ECU Planning To Enroll 64 Students In New Program

East Carolina University is expected to enroll some 64 students in the new N.C. Teaching Fellows program this fall, according to Rep. Ed Warren, D-Pitt.

"This is a tremendous new program aimed at recruiting more and better teachers for North Carolina schools," Warren said.

The N.C. Teaching Fellows program is part of a comprehensive state-funded program to recruit top quality students into teaching. Some 400 Fellows will be named annually.

"East Carolina and other state institutions will benefit greatly from this program, of course; but the school students of North Carolina will reap the greatest benefit as these Fellows begin their teaching careers in the years to come."

East Carolina ranks third among colleges in the number of students enrolled in the Fellows program. Only North Carolina State University and Appalachian State University will have more.

Fellows will receive loans of $5,000 per year for four years. This money may be used at any of nine UNC campuses. If Fellows teach for four years in the state's public schools after graduation, they do not have to repay the loans.

Over the next four years, East Carolina University will receive more than $1.2 million in state funds from this first group of Fellows.

The average SAT score of the Fellows was 1049, approximately 214 points higher than the statewide average, according to Warren, who serves on the Teaching Fellows program board and is chairman of the Appropriations Base Budget Committee on Education.

"The leadership of the General Assembly has shown strong support for the Fellows program," said Warren. This Fellows program is just one part of a comprehensive state teacher recruitment program," Warren said.

The Public School Forum of North Carolina, a coalition of educators, business leaders and politicians, proposed and administers the program.

Soviets Present Missile Proposal

By BRENDA WATSON
Associated Press Writer

GENEVA (AP) — The Soviet Union today formally presented a proposal for the superpowers to eliminate all their medium- and shorter-range nuclear missiles worldwide and urged Washington to remove "artificial obstacles" to agreement.

The superpower delegations on intermediate-range nuclear forces met for one hour at the Soviet diplomatic mission. The Soviet delegation was headed by Alexei Obukhov and the U.S. delegation was led by Maynard Glitman.

Before the meeting, Obukhov said the proposal, based on remarks by Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev on Wednesday, "opens a real prospect for working out a draft treaty on the total liquidation" of medium- and shorter-range missiles.

"We count on the reciprocity of the American side in this endeavor," he said. "If the American side cooperates, there is a possibility to conclude an agreement in the nearest future."

Glitman declined to talk to reporters. Obukhov said the issue of 72 Pershing 1A missiles based in West Germany with U.S.-operated nuclear warheads remained an obstacle in the talks.

A "real zero solution" would require "the liquidation of American warheads on the Pershing 1A missiles," he said.

"We proceed from the premise that all the artificial obstacles put forward by the American side at the negotiations so far must fade away now, (including) the refusal as of now by the American side to eliminate its warheads on the Pershing 1A missiles belonging to" West Germany.

Asked how the Soviets would respond if the United States refused to give up the Pershing 1A warheads, Obukhov replied, "We are here to negotiate."

The intermediate category comprises shorter-range missiles — those with a range from 300 to 600 miles, and so-called medium-range missiles — those with a range of 600 to 1,500 miles.

Shultz Says He Was Not Told

By JOAN MOWER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz testified today that other Reagan administration officials kept him in the dark about key events in the Iran-Contra affair, and he was "sick to my stomach" when he learned some of the details.

In riveting testimony at nationally televised congressional hearings, Shultz said he didn't know that American hostage Benjamin Weir's release from captivity in Lebanon came two days after Israel had sold U.S.-made weapons to Iran in September 1985.

He also said he first learned that the United States had sold weapons directly to Iran when he read about it in news reports published many months after the transaction took place.

Shultz made it clear that he and Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger vigorously told Reagan in December 1985 they opposed any plans to sell arms to Iran.

He described one meeting in the president's White House living quarters where Reagan asked for their opinion.

"So he (Weinberger) gave it to him and so did I," Shultz said.

But the secretary said that it wasn't until he told Reagan a year later that Lt. Col. Oliver L. North's private emissaries were discussing obtaining the release of terrorists imprisoned in Kuwait that "I finally felt that the president deeply understands that something is radically wrong here."

Shultz spoke in a somber voice that belied the astonishing nature of his testimony, but he occasionally allowed a wry sense of humor to show through.

"I hardly know Col. (Oliver L.) North, although like everyone else in America I feel like I know him well by now," Shultz said of the former National Security Council aide who was the star witness at the hearings for a week.

Under questioning from Senate lawyer Mark Belnick, Shultz denied repeatedly that his ignorance about the Iran arms deal stemmed from a desire not to know the facts — as former National Security Adviser John Poindexter testified earlier.

He said he once told Poindexter he wanted to "be informed of the things I needed to know" to carry out his responsibilities as secretary of state.

He said he told Poindexter that he didn't want to know all the operational details, but "that doesn't mean

No Heat Relief In Sight

By The Associated Press

It didn't get any hotter over most of North Carolina, but it didn't get any cooler, and forecasters predicted the latest hot spell would continue to bake the state through the weekend.

Temperatures hovered over the century mark for the third day in a row over much of the state, with highs of 100 degrees or more reported in Goldsboro, Wilmington, Jacksonville and Kinston. Fayetteville topped the state at 102 degrees.

"It looks like it's going to continue," said Philip D. Duncan, a weather specialist with the National Weather Service at Raleigh-Durham Airport, which recorded a season-high of 99 degrees for the second day in a row.

Forecasters had hoped that a weak cool front centered over Virginia would move into the state Wednesday, moderating temperatures a few degrees and perhaps bringing some showers. But a strong dome of high pressure remained stalled over North Carolina, preventing the front from passing through.

"The high-pressure system is the dominant weather feature over the southeastern U.S., including North Carolina," Duncan said. "Instead of moving, it's sort of built back."

"That's really what's keeping us high and dry here — high in temperature and dry in weather."

Forecasters predict high temperatures would surpass 90 degrees today through Monday, he said, with slightly lower temperatures and a small chance of afternoon and evening thunderstorms over the weekend.

In the Sandhills, growers are irrigating crops and poultry producers are using fans and mist systems to keep birds alive through the heat.

Bill Reece, agricultural extension director for Montgomery County, said farmers are trying to get fruit crops picked early in the day.

"It affects quality, plus it's better for workers. Most try to get it done as early as possible," Reece said. "When you're irrigating tobacco, you're at it night and day."

Fred Cumbo, superintendent of the Horticultural Crops Research Station in Clinton, said some farmers in Southeastern North Carolina are irrigating crops to make up for the lack

Man Charged With Murder

Pitt County deputies have charged a 36-year-old Macclesfield man with first-degree murder in connection with the Wednesday night shooting death of his girlfriend's son. Investigator Billy Vandiford said today.

Vandiford said Herbert Bryant of Route 1, Box 460, Macclesfield has been charged in the shooting death of Ronald E. Bland, 24, of Lot 39, River Road Manor, Greenville, in an incident reported at about 11:10 p.m.

Vandiford said Bland, who sustained wounds from a shotgun blast, was pronounced dead at Pitt County Memorial Hospital Wednesday night.

Investigators said Bland, who was involved in an argument with Bryant earlier in the evening, went with his brother, Michael, to Bryant's residence. After another argument the shooting occurred, according to police reports.

Vandiford said Michael Bland of Lot 31, Country Paradise, Greenville, then fired a shotgun at Bryant. Bryant, who suffered pellet wounds in the left shoulder and chest area, was listed in good condition at PCMH today.

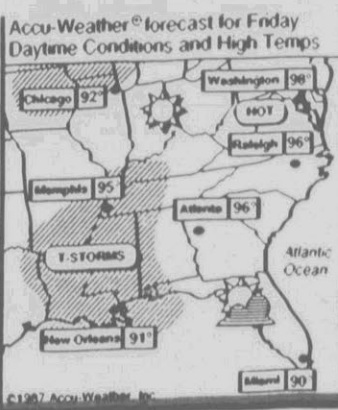

Vandiford said no charges had been filed today against Michael Bland.

Hospital Named Referral Center

Beaufort County Hospital in Washington, N.C., has been designated a nursery referral center for eastern North Carolina.

Babies in intensive care nurseries no longer in critical condition but too fragile to be cared for at home are referred to this intermediate-care facility.

For parents of these babies, this means shorter distances to travel to be with the babies than would be the case when they are in Chapel Hill or Durham, according to Dr. Dave Tayloe, a Washington, N.C. pediatrician.

"It's much easier and better, and we're very pleased with the program," he said. "To neonatal units across the state, it means freeing badly-needed space by transferring less critically ill babies to hospitals with state-accredited intermediate care nurseries, and feeling comfortable about it."

"Neonatal units are designed to take care of critically ill babies such as those who must be on respirators or be fed intravenously. But once they are over the critical period, they still aren't quite ready to go home. Most doctors like for a baby to weigh 4 1/2 pounds before it is sent home. Some babies could linger around for two or three weeks just trying to gain weight. This feeding and growing period can just as easily be done closer to home in a nursery referral center."

"We've upgraded our nursery by getting into this program," Amy Williams, the hospital's assistant administrator of patient services, said. "The hospital had to meet certain criteria required by the state. Representatives from the N.C. Human Resources Commission assessed the hospital nursery, read the policies and procedures manual and made recommendations for changes, equipment needs and the continuing education of the staff."

A registered nurse is on nursery duty around the clock and a board-certified pediatrician is available 24 hours a day, seven days a week. An additional heart and respiration monitor was added to the nursery's equipment.

Support Offered

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Conservative columnist William F. Buckley defended in court the honesty and techniques of author Joe McGinniss, who is being sued by a former Green Beret officer convicted of murdering his family.

In his $15 million lawsuit, Dr. Jeffrey MacDonald claims McGinniss violated a contract between the two by using improper techniques and lying to him to gather information for the best-selling book, "Fatal Vision."

The book says the jury correctly convicted MacDonald, the former Green Beret captain and head of emergency services at St. Mary's Medical Center in Long Beach, of murdering his pregnant wife and two daughters in 1970.

MacDonald maintains he is innocent.

Buckley, a political commentator who has written more than two dozen books, testified Wednesday he has known McGinniss since 1969 and considers him a "ferociously honest" author who follows his conscience.

Buckley defended the methods used by writers he called "investigative artists" to uncover the truth, saying to restrict them could destroy the publishing industry.

"I don't think people will read a book if it mechanically reflects a formula arrived at before the book was written," he said. "One would feel it was a turn into the mold of the Middle Ages."

MacDonald's attorney, Gary Bostwick, asked Buckley what he would do if he were working on a biography of Sen. Alan Cranston and learned the California Democrat had a second wife in Florida.

Buckley said he would suspend moral judgment to get Cranston to provide more details.

"I shouldn't think an author ought to take on the job of passing moral judgment," he said. "That's such an elemental technique. Talk to the subject and acknowledge that domestic life can be difficult."

Buckley also said he would not reveal to his subject his knowledge of the person's wrongdoing.

"The whole relationship could end and the project be aborted," he said.

Nofziger Enters Innocent Plea

By JAMES ROWLEY
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Former White House political director Lyn Nofziger pleaded innocent today to charges he violated federal conflict-of-interest laws by lobbying his former Reagan administration colleagues on behalf of Wedtech Corp. and other private firms.

Nofziger's plea of innocent to each of the six counts in the indictment was entered by his attorney, Paul L. Perito, during a brief appearance before U.S. District Judge Thomas A. Flannery.

Nofziger's business partner, Mark Bragg, also pleaded innocent to the only charge contained in the indictment against him, of aiding and abetting Nofziger's alleged violations of the Ethics in Government Act.

Flannery, who released both men on their personal recognizances, scheduled a trial for both defendants on Nov. 16. Independent counsel James McKay estimated it would take several weeks to present the prosecution's case.

Nofziger was accused last week of improperly profiting from his "political influence and reputation" in the administration while lobbying for several firms, including Wedtech

Corp., a New York City defense contractor engulfed in a scandal that has touched Attorney General Edwin Meese III.

After the six-count indictment was unsealed last Friday, Nofziger said it "comes at the expense of justice and fair play."

"I am not a felon," Nofziger told reporters. "If the independent counsel wants my scalp, he will have to get it the old-fashioned way."

Nofziger's lawyers said the lobbying was done only after an attorney advised it would not violate the ethics law.

The defense also said it would challenge the constitutionality of the ethics law provisions under which McKay was appointed by a special court to investigate the case.

McKay's mandate since has been expanded to include an investigation of Meese's dealings with Wedtech. Four top Wedtech executives pleaded guilty to influence-peddling and bribery charges.

The charges against Bragg and Nofziger, who was President Reagan's assistant for political affairs from 1981 until his resignation a year later, stem from Wedtech's successful effort to get a $32 million no-bid contract to build small engines for the Army.

Nofziger, who received thousands of shares of stock in the company, began lobbying for Wedtech shortly after he left the White House and went into business with Bragg.

The indictment revealed that Nofziger wrote Meese on behalf of Wedtech in April 1982.

The lobbying occurred within a one-year period established under the ethics law during which former government officials are prohibited from contacting former administration colleagues on behalf of private clients.

The indictment also charges Nofziger lobbied the White House on behalf of Fairchild Industries, which sought more orders for its A-10 anti-tank plane.

He is also accused of lobbying the White House on behalf of the National Marine Engineers Beneficial Association, an AFL-CIO-affiliated union that sought more civilian jobs on government-owned ships.

Nofziger is the second of Reagan's former aides to be indicted by an independent counsel.

Former Deputy White House Chief of Staff Michael K. Deaver is scheduled to go to trial Oct. 19 on charges he lied to a federal grand jury and a House subcommittee about his lobbying business.

Deaver's attorneys have mounted a so-far unsuccessful challenge to the constitutionality of the independent counsel law. A similar challenge also is being waged by lawyers for former National Security Council aide Lt. Col. Oliver L. North.

Meese has denied any impropriety in his dealings with Wedtech or E. Robert Wallach, a longtime friend who was paid more than $1 million to be a lobbyist for the company.

Three years after Wedtech won the contract, Wallach introduced Meese to San Francisco investment manager W. Franklyn Chinn, who was a Wedtech consultant who later sat on the company's board of directors.

Meese invested more than $50,000 with Chinn, who turned a profit of nearly $40,000 in 19 months, mostly as a result of highly speculative one-day stock trades. Attorneys for Meese say none of the money was invested in Wedtech.

Meese denies receiving any money from the company.

Lack Of Insurance Viewed As 'Patient Dumping' Key

JILL LAWRENCE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government could reduce "patient dumping" by enforcing its own laws, medical experts told a House panel, but they stressed that hospitals will keep turning away the poor until someone pays for their care.

"The real problem is that people have no insurance," Judith Waxman, an attorney with the National Health Law Program, said Wednesday at a hearing called by the House Government Operations subcommittee on human resources and intergovernmental relations.

No matter how many loopholes are closed, she said, "many hospitals will go to great lengths to avoid treating people who have no insurance... Unfortunately, horror stories will continue to occur until there is some kind of universal coverage."

Dumping occurs when a hospital emergency room refuses to treat a sick or injured patient, transfers the patient to another hospital, or subjects a patient to such a long delay that he finally leaves.

One witness said 250,000 emergency patients are transferred each year for economic reasons. Others noted that 37 million people in the United States lack medical insurance and that hospitals provided charity care worth $7 billion last year. They said the federal government should either help those hospitals or make sure individuals are covered.

Among the horror stories presented to the panel:

—Zettie Mae Hill of Somerville, Tenn., a retired textile worker, said her diabetic neighbor, a young carpenter, was physically removed from an emergency room and left in the hospital parking lot after an ambulance had brought him there on doctor's orders. She called the hospital and was told the man wasn't admitted because he had unpaid medical bills. He died the next day.

—Jesse Green of Brooklyn, N.Y.,

said his roommate, Iva Boyce, a TWA flight attendant, became ill while on strike and had no insurance. Green took Boyce to a hospital built under a federal program guaranteeing care to the poor. But the hospital refused to admit Boyce, although his temperature was 105.8 degrees, until lawyers intervened. Boyce had advanced tuberculosis. He is much better now.

—Waxman said a Fredricksburg, Va. woman went into labor at 6½ months, but her local hospital said she had no private doctor and told her to go to a hospital two hours away. Her baby was born there and died a few minutes later. The doctor said earlier treatment could have stopped the premature labor.

In a statement distributed at the hearing, Jack W. Owen, executive vice president of the American Hospital Association, said inappropriate patient transfers are "signs of a health care system under financial stress."

But he said some transfers are justifiable and in fact necessary to get patients the best care.

Several witnesses criticized the Health Care Financing Administration for dragging its feet on a 1986 law that bars the transfer of medically unstable patients. Violators can be fined up to $25,000 or suspended from the government's multibillion dollar Medicare program.

Rep. Fortney "Pete" Stark, D-Calif., the moving force behind the law, said HCFA hasn't proposed any regulations and has received only a handful of complaints.

"With 6,000 hospitals in the United States, it just boggles my mind," he told the subcommittee. "People don't know where to go. There's no 911. There's no place for families to go to complain."

HCFA administrator Dr. William Roper countered that his agency already is taking action against violators and working with hospitals to make sure they understand the law.

"This is an important provision of the law that we take very seriously and we are enforcing it vigorously," he told reporters. "We've investigated 40 cases and issued eight notices of (Medicare) termination."

Espionage Trial Begins

By JOE TAYLOR
Associated Press Writer

QUANTICO, Va. (AP) — A Marine sergeant accused of giving U.S. secrets to a Soviet woman is guilty only of falling in love with the wrong person, says the father of Clayton Lonetree.

"He was just a victim of being a human being," Spencer G. Lonetree said Wednesday during a break in preliminary proceedings for his son's court-martial at Quantico Marine Corps Base. "He fell in love with a woman."

Lonetree, 25, of St. Paul, Minn., a former embassy guard in Moscow and Vienna, is the first Marine ever tried on espionage charges.

He is accused of providing Soviet agents with classified embassy documents, identifying American intelligence officers assigned to the Moscow embassy, and fraternizing with a Soviet woman. The espionage charge carries a life sentence.

Most of the opening day was devoted to closed-door arguments on pretrial motions, including an effort by chief defense lawyer William Kunstler to delay the court-martial.

Kunstler contends that his client is being used as a scapegoat after going to his superiors and acknowledging an affair with a Soviet woman and that the information Lonetree allegedly passed did not merit being classified.

The defense also raised questions about possible ethnic prejudice against Lonetree, an American Indian.

Another defense attorney, Michael F. Stuhff, closely questioned the trial's military judge, Navy Capt. Philip Roberts, about his attitudes about Indians. Roberts, who grew up in South Dakota, where several tribes are located, assured the defense he had no bias against Indians.

The elder Lonetree said he did not at first think his son's background was significant, but he developed doubts as the case progressed. "We feel that this is a lot of fabrication on the part of the State Department and the Pentagon," he said of the charges.

Lonetree's mother, grandmother and aunt also attended, each carrying an eagle feather as a symbol of peace. An aunt translated the proceedings for the grandmother, who speaks only Navajo.

About a dozen Native Americans sang and chanted in Lonetree's support outside the base headquarters.

Lonetree was the first Marine arrested in a spy scandal at the embassy in Moscow.

The most serious charges, that he allowed Soviet agents inside the embassy, were dropped May 15 after Cpl. Arnold Bracy, another former embassy guard, recanted a statement implicating Lonetree. Charges against Bracy, 21, were dropped for lack of evidence.

Lonetree has been held in solitary confinement for eight months awaiting trial.

Former Player Surrenders

CHICAGO (AP) — A former college basketball player who left Creighton University because he said he couldn't read or write surrendered peacefully to police today after barricading himself in a downtown motel, police said.

Deputy Police Superintendent Joseph Mayo identified the man as Kevin Ross, who left the Omaha, Neb., school and attended a remedial program at a Chicago grade school run by noted educator Marva Collins.

Mayo said Ms. Collins was brought to the scene and had aided police in convincing Ross to surrender after several hours in the eighth-floor room of the Quality Inn Downtown.

Ross told police he had a gun, but no weapons were found in his room and no shots were fired, Mayo said. He said, however, that police had found two bullets in the room.

"He was in a lot of pain," Ms. Collins said at the scene after Ross surrendered. "He called me every hour on the hour at home last night."

She said he had been frustrated in his effort to get a job to earn money in order to finish his college education.

"I can understand and identify with his bitterness," Ms. Collins said. "He's a young man who's filled with pain and society is to blame for this."

Ross, 28, who averaged 4.2 points per game at Creighton, dropped out in September 1982, and enrolled in Ms. Collins' school.

More To Come

Groundbreaking for the state's first catfish processing facility (near Ayden) came sooner than expected in a not-so-long-ago assayal of new directions in North Carolina farming.

The plant will be equipped to process up to 2 million pounds of catfish a year ... a lot of catfish. The company's founder claims plenty of room for expansion and hopes of 250 (water) acres in production in three years.

He says their biggest problem to date has been an inability to meet demand for their product. "We've had to turn down business because we couldn't guarantee delivery of fish."

All-in-all, the Mid-Atlantic Fish Farms supplies catfish to restaurants in eastern North Carolina and as far west as Raleigh. The company is working to expand deliveries throughout both Carolinas and Virginia. Everybody from Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham to area supporters expect not only Pitt farmers but the entire county economy to benefit from the program.

U.S. Agriculture Department reports support that optimism with disclosure that production of farm-grown catfish was up from year-earlier levels last month. Over the first six months of 1987 production totaled about 138.7 million pounds, up 31 percent from January-through-June of last year. Average price paid growers was down only a little, from 68 cents a year ago to 64 cents in June.

The department's Agricultural Statistics Board says catfish imports in May (the most recent month available) totaled 688,000 pounds, up 7 percent from a year ago. Most imported freshwater catfish are from Brazil.

The fish farm enterprise in Pitt expects to have about 100 acres in producing catfish ponds by the end of the year. The new plant is designed to handle production from over 1,000 water acres and service growers within a 120-mile radius of Ayden.

Not only is Pitt County becoming involved in a new enterprise with a convincing record of growth, but it also holds a promise of more to come. We needed that.

Bits And Pieces

Knowledge of early mankind in the Western Hemisphere usually comes in bits and pieces; however, findings in northeast Brazil are telling us more about America's unwritten history than most experts might ever have guessed.

A recent wire service story reminds a long-standing theory has been that a nomadic race came to America from Asia not more than 35,000 years ago; and that is now challenged by a stone tool, fossilized bone fragments and teeth of extinct animals buried in layers of sediment in a remote northeast Brazil cave.

The bones were described as so old they could not be dated by the familiar Carbon 14 test, which can measure back almost 40,000 years; so a laboratory in France applied a more sensitive uranium-thorium method and came back with a date of 300,000 years old on tested materials.

Another cave was just as entrancing ... with primitive paintings of hunters, extinct beasts (including mastodons and cave bears).

The researchers say they have found what may be the world's oldest known astronomical observatory (evidence of purposeful reasoning).

Still another cave contained painting of suns, stars and comets as well as a drawing of red and black concentric circles believed to depict a supernova explosion of some 10,000 years ago. (Similar prehistoric drawings of the event have been found in Australia, we're told.)

Uncovering evidence humans may have lived in this hemisphere hundreds of thousands of years ago boggles the mind. Neanderthal people probably lived between 110,000 and 30,000 years ago; so we're dealing with perhaps as much as 200,000 years before that race made the scene.

For a country such as ours, with a history spanning only a relative handful of years, all this is heady stuff. The more we think we know, the more we find yet unknown ... and we have only barely scratched the surface.

Hearings Present Unhappy Sight

MEXICO CITY — Whatever else he may have said, Oliver L. North is certainly right on one point. The United States' enemies and allies, its friends and neighbors are all watching the congressional hearings on the Iran-Contra affair. What they are seeing, at least as viewed from Mexico and Latin America, is not a happy sight.

For those on the left of the political spectrum it confirms the worst suspicions about the United States: Its talk about democracy and the rule of law is simply a cover for anti-communist, interventionist aggression. For the pragmatic center, neither favorably disposed toward nor unduly prejudiced against the United States, it is a new chapter in the process inaugurated by the Vietnam War and furthered by Watergate, whereby many icons of American mythology — accountability, the rule of law, congressional oversight — have been progressively crumbling. And for the pro-American right it makes life exceedingly uncomfortable; the hearings have produced little to defend, let alone cheer about.

The hearings are being broadcast live, gavel-to-gavel, on cable television here, and are available elsewhere in Latin America through satellite transmission to those who have dish antennas. But most people are following the hearings through extensive coverage on the evening news and in the press, which are paying a great deal of attention to what North and Rear Adm. John M. Poindexter told the congressional committees. In the unfolding drama there is an irony that is not lost on Latin Americans, who are seeing their region's worst political vices reproduced at the very pinnacle of the U.S. government.

It used to be that the practice whereby military officers and civilian ideologues brazenly acknowledged violating their nations' laws and traditions, all in the name of a higher cause, was considered a Latin American custom. There is a time and place in many Latin Americans' memories when anti-communism, the higher cause, was the noble end that justified all means imaginable — and some that were unimaginable. The time was the 1960s and '70s; the places were Chile, Brazil, Argentina, Uruguay, Central America.

In many Latin minds there are indelible images of their countries' rulers arguing forcefully that the struggle against "communists and Soviet- and Cuban-inspired subversion" was a war in which there could be no quarter, a fight that could not be waged without dirtying one's hands. So, from a Latin perspective, the United States' new popular heroes seem eerily familiar — even if they did not contemplate a coup or have direct involvement in torture, repression and murder.

Yet, with these admittedly important differences, we are witnessing an American remake of an old Latin American script, whether in the outrageous version masterfully executed by North or in the subdued, serene, thoughtful role played out by Poindexter. Instead of an Argentine or Chilean general proudly justifying the "dirty war" against "subversion," we are hearing senior Reagan administration officials unabashedly say that they lied, misled Congress, destroyed evidence and kept the president in the dark about illegal acts, all in the name of the struggle against "communism in our hemisphere." And they are being applauded for it by sizable sectors of the American people and a substantial part of Congress.

The Vietnam War and the legacy of the past two decades — Watergate, the Church Committee hearings, the Carter presidency — led many outside the United States to believe, perhaps naively, that a lasting change had come about in the American political psyche. While few dared hope that traditional American anti-communism had disappeared, many expected that it could no longer be the definitive element of U.S. foreign policy, overriding all other interests. In spite of the 1980 election of a president who was well known even beyond the United States' borders for his virulent anti-communism, many thought that the American people would no longer accept going to war or disrupting the domestic rule of law in the name of an obsessive anti-communist crusade. The emerging cult of Oliver North — even if short-lived, more convincingly if lasting — has shown that while the first judgment was correct — Ronald Reagan has been able to fight in Central America to the last Nicaraguan, but not to the first American — the second was hopelessly premature.

After a long night of terror and evil, many Latin nations, particularly in South America, have concluded that suspension of the rule of law for the sake of anti-communism was wrong. There are many things that today's Latin America has to offer the United States, but the subordination of all legal and ethical means to political ends is not one of them. At a time when many Latin American societies are finally putting this view of the world behind them, they are seeing it flaunted as defensible patriotism in Washington. This is, from the perspective of many neighbors who share this hemisphere with the United States, an ironic and sorry state of affairs.

Death On A Roll In Nicaragua

'While political pundits speculate on the odds of another contra aid package becoming law, observers throughout Central America are troubled by the rising civilian death toll in Nicaragua and its limited impact on Americans.'

dispatch from Managua, reporting on a contra attack that killed three children and a pregnant woman. Times reporter Steven Kinzer noted this contra attack was now news since the Iran/contra hearings had focused renewed interest on the region.

Last month, while I was in Nicaragua, the contras killed 33 civilians, wounded 44 and kidnapped 39. Not a single one of these incidents was reported in the United States.

On June 18, for example, 13 civilians were killed, 20 were wounded and four were kidnapped in battles around the Los Millones cooperative in Chontales and near Muhan, in northern Nicaragua. A few days later, a Chilean volunteer, Manuel Lopez Ibanez, was murdered in a contra ambush while working with a Danish-sponsored university agricultural program.

Of course, these incidents are supposed to prove to Congress that the contras still have an offensive capability. But when I asked staffers in Daniel Ortega's office why they didn't do a better job of publicizing the civilian casualties, the incompetent Sandinistas only shrugged.

One thing the Sandinistas do understand is how quickly this war has escalated. Maj. Gen. Joaquin Caudra Lacayo, chief of the general staff of the Sandinista armed forces, acknowledged this fact last week when he reported that the contras had just received a "massive supply of anti-aircraft rockets."

Regardless of how much U.S. financial support the contras receive, there are few people, in Managua or throughout Central America, who actually believe they can overthrow the Sandinistas. As Eden Pastora, the former contra leader, observed last week in Costa Rica: "The contras are only those who serve as instruments for Washington's policy against Nicaragua." He likened the contras to "those who betrayed both the original revolution and the thought of hero Cesar Augusto Sandino, for whom the 1978-79 revolution was named."

This rank assessment of the contras is indicative of how off-base U.S. policy is in the region. But since democratic debate and participation in the decision-making process has not yet been a part of the Reagan administration, it's difficult for American citizens to learn what's really going on in Nicaragua.

The fact remains that the U.S. is rapidly losing its influence in the region. Just last week, Honduras and El Salvador reacted jealously to Washington's decision not to include them in its plan to provide amnesty to 200,000 Nicaraguans now living illegally (under Simpson-Rodino) in the United States. Similar discontent was expressed by a group of Costa Rican business leaders who denounced Washington's decision to penalize Costa Rica for its peace initiative by restricting its textile imports to the U.S.

The best result that could come of the Iran/contra hearings is a vigorous public debate on Central America that snaps America out of its Ollibander.

In the past, American policy in Central America has been predicated on unexamined premises and stereotypical positions. Everyone assumes the region is some place we've been before. For conservatives, it is Cuba in the 1950s; for liberals, it is Vietnam in the 1960s. Neither of these comparisons is accurate. Central America is small but by no means simple to understand. But cessation of the killing would afford policymakers a chance to view it with a clearer eye.

Strength For Today

Many of us have driven with people who know so much about automobiles that they constantly listen for squeaks and knocks and voice doubts about the ability of the car to get us to our destination. But somehow we always do get there, to the surprise of our mechanically well-informed friends.

To many people life is a series of squeaks and knocks. They are sensitive to anything of an annoying nature which happens in their vicinity. They are the first to hear gossip and pass it on. They are sure that all politicians are crooks. To them the church is a weak and moribund institution full of hypocrites and led by a group of insufferable bigots.

But somehow our human institutions, weak and imperfect as they are, help to get us through life. And the church, weak and imperfect as it is, will help us gain life to come.

Reagan Too Eager?

The president of a prestigious New England educational institution, who also happens to be a longtime observer of U.S.-Soviet affairs, worried the other day that President Reagan may be "too anxious" for a summit meeting with Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev. His point was that Reagan, his presidency in trouble because of the Iran-Contra affair, might be tempted to accept a flawed arms-control deal — or one whose full implications have not been thought through — in order to bring off a Gorbachev visit to the United States.

The administration dismisses such speculation. As one official said Thursday, "The president has made it clear that he'd like to have a treaty, and he would like to have a summit this year. But he's perfectly capable of walking away from it if he can't get the right arrangement."

The Soviets, however, are plainly trying to use the prospect of a summit meeting to squeeze concessions on arms reduction out of Washington. And with Reagan's mouth watering for a solid accomplishment during the final months of his troubled presidency, you have to wonder whether he is really immune to temptation.

It is self-evident that a summit meeting should be a means to an end — to put the final touches onto agreements for significant, verifiable arms reductions, for example — rather than an end in itself. In real life, however, things don't work out that way. There are too many people, here and abroad, who are so nervous about U.S.-Soviet tensions that they demand periodic summit meetings as reassuring proof that the two great powers are not on the verge of blowing up the world.

The sensible answer would be annual summit meetings, held without regard to whether the political weather is fair or foul. But neither side has been willing to take such suggestions seriously. U.S. presidents look on well-timed summits as plums that pay dividends in terms of domestic politics. And the Soviets, not being stupid, treat summits as bait to be dangled before salivating American leaders.

During his first four years in office, Reagan showed little discernible interest in summits or arms control.

The president, though, seemingly became sensitive to Democratic taunts that he was on the way to becoming the first president in 35 years who failed to meet one-on-one with his Soviet counterpart, and that he was deliberately sabotaging the arms-control process.

In any event Reagan has talked less about the "evil empire" during his second term, and has become visibly more interested in summit meetings and arms-control negotiations. In fact, the pattern has been for Washington to talk about the desirability of summits while Moscow has attempted to treat such meetings as a prize to be awarded for U.S. acceptance of Soviet arms-control demands.

The saving grace is that Gorbachev has seemed to have reasons of his own — including a desire to head off an unconstrained arms race in "Star Wars" and other high-technology weapons — to consider meetings with Reagan desirable. Twice now the Soviet leader, in the end, has been willing to drop the posturing and meet with Reagan without any important preconditions.

The first Reagan-Gorbachev summit meeting, at Geneva, was long on atmospherics but not much on substance beyond an agreement to meet again. The second meeting, held at Reykjavik last October, proved just how dangerous it can be for a president to wing it at an ill-prepared summit.

Reagan agreed to the Reykjavik summit on a few days' notice; the general expectation was that the meeting would be an informal preliminary event to a Gorbachev summit visit to Washington.

The two leaders, however, plunged deeply into substance. They agreed in principle to a 50 percent cut in strategic offensive nuclear forces and the removal from Europe of medium-range missiles.

To the shock and dismay of the European allies and our own Pentagon when they heard about it, Reagan went on to propose the elimination of all ballistic missiles over time, and Gorbachev trumped him by proposing that all strategic nuclear weapons be tossed into the garbage bin by 1996.

As it turned out, the preliminary agreements fell apart because of the dispute over Star Wars. But European leaders, who look on the U.S. nuclear deterrent as vital to their security, have not forgotten that an American president was so cavalierly prepared to turn a 30-year-old strategic doctrine on its head.

The Europeans were further irritated by disclosures that Reagan had been pursuing an arms-for-hostages deal with Iran at the very time that he was lecturing allied governments against compromising with terrorism.

The lingering European resentment and distrust have complicated U.S.-Soviet efforts to finalize negotiations on the removal of medium-range missiles from Europe. But the Soviets have said both publicly and privately that they want to pursue arms control now instead of waiting for Reagan's successor.

Several knotty problems stand in the way of a Euromissile agreement, but none seemed insurmountable until a few days ago when the Soviets seemed to switch tactics. Plans for a mid-July meeting between Secretary of State George P. Shultz and his Soviet counterpart petered out. Moscow has hardened the Soviet position while charging that Washington is to blame for blocking agreement.

Maybe Gorbachev no longer wants a summit — or an arms-control agreement — because the Politburo has decided that the Democratic-run Congress, faced with a weakened president and terrible budget pressures, will slow or cancel ongoing weapons programs without requiring any reciprocal action by the Soviets.

It is more likely, though, that the Soviets are simply gambling that, with Reagan so obviously needing a diplomatic victory to repair his damaged prestige, they need only wait him out in order to extract concessions on safeguards against cheating and other unresolved issues.

The Russians may turn out to be right. But if Reagan stands firm and time runs out on his presidency, it will also run out on any chance of significant arms-control negotiations before 1990, the second year of a new administration.

If Gorbachev runs his bluff much longer in the face of that prospect, the world will be entitled to conclude that his expressed interest in arms control has been a con game all along.

Creditors Frustrated After PTL Meeting

By DAVID REED
Associated Press Writer
COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Some PTL contributors who have invested money in the ministry's building projects, including two hotels and a water park, walked away from a U.S. Bankruptcy Court creditors meeting dissatisfied with answers they got from PTL officials.

"He didn't tell us anything," said Barbara Zanesky, referring to PTL Chief Operating Officer Harry Hargrave. Mrs. Zanesky is a contributor whose husband, Bob Zanesky, is an attorney representing 250 contributors.

The six-hour meeting Wednesday marked the first time creditors had a chance to question ministry officials. The normally routine court procedure was moved to a movie theater to handle the crowd of some 150 creditors and spectators.

PTL, which stands for Praise the Lord or People That Love, filed for protection from creditors in U.S. Bankruptcy Court on June 12, saying it owed $72 million to 1,400 people or businesses. Hargrave revised the debt total to $68 million Wednesday.

Hargrave told the creditors it would be wiser financially for PTL to hold on to its excess land, buildings and non-profit ministries rather than selling assets to pay off debts.

"Our intent is to operate at better than break-even instead of liquidating real assets," Hargrave said.

He said development of land is a great asset to the ministry because land value will increase in the future as nearby Charlotte, N.C. grows and suburbs in the Fort Mill area continue their growth.

The television ministry and Christian theme park in Fort Mill is nearly breaking even and should turn a profit within a few months, Hargrave said. The profit-making operations and non-profit operations "feed on each other" and should remain intact if the ministry is to survive, he said.

"We are a service ministry. If we stop ministering we will have no revenue. There has to be a balance; you can't close something down simply because it doesn't make money," Hargrave told creditors.

When the floor was finally opened for questions from contributors and others in the audience, she fired questions at Hargrave on the financial stability of the ministry, the compensation for partners, and the status of building projects.

"What has happened that the crowds have gone away from PTL and what is in the plan to fill up the hotel?" said Ms. Grey, of Richland, N.C.

When asked by Court Clerk George B. Cauthen, who presided over the meeting, to lower her voice, Ms. Grey said "I can speak even louder, because I'm upset."

Ms. Grey, who has been a PTL partner for 10 years, also questioned why there were presently "no charismatic members on the board of a charismatic church." Under Bakker, she said, all board members were charismatic. PTL Chairman Jerry Falwell is a fundamentalist.

Ms. Grey said she will no longer contribute to PTL, and would like to see Bakker and the charismatic nature of the ministry restored.

Hargrave said the PTL contributors are the lifeline of the ministry and need to be dealt with fairly.

But he said he could not answer specific questions on the compensation plan for lifetime partners, who have donated at least $1,000 each to building projects, until the plan is completed in two to three weeks.

Neither Bakker nor Falwell attended the hearing. Bakker turned the ministry over to Falwell in March after a sex scandal and has been blocked from returning.

Some of the 120,000 to 160,000 lifetime partners say they are either creditors or owners of two hotels and a water park at PTL's Heritage USA theme park in Fort Mill because their donations paid for most of the construction in a time-share agreement.

Lifetime partners were offered free lodging for four days and three nights a year at the hotels along with other benefits for each $1,000 donation to building funds.

Hargrave repeated the ministry's position that the lifetime partners have no legal right to the property but said "morally we don't think it's right" to leave the contributors with nothing.

Hargrave also revealed Wednesday that former Bakker aide Richard Dortch wasn't removed from the PTL payroll until Tuesday. Hargrave said Dortch had been retained as a $13,500-a-month consultant, although Falwell said in April that Dortch was asked to resign his positions as PTL president and board member. Shortly before Falwell's April announcement, Dortch told viewers of "The PTL Club" television program that he was giving up his salary for a year.

Spending Plan Making Its Way Through Panels

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Dozens of instructions on implementing the fiscal 1987-79 budget have been reviewed by legislative subcommittees, an exercise in keeping with Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan's vow to involve more lawmakers in the process.

Sen. Aaron Plyler, D-Union, chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, said the accompanying multi-billion-dollar spending package should be ready for floor action soon.

without debate a provision shifting funds to pay former Lt. Gov. Green's salary from the Department of Administration to the Governor's Office.

Green, now an adviser to Republican Gov. Jim Martin, has a contract that pays him $329 per day. He has received over $140,000 since assuming his post in 1985.

Some Democrats have criticized the arrangement with Green, saying they have heard from him little or not at all although he is described as a legislative consultant. Martin has had little contact with lawmakers because he is not a lobbyist.

The panel postponed action on a provision to let the Department of Community Colleges change its formula for allocating funds because some lawmakers were concerned that elderly people attending classes without charge would find the courses had been discontinued in favor of others.

Department officials said that was unlikely, but Rep. Martin Nesbitt, D-Buncombe, told them to come back with assurances.

Among the provisions approved by other subcommittees were requirements that:

- Any executive branch department that undergoes reorganization make a report to the Legislature.
- The Departments of Correction and Natural Resources and Community Development develop a plan for constructing a Youthful Offenders Forestry Program.
- The Department of Correction not transfer funds among line items in its budget or establishing electronic perimeter security systems at state prisons.
- The Highway Patrol not increase its fleet of 204 unmarked cars.

RALEIGH (AP) — Top statewide elections would no longer compete with presidential races for attention under a proposed constitutional amendment debated by a House committee.

The proposal introduced by Sen. Bill Martin, D-Guilford, and approved by the Senate would move elections for governor, lieutenant governor and Council of State positions to even-numbered, nonpresidential years. That would involve one six-year term in 1992 for those positions.

elections to odd-numbered years in 1985.

Warren agreed, saying, "I'm not sure what the voters were telling us but I think they were telling us they really don't want us tampering with the election cycle."

Rep. Foyle Hightower, D-Anson, said his main concern was that any governor, Democrat or Republican, would serve a six-year term. But Rep. Bob Hunter, D-McDowell, said that would be better than a two-year term or two three-year terms.

"We just felt like it would be less political and perceived in a better light," he said.

Purrington said the matter wasn't a partisan issue because it's never certain which party would benefit by running alongside a popular presidential candidate. And he said voter turnout would be higher under the current system.

But Rep. H.M. "Mickey" Michaux, D-Durham, said separating state and national elections would "heighten voter awareness."

"You put the both together, one is going to overshadow the other and you don't have an opportunity to really concentrate on the issues," he said.

Talk of terms started more debate among Democratic House members. Rep. Vernon James, D-Pasquotank, asked whether state lawmakers could be given four-year terms in the constitutional amendment, which would go before the voters in November 1988. And he proposed limiting governors to single six-year terms.

"I think we can easily have it to the floor by the end of next week," Sen. Aaron Plyler, D-Union, chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, said Wednesday.

But he and other legislators grudgingly acknowledged they probably would be unable to adjourn until the week after next, making this year's General Assembly session the first ever to last until August.

In past years, "special provisions" were written by the "supersub," the elite handful of legislators who compiled much of the budget in private.

Many lawmakers of both parties have complained that the leadership asked them to vote on the provisions — some written in legal jargon difficult to comprehend — with little discussion.

At Jordan's urging, the House and Senate agreed to send the supersub's recommendations to the subcommittees for review before the full committee votes on them.

Little was said about most of the provisions in Wednesday's subcommittee meetings, largely because most involved topics discussed in months of budget hearings.

The Appropriations Subcommittee on Education approved 30 special provisions, including instructions to eliminate standardized testing in first and second grades and to develop "developmentally appropriate individualized assessment instruments consistent with the Basic Education Program."

Sen. Lura Tally, D-Cumberland, said the testing provision was written to let the state Board of Education use funds provided for testing to develop a new test.

"The problem has been that all children in first and second grade aren't developmentally ready to take these tests," she said. "Some of them can't sit still that long."

Martin told the House Constitutional Amendments Committee on Wednesday the shift would help keep state issues from being submerged in national politics. But Republicans said it would subject the public to constant campaigning and could hurt voter turnout.

"No sooner would the presidential election commercials be over than the governors' election commercials would be on television," said Rep. Ray Warren, R-Mecklenburg.

Ward Purrington, legislative liaison for Gov. Jim Martin, said the governor believes the present system fosters the most voter involvement. He said the voters themselves had voiced opposition to changing election years when they overwhelmingly defeated a bid to shift statewide

CAR TALK

From Joe Cullipher Chrysler
Plymouth, Dodge, Peugeot

By James Phillips

NOISE MEANS TROUBLE

Not all car noises mean trouble, but it's a good idea to investigate any which happen to develop. Here's a brief checklist to help you identify some common noisemakers.

A light metallic engine tap or ping indicates pre-ignition, a condition usually caused by poor timing, abnormal heat, heavy carbon formation or low-octane fuel.

If a loud grinding noise is heard after starting the engine, chances are a jamming starter is at fault.

If there's a constant squeal under the hood, look for a tight fan belt. Or look for a loose fan belt if the squeal is only heard during acceleration.

A mysterious cracking or snapping sound often announces that the ignition cable insulation is dried out or leaky.

If a hiss or whistle has you puzzled, check for a loose spark plug or radiator pressure cap.

Opposition Wanes To Bill Limiting City Cost Sharing

©1987 Lowe's Companies, Inc.

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Prospects are good for passage of a once-controversial bill to clamp down on city funding of state highway projects, the sponsor said after a Senate committee unanimously approved it.

"I don't know of anybody who's opposed to it right now," Rep. Bob Hunter, D-McDowell, said Wednesday. "I think it's in good shape."

The Senate Transportation Committee, which had been regarded as a hotbed of opposition to the bill, endorsed it and referred it to the Finance Committee for what likely will be easy approval of a minor provision involving a fee. The measure is expected to reach the Senate floor next week.

The committee chairman, Sen. Bill Goldston, D-Rockingham, appeared to sum up the feelings of most members by saying he would vote for the bill reluctantly but didn't regard the issue as settled.

"I think there's more good than bad in this bill," Goldston said. "I support the purpose of the bill, the concept. But certain cities have needs, and ... if they're able to pitch in I think they should be able to."

He said the committee was influenced by the North Carolina League of Municipalities, the North Carolina Association of County Commissioners and the state Department of Transportation, which formerly opposed the bill but now support it.

Goldston said many of the lingering questions about highway funding and the transportation needs of urban and rural areas could be addressed by a study commission. He is sponsoring a bill to create the study group.

As originally written, the bill would have prohibited cities from making virtually any contribution to projects in the state highway system, drawing angry charges from urban lawmakers that the bill was a rural vendetta against municipalities.

But over several months, the measure was watered down enough to defuse most of the opposition. The House passed the revised version earlier this month.

The bill would:
— Establish a sliding scale for limiting city participation in right-of-way acquisition under which towns with populations of 10,000 to 25,000 could give 5 percent of the cost; cities of 25,001 to 50,000 could give 10 percent; cities of 50,001 to 100,000 could give 15 percent; and cities of more than 100,000 could give 25 percent.

— Prohibit cities from sharing the cost of road construction with the state. Cities could, however, pay the entire cost of a project if local voters approve a bond issue to raise the money. They could not pay for state road projects with money in their operating budgets.

— Allow cities to designate "corridors" in which development is off-limits for up to three years, after which the land must be opened to development if it is not purchased as a future road site. The provision is another designed to hold down right-of-way costs.

— Lets several cities continue to pay some of the costs of projects for which contracts already have been signed.

Supporters say the bill seeks to halt a trend in which cities are paying for ever-larger portions of highway projects in exchange for having the projects moved up on the Board of Transportation's priority list.

That is unfair to small towns, which cannot afford to share costs, Hunter said.

"All we're trying to do is make sure everybody in the state gets equal treatment," he said. "This was never an anti-cities bill; it's an all-cities bill."

Goldston said he still did not like the right-of-way participation ceilings. He said he preferred setting up separate urban and rural construction funds and limiting the amounts the Board of Transportation could allocate to each.

That way, he said, cities could spend as much as they want on road projects without jeopardizing state funding of projects sought by small towns.

Noting that cities had offered to share costs on projects designed to ease their worsening congestion, Goldston said, "We cannot ignore these needs. ... By holding down any section (of the state), we're not going to help the state as a whole."

Pit Bull Owners Turn In Animals

CHARLOTTE (AP) — About a dozen pit bull terriers have been destroyed by Charlotte animal control officers after their owners signed releases, city officials said.

All of the dogs were turned over by their owners after weeks of bad publicity about the breed's potential for attacking people, said Diane Quisenberry, animal control superintendent.

"Some have indicated to us that they no longer want the responsibility of owning that breed of dog," Ms. Quisenberry said Wednesday. "A lot of criminal and civil liability is attached to any kind of dog. But the publicity has brought it home lately to owners of pit bulls."

"If you're not ready to accept the responsibility, you shouldn't have the dog," she said.

Ms. Quisenberry said animal control officers also have snared about seven stray pit bulls or mixed pit bulls. Her staff, she said, makes every effort to find the stray dogs' owners before they are destroyed. Pit bulls or mixed pit bulls are not put up for adoption, she said.

Some strays, she speculated, were probably set loose by owners who didn't want to take responsibility for the dogs.

The breed has come under nationwide scrutiny since a 2-year-old California boy was killed recently by a pit bull. Subsequent television footage of a Los Angeles animal control officer being mauled by a pit bull added to the controversy.

In Charlotte, officials are discussing ways to strengthen the dog control ordinance enacted in 1985. That law came after a mixed pit bull attacked and killed an 18-month-old Charlotte child, Ms. Quisenberry said.

The ordinance says strong steps will be taken against a dog and its owner only after the dog demonstrates it is dangerous. It also requires dog owners to fence dogs on property near where children 7 or under are living.

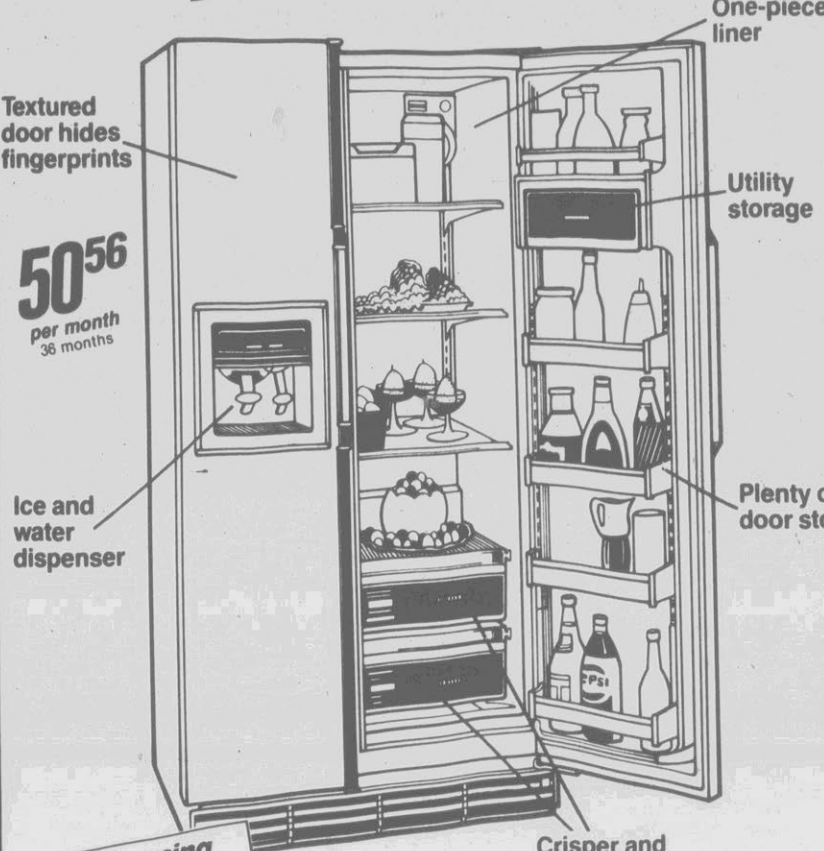

Ms. Quisenberry's office has received advice from the Humane Society of the United States and is in the process of contacting other cities with tougher laws.

Sheriff Sued

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — Cumberland County Sheriff Otis Jones and the executive director of the North Carolina Sheriff's Association have been named in lawsuits filed by First Union National Bank seeking repayment of money loaned to buy boats from a financially troubled boat dealer.

Jones and Howard Kramer arranged to purchase a boat from Hope Mills Boat and Motor Co., financed through First Union National Bank, about a year ago. That boat rolled down a hill at the dealership and into a train, so the two arranged to buy a second boat.

First Union claims it hasn't been repaid money for either boat and filed two lawsuits last week in Cumberland County District Court — one naming both Jones and Kramer and seeking repayment of a $28,000 promissory note dated May 28, 1986; and the other naming Jones only. The second suit asks for repayment of a $30,000 promissory note issued June 23, 1986.

District Attorney Ed Grannis Jr. said the suits are connected to a criminal case. Former Hope Mills Boat and Motor President Joseph L. Arrant, 46, pleaded guilty in Cumberland County Superior Court on July 9 to one count of embezzlement and seven counts of obtaining property by false pretense.

The money First Union is suing to collect was the subject of one of the felony charges, Grannis said.

Steamboat Raised

WILMINGTON (AP) — Parts of a 19th century paddle-wheel steamboat, retrieved from a muddy grave by state archaeologists, will be restored and displayed in a Wilmington museum.

Parts of the General H.G. Wright steamboat were reclaimed Wednesday as part of project organized by Richard Lawrence, a state underwater archaeologist.

"In their day, there were plenty of them, but it's not that often you find their remains," Lawrence told The News and Observer of Raleigh.

A barge crane on the Cape Fear River Wednesday lifted the steamboat's 8-ton boiler from a jungle of marsh grass and mud on the west bank of Eagles Island near the USS North Carolina Battleship Memorial. Then came the boiler's iron stands, the paddle-wheel frame, the two engines and other parts, each dripping with water and mud.

Steamboats evoke images of ladies in high bonnets and mustachioed scoundrels playing poker in velvet-walled saloons, but the Gen. Wright had a more humble past.

The Wright, built in Fayetteville in 1882, was used by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers to keep the Cape Fear River free of debris so the Corps could build locks and to dredge silt that could cause snags, which is why it and others like it were called "snag boats."

"It's really typical Model T stuff, so common that people didn't bother to save them or to record their lines, but they contributed so much," said Lawrence, who works for the Underwater Archaeology Branch of the state Department of Cultural Resources. "These are the types of crafts that would have been used to make the economy of Wilmington go."

Murder Trial

RUTHERFORDTON, N.C. (AP) — Wanda Shytle told a sheriff's deputy she shot her husband and two children and planned to burn the family's house because she was depressed and "had to do something."

District Attorney Alan Leonard rested his case Wednesday after the jury considering first-degree murder and assault charges against Mrs. Shytle heard the tape-recorded interview. Mrs. Shytle, 43, has pleaded innocent by reason of insanity.

A Rutherford sheriff's deputy recorded the interview hours after Ray Shytle, 45, and Eric Shytle, 11, were killed Dec. 11, 1986. Ronda Shytle, 15, suffered a superficial gunshot wound.

On the tape, Mrs. Shytle talks matter-of-factly but sometimes incoherently about the morning she tried to kill her family and herself at their home in the Shiloh community.

Helms Upset

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Jesse Helms, the ranking Republican on the Foreign Relations Committee, on Wednesday criticized President Corazon Aquino, saying she was ignoring the constitution of the Philippines.

"She had no authority to do so, not even in the cause of reform," said the North Carolina conservative.

"There is nothing in the Aquino track record to suggest that she is enamored with the democratic process," he added.

Helms rebuked the State Department and the CIA for "in effect, mounting a coup against an ally" by urging the departure of former Philippines president Ferdinand Marcos last year.

He called Marcos, who is now in exile in Hawaii, an ally and friend of the United States.

Helms added that he is asking the staff of his committee to analyze what he said was evidence of a "massive conspiracy" of electoral fraud in the recent elections held in the Philippines.

He concluded by saying he he was not making a final judgment.

"On the other hand, it is not too late for reform, for returning the Philippines to the democratic path which everyone hoped for," he said.

Helms spoke at an all-day conference on the Philippines sponsored by a private group called the U.S. Global Strategy Council.

He was followed by MacArthur Corsino, political officer at the Philippines embassy in Washington. Corsino conceded there had been some fraud in the May 11 election for the Philippine Congress.

Hahn Story To Run In In Playboy

MINEOLA, N.Y. (AP) — Jessica Hahn, the former church secretary at the heart of the PTL scandal, will tell all in the pages of Playboy magazine this fall, but she won't bare all, her lawyer said Wednesday.

"Absolutely not. Don't even think of that," said attorney Dominic Barbara, when asked if Miss Hahn would pose nude.

Barbara said the full story of Miss Hahn's sexual encounter with Jim Bakker, and the effort to keep the affair from becoming public, has not been told.

"Whatever one thinks of Jessica Hahn through past and present press reports, the person and story that will emerge are going to stun the country," he said at a news conference. Miss Hahn was not present.

Playboy was chosen, he said, because the "facts of this misunderstood story are tough and uncompromising. The details of this story cannot be easily summarized in a family newspaper."

Bill Paige, a spokesman for Playboy Enterprises, the Chicago-based company that publishes the magazine, said the article will appear in the November issue.

Neither Paige nor Barbara would disclose how much Miss Hahn was being paid, but the attorney said the total package of movie, magazine and book deals could bring her in excess of $2.5 million.

He said those ventures still were in negotiation, however.

Miss Hahn, meanwhile, was telling her story for a ninth day to an editorial team headed by Playboy executive editor G. Barry Golson and Los Angeles Times reporter Robert Scheer.

She will remain under the protection of bodyguards in an undisclosed location until the story is published, Barbara said.

Former Inmate Wants County To Pay Medical Tab

GRAHAM, N.C. (AP) — An Alamance County man who developed spinal meningitis while in jail on charges of failure to appear in court and nonpayment of child support in 1985 now faces a $99,783 hospital bill that the county is refusing to pay.

Donald Wayne Hill Jr., 29, of Graham, refused to pay N.C. Memorial Hospital in Chapel Hill for treating the disease. He filed suit against Alamance County, arguing the county was responsible for his medical care while he was a jail inmate.

"The hospital kept sending Mr. Hill all these bills, and we didn't think he owed them anything," his lawyer, Daniel H. Monroe, told the Greensboro News & Record.

Last October, an Alamance judge ordered Alamance County to pay his bills. But the county has appealed that ruling and now is fighting a second suit the hospital filed recently against Alamance and Hill.

Neither Hill nor Alamance County had medical insurance to cover his illness. "You cannot get medical insurance to cover inmates," Alamance County Attorney Chuck Kitchen said Wednesday. "It does not exist on the market."

Hill, who did not post a $1,500 bond when he entered the jail Nov. 19, 1985, was rushed to Alamance County Hospital on Thanksgiving Day, Nov. 28, after he complained his head hurt so badly that "it felt like it was going to fall off," according to his suit filed against the county last year.

A doctor at the Burlington hospital diagnosed spinal meningitis and transferred Hill to N.C. Memorial that day. Doctors there placed him on a respirator and performed surgery to drain fluid that had gathered in his head. "We had given him up for dead," said Hill's mother, Helen Harper of Mebane.

When Hill was released from N.C. Memorial six weeks later on Jan. 9, 1986, he moved in with Mrs. Harper and her husband, who had just been laid off from their food-production jobs. He has since moved to Graham and works as an account manager for an appliance rental agency. She said he has headaches now and then, and sometimes returns to N.C. Memorial as an outpatient.

"There is no way we could pay that bill," Mrs. Harper said Wednesday. "I don't believe legally we have to, and neither does he."

In Hill's suit against the county, Monroe cited two similar medical-care disputes involving Caswell and Lenoir counties in 1984 and 1985. In both cases, judges ruled in favor of the hospitals, requiring the counties to pay for treatment of their inmates.

John W. Stokes, a spokesman for N.C. Memorial, declined to discuss the case, but said the hospital rarely treats jail inmates. "Those people who receive care here, or their sponsors, are expected to pay for that care," Stokes said.

Alamance officials, apparently trying to avoid paying for Hill's treatment, won a release order that reduced Hill's $1,500 bond to an unsecured bond as he was being treated in the Alamance County Hospital emergency room, Monroe alleges in the suit against the county.

"He was unconscious, and couldn't sign it," Monroe said.

Prison Work Said On Schedule

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Emergency legislation enacted this year is helping to reduce prison crowding, but lawmakers should not become complacent about correction problems, officials say.

Skip Capone of the state attorney general's office said construction and renovation work would go a long way toward answering four lawsuits spawned by crowded prison conditions.

"There has been dramatic changes made not only in the Piedmont area but throughout the prison system," he told the House Correction Committee on Wednesday.

However, lawmakers should not be lulled into a sense of false security, Capone said. "We are going to face some serious problems as we continue," he said. "The AIDS problem in prisons is going to be a real difficult one to deal with."

Capone said the General Assembly may need to revisit philosophical issues about what kind of criminals to imprison and how long sentences should run. And Bill Crews, deputy secretary of the Department of Correction, asked for more attention to prison alternatives.

"If this is not done, we are going to be forced to pay a higher price tag to build more prisons," he said.

Crews noted that the state prison population reached 18,053 in late March but, with the enactment of emergency rules, fell to 17,238 by May 18.

During that period, the state Parole Commission was empowered to release some non-violent prisoners early and the state stopped taking misdemeanants from county jails until the population declined.

Crews said that more more probation and intensive probation was granted as well, although that was not mandated. "Apparently the judges were sensitive to the needs of the sheriffs and the Division of Prisons," he said.

Now, however, prison populations are beginning to swell again, Crews said, adding, "We really are in uncharted waters and nobody is sure what's going to happen."

State Budget Director C.C. Cameron said work is on schedule for prison construction. "The project is running very smoothly," he said. "We expect to finish this entire project ... by the fourth quarter of 1988."

Cameron said construction should begin by September on support facilities at 22 sites for 37 dormitories and 2,500 beds. Work to improve ventilation, repair ceilings and make other renovations at 52 sites also has begun, he said, adding that all work should be completed within 18 months.

Papers Will Merge Staffs

RALEIGH (AP) — The News & Observer of Raleigh and The Raleigh Times, owned by the same company since 1955, plan to merge their news, sports and features departments, publisher Frank Daniels Jr. said Wednesday.

No reduction in personnel will take place and a time schedule for the staff merger has not been adopted, Daniels said in a statement. "By doing this, we are convinced that both newspapers will have greater resources to do their jobs," Daniels said. "As an example, instead of having two reporters sit through one meeting, we will be able to cover two meetings or events instead of one."

"By utilizing both staffs, we will make available to readers of The News & Observer and The Raleigh Times broader coverage each day," Daniels said.

Present plans call for the editorial pages of the newspapers to continue to be separate, Daniels said. The advertising and production departments of the two newspapers were combined in 1955, Daniels said. One year later, the circulation departments were combined, followed by the merger of the photo and library departments.

North's Legal Defense Fund Attracting Cash

By NORMAN BLACK
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than $1 million in public contributions have poured in to the Oliver North Legal Assistance Fund since the fired White House aide took the witness chair at the televised Iran-Contra hearings, fund officials say.

"It's just been an unbelievable response," said Phil Huff, one of the three fund trustees, all of whom are former classmates of North's at the U.S. Naval Academy.

"When Ollie began his testimony, we had $101,000 on hand," Huff said Wednesday, but contributions now have topped $1.276 million, with literally bags of mail still unopened.

"We've gained $250,000 the last two days in a row," Huff said. "We had 75,000 pieces of mail just after the first day of testimony. The bank that's handling the mail-opening and keeping track of the money had to hire 10 additional people to deal with the volume over the past seven days."

North, a Marine lieutenant colonel, became an instant celebrity and object of public fascination when he began testifying July 7 about his pivotal role in the Iran-Contra affair.

The former National Security Council aide was fired by President Reagan last November following the revelation that proceeds from the secret sale of U.S. weapons to Iran had been diverted to assist the Nicaraguan Contra rebels.

North still faces possible prosecution by Lawrence E. Walsh, the special independent counsel named to investigate the affair.

North testified before a joint House-Senate committee that he had set up the diversion because he thought he had President Reagan's authorization.

North's boss, former National Security Adviser John M. Poindexter, followed North to the witness stand and accepted responsibility for the affair, asserting he had never informed the president of the plan.

Poindexter, a Navy rear admiral, also was helped by his appearance before Congress, according to a trustee for his legal defense fund.

Retired Rear Adm. Clarence A. "Mark" Hill, one of the trustees of the Poindexter Defense Fund, declined Wednesday to say how much money had been contributed.

"But I will say the effect (of the hearings) has been overwhelmingly favorable. I've been absolutely inundated with mail at this point."

Hill said the trustees for Poindexter's fund were keeping secret the amount contributed for now because they didn't want to give Poindexter's attorneys an idea of his available resources.

"But we anticipate that any legal costs that are to be defrayed are certainly going to be in the six figures, and we think we're going to be able to meet the requirement."

According to Huff, who works as a defense consultant, the average donation to North's fund before his six days of congressional testimony was between $5 and $10.

"Now the average is about $40 per person," he said.

Both Huff and Hill said there had been no disbursements to lawyers for either North or Poindexter.

Huff said North had decided, however, that if any money remains in the fund after legal expenses, it should be donated to the Naval Academy Chapel Fund.

Eastern Two-Thirds Sweating It Out

By MICHAEL WOLCOTT
Associated Press Writer

Air-conditioner salesmen worked up a sweat and utilities reported record demand for electricity as a heat wave blamed for at least two deaths tightened its hold today on the eastern two-thirds of the nation.

"Real relief won't come until after Sunday," said Anthony Gigi, a National Weather Service meteorologist in Newark, N.J.

The high humidity and temperatures in the 90s to near 100 began late last week, with a stalled high pressure system in the Southeast pumping hot, wet air up from the Gulf of Mexico.

Residents in Ohio, Iowa and Maryland were asked to cut water use because reserves are evaporating, officials said.

Construction workers in Annapolis, Md., called it quits early Wednesday. "When you start seeing stars, you know it's time to hit the shade," said John C. Draffen.

The heat-humidity combination made it feel like more than 100 degrees in Iowa, wilting residents but sending corn and soybean plants skyward, said state climatologist Paul Waite in Des Moines.

Atlanta hit 100 Wednesday, its hottest day of the year. Baltimore's high temperature Wednesday was 96.

Chicago's high of 91 Wednesday made it the 13th day at or above 90 degrees there this month.

New York City had a high of 93 Wednesday, and the city rushed to install a shipment of 473 new fans in shelters for the homeless, many of which had no fans.

The Bethesda Mission in Harrisburg, Pa., requested donations of air conditioners for its women's and children's shelter, where several newborn babies are housed.

Authorities said heat was a factor in the death of a 44-year-old Bellwood, Ill., man who collapsed Tuesday in his car, and a 32-year-old man died Monday of heat exhaustion after he was found in a Lincoln, Neb., park with a body temperature of 108.9 degrees.

Hospitals in several cities reported an upswing in emergency room visits because of the heat.

Electricity for overworked air conditioners has been used at record rates so far this week in Virginia, Maryland, Delaware, Pennsylvania, Ohio, West Virginia, Iowa, Indiana, Illinois, North Carolina, New Jersey, New York, Wisconsin, the District of Columbia and Michigan. Some utilities have had to buy power from other states.

Maryland's Baltimore Gas & Electric asked customers to reduce their use of electricity Wednesday to help prevent outages, and at least two summer schools in the city shut down early Wednesday because of the heat.

Carriage horses that take sightseers through New York City's Central Park also were ordered off the job by city law when the temperature hit 90.

No such luck for air conditioner salesmen.

"The phones are ringing and business is doing very well," said Don Davis of RCI Discount Appliance Inc. The Manhattan store was having its best air conditioner sales since 1977, he said.

Employees worked overtime at Reiter Foods in Akron, Ohio, where ice cream sales are up 20 percent, said company president Rollin S. Reiter.

At the City Ice Co. in Janesville, Wis., Earl Schultz said demand for ice has been strong. "The only relief is when we go into the ice house," he said.

Meanwhile, South Lake Tahoe, Nev., had the afternoon low for the nation, 26 degrees.

Some Members Of Congress Irked By Reagan's Tendency To Veto

By MERRILL HARTSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has embraced his wife Nancy's "Just Say No" crusade in ways that irritate some in Congress and have students of the presidency talking about a "cry-wolf" syndrome.

During his meeting Tuesday morning with Republican congressional leaders in the Cabinet Room, Reagan privately delivered a "just-say-no" message on several major pieces of legislation.

In the briefing room not long thereafter, spokesman Marlin Fitzwater ticked off a triple-threat veto message from his boss: Reagan did not like — and likely would not sign — legislation on trade, banking and health insurance coverage for catastrophic illness.

Just for good measure, Fitzwater also volunteered that the White House has "some concerns" about a welfare reform bill sponsored by Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y.

That caused one reporter to ask: "Is the president afraid that he's going to spend his last days ruling by veto?"

Fitzwater replied, "No, the president looks forward to the skirmish and the details, that the Democrats are trying to force big spending plans on us, and he's ready to take them on."

Asked whether that meant confrontation had surpassed compromise as a White House strategy for dealing with Congress, he said, "I think the reality is that a Democratically controlled Senate is not too much in a compromise mood."

Reminded that he'd excluded the House of Representatives from that statement, Fitzwater quipped, "Well, the slap applies to both Houses."

Reagan last August cheerfully embraced his wife's "Just Say No" slogan as he launched a White House offensive against drug abuse, and he often cites those words — and ones expressing similar sentiment — in statements about his dealings with Congress.

"How to I spell relief?" he said to an audience recently. "V-E-T-O!"

But Reagan's increasing nay-say stance on legislation is causing predictable angst on Capitol Hill — and less predictable worries among presidential scholars.

Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., asked Wednesday about Reagan's chances of sustaining any veto of legislation to overhaul the savings and loan industry, said, "Apparently, the president is still engaged in his veto strategy and obstructionist policy, which is no policy at all."

"The president is so busy squaring off against Congress that there's no time for anyone to do anything," Byrd said. "He is leaving a negative legacy which history will not overlook."

In fact, Reagan has used the veto only 62 times in his 6½ years in office. He has been overridden eight times, although he lost two crucial fights this year. He failed to sustain his veto of a $20 billion clean water bill, and his veto of a $88 billion highway bill also was overridden.

President Gerald R. Ford, in contrast, vetoed 66 bills in his less than 2½ years in office, of which a dozen were overridden.

"There may be a law of diminishing returns (on veto threats)," said Arthur S. Miller, a law professor emeritus at George Washington University. "I don't recall ... a president who has threatened a veto as much as this president ... That could be counter-productive."

"I think it's sort of ... a cry-wolf thing, of threatening too much, of bullying, and then backing down. I would counsel him to be more selective," Miller said.

James Lundquist, a senior fellow emeritus at the Brookings Institution, a liberal-oriented Washington think-tank, said: "I think my impression over the years has been, the more such threats, the more likely that some of them will be heeded."

The Congress, he said, would have to worry about being seen by voters as abusing its power if "it continually slapped the president down. It cuts both ways."

Toshiba Ban Pushed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House is moving to ban Toshiba Corp. products from U.S. military exchange stores despite a national advertising campaign in which the Japanese manufacturer apologizes for selling secret submarine technology to the Soviet Union.

"To put it bluntly, many of our military personnel do not want these products in their stores," said Rep. Dan Daniel, D-Va., sponsor of the measure.

The House Armed Services Committee voted 31-0 for the bill on Wednesday in the latest in a series of angry congressional responses to Toshiba and Norway's state-owned arms manufacturer, Kongsberg Vaapenfabrik.

Administration Wants AT&T Controls Lifted

By DEBORAH MESCE
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is proposing to lift price controls on nearly all American Telephone & Telegraph Co. long-distance services and give local phone companies more flexibility in setting rates.

The National Telecommunications and Information Administration, in a report released Wednesday, said deregulation would spur competition in the telecommunications industry, bringing new products and services into the marketplace, and lowering prices for consumers.

"We believe over time rates will decline because there would be incentives to reduce costs," said Alfred C. Sikes, assistant secretary for communications and information at the Commerce Department.

But the Consumer Federation of America branded the proposal as "nothing short of a massive wealth transfer from the pockets of ratepayers to the pockets of shareholders."

The NTIA, a Commerce Department agency, is the administration's principal agency responsible for developing national telecommunications policy.

The Federal Communications Commission, which oversees AT&T's rates and thereby influences the prices of its competitors, is considering changing the way it regulates AT&T, the industry's long-distance leader. But the FCC is unlikely to go as far as the NTIA proposes.

Additionally, some 28 states have relaxed or lifted regulation of intrastate long-distance services and other states are considering taking similar action, the report said.

The NTIA proposes to lift regulation of competitive services, which it said would include all of AT&T's long-distance services except its toll-free, 800 service.

The agency also says states should lift controls on intrastate long-distance, mobile radio, paging and private line services as well as billing and collection services.

Rates for basic local phone service for residential and business customers probably would continue to be regulated, although in a different way, because there are no effective alternatives for those services.

The NTIA report criticizes the current "rate-of-return" regulation of AT&T and local companies, which allows them to pass along virtually all of their expenses to customers while still earning a profit on their investment.

"There are a lot of inflated costs that end up getting passed through the system," Sikes said.

The current approach engages regulators, companies and consumer groups in a "ritualistic game" in which companies routinely ask regulators for rate increases larger than they need and consumer groups propose increases that are too low, he said. Regulators wind up setting rates somewhere in the middle.

"I am convinced rate-of-return regulation serves only lawyers, accountants and rate specialists ... and the business reporters that follow what they do," Sikes said.

Sikes estimated that regulation costs consumers about $1 billion a year.

Youthful Aviator Eyes More Marks

By JAMES MARTINEZ
Associated Press Writer
FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — A 10-year-old pilot whose five-day flight made him the youngest aviator to cross the United States says his next goal is to circle the globe.

Christopher Lee Marshall and flight instructor Rowe Yates landed their single-prop Piper Warrior at Fort Lauderdale Executive Airport at 5:30 p.m. Wednesday. A strong tailwind helped the flight arrive nearly 90 minutes early from Meridian, Miss.

"The turbulence was fun — a little bumpy," the 4-foot-11, freckle-faced boy said as he clutched a teddy bear. "Next I'm gonna fly around the world."

Christopher, who hopes to be included in the Guinness Book of World Records, started his voyage Saturday in Oceano, Calif., his hometown on the coast 150 miles northwest of Los Angeles.

"We just sat back and drank Cokes and ate Snickers bars," Christopher said of his long flight, adding that he was at the controls the whole way.

Yates "only took it when I went back to get a candy bar or a Coke. I didn't let go," said Christopher, whose commercial pilot father, Lee Marshall, encouraged the flight.

But his mother Gail said she hadn't slept well during the journey, noting that the young flier is only 10. "He's my ... top gun, and I didn't want to lose him," she said.

Christopher is the second young aviator to make a bid for the record books this summer. John Kevin Hill, 11, of Arlington, Texas, and his flight instructor flew in hops from Los Angeles to a July 1 landing at Washington D.C.

Christopher was born with severe club feet and spent three years in leg casts. Mrs. Marshall said doctors predicted he would never walk, but two operations performed when he was 3 helped correct the condition.

The toughest part of the flight was Tuesday night, when storms reduced visibility to about 50 yards and forced an emergency landing at Key Field in Meridian.

Christopher's immediate plans are a Caribbean cruise, a visit to the Piper Aircraft plant in Vero Beach and a trip to Walt Disney World. He and Yates start their flight home on Aug. 4 to return in time for the start of his fourth-grade classes.

RECORD SETTING MOMENT — Christopher Lee Marshall, 10, of Oceano, Calif., emerges from the cockpit of a single-prop Piper Warrior airplane Wednesday after arriving early on his successful flight at Fort Lauderdale, Fla., Executive Airport. The flight makes Marshall the youngest aviator to cross the United States. Following his early arrival, the youth reportedly recreated the landing for photographers. (AP Laserphoto)

Late Changes Made To Gleason's Will

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Comedian Jackie Gleason changed his will the day before he died, decreasing his wife's share of his estate from half to one-third and increasing bequests to his two daughters and secretary.

The size of Gleason's estate was not listed in the will, and his attorney, Brian Patchen, declined to estimate its value.

Gleason, 71, died of liver and colon cancer June 24. A death certificate filed with the will in Broward Probate Court said death came two months after he was stricken with the liver cancer, but did not say when he contracted colon cancer, the Fort Lauderdale Sun-Sentinel reported today.

On June 23, too weak to sign his name, Gleason told Patchen and business associates Richard Green and Irwin Marks to amend the document, the attorney said. "It's a very amicable thing ... very straightforward."

Gleason decreased the share of his third wife, Marilyn Gleason, from half to one-third and raised the bequest for his secretary of 29 years, Sydel Spear of Hialeah, from $25,000 to $100,000.

The balance is to be divided equally by Gleason's daughters from his first marriage, Geraldine Chatuk of Los Angeles and Linda Miller of Santa Monica, Calif., each of whom was originally to receive a quarter of the estate.

Gleason did not provide for a stepson from his last marriage or any arts organizations or charities.

The star of "The Honeymooners" television series and several movies left his personal effects, including jewelry, clothing, art works and automobiles to his wife, the sister of choreographer June Taylor. Mrs. Gleason was also appointed executor of the will originally drawn up in April 1985.

Patchen said he has until early September to file an inventory with the court, which will estimate the value of the estate.

S. Korea Begins Storm Clean-Up; Toll Reaches 95

By M.H. AHN
Associated Press Writer
SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The defense minister called out the 600,000-man military today to help in rescue and rebuilding efforts following widespread flooding and mudslides that left at least 95 people dead.

Defense Minister Chung Ho-yong, issuing the unprecedented order, said, "All units ... except for some essential manpower needed for basic military operations and security, should assist in the rehabilitation work."

Thirty-two people were reported missing after Wednesday's fierce storm, the country's second weather disaster in a week.

Temples and schools were turned into temporary shelters for some of the 60,000 people left homeless by the tempest. The national Disaster Center in Seoul said 170 people were injured when the record downpour set off flooding and landslides in the central part of the country.

Officials said damage and casualty estimates were expected to climb since there were few details from areas cut off by flooded roads or poor communication.

The governing and opposition parties meanwhile temporarily suspended their efforts to draft a new constitution in order "to pay more attention to the flood damage."

A week ago, Typhoon Thelma lashed the southern coast with fierce winds and driving rain. Landslides and floodwaters engulfed villages and sank boats, killing 123 people and leaving 212 missing.

Wednesday's downpour dumped the country's heaviest one-day rain of the century — 22.5 inches in the village of Sochun, according to the Disaster Center. A tropical storm also swept over the southern provinces Wednesday, but did not drop much rain.

The torrential rains caused at least $22 million in damage, a center official said, speaking on condition of anonymity. Television showed vast residential areas and agricultural areas submerged in muddy water. Officials said about 27,000 acres of farmland were flooded.

A Disaster Center official said streams had stopped rising today and "the worst appears to be over."

Thousands of relief workers searched today through homes splintered by floods and landslides. South Korean and U.S. military helicopters alighted on flooded buildings to rescue people from the roofs. Other helicopters swooped over stranded villages to drop food and supplies.

Defense Ministry spokesman Brig. Gen. Lee Hung-shik said Chung's order calling out soldiers to aid storm victims was the first of its kind since the South Korean military was founded in 1948.

Chung, who assumed the top defense post 11 days ago in a Cabinet shakeup, said some units may have to bivouac in flood-stricken areas until the clean-up work is concluded. The minister also granted a special seven-day leave of absence to all soldiers from the flood-hit zones, so they could help rebuild their towns.

Rainfall received in the area during the past three days amounted to half the annual average. Hardest hit were 12 counties along the Kum River, whose upper streams overflowed, sending thousands of people in downstream areas fleeing to high ground, officials said.

The governing and opposition parties said they would temporarily suspend political activities, and call National Assembly committees into session next week to discuss relief measures.

Officials of the governing Democratic Justice Party and the main opposition Reunification Democratic Party said they would ask the government to prepare a supplementary budget to finance recovery projects.

Among the activities cancelled was a government party's meeting scheduled for Saturday at which its chairman, Roh Tae-woo, was to have formally succeeded Chun as party head. Chun is leaving the position as part of an attempt to keep the government neutral in presidential elections later this year. Roh is the party's presidential candidate.

Chun agreed this month to political reforms, including direct presidential elections, after sustained nationwide protests.

Rail service from Seoul to the south was restored today and the main cross-country highway from the capital to the southern port of Pusan was reopened after repairs.

Electrical power service was being restored, but some regions still faced major outages and disruptions.

In Seoul, authorities said 4.3 inches of rain had fallen Tuesday and Wednesday, causing two storm-related deaths. There were no reports of major problems in the city of 10 million people.

Amazon Indians Kill Bishop, Nun

By FERNANDO LARENAS
Associated Press Writer

QUITO, Ecuador (AP) — Amazon Indians using bows and arrows killed a bishop and a nun who had tried to convert them to Christianity, according to Roman Catholic Church authorities.

The bodies were discovered Wednesday in a remote oil producing area of the jungle, said a high-ranking member of Ecuador's bishops' conference.

The victims were identified as Bishop Alejandro Lavaca Ugalde of the Aguarico diocese, a Spaniard, and Sister Ines Arango of the Capuchin order, a Colombian.

A helicopter pilot had left the two in the region about 150 miles northeast of Quito on Monday. He made the discovery when he returned to pick them up, said the churchman, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

He said there was no immediate indication as to why the natives of the Aucas tribe killed the missionaries.

Some Aucas have converted to Christianity and adopted Western customs, but many others live deep in the jungle and are protective of their traditional lifestyles.

The churchman said Lavaca had spotted a group of about 10 Aucas on Monday while flying over the jungle and dropped them gifts. The pilot touched down and left the missionaries with the Indians.

"As on other occasions, before contacting primitive natives, Father Lavaca would first drop from the air gifts to gain the friendship of the natives," the church source said.

The bishop had worked for several years among the Aucas and had been in Ecuador for about 20 years, he added.

The government estimates 30,000 Indians live in the Ecuadorian Amazon region.

U.S. Seeking Pakistan's Reassurance On Weapons

By GENE KRAMER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pakistan should reassure the United States with evidence as well as words that it is not planning to make atomic weapons, both the Reagan administration and Democratic legislators say.

The latest in a series of attempts to export to Pakistan material usable for nuclear weapons threatens rough relations and requires "tangible evidence" that Pakistan's nuclear program is solely for peaceful purposes, Assistant Secretary of State Richard Murphy told a Congressional panel Wednesday night.

A U.S.-Pakistani break could ruin hopes for an early Soviet pullout from Afghanistan, Murphy said, but "clearly the outcome depends to a very large degree on Pakistan's response" to U.S. demands on the nuclear issue.

"We wish to believe the assurances of a good and deserving friend such as Pakistan," that it does not plan to make nuclear weapons, Murphy said.

"But under present circumstances," he added, "these assurances must be backed up by tangible evidence that their actions are in line with stated policy. Only on that basis can the mutual confidence which has underlain our relationship be fully restored."

The administration "has not been sitting on its hands" since the arrest by undercover agents in Philadelphia two weeks ago of a Pakistani-Canadian charged with bribing customs officers in the illegal export attempt, Murphy said.

The American ambassador in Islamabad has received assurances from top Pakistani officials that "this was an unauthorized activity, the government is prepared to take the investigation wherever it leads, and heads will roll" if necessary, he added.

"Despite our best efforts, Pakistan has proceeded to the threshold of nuclear weapons possession, India remains similarly poised at the brink. This is a critical moment for South Asia," Murphy said in the administration's strongest recent statement on the situation.

"Tangible evidence," he said under questioning, means that the United States expects Pakistan to punish its nationals attempting to get illegal shipments of speciality metals usable to make centrifuges to enrich uranium to weapons grade, to end "their relationship with the government if there is one, and provide assurances that it will not happen again."

In addition he said, Pakistan needs to gain "a broader understanding in the international community of its nuclear program ... a way to assure the international community that it is a peaceful one."

The problem would not exist if Pakistan had agreed to international inspection and had signed the non-proliferation treaty, he said. Pakistan refuses to take these steps unless they are agreed to by neighbor India. India, which exploded a nuclear device in 1974, also refuses because its other major neighbor, China, has atomic weapons.

Murphy and lawmakers agreed the nuclear issue had created a foreign policy dilemma for the United States because of Pakistan's vital role in caring for more than three million Afghan refugees and funneling aid to the anti-Soviet guerrillas.

Witnesses pointed out at the joint hearing of the House of Representatives Asian-Pacific and international economic policy subcommittees that a 1985 American law requires a cutoff of aid to a country illegally receiving U.S. material usable for atomic weapons. In addition, a six-year-old waiver is due for renewal at the end of September under another law allowing Pakistan to draw U.S. aid despite uninspected nuclear facilities.

Foreign Affairs Committee Chairman Dante Fascell, D-Fla., and economic policy subcommittee Chairman Don Bonker, D-Wash., in a joint open letter asked President Reagan to suspend temporarily military and economic assistance to Pakistan to provide time for reviewing with its leaders "the future direction of our relations and of our mutual security interests in South Asia."

During this time, they said, "Pakistan should make good its pledges of peaceful intent in the nuclear field with actions in order to restore U.S. faith..."

Texasgulf Talks

BRIDGING THE GULF

Welcome to the first edition of Texasgulf Talks, a periodic report from Texasgulf Chemicals Co. at Lee Creek.

We bring this to you because we are concerned that part of our name has become too literal, that a gulf has developed between our company and the rest of the community. The gulf is one of misunderstanding. We are a good corporate citizen — providing jobs, contributing to agriculture and the welfare of the community, ensuring the safety of our workers, protecting the quality of the environment. But we realize that we have not done enough to keep you informed of what we do and how it affects you.

Now we want to bridge that gulf, in part with this forum. Here you will find news about how we operate and why. We'll share some of our daily triumphs, and we'll tell you of our concerns. We'll be open with you in hopes that you will be open to hear what we have to say and to accept our good-faith effort to become a better neighbor.

Perhaps no area concerns any of us more than the environment. Rest assured that Texasgulf is doing its part to maintain the clean air and water necessary for the health and well-being of our community. We make protecting the environment the responsibility of each and every employee. Constant monitoring of the air and water is a daily activity, and we intend to keep it that way. After all, we don't just work here, we live here.

We feel a similar concern for the safety of our workforce. All accidents are preventable, and we intend to prevent them. Our goal is to eliminate all injuries and all situations that may cause an injury. We are committed to protecting our most valuable resource — our employees.

In other articles today and in the months to come, we'll tell you more about our company and our people. We hope this will help build a bridge between Texasgulf and you.

Vice President-Production, Phosphate Operations

SAFE AND SOUND

Commissioner John Brooks recently presented the N.C. Department of Labor's 1986 award for outstanding on-the-job safety to the Mining Section of Texasgulf's Lee Creek operation. Jack Hird, Mine Manager, accepted the award on behalf of the employees in Mill, Mine, Dredging and Reclamation, and Maintenance-Mining. The Mill Department and Maintenance-

Mining Department, both of the Mining Section, have completed 11 and five years respectively without lost-time injuries.

The Engineering Services Group and Environmental Control Department each have records of 19 years without a significant accident. The Fertilizers Department has gone six years without a significant accident. The "B" shift crew of the Phosphoric Acid Department has a record of six years without an injury requiring a doctor's care, and in March the entire Phosphoric Acid Department finished one year without a lost-time accident.

WATER QUALITY

Water quality of the Pamlico River is an area of vital concern to all of us. For the past 20 years, Texasgulf has funded a study by various university scientists. This study involves collecting and analyzing water samples from 20 test stations from Washington to the mouth of the Pamlico Sound. Each sample is analyzed for 17 different measurements that the scientists believe are significant for water quality.

Currently, Dr. Donald Stanley, senior scientist with the Institute for Coastal and Marine Resources at East Carolina University, is compiling a detailed report on this 20 years of work. Data collection began in 1965, one year before Texasgulf began full scale mining operations at Lee Creek.

We believe that through this type of effort, scientific knowledge can be applied to the management of the river. In addition, the scientists will be able to address some of the concerns about the river which have been expressed. More about the results of this study will be in future articles.

Soldiers Fire At Reporters During Rally

butts and firing shotguns at others, witnesses said.

No serious injuries were reported. Thirty to 40 people were arrested at the demonstration Wednesday, including a stringer for the Voice of America, witnesses said. The incident marked the fourth time soldiers shot at reporters since anti-government strikes broke out in this poor Caribbean nation a month ago.

The demonstrators gathered outside city hall near the waterfront and denounced Port-au-Prince Mayor Franck Paul.

Soldiers, who for several days have let anti-government rallies take place without intervention, arrived and shot tear gas canisters into the group, dispersing the protesters.

Jean-Max Blanc, a reporter for Radio Metropole and a local stringer for the Voice of America, was struck with a rifle butt, handcuffed and arrested, station manager Richard Widmaier said. The reporter remained in custody Wednesday night.

The station manager said the military accused of Blanc of attacking a soldier and trying to seize his rifle. But Widmaier said other reporters at the scene denied the military's version of events.

Widmaier said ten other Haitian reporters were searched, and a second Radio Metropole reporter was struck with a gun and slightly injured.

Soldiers ordered reporters at gunpoint to raise their hands over their heads, and smashed tape recorders on the pavement, free-lance photographer Carole Devillers said.

"They shot toward us as we all hid" behind a vehicle from Tele-Haiti, the nation's cable station, Ms.

Devillers said. "It's the first time I've been so scared since I've lived in Haiti."

Ms. Devillers is a stringer photographer for The Associated Press and is currently on assignment for National Geographic.

In the past month, Haiti has been troubled by strikes and demonstrations led by a labor union and a coalition of 57 anti-government groups. The opposition is demanding that the military-dominated government resign.

The National Governing Council took power after dictator Jean-Claude Duvalier fled in February 1986. The council, led by Lt. Gen. Henri Namphy, is authorized by Haiti's new constitution to remain in power until national elections are held and a new president sworn in next February.

Opposition groups say they fear fraud and don't want elections to be held under the council.

At least 21 people have been killed by soldiers and more than 140 wounded during the unrest.

Elderly Mountain Climber Launches Assault On Fuji

BY MITSUHIKO SATO
Associated Press Writer

MOUNT FUJI, Japan (AP) — A 91-year-old American mountain climber appeared frail but her step was steady as she set out Wednesday to become the oldest woman to reach the summit of 12,400-foot Mount Fuji, Japan's highest peak.

"Mount Fuji looks very interesting and I'm eager to go," said a bespectacled Hulda Crooks, nicknamed "Grandma Whitney" for her 22 ascents of the 14,495-foot Mount Whitney, the tallest mountain in the continental United States.

Mrs. Crooks, a 5-foot-2 resident of Loma Linda, Calif., said she expected to reach the summit by 4 a.m. Friday (3 p.m. EDT Thursday). The two-day climb began from the mountain's fifth station, 7,600 feet above sea level.

Although she was confident in her health and strength, Mrs. Crooks said she was concerned about the near-perfect weather. "We need some more clouds to shade the sun."

She wore blue pants, a baseball jacket, a T-shirt emblazoned with crossed U.S. and Japanese flags and the name Loma Linda, red knee-socks and gray sneakers.

Each year, dozens of elderly Japanese scale the revered ancient volcano. Last year alone, 17 Japanese age 90 and over made it to the top, according to officials at a summit shrine.

But if she succeeds, Mrs. Crooks would become the oldest woman to reach the summit. The current record was set in 1985 by 90-year-old Mine Yajima of Kanagawa prefecture, according to Dentsu Inc., the Japanese advertising agency that invited Mrs. Crooks to make the climb.

Mrs. Crooks arrived Monday in Subashiri, a small town at the foot of Mount Fuji, 60 miles southwest of Tokyo.

On Tuesday, she and Bill Andress, a friend and fellow mountain climber also from Loma Linda, walked a mile around the fifth station to adjust to the altitude.

Mrs. Crooks is accompanied by five people, including Andress, Dr. Kazuhiko Hongo of Tokyo Eisei Hospital, and three representatives from Dentsu.

Dentsu is sponsoring the 60th annual climb of Mount Fuji in which 500 people are participating.

For Dates And Mates Singles Are Shopping

By COSMOPOLITAN
A Hearst Magazine

Singles are shopping for more than groceries at the supermarket. They also are in the market for potential dates and mates.

A number of supermarkets and grocery chains are holding Singles Nights, according to an article in the current issue of Cosmopolitan, and living up these grocery galas with free food samples, games and giveaways, fun prizes and sometimes a disc jockey.

The idea of date-shopping at the supermarket is not new — for years a Washington, D.C., store has been dubbed the "Social Safeway" and recognized as a place for singles to mingle.

The Price Chopper chain of Schenectady, N.Y., is widely credited with planning the first official Singles Night in late 1985, and soon stores nationwide were throwing their own cart parties.

"We have normal, good-looking professionals — lawyers and psychologists," said Judy Brown, co-owner of the Shop 'n' Bag in Cherry Hill, N.J., where every Tuesday is Singles Night.

Shoppers can advertise the kind of date they want by the way they fill their cart. Brown told of a 32-year-old male psychologist with his own system.

"To get across what an affectionate, loving person he is, he fills the cart with 25-pound bags of dog food — no small gesture, since he doesn't own a dog," she said.

Most store managers-turned-matchmakers do not leave their customers to their own devices. New England's Stop & Shop has held promotions in Branford, Conn., and the Boston suburb of Needham, with local radio stations broadcasting live from the stores.

"The Singles Nights are great — everyone dances and has a wonderful time," said Stop & Shop spokesperson Christine Filardo. "It's not unusual to see a conga line snaking down the baking goods aisle."

Like many participating stores, Stop & Shop helps break the ice with mating games, such as Famous Pairs Match-up. Each shopper is given a name tag with one part of a well-known phrase — TV title, celebrity couple, food combo — and must seek out the holder of the other half to be eligible for the grand prize.

Prizes included memberships in dating services, a trip to San Diego and tickets to a party at a top hotel.

Some lucky patrons have linked up. New Jersey's Stop & Shop boasts 13 engagements. Brown says she has been invited to one wedding.

Machines Can Intimidate

DEAR ABBY: Today it happened again: The phone rang just as I put my key in the door. You might have been calling to buy something I had advertised in the paper, or I might have forgotten to pay a bill, or you needed my husband to unclog your drain, or perhaps you wanted to hire my son's band for a party you're having next week and you're as desperate as he is. Whatever the reason, you didn't wait for my answering machine to finish its message, and by the time I picked up the phone, you had already hung up. Perhaps it was your loss, perhaps it was mine. But remember, you called me!

Even if you don't leave a message, there may be someone on the other end. Say hello. If you do leave a message, I promise to get back to you as soon as possible. Please don't just hang up when you hear a recorded message. It's so very frustrating! — MISSING CALLS

DEAR MISSING: I appreciate your frustration, but please understand that some people are intimidated by "machines." Don't sweat it. If it was important, they'll call back.

Dear Abby

dislike the implications in his statements.

He often says, "I'd like to die in bed getting shot by a jealous husband." And if another man pays too much attention to me, he'll ask him, "Are you trying to steal my wife, you horse thief?"

Everyone laughs, and I always smile and try to act amused, even though one of his little jokes assumes sexual activity in another woman's bed, and the other calls me a "horse."

I've asked him to please stop teasing me that way, but he keeps it up. Should I continue to smile and act like I don't care? Or can you give me a snappy retort I can use to retaliate? — HURT IN HOPATCONG, N.J.

DEAR HURT: Forget the "snappy retort," and don't smile and act amused when he tries to get a laugh at your expense.

When he's in a good mood, and you have plenty of time and his full attention, tell him that he hurts you deeply when he repeats these tasteless put-downs. And unless he retires those tired old jokes, you will know that he is deliberately abusing you.

DEAR ABBY: Your response to

"I'll Never Smile Again," who opted for extensive cosmetic dental work as opposed to having all her teeth extracted for dentures, was correct but incomplete.

People should keep their natural teeth as long as possible because one's teeth act as a support for the jaw and prevent bone loss. Once the teeth are removed, the ridge of bone that once held the teeth begins to deteriorate.

This causes an ongoing cycle of ill-fitting dentures, and all too often ends in a complete inability to wear dentures at all, as there is no ridge of bone left to support them!

As an oral surgeon, I have seen this happen many times. A person who has all of his teeth extracted for the "convenience" and "savings" of dentures may well end up in my office years later for surgical implants.

Keep telling your readers to keep their natural teeth, Abby. — SMILING IN EVANSTON

DEAR SMILING: I have consistently told my readers to keep their natural teeth. Furthermore, a dentist with integrity will do everything possible to save his (or her) patients' natural teeth.

(For Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding," send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.)

Local Women Graduate From Leadership Program

Approximately 28 women were honored during the seminar held last week. They are the first class to have completed a three-year N.C. Agricultural Extension Service program designed to develop leadership skills to be used at home and in the community.

Janet Bullock and Barbara Fenner of Greenville, Gayle Morgan of Fountain, and Lanie Barfield of Greene County are among the first graduates.

"Opening the Door for Better Communities" was the seminar program topic. Speakers talked about influencing public policy, working as a volunteer, improving communications skills, projecting a positive image, maintaining good health, developing a county action plan and setting a self-contract.

Volunteers also heard about ongoing efforts in the areas of rural resources, housing, education and opportunities for minorities to go into business for themselves.

The leadership program is a new thrust of the state Extension Service. Funding for the seminar was provided by the Z. Smith Reynolds Foundation and R.J. Reynolds Foundation. Ms. Wilson is director of the Method Day Care Center.

This Shortcake Isn't So Short

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — What makes a shortcake "short" even though it's stacked so high?

The short comes from the high proportion of shortening in the biscuit-like cake, says Better Homes and Gardens. Once you make the biscuit base, any type of shortcake is possible depending on a person's creativity and tastes.

The key to making a delicious shortcake is to stack fruit and cream in between the biscuit layers. It will be a shortcake long on taste.

Women Are Baring Legs

By VERA HALLER
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — From designer boutiques to department store windows, everything's showing up short. The miniskirt, after a nearly 20-year hiatus, is back.

But raising hemlines again is also raising questions. "I've been to Florida, Maine, Ohio, Tennessee and Washington, D.C., within the last six or so weeks," said Wendy Reid Crisp, director of the National Association of Female Executives. "It's one of the biggest topics of conversations: 'What in the world are you going to do about the skirts?'"

"There's lots of reaction ranging from the horrified 'I don't know what I'm going to do. My legs don't look like they did in the 1960s,' to the 'I can't wait, another chance to feel young again,'" she said.

Seventh Avenue designers unveiled their fall collections in April, and the models sometimes appeared to show more leg than fabric. Word buzzed in the fashion world that some of the women attending the fall showings were rolling up the waistbands of their skirts to mirror the shorter lengths on the runways.

In addition, many of the trade magazines, with the influential Women's Wear Daily leading the pack, threw their support behind short skirts. (It should be noted, however, that WWD's editor John Fairchild has not always been on target. In 1969 and 1970, he endorsed the ill-fated "midi.")

Fashion editors from magazines and newspapers across the country also featured the mini and other media soon picked up on the trend. Some women are having plastic surgery to remove unsightly surface blood vessels from their legs so they can wear the shorter skirts, the Wall Street Journal noted. People magazine did a picture layout with a model in a short, short dress that showed the dos and don'ts of wearing minis. The don'ts included riding a bicycle, walking by a construction site and entering a car legs first.

Vanity Fair featured feminist Gloria Steinem in an article, "Smart Women Wear Short Skirts."

But skepticism about the mini was also evident. Erma Bombeck counseled fellow minihaters to "close ranks and hang tough."

Alan G. Millstein, president of Fashion Network Report, a trade publication, said the mini revival was "a lot like the Goodyear blimp."

"It doesn't bear any relevance to the lifestyle needs of the American woman," he said. "It's the biggest hype that's come along in 25 years."

Nevertheless, retailers are bullish about the mini.

"The stores are fairly confident that it's going to work," said Monroe Greenstein, a retail industry analyst with Bear Stearns & Co. "Some stores have called up their manufacturers and are having them re-cut their orders to a shorter hemline."

At its flagship store in Manhattan, Macy's has already established a boutique for juniors devoted entirely to minis. And the store's fashion director, Jane Kaner, says short skirts are big sellers in all departments.

"We spotted the trend in the spring collections and had some styles in the stores by February," Ms. Kaner said. "The emphasis at first was on young junior styles, but after we saw the fall collections we realized it was for everybody."

Does "everybody" include executives?

According to Coleen Brady, executive vice president of Alcott & Andrews, the answer is yes, as long as the skirts don't inch too high above the knee.

"I think it's a new mood in clothing. It's time for a change and the proportions look better, newer and more current," said Ms. Brady, whose 11 stores cater to the executive woman. "We will be carrying all lengths of skirts in a variety of fabrications."

She said the shorter hemlines won't entirely replace longer lengths, a view held by many in and out of the fashion world.

Bill Ranticelli, a free-lance designer and faculty member at Parson's School of Design, also said short skirts are just another option.

"The American consumer will not be dictated to anymore," he said. "If they have ugly legs, they won't wear the short skirt. For women with good legs, it's another alternative."

The return to minis is good news to some women who wore the short skirts in the 1960s, including Ms. Steinem.

"I think the added choice is good," she said. "If you're told to either cover up your body or uncover your body, it's offensive. You ought to be free to dress the way you want to."

And according to one of the designers who's at the heart of the revival, the option will be around indefinitely.

"I don't think we're going to go back to midcalf skirts for a long time," said Calvin Klein, whose short, short fall collection caused waves in the fashion world.

He insists the mini trend of the 1980s is not a throwback to the '60s but rather a development.

"It just seemed to me that anything long got very old-looking and tired," Klein said.

Flower Catalogues Are 'Great Pieces Of Fiction'

Every year I swear I am not going to open them when they arrive. Not so much as a peek.

I am going to take the flower catalogues in my hand and calmly walk to the wastebasket, drop them in, and get on with my life. There is a hitch. Usually when the booklet reaches the bottom of the wastebasket, a page will fall open revealing a little girl standing by a tulip that has a blossom on it bigger than her head. I am hooked.

You'd think in all these years I'd smarten up. I'd realize that I am not going to grow a chrysanthemum bigger than a bushel basket ... have ivy that will smother the walls of my house like Harvard ... or plant seedling trees that in two years will support a hammock.

It's those people in the ads that do

At Wits End

Erma Bombeck

it to me. There's Mother standing in her large-brimmed hat picking gladioli stock and placing it into a large basket hooked over her arm. Dad is eating a fresh pear from a tree in his orchard and a child is pointing gleefully to a rare succulent in the rock garden that blooms only during a Republican administration without scandal. Oftentimes a dog is stretched out like a statue taking it all in. (That should be the clue. No dog ever enters a garden to stretch out like a statue and take it all in.)

Where do they find these people ... these Nielsen families of the garden ... these enigmas who have no names, no homes, no state ties?

Was this a family just like ours, who went to the mailbox one day to realize that their entire orchard was contained in an 8 x 10 envelope with a "HAND STAMP ONLY" message on it?

Was this a woman not unlike myself, who ordered 100 daffodil bulbs only to discover her front yard was a grown-over stone quarry? Was this a woman who got a starter kit and nothing started ... a woman who discovered the only thing she could grow were 137 animals that attacked rose bushes? A woman who planted a perennial and got an annual back?

You know what I think? I think these catalogues are some of the greatest pieces of fiction in print today. They're the stuff of which dreams are made. Why don't they come right out and say, "Nothing grows in Zone 10. Oral Roberts could prepare the soil and nothing would come up in Zone 10."

Sometimes I think my mother had the right idea. She invited a few people over for dinner one night, and my daughter and her friend were late. My mother went to the kitchen and brought back a picture from a magazine of a plate of appetizers. "These are what you missed," she said.

From here on in ... a picture is all you're going to get from me.

Soviets Offer Plan

Washington and Moscow last year tentatively agreed to eliminate medium-range missiles from Europe. Under that arrangement, each side would have retained 100 warheads on its own territory, with the Soviet weapons in Asia east of the Ural Mountains.

High Reagan administration officials have over the past months said the United States hoped to include those warheads in the ban, but the Soviets had balked at agreeing to global elimination.

The Soviet news agency Tass on Wednesday quoted Gorbachev as saying the Soviet Union was now prepared to eliminate its intermediate-range missiles in Asia, rather than keeping 100 warheads, if the United States would also agree to not keep 100 mid-range warheads on its territory.

The proposal appeared to remove one obstacle to the negotiations, which have been bogged down in recent weeks.

New Role

NEW YORK (AP) — Actress-singer Cher says there was a time when she would have been afraid of roles like the one she's playing in her latest movie.

In "Suspect," she plays a public defender who becomes involved in a murder case.

"I always think of myself as being able to play working-class types. You know, basic women," she said. "And since I didn't have that much schooling, I was scared to try to portray a woman who's been to law school and uses these big words."

Shultz Says He Was Not Told All Details

I just bowed out insofar as major things in our foreign policy is concerned. To assume that I shouldn't be informed of things like that is ridiculous."

Poindexter testified earlier that he never withheld information from Cabinet officers that they didn't want kept from them.

Shultz quarreled with North's testimony, as well, saying that he was unaware of North's secret efforts to funnel arms to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels during a congressional ban on direct or indirect U.S. military aid to the insurgents.

Belnick read North's testimony that Shultz "knew in sufficiently elegant terms of what I had done," and asked the secretary of state if North's statement was true.

"No," Shultz replied. Shultz said he was disgusted when he learned many months after the fact that key Iran-Contra middlemen had discussed efforts to release terrorists being held in a Kuwaiti prison as part of a complicated deal that would send arms to Iran and win the freedom of American hostages in Lebanon.

Shultz said it "made me sick to my stomach that anybody would talk about that as something we would consider doing."

The list of details that Shultz said he didn't know about was a long one.

He disclaimed knowledge that Reagan had formally approved the sale of arms to Iran until many months later. He said he didn't know of the direct sale of U.S. arms to Iran until nearly a year after the fact.

He also said he didn't know until afterwards that former National Security Adviser Robert McFarlane went secretly to Tehran in May 1986, and it was even later that he learned that McFarlane had taken weapons with him.

The secretary said he didn't learn until June 1986 that Saudi Arabia had provided $31 million to the Contras in 1984 and 1985. And he said he didn't know until it surfaced in the congress-sional hearings that Taiwan contributed $2 million to the Contras in 1985.

Discussing his learning about the arms-for-hostages plan involving a proposed Kuwaiti release of terrorists, Shultz said he called the White House and tried to get an appointment with the president to tell him, but was rebuffed.

He said he then called Reagan directly the next day, a Sunday, and told him he needed to see him "right now."

"The president was astonished" when Shultz delivered the news, the secretary of state recalled. "I have never seen him so mad."

"I think it was that meeting I finally felt that the president deeply understands that something is radically wrong."

Shultz made his dramatic comments in the opening moments of what is expected to be two days of testimony at the nationally televised Iran-Contra hearings.

He raised his hand and swore to tell the truth, as have other witnesses, and immediately began relating an astonishing tale of a secretary of state who was kept in the dark about some of the administration's most important foreign policy initiatives.

Shultz told members of the House and Senate investigating panels he would reverse his policy and disclose advice he had given personally to the president, but said "this is an exception." He said he would not agree to do so at other hearings, and warned lawmakers that if they tried to cite this day as a precedent, "I won't buy it."

Shultz had made it clear earlier that he opposed the decision to sell arms to Iran, and was criticized by the Tower commission for distancing himself from the sales once they were approved by the president.

In the opening moments of his testimony, Shultz told Senate lawyer Mark Belnick he did not know that Reagan had signed any document authorizing secret arms sales to Iran until he heard it from Poindexter at of rain, which has been compounded by the heat.

"The rainfall we've had has been spotty, so some areas have had adequate moisture and others have a deficiency," Cumbo said. "With the heat, the ones that are adequate will be deficient very quickly. But generally, the crops are in pretty good shape."

Forecasters said hot, dry weather could pose serious problems for farmers if the state doesn't get rain soon.

"Things are going to start getting serious if we don't get rain in the next week or so," said Carl Cross, a North Carolina agriculture statistician. "Crops use about a third an inch of soil moisture a day, so it takes over two inches a week to keep them in good shape."

In Caswell County, a man was electrocuted Monday when the irrigation equipment he was moving struck a power line. James Olden Cobb Jr. of Yanceyville was moving an irrigation pipe when the accident occurred, authorities said.

Carolina Power & Light Co. reported an all-time usage record Wednesday of 7,985, breaking the previous record of 7,838 megawatts set Tuesday, said CP&L spokesman Wayne Ennis.

Duke Power Co. in Charlotte set a summer demand record Wednesday of 12,605 megawatts, surpassing the previous summer record of 12,498 megawatts set Tuesday, said spokeswoman Mary Boyd.

As the temperature hit 100 degrees in Goldsboro Tuesday, Harold Webber of New Hope Feeds in Wayne County reported his heaviest losses of the year. He said one load of 7,000 to 7,500 chickens was lost at each of three farms at which chickens were loaded late Tuesday.

A day earlier, another Wayne County producer lost 5,500 chickens at two chicken houses on one farm.

Webber said he was reducing the protein level in the feed, which will help the chickens stand the heat better.

a unifying force on the board of education," Martin said. "It's time for our board to put together as one body in order to provide all of our citizens and their children an equal opportunity for a superior education that will be useful as they go through life."

Martin is former president of the Lake Ellsworth Civic Association.

The Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce adopted his slogan idea, "Greenville/Pitt County: The Heart of the East," in 1979. He said he recently started the "Golden Flush" Award for gross misuse of local tax money.

"We must put our tax dollars to work in the classroom because that's where education actually takes place," Martin said. "Frills and 'pet projects' must be deleted from the budget in order to provide more classroom materials, aides and a decent supplement for our teachers. If we can afford the highest supplement in the state for our superintendent, then we can certainly afford a much larger supplement for our teachers."

an Oval Office briefing last Nov. 10. He also said he knew nothing about Reagan's initial approval of the deal on Dec. 5, 1985, until "it emerged in the course of these hearings."

Asked about contributions of millions of dollars from other nations to help the Contras, he said: "These things have all emerged during these hearings and that's when I learned of them."

Shultz said he first learned of

South Takes Water Polo

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Doug Kimbell of Long Beach, Calif. scored four goals Wednesday night, leading the underdog South team to a 10-7 victory over the East and its first gold medal in men's water polo at the U.S. Olympic Festival.

The South, seeded last among the four teams coming into the festival, clinched the victory, its sixth with one tie in the tournament, on two goals by Greg Ocasek of Honolulu in the final seven minutes.

Alex Rousseau of Santa Monica, Calif. scored twice for the South and finished as the tournament's high scorer with 21 goals.

The West, winner of the gold in the past four festivals, rallied to beat the North 12-7 in overtime in the bronze medal game.

In women's games, the East, seeded No. 1 in the tournament, won its first two games, beating the South 9-8 and the West 12-9.

In other women's games, the South defeated the North 9-6 and the West 10-8.

Maureen Mendoza of Long Beach, Calif., sparked the East's victory over the South with four goals. Her final goal tied the score 7-7 with 4:51 remaining.

In baseball action, Mike Moore's three-run double in the eighth inning broke a 2-2 tie and lifted the North to the gold medal in baseball at the U.S. Olympic Festival with a 5-2 victory Wednesday night over the South.

Moore, of Overland Park, Kan., came up with the bases loaded after a single by Greg Haeger of Livonia, Mich., another single by Jim Robinson of Chicago and a walk to Phil Dauphin of Worthington, Ohio. Moore then doubled off Ricky Kimball of Decatur, Ga.

In the bronze medal game, a two-run homer by Scott Sharts of Simi Valley, Calif., and two-run doubles by Jason Hisey of Kalmath Falls, Ore., and Tom Redington of Anaheim, Calif., highlighted a seven-run ninth as the West rallied for a 10-7 victory over the East.

In the table tennis competition, Sean O'Neill won his third gold medal in the U.S. Olympic Festival table tennis competition Wednesday night when he took the men's singles title.

O'Neill, of McLean, Va., beat Quang Bui of Bellevue, Wash., 21-18, 21-15, 21-11 to win the singles crown for the fourth straight year. He also won the doubles and team gold as a member of the South squad.

Diana Gee of San Carlos, Calif., defended her singles title, downing Jasmine Wang of East Brunswick, N.J., 21-18, 21-14, 21-18. It was her third straight singles gold medal and she also won a team gold this year with the West.

In team handball action, the South men's handball team, led by Robbie Stone of Norman, Okla., who scored eight goals, beat the North 24-14 Wednesday at the U.S. Olympic Festival.

Eric Rodney of Columbus, Ga., added five goals to the attack. The South took an 11-8 lead at halftime, then outscored the North 13-6 in the second half.

In the other men's game, Chris Cappelmann of Franklin Square, N.Y., hit on 12 of his 15 shots as the East beat West 20-16. Ten of his goals came on 2-on-1 breaks.

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Terry Mills thinks winning the gold medal in men's basketball at the U.S. Olympic Festival could be the beginning of something beautiful.

"I think that this, overall, is a real good start for me coming back," said Mills, whose 15 points and 19 rebounds led the North to an 88-73 victory Wednesday night. "I hope that I can continue on by winning the Big 10 championship and maybe the NCAA championship. It's really just a good feeling to be back with a whole group of guys playing organized basketball."

The West women, sparked by a 15-4 run led by Shameil Coleman and Rehema Stephens, won the gold 68-53 over the South.

Mills, whose North team had a losing record entering the gold medal game, took the South out of the contest with a 12-0 run late in the first half. Aiding their efforts was a strong shooting performance from the field — the North hit 56.7 percent overall.

In the second half, the North built a 19-point lead on two different occasions.

Mills was 7-for-12 from the field, showing the skills he hopes to showcase at Michigan after sitting out his freshman season to regain his academic eligibility.

"Everything fell together tonight, especially defense," Mills said. "We came into the game with the attitude that we had nothing to lose. We either get the gold or the silver."

Before a partisan crowd of 21,203 at the Smith Center, the largest crowd to witness a basketball game in festival history, the South spent much of the first 10 minutes chasing the North's transition game. With eight minutes left and the score tied at 20, the North went off on its run in which

Officials—Thomas Fraim, Jesse Gatewood.

Jerome Harmon of Louisville scored half the points.

The North led 32-20 and left the South in a hole from which it never emerged.

"We had a one-point lead when the first unit went out and it ended up being 14 down at the half," South Coach Eddie Sutton said. "They just couldn't get going."

"Everything was going their way tonight," said Derrick Miller, who will be a sophomore for Sutton's team at Kentucky. "They hit their outside shots, and they hit their inside shots."

The victory was one more moment of glory for North Coach Bob Nichols, who just last March retired after 22 years as head coach at Toledo.

"It's been a great thing for me, probably one of the most enjoyable experiences I've ever had," Nichols said.

North Carolina's J.R. Reid, the player many in the crowd came to see, was shackled by the North's inside pressure and shot 3-for-9 from the field. But he did make 12 of 13 free throws and had a game-high 18 points.

"We didn't want to lose this one."

We all wanted to win," Reid said. "We just dug too big of a hole in the first half and tried to get back into the game."

Tyrone Hill of Xavier had 14 points, Harmon had 11 and Lyndon Jones of Indiana scored 10. Miller added 13 for the South.

The West women took advantage of their height to dominate the middle against the South.

The score was tied eight times in the second half, the last at 40 following a turnaround jumper by Washington's Karen Deden with 11:03 left. That started the decisive run which sent the West to its victory.

"I felt that we weren't into the game in the first half," Coleman, of Long Beach State, said. "Then, in the second half, we just went all out and played great."

In the women's bronze medal round, Tonya Cardoza of Virginia scored 13 points and Old Dominion's Kelly Lyons added 11 points as the East beat the North 77-63.

Perry Carter's tap-in with 24 seconds remaining put an end to an East comeback and gave the West men a 91-86 victory.

Magrane Earning Funny Reputation

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It hasn't taken left-hander Joe Magrane of the St. Louis Cardinals long to establish himself as a colorful character. But he's not sure he's worthy of such a description.

"Just because I'm left-handed and I say something that's maybe a little different, I'm called a flake," he said with a smile. "Baseball has kind of a stuffed-shirt mentality. When someone strays a little..."

Actually, Magrane doesn't seem to stray too far. It's just that every once in a while, he has a way of saying something that's off-center.

For example, on Wednesday, the 23-year-old resident of Morehead, Ky., was asked if earning National League Rookie of the Year honors was important to him.

"I don't sit around thinking about winning Rookie of the Year or MVP or Miss Congeniality," he said, the words flowing quickly. Then, realizing what he said, he laughed, as did those around him.

More seriously, he added, "I'm just a rookie who's trying to learn as much as I can in as short a time as I can. My real focus is doing the best I can for the Cardinals. I'd like to be considered a quality starter who can win 20 games, keep my team in the game every time I pitch."

"If I should be fortunate enough to win Rookie of the Year honors, that would be great. But it's not something I'm thinking about. Getting to the World Series would be the greatest."

Magrane, who's scheduled to start for the Cardinals against the Los Angeles Dodgers tonight, said he's known for most of his life that he wanted to be a big-league baseball player.

He achieved such a goal in late April, and it appears, barring serious injury, he'll be around for quite a while.

"When I was young, I didn't watch games for the enjoyment," he said. "I watched to study the pitchers, gather all the knowledge and information I could."

"Ever since I can remember, I wanted to play baseball. From a very young age, I always thought I would play in the major leagues."

The 6-foot-5, 230-pounder has made 12 starts for the Cardinals since being recalled from the minors in late April and compiled a 5-2 record with a 3.20 earned run average in 81 2-3 innings of work.

In the year of the home run, he has allowed only four homers.

Magrane probably would have better numbers had it not been for some time spent on the disabled list because of a strained ligament in his left elbow.

It was around that time that he was quoted as saying, "I knew I was in big trouble when they started clocking my fastball with a sundial."

"I'm still throwing with some discomfort," he said Wednesday. "I'm just hoping it'll go away. It's getting progressively better."

Magrane, who attended the University of Arizona, was the 18th player selected in the June, 1985 big-league draft, meaning it took him less than two years as a professional to reach the majors.

"I never had a timetable or placed a timetable on myself," he said. "It's like setting goals. I don't believe in that. Setting goals, in a way, is like setting limits. I know it's a cliché to say this, but I just want to go out and do the very best I can on every pitch."

The Cardinals have a comfortable lead in the NL East despite the fact that they've had several players, including Magrane, sidelined at various times this year because of injuries.

Sheridan Likes ECU-State Rivalry

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

North Carolina State football coach Dick Sheridan says rivalries like the one between the Wolfpack and East Carolina are good for college football as well as for the entire state.

Sheridan was in Greenville Wednesday morning assisting with coach Art Baker's annual summer football camp. Baker and Sheridan are old friends. Sheridan got his start in college coaching at Furman under Baker, where he was the offensive coordinator before taking over the head coaching job when Baker moved on in 1978.

While their ties go way back, come Sept. 5, the two become friendly adversaries when the Pirates travel to Carter-Finley Stadium to take on the Wolfpack in the season opener for both teams.

"Rivalries like East Carolina-N.C. State create a lot of interest throughout the state," Sheridan said. "I think it's good for college football. It's a great way to start the year off."

The game regularly attracts some of the biggest college football crowds in the state. The Wolfpack has a 12-5 career record against ECU with the two teams splitting two games each the last four years.

"I think it's good for football in the entire state," Sheridan said. "I think (it's healthy) if fans can keep it in perspective like Art and his staff and we do with our coaching staff. We have great respect and we're friends. I don't have a better friend than Art Baker."

"Yet it's going to be a great, intense rivalry. You can compete with a lot of intensity and still maintain the proper relationships and keep everything in perspective. I'm going to still pull for Art every game he plays except when he plays against us."

In his first year guiding the Wolfpack last year, N.C. State went 8-3-1 along with a trip to the Peach Bowl. He turned around a program that had gone 3-8 three straight years under Tom Reed, including two losses to East Carolina in 1984 and 1985.

N.C. State lost a lot of players from last year's team, most notably quarterback Erik Kramer and wide receiver Haywood Jeffries, along with host of other starters.

"So what does Sheridan do for an encore? He refuses to make any predictions."

"Every year is a new year," he said. "All we can do is go out and try to get better in everything that we do. We can't predict or control. All we can do is go out and be the best prepared team we can be."

Athletics Power By Detroit, 10-1

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

The Oakland Athletics took a night off from batting practice, but once the game started it was another story.

"Today, we came out with a hungry attitude and everybody hit the ball," said Mark McGwire, who had four hits Wednesday night, including his major league-leading 36th home run. He led the Athletics to a 10-1 rout of the Detroit Tigers.

Oakland had lost one-run games to Detroit the previous two nights and decided not to take batting practice before the game.

"You need to take a break once in a while," McGwire said. "It gets tiring and boring doing the same thing every day. We needed a game like this. It takes a lot out of a team to play close games five or six days in a row."

Mariners 2, Brewers 1
Mark Langston pitched a four-hitter and Rey Quinones singled in the go-ahead run in the seventh inning to lead Seattle over Milwaukee.

Langston, 11-9, struck out seven to increase his American League-leading total to 159.

Ken Phelps began the seventh with a walk off Bill Wegman, 8-9. Jim Presley's single moved Phelps to second and pinch-runner John Moses scored when Quinones dropped a single in front of right fielder Glenn Braggs.

Wegman went all the way, allowing eight hits. He struck out one and walked one.

Angels 6, Red Sox 5
Brian Downing and George Hendrick knocked in two runs apiece as California built a five-run lead and withstood a comeback by Boston.

Winner Mike Witt, 12-6, gave up Jim Rice's 10th homer leading off the sixth, then was shelled in a three-run seventh.

DeWayne Buice replaced Witt and gave up an RBI single to Rice and a run-scoring double to Dwight Evans before ending the rally. Greg Minton, the Angels' fourth pitcher, recorded his eighth save after giving up Rice's RBI single in the ninth.

Boston starter Dennis 'Oil Can' Boyd, 1-3, failed to get through the first inning for the second time in his career, the first since July 18, 1984. He was tagged for four runs, two unearned.

Twins 3, Yankees 1
Kent Hrbek and Kirby Puckett homered and Frank Viola pitched four-hit ball over eight innings as Minnesota defeated New York in a matchup of division leaders.

Viola, 10-6, struck out six and walked two. He is now 8-1 in his last 12 starts with a 1.85 earned run average.

Viola lowered his season ERA to 2.85 over 155 innings. On July 6, he beat New York 2-0 at Yankee Stadium, but had lost his last three decisions to the Yankees at the Metrodome.

Jeff Reardon pitched the ninth inning for his 20th save.

Although Rick Rhoden, 12-6, struck out the side in the first inning, Viola got all the offensive support he needed on Hrbek's two-run homer in the first.

"I don't care how many runs we score," Viola said. "I feel like I'm going to win. The bottom line is confidence. You don't care who is up there. You just feel you can do it. This is what I've been looking for for six years."

Orioles 10, White Sox 5
Larry Sheets hit a pair of two-run singles and Ken Gerhart hit two solo homers as Baltimore beat Chicago for the Orioles' eighth straight victory.

Harold Baines hit his 155th career homer to set a White Sox record. Baines, who also extended his hitting streak to 17 games, had been tied for the club home run mark with Bill Melton, a Chicago third baseman from 1968 to 1975.

John Habyan, 2-3, relieved starter Mike Boddicker in the third inning and pitched 6 2-3 scoreless innings for the victory, retiring the last 19 batters in a row. Coming into Wednesday night's game, Habyan had a 6.84 ERA.

Royals 5, Indians 1
Jim Eisenreich, continuing his comeback against a rare nervous disorder, drove in two runs to pace Kansas City over Cleveland.

The former Minnesota outfielder singled home two runs in the fifth inning as the Royals won for only the third time in 14 games. Eisenreich, who left baseball in 1984 because of Tourette's Syndrome, a neurological condition that causes uncontrolled twitching, also walked and doubled.

Mark Gubicza gave up eight hits, struck out eight and walked five to raise his record to 8-9 with his fifth complete game of the season, a career high. Darrel Akerfelds, 0-1, was a loser in his first major league start.

Frank White and Bo Jackson hit solo homers for the Royals.

Rangers 5, Blue Jays 3
Texas broke an eighth-inning tie with two runs on five walks, including two with the bases loaded by reliever Mark Eichorn, to beat Toronto.

Reliever Jeff Russell, 3-1, earned the victory with 1 1-3 scoreless innings in relief of starter Bobby Witt. Dale Mohorcic got the last two outs for his 13th save.

The two runs that were scored in the eighth were put on base by Gary Lavelle, 1-2, although Eichhorn came in and issued three consecutive walks that pushed the runners across.

With the score tied 3-3, Lavelle walked leadoff batter Pete Incaviglia, and with two outs walked pinch-hitter Mike Stanley. Eichhorn relieved and walked Steve Buechele to load the bases and Jerry Browne and Scott Fletcher to force home runs.

"Eichhorn was all over the place," said Browne, who got his first major league game-winning RBI with the walk. "I decided to work him all the way. I sure wasn't going to swing at any bad pitches."

Thompson, Yow Express Concerns

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Olympic basketball coaches John Thompson and Kay Yow expressed different concerns Wednesday about their teams for the 1988 Seoul Games.

Thompson, coach at Georgetown and of the U.S. men's Olympic team that has lost only once in the Games' history, said he was worried about his players missing valuable school time.

Yow is coach at North Carolina State and of the U.S. women's team that is considered No. 1 in the world after winning the Goodwill Games and World Championships last year by beating the Soviet Union twice. She said she was concerned about maintaining that ranking.

Thompson's fear is the result of the lateness of the Games, to be held Sept. 17-Oct. 2.

That means, with practicing and traveling with the team, plus playing in the Games, some of his players could miss as much as the first six weeks of school. Thompson felt it then might be too late for them to catch up, and they likely would have to sit out the first semester.

With most schools on a two-semester basis, the second semester does not generally begin until January, though some schools do start in December.

An athlete can't be out of school and be eligible to play. If he is enrolled, he can play.

The situation, of course, will only effect players who will be underclassmen during the 1988-89 school year. Since experience is very important in international competition, most of Thompson's 12 players are expected to be those who graduate next spring.

Still, he can be expected to choose some underclassmen, such as J.R. Reid of North Carolina, who will be a junior in 1988-89, and Danny Ferry of Duke, who will be a senior. Thompson said he did not know the site or date of the Olympic basketball trials, but reportedly they will be at UCLA next May.

"A lot of our young people have to go to summer school and a lot of them have to work," Thompson said. "That's something we'll have to talk

Sermons To Compete

Debra Sermons of Greenville is one of 72 athletes chosen to represent North Carolina at the 1987 International Special Olympic Summer Games at Notre Dame University July 31-Aug. 12.

Ms. Sermons, whose competitive event is bowling, is the first athlete since 1975 to be selected from the Greenville/Pitt County Special Olympics program to take part in the International Summer Games.

She will fly out of the Winston-Salem airport July 30, along with other North Carolina athletes taking part in the international competition.

For information, contact Leslie Wooles, Greenville Recreation and Parks-830-4551 or George Sappenfield, Greenville/Pitt County Special Olympics, 355-5417.

them to them about before the trials. "Schooling (in the fall) also will effect our kids for the Games. The Olympics are late. The kids will be missing school. That's a concern.

"There has been very little talk about whether the kids will be allowed to drop out of school (take a leave of absence). I don't know the solution. The individual schools will have to deal with that. It's more an institutional problem than the NCAA's.

"I have seen instances where schools get upset with kids missing schoolwork to play basketball," Thompson said. "Now, they'll be missing school for their country."

Among the schools that has frowned upon athletes missing time for international athletic participation has been Duke, and that could keep Ferry off the team.

Thompson said an athlete's intention to play would "depend on the strength of the student, the institution and the curriculum he is involved in."

Some schools allow students who receive an incomplete during a semester, for varying reasons, such as family problems or illness, to complete the course the following semester.

"We have to find out if they can miss school," the concerned Thompson said. "That's important, since we're all so sensitive about the exploitation of the athlete. There are a whole lot of factors involved. The kids will have to make tremendous sacrifices."

Thompson said he would be looking for players who are aggressive, quick and play strong defense — the same type of player he tries to recruit for Georgetown.

Crenshaw Feels Homey At Warwick

GRAND BLANC, Mich. (AP) — Ben Crenshaw feels at home at Warwick Hills Golf and Country Club, despite his Texas roots.

Crenshaw, the defending champion, and PGA money-leader Paul Azinger were the co-favorites in the $600,000 Buick Open that was to begin today over the par-72, 7,014-yard course.

"It always feels good to come back to a place where you've done well," Crenshaw said. "I feel comfortable and relaxed here. I still think about that shot ... that came from somewhere else."

Ah, yes, that shot.

In the final round of last year's Buick Open, the right-handed Crenshaw, who had suffered a triple-bogey during the second round, turn-

"Of course, we also need people who can shoot the basketball," he said.

Thompson said he had not yet spoken with Navy All-American David Robinson about playing on the team.

on five hits as the West won the women's softball medal 5-0 Wednesday night at the U.S. Olympic Festival.

LeFebvre, who starred in college at Fullerton State, won her fourth game of the festival as the West took advantage of two throwing errors by East shortstop Dot Richardson of Orlando, Fla., and one by pitcher Tracy Compton of Santa Maria, Calif., for all five runs in the second inning.

The men's gold went to the East, which edged the North 1-0 on an unearned run.

In volleyball action, Lonise Norfleet of Glen Ellyn, Ill., and Jill Johnson of Downey, Calif., rallied the South women from a 5-0 deficit in the fifth game to an 8-15, 15-12, 7-15, 15-4, 15-11 victory over the East Wednesday night in the women's gold medal volleyball game at the U.S. Olympic Festival.

Norfleet had a team-high 24 kills and Johnson finished with 21 kills for the South, which wound up with a 3-1 record.

Amy Hayes of Anaheim, Calif., had 19 kills for the East, 2-2, while Lara Asper of Stanford turned in a fine all-around performance with 28 assists, 6 kills and 2 service aces.

The West took the bronze medal, rallying to beat the North 13-15, 15-3, 15-8, 15-10.

Kathy Cunningham of Naperville, Ill., led the West with 17 kills, while Katie Salen of Arvada, Colo., and Lisa Bokovoy of Livonia, Mich., had 14 each.

The West girls' soccer team, led by Second-half goals by Michelle Akers of Seattle and Kathy Ridgewell of Auburn, Wash. gave the West a 2-0 victory over the North Wednesday night and a berth in the final of the women's soccer competition at the U.S. Olympic Festival.

In Friday night's final, the West will face the South, a 3-1 winner over the East earlier Wednesday.

Akers broke a scoreless tie against the North, scoring for the West on a 25-yard free kick past goalkeeper Ruth Harker of O'Fallon, Mo. at the 58:05 mark of the game. Eighteen minutes later, Ridgewell scored off a pass from Sandy Carter of Seattle.

In other action, Yogi Hightower of Virginia Beach, Va., scored three times, all on 16-yard penalty corner shots, as the South beat the East 5-3 in women's field hockey Wednesday night at the U.S. Olympic Festival.

Brian Arseneau of Arlington Heights, Ill., won the men's 1,000-meter speedskating championship at the U.S. Olympic Festival Wednesday night after record-setting Randy Bartz fell in the final.

Clark Wins Game, Mourns Friend

By The Associated Press
 After Jack Clark hit a two-run homer in the ninth inning to beat Los Angeles, he wasn't thinking about winning or losing.
 Before Wednesday night's game, former major league pitcher Don McMahon, who served as a special assignment scout for the Dodgers for the past two years, died of a heart attack. He was 57.
 McMahon suffered the heart attack at about 4:45 p.m., PDT — nearly three hours before the game began — while pitching batting practice. He was pronounced dead 90 minutes later at Queen of Angels Hospital.
 The crowd of 33,665 at Dodger Stadium observed a moment of silence as a tribute to McMahon shortly before the game's first pitch and Clark dedicated his homer that gave St. Louis a 3-1 victory over Los Angeles to McMahon.

 "It was tough under the circumstances, I played with him (McMahon) for six years," Clark said. "He was a good man and a friend. It's a tough situation. I want to dedicate the home run to him and his family."
 Clark played for San Francisco from 1977 to 1984 when McMahon was the Giants' pitching coach.
Cubs 6, Padres 3
 It was a night of milestones for Chicago. Rick Sutcliffe won the 100th game of his career and Andre Dawson hit his 250th lifetime homer as the Cubs beat host San Diego.

 The Cubs set a club record by hitting 26 homers against the Padres in 12 games, the most they have hit in a season against a club since division play began in 1969. They won nine of the 12 games between the two teams, holding the Padres to five homers.
 Keith Moreland added his 100th career homer as the Cubs snapped a four-game losing streak.
 "It's been frustrating the last few years because I've been out so much, Sutcliffe, 5-14 last year, said. "When Zonk (Moreland) hit his 100th homer, he came in and said, 'I got my 100th, now you get your 100th'. I hope the next hundred don't take as long."

Astros 7, Expos 0
 Mike Scott pitched a four-hitter, struck out 10 and drove in a run as Houston defeated Montreal at Olympic Stadium.
 Scott, 11-6, increased his major league-leading strikeout total to 165 en route to his third shutout and fifth complete game.
 "I was real happy with the way I pitched tonight," said Scott, who felt he had not been effective since a start in San Diego on June 25. "The velocity on my fastball was there, and I had decent control on my split-fingered fastball."
 On May 8 at Montreal, Scott beat the Expos with a two-hitter.
 Bill Doran had three hits, including a two-run homer for Houston.
Phillies 5, Reds 3
 Juan Samuel hit his 19th home run, tying his career high, and drove in two runs as Philadelphia beat visiting Cincinnati.
 Shane Rawley, 12-5, pitched 6 1-3 innings, allowing three runs for his fourth straight victory. Kent Tekulve and Steve Bedrosian relieved with Bedrosian earning his league-leading 27th save.
 "Base-running mistakes hurt," Reds Manager Pete Rose said. "So did starting pitching."
 Tom Browning, 5-8, pitched five innings and allowed five runs and nine hits.
Mets 4, Braves 3
 Lee Mazzilli's pinch RBI single capped a four-run sixth inning as New York rallied to beat Atlanta at Shea Stadium.
 Zane Smith, 8-6, allowed just one hit over the first five innings and held a 3-0 lead. But after Tim Teufel and Keith Hernandez opened the inning with base hits, Darryl Strawberry, Barry Lyons and Rafael Santana had RBI singles to tie the score.
 Mazzilli, pinch-hitting for Ron Darling, then won it with a line-drive single to left-center, scoring Lyons.
 Darling, 5-7, won his third game in his last four decisions. Roger McDowell pitched three scoreless innings for his 12th save.
Pirates 4, Giants 0
 Rick Reuschel pitched a five-hitter for his 23rd career shutout as Pittsburgh took two of three games at Candlestick Park.
 Reuschel, 8-4, lowered his earned run average to 2.19, best among major-league starting pitchers. It was the third shutout in his last five starts.

Catastrophic Health Bill Gets Houses Endorsement

By JERRY ESTILL
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The most dramatic expansion of government health care protection for America's elderly since Medicare emerged from the Great Society legislation of the 1960s is headed for the Senate after resounding approval in the House.

The 302-127 margin by which the House passed the catastrophic health bill on Wednesday — well above the two-thirds majority needed to override a possible presidential veto — reflected the bipartisan support for the measure which has emerged as perhaps the most popular domestic issue of 1987.

Although President Reagan has signaled his discontent with some details of the version that sailed through the House, the foundation for the measure was laid by the president himself last February when he proposed that the nation's 31 million Medicare beneficiaries be provided protection against the dread of financially debilitating illness.

A substitute that more closely tracked the Reagan proposal failed on a 242-190, mostly party-line vote that preceded the overwhelming vote for the Democratic version.

In simplest terms, the bill that was approved tells the elderly that their hospital bills will not exceed a set amount per year — $544 in 1988 — no matter how long they have to stay. It also says their doctor bills will not exceed a certain amount per year — $1,043 in 1989 — no matter how much they are billed unless they choose a doctor who charges more than Medicare considers reasonable. In that event, the individual would remain responsible for the higher charges.

By contrast, existing Medicare law provides full payment for only 59 days of hospitalization a year, after a one-time deductible that is $520 in 1987 dollars.

There is no limit on how much a patient may have to pay for doctor bills. After a $75 deductible, Medicare now pays only 80 percent of doctor bills no matter how high they rise.

Although the president's proposal also set caps, albeit higher ones on out-of-pocket expenses, the predominant response was that it did not go far enough on a variety of fronts.

For example, neither the president's bill nor the one pushed by Democrats would provide long-term nursing home benefits.

Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee that played a dominant role in crafting the bill, acknowledged that the Democratic version, "while similar in structure ... costs twice as much and helps twice as many people as the president's proposal."

The most controversial addition is a provision that would have Medicare pay 80 percent of prescription drug costs after a $500 annual deductible. Medicare now covers no at-home drugs except for organ transplant patients.

Rostenkowski said he has some problem with the drug benefit himself because of uncertainty about how much it might cost in future years, and there is no such provision in the Senate Finance Committee version.

And Rep. Fortney Stark, D-Calif., lead author of bill that cleared the House on Wednesday, observed afterward that his original version likewise contained no drug benefit.

Asked to assess how that particular benefit might fare in the Senate, Stark told reporters it would "be very difficult to eliminate it. It may well be made less generous."

The drug benefit has been the focus of the administration's opposition to the House plan and a threat issued by White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater on behalf of Reagan that he would veto the measure if it came to him with the exact House wording.

However, Fitzwater held open the possibility of compromise in those remarks Tuesday and, given the overall popularity of the catastrophic health issue, there seemed little inclination for either side to push the matter to a head.

Assessing that broad support for the basic legislation, Rep. Claude Pepper of Florida told his colleagues: "For the first time in my 50-year congressional career, the president, Congress and the people are all standing on the same square."

Rostenkowski emphasized early in the debate that the House bill contains a "new progressive financing mechanism paid through the income tax system."

Proponents, who insist on calling that a "supplemental premium" rather than a tax on the elderly, would result in about 40 percent of them bearing a major share of the costs for all.

The 60 percent of the elderly who do not have enough income to subject them to income taxes under current law would pay only a relatively small increase — $2.10 in the first year — in the flat monthly premium already assessed through a deduction in Social Security checks.

As originally proposed by Reagan, the catastrophic health coverage would be financed solely by an increase in the so-called Part B monthly premium imposed equally on all beneficiaries regardless of financial status.

Study Says AIDS Vaccine May Help

By MALCOLM RITTER
AP Science Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — An effective AIDS vaccine should help the body destroy blood cells infected by the AIDS virus, says a researcher who reported today that the body's immune system launches such attacks.

That response begins naturally after infection, but "it may be that once people get infected, no matter how much response is generated ... it may be too late," said Bruce D. Walker.

An AIDS vaccine may help by priming the body for attack ahead of time, said Walker, a research fellow at Massachusetts General Hospital and Harvard Medical School.

The killing of cells could be important because the AIDS virus enters cells rather than roaming freely in the bloodstream, he said.

Evidence of a cell-killing response to infection is reported in today's issue of the British journal Nature by Walker and colleagues Timothy Paradis and Robert Schooley; Bernard Moss of the National Institutes of Health, and other researchers.

In the same issue, French scientists say they recovered blood cells that do the killing from the lungs of people infected with the AIDS virus.

The killer cells, called cytotoxic T lymphocytes, appear to help fight some viral diseases such as influenza, Walker said in a recent telephone interview.

It is not known if they play a role in protecting against acquired immune deficiency syndrome, but their effectiveness in other viral diseases suggests they might help in AIDS if a vaccine activates them before infection, he said.

Ideally, an AIDS vaccine should spur the body to make proteins called antibodies to attack the virus directly, and the killer cells to destroy cells the virus infects, he said.

The AIDS virus multiplies by infecting certain cells and forcing them to make material for more viruses.

Walker reported in Nature that killer cells from people infected with the AIDS virus destroy cells harboring that virus, while killer cells from uninfected people do not.

Researchers took blood cells called B cells from eight men infected by the AIDS virus and five people who were not infected. Then they infected the B cells with genetically engineered versions of a virus called vaccinia.

AZT Drug Passing Tests

BOSTON (AP) — The drug AZT reduced the death rate among AIDS patients from an expected 50 percent to 10 percent during the first year of treatment, doctors say.

A study published today in the New England Journal of Medicine also indicated that the death rate of AIDS patients on AZT was about four to six times lower than usual during their first nine months on the drug.

However, the researchers cautioned: "Further studies will be needed to define the optimal dose of AZT and to understand the full range of benefit in the various stages of HIV (AIDS virus) infection."

The figures are a continuation of the research begun to establish the effectiveness of AZT, which was approved for use by AIDS patients last March.

AZT, or azidothymidine, does not cure AIDS, and no one knows how long it will ultimately extend victims' lives. It reduces the frequency and severity of bouts of opportunistic infections, which often kill people with the disease.

The study, directed by Dr.

Margaret A. Fischl of the University of Miami, began at 12 medical centers in February 1986.

The latest published results updated the results through last April. The drug was tested on patients with acquired immune deficiency syndrome and a less severe form of the disease called AIDS-related complex, or ARC.

Of 145 patients treated with AZT, 6 percent had died after nine months of therapy and 10 percent died after one year. Of the 137 patients who took dummy placebos, 37 percent died within nine months.

"Too few patients in that group were alive after nine months to provide meaningful one-year mortality rates, but other studies have shown that it would be in the range of 50 percent," said Dr. David Barry, vice president of research at Burroughs Wellcome, which makes AZT.

A separate report in the journal by Dr. Douglas D. Richman of the University of California, San Diego, described the drug's side effects, mainly nausea, muscle pain, insomnia and anemia.

Holm's Spending Habits Detailed In Divorce Trial

By JEFF WILSON
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Dynasty" star Joan Collins' estranged husband Peter Holm cashed checks averaging $9,000 each on 40 to 60 consecutive banking days during their doomed 13-month marriage, an accountant testified.

Lawrence Turner, the actress' accountant, said he could not determine what Holm did with the money.

Turner's testimony on Wednesday followed descriptions of the lavish lifestyle Holm, 40, had during his short marriage to Miss Collins, 54. It included a $20,000 monthly clothing allowance and $1.3 million in payments.

Celebrity attorney Marvin Mitchelson argued Holm, a former Swedish rock star, was happy to take the money then, but wants to ignore a pre-nuptial agreement now that his marriage to Miss Collins is ending.

the courtroom after Turner's revelation.

Mitchelson tried to establish during the second day of the couple's bitter divorce trial that money Miss Collins paid Holm was a salary for his services under a prenuptial agreement, and not support payments, as Holm contends.

Holm's attorney, Frank Steinschreiber, maintains the agreement document was informal, compensating Holm while the couple was married.

Mitchelson insists it is binding, and contends Holm took advantage of the clause calling for payment of 20 percent of her income to him, using the money to buy a $300,000 house in southern France and an $80,000 boat.

Holm denied discussing prenuptial agreements with two lawyers representing Miss Collins. Under questioning by Mitchelson, however, he conceded that title to the house in France and the boat were in his name.

The actress' lawyer also said Holm never paid income taxes on the $1.3 million paid by Miss Collins.

Holm testified Wednesday that he never regard the premarital agreement as legally binding. "It was a private agreement between us. It didn't change anything," Holm said.

Miss Collins sat attentively, sipping mineral water during the testimony, which shifted to accountants discussing financial details.

In Tuesday's testimony, Miss Collins sounded like her "Dynasty" character, Alexis Carrington Colby. "I've never met a man yet who was able to take care of me," Miss Collins said in explaining why she wanted a prenuptial agreement.

Miss Collins was brought to tears Wednesday afternoon after Mitchelson recounted her marital problems in Superior Court Judge Earl F. Riley's courtroom.

"It is a regrettable thing to have to come down here, wash linen and go through it all and put your life up before a lot of people in the press," Mitchelson said. "It's painful. I wouldn't want to do it."

Miss Collins then briefly re-took the witness stand to say Holm never told her about the purchase of the home and boat.

Holm is seeking $80,000 a month from the actress to maintain what he called his accustomed style of life, pending a final settlement.

In his opening remarks Tuesday, Mitchelson portrayed Holm as a penniless, failed entrepreneur who was well paid before and during the couple's marriage.

Holm and Miss Collins were married in Las Vegas, Nev., in November 1985, and Miss Collins filed for divorce in December 1986. It was her fourth marriage and Holm's first.

Comedian Looking For New Projects

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Louie Anderson probably gets more mileage out of growing up than any other comedian except Bill Cosby.

Anderson, whose round face shines as benevolently as a harvest moon, pokes loving fun at his family and the traumas of his upbringing. He grew up, the next to youngest, with five brothers and five sisters.

"Bill Cosby and I had similar goals," he said. "I wanted parents to be able to bring their children and children to be able to bring their parents to my concerts. I feel a family that can laugh about family problems is better off. The difference between Cosby and myself is that he sees it from an adult perspective and I tell it from a child's viewpoint."

The roly-poly comedian can be seen at his best in a concert recorded in his hometown of Minneapolis. The show, "Louie Anderson at the Guthrie," will be shown on Showtime pay television beginning Saturday.

His weight is now 350 pounds, down from 425. "I've always been big," he said. "But I don't do fat jokes anymore."

Anderson, 35, who gave up counseling emotionally disturbed children to become a comedian nine years ago, is out to expand his horizons beyond standup comedy. He has three new projects: a movie, a TV series and a one-man show.

He will soon start work on the movie, called "The Wrong Guys," which also stars three other comedians, Richard Belzer, Richard Lewis and Tim Thomerson. They play four former Cub Scout buddies who come back for a camping reunion and, of course, get into all kinds of trouble.

Actor Richard Egan Dies Of Cancer

By RICHARD DE ATLEY
Associated Press Writer
SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Actor Richard Egan, who starred in action and western movies and portrayed the father of a pregnant teenager in "A Summer Place," has died of prostate cancer at age 65.

Egan died at St. Johns Medical Center on Monday, according to a hospital statement. He was admitted to the hospital on June 16.

The handsome San Francisco native was considered a replacement for Clark Gable when he arrived in Hollywood in 1949, but his roles chiefly were confined to action and western movies during his 33-film career.

Among his movies were "The Damned Don't Cry," "One Minute To Zero," "Demetrius and the Gladiators," "The View From Pompey's Head," "Love Me Tender," "The Revolt of Mamie Stover," "The Hunters," "Pollyanna," "The Destroyers," and "The Sweet Creek County War."

In the 1959 movie "A Summer Place," Egan played the father of Sandra Dee, whose character became pregnant after a fling with a handsome boy portrayed by Troy Donahue. Egan was 37 when he was cast for the film, but the classically trained actor played the role convincingly.

Egan also starred in two short-lived television series, "Empire" in 1962 and "Redigo" in 1964. Both were contemporary Westerns, with "Redigo" actually a re-fashioned version of "Empire," focusing on Egan's ranch-hand character.

Egan also toured in such stage productions as Neil Simon's "I Ought To Be in Pictures," "Hanky Panky," and "Strike A Match," with Pat O'Brien and Eva Gabor.

Born July 29, 1921, Egan attended the University of San Francisco, and joined the Army in 1942. An excellent athlete, he instructed troops in judo and spent one year's duty in the Philippines.

After mustering out in 1946 with the rank of captain, Egan went to Stanford University and earned a master's degree in theater history and dramatic literature.

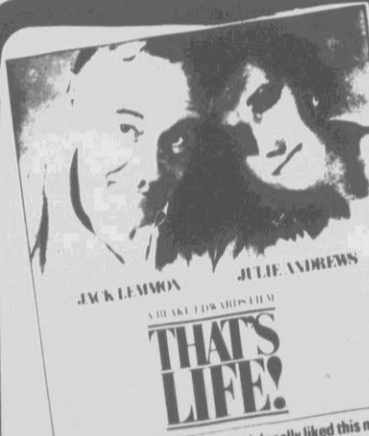

He appeared in about 30 plays at Stanford during his three years there, and a talent scout from Warner Bros. saw several of them, and sent him to Hollywood in 1949.

Egan married the former Patricia Hardy in San Francisco in 1958. He is survived by his wife, their four daughters and one son.

Funeral arrangements were set for Thursday evening at St. Martin of Tours Roman Catholic Church in the Brentwood section of Los Angeles, with burial Friday at Holy Cross Cemetery in Culver City.

All-Star Baseball On NBC Finishes Third In Nielsens

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — The All-Star Baseball Game on NBC slid into third place in last week's Nielsen ratings, outperformed by the network's dynamic duo of "Family Ties" and "The Cosby Show."

NBC took the first five places in the A.C. Nielsen Co. ratings for the week ended July 19 as it extended its winning streak to 25 in a row. NBC had a prime-time rating of 13.5, second-place CBS had 9.8 and third-place ABC had 8.8.

A rating is a percentage of the nation's 87.4 million households with television. A share is a percentage of the viewers tuned in during a particular time period.

NBC's telecast of pro baseball's All-Star Game in Oakland was the only new show among the summer reruns in the Top 10. The National League beat the American League 2-0 in the 13-inning overtime game.

A new NBC show, "The Days and Nights of Molly Dodd," was in 15th place. But other original programming, on the Fox Broadcasting Co., didn't attract much of an audience.

The highest-rated Fox show was "Werewolf," which did no better than a tie with the lowest-rated network show, third part of "Space" on CBS. The rest of the Fox Saturday and Sunday lineup was in the sub-cellular.

NBC won six places in the Top 10 and ABC had three places. CBS, despite its second place finish, had only one show in the Top 10 and only two in the second 10.

Here are the Top 10 shows: "Family Ties," "The Cosby Show," "The All-Star Baseball Game," "Cheers," and "The Golden Girls," all NBC; ABC's "Growing Pains" and "Who's the Boss?"; CBS' "Murder, She Wrote"; and the NBC Sunday Movie "Perry Mason Returns" and ABC's "Moonlighting," which tied for 10th place.

Two new comedies had their premiere last Saturday on Fox, but neither was able to mount a challenge to the three networks. "The New Adventures of Beans Baxter" had a rating of 4.1 and "Karen's Song" had 3.5. "Werewolf," which made its debut the week before with a 6.5 rating and beat shows on ABC and CBS, dropped to 4.4.

Fox's Sunday shows got even lower ratings. "21 Jump Street" and "Married...With Children" tied with 3.4

Paycheck Project

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country singer Johnny Paycheck and the evangelist who introduced Jim Bakker to Jessica Hahn are teaming up for a gospel music album titled "The Outlaw and the Preacher."

Charles Ammerman, Paycheck's manager, said that the singer and John Wesley Fletcher hope to record the album in the next month.

Paycheck has been sentenced to 9½ years in prison for his 1986 conviction in a barroom shooting in Ohio.

Trial For Beastie Boy

LIVERPOOL, England (AP) — Lawyers representing Adam Horowitz of the Beastie Boys rap group, accused of hurling a can of beer that hit a girl fan in the face, have chosen for him to face trial before a magistrate on Nov. 17.

The 20-year-old New Yorker, the son of playwright Israel Horowitz, is alleged to have hurled the can into the audience during a concert in this northwest port city on May 30.

The can allegedly hit Joanne Marie Clarke in the face, causing bruises, cuts and a black eye.

Horowitz was originally charged with inflicting grievous bodily harm, which frequently brings a jail term, but the charge was reduced to the lesser offense of causing Ms. Clarke actual bodily harm.

The musician had originally chosen to be tried at Liverpool Crown Court. But in a last minute-switch, his lawyers told Liverpool Stipendiary Magistrate Norman Wootton on Tuesday that he now wanted to be tried in a magistrates court, and the Nov. 17 date was arranged.

Under the British legal system, people charged with certain categories of offense including assault can choose whether they want to be tried in a magistrates court or in a superior court.

Magistrates courts are the lowest rung of the legal ladder. They do not have juries and cannot impose a jail term of more than six months or a fine of more than $3,200.

 This 17th Century three-volume German Bible once belonged to composer Johann Sebastian Bach. In 1985, it was found in the possession of an elderly farmer in Michigan. The first "books" were Egyptian papyrus scrolls containing government and scientific records and prayers. Because of acid used in the paper, many books produced between 1900 and 1940 are likely to fall apart long before these Bibles. Books made before 1900 were mostly of rag content and will survive longer.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he, or she, will have much natural charm, but teach your child not to rely on this alone. The education should be slanted along the lines of entertainment, artistry and adornment. He or she will have a great interest in music, and also a superior musical ability. Encourage it.

Opening lead: Three of ♣ "Your Honor:
 "It might seem ridiculous for small claims court to be involved in a case for $8. However, a matter of principle is at stake.
 "In our bridge game the other night, I held the West cards and led a low spade against declarer's three no trump contract. My partner's queen forced the ace. Declarer cashed the ace of clubs on which I followed with my eight, then led the king of diamonds. My partner held up the ace, and declarer gratefully accepted the gift, reeling off six more clubs and conceding the last four tricks. I maintain that anyone other than a congenial idiot would have won the ace and reverted to spades, assuring a two-trick set. Therefore, I am entitled to regain what we eventually lost on the rubber."
 "As East, Your Honor, I contend the case is nowhere near as cut and dried as my erstwhile partner has presented it. What if declarer held the jack of spades and a singleton ace of clubs? I could not tell from partner's club spot whether he held a singleton or doubleton club. If the latter, had I taken my ace of diamonds, the queen would have become the entry to cash the clubs and make the contract."
 "While I normally consider a case for $8 a waste of the court's time, I find the hand interesting. There is a subtle clue to the winning defense. The partner of the player who pre-empts cannot be sure he is going to find an outside entry in his partner's hand. Therefore, if he bids three no trump, he must either expect to make nine tricks in his own hand or else be able to run his partner's long suit. East can see that the former is not true, so he must play South for at least a doubleton club.

THE TURBO THAT'S GOING TO MAKE SAABS AND VOLVOS MOVE SLOWER.

PRESENTING THE PEUGEOT 505 TURBOS.

Car and Driver recently described the 150-hp Peugeot 505 Turbo S as a car with "instant launch capabilities."

And now, these cars are about to rocket out of the showroom. Because until September 30th, you'll get as much as $3000* in cash when you buy a Peugeot 505 Turbo S sedan or wagon. You can take the money and run, or use it as a down payment. You can even use it as a down payment on a lease or financing.

But besides $3000, you'll also get a car with standard features and amenities (like ABS) only available from Saab and Volvo at extra cost, if at all.

So stop in for a test drive. You'll see what Saab and Volvo are worried about.

*See us for details. Manufacturer's suggested retail prices do not include destination, taxes and title charges.

NOTHING ELSE FEELS LIKE IT.
