Navy Chases Iranian Gunboat From Bridgeton

By NABILA MEGALLI
Associated Press Writer
MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — U.S. Navy helicopters and two warships today chased off an Iranian gunboat that came too close to a convoy escorting the mine-damaged supertanker Bridgeton in the Strait of Hormuz, shipping sources said.

The incident was the first significant confrontation between the U.S. and Iranian navies since the United States began July 20 escorting 11 Kuwaiti tankers reflagged with the Stars and Stripes to protect them from Iranian attacks. Iran accuses Kuwait of supporting Iraq in the 7-year Iran-Iraq war.

The interception in the narrow

Strait of Hormuz, gateway to the Persian Gulf, came as a new convoy of three Kuwaiti tankers flying the American flag was reported heading into the gulf escorted by U.S. warships.

Three other tankers that had sailed from Kuwait with the Bridgeton on Saturday were believed to be catching up with the supertanker as it steamed through the Strait of Hormuz past Iranian anti-ship missile emplacements on the way out of the gulf.

The shipping sources said the helicopter carrier Guadalcanal and the frigate Hawes intercepted an Iranian gunboat that came too close to the Bridgeton convoy and forced it to move away. The Navy has ordered ships to stay one mile away from the convoys.

The Guadalcanal scrambled one or more helicopter gunships to shadow the gunboat, said the sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The outbound convoy with the Bridgeton was escorted by the U.S. destroyer Kidd and the frigates Hawes and Klakring from Kuwait. The frigate Crommelin joined the group after the Bridgeton entered the Strait of Hormuz at 8 a.m.

In Washington, Pentagon sources said two small dhows, traditional wooden

Activity Marks Start Of ECU Fall Semester

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Regardless of the headaches associated with the first day of class at East Carolina University, it's an exciting time, according to Dr. Trenton Davis, associate vice chancellor for academic support.

Classes began today, even as some students stood in lines still paying their fees, getting replacement schedules, and completing their schedules of courses.

Davis said he feels that each new school year is an opportunity for a new start for everyone on campus — from students to administration and faculty to support staff.

"We had lots of secretaries coming in this morning complaining about having to park so far away or about being blocked by a student who didn't know his way around yet," he said. "But that's part of it. In a few days, it will all smooth out."

Dr. William Bloodworth, acting vice chancellor for academic affairs, said he observes that assignment to classes has gone very smoothly. Davis said that a number of new sections of classes have had to be opened at the last minute, but this, too is expected and has been accomplished easily. He said the major call for opening of additional classes has been in the pre-business and beginning business major courses.

About one-fourth of all students enrolled at ECU at some time express an intention to major in business and take some courses in this field, he said, so it's difficult sometimes to meet the huge demand for early business courses.

Davis said he believes that this year's enrollment will be approximately 300 students higher than that of last fall. Last fall's final figure was 14,474. Registrar Gil Moore declined to give enrollment so far nor to predict whether enrollment this year will be up when the final figures become available some time within the next week.

Dr. Richard Eakin, university chancellor, said, "The campus is a quite a scene of activity this morning. I've heard of no major difficulties. I believe we're off to a good start."

Iran Will Likely Reject Cease-Fire Resolution

WASHINGTON (AP) — Iran will likely reject a U.N. resolution calling for a cease-fire in its war with Iraq, according to an Iranian deputy foreign minister who promises cooperation with other efforts to bring peace to the region.

Mohammad Jawad Larijani, Iran's deputy foreign minister for international affairs, is scheduled to meet with U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar today to discuss the cease-fire resolution.

"Iran will be ready to cooperate fully with any effort which aims at bringing peace to the region," Larijani said Sunday. "But this resolution is a very unfortunate one because from the minute of inception, both Iraq and the United States of America will embark on an action which really violates both the spirit and letter of the resolution."

"Iraqis intensified and escalated their attacks on the ground and on the air, and both the United States of America intensified its presence and brought the huge armada in the region. So I think this resolution from the day of inception was in trouble,"

Larijani said on NBC-TV's "Meet the Press."

Despite Larijani's comments, Richard W. Murphy, assistant secretary of state for Near Eastern and South Asian affairs, said he still held out hope for the U.N. resolution.

"It was a negative response," Murphy acknowledged, "but once again, we did not hear Iran give us a categorical rejection of the resolution."

The resolution, which Iraq has ac-

Consumer Spending Boost Mirrors Previous Increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer spending jumped 0.9 percent in July, the same increase as the month before, while Americans' incomes rose a more modest 0.4 percent, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said the two months of hefty spending increases followed a 0.2 percent gain in May. The twin gains were the highest since a 2.3 percent surge in February.

The July income increase followed 0.3 percent gains in both May and June and was the largest increase since a 0.6 percent advance in April.

Personal consumption spending, which includes nearly everything except interest payments on debt, rose at an annual rate of $25.6 billion in July following an increase of $26.9 billion in June.

Purchases of durable goods, items expected to last three years or more, increased at a rate of $5.9 billion in July, down from a $9.8 billion rise in June. Purchases of nondurable goods increased at a rate of $5.9 billion, up from a $3.4 billion increase in the previous month.

Purchases of services, a broad category which includes everything from housing costs to restaurant meals, rose at an annual rate of $14.5 billion in July, up from a $13.6 billion increase in June.

Americans' disposable, or after-tax, income increased 0.4 percent in July after creeping down 0.2 percent in June.

Personal savings, savings as a percent of disposable income, dipped to 2.8 percent in July, down from 3.3 percent in June. By comparison, the savings rate for all last year was 4.3 percent.

Wages and salaries, the key component in the incomes category, were at an annual rate of $5.4 billion in July, down slightly from a $5.9 billion June advance.

Payrolls in the manufacturing sector decreased by $200 million in July, after a $500 million advance the month before. Farm income also slowed during the month, increasing $100 million after a $2.5 billion increase in June.

Lonetree Sentencing Hearing Commences

By DIRK BEVERIDGE
Associated Press Writer

QUANTICO, Va. (AP) — Marine Sgt. Clayton Lonetree was only a pawn in a scheme that involved greater excesses by the government, his lawyer said today as Lonetree awaited sentencing on espionage charges.

The sentencing hearing opened in the same tiny Quantico Marine Corps Base courtroom where Lonetree was convicted Friday on 13 charges, but almost immediately the proceedings went into recess so documents could be photocopied.

Lonetree, a 25-year-old American Indian, could be sentenced to life in prison.

William Kunstler, one of Lonetree's two civilian lawyers, touched on themes repeated throughout the court-martial in remarks prepared for delivery to the jurors who convicted Lonetree and will decide his sentence.

"The whole world knows that Clayton Lonetree is merely a pawn in the great scheme of things," Kunstler said. "He bears on his thin shoulders the criminal negligence of the Department of State, the lies of the CIA, the brutal excesses of the Naval Investigative Service and now, through your verdicts, the self-protective myopia of the Marine Corps."

"Now, gentlemen, punish him as you will, and try to sleep soundly tonight and all the nights to come. You may find it extremely difficult to do," Kunstler said.

Earlier, Lonetree's lawyers said they think they have a better chance getting his conviction overturned than gaining leniency when he is sentenced for passing secrets to his Soviet lover.

As in the month-long trial, which was punctuated by frequent government censorship, the defense planned to call no witnesses during the sentencing hearing, said defense attorney Michael Stuhff.

"If this conviction does stand, it is time for us to surrender and say the Soviet Union has won, there is no difference between their system and ours," Stuhff said.

Lonetree, of St. Paul, Minn., was the first Marine to stand court-martial for espionage. Authorities alleged he gave the KGB, the Soviet secret

Interviews Begin

The first of three remaining candidates for Greenville's vacant city manager position will meet with members of the City Council during a day-long visit Tuesday.

The council will interview the applicant, who has asked that his name not be revealed for job security reasons, in executive sessions at 12:30 p.m. and 4 p.m. in the third floor conference room of City Hall.

The candidate, who is expected to arrive at about 8 a.m., will be given an orientation before meeting with department heads, according to Dick Farris, the city's staff resource person in the search.

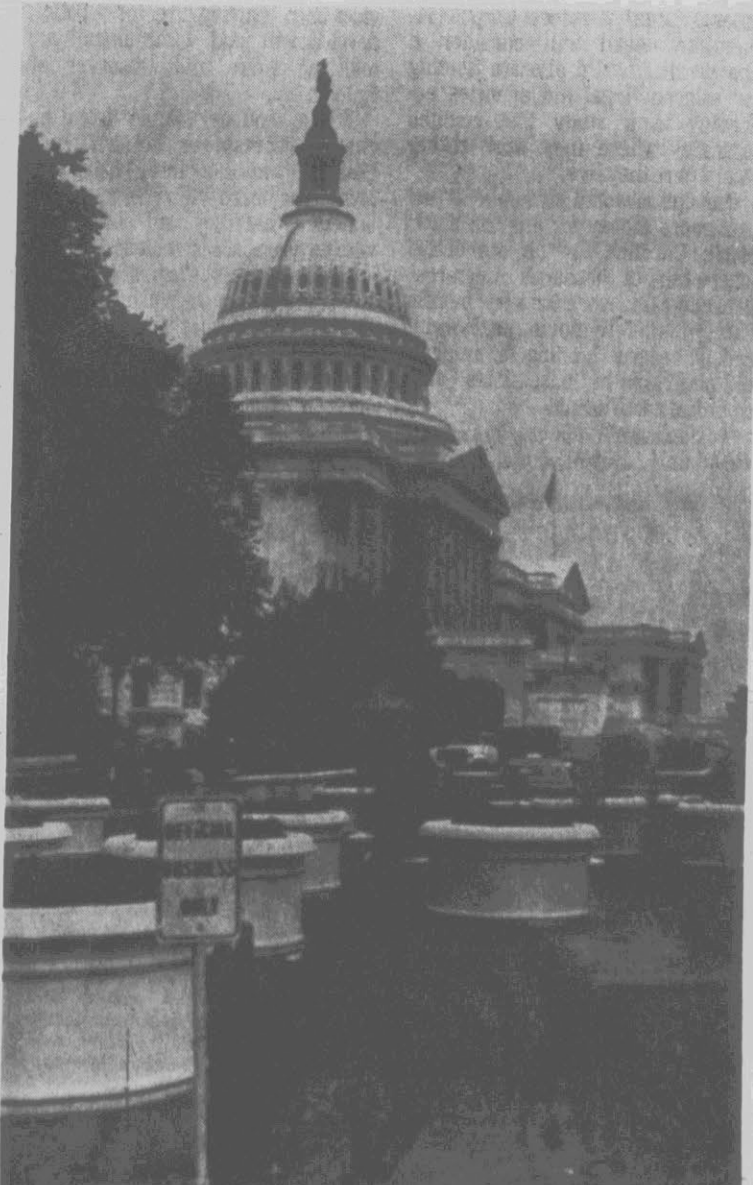

The other two candidates are also scheduled for day-long visits. Gregory Knowles, city manager of Inkster, Mich., will visit Wednesday, and William Veeder, who served as Charlotte city manager for 12 years, is scheduled to meet with council members Thursday.

Veeder is employed at Pension Plans Inc. in Charlotte, while Knowles has served as Inkster's chief executive since 1984.

The City Council will conduct executive sessions with both men at 12:30 p.m. at the Sheraton Greenville and at 4 p.m. in the third floor conference room of City Hall.

The council, which received 177 applications, reduced the number of candidates to three earlier this month.

The search for a new city manager began following the March 16 dismissal of Gail Meeks.

New Chief Adds Shine To Fayetteville

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — Fayetteville has a tough image that is partly due to the proximity of Fort Bragg, where a large number of young, single men looking for fun often get into trouble.

And Cumberland County District Attorney Ed Grannis Jr. said the city's police department prior to 1984 sometimes responded to that toughness with overkill that kept his office barraged with brutality complaints from both civilians and officers.

"Fayetteville is a tough town, and we have a reputation for that image that is well-earned," Grannis told the News and Observer of Raleigh. "We presently have 23 people in jail charged with first-degree murder."

But Grannis said the complaints of brutality and favoritism within the department have dropped sharply since Chief Ronald Hansen arrived in July 1984, and the quality of police work has improved.

"Under Chief (Danny K.) Dixon, there were major problems in the department, both with leadership and with regard to the attitude of the rank-and-file," Grannis said.

Dixon retired in 1984 for medical reasons and lives in Fayetteville. He has an unlisted telephone number. Numerous attempts to reach him last week were unsuccessful, the Raleigh newspaper said.

The department's problems under Dixon became public two years ago during the trial of a brutality suit against the police department. Henry Zebulon Spell alleged that after he was arrested, handcuffed and taken to the police station for a traffic violation and illegal drug possession in November 1983, officer Charles D. McDaniel kned him in the groin, rupturing a testicle and sterilizing him.

A Fayetteville jury awarded Spell $1,000 in damages in 1985. That award was increased to $900,000 after a second trial, and the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals last month upheld the award, plus attorney fees and interest.

U.S. District Judge James C. Fox, in a written evaluation calling for the new trial, said that court testimony "painted a fairly convincing and disturbing portrait of the policies and practices existing within the F.P.D." Fox said the trial had revealed a department where violence was condoned and officers' brutality was Hansen will not discuss differences between what he calls his "management philosophy" and that of past administrations except to say, "I do a lot of things with checks and balances. I do a lot of follow-up."

Little Support For Increased Legal Aid Funding

RALEIGH (AP) — Most federal agencies welcome a chance for more money, but a proposal to give more funds to Farmworkers Legal Services in North Carolina is getting a suspicious reception from migrant worker advocates.

At a meeting in Seattle Friday, the federal Legal Services Corp.'s 11-member board will consider a change that would allocate funding for migrant legal aid agencies according to a study that counted migrants where they work rather than where they live.

One option would give up to 50 percent more money for migrant aid in North Carolina, a "stream state" where tens of thousands of non-resident migrants work for a few months each year before moving on. It would reduce federal funding for migrant aid programs in "base states" such as Texas and Florida.

A spokesman for the Legal Services Corp. defended the proposal, saying it could shift resources from one program to another but would not cut overall funding to migrant services.

"The board requested the corporation staff to put together various allocation options that flow from the study," David Anderson, Legal Services Corp.'s acting director of policy development and communications, told the News and Observer of Raleigh.

"Those options extend from no change whatsoever to whatever changes you can infer from the study. The board will receive a set of options. What they will elect to do with those options is unclear."

Legal Services Corp.'s critics in North Carolina and Washington say the proposal is motivated not by a desire to strengthen migrant aid in North Carolina but by an urge to decimate a nationwide network of legal services for migrants by slashing or eliminating funding in some states.

"No one is seeking these changes from the field," said Richard Taylor, executive director of Legal Services of North Carolina, the confederation of Farmworkers and 14 other legal aid programs for the poor in the state.

"The only people who appear to support the change in the funding formula are the regular adversaries of clients represented by legal services programs," Taylor said.

Legal Services Corp. has made Legal Services of North Carolina — and particularly its migrant program — the target of "abusive, wasteful and intrusive" investigations and monitoring campaigns, Taylor said.

Anderson said the agency regularly monitored its field agencies for compliance with agency rules and regulations.

"We recognize the monitoring process might not always be a pleasant process," Anderson said. "But we don't seek an adversarial relationship."

Asheboro lawyer Lillian B. O'Brian, president of LSNC's board of directors, said she suspected the Legal Services Corp.'s board had focused on the migrant program because of complaints by farmers and farm groups, who often are the targets of lawsuits by Farmworkers on behalf of migrants.

"This particular board of directors ... has been less than supportive of other field programs and has singled out migrant programs for an even more vicious attack," said W. Charles Eppinette, director of Farmworkers Legal Services. "I think it would be fair to say the current Legal Services Corp. has placed itself in an adversarial position with legal services field programs."

TEETH AND GENERAL HEALTH

If you were told that crooked teeth could lead to dry skin, brittle hair, poor circulation, headaches or emotional problems, I'm sure you would laugh yourself to sleep. Bizarre as it may seem, the cause of many of these problems which do not respond to other forms of medical relief could possibly be found in your teeth and jaws.

Recent research suggests that an improper bite puts a tremendous strain on the muscles of mastication (chewing muscles), leading to improper coordination in the brain and this secondarily leads to other medical problems.

The jaw joint and its proper function (or lack of it) can greatly influence general body health. If you wake up with a headache or have a popping noise in your jaws when opening your mouth, then you could be suffering from a temporal-mandibular joint problem and should call our office. It certainly doesn't do any harm to have it checked. It could be the cause of other health problems.

Note: We invite all participants of the Blue Cross/Blue Shield personal care plan to come by our office. We are a member of Cost Care.

Congressional Report Cites Guidance Problems With MX Missile

WASHINGTON (AP) — Numerous guidance problems with the multi-warhead MX missile are raising "serious questions" about the dependability of one of the nation's front-line nuclear weapons, a House committee report says.

Thus far, 22 of an expected 100-missile MX force have been deployed, but one-third of those deployed are not operational because of problems in their guidance systems.

"Of the 22 deployed so far, eight don't even have a guidance system and are thus clearly and obviously unguided missiles," said Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., chairman of the House Armed Services Committee that released the report Sunday.

"The Air Force says the other 14 are fine, but it has appointed a scientific panel to look into the issues, which indicates the Air Force isn't so sure," he said in a statement.

The report from the Democratic-controlled panel was sharply critical of Northrop Corp., which built the inertial measurement unit, as the guidance system is formally known, and it also criticized the Air Force for not having an adequate system of checks and balances on contractors.

Instead of checking for quality, the Air Force pushed quantity and Northrop responded by building the program so rapidly that corners were cut, the report said.

The Washington Post, meanwhile, stated in today's editions that the Air Force has suspended all MX flight tests while it seeks to resolve questions about the missiles' accuracy, basing its report on unidentified Defense Department and congressional sources.

The newspaper said Brig. Gen. Charles A. May Jr., Air Force deputy director for advanced programs, confirmed that the Air Force decided to delay three remaining MX flight tests "so that we could better understand these changes" in missile accuracy.

Lt. Col. Richard Oborn, a spokesman for the Air Force, disputed the congressional committee's conclusions about the accuracy of the weapon, which is known formally as the Peacekeeper.

"There's no question about the capability of the Peacekeeper system. Its accuracy has been demonstrated in 17 test flights," Oborn said.

Tony Cantafio, a spokesman for Northrop, said he had not seen the panel's report and could not respond to specifics in the document.

But Cantafio added, "The Air Force has stated that the guidance unit is exceeding its reliability requirements and has met or exceeded its accuracy requirements in the 17 test flights thus far."

"Our problem has been one of quantity, not quality," Cantafio said. "Since May, 21 new units have been accepted by the Air Force and we've reduced the backlog from 23 to 17 units."

However, the report said that of the 17 tests thus far, only five used the type of guidance system that would actually go on the MX deployed in a silo. The other dozen were test versions.

Officials Probe Crash

WEST MAYFIELD, Pa. (AP) — A World War II-era B-17 bomber that overshot a runway while attempting to land at an air show plunged down a hillside, injuring 11 people, three seriously.

The airplane, which was ferrying passengers who wanted an aerial view of the show, came down on one wheel Sunday while landing at the Beaver County Airport, ran through a fence and fell over a 90-foot embankment into a gully.

The accident took place in front of several thousand spectators awaiting the air show's grand finale, a fly-by of numerous fighter planes.

"The plane went down most of the runway on its left wheel and by the time the right wheel touched down, it was too late and the pilot couldn't slow it down enough," said Paul Hawthorne, 20, a spectator from nearby Industry.

"I was with a couple of buddies who are pilots and they said right away that he (the pilot) didn't have enough room to stop the plane."

"We just overshot the runway," said James Mackry, 67, of New Brighton, one of nine passengers who reportedly paid $100 each to ride in the bomber. Mackry suffered minor injuries in the crash, authorities said.

Federal Aviation Administration investigators immediately were called to the crash site, about 30 miles northwest of Pittsburgh, said airport Manager Dan Donatella. He said at least three other accidents have occurred at the airport when pilots overshot the runway.

"I don't know if the brakes failed ... there's just a lot of second guessing going on," Donatella said. "We're just not sure."

Donatella said the bomber, owned by the Collings Foundation of Stow, Mass., is "a real museum piece."

Three men were listed in serious but stable condition today at the hospital. Six other passengers and two firefighters were treated and released at the hospital, authorities said.

Authorities identified the pilot as Ed Lawer and the co-pilot as Mike Phillips, but no ages and hometowns were available. They said three other crewmembers, who were not hurt, were aboard the airplane.

After the evening accident, the remainder of the air show was called off and spectators were asked to leave.

Emergency workers and firefighters remained at the scene overnight since the plane was leaking fuel.

Bed Dilemma

Pitt County Memorial Hospital faces a dilemma that is unique in this era of hospital bed construction management.

In a region which has a surplus of hospital beds PCMH needs more beds. Hospital beds with all the support facilities they require are expensive and the State Division of Facilities Services has said that eastern North Carolina needs no more hospital beds.

Because of its role as a regional medical referral center in conjunction with the East Carolina University School of Medicine, PCMH is facing a bed situation which the administration indicates is desperate. The hospital administrators plan to initiate discussions with the state agency to show the severe need for additional beds at PCMH even though there is a hospital bed surplus elsewhere.

The hospital has retained long range planners to document the need for more beds as the institution fulfills its regional medical role.

Dr. Robert Brame, PCMH chief of staff, asked the trustees to do what they could to relieve the bed shortage.

Administrator Jack Richardson said determinations are constantly being made as to which patients can be transferred back to their community hospital without jeopardizing their care. Also being considered is finding space in nursing homes for some patients.

The need for additional beds is a situation which must be looked at separately from the bed surplus of eastern North Carolina. The patients, after all, wouldn't be sent to PCMH if it were not for the specialized medical care that only a regional referral center can offer.

Certainly we are sympathetic to the cost containment efforts which are currently under way. PCMH is a special case, however, in that it is providing a level of medical care that was not available in eastern North Carolina a decade ago. It is entirely possible that costs are being reduced in individual cases because the patient has this level of medical service available nearer to his or her home.

The administration of PCMH obviously has a selling job to do if it is to obtain permission to construct the hospital beds it needs. It is armed, though, with some excellent selling points.

Fahrenkopf's Future Is Now

WASHINGTON — On June 29, when representatives of Toyota Motor Manufacturing, USA, met at the Commerce Department to lobby senior officials for a favorable trade ruling, lawyers for the Japanese automaker included the chairman of the Republican National Committee (RNC), Frank Fahrenkopf.

Fahrenkopf, in fact, arranged the meeting attended by the late Secretary Malcolm Baldrige and Under Secretary S. Bruce Smart. He was acting as a six-figure partner in the Washington super-law firm of Hogan and Hartson, registered lobbyist for Toyota.

How does this square with the 11-year old RNC rule requiring the party's national chairman to be "full time"? "Because I do not practice law," Fahrenkopf told us. Hogan and Hartson pays him, he explained, because "they're betting on the future."

But when Fahrenkopf arranged the Commerce-Toyota meeting, he was practicing law, Washington-style. His role unsettled Commerce officials and fueled Republican dismay about leadership at an RNC that is laying off employees and unable to raise money.

Ironically, Fahrenkopf became chairman because of the 1976 "full time" rule intended to bar members of Congress from doubling as party leader. In 1983, seeking to circumvent the rule, then Sen. Paul Laxalt became "general chairman" with Fahrenkopf, his political lieutenant from Nevada, named "nominal" RNC chairman. In fact, Laxalt turned out "nominal" with Fahrenkopf running the show.

Fahrenkopf as chairman has remained a board member of First Republic Bank Corp. of California.

He has become "of counsel" to a Reno law firm. In January 1985 he joined Hogan and Hartson.

How much all this returns is something Fahrenkopf will not reveal. The RNC won't even say what it pays him. But Federal Election Commission records show he received at least $75,480.06 as chairman during the last 12-month reporting period.

"Absolutely false," says Fahrenkopf to word passed in Republican circles that he also gets $350,000 to $450,000 from Hogan and Hartson. According to an acquaintance, Fahrenkopf had mentioned he was seeking that figure, which seems excessive for a retainer. The Legal Times reported he is paid "at least $100,000 a year by the firm," and a source close to Fahrenkopf confirms that inexact figure.

Whatever he receives, the real question is what he does for it. "I do nothing," he told us, before we mentioned the Toyota meeting. "Go down and ask them (Hogan and Hartson) when was the last time they saw me

... I go down there for a meeting once in a while."

That disturbs some Republicans. "It's hard to understand why somebody would pay a six-figure salary for somebody doing nothing," said Richard Richards, who told us he turned down two law firm offers while serving as national chairman immediately preceding Fahrenkopf. According to the Legal Times, Hogan and Hartson "has paraded Fahrenkopf before potential clients, some of whom have retained the firm ..."

While the firm considers their relationship with Fahrenkopf an investment in the future, part of that future is now. The June 29 meeting was arranged for Toyota lobbyists to press on Commerce officials a "free trade zone" in connection with the company's new auto plant near Lexington, Ky.

Reagan's Legacy For U.S. Courts

CHARLOTTESVILLE, VA. — The left and the right are gearing up for September's Supreme Court confirmation battle over Judge Robert H. Bork. The outcome turns on whether enough senators are persuaded that Bork is in the legal mainstream.

What is being ignored, though, is how profoundly the Reagan administration has already shifted legal thought and the direction of the federal judiciary. In six-and-a-half years, Reagan has named more lower federal court judges — 317 in all — than Franklin D. Roosevelt did in 12 years — 203 judges. Over 42 percent of those now on the bench were appointed by Reagan and before leaving the Oval Office he may have selected over half of all federal judges.

Democrats have not occupied the White House in 20 years, except for the ill-fated presidency of Jimmy Carter. As a result, no Democrat has appointed a member of the Supreme Court since 1967. And 60 percent of those now on the appellate bench identify with the Republican Party; 10 percent are Independents or conservative Democrats in the South, and the rest Democrats. Much the same holds for district judges.

More than any president since Roosevelt, Reagan favors the party-faithful. While all presidents reward those in their own party, Reagan has surpassed others by giving 97 percent of his judgeships to Republicans. And there is more to it than that.

Judges are regarded by the Reagan administration as both symbols and instruments of presidential power — the most lasting legacy of "the Reagan revolution." Past Republican presidents have been accused of not taking judgeships seriously and thus failing to appoint true conservatives.

From the outset of the Reagan era, power over judgeships was concentrated, with the aim of reversing the trend toward moderate-to-liberal judges. First, Carter's "merit" commissions for nominating judges were eliminated. Then the policy of consulting with the National Bar Association — representing black lawyers — and women's organizations was discontinued. Within the Department of Justice, the judicial-selection process became more rigorous and subject to greater White House supervision. A special committee — including the attorney general, his deputy and several assistants, as well as the counselor to the president and other White House advisers — was created to decide who Reagan should nominate.

The Reagan administration's ambitious agenda has been meticulously imposed on judicial selection. Stephen J. Markman, the assistant attorney general who oversees the judicial selection process, boasts it "has in place what is probably the most thorough and comprehensive system for recruiting and screening federal judicial candidates of any administration ever."

The key to Reagan's success lies in an unprecedented screening process. Computer data banks contain records — speeches, articles, court opinions and the like — on hundreds of potential nominees. Then the one or two leading candidates for each vacancy undergo several day-long interviews with Department of Justice officials. During these interviews candidates say they have been asked their views on such controversial rulings as abortion, affirmative action and criminal justice. This, Fred F. Fielding, the former counselor to the president, concedes is geared toward selecting "people of a certain judicial philosophy."

This ideological screening draws fire from moderate Republican senators and officials in past Republican administration, as well as liberals. Herbert Brownell Jr., Dwight D. Eisenhower's attorney general, called it "shocking" in a recent interview. Griffin B. Bell and Edward H. Levi, former attorneys general for Carter and Gerald R. Ford, agree that the process has become "badly politicized."

Still, the administration was almost guaranteed success, at least until the Democrats regained the Senate last fall. As chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee from 1981 to 1986, Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., gave rubber-stamp approval. In the words of one staffer, he was "willing to swallow and push the most controversial of Reagan nominees." That allowed the administration to take a hard line with moderate Republicans on nominations. Despite bitter intra-party fighting and one defeat, the administration almost always got what it wanted.

Since Sen. Joseph R. Biden Jr., D-Del., took over the Judiciary Committee, the administration has been slow to fill vacancies and named few controversial conservatives. Another measure of the change is that half the appellate judges put up by Attorney General Edwin Meese III and rushed through by Thurmond were given the American Bar Association's lowest ranking of "qualified." And a third were so rated by a split vote, with a minority of the ABA committee finding them "not qualified." By contrast, so far this year only one was rated qualified by a split vote; the rest were unanimously found qualified or well-qualified.

The inescapable conclusion remains, as conservative University of Chicago Law School Professor Philip B. Kurland says: "Judges are being appointed in the expectation that they will rewrite laws and the Constitution to the administration's liking. Reagan's judges are activists in support of conservative dogma — what some people would call hanging judges in criminal law and anti-regulation judges in civil law."

Reagan judges share not just a predictable conservative judicial philosophy. They are disproportionately wealthy, white Protestant males. With over 300 appointments, Reagan has named only 27 women, 12 Latinos, 5 blacks and two Asians. Over 92 percent had incomes exceeding $100,000 a year, and almost a quarter were millionaires. Most had prior judicial, government or corporate experience. Young law professors with established conservative track-records were favored as well.

In what ways will these judges carry the Reagan revolution? At the very least, they will advance into the next century the movement, building for almost 20 years, toward a far more conservative federal judiciary. This means they will be less receptive to claims for civil rights, the rights of the accused and rooting out vestiges of non-racial discrimination. At the same time, they will be more responsive to property rights, corporations and anti-regulation forces.

David M. O'Brien, a government professor at the University of Virginia, recently received the American Bar Association's 1987 Silver Gavel Award for his book, "Storm Center: The Supreme Court in American Politics."

Strength For Today

"And when he came to himself, he said, 'I will arise.'"

These words are from the parable of the Prodigal Son. As we know, the boy had gone into a far country and had lost everything in debauchery. Experience seemed to teach him nothing. In his extremity he attached himself to a citizen of that country who sent him into the fields to feed swine.

At last he began to realize that he was meant for something better than he was doing. It was when he realized that he was his father's son that he said, "I will arise."

We are all God's children, and yet in our own ways we are all as prodigal as the young man in the story. But all is not lost. Like the young man, at some times we can act upon the vision before our eyes and say, "I will arise."

Integral Thread

What started as an effort to squash a revolt overseas 700 years ago has wound up an integral thread in this nation's political heritage.

That effort was the Magna Carta, issued in 1215 by England's King John. All the king wanted to do was end a revolt by the English aristocracy, a group that was demanding lower taxes, protection for property holdings and a voice in government.

As it turned out, the scope of the document extended far beyond that goal. The Magna Carta, without even meaning to, fathered, in a way, the United States Bill of Rights. Now, one of four surviving copies of the document is traveling North Carolina for citizens of the state to inspect. The document was in Raleigh and visited New Bern last week — all part of a national tour.

So why should North Carolinians flock to view a 700-year-old, brown, torn, worn piece of paper whose intent was to do in a cry for a group's deserved rights?

First, because the rights granted by King John — through the Magna Carta — formed the basis for the principles of separation of church and state, trial by jury and no taxation without representation — familiar cries in colonial America times.

Second, because the document's premises expressed ideas the likes of Thomas Jefferson, James Madison, Ben Franklin, John Adams and George Washington considered worthy of basing a new system of democracy on. King John's effort to quiet some rabble rousers turned into political wisdom extremely useful to future rabble rousers.

The Magna Carta endures, a fact supported by its use as a source for drawing the U.S. Constitution, and a fact supported by the 200-year strength of that constitution. The U.S. Constitution has faced many opponents in its lifetime, and has stood the test of many challenges to its tenets.

The Constitution is the structure and refuge for America's freedom and the Magna Carta was the guiding document for this protection. Viewing the Magna Carta, drafted some 700 years ago, would be like seeing a part of America's heritage before the nation existed.

Old Unions Build New Set Of Labor Relations

WASHINGTON — If Labor Day is coming late this year, so is attention to an important national change: Organized labor is beginning to transcend its image of pinky rings and 10-cent cigar smoke to regroup as a force in modern U.S. political and economic life. By 1988, its hitherto waning political influence could be on the upswing.

After all, it could hardly go down. The conservative years of the early and mid-1980s marked a nadir of labor credibility on all fronts. Labor's share of the national work force and union success in representation elections were both on a downward slide. Futurists openly dismissed unions and labor leaders as dinosaurs; then the 1984 presidential election — when the AFL-CIO anointed Walter F. Mondale, only to see him carry one state — seemed to prove their point.

To be sure, talk of a late 1980s turn-about has to be more tentative than conclusive. Basic economic forces are still not favorable to work-force unioning — not with jobs migrating from Frost Belt assembly lines to Sun Belt sweatshops, Taiwan and service industries. What clearly has changed, though, is the way union strategists show greater wisdom in deploying their not-inconsiderable resources. Most important, they seem to be giving up yesterday's glory dreams — of hand-picking Democratic presidential nominees, captaining great coalitions for "social justice" or making every year's wages in autos or steel set a new record.

None of that works anymore. Union members — and potential enlistees — prefer realistic bread-and-butter economics to grandiose political blueprints or brie-and-Chablis alliances. And it's precisely this basic-issue game that union leaders now seem to be playing with renewed public sensitivity and good timing.

Much has changed since 1984, when the simultaneous deflation of Mondale, "reactionary liberalism" and AFL-CIO hubris paved the way for a Republican landslide — and, ultimately, for today's public fatigue with Reagan domestic policy. Since last winter, poll after poll has shown Americans favoring new policy directions rather than continued pursuit of Reagan ideology. Demand for more government activism and increased federal spending has been rising again. And once the Democrats recaptured the U.S. Senate in 1986 — with labor playing a critical role — union leaders saw the opportunity for a whole new political and economic agenda.

This has indeed been unfolding. Tax cuts and industrial deregulation are starting to look like yesterday's themes. The debate is shifting away from laissez faire to tougher trade laws, restraint of mergers, partial re-regulation in some industries (air travel, for one) and increased federal spending in areas — highways, the environment, housing — where public demand has been building. This time, labor is riding with the trend. In addition, the AFL-CIO has put its strategic chips on a number of specific new major proposals: an increase in the minimum wage to $4.65 an hour by 1990; a bill proposed by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., requiring business to provide employees with certain minimum health insurance coverage; legislation to oblige businesses to give employees unpaid parental leave; catastrophic health insurance, and a requirement that companies over a certain size must give employees notice of plant closings.

By no means will all these be enacted. Nor should they. Some would overburden the federal budget; some would weigh too heavily on business, small business in particular. But in each case, supporters can produce favorable public opinion polls. For example, a recent survey found a whopping 86 percent majority favoring plant-closing legislation. In general, at least, these are new directions the public wants to explore. Politically, the AFL-CIO has found itself an acceptable, even mildly popular, agenda — and it's surprised business organizations that now find themselves on the defensive.

Even labor's mid-August decision to oppose the U.S. Supreme Court nomination of Judge Robert H. Bork could be an influence-building move. To date, the anti-Bork effort has been led by cultural pressure groups of dubious credibility in Middle America. AFL-CIO involvement may focus debate — and Bork's possible vulnerability — on business and economic issues.

Ingredient No. 2 in labor's incipient rebound is that its new aggressiveness is not just a matter of politics and legislation. A number of unions are also getting involved in the nitty-gritty of capitalism itself — corporate finance.

Wall Street gamesmanship could turn out to be organized labor's most fascinating comeback ploy: utilizing their pension fund and contract-negotiation leverage over much of U.S. industry to deal themselves into the current restructuring of corporate America. Yesterday's adversarial approach to business — give us the fattest pay packet and to hell with the rest of it — is gone, after helping turn out the lights in steel plants and many others. But where unions give wage concessions, some are beginning to demand a compensatory voice in company management and a share in future profits. And even national labor strategists are paying attention. Back in February, the AFL-CIO held its first-ever seminar for union officials to study the effect of mergers and acquisitions on collective bargaining, a development that AFL-CIO Industrial Union Special Projects Director Joseph B. Uehlein describes as, "reflecting the realization that we need to be players in this corporate change game."

Organized labor's goals and interests are not necessarily America's. Like the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, the AFL-CIO remains a certified special interest. But buoyed by a changing national mood, labor has been catching up with the strategic realities of late-1980s politics and economics. They're nobody's patsies any more — nobody's pea-brained, cigar-chomping dinosaurs, either. And, for the moment at least, their influence seems to be on a roll.

IN THE STATE

Black Farmers

TILLERY, N.C. (AP) — Tough times in agriculture are driving many growers off their farms, but experts say the effect on black farmers has been even more dramatic as minority-owned farms quickly disappear.

It's a familiar cycle, says Dr. Willie Willis, a N.C. A&T State University agriculture professor who spent the summer looking over failed farms for the Farmers Home Administration. "I don't see a way out," Willis says.

"For years, we pushed them into farming, after the Depression. Now it's falling and the older farmers ... there's no young people to come along and take their places," Willis told The Charlotte Observer.

Fire Inspections

GREENSBORO (AP) — Many of Greensboro's city schools went without fire inspections for up to 12 years, despite a state law that requires three inspections a year, the Greensboro News & Record has reported.

The city fire department tried to correct the problem a year ago, increasing inspections to at least one per school every year and racking up thousands of violations, the newspaper said.

Greensboro Assistant Chief Jerry Cox, who has been in charge of the fire prevention bureau since 1978, said the law requiring three annual inspections was "antiquated."

He and Fire Chief R.L. Powell said it wouldn't be feasible for their one school inspector to conduct a full-fledged examination of each school three times a year.

Rafting Fatality

FAYETTE STATION, W.Va. (AP) — Rescue teams are attempting to recover the body of a North Carolina woman who died in a white-water rafting accident on the New River, state police said today.

Diane Elaine Gee, 29, of Huntersville, N.C., died late Saturday in the Double Z rapid, about three miles south of Fayette Station, according to Sgt. M.D. Payne of the Oak Hill detachment of the state police.

AIDS Data

JACKSON, N.C. (AP) — State officials say the expected rapid spread of AIDS through the prison system has not happened, in part because of public misconceptions about the amount of homosexuality and intravenous drug use behind bars.

"My own feeling is the reason we are seeing less of it in prison is because there are fewer of the high-risk groups entering prison than the public thinks there are," said H. Parker Eales, director of nursing health services for the state Department of Correction and architect of the state's response to AIDS in prison. "This is just not a high-risk area."

Dismissed

FRANKLIN, N.C. (AP) — Criminal summonses against a Franklin police officer and two former Macon County deputies have been dismissed for insufficient evidence.

Franklin police officer Douglas Evan Hogsd and former deputies Herman Lesley Talley Jr. and Edgar Lee Younce Jr. were issued the summonses on July 27 for simple possession of marijuana, a misdemeanor, following a three-month investigation by State Bureau of Investigation agents, authorities said.

Textile Industry Experts Say Upswing Shortlived

By JOHN A. BOLT

Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — Southeastern textile mills have employed more people in all but five of the last 24 months, and employment is at a 34-month high in an improvement analysts say will last only as long as the dollar falls.

Rep. Ed. Jenkins, one of the industry's chief backers in Congress, says a bill limiting imports is still needed to protect future American jobs.

The federal Bureau of Labor Statistics said 508,000 people were employed in full-time, part-time or salaried textile plant jobs in the Southeast in June, an increase of 2,900 from the previous month and 31,400 more than in July 1984.

The level was the highest since October 1984 when there were 507,200 employed in textiles in the eight-state region which has almost 70 percent of the nation's textile jobs.

The all-time high occurred in June 1973 when the industry employed 681,300.

Donald Ratajczak, director of Georgia State University's Economic Forecasting Project, said the improvement "is a short-run phenomenon. It's going to run until the dollar finds its new level in the world economy."

Ratajczak predicted the dollar will fall for another six to 12 months, meaning "you could have a good, positive side of the textile industry for about 18 months to 24 months."

Leon Borchers, director of research for The Robinson-Humphreys Co. Inc. based in Atlanta, said "Domestic manufacturers are benefiting from improvement in the dollar, from companies finding that time and service are a more important factor (than price) ... and through some realignment and restructuring of the textile industry."

Jenkins said he hoped some of the improvement was also because of the attention focused on imports by years of dicker over legislation.

Jenkins, D-Ga., was one of the main sponsors of a textile import bill that was vetoed by President Reagan in 1985. An attempt to override that veto failed last August.

Textile state representatives introduced a revised bill that would limit import growth to 1 percent a year. Reagan has vowed to veto any bills restricting imports.

But Jenkins, in a telephone interview from his home in Jasper, said the bill is still needed because "if we do not do anything, based on past history, then the industry will continue to erode until for all practical purposes, it will be lost."

The bill "simply attempts to equalize future consumption growth rates with future increases in imports, ... so that hopefully a large part of the industry could be stabilized for the future."

Ratajczak said some of the industry's improvement is a reaction to foreign competition.

"There's no question that this is a much better managed industry — better equipment, closer to the customers," he said. "One thing that foreign competition has done is really get American management out of their chairs."

Ratajczak said his research indicates the improvement "is fairly widespread. First of all the carpet industry is doing very well."

"Cotton and yarn mills are also doing well," pushed by a shift toward cotton fashions that has seen the industry use dormant capacity, he said.

"The carpet area is going to have some difficulty sustaining its growth," Ratajczak said, because of expected declines in automobile sales and housing and office construction. But "cotton and yarn, near-term, probably will be able to continue to show decent improvement."

Borchers said the recent trends will continue for a while, but he was unwilling to predict for how long or how high employment will climb.

The American Textile Manufacturers Institute attributed the increase to a recovery from an industry recession that began in mid-1984, but said thousands of jobs lost to imports have not been recovered and the need for a textile bill remains.

Laur-Beamon Vows Spoken

ORMONDSVILLE — Judith Roxanne Beamon and Stephen Tony Laur Jr. were united in marriage at 4 p.m. Sunday in Ormondsville Free Will Baptist Church. The Rev. Charles Branch officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Willie A. Beamon of Maury, was escorted by her father. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Carmichael of Ayden and Mr. and Mrs. Stephen T. Laur Sr. of Greenville, S.C.

The bride wore a gown of traditional bridal satin with imported beaded sposabella lace. The fitted bodice featured a Victorian neckline with an illusion sweetheart yoke, Juliet pouf sleeves tapered at the wrist and a torso waist. Beaded lace encrusted with seed pearls and sequins encircled the collar and applied the bodice and sleeves. Bridal buttons fastened the deep V illusion skirt and sleeves. The floor length skirt extended into a cathedral trail. Sposabella lace motifs edged with a scalloped border accented the hemline of the skirt. Garlands of scalloped lace and lace motifs cascaded from the torso waist back to the hemline of the cathedral train. She wore a tiered veil of illusion with a hand-rolled edge flowing from a wreath of lace motifs entwined with pearl sprays and crystals for her headpiece. She carried a cascade bouquet of pink sweetheart roses, white miniature carnations, pink alstromeria and ivy with white streamers tied with love knots.

Maid of honor was Kathy Herring of Snow Hill. Bridesmaids were Ivy Stocks of Ayden, Kris Krauzza of Cary, Marcia Furciniti of Springfield, Va., and Debra Beamon of Snow Hill, cousin of the bride. Haley Hawkins of Ayden was flower girl.

Tommy Stalls of Snow Hill was best man. Ushers were Mike Lanier of Greensboro, Joey Rackley of Snow Hill, Chris Carmichael and Allen

Daugherty of Ayden. Brandon Ham of Maury was ring bearer.

Wedding music was provided by Wesley Letchworth of Snow Hill, organist, and Beth Grant of Ayden, vocalist.

The wedding was directed by Brenda Shirley of Ayden. Kim Roth of Snow Hill and Tanya Elks of Ayden attended the register.

The bride is a graduate of Greene Central High School, attended East Carolina University and currently attends Pitt Community College. She is employed with the ECU School of Medicine Ambulatory Programs. The bridegroom attended Greene Central and PCC. He is employed with Daniels Construction Co.

After a wedding trip to the Bahamas, the couple will reside in Ayden.

Following the ceremony a reception was given by the bride's parents in the church fellowship hall. Guests were greeted by Mr. and Mrs. Doc A. Skinner and farewells were said by Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Mooring. Cake was served by Lucille McLawhorn and Clovis Bowen and punch was poured by Betsy Hobgood and Celeste Hollomon. Rice bags were distributed by Anne Shirley and Dana Meadows.

An after-rehearsal dinner was hosted by the bridegroom's parents at their home. A bachelor party and a bachelorette party were held, and a bridesmaids luncheon was given at the Colonial Inn in Farmville.

Other parties included a rice bag party and several showers.

Whistling Is Joyful Sound

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for referring to whistling as "a joyful sound." I was shocked and dismayed at the number of readers who hated whistling. The complainers might be interested in knowing that many people who are renowned in other musical art forms are also whistlers.

For example, Patrice Munsell studied whistling as a child. She gave a whistling recital when she was 12, and at 14 it occurred to her that she might be able to sing as well as she could whistle.

Luciano Pavarotti is another fine whistler. He whistles his operatic scores to "warm up" before appearances.

I, too, am a whistler. There are many of us far less renowned who take whistling very seriously, and devote many hours of practice to whistling. We also invest a great deal of time and money to travel to distant locations to perform for people who appreciate superb whistling, and to promote whistling as an art form.

For your readers who want to whistle with the "whistling greats" or hear great whistlers perform, there are two large whistling conventions and competitions held annually: the National Whistlers Convention in Louisburg, N.C., in April, and the International Whistle-Off in Carson City, Nev., in August.

I love to whistle and have been whistling since I was 5. My favorite composer is Puccini. — JEANNE E. HUM, PALOS VERDES, CALIF.

P.S. Yes, my name really is "Hum." My slogan is "Hum whistles."

DEAR ABBY: With the recent concern about AIDS, I need to know the answer to this question: We women can use our common sense when choosing to have a heterosexual affair, but how do we tell the difference when it comes to a bisexual man? They are very difficult to recognize.

What are the signs to look for? Are there some specific behavioral patterns? How can one tell the difference between a homosexual and a bisexual man? Thank you. — NO NAME

DEAR NO NAME: I sought the advice of renowned psychoanalyst Dr. Judd Marmor, who has long been my chief psychiatric consultant. He said: "There is no consistent or dependable way to distinguish bisexual persons from heterosexual ones. They do not necessarily look different, or behave differently. They can even be good lovers."

"There is, however, one difference between bisexual and exclusively homosexual males. Exclusively homosexual men are usually unable or uninterested in responding sexually to a woman.

"Before a woman becomes seriously involved with a man, she should know him well enough and intimately enough to develop the kind of mutual honesty that will bring any unusual sexual patterns out into the open."

In other words (mine): You will have to take your partner's word for it. And if you can't believe him, you have no business being in bed with him.

(Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents) self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.)

sailboats that ferry cargo in the gulf, came too close to the convoy.

The sources said the ships were told to stay away. When they didn't alter course, flares were fired and the dhows then heeded the warning and left, the sources said.

It was not known if the Pentagon and shipping sources were describing the same incident.

The shipping sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, based their reports on ship sightings and radio contacts.

They gave The Associated Press this account of the exchange between the U.S. and Iranian vessels:

The Crommelin: "Iranian naval warship, this is U.S. Warship 37. I am at the head of a column of three ships transiting the Arabian Gulf. Request your intentions Sir."

Iranian gunboat: "We're operating in international waters and we have no actions."

The Crommelin: "Roger. Thank you Sir. Have a good day."

Iranian gunboat: "And you have a good day."

The sources didn't know whether this exchange took place before the Guadalcanal scrambled the helicopters.

It was not known which warships were with the three tankers in the inbound convoy and what its exact position was.

Three more reflagged tankers were at Kuwait's main oil terminal at Al-Ahmadi loading crude oil for the return trip down the gulf as the Bridgeton and the three others were sailing out.

That means 10 of the 11 reflagged tankers were in gulf waters at one time. The gas products tanker Gas Prince is the only one that has so far been escorted to Kuwait, loaded, and escorted out of the gulf. It is now heading for Japan.

"The inbound convoy is escorted by about three warships, and the outbound convoy is escorted by about four or five warships," a Dubai-based shipping executive said.

"This means that the U.S. Navy will be practically monopolizing the strait for a number of hours."

U.S. Rep. Stephen Solarz, D-N.Y., said Saturday that Kuwait would charter two American tankers, the New York and the Massachusetts, to add to its fleet under U.S. protection.

The arrival of the inbound convoy, the sixth one-way convoy to be given U.S. flags, surprised the shipping executives. The Navy has been trying to camouflage the convoy movements to minimize the risk of Iranian strikes.

The 10-unit U.S. Middle East Force provides escort for the convoys as they shuttle along a 550-mile path between Kuwait and the Strait of Hormuz.

Iran has deployed Chinese-made Silksworm missiles on its side of the water channel, which is the only gateway to the oil-rich gulf.

Iranian Revolutionary Guards have been accused of planting mines in the waterway.

The Bridgeton, the world's sixth-largest supertanker, was damaged by a mine July 24 as it sailed toward Kuwait, past Iran's Farsi island, one of the Revolutionary Guards' main bases.

Iran at first said "invisible hands" laid the explosives but later an Iranian official conceded his nation planted some mines "to defend our coastlines."

The patched-up Bridgeton safely sailed back through the same waters Saturday with the 81,283-ton Sea Isle City, the 79,999-ton Ocean City and the 46,723-ton Gas King.

In New York, meanwhile, Iran's deputy foreign minister was scheduled to hold discussions today with U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar on ending the war.

Richard Murphy, assistant secretary for Near Eastern and South Asian affairs, said Sunday on NBC's "Meet the Press" that U.S. officials would be willing to meet with the Iranian envoy, Mohammad Jawad Larijani.

police, identities of CIA agents and floor plans to the U.S. embassies in Moscow and Vienna, where he worked as a guard.

Prosecutors charged him with passing secrets to the Soviets after falling in love with a Soviet translator, Violetta Sanni.

Lonetree's lawyers said he gave away nothing of value.

Stuhff and Kunstler said late Sunday they had not added up the entire maximum sentence Lonetree could receive.

"It's up to two lives and a bunch of years — we didn't work it out," Stuhff said. "We're going to be going for another end of the spectrum."

Lonetree could receive no punishment, but Stuhff said he believed the sentence would be severe.

Regardless of the sentence, Lonetree's lawyers said they should be able to get the convictions overturned, based on their assertion that their client was railroaded by a military judge.

The judge, Navy Capt. Philip F. Roberts, declined to comment, according to a Marine public affairs official who fielded a written request asking about the defense allegations. The defense said it was forced to rest its case without calling a witness because Roberts prevented most of the defense witnesses from testifying. Stuhff and Kunstler also said Roberts gutted their case by stopping them from asking vital questions of some of the 32 prosecution witnesses.

The defense attorneys said they have numerous issues on which to appeal to a military appeals court, and if necessary, to the civilian court system.

The prosecutors, Marine Maj. David L. Beck and Frank R. Short, were not available for comment, said Quantico Marine Corps base spokesman Gunnery Sgt. Dean Chamberlain.

But some of Lonetree's Indian relatives, who have alleged the case was racially motivated, sharply criticized the government.

His mother, Sally Tsosie of the Navajo Indian Reservation in Arizona, told reporters her son's conviction was merely the latest chapter in a long history of injustices Indians have suffered at the hands of the federal government.

Lonetree's aunt, Kathy Lonetree of Denver, said, "Clayton sends his love and he's doing fine. If the government wants a fight, we'll give it to them."

Vows To Help Waite Iran Rejection

LONDON (AP) — The Libyan news agency has reported Libyan leader Col. Moammar Gadhafi has vowed to try to win the release of Anglican envoy Terry Waite, who disappeared in Lebanon on a mission to free U.S. hostages.

In a report monitored Sunday in London, the state-run agency said Gadhafi made the pledge during a meeting with a representative of the Church of England identified only as a Dr. Lacey or a Dr. Lyce.

But John Lyttle, secretary for public affairs to Archbishop of Canterbury, the Most Rev. Robert Runcie, said the church was not aware of any meeting with Gadhafi.

"We haven't sent anyone to talk with Col. Gadhafi but the Anglican Church is worldwide, so I'm not saying that Dr. Lacey or Dr. Lyce is not an Anglican," he said. "Any intervention that might be useful in bringing about the release of hostages would be welcome."

JANA said the Anglican representative urged Gadhafi to intervene for the release of Waite, who dropped from sight in January, "in the name of the church and humanity."

JANA said Gadhafi "stressed to the representative of the church that he would work for peace and exert all he can for the release of Terry Waite."

No group has claimed to hold Waite. The Church of England expressed "extreme skepticism" on Saturday about a Lebanese magazine report that he would be freed shortly after payment of a $5 million ransom.

In addition to Waite, 24 foreigners are missing and believed kidnapped in Lebanon. They include nine Americans.

cepted, was approved July 20 by the U.N. Security Council, which includes the United States, Soviet Union, China, Britain and France.

Murphy said Larijani's meeting with Perez de Cuellar is a critical one in determining whether Iran accepts or rejects the resolution. Nevertheless, the United States supports a second U.N. resolution imposing an arms embargo on Iran, he said.

"We think that the time has come for work on a second resolution which would give teeth to the original resolution of July 20th," Murphy said.

"We are discussing it within the Security Council right now. I think there are prospects ... for agreement."

Early Runs Pace Van Nuys Past Greenville Stars, 9-2

By SCOTT KINDBERG

Special To The Reflector
JAMESTOWN, N.Y. — Winning "ugly," according to Van Nuys-Sherman Oaks coach Marv Snyder is not part of his team's vocabulary. "They know just one thing," he said. "and that's win. They don't win ugly. They win pretty."

Please pardon Greenville if it doesn't stop to admire the esthetic value of the Pacific Southwest champs' 9-2 victory Sunday afternoon in the 13-15 Babe Ruth World Series at College Stadium.

In fact, ugly might have been a more appropriate adjective to describe the way things started for Greenville pitcher Jamie Brewington.

The lanky right-hander gave up three runs, three hits and a walk in the first inning and two more runs and two more hits in the second. Before he knew it, the potent Van Nuys-Sherman Oaks team — which sports a hefty .424 tournament batting average — had grabbed a healthy lead, one it never relinquished.

The loss drops Greenville into the losers' bracket and forces it to play at 6 p.m. tonight against New Orleans, the Southwest Regional Champion, which lost to Newburgh, Ind., 4-2, Sunday.

The loser of that game is eliminated from the tournament.

A two-run single by winning pitcher Jason Edwards and a run-scoring double by Chris Lohman highlighted the first inning uprising on Brewington. One inning later, an error by Greenville shortstop Heath Clark with two outs gave Van Nuys-Sherman Oaks new life and it took advantage of it, scoring a pair of unearned runs. Run-scoring singles by Robbie Davis and Edwards pushed the lead to 5-0.

"I think (Brewington) got down on himself a little bit when Van Nuys started hitting the ball," Greenville Coach Blanks Walker said. "You can't do that. He's a good pitcher, but you're not going to find any kid or any man in the major leagues that can throw the ball and strike everybody out. That's the key. They got a few base hits. We made a few errors. That kills you."

So did Edwards, both offensively and on the mound.

Infield singles by Tim Moore in the first inning and by Maurice Hines in the second was all the offense could muster in the first four innings as Edwards faced just one batter over the minimum.

Brewington settled down a little bit after the first two innings but still gave up a run-scoring double by Davis in the top of the fourth that increased the lead to 6-0.

Greenville finally solved Edwards in the fifth.

With one out, pinchhitter Alphonso Freeman tripled to right field and scored when the next batter, Abram Lang, bounced to short. Grant Harmon followed with a single but Chris Christopher grounded out to end the inning.

Greenville closed the gap to 6-2 in the sixth when Moore singled, stole second and third and scored on Walter Gatlin's rbi single. Gatlin stole second and was wild pitched to third, but Edwards struck out Hines and Brewington flew to right.

"He did a good job," Walker said of Edwards. "He moved the ball around real well and mixed his pitches up well. He started getting a little tired at the end and we started hitting him a little bit better. Our guys were just a little overaggressive at the plate."

Van Nuys-Sherman Oaks closed out the scoring in the seventh with three runs. Brian Smith slammed a solo home run over the 345-foot mark in center field, his 10th home run of the post-season, and Kevin Milligan singled home a run. The final run of the inning was the result of a passed ball.

Edwards, who allowed seven hits, struck out seven and walked none, went the distance for the victory. Brewington, who surrendered 13 hits, walked three and struck out five.

Four players had two hits each for Van Nuys-Sherman Oaks. Moore and Harmon had two hits apiece for Greenville, which now has to work its way through the losers' bracket.

"We know the feeling," Walker said. "We got beat in the championship game in the regionals, 7-1 (to Sarasota). We had to come back and beat them the next game and we did a good job."

Lansford's Field Goal Lets Rams Ease By Chargers; Eagles Slip Past Patriots

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Staying cool in a pressure situation is just part of Mike Lansford's job.

"I was not nervous," Lansford said after kicking a 30-yard field goal with four seconds left to give the Los Angeles Rams a 23-21 exhibition victory Sunday night over the San Diego Chargers.

"Even though it's preseason, it can never hurt to make those kinds of kicks," added Lansford. He also had first-half field goals of 31 and 52 yards, making him 5-for-5 in field goal attempts this preseason.

"I was real relaxed and confident, and I feel playing six years in the league lets me be that way," Lansford said. "It is fun to go out there and show off like this once in a while."

The victory kept the Rams' exhibition record perfect at 3-0, while the Chargers fell to 1-1.

In Sunday's only other NFL exhibition game, the Philadelphia Eagles edged the New England Patriots 19-13 in overtime.

On Saturday, it was Washington 33, Green Bay 0; Tampa Bay 29, the New York Jets 27; Chicago 50, Pittsburgh 14; Detroit 23, Cincinnati 9; the New York Giants 24, Cleveland 10; Minnesota 37, Indianapolis 13; Houston 16, New Orleans 13; St. Louis 28, Seattle 21; Kansas City 13, Atlanta 10; Dallas 13, San Francisco 3; and Buffalo 7, Los Angeles Raiders 3.

Tonight, the Miami Dolphins take on the Broncos at Denver.

Lansford's third field goal was set up by free-agent rookie wide receiver Loren Richey, who caught a fourth-down pass from Hugh Millen, the Rams' third quarterback, to keep the game-winning drive alive.

With the Rams facing a fourth-and-5 on the Chargers 40, Millen hit Richey cutting across the middle to move Los Angeles to the San Diego 19. Two running plays advanced the ball to the 13 and Lansford came on to kick the deciding field goal.

San Diego had taken a 21-20 lead with 2:47 remaining when two rookies — quarterback Mark Vlasic and wide receiver Jamie Holland — connected on a 48-yard touchdown pass.

"I just saw him go by (Rams rookie defender Greg Williamson) and put it out there and let him run under it," said Vlasic, a fourth-round draft choice out of Iowa. "It felt good, but it would have been nice to get out with a win."

Rams running back Gerald Harris, the backfield workhorse with Eric Dickerson idled by a sore hamstring, rushed for 91 yards in 31 carries. He produced the game's lone rushing touchdown with 5:12 remaining on a 5-yard run.

San Diego led 14-13 at the half on touchdown passes by quarterbacks Rick Neuheisel and Mark Herrmann, who started the game. Neuheisel relieved Herrmann late in the second quarter, coming in after Chargers defensive end Lee Williams intercepted a flat pass by Rams starting quarterback Jim Everett and returned it 10 yards to give San Diego the ball on Los Angeles' 15-yard line.

Three plays later, rookie tight end Rod Bernstine caught an 8-yard scoring pass from Neuheisel.

Everett pulled the Rams to within a point little more than a minute later when he hit tight end Damone Johnson with a 10-yard TD pass with seven seconds left in the first half.

Everett, who played the first half, completed 13 of 23 passes for 125 yards and was intercepted twice.

Herrmann, rebounding from two interceptions in the first quarter, threw a 32-yard touchdown pass to fullback Tim Spencer for the first Chargers score midway through the second period.

Eagles 19, Patriots 13

In Foxboro, Mass., Philadelphia's Matt Cavanaugh and Paul McFadden played key roles as the Eagles battled from behind to beat New England. Cavanaugh led two scoring drives, including the winning touchdown in overtime, and McFadden kicked the field goal that sent the game into the extra period.

"I needed that," said Cavanaugh, the backup quarterback who completed 13 of 20 passes for 164 yards despite sitting out the first three quarters. "They (the Eagles) were talking trade and they had their doubts about whether I can perform or not. I've got to be consistent like that."

Junior Tautalatasi scored on a 4-yard run 3:11 into overtime, capping the winning 79-yard drive.

Brazil Spoils Pan Am Finish With Upset Win In Basketball

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — In the end, the one gold medal the United States counted on was not theirs.

The Pan American Games, which shut down Sunday, were punctuated throughout the 16-day run by American winners in practically everything from archery to yachting. But on the last day, the U.S. men's basketball team ended things on an exclamation point. They lost!

Right there in Market Square Arena, 12,000 people — mostly startled Hoosiers — watched Brazil chew away at a 14-point halftime deficit and beat the Americans 120-115.

Oscar Schmidt took the biggest bites, scoring 46 points, 21 of them from long range.

When it was over, the camera panned to a sobbing Schmidt, lying flat on the court under the basket. There were more weeping Brazilians hugging each other and a few doing a victory lap around the arena, their flag raised high.

Then there was Danny Manning sitting on the bench, staring straight ahead.

It was hard to believe this was the same team that beat five others by an average of nearly 30 points. It had its hands full with Puerto Rico, but still won by five points.

The U.S. women fared better, beating Brazil 111-87 Sunday for the gold.

But for the U.S. men, the loss was not only devastating, it was historic. The Americans haven't lost at the games since 1971, when Brazil won. They owned eight of nine Pan Am golds and a 34-game winning streak.

If U.S. Coach Denny Crum didn't exactly put the loss into perspective in terms of international basketball, Latin Americans didn't waste time doing so.

"In all the history of world basketball, no one has done anything like this to beat the Americans in their own house," said Jose Medalha, a Brazilian assistant coach. "Americans will never forget it."

A trainer with the Peruvian team, Fernando Paz, took it a step further.

"It is another Pearl Harbor for the Americans. It is an historic triumph for Brazil. ... It is glorious for all Latin Americans," Paz said.

The United States took a 77-62 lead with 17:16 to play on a rebound dunk by Robinson. But on the play he was assessed a technical foul for hanging on the rim.

With Robinson, who finished with 20 points, on the bench, Brazil went to its basic offense — Schmidt.

The United States had its last lead at 96-95, on two free throws by Keith Smart with 7:41 to play. Marcel Souza then connected on a 3-pointer and Brazil never trailed again.

In the medal race, the United States never trailed anyone.

The final count: 369 medals — more than double the medals of runner-up Cuba, which finished with 175, or Canada, which had 162.

The United States had 168 gold, 118 silver and 83 bronze; Cuba had 75 gold, 52 silver and 48 bronze; Canada had 30 gold, 57 silver and 75 bronze.

The Pan American Games' torch was passed to Cuba Sunday night as the hemisphere's largest athletic event of the year ended on a festive note to the Latin rhythms of the Miami Sound Machine. Unlike some of the athletic events during the 16-day competition, there were no demonstrations and no incidents as Jose Ramon Fernandez, Cuban minister of education and sport, raised the Cuban flag and play host to the 1991 games in Havana.

The Cubans remained seated while other athletes danced and rushed the stage during the Miami Sound Machine's performance. Cuba had complained about organizers hiring a band featuring two Cuban exiles.

Though it didn't win its cherished basketball gold, the United States' haul on the final day wasn't bad.

Wait Worth While When Weibring Wins Western

OAK BROOK, Ill. (AP) — D.A. Weibring has a dandy date ahead of him — in the World Series of Golf — after leaving behind an unhappy phrase of his career.

"Now, at last, maybe they'll stop writing and saying, 'the only thing he ever won was Quad Cities,'" Weibring said.

Weibring, 34, whose career has been slowed by nagging injuries, wiped out that identifying tag on Sunday when he outlasted Greg Norman and PGA title-holder Larry Nelson in the Western Open. It was a golf tournament that very nearly didn't get started and wound up as the more bizarre events in PGA Tour history.

None of that mattered to Weibring. "I don't care if it was a 54-hole tournament. I don't care if it was played on two different nines on two different golf courses. I don't care if I had to wait two hours," Weibring said. "This was worth it. This is something very special."

So, in a peculiar way, was the tournament.

It began with a flood that set the scheduled start back one day, to Friday. Then another thunderstorm came along and the start was pushed back to Saturday.

The 156-man field was cut to 75 players after only 18 holes of play, as opposed to the usual cut after 36 holes.

And a 36-hole double-round finished it off Sunday.

Weibring was the first man off the tee on Sunday. It was the wrong tee to allow easy access for the national television cameras which eventually cut away when Weibring's lead still was in jeopardy.

He got in with closing rounds of 69 and 68 and finished with a 207 total.

He was through about two hours before Nelson approached his final hole, which also was in an inconvenient place for television.

"I expected a playoff," Weibring, a frequent challenger but an infrequent winner, said.

Weibring went to the practice tee to prepare for the playoff he figured was coming. As he warmed up, he listened to an official's radio as Nelson prepared for a last-hole birdie putt that would tie it.

"First, they said it was a 15-footer," Weibring said. "Then they said it was a 12-footer. I was afraid it was going to get down to four feet."

Nelson, who ended a three-year victory drought with his PGA triumph a couple of weeks ago, missed the putt and one of the most unusual tournaments in recent years finally ended.

Nelson and Norman tied for second at 208. Nelson had Sunday rounds of 67 and 69 while Norman had a 70 and a 69.

Lennie Clements, South African David Frost, Mike Reid and Greg Powers were next at 209.

Weibring collected $144,000 from the purse of $800,000 for his first victory since 1979. The biggest check of his 11-year Tour career pushed his earnings to $329,391 for the season.

And on the last weekend for qualifying, Weibring won a spot in the select field for this week's World Series of Golf at Akron, Ohio.

Divisional Champs

Molitor Up To 38, But Says Streak Insignificant

By The Associated Press Paul Molitor is chasing Joe DiMaggio, Pete Rose, George Sisler and Ty Cobb. He's still not sure just how significant that is.

Molitor lined a fifth-inning single off Kansas City left-hander Charlie Leibrandt to extend his hitting streak to 38 games, and Bill Schroeder and Greg Brock each drove in three runs, leading the Brewers to a 10-5 victory over the Royals Sunday.

After hitting fly balls in his first two at-bats, Molitor led off the bottom of the fifth with a single to left, giving the Brewers' designated hitter the fifth longest streak in modern major-league history.

After the single, Molitor was given a two-minute standing ovation by the 33,887 at County Stadium.

Cobb with a 40-game streak in 1911, Sisler with 41 straight in 1922, Rose with 44 straight in 1978 and DiMaggio with 56 straight for the Yankees in 1941 stand ahead of Molitor.

Cobb, Sisler and DiMaggio are in the Hall of Fame, and Rose will be someday.

"It's nicer the higher you go, naturally," Molitor said. "But when you talk about in comparison to what the record is and everything else, it's really not that significant."

On Saturday night, Molitor equaled Tommy Holmes' streak of 37 in 1945 for the Boston Braves.

On Sunday, in his fourth at-bat in the sixth inning, Molitor walked and he struck out in the seventh to finish the game 1-for-4. He is 67-for-160, a .419 average, during his streak with seven homers and 33 runs batted in.

Elsewhere in the American League, Boston beat Minnesota 6-4, Detroit edged Cleveland 4-3, California defeated Toronto 5-2, New York blanked Oakland 4-0, Baltimore nipped Seattle 6-5, and Chicago beat Texas 8-1.

"Thirty-eight. I was thinking about that today," Molitor said. "That's a long time, you know, and those numbers still seem far away out there. I'm still trying to take that one-game-at-a-time approach."

Molitor will try to make it 39 straight Tuesday night when Milwaukee plays host to Cleveland. Ken Schrom is scheduled to pitch for the Indians.

While Molitor is looking forward to getting away from the park for a day, he will not be able to escape the attention his streak has created.

"I'm really looking forward to a day off," Molitor said. "We've had a tough stretch since the All-Star break. This will only be our second day off. It will be nice to get away from the park for a day."

Molitor's streak continued to draw large crowds to County Stadium, where he has hit in 23 straight games. Friday and Saturday night's games with the Royals drew more than 37,000 each night, and the crowd Sunday was 33,887.

"It was an emotional one, like watching the Babe Ruth story or something," Milwaukee Manager Tom Trebelhorn said after Sunday's game. "It had to do with the particular chemistry of fans that made up the crowd and the type of ball game."

Red Sox 6, Twins 4
Don Baylor hit his 12th career grand slam and Dwight Evans followed with a homer in the fifth inning as Boston rallied to beat Minnesota and send the Twins to their sixth straight loss—all on the road.

The Twins took to a 4-0 lead on homers by Gary Gaetti, Roy Smalley and Kent Hrbek, but Steve Carlton was unable to hold the advantage as he tried for his 330th major-league victory.

With one out in the fifth, rookie Ellis Burks reached on a bunt single, took second on a balk and moved to third on Marty Barrett's single. After Wade Boggs walked, loading the bases, Baylor hit his 16th homer of the season. Juan Berenguer replaced Carlton and Evans hit his 29th homer.

Tigers 4, Indians 3
Jack Morris pitched a five-hitter and Kirk Gibson hit a three-run homer as Detroit defeated host Cleveland. The victory gave the Tigers a one-game lead over Toronto in the AL East.

Morris, 15-6, struck out seven and walked five en route to his 10th complete game.

Pat Sheridan led off the Tigers' third with an infield single off Tom Candiotti, 6-13. One out later, Lou Whitaker singled Sheridan to third. Darrell Evans followed with a grounder to first baseman Joe Carter, who threw wildly past second base into left field for an error as he attempted to force Whitaker, allowing Sheridan to score and advancing the runners to second and third. Gibson followed with his 18th home run of the season over the right-field fence for a 4-1 lead.

Angels, 5 Blue Jays 2
Kirk McCaskill pitched six-hit ball for 6 2-3 innings and Wally Joyner hit a two-run homer as California defeated Toronto at Anaheim, Calif.

DeWayne Buice relieved after Ernie Whitt's single with two outs in the seventh and finished the game for his 14th save.

The Blue Jays drew within 3-2 in the top of the sixth as George Bell singled and scored on a two-out double by Rance Mulliniks.

In the bottom of the inning, Bill Buckner homered off Dave Stieb, who lasted 5 1-3 inning as his personal seven-game winning streak ended.

Yankees 4, Athletics 0
Rick Rhoden and Tim Stoddard combined to check Oakland on two hits and New York broke a three-game losing streak.

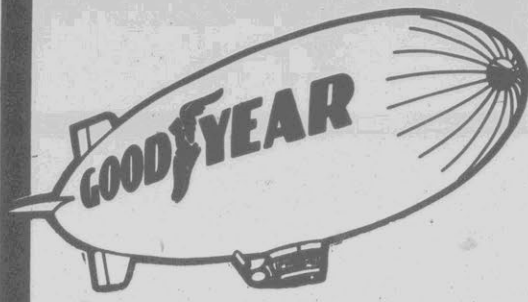

Rhoden, 15-8, left the game after five innings with stiffness in his right shoulder. He did not allow a hit until Carney Lansford singled with one out in the fifth inning. Stoddard pitched the final four innings for his sixth save and struck out six.

Rick Cerone led off the Yankees' third with a single and Dave Stewart, 17-9, hit Bobby Meacham with a pitch. Claudell Washington followed with a two-run double.

Orioles 6, Mariners 5
Ken Dixon pitched three-hit ball for six innings and Larry Sheets and Mike Hart hit home runs as visiting Baltimore ended Seattle's three-game winning streak.

Dixon, 7-8, was sent to the bullpen earlier in the year and spent a month in the minor leagues. But the right-hander is 4-1 since being called up from Class AAA Rochester on July 20.

FOCUS

Tall, Tough and Tenacious

Trees are the tallest living things on Earth. The tallest tree of all is the California redwood. Redwoods reach heights of over 360 feet — more than 60 times the height of an average man. Many redwood trees alive today are centuries old. The secret of their survival over the years is in their bark. On older redwoods, the bark is 12 inches thick. Its fissured surface makes it extremely resistant to fire. The wood also resists decay, disease, and insects.

DO YOU KNOW — Are redwoods deciduous trees?
FRIDAY'S ANSWER — Alexander Dubcek was head of the Czech Communist Party in August of 1968.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠KQJ76532 ♥K94 ♦6 ♣6
Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with three clubs. What action do you take?
A.—Because partner surely is short in spades, there is a distinct possibility the auction will die if you don't act. You have no desire to play anything other than spades so, even though you have scant defensive strength we suggest you bid four spades. This is the equivalent of an opening game-bid. It does not show a hand rich in high cards.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AKQ532 ♥96 ♦874 ♣82
Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with three clubs. What action do you take?
A.—The preempt has achieved its purpose. Since the hand behind you could be powerful, a three-spade overcall by you is fraught with danger. Pass, and hope partner can reopen if it gets passed to him.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AKQ532 ♥96 ♦874 ♣82
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
3 ♣ Pass Pass ?
What action do you take?
A.—The circumstances have altered dramatically from problem two. The fact that East has passed means partner should have a pretty fair hand but could not act because of probable spade shortness. You can relieve him on that score by balancing with three spades.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AKJ762 ♥AQ8 ♦QJ3 ♣6
Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with three clubs. What action do you take?
A.—While you have reasonable holdings in both red suits, this is essentially a one-suited hand. In addition, at this level you are not strong enough to double, then correct partner's takeout to spades. Our vote is for a simple three spades. At this vulnerability, direct action at the three-level must indicate a good hand, and it leaves three no trump open as a possible contract.

Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠9 ♥83 ♦Q9852 ♣AJ632
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♣ Pass 1 NT Pass
2 ♦ Pass ?
What action do you take?

A.—You are beginning to like your hand, but it is still a partial misfit. Should partner have a minimum opening and a less than robust diamond holding, 11 tricks should be beyond your resources. (This is especially true if you play forcing no trump responses, when partner might have only three diamonds for his rebid.) Invite further action from partner by raising to three diamonds.

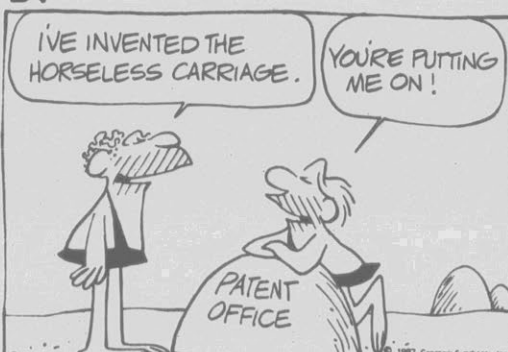

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠7 ♥QJ103 ♦QJ83 ♣KJ62
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
1 ♣ Pass 2 ♣ ?
What action do you take?
A.—If you made a takeout double, you see something in your hand that escapes us. True, you have the right distribution, but to force partner to bid at the three-level, you must have some tricks, too—especially when one opponent has not yet revealed the full strength of his hand. Pass.

Hemophilic Brothers Starting School Amid AIDS Concerns

By PAT LEISNER
Associated Press Writer
ARCADIA, Fla. (AP) — Three hemophilic brothers who carry the AIDS virus braved death threats as they prepared to return to their public elementary school today for the first time in a year.

A federal court order reinstating the children in regular classes is being contested by a parents' group, Citizens Against AIDS in Schools, which called for a week-long boycott of classes.

Louise and Cliff Ray kept their sons Ricky, 10, Robert, 9, and Randy, 8, in seclusion Sunday, a day after the family received four threatening telephone calls. One hysterical caller said, "Your children will die," and another threatened to burn down their house, according to Ray.

"It's a little tense. The boys are anxious about it," Louise Ray said as she got school clothes ready for today's start of the school year.

"To be honest with you, we're afraid for their safety," Judith Kavanaugh, the family's attorney, said Sunday.

"We hope this is just a vocal, crazy minority and that this will blow over in time."

About 500 people attended a boycott rally Friday night. Group members said, however, they would not picket Memorial Elementary School or make any show of force when classes resumed.

"We want to bring about change in a constructive way," said Danny Tew, president of the group. "There is an immediate danger in our classroom. The school board has been out there working for us, but their authority has been usurped by the federal court system."

DeSoto County school officials banned the boys from classrooms last fall after the youngsters tested positive for antibodies to the virus that causes acquired immune deficiency syndrome. The Rays moved to Bay Minette, Ala., but when the records caught up to them, they returned here.

Doctors believe the brothers, all hemophilics, were exposed through plasma-based medication they take to clot their blood. They do not have AIDS or symptoms related to the disease.

Their parents went to federal court in Tampa claiming discrimination and asking a judge to resolve the highly emotional issue.

After listening to medical testimony, U.S. District Judge Elizabeth Kovachevich earlier this month ordered tests to see if the boys' parents or their 6-year-old sister Candy, all of whom are in close, personal contact daily, tested positive for AIDS exposure. The tests came back negative.

Kovachevich forced the school system to admit the boys when classes resumed. She also ordered a private tutorial summer-school program so they wouldn't lose ground academically.

The ruling renewed fears in this central Florida community of 10,000 that children attending school with the Rays would be exposed to the deadly, incurable disease.

prepared to return to elementary school today while an angry parents' group urged a school boycott to protest a federal court order reinstating the boys. (AP Laser-photo)

Rault Executed In La.

ANGOLA, La. (AP) — An accountant who raped and murdered his secretary because he feared she would expose his embezzlement of $84,000 was executed early today in the electric chair, insisting he was innocent.

The execution made 36-year-old Sterling Rault the eighth person to be put to death in Louisiana in three months and the 15th since the state resumed executions in 1983.

After he was led into the death chamber, Rault read a two-minute statement, saying, "I would like the public to know that they are killing an innocent man at this time."

"I pray that God will forgive all those involved in this matter. I personally do not hold any animosity towards anyone though."

He blew a kiss to Sister Mary Rault, his aunt who is a Roman Catholic nun and was one of his spiritual advisers. She bowed her head through the execution.

After he was strapped into the chair, he looked toward her and gave a thumbs-up signal. He held the signal until the first jolt hit at 12:10 a.m.

"Even as I sit in this chair I intend to stand tall for Christ," he said.

He was pronounced dead at 12:16 a.m., according to C. Paul Phelps, secretary of the state Department of Corrections.

In addition to his aunt, Rault was visited on Sunday by his mother, father, brother and sister-in-law, and another spiritual adviser, the Rev. Alan J. McLellan, said Warden Hilton Butler of the Louisiana State Penitentiary.

Butler said Rault ordered a large meal of steak and fried shrimp and then made two last requests: that he be allowed to telephone his parents at 10:30 p.m. and permitted to read a final statement before he died.

Both requests were granted, Butler said.

As the execution neared, nine people held vigil outside the prison in support of the death penalty. There were no protesters against the execution.

Rault was convicted of raping, shooting and stabbing his secretary, 21-year-old Jane Ellen Francioni, of Slidell, whose body was then doused with gasoline and set afire in March 1982 in a desolate section of eastern New Orleans.

Rault, a New Orleans accountant, was denied a seventh stay of execution Friday by the U.S. Supreme Court.

At a State Pardon Board hearing, Rault said he was innocent of murder, that he recalled nothing of the events preceding his arrest and claimed someone must have drugged him.

PBS Takes Candid Look At Chinese Peasantry

By RICK GLADSTONE
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Dr. Shen Fasheng listens as a hallucinating peasant rants about a kitchen god masquerading as a cockroach. Shen, descended from six generations of rural healers, sticks acupuncture needles into the patient's legs and prescribes a herbal brew. On a return visit the man speaks rationally.

Sitting outside her husband's family home, a 72-year-old grandmother demonstrates how her mangled, tiny feet were bound as a young girl. She never saw her husband until the day of her pre-arranged marriage, she says, and was hardly ever allowed out of the courtyard.

These are a few of the characters in "One Village in China," a three-part documentary series on PBS, beginning Tuesday, that focuses on the people of Long Bow village, a rural farming community 400 miles southwest of Beijing.

Earthy and blunt, Long Bow residents present a candid and insightful portrait of a people that remain largely isolated from the rest of the world, despite changes that have made China more accessible in recent years.

They speak about their views toward marriage, sex, birth control, politics and religion. Some openly criticize the Communist Party's way of doing things. In fact, party propaganda is conspicuously scarce.

A group of young women recounts how they went on strike for months to protest low wages and abysmal conditions at a saw-blade polishing plant.

A rich peasant brags about his profits under the private farming that replaced Mao Tse-tung's communes, while an elderly woman complains that the changeover means poor people no longer receive subsidies from the village.

The series is narrated and co-produced by Carma Hinton, an American who grew up in China and speaks fluent Chinese. Her father William Hinton was an agricultural expert who worked in Long Bow in the late 1940s.

It is clear that Ms. Hinton and her filmmaking associates received a warm reception in Long Bow, judging from the spontaneity and innocent eagerness of the people interviewed, who are translated through subtitles or dubbing.

There appears to be an absence of official chaperoning that has marked some other foreign film forays into the People's Republic.

"Small Happiness," the first episode, looks at the changes and deeply rooted traditions that affect women, always relegated to second-class status in China. The title of the episode is from a remark by a Long Bow elder seen watching his granddaughter and grandson.

"To give birth to a boy is considered a big happiness," he says. "To give birth to a girl is a small happiness. A boy will remain in the household, while a girl will be married off."

We are introduced to Ling Qiao, considered a modern woman because she attended high school and married for love, not by arrangement. By contrast, her mother-in-law suffered foot-binding, the now-banned practice that theoretically increased a woman's sex appeal by making her waddle.

The segment also provides a revealing look at China's highly publicized birth-control program, aimed at keeping the population from exceeding 1.2 billion by limiting most newlywed couples to one child. In Long Bow, as elsewhere in China, this policy is often subverted or disregarded, partly because of the strong preference for baby boys.

"To Taste A Hundred Herbs," the second part of the trilogy, is the story of Dr. Shen, who uses acupuncture and dried plants to treat ailments ranging from dementia to the common cold.

Savvy and jocular, a cigarette always dangling from his lips, Shen examines patients in a makeshift office. We discover his family is Catholic, a minority that has suffered harassment in the past.

Shen defends his faith and rejects suggestions from the village leader that Shen's beliefs were imposed on China by foreigners. "This man named Marx, I don't know where he's from, but isn't he also a foreigner?" Shen asks.

The final segment, "All Under Heaven," assesses how the government's policies have affected Long Bow. The shift from collective to household farming took place while the filmmakers were in the village, and we hear both critics and defenders of the change.

The pressure of implementing change falls largely on the village leader, a cynical and flexible party man. He doesn't necessarily typify the local bureaucrats responsible for carrying out central directives.

"When officials send down arbitrary orders, we'd have to play tricks," he explains. "We'd always be respectful. We couldn't let them lose face. But we'd always try to do something practical on our own."

Beer Barrel Polka Is 60

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — It was the No. 1 jukebox song of 1939, a jaunty ditty about unrequited love known as "The Beer Barrel Polka."

It's been 60 years since Czech bandleader Jaromir Vejvoda wrote the song, whose original Czech title, "Skoda Lasky," means "lost love." Lew Brown gave the tune English lyrics in 1934.

"The Beer Barrel Polka" is one of the most popular polka tunes in the United States, where the folk dance is enjoying a renaissance of sorts. The fast dance done in double time with a hop and three quick steps originated in Bohemia, a former province of Czechoslovakia, sometime in the early 19th century.

The world-famous tune was Vejvoda's first composition, and the most well-known of more than 70 songs he wrote before 1981 when old age and frailty forced him to give up his professional musical life.

The fame of "The Beer Barrel Polka" turned Vejvoda's 85th birthday last March into quite an event, with congratulations arriving from his New York publisher, Shapiro Bernstein, and special editions of his works appearing in Austria and West Germany.

Interviewed at his spacious home in Zbraslav, a historic town some six miles up the Vltava River from Prague, Vejvoda recalled how his international hit came into being.

"I wrote it just for fun in 1927 for my own band," he said. "But other bandleaders liked it and asked for it in music shops, so the Hoffman and Widow publishing house in Prague approached me and printed it."

An instant success at home as a lover's lament, "Skoda Lasky" made a victorious advance to the United States after it was published in 1939 by Shapiro Bernstein.

Will Glahe and his orchestra recorded the English version in Germany in 1938, and it sold 1 million copies within five years. Sammy Kaye and his orchestra continued the popularity of the tune with their subsequent recording. The Andrews Sisters also had a hit record of the song.

"The Beer Barrel Polka," a reputed favorite with Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, sounded across Allied battlefields during World War II. Its fame extended to Germany, Holland and Switzerland under the name "Rosamunde," and to Scandinavia as "Hvor er Min Kone."

In 1976, former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter defeated President Gerald R. Ford in their race for the White House.

Charley Briggs Has The Stuff That Makes Movies

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — When Stanley Kubrick wanted some palm trees, vehicles and military uniforms for his movie, "Full Metal Jacket," he called Charley Briggs.

Some of the uniforms were on hand at Biggs' store, Charley's Militaria; others, he had to manufacture. Biggs got the palm trees in Spain for $30,000, the vehicles in Europe and then shipped them all to England.

"We had to make London look like Hue during the 1968 battle in Vietnam," Biggs said one recent day while resting for a few minutes in the cluttered office of his building in south Oklahoma City.

Bookcases are crammed with illustrated volumes of weapons. On one wall are sketches of uniforms for a forthcoming movie. Another wall displays advertising photographs of military equipment in use in Grenada, Honduras and Lebanon.

equipment his company can provide.

The office is housed toward the rear of a 13,000-square-foot building on an acre and a half. In the front is a somewhat typical military surplus store and the rest of the building holds barrels, boxes, bins and racks of military equipment and uniforms.

STUDENTS, EXPRESSIONS PAGE RETURNS WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 2

The Newspaper in Education staff at The Daily Reflector is looking for your work as the Expressions page returns on Wednesday, September 2. We especially encourage entries concerning the 200th birthday of the U.S. Constitution for the September 16th Expressions issue.

Send In Your Entries To Expressions

The Daily Reflector is looking for elementary, middle, and high school students to draw pictures, write stories, essays and poems. Each week we will publish the best writing and drawing. The winner of each will receive $2. We will publish stories and art work we feel should receive special mention.

Entries must be original. Drawings must be in ink, crayon, markers or paint on thick colored paper. Please no pencil. Entries will be held for a period of ninety days and will be considered for that period of time. Entries will be returned if a self-addressed, stamped envelope is included.

Parents or teachers who sign the entry form should monitor for good taste and plagiarism.

Fill out the form and attach it to your entry.
