Reagan Uses Contra Radio To Pledge Help

By RICHARD BOUDREAU
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica — President Reagan told Nicaraguan rebels in a broadcast on their clandestine radio station Monday night that the United States will keep backing them until the Sandinista government lives up to its promises under a regional peace plan.

"Your struggle has and always will have our support because our goal is the same," the President said in an unprecedented broadcast over Radio Liberacion, which was monitored in Costa Rica.

"Until the people of Nicaragua are guaranteed basic liberties, I know you will keep on with the struggle. And the United States will be with you. The journey's end is Nicaragua Libre (Free Nicaragua)," he added.

Reagan's three-minute taped speech in English, followed by a Spanish translation, was heard in much of Nicaragua and Central America but was jammed by the leftist government in Managua, the Nicaraguan capital.

Taped at his ranch near Santa Barbara, Calif., on Saturday, the message was another in the Reagan's efforts to reassure U.S. conservatives and Nicaraguan opposition leaders about the limits of his support for the preliminary peace accord signed Aug. 7 by Nicaragua and its four Central American neighbors.

Reagan is expected to repeat his message Thursday in Los Angeles at a meeting with the six political directors of the Nicaraguan Resistance, as the Contras are formally called.

The peace accord sets a 90-day timetable for cease-fires in the region's guerrilla wars, including the contras' struggle against the Sandinista regime. At the time of the cease-fires, it requires a cutoff of outside aid to insurgent forces; freedom of the press and of assembly and religion, and steps to guarantee democratic elections in each country.

Reagan's speech appeared to confirm the White House's stated intent to ask Congress for new military or "humanitarian" aid for the rebels sometime after Sept. 30.

While his speech did not endorse the Contras' insistence on a direct role in negotiating a cease-fire, Reagan said that he doubts the Sandinistas' commitment to the peace accord.

"The Sandinistas are now promising democracy, with the world as a witness," he said. "Like you, I hope they keep their promise. But like you, I also know that the civil war in Nicaragua began when the Sandinistas promised you democracy but failed to meet their commitment."

"The Sandinistas have agreed that the repression must stop at the same time the fighting stops," Reagan said.

"The Sandinistas have told us this before, and no one believes the Sandinistas any more. Simultaneity must mean freedom up front and no deals."

The speech was scheduled to be repeated four times during a dusk-to-dawn broadcast by Radio Liberacion, which was set up with U.S. funding and transmits from an undisclosed location in Central America.

Shortly after the nightly broadcasts began in January, the Sandinistas began jamming them in most parts of Managua. Just after 6 p.m. Monday, the station's "Liberator News" announced that "today and for the first time, the president of the United States, Ronald Reagan, will address the heroic people of Nicaragua via Radio Liberacion .... We invite you to hear this special message from (Reagan) to the suffering Nicaraguan people."

Within seconds, the broadcast in most parts of Managua was drowned out by a deep, continuous buzz.

Wind-Swept Dust Haze Cloaks Tanker Convoy

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — A dust haze settled over the Persian Gulf today, reducing visibility to a half-mile and cloaking a convoy of U.S.-escorted Kuwaiti tankers reported to have entered the waterway, shipping executives said.

Officials of the Kuwait Oil Tanker Co., which operates the tankers sailing under the American flag, have denied reports by shipping sources that a new convoy of three tankers entered the gulf under the protection of four U.S. warships. The U.S. Navy does not report the movements of its ships.

A convoy of four tankers left the gulf Monday, including the Bridgeton, a 401,382-ton supertanker that was damaged by a mine on its voyage north through the gulf July 24. It was the second convoy to return from Kuwait loaded with oil under a Reagan administration plan to shield Kuwaiti tankers from Iranian attack.

The shipping executives, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the inbound three-tanker convoy had passed through the 110-mile-long Strait of Hormuz and was off the United Arab Emirates at nightfall Monday.

The convoy included the 290,085-ton supertanker Middleton, the 81,283-ton Surf City and the 79,999-ton Chesapeake City, they said.

The high winds that frequently whip desert sand and dust over the gulf during the summer months appears to be aiding the convoy effort, a Dubai-based shipping executive said.

"Whether we have a new convoy moving or not, and with the weather as it is, it's all helping the U.S. Navy spread confusion which is the way it now wants the escort operations to continue," the shipping executive said.

Shipping sources said the three tankers are the last of the 11 scheduled to be reflagged with the Stars and Stripes.

In the past Iran has attacked Kuwaiti ships, charging Kuwait aids Iraq, Iran's enemy in the 7-year-old gulf war.

A U.S. destroyer and frigate warned off two small boats Monday after they approached the convoy led by the Bridgeton, the Pentagon said.

The Pentagon said Navy warships fired flares and sent verbal warnings to the dhows, but they did not veer away. When they came within eight miles of the convoy, the destroyer Kidd and frigate Crommelin sailed up to confront them, firing machine-gun blasts across their bows, the Pentagon said.

It was unclear whether the dhows were sail-powered or motorized, said the Pentagon, which did not disclose the incident's location.

Mining Companies, Workers Open Talks

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Mining executives and the black mineworkers' union resumed contract negotiations today for the first time since the miners went on strike 16 days ago.

Talks between the National Union of Mineworkers and the Chamber of Mines, which represents the six major mining companies, broke down in early July over the union's demand for a 30 percent wage increase.

Since the strike started Aug. 9, the chamber had said it would not negotiate a further increase beyond raises of between 15 and 23.4 percent which it implemented July 1. The union had refused to reopen talks unless wages were on the agenda.

However, and the two sides agreed today to meet without preconditions.

The talks began behind closed doors after a union delegation of about 20 people arrived at the chamber's offices in Johannesburg.

The talks followed a series of threats and back-to-work ultimatums by the mining companies, who maintain support for the strike is waning.

The first signs that the negotiations deadlock might ease came Monday when Anglo said it was willing to resume negotiations without preconditions. The union responded by saying Anglo's "revised position .. has created a climate to set negotiations in motion."

The only other talks to take place during the strike involved only Anglo and the union, not the other members of the chamber. Those talks dealt only with ways to reduce strike-related violence, and they broke down after two sessions.

Six miners have been killed during strike, and the union said 320 strikers have been injured and 300 arrested.

Anglo American, which has already dismissed 7,000 striking workers for failing to meet deadlines set to return to work, said today that workers at its Vaal Reefs No. 9 shaft and Western Holdings No. 2 and 3 shafts were returning to work in "large numbers" in advance of a new back-to-work deadline.

Anglo told 6,000 workers at the Vaal Reefs shaft they would be dismissed if they didn't return to work by today, while the 7,000 Western Holdings miners have until Wednesday to return.

More Freshmen Entering N.C. Colleges

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

Private colleges in North Carolina say their freshman classes are growing despite declining numbers of 18-year-olds nationally, in part because of increased advertising and other recruiting efforts.

"The participation rate, those going to college, is higher," said Robert Gardner, dean of admissions and financial aid at Davidson College, which limited enrollment of new students to 360, the same number as last year, despite climbing applications.

"I think most of the better schools, by and large, are seeing increases and I expect that will continue for a while," he said. "Parents are a little bit more concerned about economic security (and) the ability of the school to get students into good graduate schools and professional programs."

At Greensboro College, the freshman class this fall will be up 61 percent, raising total enrollment by about 25 percent to more than 700 students, said Randy Doss, admissions director.

"We knew as early as March or April that we would enter our largest freshman class in the history of our institution," he said. "I know the demographics, but sometimes it's a case of don't confuse me with the facts. You can't convince me there aren't 200 people that want to go to Greensboro College."

High Point College expects at least 30 percent more freshmen than last year and Catawba College in Salisbury projects a 27 percent increase. None of the schools surveyed at random by The Associated Press reported declining admissions, but officials had varying theories about the increasing interest.

Doss attributed much of Greensboro College's growth to increasing interest in smaller schools and the personal attention available there.

"We have done a lot of aggressive recruiting," said Nan Perkins at Elon College, where enrollment was expected to increase by about 100 students to 3,200 this fall.

"Like everyone else, we have been waiting for that falloff (in enrollment) for a number of years," she said. "Apparently more students are electing to go on to college and we've had enrollment increases for 11 straight years now."

Warren Wilson College in Swannanoa will have its largest incoming class since 1981 when 183 students are admitted this fall, said Joe Carreiro, admissions officer. "I think we have done a great deal of changing and improved our advertising campaign," he said.

Meredith College in Raleigh also has filled dormitory rooms with

U.S. Says Arms Policy Firm

By BRENDA WATSON
Associated Press Writer
GENEVA (AP) — The United States today submitted new proposals at the superpower arms control talks, but a U.S. spokesman rejected reports that the Reagan administration was softening its demands for strict verification measures.

Terry Shroeder, a spokesman for the U.S. arms control delegation, said the U.S. proposals were put forth at a meeting today of negotiators on intermediate-range nuclear forces, headed by American Maynard Gilt-man and Soviet Gen. Vladimir Medvedev.

Shroeder, reading a prepared statement, said the United States had always maintained that verification measures could be simplified under a so-called double zero option. That means elimination of shorter-range missiles and medium-range missiles worldwide, which have ranges between 300 and 3,000 miles.

"Today we are laying out how this simplification could be achieved," Shroeder said. He said the U.S. proposal "although simplified, will still be the most stringent ever proposed in any U.S.-Soviet negotiations and will include on-site inspection."

However, he declined to provide details of the proposal.

Shroeder said the U.S. delegation "sharply rejected suggestions in U.S. media reports that we are backing off or softening our proposals."

A U.S. official in Washington on Monday told The Associated Press that the new American proposals would soften demands for on-site inspection of nuclear missile facilities, in a move designed to keep Soviet observers out of sensitive areas in the United States. The official demanded anonymity.

U.S.-Soviet negotiators are working to resolve remaining differences before the scheduled meeting of their foreign ministers next month in Washington. One area of difficulty has been agreeing on anti-cheating measures for an eventual accord.

The two sides overcame one hurdle last month when the Soviets agreed to a U.S. suggestion to eliminate all intermediate-range missiles in Europe and Asia. Previously the Soviets had insisted on keeping a

State Will Enter Bid For Collider

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina will submit its bid for the $4.4 billion Superconducting Supercollider next week, joining two dozen states battling to host the scientific complex.

A task force is racing to complete North Carolina's presentation to the U.S. Department of Energy by the Sept. 2 deadline. The group was established by the state Board of Science and Technology.

North Carolina has spent about $1.25 million on its proposal to locate the Superconducting Supercollider on a site in Person, Granville and Durham counties, according to David Guth, spokesman for the Department of Administration.

The Superconducting Supercollider will be the world's largest particle accelerator, an underground tunnel 53 miles long where scientists will study the composition of matter.

The complex will include buildings for maintenance, research and administration. It will provide some 4,500 jobs at the peak of the seven-year construction phase and about 3,000 jobs when in operation.

North Carolina's eight-volume proposal touts the Person-Granville-Durham site's geology and the proximity of three major universities, the Raleigh-Durham Airport and other resources.

The Department of Energy will forward the states' proposals to a National Academies of Science and Engineering panel in September. The panel will send a list of finalists to DOE by January.

Three Men Facing Charges In Break-Ins

Greenville police arrested three men Monday in connection with a series of break-ins earlier this month.

Christian Forrest Powers, 18, and Steven Martin Potter, 21, both of 1001 N. Pitt St., were charged in connection with four local break-ins, Detective S.B. Pass said.

Pass said both Powers and Martin were charged with an Aug. 7 break-in at the Kings Row Apartments office and with break-ins on Aug. 11 of apartment offices at Oakmont Square, Cherry Court and Wedgewood Arms.

The two men were arrested last week on possession of stolen vehicle charges after a car and a motorcycle taken from an Elizabeth City car dealer were found in their possession.

Detective G.W. Williams said Elizabeth City police have warrants charging both Powers and Potter with breaking and entering the Davenport Motor Co. in Elizabeth City on Aug. 12 and Aug. 13.

Powers was also charged last week with breaking and entering in connection with a break-in at Budget Rent-A-Car on East Tenth Street on Aug. 19.

According to Pass, Charles Randal Harris, 19, of Route 8, Greenville, was arrested on breaking, entering and larceny charges about 11 p.m. Monday in connection with a break-in at John Dudley Mobile Homes on Greenville Boulevard on Aug. 13.

The detective said a camera, telephone and calculator were among items reported taken from the mobile home sales office.

Lesbian Minister Suspended By United Methodist Jury

DOVER, N.H. (AP) — A lesbian minister who demanded a church trial to test a United Methodist Church ban on homosexual clergy says the jury's decision only to suspend her shows other ministers also question the policy.

"That feels good. They were men and women of integrity," said Rose Mary Denman, fighting back tears but appearing happy as the sentence was announced. "They were telling the church they were not sure the church has behaved like the church."

Ms. Denman, 40, had demanded the trial as a test of the prohibition against homosexuals serving in the clergy of the United Methodist Church, a denomination with 10 million members.

A jury of ministers found Ms. Denman in violation of the rule Monday, but suspended her from her ministry until United Methodist ministers from New Hampshire gather for their annual meeting in June.

The jury of nine men and four women could have removed Ms. Denman from the ministry or expelled her from the church.

Ms. Denman had said she expected to be found in violation of the rule and would transfer her ministry to the Unitarian Universalist Association, which accepts homosexuals.

Bishop George Bashore of Boston, who filed the complaint against Ms. Denman, said the verdict showed that the jurors concur with the church policy adopted three years ago, that homosexuality is "incompatible with Christian teaching."

He said the sentence reflected an attempt to make "the most caring and merciful decision" possible under the circumstances.

The jury chairwoman, the Rev. Janet E. Smith-Rushton, of South Walpole, Mass., said the jurors reaffirmed their belief in the church's view that homosexuals are "individuals of sacred worth" and entitled to the church's guidance.

Throughout the trial, Ms. Denman, her lover and a group of allies wore small pink triangles, a symbol the Nazis required homosexuals to wear in concentration camps.

Ms. Denman has been on leave from her two parishes in Conway, N.H., and lives in Portland, Maine.

Ms. Denman, a divorced mother of one child, testified that until a few years ago she was "a right-wing charismatic" who vehemently opposed homosexuality.

She said her view changed when she was recovering from surgery and invited a friend, the divorced wife of another United Methodist minister, to move in with her to help with the chores.

"Toward the end of the summer, she told me she loved me," Ms. Denman said. "That scared me, and I told her I was straight."

Later, after doing "mental and emotional gymnastics" to deny her homosexuality, she accepted it and took the first of two year leaves in June 1985. Last May, she acknowledged her homosexuality before the church's New Hampshire annual conference.

She testified that she resisted urgings to resign from the church before the trial because it would have been "admitting culpability. ... I do not feel guilty. I believe that, in God's eyes, I am not guilty."

The trial, held in a meeting room, had the trappings of a courtroom, with Ms. Denman and Bashore sitting at tables with their lawyers facing presiding Bishop Neil L. Irons.

The church lawyer and Irons stressed that the focus of the trial was not the rule itself, but whether Ms. Denman had violated it. Ms. Denman's counsel, the Rev. John McDougall, countered that a church trial is different from a secular one and the rule should be debated.

"She comes to us with the claim of a Christian to be heard by her own church," McDougall said.

Burton Throckmorton, a professor at the Bangor (Maine) Theological Seminary, from which Ms. Denman graduated in 1981, said prejudice against homosexuals was the real issue.

"It appears to me like a whole lot of Methodist ministers and bishops (are) swarming over Rose Mary Ms. Denman because her sexual preference is not that of the majority," he said.

"This whole trial is about preserving the patriarchal structure of our society."

Activists 'Liberate' 11 Infected Cats From USDA Animal Research Lab

By VICTORIA DAWSON
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

WASHINGTON — Animal rights activists cut through a chain-link fence, smashed several padlocks and took 27 cats from an Agriculture Department research facility in Beltsville, Md., including 11 cats infected with a parasitic disease that is particularly dangerous if contracted by pregnant women, USDA officials said Monday.

The disease, transmissible through feline fecal matter, can cause fetuses to contract an infection and later suffer blindness, mental retardation and hydrocephalus (brain inflammation), said Hubert Kelley, spokesman for the USDA's Agricultural Research Center in Beltsville.

A group calling itself the "Band of Mercy" took responsibility for the theft, asserting that the cats, along with seven African miniature pigs, were "liberated" from government researchers who practiced "animal abuse with no clinical significance."

The intruders at USDA's Agricultural Research Center off Rte. 1 in northern Prince George's County spray-painted slogans on exterior laboratory walls, including "Stop the Slaughter" and "Animal Liberation," and left behind poetry and vegetarian recipes.

The People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals, acting as representatives for the Band of Mercy, issued a statement saying that the cats "were not scheduled to be treated. Experimenters simply record their dehydration, diarrhea, high fever, weakness, inflammation of the heart and liver and pneumonia before killing them."

"The cats are all currently under veterinary care and will later be placed in caring, permanent homes."

"I hope there aren't any pregnant women in those caring homes," USDA spokesman John McClung said in response. McClung said that the FBI, the USDA's office of the inspector general and the U.S. Park Police have been called in to investigate the theft and retrieve the animals. By late Monday, however, no arrests had been made. The theft occurred between 3:30 p.m. Saturday and 9:30 a.m. Sunday.

The cats infected with the parasite were removed from the laboratory of Dr. J.P. Dubey, a USDA veterinarian specializing in research on the common parasitic disease toxoplasmosis. Dubey said that the disease could not be transmitted by touching cats, but only through contact with cats' feces or by eating undercooked meat of animals that have been exposed to the parasite by grazing on feline fecal matter.

"In the United States, toxoplasmosis is a very common infection," Dubey said. "About 40 percent of the people have been exposed to this parasite." Normally, it will not cause disease, except in persons with lowered resistance, Dubey said.

Approximately 3,000 children a year are born infected and can suffer serious illnesses, Dubey said. The parasite disease also causes abortions in farm animals such as sheep, goats and pigs.

The cats, intentionally infected with the parasite for experimental purposes, were part of Dubey's study of the transmissibility of the disease. "One of the unanswered questions," he said, "is if a cat will transmit the parasite once a life or several times. If you have a cat whose resistance has gone down, whether it will shed the parasite in its fecal matter.

"Nobody knows what percentage of people become infected by eating meat or what percentage get it by coming in contact with cats' feces," Dubey said. "If we knew that, it would be a major discovery."

"I have three years of my research down the drain," Dubey said. "Hundreds of hours and thousands of dollars are wasted."

Dubey also said that there is no drug known to cure cats infected with toxoplasmosis. The only treatment, Dubey said, "is when the cats are suffering. You can slow down the division of the parasite, but it can never be completely killed."

Dubey disputed the assertions that the animals were abused: "I am a veterinarian. I could not in my dreams mistreat animals."

The Band of Mercy's last major "animal liberation" occurred in April 1982, when 42 rabbits were seized from the University of Maryland at College Park.

College Student Finds Nazi-Era Photographs

NEW YORK (AP) — A photo album found in a garbage heap contains 13 photographs of Nazi-occupied areas of the Soviet Union, and includes hangings and a meeting between Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini.

The 21-year-old college student who said he found the photographs near his Paterson, N.J., home, sold them to the New York Post, which published them Monday.

The Post said circumstantial evidence indicated the photographs had belonged to Tscherim Soobzokov, an accused SS member killed in 1985 by a bomb that exploded on the porch of his Paterson home.

The newspaper said it bought the photos for an undisclosed sum from Keith Moore, who lives about three blocks from the Soobzokov home.

Experts who examined the photographs said they were taken by an amateur.

One picture shows three partisans hanging from a tree with signs in Russian and German saying, "Stupid attacks against German soldiers will be treated like this."

Others show Nazi leader Hermann Goering and other officers; a group of civilians being led away; corpses of Russian soldiers or prisoners of war stacked in the snow; German soldiers inspecting bodies and civilians digging in the soil, some with their bare hands.

Hitler biographer John Toland told the Post the picture of Hitler greeting the Italian dictator probably is of a meeting that took place in Uman in the Ukraine in the fall of 1941. No pictures of the meeting ever surfaced before, and "it was the only time the two of them got together on the Russian front," Toland said.

Lucjan Dobroszycki, professor of Holocaust studies at Yeshiva University, said many photos of Nazi atrocities on the Russian front exist.

"I have seen a lot of photographs but I've never seen these before. They are really entirely new images," he said.

Program Works

If numbers are any indication, the North Carolina Court-Ordered Arbitration Pilot Program appears to be working.

In addition, the pilot district encompassing Pitt County seems the most effective district where the program is on trial.

Evaluators should remember, however, that the positions negotiated through this program represent solutions to legal problems. To be a viable alternative to court, the arbitration process must offer the individuals involved the proper recourse afforded them by the present system.

The arbitration program is a non-court approach to quickly resolve monetary disputes of $15,000 or less. It is designed to relieve the burden on courts and speed the judicial process.

Statistics indicate that during the first six months of the two-year pilot program, 30 percent of all civil cases filed in district and superior courts in participating judicial districts were heard through the arbitration program rather than by courts.

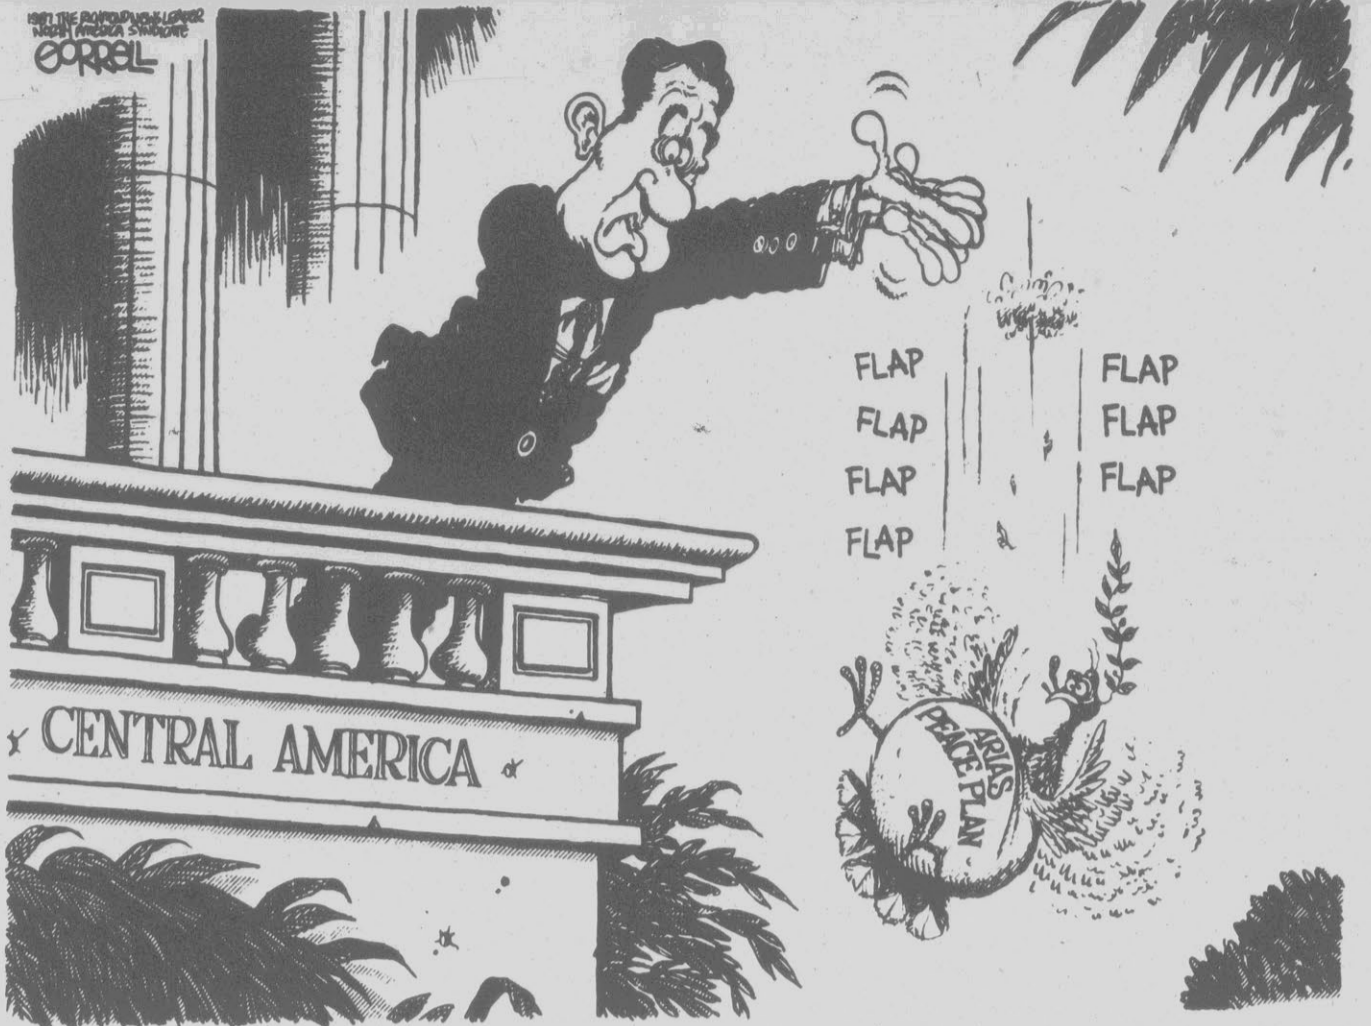

Furthermore, 42 of the 95 hearings scheduled were set in Pitt's district and of the 60 that have been heard, 30 — precisely half — were heard in Pitt's district. Clearly, when the program is evaluated, what happens in this pilot district will play a vital role.

If sheer reduction of court case numbers is considered a criteria, then the project is successful.

There are many pluses for the program. It is an innovative approach to civil suits that will provide data on how to speed the court process. The program is funded through corporate donations, so it does not drain public coffers. If the pilot project works, it will provide a viable alternative for settling lawsuits. If it doesn't work, it will provide a base of information from which to formulate further proposals.

Despite its seeming initial success, there are questions concerning the project that must be asked at the end of the two-year trial period. The issues of expediency, effectiveness and integrity should be raised in a final evaluation of the program.

Evaluators must ask whether arbitration will take the case load off the courts, easing scheduling and facilitating acceptable compromise. Finally, those examining the program should ask if the compromises reached are feasible, reasonable solutions to legal problems that wind up in court.

To the editor:

I want to add my support to the effort in Greenville to develop a program for our homeless. As a part-time worker in the Pitt County Memorial Hospital Emergency Department, I can assure you that the needs of this population are significant in our community. When a homeless person has a medical crisis, even a minor one, their need for the basics such as shelter and food are urgent. Such a facility would provide these services and could probably do so in a more economical way than our present approach. Let's all get behind this planning and see this much needed program implemented.

To the editor:

As an educator and a parent of children who have gone through high school, I was surprised to read in The Daily Reflector that some education board members and high school principals advocate graduating and grading high school students based on attendance record.

A high school diploma should mean a lot more than just a good attendance record. It should represent a standard of educational achievement. An examination in spite of its imperfections is still the gold standard by which we measure educational achievements. It gives an opportunity for a bright student to shine and an average student to do better.

High schools are the first steps toward higher education. Methods of education and evaluation should prepare the student for adjustment in college. There are no examination exemptions in college. The Pitt County school system should set standards of excellence. All students should be required to take examinations. The worth of a diploma and a grade is directly proportional to the standard of evaluation on which it is based.

To the editor:

Death, injury and property damage caused by undisciplined, thoughtless, uncaring impaired (drunk) drivers has climbed steadily since the Safe Roads Act was passed in 1983. The use of alcohol/drugs are responsible for approximately 50 percent of deaths and 15 percent of injuries on our roads.

In June of this year in Pitt County, there were 194 crashes/accidents, two deaths, 82 injuries, 110 cases of property damage according to the North Carolina Department of Motor Vehicles report. In the same report, deaths statewide were 11 less than in the same period of 1986 (121 vs. 132). Injuries, however, increased by 477 (6107 vs. 5630) and property damage rose 1241 (7749 vs. 6408). MADD feels that the decrease of death on our roads can be attributed to the use of seat belts. The increase in injuries and property damage could be reduced if only there were more highway patrol officers and police in evidence to raise the perception that violators would be apprehended.

Unfortunately, the General Assembly has provided small increases in the number of patrolmen, despite more cars and more drivers since 1973. Since 1973, only 50 new positions were increased during the '86 session and a miserly 20 positions authorized for '88 and '89.

The General Assembly has just finished a long drawn-out expensive session and provided, according to some sources, an $80 million pork and special appropriation barrel for the faithful members who are in favor with the "super-subs" or "gang of eight."

Death, injury and property damage on North Carolina roads could be radically reduced if the General Assembly provided the resources and were really concerned about our lives. More empathy is needed by some judges for those victimized by drinking drivers. The author suspects that too many legislators are beholden to the powerful alcohol, restaurant and trial lawyer lobbyists.

A Judge Who Respects Limits

WASHINGTON — Almost everybody who has addressed the subject has recognized at some point that it is improper to assess the qualifications of a Supreme Court nominee solely in terms of his politics or ideology. Most commentators acknowledge that federal judges are not politicians and ought not to be judged like politicians.

Although it is not his main purpose, this point is well made by Prof. Charles L. Black Jr. in an article originally published in the Yale Law Journal and reprinted in The Washington Post. A former colleague of Bork at the Yale Law School, Black points out that presidents surely take account of a person's political opinions when making a nomination — such considerations play a "large, often a crucial role in the president's choice of his nominee" — and, therefore, that the Senate cannot afford to ignore them when called upon to give its advice and consent.

To support this conclusion, however, he goes on to contrast the Senate's proper role in considering judicial nominations with its role in considering a president's nominees for Cabinet positions. With the Cabinet, he writes, "there is a clear structural reason for a senator's letting the president have pretty much anybody he wants." Here — but by inference not in the case of judges — a nominee's politics will properly govern the outcome. Cabinet officers are the president's people; they work for him, as Black puts it. Not so the judges. "The judges are not the president's people," he says emphatically. "God forbid!" But, as he is quick to add, they are also not the Senate's people.

All of which is to say they are not politicians, and, because they are not, the Senate should not allow political considerations to govern or control its decision in a confirmation vote.

Of course, the same rule must constrain a president when he makes a judicial nomination, especially one for the Supreme Court. As the Framers of the Constitution reiterated time and again, judges occupy a separate branch of government — detached from the people by the manner of their selection and from the political branches by their life tenure — precisely because their work is not political in the ordinary sense. A good judge is not the same as a good politician; he is neither a conservative nor a liberal.

Bork, for example, is called a conservative by friends and enemies alike, but on the Court of Appeals he voted with his nominally liberal colleague, Judge Ruth Bader Ginsburg, in 90 percent of the cases on which they both sat, including an important press libel case where he differed with his so-called conservative colleague (as he then was), Antonin Scalia.

How, then, to judge a judge? At a minimum, by his refusal to be political. A fair measure of that self-discipline is his capacity to recognize and his willingness to respect the difference between what is politically desirable (or at least desired) and what is constitutionally permissible. Bork's record is filled with examples of this.

When still a professor, Bork joined a host of legal luminaries (including Archibald Cox) by complaining that the Supreme Court had no constitutional warrant for its decision in Roe v. Wade, the abortion case; but as a judge he concurred in a decision holding that the Department of Health and Human Services had no authority to require that parents be notified of the contraceptives prescribed for their minor children. And in 1981 he testified against a proposed "human life bill," which sought to reverse Roe v. Wade by statutory means. Even if the original decision had been incorrect, he said, the proposed bill amounted to an unconstitutional attempt to prescribe a rule of decision for the courts.

Bork could not have liked the poster — "Tired of the JELLYBEAN REPUBLIC?" — condemning President Reagan for his alleged lack of compassion, and privately he may have agreed with the transit authorities who in 1983 refused to lease space to allow its display in the Washington-area subway stations. Nevertheless, Bork wrote the court's opinion declaring the officials' action to be a violation of the First Amendment.

Had he been a Republican member of the House of Representatives, Bork, too, might have protested the unfairness of the committee assignments made by the Democratic leadership. But as a judge, and going well beyond his colleagues sitting in the case, in 1983 he rejected the lawsuit filed by 14 Republican House members. As he put it, they lacked standing to bring this suit, a conclusion he reached out of respect for the constitutional principle of separation of powers.

Decisions such as these may explain why, although he has written 106 majority opinions during his five years on the Court of Appeals, he has never been reversed by the Supreme Court. What is perhaps even more remarkable, of the 401 cases in which he joined the majority, not one has been reversed by the Supreme Court. This surely can serve as a response to those critics who complain that his appointment would threaten the liberal-conservative balance on the court.

What is at stake here is more than the career of Robert Bork.

Strength For Today

Stanley Jones, a great preacher and writer of a generation ago, often spoke about the necessity of turning denials into doors. By this he meant that every time we shut a door against something in life we very much desire, another door is opened, and this will prove to be a door which will lead us to great satisfaction.

Every time we close the door on something low, God opens a door for us on something high. Every time we say no to our evil selves, God gives us strength to say yes to our better selves.

How many people, disappointed and left in despair, have suddenly found that because of this circumstance God had placed their feet highways which later led to great service and happiness. For example, it was the thorn in the flesh which made Paul seek the Lord's sustaining grace.

Advantage

A major manufacturing firm and a vacant building have been brought together in Martin County and the result will be over 300 new jobs for the area.

It was announced by Gov. Jim Martin on a visit to Williamston last week that Union Underwear Co. of Bowling Green, Ky. will begin production in early 1988.

The firm has purchased the Milliken building a mile north of Williamston and will operate a spinning facility there. In his announcement Martin said the plant will produce a million pounds of product each week.

The building contains 263,000 square feet and it is located on a 53-acre tract of land. It has been vacant for several years.

Union Underwear expects to begin renovations on the building in September. The firm manufactures Fruit of the Loom, BVD and Underoos.

"We are pleased to have the opportunity to have a facility in Williamston," said Union's board vice chairman, Joseph I. Medalia. "We are confident of a strong and successful future here."

State Secretary of Commerce Claude E. Pope said "the adding of 300 jobs for the work force will have a great impact on the economy of this area."

The effects of a new manufacturing facility on a rural county such as Martin can't be overemphasized. It will mean a sizable payroll which will be spent largely in Martin County and will have a positive ripple effect on the county's economy.

The new plant is an advantage to Martin County. It should also be an encouragement to other rural counties to persist with efforts to fill industrial sites left vacant by changing economic times.

Union Underwear will find a pleasant atmosphere in which to operate in Williamston. It is encouraging that major manufacturers are recognizing the benefits of locating in rural eastern North Carolina counties.

From Pakistan's Perspective, Gulf Problem Is 100 Years Old

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan — Pakistani strategists are watching warily as the United States and the Soviet Union maneuver for dominance in the vast and sensitive region that stretches west from their frontier.

In a mid-20th century version of what the British called "The Great Game," the Pakistanis see themselves as a small but influential part of a broader struggle to re-establish "equilibrium" in the region that begins with Afghanistan and stretches across Iran to the Persian Gulf.

It is a long-term confrontation that has brought more than 100,000 Soviet troops into Afghanistan, has made Pakistan the staging area for a guerrilla war and has placed it on the edge of a revolutionary Iran that dislikes both superpowers, but may ultimately need a relationship with one of them.

The Pakistanis worry about who will end up playing the role of the balancing power in the region, and whether Pakistan can avoid the turmoil that has engulfed so many neighboring countries. And these factors, in turn, shape Islamabad's arguments for strategic cooperation with Washington — and its insistence that America must tolerate its nuclear program.

For the British and Russian colonizers of a century and a half ago, Afghanistan was the main battleground — a landlocked, mountainous, inhospitable area that held the key to the land routes to the riches of India and the warm waters of the Indian Ocean.

Their intrigues stretched from Tibet to Iran, but Kabul was, in the words of one Pakistani, the "fulcrum." In the histories and even the romantic literature of the times, the confrontation became known as The Great Game.

The political landscape changed after the British withdrawal from east of Suez in the 1960s, American passivity after Vietnam, and, especially, the fall of the shah of Iran in 1979. In the Pakistani view, the players had changed and the stakes were larger, but the game remained the same.

The shah's demise "tore apart the Islamic world and it still hasn't played itself out," said a key Pakistani strategist. "The gulf today is the cockpit of possible wider confrontation," he continued. "Where will a new equilibrium be established, if anywhere? It won't be Pakistan, but Pakistan may be part of it. Our problem is how to establish a mini-equilibrium in Afghanistan. This is what we are trying to do."

The overthrow of the shah in 1979 changed all the calculations about regional stability. "This emboldened the Soviets to enter Afghanistan. The hostage crisis made the Soviets think the Americans might move in their forces and they wanted to be in place," the strategist said.

For Pakistan, it meant both crisis and opportunity, a chance to rebuild an international standing shattered by the hanging of former Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto and the cessation of U.S. aid over nuclear-proliferation issues.

Looking back over seven years of cooperation with the United States on Afghanistan, the strategist argued: "We understand the U.S. position is for a strong and stable Pakistan. This would be a stabilizing factor in a region which is otherwise in flames: in Afghanistan, in Iran where there is a revolution that is not yet finished, in Lebanon, and now, especially in the gulf. Pakistan is shoring up this whole structure. Should Pakistan become engulfed, it would be very unfavorable to the United States and the West because there would be no pivot, no place to hold interests intact."

"There is a convergence of interests," the Pakistani argument goes, one that so far has carried through seven years of guerrilla war in Afghanistan and a growing U.S.-Pakistani military relationship.

The Pakistani strategists who place so much emphasis on their country's western borders and its interests in the gulf region tend to gloss over its troubles to the east with neighbor and foe India. It is Islamabad's drive to position itself as an actual or potential nuclear power to match its view of India's status that is causing Congress to question the fundamentals of the U.S.-Pakistani relationship.

Even in the gulf, there is a difference of perspective when events are viewed from Washington and Islamabad. Often what Washington views as a proper and necessary policy, Islamabad sees as tilting the balance in the game toward Moscow.

"We are beginning to see a pro-Soviet Syria leaning toward a pro-Soviet Iraq, not to mention an increased Soviet presence in the gulf with overtures to Kuwait, Oman and the Saudis," said the Pakistani strategist. "In Iran, there is a feeling of a certain isolation, a curious feeling that the United States is joining with the Soviets to punish the side that has done the least damage to shipping."

A well-placed Pakistani official picked up this same theme, giving it a slightly different twist by arguing that the current confrontation in the gulf could force Iran into Moscow's hands despite deep mistrust in Tehran for the Soviets.

"We are concerned about the whole strategic situation in the region, not only in the gulf but also in Afghanistan," the Pakistani official said. "There is a mood of frustration (in the gulf) leading to a view that any alternative would be better than the status quo of seven years of warfare," the official said.

In the Pakistani view, the Great Game is best played subtly, by trying to win over the Iranians or by keeping them neutral.

How Serious The Quest For Peace?

WASHINGTON — The measure of the sagging of the Reagan administration's Central America policy is that the United States is having to deal with a greater credibility problem than is Nicaragua.

Things may change; one hopes they do. An approach to peace will require the Sandinistas to accept a political opening that will be painful and divisive for them and they may be sorely tempted to cheat. Nicaragua's credibility will be on the line.

The United States is being called on to change not the character of its system but merely an aspect of its foreign policy — to test the possibility of softening, rather than ending, Sandinista rule. As distasteful as this may be for Reaganites, it should not be beyond a mature great power.

The administration, however, or some part of it, is being a bit petulant and childish. It started up its new engagement with regional diplomacy by getting rid of Philip Habib, the American diplomat best situated to help the president accomplish the purpose he now says he has embraced.

Got rid of him, moreover, for the wrong reason. Habib resigned ostensibly because of differences over diplomatic tactics. Actually, he resigned because of pressure from the Republican right wing — pressure to which stand-tall Ronald Reagan submitted without any evident recognition of the damage he was doing to his credibility.

The sequence leaves the president without the major personage he would ideally want to have on board in order to pursue any serious initiative. George Shultz has a full plate, and, by failing to get the president to keep Habib on, has lost an important battle. Shultz's Latin America aide, Elliott Abrams, lacks the requisite standing.

Beyond personalities lies a question to which even the best-informed Latins are seriously seeking an answer. Queasy in the knowledge that their fate is at the mercy of American political whim, they ask whether the United States is now going to work with Costa Rican President Oscar Arias on the plan that the five Central American states accepted in Guatemala earlier this month, or whether the United States, by a too-rigid insistence on some of its own standards or simply by a subtle diminution of energy at key passages, is going to undermine it.

The version of the Arias plan accepted in Guatemala improved on earlier drafts but is not complete and requires much plugging of loopholes, especially on the security side. Certainly, it is not self-implementing.

And some part of the implementation will fall to government ministers who may be political rivals of their presidents and to bureaucrats or generals with their own agendas.

To overcome the inevitable stickiness, there must be a sustained high-level thrust in Washington: leadership. Instead, Reagan takes the heavy hitter, Habib, out of the lineup in the crucial inning, allows self-serving statements (George Bush's) and rear-guard battles (Caspar Weinberger's) from lieutenants so inclined, and conveys the impression to the hemisphere that he may be sabotaging the best hope of the decade.

Everyone taking part in this exercise wants two things out of it: the benefits if it succeeds, and the avoidance of blame if it fails. Reagan is doing less than he might to reap the benefits. His course serves the Nicaraguan interest in avoiding the blame. It also strengthens an unfortunate Latin tendency to take refuge from harsh dilemmas in gauziness and accusations against the United States.

Does Reagan really have to have it pointed out to him that the next vote on Contra aid, if it comes to that, will depend considerably on what taste his diplomacy has left in the mouth of Congress? Inevitably, there is going to be a debate on who has been acting in good faith and who has not. A serious administration, even one convinced that the Arias plan is a sham, even one prepared to dump Central America on the Democrats or the next president, should be anticipating that debate.

An irony is at work here that some Reaganites will not like: to improve prospects for renewed Contra aid, Reagan has to work hard on a Latin peace plan that removes the Contras from the military arena and inserts them only uncertainly into the political arena. A pity that Reaganites did not think of that during the years of their gauziness when they were looking for a military way to make American policy prevail.

Speeding Drops As Limit Goes Up

RALEIGH (AP) — Highway Patrol officials say the number of speeding tickets appears to have decreased since North Carolina raised the speed limit to 65 mph along 528 miles of rural interstate highways earlier this month.

A review of tickets issued on Interstates 95 and 85 the first week of the higher limits showed that troopers in eight counties issued 309 speeding tickets, with none of the speeders clocked at less than 70 mph.

"I monitored I-95 in Nash, Wilson and Johnston counties, and the percentage of speeders appeared to be less than when the limit was 55 mph," said Highway Patrol Capt. T.H. Spainhour.

He said figures weren't available to compare the same stretches of highway when the speed limit was lower.

"If we had kept statistics for the same section of highway when it was 55 mph, the number of citations probably would have been higher," Spainhour said.

The speeding tickets issued on the two interstates between Aug. 10 and Aug. 16, showed that 73 drivers — 24 percent of those charged — were cited for driving 70 to 74 mph. Most of the speeders — 150, or 49 percent — were clocked at 75 to 79 mph.

And 72 of the drivers charged were accused of exactly the same violation: driving 80 mph. The remaining 14 were accused of driving at higher speeds of up to 100 mph.

"Our policy is a clear-cut and substantial violation," said Highway Patrol Sgt. E.W. Horton, explaining why there were no tickets for speeds less than 70 mph.

"In my opinion, 66 to 68 mph is not a clear-cut or substantial violation because most speedometers are two or three miles per hour off," Horton said by telephone from a Roanoke Rapids patrol office that oversees parts of I-95 in Halifax and Northampton counties.

Highway Patrol officials said they did not know why so many speeders had been charged with driving 80 mph — exceeding the limit by exactly 15 mph — while so few were charged with going faster.

Col. Jack Cardwell, Highway Patrol commander, said if a trooper uses radar to clock a speeder, "we require that they write the ticket for whatever appears on the radar."

Sgt. L.W. Davis said speeding by more than 15 mph above the speed limit brought extra penalties and required the arresting officer to take the driver to a magistrate.

"If a person is convicted of driving 71 mph in a 55-mph zone, he automatically loses his license for 30 days," Davis said in a telephone interview from Fayetteville. "If a motorist is clocked at 71 mph in a 55-mph zone, he is taken to a magistrate, bonded and assigned a court date."

Sanford Says Keep Embassy

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new U.S. embassy in Moscow that is riddled with eavesdropping devices should not be torn down and rebuilt until the government has considered other options, Sen. Terry Sanford, D-N.C., says.

Sanford, who toured the new embassy last week as part of a Senate delegation, Monday declined to detail the recommendations he would make to Senate leaders, but said rebuilding would cost millions of dollars and "we have no greater assurances that it would be much or even better."

Asked if the building should be razed, Sanford said, "We should not do that except as the last alternative."

Some officials have recommended only a partial rebuilding plan to protect limited sensitive areas in the embassy, which U.S. officials have refused to occupy.

U.S. officials have discovered listening devices planted in walls that were prefabricated by Soviet workers.

Sanford said the building's security problems are "one of the greatest mistakes we've ever made, to enter into an arrangement where we wouldn't even supervise the construction. This really is a Republican mistake and a Republican decision."

Razing and rebuilding, Sanford said, "will make the U.S. look very inept in the eyes of the world."

Sanford was one of four senators who went to the Soviet Union in a delegation led by Sen. Daniel Moynihan, D-N.Y. They inspected the new embassy, talked with U.S. diplomats and met with Soviet officials. The group also visited Leningrad and met in Moscow with more than a dozen Soviet Jews who have been refused permission to emigrate.

Teachers Urged To Use Gloves

GREENSBORO (AP) — Guilford County's three school systems are urging teachers and other employees to add a new item to their back-to-school checklist — rubber gloves.

"We would certainly recommend that when a teacher is out supervising kids on the playground, she have rubber gloves where she could get them quickly," said Art Costantini, Guilford County's assistant superintendent for pupil support services. "But we would urge them to use common sense."

Costantini said teachers are being urged to use the gloves when dealing with children's blood and other body fluids in order to protect themselves from communicable diseases, notably AIDS.

"It's a measure to protect the staff and students," said Costantini.

Costantini said teachers should respond with haste if a child were to have an emergency, but also should be careful.

Greensboro and High Point school administrators are furnishing rubber gloves to all the schools.

"We're urging employees to use them whenever they feel they may come in contact with bodily fluids — with vomiting, blood, with cuts — just to protect themselves as a matter of course," said Sue Medley, Greensboro's assistant superintendent for middle schools. "It's a precaution taken to avoid the spread of disease."

School officials are re-educating their staffs about a policy that was adopted by all three school boards a year ago. That policy was designed to provide school employees with guidelines to deal with various communicable diseases.

Drafted with the help of the Guilford County Health Department, the policy states, among other things:

"Gloves are recommended when direct hand contact with body fluids is anticipated (i.e., treating bloody noses, handling clothes soiled by incontinence, cleaning small spills by hand)."

IN THE STATE

Award
RALEIGH (AP) — The family of an employee of the North Carolina Department of Agriculture has been presented with a departmental superior service award by Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham.

Carlton Muse Jr., 34, of New Bern, an NCDA motor fuels analyst, drowned June 1 while rescuing high school student Judy Cunio in the Neuse River near Wilkerson Point.

The award was presented Monday to Mrs. Muse and Muse's parents, Carlton Sr. and Shirley.

Drug Funds
RALEIGH (AP) — Twenty-four North Carolina agencies will share $3.9 million in federal funds aimed at enforcing drug-abuse laws, officials said Monday.

The Bureau of Justice Assistance announced the money would be officially awarded Thursday as part of the Anti-Drug Abuse Act enacted by Congress in 1986.

Bruce Marshburn of the Governor's Crime Commission said the funds were allocated on the basis of each participating state's population and called for a 25 percent state match.

Nursing Home
WILMINGTON (AP) — State regulators have fined a New Hanover County nursing home nearly $4,000 for "endangering" seven patients through inadequate care.

Bowden Nursing Home just outside Wrightsville Beach was placed on provisional status and ordered not to admit any more patients until the problems are corrected, state officials said.

After visiting the home in mid-July, investigators from the N.C. Division of Facility Services reported a number of problems in the way staff members at Bowden were administering drugs to patients and monitoring their health.

The nursing home was fined $3,930 and placed on provisional status until Sept. 30.

Chatham Coal
CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — A federal administrative law judge ruled Monday that an exploratory mining permit for a Chatham County coal company was valid.

The permit, which allows Chatham Coal Co. to mine 2,000 tons of coal for testing, had been challenged by Chatham County government bodies and residents. The group had said the permit had been issued improperly by the federal Office of Surface Mining.

Judge David Torbett of Knoxville, Tenn., notified Chatham Coal president James A. Morgan III and Raleigh lawyer John F. Graybeal, an attorney for the citizens' group, of his decision Monday afternoon.

Forest Fire
LENOIR, N.C. (AP) — Firefighters battled yellow jackets and steep terrain today as they worked to contain a 25-acre forest fire on Chestnut Mountain, officials said.

"It's just straight up and down," said Steve McMasters of the state Forest Service. "It's real steep and (we're) finding a lot of yellow jackets. ... It's just a difficult situation to be in."

Officials reported a bulldozer operator had to leave the scene after being stung several times by yellow jackets, but work continued to contain the fire.

McMasters said the fire posed no threat to buildings in the area, but he said it would take a good rain to put it out.

Marshall Dies
RALEIGH (AP) — Roger Powell Marshall, a retired North Carolina State University English professor known for his large collection of North Carolina literature, died Monday. He was 88.

Marshall became an expert on the state's literature and his collection was vast and highly regarded by colleagues and former students, said Alvin Fountain, a friend and retired NCSU English professor.

Marshall taught at NCSU for more than 38 years, an NCSU spokesman said. He served as acting chairman of the department during World War II. He retired from teaching in 1964.

A funeral service will be held Wednesday.

Martin Kin Swaps Jobs

RALEIGH (AP) — The father-in-law of Gov. Jim Martin's son has left the Department of Correction for another state executive post, but that hasn't silenced critics who say he is not qualified.

John Higgins left his $60,700-a-year job in the Department of Correction in August when the new state budget was approved. The post had been abolished by the Legislature last spring in the midst of controversy over Higgins' duties and qualifications.

On Monday, he was appointed deputy secretary for government operations in the Department of Administration at an annual salary of $55,272.

Rep. Gerald Anderson, D-Craven, one of Higgins' harshest critics in the Legislature, said the transfer did not change his opinion.

"I think it's a payoff, just like Jimmy Green and Charlie Knox," he said, referring to prominent Democrats who supported Martin's campaign and later got jobs in his administration. "Except this is even worse, because it's kinship."

Johnson-Woolard Mothers Need A Vows Exchanged Private Corner

WASHINGTON, N.C. — The wedding ceremony of Patsy Jo Woolard and Durwood Keith Johnson, both of Greenville, took place Aug. 15 in the Old Ford Church of Christ.

The double-ring ceremony was conducted by Lewis Styons. Organist Arah Bell Carraway, vocalist Olivia Wilkins and pianist Shanna Chrismon presented a program of wedding music.

Parents of the bridal couple are Mr. and Mrs. Dick Woolard of Washington and Mr. and Mrs. A.L. Taylor Jr. of Henderson.

Sandra Gerard of Washington was matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Jo Ella Bateman of Greensboro, Pamela Jenkins of Asheboro, and Lisa Krutielek of Greenville.

Honorary bridesmaids included Mrs. Carl Fisher and Mrs. Jimmy Twisdale, both of Henderson.

A.L. Taylor Jr. of Henderson was best man. Ushers included Darrell Johnson of Hickory, Greg Johnson of Henderson, Richard Gerard Jr. and Tony Woolard, both of Washington.

The bride, given in marriage by her parents, wore a formal gown of white matte taffeta with beaded alencon lace. The fitted bodice was adorned with beaded French alencon lace and had a sweetheart neckline, puff sleeves and empire waistline. The full taffeta skirt extended into a cathedral train and was adorned with lace edged ruffles. She wore an ascot hat with beaded lace. The bride carried a cascade bouquet of roses, mini-carnations, baby's breath and ivy.

A reception followed the ceremony. Shirley Hodges and Frances Twisdale served wedding cake and Doris Rogers poured punch. Patty Combs presided at the bridal register.

After a trip to the Bahamas, the couple will live in Greenville.

MRS. JOHNSON

The bride is employed as a customer service representative at Manpower Temporary Services. The bridegroom is operations manager for Consolidated Freightways.

An after-rehearsal dinner was given by parents of the bridegroom Friday evening at the Holiday Inn in Washington.

The trouble with a family is they're so ... so daily.

Everyone has the run of the house and it's impossible to find a place to be alone. They need such a place. So do I. There are some things I want to do without an audience.

Do you have any idea how ridiculous you feel when you think you have the house to yourself and you turn up a recording of Liza Minnelli to 97 decibels? You have already lip-synced the first two choruses of "New York, New York" and now you're down to the big finish. You are strutting now, kicking your legs higher than the coffee table and warbling, "If I can make it there ... I'll make it anywhere," when one of the kids is framed in the doorway and says, "If you're going to do an encore, I can come back."

So much for fantasies. The bathroom used to be as close to privacy as anyone can get in a home since it's the only room in the house that has a door that locks. Still, one night I was in front of the mirror rehearsing my ad-libs for a meeting of the Four Seasons Garden Club. "And now," I said, "I'd like to introduce you to a woman who needs no introduction ... but insisted upon it. ... (laugh, laugh) The next president of the Potbound Auxiliary, Esther Hilgaside. Thank you, Erma. Let's give Erma a hand. She's always a delight. We'll begin by answering roll call with our favorite compost."

The magic was destroyed when my husband hammered on the door and yelled, "Who are you talking to?"

Men have their garages. Kids have their bedrooms that no one enters due to health restrictions. But mothers rarely have a corner where they can slip out of sight for a few hours and talk to themselves.

In the classic book, "Please Don't Eat the Daisies," its author, Jean

At Wits End

Erma Bombeck

Kerr, used to hide out in the car, sometimes driving to the gas station and parking in front of the air pump.

I spend a fair amount of time in the car... browsing through the gauges, resetting the clock, dusting the radio buttons and playing with the side mirrors. Sometimes if I'm spotted from the house, I even start the car and leave the driveway. Even that is risky. I was tooling down the boulevard singing with Melissa Manchester the other morning. As we got to the long note, my mouth was wide open and my face was flushed when I stopped for a light. I glanced at the man in the car next to me, who was staring in horror. I had the feeling he was ready to dial 911 on his cellular phone, so I feigned a yawn. He seemed satisfied and drove off.

I just got a new Tina Turner single. I'm not going to play it until I'm sure everyone is out of town and I can lock all the doors and get into it.

The family is worried sick about me now.

HIGH-TECH INCINERATOR BARTLESVILLE, Okla. (AP) — More than 3 million pounds of hazardous waste have been safely burned in a high-tech incinerator at its research center, says Phillips Petroleum.

The center is where the incinerator was invented and the disposal device is the first to get an operating permit under the Resource Conservation and Recovery Act. The act regulates hazardous waste disposal in the United States.

The incinerator converts flue gases into water vapor.

Tipping Mistake Concerns Couple

Dear Abby

and good will should be worth more than $10 to a family restaurant owner.

DEAR ABBY: Baseball is the only major sport in which the players indulge in the disgusting habit of chewing tobacco, then spitting right on the playing field.

Millions of viewers are "treated" to dozens of close-ups of players spitting gobs of gunk onto the field. This grosses out a lot of people, while greatly impressing many young ball players who then take up the habit. Maybe if you would scold them they would clean up their act. Why must they chew? — DISGUSTED EX-FAN

DEAR DISGUSTED: Baseball players "chew" to keep their mouths moist and to relieve tension. Don't chew out the players — blame the cameramen who bring it into our living rooms. Spitting is not only unsightly, it's a health hazard.

DEAR ABBY: I've never written for advice before, but this issue cannot be resolved by any other means.

About a year ago, my husband and I became aware of a "Peeping Tom" who occasionally looks into our bedroom window at night. Our bedroom is on the first floor, facing a woods, and would be considered very private. We also have blinds, but because I sometimes leave the bedroom windows open, the blinds blow to the side.

I have not called the police because the "Tom" is our next-door neighbor. He is a respected professional man and has always been a friend to my husband and me, and his wife and children are very dear to us. We are angry and frustrated and don't know what to do.

I'm on the verge of confronting him, and if I do, it will forever change our relationship with him. (I'm assuming he will deny it.) I've already told his wife that I'd seen "someone" at our window, and to ask her husband if he'd seen anyone in hopes that it would scare him away, but he keeps at it.

Any ideas? Or should I just be direct and risk the consequences? — UNEASY IN ILLINOIS

DEAR UNEASY: Even respected professional men are not exempt from this kind of behavior. Your neighbor needs help. You and/or your husband should confront him and tell him that if he doesn't get professional help, you will be forced to tell his wife. And, if necessary, you will report him to the police. Although most "Peeping Toms" seldom go beyond "looking," their victims feel threatened and their privacy is invaded.

NEW YORK (AP) — A rally in the dollar and Treasury bonds lifted prices in early trading on Wall Street today.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 22.48 to 2,719.55 as of 10 a.m. EDT.

Advancing issues were ahead of decliners by a margin of about 11-to-4 with 805 stocks up, 281 down and 405 unchanged on the New York Stock Exchange.

Volume on the Big Board came to 31.36 million shares after the first half-hour of trading.

The dollar moved higher in overseas trading today, reversing a string of losing sessions, and analysts said the turnaround gave the stock market a boost. Stock prices had fallen on Monday, in part because of the dollar's weakness.

A 1.5 percent drop in orders for durable goods announced today by the Commerce Department gave bond prices a lift that spilled over to stocks, said Hildegarde Zagorski, a market strategist with Prudential-Bache Securities Inc.

Leading the NYSE most active list was Potomac Electric, which fell 1/2 to 22 1/2.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks rose 1.27 to 187.54. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 0.53 to 361.94.

On Monday the Dow Jones industrial average dropped 12.43 to 2,697.07.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by about 9 to 5 on the NYSE, with 561 up, 1,017 down and 415 unchanged. Big Board volume totaled 149.35 million shares, against 189.58 million in the previous session.

force in Asia, and the United States had planned to keep a similar force on its own territory.
The United States had said verification would be simplified if both sides agreed to eliminate the missiles completely. "It is easier to detect cheating if there are no missiles around," said Schroeder.
The Geneva arms control talks, which began in March 1985, also cover negotiations on strategic, or intercontinental, nuclear weapons and on space and defense systems.

Attention recently has been focused on the INF talks as the most likely to lead to a quick treaty, especially since the Soviets agreed earlier this year to separate agreement in that area from the other two subjects.
Agreement in the other areas has been blocked by Soviet insistence on strict limitations on the U.S. Strategic Defense Initiative, which the United States refuses.

reporters several times have approached convoys and been warned away.

In a separate incident Monday involving the same convoy, U.S. helicopters and warships chased away an Iranian warship that had shadowed them.
Officers aboard the helicopter carrier Guadalcanal said the Iranian vessel presented no overt threat as it neared the convoy at the point where the Strait of Hormuz meets the Persian Gulf. The American and Iranian radio operators held a polite conversation, wishing each other a "good day."

Nonetheless, crews on five U.S. warships went on full alert and manned all guns.

Earlier this month, U.S. planes fired two missiles at an Iranian plane that approached a U.S. surveillance aircraft. The missiles missed.
In New York, Iran's deputy foreign minister said Monday that his nation would cooperate fully with United Nations' efforts to end the Iran-Iraq war. The statement indicated a softening of Iran's opposition to a Security Council cease-fire resolution passed July 20.

However, the envoy, Mohammad Jawad Larijani, accused Iraq and the United States of violating the resolution. He was to meet with U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar today for a second day of talks.

Arab foreign ministers meeting in Tunis on Monday urged Iran to abide by the resolution, which Iraq has accepted.

In Washington, Iraqi Ambassador Nizar Hamdoun said Monday that if cease-fire efforts slow down, his nation could break its month-old self-imposed moratorium on attacking Iranian oil shipments in the Gulf.

Despite the moratorium, Iraq has been bombarding Iranian oil and industrial facilities heavily in the past few weeks.
Also Monday, the U.S. State Department disclosed that Britain has decided to reflag a Kuwaiti oil tanker. The Kuwaitis already have chartered three other ships with British flags.

enrollment about equal to last year's level of 360 freshmen, said Renee Keever, a spokeswoman at the school.

Guilford College in Greensboro has taken steps to hold the freshman class at 310 after it swelled to 343 last year and "it got very crowded," said Larry West of the admissions office.

Statistics suggest that more North Carolina high school graduates are going to college.

Officials for the University of North Carolina system estimate 39 percent of North Carolina's 1986 high school graduates were in college last fall. That's below the national average of 54 percent but Raymond Dawson, the system's senior vice president for academic affairs, said North Carolina appears to be improving.

While the system doesn't have college-going estimates before 1986—the percentage of North Carolina high school graduates going to colleges in this state has risen from 20 percent in 1982 to 24 percent in 1986. In addition, a survey of high school seniors by the state Department of Public Instruction indicates the percentage of college-bound North Carolina students has increased from 31.4 percent in 1982 to 34.7 percent in 1986.

Evan Sun, a department statistician, said that gain indicates more students are choosing college in part because new high-technology industries demand better-educated employees.

Officials at Louisburg College, a two-year school, said growth there also seemed to pace high-tech industries.

"We are at capacity and have been all summer, so we have a waiting list," said Allen Dehart. "For the last few years we have noticed this developing, largely because of our proximity to the Research Triangle area."

The Dutch and Indians concluded a peace treaty at New Amsterdam in 1645.

West German Hostage Pleads For Exchange

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Kidnappers released a four-minute videotape of West German hostage Alfred Schmidt today in which the engineer pleaded with Bonn to release a Lebanese suspected of hijacking a TWA jet.

Schmidt said his kidnappers allowed him to make the videotape so that he and another West German hostage, 53-year-old Rudolf Cordes, could respond to Bonn's "positive" decision not to extradite the hijacking suspect to the United States.

"We ask the government of Germany to seriously consider the release of Mohammed Ali Hamadi so our release may be possible," Schmidt said in the tape, which was delivered to a Western news agency.

The 47-year-old engineer, who was abducted in Moslem west Beirut Jan. 20, read from a three-page, handwritten statement in a steady voice. He was wearing glasses and his hair was cropped short, but he had a bushy beard and moustache.

Schmidt was kidnapped three days after Cordes, a businessman, was abducted on the highway to Beirut's airport.

Hamadi, 23, was arrested in January in Frankfurt for possession of explosives.

The United States wanted Hamadi extradited to face charges of air piracy and murder in connection with the 1985 hijack of a TWA jetliner to Beirut, during which a U.S. Navy diver was murdered. Bonn rejected the extradition request in late June and said it would try Hamadi in West Germany.

Schmidt did not identify his kidnappers in the tape and it was not accompanied by a statement.

A previously unknown group calling itself Holy Warriors for Freedom claimed it was holding the two West Germans in a statement issued July 8.

The statement, which was accompanied by a photocopy of Cordes' passport, offered to exchange the two West Germans for Hamadi.

Hamadi's brother Abdul-Hadi, who heads the Beirut security apparatus of the Iranian-backed Shiite Moslem Hezbollah, or Party of God, reportedly masterminded the abduction of the two West Germans.

On the tape, Schmidt said he had been treated well and that West Germany should "adopt an independent foreign policy from that of the U.S."

Beirut's Ash-Shiraa magazine said in its latest edition Friday that the West Germans would be freed soon because of Syrian pressure on the Iranian government.

The magazine, which first reported the secret U.S. arms sales to Iran last November, did not elaborate. Syria, Iran's principal Arab ally in its 7-year-old war with Iraq, is the main power broker in Lebanon.

In Bonn, Foreign Ministry spokesman Reinhard Bettzeuge said the head of the ministry's Middle East desk would fly to Damascus, Syria, on Friday for "normal bilateral consultations."

He did not say what might be discussed but other government sources said Cordes and Schmidt would be a central topic.

The two Germans are among 25 foreigners missing and believed kidnapped in Lebanon since March 1985. The longest-held is Terry Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press, who was seized in March 1985.

On Monday, the wives of three hostages — Robert Polhill of New York City; Jesse Turner of Boise, Idaho and Mithileshwar Singh, and Indian national — appealed anew for their release.

The three men and Allan Steen of Boston were seized Jan. 24 at Beirut University College, where they taught. Schmidt's message came four days after another extremist Moslem faction, Islamic Jihad, or Islamic Holy War, threatened to begin mistreating its two American and three French hostages.

The pro-Iranian group, believed made up of Shiite militants loyal to Iranian patriarch Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, was accompanied by a videotape showing French captives Jean-Paul Kauffmann and Marcel Carton.

Bronco Offense Clicks, But Defense Appears Missing As Denver Nips Dolphins

DENVER (AP) — Let it be recorded that in the 1987 preseason, just as the Denver Broncos began to develop a powerful offense, they appear to have misplaced their once-formidable defense.

It should result in a lot of high-scoring games this fall, much like the Broncos' 31-28 NFL preseason decision Monday night over the Miami Dolphins.

John Elway ran and passed for second-quarter touchdowns, and Gene Lang bolted 76 yards for another score early in the third quarter as Denver raced to a 24-0 lead. Then the Broncos had to hang on in the face of a fierce Dolphin comeback.

The Broncos generated an impressive 471 total yards, including 207 on the ground. But they also gave up 411 yards.

Ron Jaworski, the former Philadelphia Eagles quarterback who was signed by Miami last week, completed two TD passes to James Pruitt in the final six minutes of the game to draw the Dolphins within three points. Only when Denver's Steve Sewell recovered an on-side kick with 32 seconds left was the Bronco victory secure.

"It was a hard game to figure out," Denver Coach Dan Reeves said. "Offensively, we moved the ball well. I was pleased with John's performance. Ricky Nattiel and Mark Jackson made big catches. Gene Lang showed tremendous speed."

"We just didn't put Miami away in the second half. All of a sudden we gave up two turnovers, and our defense did not tackle well. We also had too many penalties. I don't like to see that, even in a preseason game."

A pre-game rain created a slippery field at the start of the contest, but playing conditions gradually improved.

Elway got Denver on the scoreboard early in the second quarter. He dropped back to pass, looking to his right in vain for an open receiver. He slipped as he was about to be sacked, but then spun to his left and ran eight yards for the TD.

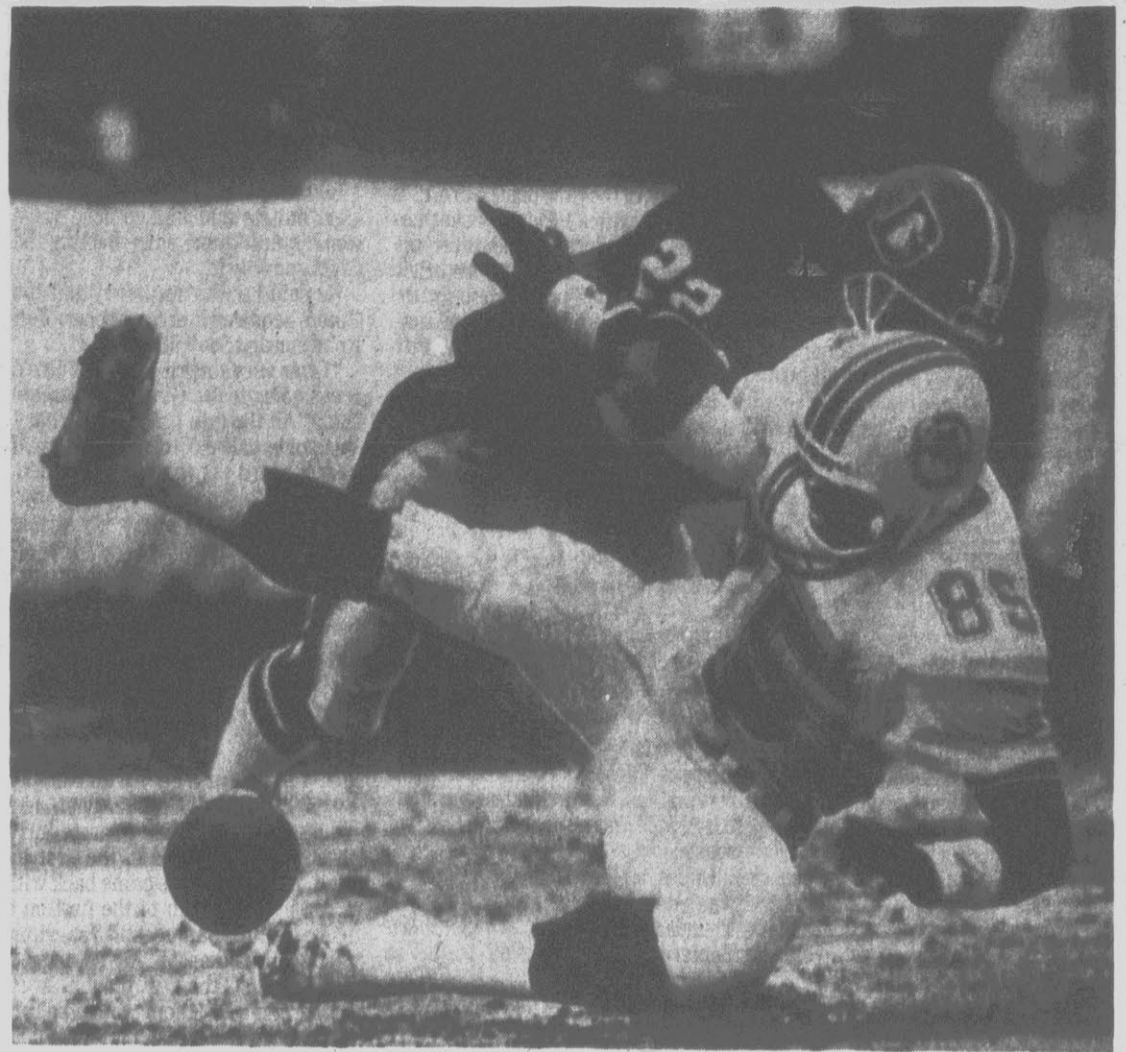

"That touchdown came from nothing, a broken play," said Reeves. "He's tough to contain, and that's just one of his strengths."

On his next play, Elway unloaded a 53-yard pass to Nattiel, the Broncos' rookie wide receiver. That set up Rich Karlis' 22-yard field goal.

Moments later, an interception by cornerback Mark Haynes gave Denver possession at the Miami 8, and Elway connected with tight end Clarence Kay for a 17-0 halftime lead.

Miami had crossed midfield three times in the half, but suffered turn-

New Orleans Rally Sends Greenville Home, 8-5

By SCOTT KINDBERG
Special To The Reflector
JAMESTOWN, N.Y. — Offense sells tickets, pitching wins ball games.

With a little bit of the latter, Greenville might still be in the hunt for the 13-15 Babe Ruth World Series championship at College Stadium.

But lack of pitching depth caught up to the Greenville team Monday night and it dropped an 8-5 decision to New Orleans, thus eliminating the Southeast Regional champions from the tournament.

The Greenville team is expected to arrive back at Guy Smith Stadium between 3:15 and 3:30 p.m. this afternoon.

Greenville, which lost to Van Nuys-Sherman Oaks, Calif., 9-2, Sunday, jumped out to a 5-1 lead after 2½ innings, but couldn't hold it as starter and loser Walter Gatlin got into trouble in the third, fourth and fifth innings.

"We lack pitching," Greenville manager Blanks Walker said. "That's been evident throughout the regionals and the state. We're not very deep in pitching."

So when Gatlin encountered trouble, as he did in that three-inning stretch, there was nothing Walker could do but sit and watch.

Gatlin hit Elvin Robinson with a pitch to lead off the third inning and then walked Scott Staes, Randall Pannell and James Morris in succession to force in a run that cut Greenville's run to 5-2. Stanley Wiltz followed with a two-run single, and, suddenly, the lead was down to one.

"I made the decision to leave the guy in and he walks a couple of people," Walker said. "That hurts. Any time you give us bases on balls, they'll kill you."

Gatlin's wildness hurt him again as he hit Robinson a second time to lead off the fourth inning. Robinson stole second and scored on winning pitcher Staes' single. Staes went all the way to third on the play following a two-base error by right fielder Grant Harmon but Staes was left stranded there.

Greenville was in desperate need of some runs, but no one could provide the key hit. In the fifth, Jamie Brewington walked and moved to second on Staes' wild pitch. Alphoso Freeman also walked and a rally seemed imminent.

But Abram Lang bounced into a 6-3 double play and Harmon bounced to short to end the threat.

New Orleans' pinchhitter Erik Vorhoff ended the game for all intents and purposes in the bottom of the fifth. Wiltz reached on an error by Greenville shortstop Heath Clark to lead off the inning and Chad Chrespo singled. With one out, Craig Marcelin singled to load the bases and Vorhoff, hitting for Rob Demare, ripped a double down the left field line to score Wiltz and Chrespo. Robinson's suicide squeeze bunt plated Marcelin and New Orleans led 8-5.

Greenville threatened in the sixth as Chris Christopher and Tim Moore both walked. But Clark bounced into a fielder's choice and Gatlin popped up to first baseman Morris, who doubled Clark off first to end the inning.

Maurice Hines walked to lead off the seventh, but Staes retired Brewington, Freeman and Lang to preserve the victory.

After an unearned run gave New Orleans a 1-0 lead in the first inning, Greenville scored four times in the second.

After back-to-back walks to Brewington and Freeman, Staes surrendered RBI singles to Lang and Harmon and a fielder's choice RBI to Moore. Then Robinson, the center fielder, dropped a line drive off the bat of Clark that allowed Harmon to score.

All Greenville had to do was supply the knock-out punch.

That opportunity came in the third inning, but it couldn't pull the trigger.

Brewington led off with a single, stole second and went to third on Freeman's infield hit. Freeman stole second and Lang singled home Brewington to make the score 5-1. Staes then walked Harmon to load the bases.

Staes was hanging by a thread.

But Greenville failed to capitalize. Staes got Christopher to bounce into a fielder's choice, cutting down Freeman at the plate and Staes struck out Moore to end the inning.

Greenville would not score again. "I'm proud of them for getting here," Walker said. "They gave a lot of effort and a lot of courage. That's what baseball is all about."

Cleveland Tries To Stop Hit Streak Once Again

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Once again, the Cleveland Indians find themselves standing in the way of The Streak.

The Milwaukee Brewers' Paul Molitor savaged the same Indians last weekend with 10 hits in 20 at-bats. Now, with his hitting streak at 38 games, Molitor prepares to face Cleveland's Ken Schrom tonight in the opener of a three-game series.

A hit in each game of the set would move Molitor past Ty Cobb, who hit in 40 straight games in 1911, and into a tie with George Sisler for the third-longest hitting streak of the century in major league baseball. Sisler hit in 41 in a row in 1922.

The only players with longer consecutive-game batting streaks this century are Cincinnati's Pete Rose, 44 games in 1978, and the New York Yankees' Joe DiMaggio, whose 56-game streak in 1941 has long been thought to be unbreakable.

Whether Molitor gets a chance to focus on DiMaggio depends, at least for the next three days, on how he fares against the Indians. And remember, it was the Indians who halted DiMaggio 46 years ago.

"Cleveland's staff is sort of a young staff and it makes it a little difficult when you haven't faced these pitchers a lot," Molitor said during an off-day on Monday.

Statistics show Schrom, 5-10 with a 6.53 earned-run average, hasn't been a problem for Molitor. He had two doubles in three at-bats and drove in three runs against Schrom last week and is 3-for-6 with five RBI this season against the right-hander.

"He's a control pitcher who likes to mix up all four pitches — fastball, changeup, curve ball and slider," Molitor said. "He doesn't have outstanding velocity. His key is locating his pitches and keeping you off balance."

"I've had some success against Kenny, but he's had his days where he's given me trouble as well. It will just be a matter of getting ahead in the count and getting some good pitches to hit."

The Indians' other scheduled starters are Rich Yett, 2-5, and Scott Bailes, 6-6. Molitor has yet to face Yett this season, but had his troubles last week against Bailes. His only hit in four appearances against Bailes last weekend was a bunt single.

"I look for the bunt on a regular basis, but the majority of third basemen take it away from me," Molitor said. "They realize I can drop one down there."

"It's been tough the last few years for me to bunt, but I keep my eyes open and look for a situation. If it's there, I'll attempt it."

While the nation's baseball fans watch him, all Molitor can do is study the opposing pitcher.

"You just focus on who you're going to face rather than who you'd rather not face," Molitor said. "But you just try to maintain your own style and not adjust too much to what pitcher is out there on the hill."

Brewers catcher Bill Schroeder, who has been there throughout Molitor's streak, isn't so sure that DiMaggio's record is beyond reach.

"Everybody says it can't be done, that it's the one record that will never be broken," Schroeder said. "Who says it can't? He sprays the ball all over. He's the kind of hitter who can do it."

In the 38 games, Molitor has 67 hits in 160 at-bats, a healthy .419 average. For the season, he is hitting .371 and only a lack of plate appearances — he missed 44 games with injuries — keeps his name off the top of the American League batting list. Boston's Wade Boggs leads with a .362 average.

Home Is Sweet To Minnesota

By The Associated Press
Steve Lombardozzi says none of the Minnesota Twins is Superman. They just seem more powerful than a locomotive and faster than a speeding bullet when playing at the Metrodome.

Kent Hrbek's bases-loaded single with one out in the ninth inning Monday night scored Lombardozzi and gave Minnesota a 5-4 victory over Detroit, snapping the Twins' six-game losing streak.

The Twins, first in the American League West by two games over Oakland, had lost all six games on the road in Detroit and Boston. They are now 43-18 at the Metrodome and 24-42 on the road.

"It's a big night just to put an end to the skid," Lombardozzi said. "We had a talk before the game and nobody was going to try to be Superman. We are all in this together."

Reliever Eric King, 6-9, gave up a leadoff single to Lombardozzi. King was relieved by Willie Hernandez, and Randy Bush advanced Lombardozzi to second with a sacrifice. Al Newman followed with a single sending Lombardozzi to third and Kirby Puckett was intentionally walked. Hrbek then lined Hernandez's first pitch to center field to score the winning run.

Jeff Reardon, 6-6, pitched the final inning for the victory.

"The key is to stay within your limitations and knowing what you can and can't do," Twins Manager Tom Kelly said. "I was just concerned that we play well tonight. I just want my guys to go for nine innings. (not to look ahead to other games). We have to continue this kind of play if we want to be in this thing in October."

Elsewhere, Toronto defeated Seattle 7-3, New York edged California 4-3 in 11 innings, Oakland beat Baltimore 7-3, Texas tripped Kansas City 4-2 and Chicago defeated Boston 6-3.

The Twins tied the score 4-4 in the seventh on Lombardozzi's run-scoring single.

The Tigers trailed 3-1 in the sixth when an RBI single by Chet Lemon and Tom Brookens' two-run double put them ahead.

Tiger Manager Sparky Anderson doesn't think the homefield makes that much difference.

"I don't play any different in any ballparks anywhere," he said. "I'm just not smart enough to do that."

Blue Jays 7, Mariners 3

Ernie Whitt and Tony Fernandez hit home runs as Toronto defeated Seattle at the Kingdome to move into a virtual tie for first place with Detroit in the AL East. The Tigers have a percentage of .593 and Toronto is at .592.

Toronto starter John Cerutti, 10-3, took a six-hit shutout into the eighth, but Jim Presley hit a run-scoring triple and Dave Valle homered to make it 7-3. Mark Eichhorn got the last out of the inning and finished the game.

Athletics 7, Orioles 3

Terry Steinbach's two-out, two-run single sparked a five-run sixth inning, and reliever Greg Cadaret pitched five innings of hitless relief as Oakland defeated visiting Baltimore.

Yankees 3, Angels 2
Mike Pagliarulo's two-out double

Trailing 3-2 in the sixth, Carney Lansford started the rally with an infield single. Mike Davis followed with a double and Mark McGwire walked.

Mike Boddicker, 9-7, struck out pinch-hitter Steve Henderson but Steinbach singled on a 3-2 pitch for a 4-3 lead. Alfredo Griffin made it 5-3 with a single to right and Luis Polonia capped the rally with a two-run triple off reliever John Habyan.

Yankees 3, Angels 2
Mike Pagliarulo's two-out double in the 11th inning scored Claudell Washington from second base and lifted New York over California at Anaheim.

Washington walked leading off against left-hander Gary Lucas, 1-3, and moved to second on Don Mattingly's grounder before scoring on Pagliarulo's drive down the right-field line.

Charles Hudson, 9-3, pitched one-hit ball in four innings after relieving starter Tommy John. Hudson has not allowed a run in 21 innings. After Hudson walked George Hendrick with one out in the 11th, Dave Righthart came on for his 23rd save, getting Bob Boone to pop to second with the bases loaded.

Rangers 4, Royals 2
Bobby Witt limited the Royals to three hits while walking eight batters in 7 1-3 innings and Scott Fletcher drove in two runs for Texas at Kansas City.

Witt, 7-6, was relieved by Mitch Williams after throwing two balls to Lonnie Smith with one out in the eighth. Witt has gone 49 consecutive starts in his career without a complete game, the most of any active pitcher.

The right-hander walked the bases loaded with one out in the fourth inning, but survived by getting Frank White and Steve Balboni on short fly balls.

White Sox 6, Red Sox 3
Carlton Fisk hit his 100th career home run at Fenway Park and Greg Walker added a two-run homer, his 23rd, as Chicago beat Boston.

Jose DeLeon, 7-11, defeated Boston for the second time in a week with the help of a fine catch by left fielder Gary Redus with the bases loaded in the fifth inning.

DeLeon, 4-0 lifetime against Boston, yielded an RBI single to Wade Boggs in the seventh and was replaced by Ray Searage. Mike Greenwell was hit by a pitch, filling the bases, and Bobby Thigpen came on to strike out Dwight Evans.

Reuschel, Knepper, Aguilera Keep Division Races Tight

By BILL BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

Welcome, the San Francisco Giants said to Rick Reuschel. Welcome back, the New York Mets said to Rick Aguilera.

Glad to have you back, the Houston Astros said to Bob Knepper.

All three pitchers had strong outings Monday night to keep the two National League division races close.

San Francisco beat Philadelphia 6-1 as Reuschel allowed five hits in seven innings in his first appearance for the Giants after they acquired him in a trade with Pittsburgh last Friday.

The Giants remained a half-game ahead of Houston in the West as the Astros defeated St. Louis 5-2 behind Knepper's seven-hitter and first complete game of the season. Knepper has a 4-1 record and an earned run average of 3.29 in his last six appearances after a 3-12 start.

The New York Mets moved within 3½ games of the first-place Cardinals in the East with a 1-0 victory over Los Angeles. Aguilera, in his first appearance since May 20, returned from an elbow injury to shut out the Dodgers on four hits for 72-3 innings.

In the only other NL game, Pittsburgh defeated Cincinnati 5-4.

Reuschel, 9-6 with a 2.69 ERA this season after shoulder surgery nearly ended his career in 1982, is happy just to be pitching and is thrilled to be in a pennant race.

"I'm basically excited just still being in the game when I was almost gone just three years ago," he said. "I'm excited because I have a chance to help out down the stretch."

Reuschel struck out a season-high eight batters and walked none as he won his first game since beating the Giants on July 22.

He said he was surprised that the Giants acquired him for pitchers Jeff Robinson and Scott Medvin.

"I was very surprised when I heard I was going to the Giants," Reuschel said. "All the talk I heard was that I was going to the (Cincinnati) Reds. I hadn't heard the Giants' name mentioned."

Giants Manager Roger Craig said he tried to take the pressure off Reuschel after the media described him as the pitcher that could carry San Francisco to a division title.

Craig said he told Reuschel, "I know you've read a lot in the media that you're going to win the pennant for us ... But we're going to win it anyway."

A walk to Chris Speier and singles by Bob Brenly, Chili Davis, Joel Youngblood and Mike Aldrete gave the Giants a 3-0 lead in the first inning. But the Phillies came back with a run in the bottom of the first on a triple by Juan Samuel and a sacrifice fly by Milt Thompson.

"The first thing I thought was, heck, don't let them come back," Reuschel said. "Just try and make good pitches and let the guys make the plays for me."

Reuschel settled down after the first and Speier hit a two-run homer in the fourth to make it 5-1. The Giants went on to get 12 hits against starter Bruce Ruffin, 10-10, and three relievers.

Astros 5, Cardinals 2

Knepper pitched his first complete game since Aug. 15, 1986 as Houston won for the 10th time in 11 games.

Knepper, 7-13, who beat the Cardinals for the second time in five days, had a 6.35 ERA before his turnaround.

"At the All-Star break, I was just thankful for the three days off," Knepper said. "I worked so hard between starts trying to figure out what was wrong, but nothing seemed to work."

Knepper said Manager Hal Lanier could have given up on him long ago.

"I appreciate it that Hal stayed with me," Knepper said. "It took a long time to get my act together."

Rookie Joe Magrane, 6-6, was the loser, allowing two runs on five hits in seven innings.

Bill Doran and Gerald Young knocked in the Astros' first two runs with singles. Glenn Davis hit an RBI double and Billy Hatcher completed Houston's scoring with a two-run homer.

Mets 1, Dodgers 0

New York got the only run it needed against Los Angeles when Keith Hernandez singled in the fourth inning.

Aguilera, 5-2, who sprained a ligament in his right elbow and was placed on the disabled list on May 21, retired 15 consecutive batters from the third inning until the eighth, when Glenn Hoffman singled with two outs.

"My goal was to give seven strong innings, and hope that I was effective," Aguilera said. "The biggest problem I could have now is to worry about the injury reoccurring. I'm just gonna forget about it, and hope it stays sound."

Randy Myers got the last out in the eighth and Roger McDowell pitched the ninth for his 19th save as the Dodgers were shut out for the 14th time this season.

Len Dykstra led off the fourth with a double off rookie Shawn Hillegas, 2-1, and went to third on a sacrifice before Hernandez singled.

Pirates 5, Reds 4

Pittsburgh snapped a four-game losing streak and extended Cincinnati's string of losses to five as Bobby Bonilla hit a three-run homer and Doug Drabek allowed seven hits in seven innings.

Drabek, 6-10, won for the fourth time in his last five decisions as the Pirates won at home against the Reds for the first time in 10 games since Aug. 22, 1985.

Bonilla's third-inning homer off Tom Browning, 5-11, gave the Pirates a 3-0 lead. The Reds, who were 6-0 at Pittsburgh last year and 3-0 this season prior to the loss, made it 3-2 in the fifth on a two-run homer by Kal Daniels, his 20th.

Barry Bonds doubled in a run and Al Pedrique added an RBI single in the fifth, and the Pirates needed the extra runs in the ninth when reliever Jim Gott gave up a two-run double to Paul O'Neill with two outs. Gott pitched the last two innings for his fourth save.

Pirates Complete Coaching Staff

East Carolina coach Mike Steele has completed his coaching staff with the addition of a part-time assistant and a volunteer aide, it was announced Monday.

Scott Lewis has been named part-time assistant coach while Robert Eppes has joined the East Carolina basketball coaching staff as a volunteer assistant.

Lewis is a 1967 graduate of Depauw University where he played four seasons under Steele. He joins his former coach as they begin their first season with the Pirate program.

A native of Anderson, Ind., Lewis was a four-year starter for Steele at Depauw as he helped lead the Tigers to a combined record of 94-20 during that stretch and a trip to the Division III final four in 1984.

"Scott was as fine an individual as I've ever coached and he is exactly the type of person that we want here at East Carolina," Steele said. "He had the qualities that we looked for as a player and will be a great addition to our staff."

Lewis, who earned his undergraduate degree in Communications, was the team's Most Valuable Defensive Player during his last three seasons.

Eppes joins the Pirate staff after serving as a graduate assistant coach at Marshall during the last two seasons.

Eppes, a Moundsville, Ala., native, was the starting center for the Thundering Herd on two Southern Conference championship teams in 1984 and 1985.

He spent his first two seasons of collegiate basketball playing at Walker Junior College in Jasper, Ala., where his head coach was current Pirate assistant Dan Bell.

Eppes transferred to Marshall when Bell was named assistant coach at the Huntington, W.Va. school.

"We have now completed our coaching staff with the hiring of Robert and Scott and it is a staff that we are very pleased with," Steele said. "Robert will be a tremendous help in working with our big men and conditioning program."

Eppes received his undergraduate degree in physical education and his master's degree in sports management from Marshall.

Ross Wishes He Had More Time

ATLANTA (AP) — Some Georgia Tech football players can't wait for the Bobby Ross era to begin, but the Yellow Jackets' new head coach wishes he had a little more time.

Ross says practice schedules have had to be altered so they would not interfere with Tech summer school classes, which still are in session. As a result, workouts did not begin until last weekend.

The season opener, against The Citadel, is Sept. 12.

"We have three weeks until the first game. That's the least amount of time I've ever had," Ross told reporters Monday during Georgia Tech's stop on the Atlantic Coast Conference sportswriters' tour.

Ross said he is pleased with his players' physical condition, but the squad has a lot of mental preparation left to do.

Tech players who met with reporters Monday said they are eager to begin playing for Ross, who was named head coach Jan. 5, following the surprise departure of Bill Curry.

Curry, Tech coach from 1980-86, is now head coach at Alabama.

The players recalled that they were shocked by Curry's departure, but that was soon replaced by enthusiasm for Ross, who led Maryland to three ACC titles from 1982-86.

"The man's record speaks for itself," said Sammy Lilly, a senior cornerback.

Guard Dean Weaver said, "When we heard he (Curry) was gone, it was a big shock. But as soon as Bobby Ross was picked, everyone was confident about things to come."

Ross said the Yellow Jackets have the talent to compete this season, but need improvement in several areas.

"We are not what you'd call a strong football team," he said. "But that's not to say we are not competitive."

Ross listed as Tech's strong points its offensive line, quarterbacks and kicking game. The backfield and injury-riddled receiving corps need work.

The defense, Ross said, is progressing as expected.

"We are not dominating, but we are a team with a defensive unit with a lot of character," Ross said. "They play hard."

Ross said the excitement generated by his arrival should fade once the season begins and people begin judging the Yellow Jackets by their on-field performance.

"Personally, I like to keep a low profile," he said. "The game is for the players."

During 10 years at The Citadel and Maryland, Ross compiled a 63-50-1 record as head coach. He takes over a Georgia Tech program that was 5-1 last season.

overs twice and turned the ball over on downs once.

Barely three minutes into the second half, Lang romped for his long TD, putting Denver up 24-0.

Don Strock, who started in place of the injured Dan Marino, passed five yards to Mark Clayton for Miami's first score late in the third quarter.

Strock subsequently hit Mark Duper on a 30-yard TD play. Both scores were set up by Bronco turnovers.

Denver countered as backup quarterback Gary Kubiak hit Jackson on a 37-yard TD strike. Jaworski's two TD passes then made it close.

"The first half couldn't have been any worse," said Miami Coach Don Shula. "That's as bad a half as I've been around. Our receivers couldn't catch the football, and our offense in general couldn't get in sync. Defensively, we couldn't stop them. We looked pretty sorry."

"In the second half, we started to make some good plays on defense and our quarterbacks hit their targets."

Shula said Jaworski, who had been with the team only seven days and still had a problem with terminology, "played very well. He worked very hard to get things right, and it showed with his poise in the pocket."

The great Walter Johnson won 23 games for the Washington Senators in 1917 but a young southpaw named Babe Ruth won 24 for the Boston Red Sox.

Giants Would Welcome Testing Of Stadium

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP)

— The New York Giants, who had four players stricken by cancer within the past eight years, say they would welcome testing of the stadium area for contaminants.

"We would not be opposed to anything that would make people feel safer," Giants General Manager George Young said Monday.

But the area was called environmentally safe by the chairman of the New Jersey Sports and Exposition Authority, which owns and runs the Meadowlands complex in which the stadium stands. And, Jon F. Hanson termed reports implying the contrary "highly irresponsible."

Meanwhile, Mark Murphy, vice president of the National Football League Players Association, said the union would like its next collective bargaining agreement to include a study of mortality rates at all NFL stadiums.

Murphy expressed concern at the number of cancer cases on the Giants' team.

"Certainly something should be done here," said Murphy, who was at the Giants' training camp at Pleasantville, N.Y. "The numbers indicate that. Who knows what it's from? Who knows what it is?"

Murphy was in camp to talk with players about negotiations to replace a contract that will expire at the end of the month. The NFLPA brought up the idea of the mortality studies earlier this year.

Tackle Karl Nelson is the latest Giant to contract cancer, having been diagnosed last week as having Hodgkin's disease, a cancer of the lymphatic system. Two other Giants players died of cancer, while one recovered.

Defensive end George Martin, the Giants' player representative and a member of the NFLPA executive committee, also endorsed the plan for testing around all NFL stadiums.

"We're approaching this thing as a union body," Martin said. "We will approach management on this and we will try to establish a fund research package to see if the environment comes into play."

Hanson said in a prepared statement that reports linking the cancer cases to the stadium "are totally without foundation, and are based upon a combination of innuendo, false inference, factual inaccuracy and uninformed speculation."

While the complex is constructed on a former landfill, he said, there is no evidence of toxic materials at the site.

"Toxics, including mercury, have been found in land adjacent to the complex," he said, adding that the tract is separated from the complex by berms constructed of trucked-in fill.

He said personnel records indicate no pattern of unusual cancer incidence among the 100 authority employees who work full-time at Giants Stadium.

Paul Wolcott, an authority spokesman, said a review of the records on Monday showed only that a part-time worker at Brendan Byrne Arena, a building adjacent to the stadium, had contracted cancer.

Nearly all water at the complex is supplied by the Hackensack Water Co., which also serves 10 area hospitals and is subject to continual monitoring by the state Department of Environmental Protection, Hanson said.

The infield of the complex's race track is irrigated by a lake in the middle of the track.

"It is not only unfortunate, but highly irresponsible, that this kind of sensational speculation should be allowed to create fear among the eight million people who visit the Meadowlands each year," Hanson said.

The team moved into Giants Stadium in 1976, and the first cancer case on the team was diagnosed early in 1980 when linebacker Dan Lloyd was found to have lymphoma. He recovered, but was forced to give up football.

Running back Doug Kotar was diagnosed as having a brain tumor in August 1982. He died 16 months later at age 32.

Running back John Tuggle was found to have a tumor in his shoulder in 1984. It eventually spread to his lungs and he died at age 25 last August.

Another person watching the Giants' situation very carefully was Clark Gaines, an NFLPA staff member.

Two years ago, a benign brain tumor was discovered in Gaines' head. At the time, he was a coach with the New Jersey Generals of the now-defunct United States Football League. The team played its games at Giants Stadium.

"I never associated my condition with it," he said. "I think studies should be done. Do you have to wait for another possible death?"

Giants safety Kenny Hill Carson doesn't believe the cancers are coincidental.

"As one educated to be a scientist, I know there is no such thing as absolute scientific phenomenon," the Yale graduate said.

"I'm tired of going through this," Giants captain Harry Carson said. "I don't know how much more I can take of guys getting ill."

"Yeah, I'm afraid," Carson said. "Every time I feel something strange in my body, it makes me wonder."

J.D. Maarleveld of the Tampa Bay Bucs was diagnosed while in college as having Hodgkin's disease. He grew up in Rutherford, a community of 21,000, adjacent to the Meadowlands. The town had 32 cases of leukemia diagnosed in 1978.

"There's definitely something going on," Maarleveld said. "There definitely seems to be a connection."

Bubbling Waters
 One of the biggest attractions at Yellowstone National Park is "Old Faithful." The geyser gushes faithfully 23 times a day. While geysers and other types of hot springs are spectacular sights, their odors repel many visitors. The stench occurs when underground minerals are released into the air through the steaming water. The brilliant colors of many hot springs come from fungi. Yellowstone was named for the yellow fungus found in many of the hot springs there.

DO YOU KNOW — In what state is Yellowstone National Park located?
MONDAY'S ANSWER — Redwoods are not deciduous trees; they are evergreens.

 At rubber bridge, an extra under-trick, even doubled, means only a few units on the score. On this hand from a duplicate event, it was the difference between winning and finishing third.

 North-South won the bidding battle. East should have cue-bid four clubs at his second turn, and his decision to double five clubs was unfathomable—either a forcing pass or a bid of five spades would have been preferable. All that remained was for South to justify his partner's faith. If he went down two tricks for minus 300, he would achieve an excellent score; down three, minus 500, would be a disaster.
 West led the nine of hearts, and when dummy appeared, declarer was quite happy with his contract. It seemed he would have no problem holding his losers to one trick in each suit. However, those hopes dimmed considerably when East won the opening heart lead with the queen and shifted to a diamond.

Now the possibility of a diamond ruff loomed large.
 Since there was no quick entry to dummy, declarer realized he was a dead duck if East held a singleton diamond. Therefore, he followed low. West won the king and returned the suit, and the first hurdle had been overcome when dummy's queen held the trick. Next came a loser-on-loser play—declarer led dummy's king of hearts and, instead of ruffing out East's ace, he discarded his spade loser. There was now no way for East to reach his partner's hand to get his diamond ruff. The defenders were held to four tricks and the title went to North-South.

Lonetree Gets 30-Year Sentence For Passing Secrets To Soviets

By DIRK BEVERIDGE
Associated Press Writer

QUANTICO, Va. (AP) — A military jury sentenced Sgt. Clayton Lonetree to 30 years in prison rather than life, after attorneys for the first Marine accused of spying conceded he made a dumb mistake for revealing secrets to the Soviets.

Lonetree showed little emotion when the jury announced the sentence Monday after less than three hours of deliberations, said defense attorney William Kunstler, who promised to file an appeal.

The eight Marine jurors also ordered a $5,000 fine, a dishonorable discharge with no pay or benefits, and a reduction in rank to the lowest pay scale.

Lonetree, 25 of St. Paul, Minn., would be eligible for parole in 10 years.

Before being sentenced, Lonetree made a brief, unsworn statement in which he told the jurors he would accept whatever penalty they imposed. He refused to say his problems were anyone else's fault.

"I'm not going to blame anybody," Lonetree said softly.

He said he was "a devoted anti-communist."

Lonetree said he was born in Chicago and lived with his Navajo mother, but he started grade school in St. Paul when he lived with his father.

"Every time I done anything, he criticized me," Lonetree said. "The only time he spoke to me, he was drunk."

He was later taken to an orphanage in Farmington, N.M., and spent several years with little contact with his parents.

Kunstler and defense attorney Michael Stuhff had predicted the jurors would impose the maximum life sentence after convicting him of all 13 espionage counts, the most serious alleging he provided the Soviet KGB the identities of CIA agents and the floor plans of the U.S.

Embassies in Moscow and Vienna.

"We weren't far off," Stuhff said. "I think the 30 years is certainly a very substantial jolt, a substantial sentence."

"I think they wanted to do less than life, but still sock it to him," Kunstler added.

Lonetree was accused of becoming a spy after falling in love with a Soviet translator, Violetta Sanni, while he was stationed as a guard at the Moscow embassy.

The prosecution said he was a cold-hearted traitor.

"A message needs to be sent out, a punishment needs to be made, that crimes like this will not be tolerated," said the chief military prosecutor, Marine Maj. David L. Beck.

"This accused has disgraced the uniform he wears."

"This accused traded, like so many pawns, the people he betrayed by putting them on a KGB target list, for reasons of his own lust and his own selfishness," said another prosecutor, Marine Maj. Frank R. Short.

But Stuhff said a life sentence would serve no purpose, and conceded that Lonetree made a big mistake.

"What do you achieve by being unduly harsh on Sergeant Lonetree?" Stuhff asserted.

"I think it's fair to say he screwed up. ... He should have recognized what Violetta was. He should have recognized what she was doing and why she was doing it."

Kunstler said Lonetree showed little emotion when he learned his punishment during the hearing, which was monitored by reporters by closed-circuit television. He had broken into tears once during the month-long court-martial, when testimony convinced him he had been used by his Soviet girlfriend.

"I think he's relieved it's over," Kunstler said. "For the first time, he loosened up a bit."

Lonetree's lawyers, who presented no witnesses during the trial, promised an appeal, saying the military judge, Navy Capt. Philip F. Roberts, railroaded Lonetree.

The chief spokeswoman for Quantico, Lt. Col. Bobbi Weinberger, said the judge would not make a statement.

Beck said he was "just glad that it's over" and that "It's a shame that somebody gets involved in espionage like that."

A sentence review must be completed before Lonetree begins serving his sentence at the U.S. Army-run prison at Fort Leavenworth, Kan. The review is expected to take at least two months.

LEAVING FOR GOOD — American servicemen leave Spandau Prison in West Berlin Monday, turning responsibility for the old prison over to British troops until the fortress-like structure is demolished. ## Appellate Court Rules Out Cash Award In Textbook Challenge

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Seven families whose award of more than $50,000 was overturned in a suit dubbed "Scopes II" pledged a U.S. Supreme Court battle to shield their children from "godless" books like "The Wizard of Oz."

"We didn't start it to lose," said Robert L. Mozert, one of the fundamentalist Christian parents whose lawsuit was rejected Monday by the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Cincinnati. "A temporary delay will not spoil the victory in the end."

The appeals court reversed a decision by U.S. District Judge Thomas G. Hull, who ruled last October that the Hawkins County school board violated the families' rights by ignoring their religious beliefs and requiring their children to read the assigned texts or leave public school.

Hull, who heard the case in Greeneville, awarded the families damages of more than $50,000. He also ruled that children could be taught reading at home and go to public school the rest of the day. The appeals court ordered Hull to dismiss the entire case.

Vicki Frost, a Rogersville mother and leading witness in the case, said she was not disappointed that Hull's decision was reversed, saying the case was not over.

"I know the Lord does all things well," she said. "Victory is always won when you do what's right. We do have God-given rights to practice what we believe."

The parents listed more than 300 objections to the assigned readings, including passages from "The Diary of Anne Frank," which was said to instruct that all religions are equal in God's eye, and from "The Wizard of Oz," which they said contradicted the Bible's lesson that all witches are bad.

The lawsuit also objected to passages in stories by anthropologist Margaret Mead, science fiction writer Isaac Asimov, and fairy tale author Hans Christian Andersen.

Mrs. Frost said the families' attorneys will first ask all 16 judges of the 6th Circuit to review the three-judge panel's ruling.

Civil Rights Veteran Rustin Dies At 77 After Surgery

NEW YORK — Bayard Rustin, a lifelong civil rights leader who helped organize the 1963 March on Washington, died early Monday at Lenox Hill Hospital of cardiac arrest. He was 77 and had undergone surgery for a perforated appendix.

Rustin's lengthy career as a civil rights activist, in which he was arrested many times for challenging segregation and chastized by radical blacks for counseling against violence, began in the 1940s.

He was field secretary and race relations secretary for the Fellowship of Reconciliation and he helped to develop the Congress of Racial Equality. In the 1950s he was special adviser to Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. and chief architect of King's Southern Christian Leadership Conference.

It was Rustin to whom King turned to plan the 1963 March on Washington that attracted 200,000 people and featured King's famous "I have a dream" speech at the Lincoln Memorial.

He is survived by three sisters and an aunt. There will be a private funeral service on Thursday in New York.

Hess Receives Secret Burial

BERLIN (AP) — Relatives of Rudolf Hess said the former deputy Nazi leader was buried secretly to avoid demonstrations by right-wing extremists.

Family members declined to say where or when Hess, 93, was buried or give other details.

Hess, a convicted war criminal who had been in Allied-controlled Spandau prison since 1946, was found unconscious Aug. 17 with an electric cord twisted around his neck. He was taken to a British military hospital and British officials issued a statement Monday saying he had committed suicide by hanging himself.

A statement released by Hess' relatives said they had buried the former Hitler aide secretly "as a result of the recent developments (in Wunsiedel) over which the family has had no influence."

Dozens of neo-Nazis were arrested by police over the weekend in Wunsiedel, the Bavarian town where Hess was to have been buried. Town officials imposed a ban on rallies until after the burial, originally slated for Wednesday.

On Monday, police blockades still ringed the town of 10,000, and authorities checked the papers of those from outside the area.

The Hess family lawyer, Alfred Seidl, said Hess' relatives did not want the grave to become a rallying point for extremists.

"The family will not be responsible if this deceased man becomes a martyr," Seidl told West German television Monday.

Earlier, Seidl said Hess' 50-year-old son, Wolf-Ruediger, had suffered a stroke late Sunday and was hospitalized in Munich.

Allied authorities issued a new statement Monday saying Hess had hanged himself.

Previously, British military authorities said only that Hess was found with "an electrical cord around his neck" and made no mention about him hanging himself.

ABC Miniseries To Highlight Napoleon-Josephine Affair

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
PARIS (AP) — Napoleon Bonaparte, who led armies back and forth across Europe, might well have approved of the one encamped in an open field before a huge country palace just outside the French capital.

There, at Chateau du Nandy, the army of movie actors and technicians filmed part of an ABC miniseries about the tempestuous love affair between Napoleon and Josephine de Beauharnais.

"It's a fascinating relationship," said producer Alfred Kelman, "with twists and turns, and ranges from true love and obsession to manipulation and suicide and fascination and compulsion. Young love, pure love, estranged love."

"Most historians say you cannot evaluate Napoleon's impact on history without taking Josephine's role into account."

The six-hour miniseries "Napoleon and Josephine: A Love Story," which ABC will telecast in mid-November, was filmed on location in various parts of France, in Morocco and in England aboard Lord Nelson's flagship Victory.

It was executive producer David Wolper who suggested to Warner Bros. Television and ABC a miniseries on the love affair between "the little corporal" from Corsica and the beautiful Creole from Martinique. Their love paralleled Napoleon's rise and fall. He eventually divorced her when she did not produce a male heir to his throne.

Kelman was at work in a trailer parked amid a caravan of trucks, trailers, motor homes and tents across a road from the gate to the chateau and its spacious gardens. In the house, Armand Assante, as Napoleon, and Jacqueline Bisset, as Josephine, were being led through a ballroom scene by director Richard T. Heffron.

The series, written by James Lee, also stars Stephanie Beacham, Jane Lapotaire, Anthony Higgins, and Anthony Perkins as Tallyrand. Patrick Cassidy plays Hippolyte Charles, Josephine's lover.

"This is not the actual site, but it is very similar to a home Josephine had in Paris early in their romance," Kelman said. "At the time because of his continued successes as general of the army of Italy, the people of France unleashed their sense of joy and admiration. Josephine was a very popular lady. The people adored Napoleon through Josephine."

The miniseries will re-create the storming of the Tuilleries and Napoleon's campaign in Egypt, but it is not a story of his battles. Wolper, however, has acquired rights to use battle scenes from the movies "Waterloo" and "War and Peace" to add more reality to the show.

"There is something very special about being on location when it's authentic and simulates reality or even emulates reality," said Kelman. "It has an uplifting feeling to the cast and gives them a feeling of belonging to a repertory theater. It gives them a sense of continuity, a sense of place. It's pleasing to feel that."

The series ends with Napoleon's exile to Elba. He went there with his second wife, Marie Louise. Josephine wrote, begging to join him, but he wrote back that it was impossible. Josephine died in 1814 before she received his reply.

Napoleon escaped for one final adventure, which ended disastrously at the little Belgian town of Waterloo. He was sent to the South Atlantic island of St. Helena and died on May 5, 1821, at the age of 51.

In Los Angeles, Wolper said he picked the story of Napoleon and Josephine because it fit his philosophy about miniseries. It was the enormous success of his production of "Roots" that turned the miniseries into an accepted type of television programming.

"After 'The Thorn Birds,' I was looking for another love story," Wolper said. "A successful miniseries cannot be contemporary. It has to be historical. It must have costumes. It should be based on a historical character or event."

Wolper said it was his production of the "Liberty Weekend" for ABC, celebrating the centennial of the Statue of Liberty, that cleared the way to film "Napoleon and Josephine" in France.

"I was very popular in France, because I included them very heavily in the special. They gave the statue to this country. The story of Napoleon had to be historically correct, which meant we had to shoot in France in the castles and palaces. The French government owns those."

Greene Recovering From Ulcer Surgery

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Actor Lorne Greene was in intensive care at Saint John's Hospital on Monday recovering from abdominal surgery for a perforated ulcer, a spokeswoman said.

Greene, 72, who starred as patriarch Ben Cartwright in television's "Bonanza," was operated on Wednesday, said spokeswoman Roxanne Lawrence.

"He is in fair condition. There were no complications and he's conscious," she said.

It won't be known until later in the week when Greene will be released, she said. Greene has been visited by his wife, Nancy, and daughter, Gillian.

A barrel-chested man with white hair and bushy black eyebrows, Greene in later years played a detective in television's "Griff" and a space commander in "Battlestar Galactica."

But the native of Canada has remained most closely tied to his image as a widower in the old West, riding herd on a trio of headstrong sons, and to commercials for dog food in recent years.

"Bonanza: The Next Generation," a television movie based on "Bonanza," which ran from 1959 to 1973, is in production, said Ms. Lawrence.

Dylan Style

CLEVELAND, Miss. (AP) — With apologies to Bob Dylan, a circuit judge dismissing a lawsuit concluded in prose that "Everybody must be sued."

"Well, they'll sue you when you fail to pay the claim."

"They'll sue you for bad faith no matter who's the blame."

"They'll sue you when you're driving to go home."

"Then they'll sue you when you're parked and all alone."

"But, I would not feel so much abused."

"Everybody must be sued."

Parodying "Rainy Day Women Nos. 12 & 35," Bolivar County Circuit Judge Eugene M. Bogen granted a summary judgment in favor of the Cleveland Moose Lodge. The suit was by a man who claimed the lodge was responsible for injuries he received in a beating and robbery on its property.

The lawsuit "advances a widely held view in our society that there is always somebody to blame for life's misfortunes," Bogen wrote in his Aug. 13 decision.

Judge To Decide Principal Suit

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Victoria Principal's lawsuit against Weight Watchers Inc., alleging that her likeness was used in a promotion without permission, will receive a non-jury hearing in federal court, a judge ruled.

U.S. District Judge William M. Byrne made the ruling Monday.

Miss Principal, who played Pamela Ewing in the nighttime soap "Dallas," is seeking at least $11 million. The trial is scheduled for Oct. 17.

The suit alleges that the brochure "Tidbits" misused her name, picture and a quotation attributed to her about keeping fit. Her attorney, William Sobel, said he had no knowledge that she ever participated in a Weight Watchers program.

An official at Weight Watchers' Los Angeles office declined comment and said no one was available in corporate headquarters in Jericho, N.Y., after business hours Monday.
