City Pay Changes Proposed

By DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer

A pay and classification study presented to the Greenville City Council Monday night includes a recommendation that the city spend $170,000 to realign the salaries of some employees.

"We're recommending that the pay rate of all employees whose current rate falls below the minimum ... be raised to the minimum," said Vito Kuraitis, a consultant with Arthur Young, the Charlotte firm which conducted the study.

"And we suggest that every individual who falls at a half step out or between steps be raised to the nearest step," Kuraitis told council members at a workshop Monday night. "The cost of adjustment to the minimum of the range will cost $75,000. The cost of adjustment to step will cost another $95,000."

The pay plan also recommends the city and the GUC provide identical benefit packages to avoid competition.

The $52,000 pay plan study, which was funded jointly by the city of Greenville and Greenville Utilities Commission, was approved about a year ago, according to Gerry Dail, personnel director.

"Last year about this time during the budget process, the department heads, the city manager, the utilities general manager and their department heads had some concerns for some of the positions, not only for the pay in attracting and maintaining some classifications but also some of the people had topped out on the pay plan," Ms. Dail said.

"There are some questions about pay for special certifications, pay for special licenses and how to deal with performance pay for those that have reached that segment of the pay plan. With all these concerns in mind, the utilities general manager and the city's city manager recommended to the two boards to conduct a compensation study covering not only pay but fringe benefits as a whole part of the compensation package."

The study, which was conducted in February, encompasses the city, the library system, the airport and the utilities system, according to Ms. Dail.

"The Housing Authority contracted for a special supplement contract to go along with that," she said. The council is expected to review the proposals in the study and meet again with Kuraitis during a workshop Monday night.

Kuraitis stressed that the pay plan is just in a tentative form.

"This is a tentative recommendation on our part subject to your approval," he told council members. "Some things may change. There are

New Facilities Named

School Board Increases Students' Food Prices

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

School fees and policy were set by the Pitt County Board of Education at its regular meeting Monday, and names for the new facilities were formally approved.

The new elementary school located on the old County Home property will be called the Wintergreen Elementary School. The athletic facility being built for the Greenville attendance area will be the Minges-Farley Athletic Complex, and within the complex there will be the Percy Daniels Football Field and the May-Scales Baseball Field. The access road leading to the facility will be named Marvin Jarman Drive.

The names were recommended by a committee composed of board members.

School breakfast and lunch prices were increased by the board for the upcoming school year. According to the administrative staff, the prices have not been increased in the past four years.

The price for a student breakfast will be 55 cents, while an adult breakfast will cost 80 cents. Breakfasts are served in grades kindergarten through 12.

Lunch prices for students in grades kindergarten through three will cost 90 cents this school year; the lunch price for students in grades four through 12 will be $1. Adult lunches will cost $1.60 a piece.

The student fee structure was set, as recommended by the executive team and principals.

The elementary school fees for all students in kindergarten through eighth grade has been set at $7, and high school fees for all students in grades nine through 12 is $6.

Fees also will be charged in separate subject areas. Funds from cur-

Exams Policy Studied

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

An exam exemption policy for the Pitt County schools was discussed by the board members Monday to give the administration direction in formulating a new policy.

At the beginning of the 1986-1987 school year, the board asked that the exam exemption policy of the former Greenville schools be used for some students and the policy used by the Pitt County schools be used for another group of students in order to see which policy was most effective.

The Pitt County schools' policy provided for exemptions for students in grades nine through 12 only if they maintained A or B averages and did not exceed the required number of absences. The Greenville city school policy allowed students in grades 10 through 12 to be exempt from exams if their semester average was A, B, C or D and students maintained the attendance requirement consistent for the appropriate average.

An external report concluded that the Greenville policy led to higher attendance and a slight increase in grades over the county policy.

North Gives His Contra Briefing

By DAVID ESPO
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lt. Col. Oliver North, handed an extraordinary nationally televised platform, today delivered a pro-Contra briefing before the Iran-Contra committees that was modeled after the slide show he used so effectively while working in the White House.

North said the briefing was designed to show "the Soviet threat in this hemisphere," and included descriptions of Russian weapons found in various Central American countries.

Ironically, the glare of national television lights in the committee room prevented North from projecting the slides in a way that could be seen. Instead, he held each of 57 slides in his hand while he described what they showed.

North's pro-Contra pitch followed a lengthy bout of wrangling by the investigating committees. Several committee members wanted North to deliver his briefing later in the day and in another room. But pro-Contra Republicans insisted, and he was permitted to proceed.

The ceding of time to North to make his stripped-down pro-Contra pitch was a parliamentary coup for the members of the investigating committees who favor support for the Nicaraguan rebels.

It came as North appeared as a witness at the hearings for the sixth straight day — and as former National Security Adviser Robert McFarlane waited in the wings to contradict North's sworn testimony on a number of important points.

North's appeal was modeled after the one he said he had given more than 100 times to members of Congress and private groups. Included in the latter were some citizens who later contributed money to the Contras.

North has insisted throughout the hearings that he never directly solicited funds, and he repeated that declaration after concluding his speech.

While North held sway before the committees, President Reagan maintained his silence about the hearings. But while posing for pictures with Republican congressional leaders, Reagan vowed that once the hearings have ended, "You won't be able to shut me up."

The issue of the slide show came up as soon as the committees began their session for the day.

Rep. James Courter, R-N.J., complained that the committees were attempting to "cover up part" of the evidence in the affair by attempting to deny North use of the Iran-Contra hearing room.

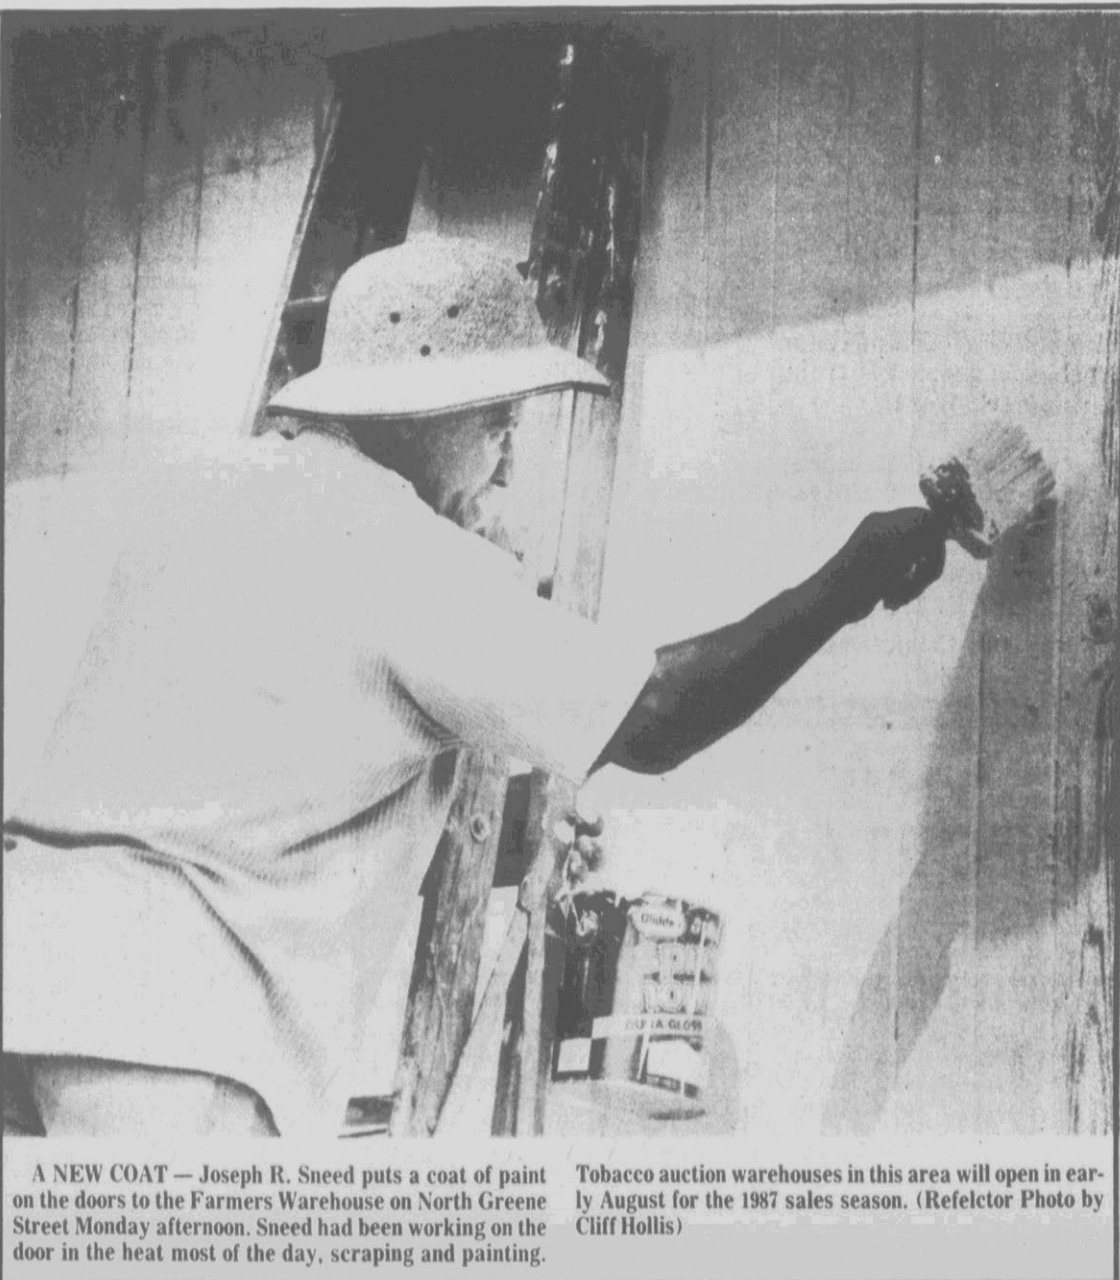

That would be "ironic, in my mind, if not tragic," Courter said.

But Sen. Warren Rudman, R-N.H., said, "Quite frankly, what's going on here is an attempt to further" the cause of the Contras.

And Sen. Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, chairman of the Senate committee, said, "Whether we're for or against the Contras, that issue is not before us."

"If there is an issue," said Sen. Paul Sarbanes, D-Md., "the issue is the nature of the presentation then, and putting together a presentation now ... doesn't establish what the presentation was then."

'Aging' Is New Field Of Study

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

As more North Carolinians "come of age," a new field of studies, services and issues has emerged, said Elaine Stoops, assistant secretary of the state Department of Human Resources' Division of Aging in Raleigh.

Ms. Stoops was in Greenville Monday participating in the week-long eighth annual Summer School of Gerontology held at East Carolina University.

The summer school was established because "there wasn't much being offered in our colleges in the field of gerontology," she said. "Professionals really could not keep up with the aging process and the new issues in aging."

A planning committee looks at timely issues in gerontology in designing the courses of each summer school, which is alternated between the state universities and colleges, Ms. Stoops said. This year, 13 courses are offered in areas such as older adult nutrition, rural elderly population, understanding the aging process, health problems of older adults, management skills and the use of computers in the aging network.

"North Carolina is really being looked at as a retirement state," she said. And, eastern North Carolina is "one of the big retirement areas."

The state has 18 regional offices on aging under the state division, Ms. Stoops said. Pitt, Martin, Hertford, Bertie and Beaufort counties are in Region Q.

The main attractions to the Greenville area for retirees are the Tar and Pamlico rivers as well as quality health care provided through the ECU medical school and Pitt County Memorial Hospital, said Louisa Cox, director of the Area Agency of Aging, Mid-East Commission, based in Washington, N.C.

About 19 percent of the population in this region is 60 years old and older, she said.

Traditional views of the older population have changed, said June Barbour, public information officer with the division. For example, older adults were once thought to be "poor and uneducated." But, "now they are considered by advertisers as the generation with the income."

"Older people are learning that their strength is in a bloc," she said. "They could elect or defeat a can-

TRAIN-CAR COLLISION — Richard Clarence Hardee Jr., 57, of Kinston escaped uninjured when the car he was driving was struck by a Seaboard Coastline freight train at the crossing on Airport Road Monday afternoon. Officer D.W. Nichols said the car was stopped — across the tracks — for a red light at the Greene Street intersection when the coupling on the caboose of the five-car train smashed into the car's door, causing an estimated $2,500 damage to the car. Nichols, who said the train was traveling about 4 mph, said the train pushed the car 34 feet before stopping. Hardee, according to the officer, saw the train coming and moved from the driver's seat to the passenger side, thus escaping injury. (Staff Photo by Cliff Hollis).

Ayden Board Raises Price For City Cemetery Plots

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

AYDEN — The Ayden Board of Commissioners agreed to double the cost of plots in the two town cemeteries during its monthly meeting Monday night to compensate for the expense of maintaining them.

Effective today, town residents will pay $200 for one plot, $400 for two, $600 for three and $800 for four plots in the cemeteries located at Blount Street and Northeast Avenue.

Employees of the Ayden Utility System who live out of town will pay $400 for one plot, $800 for two, $1,200 for three and $1,600 for four, while out-of-town people will pay $600 for one plot, $1,200 for two, $1,800 for three and $2,400 for four.

Fees for opening and closing graves were increased from $70 to $100 on weekdays and from $90 to $125 on weekends and holidays. The opening and closing of graves for people 6 years old and under and for cremations will be $35.

The difference in payment from increased costs to out-of-town people will be used in a permanent fund to maintain the cemeteries.

In other matters, the board approved bids presented by Melinda Wall under the Community Development Block Grant regulations of 1983. E.T. Leggett Construction Co. was granted a bid of $7,200 to rehabilitate a home owned by Clemmie Mc-

Cotter, and Seaboard Builders was granted a bid of $14,000 to rehabilitate a home owned by Lynwood Powell.

Under current CDBG regulations, E.T. Leggett Construction Co. was granted a bid of $16,350 to rehabilitate a three-unit complex owned by Sidney Britt as well as a $14,300 bid to rehabilitate the home of Lena Dixon.

A bid of $7,665 was granted to C.B. Rogerson to rehabilitate a home owned by Nellie Quinnerly, while Seaboard Builders was granted a bid of $15,000 to rehabilitate a home owned by James Cox.

A bid of $18,750 was granted to Whitaker Realtor and Construction Co. to rehabilitate a duplex owned by Ernestine Stevenson, after the original company granted the bid, Trueblood Builders, closed.

The board also agreed to notify the owner of the vacant house at 110 Thrower St., Laura Knight, for voluntary demolition of the building.

The Code of Ordinances regarding bicycles and skateboards was amended to restrict use of those items in the central business district of town to be designated by signs.

A $6,635.00 contract with Lloyd Moody was approved to audit town records for fiscal year 1986-87, and a legal services agreement with attorney Paul White was renewed for one year at the same retainer of $225 per month for five hours of service and $60 per hour for services over the required five hours.

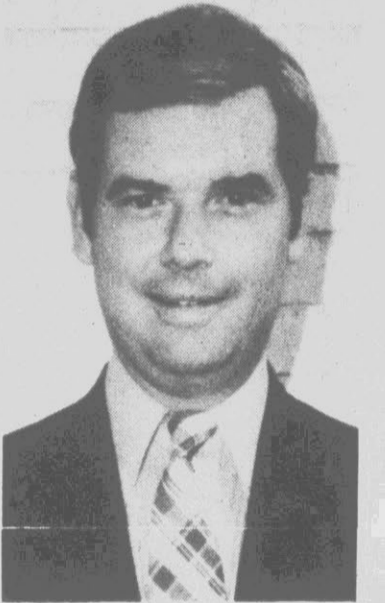

The board also approved the certification of 29 firemen in the Ayden Fire Department, while Town Clerk Ralph Ford was appointed liaison for a census to be conducted in 1990.

North, Reagan Spur Effort To Renew Contra Aid

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan said today he will "stand on the roof and yell" in support of aid to Nicaraguan rebels, and a Republican congressional leader said he believes Lt. Col. Oliver M. North's testimony has improved the prospects for approval of such aid.

"He has been able to get across some points to the American people on television as to why we are involved in Central America and why we have been trying to assist the democratic resistance that we had not been able to get across in other ways," House GOP Whip Trent Lott of Mississippi said of North.

"We think we have some potential votes that we can get for it, that we haven't gotten in the past," Lott said after a meeting of Republican congressional leaders with the president. Reagan, asked by a reporter whether he planned to ask for more funds for the Nicaraguan guerrillas, said, "I think my position if well known ... I think the most decent thing this country can do is to continue to aid the freedom fighters."

He said he could not give any figures, but, "I'm going to ask that they continue to support the Contras." Lott also said no figures were discussed in the meeting with the president.

The president, asked how he was going to make his views known, said, "Stand on the roof and yell."

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater told reporters aboard Air Force One during the president's trip to Indiana Monday that the testimony of North "was helpful to the administration."

Fitzwater also disputed a statement by Sen. Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, chairman of the Senate investigating committee, in a television interview on Sunday that a Sept. 15 memo written by North spoke of "using the residual for other covert activities."

"Residual" is the term North has used for the proceeds from the Iranian arms sales that were diverted to finance rebels opposing the Marxist-led government of Nicaragua.

Poindexter, who was replaced as Reagan's national security adviser in November after revelation of the diversion of funds from the arms sales, was expected to testify this week.

"That memo never mentions diversions or residuals," the White House spokesman said. He said he talked to the president on the flight to Indiana and, "He said he had never been briefed on diversion of funds or any excess funds."

Fitzwater said the Sept. 15 memo dealt with covert operations but not with their funding. He said it was prepared as a background paper for briefing the president prior to a visit by Shimon Peres, then the prime minister of Israel.

"The president was briefed on the Peres visit," he said. But he added that the White House has "no way of knowing" whether Poindexter used the memo to brief the president. He said that information will have to come from Poindexter's testimony.

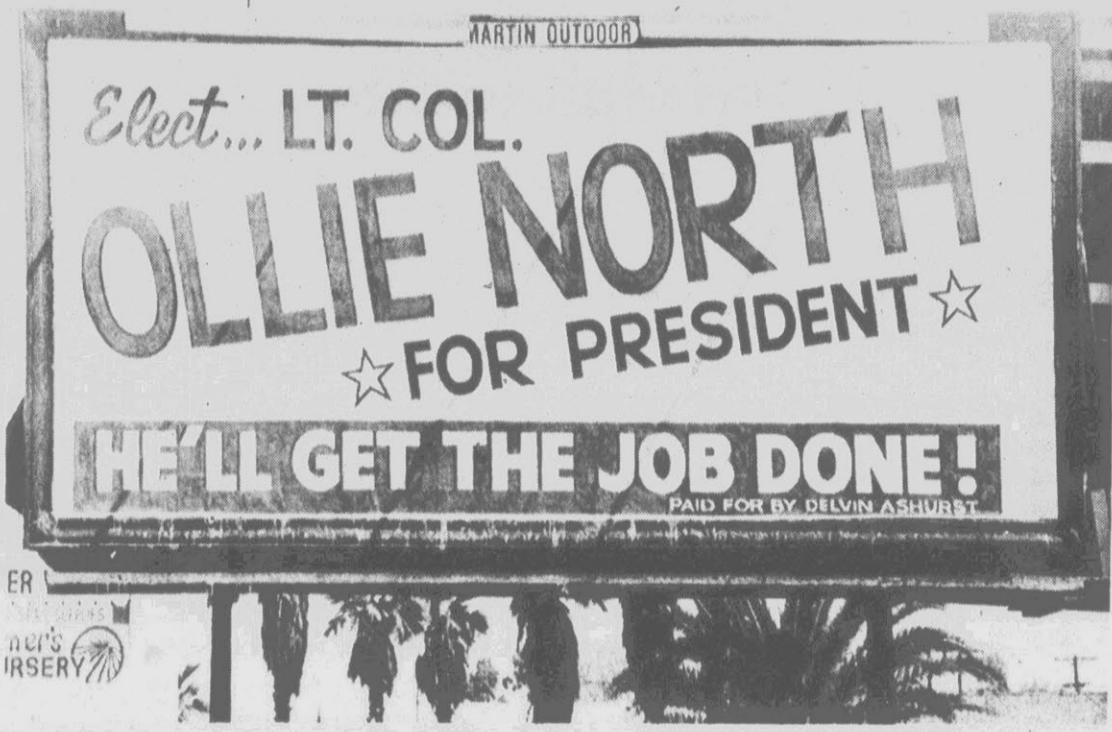

Inouye, responding to a challenge by Sen. James Mc-

Clure, R-Idaho, to his statement on CBS-TV's "Face the Nation," said Monday, "It is now up to the admiral to say did he brief the president, and if so what did he tell the president."

In his speech to the annual convention of the National Association of Counties in Indianapolis, Reagan disputed criticism that his campaign for his "economic bill of rights" is designed to draw attention from the hearings.

"The truth is just the other way around," he said. "There are those who would like to distract attention from the real business of government: putting an end to unrestrained spending."

"And while I am getting a few things off my chest, something else has been bothering me lately," the president added. "Critics have claimed that in opposing our administration on the issues, they're at some kind of an unfair disadvantage, that his presidency is somehow based more on personality than on policy. The truth is, no president can remain popular unless he retains the fundamental support of the American people on the issues."

Accident Threatens North

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The future of NASA's Atlas-Centaur unmanned rocket program was in doubt following a launch pad accident that caused extensive damage and slightly injured four technicians.

Monday's accident occurred as technicians were preparing to remove the Centaur upper booster stage of the Atlas-Centaur rocket to fix a fuel leak, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration said. The leak is one of many problems that have plagued the rocket in the last four months.

"It's too early to tell what might become of the Atlas-Centaur program," said NASA spokesman Hugh Harris, adding that an investigation board would be named to look into the accident.

Photographs show the Centaur upper stage was severely damaged when the pressure inside erupted as it was punctured by a work platform.

The Atlas-Centaur was to have been the 68th and last to be launched by NASA over 25 years and was to boost into orbit a Navy communications satellite. Officials said that if the Centaur stage cannot be repaired, the flight might have to be canceled.

Even if the stage could be repaired, or another one built, it would take months and it would be costly for the space agency to keep the Atlas-Centaur launch team together for that period.

General Dynamics, which builds the rocket, plans to make 18 of the boosters to sell as commercial launch vehicles starting in 1989. The Navy communications satellite possibly could be shifted to one of those new boosters, but the Navy would be negotiating launch costs and services with General Dynamics, not NASA.

"A workstand contacted the surface of the stage and caused a rupture of the hydrogen tank of the Centaur," said a NASA statement on the accident. "There were minor injuries to four General Dynamics Space Division technicians as they made a quick departure of the area."

The four were treated for cuts and bruises, officials said.

The hydrogen tank is made of thin stainless steel, less than two-tenths of an inch, and is pressurized at 5 pounds per square inch above normal outside pressure to maintain structural strength.

Courter said he would insist on a formal vote of the committee in an attempt to permit North to deliver the appeal in the formal hearing room, which is equipped for live television broadcasts.

It never came to that. Instead, after a recess of nearly an hour, Inouye came back to say that North would be permitted to deliver his appeal. At the urging of Republicans, he said the slides would be made part of the printed record of the hearings.

In the meantime, Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., chairman of the Housecommittee, said McFarlane intends to challenge statements made by his former subordinate over the past week. These statements involve at least three areas where North, testifying with a grant of limited immunity, said he had authority from superiors: solicitation of third countries for aid for the Contras; the Contra resupply program; and alteration of documents.

"In all three instances, it's a question of authority," Hamilton said. "I think there is a flat contradiction as to those points. He is coming in because he wants to directly dispute and contradict the testimony of Colonel North on those several items."

Judge Relaxes Rule For Jurors

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge today modified jury selection procedures at the perjury trial of former presidential aide Michael K. Deaver to permit public questioning of some prospective jurors.

But only five of 31 prospective jurors agreed to be questioned in open court.

U.S. District Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson and lawyers in the case went behind closed doors to question prospective jurors who had requested privacy.

Deaver, a former top aide to President Reagan, is charged with lying to a congressional committee and a grand jury that investigated his lobbying business for possible ethics law violations.

Jackson made the announcement at the start of a brief hearing convened to hear protests by news organizations against the secret questioning of prospective jurors that began Monday.

Jackson said questioning would proceed in open court except for individual jurors who requested private examination by lawyers and the judge.

Addressing the group of prospective jurors, Jackson said, "I have been asked to conduct as much of this process in open court as possible. I intend to accede to that request as best I can."

But Jackson added: "I am aware much of this information is sensitive, personal, private information that you would prefer not to reveal in open court."

"I am willing to leave it to your discretion."

Earlier, Nina Bang-Jensen, an attorney representing The Associated Press, argued that the Supreme Court ruling in the 1984 case of the Riverside (Calif.) Press-Enterprise "clearly states the burden is on the juror to make the request" for privacy.

Jackson said he acceded to the request by lawyers for The Washington Post, four television networks and The Associated Press "to allow maximum access consistent with fair trial and the privacy right of jurors."

Jackson said some of the questions involve personal information, such as whether a person had a history of alcoholism or drug abuse.

Deaver's attorneys have indicated they intended to introduce evidence about their client's state of mind when he testified on Capitol Hill and before the grand jury.

Sources familiar with the case have said Deaver will likely argue that his memory was clouded by drinking. Therefore, according to this argument, Deaver did not lie when he said he could not recall contacting his old Reagan administration colleagues on behalf of clients that included Trans World Airlines and Rockwell International, along with the governments of Canada and South Korea.

On Monday, Jackson said he wanted to question jurors in secret to protect their privacy "to the greatest extent possible." But the judge ruled later in the day that daily transcripts of the jury examination could be made public.

Board Discusses Exams

whether they felt an exam exemption policy should be established and whether attendance and grades should be considered in the exemptions.

Some board members felt strongly that grades alone should be the basis of the exemptions, while others felt that attendance should be a factor.

Superintendent Eddie West commented, "It seems to me that we are in the business of trying to prepare the student for life ... to teach them how to learn as well as what to learn."

"I am appalled that 64 percent of the students were exempt from exams" during the last school year, he added.

"My recommendation is to have no exam exemptions except for seniors," West said. "If they go to college, they must be prepared to take exams. If they go into the work force, they must take" skill tests.

West said he thought seniors should only be exempt from taking exams if they earned grades of A or B. Students earning A's could have four excused absences and still be exempt, while B students could have only three absences.

Board member Donovan Phillips said, "Some students won't achieve academic excellence. It is the borderline student that worries me. For him just to be in school teaches responsibility."

"I hate to see all the rewards go to the A and B student" at the expense of the "borderline student. We've got to keep (the borderline student) in school some way," Phillips said.

"I don't see exempting a student for going to school," said board member David Shackelford. "That's a given," to be expected, he said.

"Instead of rewarding people because of attendance, there should be some type of punishment for no attendance," Stephen Tripp said.

Each board member was polled for his opinions.

The chairman of the board appointed a committee made up of board members Anne McGaughey, George Williams, Erma Carr and Jim Black to take the board member's discussion into consideration and recommend an exam exemption policy.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Remember Goals

As the Greenville City Council considers the 19 remaining city manager applicants, it should recall its goals of professionalism and high standards for a top executive.

Members should also remember their commitment to unity in the selection of a manager for Greenville and the importance of that concurrence to the city's future.

For the search process to be successful, the council must adhere to the highest attainable standards for a new city manager. Education, experience, expertise, financial acuity and vision — those are the characteristics the board should choose.

When narrowing the field of finalists, the Council should make sure the decisions made are based on objectives of the entire board — not merely individual preferences or one faction.

This selection process is a test for the City Council. The firing of Gail Meeks in March was a decision made by a divided board. Consequently, it was a doubtful move made under poor circumstances. By pulling together in the search for a city manager, the council can attempt to negate the impact of that action.

The council's goal of new direction for Greenville via a new city manager is worthy of support, although the objective was marred by manner in which the board handled Meeks' dismissal.

Through the search for her replacement, the board has a second chance to develop a new unity and professional image that will be an asset to progress.

If the Council sticks to its objectives of professionalism, high qualifications and unity, Greenville will have a new city manager capable of leading the city in a responsible, forward-thinking manner. That approach, along with careful attention to progress, will ensure the best interest of the city is served.

Diet Pitfalls

It doesn't seem fair (and probably isn't) to have tempting eateries in the neighborhood of weight-loss clinics. Nevertheless the situation prevails in Durham where dieters are paying from $1,500 to $2,000 a month (including living expenses) for benefits offered by a Duke University Medical Center for patients with weight problems as well as such ailments as diabetes and heart disease.

The dieters may include some who weigh more than two or three average-size people. They submit themselves to a regimen of low calories, exercise therapy and classes in nutrition and lifestyles. At least one institute bases its therapy on the premise that overeating is an addiction like alcoholism.

Another may stress medicine, nutrition, behavior and fitness.

By accident or design there are places in the weight-center neighborhood where a hungry person can get pizza, fried chicken or ice cream.

Innocents Abroad may simply conclude presence of the no-no food dispensers is a deliberate test of will power by weight centers. That premise is wiped out by a pizza shop manager who admits he does sometimes feel guilty about contributing to dieting delinquency.

"It's a sad thing", he says, "but we're not going to turn a customer down if they want to order a pizza. We're just in the business of selling pizzas."

A restaurant owner says diet-cheating comes in spurts. "It seems like everybody's doing real good for awhile and then you get a flood of them." Once somebody rediscovers food then they'll come in once a week and then twice a week. Then they begin bringing their friends.

See how it starts?

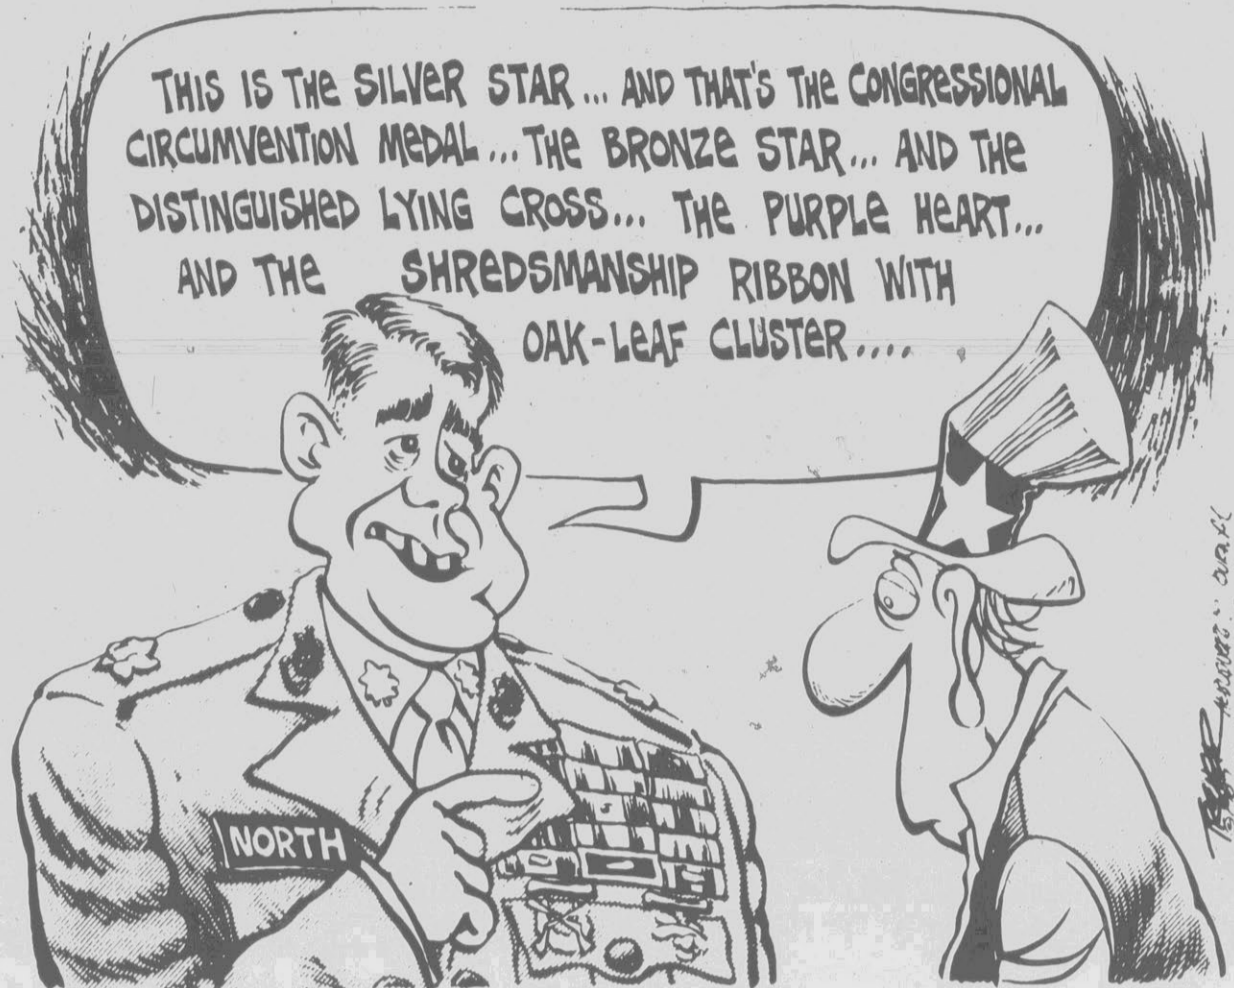

One caves in to the dreadful craving and inches deeper and deeper into the curse of food-addiction. The next step is to lure a trusting fellow-dieter into tasting the forbidden fruit and it may be worth an extra dessert (or two?).

Pretty soon there's a flood of dieters who have fallen by the wayside.

Those delinquents remind one of the public service ads recommending "Just Say No!"

They get caught. Therapists have testing procedures which uncover backsliders and they are given a good talking to; but the problem remains.

Those purveyors of illicit goodies are still on the street with tempting scenes and fragrances. The real world is full of pitfalls.

Rural-Urban Conflict Continues

RALEIGH — Rep. Dan Blue, D-Wake, is one of a number of urban legislators who feel cities are often made the punching bag in North Carolina's rural dominated General Assembly. When the House Finance Committee took up the legislative leadership's school construction tax plan — a plan that redistributes urban money to rural areas — Blue couldn't resist the chance to make a pitch.

"When it has come to taxes and sales taxes," Blue said, "the urban counties that have more retailers and wholesalers have willingly assisted those in other counties... we have been willing to share. We in the urban areas would hope that this same kind of caring and sharing attitude will receive reciprocation."

Several of the most acrimonious legislative debates in 1987 have centered on rural-urban conflicts. The rural-urban fight has touched the questions of roads funding, nuclear waste disposal and school funding.

Rep. Bobby Hunter, D-McDowell, pushed for limits on urban contributions to highway projects. Hunter argues that cities, when they are allowed to contribute to state roads projects, buy themselves a higher road construction priority from the state. He says rural areas are subsequently hurt.

Rep. Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, says that any low level nuclear waste disposal plant that is built in North Carolina ought to be built right where there are already nuclear power plants. Two of the state's three giant nuclear plants are in Wake and Mecklenburg counties and urban legislators see this as another anti-city move by Mavretic. (Mavretic's controversial 1985 plan to eliminate property taxes had a strong anti-urban bias in his sales tax distribution formula.)

Also in Mavretic's plan is a clause that would shift a portion of the property taxes collected on those nuclear power plants to any county which volunteers for the nuclear waste disposal site. Again, that would greatly hurt Wake and Mecklenburg. Brunswick County also has a nuclear plant.

There have been several plans to solve the school construction problem. The sales tax increase proposed by Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Granville, would have shifted millions of dollars collected in urban counties into the coffers of rural counties. The leadership's compromise plan, as Blue noted, redistributes some of the new taxes raised on a per capita basis, rather than on a point of origin basis. That hurts urban counties.

But Hunter and Mavretic say they are not on any anti-urban binge. "It's just that in the rural areas there is a feeling that we're only getting the table scraps."

Mavretic denies that his nuclear waste bill is anti-urban. "Anyone who feels that way, doesn't understand the issue, and that's not my problem." But Mavretic does see Hunter's bill, and the school funding measures, as a real battle between rural and urban areas.

"We have had an inordinate investment of the public treasure in the Piedmont," Mavretic said, "Now it's our turn... The rural legislators have prevailed for a good reason. What's best for this state is a public policy that encourages small town living."

Hunter concedes that rural legislators may have prevailed for another reason, too. Since redistricting carved up many urban districts, Republicans have won increasing numbers of urban seats, and they have little clout when it comes to defending their turf from rural Democrats.

Women In Ads: Behind The Times

WASHINGTON — Most people don't know quite what to make of advertising. On the one hand, we may be concerned about the images and messages that American business associates with its products. If ads seem unrealistic or offensive, we may resent their implications for society.

On the other hand, few of us consider ourselves to be subject to ad manipulation. We, surely, can separate the wheat from the chaff, the facts from the hype, the product from the image. We don't think ads affect us personally — but they might affect other people.

So how much do ads matter? Do advertisers mostly chase and reflect our desires or do they shape them? And if it's the latter, then why do advertising agencies devote so much time and money to focus groups, polls and other close analysis of the public mood? In reality, not even advertising moguls can describe exactly what they are up to.

These issues come to mind regarding a recent Advertising Week special issue on Images of Women in Advertising. Entitled "The Invisible Woman," the feature illustrates the continuing gap between fantasy and reality in the commercial portrayal of the American woman.

Those who deal closely with advertising may take it a bit too seriously. But the Ad Week report confirms what most of us already realize. Whereas men in ads are frequently average looking and realistic, a few stereotypes dominate the presentation of women: the gorgeous model, the high-powered executive, the dutiful housewife obsessed with clean floors.

Women's changing roles seem to have only had a limited effort on their ad personnas. In fact, research by Alice Gagnard, associate professor of advertising at Southern Methodist University suggests that ads of the 1980s place an unprecedented premium on concepts of "perfection." For instance, only about 3 percent of women in 1950s ads could be called thin — compared to almost half in 1984.

The current ideal woman it seems is a Fawn Hall: intelligent, worldly, but outwardly nonetheless a beauty of the first rank.

Ironically, ad researchers agree there is persistent and growing resentment among female consumers against the stereotyping.

Women seem to prefer ads that emphasize information-rich texts over image peddling. And they react warmly to ads featuring women who appear more "average" — older, heavier, dressed down.

But even women in the advertising industry, evidently, resist what women as consumers are saying. Marlena Peleo-Lazar, a Proctor & Gamble executive, recalls being shocked at the pitches aimed at women when she watched daytime TV during a maternity leave.

Before then, she admitted to Ad Week, she had taken a dim view of focus group interviews with women. "There would be 30 slugs telling you what they thought," she said. "And I'd think to myself, 'What do the know?' Until I was at home and became one of the slugs."

Upon her return to work, Peleo-Lazar tried to convince her firm to change the campaign for Secret, the deodorant "strong enough for a man, but made for a woman." At last, she won. Secret now sports "reality" advertising and doesn't need comparison to a man's product. Sales have increased by more than 25 percent in the last year.

How seriously should one look upon the persistent stereotyping of women by most of the advertising world? It's hard to know. It's possible, of course, that some impressionable women, particularly when young, take their cues about life from ads. More likely, however, ads are mainly a reflection of the narrow views (and lack of respect for the rest of us) among corporate climbers in the advertising business.

Most of us are sharp enough to know when we are being conned. The women's movement, in particular, has helped ensure that our view of gender roles is not passively conditioned by this medium. Until advertisers wise up — and they will, in search of customers — anachronistic women's ads are mostly an annoyance.

People who live in countries visited by earthquakes have learned that it is dangerous to build large and pretentious stone houses. Earthquakes quickly crack the rigid structures and bring them crashing to the ground.

People sometimes come to disaster because certain things they have built up suddenly fall and crush them. People who make the accumulation of wealth their chief end in life often find that the temple of avarice collapses and buries them in its ruins. People who long for fame often find that fame can quickly turn into notoriety and reproach.

All of these foolish desires constitute massive piles which in the day of earthquake fall on our heads and destroy us. Better a hut with happiness than a mansion with misery.

IN THE STATE

Life Term

WILSON, N.C. (AP) — A Wilson County man on trial for killing an elderly widow two years ago has been sentenced to life in prison after pleading guilty to slaying the woman and another who lived nearby.

Donald Ray Howard, 23, pleaded guilty to two counts of second-degree murder Monday on the first day his trial in Wilson County Superior Court in the killing of Margaret Donoghue.

As part of a plea bargain, Howard acknowledged killing both Mrs. Donoghue, 71, and Gladys Tasman, 84, who lived four blocks away. Mrs. Tasman was found beaten and strangled in her home March 23, 1985, and Mrs. Donoghue was found strangled Sept. 19, 1985. The plea bargain limited the maximum sentence he could receive to concurrent terms of life imprisonment and 50 years in jail.

Investigators said Howard had done yard work for both women.

Lightning

SELMA, N.C. (AP) — It may be true that lightning never strikes twice in the same place, but the Vann family of Selma is having a hard time believing it.

A lightning bolt burned out their color television early Saturday morning and another bolt that night destroyed another television set, an ice maker, two chest freezers and an outbuilding where the freezers were housed.

The heat from the lightning was so severe that it peeled open the lid of one freezer, while cooking food in the other.

Plant Closing

SILER CITY, N.C. (AP) — Siler City Mills, where last month a broken pipe spilled 700 gallons of chicken fat into a nearby stream, will close by the end of August, the company's president says.

The move will leave about 50 people jobless, but the company is considering building an even larger facility in Siler City in the next three or four years, William McKeown said Monday.

Siler City Mills manufactures animal feeds, and uses chicken fat primarily in making dog food.

Much of the work from the Siler City plant will be shifted to the firm's Burlington plant, where a $1.5 million renovation recently was completed. Siler City Mills also operates plants in Newport, Tenn., and Shelbyville, Tenn.

Officer Injured

WILSON, N.C. (AP) — A Wilson police officer remained in fair condition Monday after suffering a broken rib and severe cuts to his arms and face when he was struck by a car at the Police Department parking lot Sunday.

Police Capt. R.J. Pittman said a man the officer was trying to arrest on a domestic violence charge tried to flee, striking Officer Phil Houchins with a car door.

According to Pittman, Houchins was caught between the door and the body of the car and was knocked down when the car began to move.

Edward Charles Cobb, 36, of Wilson was charged with assault on an officer with intent to kill, assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill inflicting serious injury, resisting arrest, hit and run with personal injury, carrying a concealed weapon and failure to stop for a blue light and siren.

Pittman said Cobb was jailed under a $100,000 secured bond.

Conviction

ASHEVILLE (AP) — The vice president of Sure-Fire Distributing Co., a motorcycle parts dealership that was destroyed by fire in 1984, has been found guilty of embezzling funds.

A seven-man, five-woman jury deliberated about an hour Monday before convicting William Fleming Burbank IV, also known as Bill Burbank Jr., on 12 counts of fraud.

Burbank, who owns Sure-Fire with his father, William Burbank Sr., faces a maximum of 10 years imprisonment and a $10,000 fine on each count.

New Sheriff

ROBBINSVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Former Graham County Sheriff Melvin Howell has assumed the position again to replace resigning Sheriff A.J. Peterson.

Howell, 55, was nominated by the executive committee of the county's Republican Party to fill the unexpired term of Peterson, a Republican who resigned last week after pleading guilty to signing the name of his former father-in-law on a bank loan application.

Howell, who was sheriff from 1970 to 1978, placed second behind Peterson in a five-man race for sheriff in the Republican primary election.

Joint Custody Proposal Stirs Debate

RALEIGH (AP) — A bill to encourage courts to award joint custody of children in divorce cases is only part of the overall social change needed to keep from driving fathers away from their children, says the man who founded the state chapter of Fathers for Equal Rights.

"Men won't fight women," said Arthur Hammerlein, an emergency room physician in Raleigh who is fighting for joint custody of his two children. "So when they go to court with their ex-wife, our culture says the manly thing is to tuck your tail between your legs and walk away." The bill was introduced by Sen.

Helen Marvin, D-Gaston, at the urging of Hammerlein's group, which lobbies for involvement by both divorced parents in the lives of their children.

"For some totally absurd reason the kids are allocated to one parent," said Hammerlein, who remains president of Fathers for Equal Rights. "That is the mother, unless she is a lunatic, a drug addict, a prostitute or (has) abused the children. Over the next several years you (fathers) are gradually deprived of seeing them. That's why half the kids growing up today don't have a father."

Hammerlein said the courts should give first consideration to joint custody. The bill to require that passed the Senate 41-0 but was watered down in a House subcommittee to simply give a judge permission to grant joint custody — something current law allows "if clearly in the best interest of the child."

If the House Judiciary I Committee and full House approve that version, it could end up in a House-Senate conference committee to find a compromise.

Rep. Sharon Thompson, D-

Durham, a lawyer who handles domestic cases, said state law is not unfairly tilted toward mothers. She said women usually receive custody because they rear the children.

"In the majority of custody cases it is still the mother who has taken care of the child's daily needs, arranged the baby sitter, arranged the doctor's appointment, is the parent the child turns to when he is hurt or upset," she told The News and Observer of Raleigh. "That is the thing the courts look at. The father has been traditionally one who helps out in the evening or the weekends and has not really developed the kind of emotional bond that a mother might have developed."

Ann Christian, who has lobbied against the bill on behalf of the North Carolina Bar Association, said the measure would create too much of a bias toward joint custody.

"We were concerned about the situations where you are going to require a child to be placed in a stressful environment with two parents not agreeing, where you don't have one parent designated to make the final decision," she said. "If you have a presumption of joint custody, then you run the risk of imposing the parental-right issue over the best interests of the child."

Cities To Be Honored For Safety Records

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Fifty-one cities in North Carolina and South Carolina have gone at least one year without a pedestrian fatality and will be recognized by the AAA Carolina Motor Club for their accomplishment.

Brevard and Tarboro each will receive special citations from the motoring organization for their overall outstanding pedestrian accident records. Boone will be recognized for having gone 17 years without a pedestrian fatality, longer than any other city in the two states.

Both states had increases in the number of pedestrians killed during 1986 despite a decrease in fatalities nationwide. During 1986, 227 pedestrians in North Carolina and 146 pedestrians in South Carolina were killed. That was an increase of 4.4 percent in North Carolina and 12.3 percent in South Carolina. Nationally, fatalities dropped from 8,300 in 1985 to 8,200 in 1986.

North Carolina's pedestrian injuries totaled 1,872, a drop of 1 percent from the previous year. In South Carolina, injuries totaled 1,117, a decrease of more than 5 percent.

Cities with a record of 10 or more years without a pedestrian fatality receive Pedestrian Safety Achievement awards from AAA. In addition to Boone, the following N.C. cities will receive the award: Edenton, 13 years; Albemarle, 12 years.

Jackson Sentenced

RALEIGH (AP) — Robert Jackson, described by prosecutors as a former member of the White Patriot Party, was sentenced Monday to six months in prison for his part in an unsuccessful plot to blow up the Southern Poverty Law Center in Montgomery, Ala.

U.S. District Judge Terence Boyle sentenced Jackson to five years, but suspended all but six months of the active term. Jackson was convicted in absentia three months ago in Elizabeth City.

The charges against Jackson stemmed from a plot to rob a Fayetteville restaurant, obtain stolen military weapons and blow up the Southern Poverty Law Center, a civil rights group in Montgomery, Ala.

Burlington Plans To Eliminate Jobs

GREENSBORO (AP) — Burlington Industries will eliminate jobs to pay off the $2.4 billion debt it incurred to avert a takeover attempt last month, but the company would have been in worse shape if the takeover had succeeded, company president Lanty Smith said.

The takeover partners intended "to dismantle the entire company," which would have been "much more harmful to its people than what is presently occurring," Smith said.

Smith's comments marked the first time any Burlington executive publicly confirmed what others had predicted — that Burlington would be forced to reduce its workforce to finance its debt.

"We have no choice given where we have been placed but to try to reduce our expenses and downsize the company," Smith told a group of high school students participating in a special economics program at the Greensboro Day School.

"We will have to be making ... some reductions in employment," he said. "Nothing could be sadder."

Smith declined to say when the job reductions or business sales would occur or which employees or divisions might be affected.

The reductions and restructuring are part of a five-year plan sketched out last week by a Morgan Stanley banker and Burlington executives at corporate headquarters.

House Bans Smoking On Short Air Trips

By JOSH GETLIN
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

WASHINGTON — In a landmark, bipartisan vote, the House narrowly approved legislation Monday night banning cigarette smoking on all domestic airline flights lasting two hours or less.

The controversial proposal by Rep. Richard Durbin, D-Ill., which was approved 198-193 after an acrimonious debate, now goes to the Senate, where it faces an uncertain future.

"With this legislation, we are sending a message to the American people ... that it is wrong to impose the health dangers of smoking on the vast majority of people who are confined to their seats in an airplane cabin and are non-smokers," Durbin said.

The smoking ban marks the first time either house of Congress has voted on the issue of passive smoking, a health problem that has gained wide attention in recent years. Studies by the National Academy of Sciences and other groups have suggested that nonsmokers who are exposed to cigarette smoke run a high risk of developing lung cancer and other diseases.

Durbin's amendment, which was tacked onto an $11.1 billion transportation appropriations bill, would affect 80 percent of all U.S. airline flights, according to Federal Aviation Administration officials.

The transportation spending measure cleared the House on a 282-108 vote.

The smoking ban proposal exempted transcontinental flights, sponsors said, because it would be "unfair" to force smokers to abstain for four hours or longer.

Currently, federal law bans cigarette smoking on all flights carrying 30 passengers or less and requires airlines to set aside non-smoking sections on all other planes. Cigar and pipe smoking are banned on all United States flights.

During an emotional debate that stretched into the late evening, opponents raised a flurry of objections to Durbin's amendment. They said the health dangers of passive smoke have not been clearly established and argued that airports would be hard-pressed to enforce the law.

Under the proposal, airports could bar from landing planes that failed to enforce the smoking ban. Airports which refused to obey such a policy would no longer be eligible for millions of dollars in federal funds for capital improvements.

Two Kuwaiti Tankers Will Fly U.S. Flags Next Week

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Two Kuwaiti tankers will hoist U.S. flags in a brief ceremony this weekend and cruise into the Persian Gulf under U.S. Navy escort, according to gulf-based maritime salvage executives.

The tankers will be the first of 11 Kuwaiti tankers to receive American flags and U.S. protection in a Reagan administration plan to protect shipping in the gulf from attack by Iran, which has been fighting Iraq for 6 1/2 years.

The nations' "tanker war" has resulted in damage to scores of commercial ships in the waterway, which supplies about a fifth of the non-communist world's oil.

Iran accuses Kuwait of backing Iraq and has singled out for attack

Kuwaiti tankers and ships stopping at Kuwaiti ports.

The Reagan administration has been silent on the exact date and logistical details of the arrangement. The plan has been criticized by U.S. congressional critics who say it could draw the United States into conflict with Iran.

The salvage executives, in contact with the state-owned Kuwait Oil Tanker Co., said Monday the two Kuwaiti tankers would be reflagged in the Gulf of Oman just outside the entrance to the Persian Gulf, where they are anchored.

From there, the ships and their U.S. Navy escorts will depart on a 500-mile journey through the Strait of Hormuz and the gulf to Kuwait's Al Ahmadi oil terminal, said the executives, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The head of Kuwait's tanker company refused to provide details on the operation. Kuwait is also chartering Soviet vessels to carry its oil.

Attack Authorized

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. ships and planes patrolling in the Persian Gulf are authorized to attack Iranian missile installations if it appears missiles are about to be used, Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger says.

to fire so-called Silkworm missiles at ships flying the U.S. flag.

Iran is thought to have obtained several dozen Chinese-built missiles and is storing them at a base near the Strait of Hormuz, where they could be fired at any ship entering or leaving the Persian Gulf.

The missiles are generally considered by Pentagon officials to pose the greatest threat to U.S. Navy ships preparing to escort Kuwaiti oil tankers through the gulf.

Stowaways Leave Ship

MIAMI (AP) — Confinement on a cruise ship ended for eight stowaways after six days of shuttling back and forth between the Bahamas and Miami, sleeping in first-class cabins and dining on carved roast beef while their legal status was in limbo.

The eight were allowed to return Monday afternoon to Freeport, where it is believed they had purchased boarding passes from passengers on July 8, said Perry Rivkind, U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service district director.

The six men and two women boarded what normally is a six-hour, SeaEscape Scandinavian Sun cruise to Miami.

There, immigration officials would not allow them off the ship. The stowaways stayed on board for the next six days while five sets of passengers came and went.

The stowaways were not allowed to join paying passengers in swimming and gambling, but they did have some freedom to walk around, except when the ship was in port, officials said.

At a daily charge of $99 per person and $65 for each of the four first-class staterooms they used, the eight ran up a bill close to $5,000, said Jerry Butcher, vice president of sales and marketing for the cruise line. The cruise line is footing the bill.

On Monday, Assistant U.S. Secretary of State Elliot Abrams stepped in at Rivkind's request, and the Bahamian government agreed to take the eight back.

USDA Says Farms Will Meet Needs

WASHINGTON (AP) — A draft of a once-a-decade report by the Agriculture Department says enough farmland will be left to meet needs of the year 2030, even though some 49 million acres could be taken for non-agricultural uses by then.

The draft report, which will be subject to public comment and review before being put in final form, was released by the USDA on Monday.

Erosion, salt pollution in irrigation areas of the West, and reduced vegetation on livestock ranges are other threats to the U.S. agricultural machine.

Although the rate of urban growth has slowed in some areas, the conversion of agricultural land into other uses remains a disturbing problem for the future, the report said.

"Further, the effects of conversion, not only on local and regional farm income and production patterns but on the nation, may be understated if only the number of acres converted is considered," the report said.

It added: "Much of the urban growth will occur on prime farmland in counties in or near metropolitan areas. Although counties in fast-growth areas include less than 15 percent of all cropland, they account for nearly 30 percent of the dollar value of the nation's farm output."

The nation's total non-federal rural land area, not counting Alaska, is more than 1.4 billion acres, which includes 421.4 million acres of cropland, 133.3 million acres of pastureland and 405.9 million acres of rangeland, based on the department's 1982 National Resources Inventory.

About 1.5 million acres are converted to non-agricultural uses each year, the report said. Sixty-four percent is cropland.

"Assuming the current rate of conversion continued, the cropland base would be reduced by nearly 48 million acres, or 12 percent, between 1982 and 2030," the report said. "Changes in land use may have an enormous effect at the local level without becoming a problem that requires specific action at the national level."

Home Furnishings: The Country Look Comeback

By Beth Sherman
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

NEW YORK — Raymond Waites sits in his Greenwich Village loft cradling a black and white needlepoint pillow in his arms. The stitching on the pillow reflects a mirror image of Waites' face: It shows a balding, bearded man with a fierce, intense expression.

"When I got married," he recalls, "my wife's mother said she was marrying someone with no possibilities. We didn't speak for seven years. After that, she changed her mind about me. So I thought it was just retribution to have her work on my face for three or four months."

Waites' mother-in-law is not the only one to recognize his talent for mastering the possibilities.

The Alabama-born son of a gas-station owner has become one of America's most influential home-furnishings designers. At 47, Waites is creative vice president, head designer and co-founder of Gear, a design, licensing and marketing firm that helped catapult the comeback of the country look. In his 10 years at the Gear helm, Waites has evoked a romantic, soft view of the American past using natural fibers, floral prints, and light woods such as oak and pine. And he has plastered his country-style imprint on everything from comforters to creamers.

More than 40 licensees rack up $200 million in annual sales from Waites-designed furnishings, which include sofas, wall coverings, bath towels, lamps, rugs and beds. Two Gear retail stores in Manhattan pull in another $2 million a year. And Waites' products sell in department stores across the United States and in Japan.

With his flair for country-casual settings, one would expect Waites' apartment to look like a glossy Gear ad: a prettified, rustic vision laced with Old World charm and grace.

But Waites defies typecasting. His loft is a blend of classics and kitsch, humor and hubris, the tacky and the tasteful.

Instead of soft ice-cream-shade pastels, there is the punch of black and white. It surfaces in straight-backed dining chairs, in plump sofas, in the diamond-patterned stencils on the wood floor, even in the canopy over a four-poster bed.

"Black is very personal," says Waites, who is dressed in a black and white striped Rugby shirt over black cotton pants. "And contrary to what most people think, our forefathers used dark colors on traditional country pieces. Look at black ironware or gray scrubbed pine chests or gray woodwork on a ladderback chair."

His favorite piece in the loft, in fact, is an 18th-century pine cupboard with painted panels depicting cherubs and fruit. The panels are black, of course.

Whimsical touches appear at odd moments, in unlikely places. On a table loaded with antique silver picture frames, there's a glass ball that showers snow on a Scotch terrier. Above a built-in closet is a wooden shark whose gape-jawed smile is clamped shut with a heavy piece of rope.

For every country object — a heap of pine cones on a metal tray, an antique child's rocking horse — there is also a dab of glitter. A sequin-spangled blanket, for instance, is thrown over an ottoman. Duck decoys sport silver wreaths around their necks. A bowl of Christmas ornaments, spray painted glittery gold, makes a jazzy centerpiece. Two lifesize gold lions (a housewarming gift) wear collars made of twigs.

"I hated those lions for almost a year. I thought of putting them out on the street many times. But how do you get rid of something that won't fit through the front door?" says Waites. "Then, one day, someone told me their names were Fortitude and Patience, and I fell in love."

Waites has had to rely heavily on both those virtues in his career.

As a boy growing up in Demopolis, Ala., he became immersed in the images of the antebellum South: a world of grand Victorian mansions, with white columns and sweeping front porches.

"You could feel the touch of the past," says Waites, who still speaks with a trace of a Southern drawl. "I had really wanted to be an architect, but architects didn't make any money, so I went into engineering."

He gave it two years, and then switched his major to visual arts at Auburn University, with seemingly disastrous results.

"I had been a top A student in engineering with a 100 average in math," he recalls. "Then I changed to design and art and my first grade was an F. I thought, what have I done with my life? I've gone against my family, my home town, my world and I was failing."

Not for long. After graduation, he moved to New York and studied at Pratt Institute. It was the 1960s and Waites painted huge black diagonal stripes on the walls of his New York apartment and bought fuchsia and yellow-checked sofas.

From 1964 to 1976 his work consisted mainly of bold graphics, as a vice president for the Finnish store Design Research and as a designer for the Scandinavian design firm Marimekko.

After Marimekko had sent Waites to live, and work in Finland for a year, he got homesick, called it quits and returned to New York. His European sojourn put him in a nostalgic frame of mind, and he began to collect the antique quilts, scrubbed pine furniture and folk art that spell Americana.

He also designed a luggage line and tried to persuade Louis Vuitton to market it.

"The problem was that it didn't look French," he says. "It had ticking stripes and looked like a hunting bag, very American."

So Waites decided to make up his own label — called Gear, appropriately enough — and entered into partnership with Bettye Martin (Gear's president and chief executive officer). The fledgling company was born.

"I remember when we first sold the bags to Bloomingdale's," he says. "Ralph Lauren came in and told us that if we put his label on the luggage, we'd make a lot more money."

"We went against all the odds to form this company," he continues ruefully. "We started on a shoestring and a prayer."

One decade later, however, Gear is flourishing, the country craze is still going strong, and the boy from Demopolis has made good.

"When we started Gear, country was more rustic, more primitive, almost cruder," says Waites. "In the early days, it was all gingham, dotted Swiss and spongeware. Now, we're working more with florals and chintz. It's a more European look than our earlier collections."

There are plenty of Gear furnishings in Waites' loft, but his personal style shines through. Decorative accents range from funky (zebra-striped footstools), to primitive (spotted antique hobby horses) to ornithological (a stuffed, nearly extinct Hawaiian goose peers out from a glass box).

"I don't want to be intimidated by the things around me," says Waites. "I'm not a historian, and I'm certainly not a purist."

Welcome Mat Not Always Out

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: If you are of the opinion that clergymen should phone first, you are off base. Too much precious time would be spent in making phone calls to set up appointments.

I am aware that there are housewives who would rather have their homes (and themselves) all spruced up to impress the minister, but, Abby, we clergy do not visit to check up on our parishioners' housekeeping skills. We don't care if the woman and her family are not all spruced up either. We prefer to see the family in a relaxed and natural setting.

I've been pushing doorbells for nearly 50 years, and I know whereof I speak. — DROP-IN MINISTER IN ALABAMA

DEAR DROP-IN: Now, a word from a housewife:

DEAR ABBY: I am glad you finally addressed the problem of clergymen who call on members of their congregation without calling first to give us at least an hour's notice.

I'm as God-fearing as the next person, but I don't want any unexpected company — and I consider the clergy "company."

When my doorbell rings, I peek out from behind my living room curtain to see who's there. And if it's someone I'm not in the mood to see, I don't answer the door. I don't care if my TV is blaring away and our car is in the driveway. I'm just "not home" to unexpected visitors. — ME IN VICTORIA, TEXAS

DEAR ABBY: In regard to pastors making surprise calls upon church members: I always telephone for an appointment to make sure the husband will be home. This prevents any possibility of gossip when a man visits a woman alone in her home. — "REV. BOB," TEMPLE HILLS, MD.

DEAR ABBY: I am an intern pastor, and as one of the new breed, I disagree with the pastor of my church who believes it's better to just drop in without calling first.

Abby, I have seen the embarrassment on the faces of many housewives when I have accompanied the pastor on these surprise visits, and I'm sure they would have appreciated a phone call first. — INTERN PASTOR, NO TOWN, PLEASE

DEAR PASTOR: Read on for a letter from a clergyman who also prefers the "unannounced" visit — but for a different reason:

DEAR ABBY: I am a minister who prefers to call on my parishioners with no prior notice. My reason: If calls are made ahead of time, the women feel they have to have a little something to serve with coffee or tea, so they go to the trouble of baking something. Naturally when the goodies are served, the minister feels obligated to eat them. Not that it's difficult — these homemade cakes, pies and cookies are usually very tasty. But after making three or four stops in one afternoon, can you imagine what the minister will look like in a few years? — 25 POUNDS OVERWEIGHT

DEAR OVERWEIGHT: I vote with giving the housewives prior notice, and I think most women would agree, but I am not about to take another poll. (I'm still inundated with: "Have you ever cheated on your mate?" Incidentally, the faithful women are ahead of the unfaithful, and the cheating men outnumber the faithful men 2-to-1. Stay tuned.)

(For Abby's booklet, "What Every Teen-Ager Ought to Know," send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.)

City Studying Pay Proposals

some possible changes which could be made to the structure."

Kuraitis said Arthur Young gathered information from employees and department heads to initiate the study.

"Our approach very much was to interview department heads at the beginning of the project to try to get some job documentation," Kuraitis said. "We also asked the employees to fill out a pretty extensive job questionnaire to better understand the job."

"I think it is important to stress one area that is sometimes misunderstood. We don't evaluate the people in those jobs, we evaluate the jobs."

The consultants considered factors including knowledge, ingenuity, administrative responsibility, operating responsibility, physical effort and working conditions in organizing the suggested pay scale, according to Kuraitis.

"What we did is basically create a pecking order of all the employees based on how they rated against those factors," he said.

Kuraitis said the consulting firm then conducted a market survey of a cross-section of cities, other public entities and local private employers to see what the jobs are worth in the market place.

Council member Lorraine Shinn voiced some concern over the comparisons included in the study.

"I see the cities you compared Greenville to in the survey and most of them are comparable, but I'm concerned with the reason you did two counties," she said. "One of them was Wake, which is an entirely different type structure than Pitt, and the other one was Wilson."

"Who we compete for a lot of these jobs with are our neighboring counties of Beaufort, Lenoir, Craven and so forth. They were not used for any kind of comparison, and Pitt County was not used for any. That gives me a little bit of concern."

Kuraitis said comparisons utilized were considered appropriate matches for the jobs considered.

Mrs. Shinn said information regarding surrounding counties should have been included in the study.

"We're trying to be competitive in our area," she said. "We are, in the type of work we provide, in direct competition with county governments in some jobs."

Council member Janice Buck

asked Kuraitis to provide a chart comparing benefit packages for Monday's meeting.

In other business, Ms. Dail informed council members that the city is required to contribute $40,000 to a police supplemental retirement fund for the 1987-88 fiscal year.

"As of July 1, 1987, the state has mandated all local governmental employers have to contribute 2 percent of the law enforcement officers' salaries into the supplemental fund," Ms. Dail said. "This particular contribution is in addition to the basic contribution to the basic fund."

Ms. Dail said the city is required to contribute $100,000, or 5 percent of the salaries, in 1988. The council is expected to consider possible sources to cover the costs in coming months.

Meanwhile, Bobby Roberson, director of planning and community development, asked the city council to set up a meeting with Pitt County Commissioners and the Pitt-Greenville Airport to discuss airport land use.

"The airport is controlled both by the city and county," he said. "At this point the county has had very little input into the airport land use issue."

The council also agreed to endorse a Pitt County resolution requesting that the Tar River be cleared of debris.

According to the resolution, the Pitt County Board of Commissioners asks the U.S. Corps of Engineers to allocate funds to clear the Tar River of navigational hazards as it passes through Pitt County.

After the council agreed to support the resolution, Mrs. Shinn asked Mayor Les Garner to find out if the Corps of Engineers has conducted or plans to conduct an environmental impact study on the proposed project.

During an executive session, the council nominated five members to the newly created Pitt County Convention and Visitors Authority. The authority was created to promote and market the area's travel and tourism industry by using revenues generated by the 3 percent occupancy tax.

The council nominated Art Thompson, manager of the Greenville Hilton, and Jonathon M. Yuhas, manager of the Holiday Inn, as the two industry representatives to the board.

Mary W. Harvey, owner and manager of Greenville Travel Center, was nominated as representative from a tourist or convention related business.

The council also nominated Donald Leggett, assistant to the East Carolina University vice chancellor for institutional advancement, and De De Carney, a sales broker for Century 21 Tipton Associates, as representatives not involved in the tourism, convention or related industries.

The council is expected to officially vote on the nominees during Monday's workshop.

The city and county are required to appoint five members apiece to the authority, while the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce will appoint one member.

Wrestling Coach Hopes Fans Can Tell Differences

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Wrestling was the opening event for this year's U.S. Olympic Festival, and American Coach Jim Humphrey wants it clear that this sport bears no resemblance to the one that some might be more familiar with.

This wrestling occurs on a mat and not in a ring and Humphrey is hoping the festival exposure will enlighten some prospective fans.

"They'll see that this is a pure sport, it's not a lot of showtime and it's not solely entertainment," Humphrey, wrestling coach at Indiana, said after the preliminary round of competition at North Carolina Central University.

"They see guys in the finest condition, you see some tremendous wrestling and you might get some new fans," he added. "The thing I find is that if you get somebody out to a wrestling match once, they come back."

Before a heat-drained audience in the Walker Center, Rico Chiapparelli, this year's NCAA champion in the 177-pound class, won in the 180.5-pound class to lead a group of 10 freestyle wrestlers through the preliminary round.

The wrestlers were the only athletes competing on the first day of the two-week festival, which for the first time is being conducted in five different cities in North Carolina.

Swimming was to start today at Koury Natatorium at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Chiapparelli, of Iowa City, Iowa, pinned Mike Sheets of Stillwater, Okla., in 1:52 in the first of three elimination rounds. The freestyle competition continues through Friday and the Greco-Roman wrestling also begins on Friday.

During a news conference at the end of the preliminaries, Humphrey argued for Olympic freestyle wrestling over professional and collegiate wrestling.

Humphrey called this nation's emphasis on collegiate wrestling

"ludicrous," and he says the competitors at the festival are striving to be the world's best.

"These people are a part of the world scene ... a whole different realm of excellence," he said.

Mark Schultz, the top-ranked amateur at 180.5 pounds, described wrestling as "more of a martial art than a sport. It's just hand-to-hand combat."

Under the festival format, the third- and fourth-rated wrestlers in each class will be involved in best-of-three elimination matches starting at 1 p.m. The winner advances to Wednesday's matches against the second-ranked wrestler to repeat the process.

Wednesday's winners proceed to Thursday's semifinals to face the national champion from the recent U.S. Open Championships in Las Vegas, Nev.

Among the winners was Karl Glover of Fullerton, Calif., who pinned

Search Is Over, Knicks Get Pitino

NEW YORK (AP) — For almost three months, basketball coaches throughout the country had sought the New York Knicks' coaching job. None was offered the position, and most eventually lost interest.

Rick Pitino never did. The Knicks offered the job to the 34-year-old Providence College coach last Friday and, after consulting with his team Monday, Pitino accepted.

Pitino, who led the Friars to the Final Four last year, said leaving the school was the "most difficult decision of my life."

"I was 100 percent happy there," he said at a news conference. "But I couldn't turn down the challenge of coaching the Knicks. If I didn't take the job, I would have always wondered about it."

Pitino, a Knicks' assistant under Hubie Brown from 1983 to 1985, recently signed a five-year contract extension at Providence worth a reported $320,000 a year.

"I had a long talk with him Saturday morning and told him Providence College would not stand in the way of his professional advancement," school President Rev. John Cunningham said. "He did not ask me to get out of the contract. I extended it to him."

Pitino, a New York native, was the first candidate interviewed by the Knicks after they fired Coach Bob Hill and General Manager Scotty Stirling on April 20. He withdrew his name from consideration May 1 after the Knicks failed to meet his hiring deadline, but changed his mind when the team offered him the job last week.

Pitino said he didn't accept the Knicks offer until Monday morning, after meeting with his Providence squad. He said the players unanimously supported his decision to take the Knicks job.

"We love each other at Providence, and it's difficult to leave the ones you love," Pitino said. "But they are still a part of my life, and always will be."

In his first year at Providence, Pitino took over a team that was 11-20 the year before and led them to a 17-14 record and a berth in the National Invitation Tournament. Last season, he guided the Friars to a 25-9 record and a trip to the Final Four, where they lost to Big East Conference rival Syracuse in the semifinals.

In New York, Pitino will face a similar rebuilding job. The Knicks finished the regular season with a 24-58 record and missed the playoffs for the third consecutive year.

"I'm not naive," he said. "If I didn't think we could win right away, I would not have taken the job."

Pitino said he would use the same fast-paced, team-oriented style that he featured at Providence.

"We were one of the highest scoring teams in the country, so it's obvious I like an exciting offense," he said. "But I also know that it takes solid team defense to win in the NBA."

Pitino said he was looking forward to working with Al Bianchi, the former Phoenix Suns' assistant who was named Knicks general manager last Wednesday.

"Al is a very knowledgeable basketball man," he said. "We're both very aggressive and we have a similar approach to the game."

Boston Celtics' assistant Jimmy Rodgers was considered a leading candidate, but the Celtics' demand for compensation halted the negotiations.

Pitino, who played at the University of Massachusetts, compiled a 91-51 record as coach of Boston University from 1978 to 1983. In his final season there, he led the Terriers to the NCAA tournament for the first time in 24 years.

During the Knicks' 84-day search, dozens of coaches were rumored to be candidates for the job. Two of the most prominent names, Larry Brown of Kansas and Jim Valvano of North Carolina State — said over the weekend that they were not interested in the job.

Valvano led the Wolfpack to the Atlantic Coast Conference championship last season with a victory over North Carolina in the ACC Tournament. Valvano also led N.C. State to the 1983 NCAA national championship over Houston.

"My family and I are extremely happy at N.C. State and I look forward to the challenge ahead," Valvano said.

Snow Hill Slams Post 39 To Take 1-0 Series Lead

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

SNOW HILL — Pitt County got a rude awakening in the second round of the Area I American Legion baseball playoffs Monday night as Snow Hill blasted a mistake-prone Post 39, 17-1.

Pitt had swept its three regular season contests with Snow Hill but that mattered little this time around as Post 94 used a strong pitching performance by George Greene and 20-hit attack to rock Post 39.

Post 39 had a corner on the error market Tuesday, committing six while Snow Hill made none.

The three-game series moves to Greenville tonight, with a third game, if needed, to be played Wednesday in Snow Hill.

"The main thing we have to do is come back mentally prepared. We just made too many mistakes," said Post 39 coach Toby Holliday. "You can't expect to make those mistakes against Snow Hill and win."

Greene, though, was the catalyst. He went the distance, scattering seven hits and giving up only one run. He also struck out seven while walking only two.

"He's gotten better and better each time out," said Snow Hill coach Jim Fulghum. "He's been pitching really good ball for us. He's got confidence in himself."

Greene gave up only one hit over the first four innings, a single in the second that amounted to nothing. Meanwhile, his teammates rapped off eight hits over the same period while scoring five runs.

"He did a good job for them," Holliday said. "He kept the ball down and made us swing at some pitches we shouldn't have. He just shut us down offensively."

Offense, however, was no problem for Snow Hill. Post 39's Tom Clark, who hit a home run in the first inning, led the offense with two runs, a home run and a double. The rest of the team combined for 15 runs, 10 hits and 10 RBIs.

lasted just two-and-a-third innings while giving up six hits and four runs, all of which were earned.

Tommy Eason started things off for Snow Hill with a two-run single in the first that scored Roger Smith and Shay Beaman.

Snow Hill expanded that to 3-0 when T.J. Johnson knocked in Greg Patterson with a single in the second. Jamie Southerland scored Beaman with a single in the third to make it 4-0 and send Clark to the showers.

Eric Jarman replaced Clark and got out of the third with no damage but gave up two hits and a run in the fourth as Snow Hill made it 5-0. Gary Ginn's RBI double scored Greene for the fifth run.

Pitt had a chance to get back into the game in the fifth. With one out, Bronswell Patrick singled, Ty Little followed with another single and Robbie McDonald reached on a walk to load the bases with two outs. Shane Adams then flew out to centerfield to end the threat.

"One swing of the bat and we're back in the ball game," Holliday said of the fifth inning. "I don't think it was the key, but it would have helped."

Snow Hill came back with five runs in the bottom of the fifth, taking advantage of three errors and a wild pitch. The result was five runs scored on only two hits.

Holliday said he still felt like Pitt was in the game, even trailing 10-0, because it still had four innings left to start a rally.

Snow Hill, however, was not content to sit on its lead.

Post 94 pushed across three runs in the seventh and four more in the eighth. Tommy Eason had a two-run double to key the seventh while Ginn, Southerland and Uly Russo all had RBI singles in the eighth.

Pitt's lone run came in the sixth when Jarman singled with one out and went to second when David Daniels was hit by a pitch. Tom Moyer followed with a reach on a walk before Patrick brought Jarman home with a sacrifice fly.

Despite the lopsided margin, it could have been worse for Pitt. Snow Hill left 13 men on while Pitt stranded eight.

Ginn was the offensive leader for Snow Hill, going 4-5 with two RBI. Smith Eason and Southerland added three hits apiece while Johnson, Russo and Patterson added two hits each.

Patrick, Jarman and Hunter Clark had two hits apiece for Pitt.

"We were in a situation where if we lost, we'd have had our backs to the wall," Fulghum said. "They've got a good enough team to win two games and we've got a good enough team to win one of two. It's whoever goes out and plays the best."

Pitchers Hope To Restore Order

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — In the year of the hitter, with both All-Star lineups studded with modern versions of Murderers Row, starting pitchers Mike Scott and Bret Saberhagen will try to restore a little law and order to the game.

Scott, the National League starter in tonight's 58th All-Star Game, will test his split-fingered fastball against an American League squad packed with New York Yankee power.

If Rickey Henderson, Don Mattingly or Dave Winfield don't get to Scott, George Bell, Cal Ripken and Wade Boggs may.

And waiting for his turn will be the crowd favorite, Oakland rookie slugger Mark McGwire, a redhead built like a lumberjack, whose 33 homers lead the majors.

Saberhagen, the lanky 15-3 right-hander starting for the American League, has no less a chore against Eric Davis, Andre Dawson, Mike Schmidt, Darryl Strawberry and Jack Clark, who have a total of 118 homers this season.

The original Murderers Row of the 1927 Yankees featured Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig and company. Nostalgia aside, the new generation of sluggers could stand in the lineup with the best of them at the pace they're going.

It is the special joy of baseball's All-Star Game that it allows fans to fulfill a fantasy of bringing so many top players together, to see, for example, Boggs with his .375 average and Mattingly with his .336 average, in the same lineup.

The game also is a stage for young phenoms like McGwire to stand with established stars, and for aging players to take a final bow.

One had to laugh a little Monday watching the 23-year-old McGwire, looking like a wide-eyed overgrown kid, talking with the full-bearded Boggs and politely turning down the offer of a plug of tobacco.

A sellout crowd of almost 50,000 and clear skies were forecast for the 5:30 p.m. PDT game as the AL tries to win consecutive All-Star Games for the first time since 1957-58.

Despite a 3-2 loss last year, the NL has won 13 of the last 15 along with 21 of the previous 24.

The American League squad, with three rookies, is a little younger, averaging about 28 years, compared to the NL's average of 30. Eleven American Leaguers are making their first All-Star appearance, while all but four of the National Leaguers have been at the game before.

And as it has been all season, the 22 percent jump in home runs has been hotly debated. To help settle the question of whether the balls are any livelier, American League President Dr. Bobby Brown said both leagues would begin laboratory testing on the balls.

"We're going to repeat tests we conducted in 1984 when we awarded the ball contract to Rawlings," Brown said. "We don't expect any difference."

Brown said results would be back within two weeks "and possibly a lot sooner."

Asked whether the ball was "juiced," National League President A. Bartlett Giamatti, the former president of Yale University, quipped, "No more than I am, sir."

Scott and Saberhagen each have allowed 12 home runs this season but are split on the reasons.

Scott said he thinks the ball is livelier, although he has no proof.

Fenner's Lawyer Disappointed With UNC's Lack Of Support

GREENSBORO (AP) — A lawyer representing Derrick Fenner said he had hoped to use a show of support from Fenner's teammates and coaches to convince a judge to release the former North Carolina football player on a low bond, but only one representative of the team came to court.

"Our argument centered around the fact that it was clear Derrick was going to show up for trial, that he is known to these people (who attended the hearing) and that all these people had showed up to support him," said Joel Worshtil, co-defense counsel for Fenner.

About 20 family members and friends of Fenner attended the bond hearing on murder and attempted murder charges against Fenner in Maryland Friday, but Tar Heel defensive line coach Ted Gill was on the only person representing the football team. Gill did not testify.

"I was very disappointed that a lot of Derrick's fellow players and coaches — who had indicated that they would be up — did not come up," Fred Joseph, co-defense counsel for Fenner, told the Greensboro News & Record Monday. "I can understand that people don't want to get involved, but Derrick needs their help."

Joseph declined to say which players or coaches originally had agreed to travel to Maryland for the hearing on Friday.

Fenner's lawyers requested a bond of $10,000 for their client, who has been held without bond since turning himself in June 2 to Hyattsville police.

But Judge Jacob Levin, Prince George's County Circuit Court, set bond at $100,000, citing the severity of the charges and possible risk to the community.

Fenner, a 20-year-old UNC-CH sophomore and All-Atlantic Coast Conference tailback in 1986, is charged in the May 23 shooting death of Marcellus Leach, 19, in a suburban Washington apartment complex notorious for drug dealing.

He is also charged with attempted murder for allegedly wounding another individual in what witnesses described as a drug-related turf battle. Fenner is facing a maximum of two life sentences if convicted of those charges.

An Oct. 26 trial date was set Monday.

Although four other suspects are being sought in connection with the shootings, additional arrests have not been made.

When it was suggested that $10,000 would be a reasonable bond, prosecutor Mary Scherstrom revealed that on the day of the shooting Fenner allegedly spent $3,091 in cash at a Maryland store on furniture for his Carboro apartment.

She also said the salesperson noted that Fenner had more than $500 in cash left when the bill was paid. Scherstrom argued that Fenner be held without bond.

Joseph called the accusations leveled by Scherstrom untrue. He did not elaborate.

Worshtil said Fenner's parents, who live in Oxon Hill, are trying to raise the $10,000 necessary to secure a $100,000 bond from a bonding company and free their son from prison pending his trial.

"I hate to see someone spend $10,000 on a bond and get nothing in return," Worshtil said. "When you purchase a bond and then show up for trial, you don't get that money back."

"But I understand that Derrick is in a very bad situation. He's in prison and he's not guilty of what he's accused of having done and he wants to get out. His family cares very much for him and they'll do whatever they can to raise the money among family and friends."

Worshtil and Joseph maintain that Fenner was not in the apartment complex the night of the shootings and that the police identification fingering Fenner as a suspect is erroneous.

Wolfpack Signee Happy That Valvano Is Staying

By TOM FOREMAN Jr., AP Sports Writer
CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — When rumors surfaced that North Carolina State basketball coach Jim Valvano might be defecting to the NBA, Chris Corchiani saw red. And it wasn't Wolfpack red, either.
Corchiani committed to N.C. State in the spring, but when Valvano was reportedly the leading candidate to become the new coach of the New York Knicks, word of the Miami, Fla., native's displeasure was widespread.

Johnny Joyner was the top winner, taking a gold and a silver medal. Travis Ghand, Wes Cain, Wil Strickland and Seth Jones also won gold medals while Manda Nobles and Jason Gibbs won silver medals.

Herzog Hopeful Cardinals Can Hold On To 1st Place

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Barring any more unforeseen disasters, Manager Whitey Herzog hopes the St. Louis Cardinals can cope with injuries long enough to snare the National League East title.

"I wish it was over today," Herzog said Sunday of St. Louis' remaining 76-game schedule as the Cardinals broke for the All-Star game with a nine-game lead over the Montreal Expos. "You can't look back. The first order of business is to hold on."

St. Louis, already without its top two pitchers, thought for an agonizing moment it may have lost a third in Sunday's victory over San Francisco.

"He says he's all right," Herzog said of left-hander Ricky Horton, who was struck on his pitching arm by a line drive. "When I saw it hit him on the arm, I thought it was the old kibosh."

If Horton had been injured seriously, he would have joined left-hander John Tudor (broken leg) and right-hander Danny Cox (broken foot) on the sidelines.

Tudor, who was hurt in April, is targeted to return in early August. Cox, who was injured last week, will be idle longer. Still another Cards pitcher, left-hander Tim Conroy, has been absent since June 18 because of an ailing shoulder.

Herzog, whose club has a 56-30 record, hopes to get by with a four-pitcher rotation through the early part of an 11-game trip to the West Coast that begins Thursday.

"He threw good (batting practice) yesterday," Herzog said Sunday of Tudor. "He was moving around on the mound. If it (leg) is all right (next week), I think we'll rehab him (in the minor leagues)."

Strong hitting and superior fielding have enabled St. Louis to overcome its problems during its strongest first half since winning a second straight NL pennant in 1968.

The Cardinals, led by first baseman Jack Clark (26 homers, 86 RBI), have already nearly matched their homer output for all of 1986. Clark, at .311, is one of four regulars hitting better than .300.

All in all, St. Louis' 10 victories in 11 games heading into the week of the All-Star game left third baseman Terry Pendleton with mixed feelings while approaching the three-day break.

"There is a little urge to keep going. In a way, you don't want (play) to end," he said. "But then your body starts hollering at you. It needs a rest."

Center fielder Willie McGee has 69

RBI followed by Pendleton's 52 and shortstop Ozzie Smith's 46 for a team that has gone from first offensively in 1985 to last in the league last summer and back to the top this season.

"We're playing extremely well. It's important for us to keep playing hard," Smith said. "The attitude is no different than it's ever been, but the intensity level may be higher."

Second baseman Tommy Herr, a defensive standout who has been in a recent hitting slump, thinks the Cardinals can maintain their alert, aggressive style.

"This team's come too far to have a lapse now," Herr said. "We thought we were pretty good in spring training. Even though nobody expected us to be nine games ahead, we knew we could play. I think we'll be able to stay at the top of our game."

St. Louis' hallmark, says General Manager Dal Maxvill, has been its ability to overcome injuries that have also idled catcher Tony Pena, rookie outfielder Jim Lindeman and Herr for various periods.

"This ball club, they've pretty much convinced everybody that they don't pay too much attention to anything negative," Maxvill said. "That's a credit to Whitey Herzog and his staff."

Forget Birdies And Eagles, Watson Likes The Pheasants

MUIRFIELD, Scotland (AP) — Never mind the birdies and eagles, Tom Watson is looking — and listening — for pheasants.

"When I think of Muirfield in 1980 (the last time the British Open was played here), the first thing that comes to mind is the pheasants behind the second hole," Watson said.

It was, Watson suggested, almost a sign, an omen.

"I'm a shooter (a bird hunter), and I heard them crowing in there and that was my first real good feeling about the golf course."

Those feelings only improved as the week went along, and reached a point of outright affection on the third round when Watson shot a 7-under-par 64 and took a four-shot lead.

He eventually won by that margin, his third of five British Open titles. But it was a different Watson who heard the pheasants crowing that summer day seven years ago.

In 1980 Watson was at the height of his powers. In addition to the British Open, he won six American tournaments and one in Japan. He was named Player of the Year for the fourth consecutive time. He led the money-winning race for the fourth year in a row.

He was acknowledged as the world's finest player. There was no question about it.

But, despite his near-success in the U.S. Open last month, the questions about the Tom Watson of 1987, about he wants to hear no more.

"I'm sick and tired of answering questions about 'What's wrong with Tom Watson,'" he said.

But the questions are inevitable. From a position as the dominant player in world golf, he has slipped into the role of an also-ran.

He has won nothing at all in three long seasons.

It's been a slump of heroic proportions, punctuated by near-misses and deeply frustrating opportunities that slipped away.

Twice, during that non-winning period, he's put himself in title contention after 54 holes, only to have the last round rained out. He called a two-stroke penalty on himself for inadvertently grounding his club in a hazard and lost the tournament by two strokes. He's been in contention in the Masters.

And a month ago he finished one shot back in the U.S. Open.

It was, by far, his best performance in years. To Watson, at least, it was a signal that the worst was behind him.

"I played well enough, I did enough (in the U.S. Open), to prove to myself that I'm back," Watson said before a practice round for the 116th British Open Championship that begins Thursday.

"But winning is the name of the game. I haven't done that yet."

He paused a moment and his expression became wistful.

"Scotland has been good to me. I've played well in the Open. Muirfield is one of my favorite courses in the world.

"This would be a good place to end it," he said.

Jackson Set For A Return To Football After Season

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — The Kansas City Royals remain Bo Jackson's top priority, but the former Heisman Trophy winner plans to return to football — a sport he once said he would never play again — after the baseball season ends.

Jackson and his agent, Richard Woods, were expected to announce today that the former Auburn University All-American would sign a contract to play next fall for the Los Angeles Raiders of the NFL.

Woods said Jackson would "explain his reasons for playing football" during a news conference today.

"He wants people to know that baseball is still his No. 1 priority," Woods said Monday night.

Jackson, a rookie outfielder with the Royals, turned down a $5-million contract from the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, who selected him as the first pick in the 1986 NFL draft. At the time, Jackson said he would never play football again.

"We still haven't finalized the deal," said Woods, who met over the weekend with Raiders owner Al Davis. "There really isn't a timetable. But we'll go over it and try to work it out."

The Montgomery Advertiser, quoting unidentified sources, reported in today's editions that the contract would be worth about $1 million a year. The pact, the newspaper said, is a long-term deal with escape clauses in case Jackson eventually decides to play only baseball.

Jackson announced Saturday that he wanted to play for the Raiders, who made him their seventh-round draft pick this year. But he said his decision to return to football for at least part of one season does not mean his baseball career is over.

"Once I said I'll play baseball, I meant it," Jackson said. "I'm a baseball player now, and I'll always be a baseball player. I'll be a baseball player until they tear the jersey off my back."

At the All-Star break, Jackson was hitting .254 with 18 home runs and 45 runs batted in. He also had 112 strikeouts in 277 at-bats, which is on a pace to break the all-time single-season record of 189 set by San Francisco's Bobby Bonds in 1970.

As a football player at Auburn, Jackson gained a school record 4,303 yards on 650 carries, good for a per-carry average of 6.6 yards and a per-game average of 113.2. His best season was 1985, when he gained 1,786 yards and scored 17 touchdowns.

Avron Fogelman, co-owner of the Royals, said Jackson's contract will be restructured to protect the team in case he is injured on the football field. Fogelman, who met with Jackson over the weekend, said he never considered giving Jackson an ultimatum to choose between the two sports.

"I wanted to hear from Bo first, to find out what his objectives in life were," Fogelman said. "I have to recognize that if a man has the talents that he has, the right way to do things is to give him that opportunity to help determine how good he is in football."

Royals General Manager John Schuerholz said he doubted whether Jackson could play both sports.

"The question is, can anybody withstand the physical stress of football playing for a limited amount of games, and maintain the strength and agility of 162 games of baseball? I just don't know," he said.

"We're willing to let him try it for one year," Schuerholz said.

Raiders officials refused to comment. "It's up to Bo," team spokesman Steve Hartman said. "He's calling his own shots."

But several Raiders players were more than willing to talk.

"It's kind of like (the Academy Award-winning movie) 'One Flew Over The Cuckoo's Nest,'" defensive end Howie Long told the Los Angeles Times. "Bo must have had a frontal and rear lobotomy."

"In baseball, he has his moments when he hits a home run," tight end Todd Christensen said. "But over the course of 162 games, you can't always be the focus of attention. In football, it's different. Maybe that bothers him."

Defensive back Mike Haynes said he "wasn't so much surprised and I was elated" by Jackson's decision to play football again.

"When he was going into the (NFL) draft, I saw so many highlight films of him, and I've never seen a running back with the speed he has," Haynes said. "Maybe this is where he wants to be anyway and just doesn't know it. If he gets here and the fire starts, maybe he'll give up that silly game of baseball."

Hal Baird, Auburn's baseball coach, said Jackson could play both sports at levels of excellence in college, but may not be able to duplicate the performance in the professional ranks.

"He's always been at the top," Baird said. "He's been the measure that other people were compared to in anything he's done. He's without a doubt the greatest athlete I've ever seen. But I don't think he can do this and do justice to both sports."

Ali May Have Brain Surgery This Week

NEW YORK (AP) — Muhammad Ali, the former heavyweight champion who was diagnosed as having Parkinson's Syndrome in 1984, may have brain surgery later this week to help minimize symptoms of the affliction.

The 45-year-old Ali will have tests done this week and surgery will depend on the results of those examinations, a spokeswoman at Humana Hospital in Mexico City told The Associated Press on Monday night.

Dr. Ignacio Madrazo, a Mexican neurosurgeon, told ABC's Monday Sportsnight that there is a "great chance" he will perform the operation on Ali.

Spokeswoman Lourdes Ortiz said Madrazo would not speak to reporters at Ali's request.

Ali appeared with promoter Don King and World Boxing Council President Jose Suliman in a live half-hour television show in Mexico City on Monday night, but made no mention of any surgery. Guillermo Ochoa, host of the show Nuestro Mundo (Our World) on Televisa, did not ask Ali about surgery or his ailment.

Ali, wearing sunglasses and slurring many of his words, spoke mostly of his religious beliefs and about his boxing career.

The surgery involves taking cells from the adrenal glands, which produce dopamine, and placing them in the brain. Dopamine, which ABC said Ali has been taking three times a day, is deficient in this condition.

Madrazo told ABC that he has performed the operation on 18 patients severely afflicted with the disease.

Parkinson's Syndrome is a mild form of Parkinson's disease, which is a degenerative affliction of later life characterized by a rhythmic tremor and muscular rigidity.

ABC News' medical expert Timothy Johnson, who also appeared on the show, said there are serious questions about the operation's long-term effectiveness.

"It's been tried in various forms and places over the years, but it has been refined in Mexico," Johnson said. "It's new. We don't know how effective it will be in the long run. The surgeons from Mexico, in reporting their results, have said it probably is more effective in more mild or moderate forms of the disease."

Ali has been in Cocoyoc, Mexico, 55 miles south of the capital, attending a seminar on boxing safety.

Ali, the only three-time heavyweight champion, retired from boxing in 1981. He first won the title on Feb. 25, 1964 with a seventh-round knockout of Sonny Liston.

Others winners were Paul Wiederman of Boston, at 105.5; Jack Cuvo of Easton, Pa., at 114.5; and John Smith of Stillwater, in the 136.5-pound class.

Also advancing to the next round were Pete Yozzo of Sayville, N.Y., at 149.5; Jim Heffernan of Iowa City at 163; Mike Foy of Minneapolis at 198; Kirk Trost of Ann Arbor, Mich., at 220 and Craig Pittman of Freeport, N.Y., at 286.

Elsewhere, Hill Carrow, executive director and president of North Carolina Amateur Sports, reported that ticket sales have exceeded the $1.9 million mark. He said all seats have been sold for Friday night's opening ceremonies, and that all tickets had been sold for all sessions of equestrian, swimming, synchronized swimming, diving, and the gold-medal rounds of boxing.

Edwards Is Winner

GOLDSBORO — Jack Edwards placed in four events during competition at the U.S. Masters Swimming Tournament held in Goldsboro last weekend.

He took first in the 50-meter back stroke and second in the 100 and 200-meter backstroke. He also took third in the 50-meter free style.

The tournament, which is a competition for those 20 years and older, is set up with separate age divisions. Edwards competed in the 60-64-year old age group.

Eggs Over Easy
 True caviar is one of the most expensive foods in the world. While some companies sell fresh-water caviar for $12 a jar, 1.75 ounces of the true Russian delicacy may sell for at least $50. Caviar is actually salted sturgeon eggs. The sturgeon are gutted and the eggs are processed under the guidance of a caviar master. The master separates the eggs and then makes the most important decision of all: how much salt to add. The best caviar requires the least amount of salt.

 On those occasions when we lecture to inexperienced players, it never fails to surprise us how many questions we get about exotic conventions and play techniques. Our response invariably is that most players at that stage of their development would do well to forget about the complicated and concentrate on mastering the basics. This is a hand we like to use as a play problem.

East-West have a good sacrifice at five diamonds, and quite probably would make that contract since it is unlikely that North would find the killing spade attack. However, the vulnerability was against them, so South was allowed to buy the contract at four hearts.

After a diamond opening lead, the spade suit is the key to the hand. Since declarer must lose two club tricks, he will get home if he can hold his spade losers to one. He can do that by successfully finessing for the jack of spades; the problem is he can take the finesse either way. Strangely enough, the solution is not to take the spade finesse at all! Ruff the diamond lead, cross to a trump, ruff another diamond and get back to dummy with another trump to ruff the last diamond. Now simply play the ace and another club. The defenders can get one more club trick, but they must then either break the spade suit or else yield a ruff sluff. Either way, South will lose only one spade.

In this situation the average guesser will be right half the time. Being 100 percent sure instead is a source of great comfort.

Taiwan lifts Martial Law After 38 Years

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — President Chiang Ching-kuo today decreed the end of martial law imposed by his Nationalist Party 38 years ago when it fled to this island after Communists took over mainland China.

The official Central News Agency quoted Chiang as saying in a decree that martial law would be replaced at midnight (noon EDT) by new security measures approved by the Legislative Yuan, Taiwan's highest lawmaking body.

"We are looking at the government's next move cautiously," dissident leader Kang Ning-hsiang told The Associated Press. "The political environment is still largely unclear now."

Martial law was imposed in 1949 when the Nationalist government and about 2 million supporters fled to Taiwan after losing a civil war to the Communists on the Chinese mainland. Martial law has been a mainstay of the Nationalist's authoritarian rule.

Chiang first announced last October that he would lift martial law, which barred the formation of new political parties and allowed civilians to be tried by military courts on sedition and other charges. However, it remained in effect while replacement security measures were drafted.

Enforcement of martial law has not been strict in recent years. In September, dissidents formed the Democratic Progressive Party, which went on to receive 21.6 percent of the vote in December legislative elections.

Under the new security measures passed by the Legislative Yuan last month, new political parties are permitted, but they must be anti-Communist and back the unification of Taiwan and China. The provision is aimed at discouraging the independence movement supported by many native Taiwanese, who comprise 85 percent of the island's 19.5 million people.

Both the Nationalists and Communists maintain they are the sole legitimate government of China. The Democratic Progressive Party has proposed a plebiscite to let Taiwanese determine their future.

Kang, a Democratic Progressive Party legislator, said the new security stipulations might restrict the growth of the opposition party and their enactment "demonstrated the Kuomintang's lack of commitment to democracy."

During four months of debate in the Legislative Yuan, dissident lawmakers claimed the security provisions were designed to maintain Kuomintang dominance.

Dissidents have argued that a change is needed in the political system that ensures the Nationalists a huge majority in both the Legislative Yuan and the National Assembly, or electoral college.

The government-run Broadcasting Corporation of China quoted Chiu Chuang-huan, governor of the Taiwan Provincial Government, as saying martial law had effectively maintained national security and social stability in Taiwan.

Chiu was quoted as urging the public to support the replacement security measures and "unite and strive together for a stable and better life."

Many scholars believe the Nationalist Party's decision to lift martial law came about because of pressure of the increasingly vocal dissident movement, which has staged several street demonstrations recently to press demands for democracy.

Observers also believe the government move was aimed at improving the country's image overseas, particularly in the United States, which is Taiwan's main arms supplier and trading partner.

Chiang, 77, son of the late Nationalist leader Chiang Kai-shek, has been promoting reform to solidify public support for the Nationalist Party before the end of six decades of family rule.

He is expected to step down when his term ends in three years and has promised that a family member will not succeed him. The Chiang dynasty began when his father became head of the Nationalist Chinese government on the mainland in 1928.

Metal Workers Challenge South African Strike Ban

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The government outlawed a strike by tens of thousands of black metal workers 2½ hours after it began today and imposed a wage agreement, government and union officials said.

The National Union of Metalworkers of South Africa said its attorneys were preparing a court challenge of the government action.

"We're living in a mad situation here in South Africa. Negotiations mean nothing," said Peter Dantjie, the union's national organizer.

Piet van der Merwe, director-general of the Department of Manpower, said, "It's the normal thing. We do that all the time."

South African black miners also voted overwhelmingly to go on strike in gold mines and collieries, a spokesman said Monday. The miners and metal workers called the job actions on the issue of pay raises. The miners' union did not disclose the date of its planned stayaway.

Also today, the country's largest trade federation opened a convention that will focus on adopting a socialist program in defiance of warnings by the white-minority government. The move by the 750,000-member Congress of South African Trade Unions threatens to divide the black labor movement.

The metal workers' union said its members went on strike at steel plants and factories throughout the country at 7 a.m. There was no indications of any management or government move to force them back to work.

The National Union of Metalworkers of South Africa is the only one of 15 metalworkers' unions that rejected the final wage offer of the employers council, the Steel and Engineering Industries Federation of South Africa.

Broker Says Too Many Stars Are Doing TV Commercials

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Too much of a good thing may be bad when it comes to celebrities making television commercials.

"We're going through another revolution," said Marty Ingels, the man who started the first revolution in 1976 when he set up a business to induce stars to do commercials.

"We've reached the saturation point," he said. "It's a big controversy whether the celebrity endorsements have been overexposed."

It's difficult to turn on a television set and not see a star doing a commercial. Bill Cosby for Jell-O. Cliff Robertson for AT&T. Cybill Shepherd for beef. Michael J. Fox for Pepsi. Bruce Willis for Seagram's wine coolers. More than 50 percent of all income received by actors comes from commercials, according to the Screen Actors Guild.

"The first star to really cross into commercials was Edward G. Robinson, who did a Maxwell House Coffee commercial around 1966," said Ingels. "It raised a lot of eyebrows at the time. Now it's no longer a stigma. Look at who's doing commercials now — Robert Duvall, George C. Scott.

"And look at the stars who have series who are doing commercials. Bill Cosby, Michael J. Fox, Angela Lansbury, Bruce Willis. Sometimes the commercials run on their own shows. That means the networks are becoming less restrictive. At one time the networks would not allow anybody with a series to do a commercial."

Television eventually kills every trend by overexposure, from Westerns to variety shows to night-time game shows. It's doubtful star commercials can escape the same fate. The last trend in commercials was the use of "real people" with faces you would never recognize. The cyclical nature of television also plays a major role, as times and tastes change.

"Some stars have already blown themselves out of the water by doing too many commercials," said Ingels. "After a while people begin to feel they're being manipulated. People must never think they're being had. The only two stars who can get away with overexposure are Bill Cosby and Bob Hope."

Ingels became a celebrity broker

after many years as a comedian and actor. He starred in the series "I'm Dickens — He's Fenster" with John Astin and in such movies as "The Horizontal Lieutenant" and "If It's Tuesday This Must Be Belgium." He is married to actress Shirley Jones.

"I had a kind of emotional crash," he said, "and during the period when I was trying to figure out what I was going to do, it occurred to me that everybody I knew was trying to reach a celebrity for an endorsement. There wasn't anybody in the business of lining up stars."

"The first people I got were for those musical nostalgia record packages they offer on television. I got Fats Domino and Jerry Lee Lewis and Rudy Vallee to do the commercials."

"There was a lot of resistance on the part of stars. In the beginning I was able to get big stars who wouldn't do commercials to do public service spots. Like John Wayne for the American Cancer Society and Robert Mitchum for the Job Corps."

Wayne later did commercials for Great Western Savings. "The first reason actors do commercials, of course, is for the money," Ingels said. "Where else can you go for two days and make more money than you can for a motion picture? And there are many stars who can no longer sustain their stardom. They're no longer in demand for movies or TV, but they can still do commercials."

"Another reason stars do commercials is to show another side of their talent. For instance, a star may want to sing."

Ingels said fees have consequently "gone through the roof, but they've also gone into the basement." "They've hit the basement by the virtue of supply and demand. You can get a star now for $75,000 when it used to take $250,000. Everybody is available," he said. "The list of holdouts, which we have on our bulletin board, is getting smaller every day."

Ingels said 1976 surveys showed a commercial had a 63 percent better chance of succeeding if it had a familiar face or name in it. The percentage has dropped to 38 percent.

"People are beginning to wonder if it's worth it," he said. "I see the time when it will be boring to see a star in a commercial."

Directors Reach Contract Accord

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Shortly after an accord was reached with one network, producers and directors today tentatively settled a dispute that had threatened to cripple the film and television industry.

"We have reached a settlement that will avert the first strike in the guild's 51-year history," Chuck Warn, spokesman for the Directors Guild of America, announced early today.

The directors had targeted NBC along with Columbia Pictures and Warner Bros. for a selective strike starting at 6 a.m. today. The 8,500-member union's contract with the Alliance of Motion Picture and Television Producers expired June 30.

As marathon talks with producers continued in Hollywood, directors in New York reached a tentative settlement with NBC, union officials said.

"NBC made enough significant moves in job security and seniority, and the negotiating committee voted to accept the tentative settlement pending approval by the membership," said Rick Glaub, a spokesman for the Directors Guild of America in New York.

No timetable was set for a membership vote, he said.

"We're pleased that the network (directors) staff has settled with NBC," said Warn. "But that affects less than 1,000 of our 8,500 national members. We hope representatives of ABC and CBS will be equally responsive." Talks between the guild and ABC and CBS were continuing in New York.

The guild, meanwhile, called off plans to picket outside major league baseball's All-Star Game, which NBC is broadcasting from Oakland, Calif., Warn said.

Officials of the Teamsters Union and the Screen Actors Guild predicted their members would support directors in a strike. Neither union had the authority to order its members to do so, although the Teamster contract protects Teamsters from retaliation by management if they do.

Networks May Rotate

NEW YORK (AP) — The three major television networks are close to agreement on a plan to rotate daily coverage of the Congressional hearings on the Iran-Contra affair, a CBS spokesman said.

George Schweitzer, CBS vice president for communications, confirmed Monday night that the network may begin taking turns with ABC and NBC showing the hearings, which are expected to continue through Aug. 7.

Today's New York Times reported that ABC and NBC had agreed to the plan and that CBS had agreed in principle. The plan could go into effect this week, the newspaper said.

All three networks have covered Lt. Col. Oliver North's testimony in its entirety, showing commercials only during recesses.

Showing the hearings has cost each network between $600,000 and $1 million a day in lost advertising revenue, the Times said.

The networks used a rotation plan for the Watergate hearings in 1973 and Lawrence K. Grossman, president of NBC News, proposed a similar agreement for the current hearings, the Times said, citing unnamed network sources.

The Watergate coverage agreement had to be approved by the Justice Department because of antitrust laws, and the current proposal has been reviewed by Justice Department officials, network executives told the newspaper.

Divorce Suit

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Sylvester Stallone, star of the "Rambo" and "Rocky" movies, has filed for divorce from his wife, Brigitte Nielsen, citing irreconcilable differences.

Stallone has separated from Miss Nielsen, spokesman Paul Bloch said.

The divorce petition, filed in Superior Court, said there was a prenuptial agreement for division of property. The details weren't disclosed.

Miss Nielsen, a 6-foot Danish beauty, made her screen debut in "Red Sonja" and starred with Stallone in "Rocky IV" and "Cobra."

They were married in December 1985. He was divorced from his first wife, Sasha, earlier that year. He has two children by his first marriage.

Midler Appeal

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Entertainer Bette Midler will appeal the dismissal of her $10 million lawsuit against Ford Motor Co. for using a voice that sounded similar to hers in a commercial, her lawyer says.

U.S. District Judge Ferdinand F. Fernandez ruled in favor of Ford as well as Young and Rubicam, the ad agency that produced an ad for Lincoln-Mercury cars. The ad used a voice imitating a Midler-associated song, "Do You Want To Dance."

The 1986 lawsuit contended that Ford and the ad agency did not seek Midler's permission to use the sound-alike voice.
