Iran Attacks U.S.-Operated Supertanker

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — An Iranian gunboat attacked a U.S.-operated supertanker with rocket-propelled grenades and machine guns today in the northern Persian Gulf off Kuwait, setting the ship on fire, maritime sources said.

The 273,205-ton Peconic, which is registered in Liberia and flies that country's flag, was hit at 11 a.m. (3 a.m. EDT) and radioed a distress signal to marine salvage offices, said the sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

No casualties were reported. The Peconic was hit 60 miles southeast of al-Ahmadi, Kuwait's main oil terminal, where 11 Kuwaiti tankers are due to arrive with U.S. Navy escorts later this month. The tankers are being re-registered in the United States.

Iran warned the United States today not to go ahead with its reflagging plans for Kuwaiti ships.

State-run Tehran radio said in a commentary, monitored in Nicosia, that by entering the Persian Gulf, the United States was "entering quicksands which will have more dangerous consequences than the U.S. military ever experienced in Lebanon or Vietnam."

The maritime officials said the Peconic was on its way to Kuwait to load 60,000 tons of oil before heading to Saudi Arabia's Ran Tanura terminal to pick up another shipment.

Tugboats were sent to help the Peconic, which according to Lloyd's Register of Shipping is owned by Gray Shipping Inc. of Monrovia, Liberia. Sources at Lloyd's Shipping Intelligence in London said the vessel's operators was Universe Tankships Inc. of Delaware.

Thomas Castano, a spokesman for Universe Tankships, said the captain told the company the ship was hit by about 18 rocket-propelled grenades.

Castano said "everybody seems to be OK" aboard. Gulf shipping circles said there were 40 men aboard, none American, and identified the captain as Monogios Mikhael of Greece.

In shore-to-ship contacts with the vessel, a crew member told The Associated Press the attack was carried out by a high-speed launch that caught up with the Peconic and "just opened fire."

Nine rocket-propelled grenades were fired, then the attackers reloaded and fired another nine, igniting a fire that was put out by the crew, he said.

"This is our third ship that was hit" in the Persian Gulf, Castano said, but "I guess we have to keep going in there if we have orders."

In Washington, Pentagon spokesman Maj. Larry Icenogle said the attack did not require a U.S. military response because the ship is not a U.S.-flagged vessel.

The raid on the Peconic was apparently in retaliation for at least two Iraqi attacks this week on tankers near Kharg Island terminal in the gulf's northern waters. Iran and Iraq, at war for nearly 7 years, have attacked more than 200 ships in their attempts to inflict damage on each other's economies.

The official Iraqi News Agency reported earlier today that Iraqi warplanes hit a tanker holding area east of Kharg Wednesday night, "scoring destructive hits after penetrating enemy air defenses."

The agency, monitored in Nicosia, said all the Iraqi planes returned safely to base after the attack just before midnight.

Aliens Found In Hot Trailer

HEBBRONVILLE, Texas (AP) — Nineteen Mexicans rescued from a railroad trailer and 141 found in two trucks in California may be a sign smugglers are cashing in on new immigration laws, and officials fear "more human tragedy" like the deaths of 18 in a Texas boxcar.

The 19 semiconscious men were discovered Wednesday in a piggyback train-trailer where temperatures reached 120 degrees, said Mario Ortiz, a spokesman with the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service in Dallas.

"This could have been another major tragedy," Ortiz said. On July 2, 18 aliens were found dead inside a boxcar near Sierra Blanca. One man survived.

"I think the officers saved our lives," said 23-year-old Pedro Palma Bustamante, one of those found in this ranching town 60 miles east of Laredo.

"They'll be deported, but not before an intensive investigation," said Ortiz. "This is another smuggling case."

Eighty-five of the 88 aliens found Wednesday sealed inside a tractor-trailer rig in San Clemente, Calif., were sent back to Mexico later in the day, said John Day, a Border Patrol supervisor. The three others were held as material witnesses against the driver, who faces smuggling charges.

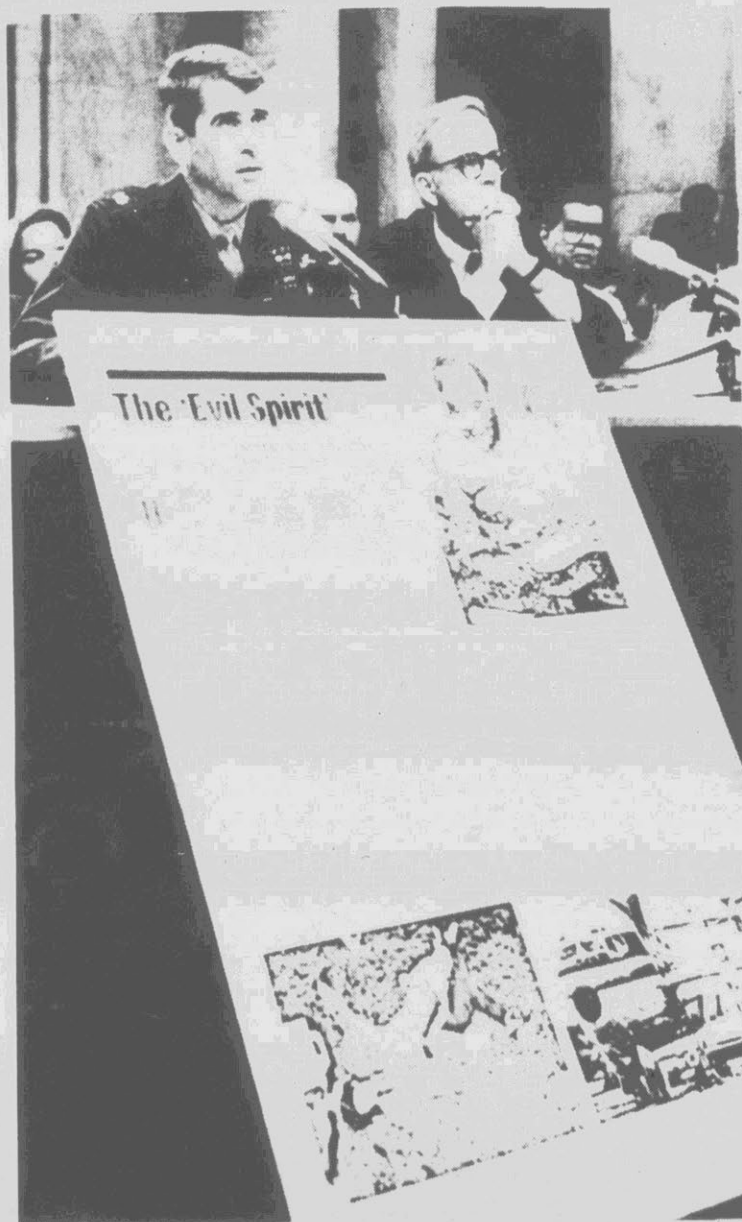

Fifty-three aliens were found in a tractor-trailer Tuesday in San Diego.

The four incidents indicate that smuggling of undocumented workers across the border is on the rise, said Ortiz. "This can't be coincidental."

Ruben Bonilla, chairman of the Mexican-American Democrats of Texas, which opposed the new immigration law, said, "The big winner is the coyotes who earn more money now by smuggling people in."

"We're only seeing the tip of the iceberg now. There will be more human tragedy, not only in the hot summer but also in the bitter cold of winter."

The immigration law provides for amnesty and the possibility of eventual citizenship for aliens who have lived in the United States since 1982.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lt. Col. Oliver North, turning on his pursuers, today criticized the Iran-Contra hearings as unfair and damaging to the national interest, and said Congress must shoulder the blame for a "fickle, vacillating, unpredictable" policy toward the Nicaraguan rebels.

"Of one thing I am certain, is that you will not investigate yourself in this matter," he said to more than two dozen members of Congress arrayed before him, each one waiting a turn to ask questions.

Reading a lengthy prepared opening statement in advance of what is expected to be a withering cross-examination, the decorated Marine officer portrayed himself as a simple staff officer during six years on the National Security Council staff. "I did not engage in fantasy that I was the president or vice president or Cabinet member or even the director of the National Security Council," he said.

North's wife, Betsy, sat behind him as he read a prepared statement that was written to be delivered before his opening day of testimony on Tuesday. The investigating committees ordered him to wait the 48 hours required under the rules before going ahead.

The session was briefly interrupted at mid-morning when two men stood up at the rear of the room, unfurled a white banner and began shouting anti-Contra slogans. North, sitting with his back to the two, initially ducked, then turned to watch while uniformed police hustled the demonstrators from the room.

In a direct attack on the senators and representatives waiting to question him, North likened their investigation to a grossly unfair sporting event. "It's sort of like a baseball game in which you are both the player and the umpire. It's a game where you call the balls and strikes and you determine who is out and who is safe."

No matter, said the man who admitted on Wednesday that he lied to Congress earlier to keep the affair hidden, and is a central target in the criminal investigation being conducted by independent counsel Lawrence E. Walsh.

"I am going to walk out of here with my head up and my shoulders straight because I am proud of my accomplishments," he said.

David Shackleford of Farmville, a member of the Pitt County Board of Education, has filed as a candidate for the board in the Nov. 3 municipal election.

Shackleford will run for Seat A in District 4 (Farmville). Shackleford was appointed to the school board by the N.C. Legislature in 1985.

"During my two years on the consolidated board of education, we have been faced with many difficult problems," Shackleford said after filing this morning. "It is our job as board members to make sound decisions concerning our most important

County Commissioners Will Seek Approval Of New Election Proposal

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County Commissioners took formal action Wednesday to authorize lawyers to submit the county's new plan for electing commissioners to the U.S. Justice Department for preclearance.

But the board came to no final decision on the allocation of space in the newly acquired Shore Drive Plaza office building, at the intersection of Second and Evans Streets, and in the courthouse.

Under Section 5 of the federal Voting Rights Act, the county's new "six-three" election plan, created by an act of the General Assembly last month, must receive "preclearance" by either the Department of Justice or the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia.

The six-three plan would expand the present six-member board to nine members, with six being elected from newly created districts (two of which are predominantly black) and three elected at-large by countywide vote.

At a meeting Monday, the board's Courthouse Planning Committee recommended that the offices of the tax supervisor, tax collector, the public defender and juvenile court counselor move to the Shire Drive Plaza building.

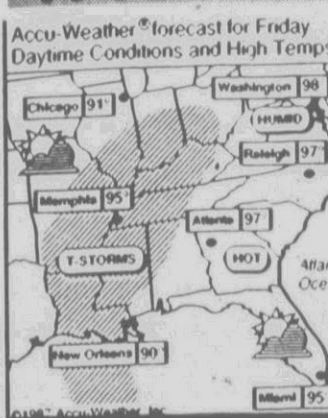

The committee also recommended that the clerk of court be given the offices vacated by the Tax Department on the first floor of the courthouse and that a new courtroom be created on the fourth floor of the courthouse.

But questions were raised Monday over additional space for the sheriff's department, so the space-allocation discussion was continued Wednesday.

James G. Hite, an architect developing a long-range plan for courthouse space told commissioners that "both the sheriff and clerk of court need space very badly ... need space

Farm Workers Declining In Area

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

The number of farm workers steadily is decreasing in Pitt County as it becomes more difficult to find those willing to work in the fields, said Mike Doherty, area specialized farm management agent with the Agriculture Extension Service.

"The farmers have told me it's more difficult to hire good labor for working in the fields," he said. "This is something that has been creeping up over time."

In 1982, for example, the annual average of agriculture employment in Pitt County was 3,130, said Bonnie Cannon, labor market analyst with the Employment Security Commission. But, in 1985, the annual average had dropped to 1,910 in the county.

Other counties have joined Pitt in the decrease in agriculture employment, she said. Greene County, for example, had an annual average of 1,330 in 1982, but dropped to 930 by 1985. The combined projected agriculture employment figure in Pitt and Greene counties is 2,400 for the month of May, Ms. Cannon said.

Decreases in the number of farm workers may be the result of the decrease in the number of farmers, resulting in the decrease of harvestable crops and in a decline of farm children willing to work in the fields, Doherty said.

For example, 17,556 acres of tobacco were harvested in Pitt County in 1982, while only 11,842 acres were harvested in 1986, said Carol Hardee of the extension service.

Low unemployment rates in the county also may have contributed to decreased availability of farm labor, Doherty said.

The Employment Security Commission reported a Pitt County unemployment rate of 3.6 percent in May, while rates were 8.1 percent in Beaufort, 6.2 percent in Greene and 6.1 percent in Martin counties, said Bonnie Cannon, a labor market analyst.

"There's been a lot of growth in eastern North Carolina" that has created new jobs. "Therefore, there's not much help available for the farmers," Doherty said.

New immigration laws created to target unauthorized laborers only marginally contribute to the unavailability of farm labor in Pitt County because "less than 10 percent of seasonal labor are migrants," Doherty said. "The law does not really have much of an impact on us."

But, new field sanitation standards may affect the number of laborers farmers can afford to hire, he said.

"Any farm with 11 or more people operating in the field has to provide toilet facilities" for the workers, Doherty said. There is to be one toilet and handwashing facility per 20 employees within one-quarter mile of their place in the field.

These standards will "add to the cost of producing crops and (give them) further incentive to cut down on the amount of labor," he said.

Forest Fires Down

After two consecutive years of severe forest fires, 1987 is setting the record as the year with the least number of acres lost to wildfire, according to the N.C. Department of Natural Resources and Community Development.

The department said that midyear statistics show that from January through June, 1,865 fires burned 8,256 acres of land across the state. During the same six-month period in 1986, 4,952 fires burned 109,873 acres of land. The year with the least number of acres burned was 1983 when 2,897 fires swept through 12,644 acres.

The department said the low number of fires and acres burned so far this year are attributed to the abundant rainfall the state had during the first four months of 1987. Because of the 1986 drought, the Division of Forest Resources battled a 73,000-acre fire in Pender and Onslow counties in last May. In comparison, the largest fire this year has been a 450-acre fire that burned near Swansboro in May.

Priests Get New Assignments

Three area Catholic priests and one pastoral associate have left their Greenville congregations for new assignments within the Raleigh Diocese, opening the way for the introduction of five new priests to the area, according to the Rev. Michael Clay of the Diocesan Clergy Personnel Board.

Clay said he was being reassigned Wednesday from St. Peter's Church to Raleigh as the director of liturgy and worship for the diocese. The Rev. JaVan Saxon from St. Gabriel's is moving to St. Anne's Church in Edenton, and the Rev. Terry Collins of the Newman Center on the campus of East Carolina University is transferring to Holy Redeemer Church in Kill Devil Hills, he said. Gerard O'Brien, a pastoral associate at St. Peter's, is going to Farmville to be the pastoral administrator at St. Elizabeth's Church.

Clay noted that five priests of the Passionists order are entering the vacated positions. The Revs. Kenneth Walsh and Albin Harmon will be pastor and associate pastor of St. Peter's, the Revs. Xavier Hayes and Melvin Shorter will begin work at St. Gabriel's, and the Rev. Paul Veath will replace Collins at the Newman Center, he said.

"This is going to mean that it will be the first time in over 100 years that diocesan priests haven't staffed the local Catholic churches here," Clay said.

He explained that diocesan priests take their vows of service to the bishop of a diocese and serve that diocese for as long as they are priests. Passionists, he said, belong to a religious order that specializes in evangelism, teaching and mission work. They do not serve any one diocese, instead moving throughout a given region wherever they are needed. The Passionists founded St. Gabriel's Church here 50 years ago.

The new priests are from Massachusetts, New Jersey and Maryland, Clay noted. He said they are coming at the invitation of the bishop in Raleigh and will serve at his discrimination, honoring a three-year commitment. According to Clay, at the end of that time an evaluation will be made of their service and if things are going well the situation will remain permanent.

Clay said the Catholic church serves about 1,800 people through St. Peter's and St. Gabriel's, with the possibility of reaching 2,500 more through the Newman Center.

He also said the Passionists are not going to make any dramatic changes in direction in their parishes, although there are bound to be some differences in the nuances.

It's very unusual to transfer all the area priests at once, Clay said, but he said the bishop believed it would be good to have all the Passionists in the same area, and knew they already had ties to the Greenville area through St. Gabriel's. Clay also said the move might be a way for the two parishes in Greenville to come closer together in their efforts.

chairman of the commission. The next scheduled meeting of the group is set for 8 p.m. Sept. 9.

Teachers Visit Farm Operations

Ola Perry, coordinator of programs in the Pitt County Schools for grades K-3, and teachers from Bethel Elementary, G.R. Whitfield and Sam D. Bundy schools visited three Pitt County farms recently in connection with a new program, "Ag in the Classroom."

The program is sponsored by the N.C. Farm Bureau and the Pitt County Farm Bureau Women's Committee.

The teachers first visited Charles McLawhorn's dairy farm, having a chance to view the milking process. Tom Blevins and Robert Mayo instructed the visitors in the cultivation of commercial catfish production at their catfish farm on Route 2, Ayden.

At Marion Mills' farm, the group learned about the production of peanuts, tobacco, corn, soybeans and other row crops.

Several guests from the N.C. Farm Bureau Federation of Raleigh also toured with the group, along with Janie Manning, principal of Bethel Elementary and Edith Warren, principal of Sam D. Bundy.

Grant Will Allow Program To Expand

Neonatal physicians at Pitt County Memorial Hospital say a $230,766 grant by the Kate B. Reynolds Health Care Trust of Winston-Salem will allow expansion of PCMH's follow-up program for high-risk infants.

The private foundation annually provides about $3 million to non-profit organizations statewide that seek to improve the health care of North Carolinians.

Dr. Stephen Engelke, associate professor of pediatrics at the East Carolina University School of Medicine, said the multiple-year grant will be used to increase the existing follow-up services and to build a more cohesive network with the 21 hospitals in eastern North Carolina that refer high-risk infants to Pitt Memorial.

Engelke said there are three objects for the project grant. The first is to identify specific risk factors in newborns before discharge from the neonatal intensive care unit at Pitt Memorial.

The second objective is to develop a regional education program that will strengthen overall discharge planning for high-risk infants referred back to a hospital in the 21-county region. The third is to organize a regional network of referring hospitals, physicians and health departments to coordinate followup care.

John J. Sullivan, chief of the general smuggling programs section of Customs, said that the joint enterprise of the Customs Service and the National Center will result in the public's being able to use a familiar toll-free number to support continuing activity in child pornography investigation and eradication.

Strong Steps Needed

Out in middle America where for generations agriculture has been the number one industry they've learned how to break free from reliance on a single boom-and-bust economy — the farm.

Small towns have been bucking trends eastern Carolina knows too well: shrinking populations, fewer jobs and paychecks, and hushed Main Streets. States such as Missouri, Nebraska and Iowa are deeply involved.

An Iowa State economics professor recalled that many farm towns rode out the 1974 recession hardly knowing it had happened, but now, having seen the 1980s recession at close range, they want to diversify so they will be positioned the next time around. He admits it isn't always easy.

The competition can be fierce.

Some communities recruit industries through development corporations steered by local shareholders. Others intensify their efforts. Some see results, still others are just beginning.

Their methods are pretty much in line with Tar Heel experience. The rest of the effort appears to be mostly just hard work. Over the past few years town developers contacted more than 200 business prospects. "We operate on the theory that if a blind hog keeps rooting around, he gets an acorn once in a while" says a development corporation's president. "Some of our best sales people for our community are our industries."

The town of Osceola (Iowa) accommodated business. One plant manager says they did things unseen in other communities. "Every time we started making comparisons, we found ourselves comparing them to Osceola", he recalls.

The town's tax base increased from $12 million in 1970 to $87 million in 1986. Its population rose from about 3,100 in 1970 to about 4,000 in a state that reportedly lost 30,000 people in 1985-86.

Meanwhile, Iowa's farmers have been hurting. Their land has lost a lot of its value and corn prices are down. Up to 30 percent of the farmers are "in trouble" according to the county extension director.

It gives one reason to pause and think. Industry-hunting is a frequently raised topic in our part of the world and Pitt Countians can look around to confirm the exercise does work. Half-hearted measures and only tentative steps are not enough. More than tokenism is required. It is something to remember.

Tooth Fairy?

American experts in the art of eavesdropping admit a grudging respect for work of their counterparts in Russia.

Former Defense Secretary James Schlesinger says the U.S. Embassy under construction in Moscow is so riddled with listening devices that he recommends the top three floors be removed and an annex be constructed wherein any secrets can be discussed in secret.

He has remarked the episode indicates Soviet advances in spy technology had pushed that country ahead of the United States. Those devices are said to be of a type still not understood by American experts and the high-tech gadgets were able to elude detection by X-rays.

Actually, he would also be counted as something worse than stupid to say otherwise. So maybe, just maybe, things are not quite as bad as they've been painted.

In terms of dollars alone, the embassy story is going to cost Washington many millions of dollars. The expense of playing catch-up in the field is just one more facet; and more than that, we have that uncertainty of what other undetected systems may be in place or waiting in the wings.

Many of the problems encountered in the building of new embassies in each other's country is attributed to a 1972 agreement.

Schlesinger says the terms should be adjusted to make clear that all new U.S. construction in Moscow would be done with security-cleared American personnel and not with Soviet workers. Another condition (which the U.S. accepted) was that no concrete could be poured at the embassy site.

It indicates the Soviet Union laid groundwork for mischief-making long ago.

Small wonder Senator Lawton Chiles wondered aloud "Did we also put in that agreement that we believed in the Tooth Fairy?"

Economic Issues Key To Under-40 Vote

'Bewitched by the American dream, a majority of younger voters see a slim minority of others getting richer and richer and they're asking, "How come not me?"' their jobs. They're panicked because money and material possessions are how they define themselves.

Nowhere does this anxiety manifest itself more than over the desire to own a home in a relatively decent city and neighborhood. Unfortunately, owning a home is becoming increasingly difficult, if not impossible, for many in this country.

After steadily climbing for decades, the home-ownership rate has been declining during this decade. Hardest hit are, you guessed it, younger people. Between 1981 and 1985, ownership rates for people under 25 years of age declined by about 16 percent, for those 25-29 by 10 percent, and for those 30-34 by 8 percent.

Traditionally, young families have had four options to meet their housing needs: savings, the transfer and filtering down of older units, accepting public/assisted housing or changing consumption patterns. At different times and in different combinations, these options have helped families of different incomes to become better housed. But the old tools for ownership and mobility in housing aren't there anymore.

Savings, for example, is no longer a serious option. The cost of housing has gone up faster in recent years than the return on savings, and families have had less real income from which to save. Furthermore, the ability to finance a home with a low down payment has collided with the realities of housing finance. The speculative behavior of some Americans in buying any home has inflated prices, making it difficult for others to obtain decent shelter.

In elite East and West Coast areas, home prices last year ranged from $278,000 in Somerset County, N.J., to $385,000 in San Francisco. In suburban Chicago, Miami and San Diego, homes cost about $140,000 and they are rising. On the Main Line in Philadelphia, homes appreciated by 20 percent in the last year to $162,000.

It used to be that families or individuals could improve their housing situation by taking over units that were left by higher-income people moving into new housing. The situation is quite different now. There is more competition for older units, because more families are competing against non-families.

Moreover, families used to have access to a variety of public-assisted housing programs. Today a majority of these programs have long waiting lines that continue to grow.

Most families, particularly young ones, are willing to change their lifestyles by accepting less in order to own a home. But altering lifestyles (goodbye health club membership) is only a reasonable option when promise is in the wind.

The increasingly difficult task of purchasing a home is but one in a series of troubling hurdles facing young Americans. There are a multitude of others that revolve around money, too. Between 1978 and 1984, for example, 37 percent of all new jobs paid less than $8,700 a year in 1984 dollars, compared to 27 percent between 1963 and 1978. And as far as future jobs are concerned, between 1984 and 1995, the majority of occupations with the largest expected job growth will include positions that most people don't want: cashiers, janitors, retail sales clerks and nursing aides.

Bewitched by the American dream, a majority of younger voters see a slim minority of others getting richer and richer and they're asking, "How come not me?"

The sooner prospective presidential candidates get clued into the economic issues that matter to this generation, the more appealing they will become. At the same time, the bridge to a brighter future will not be reached without tough, persistent questions of candidates. As Gov. Michael Dukakis of Massachusetts has rightly observed: "Ask more of your candidates, because the next president will be asking more of you."

Compromise Plan Soundest Proposal

'Over the past nine months, at least three major plans for school construction had floated about — but all had serious flaws and none came close to gathering the support needed to become law.'

ments of any responsibility for solving what has been traditionally a local duty: building schools. It may have also raised more money than is needed.

Let's look briefly at how the new plan compares with these first three.

It doesn't involve any borrowing, so it avoids the major problem with Martin's idea: interest payments. This plan may end up causing higher local taxes, however, because it forces the counties to spend some money on schools which counties may have planned to use for other needs. It is not likely, however, to have as great a local fiscal effect as would the Martin plan.

This plan locks the money into school construction, and thus is a considerable improvement over Jordan's plan. The bill would mandate that 60 percent of the revenues from the last half-percent increase in the sales tax go towards schools for the next 10 years.

There is also a non-supplant clause in the $740 million, 10-year appropriation for vocational education and secretarial help that is included in the budget. This means that when the state starts paying those two budget items, local governments will have to reassign the money they save to other educational programs.

The plan cleverly locks the legislature into keeping this program on course for the next 10 years. The lock is not unbreakable. A future legislature could repeal the law. But that would require action by both houses. If one house continues to support the plan, it stays in the law and the money keeps flowing. The leadership accomplished this by earmarking certain revenues to the school construction funds, a process which circumvents the biennial appropriations process.

Finally, the plan involves a much smaller tax increase than did the Watkins plan — about $100 million a year rather than $500 million — and the tax is not as controversial. It falls squarely on the shoulders of business — not the consumer — and business is happy to have it.

Happy to have a tax increase? That's right. That will be explained in a future column.

Strength For Today

The German philosopher Hegel maintained that if we knew more we would sin less, and that if we knew all we would cease to sin. He was a supporter of the contention that mankind is to be saved by secular enlightenment.

Yet 100 years after Hegel died the German nation fell into the hands of Hitler and was almost destroyed. The United States today does not appear likely to become the earthly counterpart of the kingdom of God because we are very likely to destroy ourselves and the rest of the world with the atomic weapons which our "wisdom" has created.

Theodore Roosevelt once remarked that to educate a person without educating his conscience was to create a potential criminal. In the same way, to enlighten the mind of a nation and not to enlighten its conscience is to court unimaginable disaster.

In The Area

Rainfall

Thundershowers favored only part of Greenville and Pitt County Wednesday evening as they created heavy rainfall and strong wind gusts, but no major damage.

WNCT-TV recorded .18 inches of rain in southern Greenville while 1.8 inches were recorded in Winterville in about 30 minutes. Winds were from 35 to 38 miles per hour.

However, some areas escaped the storm as the Greenville Utilities Commission water plant in north Greenville recorded no rainfall Wednesday. The Tar River level was at 2 feet above sea level this morning.

There were some miscellaneous circuit problems caused by the storm, said Roger Jones, director of electric systems at GUC. But, "I don't believe we had any substantial damage," he said.

Patient Fair

Physicians of Paul Roberson, the 42-year-old Martin County man who received a heart transplant at Pitt County Memorial Hospital Monday, said he was in fair condition this morning.

According to hospital officials, Roberson received a visit Wednesday from Malcolm Huffman of Washington, N.C., recipient of the first heart transplant at Pitt Memorial.

Writing Fellows

Two Greenville teachers were among 18 classroom teachers selected as Writing Fellows to participate in the sixth North Carolina Writing Project held recently at Atlantic Christian College, Wilson.

Frankie Brunson of Third Street School and Edith Jendrasiak of St. Peter's School attended the workshop, which dealt with superior techniques of teaching writing in the classroom for teachers in kindergarten through 12th grades.

Similar workshops are scheduled at seven other campus sites across the state.

The project is funded through a grant from the North Carolina Legislature. Special funding allowed a few private school teachers to participate.

Fellows received six hours of graduate credit in the teaching of writing.

Following workshop completion, participants become teacher consultants who will present writing techniques during in-service sessions within their regions.

Lee said a plant valued at $104, a dry flower arrangement valued at $50 and two pictures valued at $180 were taken from the Hilton Inn on Greenville Boulevard in an incident reported at 4:04 p.m.

Lee said a wallet containing $38 in cash was taken from the Farm Fresh store on Greenville Boulevard in an incident reported at 5:40 p.m.

Theft Arrests

Two men were arrested by Greenville police on theft-related charges.

Officer T.E. Nevelle said Donald Ray Streeter, 28, of Durham was arrested about 3:45 p.m. on common law robbery charges.

Neville said the charge stemmed from an incident reported Sunday in which a local man said $145 in cash was forcibly taken from him after he was lured to an area behind the Blue Room on Albemarle Avenue.

Neville also said Jamal Yousef Ahmad, 22, of Raleigh was charged with larceny of gas from the Fuel Dock at 2130 Greenville Blvd.

Neville, who said the incident was reported at 7:10 a.m., said Ahmad allegedly purchased $20 worth of gas, then told a clerk he did not have the money to pay and left his driver's license.

Neville said Ahmad was charged after he failed to return with the money.

Embezzlement Probe

Greenville police have arrested two men on embezzlement charges in connection with thefts from Sears Roebuck and Co. at Carolina East Mall where the two had been employed.

Detective G.W. Williams said Wade Stanley Purvis, 22, of 111 Garrett Dorm was arrested Tuesday on 37 counts of embezzlement, involving about $2,000.

William B. Outlaw, 20, of Kinston was arrested Wednesday on 43 embezzlement counts, also involving about $2,000.

Williams said the embezzlements, involving bogus refunds for merchandise never purchased, occurred during the period of January through May of this year.

Williams said the cases have been under investigation since they were reported to the department on June 8.

Fugitive Charge

Tony Monroe Dennie, 28, of Nashville, Tenn., was arrested by Greenville police Wednesday on a fugitive from justice charge.

Officer J.K. McCarthy said Dennie, who was taken into custody about 5:54 p.m. at the Greenville Motel on Memorial Drive, is wanted by Brentwood, Tenn., authorities on aggravated assault charges.

House Panel Votes To Leave Waste Compact

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina would pull out of an eight-state compact for handling low-level radioactive waste and would put in-state waste in Wake, Mecklenburg or Brunswick counties under a bill given a House committee's approval. The 13-12 vote came after a wild meeting of the Water and Air Resources Committee in which both sides argued about the politics of choosing a waste site. A final controversy came when the chairman, Rep. Dan DeVane, D-Hoke, refused to take a formal roll-call vote on the matter. "It's highly irregular for a chairman to refuse a division call," said Rep. Peggy Stamey, D-Wake, after the vote. "We didn't get the vote counted. We did everything but vote," said

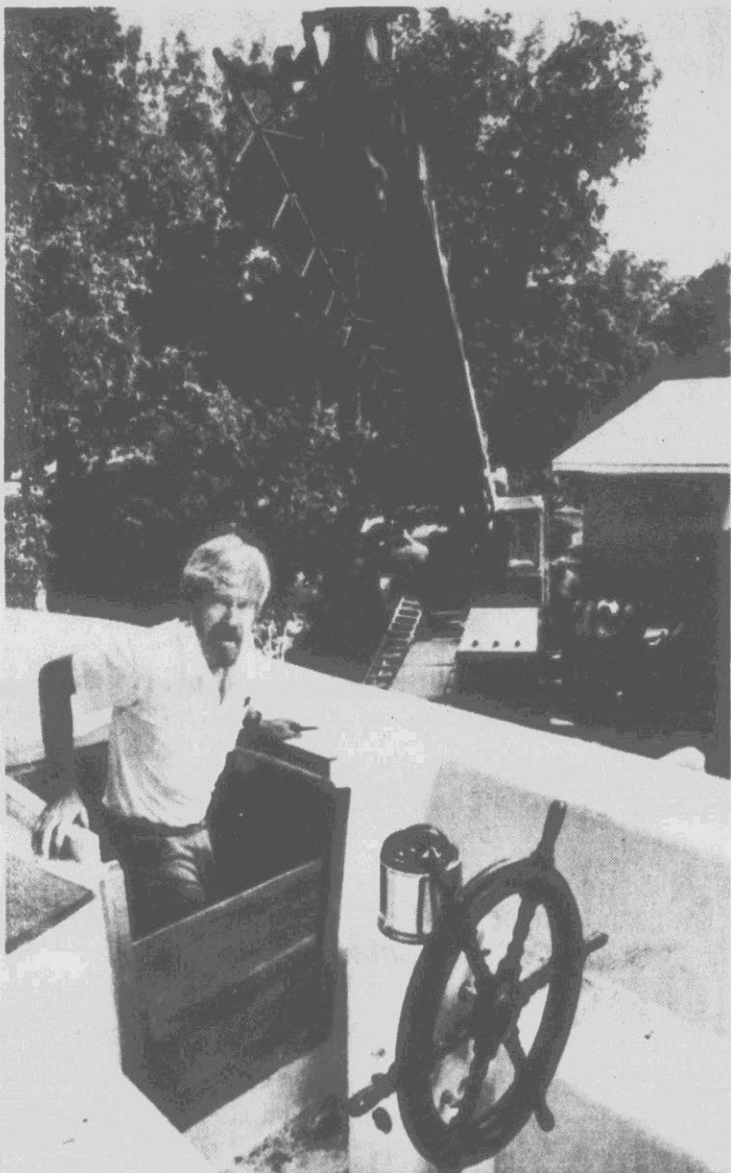

Rep. Vernon Abernethy, R-Gaston. DeVane had ruled an amendment to delete a provision limiting a waste site to the three counties with nuclear power plants failed by a 13-12 vote after a show of hands. Seconds later, on a vote to approve the bill, he announced supporters prevailed and said, "Everybody voted the same way." Earl Mac Cormac, Gov. Jim Martin's science adviser, said he had heard at least three different vote counts, although he did not say the outcome would have been different. Mac Cormac and Martin favor remaining in the compact, saying it is the only economically feasible way to handle the waste. DeVane, who earlier had reported the vote was 14-12, said the bill would go before the full House early next week and predicted it would be approved. But Ms. Stamey said she might try to have the bill sent to the Finance Committee for another bid to remove the three counties. That committee is chaired by Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, a member of the Southeast Compact Commission, who has voiced objections to the bill. Most of Wednesday's committee debate focused on whether a site should be chosen by politics or solely on scientific criteria. But Republicans also showed brief outrage when an amendment was offered to reduce the number of gubernatorial appointees to the commission that would pick a site. Abernethy pointed out that Rep. Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, the chief proponent of repealing the Southeast compact, had circulated forms to each House member asking whether their county should be considered for a waste site. He said no representative worth his salt would sign away his county. "That's the level of the checker game that we're playing here today," Abernethy said. "If that's the game we're playing, by golly, get the form to me and I'll sign it and play with you." "Putting a site in one of three counties has nothing to do with scientific research, logic and the best thing for the state of North Carolina," he added. But Rep. Dave Diamont, D-Surry, said it would be impossible to take the politics out of the selection. "Historically, they (waste facilities) have been put in areas that are poor, black, rural and with no political influence," he said. Rep. Martin Nesbitt, D-Buncombe, said it makes sense to consider counties with nuclear plants because the plants, when decommissioned, will become little more than a pile of radioactive waste. "That's not meanness. That's not hostility," Nesbitt said. "It's not trying to come down on Wake or Mecklenburg or Brunswick." Rep. Foyle Hightower, D-Anson, offered the amendment to transfer two of the 15 members of the siting authority from the governor to the General Assembly. The amendment also would have phased in staggered terms in a way to give legislative appointees a stronger voice in the early going. "The General Assembly is really closer to the people," said Hightower. "They're elected every two years." Rep. Ann Duncan, R-Forsyth, argued against the amendment, saying, "You need to leave the authority with the executive branch so that they are accountable for carrying out the policies you are setting." Rep. Michael Decker, R-Forsyth, said gubernatorial appointees would be more trustworthy. "We (lawmakers) are more easily swayed by the emotions and by a loud minority," he said. "Therefore, we would be more inclined to make our appointments on the emotional side of the issues." "I'm trying to figure out whether we are just protecting our backsides with this amendment or whether we are just stripping the governor just to be stripping the governor," added Diamont. Hightower agreed to withdraw the amendment and some committee members said it may have been offered as a delaying tactic while bill supporters waited for the right numbers to call for a vote.

LANDLOCKED — Bob Scott of Columbia, S.C., a retired psychologist, had to postpone his dream of sailing the high seas. Scott spent 11 years building a 41-foot fiberglass cruiser but now he can't get it out of his backyard. The 40-ton crane, in background, that came to lift the boat began sinking in the yard and the operator backed off, refusing to attempt to lift the 18-ton boat. (AP Laser-photo)

State's Towns Seeking Alternatives To Traditional Landfills For Wastes

By MARTHA WAGGONER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina communities aren't in dire need of more space for landfills, but instead of counting on using land to dump trash, some are planning alternatives such as incineration and recycling to reduce the amount of waste. "We are blessed with a large area of land," said Bill Meyer, director of the Solid and Hazardous Waste Management Branch. "But if you put a landfill on land, then you severely restrict use of that land for almost any other use. The other issue is, it has been determined by the Division of Environmental Management that the best use of groundwater in the state is as drinking water."

Thirty-eight counties and municipalities have two years of use or less left in their landfills; of those, six have less than a year left. No landfill in North Carolina has more than 10 years of life left in it. Since 1981, New Hanover County has used a lined landfill that protects the groundwater from contamination. It has added an incinerator that has reduced the amount of waste going into the landfill by 80 percent to 90 percent, said Ed Hilton, director of engineering and facilities for the county. In Mecklenburg County, officials hope an intensive effort will cause the recycling of 30 percent of all the solid waste generated in the county by 1994, said Betsy Dorn, recycling coordinator for the county. Mecklenburg County has less than two years left in its Harrisburg landfill, although it has a state permit for a new facility with a liner near Pineville. But Ms. Dorn said there could be problems with building the facility on time because of its closeness to the South Carolina border. The county also is building incinerators to reduce the amount of waste and is trying to get a permit to expand the current landfill. The recycling program came about because of attempts to extend the life of the present landfill, she said, "and a realization that recycling is going to be the cheapest way to manage the waste." Burying recyclable items wastes the space in the landfill and means the county "ends up burying resources that don't really belong in a landfill," she said.

New Hanover County opened its lined landfill in November 1981 at an initial cost of $3.2 million. The cost included 400 acres of land (200 acres of which is usable), the first 10-acre containment area, fences, roads and building a system to collect rainwater that runs through the garbage. The water is then treated before being used. Since then, the county has spent another $626,000 adding five acres to the site. The facility is "state of the art, but it's also very expensive," Hilton said. In addition, the county built a refuse-fired steam plant. Garbage is burned, steam is sold to industrial users and any left over is used to generate electricity. In the fiscal year ended July 1, 1986, the county made $548,420 in steam and $574,870 in electricity. The money is used to help pay for the plant and its operating costs, Hilton said. "Once you build a facility like this (the landfill), it's vital to try to find some way to reduce the volume of the landfill," he said. The plant reduces the amount of waste going into the landfill by about 80 percent to 90 percent, he said.

New Hanover County is in the process of evaluating a recycling program, Hilton said. About 8,500 households in Mecklenburg County are given containers in which to store their recyclable trash. They leave the container at the curb once a week, and a driver separates the trash into three bins: newspapers, cans and glass and plastics. The county also has eight recycling dropoff centers and is in the process of building three more. Officials also are working with the glass industry to set up glass recycling programs in bars and restaurants. Eventually, Ms. Dorn said she hoped some items would not be allowed in the landfill. "We intend to consider some mandatory policies that will prevent the disposal in our landfills and incinerators of some items that can be recycled," she said. "If we have a system to recycle cardboard, then we won't accept it in the landfill."

Universities Waive Entry Requirements

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Worried that half the state's high school juniors would be barred from public colleges under tougher 1988 admission requirements, officials of the University of North Carolina system say they will postpone some math and science requirements until 1990. Even though many of the ineligible students might not be bound for college, university officials said Wednesday they were making the changes out of fairness to students who simply might be unaware of the new requirements. "If we persist without these modifications, we would be saying to some students that you can't come to the university when they've done nothing wrong," system President C.D. Spangler said. "They didn't get the message," he said. "We don't want to be unfair to students." In 1984, the University of North Carolina Board of Governors voted to require the completion of some specific high school courses for admission at all 16 state universities beginning in 1988. The requirements include four English, three math, two social studies and three science courses. Previously, the board had permitted schools to set their own requirements. On Wednesday, Spangler said the university system still will set admissions standards in 1988, but they will include two math and two science courses instead of three of each, as originally planned. The original requirements will be pushed back to 1990, giving university system officials more time to tell parents and students about them. Though the university system has been publicizing the requirements since 1984, a new study shows that only 51 percent of the state's high school juniors — the first class affected by the requirements — will graduate with all courses necessary under the original admission policy. "An unacceptably large number of (students) are still not adequately preparing themselves, especially in mathematics and the sciences," Spangler said. Since 1984, university system of-officials have sent letters explaining the requirements to school superintendents, principals and guidance counselors. They've distributed a brochure describing the requirements to students. They even aired television announcements featuring basketball stars from North Carolina State University and UNC-Chapel Hill. But in a winter telephone survey of high school juniors from across the state, 49 percent said they were unaware of the new requirements. University system Vice President Lloyd Hackley said some parents and students might have dismissed the possibility of college early on and simply discarded the information. Many of the state's 16 schools already have admission requirements similar to the 1990 systemwide standards.

Democrats Cite GOP 'Cronyism'

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin is filling state government positions with ill-qualified Republicans, violating a campaign pledge to operate his administration like a business, Democratic legislators say. But Martin says the shortcomings of which Democrats accuse him are minor in comparison with those of previous administrations, and that he has not fired Democrats to make room for his appointees. "I have not demanded that state employees change their voter registration," Martin said Wednesday. "We have not allowed anybody to coerce them to make campaign contributions. That contrasts very favorably with what the previous administration did while those defenders of state employees were looking the other way."

More Students Drop Out Of Southern High Schools

RALEIGH (AP) — More students are dropping out of high school in the South than there are freshmen entering all public two-year and four-year colleges and universities in the region, according to a report by the Southern Regional Education Board.

"We have poured millions of dollars into programs in an effort to stem this tide, and it's like swimming upstream," said Bob Scott, head of North Carolina's community college system. "We don't seem to be making much progress."

High school students are dropping out of Southern schools at a rate of 2,200 a day, and the region could see 4 million children become "education casualties" by 1999 unless the pattern changes, the education board says.

A report by the Atlanta-based research agency found that 400,000 students dropped out of school in the 1985-86 school year. In two-thirds of the 15 Southern states, including North Carolina, the percentage of students quitting school between their freshman and senior years topped the national average of 29.4 percent.

The report showed that 27,700 students dropped out of North Carolina's schools in the 1985-86 school year for a dropout rate of 27.7 percent, the sixth lowest dropout rate in the South.

The dropout problem is "terribly frustrating," said Scott, who was a member of the commission that prepared the report.

The South's dropout rate in the 1985-86 school year, the latest for which figures are available, ranged from 22.3 percent in Maryland to 45.3 percent in Louisiana. The dropout rates for black and Hispanic students are higher, in some cases double, the report said.

The regional report highlighted the scope of the problem and revealed that many Southern states have crude measures of the number of students being lost each year, said Mark D. Musick, the regional board's director of state services.

"We urge states to try to go beyond the information they get just by counting noses at grade nine and four years later," he said. "You need to know more about it than that."

Study Says New Administrative Body Needed For N.C. Colleges

By The Associated Press

The governor and the Legislature currently are the only agencies that have purview over North Carolina's education beyond high school, and that lack of centralized planning has hurt the state's 47 colleges and universities, a new study concludes.

"In spite of its overall responsibilities, the (University of North Carolina) Board of Governors is not regarded as an even-handed advocate for all of postsecondary education in North Carolina," says the report, released Wednesday by the Third Century Project.

The state's colleges need a new administrative body with powers greater than the UNC Board of Governors, the report says, calling for a neutral voice to speak for all higher educational interests, including public and private institutions.

Resolving the sensitive issues within higher education requires "a neutral, comprehensive point of view," the report says. "The governor and the General Assembly need an informed and objective body that has the duty of making recommendations dealing with all sectors of the system."

A spokeswoman for UNC President C.D. Spangler Jr. said Spangler had not seen the report and would not comment.

Although he has not read the report, Philip Carson, chairman of the Board of Governors, said he sees no need for another higher education agency in the state.

"If you start talking about another board, you're just layering it on top of another board," Carson said.

But John Henley, president of the North Carolina Association of Independent Colleges and Universities, likes the idea.

"I've said all along we needed a coordinating board that represents all sectors of higher education," Henley said. "Before the Board of Governors you had the State Board of Higher Education that coordinated all three."

"I think we need someone to look at the total picture, to at least present the total picture to the General Assembly and the governor and the people of the state."

The report makes suggestions as opposed to hard and fast recommendations, including:

—Expanding the statewide planning and coordinating powers of the Board of Governors to include all of postsecondary education in the state.

—The governor and the Legislature might give the board more power to oversee independent institutions.

—Lessening state controls on the UNC system schools, such as allowing each to set its own tuition.

—Significantly increasing the amount of need-based financial aid awarded by the state.

The report says that the state's most serious higher education problem is its underuse.

"It's greatest challenge is to focus on the waste of human potential ... rather than to be concerned solely with institutions as they presently are," the report says.

It adds that not enough North Carolinians are going to college, wasting tremendous amounts of space.

The 47 institutions of higher education in the state could accommodate up to 17,700 more full-time equivalent students than are currently enrolled.

The report also says that North Carolina colleges are not as seriously threatened by the change in demographics that schools in so many states are fretting about. From 1985 to 2005, the number of 18-year-olds in North Carolina is expected to decline only 3.2 percent.

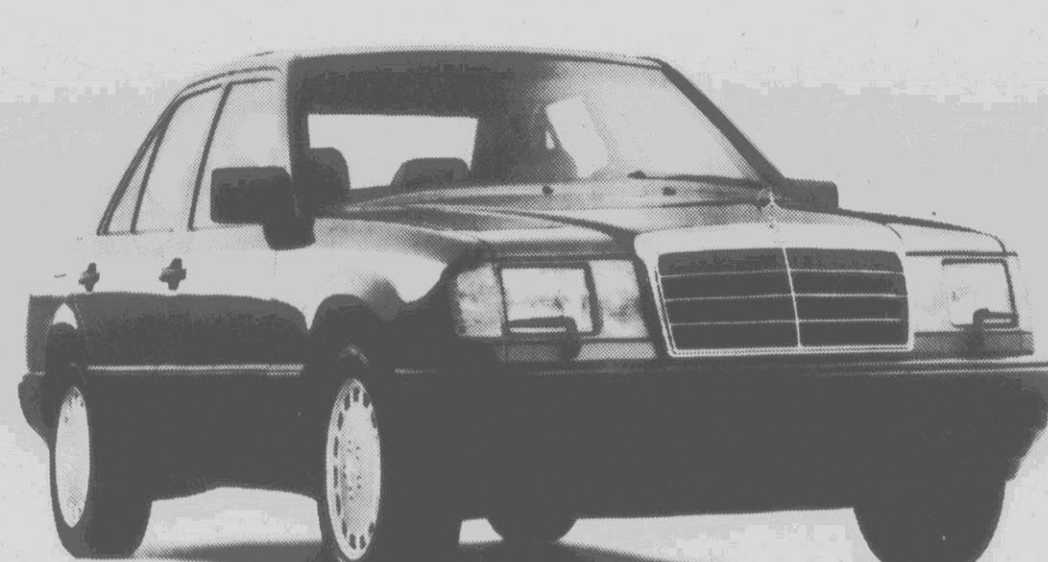

"If every college kept its share of that market, managing such a small decline over so many years would not represent a serious challenge."

But the number and percent of North Carolinians who graduate from high school is less encouraging, the report says.

By 1994, according to state figures, there will be 12.3 percent fewer high school graduates than in 1985.

RALEIGH (AP) — The State Bureau of Investigation is reviewing an audit that uncovered illegal Christmas bonuses to state employees at a Buncombe County prison alternatives program, but will leave it to state prosecutors to decide whether to pursue indictments.

Boat Accident

WANCHESE, N.C. (AP) — An abandoned 24-foot boat slammed into the bridge linking Roanoke Island to the Outer Banks, setting the span on fire and causing officials to close it for more than three hours Wednesday.

The Washington Baum bridge caught fire around 4:30 p.m., said Dare County Sheriff's Department Sgt. Almey Gray. No one was injured, Gray said.

Bridge attendant Ken Payne said he saw the boat on fire just south of the bridge near the Roanoke Island side and watched three people jump overboard. Payne said the burning boat apparently set fire to the hot tar on the pilings and the bridge began to burn.

Cape Hatteras Coast Guard spokesman Fred Popplewell said the three people in the water were picked up by another vessel and were not injured.

Liquor Dispute

RALEIGH (AP) — Rep. James Hughes, R-Avery, the subject of an Ethics Committee probe into his role in a referendum bill on liquor sales, has written a letter to fellow Republicans defending his actions.

In the letter to 45 other House and Senate Republicans, Hughes denies charges by Sugar Mountain officials that he tried to extract favors from them in return for the ABC bill, which died in a House committee.

He also denied mentioning a tax on ski lift tickets to the owner of Sugar Mountain Resort, B. Dale Stancil, when Stancil didn't offer Hughes an agreeable lease for property where a package store would be located.

"Due to some newspaper articles that were run the week of June 15th, several misstatements have been made concerning an ABC bill for Sugar Mountain in Avery County, North Carolina," Hughes wrote. "I am enclosing for you a true statement concerning House Bill 653."

"I hope my actions haven't brought any shame or disrepute on the General Assembly or the Republican Party. If you have any questions concerning this, I will be most happy to answer them."

Stolen Donations

GREENSBORO (AP) — Thieves have stolen more than $100 from two restaurants which had been collecting donations to help with the medical expenses for a 7-year-old boy who was burned over 82 percent of his body in a 1985 apartment fire.

"You wouldn't suspect customers of stealing from a little boy," said Jo Anne Harris, the manager of a Greensboro Shoney's Restaurant. "Matthew needs the money more than any one I have seen walk through my door."

So far, Shoney's restaurants and some area Captain D's restaurants have collected more than $32,000 for the Matthew Peterson Fund, said Cathy Wilkinson, director of advertising and marketing for Shoney's in North Carolina and South Carolina. Part has been used to pay medical expenses not covered by the government's Children's Special Health Services fund.

As of last August, medical bills had totaled $1.2 million, most covered by the Children's Fund.

Man Reburied

HILLSBOROUGH, N.C. (AP) — Oscar Harris was reburied Wednesday after someone removed a 400-pound cover from his burial vault, pried open the casket and removed his body.

"It upset us," said Harris' nephew, Henry Whitted, 67, of Cedar Grove. "He had been in there 11 years, and somebody came in there and pulled him out."

The body was found last week on the ground next to the underground vault on the grounds of an abandoned church cemetery about 12 miles northeast of Hillsborough. The vault cover had been put back in place.

"I'm at a standstill," said Alexander "Skip" Wade, an investigator with the Orange County Sheriff's Department. "I don't have any motive. The family members I talked to don't have any motive. I'm just trying to figure out what type of person would do that."

Man Stabbed

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A 19-year-old man looking for his wife and child in an in-law's home has been charged in the stabbing death of his wife's 94-year-old grandfather.

Albert Eugene Barrett of Charlotte was being held without bond in the Mecklenburg County Jail. He is separated from his wife, Joan.

Police say the home shared by Joan Barrett's mother, Alice Johnson, and grandfather, John Lee McLaughlin, was entered through a bedroom window about 5:30 a.m. Tuesday.

There was a struggle inside the home and McLaughlin was stabbed several times. He died in the bedroom, police said.

Joan Barrett and her son were not in the house.

New Trial

RALEIGH (AP) — The North Carolina Supreme Court has ordered a new trial for a Lexington man convicted of raping and killing a 69-year-old woman.

The court ordered a new trial for Randy Joe Payne, 30, of Lexington, who was sentenced to death for murder and given a life sentence on a conviction of first-degree rape in a November 1983 attack on Kathleen Weaver.

The justices ruled that Davidson County Superior Court Judge John B. Lewis prejudiced Payne's 1985 trial by announcing he would instruct the jury in a private room.

Stolen Cannon

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — A replica of a Revolutionary War-era cannon was stolen recently from Moores Creek National Battlefield in Pender County, and authorities said Wednesday they are investigating the theft.

The cannon, a replica of the type of gun that Patriot forces may have used at the Battle of Moores Creek in 1776, sat on a carriage overlooking the battle site. It was stolen June 21.

The replica is valued at less than $1,000. The original cannon was stolen from the battlefield in the 1960s.

Grand Jury Investigation Will Focus On Bakker, Other Ex-PTL Leaders

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A grand jury that will investigate possible criminal tax fraud at PTL will target Jim Bakker and former executives and not the ministry, The Charlotte Observer reported today.

Sources familiar with details of the investigation said subpoenas are expected to be delivered within two weeks to as many as 10 executives who worked under Bakker, according to the newspaper.

Bakker founded the television ministry and Christian theme park in Fort Mill, S.C. He resigned as president and chairman in March and handed the ministry over to the Rev. Jerry Falwell after admitting he had a sexual encounter with former church secretary Jessica Hahn in 1980 and that PTL agreed to pay $265,000 to silence her.

After an audit in 1985, the Internal Revenue Service proposed lifting the ministry's tax-exempt status for 1980-83, saying the status was used for the personal benefit of Bakker and other PTL officials.

A Justice Department source told The Associated Press last week that the revocation of PTL's tax exempt status was a recommendation the department was considering bringing to the grand jury.

"We are grateful for the Justice Department's decision to pursue individuals in the previous administration and not the organization," said Jerry Nims, PTL's new chief executive officer.

Falwell has said the tax-exempt status is critical to the ministry's survival.

"Ninety-nine percent of the people associated with Heritage Village obeyed the law. It appears that 1 percent manipulated events for their own personal benefit against the best interest of the organization," Nims said.

Heritage Village Church, Inc., is the corporate name of the ministry.

Nims confirmed that PTL had been notified that a grand jury would convene.

PTL, which stands for Praise The Lord or People That Love, is $72 million in debt, filed June 12 for reorganization under Chapter 11 of federal bankruptcy law.

The IRS audit of PTL records in 1985 also concluded that Bakker was paid too much and that a substantial portion of PTL's net earnings was used to benefit Bakker and other private individuals.

Federal tax law allows tax-exempt charities to pay only reasonable compensation and to operate only for charitable purposes. Bakker and his wife, Tammy Faye, received $4.8 million from PTL over the last four years.

Bakker could not be reached Wednesday or today for comment. James Toms of Asheville, an attorney for Bakker, declined comment Wednesday, saying he was unaware of the investigation.

Toll Drops In Blast

HERBORN, West Germany (AP)

— Four women were killed after a truck carrying gasoline slammed into an ice cream parlor, but dozens of other patrons escaped moments before explosions turned the building into an inferno, authorities said.

Town spokesman Gerhard Boekel said the accident injured 34 people.

Rescuers originally feared that at least 30 people were killed in Tuesday evening's fiery crash, which devastated the downtown area of Herborn, a town of 21,600 residents 35 miles northwest of Frankfurt.

But fears of the higher death toll subsided as up to 50 people originally reported missing were accounted for. Wednesday evening, police put the official death count at four.

The last person on the missing list, a 19-year-old man, called his mother at her home near Herborn Wednesday evening.

Police hoped to interview the truck driver today. The 48-year-old driver, who is hospitalized, told police his brakes failed.

Study Indicates Universe About 11 Billion Years Old

By MALCOLM RITTER
AP Science Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A study of light from the sun and 20 other stars gives new evidence that the universe may be only about 11 billion years old, a scientist reported today.

Harvey Butcher, astronomy professor at the University of Groningen in The Netherlands, based his conclusion on what the starlight revealed about the abundances of two elements in the stars.

His work clashes with calculations by some scientists that the oldest known stars in the galaxy are 16 billion to 18 billion years old. But it falls within the range of current estimates for the age of the universe, which extend from about 10 billion years to 20 billion years.

The work, which focused on stars in the Milky Way galaxy, is described in the British journal Nature.

The abundances of neodymium and radioactive thorium-232 in the stars can be used as a kind of cosmic clock to tell when the elements formed, Butcher said in an interview.

The thorium has a half-life of 14 billion years, which means half of any amount of it disintegrates in that time. Neodymium does not disintegrate. So if batches of thorium-232 and neodymium are made simultaneously, the ratio of thorium-232 to neodymium will decline over time.

When stars form, they capture a sample of the elements present in the universe at the time. Those elements were produced by previous stars and ejected into the cosmos, in a process thought to have begun at the birth of the galaxy some 1 billion years after the universe appeared.

Butcher theorized that old stars would have lower ratios of thorium-232 to neodymium because their thorium would have had a long time to decay. Newer stars would have higher ratios because they would have captured newer thorium, which would have less time to decay.

But when he analyzed the stars, ranging in estimated age from less than 1 billion years to around 16 billion years, Butcher found that age made no difference in the ratios.

Apparently the oldest thorium has not had time to decay enough to make a significant difference, said Butcher, who said that implies that the oldest elements are no older than about 10 billion years. That would make the age of the universe 11 billion to 12 billion years, he said.

He said another possible explanation of his data is that manufacture of the elements virtually stopped after the birth of the galaxy. But in that case, studies of radioactive elements in meteorites also suggest a maximum age for elements of about 10 billion years, Butcher said.

Delta Jumbo Jet Veers Off Course

HOUSTON (AP) — A Delta jumbo jet with equipment trouble veered 60 miles off course and passed under a Continental airliner over the Atlantic close enough for passengers above to read the plane's markings, airline officials say.

"We do have information that there was a near miss," said Delta spokesman Bill Berry in Atlanta. "Our crew had reported that they were having equipment trouble" that caused the airplane to drift off its track, he said.

The Continental 747's crew reported that the Delta L-1011 passed beneath it about 12:30 p.m. Wednesday, said Continental spokesman Bruce Hicks.

"It passed just beneath and was close enough for our crew and some passengers to read the name and markings on the airplane," Hicks said. "My guess is the official investigation will pin (the distance) down precisely, and I don't want to be speculating on that."

The Delta jet apparently was off course by some 60 miles, Hicks said. "I don't know if there was evasive action taken," he said.

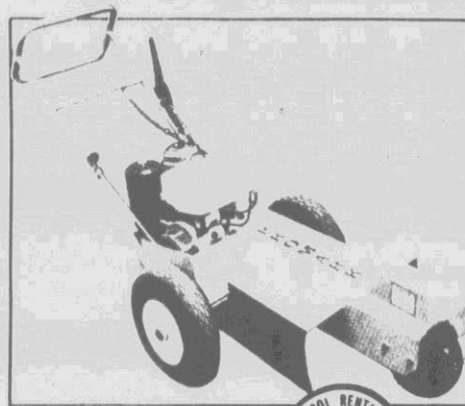

The Continental jet was flying from London Gatwick Airport to Newark, N.J., with 399 passengers and a crew of 19. The Delta flight was en route from London Gatwick to Cincinnati with 153 passengers and up to 12 crew members, Berry said.

The incident occurred at 31,000 feet near the middle of the North Atlantic in clear skies, about three hours into the seven-hour flight, Hicks said.

In Washington, Federal Aviation Administration spokesman Bob Buckhorn said he was unaware of the incident and had no comment.

Korean Police Gas Thousands As Protesters Head For Palace

By BARRY RENFREW
Associated Press Writer
SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Police bombarded tens of thousands of people with tear gas today when they tried to march on the presidential palace after a funeral procession for a student fatally wounded in a protest.

Hundreds of thousands of people marched through the heart of Seoul to honor student Lee Han-yul in what observers described as the biggest anti-government protest in the capital in many years.

The march indicated that feeling against President Chun Doo-hwan was still running strong, despite his major concessions on democratic reforms.

Later, an estimated 200,000 people gathered in the southern city of Kwangju, Lee's hometown, as the funeral motorcade traveled through the downtown area for burial in a nearby cemetery. Residents said it was the largest ever assembled in the traditional center of anti-government activity.

Government officials announced earlier today that it was restoring the civil rights of 2,335 government opponents, including top opposition leader Kim Dae-jung, as part of the reforms Chun accepted to end widespread anti-government protests last month.

Tens of thousands of people marched 2 miles from Yonsei University to Seoul City Hall with Lee's coffin, covered with white and yellow flowers. Students riding on the truck with the body led the fist-waving crowds in chants of "Down with the military dictatorship!"

Korean press estimates of the crowd ranged from 400,000 to 1 million, although police said 100,000 took part. Observers said the turnout appeared larger than the nation's biggest previous protests, which led to the overthrow of President Syngman Rhee in 1960.

A huge column of marchers broke away from the protest at City Hall and headed for the presidential palace, where the demonstrators tried to break through lines of riot police. Black armored police cars opened fire with multiple tear gas launchers, enveloping the area in white clouds of stinging, choking gas. The crowd fled in panic.

Martial arts squads hurling tear gas grenades chased people through back streets, seizing scores and dragging them away. A few students hurled rocks at the police.

Officers were seen beating and kicking suspects. Police had stayed away from the funeral procession until the marchers headed toward the palace.

At one point, plainclothes police charged into the grounds of the Anglican Cathedral in downtown Seoul, pursuing demonstrators. One tear gas grenade exploded on the cathedral roof.

Demonstrators looted a police substation near the cathedral and burned police helmets, uniforms and gas masks in the street.

Associated Press Correspondent Paul Shin reported from Kwangju, 165 miles south of Seoul, that Lee's funeral motorcade reached there late this afternoon for a procession through the city to be followed by a burial ceremony at a cemetery on the city's outskirts.

Kwangju is the site of a bloody uprising in May 1980 in which scores of people were killed.

The crowd was so dense that it held up the procession for hours. A 10-minute service was held in front of the provincial capital building before the motorcade finally moved slowly along. No outbreaks of violence were reported.

Today's demonstration in Seoul was the first large one in the capital since Chun announced on July 1 his agreement to direct presidential elections and other reforms to halt nearly three weeks of daily, often violent nationwide protests.

Gen. George Washington issued his farewell address to the army Nov. 2, 1783, near Princeton, N.J.

Protest had been building since Chun announced in April that he was suspending talks on constitutional reform and maintaining the electoral college for elections later this year. Critics said the college would ensure victory for Roh Tae-woo, a Chun ally and fellow former general. Chun has promised to step down in February.

Today's main procession in Seoul was headed by students who carried a forest of 20-foot-high red, white, green and yellow banners. Opposition leaders Kim Dae-jung and Kim Young-sam were among the marchers.

"Democratic government now" and "Avenge Lee Han-yul" the marchers shouted, as crowds of onlookers cheered.

Lee died Sunday from wounds he received June 9 when hit in the head by a tear gas canister during a clash with riot police.

Business workers in suits and dressers poured out of their offices to watch and many joined in the anti-government chants.

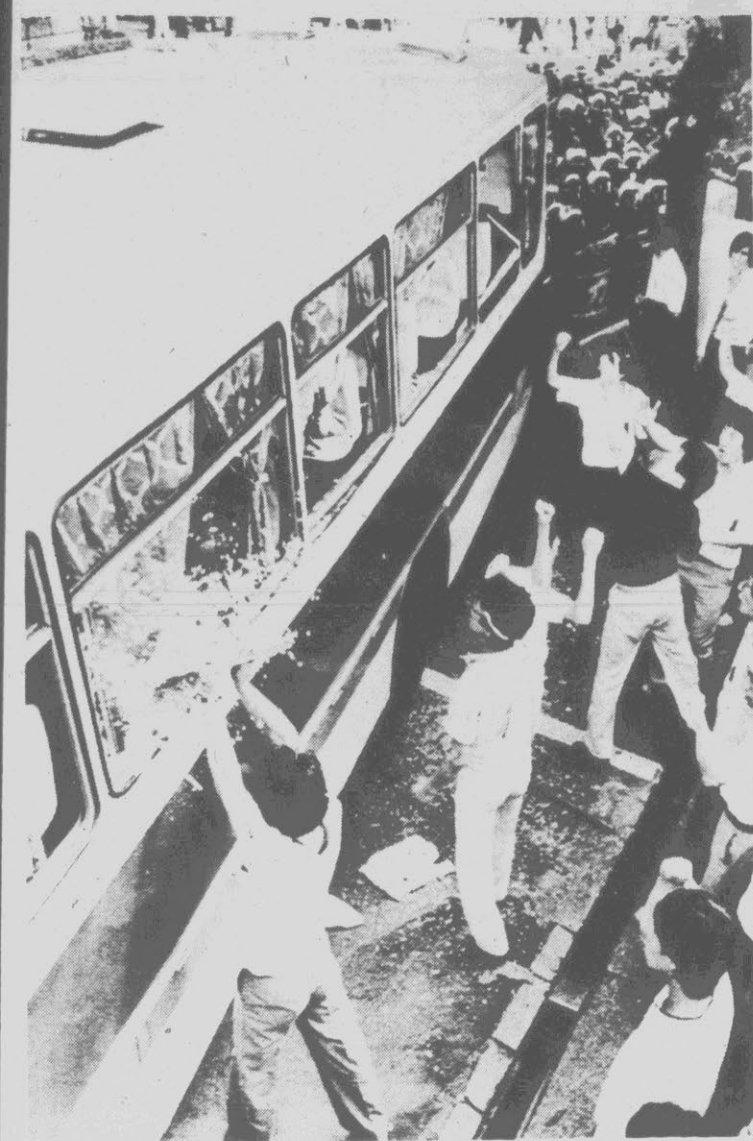

Before the march, a memorial service was held at Yonsei, where Lee had been a student. Lee's mother, Pae Eun-shim, grabbed the microphone during the ceremony and demanded revenge for her son.

"Down, down with the murderers. Your friends and many others are here to take revenge," she shrieked before swooning.

Government spokesman Lee Woong-hee, who announced the government amnesty today restoring the civil rights of government opponents, said the action was intended to promote national reconciliation.

"This clemency covers virtually all those convicted in connection with public security violations and anti-state activities," Lee said.

Chun agreed this month to release political prisoners and restore the rights of people who had lost them for anti-government activities. Loss of civil rights prevents people from legally taking part in politics.

Flash Flood Washes Train Into River, Kills 30 Riders

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — A flash flood washed two cars of a trans-India express train into a rain-swollen river today, killing dozens of sleeping passengers. Railroad authorities said 38 bodies were recovered.

It was not immediately known how many passengers were aboard the cars or how many were missing.

The United News of India quoted P.S. Rammohan Rao, police chief of Andhra Pradesh state, as saying the 38 bodies had been recovered from one car. The number of dead in the other car was not immediately known, UNI said.

The New Delhi-bound Dakshin Express, or South Express, was traveling through the southern Indian state of Andhra Pradesh when the floods derailed 14 of its 18 cars, the government's All-India Radio reported.

The rushing waters swept two cars into the River Gangaeragadi. The accident happened on a bridge at Kazipet, 90 miles northwest of Hyderabad, the state capital, the radio said.

Railroad authorities suspended train service in the region after the accident occurred at about 5 a.m., the broadcast said.

Indian Railway Minister Madhavarao Scindia and rescue teams rushed to the scene. The United News of India said cranes were being sent to lift the two cars from the river.

On March 15, a bomb exploded on a railroad bridge about 150 miles south of Madras. Twenty-four people were killed when the train's engine and eight cars plummeted 20 feet into a dry riverbed. Police said they suspected the bombers were Tamil militants.

On Aug. 6, 1986, a train hit several abandoned freight wagons on a bridge in eastern India, sending five cars into a rain-swollen river. Fifty-two people were killed.

Panel Blames Soviet Crew In Plane Crash

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — An international panel including a former U.S. astronaut today blamed negligence by Soviet crewmen for the airplane crash that killed Mozambican President Samora Machel and 34 others.

The commission's report released here said the Oct. 19 crash just inside the South African border resulted from the flight crew's lack of regard for proper procedure when flying by instruments in poor visibility.

The government of Marxist-ruled Mozambique, Soviet aviation officials and leaders of neighboring nations have alleged that the crash was engineered by South Africa. They have charged that the South African government in effect assassinated Machel by luring the plane off course with a false radio beacon.

South Africa has denied the charge.

The findings reported today were the result of a joint technical investigation by South Africans, Mozambicans and Soviets. The conclusions were drawn by an international board of inquiry that held hearings in Johannesburg in January.

The Soviet Union and Mozambique, one of the Kremlin's main African allies, refused to participate in the hearings.

The commission, headed by South African Supreme Court Justice Cecil Margo, was made up of former U.S. astronaut Frank Borman; Sir Edward Everleigh, a British justice of appeal; Britain's retired chief inspector of air accidents, Geoffrey Wilkinson; and three South African aviation experts.

The Mozambicans and the Soviets contested the legitimacy of the inquiry board and objected to the investigation being held in South Africa.

The South Africans said they were following established international aviation procedure, which calls for the inquiry to be held in the country where the crash took place. They said the report would be handed over to an international aviation body.

Machel, who led Mozambique to independence from Portugal in 1975, was succeeded by Joaquim Chissano.

The report's principal finding was "that the flight crew failed to follow procedural requirements for an instrument let-down approach, but continued to descend under visual flight rules in darkness and some cloud; that is, without having visual contact with the ground below minimum safe altitude and minimum assigned altitude and in addition ignored the ground-proximity warning system alarm."

SUPPORT FOR KITTY — Massachusetts Governor Michael S. Dukakis, right, gives a supportive smile to his wife Kitty Wednesday just moments before she announced that she had suffered an addiction to amphetamines for many years until she received treatment five years ago. (AP Laserphoto)

Governor's Wife Tells Of Past Drug Dependency

By DUNCAN MANSFIELD
Associated Press Writer
BOSTON (AP) — Gov. Michael S. Dukakis says his wife's disclosure of her 26-year addiction to amphetamines won't affect his campaign for the White House.
Kitty Dukakis, her husband at her side, made the disclosure during dedication ceremonies at an alcohol and drug treatment center in Norfolk. She said she broke the habit in 1962 after entering a clinic in Minnesota.
"I am telling my story because I want to help others," she said.
The governor did not speak at the dedication but said later that the disclosure was his wife's decision and that his decision to seek the Democratic presidential nomination had nothing to do with the timing.
"I don't think what Kitty has done today will hurt or help," he said, although he added that his wife's condition has heightened his understanding of drug abuse and his commitment to do something about it.
Dukakis, while conceding he misled the media about his wife's condition, said his wife's dependency "was not a deep dark secret" and that people close to her had known for some time.

Making it public, he said, "takes a lot of courage and a lot of strength ... and I am very proud of her."
In an interview at the Dukakis' home in the Boston suburb of Brookline, Mrs. Dukakis, 50, said her decision to disclose her addiction to diet pills beginning at age 19 had nothing to do with her husband's campaign.
"No, it had everything to do with my being strong, feeling strong and one of the tenets of recovery is helping other people," she said. "And I feel like I was ready to help others."
Mrs. Dukakis said she started taking prescription diet pills in 1956 to control her weight, and hid her drug problem from her husband for most of the time. They were married in 1963.
"Michael didn't know. I was already taking the pills when I met him (in high school). Pills are easy to hide. I hid them," she said.

"I didn't tell my husband because I knew if I did, I would have to confront my dependency. I would have to stop. And I knew I wouldn't be able to stop."
The governor said he discovered his wife's problem in 1974. She saw their family doctor for counseling and she stopped taking the pills for awhile. He said he discovered in 1982 that she was again using pills.
"It was about that time she decided herself that she just had to get rid of this dependency," he said. At the time, Dukakis was running for the governor's seat he had lost in 1978.
Mrs. Dukakis said she told people she had hepatitis to explain her absence during her 30-day stint at the Minnesota center. Dukakis and his campaign went along with the story.
"At the time, I could not handle the public scrutiny," she said. "I was embarrassed and vulnerable and afraid. I asked my husband and my children and my family not to tell anybody that I was dependent on pills."

Diagonal Design Adds Style

Pat's Pointers
Pat Trexler

Any woman — from teen-ager to grandma — will love this handy purse with its matching eyeglass case. When you find how quick and easy they are to knit, you'll want to make a set for every season of the year and more for gift-giving. It's a great way to get an early start on your '87 Christmas gifts, and the set will be a favorite at charity bazaars, too.
Worked in an easy twisted cable stitch with washable polyester craft cord, this chic bag measures 9 inches by 12 inches. It's finished off with a garter stitch flap with a button-and-loop closing and your choice of wrist or shoulder strap handle.
To obtain directions for making the Diagonal Duo, send your request for Leaflet No. Z-070587 with $2 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler Crafts, The Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 419148, Kansas City, Mo. 64141.
Or you may order Kit No. K-070587 by sending a check or money order for $12.95 to Pat Trexler Crafts at the same address. The kit price includes shipping charges, full instructions and yarn in your choice of navy, rust or off-white.
Dear Pat: I am interested in making an afghan in the knit ripple stitch you wrote about recently. The trouble is you did not state the needle size nor the number of stitches to cast on for a good-size afghan. Also, can you get all of the stitches on a straight needle, or do you need a circular one? — Jean R., Springfield, N.J.
Dear Jean: In writing that column, I was replying to a reader who specifically asked for the pattern stitch directions, which I gave along with comments on the techniques used. Giving a complete set of directions for a sizeable item such as an afghan is quite a different matter from explaining a pattern stitch.
I can, however, give you a formula for figuring out the number of stitches to cast on for this or any other straight piece of knitting — or crocheting, for that matter.
With the yarn you choose and needles of a suitable size for that yarn, make a sample swatch of the pattern stitch. For this pattern, which is to be worked on a multiple of 15 stitches, I suggested a swatch of 30 stitches.
Knit in the selected pattern stitch for several inches, slip the stitches off the needle, lay the piece flat and measure it from one side to the other. Divide the number of stitches by the width measurement and you will have your gauge, which you must know in order to cast on the correct number of stitches for your desired width.
For example, let's assume you were using knitting worsted-weight yarn and size seven needles, and your swatch of 30 stitches measured six inches in width. Dividing 30 by six equals five. You then know that your stitch gauge is five stitches per inch.
The next step is to multiply the desired finished width by the stitch gauge. Therefore, for a 60-inch afghan (60 inches multiplied by five stitches per inch), you would need 300 stitches. Since this number is equally divisible by the stitch multiple of 15, you do not need to do any more figuring. If the total number of stitches had come to a figure not evenly divisible by the stitch multiple, you would have to add or subtract stitches until it did so.

If you choose to use straight needles, you could make the afghan in separated narrow strips and sew them together. A 36-inch circular needle would probably allow you to work on all stitches at once.
When we offer instructions in a leaflet, the item is made in its entirety by at least two people before we list the amount of yarn needed. There are formulas for figuring this also, by they are too involved to give here.
Because the ripple stitch is most effective in stripes, it is possible to use odd dye lots. So you could by just two or three skeins of each of several colors and return later to buy more if necessary.
For those who may have missed the earlier column, here is a repeat of the pattern stitch directions. You must have a multiple of 15 stitches for working this pattern.
For Row 1, which is the right side of your work, knit 2 stitches together, knit 5, yarnover, knit 1, yarnover, knit 5, work a "slip, slip, knit" decrease over the next 2 stitches. Repeat these steps on each set of 15 stitches to the end of the row. All stitches are purled on Row 2. Repeat these two rows over and over to a desired length.
The "slip, slip, knit" decrease is worked as follows: slip the first two stitches — one at a time — from the left needle to the right needle, slipping them knitwise. Then, insert the left needle tip into the front of these two stitches and knit them together from this position.

Scientists Developing New 'Sticking' Pills

L.A. Times-Washington Post
Everyone has heard of food that sticks to the ribs. Now, scientists are developing pills that stick to the stomach.
The idea, says British biophysicist David Harris, is to permit the slow release of certain drugs — especially heart and blood-pressure preparations. Currently, the technology for slow release exists, but within a few hours, the pill passes into the small intestine and then into the large intestine, where absorption is less efficient.
Harris and his colleagues told Science News that they are testing a compound called Carbopol. In some cases, pills coated with Carbopol remained attached to the stomach wall for up to nine hours as they slowly broke down.
But even these sticky capsules had trouble staying in the stomach during certain parts of the digestive cycle, when the stomach vigorously tries to empty itself.
Harris says the technique, once perfected, could be used for thiazide diuretics, which are used to reduce blood pressure. Other heart medicines — commonly delivered slowly through skin patches — might also be adapted for sticky pills.

on the first floor." Clerk of Court Sandra Gaskins and Sheriff Ralph Tyson agreed.

Hite suggested that an alternative would be to assign space vacated by the tax supervisor's office to the clerk of court and locate one or more modular buildings adjacent to the courthouse for use by the sheriff's department until new facilities could be built.

After some discussion, Hite, Trial Court Administrator William Nichols and County Manager Kramer Jackson suggested that the use of modular units would give the best immediate solution to the space problems.

But motions to allocate the present tax supervisor's space to the sheriff, and to allocate the tax supervisors space to the courts and house additional sheriff's offices in modular units, both ended in tied votes.

When agreement on the alternatives couldn't be reached, Hite suggested that other offices might be moved to give the sheriff's department additional space on the second and third floors of the court house. And commissioners instructed Hite to see what could be worked out to implement that proposal.

In other business Wednesday, the board named Greenville lawyer James Nelson to the courthouse long range planning committee to replace Kenneth Hite, who resigned.

No action was taken Wednesday on another request by the Board of Elections — made at Monday's commissioners' meeting — to purchase new voting machines. Instead, the board instructed Jackson to notify the elections board that its decision on the purchase of new voting machines this fiscal year was made when the 1987-1988 budget — which doesn't include any money for new machines — was adopted in late June.

The 1987-1988 fiscal year began July 1.

"A basic and practical education is a pressing need for all persons," Shackleford said. "We must take positive steps to equip all students to face a world of work that is increasingly complex."

"We must insure that curriculum responds rapidly to the constantly changing needs of contemporary society as it is and not as we would like it to be," he said. "We must see to it that our courses of study encourage individuality rather than stifle it."

"We must also allow teachers more time to accomplish their main objective, which is teaching and not repetitive paper work," Sh

Smith Leads All-Star Balloting

NEW YORK (AP) — On a pair of power-packed All-Star lineups, the most popular player this season is the only one without a home run.

Ozzie Smith of the St. Louis Cardinals got 2,254,409 votes and was elected to start for the fifth straight year as the National League's shortstop.

"Being the guy that gets the most votes is a compliment to me," Smith said. "I'm basically known as a defensive player. I feel I'm a better offensive player than I'm known."

Smith is batting .305. He has driven in 46 runs but has not homered.

The New York Yankees dominated the American League voting as Dave Winfield, Don Mattingly, Willie Randolph and Rickey Henderson were tops in fan balloting announced Wednesday.

No other team in either league had more than two players among the starters for the 58th All-Star Game Tuesday at the Oakland Coliseum. The last team to send four elected players to the All-Star team was Montreal in 1983 (Gary Carter, Tim Lincecum, Andre Dawson and Al Oliver). The last AL team to do it was Oakland in 1975 (Joe Rudi, Reggie Jackson, Bert Campaneris and Gene Tenace).

The pitchers and reserves will be selected today by the managers and league officials.

Boston third baseman Wade Boggs, who is leading the majors with a .383 average and has already hit a career-high 15 home runs, was the top vote-getter in the AL with 1,529,819. He beat out Kansas City's George Brett, who had started the previous 11 All-Star Games. Brett got 699,970.

"I didn't really expect to make it until George (Brett) retired. I think if he was healthy, he still would have had the numbers to be in there," Boggs said.

"The fans finally know who I am because of the World Series. The masses who normally don't see me, got to see me. I just hit a quiet .360, .370 and go about my business."

Completing the starting team for the NL will be Jack Clark of St. Louis at first base, Ryne Sandberg of Chicago at second, Mike Schmidt of Philadelphia at third, Eric Davis of Cincinnati, Dawson of Chicago and Darryl Strawberry of New York in the outfield and Carter of New York at catcher.

Rounding out the AL team will be Mattingly at first base, Randolph at second, Cal Ripken of Baltimore at shortstop, George Bell of Toronto, Henderson and Winfield in the outfield and Terry Kennedy of Baltimore at catcher.

Kennedy will be the first catcher ever to start an All-Star Game for both the NL and AL. He started the 1985 Game for the NL in place of the injured Carter.

"It's sort of nice people voted me. They don't know Terry Kennedy from a hole in the head," said Kennedy, acquired in an off-season trade from San Diego. "It's nice to be recognized for what you're doing."

For the first time in six years, Atlanta's Dale Murphy was not selected. San Diego's Tony Gwynn, leading the NL with a .374 average, was not picked for the first time in four years.

Sandberg, out with an ankle injury, might not be able to play.

"I've still got five days to work out," Sandberg said. "I think that I'd like to go to the game and play somehow, whether it's pinch-hitting" or even just playing one inning."

Both teams have plenty of power, especially in the outfield.

Bell has hit 28 home runs and driven in 73 runs. Winfield has 19 homers and 67 RBI. Henderson, one of the best leadoff batters in history, has been slowed by injuries much of the season but still has 11 home runs. This is the third straight season Winfield and Henderson will start.

Davis leads the NL with 26 homers, and he has 66 RBI. Dawson has 24 homers and 74 RBI and Strawberry has 21 home runs and 49 RBI. Strawberry will be starting for the fourth time in four full seasons, an NL record.

"It's a big honor. It just shows there are people out there who do care," Strawberry said. "I'm just honored about the whole situation. No matter what happens, my being criticized, the people believe in me."

Clark tops the majors with 82 RBI, and has 25 home runs for the Cardinals, who lead the NL East by nine games. He has played in three All-Star Games, but this will be his first as a starter.

"It is (an honor), but we've got games ahead to play before the All-Star break. You can be voted in if the team that you're on is in last place," Clark said. "To put it in perspective,

I don't want to sit back and be satisfied. I want to keep doing more."

Mattingly will be making his first All-Star start. He is batting .326 with 10 homers and 52 RBI despite missing two weeks on the disabled list.

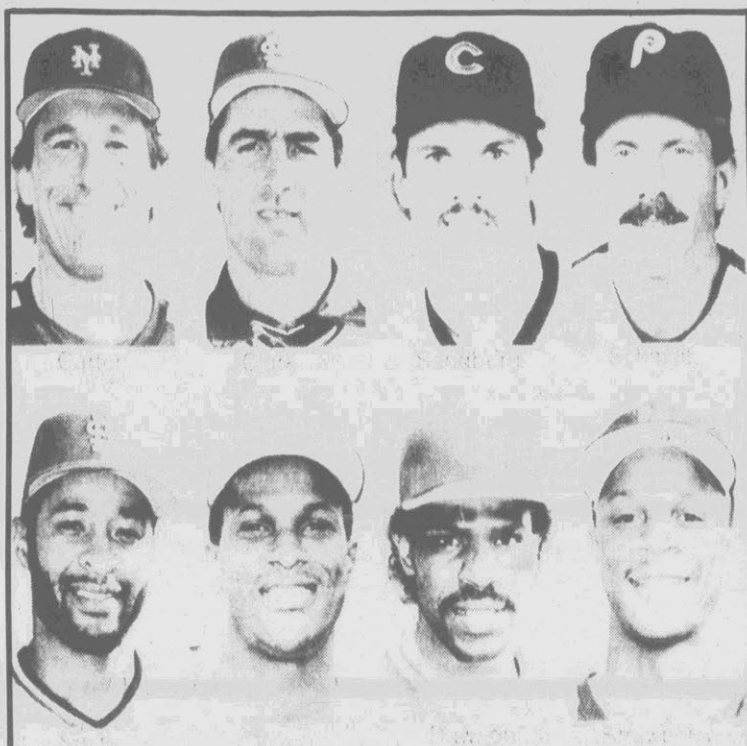

"It's a widespread recognition," Mattingly said. "It's not just the New York area fans that appreciate me now. It's also a great honor to be at the top with all the talent and class at the position these days."

Schmidt, who hit his 500th career home run earlier this season, was elected to start for the eighth straight year. He has 17 homers and 51 RBI.

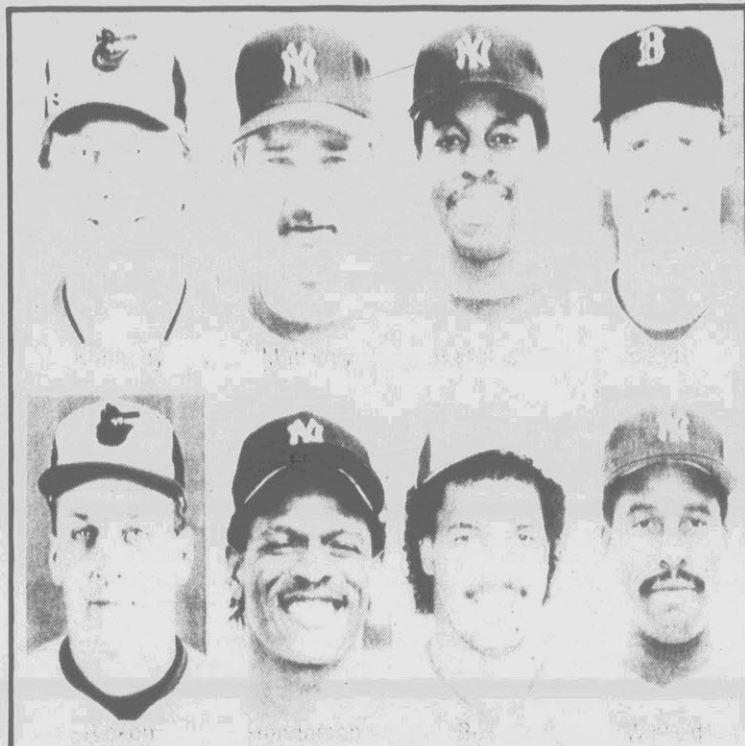

Oakland rookie Mark McGwire, who leads the majors with 31 home runs, led all write-in candidates with 95,498. Raines led the NL with 86,571 write-in votes. Raines started the season as a free agent and re-signed with Montreal on May 1.

A total of 5,572,493 votes were cast this year, which exceeded last year's total of 5,414,304. The total was the highest since 1984.

Indians 'Fight' Past Kansas City

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

The Cleveland Indians are literally trying to fight their way out of the cellar in the American League East.

The Indians completed a three-game sweep of Kansas City on Wednesday night in Cleveland. In each of the games, Cleveland rallied to win. In each of the games, a pitcher from one of the teams was accused of throwing at a batter. And in the last two games, there were fights.

Wednesday night, Cory Snyder hit a home run and drove in two runs with a ninth-inning double to give the Indians a 9-8 victory. That left Cleveland with a 30-53 record, 2½ games back of Baltimore.

Elsewhere, New York beat Minnesota 13-4, Detroit beat Oakland 9-5, Baltimore beat Chicago 6-5 in 10 innings, Toronto beat Texas 5-2, California beat Boston 5-3 and Seattle beat Milwaukee 5-2 in 11 innings.

The Royals-Indians game was held up for 16 minutes in the bottom of the first inning when Kansas City left-hander Danny Jackson threw his first pitch behind Brett Butler, then put the next one over his head. Butler charged the mound, and both benches cleared.

"If they want to pull that stuff, it'll cost them the game," Indians Manager Pat Corrales said.

Jackson and Butler were ejected. Cleveland played the game under protest because Royals Manager Billy Gardner was not ejected.

"We were brushing him back on the first pitch," Gardner said, "but the second ball was a breaking ball that just got away from Danny. He wasn't going to throw at Butler after we got a warning."

Willie Wilson of the Royals tackled Cleveland pitcher Ken Schrom on Tuesday night, one pitch after he was knocked down by a high inside pitch. The Royals claimed Monday night that Cleveland reliever Sammy Stewart twice threw at Kansas City hitters.

The Royals' George Brett accused Stewart of creating the problems.

"Sammy Stewart started the whole thing by throwing at Frank White. What did Frank White do to Sammy Stewart? He followed a guy that hit a home run," Brett said.

"There's always been good feelings between these two clubs, and we have a lot of respect for the guys on the Cleveland Indians," Brett said. "Then they have a new guy (Stewart) come to the Cleveland Indians, and it creates bad blood between the two organizations."

Steve Balboni hit a three-run homer to snap a seventh-inning tie, and Jim Eisenreich drove in four runs with a homer and a single as the Royals built their 8-7 lead.

Yankees 13, Twins 4

Don Mattingly had two homers and Rickey Henderson had four hits to lead New York's 16-hit attack against five Minnesota pitchers. Mattingly hit a three-run homer in the first inning and led off the sixth with his 10th homer of the season. Mike Pagliarulo and Mark Salas also homered for New York.

Rick Rhoden, 11-5, pitched the first five innings. He allowed six hits and all four Twins runs, then Pat Clements pitched four scoreless innings for his fourth save.

Salas hit a three-run pinch homer in the fifth, and Pagliarulo's two-run homer keyed New York's six-run sixth.

Tigers 9, Athletics 5

Detroit led 7-0 after four innings, and Darrell Evans homered in the sixth and ninth innings to lead Detroit past the Athletics, who made three errors. Mark McGwire hit his 31st homer of the season for Oakland.

Rookie Jeff Robinson, 6-4, pitched the first 7 2-3 innings for Detroit, allowing seven hits and striking out six, including Reggie Jackson three times. Mark Thurmond pitched 1 1-3 innings for his fifth save.

The Tigers got out to their early lead against Oakland starter Steve Ontiveros, who had been a reliever until this year. Ontiveros is 5-3.

Orioles 6, White Sox 5

Eddie Murray homered with two out in the 10th inning to give the Orioles their first series victory since May 28 and only their seventh triumph in 38 games. The homer was Murray's 18th.

Murray hit a 3-0 pitch from reliever Jim Winn, who entered the game in the seventh inning and gave up a single to Ken Gerhart on his first pitching, tying the 5-5.

Mike Boddicker, 6-4, allowed 11 hits but snapped a personal three-game losing streak.

Carlton Fisk homered in the sixth, helping Chicago take a 5-2 lead. The homer was Fisk's 10th and gave him 11 hits in his last 22 at-bats with 10 RBI over five games.

Blue Jays 5, Rangers 2

Toronto scored twice in the seventh inning on a bases-loaded walk and Tony Fernandez's groundout to erase a 2-1 Texas lead, then added two runs in the eighth. The Blue Jays had only four hits in the game and just two off Bobby Witt going into the seventh.

Witt hit a batter, then walked two more with one out before Jeff Russell relieved. Russell walked Garth Iorg on four pitches to force in the tying run, then Fernandez hit his game-winning groundout.

Curtis Wilkerson and Ruben Sierra hit solo homers for Texas.

Jeff Musselman, 7-2, got the victory with 2 1-3 innings of one-hit relief, and Tom Henke got the final out for his 16th save and third in the series sweep.

Angels 5, Red Sox 3

The Angels swept the Red Sox for the first time since 1974, handing Boston its fifth straight loss. Mark McLemore doubled home two runs in California's three-run second inning.

The Angels won for the 14th time in 17 games.

Willie Fraser worked 5 1-3 innings and got relief help from Donnie Moore and DeWayne Buice, who went the final two innings for his ninth save.

Dwight Evans and Wade Boggs homered for Boston.

Mariners 5, Brewers 2

Mike Moore and Bill Wilkinson combined to three-hit Milwaukee, and Rey Quinones hit a three-run homer in the 11th inning to give Seattle its victory over the Brewers.

Quinones' home run, his ninth of the season, followed singles by Mickey Brantley and John Cristensen.

Moore allowed three hits over nine innings, and Wilkinson struck out five of the six batters he faced. Ted Higuera allowed six hits over nine innings, and the Mariners scored their winning runs off reliever Dan Plesac, who hadn't allowed a run in his previous 11 outings.

The second game will then be played Friday night in Kinston, with a third, if needed, back in Greenville on Saturday.

No Sorrow For Bias

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Indiana Coach Bob Knight told a group of high school basketball players he has no sympathy for Len Bias, the former Maryland star who died of cocaine poisoning last year shortly after he was drafted by the Boston Celtics.

Knight made his remarks Tuesday to 365 players at the Five-Star Basketball Camp, which annually attracts some of the nation's top high school players to Robert Morris College.

"In the last 10 years, the two best college basketball players I've seen are Bias and Michael Jordan," Knight said. "But I don't feel sorry for Len Bias. Len Bias had his own mind and his own body to take care of, and he didn't do it. If some of you are popping pills or smoking dope, those are bad shots you are taking."

"Len Bias was better than anybody in this room ... but he's dead. He's not sick, he's not hurt, he's dead."

"He just wasn't strong enough to take care of himself. He wanted to be one of the boys. He wanted to be cool. Well, he was so cool, he's cold. He's cold as heck."

Cardinals Sweep Doubleheaders

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

Maybe the St. Louis Cardinals should play a whole bunch of doubleheaders next season, preferably all in a row.

The Cardinals continued to make the most of a scheduling predicament Wednesday and swept a doubleheader from the Los Angeles Dodgers for the second straight evening. Rainouts had created the doubleheaders at Busch Stadium.

The sweeps extended the Cardinals' longest winning streak of the season to seven in a row and gave them a nine-game lead in the National League East.

Terry Pendleton drove in four runs, including an RBI single in the 10th inning, as St. Louis won the second game 8-7. Jack Clark's three-run homer highlighted a 6-3 triumph in the opener.

"It doesn't matter how many times you get hits. It's run production, that's the bottom line," Pendleton said. "That's going to keep the ballclub winning ballgames. I look at the 'r' (for runs) and not the 'h' (for hits)."

In other games, Montreal edged Houston 1-0, Philadelphia beat Cincinnati 7-2, San Francisco defeated Pittsburgh 8-4 in 14 innings, Atlanta downed New York 5-3 and Chicago rallied past San Diego 12-8.

Pendleton, who hit a three-run double earlier in the game, singled home the winning run with one out. Jose Oquendo opened the 10th with a single off Orel Hershisser, 10-8, and Ozzie Smith's one-out single moved Oquendo to third. A walk to Vince Coleman loaded the bases and Pendleton singled under the glove of first baseman Mickey Hatcher.

Pat Perry, 3-1, pitched two innings for the victory.

The Dodgers trailed 7-2 before Alex Trevino and Mariano Duncan hit a solo homers in the sixth. A two-run single by Mike Scioscia and Dave Anderson's RBI single made it 7-7 in the seventh.

"We came back. We battled," Los Angeles Manager Tommy Lasorda said. "Maybe that will carry over. We got a lot of hits. That's something we hadn't been doing."

In the opener, Clark hit a three-run homer in the fifth inning and Willie McGee followed with a homer off Fernando Valenzuela, 7-7. Clark leads the majors with 82 RBI and has 25 home runs.

Bob Forsch, 8-3, scattered four hits before Mike Marshall and Hatcher homered in the seventh. Pedro Guerrero hit his 17th homer in the eighth against Todd Worrell.

Expos 1, Astros 0

Floyd Youmans pitched his second career one-hitter, holding Houston hitless until Kevin Bass' hard single leading off the eighth inning, as Montreal won in the Astrodome.

Youmans, 6-3, retired the first 15 batters and won his fifth straight decision. He struck out three, walked two and outdueled Nolan Ryan in his second start since coming off the disabled list because of a strained back muscle.

Bass hit a line drive off the top of the right field wall, but was held to a single because the ball was hit so hard. Youmans did not allow a runner until Alan Ashby walked leading off the sixth. Youmans' other one-hitter came June 8, 1986, against Philadelphia.

Ryan, 4-10, lost his fifth straight decision. He gave up four hits in seven innings and struck out nine.

The Expos scored in the first inning. Tim Raines got an infield single with two out, stole second and came home on Tim Wallach's single.

Phillies 7, Reds 2

Glenn Wilson hit a two-run homer as Philadelphia completed a three-game sweep at Riverfront Stadium for the first time since 1984.

The Phillies scored 26 runs on 43 hits with six homers in three days against Cincinnati.

Wilson's 12th homer broke a 1-1 tie in the fourth inning against Guy Hofman, 7-3. Von Hayes had three hits, including an RBI single during a four-run fifth.

Bruce Ruffin, 6-6, gave up eight hits in his first complete game. Eric Davis hit his NL-leading 26th home run and Nick Esasky also homered for the Reds.

Giants 8, Pirates 4

Bob Melvin singled home the tiebreaking run in the 14th inning and Chili Davis followed with a three-run homer as San Francisco won in Pittsburgh.

Singles by Joel Youngblood, Jose Uribe and Melvin off rookie Brett Gideon, 1-1, made it 5-4 in the 14th. Davis, released earlier in the day from the hospital after some abdominal discomfort, hit his 13th homer.

Jeff Robinson, 6-6, pitched 4 1-3 innings of one-hit relief for the victory.

The Pirates sent the game into extra innings when Andy Van Slyke hit a solo home run with one out in the ninth off Scott Garrelts.

Braves 5, Mets 3

Charlie Puleo pitched a six-hitter and Gary Roenicke homered and drove in two runs as Atlanta ended a five-game losing streak by beating New York.

The Braves, who have lost 12 of their last 16, scored only five runs in their five losses. Puleo, 3-2, pitched his first complete game of the season.

Graig Nettles also drove in two runs for Atlanta. Sid Fernandez, 9-5, took the loss.

Darryl Strawberry hit his 21st homer and a triple for the Mets.

Cubs 12, Padres 8

Jim Sundberg's pinch-hit grand slam highlighted an eight-run rally in the eighth inning that sent Chicago over San Diego.

After the visiting Padres took a 7-0 lead in the third, helped by Chris Brown's three-run homer, Sundberg tied the score 8-8 after the Cubs loaded the bases against Lance McCullers, 4-6, on a single by Keith Moreland and walks to Jody Davis and Manny Trillo.

Bob Dernier's RBI single put Chicago ahead and three more runs scored on Moreland's double, a triple by Davis and a passed ball.

Les Lancaster, 2-0, pitched two innings for the victory.

There was no trouble in the game, played one day after Chicago's Andre Dawson was sent to the hospital after being hit in the face by a pitch from Eric Show. The incident resulted in a bench-clearing fight and led to seven ejections.

Edenton Rips Snow Hill, 13-5

SNOW HILL — The new season got underway last night and upstart Edenton romped to a 13-5 victory over Snow Hill in American Legion baseball playoff action.

Snow Hill, which had battled back from a late start to earn a share of the league title on Sunday, found itself behind the eight-ball against seventh place Edenton in the first game of the best-of-three first round series. Snow Hill must now come back and win two in a row to continue to the second round.

Snow Hill grabbed the initial lead in the contest, scoring twice in the first inning. T.J. Johnson was hit by a pitch and Greg Patterson, attempting to sacrifice, reached on an error that moved him to second and allowed Johnson to score. Patterson was then sacrificed to third, and scored on Shay Beamon's sacrifice fly.

But Edenton came back with one in the second, then scored four in the third for a 5-2 lead. Three of those came on a homer by Guy Spruill. Snow Hill rallied for three in its half of the frame, tying it at 5-5.

But in the top of the fourth, Edenton scored four more runs. Nolan Kirkman singled and was sacrificed up. He scored on Erie Downing's double and Woody Stetsen walked. Spruill then followed with his second three-run homer, making it 9-5.

Edenton added two more in the sixth on a two-run homer by Todd Hunter, then picked up single runs in the seventh and eighth innings.

Kirkman, Hunter and Downing each had three hits, while Spruill and Brad Hurdle each added two.

Shay Beamon had two hits to lead Snow Hill, which had 10 walks off Spruill. However, Edenton kept Snow Hill at bay with four double plays.

The series moves to Edenton tonight for the second game.

Crum Asks For Some Criteria

HOT SPRINGS, Va. (AP) — Last season, for the fourth time since he began coaching at Louisville in 1971, Denny Crum did not take his team to the NCAA tournament. He wants to know how to make sure that doesn't happen again.

Crum, whose teams won the national championship in 1980 and 1986, spoke Wednesday to the NCAA Division I Basketball Committee at its summer meeting.

The nine-member panel invited Crum to speak after hearing his comments last March when Louisville was bypassed for the 64-team field.

Crum had some suggestions and questions during the 40-minute meeting for the athletic directors who select the 35 at-large teams and seed the teams in the tournament that has grown from eight teams in 1950 to today's field which earns a minimum of $200,000.

The topics covered by Crum ranged from the importance of strength of schedule to the dates of conference tournament championship games.

"There isn't a published set criteria that everybody knows going into the season exactly how its weighted," Crum said of strength of schedule. "For example, if you were to take Louisville last year, we lost to 10 teams ranked in the top 25 in the country. As a coach going in making my schedule, I need to know that if losing to Indiana at Indiana or losing to Syracuse at Syracuse is worth as much as beating a team ranked 200th in the nation on your floor or their floor. What's weighted the most and what should be weighted the most? If I knew that and I knew I wasn't going to get as much credit in the selection process by playing Indiana at home, even if they beat us by 10 or 12 points, than I would get playing a team ranked 200th that I knew I would beat by 20 points.

"As a coach, I need to know that so in my scheduling I can have that factor involved. The way it stands now nobody really knows how much weight strength of schedule has. You don't really know how to schedule. That is the singlemost important thing we can do, come up with the set standard everyone knows going in. That way at the end of the year ... everybody knows the criteria for the invitation."

Committee chairman Dick Schultz, executive director-elect of the NCAA, said he felt Crum had some valid points but his fellow coaches will have to get involved in the process if changes are to come about.

"I thought he had some interesting points that the committee will discuss," Schultz, athletic director at Virginia, said. "Basically, what he's advocating is a computer selection process and if we do go to that we'll have to do some type of survey with the coaches and they would have to agree on that process. I don't think that would eliminate all the controversy."

The controversy and "inconsistencies" are what Crum feels have to be given the utmost attention. And if a formula can't be decided upon Crum said all Division I schools should be invited into the tournament.

"That would certainly be better in my opinion than having a system like we have today that creates so much controversy and inconsistencies," Crum said. "Take the pressure off the committee and let them handle the seeding."

Crum said the at-large berths aren't the only problem. He feels a conference's record in the tournament should play a factor in whether or not its champion should be invited.

"The automatic selection process needs to be reviewed on a yearly basis," he said. "There should be a set criteria for you to maintain your selection."

A final point Crum wanted to make was the timing of the postseason tournaments that decide the automatic bids.

"I think it's really crucial that the conferences that have tournaments have to help give the committee a full day or day and a half to evaluate the bottom 10 or 15 schools involved in the at-large bids," Crum said.

University Games Now Under Way

ZAGREB, Yugoslavia (AP) — With two days of preliminary competition and the opening ceremonies out of the way, the 14th World University Games get down to business.

Swimming and gymnastics, two of the glamour sports of the festival, head eight sports into competition today.

Finals in five events of swimming will kick off the competition at the Mladost Stadium.

Few swimmers from world championships last year in Madrid are expected. Among them, however, is Romanian Noemi Lung, a medalist in the individual medley races last summer.

Records may not fall as quickly as they did in 1985 when world-recordholder Matt Biondi led a group of Americans to 19 University Games marks in Kobe, Japan.

This year none of those record-breakers are present with the emphasis on the Pan-American Games this year.

In the gymnastics competition, medals in the men's team event and individual all-around will be awarded with two-time world champion Yuri Koralev listed on the strong Soviet Union squad.

The men's foil team event also will result in the medal awarding today. Hungary and Italy have taken the first gold medals in two individual foil events contested earlier. But the Olympic ceremonies marked the real start of the festival which will continue at full speed until July 19.

More than 5,000 athletes from 129 countries were represented at the opening ceremonies, which had elements of a carnival atmosphere and a ballet.

Clowns mingled with ballerinas and folk-dancers on the field of the Dinamo Stadium. More than 65,000 spectators watched basketball start Drazen Petrovic light the symbolic flame.

A women runner, Slobodanka Colovic, took the oath on behalf of the athletes.

The streets of Zagreb were almost deserted as many of the city's inhabitants were indoors watching the events on television. The Yugoslavs consider the success of the Games a source of municipal pride.

Folk dancers from the Yugoslav republics, with their different costumes and footwork in contrast to each other, brought the festivities to a close just before midnight on a warm summer evening.

Greenville native John VanSant, a graduate of the U.S. Military Academy, is a member of the U.S. swimming team.

Brown & Wood.....3
Wachovia Bank.....0

Mike Cox and Heath Clark combined to shut out Wachovia Bank as Brown & Wood remained as the last unbeaten team in the Babe Ruth League's post-season tournament.

Brown & Wood took a 3-0 victory in the Thursday night game and moved into the finals of the double elimination tournament. Wachovia falls into the losers' bracket and will face Everett's Pest Control for the right to enter the finals.

Cox tossed six and a third innings while Clark came on to get the final two outs.

Brown & Wood pushed over the only run it needed in the fourth inning. Clark singled and stole second, moving to third on an error. He scored on Grant Harmon's single.

In the fifth, B&W added two insurance runs. Rodney Williams and Robin Joyner both singled and moved up on a fielder's choice. They scored on a hit by Clark.

Clark had two hits to pace B&W while Tim Moore and Dante Short each had two for Wachovia.

Wachovia will face Everett's tonight at 8 p.m. with the winner then facing Brown & Wood Saturday at 11 a.m. A second game, if needed to decide the title, will be played at 4 p.m.

Everette's.....18

Travis Williamson and William Gibbs each picked up three hits to lead Everette's Pest Control to an 18-7 victory over Pepsi-Cola in the losers' bracket of the Babe Ruth League tournament Thursday.

The loss eliminated Pepsi and send Everette's into the finals of the losers' bracket against Wachovia Bank. They meet tonight at 8 p.m. for the right to face Brown & Wood on Saturday for the league title.

Everette's started the scoring in the first inning, pushing over four tallies. In the third, Everette's added two more for a 6-0 lead. But Pepsi got on the bandwagon in the bottom of the inning, rallying to score four times, three of them on a homer by Kirk Welch.

Everette's, however, put the game away with five more in the top of the fourth, extending its lead to 11-4. Bill Jenkins opened with a double and Williamson tripled him in. Gibbs singled to score Williamson and moved up on an error. Billy Gorham also reached on an error and Jamie Brewington walked. Pat Joyner reached on a single, scoring Gibbs and Gorham. Brewington then scored on Hank Thompson's grounder.

Everette's added two more in the fifth, one in the sixth and four more in the seventh. Pepsi picked up two more in the sixth and one in the seventh.

Gorham, Brewington and Joyner each added two hits for Everette's while Tommy Payne, Matthew Cagle and Abram Lang each had two for Pepsi.

Bianchi Appointed

Bianchi To Head Knicks

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Knicks' long search is nearing an end. After 12 leaderless weeks, the Knicks named Al Bianchi their general manager Wednesday. The other half of their management void — a head coach — is expected to be filled within two weeks.

Bianchi, a former assistant coach for the Phoenix Suns, said he would prefer a head coach who emphasizes the fast break.

"If you look around the league today, you see that most successful teams like to run," said Bianchi, who played 10 years in the NBA and coached in Phoenix from 1976 until last month. "All you have to do is look at the success the Lakers have had."

Bianchi replaces Scotty Stirling, who was fired along with Coach Bob Hill on April 20 after the Knicks finished the regular season with a 24-58 record. It was the third season in a row that the Knicks missed the playoffs.

"Sure, we want to make the playoffs," Bianchi said Wednesday after his appointment. "But we also want a (championship) ring. We want to win it all."

Bianchi, 55, and Knicks President Richard Evans said a new coach should be named within the next 10-14 days. Evans said the list of candidates has been narrowed to three or four, but he would not reveal any names.

"The only thing I can say is that we will get the best man possible," Evans said.

Former Dallas Coach Dick Motta and North Carolina State Coach Jim Valvano are believed to be two of the remaining candidates. The Knicks recently tried to hire Boston assistant coach Jimmy Rodgers, but negotiations stopped when the Celtics demanded a top draft pick as compensation.

Bianchi said the Knicks' biggest weaknesses are rebounding and playmaking. The Knicks had those areas in mind last month when they picked point guard Mark Jackson of St. John's and power forward Ron Moore of West Virginia State as their top two selections in the NBA draft.

"I know the Knicks have had rebounding and backcourt problems," Bianchi said. "But I think the draft shows they're heading in the right direction."

One of the Knicks problems last season was the failure of 7-footers Patrick Ewing and Bill Cartwright to form an effective combination in the frontcourt. But Bianchi said he is not anxious to break up the "Twin Towers" by trading Cartwright.

"Big guys are at a premium in the NBA, especially ones who can score," he said. "They're the home run hitters. If you're going to trade one of them, you better get something very good in exchange."

Bianchi, a New York native, averaged 8.1 points a game in 10 seasons with the Syracuse Nats and Philadelphia 76ers.

He started his professional coaching career in 1966 as an assistant with the Chicago Bulls. Bianchi was head coach of the Seattle SuperSonics from 1967 to 1969 before moving to the Virginia Squires of the American Basketball Association, where he was head coach for seven seasons.

In addition to naming Bianchi general manager, the Knicks filled two new administrative posts Wednesday. The team named Hal Childs director of administration and Dick McGuire director of scouting services.

Childs was assistant general manager of the Golden State Warriors from 1984 to 1986. McGuire has been the Knicks' chief scout for 20 years.

NBA, NAACP In Agreement

NEW YORK (AP) — Citing racial-biased remarks by former baseball executive Al Campanis as a catalyst, the NAACP has reached formal agreement with the NBA on a program to increase minority hiring in the league.

Similar agreements with baseball and football could be made in the near future, NAACP Executive Director Benjamin Hooks said.

Through the agreement, announced at a news conference Wednesday, the NAACP and NBA will begin contacting individual teams to set up a program aimed at assuring "equality of employment opportunities throughout the NBA."

Hooks said comments by Campanis, the former Los Angeles Dodgers vice president, last April gave urgency to the issue of minority employment in sports leagues. Campanis said he thought blacks lacked some of the "necessities" to be managers and general managers in baseball.

"After the Campanis incident, I went to (NBA commissioner David) Stern and said, 'Will you work with us, or will you work against us?' The answer to that question is what we're announcing today," Hooks said. "He will be working with us."

"I've asked him to use whatever power he can use — I leave that up to him — whether it be his powers of persuasion, legal or a little nose tweaking."

Stern said he couldn't order his teams to do anything, "but very often my requests are honored."

"There are no formal agreements between us and the clubs," Hooks said, "and that's what we're working on. Our local chapters will contact the teams. Those contacts are being made. I have asked Commissioner Stern to do just one thing — to help us contact the local teams, ask them to meet with us."

Hooks said local NAACP branches already had been in touch with 12 NBA teams, 20 major league baseball clubs and 15 NFL teams.

Hooks and Stern said they had yet to set actual percentage goals for minority hiring.

"I know about goals and timetables, believe me," Hooks said, "but we will deal with the individual teams on that. If I say we're going to get two jobs, and we only get one, then I'll be pilloried."

"We don't want to play a numbers game," Stern said. "It's not a matter of statistics with us. It's a matter of commitment."

While 75 percent of all NBA players are black, Stern said only 30 percent of office positions are occupied by blacks. There are four black NBA coaches and two black general managers.

In their joint statement, both the league and the civil rights organization said progress would be monitored closely.

Hooks said he had met with baseball Commissioner Peter Ueberroth, and they had agreements with about six major league teams. Those agreements have yet to be signed by the NAACP because they have not been reviewed.

"I'll be in touch with Pete Rozelle (NFL commissioner), and we'll work out something in the next few days," Hooks said.

"I'm not sure our agreements with baseball and football will be the same as basketball, but I am sure they are willing to work with us," Hooks said.

Stern said his league and the NAACP were concerned not only with player-related jobs, but also with jobs in such areas as marketing, publicity and security.

He said some of the issues addressed in meetings with teams would be the nature of their job pool, the percentage of minorities in each community and the percentage of minorities within each job category.

Strange After Second Straight

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — Curtis Strange finds himself on familiar turf in his bid to win a second straight golf tournament.

"It makes me feel good. It's good to come back home after winning last week," Strange said as he and 155 other golfers went through their final preparations for today's opening round of the the Anheuser-Busch Golf Classic.

The tournament is played at the Kingsmill Golf Club, a private resort where Strange makes his home and serves as the host pro.

"Confidence-wise, it gives me a big shot in the arm," said Strange, who posted a three-shot win over David Frost, Jodie Mudd and Nick Price in last week's Canadian Open. "But I still have to go out this week and play well here. Once I go out on the golf course, it's pretty much the same."

Strange is vying to become the first player to win back-to-back events since Bernhard Langer captured the Masters and the Heritage Classic in 1985.

Strange, who is fourth on this year's earnings list, has 10 career victories but is still looking for his first at Kingsmill, a hilly, 6,776-yard, par-71 layout along the banks of the James River. In 1986, he missed the cut.

"I've played pretty good here every single year except for last year," he said.

In the 1986 Anheuser-Busch, Fuzzy Zoeller broke from the pack with a final-round 64 for a two-shot win over Mudd.

Other former champions joining Zoeller for this year's event, which carries a $612,000 purse and a first prize of $110,000, are Ronnie Black, John Mahaffey, Calvin Peete, J.C. Snead and Mark Wiebe.

Only four of 1987's top-20 money winners are entered this week, as many players prepare for next week's British Open, but Zoeller said that won't affect the quality of the tournament.

"Just because you don't have an Arnold Palmer or a Jack Nicklaus or Tom Watson or Lee Trevino, it doesn't mean you don't have the top golfers in the world," Zoeller said.

"We still have the grade A-class golfers," he said. "These guys have their names on golf bags for a certain reason — because they're good at what they do."

The list of players not participating in the Anheuser-Busch includes Paul Azinger, who is atop the season earnings list, and Masters champion Larry Mize, who is third on the winnings chart.

Scott Simpson has rejoined the tour here after a two-week layoff following his U.S. Open victory. Simpson, who is second in 1987 earnings with $465,896, said he played only one round of golf during his vacation.

"It was time for a break," said Simpson, who added that he nonetheless is ready to pick up where he left off.

"I really want to keep playing well, keep doing the same things," he said. "There's no reason it can't get better."

Other notables entered include Hal Sutton, No. 12 on this year's money list; Don Pooley, No. 14; and Mac O'Grady and George Burns, both winners earlier this season.

The National Weather Service says the golfers will have to contend throughout the weekend with temperatures in the high 90s, along with high humidity levels.

Parts of the final two rounds will be televised live by NBC.

Course To Level Age Difference

FAIRFIELD, Conn. (AP) — Arnold Palmer doesn't believe age will be much of a factor in the 1987 U.S. Senior Open.

"It's not a particularly long course," Palmer said of the 6,599-yard Brooklawn Country Club layout, where the tournament begins today. "I think that will probably bring a lot more people into play than if the course was a little longer and more difficult."

Palmer and Miller Barber, who has won three of the first seven Senior Opens, said age usually has made a difference among golf's older set.

The younger players — those in their early 50s who have recently joined the Senior Tour — have become dominant, leaving little for the players who've already reached age 55 or beyond.

"It's your ability to concentrate," the bespectacled 56-year-old Barber said. "I think you lose a little of that and I also think it has a little to do with you eyesight."

"I've always wore glasses before, but I found myself under-clubbing or over-clubbing recently. I think the age begins to affect your depth perception."

Billy Casper, also 56, noted that the some of the dominant players such as Chi Chi Rodriguez, Don January, Dale Douglass and Bobby Nichols seemed to peak just as they reached their early 50s — and the Senior Tour.

"I think age has something to do with it. I think most of us have a keener awareness of our golf swings," he said. "Age helped us to understand our golf swings and to control ourselves better on the course."

The field in this year's Open ranges in age from those who've just joined the Senior Tour to Harold "Jug" McSpaden, who turns 79 on July 21.

Rodriguez, with five Senior Tour victories this year, Bruce Crampton, with three, Bob Charles and Billy Casper, with two each, and Douglas, the defending champion, were rated the favorites.

Crampton, Charles and Douglas are 51, Rodriguez is 52.

"It took me all those years to realize that I wasn't an Arnold Palmer; that I am a Chi Chi," Rodriguez said. "I'm a better player now than ever."

"I suppose the younger guys who are coming in off the regular tour are the guys you have to give the advantage to," said Palmer.

Sheehan Says Time For A New Group

LAVAL, Quebec (AP) — Patty Sheehan, a member of the LPGA Tour since 1980, says the time may have come for a changing of the guard.

"A couple of different players have been winning a lot this year," Sheehan replied when asked to handicap the field in the du Maurier Classic, the third of the four majors on the LPGA Tour, which starts today at the par-72, 6,371-yard Islesmere Golf and Country Club.

"The way the tour has been going, the old guard is not guarding as good as it should," Sheehan added.

She was referring to the fact that golfers such as Pat Bradley, Nancy Lopez and Jan Stephenson, who are usually near the top of the earnings' list, have been overtaken this year.

They've been replaced by Betsy King, the leader with $302,806; Jane Geddes, who is about $10,000 behind her, and Ayako Okamoto of Japan, who is third with $253,704.

Sheehan ranks fourth with $143,986.

"You have to look at the top of the money list," Sheehan said when asked to evaluate the field in the $400,000 event, which pays $60,000 to the winner. "The ones at the top of the money list have been consistently up there all year."

Geddes has won four tournaments, including the Jamie Farr Toledo Classic last weekend, while King and Okamoto are both three-time winners this year.

Sheehan is still seeking her first victory of the year, but is encouraged by recent performances.

Air Traffic Jam

The United States has the busiest airline system in the world. In 1985, a total of about 277 BILLION revenue-passenger-miles were flown on the larger U.S. certified air carriers in domestic operation. This averages out to an annual trip of 1,168 miles for every inhabitant of the United States. Chicago's O'Hare Airport is the single busiest airport in the world. On average, airplanes there take off or land every 42.25 seconds.

Horoscope

From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY July 10

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A change of attitude will be necessary if you are to keep up with the swiftly-moving conditions around you. The full moon may create a tendency for strange mood swings.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Correspondence may bring up new situations, but try to concentrate on resolving old ones which have been put off.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Improve your proficiency in using modern avenues of expression. A situation which arises can be beneficial.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Be direct in stating your ideas for changes in business. Good results and a fine agreement will be reached.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): A good amount of work can be accomplished if you apply yourself. Keep your promises to the letter.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): Make arrangements for your weekend activities this morning, but keep up with necessary business duties.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Don't put your family in an angry mood this morning. Tonight, decide on how to improve your relationship with your mate.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Finish with an important report before returning calls. Entertain guests tonight, but definitely avoid gossips.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Decide on a course of action to handle a responsibility you've been neglecting. Get your property fixed up today.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Seeking advice from a financial expert would be a very wise move. Improve your personal appearance.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Clear up an annoying situation and be done with it. Be sure not to waste any money on things you don't need.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Try your best to prevent an argument between your mate and a long time friend. Keep your fidelity intact.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Your family's happiness is your first priority. Recreation with friends can wait until this is achieved.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he, or she, will have a hunger for knowledge which will prove very helpful. Your son or daughter will be very serious and businesslike, and could be very successful, so plan now for a good education. Teach your child while young that a kind word is stronger than sarcasm.

The bidding:

 1 ♠ 1 ♠ 3 ♠ 3 ♠
 5 ♣ Pass Pass Pass
 Opening lead: King of ♣
 The loser-on-loser play is among the most neglected weapons that declarer has in his arsenal. We are certain today's declarer never even considered the possibility.

Since North could have cue-bid two spades with a strong hand, his jump to three clubs had to be limited. With spades wide open, South's jump to five clubs was most reasonable.

Declarer wasted no time in going down. He won the opening lead in dummy, drew two rounds of trumps and then ruffed a spade. He cashed the ace of diamonds and tried a finesse, which lost to the queen. After a diamond return declarer had to broach hearts himself, and as a result, he lost two tricks in the suit for a one-trick set.

Declarer had a sure-trick line for his contract regardless of the distribution. After drawing two rounds of trumps, he should have cashed the ace-king of diamonds, then led the five of spades from dummy, discarding a diamond from hand. Whichever defender wins the trick is end played.

Assume East wins. He cannot return a diamond without setting up the table's jack, so he is forced to break the heart suit. Declarer simply plays low and, when West wins, he is end played in turn. Any lead gives declarer his game-going trick.

The situation is similar if West wins the spade. If he has a diamond to return, declarer simply covers with the board's jack, which will either win or the long diamond will be established. A heart return limits declarer's losers in that suit to one trick, and a spade presents declarer with a ruff-sluff. Try it.

Stars Stand In Line To Participate In PBS TV Tribute To William Wyler

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The late film director William Wyler said he was criticized for having "no signature" — you couldn't tell a Wyler film from that of another director just by the look of it.

But that didn't halt a stampede of stars who wanted his Midas touch on their careers. His 45 years' worth of films included some of their biggest hits — Bette Davis in "Jezebel," Gary Cooper in "Friendly Persuasion," Charlton Heston in "Ben Hur," Barbra Streisand in "Funny Girl."

"William really is the reason that I became a box-office star," Davis says.

"He directed more Academy Award performances than any other director," says Gregory Peck, who starred in Wyler's "Roman Holiday."

Fourteen actors and actresses won Oscars for Wyler-directed performances. Twenty-one others were nominated. Wyler himself was nominated 15 times and won three Academy Awards.

Davis and Peck are among an array of movie stars whose reminiscences are included in the PBS profile "Directed by William Wyler." It airs Monday as the second in the "American Masters" series.

Wyler's daughter, Catherine, is executive producer of the engaging, hour-long tribute, chock full of tidbits, anecdotes and film clips.

The endearing interview with Wyler was taped just days before his death in 1981. Folded into it are interviews with his wife, Talli, directors John Huston and Billy Wilder and actors Laurence Olivier and Greer Garson, among others.

Wyler was born in Alsace-Lorraine, now part of France. An uncle in the movie business paid his passage to the United States. He worked his way up from gofer at Universal, landing his first directing job in 1925, a western called "Crook Buster." It was shot in three days on a budget of $2,000.

In 1932, he successfully directed the difficult but brilliant John Barrymore in "Counselor at Large" and boosted his reputation in the industry.

His perfectionism was legendary. "He made me do 48 takes in front of 200 extras. And I had never in my life done more than two takes before," Davis says.

"Somehow or other the number 71 comes out of the mists of memory," says Garson, "and I can't think that that's possible."

Heston says Wyler was never that bad, that he didn't recall more than 27 takes. He said Wyler could never be described as satisfied by a performance, but rather "resigned to the fact that you weren't going to do it any better."

Olivier recalls "overacting appallingly" in the 1939 classic "Wuthering Heights," until Wyler chewed him out. Olivier says Wyler made him a film star.

Wyler recalls that the studio didn't like the sad ending of "Wuthering Heights" and tacked on a silly cloud-walking scene Wyler refused to direct.

In another tidbit, Wyler reveals that in the pivotal scene of "The Little Foxes," it was a double, not Herbert Marshall who crawled up the stairs. He said Marshall had an artificial leg and couldn't go up the staircase on hands and knees, so he briefly leaves frame, and the double re-enters, far enough in the background so the switch went undetected.

"I'm accused constantly of having 'no signature,'" Wyler said. "That's the big artistic demerit. You can't tell a Wyler film from another man's film just by looking at it. To me it's more fun and more challenging, too, to do different types of pictures."

Television Writers Honored

HOLLYWOOD — In spite of what television creator Gene Reynolds called the "enormous profit imperative" dictated by the hard-line business of television, a record number of teleplays was submitted to the 13th annual Humanitas Prizes this year from television writers eager for something more meaningful than ratings success.

The winners of $70,000 in Humanitas awards, announced Tuesday, included writers of CBS' "Kate & Allie," NBC's "Family Ties," NBC's "Smurfs," the CBS television movie "Promise" and a CBS "Schoolbreak Special" entitled "The Day They Came to Arrest the Book."

Finalists were selected from 440 scripts, about 100 more than were submitted last year to the Human Family Educational and Cultural Institute, based in Los Angeles, which gives the awards to prime-time television programs that "enrich the human person."

In addressing the group, Reynolds, a writer, director and producer for such series as "M.A.S.H." and "Lou Grant," said: "There must be a reason why the Humanitas event has grown from a modest meeting of a few dozen people to this impressive congregation, why recipients value this prize as much as they do other prestigious awards." He paused, then added jokingly: "Maybe it's the money."

"Or maybe," Reynolds continued, "writers appreciate the encouragement Humanitas gives them in the face of the enormous profit imperatives of our business that flatten even the most committed.... Humanitas reminds us yearly that there are other values to express, other experiences to convey beyond the shocking and the sensational, that America's viewers can get something more from prime time than a quickened pulse."

Writer Fay Kanin, another program speaker, said that she thought the Humanitas Prizes were particularly important in 1987, as the world watches the "moral and ethical bankruptcy which seems to have invaded our society" in the televised Iran-Contra hearings.

The 1987 awards, funded by an endowment established by a group of broadcasting companies, were made in five categories: 30-, 60- and 90-minute programs, plus children's animated and children's live-action programs.

The $25,000 prize for programs 90 minutes or longer went to the two-hour drama "Promise," a CBS movie that explored the issue of mental illness and starred James Garner and James Woods. The drama, cited for "its insightful probe of the arduous demands that love and fidelity can make on us" and its "revelation of the transparent beauty of the mentally disabled," was written by Richard Friedenberg from a story by Kenneth Blackwell, Tennyson Flowers and Friedenberg.

In the 60-minute category, the winners of $15,000 were Gary David Goldberg and Alan Uger for a special, hourlong episode of NBC's "Family Ties" entitled "A My Name Is Alex," in which Alex Keaton (Michael J. Fox) goes to a psychiatrist to try to get over the death of a close friend. The program, mostly a monologue as Alex addresses the psychiatrist, had no commercial interruptions during its second half-hour. The award was given for its "formula-shattering exploration of the mysteriousness of life and its proneness to death" and its "deliciously witty celebration of the transcendent dimension of the human situation, of God, and of personal immortality."

The winner of $10,000 in the 30-minute category was Bob Randall for an episode of the CBS comedy "Kate & Allie" entitled "Jennie and Jason." The award was given for the show's "wonderfully funny portrayal of the honesty and trust which mother-daughter communication requires" and its "treatment of the uniqueness of the sexual act and of the permanent and symbolic gift of self that it symbolizes."

Movie Pilot Features Bored Clerk Who Becomes 'Agent'

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Carly Foxe is not a government agent, as she claims in the NBC movie "Carly's Web," but she has her own squad of "untouchables."

Carly, played by Daphne Ashbrook in the two-hour movie pilot, is a clerk in the Department of Justice who tosses the rule book aside as she gets involved in a case.

"She's getting bored with her job as a complaints clerk and thinks she's not making a difference in anyone's life," Ashbrook said. "Carly's bubbly, naive and very strong. She accidentally learns that somebody in the government is doing something wrong."

"She has access to the attorney general's computer files and uses it to get people to help her solve the case. These are people who are in trouble but are not really bad. She tells them she's a special agent and will wipe out their records if they help."

Carly assembles her own "odd squad," which includes an illegal alien, a cattle rustler, a tax evader, a 12-year-old computer whiz, a madam, a smuggler and a man with a photographic memory.

"Carly's Web" airs Sunday on NBC, but MTM Enterprises is hoping to sell it as a series to ABC or CBS.

"It's a mixture of comedy and drama," said Ashbrook. "I think it has great legs for a weekly series."

If it goes as a series, there will be nine regulars, including Carly's boss at the Justice Department who has no idea what she's doing. Even after she breaks the case she keeps quiet about her role in it.

She previously had roles in two other series, "Our Family Honor," in which she played a police officer, and in "Fortune Dane."

"I took the role in 'Fortune Dane' because she was a bad girl," Ashbrook said. "She was kind of shady. But they watered down the character very quickly and she became one-dimensional."

She was also in a TV movie with James Farentino called "That Secret Sunday." She felt it had series potential.

In the blonde, blue-eyed actress grew up in San Diego, where her father is a director-actor and college professor and her mother is an actress. Her brother and sister, Dana and Taylor Ashbrook, are also actors.

She and her mother, who works primarily in the theater, made their joint film debut in an episode of "Hardcastle & McCormick."

Ashbrook produced a play at the Matrix Theater, "Full Circle," and co-starred with her sister.

"I was exposed to acting from day one," she said, "but my parents left it up to me. I was always in a theater. So now when I got into a theater it smells right. It's like being back home."

"My parents didn't urge me to get into acting. I heard from every angle how hard it was, how tough it was to make it. But I believe you can do whatever you want to do if you work hard. I always knew what I wanted, from the very beginning. There are no guarantees in this business. You don't get into it for the money."

The Fox Broadcasting Co. begins a second night of first-run programming this Saturday with a 2-hour premiere of "Werewolf," a supernatural thriller starring John York, Chuck Connors and Lance LeGault. It will be a half-hour show beginning the following Saturday.

On Saturday, July 18, Fox will introduce "The New Adventures of Beans Baxter," a youth-oriented spy spoof starring Jonathan Ward as a teen-age secret agent and Elinor Donahue ("Father Knows Best") as his mother.

Also starting July 18 is the half-hour romantic comedy "Karen's Song," starring Patty Duke as a 40-year-old woman who has an affair with a 28-year-old man, played by Lewis Smith. Lainie Kazan co-stars.

Fox will add another show July 25 with the premiere of "Down and Out in Beverly Hills."

Bacall Says She, Peres May Be Kin

JERUSALEM (AP) — Actress Lauren Bacall says she and Israeli Foreign Minister Shimon Peres may be related, and that Peres plans to investigate the possible family ties.

Bacall, in Israel to make a movie, spoke with Peres in his office Wednesday for nearly an hour.

The pair noted that their fathers shared the same last name, Persky, and came from Eastern Europe. Peres' family lived in Vishnieva, Poland, before he immigrated to Palestine in 1934 and changed his name to Peres.

"There are not too many Perskys in the world," Peres told Miss Bacall while posing for pictures. "Most of them are related."

Miss Bacall, who was born in Brooklyn, N.Y., said she didn't see her father, William, from the time she was 8 years old, and that her mother went back to using her maiden name, Bacall.

The actress said she thought her father was an immigrant from Poland, but that she knew little else about him.

Bacall is making "An Appointment with Death," based on an Agatha Christie thriller and co-starring Peter Ustinov.

Birthday

CHICAGO (AP) — Sir Georg Solti, music director of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, may be honored on his 75th birthday with a bust in a city park.

The bronze likeness of Solti, three times larger than life size, would be dedicated next October in Lincoln Park on Chicago's North Side. The bust, which likely would cost $30,000 to $35,000, would be financed by private donors.

A park board committee endorsed the project Tuesday, and the full board is expected to approve it Monday.

Solti, who has led the Chicago Symphony since 1969, will celebrate his birthday Oct. 9 at an Orchestra Hall concert featuring soprano Kiri Te Kanawa, tenor Placido Domingo and pianist Murray Perahia.

In New Zealand, with no predators to threaten them, flightless birds such as the kiwi, moa and weka evolved, says National Geographic.
