In The Area

Blood Collections

The American Red Cross collected 308 units of blood at four locations during the month of July.

The locations of bloodmobiles were East Carolina University, Wahl-Coates School, the Farmville National Guard and Prep School.

On Aug. 3, a bloodmobile was held at the First Baptist Church in Farmville, with 79 pints of blood donated. A bloodmobile also was to be held in Winterville today.

The next public bloodmobile will be at the Public Works Building on Beatty Street from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. for the benefit of city and county employees. The Bloodmobile is being sponsored by Pizza Hut, and everyone who registers to give blood will receive a coupon for a free pizza.

Library Officers

At its recent bi-monthly meeting, the Sheppard Memorial Library Board of Trustees elected Mack Beale chairman and Mrs. Cathrine Creech vice chairman.

Beale is an agent for State Farm Insurance and has served as a library trustee since 1984. Mrs. Creech is a realtor with Duffus Realty and has served as a trustee since 1983. Both officers were elected for one-year terms.

CCAIR Crew Base

Greenville will become a flight crew base later this month for CCAIR, Inc. which provides Piedmont Commuter airline service to Pitt-Greenville Airport, according to CCAIR spokesman Eddie Bacon.

Bacon, director of sales and traffic for the airline, said effective Aug. 18, 10 pilots and five flight attendants will be assigned to the Greenville flight crew base.

Because the 15 flight crew members will live in the Greenville area, Bacon said "in excess of $1 million a year" will be added to the area's economy.

CCAIR's Piedmont Commuter serves Pitt-Greenville airport with five daily departures to Charlotte and five departures to Raleigh-Durham with 19-passenger Jetstream 31s and 36-passenger Shorts 360s.

When the Charlotte-based airline became a Piedmont Commuter on May 1, 1985, it had eight aircraft serving 10 cities in three states. CCAIR now has 20 aircraft serving 21 cities in seven southeastern states.

Cattle Grazing

Cattle producers who consider letting their cattle graze on drought-affected crops should be aware of high nitrate levels that can accumulate in forages due to drought, said Phillip Rowan, Agriculture Extension agent.

Drought, or other conditions which upset normal growth, may cause nitrate accumulation in forages such as corn, sorghum, sudangrass and millet, he said. "Feeding high levels of nitrates can result in reduced feed consumption, lowered production, abortions and death of cattle."

Drought-affected crops containing nitrates may be used if properly managed, but they should be tested before cattle graze, Rowan said. The N.C. Department of Agriculture Forage Testing Facility tests feed for nitrates on a priority basis.

Contact Rowan at the Pitt County Agricultural Extension Service, 752-2934, for details on testing, feeding and managing crops suspected of nitrate toxicity.

Council Session

The Greenville City Council will conduct an executive session Tuesday night at 5:30 p.m. in the third floor conference room of City Hall to discuss the remaining six applicants for the vacant city manager's position and personnel matters.

Joint Meeting

The Greenville City Council will meet with the Greenville Utilities Commission Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. at the GUC operations center on Mumford Road to discuss the proposed classification and pay plan for city and GUC employees.

Seven Thefts

Investigators said seven thefts were reported to Greenville police over the weekend.

Officer J.A. Bartlett said tools valued at $60 were taken from a bicycle at Guy Smith Stadium in an incident reported at 5:48 p.m. Saturday, while Sgt. K.R. Evans said a radar detector was taken from a car parked at 104 N. Warren St. in an incident reported at 10:24 a.m. Sunday.

Officer K.D. Lingerfelt said two speakers, an amplifier and a box containing 35 cassette tapes, with a combined value of $758, were taken from a car parked at 2700 Shawnee Place in an incident reported at 3:17 p.m. Sunday and $63 in cash was taken from a patient's wallet at Pitt County Memorial Hospital in an incident reported at 9:26 p.m. Officer K.M. Smeltzer said a purse containing $37 in cash was taken from Kroger Sav-On on Greenville Boulevard in an incident reported at 6:20 p.m.

Officer W.S. Heath said a plant valued at $10 was taken from 2803 E. Third St. in an incident reported at 7:05 p.m., while Officer D.C. Johnson said a 1985 model car was taken from Forrest Manor Apartments in an incident reported at 7:36 p.m.

Meeting Tonight

The Greenville chapter of United Ostomy Association, Inc. will meet tonight starting at 7:30 in Conference Room A of the Gaskins-Leslie Center. Wanda Lancaster, a certified clinical specialist in adult psychiatric and mental health nursing, will speak.

Assault Probed

Greenville police are continuing their investigation of a rape incident reported to the department about 2:47 a.m. Saturday, Detective J.E. Harris said this morning.

Harris said a 24-year-old woman — asleep in the bedroom of her apartment in a residential area between the Tar River and the East Carolina University campus — "woke up being choked with a rope."

The investigator said that the victim was then forced into the living room of her apartment where she was assaulted.

The attacker, who entered the apartment through an unlocked rear door, took some jewelry and the woman's purse, which contained "a dollar and some change," Harris said.

Harris said the attacker also apologized and cautioned the victim to be more careful in the future.

New National Park To Open

CARSON CITY, Nev. (AP) — America's newest national park, a 76,800-acre expanse of mountain peaks, limestone caves, meadows and desert with trees that were around long before the birth of Christ, opens officially this weekend.

President Reagan signed legislation creating Great Basin National Park on Oct. 27.

Great Basin, Nevada's first national park and the nation's 49th, includes the Snake Mountain Range, Lehman Caves National Monument and groves of the world's oldest and largest bristlecone pine trees, some more than 4,000 years old.

Republican presidential hopeful and former U.S. Sen. Paul Laxalt is slated to speak Saturday at ceremonies opening Great Basin.

Great Basin is tiny compared to such national parks as Yellowstone, which is 2.2 million acres, but it is about the same size as Arches National Park and twice the size of the Bryce Canyon National Park, both in Utah.

Sharp contrasts mark the park's landscape. Jackrabbits and sagebrush populate the desert valleys, while rare alpine wildflowers grow atop 13,063-foot Wheeler Peak in the heart of the park.

Autopsies Planned

By JOHN HANSON
Associated Press Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Police investigating the discovery of six or seven decomposed or skeletal bodies in a bloody apartment searched for clues today on the roof and in adjoining buildings and sought the former occupant.

The bodies were found Sunday in a north Philadelphia row house considered a drug users' "shooting gallery," and drug paraphernalia was found in the apartment, authorities said.

A warrant was issued for the arrest of the man evicted from the apartment, identified as Harrison Graham, 30, on a charge of corpse abuse, said Homicide Capt. Robert Grasso. He said any other charges have to await autopsy results.

"We don't know what we have here," Grasso said. "It could be a combination of natural deaths and homicides. But we just can't tell at this time."

The city medical examiner's office said it could be days before causes of death are known because of the condition of the bodies.

Firefighters with ladders were called in today to search the roof of the row house, where police said they hoped to find clues, and other officers moved into adjacent vacant buildings.

Police said they were also thinking about digging up a nearby vacant lot.

A teen-ager who identified himself only as a 10th-grader at Daniel Boone High School said he had seen Graham digging in a lot nearby several times and once asked him what he was doing. "Burying dogs," he said the man replied. Police later questioned the youth.

The bodies were discovered after the landlord complained about a stench coming from a third-floor apartment, said Detective Robert McGarry.

The tenant, who occupied the apartment for four years, had nailed his door shut from the outside and stalked out of the building after the landlord's nephew ordered him out Wednesday or Thursday, police said.

The owner, who lived on the first floor of the building, called police Sunday, saying the stench "was getting worse, and the guy hadn't returned," said McGarry.

Through a crack in the door, police saw bodies and blood on the floor and walls, McGarry said. An initial search produced two women's bodies, one naked and the other partially clothed, McGarry said.

Buried under garbage were the skeletal remains of three more bodies, one wrapped in a sheet, police said.

Inside a closet were the skeletal remains of another body, which appeared to have been tied up, and beneath that was debris that appeared to be a seventh body, McGarry said.

"It was amazing," said homicide Detective Gregory Rodden. "It was bodies piled on top of one another — literally."

Police would not release the names of the owner or his nephew. Elizabeth Williams, 87, who has lived several doors away for 46 years, said she was not surprised by the deaths. In the north Philadelphia neighborhood, "anything goes," she said.

"I expect to see three or four (dead) people every week," she said. She said the block had been a gathering place for drug users for at least 10 years.

Another resident, Jeffrey Robinson, 23, said five or six people used to deal drugs from the two windows in the cinderblock wall. He said the building was known widely as a drug house, and heavy drug traffic occurred there.

Police said the house was in the center of a high-crime area known for drug activity.

Soybeans are inhabited by numerous kinds of insects. Most do not pose a threat to profitable soybean production, however, a few kinds can meaningfully reduce yields if their numbers are high. Typically, insect problems of soybeans are low in early season, up to late July or early August. From this time, and until the plants mature, soybeans may be invaded by large numbers of foliage feeders or pod feeders.

Foliage-Feeding Insects

Green cloverworm — This larvae is light green in appearance and wiggles vigorously if disturbed. Since green cloverworm is the only caterpillar with four pairs of prolegs, it can be readily identified. Treatable levels of green cloverworm infrequently occur and a decision to treat should be carefully considered. Green cloverworm is close to a velvetbean caterpillar in appearance and behavior. However, the green cloverworm has only four pair of prolegs.

Corn earworm — Corn earworm larvae look very different from loopers and cloverworms. This caterpillar, usually is darker and appears to be hairy. Corn earworm have five pairs of prolegs. Coloration usually is brown for small worms but green or yellow plus black in larger caterpillars. Corn earworm not only feed on foliage but also pods, if many pods are present little foliage feeding may take place.

Soybean looper — The soybean looper has only three pairs of prolegs and can be quickly identified. The light green caterpillar also walks in an inch-worm manner, however, this habit also is characteristic of the green cloverworm. Soybean looper is largest in girth at the rear and tapers toward the head.

Velvetbean caterpillar — Velvetbean caterpillar (VBC) moves into the Coastal Plain and Tidewater areas of the state in late August and September but seldom reaches treatable levels. VBC is normally light green (however caterpillars can be green with black stripes or entirely black with light stripes); the wiggle vigorously if disturbed.

Bean leaf beetle — Beetles are yellowish-buff to reddish and usually have black margins and four black spots on the back. Spots are sometimes missing but this insect always has a triangular mark on the front of the wing covers. Bean leaf beetles usually inhabit fields with high moisture holding capacity soils. Only the adults eat foliage and they produce rounded holes in the leaves.

Mexican bean beetle — Adults and larvae eat soybean foliage. Beetles are copper to yellow rounded beetles with 16 black spots. Larvae are yellow, oval soft-bodied, grublike insects with dark branched spines. Foliage damage from broodstages is netlike in appearance and usually progresses upward from the plant bottom.

Other beetles — Japanese beetle, grape colaspis, blister beetle and spotted cucumber beetle are often encountered in soybeans. In particular, Japanese beetle may become abundant, but it occurs in the June-July period when substantial defoliation can be tolerated; therefore, is seldom a problem. The other beetles are commonly seen but seldom are abundant.

DANGER IN PARKING LOT

I recently saw a car parked at a bank with the motor running. Inside the car were two small children, the oldest about five years old. This child was actively pursuing the fascinating game of "Drive The Car." He was busily trying to disengage the shift lever, which could have propelled the car through the bank window. I have not read since of an errand car entering the bank, so apparently this time the children escaped disaster. Still what about the next time? The next place? Let's better protect our children. HOW YOUR SLEEP AFFECTS TEETH

How important is your sleep posture to your dental health? More important than you may think. Researchers, dating back to the early 1930's have discovered that certain malocclusions (bad bites) develop because of long-standing sleeping habits.

Dentally speaking, we are now aware that sleeping on your side can cause improper bites in the back teeth and jaw joint, possible headache problems (from this cause) and even develop overbite and underbite.

The solution is simple, but it must be started early in life because once you develop an individual sleeping posture, it's hard to change. At the earliest stage possible, try to teach your child to sleep on his or her back. This is the healthiest posture for the body in general as well as the teeth.

Certainly, if your child is undergoing orthodontic treatment, proper sleeping habits can only shorten the treatment time and make it more successful.

North Collaborator Awaits Contra Affair Fate

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — When Philippines President Cory Aquino arrived for a state visit last September, she was accompanied by Richard R. Miller, then a rising star in this city's image-building business.

It was an ego-nourishing experience for Miller, a political conservative who in a short period had built from scratch a lucrative firm that specialized in promoting the Nicaraguan Contras. It was a classic case of a man who was able to blend his professional interests and his ideological predilections.

Eleven months after jetting across the Pacific with Mrs. Aquino as her public relations aide, Miller finds himself under a mountain of debt, his company struggling for survival. Most demoralizing of all is the possibility that he may have to spend the next few years in jail for his work with former White House aide Oliver North on behalf of the Contras.

"I've got to believe I know what an innocent man being executed feels like," Miller told two reporters at his second floor office at International Business Communications, where he often worked until after midnight on Contra projects.

I viewed our work as work on behalf of our government, and therefore did not give the attention to legal details I should have," he said. "You have to do your duty, and that's what I thought I was doing." His main regret is not consulting lawyers early on, he said.

On May 6, Miller pleaded guilty to the fraud charges, admitting that he and conservative fund-raiser Carl R. "Spitz" Channel illegally used a tax-exempt foundation to raise more than $3 million to arm the Contras.

According to a criminal information filed by independent counsel Lawrence E. Walsh, the government was defrauded of taxes on money from donors who were told they could deduct the contributions on their income tax returns. Both Miller and Channell said they worked with North to help arm the Contras.

Miller's bearing is more melancholy now compared with the somewhat brash I-can-handle-anything demeanor he had in IBC's heyday. It was a time when he frequently traveled the few short blocks that separate his IBC office from North's former headquarters in the Executive Office Building next door to the White House.

Self-pity is not a part of his makeup and, once his legal troubles are over, he wants to rebuild his firm, which is down to four people from a high of 14. His father, a one-time naval officer, told him never to give up, no matter what.

Maintaining a business-as-usual posture has been hard for Miller as he contemplates being hauled off to prison, possibly for five years, deprived of the company of his wife and 15-month old daughter.

"I have mentally prepared myself for it," he said. "My wife has, too. I don't think there is anything more painful than the notion that I would walk away from my daughter at a year and a half and come back when she is 5 or 6."

Money is another headache for Miller. Legal bills arising from a variety of federal investigations have produced lawyers' fees that will total perhaps $470,000, of which he has paid between $150,000 and $175,000, mostly by selling his real estate, he said. His sentence also could carry a fine of up to $250,000.

The firm is or has been investigated by Walsh, the Internal Revenue Service, the House and Senate Iran-Contra committees, the U.S. Information Agency and the State Department.

Miller said he and North received $3.44 million for the Contras from Channell's fund-raising activities. But he declined to elaborate on how they handled the funds, citing his cooperation in Walsh's Iran-Contra criminal investigation.

He said he not communicated with North since February and was told by Walsh's staff not to watch the public congressional hearings where North testified about the Iran-Contra affair.

North told the congressional committees that he instructed Miller to set up a Cayman Islands account where money from Channell's contributors could be funneled to the Contra cause.

The Contras have said they received $1.2 million directly from the Channell network, and it is unclear what happened to all the $11 million that Channell raised on behalf of the rebels in 1985 and 1986.

Miller said he handled about $5 million that was raised by Channell, including the $3.4 million he handled with North, and close to $2 million that IBC spent on Channell's public relations and political projects. Miller denied reports that North directed those efforts.

If there is a silver lining to Miller's cloud, it is that he can go home earlier nowadays because the IBC doesn't have the clientele it used to. That means more time with his family.

Illegal Aliens Still Finding House Jobs Despite Law

By HOLDEN LEWIS
Associated Press Writer
EL PASO, Texas (AP) — A law making it tougher to employ illegal aliens appears to be having little, if any, effect on the hiring of tens of thousands of undocumented workers from Mexico as maids and house servants in this border city.

"The El Paso economy depends on the system, and it's survived immigration crackdowns before," said Oscar J. Martinez, director of Texas-El Paso's Center for Inter-American and Border Studies. "I don't think it's in danger of dying out."

Even though El Paso is one of the poorest cities in Texas, 20,000 to 30,000 household workers work here, a tradition that dates to the 1880s, researchers say.

About half of the domestic workers are live-in employees, and the overwhelming majority are undocumented workers from Mexico.

The immigration law signed by President Reagan in November makes it illegal to knowingly hire illegal aliens. This summer, immigration officials released a form that employers are supposed to use to verify workers' legal status.

Despite the threat of fines, the tradition of hiring undocumented

Mexican maids appears to be thriving in this city of 500,000.

Real estate ads for homes often list a maid's room. Leasing agents often offer to arrange maid service for prospective tenants.

"It's very common," said one woman, a language tutor who employs a live-in maid and did not want to be identified. "Being here on the border, we have a lot of people looking for work."

Her 21-year-old maid from the border state of Chihuahua, who also asked not to be identified, said she earns $70 for a five-day week.

The language tutor said most of her friends have maids, and that they all plan to keep them.

"The wages in Mexico are so low. The maids are inexpensive here," she said. "I don't think it's going to die out at all."

Although the Immigration and Naturalization Service has said it plans to concentrate enforcement on companies that employ large numbers of undocumented workers, the agency has been making life a little more difficult for maids.

Two weeks ago, the INS' El Paso district began cracking down on people suspected of abusing three-day permits that allow Mexicans to enter the United States to shop and take care of personal business.

Border inspectors issued temporary passes allowing Mexicans to stay in the United States for a few hours and said Mexicans could get their permanent passes back upon return.

Humanitarian and labor groups in Mexico protested. The Juarez council of Mexico's ruling political party called for a three-day boycott of El Paso businesses, which reported a dramatic sales decline.

INS district director Al Giugni ended the crackdown and apologized to business owners.

The strict enforcement had been designed to count people using passes in the early morning, who were likely to be crossing the border to get to work, said INS attorney Stanley Serwatka. Fewer than 200 people were stopped each day, he said.

Mayor Koch Leaves Hospital

NEW YORK (AP) — Giving a smile and a thumbs-up sign, Mayor Edward I. Koch left the hospital Sunday after treatment for a minor stroke.

"What you see here before you is a 28-year-old brain in a 62-year-old body," Koch told reporters outside Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center. "My intention is to bring the body ... down to the age of the brain. ... I intend to lose some weight."

"I have a wonderful job as mayor," he added. "I intend to be here for a long time."

Koch, flanked by his doctors and private nurse, said he had promised to follow their advice to diet and rest.

Dr. Robert Barrett, one of his neurologists, pronounced Koch "in excellent shape" following a complete exam that morning.

"There is no evidence of any facial weakening, slurring of speech or muscle weakness," said Barrett. He estimated the chance of a recurrence at .05 percent.

"You'll see that I'm not slurring," said Koch, referring to one of the symptoms he had suffered. But the mayor spoke softly to reporters and walked slowly.

Asked if Koch seemed less exuberant than usual, Barrett said, "That was by our direction."

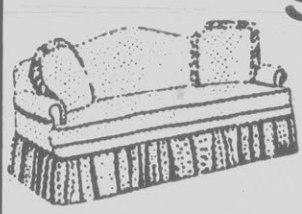

Noting demonstrators across the street who were protesting the conditions of homeless people housed in a nearby armory, Koch, mayor of the nation's largest city, quipped, "I feel at home."

Koch, who was driven home to Gracie Mansion, was told to return to the hospital for tests Wednesday.

The mayor was stricken Thursday as he was being driven to Harlem for an appointment. He complained of nausea, dizziness and slow speech. On Friday, doctors said he had suffered a minor stroke.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Helpful Sign

Although the 1987 tobacco selling season is off to an auspicious start, problems still loom large for this industry which has tremendous impact on the state's economy.

Prices on opening day were good — above the 1986 level. Most leaf purchases went to the warehouse, or to tobacco companies. The Flue-Cured Tobacco Stabilization Corporation — the scapegoat for the ills of the tobacco industry — bought very little of the opening week offerings. Most agricultural economists agree if that trend continues, 1987 could be a recovery year for tobacco.

Before optimism peaks, however, growers are reminded that tobacco faces formidable foes alongside this seemingly good forecast. Advocates of advertising bans on tobacco products and increases in the federal tax will wage hefty campaigns against leaf promotion, for example.

The hopeful market opening should be a reminder, however, of tobacco's impact on North Carolina. The industry is vital to the economy of the state and at no time is this fact more tangible than on market opening day.

Thousands in the state depend on the leaf for support, and sales statistics back up this statement. North Carolina produced 440 million pounds of leaf in 1947 and predictions for 1987 exceed 475 million. Greenville tobacco officials expect to sell 34 million pounds in 1987 for a total of $55 million — a substantial chunk of the local economy. Clearly, the crop is maintaining its spot as a revenue creator for the county and state.

Although the importance of these dollars is immense, the significance of this impact goes beyond just revenue. Tobacco pays bills for families. It buys school clothes. It sends kids to college.

The message from tobacco market opening day 1987 is simple — leaf has a strong place in North Carolina's economy but it is a position that must be defended despite a seemingly financially optimistic beginning. The state must nourish its agricultural industries and encourage its agronomy-based economy to expand. That substance is necessary to provide the state the diversity it requires to continue prospering.

Tennessee Caviar

Some weeks ago while aglow over a possible "different" crop for eastern Carolinians, on the catfish farm front, we expressed a wish yet another such off-beat resource might make the scene.

Maybe the "wish fairy" was listening because Associated Press writer Margaret Haberman recently described a caviar operation sited (of all places!) in Tennessee.

The Dixie fish eggs are sold by a Chattanooga-based firm headed by one Laban DeFries whose "elixir of the elite" comes from paddlefish and hackleback sturgeon in rivers of Tennessee, Alabama, Mississippi and Arkansas.

DeFries became involved with caviar when the Iran hostage crisis of a few years ago halted caviar imports from that country, and he helped supply an alternate source. Last year his company sold about 12,000 pounds of caviar and this year contracted to provide 10,000 pounds of caviar for sale in Japan.

Commercial fishers supply around 80 percent of the eggs required, and the remainder comes from fish raised in ponds.

In about three years DeFries hopes to pond-raise all the fish used for the business.

"When you catch fish commercially you're subject to nature, the wind or rain or floods and all that," he says, "and we need to maintain a consistent supply since we're growing so fast."

All the ingredients needed to raise catfish in eastern Carolina might also be adaptable to the fish-egg trade, too. It might be worth looking into.

It's a far-out thought, and maybe we've been out in the sun too long, but quality caviar from North Carolina has a good ring to it. There are a lot of rich people in America and the palate-pleasing delicacy has a built-in marketing potential, as the Tennessean has proven.

Today's Thought

Now that all candidates have filed for Greenville mayor and city council races, voters have nearly three months to ponder the qualifications of the candidates. That is plenty of time to make the choices.

Peace Plan Could End Years Of War

GUATEMALA CITY — A historic Central American peace plan signed here Saturday carries great potential for ending years of war in the region, but its implementation will require hard negotiating in the months to come with the attendant risk of a breakdown, according to analysts here.

If these negotiations succeed, the plan may bring peace and economic development to a region racked by military coups, death squads, insurgencies and poverty. Success would make the peace plan's principal author and motivator, Costa Rican President Oscar Arias, a likely candidate for a Nobel Peace Prize, some analysts are already saying.

If the plan fails, however, the result is likely to be further polarization, a deepening of the region's economic morass and a continuation of the bloodletting.

The major concern, now emerging in the wake of yesterday's euphoria, is that different interpretations of the agreement's major provisions could lead to impasses in the negotiations that lie ahead.

Also key to the plan's success is the acceptance of it by the United States, which is called upon to stop supplying aid to the Nicaraguan rebels in 90 days, simultaneously with the implementation of other provisions that would "democratize" Nicaragua.

The agreement was signed yesterday at the end of a two-day Central American summit by presidents Ortega and Arias, Venicio Cerezo of Guatemala, Jose Napoleon Duarte of El Salvador and Jose Azcona of Honduras. According to Central American and U.S. analysts, the agreement represented significant concessions by Ortega and Duarte, whose countries are worst affected by rebellion, economic dislocation and deepening poverty.

"For whatever reason, the Sandinistas were much more eager for an agreement and open to negotiations than they were last year," said William Goodfellow, director of the Washington based Center for International Policy. He said Nicaragua's worsening economy, the strengthening in the last 10 months of the anti-Sandinista rebels, known as Contras, and the influence of pragmatists in the Sandinista government have combined to convince leaders in Managua that they need an agreement with the United States.

"The Sandinistas know that if they are not flexible, the war will go on," Arias said in an interview after the agreement was signed. "The Nicaraguan economy is a mess, and they realize it's a mess."

Another factor that may have figured in the Sandinista thinking, analysts here suggest, was Managua's growing dependence on aid from the Soviet Union, which is engaged in delicate arms control negotiations with the United States and has indicated some reluctance to go on bankrolling Nicaragua at current high levels.

In signing the agreement, Ortega pledged his leftist government to democratic reforms including complete freedom of the press and political activities, repeal of a state of emergency and free elections monitored by international observers. Elections are to be held next year by all five countries for a Central American parliament, and local and presidential elections are to be held according to each country's existing timetable.

Ortega initially had ruled out internal "democratization" measures, arguing in a press conference before the summit opened that democracy was already in place in Nicaragua and that, in any case, such "internal" matters were not a proper subject for international talks.

The democratization provisions are to start taking effect in 90 days simultaneously with cease-fires in the region's wars, general amnesties, an end to military and certain other types of aid to insurgencies and prohibitions on the use of territory in one state to attack another.

In signing the agreement, the five presidents put aside a new Reagan administration peace plan that had initially thrown the meeting here into confusion and threatened to overshadow the Costa Rican plan under discussion.

According to Julio Adolfo Rey Prendes, El Salvador's communications minister, the Reagan proposal caused "indisputable worry" that the Arias plan would be shelved and that the Sandinistas might use this as a "pretext" to withdraw from the negotiations. The effect, he said, was to spur the Central American leaders to come to an agreement.

"There's no question that the Reagan plan added a sense of urgency to the summit," Goodfellow said. "It was like a sword of Damocles hanging over their head." The Center for International Policy is a nonprofit research organization affiliated with the Fund for Peace.

The signing has created "a certain momentum" that may carry the implementation of the agreement forward, Goodfellow said. "But there are dozens of subsequent agreements that have to be negotiated, and the process can break down at any point."

One of the more difficult negotiations is expected to be on a cease-fire between the Sandinistas and the Contras. The Contras say they now have 17,000 fighters inside Nicaragua battling the estimated 75,000-member Sandinista Popular Army.

Strength For Today

Why does a world presided over by an all-powerful and all-wise God contain so much trouble?

This question has always baffled even the most sincere believers. Some primitive African tribes explain this paradox by saying that although God is all-wise, He has a half-witted brother who continually causes divine plans to miscarry. This native legend has a grain of truth in it. God does not have a half-witted brother but He has a multitude of half-witted children who, because of their selfishness and perversity cause His perfect plans to come to naught.

But an alternative is always held out to us. "Eye hath not seen nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man the things which God has prepared for them that love Him."

Hearings Made Us All Insiders

— Thomas Collins —

A uniquely American institution has just closed its run, having provided the public with a diversion that was both informative and entertaining, humorous and frightening, transient and historical.

Whichever side we took, the Iran-Contra hearings made us angry, frustrated, baffled and intrigued, and their closing leaves a vague emptiness, the kind we felt as kids when the movie ended and the house lights went up.

Wasn't there more? Shouldn't there have been additional questions, more witnesses heard from?

But while the hearings lasted, we were participants in the governmental process, something we don't often get to be. We were made privy to the thought processes and motivations of those in power. Through television's good graces, we were insiders for a while.

And in the back of our minds, even though we could not be sure who was lying, or to what extent, was an undeniable truth: The whole thing was being done for our benefit. The very existence of the televised proceedings was proof that we counted and could not be ignored.

The committee and the witnesses may have been playing to us but that only confirmed our importance. Without us, and the status conferred on us by a way of life taken for granted, none of it would have existed. The collective verdict we finally come up with will determine the future of the country, and for that reason alone the hearings were an indispensable aid to the democratic system.

Between now and the presidential election next year, there will be organized attempts to influence, confuse and distract us from the raw information still being processed in our minds. Slogans, strategies and arguments will be devised and refined, and everybody will have answers for everything. But they will all be packaged, as it were, accompanied by music and balloons and the other trappings of propaganda. Television's phony side will take over.

The value of the hearings was their spontaneity, their unwrapped and essentially unrehearsed nature. The witnesses may have memorized their stories but no one could be sure what might pop out and what unexpected admissions might be made.

As, for example, when Lt. Col. Oliver North blurted out that investigators from the Department of Justice were in the next room as he went about destroying evidence, or when North's secretary, Fawn Hall, matter-of-factly summed up the essential administration position and the inherent conflict between the White House and the rest of the country: "Sometimes, you have to go above the written law."

That is why it is hard to countenance the argument put forth by some that the hearings were a waste of time and possibly detrimental to the nation. Where is the documented harm? What damage can flow from the exposure of a policy that has not already been brought about by the policy itself.

Some people think we've made fools of ourselves in the eyes of other countries by showing the secretive foolishness of our leaders. Which other countries? Panama, where some military fool has shut down the press? Great Britain, where Margaret Thatcher's government has foolishly banned the media from reporting on a book that is on sale in London stores?

In the beginning, there were complaints that the hearings were dull, then that the committees were not being tough enough in questioning witnesses. There was some truth in that. There is a politically motivated reluctance to bear down hard on high-ranking liars when the public mood is uncertain. Politicians do not take unnecessary risks.

Areas went unexplored. Did I miss something, or did no one ask North or Hall what specific information was in the piles of documents they labored to conceal and destroy? And what about the alleged Contra drug-running operation that broke into the hearing room courtesy of a pair of protesters?

By permitting the protesters to be hustled from the room by security police, the committee missed an opportunity to go an extra mile for democracy. What a gesture it would have been to interrupt the schedule and ask the protesters to quietly state their concerns and then to answer them properly and with dignity. It can be assumed that the protesters, too, were concerned Americans, and ought not to have been manhandled. But we can demand too much of our legislators.

For the moment, it is enough that they asked as many questions as they did and elicited as many admissions of wrongdoing and incompetence as they did, and afforded us the opportunity, with the help of the networks, to watch.

No other country would do that for its people — none. There are some in this country who, if they had their way, would not permit it. In part, that is what the hearings were all about, the right to continue to have such hearings, and to hold a president's feet to the fire when he has turned his back on the democratic process, with or without deniability. People will be writing about this summer for years to come.

Black Mineworkers Strike

By GREG MYRE
Associated Press Writer
JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The black mineworkers' union said today that 280,000 miners joined a strike that could cripple gold and coal industries, the principal source of South Africa's export earnings.

The National Union of Mineworkers called the strike, South Africa's largest legal walkout ever, to demand increased wages and benefits. Strike-related violence was reported at two mines, with at least seven miners injured.

"The stoppage is all over the country," said Marcel Golding, spokesman for the union, the nation's largest. "On the mines where union support is strong the stoppage is 100 percent and where the support is weaker large numbers have also taken part in the strike."

He said "at least 60,000" of the strikers were not union members, but had joined the walkout to show support.

Union officials were instructed to begin strike balloting today at 12 other mines that produce platinum, chrome, uranium and diamonds.

Roughly 80 percent of South Africa's exports are derived from mining. Gold alone provides more than half the country's foreign currency earnings.

The union claims 261,901 paid-up members and 370,000 signed up. It says members voted overwhelmingly to strike 28 gold and 18 coal mines, most of which are in the eastern Transvaal province and the central Orange Free State. The union also called for strikes at mines where it is not recognized officially.

The Chamber of Mines, which represents the nation's top six mining houses, says the union has only 170,000 members out of a black mining work force of 600,000 men.

Anglo American Corp., which produced 39 percent of South Africa's total gold output of 638.2 tons in 1986, said today all of its mines were affected by the strike.

A company spokesman said fighting broke out between strikers and those wishing to work. Six workers were injured, said the spokesman, who did not say where the fighting took place.

In another incident, security men at Anglovaal Ltd., which also does not recognize the mineworkers' union, fired rubber bullets Sunday night to disperse an "unruly mob" at its Lorraine Gold Mine in the Orange Free State. The company said one miner was treated for a leg wound.

Golding said union members had been holding a meeting at Lorraine when they were attacked by mine security.

The union said today that the only "tension point" was at Johannesburg Consolidated's Randfontein Estates gold mine, west of Johannesburg, where security personnel ordered miners at gunpoint to go to work.

The company denied the charge, but conceded that the mine's operations were not "normal."

Golding said the union knew of nine stewards at three gold mines who had been detained by police Sunday. Mine management confirmed eight of the detentions.

Mining industry officials gave no overall estimate of how many workers were on strike.

Meanwhile, Golding said miners were evacuating hostels on mine property and were being taken to their homes to avoid violence. Black mine workers live in hostels on mine property and seldom see their families.

There have been several previous walkouts by black workers larger than the current miners' strike, but they have been one- or two-day protests generally sparked by political demands and not related to contract negotiations.

Blacks do nearly all the underground work at mines, except blasting, while the industry's 26,000 white miners do supervisory and special jobs.

Inmates Seek Ways To Make Life Behind Bars Productive

By KAREN McGRATH
Associated Press Writer
NORFOLK, Mass. (AP) — Convicted murderer William Doucette spent years hanging around short-term inmates until he got it through his head that they would soon be getting out of prison and he would not.

To face the future and try to live productively, Doucette, who entered Massachusetts Correctional Institution at Norfolk in 1979, turned to other lifers for help.

Doucette joined Lifers Group Inc., started by inmates to help each other cope with the prospect of life behind bars. Its 200 members try to improve prison life, educate the public and work for charity.

The group runs a theater program at Norfolk, raises money for a children's hospital, builds and repairs toys for underprivileged youngsters and started a college program about prison life.

The key to surviving a life behind bars is to live it well, says William "Lefty" Gilday, who killed a police officer during a bank robbery.

"Most of my life, I haven't benefited society, and this is my way of giving back," Gilday said. "It's the way I do my time. I find it works."

"I hated the lifers once," said Doucette, 35, who attended a Lifers Group meeting at the urging of a friend and now is on its board of directors. "I didn't want to admit I was one of them."

Any lifer is eligible. Annual dues are $10.

Members started a runners' club that raises money for the Kennedy Memorial Hospital for Children in Brighton, and they renovated the prison's entry room and chapel.

Massachusetts law allows inmates to vote in political elections, so lifers have formed a committee that keeps up with legislation affecting inmates.

Lifers said they helped stop an attempt by some legislators to end a furlough program last year.

The program was threatened after a murderer out on furlough was charged with raping a woman, slashing her boyfriend and threatening four police officers, Doucette said.

Doucette said he wrote to lawmakers and corrections officials asking them not to punish other murderers in reaction.

Highway Accidents Claim Seven Lives

By The Associated Press

A teen-ager taking her first driving lesson was one of seven people killed in North Carolina traffic accidents during the weekend, the Highway Patrol said.

Kimberly Neal Pierce, 15, of Rt. 1, Shallotte, was killed and her driving instructor was severely burned when their car collided with another vehicle and both cars caught fire, the patrol said.

The driver of the other car, James Leo Johnson Jr., 38, of Shallotte, was also killed in the Saturday afternoon accident.

Jane Outlaw, the girl's driving instructor, received severe burns and bruises after the cars burst into flames on the side of the road, Trooper Roy Murray said.

"She was lucky to get out alive," Murray said. "Both cars were already destroyed even before they caught fire."

Ms. Outlaw, 21, of Route 3, Shallotte, was taken to The Brunswick Hospital and then flown by helicopter to the N.C. Memorial Hospital burn center in Chapel Hill, Murray said.

In other weekend accidents, Edwin Wayne Rushing, 27, of Rt. 2, Stanfield, died Saturday afternoon when the vehicle he was pushing up a hill on a rural road near Albemarle ran over him when he slipped and fell.

James Henry Hopkins, 72, of Louisburg, was killed on a rural road in Franklin County, about five miles east of Louisburg. He was lying in the roadway and struck by a car, troopers said.

Terry Kelbaugh, 27, of Rt. 1, Spring Hope, died Saturday night when his vehicle collided with another vehicle on N.C. 98 about 8 miles north of Raleigh. Two people were killed in unrelated single vehicle accidents, the patrol said.

Clifton Junior Moses, 22, of Shelby died early Sunday when his car ran off a rural road near Cherryville, crossed over the road again and struck a fence, the patrol said.

Kirk Frederick Russell, 32, of Pikeville died Sunday morning when his car ran off a road and overturned. He was thrown from the car, the patrol said.

The North Carolina highway death toll now stands at 860. Last year at this time, troopers said 998 people had died on state roads.

Tobacco Officials See Strong Demand

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Old Belt tobacco markets open for flue-cured tobacco sales Tuesday and market officials say they're optimistic that the drought won't dampen the prospects for higher prices than a year ago.

Prices on the Old Belt could be up as much as $10 per hundred pounds over last year, said Sam J. Young, the sales supervisor for the Winston-Salem market.

"We need some additional moisture," he said. "A good steady rain would really help."

Young said demand for tobacco from the major companies is expected to be strong, a help for farmers who suffered through a lackluster crop last year caused largely by the severe drought.

"We've seen that strong buying already and we expect that to continue in Winston," said Weldon Denney of the North Carolina Department of Agriculture.

Officials said their hopes for the market were buoyed by the higher prices and strong demand on the South Carolina-Border North Carolina and Eastern markets.

"The Old Belt has a very good crop," said T. Carlton Blalock, executive director of the North Carolina Tobacco Growers Association. "Until 10 days ago, it was an exceptional crop. But the continued hot, dry weather threatens it."

Bakker Scandal Said Stressful To Assemblies Denomination

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — The Assemblies of God says it is "under the stress of mockery" since the downfall of Jim Bakker and is calling on its 2.1 million members to enter a period of fasting, mourning and repentance.

"Mighty men from within our own ranks have fallen, and we must beware lest, being led away with the error of the wicked, we also fall from our steadfastness," the denomination said in a resolution adopted over the weekend.

The denomination's six-day convention concludes Tuesday. Sunday was given over to sermons deploring Bakker's downfall and drawing Biblical parallels from the sex scandal.

Bakker left his PTL empire in March after admitting an extramarital tryst with Jessica Hahn, a former church secretary. The denomination later expelled him and his TV colleague, Richard Dortch, from the clergy.

Bakker was ousted for adultery and alleged homosexuality, and Dortch for arranging payments of hush money payments to Ms. Hahn.

"The church and the ministry are under the stress of mockery by the media, saying, 'Where is their God?'" the denomination said in the resolution adopted Saturday.

The convention urged observances throughout the denomination in "a turning to the Lord with fasting, weeping and mourning, rending our hearts in true repentance."

Researchers Eye Acid Fog Link With Plant Woes

RALEIGH (AP) — Researchers studying acid rain's impact on the mysterious tree deaths plaguing the mile-high peaks of the Appalachian Mountains are turning their attention to another suspected killer: acid fog.

Robert I. Bruck, a plant pathologist at North Carolina State University, has color slides showing yellowing spruce and fir needles photographed in the beleaguered forests atop Mount Mitchell.

Bruck told The News and Observer of Raleigh that researchers watched and probed with sensitive instruments while the tender young needles turned from green to yellow in only 48 hours after exposure to an acid fog. Electron microscope studies showed that the acid apparently had eaten into the tough waxy coating that protects the plant tissues.

Acid fog is an especially acidic variety of acid rain, the common term used to describe acid chemicals in air pollution that reach the ground in precipitation. Scientists use the term acid deposition.

The fog that bathed the needles on Mount Mitchell was as acidic as lemon juice. And Bruck speculated that its acids may have become even more concentrated on the needle surfaces.

However, Bruck said his acid fog observations weren't enough evidence.

To get a thorough demonstration of causes and effects, he will have to go back to the lab, where, unlike in the chaotic natural world, conditions can be rigidly controlled.

"The only way we can do science is by experimentally testing a hypothesis and coming up with an answer that either supports or refutes the hypothesis," he said. "And it must be repeatable. That is the proverbial proof."

Evidence is accumulating that acid rain can kill fish in pristine lakes and streams. But scientists are having a tougher time with effects on plants.

"Acid rain is a difficult thing to work with," said Denis T. duBay, a botanist who is doing simulated acid rain experiments at an NCSU research farm off Lake Wheeler Road near Raleigh.

DuBay's observations are echoed by the 1986 report of the National Acid Precipitation Assessment Program, which is intended to track acid rain studies in the Triangle area and at other U.S. research centers.

For example, scientists in Illinois and New York have studied eight different crops — corn, soybeans, hay, wheat, tobacco, potato, oats and snap beans — that were grown in fields but received artificial doses of acid rain.

"There was no convincing evidence," the report said, that any suffered significant yield losses at acid levels that have been measured in real rain.

But acid rain's impact on plants isn't obvious, and it may be camouflaged by a variety of unrelated effects that occur in nature.

One part of a field, for instance, may be worse than another because the seeds sown there were of inferior quality, the soil was richer or young plants were burned by fertilizer or pesticides.

While the situation on Mount Mitchell is alarming, there are few similar catastrophes in the nation's woodlands. But there are signs that various types of trees, in various forests around the nation, aren't growing as rapidly as they once did.

What is clear is that precipitation falling over much of the United States is more acidic now than it would be naturally. Environmentalists and many scientists blame pollution from coal-burning power stations as a major cause.

Plant scientists, attempting to gauge impacts on crops and trees, often are dealing with subtle effects rather than obvious injuries.

All but one group received hourlong showers of water at various levels of acidity. About half the plants got their artificial acid rain before pollination, and the rest after. Their cobs were then allowed to mature.

He found that corn kernel counts dropped when plants received their acid rain showers after pollination. And the more acidic the rain, the fewer the number of kernels on mature cobs.

But simulated unpolluted rainfall, which is itself slightly acidic, also caused some drop in the kernel count. And there were no significant kernel reductions in plants that received their acid rain showers before pollination.

Scientists suspect that acid rain alone may not account for the spruce and fir deaths in the acid fogs atop Mount Mitchell.

The Pentecostal denomination also called on its members to "walk worthy of our calling as spirit-filled believers commissioned to be examples in word, in manner of life, in love, in spirit, in faith and in purity."

Another of the denomination's TV evangelists, Jimmy Swaggart, who had pressed charges against Bakker with church officials, alluded to the case Sunday, saying entertainment and preaching don't mix. Bakker's "PTL Club" program was strong on entertainment.

"It doesn't work that way," Swaggart said in a rousing sermon at the city's huge Crossroads Cathedral, stirring the 8,000 people inside into bursts of exclamations, clapping and glossolalia, or speaking in unknown tongues.

Swaggart said that like the biblical Joshua's spies, who were pursued when sent to scout out wicked Jericho, he himself had been pursued by the news media "out to cut your heads off."

The church's spiritual life committee said in a report that biblical warnings echo in the "recent scandal — that charisma without Christ's character leads to catastrophe."

Rejecting any implication "that sinful lifestyles may be indefinitely continued without being radically dealt with and changed," the report said:

"God's people must be holy — not the 'holiness' of a self-righteous hypocrite, but the 'holiness' of a wholly righteous, compassionate and caring Christ."

The convention also declared its outrage at "encroachments of pornographic materials and establishments in America" that exert "insidious consequences" on values, morality and family life.

Wedding Vows Said Saturday

Patricia Denise Partin and Christopher Allen Stox, both of Greenville, were married Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock in Grace Free Will Baptist Church. The Rev. Ed Walker performed the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Carol Partin of Greenville and Terry Partin of New Bern. Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Allen Stox of Greenville are parents of the bridegroom.

Charles Lewis Jr. was organist for the ceremony. Susan and Jon Forlines sang "Nobody Loves Me Like You Do," "One Hand, One Heart" and "The Wedding Prayer."

Barbara Galloway of Greenville was matron of honor for her sister. Bridesmaids were Kathi Caroon of Winston-Salem, Maricruz Blanco, Valerie Moore and Vonda Stokes, all of Greenville, and Gina Geint of New Bern. Jacqueline Manning of Huntington, W.Va., was junior bridesmaid and Ashley Dunn of Ayden was flower girl.

Honorary bridesmaids were Melinda Hudson and Sheryl Peaden of Greenville, cousins of the bridegroom.

Peggy Peaden, aunt of the bridegroom, directed the wedding.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. The ring bearer was Worth Lewis of Greenville. Ushers were Troy Stox, brother of the bridegroom, Troy Hudson, Mike Maloney, and Parrish Leonard, all of Greenville, and Doug Partin of Bayboro. Timothy Stox of Greenville, brother of the bridegroom, was junior usher.

The bride wore a formal gown of candlelight organza over candlelight peau de soie designed with a high neckline. The bodice was enhanced by a sheer insert yoke of organza from which extended silk Venise lace to embellish the front. The modified A-line skirt and attached chapel-length train were bordered at the hemline with miniature Venise lace. Appliques of floral lace were scattered over the skirt and bishop sleeves. She wore a walking-length veil of illusion with rolled edging attached to a Camelot cap overlaid in matching silk Venise lace beaded with pearls. The bride carried a cascade bouquet of sonya roses, candlelight stephanotis and freesia.

The matron of honor wore a tea-length dress of peach satin styled with a lace overlay accented by a V-cut back and candy box bow. She carried an arm bouquet of miniature peach roses and baby's breath.

Each of the attendants was dressed identically. The flower girl wore a peach satin dress accented by candlelight ruffles of lace in back.

The mother of the bride wore a street-length dress of aqua silk with a V-shaped front hemline. The mother of the bridegroom wore a tea-length dress of blue silk with a white lace overlay.

The bride is a student at Pitt Community College and the bridegroom graduated from D.H. Conley High School.

After a wedding trip to Myrtle Beach, S.C., the couple will live in Greenville.

A reception was held in the church fellowship hall. Guests were greeted by Sammy and Carol Pugh and Jon and Susan Forlines. Cake was served by Judy Lewis and punch was poured by Orpha Evans.

The couple left the church in a horse and buggy.

An after-rehearsal pig picking was given by the bridegroom's parents and the bride's grandmother gave a bridesmaids luncheon at Annabelle's. Several showers and parties honored the couple prior to the wedding.

Researcher Says Sunlight Can Help Improve Mood

By DAVID SEDENO
Associated Press Writer

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Thousands of people will flock to the beaches this summer, and while dermatologists warn against the sun's damaging rays, a researcher here says the sun's good for you.

Dr. Russel J. Reiter, professor of neuroendocrinology at the University of Texas Health Science Center, says exposure to the sun is good for everyone.

"Sunlight is very good for us, but we have misused it. Dermatologists are opposed to sunbathing, but it's the American way. It's something we're going to do," he says.

Reiter is an internationally known expert on the pineal gland, which produces the hormone melatonin in the brain. The hormone is formed mostly during darkness, and too much of it can lead to depression, Reiter says.

The answer, he suggests, is more exposure to sunlight or, in the workplace, better and more abundant lighting.

"Certainly sunlight justifiably has gotten a bad rap in terms of its effects on skin cancer," Reiter says. "Positively, however, sunlight generally seems to improve mood, sexual performance, possibly, and general attitudes."

More than 500,000 people each year are diagnosed as having skin cancer and about 7,800 die annually from the disease, according to the American Cancer Society.

Reiter says, however, that people can reap the benefits of the sun without being exposed to it.

"You can wear a long-sleeve shirt. You can wear a hat and keep it off your face, go for a noon walk and get its physiological effects," he says.

In the workplace, more lighting can combat the depressive problem and should help increase productivity, he says.

Most offices and recreation facilities now use cool, white fluorescent bulbs, but Reiter predicts that within 20 years light bulbs giving off sunlight-like illumination will be more common.

"Studies are being done to show that individuals who have windows to the outside in their offices seem to make fewer mistakes. They seem to perform better," he says.

"Light can be used as a drug in various types of depression. What is more convenient and what is more non-invasive than light? You don't have to take anything internally," he adds.

Reiter says dairy cattle in the North were the subject of one study on pineal glands and productivity. Generally, milk production decreases during the winter months, but when lights in the barn were turned on at night, the cows produced more milk, the study showed.

Biologists once thought the pineal gland was an inoperative organ, according to Reiter. Through tests on animals and humans during the past 20 years, however, researchers have come to realize the gland's importance.

The pineal gland is connected to the eyes and the sunlight it receives inhibits the production of melatonin, the professor says.

During winter months when the skies are gray some people are afflicted with "seasonal affective disorder," a depressive, lethargic condition caused by too much melatonin, Reiter says.

"There are people in this world who take light and darkness for granted. It's not innocuous. It impacts all aspects of our life."

Reiter has written six books and edited 22 others on the pineal gland since he began researching it in 1964. He said about 500 scientists now are studying the gland.

"Too much time in subdued lighting is just not conducive to our well-being," Reiter says. "We are just beginning to learn why we feel bad."

Abby Offers An Apology

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Forgive me if I do a little nit-picking. Enclosed is a clipping from your column in which you wrote: "I think he is a troubled man and his behavior should be reported to whomever is his superior."

Abby, "whomever" is not the object of the preposition "to"; the whole clause is. Thus, the sentence should read: "I think he is a troubled man and his behavior should be reported to WHOEVER is his superior," "whoever" being the subject of the verb "is."

I usually don't find myself perturbed enough to write letters about misuse of English appearing in the newspapers. However, I'm sure many readers would say, "If Dear Abby wrote it that way, it must be correct." — CMS, PORT ORANGE, FLA.

P.S. This clip is from the Daytona Beach News-Journal. Maybe the typesetter took it upon him/herself to do a little editing?

DEAR CMS: I cannot blame the typesetter. (Typesetters do not edit.) So ingrained in my mind is the "to whom," I automatically trusted my ear and used the "to" with "whomever," ignoring the fact that the whole clause was the object of the preposition "to." So, mea culpa to all you English language purists whom I offended.

DEAR ABBY: "Doug" and I are very much in love. He's 38. I'm 29, and four months pregnant. Doug would marry me in a minute, but he's already married to "Jan." They've been talking about a divorce for over a year, but haven't filed yet. Doug and Jan have two kids. They still live together because it's cheaper and more convenient. Meanwhile, Jan is dating up a storm.

Yesterday, she told Doug that she is pregnant and he's the father. Doug says there is no way in God's world that the baby is his because he hasn't laid a hand on her in a year. He says he's willing to take any kind of test to prove that he is not the baby's father, but in order to find out who the baby's father is, they will have to test half the men in San Diego.

I need to know if Doug is going to get stuck with a kid that isn't his. It's not fair. But how can he get out of it? Jan will lie in court if she has to. — IN A MESS IN SAN DIEGO

DEAR IN: You and Doug are overdue for a long talk — or better yet, a three-way conversation including Jan. (Does Doug really want to leave her? Or is he content with an open marriage in this frightening age of AIDS?)

A woman's husband is presumed to be the legal father of her child, but if Doug has any doubts about it (in Jan's case) he should see a lawyer. As I see it, unless Doug stands by his moral obligation to you, you are in a bigger mess than his wife. Good luck. You will need it.

DEAR ABBY: My only child passed away recently at a very young age. Amid all the pain, this one question nags at me. Am I still a mother? — WONDERING IN LYNN, MASS.

DEAR WONDERING: Of course you are. Once a mother, always a mother. You are the mother of a little angel.

(Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.)

Couple Weds In Kinston In July

KINSTON — Teresa Renee Greene and the Rev. David Lee Godley were united in marriage in the United American Free Will Baptist Tabernacle on July 25 at 2 p.m. Elder Isaac Burnett Jr., pastor of the bride, officiated at the double ring ceremony.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Bradley of Goldsboro are parents of the bride. The bridegroom is the son of Minnie L. Godley of Winterville and the late Richard Godley.

The couple is living in Goldsboro after a wedding trip to the Bahamas.

The bride is a graduate of Eastern Wayne Senior High School and attended Wayne Community College. She is serving in the U.S. Air Force, stationed at Seymour Johnson AFB. The bridegroom is a graduate of D.H. Conley High School and is employed by Morgan Printing Co. in Greenville.

Personals

Rosalie R. Andrews of Robersonville and son, Louis Wilson Andrews of Philadelphia, Pa. have returned home after a trip to China. Mrs. Andrews is a retired Pitt County school teacher.

Mrs. William A. Cherry of Robersonville recently spent a few days in Boston visiting her sister-in-law, Jaymie O.T. Hensley and family, due to the death of her husband, Ralph T. Hensley.

Sows: (500 pounds up) Fayetteville 48.00; Rowland 48.00; Spivey's Corner 49.00; Rowland 49.00.

BROILERS: The North Carolina fob dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 45.50 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2½ to 3 pounds birds. 98 percent of the loads offered have been confirmed with a final weighted average of 49.34 cents. The market is firm and the live supply is adequate for a good demand. Average weights desirable to light. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Monday was 1,966,000, compared to 1,960,000 last Monday.

GRAIN: No. 2 yellow shelled corn 1 to 3 cents lower at mostly 1.59-1.74 in East and mostly 1.78-1.89 in the Piedmont; No. 1 yellow soybeans 5 cents lower to 5 cents higher at mostly 5.06-5.21 in East and mostly 5.10-5.15 in the Piedmont; wheat 2.28-2.41; new crop corn 1.32-1.74; new crop soybeans 4.56-4.98. Exchange rates for P.I.K. certificates were steady to ½ percent higher and ranged from 101 to 108½ percent of face value.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market moved broadly higher in early trading today.

At 10 a.m., the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks stood at 2,603.79, up 11.79 from Friday.

Advancers outnumbered decliners by nearly 2-to-1 among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 800 stocks higher, 383 lower and 473 unchanged.

Big Board volume totaled 23.6 million shares.

As the week's trading opened, Wall Streeters could find plenty of reasons to expect the market to rise — or fall.

Stocks took a dive on Monday and Tuesday last week, turning downward amid worries over escalating Persian Gulf tensions. That followed a stunning 86.7-point climb in the Dow Jones industrials during the previous five days.

But analysts said the market rebounded after deciding to put those concerns aside. That confidence apparently remained today, in the wake of new reports of Iraqi bombing of Iran.

On Friday, the Dow Jones industrial average flirted with the 2,600 level but ended 2.23 points lower to 2,592.00, giving the indicator a gain of 19.93 points for the week.

Wall Street watchers say the market's failure to break through that level could indicate a period of weakness — or that it is taking a rest before continuing moving upward.

As of 10 a.m., the New York Stock Exchange composite index of all its listed stocks stood at 181.58, up 0.71.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index stood at 362.69, up 1.63.

Friday's volume on the NYSE totaled 212.66 million shares, compared with 191.95 million the previous session.

Father Ending Search For Son

COMFORT, Texas (AP) — For three weeks John Bankston Sr. prayed as he and thousands of volunteers searched for his son's body along the Guadalupe River, and he sobbed when he finally admitted there was no point in going on.

"It's time to go home. But it breaks our heart to have to leave him," Bankston said Sunday.

John Bankston Jr., 17, was one of 43 people aboard two vehicles from the Seagoville Road Baptist Church in Balch Springs who were caught in the Guadalupe River on July 17 during its worst flood in 55 years. He was last seen helping others to safety.

Ten teen-agers were swept away by the rampaging river. The bodies of nine were recovered, and 33 people were rescued.

Bankston Sr., who is from Dallas, hunted for his son for three weeks, enlisting the aid of the volunteers and of six bulldozers and backhoes from the state. He persisted after the official search was suspended on July 25.

"It's hard for us to stop," Bankston said. "I think if John could say, you know, tell us, I think that ... he'd say, 'Dad, you gave it your best shot.'"

Authorities said the body could be under several feet of silt and debris anywhere along several miles of the river, and Bankston praised volunteer searchers who endured mosquitoes, snakes and scratches.

"I think that they felt the same way that my wife and I do, that if it had been their child out there that I feel they would have done the same thing. Children are the most precious gift that God can give us."

His wife, Rose, agreed.

"Something like this tears up the soul of a person," she said.

"The hardest thing for me is to come to the river. I have nightmares," she said last week. "I see all the children in the water."

At first, Mrs. Bankston thought her son might have survived the turbulent water, but that was before she saw the devastation it wreaked.

"His grave site looks so empty. Everything is so unfinished. It just seems like everything's standing still until we find him," she said.

Allen
WILMINGTON — William Simpson Allen, 64, died at New Hanover Memorial Hospital in Wilmington Sunday.

His funeral will be conducted at 1 p.m. Tuesday in the chapel of Andrews Mortuary by the Revs. Francis Daniels and John Brick.

Tanker Strikes Mine

All the shipping sources spoke on the condition of not being identified.

Sadler said two escort vessels, the guided missile cruiser Reeves and the missile frigate Crommelin, were with the tankers, but two others, the missile frigate Jarrett and missile destroyer Kidd, had moved toward Bahrain.

Shipping sources, quoting radio monitors, said earlier that the convoy got under way again about daybreak today and was "moving smoothly." Later these sources said they were not certain of the situation.

The overnight anchorage was in keeping with the Navy's decision to guide the tankers through the most hazardous parts of the 550-mile voyage during daylight, when helicopters and ships can scout ahead for mines or other signs of trouble.

"They detected Iranian military activity between Farsi Island and where they were," said one source.

Mines were encountered off Bahrain on previous occasions. Two children were killed this year while examining a mine that washed up on a beach.

Farsi, a tiny island in the northern gulf, has been used in the past by Iran to launch speedboat-borne commando attacks on ships.

On July 24, one of two reflagged Kuwaiti tankers being escorted near the island was damaged by a mine. Pentagon sources in Washington said Iran planted the explosive that blew a hole in the hull of the supertanker Bridgeton.

Shipping sources said the present convoy does not need to use deepwater channels and would steer well clear of Farsi Island.

On Sunday night, the convoy turned out most of its lights as it traveled single-file through the gulf.

The convoy was the second to travel up the gulf under a U.S. agreement to re-register 11 Kuwaiti tankers to afford them military protection.

Iran accuses Kuwait of supporting Iraq, its foe in the 7-year-old gulf war. Each nation has attacked ships involved in commerce with the other.

The convoy's biggest tanker, the 81,283-ton Sea Isle City, has been leading the procession, evidently as a bulwark against floating mines, observers said.

The reflagged vessels are the Sea Isle City, an oil products carrier, the 79,999-ton Ocean City, another oil products carrier and the 46,732-ton Gas King, a liquefied gas tanker.

Iraqi warplanes today raided Iranian oil installations in northern and southwestern areas in the first bombing of Iran's heartland in at least two months.

The raids threatened to escalate the Iran-Iraq conflict. Tehran has threatened retaliation if Iraq resumes its bombing campaign against Iranian installations. Fighting in recent weeks has been restricted to border clashes.

Walsh Investigates

Walsh said he is "looking for cooperation with Congress to eliminate potential challenges to the constitutionality" of the law that created the independent counsel.

Walsh said he will seek indictments if his investigation establishes probable cause to believe that crimes have been committed.

"Only in this way can the rule of law be upheld. Otherwise it is frustrated," Walsh said. "I can assure you that the investigation will be pursued vigorously but fairly."

Walsh said that the congressional Iran-Contra hearings posed "the most serious external threat to the outcome of our investigation" because key figures were granted limited immunity from prosecution.

North and former national security adviser John Poindexter, who also has said he is a target of Walsh's investigation, received limited immunity.

Testimony from the hearings, or leads developed from the testimony, may not be used to prosecute those granted such immunity. Walsh and all but a few members of his staff are shunning newspapers and television to assure that their evidence is obtained independently.

"We keep a wall between those who are exposed (to the testimony) and those who are not," he said. "de said that a lawyer who watched the hearings is stationed in Richmond, Va., and that when Walsh or his staff confer with that lawyer, 'he listens, he doesn't talk.'"

Walsh said he is confident "the rigorous insulation procedures employed in this case will be upheld by the courts."

He said his investigators have interviewed more than 1,000 witnesses and reviewed hundreds of thousands of documents, while the grand jury handling the case has met two or three days a week since Jan. 28.

In his speech, Walsh quoted from the Bible, the Constitution and U.S. historical figures in a stern lecture on the importance of truth in government.

"To the extent that the facts are withheld or distorted, our system of democracy cannot work," he said. "To the extent that concealment and deception play any part in the relationship between the three branches of government, the rule of law and our constitutional structure of government are alike subverted."

Sri Lanka Frees 667 Tamils Under New Peace Accord

By DEXTER CRUEZ
Associated Press Writer
GALLE, Sri Lanka (AP) — Sri Lanka today released 667 more Tamil prisoners under a peace accord to end ethnic strife and some said they were tortured and abused by security forces.

Associated Press reporters witnessed the departure of 667 Tamils from Galle port in southernmost Sri Lanka after their release from Boosa Prison a few miles away. The Tamils had been held as suspected terrorists.

Indian naval ships took them to their homes in the east and north of Sri Lanka.

The government says it has up to 5,000 Tamil prisoners, most of them held without trial for more than one year. On Saturday, the government released 291 from Boosa, raising the total of those released to 958.

"Our fingerprints were pulled out and we were beaten with pipes and barbed wire," Kandaswamy Thavarajah, 27, from northern Mannar town, told the AP today.

He claimed that nine Tamils were beaten to death by soldiers just outside detention camps in June, when the Tamils went to help three friends who purportedly were shot by soldiers because the prisoners were late for meals.

The releases are expected to be completed by Aug. 18, deadline for weapons surrender by Tamil militants and opening date for Parliament. Tamils in the north and east declared a strike Sunday to protest alleged torture by security forces, delaying the rebel arms surrender.

The government denied its forces were behind the deaths.

"Parliament will consider approval of the peace accord signed July 29 by President Junius R.

Jayewardene and Indian Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi.

The accord was aimed at ending the 4-year-old ethnic war between Tamil separatists and the Sinhalese majority, with India guaranteeing that provisions of the agreement would be carried out.

Protests are expected against parliamentary approval since many Sinhalese oppose the peace pact, saying it dismembers their small island nation, gives Tamils autonomy and too many concessions.

The mostly Hindu Tamils comprise 18 percent of Sri Lanka's 16 million population. The Tamils claim they are discriminated against by the majority Buddhist Sinhalese.

The government has refused to release all prisoners held throughout the country, especially hardcore terrorists, until Tamil secessionist rebels surrender all their arms.

One released Tamil, Nalathami Selvarajah, 37, father of three, said he was arrested and held at Boosa army detention camps for 20 months under sweeping anti-terrorism laws after a landmine explosion killed 10 soldiers in northern Vavuniya city.

"I don't even know if my family is alive," he said.

He said that another Tamil suspect was fatally beaten in jail.

Your Social Security Disability Benefits

BENEFITS DENIED?
Have you been denied benefits under Social Security's disability benefits programs? Do not be discouraged. That happens to most people who apply the first time.

Have you asked for reconsideration of your disability claim and been turned down a second time? Again, don't be discouraged or give up. That's the way the disability system works today.

Take your case one step further and go before a Social Security Administrative Law Judge for a hearing with a qualified representative to present your case. Then the chances of your winning benefits are somewhere between 70% and 80%. The Judge will see you and hear your personal description of your physical or mental illness, and your representative will present your case as it applies to the complex rules of the Social Security Act.

If you have a hearing requested or scheduled before an Administrative Law Judge, call now for an immediate conference. There is no fee for an initial case. Then the chances of your winning benefits are somewhere between 70% and 80%. The Judge will see you and hear your personal description

Hamlet Tops Pitt
For Eastern Title

HAMLET — Hamlet, led by the hitting of Tommy Lill, swept two games from Pitt County over the weekend to wrap up the best of seven American Legion Eastern baseball championship and advance to the state finals.

Hamlet overpowered Pitt, 22-5, Saturday night and then came back to take a 5-3 win Sunday to capture the best-of-seven series, 4-1.

Lill went 7-7 in the two games, leading his teammates to a two-game total of 28 hits.

Hamlet took control early in Saturday night's game, scoring seven runs in the seventh, six in the fifth and four more in the sixth.

Three of the seven runs in the third came on Pitt County errors. Corey Short and Bobby Hunt also had RBI singles while Alvin Moorman had a sacrifice fly and Roger Hailey drove in another run on a ground out.

Hailey took the win for Hamlet, giving up three infield singles through seven innings. He left the game with a 19-0 lead.

Pitt got on the board in the eighth when Eric Jarman had RBI double that scored Jason Galloway. In the ninth, Pitt scored four more runs as Shane Adams smacked a three-run homer to score Hunter Clark and Stewart Vines. Pitt's final run came when Galloway doubled and scored on Jarman's ground out.

Short had a two-run homer in the fifth. Hailey had a three-run homer in the sixth for Hamlet. Lill led Hamlet with a 3-3 performance with two doubles.

For Pitt, Adams was 2-5 with a home run while Galloway was 2-5.

Hamlet went through four Pitt pitchers. Tim Clark started the game but was replaced by Robbie McDonald in the fifth. Ty Little came on in the seventh and Shane Adams pitched the eighth.

Sunday, Pitt went ahead first, pushing across a run in the top of the first to take a 1-0 lead.

Adams led off with a single, stole second and third and scored on a single by David Daniels.

Hamlet came back to take the lead in the third with two runs. Bobby Hunt got things started when he singled with one out. Lill followed with a single before Short singled in Hunt. Short then stole second and an error on the play allowed Lill to score.

Hamlet stretched the lead to 4-1 in the fifth with two runs in the fifth. With two outs, Lill singled. Short followed with a triple to score Lill. Moorman then doubled to score Short.

Pitt came back in the eighth when Galloway reached on a walk. Jarman followed with a single. Daniels then reached on a fielder's choice that put out Jarman but allowed Galloway to score. Axel Smith then doubled to left to score Daniels.

Hamlet added another run in the seventh when Lill singled, went to third on an error and scored on Short's ground out.

Hunt retired the last five batters he faced to quell any Pitt comeback.

Lill went 4-4 to lead Hamlet. Short added two hits. Daniels went 2-4 with two RBI to lead Pitt.

Patrick took the loss for Pitt, giving up net 11 hits and five runs, only three of which were earned.

Pitt winds up the season with a 23-13 record.

Pitt's last trip to the Eastern finals ended the exact same way as Hamlet took a 4-1 series win, sweeping the last three games in Hamlet. Hamlet advances to play the winner of the Haw River-Stanley series, which Haw River leads 3-2.

Kernersville Wins

Kernersville took a 3-1 win over Fort Bragg Sunday in the finals of the state Little League tournament to advance to the South Regionals in St. Petersburg, Florida.

Fort Bragg took an early 1-0 lead when Sean Gardner knocked a solo home run in the first inning but didn't put another man on base until the fourth inning.

Meanwhile, Kernersville pushed across two runs in the top of the fourth to take the lead.

Bruce Berry got things started with a single. Brooks Emerson followed with a reach on an error. Berry moved up and scored on consecutive wild pitches. Emerson scored on an error.

Fort Bragg loaded the bases in the bottom of the fourth with no outs but a fielder's choice, a strikeout and a ground out ended the threat.

Kernersville followed that up by adding its final run in the fifth when Brad Roberts singled, moved up on a base hit by Kirby Keene and scored from second on an error.

Greg Payne struck out seven while allowing two hits over six innings.

Fort Bragg advanced to the finals through the loser's bracket and needed to win Sunday to force a final game Monday.

Roberts' three hits led Kernersville.

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — American athletes reaped an early harvest of gold medals on the first day of competition in the Pan American Games, while U.S. basketball and baseball teams won their openers and Jamaica's Raymond Stewart ran the third fastest 100 meters ever.

Off the field the action was just as intense. Cuban officials protested what they saw as efforts to get their athletes to defect and Cuban-Americans traded punches with members of the Cuban delegation after a baseball game between Cuba and the Netherlands Antilles.

Mainly, though, it was finally the athletes' turn in the spotlight Sunday as the 10th Pan Am Games opened with the host American team picking up 17 gold medals out of the 36 contested.

Cuba used a sweep of all six weightlifting events to win eight gold medals and held second place in the total medal count with 20, 15 behind the U.S. team. Canada was third with 18 medals, but won only one gold.

Most of the American wins came in the water, as U.S. athletes took 10 of the 12 canoe-kayak events and captured five gold medals in swimming and diving. The Americans were led by Kelly McCormick of Columbus, Ohio, who won her second straight Pan Am title in the 3-meter springboard event.

The heavily favored U.S. basketball team overcame a ragged start to win its opener over Panama, 91-63. The U.S. baseball team also won, coming back from a 4-0 deficit to top Canada, 10-6.

Jamaica's Stewart turned in perhaps the most spectacular performance of the day, running the 100 meters semifinal in 9.89 seconds. Stewart's run was under Calvin Smith's world record of 9.93, but was wind-aided and will not be recognized.

"I didn't know I was running that fast," said Stewart, who will be entering his senior year at Texas Christian. "My main objective was just to try and qualify for the final."

Silvia Poll, a 16-year-old Costa Rican, also struck a blow for the smaller countries, beating two Americans in the 100-meter freestyle swimming finals to win her country's first ever Pan Am gold medal. She also swam on the relay team that finished second to the United States in the 800 meters.

"It was a lot of pressure on me. Everyone (in Costa Rica) was watching," said Poll. "I know they're all going crazy over there."

BASKETBALL

Danny Manning scored 18 points, including the first six of the second half, as the United States shook off a sloppy start for a 91-63 victory over Panama Sunday in the basketball opener at the Pan American Games.

The United States had trouble keeping the Panamanian team, with seven players from Briar Cliff College in Iowa, off the offensive boards.

Panama managed 12 offensive rebounds in the first half as it out-rebounded the American team 20-17 in the opening 20 minutes.

The United States led 44-33 at halftime thanks to an 8-0 run which turned a 28-27 deficit into a 35-28 lead with 3:24 to play. David Robinson, the 7-foot-1 center from Navy, scored four of the points in the run and Kentucky guard Rex Chapman added a 3-point field goal.

Manning, a 6-11 forward from Kansas, started the U.S. run in the second half with a short jumper, a rebound basket and a layup on a pass from Chapman. The closest Panama could get was 16 points, 75-59, with 3:46 left.

Ricky Berry of San Jose State added 16 points for the United States, while Robinson, Keith Smart of Indiana, and pervis Ellison of Louisville each had 11. Chapman finished with 10, all in the first half.

Mario Butler led Panama with 15 points while Rolando Frazer added 10.

The victory was the 29th in a row in Pan Am competition for the United States, which has won eight of the nine gold medals.

In other men's basketball games Sunday, Uruguay faced Canada, Mexico met Venezuela and Puerto Rico played the U.S. Virgin Islands.

Women's competition gets under way Tuesday. The U.S. women's team plays its first game Wednesday night against Peru.

Two players on the U.S. team were injured in the first half and did not return Sunday.

BASEBALL

Canada built an early 4-0 lead over the U.S. team, but the Americans rallied, helped by three Canadian errors and four wild pitches. A four-run seventh inning gave the American team an 8-6 lead.

"My club battled," Coach Ron Fraser said. "I'm proud they came back from an ugly beginning."

TRACK AND FIELD

Stewart was the big story at Indiana University Track Stadium. His time in the 100 meters was behind only those of Americans William Snoddy in 1978 (9.87) and James Sanford in 1980 (9.88), both wind-aided.

Stewart's run moved him into tonight's finals, but American Mark Witherspoon apparently won't join him there. Witherspoon, the U.S. champion, finished second at 9.91 but pulled a hamstring in leaning for the finish and will most likely miss the final.

"I felt something in my leg go," said a tearful Witherspoon, who equaled the fifth best time ever. "I started to lean to try and ease the pressure. I felt it before the lean, then I lost my balance."

SWIMMING AND DIVING

Although outscored on six of 10 dives by Megan Neyer of Boca Raton, Fla., McCormick clinched the gold when Neyer botched her ninth dive. McCormick, the silver medalist at the 1984 Olympics, set a Pan Am record of 562.77 points, breaking her own record of 500.37.

McCormick trailed Neyer by 1.32 points after eight dives. But Neyer, a former world springboard champion, got only 45 points for a reverse 2½-somersault, and McCormick took the lead for good with 67.50 points for the same dive.

While Poll beat two Americans in the finals after setting a Pan Am record of 56.10 in the 100-meter freestyle trials, four other races went to the United States.

Richard Korhammer of Haverford, Pa., won the men's 100-breaststroke in 1:03:85. Tami Bruce of San Diego, the NCAA 1,650-yard freestyle champion, had a personal best of 4:49:34 in the women's 400-medley. John Wittchell of New York won the men's 200-freestyle at 1:50:90.

CYCLING

Rebecca Twigg-Whitehead of Seattle won the first woman's cycling medal in Pan Am Games history, breaking away from the field at the start and taking the 57-kilometer individual road race by 3:23 over teammate Inga Benedict. Twigg-Whitehead, a 1984 Olympic silver medalist in the event, Benedict, of Reno, Nev., and Kathrin Tobin of Ketchum, Idaho, finished 1-2-3. But a pre-race decision that no country could sweep the medals meant Tobin did not get the bronze, which went to fourth-place finisher Sara Louise Neil of Canada.

Defending champion Rosendo Ramos of Mexico won his second straight men's individual road race.

SOFTBALL

TEAM SPORTS

The U.S. men's team handball squad beat Canada 31-23 in a game that saw Jim Buehning of Short Hills, N.J., ejected when he decked Canada's Rudy Etienne with a slap. Peter Lash of Charlottesville, Va., scored 10 goals for the United States.

The American men's field hockey team blanked Bermuda 3-0. The men's softball team also won 3-0 over the British Virgin Islands as Mike Combs of Tulsa, Okla., pitched a one-hitter and struck out 14.

Ted Hantak of St. Louis scored twice as the U.S. soccer team beat Trinidad & Tobago 3-1.

Nelson Wins PGA Title
To Silence His Critics

PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. (AP) — Larry Nelson desperately wanted one more major championship before he ended a late-starting golf career.

He also wanted to finally silence the critics who claimed two major crowns weren't enough to earn him a spot among the game's elite.

The quiet little man from Georgia solved both problems Sunday, knocking in a six-foot par putt on the first hole of a sudden-death playoff with Lanny Wadkins to win the 69th PGA Championship.

Both players finished at 1-under-par 287 on the 7,002-yard Champions course of the PGA National Golf Club. Nelson closed with a 72, Wadkins with a 73.

"This really is a big confidence booster to me," Nelson said.

"This is the most important one," he added. "You never know when your last victory will be."

Nelson, who will be 40 next month, won his first major in the 1981 PGA and came back two years later to capture the U.S. Open.

"After the '83 Open I decided not to be concerned about what anybody thought of my career," Nelson said.

He said he began thinking about doing other things at that time, got into several businesses and saw his golf game deteriorate.

"It's been all downhill since then," he said of his game. "This year I wanted to come back and play golf. I was going to play until I won again."

Although his goal was attained in the sweltering, record-setting 97-degree weather Sunday, Nelson said he was ready to play some more.

He earned a five-year exemption to the Masters and a 10-year exemption on the PGA Tour.

"I'm not going to quit," he said. "If I don't win in the next four or five years, I can quit being happy that this was my last victory."

It was Nelson's eighth victory on the PGA Tour, but his first since the 1984 Walt Disney.

It also earned him $150,000 and an automatic spot on the U.S. Ryder Cup team that will face a European team next month.

"I'm extremely happy because I won one of the greatest championships on one of the hardest golf course against one of the greatest fields," Nelson said.

First-Place Twins Sweep A's

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

The Minnesota Twins won a weekend best-ball tournament in the American League West and wound up in first place with a nice lead.

"We went out and took it one game at a time. We didn't think sweep," Tom Brunansky said after the Twins did exactly that against Oakland, completing a four-game sweep Sunday with a 7-5 victory.

Brunansky, Kent Hrbek, Gary Gaetti and Tim Laudner all homered as the Twins outscored the Athletics 34-17 in the series.

Oakland went into Minnesota Thursday night leading the division by less than a percentage point. At the time, California was just one-half game behind.

But the Twins managed to open a 3½-game lead, the most any team has led the AL West by since June 26. California lost three straight games in Seattle before winning 7-5 Sunday.

"I have a really bad feeling to come here and get beat four times," Oakland Manager Tony LaRussa said. "We just got outplayed. I think the Twins got some momentum early in the series, and it helped them more than us. We could've stopped it with better hitting or better pitching, but we didn't."

The AL East lead also flip-flopped during the weekend. Toronto beat Cleveland 5-1 Sunday and took a half-game edge over New York, which got routed 15-4 by Detroit.

In other games, Kansas City beat Boston 8-3, Milwaukee defeated Chicago 8-4 and Baltimore defeated Texas 5-4.

Hrbek hit a three-run homer in the third inning for a 3-1 lead. It was his 27th home run of the season — and just what Minnesota needed.

"We got the big lead, and after winning three games, it may have taken the wind out of their sails," Hrbek said.

Brunansky led off the fourth with his 23rd home run, Laudner hit a two-run homer in the sixth for a 6-2 lead and Gaetti hit No. 23 in the eighth.

Bert Blyleven, 11-9, went six innings for the victory. Jeff Reardon pitched the final two innings and got his 23rd save, despite allowing Carney Lansford's two-run double with two outs in the ninth.

Steve Ontiveros, 6-6, pitched a complete-game loss and yielded seven hits.

The Twins have not won the AL West since 1970. Minnesota begins a three-game series at home Tuesday night against California.

"I take them one at a time," Twins Manager Tom Kelly said. "I've actually forgotten what has happened in the past."

Tigers 15, Yankees 4

Darrell Evans' home run capped a nine-run fourth inning and Alan Trammell, Bill Madlock and Matt Nokes also homered as Detroit routed New York.

Detroit won three times in the four-game series at Tiger Stadium and outscored the Yankees 35-16.

The Tigers finished with 14 hits against seven pitchers. Dennis Rasmussen, 8-6, was pounded for eight runs in three innings and Rick Cerone, the Yankees' starting catcher, pitched the eighth inning.

Dan Petry, 7-5, went eight innings for the victory.

Detroit combined five hits, four walks and two wild pitches against four pitchers in the fourth for their biggest inning since Sept. 9, 1985. Pinch-hitter Pat Sheridan had a two-run double and Mike Heath and Lou Whitaker hit RBI singles.

Blue Jays 5, Indians 1

John Cerutti won his seventh straight decision and Jesse Barfield, Willie Upshaw and Lloyd Moseby hit home runs as Toronto won in Cleveland.

Cerutti, 8-2, has not lost since May 17. He pitched six innings and gave up seven hits, including Tommy Hinz's first major-league home run. Ken Schrom, 5-8, took the loss.

Barfield hit his 23rd homer in the fourth, a two-run drive that went 440 feet. Upshaw hit his 12th homer in the fifth and Moseby had his 19th in the seventh.

After the game, the Blue Jays acquired 48-year-old knuckleballer Phil Niekro from the Indians in exchange for minor-league outfielder Darryl Landrum.

Angels 7, Mariners 5

Mark McLemore's two-run triple sparked a four-run rally in the eighth inning as California averted a four-game sweep in Seattle.

A double by Devon White, a walk and pinch-hitter Bill Buckner's RBI single made it 4-4 in the eighth. McLemore then tripled off Ed Nunez and scored on Wally Joyner's sacrifice fly.

DeWayne Buice, 5-3, got the victory. He allowed Mike Kingery's solo homer in the ninth. Dennis Powell, 0-1, took the loss.

Brian Downing led off the game with a home run off Lee Guetterman and hit a sacrifice fly in the second inning. Alvin Davis' two-run homer, his 17th, capped a three-run third against Angels starter Don Sutton.

Royals 8, Red Sox 3

Rookie reliever John Davis pitched 6 2-3 shutout innings to win his first major-league decision and Kevin Seitzer and Steve Balboni led Kansas City's 17-hit attack with three hits each in Boston.

Davis allowed four hits, struck out four and walked none.

Seitzer, who went 6-for-6 against the Red Sox last Sunday, hit his 10th home run and added two singles. He drove in two runs and scored twice.

Balboni hit a two-run double that capped a four-run fourth inning against Steve Crawford, 4-3, and two singles.

Brewers 8, White Sox 4

Milwaukee's Paul Molitor tied a team record by extending his hitting streak to 24 games as the Brewers won in Chicago.

Molitor kept his streak going with a ninth-inning double off Jim Winn. He matched the club record set by Dave May in 1973.

Robin Yount's RBI double keyed a four-run first inning. Yount leads the AL with 14 game-winning RBIs.

Winner Juan Nieves, 8-6, gave up three runs in six innings. Neil Allen, 0-7, has not won a game since July 20, 1986. He did not retire any of the five batters he faced and threw his glove and hat into the White Sox dugout when he left in the first inning.

Orioles 5, Rangers 4

Ray Knight singled home pinch-runner Alan Wiggins from third base with two outs in the bottom of the ninth inning as Baltimore beat Texas.

Wiggins ran for Larry Sheets, who singled with one out off Charlie Hough, 11-8. Wiggins took second on Terry Kennedy's single against Mitch Williams and moved to third on Dale Mohoric's wild pickoff throw.

John Habyan, 4-3, retired the final 10 batters he faced.

Pete Incaviglia, Larry Parrish and Mike Stanley homered for the visiting Rangers. Fred Lynn homered for the Orioles.

Giants Trim Reds' Lead To A Game

By The Associated Press

San Francisco Giants Manager Roger Craig says he has the key to unlock the race in the National League West.

Kelly Downs pitched five-hit ball for eight-plus innings and San Francisco defeated Cincinnati 5-2 to complete a sweep of their doubleheader Sunday. Mike Krukow checked the Reds on five hits over 8 1-3 innings in the Giants' 3-2 victory in the first game.

The Giants swept the four-game weekend series with the Reds and moved to within one game of first-place Cincinnati in the NL West. They have won eight straight games at Candlestick Park.

"Pitching is the key," Craig said. "Whoever gets it down the stretch will win it — and we've got the best pitching."

In the last 22 games, San Francisco starters are 10-4 with a 2.67 earned run average.

"I've never felt better about this club than I do now," Craig said. "We managed to pick up four games in three days and we're healthy. We're on a roll."

Elsewhere in the NL, Philadelphia edged St. Louis 8-7 in 14 innings; Chicago beat New York 6-3; Pittsburgh edged Montreal 4-3; Los Angeles beat Atlanta 5-2; and San Diego nipped Houston 4-3.

In the second game, the Giants scored four runs against starter Guy Hoffman, 8-7, in the second inning with the help of three errors by the Reds.

Downs didn't allow a hit until Buddy Bell doubled with one out in the fourth.

In the first game, Krukow took a three-hit shutout into the ninth but Kal Daniels singled and Eric Davis hit his 32nd homer. Craig Lefferts got the second out of the inning and Don Robinson got the last out for his 13th save.

"This series was it for us," Krukow said. "We came into it down by five games. If we'd have lost four, we'd have been behind by nine and it would have been tough to get back in

it. Now, we're playing up to our capabilities."

Will Clark hit his 24th homer in the Giants' two-run first against Ted Power, 8-7, in the opener.

"I don't regard myself a streaky home run hitter," Clark said. "I'm just seeing the ball well and I'm becoming a more consistent hitter. I'm starting to come around."

Clark has six homers in 13 games against the Reds this season.

"The pitching and the defense were outstanding and we got the hits at the right times," Craig said. "A lot of people were down on us when we came back from that trip, (2-7, at Los Angeles, Cincinnati and Houston), but I wasn't discouraged because I knew we were getting everyone healthy and our pitching was coming around. I feel very good about this club now."

Cubs 6, Mets 3

Jody Davis had a solo homer in the fifth inning and an RBI single that snapped a 2-2 tie in the seventh as Chicago beat Dwight Gooden and New York before 49,031 at Shea Stadium.

Scott Sanderson, 5-6, making only his second start since June 14th, allowed two runs and eight hits over six innings. Frank DiPino pitched 2 2-3 innings and Lee Smith got the final out for his 28th save.

Gooden, 9-4, who had won four of his last five decisions, gave up six runs on nine hits in 6 1-3 innings. His lifetime record pitching during the day fell to 18-13. Gooden is 49-10 at night.

Davis' RBI single broke a 2-2 tie and the Cubs went on to get four runs, putting the game out of reach.

Dave Magadan went 4-for-4 for the Mets and Mookie Wilson was 3-for-3, including a solo homer.

Pirates 4, Expos 3

Pinch-hitter Andy Van Slyke hit a two-run homer and host Pittsburgh scored three runs in the eighth inning to beat Montreal.

Neal Heaton had checked the Pirates on one run and six hits over the first seven innings until Al Pedrique, who went 4-for-4, singled to start the eighth. Darnell Coles, obtained Friday in a trade with Detroit, chased Heaton with an RBI double. Van Slyke, pinch hitting for Mike Diaz, then hit his 16th homer off reliever Jeff Parrett.

Rookie Mike Dunne, 7-4, pitched five-hit ball for eight innings, yielding two solo homers to Mitch Webster.

Phillies 8, Cardinals 7

The Phillies rallied for two runs in the bottom of the 14th inning to beat St. Louis and split their four-game series.

The Cardinals took a 7-6 lead in the top of the 14th when Jack Clark drew a bases-loaded walk. But Lance Parrish tied it in the bottom of the 14th with a solo homer and Steve Leltz' two-out RBI triple scored Glenn Wilson, who singled off Ricky Horton, 6-2.

Jeltz hit a long fly over the head of right fielder John Morris, who banded into the wall but could not make the play and allowed Wilson to score the winning run. Wally Ritchie, 2-0, got the win.

Dodgers 5, Braves 2

Shawn Hillegas allowed two runs and seven hits over 8 2-3 innings in his major-league debut and John Shelby homered for the fifth time in the last six games as host Los Angeles ended a four-game losing streak.

The rookie right-hander was called up Friday from the Dodgers' Class AAA Albuquerque farm club in the Pacific Coast League, where he won seven of his last eight decisions. He was the Dodgers' top selection in the January 1984 draft.

Hilligas lost his shutout in the ninth when Dale Murphy knocked in a run with a groundout.

Padres 4, Astros 3

Eric Show and three San Diego relievers combined on a three-hitter and Chris Brown homered to snap a fourth-inning tie as the Padres defeated visiting Houston for their fifth straight victory.

Show, 6-13, allowed three runs, one earned, in six innings. Lance McCullers, Mark Davis and Rich Gossage did not allow a hit the rest of the way, with Gossage earning his 10th save.

London Fans Get Show

WEMBLEY, England (AP) — In the last four years, Steve Dils says, football has come of age in Britain.

Dils quarterbacked Minnesota in 1983 when the Vikings beat the St. Louis Cardinals before less than 30,000 curious spectators in 80,000-seat Wembley Stadium.

On Sunday, Dils was back at Wembley, this time playing for the Los Angeles Rams against the Denver Broncos before a near-capacity crowd of 72,000 screaming gridiron fanatics.

"The big difference between 1983 and tonight is that the people now are very knowledgeable," Dils said after directing three second-half touchdown drives as the Rams rallied three times to edge the Broncos 28-27. "They seemed to enjoy the game and they seemed to cheer at the right time."

"The fans have a greater appreciation of football now." They had plenty to cheer about and lots to appreciate. There were six lead changes over the final 30 minutes and the outcome wasn't settled until Charles White's four-yard scoring run with 28 seconds to play.

Both teams used their starters for much of the first half.

Eric Dickerson, the NFL's single-season rushing record-holder, scored the game's first touchdown on a four-yard sweep late in the opening quarter to give Los Angeles a 7-0 lead.

Quarterback John Elway sparked Denver to a 13-7 lead at the start of the second half, directing an 11-play, 72-yard drive capped by Gene Lang's six-yard touchdown run.

By then, coaches John Robinson of the Rams and Dan Reeves of the Broncos were substituting freely, making the most of their first chance to see rookies and other hopefuls in action.

But for the fans, the fun was just beginning, and a former college star with a checkered pro career was to provide the biggest boost of all.

White, a Heisman Trophy winner at Southern California nine years ago, accounted for 49 yards of a 57-yard drive, capping it with a nine-yard run on the first play of the fourth quarter to give the Rams a 14-13 lead.

Three touchdowns and 14:28 later, White scored again from four yards out after a holding penalty against Denver, and Mike Lansford kicked the extra point for the margin of victory.

"It was an intense game, a case of whoever had the ball last was going to win, and we had it last," White said.

His winning score came 1:25 after Gary Kubiak, Elway's replacement, threaded a 32-yard touchdown pass to rookie wide receiver Ricky Nattiel to put the Broncos on top 27-21.

"When I got open, I just hoped that Gary saw me and that he'd get the ball to me," Nattiel said. "It was great — he put it right in there."

In between White's first touchdown and the Kubiak-to-Nattiel TD pass, the lead changed on a 13-yard scoring strike from Kubiak to Mark Jackson and a one-yard TD run by the Rams' Tim Tyrrell.

All of the fourth-quarter scoring came after long drives and kept the fans hanging around until the end, cheering their favorites and even trying to rattle Lansford with jeers as he lined up for the decisive extra point.

"I think the fans are seeing things they couldn't appreciate in 1983," said Dils, who wound up with seven completions in 14 attempts for 105 yards.

Reeves said the loss made for a sad ending to an otherwise good week in London, and praised the combination on his club's final score.

"I was really happy to see the play of Kubiak and Nattiel," Reeves said. "They both had outstanding games."

Elway completed nine of 15 passes for 106 yards, while Kubiak was 13 of 22 for 176 yards.

White was the top rusher with 51 yards on 15 carries, and gained another 43 yards on three catches. Rams starting quarterback Jim Everett completed eight of 13 passes for 82 yards.

Both teams left for the United States immediately after the game, ending their stay in London to return to the two-a-day practice sessions and more routine training camps back home.

Dils, who followed the same routine in 1983, said he would like to come back to London for a vacation, and advised players who might come for future games to get all they could out of the trip.

"See everything you can see, and don't worry about getting tired," he said. "You can always sleep when you get home."

X-Rays And Emery Boards Highlight Crazy Season

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

X-rays and emery boards. Suspensions and silence. While players are hitting balls over the wall at a record pace, baseball has gone off-the-wall.

Joe Niekro and Alan Wiggins were suspended — Niekro for doctoring balls with a nail file, Wiggins for insubordination.

R.J. Reynolds and Tim Raines had their bats confiscated under baseball's new Bat-Ray Rule. The bats were taken in the same game as the managers from Pittsburgh and Montreal played a game of "get-me, get-you." X-rays later showed both bats to be cork-free.

Howard Johnson of the New York Mets already has had two bats taken from him, both of which were later judged legal. But with 28 players, including Johnson, setting career highs for homers in a season, baseball suspects cheating.

While Commissioner Peter Ueberroth was at the forefront of "Batscam," he remained publicly silent about the Texas Rangers' signing of pitcher Steve Howe, who has been suspended from both the major and minor leagues for drug use. Privately, however, Ueberroth was said to be outraged that the Rangers promoted Howe.

Perhaps the most bizarre of baseball's silent treatments, however, was the one accorded New York Yankees Manager Lou Piniella by his boss, George Steinbrenner, for failing to take one of the owners calls while on a road trip. On Saturday, Steinbrenner issued a two-page statement accusing Piniella of insubordination. Move over, Mr. Wiggins.

Piniella and Steinbrenner apparently also had argued over several player moves, including the one that sent Niekro to Minnesota for catcher Mark Salas. The trade may have saved the Yankees further embarrassment, though.

"We Built It, It's Theirs"

Ten years ago today, the United States agreed in principle to give Panama sovereignty over the Panama Canal Zone and full control of the canal by 2000 A.D. In ceremonies a month later, President Carter and Panamanian leader General Omar Torrijos, right, signed the treaty. General Torrijos died in an airplane crash in 1981. The canal is 40.27 miles long. Ships entering from the Atlantic side are raised 85 feet above sea level before being lowered to the Pacific Ocean.

DO YOU KNOW — What general is considered Panama's top leader today?

Horoscope

From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY Aug. 11

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Do not be discouraged by minor problems which may interfere with your ability to express yourself. Handle these problems by maintaining a practical and impersonal stance.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): A new contact may take up a good deal of your time today, but don't be impatient, as it will be worth it.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Listen to a family tie's financial advice, but not at all to a friend who opposes this advice out of jealousy.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Be sure that all conversations are in privacy if you want good results. Confide only in those you can trust.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): A new system for handling your work will produce good results, provided you don't act foolishly.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): Avoid getting into any arguments over finances. Find some kind of tension-relieving recreation this evening.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Don't permit a known troublemaker to interfere with your plans for the future. Keep your ideas confidential.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): You may be doubtful about some advice from friends, but chances are you should follow through with it.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Don't take any heat from a fellow worker, as it would set a precedent which would be frequently taken advantage of.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): A trip may be coming your way if you feel it's necessary, so get your wardrobe in order. Plan your finances.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Only one appropriate person should be approached for advice on reaching material goals today.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Don't take on any extra monetary responsibilities. Help a close friend who is in need of counseling.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): This isn't a good day to be sociable with personal friends, but it is a time for getting to know your co-workers better.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she may tend to build up a lot of anxiety when attempting to handle too many activities too quickly, so teach him or her to think carefully before acting and to plan ahead. Your progeny may tend to learn slowly academically, but once a lesson is learned, it's learned forever.

WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KJ103 ♥8 ♦AQJ62 ♣AJ3
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♦ 2 S* Pass Pass

*preemptive
What action do you take?
A.—It would be a minor miracle if the opponents make this contract, so you would like to double. Unfortunately, that action would be for takeout, and you can bet your bottom dollar partner will bid some number of hearts. Pass, and take your 100s like a man.

Q.2—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠QJ6 ♥8 ♦AK9872 ♣AQ9
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♦ 2 S* Pass Pass

*preemptive
What action do you take?
A.—Shame on you if you thought we were trying to trap you. You have a reasonable suit and a good hand, so make your natural bid of three diamonds.

Q.3—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K2 ♥87 ♦AKQJ43 ♣AJ2
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♦ 2 S* Pass Pass

*preemptive
What action do you take?
A.—With so much playing strength, you should be thinking in terms of game even though partner could not act over the preempt. Your most likely game is at no trump, so what should you bid? Even if you get a spade lead, your hand will take only eight tricks and partner might be trickless. We think two no trump describes your hand adequately.

Q.4—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠QJ6 ♥AK954 ♦8 ♣Q1094
The bidding has proceeded:

South West North East
1 ♥ 2 ♦ Pass Pass

What action do you take?
A.—It depends on system. If you employ negative doubles, you must double to protect partner in case he has diamond length and strength. If not, you have a minimum opening bid and partner couldn't act. Pass.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AQ9873 ♥85 ♦62 ♣Q65
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♠ Pass 1 ♠ Pass
2 ♠ Pass ?

What action do you take?
A.—You don't have much, but the values you do have are all pulling their full weight. You should make one move, and the general game try of three spades seems to fit the bill.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AQ52 ♥K74 ♦J87 ♣J52
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♠ Pass 1 ♠ Pass
2 ♠ Pass ?

What action do you take?
A.—In terms of high cards you are a king better off than in the previous example, but we suggest you pass. Your hand is absolutely flat, your two jacks are of doubtful value and you have no intermediate cards. Partner needs an opening no trump to give you good play for game.

Officials Label Safety Standards System 'Absurd'

By Mike McGraw

L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

WASHINGTON — In the next month or two, engineers at the National Bureau of Standards are expected to explain precisely why a spindly, half-finished apartment building in Bridgeport, Conn., came thundering down April 23, killing 28 workers.

But safety experts fear that a Byzantine system for approving approve new safety rules will keep them from using what they learn from the L'Ambiance Plaza collapse to prevent similar tragedies.

So far, the complex system has helped assure that, in its 17-year history, the federal Occupational Safety and Health Administration has put out only 46 new safety and health standards on the books.

Even when new safety standards are set, they are seldom followed and rarely enforced, agency advisers and some of its top officials said.

"I've been working on a construction safety standard for 10 years," said one official, who asked not to be identified, adding that more lives may have been lost while the government attempted to set a "perfect" standard than would be saved in the first year or two after one is passed.

Safety standards have never been set, for example, for workers who labor in confined spaces such as manholes or chemical tanks.

"It's absurd," said John Moran, director of the division of safety research for the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health.

Moran had just last week presented the findings of a recent study to members of OSHA's advisory committee on construction safety and health. The study found that, of 42 recent deaths of workers in confined spaces, none would have occurred had proposed standards been followed.

But, even though it is trying, OSHA cannot set safety standards for workers in confined spaces.

That is because the government system for setting such standards requires the agency to compare the value of lives a new rule might save to what it would cost an industry to put the rule in place.

Because the agency does not keep track of the work-related deaths of laborers in confined spaces, it cannot estimate the relative cost of applying the rule.

"In the eight years OSHA has been trying to get a confined space standard out, we have killed over 2,000 people in confined spaces," Moran said. "We have a major national problem, recognized by every professional in the country, and we can't get the standards out."

But even if a standard were on the books, Moran doubts it would save many lives because standards are seldom followed and enforced.

A good example is standards for working in trenches, one of the deadliest of construction activities.

Moran said a recent study of 100 excavation fatalities showed that 97 occurred because of a lack of shoring or inappropriate sloping of the trench, both of which are regulated by existing standards.

As a result, he said, revised standards for trenching operations — which are in the hopper at OSHA now — may prevent only about 3 percent of the deaths in trenches in the country.

Although all safety and health agencies face constraints in their attempts to regulate, OSHA faces serious additional impediments, according to a study of the agency last February by the Administrative Conference of the United States. They include small staffs and difficulty in retaining experts, requirements for risk analyses and cost or feasibility studies, continual changes in political leadership — resulting in constantly changing methods — and legal constraints often requiring lengthy hearings and studies.

"When these additional limitations are taken into account, it is surprising OSHA has been able to regulate at all," the study said.

For example, the study said that when OSHA decided to regulate the amount of noise workers can be safely exposed to, it took 146 months to get the standard on the books.

The standard for asbestos took 25 months, proposals regulating lead exposure took 89 months and the standard limiting arsenic exposure took 85 months.

Consequently, since the agency has been in existence, it has completed only 19 health standards — to regulate such things as exposure to toxic chemicals — and 27 safety regulations.

The agency is so far behind in making rules that it has been unable to update standards adopted from other groups, such as the American Conference of Governmental Industrial Hygienists, as long ago as 1971.

In the meantime, the groups that proposed those standards have updated them.

The study said, "Millions of workers face exposures that are in compliance with the 1971 OSHA standards, but which are considered dangerous under newer recommendations."

In addition, federal judges and a congressional advisory agency recently criticized the agency for its years of delay in setting standards that would protect workers from more than 100 carcinogens.

One way OSHA determines whether new or revised standards are needed in the construction industry is to consult with its advisory committee on construction safety and health, which met for two days in Washington last week.

But in the year before the L'Ambiance collapse, the committee held no meetings because the agency had failed to reappoint any of the representatives on the committee, which is made up of management, union and public representatives.

Besides, some committee members say OSHA often ignores the committee even when it does meet.

"Many of us on the committee are a little bit frustrated that when we have a position, and it is supported unanimously on the committee, we find that OSHA publishes a standard that may be 180 degrees out of phase with the recommendation," said George E. Smith, a safety expert with the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers.

He said the committee often is overruled and that OSHA sometimes looks down its nose at committee members. "The arrogance an OSHA official displayed to the committee at a recent meeting was nauseating," Smith said.

One agency official who asked not to be identified responded to such complaints from committee members by saying, "In my opinion, the committee has not exactly distinguished itself in the past." He cited cases in which the committee wanted a standard set or changed, but refused to back the recommendation.

Shipwrecks Yield Treasures

By Thomas H. Maugh II

L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

The Central America and the Titanic are not the only shipwrecks being explored or salvaged.

In Cape Cod, treasure hunter Barry Clifford is continuing to recover treasure and artifacts from the slave ship Whydah, which was hijacked in 1716 by pirate Black Sam Bellamy. The pirates looted dozens of other ships before the Whydah ran aground 700 yards off Wellfleet in 1717. Clifford has recovered as much as $25 million worth of jewels, gold and artifacts.

Off a coral reef off Norfolk Island near Australia's east coast, divers sponsored by the Australian Bicentennial Commission in January and February recovered hundreds of artifacts from the Sirius, the flagship of a British fleet that took more than 1,000 convicts to Australia in 1788. The divers also have recovered artifacts from the Pandora, which was carrying some of the rebellious crew members from the Bounty when it sank off northern Australia in 1790.

About 55 miles south of Nantucket Island off Cape Cod, treasure hunter William Flower's team of divers are recovering gold and artifacts from the luxury liner Republic, which sank in 1909 after it was struck by the Italian passenger liner Florida. The Republic was carrying $3 million in gold coins purchased by the Bank of France and now estimated to be worth as much as $1.6 billion.

Earlier this month, divers led by treasure hunter Robert Mester began salvage efforts on the luxury liner Governor, which lies in 220 feet of water in Admiralty inlet, where the Puget Sound branches off toward Seattle and Tacoma. The liner was struck by the freighter West Hartland in 1921. Mester estimates the value of artifacts at $8.5 million. On Sunday, Mester's team suspended its attempt to recover the purser's safe containing an estimated $1.5 million in cash and jewels because of adverse tides and underwater currents.

Next month, 30 divers from the National Park Service and the Naval Reserve Unit in Newport, R.I., are scheduled to search 4,500 acres of federally owned sea floor in Cape Cod's National Seashore looking for ships and cargo. The locations of any objects will be mapped, but no recovery operations are planned for now.

Perhaps second only to the Titanic, the best-known sunken ship to most Americans is the Monitor, the ironclad ship used by the Confederate forces during the Civil War. And in May and June, an expedition sponsored by the U.S. Navy and the National Oceanographic and Atmospheric Administration began exploring the vessel, which rests upside down in 220 feet of water 16 miles off Cape Hatteras, N.C. They found that the Monitor is deteriorating rapidly and said extensive work will be required if it is to be preserved.

ELVIS ART — Visitors to Graceland, Elvis Presley's former residence in Memphis, Tenn., look over a display of Elvin art created by his fans as part of the celebration surrounding the 10th anniversary of the singer's death.

Up to 50,000 tourists and fans expected to tour Graceland during the anniversary celebration. The art works are on display at Graceland's 36,000-square-foot shopping center devoted to Presley souvenirs. (AP Laserphoto)

Just An Average Stupid Trick Not Good Enough

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — They chug-a-lug beer, spin around in clothes dryers, dive head-first onto the floor, play tunes on unusual parts of the body, inadvertently set off fire alarms and occasionally throw up.
"I could send out a flyer that says, 'We don't care what you can stick up your nose, we aren't interested,'" said Susan Hall Sheehan, the hard-nosed but good-natured woman who auditions Stupid Human Tricks for "Late Night with David Letterman."
Sheehan took over the job from Chris Elliott when he graduated to staff writer. She said he used to place ads in such outlets as college newspapers that opened with the question, "Can you do something odd?"
"We decided the word 'odd' was a mistake. Between that and 'For more information, call Susan,' I got a lot of obscene phone calls," Sheehan said in an interview in her cubicle beneath a wall of photos of Stupid Pet Trick alumni, whom she also auditioned.
If human tricks have merit and pose no immediate threat to her safety, Sheehan conducts first-phase auditions in person for those who can get to New York. Hopefuls in other parts of the country can send videotapes. If Sheehan approves of the trick, the show's producer, Barry Sand, sees it.
Unusual aptitudes that might dazzle the average beer-bust crowd do not necessarily make it on network TV.
"A lot of people can play the 'William Tell Overture' on different parts of their body," Sheehan said. "Or the Maxwell House theme on their face."

Tying cherry stems is no good — "it's all done in the mouth." A Wall Street analyst could shoot a rubber band and get it to roll back toward him, but the trick was "too small" to show up well on camera.
"We had a schoolteacher from Massachusetts who could dive off a desk headfirst into a styrofoam cup of water that had a little newspaper wreath of fire around it," she said, with admiration. "It looked great in slow motion."
Just a dash of panache can turn a mundane trick like spinning in a clothes dryer into boffo late-night entertainment.
"We had a lot of calls on guys who could ride around in a dryer, but it wasn't enough," Sheehan said. "This one guy called back and said, 'Well, I can change shirts while I'm in the dryer.' And there we had it. And it was terrific."
Sheehan herself got into the act when a guy said he could jump rope with 300 pounds of people on his back. Sheehan sat on his shoulders and another woman sat on his back. He had done no more than three jumps in rehearsal, but when it came time to tape the show, he did 20.
"I couldn't wait to get down off his shoulders," she said. "But that was a record for him — and certainly for us."
Perhaps the most memorable Stupid Human Trick was performed by a Long Island bartender who stopped an electric fan with his tongue.
Sand failed to come up with amusing stories of people desperate to get on TV, but the fan guy immediately sprang to mind. "That was one where you start to think, do we want to do this? That's a gray area. But you say, tomorrow everybody's going to be talking about it."

Letterman does not see the tricks before they are performed on the show. He was clearly alarmed by the bartender's trick, but it was a hit.
Performers who make it onto the show get a union scale payment of $490. Sheehan was disappointed to learn that a family who formed a pyramid while balancing spoons on their noses would have to be paid separately, so the trick was too expensive.
Sometimes the trick goes great in rehearsal, but not on the show.
Buffy, the stewardess, could balance seven spoons on her face, but not when she was nervous and sweating.
"I don't know if the human body can produce Teflon, but those things would not stick to her," Sand said.
A fire spitter who popped balloons auditioned for Sand at the show's offices at NBC. Sheehan tied the balloons to a vent in the ceiling. The spitter spit and the fire alarms went off all over the building, shutting down the elevators.
"We looked out the window, and the police were stopping traffic on Sixth Avenue," Sheehan said. "David had an appointment. He couldn't leave the building."
Then there are the ones that don't even get past the first-phase audition. Like the guy who said he could chug two dozen eggs.
"As soon as he chugged them down, he threw them back up," Sheehan said. "And you know, the thought goes through my mind — they don't pay me enough."

Frankie, Annette Return To Beach

By Kevin Thomas
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service
HOLLYWOOD — "Back to the Beach" imagines that the Annette Funicello and Frankie Avalon of all those "Beach Party" movies of the early '60s got married and settled down in Ohio, where Frankie has become a workaholic-champion car salesman and Annette a model housewife and mother.

What gets them back to Malibu after more than 20 years is a visit to their daughter, Sandi (Lori Loughlin); what's surprising is that "Back to the Beach" is a deft, funny movie. It is nostalgic without being embarrassing, and knowing without being either cruel or cynical.
"You do have to wonder who will go to see this film, as smartly made as it is, but it may just be that there will be a place for Annette and Frankie in the AIDS era of sexual conservatism. As in the American International Pictures originals, the story is so slight that it could have been scribbled in the sand, in danger of being washed away with the next wave.

Frankie and Annette's unexpected arrival provokes two predictably momentary crises: First, it puts a damper on the live-in relationship Sandi has with her surfer boyfriend (Tommy Hinkley); second, the durably sexy presence of Annette's old rival, Connie (Connie Stevens), now the proprietor of a landmark beach hangout, threatens Frankie and Annette's 22 years of marital bliss.

There are plenty of vintage beach-party shenanigans, a number of songs (there really could have been more) and lots of cameo appearances — for example, Bob Denver and Alan Hale from "Gilligan's Island."

"Back to the Beach" sounds like a breeze and it is, but it reflects considerable care and imagination on the part of debuting director Lyndall Hobbs, a young Australian, and writers Peter Krikes, Steve Meerson and Christopher Thompson, working from a story by old pros James Komack and B. W. L. Norton.

Certain popular entertainers pay the price of defining their eras by never really transcending them, and this surely would seem the case with Annette and Frankie, who in a real sense represent a final pre-Vietnam era of innocence. Obviously, it would be easy to make fun of them, but they show they can make fun of themselves yet avoid self-parody and the loss of dignity.

"Didn't I teach you anything?" Annette asks of her daughter, whom she's trying to help get back her boyfriend. "Well, you did teach me how to make my hair real stiff," Sandi says.

Stevens provides plenty of wit, and the younger members of the cast make good impressions, especially newcomer Hinkley, a big, amiable fellow. Demian Slade is Loughlin's smart-alecky kid brother, and John Calvin is the beach narcissist, who makes a play for Annette.

Brightly photographed by Bruce Surtees, "Back to the Beach" (rated PG but definitely family entertainment) is the kind of film in which costume and production design are absolutely crucial, and Marlene Stewart and Michael Helmy, respectively, have come through triumphantly: Their contributions are in themselves a commentary on early-'60s styles and values, as amusing and lighthearted as the film itself.

'Material Girl' Returns Home

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Pop star Madonna came home to a welcoming party of 42,000, including her husband, Sean Penn.
The fans, including Penn, who was on leave from serving a probation violation sentence in California, crowded into the Pontiac Silverdome for a concert by the "material girl," who grew up in nearby Rochester Hills.

Madonna, who once rode her bike where the Silverdome now stands, told the audience, "I was (angry) when they tore down these trees and built this place."

Thousand of girls in the audience dressed like the pop star, who's on her Who's That Girl World Tour, coinciding with the opening of her "Who's That Girl" movie.

Movie Focuses On Pontiff's Trip

ROME (AP) — Italian director Pasquale Squitieri will start filming a movie in which Pope John Paul II travels to the Soviet Union to meet with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, Rome's La Repubblica newspaper says.

"I wanted to confront a story which I believe touches on two of the most important global realities of our time

— Gorbachev's Russia and the papacy of John Paul II," Squitieri was quoted as saying.

The film, entitled "Russicum," begins shooting in Rome in September and will star F. Murray Abraham, who played the embittered Antonio Salieri in "Amadeus," Italian actor Rossano Brazzi and Yugoslav actress Rita Rusic.

Bernstein Honored

PETERBORO, N.H. (AP) — Longtime New York Philharmonic Orchestra conductor Leonard Bernstein received the prestigious Edward MacDowell Medal on Sunday for his lifetime achievements as a composer.
Bernstein was the 28th recipient of the award given at the MacDowell Colony, a 450-acre artists' retreat that opened in 1907.
Bernstein won the award for his wide-ranging compositions, although he is also a pianist, conductor, teacher and lecturer.
While staying at the colony, Bernstein completed his renowned "Mass," which opened at the Kennedy Center in 1971 and 10 years later became the first work by an American-born composer to be produced at the Vienna State Opera.
Bernstein is also well known for his Broadway scores of "West Side Story," "On the Town" and "Candide." He also wrote the score of the film "On the Waterfront."
