Navy Escorts Reflagged Kuwaiti Ships Into Gulf

By RICHARD PYLE
Associated Press Writer

FUJAIRAH, United Arab Emirates (AP) — Two Kuwaiti tankers flying the Stars and Stripes and their U.S. Navy escorts today steamed past a battery of Iranian missiles into the Persian Gulf.

The supertanker Bridgeton and the smaller oil products carrier Gas Prince, flanked by American warships, passed through the Strait of Hormuz in the early afternoon. They had weighed anchor about 90 miles to the south this morning off the United Arab Emirates port of Khor Fakkan.

The two vessels ran up the Stars and Stripes on Tuesday, sealing their registration as American commercial vessels entitled to U.S. warship protection.

The Navy cruiser Fox led the convoy, while the frigate Crommelin and the destroyer Kidd steamed nearby. News reporters on the Kidd said the convoy maintained a condition just below the highest state of alert. Maritime shipping sources had earlier reported seeing four U.S. Navy vessels.

The passage through the strait had been considered one of the most potentially hazardous parts of the three-day journey to Kuwait.

The Reagan administration agreed to re-register 11 Kuwaiti tankers to protect them from Iranian attacks and safeguard the flow of oil through the gulf. It acted after the Soviets leased Kuwait three tankers and promised military escorts for them.

The U.N. Security Council members on Monday unanimously approved a resolution demanding an end to the 7-year-old Iran-Iraq war. Iraq supported the measure. But Iran's ambassador to the United Nations, Said Rajaei-Khorassani, told reporters Tuesday that his country felt free to continue the war and would attack "legitimate targets regardless of whose flag is flown."

Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev criticized the increase in U.S. forces in the gulf Tuesday, but told President Reagan he favors talks with Washington on an effort to end the war, according to Boris D. Pyadyshev, a Foreign Ministry spokesman in Moscow.

Violent Rainstorm Kills At Least 61 In S. Korea

By C.W. LIM
Associated Press Writer

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — A fierce storm dumped a record rainfall on South Korea today, unleashing floods and landslides that officials said killed at least 61 people and injured 150.

The storm, the second killer tempest to hit the country in less than a week, also left 31 people missing, according to officials at the Counter-Disaster Center in Seoul. Tens of thousands of people were evacuated from low-lying areas and at least 4,000 were left homeless, officials said.

Local newspapers reported at least 83 dead and 52 missing. The state-run television, KBS, said 67 were killed and 35 others missing.

"It's a record one-day rainfall ever since our weather bureau was established in 1907," an official at the Central Meteorological Observatory said.

Weather officials said the central village of Sochun received 22.5 inches of rain in less than 24 hours, setting a record for the most rainfall in a day on any spot in South Korea. The previous record, set in 1981, was 21.5 inches that fell on a southern coastal town.

The rainfall in the central part of the country amounted to about half of South Korea's total yearly precipitation, weather officials said.

"I have never seen terrible rains like this during my entire life," KBS quoted a 72-year-old man in Puyo as saying.

Both the center and KBS said the casualty toll was expected to rise sharply. The Central Meteorological Bureau also warned that Tropical Storm Vernon, downgraded from typhoon status after hitting Taiwan, was expected to reach South Korea on Thursday.

Vernon reportedly killed two people in Taiwan. Its winds since eased to 50 mph, but it still was capable of doing damage, officials said.

"It's from bad to worse," said one official at the Counter-Disaster Center, referring to Typhoon Thelma that struck South Korea's coast on July 15-16. That storm left 123 people dead and 212 others missing.

The new heavy rains triggered landslides and collapsed bridges, reservoirs and embankments, blocking roads and rail tracks, the officials said.

Hospital Trustees OK $114.9 Million Budget

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County Memorial Hospital trustees have approved a $114.9 million budget for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1 incorporating the first rate increase in three years.

Trustees were told at a meeting Tuesday revenue for this year's operation will include money from rate increases. The new rate structure is planned to vary costs to patients according to the intensity of the service offered.

The lowest increases will come in medical and surgical beds where rates will go from $168 to $180 per day — a seven percent increase. The largest increase will be in the cardiac surgery critical care unit, where rates will double to $1,100. This increase, Jack Richardson, hospital president said, is designed to reflect the true cost of providing post-operative care to patients having open heart surgery.

Although this increase is large, he said it is important to know that it will likely affect only about 300 of the 22,000 patients served by the hospital next year. Richardson pointed out that patients typically are in the cardiac surgery unit only one to two days before being moved to less intensive and less costly rooms.

The proposed rate increases, Richardson said, are needed to offset the rising costs of patient care brought on by the fact that the patients who come to Pitt Memorial now from all over the eastern North Carolina are, in most cases, sicker than those who came here three years ago. They require a higher intensity of services.

He said people in eastern North Carolina who require sophisticated medical procedures are now coming to Greenville, rather than going to the major medical center in the Research Triangle area of North Carolina and the Tidewater area of Virginia as they used to. Many of these patients require more nursing time, more tests and more therapy. As a result, many of Pitt Memorial's less intensive bed areas are staffed almost as heavily as critical care beds in some hospitals.

Richardson said that, even with the proposed rates increases, Pitt Memorial's rates will remain competitive with community hospitals in the region for the same level of care. They will continue to be somewhat lower than comparable medical centers across the state and country, Richardson said.

The heat wave scorching Pitt County and eastern North Carolina may strike a death blow to the county's corn crop, according to local agriculture officials.

Corn "is going to be pretty much finished off" because of hot, dry weather, said Sam Uzzell, the horticulture crops and peanuts agent with the Agriculture Extension Service.

"For a good many acres, we did not receive the rain to fill the kernel out," he said. "There will be some that did not receive healthy pollen."

P&Z Backs Annexations

By DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer

The Greenville Planning and Zoning Commission has recommended City Council approval of an annexation request which would add almost 27 acres to the city's boundaries.

The panel Tuesday unanimously recommended approval of a request by H and C Partnership to annex Westhaven, section 8. The 26.73-acre tract is located south of Whichport development, east of Woodhaven road.

Bobby Roberson, director of planning and community development, said the property would provide the city with $23,814 in estimated annual tax revenues.

Roberson said the annexation would cost an estimated $6,588 for street lighting, sanitation, street maintenance, traffic services and building and grounds. He estimated annual costs at $6,388.

The commission also approved a revised request by Marvin K. Blount

Jr. to rezone three tracts totaling 9.76 acres located off the eastern right-of-way of Evans Street extension and west of Bedford subdivision, section II.

GUC, City Chiefs To Hold Pay Talks

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Members of the Greenville Utilities Commission board have asked GUC General Manager Malcolm Green and interim City Manager Mayo Allen to meet with consultants to resolve differences between pay proposals for the city and utilities.

The request came after the board reviewed a draft pay and classification plan study at a workshop meeting Tuesday night.

Officials said one of the purposes of the $52,000 pay scale study, conducted by the Arthur Young Co. and funded jointly by the city and the utilities commission, was to provide equal pay for equal jobs so the city and city-owned utilities would not be competing against each other.

But differences in the two pay plans were pointed out Tuesday night.

In presenting the GUC study, Vito Kuraitis of Arthur Young said the study recommends that the pay rate of all employees whose current rate falls below the minimum for their grade be raised to the minimum. The study also suggests that every individual who falls at a half step out or between steps be raised to the nearest step.

The cost to raise people to the minimum of the range would cost $15,495, while the cost of adjustment to step would cost an additional $60,000, according to the study.

But Ed Carter, the city council representative to the GUC board, said "we have some serious problems" in comparing the GUC study to the city pay plan study.

"We've got problems with this thing," Carter said, because the recommended pay for similar city and utility jobs above grade nine are not the same.

In one case cited by Carter the pay for a comparable utility job ranges from $1,000 to $3,000 higher than that

Assembly Ratifies Labeling Measure

An act requiring political advertising to be labeled more accurately, sponsored by Walter Jones Jr., D-Pitt, has been ratified by the N.C. General Assembly.

The bill will promote integrity in campaigning by fully identifying both the sponsor and the purpose of political advertisements, according to Jones.

"In the recent past and particularly during the last few weeks of campaigning prior to an election, some political advertising has injured candidates through misleading statements in ads in which it was not clear if the sponsors were for or against the candidate who was the subject of the ad," Jones said.

"This legislation is designed to prevent this type of unfair misleading advertisement."

The bill provides that no media advertisement of any kind may be made by a treasurer, candidate, political committee, referendum committee or individual unless it bears identifying legend.

Under the new law, media advertisement must include the statement "paid for by (or sponsored by)" and the name of the candidate, political committee, referendum committee or individual placing the ad.

In the case of a political committee or referendum committee, the name used in the labeling will be the name that appears on the statement of organization as provided by statute.

Sponsors of media advertisements must state their position, for or against the candidate, according to the act.

The requirements of the act do not apply to any printed advertisement less than 2 inches by 2 inches in size or to any radio ad of less than 20 seconds in length.

The act covers broadcasting stations, carrier current stations, newspapers, magazines, periodicals, outdoor advertising facilities, billboards and newspaper inserts. The media shall not publish or broadcast any political advertisement unless it bears the legend or includes the statement that correctly identifies the sponsor of the advertisement.

Hospital Trustees OK Budget

from $168 to $200, up 19 percent. Psychiatric room rates will increase from $185 to $235, up 27 percent. Rehabilitation rates will go from $205 to $300, a 46 percent increase.

These increases are needed, Richardson said, to offset the rising cost of patient care and reflect that hospital management has been studying what level of service is delivered where, so as to have room rates reflect the true cost of providing services to particular groups of patients. This way one group is not subsidizing the care of another.

Total operating costs for the year beginning Oct. 1 are expected to be up 14 percent from the current year, with the largest single expense being salaries costing $55.6 million. The hospital will employ 2,632 full-time equivalent employees. A breakdown of the increase is reflected in $1,630,163 for 89 new employees; $2,153,564 for pay plan changes, and $1,209,000 for the Pay For Performance program. Fringe benefits, including the hospital's contribution to Social Security, health insurance, Workman's Compensation and retirement, will increase to $1.5 million, about 21 percent.

Operating expenses changes include interest expense of $995,000, an increase of $800,000. Rents and leases of $795,444 will represent an increase of $373,245. Data processing software costs of $432,328 will represent an increase of $35,924. Service contracts of $1,493,350 are up $598,503. Utilities and telephone costs will be $3,030,722, an increase of 5.4 percent.

Insurance costs are expected to increase from $1,356,836 to $2 million this year, a 47.4 percent increase. Three years ago this cost to the hospital was $264,737.

The budget includes capital expenses of $5,271,820, which is comparable to those of previous years.

Most of the overall 16 percent increase in rates is needed to cover the 12 percent increase in the Consumer Price Index over the past three years since rates were last raised.

Total inpatient and outpatient charges are projected to total $144,547,000. Deductions, however, will reduce the net to $116,712,700. These deductions include Medicare and Medicaid discounts of $19,400,000, other states program discounts of $1,743,500, allowances for uncollectibles of $12,050,000.

An appropriation of $7,305,000 through the East Carolina University School of Medicine will offset part of this reduction. It is designated to cover the cost of caring for indigent patients from outside Pitt County.

The room rate at the hospital are expected to represent 38 percent of an inpatient's total hospital bill in the coming year. Average charges to each patient, based on 22,493 admissions, indicate that the average charge per admission will change from $4,875 to $5,860.84. This 20 percent increase represents the 16 percent impact of overall rate changes and a 4 percent factor for increases in acuity.

Richardson said the financial plan approved last night is consistent with the hospital board's philosophy of asking for no subsidies from the county for operations. No county funds for operations have been requested since 1971, he said. The plan also provides for a five percent margin to allocate funds for capital development of programs, services and facilities to keep Pitt Memorial a leader in implementing advances in technology.

The board, in separate action, approved the expenditure of $128,000 plus expenses for consultation for its Strategic Long Range Planning Committee. This committee is studying proposed additions to the hospital.

It was reported that the hospital has now had a substitute computer system installed by the SMS company, whose first installation proved unsatisfactory. An improvement in response time is being observed, Ed McFall, vice president for information services said.

The board approved seeking upset bids for the sale of its old computer, since the $271,000 offered so far fall short of its expectations. The hospital had hoped to sell the equipment for at least $300,000. If no other offer is received, the board agreed to have the administrator go ahead and accept the $271,000, however.

It was reported that bids for a 9,000-square-foot addition to the hospital's Regional Rehabilitation Center facilities should be asked for in the next two weeks. This addition will be used largely for outpatient services.

Ralph Hall, vice president for facilities services, said the bids for the hospital's proposed new birthing center came in $400,000 more than anticipated. Evaluations are under way to determine how to cut this cost down or whether to ask for more money for the project.

It was reported that the hospital, which needs more about 750 nurses, is currently minus more than 100 of those needed. Diane Poole, vice president for nursing services, said everything seen as possible, short of advertising for nurses in foreign countries, is being done to get more. She described a new Clinical Ladder program which is designed to evaluate and reward bedside nurses' performance levels. Implementation of the program began at Pitt Memorial May 6, National Nurses Day, she said. Open houses are being planned, she said, to try to attract non-practicing nurses back into the work force, as well as Career Day at the hospital to attract area young people into nursing and other health care careers.

Approval was given for the additional of 54 medical residents to the house staff.

Active staff privileges were given to Dr. Dariush Mehrabani in neonatology; Dr. Timothy Monroe in pediatrics; Drs. Gregory Rose and Eric Carlson in cardiology; Dr. Paul James in family medicine and Type 1 obstetrics; Dr. John Purvis in family medicine and Dr. Paul Danier in hematology-oncology.

Dr. Robert Deyton was approved to practice CO2 laser surgery. Dr. Lawrence Bandy was promoted from provisional to active privileges in obstetrics and gynecology; Dr. David Cone from consulting to provisional in emergency medicine; Dr. Erle Austin from inactive to active in surgery. Dr. Beth Foil was changed from active to inactive staff.

The Planter's Walk subdivision plat involves 57 lots and 3,193 linear feet of streets on a 24.6-acre tract, while the Crisp plat involves two lots on a 1.68-acre tract.

A request by M.W. Aldridge to change the street name of a portion of Tuckahoe Drive located in Rabbit Run subdivision to Rabbit Run was denied.

The planning staff recommended denial since the change would have been made in the middle of a block.

Commissioners elected Dr. Wallace Wooles as chairman and Chuck Ziehr as vice chairman of the panel. Wooles and Ziehr have served on the commission since Dec. 9, 1982. Wooles replaces Ric Miller as chairman. Miller had served as chairman for three years.

John Wesley Powell completed the first exploration of the Colorado River in 1869, having traveled through the Grand Canyon by boat.

Officials To Discuss Pay Plan

proposed for a city position.

"If there are differences, I want to sit down and talk about them," GUC board member Jo Ball said.

"I think what you've got here is an outline, not a report," Buddy Zincone, chairman of the GUC board told Kuraitis, and Zincone emphasized "this document has to be understandable."

Kuraitis then suggested that errors in the draft report would be corrected before the final report is presented to the utilities and the city.

It was then agreed that Green, Allen and Kuraitis would meet to work out the differences between the city and utility plans.

Meanwhile, the board also heard a report on possible solutions to problems at the wastewater treatment plant and voted to be identified as a Carolina Power & Light participant in the North Carolina Eastern Municipal Power Agency — a move that will determine GUC's wholesale power costs.

Jim Brown, an engineer with Olsen Associates, said Tuesday night that it might cost as much as $990,000 to correct aeration problems at the commission's new wastewater treatment plant.

But Brown said because the aeration system was considered an alternative process by the Environmental Protection Agency when the plant was built, the EPA should pay the total cost of correcting the problem through its grant funding process.

The Olsen firm designed the plant, which began full service in June 1985, and is participating in efforts to correct the problem, which Brown described as "not enough aeration capacity for the size of the plant."

According to Brown, the aeration system, described as the Schriber Process, was considered the most efficient treatment process on the market at the time (offering oxygen transfer efficiencies that were almost double those of the next best process) and exceeded specifications during clean water performance tests during start-up of the plant.

But the system is "transferring about half the oxygen it was reported to transfer," in dirty water, Brown said, and the oxygen deficiency is keeping the plant from meeting the permitted discharge ammonia limits.

And the board was told that it could take up to three months to select the desired solution and up to 18 months to design, secure approval and construct the required modifications.

In the only formal action taken at the meeting, the board voted to be considered a CP&L participant in the power agency for rate stabilization purposes.

Green said GUC could elect to be considered a CP&L participant or a Virginia Electric & Power Co. (now North Carolina Power) participant.

He explained that although GUC has never been a direct CP&L customer, the utility purchased the VEPCO substation north of Greenville on the same date as the power agency began supplying power in 1982 and consequently eliminated any VEPCO involvement in supplying power, therefore has never been considered a VEPCO customer by the power agency.

Continuing, Green said the power agency costs to produce electricity are not always identical to CP&L or VEPCO, so in order to maintain consistent and competitive rates, agency members have been contributing to a rate stabilization fund in low-cost years and money can be withdrawn in high-cost years to stabilize rates.

Contributions to the fund for both CP&L and VEPCO participants have been and will be the same until CP&L rate increases — because of the opening of the Harris nuclear plant — takes effect, probably in August.

After that, Green explained, VEPCO participant power costs will differ from costs of CP&L participants.

Since GUC compares and competes with CP&L, Green said "the staff recommends the commission select the 'CP&L participant' for rate stabilization to insure future competitive rates for our customers."

Green noted that while wholesale power costs for CP&L participants will be greater than those for VEPCO participants initially, the GUC will be able to remain competitive with CP&L retail rates (and because of the lower cost of power VEPCO participants will remain competitive with VEPCO retail rates).

But by about 1992, Green said, because VEPCO is expected to put more generation into service and increase rates, CP&L participants will have a lower cost of power than VEPCO participants.

He suggested that if GUC became a VEPCO participant, while the commission could have lower rates until the expected VEPCO increase, after about 1992 GUC's wholesale power costs would be increased so the retail rates would not be competitive with CP&L rates.

The board also reviewed proposals for liability insurance and instructed Pete Sowell of Industrial Insurance Management to continue to negotiate for the lowest rates possible for the coming year.

P&Z Recommends Annexations

of Blount's requests to rezone 1.56 acres from medium density single family/duplex residential to office and institutional and to rezone 4.14 acres from medium density single family/duplex residential to high density single family residential.

Blount's request to rezone 4.06 acres from office and institutional to multi-family residential was also approved.

Residents whose rear property lines about the second tract were concerned since the original request called for a rezoning to allow multi-family housing, according to Henry Stone of 310 Dupont Circle.

"Our concern is that we not have multi-family housing as such immediately behind us," Stone said.

Stone said he saw the single family request as a suitable compromise for the property.

Meanwhile, other area residents expressed concern about the type of development planned for the property, but members of the commission said they were only allowed to base their decisions on the compatibility of uses in the zoning request.

In other business, the commission voted to allow day care centers as a special use in office and institutional and office and institutional II zoning classifications.

Rufus Walston had requested that day care centers be a permitted use in the two zones, but the commission, following the recommendation of the planning staff, voted to allow the centers only as a special use.

"We think it (a day care center) is an acceptable use," said Harry Hamilton, city planner.

"Because of the sensitive nature and the impact it would have on surrounding residential and also the impact on traffic and other things associated with a day care center, we want to be able to minimize the impact of the day care center."

Hamilton said the special use process would protect both the day care centers and surrounding areas.

"We would be able to look at each individual location and put special criteria on it in the special use process to minimize the impact," he said. "There are a lot of things to consider when you put a day care center someplace."

The board recommended approval of a request by the planning and development department to zone a .619-acre tract located off the western right-of-way of Memorial Drive and north of Greenfield Boulevard to office and institutional.

The commission also approved preliminary plats of Planter's Walk, phase III, and Nelson Crisp property located off the southern right-of-way of Greenville Boulevard and north of Lynndale subdivision.

No Communication

The news of Greenville Police Chief Ted Holmes' resignation prompts a vague, dull ache.

That ache is the knowledge the incident is yet another example of what happens when a city council allows conflict to occlude communication.

Holmes cited frustration with budget cuts and a concern for building professionalism as he left the city employment to take a position as chief of police in Goldsboro.

Following close behind the dismissal of Gail Meeks as city manager we now have two top city government officials who have left in a short time span. There are rumors of further discontent.

Council members seemed shocked at Holmes' sudden resignation which presumably means there were no plans afoot to dismiss him. He is, after all, a highly trained law enforcement administrator who has brought some innovative changes to local police work.

If they were shocked, it might lead one to believe the council knows very little about what's going on in city government. If they knew about Holmes' discontent and did nothing to resolve it, that action is also to the council's discredit.

Holmes brought a degree of professionalism to the office of police chief that was beneficial for Greenville. He was an administrator who based his management decisions on data. He addressed the city's needs on this basis and this is a sound approach.

Holmes stressed education in law enforcement and improved quality of the city's police force through this emphasis.

The importance of a top police force to a city cannot be overemphasized. Highly trained police officers — led by a skilled administrator — are the most effective tool against crime a city can possess.

Question of alleged "budget-busting" by Holmes is not the real issue. The real issue is the fact that there were obviously areas of disagreement between Holmes and council members and these conflicts could not be resolved satisfactorily. Because of this failure, the city lost a capable police official.

We can applaud the council and interim City Manager Mayo Allen for moving promptly to appoint two veteran police offices as acting chief and interim assistant chief. Capt. Randy M. Nichols was named acting chief and Nelson Staton was named interim assistant chief. The prompt action was needed to provide leadership for the police department and to maintain morale.

Once a new city manager is employed and on the scene the council should see to it that the city manager form of government works as it is supposed to; that is with the city council setting policy and the city manager providing the supervision of the various department heads. The situation tells us too, that the council should move as rapidly as is feasible to employ the permanent city manager.

It would seem that better communication might have solved some of the problems that concerned the former chief. While nothing can be done about that situation, certainly there should be open lines between the administration and those who supervise the various activities of city government to avoid unwarranted turnovers in top positions. When they do occur they should be in a more orderly manner.

At Rest, At Last

The body of the only American soldier to be executed for desertion since the Civil War has been returned home and laid to rest beside that of his wife who died in 1979.

A friend of the family, Barney Calka, helped in the most recent effort to return Private Eddie Slovik's remains to this country. He says he is willing to try to secure a pardon for Slovik, which would be even more difficult.

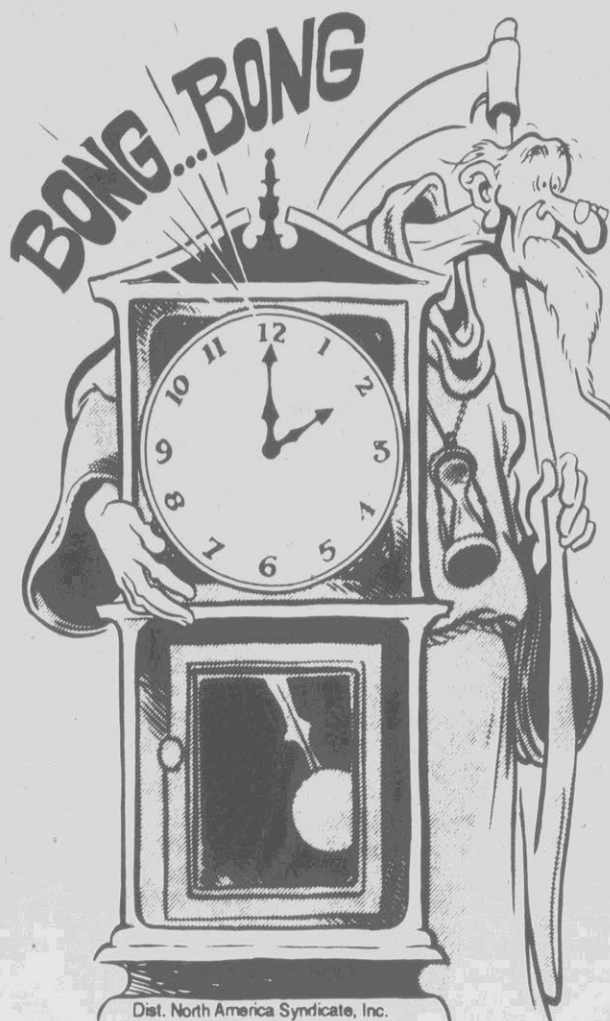

That ground was explored by the Pentagon in 1977, and after reviewing the case it found Slovik's execution was justified.

One of Eddie's sisters made a formal request for exhumation and return of the body from the ignominy of a numbered grave in France where he had been buried among the graves of 94 other U.S. soldiers hanged for charges that included rape and murder.

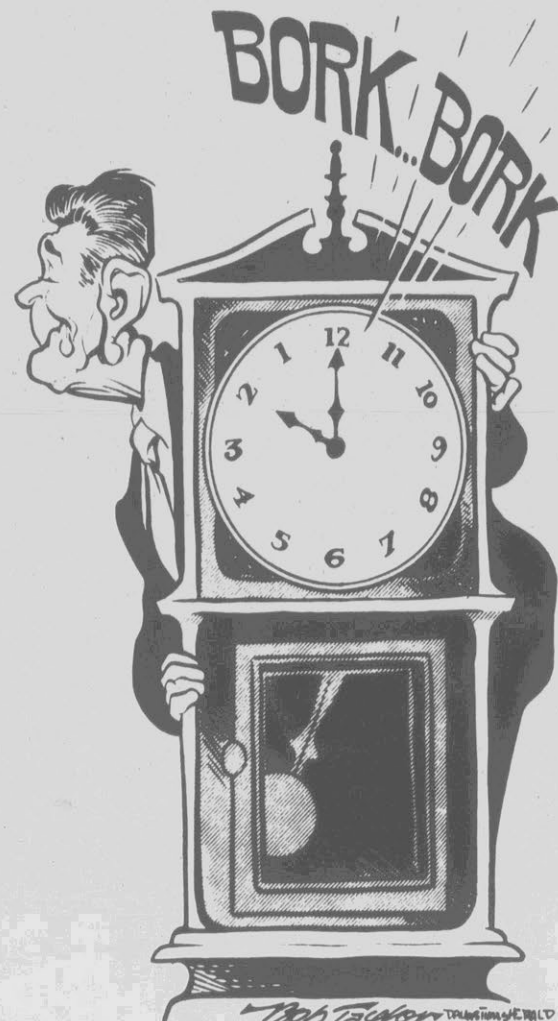

Slovik's troubles began when he was only 12 years old and arrested for breaking and entering. He later served time on charges of embezzlement and stealing a car. He was only 24 years old when he was shot by a firing squad on Jan. 31, 1945. The execution was approved by then-General Dwight D. Eisenhower.

The young draftee was absent without leave for 43 days from an infantry company to which he had been assigned as a replacement. He returned to the unit and the Army says he promptly deserted again.

Actually, it would probably be in the best interests of all to simply forget that endeavor; it could only result in more pain. Sometimes it seems best to simply leave the past to the past.

Public Forum

To the editor:

Can it be that this great State, in all its majesty and righteousness arisen, will slay a mentally retarded wretch who committed murder at the age of 15? A debate is going on in the State Senate right now about that, in the case of one Leon Brown — a debate among members presumably civilized, presumably humane, presumably of good judgment, presumably charitable, presumably God-fearing.

By what reasoning can anyone say that this person should be slain by the state? Wise ones will tell us: "His execution would deter others from murdering."

In England, in 1748, a 10-year-old boy, William York, was sentenced to death for murder. The learned judges gathered together to decide whether it was proper to hang the child. They agreed that it was, so that the hanging would deter other 10-year-olds from murdering. About 90 years later, in England, a boy of nine was sentenced to hang for pushing a stick through a cracked shop window and pulling out printer's color to the value of two pence.

We are not England, and we are not 18th or 19th century. We are North Carolina, a progressive state, and we are 1987. Is there anyone among us naive enough to suppose that the state's slaying of Leon Brown would in itself, or even in a contributory way, cause mentally retarded minors — whatsoever glimmer they might have of the law's scope — to caution themselves against murder or rape or mayhem, or whatever other act might beckon their limited vision downwards?

The state's position is that a 15-year-old has not enough control over himself, nor enough innate balance, nor enough moxie, nor enough whatever you please to join the Army, to drive a car, to drink a beer, to sign a legal contract. And if the 15-year-old is mentally retarded? Come now, Senators! He yourselves over to the golf course. You need a rest.

To the editor:

Lt. Col. North has demonstrated again the need to separate the person and the deed. North is not an evil person. He's a good-looking fellow, apparently sincere in his beliefs, hard-working, creative, with a nice sense of humor. In short, he is a likable, even admirable man.

But his deeds are something else. He has treated our government apparatus as if it were irrelevant and he the instrument of an absolute monarchy. He has soiled the good name of our nation abroad.

God loves the sinner, but ...

Privacy Would Take Beating With Bork

Imagine a world in which it was up to your state legislature to decide whether you could have sex or children. Imagine further that a majority of your neighbors could decide which members of your family could live with you in your own home.

According to Judge Robert H. Bork, President Reagan's choice for a seat on the Supreme Court, such a world would be perfectly constitutional.

What would be missing from that world is privacy — a realm of freedom for intimate sexual and family affairs. The Supreme Court has acknowledged the importance of such a realm for most of this century. The court has struck down laws requiring the sterilization of chicken thieves, banning interracial marriage and making a married couple's use of contraceptives a crime — all on the ground that marriage and procreation are private, not public affairs.

The court has held that the same right to privacy entitles a grandmother to live with her grandchildren, even if her neighbors disapprove. And most controversially, the court has held that the right to privacy protects a woman's choice to have an abortion.

But Judge Bork says that the right to privacy is nowhere in the Constitution, and therefore that all those Supreme Court decisions were wrong. He suggests that as to matters of sex, family and procreation, the court must stand on the sidelines and "let the majority have its way."

Our Constitution, however, gives no such license to moral majorities. Rather it places basic freedoms beyond the reach of majority will. The Bill of Rights, for example, protects our ideas, our consciences and our homes. The 14th Amendment places limits on the power of government to deprive us of fundamental liberty. And the Ninth Amendment says that we retain fundamental rights not expressly listed in the Constitution's text.

Previous justices of the court, liberal and conservative alike, have read these guarantees broadly to embrace the right to privacy, reminding us that our freedoms cannot be "reduced to any formula" or "determined by reference to any code."

Bork, by contrast, believes that the court should read our freedoms more narrowly and literally. If there is nothing about "sexual gratification" in the words of the Constitution, then our constitutional liberty must stop at the bedroom door. And if the records of the Constitutional Convention contain no discussion of pregnancy, then our access to condoms, diaphragms, birth control pills and safe legal abortions cannot be protected by the courts.

This view is puzzling, since Bork has written that he is a moral skeptic — that is, he believes that nobody's values are objectively better than anybody else's. If he takes that view, why doesn't he believe that each of us should be left alone to make our own decisions about our sex, love and family lives, so long as we hurt no one else? And why doesn't he want the courts to protect that private sphere from intrusion by moral majorities?

The answer could be, first, that Bork trusts majorities not to trample important freedoms. But the powerless, the outnumbered and the unorthodox cannot share such faith. It is precisely because majorities are not always enlightened that we have a Bill of Rights to protect us against their darker impulses.

The answer might be, second, that Bork distrusts courts, fearing that they will substitute their value preferences for those of the majority. But when the court upholds the right to privacy, it is not just imposing its own values on society. Rather the court is saying that whether it likes your sexual, familial or reproductive choices or not, they are yours and yours alone to make.

Perhaps, finally, Bork simply reveres history and believes that when the framers said "liberty," they weren't thinking about sex. But the Constitution speaks in broad and majestic terms for a reason: so that it can be a living thing, evolving over time.

No less a figure than Thomas Jefferson lashed out toward the end of his life at those who "look at constitutions with sanctimonious reverence, and deem them like the Ark of the Covenant, too sacred to be touched." Those justices who elaborated the right of privacy were simply taking Jefferson at his word.

Strength For Today

The expression "the fifth wheel" is often used to describe something utterly useless. It should be remembered, however, that in the case of the automobile the fifth wheel is extremely important. It is the steering wheel.

Religious agnostics have no use for this fifth wheel. They see everything happening in the universe as the result of impersonal force. To them the steering wheel is a ridiculous assumption, and the being behind it — whom unthinking people call God — is nothing but a projection of infantile longings.

But just as an automobile soon runs off the road if there is not a firm and purposeful hand on the steering wheel, so society will run into the ditch if no attention is paid to the steering wheel and the God behind it. Four wheels on a moving vehicle or society are not enough.

IN THE STATE

Porn Issue Lives

By The Associated Press
It won't take long for other organizations to fill the void left by the court-ordered closing of 19 adult bookstores last week, and the success of the new stores will depend on tough local authorities are, people on both sides of the pornography issue said.

"It's easy for someone to come in and reopen the stores if the climate is such that they won't be prosecuted," Bob Thomas, Charlotte's police attorney, said. "We've got an excellent opportunity all over this state to let these people who have been violating the criminal law know that they're not welcome."

Last week, Stephen Winick, general manager and supervisor of Direct Retail Associates of Baltimore, and Roger Griggs of Charlotte, the company's area supervisor, pleaded guilty Friday to three obscenity counts. They were given suspended sentences in exchange for agreeing to shut down Direct Retail's 19 stores and to leave the state.

"People want that material and they're going to get it," said Charlotte attorney Theo Nixon, who represented a defendant in the Mecklenburg County case. "There's going to be people coming in right behind us to fill the void."

But Fayetteville police Capt. Bill Johnson said he believes the anti-pornography pressure in North Carolina will result in a trend away from bookstores.

"I think what you'll see is a shift toward adult videotapes," he told the Greensboro News & Record.

New Regulations

GREENSBORO (AP) — As North Carolina state is taking steps to open its first low-level radioactive waste facility, a state commission has proposed new regulations for such facilities that one environmentalist called tougher than final standards.

The new regulations proposed by the N.C. Radiation Protection Commission for licensing, operating, monitoring and decommissioning of commercial low-level radioactive waste disposal facilities would ban shallow land burial.

"We already have general rules that deal with waste disposal and lay out the broad parameters," Nel Fry, deputy chief of the state's radiation protection section, told the Greensboro News & Record Tuesday. "These rules flesh out how those broad parameters are met."

The regulations, now open for public comment, are subject to revision or final approval at a commission meeting on September 25, and could go into effect as early as Dec. 1, 1987.

Minors' Punishment

RALEIGH (AP) — A Senate committee has approved a bill to limit capital punishment for minors, but the panel first adopted amendments to drop the age for the death penalty ban and keep the bill from affecting murders already committed.

The bill's sponsor, Rep. Sidney Locks, D-Robeson, endorsed the changes, saying they made the bill more consistent with the version already approved by the House and more likely to become law.

"Our intent ... is to save as many kids from that very definite end of their lives as possible," he said.

The Judiciary I Committee voted on the amendments Tuesday in an effort to defuse objections to the bill that were voiced on the Senate floor.

Bush Meets N.C. Supporters, Tours BW Lab

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RESEARCH TRIANGLE PARK, N.C. (AP) — Vice President George Bush donned a white laboratory smock and peered into microscopes on a tour of the company that developed an anti-AIDS drug, but politics and foreign affairs were on his mind.

Bush, whose stop at the Burroughs Wellcome Co. concluded a half-day visit to North Carolina that began with meetings with supporters of his presidential bid, repeatedly defended the Reagan administration's policies on the Middle East and Central America.

"We will continue to support those who are fighting for freedom so that the people of Nicaragua can enjoy what the people of ... other countries in the area have, and that is democracy and freedom," Bush said Tuesday, responding to a Burroughs Wellcome employee who criticized the administration's support of Nicaraguan rebels.

He also said he had no fear the Reagan administration's decision to fly the United States flag on Kuwaiti ships would involve the U.S. in the Persian Gulf war.

"While I can't say there's no risk at all, sometimes you have to take risks for peace," Bush said.

Bush said the U.S., which Tuesday readied warships to escort the Kuwaiti oil tankers through the Gulf, had "a disproportionate responsibility for the freedom of passage there."

He said, "I am not too worried about it because I don't think the Iranians want to risk a major, further confrontation with the United States."

Standing among rows of scientific equipment at Burroughs Wellcome Co., which developed the drug Retrovir that has prevented the spread of the AIDS virus in some patients, Bush told reporters he did not expect the Iran-contra scandal to affect his presidential campaign.

He said the congressional probe had proven he and President Reagan did not know in advance about the diversion of arms sale profits to Nicaraguan rebels.

"I told the truth," Bush said. "I said from the very beginning the president did not know about the diversion of funds to the contras, and I said that I didn't know. I believe that has been and will continue to be established" by the hearings.

He said the administration's worst mistake was selling arms to Iran but insisted the sales originally were not envisioned as ransom to free American hostages in Lebanon.

wrong," Bush said. "That is against our own policy."

He and his wife, Barbara, toured the high-tech research facility, stopping in several labs where research into acquired immune deficiency syndrome and other communicable diseases is conducted.

Removing his glasses, Bush gazed at tissue cultures through microscopes and examined charts demonstrating how Retrovir works.

Addressing perhaps 100 company employees jammed onto a terrace, he credited Burroughs-Wellcome with developing "the world's first significant victory against AIDS."

Bush recalled a conversation with an AIDS patient during an April visit to the National Institute of Health at Research Triangle Park.

"I talked to him about what he had gone through, and I saw first-hand his fear," he said. AIDS "is brutal and it is unforgiving."

Earlier, Bush met privately in Raleigh with organizers of his campaign in North Carolina and with GOP state legislators. He also said what was billed as a courtesy call on Republican Gov. Jim Martin at the state Capitol.

Martin told reporters after the 35-minute meeting he was staying neutral in the GOP presidential nominating battle.

Former Burlington Worker Likely Face Career Changes

GREENSBORO (AP) — Although the 525 workers being laid off by Burlington Industries will enter a strong job market, those who want to remain in textiles might have a hard time finding employment, officials said.

"Most corporations can find some room for highly talented people but, in general, I would say it will be difficult to place them all in the textile industry in this city today," said Charles "Chuck" Hayes, chairman of Guilford Mills.

Hayes said most area textile companies have reduced their workforces to better compete with imports and that will work against those laid off by Burlington.

"It is not as bleak as it sounds. The good thing is they will get a good severance package and that will lessen the effects for a while," said Tom Reynolds, manager of the state Employment Security Commission office in Greensboro. "And we're getting new industries coming in and the Triad is growing all the time."

He said the city's unemployment rate is only 3.4 percent and the job market is strong. But Reynolds said finding new jobs could be difficult for those with textile specialties that cannot be easily transferred to a different field.

Burlington's announcement of the layoffs Monday came as the city was putting behind it the elimination of 300 jobs at Blue Bell Corp. late last year and about 145 jobs at Southern Life Insurance Co. earlier this year.

Among employees, the reaction was sadness, frustration and relief that the long-anticipated bad news was finally delivered.

Workers said only the closing of the research and development facility in Jamestown — part of a plan to transfer some research to operational divisions — came as a shock. Some 117 people worked at the facility. Some will be transferred, others will lose their jobs.

"Ever since the takeover there have been rumors everyday — the actual closing of this particular division was a shock," said Paul Kiteck, who worked in the division for 2½ years.

"I don't have any other job lined up. I will be using their placement services and contacts of my own until the termination date — it's just barely a two weeks' notice," Kiteck said.

At Burlington's corporate headquarters in Greensboro, where 408 jobs are being eliminated, few workers would comment.

But most blamed New York financier Asher Edelman for their plight, saying it was his unsuccessful hostile takeover bid led to the restructuring of Burlington.

"He's not a very nice guy," said a young system analyst, carrying a cardboard box full of belongings to her car after receiving word her job was terminated.

City government and business leaders were muted in their response to the Burlington announcement, saying the area's economy is growing and appears capable of providing new jobs for many of the soon-to-be-unemployed Burlington workers.

One possible job source could be Fieldcrest Cannon Inc., which will build a headquarters for its carpet and rug division near Regional Airport in the coming year.

O.L. Raines Jr., vice president-human resources for Eden-based Fieldcrest Cannon, said he expects Burlington will be sending resumes to other textile companies. "We will compare those to the needs we will have but, until we do that, it would be unfair to speculate on how many, if any, we might need, he said."

Still, Raines said, "I wouldn't be surprised if there aren't some we would be interested in."

Three N.C. Waste Sites Added To 'Superfund' List

By The Associated Press
Three hazardous waste sites in North Carolina are among 99 sites in the United States added to the "Superfund" list of national priority sites for cleanup by the Environmental Protection Agency.

The sites are the former Carolina Transformer Co. and the former Cape Fear Wood Preserving Co., both in Cumberland County, and the Charles Macon Lagoon and Drum Storage in the Richmond County town of Cordova.

Placement on the Superfund list helps ensure that sites will receive sufficient funding for extensive clean-up projects. The additions released Tuesday also include the first federal facilities ever placed on the EPA's priority cleanup agenda.

The Carolina Transformer site was found to be contaminated with PCBs in 1978 when EPA officials sampled nearby wells. PCBs, polychlorinated biphenyls, were used in oil to insulate transformers until they were banned in 1979 as a suspected cancer-causing agent.

In February 1984, the state Environmental Management Division of the Department of Natural Resources fined Carolina Transformer $35,000 for several violations of state water-quality statutes. The state never collected its money.

After the site's owner failed to respond to an EPA order to clean the site, the EPA had to use its emergency fund to begin cleaning the project in August 1985. The clean-up cost the EPA about $200,000 and more than 975 tons of contaminated soil was removed.

Since then, the EPA has filed a suit against the U.S. Department of Justice with the site's owner requesting recovery of the clean-up costs, according to EPA spokesman Charlotte Thompson in Atlanta. Further clean-up at the site is pending the outcome of the suit.

In early 1985, the EPA again used its emergency fund to stabilize the property of the former Cape Fear Wood Preserving Co. by removing contaminated water and sludge.

Cape Fear Wood, which opened in 1953 and closed in 1984, used a pressurized treatment process to prolong the life of outdoor wood products. The company at first used creosote, a coal tar derivative, to treat the wood, but later switched to a process that used chromium, copper and arsenic. Waste from the operation was apparently dumped in two lagoons on the 20-acre site. When those filled up, it was dumped on a patch of ground behind the plant, according to EPA officials.

Since the initial clean-up, EPA officials said contaminants from the wood preserving business have migrated underground to nearby sites, including a private drinking well about 20 yards from the company.

Thompson said the EPA is trying to determine all companies responsible for producing the hazardous wastes. Those companies will then be notified they are responsible in part for the clean-up costs.

The 6-acre Charles Macon property was also the site of a 1983 Superfund cleanup. EPA officials said Macon operated an unauthorized dumping ground for old oil and hazardous waste on the site, where oil sludge ranging in depth from a few inches to three feet was found.

Authorities also found about 13 lagoons on the property that contained contaminated waste, oil and sludge, in addition to about 1,900 barrels of other kinds of waste at the site, according to the Richmond County Journal.

The 1983 cleanup resulted from a lawsuit initiated by the state to get property cleaned up.

The new sites brought the number of dumps and other facilities on the national priorities list to 951, a fraction of the thousands of hazardous waste sites around the nation.

PTL Chiefs Face Creditors

By DAVID REED
Associated Press Writer
COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — PTL executives were expected to field hard financial and religious questions today when they square off with a throng of creditors in a normally routine bankruptcy court procedure.

The meeting is designed to provide an opportunity for a representative of the company in debt to be placed under oath and answer questions from those who say they are owed money.

But in this case, the company is a tax-exempt religious organization with a television network that reaches millions of homes, a church and a Christian theme park. And the potential number of debtors is approximately 121,400.

There also is a leadership conflict. Among those planning to attend the creditors' meeting are ministry members who want to get rid of the new PTL board chairman, the Rev. Jerry Falwell, and bring back deposed PTL founder Jim Bakker.

Bakker and his former aides at PTL are the subjects of a U.S. Justice Department investigation and a grand jury will begin hearing evidence in the case Aug. 17 in Charlotte, N.C.

The Washington Post reported today that an internal report prepared by PTL auditors has uncovered hundreds of thousands of dollars in payments to Bakker and top aides that had been previously unreported.

In the 2½ months prior to his resignation in March, Bakker and his wife Tammy Faye collected $792,000 in total compensation, including a $150,000 "loan" that hadn't been approved by the PTL board of directors and which wasn't repaid, the newspaper said.

Some information from the auditors' report will be raised at today's meeting, which was moved from the federal bankruptcy courtroom across the street to a movie theatre with 540 seats that accommodate the large crowd expected.

The U.S. Marshal's office will provide security, according to Janell Hedgepath, chief deputy clerk of the U.S. Bankruptcy Court.

Neither Falwell nor Bakker is expected to attend the meeting moderated by Deputy Clerk Max McCaskill.

PTL Chief Operating Officer Harry Hargrave will be at center stage to answer the questions from unsecured and secured creditors, ministry spokesman Don Hardister said Tuesday.

One of Bakker's lawyers, W. Ryan Hovis, said Tuesday he would ask Hargrave some questions. Bakker claims PTL has reneged on an agreement to give him a ministry-owned house in Tega Cay, S.C., and may owe him royalties, Hovis said.

The PTL bankruptcy case is unique because of the line the Constitution draws between church and state, the intense publicity it has had and because "there are so many interested parties whose status is uncertain," Hovis said.

PTL filed for reorganization and protection from creditors June 12, saying it owed $72 million to 1,400 people or businesses. About $41 million is secured by collateral.

But some of the 120,000 major contributors called lifetime partners claim they are either creditors or owners of two hotels and a water park at PTL's theme park in Fort Mill, S.C.

Panels Debate Spousal Rape Bill

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — A House committee has been told to be ready to vote at its next meeting on a bill to allow rape charges between marital partners living apart, even if they are not legally separated.

The bill would be a relatively small departure from current law, which bars rape charges unless a separation agreement has been signed. But it remained controversial in committee discussions Tuesday.

Rep. Dave Redwine, D-Brunswick, said the bill might be abused by women trying to intimidate their husbands during separation disputes.

"They might get together to discuss alimony and ... one thing leads to another and sexual intercourse takes place," Redwine told the House Judiciary III Committee.

"The lady after that, who may feel like she may be in a better bargaining position with her husband down the road, gets a felony warrant."

But Rep. Harry Payne, D-New Hanover, said that wasn't the point.

"Can it be abused? Yeah," he said. "But so can any other criminal prosecution. A wife could go to the IRS and accuse her husband of tax fraud. ... People don't foolishly file false warrants."

The Senate-approved bill was returned to the House committee when it ran into trouble on the House floor. But the chairman, Rep. Joe Hackney, D-Orange, said any possible amendments to meet objections face "substantial opposition" from the other side.

Among the options being considered are having a lower presumptive sentence for marital rape than for other rapes, requiring that marital rape warrants be issued at the district attorneys' discretion or creating a whole new offense for marital rape.

Ron Stephens, district attorney for Durham County, argued for a 40-year presumptive sentence for marital rape instead of life in prison.

"It will be difficult for DAs across this state to get convictions with a life sentence for a man who is still married to his wife," he said. "I think juries would have a hard time wrestling with that problem."

But Payne said a victim of marital rape asked him last week, "How am I less violated because I knew this person or used to live with him?"

And Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, argued, "The Legislature ought to be consistent."

"If he shoots her, it doesn't matter if it's his wife, married, separated or what," he added. "While we're making it (marital rape) a crime, let's not make it a half-way one."

Rep. John Kerr, D-Wayne, said he favors involving district attorneys to inject some objectivity in the process and curb frivolous charges.

"I don't want to see my name in the newspapers over something like this," he said after the meeting.

Stephens, however, said that would not help the situation.

"Every Saturday night, I'm going to get a call at home from the magistrate's office," he said. "I'm not going to have any information and the magistrate will say there's a lady here who wants to take out a warrant against her husband."

Miller said that would still be an improvement on leaving the discretion with a magistrate he called "the least trained person in the whole judiciary."

But Stephens countered that the result of district attorney intervention would be a disparity between the handling of marital rape cases in large districts and in small ones.

"In one county we won't have a law on spousal rape," he said. "In another county, we will have a law on spousal rape."

Sen. Wanda Hunt, D-Moore, who had proposed repealing the spousal defense for rape, urged the committee to support "the strongest bill possible for these spouses who are abused."

In other legislative action:
Gas Tax
A bill to raise the state tax on gasoline by 2 cents a gallon was scheduled for a public hearing in a bid to prevent its passage this session.

"That was nothing but a delaying tactic," said Rep. Walt Windley, R-Gaston, who asked for the hearing by the House Finance Committee after Rep. Ivan Mothershead, R-Mecklenburg, explained his bill.

"We all have to realize that roads are the lifeblood of economic development in this state," said Mothershead, who split with Gov. Jim Martin and most other Republicans in offering the tax bill. "... People are sick of waiting an hour or two in traffic to get four blocks."

North Carolina is second only to Pennsylvania in state-maintained mileage but has not resorted to toll highways to offset the expense, Mothershead said. The state is third best in miles paved for every 1 cent of tax behind Pennsylvania and Texas, he added.

"The state of North Carolina has taken on a burden much greater than most every other state in the union except for two in maintaining a state road system," he said.

Recognizing the "political realities," Mothershead urged the committee to send his proposal to the full House without prejudice so it could be debated. After Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, approved Windley's request for a public hearing, Mothershead said that also might serve the purpose of airing the issue.

The bill would raise an estimated $75 million a year for building highways. Mothershead noted that the sooner highway construction is started, the cheaper it will be.

DWI Laws
Bills to toughen North Carolina's laws on drunken driving, submitted by Gov. Jim Martin, have been scuttled in favor of a study of the issue.

The Senate Judiciary III Committee approved the study proposal and sent it to the Appropriations Committee for further consideration. If approved there, it still would be up to the Legislative Research Commission whether to follow through on the study.

Ward Purrington, Martin's legislative liaison, said he was pleased with the action after Sen. Bob Swain, D-Buncombe, had refused to consider the bills for most of the session.

The program had called for:

- Extending the period for which a driver's license would be automatically suspended after a driving-while-impaired arrest.
- Toughening the penalty for felony death by vehicle to at least 15 years.
- Signing formal agreements with other states to allow each other's citizens to attend DWI education treatment schools.
- Requiring that drunken drivers receive alcoholism assessment and treatment if their blood alcohol levels are 0.15 percent, instead of the current 0.20 percent.
- Permanently revoking the license of any driver convicted of murder resulting from motor vehicle operation.
- Revoking limited driving privileges when its restrictions are violated.

The alcohol assessment provision is still alive in a House committee, where the lower alcohol levels and higher assessment fees may be approved for a pilot study.

Explosion Leaves 4 Dead In N.Y.

By EDWARD FROST
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Workers using cranes searched early today through the wreckage of three buildings demolished by an explosion and fire that officials say may have been touched off by illegally stored propane tanks.

Police said they did not expect searchers to find any more victims. Four people died and 11 were injured in the explosion that leveled three two-story buildings in Brooklyn. Twelve firefighters and 12 police officers also were injured, officials said.

The blast occurred Tuesday morning after workers accidentally dropped a 20-pound propane canister as it was being taken to the basement of the 18th Avenue Plumbing Supply Co., authorities and witnesses said. The leaking canister fell down the stairs and crashed into others in the basement.

City regulations prohibit storage of highly volatile fuel in a basement.

"On the face of it, it would seem that there is some question as to whether there was compliance with the law in this case," said William M. Feehan, assistant bureau chief of fire prevention. The city is investigating whether the plumbing company complied with other regulations.

It was not known what sparked the blast, Fire Commissioner Joseph Spinnato said. It broke a gas pipe in the building and the escaping natural gas fed the fire, said Homer Bishop, the department's chief of operations.

Ari Dubov, 28, said he saw workers unloading containers from a delivery truck. "Somehow, they just, like, banged together, and one of the nozzles broke off. They heard it, and they dropped (the containers) and they said, 'Oh ... something's going to happen.'"

Moments later "there was a phenomenal explosion," said Rabbi Elliot Amsel of Congregation Hamaor, across the street from the blast. "Now it looks like London in World War II."

The buildings that collapsed housed the plumbing company, a bakery and several apartments.

One of the first on the scene, ambulance attendant Volve Herman, said "it was like something you see in a war movie."

"Everybody was there with bare hands, digging, pulling out rubble, pulling out survivors," Herman said. He described pulling three men — two alive, one dead — from under two feet of rubble on the sidewalk.

Capt. Michael Julian, a police spokesman, said an employee from Acetylene Supply Co. of Woodbridge, N.J., delivered five tanks of propane and three of acetylene, then picked up several empty tanks and drove away.

Fire department spokesman Efrain Parrilla said two people were pronounced dead at the scene and two others died at Maimonides Hospital. All were from Brooklyn, police said.

Five survivors were in satisfactory condition early today at Maimonides, where two underwent surgery for their injuries, said Ruth Larsen, the hospital's night nursing supervisor. The others were treated and discharged.

Larsen said the five had been treated for smoke inhalation and lacerations. A few of them also suffered head and eye injuries, she said.

Miss. Teen Wins Pageant

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Kristi Addis, a 16-year-old baton twirler and all-state basketball player from Mississippi, hopes to go on from winning the Miss Teen USA pageant to a career in broadcast journalism and to write a novel.

Miss Addis, of Holcombe, Miss., won the pageant Tuesday night during a nationally televised pageant. "I feel great. I think the interview had a lot to do with it because all the girls were equally pretty," she said. "There were 51 beautiful girls."

First runner-up in the pageant was Miss North Carolina, 17-year-old Peggy Blackwell of Fayetteville. Bobbie Brown, 17, of Baton Rouge, La., was second runner-up; Jannetta Coffman, 17, from Oklahoma City was third runner-up; and Miss North Dakota, DayNa Decker, 17, of Fargo, was fourth runner-up.

The 10 semifinalists were chosen after Thursday's swimsuit and evening gown competitions, which were taped for Tuesday's telecast. The semifinalists were interviewed live and the 10 judges selected the winner.

The pageant hosts were Tracy Scoggins of "The Colbys" and Michael Young. Miss Scoggins was standing in for actress Stephanie Kramer, who canceled because of an inner-ear infection.

Singer Has Gehrig's Disease

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Irish tenor Dennis Day, who appeared on the Jack Benny television show and recorded such standards as "Danny Boy," has been diagnosed as suffering from Lou Gehrig's disease, a spokeswoman said.

The disease, which forced the baseball great Gehrig into retirement, is a rare and incurable nerve disorder.

Day's spokeswoman, Kitty Davis, said Tuesday the 71-year-old singer "isn't giving up or giving in."

He missed an appearance at the Irish Fair in Burbank, Calif., last month. Ms. Davis said then that Day had to cancel due to leg and back pain he began experiencing during a vacation in Maui with his wife Peg.

After tests at the Scripps Clinic in La Jolla, Calif., doctors determined Day suffers from amyotrophic lateral sclerosis, also known as Lou Gehrig's disease, Ms. Davis said.

Greenspan, Volcker Differ On Banking Deregulation

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Alan Greenspan, nominated to succeed Paul Volcker as chairman of the Federal Reserve, sounded very much like his predecessor on issues ranging from Third World debt to the need for vigilance against inflation.

But he parted company with Volcker on banking deregulation, signaling a willingness to be much bolder than Volcker in granting banks expanded powers.

Greenspan's comments came during a 3 1/2-hour confirmation hearing on Tuesday before the Senate Banking Committee, at which he was praised by committee members.

Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis. and committee chairman, predicted Greenspan would quickly win Senate approval even though he said he may vote against him in part because of his views on banking deregulation.

Following the hearings, economists who closely follow the Fed said Greenspan had handled himself well during his first public comments since he was nominated for the Fed post by President Reagan on June 2.

"There were no surprises. He took a hard line on inflation, which is what you would expect the chairman of the Federal Reserve to do," said Frank McCormick, senior economist at Bank of America in San Francisco.

Allen Sinai, chief economist for Shearson Lehman Brothers in New York, said Greenspan "said all the right things."

Greenspan's testimony came as Volcker was making one of his last congressional appearances as Fed chairman, presenting the central bank's semiannual monetary policy report.

Asked if he had any advice for his predecessor, Volcker said Greenspan should "scratch, fight, complain — whatever is necessary to make the point to Congress and the American people" that a politically independent central bank is critically important to the country's economic health.

Greenspan, who headed the president's Council of Economic Advisers in the Nixon and Ford administrations, heard the same exhortation directly from senators during his confirmation hearing.

Proxmire noted that for the past four decades the Fed has been headed by people of the stature of William McChesney Martin, Arthur Burns and Volcker, chairmen who did not hesitate to assert the Fed's independence.

Proxmire said Greenspan might find this particularly difficult since he will be heading a Fed board in which every member has been appointed by Reagan.

But Greenspan assured committee members that he would follow the example set by other Fed chairmen.

"It is important for the Federal Reserve to retain its independence, and I will do everything I can to make sure that occurs," he said.

Volcker, who turned down administration overtures to serve another four-year term, gave a generally upbeat assessment of the economy's prospects, pointing to an improving trade deficit and an expected big drop in the federal budget deficit for this year.

But he said much more needs to be done, especially in making sure the budget deficit continues on a downward track.

"It would be nonsense for me to claim that all is safely and securely on path," Volcker said.

Greenspan, echoing familiar Volcker themes, pledged to make inflation-fighting his No. 1 goal and warned about the continued threat from high federal budget deficits.

However, Greenspan did depart from his predecessor on the issue of banking deregulation, signaling much more willingness to allow banks to expand into areas outside of traditional banking such as securities underwriting and insurance, a change that Volcker has opposed.

Greenspan said that expanded powers for banks were needed in order to bring in extra capital to a system that has been battered by inroads made by other businesses into traditional banking areas.

"I think that is a less risky road to take than standing pat with the current hand dealt the banking system," he said.

Greenspan said he believed that the Third World debt crisis which erupted in 1982 was being managed successfully.

Death Linked To Heat; Electricity Usage Soars

By The Associated Press
A heat wave broiled the eastern two-thirds of the nation today after it caused record demands for power in the East and Midwest, sent city workers home in the nation's capital and was linked to a man's death in Nebraska.

National Weather Service forecasters around the nation predicted more high temperatures in the 90s today and through the weekend.

Electricity for overworked air conditioners was used at or near record rates in Virginia, Maryland, Delaware, Pennsylvania, Ohio, West Virginia, Tennessee, Kentucky, Indiana and Michigan.

"We're all creatures of comfort," said Marshall Julien, a spokesman for Columbus & Southern Ohio Electric Co., one of many utilities reporting record high usage. "When the temperature goes up, the thermostats go down."

Chicago Mayor Harold Washington ordered a review of the city's heat emergency plan Tuesday, when the high of 94 marked the 12th day over 90 degrees this month. He urged special precautions for the elderly, the chronically ill and infants.

Chicago hospitals complained about failing water pressure blamed on open fire hydrants.

Police detectives and office workers in Washington, D.C.'s Seventh District were sent home Tuesday after air-conditioning broke down in 100-degree heat on the hottest day of the summer so far. It was so hot a woman prisoner fainted in a city lock-up, said spokesman David Israel.

In the northeast Ohio city of Niles, trash pickups were scheduled to begin at midnight instead of 5 a.m. because of the heat.

Michael L. Eno, 32, died Monday, probably of heat exhaustion, after he was found in a Lincoln, Neb., park with a body temperature of 108.9 degrees, police said. Temperatures ranged from the upper 80s in the eastern part of the state to 100 in the west on Tuesday.

Thunderstorms in the Chesapeake region of Delaware brought only temporary relief Tuesday from the uncomfortable humidity and 100-degree temperatures that were expected to stay through the weekend.

The mercury rose to 103 degrees in Baltimore, short of the 104-degree record for July 21 set in 1930. In Wilmington, Del., the temperature rose to 98 degrees. Dover Air Force Base posted a high of 100.

Demand for electricity soared as resident sweltered.

A record high 11.2 million kilowatts were consumed in one hour Tuesday by Virginia Power's 1.6 million customers, utility spokesman William N. Curry said.

A peak use of about 5 million kilowatts by Potomac Electric Power Co.'s 600,000 customers in Washington and Maryland suburbs, surpassed the previous record 4.8 million kilowatts which was set Monday.

The American Electric Power System, consisting of eight power companies in Ohio, West Virginia, Tennessee, Virginia, Kentucky, Indiana and Michigan, said its customers set an all-time summer peak demand of 15.347 million kilowatts between 3 p.m. and 4 p.m.

Teacher Juggles Classroom Time

By MARY BUSTAMANTE
The Tucson Citizen

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — When Jim Boyd asks his students to solve math problems, he has them figure out how tall an elephant is. Or he asks them how many balls there are if five clowns are juggling three balls each.

Boyd is the sole tutor to the 18 school-aged children traveling with the Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus.

Although as a child he never dreamed of running away with the circus, he's done just that. And all the while, he's been able to continue his work of helping young people learn.

Boyd says nothing could persuade him at this point in time to return to public school teaching.

"It's rewarding educationally because you don't have as much paperwork as in the public schools," he said during a circus stopover in Tucson. "I can focus all my time with the kids and (on) getting feedback from them."

He also enjoys a certain status in the circus that he might not have in a more conventional environment.

"I'm looked on as a professional here," Boyd said. "Education is a high priority. I think it is the European way of thinking."

Circus parents are concerned about their children's education, Boyd said. He said that when he has a problem with a child, he usually can clear it up the same day with the child's parents.

Boyd, a Sarasota, Fla., resident, has taught math and science at elementary, junior high and high school levels. He said working with many grades helped him land the circus job last August.

In a 10-hour work day, Boyd meets with small groups of students in two-hour sessions. Though math, including trigonometry, is his specialty, Boyd teaches a cross section of usual school subjects.

The study groups are divided by circus acts, not age levels, and the meeting times are based on circus schedules. Grade levels in a single group may span five years.

Because of the schedules, Boyd can't keep students after class. Performances and even publicity interviews can take priority over class time.

The circus kids often put in eight to 12 hours of circus-related work each day, so they can be tired when class time arrives. Boyd tries not to schedule classes after performances.

The circus students are enrolled in accredited correspondence schools. They are not graded by Boyd, but take standardized tests mailed to the correspondence schools for marking.

Mark Gebel, the 16-year-old son of animal-tamer Gunther Gebel-Williams, said Boyd is helpful and patient. He said he believes he is getting the same level of education from Boyd as he would in a public school.

Although Gebel, who was born into a circus family, misses spending more time with students his age, he said he wouldn't give up the benefits of circus life.

Gebel will be a senior in Boyd's classes next year. He plans to go on to college, but wants to return to the circus, he said.

That balance of loving the circus but having goals like college is typical among circus kids, Boyd said.

"My students deal in the real world more than regular students and they know the value of a dollar — and the value of a diploma," he said. "They all honestly want to get an education."

Include Address When Writing

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: We discuss your column during lunchtime with the people I work with. In November of 1985 I wrote to you and enclosed a stamped, self-addressed envelope for your reply. I waited for months to hear from you, but no letter came, so I finally gave up.

What do you do with all those self-addressed, stamped envelopes? After collecting 1,000 of them, they amount to $220 in unused postage stamps. I hope you don't throw that kind of money into the wastebasket.

Enclosed you will find another self-addressed, stamped envelope, and I am betting at work that this letter will also be ignored. — EDELGARD BAHR, BEAVERTON, ORE.

DEAR EDELGARD BAHR: You are right; I have at least $220 in self-addressed, stamped envelopes. And do you know why? Because most of the envelopes are addressed to ABIGAIL VAN BUREN — not to the sender! And the rest are addressed to the sender, but instead of the name of the city, the sender has written "city" — with no clue to the city and state.

Then there are a number of people who state that they have enclosed a stamped, self-addressed envelope, but none is enclosed.

I repeat, every letter accompanied by a stamped, self-addressed envelope is answered. And promptly.

And by the way, you neglected to enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope with this letter.

DEAR IN THERAPY: Now that you are in therapy, you surely are aware that your mother has not been "healed" — and may never be, unless she chooses to get professional help as you did. Her hysterical reaction to your demanding to know who your father was is evidence that the mere mention of his name is painful to her. Discuss this with your therapist. Even though you have the "right" to know, please be patient with your mother, who unfortunately is still unable to deal with a very tragic part of her life.

mess this is going to be with charge accounts and mentions in the society column, etc. Are there any serious legal complications that I should be aware of?

I am the owner of an insurance policy on my ex-husband's life. This policy was purchased prior to our divorce, and I am the beneficiary. I am designated as "wife of the insured." Should this be changed to avoid a mix-up? — THE FIRST DOROTHY JOHNSON

DEAR FIRST: Yes. After your ex-husband marries Dorothy II, you will be known as the "former wife of the insured." Also, his new wife will be known as Mrs. Howard (or whatever his given name is) Johnson, and you will be known as Mrs. Dorothy Johnson.

(To get Abby's booklet, "How to Be Popular: You're Never Too Young or Too Old," send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Popularity, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.)

Start Cholesterol Monitoring Early

By NYU MEDICAL CENTER

Waiting until midlife to be concerned about cholesterol is a mistake, according to doctors at New York University Medical Center. Awareness and action earlier in life are needed to help prevent heart disease later on.

"People in their 20s should have their cholesterol levels measured to detect inherited forms of hypercholesterolemia (high blood cholesterol), as well as high levels due to improper diet," said Dr. Herbert J. Kayden, professor of medicine and director of the center's lipid metabolism laboratory. "If the levels are normal, subsequent checks at three- to five-year intervals are sufficient; if they are toward the higher range of normal, measurements every one or two years are preferable."

Kayden noted that persons with family histories of lipid disorders or cardiovascular disease should consider testing even earlier, in childhood or adolescence. He added that it is important to have the blood sample analyzed at a properly certified laboratory to assure an accurate determination.

Cholesterol is a form of lipid — fat — that is carried in the blood. It is synthesized in the body, primarily in the liver, and its level is affected by factors including heredity, diet, smoking, exercise and the use of hormones and other medications.

Research has shown that high cholesterol levels are associated with an increased risk of heart attacks. Current recommended levels are below 200 milligrams per deciliter for people in their 20s, below 220 mg-dl in the 30s and below 230 mg-dl for people over 40.

As important as the level of total cholesterol is the amount of two of its main components, low-density lipoprotein (LDL-cholesterol), which plays an important role in forming fatty deposits that clog arteries, and high-density lipoprotein (HDL-cholesterol), which helps reduce these deposits.

High levels of LDL-cholesterol are associated with an increased incidence of atherosclerosis, an important cause of heart disease.

"Even people whose total cholesterol levels are average may be at increased risk of atherosclerosis if their LDL-cholesterol proportion is too high," said Dr. Norman B. Javitt, chief of the medical center's division of hepatic diseases.

He added that, depending on age, gender and family history, the LDL-cholesterol level that triggers concern ranges from 150 to 200 mg-dl.

If total cholesterol levels in general, and LDL-cholesterol levels in particular, are higher than desirable, it is usually recommended to reduce them; current research indicates lowering blood cholesterol will slow the progress of atherosclerosis.

Steps usually recommended include reducing to ideal weight, restricting total fat intake while including more unsaturated rather than saturated fats and exercising regularly.

Translated into daily dietary habits, this means reducing the intake of animal fats present in egg yolks, butter and fatty meats. Choose vegetable oils, fish, poultry and lean meats instead. "The changes are also aimed at increasing the ratio of HDL to LDL in the total cholesterol level," said Kayden.

He noted that people with severe high cholesterol levels that cannot be lowered through diet — especially those who have inherited forms of hypercholesterolemia — also may require cholesterol-lowering medication.

Tips On Removing Spots

NEW YORK (AP) — "The old hand-me-down rules for removing stains were right for their time and they still apply," says Mary Ellen Pinkham.

Here are some Pinkham tips from Family Circle magazine.

- Stains on porcelain fixtures: Mineral and lime deposits can be removed by soaking paper towels with bleach and leaving them on the appliance for a while. Remove, then rinse.
- Burn marks on formica: Make a paste of baking soda and water. Rub with a nonmetallic scrubber until faded, repeating as necessary.
- Bleach stains on rugs: Try using a permanent marker the same color as the carpet.
- Crayon marks on walls: Use lighter fluid or a prewash laundry stain remover.

- Grease stains on rugs: If the spill has not dried, sprinkle with baby powder or baking soda. Rub it in, let it sit until it dries and then vacuum.

Create Rag Baskets Having A Country Look

Pat's Pointers
Pat Trexler

A tisket, a tasket, how you'll love these charming baskets! Have fun learning one of the hottest new crafts of the year as you wrap rag strips around stiff, lightweight coiling material to create two country-look baskets for any room in your house. You can easily make a basket in an evening following the simple instructions. The oval basket has an upright handle, while the round one has two side handles. Both are perfect containers for fruit, flowers or knick-knacks.

To obtain directions for making the Basket Bonanza, send your request for Leaflet No. Z-071987 with $2 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler Crafts, The Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 419148, Kansas City, Mo. 64141. Or you may order Kit No. N-071987 by sending a check or money order for $15.95 to Pat Trexler Crafts at the same address. The kit price includes shipping charges, full instructions and all materials needed to make both baskets, which are colonial blue, red and white.

Dear Pat: I am enclosing a pattern that neither I nor a friend can figure out. Can you please tell us what "bet's" means? I have never seen that abbreviation in a pattern before. — Mrs. T.W.S.

There were actually two patterns using this term, one for a crochet and one for a knit pattern. Both were on the inside of a yarn label in very fine, hard-to-read print.

Upon looking more closely, I saw that the puzzling pattern actually was "work bet's across." At other times, it simply read, "work bet's." Previous to this in each pattern, directions were given between asterisks for working the pattern stitch repeats. Puzzle solved!

In knit and crochet abbreviations, "bet" stands for "between." So the phrase means to repeat the steps given between asterisks over and over to the end of the row. The problem was simply print that was too small and crowded, and a lack of clear explanations of the abbreviations and pattern stitch instructions.

Dear Pat: I have eye trouble, and I have three problems with knitting for which I hope you might have solutions.

First, when I cast on stitches, they are always too tight. Second, where can I purchase wooden knitting needles, which I think would be better for me than the aluminum or plastic ones, because the shine on these bothers my eyes?

Finally, the size shown on needles is very difficult for me to read. I did purchase some aluminum ones with beige plastic ends and the size printed in black. They were easy to read, but the shine is hard on my eyes. — Anne H. Phippissburg, N.Y.

Dear Anne: I am sorry to say that I can only give you a simple answer to your first problem. Many people find that their cast-on edge is too tight, causing it to draw in somewhat. The same can be true with the beginning chain in crochet. And the solution is the same for both. Simply use a larger needle to cast on at the beginning of a knit project or a larger hook to start off your crochet project.

Usually an implement one size larger is sufficient, but some have to move up two or three sizes. You will have to experiment to see what is best for you. At the beginning of the first row, change back to the normal needle size.

I am unable to give definitive information on purchasing specific items in various parts of the country, but I would suggest that you call or visit a good needlecraft shop in your area for help on finding needles that will meet your special requirements.

Couples' Moving Needs Differ

NEW YORK (AP) — Studies show the days of the devoted wife following her husband from city to city as he climbs the corporate ladder may not be over — but the days of the devoted husband following his wife in the same manner have definitely begun.

"My husband and I have a joke," says Lanell Clayton, a clinical director who relocated with her husband from Slidell, La., to Amarillo, Tex. "I followed him for 30 years and he will now follow me for the next 30 years."

"My friends didn't understand why I'd want to make a move," Mrs. Clayton said. "It's a great risk. I did it strictly for me. I have never done anything like this before."

Mark Brunkhorst, national operations representative for Dunhill Personnel System, says women are now making the same kind of career choices that men have always made — "including deciding whether or not to take a superior position at a corporation in another city or state to better their career."

Dunhill Personnel System, based on Long Island, N.Y., is an international personnel recruiting firm that specializes in executive and relocation placements.

Brunkhorst says: "The main difference between the women and men we relocate is that women have more of a desire to balance family, cultural, social and career concerns while considering their career objectives."

For example, when Debra Marr Vopal relocated with her husband and 2-year-old daughter from Milwaukee, Wis., to Fort Worth, Tex., a condition of her move was that the hospital to which she was transferring provide space for her daughter in its day-care facility.

Married women say having a supportive husband is a "must" when making the decision to relocate.

"My original response to relocating was 'no,'" Ms. Vopal said. "However, my husband said that if I was interested in the position, it wouldn't hurt to listen. If he hadn't said 'yes,' it wouldn't have gotten very far."

However, not every woman who relocates is married.

Many single and divorced women — including those with children — are picking up and moving to a new job or town.

"My mother knew that when she sent her kids to college, they weren't all going to stay in Kansas," says Cathy Rhyne, who moved with her fourth-grade son from Little Rock, Ark., to Provo, Utah.

She, like other women, found that relatives and friends were surprised when moving plans were announced.

"When people have never lived in an area, they can be very judgmental about the environment," Ms. Rhyne says.

Katharine Ryan, a single financial analyst, says she never intended to relocate from city to city. But she's moved from South Bend, Ind., to Cincinnati and now to Toledo, Ohio.

But, she adds, "You have to move to get the position you want. All of my friends have spread out for job opportunities."

Storm Lashes Korea

Television footage showed vast paddy fields and residential areas submerged by water.

U.S. and South Korean army helicopters flew rescue missions into the flooded areas and all government officials and army reservists were put on alert. In Yongin, 20 miles south of Seoul, helicopters plucked 700 children from a resort island where they were isolated Tuesday night.

Hardest hit were eight towns in the catchment area of the Kum River, which overflowed and sent tens of thousands of people fleeing to high lands, the center officials said.

Thousands of people in one of the towns, Puyo, were evacuated to high lands as vast parts of the western coastal city were submerged, officials said.

In a suburb of Puyo, eight people were killed when their house was buried in a landslide. Four people were buried in their sleep in a mudslide in another nearby village.

In the village of Hwaedong, also near the Kum River, a landslide buried hillside houses under tons of rocks and mud, killing 12 members of two families.

In Seoul, a flood warning was issued for people living in low-lying areas as the Han River, which flows through the capital, approached the danger level.

All train service from Seoul to the southern areas passing through the flood-stricken zone was cut off temporarily after an express train derailed in Chongwon, about 85 miles south of Seoul, reported Yonhap, the Korean news agency.

It said 80 people were injured, some seriously, when all 10 cars carrying 650 passengers were thrown off the track.

Power supply to the flood-stricken area were cut off for fear that people might be electrocuted, the officials said.

About 1,000 people stranded by floodwaters in Chungchong province were rescued, officials said.

FAA Probes Incident

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — The Federal Aviation Administration is investigating an "operational error" by an air-traffic controller that caused two airplanes to come within 1,500 feet of each other on intersecting runways at Louisville's Standiford Field.

FAA spokesman Roger Myers said the incident occurred Tuesday on the airport's two main runways.

A Delta Air Lines flight to Cincinnati had started to taxi south for a takeoff on one runway when an Evergreen International Airlines cargo plane touched down for a landing from the east on the other runway.

The Delta 727 crossed the path of the Evergreen plane at a distance of 1,500 feet. No one was injured.

Myers said both the takeoff and the landing had been cleared by FAA controllers in the tower. The agency did not classify the incident as a "near miss," but as an "operational error" by the controller, he said.

"Delta shouldn't have been cleared for takeoff. The landing should have been completed before the takeoff began," Myers said. "Obviously, the controller made an error. Delta wasn't at fault. Neither was Evergreen."

The FAA does not know why the error occurred, he said, and the agency's investigation will take six to eight weeks.

Young Democrats

The Pitt County Young Democrats will meet today at 6:30 p.m. at the Three Steers Restaurant.

MASONIC NOTICE

There will be a stated communication of Crown Point Lodge 708 Thursday at 7:30 p.m.

Heat Hurting Crops

scattered areas, corn is very small, and there will be places not suitable to harvest.

Dry weather also has affected tobacco and soybeans by stunting their growth, Uzzell said.

Soybeans that are suffering from dry weather may become targets of the corn earworm, which is attracted to the flowers of the soybeans, he said. "When the (soybean) rows have not grown together, the female moth lays eggs wherever she pleases."

"Peanuts generally are looking pretty good," Uzzell said. But, they do have the potential to be attacked by spider mites, especially if they are adjacent to a corn field.

Spider mites move from the corn — a dry, less suitable host plant — to the peanuts, which may be the better crop, he said. Mowing ditch banks also distributes them into the field.

Lawns and shallow-rooted trees, such as dogwood, willows, birch, sycamore and maple, also are suffering from the heat, Uzzell said. "Lawns have not had a good year at all."

Drought-sensitive grasses, such as centipede, need supplemental irrigation to survive, he said. Other grasses, such as Bermuda, are more drought-resistant, but also should be irrigated.

Pitt County livestock have suffered through performance and death, said Phillip Rowan, livestock agent.

"Anytime we have some heat, we have some decrease in performance," he said. There is a decrease in egg production from poultry, and "growth performance in hogs falls off because they just don't consume as much feed."

Long-term effects may include a decrease the litter size of hogs, he said. Also some deaths are expected, especially with poultry.

As high temperatures linger from the mid to high 90s, power loads at the Greenville Utilities Commission approach a record high, said Roger Jones, director of Electric Systems.

Using the load management system, about 180 megawatts were used to cool area residents Tuesday, he said. Without the system, usage may have been as high as 195 megawatts.

"Our loads yesterday approached what would be a record high" for the summer months, he said. But, "typically, peak summer loads are in August, possibly September."

"We may exceed by some degree the level we saw," Jones said. "We have the capability to handle the loads we're seeing right now."

High temperatures today are forecast from 95 to 98 degrees with a slight chance of afternoon showers.

Barrs Ends His Chase Of The Legendary Pace

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Like every archer in the world, Jay Barrs has been chasing Darrell Pace for years. Finally, he caught the man Barrs calls "a legend."

The frustration was mounting for Barrs after Pace edged him by one point in the preliminaries. But Barrs was closer than ever to beating Pace, the two-time Olympic champion.

"Up until this year, I haven't shot well against Darrell," Barrs said after he won the gold convincingly Tuesday in men's archery at the U.S. Olympic Festival. "Darrell is the standard-setter in the sport. You never can count him out until the last arrow."

By the last arrow, however, Barrs didn't have any worries. He scored 83 of a possible 90 points in the final round. With 332 points, he beat Ed Eliason of Stansbury Park, Utah, by 12 points. Pace, a three-time festival gold medalist from Hamilton, Ohio, finished one point behind Eliason.

"Darrell probably is the greatest archer this century," said Barrs, the national indoor champion. "He's definitely the class of the world.

"But I've come on strong this year and I beat him, something I haven't done in the past. I was shooting well throughout the afternoon and I knew I had to pour it on at 90 meters to win it all."

Pace didn't seem disturbed about finishing third.

"I shot the same throughout the entire competition," he said. "There were no high or low points. I enjoy the sport for the challenge and Jay is the new challenge."

Trena King of Kentwood, Mich., won the women's event.

World champion boxers Kelcie Banks and Kenneth Gould were easy winners of gold medals. Banks, a 125-pounder from Chicago, out-pointed Tony Braxton of Camp Lejeune, N.C., 4-1. Gould, of Rockford, Ill., beat Derrick Rolon of Elizabeth, N.J., by the same score at 147 pounds.

Other winners included U.S. champions Michael Bent of Cambria Heights, N.Y., at 201, and Anthony Bragg of Fort Bragg, N.C., at 165.

Two American champions lost. Nick Kakouris of St. Louis was out-pointed by Todd Foster of Great Falls, Mont., at 139, and Arthur Johnson of Minneapolis lost to Jose Arreola of Los Angeles, at 112.

"This is it," said Banks, a three-time festival champion. "Next year is the Olympics. I feel I've contributed a lot to the Olympic Festival and it's done a lot for me."

The festival didn't do much for Brian Leetch, America's best amateur hockey player. The three-time All-America defenseman from Boston College sprained ligaments in his left knee when he collided with East forward Tom Fitzgerald of Providence College.

Leetch will be sidelined for at least four weeks, but has been invited to the Olympic team's training camp in Lake Placid, N.Y.

"It slows him down," Peterson said of Leetch, the first draft pick by the New York Rangers last year. "He'll report Aug. 7 in Lake Placid along with everyone else. But he

Jackson's Crash Aids KC By Tribe

By BILL BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

Bo Jackson didn't waste the opportunity to get in some football practice while helping the Kansas City Royals break a six-game losing streak.

Jackson, who last week signed a contract to play for the NFL's Los Angeles Raiders after the baseball season is over, knocked in the winning run Tuesday night with a sacrifice fly in the eighth inning of the Royals' 3-2 victory over Cleveland.

In the second inning, Jackson bowled over Indians catcher Rick Dempsey at home plate, knocking him out of the game and breaking his left thumb. Dempsey went sprawling about 10 feet, but held the ball for the putout.

"I'm sorry that he got hurt, but that's baseball," said the 235-pound Jackson, who won the 1985 Heisman Trophy at Auburn. "If the catcher is between you and the plate, you get to the plate the best way you can. I wasn't trying to hurt him. I was just trying to reach the plate."

"It was a good, clean hard-nosed play," Indians Manager Doc Edwards said. "If I'd been the catcher I would have done the same thing and if I'd been the runner I would have done the same thing. Bo Jackson is a very powerful young man and he closes ground quick."

Edwards said that X-rays showed a dislocation at the base of the left thumb and a fracture.

In other American League games, it was Boston 3, California 0; Detroit 6, Oakland 5 in 10 innings; Baltimore 11, Chicago 6; Minnesota 2, New York 1; Milwaukee 6, Seattle 4, and Texas 6, Toronto 4.

With Cleveland and Kansas City tied 2-2 in the eighth, Danny Tartabull singled off Scott Bailes, 3-3, before Frank White singled off Sammy Stewart, sending Tartabull to third.

Joe Carter's grander gave Cleveland a 2-1 lead in the sixth, but Kansas City tied the game in the seventh when Willie Wilson hit a two-out double and scored on Kevin Seitzer's RBI single.

Red Sox 3, Angels 0
Roger Clemens failed to strike out a batter for the second time in July, but the Boston right-hander allowed only five hits and no walks as he beat California for his fourth shutout, tops in the majors.

Clemens, 9-7, allowed only two runners to reach third base as he pitched his 10th complete game of the season.

Twins 2, Yankees 1

Minnesota won the battle of division leaders when Kent Hrbek knocked in the game-winning run with a single in the bottom of the ninth, breaking a streak of 11 games without an RBI.

Gary Gaetti started the winning rally with a leadoff double off Tim Stoddard, 2-2. Stoddard intentionally walked Tom Brunansky, who homered for the Twins' other run, and was relieved by Pat Clements, whose second pitch to Hrbek was lined into center field.

Tigers 6, Athletics 5
Detroit rallied in both the ninth and 10th innings to defeat Oakland despite another homer by rookie Mark McGwire.

John Grubb's two-out double scored Lou Whitaker from first base, capping a two-run 10th-inning rally after McGwire hit his 35th homer for the Athletics in the top of the 10th.

Rangers 6, Blue Jays 4
Texas got two home runs from Ruben Sierra, including a two-run shot with one out in the bottom of the ninth inning against Toronto.

Sierra's 16th home run of the season came off Blue Jays reliever Jeff Musselman, 7-3, after Pete O'Brien had tied the game in the eighth with his 20th homer. Rangers reliever Dale Mohorcic, 6-2, earned the victory with 1 1-3 innings of shutout relief.

The Blue Jays, who didn't get their first hit off Paul Kilgus until the sixth inning in his first major-league start, rallied for two runs and a 4-3 lead in the top of the eighth. Charlie Moore tripled to tie the score 3-3 and scored on a single by Juan Beniquez.

Orioles 11, White Sox 6
Baltimore, 16½ games out of first place in the East, won its seventh straight game as Larry Sheets' two-run homer broke a tie in the seventh inning and reliever Mark Williamson pitched four hitless innings for the victory.

Sheets' 16th homer, off loser Bill Long, 5-5, went into the center field bullpen. Cal Ripken, who had three RBI for the Orioles, added his 18th homer in the eighth.

Brewers 6, Mariners 4
Robin Yount hit a three-run homer in the fifth inning and left-hander Teddy Higuera won for the fourth time in five outings in Milwaukee's defeat of Seattle.

Yount's 13th homer wiped out a 2-1 deficit and made a loser of Mike Moore, 3-12, who lost for the fourth time in his last five starts.

Tribble Wants To Speak To Children

WASHINGTON (AP) — Brian Tribble, after admitting he used cocaine with basketball star Len Bias on the day Bias died, now wants to speak to youth groups about the dangers of drugs, according to his attorney.

Tribble, who was acquitted June 3 of supplying the drugs that killed the University of Maryland All-American, began his public speak-out on Monday with an interview on WJLA-TV.

"It was one of the things he wanted to do," his lawyer, Thomas Morrow said Tuesday. Morrow said he was helping Tribble make arrangements for anti-drug talks.

"He wants to talk to groups, primarily young people," Morrow said.

Daniels' Homer Lifts Pitt

ROCKY MOUNT — David Daniels smashed a two-run homer over the centerfield fence in the top of the 11th to give Pitt County a 8-6 win over Rocky Mount Tuesday that wrapped up the Area I American Legion baseball championship.

With the win, Pitt wraps up its best of five series against Post 58, 3-1, and advances to play Raleigh, a 6-5 winner over Garner. The first game of the playoff series is Saturday in Raleigh.

Jason Galloway opened the 11th with a single and went to second on a wild pitch. Eric Jarman then sacrificed him to third to bring Daniels up, who then deposited a 1-2 pitch over the centerfield fence to give Pitt an 8-6 lead.

Tom Moyer, who got the win in relief of Bronswell Patrick, shut down Rocky Mount in the bottom of the inning to end the game. Moyer got the first batter to fly out to the shortstop and then struck out the final two batters to give Pitt the win.

Pitt went ahead early when Eric Jarman singled home Shane Adams in the first. Bronswell Patrick made it 2-0 in the fourth when he doubled and scored on an error. Rocky Mount drew within 2-1 with a run in the bottom of the inning.

Jarman singled in Adams again in the fifth to make it 3-1 before Rocky Mount pushed across three runs in the bottom of the inning to take its only lead of the game, 5-3. Rocky Mount took advantage of two Pitt errors during the fifth which allowed two of the three runs to score.

Post 39 then forged a 6-4 lead after seven innings of play, keyed by a three-run seventh in which Axel Smith cracked a three-run homer over the left field fence, driving in Jarman and Daniels, both of whom had walked.

Rocky Mount tied it up in the ninth, taking advantage of two Pitt errors that allowed Jeff Carter to reach and Scott Lewis to move to second after he reached on a walk. Donnie Bobbitt then drove in both runners with a double to knot the score at 6-6.

Pitt and Rocky Mount each put two men on base in the 10th but failed to get anything out of it.

Hunter Clark led Pitt with a 3-5 performance at the plate while Adams and Jarman added two hits apiece.

Patrick went the first nine innings, giving up eight hits and six runs, none of which were earned. He struck out 12 and walked two.

Moyer, who improves to 6-2 on the season, came on in the 10th and gave up no hits while striking out three.

Pitt, 18-9, will travel to Raleigh, 20-9, for the first game of their playoff series. Game time is 7:30 at Optimist Park.

Raleigh advanced with a 6-5 win over Garner. James Capps singled home Jeff Alson with the winning run in the 10th. Andy Reich went the

"I wasn't thinking about having to end their winning streak," Darwin said. "You can't worry about little things when you go out there — whether a team has won eight or lost eight in a row, you've got to concentrate on winning the ball game."

Alan Ashby hit an RBI double and Jose Cruz added a run-scoring single to highlight a three-run third inning off Floyd Youmans, 7-4.

Reds 4, Phillies 3

Paul O'Neill hit a solo homer that capped a three-run third inning after Kevin Gross balked in a run, leading Cincinnati to its fourth victory in its last five games.

Bill Gullickson, 10-6, allowed six hits over 6 2-3 innings. Rob Murphy pitched one-hit relief over the final two innings for his second save.

Gross, 6-9, also allowed six hits over 7 1-3 innings, but hurt himself with an error and the balk in the fourth.

Braves 8, Mets 3

Doyle Alexander pitched a four-hitter to end a personal five-game losing streak and Andres Thomas hit a two-run double in the sixth inning, ending Atlanta's five-game losing streak.

Dion James opened the game with a home run off Dwight Gooden, 7-3, who gave up five runs on six hits in seven innings. Dale Murphy hit a two-run homer, his 26th, in the eighth off Randy Myers and Gerald Perry had a two-run single and two doubles.

Padres 4, Cubs 3

Garry Templeton's run-scoring triple and Tim Flannery's RBI double in the seventh inning rallied San Diego from a 3-2 deficit over Chicago and sent the Cubs to their fourth consecutive loss.

Shortstop Luis Quinones threw away Shane Mack's before Templeton tripled. One out later, Flannery doubled off Jamie Moyer, 9-7, to score Templeton.

Giants 7, Pirates 0

Dave Dravecky pitched a six-hitter for his first shutout in over a year and Chili Davis and Bob Brenly drove in two runs each, leading San Francisco over Pittsburgh.

Dravecky, 5-8, allowed six singles, struck out four and walked one in his first shutout since the opening week of the 1986 season.

Lighter Fighters Go Distance, Heavyweights Stopped Early

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The lighter fighters fought to decisions in the finals of the U.S. Olympic Festival boxing tournament. The heavyweights didn't get that far.

Referees stopped both heavyweight bouts due to excessive head blows Tuesday night.

Super heavyweight Riddick Bowe of Brooklyn, N.Y., sent Kevin Ford of Sacramento, Calif., reeling into his own corner midway through the third round with three looping left-handed punches to the head. Bowe then uncorked a left hook and right cross to drop Ford at 1:43 of the round.

A weakened Ford had taken a standing-eight count in the second round.

Bowe said his tactics going into the fight were to bewilder Ford.

"He was stronger than I anticipated," said Bowe, who has 46 knockouts in 68 fights, with four losses. Bowe is 6-foot-4, 214 pounds, and Ford is 6-5, 224.

Bowe had dropped 23 pounds in two weeks of training prior to the festival.

Bowe will face Charlton Hollis of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., in a box-off July 31 to determine the U.S. 201-plus pound entry in the Pan American Games.

In the 201-pound heavyweight category, U.S. champion Michael Bent of Cambria Heights, N.Y., outclassed Troy Baudoin, 18, of Los Angeles.

The referee got to seven in a standing-eight count on the dazed Baudoin. But Baudoin was in no condition to continue and the referee stopped it at 1:58 of the third round. Earlier, Bent had knocked down Baudoin as well as opening up a cut over his right eye.

Bent's box-off opponent will be Orbit Pough of Miami, Fla.

Of the 12 U.S. amateur boxing champions who entered the festival tournament, six survived to claim gold medals Tuesday. The winners were in the 119, 125, 147, 165, 178 and 201-pound categories.

The two world champions here, Kelcie Banks of Chicago at 125 and Kenneth Gould of Rockford, Ill., at 147, won.

Banks, who bills himself as "Mr. Mix" and is not shy about self-promotion, looked sharper in the finals than in Sunday's semifinals, although the score was the same at 4-1. Bidding his time, delivering long jabs and blocking effectively, Banks' tactics were not popular with the crowd.

But he landed enough good shots to outpoint Marine champion Tony Braxton of Camp Lejeune, N.C., a last-minute substitute in the tourney. The 6-foot Banks overshadowed Braxton by seven inches.

Banks said of his semifinal fight with Vernon McGriff of Buffalo, N.Y., which he won on an unpopular decision that was booed by the crowd, "I didn't fight up to my true potential and I used that to motivate me."

He took his third festival gold medal.

Banks will meet McGriff again in the box-off and, he said, "He's going to give me a tougher fight."

Gould spent most of his bout head-to-head with Derrick Rolon of Elizabeth, N.J., in his 4-1 victory. The 5-6 Gould said that "as the shortest stowkey guys" like Rolon.

"He punched me like I knew he was there," he said.

Michael Collins of LaPorte, Texas, U.S. and festival champion at 119 pounds, overpowered Kevin Kelley of Flushing, N.Y., 5-0, in a rematch of last year's bantamweight category.

Anthony Suggs of Alexandria, Va., was impressive as he used an assortment of powerful punches against Patrick Byrd of Flint, Mich., to win the 132-pound category 4-1. The bout included two standing-eight counts and a slow-motion third round as both fighters tired.

Anthony Hembrick of Fort Bragg, N.C., the U.S. champion, and William Guthrie of St. Louis pushed each other around for three rounds before Hembrick was awarded a unanimous decision.

"I felt kind of sloppy," Hembrick said. "A lot of that is due to my opponent. He had an awkward style."

Light heavyweight Andrew Maynard, American champion at 178 pounds, was hardly winded as he dishd out punishing head and body blows to 28-year-old Marine Joseph Pemberton of Camp Lejeune for a unanimous decision.

Nick Kakouris of St. Louis lost to Todd Foster of Great Falls, Mont., 4-1 in the 139-pound category. Kakouris, the national champion, had hoped to take home his third festival gold medal. He will face Foster again at the box-offs for a chance at the Pan Am competition.

Kingman Ending Up Cameo

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Dave Kingman is winding up his cameo appearance in the Pacific Coast League this weekend, and the moody slugger who has 442 major league home runs insists says he doesn't care if he gets one more shot at the big time.

He says he's enjoying what he calls his chance to "swing the bat for a couple of weeks and play baseball" with the San Francisco Giants' AAA affiliate in Phoenix.

"The Giants were nice enough to let me work out and get into shape," Kingman said, explaining his contract situation with the Firebirds. It allows him to play with the club in case some major league team gives him another shot.

He says if no major league team comes calling, his last game will be this weekend against Tacoma.

Kingman hopes that his brief stint with the Firebirds will convince some major league team to employ his skills during the pennant drive.

Going into Wednesday's game with the Portland Beavers, Kingman was hitting .242 with two home runs, eight runs batted in and seven strikeouts in his 10 games with the Firebirds.

The 6-foot-6, 210-pound Kingman says he still would like to achieve a couple of goals in major league baseball, including playing on a pennant winner and a chance hit 500 home runs.

"The way I've been going the last three years, I don't see why I can't attain that number," he said.

But if it doesn't happen, Kingman says he won't fret.

"It's not life or death if no one signs me. There are a number of things I've been able to do in the summertime for the first time since high school like fishing and traveling," he said after going hitless in four at-bats Tuesday night against Portland.

Longtime observers of Kingman would easily recognize his performance Tuesday night.

He hit two groundouts, loping with apparent disinterest to first base. Next came a long fly ball to the deepest part of the ballpark that brought a gasp from the 1,852 assembled. Finally, there were three looping swings that resulted in an eighth-inning strikeout.

With each at-bat, Kingman still strides disdainfully to the plate oblivious to the derisive calls from the crowd. And with each out, Kingman returns to the dugout minus the theatrics that often accompany the outs of a struggling young player or a frustrated older player trying to recapture past glories.

"I've got real peace now," Kingman said. "I still have the same desire. I put in the same effort I always have. It's all part of the game.

"Everybody changes. I've mellowed out a lot. We all mellow out."

Meanwhile, the numbers are there for all to see in addition to the 442 home runs: 1,210 runs batted in and a .236 lifetime batting average in a 16-year major league career that took him to seven different teams, including four in the 1977 season, tying a major league record.

In 1984, Kingman was named the American League Comeback Player of the Year by the Sporting News. He hit 35 home runs and drove in 118 runs to complement his .268 batting average that season with the Oakland Athletics.

Although in his last two seasons with Oakland, the homer pace continued with 30 in 1985 and 35 last season, the RBI tailed off to 91 and 94 and the average plummeted to .235 and then to .210. With young right-handed power hitters such as Mark McGwire and Jose Canseco, Kingman suddenly became very expendable.

"The whole game has changed drastically. If it hadn't been for compensation, I'd probably be playing somewhere now," Kingman says.

But he says he harbors no bitterness toward Oakland. "They gave me three years of employment" at a salary Kingman refused to disclose, saying it was "nobody's business."

Both his teammates and his manager say the 38-year-old slugger has been a positive influence on the club.

"At first, he kind of kept to himself," outfielder Randy Kutcher said. "But he's starting to open up now that he's traveled with us for a while."

Phoenix manager Wendell Kim says Kingman has been "super."

"He's been real good with the young players," Kim said. "A lot of big-time players aren't like that. I can't believe a lot of the negative stuff I've read about him."

Kim hesitated though when the conversation turned to whether Kingman was ready for the majors.

"He's only had two weeks of 'spring training.' He might be all right; though if he were to go to an AL club where he could DH."

However, his new teammates are more confident about his ability to swing the bat.

"I was reading an article about him and I looked at his stats the last three years," pitcher Randy Bockus said. "To think that nobody wanted him, it amazed me because he can still hit."

But then Kingman always knew he could do that.

"I don't have any regrets," he said. "I far exceeded my expectations. I've gotten far more out of baseball than I ever imagined."

"It doesn't bother me if my career begins and ends in Phoenix."

Trying To Comeback

New Commissioner Likes Perspective

GREENSBORO (AP) — The new commissioner of the Atlantic Coast Conference said the cocaine intoxication death of Maryland basketball star Len Bias in 1986 was an individual tragedy that should not reflect on the entire ACC.

"I don't think that there's a conference in the country with a better perspective than this one," Notre Dame Athletic Director Gene Corrigan said Tuesday after being named ACC commissioner. "I think the Bias thing was the most dramatic (problem), but it's something that could have happened to anyone."

"The ACC loses no points because of the loss of one individual," he said. Corrigan also said problems such as drugs would never go away.

"We are going to have them in the future," he said. "But they're individual things. The people who work in the conference are going to work on it."

Corrigan, 59, who will take over his new post Sept. 1, was introduced at a news conference by Alan Williams, faculty athletics director at Virginia, and chairman of the ACC's search committee. He cited the conference's strong leadership in former ACC Commissioner Bob James, who died of cancer in May, and Jim Weaver, whom Corrigan served under in the late 1960s.

"I'm just as thrilled as I can be to be in that line," Corrigan said. "I hope when I retire that my name will fit into that line. You've had two great commissioners."

He said he's looking forward to attending ACC sporting events as an impartial spectator.

"I can go to games now and enjoy myself," Corrigan said. "Now I can be as impartial as can be."

Corrigan also is on the NCAA Council and the NCAA men's basketball committee, but both terms end this year.

"I'm glad to be off (both councils), because it takes too much time," he said. "I've got to get on a higher learning curve."

Corrigan has been athletic director at Notre Dame since 1981. He has strong connections to the ACC, having served as athletic director at Virginia from 1971 to 1980.

McMahon Ready, Perry Threatened

CHICAGO (AP) — Chicago's irrepressible Jim McMahon got the go-ahead to train with the Bears next month, but irreducible William "The Refrigerator" Perry won't even get into training camp if he doesn't lose weight.

McMahon got clearance Tuesday from his Los Angeles surgeon, Dr. Frank Jobe, to begin training camp Aug. 1 with the rest of the National Football League team in Platteville, Wis., according to Bears spokesman Bryan Harlan.

"Dr. Jobe was extremely pleased with the progress Jim had made and gave him clearance to begin practicing with the team Aug. 1," Harlan said.

McMahon has been recuperating since undergoing rotator cuff surgery on Dec. 12, 1986.

Any decision on whether McMahon will participate in contact drills will be made after he reports to the pre-season camp, Harlan said.

With a daily rehabilitation program of weightlifting, racquetball and throwing the football, McMahon already has restored his throwing speed and distance almost to pre-injury levels, Harlan said.

"There are still a lot of things he has to do, but now he can at least be practicing while he's rehabilitating," Harlan added.

Bears Coach Mike Ditka said Monday that although he thought McMahon looked good physically, the true test of his recovery would come on the field.

"We won't really know if he's all right until game pressure and someone misses a block and the linebacker catches him flush with a tackle and you say, 'Uh, oh' and see how fast he gets up," Ditka said.

"Any of us could pretty much go out there and throw it good in practice," he added.

But Ditka said defensive tackle Perry won't have the privilege of even picking up a football at training camp if he doesn't drop some pounds.

"You can book this. If his weight is not under 325, he will not be at Platteville," Ditka said.

"He can go back to South Carolina and do whatever ... he wants to do, and we will go on without him."

Ditka said Perry would be "the best defensive tackle in football" if he kept his weight under 325 pounds.

"I'm not going to mess around with Perry anymore," Ditka said. "We called him the other day. Supposedly, he weighs 325. Heh, who knows? He's running twice a day — from the refrigerator to the bathroom."

Ditka said he did not know the extent of Perry's daily conditioning program because the former Clemson player has been in Aiken, S.C., where he is building a home.

But Ditka did offer some advice for Perry, should he weigh in under the 325-pound limit.

"To be No. 1, you have to reach deep down in the gutsack and make it hurt. His rear should drag off the field daily. And anyone who gets in his way at training camp, he ought to knock them down," Ditka said.

A clause in Perry's contract requires the Bears to pay him $40,000 if he works out three times a week at the Bears' Lake Forest headquarters, but Perry has forfeited the sum plus thousands of dollars in bonuses because of his fluctuating weight, Ditka said.

Despite being labeled a wasted pick when he was selected by Chicago as the team's first-round NFL draft choice in 1985, Perry was effective on defense and became known as he scored two touchdowns in five rushes in goal line situations.

With Ditka already predicting that

McMahon will be throwing 55 to 60 yards during pre-season games, the pressure to perform will be even greater for the team's remaining four quarterbacks, Harlan said.

"We have five quarterbacks we're taking to training camp, and Mike Ditka has already said for the record that we'll keep three," Harlan noted. "I think it's safe to say that if (McMahon) is healthy, he will be one of them."

The other four quarterbacks are Steve Fuller, Mike Tomczak, Doug Flutie and Jim Harbaugh, the Bears' first-round choice in the draft.

Olympic Festival ...

"This does not put him out of our plans."

Leitch's North team won 4-2, while the South blanked the West 3-0 as John Blue of the University of Minnesota stopped 32 shots for the third shutout in festival history. Cleon Daskalakis did it in 1981 and Bob Mason in 1983.

Scott Fusco, a 1984 Olympian, had two goals and an assist for the South.

In tennis, Pete Sampras of Rancho Palos Verdes, Calif., won the men's and mixed doubles titles.

Sampras, the top seed, beat Chris Entzel of Las Vegas, 6-2, 6-1 and did not lose a singles set in the tournament. Neither did Debbie Graham of Fountain Valley, Calif., who was a 6-1, 6-1 winner over Stacey Martin of Largo, Md., for the women's crown.

The top-seeded men's tennis team of David DiLucia of Norristown, Pa., and Geoff Grant of Sudbury, Mass., playing in near-100-degree temperatures, overpowered Mitch Michulka of Dallas and Hector Nevares of Puerto Rico, 6-4, 6-3.

Martin and Debbie Moringiello of North Brunswick, N.J., saved four match points and won the women's doubles crown. The second seeds outlasted Dawn Martin of St. Clair Shores, Mich., and Merideth Geiger of Edmond, Okla., 6-2, 4-6, 7-6.

The mixed doubles went to Sampras and Jackie Moe of Edina, Minn., the No. 2 seeds, who defeated DiLucia and Robin Dietch of East Rockaway, N.Y., who were top-seeded, 6-4, 2-6, 7-5.

Jimmy Moore of Medford, Ore., pitched the second softball no-hitter of the festival, striking out 10 and walking one as the North beat the South 4-0. It was Moore's 16th festival victory in 18 decisions.

"I'm not usually a no-hit pitcher," the right-hander said after joining Tracy Compton of Santa Maria, Calif., as no-hit pitchers here. "I had a killer headache that kept getting worse and worse."

Four volleyball players from California were suspended from the festival for dormitory infractions. They were Hugh Foster of Newport Beach, Samantha Shaver of Mount View, Cheri Boyer of Poway and Carl Henkel of Redondo Beach, the U.S. Volleyball Association said.

Southern California Coach George Raveling was named an assistant basketball coach for the 1988 Olympic team, which will be coached by John Thompson of Georgetown. Bill Stein, the athletic director at St. Peter's (N.J.) College, was named team manager.

Consumer Prices Recorded Sharp Gain

By TOM RAUM
AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer prices, paced by a rebound in energy costs, rose at an annual rate of 5.4 percent for the first half of 1987, the government said today.

That gain — the steepest since the first half of 1982 — compares to the minuscule 1.1 percent inflation rate at the retail level for all of 1986 and suggested that inflation this year will likely be a full percentage point or so above the roughly 4 percent rate that prevailed from 1982 through 1985.

For June, prices rose a moderate 0.4 percent as costs for gasoline and food rose significantly.

That gain, equivalent to an annual inflation rate of 4.3 percent, followed a 0.3 percent rise in May and 0.4 percent increases in each of the preceding three months. Prices had risen 0.7 percent in January.

Gasoline prices rose 1.4 percent in June, more than triple the 0.4 percent rise in May. Electricity costs were up 2.5 percent.

For the first six months of 1987, energy costs at an annual rate of 16.7 percent, regaining most of the sharp 19.7 percent decline of the year before.

Food prices were up 0.7 percent in June after a 0.5 percent rise in May. Prices rose significantly last month for beef, pork, fruit and vegetables. So far this year, food prices have risen 4.4 percent.

Food and energy costs were expected to moderate in the months to come. Subtracting food and energy, consumer prices rose 0.2 percent in June.

Most economists now say that a major resurgence of prices, thought possible just a few months ago, seems doubtful for the rest of 1987.

One reason for economists' new optimism about inflation is the recent firming of the U.S. dollar against other major key currencies, recovering from a nosedive that had threatened to erode sharply Americans' purchasing powers.

A weaker dollar can help ease this nation's trade deficit, a record $166.3 billion last year, by making foreign goods more expensive at home and U.S. goods more competitive abroad. But too fast a fall in the currency can trigger an inflationary spiral.

The Labor Department offered these other specifics on June price activity: —Grocery store prices were up 0.8 percent; restaurant meal prices gained 0.5 percent.

Beef prices rose 2.1 percent; pork prices jumped 2.3 percent; fruit and vegetable prices advanced 3.9 percent. Poultry prices dropped 1.0 percent.

—Natural gas prices rose 0.4 percent. Fuel oil prices fell 0.3 percent on the heels of a 1.3 percent drop in May.

—New car prices rose 0.4 percent. Used car prices jumped 1.1 percent.

—Clothing prices overall dipped 0.8 percent.

—Medical care costs rose 0.3 percent.

—Housing expenses were up 0.7 percent.

The index for all products listed in the Consumer Price Index stood at 300.1 for June, compared to 327.9 for June 1986 and 100 for the base period of 140. Thus, a market basket of goods that cost $10 in 1967 cost $32.79 last June and $34.01 last month.

Unlike other figures in the report, the index itself is not adjusted to remove predictable recurring seasonal factors.

Retiring Federal Reserve Board Chairman Paul Volcker, whose conservative money management policies have been widely credited with helping tame inflation from the double-digit levels of the beginning of the decade, said the stabilizing of the dollar helped ease some of the central bank's concerns about renewed inflation.

Thus, he told the House Banking Committee on Tuesday, the Fed plans no major inflation-fighting monetary policy changes at the present.

But, he added: "I do think that the inflationary process can develop a momentum of its own. A lot depends on whether there is confidence that an environment exists where you don't have to worry about inflation. But we're still a long way from that point."

Stacy Kottman, research coordinator for the economic forecasting center at Georgia State University, said extended projections for inflation in 1987 have been revised upward to reflect increases in energy prices.

"The apparent ability of oil-producing countries to achieve and maintain a price of $20 to $21 per barrel results in an estimated 18.5 percent increase for energy commodity prices for 1987," Kottman said.

Release of the consumer index follows the government's report that wholesale prices rose a slight 0.2 percent in June. However, the wholesale price index usually shows more month-to-month volatility than does its retail counterpart.

Corazon Aquino Signs Land Reform Document

By EILEEN GUERRERO
Associated Press Writer

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — President Corazon Aquino today decreed a land reform program affecting virtually all private holdings, but she said Congress would decide how much property landlords may retain.

The program calls for compensating landlords for property redistributed to millions of landless peasants.

Presidential spokesman Teodoro Benigno said the decree covers all public and private agricultural lands except those held by "cultural minorities." He said Mrs. Aquino told members of her Cabinet to support the program or resign.

The decree represented a compromise between those who pressed for a detailed presidential decree limiting private holdings and those who maintained Congress should implement such a program. Congress convenes Monday.

Landlord associations throughout the country have opposed the plan as confiscatory and some have threatened to organize armed groups to prevent takeover of estates.

Some members of Mrs. Aquino's Cabinet have questioned whether her debt-ridden government has the money to finance the program.

Land reform has traditionally been among the most controversial issues in the Philippines, where 70 percent of the population lives in rural areas.

The decree requires property owners to register their holdings within 180 days. Peasants will pay for newly provided land in 30 annual installments at 6 percent annual interest.

Mrs. Aquino told a news conference that Congress must decide on limits on private holdings within 90 days. If it fails to do so, she said, the administration will mandate its own limits.

Previous land reform drafts prepared by the administration would have restricted private holdings to about 17 acres by 1997.

A land reform program decreed by former President Ferdinand Marcos in 1973 affected only rice- and corn-producing areas. The new constitution, ratified Feb. 2 in a plebiscite, made the entire country subject to land reform but left details to Congress.

Mrs. Aquino told reporters the program would also affect the 15,000-acre Hacienda Luisita sugar plantation owned by her family.

"This is a comprehensive land reform program, so definitely Hacienda Luisita will be affected by this program," she said.

Mrs. Aquino had promised to issue the decree before Congress convenes, after which she loses sole law-making powers. But several influential legislators said the decision on such a complex, far-reaching program was best left to an elected body.

"If anyone here feels uncomfortable with any provision of this executive order and proclamation, I ask that you desist from criticizing it publicly or resign from the Cabinet," Mrs. Aquino told the Cabinet before signing the decree.

Some administration officials who pressed for a more detailed land reform program said they feared the issue could bog down in Congress because of stall tactics by wealthy landowners.

Mrs. Aquino was swept to power in a civilian-military uprising in February 1986. Then-President Marcos fled to Hawaii.

Budget Secretary Guillermo Carague said $2.5 billion would be earmarked for the first five years of the program. He said the funds would come from properties seized by the government and from the sale of state-run companies, for which the administration has so far found few buyers.

Convicted Killer Caught Near Correctional Center

By BRAD CAIN
Associated Press Writer

SALEM, Ore. (AP) — A blank scrap of paper in an escaped murderer's cell helped authorities recapture her after tests revealed the imprint of a prison less than a mile from the prison she escaped 11 days ago.

Elizabeth Diane Downs, convicted of murdering her 7-year-old daughter and of trying to kill her other two children, was captured Tuesday in a run-down house down the street from the Oregon Women's Correctional Center.

Four men in the house were arrested along with Ms. Downs and were charged with hindering prosecution, police said.

Ms. Downs and the four men didn't resist arrest, said state police Detective Merle Hart. "She looked surprised, like she didn't know what to do. She was stunned."

Police in at least 14 states had been searching for Ms. Downs, who had been serving a term of life plus 50 years. She escaped July 11 by scaling a chain-link fence topped with barbed wire, then hitching a ride into town.

It appeared she never left Salem, said state police Lt. James GrosJacques.

A scrap of paper Ms. Downs left in her cell at the prison helped lead police to the house where she was captured, GrosJacques said. The paper was blank, but FBI lab tests revealed the indentation of the address of the house that someone had written on a piece of paper on top of the blank sheet.

"I'm a little surprised, but I'm ecstatic," her ex-husband, Stephen Downs of Phoenix, Ariz., told the Statesman-Journal newspaper. "They better lock her up this time."

The four men were identified as Wayne J. Seifer, 36; James R. Sinclair, 41; Eric Henderson, 24, and Robert K. Stephens, 32. They were taken to Marion County Jail but were released Tuesday night pending court proceedings.

Stephens, who is listed as co-owner of the house, said Tuesday night he thinks Ms. Downs is "warm, beautiful person" who is innocent.

Police aren't sure if the men helped plan the escape, GrosJacques said.

Ms. Downs, 31, had served three years of her sentence for the 1983 gunshot slaying of her 7-year-old daughter, Cheryl Lynn, and attempted murder of her other two children, Christie Ann and Danny.

Ms. Downs, who wasn't due for a parole hearing until the year 2009, has maintained her innocence. She said a stranger approached her car and shot her children on a rural road near Springfield on May 19, 1983.

Christie Ann, who testified that her mother shot her, is permanently handicapped in her speech and in the use of her right arm as a result of the shooting. Danny is paralyzed from the waist down.

Prosecutors said Ms. Downs shot the children so she could join an Arizona man with whom she was having an affair and who did not want children.

Twister Hits Airport

MANASSAS, Va. (AP) — A tornado touched down at the Municipal Airport, damaging 52 private planes, airport officials said.

Federal Aviation Administration officials and airport employees reported that a funnel cloud swooped down on the airport just after 8 p.m. Tuesday, said police spokesman Marc Woolverton.

Witnesses said a tornado dance along one of the airport's five hangars, flipping planes on their roofs. The only injured reported was a cut one airport employee received on his arm, and he was treated at the scene, Woolverton said. Woolverton said 18 planes were overturned, and 34 others were damaged. There were no reports of damage or injuries in a residential neighborhood that rings the airport.

National Weather Service officials said they will have to make a sight inspection today before deciding whether the storm was actually a tornado.

The airport, located about 2 miles south of Manassas, serves commuter and freight traffic as well as private planes, Woolverton said. Airport officials said about 350 private aircraft are stored there.

Conservative damage estimates would exceed $250,000, Woolverton said.

Postal Unions Reach Settlement On Wages

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A contract calling for a 7 percent wage increase stretched over the next three and one-third years is being sent to members of the U.S. Postal Service's two largest unions for ratification.

The new pact was hammered out in night-long bargaining Monday and Tuesday, that President Vincent R. Sombrotto of the National Association of Letter Carriers termed: "long, torturous, burdensome and sometimes very tiresome."

Nevertheless, smiles, handshakes and congratulations were exchanged late Tuesday afternoon when the final settlement was announced by Sombrotto, Moe Biller, head of the American Postal Workers Union, and Postmaster General Preston R. Tisch.

"We are very pleased with this contract. We think it's good for the Postal Service and the citizens of this country," Tisch told a news conference.

"Everybody won, especially the American public," said Sombrotto.

And Biller too expressed pleasure with the settlement, while admitting that "we would have liked more."

A strike was never likely, with federal law banning a walkout and union leaders conceding that any such action would be a bad idea. If no agreement had been reached, a complex arbitration procedure was available to settle the dispute.

The wage settlement will mean between $1,708 and $1,866 additional annual pay for postal workers by the end of the 40-month contract. It is less than the unions had sought.

But they won on a major item, preventing any increase in the use of so-called casuals — part time workers who are not union-covered and are paid less than full-time workers.

Initially the unions had sought wage increases of 6.8 percent annually over three years, reducing that demand on Sunday to yearly increases of 4.5 percent.

The Postal Service had offered a menu of choices, with wages averaging about 1.6 percent per year. That offer coupled higher wages to union agreement to the use of more casuals.

The government proposal was based on anticipated income including a planned increase in stamp rates next year, raising first class postage from 22 cents to 25 cents, a 13.6 percent increase.

Currently, the Postal Service is limited to 28,000 casuals working for 90 days. They are often used at periods of heavy work, such as Christmas.

Postal officials had wanted to increase the number of casuals and the length of time they could work as a means of reducing spending. The final agreement does not permit any increases in the hiring of casuals, however.

The new agreement will continue through Nov. 20, 1990 and includes provisions for an immediate 2 percent increase — about $548 a year for upper level mail carriers.

Following that, the contract calls for increases of $250, on an annual basis, in July 1988 and January 1989, $300 increases in July 1989 and January 1990, and a final $200 raise in July 1990.

Currently, annual pay for postal clerks and letter carriers ranges from $20,094 to $27,089, not including benefits. Including about $5,000 in annual fringe benefits, the Postal Service estimates average compensation for workers in those groups at about $30,000.

The current cost-of-living formula remains in place, the unions said, and other provisions extend no layoff protection and strengthen health and safety protection.

A three-year contract expired at midnight Monday, but workers remained on their jobs as bargaining continued in Washington.

The settlement was first revealed about 1 p.m. Tuesday by Biller in a taped message to his union members, but the details were not confirmed for several hours after that. Biller and Sombrotto said their bargaining committees had approved the settlement and it was being sent to local members for ratification. The 1.6 percent hikes initially offered by the Postal Service would have matched the contract announced last week with the 50,000-member Mail Handlers union, which signed for 36 months.

That settlement nearly unsettled the talks with the larger unions, which the labor leaders broke off last Wednesday over concerns that the Postal Service was planning to transfer some of their members to the jurisdiction of the smaller union.

Lawyers worked out an understanding on that question, although details were not made public, and bargaining with the Letter Carriers and Postal Workers resumed on Sunday.

While the three unions were bargaining at the same time, the larger unions formed a joint bargaining committee while the Mail Handlers were holding separate talks.

Thus, when the Mail Handlers settled early, the other unions worried that the Postal Service would use that agreement as a club in their negotiations. They also contended that the Mail Handlers had a secret "me too" agreement, guaranteeing it any improvements the larger unions obtained in their settlement.

The Mail Handlers contract is for 36 months, and the signing of a 40-month deal by the other two unions may help avoid similar problems of separate but simultaneous talks in the future. Union leaders declined to confirm whether that was part of the reason for their longer contract, however.

Meanwhile, Postal Officials can look forward to contract talks with a fourth union, the 76,000-member National Rural Letter Carriers Association, starting in October. That contract expires next Jan. 20.

Sombrotto of the National Association of Letter Carriers, right, with Postmaster General Preston R. Tisch announce their decision on a contract settlement Tuesday in Washington, D.C. # Mozambique Rebels Killed 380, News Agency Reports

MAPUTO, Mozambique (AP) — The official news agency said anti-Marxist guerrillas slaughtered 380 people, including children and the elderly, in an attack on a town in southern Mozambique.

The AIM news agency said Tuesday that the guerrillas forced residents to march along a road, and shot them as they walked.

Mozambique radio's station in Inhambane province quoted district administrator Eduardo Gimo as saying the massacre occurred Saturday in Homoine, 300 miles northeast of the capital.

Few details were given in either report and there was no way to check the story independently. There was no word on the report from the guerrillas' headquarters in Lisbon, Portugal.

AIM said the attack came after the rebels received a weapons shipment from South Africa. The official agency, quoting an unidentified member of the armed forces general staff, said guns, mortars and ammunition were dropped from a South African air force plane near Lake Chitipe on May 8.

"The South African Defense Force used five parachutes made in the United States of America to deliver war material to the bandits in the province of Inhambane," the Marxist government's news agency said.

AIM staff members saw one of the parachutes Tuesday at army headquarters in Maputo and it was inscribed "US HUDCO-63," according to the report. The U.N. Security Council imposed an arms embargo on South Africa in 1977.

"South African-backed Mozambique National Resistance bandits" did the killing last weekend, the agency said in one of its references to the organization that has spent a decade fighting the government.

South Africa says it stopped helping the rebels in 1984 when the two countries signed a non-aggression pact, but Mozambique claims South Africa continues the aid covertly.

Mozambique radio quoted Gimo as saying the attack began at 5:45 a.m. It said many old people, women and children were among the dead.

The agency said 49 wounded were hospitalized and quoted Bento Ni-quice, Inhambane correspondent for the Maputo daily Noticias, as saying of the rebels: "They wiped out entire families."

AIM said there had been "massive infiltration of MNR armed bandits in southern Mozambique in the last two months" and claimed "a huge number" came from South Africa.

In Lisbon, the guerrillas said Tuesday they had sabotaged the oil pipeline and a railroad bridge linking Mozambique's Indian Ocean port of Beira with landlocked Zimbabwe.

A statement signed by Paulo Oliveira, the rebel spokesman in Lisbon, said rebels blew up a section of the pipeline between Inchope and Gondola on Sunday, and destroyed a railroad bridge between Inchope and Lamego later that day.

Mozambique is a former Portuguese colony and became independent in 1975.

Gold Nugget Returned

SAN ANDREAS, Calif. (AP) — The beer-swilling prankster who swallowed the celebrated gold nugget of Calaveras County has returned the lump of precious metal to its rightful owner.

Nature took its course Tuesday, eight days after Timothy Mark Nolan, 30, swallowed the $1,500, 3.5-ounce nugget with a guzzle of beer at Murphy's Hotel.

"It's a good outcome. I'm happy with the way it worked out," said

Jimmy Peterson, 40, of Angel's Camp, who watched in horror July 14 as Nolan swallowed his prize.

Nolan spent the next two days in jail next to a portable toilet after sheriff's deputies arrested him for investigation of grand theft.

After a legally allowable 48-hour detention, however, the district attorney declined to prosecute because a theft charge must include "an intent to permanently deprive."

Delano Wilson Smitten By The Beauty Of Peacocks

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer
AYDEN — It's no wonder NBC chose the peacock as its trademark when the network entered the color era. What better mascot to illustrate the glory of color than the bearer of a palette that must be seen up close to be believed?

The network made the right decision, at least according to Delano Wilson.

For 20 years, Wilson has been raising peacocks on his Ayden farm, first in the open and later, when dog attacks got out-of-hand, in a converted hog pen behind his home.

"When I was a child, I had a neighbor who had peacocks and I liked them so much I promised myself that when I was gainfully employed I'd have some," he said.

Have some he does, according to daughter Marti, who said over the years her dad, "like clockwork," has made daily treks to the pen to feed and gaze at his birds. "It's almost an obsession," she said.

Wilson laughingly agreed. "I guess you can liken my attachment and need to have the birds to the same thing that you sometimes see with people who come from the wrong side of the tracks and want to live at the country club when they grow up. We had chickens and though I liked them, I thought peacocks were so much more glorious, glamorous."

The quintessential color representative, the traditional or Indian peacock sports a metallic blue neck and breast, purplish underparts and iridescent green and gold feathers — an array of colors far removed from those worn by the peacock's relatives; the partridge, pheasant and quail.

They're practical, too, if you believe the tales Wilson said the old folks told when he was a child. "They used to say that the peacocks were weather vanes. That is, when a cloud was coming up or it was going to rain, the male peacock would call. I don't know how true that is, but they do get excited when it thunders," he said.

The unusual beauty of the peacock has inspired myth as well. One story tells how the Greek goddess Hera cast the 100-eyes of Argus the "all-seeing" onto the peacock's tail after the monster's head was cut off by Hermes.

Meanwhile, less ancient people considered the peacock a great treasure. During the reign of Solomon, "once in three years, came the navy of Tharshish, bringing gold and silver, ivory and apes, and peacocks" (I Kings 10:22).

Although Wilson said he keeps peacocks purely for pleasure, he said from time to time feathers gathered from his birds bring in enough to pay for feed.

"One woman paid $150 for two sets of feathers for her daughters for Christmas." The plumes also have sold quickly at his wife's annual sorority auction where they go for $20 to $25 a bunch. "Other than that, I just give them to friends," Wilson said.

The peacock or male of the species is the only one to bear the colorful plumes. Female peacocks or peahens are an uninspiring brown. They color up only a little in the fall when faint green feathers found on the neck become a bit more visible. Peafowl also come in white and with a predominance of green instead of blue in the breast.

The male sheds its plumes in latter July and August and by Thanksgiving has developed a new fan, which Wilson said is supported on the bottom by a platform of feathers that are nothing more than stiff bristles with plain scallops on the ends. "When they shake their tails, the bristles make a sound like dry leaves or branches scrubbing against one another."

The fully mature male tail is usually five times the bird's body length — about six feet. And contrary to popular belief, the male's feathers grow from its back rather than from its rear end.

Beautiful, splendid, yes, the peacock is those things, but the bird can be annoying, too, Wilson said.

"Its call can grate on your nerves, especially during mating season when the peacock's piercing screech is heard the most," he said.

Surprisingly, though, Wilson said he's had few if any complaints from neighbors about the noise. "Most seem interested in the birds and consider them a unique addition to our little community," he said.

While most view the birds as local color, one who was not aware that Wilson had peacocks was not so sure. "He had been working on the farm and when I got home, he told me I had a bob cat in the woods that had been calling all day and that I'd better watch out!" Wilson said.

He doesn't have to, because the two cocks now residing in his pen have over 200 eyes — on their feathers — watching for his safety.

North Carolina Museum Of Art Honors Black Mountain College

By SHARON BROOM
N.C. Museum of Art

RALEIGH — "The Arts at Black Mountain College," an exhibition documenting the artistic contributions of an experiment in education in the North Carolina mountains, will be on view August 1 to October 4 at the North Carolina Museum of Art, 2110 Blue Ridge Boulevard, Raleigh.

The exhibition will focus on achievements in the visual, literary and performing arts by Black Mountain faculty and students.

While the college existed only from 1933 to 1957, with fewer than 1,200 students enrolled in that period and less than 55 formally graduating, it exerted a strong and lasting influence on every area of the arts in America.

Visual artists whose work was nurtured at Black Mountain include some of the most important figures of the 20th century: Josef Albers, Willem de Kooning, Lyonel Feininger, Franz Kline, Jacob Lawrence, Robert Motherwell, Kenneth Noland and Robert Rauschenberg.

In other disciplines, artists who taught or studied at Black Mountain include composer John Cage, choreographers Merce Cunningham, Agnes de Mille and Paul Taylor; architects Buckminster Fuller and Walter Gropius, and poets Robert Creeley, Robert Duncan, Charles Olson and Jonathan Williams.

Black Mountain College was founded in the fall of 1933, during the period of the Great Depression in America and political upheaval in Europe. It was begun by a group of former faculty and students from Rollins College in Winter Park, Florida who had left that institution the previous semester in a dispute over academic freedom.

Led by classics professor John Andrew Rice, the group decided to found a new college and located a group of buildings for rent, owned by the Blue Ridge Assembly, near Black Mountain, east of Asheville.

During the first semester, the group brought to Black Mountain Josef Albers, a renowned artist and teacher from the avant-garde Bauhaus art school in Germany. Albers and his wife Anni, a weaver and teacher, sought to leave the threat of Nazism, which had recently closed the Bauhaus, and were intrigued by the prospect of a liberal arts college with art at the core of its curriculum.

The Alberses served as faculty and administrators at Black Mountain for 16 years, attracting teachers and students of high reputation or great promise.

While the Bauhaus and other similar schools were structured for the professional, Black Mountain modified its courses in the arts for the general liberal arts student. By focusing on the arts, the faculty hoped to develop initiative, cooperation and a creative approach applicable to all areas of life and work.

Its educational philosophy emphasized the interrelationship of head, heart and hands, the value of direct experience and uninhibited exchange among disciplines.

Founded on the principles of absolute democracy, the college differed significantly from other institutions of higher learning. It was owned and administered by the faculty, with both faculty and students serving on the central governing body, the Board of Fellows.

The artistic approach of Black Mountain found its most successful outlet during the summer sessions in the arts, which began in 1944. During these sessions, faculty members such as John Cage, Merce Cunningham, Willem de Kooning and Robert Motherwell, whose work had not yet received critical acceptance, found a supportive environment at Black Mountain.

It was during these summer sessions that Buckminster Fuller created his first geodesic dome in 1949 and John Cage, in 1952, created the non-narrative theatrical event that would become the "happening" of the 1960s.

In 1954, Black Mountain College closed, a victim of internal power struggles, ideological conflicts and financial failure.

The exhibition at the North Carolina Museum of Art presents approximately 200 objects, including works of art created at Black Mountain by faculty and students, as well as archival materials that document accomplishments in literature and the performing arts.

"The Arts at Black Mountain College" was organized by the Edith C. Blum Art Institute at Bard College, Annandale-on-Hudson, New York, with Mary Emma Harris as guest curator.

Ms. Harris, a native of Kinston, received her B.A. degree from Greensboro College and her M.F.A. in art history from UNC-Chapel Hill. The exhibition is accompanied by a newly published illustrated 350-page book, written by Mrs. Harris, and a free brochure. Huston Paschal, assistant curator of the N.C. Museum of Art, is coordinating the exhibition in Raleigh.

Related Programs

A series of free programs, "The Black Mountain Experience," is scheduled at the museum each Wednesday at 8 p.m. Topics and presenters are:

- August 5 — Whitney Jones, president, Jargon Society, will speak on "Literature and the Arts at Black Mountain."
- August 12 — A concert of compositions by John Cage, performed by North Carolina musicians, will be presented.
- August 19 — Artist Kenneth Noland will speak on "A Painter's Perspective of Black Mountain." Following his lecture, the exhibition will be open until 10 p.m.
- August 26 — Carolyn Brown, former principal dancer with Merce Cunningham, will discuss "Black Mountain: The Merce Cunningham Dance Company's Beginnings."

Additionally, the museum will present four free films related to Black Mountain College on two dates. These are:

- August 9 — Two films will be shown — "Robert Rauschenberg: Retrospective," which traces the development of Rauschenberg's work from his earliest experiments to the 1977 retrospective at the Museum of Modern Art in New York; and "To Open Eyes," a study of Joseph Albers as teacher and artist, which includes scenes of his years at Black Mountain College and Yale University.
- August 16 — The museum will screen two films — "John Cage," in which the composer discusses himself and his music; and "Merce Cunningham," a film which includes both excerpts from dance performances and interviews with the choreographer.

The Black Mountain Exhibition is supported by the National Endowment for the Arts, the New York State Council for the Arts, the James G. Hanes Memorial Fund, the Mary Reynolds Babcock Foundation and the North Carolina Museum of Art Foundation.

Mother-Daughter Duo To Be At Carowinds

CHARLOTTE — On August 9, country music's mother-daughter duo, the Judds, will perform in the Carowinds Paladium.

The Judds have produced hits like "Rockin' With the Rhythm of the Rain" and "Grandpa" and have earned two Grammy awards.

Appearing with the Judds will be singer/songwriter Bobby Lee Springfield.

Tickets for each performance are $4 in addition to the theme park admission of $14.50 for patrons aged seven and older.

Tickets are available at Ticketron outlets in North Carolina or may be purchased by calling Teletron at 1-800-233-4050.

Special Event Marks Opening Of 'Grease'

NEW BERN — In conjunction with the Thursday night opening of the musical "Grease" at the Bradbury Saax theater in New Bern, the play's producers are staging a gala pre-opening event.

A parade of vintage cars, motorcycles and "jalopies" of the 1959 era will form a motorcade through downtown New Bern at 6:30 p.m., ending at the Saax Bradbury Theater prior to the 8 p.m. curtain time.

Anyone with a car or motorcycle of that period and who is interested in being included in the parade, can check in by 6 p.m. at Kaser Park, next door to the New Bern Police Station at the corner of Queen and George streets.

Additionally, audience members are being invited to attend the play dressed in the fashions of the late 1950s.

Another event in conjunction with the musical will be held on the play's Saturday night's closing. Immediately following the production, a soc hop will be held at O'Marks Square Mall in New Bern. Admission will be by presentation of a "Grease" ticket stub from any of the three nights of performance.

Tobacco Harvest Day At Duke Homestead

DURHAM — Demonstrations of tobacco harvesting will be highlights of the free annual Duke Homestead Barn Party Sunday.

From 2 p.m. to 4 p.m., traditional tobacco-curing activities, folk music and refreshments will be featured at the mid-19th century state historic site in Durham where the American tobacco industry originated.

Staff and volunteers in period dress will demonstrate the entire process of bringing harvested tobacco into the barn, beginning with taking leaves from the "drag" (conveyor), handling leaves to be looped onto tobacco sticks, and hanging sticks and tobacco in the curing barn.

The singing group Still Working On It will offer old-fashioned gospel music in barbershop style. Visitors will also hear music from The Bull City Reelers string band.

Hoe cakes cooked on an open fire and watermelon will be offered to visitors, along with ice water, according to Sheila Harrell, Duke Homestead coordinator.

Duke Homestead State Historic Site is the ancestral home of the family whose name became synonymous with the tobacco industry in America. Washington Duke returned from the Civil War, penniless, to his Durham home. With his children (their mother died in 1858) he began a factory in a log building on the homestead manufacturing the bright-leaf tobacco made popular by the Civil War soldiers. From this beginning grew the largest tobacco company in the world.

Duke Homestead State Historic Site is located at 2828 Duke Homestead Road in Durham. From I-85 take Guess Road exit, north on Guess Road to Duke Homestead Road, right on Duke Homestead Road for one-half mile.

There is no admission charge. For details, call the homestead at 477-5498 or the Historic Sites Section at 733-7862.

Museums Stepping Up Efforts To Spot Expensive Forgeries

By Robert A. Jones
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

MALIBU, Calif. — At the J. Paul Getty Museum here, the curator of the ancient art collection was asked recently to show a visitor two Greek sculptures. Both sculptures are publicly displayed in the marbled galleries of the Getty and have served for years as major attractions of its famous collection. But the curator hesitated.

"Don't you want to see something else?" she asked. No amount of prodding could get the curator even to enter the galleries where the two sculptures are on view.

Other officials at the Getty also refuse to discuss the two works, a circa 300 B.C. marble head attributed to the Greek sculptor Skopas and the fragment of a grave monument from the 6th century B.C. The museum staff will not say where the sculptures came from or what prices were paid or why the museum believes they are Greek. One of the pieces, the grave monument, has even disappeared from the museum handbook sold at its bookstore.

There is a reason for this unusual behavior. Both works of art are suspected of being fakes, and the Getty museum has begun the long and painful process of discovering whether two of its most prized possessions are something other than what they seem. Meanwhile, officials have decided that the less they say, the better.

"We might be in the position of returning these pieces to the sellers," said Marion True, the ancient art curator. "If we talk about our doubts now, we would be telegraphing our arguments in advance, and we don't want to do that."

For the museum, the stakes are very high. A person with close ties to the Getty placed the purchase price of the two pieces at more than $1 million each, and other published reports have put their combined cost at $5 million. The Getty is the richest museum in the world with an endowment valued at $2.8 billion and could afford the loss. But the issue is not money alone. The sculpture, titled the Head of Achilles, and the carved relief were regarded as extremely rare finds at the time of their acquisition; it is unlikely they could be replaced at any price.

And there is also the matter of wounded pride. "I think the hardest thing for a museum to do is admit it was fooled on a major piece," said the curator at another museum who asked to remain anonymous. "Every curator fears that he will have to face fakes have grown ever more subtle, often supplanting the critical eye of art connoisseurs. In response, forgers themselves have become technicians, sometimes incorporating features designed to foil scientific tests.

"Every time you publish the results of your work in a scientific journal, you know the forgers have it in their hands," said one scientist who has worked with the Getty. "Of course, there are always nuances that don't get into any article; it's the only thing that gives me comfort."

At the Getty the controversy surrounding the two Greek sculptures is a revealing example of what happens when reputable scholars raise questions about an artwork's authenticity. In this case there is no question about the importance of the two works: Both have been promoted by the museum as centerpieces of its internationally recognized collection of ancient art. In the bookstore the Getty still sells separate books on each sculpture that describe them in superlatives.

The carved relief depicts a tender scene on a broken fragment of marble. Supposedly the fragment is part of a larger monument that once marked the grave of a young man in Greece around 500 B.C. The scene shows the head and shoulders of two warriors; one young man is bandaging the head of another who has been mortally wounded in battle. In its book on the relief, the Getty calls the sculpture "an exceptional masterpiece." Although the name of the sculptor is not known, the book says the artist deserves to be ranked "among the greatest Athenian masters, among the greatest creators of archaic Greek art."

The marble Head of Achilles attributed to the Greek sculptor Skopas is regarded as at least equally important. One of the greatest sculptors of the 4th century B.C., Skopas was commissioned to provide statuary for some of Greece's finest temples. Few of his works have survived, and the discovery of a carved head from the ruined temple at Tegea represented a major find for the Getty in 1979. In describing the importance of the head, the Getty book concludes that it may have been carved by Skopas himself or one of his students. In either case, the book says, the statue's "quality and power suffice to place it at the forefront of all surviving architectural marbles ... hardly less than a work of genius."

These claims are extraordinary, and behind them lie some very tricky judgments. The difference between a Greek original and a Roman copy of a Greek original, both in monetary and artistic terms, can be very great. But with marble sculpture there are often few technical clues to disclose the truth. So the debate usually revolves around fine points of style: Is this the way Skopas would have carved a head? Are the eyes and hands on the grave relief correct for 500 B.C.?

But the answers to even those questions are not known with certainty. Ancient artists lived so long ago that only the crudest information is available about their lives and work. Some scholars, for example, contend that Skopas' style cannot be described with certainty because none of the works attributed to Skopas can be proved unarguably to be his.

Because of these uncertainties and because reputations depend on the outcome, the debate at times can become testy. And so it has for the two Getty pieces.

Criticism of the Head of Achilles first came from Europe in the form of a long piece in the German scholarly journal, Antike Welt. Archeology professor German Hafner of the University of Mainz maintained that the Getty sculpture most likely was a copy of a genuine head on display at the National Museum in Athens. Hafner referred to the Getty piece, contemptuously, as probably the "work of a student" of the Beaux Arts school in 19th century.

Hafner's argument focused on one feature of the Getty head: the shape of the visor that runs across the figure's forehead. The curve of the visor is smooth, without feature. This shape first appears to be identical to that of the head in Athens. And that, Hafner argued, is just the problem.

Originally the Athens head sported a different style of visor, Hafner wrote, one that contained a small peak extending downward toward the nose. Sometime in antiquity the Athens head suffered massive damage that obliterated the peak. After it was acquired by the Athens museum, the damage was repaired by a restorer who did not know about the peak and rebuilt the visor in a smooth arc. A copyist then made the head that is at the Getty, Hafner concluded, and copied the wrong visor along with everything else.

On a spring day recently at the University of California, Berkeley, Andrew Stewart pulled the Hafner article from his file, tossed it on a table, and looked at it with some distaste. "Hafner has never seen the head; he's only seen photographs," Stewart said. "He condemned this piece from a very great distance."

Aussie Band's Album A Hit

By LARRY McSHANE
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — It's been seven years since "Funkytown" — a quirky disco tune by the first one-hit wonder, Lipps Inc. — reached No. 1. It's back in the Top 40 again, but it's an Australian band with a string of successes Down Under that's behind the beat.

"I know it's a disco song, but our interpretation of the song, that's saying what the band is," said Brian Canham, lead singer and guitarist with the Melbourne-based Pseudo Echo. "It gives people a starting point."

A rocked-up version of the song was included on "Love an Adventure," the band's first U.S. release after a pair of successful Australian albums. The first single from the album, "Living in a Dream," enjoyed heavy rotation on Music Television, but it's the "Funkytown" remake which has put them on the U.S. charts at No. 19 and still climbing.

"I just had this feeling," said Canham, 24, at a breakfast meeting in midtown Manhattan. He wore his favorite T-shirt of a New York Yankees model, although he's not a baseball fan. "It was summer in Australia, and playing it in my car, and it sounded like one of those songs you hear coming out of the radio all summer."

And it was, climbing to No. 1 in Australia last summer the way it had in the United States in 1980.

"We'd never had a No. 1. We'd had heaps of top (hits), but never a one. And within three weeks it was one," said Canham, still excited about the development. "And it stayed there nine weeks!"

That done, the band sets its sights on American shores, combining tracks from its first two albums for the U.S. release and tacking on "Funkytown" almost as an afterthought — adding it after some copies had already been pressed.

"The crowds here have been really responsive — much better than we'd imagined," Canham said during a tour stop in New York City. "We sort of imagined it pretty tough, because we'd been painted a pretty grim picture by our tour manager, just in case."

One thing Canham has enjoyed is the band's relative anonymity in the states, unlike the mania — especially among young girls eyeing the four-man band as pinups — which frequently greeted them back home.

"In America, there's no preconceived ideas about the band," said Canham, who is still uncomfortable about the teeny-bopper image Pseudo Echo once held.

"Back home, we've crossed over to a mainstream audience. It took us a long time, and we still get a lot of young girls. But all in all, the odds balanced out — there's still a lot of girls in the first few rows, but the audience is a cross-section."

Canham said the widening audience and the U.S. tour are part of the band's grand plan for both success and respect.

"My whole dream was to be an internationally successful musician," said Canham, who does most of the band's writing and produced "Funkytown."

"I did always want to become a respected musician — a real player, writer, performer, like Springsteen, people like that."

Much of Canham's songwriting is done mentally; he opts for sheer memory over sheet music.

"I'm always humming tunes, thinking about tunes in my head, and every now and then it's like, 'Hmmm, that's a good one,'" he said. "I never really thought about it, but somebody asked me what instrument I use to write on. ... The instrument I use is my voice. When I'm writing the beat, I do really write straight from my head."

The method has worked since the band formed in 1983, but it's also created a problem: Sometimes, a potentially good song idea is forgotten.

"If it's real good, it'll come back to me. They usually do," said the confident Canham, who then admitted hedging his bets a bit.

"I don't like taking that chance now. What I do is record it, but I don't play it back. I play it safe, and it usually comes back to me without listening again."

Cotten's Lively Career

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — When both were young actors getting their start in New York, Orson Welles made this analysis of Joseph Cotten:

"You're lucky to be tall and thin and have curly hair. You can also move about the stage without running into the furniture. But these are fringe assets, and I'm afraid you'll never make it as an actor. But as a star, I think you well might hit the jackpot."

Welles fulfilled his own prophecy by making his friend a star in 1940 with the monumental "Citizen Kane," following with "Journey Into Fear" and "The Magnificent Ambersons." Then Cotten was signed by David O. Selznick and pursued a distinguished career in films that was halted — temporarily, he vows — by a stroke in 1981.

Recently published by Mercury House is "Joseph Cotten: An Autobiography." The subtitle sets the tone: "Vanity Will Get You Somewhere." It's a witty, irreverent recounting of a lively career that has encompassed radio, films and television. He also has done theater, appearing with Katharine Hepburn in "The Philadelphia Story."

Cotten, 82, came to Los Angeles with his wife, Patricia Medina, one of the world's great beauties, to talk about the book and other matters. They have made their home in Palm Springs since his doctor recommended daily swimming for therapy after the stroke. His speech is getting back to normal, though he still has to spell out elusive words.

"Joe was doing fine until he had a throat operation four months ago," his wife said. "He hasn't been able to resume the therapy, but he will soon."

"After the stroke they told me he would never speak again. If speech doesn't return in eight hours, they said, it's gone. It was over a year before he spoke."

In the book he writes fondly of his boyhood in Virginia along the banks of the Appomattox. His grandmother and uncle filled him with tales of the Civil War, and the boy grew up with a dramatic bent. He tried newspapering for a while, then realized he had to be an actor.

The most colorful portions of the autobiography are devoted to Cotten's association with Welles and the Mercury Theater. Cotten reported for "Citizen Kane" in August of 1940 and never had a chance to discuss his role of the reporter Jed Leland with Welles.

Welles called to say he had sprained his ankle and Cotten's first day of work would be the wheelchair scene. "I almost dropped the phone," Cotten writes. "That was the most difficult scene I had in the entire picture." What's more, he had to report to makeup at 4 a.m. to be aged with rubber cement. Cotten's monologue became one of the most memorable scenes in the film.

After "Journey Into Fear," which Cotten co-wrote, the pair went in different directions. Cotten became a popular leading man with such films as Hitchcock's "Shadow of a Doubt," "Gaslight," "Since You Went Away," "Love Letters," "The Farmer's Daughter," "The Third Man," "Niagara" with Marilyn Monroe and "September Affair." Despite a string of distinguished performances, he never was nominated for an Academy Award.

Welles and Cotten remained close friends, and they could be seen in recent years lunching at the former's

Scottish Trail Is A Rugged Experience

By MICHAEL WEST
Associated Press Writer
KIRK YETHOLM, Scotland (AP) — There's a reward after walking all 270 miles of the Pennine Way, the trail running up Britain's high northern backbone: you get to sign the "Lunatics' Book" at the Border Hotel.

That's what hotel owner Peter MacDonald calls the register he keeps of walkers who complete the trek from south to north, which is the way most do it in order to take advantage of prevailing winds. Last year 1,631 signed, 358 more than 1985.

His register is the only record of Pennine Way walkers, and since his hotel is the northern terminus, no one has recorded the number of those who walk from north to south.

The marvels of this exhilarating walk are recorded in "Pennine Way Companion," the best-selling book written by Alfred Wainwright, 80-year-old godfather of long-distance walkers.

"When you reach Kirk Yetholm ... you will be tired and hungry and travel-stained. But you will feel great, just great," he says in the book.

The Border Hotel is at Kirk Yetholm, just across the border from England.

Walkers say they usually do feel great, albeit with aching muscles, ravenous appetites and sodden clothes stained dark brown to the knees through immersion in the moorland peat bogs.

Named after northern England's Pennine uplands, the Pennine Way starts at the village of Edale in Derbyshire and runs north along the high moorland spine of England and across the Cheviot Hills on the Scottish border before descending to Kirk Yetholm.

It covers some of the wildest, loneliest country in Britain. Food and lodging for those without tents must be sought by going to farmhouses, inns and youth hostels in the valleys.

Wainwright calls it "a tough, bruising walk" and bad weather is a regular hazard.

Cross Fell, at 2,930 feet, is the highest point on the route. A fierce wind and stinging rain lashed the boulder-strewn summit during a recent trek in June, while low, scudding clouds cut visibility to 20 yards. Wind chill brought numbness to hands and feet and set the teeth chattering despite layers of warm clothing.

On the southern sector, Wainwright warns that lives have been lost on Bleaklow Moor in bad weather. But in good weather, the sense of space and freedom under huge, open skies brings exhilaration.

The Pennine Way, the creation of life-long socialist Tom Stephenson, was officially opened April 24, 1965, at a rally by 2,000 walkers on Malham Moor in Yorkshire. The opening followed a 30-year battle with landowners, state-owned water boards responsible for reservoirs and others keen to keep walkers off their land.

Stephenson, who died March 1 at the age 94, was a laborer in the textile industry in grimy, industrial Lancashire when at the age of 13 he began walking on the nearby open moorlands.

His boyhood coincided with the first ramblers' clubs, mostly run by men from the same background as himself. He championed the "right to roam" and never forgot early encounters with hostile gamekeepers guarding huge moorland grouse-shooting estates for wealthy landowners.

"I could never understand how anyone could own a mountain. It was surely there for everybody," he once declared.

In 1932, about 400 ramblers demanding right of access battled police and gamekeepers at a mass trespass on private moorland at Kinder Scout, now part of the Pennine Way. Five ringleaders were jailed.

Stephenson got a researcher's job with the socialist Labor Party but later went into journalism. In 1935, his article, "Wanted: A Long, Green Trail," first proposed the idea of a Pennine trail.

He was press officer at the Town and Country Planning Ministry in the Labor government formed in 1945 and pressed the case of the Ramblers' Association, becoming its secretary in 1948. He thereby had a hand in the 1949 National Parks and Access to the Countryside Act. This set up the National Parks Commission, which ultimately gained government approval for the Pennine Way, leading to negotiation of rights of way to turn it into reality.

The first of Britain's long-distance walkers' trails, it has now spawned a series of other long walks.

Like Stephenson, Wainwright discovered the freedom of the hills early in life. "Pennine Way Companion," written in 1967, and other guidebooks by Stephenson, illustrated by his own drawings and maps, are best sellers and have done much to promote long-distance walking.

Average time for completing the Pennine Way is two to three weeks, but the Guinness Book of Records lists the record, set by runner Michael Cudahy in 1984, as two days, 21 hours and 55 minutes.

MacDonald's wife, Sue, said it's impossible to cheat by walking only the last few miles and arriving at the Border Hotel claiming to have completed the whole distance.

"It's the smell," she said, grinning. After days on the trail, the combination of peat and damp clothes has a pungency all its own.

Prize Short Stories Still A Good Volume

PRIZE STORIES 1987: The O. Henry Awards. Edited by William Abrahams. Doubleday. 320 Pages. $17.95

Editor William Abrahams went through dozens of magazines to find the 20 stories included in this 67th annual collection.

Most of his selections are worthy of being gathered into "Prize Stories 1987," but there are a few, just a few, that make the reader wonder. Stories such as Richard Bausch's "What Feels Like the World" and Mary Robison's "I Get By." The first is a rather maudlin telling of a man's uneasy relationship with his overweight granddaughter. The second is an unsympathetic narration by a new widow attempting to adjust to her husbandless world.

But these are well offset by a majority of beautifully written, very well-told tales. Stories such as Louise Erdrich's "Fleur," a haunting fantasy about a woman fated to destroy those unfortunate to touch too closely on her life. In addition to telling an absorbing story, Erdrich is master of the fine line as witness her description of a tornado. "The odd cloud became a fat snout that nosed along the earth and sniffled, jabbed, picked at things, sucked them up, blew them apart, rooted around as if it was following a certain scent."

Others worthy of being singled out are Alice Adams' "Tide Pools" and Robert Taylor's "Lady of Spain." Adams, the enviable writer of numerous fine stories, does it again with her touching tale of two once close friends reunited again after a separation of more than 20 years. Taylor's story deals with a reclusive young boy forced to deal with the reality of his parents drifting apart, and it is terribly moving.

Living Longer

This is Bill Weinacht, 70, making a long jump of 13 feet, 2 inches. He and more than 3,000 other athletes recently took part in the first U.S. National Senior Olympics. U.S. life expectancy at birth is now over 74 years. However, the individual cells in our bodies don't live nearly as long. Red blood cells last about 120 days, and skin cells may live as long as 34 days. But stomach cells survive for only two days. And some white blood cells die in about 10 hours.

DO YOU KNOW — Do men or women have a higher life expectancy?

TUESDAY'S ANSWER — Andrew Jackson appears on the twenty-dollar bill.

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY July 23

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A confused or deceiving condition this morning must be dealt with carefully to avoid offending someone. Later in the day, however, much better influences are in control.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Avoid becoming involved in a peculiar situation between a family member and an outsider. Entertain this evening.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Study communication matters early, as you'll need time to handle any problems which might crop up along the way.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Be cautious in dealing with financial matters today to avoid costly errors. Get plenty of rest tonight after a hard day.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Stay alert today or you could be conned into a situation which could cause you embarrassment.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): You may feel that your pride is being assaulted this morning, but later in the day the truth will emerge. Don't be rash.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): A friend may want a favor from you, but study it carefully, as there may be more involved than you think.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): An outside activity will require much more time than you thought, so give yourself plenty of time to handle it.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): You'll get a message from a distance which will puzzle you, but later you'll see that it is quite beneficial.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Be sure you know the facts before questioning a bill or account. Don't embarrass yourself unnecessarily.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): A partner may do something which you think is incorrect, but appearances are sometimes deceiving—don't judge.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Remove obstacles from your path rather than climbing over or around them. Be sensible in career moves.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): You may think that a new amusement is too complicated, but use your common sense to work it out ingeniously.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he, or she, will have a knack for handling family and property matters, but may be quite stubborn early in life. A good education will eliminate this tendency and may provide great success in business. Your child would do well in sports, but not in those of a rough nature.

Major bridge events in Europe have long been sponsored by commercial organizations, but the U.S. has lagged behind in that regard.

This might be changing. The American Contract Bridge League's Golden Anniversary Pair Championship, to be played nationwide on Sept. 15, will be sponsored by Royal Viking Line, which has been very active in promoting bridge on their cruises.

This hand was played aboard a cruise ship some while ago. West's double was optional, showing a no trump type hand, and East elected to make the best of a bad lot by passing.

West got off to the unfortunate lead of the ace of clubs, then shifted to the jack of diamonds, covered by the king and taken by East's ace. The diamond continuation was ruffed, and a low heart toward dummy's jack was won by the queen.

Obviously, West must attack the table's spade entry before the clubs can be put to use. How should he go about it?

If West leads a spade honor, declarer will win in hand and later finesse the ten of spades if necessary. West's best chance is to hope that, if his partner does not hold the king, he at least holds the nine of spades, so he must shift to a low spade!

That gives declarer a chance to go wrong. If he inserts the table's ten, all will be well. However, declarer actually chose to play for split spade honors and hope that West held the nine. So he followed low, and was forced to capture East's nine with the king. After cashing the queen of clubs, declarer did well to lead the king of trumps, pinning East's ten as West grabbed the ace. But now a spade honor led to the inevitable one down. Declarer won in dummy and tried to discard his spade loser on the king of clubs, but West's ruff was the death knell.

NATIONAL HOT DOG MONTH — In celebration of National Hot Dog month try innovative ideas, such as Pita Hot Dogs, using the frankfurter recipes listed below. From Memorial Day through Labor Day, it is estimated that Americans will eat almost six million hot dogs, representing the season of the greatest hot dog consumption. (Reflector Photo by Cliff Hollis)

Hot Dog Lovers Pig Out During Summer Months

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

As July marks National Hot Dog Month, it seems fitting to recognize that wienie-worshipping Americans will consume about 1.8 billion frankfurters this year, according to statistics presented by GoodMark Foods Inc.

From Memorial Day through Labor Day, when hot dog consumption is greatest, almost six billion will be eaten. With those figures, one may think frankfurters originated in the United States, but they didn't.

According to GoodMark Foods, the frankfurter is thought to be created by a butcher in Frankfurt, Germany in 1652. In 1904, a concessionaire created the hot dog sandwich at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition in St. Louis. He had been selling the wieners as plain, hot sausages before deciding to loan them white gloves to make it easier for the customers to eat.

When those gloves were not returned, he consulted a baker who designed the hot dog bun to protect the fingers of the eaters.

Once created, hot dogs became a natural at athletic events — a tradition that did start in the United States.

They first got together in 1901 on a cold April day at the New York Polo Grounds. Losing money selling ice cream and cold soda, a concessionaire sent salesmen to butcher shops to buy a supply of dachshund sausages.

The sales pitch from portable hot water tanks, "They're red hot! Get your dachshund sausages while they're red hot!" yielded great response from the fans.

Cartoonist and Sportswriter, Tad Dorgan, quickly created from the stands a cartoon of barking dachshund sausages nestled warmly in rolls. Not sure how to spell dachshund, he wrote "hot dog." The term was born.

The skinless hot dog hit a height of popularity about 1937. In making them, raw meat is stuffed into cellulose casings through a stainless steel tube. When

Ice Cream — A Few Questions And Answers

By CAROLE SUGARMAN
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

Ice cream, perhaps more than any other food, is in our hearts and minds and freezers.

We eat it not just at the table, but in the park and on the street; and when we wake up in the middle of the night, we crave it above all foods. For some people, there is no such thing as enough ice cream.

Still, like many things that we love inordinately, we don't examine it all that closely. In our infatuation, we ignore those nagging questions that perhaps we should be asking.

How do all those Oreos get smashed for Cookies 'n Cream? Why is pistachio ice cream green? And what happens to a Baskin-Robbins flavor-of-the-month when its month is up?

We propose to answer those questions, as well as provide other answers that you as ice-cream consumers have a right to know.

Why are upscale ice creams invariably named after fake Scandinavian towns?

Reuben Mattus, founder of Haagen-Dazs, told a Newsday reporter in 1981 that although the name doesn't mean anything in Danish, nor is it any place he knows of, Haagen-Dazs is Haagen-Dazs, because it "sounds good."

Mattus sold his New Jersey-based company to Pillsbury in 1983. He is now semi-retired, incommunicado and probably very rich because of those umlauts.

What happens to a Baskin-Robbins flavor-of-the-month after its month is up?

Flavor-of-the-month heaven is located in Burbank, Calif., where the formulas for close to 600 flavors are stored in a locked vault, according to company spokeswoman Marilyn Novak. (After all, "IBM locks up their designs," Novak noted.)

While some flavors are revived seasonally (e.g. Winter White Chocolate, Quarterback Crunch), many topical flavors are "long gone and will never come back," said Novak. Among them: Lunar Cheesecake, developed after the 1969 moon landing; Sunflower Power, developed during the hippie era; and Beatle-Nut, named after the famous singing group.

Is there a proper way to eat ice cream, or is it proper to eat it any old way?

Miss Manners responds, "Always lick your ice-cream cone clockwise.

Why? We don't ask why in the etiquette business. There's a right and wrong, but not a because."

To avoid melting: "Lick the overlapping part constantly in swirls. Avoid pushing the ice cream into the bottom of the cone, so that the tip melts. That's a disaster. Then you have to hold it over your head (and suck it out the bottom)."

To precipitate melting: Although Miss Manners does not believe stirring a bowl of ice cream is appropriate behavior, "everyone knows it tastes better all mushed. Nature has a way of solving this. Get involved in animated conversation. If you talk long enough it will melt. Good conversation doesn't matter. Ice cream is not aware of how witty you are."

Why is pistachio ice cream green?

Pistachio ice cream would look like vanilla if it weren't for green food coloring, according to Stanley Schiffer, an Arlington, Va., flavor broker. Real nuts would give it "little flavor."

That's why it's made with pistachio flavoring, Schiffer added. As for the chopped nuts sprinkled in afterwards, he said, they're added "for publicity."

Will people admit to the most ice cream they've ever eaten at a single sitting?

They will if you ask them at the International Association of Ice Cream Manufacturers' annual ice-cream bash, where members of Congress, their staffs and families gorged on 2,500 gallons of ice cream and 13,000 novelties last week.

Judy Robinson, who works for Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., admitted to consuming 13 cups at last year's event, the majority of them pralines 'n cream.

Where To Find Good Bed And Breakfast Locations

L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

A bed and breakfast is an owner-operated residence with breakfast included in the price, which can range anywhere from $20 to $100 a night. Visitors are frequently made to feel more like welcome guests than paying customers when greeted with a glass of sherry or a spot of tea.

But alas, there are some inconveniences — sometimes it means waiting for a turn to use a bathroom that has to be shared by five other guests.

There is no absolute figure as to how many B&Bs there are in the United States, and estimates run anywhere from 5,000 to 10,000. Finding them is easy if you buy one of the many guidebooks available.

In addition to Phyllis Featherston's "Bed and Breakfast Guide for the United States and Canada, Bermuda, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands" ($11.95), there are "The Complete Bed & Breakfast Inns and Guesthouses in the U.S." by Pamela Lanier ($12.95) or "Bed & Breakfast U.S.A." by Betty Rundback and Nancy Kramer ($9.95).

Or you can send $1 and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Bed and Breakfast Reservation Services World Wide, P.O. Box 14797, Department 174, Baton Rouge, La. 70898, and they will send you a list of organizations that book B&B reservations in your area.

Ph.D., ECU Dept. Family Medicine

Dear Readers: We've had several questions asked over and over. So, this column is our Summer Food and Nutrition Tips.

Q. My kids get sick in the car? Is there a dietary cure?

A. Remember to keep strong food smells out of the car. Also, don't overindulge in food or alcohol the night before driving.

To help with jet travel, avoid caffeine drinks (coffee, tea, soda). Eat light — order a light meal in advance with the airline.

Q. My kids always seem to get diarrhea on a trip. What should I do about their diet?

You don't have to travel outside the country to get a touch of diarrhea. Any change in water, food and schedule can result in mild diarrhea. The diet that may help get over mild diarrhea follows. Remember, don't let the kids get dehydrated. Have them drink lots of sodas (not diet), juices, tea and/or sweetened mineral water, and eat crackers, toast, bananas, peeled apples and rice. By the third day, have them eat a carton of yogurt with active cultures (it says so on the label). As the kids improve, add boiled chicken, cooked fish and/or beans, then back to their regular diet. If diarrhea persists more than three days or there is blood, seek help from a physician.

Q. How do you eat nutritious foods on a trip?

A. Start with a core of foods that are easy to find on trips, using the four basic food groups as a guide. Daily include 16 ounces of low-fat milk or 1 cup of low-fat yogurt and 2 ounces yellow cheese. Eat 2 to 3 servings of baked, broiled or grilled chicken or fish (3.5 ounces per serving). For your four servings of fruits and vegetables, eat 2 stalks of broccoli or other dark green vegetable and 1 serving mixed green salad with tomato, and 1 baked potato. Also eat two servings of citrus fruit (an orange and 1/2 cup orange juice). For your two or more servings of bread and cereal, eat 2 slices of whole wheat bread or a muffin. Add other foods as you want to meet your caloric need.

Q. Does mayonnaise cause food poisoning?

A. No. Don't be uneasy about eating chicken or potato salad or other foods with mayonnaise unless the salads have not been kept cold. It's not the mayonnaise that makes the food dangerous. Any perishable food — with or without mayonnaise — may cause food poisoning if held at 60 degrees or higher for more than 3 hours. Keep cold foods cold and hot foods hot.

For a free booklet called "Safe Food To Go: A Guide to Packing Lunches, Picnicking and Camping Out," write FSIS Publications Office, Room 1164-S, USDA, Washington, D.C. Ask for Home and Garden No. 242. Happy Traveling.

Dear Readers: Answers from pizza companies have started to come in. Tony's Italian Style varies from 1,216 calories for the whole cheese pizza to 1,435 calories in the whole Supreme pizza. They average 72 grams of fat, 550 milligrams calcium and 2,510 milligrams sodium. If you ate 1/2 of the pizza, you'd get half of these values.

Sandwiches Sensational For Summer

Don't miss a minute of outdoor fun this summer! Plan easygoing menus featuring hearty sandwiches ... and keep the cooking quick and cool. With sandwiches you have an almost endless choice of fast, easy-to-assemble fillings ... and microwaving ingredients and toppings such as bacon, process cheese spread and ground beef, speeds preparation time as well.

For no-fuss variety, remember that crusty breads, English muffins, bagels, Kaiser or onion rolls, tortillas and pita bread along with vine-ripened tomatoes and crisp greens flatter any sandwich filling. The easiest topping ever is process cheese spread — hot from the microwave — a delicious addition to burgers, franks and open-face offerings such as Turkey Delight and Spicy Tostadas.

Served on pumpernickel or rye bread spread with thousand island dressing, Turkey Delight is a knife-and-fork sandwich layered with lettuce, turkey, tomatoes and crisp bacon ... all topped with microwaved regular process cheese spread.

Spicy Tostadas — a meal-in-minutes from the microwave — are zesty with chili and Mexican process cheese spread. Great for a casual weekend supper, this south-of-the-border favorite can be prepared to suit any taste with mild, hot or jalapeno process cheese spread.

Plan easygoing sandwich menus for family and friends this summer and use your microwave to make preparation fast and easy. A great sandwich idea for brunch or supper is Turkey Delight ... an up-dated open-face classic prepared with red and luscious summer tomatoes, lettuce, sliced turkey and bacon. Served on pumpernickel bread spread with thousand island dressing, the colorful sandwich is topped with process cheese spread, hot from the microwave.

Cucumber Is A Classy Vegetable

A cucumber is a rather undistinguished looking little vegetable but its cool, crisp, tasty flesh is everything but undistinguished!

Considered to be one of the oldest known cultivated vegetables, the cucumber has been enjoyed since before the days of ancient Egypt. The Emperor Tiberius of Rome enjoyed cucumbers so much, he had them grown by an artificial method so that he could enjoy this little green vegetable every day.

Tiberius would have enjoyed our land of plenty for North Carolina ranks second in production of cucumbers and summer is cucumber time in the Tarheel state!

Regardless of whether you enjoy cucumbers everyday, a good guide in buying cucumbers is to remember that those which are firm, fresh with a bright green color, are best. The shade of color is important, as older ones tend to be of rather dull green or sometimes yellow. Poor quality is also indicated by an outer rind that has a decided "give" to it when slight pressure is applied.

Once you arrive home with your cucumbers, store them in a crisper or plastic bag in the vegetable bin of your refrigerator. When stored properly, cucumbers should maintain their quality for up to 10 days.

cucumbers in half lengthwise and scrape out seeds. Cut a thin slice from bottom of each half so cucumbers lie flat; lightly salt cavities. Set aside.

Ice Cream — There Are Some Pertinent Questions And Answers

"About 2 gallons of chocolate," fantasized 6-year-old Miya Hunter of Arlington, Va.

Karen Zempolich, who works for Rep. Steny Hoyer, D-Md., remembered consuming "at least" a half-gallon of chocolate chip ice cream when she was a kid. The attraction (as with anything we want but shouldn't have a lot of): "It was sweet and forbidden."

How do all those Oreo cookies get broken for cookies-and-cream ice creams?

No, they aren't seconds or rejects, insisted Caroline Fee, spokeswoman for the Nabisco Co., maker of Oreo cookies. They are "specially diverted" cookies, that are broken into either "small grind" (for novelty items) or "large grind" (for half-gallons), according to Fee.

Obviously, not all bits of chocolate cookies flecked in vanilla ice cream are real Oreos. Nabisco does, however, sell the two grinds to other ice-cream companies as well as use them in its own products.

Fee would not elaborate on the quantity of crushed Oreos the company sells, how many employees are needed for the operation or the type of machine used to do the crushing.

(What is this, anyway, the race to develop superconductors?)

At least one Oreo crusher was willing to divulge his methodology. Bob Weiss, owner of Bob's Famous ice cream shops, said that when the company first started making its Oreo ice cream, staffers used hammers to smash the cookies. Now the company is "slightly more refined" and uses a commercial mixer, Weiss confided.

Do people who work in ice-cream stores eat a lot of ice cream?

Greg Rippey, an ex-police officer and English teacher, who now owns the Baskin-Robbins franchise in the Bowie, Md., Marketplace Mall, eats about a quart a day: "I own an ice cream store, and I eat vanilla and chocolate only."

Martha Martinez, assistant manager of Swensen's Uptown in Washington: "Not after a while. It takes some people about a month to not want to eat too much ice cream. Now I can't even eat a full kiddie scoop."

The cashier at Farrell's Ice Cream Parlour in Springfield (Va.) Mall, who refused to be identified by name: "You don't even want to see it. You just get sick of ice cream."

Why is New Zealand the world's second largest consumer of ice cream? (The United States is first.)

The fact is more interesting than the reason. According to Nicola McFaul, cultural-information officer at the Embassy of New Zealand, the dairy industry is one of the country's largest businesses.

While dairy products are also one of the country's major exports, we haven't seen much kiwifruit or hokey pokey ice cream, two popular flavors in New Zealand, said McFaul.

What kind of people eat ice cream in the dead of winter?

"The kind who run in the rain," according to Mark Bautista, owner of Cone E. Island ice-cream shops.

With all the innovative ice-cream flavors available, why is vanilla the most popular?

"For the same reason that most people paint a room beige," according to Schiffer, the flavor broker.

How many tasting spoons does a busy Baskin-Robbins store use in one day?

Anywhere from 150 to 200, said Sonya Hernandez, manager of a Baskin-Robbins in downtown Washington. Hernandez said that sometimes people take five or six tastes, then leave the store. Tacky, tacky.

What makes Ben & Jerry's Ice Cream different from all the other brands?

"Easy," writes Ben Cohen, in the brand-new "Ben & Jerry's Homemade Ice Cream & Dessert Book"

(Workman, $7.95). "It's the only superpremium ice cream you can pronounce."

How do supermarkets decide which ice-cream products to stock?

A record number of ice-cream novelties were introduced to retailers this season, according to Martin Friedman, editor of New Product News, making the freezer case "the toughest battleground in the store right now."

Friedman said that somewhere between 120 and 150 products were introduced to retailers last March.

July Is For Hot Dogs

filled, the casings are shaped into links and are taken to the smokehouse where they are smoked and cooked.

An automatic peeling device removes the casings, making the hot dogs skinless. Peeled hot dogs are known as wieners, wienies, viennas, red hots and franks.

Try the hot dog recipes listed below distributed by Jesse Jones Hot Dogs, Sausage and Luncheon Meats.

PITA HOT DOGS

- 4 hot dogs cut to curl*
- 4 pita bread pockets
- 1 small jar spaghetti sauce
- 1 medium onion, thinly sliced
- 1 medium green pepper, thinly sliced
- Grated Parmesan cheese

Lightly cook green pepper and onion slices in butter or oil. Pat dry with paper towel and set aside. Using pita bread as a base, brush with spaghetti sauce. Add onions and peppers. Place curled hot dogs on sauce. If desired, add additional sauce to top and sprinkle with Parmesan cheese.

*To make curled hot dogs: Make 7 to 11 cuts down one side of hot dog without cutting completely through. Heat franks in simmering water for about 5 minutes until curled. Curled hot dogs also may be barbecued on the grill for 1 to 2 minutes longer, if desired.

For S-shaped hot dogs, cut 10 crosswise slits (5 on one side and 5 on the other) on each hot dog, cutting about 1/2 through.

FRANKS IN THE SHELL

- 2 teaspoons salt
- 3 tablespoons vegetable oil
- 1 (8 ounces) package 2-inch pasta shells (about 30 shells)
- 1 (32 ounces) jar spaghetti sauce (about 3 cups)
- 2 (4 ounces) containers onion-herb creamy cheese or 1 (8 ounces) container French onion dip
- 3 (4 ounces) packages cocktail franks or 1 pound wieners cut in thirds
- 1 (8 ounces) zucchini, diced
- 1/4 cup grated Parmesan cheese

In 5-quart kettle, bring 3 quarts water, salt and 1 tablespoon oil to a boil. Add pasta shells. When water returns to boil, cook 7 minutes, stirring occasionally to prevent sticking. Drain shells and rinse quickly in cool running water. Drain well.

Brush some of remaining oil over a piece of aluminum foil about 17x13 inches. Set aside. Brush remaining oil over bottom of shallow 3-quart casserole. Spread about 1 1/2 tablespoons creamy cheese inside each pasta shell, being careful not to tear the shell. Place 2 cocktail franks or 1 piece of wiener in each shell and press to close.

Arrange shells in casserole. Sprinkle zucchini over shells. Pour remaining sauce over top. Sprinkle with Parmesan cheese. Cover with the foil, oiled side down. Bake at 375 degrees for 35 minutes, until sauce is bubbly and zucchini tender. Serve with additional Parmesan cheese, if desired. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

REUBEN DOGS

- 6 frankfurters
- 6 buns, rye bread or a favorite bread
- 1 can (8 ounces) sauerkraut, well drained
- 1/4 pound sliced Swiss cheese
- 2 tablespoons thousand island dressing
- Mustard
- Dill pickle slices

Heat frankfurters in boiling water, microwave oven or broiler. Slice heated frankfurters down the center lengthwise and place in center of bread or buns. Spread with a little mustard. Add 1/6 of the sauerkraut; top with 1 teaspoon of thousand island dressing.

Cover with Swiss cheese and place under the broiler or in the oven until the cheese is melted and beginning to bubble. Garnish with dill pickle slices and serve immediately. Makes 6 servings.

FRANKS MANDARIN

- 6 to 8 franks, sliced in 1/4-inch round pieces
- 1 tablespoon vegetable or peanut oil
- 1 1/2 cups liquid; reserved pineapple liquid or cold water
- 2 tablespoons cornstarch
- 1 tablespoon brown sugar
- 1 tablespoon vinegar
- 1 tablespoon lemon juice
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 teaspoon dry mustard
- Dash of ground black pepper
- 1/4 cup minced onions
- 1 cup diagonally cut celery
- 1 can (13 ounces) pineapple tidbits, reserve liquid
- 2 cans (11 ounces each) mandarin oranges, drained
- 1 sliced green pepper (optional)

Pour oil into wok and preheat uncovered to 375 degrees. Meanwhile, in small bowl, combine liquid, cornstarch, brown sugar, vinegar, lemon juice, salt and dry mustard.

Stir-fry sliced franks until browned, about 2 minutes. Push up the side. Add onion, celery and green pepper (optional) and stir-fry 1 minute. Add cornstarch mixture. Combine with franks and vegetables and stir until thickened, about 2 minutes.

Reduce heat to simmer. Add pineapple tidbits and orange segments. Heat, stirring gently, for 1 minute. Serve over hot ice. Makes 5 to 6 servings.

TORPEDO FRANKBOBS

- 4 hot dogs, cut into 1-inch chunks buds*
  - 1 can (16 ounces) pineapple chunks
  - 1 can (16 ounces) dark sweet cherries
  - 1 can (16 ounces) apricot halves, optional
  - 1 green pepper cut in 1-inch chunks
  - 1 jar sweet and sour sauce, or orange marmalade
- Arrange hot dogs and other items on skewers, alternating hot dogs and fruits. Brush generously with basting sauce and barbecue (or broil) over moderate heat until frankfurters and fruits are heated through. Serve on torpedo rolls, onion rolls or poppy seed buns.
- *To make hot dog buds: Cut hot dog into 1 1/2-inch long pieces. Make three diagonally crossed cuts in one end of each frankfurter section, cutting about a half-inch deep. Buds of crosshatch design will open and enlarge when heated.

Author Says Safe Eating Is Possible

By Nina Killham
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

So many diseases have been tied to the consumption of so many foods that some people seem afraid to eat.

Geri Harrington has written a book, "Real Food, Fake Food and Everything in Between" (Macmillan, 1987, $24.95) to help them cope. The problem, however, she says, was to present the current food situation in a positive way so people wouldn't throw up their hands in despair.

"It is increasingly possible to eat better than we used to. We are getting foods that are leaner, with less fat and less salt. It shows that there is an effort on the part of the manufacturer to fill the needs the consumer is expressing," she says.

Many baby-food manufacturers are now refusing to use apples sprayed with the pesticide daminozide, because they found mothers would not buy them.

And while consumers reject irradiated food for many of the wrong reasons, she says, the fact that many food processors are now refusing to use irradiated food is encouraging.

"The food people are responding to the consumer who is getting educated," says Harrington. "There is a lot of good food out there, and there will be more as the consumer reaches for the better foods."

She says the only reason for processed food is that it is more profitable: there's "more to be made from a box of instant potatoes than from a bag of real potatoes."

"One night I had a nightmare that I was caught in a supermarket in a section with no food on the shelves. Then I realized that there are sections that are truly like that, with instant potatoes, imitation crab. It wasn't a nightmare; it is the way things are."

The 349-page book acts as a consumer's guide to supermarkets. It shows what to avoid, what to look for and how to complain effectively.

One way, for consumers to protect themselves, she says, is to read labels and fight for good labeling. "The government is not as strong in this department as it might be."

For example, she says, companies should not be allowed to advertise crude fiber on the boxes as if it were beneficial.

Crude fiber has no relation to dietary fiber — in fact, it usually consists of wood pulp. "They shouldn't expect the consumer to know the difference," she says.

So buy the package that is more informative. And ask yourself why some products have so many added vitamins. "You have to wonder what they took out that they have to add it all."

The key to safe eating, according to Harrington, is to eat in moderation and with great variety. "Spread yourself out. If you really do that, you're not going to eat too badly."

While "Real Food, Fake Food and Everything in Between" does not contain recipes, the following meal does follow in the spirit of the book:

Express-lane List: fish stock, pearl onions, peas, romaine lettuce, arrowroot, sole, orange, almond oil

SAUTEED DOVER SOLE WITH PEARL ONIONS, JUNE PEAS AND ROMAINE

1 cup fish stock reduced to 1/2 cup
1/4 pound peeled pearl onions
3/4 pound fresh June peas
1/4 pound romaine lettuce, cut into 1/4-inch strips
1 teaspoon arrowroot
4 soles or flounder, each weighing 10 ounces

1 navel orange
Freshly ground pepper
1 tablespoon almond oil
Bring reduced stock to a boil. Add onions and cook for 5 minutes. Add peas and lettuce and cook 1 minute longer. Mix the arrowroot with a little liquid to dissolve, then stir it into the vegetables. Cook for about 30 seconds to thicken. Set the vegetables aside and keep warm.

If you are using the whole fish, cut down until you reach the bones in the middle. Then cut along the center membrane the full length of the fish. Turn the fish and cut it the same way on the other side.

This will make it easier to bone after the fish is cooked. In the same way, if you are using fillets, separate each into 2 pieces by cutting along the center membrane.

Using a fine hand grater, grate orange rind onto one side of each fish or fillet. Grind pepper on top. Turn the fish and add more rind and pepper to the other side.

Heat the almond oil in a 10-inch, non-stick skillet (or use 2 smaller skillets) over high heat. (The fish should fit in a single layer.) Halve the orange and squeeze the juice of one half over the fish. Put the fish in the hot pan and cook until browned on the bottom.

With a long spatula, carefully turn each piece and cook on the other side until done. Fillets should take about 4 minutes altogether, the whole fish with bones, 10 to 12 minutes.

Serve with the vegetables and a squeeze of orange juice.

Breakfast Continues To Survive

By Tom Sietsema
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

Eggs, breads, cereals and cakes. Marion Cunningham has carved a career from such foods, first with a revised version of the "Fannie Farmer Cookbook," and later "The Fannie Farmer Baking Book."

Next fall the California native will introduce what she considers her most personal book to date, simply titled "The Breakfast Book" (Knopf, $17.95).

Not surprisingly, Cunningham considers breakfast the most important meal of the day — but not just because it makes good sense nutritionally. "It's almost a rebellion against so much that is cute and fancy and artistic," says the author. "It's the last meal that hasn't been tampered with."

Cunningham's compilation of almost 300 home-style recipes reflects the simplicity and purity that she says attracts aficionados to breakfast in the first place.

Who wouldn't be easily coaxed from bed with the promise of a table set with the likes of Cunningham's ginger pancakes, fruit fritters or fluffy caramel coffee cake?

What's more, Cunningham guides readers from yeast breads to griddling foods to custards and condiments with the kind of homespun approach you'd expect from, well, Fannie Farmer herself.

In a few cases, she's updated old favorites — her raw fresh-fruit jams require only 30 minutes to prepare and require no cooking. And for those who fear deep-fat frying, Cunningham's devised a recipe for oven-baked doughnuts.

But most of all, the comforting collection is a source of inspiration for cooks tired of the predictable: Among other things, Cunningham demonstrates how simple it is to make breakfast sausage at home, and she gives staples like oatmeal new meaning in the form of a soufflé, as a coating for fish and in a pudding, flavored with maple syrup.

From "The Breakfast Book" comes the following recipe for ginger-lemon muffins, a delicious alternative to coffee and corn flakes, and just about as easy to whip up.

Before going through the express lane, make sure you have sugar, butter, eggs, flour and salt on hand at home.

BRIDGE CREEK FRESH GINGER MUFFINS
(Makes 16 muffins)

- 4- to 5-ounce piece unpeeled ginger
- ¾ cup plus 3 tablespoons sugar
- 2 tablespoons lemon
- ½ cup (1 stick) butter, room temperature
- 2 eggs
- 1 cup buttermilk
- 2 cups all-purpose flour
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ¾ teaspoon baking soda
- Grease muffin tins.

Cut unpeeled ginger into large chunks. If you have a food processor, process the ginger until it is in tiny pieces. Otherwise, hand chop into fine pieces. You should have ¼ cup.

Put the ginger and ¼ cup sugar in a small skillet or pan and cook over medium heat until the sugar has melted and the mixture is hot. Don't walk away from the pan — this cooking takes only a couple of minutes. Remove from the stove and let the ginger mixture cool.

Put the lemon zest and 3 tablespoons sugar in the food processor and process until the lemon peel is in small bits. Or chop the lemon zest and pith by hand and then add the sugar. Add the lemon mixture to the ginger mixture. Stir and set aside.

Put the butter in a mixing bowl and beat a second or two, add the remaining ½ cup sugar and beat until smooth. Add the eggs and beat well. Add the buttermilk and mix until blended. Add the flour, salt, and baking soda. Beat until smooth. Add the ginger-lemon mixture and mix well.

Spoon the batter into the muffin tins so the tins are ¾ full. Bake 15 to 20 minutes in a 375-degree oven. Serve warm.

Take the skin off a chicken breast before cooking and you remove 50 calories.
