Democrats Wary Of Hectic 'Super Tuesday'

By RICHARD L. VERNACI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democrats are wondering aloud about the wisdom of their rules as they face 1988, when the major presidential primaries and caucuses are crowded into the beginning of the election season.

"We've got an unusual situation," Kathy Vick, chairwoman of the commission that enforces the Democratic Party's delegate selection rules, said Tuesday. "I frankly and personally think that the system is best if it's spread out."

But next March 8 — Super Tuesday — Democrats will hold events in 20 states and American Samoa, while Republicans have primaries in 15 states and a caucus in one other.

"It causes many more problems for the Democrats than it does for us," said Kathryn Murray, a spokeswoman for the Republican National Committee. "It seems like they've created their own monster."

For the Democrats, more than 1,300 of their 4,160 national convention delegates are at stake, while states holding Republican events that day account for more than 750 of their 2,277 total. However, the Republicans have not specified whether all of those GOP delegates will be chosen that day or by a different method some other time.

The latest version of Super Tuesday features primaries or caucuses in more than twice as many states, with roughly double the number of delegates at stake, as on 1984's Super Tuesday, which now appears anemic by comparison.

It began as an attempt by Southern states to hold their events simultaneously, effectively creating a regional primary, but it grew into something else as other states pushed up their dates to avoid being ignored, Ms. Vick said in a telephone interview from New Orleans.

On March 13, 1984, Alabama, American Samoa, Florida, Georgia, Hawaii, Massachusetts, Nevada, Oklahoma, Rhode Island and Washington state held events picking some 500 Democratic National Convention delegates. Next year they will be joined by Arkansas, Idaho, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Mississippi, Missouri, North Carolina, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia.

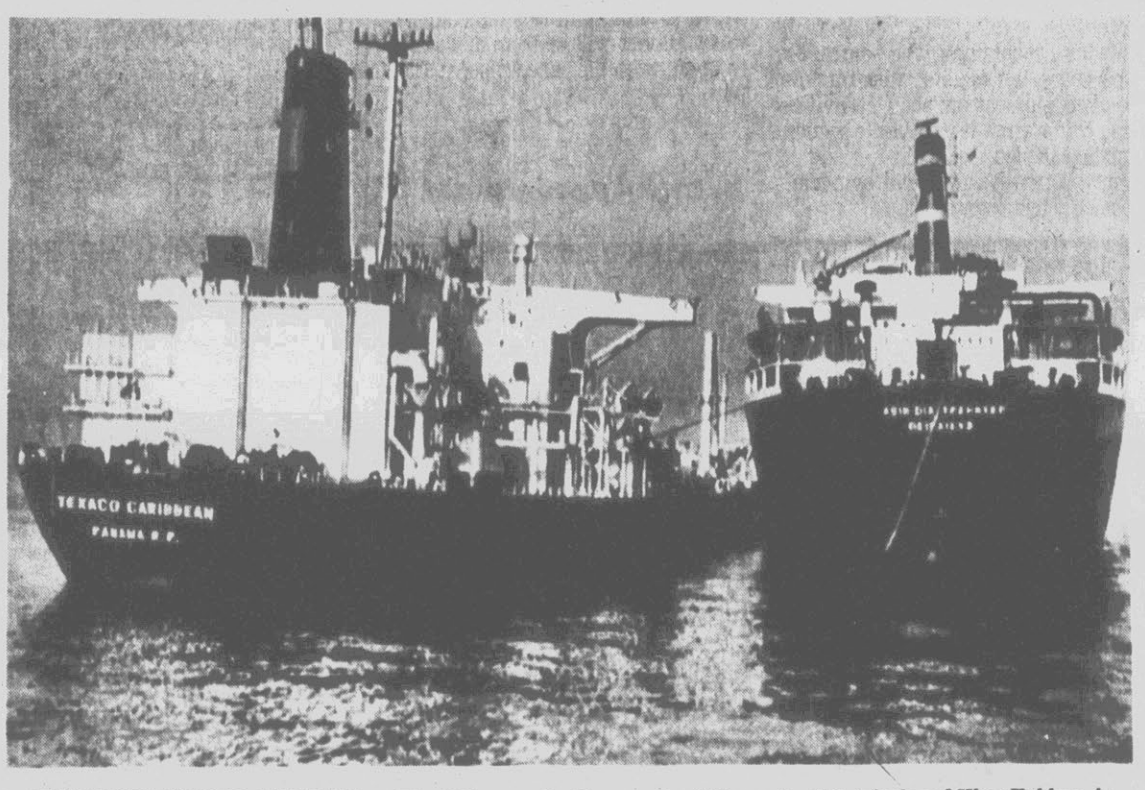

Republicans will hold events in all of those places except for American Samoa, Hawaii, Idaho, Nevada and Washington.

By and large, the dates of the events are set by state legislatures, most of which are dominated by Democrats, said Nadine Wong, a Republican National Committee spokeswoman.

The 1988 Democratic National Convention's estimated 4,160 delegates is an increase of 227 from 1984, and the 1988 Republican National Convention's estimated 2,277 delegates is 42 more than four years earlier.

Although their schedules still are being firmed up, both parties could pass the halfway point in picking their delegates by the third week of March next year. That's almost four months before the Democrats open their convention in Atlanta and five

City, GUC Workers Get New Pay Plans

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

New classification and pay plans for city of Greenville and Greenville Utilities Commission employees were approved at a joint meeting of the City Council and GUC board Tuesday night.

Both plans call for the pay rate for all employees to be raised to at least the minimum for their grade. The plans also provide that every individual who falls at a half-step out or between pay steps be raised to the nearest step.

As a result, the city's plan will cost about $170,000 to implement, including $75,000 to bring employees to the minimum of the range and $95,000 to adjust to step.

GUC's cost to raise people to the minimum of the range will be about $15,495, while the cost of adjustment to step will be about $60,000.

One of the purposes of a $52,000 study by Arthur Young Co., funded jointly by the city and the utilities commission, was to provide equal pay for equal jobs so the city and city-owned utilities would not be competing against each other.

But differences in the two pay plans were evident when the plans were reviewed by the City Council and the GUC board last month. So interim City Manager Mayo Allen and GUC General Manager Malcolm Green were asked to meet with the consultants to resolve the differences between the to proposals.

That having been done, adoption of the plans by the council and GUC commissioners took only a few minutes Tuesday.

Another purpose of the study and the resulting new pay plans was to ensure that the pay of city and GUC workers is competitive with the labor market.

However, a memo to City Council members and GUC commissioners from Allen and Green said "the survey data used for this project does not reflect the 5 percent cost-of-living" approved by the Board of County Ccommissioners for Pitt County employees for the 1987-1988 fiscal year, "or the 5 percent across-the-board" pay hike granted state employees.

"These increases alone are not sufficient to adjust our ranges, but do put added pressure on us to provide some additional compensation, if warranted, to our employees," the memo suggested.

The memo also said that "below range 16, some of our employees received less than $25 annually due to their close proximity to the next available step while others received upwards of $830," and that "20- to 30-percent of our long-term employees" have not been eligible for a merit increase in several years because they

Three Candidates Still In Running

The Greenville City Council has pared the list of applicants for the vacant city manager's position to three candidates, according to Dick Farris, who is serving as the city's staff resource person in the search.

The council, which reduced the number of candidates from six to three during an executive session Tuesday night, refused to release the names due to objections by two candidates, said Farris, personnel director at East Carolina Unversity.

The remaining three have been invited for day-long visits Aug. 25-27, according to Farris, who said the candidates will be interviewed by the council and meet with department heads and various community leaders. He said the council hopes to name a new city manager around Aug. 29.

The search for a new city manager began following the March 16 dismissal of Gail Meeks.

Kuwaiti Tankers Complete Trip Through Persian Gulf

KUWAIT (AP) — Three American-flagged Kuwaiti tankers docked in their home port to begin loading oil today after successfully navigating the Persian Gulf with their U.S. Navy escorts.

A new mining threat outside the waterway prompted France and Britain to dispatch minesweepers.

A fifth mine was reported found today south of the Strait of Hormuz in the Gulf of Oman, previously considered mine-free and safe.

United Arab Emirate officials told The Associated Press two of the five mines were defused by United Arab Emirate coast guardsmen. The officials in Abu Dhabi, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the mines were picked up by patrol boats in United Arab Emirate waters about nine miles off the port of Fujairah. The area is not far from where a U.S.-operated supertanker, the 274,347-ton Texaco Caribbean, was damaged by a mine on Monday.

Earlier reports said four mines had been spotted in the busy coastal anchorage, some 30 miles south of the Strait of Hormuz, gateway to the Persian Gulf. U.S. Navy and Omani helicopters and Omani coast guard vessels carried out the search for the floating explosives.

In Washington, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger said the United States was seeking support for an international minesweeping operation in the gulf "in the interest of all maritime nations." But France and Britain said their sweepers were sent to protect their own vessels.

Iran's ambassador to the United Nations, Said Rajaie-Khorassani, said his country would cooperate with U.N. peace efforts but added Tehran was not "accepted or rejecting" a Security Council resolution calling for an end to the 7-year-old Iran-Iraq war.

U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar said Iraq had accepted the resolution.

The Gas King, Sea Isle City and Ocean City left their U.S. escorts and arrived in port Tuesday, ending the second Navy-escorted trip through the gulf.

This morning, reporters saw the 46,723-ton Gas King and the 79,999-ton Ocean City docked at Al-Ahmadi, Kuwait's main oil terminal, to begin the roughly five-day loading process.

Utility Bills Will Be High

July's heat wave will cause higher-than-usual utility bills this month for Greenville area residents, a spokesman for the Greenville Utilities Commission said this morning.

George Reel, GUC's customer assistance supervisor, said "since July was 39 percent hotter than June, our customers will notice a sharp increase in their utility bills this month as compared to last month. Air conditioners have had to work overtime to keep customers cool."

Temperatures recorded at GUC's water treatment plan showed highs above 90 degrees during 24 days in July, and the demand for electricity was approximately 180 megawatts during those hot days, compared to 157 megawatts in June. The demand for electricity during July 1986 was about 163 megawatts.

And Reel said July was not only hot, it was dry. The water treatment plant reported only 3.15 inches of rain for the month.

The dry weather helped create a record-setting peak water production of 11.4 million gallons on July 23. The plant, which has the capacity to produce 16 million gallons of water a day, averaged producing 8.7 million gallons a day during the month.

The peak water production day in June of this year was 9.2 million gallons, while the average for June was 8.1 million gallons.

In July of 1986, the peak water day was 8.42 million gallons while the average for the month was 6.98 million gallons a day.

Cost Of Iran-Contra Panel Hits $2 Million

WASHINGTON (AP) — The congressional Iran-Contra committees have spent more than $2 million so far, and the figure will more than double by the time the panels finish their work in October, spokesmen said today.

The House committee spent $959,000 from January through July 31, including $51,000 for the services of chief counsel John W. Nields Jr. The money was paid to his Washington law firm, Howrey and Simon, committee spokesman Bob Havel said.

The total figure also includes salaries for 45 staff members, stationary, travel expenses, equipment and telephones.

Havel added that the counter on the committee's copy machine totaled 1,605,000 as of today.

Lance Morgan, the spokesman for the Senate committee, had previously announced that his panel had spent $1.2 million as of June 30 for a staff of 52, plus expenses similar to those of the House committee.

Senate Chief counsel Arthur L. Liman is on a salary that would amount to more than $72,000 on an annual basis.

The House committee expects to spend its budget of $1.95 million and the Senate panel estimates final costs at $2 million.

However, the figures do not include significant cost items such as police overtime, construction work in the Caucus Room of the Senate Russell Office Building and printing of hearing transcripts.

Sailor May Sit Out Storm

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Blind sailor Jim Dickson today prepared to ride out a tropical storm at sea, rather than trying to reach Bermuda ahead of the storm.

Dickson was 65 miles north of Bermuda at 6 a.m. EDT today and reported the weather was already deteriorating, said spokesman Paul Petronello. Tropical Storm Arlene was about 350 miles west-southwest of the island, and a line of rough weather and squalls stretched far ahead of the storm, the National Weather Service said.

"He's going to prepare the boat for a storm," Petronello said.

Petronello had said Tuesday night that Dickson planned to sail all night in an effort to reach harbor before the storm.

By this morning, however, it appeared more prudent to take down the sails and await the storm's approach at sea, the spokesman said.

The center of the storm packs winds of 50 mph with higher gusts, but is not likely to increase in strength, the weather service said.

Petronello said he planned to leave for Bermuda today with Dickson's mother and sister.

Although Bermuda is a detour in Dickson's plan to become the first sightless person to sail solo across the Atlantic, Petronello said the 650-mile voyage from Portsmouth to Bermuda also will be a victory.

Dickson, 41, left Portsmouth for Plymouth, England, on Aug. 4. He was forced to head for Bermuda, 200 miles out of his way, when the autopilot and satellite navigation system aboard his sloop broke down.

Initially, Dickson had believed his talking computer was also malfunctioning, but determined that the failure was in the satellite system that fed data to the computer, said another spokesman, Steve Graham.

Petronello said repairs to the equipment would be made as soon as the weather allowed, and Dickson hoped to be back on the high seas by Tuesday.

"This has just slowed him up, it hasn't discouraged him," he said. "He's doing fine. He's in good spirits."

In The Area

Shoplifting Charges

Greenville police arrested people on shoplifting charges in connection with separate incidents reported to the department Tuesday.

Officer J.M. Jones said Floyd Lee Daniels, 32, of 112 Greenfield Blvd. was charged in connection with a 10:25 a.m. incident at Harris Supermarket at 2512 S. Memorial Drive.

Angel Nichole Baptist of Farmville was charged in connection with a 6:41 p.m. incident at Rose's Store at Stanton Square Shopping Center on the Stantonsburg Road.

New City Staffer

S. Rex Wilder of Raleigh has been hired as the city of Greenville's new data processing manager.

Wilder, who is scheduled to join the city staff Aug. 27, is employed by the College Foundation, a non-profit organization in Raleigh. He has 14 years of experience in the computer field, including 12 years with Texasgulf.

Wilder and his wife have a 19-month-old son.

Meanwhile, Ron Kimble, Greenville finance director, said the city expects to begin installing its new computer in the last week of September.

Kimble said workers are making room modifications, and installing cables and dedicated power sources in preparation for the new system.

Wreck Injuries Fatal

A 69-year-old Philadelphia resident, a native of Oak City, died Sunday of injuries received when his car crashed into a 15-foot deep ditch off North Haughton Street in Williamston, according to police.

George S. Jones was in Martin County to attend the funeral of his brother, Ben Jones Sr.

The Williamston Rescue Squad transported Jones to Martin General Hospital. He was later transferred to Pitt County Memorial Hospital where he died.

AIRPORT CONTRIBUTION — James G. Turcotte, manager of the Pitt-Greenville Airport, accepts a $4,000 contribution from Greenville-Pitt County Board of Realtors representatives Shirley Tacker, Anne Duffus and Rudy Schulte, left to right, at the Greenville Country Club Tuesday afternoon. The donation will be combined with $3,000 in local funds to pay for a new entrance sign at the airport. (Reflector Photo by Cliff Hollis)

Airport Will Get New Sign

A $4,000 contribution from the Greenville-Pitt Board of Realtors has been instrumental in putting an end to Pitt-Greenville Airport's seven-year wait for a new entrance sign.

The donation and $3,000 in local funding today was committed for the purchase of the new sign, according to James G. Turcotte, airport manager. The lighted sign will be 20 feet tall and 7½ feet wide and is expected to be in place in about six weeks.

The Board of Realtor's Women's Council and its Make America Better subcommittee raised the money for the project by conducting a fashion show, sales and other events.

The realtor's contribution facilitated the sign acquisition, according to Turcotte.

"We've been working toward obtaining a new entrance sign for the past seven years, but funding wasn't available," he said. "The contribution from the Greenville-Pitt Board of Realtors certainly made it easier to secure the additional local funding needed."

The airport's current sign was constructed by a masonry class at Pitt Technical Institute in 1965.

Benefit Showing

"The Fat Boys In The Disorderlies" will be presented Thursday at the Buccaneer Theater with admission being a penny a pound first-come-first-serve. Doors open at 8 p.m. and the show begins at 9 p.m.

Funding Renewed

Gov. Jim Martin has announced renewal of funding totaling more than $701,000 to provide education programs and activities to enhance the knowledge and skills of obstetrical neonatal care providers throughout the state.

The funding is from the N.C. Department of Human Resources' Division of Health Services.

Martin said that in 1985, out of 100 lives births in North Carolina, 8.1 were premature, with the infants weighing less than 5 pounds, 8 ounces.

Among the grants renewed were one to the East Carolina University School of Medicine's Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology for $52,165 and one to the School of Medicine's Department of Pediatrics for $54,543.

Grants Awarded

The Pitt County Family Violence Program has been awarded Victims of Crime Assistance funding totaling $40,527, marking the second year the program has received the award.

The program has also received a grant from the Chicago Resource Center for $6,000.

The money will be used to cover operating expenses for the program and for its Family Shelter.

The purpose of the Family Violence Program, which has been in operation for three years, is to assist abused women and their children. It offers crisis counseling, temporary shelter, information and referrals to community resources, support groups for women and men, court companion service, magistrate companion service, and 24-hour crisis line.

In the first six months of 1987, the program received 2,417 calls for information and crisis support. It has sheltered 133 women and children.

Meeting Scheduled

The Pitt County Branch of the NAACP will meet with black elected officials and aspirants today from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. at Sycamore Hill Baptist Church.

Permit Issued

The Greenville Police Department has granted a solicitation permit to Winterville Free Will Baptist Church allowing fund raising on Friday and Saturday for a building fund.

JOHN LENNOX

MARY ANN ROSE

GRIFF GARNER

United Way Divisional Leaders Named

Three local volunteers have been named vice chairmen for divisions of the 1987 Pitt County United Way fund-raising drive.

Mary Ann Rose will serve as the head of the Public and Academics, State Employees, Special Gifts and County divisions of the campaign; John Lennox will lead the Industrial Division, and Griff Garner will be in charge of the Commercial, Service and Business divisions of the drive.

Ms. Rose serves as assistant to the chancellor for Special Assignments and director of Equal Opportunity Programs at East Carolina University. She also is an associate professor of nursing and teaches nursing courses at ECU.

She has been a member of the board of directors of Hospice and of the Creative Living Center, as well as participating in the 1987 fund raising drive for the Pitt-Greenville Arts Council.

She is married to Dr. Walter Pories and has two children and four stepchildren.

Lennox is manager of the Chemical Analysis Laboratories in the Quality Assurance Division of Burroughs Wellcome. Originally from Savannah, Ga., he previously worked at the University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill and the University of Arkansas.

He has worked in Burroughs Wellcome's United Way campaigns and with the Industrial Campaign for the Pitt County United Way over the past five years.

Lennox, his wife, Sharyn, and their two children have lived in the Greenville area since 1980.

Garner, president of Garner Wholesale Merchandisers Inc. and Computer Displays Inc., served as chairman for the Commercial Division for the 1984 United Way Campaign, led the Business Division in 1986 and served as a member of the Allocations Committee.

He has served as president of the Boys Club of Pitt County and is 1987-1988 president of the Greenville City Kiwanis Club. He is the 1987 recipient of the Jaycees Distinguished Service Award for this area.

He and his wife, Christie, have three children and are members of St. James United Methodist Church.

Leaking Gas Kills Two S.C. Workers

NORTH MYRTLE BEACH, S.C. (AP) — City officials expressed shock after the deaths of the North Myrtle Beach public works director and a wastewater treatment plant supervisor who were overcome by gas in a manhole.

Mike Singleton, 27, the wastewater treatment plant supervisor, had gone into a manhole at the plant to sample water Tuesday when he died of the fumes, said Horry County Coroner Gene Johnson.

Public Works Director Robert Alford heard a splash and went in to help Singleton, Johnson said. Alford, 38, also was overcome, and died within an hour at Grand Strand General Hospital.

A third man was slightly injured when he tried to help the first two men at about 11:30 a.m., officials said.

None of the men wore gas masks and the Occupational Health and Safety Administration will investigate to determine if state regulations were violated.

Hydrogen sulfide gas, formed naturally in wastewater treatment plants, is believed to have caused the deaths.

"There were heroic actions displayed by Bob Alford and Ralph Norris," said North Myrtle Beach Mayor Dick Hester. "It's a very tragic and sad day for the city of North Myrtle Beach."

Alford could tell the fumes were bad and pushed a third city worker, Ralph Norris, out of the hole, Johnson said.

"Bob (Alford) managed to push him (Norris) back and told him to get out of the hole," Hester said. "The gas was too strong to contend with."

Norris, 33, was treated at Grand Strand General Hospital for gas inhalation and released.

Energy Award

Pitt County has been chosen for "The Extra Effort Award" given by the North Carolina Energy Division for outstanding efficiency in energy use.

State Commerce Secretary Claude E. Pope said Pitt took top honors among North Carolina communities with a population of over 50,000 with savings of $7,641 on its 1986 energy bills, compared to 1985 energy use.

In a statewide accounting program, the State Energy Division divided participating communities into categories by population.

Pitt County attributed savings in energy costs primarily to weatherizing the county's building and making employees energy conscious.

Ward Parker, Pitt County assistant finance officer, also read of an energy saving device used by Catawba County and found that Pitt County could use the method. Under that plan, timers were installed on stoves at the Pitt County Jail so that stoves were automatically turned off and on by the scheduled times when they were used. In addition to saving energy, stove elements were found to burn out less frequently.

MASONIC NOTICE

There will be a stated communication of Crown Point Lodge 708 at 7:30 p.m. Thursday.

Council To Meet

Five annexations head the list of items to be considered by the Greenville City Council at its monthly meeting Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in the third floor council chambers of City Hall.

The council will conduct public hearings on requests to annex Quail Ridge, Section 8, located on Quail Ridge Road, and Medical Oaks subdivision, located off the eastern right-of-way of state road 1203, north of Cornerstone Missionary Baptist Church.

Council members will also conduct public hearings on the annexation of Lindbeth Grove, Section 2, Phase I, located off the southern right-of-way of N.C. 13, Heritage Village subdivision, Section 5, located off Tiffany and Wellons drives, and Charles D. and Gloria Woodard property, located on the eastern right-of-way of N.C. 43, east of Jehovah's Witness Church.

The panel will consider a request by Marvin K. Blount Jr. to rezone 9.76 acres located off the eastern right-of-way of Evans Street extension and west of Bedford subdivision, Section II, from medium density residential and office and institutional to high density residential, high density single family residential and office and institutional.

A request by the Planning and Zoning Commission to rezone .619 acres located off the western right-of-way N.C. 11 and north of Greenfield Boulevard to office and institutional will also be discussed.

The council will conduct a public hearing on a request by Rufus Walston to amend the Zoning Ordinance by allowing child day care centers as a permitted use in the office and institutional-II zoning classification.

Council members will consider ordinances amending the 1986-87 Greenville Utilities Commission budget and the Electric Capital Project Fund, a resolution scheduling a public hearing on the proposed annexation of Westhaven subdivision, Section 8, located south of Whichport development and east of Woodhaven Road, and the establishment of rate of extraterritorial fire protection for 1987-88

The council will consider acceptance of a report from the purchasing agent on surplus property sold, a request to amend the definition of limousine in the City Code to allow 15 passengers and a request by Dependable Cab Co. to operate two additional taxicabs.

Other matters to be addresed include a speed limit on Maple Street, a supplement to the City Code, sale of a disposal parcel, tax releases and privelege license refunds, appointments to boards and commissions and streets for permanent city maintenence.

Men Accepted

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Queens College, a 130-year-old Presbyterian college for women, will begin admitting men as resident students next year, Queens board of trustees' Chairman Bill Lee says.

The action, approved Tuesday by trustees, was announced in conjunction with plans to strengthen the academic program, upgrade academic standards, increase enrollment and boost faculty salaries.

Male students aren't new to Queens. The school enrolled its first full-time male day students in 1946, according to a history of the school.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Confidence Crisis

A crisis of confidence in the nation's airlines system may be just over the horizon. Part of the problem is attributable to growth of the system. It has doubled over earlier expectations. That, in turn led to rising complaints over lost luggage, flight delays and other irritants in the service sector.

Passenger safety fears have been fanned in recent months with accounts of near-misses by aircraft in flight and even on the runways. Stories include a wheel falling off a landing gear, wing-flap malfunctions, a baggage-handler accidentally locked in the luggage department of a departing jetliner; landings on the wrong runway (or at the wrong airport); straying off-course; a pilot's switching off both engines of his aircraft (he was able to restart them in time to avoid a tragedy).

Members of Congress have been complaining that ever since President Reagan fired 11,000 air traffic controllers during their 1981 strike there have been too few workers in the control towers. Periodically we get reminders that, while the number of flights have mushroomed, the number of air controllers still does not equal the number employed at the time of the firings.

People close to the scene say the stress of increased airport traffic on the smaller number of controllers poses a safety hazard. The Department of Transportation's budget usually starts off with a request for funds to increase the number of air controllers, but the DOT budget comes under fire as much too high because of its pork barrel quality, and the air controller sums suffer accordingly.

The new chief of lthe Federal Aviation Administration (T.A. McArtor) says the air transportation system is fundamentally safe and the agency would try to reduce delays by creating several routes for planes to take between busy cities and carrier management was put on notice to comply with maintenance obligations and to meet terms of their operating certificates or they will not operate in the national airspace.

McAtor also warned flight crews if they were not medically qualified, not drug-free, not technically professional or cannot demonstrate their skills, they will not fly in the national airspace.

The FAA has already begun a top-to-bottom review of pilot training, and, as usual, funds for more air controllers are in the budget.

All this comes at a time when we in Pitt County are eyeing with enthusiasm the growth of our own fledgling entry in the air transportation field. Its growth has been notable and air safety is more important than ever to us now.

The head man is talking a good game but if Congress and the administration do not do their part, it will be only that. Just talk.

Service Resumed

It has taken almost eight months but EastCare air ambulance service from Pitt County Memorial Hospital is virtually back to normal.

The service was suspended following the disasterous crash of Jan. 8 while the safety of the operation was assessed. The service was resumed on a 12 hour per day basis on April 10. It has been operating on that basis since while new staff members were being employed and trained. Now the time has come when there will be 10 flight nurses and the helicoptor ambulance can be operated around the clock.

Officials said, while 20 calls were answered in July, 26 calls were turned down because they came between 7 p.m. and 7 a.m. It is expected that the volume of calls will soon return to the number prior to Jan. 8.

EastCare has been viewed as a source of comfort as it lifted off from the hospital on its missions of mercy. There was a good feeling to know that it was available in times of life threatening situations. The helicoptor was not seen at all for a time earlier this year. Then it was operated only during daylight hours.

Now the mercy vehicle will be available to go whenever it is needed. Eastern North Carolina is a region which has many areas where emergency medical service is not readily available. Its geography means many rural areas are isolated from an advanced care facility — a fact which makes it difficult to get medical care.

Ground transportation can require valuable time when quick medical attention is needed. EastCare provides the rapid transportation that is often needed in medical emergencies and carries the life support systems and personnel that sometimes are essential to saving lives.

It is good to see the helicoptor back at full service.

Public Forum

To the editor:

A recent letter in the Public Forum made derogatory comments about India, its people and its leaders.

Violence and terrorism in the name of religion and to further political ends has been and still is prevalent throughout the world. It should be condemned by all civilized people. Those who only condemn terrorism when it affects the members of their religious, racial or political group, but keep silent, make excuses or condone it when it is the members of their religious, racial or political group that commit terrorism against others, perpetuate the vicious cycle of violence. Terrorists exist among all nationalities and religious groups. There are terrorists among Moslems, Hindus, Sikhs, Christians and other groups. It is grossly unfair to condemn the whole community or the nation for the criminal acts of a few.

India is a multi-religious secular nation like the United States. Each religious group has freedom to practice its faith. Highest offices in the government and military are open to capable individuals of all religions. The Constitution of India was inspired by the ideals of the U.S. Constitution. In spite of multitudes of problems, India is the only major true democracy in Asia. India has the tradition of holding fair elections for the states and the federal government. This is in sharp contrast to Pakistan, which is a theocratic, military dictatorship. India has been trying to resolve regional differences by negotiations. Just recently, the Indian government signed an agreement with the government of Sri Lanka to resolve peacefully the ethnic conflict in Sri Lanka.

The Indian community in Greenville consists of Hindus, Moslems, Sikhs and Christians. We are proud of our heritage, and we seek to promote friendship and understanding with other communities and nationalities. We try not to let the differences between governments interfere with friendly interaction between people.

To the editor:

Regarding a letter by John G. Clark Jr. in the July 22 Public Forum:

Mr. Clark, I admire you and commend you for coming to the defense of 15-year-old Leon Brown. I agree with your position wholeheartedly. However, I take exception with and am greatly offended by your use of the word "wretch" which you use in your opening sentence. You said and I quote, "Can it be that this great state, in all its majesty and righteousness arisen will slay a mentally retarded wretch who committed murder at the age of 15?"

The time has long since passed when society should realize that mentally retarded people and mentally ill people are not wretches. They are human beings with feelings just like everyone else. The same precious life-sustaining blood that flows through your veins flows through theirs.

Perhaps this did not reflect the letter writer's own personal opinion, but rather he was referring to society's view of these individuals as wretches. I do not know what he had in mind. I do know that one of the definitions that Webster's gives for wretch is "a despised, scorned person." While it is true that mentally impaired persons are despised and scorned by many, I contend that they were not born "wretches." It is unfeeling, uncaring, cruel and prejudiced people who make "wretches" with their ridicule and scorn, with thier intolerance and indifference. These good and noble souls have a difficult enough time making their way in this world without being referred to or thought of as wretches or some other derogatory term.

I believe that this was probably just an unfortunate choice of words on his part, but still it is disturbing.

Remember one and all, there but for the grace of God go you. Love thy brother as theyself. Wretches and wretched are we all who do not heed and obey this great commandement.

Glasnost Boon To Jewish Emigration

WASHINGTON — As an apparent offshoot of the new Soviet policy of "glasnost," or openness, Jewish emigration from the Soviet Union has risen sharply and, at the current rate, more than 6,000 Jews are expected to emigrate this year — six times the number who left last year.

And beyond the rising number of Jews who are leaving each month there are signs that glasnost is being extended to Jews who remain in the Soviet Union.

However, the Jewish emigration rate is still far short of the high-water mark of 1979, when more than 51,000 emigrated. New rules that took effect Jan. 1 may prevent emigration from reaching that mark again any time soon.

"Don't applaud yet," Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev cautioned Secretary of State George P. Shultz in April after outlining his plans to enhance human rights in the Soviet Union.

Americans are not applauding. "We're entitled to a certain skepticism," said Frank C. Carlucci, President Reagan's national security adviser.

Nonetheless, one Israeli official who asked not to be identified said the increased rate of Jewish emigration suggested that Gorbachev was seeking to dispel the world's image of the Soviet Union as a country behind bars.

There are many signs that Gorbachev's new emigration policies are making their mark:

—Among those getting exit visas this year are refuseniks of long standing whose existence had been unknown in the West. They were not on a list of 11,000 refuseniks — those refused exit visas — given to the Soviets by Shultz in December. Freeing those individuals is considered especially significant because their cases could have been covered up by the Soviets if they chose.

—All but one of the so-called "prisoners of conscience" — two dozen Jews jailed on pretexts after applying to emigrate — have been released from prison. The last one, Alexei Magarik, is due to be freed in September.

—The Soviet press can now deal extensively with emigration and with Jewish culture and folklore.

—Soviet citizens will be able to visit abroad more easily, with former Soviet Jews who now live in Israel or the United States allowed to invite their relatives for a visit. U.S. officials are seeking to learn if this change will lead to de facto emigration.

—Other national and ethnic groups also have more freedom to leave the Soviet Union. Emigration of ethnic Germans has jumped to an annual rate of more than 7,800, more than 10 times last year's figure and close to the peak of 9,704 in 1976.

Gorbachev's new policy, which is coupled with a drive to make the Soviet Union more attractive to Jews and other minorities, strives not only to make minorities inside the country more content but also to woo back some who have already left.

Yuri V. Dubinin, the Soviet ambassador to the United States, said during a recent breakfast interview at the Los Angeles Times' Washington Bureau that more than 100 Jews who were granted exit visas this year changed their minds about leaving. And some who had emigrated returned earlier this year in a much-publicized airlift from New York City.

Already there are signs that the number of Jewish emigrants will start declining again soon. Rules that took effect Jan. 1 restrict those who may apply to leave for purposes of family reunification to parents and children; previously reunification might have been considered even for distant cousins.

At the same time, the new rules hold the potential for greater emigration if the Soviet Union and Israel complete their current efforts to re-establish diplomatic relations. The final clause in the new regulations states that the restrictions may be waived through nation-to-nation agreements.

Glasnost is a slogan that has been used at various times since the Crimean War of the 1850s. Gorbachev's aim, said Peter Reddaway of the Kennan Institute, is to "mobilize the creative Soviet intelligentsia" to help reform the Soviet economic and political system.

Gorbachev has a long way to go before the Soviet Union again becomes a place for equal opportunity for Jews. Jews still appear barred from the best higher education institutions and from senior levels of the Communist Party.

Strength For Today

Tennyson, in one of his poems, speaks of our being "Dowered with the hate of hate, the scorn of scorn, the love of love."

In other words, we should not hate individuals, but instead that passion of hatred which leads us to bitter and malicious feelings against our fellows.

As far as scorn is concerned, Tennyson pictures the ideal man as a person filled with scorn of the disposition to speak bitterly of other people.

"Dowered with love of love." Here Tennyson is referring to those few choice souls in the world who are not asking to be loved but are seeking individuals or causes upon which they can shower their own love.

Oman Mine Threat Rattles Gulf Region Turbulence Anew

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — The mysterious appearance of mines in waters outside the Persian Gulf has dramatically raised the stakes in the tense region, and given impetus to the creation of something resembling a multinational minesweeping force.

The mines also present new difficulties for the gulf's Arab states, which have tried to stay neutral in the 7-year-old conflict between Iraq and Iran. The Arab states fear antagonizing Iran, as two of their number — Kuwait and Saudi Arabia — already have done.

The floating menace came to light when the U.S.-operated supertanker Texaco Caribbean struck a mine in the Gulf of Oman's offshore ship anchorage on Monday. The explosion sent shock waves through shipping and oil industries already frazzled by 3½ years of "tanker war" in the Persian Gulf.

An Omani navy scout helicopter reported Tuesday that it had spotted three more mines and a ship's crew discovered a fourth.

Not the least rattled were seamen on other ships anchored nearby, who heard the blast when the Texaco Caribbean hit the mine.

Shipping sources said some crews expressed concern about moving their ships. However, within 24 hours, 33 of the 57 tankers and bulk carriers in the anchorage had weighed anchor and left.

"There's a little bit of panic out there," said one shipping official.

Iran was immediately suspected of being behind the mines, especially because the United States is using the Oman anchorage to assemble convoys of reflagged Kuwaiti tankers and their Navy escorts.

But shipping experts differed as to whether the mines could have floated into the area or been moored surreptitously. Some experts even speculated an explosive could have been attached to the Texaco tanker while it was loading at Iran's Larak Island terminal on Sunday.

Analysis

The target area, a vast offshore parking lot covering perhaps 600 square miles of Arabian Sea, is home to scores of tankers and other vessels on any given day.

It is the main staging center for ships transferring oil cargoes at sea or moving to and from the Persian Gulf. The Strait of Hormuz, the gateway to the gulf, is 30 miles to the north.

Shippers say a mine threat in the Gulf of Oman could force shippers to use harbors farther down the coast, at considerable expense in sailing time and oney.

The mines also could deliver an economic blow to the United Arab Emirates ports of Fujairah and Khor Fakkan, whose shipping supply and replenishment services are major local industries.

The U.A.E. has maintained a neutral stance in the Iran-Iraq war. Any actions it takes on its outer seacoast might trigger terrorist revenge or a response from Iran, little more than a missile shot across the gulf.

Kuwait has already incurred Iran's wrath by appearing to tilt toward Iraq, and Saudi Arabia is immersed in a bitter dispute with Tehran over recent bloody riots in Mecca. Washington agreed to reflag Kuwaiti tankers to protect them from Iran's attacks.

"By any measure, Iran is a regional superpower and the Arab states don't consider themselves immune from its retribution," said an Arab diplomat, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The United States dispatched minesweeping helicopters after the government of Oman, the reclusive sultanate overlooking the Straits of Hormuz, appealed for help in searching for explosives along the coast it shares with the U.A.E., diplomatic sources said.

Within hours, Britain and France announced plans to send minesweepers to the area.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger told reporters in Washington that he "would hope we could look forward to an international minesweeping force" to clear the gulf.

Britain and France took pains to distance themselves from the idea of such a force.

In London, Defense Secretary George Younger said the four British minesweepers would protect the four warships of the Persian Gulf-based "Armilla patrol" which escorts British commercial shipping.

France's defense minister, Andre Giraud, said the two French minesweepers would "reinforce" a naval squadron already on hand.

Legislators Eye 'Pork Barrel' Projects For New State Budget

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Legislative leaders prepared to roll out the long-awaited "pork barrel" today, as finishing touches were put on a bill to spend $306.5 million on capital projects and another $83 million on grants to local organizations.

The Joint Appropriations Committee was scheduled to meet this morning for the unveiling of the pork barrel, which will allocate some $70,000 to the district of every senator requesting funds and $40,000 for each favored House district.

Meanwhile, the panel endorsed a supplemental 1987-89 spending bill doling out some $83 million for grants to "non-governmental agencies" ranging from cultural centers to libraries to volunteer fire departments.

And the House and Senate approved slightly different versions of the capital improvements bill. The House delayed until today a vote on whether to accept Senate amendments or reject them and force creation of a joint conference committee to resolve the differences.

One of the amendments, which would redirect some $442,000 allocated to Gaston College, was rejected earlier by the House and could be a point of controversy that would hold up enactment of the bill.

The Joint Appropriations Committee gave overwhelming approval to the "aid to non-state entities" package — dozens of expenditures ranging from $18 million for a "supercomputer" for the Research Triangle Park to $1,500 apiece for dispute settlement centers in Orange and Chatham counties.

The package also contains $21.5 million for water and sewer system improvements, which will be added to a revolving loan and grant fund given Senate approval last week. With the latest appropriation, the fund will total $101.3 million, including $44 million in federal aid.

As is usually the case, the "non-state entities" bill — while described as a statewide funding measure — includes money for numerous local agencies and groups as well.

Whistles and murmurs were heard in the large committee room as House Appropriations Chairman Billy Watkins, D-Granville, announced that $9.5 million would go to Charlotte on a matching basis for a new performing arts center.

But Sen. Aaron Plyler, D-Union, chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, said the center was not regarded as a local enterprise.

"Not only Charlotte, but the whole of North Carolina deserves that much for a performing arts center ...," he said. "I hope the 1989 General Assembly will look at it very favorably and go ahead and appropriate the $5.5 million" requested for the center.

Plyler said legislative leaders were emphasizing state-local partnerships by requiring that local governments match or double state allocations.

"The state wants to get out into the local communities and ... assist in some funding for these cultural centers," he said, adding that he had no qualms about spending state money on art and cultural projects when there were so many pressing human-service needs.

Other local recipients of state grants were local culture and art centers, community theaters, libraries, shelters for battered women, substance abuse programs, courthouses, volunteer fire departments and rescue squads and dispute settlement centers.

Among the grants:

— $5 million to the Rural Economic Development Center to assist local governments of economically depressed counties.

— $2 million to Durham for construction of permanent facilities for the American Dance Festival.

— $100,000 to the North Carolina Shakespeare Festival for a tour of the state to perform plays.

— $3 million for grants to every public library system in the state.

— $3 million to Asheville for construction of "Pack Place," an art and science center.

The package was compiled by Plyler and Watkins, who consulted with other Democratic leaders and picked from among hundreds of funding bills requested by individual lawmakers and state agencies.

Governor Interrupts Vacation

RALEIGH (AP) — Republican Gov. Jim Martin cut short his Caribbean sailing trip to rush home for the final days of the legislative session, but a Democratic leader says he's too late to have much influence before adjournment.

"It's about over," House Speaker Liston Ramsey said after learning Martin had arrived in Raleigh late Tuesday afternoon. He departed for the Virgin Islands on Aug. 1 with his family and had not planned to return until this weekend.

Martin flew home aboard a commercial jetliner and immediately began telephoning legislators to lobby for his budget priorities and other pending measures, his press secretary, Tim Pittman, said.

"It's getting to be the end of the session, and there are issues he was interested in," Pittman said. "Also, in the last few days there is the potential for hurried legislation that would not be in the best interest of the state."

Pittman denied Martin's decision was influenced by criticism he has received from members of both parties. Published reports have quoted Republican legislators as complaining that Martin's absence deprived them of their leader at a crucial time.

Ken Eudy, executive director of the state Democratic Party, said at a Monday news conference that Martin should have postponed his trip as many lawmakers had done.

"I just hope he is not too sunburned to go under the TV lights," Eudy said Tuesday after Martin's return was announced.

Senate GOP Leader Larry Cobb, R-Mecklenburg, defended Martin. "I don't think he was wrong to leave last week," Cobb said. "I think it was appropriate for him to return now, since it looks like we're about to wrap up."

Pittman said Martin had communicated "almost daily" with his office since his departure.

"When he left, the Legislature was moving so slowly that it seemed likely they'd still be here when he got back," Pittman said. But legislative leaders are pushing for a Thursday adjournment, and Martin decided early Monday he should be on hand, Pittman said.

"He wants to be part lobbyist, part watchdog and part issuer of congratulations," Pittman said.

Joint Panel Compromises On Local Revenue Package

RALEIGH (AP) — Removing one of the last obstacles to adjournment this week, legislative leaders have compromised on a revenue package for local governments built around a 5½ percent increase in the excise tax on liquor.

"This is a good compromise," Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, said after a House-Senate conference committee concluded a lengthy negotiating session around 9 p.m. Tuesday.

In accordance with legislative rules, the House and Senate were to cast separate votes on the plan today and Thursday. If the bill is approved and remaining budget votes go off without a hitch, adjournment may come Thursday as scheduled.

The tax bill was inspired by local government officials' plea for relief from a 1985-86 session law ordering them to boost retirement benefits for law enforcement officers.

Eventually, the plan could generate up to $33.2 million for the purpose, according to Rauch and Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, co-chairmen of the conference committee.

The compromise bill would:

— Increase the excise tax on liquor from 22½ percent of the price to 28 percent, effective Oct. 1. The tax would raise $15.5 million that would go to the state.

— Require that sales taxes be levied at the point of sale when the product is bought in one county, then shipped to the buyer in another.

Because current law allows sales taxes to be collected at the point of delivery for such sales, the tax frequently goes unpaid, Rauch said. This costs counties some $18.5 million per year that would be collected under the bill. Of that, 60 percent would go to the state and 40 percent to local governments.

Half the revenue for counties would be allocated under a population-based formula that would benefit rural counties. The other half would be divided among each county according to how much each generated.

— Establish a legislative committee that will study whether, as the House recommends, the 2 percent local-option sales tax should be abolished in favor of a 2 percent increase in the state sales tax, now 3 percent.

In effect, this change would have the state collect all sales taxes instead of having state and local governments share the chore. Supporters say this would produce another $4 million to $5 million per year by inceasing efficiency.

Senate Backs Auto Insurance Changes

RALEIGH (AP) — Insurance premiums for safe drivers could rise by 1 to 2 percent over the next five years under a bill approved by the Senate, but the measure would keep other drivers from acquiring insurance points for some tickets and accidents.

In answer to questions Tuesday, Sen. Mary Seymour, D-Guilford, said the bill could provide premium increases for safe drivers, but makes the auto insurance system more fair by spreading surcharges now charged only to drivers with tickets among all drivers.

"This bill provides balance, and provides equity in our insurance laws," said Ms. Seymour. "More people should turn to private insurance and it should reduce the costs of reinsurance facility (for drivers with traffic violations)."

The bill was presented as a compromise plan, but sparked a flurry of amendments — most of which will further shrink the number of drivers facing surcharges for tickets or accidents.

Sen. Joe Johnson, D-Wake, offered an amendment that would prevent insurance companies from charging points against drivers who receive a prayer for judgement continued on a traffic charge. That touched off a round of debate between lawyers and insurance agents in the Senate.

"I think what this bill does is try to establish the concept of fairness," Johnson said. "This amendment says that a driver would not be assessed points if a judge decided a sentence is not appropriate."

Ms. Seymour said she opposed the amendment because it could cause an increase in rates. Sen. Don Kincaid, R-Caldwell, and Sen. Jim McDuffie, R-Mecklenburg — both insurance agents — said the amendment would further erode the number of people paying surcharges in the reinsurance facility.

"One purpose of the bill is to correct an unfair point system," Kincaid said. "This is one of the best insurance bills ever considered by this body. But I sincerely believe this amendment will crowd the courts and will discriminate against poor people who don't know to go out and get a lawyer so they can get a PJC."

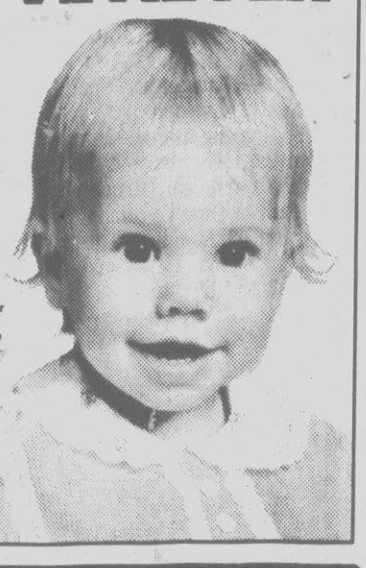

The Senate voted 33-10 to approve the amendment.

IN THE STATE

State Says Roadside Flowers Will Be A Fixture

By The Associated Press

The athletes, spectators and hoopla from U.S. Olympic Festival-'87 are gone, but the flowers used to dress up roadways around festival events may prove to be marathon performers.

State officials say the flowers will remain in the medians and interchanges by popular demand, though their color and form will be different in the future.

"The response to the flowers was just tremendous," W.D. Johnson, head of the landscaping unit for the state Department of Transportation, said Tuesday.

Transportation Department crews planted 636,000 flowers — mostly red, white and blue-purple petunias — to welcome the spectators and athletes to the games.

"We have gotten tremendous amounts of letters," Johnson said. "We have gotten telephone calls. Our board members have received comments."

In all, the state planted 21 acres of flowers on Interstate 40 in the Research Triangle and Greensboro areas, including a spectacular spread on the banks of the I-40 and N.C. 68 interchange near the Greensboro-High Point-Winston-Salem Airport.

The Department of Transportation spent about $450,000 in public and private funds to plant shrubs, trees and flowers for the festival. The department expects the cost of maintaining the flowers to be substantially less than that.

The response to the flowers has further persuaded highway landscapers to go in a new beautification direction.

In the past, highways were landscaped with trees and shrubs like those found in adjacent woods. The idea was to blend the highway with the natural landscape. Flowers rarely entered the decoration scheme.

Now, landscapers are discovering that the public wants color.

"We are going to go more toward flowering plants," Johnson said. "We are in the flower business now."

The extra acres cultivated for festival flowers will continue to be maintained.

POW Balloon

RALEIGH (AP) — Next month, Robin Owen Bell of Fuquay-Varina hopes to release a helium-filled balloon in Thailand that will float into Laos with an offer of a $2.4 million reward for the return of a live American prisoner of war.

Mrs. Bell, 26, says she and 10 to 15 other relatives of soldiers missing in Laos hope to launch helium-filled balloons from the bank of the Mekong River Sept. 18, national Prisoner of War-Missing in Action Remembrance Day.

The ballooons will bear fliers in Laotian, Vietnamese and Thai offering the reward.

Mrs. Bell, co-chairman of the American League of Families of POWs in Laos, said she has been selling POW T-shirts at malls to raise $2,000 she needs to make the trip.

Manager Resigns

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Forsyth County Manager Pete Jenkins has resigned after 10 years.

After accepting the resignation Tuesday night, the commissioners named Graham Pervier, who has been associate county manager since April 1980, to succeed Jenkins.

The commissioners met in executive session Aug. 6 and twice Monday to discuss "personnel under the jurisdiction of the county commissioners."

Jenkins, 56, has been county manager since 1977. A native of Greensboro, he was the Union County manager from 1965-74 and the Stanly County manager from 1974-76.

Pervier, 40, has been the Currituck County manager and Beaufort County manager.

Superintendent

WILSON, N.C. (AP)— Thomas E. Dixon has been hired as superintendent of the Wilson County Schools.

The 39-year-old Durham County high school principal will begin his new duties Sept. 1. He replaces W.O. Fields Jr., who retired in June.

Youth Dies

WILSON, N.C. (AP)— A 12-year-old Wilson youth died late Monday afternoon after being shot in the head.

Wilson Police Detective Joe Bass said Cameron Gene Bennett was at the home of a friend when the shooting occurred. The youth died about three hours after being sent to Pitt County Memorial Hospital for treatment.

Wilson Police Capt. R.J. Pittman said officers believe the shooting was accidental.

Field Test

KINSTON, N.C. (AP) — About 15 Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service employees from seven counties and local extension agents met Tuesday to see the effects of dicamba on a test tobacco plot.

Dicamba is a herbicide illegal for use on tobacco, and the U.S. Department of Agriculture is cracking down on the use of the chemical to make tobacco appear ripe.

The test plot at the Lower Coastal Plains Tobacco Research Station was used to help ASCS officers learn to recognize dicamba use so the tests can be conducted in harvested fields at the end of the season.

ASCS is requiring farmers to leave their tobacco stalks standing in the field for two weeks after harvest to allow time for the tests.

Home Schools

RALEIGH (AP) — A bill that would bring home schools under state regulation won final House approval Tuesday after it was amended to clear up when pupils taught at home would be tested.

The bill, which gained tentative approval Saturday, won final passage 59-18 and was sent to the Senate.

The measure would require that parents of the 1,600 to 1,800 children educated at home register their "schools" with the Division of Non-Public Education in the governor's office.

HERMIT'S SHACK — Some of John McCarty's cats run across the yard in front of the shack where he and his 9-year-old son have lived since 1984 near Hubbardton, Vt. Police found the boy, who had been reported missing seven years ago in a custody dispute, when they went to arrest his father on a charge of using false names on driver's licenses. (AP Laserphoto)

Police Looking For Driver Find Boy Missing 7 Years

By JOHN DONNELLY
Associated Press Writer

HUBBARDTON, Vt. (AP) — A 9-year-old snatched by his father seven years ago lived with him in a filthy shack on a dead-end road with a bathtub for a bed and bucket for a toilet before officers found him in a raid, authorities said.

Mosie McCarty had been the object of a nationwide search, but officers didn't know the boy lived there before they converged on the shack July 27 to arrest his father on charges of using false names on motor vehicle records.

"We thought we were on to one of the country's most wanted criminals," said Rutland County Sheriff Lee Jones. "Who else would change his name four, five times to hide a child? One change would have done it."

Jones said the boy, who lived in the one-room wood and cement shack for three years, did not know his middle or last names, his date of birth or his mother's name. His father, John McCarty, did not send him to school.

JOHN McCARTY

The nearest neighbor in this town of 490 residents 25 miles northwest of Rutland was a half-mile away.

The shack had a refrigerator, stove and television powered by a generator, but no running water. The boy slept in a bathtub, police said.

"I've been to my share of hunting camps, so I know what they're like. But there's no reason to be as filthy dirty as he was," Jones said.

McCarty, 39, has pleaded innocent to custodial interference for allegedly abducting the boy in California, and to a charge of using false names in registering his vehicles. The state has put the boy in a foster home.

The boy's mother, Pat Gilmartin of Sussex Borough, N.J., was awarded custody of Mosie by a court in Newton, N.J., seven years ago, according to court papers. She declined comment after a closed-door custody hearing Tuesday.

Lawyers also declined to comment because of state confidentiality laws, but McCarty said that no decision had been reached and that he wanted his son back.

"I love my son," he said. "The police make me out to look like Charles Manson or something, but I love the kid and I've done everything I could for the kid."

He added, "I'm perfectly willing to change my lifestyle so the mother can see him as long as he is returned to live with me."

McCarty, who said he has two years of college, contends he had taught his son at home. In a bookshelf in the shack Tuesday were a set of encyclopedias and books on chemistry, the Civil War and electronics.

"I would bet even money that my son would do better on a geography test than half of the graduating seniors at Rutland High School," he said.

Asked about his aliases, McCarty said, "It was to protect my serenity."

McCarty bought the shack and small parcel of land in 1984, according to town records.

"We called him the hermit," Judy Aungst, co-owner of a country store, said Tuesday. "We assumed he lived alone. Every day he would buy one sandwich and I would heat it for him and he would sit on the bucket outside and eat it."

She said she didn't know his name until the police raid. "He's a quiet man, but he's very polite and nice," she said.

McCarty's nearest neighbor, Willard Gibbs, 78, who lives in a trailer on 114 acres surrounding McCarty's property, said McCarty drove by nearly every day but that they had exchanged words only twice.

"He's one you don't talk to," Gibbs said. "He's not very friendly." He said he rarely saw the boy.

Deputy Sheriff Daniel Boyce said investigators have no evidence that McCarty has worked since he moved to Vermont three years ago.

Boyce said he began to investigate McCarty nearly two years ago after a confrontation with him deep in the Hubbardton woods while the deputy was checking out reports of illegal deer hunting.

Boyce said he began to check McCarty's license plates and found that he changed them every few months, each time registering under a different name.

FAA Checking Two More Reports Of Near Collisions

By The Associated Press

A jetliner with 83 people aboard made a hard turn to avoid hitting a small plane, a single-engine plane came within a few feet of a corporate jet, and five tires blew out on a Concorde in a bumpy landing, officials said.

No one was injured in Tuesday's incidents, which occurred respectively in Los Angeles, Chicago and New York City.

The two near-collisions were under investigation by the Federal Aviation Administration.

Among the 93 passengers on the Concorde were singer Engelbert Humperdinck and Mark Thatcher, the son of British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, the New York Post reported today.

Five of the Concorde's 10 tires blew out as the supersonic jet touched down at New York's Kennedy Airport. The blowouts occurred on both sides of the plane, said British Airways spokeswoman Deborah Bernstein.

Humperdinck told the newspaper he said a prayer during the bumpy landing.

"It looked like we only had a short distance to go before the marshland when the plane was brought to a halt. ... It was scary," he said. "With the skill of the pilot and the guidance of God we made it safely."

At Los Angeles International Airport, an American Airlines Boeing 737 on landing approach made a "violent turn" to avoid an unidentified aircraft that came within 100 feet, said Dick Hallen, an FAA duty officer.

"The captain looked up and saw the bottom of a small aircraft passing in front of him," said airline spokesman Russell Mack.

Virginia Akre, a passenger on the jet, said: "First it dropped. Then it lurched to the side. It happened so fast."

"He finally righted the plane. Everyone was in shock," she said. "It happened over a populated area. If we would have crashed, we would have hit all those homes."

"I was petrified," added Cathy Karpow, a passenger from Anaheim Hills, Calif., on the flight, which originated in Seattle and stopped in San Francisco. "I don't know if I will fly again."

Just hours before Tuesday's near-collision, the FAA said it wants to expand the controlled airspace over Los Angeles International to reduce the chance of crashes there. Eighty-two people were killed last August, when an Aeromexico airliner collided with a small plane and crashed over suburban Cerritos as it approached the airport.

The FAA proposed raising the ceiling for the terminal control area, or TCA, from 7,000 feet to 12,500 feet and extend the area to up to 30 miles in some directions where it is only 25. Implementing the plan could take two years because of hearings and reviews, FAA officials said.

In TCAs, pilots must maintain radio contact with air traffic controllers while observing restricted airspace right-of-way.

Over Chicago's Midway Airport, the pilot of the Learjet owned by a Green Bay, Wis., paper company "told the tower that he had to dive, he had to go down, quick down" to avoid hitting a Piper Cherokee, said FAA spokesman Mort Edelstein.

The pilot of the Learjet, which was on landing approach, reported the other plane was so close, "I could read his number," Edelstein said.

"Now that's close," Edelstein said. "I've flown a lot, and I've never been that close to another plane."

Clara Peller Dies

L.A. Times-Washington Post

CHICAGO — Clara Peller, the diminutive and demanding octogenarian who made "Where's the beef?" a national cry for quality that spilled over from the hamburger grill into the political frying pan, died Tuesday at her home in Chicago.

She was believed to be 86, and her daughter, Marlene Necheles, whose family had shared their home with Mrs. Peller for several years, said, "She died in her sleep."

She said she was not sure of the exact cause of her mother's death, but noted "she was an elderly lady."

The gruff-talking former cosmetologist burst onto the national television scene in 1984 when, with two other elderly women, she was seen in a commercial for Wendy's hamburger chain examining some buns in a competing chain's store.

"It certainly is a big bun," says one.

"It's a very big bun," agreed the second. "A big fluffy bun," echoes the first. "A very big fluffy bun," replies the second.

"Where's the beef? Hey! Where's the beef?

The phrase not only brought Wendy's a marked increase in business but produced Clara T-shirts, Clara look-alike contests and a round of media appearances in which the 4-foot- 10-inch Mrs. Peller (who had to stand on a box to film the commercial) and her sidekicks, actresses Mildred Lane and Elizabeth Shaw, toured the country.

The phrase became part of the 1984 political scene when former Vice President Walter F. Mondale used it to suggest a lack of substance in the proposals of then-Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., one of his rivals for the Democratic presidential nomination.

Sting Hits Officials

NEW YORK (AP) — A bribe-dangling undercover FBI agent's payoffs were accepted 105 times in 106 offers, a prosecutor said in announcing the arrests of 58 people, including 44 past and present officials in 15 upstate counties.

The sole refusal, U.S. Attorney Rudolph Giuliani said Tuesday, came from an official who said the offer wasn't enough. That official, who was not identified, was being charged with accepting other bribes, Giuliani said.

"It is not an overstatement to say, compared to other states, New York is a much friendlier place to corrupt politicians, crooked businessmen and organized criminals," Giuliani said.

The charges included conspiracy, mail fraud, perjury and bribe promotion. Involved in the investigation were 48 cities, towns and villages in 15 counties from suburban Westchester County to the Canadian border.

The charges stemmed from "Operation Double Steel," a 2½-year undercover probe in which an FBI agent posing as a steel products salesman offered bribes and kickbacks to officials involved in purchasing materials and equipment, said Thomas Sheer, head of the FBI's New York City office.

RKO General Faces Revocation Of Licenses For 14 Stations

WASHINGTON (AP) — GenCorp says it will appeal an administrative law judge's "unprecedented and unjustified" ruling that could strip its RKO General subsidiary of licenses for 14 radio and television stations.

The decision Tuesday said RKO General is unfit to hold the licenses, worth an estimated $750 million, because it has a history of filing false financial reports, fraudulent billing and other improprieties in its dealings with the Federal Communications Commission.

RKO General President Pat A. Servodidio said the judge failed to give adequate consideration to the company's "record of superior programming and community involvement."

Servodidio cited 18 Emmy awards for RKO's Los Angeles TV station and 125 awards for the company's radio stations this year. "I am hopeful the full commission will give proper recognition to our exceptional broadcasting record," he said.

In his 75-page decision, Judge Edward J. Kuhlmann said "no case ever before decided by this commission presents dishonesty comparable to RKO's."

"There is not a single case of fraudulent billing practices investigated and reviewed by this commission which exhibits as many practices affecting as many advertisers over as many years," he said.

The appeal will send the case to the FCC for a decision on the licenses.

Justice Comes More Concisely

By KURT J. REPANSHEK
Associated Press Writer

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — You won't find "conclusory" between "conclusive" and "concoct" in Webster's New World Dictionary, but the Wyoming Supreme Court has ruled the word fit for courtroom use.

"After painstaking deliberation, we have decided that we like the word 'conclusory,' and we are distressed by its omission from the English language," Justice Walter Urbigkit said in a footnote in an opinion issued Tuesday in a medical malpractice lawsuit.

"We now proclaim that henceforth 'conclusory' is appropriately used in the opinions of this court. Furthermore, its usage is welcomed in briefs submitted for this court's review," he wrote. "Webster's, take heed!"

While some feel that the legal world is already too cumbersome because of the legalese that fills court documents, Urbigkit sees the creation of "conclusory" a result of the court's desire to be concise.

The word appears to be a combination of "conclusion" and "illusory."

"It means the message is not justified by supported facts, which it assumes but doesn't state," Urbigkit explained Tuesday.

Urbigkit said the word was created by his law clerk, whom he described as a linguist of sorts.

Although this apparently is the first time the state Supreme Court has come up with its own word to suit its needs, the justice would do it again.

The English language needs to be made more specific, Urbigkit insisted.

"We need to have more defined, clearly expressed communicative skills," he said.

The justice also pointed out that people are always devising new words to suit their needs.

"I think you (the news media) use them all the time. Words that aren't words," he said. "In writing you'll find words that are improperly used regularly. Take 'networking.' Try 'feedback.' Try all of the jargon kind of words that one frequently finds from our product of effort to communicate."

Walter Eggers, former chairman of the University of Wyoming English Department, said he had no opinion on the creation of the new word, but he pointed out that Shakespeare occasionally invented words.

"So I guess I wouldn't take offense," he said.

Small Corn Crop Could Set Records

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's corn crop is going to be smaller, but the Agriculture Department says record yields per acre are in the works.

Based on field surveys as of Aug. 1, the fall corn harvest is expected to produce 7.23 billion bushels, down 12 percent from last year's bumper output of 8.25 billion bushels, the department's Agricultural Statistics Board said Tuesday.

It would be the smallest corn harvest since 1983, when drought and government acreage programs reduced production to 4.18 billion bushels. Production rose to a record 8.9 billion bushels in 1985.

But U.S. grain production is still world class. A related report showed the Soviet Union's 1987 total grain harvest is turning out better than department experts had expected, perhaps around 205 million metric tons, up 10 million tons from USDA's earlier forecast.

A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds and is equal to 39.4 bushels of corn or 36.7 bushels of wheat or soybeans.

Converted to metric measure, the new U.S. corn estimate is 183.7 million tons by itself. After adding sorghum, oats and barley, the total U.S. feed grain production this year will be about 220 million tons — not counting 57.8 million tons of wheat or 54.4 million tons of soybeans.

Looking further at U.S. crop production prospects this year, the board said, "Planting of the 1987 corn crop began well ahead of normal due to the warm weather early in the spring. Development of the crop remained ahead of normal, and the crop is still one to two weeks ahead of normal."

Corn producers cut back to about 59.6 million acres expected for harvest this fall, compared with 69.2 million acres harvested in 1986. The huge 1985 harvest came from 75.2 million acres.

U.S. Says Canadian Trade Figures More To Its Liking

By TOM RAUM
AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration has found a way to cut the nation's annual trade deficit by $10 billion. It will start using Canadian numbers.

Commerce Department officials said Tuesday that Canada does a better job of keeping track of U.S. truck shipments across the 3,000-mile land border than the U.S. Customs Service does.

So, beginning this week, the agency will begin plugging Canadian import statistics into its monthly tabulation of the U.S. merchandise trade deficit. The figures for June are due out Friday.

The result should be an immediate improvement of about $800 million a month in exports to Canada, at least on paper, said Robert Ortner, under secretary of Commerce for economic affairs.

The agency also is revising its trade figures back to 1970 based on a reconciliation of the U.S. figures with those from Canada. The result will be smaller official assessments of past U.S. trade deficits.

Thus, with the stroke of a pen, this nation's record 1986 trade deficit of $166.3 billion is now a $156.2 billion shortfall — still a record.

According to administration officials, U.S. truckers are more honest with Canadian authorities on what they're taking into that country than they are with the Customs Service on what they're taking out of the United States.

The statistical shuffling could have political repercussions as the administration seeks to soften trade-restraint legislation now before a House-Senate conference committee.

"At this stage of affairs, with a trade bill going through Congress and everybody concerned about our deficit, we think it is important that we have as accurate figures as possible," Ortner said.

He denied that the figures were being "doctored" to enable the Reagan administration to present a stronger case for a declining trade deficit.

This nation's massive trade imbalance has been cited by congressional leaders as a major factor behind widespread bipartisan support for the far-reaching trade legislation.

It was the second time this year that the Commerce Department has reduced the 1986 trade deficit through a change of accounting procedures. The shortfall originally was reported as $169.8 billion, then reduced to $166.3 billion last winter.

"Truckers going into Canada do not always drop off export documents on our side of the border," Ortner said. He said Canadian customs requirements are more stringent, and exports missed by U.S. authorities nearly always are logged on the Canadian side of the border as imports.

Ortner said the value of U.S. exports going into Canada was undercounted by 22 percent, or $10.18 billion, last year.

Thus, the nation's trade deficit with Canada last year was not really $23.5 billion, as initially reported by the Commerce Department, but about $13.3 billion.

Although all truckers are required to file documents listing exports to Canada, and face fines for not doing so, this rule is often not fully enforced, U.S. officials said.

Lack of customs personnel is cited as one reason, along with the length of the border and its numerous points of entry.

However, the administration says the problem involving Canada is unique and does not occur with other trading partners, including Mexico, which also shares a long land border with the United States.

Shipments across the Mexican border are monitored far more closely than shipments into Canada, the officials said.

Canada is the United States' single major trading partner, with two-way trade in 1986 of $124 billion. About 80 percent of all Canadian exports go to U.S. markets, while about a third of U.S. exports go to Canada.

EPA Succeeds In Having Chlordane Sales Stopped

By GUY DARST
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chlordane, a termite-fighter used on 30 million homes and now considered a probable cause of cancer, is being pulled off the market temporarily and federal regulators say it may never come back.

The manufacturer, Velsicol Chemical Corp. of Rosement, Ill., has agreed not sell any more while it tries to find a way to satisfy the Environmental Protection Agency that long-term indoor airborne exposure can be eliminated.

Already two prominent pest-control firms, Orkin Exterminating Co. and Terminix International, have stopped using chlordane and its chemical cousin, heptachlor, because of public concern. Heptachlor is often mixed with chlordane.

John A. Moore, EPA's assistant administrator for pesticides and toxic substances, said Tuesday that distributors and exterminators may use inventories already on hand. He estimated that most have only a two-month supply.

After that, safer but more expensive substitutes are likely to be used, officials say.

Chlordane acts not by killing termites, but by keeping them away from the house. It usually is injected into the soil around a foundation as a barrier to the termites, and a single application may be good for 40 years.

Since 1981, four substitute compounds have appeared that pose trivial or no risk of cancer, EPA says. But those chemicals may cost $60 more per application than chlordane and they may have to be applied once every 10 years, said Moore.

The agreement with Velsicol was reached in recent days as the agency moved to cancel the company's license to sell chlordane, Moore said.

If the agency had gone ahead with cancellation proceedings, chlordane still could have been used while the action was contested. Moore said EPA is satisfied to have avoided "a year or two years of administrative hearings and litigation."

However, eight consumer, environmental and other activist organizations have sued EPA seeking an emergency ban to take chlordane off the market immediately.

"If it's unable to take decisive action on a chemical such as chlordane, we fear the inability of this agency to protect the public," said Jay Feldman, coordinator of the National Campaign Against the Misuse of Pesticides, which is leading the court action.

WAR TALK — Former Israeli Defense Minister Ariel Sharon uses a pointer as he explains the 1982 Israeli invasion of Lebanon during a lecture Tuesday at Tel Aviv University. Sharon's lecture broke a five-year silence on the controversial war. He insisted the invasion was a success, indicating that he was proud of his involvement in its planning. (AP Laserphoto)

Sharon Breaks Silence, Discusses Lebanon War

By DAN FISHER
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

TEL AVIV — Former Israeli Defense Minister Ariel Sharon broke five years of public silence about the 1982 Lebanon War here Tuesday with an extraordinary, four-hour lecture seen by many in his elite audience as an attempt to clear his political record of its blackest stain.

The controversial, right-wing politician, who is viewed here as the architect of what is undoubtedly Israel's most unpopular war, was periodically interrupted by hecklers as he mostly read his remarks from a prepared text.

At one point a woman shouting "How can you not be ashamed!" was dragged out of the lecture hall.

"I didn't come here to rebut any of your accusations," said Sharon, who had previously refused to give any comprehensive, public account of his role in the war. "I came here just to get out the facts."

But he actually revealed few new details, either about the war or the decisions leading up to it, during what sometimes turned into an hour-by-hour, textbook-style account of the action. His primary message during a three-hour presentation and one hour of questions and answers appeared to be that he had acted with Cabinet approval and consulted his top military officers at each stage of Israel's invasion. He said he was proud of his involvement.

Israeli forces invaded Lebanon on June 6, 1982, ostensibly to clear Palestinian guerrillas out of a 25-mile zone north of the international border from which they had been shelling Israeli settlements. But within days, and despite the protests of the United States, the Israelis were at the approaches to Beirut, trapping thousands of guerrillas there and laying seige to the city. The Palestinians were eventually evacuated under American supervision.

Following the assassination of Lebanese Christian leader Bashir Gemayel in September 1982, however, the Israelis became increasingly embroiled in the country's civil war. Instead of Palestinians, Israeli troops were battling Lebanese Shia Moslems. As the death toll mounted, so did opposition to the war at home. And in early 1985 the Israeli cabinet finally approved a phased withdrawal of most of its troops that was completed later that spring.

About 1,000 Israeli soldiers remain in a "security zone" extending six to 10 miles into Lebanon.

At least two authoritative Israeli books on the Lebanon conflict accuse Sharon of misleading then-Prime Minister Menachem Begin and the rest of the Cabinet about his war aims, dragging the country into a costly quagmire for the misguided purpose of installing a friendly, Christian regime in Beirut.

Sharon was forced to resign as defense minister in 1983, after a state commission of inquiry found him indirectly responsible for the September 1982 massacre of at least 330 Palestinians at the Sabra and Shatilla refugee camps in the Lebanese capital. While the massacre was carried out by Lebanese Christian militiamen, the camps were under Israeli control at the time.

Sharon remained in the government, however, and after elections in 1984 was assigned the trade and industry portfolio in the current "national unity" coalition. He is considered a leading contender to succeed Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir as leader of the rightist Likud Bloc.

It is a measure of the continuing controversy surrounding both Sharon and the Lebanon war that his lecture and reactions to it were the top story on the national television news Tuesday night, consuming nearly half the broadcast.

Earlier, more than 500 invited guests and a full complement of Israeli and foreign newsmen crowded an auditorium at Tel Aviv University to hear what Sharon had billed in advance as the inside story of the war.

A small group of protesters from the leftist Mapam and Citizens Rights parties demonstrated outside, carrying placards reminding of the 650 Israeli soldiers killed in the war and charging: "Sharon is to Blame!"

A former chief of staff and Knesset member from the centrist Labor Alignment, Mordechai Gur, told Israeli Television that Sharon's account of decision-making leading to the seige of Beirut was full of "lies and half-truths."

Knesset member Ran Cohen accused the portly Likud politician of trying to "escape his responsibility" for the war and the subsequent, costly three-year Israeli occupation of southern Lebanon.

Former army Col. Eli Geva, who became famous by resigning his commission rather than follow Sharon's orders to invade Beirut, denied the former defense minister's claim that senior army officers were well briefed on the war plans.

Seven Die As Plane Strikes Restaurant

MUNICH, West Germany (AP) — A seventh person has died from an airplane crash that destroyed a McDonald's restaurant and a city bus, police said today.

Munich police said in a statement that a young man, whose identity was not released, had died of severe injuries early this morning in Murnau hospital in southern Bavaria.

The latest victim was apparently was walking near the restaurant when a twin-engine Piper Cherokee rammed the busy section of Munich, engulfing it in flames.

The man's death brings the toll from the crash to seven dead and 13 injured, including several in "very critical condition," police said.

According to the latest police statement, the airplane smashed into the roof of the McDonald's a mile from Munich's main Riem airport, then debris shattered the city bus. The statement emphasized an investigation by federal aviation officials was continuing.

Three people in the twin-engine Piper Cherokee, including the pilot, were killed, Munich police spokesman Walter Hermann said.

In addition to the young man who died today, a bicyclist and two people in the McDonald's parking lot also were killed.

Thirteen people, including 10 riding in the city bus, were among those injured, according to another Munich police spokesman, Guenter Scholz.

First reports said the plane was flown by a student pilot practicing takeoffs and landings. But Riem airport control tower spokesman Mathias Marhofer denied the report late Tuesday, saying "the pilot had more than 15 years of flight experience."

He said the pilot was a man "over 40 years old" but declined to identify him.

"He (the pilot) was not practicing touch-and-go landings. He was on an IFR (Instrument Flight Rules) qualification checkout flight and crashed on his first approach," Marhofer said.

The crash started a fire that gutted the restaurant.

Enrile Wins Court Test To Gain Entry To Senate

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The Supreme Court today ordered election officials to proclaim opposition leader Juan Ponce Enrile the winner of a contested Senate seat.

Enrile will be only the second opposition member in the 24-seat Senate. He said he was "happy about this turn of events," and called the court ruling a victory for "the entire system under which we live."

President Corazon Aquino, meanwhile, dismissed speculation she would order detentions without charge to curb nationwide violence.

In the latest violent incident, communist rebels killed a militiaman, his 9-year-old daughter and 5-year-old son in an attack today on their home in Batangas province, 60 miles south of Manila. The militiaman was a member of a civilian group that receives weapons from the military to defend villages against rebels.

The Commission on Elections proclaimed winners in 23 Senate races after May 11 elctions, but left the last seat vacant pending court challenges by Enrile and Augusto Sanchez, a former labor minister under Mrs. Aquino.

In its ruling, the Supreme Court voided a commission order granting Sanchez a vote recount, saying it was too long after the election. Sanchez had contended thousands of ballots were discarded because they carried only his last name and canvassers could not tell if the votes were for him or another candidate, Gil Sanchez.

"I feel bad that the Supreme Court itself, the so-called bulwark of democracy, should be the one to prevent the counting of the people's votes. That is why this hurts a lot," Sanchez said. Enrile, who was defense minister under deposed President Ferdinand E. Marcos for 16 years, helped lead the February 1986 military-civilian revolt that toppled Marcos and swept Mrs. Aquino to power.

Mrs. Aquino kept Enrile as defense secretary until November, when she fired him after a reported coup attempt by officers close to him. He has led the opposition to Mrs. Aquino's government since then.

The only other opposition member in the Senate is actor Joseph Estrada. Other members ran on Mrs. Aquino's "People Power" coalition.

Sanchez, a former human rights lawyer who supported workers' rights and higher wages, was among the most left-leaning Cabinet members. He was dismissed in December during a shakeup that followed Enrile's ouster.

Military chief Gen. Fidel Ramos today ordered military commanders to install checkpoints and start a nationwide operation to seize illegal firearms from communist rebels, terrorists and private armies.

He said the order was in keeping with Mrs. Aquino's instructions to crack down on weapons smuggling after the Aug. 2 assassination of Local Governments Secretary Jaime Ferrer. More than 600 police and soldiers have been slain this year, according to official figures.

Defense Secretary Rafael Ileto raised the possibility Tuesday that the government might suspend habeas corpus, which forbids detention without charge, if instability worsens.

"If worse comes to worst, if there is a need for it, I would say we can do it in certain areas and only within a certain time," Ileto said.

Reporters asked Mrs. Aquino after today's Cabinet meeting if the government was considering such a move. She said, "No," and did not elaborate.

Presidential Executive Secretary Joker Arroyo, Mrs. Aquino's closest adviser, told reporters that drastic measures were unnecessary because the government is "fully in control of the situation."

"You must remember, we have a president who strongly adheres to the constitution and democratic processes and the rule of law," Arroyo said.

In other developments:

—Police in Cotabato City, 560 miles south of Manila, said a small bomb exploded Tuesday night in a cemetery but caused no injuries.

—Two bombs exploded earlier Tuesday at the Cotabato city hall and a building housing coast guard offices and a radio station. Two people were injured in the city hall blast. No group claimed responsibility.

Cotabato City, capital of Maguindanao province, has a large Moslem population, and three Moslem rebel groups operate in the area.

—The military said two grenades, believed fired by Moslem rebels, exploded Tuesday night in Isabela, capital of Basilan province, 550 miles south of Manila. There were no injuries.

Latin Presidents Schedule Summit

BRASILIA, Brazil (AP) — The presidents of the eight "Rio Group" Latin American countries will hold their first summit in 20 years this November in Mexico, their foreign ministers announced.

A communique released at a news conference Tuesday said the summit would focus on peace prospects for Central America, regional economic integration and Latin America's $380 billion foreign debt.

Foreign Minister Dante Caputo of Argentina said the meeting would be "a first step toward the independence of the continent."

Participating in the Nov. 27-28 summit will be Brazil, Argentina, Uruguay, Mexico, Peru, Venezuela, Panama and Colombia, whose foreign ministers wrapped up three days of talks with the announcement.

The last such meeting was held in 1967 in Punta del Este, Uruguay. President Lyndon Johnson attended.

The Mexico summit will not propose a cartel of debtor nations as press reports have suggested, said Peru's foreign minister, Allan Wagner.

He said such ideas would be left to the so-called Cartagena group, which is comprised of the same eight nations plus Chile, Ecuador and the Dominican Republic.

The Cartagena group was formed in June 1984 to discuss the region's huge foreign debt and determine a unified strategy for dealing with creditors.

The Rio Group foreign ministers are to meet in Punta del Este Oct. 23-25 to set the meeting's agenda.

At Montes Claros, in Brazil's Atlantic forest, muriqui (wooly spider monkey) males mate with females in the presence of other males, with no competition evident, says National Geographic.

Britain Freeing Prisoners To Ease Jail Crowding

By LARRY THORSON
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — The British government has embarked on a program to give early release to about 3,500 prisoners to cut overcrowding in a prison system packed almost 20 percent above capacity.

Britain is in a prison crisis that has mushroomed in the past year as the number of inmates leaped by almost 4,000 to 51,029 as of mid-July.

Critics maintain the early releases will alarm a crime-conscious public that wants sharp punishment for criminals.

The prisoners are jammed into jails with a nominal capacity of 41,650, and about 19,000 are doubled or tripled up in cells designed for one person.

In the past two years, guards have staged strikes and refused to work overtime in demand of better working conditions. A three-day wave of protests by prisoners in April 1986 caused $8.8 million worth of damage to 40 prisons, and watchdog groups have complained that jails "lack basic standards of human decency."

Home Secretary Douglas Hurd announced the early release program in Parliament on July 16, and drew pained responses from fellow Conservative Party legislators who had been elected a month earlier after campaigning on promises of firm penalties for convicted criminals.

Early release will be available only to prisoners serving terms of 12 months or less. If their conduct has been good, they will be considered for release when they have served half of their sentence, rather than after the normal two-thirds of the sentence.

Asked to confirm that rapists or other violent offenders would not get early release, Hurd replied instead that 82 percent of the 3,500 who would qualify had been convicted of nonviolent offenses, and the remaining 18 percent had not been judged dangerous enough to merit long sentences.

But his predecessor as home secretary, Leon Brittan, said about 630 of those likely to be released would have been convicted of sexual or violent offenses, and he added that this could result in "considerable public disquiet."

"It is wrong in principle and quite contrary to the rule of law, and everything that we stand for, for convicted criminals to be released prematurely ... simply because there is no room to house them," Brittan complained.

The Home Office has taken over an old army camp to take 360 inmates from crowded jails, and Hurd took new steps to try to hasten the long-established program of building 20 new prisons and other refurbishments to give 17,500 more places by 1995.

Hurd has said Britain also was studying U.S. initiatives in having private enterprise run prisons and in using electronic tags to keep track of people being punished by forms of house arrest, though he had little enthusiasm for the "tagging." The prison population includes about 11,000 people awaiting trial, 1,000 more than a year earlier, but the main reason for the leap in the overall total was longer sentences imposed by trial judges, Hurd said.

Judges are under pressure from the public and law-and-order advocates in Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Conservative Party to crack down on violent criminals.

Wedding Vows Solemnized

MAURY — Cynthia Marie May of Greenville and William Everette Murphrey of Farmville were married Aug. 2 at 3 p.m. in Brooks Frizzelle United Methodist Church. The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Bill Haddock.

MRS. MURPHREY

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Ervin May of Snow Hill. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. William D. Cole of Farmville and the late Andrew Linwood Murphrey.

Given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father, the bride wore a floor length gown of crepe chiffon over silk taffeta by Piccione. The strapless fitted bodice featured a basque waistline and A-line skirt with a re-embroidered alencon lace chapel length train. She wore a rhinestone headband with floral sprays and elbow length pouf veil. She carried a hand bouquet of long-stemmed calla lilies and ruscus greenery.

The honor attendants were Gina Carraway of Snow Hill, maid of honor, and Elaine Morris of Wilmington, matron of honor and sister of the bride.

Bridesmaids included Jane McLawhorn of Kinston, Cindy McLawhorn of Hookerton, Diana Gordon of Greenville, Misty Chase, cousin of the bride, and Lynn Lassiter, both of Snow Hill.

The stepfather of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers included Ervin May of Shreveport, La., and Charles May of Loring AFB, Maine, both brothers of the bride, Hooker Thomas of Wilmington, and Andy Murphrey of Wendell, both brothers of the bridegroom, Danny Cooke of New Bern, cousin of the bridegroom, Shea McLawhorn of Hookerton, Jack Beaman and Robin Bowen, both of Greenville.

Wedding music was performed by Mr. and Mrs. Jay Kornegay. Presiding at the guest register was Susan Rushton and the wedding was directed by Mrs. H. Steve Hardy of Snow Hill.

A reception was given by the parents of the bride in the church fellowship hall. Guests were greeted by Mr. and Mrs. Bob Glossip and Mr. and Mrs. John Stocks. Rice bags were passed out by Chancey and Andrea Murphrey, nieces of the bridegroom.

A rehearsal dinner was given by the parents of the bridegroom at the Colonial Inn in Farmville. A dance followed and was held at the Walnut Country Club in Goldsboro given by family and friends of the bridal couple.

Prior to the wedding several showers, bridesmaids' luncheon, cocktail party, cookout, pantry shower and pig-picking were given for the couple.

The couple will live at Route 1, Farmville.

Round Robin Lasts 133 Years

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR READERS: Florence Brayton of Muscatine, Iowa, asked if her round-robin letter of 57 years duration makes her eligible for the "Guinness Book of World Records." I'm afraid not. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: The Yocom-DeWees family letter was started in 1854 by the eight children of Thomas and Sarah DeWees Yocom. It has been making the rounds for 133 years! It now encompasses 45 families, and takes about a year to make one round. We believe it to be the oldest continuously circulating round-robin letter in the United States. — SALLY C. YOCOM, COLUMBUS, OHIO

DEAR ABBY: Our family circle letter has been circulating for 120 years! It started when my great-grandfather's daughter went away to school during the 1860s. Some letters were written during the Civil War. There are now 15 families contributing to our "family letter." We include newspaper clippings and pictures to keep family members informed and in touch. — NANCI K. ROWE, LAGUNA HILLS, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY: The Gibson family letter began in 1908 when Charles and Susan Gibson, who lived near Girard, Ill., wanted to keep in touch with their eight children who had married and left home. The Gibson chain letter is now in its 79th year and circulates annually. Susan has passed on, but Charles has just celebrated his 99th birthday. — HAROLD E. GIBSON, NORMAL, ILL.

DEAR ABBY: Eight classmates who graduated from the U. of Cincinnati in 1917 started a round-robin. Today there are three survivors, and we still keep in touch. I am 91. — LAURA McINTYRE BROWN, LAKELAND, FLA.

Vets Take Progressive Approach To Care

By LINDA ASHTON
Associated Press Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The veterinarians at Crowder Animal Hospital ask new clients to take a little quiz before their pets are treated for the first time.

There are no wrong answers to the questionnaire, and it can provide the four staff vets with better insight to the wishes of pet owners, says Dr. Karen Miller.

For example, respondents are told to check the multiple choice answer which best describes them:

— I feel that my pet is another member of our family.

— I feel that my pet is just a pet.

Or:

— I want to learn as much as I can about pet health care. Please explain in detail what has been done for my pet or what is needed.

— I would prefer you just summarize what has been done for my pet or what is needed.

— I want my pet healthy, but don't need to know what has been done.

The client information sheet is part of 1980s time management for working people, Miller said.

"Everybody's time is valuable," Miller said. "This will keep me from explaining in detail the functions of the kidney if the pet owner doesn't want to hear all about it."

Transporting pets to the vet once was a predominantly female domain, Miller said, but now both sexes are squeezing in appointments around their work schedules.

"I think these (forms) will be more common two years from now," she said.

There's another '80s aspect to this progressive, well-appointed hospital. It's one of about 20 women-owned animal clinics in Louisiana, says Thomas Bennett Jr., executive secretary of the state Board of Veterinary Medicine Examiners.

Crowder Animal Hospital, owned by Miller and Dr. Janet Tosh, has two new staff veterinarians, one man and one woman.

"I always interviewed ladies and gentleman," Miller said. "We were looking for the best vets we could find."

Usually they were women because for several years the clinic needed part-time doctors, and women more frequently were willing to accept fewer than 40 hours a week.

Dr. Jean Aultman and Miller said their gender is rarely an issue these days, "but Jean gets asked if she's old enough to be a vet," Miller said.

Miller, 39, from Lake Charles, graduated from Texas A&M 16 years ago. Aultman, 25, from Lafayette, graduated from Louisiana State University two months ago.

"It's a wonderful profession for women. It provides an outlet for the caretaking needs women have," said Miller, who was one of six females in a class of 120. "It's extremely draining — physically, emotionally and mentally."

Aultman graduated with a class that was almost half female, she said.

"I always had animals and it was fun for me to take them to the vet. And I always liked the sciences," Aultman said. "It takes a lot of time and it's demanding, but I wasn't satisfied with anything else. It's a fun job."

Dr. Jay Newbill, 31, from Slidell, said there's no difference in a clinic owned by men and women as far as animal care and the quality of medicine. The Crowder jobs in New Orleans were highly sought by his fellow LSU graduates in May.

"It's a different atmosphere for me," Newbill said. "I've never worked for just about an all-women staff. It's nice, it's pleasant."

Nowadays, Newbill agreed, gender is of little concern to veterinary clients.

"I've had a few people that were suprised. They said, 'Oh, I didn't know they have a male veterinarian here,'" he said.

Aultman, Tosh and Miller are among the approximately 207 women vets of the 1,003 licensed by the state, Bennett said. Sex-specific records are not kept, so there could be up to 15 other women licensed in Louisiana, he said.

Miller's been in business for herself since 1973, and Tosh became a partner in 1985, she said. They have 5,000 to 6,000 clients and 15 employees.

Miller prefers wearing the doctor's greens to the paperwork required by business ownership, but she says the benefits of control over philosophy and standards are worth it.

"Our work should speak for itself, not our gender," Miller said. "Being a good vet is the most important thing to me."

Bridal Policy

A black and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements in The Daily Reflector. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a one column picture. During the second week, a one column picture will be used with a write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement.

Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to The Daily Reflector one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

Cerebral Palsy Victim Tells Her Life Story

EDITOR'S NOTE — When Bebe Thompson was about 3, visitors in her home called her a nitwit, thinking she was mentally retarded and wouldn't understand. That's one of the reasons this 68-year-old woman wanted to write an autobiography, to set the record straight about victims of cerebral palsy.

By MARCIA DUNN
Associated Press Writer

NEW CASTLE, Pa. (AP) — From the time she was a tot, Bebe Thompson has wanted desperately to tell the world that no, she is not stupid, no, she is not helpless and, yes, she can feel and need and want.

She is 68 years old now and her condition is worsening. She can neither talk nor walk, let alone write, because of cerebral palsy.

But with help from a retired schoolteacher, a worn letter board and an indefatigable spirit, she is finally telling her life's story.

She has completed an autobiography, aptly titled "My Mother's Pride," and dedicated to the scores of unsung handicapped people and their families.

"The main reason I want to tell my story," Bebe says in her book, "is to encourage others who now have this kind of birth defect that they can still lead good lives."

"I am writing my story down," she adds, "so my sisters will know that I really wanted to help myself, to prove I do have a good mind — if only I could control the spasms in my arm muscles. I want them to know...I am not a nitwit like some people who came to visit thought."

The message in person is just as loud, just as clear.

"I knew people doubted me. But I thought it was my own life," she said in a recent interview from her wheelchair, painstakingly spelling each word on the board on her lap.

Her weaker right hand gripped a yellow cord attached to the board. Her left foot jerked uncontrollably up and down, a telltale sign of the congenital, incurable condition that affects up to 700,000 Americans.

The process of communicating just the two sentences took several minutes and several tries, even with her two sisters filling in the inevitable semantic gaps.

"I realize I can't be like everyone else," she acknowledged, again letter by letter, word by word. Still, "I am not giving up."

Those who know Bebe best — her sisters, her beloved mentor, her nurses and other patients at the nursing home where she lives — aren't surprised by such determination.

Another sister, Faye Campbell, 76, agrees.

At least once a year, for instance, Bebe asks — make that demands — to dress herself.

"She says, 'I want to dress myself. I can do it. I can do it,'" says Jean Dzemyan, director of nursing at Haven Convalescent Home, a small, cheery facility near the Pennsylvania-Ohio border.

It is precisely that kind of doggedness, a yearning to think and do for herself, that prompted Bebe to ask nearly two years ago that her thoughts be put on paper for posterity.

She had begun to deteriorate and was capable of doing less and less for herself.

"She was acutely aware of this," Mrs. Dzemyan says. "She wanted something to say, 'Here, I did exist. The world's not going to forget me.'"

Despite her physical decline, her mental abilities were blossoming every day thanks to Eleanor Susko, 70, who had offered to teach Bebe to spell after retiring from business education in 1979.

Until then, Bebe's education consisted primarily of snippets gleaned from her younger sister, who shared her homework with her when they were young. Her mother and grandmother also used flash cards to teach her arithmetic and continuously recited the alphabet to her, stopping at the letters of the words she was trying to express.

Bebe communicated primarily through sounds and gestures only her family could understand until she acquired her first letter board in her mid-50s at the suggestion of an Easter Seal Society camp counselor.

Bebe was cared for by her family in New Castle until she was admitted to the Haven Convalescent Center in 1972. Many other cerebral palsy patients of Bebe's time ended up in mental institutions, according to George McNally of the United Cerebral Palsy Associations Inc.

Doctors frequently told parents then, mistakenly, "Don't try to train this person. He's a vegetable. He's not going to amount to anything," McNally said. "It still happens, though with much less frequency."

Although mental retardation occurs in some cerebral palsy cases along with spasms and impaired sight, hearing or speech — the condition is caused by damage to the brain usually before, during or shortly after birth — patients have gone on to medical, legal and other professions, according to McNally. They can expect normal life spans, succumbing prematurely to, if anything, respiratory problems.

"The biggest thing is the communication," McNally says. "People who are ill-informed or not informed at all figure if they can't communicate, they must be retarded."

Determined to shatter that myth, Bebe began working earnestly on her autobiography in January 1986 after years of spelling lessons with Mrs. Susko, whose teaching tools included crossword puzzles and cassette tapes.

Every Wednesday or Thursday afternoon at the nursing home, the retired schoolteacher carefully jotted down Bebe's recollections, conveyed via the letter board. She would take the notes home, type them up and return with them the following week for Bebe's approval.

The weeks of work soon became months.

"At first, she jumped around at different parts of her life. She would be 40 one week, maybe 29 the next week," Mrs. Susko recalled.

It was a tedious, sometimes exasperating process for both of them.

Perhaps Bebe's roughest task was relating the time, when she was about 3, that visitors to the family's home called her a nitwit. Alone in the room with her, they presumed she was mentally retarded and could not understand.

They were wrong.

"I knew what they meant," she says in her autobiography. "It...hurt to hear them talk about me."

Family Will Treasure Country Sampler

Pat's Pointers
Pat Trexler

Cross stitch this charming country family scene with its heartwarming sentiment — a project to be cherished by your family for years to come. It makes a wonderfully welcome gift item, too.

You may order the leaflet, which includes full instructions and the design in graph chart form, or a kit, complete with the design stamped right on the fabric. Either way, you'll thoroughly enjoy making this delightful sampler, which fits into a 12-by-15-inch frame.

To obtain directions for making the love sampler, send your request for Leaflet No. Z-080987 with $2 and a long, stamped self-addressed envelope to Pat Trexler Crafts, The Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 419148, Kansas City, Mo. 64141.

Or you may order Kit No. E-080987 by sending a check or money order for $11.95 to Pat Trexler Crafts at the same address. The kit price includes shipping charges, full insructions, prestamped fabric and floss. The frame is not included.

Dear Pat: Can you tell us how to work reversible cross stitch, which looks the same on the back and front of the fabric? — Marcia L., Topeka, Kan.

This was an unsolvable puzzle for me quite a while, too, until a friend finally showed me how. As most needlecrafters know, cross stitches usually appear as straight vertical bars on the wrong side of the fabric.

To make the stitch the same on both sides is a technique that is much easier to demonstrate than to describe, but I will give it a try.

Cross stitch fabric has small holes between squares of woven fabric. Normally, you make the first half of the cross stitch by (a) bringing the needle up in one hole and then (b) taking it down in the hole diagonally above it. The second half cross stitch is started by bringing the needle up in the hole directly below the hole where you finished step (b).

To practice the reversible cross stitch, start at the right edge of your work and do steps (a) and (b) as described above. But, instead of working the next half cross stitch just below point (b), skip that hole and bring the needle up instead in the next hole to the left.

Continue across in this way, skipping a hole after each half-cross stitch. After you have made several stitches in this manner, start working back from left to right, completing each stitch previously made to create full cross stitches.

If you are working correctly, you will have a space between each completed cross stitch. When you have reached the right edge, it will be time to fill in those blank spaces.

Do this by first making half-cross stitches in each skipped square, again moving from right to left. On the return left to right journey, you will complete each of these stitches by making the second half a cross stitch over each half-cross.

Why would you want to take this extra trouble to have the back of your work match the front exactly? It obviously is not important on any item where the back will never show, such as pillows, framed pictures or other similar items.

There are times, however, when the reversible method is best. One example would be cross-stitch monograms or motifs on table napkins. I would suggest that you practice the technique and then clip and file this column so that you can refresh your memory when the occasion to use it arises.

Even when the reverse side will never be seen, it is important to keep your wrong side neat. You should always secure your loose beginning and ending threads under previously worked stitches and immediately clip off the remaining thread ends. If you allow them to just dangle, you are sure to get them caught up in your work an have tangled, knotty areas, which can then appear as lumps on the right side of your work.

One of my few "unbreakable" needlework rules is to always have a pair of small scissors handy when doing any form of embroidery! In fact, I usually make a ribbon necklace for my scissors and hang them around my neck while working.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market kept climbing in active trading today, adding to the sharp gains of the past two sessions despite some early profit-taking.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, up 88.48 points Monday and Tuesday to new highs, rose another 4.15 to 2,684.63 in the first half hour of trading this morning.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 7 to 5 among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 697 up, 507 down and 506 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 46.53 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

Analysts said the momentum of the bull market, which has sent the Dow Jones industrial average up 41 percent since the start of the year, was stirring additional demand for stocks.

Among actively traded blue chips, American Express rose ⅛ to 38⅞ and International Business Machines gained ½ to 169½, but General Electric slipped ⅝ to 63¾ and Eastman Kodak was down ⅜ at 100.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks rose .48 to 186.61. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .05 at 363.94.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average jumped 44.64 points to 2,680.48.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 2 to 1 on the NYSE. Big Board volume reached 278.13 million shares, up from 187.20 million in the previous session. Tuesday's volume was second only to the 302.39 million shares that changed hands on Jan. 23 of this year.

Sanford Trip

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Terry Sanford, D-N.C., left Tuesday for Lucerne, Switzerland, for the third in a seies of conferences between members of the U.S. Congress and Western European parliaments on relations between the United States and the Soviet Union.

The program is sponsored by the Aspen Institute and is paid for by the Carnegie Corp., Sanford spokeswoman Ann Hubbard said in a release. No public funds are involved. she said.

Sanford later will go to the Soviet Union on a mission for the Senate, meeting there with Sen. Daniel Moynihan, D-N.Y., Sen. Mitch McConnell, R-Ky., and Sen. Paul Sarbanes, D-Md.

Primaries Developing months before the Republicans convene in New Orleans.

Both Ms. Vick and Ms. Murray said the timing of events next year favors the well-financed, well-organized candidates who can mount effective campaigns in the early states and turn to work immediately for Super Tuesday.

Ms. Vick said the crowding of events early in the season could cause the premature demise of the campaigns of some candidates. It also allows the possibility that one candidate could pile up a lot of delegate support early and commit some big gaffe with months to go before the convention, she said.

Once the campaign is over next year, Ms. Vick said she will recommend changes in the rules for 1992, many of which deal with technical problems. She said the party also has to come up with a way of encouraging a more even schedule of events for later presidential election years.

The Republicans, too, are considering adopting rules for 1992 that would allow them to avoid having their schedule set by Democratic-controlled legislatures. Republicans occasionally get around this kind of scheduling by turning the primary into a "beauty contest" and choosing delegates in a caucus at some other time.

The first event of next year will be Michigan's Republican caucuses in mid- to late January, followed by both parties' caucuses in Iowa on Feb. 8.

After the New Hampshire primary Feb. 16, South Dakota, Minnesota, Vermont, Minnesota, Maine and Wyoming have events scheduled for one party or the other before March 8.

However, some question remains about the timing of events in Minnesota and South Dakota because the Democratic Party is spurning their attempts to break out in front of the pack by holding their main delegate selection events Feb. 23. Party rules say only Iowa, New Hampshire, Maine and Wyoming can start picking delegates before March 8.

The situation remained unresolved as Minnesota and South Dakota held firm to their dates while the party made threats about giving them no place to sit in the convention hall and no place to sleep in the convention city.

A few states, including Arizona, Delaware, and Colorado, had not set their dates yet.

Delaware in particular ran into a problem with the Democratic Party. After the state's first draft of a delegate-selection plan was found to have technical problems, a second draft was prepared and then turned in later than promised.

In light of those facts, the Allen-Green memo said, "We recommend the council and commission not grant a cost-of-living adjustment, but increase the existing 1.5 percent merit allocation to 2.5 percent.

"This will allow us to reward employees based on performance and include the cost of step adjustments in this evaluation," the memo said.

After a brief review, both council and Utilities Commission members approved the additional 1 percent for merit adjustments.

RALEIGH (AP) — AIDS victims have no assurance of protection from discrimination under a new law that broadens state health officials' authority to deal with communicable diseases, a critic says.

"I think we do a disservice to the public not to make a strong statement at this point," Rep. Harry Payne, D-New Hanover, said Tuesday before the House voted 72-17 to accept a Senate version of the bill.

It stripped several House provisions making it illegal to discriminate in employment and housing against those who test positive for the AIDS virus or suffer from the deadly disease itself.

GUC Cites Savings In Power Costs During Month Of July

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Load management program operations during the month of July saved the Greenville Utilities Commission more than $156,000 in wholesale power costs, GUC commissioners were told Tuesday night.

Roger Jones, GUC's director of electric systems, reported that $156,215 in demand charges were saved through voltage adjustments ($75,653), operation of radio-controlled load management switches on water heaters (32,640) and central air conditioners ($41,762), and operation of generators at GUC's water plant ($3,005) and at Procter & Gamble Paper Products ($3,154).

Jones said the load management system was in full operation during the period of Carolina Power & Light Company's peak — on July 22 between 4 p.m. and 5 p.m. — and said 13,525 kilowatts were shaved from GUC's coincicent peak, which was set at 180.5 megawatts. The temperature at the time was 97 degrees.

At the end of July, 8,564 load management switches were in service on water heaters throughout GUC's system, while 8,819 of the switches were in service on central air conditioning units.

Since January 1985, the load management program has saved more than $3.9 million in electric power costs.

The GUC board approved the purchase of: 1,400 wood distribution poles from U.S. Pole & Supply Inc. for $133,783; a four-wheel drive tractor-backhoe with front end loader from N.C. Equipement Co. for $23,141; a tractor-backhoe with front end loader from Tarheel Tractor for $22,088; a four-wheel drive trenching machine with backhoe from Ditch Witch of N.C. for $16,319; and two air compressors from N.C. Equipment Co. for $19,422.

Commissioners were also told that all asbestos has been removed from the third floor of the GUC's office building at the intersection of Fifth and Washington Streets and that renovation work has resumed. Certification of the removal was received on July 31.

Renovation of the floor was stopped earlier this summer when asbestos was found in the ceiling material.

Bids will be received in the near future for the removal of asbestos from the first and second floors of the building.

Faulk Receives Jail Sentence

Carey Faulk of 334 Springhill Road was given a 90-day jail term and fined $500 last week in Pitt County Superior Court after pleading guilty to two assault charges in lieu of two counts of taking indecent liberties with a minor.

Faulk, employed by the Pitt County office of the U.S. Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, had been charged with four counts of taking indecent liberties with a minor.

But two of the counts were dismissed and Faulk pleaded guilty to two assault charges — assault on a female and assault on a child.

He was given a two-year jail term, which was suspended on condition he spend 90 days in jail, five years on probation, pay a $500 fine and court costs, and attend a Pitt County Mental Health Center sexual offenders program.

Padres Best Atlanta, Run Winning Streak To Seven In Attempt To Drop Image

By BILL BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

The San Diego Padres, who have the worst record in the National League, have spent more than two months proving that they aren't the worst team.

The Padres, who lost 42 of their first 54 games, beat the Atlanta Braves 7-6 Tuesday night for their seventh consecutive victory, their longest winning streak since May of 1985. San Diego's 34-25 record since June 4 is the best in the NL West in that span.

Leading the San Diego resurgence is Tony Gwynn, the NL's leading hitter with a .368 average. He broke out of a mini-slump with five hits in five at-bats and four runs scored, including the game-winner when Benito Santiago singled in the ninth inning.

"I hadn't been hitting the ball that well," Gwynn said.

But Padres Manager Larry Bowa said there is no one he'd rather have on his team than Gwynn.

"I don't have enough adjectives to describe him," he said. "He works hard, he's dedicated, he helps people. He's as close to perfect as you can get when he's on the baseball field."

In other games, it was New York 6, Montreal 2; Philadelphia 9, Chicago 8 in 13 innings; St. Louis 6, Pittsburgh 5; Los Angeles 7, Cincinnati 2, and Houston 7, San Francisco 3.

After breaking his favorite bat earlier in the game, Gwynn had to find another bat to get his final two hits, a solo homer in the seventh and a single to open the ninth.

"I was so upset when I broke it, but I came in and got a big-barreled bat and hit a home run," he said.

Gwynn singled to open the ninth and stole second, his career-high 37th steal of the season, and went to third on a sacrifice bunt by Marvell Wynne.

Gene Garber, 8-9, then walked John Kruk intentionally and hit Chris Brown to load the bases, setting the stage for Santiago.

Braves Manager Chuck Tanner used a five-man infield, with left fielder Gary Roenicke behind second base, when Santiago came to the plate, but he singled through the left side of the infield, scoring Gwynn from third.

"The odds of gettting out of that situation are slim, so you try anything you can." Tanner said.

Reliever Mark Davis, 7-6, who pitched out of a bases-loaded jam in the ninth, got the victory, the 10th in 12 games for the Padres.

The Braves scored two runs in the eighth to tie the score. Ken Griffey knocked in the first run with a groundout and Ozzie Virgil, who hit his 22nd homer earlier, made it 6-6 with an RBI single.

Both Stan Jefferson and Gwynn hit their sixth homers of the season for the Padres, and John Kruk's two-run double in the fifth broke a 3-3 tie.

A two-run triple by Dion James helped the Braves overcome a 3-0 deficit.

Cardinals 6, Pirates 5

St. Louis maintained its 5½-game lead in the NL East as Todd Worrell stifled a Pittsburgh rally in the bottom of the ninth after the Cardinals scored twice in the top of the inning.

"It was a breathtaking adventure," St. Louis Manager Whitey Herzog said. "We've been struggling to win games, we've played a lot of extra-inning games and I thought we had another one tonight."

Ozzie Smith's fielder's choice grounder off Rick Reuschel, 8-6, drove in the go-ahead run in the ninth and Tommy Herr followed with a sacrifice fly, giving the Cardinals a 6-4 lead. The Pirates then loaded the bases with no outs in the bottom of the ninth, but scored only one run as Worrell got his 24th save in relief of Ken Dayley, 7-2.

Worrell gave up a sacrifice fly to R.J. Reynolds in the bottom of the ninth, but held on by striking out Bobby Bonilla and getting Andy Van Slyke on a popup with runners on first and third.

Terry Pendleton homered for the Cardinals, while Johnny Ray and Sid Bream connected for Pittsburgh.

Mets 6, Expos 2

New York kept pace with St. Louis as Terry Leach pitched a six-hitter for eight innings against Montreal and won his 10th game without a loss.

Leach, who has seven victories as a starter and three as a reliever, struck out two and walked two as he passed Detroit's Jack Morris for the longest winning streak in the majors this year.

Keith Hernandez drove in three runs for the Mets, two with a first-inning double and one when he was hit by a pitch with the bases loaded in the second.

Darryl Strawberry and Kevin McReynolds homered for the Mets, and the only runs Leach allowed came on solo homers by Tim Raines and Hubie Brooks.

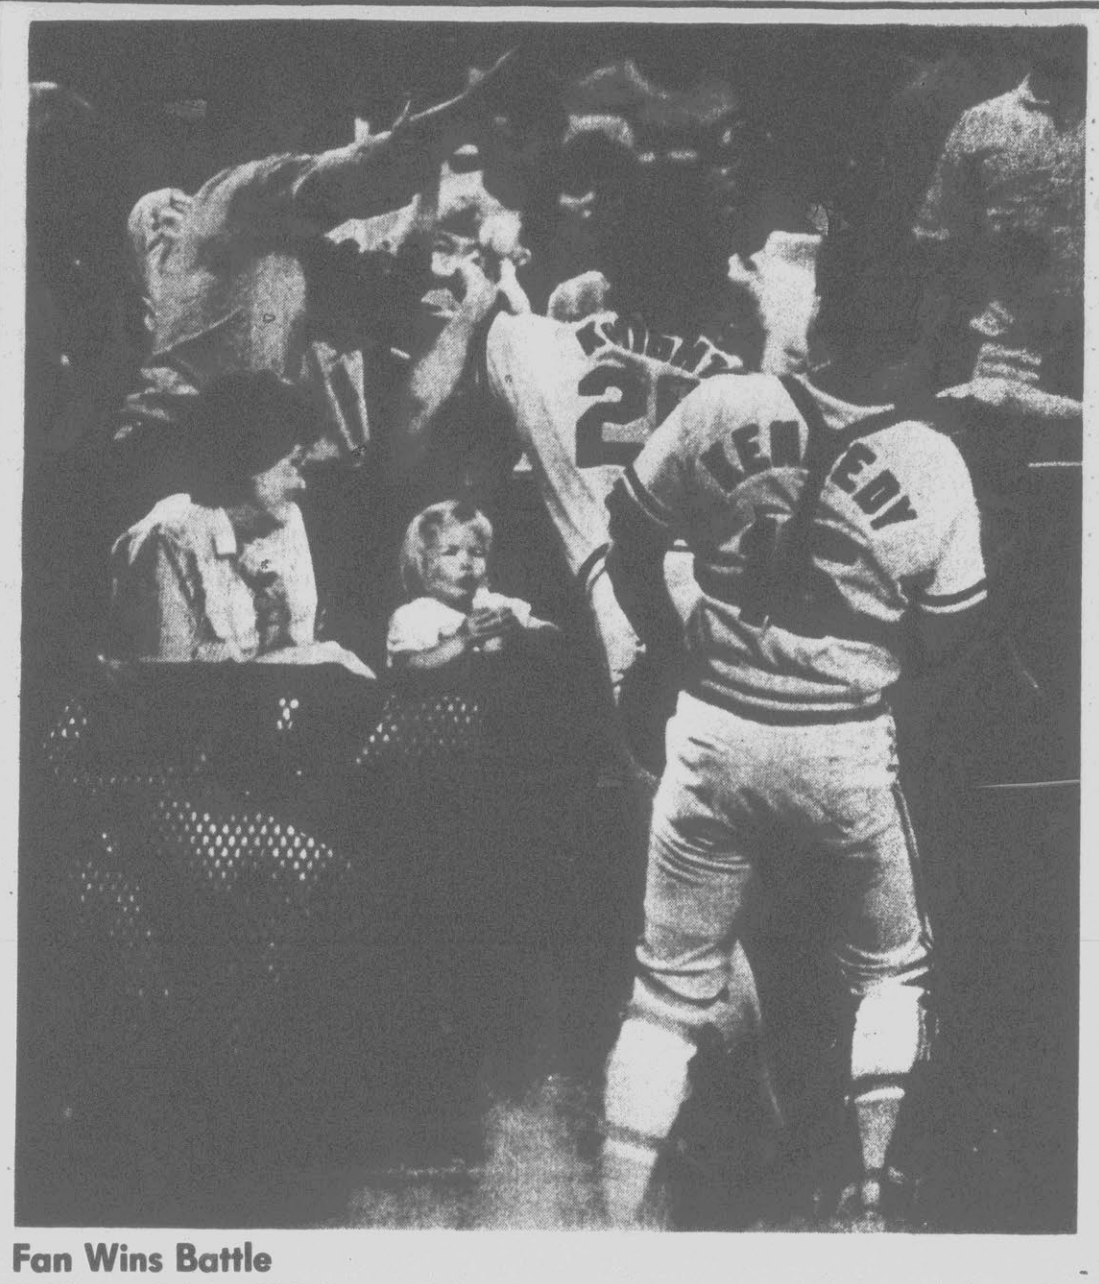

Dodgers 7, Reds 2

Bob Welch held Cincinnati to two hits for five innings and two relievers completed a seven-hitter for Los Angeles after Welch left the game with a groin injury.

John Shelby had two hits, scored two runs and drove in two with an RBI single and a sacrifice fly for the Dodgers.

Welch, 11-7, had to leave the game when he strained his right groin muscle going after Cincinnati pitcher Jeff Montgomery's ground ball up the third base line in the fifth inning. Welch finished the fifth, but could not

Pirates Open Drills

East Carolina head football coach Art Baker has welcomed 137 hopefuls for this fall's Pirate team into camp as drills for the 1987 campaign gets underway.

Freshmen and junior college newcomers, a total of 35 in all, arrived on Saturday for their early introduction to the Pirates, and began practicing on Sunday. The remaining veterans reported in Tuesday, will undergo physicals and other tests today and the entire team will begin practice on Thursday.

"We're very pleased with the way our veterans reported back to school," Baker said. "They have obviously worked hard over the summer and that should make the early days of pre-season practice go smoothly. We'll know more about their condition after Wednesday's drills."

The Pirates are preparing for an 11-game schedule which gets underway on Sept. 5 at N.C. State.

McGwire Tops Rookie Mark

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

Mark McGwire keeps making waves with a big swing and his latest home run rocked the biggest boat yet.

McGwire set an American League rookie record by hitting his 38th home run Tuesday night in Oakland's 8-2 loss to the Seattle Mariners.

The record-breaker was a seventh-inning solo shot off Mike Moore at the Kingdome that hit the S.S. Mariner, a small boat mounted over the center-field fence.

"The sailor in that boat gave me the ball after the game," McGwire said. "I kept the bat and the ball for the Hall of Fame. Its not every day the Hall of Fame asks you to put something in there. It would have been nicer to do it with a victory."

In other games, Toronto beat Boston 8-3, Detroit downed Chicago 9-6, Kansas City defeated New York 8-5, Minnesota beat California 7-2, Texas topped Milwaukee 7-1 and Cleveland defeated Baltimore 6-3.

McGwire broke theAL record for home runs by a rookie set by Cleveland's Al Rosen in 1950. McGwire is now tied for the major-league homer record for rookies established by Wally Berger of the Boston Braves in 1930 and matched by Cincinnati's Frank Robinson in 1956.

McGwire also ended his longest home-run drought of the season. He had gone 11 games, a span of 41 at-bats, since his last homer July 29.

"I think the next one would probably be the topper. This one is the American League record but the next one is the overall record," he said.

"It (record) was in the back of my mind but I knew it was just a matter of time," McGwire said. "I finally kept my head down on a ball, finally hit a line drive and finally got a hit."

Seattle's Alvin Davis and Jim Presley provided enough offense to offset McGwire. Davis, who hit a two-run homer, and Presley drove in three runs apiece.

Moore, 5-14, gave up seven hits, including home runs by McGwire and Tony Bernazard. Moore struck out four, walked none and won his second straight decision at home after starting his season 0-6 at the Kingdome.

"He's become a power pitcher and ever since he's done that he's become a new man," Seattle pitching coach Billy Connors said of Moore, a 17-game winner in 1985.

"He's got a great arm, but has gotten away from his best pitch, the fastball the last two years," Connors said.

Davis hit a two-run homer in the first inning. It was Davis' 18th home run and seventh in his last 14 games.

"Alvin in the second half has just moved right up there," Mariners Manager Dick Williams said. "If he keeps going at this RBI pace, he'll reach 100." Davis is batting .319 with 65 RBI.

Seattle scored five times in the third inning and chased Jose Rijo, 2-6. Presley's two-run double keyed the outburst.

Royals 8, Yankees 5

Bret Saberhagen became the first 16-game winner in the major leagues and Kansas City used a six-run first inning to defeat New York.

Saberhagen, 16-7, had lost all four of his starts since July 11. He gave up five runs on 10 hits in six innings and Jerry Don Gleaton relieved for his fifth save.

Ross Jones hit a two-out, two-run single and Larry Owen followed with a two-run double to cap the first-inning outburst against Ron Guidry, 3-6.

George Brett, who went 3-for-3, led off the eighth with his 13th home run to finish Guidry. Danny Tartabull then greeted Tim Stoddard with his 17th homer.

Blue Jays 8, Red Sox 3

Jesse Barfield's 24th home run broke a 3-3 tie in the sixth inning and Jimmy Key won his fifth straight decision as Toronto beat Boston.

Key, 14-6, gave up nine hits in the first four innings but allowed just two more in his seventh complete game.

Lloyd Moseby hit a two-run single in the fifth that gave the Blue Jays a 3-3 tie. Barfield connected for a solo homer, an opposite-field drive to right at Fenway Park.

Bob Stanley, 3-12, lost his fifth straight decision.

The Blue Jays scored three times in the seventh. Kelly Gruber hit his 10th homer, George Bell had a sacrifice fly and Fred McGriff hit an RBI double.

Tigers 9, White Sox 6

Alan Trammell hit a three-run homer and sacrifice fly and Lou Whitaker had three hits and scored three times as Detroit won in Chicago.

Frank Tanana, 13-7, gave up five runs in six innings yet still beat the White Sox for the fourth time this season. He has a 20-12 lifetime record against Chicago.

Scott Nielsen, 3-5, was raked for three runs in the first inning and four in the second.

Whitaker led off the game with a

Babe Ruth Stars In Tourney Finals

SARASOTA, Fla. — Greenville's Eastern North Carolina champions broke open a tight games in the top of the seventh inning and recorded an 11-3 win over East Cobb County, Ga., in the winners' bracket finals of the Southeastern Babe Ruth League baseball tournament Tuesday.

The victory pushed the Greenville team, the last unbeaten in the 11-team double elimination field, into the championship round, to be played starting at 5 p.m. today. Greenville will face the host team, Sarasota, which fought its way back through the losers' bracket. Should Sarasota win the opening game, a second game will follow at 7 p.m. for the championship. Greenville needs to win but one game to claim the championship.

The winner of the tournament will advance to the Babe Ruth World Series, which will be held in Jamestown, N.Y., later this month.

Greenville vaulted into the lead early on, saw Georgia come back for a 2-2 tie, then regained the lead for good.

Timmy Moore led off the first with a single and stole second. Heath Clark walked and Moore stole third. Walter Gatlin reached on a fielder's choice that got Clark and Moore scored on a passed ball. Maurice Hines then reached on a second fielder's choice, nailing Gatlin at second. Jamie Brewington walked and Mike Cox singled in Hines for the 2-0 lead.

Georgia came back with two in the bottom of the third to tie the game at 2-2.

Greenville returned to the lead in the top of the fifth, again scoring twice. Gatlin doubled and scored on a double by Hines. Hines stole third and scored when Brewington reached on an error.

East Cobb cut the lead to 4-3 with a run in the bottom of the inning.

Pitt then put the game away with a seven-run outburst in the seventh inning to run its lead to 11-3. Hines led off with a single and Brewington got a hit. Both were sacrificed up and Abram Lang singled in both runners, moving to second on an error on the play. Grant Harmon walked, but was put out at second on a fielder's choice by Chris Christopher. Lang scored on the play. Moore and Clark both walked and Gatlin doubled to drive in all three runners. Hines then added another double to drive in Gatlin.

After two were out in the bottom of the seventh, Brewington hit the third Georgia batter, who was crowding the plate, and a brawl threatened to break out, but was halted by coaches and umpires. The Georgia coach then called the game, saying things were getting out of hand and he wanted to calm his players down.

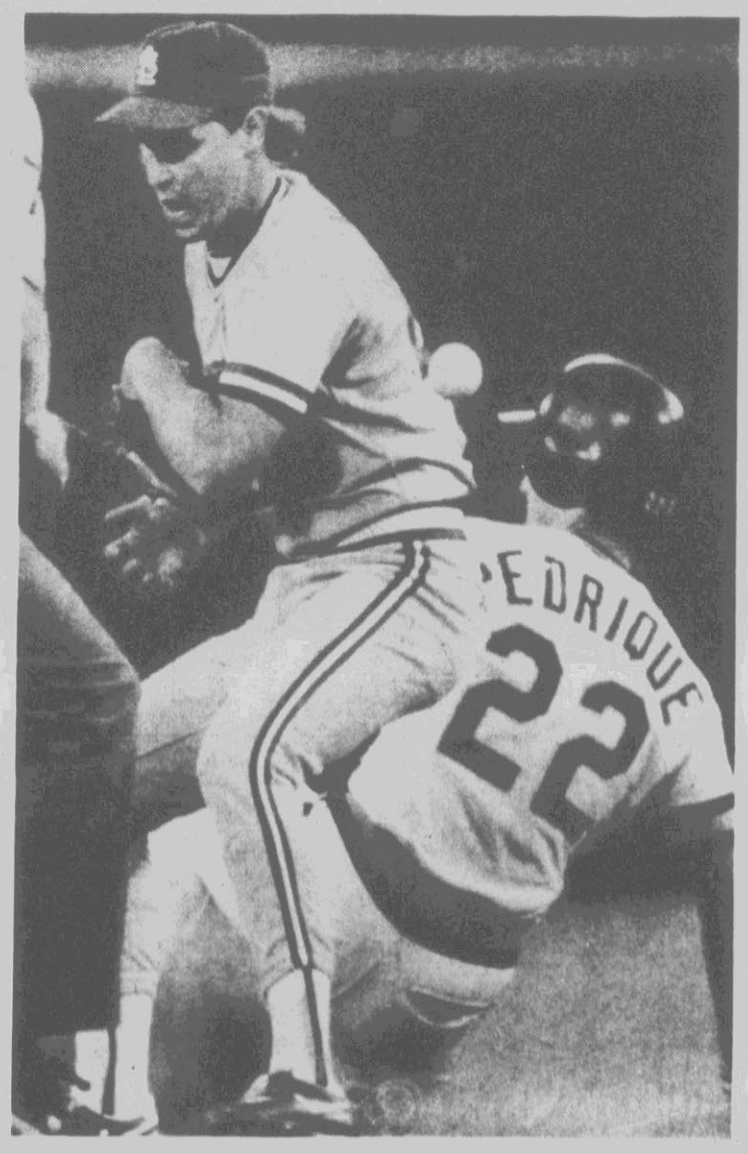

Gatlin and Hines each had three hits for Greenville, while Moore and Christopher each added two. Brewington, who went the distance, allowed only two hits, but walked seven along the way.

Cliatt Named To ECU Post

Ed Cliatt has been named associate athletic director for internal affairs at East Carolina, ECU director of athletics Ken Karr announced Wednesday.

Cliatt, 49, replaces Gene Templeton, who resigned his position last month to enter private business in Arizona.

Cliatt comes to ECU from the Air Force Academy, where he was associate athletic director for the past four years. He has been at the academy since 1966 and will retire his rank of colonel when he assumes his duties with the Pirate program in September.

The Norfolk, Va. native began his career at Air Force in 1966 as the Falcons' wrestling coach. He continued as head coach until 1970 when he became the director of the physical education department.

"Ed Cliatt brings to the job more than a decade of experience in doing exactly what this job entails," Karr said. "We're very fortunate to have him join our athletic department."

Cliatt received his undergraduate degree from the University of Maryland in 1961. During his years at Maryland, he was a standout wrestler for the Terrapins as he won the Atlantic Coast Conference wrestling crown in 1959 in the 130-pound class. He received his master's degree in education from the University of Michigan in 1967.

U.S. Baseball Not Overwhelming

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Baseball may be America's pastime, but the U.S. squad isn't overwhelming the competition at the Pan American Games.

The Cuban weightlifters are, however, as is Costa Rican swimmer Silvia Poll.

The Americans ran their record to 2-0 Tuesday night with a sloppy 14-7 victory over Venezuela in a game that left U.S. Coach Ron Fraser a little embarassed.

"I wish I was a rich man," he said, "because if I was, I'd give all the people their money back."

The United States, which fell behind Canada 4-0 before rallying to win 10-6 Sunday, bolted to a 9-0 lead against Venezuela, then saw the visitors come back within 9-6.

"It was almost like we had to beat them twice," Fraser said. "We got the big lead but didn't hold it. We've had problems in both games with not playing a full nine innings. We're playing like we have a time limit."

Fraser also was upset by a brushback pitch by Venezuela's Jesus Lopez after Americans Ty Griffin, Tino Martinez and Ted Wood homered in the fourth inning.

"I think everybody reads the papers and sees what's going on in the major leagues," Fraser said. "Well, this is amateur baseball and no one's making $1.4 million to play."

The Americans have scored 24 runs in two games, but Fraser said, "I'm still disappointed."

After three days of competition, the United States continued its overall domination with 106 medals, 49 of them gold. Cuba, thanks mainly to its unblemished showing in weightlifting, had 62 medals, including 32 gold.

SWIMMING

Sixteen-year-old Poll said she has surprised herself by becoming the first athlete to win three separate events at the games.

Poll added the 100-meter backstroke to her earlier golds in the 100- and 200-meter freestyles. She also has a silver and a bronze in the relays.

"I've done better than I thought I would do," she said. "I planned to win medals, but I'm pretty surprised.

"I feel very, very good. This tells me next year I'll be much better and have a better chance in the Olympics."

"She's one of the finest talents I've seen come along," U.S. Coach Skip Kenney said. "It's no fluke. Physically she's very gifted. She's real, real special. Her feel for the water is unique."

The other swimming races were won by Americans.

Mike O'Brien of Costa Mesa, Calif., the 1984 Olympic gold medalist in the 1,500 freestyle, won his second gold of the meet in the 200 backstroke. Julie Martin of LaPalma, Calif., took the women's 400 freestyle. Todd Dudley of Raleigh, N.C., won the men's 100 freestyle. The U.S. women's 400 freestyle relay team of Kathy Coffin of Colonial Heights, Va., Jenny Thompson of Dover, N.H., Sara Linke of Walnut Creek, Calif., and 1984 Olympic gold medalist Carrie Steinseifer of Saratoga, Calif., also won.

The United States has won 11 gold medals in the first three days.

WEIGHTLIFTING

The Cuban domination continued with Pablo Lara and Francisco Allegues sweeping the gold and silver medals, respectively, in the middleweight competition.

Roberto "Tony" Urrutia, who defected from Cuba to the United States in 1980, won three bronze medals but couldn't defeat his former countrymen.

"He is a traitor to his country," Lara said. "Winning against him is a great thing."

The Cubans have captured all 22 gold medals in the six weight classes.

"Our trainers are very, very hard on us," Lara said. "They're always on us, telling us to do more and to work harder. We don't get much rest."

BASKETBALL

Brazil's men edged Puerto Rico 100-99 in a wild contest at Market Square Arena.

As opposing players hollered and waved their arms at him, Gerson Victalino made the second of two free throws with one second remaining to give the Brazilians the victory. Players and assistant coaches from Puerto Rico, upset over the foul call that sent Victalino to the line, rushed the officials and yelled at them as they left the court.

Earlier, both benches emptied in a brief altercation after Puerto Rico's Edgar Leon was fouled intentionally and swung at Brazil's Paulo Villas Boas in retaliation.

Jose Ortiz, the Pacific 10 player of the year last season and a first-round draft choice of the NBA's Utah Jazz, had tied the score for Puerto Rico on a lay-up with six seconds to play.

WRESTLING

Cuba won all 20 of its Greco-Roman matches, including three against U.S. wrestlers, in preliminary rounds.

Among the U.S. losers was James Martinez of Osseo, Minn., the 1984 Olympic bronze medalist, who was defeated by Alexis Jimenez at 149.5 pounds.

"I always knew I would win. I have been training hard," said the 19-year-old Jimenez. "I am very glad I am accomplishing the job I was sent here to do by my leader (Fidel Castro.)"

The other U.S. wrestlers who lost to Cubans were Dalen Wasmund of Minneapolis at 136.5 pounds and Eric Wetzel of Chicago at 105.5.

RHYTHMIC GYMNASTICS

Diane Simpson won gold medals in the rope and ribbon competition and took a silver medal in hoop.

The 18-year-old from Evanston, Ill., had scores of 9.80, 9.80 and 9.75 in the three events, the highest awarded in the final round Tuesday night.

TEAM SPORTS

Jim Buehning of Short Hills, N.J., was suspended for the rest of the qualifying round of team handball for striking a Canadian player during a game Sunday.

Originally, Buehning had been suspended for the entire games, but the penalty was reduced after the United States filed a formal protest. Buehning's father, Dr. Peter G. Buehning, is president of the Pan American Handball Federation.

The reduction means Buehning can play in the final, if the U.S. team gets that far.

Vaughn Alvey of Sandy, Utah, pitched a no-hitter, walking the first batter, then retiring the next 21 in a 9-0 U.S. softball romp over Argentina. Alvey struck out 12 and allowed just two balls out of the infield.

continue, and Tim Crews and Matt Young held the Reds to five hits and an unearned run in the final four innings.

Cincinnati, which still leads San Francisco by one game and Houston by three in the West, got its first run when Eric Davis led off the fourth with his 33rd homer.

Astros 7, Giants 3

Houston broke a four-game losing streak as Jose Cruz homered twice and Craig Reynolds hit his third of the season, all against San Francisco's Mike LaCoss.

Will Clark's 26th homer, his seventh in nine games, tied the score 2-2 in the sixth inning. But Reynolds led off the seventh with his homer off LaCoss, 10-7, and Cruz added a three-run shot for a 6-2 lead over the Giants, who had won five straight.

Jeff Heathcock, 2-1, allowed nine hits, walked one and struck out two in 7 1-3 innings for the victory. Both of his victories came over the Giants, and he is 5-0 lifetime against them.

Phillies 9, Cubs 8

Philadelphia came back from 6-3, 7-6 and 8-7 deficits to beat Chicago on Milt Thompson's single with one out in the bottom of the 13th inning.

Luis Aguayo lead off the 13th with a single off losing pitcher Bob Tewksbury, 0-4. A sacrifice and an error moved Aguayo to third, and Thompson followed with a single, his fifth hit of the game in seven at-bats.

Kevin Gross, 7-10, who is appealing a 10-day suspension for having sandpaper in his glove, pitched the 13th inning for the Phillies and was the winner.

Jody Davis, Dave Martinez and Keith Moreland, who had four RBI, homered for the Cubs. Chris James had a three-run homer to bring the Phillies back from a 6-3 deficit in the fifth.

triple and scored on Bill Madlock's groundout. Matt Nokes hit a two-run double later in the inning. Chet Lemon, Madlock and Gibson singled in the second before Trammell hit his 18th home run.

Jerry Royster and Ivan Calderon homered for Chicago.

Twins 7, Angels 2

Frank Viola won for the seventh time in his last eight starts and Gary Gaetti homered as Minnesota beat California for its fifth straight victory.

Viola, 13-7, gave up nine hits in eight-plus innings and defeated the visting Angels and John Candelaria, 6-4. Candelaria, who began the game with a 4-0 record against the Twins, had outdueled Viola twice this season.

Tom Brunansky hit an RBI double in the second inning and Mark Davidson hit a two-run double later in the inning. Gaetti hit his 24th home run in the sixth.

Rangers 7, Brewers 1

Greg Harris pitched seven strong innings and Texas beat Milwaukee for the second time in 11 games this season.

Milwaukee's Paul Molitor extended his hitting streak to 26 games, the longest in the major leagues this year, with a first-inning single.

Harris, 5-8, allowed one run on seven hits. He struck out six and walked one. Mark Knudson, 2-3, took the loss.

Indians 6, Orioles 3

Mel Hall and Cory Snyder each rapped three of Cleveland's 12 hits and the Indians won in Baltimore. Hall drove in three runs and Snyder hit his 26th homer.

Larry Sheets hit two homers for the Orioles. He has three two-homer games in his last five. Sheets has hit 24 home runs, eight in his last nine games.

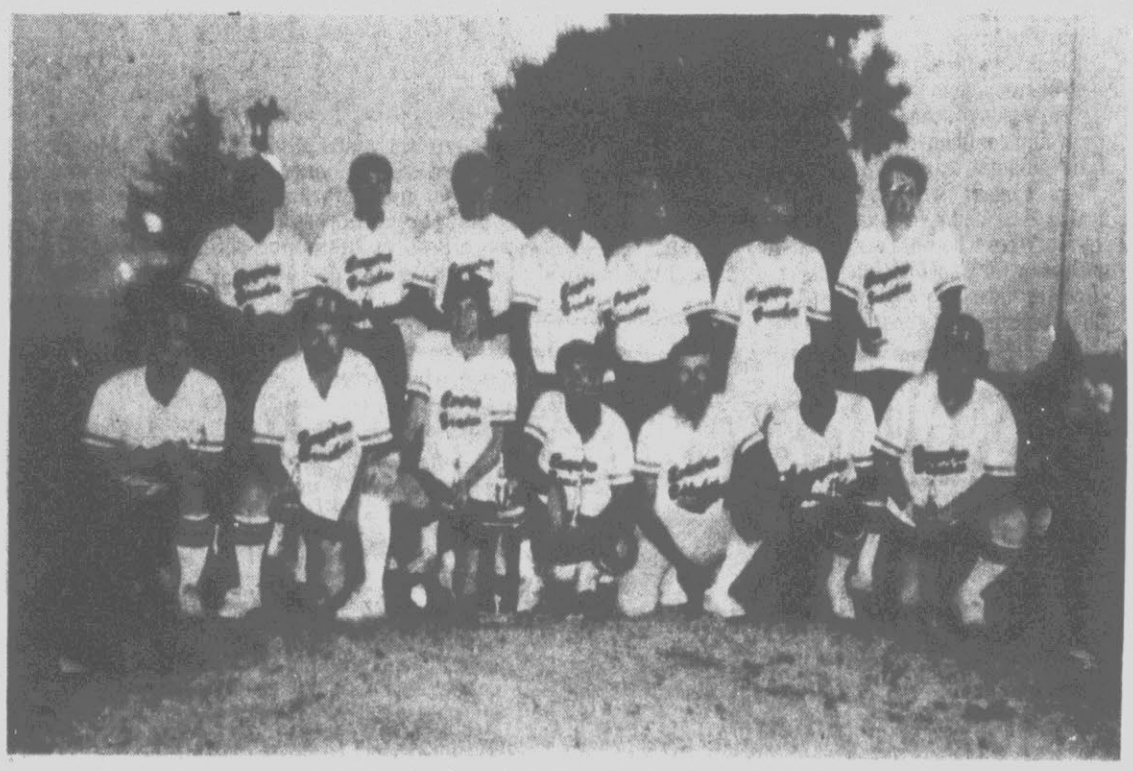

Scott Bailes, 6-4, gave up two earned runs in 6 2-3 innings and Doug Jones finished for his second save. Dave Schmidt, 10-3, took the loss.

Sullivan's Mistake Costs Burger

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — Auburn assistant football coach Pat Sullivan, reprimanded by the school for bailing quarterback Jeff Burger out of jail after a fight, admits he made a mistake and says he is willing to accept the consequences.

Burger, meanwhile, was declared ineligible by Auburn officials Tuesday under procedures spelled out by the NCAA. The school is now appealing to the NCAA to restore Burger's eligibility.

But even is Burger's eligibility is restored, he still could miss his senior season because of alleged plagiarism on a term paper.

An Auburn faculty member, who asked not to be identified, is circulating a petition urging that the a two-quarter suspension resulting from the allegations be reduced.

The petition reads: "On the assumption that the charges against Jeff Burger have been completely and accurately reported in the media, we, the undersigned, believe the assessed penalty is too harsh and should be significantly reduced."

The faculty member said the petition was being circulated on campus and was not sure how many people had signed.

A university honesty committee recommended that Burger be suspended for two quarters for alleged plagiarism on a paper he prepared for a psychology course.

The matter is now before a vice president and eventualy goes to Auburn University's president for a final decision on the propriety of the penalty. If it stands, Burger's career at Auburn would be over.

Sullivan, a former Heisman Trophy winner, signed a $700 property bond to get Burger out of jail July 14. He was reprimanded by the university and Coach Pat Dye for violating NCAA rules that prohibit such assistance being given to athletes.

The reprimand bars Sullivan from all off-campus athletic activities such as evaluation, recruiting and public speaking for 90 days.

"I made a mistake," Sullivan said. "I should have known better, but it was early in the morning and I didn't think. All I knew was that one of my boys was in trouble and I had to help him. The lady at the desk said, 'Sign here.' And I signed. That's all there was to it. I wasn't thinking. I made a mistake and I'm prepared to pay for it."

Sullivan signed the bond after Burger was arrested following a fight at a restaurant parking lot. Burger eventually pleaded guilty to carrying a concealed weapon and paid a $50 fine, plus $32 in court costs. With the plea, a charge of public intoxication was dropped.

Joe Boland, who is chairman of Auburn University's Committee on Intercollegiate Athletics, was joined by Associate Athletic Director Hindman Wall in investigating Sullivan's bailout of Burger. The university sent its report on the case to the NCAA last Friday.

Boland said Tuesday that the university, not the NCAA, declared Burger ineligible under NCAA procedures and sent the investigative report to the NCAA with an appeal to restore the athlete's eligibility.

NCAA officials declined to comment directly on the case of Burger, a 22-year-old from Cedartown, Ga., who will be a fifth-year senior this fall. He led Auburn to a 10-2 mark last year.

Steve Morgan, the NCAA's assistant executive director for compliance and enforcement, said previously that such bailouts by coaches may be viewed with sympathy by the NCAA.

"If a coach just steps in like a parent to come get him out of jail, and then is repaid, then that isn't a real serious thing," Morgan said last week when the matter surfaced.

Janet Justice, an NCAA official who works with Morgan on eligibility questions, said Tuesday that Morgan handles the initial review of such appeals. His decision, which can be relayed verbally to a university, may be appealed further to an NCAA committee, Justice said.

She said she could not comment on any specific case, but generally bailout cases do not lead to complete loss of elilgibility if there is no pattern of violation of NCAA rules by the coach or athlete and repayment is made to the coach so the athlete receives no extra benefit.

The NCAA is expected to rule within two weeks.

Jenkins Now Coaching Pitchers

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — It is Sunday afternoon at the ball park, the grass is real and there is ivy on the brick outfield wall.

The wind is blowing hard, causing outfielders to run around in circles as they try to catch swirling fly balls.

Sound like a scene from Chicago's Wrigley Field in the early 1970s? It could be but, on this day at Busch Stadium in Indianapolis, Jenkins is trying to calm down a young Canadian pitcher who has watched a comfortable lead disappear in the opening baseball game of the Pan Am Games.

The advice from Jenkins, who since the end of June has been the pitching coach for the Canadian national team, may have been sound. But it was not enough. Four Canadian pitchers walked too many batters and threw too many wild pitches as the team blew a 5-1 lead and eventually lost to the favored United States 10-6.

"You get a little frustrated seeing some of the mistakes you've tried to relate to some of the fellows," Jenkins said after the ugly loss. "It's going to take that repetition of over and over again to get them to think a little more."

If Jenkins was angry, he didn't show it. Perhaps he recalls his first years in organized baseball. He played at the same Busch Stadium in 1963 when he was with Little Rock in the Philadelphia Phillies' organization.

Since retiring before the 1984 season — he ended his career with the Cubs, the team he was with for the majority of his 284 victories over 18 seasons — Jenkins has not had much to do with baseball. Mostly, he has tended to his farm and dog-breeding business in the rural community of Blenheim, Ontario, about 60 miles northeast of Windsor.

He played a bit for the London franchise in the Inter-County league, a senior amateur circuit in southern Ontario. And two years ago he was the Liberal candidate in the Ontario provincial election — he finished a disappointing third running for election from the Windsor area.

Jenkins will soon be a candidate in another election — not the current Ontario campaign, but a more important vote south of the border. In 1989, he will be eligible for induction into the Baseball Hall of Fame at Cooperstown, N.Y.

Jenkins, already a member of the Canadian Baseball Hall of Fame, likes his chances for Cooperstown.

"I think my record — if that's what they're going to call it upon — ranks with quite a few of the people in the Hall of Fame right now."

But Jenkins is unsure what will happen if the voters, members of the Baseball Writers Association of America, decide to base their votes on "outside activities" — a reference to a 1980 conviction for possession of illegal drugs. He was found guilty but given an absolute discharge, which means he has no criminal record.

"I can't predict what's going to happen because they (the voters) control the individuals that go in and how long it takes."

Cooperstown isn't an immediate concern for Jenkins, who other than a receding hairline looks good enough at age 43 to try for a comeback. He was asked to coach for the Canadian team last December and now he's committed to helping Coach John Haar get Canada into the medal rounds at the Pan-Ams and eventually qualify for the 1988 Summer Olympics, where baseball will be a demonstration sport.

Jenkins says he has no ambition to coach or manage in the majors right now. He wants to spend time with his family and continue to work with the young Canadian team.

"I'm content with my life in Canada," he told a group of American reporters who were surprised to find him on the Canadian team.

For the next two weeks, Jenkins will be passing on a generation of advice to young Canadian pitchers like Denis Boucher, Rheal Cormier, Tim Dell and Mike Ross of Calgary. All have major-league potential, Jenkins says.

"If they want to take baseball as a profession, I think this is a good opportunity because a lot of scouts will be watching. If they don't want to become professionals, it's hard to pound into their heads that it is a great livelihood.

"I did it for 23 years. I thought it was fantastic."

Defector Had A Tough Beginning

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The visitors painted pictures of a land of plenty, a country where the streets were all but paved with gold. Roberto Urrutia, a young Cuban weightlifter, listened to their tales and wondered about this wonderful place called America.

"They would come to the community and they would say, 'We have this, and we have that,' " he said.

One day in 1980, when the Cuban weightlifting delegation was in Mexico City, Urrutia got into a dispute with a coach. The next thing he knew, he was defecting — climbing out a hotel window and jumping a fence to reach the U.S. Embassy. He left behind a young son in reaching for the promise of plenty.

"You are young," he said. "You don't realize what you lose, what you miss."

When he reached Miami, he did not find gold in the streets. He found poverty. He could not speak English. He had no friends. He had no money. He had no job and he had no help. His home was an abandoned car.

The memory of those early days in America are etched in his mind. And so, after winning three bronze medals for his new country at the Pan Am Games in his first international competition in eight years, Urrutia had some advice for potential defectors.

"I would tell anybody who wants to defect, 'Please, don't do it. It's a big mistake.' I had nobody to help me. If not for my wife and her help, I would be dead now."

The bad days have become good ones for Urrutia. He has a new family with two small children. And he is lifting weights competitively again. "I am a happy man to be in America," he said, "but I remember the hardships I went through."

As Urrutia competed Tuesday against the Cubans, he grinned broadly. He seemed thrilled with his three bronze medals, waving happily to the fans, showing emotion during the awards ceremony as the Cuban national anthem was played.

Pablo Lara and Francisco Allegues, the Cubans who swept the middleweight weightlifting gold and silver medals, were more businesslike. Later, they called Urrutia "a traitor to his country."

"I have tried to talk to the coaches and sports leaders to explain what I did," Urrutia said. "The leaders of Cuba have stated a person has to make his mistakes."

Was defecting a mistake, then?

"Yes," he said softly. "The early years were hard. I was very inexperienced when I did what I did. I try to explain that to them."

Still, the Cubans had targeted Urrutia in this competition, and seemed delighted to have defeated their ex-countryman. "He is not thought of very highly in Cuba," Allegues said. "We felt it was very important to beat him."

And they succeeded, although their triumph seemed somewhat hollow because Urrutia had been away from his sport since defecting and only returned to training five months ago.

"For me," the 29-year-old said, "today is like a stepping stone. If I had stayed in Cuba, I would be retired."

Instead, he now thinks in terms of next year's Seoul Olympics. U.S. weightlifting officials consider him a definite medal threat for those Games. And what about the 1991 Pan Am Games in Havana? Would he go back?

"You never know," Urrutia said. "That is far away."

He said the Cuban delegation was civil to him and even relayed news of his family. There were no confrontations. "Nobody hassles me or tries to hurt me," he said. "I am a free man, like a bird."

Free in America, the land of plenty, just the way he once dreamed he would be.

When Roger Clemens of the Boston Red Sox set a major league strikeout record for one game by fanning 20 Seattle Mariners April 29, 1986, eight of them were called strikeouts.

Gross Admits Guilt, Accepts Suspension

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Philadelphia Phillies pitcher Kevin Gross, who admits he was caught with the goods when umpires inspected his glove, says he can't understand why the Players Association is appealing a 10-day suspension he is willing to serve.

Gross, kicked out of a game with the Chicago Cubs when umpire John Kibler found sandpaper glued to the player's glove Monday night, received a 10-day suspension on Tuesday from National League President A. Bartlett Giamatti.

The suspension was to have been effective immediately, but was then delayed when an appeal was filed.

"I don't know why they are appealing," Gross said. "All I know is that they decided to appeal."

Don Fehr, executive director of the Players' Association, said Tuesday that Gross had full knowledge of the plan to appeal the suspension. Fehr said his office had been in contact all day with Gross or his agent.

"I was caught with sandpaper in my glove," Gross admitted Tuesday. "They (the umpires) thought I was supposedly scuffing the ball and I was ejected. I was not scuffing any ball in the game last night."

He said he was just "fooling with" the sandpaper.

National League spokeswoman Katy Feeney said Tuesday that sandpaper and an unidentified sticky substance were found on Gross' glove, which was shipped to the NL office by the umpires. Also sent along was the ball in play at the time of the ejection. The ball, Kibler said, was clean.

Gross is the second pitcher ejected in the last 10 days. Joe Niekro of the Minnesota Twins was thrown out of a game against the California Angels last week for carrying an emery board and sandpaper in his pocket. American League President Bobby Brown suspended Niekro for 10 days without pay. Niekro appealed but the suspension was upheld.

Gross' situation puts Phillies' Manager Lee Elia in something of a predicament. Elia said that, had the suspension begun immediately, he would have gone to a four-man rotation until Gross returned. Now the Phillies' pitching is as unsettled as the Gross case.

On Tuesday night, for instance, Gross was called out of the bullpen to pitch the 13th inning against the Cubs. Gross, 7-10, picked up the victory when the Phillies scored in the bottom of the inning to win it 9-8.

During the fifth inning Monday night, Cubs Manager Gene Michael asked home plate umpire Charlie Williams to check Gross' glove. Williams was joined at the mound by Kibler, chief of the umpiring crew. Gross was ejected when the sandpaper was discovered, but the ball was clean. Michael insisted that balls used earlier in the game had been defaced.

"There was no reason for me to be checked. Nothing was done with the ball," Gross said. "I've never done anything like it before. I've learned a lesson, I guess."

"I will say that I don't condone it," Elia said. "I'm a little disturbed by it for the simple reason I haven't condoned it at any time. ... In fairness to Kevin, though, it's not something that is part of his program."

Niekro and Gross were set down after the presidents of both leagues told umpires to be alert for possible defacing of balls by pitchers and corking of bats by hitters.

Schmidt Might Be Back In 88

NEW YORK (AP) — Mike Schmidt, who had suggested this could be his final season, is showing strong signs of continuing his Hall of Fame career for at least one more year.

Schmidt has indicated to friends he will play in 1988 for the Philadelphia Phillies, provided the team does not try to cut his $2,127,333 salary.

"I wouldn't come back for less than I'm making. You can take that to the bank," Schmidt said.

The Phillies say they want Schmidt back, yet have told him and his agent Arthur Rosenberg they do not want to talk about a new contract until after the season ends. But Phillies President Bill Giles says money will not get in the way.

"It doesn't matter to me at this point," Schmidt said. "I'm indifferent."

Publicly, Schmidt has avoided discussing next year. He says he wants to concentrate on baseball now and his future later.

"He's merely going through a thought process now," Rosenberg said.

But, all indications are Schmidt will definitely return. Even he gives an increasingly sly smile when asked whether he will play again.

Schmidt's knees, which have undergone three operations, are holding up fine and not causing him any pain. When Schmidt said late last season that 1987 might be his final year, he said his physical condition could be the determining factor.

"They're fine," he said about his knees. "No problem."

Schmidt, who turns 38 next month, has been adamant about not hanging on past his prime. He has continued his level of production this year, batting .294 with 22 home runs and 76 runs batted in.

"I haven't had one of those great streaks," Schmidt said. "But it's been a consistent year."

A rib cage injury earlier in the season cost him about 85 at-bats, and without that problem his numbers would be even more impressive. He hit his 500th home run in April and got his 2,000th hit in May.

Also, the Phillies are looking more like contenders in the National League East to him. The pursuit of another World Series championship remains important to Schmidt, and this season has been a disappointment because the Phillies have not maintained any consistency. They are fourth in the division at 57-55, 12 games behind St. Louis.

"If things had stayed the way they were under (fired Manager John) Felske, it might've been time to walk away," he said. "But I think we'll be a very competitive team at the very least."

One more season could also give Schmidt a shot at an unprecedented fourth Most Valuable Player award. Team achievements have always been most important to Schmidt, although another MVP trophy is something he would like.

Either way, Schmidt is assured of high rankings on several all-time lists. He is 11th with 517 home runs and eight behind Eddie Mathews' record (486) of home runs hit as a third baseman. Schmidt's 1,468 RBI rank 26th.

Schmidt has said in the past that he would like to manage in the major leagues, preferably with the Phillies. That is still a desire, though he has diplomatically avoided getting into any debate regarding current Phillies Manager Lee Elia.

PASO Condemns Refusal Of Visa

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — After considering a variety of protests that included shutting down the Pan Am Games, delegates of the Pan American Sports Organization condemned the U.S. State Department's refusal to grant a visa to a member of Chile's team.

Francisco Zuniga, a member of the Chilean shooting team, was scheduled to compete Tuesday morning at the same time the PASO delegates were meeting. As the debate raged, the State Department in Washington issued a final rejection of the visa application, citing human rights concerns.

Charles Redman, a State Department spokesman, said Zuniga, reportedly a member of Chile's secret police, had been turned down because of evidence he had been linked to "a number of acts of political violence of the most extreme kind, including murder."

"It has been determined that his entrance to the United States at this time would be prejudicial to public interest and as a consequence, his application for a visa has been denied."

Members of PASO's delegate assembly complained that the rejection set a dangerous precedent for future international sporting events.

"We condemn the refusal of a visa to a sportsman intending to participate wherever it occurs when that sportsman is endorsed by his Olympic Committee," Mario Vazquez Rana, president of PASO, said.

In a telex addressed to Under Secretary of State Edward J. Derwinski, PASO officials cited an agreement when the games were awarded to Indianapolis that access to the United States would be granted to all athletes.

"We must state that, though recognizing the sovereign authority of the government, nevertheless at international events of the Olympic movement of the magnitude of these continental championships, we must insist that the host country set aside the usual restrictions and allow all duly certified athletes participation," the telex said.

"The continued denial of the visa would be an unfortunate precedent and would have a deliterious impact on the creation of international amity and good will in amateur sport toward the United States."

It was signed by Juan Antonio Samaranch, president of the International Olympic Committee, and Robert H. Helmick, president of the U.S. Olympic Committee, as well as Vazquez Rana.

Juan Carlos Esgep, the Chilean delegate, vigorously protested the rejection of Zuniga's visa application.

"The Olympic principle has been violently violated," he said. "It is hazardous if governments decide to arbitrarily enshroud the Olympic movement. We request firm measures to avoid any repetition."

One suggestion made by Honduran delegate Julio Villalta was to shut down the competition. Later during the debate, Villalta took a less drastic position, saying a shutdown was just one option available to the delegates.

Puerto Rico's delegate, German Rickehof, suggested halting the shooting competition in which Zuniga would have competed.

Mexico said the visa rejection was a violation of the PASO charter and that moral and financial sanctions should be imposed against the organizing committee. Costa Rica's solution was to boycott the closing ceremonies and have the athletes wear black armbands.

Finally, a resolution was framed with imput from Mexico and Equador in which the delegates formally condemned the refusal to issue a visa to the Chilean athlete.

"We agreed not to sanction the athletes," Vazquez Rana said. "They are here to compete. We are here to resolve problems. The executive committee will continue to battle and continue the struggle to have our statutes complied with."

Eighth Place Boosts Earnhardt's Lead

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Dale Earnhardt's eighth-place finish in the Budweiser At The Glen boosted his NASCAR Winston Cup lead to a record 473 points.

Earnhardt has accumulated 2,971 points through the first 18 races of the 29-event season. Terry Labonte moved into second place this week, but he's way back at 2,498.

The 473-point difference between first and second is the largest margin since the point standings were started in 1976.

Darrell Waltrip is sixth with 2,357 points, followed by Budweiser At The Glen winner Rusty Wallace at 2,315; Ricky Rudd at 2,314; Ken Schrader at 2,280; and Richard Petty at 2,193.

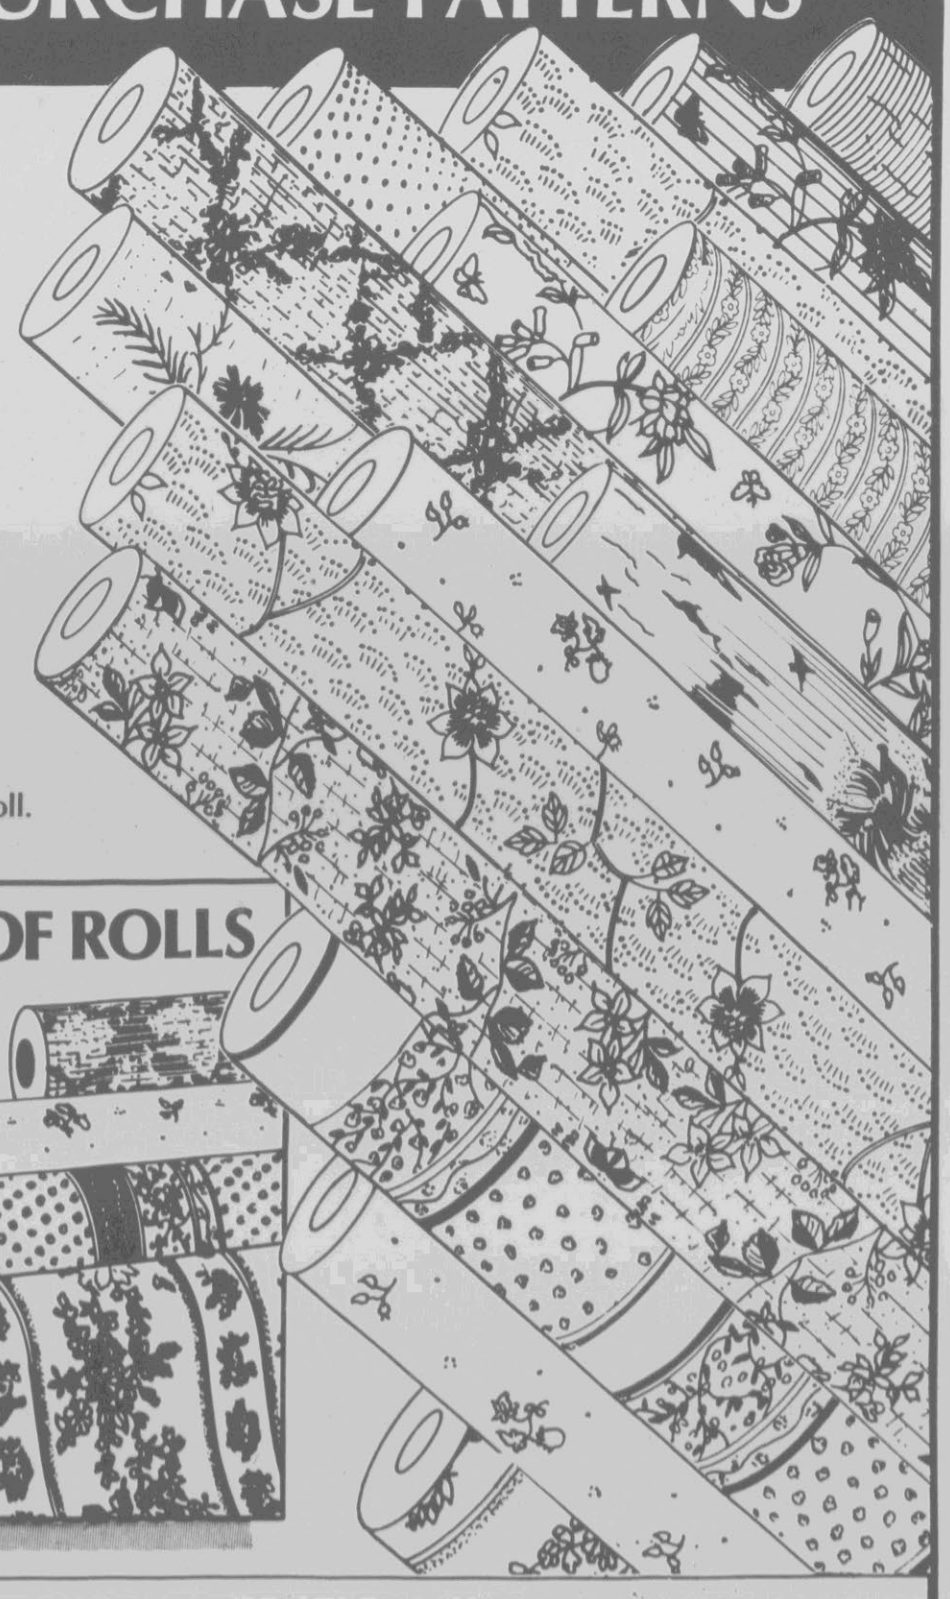

Earnhardt, who could go over $2 million in season winnings by capturing the Winston Cup championship, leads the circuit in money-winnings wih $1,040,820. Bill Elliott is second with $908,045.

Elliott would be assured of becoming the first driver in motorsports to surpass $1 million three straight years just by starting the remainder of the races, but could cross the mark as early as the next two races.

Davey Allison, son of 1983 NASCAR Winston Cup champion Bobby Allison, maintained his large lead in the Rookie of the Year competition. He leads second-place Dale Jarrett 199-115.

Allison already has become the first rookie to win two races, picking up wins at Talladega, Ala., and Dover, Del.

Michigan Relies On Morris, Line

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Michigan's chance of earning another trip to the Rose Bowl starts with diminutive tailback Jamie Morris.

Morris' chances, however, start with an offensive line that averages 280 pounds per man. Those are nice numbers when you're like Morris, who's only 5-foot-7 and 179 pounds.

The Wolverines earned a trip to Pasadena with an 11-1 record in 1986, but the Rose Bowl loss to Arizona State dropped Michigan to No. 8 in the final poll.

Michigan opens its season Sept. 12 against Notre Dame and its defense of the Big Ten crown begins Oct. 3 against Wisconsin. Both will be home games.

This year's offensive line will be led by tackle "Jumbo" John Elliott, a 6-7, 306-pounder considered a likely first-round pick in the next NFL draft, and center John Vitale, a 6-1, 289-pounder.

Both are seniors, although Vitale has two years of eligibility remaining.

"Elliott and Vitale are both great linemen," said Coach Bo Schembechler, the dean of Big Ten coaches who is beginning his 19th year with the Wolverines

How They Voted

WASHINGTON — Here's how area House members and senators were recorded on major roll call votes before the 100th Congress began its ongoing summer recess, which ends Sept. 9.

House

SPENDING CUT — By a vote of 181 for and 245 against, the House refused to cut two percent from discretionary spending categories of a fiscal 1988 appropriations bill (HR 3058) for the departments of Labor and Health and Human Services.

The amendment sought to slice $72.6 million from the legislation's $36.3 billion outlay for non-entitlement programs. It was rejected after the House repeatedly refused to make larger cuts in the $127 billion measure, the most expensive appropriations bill other than the Pentagon's.

The bill was sent to the Senate.

Members voting yes favored the two percent spending cut.

North Carolina representatives voting yes were Martin Lancaster, D-3; Stephen Neal, D-5; Howard Coble, R-6; Alex McMillan, R-9, and Cass Ballenger, R-10.

Those voting no were Walter Jones, D-1; Tim Valentine, D-2; David Price, D-4; Charles Rose, D-7; W.G. Hefner, D-8, and James Clarke, D-11.

NUCLEAR POWER — By a vote of 160 for and 261 against, the House rejected an amendment to block federal licensing of completed nuclear power plants at Shoreham, N.Y., and Seabrook, N.H., near the Massachusetts border.

A test of House sentiment on nuclear power, the amendment was proposed to a Nuclear Regulatory Commission authorization bill (HR 1315) later sent to the Senate. Its effect was to preserve the power of the New York and Massachusetts governors to veto emergency evacuation plans required by the NRC as a condition of licensing.

Supporter Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., said "safety must be our paramount concern" in setting policy for nuclear power.

Opponent Ralph Hall, D-Tex., said the amendment would set a nationwide precedent for mothballing new nuclear plants.

Members voting yes wanted to block the Seabrook and Shoreham licensing.

Those voting no were Jones, Valentine, Lancaster, Price, Neal, Coble, Rose, Hefner, McMillan and Ballenger.

AIDS COMMISSION — The House passed, 355 for and 68 against, and sent to the Senate a bill (HR 2881) establishing a commission to advise Congress and the executive branch on combatting AIDS.

The panel would parallel President Reagan's 13-member AIDS commission. It would give lawmakers more stake in the issue, which was largely ignored on Capitol Hill until a few months ago.

Sponsor Ray Rowland, D-Ga., said lawmakers should "put aside partisan politics and philosophical differences" and confront AIDS.

Opponent William Dannemeyer, R-Calif., said AIDS should be addressed not by "another commission" but by tough policies such as mandatory testing of high-risk population groups.

Members voting yes wanted to set up the AIDS commission.

Those voting yes were Jones, Valentine, Lancaster, Price, Neal, Rose, Hefner, McMillan, Ballenger and Clarke.

Senate

GRAMM-RUDMANN FIX — By a vote of 71 for and 21 against, the Senate approved an amendment that could put the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings balanced-budget law back on course. It was attached to a measure (HJ Res 324) raising the national debt ceiling that was headed for the White House.

To rememdy the Supreme Court's 1986 objection that the law enables Congress to usurp executive authority, the amendment gives the executive branch's Office of Management and Budget final say in determining when automatic spending cuts are to be triggered.

Supporter Carl Levin, D-Mich., called the repair "better than nothing."

North Carolina Sens. Terry Sanford, D, and Jesse Helms, R, both voted yes.

CONTINUING RESOLUTIONS — The Senate rejected, 41 for and 48 against, an amendment to HJ Res 324 (above) making technical changes so that presidents can have the opportunity to veto an individual appropriations bill that is part of a "continuing resolution."

CRs are massive, catch-all funding measures that Congress resorts to when it fails to enact individual spending bills in orthodox fashion. The fiscal 1987 CR was for $576 billion.

Senators voting yes favored the amendment.

Newest National Park Is Helping Nevada's Image

By CHARLES HILLINGER
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

GREAT BASIN NATIONAL PARK, Nev. — In the first summer of its existence, the country's newest national park may not yet have paved the way for an economic boom in eastern Nevada, but it is, according to Gov. Richard H. Bryan, helping the state shed its "inferiority complex."

Created by an act of Congress signed by President Reagan on Oct. 27, America's 49th national park is centered on 13,063-foot Wheeler Peak and includes glistening alpine lakes, lush meadows, deep caves and gnarled and grotesque groves of bristlecone pine, the oldest living trees on Earth. It also has working cattle and sheep ranches.

The crowds at the remote park — created from Lehman Caves National Monument and parts of the Humboldt National Forest — do not rival those at Yosemite. In the first six months of 1987, 16,300 visitors were recorded, compared to 12,700 for Lehman Caves in the same period last year. For those who visit, though, the relative absence of people is one of the charms.

"We love this park. We have visited many national parks. As far as we're concerned this ranks alongside the best of them. We like the fact that not many people have discovered this one yet," said San Diego school teacher Ethel Spahn, 62, as she and daughters Karen Spahn, 36 and Bunny Slaughter, 35, hiked along the bristlecone pine trail, led by ranger Doug Price, 24.

After walking through meadows of lupine, yellow aster and prickle poppy, by deep blue alpine lakes and through deep snow, the hikers emerged on an exposed ridge in the midst of a stand of ancient bristlecone pine, trees 2,000 to 4,000 years old.

It is a world removed from the glitz of Las Vegas and the jangling slot machines of Reno, and, Bryan said, a boost in image for the state.

"For a state so often perceived by Washington as a land fit for nothing but nuclear waste and other kinds of undesirable activity nobody else wants, Great Basin National Park sends an eloquent message (that) ... Nevada is truly a place of beauty," he said in an interview.

Bryan said Nevada "suffers from an inferiority complex. We get more than our share of raps from the national media reflecting adversely upon our state. This park greatly enhances Nevada's image."

"It means Nevada will be recognized from now on for something other than desert, gambling and legalized prostitution," said Ferrel Hansen, 35, manager of the White Pine County Chamber of Commerce in nearby Ely.

"We expect the national park will bring large numbers of visitors to this area from now on, that it will be a very positive factor to our local economy. This has been a depressed area for years," Hansen added.

Maybe the 77,109-acre park will make an economic difference in the area, but in tiny Baker, five miles outside the park's main entrance, it's not apparent yet.

Baker, population 50, isn't much — half a dozen houses, a bar, a bar and cafe combination, gas station, post office, two-room school and a seven-room motel. It has no sewers and no water system.

Reita Berger, 54, and her husband Chuck, 56, owners-operators of The Outlaw, the bar and cafe, were talking about the new park while seated at a table next to a row of slot machines. On a shelf above the slot machines was a life-size female doll, its arms around the head of a buck deer with huge antlers. Next to it was a fake buffalo head.

"Sure we're way out in the middle of nowhere," Reita Berger acknowledged. "Those of us who live here, live here because it is peaceful, quiet and away from people. In time this will probably all change. But when and how we're not sure."

No property in Baker has been sold since the establishment of the park. It is expected, however, that eventually there will be at least a first-class hotel, restaurant and casino here to cater to park visitors. A five-acre trailer park in Baker valued at about $20,000 last year has been for sale for two months for $200,000.

What will happen to Baker, of course, depends upon how many visitors Great Basin National Park attracts. The park is in one of the most isolated areas of the nation.

It is 300 miles north of Las Vegas, 250 miles southwest of Salt Lake City, a few miles off U.S. 50, a seldom driven, narrow, two-lane stretch of pavement slicing through desert and high mountains that Life magazine and the American Automobile Association recently called "the loneliest road in America."

Park Superintendent Al Hendricks and his staff are starting to work on a plan of development for Great Basin that will be completed by October 1989.

Park Service personnel are surveying the mountain, taking an inventory of resources on Wheeler Peak. Dirt roads are being graded. New brochures about the park are available.

Park headquarters and visitor center is at Lehman Caves, named after rancher Absalom S. Lehman, who discovered them in 1885.

Rangers lead visitors on 90-minute tours along a two-third-mile path through the limestone caves that are full of fascinating formations. Lights are extinguished at noon each day, and people carry candles to light their way through the caves, as visitors did in the days before electricity was available.

"These are exciting times out here in Nevada's outback," said Hendricks, 37, superintendent of Lehman Caves National Monument for six years.

Great Basin National Park was originally proposed in 1924 but was repeatedly blocked by Nevada mining and agricultural interests.

The park became a reality through a series of compromises permitting mining on existing claims and a provision unique to Great Basin National Park allowing the grazing of cattle and sheep on Wheeler Peak in perpetuity.

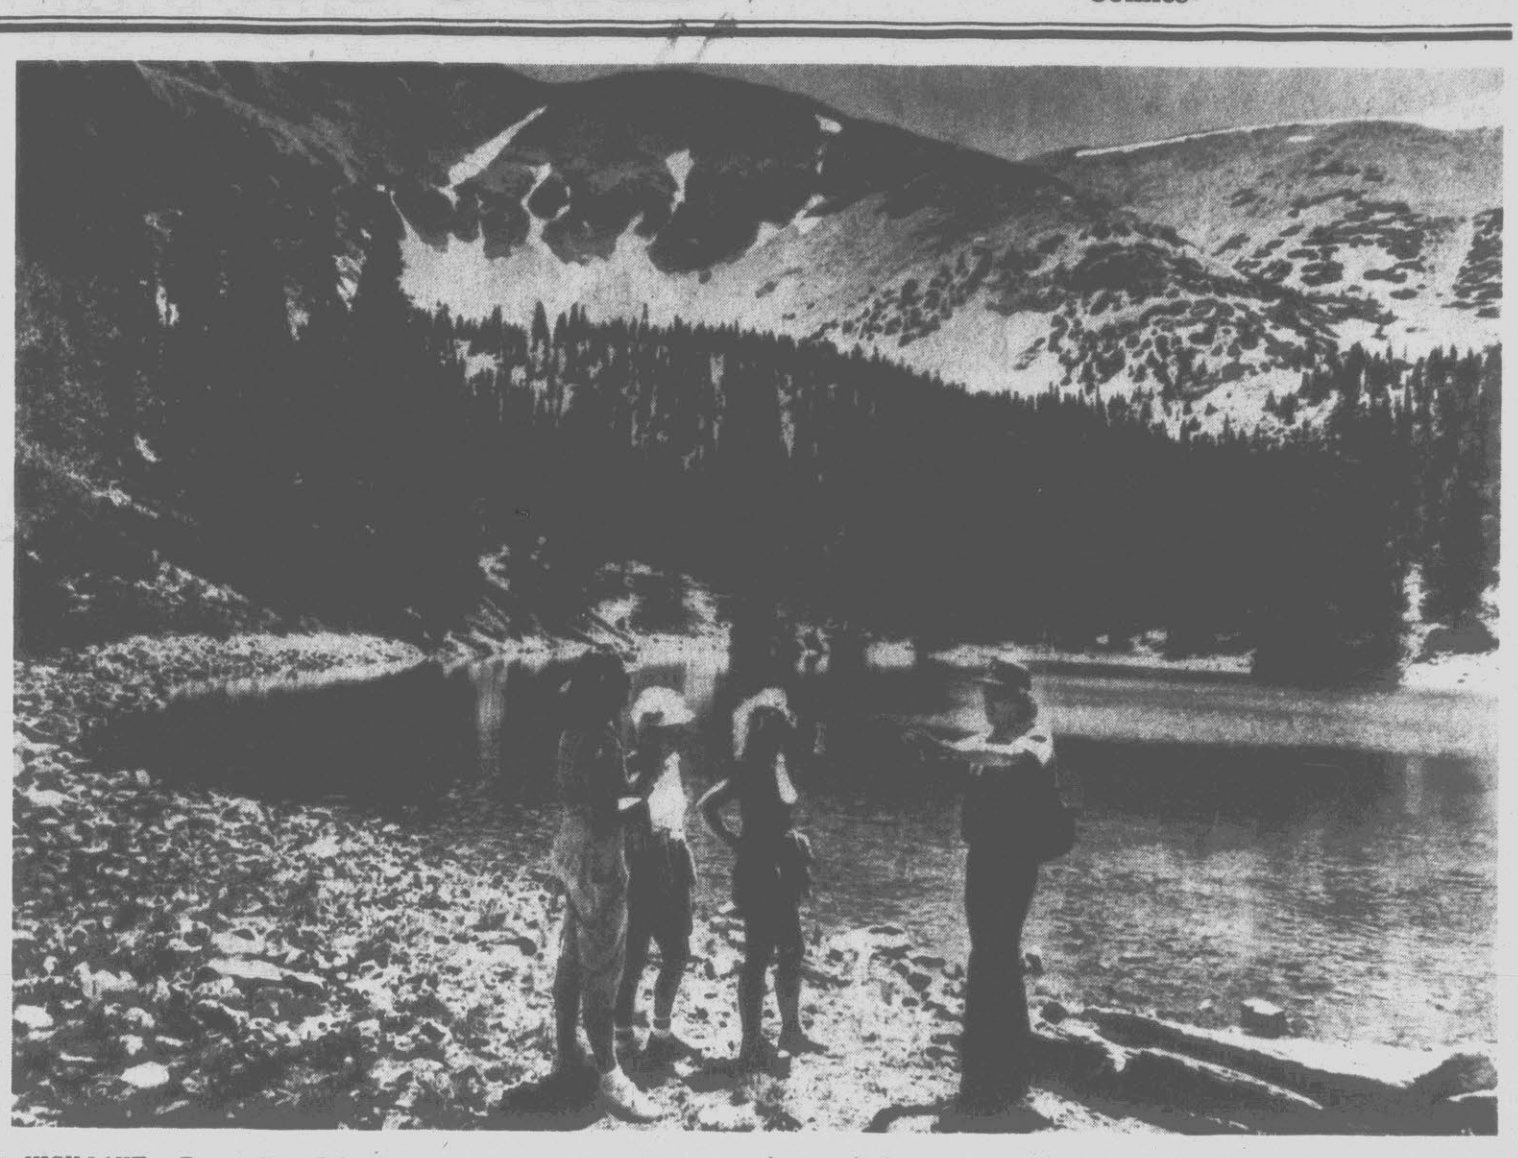

Rancher Wayne Gonder, 78; his wife, Molly, 74, and son, Owen, 45, are typical of the ranchers in Snake Valley on the eastern flanks of Wheeler Peak who fought the park.

Since mid-June the Gonders have been trailing 260 head of cattle from their mile-high ranch to alpine meadows in the national park. At any given time there are as many as 1,000 cattle or 2,000 sheep grazing in the park.

"We had our doubts. We worried about restrictions being imposed by the park service. But so far everything has been as it always has in the past. It looks like it's going to work," Owen Gonder said.

"Park visitors seem to enjoy us. Few have ever seen a real honest-to-goodness cattle drive. We enjoy meeting and talking to people, who, by the way, are constantly taking our pictures," said Molly Gonder.

Joel Griggs, 48, spokesman for the 200-member Free Enterprise Associates, a group of local opponents to the park, is now a park electrician: Six Snake Valley residents who opposed creation of the park are now working for it.

The park, newest in the national system, is helping Nevada improve its image as a tourist state but crowds are still falling far short of those at the older Yosemite Park. Traveling Violin

GENOA, Italy (AP) — A violin which Italian virtuoso Niccolo Paganini used to play is flying to Buenos Aires for a concert.

A business class seat has been booked for the violin, which will be accompanied by Genoa Mayor Cesare Campart on the Aug. 21 flight.

Despite protests by some experts that the trip to Argentina might damage the precious instrument, the Genoa city government announced Tuesday it was loaning the violin for five days to Buenos Aires' "Genoa-Argentina" festival.

The instrument was made by the master violin-maker Giuseppe Guarneri in 1742. Paganini was born in Genoa in 1782.

Rose High Sharpshooter Is Now National Guard Master Marksman

By CLAY DEANHARDT
Reflector Staff Writer

Wayne Sumrell remembers shooting at targets on a homemade range in the old sand pits behind the airport when he was a student at Rose High. He also remembers shooting snakes along the banks of the Tar River when the area wasn't quite as populated as it is now. He remembers collecting military surplus: plentiful, of high quality and cheap.

So it may not seem surprising to discover that this former Greenville resident joined the Marine Corps when he graduated from Rose in 1962, or that he is still a member of the North Carolina National Guard.

What may be surprising (but not to the snakes) is how good a marksman he has become. Good enough, in fact, to be selected as a judge for the shooting segment of the pentathalon in the U.S. Olympic Festival, held recently in the Triangle area.

Good enough also to have been the first non-commissioned officer named team captain of the National Guard Rifle Team, and to have been one of only 25 men selected from across the country to be on the National Guard National Rifle Team.

Sumrell, who now lives in Raleigh, is ranked a master by the National Rifle Association, meaning his scores average 94 to 96 percent of the maximum in competitions, which is 500 points. And the Army made him a distinguished shooter, an honor awarded to the best high-powered riflemen in the services, based on his showings in only a few selected matches per year.

Soldiers receive points based on their performances in those matches. When their totals reach 30, they become distinguished shooters. Only 10 percent of all non-distinguished shooters ever even score a point.

"I've always been interested in it (shooting)," Sumrell said. "My first competition was when I was in the Marine Corps." He had heard about a nearby match and was lucky enough to be sent by his division.

"I did pretty good the first day of competition — the second day I bombed out," he said.

Sumrell doesn't bomb out any more.

Today he is a shooting instructor with the National Guard, and he has led the North Carolina team to three national championships since 1982. Two other times it finished second.

"My biggest involvement since 1982 has been to bring our new shooters up to a level that they can compete," he said.

Any center-fire rifle above .22 caliber, and some with .22 caliber cartridges, are considered high-powered rifles, allowing you to shoot heavy bullets at a high velocity. "With weapons of that nature you've got a lot of power that can deliver a lot of impact at great distances," Sumrell said.

Sumrell explained that, in first-round competition, shooters stand 200 yards away and aim at a 10 inch to 12 inch target. Then they move back to 300 yards to shoot from the prone position at a larger scoring ring, finally moving back to 600 yards in the final phase to fire prone again. Scoring is graded from 5 to 10 points, and the highest value is an X, the exact center of the target. Sumrell said matches occasionally will move back to 1,000 yards from the target.

"That's a totally different ball game," he said. "When you're shooting a target from back there I think the aiming black (target) is something like 36 inches wide — and I'm not sure but I think the 10-point ring is something like 10 inches wide.

"With a service rifle — you've got to have good eyes. You've got to have good eyes."

Sumrell said two things are crucial to shooting high-powered rifles: concentration and basics.

"You've got to stay ahead of what you're doing," he said. "The concentration on what you're doing — I would think is probably one of the most critical things. ...

"In addition to being knowledgable of the basics. The basics have to sort of be second nature to you. It's mostly mental. It's mental conditioning."

Working as a line official with the pistol shooting segment of the pentathalon in the Olympic Festival was a thrill, Sumrell said.

"It was sort of an inspiring activity," he said. "I guess simply because of the level of competition and the publicity."

And Sumrell knows about competition.

"I've just always enjoyed competition. It's the kind of thing, to me, that the more I did it, the more I wanted to do it. The better I did it, the better I wanted to do it.

"It's sort of an individual effort — a desire to want to excel. It's the same thing regardless of whether it's tennis players or whatever the activity.

"I guess it's just a challenge against yourself."

READY — Wayne Sumrell of Raleigh, a former Greenville resident, has made a name for himself with his shooting skills. Sumrell, who served as a judge in the pentathalon at the U.S. Olympic Festival this summer, here is preparing to practice his off-hand shooting at a down-range target.

'THOSE WERE THE YEARS' — Col. Tom Parker, who served as Elvis Presley's manager until the singer's death in 1077, relaxes in a bedroom of the Presley suite at the Las Vegas Hilton. Parker conducted a rare news conference prior to a public tour of the suite, which will be open to the public through Sunday, the 10th anniversary of Presley's death. (AP Laserphoto)

Presley's Former Manager Says There'll Be No Tears

By ROBERT MACY
Associated Press Writer

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Col. Tom Parker says he's shedding no tears as the 10th anniversary of Elvis Presley's death approaches.

"There's nothing to cry about, everything is too happy," Parker, the homespun huckster credited with igniting Presley's meteoric career, said Monday night.

Dressed in a jean jacket that he got from Presley six months before the star's death, Parker recounted his first meeting with the gyrating Tennessee teen-ager.

Presley's former manager, standing in a ballroom overlooking the glittering Strip where Presley once ruled, became angry when asked if he had seen Presley's drug problem coming on, and if anything could have been done to head it off.

"We're here to honor his memory," Parker snapped. "I didn't hear the question."

Presley died Aug. 16, 1977, of heart disease at his Graceland mansion in Memphis. He was 42. Court records indicated he had suffered from drug abuse. Those records said traces of 12 to 14 drugs, mostly pain-killers and depressants, were found in Presley's body. He was given almost 200 prescriptions for drugs in the year before he died.

Asked about rumors of a rift between him and his famous star before Presley's death, Parker said Elvis told him "it will always be Elvis and the Colonel."

"I'm the spokesman for him now that he's gone," Parker said, pausing, then added "And it helps me sell some of his memorabilia."

Suits between Parker and the estate were settled out of court in 1983. Parker received $2 million to sever his connection with Presley and give managers of the estate full control of the Elvis business.

Parker said he planned to open a museum sometime next year, featuring memorabilia he collected from the time he became Presley's manager in 1956.

Entertainer Wayne Newton, who begins a week-long special tribute to Elvis at the Las Vegas Hilton on Tuesday night, appeared briefly with Parker and recounted his friendship with Presley.

He said he first met Presley "in 1964 on a (movie) lot at Paramount. We quickly discovered we were dating the same girl." She remained nameless.

The Hilton was Presley's entertainment home in Las Vegas and he packed the 1,600-seat showroom for each of his 700 performances over an eight-year run, said Las Vegas Hilton President John Giovenco.

Asked if the star had doubts about his career in the last years of his life, Parker said Presley once complained of being too fat.

Creator Of 'Cagney & Lacey' Has Emotional Ties With Show

By PATRICIA BRENNAN
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Producer Barney Rosenzweig knows that he's got a lot of emotional investment in his long-running, Emmy-winning "Cagney & Lacey."

So much, in fact, that when his beloved series was rumored to be in danger of cancellation last spring by CBS, "I spent a lot of time anticipating the end. ... I went into a real tailspin for about three days."

And in the same way that a man eventually must face his own mortality, Rosenzweig finally admitted that life with his favorite show would inevitably come to an end — if not then, possibly at the close of the 1987-88 season, surely by '88-'89.

"It has become an obsession, unique and extraordinary," he said last spring. "I feel this debt to it, because it allowed me to become what I always wanted to be.

"I do every edit, every costume, every music cue. I concede to a sort of obsessive quality. 'Cagney & Lacey' has a level of consistency that no other series has. I'm proud of that."

He's still proud, still intense when he talks about the series he created, and which, he says, commands one of the highest advertising rates of any CBS series. Ad rates for "Cagney & Lacey" are steeper than those for some higher-rated shows because it attracts affluent, educated women between 25 and 50.

Here in July for an all-night, 17-hour screening of "Cagney & Lacey" episodes at AMC Theaters' Academy 8 Theater in Greenbelt, Md., Rosenzweig talked about the series and his plans.

" 'Cagney & Lacey' is an emotional experience for me. It has lifted me out of the mire of obscurity. It has brought an incredible amount of benefit to my life, light to my life, for which I am very grateful. The accumulation of capital has never been something that has particularly interested me, although 'Cagney & Lacey' has made me ... by my standards, somewhat financially independent. But that wasn't the goal. I was always more interested in renown, more interested in glory, in power. That's probably why I'm always so comfortable in Washington, the power town.

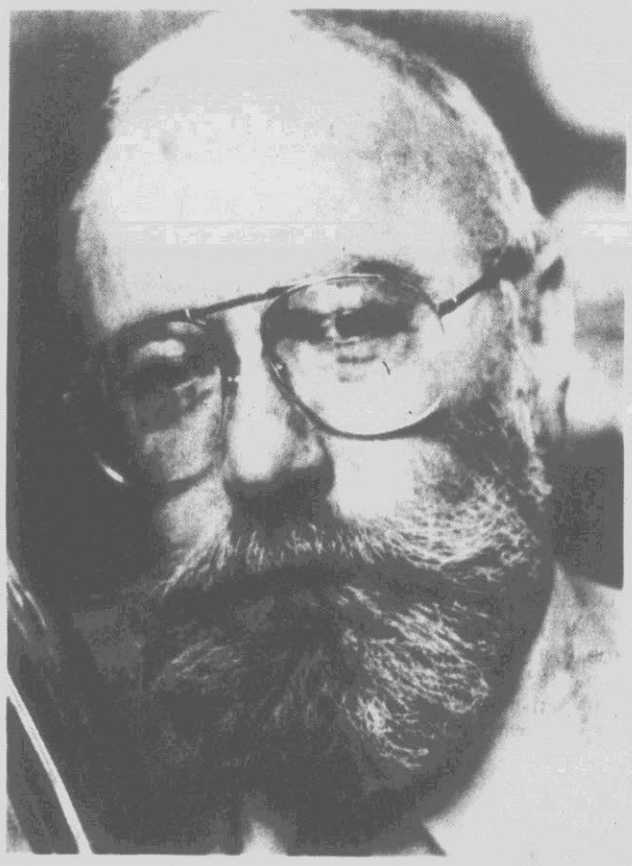

"But the emotional investment in 'Cagney & Lacey' is exceptional. ... I know the chances are that I will never have that again, that that is a once-in-a-lifetime experience. And so my thought was that I should do something different, do it differently. What I'm hoping to do is to enlarge my scope, ultimately to invest time and interest in people and turn them into Barney Rosenzweigs of their own."

(One of those beneficiaries is "Cagney & Lacey" writer Georgia Jeffries, with whom Rosenzweig is going into partnership to create a new series, possibly to be set in Washington.)

"We're very close," he continued. "Sharon Gless is my best friend. And Tyne Daly doesn't care — I mean, she already has a husband. ... If Brigham Youngwere president, I'd ask them both to marry me." (Rosenzweig is married to Barbara Corday, president of Columbia Pictures Television.)

"But 'Cagney & Lacey' has brought to me about everything I ever wanted, and it's going to be gone very soon — the end of this year, possibly another year. I would, if I could, bring closure to the show. I already know what the last episode would be.

"But I've been asked by Orion, which owns the show, not to do it. They're afraid that if we close the show, it would hurt syndication. It's a financial decision. ... So when they asked me — they didn't tell me, they asked — I have to honor it."

PRODUCER — Barney Rosenzweig, creator-producer of the "Cagney & Lacey" television series, says he has a tremendous emotional investment in the show. His life has become centered on the show, which he personally edits. (L.A. Times-Washington Post Photo)

That leaves Rosenzweig to "re-examine a lot of my goals. ... I'm 50 now. Simple metaphor: the 50-yard-line, halfway. I'm at halftime. I am now exploring my game plan. I feel like the coach of a football team at the half-time, and the score is now 28-to-nothing in our favor.

"But the quarterback is tired. I know I'm not going out there to score another 28 points. ... I know I will do things differently in the second half, and it has nothing to do with second-guessing the first half. The first half was great, but it was the first half.

"I'm not afraid of failure, in terms of commercial success or failure. I have failed in the past and survived. I don't mind it; I'm not afraid of it. My definition of success is triumph over failure, so you have to fail in order to succeed."

In truth, Rosenzweig's favorite show also failed before succeeding. It was cancelled twice, then won the Emmy for Best Drama Series in 1985 and 1986.

Two other actresses (Loretta Swit and Meg Foster) played Christine Cagney before Gless took the role.

Gless won the Emmy as Best Actress in 1986; Tyne Daley has won it three times.

In the fall, as Rosenzweig looks ahead to the second half of his career, things will change on "Cagney & Lacey," as well. The series, having marked its 100th episode last March, began production for the '87-88 season in July.

Private Life

NEW YORK (AP) — Actor Christopher Reeve's roles have ranged from a corrupt priest to a handicapped war veteran, but his role as Superman overpowers even his private life, according to an interview published Monday.

"I never get away from it," Reeve said in the September issue of McCall's.

He described a day when he and a friend parked their bicycles outside a Manhattan bar. They turned away for a split second and their bikes disappeared, but Reeve chased the thief and caught him three blocks away.

"I had got him by the lapels and was lifting him up when he looked up and screamed, 'Oh, no, Superman! I'm sorry!'" said Reeve. The actor dropped the suspect and left with his bike.

'Tour Of Duty' Begins This Fall

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — CBS' "Tour of Duty" will arrive on television screens this fall with a lot of baggage. It bears all the earmarks of Important Television, with a capital "I."

The producers are gamely striving to bring the Vietnam War, minimally tempered with 1980s hindsight, into the nation's living rooms and consciousness the way television brought the real thing home 14-plus years ago.

This time, Vietnam will also be entertainment, a ratings contender, with stars, co-stars, producers and directors; competition for "The Cosby Show" Thursday night at 8 p.m. EST.

The series follows a platoon of U.S. soldiers during their one-year tour of duty in Vietnam in 1967.

Executive Producer Zev Braun and two of the stars, Terence Knox and Stan Foster, emerged last week from the jungles of Hawaii, where the show is being filmed, and walked into a veritable firefight with television critics gathered for the networks' fall previews.

CBS set up a news conference that also included leaders of Vietnam Veterans of America — newly elected President Mary Stout and former President Bob Muller — to answer questions about the series' authenticity and sensibility.

Right away, one TV critic questioned whether the veterans were mercenaries, only there to help sell an "entertainment commodity."

The veterans and Knox said the question was insulting, and another TV critic termed it offensive.

Other TV writers were less cynical, but questioned everything about the series, from the vintage of the hand grenades, to the level of violence acceptable at 8 p.m., to the question of not enough violence to deter America's youth from going to war. Others thought the series avoided the politics of the Vietnam War, while still others thought it had too strong a point of view.

Braun concluded that the controversy in the room proved the need for the show as a long-awaited assimilation of the war into American society.

"We'll never deal with the issues to everybody's satisfaction, certainly not to my satisfaction, but the fact that we're doing it, the fact that we're attempting to do it — I feel like it's an exciting moment for television," he said.

Stout, who served in Vietnam in a military hospital, said she found the pilot authentic. "For me, this characterization is as real as the people that I knew," she said.

Muller said he went to a screening of the show with apprehension, but was relieved at its compassionate view of war from the soldiers' point of view.

"I was a platoon commander. I lasted for eight months before I caught a bullet in the chest," said the wheelchair-bound Muller. "And I've got to tell you — just as you saw in this pilot, we didn't fight that war for reasons of political ideologies. We fought that war because we needed to survive."

Muller went on to call the series a "courageous" act by CBS. It might not be so courageous. "Tour of Duty" is an excellent television show.

NBC Has Six TV Top-Rated Shows

NEW YORK (AP) — When you've been No. 1 for 28 weeks, it's hard to top yourself. So NBC seemingly expanded the metaphysical limits of the Nielsen rankings by having six of the five top-rated prime-time shows.

NBC shows, led by the usual one-two duo "The Cosby Show" and "Family Ties," occupied the first seven slots in the rankings, but two shows tied for fifth.

NBC had eight of the top 10 and 14 of the top 20 programs, according to the figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co. It won six of the seven nights last week, losing only Wednesday when it trailed CBS and ABC.

For the week ending Aug. 9, NBC had an average prime-time rating of 12.8. ABC had a 9.6. CBS had 9.5.

NBC's 28-week winning streak is its longest ever. It has won 43 of the 46 weeks since the television season began almost a year ago. July also marked its 10th sweep win in a row. There are four "sweeps" months a year when local ratings are measured to determine advertising rates for affiliates.

NBC is also streaking in news. It was 17 weekly wins in a row for "NBC Nightly News," with an average rating of 9.8 and a 22 share last week. NBC research analyst Gerald Jaffe said he'd have to go back to the days of Huntley-Brinkley in the 1960s to find a longer win streak for NBC News.

ABC's "World News Tonight" was second with a 9.1 and a 20 share. The "CBS Evening News" again slipped into third in the close race with an average 9.0 rating and a 20 share.

The rating is a percentage of the nation's estimated 87.4 million homes with televisions. The share is a percentage of the audience tuned in during a particular time period.

The top prime-time shows were: "The Cosby Show," topping a rare summer original episode of "Family Ties," "Cheers," "Golden Girls," "Beverly Hills Madam" and "Unsolved Mysteries" tied for fifth, "The Days and Nights of Molly Dodd," "My Mother's Secret Life," "Valerie" and "Growing Pains."

All are NBC shows except "My Mother's Secret Life," a movie, and "Growing Pains," both on ABC.

CBS' highest-rated show was "60 Minutes" in 15th place. CBS usually puts "Murder, She Wrote" into the top 10, but it was pre-empted last week.

Bottom dwellers were: "Circus," "Animal Crack-Ups," "Guilty Conscience," "Webster," "West 57th," "Sledge Hammer!" "Our World," "Dallas," "The Charmings" and "The Ellen Burstyn Show."

The Fox Broadcasting Co.'s highest-rated show was "21 Jump Street" with a 4.7 and a 10 share, considerably higher than the 3.6 rating it had last week.

"The Tracey Ullman Show" went up a little, to a 3.6, the week after it was nominated for five Emmys. Fox's lowest-rated show was "Karen's Song," with a 2.3.

Turner, Winger Top McCall List

NEW YORK (AP) — Actresses Kathleen Turner and Debra Winger will be among the biggest movie stars of the 1990s, industry insiders predicted in a magazine article published Monday.

Sigourney Weaver, Kelly McGillis and Molly Ringwald round out McCall's list of "the most razzle-dazzle movie stars of the coming decade," according to the magazine's September issue.

Turner, 33, who debuted in "Body Heat" and was nominated for an Oscar for "Peggy Sue Got Married," is the closest to "being an old-fashioned movie star," appealing to both men and women, said critic Molly Haskell.

The name of Winger, who found fame in "Urban Cowboy" and "An Officer and a Gentleman," comes up "more than any other actress in casting sessions," said Larry Mark, executive producer of "Black Widow."

Weaver, 37, who was launched in the 1979 movie "Alien" and co-starred in 1984's "Ghostbusters," "has an Amazonian stride, a face that reveals intelligence and a brain that, with scholarly determination, analyzes every character she plays," the magazine said.

McGillis, 29, co-star of the 1986 hit, "Top Gun," has "that curious blend of innocence and femininity," said Peter Weir, the director who chose her for "Witness," her first film hit.

As for 19-year-old Ringwald, "I think she's going to be an absolutely major actress — and a star," said Ellen Burstyn, who co-starred with her in the TV movie "Surviving."

Prospectors Dig Gold, History On Alaskan Beach

By LISA LEVITT RYCKMAN
Associated Press Writer

NOME, Alaska (AP) — The people on the beach look like rubber-booted marmots, dirt flying high behind them as they attack the holes created in the name of the gold diggers who came here before them.

"It's groundhog city," observes Don Mackie, who has already coaxed a few significant gold flakes from his hole on the stretch of sand 12 miles from Nome.

News of his find spreads like wildfire as far as 300 feet away, where some of Mackie's fellow prospectors are hanging loose outside Grizzly Bear's Chow at the Cripple River mining camp.

For the past two summers, this tundra bluff where the Bering Sea meets the Cripple River has been a prospecting paradise to hundreds of members of the Gold Prospectors Association of America.

In 1985, the group persuaded two women who owned 2,000 acres of deeded land to sell it to them rather than to the big gold companies. About 400 prospectors formed a public company, Global Resources Inc., and paid more than $1.1 million for the parcel, where they built a frontier-style resort town for summer use by any of the group's almost 100,000 members.

"We've got about 15 miles of the river, and it's got gold in every bit of it," said George Massie, president and founder of both the prospectors association and Global Resources. "It's really good for the kind of mining that we do by hand."

The first 100 arrivals of the summer are busily digging and panning, staking claims on the beach, rattling rocker boxes and slapping at mosquitoes.

"Most people's lives are so damn dull. Very few people ever have a real adventure," said Ben Murray, a retired schoolteacher from San Luis Obispo, Calif., who expected to be prospecting on the beach for two weeks with his wife, Nenita. "This is adventure. It's the thrill of the find."

On the ridge above him, it's just as it might have been 90 years ago: the rows of snug two- and four-person bunkhouses with common walls and names like Bedrock Bitsy's, Empty Arms and Hangover Hilton; a mess hall with a stove created from a 70-gallon drum that generates enough heat to chase 100 prospectors into an arctic night; a saloon at street's end complete with stools fashioned from driftwood and a portrait of Cripple River Tundra Tillie, naked as a jaybird and stunning in her utter lack of proportion.

The scene is authentic right down to the rocker boxes they're using on the beach, reproductions of the famous "Cape Nome rocker" that brought fortune and frustration to so many. Ninety years later, nothing does a better job sifting gold from sand, Massie declares.

There is tradition here and history and, for those who believe in such things, the ghosts of the estimated 20,000 fortune hunters who jammed the beach and streets of Nome in the summer of 1900, part of the West's last major placer gold stampede.

A trio of amateur prospectors known as the "three lucky Swedes" struck pay dirt in 1898. Two years later, Nome had become the world's busiest seaport without a harbor.

It had also become, as one observer put it, the "strangest community ever seen upon the face of this old Earth." The city, five miles long and two blocks wide, swarmed with gold seekers jostling for room and shouting over the din of constant construction. On the beach, recent arrivals and scores of dogs pawed through heaps of freight and luggage, and the lines of tents stretched out of sight.

A tent or two dots the beach today, shelter for a few contemporary prospectors. The city of Nome is beyond boom but not exactly bust, with about 3,500 residents, all of whom seem to be planning either to stay forever or leave tomorrow. Many work for gold companies.

There is still gold here, plenty of it, in the sand, in the sea, under the sidewalks, even in the sewers.

George Massie's son, Perry, a mining engineer, talks about how one gold company tried unsuccessfully to get everyone in town to move so they could dredge the ground.

Conservator Ends Career By Cleaning Capitol Rotunda

By PETER POE
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Standing on a scaffold platform 180 feet above the Capitol's rotunda, Bernard Rabin is ready to begin carefully cleaning the fresco. All he has with him is a bucket full of solution — really just water and some mild softeners — and a sponge.

He will begin with a section under a figure representing freedom and work his way around, taking pictures and chemical tests before dabbing away the dirt, smoke and grime that have collected in 122 years.

"It's a magnificent way to end a career," said Rabin, 70, who has been a conservator for 45 years. "I've never worked on such a large project as this or (one) as historically important to the United States."

There is 4,664 square feet of restoration work to be done on the fresco, "The Apotheosis of George Washington." Some days Rabin cleans 20 square feet; others, a single square foot. He has given himself 16 months to complete the project. The man who painted the fresco, Constantino Brumidi, completed his job in 11 months back in 1865.

Rabin has been given a triple task: to clean the fresco, remove the work of an earlier restorer, and paint sections that are missing. The object is to return the work as near to its original state as possible.

To the viewer below, the fresco appears to open up to the sky. It depicts George Washington surrounded by mythological and historical figures.

Between the ministrations of Brumidi and Rabin, a restorer named Alyn Cox worked on the fresco in 1955, but only ended up blunting the effects of Brumidi's work. Cox ended up highlighting cracks that were meant to be invisible.

Rabin can take advantage of techniques and technology Cox did not have, but still will have to improvise and rely on his instincts more often than not.

When Rabin mistakenly dabbed away a small section of green paint, he used his first-aid gauze pad to figure out whether the paint was by Brumidi or Cox. He found out it was Cox, and therefore rightly removed.

"Rabin is an esteemed fresco conservator and well respected in the field," said Ann Hoenigswald, acting head of painting conservation at the National Gallery of Art. "He is experienced in working on large projects."

But Rabin, who has examined the fresco six times during the past four years in preparation, said he is overwhelmed by the project and called it "mind-boggling."

Rabin's day begins with a 7-minute elevator ride to the top of the scaffold. He decides then what to do, and who will work where.

Photographs of work to be done and work completed are taken to study and compare for the next section to be restored. Chemical tests are done continually as work progresses.

At 4 p.m. Rabin and his two assistants descend to discuss what has been done and plan for the next day.

In August Rabin and his crew will be joined by two Italian experts on mural conservation who will act as advisers.

Until the work is completed, visitors will not have a view of the fresco or the conservation work in progress.

A north-south passageway will allow people to move from one side of the Capitol to the other, and tour guides will explain the restoration process to visitors.

Because of the Capitol's air conditioning, which acts as a filtration system, the completed restoration is expected to survive better than Brumidi's, which suffered from exposure to pollutants.

Smoke from 500 gaslights around the rotunda, as well as humidity and dust from the outside when the doors were opened, accumulated on the fresco, giving it its dull appearance, Rabin said. "We have pollution control now," he said.

While restoration work is beginning on the fresco, scaffolding for work on the exterior west front of the Capitol is being taken down.

After three years and nine months, the restoration project that has been obscuring the view of the Capitol's west facade is nearly complete.

The project will be completed by late August or early September, 10 months early, a spokesman for the Architect of the Capitol said.

Gold

"You get a shovelful of dirt out of the street in Nome, there's gold in it," the younger Massie said, recalling a street project a few years back in which people hauled up bucketloads of dirt and washed as much as $30 worth of gold from every one.

George Massie pilots his single-engine Cessna out over the town and the sea, pointing out grassy folds that stretch from the beach into the tundra like furrows in a brow, the one physical remnant of the furious mining of almost a century ago.

"They had 20,000 prospectors working this beach in 1900 by hand method, and you can hardly find where they worked today unless you know where to look," Massie said. "But you take a large dredging operation that worked in the 1920s, you can still see where they worked."

Large-scale dredging is fine with proper regulation, Massie said. The injustice comes when the little guy with the shovel is lumped in the same group as the big guy with the bulldozer.

"What's happened is the environmentalists have gone after mining, period," he said. "Some organizations are not educated about recreational-type mining and the small prospector, and therefore in a lot of cases, there have been no provisions made for him."

"(That) has been real helpful in preserving what I consider a national treasure, and that's our prospecting," Massie said. "It almost became extinct, you might say. It was an endangered species. And now it's come back in the state of Alaska and the lower 48, and it's alive and well and a lot of families are enjoying it."

Massie's family has enjoyed it for years. Perry, 25, learned to pan as a 10-year-old on a hunting trip in Montana. The Massie story smacks of true West adventure, how they met and befriended an old prospector who taught them to pan and willed them his claims. They went back every summer to prospect, and eventually, his father and others founded "Gold Prospector" magazine and the Gold Prospectors Association of America to promote their pastime.

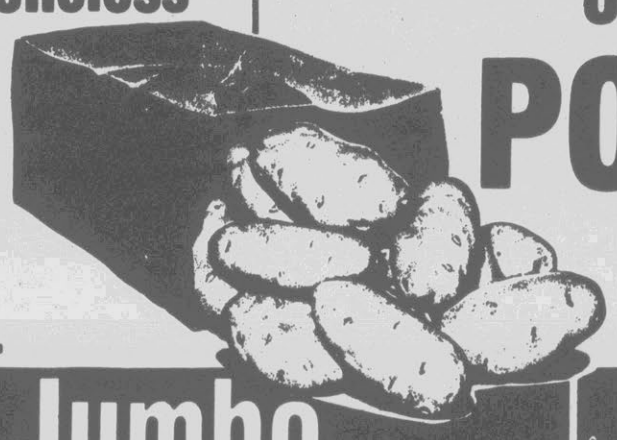

It's possible to turn gold fever into good profit with a pan, a shovel and equal parts of know-how, patience and determination. Blueberry John, now in his 70s, has attained near-legendary status as a beach miner, averaging as much as an ounce-and-a-half a day over the summer mining season, or some 40 ounces a year, which he sells piecemeal to tourists for double market value, Massie said.

Horoscope

From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY Aug. 13

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You will be overflowing with new ideas, and eager to pioneer new avenues of expression. A little bit of enthusiasm will get you the support necessary to make these ideas work.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Good results can be gleaned by attending a social function this evening and seeing many of your friends.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Seek the information you need at the source, in whatever area it may lie. Spend the evening alone with your mate.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Spend as much time as possible with your family and friends. Avoid a person who is jealous of your position.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): People around you will be unusually receptive to requests for favors if you're polite. Drive carefully.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): If you do some entertaining this evening, add a new twist to your usual activities and get much better results.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Get some new ideas working instead of just thinking about them. First, though, test them for practicality.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Before making a new agreement or revising an old one, first talk it over carefully with all who are involved.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Stop procrastinating and keep the promises you've been putting off. If financial discussions are needed, have them now.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): This is a good day to take a little trip which will get you out of the rut you're in and make life more interesting.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): A job problem can be solved easily today. Be agreeable with your mate. Take no risks while driving.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): You can accomplish a great deal today, especially with the aid of an old friend who has a good creative flair.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Think hard, use your imagination and find better ways to add to your assets. Pay those bills which have been accumulating.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she can have a wonderfully successful life, provided you encourage him or her to express all of those fine creative talents. Help your progeny to exercise the will to learn and accomplish by giving praise for accomplishments which will build enthusiasm.

Given that trumps are breaking 2-1 and that you have to lose two diamond tricks, what would you say were your chances of making four spades? If you knew that you were destined to lose a trump trick as well, would that change the odds?

The auction was quick and simple. North made a forcing-to-game jump raise of his partner's opening bid and, with a dead minimum opening bid, South had no aspirations beyond game.

The average player would probably stake everything on a finesse in each major, a theoretical 75 percent chance. The possibilities are complicated somewhat by the fact the heart finesse can be taken either way, which means declarer will still be faced with a guess.

However, the answer to the question we posed in the opening paragraph is that once trumps are 2-1, the contract can be guaranteed no matter who holds the king. And you can't do any better than 100 percent.

Let's assume the defenders start with three rounds of diamonds. Ruff the last of these, cash the ace of clubs and ruff a club. Return to hand with the ace of trumps and, when the king doesn't drop, ruff your last club in dummy. Now simply exit with a trump.

You don't care which defender wins his trick. Whoever gains the lead will be faced with losing options. The defender on play will either have to lead a minor suit and permit declarer to discard a heart from hand while ruffing on the table, or else break the heart suit and spare declarer having to guess which way to take the finesse.

Technology Sends Outdoor Barbecuing Indoors

By Martha Miller
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

Instead of spending summer afternoons fanning stubborn charcoal and dodging hordes of mosquitoes and clouds of smoke, members of the high-tech barbecue set are heading inside for lunch.

The latest indoor grills are fast becoming a hot item. The once-cumbersome hooded grills have been transformed into sleek, convertible cooktops that can be incorporated into the stove top or setup free-form on an island in the middle of the kitchen.

State-of-the-art ventilation, contemporary designs and cartridges that allow the cooktop to be converted for such accessories as woks have contributed to the upward turn in sales. Cooktops range in price from $200 to $900, depending on the number of accessories, and grill-ranges cost between $1,200 to $1,500.

"We already shipped and billed in the last two months what we thought we would do in six months," said Ann Vaughan, director of consumer affairs for Jenn-Air, a leading manufacturer.

Bill Feder, a distributor of West Germany's Gaggenau indoor grill cooktops, said that, although the products have been sold in the United States for five years, sales are up. "This month alone we'll ship $200,000 of the cooktops into New York and New Jersey," Feder said.

Indoor grills first appeared on the market in the late 1960s after Jenn-Air invented the first built-in electric grill and grill range. The company's goal and that of the manufacturers who soon followed was to give consumers a year-round grill that made food taste as if it were cooked outdoors. To do this, most of the big-name brands — with the exception of KitchenAid, which still uses overhead ventilation — have replaced the hoods with a surface or downdraft ventilation system, which sits beside the grill. It pulls in smoke and food odors and vents them outdoors, much like a dryer.

"Downdraft ventilation is the new thing that is happening in cooking today, and it gives food a grilled taste without all the hassle," said Bob Hoover, a Maytag spokesman.

To get that charbroiled flavor, grills are made with cast-iron rocks that sit beneath the grating. Like charcoal, the rocks produce smoke from the dripping fat and meat juices to help seal in flavor and cook foods faster.

"You can cook a nice three-quarter-inch steak in 18 to 20 minutes with a five-minute pre-heat, and it tastes like it was grilled outdoors," Vaughan said.

Grills and grill ranges are also selling well because of their versatility. Many have a plug-in system that allows you to convert the grill into either a griddle, rotisserie or deep-fat fryer. Jenn-Air offers a grill range that is available with four accessories — a cooker-steamer, griddle, rotiss-kebab and wok. Frigidare's cooktop comes with either coil or solid burners, a steak grill or a Teflon-coated griddle.

John Hines, product manager for cooking products at KitchenAid, said he

Eating 'Out' In Summer Can Mean Picnic Or Patio

In cities and small towns from coast to coast — and along many a country road — restaurants are setting out tables on patios or sidewalks ... and diners are flocking to savor whatever it is that makes food taste better in the open air.

But eating "out" need not be confined to those neat little cafes or umbrella clad restaurants. You can also do it yourself.

Find a park ... a beach ... a backyard or a patio. Pack a picnic. For city, suburban or country dweller, there are a host of pleasant places to discover dining "out" in the summer. Don't overlook concerts in the park ... any body of water ... or even urban rooftops.

The whole idea is to put more "vacation" in your summer ... so plan for lighter eating and easier preparation.

These sparked up versions of the staple sandwich and salad will be just as simple — but lots more interesting — than the old standbys.

Make the sandwich with luscious, locally grown summer tomatoes if you can — or better yet if they're fresh from your own garden. Add mozzarella cheese, marinate briefly — and compliment the combination with the taste and texture of a sesame seed sandwich bun.

The Chutney Turkey Salad breaks away from the everyday class, combining ingredients in a fresh way. Again, color and texture are important aspects of this dish. The bright green of the grapes, the snowpeas' deeper green, the crunch of golden onion and garlic croutons, the pleasure of pecan ... it adds up to a most satisfying dinner salad.

You'll probably want to stash these recipes in a handy place. They'll serve well for any informal summer entertaining like a lazy Sunday lunch, or a casual after-work supper with friends. Outdoors enhances appetites ... but these will be winners any place you serve them.

TOMATO AND MOZZARELLA SANDWICH

1 package (1 pound) mozzarella cheese, cut into 12 slices
2 medium-sized tomatoes, sliced
3/4 cup bottled Italian salad dressing
6 sesame seed sandwich buns

(See EATING, D-3)

OUTDOOR SPECIALTIES — Outdoor summer eating is easy and fun with this tasty duo. Make one or both, depending on the crowd. The Chutney Turkey Salad, made with onion and garlic croutons, is utterly satisfying. And the Tomato & Mozzarella Sandwich on a sesame bun is always a winner. Add some fruit and cookies — and you're set to go.

Not Just For Kids

They'll need peanuts, chocolate ice-cream topping, vanilla ice cream and crispy chocolate-flavored graham cereal with marshmallows. Show them how to crush the cereal slightly with a rolling pin. Supervise chollping peanuts and cutting ice cream. Kids will proudly serve this great-tasting treat, crunchy ice cream squares, to family and friends.

CRUNCHY ICE-CREAM SQUARES

3/4 cup chopped peanuts
1/2 cup chocolate ice-cream topping
1/2 gallon brick vanilla ice cream.

Mix cereal and peanuts. Sprinkle half of the mixture in ungreased square pan, 9X9X2 inches; drizzle with half of the topping. Cut ice cream crosswise into halves (freeze one half to use as desired). Cut remaining ice cream into about one inch slices; place on cereal mixture in pan. Let stand until slightly softened; spread evenly. Drizzle with remaining topping. Sprinkle with remaining cereal mixture; press lightly. Cover and freeze until firm, about three hours. Nine servings.

Q. I have heard that for every cup of coffee you drink, you lose 400 milligrams calcium (in your urine). Is this true? Mrs. L.W., Greenville.

A. My research assistant this summer, Barbara Kocher, and I have studied a huge stack of research reports about calcium use in the body. Most agree that caffeine (usually from coffee, tea or sodas) can cause small amounts of calcium to be lost. They do not report large quantities like the 400 milligrams you asked about.

Since most women only take 400 to 600 milligrams calcium daily, anyone who drank one cup of coffee would be in big trouble. One group of Washington researchers studied a few women. They found the women who ate few foods with calcium and who also ate or drank foods with moderate amounts of caffeine did lose large amounts of calcium. But, even then, the amounts were still not as large as 400 milligrams.

What does that mean? I talked with several colleagues involved in calcium and osteoporosis research. We decided the lesson from these studies was that if you drank a soft drink or cup of coffee instead of a glass of lowfat milk, you probably cheat your body out of 300 milligrams of calcium. You would miss about 290 milligrams of calcium from the milk and lose some calcium because of the caffeine. I don't think it makes much difference for women who try to get calcium in their foods daily and have one or two caffeine beverages a day. But, those who drink coffee, tea or sodas all day long may want to look more closely at the amount of calcium and caffeine they take in daily.

At the family practice center, we are asked many questions about calcium. The other day, I was asked if I had tried the orange juice with calcium in it yet? And, would I recommend buying the cereals, flour and juices that now have calcium in them.

A couple years ago, about the only good sources of calcium, besides mineral supplements, were dairy products like milk and cheese; and greens, and soft fish bones. Today, it seems that the makers of foods and other products we use (like antacids and laxatives) are in a race to put calcium in products.

Before you buy these fortified foods, remember to look at your own and your family's diets to see if you need the extra calcium these foods provide. Calcium needs of children and teen-agers also are high. And, adult men do lose bone mass too, just not as dramatically as women. The daily intake recommended for women to reduce their risks for osteoporosis is 1,000 milligrams if you are premenopausal and 1,500 milligrams if you have passed menopause.

We really have not had to worry about getting too much calcium in the past. But now we pay attention to all the sources we get calcium from (supplements, foods, medications). Your body doesn't like too much more calcium than it needs either. Kidney stones might develop in a person taking in too much calcium.

Calcium isn't the only ingredient needed to prevent osteoporosis. We also need adequate Vitamin D. If you are outdoors for several minutes daily, you will have plenty Vitamin D. Regular activity also is needed to avoid osteoporosis. I am happy to see how many local women have started walking daily. Walking both slows the rate of bone loss and improves the body's use of calcium. Walking also is good for weight control. For women who have been through menopause, you also may want to discuss the pros and cons of estrogen replacement with your family physician.

Oh yes, I have tasted two brands of orange juice with calcium. They are quality products. But I will look at the other foods in my diet to determine if I need to spend the extra pennies for orange juice with calcium or cereals with calcium or any supplements.

Dear Readers: We have been very pleased with your warm response to this column in its first few months. I want to thank you for your kind comments, letters and calls. I don't even mind being asked a question in the grocery store. I also want to thank Marie Harrell, a nutrition intern, and Barbara Kocher, a nutrition student, at the Family Practice Center, who have helped me answer your questions this summer.

Berries Enhance Summer Meals

Summer is the time for fresh berries and you can have your choice of big and ripe, luscious, sweet blueberries, raspberries or blackberries all across North Carolina. These berries, which are low in calories and high in nutrients, are a great way to add variety to summertime meals.

Whether you hand pick your berries from the field or buy them from the market, once you get them home, remember to store them in a shallow container in the refrigerator. For peak freshness, plan on using your berries within 2 or 3 days. It is best to wash them just before using.

Berries easily lend themselves to freezing and can be frozen unsweetened, mixed with sugar, or mixed with a sugar syrup depending on their intended use. Berries which are used for juice, preserves, or jams make the treats of summer last long into the winter.

The following recipes are winners from the Cook-A-Berry Contest held at the 1987 Summer Berry Festival in Dobson. These recipes are sure to find their way to your table time after time as they bring the delightful taste of summer to your kitchen.

BLACKBERRY ROLL

2 cups plain flour
1/2 teaspoon salt
4 teaspoons baking powder
4 tablespoons shortening
1 cup American cheese, grated
1/3 cup milk
2 1/2 cups blackberries
1/2 cup sugar
1/4 cup brown sugar

Mix together flour, salt and baking powder. Cut in shortening. Lightly mix in grated cheese and 1/3 cup milk. Roll dough to 1/3-inch thickness. Mix blackberries, sugar and brown sugar. Spread on dough. Roll up like a jelly roll. Bake about 45 minutes in moderate (325-degree) oven until golden brown. Serves 8. Grand Prize-Adult, Lucille O'Neal of Dobson.

BLUEBERRY BREAD

3 cups all-purpose flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon soda
1/2 teaspoon salt
2/3 cup margarine
1 1/3 cup sugar
4 eggs
1/2 cup milk
1 1/2 teaspoon lemon juice
1 cup well drained crushed pineapple
2 cups blueberries
1 cup walnuts

Sift flour with baking powder, soda and salt; set aside. Cream margarine till fluffy. Gradually beat in sugar. Stir in eggs, milk, lemon juice and pineapple. Beat in dry ingredients. Fold in blueberries and nuts. Pour dought int 4 floured and greased loaf pans, bake at 350 degrees for 40 to 45 minutes. Servings vary due to thickness of slices. First Place-Adult, Lilo Comer of Dobson.

BLUEBERRY SALAD

1 cup hot water
1/2 cup cold water
2 cups fresh whole blueberries
15 1/2-ounce can crushed pineapple (not drained)
1 cup chopped pecans

Mix grape gelatin in hot water until dissolved. Add 1/2 cup cold water. Stir in pineapple, blueberries and chopped nuts. Pour into 8x8-inch baking dish. Top with whipped topping, if desired. Chill until set. Grand Prize-Youth, John Brooks of Shelby.

Sun-Damaged Tomatoes Still All Right For Table

By Nina Killham
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

The recent spell of raging heat not only caused you great discomfort, it left your garden patch high and very dry.

For starters, your tomatoes are sure to be sufferirg from heatstroke and sunburn, said Dick Biggs of Rock Hill Orchard, a 60-acre producing farm in Mount Airy, Md., that offers pick-your-own hours.

"We are beginning to see sun-scorching. Whenever the foliage is not covering the fruit, especially in temperatures like we've been having, from the low- to mid-90s, the sun will sunburn the tomato, no matter if it is green or half ripe," Biggs sid.

As many areas were also receiving virtually no rain, the leaves were drying and wilting, thereby exposing even more of the fruit to the sun.

The damage to the tomato, he said, runs a quarter-inch deep and can be permanent, inhibiting the affected area from ever ripening properly. However, he says, the inside of the tomato is still fine to eat.

Many home gardeners are now beginning to get their first tomatoes, and the best way they can nurse their sun-struck plants through the heat crisis, Biggs said, is to give them a good, slow soaking twice a week.

If you overwater or water too quickly, the tomatoes will soak up too much liquid and crack. In the case of a big thunderstorm, Biggs suggested picking any half-ripened tomatoes (even those with only a tinge of red or orange), for these are the most susceptible to cracking. You will lose no taste, he said, because such tomatoes will continue to ripen off the vine.

And of course, when they do start ripening, they never seem to stop. For most home gardeners, using the bounty requires patience, imagination and a good sense of humor.

Here's one recipe you can use for your crop. Quick and easy, it asks only that you have salt and pepper in your cupboard before starting out for the express lane.

Express-lane list: olive oil, onion, garlic, tomatoes, basil, white wine, fish fillets, shrimp.

SAN PEDRO CIOPPINO

(4 to 6 servings)
1/4 cup olive oil
1 medium onion, chopped
1 clove garlic
4 tomatoes chopped
Salt and pepper to taste
1 tablespoon julienne-cut basil leaves
1 cup dry white wine
1 pound fish fillets, cut into large chunks
1/2 pound shrimp, shelled and deveined

Chinese Fare: In Summer Some Like It Cool

By Bea Lewis
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

There are better foods to serve on steamy summer nights than hot Chinese fare. Try cool Chinese dishes.

Broccoli stir-fried with sliced water chestnuts and toasted sesame seeds can be prepared in advance, refrigerated, and then served at room temperature. So can tender, poached chicken breasts napped with a spicy sesame sauce and topped with slivers of scallion.

And instead of the traditional steamed rice, cool it, and serve it as a salad with lots of crisp Chinese pea pods and brightened with bits of red bell pepper.

Instead of serving hot tea, make it icy cold. While the tea is still warm, stir in a bit of freshly grated ginger. When it's cool, pour the tea over lots of shaved ice.

For dessert, forget the canned pineapple chunks; for the short-lived summer season, serve fresh fruit: pieces of cantaloupe and watermelon, mixed with blueberries and raspberries.

The first recipe is from Beth Shapiro, owner of Le Petit Buffet, a take-out shop in Syosset, N.Y. For picnics, Shapiro suggests packing the food in Chinese take-out containers, available in most paper-goods stores. Remember to take along the chopsticks and plenty of napkins.

POACHED CHICKEN IN SESAME SAUCE

1 tablespoon fresh lemon juice
Salt and pepper to taste
1 bay leaf
2 sprigs parsley
4 large cloves garlic, peeled
3 tablespoons sesame paste (tahini)
1 tablespoon sesame oil
3 tablespoons soy sauce
2 tablespoons dry sherry
2 teaspoons rice vinegar
1 1/2 tablespoons honey
3/4 teaspoon chili oil, or to taste
4 cups shredded white and red cabbage
Chopped scallions for garnish

1. Trim chicken of fat and halve breasts to make 4 portions.

2. Fill fry pan halfway with cold water. Bring water to a boil with lemon juice, salt, pepper, bay leaf and parsley.

3. Reduce liquid to simmer, add chicken, cover and poach 12 to 15 minutes. Cool chicken in liquid.

4. Chop garlic in processor. Add sesame paste, sesame oil, soy sauce, dry sherry, rice vinegar, honey and chili oil and process until mixture is smooth. Let stand 1 hour, or in the refrigerator overnight.

5. Arrange chicken breasts on a platter or tray covered with shredded cabbage; generously coat chicken breasts with sauce. Garnish with sliced scallions. Makes 4 servings.

BROCCOLI SALAD

1 can sliced water chestnuts, drained
2 cloves garlic, minced
2 tablespoons peanut oil
2/3 cup sesame oil
1/3 cup rice vinegar
1/2 teaspoon sugar
2 tablespoons soy sauce
4 tablespoons toasted sesame seeds (see note)

1. In a wok, stir-fry broccoli in hot peanut oil for about 2 minutes or until crisp-tender.

2. Remove broccoli from wok; place in a shallow glass pan and allow broccoli to cool.

3. In a small bowl, whisk together sesame oil, rice vinegar, sugar, soy sauce; pour over cooled broccoli, making sure vegetable is well-coated. Add sliced water chestnuts.

4. Sprinkle with toasted sesame seeds. Serve at room temperature. Makes 4 servings.

Note: To toast sesame seeds, place raw seeds in a small fry pan over medium heat and allow seeds to brown, stirring occasionally. Be careful to avoid burning the seeds. Remove to small dish. (Allow seeds to cool for at least 10 minutes before tasting.)

RICE SALAD

1 small onion, finely chopped
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 cup long-grain white rice
2 cups chicken broth
salt and pepper to taste
2 cups diced fresh vegetables such as red pepper, zucchini, black olives and snow peas
1 tablespoon chopped cilantro (Chinese parsley)
3/4 cup olive oil
1/4 cup wine vinegar
2 cloves garlic, minced
Salt and pepper to taste

1. In a 2-quart sauce pan over medium heat, cook onion in butter until soft. Add rice and cook, stirring occasionally, until rice is golden, about 5 minutes.

2. Add broth, and salt and pepper to taste. Cover and bring to a boil; reduce heat and simmer until rice is al dente and all liquid is absorbed, about 20 to 25 minutes.

3. Fluff up rice with a fork and toss in diced vegetables and cilantro. Allow rice to cool.

4. In the meantime, prepare dressing by mixing together oil, vinegar, garlic, salt and pepper to taste. Pour over rice salad. Serve chilled or at room temperature. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

PERFECT TASTE — A spectacular dessert to serve when you invite friends over for cake and coffee is Chocolate Creme Cake. This eye-catcher is remarkably quick and easy to make with a package of old-fashioned chocolate chip cookies, cream cheese, whipped cream and a fresh fruit filling. Bright red strawberries add a festive color note.

This Chocolate Creme Cake Is Foolproof, And Easy Too

We've become a nation of clock watchers. As we race from home to job to family, we're always looking for ways to save time. As a result, dinner parties and sumptuous buffets have given way to the more casual "come for cake and coffee" get-together. Yet even when entertaining so simply, any hostess worth her salt likes to serve something spectacular to make the occasion special.

For such a gathering, here is a luscious Chocolate Creme Cake from the Pepperidge Farm Test Kitchen. An incomparably appealing collaboration of rich fudgy chocolate cookies and airy whipped cream cheese, the layers are defined by a center filling of sliced bananas, pineapple and strawberries.

It would seem to take a bit of a magician's legerdemain to turn a package of old-fashioned chocolate chip cookies, a package of cream cheese, a cup of confectioners sugar and some whipped cream into a dazzling dessert, but it turns out to be remarkably quick and easy in the making. Foolproof, too, which can't be said for every cake. That's because you don't have to bake this cake; rather, it's chilled until set. The creamy "batter" and the fruit filling are spooned into a springfoam pan that has been lined with luscious chocolate chip cookies.

When ready to serve, add the luxe touch of color-bright red strawberries or other seasonal fruit over the top. It's a delight to the eye as wellas the palate.

CHOCOLATE CREME CAKE

1 package (8 ounces) cream cheese, softened
1 cup confectioners sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
1 1/2 cups heavy cream, whipped
1 package chocolate chip cookies
1 large banana, sliced
1 can (8 ounces) pineapple chunks, drained
1 cup halved strawberries
Strawberries for garnish (optional)

In a mixer bowl, whip cream cheese with sugar until light and fluffy. Blend in vanilla. Fold in whipped cream. Arrange cookies around sides and bottom of 9-inch springform pan or cake pan with removable bottom. Spread half of filling in pan. Arrange fruit on filling. Top with remaining filling. Chill until set. Garnish with whole strawberries, if desired. Makes one 9-inch cake.

Refreshing Fruit Desserts Complement Any Menu

This summer celebrate Mother Nature's bountiful garden gifts with cool, refreshing fresh fruit desserts that make even the simplest meal special. Uncomplicated desserts that complement the season and your culinary skills are right for the '80s cook.

An integral part of any menu, desserts deserve the careful consideration you give to every other course. They're more than just an add-on to the end of a meal. Using eggs, milk, fresh fruit, cheese, yogurt and bread or rice, for example, can be a way to help round out the day's nutritional needs and at the same time delight taste buds.

Choose desserts that offer a contrast of flavors, colors and textures so that the meal is balanced from start to finish. With the right dessert, you can create variety, sustain interest and top off a meal with the kind of finale that carries the mood through to the end.

The possibilities for making special desserts on a small scale for just the two of you are endless. In the following quick-and-easy recipes from Kraft Kitchens, fresh fruit goes from the mundane to the marvelous. What's more, everything is sized to satisfy, not ot overwhelm. Any leftover fruit is a welcome taste in the morning sprinkled over cereal.

Summertime offers a magnificent array of melons. The naturally sweet taste of honeydew and cantaloupe make them favorites. Here's a new way to enjoy them in a melon Yogurt Freeze that'll make any sultry day more bearable. Blend fresh melon chunks with marshmallow creme and plain lowfat yogurt. A teaspoon of lemon juice adds a touch of tartness to the mixture. Freeze and serve. This creamy, smooth dessert is as yummy as it is easy.

MELON YOGURT FREEZE

3 cups honeydew melon or cantaloupe chunks
1 7-ounce jar marshmallow creme
1 8-ounce container plain lowfat yogurt
1 teaspoon lemon juice

Place melon in blender container of food processor work bowl. Cover; process until smooth. Gradually add melon to marshmallow creme in large bowl of electric mixer, mixing at medium speed until well blended. Add yogurt and juice; mix well. Pour into 9-inch square pan; freeze until almost firm. Coarsely chop mixture; spoon into chilled bowl. Beat with electric mixer until smooth; freeze. Makes 3 1/2 cups.

Make the most of the season's bonanza of berries by using different varieties over and over again in this colorful, refreshing dessert. Berries In A Cloud is an easy team-up of cream cheese, lemon juice and peel, whipped cream, coconut flakes and sugar. Blend ingredients together and spoon into decorative dessert dishes, making a shell. Freeze. Before serving, thaw slightly in refrigerator and then fill shell with fresh blueberries.

You can make extra "cloud" mixture and freeze for later use. Before storing, shape mixture free-form on a wax paper-lined cookies sheet. Or for added pizzazz, pipe the mixture with a pastry tube, using a wide tip to avoid having the coconut clog the opening. Nestle blueberries, raspberries, blackberries or stawberries in the center of the white swirl. Or try other types of fruit in season, like grape halves, quartered kiwi slices or chunks of papaya.

BERRIES IN A CLOUD

1 3-ounce package cream cheese, softened
1/4 cup sugar
1 teaspoon lemon juice
1 teaspoon grated lemon peel
1/2 cup whipping cream, whipped
1/4 cup flaked coconut
Blueberries

Combine cream cheese, sugar, juice and peel, mixing until well blended. Fold in whipped cream and coconut. Spoon about 1/4 cup cream cheese mixture into four custard cups or dessert dishes. With back of spoon, spread and shape into a shell; freeze. To serve, let stand in refrigerator 10 minutes; fill shells with blueberries. Yield: 4 servings.

Always plentiful, bananas become tasty treats in minutes when sauteed in Parkay margarine, heated in creamy caramel topping and served over Breyers vanilla ice cream. Caramel Fried Bananas for Two, ready in minutes, leaves you both plenty of time to linger over its rich, luscious taste.

Serve it with the perfect hot weather accompaniment — a frosty glass of iced tea in one of the many Celestial Seasonings fruity flavors, such as Citrus and Tea, Raspberries and Tea, Lemons and Tea, Apple Spice and Tea or Oranges and Tea. To make a half quart of iced tea, pour one cup boiling water over two tea bags. Steep 3 to 5 minutes. Remove tea bags. Add one cup cold water and chill.

CARAMEL FRIED BANANAS FOR TWO

1 teaspoon margarine
2 tablespoons caramel topping
Vanilla ice cream

Cut banana in half lengthwise and crosswise. Saute in margarine until lightly browned; add topping. Heat thoroughly, stirring occasionally. Spoon over ice cream. Yield: 2 servings.

Cheese and fruit have always been a popular combination and a festive finale for almost any meal. For a quick and easy dessert, alternate slices of fresh strawberries, banana, kiwis, grapes and cubes of Cracker Barrel sharp natural cheddar cheese on wooden skewers.

Barbecues Go Inside

has found that indoor grills are especially popular with gourmets and large families, because they can cook several things at the same time. For this reason, Hines said all their cooktops come with a grill and four non-removable burners.

"A grill is great, but if it takes up all the room on your stove, it's not saving you any time," Hines said.

The majority of cooktop models on the market today are electric, but more are being offered in gas. Jenn-Air just introduced its gas downdraft cooktop in January, and KitchenAid has models available in both. Gaggenau and Whirlpool still make only electric. Gas indoor grills were ignored in the beginning, Vaughan said, because houses were all geared toward electric appliances. With the resurgence of gas products and the availability of gas in homes, however, the designers went back to the drawing board.

"You couldn't just slap gas burners on electric ones," Vaughan said. "It's a whole different operation that meant changes in air flow, heat distribution and how food cooks."

To differentiate their products, several companies have started to dress up their grills with such European touches as styling and grill covers. Modern Maid makes a model that it calls International Design Styling, which has sleek burner tops made in black ceramic glass. It also sells grill covers to hide dirt that falls into the grill. Maytag's grill-range model that comes with a wok, griddle and deep cooker has a small plastic cuff beneath the grill that catches the grease. Gaggenau, whose grill sells for $675, even makes a marble cover.

Most of the indoor grills are easy to clean. "It's very basic to clean. All it takes is wiping off and emptying the grease trap once in a while," said Maytag's Bob Hoover.

Not everyone, however, is convinced the cooktops are truly innovative. Contractor Joe Gagliano of Here Comes the Sun in Bellport, N.Y., said the downdraft ventilation can be more of a headache than a help. It is really more for esthetics than efficiency, Gagliano said, so people can put a grill in the middle of their kitchen and not have to make room for a hood.

"The efficiency isn't there," Gagaliano said, "because the only thing that goes down the vent is air. What about all the grease that spatters?"

Manufacturers dispute any fire-safety concerns with downdraft ventilation but stress that it must be properly installed. The risk of a grease fire arises only if the system is not vented properly and smoke accumulates over the grill, they say. Most of the cooktop ventilation models use vents that have a separate filter directly beneath the surface to catch extra grease.

"The grease is not supposed to go down, but if some particles do, the fan will push them right out," Vaughan said.

Eating 'Out' Is Fun

CHUTNEY TURKEY SALAD

1 pound cooked turkey breasts, cut into thin strips
1 cup chopped celery
1 cup stemmed green seedless grapes, halved
1/2 cup sliced dried apricots
1/2 cup whole pecans, toasted
1/4 pound snowpeas, trimmed and blanched until tender-crisp
Salt and pepper
Dressing:
1 cup mayonnaise
1/3 cup mango chutney, finely chopped
1/2 teaspoon grated lemon rind
2 tablespoons dry sherry wine
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 teaspoon Dijon-style mustard
1 teaspon Worcestershire sauce
Garnish: lettuce and seasoned croutons

In a large bowl combine turkey, celery, grapes, apricots, pecans and snowpeas. Toss and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Combine dressing ingredients in a small bowl. Pour over salad and toss. To serve, place salad in lettuce-lined bowl and sprinkle with croutons. Serve more croutons separately. Makes 6 servings.

Berries Add Flavor

1/4 cup salad oil
1 cup plain flour
1 cup fresh blueberries
1/2 cup whole wheat flour
1/2 cup sugar
2 teaspoons baking powder
1/2 teaspoon salt

Heat oven to 400 degrees. Grease 12 medium or 24 mini muffin pans. Using a wire whisk, beat egg. Stir in milk and oil. Mix in flour, baking powder and salt until just moist. Stir in blueberries. Batter should be lumpy. Fill muffin cups until 2/3 full. Bake 20 to 25 minutes for medium size, and 12 to 15 minutes for mini-sized muffins. Immediately dump from pans to cool. First Place-Youth, Heather Hilton of Walnut Cove.

Dairy Foods Anchor 1987 Contest For Soup Recipes

One way to expand your collection of delicious soup recipes is to clip the following award winning recipes from the 1987 Souper Dairy Cook-Off. All of these recipes include a variety of wholesome dairy products as essential ingredients.

The contestants competing in the contest were frm all across the state and had been selected from hundreds of entries to compete for top honors. For some of the contestants, if was their first time entering a cooking contest. Others such as Frances Andrews of Wilson were old pros. Mrs. Andrews, a repeat winner from several other cooking contests, said she entered just for the fun of it.

Mrs. Andrews' grand prize recipe was Reuben Soup, which won her a trip for two to Orlando, Fla. Piedmont Airlines is supplying round-trip air travel, while the Hyatt Winston-Salem is providing hotel accommodations for four days and three nights at the Regency Resort in Orlando.

Joyce Bowman of Raleigh was first runner-up and won $150 with her recipe for Monterey Jack Cheese Soup.

Mrs. Ralph Berger, second runner-up, won $100 for her E-Z Creamy Zucchini Soup. She is from Jamestown.

REUBEN SOUP (with Dijon Croutons)

2 tablespoons unsalted butter
1/4 cup each chopped celery, onion and green pepper
1 teaspoon instant beef bouillon granules
1 cup hot water
2 tablespoons cornstarch dissolved in 2 tablespoons water
2 cups half and half or double strength reconstituted non-fat dry milk
1 cup heavy cream or evaporated skim milk (canned)
1/4 pound cooked thinly sliced corn beef, cut into shreds
1/4 pound Swiss cheese, cut into 1/2-inch cubes
3/4 cup sauerkraut, rinsed and pressed dry
1/4 teaspoon freshly ground pepper
Chopped fresh parsley, optional
Dijon Croutons (see recipe below)

Melt butter over medium heat in a 4-quart saucepan. Add celery, onion and green pepper, saute 2 minutes. Dissolve bouillon granules in hot water, add to saucepan; lower heat and simmer 3 minutes. Gradually add cornstarch mixture, stirring constantly until thickened.

Add half and half or non-fat milk and heavy cream or evaporated skim milk; cook until hot. Stir in corned beef, Swiss cheese, sauerkraut and pepper; heat until cheese melts. Ladle into bowls and garnish with Dijon croutons and parsley, if desired. Serves 6.

DIJON CROUTONS

3 slices rye bread, crust removed and cut into 1/2-inch cubes
2 tablespoons unsalted butter, melted
1 teaspoon Dijon mustard

Place bread cubes in 8x8x2-inch baking pan. Combine butter and mustard; pour over bread cubes and toss. Bake in a 350-degree oven 20 to 25 minutes or until crisp and brown, stirring often.

MONTEREY JACK CHEESE SOUP

1 1/2 tablespoons butter
1 1/2 tablespoons all-purpose flour
3 cups milk, divided
1/2 cup finely chopped onion
1/2 cup peeled, diced tomato
2 canned green chiles, seeded and chopped
1 cup chicken broth
1 1/2 cups (6 ounces) shredded Monterey Jack cheese
1/2 teaspoon salt
Dash pepper
1 small garlic clove, minced

Melt butter in a heavy saucepan over low heat; add flour, stirring until smooth. Cook 1 minute, stirring constantly. Gradually add 1 1/2 cups milk; cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, until thickened and bubbly. Set aside.

Combine onion, tomato, chiles, garlic and chicken broth; cook over medium heat about 3 minutes or until vegetables are tender. Remove from heat and gradually stir in white sauce; return to low heat. Add 1 1/2 cups milk and remaining ingredients; cook, stirring constantly, until cheese is melted. Serve immediately. Makes about 6 cups.

E-Z CREAMY ZUCCHINI SOUP

2 cups chopped zucchini
1/4 cup chopped onion
3 tablespoons butter
1/2 teaspoon instant chicken bouillon granules
1 1/2 cups creamed cottage cheese
1 1/2 cups milk
4 to 6 pats of butter (for top)
1 teaspoon chopped fresh parsley

In medium saucepan, saute zucchini and onion in 3 tablespoons butter until tender. Sprinkle with bouillon granules; cover and cook over medium heat for 3 minutes. Meanwhile, combine milk and cottage cheese in blender container or food processor. Cover; process until smooth. Add to zucchini mixture; heat thoroughly, but do not boil. Top each serving with a pat of butter and chopped parsley. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Melon Picking Involves More Than A Thump

How do you decide "Which one is best?" when it comes to shopping for a melon. Unfortunately, there is no secret formula for solving this dilemma, but there are certain signs you can look for to improve your chances of selection; and, they are fairly dependable.

In general, look for fully ripened fruit for getting the best sweetness, for once a melon is picked, it will not develop anymore in flavor. Also, avoid bruised or cracked fruit. For selecting the different varieties look for the following:

Cantaloupe — The scar at the stem end of this melon should be smooth and without any stem remaining. If part of the stem is remaining, this is an indication the melon was picked too green to have a good flavor. When the rind around the blossom end yields slightly with gentle thumb pressure, it is a sign of ripeness. Look for a course, raised, corky netting, absent of green color on the rind. A pleasant melon aroma should also be present. To ripen a melon after you have purchased it, leave at room temperature. Once ripened, use or refrigerate.

Honey Dew — Buy these melons when they have a smooth, velvety surface and a creamy white or yellow rind. Avoid those with a stark-white rind tinged with green for they are likely to be unripe. To store, keep at room temperature for a few days. When ripe, use immediately or refrigerate. For best flavor, serve at room temperature.

Watermelon — Look for firm, symmetrically shaped melons with good rind color and a dully waxy rind texture. The underside should be creamy yellow in color. If the underside is white, or very pale green the melon was picked too soon. Whey buying this melon in sections, look for a bright red flesh color and black seeds. A whole melon may be stored at room temperature. Cut sections should be refrigerated.

Regardless of your favorite, melons are now available and in plentiful supply all across the state.

CANTALOUPE PICKLES

2 cups vinegar
2 cups corn syrup
4 teaspoons whole cloves
2 cups sugar
8 (2-inch) sticks cinnamon
1 tablespoon mustard seed

Cut melon into oblong strips. Trim all the seed and rind off. Soak melon in salt water overnight (4 tablespoons salt to a quart of water). Drain, and cook in clear water until tender. Put slices into a bag. Bring vinega, syrup and spices to boil; add cantaloupe, and cook slowly until cantaloupe is clear. Pack into hot sterilized jars and seal.

MINTED MELON BALLS

1 cup watermelon balls
1 cup honeydew balls
1/8 teaspoon mint flavoring
1 tablespoon lemon juice
Fresh mint leaves

Cut orange in half crosswise. Gently squeeze orange halves, reserving 1/4 cup juice. Carefully remove orange pulp (do not puncture shells); discard pulp an set shells aside.

Combine 1/4 cup orange juice, watermelon, honeydew, flavoring and lemon juice in a small bowl; mix well. Cover and chill 2 hours.

To serve, spoon into individual dessert dishes; garnish each with mint sprig, if desired. Makes 8 servings (about 116 calories per 1-cup serving).

HONEYDEW-BERRY DESSERT

1/2 cup reduced-calorie strawberry jam
1/4 teaspoon grated orange rind
1/2 cup unsweetened orange juice
Dash of ground cinnamon
1 tablespoon cornstarch
2 tablespoons water
1 cup sliced fresh strawberries
1/4 teaspoon almond extract
4 cups honeydew balls
Grated orange rind

Combine first 4 ingredients in a small saucepan. Combine cornstarch and water, mixing well; add to strawberry jam mixture. Bring to a boil over medium heat, stirring frequently; reduce heat and simmer until the strawberry jam melts and mixture is thickened. Remove sauce from heat; stir in the sliced strawberries and almond extract. Cool sauce to room temperature.

Is it time for your 3,000 mile Jiffy Lube oil, lube and fluid service?

According to General Motors Guidelines, you should change your car's oil every 3,000 miles. After 3,000 miles the oil loses its ability to lubricate and cool your engine and the next thing you know there goes your engine. So every 3,000 miles make sure you go to Jiffy Lube. In 10 minutes and with no appointment the J-team will: change your oil with a major brand, lube the chassis, check and fill all your car's vital fluids, inflate your tires and even wash your exterior windows. All of which helps keep your car running better and out of the repair shop.

No appointment!
Only at Jiffy Lube!
