Bickering Continues To Plague Schools Year After Merger

(This is the first article in a two-part series on the Pitt County school system, one year after consolidation.)

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

This month marks the first anniversary of the consolidation of the Pitt County and Greenville city school systems, a merger that was discussed on-and-off for over 20 years. The discussions and debates have continued, but the combination of the two school systems has taken place.

The merger has not been smooth, but it has been accomplished. There have been threatened lawsuits from citizens groups, revised plans which were revised again, heated words from the public and upset students and teachers.

However, the two school systems now are one entity — with one budget, one administration, one board of education and one set of policies.

The merger was accepted by the U.S. Justice Department on July 1, 1986.

"I feel very good about where we are going," Pitt County school Superintendent Eddie West said in an interview published July 28, 1986.

"Consolidation will result in improved environments for learning through capital improvements, exemplary education programs, more efficient utilization of resources and more effective staff," West said.

"The potential of merger is one thing, the reality is something else," said former Greenville school Superintendent Delma Blinson in the 1986 interview. "The potential is not going to be realized unless there is enough potential to make merger work as there was to bring it about in the first place."

At the time of the interview, West, now superintendent of the consolidated school system, did not want to speculate on any problems he foresaw for the consolidated system.

The problems for the merged school system this year have been numerous, with each major step taken by the consolidated board being met with public outcry and bickering between the board members.

Just the idea of the merger of the two school systems has been a source of controversy.

HOT WORK — Robert Murphy cleans the end of a tar applicator in a burning bucket of diesel fuel Thursday afternoon under hot temperatures. Murphy was filling cracks in the pavement at the new fire station at the corner of Red Banks road and Charles Boulevard. The threat of showers has slowed such work in much of eastern North Carolina in recent weeks, and forecasters say more adverse weather is likely. Afternoon showers are forecast for this area through Monday. Afternoon temperatures are expected to continue in the upper 80s and low 90s. (Reflector Photo by Cliff Hollis)

18 Aliens Die In Locked Car

SIERRA BLANCA, Texas (AP) — Eighteen illegal aliens trapped in a locked steel-walled boxcar "started to get crazy" and fought each other in 130-degree heat as they died "little by little," the lone survivor says.

Border Patrol agents on a routine inspection of a freight train near this city 87 miles east of El Paso found the bodies — some with their tongues chewed — inside the blood-splattered boxcar.

The car had been locked from the outside, apparently by the smuggler who brought the 19 into the country, and was littered with a bag of animal crackers, six cans of corn, bags of toiletries and six empty jugs, the officers said.

The men, ranging in age from about 21 to 35, had clawed at the wood-lined door as the temperature rose as high as 130 degrees, according to Border Patrol agent Stanley Saathoff.

The aliens had boarded the train late Wednesday afternoon at El Paso, authorities said.

The only person found alive inside the car Thursday, Miguel Tostado Rodriguez, 21, of the Mexican state of Aguascalientes, survived by breathing through an opening punched in the floor of the boxcar with a railroad spike, Saathoff said.

"People started dying little by little, little by little," Tostado said.

"They started fighting with each other because they were desperate to breathe and (for) water," he said. "They didn't have any water. So they started to get crazy and fight each other. They didn't have any oxygen so they started fighting each other."

Tostado spent the night at an illegal alien detention center in El Paso, and was to undergo further questioning today, the Border Patrol said.

Tostado said that in desperation the men tried to get air by jabbing

Carter Entering Race For Mayor

Greenville City Council member Edward E. Carter today announced plans to file as a candidate for mayor in the Nov. 3 municipal elections.

Carter, former chairman of the Greenville school board, said he would file with the Pitt County Board of Elections when the filing period began at noon today.

Carter, who resides at 104 Fireside Road, is completing his fourth year on the City Council, two of which were served as mayor pro tem. First elected to the City Council in 1983, Carter ran a successful write-in campaign in 1985.

The mayoral candidate, who has resided in Greenville since 1971, is head of administrative services at Burroughs Wellcome Co.

He graduated from Prairie View A&M College in Texas and entered the U.S. Army where he served in various locations for more than eight years.

Carter served on the school board for over eight years, including two as chairman. He twice ran unsuccessfully for the City Council before being elected in 1983.

Carter, 47, and his wife, Jean, have three children, Regina, Tonya and Jacquelyn.

In announcing his candidacy, Carter said the city needs strong direction and leadership.

"I feel that Greenville needs experienced and capable leadership," he said. "It needs the type of leadership that would unify the people on the council and lead the city in a direction that would force orderly growth and development."

Carter also called for additional cooperation between governing boards.

"We have to assume a more active role in assisting the county in attracting more diversified industry," Carter said. "We also need a better working relationship between the city and county, as well as the City Council with the boards and commissions it appoints."

"I feel that my background and experience as well as my education qualifies me to assume that leadership role."

Thunderstorms Kill Six In Oklahoma, Flood Ohio

By JONATHAN W. OATIS

Associated Press Writer

National Guardsmen prepared to move today into two Ohio towns, where the worst flooding in 28 years forced hundreds to evacuate, while thunderstorms that killed six roughed up Oklahoma and silenced two Wisconsin TV stations.

"There's just no warning on something like this," Police Capt. Fred Eichinger said in hard-hit Shelby, Ohio. "You don't know how high it's going and when it's going to quit."

As Ohio coped with high water from rain-swollen rivers Thursday, thunderstorms spawned tornadoes in Texas and Colorado and dumped hail as big as golfballs near Kiowa, Colo.

The National Weather Service forecast scattered showers and thunderstorms for Ohio today, and flood warnings remained in effect for the rain-swollen Scioto, Sandusky, Cuyahoga, Tuscarawas and Mahoning rivers.

Lesser flooding occurred in sections of Montana, Pennsylvania and New Jersey. A flash flood watch was in effect in south central Montana, and flood watches went up in New York's Catskill Mountains.

Storms were blamed for two deaths in Indiana and one in Oklahoma. Three people drowned on a lake in eastern Texas when wind capsized their boat.

Authorities in Ohio evacuated a trailer park early today after high water caused a trailer's butane tank to explode, burning a man and his wife, said Mount Gilead Police Chief Robert Ruhl. The man was in critical condition today.

Officials estimated flood damage in north central Ohio at more than $15 million. Four counties remained under a state of emergency today.

Gov. Richard Celeste activated 60 Guardsmen to provide security and help clean up in Shelby and Bellville.

Black Fork River flooding forced as many as 500 Shelby residents from their homes and cut the city of 9,800 in two. Fifty to 100 of Bellville's 1,700 residents were also evacuated, officials said.

Five people were injured in Shelby, where flooding damaged about 300 homes, as well as business and industrial property, said the Ohio Disaster Services Agency. The damage was expected to top $10 million.

"We had one of these in 1959 and this is much worse than that one was," said Eichinger.

In neighboring Crawford County, about 125 residents of Bucrus left their homes. An apartment complex was evacuated in Galion.

In Oklahoma, the storms cut power to a Lawton hospital, felled trees, closed roads, shattered a Duncan furniture store's windows, flipped a mobile home and blew the roofs off several Yukon buildings.

In Oklahoma City, lightning tore the top off an oil storage tank, sending burning crude oil and natural gas into the street. The fuel flowed into a creek and firefighters fought the blaze there, said fire department spokesman Jon Hansen.

Lightning strikes were blamed for four house fires in Oklahoma City.

In Wausau, Wis., lightning knocked WAOW-TV off the air for about 25 minutes Thursday afternoon and WSAW-TV for about 20 minutes.

To the north, in Phillips, high winds flipped a cargo plane at Price County Airport and damaged 12 to 15 statues at Wisconsin Concrete Park, a tourist attraction.

The storm came a day before today's start of the Fourth of July Downburst Celebration, which commemorates a storm 10 years ago that destroyed most of the trees in the city and the Flambeau River State Forest.

In Baltimore, a rowhouse collapsed early Thursday, killing two occupants. Witnesses said the house had been hit by lightning.

In Nevada, lightning sparked a 75-acre fire near homes in Carson City and a 3,600-acre blaze south of the Idaho border, along with scores of smaller fires. Rain washed boulders across Interstate 80 in northern California, blocking the highway for several hours.

Greyhound Cleared To Run Trailways

WASHINGTON (AP) — Greyhound will begin operating financially crippled Trailways next week under temporary government approval that Greyhound's top officer says "is really good news for users of low-cost transportation."

The Interstate Commerce Commission gave the go-ahead Thursday after the Justice Department advised the ICC that Trailways qualified as a "failing company" under federal antitrust laws and, therefore, the merger would not violate those laws.

Justice Department attorneys, economists and financial analysts found Trailways "on the brink of bankruptcy" with "virtually no chance of being restructured as a viable entity" and there are no other potential purchasers for the company, the department's antitrust division said in a filing with the ICC.

Under the temporary approval, GLI Acquisition Co., which controls the Greyhound bus system, will operate Trailways Lines Inc. under a lease agreement. Greyhound characterized the temporary order as permitting a purchase of Trailways' assets, subject to reversal if the ICC decides not to make the merger permanent.

Greyhound announced June 19 it wants to purchase Trailways for $80 million.

Asked about customer pricing under the new structure, Fred G. Currey, Greyhound's chief operating officer, said the company in the past 90 days had reduced prices along "thousands" of routes for which Greyhound is the sole bus provider.

"We price not against buses, but against automobiles and discount air fares, and business has been based on that policy since the day we bought Greyhound Lines," Currey said.

He promised to restore service to some communities that lost public transportation in recent years and said the Trailways logo will be retained on that company's buses.

"I think the transaction is really good news for users of low-cost transportation," he added.

Trailways has about 1,200 buses, and Greyhound has 2,800.

Currey and two other Texas businessmen, Craig Lentzsch, vice chairman and executive vice president, and Anthony Lannie, executive vice president, purchased Greyhound March 18 and turned it into a privately held company.

Both Greyhound and the privately held Trailways are based in Dallas.

Greyhound had said Monday it would scuttle its merger plans unless the government acted swiftly to approve the plan.

A permanent merger would make Greyhound the country's only national inter-city bus company.

The companies have contended that Trailways, which has been struggling to keep operating, qualifies as a failing firm. Four years ago, Trailways sought to sell stock to the public, but was unable to attract investors. It also has failed to attract support of labor unions for an employee stock ownership plan and failed last year in efforts to attract a buyer.

Creditors Want To Keep PTL Intact

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — A seven-member committee with broad investigative powers that represents PTL's unsecured creditors wants to keep the ministry "as intact as possible," one of its co-chairmen said.

The creditors met privately for the first time Thursday in a small wood-paneled courtroom in a federal office building to elect co-chairmen and lay groundwork for future sessions.

Under the U.S. bankruptcy code, those sessions could include questioning ministry executives under oath or seeking information about possible fraud. The panel also can participating in forming PTL's plan for reorganization under Chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code which gives it protection from its 1,400 creditors.

"We're enthusiastic about working with the creditors and hopefully in their best interest and keeping the ministry as much intact as possible," said Gerry Hindy of Pittsburgh, Pa., one of two co-chairmen elected by the seven-member committee.

The ministry based in Fort Mill, S.C., is $72 million in debt and filed June 12 for reorganization. Court records show $31 million of the debt is owed to unsecured creditors — those that do not hold mortgage notes or other collateral.

The Rev. Jerry Falwell took over PTL on March 19 after ministry founder Jim Bakker admitted to a sexual liaison with a church secretary in 1980. Bakker is trying to regain the ministry or start a new one.

A meeting of all unsecured creditors is tentatively scheduled July 22 in Columbia. The exact date, time and location are awaiting formal approval by the presiding bankruptcy judge, Rufus W. Reynolds of Greensboro, N.C., who appointed the committee members.

Real estate developer Haines A. Maxwell of Charlotte, N.C., was elected co-chairman of the committee with Hindy, a vice president of Hamilton Excavating and Development Inc. of Lancaster, Pa.

Liberty

It's not perfect. It never will be. It is a never-ending struggle for an always-changing goal of freedom and government by the people.

"It" is American liberty and democracy, born over two centuries ago with a document called the Declaration of Independence.

On Saturday Americans will celebrate their 211th year of freedom. There's nothing special about 211. It's not like the bicentennial, or 210, the year the Statue of Liberty was rededicated.

Number 211 is like any other July 4th. It is a celebration of one nation's commitment to the fundamental rights of humankind — a proclamation of American freedom and democracy.

Liberty seems elusive and far-removed to many Americans. It's something they hear about in school and don't connect with everyday life. Nothing could be further from the truth. Freedom is an integral part of American life.

The fact that you're reading this is freedom.

The fact that you'll assemble with other Americans to observe July 4th, watch fireworks, or discuss life, is freedom.

The fact that you disagree, loudly and vehemently at times, with the way freedom is administered, is freedom.

The fact that you may or may not — it's your choice — offer a prayer of either thanks or despair is freedom.

There's no doubt American liberty has been abused in the past 211 years. Most of its failure, however, has come from the people's neglect of freedom's principles.

Despite these shortcomings, Americans should revel in their freedom. Democracy is an experiment where the parameters are constantly changing, and where the people are the parameters.

The intangibles of freedom aren't fragile. They have stood strong for 211 years. But their structure requires they be stoutly reinforced by sturdy belief.

On July 4th the nation will proclaim its heritage of liberty. It is important that its people also rejoice in the perfect, imperfect product of 211 years of living free.

Bumping Frontiers

In 1937 the world was captivated by the flight of Amelia Earhart which was an attempt to be the first person to fly around the world.

Earhart and her navigator, Fred Noonan, made it as far as Le, Papua New Guinea, but after that the plane disappeared and was presumed to have crashed in the ocean.

Stories have abounded since about what might have happened to the famed aviatrix, including the most frequently circulated one that she was captured by the Japanese and died in a prison camp during World War II. There are variations to the story that she might still be alive.

Like all mysteries anyone can speculate on potential endings. It is probable, however, that the Lockheed Electra did crash in the ocean. It is virtually certain that Amelia Earhart is now dead.

In this time when women astronauts circle the globe it is difficult to envision the immensity of Amelia Earhart's mission in 1937. Aircraft had not yet advanced to the point where a flight around the world was readily done and there was no worldwide tracking system such as exists today. When the flight left New Guinea it was headed for the Howland Island, a tiny dot in the Pacific Ocean. Missing it meant doom.

It is also important that women adventurers were not popular in that time of the male dominated work place. The woman's place was in the home and the dangerous adventures were better left to men. Thus Earhart had to defy well entrenched tradition to even become an aviatrix. Her disappearance was seen by some as grim retribution for exceeding her bounds.

Interestingly one of the people who remembered Amelia Earhart in ceremonies on July 2, the anniversary of her disappearance, was Marsha Ivins, an astronaut preparing for a space flight.

"For me this is a special occasion because it recalls the achievements of a young woman who flaunted custom to pursue a dream, a woman who ... demonstrated that women too could reach for the stars, she said."

Earhart could not have known then that she was a spark of social change which would open vast fields of endeavor for women. Beginning in World War II when women were needed in defense factories, there has been sweeping inclusion of women in all trades and professions.

While Earhart was part of the air travel revolution which has since swept the world, she deserves her place as one of our nation's heroines who led the way for modern women to accomplish many things in various fields.

Hostages And The Gulf Neutrality Issue

WASHINGTON — A direct link between the Khomeini regime and shadowy, hostage-taking Hezbollah Shiites in Lebanon points to an Iranian intelligence unit with a known address in Teheran as the control point for operations that — most recently — resulted in the June 17 seizure of American reporter Charles Glass.

The new evidence indicates that Teheran exerts far tighter control over Hezbollah's operations than frightened Western governments have considered likely. Up to now, suspected links between Teheran and Hezbollah strongholds in the Beirut slums, with supporting elements in the Bekaa Valley, have been tenuous — but the Peoples' Mujahedin, the largest anti-Khomeini resistance organization, has now pinpointed Teheran's control.

The Eighth Branch of Iran's feared intelligence agency now appears to be in charge of hostage-taking operations in faraway Lebanon, under the control of Parliament speaker Hashemi Rafsanjani. This is the same Rafsanjani who was billed as the "moderate" Iranian leader that U.S. operatives in the arms-for-Iran affair said would free American hostages and take power after Khomeini.

The prospect of Western intelligence agencies proving that the Khomeini regime is indeed the real trigger-point for seizing hostages in Lebanon gives President Reagan new ammunition to support his Persian Gulf strategy. A key congressional complaint is that Reagan's re-flagging plan for Kuwaiti tankers favors Iraq at Iran's expense. That dubious argument collapses with direct Iranian complicity in seizing American hostages in faraway Lebanon.

"If Iran does slug us in the Persian Gulf," a top House Democrat told us privately, "a proper retaliation target would be the place in Teheran that controls Hezbollah hostage operations in Lebanon." Real U.S. neutrality in the Iran-Iraq war, he said, could not survive a finding of Iran's direct responsibility for anti-American terrorist acts by Hezbollah.

The anti-Khomeini Peoples' Mujahedin, savaged by the State Department until early this year as a "terrorist" organization, is now in possession of fascinating details about Khomeini's remote control of Lebanon terrorists. Its penetration of Khomeini security organs portrays a highly-developed, well-organized operation that so far has been unknown to the West.

As one example, electronic communication and mail are not allowed between Teheran and Beirut. Orders are dispatched by courier, often without written documents. These orders emanate from a nondescript building on Pasdaran Street under control of a director who was sent on a 10-day assignment to Lebanon in early June. There is speculation here that this journey was probably connected to the kidnapping of Glass and the son of the Lebanese defense minister (who was soon released) on June 17.

The reported "coffin flight" of two other American hostages, said to have been anesthetized, wrapped in white shrouds, hidden in coffins and flown to Teheran, may also have resulted from that early-June trip. American intelligence officials say they have no evidence one way or the other.

But there have been persistent rumors that the two Americans, reported to be chief Associated Press Mideast correspondent Terry A. Anderson and American University dean of agriculture Thomas M. Sutherland, will be put on trial in Teheran.

That would show the far reach of Rafsanjani, a key contender for post-Khomeini power. Rafsanjani was hurt by premature disclosure of the U.S. arms sale last November. If the two American hostages are put on trial by a revolutionary court in Teheran at his instigation, Rafsanjani's stock would unquestionably rise. The Khomeini regime may also believe that since its dealings with Oliver North's cabal of underground U.S. operatives actually produced arms for hostages, the threat of trial might yield new dividends from the Reagan administration.

Cool Capitol Hill heads knock the props out of this argument. The sensational disclosures of the Iran-contra hearings, together with the intensifying naval warfare by Iran in the Persian Gulf, have reversed the gradual drift in Congress away from the anti-Iranian passions that followed the 1979-1981 U.S. embassy hostage crisis.

Revelation that the Americans victimized by kidnapping in Lebanon have been individually selected by a secret Khomeini intelligence bureau in Teheran would add fuel to this reversal. Even the pro-Israel congressional bloc that objects to U.S.-Arab dealings might ask itself if Khomeini really deserves anything approaching strict neutrality from the U.S.

Spying On Constitution Protesters

'On this July 4th weekend, we must remember that free government depends upon the ability of all citizens to speak their minds without fear of official sanction.'

never prove a link between the dissidents and foreign agents — because there was none.

One might justify domestic surveillance that is directly related to foreign intelligence purposes. (The courts have been less than explicit. They have upheld the right of police departments to infiltrate groups to collect intelligence provided that such information is not improperly distributed to harm free speech.) But the organizations the Philadelphia police department apparently spied on, such as the Unitarians and CISPES, are as much a threat to the city of brotherly love as the Sandinista navy, which is nonexistent.

The people of Philadelphia and elsewhere need to know why such a police unit was really formed. Who suggested the idea? Was it the business community which is sponsoring the bicentennial activities here? And what evidence, if any, did the police or others have that there might be terrorist threats during the celebration surrounding the bicentennial of the Constitution? Or was the celebration simply an excuse to spy on different groups in Philadelphia?

There is no question that the spying by the Philadelphia police department has adversely affected the constitutional rights of a particular group of Americans. (There is evidence peace demonstrators were deliberately prevented from demonstrating against Vice President Bush during a Memorial Day observance here.) But the harm also extends far beyond the citizens directly affected.

Personal privacy is protected because it is essential to liberty and the pursuit of happiness. Our Constitution checks the power of government for the purpose of protecting the rights of individuals, in order that all of our citizens may live in a free and decent society. Unlike the rules of totalitarian states, we do not believe that any government has a monopoly on truth.

When government infringes those rights instead of nurturing them, the injury spreads far beyond peace groups in Philadelphia to untold numbers of other Americans who may be intimidated at a future date.

On this July 4th weekend, we must remember that free government depends upon the ability of all citizens to speak their minds without fear of official sanction. To be heard by their leaders, people must be free to join in groups organized around shared grievances. Constitutional safeguards are needed to protect the weak as well as the courageous. While many citizens in Philadelphia and elsewhere have been willing in the past to assert their beliefs at the risk of government reprisals, no citizen should have to weigh his or her right of expression against such a risk.

Under a system of police surveillance there is a risk that the persons most intimidated may not be those at the extremes of the political spectrum, but rather those nearer the middle. Yet in voices of moderation lies the balance of political debate in America.

Whether it be the CIA, the FBI or local police intelligence units, the U.S. intelligence community is still driven by cold-war zealotry.

Strength For Today

Suppose one went to an orchestra concert and found the stage filled with nothing but drums or trumpets? No matter how fine the quality of any instrument, beautiful orchestra music largely depends upon the variety of the instruments which produce the tones.

We see the same principle sometimes reflected in religion. For some people religion is all a matter of drums. They must beat these drums to call humanity to some crusade against evil. There are others for whom religion is largely a matter of horns and trumpets — eloquent sermons and theological disquisitions. Still others find their religion in the otherworldly reveries symbolized by stringed instruments.

There is a place in all true religion for the drums, trumpets and strings. It takes all of these to make a full, well-rounded religious experience.

Democratic School Bill Moving On Fast Track

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — A Democratic plan for school construction financing based on a billion-dollar tax increase and elimination of the inventory tax has cleared a legislative committee and is on a fast track toward enactment.

The House was scheduled to take the first of two votes today on the complex package, which Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan said would generate up to $3.2 billion to build and upgrade school facilities including $830 million in new revenue.

With virtually the entire legislative leadership backing the plan, it likely will be enacted within a week. It was unveiled Thursday and given quick approval by the Finance Committee.

Craig Phillips, state superintendent of public instruction, gave the plan a ringing endorsement.

He said the plan "indicates a true commitment to putting every child and teacher in North Carolina in the right kind of building and will solve the most critical building needs first."

The package "doesn't go as far as I would like for it to go, it goes as far as we can let it go within the present income that we have," House Speaker Liston Ramsey said at a news conference with Jordan and other Democratic leaders.

The program would raise the corporate income tax from 6 percent to 7 percent, eliminate the 3 percent discount that merchants have been granted for collecting sales taxes, and eliminate the property tax on business inventories.

It is the latest of at least half a dozen proposals for financing school construction put forward this year. The plan was hammered out during several weeks of private negotiations between Jordan, Ramsey and their key lieutenants.

The plan ignores the school financing mechanism pushed for months by Republican Gov. Jim Martin: a $1.5 billion bond issue to create a pool of money from which local governments could borrow at low interest.

Martin, who was shut out of the negotiations of the past several weeks that produced the Democratic package, said at his weekly news conference Thursday he would decide whether to endorse or oppose it after studying it further.

"The people are willing to support a tax increase if that's what it takes to build schools," Martin said. "I've put forward a proposal that will build far more schools and do it with the taxes that are already earmarked for schools, and therefore would not require an additional tax increase."

Jordan, whose decision last month to abandon his support of a bond issue led to a bitter public exchange with Martin, said the governor had misread the program if he believed it was inadequate.

Responding to Martin's complaint that a tax increase was not needed, Jordan said, "The business community is happy. I don't know what it's going to take to make the governor happy."

The Democratic program represents a shift in a decades-old policy under which state government has assumed responsibility for funding the operations of public schools while leaving it to local governments to provide the facilities.

"The counties simply cannot financially handle the great responsibility that we have to bring to our people the schools that they need," Rep. Dan Lilley, D-Lenoir, said during the Finance Committee meeting.

The bill would pay for school construction by establishing two trust funds. Money from one fund would be allocated to county governments on the basis of their public school student population. Counties would have to supplement each $3 of state money with $1 of their own.

The second fund would be a "Critical Needs Fund" from which the State Board of Education would make direct grants to counties on the basis of need. It is designed to help poorer counties that would have difficulty matching state funds.

The bill would raise school construction revenue by:

- Raising the corporate income tax from 6 percent to 7 percent, effective this year. This would raise $95 million in fiscal 1987-88 and $1.3 billion over 10 years.
- Eliminating a 3 percent discount on sales tax payments that merchants have been granted, raising $35.3 million in 1987-88 and $607.2 million over a decade.

- Requiring that businesses pay the personal income taxes withheld from their employees' paychecks on a monthly, instead of a quarterly, basis for every $500 withheld. Current law requires monthly payments for every $3,000 withheld.

The change would create a one-time windfall of $55 million in 1987-88, when the amount of school revenue generated by new taxes would total $190.9 million.

- Requiring that counties earmark at least 60 percent of the revenue from a half-cent sales tax authorized in 1986 for school construction. A 1983 law authorizing another half-cent tax increase also required partial earmarking for school construction.

The bill also would establish a 10-member commission to conduct a detailed study of the school construction needs in each county. The panel's findings would be used in distributing revenue in the critical needs fund.

The inventory tax is a local property tax mandated by the state. Under the bill, the tax would be eliminated in fiscal 1988-89 and state government would reimburse counties for lost revenue.

Tank Drop At Fort Bragg Aborted As Chute Snarls

By JODY TAYLOR
Associated Press Writer
FORT BRAGG, N.C. (AP) — As flags flew at half-staff to honor five servicemen killed in a military exercise, crewmen unsuccessfully tried the same maneuver one day later, but without the tragic results.

"Our business does not allow us to stand still," said Capt. Brian Irving, a spokesman for Pope Air Force Base. "We recognize that we have to go on."

The same maneuver — using a parachute to drop a tank from a low-flying C-130 cargo — that ended with Wednesday's crash before 4,000 spectators was attempted again Thursday as part of a demonstration, but the tank drop was aborted when a parachute failed to open.

The airplanes successfully dropped about 600 paratroopers and dropped lighter equipment, but not a Sheridan tank.

Air Force officials said a parachute that is supposed to pull the tank from the open rear door of a C-130 cargo plane was cut loose after it failed to open. The cargo plane roared past 4,000 fatigue-clad college ROTC cadets in bleachers without dropping the tank.

In the Wednesday accident, the Lockheed C-130 Hercules plane passed within feet of the bleachers before it skidded off a dirt landing strip and into the pine trees, exploding into an orange ball of flames.

The accident occurred as the plane was dropping a 17-ton M-551 Sheridan armored reconnaissance vehicle in a LAPES, low-altitude parachute extraction system, during the annual display of Army and Air Force airborne capability.

Four of six Air Force crewmen on the plane Wednesday were killed, as well as a soldier on the ground, Irving said.

On Thursday, five Air Force officers from around the nation began arriving at Pope Air Force Base to investigate the crash. Officials said names of the members of the investigation board would not be released until their leader arrived.

Air Force officials said the flight recorder of conversations between the crew and control tower, commonly known as the "black box," was found in the debris on Sicily Drop Zone where the crash occurred.

Master Sgt. R.C. Barnes of the public affairs office at Pope Air Force Base identified the dead as Capt. Garry M. Bardo Jr., 31, the pilot, born in Bloomsburg, Pa.; 1st Lt. John B. Keiser III, 28, the navigator, born at Plattsburg Air Force Base near Clinton, N.Y.; Technical Sgt. Timothy A. Matar, 32, loadmaster, born in Mansura, La.; and Airman 1st Class Albert G. Dunse, 23, born in Savannah, Ga., additional loadmaster.

The airmen were assigned to 40th Tactical Airlift Squadron, 317th Tactical Airlift Wing, at Pope Air Force Base.

The soldier killed on the ground was identified Thursday as SSgt. Douglas L. Hunter, 25, of Charlotte, Tenn. He was assigned to the 3rd Battalion, 73rd Armor Regiment at Fort Bragg.

"Hunter was not part of the LAPES team," said Carol Jones of the public affairs office at Fort Bragg. "He was just watching."

Those injured were 1st Lt. Marc A. Lenke, co-pilot, and Sgt. Tony T. Holmes, flight engineer.

Lenke, 26, and Holmes, 28, had burns on 20 percent to 50 percent of their bodies and were in the intensive care unit at Brooke Army Medical Center at Fort Sam Houston, Texas, where they were listed in critical condition.

Morality Is Issue In AIDS Bill

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — A Senate committee unanimously agreed the state Board of Education should encourage abstinence and responsible sexual behavior when teaching about AIDS, but the House sponsor continued to lobby for moral instruction.

Rep. F.J. "Trip" Sizemore, R-Guilford, said the board should be required to tell public school children about the value of marriage and fidelity as well as the dangers of illicit sex. He said without legislative guidelines, educators may encourage safe sex instead of discouraging sex.

"They've got one (program) in mind that emphasizes distribution and use of condoms," he said. "To adopt this (bill) in the face of this epidemic is, to me, not responsible."

The Education Committee Thursday rejected attempts to require that information about acquired immune deficiency syndrome be taught in a moral context after some members said that provision was intended to back a political platform.

"We don't want to let this be the sort of Trojan horse to bring in other agendas," said Sen. Tom Taft, D-Pitt.

As the bill was approved, "there would be no strong statement from the Legislature that abstinence is the only means of preventing AIDS from being contracted by children," Sizemore said. He also argued that local school boards and parents should have a greater role.

Sen. Charles Hipps, D-Haywood, countered, "We're teaching the truth and the truth ought to be uniform throughout the 100 counties."

Sen. Dan Simpson, R-Burke, who had supported the bill as it passed the House, grudgingly agreed to the compromise.

"You don't always get everything you want in the Legislature," he said. "This gives the state board some of the policy directions."

Much of the debate centered around whether the committee, under Senate rules, could take action on a provision it had killed earlier.

Sen. Jim Richardson, D-Mecklenburg, who had opposed the House version, also agreed to the compromise without enthusiasm.

"If we go any further, the next thing we'll have is the Legislature selecting books in schools," he said.

Eight UNC Board Posts Are Filled

RALEIGH (AP) — Paper ballots replaced secret ballots as the state House and Senate voted to fill eight of the University of North Carolina Board of Governors 32 seats.

Ballots were passed out and marked in both bodies Thursday in answer to an opinion issued recently by the state Attorney General's Office, which ruled that secret ballot elections for Board of Governor seats were unconstitutional.

Former Gov. Jim Holshouser, who was nominated to fill a Republican seat, was among four candidates elected from the Senate. At-large seats went to Robert Jones, a Raleigh developer, former Sen. Joe Thomas of Craven County, and Durham lawyer Travis Porter.

Former Rep. Charles Evans of Nags Head and Gus Tullios of Rocky Mount were elected to at-large seats on the board by the House. Betty McCain of Wilson was elected to a woman's seat, and Joy Johnson was elected to the minority seat.

On Wednesday, a House committee voted on nominees for the Board of Governors, and then discarded the results in confusion over procedures.

Some committee members had hoped to take the top two choices to the full House for a final vote, but the panel agreed to send out the names of all candidates without prejudice after there was a tie.

Zoo Stamp

ASHEBORO, N.C. (AP) — The U.S. Postal Service will put its stamp of support — and a special cancellation that reads North Carolina Zoological Park Station — on letters mailed at a mobile post office at the park today through Sunday.

Zoogoers also will be able to buy a set of 50 stamps commemorating wildlife of North America. A special cancellation was available at the zoo during the grand opening of North America in 1980.

Doctors, Judges Oppose Abortion Bill

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Mounting opposition from doctors and judges were cited as lawmakers created a subcommittee to study a bill to require parental consent for a minor's abortion unless the courts intervene.

Sen. Lura Tally, D-Cumberland, said she had received many calls from District Court judges worried about the added burden the bill would give them.

In addition, a letter was distributed to members of the Senate Judiciary I Committee in which Charles Brown of the North Carolina Medical Society said the bill could result in more illegal abortions, more births among poor teen-agers and even suicides among girls too frightened to go through a judicial review.

"The ones who don't talk to their parents are usually children from stressed or unstable families, girls in physically abusive situations or victims of familial rape," Brown said.

"The additional anxiety and delay a parental-judicial involvement statute would cause means more minors seeking mid-trimester abortions, with the increased risks of complications which later abortions entail," Brown said.

But Rep. Richard Wright, D-Columbus, sponsor of the bill, said it is already state policy to require parental consent for a minor's abortion. He said his bill would simply make the requirement conform with a U.S. Supreme Court ruling that minors must have an avenue in the courts to circumvent parental approval.

Wright said the next change in the Supreme Court's membership could result in a ruling that judicial review is not required. He said "liberals" who oppose his bill would then find the situation even worse.

"Minors cannot drive a car, they can't buy land. They don't have any legal rights," Wright said. "They can't even have a wound repaired without parental consent. This would be completely consistent."

Wright discounted the argument, saying, "There is not days and days of testimony. There is a very simple petition... I can envision a one-page form where she checks A, B or C for her petition."

"When there are these terrible situations, I think the best person to know about it is the district court judge that handles juvenile cases," Wright added.

But Brown, in the medical society letter, said the few teen-agers who don't already confide in their parents would seek out-of-state abortions.

"Teen-age girls who go out of state to avoid the law probably would not get the medical follow-up care standard after an abortion procedure," he wrote.

Brown said those too poor to go elsewhere might have babies with a higher-than-average risk of health problems, or might try to self-induce abortions. Some might even try suicide, he said.

Sen. Bill Martin, D-Guilford, proposed a subcommittee, saying he was concerned about the father's rights in deciding on an abortion. Martin said he also hoped to improve the chances that unwanted children would receive proper care.

Burn Verdict

WHITEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A Columbus County woman who doused her husband with a pot of scalding grease after a 1985 argument has been sentenced to 10 years in prison — the maximum punishment allowed for the offense.

Mary Jean Soles Watts received the sentence from Superior Court Judge Henry Hight Jr. shortly after a jury convicted her Thursday of assault with a deadly weapon inflicting serious injury.

Mrs. Watts burned her husband with the grease Dec. 15, 1985, at the couple's home in Crusoe. The attack destroyed an eardrum and left scars covering about 30 percent of his body.

Soles testified that the attack was unprovoked and came while he lay in bed, asleep.

Mrs. Watts said she slung the grease at Soles in self-defense after he approached her with a hammer. The scalding followed an evening of physical abuse and death threats, she said.

enue passenger miles increased 3.6 percent, while available seat miles rose 4.5 percent. Piedmont's load factor for the month was 61.6 percent, about half a percentage point lower than June 1986.

Director

DURHAM (AP) — Dr. Robert C. Bast Jr. has been named director of the Duke Comprehensive Cancer Center to succeed Dr. William W. Shingleton, who is retiring this year.

Bast, 43, is a Duke professor of hematology and medical oncology. His appointment was effective July 1, Duke University Medical Center officials announced Thursday.

Robert H. Bell, James B. Duke Professor of biochemistry, has been named deputy director of the cancer center, also effective July 1.

Lobby Run By Solon's Wife Probed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional investigators say a lobbying group managed by Landis Neal, the wife of North Carolina Rep. Steve Neal, has scared old people into giving it millions of dollars, but Mrs. Neal says most of the complaints are old and have been corrected.

"There is no question that this organization has had growing pains and made mistakes," Mrs. Neal said. "This is not the case now."

Congressmen and their staff members charge that the National Committee to Preserve Social Security and Medicare has diverted $9 of every $10 that it has raised to build its direct-mail financial base.

The investigators contended the group was formed primarily to profit a California direct-mail operation and has tailored its mailings to resemble government correspondence to dupe contributors into thinking that the Social Security Administration was asking them for help.

Mrs. Neal, who joined the committee as a press liaison in July 1985 and was promoted to the top staff job in September 1986, defended the group's motives and its practices. She told the Winston-Salem Journal that a professional lobbying staff has implemented safeguards on fund-raising practices.

Neal, D-N.C., said that his wife's work with the committee poses no ethical problems, for him or for her.

He said that she was made executive director to reform the group, and he defended the group's goal of promoting the interests of old people.

But Neal said that he objects to the way some of the committee's appeals are worded, and he emphasized that he has no ties to the group, other than through his wife.

"Some of the earlier mail they sent out was very alarmist," Neal said, "and some on a continuing basis is very alarmist. I hear from Landis she is still arguing with the direct-mail people. That is an area that people have continuing complaints about."

He disputed the allegation that the committee has bilked old people. "I just don't understand the basis for that at all," Neal said. "Nobody has to pay if they don't want to pay."

"If she or I thought for a moment that she was working for an organization that is hurting people, she would not stay there," he said.

"I'm concerned about anything that would reflect poorly on Steve," she said. "I can assure you there is no truth to the allegations."

The House Ways and Means Subcommittee on Social Security said the lobbying group was organized by Butcher Forde Consulting, a direct-mail company based in California. Mrs. Neal said that the committee was the idea of James Roosevelt, the 80-year-old son of President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

The House report said that Roosevelt was a paid consultant for Butcher Forde in 1982 and 1983, then was made chairman of the committee.

The report said the committee's direct-mail appeals for money rose from 13 out of 17 total mailings in 1985 to 22 out of 28 in 1986.

Mrs. Neal said that there were 40 mailings in 1986, and 18 asked for money. She said that even fewer mailings will ask for money in 1987. The average contribution to the group, she said, is about $10.

Mailings from the committee have gone out in envelopes marked "URGENT! Important Social Security and Medicare information enclosed" in large letters.

Mrs. Neal said the committee has used a disclaimer for three years saying it is not affiliated with the government. But the Journal reported it did not stop using a facsimile of the Great Seal of the United States until the Justice Department requested it and changed the wording on its envelopes at the request of the U.S. Postal Service.

She said the committee now offers refunds on contributions, good for up to a year, to make sure no one thinks they are being tricked into giving money.

She said an audit of the group's finances, using standard accounting practices, found the committee puts 15 percent of its income into fund-raising, 25 percent into educational activities, 20 percent into administration and 38 percent into legislative activities.

But House investigators said the group's tax records show that 88 percent of its income in 1986 was channeled into direct mail.

Jailer Suspended

ASHEVILLE (AP) — A Buncombe County jailer has been suspended after being charged with assaulting an 18-year-old Asheville woman at a grocery store, authorities say.

Annette Young Childs, 30, was suspended with pay Thursday from the Buncombe County Sheriff's Department, shortly after she was charged with assaulting Kelli Johnson, said Kathy Gudgeon of the department's internal affairs division.

"I had never seen the woman before in my life and now I can hardly move my neck and I have scratches on my face," Ms. Johnson said. "She got mad because I got a parking space she apparently was waiting on, but I didn't see her name on it."

Conviction

LEXINGTON, N.C. (AP) — A Davidson County man was convicted of second-degree murder and sentenced to 15 years in prison, although his brother confessed to the killing.

Carl L. Baker, 25, of the Midway community was found guilty Thursday of the shotgun killing Jan. 6 of George M. Mayes, 33, also of Midway.

The shooting occurred after Mayes and his roommate, Michael Evans, had gone joy riding, stopping Mayes' truck in front of the trailer where Baker lived with his brother and parents, authorities said.

During the trial, Wade L. Baker, Carl's brother, said the commotion brought them outside, and a fight ensued. Mayes was killed by a single shotgun blast in his chest. He was found in the driver's seat of the truck.

Prison Lawsuit

ASHEVILLE (AP) — A South Carolina inmate has filed a $250 million federal civil rights lawsuit against Henderson County Sheriff A.B. Jackson and other officials.

Jerry Edwin Davis, 39, alleges he was subjected to inhumane treatment while incarcerated at the Henderson County Jail last year.

Filed at U.S. District Court in Asheville, the suit contends that Jackson placed prisoners in a "run-down jail" that lacked proper space, fire protection, ventilation, recreation, food, heating and lighting. Instead of repairing the jail, the suit contends, Jackson spent most of his department's money for "high-price patrol cars."

Vandalism

RALEIGH (AP) — Vandalism broke glass, smashed computers, destroyed oil paintings and ripped upholstery at Broughton High School early Thursday, causing more than $30,000 in damage, authorities said.

"There's a personal sense of loss when something happens to the place you work in," said assistant principal Elvia Walker. "This is home for a lot of teachers."

Raleigh police, who said the vandals apparently entered the school's administrative offices through a window that faces a courtyard, had few leads Thursday afternoon.

"It could have been a grievance, just as it could have been a kid out for a wild night," said Sgt. C.E. Lewis.

Boardings

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Piedmont Airlines carried 2,106,524 passengers in June, setting a new boarding record for the month and a 4.4 percent increase over June 1986, company officials say.

Piedmont board more than 12.3 million passengers for the first six months of 1987, a 15.5 percent increase over the same period in 1986.

The company said it also set records in June for revenue passenger miles and available seat miles. Rev-

Stark's Survivors Greeted By Families

MAYPORT NAVAL STATION, Fla. (AP) — Seven weeks of worry ended in screams of joy as 44 sailors from the USS Stark were reunited with their wives, children and friends, marking the end of a voyage in which 37 fellow seamen were killed.

"As soon as we touched down, (and) heard the brakes go on, everybody let out a yell," Dave Nadeau, 22, said shortly after the C-141 transport plane landed Thursday at Mayport, the Stark's home port.

Many of the sailors, dressed in civilian clothes, rushed into the arms of loved ones they had not seen in the five months since they sailed for the Persian Gulf, where their frigate was struck by two Iraqi missiles May 17.

They made up the largest group of Stark crewmen to return home since the attack. They were not needed to sail the Stark back to the United States, and will be on leave until the ship returns in August.

After a 17-hour flight home, the sailors said they were ready for rest and relaxation.

"I couldn't sleep because I was so excited to see my wife and little girl," said Petty Officer Charles Fife.

Nadeau said he wanted to give his wife "the honeymoon she didn't get." Darrel Dickson said he wanted to take a shower and then get reacquainted with his family.

"We've got a lot of catching up to do. Right now, I just want to relax and enjoy myself," he said.

Rear Adm. Michael P. Kalleres, commander of Cruiser Destroyer Group 12, boarded the aircraft and talked with the sailors before they climbed from the airplane. "I'm proud of every one of them," Kalleres said.

"It's like having my own children back after I lost them for awhile," said Kalleres, who heads the Stark's parent command.

About 50 family members met the crewmen as they arrived from Bahrain. The relatives included a pregnant woman in the early stages of labor who left a hospital to greet her husband, Kalleres said.

Accompanying the woman, who was unidentified, was a little girl carrying a sign that read "Daddy, I wuv you."

The woman was rushed back to Memorial Medical Center about 40 minutes after the plane landed. Officials at the hospital would not identify the woman.

Formal welcoming ceremonies will be delayed until the Stark, which sailed out of Mayport in early February.

Marine Corps Charges Guard

WASHINGTON (AP) — Another Marine who once was a security guard at the U.S. Embassy in Moscow is facing charges, this time for allegedly failing to report contacts with Soviets, copying classified documents and dealing on the black market.

Kenneth J. Kelliher, 32, of Hinsdale, Ill., was not charged with espionage, the Pentagon said Thursday.

But he faces a hearing Monday at the Marine Security Guard Battalion at Quantico, Va., to review the charges against him stemming from his tour of duty at the U.S. embassies in Moscow and Bern, Switzerland, the Pentagon said.

The investigation against Kelliher continues, it said, and he is "not confined or on restriction."

While Kelliher is not technically under arrest, said Marine spokeswoman Maj. Kathy Robbes, the hearing against him is the military equivalent of a grand jury and could lead to a court-martial.

Balloonists Beat Time Schedule

LONDON (AP) — Two adventurers trying to make the first Atlantic crossing by hot air balloon soared across the northwest coast of Ireland at 86 mph toward an earlier than expected landing in Britain today.

"They are comfortable and everything is going extremely smoothly," Fiona Miller, a press officer at the London control center, said today of balloonists Per Lindstrand and Richard Branson. Branson is chairman of Virgin Atlantic Airways and head of a British entertainment conglomerate.

Robin Batchelor, a balloonist who taught Branson to fly, said: "Their main enemies on landing will be power wires, main roads and built-up areas."

The balloonists stayed awake all night, drinking plenty of liquid and eating high fiber food, he said.

"They have a monumental workload, but they both sound lively and alert," he said.

Lindstrand and Branson lifted off in the 21-story-high Virgin Atlantic Flyer from Sugarloaf Mountain in Maine at 4:10 a.m. Thursday local time and attained speeds of up to 140 mph.

They crossed the Irish coast at 6:55 a.m. EDT and were expected to land in central England this evening, the control center said, predicting a total flight time of 34 hours or less.

The Swedish-born Lindstrand said in a radio message to London's Post Office Tower, where the control center is located: "Never in my wildest dreams did I imagine completing the crossing in (under) two days."

They had anticipated the flight ending Saturday or Sunday.

Branson's parents waved at their son this morning from a Virgin

Atlantic jumbo jet that got special permission to leave its cross-Atlantic, eastward flightpath and circle the balloon, the center said.

Branson told the jet's 400 passengers over its public address system, "Thanks for coming over. It was lovely to see you. What can I say except, 'See you in England.'"

In a telephone linkup with the British Broadcasting Corp., Branson expressed concern about the landing, calling it "perhaps the most difficult part of the trip."

Earlier today, Mrs. Miller said the balloonists had abandoned plans to descend from 27,000 feet to 24,000 feet to pick up faster winds because of fears this would sweep the craft further to the north, with the chance of missing Britain.

The two men reported earlier that temperatures at that altitude were about 40 below zero.

In a message received at the control center Thursday night, Branson expressed concern about fuel. The balloon was carrying 4½ tons of propane gas before lift-off but lost three-quarters of a ton as the balloon left the ground when a ground line snagged two tanks.

Branson reported in the message Thursday night: "We are crossing our fingers. Our trajectory is hopefully for the United Kingdom. I don't think we will have enough fuel to get further. We are confident at this stage. Morale couldn't be better, but if we knew we had enough fuel to get there we would be ecstatic."

Those fears appeared to have disappeared today because of the balloon's swift progress. Mrs. Miller said it had kept up an average speed of 100 mph, far faster than expected. The men had reported peak speeds of up to 140 mph.

Branson, 36, and Lindstrand, 38, who lives in Britain, covered the first 1,000 miles of their 3,400-mile journey in slightly more than 10 hours.

Lawyer Says LaRouche Will Return To Face Indictment

WASHINGTON (AP) — Presidential candidate and extremist Lyndon H. LaRouche, who once vowed "I will not submit passively" to arrest, faces extradition from West Germany if he does not turn himself over to authorities next week, federal prosecutors say.

LaRouche, 64, the four-time fringe presidential candidate whose bizarre politics enraged the Democratic Party regulars with whom he tried to associate, was indicted Thursday on a charge of conspiracy to obstruct a federal grand jury.

He is accused of conspiring to block an investigation into an alleged $1 million credit card scheme by his followers as part of his 1984 presidential campaign.

LaRouche left the country shortly before the grand jury in Boston handed up the indictment. He had returned only days before from seven months in Europe to testify before the grand jury.

Assistant U.S. Attorney John Markham said in court papers filed with the indictment that LaRouche was in West Germany and that his attorney had offered assurances he would surrender voluntarily in time for an arraignment next Wednesday.

Dana Scanlon, LaRouche's spokeswoman, said in a news conference Thursday across the street from the White House that LaRouche "absolutely" would return.

"Soon — that's all I can say," she added. "We intend to go full steam ahead with the LaRouche presidential campaign. We will not fold."

Ms. Scanlon quoted LaRouche as calling the case a "malicious and fraudulent concoction," triggered by "a faction inside the Reagan Department of Justice (that) has rushed to the aid of Moscow once again."

The indictment accuses LaRouche of participating in a conspiracy by ordering followers to flee the country, shredding documents, stalling federal agents with false statements, discussing ways to "fix" the grand jury and plotting a "vicious personal attack" on a federal prosecutor.

Schools Still See Bickering

of debate for decades.

Beginning in the early 1960s, members of the Pitt County Board of Commissioners backed consolidation of the two local school systems. At first, the county school system wanted to merge with the city school system, and the city would not agree to the consolidation. Then the city wanted to merge with the county.

Serious plans for the merger began with a 1983 Research Triangle Institute feasibility study recommending the consolidation. Problems cited in the $41,000 study, which was funded by the county, included a declining enrollment and a lopsided black-white student population in the Greenville schools, as well as overcrowding and outdated facilities in the county schools. Also mentioned was optimum use of present school facilities and a consistent school system organizational pattern based upon sound educational principles.

With assistance from the commissioners, the two systems agreed to merge. A consolidation committee was formed, composed of four members of the city board and eight members of the county board. The board met once a month to adopt a set of operating procedures and set a schedule of tasks necessary to the consolidation.

A major task of this committee was to create legislation to be presented to the General Assembly for the creation of one school system in Pitt County. The initial legislation was approved by the N.C. Legislature, but objections were voiced by the Pitt County Concerned Citizens for Justice, a local civil rights group, about the lack of minority representation on the consolidated school board. Three blacks were then appointed to the board by the General Assembly.

A change in the method of election was ruled discriminatory by the Justice Department, holding up the merger date. After legal maneuvering, an agreement between the two school groups and the CCJ was reached, specifying one of two election methods to provide equity on the consolidated board.

When the Justice Department approved the merger in July, Blinson said, "The fundamental issue is the commitment of the community to have one of the best school systems in the state. Merger allows for it. The merger eliminates the bickering that caused the problems in the first place; it removes an impediment."

But the bickering continued throughout each of the stages necessary to complete the merger of the two systems. Two major causes of conflict were the implementation of an election plan in new election districts and the reassignment of students under new attendance lines.

According to the merger agreement, the board had to choose one of two plans for the election of board members: electing the board totally by single-member districts or by a combination of district and at large seats. There were no restrictions as to the number of districts, the size of the board or the length of terms; however, there were the legal restrictions of the Voting Rights Act, which calls for equal black representation, and the one person-one vote, which calls for districts equal in population.

Four election plans — for six districts, 11 districts, 14 districts and 15 districts — were discussed by the board in early December and at a public hearing in early January. The plans were devised by the East Carolina University's Regional Development Institute with the assistance of board attorney Mike Crowell.

Overwhelming support for a six-district election plan was voiced at the public hearing. Speakers stated that six districts would provide better representation for black voters.

In late January, the board unanimously approved an election plan consisting of six districts with two members elected from each district. The plan calls for the two seats in each district to be labeled "Seat A" and "Seat B;" in the first election on Nov. 3, 1987, the person from Seat A would be elected to serve until 1992 and the person elected from Seat B would serve until 1990. Their successors and all future board members would be elected for six-year terms.

With the matter of elections solved, the administrative staff turned its attention to redrawing attendance lines. The proposed changes were necessary to relieve overcrowding in certain schools.

When a public hearing was held in early January, the citizens opposed the attendance line changes. Several persons said the proposed attendance line changes did not address the five major needs cited in the RTI study that led to the merger of the two school systems, especially racial imbalances.

New proposals, based on feedback at the public hearing and aimed at balancing the black-white student ratios in the schools, were presented to the board in early February. The board tabled a decision on two proposals for redrawing attendance lines following objections from community spokesmen at the board meeting and established new criteria which should be followed while redrawing new short-term and long-term plans.

When the plans were completed in late February, another public hearing was held. During the heated debate, the board was bombarded with requests from residents of the D.H. Conley attendance area (Winterville schools) to establish a "grandfather clause" so that entire families may continue attending school in the district they currently attend; county speakers said the clause had been promised to them during the original merger agreement. Greenville residents, concerned with racial balance and with the alleviation of the inner-city nature of the city schools, spoke against the clause, which would undermine the racial balance corrected by the new proposals.

In early March, the board approved an attendance line plan including an "unlimited" grandfather clause, allowing all children in a family (including yet unborn children) the opportunity to attend the schools they are currently attending. The vote of 8 to 7 split the board members according to their area of representation; county board members voted for the plan, while city representatives and the three minority board members voted against it.

The board, in mid-May, changed the grandfather policy to alleviate imbalances the policy caused in the racial make-up of several Greenville schools. The board, by a vote of 7 to 6, revised the policy to extend only to students in grades nine through 12 in the 1988-1989 school year. In the four subsequent years, only students in high school will be allowed to continue attending the same school, according to the new policy.

In addition to moving students to new schools, teachers were also moved. The grade levels contained at several of the schools were changed in order to balance the student population and better utilize the school facilities. Teachers also had to be transferred to the new elementary school.

At the June board meeting, the propriety of the board's revision of the grandfather policy was questioned. However, no challenge was made at that time.

A $15.1 million budget for Pitt County schools for the 1987-1988 fiscal year was approved despite opposition from board members representing the Greenville area. Those opposing the budget felt that the capital outlay needs of the city schools were not being met by the budget.

The board's Affirmative Action policy was debated when black board members questioned the hiring of minorities to fill certificated positions in the school system.

In addition to making these major decisions, the board was responsible for making policy for the 30 schools in the system and for the new elementary school which will open this fall. Blacks became upset when the board discussed naming the school for former Superintendent Ott Alford. The school has yet to be named.

Boxcar Yields 18 Bodies

the spike into the floorboard, but that it was much too late for the rest of them. "We all took turns, but as the water ran out, the others lost strength," he said.

"With the darkness inside, I couldn't tell about the others," he said. "I thought some of them would be alive, but when the doors were opened, they were all dead."

Two of the dead apparently were part of a smuggling ring and were guiding the others to the Dallas-Fort Worth area for $400 to $500 per person, said Hudspeth County Sheriff Dick Love.

"We do know someone had to close the door and lock it, and we know it had to be a smuggler," said Michael G. Wheat, an attorney for the Border Patrol's El Paso sector.

The boxcar was of a type "that once the door is closed, it automatically locks. You cannot open it from the inside. Whoever closed that door knew that," said Border Patrol agent M.S. Dudley.

Some of the men had been dead for several hours when the gruesome discovery was made at 7:20 a.m., six miles east of this town of 700 people, said Wheat. Tostado told investigators others were breathing up to an hour or two before, the attorney said.

"As the heat grew in the boxcar, they began to shed clothing; some went into convulsions and bled. It was very messy ... and most don't have identification," Wheat said.

He said authorities are working with the Mexican consulate and other agencies to identify the victims.

Saathoff said he decided to inspect the boxcar after noticing one of the doors lacked a seal.

In addition to inspecting boxcars in Sierra Blanca, Border Patrol agents conduct similar checks at the El Paso yards, but the boxcar slipped through because the seal was intact on the side seen by agents, Wheat said.

"I could hear Miguel's pleas for help: 'Please help us. We need help,'" Saathoff said. "I opened the door and saw Miguel standing at the end of the door — he was very wet, in his underwear, crying some, visibly shook."

"There's blood on the floor," said Assistant Chief Patrol Agent William Harrington. "Some of their tongues are chewed. It's a gruesome sight."

The men were lured north from their Mexican homes by the promise of a better life in the United States, despite the new immigration law making it illegal to hire undocumented workers, Saathoff said.

"There's nothing there, where they're from," he said.

Tostado is from the city of Povelon Artega in central Mexico. Six of the dead were also from Aguascalientes state, and six others were from the neighboring state of Zacatecas, said Beatrice Lopez Gargallo of the Mexican consulate in El Paso.

Driver Charged In Chain Wreck

Elvira Johnson of Vanceboro has been charged with failing to reduce speed in order to avoid an accident in connection with an incident that occurred Thursday on N.C. 43 near Branch's Trailer Park, according to Trooper B.J. Jones of the Highway Patrol.

Jones said three cars were stopped in the southbound lane of the highway when a car driven by Ms. Johnson hit the last car and ran into a ditch. The car she hit, driven by Michael St. Angelo of Patchogue, N.Y., was knocked into the north lane, where it was hit by an oncoming tractor-trailer driven by Warren Harrison and owned by Heilig-Meyer, Jones said. St. Angelo was trapped in the car for some time, but suffered only broken bones, he said. His wife, May, was only slightly injured.

The tractor-trailer swerved into the parking lot of Hardman's Grocery and hit a parked car, knocking it into a parked pickup truck, Jones said. The driver of the car, Jimmy Allen of Greenville, was also hit by the tractor-trailer as he was trying to enter the car, but suffered only minor injuries, Jones said. He also said the car continued on to hit a house trailer.

The other two cars that were originally stopped on the road hit each other in trying to avoid the rest of the accident, according to Jones, doing only minor damage to each.

Jones said damage was probably in the thousands of dollars.

Reagan Demands Work 'Freedoms'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, renewing Thomas Jefferson's call for a "wise and frugal government," today proclaimed an "economic bill of rights" to protect Americans against excessive taxation and government spending.

Doffing his coat for the speech before the Jefferson Memorial, Reagan said Americans need greater protection in U.S. laws for "four essential economic freedoms" — the freedom to work, to enjoy the fruits of one's labor, to own and control property and to participate in a free market.

"The working people of this country need to know their jobs, take-home pay, homes and pensions are not vulnerable to the threat of a grandiose, inefficient and overbearing government, something Jefferson warned us about 200 years ago," he said.

Reagan reiterated his longstanding advocacy of a balanced budget amendment and budgetary line-item veto authority for presidents.

"What we begin today is not a maneuver or an attempt to achieve short-term goals with lofty pronouncements," he said. "Our proposals are consistent with what we've been doing, in fact they will help secure the progress we've made."

"Today, we begin a drive to protect economic freedom in the United States," he said. "... Perhaps a more specific delineation of economic freedom was always needed, but today it is imperative."

It's as inevitable as taxes, but don't ask your CPA about it.

The two inevitabilities. When it comes to questions about taxes most people don't hesitate to make plans and arrangements with their accountant. But when it comes to the other inevitability, it's amazing how few people make any arrangements at all.

And that's a mystery, considering the benefits to family and friends that funeral prearrangement offers. It makes things simple. It offers peace of mind. Reassurance to loved ones. And it takes very little time.

So if you're tax planning, ask your CPA or tax lawyer. The other inevitability? Ask us.

Candlelight Ceremony Performed On Saturday

RALEIGH — In a candlelight ceremony Saturday at 7 p.m. in the Edenton Street United Methodist Church, Angie Cheaves and Tony Hampton Whitley Jr. were married. The Rev. Vernon Tyson officiated at the double ring ceremony.

Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. Johnny Lee Cheaves Sr. of Henderson. The bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Tony Hampton Whitley Sr. of Plano, Texas. Mr. and Mrs. Scott Noonan of Roanoke, Va., presented a program of nuptial music.

Escorted by her father and given in marriage by her parents, the bride was attired in a bridal satin gown styled with a fitted bodice, Victorian neckline with an illusion yoke, long tapered sleeves with a basque waist. Re-embroidered alencon lace with clusters of seed pearls and sequins outlined the illusion yoke, encircled the collar and applied the bodice and sleeves. The floor length skirt extended into a cathedral train. A pyramid of re-embroidered alencon lace etched with pearls and sequins applied the front of the skirt with garlands of beaded alencon lace that applied the train. Scalloped alencon lace bordered the hemline of the skirt and train. She wore a waltz length mantilla of bridal illusion bordered with lace flowing from an alencon lace cap etched with seed pearls. She carried a Lady Di bouquet of white roses, stephanosis and ivy.

Maid of honor Leigh Ann Cheaves, sister of the bride of Henderson, wore a tea length gown of ivory lace over ivory satin. It featured a round neck, long sleeves, asymmetrical dropped waist with a gathered two tier skirt. She carried an arm bouquet of long-stemmed red roses with baby's breath and greenery tied with red ribbon. She wore a sprig of baby's breath in her hair.

Bridesmaids were Donna Caulder, Scarlett Daele of Henderson, Natalie

Harn of New Orleans and Kari Whitley, sister of the bridegroom of Plano, Tex., and Karmann Whitley, sister of the bridegroom of Dallas. Their gowns were similar to that of the honor attendant and they carried bouquets of long-stemmed red roses.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Groomsman were Norman Bullard of Chapel Hill, Wayne Bullard of Nashville, Tenn., Harold Smith Jr. of Raleigh, Charles Martin Jr. and Johnny Cheaves Jr., brother of the bride, both from Henderson.

Programs were given out by Tina Holloway and Karen Long, both of Raleigh. Laura Laws and Mary Mosher of Raleigh presided at the registrar.

Honorary bridesmaids were Sandy Blevias, Mary Susan Lanier and Melody Tart, all of Raleigh.

Flower girl Alicia Bartolo, cousin of the bride of Esterville, Iowa, wore a tea length gown of ivory satin featuring short puffed sleeves and ivory lace pinafore. She carried a hand crocheted basket holding long-stemmed red roses. Ring bearer was Zachary Thomas Brame, cousin of the bride of Bullock. He carried an ivory satin and lace pillow, made by the mother of the bride.

A reception was held at the Gooden House and was given by the bride's parents. Guests were greeted by Mr. and Mrs. Sylvester Bartolo, uncle and aunt of the bride.

Birdseed filled satin roses were passed out by Jodie Fisher of Henderson and Nikke Illingworth of Cary.

The couple will live in Raleigh after a wedding trip to Paradise Island, Bahamas.

The bride is a graduate of Vance Senior High School and N.C. State University, cum laude, and is a certified public accountant. She is now with Durham Life Insurance Co. in Raleigh as internal audit supervisor.

The bridegroom is a graduate of Northern Nash in Rocky Mount and was a member of Sigma Tau Gamma while attending East Carolina University. He is now employed with Electrical Wholesale Supply in Raleigh.

The parents of the bridegroom entertained at a rehearsal dinner Friday evening at the Cross Roads in Raleigh and a bridesmaids luncheon was given for the bride-elect.

The couple was also given a cocktail party held prior to the wedding.

Mandatory Drug Testing Could Cause Problems

By STEVE GILLIAM

GREENSBORO — In an effort to weed out drug abuse in the work force through mandatory testing, American industry and business may be moving toward a "legalized work place" where personnel decisions are based on fears that employees will sue if they feel their rights have been violated.

"Employees now are suing when they feel they've been wrongfully discharged, and they're collecting jury damages," said Lorynn A. Cone, a specialist in corporate and contract law in the School of Business and Economics at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

"We're moving into a sort of 'legalized work place,' where most personnel decisions are being made with an eye to what employees' rights are. Employees now are asking the courts if they have a right to privacy in the work place as far as mandatory drug testing is concerned.

"A bigger fear of employers today than that a union is going to take over is that a disgruntled employee will sue after an inaccurate test for defamation or invasion of privacy and win a large jury award. A union may also use the drug testing issue as a campaign platform in a union election."

In seeking to keep their work force drug-free, employers should avoid tactics which create an "us versus them" attitude with workers. This does little to promote a positive attitude between management and employees, said Cone, who has studied legal cases on mandatory drug testing for the past 18 months. She spoke on the topic at the 1986 meeting of the American Business Law Association.

"Management has a right to have workers on the job who are not under the influence of drugs," she said. "There doesn't have to be a 'witch hunt' to find people in the work force who are on drugs. I've had management people tell me if they sent everyone home who was on drugs, they'd have to close the shift.

"But one very bad practice is to use drug testing as a way to harass employees. An 'us versus them' attitude is created that has people wondering 'Will I be the next one tested?' When this happens, no one really pays attention to working and to the company's business."

Cone became interested in the legal aspects of drug testing because she saw elements of criminal law entering the area of business law. "Usually when you speak of searching somebody to obtain evidence, it falls in the area of criminal law," she said.

Home Residents Given Dinner

A pre-July 4 dinner was given for residents at Rosa Bradley's Home for Adults by the Sylvester Barfield family of Farmville.

Residents received a quilted plaque or pillow designed by Sallie Barfield.

Acceptance remarks were made by Cleveland Fleming and Richard Hardy.

Directors Hear Guest Speaker

Immigration Reform and Control Act of 1986 was discussed at the Pitt County Farm Bureau Board of Directors meeting Tuesday night. Paula Gupton of Raleigh was speaker.

She is coordinator of programs, N.C. Farm Bureau. "The new law seeks to preserve jobs for American citizens and aliens who are authorized to work in this country," she said.

She distributed copies of "Handbook for Employers."

President John Brown welcomed Ephriam H. Smith as a new board member from the Chicod township.

Recent Bridal Couple Honored

WILLIAMSTON — Mr. and Mrs. John Royal Bunting III were honored at a Sunday afternoon candlelight tea given by his great-aunt, Mrs. R. Vernon Bunting in the Barnhill-Bunting house.

Guests were received by the honorees in the entrance hall while their parents, Mr. and Mrs. J.R. Bunting Jr. of Bethel and Mr. and Mrs. Howard W. Holloman of Ahoskie received in the parlor.

A program of piano selections was presented by Mrs. Merritt Tarkington of Everetts.

Summer flowers and magnolia leaves were used throughout the house.

Friends and relatives assisted the hostess.

Mr. and Mrs. Bunting were married May 23 and live in Williamston.

Chaplain Visits Farflung Rigs

By SUSAN ELLERBACH

Tulsa World

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — During the oil boom of the 1970s and early '80s, he traveled 150,000 miles a year to 135 rigs in 27 countries.

He's not a geologist. Or a petroleum engineer. Or even a toolpusher.

But he's probably Parker Drilling Co.'s most popular employee.

He's an industrial chaplain. Something uncommon among large corporations. And rare in the oil industry.

"I've been doing this since 1974 and I haven't met another one yet," he says.

Meet Wishard Lemmons. Wish to anyone who talks with or listens to this oilpatch minister.

In 1975 he almost died of a ruptured appendix on the island of Borneo. He spent four days on the critical list at a Singapore hospital. He says the incident may have been one of his greatest blessings.

"It made me vulnerable. Instead of me coming out to the rig to help all these 'poor' people, word got around in the company that you better watch out for ol' Wish 'cause he's liable to get sick or lost," he says.

"It takes a very unique person to do what we asked him to do, and Wish possesses all of the right qualities," explains Robert L. Parker Sr., the company's chairman and chief executive officer.

It was Parker, a member of Tulsa's First United Methodist Church, who put Wish on the road.

"I'm a little eccentric and he kind of liked by eccentricity," Wish says.

The two became acquainted during the 1970s when Wish was an associate minister First Methodist, a job he still juggles with his Parker duties.

"He had been thinking about some way to improve the morale, to support employees in these awkward situations overseas," the 69-year-old

Wish says. "I'm an Okie, born over here in Muskogee. And I have oil in my veins just like all Okies do even though they might not ever have seen an oil well."

Parker asked Wish to spend a week on a company rig in the jungles of Peru.

"Well, I hadn't been anywhere beyond Broken Arrow for a long time, so that was very exciting," Wish says. "But he had a qualification."

Awards Given At Session

Veterans of Foreign Wars and Ladies Auxiliary Convention was held in Greensboro last week. Bowman Gray Hospital received money for cancer research for this year.

Greenville's Charles Gray Morgan Post 7032 and Ladies Auxiliary contributed $3,500 towards the amount. The group's first place earned a tie award and trophy. Other awards included second place in Americanism and Loyalty Day; first place in rehabilitation, national home program, legislative and Earlene Mayberry Scholarship; second place, Buddy Poppies; and citations for Veteran's Day parade and a dozen flags, and O'Berry Hospital in Goldsboro.

Auxiliary members attending were Rosa Lee Boyd, president, Sally Beaman, vice president, and Alma Smith, senior vice president.

Mrs. Beaman is the incoming president.

The next meeting of the local auxiliary will be held July 23 starting at 7:30 p.m. at the post home.

Couple Marries Saturday

NASHVILLE — Blair Ward Churchill of Nashville and David Wayne Creekmore of Rocky Mount were united in marriage Saturday at 3 p.m. in the Nashville United Methodist Church. The Rev. Ron Bower officiated the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mack W. Churchill of Atlantic Beach and Caroline C. Kearney of Nashville. She is the granddaughter of Margaret E. Churchill of Greenville and the late Lewis H. Churchill. She is a senior nursing student at Oral Roberts University, Tulsa, Okla.

The bridegroom is the son of William Creekmore of Rocky Mount and the late Lorraine Creekmore. He has completed two years at Liberty University in Lynchburg, Va., and will continue his studies in theology and aviation at Oral Roberts University.

The bride was given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father. Her sister, Leigh Churchill, attended as maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Melanie Hiffner of Beaver Creek, Ohio, Amy Coskey of Colts Neck, N.J., and Laura Lee of Zachary, La. The bride's cousin, Rebecca Keel of Welcome, served as junior bridesmaid.

Robert Williams, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, served as best man. Groomsmen were Jeff Bland of Rocky Mount, Gary Heinrich of Califon, N.J., and Mike Ellis of Virginia Beach, Va. Jared Keel of Welcome, cousin of the bride, served as junior groomsman. Christopher Williams, nephew of the bridegroom, served as ring bearer.

Wedding music was presented by Anna Matthews, organist, vocalists were the Rev. and Mrs. Rick Clayton. Songs included "The Wedding Song," "The Gift Goes On," and "Only God Could Love You More." A wedding prayer and blessing "Happy the Home Where Jesus Lives," was sung by the bride's stepfather, Charles Kearney of Nashville.

The wedding was directed by Joyce Allsbrook of Rocky Mount. Sheila Williams, sister of the bridegroom, presided at the register. Following a wedding trip, the couple will reside in Tulsa.

A reception was given immediately following the ceremony in the church fellowship hall.

The cake was served by Martha Keel, aunt of the bride. Punch was served by Carolyn Studeman of Many, La., and Juanita Churchill of Greenville, N.C., aunts of the bride.

The wedding rehearsal pig picking was given at the church pavilion for the wedding party and out-of-town guests by Caroline Kearney, mother of the bride, Martha Keel, aunt of the bride, and Ellen Campbell, grandmother of the bride.

A continental breakfast was hosted at the home of the bride by Margie

Leonard, aunt of the bridegroom, and Caroline Kearney, mother of the bride.

A miscellaneous bridal shower was given for the bride-elect.

Couple's Racial Prejudice Casts Shadow On Friendship

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are 29 years old. We are friendly with a married couple whose company we enjoy, but there is one problem: They are very prejudiced against black people. This hateful attitude seems to come up in conversation at least once every time we're together.

I was raised not to judge people by the color of their skin, and consequently this racist attitude of theirs is very upsetting to me. I am not the type of person to argue my point, as this would be rude, and may jeopardize our friendship.

Should I continue to ignore their comments, or should I tell them how I feel? — OKLAHOMA READER

DEAR READER: Silence implies agreement, so speak up and let them know that their bigotry exposes their ignorance, then try to encourage them to adopt a more enlightened attitude. Of course, it may jeopardize your friendship, but perhaps you should ask yourselves if these are the kind of people you really want for friends. Speaking up in defiance of prejudice and bigotry is not rude; it's the right thing to do. Those who choose silence are guilty of the sin of omission.

DEAR ABBY: My ex-fiance and I were madly in love. He asked me to marry him, I said yes and he gave me a ring. Then his mother told him she would disown him if he married me. We saw each other behind his mother's back, then he left for Japan (he's a U.S. Marine). Before he left, he said he loved me but he doesn't feel right going against his mother's wishes, and I should forget him.

Well, it's been six months and I haven't heard from him. His close friend, who is a friend of mine, told me that "Neil" is trying to forget me. I've tried to forget Neil, too, but I can't.

I'd like to know who was wrong — Neil, or his mother, who caused my broken engagement, canceled wedding, broken heart and endless tears? — STILL IN LOVE

DEAR STILL: You're hurt, which is understandable. You'd probably feel less hurt if you could blame Neil's mother, but look at it this way: How would you like to be married to a fellow who was old enough to be a Marine but had to date the girl he loves behind his mother's back? Rejoice! And try harder to forget him. He's not a man — he's just a mama's boy in a man's uniform.

DEAR ABBY: I was glad to see that letter from a minister who objected to screaming kids at church weddings. The kids are not at fault; they're tired, bored and cranky, and shouldn't be expected to sit still and be quiet during a long wedding service.

We had our lovely wedding videotaped. One screamer ruined the video because his voice could be heard during the entire service — even above the voice of the minister.

Please print this to forewarn others. It's too late for us, but not for them. — VIDEO RUINED

DEAR VIDEO: A couple in Ashland, Ore., sent me the card they enclosed with their wedding invitations:

"Because the ceremony will be videotaped, a sitter will be provided for children under 6 years of age in the church nursery. Children are welcome at the reception."

DEAR READERS: I need your cooperation for an important survey. Question: Have you ever cheated on your mate? How long have you been together?

You need not sign your name, but please state your age, and indicate whether you are male or female. Send letter or postcard to: Abby's Survey, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. Please let me hear from you.

What's Dominating U.S. Families?

As American mothers continue to seek paid full-time employment outside the home, increasing concern is being voiced about what's happening to families. "Quality time" has become a socializing term of the decade as families struggle to spend time together.

But what actually happens when families are together? What activities are performed? What comprises this "quality time?" According to a study done by the Institute for Social Research (ISR) at the University of Michigan, researchers Timmer, Eccles and O'Brien found that one activity dominates the American family's time together: watching television. No other single activity consumes as much free time.

From a national time-use study of 1,500 households, the researchers found that children of employed mothers spent an estimated weekly average of six hours and 40 minutes watching TV with one or both parents. But for children of full-time homemaker mothers, the figures were even higher: an average of eight hours and eight minutes. Children's total weekly TV-watching times (with or without a parent) averaged an estimated 14 hours and 49 minutes for children of employed mothers and 16 hours and 13 minutes for children of homemakers. These figures clearly show the most popular leisure activity and recreational pursuit took up about one-fourth of the time spent together.

Eleven and 12 year old boys watched the most television, about 26 hours a week, and three to five year olds the least, about 13 hours.

The study indicated that relatively little time was actually spent in either type of household in "quality time activities." Working mothers spent an average of 11 minutes each day and 30 minutes of weekend days reading, conversing and playing with their children. In contrast, homemaker mothers spent 30 minutes each weekday and 36 minutes on weekend days in such activities. Fathers spent even less quality time with their children...a scant eight minutes each weekday and 14 minutes a day on weekends.

regardless if the mother is employed or not.

No conclusive evidence was found between the relationship of intellectual development and TV viewing. However, television is not the culprit behind the low cognitive scores but the authors indicated that perhaps it was the little time Americans give to intellectual tasks outside their classrooms. It was also noted that Japanese children spent about twice as many hours studying as do American children (three hours compared to 1½ hours) even though they had similar TV viewing habits.

Canada Eyeing Buildup To Shed Shadow Of U.S.

IQALUIT, Northwest Territories (AP) — The government's proposed military buildup in the Arctic will help Canada shed its image as a U.S. "protectorate," Defense Minister Perrin Beatty said.

Beatty, at the end of a 6,170-mile tour of the far north, said Thursday that Washington appears ready to help with the plan, despite earlier reservations about Canada's decision to deploy its own nuclear-powered submarines.

That assistance could include submarine officer training, he said. "One thing we would want to discuss with the United States is military co-operation programs, such as officer exchange programs," Beatty said in an interview.

Canada also may purchase U.S.-manufactured submarines, even though it has thus far focused on buying cheaper British or French nuclear models, he said. "We don't rule out any potential supplier," he added.

Last month, Beatty's department issued a "white paper" outlining a new defense policy centered on acquisition of 10 to 12 nuclear-powered subs that would give Canada the capability to patrol under the ice in its Arctic seas.

The program would cost an estimated $5-6 billion.

U.S. defense officials initially questioned the need for such Canadian vessels and suggested the plan was designed more as a symbolic Canadian move in a simmering dispute with the United States over the Northwest Passage.

The United States refuses to recognize Canadian sovereignty over the ocean-to-ocean waterway, which threads through Canada's Arctic islands and is navigable for a short time in summer.

But Washington now appears to accept the Arctic plan, Beatty said as his plane flew over Baffin Island on the last day of his tour of Arctic military facilities. Lately, "we have had good cooperation with the United States in terms of (submarine) information," he said.

Beatty's plan is designed in part to reduce defense reliance on the United States. "We are going to contribute as a partner and not as a protectorate," he said.

Throughout the four-day tour, the 37-year-old defense chief repeatedly invoked one theme: No one should question Canadian sovereignty over all the sparsely populated Arctic islands and waterways.

Canadians have long been sensitive about their sovereignty over the Arctic. Two years ago, the issue flared anew when a U.S. Coast Guard icebreaker traversed the Northwest Passage without asking Canada's permission.

"All of us have been raised to believe the Northwest Passage is Canadian territory. And our best friend disputes that," Beatty said. He also questioned the requirement that visitors obtain U.S., not Canadian, permission to visit some early-warning radar sites on Canadian territory. But that is changing.

Under a $1-billion U.S.-Canadian program, such North Warning System sites are being modernized and turned over to Canadian control. "We will be assuming a larger share of the cost and we will be Canadianizing the operation of the stations," Beatty said.

Canada's Progressive Conservative government also has increased anti-submarine aircraft patrols in the Arctic, is planning an Arctic military training site and will upgrade a string of northern airstrips to handle Canadian jet interceptors.

Taiwan May Lift Martial Law

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — Taiwan's Cabinet has approved and sent to the Legislature a proposal to end martial law — a mainstay of the governing Nationalist Party's authoritarian grip for 38 years.

The proposal approved late Thursday by the Executive Yuan, or Cabinet, says that although martial law kept the country secure and stable, it can now be scrapped to improve Taiwan's international image and promote democratic reform.

The Nationalist-dominated Legislative Yuan, Taiwan's highest lawmaking body, is expected to approve the proposal next week, officials said.

President Chiang Ching-kuo would then sign the measure to officially end martial law, which was imposed in 1949 when the Nationalists fled to Taiwan after losing a civil war to the communists on the Chinese mainland.

The Nationalists still maintain they are the sole legitimate government of all China and are technically still at war with the communists.

In a statement issued today, Premier Yu Kuo-hua said Taiwan's people were now "capable of dealing with future possible crises in democratic ways."

Chiang first announced last year that martial law would be lifted, but it has remained in effect while a replacement national security bill was drafted.

The Legislative Yuan last week approved the new security measure. Although the government claims it is less stringent than martial law, the opposition Democratic Progressive Party says it restricts freedom of speech and assembly.

Under the national security bill, civilians no longer would be tried by military courts and the military would not be permitted to screen applications of travelers entering or leaving Taiwan.

New political parties would be permitted, but would have to be anti-communist and back the unification of Taiwan and China. Those requirements are designed to discourage the Taiwan independence movement backed by many native Taiwanese, who comprise 85 percent of the island's 19.5 million people.

The government remains dominated by Nationalists who fled the mainland after the civil war, although an increasing number of native Taiwanese have entered the party and government.

Dissident lawmaker Huang

Huang-hsiung said martial law "has been one of the major obstacles in keeping Taiwan from democracy and progress for so long" and that lifting it would be a "big event."

"We hope those people who have suppressed their true wishes and potential under martial law can now stand up to strive for their political rights," Huang said.

The dissident party, which was formed in September in defiance of martial law and received 21.6 percent of the vote in legislative elections three months later, has organized several street demonstrations in recent months to press their demands for democratic reforms.

Gen. George Washington issued his farewell address to the army Nov. 2, 1783, near Princeton, N.J.

Haitians Continue Protests

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — The military-dominated government revoked an election decree that prompted a general strike and clashes across Haiti, but the opposition refused to call off the protest and repeated demands for the junta's resignation.

Four people were reported shot by security forces during Thursday's violence, bringing the week's death toll to 15.

On Thursday night, the government of Lt. Gen. Henri Namphy revoked the June 23 decree that had taken control of upcoming elections from an independent council established by a new constitution approved in a March referendum. The decree allowed the government to control the voting, a move criticized by the opposition as detrimental to the elections' integrity.

Namphy heads the three-man military-civilian National Governing Council.

The decree sparked violent protests and plunged Haiti into its most serious political crisis since President-for-Life Jean-Claude Duvalier fled into French exile on Feb. 7, 1986, to end 29 years of Duvalier dictatorship.

The strike began Monday and was interrupted for 24 hours Wednesday. Hospitals, witnesses and local media said 81 people were wounded in clashes with soldiers in addition to the 15 fatalities.

After the government revoked the election decree, Robert Duval of the opposition Mobile Institute for Democracy vowed that the boycott would continue because other grievances were not addressed by the regime.

"The people in the street want the departure of the CNG (National Governing Council)," he said.

Strikers also demand the government rescind an order dissolving a labor federation that organized a one-day strike for higher wages last week.

The government's decision revoking the decree was announced on state-run television. The report also said Information Minister Jacques Lorthé, a prominent public backer of the government's decree, had resigned.

Defeat Evert, ShriverMartina, Steffi In Finals

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — It was a Wimbledon semifinal between the two queens of tennis. And a real princess was there to see it.

Martina Navratilova and Chris Evert, rivals who have graced the Centre Court at Wimbledon for 14 years, came back for their 73rd career meeting Thursday and served up a tennis feast.

For just over two hours, they held a captive crowd, which included Britain's Princess Diana, spellbound.

At the end, both agreed they had produced something special.

"It might have been the best match we have ever played," Navratilova said after her 6-2, 5-7, 6-4 victory that sent her into Saturday's championship match against Steffi Graf, her heir apparent.

"It was certainly the best match the two of us have ever played on grass," Evert said.

The way Graf reached the final could not have been in sharper contrast as she took just 51 minutes to thrash Pam Shriver 6-0, 6-2.

At 18, the West German will displace Navratilova as No. 1 in the world if she wins on Saturday.

"Everyone wants to be No. 1 and I want it too," Graf said. "But I'm going to be in tennis a long time."

After the two contrasting women's semifinals, the men's semifinals were to take center stage today, featuring two players who have been there many times and two relative newcomers to final four of the Grand Slam event.

Ivan Lendl, the world's No. 1 player but still searching for a Wimbledon title, was to go against Stefan Edberg of Sweden. They were to be followed by Pat Cash of Australia and American Jimmy Connors, gunning for his third Wimbledon title just two months short of his 35th birthday.

Lendl, winner of two U.S. Opens and three French Opens, was making his fourth Wimbledon semifinal appearance in five years. Edberg, a two-time Australian Open titlist, was in his first.

Connors, who came back from the brink of elimination in the fourth round and then breezed past Slobodan Zivojinovic in the quarterfinals, was playing in the semifinals for the 11th time. Cash, who lost just one set in his first five matches, has been there once before, in 1984.

The winners meet for the title on Sunday.

Navratilova, who has not won a tournament this year, said she could not remember the last time she played so well.

"I'm flying now," she said after beating Evert. "On a sustained level, this was the best I've played for a long time because I never let up."

"People have told me that women hit their prime at 30. I'm starting to believe them."

The 30-year-old Czech-born American, going for a record sixth consecutive Wimbledon title, said she felt "as athletic as I have in a long time, quick and agile and eager."

She had to be, because Evert threw everything into the match.

"I can't play any better," the 32-year-old American said. "This is her best surface. I feel proud of myself. Today, I played really, really well and I can't ask more of myself."

Evert tried everything she knew — scorching service returns, ripping passing shots, lobs and drop shots — to pull Navratilova out of her rhythm.

Evert won the second set but was broken in the opening game of the third, the last break of the match.

"That disappointed me," she said. "After that, I was always down a game."

Evert, who has hinted many times this year at retirement, said she also was disappointed not to have had the chance to win Wimbledon for a fourth time.

But, she said, she was satisfied with the way she lost.

"This was probably the happiest I've felt after a loss in a long time," she said. "I felt really competitive, and that feeling has been in and out this year."

Navratilova said beating Evert took the gloss off reaching the final.

"I had tears in my eyes at the finish but ... it was for Chris losing," she said. "I really wished she could win this tournament one more time."

Stretching her unbeaten streak to 45 unbeaten matches, Graf said she was surprised how easily she coped with her first Wimbledon semifinal.

"I thought I had a good chance but I never thought it would be this easy," she said.

Shriver had reached the semifinals after saving match points in both her fourth-round and quarterfinal matches but came to an abrupt halt against Graf.

From the start, Graf prevented

Shriver from dominating the net, an important aspect of the American's game, and put pressure on her serve.

She also exposed Shriver's suspect mobility by spraying passing shots that left her opponent floundering in despair for the ball in the corners of the court.

Always the entertainer, Shriver tried to put on a brave face in defeat, despite having her dream of playing in the championship match on her 25th birthday shattered by Graf.

"The turning point was walking out there," Shriver joked. "It's humiliating ... but I think I was living on borrowed time."

Shriver said Navratilova, her doubles partner, would need to be ultra-sharp to beat Graf.

"She'll have to get smart," Shriver said. "She can't get flustered. Steffi is very confident."

VPI Basketball Under A Cloud

BLACKSBURG, Va. (AP) — Virginia Tech's basketball program faces a future clouded with questions following the release of a report portraying the program as a place where players are recruited to play and not to study.

The report, prepared by a six-member committee, said that no basketball players admitted to Virginia Tech from 1982 to 1986 have graduated from the school. About half still are attending the school.

Sindelar Holds One Stroke Lead

OAKVILLE, Ontario (AP) — Joey Sindelar followed his game plan — a domination of the par-5 holes — to a one-stroke lead after the opening round of the $600,000 Canadian Open Golf Tournament.

"The key was that I hit my best tee shots on the par fives, which you kind of look to as the pick-up holes," the long-hitting Sindelar said after he shot a 4-under-par 68 in cold, misty weather Thursday.

Those big drives enabled Sindelar to hit irons to greens of all four of the long holes and he played those four holes five under par.

He had three two-putt birdies and rolled in a 25-foot eagle putt on the final hole that lifted him from one stroke behind to one in front of Tom Purtzer.

"You know that on a day like this — cold and windy and rainy — that half the field isn't going to play well," Sindelar said. "You know that you're not going to get around without making some mistakes, making some bogeys."

"So you kind of look to the par fives to offset those mistakes," Sindelar said.

And Sindelar, winner of two titles in 1985, made his share of mistakes. He three-putted twice and on two other occasions he one-putted for bogey. But his domination of the par-5s — plus three other birdies — more than made up for it.

Purtzer, winner of two tournaments in a 12-year PGA Tour career, used a birdie-birdie finish for a 69 that left him alone in second.

But while Sindelar followed his plan — mistakes and all — to perfection, Jack Nicklaus was unable to make his scheme work.

Nicklaus, seven times a runner-up but not yet a winner of this national championship, came to the 18th tee at two under par and very much among the leaders.

He considered hitting a wood for his second shot, over water, to the par-5 finishing hole.

"Under the conditions, I figured it was a gamble, and not a good gamble," he said.

So he played it safe. But his 5-iron lay-up shot found the deep, wet rough. And he dumped his third shot, a wedge, into the lake. It led to a double bogey-7 and a par round of 72.

"I was trying to play it smart. I guess I should have played it stupid," Nicklaus said. "A 70 would have been a very good score today."

Leading the group at that figure was Richard Zokol, who is attempting to become the first Canadian to win this national championship since 1954.

"I just want to continue to play good, basic golf and try not to put too much pressure on myself," said Zokol, who was tied for third with defending champion Bob Murphy, Steve Pate and left-hander Ernie Gonzalez.

Saberhagen Doing Good Job Of Forgetting Last Season

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Kansas City's Bret Saberhagen is trying to forget the 1986 season. He's doing a pretty good job so far of making everyone else forget it, too.

"It's a great feeling to go out there and pitch as consistently as I have so far," Saberhagen said after leading the Royals to a 10-3 victory over the Minnesota Twins Thursday night.

The triumph was the 10th straight at Royals Stadium for Saberhagen, who raised his major league-leading record to 14-2 while maintaining a solid 2.22 earned run average.

That's quite a change from last year's 7-12 record, and more like the 20-6 mark he recorded in 1985 while winning the American League Cy Young Award.

"I think I'm pitching more consistently than '85," Saberhagen said. "I think the complete games, the ERA, just about everything shows that. If I can't be at ease with myself, I don't know who could."

In other AL action, it was Cleveland 2, Chicago 1 in 11 innings; Seattle 5, Detroit 2; Oakland 5, Boston 2; and California 9, Milwaukee 7 in 13 innings. The game between New York and Texas was rained out.

Saberhagen gave up nine hits, struck out five and did not walk a batter in gaining his 10th complete game, tops in the American League.

"I think I pitched pretty good except for those two innings, when they got three runs off me," Saberhagen said. "After they gave me the lead, I went out there and challenged some guys that maybe I shouldn't have challenged."

Saberhagen got offensive support from Jim Eisenreich, who hit a three-run homer and drove in a career-high four runs.

Eisenreich's home run, his first this season and the third of his career, came in the fifth inning after Danny Tartabull walked and Frank White singled. It was Eisenreich's first home run since April 17, 1982, when he was with the Twins.

"Some of the guys at Memphis told me I couldn't go out of this (Royals) stadium," said Eisenreich, who was recalled by the Royals June 17 from their Class AA team at Memphis. "I said, 'Why not?' They said it's too big. Well, it isn't."

The 425-foot home run gave the Royals an 8-0 lead.

Indians 2, White Sox 1

Tony Bernazard had four hits, including a run-scoring single that broke a 1-1 tie in the bottom of the 11th. The victory was only the second in the last 11 games for Cleveland. The loss ended Chicago's three-game winning streak.

Doug Jones, 1-1, Cleveland's fourth pitcher, pitched a perfect 11th to earn the victory.

Cory Snyder beat out an infield single against Bob James, 2-4, to start the 11th and moved to second on Chris Bando's sacrifice bunt. One out later, Bernazard singled home Snyder with the winning run.

Cleveland loaded the bases with none out in the bottom of the 10th but failed to score when Brook Jacoby hit into a third-to-home double play and Mel Hall popped out.

Julio Franco gave the Indians a 1-0 lead in the first with his fifth homer. The White Sox tied it on Ozzie Guillen's sacrifice fly in the fifth.

Mariners 5, Tigers 2

Lee Guetterman pitched a five-hitter and Phil Bradley and Dave Valle hit solo home runs for Seattle. Guetterman, 6-1, shut the Tigers down except for a two-run homer by Larry Herndon. The 28-year-old left-hander struck out five, walked two and recorded 14 groundouts.

Frank Tanana, 7-5, lost for the Tigers, allowing seven hits, striking out two and walking three in 7 1-3 innings.

The Mariners scored in the first inning on Valle's seventh home run of the year and in the third on Bradley's sixth homer.

The Tigers tied the score in the fourth on Herndon's fifth home run, following a walk to Alan Trammell. But the Mariners put the game out of reach in the fifth inning on an RBI double by Bradley, a sacrifice fly by Jim Presley and a run-scoring wild pitch by Tanana.

Athletics 5, Red Sox 3

Jose Canseco hit a tie-breaking leadoff home run in a three-run eighth inning and Joaquin Andujar pitched a six-hitter to pace Oakland.

Andujar, 3-1, pitched his first complete game since Sept. 27, 1986, walking two and striking out six.

Al Nipper, 7-7, saw his two-game winning streak end along with the Red Sox' four-game winning streak when he gave up Canseco's 15th homer in the eighth. Reliever Calvin Schiraldi later uncorked a wild pitch for another Oakland run and then gave up an RBI single by Tony Phillips. Mike Greenwell cut Oakland's lead to 5-3 with his 10th homer in the ninth inning.

Trailing 2-0 in the fifth, the Red Sox tied the game when Marc Sullivan hit a two-run homer, only his second of the season.

Angels 9, Brewers 7

Rookie Mark McLemore hit his first major league home run, a two-run shot with two out in the bottom of the 13th inning for California.

The winning shot came on a 1-1 pitch from reliever Mark Clear, 5-4, who entered the game in the 13th. The victory went to Chuck Finley, 1-3, who pitched the last four innings, allowing one hit.

Allison Nips Elliott For Pole

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Smaller carburetors slowed down qualifying speeds for Saturday's NASCAR Firecracker 400, but they didn't alter the pattern of speed domination by Ford Thunderbirds.

Despite the slowdown at Daytona International Speedway, the only real surprise in pole qualifying on Thursday was rookie Davey Allison turning the tables on Bill Elliott.

Both drove Thunderbirds, but Allison turned a lap on Daytona's 2.5-mile oval at 198.085 mph compared to 198.050 the heavily favored Elliott ran minutes earlier. Ken Schrader was the third fastest qualifier, also in a Thunderbird, with a clocking of 197.607.

The same drivers claimed the top three positions in qualifying here for the Daytona 500 in February. However, NASCAR's decision to slow down the cars for safety reasons was expected to affect Ford's dominance.

"I really felt like the GM (General Motors) cars would have a little bit more of an advantage than the Fords," said Allison, explaining that he thought GM's engine design was better suited for the new carburetors than Ford's.

"But we all went back and did our homework and it's pretty much balanced right back to the way it was — at least for qualifying," he added.

Daytona and Alabama International Speedway are the only tracks where drivers have topped 200 mph. Twelve drivers did it in qualifying for last year's Firecracker 400 and Elliott set a track record of 210.364 here in February.

NASCAR also ordered some body modifications designed to keep cars from going airborne during slides.

"I don't really miss the quicker speeds — especially when we get to the corner," said Elliott, who had won the pole for four of the previous five Winston Cup races at Daytona. "You've never got control of the car, but it feels a little more secure."

The front row positions for the 10 a.m. EDT race, which will be televised by ABC on a same-day, tape-delay basis, are a reversal from February when Elliott won the pole for the Daytona 500 and Allison started on the outside.

Allison, 26, has won two races in his rookie season to establish himself as an up-and-coming star, but he still considers Elliott the favorite in Saturday's event.

"He's got the experience. He's run here several times. He's won here several times, and we're the new kid on the block," Allison said.

The top two qualifiers were separated by only .008 seconds, which converts into about 27 inches if the cars are traveling side-by-side.

"I was surprised the pole went over 198. I thought it'd be closer to 196 1/2," Allison said. "The weather was perfect for qualifying."

Rain interrupted the session for more than an hour after Allison posted the fastest time. When the track reopened, several big names were bumped from the starting order (top 20 spots) determined Thursday, but Allison held his position.

"There were a couple of guys I thought could beat us, namely Terry Labonte and Rusty Wallace," Allison said. "It was kind of tough to sit out there and wait."

Morgan Shepherd, in a Buick LaSabe, was the fourth fastest qualifier in 197.105 mph, followed by Labonte (196.670) in a Chevrolet and Wallace (196.297) in a Pontiac.

Brett Bodine (195.942), A.J. Foyt (195.767), Buddy Baker (195.767) and Neil Bonnett (195.597) completed the top 10.

Bobby Allison, Kyle Petty, Dale Earnhardt, Bobby Hillin, Jr., Alan Kulwicki, Harry Gant, Ricky Rudd, Sterling Marlin, Geoff Bodine and Michael Waltrip also qualified Thursday.

Among the drivers who failed to qualify Thursday were Darrell Waltrip and Cale Yarborough, who both ran 193.395 mph, and Richard Petty, who was clocked in 193.936 on his 50th birthday.

Defending Firecracker 400 winner Tim Richmond's 193.707 was not good enough to qualify either. He and the others were to get another chance to-day when the final 20 spots in the 40-car lineup were filled.

The lineup for Saturday's Firecracker 400 NASCAR stock car race, with type of car and qualifying speed in mph:

1. Davey Allison, Ford Thunderbird, 198.085.
2. Bill Elliott, Ford Thunderbird, 198.050.

Evert Is Classic In Her Defeat

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — If this was Chris Evert's swan song at Wimbledon, it was a classic serenade.

At 32, Evert has said this will be her last full year on the women's tennis tour. But she is also fond of saying she takes her tennis one year at a time.

On Thursday, she was beaten by her long-time rival, Martina Navratilova, 6-2, 5-7, 6-4 in a semifinal battle royal. Evert and Navratilova said it might have been one of their best matches in their 73-meeting history.

"This match today has no bearing on whether I'm going to be here next year," Evert said. "If I'm playing competitively, I will be here. Competitively? That's one of my pat answers.

"If I'm playing the game, I'll be back. If I'm playing the circuit, I can't see myself just playing major tournaments. I need more tournaments to be mentally tough. I'd have to play the whole tour to play Wimbledon."

After their match on Centre Court, Navratilova said the game wouldn't be the same for her without Evert, a three-time Wimbledon champion.

"It would be pretty strange if Chris weren't at tournaments any more," Navratilova, a seven-time champion here, said. "That would be a definite void."

"People seem to feel it about (John) McEnroe not being here. It will be even greater when Chris isn't here, and I know I'll feel it a lot."

Since they first met on a tennis court in 1973, the two have dominated women's tennis, first Evert and then Navratilova holding the No. 1 ranking with few exceptions. And over the years, the two have become friends.

"If Martina wasn't playing, I wouldn't have anybody to talk to in the locker room," Evert said. "It's almost like she's family now because we've been together ... we've played matches, we've seen other players come and go, but we have been the two constants."

"The friendship doesn't take an edge off my play. I can't play any better than I did today."

Navratilova said when the match was over and they came to the net to shake hands, Evert told her "I hope I didn't take too much out of you for the final."

"What a thing to say. ... I'm just proud and thrilled to be part of this and I really, honestly wish that we could have stopped at 30-all," Navratilova said.

Snow Hill Nips Rocky Mount

ROCKY MOUNT — Snow Hill's American Legion baseball team tied the game up with a home run, then went on to claim an 8-6 victory over Rocky Mount Thursday night.

The victory kept Snow Hill, now 8-6, in the running for a share of the league championship — but it must win its remaining four games, all to be played over the next three days.

Wayne County has already clinched the top seeding for the upcoming playoffs, and has only its game with Snow Hill remaining. Snow Hill, however, must down Kinston at home tonight, sweep a home doubleheader with Wilson on Sunday, then must beat Wayne on Sunday in order to earn a share of the title and second seeding in the playoffs.

Snow Hill took the lead in the game in the top of the second inning, scoring a pair of runs. Roger Smith led off with a single and was sacrificed up. Uly Russo followed with a double, driving in Smith. T.J. Johnson then singled in Russo.

Rocky Mount, however, rallied for four runs in the bottom of the inning to take the lead. Snow Hill came back in the top of the third, scoring two more for a 4-4 tie. Shay Beamon singled to open the inning and Tommy Eason followed with a home run.

Snow Hill moved back out with two in the sixth, but Rocky Mount countered with one in its half of the inning.

Snow Hill then put the game away with one in the seventh. Russo led off with a single and moved up on a balk. Johnson then singled him to third from where he scored on a wild pitch.

Snow Hill picked up one more in the ninth while Rocky Mount got another in the seventh.

Russo and Johnson each had three hits while Eason, Beamon and Barry Ginn each collected two hits. Rocky Mount was led by Paul Strickland, Jeff Carter and Clint Rouse, each with two.

Jeffrey Freeman banded out three hits to help lead Hendrix & Dail to a 15-7 upset of First Citizens in the Greenville Prep League playoffs Thursday night.

First Citizens, the regular season champion of the league, thus falls into the losers' bracket of the double-elimination tournament, while Hendrix & Dail moves into the finals.

First Citizens will face Garriss-Evans in the losers' bracket finals, to be played Tuesday at 6 p.m. at Guy Smith Stadium.

Hendrix & Dail jumped into the lead in the first inning, scoring six times. They added a seventh run in the second inning. First Citizens started its comeback in the bottom of the second, scoring three runs.

But in the fourth, H&D put together enough for four more runs to put the game out of reach. With two away, Marty Whichard walked as did Richard Brittle. Chuck Williams singled in Whichard and Ethan Brinn followed with a single that plated Brittle. Jay Kuykendall walked and Freeman singled to drive in Williams. Brinn then scored on a wild pitch.

H&D added four more in the sixth inning on two-run doubles by Eric Smith and Whichard.

First Citizens picked up one in the fifth, two in the sixth and one more in the seventh.

Kuykendall, Brittle, Williams and Brinn each had two hits for H&D while Mitch Jones and Shawn Sponhaltz had two each for First Citizens.

Hendrix & Dail will face the winner of the Garriss-Evans and First Citizens game for the championship on Thursday, with another game, if needed, next Friday.

Leach Tops Houston To Tie Mark

CINCINNATI (AP) — Move over Tom Seaver, Jerry Koosman and Dwight Gooden. Make room for New York Mets' latest record-setting pitcher — journeyman Terry Leach.

Leach, a 33-year-old right-hander, pitched a two-hitter Thursday night to beat the Cincinnati Reds 5-0 and improve his record to 7-0, matching Roger McDowell's club record for most wins without a loss at the start of a season.

"I'm just happy to be where I am right now," said Leach, who has bounced around the minors for most of his 12-year professional career. "Things couldn't be better. I didn't think it (the winning streak) would last as long as this."

The side-winding Leach has been primarily a reliever throughout his unspectacular career, compiling a 6-6 record with four saves in 70 major-league appearances before this year.

He won three games in 18 relief appearances this season, and has won four of his five starts since moving into the Mets' injury-depleted rotation. His earned run average has dropped to 2.13, trailing only Gooden's 2.12 on the staff.

"He's been exceptional at whatever role I've used him in," Mets Manager Dave Johnson said. "Leach can't explain his success."

"I'm just on a good roll," he said. "I just did like I've done to everybody else — keep the ball down, let it sink, and keep it on the corners."

His sinker has helped raise the Mets' pennant hopes while sinking Cincinnati's momentum.

The victory Thursday improved New York's record to 42-35. The Mets have won 10 of their last 14 games to secure second place in the National League East, trailing St. Louis by five games.

McDowell can't say where the Mets would be without Leach's help.

"I'm just happy we didn't have to do it without him," said McDowell, who started last season 7-0. "He's been a big lift for us. He goes out and does whatever he has to do."

Leach allowed just a third-inning single to Ron Oester and an eighth-inning single to Bo Diaz. He walked two and struck out three, and faced just one batter more than the minimum 27 with the help of a couple of double plays and a baserunner caught stealing.

The ease of Leach's success left Reds Manager Pete Rose fuming. Rose tore into the Reds' lack of enthusiasm just one day after they completed a two-game sweep of the Houston Astros, their nearest pursuer in the NL West.

Houston beat Philadelphia 7-6 on Thursday night to move to 1½ games behind the first-place Reds.

"The thing that's disappointing to me about the game tonight is I can't believe from walking up and down the bench that we're in first place by 2½ games," Rose said. "I thought we were 43 behind. It's like a morgue in there (the clubhouse)."

"Our team did not approach tonight's game like it was 2½ games ahead. I don't know why."

Rose suggested changes would be made if the players' attitudes don't change. He didn't specify what those changes could be.

"All they're worried about is what Houston's doing," Rose said. "Houston's not the only team in the league. These guys seem to worry about Houston and that's it."

Astros 7, Phillies 6

Houston snapped Philadelphia reliever Steve Bedrosian's record streak of 13 saves in 13 appearances when Glenn Davis hit a three-run homer in the ninth inning.

With the Phillies leading 6-4, Bedrosian, 3-2, breezed through the eighth before giving up singles by Denny Walling and Bill Doran and Davis' 15th homer.

Philadelphia had taken the lead with three runs in the fifth on RBI doubles by Mike Schmidt and Chris James and a run-scoring single by Lance Parrish.

Dave Smith pitched the ninth for his 15th save and Larry Andersen struck out the side in the eighth for his sixth victory in 10 decisions.

Rookie Holds One Shot Lead

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — Nancy Taylor liked the way things added up after the first round of the Jamie Farr LPGA Toledo Classic.

Taylor, a rookie on the women's tour, shot a 4-under-par 68 Thursday for a one-stroke lead over Cindy Hill and Heather Farr.

"I feel I have a good chance (to win)," said Taylor, a 26-year-old native Californian. "I'll take it one day at a time and one shot at a time and then add it up at the end."

Playing early in the day, she made the turn at one under, then birdied three consecutive holes down the stretch to post the lowest score of her professional career.

She rolled in a 30-foot birdie putt on her 15th hole, then made birdie putts of 10 and seven feet.

"I'm very thankful for shooting a good round," Taylor said. "It was a nice experience, a good welcome, a good hello. ... Tomorrow is another day. I'll just play the course as it prevails."

A more unlikely leader might not have been possible among the 112 players who completed the first round on the 6,220-yard, par-72 Glegarry Country Club layout.

Taylor made the cut in four of 16 tournaments she has entered so far this year, with her best finish a tie for 37th two weeks ago at the Lady Keystone Open. She ranks 129th on the money-earnings list with $5,205.

"I started out slow," Taylor said of her rocky beginning on the LPGA Tour. "It came down to getting myself adjusted, learning how to function out here. You have to pace yourself. ... The main thing is taking it one day at a time and knowing what you want to do. That's the important thing out here — being patient."

Hill, winner of the S&H Golf Classic earlier this season, and Farr, a tour rookie, were one shot back.

Farr, no relation to the tournament's host and namesake, arrived in Toledo on Tuesday to find her clubs had been sent to Detroit.

Another shot back were Sarah LeVeque, Sue Fogleman, Stephanie Farwig, Laurie Rinker, Jerilyn Britz, Julie Cole, Sherri Turner, Cathy Gerring and Tammie Green.

Twelve players were at 71, including reigning LPGA Champion and U.S. Women's Open winner Jane Geddes. Joining her were Jan Stephenson, Heather Drew, Nancy Ledbetter, Betsy Barrett, Dale Egeling, Marlene Hagge, Kathy Postlewait, Chris Johnson, Sandra Palmer, Pam Allen and Gail Hirata.

The two previous winners of the Farr, Lauri Peterson and Penny Hammel, recorded scores of 72 and 5-over 77, respectively.

The winner of the 72-hole event will collect $33,750 from a purse of $225,000.

Bengals Suspend Stanley Wilson

CINCINNATI (AP) — Cincinnati Bengals fullback Stanley Wilson, who underwent four drug rehabilitation programs during an 18-month suspension for cocaine addiction, may have finally reached the end of a short, promising career.

Wilson was suspended for a second time by National Football League Commissioner Pete Rozelle on Thursday after drug tests showed that Wilson had renewed cocaine use.

Wilson may be eligible for reinstatement after June 1, 1988, but Bengals assistant general manager Mike Brown told The Cincinnati Enquirer that Wilson might not bounce back a second time.

Wilson, reached Thursday at his home in Carson, Calif., said he did not want to talk about the suspension.

"I have no comment," Wilson said. When asked about his plans, Wilson again said, "No comment."

Wilson said "there's a possibility" he may be willing to talk in the future about his suspension and relapse into cocaine use.

Wilson overcame long odds to make a comeback with the Bengals last season after being suspended from October 1984 to May 1985 for violating the league's drug policy.

During training camp last season, Brown said he was impressed by Wilson's recovery.

"Stanley Wilson has made a tremendous comeback," Brown said last season. "He demands to be tested, to have urine samples taken every week. If we aren't right on time he walks up with a cup in his hand."

Wilson spoke freely about his addiction last season, and said he pitied those who were abusers of drugs or alcohol.

"I feel sorry for the people who are drinking, or whatever, because I've been there. I know where they're going and it's a nowhere road," Wilson said.

Wilson had spoken before support groups for cocaine and alcohol abusers.

Arizona Loses NBA Meeting

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Phoenix Suns General Manager Jerry Colangelo says he accepts the NBA's decision to move its annual meeting this fall from Arizona over the Martin Luther King holiday issue, but the league's action drew criticism from others.

"It is unfortunate, and for that matter unbelievable, that an organization of professional sports franchises would cancel a meeting for reasons that should not concern such an organization," said Carla Metzel, spokeswoman for the Scottsdale resort where the meeting was scheduled.

The National Basketball Association announced Thursday it would move the meeting because of Arizona's failure to observe a legal holiday in honor of the slain civil rights leader.

NBA Commissioner David Stern said in New York the decision to move the September meeting to an undetermined site was "especially painful for us because of the excellent relationship that the Phoenix Suns and the NBA have with our fans in Arizona."

"However, the political climate surrounding this controversy makes it inappropriate for us to convene in Arizona at this time," Stern said.

"I respect the decision made by Commissioner David Stern and understand why he did so," Colangelo said. "We're just one now of a growing list of conventions and meetings that have been canceled over this political issue."

Asked whether the NBA should consider such issues as the King Day holiday in deciding meeting locations, Colangelo said, "I think a professional sports league has to respond to a lot of things, including pressures, considerations and judgments that affect its operation."

"In this particular case, you're talking about a league that has a predominately high number of black athletes and this political issue in this regard relates to the Martin Luther King holiday situation. You just can't overlook (that) from the league's standpoint," Colangelo added.

Metzel said the league would have to pay a cancellation penalty of "several thousand dollars" to the Sheraton Scottsdale.

"We are very disappointed with the NBA's decision to cancel. We have a signed contract with the NBA and we of course expect them to honor their commitments," Metzel said.

Gubernatorial press secretary Ron Bellus, said the NBA made its decision "without looking at all the information. I just find it very unfortunate that they made the decision in this manner."

"It reflects more on them than it does on the state," Bellus added.

Colangelo disputed Bellus' statement that NBA officials were not familiar with the King Day situation in Arizona.

"They're pretty well in tune on this issue. I might add that we never had any contact from the governor's office," he said.

In June 1986, Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt issued an executive order that created a paid holiday for state executive-branch workers in honor of the late civil rights leader.

Gov. Evan Mecham rescinded the order after he took office in January, citing advice from the state's attorney general that state law does not authorize governors to declare paid holidays. Bills to authorize a holiday have died in the state Legislature.

Since then, more than 30 organizations have canceled conventions that had been scheduled for the Phoenix metropolitan area. Arizona is among seven states that don't recognize Martin Luther King Day as a legal holiday.

Mecham last month declared the third Sunday in January as a day to honor King, but King-day advocates said only a paid holiday would suffice.

"LET THIS BE A WITNESS!"

WITH THESE WORDS MANY A BIBLICAL PERSON WOULD SEAL A CONTRACT OR A COVENANT, OR A BUSINESS PROMISE BY SOME TANGIBLE TOKEN AS A HEAP OF STONES, OR A MONUMENT WITH A CHISELED MARK OF AGREEMENT ON THE STONE (GEN. 31:46-52). SOMETIMES IT WAS BY A WRITTEN DOCUMENT SUCH AS A DEED OR A LETTER OF DIVORCE (DEUT. 24:1, 3; JER. 32:10). BUT THE MOST POPULAR METHOD WAS BY CALLING MEN TO WITNESS THE EVENT IN QUESTION. THIS CONCURRENT TESTIMONY OF AT LEAST TWO WITNESSES WAS REQUIRED UNDER THE MOSAIC LAW—ESPECIALLY IF IT WAS TO ESTABLISH GUILT OF A CAPITAL CRIME (NUM. 35:30). THIS PRINCIPLE WAS A GENERAL RULE IN ALL JUDICIAL PROCEDURE (DEUT. 19:15). ALL WITNESSES, BEFORE THE TESTIMONY WAS GIVEN, WERE CAUTIONED TO TELL NOTHING BUT THE TRUTH...

AND TO CONCEAL NOTHING THAT WAS PERTINENT TO THE CASE. IT WAS A SIN FOR A WITNESS TO WITHHOLD EVIDENCE IN HIS POSSESSION (LEV. 5:1; PROV. 29:24). FALSE WITNESS BEARING WAS DENOUNCED IN THE DECALOGUE (EX. 20:16) AND WHEN DETECTED, DREW THE SAME PENALTY UPON THE FALSE WITNESS THAT HE HAD ATTEMPTED TO GET IMPOSED ON THE ACCUSED—THESE ANCIENT JUDGES DID NOT FOOL AROUND!!

In Concert

The Greens

St. Paul Pentecostal Holiness Church
Hwy. 33E
Sunday, July 5 • 6:00 P.M.

The Greens attract a wide variety of music fans to their many concerts. Their audience may include children and young people as well as senior adults. Musically, The Greens provide a variety of styles within the total realm of Southern Gospel Music, but the desire of the group is to do much more than impress audiences with their musical skill.

"Our goal is to take as many people as we can with us to 'Gloriland'." "We'd like to see many people saved and blessed through our music."

Plan Now For Special Services With John Wesley Fletcher

Next Week
July 12th - 15th • 7:30 Nightly
Foursquare Christian Center
1104 North Memorial Drive
(Across From Greenville Airport)

Last August when John Wesley Fletcher was with us, we've never seen God move so powerfully, as He would use John Wesley to set His people free. As John Wesley ministers, God reveals people's needs to him. He then prays for them and they are delivered by the power of God.

John Wesley Fletcher is one of the most powerful men of God alive today. Plan now to attend these special services.

(Call the church office at 757-1109 for bus reservations and seating)

Area Church News

The Singing Greens will be in concert at St. Paul Pentecostal Holiness Church on Sunday at 6 p.m.

Church Fund-Raiser

Members of Oakmont Baptist Church subscribed $341,717 during their 13-week "Together We Build" program.

In addition, the church had $27,763 on hand for a total of $369,480 to be used for future parking additions and new facilities, according to a spokesman.

Greenville and Martha Banks, with the assistance of a nine-member steering committee, were the program directors who conducted the campaign with the church's membership.

Business Meeting

The Deacon's Union anniversary committee will have a business

FIRST SERVICE — Grace Free Will Baptist Church will have the first service in its new church building on N.C. 43 near Bells Fork Sunday morning. The 275-member congregation, now worshipping at 400 Watauga Ave., broke ground for the $1.6 million building in August 1986 after buying the land in 1985. The building, of a circular design with meeting rooms surrounding the sanctuary, was designed by John Hickman of Kinston. C.A. Lewis Inc. of Greenville was the contractor. Ed Walker is pastor of the 34-year-old congregation, which has 34 active ministries, including those for the elderly, children, youth and disabled. (Reflector Photo by Cliff Hollis)

Mother, Daughter Ordained Together To Become Christian Church Ministers

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Ever since their separate days of youth, both mother and daughter had sensed a common calling — to become ministers. Last Sunday, their separately timed dreams converged and came true for both.

It was a rare occasion, the first time a mother and daughter have been ordained together in the same ceremony, a check of major denominational offices indicates.

"It's an interesting coincidence," says the mother, the Rev. Gayle Schoepf, 57, of Fullerton, Calif., and it highlights a growing trend. "With more and more women going into the ministry, it was bound to happen."

Says the daughter, the Rev. Elaine Schoepf, 27: "It's wonderful, wonderful."

Because of the unusual nature of the affair, it drew participants not only from the denomination's regional office in Los Angeles, but from national offices of the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ) in Indianapolis.

The Rev. John Humbert, the denomination's general minister and president, said of the dual ordination at Fullerton's First Christian Church:

"In a time when we are placing special emphasis on the gifts of women in the ministry and the need for expanded openness in congregations to receive them, the ordination of a mother and daughter has special significance."

That it occurred for both at once, he said, is not only "unique in our history, but it serves to dramatize the call to women for religious vocation."

Beyond the peculiarly meshed timing of the event, it also marked the culmination of a persistent urge both women had felt since their teens, even though a generation apart.

"Ever since I was 12 or 13, I had this strong feeling I was called to be a pastor," says the daughter. But she had delayed that aim, instead getting a degree in theater, pursuing one in psychology.

"I dodged it for a while," she adds. "When God calls, we say, 'get someone else.' But over the years it got stronger and stronger. I kept getting these kicks in the pants, 'it's time now, it's time, it's time to do the seminary work.'"

Dropping her psychology studies for the time being, she entered the Pacific School of Religion in Berkeley, Calif., and received her master of divinity degree in May.

By an odd coincidence, that was the time that the mother, after deferring for years completion of seminary studies for ordination, finally did so — also in May — at the School of Theology at Claremont, Calif.

Like her daughter, the mother had felt "very strongly my call to the ministry," since youth, she says, even going to a church college expecting to marry a clergyman as access into Christian service.

But instead, she married an engineer. They later divorced. With a degree in art and religious education, she edged around her life-long drive toward ministry by doing social work and teaching in a small church college.

But her early commitment "to follow Christ by working in Christ's church" kept tugging at her, she says. Although lately serving full time at the Fullerton church, she couldn't be ordained until getting that seminary degree.

"It just happened we finished seminary at the same time," she says.

Apparently they "both started listening at the same time," says the Rev. Ann Updegraff-Spleth of Indianapolis, a denominational vice president, who gave the sermon at the ordination service.

"In practical significance to the church," she says, "the ordination says to everyone that God calls at different points of life, and it's never too late to respond to that call in a new way."

The denomination, which has ordained women since 1888, has 721 women clergy, 12 percent of its total of 6,102 clergy. Only one mainline denomination has a bigger percentage, the United Church of Christ.

Few Aliens Are Seeking Amnesty

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two months into an unprecedented one-year amnesty offer for illegal aliens, only a fraction of the estimated 3 million eligible people have come forward and applied, federal figures show.

By the end of June, 204,000 illegal aliens had applied for temporary legal status, the Immigration and Naturalization Service said.

"This lack of participation is not only unfortunate, since it means that many aliens are not taking advantage of an extraordinary opportunity, but it also has the potential to jeopardize the entire legalization program," Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., said in releasing the report Thursday.

Legalization, or amnesty, was part of comprehensive immigration reforms approved by Congress last fall after a decade of compromise. The program, which began May 5, offers illegal aliens who can prove they arrived here before Jan. 1, 1982, a chance to leave the shadows and get on the track toward citizenship. The offer is good until next May.

Schumer said he was concerned about speculation that the 107 INS offices opened specifically to handle legalization would be scaled back because applications were dribbling in.

But INS spokesman Duke Austin said, "There's been no scaling back that I know of. We've said we might have to adjust some of our resources. When we've got people waiting in line in Houston and nobody showing up in Brooklyn, you might have to talk about realigning your resources."

He said there was no proposal to close any offices, but that hours and staff at the slower offices might be reallocated to the busier offices. He said, for example, that no applications are received for days at the Portland, Maine, office while INS offices in the southern border states are swamped. Most of the illegal aliens are clustered in California, Texas and Florida.

"There's no massive reorganization of the program," Austin said.

Austin also said there are no financial problems with the legalization program, as Schumer suggested. The program is funded totally with fees from the applicants, who pay $185 per person. The INS has collected $32.5 million thus far, Austin said, "That's where we expected to be at this time."

Many hundreds of thousands more applications are believed to be held by voluntary agencies named by the government to help the undocumented fill out applications. Fewer than 10 percent of the applications thus far have come from the voluntary agencies, Austin said.

According to Schumer's report, the Catholic Church, the largest such organization, has thousands of applications in the pipeline but not yet filed, including 300,000 in Los Angeles; 4,400 in Dallas; 5,000 in Houston.

The voluntary agencies have been concerned about some still-unresolved questions regarding the amnesty program, including whether families with some members who don't qualify will be divided and just how many documents an alien needs to prove his case.

The government, however, said boxes of documents aren't necessary.

Austin said the INS, based on the numbers of applications distributed, is concerned that agencies are not bringing forward large numbers of people who should be taking advantage of the program.

"We're trying to tell them, hey, maybe you're going too far with documentation," he said.

RE-ELECTED — Mary Hatwood Futrell, an Alexandria, Va., business teacher, has been re-elected to a third term as president of the National Education Association. NEA Adopts Proposal Calling For AIDS Programs In Schools

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
AP Education Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The nation's biggest teachers union is calling for comprehensive AIDS education and prevention programs in every school throughout the country.

Such programs should include frank instruction "about prevention options, including abstinence and medically accepted protective devices," says the resolution adopted overwhelmingly Thursday by nearly 8,000 delegates to the annual convention of the National Education Association.

Today, Mary Hatwood Futrell faced only token opposition in her bid for a third two-year term as president of the 1.86-million member organization.

Futrell, a 47-year-old Alexandria, Va., business teacher, was challenged by San Diego substitute teacher Clarence Sevier Overstreet Jr., who said his real purpose in running was to free Futrell to run for president of the United States.

The sponsor of the AIDS resolution was Massachusetts Teacher Association President Nancy J. Finkelstein.

"We as educators have a responsibility not only to teach students how to succeed, but to teach them how to survive," she said.

Democratic presidential hopefuls Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri, former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt and the Rev. Jesse Jackson met with the teachers at receptions Thursday night.

In her keynote address at the start of the four-day meeting, Futrell predicted that all candidates will "try to pose as our best friends."

"But we can't let any of them generalize or temporize about the tough issues we face," she said. "What are their specific programs to deal with student pregnancy, student failure, student despair?"

Futrell said she invited the Republican candidates to the convention, but none responded. The NEA plans to endorse political candidates in December.

The NEA leader drew cheers and a standing ovation when she said teachers in 1988 "are going to war ... for a better future for the children of America" by replacing Ronald Reagan "with the first education president."

In other action:

— Delegates urged school boards to ban student possession or use of tobacco on school grounds, but rejected an amendment frowning on teachers smoking at school.

— The convention endorsed Futrell's plan to devote nearly $10 million in union dues over the next five years to build an endowment for the NEA's National Foundation for the Improvement of Education.

Israelis Raid Villa

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Four Israeli warplanes today raided a villa housing families of leftist militias in east Lebanon's Syrian-policed Bekaa Valley. Police said 13 people, including 10 civilians, were wounded.

Police and the Israeli military command in Tel Aviv identified the target as a base of the Syrian Social Nationalist Party militia, but a reporter at the scene said the jets fired 16 rockets into the two-story villa nearby. He said three militiamen, three women and five children were among the injured.

The attack occurred at 12:20 p.m. near the Christian village of Ammiq, 20 miles east of Beirut. It was the 19th Israeli air raid into Lebanon this year.

The stone building, owned by Information Minister Joseph Skaff, was heavily damaged in the attack, as were six cars parked nearby. The nearby base, surrounded by pine woods, was not hit, according to the reporter.

Ambulances evacuated the wounded to hospitals in the market town of Chtoura, the reporter said.

Internal Bickering Disrupts Consumer Safety Panel

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Consumer Product Safety Commission, created 15 years ago to protect Americans from unsafe goods, today finds itself bogged down by internal bickering, budget cuts and criticism from Congress and the consumer movement.

As it faces what is potentially the most costly safety recall of its history, the controversial all-terrain vehicles, the commission is still reeling from a year-long battle over its chairmanship.

Once criticized as a national nanny, the commission now faces opponents who say that it has become so ineffective that it may be best to restructure it, or combine it with some other government bureaucracy.

The current controversy involves ATVs, three- and four-wheel recreational power cycles that have been blamed for hundreds of deaths and thousands of injuries in the last few years.

The commission spent nearly two years and $2 million holding hearings around the nation to collect information on these vehicles, and the resulting debate has helped focus the spotlight on the agency.

But that glare of publicity also has illuminated an operation staggered by battles among its commissioners, shrunken by budget cuts and facing sharp criticism for inaction in dealing with hazards.

"Quite frankly, I am appalled by your attempts to undermine and frustrate the decision of a majority of the commission on the ATV enforcement matter," Commissioner Anne Graham said in a June 3 memo to CPSC Chairman Terrence M. Scanlon.

She criticized Scanlon's transfer of staff lawyers away from the ATV case, replacing them with lawyers she considers less experienced on that particular question.

"While I recognize and respect your right to dissent and otherwise express your views, you do not have the right to use your authority as chairman to refuse to implement or frustrate a majority decision simply because you disagree," she wrote in the memo.

Scanlon has responded to a House subcommittee that his aim was not to delay action, but to strengthen the agency team dealing with the issue.

He said the transfers placed more senior lawyers on the ATV team, along with management people who know the issue well.

Such internal battles have become common at CPSC.

Indeed, just operating the commission has become a stormy sea, a situation complicated by the fact that all three serving commissioners have had a taste of the chairmanship.

Both Graham and Commissioner Carol Dawson served stints as acting chairman during Scanlon's prolonged confirmation battle.

He served as acting chairman for a year after being nominated to the job by President Reagan, then had to relinquish the post when the Senate failed to confirm him within that time.

The confirmation was delayed after critics charged that Scanlon had misused his office, but he was eventually confirmed after the General Accounting Office found no evidence of criminal wrongdoing.

Once he resumed the reins, though, disputes arose promptly over operating the agency.

Staff appointments, priorities, general policy and even whether to include toy manufacturers in a Christmas safety press conference have divided the commissioners.

One of the most basic disputes arose over the mere location of the commission. Graham and Dawson overruled Scanlon, after lengthy haggling, moving the agency out of a downtown Washington building to the Maryland suburbs.

That struggle was protracted by Scanlon's back troubles, which forced him to miss several meetings at which the location and other disputes were to be discussed.

Under the law, the commission is supposed to have five members, and three are required to hold a legal meeting. Two vacancies exist, however, and budget cuts have effectively removed those two posts.

The three-member quorum rule remains, however, meaning that all of the commissioners have to be present to transact business. Scanlon's absence effectively halted commission meetings for a time.

Graham and Dawson have appealed to Congress to reduce the quorum requirement to just two members. Scanlon, aware of his minority status, responds that a two-member quorum would be acceptable only if one of the two is the chairman.

Critics, including former Chairman Nancy Harvey Steorts, have suggested doing away with the commission system altogether and replacing it with a single administrator.

Former Commissioner Stuart M. Statler agreed, commenting that "today, there is a vacuum of responsible leadership in the position of CPSC chairman. As a result, the agency is beset by inertia, ill will and infighting."

Scanlon, who rarely found himself in agreement with Statler when the two served on the agency together, also supports the single administrator idea. But he also defends the current agency, contending that it is getting the job done.

Sen. Albert Gore, D-Tenn., isn't so sure, saying the commission's "failure to take swift, decisive action" raises questions about the current organization.

Some members of Congress have even suggested closing down the commission and transferring its duties to other parts of government, such as the Food and Drug Administration.

Meanwhile, the battle over all-terrain vehicles continues to dominate the commission.

A recall of the popular vehicles could cost industry as much as $2 billion, according to some estimates.

Citing more than 700 fatalities and nearly 300,000 injuries requiring hospital treatment since 1980, the commission voted last December to ask industry to halt sales of the small ATV's designed for children.

Later, the commission voted to list the smaller ATVs as an imminent hazard and to ask the Justice Department to initiate legal action which could lead to a recall of the smaller, child-sized ATVs. The Justice Department has not yet acted on the request.

Rep. James Florio, D-N.J., said the commission should have initiated action on its own when the Justice Department failed to react immediately.

And he was highly critical of meetings between government lawyers and the industry.

"I fear there may be an attempt to negotiate away part of the relief voted by the commission," Florio said.

The safety commission has "shirked its responsibility, has dragged its feet and acquiesced to industry's timetable for the development of a voluntary standard," Mary Ellen Fise of the Consumer Federation of America told a recent House hearing on the ATV issue.

And Dr. Mark D. Widome of the American Academy of Pediatrics expressed "dismay" that the vehicles are still being sold.

"How many more children must we see die, must we see suffer brain injury or permanent paralysis before measures are taken ... ATVs are not safe," Widome told the subcommittee.

"This is one industry where I am very disappointed in the progress" of developing voluntary safety standards, Scanlon has said.

He voted against taking legal action against the manufacturers, instead advocating voluntary safety standards, contending that they speed the process.

Government-ordered recalls and other regulations lead to lawsuits which can delay safety innovations for years, Scanlon contends. Thus, he sought to involve the ATV manufacturers in safety programs including the request that they voluntarily stop selling the products designed for youngsters.

But the industry has rejected the commission's request that it halt sales of small all-terrain vehicles, Scanlon said, and has not developed the hoped-for safety standards and training programs for riders.

Alan Isley of the industry's Specialty Vehicle Institute of America contends that ATVs are safe when ridden properly.

IN RETIREMENT — A wood fishing boat, placed in retirement among weeds and cattails on the banks of the Perquimans River in Hertford, has reached a stage of deterioration where the chipped paint has acquired a speckled patina of creams, white and faded red. A newer, enclosed pontoon pleasure craft is berthed behind the deserted boat. (Reflector Photo by Jerry Raynor)

Carters' Hometown Awaits Big Day When The Tourists Return

By DAVID SIMPSON
Associated Press Writer

PLAINS, Ga. (AP) — While Jimmy and Rosalynn Carter promote a book on how they put the past behind them after leaving the White House, their hometown of Plains is a place where the world of politics doesn't seem to have turned since 1976.

"Betty Ford, start packing. The Carters are coming," proclaims a button in Hugh Carter's antique store.

The store, like the service station then owned by Billy Carter, a small-town block away, was a folk landmark during the height of the national interest in the peanut farmer-turned-president.

Carter's 1980 defeat quickly cut the flow of tourists to Plains, and Hugh Carter, a cousin of the president, does not expect much of the increasing pre-election interest to rub off on the small southwest Georgia town.

"That's presidential politics. When you're up, you're up. When you're down, you're down," he said.

But Hugh Carter is encouraged by a plan to make parts of Plains a national historic area, and tourism officials think some Democrats in Atlanta for their 1988 national convention will make the 3½-hour drive to Plains.

Tourism already appears to be improving. The state-run visitors' center outside Plains saw a steep drop in the early 1980s, but counted 91,539 tourists in 1986, up 13.6 percent from 1985.

Early figures for this year are running 8 percent ahead of the 1986 pace.

Still, it's a far cry from the glory years.

"We used to have 30,000 people a day in here," said Hugh Carter. "... We had a lot of excitement going on. It wasn't anything to meet somebody like Tom Brokaw out on the street."

In their new book, "Everything to Gain," Jimmy and Rosalynn Carter acknowledge they had doubts about returning to a Plains no longer filled with political excitement. Their daughter, Amy, then 13, had been moved away from Plains at age 3 when her father was elected governor and told them, "You may be from the country, but I'm not. I've been raised in the city."

But the Carters decided to return to their south Georgia home and eventually sent Amy to boarding school in Atlanta.

Their home, the only one they have ever owned, is off-limits to visitors. A fence surrounds it, and the Secret Service enforces security.

The Carters, however, remain visible in Plains. Hugh Carter posts a sign in the window of his store announcing when his cousin will be teaching Sunday School at Maranatha Baptist Church. "You are invited," the sign says.

A recent turnout of 250 people forced the class to move into the church sanctuary, Hugh Carter said. He is the substitute teacher, but said Jimmy Carter handles the duty 80 percent of the time.

City Clerk Pamela May said she sees the Carters about once a month, often as they bicycle through town.

"One (tourist) couple asked me, what do I call him? Do I call him Mr. President? I said I just call him Jimmy," she said.

Most tourists who come now are Carter fans, giving Hugh Carter $1 each for bumper stickers saying, "Don't give me hell. I voted for Carter."

An Ohio couple signed the guest register at Plains' combination welcome center-city hall with the note, "We voted for you."

"A lot of them just love him," Ms. May said. "A lot of them say he was too caring and too compassionate ... and he got a bad deal. But they're all crazy about him."

Grace and Buck Jackson, who opened the Plains Bed and Breakfast Inn last November, said their guests linger hours at the breakfast table to ask about the Carter family and Plains.

"I know a lot of (tourists) said when they got to Atlanta, they saw on the map how close it was and they just had to come," Ms. May said.

Hugh Carter is optimistic that Congress will approve the historic site, which would include museums at sites such as the railroad depot that served as Carter's colorful campaign headquarters.

"Then, Plains will be like a national park," he said. He said that should bring in more tourists, but he answered emphatically when asked if he would like a return to Plains' heyday.

"No. ... I mean it was too much," he said, citing the daily traffic jams around Plains' handful of streets. "We merchants enjoyed it, but we had a lot of problems with it."

Tennessee Twins Sling Hash, Mix 'Aigs With Yokes' At Their Cafe

By STEVE BAKER
Associated Press Writer

CLINTON, Tenn. (AP) — About 2.6 million biscuits ago, twins Hassie Seviars and Lassie Disney asked each other what they were going to do with their lives.

The answer they came up with, the Twins Cafe in downtown Clinton, has them rising at 2 a.m. six days a week for a grueling, 14-hour workday that both believe has kept them sharp and productive at age 85.

Their wit and cooking has a steady stream of regulars dropping in for Hassie's and Lassie's authentic Southern cooking: biscuits hot from the oven any time of day, greens with your meat and made-to-order pie for dessert.

"When I retire I'm going to slide a chair over by the front door and tell 'em to serve themselves and pay me on the way out," said Hassie. "I wouldn't know what to do just sitting at home."

Lassie, who confesses to being a couple of minutes older than her sister, agrees that hard work and the steady flow of new people has kept her independent.

"It's keeping active that's got me where I am today," Lassie said.

The twins faced a familiar predicament for many East Tennesseans in the 1950s. New technology at the local mill robbed them of their job sewing toes in women's hose and neither knew where the next dollar would come from.

For a while, Lassie drove ambulances for a funeral home and Hassie helped out in a restaurant, but neither was a job they could count on for long. So the twins opened the Twins Cafe in 1953 with an $800 loan.

Thirty-four years later, Hassie and Lassie are still at it, slinging hash and serving quick-witted retorts to farmers in bib overalls, the courthouse crowd and moms and daughters taking a break from downtown shopping.

"They're a vanishing breed," said granddaughter Frances Buck. "They're classic Southern women: tough as nails but very compassionate to the needy. They don't miss church but can tell a bawdy joke with the best of us."

The Twins Cafe, where the batter is stirred that morning and the biscuits are always warm from the oven, has become a Clinton landmark on Market Street.

The food is authentic Southern fare: "anything that's good for you" with a dose of lard or gravy added, says Lassie.

"I come for the world's best coconut cream pie," said David Stewart, the attorney for Anderson County. Sometimes the pie is made to order, the sisters say.

"I've taken orders for more pie and hat to go in the kitchen and fix it while they wait," said Lassie, who believes she preceded her sister into this world but won't be bothered with that kind of detail.

By 3 o'clock every morning, except Sundays, the twins open the door to their four-booth luncheonette and begin making biscuits and the locally renowned coconut cream pies.

By 3:30 the first customers, policemen and the overnight shift from the nearby Armstrong Rubber Co., are tapping on the window.

Twelve hours later, lunch and breakfast are over and the twins head to their separate homes. "We've worked together ever since we were girls," Lassie said. "It's been 34 years at the Twins Cafe, 12 hours a day. Sometimes I'll go home and look at a mirror and think to myself, 'Gosh, you again?'" Being an identical twin has brought the usual cases of mistaken identities. Lassie tells a story on Hassie disputing a preacher's word when he insisted she'd served him breakfast when, in reality, it had been Lassie.

If not for the yellowed name tags they wear, the confusion might slow down service. Only the regulars can tell them apart, but everyone in town knows of Hassie and Lassie, said Mrs. Buck.

Despite their age, the two women have remarkably few health problems. Both have had breast surgery, broken arms and cataract operations.

"They put us in the same room and operated on the same eye so they wouldn't get confused," Hassie said.

As remarkable as their schedule — 3 a.m. to 3 p.m. and sometimes later if customers are still sitting — Hassie and Lassie can match wits with any of their customers.

"I might be Lassie," Hassie said of the twins' Aug. 16, 1901 birthdate. "I know I was there but they didn't put name tags on you back then."

When asked if eggs come with real country ham, Lassie often shoots back, "When was the last time you saw a pig raised in the city?"

And Hassie deflects complaints that the eggs are too small, explaining she only cooks breakfast. "I didn't lay it!" she said with a laugh.

The menus, typed by Lassie after trips to the grocery store, offer "aigs and bakin'" for breakfast and "vele kuhltil" and "vegutibles."

At the bottom is the message: "Thankyualeplesecaleaginsunethatsalefolkes."

Lassie says it "gives people something to figure out while they're waiting for lunch. I just felt like putting it there. That's all."

Harlem's Building Boom May Bring Invasion By Whites

By PETER ALAN HARPER
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Harlem, for generations the Promised Land for blacks seeking a better life, is facing a new wave of immigrants: whites moving up-town for scarce housing.

The cost of buying or renting in Manhattan has risen steadily for years, and neighborhoods once ignored by the upwardly mobile have been swept up in wave after wave of gentrification.

Now that trend has swept so far north along the Upper West Side that at Central Park's northern boundary a brand new condominium, Towers on the Park, is set to accept residents.

"Harlem is on the move," said Eugene Webb, chairman of one of Harlem's largest real estate companies, Webb and Brooker.

"Why? Land. You're going to run out of land. Everybody wants a little land. The only land left is in Harlem. That's why it's going to be rebuilt."

At Harlem's main western intersection, 110th Street and Frederick Douglass Boulevard, 2,200 units will be available in June 1988 when Towers on the Park is completed. Prices will range from $60,000, under income guidelines, to $200,000 or more, depending upon the marketplace.

On the other side of the park, at Fifth Avenue between 107th and 108th streets, the Daughters of Israel building is being turned into a condominium with a penthouse selling for $500,000.

"That's how real estate values are changing in Harlem. They're sold out," said Donald Cogsville, president and chief operating officer of the Harlem Urban Development Corp.

Apartment vacancy rates in Manhattan are under 2 percent. In 15 years, real estate barriers have tumbled; push addresses used to stop at 72nd Street, then 86th, then 96th. New buildings and expensive renovations were completed on Broadway, on Amsterdam Avenue, on side streets.

On and on it goes. "It's paradise over there now," Webb said of once-declining West Side neighborhoods. "The same thing's going to happen in Harlem."

Foremost among those moving into Harlem, he thinks, will be young professionals.

"The yuppie comes to where the action is. He will creep further and further north," Webb said, energetically pushing up from his desk at his central Harlem office. "These people are going to move into Harlem."

Ten years ago, when New York was shaking off its fiscal crisis, Webb might have sounded like the wildest of speculators. But anyone who's watched as Upper West Side shot-and-draught bars and mom-and-pop groceries have been transformed into fashionable nightspots and boutiques knows he's probably right.

Harlem, however, poses unique circumstances. The gentrification process in such Manhattan neighborhoods as Soho, Tribeca and Yorkville pushed out the poor to make room for wealthier people. Harlem boasts longtime community and political clout that will be used to try to regulate redevelopment.

"Whatever development we have in Harlem should be part of a comprehensive program that looks at many issues besides building, such as jobs, housing, education and recreational facilities," said Manhattan Borough President David Dinkins. "I also maintain that the development, housing, jobs, profitable opportunities that result should be for the people who already live in Harlem."

U.S. Rep. Charles Rangel echoed Dinkins' view, adding that he was not about to allow outsiders to pluck the community in which he grew up.

And Noreen Clark-Smith, chairwoman of Community Board 10, which oversees central Harlem, said she had been instrumental in seeing there was affordable housing in Towers on the Park — and will continue to do so in other projects.

Harlem's 1980 population of 466,000 was about 49 percent black, 34 percent Hispanic, 14 percent white and the rest Asian and other.

Development is sure to mean a larger white population, and it appears that whites will be most likely to benefit financially from any building boom.

"Right now, Harlem is going to be developed by white people," Webb said. "I don't think we have the resources to go into big development."

Blacks live in Harlem but have never owned it, and redevelopment is forcing even the best-backed black entrepreneurs to the side streets.

A walking tour of Harlem winds past boarded-up buildings, tree-lined residences, expensive new co-ops and graffiti-scarred tenements. But buildings that sold for just a few thousand dollars five to 10 years ago are selling in the hundreds of thousands today. In 1980, the average property sales price was $140,000; in mid-1985, it was $450,000.

And while big building might seem to signal big changes, there's a lot more going on. "It's the smaller stuff, the renovation of brownstones beyond the headlines, that's helping in the rejuvenation of Harlem," said Ron Norwood, director of development at Webb and Brooker.

The current development is just the latest of Harlem's many metamorphoses.

Harlem, the Dutch village, took over an Indian village in 1658. Gen. George Washington had his headquarters north of there. In 1873 the village was annexed by New York City and became its first residential and quite fashionable suburb.

Starting in 1904, real estate agents engineered the migration of blacks into the area to take over rentals that had gone begging. Many homes were divided into apartments or rooms, rents were raised and a legacy of over-crowding and poor maintenance began.

In the 1920s, Harlem became known as the Capital of Black America. Downtown society came uptown to hear jazz and see shows at places like the Cotton Club, which excluded blacks.

But the Depression brought construction to a halt and building maintenance to an end. Ever since, Harlem's expanding population has pushed its traditional boundaries south of 110th Street and north of 155th Street.

These days, Webb wants to make sure blacks carve out some piece of the latest action "so people here will get the benefit of it, so the money won't flow right out of here."

Ex-Cop Cuts The Red Tape In N.Y. For Gun Licenses

By LARRY McSHANE
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — If your car engine's shot, call a mechanic. If you're planning a weekend blast, get a caterer. But if you care to carry a .44 Magnum around New York City, Stephen D'Andrilli is your man.

D'Andrilli, an ex-city cop, runs Guardian Group International, a business that caters to private citizens looking to cut through the red tape and own a handgun legally in the city.

"We are a service, the same way you pay an accountant to do your taxes, or you bring your shoes to the shoemaker for a new sole," said D'Andrilli.

Each year, hundreds of New Yorkers are turned down when they apply for handgun permits. In 1981, one of them was Bernhard Goetz, recently convicted on a weapons charge stemming from his 1984 shooting of four young men in a subway car.

"There are no more than a half-dozen localities in the country with tougher handgun laws," said Ted Lattanzio, director of state and local affairs for the National Rifle Association. "It's among the worst in the country."

At latest count, 60,439 permits had been issued, including 30,558 permits to carry a handgun and 22,301 permits allowing just target use. The rest were premise permits, allowing holders to keep a gun only at home or at a business.

One-third of pistol-packing New Yorkers are retired city police officers, according to Lt. Frank Heegan, commanding officer of the police department's License Processing Section.

D'Andrilli, who spent 15 years with the police department, has more than 2,000 clients, people seeking security in a city where 1,582 people were murdered in 1986. Almost 8 million people live in New York.

His clients range from corporate executives to an 83-year-old woman concerned about safety at home.

Customers' names are kept confidential, but D'Andrilli pulled out a five-inch thick computer printout, obtained from the city by pro-gun groups, listing all New York City handgun permit holders — and it included some high-profile names: among them, millionaire developer Donald Trump, New York Times publisher Arthur Ochs Sulzberger and television weatherman Frank Field.

There's a $100 non-refundable fee for a permit application and $33 for a fingerprint check, done by the FBI and the state police. There is also an annual $100 renewal fee.

Applicants must submit a birth certificate and proof of residence, Heegan said. The awarding of permits is handled entirely by the police department based only on its determination of the applicant's need. The process takes up to six months.

Total costs using D'Andrilli's service can add up to $2,400, but he said there is no charge unless the company can deliver at least a target permit for a handgun. Clients pay by the hour for Guardian Group's help.

The company gets complaints from groups such as the National Alliance Against Violence and the Coalition Against Handguns. D'Andrilli acknowledged, but he succinctly explained his clients' wish for a gun.

"They want protection. Isn't it reasonable?" D'Andrilli, 37, said in an interview in his East Village headquarters, an American flag prominently displayed behind his desk. "These are not people who want to shoot anybody — most of them never will."

He quoted Thomas Jefferson and George Washington on the right to bear arms and said, "Today it's the businessman with his pistol. Back then, it was the colonist with his musket."

He added: "Once you move out of the cities, it's very American to own a gun."

In New York, permits are required not only to own handguns but for rifles and shotguns as well. The latter licenses, however, are relatively easy to obtain.

Heegan denied the police were officially opposed to private citizens carrying handguns, a contention of some pro-gun groups. He was unable to give figures on the number of applicants rejected for permits, but D'Andrilli and a former official in the processing section estimated seven of 10 applicants are turned down.

The police also handle appeals. Guardian Group has a former city assistant district attorney on its staff to handle appeals and other legal matters.

D'Andrilli acknowledged any private citizen could go through the licensing process without any assistance from his company.

"If you would like to minimize the aggravation, anxieties and hassles you could endure, come to us," he said. "If not, I wish you lots of luck. And when you're denied, call me."

Burger Returns As 'Judge'

NEW YORK (AP) — Former Chief Justice Warren Burger is returning to the bench, this time as a judge in a student essay contest on the Constitution.

"We are particularly flattered by his interest in our program since he has been forced to turn down hundreds of similar requests from across the country," City Councilman Peter Vallone said Wednesday.

Burger is head of the Commission on the Bicentennial of the U.S. Constitution.

A total of $4,000 in college scholarships will be presented to the six winners in the Council-sponsored contest on Sept. 17, the anniversary of the signing of the Constitution.

The contest is open to junior high and high school students in the city's public schools.

Banyan trees usually sprout from seeds that animals have dropped into cracks in the branches of other trees, and their roots grow down from the host branches and into the ground, says National Geographic World.

Belated Independence

Despite what you have heard and read, America's independence was not declared on July 4th. Independence was actually declared two days earlier. On July 4th, the final draft of the Declaration of Independence was approved. However, that approval was not unanimous. The colony of New York did not agree to the Declaration until July 19. The official signing ceremony for the document took place August 2, 1776, but six members signed later.

DO YOU KNOW — Whose signature appears first on the Declaration of Independence?

THURSDAY'S ANSWER — Richard Lyng is Secretary of Agriculture.

Horoscope

From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY July 4

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Today is wonderful for celebrating the holiday. The daytime should be dedicated to picnics and family activities, while the evening should be given to unusual activities.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Today is perfect for returning to a place which you've always enjoyed. You'll have a fine time with an older friend.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Complete some important business matters before celebrating. Don't make it a late evening, you need rest.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Contact some friends you haven't seen for a while. It's important that you take no risks while driving today.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Make sure your home is in good shape before entertaining so there will be no bad impressions of you as a host.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): You're in a rut, so find some ways of adding excitement to your life. You may want to discuss plans for the future with your mate.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Financial advice for the future will be available while you're socializing today. Seek it out and use it to your benefit.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Handling ignored correspondence would be beneficial. Your present situation is comfortable, so stick with it.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): The evening will have the potential for much fun with your loved one. Many of your talents will be useful today.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Get together with interesting friends and go someplace where you'll all have a good time, but drive carefully.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Enjoy the holiday and show your patriotic spirit. Almost anything you attempt today can be handled quite easily.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): It's important that you arrive on time for appointments. You can realize nearly any wish today.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Trust your intuition today. Concentrate on being with and doing nice things for your mate to help your relationship.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he, or she, will have great talent at finely detailed and technological work. Your child may have a tendency to be a bit of a perfectionist, but will also have a good deal of patience. An innate ability for social grace and artistic ability are also indicated.

"The Stars impel; they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

The bidding:
South West North East
1 NT Dbl Rdbl Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ♦
Once upon a time a double of a one no trump opening bid, whether weak or strong, showed a balanced hand of some 16-19 points. The modern theory is that it should be used on a hand with which you expect to beat one no trump, such as the West hand on this deal from the trials to select the 1987 U.S. world championship team.

West was delighted when the final contract became one no trump doubled and redoubled. He diabolically led his fourth-best diamond, giving everyone at the table a glimmer of hope, but then he reeled off his eight tricks for a score of 600.

If West indeed has a hand that can defeat one no trump, it should not take a genius in the North seat to work out that the opening leader must have a strong diamond suit. His decision to redouble in that light had to be a death wish. The correct action is to bid two no trump, which creates a game force and asks the opening bidder to show his suits, starting with the cheapest. That would have resulted in the spade fit being uncovered.

At the other table South did not have the convenience of a weak no trump opening bid available, so he elected to pass. West opened one diamond and, after a takeout double by North, North-South duly arrived at four spades. After a diamond opening lead, declarer ruffed came to hand with the king of spades and ruffed a diamond. He then drew trumps and collected his five club tricks for a total of 11 tricks. With a bit more care, he could have taken a heart trick as well.

Gregory Peck Returns To Big Screen As President Who Ends N-Weapons

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Even though he's appearing in his first theatrical movie since 1978, the image of Gregory Peck is so indelible that he doesn't seem to have been gone at all.

Maybe that's because such classics as "Spellbound," "Twelve O'Clock High," "The Gunfighter," "Roman Holiday" and his Oscar-winning "To Kill a Mockingbird" repeatedly appear on television. Peck has also turned up in a few TV movies, "The Blue and the Gray" (as Abe Lincoln) and "The Scarlet and the Black" (as a Catholic priest).

"That was my colorful period," he said.

In his last film, Peck played one of his rare villains, a Nazi butcher like Josef Mengele in "The Boys From Brazil." In the current "Amazing Grace and Chuck," he's an American president who helps bring about an end to nuclear arms. He is pushed into it after a Montana schoolboy (Chuck) and a pro basketball star (Amazing Grace) initiate a worldwide demonstration against the nuclear bombs.

"It's a fantasy, a Capra fable for our times," the 71-year-old actor points out, "and it should be treated as such. It starts out with 'once upon a time' and ends with the words of Amazing Grace: 'But wouldn't it be nice?'"

"Some of the critics have taken it literally, and that's a mistake. The Variety reviewer really murdered us, and we've been playing catch-up ever since."

Peck has been doing his share of the hustle. Not especially fond of TV interviews, he nevertheless made the New York rounds. He also appeared at the Denver premiere and has attended screenings in Seattle and Columbia, Mo.

"I liked the script, and I liked what it had to say: that we're all entitled to have our opinions heard; we don't have to leave it up to those characters who are running things in Washington and Moscow," he said. "Because it involves the planet, it involves the next century, and it involves our grandchildren."

Peck was one of the international figures who assembled in Moscow earlier this year for a Soviet-organized conclave on world issues.

"Some people say that the forum was an operetta or an extravaganza, and we were the extras," he said. "I don't believe that. I believe that (Mikhail Gorbachev) staged the affair to convince the hardliners in the Politburo that he could bring a thousand distinguished people to Moscow. The movie stars got the most attention, but we were just a handful. All professions were represented."

"I think he was making a point to his unrelenting hardliners who say — as some in our government seem to say — that there is no way that we are ever going to reduce nuclear arms. Following that, what's left?"

Peck thought long and hard about how to interpret his role. He considered patterning it after recent presidents from Kennedy to Reagan, then decided to create his own president.

"I thought ... what's the use of laying in a Southern accent or doing somebody other than myself. Sometimes the best things you do are roles that are closest to yourself, instead a lot of fancy play-acting."

"In my imagination I took him through Berkeley. But instead of getting on the bus for New York and a career in the theater, as I did, I had him go on to take a Ph.D. in political science and a wide range of the humanities. Then I had him become president of the University of California at the early age of 43. I had him run for the U.S. Senate at 50 because he dared to think that the crucial issue is whether or not we'll be around for the 21st Century. After two terms in the Senate he got himself elected president."

Having portrayed two Presidents and one would-be (Douglas MacArthur), wouldn't the next step be for life to imitate art?

"Oh, come on!" he scoffed. "You sound like you're talking to Charlton Heston. I do have a stock answer: I never gave it a thought, even in my heart of hearts."

All the political talk started, he recalled in 1966, when Pat Brown was defeated for governor of California by Ronald Reagan. Conceding defeat, Brown suggested the Democrats should run Gregory Peck for senator.

"I started getting calls from all over the United States, from London and Paris. It stuck with me for years. Whenever I saw Pat Brown, I said, 'Thanks a lot for nothing!'"

In 1988, Peck will have served 45 years in the movie trade. In 1943 he came to Hollywood to appear in a Russian war story, "Days of Glory."

"I did the picture to pay off my debts," he recalled. "They offered me $1,000 a week for 10 weeks of work. I owed a lot of money to friends in New York, including my dentist, and $10,000 seemed awfully good to me."

"I went back to New York and did an Irwin Shaw play, then Darryl Zanuck offered me 'The Keys to the Kingdom,' so I came back here in 1944. I consider that the beginning of my film career. I'd like to forget 'Days of Glory.' Trouble is, the damned thing turns up on TV all the time."

Judge Takes Role Seriously

NEW YORK (AP) — Judge Joseph A. Wapner, whose television courtroom is seen by millions daily, says he has to take his role on "The People's Court" more seriously than if he were in a courtroom out of the spotlight.

"It puts a tremendous burden on me to try to exemplify what a good judge should be like and to try to enunciate what I consider the law to be," Wapner said in an interview published in the upcoming Parade magazine.

"You can't let sympathy invade your judgment," he said. "In most cases, I'm stricter about the law than I might be otherwise. I want to be sure the public has a perception of someone who's fair and reasonable and understanding, and who follows the law."

Wapner also said he keeps strict order in his courtroom.

"I won't allow any monkey business," he said. "This is a court, and I'm trying a case. If somebody comes in chewing gum, Rusty, my bailiff, goes over with a piece of paper and makes him take it out. If somebody is wearing a hat, he makes him take it off."

June Carter Cash: She Was Born To A Legend And Married Another

By JOE EDWARDS
Associated Press Writer
NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — It was seconds before the 1976 Country Music Association awards show.

Entertainer Jonny Cash, the show's host, stood nervously in the wings of the Grand Ole Opry House, where the live program was to be broadcast to millions. His wife, June, kissed him lightly, straightened his tie and calmly whispered: "You'll do fine."

It's been that way for 20 years: June Carter Cash, a descendant of one of the most famous families in country music, and a performer herself, was born to a legend and has helped maintain one.

"I've been a good helpmate," she says. "I chose to do that."

In 1967, before she was married to Cash, she stayed with him in his lakeside home and helped him with his pill addiction.

"We have survived it," she says. "It's harder to be related to a chemically dependent person than to be that person. The whole family gets affected. But I feel great about Johnny and I and all the kids."

They were married in 1968 after he proposed on stage during a concert before 5,000 people in London, Ontario.

The 57-year-old singer-songwriter has just written a book, "From the Heart." The collection of 44 brief recollections about her many adventures is published by Prentice Hall Press.

"I shared so many things I never meant to tell," she says. One part is the first public disclosure of the drug and alcohol abuse by her daughter, Rosey, born during her marriage to Rip Nix, her second of three husbands.

"Rosey said to go ahead and write about it," Mrs. Cash said. "She said maybe it will help somebody."

With this project out of the way, she is moving ahead with a movie she's just finished writing, "The Wildwood Flower."

Taken from the name of a famous Carter Family song, the film is set in 1932 and is about surviving the Depression. She's already contacted Academy Award winner Robert Duvall and singers Emmylou Harris and Rita Coolidge about appearing in it.

"The Wildwood Flower" also is the name of a forthcoming album by Mrs. Cash, her daughter, Carlene, and her sisters, Helen and Anita. Her husband also does some singing on it.

"I'm thrilled with it," she says. "It's good old country music from scratch. I see tears in some faces in the crowd when I sing these songs. It takes them back to home, family and grandma."

With all of her projects, Mrs. Cash keeps her life focused on her family. "I think Johnny and I are happier than ever before. We've had wonderful years together and some pain. We've prayed a lot and God helped us a lot," she says.

She describes her husband as "probably the most unusual, fine, unselfish person I've known. He's different. I think the word is 'power.' There's a lot of power to him. I've seen him on shows with people with a No. 1 record or a lot of No. 1 records, but when John walks on that stage, the rest of them might as well leave."

"He's basically shy, but his shyness makes people love him... If there are 500 people in a room and he walks in, it becomes a different place. He demands (commands) attention."

The original Carter family, from the mountains in southwestern Virginia, was A.P. Carter, his wife, Sara, and his sister-in-law, Maybelle. One of their most famous songs was "Will the Circle Be Unbroken?"

June, known for duets with Johnny such as "Jackson," was Maybelle's daughter.

"I think the Carter family was the real backbone to early country music," Mrs. Cash says. "I don't think you can listen to eight bars of country music without hearing their influence. They wrote and collected a lot of melodies in those mountains; they would be lost if they hadn't put them down."

HELPMATE — June Carter Cash, a descendant of the most famous family in country music, has been the encouraging, reassuring force at husband Johnny Cash's side for 20 years. The singer-songwriter has written a book about her own experiences. (AP Laserphoto)

Sheens Surprised At Acting Dynasty

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — No one was more surprised than Martin Sheen to discover he had parented an acting dynasty.

Martin and Janet Sheen are parents of hot new stars Charlie Sheen, 21 ("Platoon"), and Emilio Estevez, 23 ("The Breakfast Club"). Also coming along are Renee, 20, who appeared in the TV movie, "The Room Upstairs," and Ramon, 23, who recently made the movie, "Turn Around," in Norway. Emilio and Renee have chosen to retain their father's real name, Estevez.

"I was probably the last one to be aware that all of our offspring had become professional actors and that a couple of them have become enormously successful," said the 46-year-old Martin Sheen.

"I can't figure out why they happen to be in the same profession. I supposed they had had a bellyful of it when I dragged them halfway around the world on various locations throughout their growing-up years. I would have thought they would do anything but be in the movies or want to be actors."

Papa hasn't exactly been idle. He is appearing this summer in "The Believers," an occult horror tale of black magic and human sacrifices in midtown Manhattan. The director, John Schlesinger ("Midnight Cowboy"), is the principal reason Sheen did the film.

The actor had come close to the genre with "The Little Girl Who Lives Down the Lane," with a young Jody Foster, and the Stephen King shocker, "The Dead Zone." But he had never gone with all-out horror.

"I was just ending the run in a play in London about this time last year," Sheen recalled, "and Mr. Schlesinger came to see me backstage with a script. I knew before I read it that I would do it if he wanted me to."

"After I read it, I told him I think there's a better script in your head than what's on the page. He smiled, and I knew he felt that way. The first thing he asked me was: 'Are You Catholic?' I said yes. 'Are you a practicing Catholic?' I said yes. I didn't know how that would be important to the piece. But there was a scene in which I come back to the Catholic church, and I think he wanted that to be authentic."

"The Believers" was shot in and around New York with a cast that includes Helen Shaver, Robert Loggia, Richard Masur and Jimmy Smits. Sheen believes that his faith in Schlesinger was fulfilled.

"John knew what he was doing all the time," Sheen said. "He told us never to look over our shoulders and never try to find motivation. The audience is that much further ahead of us, he said, and if we spent our time trying to figure things out, we'd be long gone."

Unlike his own children, Sheen grew up far from the bright lights, in Dayton, Ohio. "I came from a large family — nine boys and one girl," he said. "My parents were both immigrants, my father from Spain and my mother from Ireland. My mother died when all of us were very young; I was only 11. So we didn't have the unity with our parents that we would have wanted. My dad was a very honest, very hardworking man; frankly, he was the best man I ever knew."

"He was never less than honest with us, a straight shooter. He didn't want me to become an actor; he wanted me to go to college. But I learned more about acting from that man than from anyone else. He was the shyest man; he'd hardly speak outside the house because he had a thick accent. At home he was the greatest storyteller I've ever known. I still miss him."

Movie Season Off With Bang

L.A. Times-Washington Post

If the lines seem long at the local multiplex these days, there's a reason. The summer movie season has gotten off to a rollicking good start, prompting speculation over whether 1987 will be a record-breaking year at the box office.

Thanks to "Beverly Hills Cop II," "The Untouchables," "The Witches of Eastwick" and other popular entries, theaters are pulling in an adult audience this summer as well as the usual batch of teenagers on vacation from school.

They've helped the movie industry enjoy the third-best June on record, according to Art Murphy, an analyst for Variety, the entertainment-trade publication. That, together with a strong pre-summer season, has brought in $1.9 billion at the box office so far this year. "The worst that can happen is that this will be the second-best year ever," Murphy said.

The year to beat is 1984, when movies sold $4.03 billion worth of tickets. Last year came in second, with $250 million less. But this year so far is $230 million ahead of last year's pace, Murphy said, and many potentially big summer films are still to come.

One reason for optimism is the return of the adult audience.

"We know the movie audience is getting older, and we're perceptive to that change," said Barry Reardon, Warner Brothers' president of distribution. "We all saw how 'Prizzi's Honor' did a couple years ago, and we're not afraid of making R movies."

In recent summers, grownups often found themselves with little choice as theaters pandered to teenagers. In 1984, for example, the big June movies were all rated PG or PG-13, including "Ghostbusters," "Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom," "Star Trek III" and "Gremlins."

But the four top summer movies so far this year are all rated R. The leader, "Beverly Hills Cop II," has made $118 million in six weeks of release.

"Lots and lots of people we may not consider designers have contributed to this landscape," he said. "Farmers and builders and just plain folk, people not even involved in building."

The five programs in the series cover five principal topics: the house, the workplace, the street, the land and monuments and public places.

"The House" explores the evolution of the American house, which "is much more than a house — it is a home, a sacred hearth," Kostof tells viewers. "It is the reward for hard work, the proof of one's social worthiness, the promise of security."

Kostof traces the house's roots to Colonial Williamsburg and shows its most fantastic development at San Simeon, William Randolph Hearst's palatial California estate.

In "The Workplace," Kostof looks at mills, factories and office buildings. In his 1986 Public Broadcasting Service series, "Pride of Place," architect Robert A.M. Stern evaluated skyscrapers in personal terms, describing them as romantic, confident symbols of urbanity and progress.

To Kostof, however, skyscrapers are also the result of impersonal forces such as the rise in city land values and the development of steel and the elevator.

In "The Street," Kostof tours the nation's network of roads and streets, which he calls "our finest national effort."

"Always, the road came first," he says. "Before there were houses, there had to be access; before there was political order, there had to be a pattern to inscribe it within; before there could be cities, a blueprint of streets had to be laid out."

In "Public Places and Monuments," Kostof looks at the New England common and the courthouse square, but finds in the nation's statehouses and urban parks the greatest expression of "the public realm."

Such places and spaces are the designer's greatest challenge, he says, because "it takes a lot of courage to presume to speak for all of us." As evidence, he cites the controversy over the Vietnam War Memorial in Washington, D.C.

Finally, in "The Shape of the Land," Kostof shows how Americans literally redesigned their landscape: cutting through mountains, diverting rivers, clearing forests, draining wetlands, digging beneath the Earth's crust.

Farmers covered much of the nation with a great, orderly patchwork of field and pasture, and the federal government made a design decision when it founded the National Park System.

The idea for the series dates back to 1980, when the National Endowment for the Arts announced a challenge grant. Work on the series, which was produced by Guggenheim Productions and WTTW of Chicago, did not begin until 1983, and took three years to complete.

"We all aged a little bit," said director Werner Schumann. Kostof's beard, in fact, seems to vary from episode to episode in thickness and color. "We considered calling the series 'The Graying of the Host,'" Schumann said.

The first program airs Sept. 28, and the others on following Mondays.

Red Skelton Scoffs At Comics' Choice Of 4-Letter Words

By ROBERT MACY
Associated Press Writer
LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Red Skelton, America's classic clown for five decades, leaned forward so his message could be heard above the clatter of dishes at the swank cafe.

"Today's comics use four-letter words as a shortcut to thinking," Skelton said, toying with a bowl of soup. "They're shooting for that big laugh and it becomes a panic thing, using four-letter words to shock people."

"You'll laugh, but when you leave and your dignity returns, you say 'Why?' I know more dirty jokes than any guy who ever lived. But I don't do them on stage. I have too much respect for my audience."

"It's quite rewarding to hear laughter without the use of four-letter words. I'd rather have people say I'm hokey than have them say a year from now, 'That was the comic who did all those dirty jokes.'"

Skelton became a national institution on radio in the 1930s and ran a record 20 consecutive years on television before his program was yanked in 1971. Today, at 73, he is still tickling America's funny bone with 75 concert dates a year plus videos and TV reruns of his old shows.

The passing of time has proven Skelton's comic genius. At a recent performance at Caesars Palace, where the top names in entertainment take the stage, Skelton received a standing ovation before he had even delivered his first line — something very rare in Las Vegas showrooms.

Skelton mesmerized his audience during the one-man, two-hour show. He kept asking them if they were tired, always drawing a chorus of "nos."

"For 45 years I came into your living rooms," he told the audience. "Since I've been 10 years old the theater has been my only home. Tonight you're in my living room. I just want to make sure I do everything I can to make sure you are comfortable and enjoy yourselves."

Later, during an interview, Skelton joked about his warm reception.

"The first three rows are wired. We hit the switch and everyone jumps up. Besides, the show runs so long that people want to get up and stretch their legs."

Skelton admits Tuesday nights — when his show ran — are still tough on him, after decades as a staple in America's home entertainment menu.

"Our show was never out of the Top 15 on radio or TV," Skelton said. "When CBS canceled us they said we weren't reaching the buying public, the college age. They said we were reaching children and the elderly, but not the buying power. They forgot the little kids were going to grow into buying power. They're the ones coming to see me now."

"I've had kids at my college shows come up to me and cry, saying I'd been important in their lives because they remembered growing up, watching or listening to me with their families."

Still, he wouldn't like to return to television on a permanent basis. "I couldn't put up with these young people trying to tell me what to do; trying to tell me what was funny."

Skelton shifts from serious to humorous as he recalls a new joke for his act: "My folks didn't like me. My mother used to rent me out as a speed bump."

However, just the opposite is true. Skelton was born July 18, 1913, two months after his father died. His mother raised four boys, working as a cleaning woman and elevator operator in an Indianapolis office building. She taught him an appreciation for art, which evolved into his second love, and she sparked his interest in comedy by providing tickets to vaudeville shows on her meager salary.

At the age of 10 Skelton left home to join a medicine show traveling through the South and Midwest. "Mom used to say I didn't run away from home; my destiny just caught up with me at an early age."

The comic paid his professional dues in tent shows, minstrels, circuses, burlesque, showboats and vaudeville before moving into radio, television and motion pictures.

Two years after his show was canceled he headed out for the college campuses he continues to play throughout the United States. He often donates the money he makes to student projects.

Skelton stays active on the club circuit, too, as he wraps engagements at Caesars Palace in Las Vegas and Caesars Tahoe in South Lake Tahoe, where he appears several times a year. Ahead are engagements in Atlantic City, Evansville, Ind., Owensville and Paducah, Ky., and Chicago.

In mid-July, he celebrates his annual birthday party in Honolulu, which will bring together art connoisseurs who have paid $25,000 to $81,000 for his original oil paintings.

The paintings are big business for Skelton, who began his art career at the age of 5 by painting faces on old round-topped clothes pins. Today, he estimates the sale of his lithograph reproductions alone annually tops $2.5 million.

He has written numerous motion pictures and starred in dozens more. He also has written an estimated 5,000 musical selections, including 64 symphonies, and more than 4,000 short stories.

He has entertained seven U.S. presidents and received private audiences with three popes. And his stirring interpretation of the Pledge of Allegiance has won him 42 awards and is one of his most requested works.

What has he enjoyed most in 64 years as America's resident clown? Skelton paused, stared at the table, a faint smile creasing his kindly, time-weathered face.

"The people, I think. Yes ... the people."
