Peace Plan Response Viewed As 'Positive'

By JIM DRINKARD
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Speaker Jim Wright today greeted as "very positive" the early responses of Nicaraguan officials to the Central American peace initiative he and President Reagan devised, but the plan was being viewed warily in Congress.

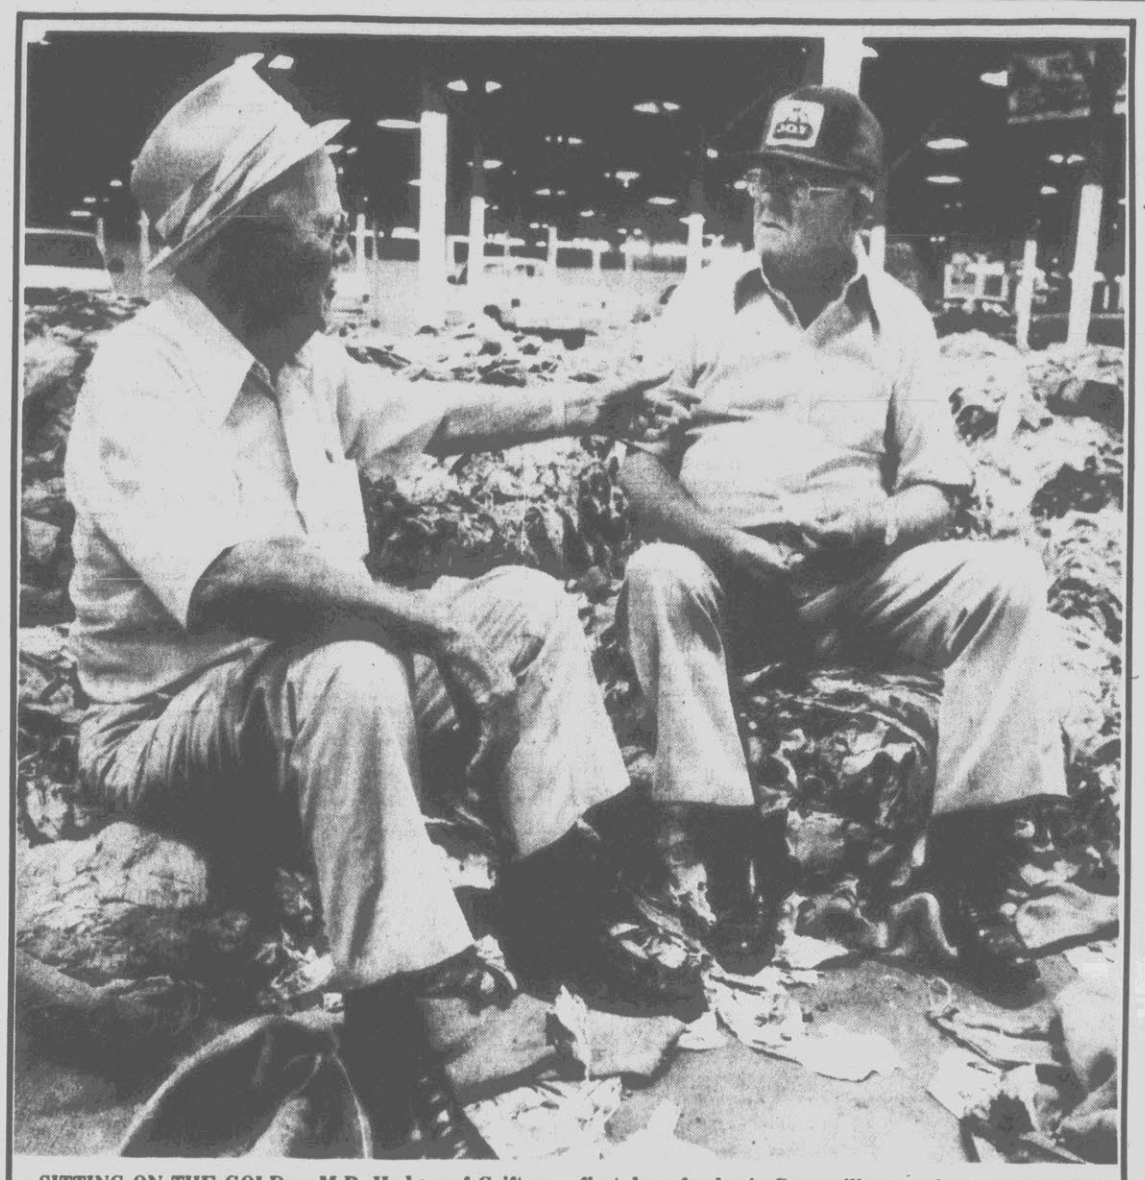

Wright told reporters he already had received a letter from Nicaraguan Vice President Sergio Ramirez reporting that the Managua government's first reaction was positive. "All the points are worthy to be discussed in a very positive way," he quoted Ramirez as saying.

"It's a very positive response to our initiative. I should think we'd say, 'Hurray, fine, let's get going — the sooner the better,'" Wright said.

Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega, who was meeting with other Central American heads of state today in Guatemala City to discuss regional peace, said Wednesday he was willing to discuss the peace plan, which would ask his government to restore democratic freedoms, shun Soviet bloc military aid and agree to a cease-fire in return for a suspension of U.S. military aid to the Contra rebels battling his Sandinista regime.

Farmers selling tobacco in Greenville Wednesday — the opening day of the 1987 sales season on the Eastern Belt — seemed pleased with the prices companies paid for leaf, according to market officials.

The $138.66 per hundred pound average for the first day of sales was $12.81 higher than than on opening day a year ago, tobacco officials reported today.

A total of 692,028 pounds of leaf sold in Greenville Wednesday for $959,596. On opening day 1986, 768,644 pounds of tobacco were sold for $965,258, for an average $125.85 per hundred pound.

Based on early tabulations by the Federal-State Market News Service in Raleigh, the average price per hundred pounds paid for tobacco on all Eastern Belt markets was $137.49 for the day, $2.45 higher than in 1986.

"I was tickled with it," Kenneth Allen, sales supervisor for the Greenville market, said of opening day. "I think common tobacco really sold compared to last year and I think the farmers were well pleased.

"There were very few tags turned," he said. Turning a tag indicates a farmer's dissatisfaction with the price offered. "Stabilization didn't receive a single pile in Greenville yesterday," Allen said. The Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corp. purchases tobacco if the price offered by companies is less than the federal support price.

In 1986, according to Allen, 12 to 14 percent of the tobacco offered for sale on opening day went to Stabilization.

"I would say 95 percent" of the tobacco sold Wednesday "was bottom stalk tobacco," Allen said. And because opening day prices are historically lower — as is leaf quality — than averages paid later in the season, Allen said he expects prices to go up as the selling season continues and better quality leaf reaches the warehouse floor.

Mayor Koch III

NEW YORK (AP) — Mayor Edward I. Koch was rushed to the hospital this morning after complaining of nausea and dizziness, his office said.

Koch, 62, had just left a breakfast discussion of AIDS sponsored by the New York Post at the Sheraton Centre Hotel when he became ill, according to George Arzt, the mayor's press secretary.

Arzt said Koch was being driven from the hotel to an appointment in Harlem shortly after 10 a.m. when he complained of feeling sick.

Koch had held a news conference immediately after the AIDS conference, and had appeared healthy.

But in his car, "the mayor complained of dizziness and nausea, and it appeared his speech was slurred," said Tom Kelly, a mayoral spokesman.

Koch "complained of slowness of speech, and his volume was low," Arzt said.

Finally the mayor tapped one of his bodyguards on the shoulder, said, "I feel my speech is slowed. ... Let's go to Lenox Hill (Hospital)," according to Arzt, who was in the car with Koch. "We turned around and went to the hospital."

Soviets Say Warheads Block Pact

GENEVA (AP) — Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze said today that U.S. nuclear warheads on West German Pershing 1A missiles remain the major obstacle to a superpower pact on eliminating intermediate-range nuclear missiles.

"Seventy-two U.S. nuclear warheads stand between us and an agreement on intermediate-range and shorter-range missiles," Shevardnadze told the 40-nation Geneva Conference on Disarmament.

He said that if the United States refused to give up the warheads, Soviet allies "could ask for the stationing of similar systems on their territories, and the Soviet Union could meet their request."

But that would result in an agreement that was "truncated, emasculated and anemic," said Shevardnadze, who arrived Wednesday for a two-day visit.

Chief U.S. arms control negotiator Max Kampelman, in town to meet with Shevardnadze, called the Soviet foreign minister's comments on the Pershing 1As an expected "propaganda" move.

He said the superpowers are now "fully agreed" in principle on eliminating their intermediate-range missiles and that the West Germany Pershing 1As are not subject to the accord.

In an interview with the CBS "Morning News," Kampleman said he was "not at all troubled about the fact that Mr. Shevardnadze couldn't resist the temptation of engaging in some propaganda before a large audience. I don't take that too seriously."

Intermediate-range nuclear missiles comprise weapons with a range of 600 to about 3,000 miles and so-called shorter-range rockets with a range of 300 to 600 miles. The Pershing 1As are shorter-range missiles.

In his wide-ranging speech, Shevardnadze also appeared to make an important concession in the conference's negotiations on a chemical weapons ban.

He said the Soviets would "proceed from the need to make legally binding" the idea of mandatory inspections.

Previously, the Soviets had embraced so-called challenge inspections in principle but said they would reserve the right to refuse one on national security grounds.

A challenge inspection would allow a party which suspects another of cheating to call for an inspection of the other's facilities on short notice.

The United States has proposed inspections within a few days, while a British proposal calls for a 10-day limit. Shevardnadze did not say which time limit the Soviets would accept.

Shevardnadze also said the Soviet Union would open one military facility, in Shikhany, to conference members to "see standard items of our chemical weapons and observe the technology of destroying chemical weapons at a mobile facility."

He said a chemical weapons destruction plant under construction would be opened to experts later.

CBS Planning North Movie

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — CBS has acquired the rights to do a television movie based on a biography of Lt. Col. Oliver North, a network official said.

CBS has reached an agreement with reporter Ben Bradlee Jr. to base a movie on Bradlee's planned life story of North titled "Guts and Glory," said Steven Mills, CBS vice president for movies and miniseries.

The movie agreement was expected to be made public today in a news conference by CBS officials in Los Angeles, according to a story published by the San Francisco Chronicle.

The earliest the movie could get on the air would be the 1988-89 television season, Mills said. Although no decisions have been made on the format of the movie, it would probably be a two-hour show, but it could also be a miniseries, according to a CBS spokesman.

Creature Named

An unusual sea creature found only in the Pacific Ocean near the coast of Oregon has been named for an East Carolina University biologist.

Professor Francis P. Belcik of the ECU Department of Biology spent 10 years researching the body form, mouth parts, internal anatomy and life cycle of the animal now called Ismaila Belciki Ho. Official listing of the name was made in the recent issue of Crustaceana, an international journal published in the Netherlands.

The creature, an unusual copepod parasite, is found on the bodies of Oregon coast sea-slugs (Antiopella fusca).

There are only three species of these parasites known to exist. The other two species are found in the West Indies and off the coast of California.

Dr. Ju-Shey Ho, a biologist at California State University at Long Beach, named the new species in honor of Belcik's research.

Belcik has been a biology professor at ECU since 1965 and has published research on a variety of marine invertebrates especially deep-sea animals.

Local Social Security Office Celebrates 25th Anniversary

The Greenville Social Security office opened 25 years ago today and celebrated this quarter century anniversary with refreshments for visitors.

According to Fred Lilley, Social Security Administration district manager, the opening 25 years ago was attended by distinguished guests, including Congressmen Herbert C. Bonner and L.H. Fountain and Greenville Mayor Charles H. King.

The office, at that time, served Beaufort, Bertie, Chowan, Hyde, Tyrrell, Washington, Martin and Pitt counties. Since then branch offices have been opened in Washington and Elizabeth City to serve all but Pitt and Martin counties, which continue to be served by the Greenville office.

"During the 25 years since this office opened, there have been many dramatic changes in Social Security, most of them greatly expanding the program far beyond what was intended when the Social Security Act was passed in 1935," Lilley said.

He said that in August 1962, 6,099 Pitt County citizens received monthly Social Security benefits totalling $304,271. This month more than 14,000 Pitt County citizens will receive more than $5 million. Medicare, student benefits and Supplemental Security Income are some of the programs that have been added since 1962, he said.

The local office has 19 employees. Two of them — Madeline Smith and Joan Jordan — have been on duty since the office opened. The two agree that the biggest change they've noticed during the quarter century has been the increasing complexity of Social Security laws.

"Had it not been for the advancement in computer technology to keep pace with the constantly changing provisions in the law, administration of the Social Security programs would have been impossible," Ms. Smith said.

People who visit the flower-decorated office at 102 Eastbrook Drive today are being greeted with refreshments, Lilley said.

Highway Extension On Drawing Board

The N.C. Department of Transportation plans to extend N.C. 43 south from U.S. 17 business in Vanceboro to U.S. 17 in New Bern in an effort to relieve traffic congestion on the John Lawson Bridge crossing the Neuse River, DOT official say.

"The North Carolina Department of Transportation is in the process of looking at short-term and long-term solutions to the traffic congestion problem on the U.S. 17 bridge crossing the Neuse River at New Bern," James E. Harrington, transportation secretery said.

"Hopefully, this will reroute southbound traffic to Jacksonville along the N.C. 43 route rather than the U.S. 17 route which will cross the John Lawson Bridge."

The extension of N.C. 43 from its junction with U.S. 17 business in Vanceboro, which will be posted next week, will run southward along U.S. 17 business through Vanceboro to U.S. 17 south of Vanceboro, then along state road 1482, state road 1400, and state road 1401 to N.C. 55.

The route will continue from N.C. 55 to U.S. 70 business, U.S. 70 bypass and state road 1309 to U.S. 17.

The length of the extension is 18.2 miles and all of the secondary roads involved meet primary route standards, according to DOT officials. The routing is approximately 2.7 miles shorter than following U.S. 17 through New Bern and Bridgeton.

Harrington said the route will provide travelers with an alternative.

"Hopefully, motorists traveling from Rocky Mount and Greenville along N.C. 43 and from Williamston and Washington on U.S. 17 who have their final destination either Jacksonville, Wilmington or Morehead City will take advantage of this western route in order that they not get caught in the congestion of the draw bridge and the intersection in New Bern," he said.

Senate Planned To Vote Today On Spending Bill

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — An $18.4 billion budget plan for fiscal 1987-89 won easy approval in the state House and was headed for the Senate after the only provision that sparked a major disagreement — the state abortion fund — was kept intact.

The Senate was to vote today on the omnibus bill, the first of three that will comprise the biggest budget in state history.

"The governor has a reason to claim victory with this budget," House GOP Leader Betsy Cochrane, R-Davie, said after Wednesday's House vote, noting that more than 90 percent of Republican Gov. Jim Martin's spending requests were granted.

She complained, however, that the package deleted nearly all the spending increases sought by the Department of Commerce. "I find this ironic in view of all the rhetoric we've heard about economic development this session."

Rep. Bob Etheridge, chairman of the House Base Budget Committee, countered that the budget's provisions for educational improvements were a sound investment in economic growth.

"My view of economic development is a total, well-balanced state budget," Etheridge, D-Harnett, said. "When you go home you can tell your constituents you've done more for public schools in this state ... which I think is an important aspect of economic development."

The 163-page document received tentative House approval 95-3, then gained final passage on a voice vote.

Two budget bills remain to be considered, one allocating funds for capital projects and the other for spending by non-state agencies, including local "pork barrel" projects. They will total $231 million, said House Appropriations Committee Chairman Billy Watkins, D-Granville.

Highlights of the budget include:

— $125.1 million in fiscal 1987-88 and $260.5 million in 1988-89 to implement the third- and fourth-year installments of the Basic Education Program, an eight-year, $800 million blueprint for upgrading public schools in North Carolina.

The BEP appropriations will reduce class sizes in grades 10-12; hire teachers in all grades; relieve local governments of paying vocational education teachers; fund remedial summer schools and in-school suspension programs; and hire additional assistant principals and clerical employees.

— $48.1 million over both years for continuation of the experimental Career Ladder Program for teachers in 16 counties. The Legislature rejected Martin's proposal to bring an additional 12 counties under the plan in 1987-88 and start it statewide the next year.

— $198.6 million in 1987-88 and $202 million in 1988-89 for a 5 percent, across-the-board pay raise for state employees and teachers, which will make Martin the nation's best-paid governor at $105,000. District Court judges will get a 10 percent raise.

— $51.8 million the first year and $71.6 million the second to reduce a shortfall in the state employee health plan.

The budget, developed over several months, was enacted without repetition of the rancorous partisan debates of 1985 and 1986, when Republicans criticized Democratic spending priorities and the votes went mostly along party lines.

House GOP Leader Betsy Cochrane, R-Davie, said all Republicans but three — Reps. Ray Warren, R-Mecklenburg, Walt Windley, R-Gaston, and Vernon Abernethy, R-Gaston — voted for the package because they endorsed its general direction and most of its provisions.

Warren, the House minority whip, offered an amendment to cut the abortion from $924,500 to $200,000 — the amount he said was needed to pay to terminate pregnancies resulting from rape and incest and that endanger the mother's life.

"It is fundamentally wrong to tax your constituents and my constituents to pay for something they manisfestly do not want to pay for," Warren said.

He urged the Legislature to "make a statement that in North Carolina, as far as tax money goes, we believe in people, that everyone is valuable. ... There are no throw-away people."

But Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Granville, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, "emphatically disagreed" that the state offered abortion on demand. He said existing standards for eligiblity were almost as tough as those Warren proposed.

Watkins said Warren's amendment simply would leave less money for abortions and make the fund "first-come, first-serve."

The House defeated Warren's amendment, 70-34.

The same amendment also failed on a voice vote earlier Wednesday before the Joint Appropriations Committee approved the budget bill.

Then, the amendment was offered by Rep. F.J. "Trip" Sizemore, R-Guilford, who emphasized that it called for using $500,000 of the abortion money to launch a state AIDS education program.

Iran Extends Gulf War Games; Warning Issued

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iran announced today it was extending its three-day naval exercises in the Persian Gulf region for another 24 hours, and warned ships and aircraft to stay out of the region.

Meanwhile, the Iranian government theatened to use force against Saudi Arabia unless that country withdrew police surrounding Iran's diplomatic missions in Jidda and Riyadh. Arab diplomats said the officers had been removed. The two countries have been feuding over the killing of hundreds of Iranian pilgrims in Mecca last Friday.

A military communique reported by Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency said the military exercises, originally scheduled to end Thursday, would finish Friday. It repeated warnings to all craft to refrain from approaching the exercise zone in the gulf, the Strait of Hormuz and the Sea of Oman.

"Otherwise the Islamic Republic would not be responsible for possible incidents against foreign planes and warships passing through the region, particularly because various types of missiles and other weapons were being deployed in the maneuvers," the agency, which is monitored in Nicosia, Cyprus, quoted the communique as saying.

The announcement came a day after Iran announced the launching of its first submarine and said it would practice locking missile guidance systems onto targets in the narrow Hormuz strait.

Tehran radio on Wednesday said the exercises, code-named "Martydom," displayed "the power and greatness of Islam against world arrogance, in particular against the mischiefs of plotter America." Iran also has said the exercises would honor the Iranian pilgrims killed during the annual Moslem pilgrimage to Mecca.

Tehran has claimed 600 of its pilgrims were killed and said police opened fire on the crowd. Saudi Arabia says 402 people were killed when an Iranian political demonstration turned into a riot.

In Washington, Pentagon sources said three empty Kuwaiti tankers had arrived in the Arabian Sea, south of the gulf. They are to be put under the American flag and escorted by U.S. warships through the gulf, one of the battlefields in the 7-year-old Iran-Iraq war.

Gulf shipping sources said none of the Kuwaiti tankers would enter the gulf today, as originally planned, but would probably begin the trip next week.

A total of 11 Kuwaiti ships are slated for Stars and Stripes protection under a U.S. plan to protect navigation in the gulf. The Reagan administration adopted the plan after the Soviets leased three tankers to the Kuwaitis.

Iran has singled out Kuwaiti tankers for attack, accusing oil-rich Kuwait of aiding Iraq in the gulf war.

Tehran radio today quoted an unidentified Iranian Foreign Ministry official as saying Saudi soldiers were surrounding Iran's embassy in Riyadh and its consulate in Jidda and threatening to fire on them.

Parvis Afshari, the Iranian acting chief of mission, told the Associated Press in a telephone interview that the Riyadh building was "blockaded" and the Jidda consulate "surrounded."

"Here and in Jidda, the security officers carried automatic rifles, and military vehicles were parked nearby," he said.

His account was disputed by an Iranian diplomat reached by telephone at the Jidda consulate, who said: "The siege has been lifted."

Arab diplomats in Riyadh also said the guard was lifted.

"Six uniformed security officers and about eight plainclothes servicemen stood by the gate of the embassy for two days and were gone Thursday morning," said one Arab diplomat, who spoke on condition he was not identified.

After news of Friday's violence reached Tehran, mobs stormed the Saudi Embassy and seized four diplomats. A government official said three of the four had been released, but Riyadh radio, monitored in Nicosia, quoted a Saudi Foreign Ministry spokesman today as saying that the "fate of four Saudi diplomats kidnapped during the storming of the embassy is still unknown."

The Jidda-based English-language newspaper Saudi Gazette said today that Fakheriddin Hejazi, the man who engineered the takeover of the U.S. Embassy in Tehran in 1979, masterminded the Mecca riots. It quoted a Washington D.C. release by the Iranian dissident group, the People's Mujahedeen, for its information.

In Tehran, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomenei canceled all appointments scheduled for today, the final day of the Moslem Eid al-Adha feast, a major Islamic holiday. A Tehran radio report, monitored in Nicosia, did not explain the move by the 87-year-old revolutionary patriarch.

It is unusual for such a prominent Islamic leader to be absent for Eid al-Adha observances unless he is ill.

And in London today, The Independent newspaper reported that Iran has appealed secretly to Kuwait to suspend the U.S. reflagging of its tanker fleet in exchange for an Iranian guarantee not to attack its ships.

Fugitive Who Fled In 1946 Seeks Pardon

LOS ANGELES (AP) — After 28 years on the straight and narrow, a 62-year-old chain gang fugitive must hope for the mercy of two governors to escape a 1946 Virginia warrant for his arrest.

Vincent Pelliccio was in jail today, held without bond on the 41-year-old fugitive warrant issued after he cut his shackles and slipped away from the Virginia chain gang while he was serving a five-year prison sentence.

His relatives say his crime of "storebreaking" was relatively minor, and maintain he's long since paid his debt to society by living in fear of arrest.

Unless the family can win over California Gov. George Deukmejian or Virginia Gov. Gerald Baliles, Pelliccio faces extradition to Virginia to serve out his term.

Pelliccio's attorney, Richard Behrens, said he is planning to appeal to Deukemjian to refuse extradition on compassionate grounds. It isn't done often, and Behrens acknowledges there isn't much hope.

An appeal for clemency in Virginia also is a prospect, he said, but Baliles will not consider it until Pellicio returns to Virginia, said an official in the governor's office.

Deukmejian press aide Donna Lucas said his office has not received the extradition request and has no comment of Pelliccio's plight.

Takeovers Defended

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the Federal Trade Commission today defended so-called "hostile" takeovers, calling such mergers and acquisitions good for the economy.

"Hostile takeover efforts are a critically important mechanism for facilitating the efficient movement of assets to their highest valued use," Chairman Daniel Oliver said in remarks prepared for delivery today to Congress.

Oliver said that despite the "unsavory image" created by such terms as "greenmail," "junk bonds" and "raiders," takeovers make management more efficient, benefit shareholders of the acquired company and help the economy as a whole.

"Frequently, only the incumbent managers are hostile, and that is often because they expect to lose their jobs if the takeover effort succeeds," Oliver said.

"The important policy point is rather that free and unfettered competition for the control of corporations and the assets they own is highly desirable, even essential, to a vigorous and healthy economy," Oliver said. "Takeover attempts are launched because the bidder believes that the value of the target's stock has been depressed by poor management.

"The bidder typically offers a premium to obtain controlling stock, expecting to oust existing managmenet and deploy the firm's productive assets more effectively."

Oliver's remarks were addressed to the Energy and Commerce committee's subcommittee on Transportation, Tourism and Hazardous Materials, which is conducting oversight hearings on mergers and acquisitions.

Oliver described the FTC's role in enforcing antitrust laws, explaining that the commission avoids considering whether a proposed merger is hostile or friendly. The commission is limited to determining whether a merger will preserve competition.

"Commission investigations of hostile mergers are therefore managed very closely to ensure that they proceed rapidly, yet are as thorough as those conducted for friendly transactions," he said.

Also some communities may suffer from the takeovers, "the benefits of competition to society as a whole far outweigh the costs to the affected individuals of business failures, plant closings and layoffs," he said.

He also said that the market prevents investors from overburdening the acquired company with debt used to finance the takeover.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Time To Adjourn

The state's lawmakers have no business staying in Raleigh until mid-August.

The 1987 N.C. General Assembly should have been able to conclude its business by now and adjourn at a decent date. The longer the session goes, the more money it costs taxpayers and the more frantic decision-making becomes.

It is questionable whether actions taken under pressure to adjourn are well-conceived positions on issues.

The blame for this dilatoriness falls on several factors. First and foremost is the inability of leadership in the two bodies of the Legislature to agree on important issues. This discord and the political jockeying it produced has become the real calendar buster in the 1987 session.

It's also likely that hours absorbed by lobbying efforts have affected the length of the 1987 session. The impact of this meddling can be seen in some questionable legislation — a bill allowing mobile homes in traditional residential neighborhoods and a bill requiring cities to reimburse billboard and sign owners when local laws require sign removal are two examples.

It's less likely the whoop-to-do over changing the budget process is to blame for tardiness. From the beginning, lawmakers lagged behind on issues. Serious budget work didn't even get under way until late June. Legislators may claim the revised funds allocation process bogged them down, but the slow pace of progress cannot be blamed on the so-called new openness of the budget-making process. Leaders pledged open meetings of the supersubcommittee — the group of powerful legislators which decides the basics of the budget. But the supersub huddled just as it always did. The process has, for the most part, remained the same as in years past — just slower.

Granted, tough issues faced the General Assembly in 1987. But difficult issues are not the culprit for slowness. The phosphate ban, hazardous waste legislation and the school construction fund were politically tedious battles on important issues. The same statement could be made, however, about any year and any slate of issues facing any governmental body. Decision-making on public policy is not easy, but it is an absolute that must be accomplished — and accomplished on a reasonable time line.

It's past time for the state's legislators to close the 1987 session of the General Assembly and come home. Decisions must be made and made expediently. It is expensive and unnecessary to keep the session going this long.

Distorted View

The Census Bureau has dropped another bit of statistical data in our laps, namely that the proportion of Americans living in poverty last year dropped to the lowest level since 1980.

It's a favorable report but as in many such documents, the full story isn't told because some data remains unused.

The government's official poverty line for a family of four in 1986 was $11,203; and the number of people below that line was a bit over 33 million in 1985 compared with almost a million people less in '86.

Rep. Thomas Downey (N.Y.), chairman of the House public assistance subcommittee and sponsor of a major welfare bill, said the drop in poverty was so small there was little to be proud of in the statistics. He observed the poverty rate was still higher than during the 1970s.

One observer associated with the non-profit Center on Budget and Policy Priorities, notes the gap between the rich and the poor has reached its widest point in the last 40 years and the trend has accelerated.

On the face of it, the picture is not so good; but again we remind we are dealing with uncertain statistics.

Example: the family figures do not include millions of single people.

Another example: Census figures are based only on cash income; however, there were very large handfuls of other non-cash benefits going to low-income families.

If such things as food stamps, free and reduced-price school lunches, Medicare-Medicaid, public and subsidized housing programs were included, the overall poverty rate (we're told) might drop to as low as 9 percent.

The Census people are interested in including those resources in calculating poverty rates but trying to set a cash value on them keeps running into criticism.

Still, without including non-cash benefits which are in wide use, the American public gets a distorted picture of how the national income is shared.

All of us will agree, however, that sustained non-inflationary growth is the government's single best tool for fighting poverty.

Political Mission For The Contras

WASHINGTON — The fate of the Nicaraguan Contras, or "freedom fighters" as President Reagan prefers to call them, is in doubt. Despite the impact of Lt. Col. Oliver North's impassioned testimony on their behalf, polls show that the public has not been convinced of the necessity to aid their cause, and congressional opinion is even more dubious.

These doubts are fully understandable. The Contra paramilitary campaign shows little sign of being able to win against the Sandinistas and practically no sign of generating any meaningful degree of political support within Nicaragua. Its operations are reportedly accompanied with repulsive brutality, and the nakedness of American support has its inevitable counterproductive effects in a Latin America long resentful of American intervention. The objective, a Contra victory in Managua, would from all appearances initiate just another authoritarian regime there, perhaps military in composition, probably little better than Somoza's or the Sandinistas' except for the exclusion of Cubans and others hostile to the United States.

But abandonment of the Contras is no solution. The Sandinista regime is blatantly totalitarian, an island in the democratic tide running in Latin America. Its open subservience to and support by the Cubans and the Soviet Union are an inherent menace to the United States and its allies in the area, since its "revolution without frontiers" would certainly be resumed if it saw the opportunity to move against its neighbors by subversion or military force. And withdrawal of American support could well unleash onto neighboring Honduras, El Salvador, Guatemala and Costa Rica an undisciplined horde of 15,000 trained paramilitary troops to make their living any way they could through banditry, drugs and service in the various private armies that have been only temporarily brought under some degree of control by governments struggling to establish democratic rule.

The solution to this dilemma lies in a new start in our policies and programs for Nicaragua, along the lines we should have followed from the beginning. To date, we have had the paramilitary cart in front of the political horse, in violation of the first principle of paramilitary operations that they must rest upon a firm political base. When such a base is not sufficiently developed, it must be built by identifying a cause, developing an organizational structure and recruiting popular support, well before the first shots are fired and certainly before raiding parties are sent from the outside. This is not an easy task when faced with a totalitarian regime, and it cannot be achieved over the short term. But it is nonetheless essential.

The present state of affairs in the region clearly offers an opportunity for such a program. President Oscar Arias of Costa Rica has proposed a regional peace effort which, if applied, would require Nicaragua to give amnesty to its Contra opponents and liberalize its political processes. The price would be the cessation of American support for the Contras. Adherence to the agreement would be policed by the larger Contadora powers of the region (Mexico, Venezuela, Colombia and Panama with the backing of Argentina, Brazil, Peru and Uruguay), with appropriate Organization of American States and United Nations support. Neither the Sandinistas nor the Reagan administration has accepted this formula yet, and the reservations of both are fully understandable. But a vigorous effort to achieve agreement could result in a workable compromise.

The incentive for the Reagan administration could be the bleak prospect its program of continued aid to the Contras faces. The incentive for the Sandinistas could be relief from paramilitary attacks and an opening of normal relations with its Central American neighbors. The incentive for the neighboring nations could be secure borders policed by the Contadora nations.

Such an arrangement would not be the end of the contest, but a new beginning. In preparation for such a development, the Contra forces should immediately be given an intensive course in political action. would be expected to carry on within Nicaragua under an amnesty. They should become the political rather than the paramilitary shock troops and leaders of the democratic cause in Nicaragua.

While the United States would be barred from future "support" of such actions under the agreement, it could provide "resettlement allowances" for the troops that had served the cause to date, allowing them to integrate themselves into Nicaraguan society and recapture the revolution against Somoza, which the Sandinistas stole from many of them. If the Nicaraguan political scene remains open, they will have no need for paramilitary action; if the Sandinistas close it down, the political base for future paramilitary operations will have been formed.

The United States could still have an important role in the effort, and one well within the bounds of the agreement it would make. The Jackson (Kissinger) Commission in early 1984 provided the outlines of such a role: major support to the political, economic and social development of the Central American nations.

This is a program that deserves the support of those in Congress who seek the advancement of democracy in Nicaragua and of those opposed to further paramilitary action by the Contras. It is one that can strengthen the nations around Nicaragua against possible subversion and support those within Nicaragua working for an opening to their neighbors. The slow, albeit not always smooth, success of the Reagan administration's programs in El Salvador shows that this formula can be more productive than the paramilitary one.

Window To The Hispanic Experience

WASHINGTON — In a life that lasted just 17 years, Ritchie Valens lived the quintessential American dream. An impoverished Mexican-American who grew up in a garbage-strewn barrio outside Los Angeles, Valens recorded three smash hits before his death in a 1959 plane crash that also took the lives of rockers Buddy Holly and J.P. Richardson.

Columbia Pictures' version of Ritchie Valens' life, documented in this summer's box-office hit "La Bamba," is not just another rock 'n' roll movie about the untimely death of a teen idol. Though Columbia and Luis Valdez, the movie's writer and director, take advantage of Valens' blending of Latin rhythm and rock, "La Bamba" offers a snapshot of one of Hollywood's rare forays into the complexity of Chicano life in America.

From the moment Valens (played by Lou Diamond Phillips) wakes up in the opening scene of "La Bamba," the audience is thrust into the unsanitized lives of migrant farmworkers, eking out a living in a citrus camp. Ritchie and his mother (Rosanna de Soto) are soon joined by an older half-brother Bob (Esai Morales), a drug-dealing, alcoholic biker, who comes to liberate them from the camp with his marijuana earnings.

The conflicts that make up this family's struggle against poverty are apparent in the tension between Ritchie and half-brother Bob. Ritchie represents the positive virtues of clean living and hard work; Bob personifies the hustler. Even though there is no difference in their potential, Bob is continually frustrated by his inability to find decent work and is forced to follow a path of petty crime. Meanwhile, Ritchie keeps practicing his guitar, smiling and combing his hair. This sibling rivalry sets up a dramatic dichotomy which provides the proper balance between the potential of the American Dream and those who struggle hopelessly and never get there.

Despite his slow rise out of poverty as a backup in a high school band, Valens confronts discrimination and embarrassment in his roots. The racist, car salesman father of his dream white girlfriend prevents her from seeing Ritchie.

The producer from Del-Fi records who finally spots Ritchie at an American Legion hall blow-out urges the singer to change his surname from Valenzuela to Valens, a move Ritchie initially rejects but later accepts for the sake of supporting his family. The producer also tries to keep Ritchie from recording "La Bamba," a Mexican folk song, by pointing out that he doesn't even speak Spanish. Ritchie wins this battle, however, leading to one of his hit tunes.

Though Columbia Pictures promotes the film as the "American success story," no viewer can ignore the ways in which it portrays the discrimination faced by Chicanos in U.S. society. "La Bamba" is not an overtly political film. Director Valdez knows that film is not made of ideas but of moments, of a time of day, the angle of a head shot and even the cast of the sun. With this sensitivity, he illustrates not only discrimination in employment and education and the denial of basic democratic rights, but also how the Chicano experience in America is one which suppresses the Latin culture.

The truth is that beyond the five southwestern states, where the majority of Hispanics live in this country, most Americans know little of this ethnic group's experience. While the Hispanic population has increased from 4.5 percent of the total U.S. population in 1970 to 6.4 percent in 1980, Census Department experts believe the figure to be much higher. Moreover, according to Census' annual report on median family income, 27.3 percent of all Hispanic families live below the poverty line. In fact, two-parent Hispanic families were found to be poorer than similar black families.

How can the government alleviate the disadvantaged economic situation of the Hispanic population? A number of educational studies contend that the low educational attainment of Hispanics, not labor market discrimination, is the main reason for low wages for Hispanics. Clearly, policymakers should focus their efforts on educational programs that might help future Ritchie Valenses achieve income parity with non-Hispanic whites.

Strength For Today

Common honesty is, on its face, a necessary factor in any wholesome human intercourse.

But even people who claim to be Christians sometimes make private reservations in their definition of what constitutes honesty. They abhor stealing, but they have certain areas in their lives in which they do not hestitate to cheat — a little bit. In conversation they will flatter and deceive. They will fudge on their income taxes and expense accounts, and upon returning to this country from abroad will often forget to declare certain dutiable items.

The Bible message is clear and unequivocal on this matter. There is no honesty except complete honesty. One dishonest practice in a person's life is like a weak link in a chain, rendering the whole insecure.

Showdown Time At Deficit Gap — One More Time

Analysis

WASHINGTON — Once again, it's showdown time at deficit gap. The debt ceiling, which gives the government its authority to borrow, expired on July 17. While it was renewed through Aug. 6, a more permanent extension must be enacted before Congress leaves on its summer recess if the federal government is to be kept from defaulting on its obligations. But such an extension is caught up in the perennial shoot-out between Congress and the president over how best to reduce the budget deficit.

This predicament is not new; it is a summer rerun of a two-bit drama that has played eight times in the past four years. But the stakes are higher this time around. One reason for this is that the deficit appears to be poised to grow again. Just when the administration and Congress thought they had taken actions to put the deficit on a downward path, the Congressional Budget Office has released estimates that show that this year's projected deficit of $161 billion will grow to $198 billion in FY 1989 if current policies are not altered.

A second reason why the stakes are higher is that the president and Congress, like two boastful gunslingers, appear to be girding themselves for a shoot-out. The president has spent the past month touring the nation talking tough on the deficit. He has threatened to use his veto pen to blow away any deficit reduction measure that includes a tax hike and any spending bill that exceeds the amount requested in his budget proposal. He has also demanded that Congress surrender its six-shooters by accepting a constitutional amendment to balance the budget, a line-item veto and other procedural changes that would strengthen the president's budget powers.

Congressional Democrats have responded with bravado. They approved a budget resolution that calls for a $36.9 billion reduction in the deficit. As part of that plan, they have boasted that they can ride the tax-increase broncos for $19.3 billion, but they are arguing over which steed to mount. They have also promised to rope in some sacred longhorns in the military herd, but they have yet to figure out how to throw the lasso.

Confrontation over the deficit and the debt ceiling makes good headlines, but compromise makes more sense for both sides. From the president's perspective a negotiated deficit reduction agreement with Congress, even one that involves tax increases, is the only way to ensure that the Reagan Revolution will last beyond 1988. From the congressional Democrats' perspective a settlement, even one that gives the president a good deal of what he wants, will resolve an issue that will surely cause the party problems in the next election and beyond.

Everyone realizes that sooner or later the nation will address the deficit problem through some mix of tax increases and spending reductions. All that remains to be decided is when this will happen and what the balance will be between program cuts and tax increases. If the deficit problem is resolved after Reagan has left office, the significant redirection of tax and spending priorities that he has achieved over the past 6½ years will probably be sacrificed, and history will show that the Reagan Revolution was just a short-lived coup. A Democratic president would deliberately reverse these priorities. A Republican would be forced to sacrifice many of Reagan's goals to gain congressional acceptance of a deficit reduction plan.

Weakened as he may be by the Iran-contra scandal and his lame-duck status, Ronald Reagan is still capable of wringing out of Congress a deficit reduction plan that preserves his fundamental priorities. His past intransigence on tax and budget matters has convinced his opponents that any slight sign of flexibility represents a major concession. In short, a deficit reduction plan negotiated by Reagan would leave the nation with a larger defense establishment, a smaller social agenda and lower taxes than would a plan fashioned by any of his successors.

But why should the Democrats play along? Because compromise, even on these terms, is in the party's best interests. Inspired by the dream of recapturing the White House in 1989, Democrats should do everything in their power to ensure that deficit reduction imperatives do not hogtie the next president. If the first initiative of a Democratic president involves raising revenues, Republican claims that the Democrats are the party of taxation will ring true. Eight years of Republican tax cuts would be followed by a Democratic tax hike. Similarly, if spending restraint and program cuts are the order of the day, the new president will not be able to respond to the party faithful who feel that domestic programs have suffered inordinately during the Reagan years.

A compromise on the deficit could pay the Democrats two additional dividends. First, it would share and diffuse the political costs of deficit reduction. Some cherished social programs will inevitably be cut back. It is better to place the knife in the hands of a Republican president. And tax increases enacted now need not carry the "Made Exclusively by the Democrats" label. Second, a budget compromise in 1987 would improve the Democrats' election prospects in 1988. This would occur because the fiscal restraint inherent in any serious deficit reduction effort will temporarily reduce economic growth and raise unemployment, thus lowering voter satisfaction with the current state of affairs.

Compromise may be what's best for the president and the Democrats, but each has too much machismo to back down. Therefore, some mechanism is needed that will allow both fighters to holster their six-shooters and shake hands while standing tall before their own gang of special interests. The automatic sequestration procedure of Gramm-Rudman-Hollings which was struck down by the Supreme Court a year ago is one such mechanism.

Policy

WASHINGTON — In view of recent events in South Korea and earlier events in the Philippines and Haiti, Americans are newly optimistic that leverage can be used to promote political pluralism and civilian democracy in friendly authoritarian regimes. Proponents of such activism think that moving swiftly during a political crisis will prevent radical, pro-communist revolutions. This "good" or benevolent intervention is perceived to be in the best interest of the United States, even if it means disappointing a former ally or pressuring a longtime friend.

Panama now seems to offer Congress and the Reagan administration a perfect testing ground to take this "good" intervention approach to Latin America. Following demonstrations against the country's strong-man ruler, Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega, the Senate and the House approved resolutions demanding a return to civilian control in Panama and an investigation into widely believed charges of murder and corruption leveled against Noriega by a former military associate.

Contrary to hopes in Washington, strong U.S. criticism of Noriega has awakened profound suspicion of America's motives among Panamanians and Latin Americans in general and has handed the discredited general a timely pretext to shore up his defense using nationalistic themes. Though street protests against the general continue, Noriega's criticism of American intervention has put the opposition leadership on the defensive regarding the nation's pride and Panamanian sovereignty.

In the hemisphere, U.S. attacks on Noriega have provoked a rare display of unity among Latin American governments. A July 1 vote in the Organization of American States dramatically illustrated the isolation of American foreign policy in the region. At Panama's request, a resolution condemning U.S. intervention in its internal affairs was prepared by Argentina, Brazil, Mexico, Venezuela, Colombia, Peru, Bolivia and Nicaragua. In a roll call with no recent precedent in that organization, 17 nations — including Chile, Ecuador and Jamaica — voted in favor of the resolution. Only the United States voted no. Even staunch U.S. allies such as El Salvador, Honduras, Costa Rica and Grenada felt it necessary to abstain from voting or to be absent from the session.

Why is the anti-Noriega policy of the United States in Panama so unappealing everywhere in the hemisphere?

The answer is certainly not the popularity of the Panamanian general, whose image in Latin America is that of a "loose cannon" incapable of loyalty to any cause but his own. Nor is the answer that Latins do not care if Panamanians fulfill their democratic ambitions. The problem is simply the credibility of the United States — or perhaps the lack of it.

Latin Americans do not believe that a good cause makes American intervention in any hemispheric country a "good" intervention. The historical record of abusive U.S. interventions in Latin America and the overriding power imbalance between the United States and its neighbors give non-intervention a very precise legal, diplomatic and political meaning to Latin Americans.

Reviews Mixed On CP&L Rate Increase Decision

RALEIGH (AP) — A one-year increase of .4 percent for Carolina Power & Light Co. isn't the victory for consumers that it appears to be, the state Attorney General's Office said.

"This year looks good for the consumer, but the consumer gets hit over the head next year," said John Simmons, the attorney general's chief of staff.

"What appears to be a victory for consumers is actually something else when you read the order carefully," Simmons said Wednesday. "You find the company in reality is getting a $92.5 million increase on an ongoing basis, or a 6.99 percent increase overall.

"The actual rate of increase is diminished for one year only, by a one-time refund of overcharges, fuel costs and tax. CP&L is having to pay $65.8 million in fuel overcharges and $26.9 million in excess taxes. That's in the first year only. The effective rate increase is still 6.99 percent."

But Robert Gruber, executive director of the commission's Public Staff, called the decision a victory for consumers and a defeat for the power company.

"It's not very often that we can be as happy with an order as we are with this one," Gruber said. The staff represents consumer interests before the commission.

"We believe the evidence presented during hearings before the utilities commission supported our entire rate request rather than the $92.5 million allowed by the commission," CP&L spokesman Wayne Ennis said in a prepared statement. "It has been three years since our last general rate increase and the commission's decision means that our rates will not fully reflect our costs of providing electric service."

The N.C. Utilities Commission Wednesday granted CP&L $92.5 million of its requested $173 million, or 13.07 percent, rate increase. But the commission blunted the rise by ordering the utility company to refund more than $87 million in overcharges.

But when the refund runs out in August 1988, rates will increase by 6.99 percent just as the commission makes its decision on another CP&L rate case. CP&L has said it would ask for another rate increase this fall to take effect next summer to reflect some of the costs of its Shearon Harris Nuclear Plant in Wake County.

The utility commission's ruling followed several months of investigation and four weeks of hearings around North Carolina.

The .4 percent increase has the effect of returning to consumers $65.8 million in fuel costs overcollections and $26.9 million in overcollections of costs related to the change in the maximum corporate federal income tax rate from 46 percent to 40 percent, the commission said.

The typical summer electric bill for a residential customer using 1,000 kilowatts of electricity would rise from $75.72 a month to $77.18 a month. But the typical winter bill for the same customer would decrease from $69.72 a month to $67.18 a month.

Simmons said the attorney general's office takes exception to the commission's decision to allow CP&L a 12.63 percent rate of return on stock.

"We contend that 11 percent is the justifiable rate," he said. "Had the company been given 11 percent, that would have made a $33 million difference."

Eastern Belt Sales Open Strong

By The Associated Press

Tobacco sales closed higher Wednesday on the South Carolina-Border North Carolina tobacco belt, which was in its second day of sales, while opening sales on the Eastern North Carolina belt also were strong.

The daily average on the Eastern Belt was up $2.45 a pound from opening day last year, an average of $137.49 per hundred pounds of tobacco on sales of 5.1 million pounds. The total value of that leaf was $7.1 million, according to the Federal-State Market News Service.

The highest opening prices on the Eastern Belt came at the Williamston market, where the average was $141.02 per hundredweight on sales of 323,620 pounds of tobacco. The lowest average on the belt was $129.65 per hundredweight at Farmville on sales of 315,323 pounds.

Wilson was the busiest of the Eastern Belt markets, with 1 million pounds sold for $1.5 million, an average of $139.32 per hundredweight.

Border Belt sales were up an average $2.44 from Tuesday's opening sales on that market. A total of 4.3 million pounds were sold on markets in South Carolina and North Carolina for an average price of $141.09 per hundredweight.

Border Belt sales in North Carolina closed slightly higher than those in South Carolina. North Carolina averaged $142.53 per hundredweight on sales of 1.9 million pounds while South Carolina averaged $139.93 on sales of 2.4 million pounds.

The highest North Carolina average price came Wednesday at Fairmont, with $144.92 per hundredweight on sales of 650,800 pounds. In South Carolina on the Border Belt, the highest average was $142.72 on sales of 742,299 pounds at Lake City, S.C.

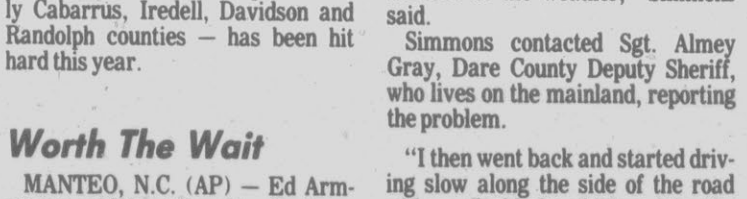

In the Sandhills area of the Middle Belt, preliminary results showed an average of $140.48 per hundred pounds on sales of 513,348 pounds of tobacco as two of the four markets held opening sales. The highest average on the belt came at Sanford with $144.84 per hundredweight on sales of 192,078 pounds.

Offerings on Sandhills markets were made up mostly of good and fair quality primings followed by lugs and cutters. Opening sales last season were mainly carryover tobacco.

On Border markets, quality improved with an increase of cutters and lugs and a decrease in primings. Lemon and orange color accounted for nearly half the offerings.

Pine Beetle Invasion

By The Associated Press

The Southern pine beetle is staging its largest invasion of North Carolina forests since its $50 million attack in the mid-1970s, experts say.

"It's a bad problem this year, much worse than last year," said Coleman Doggett, a pest control forester with the state Division of Forest Resources.

An insect the size of a grain of rice, the pine beetle destroyed about 21,000 trees in North Carolina last year — enough to build more than 500 houses. Throughout the South in 1986, the black pests, which can kill a pine tree in a matter of days, claimed about 29 million trees worth $70 million.

Experts say that about every five years, the beetle population swells because of changes in the weather and number of predators and parasites. Pine trees stressed by the summer heat and dryness, injuries or disease are especially vulnerable to attack, which makes bad summers good for beetles.

Foresters keep tabs on the pine beetles through aerial surveys that pick out dead and dying trees. Although the state's survey won't be completed for several weeks, Doggett said the Piedmont — particularly Cabarrus, Iredell, Davidson and Randolph counties — has been hit hard this year.

Worth The Wait

MANTEO, N.C. (AP) — Ed Armstrong said he "thought about my wife, 5-year-old son, John, and God" while he waited seven hours for help after his Volkswagen overturned into a canal, leaving only his nose, eyes and ears above water.

"I also thought about the many other people who drowned after going into the canal," the 37-year-old Armstrong said of the accident that occurred on U.S. 264 near Stumpy Point.

Armstrong, a lawn service worker, terms his survival of the Tuesday night accident a miracle.

"I got one door partially opened so I could get part of my head through, which let me keep my nose and mouth above the water most of the time," he said.

Armstrong heard about 15 or 20 vehicles pass during the seven hours he was trapped.

Armstrong's ordeal started Tuesday about 9 p.m. when he completed a 12-hour work shift with Gene Simmons, owner of the Outer Banks Lawn Service in Manteo. It ended at 4:30 a.m. Wednesday when Simmons found Armstrong and the car.

The weather was horrible — with heavy rain, lightning and wind — as Armstrong started home for Fairfield, about 80 miles east of the Outer Banks. Armstrong said he went to sleep, went off the side of the road, lost control and went into the canal.

Armstrong's wife, Brenda, called Simmons at 1:30 a.m. when he didn't get home in a reasonable time.

Simmons was on the road immediately and said, "I don't know why, but I just had a feeling he was in that canal somewhere."

Brenda Armstrong joined in the search, checking the road from Fairfield to Stumpy Point. "I suggested she go home because Ed might have driven around through Columbia because of the weather," Simmons said.

Simmons contacted Sgt. Almey Gray, Dare County Deputy Sheriff, who lives on the mainland, reporting the problem.

"I then went back and started driving slow along the side of the road with a flashlight shining into the canal and it wasn't five minutes until I found him," Simmons said. "I went back and got Sergeant Gray."

Gray jumped into the water and forced the door open a little more so Armstrong could have breathing room.

The Dare County Emergency Medical Services unit from Manteo used hydraulic equipment to open the door enough that Armstrong could be freed. He escaped with minor cuts.

376 MILES PER GALLON

If you've been trying to beat the world's gasoline-mileage record with your family car, here's some bad news: The record has been bumped up to 376 miles per gallon from a mere 297 figure you would have had to top before.

Ben Visser, a 27-year-old research engineer, set the new mark in a highly modified 1959 Opel during the annual Shell "Mileage Marathon." The same car also set the old record. In setting the new record, Visser used 4.78 ounces or just over a half cup of gasoline to cover the prescribed 14-mile course.

He attributed his big improvement to some "fine tuning" and a reduction in the speed of his already radical driving technique. Before, Visser used an accelerate-and-coast technique with a top speed of about 17 mph. "We dropped the top speed to between 12 mph and 13 mph," he said, "Of course, there was some sacrifice. It took us two hours to go the 14 miles instead of an hour and a half."

Insurance Premium Tax Bill Moves On

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Controversy that once surrounded a bill to revamp North Carolina's laws on insurance premium taxes appeared to dissolve as the House tentatively approved the measure 85-0.

Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, told the House Wednesday the major revision in the Senate-passed bill was a provision to speed up tax collections to make sure there would be no loss of state revenues for the next two years. He said the Senate bill could have produced a $17 million to $19 million shortfall in 1989.

"We did not feel ... that we should approve a bill that we knew was going to result in such a substantial revenue loss," Miller said.

The House Finance Committee approved the bill Tuesday to resolve one of the remaining stumbling blocks to adjourning the 1987 session. However, supporters said the Legislature likely would re-examine the issue next year.

The Legislature agreed last session to levy the same 1.75 percent tax on in-state and out-of-state insurers. The tax for fire and casualty insurance had been 2.5 percent for out-of-state companies and 1 percent for domestic insurers. The change resulted in a projected loss of revenue this year, barring further legislation.

The current bill calls for accelerating tax payments by insurance companies. Instead of paying 75 percent of the taxes in the first three quarterly payments each year, insurers would pay 90 percent.

While that change would bring in an extra $17 million in 1988-89 and offset an expected loss of $15.6 million, the windfall would drop to $3.2 million in 1990 — leaving a $9.4 million deficit.

The bill would give North Carolina the right to impose retaliatory taxes against companies whose home states discriminate against North Carolina insurers in taxation — a right that will bring in some money to the state. It also would increase the premium tax for Blue Cross-Blue Shield of North Carolina from 0.33 percent to 0.5 percent.

However, a provision to impose premium taxes on annuities when they are cashed in instead of when they are taken out would result in a net loss.

In other legislative action:

Easter Monday

The House State Government Committee, long the graveyard for bills to eliminate North Carolina's Easter Monday holiday, gave unanimous approval to the measure Wednesday.

Sen. Bill Goldston, D-Rockingham, the bill's sponsor, said objections by committee chairman Rep. Foyle Hightower, D-Anson, had blocked passage for several years.

"He was just against it and wouldn't even bring it up for a vote," he said.

Hightower admitted holding the bill for two or three sessions.

"I had a lot of reservations about it," he said. "I've heard some people say you shouldn't celebrate the day that Jesus died. ... Also I thought if you had Friday off and you worked for a small business, you'd have to come back and work Saturday."

Hightower said he was finally swayed when "a lot of businesses said that it hurts them."

Goldston explained to the committee that the holiday began so lawmakers could attend a now-defunct baseball game between Wake Forest and North Carolina State. He said his bill would be good for the economy in several ways.

"We are the last state in the union that still celebrates Easter Monday," he said. "The other states do it on Good Friday because Easter Monday has no religious significance."

Goldston said the bill was supported by manufacturers and state Treasurer Harlan Boyles. And he said the Retail Merchants Association had dropped its long-held opposition.

"They say they can hold their sales on Friday and probably have a better sale day ..." he said.

Army Cook Is Charged With Murder

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — Military authorities have charged Army cook Ronald Adrian Gray with two counts of murder and two counts of attempted murder in a string of rapes and slayings in Cumberland County, military authorities said.

Charges were read to Spec. 4 Ronald Adrian Gray by his company commander, Capt. Billy J. Laster, said Lt. Col. Rick Kiernan, public affairs officer for the XVIII Airborne Corps at Fort Bragg.

Gray was charged under the Uniform Code of Military Justice with two counts of premeditated murder in connection with the deaths of Laura Lee Vickery Clay, whose body was found Jan. 17 near McKellar's Lodge on Fort Bragg; and Fayetteville cab driver Kimberly Ann Ruggles, whose body was found on Fort Bragg Jan. 6, Kiernan said.

Gray is also charged with two counts of attempted murder of two female soldiers at Fort Bragg, one on Nov. 22 and the other Jan. 3, Kiernan said.

Gray was charged previously by Cumberland County authorities with four counts of rape, three of forcible sodomy, three of robbery, one of burglary and one of kidnapping.

He has been in the Cumberland County Jail since January. He was being held Wednesday in lieu of $400,000 bond.

Mrs. Clay, 18, was a resident of the Fairlane Acres Mobile Home Park near Fort Bragg, the same mobile home park where the suspect lived until his arrest in January on the rape and kidnapping charges.

Ms. Ruggles, 23, was a driver for Terminal Taxi Co. in Fayetteville. Cumberland County Sheriff's Department officials — who are investigating Gray's possible involvement in murders of two other women who lived in Fairlane Acres — said the suspect often asked for Ruggles when he called the taxi company.

Ms. Ruggles' body was found about 100 yards from the taxicab.

An investigation under a military Article 32 hearing will be conducted to determine if a general court-martial is appropriate, Kiernan said. Article 32 hearings are similar to grand jury investigations.

'Shag' Bill Put On Hold

RALEIGH (AP) — Supporters of a state vegetable sought more grassroots support and the state dance did a quick shuffle as lawmakers took another pass at official North Carolina symbols.

Rep. Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, who had tried to make collards the official state vegetable, proposed a compromise Wednesday to make collards, yams, peanuts, apples and strawberries the official state commodities. Mavretic said the bill would help the state Department of Agriculture promote commodities and local festivals held for them.

Also in the House State Government Committee, a bill to make the shag the state dance was put off after Chairman Foyle Hightower, D-Anson, told the sponsor, Rep. Dave Redwine, it was unlikely to pass.

"It's too late in the session to be talking about dancing," said Redwine, D-Brunswick. "Sometimes you have to waltz around the floor a little bit. And sometimes you have to foxtrot."

Mavretic said his compromise, sent to a subcommittee for further study, had a better chance than the original collard bill.

"It has a lot more interest," he said. "We've got most of the parts of the state covered."

When some lawmakers questioned whether such things as watermelons, peaches or gourds should be added to the list, Mavretic replied that he knew of no festivals related to them.

Rep. Charles Beall, D-Haywood, then asked whether Mavretic's bill would include the ramp, a pungent herb playfully celebrated by Democrats at the annual Ramp Convention.

Mavretic said he had discussed the matter with the Agriculture Department in the context of the "Goodness Grows in North Carolina" program.

"They said that would be a contradiction in terms," Mavretic deadpanned. "As I understand, they are not a commercial product and you have to be forced to eat them."

Mavretic said he decided to omit meat products, although he gave passing reference to a Turkey Festival to be held in Raeford.

"Everybody in the General Assembly has been invited to the Turkey Festival," he said. "That means at least 171 turkeys."

Under the bill, collards would be designated the "green vegetable" commodity and the "orange vegetable" would be the yam. Conflicting bills to make each the state vegetable resulted in an impasse for most of the session.

The peanut would be designated the "leguminous herb," while the apple would be the "western North Carolina fruit" and the strawberry the state "red berry."

Gas Main Explosion Injures 20 In Wilmington

WILMINGTON (AP) — Authorities continued searching for what caused a gas main being repaired in downtown Wilmington to explode, sending firefighters and construction workers diving into mud puddles for relief from their burns.

Twenty people were injured in Wednesday's explosion, which occurred after a construction crew working on a sewer line at the intersection of Kerr Avenue and Market Street broke the gas main at about 11 a.m. As workers tried to fix the gas main, they hit a water main.

Several pumps were brought in to clear the water from the hole. The plan was to put a heavier sleeve on when the water was cleared until the damage could be repaired permanently. But the wind shifted, spewing natural gas into the pump and causing the explosion, authorities said.

Cal Wells, president of North Carolina Natural Gas, said it was rare for a pipeline rupture to cause an explosion. "Natural gas is volatile in a confined space, but normally in these situations it dissipates and goes up in the air," he said. "We're not sure how it ignited."

Bobby Lamb of Wilmington, who had been watching the activity from across the street, said the gas exploded about the same time one of the smaller pumps was started.

"There was a big fireball, and people were running away with their hair on fire," he said.

Some of the injured were taken to the nearby El Berta Motor Inn for showers before ambulances took them away. Others were showered with fire hoses on the street.

Scorched and melted clothing and boots that had been cut or peeled from victims were scattered about the area.

Dan Summers of New Hanover County Emergency Management said the 20 injured were sent to New Hanover Memorial Hospital, three with major burns. At least 11 others also suffered burns, he said.

A helicopter from N.C. Memorial Hospital burn center in Chapel Hill was sent to pick up the four most badly burned victims, he said, including assistant Fire Chief Harold Sandlin. Sandlin, who's been with the department for more than 40 years, was listed in critical condition, a hospital spokesman said.

The others flown to Chapel Hill — all of whom are in serious condition — were assistant Fire Chief Benjamin Glisson, firefighter Joey Gabbia and North Carolina Natural Gas Co. worker Larry Lee.

The three most seriously injured were gas company and city workers who were in a trench working in water up to their chests when the blast occurred.

A hospital spokeswoman said nine people brought to New Hanover Memorial were being treated for burns, but were listed in fair or good condition.

Witnesses said flames leaped more than 40 feet up and 20 feet out from the rupture.

Gene Lawrence, vice president of Welco Construction, which, was hired to do utility work on the highway widening project, said the rupture was about 25 feet from where construction workers were digging.

Welco president William Lawrence said the gas company had marked its lines in the project area, but that pipelines aren't always where they were marked. He said the lines should have been at least 36 inaces deep, but contended they were only 10 inches below the surface in spots.

But Wells said he wasn't sure the contractors had contacted his company before digging.

"All contractors are supposed to contact us before they dig so we can show them where our lines are so something like this doesn't happen. I'm not sure if they did in this case. We have people on the way down there to check into it," he said.

Tim Maready, an employee of N.C. Natural Gas Co. who was at the scene Wednesday, said the gas was not turned off when the rupture was first discovered as "a matter of economics." He said workers did not want to inconvenience other gas customers in the area by shutting off the pipe.

NCNG serves about 10,000 customers in the Wilmington area, Wells said.

Summers said it may take considerable time and investigation to sort out the details of the event and the cause of the explosion.

Rape Arrest

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — A Fort Bragg soldier arrested Wednesday on charges of rape and sex offense is being questioned about a string of rapes committed by a masked man in a three-county area in the past year, authorities said.

James H. Woodard, 31, of Fort Bragg was arrested early Wednesday, said Sgt. Harry Parham of the Cumberland County Sheriff's Department, who heads a task force formed to investigate the series of sexual assaults.

Officers said more than a dozen rapes have occurred in recent months in Cumberland, Harnett and Lee Counties and at Fort Bragg.

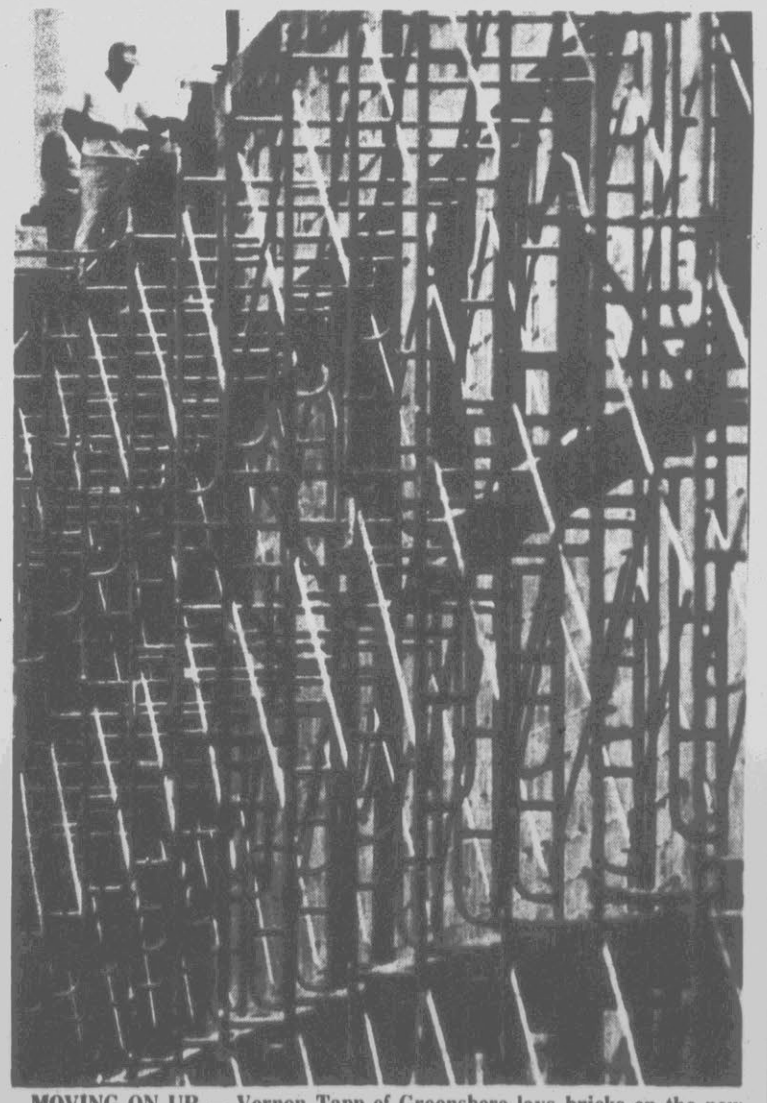

Cumberland County detectives arrested Woodard at about 5 a.m., shortly after another rape was reported. He was charged with one count each of first-degree rape, first-degree sex offense and first-degree burglary in connection with a Feb. 12 incident.

He was being held in the Cumberland County Jail under a $75,000 secured bond with a first court appearance scheduled for Friday.

Sheriff's officials are investigating 14 such incidents, most involving first-degree burglary and sex offenses. Not all of the cases involved rape, authorities said.

The task force was established in July after 13 women in the three counties and Fort Bragg were sexually assaulted during the past year by a man wearing various types of masks, including an Arctic survival mask, a gas mask and an Army-type ski mask. His victims usually were women with small children whom he would threaten.

The task force is made up of seven county deputies, and an SBI and FBI agent. Spring Lake, Fayetteville and Lee and Harnett counties provided liaison officers to work with the task force.

Battle-Scarred Stark Returns From Gulf Duty

By RON WORD
Associated Press Writer

MAYPORT NAVAL STATION, Fla. (AP) — The battle-scarred USS Stark returned from the Persian Gulf on Wednesday, bringing its crew home to a subdued hero's welcome from hundreds of cheering friends and relatives.

Several sailors, who saw 37 comrades die when the Stark was hit by two Iraqi Exocet missiles May 17, expressed support for their skipper, Capt. Glenn R. Brindel, who was relieved of his command and forced to resign from the Navy at a lower rank.

"Most would say he got a bad deal," said Kevin Cummings, a 22-year-old seaman from Sandusky, Ohio. "Our new captain is great. We loved our old captain. I wish the best for him."

"I think it's safe to say the crew thought the world of Captain Brindel," said Lt. Scott Barbour, a 1980 Naval Academy graduate who was one of three men aboard the ship to be decorated for heroism.

"We all loved him as a captain," said career petty officer Dwayne Massey, who was also decorated for pulling his shipmates from the inferno aboard ship after the attack. "Everybody was wondering about the captain and why he wasn't allowed to take the ship back."

The Stark, now under the command of Cmdr. John Noll, was escorted in by six helicopters and a fleet of tugboats as a brass band played "Anchors Aweigh."

A cheer went up from the crowd as the Stark tied up, and one excited little boy shouted "There's Daddy!" The 175 officers and sailors, including 44 who returned to the ship by tugboat earlier in the day, poured out of the ship into the arms of awaiting relatives.

"We didn't expect him to be a hero," said Stephen Foss of Portland, Maine, referring to his son, Seaman Bill Foss. "We would be happy if he just came back."

In a tribute to his slain 19-year-old son, Senior Chief Petty Officer Gary Clinefelter rode on a tugboat out to the Stark early Wednesday so he could finish his son Brian's tour of duty.

Later, the father attached a yellow ribbon to his son's name on the memorial to the dead crewmen dedicated last Saturday.

"On a ship that size you knew all of them," said crew member Robert Kummrow of Charlotte, N.C.

As he spoke, his mother, Jackie, squeezed his hand.

"I'm not letting go of him. I'm proud of him. I'm proud he's in the Navy," she said.

Seaman Tim Porter of Waycross, Ga., said he was in his berthing area when the missile struck and the next thing he knew he was clinging to a life ring in the Persian Gulf. A helicopter picked him up 11 hours after the attack and took him to Bahrain.

"I've cried a few times already," said Tom Porter as he stood proudly at the side of his son.

More cheers greeted sailors of the guided missile destroyers Conyngham and Coontz, which had come to the Stark's aid, as they returned to home port in Norfolk, Va., on Wednesday.

"You guys are real heroes," Capt. C.K. Kicker, commander of Destroyer Squadron 2, told the Conyngham crew as the ship steamed toward the Norfolk Naval Station ahead of the Coontz.

Conyngham sailors who boarded the Stark to fight fires said the heat was intense and the smoke was blinding.

Lt. Larry Jackson, 25, of New Orleans, said the Stark's deck softened in the heat and pools of hot water formed in ship compartments, he said. About 285 of the Conyngham's 375 crewmen worked shifts as long as 12 hours fighting fires, tending the injured and removing the dead. The ship towed the Stark to harbor in Bahrain a day after the attack. The Coontz remained in Bahrain to handle casualties, but 43 of its 350 crewmen were airlifted to the Stark to fight fires.

Jackson said some Conyngham crewmen were reluctant to sleep in their compartments after the attack because the missiles struck a berthing area on the Stark.

"Twelve hours earlier it could have been us because we were in the same position," said Machinist's Mate 2nd Class Michael Varner, 26, of Cincinnati, Ohio.

EMOTIONAL RETURN — An unidentified member of the crew of the frigate USS Stark is greeted after the ship returned Wednesday to Mayport, Fla., from duty in the Persian Gulf. The Stark was damaged when it was hit by two missiles from an Iraqi warplane on May 17, klling 37 seaman onboard. (AP Laserphoto)

More Gunfire On Freeway

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A motorist drew gunfire for swerving in front of a Porsche, another was shot at for honking, and a pipe bomb found in a gym sock along a freeway added one more danger to Southern California highways.

And the Federal Aviation Administration said Wednesday that an airplane pilot reported that another flier drew a gun on him in the air off of Oceanside, about 70 miles southeast of Los Angeles. No shots were fired.

Police have reported more than 40 shootings, rock-throwings and other violence among motorists on Southern California highways since mid-June, with three reports of gunslinging on Wednesday.

Four people have been killed, 15 injured and 18 arrested, with one released for lack of evidence.

City Attorney James Hahn, who with District Attorney Ira Reiner called for a crackdown on freeway gunslingers, announced Wednesday his office will seek jail sentences for all motorists caught with a gun.

AIDS-School Ruling

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — The mother of three young hemophiliacs exposed to AIDS says she expects they will be harassed by classmates when they return to school under orders of a federal judge.

But Louise Ray says she believes her sons can handle most any situation.

"I really do," she said. "We told them from the very beginning they may have problems with some kids. They understand it."

She made her comments Wednesday after U.S. District Judge Elizabeth Kovachevich granted a preliminary injunction that restrains the DeSoto County School District from excluding Richard, 10, Robert, 9, and Randy, 8, from the normal classroom and related activities this fall.

The order forbids the boys from playing contact sports.

"These boys are going to be required to be responsible, in their conduct, attitude and demeanor, beyond the level of respsonsibility generally expected of boys their ages," Ms. Kovachevich said.

Gunman Had Mental Problems, Mother Says

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio (AP) — The gunman who was fatally shot when he charged past Pentagon guards had a history of mental illness and "hallucinations about who he was," his mother said.

Dwain Wallace, 30, of Youngstown, was shot once in the back by a guard Wednesday morning and died two hours later at a hospital from a wound to his heart, officials said.

Doris Wallace and her husband, Leroy, said their son was a patient at a Youngstown psychiatric hospital in recent years, and once was under the delusion he was an Army general.

"His doctor told us Dwain was very intelligent, and you wouldn't know he had problems," Mrs. Wallace told reporters outside her home here. "But sometimes he had hallucinations about who he was."

He transferred to a halfway house several months ago and told his parents Monday that he was going to Pittsburgh to seek work. Mrs. Wallace said her son called her long-distance Tuesday night and seemed all right.

Wallace reportedly told Pentagon guards he "wanted to talk to somebody about missiles" before he brandished a handgun and bolted past a checkpoint. He was hit by one of two shots fired by a guard at 8:05 a.m., and died at the National Orthopedic Hospital in nearby Arlington, Va. Officials would not identify the guard who shot Wallace.

The shooting occurred directly beneath the offices of Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger, who was having breakfast at the time with Secretary of State George Shultz and Lt. Gen. Colin Powell, deputy to White House National Security Adviser Frank Carlucci, said Col. Marvin Braman, a Pentagon spokesman.

The three heard the shots, but Pentagon officials said there was no evidence Wallace was attempting to reach Weinberger. Wallace's parents said he never served in the military.

His problems began while he was in college when it was discovered he had a "chemical imbalance," his mother said. Before that, she said he was a good student and a "remarkable son."

"He never gave us a minute of trouble until he got 19 years old and we sent him to Dayton University. And that's when he started having mental problems. After that he's been in and out of the hospital," said Mrs. Wallace.

In the fall of 1976, Wallace enrolled in the engineering program at the University of Dayton. He attended through the spring of 1977 and returned for half a summer session in 1979, said school spokesman Tom Bidwell.

Wallace married an exchange student from Nigeria in 1977, according to Montgomery County records in Dayton. Wallace's parents said he was divorced and the father of a girl.

His ex-wife has remarried and lives in New Orleans.

Police in Gretna, La., a New Orleans suburb, said Wallace was arrested in 1980 for storming a Sears Service Center with a handgun and looking for his wife, who worked at the store. He later served two months in jail for aggravated assault.

After he left Dayton, Wallace took business courses at Youngstown State University from January to March 1978 and from January to March 1979.

Wednesday's shooting occurred at the busy River Entrance to the Pentagon, one of three entrances, and at the head of a corridor leading to the National Military Command Center.

The center includes offices, conference rooms and an area known as the "tank" or "war room" where the Joint Chiefs of Staff meet. That area is sealed and a special pass is required to enter it.

Child Molester Faces Sentencing

ROCKVILLE, Md. (AP) — A former high school principal who once faked his own death to avoid investigation and fled to the West Indies earlier this year faces sentencing for molesting teen-age boys he met as a Big Brother.

David B. Harrington former principal of the private Hebrew Academy of Greater Washington, D.C., and a one-time Montgomery County Big Brother of the Year, pleaded guilty Wednesday to six counts of child abuse that occurred from 1979 to this year. He also pleaded guilty to one count of felony theft.

Harrington, 43, could receive 25 years in prison under the plea agreement submitted to Montgomery County Circuit Judge James McAuliffe. If tried and convicted, he could have been sentenced to 105 years in prison.

Harrington had been arrested on one count of child abuse Feb. 28, but was released the next day after posting $10,000 bond.

Prosecutors said Harrington fled in March after taking $6,000 from a bank account in which high school students had deposited money for a school ski trip.

Authorities filed additional abuse charges against Harrington as their investigation broadened. At the same time, investigators determined that Harrington was the same man who was presumed drowned in Vermont's Lake Champlain in 1970, a day before he was to take a polygraph test in a child molestation case there.

A mathematics teacher at the time, he also had also been convicted of abusing a child in Connecticut in 1969, police said.

Harrington apparently started a new life in 1971, beginning in Florida, by changing his middle name, birthdate and one digit in his Social Security number, authorities said.

Panel Seeks Ways To Aid Poor, Hungry

WASHINGTON (AP) — The food salvaging project that Rev. Ray A. Buchanan and six volunteers started four years ago in a converted sheep shed in the Virginia mountains has collected 53 million pounds of potatoes and yams for the needy.

Imagine, Buchanan told lawmakers, how much more food could be saved from rotting in fields and warehouses if a national clearinghouse were established to match farmers who have surplus crops with agencies that help the poor and hungry.

"We have found that the amount of perfectly good food wasted in this country is staggering," Buchanan told the House Domestic Task Force of the Select Committee on Hunger. The panel held a hearing Wednesday on the role of food salvaging in efforts to fight hunger.

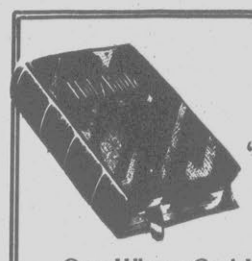

Rep. Tony P. Hall, D-Ohio, a member of the task force, said the panel will consider Buchanan's recommendations to set up a national clearinghouse as well as another to publish a booklet with tips on organizing food saving programs.

"We think this is a good thing," Hall said, noting that the General Accounting Office, an arm of Congress, estimated several years ago that 60 million tons of food goes to waste each year, either because it doesn't look good enough to sell to food stores or because it sits too long in warehouses.

"Even if a fraction of that food could be salvaged and distributed to the needy, we would go a long way toward helping to feed the hungry of this nation," Hall said.

Buchanan's Society of St. Andrew of Big Island, Va., distributes food that fails to make the grade because of nicks, size or shape.

Hall said he has helped start another type of food salvaging program in Ohio that involves collecting unpicked food from the fields — a process known since ancient times as "gleaning."

Rock Garden Attracts Visitors Worldwide

By DOUG FISHER
Associated Press Writer

SPRINGFIELD, Ohio (AP) — In an era when people surround their valuables with elaborate security, Mary E. Hartman leaves her garden gate open for visitors to wander among the priceless rock sculptures she's tended for 43 years in her husband's memory.

"The only thing I'm interested in is keeping it like he left it," she said during a tour of the elaborate rock garden. "It is a garden of love."

There are more than 100 miniature buildings and figurines assembled from thousands of bits of stone or molded from concrete.

Tucked into one side of the double-sized city lot are, among others, a Tree of Life, log cabins, Mount Vernon, Noah's Ark, Hoover Dam, a lighthouse, a wishing well and Christ's manger.

There is Lincoln's tomb and log cabin birthplace, a 10-foot-high castle and a 15-foot-high monastery model concealing the workshop where Harry G. Hartman made his molds.

A model of the first public high school in Boston is here, as is the north porch of the White House, and dozens of hand-cast figurines from gnomes to Mae West to Little Orphan Annie.

The 20-mule team, made famous on commercials and the first thing Mrs. Hartman said her husband cast while working at a foundry, is tucked away in a garden corner.

Even all 104 pickets of the fence are concrete.

Mrs. Hartman, 82, can no longer lead visitors around the garden. But she comments from a stone bench in front of the small fish pond that was the first thing her husband made after he was laid off in 1932 from his iron molder's job.

Tiles in the walkway spell Mary and Ben, which Mrs. Hartman said was her husband's nickname because as a youngster he'd always "been" fishing.

"He had a story with everything," she said. "If he heard a song, he could make something out of it."

Sometimes he made things for the challenge, like the replica of RECO, the sporting goods store where he bought his fishing gear, she said.

"They told him he couldn't make it because it had a log front, but he did," she said.

Mrs. Hartman said the garden has attracted visitors from around the world, sometimes by the busload.

Harry Hartman worked on his dream almost constantly for seven years, Mrs. Hartman said. People would stop and talk, occasionally donating a few coins.

"He'd keep them in his pocket until he had 50 cents. Cement was 50 cents then. He'd say, 'Go get a bag of cement,' just like a new toy," she said.

Mrs. Hartman helped her husband cart rocks from a nearby farm and from a monument company. She's not sure how many, but said her husband wore out three hammers breaking them apart.

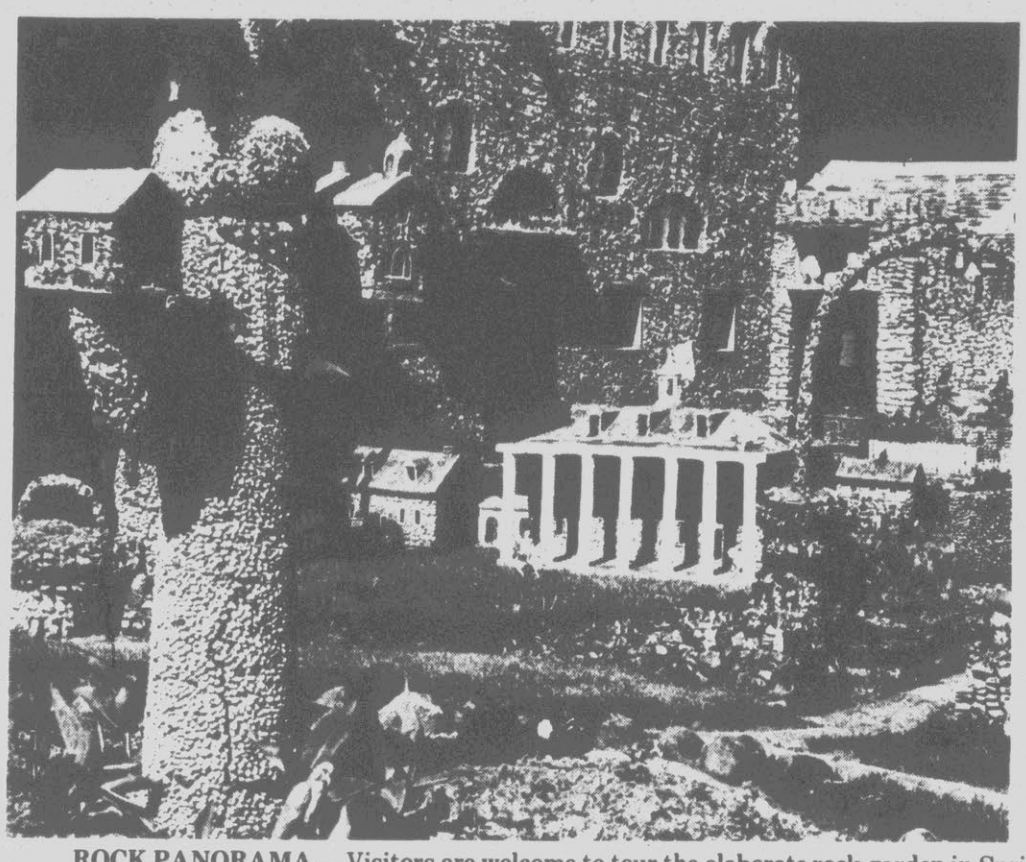

A sign on the castle, modeled after one in Beckley, W.Va., says it took 14 days to build, has 107 windows and more than 10,000 stones.

Hartman had started on the other side of the garden, with mounds destined to become miniature Swiss Alps, when the foundry dust lingering in his lungs finally felled him, Mrs. Hartman said.

During his final years, and against his wishes, she worked in a World War II factory.

After he died, she kept 13 foster children, in addition to her two daughters and a son. Now, a few donations and money from selling plants from her greenhouse barely cover the liability insurance, Mrs. Hartman said.

Her surviving daughter and son help her take care of the garden. Mrs. Hartman said she won't worry about what will become of it when she dies.

ROCK PANORAMA — Visitors are welcome to tour the elaborate rock garden in Springfield, Ohio, that Harry Hartman built before he died. In the foreground is the Tree of Life. In the rear is his workshop made to look like a monastery, and in between is Mount Vernon, the home of President George Washington. Mary E. Hartman, 82, at right, has tended the rock sculptures for 43 years in her husband's memory.

Tribute Paid First Lady

By CHARLES Hillinger
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

BOONE, Iowa — Museums honoring America's first ladies are rare. This small Iowa farm center has one — the Mamie Doud Eisenhower Birthplace.

"As far as we know, only two birthplaces of first ladies have been set aside, restored and preserved as museums for the public to visit," noted Larry Adams, 39, curator of the home in which Mamie Eisenhower lived for only nine months after she was born there Nov. 14, 1896.

The other first lady birthplace museum is the 300-year-old saltbox home of Abigail Adams, wife of John Adams, the second president, in Weymouth, Mass.

Mary Todd Lincoln's girlhood home in Lexington, Ky., is a museum and so is Val-Kill in Hyde Park, N.Y., the Eleanor Roosevelt National Historic Site.

Val-Kill was Mrs. Roosevelt's weekend and holiday retreat when her husband, Franklin D. Roosevelt, was president. After F.D.R. died, Eleanor Roosevelt lived in the house until her death in 1962.

Memorabilia of other first ladies for the most part is housed in presidential libraries and museums.

Mamie Eisenhower, wife of Dwight D. Eisenhower, the 34th president, was of Swedish-English ancestry. Her grandfather on her father's side came to Boone in 1868, where he owned and operated a flour mill, the Doud Milling Co.

John Sheldon Doud, Mamie's father, had a meat-packing business in Boone. When she was 9 months old, her father moved his family to Cedar Rapids, Iowa, where they lived for nine years, then they moved to Denver, Colo.

But Mamie Eisenhower had strong ties to Boone throughout her life. Her grandparents and her favorite uncle, Joel Carlson, lived here, as did other relatives and friends.

She kept returning to Boone, visiting and staying a few days or a week or more each year, even when her husband was president. While they lived in the White House, Eisenhower accompanied his wife to Boone to visit Mamie's Uncle Joel and his wife, Carolyn.

One of the main streets in Boone, (pop. 12,000), is Mamie Eisenhower Avenue.

"We all feel very close to Mamie and Ike. They were in and out of Boone all their married lives, People in Boone care about Ike and Mamie. It is important to them that Mamie's birthplace is here," said Jacqueline Erbe, 66, as she leaned on the wrought-iron fence outside Mamie Eisenhower's birthplace.

It is fitting that Erbe is one of the 30 trustees and a volunter guide at the Mamie Eisenhower Birthplace, for she, too, was a first lady — from 1961 to 1963, when her husband, Norman, was governor of Iowa.

Mrs. Eisenhower's birthplace is a modest yellow frame house restored as closely as possible to the way it was when she lived here as an infant.

The oak bed she was born in is in the main bedroom. Her birthplace is duly noted in a family Bible on a mantle as well as an entry for the day Mamie Geneva Doud married Lt. Dwight David Eisenhower on July 1, 1916.

Furnishings in the house belonged to Mamie Eisenhower, to her Uncle Joel and his wife, and to her grandparents. The house has a summer kitchen, common in those days in Iowa, a one-room structure in the backyard.

During the hot summer months, women did their cooking and canning in the one-room kitchens to keep the heat away from the rest of the house.

Married to a soldier, Mrs. Eisenhower lived in 35 different homes in 35 years on army bases from Manila, Philippines to Paris. After eight years in the White House, the Eisenhowers retired to the 190-acre farm they had purchased in Gettysburg, Pa., in 1949, the only home they actually ever owned.

The 300-member Mamie Eisenhower Birthplace foundation was formed in 1970 to acquire and restore the first lady's home — the same year Mrs. Eisenhower came to Iowa to receive the prestigious Iowa award.

There have been only eight recipients of the award honoring outstanding Iowans, including President Herbert Hoover and Vice President Henry Wallace. Mamie Eisenhower is the only woman so honored.

The First Baptist Church of Boone owned the birthplace home and was using it as a Sunday school. The church donated the house to the foundation.

The Mamie Eisenhower Birthplace was open to the public in June 1980, eight months after Mrs. Eisenhower's death Nov. 1, 1979, at age 82. President Eisenhower had died 10 years earlier.

President Eisenhower and his wife are buried with their 3-year-old son, Doud, who died of scarlet fever in 1921. The three crypts are in a small chapel on the grounds of the Eisenhower Presidential Library in Abilene, Kan.

Scholars, writers and historians are among those who use the resources in the Mamie Eisenhower Library in the basement of Mrs. Eisenhower's birthplace. Included in the archives are personal letters, documents and memorabilia of the first lady.

Exhibit cases include magazines such as Life and Newsweek featuring Mrs. Eisenhower on the cover.

For sale in a gift shop in the home are books about Mamie Eisenhower and about America's first ladies, post cards, spoons and dishes with portraits of the president and his wife, and Christmas cards with reproductions of paintings by President Eisenhower.

One in 20 working mothers had lost time from work during the precious month because of problems with child care, according to a Census Bureau survey.

Therapy Helps People Accept Their Looks

By JEAN McNAIR
Associated Press Writer

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — When Thomas F. Cash's professor suggested studying physical attractiveness for his dissertation in clinical psychology, Cash scoffed at the idea.

"This is going to be silly," he recalled thinking.

But he ended up taking the advice and, 14 years later, has become an expert who has published numerous studies on beauty, worked as a consultant for cosmetic firms and offered therapy for people who think they're ugly.

In 1980, more than 500 studies had been published on the psychology of beauty. By 1986, the number had grown to 1,000, Cash said.

"It is an area that just really took off," he said in an interview at Old Dominion University, where he is a professor of clinical psychology.

Changes in society mean that appearance will become increasingly important, so people need to learn to accept what they see in the mirror, he said.

Because of high divorce rates, many people are dating far into their adult years. Mobility and the increase in women in the workforce also have increased opportunities for people to meet. And everybody knows how important that first impression is.

Contrary to popular belief, men are nearly as concerned about their appearance as women are, Cash said. One study found that 93 percent of women and 82 percent of men were "appearance oriented."

Women still hold an edge in criticizing their bodies, particularly their thighs (too fat), stomach (same) and overall weight (too much).

But men are feeling more pressure to look good, said Cash, 39, who is blue-eyed and sandy-haired with a neatly trimmed beard.

From 1972 to 1985, the percentage of men dissatisfied with their overall appearance more than doubled from 15 percent to 34 percent, according to a Cash study.

"Men increasingly realize they live in a world that pays a lot of attention to appearance," he said. "Particularly now, when you've got women who are economically independent enough to be frivolous enough to choose men on the basis of what they look like."

More male business executives are getting facelifts, he said, to keep pace with the young MBAs in the office.

With all this pressure to appear beautiful or at least attractive, Cash is ready with help for those who can't stand to look at themselves.

His beauty therapy started two years ago with a study involving 32 women who were unhappy with their appearance even though they were of average weight.

Half of the group members went through therapy sessions in which they were instructed to study themselves in the mirror. The subjects were trained to notice what they liked about their looks, instead of picking at their faults.

"People need to learn how to talk to themselves in front of a mirror," Cash said.

The women also were urged to join support groups, eercise and experiment with their looks.

"The object is not to be beautiful," he said. "The object is to like the way you look."

Those who went through the therapy increased their self-esteem, Cash said, while the women who went without the therapy kept their negative attitudes.

The study, to be published later this year, has drawn interest from specialists in eating disorders, he said. Training people who have recovered from anorexia or bulimia to like their appearance may prevent the illness from recurring, he said.

Therapy also may help people who were teased as children because they were fat or thin or had big ears, Cash said.

"All of these kinds of things can influence development," he said.

Cash is looking into how appearance is related to peer acceptance among teen-agers and whether schizophrenia develops more often among people with a genetic disposition toward the disease who also are unattractive.

"It may be that unattractiveness may be one factor along with a lot of other factors that can predispose toward problems in living," he said.

Brown-Maye Vows Solemnized

Patricia Ann Maye and Amos Allen Brown Jr. were united in marriage Saturday at 1 p.m. in Holy Trinity United Holy Church. The double ring ceremony was performed by Bishop Ralph Love.

Biting Dogs Don't Belong

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Here in California, we are currently experiencing a hysteria about pit bulldog attacks on children and adults.

Six years ago, when my son was 10 years old, he was attacked in front of our house by a dog that was half-collie and half-German shepherd. My son did nothing to provoke the dog. I know; I was there. The boy suffered wounds on his face that required 60 stitches. The owners of the dog refused to pay the medical bills because that would have admitted wrongdoing. We sued these people who, by the way, were friends of ours. My son received $25,000 compensation, but in retrospect it was not enough. Due to the scars on his face, our son has been in psychological counseling twice to help him adjust to the social problems those scars left.

Abby, please tell your readers that it is against the law to keep a vicious animal, even if it is tied up in their backyard. If a child climbs over a fence to retrieve a baseball and is attacked by a dog, the owner is liable. Those "Beware of Dog" signs mean nothing. According to the law, the owner is liable for any injuries incurred.

My son is now 16 and he's still very self-conscious about his scarred face. He is also deathly afraid of dogs.

Parents should teach their children never to make direct eye contact with a dog. Dogs see this as a challenge. Try to walk away as slowly as possible, and if there is a large object nearby, pick it up — you may have to use it. Do not run! This is also interpreted as a challenge, and dogs can outrun humans.

I hope this has helped. I wish I had taught my children more than just never to pet strange animals. If my letter will save just one child the devastating trauma our son suffered, it would make my day. — DEBORAH FYLER-WERBIL, FULLERTON, CALIF.

DEAR DEBORAH: I am sure many readers will benefit from your letter. Thank you for sharing with others what you learned the hard way.

DEAR ABBY: With so much publicity about "vicious" dogs being killed lately, please repeat the enclosed article you wrote on that subject years ago. It speaks for those creatures who can't speak for themselves. — ROSEMARY BROWN, CLEARWATER, FLA.

DEAR ROSEMARY: With pleasure. Here it is:

DEAR ABBY: This is for all newspaper carriers, mail carriers and delivery people: When you see a dog barking and growling in front of someone's house, turn right around and forget that house.

Today, a delivery boy tried to get up to our front door when he was confronted by our dog on a chain, growling and snapping frantically. The delivery boy didn't take the hint; instead he kept advancing, trying to get around the dog and up to our front door. Had our dog been able to get to this boy, he could have done him serious damage.

Abby, I'm really worried. I have heard that according to law, every dog is entitled to one bite, but if he bites twice, he has to be put to sleep. Is that true? — LOVES MY DOG

DEAR LOVES: "Laws" concerning dogs differ, depending on where one lives. However, it would seem apparent that a barking, growling dog on a chain is doing what he has been trained to do — protect his domain — and anyone who deliberately attempts to invade his territory is asking for trouble. Mail carriers, newspaper carriers and delivery people are usually instructed to "forget" the house that's being protected by man's best friend.

(Is your social life in a slump? Lonely? Get Abby's booklet, "How to Be Popular" — for people of all ages. Send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Popularity, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.)

Be Aware Before Buying House

NEW YORK (AP) — Take precautions to prevent your dream house from turning into a nightmare.

Attorney Armond Budish writes in Family Circle magazine that "you are always better off knowing any problems that exist before you buy a house."

Budish offers these tips to help avoid unwelcome surprises:

— State in your purchase offer that you may hire a professional inspector to look over the property after the seller accepts and might terminate the offer if flaws are found.

— Add a clause requiring the seller to list all repairs over $100 made to the property in the past five years. This should alert you to potential problems and to warranties for previous repair work, which should be signed over to you.

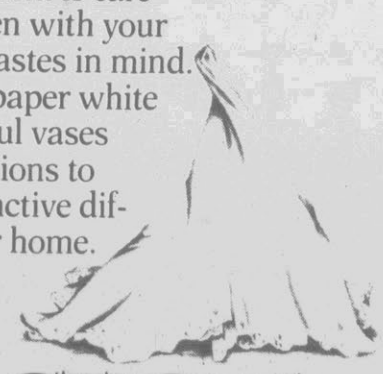

— Consult a lawyer for help in preparing your purchase offer.

Freezers whould be defrosted when the frost is just a fourth of an inch thick. The thicker the frost, the more electricity it takes to keep the freezer cold.

Leroy James, chairman of the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Service office, said farmers he talked to Wednesday were content with the prices paid. "They were well pleased with the way things were opening day," he said.

James said "I thought prices were good," and even though the weather has been dry, "I thought the quality was a lot better than last year. The quality of leaf looked much better than what I have seen in past years."

James said he was surprised at the small amount of "carry-over leaf from last year," that was on warehouse floors. But he suggested "I saw some tobacco that if the farmers had waited until next week (to sell) would have brought a better price."

But James said "I would encourage farmers to be sure to let it get ripe in the field" before harvesting. "It makes a difference in terms of quality," James emphasized.

"Let it get ripe," he said. If one farmer harvests "just because a neighbor pulls, that's the wrong thing to do," James said.

Mitch Smith, tobacco specialist with the county extension office said "my impression (of prices Wednesday) was they were a little bit higher than last year. That's certainly a good thing, certainly on the first day."

But Smith said the question of higher prices will be "better answered over the next month or so."

And Smith said he was "pretty impressed" that no tobacco on the Greenville market went to Stabilization. "I hope that trend continues," he said.

Smith also said the most important thing in terms of harvesting is for farmers to pull only ripe leaf.

"I can't really emphasize that point enough," Smith said.

According to the market news service, the highest average price for an Eastern Belt market was $141.02 per hundred pounds on sales of 323,620 pounds in Williamston.

Belt-wide, average prices ranged from $130 per hundred pounds for low orange primings to $136 per hundred pounds for fair lemon primings, the news service said. Those prices were $14 to $22 above first day sales a year ago.

Less than one percent of the tobacco sold on Eastern Belt markets Wednesday went to Stabilization, compared to 6 to 7 percent a year ago.

Peace Plan Response Positive

vites the government of the United States to immediately initiate negotiations in Managua or in a third country to have an unconditional dialogue to discuss the said (American) initiative," Ortega said.

That response, with its reference to "unconditional dialogue," drew criticism from Assistant Secretary of State Elliott Abrams, who said late Wednesday that Ortega seemed to be wanting to avoid negotiations with the Contras.

"What they'd like to do apparently is to delay more and try to make it out as if this were a U.S.-Nicaraguan struggle," Abrams said on ABC's "Nightline" program. "It isn't. It's a war among Nicaraguans."

"I think their purpose is probably to delay as much as possible but not be blamed for turning down the president's plan," he said.

But Wright said today that Abrams had not been present in any of the discussions on the peace plan and was not representing the administration's position.

He called Abrams' comments "counterproductive," and added: "In my view, that would constitute bad faith in the beginning."

Contra political leaders met with Reagan on Wednesday after the proposal was announced. They indicated that while they welcomed the plan and were willing to negotiate a cease-fire, they likely would have reservations about specific points.

Reagan called the development a "general agreement" with congressional leaders to put aside the military option and pursue a diplomatic track toward Central American peace, at least until Sept. 30, when $100 million in U.S. aid to the rebels runs out.

Neither Contra backers nor opponents made any commitment on what would happen on military aid should the initiative fail. The White House made it clear it would seek a renewal, and congressional opponents said they would fight such a request.

Wright said Wednesday he believed the initiative represented the best hope for Central American peace in a decade, and cited a positive letter from the Nicaraguan ambassador to Washington, Carlos Tunnermann.

The plan calls for an immediate cease-fire in Nicaragua followed by negotiations to be completed by Sept. 30. During that period, the administration would refrain from asking for renewed Contra aid, and the Nicaraguans would lift their state of emergency and restore civil rights and liberties.

When the cease-fire was in place, the United States would suspend Contra aid, and Nicaragua would agree to stop receiving aid from Cuba and the Soviet Union and would set a timetable for new elections. Negotiations between the United States, Nicaragua and other nations of the region would follow immediately, aimed at eliminating foreign military personnel in Central America and setting up a regional security agreement.

On Capitol Hill, members of Congress suggested that most moderate lawmakers seemed to be accepting the initiative in principle, although questioning some of its specifics and doubting its chances for success.

"The speaker has undertaken an enormous risk," said Rep. David Bonior, D-Mich., a staunch opponent of Contra aid. But he added that the agreement means "the credibility of this administration is on the line."

"This administration has pursued six years of war. It just seems to me they could pursue 60 days of peace," Bonior said.

Skepticism was greatest among the most conservative and most liberal members, with some rejecting the idea outright.

Correction

An article in Tuesday's Daily Reflector concerning a proposed exam exemption policy for Pitt County schools incorrectly stated that only students with D averages may waive a low score on a final exam. Any student — regardless of grade average — may waive the grade if it lowers the student's final grade, according to the policy proposal.

Hamlet Wins East Opener, 10-3

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

In a game full of opportunities, Hamlet made the most of them while Pitt County squandered numerous chances and the result was a 10-3 Post 49 win Wednesday night.

The win put Hamlet up 1-0 in the best-of-seven American Legion Eastern baseball championship series. The two teams are set to meet again tonight at 8 p.m.

Hamlet was aided by a strong performance by pitcher Roger Hailey, who scattered six hits and struck out 13 and effectively frustrated the Pitt batters all night.

"He threw an excellent ballgame," said Pitt County coach Toby Holliday. "He shut us down."

Hamlet coach Ronnie Yarborough said it was a typical performance by Hailey, who raised his record to 7-0 on the year.

"He's got two real effective pitches," he said. "He's got a real good fastball and he (also) throws the curve."

Hailey was helped by an early four-run lead as Hamlet took advantage of a key error in the opening inning to jump on top.

Glenn Ross and Corey Taylor opened the game with walks but Ross was picked off on a steal attempt. Tommy Lill and Corey Short followed with singles to load the bases.

Alvin Moorman then hit a short pop-up just past first base which David Daniels dropped, allowing Taylor to score. Lill then scored on Hailey's fielder's choice. That should have been the end of the inning but Corey Short followed by scoring off a wild pitch and Tom Outen then drove in Hailey with a base hit to make it 4-0.

Hamlet scored three more times in the fifth, taking advantage of two Pitt errors. Ross opened with a single, stole second and went to third on an error on the second baseman. Lill followed with a single to drive in Ross. Short then tripled to score Lill and then scored himself on an error on the third baseman.

Pitt got on the scoreboard in the fourth when Axel Smith was hit by a pitch, went to second on an error and to third on a fielder's choice by Bronswell Patrick and scored on a sacrifice fly by Ty Little.

Post 39 had a chance to get closer in the third when it loaded the bases with two outs before Smith hit into a double play to end the threat.

Pitt loaded the bases again in the fourth and this time took advantage.

Tom Moye opened with a single and advanced to third on consecutive singles by Patrick and Little. Moye was then put out at home on Shane Adams' fielder's choice. With one away, Jason Galloway lashed a two-run double down the right field line to score Patrick and Little and pull Post 39 within 4-3.

The rally was shortlived though, as Hamlet padded the lead with the three runs in the fifth.

"I was very impressed with the way we kept our composure when they got back within 4-3 and then we scored those three runs," Yarborough said.

Pitt stranded 12 men on the night, including seven in scoring position.

"The errors that we made were crucial," Holliday said. "They didn't make the mistakes. We didn't hit with runners in scoring position. We had opportunities to score and just didn't do it."

A large part of the problem was Hailey's effectiveness. After giving up four hits in the fourth, he gave up only one more hit the rest of the way, an infield single to Jarman in the seventh.

Meanwhile, Hamlet added one run in the seventh and two more in the eighth. Moorman had a solo home run in the seventh. In the eighth, Keith Robinson scored on an error and Taylor came home on a single by Lill.

Patrick took the loss for Pitt to fall to 5-2 on the year. He gave up 12 hits and 10 runs, only five of which were earned. He was replaced by Robbie McDonald in the eighth.

Lill had three hits to lead Hamlet while Ross and Short added two apiece. No Pitt County players had more than one hit.

In tonight's game, Pitt's Tom Moye (8-2, 3.17 earned run average) will go up against Hamlet's Bobby Hunt (6-0, 2.68 E.R.A.).

In the Western Legion Championship series, Haw River topped Stanley, 16-8.

Hamlet's 12 hits were nothing out of the ordinary, according to Yarborough.

"That's not unusual," he said of the team's hit total. "We're 30-3. We've played real good baseball but everybody says we haven't played anybody."

Geddes, King Top Henredon's Field

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

HIGH POINT (AP) — Defending champion Betsy King and leading contender Jane Geddes both have their eyes cast on the LPGA player of the year award, but they say they'll try to keep their minds on the four days of golf at the $300,000 LPGA Henredon Classic.

Either Geddes or King are at the top of the LPGA's seven major categories. Lurking just behind is Ayako Okamoto, who is skipping the tournament that begins today and continues through Sunday at the 6,242-yard, par 72 Willow Creek Golf Course.

On the money list, Geddes is first with $346,947 with King next at $342,317. Such is the extent of their battle, which they say isn't a one-on-one fight but more of an attempt to maintain their success.

"We're not dwelling on it, but I think after Saturday or so, we usually know what position each other is in," Geddes said. "Not that it's going to affect anything. Curiosity, I guess."

Geddes admits that past efforts to set goals for herself have only served to ruin her game. This time, she's trying to ignore the player of the year and everything that comes with it.

"My goal is not that specifically and I will not fold if that does not happen," Geddes said. "I have a lot more golf in front of me and a long way to go this year. I really haven't set any goals. I'm just trying to do my best."

Geddes has five victories this year while King has three. King might have more except for a sprained ankle in June which kept her out of competition for three tournaments. Although not 100 percent healed, King has not backed down.

"I've had three top 10 finishes after coming back off the injury," King said. "I know I can play well enough to where it's not bothering me that much any more."

And King says she, too, will occasionally glance at the scoreboard, just to find out if Geddes is gaining too much of an upper hand.

"I know I've looked to see what she's shot and I'm sure she's done the same," King said. "I think when you're out there playing, I'm just trying to play well and do the best I can."

With 10 career victories, King has only one successful title defense to her credit, last year's Rail Classic tourney. And to change that streak, she will have to master the 6,244-yard, par 72 Willow Creek Golf Course on which she won a playoff with JoAnne Carner in 1986.

"This course is pretty tough because you really have to shoot really low numbers," King said.

Of the top 10 money winners besides Geddes and King, four golfers are skipping the tournament, which will begin in 90-degree temperatures. Third-place Okamoto, a three-time winner and one of three golfers involved in the U.S. Women's Open playoff, is skipping the Henredon. Also missing will be Jody Rosenthal, the fourth leading money winner, Patty Sheehan, ranked fifth and a two-time winner at High Point, and Bradley, 10th on the money list.

No One Dominates Tour

PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus says that no one has claimed more than one title in the last 18 major championships because there are so many good players on the PGA Tour.

"It's obvious that nobody has come forward and dominated," Nicklaus said Wednesday on the eve of the 69th PGA Championship.

"I bet we have a repeat this week, maybe," he said.

Nicklaus said that Spain's Seve Ballesteros and Australia's Greg Norman have had more opportunities than other players to break the string begun by Larry Nelson's 1983 U.S. Open victory.

"In my opinion they're the two best players playing," Nicklaus said of Norman and Ballesteros. But he's not sure either of the two foreign stars ranks as a favorite this week.

"I don't know if Seve can back himself up on this course enough or not," Nicklaus said. "I don't know whether Greg can either. It's not a golf course that favors the guy who can hit long. It favors one who can keep the ball in play."

The championship will be contested on the 7,002-yard PGA National Golf Club course where the rough is extremely difficult.

"If you get in the rough inside the ropes, you might as well take a half-stroke penalty," Nicklaus said.

The only option is to knock it out on the fairway, he said.

The greens also will be difficult because of a pythium blight — a turf fungus — that hit about a month ago.

Nicklaus, who resides in south Florida, said even with the fungus problem, the greens "are probably a lot better than most in south Florida at this time of the year."

Nicklaus was asked who he favored, and after saying he hadn't though about it, asked, "Who's playing?"

He started reeling off the names of such straight hitters as Tom Kite, British Open champion Nick Faldo and PGA Tour money leader Paul Azinger.

He then mentioned Hale Irwin and, after being advised that Irwin wasn't entered, Nicklaus said, "He was my favorite."

Hoping to avoid any problems with the afternoon thundershowers that normally spring up in south Florida in August, PGA officials scheduled threesomes to start on the first and 10th tees for the first two rounds.

The first threesomes in the field of 150 faced a 7:30 a.m. EDT starting time.

Among the more interesting groupings were those that had Nicklaus, Arnold Palmer and Tom Watson in one and the winners of the season's three earlier majors in another — Masters champion Larry Mize, U.S. Open winner Scott Simpson and Faldo, the British Open winner.

If Nicklaus' prediction that one of the last 18 major winners would win this week, his list of favorites would also have to include himself, Norman, Ballesteros and Watson, but not Scotland's Sandy Lyle, who won in Britain two years ago. Lyle isn't in the field.

The other players with major titles in the last 4½ years are Ben Crenshaw, West Germany's Bernhard Langer, Nelson, Fuzzy Zoeller, Andy North, Ray Floyd, Hal Sutton, Lee Trevino, Hubert Green and defending PGA winner Bob Tway.

Nicklaus said he thought the course was set up well for a major championship.

"I don't really know how tough the golf course is," he said. "But I doubt very seriously whether we'll break 280."

Nicklaus said he thinks he's playing fairly well, but he also thought that during the British Open three weeks ago and he didn't score well.

He will be reunited with his longtime caddy, Angelo Argea, this week, the first time they've worked together since 1981.

Nicklaus said the first time Argea was with him for a practice round, "he was full of vim and vigor. After about six holes he was about 20 yards behind me and on 18 he was about 75 yards back. But he's a trooper. He'll be ready."

Sylva Is First To Head Home

Sylva became the first team to head homeward from the North Carolina State Little League baseball tournament Wednesday, bowing to Fort Bragg, 19-1, in the losers' bracket of the double elimination event.

Meanwhile, Forest City drubbed Myers Park-Trinity, 9-0, to advance in the winners' bracket of the tournament.

Only two games were played Wednesday as the schedule made up two rained out games from Tuesday. Play the rest of the week will be at least one day behind the original schedule.

Today's contests pit Greenville's Tar Heel team against Myers Park-Trinity in a 10 a.m. losers' bracket game. Ashe County and Fort Bragg will meet in a 2 p.m. game, also in the losers' bracket. The losers in each of those games will be eliminated, while the winners survive for at least one more day.

Meanwhile, Kernersville, tabbed as the favorite in the field, will face Forest City in the battle of the last two unbeatens at 4 p.m., winding up Thursday play. (These times have been changed from the original schedule. Most other games will also see different times.)

Forest City got all it would need in the opening inning of the first game Wednesday, scoring a single run. Lewis Miller, who had struck out Tuesday in the game's only at-bat before it was rained out, got a second chance to lead off Wednesday and this time tripled. He scored on a wild pitch for a 1-0 lead.

John Hill hit a leadoff home run to open the second inning running it to 2-0 and Tracy Earp hit a two-run shot in the third, upping the lead to 4-0.

Forest City picked up two in the fourth, two more in the fifth and one in the sixth.

David Hutchins went the distance for Forest City, allowing only two hits. He struck out 11 and walked one. Only three runners reached base for Myers Park-Trinity, with Corey Cauthen picking up both of the hits for his team.

Hill and Preston Allen each had three hits for Forest City, while Jeremy Elliott and Miller each added two.

□ □ □

Fort Bragg also struck early for its win in the second game, pushing over four runs in the top of the first. Chris Diaz led off with a single and Sean Gardner also singled. Jalacy Hawkins got a hit to load the bases. Jermaine Bryant then doubled in both Diaz and Gardner. A pair of wild pitches brought Hawkins and Bryant around for the 4-0 lead.

Fort Bragg added four more in the third, four in the fourth, three in the fifth and four more in the sixth, three of those on a triple by Dave McQuigg.

Sylva's lone run came in the third inning.

Corey Finch hurled the victory for Fort Bragg, allowing only two hits, both in the third inning. He struck out seven and walked six.

Diaz and Gardner each had three hits to pace Fort Bragg while Bryant, Hawkins and Finch each added two. No one had more than one hit for Sylva.

Rose Soccer Opens Up

Tryouts and opening practice sessions for the Rose High School soccer team will be held today at 5 p.m. at West Meadowbrook Park.

Additional tryouts will be held on Friday, Saturday, Monday and Tuesday at 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. each day.

All candidates should submit a physical form from Rose, or from their own physician.

Eagles Ink Two Locals

Two players with Greenville ties have signed professional contracts with the Philadelphia Eagles of the National Football League.

William Frizell, who graduated from Rose High School, has been picked up as a defensive back for the Eagles. Frizelle was originally drafted by the Detroit Lions and earned a starting position with the team before suddenly being cut at the start of the last season.

Jody Schulz, who was an All-American linebacker at East Carolina University, was signed out of college by the Eagles, but has suffered through a number of injuries and has sat out much of his professional career.

The signing of the two was announced Wednesday.

Close Calls Keep Races Tight

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

A couple of close calls in Montreal and Houston helped keep both National League races close.

The Montreal Expos escaped a bases-loaded jam in the 11th inning Wednesday night and Andres Galarraga's home run in the 13th provided a 2-1 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

"It was a very important win for us because we took two out of three in a big series," Galarraga said. Galarraga, who had four hits, tied the game in the ninth with Montreal's third straight single after two outs.

St. Louis' lead in the NL East was trimmed to 4½ games over New York, which took advantage by routing Philadelphia 13-3, and five over Montreal. The defending World Series champion Mets have not been this close to first place since May 15.

The Houston Astros, aided by a disputed call in the ninth inning, beat San Francisco 6-5 in the 11th on Denny Walling's pinch-single.

Houston remained 3½ games behind NL West-leading Cincinnati, a 6-3 winner over Los Angeles. San Francisco fell five games back.

The Giants led 5-3 with two outs in the ninth and no one on base. But the Astros loaded the bases and Kevin Bass then hit a sinking line drive that right fielder Chili Davis dived for, and first-base umpire Dutch Rennert ruled Davis trapped the ball. Two runs scored on the play, although pinch-runner Terry Puhl was thrown out at the plate.

Giants Manager Roger Craig argued the call and replays appeared to indicate Davis made the catch.

"It was right in the pocket. It never hit the turf," Davis said. "He blew the call."

In other NL games, Pittsburgh routed Chicago 10-0 and San Diego beat Atlanta 7-3.

Bob Forsch and the Cardinals took a four-hitter and 1-0 lead into the ninth inning before Montreal rallied. Hubie Brooks' two-out single finished Forsch and reliever Todd Worrell gave up singles to Tim Wallach and Galarraga.

"Forsch told me he was getting a little tired," Cardinals Manager Whitey Herzog said. "I wouldn't have been able to live with myself if I left him in there and he would have lost."

Worrell has blown 10 of 32 save opportunties this season. Galarraga hit his ninth home run of the season in the 13th off Ken Dayley, 6-2.

"Earlier in the game, I was trying to hit line drives, but in the 13th I was thinking about a home run," Galarraga said. "I hit it hard and and yelled, 'Go, go, go.'"

In the 11th, the Cardinals loaded the bases with one out. But Andy McGaffigan got Willie McGee to ground into a forceout at the plate and struck out Terry Pendleton.

The Expos loaded the bases with two outs in the 10th before Brooks grounded out. Casey Candaele led off the 12th with a triple but Montreal could not score him.

Randy St. Claire, 3-3, got the victory as Montreal raised its record in extra-inning games to 7-1.

The Astros also succeeded in extra innings when Walling's pinch-single beat San Francisco. Gerald Young led off the 11th with a double, took third on Billy Hatcher's sacrifice and, after Bill Doran was intentionally walked, Walling batted for pitcher Larry Andersen and grounded a single to right field.

Houston swept the three-game series. Eddie Milner went 5-for-6 with three doubles for the Giants.

Hatcher and Doran singled with two outs in the ninth against Craig Lefferts and Alan Ashby drew a walk from Scott Garrelts to load the bases for Bass.

"I was watching the baserunners, when I saw Chili on the ground. If he caught the ball, the game was over. But if he trapped it, I wanted to make sure our runners kept going," said Houston Manager Hal Lanier, who was coaching third base. "I thought maybe he would hesitate for a few seconds when I saw him arguing, and Puhl could score."

Andersen, 7-4, got the victory and Jeff Robinson, 6-8, took the loss.

Mets 13, Phillies 3

Gary Carter hit a pair of solo homers and two-run double and Darryl Strawberry hit a three-run homer as New York beat Philaelphia for its fifth straight victory.

The host Mets completed a three-game sweep and sent the Phillies to their fifth loss in a row. The start of the game was delayed 80 minutes by rain and there was a 45-minute rain delay in the second inning.

Wally Backman also had three of the Mets' 15 hits. Philadelphia used five pitchers, including Glenn Wilson. Wilson made his major-league pitching debut and worked a perfect eighth inning, striking out Howard Johnson.

Strawberry hit his 25th home run in the first off Kevin Gross, 6-10. Carter homered in the third, doubled home two runs in the six-run fifth and homered again in the sixth.

John Mitchell, 3-3, pitched six innings for the victory. Randy Myers finished for his second save.

Reds 6, Dodgers 3

Barry Larkin's two-run single capped a four-run sixth inning as Cincinnati again beat Fernando Valenzuela and Los Angeles.

Dave Concepcion and Dave Collins hit run-scoring infield singles to break 2-2 tie in the sixth against Valenzuela, 9-9. Valenzuela has lost seven of his last 10 decisions against the Reds and has not won at Riverfront Stadium since June 13, 1983. He is 6-8 lifetime against Cincinnati.

Ron Robinson, 5-3, gave up five hits in six innings. John Franco pitched the final inning for his 19th save.

Pedro Guerrero hit his 23rd homer for the Dodgers.

Padres 7, Braves 3

Rich Gossage moved into a tie for second place on the all-time save list and Stan Jefferson's three-run homer capped a five-run second inning as San Diego won at Atlanta.

Garry Templeton and pitcher Jimmy Jones hit RBI singles before Jefferson connected for his fourth home run.

Jones, 4-4, got the victory. Gossage went the final 1 1-3 innings for his eighth save and 286th of his career, tying Bruce Sutter. Rollie Fingers holds the record with 341.

Doyle Alexander, 5-9, took the loss. He has lost eight of his last nine decisions.

John Kruk, who homered twice and drove in seven runs in San Diego's 12-7 loss in Atlanta Tuesday night, added a solo home run in the seventh.

Dale Murphy got his 1,500th career hit for the Braves.

Pirates 10, Cubs 0

Brian Fisher pitched a six-hitter for his second shutout this season against Chicago as Mike Diaz's two-run triple led Pittsburgh.

Fisher, 7-6, struck out five and walked two in his second major-league shutout. The host Pirates won for just the second time in their last 14 games against NL East teams.

Diaz's first major-league triple made it 3-0 in the third inning against Jamie Moyer, 9-8. Andy Van Slyke hit a two-run double.

Neikro Maintains His Innocence

NEW YORK (AP) — Minnesota Twins pitcher Joe Niekro maintains he is innocent, but says he may not appeal his 10-day suspension for scuffing baseballs because of other factors.

American League President Dr. Bobby Brown suspended Niekro on Wednesday. On Monday night, Niekro was ejected from a game against California after umpires discovered he had an emery board and sandpaper in his back pocket.

The umpiring crew sent five allegedly scuffed balls from the game to the league office for examination.

"I don't have to scuff a knuckleball and I threw mainly knuckleballs," Niekro said.

The league said Niekro had informed it through the Twins that he would appeal the suspension, which would be held in abeyance pending a hearing yet to be scheduled. But after California's 6-1 victory over Minnesota on Wednesday, Niekro said he may not follow through with an appeal if a hearing date might serve to jeopardize his playoff eligibility.

Niekro said that if a hearing were scheduled for late August and his suspension upheld, he might be off the roster on Sept. 1.

"If I'm not on the roster Sept. 1, I may not be eligible for the playoffs," Niekro said. "We'll just have to wait and see."

Niekro has gone 5-8 with a 4.54 earned run average for the Twins, who are in a virtual tie with Oakland for the American League West lead. He said he would talk today to Twins executive vice president Andy MacPhail.

"I'll know the answers to those (questions) after talking to Mr. MacPhail," Niekro said.

The 42-year-old Niekro, the first player to be suspended for doctoring baseballs since Gaylord Perry was suspended for 10 days in 1982, is scheduled to pitch Friday night against the Athletics at Minneapolis.

Niekro said he uses sandpaper and emery, as do most knuckleballers, to manicure his fingernails.

"If I've been illegal, I've been illegal for 15 years," Niekro said.

"I'll be honest with you, I always carry two things out there with me, an emery board and a small piece of sandpaper. I've done that ever since I started throwing the knuckleball. Being a knuckleball pitcher, I sometimes have to file my nails between innings, so I carry an emery board with me to the mound."

But umpires Dave Phillips, Tim Tschida and Steve Palermo said the evidence warranted an ejection.

"It was too easy, just too easy. The guy was so blatant," Palermo said. "It was like Prohibition, if a guy had been walking down the street carrying a bottle of booze."

Phillips said the sandpaper taken from Niekro was "contoured to fit a finger. I'm sure he had it stuck to a finger on his glove hand. When we examined the sandpaper, there was a fingerprint on the back side."

"The cuts on the baseball were sharp and with depth. I don't think an emery board could have done that."

Tschida said scuffed balls "just kept coming up during routine inspections. We weren't looking to find anything. In fact, after we got to four (balls) I was hoping I wouldn't see another one."

Niekro said the incident has brought him some unusual attention.

"I also signed my first two emery boards the other night," Niekro said. "We got back to the hotel and a guy was waiting in the lobby. He told me he'd driven 70 or 100 miles, something like that, and asked if I'd sign these two emery boards. So I said OK.

"Maybe I should go into the emery board business. Half the people probably didn't know what an emery board was before this. They knew what a fingernail file was, but not an emery board. Heck, one of the guys on the team, and I don't even remember which one, came up Monday night and said, 'What's an emery board?'"

White Follows Lead Of Lopez

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

HIGH POINT (AP) — Much like Nancy Lopez, Kinston native Donna White has learned that golf and motherhood do mix.

White, who now calls Wellington, Fla., home, gave birth to Kristin Paige in April 1981 and showed her off that summer at the Henredon Classic while taking time off the tour.

In last year's Henredon Classic, Lopez made her debut after taking maternity leave to give birth to Erinn Shea. Both of Lopez's daughters travel with her.

This year, 6-year-old Kristin White graduates from kindergarten to first grade, and White sees it as one more sign that she made the right decision to play and bring her child along on the tour.

"She is around children quite a bit, but just from the exposure she's had in the first five years of her life, it's an education that most adults have never had," said White, looking for a fourth career victory in her home state at the Henredon Classic, which begins today and continues through Sunday. "She's been everywhere in the United States. She's adjusted real well."

White also is proud to say that her daughter has scored in the top 3 percent of children her age in national achievement tests.

"I think it's mainly just from being out here," she said. "I'm just really thankful that it's worked out."

To accomodate golf and family, White has adjusted her playing schedule. She opens each season with tournaments in Florida, takes time off to watch her daughter finish the school year and then takes Kristin and her husband, Mike, on the road during the summer months.

The net effect has been calming for the former North Carolina-Greensboro student. That is, as calm as playing golf for money can be.

"There's less pressure on me, I'll put it that way," she said. "I feel more confident knowing this is one more thing I don't have to worry about. And the consistency is there for Kristin."

White has won $34,675, 55th on the LPGA tour. Where that might bother many golfers, the fact that her daughter is along soothes her feelings.

"She couldn't care less. When she was younger and I was playing out here full-time, to have someone to go home to just meant so much more to me," White said. "This is a hard and lonely life. To have that outlet has been a good thing for me."

The balance between golf and the real world is soon going to become an issue for the LPGA, White says. Next season, there will be 16 children on tour who will need attention.

"I'm lucky that my mom's able to travel with me," she said. "A lot of these girls don't have sitters that can travel with them every week. They have to worry from tournament site to tournament site what they're going to do with the baby."

White has a few more tournaments remaining this season, then it's back to the family side of her life. "These other girls will be on the road for the next tour event," she said. "I'll go home and get ready for school."

Greenville Wins Event

The Downeast Summer Junior Tennis League finished the season Wednesday with a tournament at River Birch Tennis Center.

Greenville won this year's tournament with a total of 61 points. Kinston and Washington tied for second with 55 points while Goldsboro took fourth with 33.

Wilson, also a member of the league, did not participate in the tournament.

The only individual winner from Greenville was Greg Pearsall, who took first place in the 12 and under #1 singles division.

Other members of the team who all placed were: Adam Charlton, Celeste Charlton, Angela Cappillary, Keith Corbett, Heather Crawford, Meredith Lee, Mark Taylor, Mike Fisher, Ben Davis, Toure Claiborne, Kathryn Ellen, Don Thompson and Sean Frelke.

Previous team winners were Goldsboro in 1985 and Washington in 1986.

Moye Is Second

Macon Moye, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Bill Moye of Greenville, finished second in the Greater Bangor (Maine) Open golf tournament this past weekend in Bangor.

The tournament is a stop on the Tournament Players Association tour. The TPA is considered the "minor league" of professional golf, a step below the Professional Golfers Association (PGA) tour.

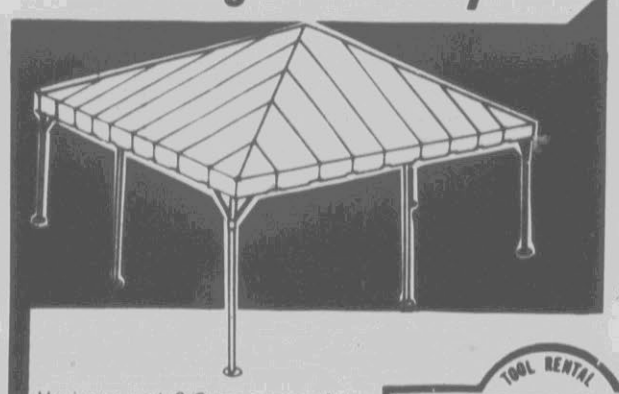

Moye fired a 72-66-70—208 score for the 54-hole event, and lost out on a chance to tie for first when the actual winner chipped in on the final hole of the day.

Moye's finish was his best ever on the tour.

"CURE YOUR TOBACCO TO A DEEPER ORANGE COLOR."

"Last year was the third year in a row I've used the Tobacco Curing Generator religiously in every barn of tobacco I've cured. The main reason is that it helps cure mature tobacco a deeper orange color, which is what the export market wants.

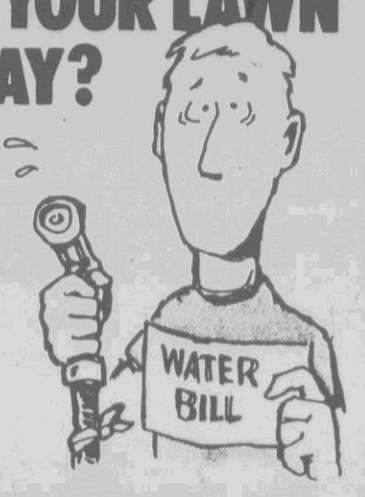

I've compared barns side by side, one with four quarts of Ethy-Gen and the other without the Generator, and the barn with Ethy-Gen cures up more orange every time. It really pays off on varieties which tend to cure up on the bright side.

In addition, I can turn my barns around a day faster. Saving a day's curing cost pays for the cost of the Ethy-Gen and Generator. Plus, over a season, I gain the equivalent of an extra barn." – Buzz Shackleford, Rt. 2 Snow Hill, NC

If your tobacco is mature and ripe, you can market rich, orange tobacco when you use the Tobacco Curing Generator from Catalytic Generators. And no green butts. Tobacco will grade higher and bring a better price. And you'll save time and money. Come in for your generator and Ethy-Gen today.

Youth Is Served In Yankees' Win

By BILL BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

Youth was served when 48-year-old Phil Niekro made his 712th major-league start and 23-year-old Brad Arnsberg his second.

Arnsberg, despite giving up four walks and seven hits in six innings, didn't allow a run as he won his first major-league game and the New York Yankees avoided a series sweep by Cleveland with a 5-2 victory Wednesday night.

"I don't think I walked four guys the whole time I was in (Class AAA) Columbus, and I pitched 150 innings there," Arnsberg said. "I struggled with my curveball, and when I threw my fastball for strikes, it was over the middle of the plate."

Mike Pagliarulo led the Yankees with two homers off Niekro, but he said neither came off the veteran's fabled knuckleball.

"The pitches I didn't hit were knuckleballs, and they were the nastiest pitches I've ever seen," said Pagliarulo, who now has 23 homers. "The ones I hi out of the ballpark weren't knuckleballs. They were sinkers, screwballs or whatever. The knuckleballs were floating, rolling backward, doing everything. I was just trying to get my bat on the ball."

The victory kept the Yankees, who lost the first two games of the series 2-0 and 15-3, a half-game ahead of Toronto in the American League East.

In other games, it was Toronto 3, Chicago 2; Oakland 3, Seattle 1; California 6, Minnesota 1; Detroit 4, Kansas City ; Milwaukee 5, Baltimore 1, and Texas 9, Boston 8.

The Indians left 12 runners on base, and they didn't score until the ninth, when Andy Allanson hit his first home run and Pat Tabler added an RBI single off Tim Stoddard. Dave Righetti got the final out for his 21st save.

Manager Doc Edwards said the Indians gave Arnsberg too much help.

"We chased some pitches that were out of the strike zone," Edwards said. "With some guys, the ball looks that big, and then when you go to hack at it, it's up high. It looks good until you commit yourself."

"He (Arnsberg) showed poise," Yankees Manager Lou Piniella said. "He got the big outs when he needed them. He popped out two guys with the bases loaded."

Pagliarulo made it 1-0 in the fourth with his 22nd homer, only the second allowed by Niekro in his last 42 innings. The Yankees added a run in the fifth on Gary Ward's RBI single, and they made it 3-0 in the seventh when Juan Bonilla slid around the tag at home plate on Ward's sacrifice fly.

Pagliarulo homered and Bonilla hit an RBI double in the eighth to put the Yankees up 5-0 before Cleveland's short-lived ninth-inning rally against Stoddard.

Blue Jays 3, White Sox 2

Toronto kept pace with the Yankees thanks to a ninth-inning rally against Chicago, climaxed by Ernie Whitt's two-run double with two outs.

With the White Sox leading 2-1, Willie Upshaw opened the ninth with a single off loser Rich Dotson, 8-8. Garth Iorg then hit a grounder to second, and both runners were safe when shortstop Ozzie Guillen dropped Fred Manrique's throw for an error.

Dotson appeared to get out of the jam when he got two groundouts, but Whitt doubled off the right field wall.

Jimmy Key, 13-6, was the winner with eight innings of eight-hit pitching, and Tom Henke pitched the ninth for his 25th save.

Greg Walker hit his 20th homer in the fourth inning to account for both Chicago runs.

Angels 6, Twins 1

California tightened the AL West race when John Candelaria held Minnesota to two hits and no walks in six innings.

Candelaria, who spent 46 days on the disabled list after two arrests for drunken driving, was making his first start since June 16. He faced the minimum number of batters thanks to two double plays.

"I didn't know how well I'd pitch. I wouldn't have been surprised if I was wild," Candelaria said. "I'm glad the team won. That's most important."

The Angels trail Minnesota and Oakland by one-half game, with the Athletics leading the Twins by .0005.

Candelaria's duel with right-hander Bert Blyleven, 10-9, was broken open in the fifth inning when Bill Buckner's three-run homer, his first since May 31 and only his third of the season, gave the Angels a 6-0 lead.

Athletics 3, Mariners 1

Oakland took a slim hold on first place as Jose Rijo and Gene Nelson combined on a five-hitter and Jose Canseco hit his 23rd homer.

Rijo, 2-5, called up from Tacoma of the Pacific Coast League just before the game to replace the injured Joaquin Andujar, allowed five hits in 5 2-3 innings for the victory. Nelson pitched hitless ball over the final 3 1-3 innings to pick up his second save.

Oakland took a 2-1 lead in the fifth when Carney Lansford singled, went to second on a wild pitch by Scott Bankhead and scored on Mark McGwire's single. Terry Steinbach's sacrifice fly in the eighth gave Oakland a 3-1 lead.

Tigers 4, Royals 2

Pat Sheridan, Lou Whitaker and Alan Trammell homered and Walt Terrell improved his record at Tiger Stadium to 27-7 with his fifth complete game as Detroit handed Bret Saberhagen his fourth straight loss.

The Tigers ended a three-game losing streak and halted the Royals' four-game winning streak as Saberhagen, 15-7, lost to Detroit for only the third time in 13 lifetime decisions.

Sheridan hit his fifth homer the third inning and Whitaker added a two-run shot, his 13th, in the fifth.

Terrell, 9-8, gave up eight hits, including solo homers to Steve Balboni and George Brett before Trammell made it 4-2 in the eighth with his 16th homer.

Brewers 5, Orioles 1

Milwaukee beat Baltimore for the eighth consecutive time this season as Steve Kiefer hit his second homer in as many nights and Ted Higuera pitched a six-hitter and struck out 10.

Kiefer homered off Eric Bell, 9-8, in the fourth inning after Greg Brock's two-out single. The Brewers added two more runs in the fifth on Robin Yount's two-run single and scored their final run in the eighth on an RBI single by B.J. Surhoff.

Higuera, 11-8, who struck out five straight in the seventh and eighth innings, is now 6-1 in his last eight starts.

Rangers 9, Red Sox 8

Texas rallied from an 8-3 deficit against Boston as Bob Brower singled off the right field wall with the bases loaded in the ninth. Brower and Ruben Sierra hit two-run homers earlier.

The Rangers tied the game 8-8 in the ninth when reliever Joe Sambito, 1-4, walked Scott Fletcher and Sierra hit his 20th homer of the season. Sambito then walked Pete O'Brien and was relieved by Calvin Schiraldi, who walked pinch-hitter Larry Parrish.

After Mike Stanley sacrificed the runners to second and third, Schiraldi walked Steve Buechele intentionally. After striking out Pete Incaviglia for the second out, Schiraldi gave up the game-winning hit to Brower.

Texas started its rally in the bottom of the seventh with an RBI single by O'Brien, making it 8-4. Brower hit his two-run homer off Sambito in the eighth.

Wade Boggs hit his 19th homer for the Red Sox, who scored three runs in the sixth inning on no hits and six walks.

Somber Moments Mark Anniversary Of Nuclear Bombing Of Hiroshima

By JAMES F. SMITH
Associated Press Writer

HIROSHIMA, Japan (AP) — A moment of silence enveloped Hiroshima and doves soared over the once-devastated city today as Japan recalled the blinding flash 42 years ago that jarred the world into the nuclear age.

"I hope that on this day, the world's 5 billion people will think about what happened here," Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone told about 55,000 people gathered at Hiroshima Memorial Peace Park.

"I pledge that we will build peace on this earth," he added.

At 8:15 a.m., the city of 1 million observed a moment of silence, punctured by the solemn tolling of a bell, as it remembered the more than 140,000 victims of the Aug. 6, 1945 bombing.

A U.S. B-29 bomber dropped "Little Boy," the first atomic bomb used against humans, on this regional military headquarters for southern Japan. Three days later, a second U.S. bomb devastated Nagasaki, killing an estimated 70,000 people.

The Japanese government surrendered unconditionally on Aug. 15, 1945, to end World War II.

Hiroshima has been rebuilt and "the oleanders are blooming now as if nothing happened here," Nakasone said. "But in the minds of the people, the scars of the bombing must still remain."

Nakasone said the United States and Soviet Union had produced "bright news" with their moves toward an accord on deep cuts in medium-range nuclear weapons.

The 45-minute ceremony took place near a carpet of yellow chrysanthemums, the flower of mourning for the Japanese. A flame at the park that is to burn until all nuclear weapons disappear from the earth surged higher during the minute of silence.

As Nakasone spoke, protesters unfurled a banner demanding a new law granting more benefits to the 350,000 Japanese designated as A-bomb survivors.

In other parts of the park, groups of left-wing and ultra-nationalist right-wing demonstrators chanted slogans and made speeches over loudspeakers. They, too, stopped their activity during the minute of silence.

"It is increasingly important that future generations be told about the horrors of nuclear war," said Hiroshima Mayor Takeshi Araki. He said 5 million schoolchildren visited Hiroshima in the past 10 years.

A coalition of eight peace groups declared that the Japanese must fight not only nuclear weapons but also the Japanese militarism "that rounded up citizens of Hiroshima ... to go off and trample over countries of Asia" in the early years of the war.

The United States entered World War II after Japan attacked Pearl Harbor on Dec. 7, 1941.

The coalition said it wanted to erect a display in the peace park "showing what Japan did to other countries, so that we will not forget the country's past aggression against Asian peoples."

The coalition also pledged to seek a ban on nuclear weapons at U.S. military bases near Hiroshima.

Araki, the mayor, said the names of 4,619 A-bomb victims who had died in the past year had been added to a list kept in a marble cenotaph, bringing the total to 148,177.

The victims include people in the vicinity during the bombing, those who came to the area in two weeks after the attack and those who were fetuses.

Among the foreign guests attending the ceremony were representatives of Hiroshima's sister city, Volgograd, in the Soviet Union.

At dawn, Korean protesters gathered at a memorial to the 20,000 Koreans who died in the bombing to protest their monument's location — outside the Peace Park and across the Otagawa River.

"Why are you discriminating against Korean victims even after their death?" asked a leaflet handed out by the protesters.

Most Korean victims had been brought forcibly to Japan to aid in the war effort.

McDonald's Will Discard Cartons Made With CFCs

By DAVID GOELLER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Big Mac will look and taste the same, but fast-food colossus McDonald's says the sandwich will begin doing its part to help the global environment.

In action hailed on Capitol Hill as a model for the eat-and-run industry, McDonald's announced a plan to phase out use in the United States of foam containers manufactured with chlorofluorocarbons, or CFCs.

Scientists say those chemicals, in wide and increasing use around the world, are destroying the atmospheric ozone layer that helps protect humans from the sun's cancer-causing, ultraviolet rays.

The Reagan administration, warning of increased risks of skin cancer, has been negotiating this year with other industrialized nations in an effort to have CFC production decreased by as much as 95 percent worldwide.

Clifford Raber, government relations vice president for McDonald's, said Wednesday that the world's largest restaurant chain "made this decision with the full recognition that McDonald's packaging represents only a minute portion of total CFC usage."

"While our decision will not have any realistic impact upon the level of CFCs being emitted, we do believe it could be helpful in persuading others to make similar decisions," Raber said in a letter to Sen. Robert Stafford, R-Vt.

Last February, Stafford asked McDonald's to stop using containers made with CFCs, which also serve as refrigerants and solvents, especially in the production of computer chips.

Stafford, one of the leading environmentalists in Congress, hailed the action.

"I commend the company for its responsible and imaginative leadership and I trust that the rest of the fast-food industry will follow suit," Stafford said. He expressed hope that other industries "can find alternatives to the use of CFCs."

Raber said McDonald's had been studying the issue before Stafford's request. He said containers made with CFCs will be phased out in the United States over the next 18 months.

Lana Ehrsam, a company spokeswoman, said the change eventually could be extended to McDonald's outlets in other countries, where 2,000 of the chain's 9,400 restaurants are located.

The Dutch and Indians concluded a peace treaty at New Amsterdam in 1645.

Blood Test Questioned

BOSTON (AP) — Wide use of a prenatal blood test for Down's syndrome could ultimately result in the loss of more healthy fetuses than the discovery of ones with birth defects, a doctor says.

The test, available in several states, does not directly detect Down's syndrome. But it identifies pregnancies at higher-than-usual risk for the defect so the women can then have amniocentesis, a test that checks specifically for the syndrome.

In today's New England Journal of Medicine, researchers described two years of using the test in Connecticut, where they found it could help identify about one-quarter to one-third of pregnant young women whose babies will have the syndrome.

"We believe, based on these findings, that this screening test for Down's syndrome will be useful for identifying babies with the syndrome," said Miriam Schoenfeld DiMaio, a genetic counselor who directed the study at Yale Medical School.

Down's syndrome is especially common in the children of women who give birth after age 35, and many older mothers are routinely checked with amniocentesis. Since it carries a slight risk to the fetus, amniocentesis is not ordinarily done in younger women.

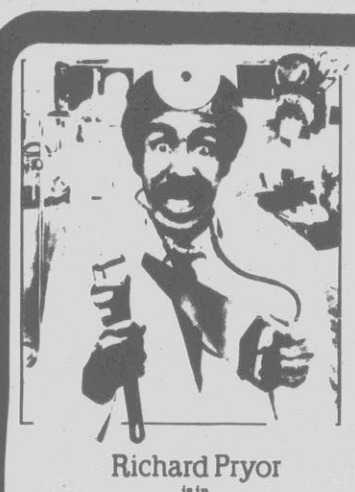

The test described in the latest study uses the mother's blood to check for levels of a substance called alpha-fetoprotein. Low amounts of the protein suggest that the fetus may have Down's syndrome. If the woman's risk of having a child with the syndrome is calculated to be one in 270 or greater, she is offered amniocentesis.

In the latest study, 1,451 women were judged to be at relatively high risk for giving birth to babies with Down's syndrome. Nine actually turned out to have fetuses with Down's syndrome. The test missed 18 others whose unborn babies also had the syndrome.

In an editorial accompanying the study, Dr. Siegfried M. Pueschel of Rhode Island Hospital noted that between 1 percent and 1.5 percent of fetuses die during amniocentesis. If the blood screening test were used across the country, then between 1,500 and 2,250 fetuses would be lost annually because of amniocentesis, and 932 fetuses with Down's syndrome would be identified.

"Thus, there would be more normal fetuses lost than fetuses with Down's syndrome discovered by screening," he wrote.

In an interview, DiMaio replied, "Any woman who chooses to have the screening test had better consider the risk of losing the pregnancy due to amniocentesis. It's an excellent point, and we certainly don't ignore that. Women are forced into making decisions about whether they are willing to have a baby with Down's syndrome and whether they are willing to face the small risk of amniocentesis. But some women do not want to have a baby with Down's syndrome."

How They Voted

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes during the week ending July 31.

House

DEBIT LIMIT HIKE — By a vote of 263 for and 155 against, the House raised the federal debt ceiling from $2.11 trillion to $2.32 trillion through Aug. 6.

The same measure was approved by the Senate, enabling the government to avert on July 31 what would have been the U.S. Treasury's first default in history.

Recent Congressional efforts to enact a long-term hike in the debt limit have been waylaid by disputes over how best to put teeth back in the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings balanced budget law.

Members voting yes supported a short-term hike in the federal borrowing ceiling.

North Carolina representatives voting yes were Walter Jones, D-1; Tim Valentine, D-2; Martin Lancaster, D-3; David Price, D-4; Howard Coble, R-6; Charles Rose, D-7; W.G. Hefner, D-8, and James Clarke, D-11.

Those voting no were Stephen Neal, D-5; Alex McMillan, R-9, and Cass Ballenger, R-10.

NUCLEAR LIABILITY — By a vote of 119 for and 300 against, the House rejected an amendment to eliminate the ceiling on utility company payments for damages resulting from nuclear power plant accidents.

Under the defeated amendment, unlimited liability for a given accident was to be provided from a fund drawn from operators of all nuclear plants. It was offered to a bill that as later passed hiked from $700 million to $7 billion the cap on what all victims could collect from a single accident.

The bill (HR 1414) was sent to the Senate.

Supporter Marcy Kaptur, D-Ohio, said unlimited liability would give the nuclear industry an "economic incentive to make their plants operate more safely."

Opponent Philip Sharp, D-Ill., said, "Let's not go for utopia when we have a chance to get something real, concrete and substantial for people."

Members voting yes favored unlimited power company liability for nuclear accidents.

No North Carolina representatives voted yes.

Those voting no were Jones, Valentine, Lancaster, Price, Neal, Coble, Rose, Hefner, McMillan, Ballenger and Clarke.

NUCLEAR CONTRACTORS — The House rejected, 193 for and 226 against, an amendment to HR 1414 (above) empowering the government to financially penalize private contractors who violate nuclear safety regulations while working for the Energy Department.

In contrast to the liability imposed on nuclear utility companies (see previous vote), contractors working for the department have virtually no financial responsibility for their role in nuclear accidents.

Sponsor Ron Wyden, D-Ore., called private nuclear contractors "a privileged caste exempt from the financial consequences of their actions."

Opponent Manuel Lujan, R-N.M., said errant nuclear contractors already are subject to criminal penalties.

Members voting yes supported the amendment.

North Carolina representatives voting yes were Lancaster, Price and Neal.

Those voting no were Jones, Valentine, Coble, Rose, Hefner, McMillan, Ballenger and Clarke.

TO SUSPEND DEPORTATION — By a vote of 237 for and 181 against, the House passed a bill (HR 618) enabling most illegal immigrants from Nicaragua and El Salvador to remain in America until the General Accounting Office and Congress complete an approximately two-year review of U.S. deportation policy affecting parts of Central America.

The bill was sent to the Senate.

Supporters said the bill gives refugees from El Salvador's civil war the same opportunities for asylum the Administration is according immigrants from Marxist Nicaragua.

Opponent Clay Shaw, R-Fla., said, "The floodgates are open if this bill passes."

Members voting yes supported the bill.

North Carolinar representatives voting yes were Jones, Price, Neal, Rose and Clarke.

Those voting no were Valentine, Lancaster, Coble, Hefner, McMillan and Ballenger.

Senate

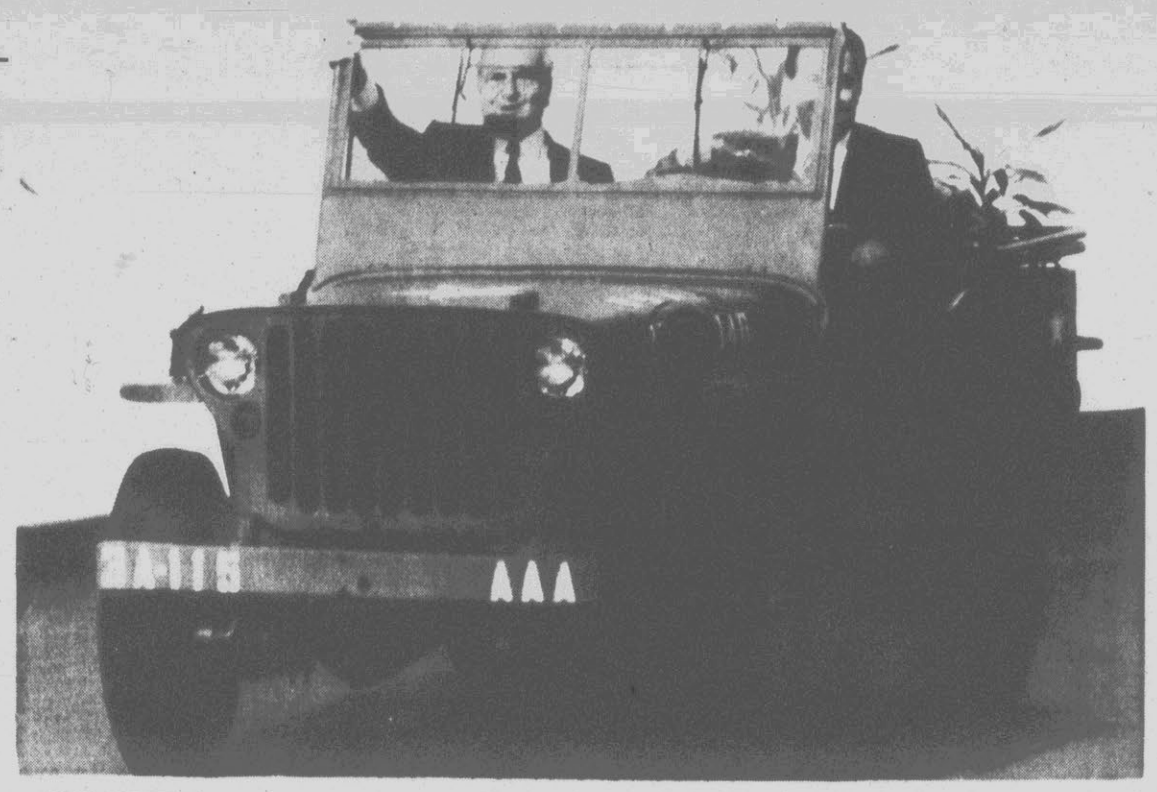

POSTAL WORKERS — By a vote of 18 for and 74 against, the Senate rejected an amendment broadening job rights of Postal Service employees who are not postmasters, supervisors or members of a collective bargaining unit.

The amendment was offered to legislation giving all postmasters and supervisors, not just those who are veterans, the right to appeal adverse personnel decisions to the Merit Systems Protection Board. Presently non-veterans in those two posts must appeal within the Postal Service.

It sought to extend the broader civil service appeal rights to several thousand additional non-union postal workers, including some inspectors and clerical personnel. The bill (HR 348) was sent back to the House.

Senators voting yes favored the amendment.

North Carolina Sen. Terry Sanford, D, voted no. Sen. Jesse Helms, R, voted yes.

AMC Shareholder Vote Closes Chrysler Buyout

By JANET BRAUNSTEIN
AP Auto Writer

DETROIT (AP) — American Motors Corp. shareholders overwhelmingly approved a $830 million buyout offer from Chrysler Corp. on Wednesday, despite misgivings by some who mourned the demise of the last major U.S. automaker outside the Big Three.

The vote at AMC's headquarters in the Detroit suburb of Southfield cleared the way for the closing of the deal, and set into motion a flurry of document-signing by Chrysler and AMC lawyers in New York.

Until Wednesday, when it became a Chrysler subsidiary, AMC was the fourth-largest domestic automaker. The buyout leaves Chrysler, General Motors Corp. and Ford Motor Co. to compete with other automakers around the world.

The main prize in the merger will be Jeep Corp., the best-known name in sport-utility vehicles, which AMC obtained in 1970.

Joseph E. Cappy, AMC president and chief executive officer, told shareholders that Wednesday "should be regarded as a day of fulfillment, instead of disappointment."

"I want to disabuse anyone of the notion that this merger is the case of a failing company falling prey to a more successful competitor. AMC is not a failing company," Cappy said.

"Whether we have the financial strength to stay the distance in the face of the burgeoning competition out there — 38 automotive companies worldwide — is another matter entirely. Clearly we do not," he said.

Cappy said AMC would have finished 1987 with a "very good profit" and described the buyout as "bittersweet."

AMC earned $53.7 million in the first half of 1987, its third consecutive profitable quarter. But since 1980, AMC lost $838.6 million, prompting French government-owned Renault to sell its 46.4 percent AMC interest to Chrysler in March.

At Chrysler's Highland Park headquarters, Cappy drove Chrysler Chairman Lee Iacocca around a temporary showroom and up to a podium in a World War II-vintage Jeep as loudspeakers blared "Stars and Stripes Forever."

"What really makes this a perfect match is we're really the same kind of people" at Chrysler and AMC, Iacocca said. "We aren't just combining our strengths, we're increasing them. I think this is a marriage made in heaven."

Iacocca said the AMC-Jeep lineup will be sold under the name Eagle-Jeep and that Cappy was joining Chrysler as a group vice president in charge of Eagle-Jeep. Cappy will oversee the absorption of AMC into Chrysler.

John Tierney, AMC vice president and chief financial officer, was named chairman of Chrysler Financial Corp., Chrysler's profitable finance and banking arm.

Other non-Renault AMC executives are protected by a contract that guarantees income and benefits through the end of 1989 if they are not hired by Chrysler.

Salaried employees also are protected by an agreement that will give them up to 12 months' severance pay if they are not hired by Chrysler.

Cappy said Chrysler would maintain AMC primarily as a marketing and distribution subsidiary, but added that one company could not sell another company's products through its dealers without changing vehicles' appearances and names.

Several shareholders said they believed that Chrysler's offer of $4.50 worth of Chrysler stock for each non-Renault share of AMC stock was too low. But Cappy said during the months of publicity surrounding the buyout, no other suitors came forward with a better deal.

The preliminary vote showed 108.3 million shares voted for the merger, that 4.1 million voted against it and that 553,000 did not vote. Of the voting shares, 46 percent were held by Renault.

GM Offers Incentives

DETROIT (AP) — Lagging sales prompted General Motors Corp. to offer financing as low as 1.9 percent and rebates of up to $2,000 on some cars, but the company faces huge losses because of the buyer incentives, an analyst said.

The world's No. 1 automaker, which once swore off buyer incentives as too costly, announced the program Wednesday on selected 1987 models.

As a result, GM probably will suffer a third-quarter 1987 operating loss of a "couple hundred million dollars," said industry analyst Michael Luckey of Shearson Lehman Bros. Inc. in New York.

He said GM was expected to lose as much as $100 million in the third quarter because it has cut production by 18 percent since last year.

"I don't think these incentives will work as well as they did last year, but they will stimulate sales," Luckey said.

"Incentives throughout all this year just haven't had the impact they used to simply because customers are used to them and consider them a normal way of doing business," he said.

The new GM incentive program, which started today and will run through Sept. 30, and covers most Chevrolet, Pontiac, Oldsmobile and Buick models and the Cadillac Cimarron.

Customers can choose financing at 1.9 percent on 24-month loans, 3.9 percent for 36 months, 4.8 percent for 48 months and 8.9 percent for 60 months or rebates ranging from $200 on a Korean-made Pontiac LeMans to $1,000 on full-size Buick and Oldsmobile luxury models.

"Orthodox" Sleep?

Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone took a snooze recently, while his Finance Minister listened to a committee of the upper house of parliament. Scientists talk of at least two kinds of sleep periods — "orthodox sleep," characterized by its deepness, and "paradoxical sleep," characterized by restlessness and rapid-eye-movement (REM). Dreaming takes place during paradoxical sleep, but sleepwalking and most sleeptalking take place during orthodox sleep.

DO YOU KNOW — Does body temperature rise or fall during sleep?

Horoscope

From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY Aug. 7

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The early part of the day yields an opportunity to garner valuable advice. Later in the day, however, your judgment may not be very good, so try to avoid decisions.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Some novel way of utilizing one of your talents should be taken advantage of early today. Take no risks this evening.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): A family friend has good home safety ideas, so listen. An ousider may give you bad advice, but good suggestions.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): This evening is not a good time to take on any challenges. Stay at home and make plans for your weekend.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): After a good day at work, forget about that outside affair which could be difficult. Try to relax.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): Support the argument of a co-worker who is in the right. That new contact made today will pop up later in the week.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Don't follow that hunch which keeps pecking away at you. Don't let an unusual situation embarrass you tonight.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Avoid the public this evening. Be sure to conscientiously keep any promises you have made, recently or past.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Your find performance on a resent project will bring you assistance from an admirer. Take care of your health.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Abandon a new idea which you suspect will bring you nothing but trouble--you're absolutely right.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Don't invite guests over tonight after such a busy day. Take it easy and get to bed early, you really need the rest.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Show that you are dependable by following through on an agreement you've made and benefit greatly.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Your capabilities can be quite impressive, if you use them. Steer far clear of jealous and scheming persons.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he, or she, will be very productive from an early age, but upon reaching middle age, will want to take risks, travel to foreign places, etc., which will not be at all profitable. Teach your progeny to finish a project once it's begun.

"The Stars impel; they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

The trouble with playing a convention is that you want to wield it wherever possible. Take the Unusual No Trump, for instance. That should be used either on a hand so weak and distributional that you are going to sacrifice, or so strong that you intend buying the hand. Use it wrongly and all you do is draw declarer a blueprint of your hand.

After the interference, North bid a difficult hand well. By first cue-bidding in the pointed suits before supporting hearts, he made it clear his concern was the club suit, so South, with second-round control in both minors, elected to gamble out the small slam.

West led his top spade and declarer made short shrift of the hand. He drew trumps and cashed out the high spades to see if they would split. When they did not, the normal play with nothing to guide him would be to cash the ace-king of diamonds, in case the queen dropped and, when it did not, to lead a club toward the king in the hope that East had the ace.

That line would have failed as the cards lay, but declarer was forewarned that it would by the Unusual No Trump overcall. Instead, after cashing the high spades declarer ruffed the fourth spade in hand. Next came the ace of diamonds and three more rounds of trumps, reducing everyone to three cards. Dummy held a diamond and two clubs, and declarer king-jack of diamonds and the king of clubs.

Poor West was a goner. If he came down to a singleton queen of diamonds and ace-queen of clubs, declarer would simply fell the diamond lady and claim his jack of diamonds as the fulfilling trick. So West bared his ace of clubs and kept a diamond guard. That enabled declarer to throw West in with a club to force a diamond return from the queen into the king-jack tenace.

Fans Of Marilyn Monroe Remember Film Goddess

By LINDA DEUTSCH
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Look-alikes and loyal fans flocked to Marilyn Monroe's crypt on the 25th anniversary of her death to pay tribute to the film goddess remembered as a restless combination of sex appeal and "haunting innocence."

The chapel of Westwood Village Mortuary was standing room only as hundreds of friends and admirers praised the blond beauty as a legend who has found immortality.

A heart-shaped wreath of red carnations, bouquets of roses and pictures of Miss Monroe decorated the plain marble crypt.

"Even though 25 years have passed since that tragic day, Marilyn's spirit continues to live," said Greg Schreiner, president of a group called Marilyn Remembered, which organized Wednesday's memorial service.

Those who knew her spoke of the morning of Aug. 5, 1962, when word spread worldwide that the glamorous star had been found dead of a drug overdose at age 36.

Maurice Zolotow, who wrote the first biography of Miss Monroe in 1960, recalled his reaction when he was awakened by a phone call from a reporter.

"I just didn't believe it," he said.

"It's strange that 25 years later, far from being forgotten and gone ... here's a celebrity that becomes more celebrated. She's unique."

"There was something about her. Her screen presence. A haunting innocence combined with an overpowering voluptuousness," he said.

"She was like a flower slowly unfolding its petals, as if it was in stop-time photography."

He and others recalled the deprived childhood and searching life of the woman born Norma Jeane Mortenson, the illegitmate child of a film worker.

"Marilyn Monroe was a restless, unquiet spirit, one of those artists condemned to solitude by the gift God gave her," said Zolotow.

The emotional service, which included a song written for Miss Monroe by Schreiner, ended with a tearful Susan Strasberg delivering the eulogy her father, the late acting coach Lee Strasberg, had written for Miss Monroe's funeral.

"She had a luminous quality, a combination of radiance, yearning, that set her apart," said the eulogy.

Miss Strasberg concluded with a personal reminiscence.

"She would always say before she went before the cameras, 'Hold a good thought for me,'" Miss Strasberg said. "I think she would be very pleased that you and millions of other people are holding a good thought for her."

The hundreds at the cemetery included a few who knew Miss Monroe, including Eleanor Vallee, widow of Rudy Vallee; Helena Sorel, one of her first acting coaches; and author Robert Slatzer, who claims he was married briefly to Miss Monroe.

Also present was Milo Speriglio, a private investigator who has propounded the theory that Miss Monroe was murdered.

Most at the service were fans, many born after the actress died, some from as far away as England and Australia.

"There can really be only one Marilyn," admitted Adrienne Marlowe, of Sydney, Australia, one of several women who copied the star's blonde hair, heavy makeup and glamorous clothing.

A buxom woman with cotton-candy hair who identified herself by the single name Marilyn said she's emulated the star for a long time.

Various Money Problems Hinder Charity Telethons

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Trouble may be brewing for charity telethons, those marathon fund-raisers that tax the endurance of exhausted performers on stage as well as that of the viewers at home.

Jon Ross, a veteran broadcaster who is producing a "minitelethon" for the Leukemia Society of America this weekend, says the traditional telethon has fallen on hard times.

Ross said telethons are caught in a crunch amid rising production costs, increasing program choices for viewers and viewers' declining attention span.

His fund-raiser, "Six Hours for Life," will be telecast at various times this weekend on 82 stations.

"Jerry Lewis started the telethon for muscular dystrophy in 1965," said Ross. "It took a while to get off the ground, then it became a Labor Day tradition. Others saw it and said, 'Hey, let's do that, too.' The next thing you knew there was a flood of telethons.

"They all had a familiar pattern. They all urged you to call early. The hosts all took off their jackets and showed you how exhausted they were."

The 1970s were marked by the growth of independent stations, UHF stations, cable, pay television and videocassettes.

"Stations started paying more for programs and charging more for advertising," said Ross. "And here comes the telethon. It became more and more difficult to clear that many hours. But it was also hard to turn the charities down, so they began to charge them more money. Some stations gave the time free, but many charged $10,000 to $20,000 an hour.

"You can't fault the stations. They have to pre-empt a lot of progamming and they lose a lot of income. The quality of some telethons has gone down and the viewer gets turned off. The attention span is very short. If you're not entertaining them all the time, they'll turn it off."

The March of Dimes will not stage a telethon this year because it was unable to get station clearances, Ross said. The Cerebral Palsy Society has not made a decision yet whether it will stage a telethon this year, said spokeswoman Nina Gordon.

The Jerry Lewis Telethon for the Muscular Dystrophy Association, however, will go on again this year over the Labor Day weekend.

"We've had no clearance problems whatsoever," said Richard Mann, associate director of public relations for MDA in New York. "I've seen Mr. Ross' remarks and I believe he's been making that prediction for several years. But we have a network of 200 stations and we have had no problems."

Mann agreed that the fact that it was the oldest and most famous of the telethons probably contributed to its acceptance by the stations.

Ross, who is executive producer for the National Leukemia Broadcast Council, believes that shorter telethons offering concentrated entertainment and information are the the wave of the future. His group has staged regional telecasts, but this is their first national effort.

"The Fox stations, which used to be Metromedia, had been donating the time to us," Ross said. "They have put us on notice that this is the last year. That tell me that we darn well better find a new form if we want to continue to raise money on television. So we brain-stormed and this is the concept we came up with."

"Six Hours for Life" will be telecast live from Paramount Studios this weekend, although the participating stations may tape it for broadcast at their convenience.

The show combines several formats, from game show to newscast to talk show. Shirley Jones is the national host.

Elaine Joyce will be the host of the game show segment, "Star Spin," which will feature as contestants such game show hosts as Monty Hall, Dennis James, Geoff Edwards and Wink Martindale. Each game show host will be coupled with a teen-ager recovered leukemia patient.

Marty Ingels will be master of ceremonies for a night club segment called "High Society," interviewing the stars who come in to entertain.

Meredith MacRae is anchor of the talk show segment, where she will interview people in leukemia research. One of the guests will be Dr. Robert Gale, the research scholar who performed bone marrow transplants in the Soviet Union for victims of the Chernobyl nuclear disaster.

"There are a solid core of telethon viewers," said Ross. "I guess they like to look at phones ringing. So we'll go occasionally to the local stations so you can see the phones and get local updates."
