Holmes' Resignation Immediate

Nichols Appointed Acting Police Chief

By DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer

The Greenville City Council today accepted the resignation of Police Chief Floyd H. "Ted" Holmes, who cited a lack of support from the board as his reason for leaving, and appointed Capt. Randy M. Nichols as acting chief.

The council also appointed Capt. Nelson Staton as interim assistant chief at a special call meeting this morning. Both appointments are effective immediately.

After submitting his resignation Friday afternoon, Holmes, the city's police chief since 1983, accepted a similar post in Goldsboro.

In a bulletin issued to officers on the force Friday, Holmes said he planned to remain as chief until Aug. 21. However, council members voted during an executive session to make the resignation effective immediately.

Acting City Manager Mayo Allen said the City Council decided to pay Holmes for all vacation time as well as his 30-day notice.

"Your letter of resignation dated 17 July 1987 as Greenville police chief has been accepted by the City Council with regrets," Allen said in a letter addressed to Holmes.

"Due to the importance of this position and in the best interest of the city of Greenville, City Council has approved to give you leave of absence with pay from 20 July 1987 through 21 August 1987 plus 28 days earned vacation."

Nichols, a patrol captain, and Staton, an investigative captain, are qualified to run the department until a permanent police chief is hired, according to Allen.

"I feel that with those two gentlemen, we'll continue to have a good police department, and I have a lot of faith in both of them," Allen said. "I think both of them are well trained. Greenville is very fortunate to have these two gentlemen standing by ready to take command."

Nichols, 39, a 18-year veteran of the Greenville Police Department, received an associate's degree in law enforcement from Pitt Community College in 1966. He has also completed about 80 hours of related course work at East Carolina University, University of Louisville and the University of Virginia.

"I'm pleased with the appointment, and I am looking forward to working with the department and the city administration, and we plan to continue to provide a high level of service to the citizens," Nichols, a Pitt County native, said.

Staton, 41, a six-year veteran of the Greenville Police Department, has an associate's degree in police science from Pitt Community College and an associate's degree in business administration from Beaufort Community College. He plans to receive his bachelor of science degree in criminal justice from East Carolina University by the end of the summer.

"I'm very happy the council and the city manager have the confidence in me to appoint me to this position," said Staton, who has worked in the law enforcement field since 1969.

"I will definitely give it my all. I don't anticipate making any changes and I plan to support the new chief to the best of my ability."

Staton worked for the Williston Police Department before joining the Greenville force.

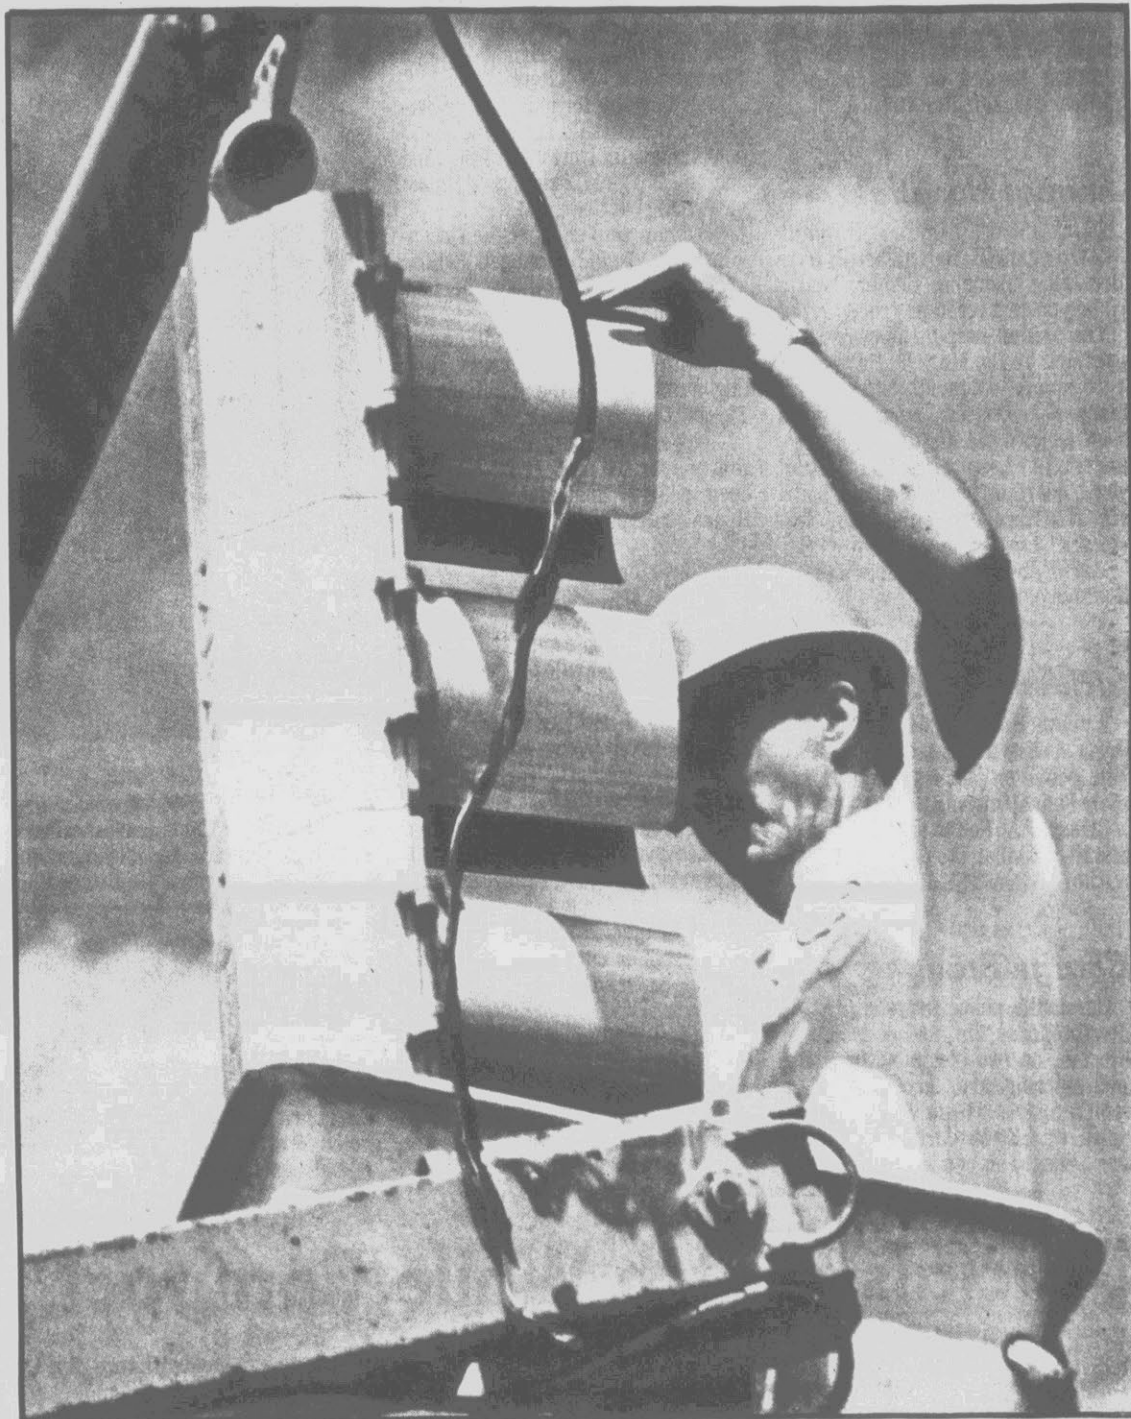

However, Allen cautioned the council to wait until a new city manager is named before initiating a search for a new chief.

"I highly recommend that you don't even consider a new chief until a new city manager comes in," Allen said.

The decision to move the resignation date up was made in the best interest of the city and the Greenville Police Department, some council members said.

"We felt, in order to keep the morale up and to try prevent the police department from becoming

Poindexter Confirms Limited Disclosure

By LARRY MARGASAK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former National Security Adviser John Poindexter testified today that administration officials "weren't telling everything that we knew" last fall as the Iran-Contra affair became public, in hopes that the hostages remaining in Lebanon might still be freed.

But he denied that he deliberately misled members of Congress after the decision was made to go public.

Testifying for the fourth day, Poindexter listened while several lawmakers expressed irritation at the way members of Congress were informed last fall. "The reason for not misleading the Congress is a very practical one," said Rep. Richard Cheney, R-Wyo.

"It's stupid. It's self-defeating," Cheney said. "Eventually you destroy the president's credibility."

Poindexter also said he was aware that Lt. Col. Oliver North helped conduct a secret resupply program for the Nicaraguan rebels, but said he didn't consider elements of that to be an "act of war."

He said he periodically informed President Reagan of certain aspects of the resupply effort. He said Reagan knew that North was the principal National Security Council aide on the project.

Poindexter showed flashes of combativeness as questions arose about his credibility.

Asked about a news conference statement made by Attorney General Edwin Meese last Nov. 26, that Poindexter was generally aware of the diversion, the rear admiral said, "I didn't suggest that Mr. Meese say that. You'll have to ask him about it ... I don't plan to."

Poindexter insisted throughout that he sought to inform members of Congress accurately once officials decided last November to inform them of the facts behind the Iran-Contra affair.

But he conceded it was "inartful" to say that all the weapons shipped to Iran would have fit inside one aircraft. He said North was the one who provided that detail for him, and "I didn't sit down and do the calculations."

Reagan, however, picked up that point and repeated in his Nov. 13

Wrecker Service Serves Purpose

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Have you ever parked illegally and returned to find your car missing and wondered who called the wrecker to tow it away? Or, have you been at the scene of an accident and wondered who called for the wrecker?

In both cases it was probably a police officer.

And while — for various reasons — people may not like to see their cars being towed away, the wreckers serve a valuable purpose.

They clear wrecked vehicles from streets so traffic can return to normal. They move parked cars whose drivers have violated the law by parking in restricted areas. They help stranded motorists get service for their broken-down vehicle.

They do these things in all kinds of weather, both day and night.

"There are about 23 wrecker services on our rotation list, although it varies a little bit from month to month," former Greenville police Chief Ted Holmes said last week.

And most of them are "highly responsible and take good care of citizens' cars. Problems are more the exception rather than the rule," Holmes said.

In Greenville, if you're illegally parked and your car is towed, you face having to pay a parking ticket, as well as the towing charge.

Holmes said that under the city code, when police call a wrecker to tow a car, the wrecker owner may charge $35 for a standard day-time tow on weekdays and $40 at night or during weekends. And an additional $10 charge is allowed if a dolly is used to move the vehicle.

Additional charges are allowed in exceptional circumstances — if the car has to be pulled out of a ditch, for example — and after 48 hours, a $2 per day storage fee may be billed to the vehicle owner.

The police department plays no favorites. If a wrecker service is called and cannot respond to the request to move a vehicle, the next wrecker service on the list is called. And the following wrecker service on the list is the first to be called for the next towing job.

In the case of accidents, drivers, as much as possible, are asked who they want to tow their vehicles. But if their wrecker choice is unavailable, the next rotation wrecker is called because the street has to be cleared.

And the wrecker charge for accidents is a matter between the vehicle owner and the wrecker service.

How many cars are towed by police? Holmes said that no running total is kept. But he said "on some days when the university (East Carolina) is in operation, particularly early in the fall semester, we may

Incident Reported

William Earl Sheppard, 16, of 106 Paris Ave. was arrested by Greenville police on peeping tom charges early Sunday morning.

Officer J.A. Felton said the charge resulted from an incident that occurred at 1405 Broad St. about 1 a.m.

Charge Brought

Greenville police arrested Ashley Dwight Jones Jr., 18, of Route 4, Kinston, on two counts of breaking and entering and larceny from a vehicle about 1:33 a.m. Sunday.

Officer J.K. McCarthy said Jones was charged in connection with the theft of two doors from a Jeep parked at the Bob Barbour auto dealership on South Memorial Drive that occurred on June 30.

Leith Purchase

Leith, Inc., owned by Michael J. Leith of Raleigh, has purchased Holt Oldsmobile-Nissan.

Jeff Goodman, general manager of the new Leith dealership, said Leith purchased Holt, owners of the dealership since 1967, July 1.

The Leith organization started in Raleigh in 1969 with a Lincoln-Mercury dealership downtown. There are now five Leith locations in Raleigh, including Leith AMC-Jeep, Leith Auto Center, Leith Hyundai, Leith Kawasaki and Leith Rent-A-Car.

Including the former Holt dealership, Goodman said Leith now has 15 dealerships in North Carolina and one in Virginia, selling "almost everything but Chevrolet."

Goodman said signs at the Greenville location will be changed "within about 30 days" to reflect the new ownership.

A Greenville native, Goodman has been with Leith for seven years, starting in 1980 with the then-Leith-owned Toyota East. Goodman then worked at Leith's Laurinburg Buick dealership and for the past three years has been general manager of Leith's Honda dealership in Wilson.

Thefts Reported

Investigators said eight thefts were reported to Greenville police over the weekend.

Officer J.G. Bridges said a signal light was taken from a car parked at Pitt County Memorial Hospital in an incident reported at 7:34 a.m. Saturday. Officer F.G. Pruitt said two speakers, valued at $400, were taken from a car parked at PCMH in an incident reported at 8:45 a.m. and said a tape player valued at $250 was taken from a car parked at 1400D Fleming St. in an incident reported at 12:35 p.m.

Officer L.R. Kepler said a bicycle was taken from 307 Church St. in an incident reported at 10:59 a.m. Saturday, while Officer M.E. Hayes said a radio and digital clock were taken from 1102 Fairfax Ave. in a break-in reported at 2:21 a.m. Sunday.

Officer D.W. Nichols said a 1981 model car was taken from an alley beside the Attic nightclub in downtown Greenville in an incident reported at 12:30 p.m., while Officer J.M. Jones said a stereo system and amplifier, with a combined value of $280, were taken from 505 E. Fourth St. in a break-in reported at 2:36 p.m.

According to Officer B.W. Lewis, five pairs of jeans and five pairs of shoes, with a combined value of $340, were taken from Jeans Glory at 408 Evans Mall in a break-in reported at 11:48 p.m.

Workshop

Two Pitt County teachers are participating in a five-day workshop titled "Recombinant DNA for Beginners."

Nancy Evans of D.H. Conley High School and Leslie Brinson of Rose High School are among 29 biology teachers. They are the first group participating in a three-year effort by the North Carolina Biotechnology Center's Secondary Education Project to train and equip hundreds of the state's high school biology teachers to teach their students the science, applications and social issues of biotechnology.

The five-day workshop is being directed by the Cold Spring Harbor Laboratory in New York. The teachers will conduct gene-splicing experiments that, until recently, were confined to research laboratories and advanced college courses. They will use enzymes to dissect DNA molecules and rejoin the resulting fragments into new recombinant DNA molecules.

After the workshop, the teachers will spend two days devising lesson plans and materials to teach what they have learned.

The North Carolina Biotechnology Center is a private, non-profit corporation that promotes biotechnology research, industrial development and public awareness throughout the state.

Charges

Greenville police arrested two men on larceny charges Saturday in connection with separate incidents at the Piggly Wiggly grocery at the intersection of Dickinson Avenue and Hooker Road.

13 Die In N.C. Accidents

By The Associated Press
Thirteen people died in traffic accidents on state roads this weekend, including a 17-year-old Salisbury teen-ager who was thrown from a car in which he was a passenger, the state Highway Patrol said.

A North Carolina teen-ager was also killed in an accident in South Carolina, authorities said.

Matthew Walden, 13, of Wingate, died in an accident between a car and a motorcycle at 12:23 a.m. Sunday in Pageland, S.C., in Chesterfield County, the South Carolina Highway Patrol said.

Harvey Lee Richardson was killed at 1 a.m. Sunday on a rural road in Rowan County, about 1 mile east of Salisbury. He was thrown from a vehicle that struck a ditch and overturned, troopers said.

Ted Bryon Long, 21, of Pisgah Forest was killed at 11 p.m. Saturday on a Henderson County rural road, about 8.6 miles south of Hendersonville. Long was killed when his car ran off the left side of the road, struck a cinder block wall, tumbled down an embankment and struck a tree, troopers said.

John Walter Kearney, 26, of Warrenton was killed at 2:15 p.m. Sunday in Vance County on N.C. 39, about 2.5 miles south of Henderson. Troopers said kearney's motorcycle collided with a car.

Ruth Ann Locke, 32, of Durham was killed at 10 p.m. Saturday on U.S. 421, about 4 miles north of Clinton in Sampson County. Locke was killed when his car ran off the road and overturned several times, troopers said.

Glenn Allen Beckner, 22, of Lillington, was killed at 4 p.m. Saturday on a rural road in Harnett County, about 2 miles north of Spring Lake. The vehicle he was driving struck a tree, troopers said.

Lizette Laracuenta, 25, and Nathalie Laracuenta, 94, both of Greenville, S.C., and Woodrow Lathan Jr., 46, of Brentwood, Md., were killed at 11:05 a.m. Saturday on N.C. 71, about 1.5 miles north of Red Springs in Robeson County. Troopers said the cars in which the Laracuentas and Lathan were riding collided ead-on with another vehicle. Janice Deblasio, 30, of Spring Lake was killed t 11:30 p.m. Friday on a rural road in Cumberland County. Troopers said Deblasio's car struck a tree.

Jamont Keith Reddick, 10, of Washington was killed at 7:50 p.m. Friday on a rural road in Beaufort County, about 7 miles north of Washington, troopers said. He was a passenger in a vehicle that collided with another vehicle.

Arthur Ray Richardson, 37, of Rocky Mount, was killed at 6:05 p.m. Friday on a rural road in Nash County, about 4 miles north of Nashville. The vehicle he was driving struck a tree, troopers said.

Danny Ray Vickers, 23, of Stanley, was killed at 3:10 a.m. Saturday on a rural road in Gaston County, about 1 mile northeast of Stanley. He was a passenger in a vehicle that struck a driveway culvert, troopers said.

Kenneth Williams Wilkes, 22, of Fayetteville, was killed at 5:15 a.m. Saturday on a rural road in Cumberland County, just east of Fayetteville. The vehicle he was driving struck a tree, troopers said.

The North Carolina highway fatality toll now stands at 774. Last year at this time, 884 people died on state roads, troopers said.

Utilities Meet

The Greenville Utilities Commission board will meet in the training room of the GUC operations center on Mumford Road at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday for a workshop session.

Officials Watch While Compact Debated

By The Associated Press
Efforts to remove North Carolina from the Southeast Low-Level Nuclear Waste Compact have South Carolina officials worried that the dump in Barnwell could remain open after the 1992 closing deadline.

North Carolina was chosen in September to host a new waste disposal facility, relieving South Carolina of the responsibility by 1992. But legislators and a host of public interest groups in North Carolina have battled to withdraw the Tar Heel state from the regional compact.

A bill requiring North Carolina to withdraw has been approved by the state Senate and a House committee and is awaiting consideration by the full House. The bill could be considered this week, and both sides say the vote will be close.

"It's certainly not a foregone conclusion either way," one legislative observer said. "At one point, it was on a roll toward passage, literally moving that way with the old steamrollers going in the legislature. But it has since begun to crumble some."

Regardless of what North Carolina decides, some experts say South Carolina could remain the nation's major dumping ground for low-level nuclear waste longer than anticipated.

A waste facility is unlikely to be built by the deadline of Dec. 31, 1992, experts said. In addition, Chem-Nuclear Systems Inc. officials are lobbying state legislators in an effort to convince them to keep the company's Barnwell site open past the deadline.

But Tucker Eskew, a spokesman for Gov. Carroll Campbell said, the governor "strongly supports" the completion of the compact process by the 1991 date.

The next regional low-level nuclear waste site is supposed to be open by 1991 to allow time for transition from one site to the other, said Katherine Visocki, spokeswoman for the eight-state compact.

Campbell is cautious but optimistic about compact members meeting the deadlines set in the agreements, Eskew said.

If that does not occur, "the state is prepared to clearly lay out its position and take countermeasures," he said. Eskew said he could not be more specific at this time.

"We do expect the compact (members) to live up to the agreements," he said.

One of the major lingering questions is what occurs if the 1992, deadline is not met.

Two Accidents Reported

Two related accidents occurred in Winterville on Saturday, injuring drivers of two of the vehicles involved, police say.

A pickup truck overturned at 6:30 a.m. injuring the driver in an accident at the intersection of N.C. 11 and Boyd Street just outside Winterville, according to Trooper Spencer Padgett of the N.C. Highway Patrol.

Padgett said a car driven by Tony Lee Davis of Route 1, Dover, was headed north on N.C. 11 when a pickup truck driven by Arnell Credle of Winterville pulled away from a stop sign on Boyd Street into the path of Davis' car. Davis' car hit Credle's truck in the side causing it to overturn, Padgett said.

Credle was treated and released from Pitt Memorial Hospital on Saturday, officials said.

In a related incident, a car driven by Pat Bundy left Academy Street in Winterville and collided with a car headed westbound on Cooper Street driven by Jonnie Lee Swindell, according to Winterville acting Chief of Police Lester E. Smith. Bundy, a volunteer rescue worker, was on his way to the scene of the first accident, Smith said. He said the accident was still under investigation and no charges had been filed as of Monday morning.

The condition of Bundy, a patient at Pitt Memorial Hospital, was unavailable.

P&Z Agenda Set

Three rezoning requests head the list of items to be discussed by the Greenville Planning and Zoning Commission at its monthly meeting Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in the third floor council chambers of City Hall.

The panel will hear a request by PEDS Venture to rezone a 79-acre tract located off the western right-of-way of Evans Street extension and north of White Road from residential/agriculture to planned unit development.

The commission will discuss a request by Marvin K. Blount Jr. to rezone a 9.76-acre tract located off the eastern right-of-way of Evans Street extension and west of Bedford subdivision, section II, from medium density residential and office and institutional to high density residential and office and institutional.

A request by the planning and development to zone a 619-acre tract located off the western right-of-way of Memorial Drive and north of Greenfield Boulevard to office and institutional.

The commission will also discuss preliminary plats of Planter's Walk, phase III, and Nelson Crisp property located off the southern right-of-way of Greenville Boulevard and north of Lyndale subdivision.

The Planter's Walk subdivision plat involves 57 lots and 3,193 linear feet of streets on a 24.6-acre tract, while the Crisp plat involves two lots on a 1.68-acre tract.

A request by M.W. Aldridge to change the street name of a portion of Tuckahoe Drive located in Rabbit Run subdivision to Rabbit Run will also be considered.

The panel will discuss a request by H & C partnership to annex Westhaven subdivision, section 8, containing 26.73 acres. The property is located south of Whichport development, east of Woodhaven Road and is contiguous to the primary corporate limits.

Annexation efforts and a request to allow child day care centers in office and institutional zoning classifications will also be discussed.

PIT AND FISSURE SEALANT

Wouldn't it be nice if we could paint our bodies with an invisible sealant so we'd never gain an inch of fat? In fact, scientists have come up with such a device for teeth. It doesn't prevent fat (teeth don't get fat), but it does seal out cavities.

Dentists can apply a clear plastic coating to the grooves and depressions (pits and fissures) of the chewing surfaces of back teeth (molars) where plaque and food particles collect. It acts as an invisible barrier, protecting these decay prone areas from decay. How about this? Studies have shown the sealants can reduce tooth decay by as much as 90% to 100%. We recommend sealants for all children.

Application is simple and fast. The teeth to be sealed are cleaned and swabbed with a solution that helps the sealant adhere to the surface. The sealant is then brushed onto the teeth and allowed to harden. Sealants do wear away eventually and may need to be reapplied.

Call our office today for an appointment for your children. Sealants are very effective in reducing tooth decay.

Note: We invite all participants of the Blue Cross/Blue Shield personal care plan to come by our office. We are a member of Cost Care.

AIDS EDUCATION — Freddie Pierce, a student at Mount Olive College and a professional ventriloquist, is working with the Onslow County Board of Education to create a program about AIDS and teenage pregnancy prevention. (AP Laserphoto)

N.C. Man Will Educate Kids With Ventriloquism

GOLDSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Freddie Pierce will use his talent for ventriloquism to educate teen-agers about AIDS and pregnancy prevention, but neither he nor his dummy will mention contraceptives, homosexuality, or abortion.

Instead, Pierce and his dummy, Richard J. Waldorf III, will make abstinence the centerpiece of their program for Onslow County students.

Pierce said at first he had a hard time deciding whether or not to do the program. While he felt it was his duty "not only as a Christian but as a fellow human being" to do anything he could to help educate young people about AIDS and teen-age pregnancy, he also felt the subject might be too controversial to handle.

"What really turned me toward doing this (is) ... that a close friend of mine ... said that since she had been nursing, she had seen so much teen-age pregnancy and the real alarm of AIDS," Pierce said. "She said it was very important for me to do this."

Pierce, a student at Mount Olive college and a professional ventriloquist, says he believes his presentation will be received better than a film shown in class because "students (can) get so much more out of it than a film presentation. I do not feel that a film or video can get across the points that a live program can."

Pierce has done extensive reading about comedy, and has written a research paper on laugh therapy. In his work he found studies that proved people learn better in a humorous setting than from a straight lecture.

Some comic relief will be included in the presentation, but not at the expense of any individual or group, Pierce said. The actual dialogue about teen-age pregnancy and AIDS will be straightforward.

Pierce designed the program with the help of Cathy Crumpler of the Onslow County Board of Education and Dr. William Huffman, a psychologist at Mount Olive College. After meeting with the Onslow County Board of Education to outline the program's content, Pierce began work on the dialogue.

The state Senate recently passed and the House is considering a bill which would require AIDS education in the schools. If the bill does pass, Pierce hopes to take his show across the state.

"What I would ultimately like to do is travel across the state of North Carolina, presenting this program for all junior high and high school students," he said.

The program on AIDS will cover are truths and myths about the disease, things people are not aware of, things to be afraid of and things not to be afraid of, Pierce said.

The teen-age pregnancy portion will include talk about peer pressure and self-esteem, and will encourage student to talk to their parents.

IN THE STATE

Revenue Loss

WILMINGTON (AP) — A congressional proposal to double the excise tax on cigarettes to 32 cents a pack could mean a loss of about $75 million in farm income, a tobacco expert said.

Fred Bond, general manager of Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corp., a farmer-owned cooperative, based his figure on tobacco prices last year. He estimated that companies would decrease buying by 50 million pounds of tobacco.

"Any factor that affects demand hurts growers," Bond said.

Vaccine Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal plan to reduce the cost of childhood-disease vaccines in other states could more than double the cost of the shots in North Carolina while negating a state law that protects vaccine makers against liability, a state lawyer said.

Chris Hoke, a lawyer with the N.C. Division of Health Services said the surcharge plan under consideration would effectively kill the state's program.

"If they fund it through a surcharge, we will have lost all that we gained through our act," Hoke told The Charlotte Observer.

Tourism Boom

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Tourists are traveling to North Carolina at a fast pace, but officials at state tourist attractions are watching prices at the pumps carefully this summer, hoping that rising costs won't mean the travel business runs out of gas.

In North Carolina, the average price of regular unleaded gasoline is 91.2 cents a gallon at self-service pumps and $1.24 a gallon for full-service, according to Lundberg Survey Inc.

The prices are higher than a year ago, when self-service was 80.2 cents and full-service was $1.17 a gallon — and the highest since March 1986, when prices were 90.3 cents at self-service and $1.25 at full-service.

Scam Stopped

LANSING, N.C. (AP) — An investigation by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development has brought an end to transactions at a subdivision on Pond Mountain.

A so-called boiler room sales operation in southwest Virginia — which used banks of telephones to sell land on Pond Mountain sight unseen — has been abandoned, and the sales people who ran it have scattered, investigators say.

As many as 80 people, many from the Midwest, may be paying for 1-acre lots in the subdivision in north-west Ashe County. Some say they were told they are buying lakefront property, but the mountain has no lake and no roads to the land being sold.

Train Incident

GARNER, N.C. (AP) — A bizarre series of events involving an Amtrak train and Amtrak's Raleigh station has left one man dead from a collision with the train and another man injured slightly following a shooting at the station.

The events began Sunday night when a Garner man was killed when the car he was driving collided with the train at Garner crossing. Later, after the train pulled in at Amtrak's Raleigh station, a car leaving the parking lot careened out of control, damaging four other cars but injuring no one. Less than an hour after that, a Raleigh police officer was involved in a shooting at the station in which one man was injured slightly.

The driver of the car, whose name was not being released until his family had been notified, was dead when police arrived, Garner police officer D.G. McDuffie said. None of the 500 passengers on board the southbound Silver Star was injured, Amtrak officials said.

GOP Survey

WILMINGTON (AP) — The majority of state Republican Party chairmen are unsure who they will support in next year's primary, but among those who do have a preference, Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole and Vice President George Bush are the leaders, a survey shows.

Sixty-seven chairmen said they were not strongly leaning toward any candidate for the primary on March 8, when 12 Southern states will hold their presidential primaries.

Foreshadowing a showdown some expect nationwide, the two GOP contenders far outdistanced five other likely GOP candidates in the survey, conducted last week and published by the Wilmington Morning Star. Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., finished a distant third.

Dole led the pack with 36 of the 90 county chairmen questioned leaning his way. Twenty-three chairmen said they were leaning toward Bush. Kemp finished third with 14.

Advocates Say Reductions Wrong

RALEIGH (AP) — Reduction in eight fines by the state Environmental Management Commission could send a message to polluters that they can get away with environmental violations, say a varied group of people opposed to the lowered fines.

"I'm concerned the EMC is sending a signal, and I don't think that's the signal they intend to send," said Thomas Rhodes, state secretary of the Department of Natural Resources and Community Development. "My concern is aimed at the overall pattern of what I see emerging: If someone is fined, is all they have to do (is) to request a remission in order to get out from under the fine?"

Bill Holman, lobbyist for the Sierra Club and Conservation Council of North Carolina, said he saw two reasons for the increase in fine reductions.

"One is that the Division of Environmental Management is doing a better job of enforcing the law than in the past," meaning more violators are found and more fines are assessed, he told The News and Observer of Raleigh. But Holman's second reason is less positive.

"Word, unfortunately, has gotten around that if you're fined, it's likely the Environmental Management Commission will remit the fine," Holman said. "I really thing word has gotten out — 'Don't pay your fine; go to the commission and try to have it remitted.'"

And David H. Howell, a former EMC board member and now state water quality chairman for the Sierra Club said "the essential integrity and the effectiveness of the total environmental program is at stake."

But one commission member said if the panel began turning a deaf ear to appeals, it could send a different — and equally destructive message.

"What if the next commission meeting we have 10 violators and we don't remit one fine?" said Anthony R. Combs of Charlotte. "How will that be perceived by the public? Have we sent a message to the public that, no matter what, we're not going to let you off?"

Reductions in fines granted by the commission so far this year total $65,268.98 — almost twice the total of about $33,500 it forgave polluters in 1984, 1985 and 1986.

Combs said it was natural for the number of reductions this year to increase because the number of fines has increased dramatically, and it often takes more than a year for appeals to reach the commission. In 1985, for example, 35 fines were assessed. That number almost tripled to 91 in 1986. This year there have been 35.

Combs said, however, the success rate of polluters who brought their appeals before the commission had been increasing: In 1985, the commission forgave 20 percent of the dollar value of fines it was asked to reduce. That figure rose to 28 percent in 1986 and to 52 percent this year.

There also has been an increase in the percentage of the number of appeals that were granted reductions: In 1985, one-third of the appeals were granted reductions. Half were granted in 1986, and 60 percent have been granted this year.

Those who appeal the fines, which are levied by the N.C. Division of Environmental Management, say the commission needs to carefully consider each case. Any attorney for Sands Development of Myrtle Beach, S.C., said the commission — like a judge pronouncing sentence — should consider extenuating circumstances.

"It's like court," said William J. Moran of Jacksonville. "If you have a defendant who's penitent and who's taken steps to correct it, they're generally treated better than if they're defiant and have not been cooperative."

Sands Development of North Carolina Inc. was cited for seven violations of its wastewater-treatment permit at an Atlantic Beach resort and received a fine of $20,089. But the fine was cut to $12,589.

Morgan said Sands was spending between $50,000 and $100,000 on storm water runoff improvements to the Atlantic Beach resort — A Place at the Beach III — and that the company's money would be spent better on those improvements than on the fine.

Session Lengthy

RALEIGH (AP) — Weary legislators, who are still in Raleigh 114 days after the 1987 General Assembly began, have canceled vacations and business commitments for a legislative session that was optimistically predicted to end July 4.

When Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan instituted a new set of deadlines in February and targeted July 4 for adjournment, most legislative veterans were skeptical. Recent sessions have ended sometime in the second or third week of July.

But even those in the know didn't think the session would last until Aug. 7, which is the latest date on the adjournment rumor mill. If that adjournment date comes true, it would be the first time in more than a decade that the legislative session has run into early August.

In a traditional betting pool run out of House Speaker Liston Ramsey's office, 39 legislators, lobbyists and staff members plunked down a dollar each last month to guess the day of adjournment.

Viable Approach

The Greenville City Council should carefully examine the pay and classification study before it and use its recommendations to the city's advantage.

The study is a sound tool for improving employee recruiting, morale and performance. It can be utilized as such by the council.

By no means should council members accept the study's recommendations without closely scrutinizing their impact on budgeting and other needs. Any assessment must be fine-tuned, and that is the task now facing the council.

But the pay scale study is an expensive instrument for long-range progress and its importance should not be de-emphasized or dismissed by the council. The study cost the taxpayers $52,000. It appears to be a sound estimate of salary needs and the council would be imprudent not to glean its merits and implement them.

Equalization of salary and benefits and a consistent pay scale are important ingredients of quality services. To compete effectively with other municipalities and counties for top employees, Greenville's pay and benefits must be in line with other areas. In addition, to keep quality, experienced employees, some consideration must be made for those who have topped out on current pay scales.

It is reasonable to assume the city vies not only with surrounding entities for personnel, but also with areas like Wake County in certain markets. The council should consider this scope when assessing the study's recommendations. Although comparisons to nearby counties are certainly relevant and helpful, Greenville's salary scale should be reasonably competitive statewide. Council members might find it feasible to adopt this broad perspective.

Good employees are at the heart of a city's ability to function successfully. Adjusting salary scale is a key tool to attracting and retaining quality personnel.

A city's human resources are assets that must be serviced, safeguarded and maintained. The City Council should recognize the pay scale study as a viable approach to this issue.

Goal Remote

Yes, we too remember the winding-down of that conflict in Vietnam and accompanying indirect statements out of Hanoi that American aid in rebuilding the ravaged economy was anticipated.

A wire report dusted off that theme in reviewing contradictory Vietnamese preoccupations. The first was (and is) to keep fresh the memory and human cost of the war and American involvement; the other was (and is) to normalize relations with the United States and obtain American aid.

President Carter's administration made an effort, a decade ago, to restore relations. The Vietnamese government's insistence on U.S. aid helped scuttle that effort; but now we are told Hanoi and Ho Chi Minh City (formerly Saigon) are raising the issue again.

Just how they can possibly expect a sympathetic hearing is not clear.

That government's view of the war is reflected in the "American War Crimes Museum" which houses an impressive array of U.S. military hardware. A flame thrower, for example, is described as "used in burning villages of the South Vietnamese countryside", and beneath a 175 mm howitzer is a sign telling visitors "The U.S. imperialists mostly used this howitzer in their numerous criminal acts in the Iron Triangle area".

There are photographic memorials, too, of what the Vietnamese refer to as "atrocities of the U.S. imperialists". Any suggestions of killing civilians by the Communist side are routinely dismissed as "propaganda".

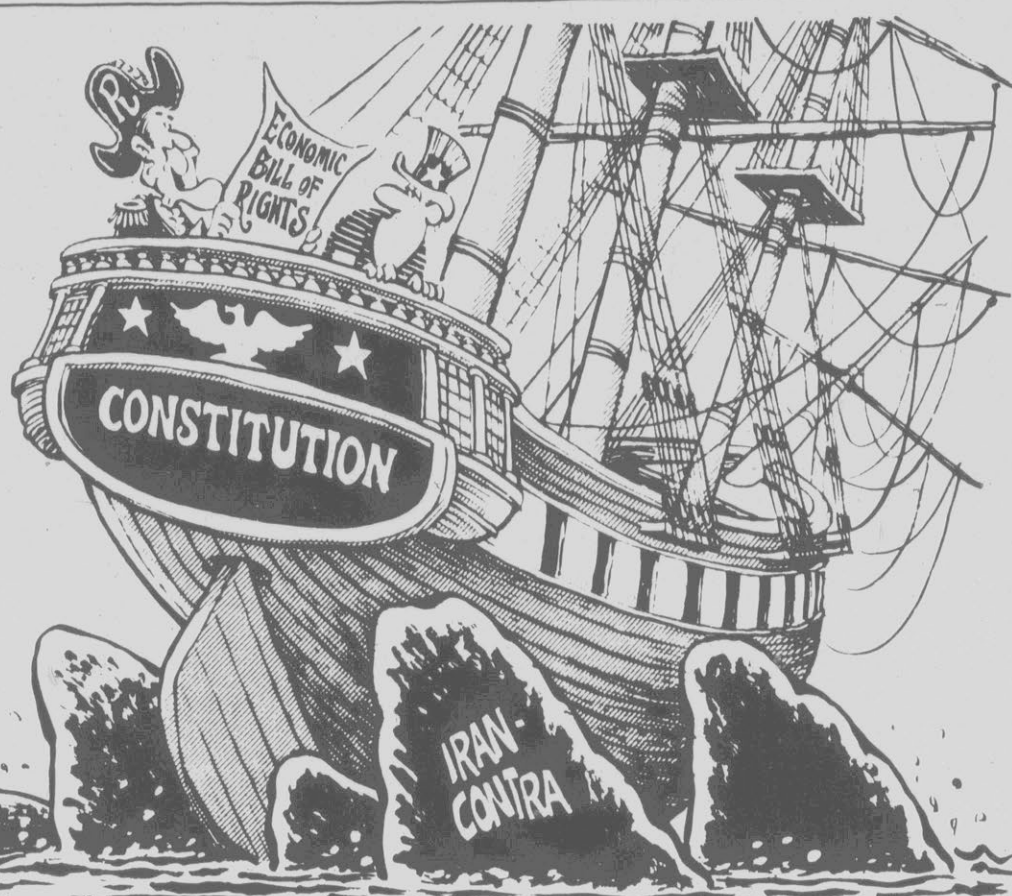

Rarely, we're told, is mention made of the South Vietnamese army as having played any role in the conflict.

All this raises many doubts over repeated promises of "help" in finding remains of 1,800 Americans still listed as Missing In Action. Hanoi's inaction in that direction speaks louder than words. Past promises call to mind those immortal words in an attention-getting advertisement, "You have my word on it".

Any chance of this country's "normalizing" relations with Vietnam in the foreseeable future is exceedingly remote.

It is a two-way street; and Hanoi is clearly blind to that fact of life.

To the editor:

Lt. Col. Oliver North personifies the truth of a 200-year-old quote by the poet and philosopher Samuel Johnson: "Patriotism is the last refuge of a scoundrel."

During seven days of deceptive testimony before the joint U.S. Congressional Committee, North presented himself as a patriot working in the national interest. And I'm not surprised a vast number of Americans fell for the half-truths delivered with intensity by a man whose chest was covered with medals.

North said he ran a covert operation to help Nicaraguan opposition forces fighting troops of the Sandinista government. What North and no one else mentioned during the hearings was the truth about the contra war — that the diverted funds helped the contra terrorists burn schools and medical clinics, destroy farm cooperatives, and kill innocent women and children. Had that perspective been provided to the American people, North's image may not have emerged untarnished.

Instead, North's public relations "snow job" makes giving millions to terrorists in Central America from the sale of arms to terrorists in Iran seem like an honorable deed. Has everyone forgotten those same Iranians held 52 Americans hostage for more than a year?

The blind public faith in North reminds me of a similar time 30 years ago when a charismatic figure commanded public attention with vicious accusations about Americans he said were communists. I fear we have created another McCarthy and filled him with a terrible resolve.

To the editor:

Your editorial deploring the publication of the William Tecumseh Sherman story did not mention an additional reason that the story should not have been published.

I refer to the parenthetical insertion added to Dr. Lewis P. Jones' remarks about the burning of Columbia. The insert of the remark ... (who allegedly burned Columbia) ... does not justly serve the reader nor does it place Professor Jones' remarks in proper context.

Perhaps the Associated Press writer should have talked to Jones longer or at least read Jones' history text for eighth graders on the subject of Sherman and Columbia.

Jones does not allege that Sherman burned Columbia. Jones suggests that the fire in Columbia was started by drunken Northern soldiers, some of whom had just been released from Camp Sorghum, a miserable prison camp near Columbia similar to Andersonville.

It sounds like the reporter has either been on a crime beat too long or has been listening to corporate lawyers and is afraid General Sherman's descendants will sue him for libel!

Sherman's only role was in not controlling the soldiers. Regardless of Sherman's later letters to his foster father in which he regretted his actions and wished that history would be kind to him, this quote Lewis P. Jones: "South Carolina, One of the 50 States, 1985, page 500) says it all: "Though I never ordered it and never wished it, I have never shed any tears over the event, because I believe that it hastened what we all fought for, the end of the war."

Greater editorial scrutiny should be paid to your stories from the Associated Press. Their errors do not always reflect well on the Reflector.

To the editor:

During the height of World War II, Winston Churchill told Franklin Roosevelt that during war the truth is so precious it must always be accompanied by a "Bodyguard of Lies."

This became the title of a well-known book on World War II intelligence by Anthony C. Brown.

Winston Churchill backed up his statement by allowing the Germans to bomb Coventry, England without interference in order to protect the secret of the British breaking the German War Code.

Oliver North seems to believe the same thing, except he refers to the Centurion and his Shields. And he backs up his statement, not just by helping the Contras stay alive, but by derailing the Reagan administration and perhaps allowing the Republicans in the next election to be blown out of the water.

Supersub Political Problem For Jordan

RALEIGH (AP) — The "supersub" controversy that erupted in the General Assembly last week could be a political albatross for Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan as he runs for governor in 1988 — if his opponents manage to hang it around his neck.

Complaints that he has not delivered on promises to involve more lawmakers in writing the budget and open the process to the public make Jordan vulnerable to Republican charges that he is ineffective.

Jordan and other legislative Democrats say the criticisms are unfair and ignore progress that's been made. But all too often in politics, images and perceptions are what count.

If the supersub issue takes hold, it could undercut Jordan's contention he is a better leader than Republican Gov. Jim Martin. Jordan says Martin doesn't know how to develop major initiatives and steer them through the Legislature.

"Being called ineffective by this governor is like being called ugly by a frog," Jordan said last month.

Last week, however, Martin supporters watched gleefully as Jordan, clearly on the defensive, was besieged by reporters demanding to know why the seven-member supersub still was operating in secret after he vowed it wouldn't.

"This year we thought it would be different because he (Jordan) said it would be different," Phil Kirk, Martin's chief of staff, said. "If anything, it's worse. They're playing games with the public and press. ... It shows that the lieutenant governor lacks influence in his own party."

One problem Republicans have in exploiting the issue is making it understandable to the average voter.

The budget process is complicated and bores even some legislators and other political junkies.

Presenting the controversy in terms that will arouse indignation across the state is a formidable task — but by no means impossible, says Merle Black, political science professor at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

"I think in the hands of a skillful media person it could be a heck of an issue," Black said. "You've got to create in the minds of the voters the same feelings you (reporters) had ... the absurdity of the open meeting that's really closed, the feeling that taxpayers are treated like spies when they just try to find out how their money's being spent."

Martin made the supersub an issue as he stumped for GOP legislative candidates in 1986. He depicted the "gang of eight" as an arrogant clique imposing its will by threatening to withhold "pork barrel" funds from the district of any lawmaker who resists.

Whether the issue struck a chord was difficult to determine. Republicans lost four seats in the election, which Martin called a victory because Democrats hoped to capture more.

Black says the GOP will have to be more adept next year for the supersub controversy to make a difference. He said Martin should study the 1986 campaign tactics of South Carolina Gov. Carroll Campbell, who used exaggeration and humor in his television commercials to depict the Democrat-dominated Legislature as "a good-old-boy network controlling South Carolina politics."

The situation has frustrated Jordan, at whose insistence the supersub — whose main task is to cut requests for new spending until they fit available revenues — kept the door open when it began meeting last week.

But by refusing to share budget documents and by talking in a coded dialect in which line items were referred to by number, the legislators made it all but impossible for reporters to figure out what was being decided. The consensus among the press corps was that despite the changes, the budget process still was largely private.

Battered by four days of intense questioning, Jordan was visibly angry Friday. "I'm through talking about this issue," he said sharply, cutting off his daily news conference.

Jordan apparently felt he was not being credited with any success in reforming the system. Not only are the supersub meetings open, he noted, but the group's decisions will be returned to budget subcommittees and the Joint Appropriations Committee for consideration before floor votes.

In the past, the supersub has pushed its spending bills through the full committee and the House and Senate floors in a day or two as the rank-and-file frantically combed the massive packages for hidden bombshells.

Another source of frustration for Jordan is that he's been targeted for criticism while the strongest resistance to change has come from the House leadership. He told reporters he had pushed as hard as he could without sparking a House-Senate war that would delay further the session adjournment, already overdue.

"I'm your best friend in trying to open up the process," he said. "I'm doing what I can."

Senate Democrats defend Jordan, saying he has shown courage in taking on a system that's gone unchallenged for decades.

"When you plow new ground, you hit a few stumps," Sen. Bob Warren, D-Johnston, said.

Strength For Today

Capt. John Callender, an officer of the Massachusetts militia, was drummed out of the army because of cowardice at the Battle of Bunker Hill. But re-enlisting as a private, he so distinguished himself for valor at the Battle of Long Island that Gen. Washington restored Callender to his captaincy.

This story has two important truths. The first is that it is entirely possible for a person to reverse the current of his life and cover himself with honor after he had previously covered himself with dishonor. The second lesson, however, is that this is the hard way to victory, and one to be avoided if possible. It is fine that Callender came back, but it would have been better if he had behaved at Bunker Hill in such a way that his disgrace would not have been inevitable.

Soviets Increase Arms Supply Shipment Pace

By NORMAN BLACK
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soviet arms shipments to Nicaragua are substantially ahead of last year's record pace, with weaponry valued at more than $300 million delivered during the first six months of the year, according to U.S. intelligence estimates.

The new estimates, provided recently to top Pentagon officials, indicate between 15,800 metric tons and 15,900 metric tons of war materiel, or about 17,400 regular tons, were delivered to Nicaragua through more than 20 port calls by various ships from January to June.

That would be about 3,000 metric tons more than the roughly 12,500 metric tons in arms shipments monitored during the same six-month period in 1986. According to previously released Pentagon statistics, the Soviet Union and its allies shipped a record 23,000 metric tons of weaponry to Nicaragua during all of 1986.

"The equipment is just pouring in," one ranking Pentagon official said recently. "The Nicaraguans are consolidating their military build-up and adding to it everything imaginable."

The official spoke only on condition he not be named.

The intelligence estimates, although classified at the moment, are expected to be released by the Pentagon in the near future. The Defense Department regularly provides the information as part of the Reagan administration's campaign to publicize the threat posed to Central America by Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government.

The latest statistics were made available at a time when President Reagan is said to be planning to ask Congress for increased long-term military aid for the Contra guerrillas attempting to overthrow the Sandinistas. Administration officials have said the president hopes to take advantage of public support for fired National Security Council aide Oliver

L. North, who gave impassioned pro-Contra testimony before the congressional Iran-Contra investigating committees.

While the release of the latest arms statistics appeared to be part of the new campaign on behalf of the Contras, the Pentagon sources insisted the figures were significant, nonetheless.

"It shows the Sandinistas are too strong militarily for any of their neighbors combined to deal with them," said one official, who like the others interviewed spoke only on condition of anonymity.

That applies to the Contras' prospects "at least in terms of hardware," the official said.

Despite the rising imbalance in military hardware, the sources said it did appear the Contras won a major victory last week when they temporarily overran and held a Sandinista military garrison at San Jose de Bocay in north central Nicaragua.

Based on initial intelligence reports, one Pentagon source said the Contras seized control of the garrison and held it overnight before being driven back, "proving they can operate in the center of an area where the Sandinistas have claimed firm control."

The garrison at San Jose de Bocay is known to be a base for Sandinista counterinsurgency troops.

According to the sources, the arms shipments delivered during the first six months of 1987 have included: anti-aircraft guns; electronic equipment, including radar units; armored personnel carriers; ammunition and a half-dozen Mi-8 HIP transport helicopters.

Reagan, Bork, Top NOW Subjects

By ANITA HUSLIN
Associated Press Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The National Organization for Women closed its annual convention calling for President Reagan's impeachment over the Iran-Contra affair and vowing to block Robert Bork's nomination to the Supreme Court.

Molly Yard, the new president of the nation's largest women's group, also said Sunday the organization would help put a woman in the White House.

Yard, who succeeded Eleanor Smeal, aid the 150,000-member group will work to elect women legislators at the national and state level and protest the Catholic Church's ban on abortion and birth control.

In an overwhelming voice vote Sunday on the last day of the three-day meeting, the 2,400 delegates approved a resolution calling for Reagan's impeachment, said NOW spokeswoman Jeanne Clark.

The resolution accused Reagan of failing to respect the constitutional separation of powers which reserves to Congress the authority to raise armies and declare war. It also accused him of attempting to impede the investigations of illegal activities of supporters of the Nicaraguan Contras.

Another resolution approved by the delegates opposing Bork's elevation to the Supreme Court is a priority, Yard said. "He is a Neanderthal. I don't quite know why he is still around."

"For the women of America we are not going to take someone on the court who is going to reverse (the legalization of abortion). It's our lives. We are going to fight every inch of the way to keep him from being confirmed."

Reagan picked Bork to replace retiring Justice Lewis Powell, and U.S. Senate hearings on his nomination are scheduled for September.

The delegates to NOW's 21st convention gave Yard, who had been the group's political director, an enthusiastic, emotional greeting after her election Saturday night.

"Well, hello Molly! It's so great to have you right where you belong," the delegates sang. Then Yard and many in the audience cried as she delivered her acceptance speech and embraced her daughter before the crowd.

"It's not just for me, it's for my daughter, it's for her wonderful daughter, it's for all of our daughters," Yard said.

The delegates also gave a rousing welcome Saturday to Rep. Patricia

Schroeder, D-Colo., who said she was thinking about running for president

"because we desperately need a national housecleaning."

Schroeder said she believed the nation was ready for a female president.

"I think America is at least as progressive as the Philippines, Israel, India, Britain and Norway," she said, naming nations that have had women leaders in recent years.

Poindexter's Approach Wouldn't Work In Other Administrations, Officials Say

By JOAN MOWER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rear Adm. John M. Poindexter's decision to hide the Iran-Contra money diversion scheme from President Reagan would have been inconceivable in previous administrations, several former national security advisers say.

"It wouldn't work that way for either of the presidents I served," said Walt Rostow, the national security adviser under President Lyndon Johnson from 1966-1969 during the height of the Vietnam War.

"They were compulsive about the details," said Rostow, who also worked in President John F. Kennedy's Democratic administration. Rostow teaches economic history at the University of Texas in Austin.

"I don't recall withholding anything from either president (Kennedy or Johnson)," said Rostow's predecessor, McGeorge Bundy. Bundy was the first man to hold the position in its current form, serving as an important personal adviser to Kennedy.

The chief executive would have been given the chance to approve or disapprove a covert operation, even if he wasn't apprised of every logistical detail, Bundy said.

Henry Kissinger, who under President Richard Nixon was one of the most powerful national security advisers, said he was astounded by Poindexter's action.

"I was a far more assertive security adviser than Poindexter, and I would never have dreamed of making a decision like that," Kissinger told The New York Times.

The officials were interviewed last week after Poindexter testified at the congressional Iran-Contra hearings that he never told the president that proceeds from the sale of U.S.-made weapons to Iran were channeled to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels. He said he wanted to shield Reagan from potential political embarrassment.

"I did not want to provide that detailed information at the time because I wanted the president and his staff to be able to say they didn't know anything about it," Poindexter said in outlining his desire to allow Reagan to deny the diversion plan.

Poindexter, who was national security adviser from December 1985 until he resigned in November 1986, said he secretly approved the plan — proposed by his aide, Lt. Col. Oliver L. North — to assist the Contras at a time Congress had banned military aid to the rebels.

Although Poindexter said he never mentioned the diversion to the president, he said Reagan's broad policy was to back the Contras, and the president was aware of private support for the rebels.

The former national security advisers said they could not comment specifically on Poindexter's decision because they did not know enough about it, but they provided their views based on personal experiences in the White House.

Bundy disagreed with Poindexter's notion of concealing information from a president to protect him from political fallout.

"The fact that a covert move might be politically sensitive would make it more important to tell the president," he said.

In that same line of thought, Brent Scowcroft, a member of the Tower commission that Reagan appointed to investigate the workings of his National Security Council, said recently the NSC staff's principal responsibility was to make sure a president was advised of the pros and cons of a policy.

"The NSC system can't keep the president from doing anything, but what it can and what it has to do is to make sure that when he does something, if he's going to walk off a cliff and if he's determined to do so, that he's under no illusions about what the likely consequences are going to be," said Scowcroft, who served as President Gerald Ford's national security adviser.

Although an adviser might withhold minor information to avoid bothering a president with unimportant matters, Scowcroft said, "Clearly that (the diversion) is not that kind of issue. ... It's a matter of judgment."

But Scowcroft said he believed Poindexter was telling the truth because what he said fits with other information uncovered by the Tower commission.

Scowcroft said the NSC system should function regardless of presidents' different personalities.

For example, he said Reagan's "laid-back style, relying on subordinates," contrasts with "a Jimmy Carter, obsessed with detail, criticized by the press for missing the forest because of his attention to trees, to a Lyndon Johnson who wanted to know where every paperclip in government was."

Zbigniew Brzezinski, Carter's national security adviser, said he had a close association with his boss. "It's inconceivable to me that something would be kept from the president," he said.

TOPIC: DRUG ABUSE: CRACK

"Drug abuse affects everyone in today's society. Drugs can be abused accidentally or purposely. In both cases, they are bad news."
*PARENTS: You worry whether drugs are behind the recent sullen, withdrawn behavior of your usually happy and sociable child.
*SPOUSE: You wonder if your spouse's sneaky drinking in the morning and fighting at night mean there is a problem.
*PREGNANT: You're afraid of the possible effects of your past use of drugs on your unborn baby.
*TEENS: Have you experienced pressure by your peers to experiment with alcohol and drugs?
*TEACHERS: You're concerned that your usually bright, motivated student's grades are dropping.
*In each case your doctor can help. To learn more about Drug Abuse, (especially CRACK), please come and bring a friend!

Two Board Members Elected

NEW YORK (AP) — Two new members have been elected to the Pulitzer Prize Board, the panel that oversees the selection each year of Pulitzer Prize winners.

The new members are Peter R. Kann, associate publisher of The Wall Street Journal and executive vice president of Dow Jones & Co., and Howard Simons, curator of the Nieman Foundation at Harvard University.

They fill vacancies created by the departure from the board of Joseph Pulitzer Jr., chairman of Pulitzer Publishing Co. and subsidiaries, and Warren H. Phillips, chairman of the board of Dow Jones & Co.

The board voted on the new appointments at its April 13 meeting, Columbia University President Michael Sovern said Sunday. Elected members may serve three, three-year terms.

The Pulitzer board consists of 15 elected members, three of whom need not be journalists; and the president of Columbia, the dean of the Columbia University Graduate School of Journalism, and the administrator of the Pulitzer Prizes, who is the secretary of the board.

Hospital Has Classes For Its Sick Children

By MARGARET STAFFORD
Associated Press Writer

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Shawn Pilcheo was surprised when he had to do homework in the hospital. Pilcheo, 13, of Nevada, Mo., was hospitalized for an ulcerated hip. He said he didn't expect to go to school in the hospital. And he didn't always like the work.

"It's hard, most of it is real hard," Pilcheo said. "It's better than not doing anything. But I don't always like doing it."

But, Pilcheo said, he isn't worried that his classmates will be ahead of him when he attends seventh grade at his regular school next year.

Pilcheo was one of 633 students who attended school for part of the year at the Children's Mercy Hospital in Kansas City.

The hospital school celebrated its 75th anniversary this year.

Although the school is part of the Kansas City School District, 380 of the students this year were from outside the district and some were from private or parochial schools. Outside students bring their own books and assignments, while the district supplies the work for its students.

In many respects, the hospital school is like any small school; it has two classrooms, supplies, desks, two computers and books. The teachers evaluate the students' work and there is plenty of homework.

The school is run by Bettyanne Condon. She serves as principal, teacher, secretary and bookkeeper, with the help this year of two full-time teachers and several volunteers.

Ms. Condon said she receives the same memos as any other principal in the district and the budget is determined by the school board.

But the students are different — they are ill, usually temporarily but sometimes terminally. Some are there for a few days, some for months and others are repeat students.

One student stayed for 10 years until he graduated, and another girl on permanent dialysis has taken all of sixth and seventh grades at the hospital.

Some students are taught from their beds, and Ms. Condon said she has days when students in wheelchairs or lying prone on carts are crammed into the classrooms. "It can get pretty crowded in here with all the extra equipment," she said.

When a child is hospitalized, Ms. Condon and the floor nurses decide if he or she will be enrolled. Usually, the patient has to be hospitalized for at least three days.

The average number of students in one day is 18, and this year it ranged from nine to 33. Ms. Condon gets a hospital census every day and spends part of the morning enrolling new students.

The school does not need parental consent, but a child is not enrolled if a parent objects.

"Ninety-eight percent of the parents are thrilled to have the school, because it means their child does not fall behind," Ms. Condon said. "A few say their child is too sick, but I think it's more parental anxiety than the student's anxiety."

Keeping students current with their classmates is the main reason for the school, but it has other benefits, Ms. Condon said.

"Doctors, shots and medicines are not routine," she said. "Teachers and homework are normal. And if they're doing their work, they may not think about the broken leg or the illness."

The teachers must be qualified in special education, but the main requirements are patience and flexibility, Ms. Condon said.

"Basically you teach a sick student the same way you teach any other student," she said. "But in this school, you may have to teach the ABCs over here and trigonometry over there. And you don't know who you'll teach on any given day."

The teachers also face the normal task of convincing students to do their work.

One of the teachers, Kitty Hannan, said the students benefit from close contact with their teachers.

"I like the conditions, the closeness and the more intimate contact you get to have with the students," said Ms. Hannan, who taught first grade before coming to the school. "I just wish they weren't sick."

"You can get very attached to these students, and some Monday mornings you come in and they aren't here anymore," Ms. Condon said. "We have in-service to help us work through our grief. When we can, we attend the funerals. Those are low days."

But Ms. Condon said there are more highs than lows.

"You get all the gratification from the kids," she said. "They hug you when they leave and say thank you. It makes you feel like you've done something to really help kids who are in difficult situations."

Abby Advises Reader To 'Get On With Your Life'

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am originally from Texas. Four years ago, I had a brief affair with a married man. The result was our 3 1/2-year-old son. Shortly after his birth, I moved to Oregon. My son's father (I'll call him Bob) is an attorney in Texas. He pays child support faithfully. We used to talk long distance occasionally, and I sent him pictures of our son regularly. He never told his wife about me and the baby.

Four months ago Bob's wife found out, and although she can't stop the child support, she has forbidden any further communication. He's not allowed to ever see, speak or write to me or our son. Birthday and Christmas gifts are forbidden. Bob and his wife have two little boys — one is 2 1/2 and the other is 8 months old. His wife doesn't want their sons to ever know they have a half-brother in Oregon.

How can I explain this to our son? He knows his father's name and has recently started asking when "Daddy" is coming to see him. I don't want our son to feel rejected. I won't make derogatory remarks about his father because he is a good man.

What should I do? — CONFUSED IN PORTLAND

DEAR CONFUSED: You have some cold hard facts to face. Bob's wife cannot "make" Bob do — or refrain from doing — anything. She may forbid him to ever see, speak or write to his son or you. She may forbid him to receive any pictures of the boy, and she may forbid birthday and Christmas gifts. But she cannot prevent Bob from doing any of the above if he really wants to.

This "good man" about whom you refuse to make any derogatory remarks has clearly rejected you and his son. And worse yet, he's made his wife the "heavy." Wise up and get on with your life, and don't count on Bob for anything more than the support checks.

DEAR ABBY: I am a junior at Carl Brablec High School in Roseville.

Mich. Recently, a police officer from the local police station came to our school to put on a program for the juniors and seniors. The purpose of the program was to explain in full detail the dangers of reckless and drunk driving.

The name of the program was "Scared Stiff," and some of us were really scared stiff when we saw the slides of some terrible accidents, and he told us the tragic stories about each one.

The majority of accidents had to do with drunk driving, but that letter from your column titled "Please God, I'm Only 17" was the most impressive part of the program. It was the last thing on the program, so everyone left much more somber than when they went in. It really gave us something to think about before going to the prom that night.

I am happy to tell you, Abby, that not one student got into any kind of accident for any reason that night!

I just had to write and tell you that I think by printing that one article just before prom night every year for the last 15 years, you have probably saved many 17-year-old lives. — KRIS MITCHELL, ROSEVILLE

DEAR KRIS: Thanks for a real upper. Your letter made my day.

DEAR ABBY: My husband works for a large city. We are happily married, have a lovely family and are very comfortable here.

My husband is required to live in the city where he works, but he wants to move to a suburb of this city where the environment is nicer. He says we can use his parents' address and his bosses will never know the difference.

Abby, I know there are advantages to living in the suburbs, but the idea of lying makes me nervous. I am not unhappy living in the city, and I don't want to uproot our children if it's not a permanent move. My husband insists that we could pull this off, but I have my doubts. What if we get caught? My husband could lose his job — and his benefits.

Do you think it's wise to take a chance? — NERVOUS NELLY

NEW YORK (AP) — Profit-taking set in on Wall Street today, bringing the stock market below the record levels it reached on Friday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which closed above the 2,500 level for the first time in the previous session, fell 11.63 to 2,498.41 as of 10 a.m. EDT

Declining issues were ahead of advancers by a margin of about 8-to-3, with 813 stocks falling, 312 rising and 438 unchanged on the New York Stock Exchange.

Volume on the Big Board came to 29.9 million shares after the first half-hour of trading.

The dollar was down on foreign exchange markets and Treasury bond prices also were lower.

Leading the NYSE most active list was Diversified Energies, which was unchanged at 23 3/4.

Among the big losers were IBM, which fell 1 1/4 to 165 3/4, Honeywell, which slipped 1 1/4 to 84 3/4, and Warner Lambert, down 1 at 78 1/2.

Mining stocks were among the gainers. ASA rose 3/8 to 61 3/8 and Hecla Mining rose 3/4 to 20 3/4.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks was down 1.03 at 175.64. On the American Exchange, the market value index was off 0.51 at 352.94.

On Friday the Dow Jones industrial average climbed 13.07 to 2,510.04.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 7 to 5 on the NYSE, with 905 up, 645 down and 430 unchanged. Big Board volume totaled 209.98 million shares, against 210.88 million in the previous session.

divisive into any little groups, it would be appropriate to put somebody in place now," Council member Lorraine Shinn said.

"I think it's (the decision) an appropriate one," Council member Ed Carter said. "I think one of the most important things we face now are the perceptions of the employees within the police department and within the city in terms of how they think this council operates."

"I'm glad we handled the matter in what I would call a very academic fashion in choosing the interim person because right now we are so busy in the process of selecting a new city manager," Council member Nancy Jenkins said. "It's unfortunate that these kinds of changes had to happen so abruptly."

"I think the reason that was done was simply to create a smooth flow," Council member Inez Fridley said. "It goes ahead and gets things rolling instead of waiting 30 days."

Mrs. Fridley and Mrs. Jenkins said they understood Holmes' decision to leave.

"I think he had some points," Mrs. Fridley said. "This last budget time was not easy for any department heads. Personally, I think Chief Holmes has done an excellent job. I think the police department has benefited from his administration and I'm sorry to see him go."

"The chief did what he felt he needed to do," Mrs. Jenkins said.

In announcing his resignation Friday night, Holmes said the city has gone back on its commitment to building a professional police force. "We've been very frustrated the last couple of months," Holmes said.

Holmes said he was disappointed by budget cuts in what he considered essential areas.

Meanwhile, Carter said the council should not be held to blame for Holmes' decision.

"The series of events are of no direct fault of the council," Carter said. "I think the council methodically addressed problems, and, as a result of them addressing problems, there came some individual concerns, but essentially the matter was resolved in the chief's resignation even though there was no basis for it as far as the council felt."

"But it was his right to do what he decided to do. In the meantime, we have to deal with the security needs of the employees of the police department, and they can be best served by the decision that was made this morning."

Council member Bill Hadden said he was confident the police department would run smoothly under the interim leadership.

"We've got two good men as interim chief and assistant chief," Hadden said. "We went over their credentials pretty heavily today. We've seen their work. I think they are two men that can bring the group together after the resignation of Holmes. I think we've done a good job in getting these two men."

Miller

Miller said his concern for orderly growth while promoting Greenville as the hub of eastern North Carolina, along with his desire to help bolster the confidence and respect of the citizenry with city government would take priority in his campaign.

He said his goals are promoting fiscal accountability and an improved working relationship with county government on long-range planning.

A member of the Greenville Pitt Homebuilders Association, he received the Builder of the Year Award in 1985. He is a past president of the Greenville Luncheon Lions Club, past exalted ruler of the Greenville Elks Lodge, past president of the Greenville city school citywide PTA and past advisor for the Pitt Community College Cooperative Education program.

Miller is currently a member of the East Carolina University Educational Foundation, president of the Rose High Athletic Foundation and co-chairman of the Rose High Minges-Farley Athletic Complex Committee.

Miller is a general partner of Miller & Davis Associates, a local general building contracting firm, and also a general partner of Davis & Miller Interiors.

He and his wife, Judi, and their two children, have lived in Greenville since 1967.

Wrecker Service

as many as 18 to 20 cars a day. "We really hate to tow cars. But we really don't have an alternative," according to Holmes.

While the wrecker rotation program generally runs smoothly, "We have some problems... a few of those agencies overcharging customers or at least charging them more than the city ordinance allows, from time to time," Holmes said.

And "we've also had some concerns" about locating towed vehicles from time to time.

"An individual wrecker driver sometimes works for more than one wrecker service, or one service may make arrangements to have another (wrecker) tow for it," on occasion. "The wrecker driver from one (service) tows the vehicle to another location making it difficult for the poor person, whose car was towed, to retrieve it."

Changes in the way towing is handled are up to the City Council, Holmes said.

But "some alternatives we might consider," Holmes suggested, include: having the city set up one storage lot where all wreckers would take the cars ("That would enable us to insure that cars are securely stored, be easy to find and excessive storage fees wouldn't be charged"), or "contract with only one service to do all of our towing."

"A third alternative might be for the city to get into the wrecker service business itself just for police department towing."

The keenly awaited final regulations relating to employer verification and sanctions, the legalization program and adjustment of status for special agricultural workers were published by the Immigration and Naturalization Service in the Federal Register on May 1, 1987.

Following are highlights of the final regulations.

Employers have an obligation to verify the identity and right to work in the United States of the following employees.

•All employees hired after May 31, 1987.

•Those hired beginning on November 7, 1986, who are still employed by the same employer after May 31, 1987.

The regulations require that employees hired after May 31, 1987, complete part I of the I-9 at the time the employee actually begins to provide service or labor. Employees hired between November 6, 1986, and May 31, 1987, must complete form I-9 at any time between the present and September 1, 1987, without penalty to the employer.

Employers must complete part 2 of the I-9 form, Employer Review and Verification, within three business days that the employee actually begins to work. If the employee does not have the required documents, the employee must produce, within three days of commencement of employment, a receipt evidencing application for the appropriate document. The employee then has 21 days to actually obtain the document and present it to the employer.

If an employee is hired for less than three days, the I-9 must be completed before the end of the employee's first working day. There is no need to complete an I-9 for employees hired before November 7, 1987, or those hired after that date who have left their employment or been terminated prior to June 1, 1987.

If an employee claims to be eligible for legalization, special agricultural worker or Cuban entrant status, then he or she has automatic work authorization which is valid until September 1, 1987. In addition, the employer need not perform the document verification until that time.

The government may inspect the employers records without warrant or subpoena but must give three days advance notice.

Louganis, Mitchell Top Diving

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Greg Louganis, the finest diver in the world, considers himself more a performer than an athlete. Perhaps that is why he has such a flair for the dramatic.

Louganis, the 1984 Olympic double gold medalist, completed a sweep of the two diving competitions in the U.S. Olympic Festival on Sunday, capturing the 10-meter platform competition with one of the best dives of his illustrious career.

Naturally, it came on his final dive. Going into the 10th round at the jam-packed Candler Swim Club, Louganis, 27, of Malibu, Calif., led Bruce Kimball, 24, of Ann Arbor, Mich., by 17 points.

Kimball, the next-to-last diver in the 12-man field, produced his best dive of the day, receiving scores of 9.5 from each of the seven judges for a back 2½ somersault from the pike position. That put severe pressure on Louganis, the final diver. He needed an outstanding dive to win the platform title for the sixth consecutive Festival.

He got it. Executing a reverse 3½ somersault from the tuck position with a 3.4 degree of difficulty, Louganis was awarded three perfect scores of 10, two 9.5s, one 9.0 and one 8.0, and a total of 97.92 points, the third-best of his career.

"Generally, I save my most difficult dive for last," Louganis said. "That way, usually, in a clutch situation, when I need it, I can pull it off."

The whopping score for the final dive gave Louganis a total of 664.59 points, the third-highest in Festival history. Louganis, the only diver ever to surpass 700 points in the platform, also owns the top two Festival scores (680.91 in 1983 and 675.15 in 1985).

He also has won six golds on the 3-meter springboard, giving him a total of 12 Festival golds, more than any athlete.

Kimball, who had three 10s during the competition, finished second with 632.16 points. Mike Wantuck, 23, of Columbus, Ohio, the third-place finisher in Saturday's springboard, also was the bronze medalist in the platform, with 591.21 points.

Michele Mitchell, 25, of Deerfield Beach, Fla., the 1984 Olympic silver medalist, barely missed her American record and smashed her Festival mark in winning the women's platform title for the third consecutive year.

In the eight-event program, she accumulated 476.85 points, more than 100 points ahead of runner-up Sue Cribari, 22, of Oak Brook, Ill.,

Mitchell, the reigning U.S. platform champion and the 1985 World Cup winner, set the American record of 479.40 in 1985 at Orlando, Fla. and established the Festival mark of 465.24 points in Friday's preliminaries.

Cribari, in her first platform final, wound up with 370.92 points and Bonnie Pankopf, 20, of Northville, Mich., was third with 367.32.

Kimball's runner-up finished marked the fifth time he was second to Louganis in the Festival.

He called Louganis "strong . . . graceful . . . and nearly invincible."

Mitchell's victory was more methodical. The only drama came on the final dive, when Mitchell needed 73.84 points to break her American record.

She fell just short, earning 71.28 for a 3½ somersault from the tuck position. Four judges awarded her 9.0s, for a total of 18 for her eight dives. She also had two 9.5s.

"I knew if I hit the last dive, I would break the record," Mitchell said. "I knew I was diving well and had a chance for the record."

"Still, I'm pleased with my score. Anytime you can get 476 points . . ."

Mitchell injured her left shoulder on her second dive, an armstand somersault from the pike position.

"It bothered me a little, but I tried not to think about it," she said.

Her psychology worked very well. Louganis said he knew he would need a strong performance in the final dive, after "listening" to Kimball's great dive.

"While I was standing on the platform, I could tell how good Bruce's entry was, just by listening," he said. "I remember thinking, 'How can I do better?'"

"It's really difficult trying to follow that."

The unflappable Louganis made it look easy, just as he had done in his final dive Saturday, when he received six 10s.

"That's nerve-wracking," he said about the pressure.

The three 10s he got for Sunday's final dive were his only ones in the platform final.

"It's always nice to go out that way," he said.

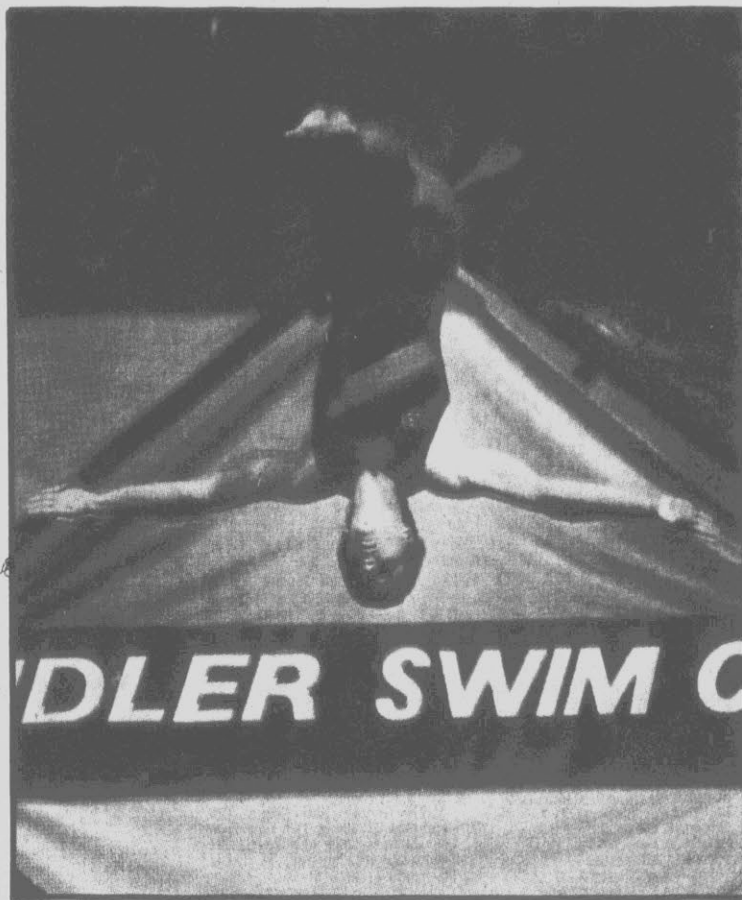

Combined with the total of 13 in Saturday's springboard final, two in Friday's platform preliminaries and four in Thursday's springboard prelims, he collected a total of 22 for the Festival's four days.

For the two finals, he had 77 scores of 9 or better of a possible 147, including 37 9s, 24 9.5s and 16 10s.

Louganis, winner of 41 national titles and five world championships, has won every Festival men's diving title since 1982.

His only setback in the Festival came in 1981, when he finished sec-

Faldo Wins Game And British Open

MUIRFIELD, Scotland (AP) — It was a game Nick Faldo had played many times before, and that Paul Azinger was playing for the first time.

Both golfers may play it many times again before they retire, with one big difference.

Faldo will do it as a player who won the British Open. Azinger will do it as a player who gave it away.

Three shots up with nine holes to go, the 27-year-old American bogeyed four times on the homeward run as Faldo completed a rare round of nothing but pars to win the 116th edition of the world's oldest golf tournament by one stroke on Sunday. He had a final 279, five under par.

Played in thickening mist on the moors of Muirfield, it was a childhood dream come true for Faldo, an Englishman who turned 30 a day before his biggest celebration.

"When I started playing golf as a kid, on the putting green, it was always, 'This putt's to win the Open,'" he said. "Now, I'm so fortunate to have done it."

It was a putt that Azinger failed to make that gave Faldo, in his seventh try, the title no Englishman had owned since Tony Jacklin in 1969.

The collapse by Azinger, among the greatest in the history of golf's major tournaments, kept the United States winless in the championship since Tom Watson's fifth victory in 1983.

Playing outside the United States for the first time, the 27-year-old Holyoke, Mass., native looked ready to join the notable list of golfers who won the Open on their first try. Since World War II, only three have done it: Ben Hogan, Tony Lema and Watson.

Azinger had built a one-shot lead to three through the first nine holes.

While Faldo, armed with a re-tuned swing, kept missing birdie putts and staved off bogeys with strong iron play, Azinger was storming to birdies on Nos. 4, 5 and 8.

"I came out of the box playing like a trouper," Azinger said. "But it was not my turn to win."

He bogeyed the 10th and 11th to fall to even par for the round.

Faldo kept making par.

Azinger missed a seven-foot putt for a birdie on 12, starting five par holes in a row, ending that string with another blown birdie chance by leaving a 10-foot putt short on 16.

Faldo kept making par.

On the 17th, Azinger misclubbed and sent his tee shot into a fairway bunker.

"That cost me the golf tournament," he said. Azinger took three more shots to get to the green, then left a 20-foot putt for par just short.

Faldo kept making par, right through the last hole, where he stroked a 15-foot birdie putt past the flag and needed to make a tough four-footer to stay even.

The putt rolled up a small hill, quivered for a minute, then suddenly gathered second wind and plopped in the cup.

Eighteen holes, 18 pars.

"I wanted a birdie, but I wasn't going to do anything stupid," Faldo said.

Post 58 Gets Win To Tie Up Series

ROCKY MOUNT — After building an early lead, Rocky Mount withstood a sixth-inning challenge from Pitt County and held on for a 7-6 American Legion baseball playoff win that evened the team's best-of-five series at one game apiece.

Rocky Mount went ahead 4-0 early on when Mike Davis lashed a three-run homer. Paul Strickland had started the scoring off when he singled and eventually scored on a single by Mark Worsley.

Pitt got on the board in the fourth when Tom Moye reached on a wild pitch, reached second on another wild pitch and scored on Ty Little's double.

Pitt left six men on over the first five innings but got rolling in the sixth, scoring four runs to take a short-lived 5-4 lead.

With one out, Bronswell Patrick reached on an error. Robbie McDonald followed with a single. Patrick scored on a ground out by Little. Hunter Clark then reached on a walk before Shane Adams cracked a three-run homer to give Pitt its only lead of the game.

Rocky Mount came right back, scoring three runs in the bottom of the sixth.

Paul Strickland opened with a walk. Worsley followed with a single and went to second on a wild pitch. Another wild pitch scored Strickland from third to tie the game.

Jeff Carter then singled in Worsley before he scored himself on a double by Donnie Bobbitt.

Pitt drew within 7-6 in the eighth when Clark doubled and scored on Eric Jarman's ground out. Pitt had the tying run, Adams, on third but a ground out by David Daniels ended the threat.

Tim Wilson pitched the win for Rocky Mount. Robbie McDonald took the loss.

Adams had three hits for Pitt. Worsley, Strickland and Davis had two hits apiece for Rocky Mount.

In the Saturday night game, Bronswell Patrick's two-run double in the 11th gave Pitt a 9-8 win that opened the playoff series.

Patrick also combined with Eric Jarman for the win. Jarman was the winner, coming on in the 10th in relief.

Pitt tied the game at 3-3 in the fourth, keyed by a two-run homer from Patrick.

Rocky Mount forged back out to a 7-5 lead after seven but Pitt came back to tie with a run in the eighth and one more in the ninth.

Little's groundout in the eighth scored David Daniels while Adams scored the tying run in the ninth on a wild pitch.

Patrick's double in the 11th scored Adams and Jarman, both of whom had singled.

Patrick went 4-5 to lead Pitt. Davis and Strickland had three hits apiece to lead Rocky Mount.

Golf Classic Makes Changes

Honorary Chairman

Pro Basketball Superstar Michael Jordan will be the honorary chairman for the Eastern Carolina Celebrity Golf Classic.

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

With a new honorary chairman in Michael Jordan and a move from the fall to the spring, the Eastern Carolina Celebrity Golf Classic is hoping to continue its growth and benefit to the Ronald McDonald House.

The Celebrity Golf Classic, now in its fourth year, used to be played in September, but in an effort to attract more celebrities, it was decided to move the event to June 18-19.

"There is just less competition for getting celebrities," said Joe Clark, the 1988 chairman of the event. "That's why all these successful tournaments are in the spring. June is the best time we could get and we're real enthusiastic. In the fall, you eliminate all the football players, the baseball players and most basketball players because they start practicing (then)."

A move to the spring also will allow more spectators to come because the classic will not be in competition with any other area sporting events.

Clark said another reason for the move was that it would be more accessible to the media since they wouldn't have to contend with college football in the area.

"That (the September date) was football season and in Greenville, that's a big weekend," said

Mark Rosenberg of East Coast Creative Designs, which is handling the publicity for the tournament. "It just seemed that June was a better time."

"We felt moving the date from September to June would allow for greater participation. We feel the June date is going to be so much more successful. The tournament is only in its fourth year and we feel changing right now will not make that big a difference."

Clark said the selection of Jordan as honorary chairman will also be a big boost to the tournament.

"His appeal is unbelievable," he said. "He is one of the hottest commodities in the sports field today, plus he is just such a likable person."

Jordan, a 6-6 Wilmington native, has obvious appeal. He starred at the University of North Carolina, where he played on the 1982 National Championship team, and then went on to fame in the NBA.

He was a unanimous All-American selection and College Player of the Year during his sophomore and junior seasons at UNC. He then was the number-three pick in the 1984 NBA draft by the Chicago Bulls, for whom he earned NBA Rookie of the Year honors.

He has been among the league leaders in scoring in each of his first three years in the NBA. Jordan has parlayed his success in the athletic world to success in the business world. He has corporate affiliations with Nike, Wilson, McDonald's, Coca-Cola, Chevrolet, Johnson Products and Guy Laroche watches.

"We were looking for somebody who was from Eastern North Carolina to be the first (honorary) chairman," Clark said. "We felt like with the proceeds going to the Eastern North Carolina Ronald McDonald House, we thought it would be nice to find a chairman with ties to eastern North Carolina."

Jordan filled the bill in every way, Clark added, plus he is an avid golfer.

As the tournament continues to develop, Clark is very optimistic about its potential.

"The growth has been just great," he said. "It has been steady and well planned every year. We learn from the previous years and it is a better tournament because of the past years. We have an obligation to raise as much money as we can. We have to do what we can to make this tournament more attractive for the celebrities, which will make it more attractive for people to play in it, which in turn will make more people want to come out and see it."

Corchiani Wants A Gold Before Festival Ends

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer
CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — The gleam in guard Chris Corchiani's eye is not necessarily the notion of playing in the Atlantic Coast Conference. It could be the idea of a gold medal in men's basketball at the U.S. Olympic Festival.

Corchiani, who will start playing for North Carolina State in the next college basketball season, has been demonstrating to crowds at the Smith Center what they can expect in the winter. But he and his South teammates also have made it clear what they are looking for right now.

"I thought we started off real slow, but we played tough and outlasted the North," Corchiani said after the South ran away to its second victory in the Festival with a 75-66 victory over the North.

"We went into tonight's game as the underdog but we went out the spoiler," he said, maybe not fully aware that his team is considered the favorite to capture the gold.

Led by two current ACC performers, J.R. Reid of North Carolina and Brian Oliver of Georgia Tech, the South pulled away in the second half. The South scored the first eight points after intermission, held off a brief spurt by the North and pulled away in the final 13 minutes, building a 13-point lead on two occasions.

Reid scored 17 points and Oliver added 14 points. Rumeal Robinson scored 10 points for the North.

"Our guys are hungry and want to win the gold," South Coach Eddie Sutton said. "It will be a tough game."

In the other men's game, played Sunday afternoon, Elander Lewis and Dennis Scott scored 18 points apiece, leading seven players in double figures as the East atoned for an opening-round loss with a 100-81 triumph over the West.

Scott hit two 3-point field goals, the second of which came with 14:34 remaining and put the East ahead 58-57. From there, the East ran away from the West, giving Coach Lefty Driesell his first victory in the Festival.

Richard Dumas, Felton Spencer and Frantz Volcy scored 11 points apiece, and Lincoln Minor and John Crotty had 10 for the East.

Tom Lewis finished with 17 points. Higgins and Rooks added 10 points each for the West.

"The key to our win today was our ability to concentrate on defense," Volcy said. "We had some bad practices over the last week, but now our team is starting to come together. It is hard for a group of players to come together right away."

Clark Ends Slump Against Padres

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

As far as the San Diego Padres are concerned, Jack Clark's slump ended one day too soon.

"I didn't like the way things were going," said Clark, who broke out of a slump with two home runs Sunday to lead the St. Louis Cardinals to a 5-4, 10-inning victory over the Padres.

Before his long-ball breakout in the last meeting between the two teams this season, Padres' pitchers had held Clark to only one hit in 11 at-bats and struck him out eight times in the three previous games of the series. But on Sunday, Clark hit a two-run homer in the sixth and then the game-winner in the 10th to give him a career-high 28 homers and boost his RBI total to 89, both tops in the National League.

The game-winner was a long shot, seven rows into the left-center field bleachers at Jack Murphy Stadium on a 2-2 Gossage fastball.

Expos 2, Braves 1

Herm Winningham's RBI single with two outs in the 11th inning gave Montreal a four-game sweep over visiting Atlanta.

Hubie Brooks hit a one-out double off Jim Acker, 0-5, before Winningham bounced a ball up the middle for his game-winning hit.

Phillies 4, Astros 1

Bruce Ruffin pitched a five-hitter and Juan Samuel hit a solo homer to lead Philadelphia over Houston.

Ruffin, 7-7, pitched his second complete game of the season and won for the third time in his last four decisions. He struck out three and walked one, giving up the Astros' only run on a leadoff homer in the eighth to Ken Caminiti.

Mets 6, Reds 5

Kevin McReynolds' bases-loaded single with one out in the 11th inning gave New York a rain-delayed victory over Cincinnati.

Jesse Orosco, 2-6, pitched three innings of one-hit relief to earn his first victory since May 1. He struck out four and walked one.

Giants 4, Cubs 3

Mike Aldrete's leadoff homer in the eighth inning broke a tie and led San Francisco past Chicago.

Aldrete, batting .383 in 13 starts in right field since Candy Maldonado was injured, hit a 2-1 pitch from Scott Sanderson, 4-5, for his third homer of the season.

Pirates 7, Dodgers 2

Al Pedrique keyed a four-run seventh inning with a tie-breaking double and John Cangelosi had three hits, including his first home run of the season, as Pittsburgh defeated Los Angeles.

Rookie Mike Dunne, 5-4, scattered seven hits, struck out three and walked one in 8 2-3 innings. The right-hander, one of eight rookies to pitch for the Pirates this season, was making his first appearance at Dodger Stadium since facing the Italian Olympic Team in the 1984 Summer Games.

The fans at the boxing competition in Raleigh weren't very pleased with Kellee Banks' 4-1 decision over Vernon McGriff of Buffalo at 125 pounds. They booed Banks, who admitted he wasn't at his best.

"I could have been sharper," he said. "The speed I normally have just wasn't there tonight."

Andrew Maynard won the most exciting bout of the night. The U.S. 178-pound boxing champion from Fort Carson, Colo., edged Bomani Parker 3-2 in a furious fight featuring non-stop action.

Parker, of Richmond, Calif., had to take standing eight-counts late in the second and third rounds.

Maynard limped out of the ring on a sprained left ankle which he said had affected his fighting. He hurt it playing basketball, the same way he broke it earlier this year.

"Most of the time, I was ducking down," he said. "I couldn't step with my foot. When I tried to pivot, it would get caught. I just kept telling myself, 'It don't bother me.'"

Thirteen-year-old Jessie Grieco of Emerson, N.J., who became the youngest female cyclist to win a Festival gold medal on Saturday when she captured the 50-kilometer road race, won again Sunday. She took the 30-kilometer criterium through the streets of Raleigh.

The South and East men and women all were victorious in basketball at Chapel Hill.

Before a sellout crowd at the Greensboro Coliseum, three-time national figure skating champion Brian Boitano once again failed to complete a quadruple jump. He has missed it four times in competition; no skater ever has completed one in a sanctioned event.

Still, Boitano skated strongly and the West won the men's competition. Overall, the North, which captured the women's singles and dance, grabbed the gold medal.

Of the quad, Boitano, the 1986 world champion, said, "I've come so close, I just can't leave it. I couldn't live my life wondering."

In the water polo competition, the South men won both of their games Sunday as water polo began at the U.S. Olympic Festival.

In the first game of the tournament, Doug Kimbell and Alex Rousseau scored two goals apiece as the South beat the East 7-5. Rousseau, of Santa Monica, Calif., scored his team's first two goals and Kimbell, of Long Beach, Calif., scored twice with the South a man down in the fourth period.

Scott Schultz of Mahwah, N.J., had two for the East.

At night, the South edged the North 6-5, handing the North its second loss of the day. Goalie Mark Maizel saved a shot at the buzzer, one of 14 stops he made in the second victory. Kimbell and Rousseau each had two goals in the night contest as well.

In another afternoon game, the West beat the North 6-4 in an error-filled contest. Larry Mouchawar of Long Beach had two goals for the winners. The North was led by Vince Tonne of Manhattan Beach, Calif., with a pair of goals.

Rangers Make And Stop History Against Yanks

By BOB GREENE
AP Sports Writer

Not only did the Texas Rangers stop New York first baseman Don Mattingly's bid for the record books, they made a little history of their own.

Mattingly's consecutive-game home run streak was halted at eight games Sunday night, leaving him tied with Pittsburgh's Dale Long, who homered in eight straight games in 1956. But Mattingly wasn't disappointed.

"No, not at all," Mattingly said. "It was good while it lasted. I knew it had to end sometime, and I knew it would be tonight, one way or another. Either I broke it or I didn't."

Instead, it was the Rangers who rewrote the team record book with their 20-3 victory over the Yankees.

Texas tied a club record with 22 hits and set a team record with 20 runs.

Rick Cerone moved from behind the plate in the eighth inning to become the fifth Yankee pitcher, retiring all three batters he faced — including Ranger pitcher Bobby Witt, who pinch-hit for slugger Pete Incaviglia. The final two Texas runs scored with Cerone on the mound, the first coming on a forceout and the second when Cerone balked with a runner on third.

Orioles 5, Royals 1

Billy Ripken's first major-league home run, a three-run shot, gave he Orioles and their first-ever four-game sweep in Kansas City.

Dave Schmidt, 10-2, gave up five hits over eight innings in gaining the victory. Bud Black, 4-5, took the loss.

Mariners 5, Tigers 4

A two-run homer by Alvin Davis in the ninth inning boosted Seattle over Detroit and averted a sweep of their four-game series.

Ed Nunez, 1-1, who pitched the last two innings in relief of starter Scott Bankhead, got the victory.

A's 5, Red Sox 3

After twice failing on a squeeze bunt attempt, Jose Canseco singled home two runs in the 11th inning to give Oakland its victory over Boston.

Canseco's winning hit off reliever Bob Stanley, 3-10, broke up the four-hour, two-minute marathon.

White Sox 9, Indians 7

Greg Walker's opposite field homer touched off a three-run fifth inning rally and Harold Baines hit in his 14th consecutive game as the White Sox defeated Cleveland.

Twins 7, Blue Jays 6

Dan Schatzeder pitched 3 2-3 innings of shutout relief and Tom Brunansky homered and singled to drive in three runs and lead Minnesota over Toronto.

The Twins had lost 10 straight to the Blue Jays, dating back to last season, before winning two of the last three games between the two clubs.

Angels 8, Brewers 5

Pinch-hitter Ruppert Jones hit a three-run, bases-loaded double in California's five-run eighth inning as the Angels downed Milwaukee.

Horoscope

From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY July 21

GENERAL TENDENCIES: People are apt to have poor judgement today, so plan to be alone in your endeavors. Keep your diplomatic attitude, and avoid taking any chances now.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Try not to worry over letters you get from afar. Accept the conditions as they are and work around them.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): You could be led into some practical situation which you do not like, so study it well and come out on top.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Don't argue with partners today or there could be a severance of connections very easily, and unfortunately.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Don't let a private anxiety interfere with your work. Be sure to keep business life and social life separate.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): Try to keep a friend away from your mate, as he or she is not feeling up to par. Plan your time intelligently.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Some new situation appeals to you very much, but finish what you've started before you get into it.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Make sure you carry through with some promise you have made. Don't downgrade your security.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Be sure of your facts and figures when dealing with money. Be more willing to do what your mate desires.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): You will find it difficult to get an associate to agree to a fine plan. Avoid any confrontation in public.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): You are tired and want to break up the present situation, but don't do anything foolish you will regret.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Avoid that friend who likes to criticize. Put your family first. Schedule your time wisely.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Plan time to rearrange the condition at home. Don't permit a personal wish to cause you to neglect your mate.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he, or she, will skip from the past to the future and should have a fine education. One who may seem slow in learning, this one will actually be ahead of the others because everything learned will be retained. Teach him or her to be consistent, though, and to avoid stress.

 Kudzu, a leafy vine that grows in the South, has overwhelmed the hillside surrounding this rail tunnel in Atlanta, Georgia. The vine was introduced into the South from China and Japan. It is a rampant plant that may grow as much as a foot in one day. It can be used to control soil erosion and add nitrogen to leaf litter. But it is hated in the South because it grows up trees, down hillsides, on walls, and has been known to swallow up old cars and even entire streets.

DO YOU KNOW — Does kudzu grow naturally in New England?

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠105 ♥Q93 ♦A876 ♣KQ62
 The bidding has proceeded:
 West North East South
 1 ♠ 3 ♥* 4 ♣ ?
 *preemptive
 What action do you take?
 A.—Why do anything? You have the worst possible holding in spades and fair defensive strength. You have no reason to think that a save at five hearts would be cheap and there is the distinct possibility, with your defensive values that the opponents might not be able to make four spades. Pass.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠J1052 ♥9654 ♦KQ83 ♣5
 The bidding has proceeded:
 West North East South
 1 ♠ 3 ♥* 4 ♣ ?
 *preemptive
 What action do you take?

A.—Even though you might have a sure trump trick, the opponents are still heavy favorites to make four spades. On the other hand, not only is it unlikely that five hearts doubled will prove expensive, it might even make. Bid five hearts.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♠8643 ♥K72 ♦QJ832 ♣7
 The bidding has proceeded:
 West North East South
 1 ♠ 3 ♥* 4 ♣ ?
 *preemptive
 What action do you take?
 A.—While it's a near certainty that four spades will make, you can't be sure that a sacrifice of five hearts will be any cheaper. Besides, there's the danger of pushing the opponents into a slam that you might not be able to defeat. Pass.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠72 ♥AQJ872 ♦KQ83 ♣8
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♥ Pass 1 NT Pass
 What do you bid now?
 A.—Despite your distributional values, you have a minimum opening bid. Therefore, you are not looking for a possible game but rather for the safest spot. Your length and strength in hearts should point you in the right direction. Bid two hearts.

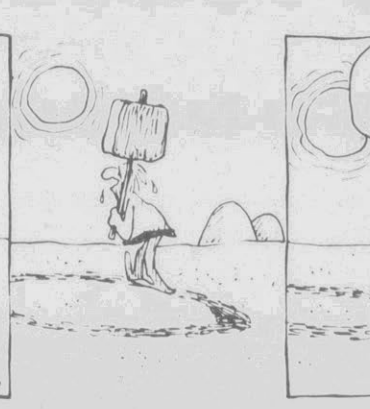

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠K9 ♥KQJ762 ♦AQ62 ♣7
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♥ Pass 1 NT Pass
 What do you bid now?
 A.—This time your hand is much stronger, so game cannot be ruled out. It is a close choice between a jump to three hearts and a simple two diamond rebid. Because of the quality of the suits, the expert choice would be two diamonds.

Q.6—As South vulnerable, you hold:
 ♠K952 ♥A72 ♦6 ♣KQ952
 The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♣ Pass 1 ♥ Pass
 What do you bid now?
 A.—Obviously, you must choose between one spade and a raise to two hearts. The trouble with one spade is that, should partner now rebid one no trump or two clubs, you will feel guilty about not having raised hearts and your hand is not good enough for a third bid. The solution is to bid two hearts now.

Thousands Of Italians Abandon Homes After Heavy Downpours

By PIERO VALSECCHI
Associated Press Writer
SONDRIO, Italy (AP) — Rescue workers searched through miles of mud and helicopters plucked people from roofs after torrential downpours caused flooding and mudslides in the Italian Alps, leaving 14 people dead and six missing.

The heavy rain also caused flooding in southern Switzerland, forcing the evacuation of hundreds of homes. Police said three people died in a car accident on a rain-swept road.

In Italy, the four-day downpour flooded mountain streams and known if there were foreigners among them.

Hardest hit was the Valtellina Valley, near the Swiss border, where a mudslide slammed into a resort hotel and a three-story apartment building in the tiny village of Tartano.

The Civil Defense Ministry said 12 people were killed in that landslide and two reported missing. At least 20 people were injured and taken to hospitals.

State-run RAI television said 10,000 people in the Valtellina area were forced to abandon their homes.

One survivor of the landslide, Vitoria Piobellini, said: "I was watching television with my husband when I saw him carried away by the mud."

The other deaths were reported in the Bergamo area, one in the town of Sant'Antonio Moricone, where there were also two people reported missing, and the other in the Brembo River Valley village of Lenne.

Authorities said they earlier gave a higher death toll because of communication difficulties.

A river of mud swept into Sondrio, where cars floated along with branches, furniture and other debris part-half-submerged houses. Authorities evacuated 300 people from their homes.

An unidentified woman interviewed by RAI television said that water rose rapidly in her home before her family was rescued. "It started coming in the first floor, so we went up to the second, then the third, and finally out on the roof. A helicopter finally came and picked us up."

Dario Vaireti, 50, a farmer from the town of Talamona, said hundreds of cows drowned.

"I put my five bulls in the farmhouse before I left the farm. They were saved because they were able to keep their heads above water," he said.

Entire villages along the swollen Maffero River in the Valtellina were evacuated, and 5,000 people were left homeless, according to news reports. A few towns above Sondrio were completely isolated, and rescue workers were sent up to report via radio to the command center at nearby Morbegno.

The armed forces deployed 6,825 troops and reservists, 28 helicopters, 240 trucks, earthmoving vehicles and ambulances and a reconnaissance plane in rescue efforts. They joined about 2,000 police, paramilitary personnel, firefighters and Alpine guides.

None of the victims was immediately identified and it was not

Celestine Dies After Apology To Family

ANGOLA, La. (AP) — Willie Celestine calmly went to his death in Louisiana's electric chair today after apologizing to the family of Marceline Richard, the 81-year-old woman he raped, beat and strangled six years ago.

"I'd just like to tell the Richard family that I'm very, very sorry. I hope in their hearts they can forgive," Celestine, 30, said before the electricity was switched on at 12:20 a.m.

Celestine was pronounced dead seven minutes later, said Louisiana State Penitentiary Warden Hilton Butler. It was Louisiana's fifth execution since early last month.

Two of Richard's grandsons, Robert and John Broussard, were among the witnesses who watched the execution from behind a glass window. They sat quietly throughout and did not talk to reporters.

Also witnessing were Sister Helen Prejean, an anti-death penalty activist who was Celestine's spiritual advisor, and defense attorney Millard Farmer of Atlanta.

Celestine mouthed the words "I love you," to them as he was strapped into the chair.

The execution was delayed about 10 minutes because Farmer was not a Louisiana resident and officials had to call Gov. Edwin Edwards after midnight to allow him to be a witness.

Only one death penalty opponent marched outside the prison gate

Sunday night, officials said. By 10:30 p.m., the lone protester was gone and seven pro-death penalty demonstrators were left.

The execution took place after Edwards rejected an 11th-hour plea from Celestine's attorneys for a reprieve to allow the condemned man a hearing before the state Pardon Board. Edwards has consistently refused to intervene in death penalty cases.

The Inter-American Commission on Human Rights, part of the Organization of American States, sent telegrams to U.S. Secretary of State George Shultz and Edwards asking that Celestine's execution be halted.

Election Gives Portugal Majority

By PATRICK REYNA
Associated Press Writer
LISBON, Portugal (AP) — Prime Minister Anibal Cavaco Silva, leading the Social Democrats to the first parliamentary majority in 13 years, said his re-election signaled a new era of stability for Portugal.

The general election Sunday followed a string of five hung parliaments and 16 short-lived governments since 1974, when the military overthrew a 48-year-old right-wing dictatorship and returned the nation to elective government.

With 96.9 percent of the country's 4,161 precincts reporting, the Social Democrats had 50.4 percent of the vote for 144 seats in the 250-seat Parliament. The right-of-center Social Democrats were expected to pick up at least one or two more seats when the final returns were counted today.

The party needed 126 seats to secure a majority capable of serving out a full, four-year term. Cavaco Silva led a minority Social Democrat government from November 1985 to April 1987, when it fell to a censure motion passed by leftist majority parties.

"This victory was a victory for political stability, for progress and dialogue, and a sure bet on what we Portuguese can do," Cavaco Silva said in a speech Sunday night to cheering supporters at a Lisbon hotel.

"I intend to go on providing government for all Portuguese, no matter what their party choices were," the 48-year-old economist said. He asked the opposition to help him and his party "find what's best for our country."

The Socialists received 22.2 percent of the vote for 60 seats, slightly up from their 20.8 percent tally in the October 1985 voting, while the Communists got 12 percent for 31 seats, well down from their 15.5 percent 1985 showing.

The conservative Christian Democrats got 4.4 percent of the vote and 4 seats, down from 10 percent two years ago.

The two-year-old Democratic Renewal Party of former President Antonio Ramalho Eanes, which made a dramatic debut in 1985 as the country's third largest party with a 17.9 percent result, was the big loser in Sunday's voting.

Postal Service, Unions Bargain

WASHINGTON (AP) — Negotiators for the U.S. Postal Service and its two largest unions are struggling to hammer out a new contract before their current pact expires at midnight tonight.

The talks resumed at noon Sunday following a four-day interruption brought on when the unions broke off talks in a dispute over a contract with a third union.

"They're going back and forth," union spokesman Tom Fahey said of the Sunday evening bargaining session.

Postal spokesman James Van Loozen reported that the negotiators had been exchanging ideas and paper all evening, saying, "They're engaging in collective bargaining."

While postal officials have declined to make public their offer to the unions, Fahey characterized it as close to the settlement announced last week with the smaller Mail Handlers Division of the Laborers International Union.

Vincent R. Sombrotto, president of the National Association of Letter Carriers, and Moe Biller, president of the American Postal Workers Union, have characterized that settlement as totally inadequate.

That agreement has been at the center of much of the dispute between the Postal Service and the larger unions, with Biller and Som-broto charging that the agreement is being used as a club in their contract talks.

They contend the Mail Handlers pact includes a "me too" clause which would bring that union up to the same level of benefits achieved later by the other two unions.

The Mail Handlers contract calls for pay raises of $350 in the first year, $400 in the second and $500 in the third year of a three-year agreement, plus cost of living allowances and benefits improvements.

That amounts to raises of only 1.6 percent per year, according to Sombrotto and Biller. They have demanded raises averaging 6.8 percent for their members, plus reducing the time it takes to get to top pay scale and other improvements.

Currently, pay for postal clerks and letter carriers ranges from $20,094 to $27,089, not including benefits. The Postal Service estimates the average pay of workers in those groups is about $30,000, including about $5,000 in benefits.

Pay for the Mail Handlers averages slightly less than for the clerks and letter carriers.

The agreement between the Postal Service and Postal Workers and Letter Carriers unions, which represent about 580,000 postal workers, expires at midnight tonight.

French Subway Riders Watch Culture Videos

PARIS (AP) — Riders of Paris subways are being entertained these days by culture videos while they wait for their trains in the station.

Some people became so engrossed recently at a station on the Champs Elysees that they let several trains come and go as they watched television monitors showing Mona Lisa's smile, bicycles and airplanes.

Split-second images of flying machines and military tanks are in "Da Vinci 21st Century," a video made from the Italian master's drawings set to a virtually unknown musical score composed by him and played on a synthesizer.

Paid for by private and corporate sponsors, the videos are shown on hundreds of screens scattered in 120 stations on the Paris Metro, as the subway system is called.

Culture videos, or "clips" as they are known, are the brainchild of Gonzague Saint Bris, one of France's most dashing multimedia personalities.

"Recent surveys show that 30 percent of France's television audience wants more cultural programs," Saint Bris said in an interview. "Culture clips are geared to satisfy that need."

Saint Bris adapted his format to the monitors that were installed in Metro stops throughout Paris beginning last year.

The three to six-minute format is familiar to French television viewers. The clips are styled after short word games and documentaries on flowers and animals that filled time between programs on state-run TV channels before the days of commercials.

"Culture doesn't have to be synonymous with boredom, and brevity is the sister of genius," Saint Bris said.

"If culture is not communicated properly, it's bound for an early death. If communication has no culture, it's barbaric."

The Da Vinci clip is the second in a series that began with a video on French artist Jean Cocteau. Contemporary graphic artist Jean-Michel Polon has signed to make a video on Henri Matisse, the painter; moviemaker Roman Polanski will handle the one on composer Frederique Chopin.

Saint Bris said the videos on artists and writers are not supposed to simplify the complexity of their work.

"A clip on Marcel Proust doesn't pretend to summarize his genius," he said. "But it should encourage people to go out and read 'Remembrance of Things Past'."

But the videos are not only for bored subway riders.

Saint Bris, a 38-year-old former radio host, filmmaker and writer, said videos are an ideal way of exporting French culture worldwide. They have already caught on in Japan and are being shown on French, European and Japanese television.

He also said he hopes the videos, which cost the equivalent of $50,000 to $80,000, will catch on with corporations, which can put their names on the screen at the beginning and at the end of each video.

Club Mediterranee is behind Da Vinci, and Saint Bris said he would look for a U.S. company to back a video on the American Revolution hero the Marquis de Lafayette.

Chris Lemmon Comes Into Own On Sitcom

NEW YORK (AP) — When your name is Chris Lemmon, the comparisons are inevitable, especially when you have all those great little speech mannerisms and look so much like your father, Jack Lemmon.

But thanks to a cathartic film role opposite his father, a series of commercials for a men's cologne and a stand-out supporting role on the Fox Broadcasting Co. sitcom "Duet," Lemmon-the-younger has come into his own.

He had struggled for years to carve out an acting career for himself. Until the well-written Fox comedy came his way, he said, he had eschewed situation comedy because of a bad experience in the failed NBC series "Brothers and Sisters" over a decade ago.

Lemmon, 33, said people mistakenly assume that the son of a famous actor would have no trouble getting cast on his own.

"People say, 'Oh, yeah, it's Lemmon's kid. He's never had to work.' I got news for 'em all. You're dead wrong. It made it twice as tough," he said.

"They really make you prove yourself, and they constantly expect you to be as good as your parent, who's had 35, 40 years more experience. And that's the worst thing they can do to young actors, the comparisons."

Lemmon said he and his father always "got along great," but he had difficulty in his younger years accepting the burden of being identified as "Jack Lemmon's son."

"The way I dealt with being identified as a thing and not as a person was to overcompensate, to come on too strong, to constantly try to be the center of attention. 'Hey, look at me. I'm not Jack Lemmon's son. I'm Chris Lemmon, and I'm funny, and I'm the center of attention. I'm the big man on campus.' Well, of course, I was immediately ostracized," he said. "So I was very lonely during my high-school years. I was areally solo unit, and it was very tough at times."

He said that changed after he was cast as Josh Fairchild, TV-actor son of movie mogul Harvey Fairchild, in Blake Edwards' touching film about family love, "That's Life."

"When I finally got a chance, thanks to Blake, to give that character those idiosyncracies and those problems, it was like a purging, and it was a very healthy thing for me as a human being to portray Josh Fairchild, and thusly get out my ghosts, get my skeletons out of the closet."

"To be honest with you, our relationship, which was great to begin with, my father's and my relationship, since that film it's grown twice as strong. I think probably that's because I'm ready to be his son now."

In the lean years, Lemmon, a classical pianist, composer and writer in his spare time, supported a passion for skiing with work in commercials.

By the time he landed the role of Richard Phillips, the Yuppie best friend on "Duet," he was already known as "the Aramis Man" from commercials and print ads.

"God bless Aramis, because it started my career, not only in other people's eyes but in my own. Because now I wasn't Jack Lemmon's kid. I was the Aramis Man," Lemmon said.

"Richard (his "Duet" character) complements that beautifully. Richard's the antithesis of the Aramis Man, in the same clothes. Those are fun to play, those extremes."

Lemmon calls Richard "the quintessential have-a-holic." In the sitcom, Richard and his wife, Linda, played by Alison La Placa, are the successful friends of Ben, a struggling writer whose romance with Laura is the focus of the series. Matthew Laurance and Mary Page Keller play Ben and Laura.
