Senator Rebuts North's Stand On Patriotism

By JIM DRINKARD
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Lt. Col. Oliver North listened in somber silence today as a member of the Senate Iran-Contra committee lectured him that opponents of aid to the Nicaraguan rebels "still love God and still love this country just as much as you do."
"Although He is regularly asked to do so, God does not take sides in American politics," Sen. George Mitchell, D-Maine, a former federal judge, addressed North at the nationally televised hearing.

"And in America, disagreement with the policies of the government is not evidence of lack of patriotism," Mitchell said.
North sat virtually motionless at the witness table, his eyes glistening, as Mitchell spoke. Leaving the room during a recess immediately afterward, North said, "I have no comment."
Mitchell's lecture represented the first attempt by a member of the committee to turn the tables on North, who has used his previous four days in the witness chair to rally support for the Nicaraguan Contras while stoutly insisting he broke no laws during his tenure at the National Security Council.

Mitchell, a second-term senator, cited North's plea at Friday's hearings, "when you asked that Congress not cut off aid to the Contras, for the love of God and for the love of country..."

"I now address a plea to you," he said.
"Debate this issue forcefully and vigorously as you have and as you surely will. But please do it in a way that respects the patriotism and the motives of those who disagree with you, as you would have them respect you."
North's day in the witness chair was apt to be his last. Despite his riveting testimony last week, committee officials already were looking ahead to the expected appearance beginning on Tuesday of Adm. John Poindexter, the former national security adviser.

According to one memo that Poindexter initialed in 1986, President Reagan was briefed on the use of Iran arms sale profits for a series of far-flung covert operations to be kept secret from Congress.
White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater, accompanying Reagan today on a trip to Indiana, said the characterization of the memo as it relates to the president was totally inaccurate.

Talking to reporters aboard Air Force One, Fitzwater said that Reagan was never briefed on the diversion of excess funds. "We're confident that when Poindexter testifies, he will corroborate what the White House says," the spokesman said.
Mitchell's lecture on civics came after North, who played a key role in

South Korean Cabinet Resigns

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — President Chun Doo-hwan accepted the resignations of his prime minister and seven ministers today in a shakeup aimed at installing a broader-based government before presidential elections.
In another development, opposition leader Kim Young-sam accused the government today of not carrying out promised reforms. He demanded freedom for all political prisoners by

Friday and an amnesty for all political offenders.
Officials said Chun had named Kim Chung-yul, a former air force commander and defense minister, to replace outgoing premier Lee Han-key.
Chun has promised to maintain a neutral position in the upcoming presidential elections, and said he will not favor his own Democratic Justice Party. He stepped down from the party presidency last week.

A presidential spokesman said the Cabinet changes reflected "President Chun's intention to give the Cabinet a new appearance... in carrying out national tasks such as fair management of the political timetable needed to fulfill a genuine democratic development."
But the new ministers also included two former army generals, including a noted hardliner and close

Chun ally who took over the key defense post in the 23-member Cabinet.
The prime minister and Cabinet ministers have limited authority under the country's strong presidential system.
The main opposition Reunification Democratic Party immediately rejected the Cabinet shuffle, charging the new ministers would favor the government.
"We suspect that these people would not carry out democratic reforms without any hitch," the party said in a statement.
Opposition leaders have called for a neutral government while negotiations are under way on revising the constitution to allow direct presidential elections.
Chun agreed to accept opposition demands for direct elections and other democratic reforms on July 1. The president acted after 18 days of nationwide anti-government demonstrations.
The new prime minister was defense minister in the late 1950s after serving as chief of staff of the Korean air force, and was a former Korean ambassador to the United States.
Chun also replaced the ministers of home affairs, education, defense, (See KOREAN, A-8)

Demonstrators Turn Casey Service Into Shoving Match

By ANNE M. PETERSON
Associated Press Writer
BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — The late CIA Director William Casey sparked as much controversy in death as in life, with protesters on opposite sides of U.S. policy toward Nicaragua scuffling outside a memorial service for him.
Opponents and supporters of U.S. aid to the Contras fighting Nicaragua's leftist government shoved and shouted at each other during the service Sunday.
Police broke up fights but made no arrests, Sgt. Walter Jordan said.
About 50 people with signs reading "Support the Nicaraguan Freedom Fighters" and "Oliver North is Our American Hero" shouted "Communists!" at 150 people across the street who shouted back "U.S. Out of Nicaragua."
The demonstrations took place outside the Roman Catholic Church of the Good Shepherd, where about 300 people attended the invitation-only service.
Casey's wife, Sophia, walked from her limousine to the church without comment as some demonstrators chanted "CIA Out of Nicaragua."
To keep the controversy out of his church, the Rev. Peter Healy canceled two eulogies that he learned would have political overtones. He also posted disclaimers saying no inference should be drawn that the church endorses several conservative organizations that sponsored the service.
Conservative TV commentator Bruce Herschensohn, who was to have spoken, distributed his text after the service for Casey and read it later at a private reception.

"Before this century is done, there will be another memorial service for him, to be held in Managua," the statement read.
"And on that day, the church bells will ring for him in San Salvador, Tegucigalpa and Guatemala City and Panama City and Belmopan and San Jose, for it will be recognized throughout Central America that he helped bring about their security free from the threat of totalitarianism," it said.
Outside the church, police twice warned pro-Contra demonstrators not to cross the street where the protest organized by the Southern California Ecumenical Council Interfaith Taskforce on Central America was held.
One anti-Contra demonstrator made a citizens arrest when a woman with whom he had been arguing slapped him. Police Sgt. Ron Smith said officers cited the woman and released her at the scene.
Demonstrator Ron Kovic, a former Marine sergeant paralyzed in Vietnam and author of the book "Born on the Fourth of July," protested Casey's support for the Contras and condemned Casey's protege, Marine Lt. Col. Oliver North.
"People may think Oliver North is a hero now, but what will we do when the first casualty list of American boys, the first killed in action, the first body bags, appear on the evening news?" Kovic asked.
"While these people come to mourn one man, we come to mourn the thousands who died because of his work," said Mary Brent Wehrli, executive director of the task force.

Ship Losses Mounting

By ED BLANCHE
Associated Press Writer
NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iranian and Iraqi attacks in the Persian Gulf have destroyed 8 million tons of shipping, one third of the total merchant shipping tonnage sunk in all of World War II, shipping experts say.
The statistics underscore the ferocity of the eye-for-an-eye attacks on shipping in the gulf. The figures were compiled by the International Association of Independent Tanker Owners, the British Council of Shipping and Lloyds Maritime Information Service.
Iran and Iraq have been at war since September 1980, or longer than World War II lasted.
They began attacking foreign ships in February 1984, when Iraq launched a sustained campaign against Iran's oil installations and tankers to choke off Tehran's economic lifeline.

With Iraq's ports closed since the early days of the war, Iran retaliated against Iraq's main backers, particularly Kuwait and Saudi Arabia.
Both sides have attacked more than 330 unarmed merchant ships since May 1981, according to statistics prepared by London-based Lloyds and the tanker owners association, based in Oslo, Norway.
The association said 133 vessels, ranging from oil rig supply boats to tankers of more than 100,000 tons, have been declared lost. It said more than 34 million tons of shipping have been damaged.

Forty-one tankers have been declared total losses.
The Allies lost 5,150 merchant ships during World War II, accounting for 20 million of the total 24 million tons of shipping destroyed during the war.
The Persian Gulf tanker war has killed more than 200 seamen and wounded as many in attacks that now range along the gulf's entire 600-mile length, Lloyds said.
Lloyds has paid out more than $1 billion in loss and damage claims. The war has pushed insurance rates up. It has forced Iran, desperate to get its oil out, to buy or charter a fleet of 17 tankers to make the dangerous

Memorial Drive Tops Traffic Flow

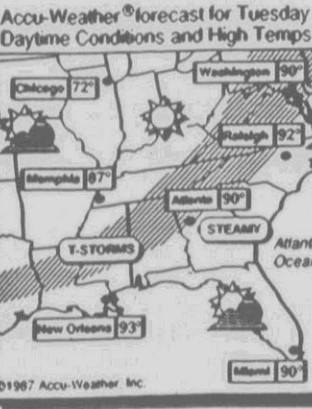

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer
You don't have to be a census expert to know that the Greenville area is growing. All you have to do is venture out onto any one of a number of thoroughfares in the area — especially at rush hours — and get caught up in the traffic.
While Greenville's 1980 census counted 35,740 residents, the most recent estimate by the state office of budget and management set the city's population at 40,279 in 1985. Pitt County (including Greenville) in 1980 had a population of about 73,900, while official projections set the county's population in 1986 at 94,407.
With that population growth has come a significant increase in the number of cars and trucks.

According to the county tax supervisor's office, in December 1986 there were 69,855 motor vehicles registered in the county, 3,796 more than were registered at the end of 1982.
Those vehicle registration figures don't include the many cars and trucks used by East Carolina University students that are registered in other North Carolina counties or other states, or the many autos traveling area roads whose owners are shopping in the Greenville area, seeking medical aid here, or just simply passing through.
North Carolina Department of Transportation average daily traffic count figures attest to the increased number of vehicles using the streets and highways in the Greenville area.

According to the DOT figures, the section of Memorial Drive (N.C. 11) just south of the Greenville Boulevard (U.S. 264) intersection, is the most heavily traveled section of road in the county, with an average of 29,400 vehicles per day in 1986. That same section of road was used by an average of 20,600 vehicles a day in 1982.
How about the rest of N.C. 11 in the Greenville area?
Traffic counts on Memorial Drive just south of the Airport Road showed an average of 13,900 vehicles a day in 1982, compared with 17,700 a day in

Police Say Loner Killed Seven People

FEDERAL WAY, Wash. (AP) — A man described as a loner by neighbors methodically shot to death his parents, his parents-in-law, his wife and their two small children before killing himself, police said.

There was no explanation for the shootings at three homes, which may have begun as early as Friday, said police in Kings County and Tacoma.

The gunman was identified Sunday as 36-year-old Daniel Patrick Lynam, 36, by the King County medical examiner's office.

An unidentified man who said he was Lynam's brother alerted police on Saturday that Lynam had killed people, and said Lynam had a history of mental illness, said King County police spokesman Dick Larson.

When police arrived at their home here, Lynam warned them to stay back, saying "I don't want to hurt you," Larson said.

About 10 minutes later, they heard a noise. They entered the red, ranch-style home to find Lynam, his wife, 2-year-old daughter and 5-week-old son dead of gunshot wounds, Larson said. He said Lynam apparently killed himself.

There was no sign of a struggle, Larson said.

Police found the bodies of Lynam's parents and in-laws Saturday night at their separate residences in north Tacoma, about 10 miles south of here.

A .38-caliber handgun was believed to be the murder weapon, police said.

Lynam's parents and in-laws were shot in the head while sitting, said Pierce County Medical Examiner Emmanuel Lacsina. The Halls were in their 60s or early 70s, he said.

Lacsina identified the parents as 74-year-old Thomas Lynam and 66-year-old Francis Lynam and the in-laws as Jack and Willie Mae Hall, in their 60s or early 70s.

Autopsies on Daniel Lynam and his family were scheduled today, said Pago Olson of the King County medical examiner's office.

Vaughn Van Zandt, an investigator with the medical examiner's office, identified Lynam's wife as Linda Jean Lynam, 34, and their children as Jason, 5 weeks, and Shaina, 2.

Incinerator Workers Refuse Islip Garbage

L.A. Times-Washington Post

NEW YORK — Fears by workers at the Southwest Brooklyn Incinerator that materials aboard the infamous garbage barge could be hazardous threatened Sunday to block a plan to burn the trash at the incinerator and bury the ash in Islip, N.Y.

Members of Local 1795 of the Stationary Fireman's Union have refused to handle garbage from the barge unless the waste is inspected and they are assured it contains no hazardous hospital materials, union president Thomas DiNardo said Sunday.

"The concern was that there was hospital waste on that barge. The incinerator burns medical waste, but not the red bag material," said DiNardo, referring to infectious hospital waste specially bagged in red plastic. "We're going to stop working. We're not going to burn it unless the stuff is inspected and we know there is no hospital waste or red bags in there."

Although the New York state Department of Environmental Conservation maintains that the contents of the barge — much of it commercial waste from Islip — is mostly paper and not infectious, a consumer advocacy group has challenged that claim, saying the state has not carried out a thorough inspection of the garbage.

"We're pointing to the DEC's own report which said that in 16 bales there was medical waste — IV tubes, catheters, diapers," said Randall Weiner, an attorney with the New York Public Interest Research Group, which joined with Brooklyn Borough President Howard Golden Saturday to obtain a temporary restraining order that blocks the burn-and-bury plan. "Our only position is that this plan may have a significant impact on the environment, and that there should be an environmental impact statement done."

Golden and NYPIRG are scheduled to tell State Supreme Court Justice William Bellard Monday why they obtained the restraining order.

Under the agreement worked out last week by state, New York City and Islip officials, the 3,186 tons of trash that has sat aboard the barge Mobro 4,000 for 113 days and 6,000 miles would be burned at the Brooklyn incinerator. The resulting ash would be trucked to Hauppauge, N.Y., and buried at the Islip landfill.

The operation, expected to cost about $85,000, was to begin this week and take three to four weeks to complete.

DiNardo said he learned of the worker's concerns Sunday from a shop steward at the Brooklyn plant.

The 65 union members there have already staged several job actions over the issue of red bag waste being brought to the plant from Brooklyn hospitals, he said. An agreement with the city now allows the workers to inspect the garbage before processing it, he said, and the union wants the same right for the garbage from the barge.

While most of the garbage at the Brooklyn plant is handled by crane, DiNardo said union members come into contact with the waste while cleaning up spillage from the crane and making repairs to equipment.

"We don't know what it is, but we know it's been out there 120 days," he said. "We don't want to just stop working, but the men's safety comes first."

MISSING TOOTH SYNDROME

By the time Mother Nature's dental job is complete, most humans end up with a full set of 32 permanent teeth. But you can't always trust Mother Nature. Occasionally, one or several teeth fail to develop. Such a condition is known as partial anodontia. This may happen with either primary or permanent teeth.

Even though all primary teeth may form, something may happen to prevent the development of the formative bud for one or more of the permanent teeth. The tooth most frequently missing is the third molar (wisdom tooth). Usually its absence does no harm.

It has been speculated that evolution is reducing the number of human teeth. Our "soft" modern diet requires less chewing than our predecessors. In many instances the wisdom teeth are already dispensable and should be removed when they develop in a trouble-making way. Perhaps wisdom teeth are the first victims of a genetic trend toward fewer teeth but as yet there is no proof-theory to support this line of reasoning.

Note: We invite all participants of the Blue Cross/Blue Shield personal care plan to come by our office. We are a member of Cost Care.

Congress Will Return To Its Birthplace For Symbolic Service

By JEFF BARKER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than 200 members of Congress assemble this week in the Philadelphia chambers where the first Congress met and where George Washington presided over a convention in 1787 to structure a new government.

Thursday's ceremonial sessions at Congress Hall and Independence Hall, respectively, are part of the summer-long celebration of the Constitution's 200th birthday.

Organizers are expecting as many as 200 House members and 25 senators — one of the largest congressional delegations to assemble outside Washington since Philadelphia's Congress Hall stopped being the nation's capital in 1800, congressional historians said.

The planned ceremonies, however, have been marked by a battle over the constitutional rights of groups seeking to demonstrate at them.

"That's what the Constitution is all about," said Hobart Cawood, superintendent of Independence National Historical Park. "The National Park Service isn't arguing about whether there should be freedom to do these things. It's just the procedures we're concerned about."

Demonstrations are planned to coincide with the lawmakers' arrival on Thursday. "Every day I hear about another planned protest," said House historian Raymond Smock.

Members of the Pledge of Resistance and the Committee In Support of the People of El Salvador, groups opposed to U.S. policies in Central America, contend that officials are trying improperly to limit their right to dissent.

A federal lawsuit filed June 29 by political, religious and community groups alleged that people carrying placards or wearing protest buttons were denied proper access to Memorial Day bicentennial activities in Philadelphia featuring a speech by Vice President George Bush.

The suit also charged that police spied upon participating groups. Attorney David Kairys says the suit is intended to ensure unrestricted rights to demonstrate and distribute leaflets at Independence Hall and the Liberty Bell.

Thursday's planned ceremonies, meanwhile, will be rich in symbolism.

Fifty-five lawmakers, one from each state plus five House and Senate leaders, will crowd into the Independence Hall room where the Declaration of Independence was signed 211 years ago and where George Washington presided over the 55 delegates who framed the Constitution.

July 16 was picked for the occasion because that was the day 200 years ago that the Constitutional Convention reached a landmark compromise over big and small states' interests that spawned the two-house Congress.

It was two months later, on Sept. 17, that the Constitution was signed at Independence Hall. Philadelphia's celebration of the document's bicentennial ends that day with a visit by President Reagan.

The 55 lawmakers will participate in a "roll call of states" beginning with Delaware, the first state to ratify the Constitution. Then, as many as 200 House members will head to Congress Hall for speeches about the first Congress.

It will be a tight fit, since the room was designed for 104 members — the size of the House in the 1790s. The senators will assemble in a separate room.

"The first Congress had a huge role in making the Constitution work and putting the flesh on the bare bones of that document," Smock said. "With the Bill of Rights and establishment of the War Department and the Treasury Department, it may have been the most productive legislative Congress ever."

After the Constitution was signed, Congress met in New York City in 1789. It moved to Philadelphia the following year and to Washington 10 years later.

In the spirit of the Constitution, Cawood said a soapbox has been positioned along a walkway between Independence Hall and the Liberty Bell for people to make speeches. "We get more action on that soapbox ... people espousing all kinds of causes," he said.

On Thursday, he said, the soapbox is to be moved across from the Liberty Bell so it is near — but not in the middle of — the festivities.

Among the groups planning to be present Thursday is the the National Organization for Women, which is holding its national convention in Philadelphia. The group is inviting lawmakers to attend a "run for equality" and to sign a document at the Liberty Bell in support of the Equal Rights Amendment and gay rights.

Organizers of this week's events originally wanted the entire Congress to convene in Philadelphia, but they were told that would involve too much risk, cost and red tape.

Police Union

GREENSBORO (AP) — About 50 Greensboro police officers have voted to form a union affiliated with the International Union of Police Associations, officials say.

Det. David Spagnola said after the two-hour meeting Saturday that the group will be known as the Greensboro Police Officers Association. He said the association will submit a charter to the international union, which is affiliated with the AFL-CIO.

Those who voted Saturday represented about 15 percent of the estimated 350 Greensboro police officers at or below the rank of sergeant.

Rates Must Drop

Public education is available to all, indeed required of all in the South. We are spending more than ever before on the education of our young people and exerting greater efforts to keep them in school.

Sadly the Southern Regional Education Board reports that there are more southern young people dropping out of school than there are freshmen entering all the public two-year and four year colleges and universities in the region.

Bob Scott, president of the North Carolina community college system, said not much progress is being made.

"We have poured millions of dollars into programs in an effort to stem this tide, and it's like swimming upstream," he said.

The board reports that high school students in the south are dropping out at the rate of 2,200 per day. By the end of the century the number of dropouts in the south could reach 4 million. Making the situation even more dismal for the South is the fact that the dropout rate for high school aged youths topped the national average of 29.4 percent.

On the positive side is the fact that North Carolina's dropout rate for 1985-86 was 27.7 percent which is below the national average.

Nevertheless Scott sees the problem as "terribly frustrating."

It is that. High school dropouts sometimes find productive careers. Many learn that they need more education and return to community colleges for high school equivalency. The grim reality, however, is that a person without a high school diploma faces dismal prospects of obtaining a job.

Virtually every permanent employment opportunity requires at least a high school diploma. If that is not a clear requirement, those applying without diplomas will find themselves competing with those who have completed high school.

In a nation where public education is widely available it makes no sense to be a high school dropout. It can bring a life of menial work and likely times of no work at all. That is an unchallenging life and one in which basic living standards are not met, let alone the luxuries.

We can be pleased that North Carolina is doing better than many states, but the South's school dropout rate being above the national average is not acceptable. In fact, a national dropout rate of 29.4 percent is not acceptable. We must do more to keep young people in school.

Warnings Remain

During the years of World War II posters were everywhere urging citizens to "zip your lip" and warning that "loose talk sinks ships".

Clearly eastern North Carolinians, and Americans elsewhere were being told that enemy spies were around and that information any of us might casually mention could be used to the nation's disadvantage in the war effort. It was a time of great patriotism and, of course, it was considered imperative to heed the spy warnings.

Now over 40 years later, authorities are warning that spies may be among us in North Carolina.

Law enforcement authorities say they believe foreign intelligence operations may be increasing in North Carolina. Today's spies are not stealthy characters lurking in dark alleys, however. Instead they build friendships with people they think can help them.

"Anybody who is overly friendly to you from an Eastern Bloc country may be laying the groundwork for something other than friendship," said Doug McCullough, assistant U.S. Attorney for the Eastern District of North Carolina.

"It would surprise me greatly since now this is an unrestricted area for travel by Eastern Bloc diplomats ... if attempts by them were not being made right now to contact people, to meet people, and to see if there were weaknesses they can exploit," McCullough said.

Authorities say that intelligence agents mostly gather information and it can be dull work at times.

Nevertheless the work they do is apparently important to other nations. Of the 4,000 accredited diplomats from Iron Curtain countries in the United States it is believed that 30 to 35 percent have intelligence assignments.

The world of international spying seems far removed from eastern North Carolina. Yet we are an area of large military installations. A scrap of information gleaned in one area coupled with a scrap obtained elsewhere could develop into important knowledge.

Even in these times of peace the warnings of World War II are with us.

A Chance To Calm The Gulf

WASHINGTON — Beneath the Reagan administration's plan — disputed but advancing — to take Kuwaiti tankers under American wing, a broader, more political and more positive Persian Gulf policy is struggling to get out. The interesting and ironic thing about it is that an administration described in both friendly and critical rhetoric as determined to assert American power on its own is moving to a policy based increasingly on working through and with the United Nations.

This comes about not simply through the frustration of American initiatives but, in the first instance, through an unusual overlap of short-term Soviet and American interests. The two superpowers are ready to temper their fundamental rivalry for Third World regional influence to a point to achieve their separate ends: to calm the Gulf, to hold or rebuild a relationship with both Iran and Iraq, and in particular to ensure that a rampant fundamentalist Iran does not win the war.

But this is not the only reason the administration goes to the United Nations. In a key aspect of Soviet-American Gulf competition, Moscow suddenly has an advantage. It is in touch with both sides: it arms Iraq and talks with Iran. But Washington is in touch only with Iraq. Before a nervous Washington looms the specter of another "Tashkent" — a unilateral mediation of the Iran-Iraq war similar to Moscow's mediation of the 1965 war between India and Pakistan.

Lone Soviet settlement of a war in an area of traditional Western dominance is as unwelcome to Washington as, well, as lone American mediation of the Arab-Israeli dispute now is to Moscow. Better to fold Moscow into a U.N. approach.

Why, then, does Mikhail Gorbachev not proceed with a second Tashkent? Because the Soviet reach is not all that great and because the Kremlin wants to defuse the current crisis lest the United States use it to achieve "long-harbored plans" of building up its military presence in a region on the Soviet doorstep. Moscow's latest proposal to have all non-Gulf states withdraw warships is not serious: they end a small new flier, we end a long Western predominance. But we should not altogether dismiss Soviet strategic anxieties. We are seeking new landing rights, bases, etc.

In any event, it is no sudden conversion to a philosophy of liberal internationalism that finds a conservative administration, one supposedly given to "global unilateralism," knocking at the U.N.'s door in respect to the Gulf. It is hard-headed national interest, and a touch of desperation.

The secretary of state himself is heading to the Security Council next week to cast the American vote for a resolution appealing for a cease-fire and a negotiated end to the Iran-Iraq war. The Kremlin is aboard, as are the three other council members with a veto.

No one expects Iran to buy this resolution. The ayatollahs remain resentful of the council's past one-sided pro-Iraq stance, though the council figures to start making amends by setting up an inquiry into the origins of the war. Tenders of postwar reconstruction aid are also in the cards.

The more modest hopes entertained for the Security Council resolution are that it will help launch the U.N. secretary general into a reasonably early mission to see to putting the resolution into effect. That Javier Perez de Cuellar has worked hard to make himself personally acceptable as an interlocutor in Tehran supports a cautious hope that the Iranians will not give their usual brutal rebuff to a council decision.

The American government would like to be able to threaten Iran with an arms embargo if, as expected, Iran rejects the council call for negotiation and if Perez de Cuellar fails to generate support at least for a lull in the fighting. It seems, however, that an embargo remains a long shot. Too many countries sell arms to Iran or have political hesitations.

All this leaves President Reagan moving toward the reflagging. My sense is that having started it, he should go through with it and meanwhile try to use the new dynamic of joint Soviet-American urgency to switch the focus off the navigation issue, which is a diversion, and to bear down on getting something political going through the United Nations. While he's at it, he might make sure that his government, which lags unconsciously on its U.N. dues, pays up in full.

Drawing Players Into 'Ollie's Dragnet'

WASHINGTON — In four days of testimony last week, Marine Lt. Col. Oliver L. North admitted previous lies to Congress, the attorney general, the CIA, one person who worked for him and representatives of Iran. But, he insisted, this time he was telling the truth about the Iran-contra affair.

Part of his testimony was backed up by documents. But other long passages were composed of assertions and assumptions, some unconfirmed, others already denied, about the knowledge and participation of his superiors.

When North and his personal magnetism vanish from television screens this week, he will have left a record that draws most of the key players in the Iran and contra operations more firmly into what he called "Ollie's dragnet," and outlines administration efforts to cover up the operations once the scandal broke.

North's testimony swept up the late CIA director William J. Casey, Secretary of State George P. Shultz, Attorney General Edwin Meese III, officials at the Defense Department, State Department and Central Intelligence Agency, and two previous bosses, former national security advisers John M. Poindexter and Robert C. McFarlane.

In four remarkable days, North placed Casey at the center of a closed circle within the government that secretly carried out military support for the contras when it was barred, diverted funds to the Nicaraguan rebels from proceeds of U.S. arms sales to Iran and, when the operation was discovered, systematically attempted to destroy all records and mislead Congress about what had happened.

If North's portrayal is accurate, Casey — whom North described as a father figure — could be remembered as one of the most deceptive Cabinet officers in modern times and as a man who may have irreparably damaged his friend, Ronald Reagan.

North also expressed admiration for Poindexter, saying he was "an admiral I would follow up any hill, anywhere." But his testimony also put Poindexter in a box. Next to Casey, North said, Poindexter was the individual most responsible for the activities now under investigation. He said that Poindexter, along with Casey, knew of, and by implication approved, North's destruction of records and preparation of false testimony to Congress.

If North's testimony is accurate, Poindexter misled North for 11 months about presidential approval of the diversion.

North told the panels that he went to Poindexter in January 1986 seeking specific presidential approval for the diversion idea. After telling North that "this had better never come out," Poindexter subsequently led North to believe that the project had the president's approval. But on Nov. 21, with the Iran-contra affair unraveling, Poindexter told him that the president did not know, North testified.

All that is damning testimony — but only if it is true.

"North fantasizes and mixes things up as he always has," says a high-ranking U.S. official who worked closely with him over the past several years.

This official points out that North several times claimed that the CIA did not have a Farsi speaker able to serve as translator in the secret U.S.-Iran negotiations surrounding the arms sales, so North and his group had to turn to a retired CIA official provided by Casey. In fact, this official, there were several Farsi speakers available, but none that North and others involved in the clandestine initiative would trust to participate in what the CIA bureaucracy considered a highly questionable operation.

Casey is not alive to refute any of North's assertions about his role. Neither is Vice Adm. Arthur S. Moreau Jr., assistant to the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, who North said had detailed knowledge of his activities in support of the contras in Central America, as well as of the diversion of funds from the U.S.-Iran arms sales.

Two living senior officials who were caught up in the "dragnet" last week, Meese and Shultz, vigorously challenged the accuracy of North's testimony through their spokesmen.

North initially said that Meese had knowledge of a controversial November 1985 Hawk shipment to Iran soon after it took place. But North later retreated from that position after Meese's office issued a statement saying that the attorney general did not know the United States had participated in the shipment of weapons from Israel to Iran until a year later.

Pressed by House minority chief counsel George Van Cleve, North backed away from his earlier testimony and stated that he did "not recall addressing" the November 1985 shipment when he went to the Justice Department in January 1986 to review a presidential authorization for future transactions with Iran.

North told the investigative panel that Shultz had praised him as recently as last September for his "remarkable job" in "keeping the Nicaraguan resistance alive." A Shultz spokesman later confirmed that the secretary of state had made a congratulatory statement to North but said it referred only to his job in keeping up contra morale.

Denials aside, it remains to be proven one way or the other just how much Meese, Shultz and others named by North knew about or participated in the Iran-contra activities now under intense scrutiny.

When North's testimony about individuals has been related to specific documents, in particular the entries in his spiral notebooks, its accuracy has not been questioned. For example, North was asked to comment about a notebook entry referring to an April 25, 1986, meeting with Assistant Secretary of State Elliott Abrams, at a time when U.S. military aid to the contras was banned.

The entry included a reference to Blowpipe missiles, which North, according to other documents, was attempting to obtain for the contras from Britain. North said he could not recall the discussion but did not deny having talked about Blowpipes on that occasion. Abrams has not denied it, either.

North appeared to resist implicating Abrams, the CIA's Duane Clarridge and McFarlane, but at times he seemed to go out of his way to draw in other individuals or organizations. For example, when he was asked about whether he had passed CIA intelligence data to the contras to help them militarily, he volunteered that most of the intelligence he delivered was from the Defense Department — one of the few major agencies to be relatively unscathed by the Iran-contra affair so far.

Strength For Today

Tradition has it that one day as Sir Isaac Newton sat in an orchard, an apple fell from a tree and struck him on the head. The incident started a train of thought which ended in a great discovery. As Newton pondered what had happened to him, out of this incident came the theory of gravity.

Many of the greatest inventions have sprung from apparently insignificant circumstances. Every event in life has about it the significance of Newton's falling apple. Every meeting with a friend, every chance conversation we have in the street, every miscarriage of our plans, every sorrow, every success, every disaster, has a message for us if we will only heed it.

IN THE STATE

Pedestrian Killed

CHOCOWINITY, N.C. (AP) — William Acie Carawan, 36, of Belhaven was killed at 2 a.m. Sunday on U.S. 17 near Chocowinity in Beaufort County, the Highway Patrol said.

The patrol said Carawan was lying in the roadway when he was struck by a car.

Charged

BOONE, N.C. (AP) — Two Gastonia men have been charged with first-degree murder in the shooting death of an Appalachian State University student at a fraternity party.

Jabe Vernon Hardee II, 19, of Wilmington died of a gunshot wound to the head at 3:20 a.m. Saturday after an argument at the Pi Kappa Phi fraternity house near U.S. 421 South, according to police reports and Evan Ashby, Watauga County medical examiner.

Jon Eric Clemmer, 22, and Darren Harold Waldrop, 22, both of Gastonia, were charged with first-degree murder and were being held in the Watauga County Jail with no bond, said Boone Police Chief R.Z. Tester. Neither man was an ASU student.

Goode Named

RALEIGH (AP) — Seddon "Rusty" Goode of Charlotte has been sworn to another tour of duty as a member of the state Board of Transportation.

Goode, 55, replaces John W. Harris, also of Charlotte, who resigned to accept a gubernatorial appointment as a trustee for the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Gov. Jim Martin appointed Goode, a Republican who also served on the DOT board under former Gov. Jim Hunt, to the board in early 1985. Goode resigned in October 1985, saying his work load was too great.

Relocation

CLAYTON, N.C. (AP) — A Swedish-based pharmaceutical company plans to move its research and development division to its Clayton facility in a $7 million expansion that would nearly double local employment.

KabiVitrum A.B., which makes drugs for intravenous nutrition, would add up to 50 people to its payroll of 65 and 70,000 square feet to its 22,000-square-foot plant, said Kenneth L. Krimm, the plant's manager.

Construction is scheduled to start in October, and the facility would open by January 1989. The expansion is financed by industrial revenue bonds.

Dismissals

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Mecklenburg County Superior Court Judge Frank Snepp has thrown out 82 obscenity charges against two men.

Stephen Winnick, 40, of Woodstock, Md., and Roger Griggs, 47, of Charlotte each had been charged with one count of conspiring to disseminate obscenity and 41 counts of accessory after the fact of disseminating obscenity. The indictments alleged that the materials were sold to unnamed undercover police officers between October 1985 and March 1986.

Snepp squashed all but the conspiracy charges because the indictments didn't name the undercover officers. He said he didn't want the case tried and then overturned on appeal because of defective indictments.

Mecklenburg District Attorney Peter Gilchrist said prosecutors will seek new indictments.

Stolen Banners

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Twenty U.S. Olympic Festival banners were stolen over the weekend from poles in front of competition sites and athletes' residence halls at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, officials said.

Allen Reep, director of promotions for N.C. Amateur Sports, said four of the banners, costing $28 each, were stolen Friday night, and 16 banners were taken Saturday night.

Patronage System Allows GOP To Build State Pool

By JOHN FLESHER

Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Although Gov. Jim Martin's personnel policies are a hot topic nowadays, a significant by-product of Republican control of the patronage system is taking shape almost unnoticed.

What's being talked about is whether, as Democrats charge, many of Martin's Republican appointees are ill-qualified and owe their employment solely to their political affiliation.

Martin doesn't deny using patronage, as have his predecessors, to reward supporters. But he insists that people his administration employs are suited for their posts.

As that debate rages, however, the state Republican Party quietly is increasing its supply of seasoned government officials, many of whom will be heard from long after Martin leaves office — whether in 1989 or, if he's re-elected, in 1993.

This is a godsend for a party that, in addition to suffering minority status in voter registration (Democrats outnumber Republicans by better than 2-to-1 in North Carolina), historically has had relatively few people with experience in government. Such individuals can be expected to mount credible campaigns for elective office or at least be active in party affairs.

In 1986, for example, Martin devoted hundreds of hours not only to campaigning for GOP legislative and judicial candidates, but actually finding people to run — many in areas where Democrats had reigned without challenge for decades.

A News Analysis

"People ask me what the differences were in setting up the Holshouser and Martin administrations, and I tell them the biggest thing was that when Holshouser took office he didn't have any Republicans to appoint," said Phil Kirk, Martin's chief of staff. Kirk was secretary of the Department of Human Resources under Jim Holshouser, who was the state's only Republican governor this century until Martin took office.

"This time around we had folks we could turn to who had some experience," Kirk said. "And as Governor Martin uses his appointment power, the pool of experienced Republican talent just keeps growing."

Kirk, who also served as DHR secretary under Martin before becoming chief of staff, said working in state government or serving on a regulatory board or commission is a good way to launch a political career.

"It gives you a platform to talk from and, depending on how big the board or commission or department is, some publicity and name recognition," he said.

A total of 45,202 state employees come under the governor's jurisdiction. Of course, most of those posts are for career civil servants who supposedly are not "political" appointees. In fact, fewer than 1,000 state jobs are exempt from the State Personnel Act's protections against politically motivated dismissal.

Additionally, however, the government appoints about 2,100 people to boards and commissions that regulate everything from public school curricula to use of the state fund for poor women's abortions. About 10 percent of those appointees must be recommended by professional groups, so the governor can't always choose whomever he wants.

Already, many of Martin's appointees are seen as possible candidates for the Legislature or even statewide offices. Kirk, for example, was said to be pondering a bid for lieutenant governor until assuming his current post. Tommy Rhodes, secretary of Natural Resources and Community Development, also has been mentioned for that office.

"You have a governor who is interested in building the party, and that can't be anything but a plus," Kirk said. "If he's re-elected, of course, he'll be able to build on what he's done so far."

Democrats have accused Martin of spending more energy and time building the GOP than running state government and developing legislative initiatives. But state Sen. Russell Walker, D-Randolph, state Democratic chairman from 1979 to 1983, says Martin has enjoyed only limited success.

"I don't see that many new faces in his administration — a lot are carryovers from the Holshouser years," Walker said.

Walker, who last week accused Martin of awarding jobs to "political cronies" for the purpose of "building and defending his political empire," says Martin has failed to make the GOP a major threat to break the Democratic Party's grip on state government.

N.C. Pivotal State In Waste Site Selections

RALEIGH (AP) — Experts say other states that have been picked as hosts in regional compacts are watching North Carolina as it considers whether to pull out of the Southeast Compact to store its own low-level nuclear wastes.

"All eyes are on those states that have been designated host states to see what they'll do," Holmes Brown, a national authority on the compact system told the Greensboro News & Record. "If any host state pulls out, it's going to have an impact on other regions. They'll say: 'they did it, why can't we?'"

Congress established the compact system in 1980 to encourage states to band together to handle their low-level radioactive nuclear waste, so as to keep down the number of nuclear dump sites. If North Carolina sets off a domino effect with other host states, Congress would likely have to step in again.

"It is somewhat of a tenuous system," said Brown, who was the nuclear waste expert for the National Governors Association from 1979 to 1986 and is now a consultant. "The issue involves a great deal of emotion. If a lot of people got the idea that the system was falling apart, we might see a rush of people pulling out and realigning."

The eight-state Southeast Compact was the first in the country. Last year, the compact selected North Carolina to be the host state for a regional disposal facility.

But Rep. Joe Mavretic, D-Edgemore, has introduced a bill in the North Carolina General Assembly, calling for this state's withdrawal from the compact. The measure narrowly passed a House committee Wednesday, setting the stage for what is expected to be an intense battle on the House floor this week.

Marvin Resnikoff, research director for the Radioactive Waste Campaign, a New York-based environmental group that opposes the compact system, said North Carolina's action could trigger a much-needed congressional review.

"If North Carolina pulls out, I think it would put pressure on the federal government to rethink the compact law," Resnikoff said.

Resnikoff said the biggest problem with the present compact system is that host states don't have control over their waste dumps, so they can't guarantee that the most environmentally sound technology will be used.

Michigan and Kansas are the two states most clearly affected by North Carolina's decision.

Two weeks ago, the Midwest Compact selected Michigan as the host state for its regional nuclear waste dump. The decision stirred immediate controversy in the Michigan legislature, which passed a resolution calling for a moratorium on the waste site selection process until Congress reviews the compact system.

Greg Larson, executive director of the Midwest Compact, said he is watching what happens in North Carolina "with great interest," but he says he doubts that Michigan will pull out of the compact.

"The state legislature and the governor enacted the compact," Larson said. "I don't think that Michigan will shirk its responsibility now."

In Kansas, which is expected to be chosen the host state for the Central State Compact later this year, compact opponents are cheering North Carolina on.

"The more states that say the legal arguments support withdrawing and going it alone, the more it helps our cause," said Vicki Foth of the Kansas National Resource Council, an environmental group that is lobbying the legislature to pull out of the compact.

Radio Backs Col. North

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — A Fayetteville radio station has started a campaign to encourage Lt. Col. Oliver North for president. Officials say if they can't get North to run, they can at least let him know that people admire him.

WKML-FM began distributing bumper stickers and T-shirts Saturday, urging a presidential bid for the former National Security Council aide. The group also hopes to hold rallies for North, who has been testifying at Congressional hearings on the diversion of money from Iranian arms sales to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels.

Dana Matthews, a member of the newly formed Artists for North Organization, compared North's actions to those of patriots involved in the American Revolution.

"We compared him to people, when our country was formed, when we fought the British and left England," Matthews said. "We broke laws too and did things for democracy because we believed in it. It was important enough to do those things."

"Oliver North, in this same sense, told a few white lies. He also felt democracy was important and should have won out," Matthews said.

Matthews also said North was fighting for rights for those in Nicaragua.

High Winds Strike Tabor City Area

By The Associated Press

What witnesses described as a tornado swept through Tabor City, causing more than $220,000 in damages to a tobacco warehouse, a sewing plant and several homes, authorities say.

Bobby Cribb said he was huddled in his pick-up truck, just outside his mobile home, when he saw a funnel cloud touch down on his storage building Sunday night.

"It was big, real wide," Cribb said. "It blew the roof (from the storage building) apart."

"It came up sudden like," Cribb said. "I was ready to get out of there."

A pilot flying in the area also reported the funnel cloud to the National Weather Service, but weather service officials said they could not confirm the storm was a twister.

Shingles were blown from several roofs in the area near Cribb's home, and the storm-damage trail skipped more than a mile to the southeast where the Sew It Seams plant was hit.

Holes that appeared punched through the roof and ceiling in the sewing plant allowed rain to pour in, although there appeared to be no damage to equipment or stock, said Sew It Seams owner Leonard Moore.

"If we can get the building dried in, we can probably get everything dried out and get back to work in just a few days," Moore said. He said the company's 85 workers would be out of work temporarily.

The storm left a gaping hole in the front of the R.C. Coleman Warehouse. Owner Joe Coleman said the damage would not keep him from taking part in the Aug. 4 tobacco market opening.

"We've got lots of room in the back we can use," Coleman said. Offices for the warehouse were flooded, and part of the roof at the front of the building was blown off.

Chrystal Stowe, a spokeswoman for the N.C. Department of Crime Control and Public Safety, said the storm also hit two houses, a mobile home and three cars, causing an estimated $223,000 in total damages.

No one was injured in the storm, Ms. Stowe said.

The reported funnel cloud was part of a line of severe thunderstorms that swept through Columbus County about 6:15 p.m. Other parts of the state also reported violent storms Sunday.

In Catawba County at 10 p.m., the sheriff's department reported several trees down, golf ball size hail and power outages in Conover and Maiden.

Wedding Vows Said Sunday

The wedding ceremony of Coleen Anita Lemmah of Greenville and Albert Christopher Ballard of New Bern took place Sunday afternoon at two o'clock. The Rev. Michael Clay conducted the double ring ceremony in St. Peter's Catholic Church.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Walter Ernest Lemmah of Greenville and Mr. and Mrs. Albert J. Ballard Jr. of New Bern.

Virginia Baker Kossol of Greenville was matron of honor and the maid of honor was Martha Carla Tadlock of New Bern. Bridesmaids included Serena Whelan of Stoneham, Va., Susan Nicholds of Collierville, Tenn., and Eraine Oakley of Greenville, all sisters of the bride, Cindi Nielsen of Ftaleigh, Debbie Whichard of Newport News, Va., Kimberly R. Waller of Winston-Salem, Sharon Connolly Jones of Wilmington, and Christi Norris Fillippelli of Kinston.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers included Gary A. Ballard of New Bern, brother of the bridegroom, Larry G. Oakley of Greenville, brother-in-law of the bride, Robert Ippock of Dunn, Robert Kemp of New Bern, Edward Koonce and Jeffrey Davenport, both of Raleigh, and Horace Gray Ballard of Richlands, cousin of the bridegroom.

Organist Sharon Irwin, vocalists Mary Arellano and Jeff Krantz and flutist Ms. Arellano presented a program of wedding music.

Given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore a floor length gown with a chapel train of traditional bridal satin and silk Venise lace. The bodice featured a Queen Anne neckline, leg o'mutton sleeves and a basque waistline. Silk Venise lace motifs with sequins and seed pearls appliqued the bodice and sleeves. Bridal buttons fastened the back of the gown. Garlands of silk Venise lace bordered the hemline of the skirt and train. Scattered lace motifs etched with sequins and pearls accented the hemline of the train. She wore a waltz length bridal veil of illusion with a blusher adorned with rosebuds. She carried a bouquet of white roses, stephanotis and ivy.

The honor attendants wore royal blue moire taffeta tea length dresses styled with short pouf sleeves and diamond cut-out backs. The waistlines featured cummerbunds with self-tie bows in back. They carried bouquets in shades of pink composed of miniature carnations and pink roses. The bridesmaids were dressed identically.

A reception was held at the Sheraton-Greenville. Carolyn Ballard presided at the guest register. Sara Fordham and Lucille Lowery poured punch and cake was served by Mary Saieed and Carmon Albea.

The couple will live in New Bern after a wedding trip to San Juan, Puerto Rico.

The bride, a graduate of East Carolina University, is merchandise manager at J.C. Penney. The bridegroom, a graduate of Atlantic Christian College, is vice president of A.J. Ballard Tire and Oil Co.

Several showers and luncheons, a pig-picking and picnic supper honored the couple before the wedding.

A wedding breakfast was given by Mr. and Mrs. Durwood Arant and a rehearsal dinner was given by the bridegroom's parents at the Shear-ton.

Joyner-Allen Vows Said On Saturday

FARMVILLE — Hazel Elizabeth Allen became the bride of Donald Ray Joyner Saturday at 3 p.m. in The Kingdom Hall of Jehovah's Witnesses.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. James Bert Allen and Mr. and Mrs. Albert Donald Joyner, all of Route 2, Farmville.

Robert Joyner of Plymouth, brother of the bridegroom, officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The bride, escorted by her father, wore a formal gown of white polyester sheen and alencon lace. The bodice was designed with a high neckline accented with illusion of lace encrusted with pearls. The long fitted sleeves of alencon lace were enhanced at the shoulder by short Victorian puff sleeves. The full skirt flowed into a chapel train edged by three layers of ruffles. She wore a fingertip length veil of bridal illusion attached to a Camelot cap covered in alencon lace and pearls. The bride carried a cascading bouquet of summer mixed flowers with white roses.

Mrs. Robert Joyner of Plymouth, sister-in-law of the bridegroom, was honor attendant. She wore a formal gown of lavender taffeta with a sheer overlay fashioned with a sweetheart neckline and short puff sleeves. She carried a cascading bouquet of painted daisies and carnations.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers included Wayne Dunn of Greenville, cousin of the bride, Kai Allen of Largo, Fla., nephew of the bride, William Ray of Wilson, and Alphonza Johnson of Farmville.

The bride's mother wore an aqua street length dress with short sleeves and the mother of the bridegroom wore a street length blue polyester sheen dress with a lace overlay. Both wore corsages of white roses.

Mrs. Alphonza Johnson of Farmville presided at the guest register. Mr. and Mrs. O.S. Joyner of Farmville directed the wedding.

The bride's parents entertained at a reception held in the Farmville Community Center. Edna Stancil, aunt of the bride, Brenda Stancil, cousin of the bride, and Grace Hopkins poured punch. All are from Farmville. Mrs. John James and Mrs. Wayne Dunn of Greenville, cousins of the bride, served wedding cake. Others assisting were Audrey Jones, Ka-Nesbia Phillips, Mrs. Randy Pollard and Mrs. Ralph

MRS. JOYNER

Shirley, all of Farmville.

The bride is employed by Empire Brushes, Inc. in Greenville and the bridegroom is employed by Fast Fare in Wilson.

The couple will live on Route 2, Farmville, after a wedding trip to unannounced points.

Crying Children Sound Good

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: You will surely have the wrath of God come down on you for telling a woman: "To marry because you want to be a mother is a poor reason for marriage."

Dear God, lady, that is the principal reason for a woman to marry! If you don't believe me, read your Bible. You obviously hate children, and never had any of your own because when another reader complained about young children making a noise in church, you said, "Any good shepherd would take out the bleating lamb after the first bleat."

Not at my wedding you wouldn't, you lousy shepherd! If you were as young as your picture in the paper falsely implies, you would know what I am talking about.

I am a 63-year-old man who would rather hear children crying (or laughing) in church than listen to the sermon. — TEXAS JIM

DEAR JIM: In biblical times, we were enjoined to "go forth and multiply" because the earth needed to be inhabited. Today, with 5 billion people on this planet, overpopulation has become a major threat. And as for children who disrupt church services: One cannot blame small children for becoming bored and restless. But most churches have playrooms where children can be left with competent "sitters."

So if you prefer the sound of children's cries and laughter, I suggest you skip church and go to a playground where you won't be bothered with a sermon you didn't want to hear in the first place.

P.S. I'm the mother of two, twice a grandmother, and the picture is relatively recent.

DEAR ABBY: Upon reading your column about a mother who gave away a gift her daughter had given her, let me tell you how I feel about it: Many times I have given costly gifts to family — sons, daughters and parents. I've often bought them things that I would love to have had myself, but felt I couldn't afford. I would be much less hurt if they would tell me honestly that they had no use for my gift and would I mind if they gave it to so-and-so, or would I like to have it back?

I once gave my daughter a very nice gift, and the next time I saw it, it was at her sister-in-law's. I was very hurt as I would rather have had it myself.

Would it be wrong when giving a gift to say, "If you don't want this, will you please return it to me?" — HURT IN FLORIDA

DEAR HURT: Once a gift is given, it belongs to the recipient to do with what he or she chooses.

DEAR ABBY: Why do churches, temples and synagogues keep their doors locked when a service is not being held? Why must prayer in a house of God be confined to an hour or two on certain days of the week?

So many times I have awakened in the early hours of the morning trembling from a nightmare, wanting desperately to comfort myself in the shelter of a house of God, but I knew the doors would be locked to me.

Yes, I know that God is everywhere, but there are times when one feels the need to sit and be calm and comforted in a place devoted to his love. Thanks, and love. — MARIA

DEAR MARIA: I believe there are still some churches and temples whose doors are open for those who want to come at odd hours. However, in recent years, due to increased theft and vandalism, many churches have had to lock their doors because they can't afford guards around the clock.

several arms-for-hostages swaps, testified that he does not believe the Reagan administration had made "concessions to terrorists."

North, testifying for the fifth day at the nationally televised congressional Iran-Contra hearings, also said anew that he never violated the law in his tenure at the National Security Council.

"I do not believe that any of us are above the law," said the man who last week admitted shredding documents, lying to Congress in early investigations and misleading high administration officials about his role in the affair.

Mitchell had the right to question North for the first hour of the morning session, and he did so in calm, measured tones. North, for his part, refrained from the type of patriotic appeal that marked his testimony last week.

At one point, when Mitchell asked him whether the administration had complied with the law on covert action before aiding the Contras secretly, North objected, saying "I'm not sure that it pays to have a professional lawyer and an experienced jurist debating with lieutenant colonel infantry officers on this issue."

But moments later, North cited a case known as Curtiss-Wright, a Supreme Court ruling in the 1930s, to justify a president's prerogative to conduct secret foreign policy negotiations.

That produced a rejoinder from Mitchell, who said the case "said no such thing. It involved public matters. ... (It) was on a completely different factual situation and there is no such statement in the Curtiss Wright case."

That provoked the only interruption of the morning from Brendan Sullivan, North's attorney, who told Mitchell that the committee would be better served by a different line of questioning.

There was no discussion at the hearing of the document that Inouye referred to in a weekend broadcast interview. He said the memo, written by North and dated Sept. 15, 1986, notes that Poindexter told Reagan of plans for use of the "residuals" from the arms sale to undertake covert operations around the world.

There was no discussion at the hearing of the document that Inouye referred to in a weekend broadcast interview. He said the memo, written by North and dated Sept. 15, 1986, notes that Poindexter told Reagan of plans for use of the "residuals" from the arms sale to undertake covert operations around the world.

Inouye, chairman of the Senate investigating committee, said the operations were described in the document as being out of the reach of Congress and normal channels of accountability.

"The question is, in what detail" did Poindexter tell the president of the operation, said Sen. Warren Rudman, R-N.H., the panel's vice chairman, appearing Sunday with Inouye on the CBS program "Face the Nation."

It was Inouye who gaveled the committees into session for another day of questioning North, without any immediate reference to the memo.

ously reluctant to voice such condemnation."

A score of tankers have been hit at least twice. One ship, the 176,000-ton Iranian tanker Dena, has been hit five times.

In the last attack July 1, the Dena was set afire when an Iraqi plane fired an Exocet missile into it as it shuttled crude oil from the heavily bombed Kharg terminal in the northern gulf to makeshift terminals further south.

Iraq carries out most of its air attacks with French-built Mirage F-1 fighter-bombers, which fire sea-skimming, radar-guided Exocets into the Iranian tankers.

This is the way most people look at funeral prearrangement.

Granted, it isn't the cheeriest of subjects. But, considering the benefits it offers, funeral prearrangement does merit just a little attention.

The puzzling thing is why so many people carefully avoid even thinking about it. The fact is, prearrangement takes very little time. Moreover, funeral prearrangement makes matters infinitely more simple for family and friends in the long run. And ultimately, it's your responsibility—yours alone.

So take off your blinders. Call us at S.G. Wilkerson & Sons to arrange a private consultation.

Moye Leads Pitt's Win

KINSTON — Tom Moye scattered nine hits over nine innings and also cracked a two-run homer keying Pitt County American Legion Post 39 past Kinston, 5-3, to wrap up a best of five American Legion Area 1 baseball playoff series Sunday.

Pitt travels to Snow Hill tonight to open second-round playoff action.

Post 43 drew first blood, going ahead 1-0 after the opening inning. Dave Hinson singled and scored on Billy Burns reach off an error.

The scored remained that way until the fifth when Pitt pushed across three runs in the top of the inning.

Jason Galloway started things off with a single. David Daniels followed with a double that drove in Galloway and knotted the score at 1-1. Moye then crushed a homer over the left field wall that put Post 39 up 3-1.

Kinston came right back and scored a run in the bottom of the fifth to pull within 3-2. Hinson reached on an error and scored on a single by Burns.

Pitt went back ahead by two runs when Shane Adams reached and scored on consecutive errors.

Kinston blew a chance to rally by stranding three baserunners in the sixth. Post 43 did push across a run in the eighth when Felton Mason walked, stole second and scored on Neal Russell's single. Kinston also left three men on after the run had scored.

Pitt moved out to its final lead of 5-3 when Galloway reached on an error to open the ninth. He went to second on a grounder by Eric Jarman before scoring on Daniels' second double of the day.

Moye struck out eight while walking only one.

Daniels and Moye had two hits apiece to lead Pitt. Russell and Rick Killinger led Kinston with two hits apiece.

JIM VALVANO

Two For The Yankees

Valvano Ends Speculation, Will Remain At N.C. State

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina State basketball coach Jim Valvano says for now he will be content to be a fan of the New York Knicks and not their head coach.

"I want to end any speculation concerning myself and the New York Knicks coaching position," Valvano said Sunday in a prepared statement released through the N.C. State Sports Information Department. "I did converse with the Knicks on a couple of occasions, but I want to make it clear that at no time did they offer me the (head coaching) position."

"At this time, I would like to state that I am definitely remaining at N.C. State University," he said. "I have the utmost respect for the New York Knicks and their management. I will always remain a Knicks fan and wish them the best of luck."

Valvano, from Queens, N.Y., had been mentioned as a possible replacement for fired Knicks Coach Bob Hill, who was fired April 20 at the conclusion of the regular season.

Other prospects for the job have been former Dallas Mavericks Coach Dick Motta, University of Kansas Coach Larry Brown, Boston Celtics assistant Jimmy Rodgers, Providence College's Rick Pitino and former Milwaukee Coach Don Nelson, who has since been hired as Golden State's player personnel director.

Brown, who signed a new contract with Kansas in May after several months of discussions with the Knicks, said Sunday he's not moving, either.

"I'm going to be here," he told the New York Daily News. "I made that decision when I signed my contract in May."

"I can't say I'm withdrawing my name as a candidate simply because I never considered myself a candidate since the moment I signed to stay here."

The Daily News reported today that Bianchi, who has ties with Brown dating back to their days in the American Basketball Association, called Brown last Monday to see if he was still interested in the job.

Sources said Brown, who previously coached in the NBA with the New Jersey Nets, told Bianchi he would listen to an offer, but was not contacted again.

Rodgers' hopes dimmed considerably last week when the Knicks refused to meet the Celtics' demand of a No. 1 draft choice as compensation.

Former Phoenix assistant coach Al Bianchi was hired as general manager of the Knicks on Wednesday, ending a 12-week search after Scotty Stirling and Hill were fired the same day.

Valvano led the Wolfpack to the Atlantic Coast Conference championship last season with a victory over North Carolina in the ACC Tournament. Valvano also led N.C. State to the 1983 NCAA national championship over Houston.

"My family and I are extremely happy at N.C. State and I look forward to the challenge ahead," Valvano said.

Schmidt's Rebound Earns A Victory

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

It didn't take Baltimore pitcher Dave Schmidt long to redeem himself after one of the worst performances of his career — only 42 hours, in fact.

"I wanted to erase Friday from my mind," said Schmidt, who bounced back from a nightmare outing to pitch a brilliant two-hit, 5-0 victory over the same Minnesota Twins Sunday.

Schmidt had started Friday night's game against the Twins, but was only able to get one out and gave up four runs in a game that ended in a 13-12 Orioles' victory. But Sunday, Schmidt had a perfect game for 5 2-3 innings en route to his third career shutout and second this season.

"A lot of times in my career, I've pitched my best after my worst," Schmidt said. "I like to think of myself as a competitor, and I don't like to be embarrassed. Friday was embarrassing. It was one of the lowest points in my career."

In other American League action Sunday, it was New York 6, Chicago 2; Toronto 3, Kansas City 2; California 5, Detroit 4; Seattle 6, Boston 1; Milwaukee 4, Oakland 3, and Texas 7, Cleveland 6.

Baltimore Manager Cal Ripken had told Schmidt after he was knocked out Friday night that he would start again Sunday.

"It's unusual for a guy to come back on Sunday after pitching Friday night, especially in hot weather like this (93 degrees)," Ripken said. "But he didn't pitch long Friday, and we'd used so many people in our bullpen in Friday's 13-12 game that we needed someone. There's no other way to describe his performance (Sunday) other than outstanding. He had great control of all his pitches. We certainly didn't expect a nine-inning shutout from him."

Schmidt, 9-2, pitched to just one batter over the minimum in setting his career high for victories. He struck out seven, didn't walk a batter and was perfect until Greg Gagne lofted a soft single to left. Al Newman led off the seventh with a line single to right for the Twins' other hit.

Mike Young, who entered the game in a 1-for-20 slump, hit two two-run homers, his eighth and ninth of the season.

Yankees 6, White Sox 2

Henry Cotto homered, doubled twice and drove in four runs, Don Mattingly homered for the fifth consecutive game and Tommy John pitched a six-hitter over seven innings to lead New York over Chicago.

Cotto tagged homer-prone Floyd Bannister, 4-8, for his fifth home run of the season following Gary Ward's one-out single in the second inning, giving the Yankees a 2-1 lead.

Cotto doubled two more runs across in the sixth and later scored on Rick Cerone's suicide squeeze bunt. Mattingly hit his 14th homer and sixth in the last five games off Jim Winfield in the seventh inning.

John, 8-3, gave up a leadoff home run to Jerry Royster in the first inning and settled down until the seventh, when he gave up another run on Ken Williams' triple.

Blue Jays 3, Royals 2

Jesse Barfield snapped a 2-2 tie with a run-scoring single in the seventh inning and Jim Clancy notched a career-high 11 strikeouts as Toronto beat Kansas City.

With two out and Kelly Gruber on first on a fielder's choice, Kansas City catcher Larry Owen allowed Gruber to advance to third on a wild throw up the first-base line off a pitchout. Barfield then singled to left to drive in the winning run.

Clancy, 10-6, walked just one batter as he checked the Royals on six hits in 7

Horton Wins Ninth Straight

By The Associated Press

The St. Louis Cardinals' pitching staff has withstood a broken leg, a fractured foot, and a sore elbow this season with a lot of heart.

Last Friday, the Cardinals found out Danny Cox, 8-3, suffered a broken foot when he was hit by a line drive. That development brought Ricky Horton out of the committee room, known as the Cardinal bullpen, and into the starting rotation.

Horton responded with his ninth consecutive victory Sunday as St. Louis beat visiting San Francisco 3-2 for its 10th win in 11 games. The Cardinals enter the All-Star break with a 56-30 record and a nine-game lead over second-place Montreal in the National League East.

Horton, 5-0, allowed four hits in 6 1-3 innings in only his third start of the season.

The Cardinals lost ace left-hander John Tudor on April 19 when he sustained a broken leg in a freak dugout collision with New York catcher Barry Lyons. St. Louis called up rookie left-hander Joe Magrane who won five straight games before landing on the disabled list with a sore elbow.

To fill the spots caused by injuries, the Cardinals signed Lee Tunnell and called up Greg Mathews and Dave LaPoint from the minor leagues. Without Cox and Tudor, the Cards No. 1 pitcher is 37-year-old Bob Forsch, 8-3.

And now, Horton will play a prominent role as the Cardinals try to hang on to their big lead despite the injuries.

"No matter how well you're going, I still think it's nice to take some time off," Horton said of the upcoming All-Star break. "It's certainly a positive note to end the first half on, but that's just half a season and we need to pick up the momentum again."

On Sunday, Terry Pendleton homered, Willie McGee had three hits and a run batted in and Jack Clark drove in his major league-leading 86th run to pace the Cardinals' eight-hit attack.

Mets 5, Astros 2

Howard Johnson hit his 20th homer to snap a sixth-inning tie and Ron Darling pitched six-hit ball for 7 2-3 innings as New York defeated Houston at the Astrodome.

Johnson's home run tied Charlie Smith's club record for homers in a season by a third baseman. Smith hit 20 in 1964.

Darling, 4-6, struck out seven en route to his second straight victory after losing six in a row. Jesse Orosco finished for his 13th save.

After winning three of four against the Astros, the Mets stood 47-40 at the All-Star break compared to 59-25 last year.

Braves 9, Phillies 3

Gary Roenicke, making his 20th start of the season, drove in three runs with a home run and a double to help Atlanta beat visiting Philadelphia.

"I knew it would happen if I got the at-bats," Roenicke said. "I have not had the at-bats that I should have had over the past two or three years."

Roenicke's fifth homer, his fourth in six games, came off reliever Doug Bair in the sixth and scored Ken Oberkell, giving Atlanta an 8-3 lead.

Roenicke's run-scoring double was off starter Bruce Ruffin, 6-7, during the Braves' four-run fifth.

Expos 4, Reds 5

Bob Sebra and Andy McGaffigan combined on a three-hitter and Hubie Brooks doubled home the go-ahead run as Montreal defeated host Cincinnati for its third straight victory.

The triumph gave the Expos their best record of the season at 47-39, the first time they've been eight games over .500.

Montreal scored twice in the sixth off starter Guy Hoffman, 7-4, highlighted by Brooks' double, to overcome a 2-1 deficit and send the first-place Reds to their sixth loss in seven games.

The Reds have led the NL West since May 29 despite a 29-33 record since May 5.

Dodgers 12, Cubs 0

Bob Welch pitched a four-hitter and Mickey Hatcher drove in four runs with a homer and two-run single as Los Angeles routed Chicago at Wrigley Field.

Welch, 9-5, won for the first time since June 2, striking out five and walking one.

The Dodgers managed only nine hits but Chicago pitchers Les Lancaster, 2-1, Ron Davis and Ed Lynch walked eight. John Shelby and Ken Landreaux also homered for Los Angeles.

Pirates 4, Padres 2

Bobby Bonilla became the second player to homer into Three Rivers Stadium's right field upper-deck seats, a two-run shot in the fourth inning, as Pittsburgh beat San Diego.

Mike Dunne, 4-4, won for the first time in his last four decisions by allowing two runs and seven hits over 6 1-3 innings. John Smiley worked out of two-on, two-out jam in the seventh inning and pitched one inning before Brett Gideon came on to earn his first save.

Bonilla hit a pitch from Eric Show three rows deep into the upper-deck stands, his seventh homer of the season. Bonilla's shot was the first into the right field upper tier since former Pirates slugger Willie Stargell hit the fourth and last of his upper-deck shots on May 31, 1973, against the Atlanta Braves.

Sliding Under

Montreal Expo baserunner Reid Nichols is safe at home as he slips under the legs of Cincinnati Red catcher Bo Diaz during sixth inning action of their National League contest Sunday. Nichols scored on a single by Tim Wallach. (AP Laserphoto)

Player Wins Open, Looks To Muirfield

FAIRFIELD, Conn. (AP) — With the U.S. Senior Open title in hand, Gary Player heads across the ocean in quest of two British Opens.

After winning the U.S. Senior Open by a record six strokes over Doug Sanders Sunday at the Brooklawn Country Club course, the 51-year-old South African rushed off to catch a flight to London for the British Open, which is being played this week at Muirfield, Scotland. That's the British Open for the regular tour.

"I'm playing the British Senior Open in two weeks time and I only wish I had a few more days at the British Open itself," he said. "I feel I'm playing good enough to win it. But now I'll only have two days there before it starts and with that time change, it will be difficult."

All told, Player has now won three major championships on the Senior Tour. He won nine on the regular tour.

"I know in my heart that I could still win major championships on the regular tour, but I suppose my ambition now is to win the majors on the senior tour," he conceded after shooting a final-round 66 Sunday.

The U.S. Senior Open victory was the third leg of the Senior Grand Slam he has won in only his second full year on the over-50-year-old tour. He won the Senior PGA Championship last year and the Senior Tournament Players Championship last month.

It took him eight years to win all the Grand Slam events on the regular tour. But with the Senior British Open just two weeks away, he has a chance to accomplish the feat on the Senior Tour in a year and a half.

"To have the U.S. Open in my trophy cabinet at home and now to have the U.S. Senior Open and senior PGA and the senior TPC is a great thrill," he said.

Yankees Acquire Trout From Cubs

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Yankees, seeking to bolster their inconsistent starting pitching, acquired left-hander Steve Trout from the Chicago Cubs on Sunday for three pitchers now in the minors.

Trout, who pitched shutouts in his last two starts, appeared upset when told of the trade.

"I've got nothing to say," an obviously angry Trout said Sunday after the Cubs' 12-0 loss to the Los Angeles Dodgers at Chicago.

"I knew nothing about it," added

GTA Wins

WASHINGTON — Greenville Tennis Association took a 6-1 win over Washington Sunday.

GTA took wins in all of the singles matches before Washington won the number one doubles match. GTA came back to win the final doubles match to sweep all but one match.

Ben Johnson (G) Tom Richter, 1-6 6-4, 6-3
Bobby Short (G) Mike Sullivan 6-3, 7-5
Marvin Hardy (G) Jimmy Bryant 6-1, 6-1
Nelson Staton (G) Wayne Cox 6-1, 6-2

McCumber Wins The Busch Classic

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — Even though Mark McCumber expected to win again on the PGA Tour, he didn't expect the manner in which it finally came.

"Golf's funny," McCumber said Sunday after his one-shot victory over Bobby Clampett in the Anheuser-Busch Golf Classic. "Sometimes you miss a four-footer and the next time you make a 30-footer. I do believe in the course of a year and a career, it evens out. Mine happened to even out on No. 15 real quick."

When McCumber and Clampett walked to the green of the par-5, 506-yard hole during Sunday's final round, McCumber led Clampett by one stroke. Both faced long eagle putts.

"I wanted to two-putt. I expected to two-putt," McCumber said of his 30-foot effort.

"When I hit it, I said, 'Well, I've at least got the two-putt,'" McCumber said. "And then the ball was just dead right in the center of the hole."

Clampett missed his eagle putt, and although he made the birdie, McCumber's two-stroke advantage was too great to overcome.

Clampett sank a four-foot birdie putt on the par-4 16th hole, but McCumber parred the last three holes to secure the victory.

"I feel very fortunate just to be here," McCumber, 35, said. "Bobby played absolutely beautifully coming down the stretch. He played with a lot of heart."

McCumber shot a 5-under-par 66 Sunday for a 72-hole total of 267, 17 under par on the 6,776-yard Kingsmill Golf Club layout.

The victory, the fifth of McCumber's career but his first since the 1985 Doral-Eastern Open, was worth $110,160 from the $612,000 purse. It pushed McCumber's season earnings to $217,415 and his career winnings to $1,099,215, making him the 78th millionaire on the tour.

Clampett, who missed a 35-foot birdie putt on the par-4 18th that would have forced a playoff, finished the round at 68 and the tournament at 268.

"I played well all week long. I gave it my best," Clampett said. "I thought 16 under would be the winning score."

Clampett, whose only victory came at the 1982 Southern Open, won $66,096, the largest paycheck of his career.

"It's the first time I've played four rounds in the 60s in some time," said Clampett, who completely overhauled his swing three years ago.

Scott Hoch, with a final-round 69, was two strokes behind Clampett.

John Cook was fourth at 271 after a 72 Sunday. Cook had started the day with the lead at 14 under, one stroke ahead of Clampett and two in front of McCumber.

7 Hoop Players Are Added To Festival

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Seven basketball players were added to U.S. Olympic Festival rosters, including University of North Carolina incoming freshman King Rice, officials with the Amateur Basketball Association of the United States of America said Sunday.

Rice, a 6-foot guard from Binghamton, N.Y., will join Kentucky's 6-6 forward Eric Manuel on the South squad, ABAUSA Chairman Dave Gavitt said.

Lincoln Minor, a 6-3 guard from the University of Kansas and Louisville's 7-1 center Felton Spencer will play on the East team.

Rounding out the West roster are Perry Carter, a 6-8 forward from Ohio State; Bryant Walton, a 6-4 forward from the University of California at Berkeley; and Kentucky's 6-11 center LeRon Ellis.

The men's basketball competition begins on Saturday, July 18 at the Dean E. Smith Student Activities Center on the campus of the University of North Carolina.

Baywood Gets Win

Baywood Racquet Club took a 6-1 win over Snow Hill in Roanoke Tennis League action Sunday.

FOCUS

Take A Deep Breath

This new do-it-yourself "breathalyzer" lets drivers determine if they have had too much to drink. Granules in the tube turn darker when a person who is legally drunk breathes on them. The device might have come in handy in Europe in the mid-1300s. Drunkenness then was a major problem because people believed that strong drink could ward off bubonic plague — the Black Death. Alcohol, however, had no such effect on the disease, which was spread by rats.

DO YOU KNOW — If a beverage is 100 proof, what percent alcohol does it contain?

FRIDAY'S ANSWER — Cheyenne is located in Wyoming.

Horoscope

From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY JULY 14

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Later in the day and evening you may encounter annoying obstacles, so start early, make thorough plans and follow through with them before your patience runs out.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Avoid becoming involved in a clandestine situation. Ideas for expansion can be handled quite successfully.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Don't harp on a moot point with your mate, as it could cause big problems. Control your thoughts carefully.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): You could be of real service to a friend who needs support. Rest up in the evening, you may be up late tonight.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Try not to upset an old contact this evening. Changing your routines will give you more freedom.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): Be cautious about a new leisure activity that may cause financial stress. Don't take any risks this evening.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): A fine understanding can be reached with an associate, but don't let anyone control your opinions or family life.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Take stock of your situation and beautify your surroundings. If you go out tonight, drive carefully and stay alert.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): There is a possibility of damage to your property. Bring your creative ideas down to a practical level.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): The family may be thinking more clearly than you, so don't disagree with their ideas. Clean up before guests arrive.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Steer clear of people who may depress you tonight. Be sure to make all of your communications crystal clear.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Spend as much time as possible with your mate today. Health problems may be more in your mind than you think.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Work quietly today, and don't take any risks in public. Be sociable this evening, but ask no favors of others.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he, or she, will grasp the importance of details in any situation, so a fine organizational ability is indicated. If given a good academic education, your child has the potential for great financial success. Give him or her early ethical training, and make sure of a good diet.

"The Stars impel; they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠Q6 ♥AKJ72 ♦AQ72 ♣95

The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♥	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♦	Pass	3 ♣	Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—The lazy bid is three no trump. However, that disregards slam possibilities. You have a very good hand, but partner doesn't know that yet. Since he did not bid no trump, you should temporize by taking a preference to three spades. Partner's reaction will help you place the contract.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠K984 ♥A1063 ♦J72 ♣95

The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♥	Pass	2 ♥	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	?

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

What action do you take?

A.—Despite your display of weakness, partner has made a move toward game. The double fit has improved your hand enormously. Be a dutiful partner and jump to four hearts.

Q.—3 As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠7 ♥AQJ32 ♦AJ63 ♣KJ5

The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♥	1 ♠	Pass	Pass

What action do you take?

A.—You have a very good hand, capable of playing in any one of three suits, and with good defensive values. The one action that will convey such information to partner is a double. Since he has not yet bid, your double is for takeout, not penalties.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠95 ♥863 ♦J2 ♣AQJ982

The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
2 NT	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Your first duty is to tell partner that you have a sub-minimum two-over-one response. To do so, simply rebid three clubs.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠85 ♥Q98742 ♦Q6 ♣1032

Partner opens the bidding with one no trump. What do you respond?

A.—Even though you have a six-card suit, you need more than two queens to offer play for game opposite a no trump opening bid. However, it's your duty to play in the best contract, so two hearts is the obvious bid.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠QJ5 ♥A87 ♦983 ♣Q1092

The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	1 ♥	1 NT	Pass
3 ♣	Pass	?

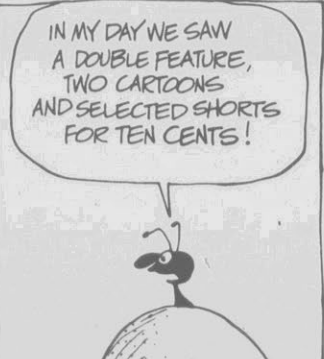

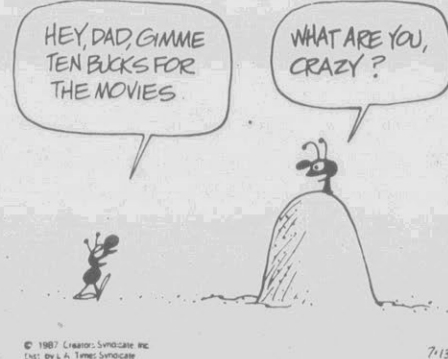

What do you bid now?

A.—Beware! Despite your no trump bid, which showed solid responding values and a heart stopper, partner did not raise to three no trump. He may be worried about his suit providing a source of tricks, or have a weakness somewhere else. No matter. You have a very convenient bid available—a cue-bid of three hearts. That confirms clubs as a trump suit while leaving all options open.

WEEK OLD mallard and grey call ducklings for sale, pheasants, bantam chickens

By SAM UZZELL

Agricultural Extension Agent
Three of the most common diseases affecting tomatoes locally are blossom-end rot, bacterial wilt and Southern stem rot. There are other diseases that are prevalent occasionally, but these three diseases are by far the most common, damaging problems.

Blossom-end rot of tomato is a very common problem, and is not caused by an infectious, living organism. It is a physiological condition that is caused by a lack of calcium in the root zone, and is made worse by dry weather or fluctuating periods of wet and dry conditions. This season is a good one to bring on many blossom-end rot problems to eastern North Carolina gardeners. It has been both extremely wet and extremely dry.

Blossom-end rot is the failure of the developing tomato fruit to transport calcium. A sunken, leathery area usually circular in nature forms on the blossom end. In many cases, the spot will begin to rot as insects and bacteria invade the disrupted tissue. Blossom-end rot is easily prevented and is somewhat correctable. The addition of quickly soluble calcium to the plant and root zone plus one inch of irrigation or rainfall each week will generally be sufficient to correct the problem.

Sources of calcium are landplaster (calcium sulfate), calcium chloride and agricultural lime. A well limed garden plus sufficient moisture should ensure a better tomato crop. If either landplaster or calcium chloride is applied to the plant and given sufficient water, then later developing tomato fruits will be less affected.

A disease that is not correctable and is very discouraging is bacterial wilt. Not only is this disease fatal to the tomato plant, but it will affect tomatoes planted in that spot for many years. Bacterial wilt is the same disease that the tobacco farmer knows as "Granville wilt." If tomatoes were planted in a field that had a history of Granville wilt, they would be infected sooner than later.

Symptoms of Granville wilt are sudden wilting while the plant is green, usually in mid-June or later in eastern North Carolina. Normally the tomato will have exhibited good to even excellent growth prior to wilting.

The tomato plant or plants will wilt due to the fact that the bacterial cells clog the water conducting tissues of the plant. If the stem of an affected tomato is cut, a discoloration of the pith and vascular system is evident. Often if the stem is pressed where it is cut, a brownish sap is expressed. One can be sure that the bacterial wilt organism is present when a wilted stem is placed in a transparent glass of water and in a short while a strand of viscous liquid is seen to be issued from the cut surface and is suspended vertically from the stem.

The third disease is a fungus disease called Southern stem rot. It is easily identified by the presence of a cottony mycelial growth, white in color and often with tan or brown, round bodies in the fungal strands at the base of the affected plant.

The disease is more common in July and August when night temperatures are hot, about 82 degrees Fahrenheit. Symptoms of southern stem rot are wilting that recovers at night and reoccurs during the day. After a few days the plant wilts permanently and dies.

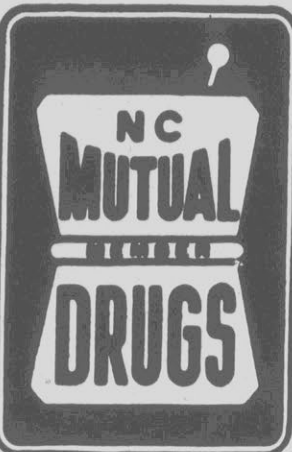

These disease problems can be minimized by cultural practices that favor good tomato growth. Planting in an area of the garden where the tomatoes have not been planted for several years is helpful in reducing diseases of all types.

It is further beneficial to plant tomatoes in a garden that has been limed and fertilized according to a soil test. It is also helpful to supply a continual amount of fertilizer through the season and at least one inch of precipitation each week. A mulch of organic material such as pine straw, well-rotted sawdust, pine bark, grass clippings, etc. may be used. The mulch should not be placed against the stem of the tomato plant because this may predispose the tomato plant to Southern stem rot.

So, a common sense approach and a sufficient supply of water and care will make gardening in general, and tomato growth in particular, somewhat easier.
