North Labels Funds Diversion A 'Neat Idea'

By JIM DRINKARD
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lt. Col. Oliver North told Iran-Contra hearings today it was a "neat idea" to divert proceeds from Iranian arms sales to the Contra rebels, and stoutly defended the sale of arms in exchange for freedom for three American hostages in the Middle East.

Back in the witness chair for a second straight day of televised hearings, North also denied that President Reagan told him it was "important that I not know" about the diversion of the profits to the Nicaraguan rebels.

"I don't recall the conversation that way," North told House counsel John Nields, who was asking about a phone call last Nov. 25 from Reagan to the man he had just fired from the National Security Council staff.

As North fielded questions, key lawmakers said they believe the thrust of his first day's testimony — that he acted on orders from above in what he did. The result would be to place great importance on the expected testimony next week of Vice Adm John. Poindexter, who was national security adviser during much of North's tenure on the staff.

As he did on Tuesday, North appeared in his Marine uniform, complete with six rows of ribbons. He wore silver-framed glasses to aid in reading documents that Nields frequently called to his attention.

The morning produced its share of legal sparring, as well, as North's attorney, Brendan Sullivan, accused the committees of conducting a "stall job" by prolonging questioning of his client.

"May the record show that it took four and a half minutes to explain the stall," Inouye replied in a sarcastic bass.

In other testimony, North: —Gave a flavor of the covert world in which he operated. Nields referred to notes North made of a conversation with Israeli Amiram Nir in which the NSC aide wrote that "Joshua has approved proceeding as we had hoped" to replenish the weapons that Israel had sold to Iran.

North said he thought "Joshua" was a code name for Israeli officials. Advised to look it up on a code sheet, he said "I was wrong, I had forgotten the codes."

Nields: "Who was Joshua?"

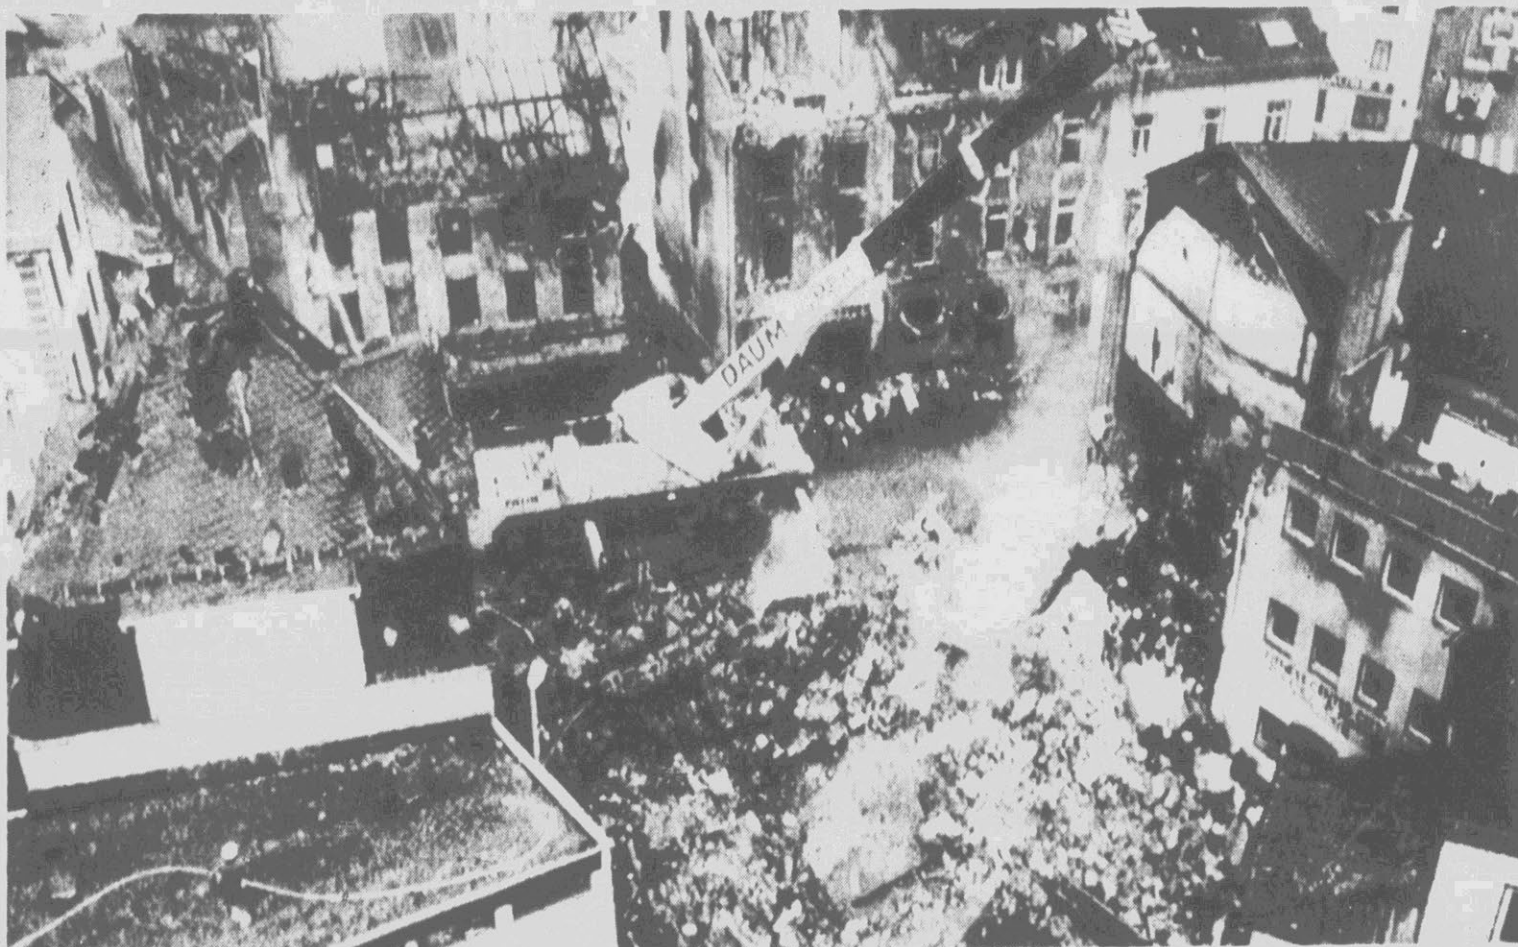

North: "The president."

—Sparred with Nields over whether retired Air Force Maj. Gen.

Richard V. Secord was an "authorized agent" in his role in arranging the sale of arms to Iran.

Shown a document that he drafted for Poindexter to send to Reagan suggesting that an authorized agent, namely Secord, could be used to sell U.S. weapons to Iran, North demurred. "Secord was the broker for the transaction," he said. The distinction may be important, because Secord claims he was not an authorized agent of the government, and thus raging fires that followed killed at least 24 people and injured 36 others, authorities said. Three buildings were leveled and nine others were gutted. (AP Laserphoto)

Ice Cream Parlor Hit

Gasoline Blast Kills 24 People

HERBORN, West Germany (AP) — A tanker truck loaded with gasoline crashed into an ice cream parlor and blew up, triggering a series of explosions and raging fires that killed up to 24 people, authorities said.

Another 36 people were injured in the Tuesday evening crash, which turned downtown Herborn into an inferno.

Explosions from the truck and a severed gas main leveled three buildings and gutted another nine. The downtown area was evacuated and rescue efforts, hampered by the extreme heat, continued today.

"Everything just blew up like a war was starting," Joerg Kessler, 23, of Herborn, an ice cream parlor customer told The Associated Press. Kessler managed to escape with only bruises.

The bodies of two victims were pulled from the rubble. Up to 22 others are missing and feared dead, authorities said. Most of the victims were believed to have been young people who had sought refreshment on the warm summer night.

Gerhard Boekel, a town spokesman, told a news conference today that one of the bodies belonged to an 18-year-old woman. He gave no details about other victims.

Of the 36 injured, 26 are still in the hospital, and the other 10 were treated and released, Boekel said at the news conference at a Herborn hotel. Authorities earlier had reported 39 people were injured.

Boekel said the death toll was uncertain because it was unknown how many people were in the cafe or nearby buildings when the accident occurred. Tuesday night, police said they feared 30 to 50 people were dead.

"We are checking with families," he said. "But it's a very confused situation."

Boekel said the 48-year-old truck driver was in the hospital in Siegen and "is not in a condition to be interviewed" by police. He did not elaborate on the driver's condition.

Police said earlier that the driver had told them his brakes had failed.

Boekel said the driver had left the expressway near Herborn and come down a very long hill leading to the town "at an extremely high rate of speed." He said it was unknown whether the accident had been caused by technical defects or an error of the driver.

Boekel said that in 1983, three people were killed when a truck sped down the incline and crashed into a car waiting at a light at the same corner where the ice cream parlor is located.

Chemical Plant Burns

HIGH FALLS, N.C. (AP) — An explosion and fire destroyed the Deep River Mills Coated Fabrics plant early today, spilling chemicals into storm drains around the building, officials said.

"The small canal that runs alongside the plant was closed very, very early in the fire," said James Munn, operations officer from the Division of Emergency Management. "We don't believe there's any contamination to the small canal or to the Deep River."

"There is some chemical runoff into some of the storm drains. We've got some folks from Solid and Hazardous Waste Branch and Environmental Management coming to assess that."

Democrats Delay Vote On Closing Filibuster Blocking Debate On Gulf

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Democrats, still trying to pick up Republican allies, today delayed a vote on ending the GOP filibuster that has stymied consideration of their request that the Reagan administration delay its plan to protect oil tankers plying the Persian Gulf.

With only a 54-46 margin, the Democrats need to pick up at least six GOP votes for the 60 needed to invoke cloture and halt the filibuster.

"We're still working with the Republicans," Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., said today. "We may or may not be able to achieve our goal. But we're putting aside the cloture vote for the time being."

The House was scheduled to vote on two different measures, one proposing to halt the plan completely, and the second to delay it for 90 days.

Meantime, Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., said today the administration's plan to reflag Kuwaiti tankers and give them U.S. naval protection should be delayed unless U.S. and Kuwaiti officials agree on the scope of American involvement.

Aspin, who returned Tuesday from the region, said that under an interpretation offered by Kuwaiti officials, more tankers eventually could be escorted by the Navy — at correspondingly greater risk to American ships — than has been proposed by the administration.

"The kind of attack in which you're not sure who did it or who was behind it, that risk is very much higher, and that frankly is a risk that the administration did not present to the Congress," Aspin said on NBC-TV's "Today" program.

But a Republican congressman who was part of the same congressional delegation argued that "the biggest risk is in delay."

"Every country that we visited in the Persian Gulf was for reflagging" and wanted a major U.S. presence in the gulf, said Rep. Larry Hopkins, R-Ky.

Aspin, chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, spoke to reporters Tuesday after he and 11 other committee members returned from a Persian Gulf trip that included a July 4 stop in Kuwait.

White House and State Department officials said that there was no disagreement between Kuwait and the United States, but Aspin said the new Kuwaiti view hadn't yet been advanced to the State Department.

President Reagan's plan to put U.S. flags and captains aboard 11 Kuwaiti tankers and escort them with Navy warships while the tankers traverse the 600-mile-long gulf faced two tests today in the Democratic-controlled Congress.

Administration officials have been saying the escorts will begin in mid-July.

The plan has raised congressional fears about drawing the United States into the Iran-Iraq war since Kuwait has aided Iraq. Those worries increased after Iraq's May 17 attack on the Navy frigate Stark, which killed 37 U.S. sailors in what Iraq said was a mistake.

According to Aspin, the plan as originally described called for Navy warships to escort about five convoys a month.

Five Enter School Board Races

Five persons have filed for seats on the Pitt County Board of Education in the Nov. 3 municipal election.

J. Beverly Congleton Jr. and Ferrell Blount III, both of whom currently serve on the board, have filed for re-election. Martha Sydnor Coffman, a former member of the Greenville schools board, and Charles Stuart Ward and Nicholas Angelo Patrone also have announced their intentions to seek a seat on the panel.

As outlined in the new election plan, there will be two seats on the board from each of six districts. Seat A will be for an initial term of December 1987 through December 1992, while Seat B will have a shorter term of December 1987 through December 1990. After 1990, all terms will be for six years.

In District 2, Congleton is seeking

Seat A and Blount has filed for Seat B. District 2 includes portions of Greenville Township and all of Belvoir, Carolina and Bethel townships. Mrs. Coffman has filed for Seat A in District 3, and Patrone has filed for Seat B in that district. District 3 includes parts of east Greenville as well as Simpson, Grimesland and Pactolus. Ward, a resident of Lakewood Drive, has filed for Seat A in District 5, which includes southern Greenville and Winterville township.

Congleton, a resident of Stokes, has served on the board of education for 12 years.

He is a director of The Southern Bank and Trust Company in Stokes and Robersonville.

Possession Count

David Michael Jackson, 18, of Route 2, Grifton, was arrested by Greenville police on possession of drug paraphernalia and carrying a concealed weapon charges.

Officer P.W. Worthington said Jackson was taken into custody about 8:18 p.m. at the intersection of Arlington Boulevard and Calvin Way.

Vehicles Entered

Officers said two juveniles were taken into custody early Tuesday by Greenville police after two cars were entered at 109 Cherry Court.

Officers J.A. Felton and T.L. Forrest said the juveniles were turned over to juvenile authorities after the cars were entered about 3:19 a.m.

Thefts Reported

Police said three thefts — one of them an armed robbery — were reported to Greenville officers early this morning.

Officer W.T. McCarter said a man armed with a knife and using a paper bag with holes cut out for his eyes to hide his face took an undetermined amount of cash from the Fresh Way Food Store on South Memorial Drive about 12:54 a.m.

McCarter said the robber entered the store, produced a knife and demanded money.

McCarter said a bicycle was taken from 127 Green Mill Run Apartments in an incident reported at 2:10 a.m. McCarter said the bicycle was later recovered.

Officer C.J. Melvin said a man's suit, a knife and $150 in cash were taken from 426 W. Fifth St. in a break-in reported at 1:56 a.m.

Body Identified

The body of a man discovered by a boater in Contentnea Creek near Grifton on April 29 has been identified as Willie Smith, 35, of New Haven, Conn., according to Dr. Stan Harris, regional medical examiner.

Harris ruled drowning as the cause of death but termed the manner of death unknown. He said the drowning victim probably died in mid-April.

Smith, formerly of Pitt County, was identified through the use of fingerprints and dental records received from Connecticut authorities, Harris said.

Pitt County Chief Deputy Brooks Oakley said the case is still under investigation.

Bethel Candidates

Two candidates filed Monday for election in the Nov. 3 municipal balloting in Bethel.

Bethel Mayor Frank M. Hemingway filed for re-election, while incumbent Delton E. Perry announced that he will be a candidate for a new term on the Bethel Town Board of Commissioners.

Hemingway, a pharmacist at Bethel Pharmacy, lives at 119 Harper Drive. He has served as mayor since 1981.

Perry is employed at Smithfield Swine feed mill. He has served on the board for 10 years.

Three Seek Offices

Three candidates, including two incumbents, have filed for seats in the Nov. 3 Farmville municipal elections.

Mayor Edna Earl Baker, a retired Pitt County schools, will seek re-election. A resident of 407 E. Wilson St., she is serving her first term in office.

Dave Davis of 107 W. Lang St. is a candidate for the Farmville Board of Commissioners. He is an insurance salesman for Woodmen of the World and a distributor of the Raleigh News & Observer.

Alfred Williams Jr. of 212 Williams St. filed as a candidate for re-election to the Board of Commissioners. Williams is employed at Morgan-Carolina, a fertilizer manufacturer.

Grifton Board Seat

W. Gene Coley, a Grifton town commissioner, has announced plans to seek re-election on Nov. 3.

Coley, who resides at 125 St. Joseph St., has served on the Grifton Board of Commissioners for three years.

Coley, the manager of the Contentnea Metropolitan Sewer District, filed as a candidate Monday.

Ayden Filings

Ayden Mayor Marvin C. Baldree has announced that he will seek re-election on Nov. 3.

Baldree, who is completing his first term as mayor, resides on Wildwood Drive. He is a part-owner of Ayden Loan & Insurance Co. Inc.

Three incumbent members of the Ayden Town Board of Commissioners also filed for re-election.

J.J. Brown, a retired school teacher, has filed for the Ward 5 seat, while Susan Moody, an employee of Pitt Anesthesiologists, has filed for the Ward 3 seat. Robert Harris, a retired insurance salesman, announced that he will run for the Ward 2 seat.

Candidates Filed

Two candidates filed today for election to the Winterville Town Board of Aldermen, according to Town Clerk Elwood Nobles.

Robersonville Lets Pigeon Loft Stay

ROBERSONVILLE — The Town Board of Adjustments, following a bitter publicly aired dispute between neighbors, has ruled in favor of a pigeon loft.

A two-part public hearing was held to receive evidence and comments relative to a pigeon loft housing about 100 racing pigeons, kept by Clifton and Lorene Leggett, and a complaint from their next door neighbors, Mr. and Mrs. E. Beamon Whichard.

In the first hearing, witnesses supported the Whichards in their request to have the pigeon loft and flock of birds declared a health hazard, and that keeping that number of birds in town was illegal.

The second session was devoted primarily to persons in favor of the pigeon loft. Most, from outside the county, testified that like the Leggetts, they kept birds in their backyards, whether they live inside or outside city limits.

Williamston veterinarian Dr. Ben Shelton, who has researched diseases carried by pigeons and other fowl, said some humans may be susceptible to such diseases, but that a person runs a greater risk of picking up something from dogs and cats.

The discussion eventually centered on the issue of whether or not the pigeon loft fitted into permitted uses under the terms of the town's zoning ordinances.

After 15 minutes of deliberation, the board voted 3-2 in favor of letting the Leggetts continue to maintain the pigeon loft and their flock of racing pigeons.

1985. The company applied for a mining permit on April 9, 1986, and a permit was issued on May 21.

Patient 'Feels Good'

The man who received a heart transplant at Pitt County Memorial Hospital Monday told his doctors this morning that he "feels good."

The heart recipient's physicians were reporting his condition as serious rather than critical this morning and said it may have been upgraded to fair by this afternoon.

By this afternoon, it was expected that he would be taken out of an isolation section of the intensive care unit and placed in a "step-down" section of the same type unit.

He is a 42-year-old Martin County resident.

Monday's surgery was Pitt Memorial's second heart transplant.

Tabernacle Revival

A "Holy Ghost revival" will be conducted at the Tabernacle of Prayer, 1606 Dickinson Ave., Thursday and Friday by Elder Ira Davison of New York.

Davison is pastor of the Tabernacle of Prayer in Jamaica, New York.

The services will be held at 8 p.m. each day.

Health Sciences

In an administrative reorganization, the East Carolina University School of Allied Health Sciences and the School of Nursing have been shifted into a reactivated Division of Health Sciences.

Health Sciences include the schools of medicine, allied health sciences, nursing and the health sciences library, according to Dr. Richard R. Eakin, ECU chancellor. The changes were effective July 1.

The Health Sciences division will be headed by Dr. William E. Laupus, a vice chancellor.

Laupus will continue to serve as dean of the School of Medicine. Also

Penalty Assessed

The N.C. Department of Natural Resources and Community Development has announced that it assessed the Parker and Allen Construction Co. a civil penalty of $1,000 for violations of the Mining Act of 1971.

In a notice sent to E.T. Allen Jr. of Route 2, Winterville, Parker and Allen's registered agent, the department said the penalty was assessed for operating a mine (a two-acre sand pit about three miles east of Greenville on state road 1536, the John Gray Road) without a permit on or before Aug. 28, 1985.

According to the document, the company was first notified of the violation by certified mail on Aug. 30,

Council To Meet

The Greenville City Council will conduct an executive session at 5:45 p.m. Thursday in the third floor conference room to discuss city manager applications.

Following the executive session, five public hearings on annexation requests head the list of items to be considered by the council at its monthly meeting scheduled to begin at 7:30 p.m. in the council chambers.

The board will consider the annexation of Rabbit Run subdivision, located west of Tuckahoe subdivision, and Quail Ridge, sections 8 and 9, both located on Quail Ridge Road.

Council members will also discuss the annexation of Tucker Estates subdivision, Section III, Phase III, located on Cadenza Street and Cadenza Court, and Westhaven subdivision, sections 6 and 7.

The council will conduct public hearings on the closing of unimproved portions of Candlewood Drive and Oakdale Drive in the Oakdale subdivision and the closing of a portion of an unnamed public alley located north of Ione Street, east of Memorial Drive.

Council members will discuss a request by Parkers Chapel Free Will Baptist Church to rezone 5.38 acres located on state road 1534 from residential-agricultural to office and institutional.

The council will also consider contracts for services with the Mid-Atlantic Farm Show, Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce, Pitt-Greenville Arts Council, and Greenville Jaycees.

A resolution to authorize the city manager to enter into a short-term lease of city property to Carolina Telephone for parking purposes and subleases for the Humber House between the state, the Pitt-Greenville Arts Council and the Playright's Fund of North Carolina Inc. will also be considered.

Council members will discuss resolutions scheduling public hearings on the annexation of Medical Oaks subdivision, Lindbeth Grove, Section 2, Phase I, Heritage Village subdivision, Section 5, and the Jehovah's Witness Church.

Other items to be addressed include appointments to boards and commissioners; a bid award on police uniforms; an amendment to the Subdivision Ordinance relating to recreation area requirements; establishing no-parking zones on East Third Street; a 25 mph speed limit zone on Granville Drive, and tax releases and refunds.

Five File For School Board Races Nine Thefts Reported

He was a partner and later sole owner in Stokes and Congleton General Merchantile for 37 years until his retirement in 1982.

He has served as secretary of the Pitt Golden K Kiwanis Club for five years, charter member of the Stokes Ruritan Club.

He is a member of the Stokes Christian Church, where he has served as treasurer for 35 years.

Congleton graduated from Stokes High School and received a bachelor's degree from Elon College. He served in the U.S. Army Air Forces.

He and his wife Vera have three sons.

"I think the county schools are on the threshold of some great things," Congleton said. "We are thankful that the county commissioners afforded money to upgrade the schools of this county and to help us in the decisions that we are a county board are making for the best education of the children of this county."

"I feel that the county can overcome some of these objections we have been confronted with and offer the students of Pitt County the best education in the eastern part of the state," he said.

"I hope the children of this county will afford themselves of the opportunity that is out there for them to receive. Without a good education, the lifestyle of these students will not be as great as they would like for them to be," Congleton said.

"I am glad that I can play a part in giving direction along with the central staff in obtaining the goals which have been set for this decade," he said.

Blount, who filed for re-election today, has served on the board since October of 1982.

"During my tenure as a board member, the Pitt County Board of Education has tackled many difficult problems head on," Blount said. "It is the job of a board member to make hard decisions. We can't straddle the fence to be effective."

Blount is involved in farming and farm-related business in Pitt County. His home is in Bethel.

He is married to the former Lynda Jordan and they have three children, all of whom are enrolled in the public schools.

He is a lifelong member of the Bethel Methodist church, where he serves as Sunday school teacher, choir member and lay leader.

Blount said, "I feel a great responsibility to the children of Pitt County. We need to assure ourselves that each child gets an equal opportunity. The opportunity that is afforded by public education is the only opportunity many of our children will get."

"I also feel a great responsibility to the taxpayer," Blount added. "The Board of Education must see that the taxpayer gets 110 cents value for every dollar spent."

Mrs. Coffman, a resident of Dellbrook Circle, served as a member of the Greenville school board from 1984 until 1986.

"I will work toward outstanding education and curriculum, a strong administrative staff and improved physical facilities," Mrs. Coffman said.

She and her husband, George, have two sons who graduated from J.H. Rose High School. She is secretary of Coffman's Men's Wear, where she has been an active member of the board of directors for 31 years.

Mrs. Coffman has served as a member of the Task Force for Service Delivery for Exceptional Children in 1986-1987 and the Advisory Committee for Exceptional Children in Pitt County in 1987.

Her activities with the Greenville schools included serving on the Citizen Advisory Committee and as a member and past president of the Advisory Committee for Exceptional Children for Greenville schools. She also was a member of the task force for development of an Affirmative Action plan for the Greenville schools.

She has served as a monitor for competency testing at J.H. Rose High School and is a former member of the Rose High Athletic Boosters Club, the Rose High Academic Boosters Club, the E.B. Aycock Athletic Boosters Club and the Parent Teacher Associations at Elmhurst and Wahl-Coates elementary schools and E.B. Aycock Junior High School.

Hospital Suit

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina Memorial Hospital in Chapel Hill has filed suit in U.S. District Court to appeal a decision that denied the hospital more than $800,000 in Medicare reimbursements for time medical residents spend in certain outpatient clinics.

The decision to deny reimbursement cost the hospital about $200,000 per year from 1980 through 1983, according to the lawsuit filed last week in Greensboro.

She is a member of the N.C. Association for Children and Adults with Learning Disabilities, the League of Women Voters and the Service League of Greenville.

Patrone, 35, a resident of East Third Street, has filed for Seat B in District 3. Since 1983, he has been an assistant professor of medicine and pediatrics at ECU.

He graduated cum laude with a bachelor's degree at St. John's College, Annapolis, Md., and received his medical degree from the Loyola-Stritch School of Medicine, Chicago. He has received post-graduate training at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, ECU and Duke University.

Patrone is president of the Tar River Neighborhood Association. He served as vice president in 1986.

He is married to Judith Kornegay, a local attorney. Their son will begin attending the Pitt County schools in the fall of 1988.

"Over the past six months, school board issues have polarized neighborhoods within the city and county," Patrone said. "Valid parents concerns have often been lost in the chaoe of 'us versus them' or 'my child' rather than 'our children.'"

"Only by dealing with specific countywide issues in each of our districts can school board members hope to bridge those gaps and improve the standard of education for all Pitt County children."

"Real issues for voters of each district include capital outlay for schools, financial and moral support for teachers and principals, the inflexibility of grouping based on CAT scores alone and the long-term attendance line changes in light of the rapid growth of Pitt County," Patrone added.

He is a member of the North Carolina Medical Society, the American Medical Association, the North

He is a rostered physician for Crippled Children's Foundation and a medical consultant to the Greenville Fire and Rescue Department.

Ward is an educational programs and training director at Eastern Correctional Center in Maury.

"I have a desire to serve the people of Pitt County and the children of Pitt County," Ward said after filing today. "Greenville is in a mode of change and I would like to be a part of it. I feel like I have something to contribute."

Ward received a bachelor's degree, master's degree and educational specialist degree from East Carolina University. He earned a doctoral degree from the University of Virginia.

He has served as a classroom teacher in Bethel, principal and teacher at Odom Correctional Center and principal at Akers Elementary School in Roanoke Rapids. He was assistant director of graduate programs with the Division of Continuing Education at ECU from 1977-1982.

He and his wife, G.R. Whitfield principal Beth Ward, have three children.

Ward is a member of Phi Delta Kappa, the North Carolina Association of School Administrators, American Correctional Association and State Employees Association of North Carolina.

He is a member of the board of directors of the Greenville Rotary Club and is chairman of the Pitt County Constitutional Bicentennial Committee.

He also has been on the Greenville Community Schools Advisory Council and served as faculty adviser for Alpha Phi Omega service fraternity at ECU. He was on the board of directors of the United Wesley Foundation and was on the Troop Committee of Troop 826 Boy Scouts of America.

He is a member of St. James Methodist Church, where he is chairman of the administrative board, a Methodist Youth Fellowship counselor and teacher of the senior high Sunday school class. He has served on the Finance Committee and is a former chairman of the Council on Ministries.

RJR Pledge

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. announced this week that it has pledged $450,000 to the Southeastern Center for Contemporary Art for its "Expanded Vision Campaign."

This is the largest single donation SECCA has received in its 31-year history, said Ted Potter, the director.

"Truth In Preference To Fiction"

Need Continues

Since the years when East Carolina University's primary role was the training of public school teachers the school has moved into many diversified fields of education.

It is well known that the university now trains doctors, nurses, medical technicians and is involved in many other fields which provide the education for future careers.

It is not forgotten, however, that ECU was originally established as East Carolina Teachers Training School with the mission of training teachers for the growing state public school system. Later it became East Carolina Teachers College and then East Carolina College. Throughout most of this time it was still primarily involved in teacher education.

In its regional university role the institution has become involved in many areas of service. Without doubt that involvement will continue and will expand.

At that, however, the university is still keenly aware of its teacher training responsibilities. Chancellor Richard Eakin said in a recent interview that ECU will continue to produce qualified educators.

"East Carolina has throughout its history been known as an excellent institution for a young person to attend to become a teacher to learn the skills that are necessary to be an effective teacher," Eakin said. "That's going to continue because it is as present today as it was at the outset."

"The state of North Carolina is beginning to give a lot of attention to the need to make sure that we are producing teachers of the quality necessary for our schools," Eakin continued. "We've already got a whole legion of teachers out there that are doing an excellent job, but what we must be sure we do is to continue to produce teachers that will do an excellent job."

"With the interest the state has taken, with the strong history that we have of excellence and with what I see as a commitment on the part of the people in the (ECU) School of Education and across the curriculum of the university to make that kind of excellence, I think education and the preparation of teachers is going to be a very strong and important part of our mission."

Many experts see a teacher shortage looming as the number of college aged people declines. There is the need for better qualified teachers and advanced training for teachers who are currently at work in the school systems.

Clearly the need for better teacher training is there. There are few institutions more qualified to offer it than East Carolina University.

Politically Peaceful Korea Is Mirage

One could forgive Kim Dae Jung if he appeared somewhat skeptical about the prospects for a genuinely free election for president of South Korea.

Kim, after all, ran for president in the last direct election in 1971, winning 46 percent of the vote in a campaign dominated by vote-rigging and military intimidation. The victor, to no one's surprise, was Park Chung Hee, the military officer who had seized power amid massive student demonstrations in 1961 and clung to his post until his intelligence chief shot him dead in a 1979 dinner-hour brawl.

That Kim should have done as well as he did against Park was enough to convince the country's military elite of the dangers of democracy — and of Kim Dae Jung as well. His life since then has been an extraordinary saga of imprisonment, hospitalization, house arrest and exile in the United States. After all that, he told me when I telephoned him at his home in Seoul several days ago, "I am not sure" that Park Chung Hee's successor, former general Chun Doo Hwan, "will guarantee a free election." If the election is truly free, he went on, "there will be no doubt" of the outcome.

That remark dramatizes the probability of fresh violence during and after the campaigning for an election that Chun finally accepted as the only way to stem the rioting throughout the country. Chun's handpicked successor, military crony Roh Tae Woo, would surely not have presented his "demand" for a direct election had he not weighed the alternative and realized he had more chance of succeeding Chun that way than by a vote of Chun's personally selected "electoral college." Certainly Roh would have won the vast majority of the college's votes. But that event would have undoubtedly taken place amid riots that would have either toppled the government or forced Chun to proclaim martial law — whether the Americans liked it or not — in order to stay in office.

The point of Kim's remark to me, though, is that such a denouement may yet come to pass. Roh may have gained popularity by appearing to have rushed to the side of the rioters, but no opposition leader believes that he can win an honest popular election. None of them is likely to accept a Roh "victory" as legitimate, and certainly none will pledge loyalty to Roh if or when he succeeds Chun in February, when Chun has promised to step down at the end of a six-year term.

The question, then, is whether Chun and Roh could "accept" victory by one of their opponents, gracefully turning over the government to a peacefully, popularly elected civilian president. The atmosphere of euphoria hanging over Seoul since Chun did his about-face on national television and agreed on all of Roh's proposals hardly jibes with Korean history. Dissidents have eagerly seized on the ideal of democracy with the same fierce devotion with which millions of Koreans have turned to Christianity, but the fact is the country has no democratic tradition. In a sense, both the Communist regime in North Korea and the military-dominated one in South Korea picked up a legacy of autocratic dynastic rule that endured until the onset of Japanese colonialism early in this century.

Chun's own style, moreover, has been especially harsh — and duplicitous. After the October 1979 assassination of Park Chung Hee, Chun carefully exploited his position as the general in charge of security around Seoul to undercut his military rivals. His moment of triumph came six weeks later when he arrested the country's top general, accusing him of somehow conspiring to blockade the investigation into Park's death. Chun's ally in the shootout that placed him in command of the armed forces was Roh Tae Woo, then a division commander. Roh rushed his troops from key defensive positions facing North Korea into positions around the capital to turn Chun's putsch into a fait accompli.

In May 1980, the military declared martial law, and by August, Chun had little trouble persuading the civilian nonentity who had been Park's vice president to step aside as president. The electoral college then elected Chun president.

Kim Dae Jung, freed first from a hospital and then from house arrest, was again imprisoned and tried — on charges of inspiring a short-lived and bloody revolt in the southern city of Kwangju that May.

The United States' military role in Korea has been pivotal in all of Chun's moves. American and Korean troops conduct enormous joint operations annually, and young Koreans are assigned regularly to slots in U.S.

units. Central U.S. power resides, however, not in these troops but in the United Nations Command — an entity dating from the outset of the Korean War when the U.N. sanctioned military action against North Korea. Ever since the war, the United States has assiduously maintained the fiction of a real U.N. effort — with the U.S. military commander theoretically in charge of all "allied" troops. That means he has ultimate authority over Korean as well as U.S. troops, at least in theory.

The difference between 1980 and 1987 was that Chun in 1980 could count on pro forma U.S. approval of orders to rush crack troops wherever he wished in order to put down the demonstrators. The U.S. commander at the time had no compunctions about approving the dispatch of reinforcements to advance on the rebel stronghold in Kwangju, and the United States did nothing to stop imposition of martial law. This time, though, was different. The United States publicly opposed the use of troops for anything other than defense against the North — and made equally clear its opposition to martial law.

However, as both sides in Korea are well aware, Chun and Roh could ignore U.S. wishes if they believed they had no other choice for survival. The United States would certainly not turn its troops against the South Koreans, and it is not likely the White House would favor withdrawing or reducing American forces either.

Journalist Donald Kirk, a frequent visitor to Korea since 1972, is a visiting fellow at Cornell University.

Program Working

Perhaps it is too soon to hope, but police spokesmen say a community involvement program in the Fifth and Ford and Fifth and Tyson street areas seems to be working.

Police say there is a significant decrease in the numbers of people "hanging around" in the area. They believe that drug sales are down by a third, although it is impossible to measure the illegal sales.

What is apparent, however, is that neighbors are sitting on their porches again and children are playing in their yards.

Residents are participating in the efforts to rid their neighborhoods of drug users and drug drops.

The problem-oriented policing program has been described by Chief Ted Holmes as "one of the most innovative and progressive police techniques that exists in the country today."

The community involvement program was begun because of the high number of complaints about buying and selling of drugs and stolen goods, alcohol use and prostitution.

Police patrols have been increased and property owners have signed forms giving police the right to search exterior property and porches. Another form gives officers the right to arrest unauthorized people on private property.

A neighborhood Crime Watch program is being started and a cleanup campaign will be held on July 11.

Crime won't disappear in the neighborhood overnight, of course. When it becomes obvious that long time residents will not tolerate their neighborhood being turned into a crime center the incidence of crime can be reduced.

Nor will the drug dealers go away entirely. If the heat is on in this area they will move somewhere else. Then it will be the duty of the next neighborhood to get involved and keep the pushers out.

To the editor:

Your recent article on Grits by an Associated Press writer (Section D, Page 1, June 17, 1987) was most amusing and inaccurate.

Mr. Strat Douthat tells us that grits are ground hominy. Obviously, nothing could be further from the truth. We are also told that every good Cracker (Georgian or Southerner) knows that hominy is made of kernels of dried field corn from which the hulls have been removed. True.

The author also tells us that, before being ground into grits, the kernels first were soaked in a weak lye solution to add calcium. These writings are the babblings of one who is totally unknowledgeable about the South, Crackers, grits or hominy.

For the record:

Grits are made from dried corn which is ground in a grist mill. The mill has stones which grind the corn. Various adjustments to the stones are used to increase the yields of the desired ground corn, which can be "biddy feed," grits or cornmeal. There is no alkali (lye) in a grist mill.

Hominy is made by soaking corn in a lye solution. The kernels swell, the hulls fall off and float to the surface. The hulls are discarded. The pure white kernels of the heart of the corn are washed free of the lye. These may be dried and mashed into a meal similar to grits. They still taste like soap!

Any good Cracker knows the difference between grits and hominy. Never the twain shall meet. Only Yankees use the expression "hominy grits." And they'll never know the difference if someone doesn't tell Mr. Strat Douthat that!

The price of rabies vaccination is going up!

How come?

The General Assembly just passed a law in North Carolina restricting distribution and administration to licensed vets only!

What have we got, some sort of epidemic?

Nope. But if what happened in states with similar legislation happens in North Carolina, we probably will have a rabies epidemic within 24 months.

How much is a rabies vaccination going to cost?

It varies, but in states such as Florida, about $50 a pop!

You mean what I can do for myself for about two bucks is going to cost $50?

It's possible. You're at the mercy of the local vet!

I won't pay!

Oh, but you will. And a lot more than $50 a pop. Based upon a rabies epidemic in El Paso, Texas, policing homes for unvaccinated animals, bringing those animals to clinics, and prosecuting the owners cost the taxpayers in excess of $150 per animal.

And whom should we thank for this brilliant legislation?

It's got Bob Jordan and Liston Ramsey's name on it, but I suspect we can thank our public health vet, who lists among his other distinguished qualifications, past presidency of the N.C. American Veterinary Medical Association.

To the editor:

I am representative of 50,000 Law Enforcement Explorers in the United States today. Many Americans do not know that we even exist in today's society.

What Law Enforcement Explorers consist of is Explorers from the ages of 14 to 20 who have a police career in mind when they reach the age qualifications. What we do is assist in the community and help in civic events, parades, and many other things.

What I'd like to tell the citizens of Greenville is that they have an Explorer Post right here in Greenville. The Greenville Police Department, with the assistance of Chief Ted Holmes, has sponsored the Explorer Post for many years and hopefully for many years to come. I would like to tell the citizens of Greenville that they should be proud they have an Explorer Post in their city. It teaches today's young people about moral values, self-respect and dignity, rather than some drug pusher telling them how to stick themselves with a needle full of heroin.

Thanks to a fine chief of police and people who care, our Explorer system will grow even better in the future.

Strength For Today

Bramwell Booth, son of the founder of the Salvation Army, was once traveling on a train with Cecil Rhodes, a leading builder of the British Empire in South Africa during the late 19th century.

Noticing that Rhodes seemed downcast, Booth asked him, "Are you a happy man, Mr. Rhodes?" "Happy?" replied Rhodes, "Good God, no." Then he continued, "I would give everything that I possess if I had the religious faith your father has or could believe what he believes." Rhodes died a short time later, one of the richest men in the world and universally admired for his abilities. Yet his last words, spoken in deep sorrow, were, "So much to do, and so little time in which to do it."

Many people have achieved wealth and fame, but do not have what is of greatest value — to be at peace with themselves and the universe.

N.C. Firms Miss Waste Deadline

RALEIGH (AP) — Apparently because of a lack of publicity on the new law, more than 90 percent of North Carolina companies and others dealing with hazardous chemicals failed to meet a federal deadline for reporting that they use such materials.

"(We) believe at this point the lack of compliance is failure by people to realize that they should have done it," said Henry Hudson of the Emergency Response Control Section at the EPA's regional office in Atlanta.

"We are getting calls daily from people, saying they just discovered that they will be under the federal act," said Vanee E. Kee, assistant director of the North Carolina Division of Emergency Management. "I've had some complaints about not knowing about it until after the deadline."

The N.C. Emergency Response Commission has estimated that about 800 of the 11,000 users of hazardous chemicals have reported their usage as required by a new federal law. The law is part of emergency response guidelines for hazardous chemical spills established by the federal Superfund Amendments and Reauthorization Act, administered by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

SARA, adopted in October, requires companies handling at least two of 406 EPA-listed hazardous chemicals to notify the state by May 17. By Sept. 17, the facilities must designate someone to coordinate emergency procedures with local officials in the event of chemical spills.

By Oct. 17, users must submit a list of their chemicals and the quantities to local public safety officials. Later, they must submit detailed information on those chemicals.

The state's emergency response commission, which administers the law along with the Emergency Management Division, was not established until April and as a result had little time to publicize the issue before the deadline hit, Kee said.

SARA applies to many organizations that did not previously come under federal hazardous chemical guidelines, such as farms using large amounts of pesticides and retail stores.

Under SARA, the EPA can impose fines of $25,000 a day for each day users affected by the law fail to report their hazardous chemicals. Users failing to report a hazardous chemical spill can be fined $25,000 a day for the first offense and $75,000 a day for the second offense.

But it's unlikely the EPA will impose fines anytime soon, one spokesman said.

"We're not interested in being just punishers for the sake of that," Hudson said.

One reason the public does not know about the law, Kee said, is that state agencies have not had enough money publicize it, instead hoping that companies would learn about the new law from the Federal Register or trade journals.

MacDonald Suit Going To Trial

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jury selection has begun in a $15 million lawsuit by convicted murderer Jeffrey MacDonald against the author who told the former Army doctor's story in the book "Fatal Vision" and concluded he was guilty.

MacDonald, who maintains he is innocent of the 1970 murders of his pregnant wife and two daughters at Fort Bragg, N.C., is suing Joe McGinniss for breach of contract.

The 43-year-old MacDonald claims he had a contract in which McGinniss was allowed to hear MacDonald's intimate thoughts to write a positive account of the former Green Beret captain's long fight against murder charges.

Selection of a jurors began late Tuesday afternoon after arguments on whether to allow MacDonald to tell jurors he still maintains his innocence.

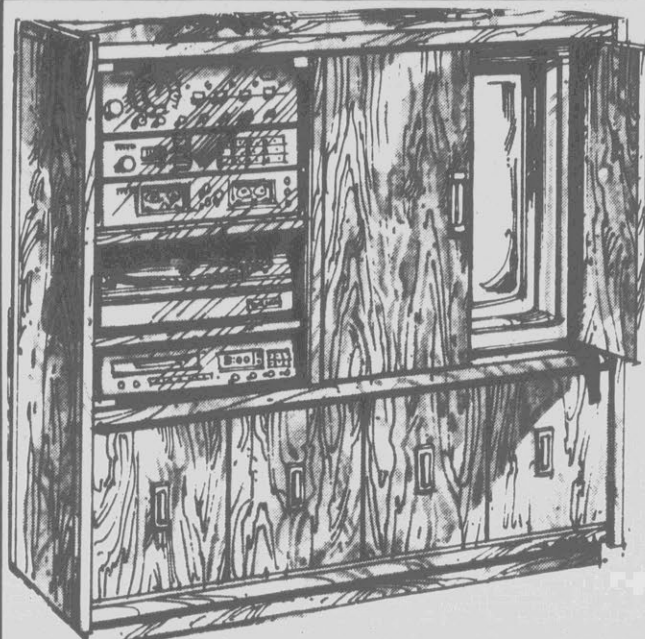

During the hearing, it was revealed that McGinniss' attorneys have a long list of potential celebrity witnesses, presumably to back up their client's credibility.

McGinniss, 44, lives in Williamstown, Mass., and is a faculty member at Bennington College.

Senate Panel Approves Ban On Death Penalty For Minors

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — A bill to ban the death penalty for anyone under age 17 drew closer to enactment after it unanimously passed a Senate committee with no one speaking in opposition.

"The death penalty violates the Christian's reverence for human life," Robert W. Estill, Episcopal bishop of North Carolina, told the Judiciary I Committee on Tuesday. "It is an inhuman and degrading punishment. It teaches revenge, not mercy; brutality, not kindness."

Roslyn Savitt, executive director of the North Carolina Council for Social Legislation, said supporters had enough votes to win Senate approval for the bill, which has already passed the House.

The General Assembly repeatedly has defeated efforts to abolish capital punishment. In 1983, such a bill was tabled seconds after it was introduced in the Senate.

But Ms. Savitt said many of the Legislature's staunchest death penalty backers were willing to exempt children.

Rep. Sidney Locks, D-Robeson, told the committee that criminal law treats minors differently from adults in many ways, including operation of separate juvenile courts.

Current law disallows capital punishment for children under age 14.

"Minors cannot purchase firearms. Minors cannot vote," said Locks, sponsor of the bill. "Generally, the society believes that minors have not matured to the point wherein they can make those logical, reasonable decisions that make them responsible for their actions."

He said many youthful criminals were influenced by their elders and by television and motion picture violence before firmly shaping their own moral codes.

"I remember growing up myself," Locks said. "While I did not murder anybody or commit such a crime that would result in capital punishment, I did many things as a child that I would not today."

Bud Crumpler, chairman of the North Carolina Academy of Trial Lawyers' committee on the death penalty, said only 10 states permit executing people under age 18 and that 40 countries that use capital punishment exclude minors. Aside from the United States, the only nations where the death penalty is applicable to minors are Pakistan, Bangladesh, Barbados, Rwanda, and Iran.

North Carolina has executed 19 minors since 1854. One minor is on the state's death row: Leon Brown of Robeson County, who committed a murder at age 15.

Locks said if his bill were enacted it would nullify Brown's death sentence. The committee chairman, Sen. Henson Barnes, D-Wayne, said he would verify that with the state attorney general's office before taking the bill to the Senate floor.

"I think it will pass," Sen. Jim Johnson, R-Cabarrus, said in an interview. "It's going to get banged a bit, but I think it'll go."

But Johnson warned that it could lead to a flood of new appeals of capital punishment cases in the state.

He said if the bill were enacted, attorneys for condemned killers would have no choice but to challenge the constitutionality of North Carolina's death penalty law on the basis of age discrimination.

"Any trial lawyer worth his license will have to contend that (murderers have) all committed the same crime and there's no reason for giving one death and the other life in prison because of a numerical difference in age," Johnson said.

Locks countered that the difference between children and adults involved "more than numbers."

Witnesses Differ On State Staying In Waste Compact

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — An eight-state compact for handling low-level radioactive waste was praised as an economical prop to industry and condemned as a political monster as lawmakers neared a crucial vote on its repeal.

William McCartney, a radiologist with the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, told a public hearing Tuesday the "isolationist" policy of leaving the compact would "threaten medical and pharmaceutical interests in this state."

He said penalty surcharges imposed by other states if North Carolina leaves the compact could cost millions of dollars by the time a state facility is opened.

William Lee, chief executive officer for Duke Power Co., said it is important for North Carolina to take a responsible position to assure continued growth of high-technology industry.

"If we want to maintain our reputation as a high-tech state, including industries like the supercollider, then we must demonstrate that we are capable of meeting the challenges of a high-tech environment," he said. "We must show we are capable of dealing with the waste that technology inevitably produces."

Lee said a single, regional disposal facility would be the safest, most economical way to handle the waste. And he said if North Carolina leaves the compact, the state would be gambling that the courts would decide it could exclude out-of-state waste.

"If that gamble fails, then an effort to exclude waste from seven states will open the door to taking waste from 49 other states for what could be an unlimited time," he said.

But environmentalists said the compact was unfair in choosing North Carolina as the next host for the waste and compared the compact to a fixed game of cards.

"If people were always going to cheat you when you were playing hearts, would you want to keep playing with those people?" asked John Runkle of the Conservation Council of North Carolina. "We're always going to end up with the black queen."

Runkle said it would be safer to handle only North Carolina's own waste and to locate waste near nuclear power plants, which generate the vast majority of the material.

"If it isn't going to go near the reactors, in all fairness, where should it go?" he asked.

Betsy Levitas of North Carolina Fair Share added that the state is already taking too much of the burden for low-level radioactive waste. She said compact commission members are concerned only with politics and that the compact serves only to insulate electric utilities from assuming more control.

"It doesn't make sense to commit our state to this political Frankenstein," Ms. Levitas said.

While the bill currently would limit consideration for a waste site to a volunteer county or those with a nuclear plant — Brunswick, Mecklenburg or Wake — Rep. Casper Holroyd, D-Wake, said he was optimistic that provision would be deleted by the House Water and Air Resources Committee. The panel had agreed to leave the three-county proposal in by a narrow vote last week.

Linda Little of the Governor's Waste Management Board also urged committee members to drop compact repeal and the three-county provision and concentrate on provisions to create the authority for choosing a site.

She said companies such as General Electric, Ciba Geigy, Glaxo and Burroughs Wellcome — all represented by speakers at the hearing — were concerned that their waste might be subjected to surcharges for going outside the state.

Bill Holman, representing the North Carolina chapter of the Sierra Club and the N.C. Conservation Council, said all siting decisions are political decisions.

"The question for the General Assembly is does the legislature make the political decision on the site location or does the legislature create a radioactive waste siting authority that in turn makes the political decision," Holman said.

But Rod Autry, vice chairman of the Mecklenburg County Board of Commissioners, argued that the decision should be based solely on scientific information.

"It is time to put the game of political checkers back in its box," he said. "I pray that you choose leadership over gamesmanship."

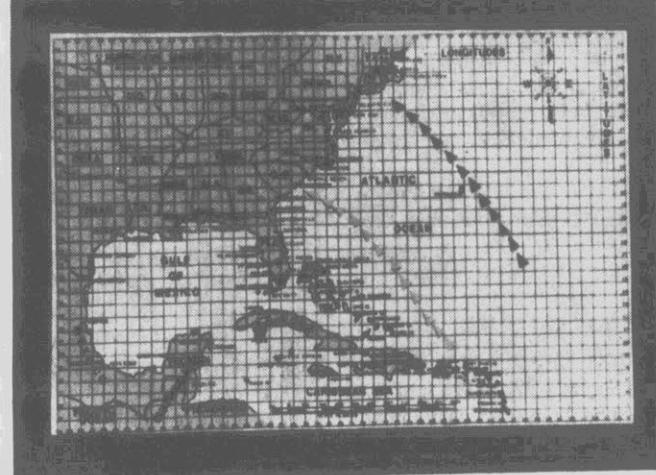

Lee and William Graham Jr., vice chairman of the board of directors for Carolina Power & Light Co., said utility customers and North Carolina taxpayers would end up paying the bills if the state chooses an expensive alternative to the compact.

But Eric Hanson of the Coalition Against a Radioactive Environment said counties with nuclear plants "possess men, machines and technical expertise" to handle a waste site.

Steve Levitas, a Raleigh attorney, rebutted arguments that going it alone might be unconstitutional, calling the issue of legality a "red herring." He said the courts have upheld a state's right to compete in the marketplace and limit state facilities to domestic use as long as the state does not close its borders to interstate commerce.

"Like the state of Texas, which has decided to go it alone, I believe those (legal) barriers are illusory," he said.

Ferret Lovers Block Ban This Session

RALEIGH (AP) — Opposition to banning household ferrets was so strong this session that one state lawmaker has jokingly proposed making the animal North Carolina's official pet.

Rep. George Brannan, D-Johnston, chairman of the House Health Committee, said Tuesday ferret fans had raised a bigger stink than any other lobbyists.

"We've had thousands of people object to it," he said. "They've got international, national and state organizations of ferret owners."

Brannan's proposed substitute for the ban sought by the Division of Health Services lauded ferrets as "long, little and lovable creatures that make excellent pets" and noted the ferret, "being long and slender, resembles our great state of North Carolina in shape."

But John Freeman of the Division of Health Services made it clear the issue was not dead when he handed out color photographs of infants whose ears or noses had been chewed off by ferrets.

"These kids will be scarred for the rest of their lives," he said. "These are wild animals. They are in households and we know they are biting people."

Rep. John Brown, R-Yadkin, vowed to keep fighting ferrets.

"I wouldn't want to be a party to making the ferret the state pet," he said, adding that a ferret he saw this session "was the most nervous little animal I've ever seen in my life."

Brown said the ban would have passed the committee if it had come up for a vote. He said Brannan did not bring the bill up for a committee vote in time to beat a legislative deadline for bills to pass one house, but he declined to criticize the chairman's handling of the matter.

"We'll be back again next session," Brown said. "You can count on it."

Lejeune Hearing

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP) — Inadequate health care at the Navy Hospital at Camp Lejeune is threatening the morale and readiness of Marines and sailors, speakers told a U.S. House subcommittee at a public hearing.

"Access to medical care at Camp Lejeune is, in a word, distressing," said Maj. Gen. J.E. Cassidy, commanding general of Camp Lejeune. Military officials, civilian medical care providers, retirees, veterans and dependents of military personnel testified before the subcommittee Tuesday after members of the panel toured the base hospital.

"I find this situation at Camp Lejeune depressing, deplorable and absolutely unacceptable, and I can guarantee when we go back to Washington we're going to do something about it," said Rep. Arthur Ravenel, R-S.C., a member of the Subcommittee on Military Personnel and Compensation of the House Armed Services Committee.

People who testified described overcrowded facilities, a shortage of doctors and shortcomings in the Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services, an insurance program that covers some health care not directly provided by the military medical system.

Alzheimer's Grant

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — The nation's largest private effort to improve the lives of people suffering from Alzheimer's disease will be based at the Bowman Gray School of Medicine.

The Robert Wood Johnson Foundation of Princeton, N.J., is donating $6.5 million for the Dementia Care and Respite Services Program, a pilot project set up to find innovative ways to help those stricken with Alzheimer's and other degenerative brain disorders.

The Alzheimer's Disease and Related Disorders Association is contributing $650,000 to the effort and the federal government is considering giving another $650,000.

Abortion Rules

RALEIGH (AP) — The North Carolina Social Services Commission will not appeal a preliminary injunction blocking enforcement of two rules on abortions, allowing a lawsuit contesting the rules to go to trial.

Barry McCarty, chairman of the commission, said that although he was confident that the commission could win an appeal of the injunction, he would prefer that the larger issues be debated in court as soon as possible.

An injunction temporarily blocking the rules, which have been vigorously debated since the commission proposed them last fall, was granted in Wake County Superior Court in June, three weeks after they took effect.

The rules require that women seeking state-funded abortions be given the opportunity to see models of a fetus and that county social service agencies provide district attorneys with the names of women seeking state-funded abortions who say they became pregnant as a result of rape or incest.

School Sale

GLADE VALLEY, N.C. (AP) — Glade Valley School, one of the oldest church-affiliated schools in north-west North Carolina, will be sold at auction in August.

Richard P. Budd, a trustee, said money from the sale of the 297 acres and 19 buildings in Alleghany County will be used partly to pay off about $500,000 in debts. The rest will go to the Presbyterian Church.

The school, founded by the church in 1909, closed in June 1985 after graduating a final class of 11 students.

Ambulance Burns

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Nearly 500 patients, visitors and employees were evacuated from the Reynolds Health Center when an ambulance parked in a garage attached to the center caught fire.

The blaze Tuesday destroyed the ambulance owned by Forsyth County Emergency Medical Service.

According to a bystander, Dorothy A. Wilson, the fire began in what appeared to be an oil spill under the vehicle. "Then it started blazing real fast like in a minute and in about five minutes it caught fire to the garage," Miss Wilson said.

Fifteen firemen had the blaze under control within about 20 minutes.

Rainbows File Federal Lawsuit

ROBBINSVILLE, N.C. (AP) — As most members of the Rainbow Family loaded their backpacks and left Graham County after their annual gathering, the looseknit group filed a federal complaint charging local, state and U.S. officials with illegally searching and spying on members.

Group members are expected to go to court in Asheville today, the last official day of the "Gathering of the Tribes," to seek a restraining order preventing the alleged harassment at this and future gatherings.

In papers filed Tuesday, the family charged the State Bureau of Investigation, the U.S. Forest Service and the Graham and Swain County Sheriff's Departments with taking down license tag numbers and making illegal, warrantless arrests.

The forest service counted 115 arrests and citations during the gathering in the Nantahala National Forest, which began in earnest a week ago.

Rainbow leaders agreed to leave the site by July 15.

The large contingent of lawmen at the entrance to the camp refused to say why members of the group of free-spirits and their vehicles were routinely searched, according to the family.

"We want them to remove this police state on the threshold of our church," said Barry Adams, a family member who helped organize the first gathering 16 years ago. "A lot of us won't be leaving the state of North Carolina until we get redress."

The annual weeklong "celebration of peace and love" began July 1 and attracted more than 12,000 people, officials said. Only about 3,000 people remained at the campsite Tuesday, but several family members said they would stay to clean up and reseed the camp, spread out across several acres of forest and meadows.

"Considering the number of folks and all that, it went pretty smoothly," said spokesman Karen Hughes of the U.S. Forest Service.

Corps To Reconsider Gaston Permit

RALEIGH (AP) — A federal judge refused to void a permit allowing Virginia Beach to make Lake Gaston its primary water source, but North Carolina officials say the project will be delayed by a ruling that more environmental research must be undertaken before water can flow through the pipeline. "For North Carolina, this is a win, at least for the time being," said state Attorney General Lacy Thornburg, who has argued that the project would disturb the downstream spawning of striped bass and reduce the amount of water available to the state in the future.

The ruling will delay the pipeline project for months at least, Thornburg said.

In rulings Tuesday, Judge Earl Britt of U.S. District Court in Raleigh declined to require a major study of how Virginia Beach's plan, which calls for construction of an 84.5-mile pipeline from the city to the lake, would affect the environment. But he ordered the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers to reconsider the project's impact on the lake's striped bass population.

The ruling, in U.S. District Court in Raleigh, is the latest development in a four-year battle between the two states.

Officials of Virginia Beach, which has a shortage of drinkable water, applied July 15, 1983, for a permit to construct the pipeline. The officials said they hoped to draw up to 60 million gallons of water per day from the lake by the year 2030.

The plan drew fierce opposition from North Carolina officials and residents of both states living near the lake, who charged that Virginia Beach's plan would lower the water table and damage the environment — particularly the striped bass population.

On Dec. 7, 1983, the Corps of Engineers ruled that the project would have no significant effect on the environment and that there was no need for an environmental impact statement, which would require an exhaustive study.

Panel Groping In Dark With North Testimony

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lt. Col. Oliver L. North's insistence on only limited private questioning is making the Iran-Contra committees' search for the truth more difficult and time-consuming, but not impossible.

Members of the congressional investigating committees say they are determined that all proper questions about North's activities will be asked and answered in as much time as that takes.

Although investigators originally said their intention was to confine North's testimony to just four days this week, it is now clear that more time will be required and that the questioning will spill over into next week for at least one, possibly two days.

At the same time, it appears that North and his lawyers have heeded advice — voiced by many committee members — to disengage from verbal combat with North's questioners, at least for the present.

These House and Senate members say they detected a definite shift in tone between the morning and afternoon sessions Tuesday, a shift from what they called almost arrogant hostility to a more businesslike approach.

A News Analysis

In effect, they are saying North might be well served by eating a little humble pie.

It was "a horrible beginning," said Sen. William Cohen, R-Maine, who added that a quick apparent shift in tactics by the Tuesday afternoon session to a "less combative approach" was "creating a much better impression."

Committee members commented as North concluded his first day of intensive testimony about secret arms sales to Iran and the diversion of the proceeds to Nicaragua's Contra rebels.

The fired National Security Council staff member did go behind closed doors last week to answer a strictly limited set of questions dealing with President Reagan's knowledge of the details of the Iran-Contra affair.

But North is the only witness to have refused to submit to a full interrogation in private, a screening technique which permits public questioning to be focused on areas known to be productive.

When John Nields, chief counsel of the House Iran-Contra committee, moved off the subject of Reagan's involvement Tuesday afternoon and began to explore other issues, the pace of the questioning slowed and the rhythm appeared awkward.

He often introduced a new line of questioning by asking North to "give me a narrative."

Nields then listened closely and asked a series of questions relating to what he had just heard for the first time.

"It's making it much longer and much more difficult," said Sen. George Mitchell, D-Maine.

"It just takes a lot longer to set the stage for the cross examination that will follow," said Sen. Paul Trible, R-Va. "But it makes no difference. We've got all the time in the world."

Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Texas, said, "I thought the private deposition would have been useful for both the committee and for Colonel North. It would have gotten the rabbit trails out of the way and enabled us to get on with it."

"It might extend the hearings," Brooks said. "But that's all."

Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., chairman of the House committee, said it was clear that the morning session was "rocky" but said the afternoon questioning "went more smoothly and was more fact-finding" in tone.

In the afternoon, he said, North had "a good demeanor and tried to answer questions."

The initial adversarial nature of the hearing prompted much comment.

"I was a bit surprised at the tone with which he started," Cohen said. "And I think there was a very dramatic shift from the flippancy he showed at first. I think they realized it just wasn't playing. They knocked off the wisecracks."

"I think it would be better if they (North and his lawyer, Brendan Sullivan) not engage in a combative dialogue and try to be as respectful as possible," he said.

Mitchell said he thought the shift in tone was "caused by a realization that it wasn't getting them anywhere."

"Now we seem to be moving ahead — slowly," Trible said.

Hamilton said it was clear to him that Sullivan had accepted the fact that questions would be asked and would have to be answered and therefore had advised his client to "get down to business."

North's Reviews Mixed

By JONATHAN W. OATIS
Associated Press Writer

Oliver North's testimony on the Iran-Contra affair triggered a jump in stock prices, complaints from hundreds of soap opera fans and disagreement on whether the Marine lieutenant colonel is a hero, liar or scapegoat.

The major broadcast and cable networks carried North's first day of testimony Tuesday before congressional investigative panels, and thousands of Americans tuned in to watch the fired National Security Council aide. The hearings were to continue today.

In the New York City suburb of Mineola, N.Y., nearly 100 potential jurors in the Nassau County Court-house watched in silence on one large TV set and many county workers listened to radios at their desks.

In the electronics department of Dayton Hudson's downtown Minneapolis department store, North's face appeared simultaneously on 60 television sets but only one TV and a portable radio were sold. "Everyone else just dropped by to see Ollie," said salesman Don Muske.

At JJ's Pub & Grub in the Detroit suburb of Garden City, Mich., three TVs usually show sports programs but co-owner James Mayfield had the hearings on.

"I doubt we'll change the channel, because a lot of people are interested in finding out if the president was involved," Mayfield said.

North said he never discussed the issue of diverting funds from sales of arms to Iran to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels with President Reagan, but had his superiors' approval and assumed that Reagan had also approved.

Financial markets responded with an upward surge. On the New York Stock Exchange, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 20.25 points to close at 2,449.78 as advancing issues outnumbered declines by a margin of about 2-to-1.

In other markets, the dollar climbed above the psychologically important level of 150 Japanese yen for the first time in three months, bond prices strengthened and precious metals futures prices fell.

Traders had feared that any evidence that Reagan was involved in illegal activities would have hurt his effectiveness and robbed the economy of leadership during his final 1½ years in office.

"He (North) didn't embarrass the administration," said James Vick, senior currency trader for Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co.

North's appearance irked soap opera fans, who found their favorite daytime dramas pre-empted by a real-life Marine colonel, members of Congress and lawyers.

EAGER TO TALK — Lt. Col. Oliver North smilingly responds to a question as his attorney, Brendan Sullivan, reviews notes during Tuesday's appearance before the House-Senate panel investigating the Iran-Contra affair.

North limited his responses to private questioning, insisting that most of his interrogation be conducted publicly. (AP Laserphoto)

'Secret' Papers Upset North

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Caucus Room was awash in secret documents, and Lt. Col. Oliver North, testifying about the closed, compartmentalized world of covert operations, expressed shock and horror.

There had once been "boxes within boxes to protect the operation," North told the congressional Iran-Contra committees, and now they were being opened and examined, one by one.

"I mean, there's Top Secret, code word documents," he said. "I pray to God you're not going to turn all these loose."

The documents that helped open the boxes within boxes on secret U.S. arms sales to Iran and the diversion of the profits to anti-communist insurgents in Nicaragua were held in fat, loose-leaf binders stacked by the chairs of members and lawyers on the committee bench.

Similar books thick with documents were piled on one side of North's witness table, across the red felt cloth from his olive-drab garrison cap with its eagle-globe-and-anchor Marine Corps insignia.

And some, in heavily censored form, had been turned loose.

Nearly 700 pages of newly declassified documents, stamped Top Secret but heavily censored with blotches of black ink, were distributed to reporters covering North's testimony.

The committees said any risk to national security had been hidden behind the puddles of black ink and the code names used to shelter nations that either aided Nicaragua's Contra rebels or were asked to do so when Congress cut off U.S. military aid.

North and his lawyer, Brendan Sullivan, complained that the tidal wave of documents had descended on them as well.

It was, said North, "a mountain of paper, bigger than I am."

Executions Carried Out In 2 States

By The Associated Press
A man who murdered a 70-year-old woman went silent to his execution by injection in Texas early today, and the killer of a convenience store clerk died in Mississippi's gas chamber asking that his last words be kept private.

The 82nd and 83rd executions in the nation since the U.S. Supreme Court reinstated the death penalty in 1976 came little more than a day after Virginia electrocuted a man who murdered a neighbor and sexually assaulted her corpse.

In Texas, John R. Thompson, a 32-year-old laborer, was injected at 12:11 a.m., and died at 12:20 a.m. at the Walls Unit of the Texas Department of Corrections in Huntsville, said Attorney General Jim Mattox.

Thompson had no final statement, said Mattox, who spoke with Thompson as the convict was strapped to the death chamber gurney.

"He did not want anyone to think he was discourteous, but he wanted his last words to be with God and not with anybody here," Mattox said.

Thompson did not acknowledge the presence of his father, brother or other friends and relatives who quietly watched from a few feet away.

Connie Ray Evans, 27, was pronounced dead at 12:22 a.m., 17 minutes after officials at the Mississippi State Prison at Parchman began the release of gas into the chamber, said prison warden Donald Cabana.

Acting Corrections Commissioner Don Cabana said that in the last hour Evans' frame of mind was "as good as could be expected under the circumstances."

"He again expressed regret for the crime and for the obvious pain and suffering it caused," Cabana said.

Evans had a final statement, but it wouldn't be made public, he said. "He requested it be kept confidential, and I will honor that request."

The U.S. Supreme Court late Tuesday refused to stay the death sentences of either man, and governors of both states refused to grant last-minute stays.

Thompson was the 25th Texas inmate executed, more than any other state, since Texas resumed the death penalty in 1982. Two opponents of the death penalty held candles in a protest outside the prison Tuesday night.

In Jackson, Miss., about 50 opponents of capital punishment held a candlelight vigil outside the governor's mansion to protest Evans' execution and engaged in periodic shouting matches with a dozen death penalty advocates.

Evans waited through the night a few feet from the gas chamber. Following the Supreme Court rulings, Gov. Bill Allain refused to block the execution, saying Evans had admitted the crime and his rights had been protected.

Evans was sentenced to die for the 1981 shooting death of Arun Pahwa, 28, whom he admitted shooting in the head during a robbery that netted him and an accomplice $140. Pahwa's parents owned the store, and another one at which Evans had worked.

The accomplice in the robbery testified against Evans, pleaded guilty to manslaughter and armed robbery and was sentenced to 20-year and 25-year prison terms. A judge suspended all but five years of the two terms.

Thompson was convicted of murder in the shooting death of Mary Kneupper, 70, of San Antonio, during a 1977 robbery. He has said it was accidental.

He spent the day with family members and prison chaplains as he awaited his execution. Federal judges in San Antonio and New Orleans and the U.S. Supreme Court refused requests for a stay; the Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles denied his appeals, and Gov. Bill Clements issued no reprieve.

On Monday, Richard Lee Whitley, a 41-year-old house painter convicted of murdering a neighbor and sexually assaulting her corpse, was put to death in Virginia's electric chair.

Kiwanis Will Accept Women

WASHINGTON (AP) — The overwhelming vote by Kiwanis International to accept women as members marks the end of an era for the nation's major service organizations, but don't look for an overnight influx of Kiwanis club females.

"I think it'll be gradual," incoming Kiwanis International president Tony Kaiser said Tuesday after the group, in its third try in three years, voted to end a 72-year tradition of limiting members to business and professional men.

The membership gave every indication of enthusiasm for the new rule, with well over two-thirds of the 5,636 delegates to the Kiwanis' annual convention rising noisily to their feet when asked who supported the amendment. Cheers filled the Washington Convention Center when the result was announced and a paper balloting procedure was declared unnecessary.

Turbo-Teks two biodegradable detergents, SOFT-SUDS and HARD-SUDS, are remarkably efficient new cleaning compounds. Their active ingredients cut through dirt and allow the TURBO-WASH (under high low pressure) wash away dirt and grime. SOFT SUDS is general purpose cleaner recommended for jobs such as washing Motor Vehicles, Boats, Motorcycles, Windows (even second story), Outdoor Furniture and more. HARD-SUDS cuts through the heavy grease and grime on engines, asphalt, concrete and driveways, etc. Both cleaners also work well in most other outdoor power pressure washers.

Senate Wives Come Up With New China Policy

By Sarah Booth Conroy
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Senate has a new china policy. It didn't come out of the Senate's Foreign Relations Committee, but from an equally formidable group, the ladies of the Senate.

The chinaware policy, though the wives had a lot on their plate, was finally voted out in time (though many despaired) for the first sample firing to be presented to Sen. Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., and his wife Erma at their 50th wedding anniversary dinner May 28, given by 90 or so senators and wives at the Library of Congress.

Sens. Robert Dole, R-Kan., and Jay Rockefeller, D-W.Va., put together the gift of 10 place settings (about 60 pieces of plates, cups, saucers and bowls) that should arrive, one hopes, before their 51st celebration.

A great deal of bipartisan effort through many Senate sessions has been necessary to be able to set the table. The china service, designed and commissioned by the Senate wives and American-made (of course) by Lenox, will be available to all the senators and their wives, but not their children, constituents, lobbyists, PACs or Fat Cats. (Nothing, however, says you can't take up a collection for your favorite senator and hope he wills the set to you.) The china policy doesn't violate Gramm-Rudman, because the chinaware bill will be private, not public.

"I know we've been talking about choosing a Senate chinaware pattern for 25 years," said B.A. (Mrs. Lloyd) Bentsen. "Carolyn (Mrs. Russell) Long tried years ago to get a consensus. But the women couldn't agree, or they'd forget what had been done so far. Time would go by, another group would be interested. About five years ago we took it up again."

"This time we got around to having Lenox make several samples for us. Not too many, because we'd be back where we started. We had a bipartisan committee, and it finally boiled down to a few of us. Someone had to make a decision."

Dishing it up was not that easy. David Marcos, head of Senate stationery supplies, worked with the women's group and Lenox.

"We didn't want the seal to be so big it would be obscene or overpowering," he said. "We settled on 1 inch in diameter. We were using a bastardization — variation sounds better — of the 1804 Senate seal — stars, branches and eagle. We were between a rock and a hard place, because you can't have it too much like the Great Seal of the United States. So we took the stars out and put them back in — there's only so much you can do with an eagle."

The pattern starts with what Lenox calls the Mansfield shape (no relation to the former senator) and uses the Lowell pattern's gold rim. The prices aren't all firm, but Marcos bets on $140 to $160 per six-piece setting of dinner plate, salad, butter, cup and saucer and soup dish.

How many Senate wives will feel they can't invite anyone to dinner without having the status china has yet to be determined.

"Not many of us are getting married at this point," said B.A. Bentsen, married 44 years. "But I know I want the demitasse and maybe the dessert plate. I have plenty of china, but this is important. You think that 100 years from now your children would turn over a plate and see your name on the back."

The Senate likes to think it sets the tone. But in this china policy they are behind the House of Representatives, which has had members' china for at least a quarter of a century. The White House has presidential china, with the Reagan pattern's having been provided by their friends at the beginning of his term.

Barbara Bush (who has vice presidential china), by virtue of her husband's office, traditionally presides over the ladies of the Senate.

Now the other ladies of the Senate, when their china is delivered, can borrow china from each other. Talk about pork barrels — think about china barrels!

Qualifying Game Set

A qualifying North American Open Pairs Game will be held Saturday at the Senior Center for duplicate bridge players starting at 1:30 p.m.

North-South winners in the Saturday afternoon game were Dot McKemie and Mrs. Ray Gunderson, first with .65 percent; Bertha Jones and Mrs. Fred Sorensen, second; Mrs. A.L. Roque and Dr. Charles Duffy, third, and Mrs. J.W.H. Roberts and Mrs. Lacy Harrell, fourth.

East-West winners were Mrs. W.R. Harris and Dave Proctor, first with .63 percent; Don McKinney and George Martin, second; Mr. and Mrs. Everett Pittman, third, and Mr. and Mrs. Jeff McAllister, fourth.

Mrs. George Martin and Joe Hatch were first place winners in the Thursday evening game with .72 percent; Mr. and Mrs. Jeff McAllister were second; Mrs. Harold Forbes and Effie Williams, third; V. Srinivasan and George Martin, fourth.

Afternoon North-South game winners were Mrs. Ray Gunderson and Dot McKemie, first with .66 percent; Mrs. J.S. Rhodes Jr. and Mrs. Roger Critcher Jr., second; Mrs. Roy Hadden and Sally Kirkwood, third; Bertha Jones and Mary Sorensen, fourth.

East-West included Mrs. David Stevens and Mrs. William McConnell, first with .63 percent; Mrs. George Arapage and Ray Neeland, second; Mary Litchfield and Gloria Fentress, third; Mrs. Robert Barnhill and Mrs. Sam Jones, fourth.

Wedding Plans Are Cancelled

The wedding ceremony of Pamela Lorraine Artis and Gregory Watson set for July 12 has been called off by mutual consent.

Weekend Family Reunion Held

The family of the late Tom Adams celebrated the July 4 weekend at a family reunion held at the home of Lloyd Adams, Route 2, Ayden.

Approximately 94 family members and friends attended. Galin Adams, a grandson, traveled the greatest distance; he is serving in the U.S. Army and is stationed in Alaska.

To avoid extra calories, cut a baking potato into strips, place them on a greased baking sheet in one layer and bake for 45 minutes in a 350 degree oven. They will be crisp and lower in calories than French fries.

Wedding Date Rescheduled

The wedding ceremony of Angela Denise Washington and Melvin Shy scheduled for July 25 has been postponed until Sept. 26. The ceremony will be take place in Holy Trinity Holiness Church.

Support Group Has SIDS Info

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I sympathize with the family in Kansas who recently lost their 4-month-old son. My 6-month-old nephew died in April, also while on a waterbed. However, the coroner's report listed the cause of death as Sudden Infant Death Syndrome (SIDS), not asphyxiation. Several states now require an autopsy whenever there is a sudden death of an infant. This allows the family to know if the child was ill, had a congenital problem, and also to conduct research on this unexplained and unpreventable tragedy.

Maybe the Kansas grandson died of SIDS. If so, it might help the family to know that they could not have prevented his tragic death, thereby relieving them of any guilt.

There may be a local SIDS support group where they can obtain more information. If not, they can contact the National Sudden Infant Death

Syndrome Foundation Inc., 8200 Professional Place, Suite 104, Landover, Md. 20785. The toll-free telephone number (outside of Maryland) is (800) 221-SIDS. (In Maryland, the number is 301-459-3388.) Sign me ... D.V., ALSO GRIEVING

DEAR D.V.: Thank you for your compassionate letter. Please accept my sympathy on the loss of your nephew. In the hopes that your letter may enlighten other families stricken by this kind of tragedy, I am sharing it with my readers.

DEAR ABBY: My husband was married before and has a daughter who is living with her mother in another state. A few years ago, this daughter sent us a picture of herself, and it was beautiful. I bought a nice frame and proudly put the picture on display in our livingroom for all our friends to see.

A few weeks ago, this daughter sent us a new picture. (She just turned 15.) I don't care for this picture at all. She's wearing too much makeup, great big earrings, a sexy, low-cut dress, and her hair is all frizzy. I really would be ashamed to put that picture out for everyone to see.

Here's the conversation between my husband and me when we got the new picture:

Me: "I don't like this picture."
My husband: "I don't like it either. She looks cheap."

Me: "I agree. She looks like a prostitute."

Well, my husband hit the roof, and said, "Don't ever call my daughter a prostitute again!"

I said, "I never called your daughter a prostitute — I just said she looked like one."

We had a big fight over this, and he said I owed him an apology. Abby, my husband has called my sister a "whore" many times because she dates many men. She is not a whore; she's just a popular, friendly girl. I never demanded an apology.

Do you think I owe my husband one? — HATES TO FIGHT

DEAR HATES: No, but if you hate to fight, in the interest of peace, apologize for saying that you thought his daughter looked like a prostitute. And don't remind him that he called your sister a whore.

DEAR ABBY: I do not agree with your advice on divorce and remarriage. Have you read in the Bible what God says about this? "If you divorce and remarry you are living in adultery."

I hope you print this. — BELIEVER IN THE BIBLE

DEAR BELIEVER: Since you are so well-versed in the Bible, please call Matthew 7:1-2: "Judge not, that you be not judged. For with what judgment you judge, you will be judged; and with the same measure you use, it will be measured back to you."

(For Abby's booklet, "What Every Teen-Ager Ought to Know," send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.)

Vietnam Combats Serious Malnutrition

By PETER ENG

Associated Press Writer
QUAT DONG, Vietnam (AP) — The Vietnamese government has launched a campaign to combat a problem it didn't realize it had until a few years ago — serious malnutrition, particularly among children. A large part of the blame is laid to the Vietnamese all-rice diet and the government's campaign is telling people to "add colors" to their meals.

To encourage this, it has revived a traditional concept called VAC, an acronym formed from the Vietnamese words for garden, pond and animal husbandry.

Villagers are advised to transform home gardens into small ecosystems linking fruit and vegetable production with fish culture and the raising of pigs or chickens.

Here in Quat Dong, 15 miles outside Hanoi, the capital, villagers tend a common VAC under the auspices of the National Institute of Nutrition. At the same time, the village health center keeps a growth chart for each child and mothers are given fish powder and vitamin A capsules along with instruction in child care.

Quat Dong is one of 27 villages in northern Vietnam aided in this way by the institute.

While children are the major sufferers, malnutrition also has been detected among soldiers in the Vietnamese army.

Le The Trung, rector of the Military Medical Institute, said that in some military units, nutrition-related diseases like beriberi and neuritis "followed by organic atrophy" occur in "apparently epidemic forms."

Writing in the official Communist Party newspaper Nhan Dan on April 6, Trung said his institute has examined more than 1,000 cases of beriberi. The disease, characterized by nervous and gastrointestinal disorders, is caused by lack of vitamin B1, which is found in whole grains, liver and pork.

UNICEF, the United Nations Children's Fund, says a 1981-84 Vietnamese government survey of 9,000 children under 5 years old found 30.1 percent seriously malnourished and 6.2 percent categorized as "emergency cases for hospitals."

Using a different measure, Dr. Tu

Gay, director of the National Institute of Nutrition, estimates that half of Vietnam's children are malnourished and 1.5 percent are acutely stricken.

Malnutrition, which weakens resistance to disease, has heavily contributed to the high child mortality rate. UNICEF says 98 of every 1,000 children under 5 die in Vietnam, in contrast to 13 in the United States.

One of the problems has been keeping food production at par with population growth and the Communist Party, at its national congress in December, set the production of food for domestic consumption as a top priority.

"One of our most serious problems now is how to reduce the malnutrition rate," Gay said in an interview. With UNICEF's aid, his institute is trying to increase village food production, improve child care and gather critical scientific data on malnutrition.

UNICEF does not regard malnutrition here as great as it is in parts of Africa but of a kind that makes a 4-year-old child look half his age.

Gay said malnutrition rates probably haven't changed in 50 years, the average height and weight of adults having remained constant.

Commonly reported nutrition-related diseases include anemia and xerophthalmia, or blindness due to vitamin A deficiency, which UNICEF says affects eight of every 10,000 Vietnamese children.

Gay said 25 percent of acutely malnourished children at the Swedish-built Children's Hospital in Hanoi die if they contract a disease, and "in worse-equipped hospitals, the rate can reach 40 percent."

The basic problems is that while food output has gone up, the 2.1 percent annual population growth rate, which will add 1.3 million more mouths to feed this year, has meant supplies per person haven't changed in five years.

Vietnam last year harvested a record 18.5 million tons of food crops, but UNICEF says that was 3.5 million to 6.5 million tons below nutritional needs. The average Vietnamese consumes 1,940 calories daily, 15 percent fewer than the minimum the United Nations recommends.

Experts say much malnutrition could be avoided with present resources if Vietnamese relied less on all-rice meals. Vietnamese consume almost no milk, a sixth of the world average in meat, and UNICEF says intake of fats and oils, needed to absorb vitamins, is probably the world's lowest.

North

was not barred from placing some of the proceeds into Swiss bank accounts, where $8 million remains.

—North said Secord, whom he described as "this poor man," was first brought in handling deals for the United States as an "outside entity," in 1984 at the suggestion of then-CIA Director William J. Casey. Secord first dealt with the Nicaraguan Contras, but later, in January 1986, was assigned the tasks of negotiating with Iranian intermediaries on the sale of U.S. arms to Tehran.

North used his second day as witness to offer a strong defense of the activities that lie at the heart of the Iran-Contra affair — the arms for hostages transactions and the diversion of funds from Tehran to the benefit of the Nicaraguan rebels.

"I saw that idea of using the Atayollah Khomeini's money to support the Nicaraguan freedom fighters as a good one, and I still do. I don't think it was wrong. I think it was a neat idea," he said.

As for the arms for hostages swap, he said, "We got three Americans back and there was no terrorism ... For almost 18 months there was no action against Americans" until the affair unraveled last fall.

The Rev. Benjamin Weir, Father Lawrence Martin Jenco and David Jacobsen all were released in exchange for separate shipments of American arms.

North said he believed the affair offered an opportunity "to achieve a strategic opening" with Iran. "We weren't using the taxpayers' money. We were using the ayatollah's money," he said.

The day opened with Nields asking about the phone call Reagan made to North, and a subsequent conversation North had in his office with a National Security Council colleague, Lt. Col. Robert Earl.

"Did you say to him in words or substance that the president had said to you it's important that I not know?" Nields asked.

Replied North: "Counsel, I don't recall the conversation that way. I'm sure that what I said was basically what I told you yesterday. And that is the president told me, 'I just didn't know'" about the diversion of funds.

"It may be that the president told me it's important that I know that he didn't know," he added.

Earl has received immunity from the congressional committees, and presumably provided the information that framed Nields' question.

Farmville Approves Drainage Proposal

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

FARMVILLE — Farmville commissioners gave approval Tuesday night for the town to take part in the construction of an improved storm sewage system to drain the Belcher Street area.

The town has long had a drainage problem in this area. With the construction of an apartment complex fronting the 200 block of Belcher, the builders, the Square Six group, have offered to pay for all labor for the drainage if the town will supply the materials. It's expected that the materials will cost about $10,525.

It was reported that collections of taxes in Farmville are about 96 percent complete for the fiscal year just past, a record high percentage.

The sale of the Hospitality Hut property is completed, the board was told.

An auction of town vehicles and equipment held recently netted $9,599, the board was told.

Sealed bids for a new town hall will be opened July 18 at 2 p.m., it was reported.

A public hearing was set for the Aug. 3 town meeting to consider designating one industrial zone in the town. The planning board has recommended this designation.

Because a well recently dug for the town does not have the output that was expected, the board agreed to direct the well digging company to proceed to a third site for an additional test well. The new site will be about 700 feet off U.S. 258 south of Farmville. Cost of the land for the new site will be approximately $5,000.

A policy was adopted which would allow the town to override Alert Cable television programming to warn the public of threats like natural disasters. This capability would be used only when it would be absolutely necessary, the commissioners indicated. Alert is franchised by the town.

The board noted that $2,892 has been received by the town's public library in donations in memory of Margaret Davis Allen. A budget amendment transferred the money into the 1988 fiscal year budget. It was indicated that Mrs. Allen's family will be consulted as to how the money should be spent.

Truck traffic was barred by ordinance from the two blocks of Horne Avenue from Main Street to Ryon Drive. This measure was taken because of extensive damage to the street done by trucks, even during the time that preparations for repaving the street were underway.

A low bid of $34,295 was accepted from Eastern Electric for six transformers to provide electrical power to the new shopping center at Marlboro on the south end of Farmville. It was noted that the owners of the shopping center are requesting that the area be annexed by the town.

The board authorized Mayor Edna Earle Baker to execute a quit claim deed on property given by the Farmville Arts Society recently to the Farmville Community Arts Council Inc. The town had for the 20 years that the Arts Society was active held a revisionary power over the site of a building owned by the society. The town originally gave the land for the building site.

The family of Miriam Singletary Allen would like to express their deep appreciation and heart-felt thanks to all who showed their loving concern for Miriam and her family during her lifetime and recent illness.

Show Pitch Hits Dawson In Face After Another Homer; Touches Off Brawl

CHICAGO (AP) — Eric Show says he wasn't throwing at Andre Dawson. The Cubs aren't so sure.

Dawson was hit in the face by a Show pitch Tuesday and although it might have been unintentional, circumstances might indicate otherwise.

The Cubs retaliated as if it were intentional, fights broke out and before they beat the San Diego Padres 7-5, five Chicago players, including Dawson and two pitchers, were thrown out of the game.

Dawson, who homered twice on Monday against San Diego, hit his 24th homer of the season and seventh against the Padres in the first inning Tuesday after Dave Martinez also homered.

Paul Noce homered for the Cubs to open the third and one batter later, Show hit Dawson in the face. Dawson suffered lacerations of the lip, needing 21 stitches inside and outside the mouth, and a contusion of the left cheekbone, but there were no fractures.

The Padres insisted it was unintentional and some of the Cubs agreed, but retaliation was the order of the day.

When Dawson was hit, Rick Sutcliffe came out of the dugout after Show and both benches emptied.

Dawson remained on the ground for a couple of minutes, but when he got up he also went after Show and another general brawl broke out.

Sutcliffe also was ejected, as was Manny Trillo for throwing equipment on the field. Cubs starter Greg Maddux and Manager Gene Michael were tossed out in the fourth inning when Maddux hit Benito Santiago with a pitch.

Reliever and winner Scott Sanderson and coach Johnny Oates were ejected in the eighth when Sanderson threw a pitch behind Chris Brown.

Show left the park before the game ended but issued a statement saying, "I sincerely regret the unintended pitch that hit Andre Dawson. I have never intentionally thrown a pitch to hit a batter in my life. It was unfortunate and I'm sure I'll regret it for the rest of my life."

Padres Manager Larry Bowa stood by Show and when asked if the Cubs were out of line, Bowa said, "I can't answer what was going through the Cubs' minds."

"If the Cubs thought Show was intentionally trying to hit Andre, then they weren't out of line (for retaliating)," Bowa said. "You would have to know the individual. Eric would never throw at anyone intentionally. All he was trying to do was pitch inside."

"I have been a manager a short time but I never told anyone to hit anyone," Bowa said. "I know some of my pitchers would but Show is not one of them."

Michael had his doubts, especially when he considers that Dawson might miss a couple of games because of his injuries.

"If I see any more balls at our players' heads, I'm going to go after them if that's what it takes to stop it," Michael said.

Asked about Sanderson possibly throwing at batters, Michael said, "Draw your own conclusions. But Andre has been getting upset at people throwing at his head recently."

"The sad part is you can never really tell if someone is throwing intentionally," Michael said. "I wish there was a way of telling, like an alarm would go off."

Sanderson came close to hitting Tony Gwynn, the National League's leading hitter, three times in the fifth inning.

Sanderson said "No" when asked if he was throwing at the batters, but his later statements would indicate otherwise.

"I know Eric Show and I would have to say he did not intentionally throw at Andre," Sanderson said. "We don't like that happening but to ignore it would be wrong. Andre is a big chunk of this ball club."

"It's a sad situation and unfortunate," Sanderson said. "It mars the whole game of baseball."

Maddux, a 21-year-old rookie right-hander, also was a victim of circumstances, claiming he did not throw at Santiago before he was given the heave-ho.

"I wanted to pitch him inside because the first time I faced him, I threw a pitch inside and he was late on it," Maddux said. "I don't like being thrown out of a game, especially with a lead. I'm fighting for my job. It doesn't make sense getting thrown out."

Show, 4-10, was the loser and had to leave the game when his left foot was stepped on during the fights.

Dawson Downed

Chicago's Andre Dawson goes down after being hit in the face with a pitch by San Diego Padres' pitcher Eric Show in the third inning in Chicago Tuesday. The play touched off a bench-clearing melee involving both teams. Dawson suffered mouth and lip injuries and was taken to a hospital for stitches and x-rays. (AP Laserphoto)

Leach Captures His Eighth In Row; Darling Wins One

By The Associated Press

Terry Leach, Ron Darling and Bob Sebra will be on a short vacation next week when the All-Star Game is played. Neither Darling nor Sebra have given a thought to being in Oakland for that special game. But Leach certainly has.

Leach improved his record to 8-0 — setting a Mets record for consecutive victories without a loss — as the Mets won the opener of a two-night doubleheader in Atlanta 6-2 Tuesday. Darling then broke a 2½-month slide in which he was 0-6 with eight no-decisions as New York took the nightcap 5-1, handing the Braves their 12th loss in 15 games.

Sebra pitched his third straight complete game, a five-hitter at Houston in which he retired the last 18 batters as the Montreal Expos beat the Astros 2-0.

Elsewhere, it was Chicago 7, San Diego 5 in a game marred by two brawls; Pittsburgh beat San Francisco 6-4 in 12 innings; Philadelphia downed Cincinnati 10-8 in 10 innings; and St. Louis beat Los Angeles 5-4 in both games of a doubleheader that ended at 3 a.m. CDT, with the second game going 10 innings.

Mets 5, Braves 2
Mets 5, Braves 1

Despite his gaudy record, Leach won't be going to the All-Star Game. His manager, Davey Johnson, who will handle the National League squad, said he won't pick the veteran pitcher whose 8-0 streak has given him a 14-6 lifetime record.

"It would be great for me to take him," Johnson said. "The amount of work he has done is quality. But I can't take him. He hasn't pitched enough innings."

Leach has thrown 73 2-3 innings, including six Tuesday night. He thinks that's enough.

"I've got to be considered," he said. "Every time I've gone out, I've won. I don't know what else you can do."

"It would be a great thrill for me. If I don't, it probably will be the only shot at this I'll have. I've got not control over it."

Darling didn't have a great deal of control over his slump. He didn't pitch especially well for the last 10 weeks, but he also suffered from hard luck.

Against Atlanta, he allowed seven hits and one run in six innings. This time, the bullpen held it and the Mets scored three runs in the last two innings.

"I waited a long time," Darling said of going since April 22 without winning. "It's like going 0-40. It was not fun and it was not fun to hear about it. But that is the nature of the beast. I'm happy it's all over with."

Shortstop Rafael Santana had the game-winning hits in the seventh inning of both games. His two-run single in the first game put New York ahead to stay and his RBI double in the nightcap broke a 1-1 tie.

Expos 2, Astros 0
Sebra is only 5-9, but he has pitched sensationally since making a decision last month.

"When I was 3-8, I decided to take it as a new season," he said. "Now I've turned things around and I don't think I have anything to prove."

In his last start, Sebra lost 1-0 to the Cubs but pitched a three-hitter and struck out 14. This time, he gave himself some offensive support with a run-scoring single in the second inning for the first RBI of his career. Andres Galarraga singled in the other run in the fifth.

"I felt like I was in control the whole way," Sebra said. "After we had a 1-0 lead, it was weird. I felt confident. I knew I could hold the lead."

"We need a pitcher of that type quality to step forward, a stopper type guy," Expos Manager Buck Rodgers said.

Cubs 7, Padres 5
Five Cubs, Manager Gene Michael and coach Johnny Oates were ejected from the game, which was marred by an ugly exchange of beanballs.

Andre Dawson, who hit his third homer against San Diego in two days and seventh against the Padres this season, was hit in the mouth by an Eric Show pitch in the third inning.

While Dawson was lying on the ground face down, Cubs pitcher Rick Sutcliffe ran out of the dugout and chased Show as a fight erupted. Order was restored until Dawson got off the ground and, bleeding from the mouth, went after Show. Another fight broke out in front of the Padres' dugout.

Umpire Charlie Williams grabbed Show and led him off the field. Sutcliffe and Dawson were ejected from the game, Show was given a warning and was removed from the game because he hurt his foot during the fight.

Hearns, Roldan Set Meet For Middleweight Title

NEW YORK (AP) — Despite winning three world boxing titles, Thomas Hearns has always been overshadowed by Sugar Ray Leonard and Marvelous Marvin Hagler.

That could change Oct. 29 when Hearns meets Juan Roldan in Las Vegas, Nev., for the vacant World Boxing Council middleweight title. A victory would make Hearns the first fighter to win world titles in four weight divisions.

"It's been a dream of mine for a long time," Hearns said Tuesday. "I'm in a position to do something that's never been done before. It's a chance to put my name in the record books."

Ten fighters, including Leonard, Roberto Duran and Alexis Arguello, have won titles in three weight divisions. Arguello and Duran lost their bids for a fourth title.

Hearns, 29, knocked out Pipino Cuevas in 1980 to win the World Boxing Association welterweight championship. In 1982, he won the WBC super welterweight title with a 15-round decision over Wilfred Benitez. On March 7, Hearns captured his third belt by beating Dennis Andries for the WBC light heavyweight title.

Despite his success, Hearns is probably best known for his losses to Leonard and Hagler — the only two defeats in his 46-bout professional career.

"They're behind me now," he said at a news conference also attended by Roldan. "If Ray Leonard wants a fourth title, he needs me. I don't need him."

To meet the 160-pound middleweight limit, Hearns will have to lose about 14 pounds.

"I don't think it will be a big problem," he said. "I'll lose three or four pounds as soon as I start training. Losing 14 pounds won't be easy, but I know I can do it."

Roldan has won 61 of 67 bouts, including 41 by knockout. The 30-year-old Argentinian was stopped by Hagler in a middleweight title bout in 1984 after knocking the champion down for the first time in his career.

Roldan has won 12 straight fights since that loss, including a ninth-round knockout of James Kinchen on the undercard of the Hagler-Leonard fight April 6.

Roldan, speaking through an interpreter, said he isn't worried about Hearns' punching power.

"Outside the ring, I respect him a lot," he said. "But when he is in the ring, I am going to kill him."

Hearns said he plans to return to the light heavyweight division after fighting Roldan.

"I'm more comfortable carrying the heavier weight," he said. "At this point in my career, it's more natural for me."

Hearns may end up fighting International Boxing Federation light heavyweight champion Bobby Czyz, who will appear in the "co-feature" on the Hearns-Roldan card. Czyz probably will fight Charles Williams, who is currently ranked No. 1 by the IBF. However, if Williams loses his July 14 bout against Joe Golphin, Czyz will meet the fighter who replaces Williams as the top-ranked contender.

The Hearns-Roldan fight will be held in a 10,000-seat outdoor arena at the Las Vegas Hilton. It will be shown on closed-circuit and pay-per-view television in the United States and Canada.

The WBC, WBA and IBF middleweight titles have been vacant since Leonard retired following his victory over Hagler.

Legion To Open Series

Pitt County's American Legion baseball team will open play tonight in the first round of the playoffs, playing host to Kinston.

At the same time, Snow Hill will also open play, entertaining Edenton in the opening round.

Both games are set for 8 p.m. tonight at Harrington Field in Greenville and at Greene Central High School near Snow Hill, respectively.

Elsewhere, Rocky Mount will be the host for Wilson in the other series. Wayne County, which tied with Snow Hill for the regular season title, drew a first round bye.

All first round series are best-of-three. The second games are scheduled for Thursday night at the home field of the lower seeded teams, Kinston, Edenton and Wilson. Should a third game be needed in any series, it is now scheduled for Friday on the higher seed's home field.

Second round play is scheduled to begin on Monday. Wayne County will play the survivor of the Rocky Mount-Wilson series, while the Pitt-Kinston winner will take on the survivor of the Snow Hill-Edenton series in round two, a best-of-five series.

Yankees Rally Past Twins, 12-7

By The Associated Press
As fast as they could say Steve Lombardozzi, the New York Yankees had rallied from a seven-run deficit. The Yankees entered the bottom of the seventh inning trailing 7-0 to the Minnesota Twins and former teammate Joe Niekro Tuesday night. With one out, Mike Pagliarulo homered and Dan Schatzeder relieved. Pinch-hitter Rick Cerone hit a grounder toward second that got by Lombardozzi for an error, and the Yankees had the break they needed. New York went on to score six more runs in the seventh — all unearned — to tie the score and then won the game 12-7 with five runs in the eighth. The Yankees snapped the tie on two consecutive wild pitches by reliever Juan Berenguer.

"That's not a rally, that's an explosion. That's the quickest runs I've seen scored in a long time," Yankee Manager Lou Piniella said, apparently forgetting an 11-run third inning against Boston and Roger Clemens on June 26 that wiped out a 9-0 deficit. Elsewhere in the American League, Chicago beat Baltimore 9-3; Cleveland defeated Kansas City 6-4;

Toronto tripped Texas 6-2; California beat Boston 9-4; Detroit downed Oakland 6-4; and Seattle outlasted Milwaukee 9-5. New York broke the 7-7 tie in the eighth, starting when Cerone drew a leadoff walk from Keith Atherton, 4-4. After Wayne Tolleson sacrificed and Rickey Henderson walked, Berenguer took over and got ahead of Willie Randolph 1-2. But his next two pitches sailed over the head of catcher Tim Lardner, allowing Cerone to score and putting the Yankees in front. "It was an exciting and scary at-bat," Randolph said. "Both pitches were close to my head. He's known to get a little wild." Randolph walked, Don Mattingly singled to make it 9-7 and Claudell Washington hit a three-run homer, his fifth. "When you never think you're out of a game, you're a dangerous club," Mattingly said. Tim Stoddard, 2-1, the third New York pitcher, worked two scoreless innings as the Yankees ended Minnesota's four-game winning streak.

Blue Jays 6, Rangers 2
Tony Fernandez hit a two-run double, Toronto took advantage of sloppy fielding by Texas in the fifth inning and Jim Clancy, 9-6, won for only the second time in his last nine starts. Clancy entered the eighth with a three-hitter, but with one out Oddibe McDowell hit his 10th homer to make the score 6-2. Tom Henke pitched the final 1 2-3 innings for his 15th save. Texas starter Mike Loynd, 1-5, was the victim of poor fielding and his own wildness when the Blue Jays broke a 1-1 tie with three runs in the fifth inning. White Sox 9, Orioles 3 Carlton Fisk drove in four runs with a two-run homer and a double and Floyd Bannister pitched three-hit ball for seven innings as Chicago sent Baltimore to its 31st defeat in 37 games. Fisk, 9-for-18 in his last four games, hit his ninth homer after Greg Walker led off the second with a single. Walker hit his 17th homer in the eighth to give Chicago a 6-2 lead, and the White Sox added three runs in the ninth on Harold Baines' RBI single and Fisk's two-run double.

Indians 6, Royals 4
Cleveland's Joe Carter hit a two-run homer just inside the left field foul pole off reliever Dan Quisenberry with one out in the ninth inning. Carter had tied the game 4-4 with a two-run single off Quisenberry, 4-1, in the seventh. Carter's 18th homer of the season came on a 2-2 pitch and followed a leadoff single by Tony Bernazard. Doug Jones, 2-1, pitched 2 2-3 hitless innings for the victory. Tigers 6, Athletics 4 Bill Madlock hit a two-run homer and Frank Tanana pitched seven-hit ball for 6 1-3 innings as Detroit defeated Oakland, snapping the Athletics' three-game winning streak. Lou Whitaker walked to lead off the game and Madlock followed with a two-run homer off Joaquin Andujar, 3-2. The Athletics made it 2-1 in their half of the inning on Mike Davis' 19th homer of the season. The Tigers took a 5-2 lead with single runs in the fourth and fifth on RBI singles by Darrell Evans and Kirk Gibson. Matt Nokes hit his 17th of the season in the eighth for Detroit.

Mariners 9, Brewers 5
Dave Valle highlighted a four-run Seattle first inning with a two-run homer and Jerry Reed pitched four innings of one-hit relief for his second save. Starter Lee Guetterman, 7-1, worked five innings, allowing five runs and seven hits, including three homers. Five consecutive base hits by Seattle, including Valle's ninth homer, chased Juan Nieves, 5-6, after only one-third of an inning. Jim Paciorek, Bill Schroeder and Rob Deer homered for Milwaukee.

Suffering Fans Take Heart In Plight Of Mudville Nine

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer
If you think your team is struggling this season, consider the plight of the Mudville Nine, mired in a baseball's longest losing streak, with no signs of turning it around. Slumping teams shuffle their lineups, trying to shake their troubles. Consistent Mudville, however, stays with the same cast, and gets the same results. Ninety-nine years ago this summer, Ernest Thayer wrote "Casey at the Bat," a baseball ballad that perfectly captures the frustrations of the sport, its peaks and valleys, its joys and disappointments. The game, you see, is very much like life. Maybe that's why it's so popular and why Workman Publishing has produced a commemorative "Casey." Thayer was editor of the Harvard Lampoon and a classmate of William Randolph Hearst. He later went to work for Hearst's San Francisco Examiner, which paid him $10 for writing "Casey." The work caught the eye of DeWolf Hopper, an actor, who recited it in a New York theater. Hopper said in his autobiography that the audience, which reportedly included members of the Chicago White Sox and New York Giants baseball teams, "was lifted out of its seats." After that, Hopper made "Casey" a regular part of his routine, reciting the poem some 10,000 times, according to historian James Gilreath. Hopper twice recorded it and made Thayer's work an important part of baseball literature. Now, almost a century later, its message remains valid, for San Diego and Cleveland, for the White Sox and the Pirates, for every loser everywhere. Here was Mudville, losing 4-2 in the last inning. Two out, nobody on. The soft part of the batting order coming up. Despair was in the air, a condition all too familiar to baseball fans. And then, quite suddenly, a rally developed. "Flynn let drive a single, to the wonderment of all, And Blake, the much despised, tore the cover off the ball; And when the dust had lifted, and men saw what had occurred, There was Jimmy safe at second and Flynn a-hugging third."

A chance. That's all any fan ever wants for his team. A chance to win. That's what Mudville had now. And here, majestically, came "Casey, Mighty Casey, advancing to the bat." Thayer's Casey was born of pure imagination, a strictly fictional, Ruthian character with day-saving qualities. Artist Mark Lundeen envisioned him as 6-foot-4. That's the size of his Casey statue currently on display at the Hall of Fame. Thayer could not have had any of his day's players in mind. There were plenty of interesting names like Chicken Wolf, Cap Anson, Cub Stricker and Con Daily playing at the time. But there were no Caseys on the rosters of National League or American Association teams in 1888. And baseball was still 24 years away from the debut of the man who would become its most famous Casey. The immortal Mr. Stengel did not arrive until 1912. Casey was the perfect name for Thayer's hero. There is some question if the poem would have been as successful had the author written "Chicken At The Bat." In his climactic swing, Casey took the first two pitches, both for strikes. Thayer had set the stage for the last pitch. "And now the pitcher holds the ball, and now he lets it go, And now the air is shattered by the force of Casey's blow. Oh, somewhere in this favored land the sun is shining bright; The band is playing somewhere, and somewhere hearts are light, And somewhere men are laughing, and little children shout; But there is no joy in Mudville — mighty Casey has struck out."

Reds Are Reeling From Slew Of Hurts

CINCINNATI (AP) — Cincinnati Reds left fielder Kal Daniels faced a brighter prognosis than teammate Ron Oester after both underwent knee operations for injuries sustained in Sunday's game with the New York Mets. Daniels, who underwent arthroscopic surgery Tuesday, is expected to rejoin the team within six weeks. Oester is through for the season and his future as a player is in doubt because of the degree of the injury. Oester was injured when Mookie Wilson slid into him at second base while trying to break up a ninth-inning double play attempt. Oester's surgery, performed Monday by Dr. Warren Harding and Dr. Robert Heidt Jr. was described as a complete rebuilding of the left knee. Daniels, 23, was injured while running out a second-inning double in Sunday's game. Daniels, who has been plagued with chronic knee problems, did not suffer ligament or cartilage damage, said Harding, the Reds' orthopedist and team physician. Arthroscopic surgery on Daniels' knee lasted 90 minutes at Cincinnati's Christ Hospital. The injury to Oester, 31, involved both ligament and cartilage damage. Harding said Oester will definitely not play again this season. "You can only hope he'll be back for next season," Reds Manager Pete Rose said. "It's a bad injury, but if you had to pick a guy to come back from an injury like that, it would be Oester. He'll fight back." For the Reds, the two injuries throw the daily lineup into disarray at a time when the team was building a first-place cushion in the National League's Western Division. Daniels was hitting .316 with 17 home runs and 37 runs batted in. He also is second on the team in walks with 35. Oester, a switch-hitter who was once the Reds' regular second baseman, had been playing second base against right-handed starting pitchers. Utility infielder Dave Concepcion, a right-handed hitter, played against left-handers.

"And now the pitcher holds the ball, and now he lets it go, And now the air is shattered by the force of Casey's blow. Oh, somewhere in this favored land the sun is shining bright; The band is playing somewhere, and somewhere hearts are light, And somewhere men are laughing, and little children shout; But there is no joy in Mudville — mighty Casey has struck out."

Had Cox Wood Preserving Been In Business In 1924 We Might Still Be Racing On Board Tracks.

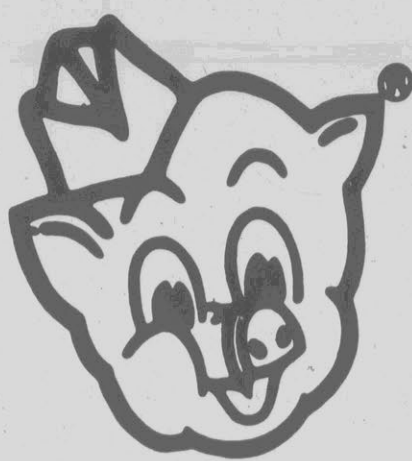

That's right! In the twenties, American super speedways were constructed of wood and were very fast. They were located in places like Kansas City, Beverly Hills and, yes, Charlotte, too. The problem with these tracks was that they rotted, decayed, and ultimately collapsed. Beginning in 1954, Cox Wood Preserving began pressure-treating Southern Yellow Pine lumber using the patented Wolmanizing process. These preservative chemicals provided resistance against termites, rot and decay without continuous renewal and maintenance. Thus, had Cox Wood Preserving been around in the twenties to provide the pressure-treated lumber for the job, Haskell Willsingham and all the other NASCAR stars might still be racing on the boards today.

Chi Chi's Time Off No Consolation

FAIRFIELD, Conn. (AP) — It should have been good news for the other golfers that Chi Chi Rodriguez hadn't played for 10 days before arriving for the U.S. Senior Open. It isn't shaping up that way.

"I haven't played much lately because my mother died recently. But I played today for the first time in 10 days and I did very, very well," Rodriguez announced Tuesday after a practice round.

"The golf course was made for me. I saw it for the first time today and thought I was in heaven."

The news doesn't bode well for the other 149 golfers participating in the U.S. Senior Open, which begins Thursday on the hilly par-71, 6,559-yard Brooklawn Country Club course.

Rodriguez has won five tournaments this year on the PGA Seniors Tour, including four straight in one stretch. He also has two second-place finishes, a third, a fourth, a fifth and a seventh.

For his efforts, the native of Puerto Rico has pocketed $274,133.

Coming off rainy practice rounds, Rodriguez and Billy Casper both said the course, redesigned by A.W. Tillinghast in 1930, was in excellent shape.

Tillinghast, famous for his work on the Winged Foot, Baltusrol and San Francisco Golf Club courses, fashioned Brooklawn with "collecting" greens, which means the putting surfaces are dished in from the sides.

Although the greens are in good condition, their subtle twists will pose the biggest challenge for the players this week, Casper predicted.

"The scoring will depend on what happens on the greens and where the USGA places the flags," Casper said.

"They may be the most perfect greens I've seen in a long time. If you read it right and stroke it right, there's no way you should miss a putt."

The question of course readiness served as just another straight line for Rodriguez, well-known for his fun-loving approach to the game.

"The greens were perfect, the fairways were perfect," Rodriguez said, "and I don't know about the rough because I wasn't in it."

Casper thinks maturity is the reason that some players, such as Rodriguez, don't reach their peak until they get to the Seniors Tour.

"Age has helped us to understand our golf swings and to control ourselves on the course," he said.

But Rodriguez, who had moderate success on the regular PGA Tour, said he couldn't explain why he was reborn last year on the Seniors Tour. The possibilities, he suggested, range from the physical to the mental to the supernatural.

Rodriguez credited Jack Nicklaus for helping his confidence several years ago by inviting him, even though he was struggling, to join his golf club company.

"I used to see where not to hit it. Now I see where to hit it," he said.

More recently, he credits golf guru Bob Toski for helping him regain his putting stroke.

And there may be yet another reason for all this winning, Rodriguez added.

"I think maybe I died and was reincarnated as Arnold Palmer."

No Golf Carts This Year At The U.S. Senior Open

FAIRFIELD, Conn. (AP) — Golf carts were allowed in the U.S. Senior Open two years ago and P.J. Boatwright Jr., the USGA's executive director of rules and competition, didn't like it one bit.

"Aesthetically, it wasn't a pretty sight to see spectators, many of them older than the players, walking up hills while the golfers rode carts," he said. "It takes away a lot of the dignity, I think."

In the face of a protest by Charles Owens, the United States Golf Association and Boatwright stood firm on Tuesday in defending their decision not to allow carts in their championship events.

Owens, who has a fused left knee and ankle as well as back problems, said he would play in this week's U.S. Senior Open but probably would be on crutches by the time he finishes the first round.

Despite letters from his doctor and from four advocacy agencies for the handicapped, Owens, 57, said he was told by USGA officials that they would make no exception to allow him to use a golf cart this week on the hilly Brooklawn Country Club course.

"I don't think the USGA should discriminate against the handicapped," Owens said. "That's what they're doing. I'm handicapped, golf is my living and I need to be able to make a living."

Owens was told he couldn't use a cart even for a practice round, so he passed up the opportunity because he wanted to try to save his body for the opening round Thursday.

Owens, who has won $78,400 on the Senior Tour this year without a victory, suffers from a variety of lower body ailments that started when he hurt his left knee in a 1952 parachute jump while with the Army at Fort Bragg, N.C.

He has had four knee operations and suffers from chronic arthritis in his lower back. He takes cortisone injections and pills to control the pain.

Carts are optional on the Seniors Tour, which is sanctioned by the PGA, and so Owens is able to play as many tournaments as he wants. But carts are not allowed by the USGA, which sanctions Open competition at all levels.

"The USGA sympathizes with Charles Owens and others who want to play in the Senior Open but who find it difficult to walk," Frank Hannigan, senior executive director of the USGA, said in a prepared statement.

"We continue to feel that walking is an integral and desirable part of championship golf," Hannigan added. "The Senior Open will therefore remain a competition which does not allow carts."

Boatwright recalled the 1985 Senior Open at the Edgewood Tahoe Golf Course in Stateline, Nev., for which an exception was made when concerns arose about the effects high altitudes might have on players.

"I wish we hadn't done it and, as it turned out, I don't believe it was necessary," he said.

Boatwright said he, too, sympathized with Owens.

"We don't like to look like a bunch of ogres. We wish we could figure a way to let Charles Owens play (with a cart). But you can't do it for him without doing it for everybody else. How do you treat one player differently from another? There are a lot of guys who would like to ride."

Owens vows to play as long as he can as a protest on behalf of all handicapped people. He said he hadn't decided whether to take legal action.

"Are they trying to find out who can walk 72 holes and come off the least tired or who's going to be the person with the lowest score?" Owens asked. "This is an endurance test, not a golf tournament."

Owens hasn't played in the U.S. Senior Open since 1984 because he hasn't been able to walk well enough to get around 72 holes.

ECU Runner Is Counting On Boost For Olympics

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

For the second time in track and field history, East Carolina University has an Olympic hopeful.

He is Lee Vernon McNeill, a rising senior in the school's department of theater arts who said he's counting on his performance at the upcoming Olympic Festival to put him in the running for the South Korean Olympics.

McNeill, a 22-year-old, St. Paul native, is among approximately 3,000 athletes who will be competing in the North Carolina festival July 13-July 26.

And while a good performance in the 100-meter dash and as part of the 100-meter relay team will not secure the ECU sprinter a place at the '88 Olympics, the North Carolina games will give him a chance to see how he stacks up against the best America has to offer.

If McNeill makes it past the festival and on to the Olympics, he will have accomplished something Otis Melvin never got a chance to do. A Fayetteville resident and former ECU student, Melvin advanced to the finals of the 1980 Olympic trials, but President Carter's boycott of the Moscow Games prevented him from running.

Sam Jones, former ECU women's basketball star, will also be competing at the festival as part of the team handball squad. Jones currently is in Colorado training for the festival and could not be reached for comment.

McNeill, Jones and other top competitors from the north, south, eastern and western United States will be arriving in the Piedmont Monday for the two-week session in which they will test their skills in a variety of sports including archery, baseball, basketball, boxing, canoeing-kayaking, cycling, diving and equestrian events as well as fencing, figure skating, field hockey, gymnastics, ice hockey, judo, modern pentathlon, roller skating, rowing, shooting, soccer, softball, speed skating, swimming, synchronized swimming, table tennis, taekwondo, tennis, team handball, volleyball, water polo, weight lifting, wrestling and yachting.

The list of sporting events is long, but according to the festival's director of communications, Ken Smith, the varied schedule provides something for everyone. Smith served as an assistant athletic director at ECU for a number of years.

"With 34 Olympic and Pan American sports, any fan of amateur athletics is going to find something that they can enjoy at the U.S. Olympic Festival ranging from popular sports like basketball and gymnastics to the lesser known sports like canoe-kayaking and archery."

As of Tuesday, Smith said over $1.5 million of festival tickets had been sold, which he said translates into attendance figures topping 200,000. "People are coming from all over the country, but the bulk of spectators will be from within the state," he said.

Held in Houston last year, the festival's main attractions were gymnastic and figure skating competitions and opening ceremonies, according to Smith. "However, in North Carolina as you might expect, basketball is one of the big ticket sellers," he said.

Although sales for the 1987 festival have followed traditional lines with the exception of basketball, Smith said seats are still available for all events. "Several sessions of swimming, synchronized swimming, boxing and diving are sold out, but we have tickets for other sessions of those same sports," he said.

One festival attraction has nothing to do with sports, according to Smith.

"People will be surprised at the lengths Raleigh, Durham, Chapel Hill and Greensboro have gone to create a festival atmosphere. The cities, with the help of the state Department of Transportation and a group called the Triangle J Council, have undertaken a tremendous beautification project that equates to about a half-million dollar expenditure which is highlighted with red, white and blue flowers and shrubs that go from Raleigh through Durham to Chapel Hill and Greensboro.

In addition, Smith said many cities on the Olympic route will be flying banners and he said festival officials are encouraging all North Carolinians to fly their flags during the two weeks of games in support of the athletes. "It makes it all a bit more special, especially for the people involved who have worked hard to make this thing reality," he said.

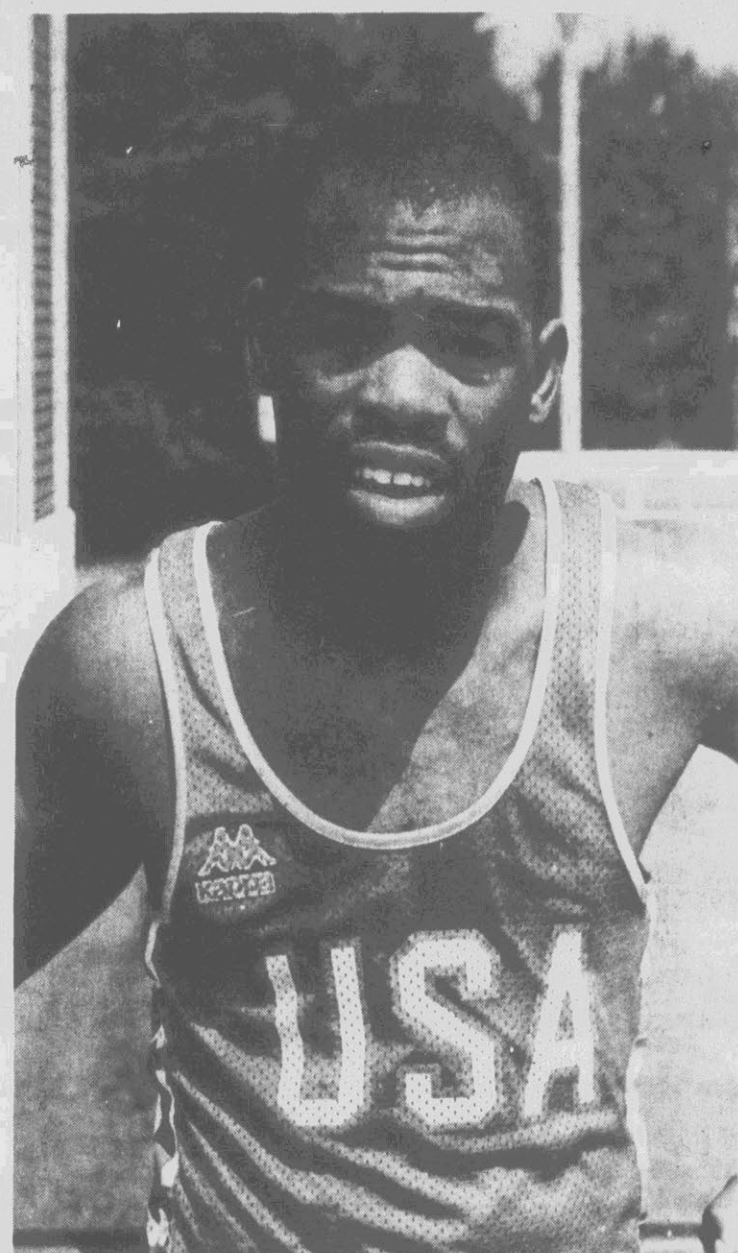

Tickets for festival events may be purchased through the national ticket office, 1-800-233-4050.

Civil War Era Show Scheduled

SEVEN SPRINGS — A program, "Return to the Civil War Zone," will be presented in the amphitheater adjacent to museum of the Cliffs of the Neuse State Park near Seven Springs at 9 p.m. Saturday.

The program is a venture back in time to see and hear authentically uniformed soldiers of the Civil War, one a Confederate, the other a Union soldier, take part in a discussion of historical events of the Civil War in the Wayne County area.

The skit is being presented by Cliff Tyndall, historical site specialist from Bentonville Battleground.

As the gate to the park closes at 9 p.m., persons planning to attend the event should arrive prior to that hour.

On Sunday, another Civil War program will be presented.

That afternoon, members of the Tuckahoe Braves of Company D, 27th Regiment and Company C, 28th Regiment, will create images of the Civil War soldier. Firing demonstrations will be given at 3 p.m.

Both programs are free and open to the public.

Cliffs of the Neuse State Park is located about 13 miles southeast of Goldsboro on Highway 111.

For further information on the park, its programs and activities, contact Claude E. Crews at 778-6234 between 8 a.m. and noon Mondays through Fridays.

By CLAY DEANHARDT
Reflector Staff Writer

Some people might call the Rev. Michael Clay an anomaly.

The 34-year-old Catholic priest, a native of New Bern, took his vows seven years ago this November. Before that, while a student at Catholic University in Washington, D.C., Clay was doing something far removed from such high callings.

He played rock and roll.

The band was called D.C. The time was the early '70s and the rock group Chicago was hot, so D.C. played Chicago music along with arrangements of its own.

"We were quite busy," Clay said. "Initially we played at taverns and Holiday Inns, places like that — then larger restaurants with lounges or nightclubs attached."

"It's a very fast-paced lifestyle. You do things flying by the seat of your pants," he said.

Performing was something Clay was used to. In high school he played saxophone in the jazz band, and he commuted to East Carolina University from New Bern to take music lessons. He was at Catholic University to get an education in music, so when someone approached him about playing woodwinds in this new band, Clay jumped at the chance.

He said he learned many new things working with the band. The members handled all the equipment and technical aspects of their performances in addition to scheduling their own bookings, caring for their instruments and composing and arranging their own music.

Clay said he was more of an arranger than a composer in those days. As is true with the music of many good garage bands, several D.C. songs were the result of "jam" session arrangements where all of the guys would kick in ideas until they finally got something that sounded like a song.

After three years, though, Clay decided it was time to move on to something else. "I left the band because I needed to do something more serious with my life," he said. "I knew living in a band was a fun — but I needed to be more serious. It was in my best interest and the group's best interest for me to step aside."

Clay told a visitor about the events that led him to the priesthood.

"God had a role to play in all this," he said. "In the back of my mind during college — God was always there, even though I wasn't the most fervent of all Christians."

So Clay left D.C. and even America for seminary school in Rome. Eventually, though, he also left the seminary before finishing his studies and becoming ordained.

He said he was scared by what he saw there. "I was being controlled by God to bend my will to him. I didn't want to do that. I didn't want to lose my independence."

Clay ran back to Washington, where he taught music and worked as music director in a church. There, he said, he found out what was wrong with him in something that a priest told him.

"You'll know what's right when you get a sense of peace and fulfillment," he was told. "I was looking for happiness and not fulfillment. As soon as I dealt with that, the ministry fell into place," he said.

"God allowed me to do my thing for a while. I am firmly convinced that God wanted me to do this," he had said earlier.

Returning to the ministry, Clay finished his seminary work in Washington and soon became ordained. After many changes in heart and careers, he finally had a master's degree in theology from Catholic University, along with a life-long commitment to the church.

He has managed to combine both the passions of his life though, into one calling.

Choreographer Is Leaving Brussels To Seek New Goals In Switzerland

By RAF CASERT
Associated Press Writer
BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — French choreographer Maurice Bejart is leaving Brussels after 27 years of revolutionizing ballet to seek new challenges in Switzerland.

The founder of the Ballet of the 20th Century goes to Lausanne after a conflict with the head of Brussels' Monnaie Opera, where Bejart first stunned critics with his avant-garde dance performances in 1959. Since then, he has set new standards for modern dance.

As he prepared to leave last week, both Belgium and the European Economic Community lamented the loss. Lausanne welcomed the gain and others gnashed their teeth at having failed to lure him.

"We should respect the fact that he thinks of something different and something new. Every artist dreams at certain times of new opportunities," said Monnaie director Gerard Mortier.

The choreographer's departure has been linked to Mortier whose opera productions in recent years have cast a shadow over Bejart's ballet. Bejart has complained that as a result Mortier put too much emphasis on the opera productions at the expense of his ballet.

"People fight tooth and nail over an opera ticket, while Bejart seems to have lost his hold on the public," commented the daily De Standaard.

"Bejart's departure hurts us," said Carlo Ripa di Meana, cultural affairs commissioner of the EEC. "Brussels is the capital of Europe and Bejart is a symbol of modern dance. It is a real pity."

However, Bejart wants to make a new start in the quiet surroundings of Lake Geneva.

"I want to question, renew myself again," he said recently. "I want a new start toward the future to create something new."

Renewing is something Bejart has done from the day he was taken under the wings of Brussels' Monnaie Opera after attempts to break onto the Paris dance scene failed, leaving him nearly broke.

He set the tone with his first production, Stravinsky's "Rite of Spring" in 1959. It turned out to be a shocker. In sleek, shiny tights, the dancers created an erotic aura with impulsive, natural movements and shocked the conservative mores of the audience at the time, which was used to more chaste apparel and stringent dance routines.

"A creator who does not shock is useless," Bejart said at the time. "People need reactions. Progress is only achieved by jostling."

In 1960, he formed the Ballet of the 20th Century with 50 dancers, and his innovative and provocative choreography made the group hugely successful. Soon thereafter, he caused a controversy with Franz Lehar's "Merry Widow."

The audience at the premiere hissed and booed but it became a hit with a younger, more outgoing public overnight.

Critics charged Bejart with turning a frivolous, happy work into a social protest. Their main complaint was the final scene, which was shockingly set amid murdered soldiers and smoldering ruins.

"It's truth which makes a scandal," Bejart retorted.

During the 1960s, attendance at the Monnaie shot up from 40,000 a year to 250,000 and Bejart's success at home was matched abroad.

He traveled frequently with his group and played before huge audiences in such diverse places as Mexico City, Berlin and Osaka, Japan. When it was learned of his impending departure from the Monnaie, Bejart was touring the Soviet Union.

A product of classical ballet, he never wanted to make a clear distinction between classical and modern dancing. Most of his international cast are also masters in classical ballet.

Bejart, 59, has carved out his niche in dance history with choreography for such works as Ravel's Bolero, Beethoven's Ode to Joy and Berlioz' Romeo and Juliet. He also founded the Mudra dance school in Brussels.

Lausanne, already the site of international competitions for young dancers and choreographers, has taken pride in its new acquisition at the expense of Bejart's native France.

"The urgent appeals from my country, by private and high public authorities, have moved me and helped me get through this difficult phase," Bejart said.

He said he chose Lausanne because it provided "a profound life that is impossible in big centers."

Falcone Pianos Beckon To Those Who Enjoy A Rolls And Boutiques

By KAREN McGRATH
Associated Press Writer
HAVERHILL, Mass. (AP) — The Falcone Piano Co. is in the land of passionate purchases, where Rolls-Royce dealerships flourish and boutiques selling sable enrich the terrain.

The purchase of a Falcone (pronounced Fal-cone-ee) piano is like the purchase of an exquisite gem — it's a non-compromising, once-in-a-lifetime gesture.

At the Falcone factory in Haverhill, one can see the fine craftsmanship and artistry of the instrument: the white spruce of the piano's soundboard, or the Brazilian rosewood of its outer shell.

"I wanted a piano that could whisper with no effort, but create a phenomenal amount of power without distorting the instrument. I built it," says Santi Falcone, the 42-year-old Sicilian who emigrated to Massachusetts with his family when he was 14.

Falcone learned to tune pianos while a student at the Santi Cecilia Conservatory in Rome. He eventually was hired by The Boston Conservatory of Music to maintain its pianos. He was one of the few piano tuners in Vietnam during his Army tour of duty in the early 1970s.

"These generals would send their helicopters to pick me up so I could tune their pianos," he says.

With $13,000 in savings from military pay, Falcone returned to the United States in 1971 and opened a small retail store, the New England Piano & Organ Co. In five years, he built the enterprise into seven retail outlets with revenues of more than $2 million.

Still, Falcone felt he wasn't doing what he wanted.

"You can't reinvent the wheel, so I knew I couldn't reinvent the piano," he says. "I just wanted to improve it."

He spent $400,000 in four years to study the manufacturing and construction of his dream piano. He learned the best locations to buy the essentials, the wood, the ivory, the castings, parts for the keyboard action.

Finally, in 1982, he built a piano he says can't be duplicated — the Falcone grand.

"There are trade secrets, I have mine," he says. "My process of putting a piano together is unique."

About 60 people, including woodworkers, ironworkers, tuners and painters, are employed at Falcone's factory in Haverhill, about 30 miles north of Boston. The piano literally begins at the ground level in the six-story factory. Level one is where the woodworkers bend and shape the outer shell of the curved grand structure. Plates are drilled on level two. Ribs underneath the sounding board are added on level three. By the time the piano is on level six, its strings are being manipulated by a tuner.

Falcone says one of the secrets of his pianos' tone is the sounding board. Each is made of white spruce or Sitka spruce, woods whose fibers are soft and contract and expand easily, allowing the sound from the piano's strings to virtually flow through.

He doesn't consider Steinway & Sons or the Baldwin Piano and Organ Co. to be competitors. Both companies market their pianos on a mass level, while Falcone makes only 120 pianos a year. He can sell his for less money, because transactions for a Falcone piano are conducted directly between manufacturer and buyer.

Still, his pianos are expensive. A 6-foot-1 piano sells for $19,900. The 7-foot-4 model goes for $25,700, while the 9-foot concert grand sells for $37,600.

"Musical instruments are works of art, and my piano is no exception," says Carolyn Refsnes Kniazze, an artist who has a Falcone in her living room. Ms. Kniazze remembers seeing her first Falcone at a concert. It looked and sounded "ravishingly beautiful." She very quickly decided that she wanted one.

Leif Bakland, a dentist, took out a second mortgage on his home to finance his $23,750 Falcone, which has yet to be delivered.

"I shopped around and looked at a lot of different pianos. None impressed me as much as the Falcone. None had the uniformity, the brightness and clean sound of the Falcone," he said.

Falcone has had offers from companies to market his pianos on a wider range, but he has refused. Each piano takes at least 600 man hours to build. The perfection and intricacy of each instrument would decline on a larger level, he believes, and he's unwilling to make that compromise. There's a six-month waiting list for orders.

Falcone eventually plans to increase the work force at the Haverhill factory to 150 workers and build 1,000 pianos a year.

Though he is just breaking into the concert market, the Falcone Piano Co. isn't trying to make a name for itself on the concert stage, he says.

'Night Court' Bailiff Has Intimidating TV Presence

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — As a stand-up comic, Marsha Warfield has little trouble with hecklers. "I didn't try to be intimidating," she said, "but I give the impression that if you take a shot at me, you're going to get one back."

Warfield has carried that same look into her role as Roz Russell, the brash, salty bailiff on NBC's "Night Court."

"I don't think anybody knew what Roz was about when I got the role last year," she said. "I think we discovered her together. We're still discovering her. I think the idea was that she was a lot like me. The first impression is that she's intimidating, a not-to-be-messed-with person."

"A lot of me is in Roz and a lot of the stuff's not me. You don't see her that much. She's the authority figure in me. But that's the only side we've

Warfield was cast in the role last year following the death of Florence Halop, who played bailiff Florence Kleiner. She in turn had replaced Selma Diamond, who died the year before. Both actresses died of lung cancer.

"I was originally supposed to do three or four guest shots," she said. "I'd heard they were going to have several rotating bailiffs and let the audience decide. Then they picked up my option. All the others at the audition were black actresses in their 30s. I was the biggest one. All the others were cute."

The character was originally called Harper, but it was changed to Roz Russell and it was explained on the first show that her mother was a fan of the late movie actress.

Warfield said that on stage she takes advantage of her intimidating presence. "I use it to the extent I get what I want," she said. "I don't have hecklers. I like to keep control of my act. People don't give me trouble."

"But I think they know it's a prop. I'm a big teddy bear. People may feel intimidated, but they don't feel threatened. They know I'm not going to hurt anybody."

Warfield admits she herself felt intimidated when she joined the hit NBC comedy show. "I was in virgin territory," she said. "I'd only done one other series before and it wasn't a sitcom. I was scared. I was working on instinct."

Her other series was "The Richard Pryor Show" in 1977, which left the air after just two months.

She grew up in Chicago where, she said, "I didn't do standup comedy until I was divorced. I was 20. I had married young for no reason and divorced for the same reason. I read a story in the newspaper about a place where you could do comedy. I decided that's what I was going to do."

"I was terrified, but that's to be expected. I didn't get on until about 1 or 2 o'clock in the morning. The other comics were encouraging, and they began to show me the ropes. I started getting paid right away. I finally moved to Los Angeles because I felt I had done everything I could in Chicago."

Warfield has also done some "straight" dramatic roles. "The schmaltzier the better," she said. "I like to cry. It's so easy to put yourself into the character's place. If you're a welfare mother, they fix your hair, give you the clothes and you're in the right place, so it's easy to assume the role."

Standup comedy is still her first love, and you'd think it would be better now that she's become famous on "Night Court."

She shook her head. "People laugh too quickly when they know you from television," she said. "If they laugh too quickly you don't really know what's good and what's not good."

'Dragnet' Sags As Holiday Doldrums Hit Box Offices

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The Fourth of July holiday took the fireworks out of the previously skyrocketing weekend box office, with No. 1 favorite "Dragnet" losing 33 percent of its audience.

The film industry was looking toward a record summer at the box office as the hits poured out and business surged beyond $100 million a week. But the Fourth of July slowed things because it fell on a Saturday, usually the biggest night for moviegoers, who apparently preferred barbecues and fireworks instead.

"Dragnet," the rowdy comedy starring Dan Aykroyd as the nephew of crusading police Sgt. Joe Friday, earned $7 million in its second week, bringing its total gross to $23.5 million.

Finishing second again was Mel Brooks' "Spaceballs," a zany spoof of the popular "Star Wars" movies. "Spaceballs" took in $4.8 million for total earnings of $18.4 million in two weeks.

A new offering, "Innerspace," a science fiction comedy-adventure about an Air Force test pilot's miniaturized journey inside a supermarket clerk's body, jumped into third place with $4.7 million in ticket sales.

"Beverly Hills Cop II," now in its seventh week, held onto fourth place with $4.5 million in ticket sales for a total gross of $126.2 million.

"The Witches of Eastwick" slipped from third place to fifth but still proved to be a solid hit with $4.5 million in ticket sales for total earnings of $41.1 million in four weeks.

Brian DePalma's gangster thriller, "The Untouchables," held strong at sixth place with $4 million in earnings for a five-week gross of $51.5 million.

Placing seventh was Arnold Schwarzenegger's "Predator," also earning $4 million for a four-week gross of $41.8 million.

L.A. Animation Festival Features Resurging Cartoons

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Animated films from 32 countries went on display here this week amid indications that one of motion pictures' oldest and often neglected art forms is enjoying a renaissance.

The second biennial Los Angeles International Animation Celebration is being held as Walt Disney Pictures prepares for the 50th anniversary release in 60 countries of the studio's first animated feature, "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs."

The July 10-17 celebration will feature the latest works of the world's animators, including myriad short films, a Hanna-Barbera feature "Rock Odyssey," the Japanese fantasy "Laputa" and a Cuban thriller-comedy "Vampires in Havana."

Also scheduled are tributes to Walter Lantz ("Woody Woodpecker"), Canada's Norman McLaren, Italy's Bruno Bozetto, Ralph Bakshi ("Fritz the Cat") and Milt Kahl, one of the famed Nine Old Men who animated Disney classics.

The animated film dates back to the beginning of the century, when nickelodeon audiences were amused by primitive drawings that moved on the screen. Emil Cohl's 1908 "Fantasmagorie" and Winsor McKay's 1909 "Gertie the Dinosaur" were among the first story cartoons.

Max Fleischer, Walt Disney and other producers poured out short comedies in the 1920s and 1930s, and most of the major studios maintained cartoon departments into the 1950s.

On Dec. 21, 1937, Disney elevated the cartoon to the status of art with the premiere of "Snow White," which has sold $330 million worth of theater tickets in its many releases.

With Happy, Sleepy, Dopey, et al., once again delighting movie audiences, the question arises: Has animation really progressed in the half-century since "Snow White?"

"There has been technical progress in the past 50 years," observes Charles Salomon, who reports on animation for the Los Angeles Times and is author of the forthcoming Knopf volume "Enchanted Drawings."

"The problem is that animation people are not given enough time to work on the story. Writing for animation has become something of a lost art. Walt Disney himself was the best story man in the business, and he would work on the story and characters until he was certain they were right."

"Snow White" took five years to make, and he was willing to scrap six months of work if it didn't seem right. He'd say, 'This is not good enough.' Today's producers can't afford to do that."

"Entertainment Tonight" critic Leonard Maltin, author of a book on the Disney films, agrees:

"Take a film like Don Bluth's 'An American Tail.' I didn't like it, but technically it reached a level that was exceptional. The problem is in storytelling, and Walt knew that better than anyone."

Adds Maltin: "The best thing about animation is something that has happened in the past year: access to the audience."

"I've been going to animation festivals for the past 10-15 years, and I've seen some wonderful stuff. But the films never had access to the public. It was the same with the Academy winners for animation. Everyone said, 'That's nice,' but nobody saw them."

"Now there seems to be a network of theaters willing to play animation. That has been the result of a company called Expanded Entertainment."

Terry Thoren, chairman of the Los Angeles animation festival, also serves as president of Expanded Entertainment. Two years ago the company packaged 22 short films from nine countries in a feature "19th Annual Tournee of Animation." The release was a success and it was followed by a compilation of the best films from the 1985 Animation Celebration.

This year Expanded Entertainment is releasing other films based on the Claymation figures of Will Vinton and the Puppatoons of George Pal.

"Our first foray into the field was very successful and the claymation feature has already attracted 250 play dates," Thoren says. "Our job has been to raise the consciousness of the public to recognize that there's a lot of good stuff out there."

Thoren says impressive animation is coming not only from New York and Hollywood, but Chicago, Seattle, Dallas, Portland and other cities. The best foreign work, he says, is emanating from the United Kingdom, perhaps because of the variety of funding sources.

Production of animation features appears to be booming. Hanna-Barbera, Don Bluth (who recently transferred operations to Ireland), Toronto's Velvana ("Care Bears"), Ralph Bakshi and other producers have announced forthcoming features. Disney is in the process of cranking up its schedule, which had fallen to one feature in three years.

"We're going to try to do one a year," says Roy E. Disney, Walt's nephew who is now supervising the studio's animation. "I feel we have the physical capacity to do it. The only problem is getting the stories right in time."

Army Fort To Become Resort

By JERRY HARKAVY
Associated Press Writer

GREAT DIAMOND ISLAND, Maine (AP) — The 20-acre parade ground is deserted, its silence broken only by the wind that howls past the ring of red brick buildings that are the crumbling remains of a once-proud Army fort on this Casco Bay island.

Standing beside a bare 100-foot flagpole, Hank Carlock closes his eyes and imagines how Fort McKinley looked decades ago. In his mind's eye, he can see drill sergeants barking orders as troops in starched khakis pour from barracks and line up in formation.

"I hate to see us lose history. It's the only way for us to learn anything, to see what's come before," says Carlock, who is managing a $25 million project that will turn the former artillery base into an upscale resort while retaining its slate roofs and other architectural details.

The project has won qualified endorsement from a Maine environmental group, but some critics worry it will lead to more development of the islands along the state's ragged Atlantic coast.

Carlock is project manager for Dictar Associates, the Falmouth developer that has begun the conversion of the barracks and officers' quarters into 134 townhouse condominium units, priced from $180,000 to $270,000 apiece. The project will cost $25 million. Occupancy is planned for summer 1988.

Fort McKinley, 15 minutes by boat from downtown Portland, was one of a string of coastal installations built by the Army around the turn of the century as a defense against naval bombardment.

Like Fort McKinley, whose big guns were never fired in anger, most of the Army posts were abandoned years ago. Damage from fire and vandals compounded the slow decay of weather and neglect.

Dictar, which bought the property in 1984 for $800,000, tried for nearly three years before winning state and local approval for conversion of the buildings.

Still to be decided is whether the developer will be permitted to go ahead with the second phase of the project, the sale of 74 adjacent one- to two-acre house lots, some of which include artillery emplacements made of reinforced concrete.

Dictar's critics, including some residents of other Maine islands, argued that allowing such vast development on Great Diamond would set a precedent for other offshore places.

But the developer maintained that the 48 existing buildings and water and sewer systems already on the island made the Fort McKinley project a special case.

"This is a one-of-a-kind opportunity," says David Bateman, a Dictar partner, who scoffs at suggestions of a "domino theory" of island development elsewhere.

The Island Institute, a Rockland-based environmental group that advocates a balance of development and conservation on Maine's offshore islands, has given its qualified endorsement to the fort renovation, while opposing the state's issuance of a license allowing discharge of treated sewage into the bay.

"We thought it was important that the island not be ruined to save the fort," said Philip Conkling, the institute's executive director.

The group remains opposed to subdividing the surrounding property into 74 building lots, a concept the state's environmental board rejected last year.

"We think that's the worst case of strip development of a shoreline of an island that has yet come before a state or local board," Conkling said.

The project coincides with unprecedented demand for property along the Maine coast. At the same time, Mainers concerned about their quality of life are mobilizing against such development in fear that it will destroy the state's special character and harm the environment.

The project managers are working to meet strict standards set by the U.S. Department of Interior that will enable purchasers who use their condominium units as rentals to qualify for historic preservation tax credits. To achieve those standards, the developer must leave the gray slate roofs, brick exteriors and granite foundations of the Georgian-style buildings in their original conditions.

"Everything has to stay just as it was," says Carlock.

Deadline Near For CenterFest

DURHAM — July 15 is the deadline for artists to submit applications for inclusion in Durham's CenterFest '87 to be on view in downtown Durham Sept. 19 and 20.

China May Be Losing Long Battle With Deserts

By JIM ABRAMS
Associated Press Writer
LANZHOU, China (AP) — China planted 5 billion trees in the past five years to hold back encroaching deserts, but while it has had some success it is still losing ground and its 1 billion people are losing arable living space.

Every year for the past 50, some 400 square miles of Chinese land has been lost to desertification, a global problem in which arable land is transformed into waterless, sandy wasteland. One-sixth of China's 3.8 million square miles of land is now desert or semidesert.

China, with its ability to mobilize huge numbers for land reclamation projects, has long been in the forefront in world efforts to slow advancing deserts.

"But it's very difficult for people to completely solve the problem," said Li Lie, senior engineer at the Institute of Desert Research in Lanzhou, in west-central China. "It's hard to say when the situation will improve."

Desertification and the related problems of deforestation and soil erosion pose serious threats to China, whose billion people have only a quarter of an acre of arable land apiece, one-third the world average.

Every year the nation loses 50 billion tons of arable soil to erosion. Twenty-three percent of China's vast pastureland has lost much of its grass. Tree cover in northeast Heilongjiang province, scene of a devastating forest fire in May, is down from 52 percent in the 1950s to 35 percent today.

The Lanzhou institute, center of China's efforts to study what causes deserts and how they can be controlled, estimates that the lives of 50 million Chinese are affected by encroaching deserts. Ten million Chinese now lack enough land to support themselves.

China's battle against the desert goes back to ancient times. The secrets of the old Silk Road lie buried under the sands along the southern edge of the far western Taklamakan Desert, China's largest.

In north-central Shaanxi prefecture the Great Wall, built to fend off northern invaders, lies in ruins before the relentless attack of the Mu Us Desert.

The 14th-century Yuan dynasty capital of Heicheng, its irrigation system destroyed in war, has disappeared under the dunes of Inner Mongolia.

The 20th century, however, has accelerated the desert's drift.

Li explained that overcultivation, overgrazing and excessive cutting of trees for firewood, all related to population pressures, are the main causes of desertification today.

The government has also made mistakes, he said, as in the 1966-76 Cultural Revolution when everything, including tree shelters and pastureland, was sacrificed to increased grain production.

Aside from that disastrous decade, planting trees has been a passion of communist China. In 1978 it began its "Green Wall," the natural equivalent of the Great Wall, a 4,340-mile corridor of trees linking Xinjiang in the far northwest with Heilongjiang in the northeast.

Priest

"I've had plenty of opportunity to use my musical ability (in the church). Through music I've been able to reach people," he said.

Being a priest and a former rock 'n' roller who still is up on the current stars puts Clay in a unique position with all the recent controversy in the world of rock music. It's a position, he said, which surprises a lot of people.

"People freak out when I tell them I had hair down to here," Clay said, pointing at the lower part of his back. "I find it's hard for me to believe, too. It was a phase of my life that I went to on my phase to adult hood."

"The image people have of priests is that we listen to MUZAK or WNCT — I'll crank up the stereo," he said. "I try to stay fairly current with today's groups. I don't like heavy metal, though. It's screaming and guitar riffs are all over the place, and basically it's just volume."

Clay occasionally watches MTV, and said one of his current favorites in the pop world is Madonna. "I struggle with some of her lyrics, but I like her musical style."

The visitor asks him what he thought of one of Madonna's recent hits, "Papa Don't Preach." The song, which is about a pregnant girl who decides to keep her baby, caused some controversy within the Catholic church.

He said he wasn't too happy with all the themes of the song, but that there was a good message in the song. "The worst thing for parents to do is nag kids — she wanted her father's acceptance, not condemnation."

"In some senses she (Madonna) does speak to a sense of respect between generations," Clay said.

He also said he's careful when talking about rating or restricting rock lyrics. It is important that someone provide some guidelines describing what's in a record, Clay said, especially for kids and their parents. But, he said, "Catholics by and large are very cautious about restricting people's rights. We don't preach prohibition against drinking or smoking — we do tell people to practice moderation."

"It's a difficult problem." Listening to the music and having played rock 'n' roll, Clay said he can often relate to the younger members of his parish. He knows what kind of things influence them, and can often use music to reach them in sermons or one on one conversations.

"Occasionally I'll quote some lines from rock and roll in a sermon. I use them to support something I say in a positive way. I can also use them to contrast what kids listen to today with what the Christian faith would say," he said.

"I believe rock 'n' roll is having a profound influence on children of all ages — profound. I hear first and second graders repeating the lyrics word for word," he said. And he's not always happy about what they're saying.

"I find there is a preoccupation with death, with evil and to a lesser degree with sex. There is a sense of hopelessness, of living for today and forgetting tomorrow that is becoming influential."

"I hear kids speaking nonchalantly about suicide and drugs," he said. Of course, he noted, some of the kids don't even understand the words they are saying, or the meaning behind the noise of rock 'n' roll, they just like the noise.

Clay went on to say that musicians have an obligation to themselves to know what their priorities are and why they have those priorities. "My impression is that many group's priority is earning the all mighty dollar. Some give the audience things that titillate in order to advance — and I use that word, 'titillate,' on purpose."

"If I had a wish list, my wish list would include that rock music would instill values — positive values," Clay said.

FOCUS

Let Freedom Ring

On this date in 1835, the Liberty Bell cracked while it was ringing for the funeral of John Marshall. The story that the Liberty Bell was rung to celebrate the signing of the Declaration of Independence was a myth invented by journalist George Lippard in 1847. The bell did hang in the Philadelphia statehouse when the Declaration was being drafted, but no one thought to ring it. In 1828, officials tried to sell the Liberty Bell for scrap but could find no buyers.

DO YOU KNOW — John Marshall is best known for holding what important position?

TUESDAY'S ANSWER — Bubonic plague, or the "black death," was spread by rats.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): An above-board partner will have great ideas and fine advice. This help can bring you much success if you listen.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): A prominent person can give you a big boost if approached wisely. Use your talents to increase your income.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): Now is the time to get into that new activity which you've been eager to experience. Make your plans for this matter early.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Entertaining guests would be fine today, but very bad tonight. Concern yourself with important personal matters.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): A generous friend can provide you will great advice about how to advance on a current opportunity. Talk it through.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Think big if you're after a big success and let people see your abilities. Clear up your paperwork privately this evening.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): If you plan your time wisely, you may be able to investigate a new project with would be highly beneficial.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Try to straighten out a problem with a loved one, but keep it confidential. Improve your credit rating tonight.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): An associate can give you good advice on how to make a venture with your friends very successful and pleasing.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): An annoying situation at home can be resolved with the help of an expert and the cooperation of your family.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he, or she, will have a wonderful imagination, and should be encouraged to put new ideas into motion. Be sure to give your child plenty of praise for outstanding accomplishments. Your son or daughter should be schooled in languages and manners, since he or she will travel much.

against a small slam, there was a good chance West was leading away from the king. In mathematical terms, though, there was only a 50 percent chance that West held the king. Can you spot a better alternative, as declarer did? If hearts were 4-3, an almost 2-to-1 shot, declarer could get a diamond discard on the hearts and, if that failed, he would still have the trump finesse in reserve for his contract.

Suiting the deed to the word, declarer rose with the ace of diamonds, then tried three high hearts.

When East ruffed the third round, declarer had to rely on the trump finesse. That too failed, and an excellent slam, played correctly, ended a trick short. It did little to soothe South's ruffled feelings to learn that the inferior line of running the opening lead to his queen would have brought home the bacon.

Bed And Breakfast Homes Put On A Spread In The Mornings

By Marie Bianco
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

People always say "I don't eat this much breakfast at home," said Ina Sauder of Ye Olde Sheldford House, a bed & breakfast in Cloverdale, Calif.

But it's hard to resist the hand-squeezed orange juice, strawberries still warm from her garden patch, seafood-broccoli-bacon quiche followed by an assortment of warm homemade muffins or her blueberry cheese coffeecake.

"On Sunday mornings we set the table formal using a lace tablecloth and pink Depression glass that has been in my husband's family for years, and we serve champagne," said Sauder.

Sue Farrington has the reputation of serving unusually large breakfasts at her bed & breakfast, La Posada de Chimayo, in Chimayo, about 30 miles north of Santa Fe.

"I have a week's worth of recipes," she said, "so you don't have to eat the same thing twice if you come for seven days." In addition to a chile cheese casserole, she serves french toast stuffed with garlic, red chile peppers and slices of local Spanish sausage. Lately she has been experimenting with a breakfast burrito — sausage, potatoes and scrambled eggs — covered with red chili.

The breakfast portion of bed & breakfast — hereafter known as B&B — can be as spectacular as a fiddlehead fern and ham omelet or as simply satisfying as a homemade muffin and freshly brewed coffee.

Across the country, owners rely on fresh local foods, very often from their own gardens, to set their breakfasts apart from diner and restaurant meals.

According to Phyllis Feathersen, author of "Bed and Breakfast Guide for the United States and Canada, Bermuda, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands," Americans like to stop over at B&Bs because the host and hostess make them feel comfortable, it's different and it's economical.

Besides that, she added, since this is their hosts' neighborhood, they can advise guests on local sights and folklore. "And it's a pleasant way for a businesswoman to travel. She does not have to fall into a motel alone," she said.

If that businesswoman happens to like Colonial antiques, she would appreciate the originals that owner-cook Ruth Keyes has used to furnish the Red Brook Inn, circa 1770, in Old Mystic, Conn.

A country breakfast is served family-style beginning with a fruit salad of fresh strawberries, bananas, apples and kiwis topped with freshly whipped cream, followed by platters of sourdough pancakes or apple pancakes laced with applejack and cinnamon and sausage links.

In the winter Keyes cooks in the open hearth and bakes in the beehive oven, but when she makes her favorite walnut waffles, she has two waffle irons going at the same time. "The addition of walnuts," she said, "gives them a nice crunch."

Breakfast is especially nice served on a harvest table in the "keeping room," the home's original kitchen. Many B&Bs are situated in older homes. Mary Mooney-Getoff has turned her ancestral farmhouse into a B&B. Ask her how old Goose Creek Guesthouse in Southold, Long Island, is, and she's apt to say "it depends on where you are standing."

The original portion of the house goes back to 1780, but a new kitchen wing was added several years ago. Mooney-Getoff begins breakfast with a large platter of fresh fruit. Next comes scrambled eggs flavored with homegrown chives and fried scrapple, along with homemade bran quickbread and Irish soda bread.

On the table is her tasty rhubarb-ginger jam, which she makes from an old Scottish recipe. Another favorite is fresh apple slices dipped in a whole wheat pancake batter, sauteed and served with honey or powdered sugar. Actually, they are good enough to eat unadorned.

Not all the food at B&Bs is simple fare. The Canterbury Inn in Rochester, Minn., is the only one in town, and guests keep coming back for the eggs Benedict, Grand Marnier french toast and wild rice waffles that Mary Martin and Jeffrey Van Sant take turns cooking.

In the afternoon from 5:30 to 7, "tea" is served in the parlor featuring white wine and an assortment of hors d'oeuvre nibbles. There is also tea, if you really want it, they said.

In nearby Stillwater, Mina Driscoll serves breakfast on the porch, by the fireplace in the parlor room or, if guests prefer, they can have it served in bed. A psychotherapist by profession, Driscoll said operating the B&B is her therapy.

At Driscoll's for Guests, each breakfast begins with whipped orange juice, a combination of orange juice and cream that is almost a milk shake. Then a fresh fruit compote topped with freshly whipped cream and an assortment of quick breads such as carrot cake with cream cheese topping, banana-chocolate chip, zucchini or Irish oatmeal. Guests have their choice of fresh-vegetables-from-the-garden omelets, turkey ham-spinach quiche or strawberry waffles.

Waffles are a favorite in Missouri, too. At the Ramblewood B&B in Camden, Mary Massey serves breakfast in a cozy room off the kitchen or, weather permitting, on the deck.

For those who think her Belgian waffles with strawberries, raspberries and whipped cream are too sweet, she puts together ham slices, biscuits and gravy, or serves a sausage and cheese casserole and morning glorious muffins. Massey takes special care because she likes things to look nice.

She admits "I can't pass up pretty dishes, and I always enjoyed entertaining. I am not a career woman," she said.

On the other hand, Terry Price has found a new career. Instead of mechanical engineering, he now does the cooking at the Edgecombe-Coles House in Camden, Maine. Breakfast

Q. I have been trying to cut down on the fat I eat. I have been reading labels. I love pizza, but there is no nutrition label on the pizza. Has pizza got fat in it? Is it nutritious? J.S., Greenville.

A. Lots of young people and their folks wonder about the nutritional value of pizza. You are right, except for the Weight Watchers frozen pizza, there is no nutrition information on the labels. I have asked several manufacturers for information, and I will share those later. In the meantime, let me give you some information about a "typical pizza."

About half the pizza is crust, and that's good, since crust is a good source of complex carbohydrate. The cheese and meat toppings are sources of quality protein but also fat. About 30 percent of the pizza's calories come from the fats in the crust, cheese and meats. There is a balance of fats since the fat in the crust is usually polyunsaturated vegetable oils, and fat in the meat and cheese is saturated. The cheese gives calcium also. Other nutrients in pizzas include iron, phosphorus, potassium, magnesium, zinc, manganese and copper. Unfortunately, pizza is high in sodium. One-fourth of a 13-inch pepperoni pizza might have 370 calories, 15 grams of fat, 27 milligrams cholesterol, 1,000 milligrams sodium, and 20 percent of the U.S. RDA for protein, 14 percent for vitamin A, 30 percent for thiamin, 25 percent for riboflavin, 20 percent for niacin, 40 percent for calcium and 18 percent for iron. If low fat or imitation cheeses are used, these values will change. Each brand of pizza will be a bit different, but generally if you don't eat too many slices at a time, it is a nutritious food.

Dear Readers: We have talked about the caloric value of fats (250 calories for 1 pure ounce) and about unsaturated and saturated fats. Today, let's explore cholesterol in foods. You may remember that cholesterol in food is separate from its saturated or unsaturated fat content. Cholesterol in food is another type of fat or lipid. It is found only in animal foods. Some folks think that foods high in saturated fats also are high in cholesterol. Not so. For example, let's look at the egg.

The egg yolk is a high cholesterol food with 260 milligrams per average egg. But, only 2 of an egg's total fat come from saturated fat. On the other hand, coconut and palm oil, which have no cholesterol, are very saturated fats. So, a food high in cholesterol does not have to be high in saturated fat.

Cholesterol is found in every cell in the human body and has many essential jobs. About 80 percent of the cholesterol is made by the body, while 20 percent come from the food you eat. About one-third of us are at risk to heart disease and should limit the amount of cholesterol and saturated fat we eat.

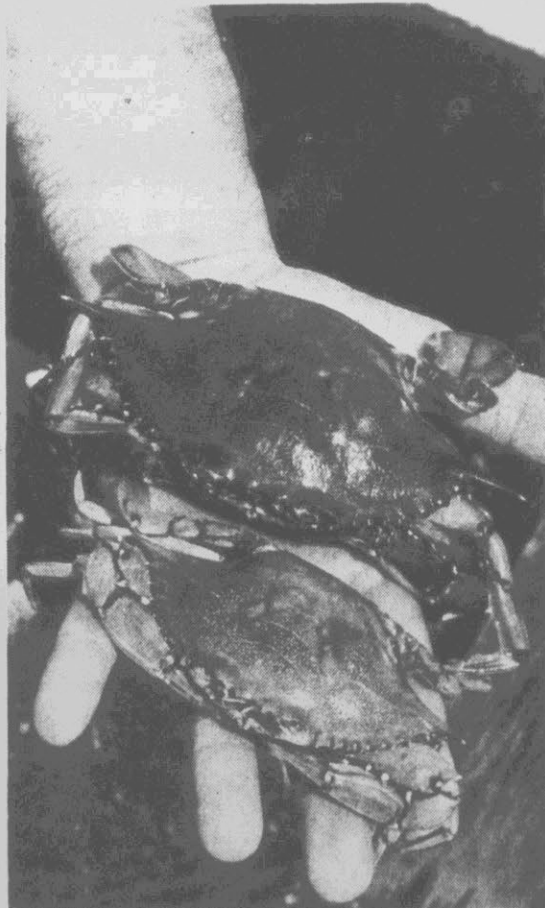

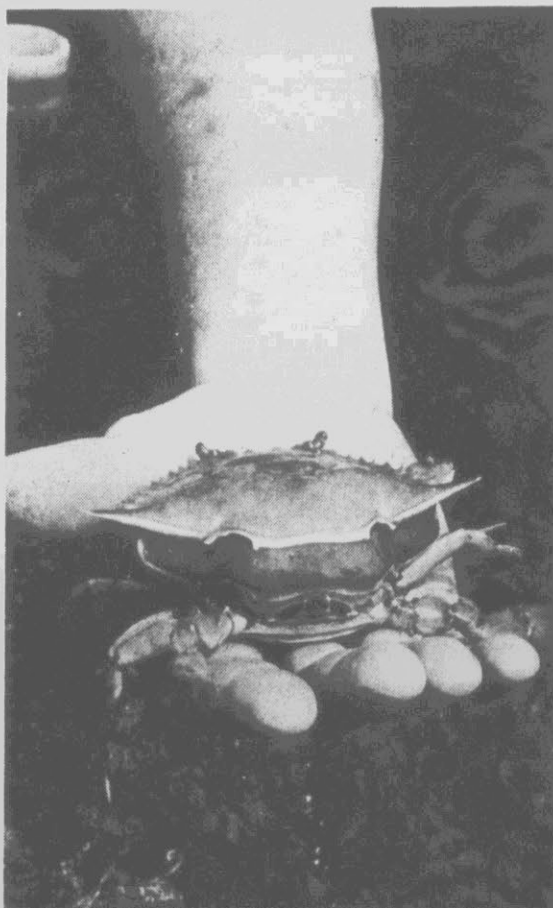

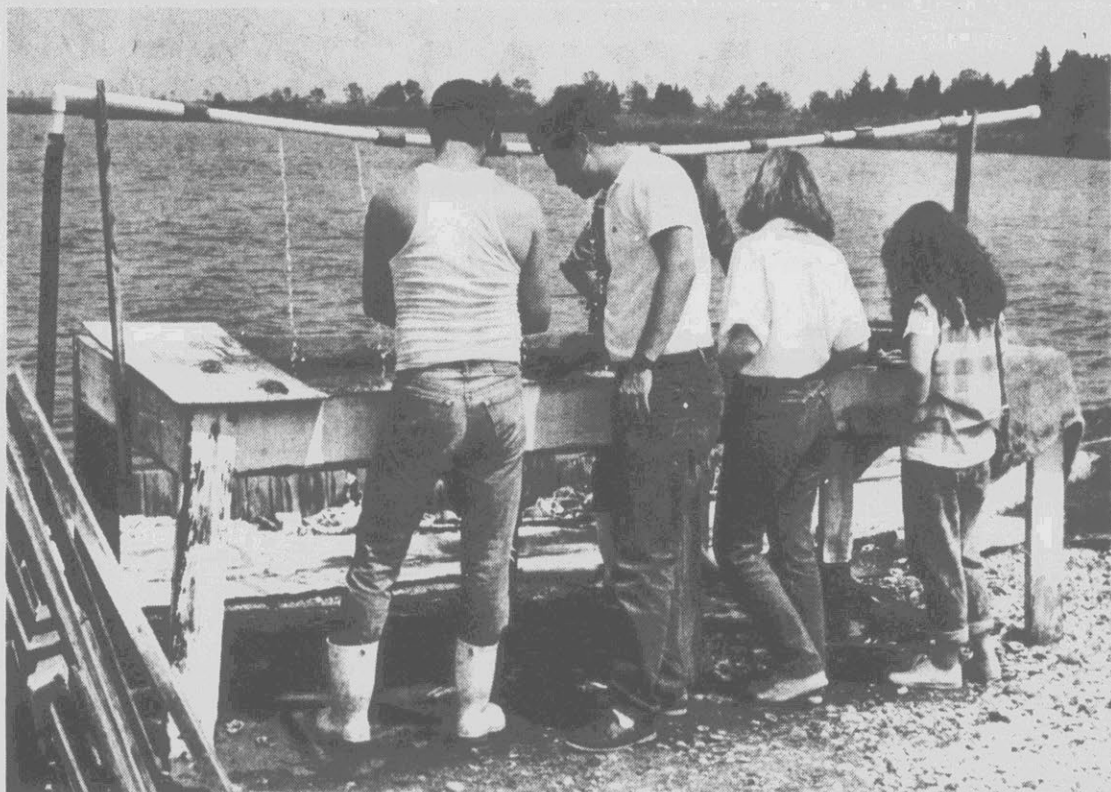

Dietary cholesterol can affect blood cholesterol and thereby increase our risk to heart disease. People with risks to heart disease should eat just enough calories to keep a reasonable body weight, eat modest amounts of fat (both saturated and unsaturated), limit cholesterol intake to 300 milligrams per day, and eat foods rich in dietary fiber.

It is incredible to watch the changes happening in our food supply. For example, beef and pork are being trimmed closely and also are being bred for less fat. Most people can eat some meat while still watching their fat and cholesterol intake. Substitute ingredients also are being created.

The Food and Drug Administration announced it is studying Procter and Gamble's request to use a substitute fat ingredient called Olestra in food. Olestra is a polyester sucrose made from fatty acids and sugar the body does not digest. There are no calories.

This type of ingredient (and there are other companies working on similar products) could replace part of the fat in food and remove some calories. Artificial sweeteners already replace some of the sugars and calories in food. Perhaps substitute fats will be doing so soon. There will be more on how cholesterol and fats work in the body at another time.

Food Distributors Cling To Double Identities For West And East Coasts

By DENISE GELLENE
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

The makers of the nation's best-selling mayonnaise have a name for it. In fact, they have two.

Westerners know CPC International's mayonnaise as the Best Foods brand. But to everyone who lives east of the Rocky Mountains, it's Hellmann's.

As transplanted Easterners and Westerners often discover on their own, the mayonnaises are identical except in name. Even the advertising is the same, right down to the "bring out the best" jingle.

In an era when big national food companies spend billions to develop and promote single national identities for their products, CPC is one of a handful that insists on selling an identical item under different brand names in the East and West.

In the case of CPC and McCormick

& Co., a Baltimore spice and flavoring processor, the separate brands got their start through corporate mergers that took place years ago. Another firm, Oakland, Calif.-based Dreyer's Grand Ice Cream, started a separate Eastern brand as the result of trademark dispute with a competitor.

Marketing executives with long-established brands say they continue the twin products despite increased advertising expenses because consumers recognize the names. To eliminate a brand could result in a loss of label-conscious customers and market share.

"The brands are so strong and so well-recognized by consumers that it just wouldn't be wise to drop one of them," says Donald Dick Jr., a vice president at McCormick & Co., which markets McCormick spices east of the Mississippi and Schilling spices to the west.

There are drawbacks to having two different brands. Separate television commercials have to be made for each brand, for example. CPC, with $350 million in annual mayonnaise sales, says it saves on advertising costs by using virtually identical ads.

"We have to shoot the ads twice, once for Hellmann's and once for Best Foods, but the cost is really minimal," says Joan Dargery, mayonnaise product manager at CPC, based in Englewood Cliffs, N.J. The company, which makes half of the mayonnaise sold in the United States, is perhaps best known for its Skippy peanut butter.

McCormick, the world's biggest spice processor with $250 million in spice and flavoring sales last year, runs national magazine advertisements that show both brands, Dick says. That's because its nearly impossible to be certain that some McCormick ads wouldn't appear in Schilling territory. "It's the only way that really makes sense for us," says Dick.

CPC tried a similar format a number of years ago. Those ads showed Hellmann's and Best Foods jars side by side, with an accompanying recipe that told consumers to use "either Hellmann's or Best Foods mayonnaise." Dargery says the ads "looked like we were giving consumers permission to use any mayonnaise — and we don't want them to do that."

CPC inherited the twin mayonnaise brands when it acquired Best Foods in 1958. At the time, Best Foods was selling Best Foods mayonnaise on the West Coast and Hellmann's, which got started in New York State in 1912, on the East Coast.

McCormick bought the San Francisco-based A. Schilling & Co. in 1947 and kept up the two brands ever since.

is served in the dining room on a long cherry table that seats 12.

During the short time fiddleheads are in season, he combines them with ham for omelets served with homefries. Or he will bake Dutch babies (giant popovers) and douse them with local maple syrup, adding link sausages and fresh eggs from nearby farms.

Another favorite is amaretto french toast, grilled in butter and served with maple syrup. His wife, Louise, does most of the baking — oat-bran muffins with apples and spice, Downeast molasses cake and banana bread.

B&Bs are not exclusive to rural areas. "I could be booked all the time," said Valerie Dimitri whose "European country" apartment is on the Upper East Side of Manhattan.

Dimitri sets her breakfast table with china, silver and linen napkins and likes to start breakfast with a warm fruit compote on chilly days or chilled cantalope, strawberries and grapes on hot summer days. Occasionally she will fix a ham-and-Swiss cheese quiche but said, "I find my guests are not into hot, heavy breakfasts."

Here is a sampling of breakfast recipes from the B&Bs:

BLUEBERRIES AND CHEESE COFFEE CAKE

for topping:

- 1/4 cup all-purpose flour
- 1-3 cup firmly packed brown sugar
- 1 teaspoon cinnamon
- 1/4 cup cold butter, cut into pieces
- 1/2 cup chopped walnuts

for cake:

- 3 cups all-purpose flour
- 4 teaspoons baking powder
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 cup granulated sugar
- 3 eggs, lightly beaten
- 1/2 cup sour cream
- 1/2 cup butter, melted 2-3 cup milk
- 1 teaspoon fresh grated lemon peel
- 8 ounces cream cheese cut in 1/2-inch cubes

1. In a small bowl combine flour, brown sugar and cinnamon. Cut in butter with finger tips, 2 knives or pastry blender. Stir in nuts. Set aside.

2. In a medium bowl combine flour, baking powder, salt and sugar. In a second bowl combine eggs, sour cream, milk and butter. Combine dry and liquid ingredients with lemon peel, cream cheese and blueberries, stirring until just combined.

Spoon mixture into a buttered 9-by-13-inch pan and sprinkle with topping. Bake in 350-degree oven for 55 to 60 minutes. Allow to stand 15 minutes before cutting. Makes 12 servings.

MORNING GLORIOUS MUFFINS

- 2 cups all-purpose flour
- 1 1/4 cup granulated sugar
- 2 teaspoons cinnamon
- 2 teaspoons baking soda
- 1 1/2 cups shredded carrots
- 1 1/2 cups chopped apples
- 3/4 cup coconut
- 1/2 cup chopped pecans
- 3 eggs, beaten
- 1 cup vegetable oil
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 1/2 teaspoon salt

In a medium bowl combine flour, sugar, cinnamon and baking soda. In a separate bowl toss together carrots, apples, coconut and pecans. Stir in eggs, oil, vanilla and salt. Add dry ingredients and blend. Fill muffin tins 3/4 full. Bake 18 to 20 minutes in a 375-degree oven. Makes 12 muffins.

WALNUT WAFFLES

- 2 cups all-purpose flour
- 2 teaspoons baking powder
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1 tablespoon granulated sugar
- 1/2 cup chopped walnuts
- 3 eggs, separated
- 6 tablespoons melted butter
- 1 1/2 cups milk
- whipped cream, butter and maple syrup

1. In a bowl combine flour, baking powder, salt, sugar and walnuts, blending with a whisk.

2. In a separate bowl beat the egg yolks. Stir in butter and milk. Make a hole in the center of the dry ingredients and pour in the liquid ingredients, stirring until barely combined.

3. Beat egg whites until stiff, but not dry. Gently fold into batter until just blended. Bake in waffle iron according to manufacturer's instructions. Serve with whipped cream, butter and maple syrup. Makes 6 waffles.

RHUBARB GINGER JAM

- 6 pounds of rhubarb
- 5 pounds granulated sugar
- 3/4 pound crystallized ginger, cut in small pieces

grated rind of 1 lemon

1. Cut rhubarb into 1-inch pieces. There should be 24 cups.

2. Put rhubarb into a preserving kettle in alternate layers with the sugar. Cover and allow to stand for 24 hours. The sugar should be liquid by this time. If not, cook for a few minutes to liquefy the sugar.

3. Scoop out rhubarb with slotted spoon and set aside. To the liquid in the pan add crystallized ginger with grated lemon rind. Boil briskly for 30 minutes. Add the rhubarb and simmer 30 minutes.

4. Remove from heat, pour into sterile glasses and seal. Makes 16 8-ounce jelly glasses.

McEntire Is No. 1 In Singing, In Kitchen

Reba McEntire is a thoroughly modern woman with a back-to-basics attitude that is part of everything she does — from the recording studio to the kitchen.

In 1983, she took artistic control of her career, and since then, has become a major force behind country music's transition from the pop sounds of the late '70s to the vibrant new traditional style that is revitalizing the industry today.

Ms. McEntire's recent honors include three consecutive Country Music Association Female Vocalist of the Year awards in 1984, 1985 and 1986. Last year, the CMA voter her Entertainer of the Year. She also will appear on the 21st Annual Country Music Association Awards, sponsored by Kraft, to be telecast Oct. 12 on CBS-TV. This former Oklahoma cowgirl's career has skyrocketed, but her lifestyle remains extremely down-to-earth.

Ms. McEntire and her husband, Charlie Battles, were rodeo stars, so they are accustomed to the grueling travel demands that are part of Reba's hectic concert schedule. In fact, they met in Texas in 1975 when Battles was a world-champion steer wrestler and Ms. McEntire was winning awards for barrel-racing.

She admits that although she greatly enjoyed that career, singing was always her first passion. Ms. McEntire recalls that Battles' support played a big part in helping to make her recording dreams a reality. She said, "He even helped me to promote my first single, 'I Don't Want To Be A One Night Stand' during our honeymoon in Houston."

When Ms. McEntire and Battles aren't on the road, home is a 251-acre ranch in Stringtown, Okla., not far from where Ms. McEntire grew up. Her father and grandfather were cattle ranchers, and she is proud to follow in their footsteps.

Ms. McEntire enjoys the simple pleasures that farm life offers. She unwinds from her busy life by riding her horse, Legs, which she said, "I bought for a song from my husband." Making her own dishes in another of her recipes for relaxation.

"Cooking is something I really miss when I'm on the road," Ms. McEntire said. "When I'm at home, I spend a lot of time in the kitchen preparing my favorite stuff: baked beans, cole slaw, red beans, cornbread, fried potatoes — nothing too fattening." Although Ms. McEntire is slim, she said she has to be careful not to sample everything before it reaches the dinner table.

Ms. McEntire says she is her favorite cook, and a lot of the foods she likes to make are traditional Mexican recipes. Listed below is Reba McEntire's Mexican Cornbread Casserole, tested by Kraft Kitchens. This is any easy to prepare dish that adds a south-of-the-border flavor to any meal.

REBA MCENTIRE'S MEXICAN CORNBREAD CASSEROLE
1 pound ground beef
1/3 cup chopped onion
1 8-ounce jar mild Mexican pasteurized process cheese spread
1 8 1/2-ounce package cornbread mix
1 8 3/4-ounce can whole kernel corn, drained
1 tablespoon margarine, melted
2 tablespoons chopped green pepper
2 tablespoons chopped red pepper
Brown meat; drain. Add onions; cook until tender. Stir in process cheese spread until melted. Spoon into four 12-ounce casseroles. Prepare cornbread mix as directed on package. Add remaining ingredients, mixing just until moistened. Spoon over meat mixture. Bake at 375 degrees for 16 to 18 minutes or until golden brown. Makes 4 servings.

CHILE CHEESE CASSEROLE
1/4 cup all-purpose flour
1/2 teaspoon baking powder
1/4 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon dry mustard
1 cup cottage cheese
1 cup Monterey Jack cheese, shredded
1 cup cheddar cheese, shredded
1/2 cup butter or margarine, melted
4-ounce can chopped green chiles
In a medium bowl beat eggs. Add flour, baking powder, salt and mustard and beat well. Blend in cottage, Monterey jack and cheddar cheeses, butter and chiles. Mixture will be lumpy. Spoon into a lightly greased 6-cup casserole or six individual 1-cup dishes and bake at 350 degrees for 25 to 35 minutes, or until center is firm and top is nicely browned.

Grilled Tuna And Eggplant Make Tasty Barbecue Duo

Long days and warm weather mean the summer season is here, and all activities, including mealtime, are taken outdoors. Lots of outdoor barbecues, complete with delicious foods and frosty beverages, are called for.

Beyond traditional franks and burgers, today's summertime menus include light, healthy foods and high quality beverages.

The barbecue grill adds a tasty, "summertime" flavor to food. Grilled tuna and eggplant, served on a baguette, is a light and healthy main item for the barbecue. Herbed potato salad and vinaigrette salad with fresh greens and garden vegetables are appropriate accompaniments.

Beer is an excellent choice for summer drinking, and Americans are now enjoying the taste of high-quality imported beers. Imported beer sales figures are proof-positive — in 1986 they increased a remarkable 11.7 percent over 1985.

Beer should be as carefully selected as the food on your barbecue menu. A great menu will be perfectly rounded out with a variety of beers — Bass Ale — light, sparkling and pleasantly bitter, Harp Lager — clean and hoppy, and Asahi Beer — crisp and golden. These plus Furstenberg Beer, Kronenbourg Lager and hearty Guinness Stout offer a variety of tastes for discriminating summer beer drinkers. For barbecue-goers who love the taste of beer but want the option of no alcohol, Kaliber non-alcoholic brew by Guinness is a full-flavored alternative. With only 43 calories in a 12-ounce bottle, Kaliber has less than half the calories of a "light" beer.

Not only are quality imported beers a popular beverage at barbecues, they are also an important ingredient for great tasting dishes. For example, grilled vegetables, such as tomatoes, peppers and onions get added sizzle with Bercy Butter a la Kaliber, while chicken, fish and beef are tastier when allowed to soak in Mustard Beer Marinade.

These fine beers, part of the distinctive Guinness Import Company portfolio, are great thirst quenchers and palate pleasers for summer outdoor entertaining.

GRILLED TUNA AND EGGPLANT
Broil 10 minutes, then grill 6 to 11 minutes. Makes 4 servings.

1 eggplant (about 1 to 1 1/2 pounds), trimmed and sliced 1/4-inch
Salt and cracked black pepper
1/4 cup plus 1 tablespoon olive oil
1 red bell pepper
1/2 teaspoon leaf rosemary, crumbled
1 baguette, sliced
1 clove garlic, chopped
1 pound fresh tuna steers, 1/4-inch thick

Seasoned sliced eggplant with salt and cracked pepper. Heat 2 tablespoons olive oil in a large skillet over moderately high heat. Add eggplant to hot oil; cook until charred. Turn, char second side.

Broil red pepper, turning frequently with tongs, 10 minutes or until all sides of the pepper are blistered. Place red pepper in brown paper bag. Close and let stand 10 minutes. (Pepper will flatten).

Under cold running water, gently rub pepper to peel off skin. Remove seeds; slice pepper. Combine charred eggplant and red pepper with 2 tablespoons olive oil and the rosemary. Let stand 30 minutes.

Brush cut surfaces of bread with 1 tablespoon olive oil and chopped garlic. Grill baguette 5 to 10 minutes, or until toasted. Grill tuna seasoned with salt and cracked black pepper 1 minute on each side, or until medium rare. Place tuna on bottom half of toasted bread; cover with eggplant and red pepper. Cover with top half of bread. Serve with sliced fresh tomato.

BERCY BUTTER A LA KALIBER
3/4 cup softened butter
2 tablespoons minced shallots
1/2 cup Kaliber
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 tablespoon minced parsley
Salt and pepper to taste

Heat Kaliber and shallots in a saucepan over high heat until liquid is reduced by one-half. Cool to room temperature. In bowl, combine all ingredients. Shape mixture into a roll and put in aluminum foil. Refrigerate until firm. Slice into patties at serving time.

MUSTARD BEER MARINADE
1/4 cup Dijon-style mustard
1/4 cup orange juice
1/4 cup Kaliber
2 tablespoons honey
2 tablespoons olive oil
2 teaspoons grated fresh ginger
2 cloves garlic, minced
1/8 teaspoon cayenne pepper
Mix ingredients and marinate beef, chicken or fish for 3 hours or longer.

The safest way to thaw foods is to transfer the package to the refrigerator compartment one to three days, depending on size, before it is needed.

Kenmore® High-Efficiency Central Air Conditioning

If your present cooling system is costing more than you think it should to keep your home comfortable, give us a call. Chances are this new Kenmore® central cooling system will cost substantially less to operate than your old system. The savings might even pay for the new system in a few years. Kenmore® state-of-the-art air conditioning offers dependable, long life performance, a size available for almost any home.

Larger sizes are also sale-priced. Installation available, extra.
