has dropped only one set in the tournament.

Lendl takes on Sweden's Stefan Edberg, the No. 4 seed, who was a 4-6, 6-4, 6-1, 6-3 winner over compatriot Anders Jarryd.

The women's semifinals were scheduled for Centre Court today at the All England Club, featuring three Americans, including defending champion Martina Navratilova, and the hottest player on the circuit, West Germany's Steffi Graf.

In the first match-up, No. 3 seed Chris Evert and Navratilova, the top seed, were to meet for the 73rd time.

Navratilova, with a 38-34 lead in the series, is going for her sixth consecutive Wimbledon title and her eighth overall, while Evert is bidding to maintain her record of winning at least one Grand Slam title every year since 1974.

The old rivals were to be followed on court by 18-year-old Graf, who took a 44-match unbeaten run into her meeting with Pam Shriver, the outsider of the last four.

To reach the semifinals, Navratilova crushed Australia's Diane Balestrat 6-2, 6-1, while Evert downed Claudia Kohde-Kilsch of West Germany, 6-1, 6-3.

Both Navratilova and Evert were cheered loudly by the fans.

"I think they appreciate somebody who really gives it everything they've got every day," Navratilova said. "Maybe part of it is realizing that Chris and I are coming toward the end of our careers. They probably won't get to see us that much."

Graf beat the other leading teenager of the women's game, Gabriela Sabatini of Argentina, for the eighth consecutive time. As on six of the previous seven occasions, Sabatini won a set but again wound up losing, this time 4-6, 6-1, 6-1.

Shriver, in the semifinals for the first time since 1981, saved a match point against Helena Sukova before winning 4-6, 7-6, 10-8.

In her previous match, against Sylvia Hanika, Shriver saved two match points before winning another 10-8 third set.

She said her brain was "like a tossed salad" trying to remember which match was which.

"But I know for a fact that I've served more in two days than I have in my whole life," Shriver said.

Two years ago, Lendl lost here to Leconte in the fourth round and had to play his best to gain revenge against the Frenchman.

The ninth-seeded Leconte matched the world's No. 1 player on serve and at the net. But he had little luck with his passing shots, repeatedly missing the lines by a few inches, and when it came to the key points, Lendl was the master.

"Today I played a player who is No. 1, even on grass," Leconte said. "He served like crazy and returned unbelievably. If he continues to play like today, he's ready to win his first Wimbledon."

Navratilova said it was time Lendl gained the respect his tennis merits and said criticism of his style and personality was undeserved.

"It takes a while to earn ... respect from the crowds as well as the media, as someone who is here to stay," she said. "Ivan's been trying hard to shake it and show people that he's a nice guy, which he is."

"He's probably the brightest player out there as well as the most polite. He just demands perfection. For some reason, that scares people, perhaps because they're not capable of it themselves, and they're threatened by it."

Connors said he felt no after-effects from his match against Pernfors when he took on the big-serving Zivojinovic.

"I slept unbelievably well through the night," Connors said. "I was a little stiff when I got up but it did not effect me. I am more mentally tired than physically after playing three days in a row."

Connors badly needed to win the opening set to avoid being caught up in another marathon. He won the tiebreaker 7-5 and got stronger and stronger, his famed returns neutralizing the big serves.

Zivojinovic said he hoped Connors, Wimbledon champion in 1974 and 1982, wins again.

Samuel's Homers Pace Phillies

By The Associated Press
While Juan Samuel isn't where he wants to be, the Philadelphia Phillies are moving closer to where they think should be.

Samuel hit two homers to drive in four runs Wednesday night and Philadelphia beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 11-4, the Phillies' fifth straight victory.

Since Lee Elia took over as manager of the Phillies two weeks ago, Samuel has been batting leadoff.

"I don't like it much," the second baseman said of his new spot in the batting order. "I'm really more comfortable hitting third."

After hitting two-run homers in the sixth and eighth innings, Samuel has 14 homers and leads the club with 49 runs batted in — one more than Mike Schmidt.

"I'm happy with it right now because we're winning," Samuel said.

Elsewhere in the National League, Atlanta beat San Francisco 8-3; Chicago edged Montreal 1-0; Cincinnati defeated Houston 6-4; the New York Mets outlasted St. Louis 9-6; and San Diego blanked Los Angeles 4-0.

The Phillies swept the four-game series with the Pirates at Veterans Stadium and it was their first four-game sweep since 1982 against San Francisco — the first over Pittsburgh since 1977.

After John Felske was fired, Samuel said Elia called him in and said he would lead off.

"Lee felt I could be more aggressive on the bases and help get the team going," Samuel said.

"I told him I wanted him to lead off. He said he'd do anything for the ball club. He didn't say anything to me about not liking it," Elia said.

Samuel, the first player in NL history to reach double figures in doubles, triples, home runs and stolen bases in his first three years, is headed in that direction again. He has 16 doubles, six triples, 14 home runs and 18 stolen bases.

Shane Rawley, 9-4, pitched 6 1-3 innings and Doug Bair finished for the Phillies. Dorn Taylor, 2-3, started for the Pirates and left trailing 4-1 in the fifth with a strained rib muscle.

The Phillies made it 9-3 in the five-run sixth, highlighted by Rawley's two-run triple and Samuel's two-run homer.

Mets 9, Cardinals 6
Gary Carter hit two homers in a game for the 26th time in his career, rallying New York past St. Louis in the rain.

Carter's leadoff homer and pinch-hitter Len Dykstra's two-run single put the Mets ahead 6-5 in the sixth inning. Carter hit a two-run homer, his 11th of the season, in the seventh.

The start of the game was delayed 75 minutes by rain and a steady shower fell for the first five innings. St. Louis Manager Whitey Herzog was ejected by umpire crew chief Doug Harvey for arguing about the field condition at Shea Stadium in the fourth.

"This game shouldn't have been started," Herzog said. "I would have been glad to forfeit. There wasn't much sense in playing."

Cubs 1, Expos 0
Jerry Mumphy homered with one out in the ninth inning off Bob Sebra and Greg Maddux pitched a four-hitter as Chicago beat Montreal at Olympic Stadium.

"I give a lot of credit for that to (catcher) Jody (Davis)" Maddux said. "He called a great game."

Mumphy hit a 3-1 pitch over the right-field fence for his sixth homer of the season. The hit was only the third allowed by Sebra, who struck out a career-high 14 batters. Maddux, 5-7, struck out two and walked one en route to his first career shutout.

"He (Sebra) was moving me in and out all night, but they know I hit breaking balls pretty well," Mumphy said. "I don't hit too many home runs, but I'm glad I could get one that won a game."

Braves 8, Giants 3
Andres Thomas' single drove in two of Atlanta's five runs in the fourth inning and the Braves took advantage of sloppy defense by host San Francisco.

Rick Mahler, 5-8, allowed nine hits but gave up only one walk. Mahler's last victory on June 17 also was against the Giants, at Atlanta.

"I like to pitch here," Mahler said. "It's always cool. The infield is real slow and the wind keeps the ball in."

Atlanta scratched away at starter Mike LaCoss, 6-5, in the fourth inning, scoring five runs on a bloop double, three singles, an intentional walk, an error and a sacrifice. Only two of the runs were earned.

Jeffrey Leonard and Chris Brown homered for the Giants.

Padres 4, Dodgers 0
Eric Show pitched a four-hitter to shut out Los Angeles for the second time this season and Kevin Mitchell homered twice for visiting San Diego.

Show, who had lost eight of his 10 decisions since the end of April, struck out two and walked just one.

Dodger Manager Tom Lasorda thought Show looked pretty impressive in both the shutouts, saying, "He looks like Walter Johnson against us."

Mitchell gave the Padres a 2-0 lead when he hit a solo homer off the Dodgers' Rick Honeycutt with two outs in the fourth inning.

Honeycutt, 2-8 and the loser of his last seven decisions, also was the victim in the sixth inning as Mitchell hit his seventh homer of the season. Mitchell's shot into the left-field seats came after Carmelo Martinez doubled to start the inning.

Reds 6, Astros 4
Ron Oester's two-run single capped a four-run sixth inning that carried the Cincinnati to a come-from-behind victory over Houston. The game was prolonged by rain delays of 28 minutes in the fifth inning and two hours, 21 minutes in the seventh.

The victory gave the Reds a sweep of their two-game series and a 2½-game lead over the Astros in the NL West. Houston has lost three straight and is 3-9 against Cincinnati this season, including 1-5 at Riverfront Stadium.

Two nights ago, Pitt County suffered through a 26-11 beating at the hands of Edenton's Post 40 American Legion baseball team.

Wednesday night, a half-inning into the contest, it looked like a repeat of that was going to be the order of the night as Post 40 pushed over seven unearned runs before Pitt even picked up a bat.

But like the old joke says, "It's 7-0, but we ain't batted yet."

When Pitt finally did come to the plate, it began a rally that carried through for a 15-11 victory on the evening.

It was Pitt's own mistakes that did much of the damage. While Edenton did bang out 13 hits, it was six errors on Post 39 that dug them a hole they had to struggle to crawl out of. Of the 11 runs scored by Edenton off Tom Moye, only one of them was earned and that one didn't score until the seventh inning.

Moye, who went the distance to earn the win, struck out five and walked only one.

He and his teammates banged out 17 hits to score 12 earned runs. Shane Adams picked up four of those hits while Jason Galloway and David Daniels had three each.

Daniels, who cracked a three-run homer in the sixth inning, drove in a total of six runs on the night. That blast temporarily tied the game at 8-8, but Edenton went back out again before Stuart Vines unloaded a two-run single in the bottom of the seventh to put Pitt ahead for good.

"That first inning, it looked like we'd never been on a baseball field before," Coach Toby Holiday said. "But when we got our heads together and decided to play, we can do what it takes. Our concentration wasn't there at the start. I don't know if we're tired or what."

And even while Moye did give up 13 hits, Holiday thought he pitched well. "The score of the game doesn't in-dicte the job he did," Holiday said. "They hit the ball well, but if we had made the plays, they wouldn't have had the opportunities they had. It would have been a totally different game."

The first inning for Pitt looked like a comedy of errors, but it was no laughing matter as seven Edenton runners stepped upon home plate. Brad Hurdle and Guy Spruill led off with singles, putting runners on first and second. Todd Hunter grounded back to third, but the throw to second for the force was off-target, going in-to-right, scoring Hurdle. Alex Cox followed with another grounder to third that was also thrown away, scoring Spruill. Still another grounder to third was again misplayed, but no one scored on that.

But third baseman Galloway gathered himself after that, took Nash Long's grounder and threw him out as Hunter crossed. Mark Stanton singled in both Cox and James and moved up on a passed ball. Eric Riddick reached on a two-base error, with Stanton scoring. Hurdle, back up, then singled to score Riddick with the seventh run.

Pitt began its long climb back with two runs in the bottom of the first. Adams opened with a triple to deep center and Galloway followed with a triple down the right field line, scoring Adams. Daniels added a single to left, bringing in Galloway.

In the second, three more Pitt runs crossed. Tim Clark walked as did Adams. With two outs, Eric Jarman doubled to right, scoring Clark.

Daniels followed with a single to left, bringing in Adams and Jarman to close the Edenton lead to 7-5.

Edenton added an eighth unearned run in the fourth. Spruill arrived on an error and scored when Hunter doubled to right center.

Pitt finally tied it up with three in the sixth. Adams and Galloway both singled and scored on Daniels' homer to left, making it 8-8.

Edenton inched back out in the seventh with its only earned run of the game. Long singled and stole second, scoring on a hit by Riddick.

Pitt followed that up by charging into the lead with four seventh inning runs, taking a 12-9 lead. Ty Little singled and Clark doubled. Both runners scored on a hit by Vines, giving Pitt the lead. Galloway got an infield hit and both he and Vines scored when Daniels reached on an error

Back In Time

The final three Pitt runs came in the eighth. Moye led off with a walk and with two away, Vines also walked. Adams singled to score Moye and move Vines to third.

The two runners then pulled a double steal, Vines scoring. But on the relay back to home, the ball bounced back to the screen and Adams alertly moved on to third, then noticed no one covering home, so he kept on going, easily sliding in under the late coverage.

The padding helped as Edenton came back with two in the ninth. Derrick Rogers led off with an infield hit and was safe at second on an error on Brent Askew's grounder. Both runners advanced on a wild pitch and consecutive ground outs by Woody Stetson and Hurdle brought them around.

The win boosts Pitt to 10-7 on the season while Edenton falls to 4-11.

The two teams will meet once more, that game set for Edenton on Monday, as Pitt winds up the regular season.

Then, it's on to the playoffs on Wednesday.

Reuss Finds Life In American League

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

If there's life after the National League, Jerry Reuss certainly has found it.

"He (Reuss) used to be a power pitcher," Cleveland Manager Pat Corrales said after a 10-5 loss to Reuss and the California Angels Wednesday night. "Now he's tricking people. That's what happens when you get older."

With the victory, the 38-year-old left-hander who had spent all of his career in the NL kept his record perfect in the American League. He is 3-0 since signing with the Angels on June 19.

"Here, I'm getting a lot of runs and a lot of breaks," said Reuss, who was 0-5 in the National League this year before the Cincinnati Reds released him on June 13.

Elsewhere in the AL Wednesday, it was Milwaukee 13, Detroit 2; Boston 6, Baltimore 2; Chicago 5, Oakland 3; Texas 7, Seattle 3; Kansas City 4, Minnesota 3, and New York Yankees 6, Toronto 1.

Reuss allowed four runs, three of them earned, on seven hits in five innings, walking none and striking out four. DeWayne Buice pitched four scoreless innings for his seventh save.

Devon White singled twice, doubled and homered, scoring four times and driving in three runs for the Angels, who won for the ninth time in 10 games. Cleveland has lost nine of its last 10.

Steve Carlton, 5-6, took the loss, giving up five runs on nine hits in 4-2-3 innings.

Brewers 13, Tigers 2

Greg Brock, B.J. Surhoff and Mike Felder drove in three runs each and Milwaukee scored eight times in the third inning. Brock had four of the Brewers' 18 hits, including a two-run single that sparked the third-inning rally that also included two-run triples by Surhoff and Felder.

Milwaukee's Bill Wegman, 7-7, pitched an eight-hitter and struck out seven in his third complete game of the season. Wegman lost a shutout in the ninth when he gave up a homer to Darrell Evans and walked Darnell Coles with the bases loaded.

It was Evans' 15th homer of the season and the 362nd homer of his career, surpassing Joe DiMaggio for 32nd place on the all-time list.

Red Sox 6, Orioles 2

Roger Clemens pitched a six-hitter and rookie Todd Benzinger hit his first major league home run as Boston finished a sweep of the three-game series.

Clemens, 7-6, allowed only one baserunner, Lee Lacy on a one-out walk in the fourth, before Terry Kennedy broke up the no-hit bid with a two-out single in the fifth. Clemens was one out away from a shutout when he gave up a two-run single to Kennedy in the ninth.

Staked to a comfortable lead, Clemens pitched his eighth complete game in 17 starts. Although a strikeout artist, he didn't fan a single batter while issuing two walks.

"He didn't make any mistakes," Boston catcher Rich Gedman said of Clemens. "Their hitters were off-balance all night. The main thing is to get the win. The strikeouts are extra."

The Red Sox ripped Baltimore starter Mike Griffin, 0-2, and relievers Doug Corbett and Tony Arnold for 12 hits in winning for the ninth time in 11 starts and handing Baltimore its 27th loss in 32 games since May 29.

White Sox 5, Athletics 3

Greg Walker's two-run homer in the 10th inning lifted Chicago over Oakland for a sweep of their three-game series.

Harold Baines singled with one out in the 10th and, one out later, Walker hit his 16th home run off reliever Dennis Eckersley.

Jim Winn, 3-4, who had rescued Bob James in a bases-loaded situation in the top of the 10th, was the winner. Jay Howell, 2-2, was the loser.

The White Sox had tied the game with one out in the ninth inning when pinch-hitter Daryl Boston tripped and scored on a wild pitch by Howell.

Rangers 7, Mariners 3

Pete O'Brien and Oddibe McDowell hit home runs for Texas.

Charlie Hough, 9-3, allowed two runs on six hits, walked one and struck out five before leaving with no outs in the seventh in favor of Mitch Williams. Jeff Russell later finished up.

Mike Morgan, 6-9, was holding a 2-1 lead in the fourth when O'Brien followed Ruben Sierra's leadoff walk with his 18th home run of the season. That gave the Rangers the lead for good and McDowell's ninth homer of the season made it 6-2 in the sixth.

Royals 4, Twins 3

Pinch-hitter Jim Eisenreich doubled to score Buddy Biancalana from first base with one out in the ninth and boost Kansas City over Minnesota. Biancalana was pinch running for Steve Balboni, who had reached on third baseman Gary Gaetti's throwing error.

It was Eisenreich's second hit since the Royals called him up June 17 from their Class AA farm club at Memphis. He has battled a nervous disorder, later diagnosed as Tourette Syndrome, in three seasons before the Twins put him on the retired list in 1984.

"It's just another team, a team that we have to beat to win the pennant," Eisenreich said. "The only satisfaction I get out of beating the Twins is that they are in first place and we're trying to catch them."

Yankees 6, Blue Jays 1

Wayne Tolleson's RBI single triggered a five-run rally in the 12th inning as New York beat Toronto to complete a three-game sweep. The victory gave the Yankees a three-game lead over the Blue Jays in the AL East.

Claudell Washington opened the 12th with a single off Toronto reliever Jeff Musselman, 6-2. Mark Salas then laid down a sacrifice bunt, but Washington beat the throw to second by catcher Charlie Moore. Washington moved to third on a sacrifice bunt by Paul Zuvella and scored on Tolleson's single.

A bases-loaded walk by reliever Jose Nunez, an RBI single by Don Mattingly and a throwing error by third baseman Kelly Gruber gave the Yankees four more runs.

Pat Clements, 2-0, pitched four innings of scoreless relief, giving up three hits and striking out two.

"We returned the favor to Toronto," New York Manager Lou Piniella said, referring to the Blue Jays' three-game sweep in New York on June 8-10. "We came here saying we'd be aggressive and that's what we did."

VanSant Is Honored

At the ceremony, he received the Army Athletic Association special award for outstanding achievements and exemplary leadership in athletic competition; the Class of 1923 Memorial Award, as the men's swim team's outstanding member; and the Capt. Michael W. Kilroy Memorial Award, as the swim team's captain.

VanSant has just completed training at Louisiana State University as a member of the United States swim team for the World University Games. He and other members of the team left for Zagreb, Yugoslavia, on Wednesday, for that competition.

VanSant was this year's winner of the Daily Reflector Collegiate Athlete of the Year award.

Gooden Questioned About His Past Use

NEW YORK (AP) — Dwight Gooden, who continually has denied he used drugs during the 1986 season, was confronted about possible cocaine use last July by the players' union, according to a published report.

The New York Daily News reported Thursday that the New York Mets pitcher confirmed he met with officials from the Major League Baseball Players Association last July and discussed the subject. But Gooden denied then and still denies he used cocaine last season, saying he only used the drug before and after the 1986 season, when the Mets won the World Series.

The Mets are convinced Gooden has not told the truth about his drug use, the newspaper said.

"He obviously lied to us," the News quoted an unnamed club official. "We're convinced now that he was on drugs during last season, but he continues to deny it."

"He says he used the stuff before last season and after last season," the club official added. "Could he have just stopped Opening Day? That's hard to believe. He did appear shocked when we told him he tested positive for cocaine during spring training. Maybe that was because he was surprised he was caught."

Gooden underwent cocaine rehabilitation for 28 days at the start of the regular season. He was not suspended by Commissioner Peter Ueberroth because he agreed to undergo the treatment at Smithers Center.

Gooden returned to the Mets on June 5 and has pitched well, going 5-1 with a 2.12 ERA.

Donald Fehr, executive director of the MLBPA, refused comment about whether the union had confronted Gooden last summer.

"Any time we get information that we believe to be credible we will ordinarily contact the player or his agent and render what assistance we can," Fehr said. "But we will never discuss the matter publicly."

Gooden acknowledged meeting twice last season with union officials in New York and once with Fehr, in St. Louis.

"Fehr came out there to tell me that the rumors were still strong and that I should do something about it," Gooden said. "I told him it was a waste of time. I wasn't on drugs."

Lack Of Power Plagues Daytona

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Power — or lack of it — is the main subject of conversation this weekend at Daytona International Speedway.

Going into today's pole qualifying for the Firecracker 400 NASCAR stock car race on Saturday, the drivers are searching hard for ways to pick up the power in the wake of major rules changes that have slowed the cars down by about 10 mph.

"It's like riding down the interstate," Sterling Marlin said Wednesday after practicing on the 2.5-mile, high-banked oval. "The car just won't run. It's like going from a Corvette to a four-cylinder car."

Marlin was the fastest qualifier here a year ago at 203.666 mph. But it's very apparent that nobody is going to even approach 200 here this week.

"So far, it's like driving a Sport'sman car," Alan Kulwick said. "The speeds are slower and the cars are easier to drive right now. But, before we're done, everybody will lay the (rear) spoilers right back and that could make the cars real loose, real different."

This will be the first of two NASCAR events this season for which the rules have been altered in an effort to slow the cars down.

The other will be on July 26 at Alabama International Motor Speedway, where Bobby Allison, running at about 205 mph, tore out 50 feet of catch-fencing and nearly flew into a packed grandstand during the Winston 500 on May 3.

That prompted the stock car sanctioning body to mandate smaller carburetors for the remaining races this season at Daytona and the Talladega, Ala., track, where 200 mph laps have become commonplace.

The move appears to have worked just the way NASCAR had hoped.

Last July, Marlin was just one of 12 drivers to qualify for the Firecracker at more than 200 mph.

Wednesday's unofficial fast laps were just over 195, and the pole-winner today is expected to run no faster than 196 or 197.

Allison, talking about the rule changes, which also include placing glass in the right-side windows, said, "It looks like it took about 10 miles an hour out of our effort."

"It should be pretty interesting," Allison added. "You might even see a new face winning the pole or a few of them up near the front because everybody is guessing right now."

Davey Allison, Bobby's son and the winner of two races already in his rookie season, said the window glass has been the biggest change for him. "It's weird," he said. "I can't hear anything, the car is so quiet ... when someone comes by you, you think their motor is shut off."

As for the smaller carburetor, which slows the flow of gasoline, thereby cutting back on horsepower, the younger Allison said, "The car felt like it didn't have any horsepower. Comparing what we're running and what everyone else is running, it looks like nobody's got a whole lot (of power)."

The elder Allison drives a Buick LeSabre, while his son, who won that first race at Talladega, and Kulwicki both drive Ford Thunderbirds.

Dale Earnhardt, the defending

Winston Cup champion and winner of seven races this year, including last Sunday's event at Michigan International Speedway, and the current point leader, says the new rules could cause problems.

"It's going to be a right awkward situation (here)," Earnhardt said. "The crewmen are going to be jumping around with different springs in their hands all week, trying to find the setup that'll make their car work the best."

"Everyone is in agreement when things are undertaken for safety like this, but we needed a little more time for testing before the changes went into effect, since they altered the cars a whole lot."

Hoyt To Return To White Sox

CHICAGO (AP) — LaMarr Hoyt, plagued by a series of drug problems in recent years, will return to the scene of his glory days with the Chicago White Sox.

Hoyt, 32, and winner of the Cy Young Award in 1983 when he helped pitch the White Sox to the American League West title, agreed in principal on Wednesday to terms of a new contract with his former team after clearing waivers following his release from the San Diego Padres.

The announcement of Hoyt's return to the White Sox was made by General Manager Larry Himes.

Terms of the contract will be formalized this weekend when Hoyt will meet with White Sox officials. But Hoyt will be paid mainly through his $2.8 million contract with the Padres, which runs through 1989.

Himes indicated Hoyt would not pitch for the White Sox this season.

"Hoyt's path to regain control of his life and career will not be easy, and the end result will be the sole responsibility of LaMarr Hoyt," Himes said. "He will report to Daytona, and there is no intention of bringing him back this season."

Hoyt will be assigned to the White Sox's Class A affiliate at Daytona Beach, and he is expected to work his way back through the minor-league system.

Hoyt became a free agent after being released by the Padres following a series of drug-related problems. He cleared waivers Friday.

The Padres' release of Hoyt was in keeping with the team's no second-chance policy for players with drug problems. Hoyt recently spent 30 days in jail because of a misdemeanor drug conviction.

Originally, the Padres dropped Hoyt last January in an effort to nullify his contract. But an arbitrator ordered him restored to the roster and ruled that the Padres were liable for his contract through 1989.

Hoyt, who had a 24-10 record when he won the Cy Young in 1983, fell to 13-18 in 1984 and was traded to the Padres along with pitchers Todd Simmons and Kevin Kristan for infielders Ozzie Guillen and Luis Salazar and pitchers Bill Long and Tim Lollar.

Hoyt was 16-8 with the Padres in 1985 and fell to 8-11 last season.

He was in trouble over drugs three times in 1986. And last October, he pleaded guilty to smuggling about 500

Howard added two hits for Moose while Todd MacKenzie and Damian Phillips had two hits apiece for Pepsi.

Moose will take on Sportsworld, the Tar Heel League champion, Friday at 5:30 p.m. in the first game of a best-of-three series for the City Championship.

Living Off The Land

Agriculture is generally regarded as a great milestone in human history. But some hunter-gatherer tribes might not agree. The Bushmen of Africa, for example, spend an average working week of 12 to 19 hours gathering all they need to eat. They live off wild animals and plants. The Hadza tribe of Tanzania has it even better. Experts say the Hadza spend less than two hours a day finding food. The men use up much of their leisure time gambling.

From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY July 3

GENERAL TENDENCIES: An opportunity to finish up a drawn out project should be taken. Although difficult, changes must be made to clear up the confusion in your relationship with a friend.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): There will be a job which you must finish by noon today. Work on helping an associate clear up his problems.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Plan out the recreations you desire for the near future. Since conditions are changing, don't let anyone annoy you.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Avoid any entertainment which may be very costly. Handle family matters carefully to avoid arguments.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): If you have any guests in tonight, listen carefully to them. Their advice may be very helpful.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): Caution is needed when driving on the highway. Try to avoid a strange condition which you may encounter there.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Seek out advice from a financial expert before attempting to handle confusing monetary or property matters.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Rather than swerving to avoid them, try to remove obstacles from your path. A friend may disappoint you tonight.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): If your loved one is acting strangely, ask direct questions and get to the heart of the matter.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Be selective as to what groups you associate with in a social situation. Handle business before pleasure.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): An out-of-town message will clear up a problem which has been bothering you. Be cautious with figures.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): A new contact could help your career opportunities, but you may have a tendency to say the wrong thing.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): You'll know your mate's wishes even though they're not stated, so try to be pleasing. Handle a civic matter.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he, or she, will have a tremendous desire for knowledge, so be encouraging and expose your child to classic literature at an early age. Your son or daughter will seem to have little interest in others and difficulty communicating. A course in psychology would help this problem.

Give a dozen experts an opening lead problem and it is quite likely that you will get a variety of answers. But all will agree on the principle that, when you have length in the trump suit, a forcing defense could be the winning one. Here's an example from the recent trials to select the 1987 U.S. international team.

In both rooms the final contract was four hearts, reached on similar auctions. For the eventual runners-up West chose the ace of diamonds as his opening lead, and continued with the queen. Declarer ruffed on the table, but the defenders were in command. If South did not draw trumps, West would ruff the third round of clubs and lead another diamond to assure himself of two more trump tricks. So declarer tried two rounds of trumps in the hope of finding a 3-2 break or, the hand with the long trumps also having three clubs. That was not the case—down one.

In the other room, West tried the lead of his top club. Declarer, David Berkowitz of New Jersey, made the most of his opportunity. He cashed just one high trump, then started to run clubs. On the third club he let go a diamond and West refused to ruff. On the next club, declarer parted with a spade as West still conserved his trumps.

Playing super-safely, declarer now led a diamond from dummy. West won and shifted to a spade. Declarer rose with dummy's ace and led another club, and the defenders could get no more than two trumps and a diamond.

Old Cheese Found In Irish Bog

TIPPERARY, Ireland (AP) — A hundred-pound lump of cheese discovered by workmen digging in a bog may still be edible some 1,400 years after it was buried, an archaeologist says.

Tony Candon said the cheese was discovered under five feet of bog on farmland in County Tipperary by workers Paddy Coughlan and Dan O'Connor as they were digging peat on Monday.

He said the lump was either cheese or butter, weighed "about one hundredweight (100 pounds)" and was preserved by the moist conditions.

"We think it would still be edible but we're not keen on trying it as it seems from the depth at which it was found to have been buried in the 5th or 6th century A.D.," he said.

Coughlan and O'Connor unearthed the find at Glenahilly, near Cloughjordan.

"We know from historical sources that people buried such items in bogs right up to modern times and they do turn up from time to time," Candon said.

The discovery's wrapping is more important than the food itself because of what it can tell about ancient crafts, he said. "We don't know for sure what the wrapping is, but it looks like some kind of wickerwork."

Explosive Frees Rocket Bolt

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Space agency crews set off a small explosive today to destroy a balky bolt nut that has kept a shuttle rocket stuck on a launch platform for two weeks.

NASA spokeswoman Lisa Malone said a computer signal sent at 4:48 a.m. EST detonated one of two charges in the nut. One is enough to do the job, she said.

Because one charge failed to detonate, an Air Force explosive ordnance team was called in to remove it.

The detonation took place in a shuttle assembly building where the 27-foot rocket segment is mounted on a mobile launch platform.

Officials said the charge stirred up some dust but there were no pieces flying around because the nut was enshrouded in a metal debris catcher.

Miss Malone said workers will wait until next week to remove the rocket segment.

The nut, about five inches in diameter, is one of eight that fit on top of 28-inch-long bolts that lock a shuttle's two solid fuel booster rockets on the mobile launch pad. When there is liftoff, the two explosives in the nut are triggered and the spaceship is released to fly.

The rocket involved today and its twin, each with four solid fuel segments, were assembled before the Challenger explosion that killed seven astronauts on Jan. 28, 1986. The rockets were to have been used on the next flight, but with the shuttle fleet grounded after the accident, they instead were attached to the shuttle Atlantis for launch pad tests.

Atlantis was separated from the rockets several weeks ago, and technicians last month began disassembling the two boosters. The top three segments of the left booster were removed normally, as were the first three of its four hold-down bolts.

Repeated attempts with normal procedures and tools failed to dislodge the last nut, so the space agency decided to employ the launch day procedure and blow it off, said NASA spokesman Jim Ball.

The decision was made two weeks ago, but the detonation was delayed until technicians could disassemble the right booster rocket. That was done without any problems.

Although the explosive charges were small, the exercise was done early in the morning when the work force is light. The immediate area was cleared of all personnel and there were safety people nearby.

Public and private parking areas throughout the city have designated spaces for handicapped citizens. Special dashboard permits and license plates may be purchased at the state license agency, 718 Dickinson Ave. Call 758-1193 for information.

Texas Youngster Makes Aviation History With Coast-To Coast Flight

By ANDREW MANGAN

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — After seven days of flying over mountains, plains and valleys in all kinds of weather, a blond-haired, 11-year-old Texas boy became the youngest known pilot to traverse the United States.

John Kevin Hill was scooped into his father's arms after climbing from the single-engine Cessna 210 at Washington's National Airport just after 3 p.m. Wednesday upon completion of the final leg of his journey with three passengers.

"I'm glad to be back on solid ground," said the boy, who lives with his parents in Arlington, Texas.

"I never let go of the controls," he said. "I'd get tired but I'd just stick with it. Sometimes it was just like a roller coaster."

Reporters, television cameras and photographers overwhelmed well-wishers who had gathered to greet him.

Moments after giving up his pilot's seat, which was padded with three extra pillows to raise him to window level, John Kevin was greeted by Texas billionaire H. Ross Perot, who happened to be flying out of the private aviation terminal at National Airport.

"I think it's great," Perot said, congratulating the boy. "My son flew a helicopter around the world. I'm just really impressed by it."

When informed by John Kevin's mother, Patsy, that her son plans to attempt an around-the-world flight when he's a little older, Perot said, "Tell him I'm glad he's going to give it a few years' rest."

At the airport, John Kevin was presented with a congressional certificate of appreciation and a deck of playing cards from Air Force II by Rep. Dick Armey, R-Texas, along with several other awards.

The youngster's trip, which began June 24 in Los Angeles, included stops in Cedar City, Utah, Denver and Cincinnati. He was accompanied by his flight instructor, a newspaper reporter and a National Geographic photographer.

The boy must be accompanied by his instructor, Michael Fields, when he flies because he is too young for a pilot's license. John Kevin is allowed to fly only under visual flight rules, which means the weather must allow for extended visibility.

John Kevin said he attempted the transcontinental flight to set a world record, but he had no assurance of meeting that goal. Officials for the Guinness Book of World Records said no statistics are available or transcontinental flights by youths.

Johnny Hill, Kevin's father, said he hoped the Guinness book would create a new category for his son.

John Kevin's parents have been taking commercial flights to follow the trip.

Hot-Air Balloon Heading Out to Sea

CARRABASSETT VALLEY, Maine (AP) — Two British adventurers lifted off today and headed out over the sea on a 3,400-mile trans-Atlantic flight in a huge hot-air balloon, a journey considered so dangerous that no one before has tried it.

As 200 people watched, tycoon Richard Branson, 36, and balloon designer Per Lindstrand, 38, took off in the black Virgin Atlantic Flyer at 4:10 a.m. EDT from the base of Sugar Loaf Mountain in western Maine.

"This is a magnificent moment in my life," Branson said as he and Lindstrand prepared to climb into a pressurized capsule hanging from the balloon. "I haven't had time to be scared. I want to enjoy every minute of this."

The balloon, as high as a 21-story building and said to be the largest ever built, ascended quickly and was out of sight in minutes, heading east toward the coast about 100 miles away.

By 5:30 a.m. EDT, the balloon was already over the sea, 26,000 feet up and moving at an average speed of 80 mph, flight spokesman Crispin Williams said from the expedition's Sugar Loaf headquarters.

Two of the balloon's 12 propane fuel tanks, snagged by a ground line, fell off the craft as it lifted off, but Williams said the balloon would probably have enough fuel to make it to England. He said the balloonists would probably have to fly higher to pick up faster winds to make up for the lost fuel.

Branson, chairman of the board of Virgin Atlantic Airways and the Virgin Group entertainment conglomerate, and the Swedish-born Lindstrand expected to reach England early Sunday EDT after 50-60 hours aloft.

Branson's father, Ted, and his mother, Eve, watched the takeoff, along with residents, reporters and safety officials.

Both parents said they would like to have been with their son on the balloon. "I can't imagine him not being adventurous," his mother said. "He's always been a bit mad."

The trip had been postponed three times in June because of weather.

The balloon and cabin, which cost an estimated $500,000 to build, is making its first flight because the balloon is designed to self-destruct upon landing. Only smaller prototypes have been tested.

The longest previous flight by a hot-air balloon was 907 miles, entirely over land, about the same distance Branson and Lindstrand would cover before leaving land south of St. John's, Newfoundland. Harold Warner made that trip in 27 hours and 23 minutes.

2 Marines Die As Bus Tumbles

LONE PINE, Calif. (AP) — A bus returning Marines from an exercise on Mount Whitney rolled over on a mountain road, killing two and injuring at least 25, authorities said today.

The bus crashed shortly after 10 p.m. Wednesday on the Whitney Portal road, which leads to the head of a popular trail to the top of the peak in the Inyo National Forest.

The Marines were from the Mountain Warfare Training Center at Pickle Meadows, said the base duty officer, Sgt. Gregory Smith.

"They were on duty status, they were training," Smith said. He was unable to provide details of the training, but said Marines from across the country go to the center 150 miles north of Mount Whitney to learn mountain warfare and survival techniques.

CAR TALK

From Joe Cullipher Chrysler
Plymouth, Dodge, Peugeot

By James Phillips

ONE PURPOSE ONLY

An amateur mechanic jacked up the front of his car with one bumper jack in the center of the front bumper. He proceeded to do some heavy mechanical work on the underside of the car. He is now listed as one of the many fatal statistics in the category of unnecessary accidents. The car fell off the jack and crushed him to death.

The bumper jack - which probably is involved in more fatal accidents to amateur mechanics than any other tool - is designed for one purpose and one purpose only - to change a wheel. A bumper jack should never be used as the car support if you intend to work under it.

When work must be done and one or more wheels must be raised, the car should be firmly supported under the axles or frame.

Director Draws Upon World Talent Pool To Fill His Starring Film Roles

By MATT WOLF
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — He's got a rising English star and a bewitching Italian actress in the Spanish-language film of a Latin American novella with a Colombian setting.
To Francesco Rosi, the director of "Chronicle of a Death Foretold," the world is his talent pool.
"The problem is to find the good actor for the character," Rosi, 64, said of his film, which premiered in May at the Cannes Film Festival. It opened in London on June 19, and is due in New York in the fall.
Based on the work by the Nobel Prize-winning novelist Gabriel Garcia Marquez, the movie stars British actor Rupert Everett ("Another Country," "Dance With a Stranger") as Bayardo San Roman, a British resident of a quiet Colombian river town.

Ornella Muti, the dark-haired Italian beauty, plays Angela Vicario, the local woman whom he marries and then disowns. The supporting cast includes Greek actress Irene Papas, Frenchman Anthony Delon and the Italian character actor Gian Maria Volonte.
"They were the best for me," said Rosi, speaking in imperfect but rapid English during a promotional tour to London. "I find the actors wherever possible."
He said the breadth of the cast strengthened his film's appeal worldwide. He played down linguistic inconsistencies among the performers, despite his hesitant command of English.

Everett, whose character often falls into mysterious silences, spoke English during the filming but is dubbed into Spanish.
Rosi said the book required interpretation, not just outright adaptation. "It's a great book but not a big book," he said. "He (Marquez) suggests more than he says clearly. ... You find the film between the pages of the book."
"In books, words are the evocation of things; in a movie the images are physical, concrete."
Rosi saw links between this movie and some of his others, which include "Salvatore Giuliano," "The Mattei Affair," "Christ Stopped at Eboli" and "Three Brothers."
"Chronicle of a Death Foretold" is a tale of love and murder set — like his 1961 "Salvatore Giuliano" — in two separate time periods.
"This is an occasion of passion, and I like very much to express passion," he said. "The interest is in the cultural and social implications of a crime of honor."
There is a climactic killing in the novel.
"No one prevents the crime," Rosi said. "I think that's an absurd atrocity that the human being cannot accept."

His most recent film, the acclaimed 1984 movie of Bizet's opera "Carmen," starring Julia Migenes and Placido Domingo, also ended with a murder.
He doubts he would make another opera film.
"I like very much music, but there are not many operas to film like 'Carmen,'" Rosi said. "'Carmen' is realistic. It's got Spain, Gypsies, bullfighters, mountains."
A Neapolitan by birth, Rosi began his career with Franco Zeffirelli as assistant to the great Italian director, Luchino Visconti, on his 1948 film, "La Terra Trema." He later assisted Visconti on the 1954 film, "Senso," but he said most of his influences have been American.
"American musical comedy I like very much, also the social American cinema of the '40s and '50s: Fritz Lang, John Ford, Elia Kazan," he said.
Rosi was reticent about future projects.
"The decision to make a film is my real problem," he said. "I work very fast, but I need very much time to take a decision on which film I want to do."

Dutch Government Ends Artist Stipends

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (AP) — For Dutch artists following in the brush strokes of Rembrandt and Van Gogh, it's back to the rigors of the marketplace as the government's unique artist stipend program peters out.
With the July 1 demise of the Pictorial Arts Scheme, about 2,000 Dutch painters, sculptors and other artists will have to earn their living by selling their work themselves, or find another job.
Its advocates maintain the stipend scheme guaranteed the continuity of Dutch culture by freeing artists from the everyday concerns of making a living, while its detractors claimed the program simply produced lots of bad and unwanted art.
Under the program, artists were paid a yearly salary of up to $16,000. To qualify, they had to prove their professional status by privately selling $4,000 worth of art and donating up to four works to the government each year.
The stipends, which totaled $35 million last year, decreased in proportion to increased private earnings. But at last count, the government owned a stash of about 220,000 works accumulated over the last four decades.

While about 30 percent of those works decorate government offices or are lent out to the public, the remainder is gathering dust — and storage charges — in warehouses.
The Pictorial Arts Scheme fell victim to the fiscal austerity and private enterprise policies pursued by Premier Ruud Lubbers' center-right government.
When the program began in 1949, it was meant to help some 100 young artists through the post-war hard times.
The scheme's most famous beneficiary is world-renowned abstractionist Karel Appel, whose 1949 mural in Amsterdam's City Hall, "Children Playing," was one of the first works finished under the program. The painting provoked such a controversy on its completion that it was kept under wraps for 10 years.

'Dragnet' Frees Hanks From Rut

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Tom Hanks says "Dragnet" gave him a chance to "absolutely cut loose" after two films in which he had to compete with lowbrow gags and special effects.

"It was going back to working on my comic chops, which I haven't been able to do for a long, long time," said Hanks, who stars with Dan Aykroyd in the hit movie based on the TV series.

"Bachelor Party" was nothing more than a rock 'n' roll sex comedy," Hanks said recently. "It was gunky, goofy — dead donkey, agh! — that kind of stuff. 'The Money Pit' was essentially a special-effects, wogga-wogga kind of movie. So on down the line, I had been voluntarily restrained.

"So when this came along, it was like, 'Look, Dan's going to be doing this thing, so that means I'm really going to be able to make up this guy and absolutely cut loose.'"

Concert Funds

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The country music group Alabama says it raised more than $1 million at its sixth annual June Jam concert in Fort Payne, Ala.

More than 56,000 attended the 11-hour outdoor show June 13, whose proceeds go to various charities in Alabama.

The concert lineup also included the Oak Ridge Boys, Restless Heart, Sawyer Brown, John Schneider, Carl Perkins, the Shooters, Percy Sledge and George "Goobar" Lindsey.

dinner party to get permission to string cables across buildings. We got power 10 minutes before we went on the air. When you leave the security blanket of a studio anything can go wrong, and usually does."

use the show to call attention to the fight against illiteracy.

"ABC called me in after the Oscars and said they wanted a show celebrating liberty and literacy," said Pasetta. "Last year they had the Statue of Liberty Show, and it proved there is an audience at the Fourth of July. The networks had always felt people were barbecuing and popping firecrackers at that time."

He said the producers decided to do the show in St. Louis because of its "tradition of Fourth of July celebrations."

"The Statue of Liberty show was very Broadway," Pasetta said. "This is going to be more Midwest. We're going for the young families and the grandmas and the grandpas. We're not going after the teen-agers."

The show will also promote theme parks, which this summer are donating a dollar to Project PLUS for every visitor.

"The parks could raise as much as $35 million," said Pasetta. "But this is not a telethon. We're not asking for money. We only want to educate the viewer. We'll provide an 800 number where people can call toll-free to get information and help."

"We'll also have testimonials from people telling how they learned to read and how it affected their lives. Many celebrities will also lend support and encouragement to the program. Every performer on the show will relate to either liberty or literacy, but there won't be any speeches."

Barbara Bush, wife of Vice President George Bush and a strong supporter of Project Plus, will also appear.

"At the end of the show Phil Driscoll — nobody knows him but he's electrifying — will play the trumpet with a 500-voice choir," said Pasetta. "He plays in churches all over the South. I think he's the one people will be talking about when the show's over."

Producing and directing spectaculars is nothing new for Pasetta. He has directed the Academy Awards for the last 16 years, the Grammys for eight years, the American Film Salutes for eight years and the Emmys for two years. He has also directed shows for the Smothers Brothers, Glen Campbell, Andy Williams and the Everly Brothers. He designed the shows and directed the pilots for "Wheel of Fortune" and "Love Connection."

Last month, he was in France with George Burns for "A Night in Paris," a special airing on Showtime in August.

"The Oscars is the hardest one to do because there's only one take because it's live," he said. "It's under-rehearsed. The Fourth of July show is tough because it's spread all over."

He said a Grammys show from Nashville was almost derailed because a storm knocked out power.

ABC Schedules Three-Hour Fourth Of July Broadcast

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — This Fourth of July, perhaps as an encore to last year's Statue of Liberty centennial, ABC is staging another by-the-rocket's red glare salute to America's birthday.

"A Star-Spangled Celebration" will come from the Arch in St. Louis, with Oprah Winfrey as host and producer-director Marty Pasetta as the man putting it all together. The three-hour show will be broadcast Saturday.

"We'll have close to a million people under the Arch," said Pasetta. "We're erecting a stage half the length of a football field. Robert Ulrich will be host at the Arch and Oprah, who'll be about a block away (on a terrace overlooking the event), will be the overall host."

Among those scheduled to perform are Peter Allen and the Rockettes, Tony Bennett, Loretta Lynn, Dwight Yoakum, Ben Vereen, Yakov Smirnoff, Jennifer Holliday, Barbara Checker, The Wildcats, Barbara Mandrell, Bernadette Peters, the Jets, Phil Driscoll and Suzanne Somers.

The show actually will be taped Friday night. Pasetta will immediately pack the tapes and his crew into a jet for New York. They'll catch a nap on the plane, but once they get to New York they'll begin editing and work straight through to air time.

"By the time the first hour is on, we'll still be working on the last hour," Pasetta said.

Although the show is a salute to the nation's birthday, it has another purpose. ABC, which is allied with PBS in Project Literacy U.S. (PLUS), will

Miss America Plans Marriage

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Miss America 1985, Sharlene Wells, plans to marry a fellow Brigham Young University student Monday at the Mormon Temple.

Wells, 23, will wed Robert Allen Hawkes, a 25-year-old physical therapy student, her family announced Tuesday. The couple met in a Mormon Church congregation at BYU, family members said.

Wells was crowned Miss America in one of the pageant's most controversial years. Miss America 1984, Vanessa Williams, had been dethroned after nude pictures of her appeared in Penthouse.

Some felt Wells' selection was at least partially due to her Mormon background.

"I certainly hope so," she said at the time. "I live my religion seven days a week. I'm a Mormon from Utah; that should say it all. I've kept my life irreproachable."

Anti-Depressant May Solve Mystery Over 'Yuppie Flu'

By ROBIN MARANTZ HENIG
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

"I had a handful of good days when I didn't crash at 2 o'clock in the afternoon," says Chris Larson of Annandale, Va., recalling how she felt last winter. "On those days I could actually get up in the morning, do some things around the house and make it through dinner." Usually, however, she was in bed by 4 p.m.

Larson, a career flight attendant, has been on medical leave since late 1985. "I can't be on my feet for more than an hour," she says. Last winter, she worked in a low-stress office job two afternoons a week and then would retreat to her bed or the living-room couch while her husband, a pharmacist, did most of the household chores. Every few days, she felt energetic enough to walk the dog.

"In the beginning," Larson says, "I thought this was how you were supposed to feel at 37."

Today, Larson is feeling somewhat better. She goes to her office job three afternoons a week, recovers more quickly from being overtired and can stay awake until after 11. She attributes her improvement to an increased dose of the anti-depressant medication Elavil, but her diagnosis is not depression. Larson's mysterious, chronic fatigue, which still keeps her from the stewardess job she loves, has been ascribed to a pervasive virus, the Epstein-Barr virus, which is known to account for mononucleosis, B-cell lymphoma and certain cancers in Africa and Asia.

Her doctor calls Larson's condition chronic Epstein-Barr virus (CEBV) syndrome. Journalists have called it "the yuppie flu" after the kind of people — young, ambitious, professional achievers, mostly in their 30s and 40s and mostly female — who tend to get the condition.

Chronic-fatigue syndrome has been dismissed by some as purely psychosomatic, a charge that is difficult to refute because of the subjective nature of the symptoms. Victims feel overwhelming tiredness, muscle aches, joint pains, headaches, memory loss, dizziness, depression — all conditions that could point to a wide range of disorders.

But despite a certain amount of skepticism and yuppie jokes, the syndrome has been receiving attention recently from prominent researchers, who see it as a window into the workings of the immune system and its intimate link to stress.

"Research is moving along rapidly," says Dr. Gary Holmes, medical epidemiologist at the Centers for Disease Control who conducted CDC's investigation of the first chronic-fatigue-syndrome outbreak, which occurred in Lake Tahoe, Nev., in 1985. "It's definitely a syndrome that people really experience, but I don't think we're any closer than we were six months ago to understanding just what causes it."

Although its name implies that the Epstein-Barr virus causes CEBV syndrome, Holmes says any number of factors, not all of them even viruses, could set off chronic fatigue. Last April, the CDC hosted a conference to discuss terminology, and rejected a few — including CEBV syndrome and the term that is used in England, post-viral fatigue syndrome — as imprecise or misleading.

The agency finally settled on the unwieldy phrase they had used since the syndrome was first identified, chronic mononucleosis-like syndrome. "We kept it because it was just about as good as any of the others," he says. "But I admit it is long."

The appeal of EBV as a cause of this syndrome is enormous. EBV, named for the two scientists who identified it in 1964, is known to cause infectious mononucleosis, the "kissing disease" (so named because it can spread through saliva) that causes a similar tiredness and achiness in large numbers of college students and other young adults.

A member of the herpes-virus family, EBV lodges permanently in an individual's white blood cells, or lymphocytes, and a sudden stress can lead to its reactivation. Other herpes viruses, such as those responsible for cold sores, genital herpes, chicken pox and shingles, also remain dormant for years and can flare up during times of physical or emotional stress.

Almost all American adults, some 90 percent of those over 30, show the footprints of EBV exposure in the form of antibodies to the virus's protein. The majority never experience illness at all, especially if first exposure occurs during childhood. But the EBV antibodies remain in the bloodstream for a lifetime.

Now that medical laboratories have kits available to test for EBV antibodies, doctors can look for them in patients complaining of fatigue. But because most people, sick or well, have these antibodies, it follows that most of the fatigue patients do, too.

And there's the rub. Some victims of chronic-fatigue syndrome have abnormally high levels of these antibodies, but many victims have antibody levels, or titers, that are quite normal. A CDC study published in the May 1 Journal of the American Medical Association reported that the Lake Tahoe-area victims also had higher antibody titers against cytomegalovirus, herpes simplex virus types 1 and 2, and measles.

According to Dr. James Jones, an investigator at the National Jewish Hospital in Denver, some chronic-fatigue victims don't have any EBV antibodies at all — a finding that is itself suggestive of something gone awry.

"We're looking at these patients without high titers," says Jones. "Maybe they are suffering from chronic EBV infection because they are not able to make antibodies to the virus."

The Epstein-Barr virus, according to Jones, might account for the symptoms directly, might be aggravated by the presence of other viruses, might inhibit a more generalized immune response or might be totally unrelated to certain cases of chronic fatigue.

"There may be a genetic predisposition to having problems with the EB virus," he says. "Maybe the patient can't control it properly or excretes more of the virus than others do."

Or maybe the EB virus is just a red herring. According to Dr. Stephen Straus, chief of the medical virology lab at the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases, a high EBV antibody titer doesn't necessarily indicate that the virus has been reactivated.

"An elevated titer usually reflects an abnormality in the immune system," not a reinfection with EBV, he says. Organ-transplant recipients whose immune systems are deliberately suppressed to quell rejection of the organ tend to have high EBV titers, he says, as do patients with lymphoma, multiple sclerosis and other disorders of the immune system.

"Because the Epstein-Barr virus is intimately tied to the immune system — after all, it resides in the lymphocyte — it has the capacity to be a sentinel for what is happening elsewhere in the system," Straus says. He worries that some observers have misinterpreted a coincidence as a cause.

A malfunctioning immune system also may be suggested by Jones' observation that the majority of his CEBV patients — approximately 85 percent — have allergies. This compares to just 16 percent of the population at large. Can the immune response that accounts for allergies, he wonders, somehow also account for chronic EBV infection?

The EB virus probably is at the heart of most of the cases he sees, says Jones. "The problem is in limiting our thinking to what EBV can do based on what we know about mononucleosis," he says. "Mono accounts for just one-third of the illnesses associated with EBV. It's a complex virus in terms of what it can do once it infects you."

While controversy remains as to how, or even whether, EBV is responsible for chronic-fatigue syndrome, few researchers are questioning that chronic fatigue exists. The syndrome is easy to identify and affects most individuals in a hauntingly familiar way. "The way a patient describes the syndrome creates a picture one recognizes very easily," says Straus. "After seeing hundreds of these patients, I can tell within 20 seconds what they're talking about."

Straus says they use the same metaphors to describe the depth of their tiredness: hitting the wall, fatigue coming on in waves, always feeling like they're coming down with a cold, heaviness and achiness, lightheadedness. "I used to be a long-distance runner," says Gidget Faubian, president of the National CEBV Syndrome Association, who has had the condition for four years, "and suddenly I was always feeling as though I had just run a marathon."

Faubian's group claims 10,000 members — three out of four of whom are women — and 250 satellite support groups in the United States, Canada, Europe and Australia. But some federal officials think this estimate is high. "Who are you going to include in the numbers?" asks Straus. "Everybody who calls up complaining of tiredness?"

"Of the people who are told they have it," adds Holmes of the CDC, "only a fraction really do. There's been an overinterpretation of Epstein-Barr serology (blood antibodies) in diagnosing this condition." For that reason, it is important to rule out other conditions before settling on CEBV, he says.

For now, doctors can offer only symptomatic treatment of the aches, pains and fevers that often accompany the syndrome. Straus has experimented with acyclovir, an anti-viral drug effective against genital herpes, in treating chronic-fatigue cases. But, as he reported recently to the American Society for Clinical Investigation, a study of 19 women and eight men showed that the drug was no better than an inert pill, or placebo, at relieving symptoms.

tivity of natural killer cells, the immune system's front line of defense against viruses and cancer.

Just as the brain can affect the immune system, the immune system has also been found to affect the brain.

Lymphocytes, a type of white blood cell, have been found to produce opium-like chemicals once thought to be produced exclusively in the brain.

These chemicals may serve as natural painkillers by virtue of their effect on the brain and central nervous system.

Lowy has shown that defects in lymphocytes can be related to abnormal levels of the hormone cortisol in the body, which in turn may play a role in the development of depression or Alzheimer's disease.

Many victims of depression and other psychiatric disorders, including Alzheimer's disease, are unable to suppress the production of cortisol when given a potent, synthetic form of cortisol called dexamethasone, Lowy said.

Normal people, on the other hand, cut production of cortisol when given what is called the dexamethasone suppression test.

Lymphocytes have "receptors" on their surface that can lock on to cortisol and thus help monitor cortisol levels, Lowy said. He found that patients who are unable to suppress cortisol either had defective receptors or too few receptors, or a combination of both.

Because lymphocytes and brain cells share many similarities, it is possible that such defects also occur in the brain and are responsible for the patients' psychiatric disorders, Lowy said.

The advantage of finding parallel defects in lymphocytes and brain cells is that lymphocytes can be easily obtained in a blood sample, while brain tissue is difficult and risky to obtain.

Thus lymphocytes may one day serve as the means to diagnose and determine treatment for psychiatric disorders, Lowy said.

Miller and others have suggested that the link between the brain and immune system is so close that depression might even be a contributing cause of infectious diseases.

"The presence of a virus is necessary but not sufficient" to cause disease, Miller said. "There are other co-factors, and depression may be one of these."

Researcher Says Human Brain, Immune System Use Some Of Same Chemicals

By PAUL RAE BURN
AP Science Editor

CHICAGO (AP) — Mood seems to affect the strength of disease, and researchers say they have found a possible explanation: the brain and the immune system use many of the same chemicals to communicate.

"If we can begin to understand the biochemistry of these pathways ... we may be able to tap into the body's ability to regulate and heal itself," Dr. Andrew Miller of Montefiore Hospital in New York said recently at the annual meeting of the American Psychiatric Association.

Martin Lowy of Case Western Reserve University in Cleveland reported his finding that certain immune cells called lymphocytes may mimic brain cell defects in some patients with depression.

Lowy said his research is part of a growing body of work suggesting that the immune system and the brain "share a common chemical language."

In a related finding, Miller reported that so-called tricyclic antidepressants, commonly given to treat depression, impair the disease-fighting ac-
