Work To Begin Soon On South Pitt Saw Mill

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Weyerhaeuser Co. officials said Tuesday engineering and construction contracts for a new mill to be built on a 200-acre site between Ayden and Grifton are in the final stages and work on the plant is expected to start within a few weeks.

John Furman, project manager for the new facility, said in a prepared release that "this facility, which is designed to produce appearance lumber, has been in the planning stages for the past two years.

"Once we understood customer and consumer needs, we were able to match new manufacturing technologies from all over the world to North Carolina's pine forests, and design a truly flexible, state-of-the-art facility."

The target startup date for the mill, authorized by the company's board of directors on Aug. 11, is early 1989.

Though the release did not say how much the computerized saw mill will cost, sources close to the project said the mill will cost about $40 million.

The new facility, at Hanrahan, will create about 140 permanent new jobs in addition to employment created through construction and purchasing activities, Furman said.

Gov. Jim Martin said of the plant: "This is a state-of-the-art forest products facility that's going to bring not only hundreds of new jobs to northeastern Noth Carolina, but also will have a substantial economic impact in terms of its tax base and other employment opportunities that will serve the new facility.

"I'm extremely pleased to welcome Weyerhaeuser to the Ayden-Grifton area," Martin said.

Based on Pitt County's present tax rate of 64-cents per $100 valuation, a tax valuation of $40 million would bring in $256,000 in new money.

Don Russell, Ayden's town manager, said this morning "we met with them (Weyerhaeuser officials) last Friday morning and we're enthused about it. It's one of the biggest things to happen in the south end of the county. I see nothing but good things happening from it. It will do nothing but be a plus for the entire county."

Bill Clark, a member of the Pitt County Development Commission, which has worked closely with the project, said today, "it seems like it's a big boost for the southern end of the county.

"We have the catfish processing plant and the plastic fabrication plant announced about a week ago. This will be a larger facility and create more jobs for that part of the county."

Clark said the Weyerhaeuser location "goes with the trend of more companies moving into rural areas instead of larger metropolitan areas," and "is a representation of what is happening in Pitt County."

And Clark said, "I hope our (Development Commission) efforts aided in the attraction of these industries."

Congress Will Get Peace Report

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Speaker Jim Wright, resisting calls to vote new aid for Nicaragua's Contra rebels until the peace process runs its course, says Costa Rican President Oscar Arias will report to Congress next month on efforts to reach a diplomatic settlement.

Wright said ambassadors of four Central American nations, including Nicaragua, are "guardedly optimistic" that the accord reached in Guatemala earlier this month by the presidents of all five Central American countries will bring peace to the region.

The Texas Democrat said the ambassadors told him during a meeting Tuesday that the peace effort is "on target, on track."

"They recognize there are pitfalls and dangers and obstacles in the road but they believe they can be overcome," Wright said.

They all agree, Wright said, "that the really difficult and tedious thing is finding the mechanism by which the cease-fire called for in the accord can be set in motion, can be monitored and verified."

The ambassadors are optimistic, Wright said, "because for the first time in a generation there is an accord among Central American presidents."

Wright said he invited Arias on Monday to address members of Congress and that Arias accepted in a telephone call Tuesday morning.

Arias will address an informal gathering of House members and senators on the House floor on Sept. 22, the day before he is scheduled to address the United Nations in New York, Wright said.

Responding to reporters' questions, Wright said there is enough aid in the pipeline to sustain the U.S.-supported Contra rebels in Nicaragua through November and that he sees no immediate need for a vote in Congress on further U.S. assistance.

He refused to speculate on circumstances under which Congress might approve such assistance, saying his aim is to focus on "peace, not war."

A $100 million package of military aid approved last year for the Contras expires Sept. 30.

Arias, in an interview with The Washington Post published today, said he hopes the Reagan administration waits until after Nov. 7, the date the peace plan is scheduled to take effect, to seek additional aid for the Contras.

"I can't and shouldn't address myself to President Reagan with a concrete request. But the events are in the hands of the Central Americans now," Arias told the Post. "We should have a chance, we deserve that chance until Nov. 7."

Arias also told the newspaper he doubts the leftist Sandinista government of Nicaragua will comply with the peace plan, but that all nations involved should focus in the next few months on striving to make it work.

Wright said that if progress is being made in the peace process on that date, "obviously, we would want to continue in that spirit" and not vote further military assistance while negotiations are under way.

"I'm going to wait just as long as the peace process is working — as long as there is any evidence of progress toward peace — before I start talking war," Wright said.

The House speaker declined to criticize President Reagan for a radio address aimed at the people of Nicaragua and voicing support for

Planning Officials To Meet

The Greenville Planning and Zoning Commission has agreed to schedule a joint meeting with Winterville and Pitt County planning officials next month to discuss the city of Greenville's southern expansion.

"The commission suggested meeting with the Winterville Planning and Zoning Board and inviting the Pitt County planning board to discuss the southern growth of Greenville and the northern growth of Winterville," said Bobby Roberson, director of planning and community development.

Commissioners, who discussed the city's long-range planning issues during a meeting Tuesday night, are looking for additional input from other affected parties, according to Dr. Wallace Wooles, the board's chairman.

"We have become aware of the problems that we are going to be attending to regarding further development in the southern part of town," Wooles said.

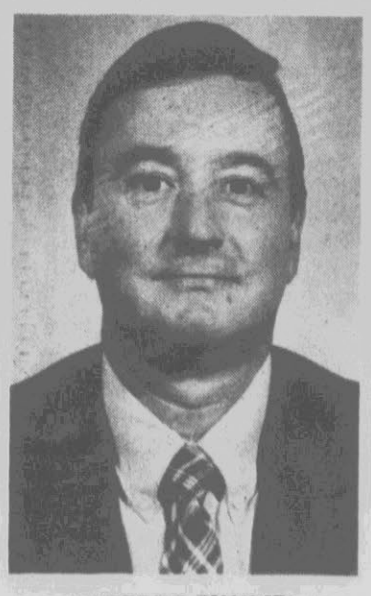
Parole Supervisor Enters Race For School Board's District 6

Elbert T. Buck Jr. of Winterville has filed as a candidate for District 6, Seat B, on the Pitt County Board of Education in the Nov. 3 election.



ELBERT T. BUCK JR.

Seat B represents the Ayden, Grifton, Swift Creek and Chicod townships.

Buck said the board must become cohesive and not be divided geographically and emotionally.

Other concerns, Buck said, are "equal course offerings for all students in the county whether they are in the smallest or largest school. It is time that we stop discriminating against our children because of the size of their school's population. I want equal opportunities for all kids."

Reduction in teacher administrative workloads and back to basics in education are other priorities, Buck said.

"If we fail to educate our children, then all the statistics gathered, the administrative workloads and pretty facilities built through capital outlays have missed their target," he said.

Buck, 42, is a 1963 graduate of Ayden High School and received a degree in business administration from East Carolina University in 1967. He also earned a master's degree from ECU in 1976 in rehabilitation counseling.

As center director with the N.C. Division of Probation and Parole, he supervises parole operations in a 21-county area. He also is a member of Rose Hill Free Will Baptist Church where he is a former member of the church board.

He is a member of the Ayden Masonic Lodge, and he holds the rank of major in the N.C. National Guard.

Buck coached Little League baseball in Ayden for eight years and served on the Ayden Schools Advisory Council for six years, then on the Ayden-Grifton Advisory Council for six years. He is a past chairman of the local advisory council.

Married to the former Joy Jackson of Ayden, Buck has two children, Todd, a senior at Ayden-Grifton High School, and Kim, an eighth grader at Ayden Middle School.

PCC Graduates 150 Students

More than 150 students received degrees and diplomas from Pitt Community College during summer commencement exercises Tuesday night in Mendenhall Student Center at East Carolina University.

Lindsay Beddard, manager of clinical support, radiology technology at Pitt County Memorial Hospital and a former PCC graduate, was the keynote speaker for the ceremony.

He told graduates that "preparedness — earned knowledge through hard work," obtained through their studies at PCC would be the key to their successful futures.

"Tonight, I would like to challenge you, the graduates of Pitt Community College, to use the preparedness you have obtained and remember that this preparation does not stop at graduation. It is a continual struggle for proficiency in your field," Beddard said.

Beddard was introduced by G. Henry Leslie, a member of the PCC Board of Trustees.

Graduates April Dawn Glonek and Michael Lee Fredette gave the students' responses.

"Last fall was one of the most trying times of my life," Ms. Glonek said. "I decided to enter into a field of education considered by most people to be a so-called man's field of work. But tonight, I look back and see I was right. I have learned a lot, made a lot of new friends and have been accepted in my chosen field of air conditioning, heating and refrigeration. Everyone at Pitt Community College has been an inspiration to me, they have had faith in me and supported me all the way," she said.

"The majority of night students chose a different path to follow when we finished high school," Fredette said. "Most of us have full-time jobs and families that we are responsible to and for. We learned from the school of hard knocks for a while, and one of those lessons told us we needed a better education to succeed. Pitt Community College has provided us with that education. With this education, some of us will be able to advance in our present jobs or better ourselves in other career opportunities."

Degrees and diplomas were conferred by Clifton Everett, chairman of the PCC Board of Trustees, assisted by E.B. Bright, dean of instruction at PCC.

Custody

RALEIGH (AP) — Stephanie Michno, a 13-year-old girl who was returned to her Harnett County mother in February after 10 years on the nation's missing-children list, has returned to New Mexico to live with her father, who fled North Carolina with her in 1977.

"I wanted to come back for a long time," Miss Michno said Tuesday in a telephone interview from her father's house in Rio Rancho, N.M. "I missed my dad and all my friends."

Stephanie said her mother, Sue T. Fowler of Lillington, agreed to let her go two weeks ago when she found airline tickets to New Mexico in her daughter's bedroom and learned that she was planning to run away. Stephanie, who returned to her father Aug. 19, had tried to run away once before.

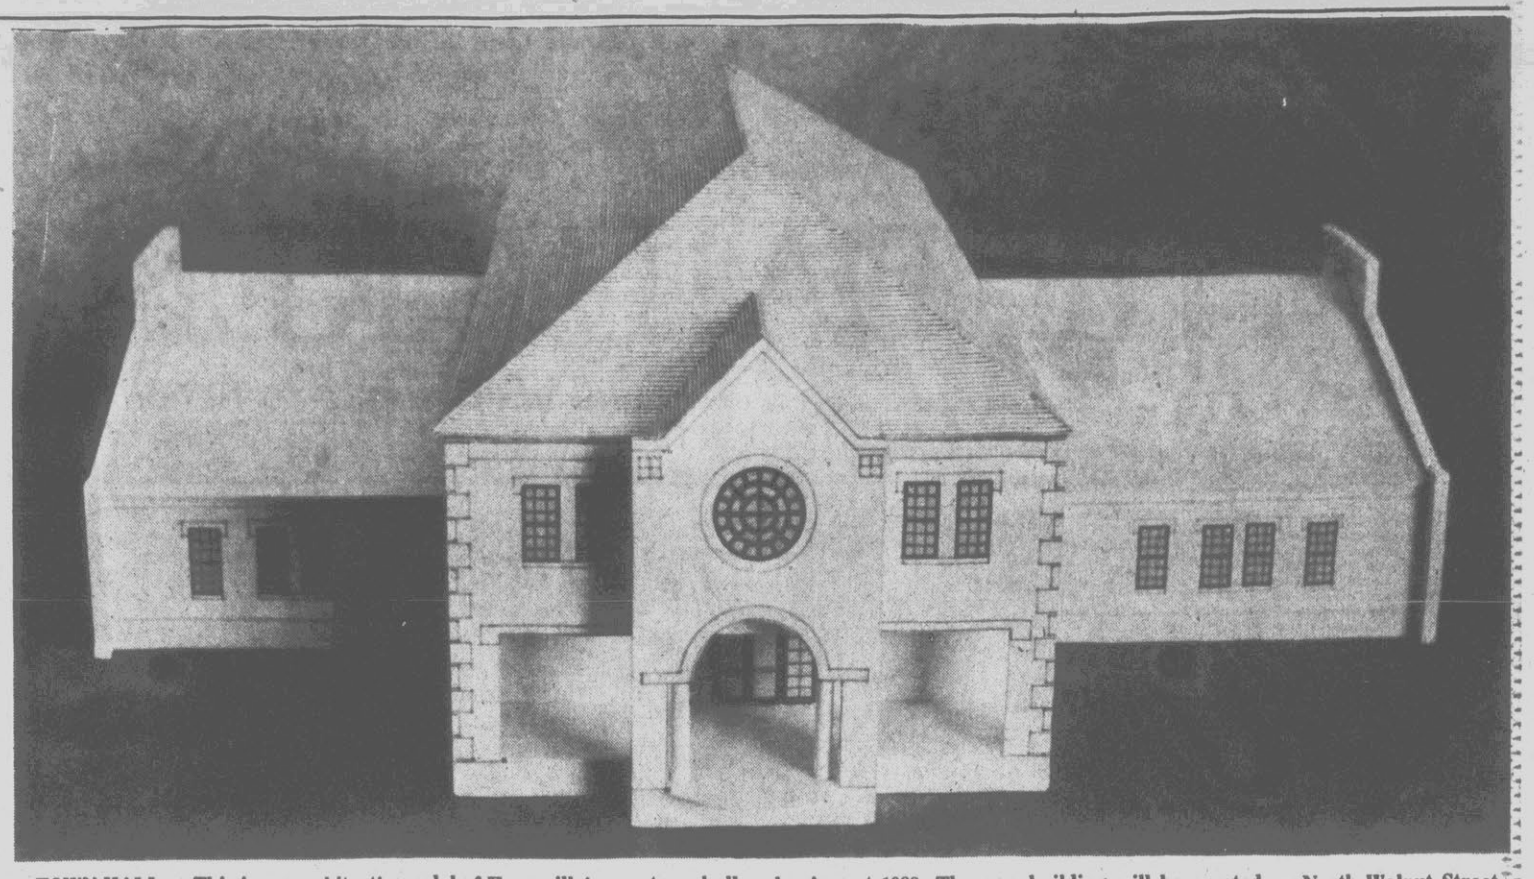
Mrs. Fowler refused to comment Tuesday. Her attorney, Gerald W. Hayes of Dunn, said she still had legal custody of her daughter.

Caldwell Fire

LENOIR, N.C. (AP) — Firefighters contained a fire on Chestnut Mountain to a 25- to 30-acre area Tuesday, but said there still was a chance that sparks from smoldering underbrush would jump containment ditches.

"They've about got it under control," said Dale Sutton, a state forest servicer based in Caldwell County. "The problem is the ... turf's so dry you get that mat of stuff burning, and you can't get it all out.

The fire's cause hasn't been established, but authorities said arson was not suspected.



TOWN HALL — This is an architect's model of Farmville's new town hall. Construction is scheduled to begin soon, with all work expected to be finished by August 1988. The new building will be erected on North Walnut Street. (Reflector Photo By Tommy Forrest)

Farmville Breaks Ground For Municipal Building

Farmville residents have broken ground for a new town hall to be completed in August 1988.

State, county and local officials attended a ceremony noting the intention to construct a 1,500-square foot municipal facility in the 200 block of North Walnut Street.

Richard Johnson, architect in the East Group firm of Kinston and Greenville, described the building and its proposed use: The traditionally designed building will have a two-story central structure flanked by two-story wings with entrances facing both Walnut and Main streets. It will house the town administrative offices, police department and jail on the first floor and a court and meeting room on the second floor. The second floor will be accessible by an elevator off the lobby near the Walnut Street entrance. The administrative office will have a drive-through window.

The predominantly steel frame structure will be clad in brick with ornamental white masonry accents. Located on the north side of the Walter B. Jones Common, the facility will provide 66 on-site parking spaces without disturbing the award-winning landscaping on Main Street and preserving the community Christmas Tree near Horne Avenue.

Speakers for the ground-breaking were Farmville Mayor Edna Earle Baker and Marvin Speight, chairman of the town's building committee. Others on the program included Town Administrator Frank Bradham and Moses Moye, a town commissioner.

Farrior and Sons of Farmville is the general construction contractor. General Heating of Greenville is the mechanical contractor; J.H. Barnes of Fremont, the electrical contractor; Pemberton of Rocky Mount, the plumbing contractor.

Farmville commissioners, when the decision was made to building a new town hall, specified that not more than $1 million be used for the project. The bids, professional fees and cost of the courtroom furnishings are now expected to be about $957,000.

The building is being constructed without an increase in taxes, Mayor Baker said.

State Polishes Bid For Research Center

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina is polishing its 400-page sales pitch to land a $4.4 billion scientific research facility, and Gov. Jim Martin said today he was confident the state would make a strong case for the superconducting super collider.

"We feel we've got an almost perfect probability of getting in the first cut, even if they only pick five sites," Martin said after the Council of State unanimously approved a resolution authorizing him to offer land for the project to the federal government.

Members of the team preparing North Carolina's eight-volume proposal will hand-deliver it to the U.S. Department of Energy in Washington on Sept. 1, the day before the deadline for submitting bids, Martin said. Staffers have been working day and night making last-minute changes.

The Council of State action was needed because the state Constitution requires the council's approval of state land transactions. If North Carolina is chosen to host the superconducting super collider, it will have to make some 16,000 acres available.

The council includes the governor and nine other elected officials, several of whom were absent from the meeting.

Martin said the council's support was essential to demonstrate the state's enthusiasm for the project. Without the resolution, he said, "all I would be able to do is ... say it's my intention to propose" making the land available.

He added that the state would not condemn any land unless and until North Carolina is selected.

Trade Deficit Grows Even Wider

By TOM RAUM
AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's trade deficit widened to $39.5 billion from April to June, the largest shortfall on record for a three-month period, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said the increase followed a deficit of $38.8 billion, the previous record, in the January-to-March quarter.

The largest increase in imports was in passenger cars from Asia. Imports of Japanese automobiles were up 15 percent while imports from Korea soared 90 percent.

The new report confirmed parallel figures released earlier which put the first quarter deficit at $42.71 billion. Today's deficit figure is lower because it reflects trade on a "balance-of-payments" basis, omitting such factors as the cost of shipping and insurance and military sales.

Analysts saw the report as fresh evidence that the U.S. trade deficit is not improving, despite more than two years of declines in the value of the U.S. dollar against other key currenices.

A weaker dollar generally makes imports more expensive and U.S. goods more competitive abroad.

But despite a dollar worth only 40 to 50 percent of what it was worth in mid-1985, imports in the April-to-June quarter increased 4 percent to $99.5 billion.

The new figures also appeared to undermine contentions by some economists that imports were decreasing, in terms of volume if not in value.

In fact, for the second quarter of 1987, the volume of imports increased 2 percent at the same time prices increased by an identical 2 percent.

All non-petroluem imports increased during the period by 3 percent to $89.5 billion. Petroleum imports rose 15 percent, to $10 billion.

Exports also showed some strength in the quarter, increasing 5 percent during the period to $60 billion. Volume of exports increased 4 percent, and prices went up 1 percent.

Agricultural exports increased 9 percent, to $7.1 billion, while non-agricultural exports increased 5 percent, to $52.8 billion.

The deficit with Japan increased $100 million during the Apil-June quarter, to $14.3 billion. The deficit with Western Europe increased $1 billion to $6.9 billion. The deficit with Canada decreased $1.3 billon to $2.6 billion.

Hydrogen Spill Forces Evacuation

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Emergency crews worked today to neutralize and remove flammable liquid hydrogen from a truck that overturned at an intersection, leaking toxic fumes and forcing up to 5,100 people to flee, authorities said.

Tuesday's accident occurred near downtown at the intersection of Interstates 70 and 71. Officials hoped to reopen the two main arteries into downtown by morning rush-hour.

Mayor Dana Rinehart said about 5,100 people within a half-mile away were asked to evacuate, but it was not known how many left their homes.

Patients in one wing of Children's Hospital were moved into hallways to avoid being hit by glass in a possible explosion, said spokeswoman Chris Campbell.

"It's 15 times more flammable than gasoline, and anything could set it off," fire battalion Chief Ron Allen said Tuesday night. "It's got the potential of a real bomb."

Fire officials today said nitrogen was being pumped into the tanker to create ammonia, and the ammonia was being pumped into another tanker for removal.

"And then there'll be the process of cleaning up the overturned tanker, and then cleaning up the roadway there," said John Ross, emergency manager for Columbus and Franklin counties.

Fire crews kept their distance from the tanker, which was carrying 15,000 gallons of liquid hydrogen. "If it blows, it'll turn into a metal Frisbee," said Assistant City Safety Director John Morgan.

The truck, owned by the Linde Division of Danbury, Conn.-based Union Carbide, was en route to Louisville, Ky., from Ashtabula.

The driver, Jerry Schoonover, 45, of Bristolville, was treated at Grant Hospital for cuts on his arms and left ear, said hospital spokesman Dan Armitage. An unidentified passenger in the truck was not injured.

Armitage said Schoonover told him he lost control of the truck going into a turn.

Liquid hydrogen is extremely flammable, and its vapors may cause dizziness or suffocation.

Farm Lenders Hold 8 Million Acres

WASHINGTON (AP) — The land taken over by banks and other lenders from farmers unable to repay loans is approximately equal to the combined area of Maryland and Delaware, an Agriculture Department analysis shows.

"Lender holdings are still increasing, but at a slower rate," the report said. "They have not peaked, but the credit crunch of the 1980s appears to be easing."

Although farmland prices have strengthened after declining a third nationally in the last five years, the report said no land boom is in sight. A large supply of farmland is on the market, preventing a rapid recovery.

Analysts said farms repossessed by lenders are not weighing heavily on the U.S. farmland market, although in some parts of the country larger property inventories have potential to depress local prices.

The report was prepared by a team of Economic Research Service experts, Jerome Stam, Greg Gajewski and Steven Koenig. They noted that many people are concerned that the inventory of farm property held by lenders has placed a lid on farmland prices in a relatively inactive market.

Four categories of lenders accounted for 74 percent of the $92 billion of farm real estate debt — excluding household debt — as of Dec. 31, 1986. The remainder was owed to "individuals and other lenders" who sold farms on contract or took mortgages as part of the sales agreement.

Holdings of the four groups are estimated at more than 7.98 million acres, valued at $3.81 billion.

"Little is known about the amount of acquired or reverted property held by this 'individuals and other lenders' group," the report said. "The focus here is on the four major categories of institutional lenders."

The cooperatively owned Farm Credit System, which includes federal land bank associations, was estimated to hold 2.77 million acres of farmland and buildings, or 34.7 percent of the total taken over by the four groups. The value was estimated at more than $1.1 billion, or 28.9 percent of the total.

Life insurance companies hold 2.42 million acres, or 30.3 percent, valued at $1.44 billion, or 37.9 percent of the estimated total value.

The Farmers Home Administration's holdings were estimated at 1.58 million acres, or 19.8 percent. The value of FmHA holdings was estimated at $848.8 million, or 22.3 percent of the total.

Commercial banks were estimated to hold 1.21 million acres, or 15.2 percent, valued at $413.9 million, or 10.9 percent of the total.

To assess the possible impact of farmland holdings acquired by lenders through foreclosures and other means, the analysts examined today's situation within the context of the overall U.S. picture and past trends.

Some observations:

—The 7.98 million acres of acquired farmland represent 0.8 percent of the 1 billion acres in the U.S. total. The $3.81 billion value is 0.7 percent of the total value of all U.S. farmland and buildings.

—An agency survey of rural land transfers for July 1985 through June 1986 showed that 3.3 percent of the acres and 3.5 percent of the value of all rural land were transferred, or sold, during the period.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Care Necessary

Drive carefully in the weeks ahead. Lives there a soul who has not heard that admonition? This time of year it must be said again in Greenville and Pitt County.

Suddenly our population has jumped by almost 15,000 as East Carolina University resumes classes. A portion of that number has never driven in Greenville before. Therefore we have a considerable number of drivers in the city who are unfamiliar with the streets. With traffic as heavy as it is even a momentary hesitation on the part of a driver unfamiliar with the streets can be the split second that causes an accident. It is prudent for the experienced local drivers to keep a lookout for the driver who is not so familiar with local traffic conditions.

The second half of the traffic congestion comes next week when Pitt County schools begin the 1987-88 school year. Instantly there will be school buses on city streets, major highways and rural roads alike. They will be loading and unloading children frequently, with all the dangerous possibilities. There will be more autos on the roads as parents drive their children to school, some students drive to school and teachers and staff make their way to schools. Not only does this put more traffic on the roads at certain hours it also creates congestion around the schools that wasn't there during the summer.

Add to all that the considerable growth that is occurring in the Greenville area and the end result will be even more traffic on the streets and highways than there was last year. It means we have to be more conscious of other vehicles. Particularly do we have to watch for children and pedestrians in a town where there are a large number of pedestrians.

We can avoid the pain and agony of a traffic accident. What we have to do is, be careful.

Not For U.S.

In recent months there were a couple of instances in which our government sought to mislead those who labor to defeat its policies. "Disinformation" was the instrument of choice but the resultant domestic uproar made it clear the American public prefers to avoid any untruths from government sources.

Actually, Washington has a lot of amateurs in the disinformation field; so it is not exactly an established practice. The Soviet media gets into the act with zest and Glasnost. Some examples?

The United States Defense Department developed the AIDS virus.

The Pentagon ousted President Nixon.

Schoolgirl Samantha Smith's letters and visits to Soviet leaders caused U.S. intelligence agencies to murder her. Each had a part to play toward a desired end.

Often such tall tales begin with a book "written" under auspices of the KGB and then "reviews" are disseminated as an above-board source of details about evil ways of the United States government. Denials are brushed aside.

Disinformation is an invaluable tool of the Kremlin and must have proven its worth or the tool would have been discarded.

Nevertheless, it's not for us.

From Streets To Hospital No Cure

The appalling spectacle of mentally disordered homeless people aimlessly wandering the streets and sleeping in doorways has justifiably alarmed the public and the lawmakers. But consigning greater numbers of the non-dangerous disordered to state hospitals by broadening the commitment laws will not solve the problem. A hospital is not a home or, in most cases, the best setting for treatment.

We must simply accept that there are insufficient resources and technology to care for, treat and rehabilitate more than a small fraction of chronic and severely mentally disordered people. Substantial misery and degradation is unavoidable, no matter what policy we adopt. The real question is how to do the best that we can for the mentally disordered and for society as a whole.

The expanded use of involuntary hospitalization will not help non-dangerous disordered persons, because we will not spend the money necessary for adequate care and treatment of increased numbers of inmates. Deinstitutionalization over the past three decades was motivated largely by the recognition that state hospitals are often human warehouses with limited therapeutic potential and that community care is preferable to involuntary hospitalization. Deinstitutionalization wasn't really tried, however. The in-patient population dropped about 80 percent nationwide in state and county mental hospitals, but the resources and community institutions necessary for successful deinstitutionalization weren't provided.

Even today, with reduced numbers of patients, the state hospitals have insufficient resources to provide adequate drug therapy, the most efficient form of treatment for the severely disordered. Moreover, the present hospital system cannot provide rehabilitation for the large numbers of people who need these services. Drugs may reduce crazy thinking, agitation and other symptoms, but they do not cure underlying pathology and they cannot teach persons to hold jobs, manage a budget or achieve the myriad other skills necessary for independent living.

If our society was and is unwilling to provide resources for decent treatment, it is naive or cynical to assert that we will spend enough in the future for expanded and ever more expensive hospitalization. We can only justify the infringement of liberty that involuntary hospitalization represents for non-dangerous disordered people if their condition improves — the discomfort that they may cause us is insufficient moral or legal justification. And no convincing evidence suggests that "reinstitutionalization" will provide the severely disordered with humane care and a reasonable chance for an autonomous life.

We will simply trade visible misery and degradation in the community for invisible degradation and misery in overcrowded and understaffed institutions. The only major published study of the effects of reinstitutionalization found that in the state of Washington, which broadened its hospitalization criteria, the state hospitals are once again overcrowded, adequate treatment is unavailable, many persons who were able to live in the community without hospitalization are now committed for long periods, and, most ironically, there is insufficient room for patients who voluntarily seek help.

Good Legislative Year For Utilities

RALEIGH — Utility bashing at the General Assembly appears to be over.

The utilities, which suffered considerable legislative losses during the sessions of the early 1980s, got practically every assault made upon them, too.

"It was a successful year," said Duke Power lobbyist Roy Wall. North Carolina Power lobbyist Hap Chalmers said, "We ended up fighting over (and beating) a lot of things that we should have never had to fight about."

From the other perspective, environmental lobbyist Bill Holman said, "It seems to me that on every issue that mattered, they prevailed."

The major rate related issue of the session was an industry proposal to create a system of "true-ups." That is, a mechanism is now part of state law that will allow utilities to refund to customers overcharges for fuel. It will also allow utilities to recover for undercharges.

'The major rate related issue of the session was an industry proposal to create a system of "true-ups." That is, a mechanism is now part of state law that will allow utilities to refund to customers overcharges for fuel. It will also allow utilities to recover for undercharges.'

Holman argued for consumer and environmental groups. He said that true-ups bill would remove all incentive for the utilities to operate efficiently their power plants. In an odd political twist, the Public Staff differed with Holman and his consumer friends, and backed the utility position. The staff said the true-ups bill was good for consumers.

The utilities see true-ups as a way to keep rates down, and therefore, as Chalmers said, as a way to keep customers happy. Probably more important to the utilities is that true-ups improve their financial stability and thus make North Carolina utilities look better in the financial markets.

One of the major issues of the utility bashing days was Construction Work in Progress, a law that allows the utilities to include in their rate base the cost of projects that have not yet come on line. This year, with almost no utility construction underway, Rep. Richard Wright, D-Columbus, renewed his efforts to repeal CWIP. He was defeated in committee.

In the low level nuclear waste area, the utilities favor North Carolina's continued commitment to the Southeast Regional Compact. The assembly refused to go along with environmentalists who sought to remove the state from the compact, thus a big legislative victory.

The bill which would have originally repealed North Carolina's entry into the compact was amended into a bill establishing siting authority for such a low-level waste disposal site. In the final days of the session, a provision was added to the bill that clouds the future of the compact, and thus threatens the utility position. It says that any state which sends its waste to North Carolina for 30 days or more must promise to stay in the compact after North Carolina's turn as the disposal site is completed. That admendment may lead other states to drop out.

The utilities also beat back a bill that would have eliminated the state income tax break for dividends from North Carolina corporations and another bill that would have required the utilities commission to investigate every major purchasing contract into which they entered.

One possible loss for the utilities was the tax trade-off on the school construction package. Utilities will pay higher corporate income taxes but it appears they will not have the inventory taxes they pay on fuel repealed. Duke's vice president John Hicks says it is debatable if the inventory tax repeal will apply to utilities fuel and that a court may have to decide.

But even if the utilities must pay tax on fuel, they'll be able to include that tax in their rate bases and pass the cost on to the public.

Labor, Feminist Endorsements No Blessing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Neither the bosses of organized labor nor the militant feminist leaders of the National Organization for Women are much impressed by the seven Democratic presidential campaigners. And that is good news for the Democrats.

Walter Mondale campaigned hard in 1984 for endorsements by the AFL-CIO and NOW. He got the backing of both groups and handed President Reagan an issue the Democratic nominee was unable to shake.

Nothing so muddied Mondale's futile presidential campaign than the allegation that he just couldn't say no to special interest groups like labor and feminists.

In their hearts, not even the most partisan Democrats expected Mondale to upset Reagan's drive toward a second term, but the 1988 campaign is another matter.

With Reagan heading into retirement, the Democrats have begun thinking they have a realistic chance of electing a president in 1988 — that is, if they can heal some of their self-inflicted wounds and do away with the "special interest" label.

AFL-CIO president Lane Kirkland huffily brushed aside Democratic chairman Paul G. Kirk's appeal to labor to delay, if not forgo, its endorsement of a candidate for president. But when the labor federation's executive council met in mid-August, Kirkland had to concede defeat for his endorsement strategy.

"There is no consensus within our ranks at the local or national level," said Kirkland, as he announced that "I don't expect a convention endorsement in October."

Kirkland's announcement reflected opinion surveys showing that labor's rank and file display little enthusiasm for any of the seven Democratic contenders.

So, the AFL-CIO freed its members to work for candidates of their choice and become delegates to the Democratic National Convention.

Similarly, the declaration by NOW President Molly Yard and her predecessor, Eleanor Smeal, that they are inclined to sit out the 1988 campaign should send waves of relief through much of the Democratic Party.

"We don't see yet presidential candidates who are going to lead this country any differently than it has been led in the last handful of years," Yard and Smeal said. "We're not going to spend our substance, energy and time to elect someone who yet again will not pay attention to what we think is important."

Just as New Right leaders like to claim they were responsible for nominating and electing Reagan in 1980, the NOW leadership often exaggerates its electoral influence.

Lynn Cutler, a deputy chairman on the Democratic Party, says NOW volunteers "bring a valuable, smart, experienced level of involvement to a campaign."

But she also reacted sharply to the suggestion that there is little difference between the Democratic contenders and the Reagan administration on matters of interest to feminists.

"It's nuts to say our guys are going to carry the same agenda as Ronald Reagan," she said.

The AFL-CIO and NOW aren't the only folks apparently unimpressed by the current Democratic field.

There have been recent hints that the party's fallen front-runner, Gary Hart, feels the same way.

While Hart vacationed in Ireland, his former campaign manager speculated about his possible return to the race. The prospect was raised by Bill Dixon, who managed the Hart campaign before it collapsed following disclosure of the former senator's relationship with Donna Rice, a Miami model.

Another former campaign aide swiftly relayed word from Hart that no such comeback was contemplated. Dixon insisted he still thought Hart would decide to wage "a non-traditional campaign" to raise issues the current contenders weren't discussing.

Strength For Today

A high school student who was not very good at spelling wrote recently in an English composition, "God is conspicuous in the world by his presents." He meant to say, of course, that God was conspicuous by his "presence."

But regardless of this spelling error, God's presents are indeed conspicuous in the world. We live surrounded by them. If we are fortunate enough to live in a place in which men have not destroyed the beauties of nature and replaced them with man-made ugliness, we see God's presents in our physical surroundings.

Even if our home is not in the countyside, however, God's presents are still conspicuous. His best gifts are in our fellow human beings. The love within our families, the loyalty of our friends, merely the abiity to be happy — these too are His gifts.

Mistaken Expectations

Analysis

Each day that goes by in the Persian Gulf leads to new reports of weaknesses in U.S. military forces.

There are reports of divisions among planners as to how the task force should be commanded. There are reports over the delays in the modernization of American mine forces. World War II minesweepers have to be deployed halfway around the world. An assault carrier breaks down on its way to the region. U.S. warplanes fire air-to-air missiles and appear to miss. The largest naval task force since the Vietnam War has to be sent to the gulf to deal with what so far is a very minor threat.

Many of the resulting criticisms are individually correct. But before we accuse our entire defense establishment of being the "gang that couldn't shoot straight," we need to examine our expectations, the nature of war, and what is really happening in the Persian Gulf.

To begin with, our expectations are far too demanding. We have accepted strategic commitments all over the world, then have failed to fund them adequately. We expect our military to maintain global nuclear purity and assume the burden of defending Western Europe and Japan and Northeast Asia and project power everywhere else in the world. At the same time, we fund the military to fight, at most, one of those wars, and Congress increasingly attempts to micromanage every decision from the modernization of a barracks to the choice of a weapon system.

We can't have an all-volunteer-force structure and annual defense expenditures that are less than 75 percent of what is needed to meet all our commitments, and still have the readiness and effectiveness that we actually need. The end result is that American defense planning involves an endless series of compromises. We force our military forces to reduce or cancel the weapons and capabilities for which there is no immediate priority, and we ask each element of the forces and weapon systems to do too much. We can't have it both ways.

We also need to understand the true nature of war. War is not an efficient business, and we have entered every war in our history unprepared for the specific conflict that followed.

In the Persian Gulf we are using military force in an area in which Iran has been fighting for seven years and has been building up its naval Revolutionary Guards units for at least two years. We are using equipment that has not been designed to fight in this specific region, and we also did not have forces tailored to fight in the gulf. Most of our newer weapon systems have never been tested in actual conflict, and the bulk of the manpower has never fought in any previous war. Things can and will go wrong.

It is absurd to expect complete and instant success. War is not predictable and controllable. The conditions are always new, changing and complex. Success always means improvising over time. No command structure in military history has ever been regarded as adequate, even by the major commanders participating in a victorious conflict. Weapon systems always fail to perform as predicted. As military analyst Edward N. Luttwak has pointed out, the difference between victory and defeat is generally the difference between 15 percent efficiency and 10 percent efficiency — not between 95 percent and 90 percent efficiency.

Finally, we need to realize that we are in the gulf for the long haul — until there is a lasting cease-fire or a peace. The United States should certainly have been far more ready to deal with the threat from Iranian mines. No one, however, could really anticipate whether Iran's first test of our will would be mines, the taking of hostages, suicide attacks, striking at ships that we did not plan to escort, political insurgency like the Iranian uprising at Mecca, attacks on gulf political leaders or sabotage.

Even now no one can predict the next threat, and no one can totally eliminate our vulnerability to such Iranian action. We cannot provide all the military capabilities that we need to deal with every contingency. We have to concede Iran enough blows to clearly justify military retaliation. We can capitalize on Iran's vulnerability to any major reduction in its oil exports or arms imports only if it gives us clear cause in the world's eyes, and we must continue to emphasize the search for a cease-fire over substituting offense for defense.

Above all, we need to remember that our intervention in the gulf cannot be treated as another Lebanon, or even another Vietnam.

We are talking about a vital strategic commitment involving more than 50 percent of the world's proven oil reserves. We are also talking about a presence that may well have to last until Iran and Iraq reach a peace or a cease-fire.

During the months or years that this will take, there will many more cases in which our military makes mistakes or is proved vulnerable. We cannot, however, go home and expect to stay a global power. In fact, we have to learn to accept the realities of our military commitments, or "the gang that can't shoot straight" will end up being the gang that has to be perfect or isn't allowed to shoot at all.

Enforce Current Laws

Small and medium-sized airlines are disappearing, and the flow of new entrants has slowed to a trickle. In the past year, nearly every major U.S. airline has acquired, or proposed to acquire, another carrier of significant size. Some analysts and most of the large airlines assure us that the domination of the industry by a few giant carriers will not lessen competition. Unfortunately, this claim conflicts with the facts.

An example: Delta Airlines carries 54 percent of the passengers out of Atlanta. From many large cities in the United States, Delta offers the only single-plane service to Atlanta. The average passenger traveling to or from Atlanta on Delta pays 22 cents per mile. Yet, the average fare on all other Delta flights is only 13 cents per mile.

Could the cost of using Atlanta's airport be that much higher than at most other cities? Apparently not — Delta passengers who only change planes at Atlanta pay just 18 cents per mile. These are customers for whom Delta must compete with airlines that would route the travelers through other hubs. No such direct competition exists for most people traveling to or from Atlanta.

Nor is Delta unique. All the large airlines — American, United, Delta, Eastern, Northwest, USAir, Piedmont and TWA — charge substantially higher pricesfor flights to or from their major hubs than on the rest of their systems. Carriers with small shares at the same airports do not charge significantly higher prices than on their other routes.

Airline deregulation was based on the premise that prices on a route would be disciplined by the threat of competition, even if actual competition was absent. Yet, factors commonly associated with a dominant share of traffic at an airport — controlling most of the airport gates, having the most attractive frequent-flyer program for local residents, giving bonuses to area travel agents who generate large revenues for the airline, being the primary buyer of many local support services, and having a dominant reputation-substantially lessen that threat of competition.

Imagine that you run a small airline that is considering entry into the St. Louis market. Most St. Louis business travelers have already built up mileage on their TWA frequent-flyer plans. In addition, they realize that most of their future trips will still be on TWA, since it has more than half the flights out of St. Louis. Charging a few dollars less than TWA is not going to induce these most valued customers to switch, particularly when the fare is paid by their employers, while they get the frequent-flyer rewards. In fact, the price difference will have to be quite large, thereby discouraging entry in the first place. Frequent-flyer programs also increase the cost of switching among established airlines, thus lessening price competition among the large carriers.

These advantages of being the major carrier in a city are likely to lead to the demise of small airlines and to diminished competition among the six or seven carriers that will remain.

Is deregulation to blame for this outcome? Absolutely not. Airline deregulation was never meant to restrict enforcement of the anti-trust laws. If the Department of Transportation begins to enforce these laws in the airline industry, it will still be possible to enjoy the benefits of deregulation without suffering the costs of uncontrolled monopoly pricing.

Bacterial Infection Found In Only One Dolphin Dying On N.C. Coast

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

More than twice the normal number of dead dolphins have washed up on North Carolina beaches in recent weeks, but a state official says only one has shown evidence of bacterial infections that have killed hundreds of the mammals farther north.

Rhett White, director of the North Carolina Aquarium in Manteo, said in a telephone interview that north-to-south offshore currents and recent northeast winds may have helped bring carcasses ashore. But he was unable to explain why 16 dead dolphins have appeared this season when the average is six.

"The other thing that I find a little bit interesting, although I have no explanation for it, is most of the ones I have checked have been fairly young. They're immature," he said.

More than 200 dolphin deaths have been reported from New Jersey to North Carolina, including 45 in Delaware.

"At this point, I think we can still feel like we're on the fringe of the problem," White said. "It's primarily from the mouth of the Chesapeake northward."

Meanwhile, an official said at least one of the dolphins that have washed ashore in South Carolina and Georgia since Friday died of the same type of bacterial infection that killed hundreds of dolphins farther north, an official said Tuesday.

Stranded dolphins were reported Monday at Fort Pulaski National Monument near Savannah and Friday in South Carolina at Hilton Head Island, Beaufort County and Charleston Harbor.

The dolphin at Charleston Harbor died of a bacterial infection similar to those killing dolphins farther north, said Brian Gorman, a spokesman for the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration's dolphin investigative team.

That dolphin, which had been bitten by sharks, was the only one from South Carolina examined by the NOAA team, he said.

"We're kind of on alert to see if there are more strandings in the Carolinas," Gorman said. "We're just kind of hoping it doesn't happen."

Coastal researchers have made no special efforts to monitor the problem, relying instead on the seasonal swarm of vacationers at the beaches.

"This season of the year there are usually enough people on the beach that if an animal washes ashore we're usually notified within a couple of hours," White said.

Meanwhile, scientists on the research vessel Peter W. Anderson continued a cruise of the Atlantic coast, testing the water for bacteria, contaminants and oxygen deficiency.

Researchers from the Smithsonian Institution and other agencies studying the dolphin ailment Tuesday went to a remote beach in Currituck County where a 40-foot sperm whale washed ashore Monday.

Brian Gorman, a spokesman for the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration in Virginia Beach, Va., told the News and Observer of Raleigh the whale did not have lesions and other skin ailments like the dead dolphins.

"It appears to be an unrelated stranding," he said.

Martin Opens New Program To Help Female Inmates Teach Kids Reading

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Two prisoners helping with a new illiteracy program in prison say learning to read will attract female inmates because it will help them to teach their children.

"There's people here that ... don't want to go to school, because it ain't doing nothing for them," said Kelly Bratcher, one of two inmate representatives selected for the MOTHEREAD program's advisory board. "But if it's going to benefit their children, they're going do it because (for) a lot of these women, your children is your life."

Ms. Bratcher, serving a 13-year sentence for second-degree murder, said the program would improve her relationship with her 6-year-old son.

The other inmate advisory board member, Cecelia Gray, a convicted armed robber and mother of four, said the program would make visits with her children more meaningful.

"It won't be like it is now where we just sit and hold hands or try to find a way to play patty-cake without moving," Ms. Gray said.

The program, unveiled Tuesday by Gov. Jim Martin, will begin next January at the North Carolina Correctional Center for Women in Raleigh.

"Nowhere has illiteracy reaped what it has sown any more than with our nation's prison population," Martin said. "Nowhere are the scourges of illiteracy more keenly felt than with imprisoned women who are mothers and their children."

In addition to reducing the illiteracy rate, the program is meant to improve prisoners' self-image, making them less likely to return to crime after their release, officials said at a prison news conference.

ACTION, a federal volunteer agency, has awarded a $50,000 grant to the state Department of Cultural Resources to develop and implement the program on a pilot basis, department secretary Patric Dorsey said. Private donations are being sought.

"We think you have a winner here," said Rick Ventura, an ACTION official who predicted MOTHEREAD would become a model imitated nationwide.

A consultant and two Volunteers in Service to America (VISTA) representatives have been hired to start and operate the program.

Eventually, the program might be expanded throughout the state prison system, according to Nancye Gay, project director and a Department of Cultural Resources consultant.

The women's prison was chosen for the pilot phase because children of inmates are five times more likely to be illiterate than other youngsters and mothers are especially likely to want to help, Ms. Gay said. The average woman at the prison reads on a sixth-grade level.

About 75 percent of the 560 inmates at the Correctional Center for Women are mothers of children under 18. Collectively, the inmates have some 1,400 children, said prison superintendent Jennie Lancaster. Visits are allowed once a week.

"What's happening to their children is the biggest problem for these women, the feeling that they can't do anything for them," Ms. Lancaster said. "Teaching them to read is a legitimate part of parenting ... maintaining a parental tie."

Officials will spent the next few months planning a curriculum. When the program starts next year, two groups of 25 inmates will be chosen to participate in 10-week classes.

Although details have yet to be worked out, the program will teach reading skills using children's books, videotapes and storytelling, Ms. Gay said. Some may involve topics the women have trouble discussing with their children, such as crime and divorce.

The program is based on research done by Arlene Fingeret, an adult education professor at North Carolina State University. She says adult literacy programs should boost motivation by emphasizing the students' strengths, such as their care for children, instead of their weaknesses.

State Republicans Going Fishing To Raise Funds

RALEIGH (AP) — The state Republican Party is hoping to reel in $100,000 for its 1988 campaign war chest by sending out 200 two-man teams to fish for bass instead of just money.

The GOP pro-am bass tournament, dubbed the "Governor's Cup," tentatively is scheduled for Nov. 20-21, said Robert Jones, the state GOP spokesman who came up with idea of fishing for funds.

"We've discovered what an amazingly broad interest there is in these tournaments," Jones said Tuesday. "We've got a lot of groundwork to do, but I think we're going to be able to pull it off. We do have definite plans to give this the ... college try."

The location of the tournament has not been decided. Jones said organizers were looking at Falls of the Neuse Lake northwest of Raleigh, B. Everett Jordan Lake in Chatham County, and Kerr Lake and Lake Gaston, both of which straddle the North Carolina-Virginia border.

Word of the event has made its way to fishing professionals from a number of states, and interest appears high, Jones said.

The World Bass Association has signed on as sanctioning agency, meaning it will provide staff to run the tourney, set the rules, certify fish weigh-ins and perform other tasks, he said. The WBA is trying to arrange national television coverage, Jones added.

The tourney is being designed for 200 two-person teams — each consisting of one pro and one amateur — with pairings determined in drawings.

The fishermen will not kill their catch. The object is to keep the fish alive until they can be weighed, after which they are released. Contestants lose points if their fish die, Jones said.

Aside from raising money, the GOP hopes to benefit from the publicity, he said. Republicans are trying to get some well-known people to participate, Jones said, declining to say whom.

"It's going to be a gala, a pleasant affair, and of course the public will be invited," he said.

State's Banks See Robberies Increase

CHARLOTTE (AP) — North Carolina's 94 bank robberies so far this year exceed the total for all of last year and there are four robbery-prone months to go, an FBI spokesman said Tuesday.

"It's going to be a banner year," said agent Chuck Richards in Charlotte. "Normally robberies pick up in the fall."

Richards said 92 bank robberies were reported in the state last year, the same as in 1985.

The 35 bank robberies in Charlotte through Monday is the highest in the state and pushing toward a record. Only 16 bank robberies occurred in Charlotte last year.

Dog Lawsuit

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — A Fayetteville woman has filed suits claiming a neighborhood dog bit her 4-year-old son and then attacked her, causing the premature birth of a child who died 12 hours later.

Tammie S. Berry filed three lawsuits in Cumberland County Superior Court against her neighbors, Robert and Corine Mays, on behalf of the estate of the infant, Loren J. Peake, and her son, Gregory Berry. Each lawsuit seeks more than $10,000 in compensatory damages plus punitive damages.

The lawsuits charge that the German shepherd had been allowed to roam the neighborhood, had chased other adults and had attacked and mauled other dogs in the neighborhood. In addition, the dog had growled and barked at children and had tried to bite children on several occasions — and had in fact bitten a child at least once, the lawsuit said.

Ms. Berry, who was about 24 weeks pregnant, was hospitalized from Sept. 15 until Sept. 28, when she prematurely delivered a 2-pound, 7-ounce boy. The infant died about 12 hours later.

Consultant

RALEIGH (AP) — The state Department of Correction last year paid $69,853 too much to a consultant hired to persuade doctors and hospitals to lower the fees they charge for treating inmates, an internal audit says.

Bills submitted by Correctional Health Care Associates overstated the savings it generated, resulting in the overpayment, the audit says. The Missouri-based company gets a percentage of the savings it generates.

Thus far, the Correction Department has paid CHCA $170,986. Payment of another bill for $41,599 has been delayed, pending resolution of questions raised by the audit.

Easements

WILMINGTON (AP) — A dispute involving the easements of an abandoned railroad track between Wilmington and New Bern was settled Tuesday in Wake County Superior Court.

A lawsuit was filed nearly two years ago by the state attorney general's office against Seaboard System Railroad, now CSX Transportation Inc. The 89.7-mile track paralleled U.S. 17 in New Hanover, Pender, Onslow and Craven counties.

The suit was filed after Seaboard sold a quit-claim deed to easements to Grant Sagraves of Hampstead. Sagraves agreed to pay the railroad company $27,700 for the property. He eventually sold a small portion of the land to an individual for $250.

But Superior Court Judge I. Beverly Lake Jr. signed a court order Tuesday that declares the transactions void. CSX and Sagraves were ordered to refund the money, said James Gulick, a special deputy attorney general who heads the consumer protection and anti-trust division of the attorney general's office.

Treatment

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Cancer patients in outlying communities may soon no longer need to go to large medical centers to get the latest cancer treatments.

Dr. Charles Spurr, chairman of the newly formed Southeast Cancer Control Consortium, said the umbrella group of 13 hopitals will bring experimental therapies to community hospitals that could not afford them alone.

"Now we have the opportunity to get the newest treatments into the community so that a person can get the same kind of care they could only get at highly specialized centers," Spurr said.

The consortium, comprising hospitals in North Carolina, South Carolina and Tennessee, includes Forsyth Memorial Hospital and Moses Cone Hospital in Greensboro.

Lots Of Roses

PARKTON, N.C. (AP) — Things had not been coming up roses for Beth Helton. So Danny Tew, her boyfriend, decided to change that.

Ms. Helton said she ran to hide Saturday night when she saw a florist's van coming up the long dirt driveway to her mother's rural Robeson County mobile home. She thought that florist Gene Chalaire wanted her to help him sell roses, as she occasionally does.

Instead, Chalaire started to unload 14 dozen long-stemmed red roses addressed to "That little girl out in Parkton."

"She had been having some bad luck, nothing major," Tew said. "She was just feeling down. I thought it would cheer her up."

"It did," Ms. Helton said.

Tew and Chalaire would not disclose the cost of the flowers, but other florists estimated the cost at about $600.

Man Killed

WILMINGTON (AP) — A 70-year-old man was shot and killed by a Pender County sheriff's deputy Monday after the elderly man reportedly attacked another deputy with a screwdriver, authorities said.

John Cromartie of the Pender County town of Willard was shot in the right shoulder by Deputy Kim Goodin when he and Deputy Kevin Milliken went to serve an involuntary commitment order on Cromartie about 5:30 p.m. Monday, Pender County Sheriff Mike Harvell said Tuesday.

Goodin has been suspended from the department with pay until an investigation is completed by the State Bureau of Investigation, Harvell said.

Conviction

KENANSVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A Duplin County Superior Court jury convicted Bonnie Sue Clark Tuesday of first-degree murder and conspiracy for her part in helping her boyfriend murder her estranged husband.

The jury deliberated about 2½ hours before returning guilty verdicts on both counts. The same jury was scheduled to begin considering today whether Mrs. Clark will face a death penalty or life imprisonment.

Mrs. Clark, 26, was charged in connection with the stabbing death of 34-year-old Glennie L. Clark. Clark, a Marine staff sergeant, was found stabbed to death in his wife's car outside a Jacksonville movie theater on Feb. 1.

Robert Bacon Jr., with whom Mrs. Clark was living at the time of the murder, was sentenced to death June 4 in Onslow County after being convicted of murder and conspiracy in the case.

Court Backs Tobacco Companies' Claim Warning Rules Out Liability

BOSTON (AP) — Federally mandated warning labels on cigarette packages are enough to protect tobacco companies from smokers' claims that the labels fail to adequately warn of health dangers, a federal appeals court has ruled.

The decision Tuesday by the 1st Circuit Court of Appeals in Boston stemmed from a $3 million lawsuit filed in 1983 against Liggett and Myers Tobacco Co. of Durham, N.C., by the heirs of Joseph C. Palmer of Newton, a heavy smoker who died from lung cancer in 1980.

Palmer's family said Palmer smoked three to four packs of L&M cigarettes a day until his death.

The family's suit blamed his death on smoking and claims the tobacco company was negligent in failing to provide adequate warnings about the risks of smoking. Attorneys for Liggett and Myers claimed the federally required warnings about the hazards of smoking shielded the company from liability.

The Liggett and Myers appeal stemmed from a federal judge's ruling in April 1986 that health warnings on cigarette packages do not protect tobacco companies from lawsuits.

In Tuesday's ruling, the court said the Federal Cigarette Labeling and Advertising Act, hammered out by Congress in 1965 with much debate and controversy, pre-empted the Palmer family's state-based claim.

"It is inconceivable that Congress intended to have that carefully wrought balance of national interests superseded by the views of a single state, indeed, perhaps of a single jury in a single state," wrote U.S. Circuit Court Judge John R. Brown.

A similar ruling was handed down Friday by the 11th Circuit Court of Appeals in Atlanta. That ruling also said the federal labeling and advertising act pre-empts state laws regarding product liability.

The 1st Circuit Court decision also showed the delicate balance Congress struck between public welfare and the economy when enacting the federal labeling act.

According to Brown's ruling, Congress "did so with the express intention of striking a balance between its concern for the national health policy of smoking education and its protection of the trade and commerce aspects of the tobacco industry."

Josiah Murray, general counsel for Liggett, called the decision "very favorable" and said it was "consistent with the position we've always taken in that we have no liability."

The Palmers' lawyer, Robert Potters of Boston, was on vacation and unavailable for comment, according to his secretary.

The three-judge panel also found such lawsuits would "abrogate utterly the established scheme of health protection as tempered by trade protection."

The court also ruled that many precedents set by other cases in which people were harmed by dangerous products did not necessarily apply

Asheville Pupil Has AIDS-Type Illness

ASHEVILLE (AP) — An Asheville High School student diagnosed as having an AIDS-related illness is being allowed to remain in school, but will be closely monitored and removed from school if his condition threatens others, school officials say.

Superintendent Douglas Pearson said school officials were notified in March that the student has AIDS-related complex, a disease with symptoms that are milder than AIDS. It is the first known case of the disease in North Carolina's public schools, state officials said.

Pearson said a committee made up of an infectious disease specialist, Asheville High staff members and representatives of the central office evaluated the case and decided the student should be allowed to remain in school.

"Based on the information I've received from the doctors who have examined the student, the student is not dangerous to other students or the faculty through any kind of contact that would occur at school," Pearson said Tuesday.

"Neither the board of education nor I would allow our students or our faculty to be exposed to a hazardous situation," Pearson said.

"Other than the ARC diagnosis, the student is perfectly healthy and has no evidence of any other illness," he said.

School officials followed a communicable disease policy adopted by the board of education in April 1986 "to the letter" in deciding on a course of action, Pearson said, and notified Asheville High staff members who might work directly with the student during the year.

"We are fortunate that the board was wise enough to have a policy in place to govern this situation," he said.

Dr. Rebecca Meriwether, head of the Communicable Disease Control Branch of the state Department of Human Resources, said the case is the first to her knowledge that has occurred in the state's public schools.

She said three cases of AIDS have been reported in the state in children under the age of 13. Two have died, and the third is not enrolled in public schools, she said.

Acquired immune deficiency syndrome destroys the body's immune system and its ability to fight disease, leaving its victims vulnerable to life-threatening illnesses.

Many people infected with the virus remain healthy and free of symptoms for years. Others develop ARC, whose symptoms can include fatigue, fever, loss of appetite and weight, diarrhea, night sweats and swollen lymph nodes in the neck, armpits or groin.

U.S. Rejects Gorbachev Proposal For U.N. Summit On Disarmament

By ANDREW KATELL
Associated Press Writer

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Mikhail S. Gorbachev offered to travel to the United States this year if the Security Council agreed to a summit on disarmament and development, but the U.S. State Department rejected the idea.

The Soviet leader's proposal was announced Tuesday at the United Nations by Vladimir F. Petrovsky, a deputy Soviet foreign minister. Hours later, the State Department said the idea was "flawed and untenable."

It had been considered unlikely that the United States, one of the 15 members of the Security Council, would agree to such a summit.

In its rejection, the State Department reiterated the U.S. position that there is not a direct link between disarmament and Third World economic development.

Arms reductions should be pursued "on their own merits" it said, adding, "no country has been more generous than the United States in providing economic and humanitarian assistance to the developing world."

Petrovsky said in an interview that if Gorbachev came to the United Nations, the Soviet leader might also meet with President Reagan if enough progress had been achieved on arms control talks.

"He would like to come to the United Nations to attend a summit of the Security Council but the other members would have to agree. He could also meet with President Reagan if there's something for him to sign," Petrovsky said in the interview.

Asked about the timing of such meetings, Petrovsky said Gorbachev would be "willing to come tomorrow" if the Security Council agreed to his proposal.

For months, rumors have persisted that Gorbachev might visit the United Nations to address the 42nd session of the General Assembly, which runs from Sept. 15 until mid-December.

Petrovsky announced the Gorbachev offer in a message read to the 140-nation International Conference on the Relationship between Disarmament and Development.

"It would be useful to discuss in principle the problems of disarmament and development at a special meeting of top leaders of member states of the U.N. Security Council," Gorbachev said in the message, translated into English by the Soviet U.N. Mission.

He did not say when he wanted the summit to be held.

The United States and the Soviet Union, as permanent members of the Security Council, have veto power over its decisions.

Gorbachev's message also proposed that the United Nations create an international fund from savings from cuts in arms supplies. The money would be distributed to developing countries.

Because of its opposition to linking disarmament and development, the United States sent no representatives to the conference that began at U.N. headquarters Monday and runs through Sept. 11.

"We ... see no merit in the Soviet proposal for a special, high-level meeting of Security Council members to discuss a concept which is flawed and untenable from the outset," the State Department said in a statement.

Arms reductions should be pursued "on their own merits" it said, adding, "no country has been more generous than the United States in providing economic and humanitarian assistance to the developing world."

The State Department said it was concerned such a conference could serve as "a vehicle for a propaganda attack against the industrialized world's defense expenditures as the main cause of Third World economic problems."

Petrovsky, in the interview, said that despite U.S. objections, he was hopeful Washington would agree to a Security Council summit to discuss the results of the current disarmament and development conference.

Gorbachev repeated his charge that the United States and West Germany are blocking progress on an arms control agreement by their stance on 72 West German Pershing 1A missiles, which have U.S.-controlled nuclear warheads.

West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl announced today that with a U.S.-Soviet agreement to scrap medium- and shorter-range nuclear missiles, his country would not modernize its Pershing 1A missiles. He promised the missiles eventually would be destroyed.

The United States has said the missiles belong to West Germany and are exempt from superpower negotiations because they are part of an agreement that existed before U.S-Soviet talks arms began in Geneva.

Negotiators for both sides say agreement may be near on superpower elimination of all their intermediate nuclear weapons, those with ranges of 300 to 3,000 miles.

Earlier Tuesday, Soviet arms negotiator Viktor P. Karpov said in an interview carried by the official Tass news agency that the Pershing 1-A issue was holding up a superpower summit.

Bonn Will Destroy Missiles If U.S., Soviets Sign Pact

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Chancellor Helmut Kohl said today West Germany will not modernize its Pershing 1A missiles if the superpowers agree to scrap medium- and shorter-range nuclear missiles. He promised the Pershings eventually would be destroyed.

Kohl told a news conference the West German offer was contingent on a "fully signed and completed" arms agreement between the United States and the Soviet Union.

Such an accord would have to include a timetable for the removal of all medium- and shorter-range missiles worldwide, he said.

"I am prepared to say today that when all Soviet and American (medium- and shorter-range) missiles are finally scrapped, then the Pershing 1A missiles will not be modernized, but rather destroyed," Kohl said.

The Soviet Union has repeatedly said it would not sign a disarmament agreement at the superpowers' Geneva arms talks unless it includes West Germany's 72 Pershing 1A missiles, shorter-range rockets that have nuclear warheads controlled by the United States.

But the United States has said the missile system is West German, thus not a part of the Geneva talks.

Kohl said both the Pershing 1As and their warheads eventually would be destroyed.

"Of course the warheads would be destroyed as well," he said in response to a question. "They are the principle concern."

The Bonn government has repeatedly said recently that it would hold on to its Pershing 1As — which had been slated to be taken out of service in the early 1990s — and retain the right to modernize the missiles. Kohl's announcement appeared to be an attempt to keep missiles from becoming the sole barrier to an international arms accord.

Kohl accused the Soviet Union of making the aging and outmoded Pershing 1A system an obstacle at the Geneva talks in an effort to hold up a disarmament agreement.

"The Soviet demand to include the Pershing 1A missiles in the Geneva negotiations is unfounded and is an attempt to create an artificial barrier to the conclusion of an agreement," said Kohl, reading from a prepared statement.

Besides the Pershing 1As, a major barrier to an East-West arms accord is the issue of verification — how each side will know the other scrapped all its missiles.

Kohl said his offer was contingent on the settlement of all other outstanding issues, including verification.

Mineworkers Vote On Benefit Proposal

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Striking black mineworkers voted today on a proposal by the major mining houses that offers slightly improved benefits but no additional wage increase, the union said.

The National Union of Mineworkers said that if members accept the offer, it would result in an end to South Africa's largest legal walkout, which began 17 days ago.

"But if our members reject the offer, the strike continues," Cyril Ramaphosa, the union's general secretary, said Tuesday night.

Ramaphosa said the union would reply to the chamber by tonight.

Voting began this morning and results were not expected before evening.

Tanker Convoy Reported Moving As Blinding Dust Storm Subsides

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — A U.S.-escorted convoy of Kuwaiti tankers was reported moving up the Saudi Arabian coast today after blinding sandstorms over the Persian Gulf hid its location for more than 24 hours.

Shipping sources, asking not to be named, said other vessels had monitored radio traffic indicating that the convoy was off Ras Khafji, about 50 miles south of Kuwait's Al-Ahmadi loading terminal.

"The convoy is passing," said the sources, quoting the monitored reports. The sources said the ships gave the impression that they based their information on radio exchanges rather than on visual sightings.

They also said they had the distinct impression the convoy was northbound.

The helicopter carrier USS Guadalcanal was reported off Bahrain rather than at the head of the convoy, indicating that the tankers were moving without benefit of the mine-hunting Sea Stallion helicopters.

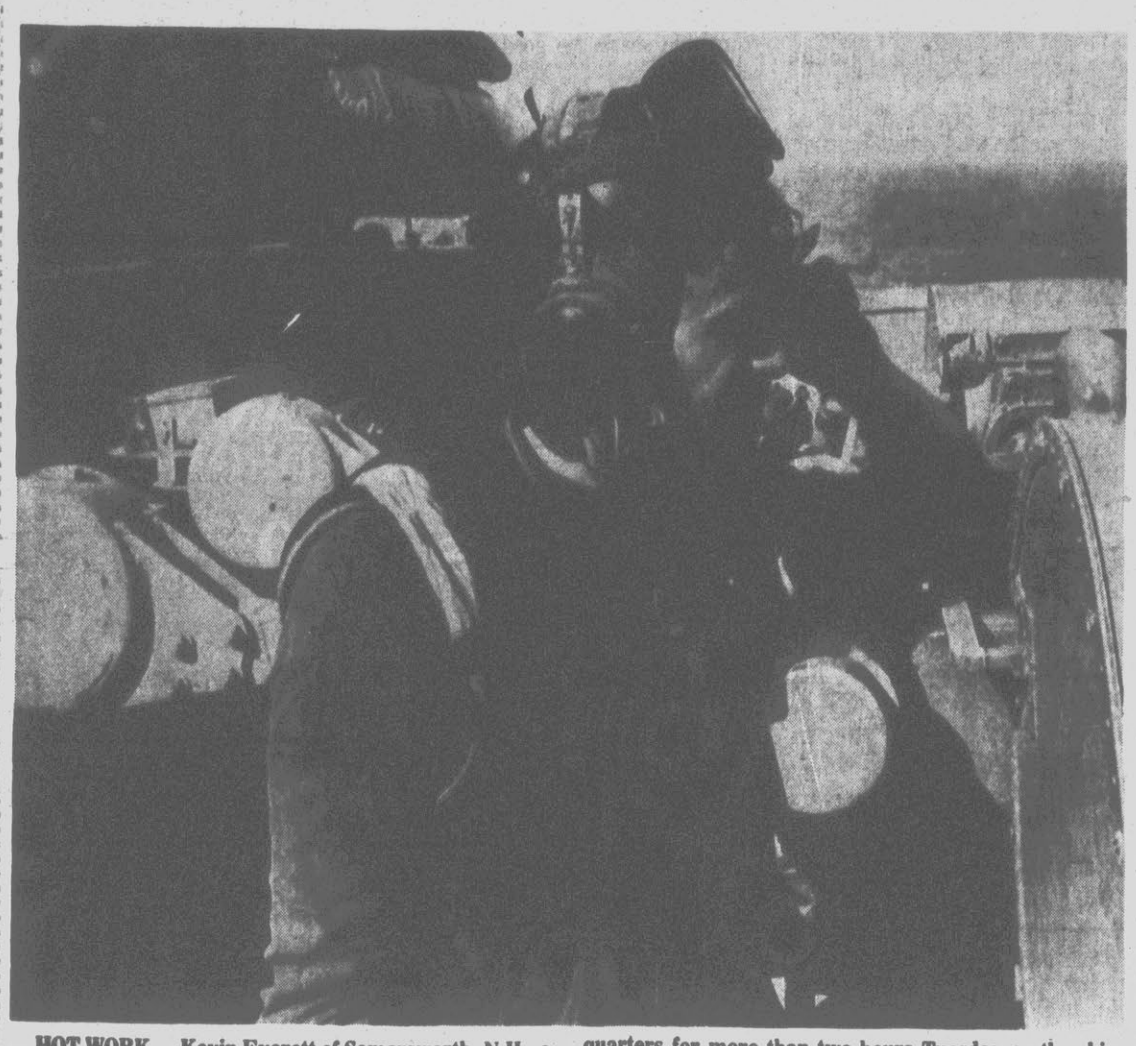
The sources said the Americans may have calculated that the Iranians could not easily plant mines or carry out other attacks by small boats in the bad weather now affecting large areas of the gulf.

The Kuwait Oil Co., which operates the tankers, has denied a convoy set sail. The firm's London office said Tuesday that one of the the tankers scheduled to join the convoy, the 290,085-ton supertanker Middleton, was "still at sea" after leaving Rotterdam Friday.

Kuwait Oil Co. officials refused to give the location of the Middleton, but said it would not reach the gulf area for several days.

The other two ships — the Surf City and the Chesapeake City — were anchored outside the Strait of Hormuz, other sources said Tuesday. The three tankers are the last of the 11 destined to receive U.S. flags and naval protection under a Reagan administration plan to protect Kuwaiti ships from attack by Iran.

Iran, which accuses Kuwait of aiding Iraq, began targeting ships serving the emirate about a year ago.



HOT WORK — Kevin Everett of Somersworth, N.H., a fire control man aboard the USS Guadalcanal, wipes sweat from his brow Tuesday as he manned a radar tracker controlling a batter of Sparrow III missiles. The Guadalcanal crew was placed in a state of general quarters for more than two hours Tuesday as the ship neared Iranian waters in the Persian Gulf. Temperatures on the ship's black deck exceeded 110 degrees. (AP Laserphoto)

CIA Official Says Casey Backed White House On Iran Arms Sales

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The late CIA Director William J. Casey sidestepped subordinates who questioned the Reagan administration's secret weapons sales to Iran, according to testimony quoted in a published report today.

Clair George, the agency's deputy director for operations, said Casey overruled his objections to individuals chosen by the White House to carry out the arms deals, The New York Times reported.

George's closed-door testimony Aug. 5 and 6 before the congressional Iran-Contra committees was scheduled for release today. The Times quoted a transcript it obtained in advance.

According to the newspaper's report, George told the committees he raised questions about Iranian middleman Manucher Ghorbanifar and retired Air Force Maj. Gen. Richard Secord, who arranged logistics for the secret arms shipments.

George said he went directly to Casey with his objections after learning that Ghorbanifar was the only intermediary for dealings with Iran.

"I said, 'Bill, I am not going to run this guy anymore,' which means in our language, 'I will not handle him, he is a bum,'" George said.

However, George said, Casey began to "wire around" — or circumvent — subordinates who objected to the plan.

Casey, a longtime friend and adviser to President Reagan, resigned as CIA director in February after being hospitalized seven weeks earlier with brain seizures. He died in May.

George also was questioned sharply about his claim before another congressional panel in October 1986 that the CIA had no role in secret resupply operations to aid the Nicaraguan Contra rebels. The claim has since been contradicted by other agency officials who detailed their involvement in the covert operation, which was partially financed with proceeds from the Iran arms sales.

According to the Times report, George said he had intended to tell Congress during his earlier appearance that the CIA had no unauthorized role, because he believed the agency was allowed to share intelligence with the supply network. The newspaper said George apologized for his earlier statements.

On Tuesday, the congressional committees released testimony of George's subordinate Alan Fiers, chief of the CIA's Central America task force, who acknowledged he "got a little too rambunctious" in aiding the Contras last year.

Fiers described sitting silently at the witness table during congressional hearings last fall while George and Assistant Secretary of State Elliott Abrams misled the House Intelligence Committee about U.S. government involvement in the Contra resupply operation.

Fiers said they gave "cute" answers designed to hide U.S. involvement. The hearing was held in the wake of the downing of a resupply plane inside Nicaragua last October in which two Americans were killed and a third, Eugene Hasenfus, was captured by Nicaraguan forces.

"I am troubled by it then; I am troubled by it now," Fiers said. "I am not very happy about it. Probably it was the most difficult decision I have made in my life."

Fiers acknowledged that he had directed that military supplies be dropped to the Contras fighting along Nicaragua's southern front. But Fiers said that as part of the Reagan administration, he did not want to break ranks and be the first to tell the real story.

"I was a member of the administration team; I wasn't going to break ranks with the team," he said.

Fiers said he believed George knew of Lt. Col. Oliver North's involvement in aiding the Contras and in helping direct private aid to them. "I kept him briefed on the broad strokes," Fiers said.

Another CIA officer, Joe Fernandez, has provided testimony contradicting George's assurance last fall that the CIA had not even indirectly aided private resupply efforts. Fernandez said he had provided intelligence information to facilitate delivery of weapons to the Contras.

Little is known about either George or Fiers, although George's position is so senior that he is among the few members of the CIA's covert service whose name is publicly acknowledged.

EPA May Let Tree Test Pass

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Montana professor who injected genetically altered bacteria into trees in defiance of federal regulations may get away without being fined by the Environmental Protection Agency, an agency spokesman says.

"I don't think there is any fine contemplated" against plant pathologist Gary Strobel, a Montana State University professor, EPA spokesman Al Heier said Tuesday.

Top EPA officials met Monday night to discuss the case and Heier said a decision was expected today or, more likely, Thursday.

The EPA could impose fines or sanctions against Strobel, but the regulations do not stipulate what the fines should be, he said.

"We're confident there wouldn't be any adverse environmental effects from the experiment," Heier said.

Strobel's case drew national publicity two weeks ago when he told MSU's biosafety panel that he injected genetically altered bacteria into about 14 elm trees on the Bozeman, Mont., campus without federal or university approval.

Strobel hoped the altered bacteria would produce an antibiotic that kills Dutch elm disease fungus, which wiped out vast stands of American elm trees following its appearance in North America.

Strobel, an international authority on Dutch elm disease who has been doing research on its prevention since 1974, said his actions were a form of "civil disobedience" against what he considers overly restrictive regulations.

EPA rules require that a permit be obtained before a genetically altered organism may be released into the environment. The requirement was imposed in response to concern about unanticipated but potentially harmful effects from the introduction of new organisms into the environment.

Environmentalists cite the historical precedent of the fast-growing kudzu vine, which took over large areas in the South following its introduction from the Far East in 1895. They warn that current research has produced other menacing species including rats twice the size of those occurring naturally.

Strobel, however, said waiting for an EPA permit for his tree research would have delayed his work for a year, so he went ahead with his experiment while applying for the permit.

In addition to EPA, the National Institutes of Health and the National Science Foundation have been reviewing the case.

The NIH can't impose fines, NIH spokesman Don Ralbovsky said.

GM Departure Leaves Ohio With 4,000 People Jobless

NORWOOD, Ohio (AP) — The last car rolls off the assembly line tonight at the 64-year-old General Motors Corp. plant in a shutdown one official in this Cincinnati enclave compares to a spoiled child turning on its parents.

The closing of GM's Norwood plant, by far the biggest employer in this town of 26,000, will cost 4,000 jobs and is the first of 11 planned in four states by 1990.

"What I'd like to see right now is every worker in the United States to come out in the street and tell the corporations, 'That's enough,'" said Paul Cipollone, 46, a 21-year plant employee.

The plant has been making Pontiac Firebirds and Chevrolet Camaros. The last car to roll off the line at 8 p.m. will be a Camaro, officials said. GM will continue to produce the two sports cars at its Van Nuys, Calif., plant.

Layoffs were made here on Monday and Tuesday, with 1,600 employees scheduled to work their final day today. About 750 hourly employees will remain at the plant after today to pack up material and tear down machinery.

Mary Richmond waited for her husband, Arthur, as he left the plant for the final time Monday.

"We just came to meet him because it's the end of a life and the beginning of a new one," she said. "We've been together almost 36 years. We share the good and the bad."

Some workers have asked townspeople to wear black armbands or ribbons to show support for the laid-off workers.

GM generated more than $2.6 million in tax revenue a year for Norwood, or about 28 percent of the city's budget, officials said.

Norwood, facing a potential $1.8 million deficit by year's end, has laid off 26 municipal workers and has not replaced 22 others, cut salaries, halted spending on improvements such as sidewalk repairs, and proposed a tax increase, officials said.

Earlier this month, the city filed a $316 million suit against GM, seeking punitive damages and costs of improvements made over the years to accommodate the automaker and the 59-acre plant, which opened in 1923.

Businesses in town also are feeling the fallout from the closing.

Hart Fuels Fire But Delays Answer

DENVER (AP) — Former U.S. Sen. Gary Hart fanned fires of speculation that he will re-enter the presidential race, telling reporters meeting him on his return home from vacation in Ireland he soon will announce his plans.

"I don't have any kind of comment to make this evening," Hart told reporters Tuesday night at Stapleton International Airport. "I want to get together with my family and get caught up on the news of the last few days and find out what has or has not gone on. ...

"Then I will cover all the points that need to be covered in a comprehensive way. I don't think the circumstances today or tonight are the way to do that. I'll have something to say pretty soon," he said.

Hart's comments echoed those he made earlier Tuesday to reporters when he arrived at Kennedy International Airport in New York City.

Hart was met at the airport by his wife, Lee. They left the airport and drove to their mountain home in Troublesome Gulch near Kittredge, 30 miles southwest of Denver.

The former Colorado senator quit his campaign for the Democratic nomination on May 8 after The Miami Herald reported he spent part of a weekend with actress-model Donna Rice.

Speculation that Hart would rejoin the race was kindled last week after his former campaign manager, Bill Dixon, said it was "likely" Hart would do so.

On Friday, Hart left a rented cottage in the Irish fishing village of Oughterard to avoid reporters after Dixon's comments made headlines.

Another former Hart adviser, Bill Shore, told The Des Moines (Iowa) Register that Hart told him by telephone last week that he was unequivocal about not returning to the race.

In an interview with the Register published Monday, Dixon stuck by his statement.

Hart had been considered the front-runner for the Democratic presidential nomination before the Rice incident.

"Obviously, he would first have to make a statement about his intolerable behavior," said Dixon. Even so, he said, Hart would be "torn apart" by the media if he steps back in.

Hart believes he could contribute to the campaign and feels an obligation to do so, Dixon said. If Hart re-entered the race, Dixon suggested it would be more an attempt to crusade on issues rather than to win the election.

Collins Granted Divorce

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Dynasty" vixen Joan Collins is a single woman again, having shed her fourth husband, former pop-singer Peter Holm, in a lurid court battle worthy of an episode of her nighttime soap opera.

"As far as I'm concerned, he's an ex-chapter in my life," Miss Collins, 54, said Tuesday of Peter Holm, the 40-year-old Swede she married Nov. 6, 1985. She filed for divorce 13 months later, on Dec. 12.

In a brief hearing Tuesday, an elegantly dressed Miss Collins took the witness stand in a routine procedure needed to receive a final divorce decree.

"Is everything in the petition true and correct?" asked Superior Court Judge Kenneth Black.

"Yes," Miss Collins answered in the packed courtroom.

"Will further delay or counseling save your marriage?" the judge asked.

"No," Miss Collins said.

Holm was out of the country and did not attend. His attorney said he would return to court in October to press his fight for $80,000 a month in alimony.

The property issue was resolved last month when a judge ruled that Miss Collins and Holm had entered into a valid prenuptial agreement that provided Holm with 20 percent of Miss Collins' income during their marriage.

"I'm very relieved, very happy," Miss Collins said after the hearing. "I want to get on with my life."

Holm and Miss Collins had battled bitterly over ownership of several homes in Beverly Hills and France. At one point, Holm barricaded himself in a house owned by Miss Collins and threatened to shoot at anyone who attempted to evict him. He eventually moved out when she sold the house.

Court papers provided glimpses of a lavish lifestyle that included spending thousands of dollars weekly on clothing, travel and food and entertainment at internationally known restaurants and nightclubs.

But the couple also went head to head over much simpler items such as a dining room table, answering machines and a bed.

Firefighters Want Laws Toughened On Furniture

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's firefighters are launching a campaign for tougher state laws to reduce the more than 1,000 annual deaths in furniture-related fires.

"It is time to stop the killing," said John A. Gannon, president of the International Association of Fire Fighters.

The union, which represents an estimated 170,000 professional firefighters in the United States and Canada, wants states to set mandatory flame-resistance standards for furniture in hotels, motels, nursing homes and other high-risk areas.

At a news conference Tuesday, Gannon said upholstered furniture is involved in fires claiming more than 1,000 lives annually. He said that neither federal action nor voluntary industry efforts have been sufficient to solve the problem.

New York recently approved toughened standards, Gannon said, adding that the firefighters initially will concentrate on Maryland, Florida, Ohio and Rhode Island. Eventually, he said, federal action is the goal.

"For almost 10 years the Consumer Product Safety Commission has allowed the furniture industry to police itself," Gannon said. "The only action we've gotten is more needless death and devastating injury."

Doug Noble, director of the commission's Office of Program Management, disputed that assessment, saying its work with the industry has been "a major success story."

"We approve the firemen's motives in this, of course, but disagree with their sensational tactics," added Charles Carey, co-chairman of an industry group, the Upholstered Furniture Action Council.

He said the voluntary program has been effective, and Noble agreed.

In recent years, the commission has emphasized prevention of smoldering fires caused by cigarettes.

"Between 1979 and 1984, the most recent year we have complete information, cigarette-ignited furniture fires declined 42 percent and deaths as a result of those fires decreased 28 percent," Noble said.

The commission says 1,110 fire fatalities in 1984 involved upholstered furniture, and 870 of those were ignited by cigarettes.

Noble said furniture produced under the latest voluntary guidelines is "much more resistant to cigarette ignition than before." He said the safety commission is "encouraging continued aggressive industry involvement," particularly in expanding use of fire-resistant polyurethane foam and coverings.

Carey said the industry is continuing to look for safer fabrics and foam fillings. Gannon's union wants to encourage increased use of such products.

"There are a few fabrics and foams on the market that have passed valid flame testing and are being used by some hotel chains. But experience has demonstrated that safer products will not be widely available until mandatory regulations force them to be," Gannon said.

To illustrate the difference in materials, firefighters at the news conference used lighter fluid to ignite four fabrics. Two resisted the flames, while two others burned briefly.

Couple Marries In Statesville

STATESVILLE — The wedding ceremony of Regina Susan Pou and Ronald Braddy Barnes took place Aug. 16 in the First Baptist Church. Dr. Jack Causey conducted the double-ring ceremony.

Parents of the bridal couple are Broadus and Jeanne Pou of Statesville and Donald and Ruth Barnes of Lucama.

The bride and bridegroom attended East Carolina University. She is the former manager of Maurice's in Greenville and he is a Carlyle and Co. manager.

The bride was given in marriage by her parents. She wore a gown of white satin with re-embroidered imported lace. The gown was encrusted with pearls and iridescents from the Queen Anne neckline to the basque waist. The gown had illusion puff sleeves which tapered to pearl scallops at the wrist. The semi-cathedral train was scalloped and edged in laced panels. She wore a fingertip veil attached to a coronet and side spray of pearls. She wore a strand of pearls and matching pearl and diamond earrings, a gift of the bridegroom. She carried a lace fan accented with ivy, white rosebuds, stephanotis and freesia centered with an orchid. Spray pearls complemented the cascade bouquet.

Lynn W. Sherrod of Macclesfield was matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Julie Pou of Huntersville, sister-in-law of the bride, Angie Respess of Greenville, and Betsy Mercer of Lucama.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers included Ridgell Pou of Huntersville, brother of the bride, John Barnes of Lucama and Don G. Barnes of Jessup, Md., both brothers of the bridegroom, and Greg Mercer of Lucama.

Organist Jane Pardue of Statesville and vocalist Jennifer Bray of Augusta, Ga., presented a program of music.

A reception was by the bride's parents in Adams Hall of the church.

After a wedding trip to Paradise Island, the couple will live in North Charleston, S.C.

The rehearsal dinner was given by the bridegroom's parents at the Queen Anne Hotel in Statesville Saturday evening.

Chinese Focus On Fashions

BEIJING (AP) — Chinese models in short skirts and deep-slitted dresses recently sashayed across a stage at the Great Hall of the People as the government focused on the fashion industry as one way of improving the quality and image of Chinese textile products.

Textiles last year surpassed oil as China's largest export item, earning more than $5 billion.

There also is a huge domestic market for fashionable clothes. Most young people, particularly in the cities, prefer Western suits and dresses to traditional tunics and baggy trousers.

The fashion show for China's fall and winter collection also featured sportswear, pantsuits, knee-length fur coats, formal long dresses, long plaid overcoats and men's casual wear.

"Nowadays most of the consumers are not content with drabby and old-fashioned garments," said Textile Industry Minister Wu Wenying. "Due to the needs of the material and cultural life, more and more consumers are beginning to pursue fashion."

Today's Women Hear Speaker

Karen McIntosh was guest speaker at the August meeting of Today's Women of Greenville. She is dietitian educator with Quadrangle Internal Medicine. Her program topic was nutrition.

Laura Jackson received the outstanding member of the quarter award. Beth Ebert and Beverly Herring were welcomed as new members.

Amy Narron and Jane Harrison participated in the speak-up project.

Plans were made to hold a family ice cream social Aug. 19 at the home of Peg Burnett. Pattie Michael reported that the group's cookbooks are being published and will be arriving in the near future. April Walston reported on the group's cross stitch quilt.

Plans to coordinate a rock-a-thon to benefit the United Cerebral Palsy Center were announced. It will be held at The Plaza Sept. 12.

President Linda Asbell reviewed activities for the first quarter.

Bulls Gap Mayor Is Working For Tourism

By LEANNE WAXMAN
Associated Press Writer

BULLS GAP, Tenn. (AP) — Mayor Ima Justis jumps in her pickup truck and steers her way off Archie Campbell Highway to conduct a quick tour of her town's historic district.

"This is the farm truck. I like it better than the car 'cause you can look down at people," she joked as she drove by a side road that curls around railroad tracks alongside an old hotel-turned-apartment house.

"That's what makes that railroad go is that Y in the track," the hefty, 64-year-old mayor said, explaining that this East Tennessee town is accessible to freight trains from the north, south, east and west.

"Oh, kiss my foot?" she giggled.

Bulls Gap has a diner, an auto parts place, a market, a gasoline station or two and Ima, who is decked out in several shades of purple from the plastic jellies on her feet to the nail polish on her fingers and the shadow on her eyelids.

Mrs. Justis, with a trademark rasp in her voice and a toothpick dangling from a corner of her mouth, has been active in Democratic politics in these parts "longer than you can remember," though she's only in her third year at the helm of Bulls Gap.

"I was on the town council for four years and then the young man that was mayor didn't want to run. We never did have a woman, but I went from there," she said.

Exactly how many people does Bulls Gap have?

"The census has us down for 821. But it's 871. I don't see anybody we lost," Mrs. Justis said.

And exactly how much does the mayor get paid for putting in a full day at tiny Town Hall five days a week?

"One dollar a year, but I don't collect it. I don't know anybody who's ever collected it," she said.

Mrs. Justis, married to Hawkins County farmer Bill Justis, has a grand plan for Bulls Gap, and they'll have to carry her out of the one-room Town Hall before she leaves her dreams unfulfilled.

"We've got a tax structure now. We've got the sewer to finish, and I know we'll get the tourists in for Archie Campbell's place. We're going to put a pickin' parlor over there where people can come and play on Friday and Saturday nights," the mayor said.

Archie Campbell, of the Gband Ole Opry and television's "Hee Haw," is Bulls Gap's favorite son. Andrew Johnson Highway, along which Town Hall sits, was renamed for the ailing star.

Mrs. Justis has worked hard with the help of Campbell to move an overhauled version of the house where he grew up into dilapidated "old town," what the mayor considers the historic district and where a small tree grows from the top of an abandoned water tower.

"When you go into old town in Bulls Gap you go back 100 years ago. I'll be in 'til I get my programs set up," she said. "I want to get old town built up. I'd like to go for tourism. People want to get their picture with the sign that says Bulls Gap just to say they've been here."

Mrs. Justis helps her husband farm 63 acres of tobacco, hay and cattle when she's not sitting at her desk in a corner of Town Hall, which has a taped-over hole in its picture window and a view of state Route 66.

"We've got hired help too on the farm. We enjoy farming. It's a break from all this other work. When you get real teed up you can go out and get on a tractor and feel better," she said.

Mrs. Justis was defeated last year for her spot on the state Democratic Party's executive committee. She defeated two opponents to win her first, two-year term as mayor and one contender in June for a second term, on a vote of 172-113.

"I enjoy politics. I feel like if you've got something you can do to make it better, you've done good," the mayor said.

Mrs. Justis mans the telephones at Town Hall with the help of Patricia Davis.

"Ima what is my title? I'm recorder I think," Mrs. Davis said.

"She's recorder and secretary. ... She's my girl Friday," said the bespectacled mayor as she adjusts her curly hairdo atop her head and sits at a large table at Town Hall smoking a cigarette from a holder.

Mrs. Justis says one of her biggest accomplishments as mayor is the Barnett-Erwin Forest Products plant that opened in town last year and employs 75 people.

"We're real proud of it," she said. "The woodworking plant is the first plant in here since 1800."

Mrs. Justis considers the highways outside her office window important barometers to Bulls Gap's growth.

"There were 3,180 cars coming in on Route 66 and 2,620 going out in '81," she said, referring to a map tacked on a wall and scribbled with notes. "Now, it's 3,180 cars going out. I know we can pull the tourists in."

Woman Want Pants To Fit Her Changes

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Have the people who make ladies' slacks lost their minds? My age is 62 and I'm going into my "golden years" kicking and screaming. My weight stays between 115 and 118 pounds, but there's a world of lifference between my shape and he shape of a young girl who weighs the same, so why don't the clothing manufacturers take this into consideration?

Why can't they allow for fallen fannies, and that little potbelly that we can never get rid of?

We don't want stretch polyester with the crease sewn in — we want cottons that fit! If there's an elastic at the waist, fine, but it shouldn't be so tight we can't breathe. Anything over a size 10 usually has legs so wide they flap. Why do these manufacturers think everyone has such wide ankles?

There really should be a size group somewhere between Junior Miss (too tight) and Ladies size 10 (too big).

Abby, maybe you can get this message across to the manufacturers so women my age can dress in comfort and style. Tell them we've got the money to spend on the right garment, but we don't want to throw it away on things that don't fit. Thanks for listening. — LITTLE OLD LADY IN TEXAS

DEAR LADY: You told 'em. Let's hope they're listening. And to quote Dorothy Parker: "Women in slacks should not turn their backs."

DEAR ABBY: "Falling Short in Cleveland" might enjoy the comment of Carlos Romulo. He was a newspaper editor, aide to Gen. MacArthur during World War II, Pulitzer Prize winner, Philippine ambassador to the United States, president of the General Assembly of the United Nations — and short.

Once, before speaking to a large audience in Dallas, everyone stood to sing the national anthem. The insensitive chairman who introduced Gen. Romulo looked down on him and asked, "How does a little fellah like you feel in this bunch of tall Texans?"

The general smiled graciously and replied, "I feel like a dime surrounded by pennies." — J.E.B., LA JOLLA

DEAR J.E.B.: Beautiful. Thanks for an item that will be appreciated (and probably quoted) by people of all sizes. Read on:

(For Abby's booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding," send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents), self-addressed envelope to Dear Abby, Wedding, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.)

To avoid extra calories, cut a baking potato into strips, place them on a greased baking sheet in one layer and bake for 45 minutes in a 350 degree oven. They will be crisp and lower in calories than French fries.

English Bowl, Hat Are Favorites

Pat's Pointers

Pat Trexler

Crochet this romantic wide-brimmed garden hat and matching hobnail bowl, embellish them with silk flowers, and enjoy the nostalgic mood they create in your home. What a perfect gift item this set would make for very special people on your gift list.

Both are crocheted with a lightweight acrylic, cottonlike yarn and a size G crochet hook. The hat, an outstanding decorator item for the front door, boudoir or dressing room, is approximately 14 inches in diameter. The charming bowl is six inches in diameter. The silk flowers and ribbon are optional, and instructions for a simple stiffening solution are included with the pattern.

To obtain directions for making the English Garden Set, send your request for Leaflet No. Z-082387 with $2 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Pat Trexler Crafts, The Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 419148, Kansas City, Mo. 64141.

Or you may order Kit No. C-082387 by sending a check or money order for $9.95 to Pat Trexler Crafts at the same address. The kit price includes shipping charges, full instructions and yarn in your choice of peach, white, natural or lilac.

To receive free copies of Pat Trexler's two Christmas mini-catalogs, containing an array of exciting designs for gifts, decorations, sweaters and projects for the home, send a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope marked "Trexler Christmas Collection" to the Pat Trexler Crafts address.

Dear Pat: I found it — the pattern you gave in a 1979 column for crocheting diagonal shells. We have moved three times since then, and somewhere I had lost the clipping of that column. I wrote to you only to hear that you couldn't find your copy either.

But I found it last week, when I was looking through some papers for tax information. How it got there, I don't know, but this is truly a gem and certainly bears reprinting, so I will share my copy with you. — Dorothy L., Ewing, Neb.

I can appreciate your frustration, Dorothy, at losing an old favorite pattern. It sounds as if your filing system is similar to mine. I am delighted to be able to share again with my readers this pattern, originally sent to me by another reader.

It can be used to make any size of square or rectangle, and is ideal for leftover yarns. While you can use any weight yarn, and the yarn requirements will vary with the yarn and the type of project you select, it takes approximately 35 ounces of knitting worsted-weight yarn using a size G hook.

Your work begins at a corner. With any color, chain 4. For the first row, work 3 double crochets in the 4th chain from the hook, changing to another color in the last double crochet.

To change color, work the last double crochet to the point where there are 2 loops remaining on the hook; drop color in use and draw through a loop of the color to be used on the next row.

Row 2: Step 1: With the new color, chain 4 and turn. Step 2: Work 3 double crochets in the 4th chain from the hook. Step 3: Work a single crochet under the chain-4 made at the beginning of your work. Step 4: Chain 3 and then work 3 double crochets in the same space where you just made a single crochet. Step 5: Change to a third color in the last of these 3 double crochets.

Row 3: Repeat Steps 1 and 2 of row 2. Step 3: Work a single crochet in the next chain-3 space. Step 4: Chain 3 and work 3 double crochets in the same chain-3 space. Step 5: End row by working single crochet, chain 3 and 3 double crochets in the turning chain of previous row and changing color as before.

Row 4: Repeat Steps 1 through 4 of Row 3 once. Then repeat Steps 3 and 4 until you reach the end of the row and, at this point, repeat Step 5 of Row 3. Repeat the 4th row until you have 5 shells in your sample swatch.

Then work even as follows. On the next row (A), work as for Row 4 except for Step 5. Since you do not want to increase on this row work Step 5 simply by making a single crochet in the turning chain, changing color by drawing new color through the last 2 loops of the single crochet.

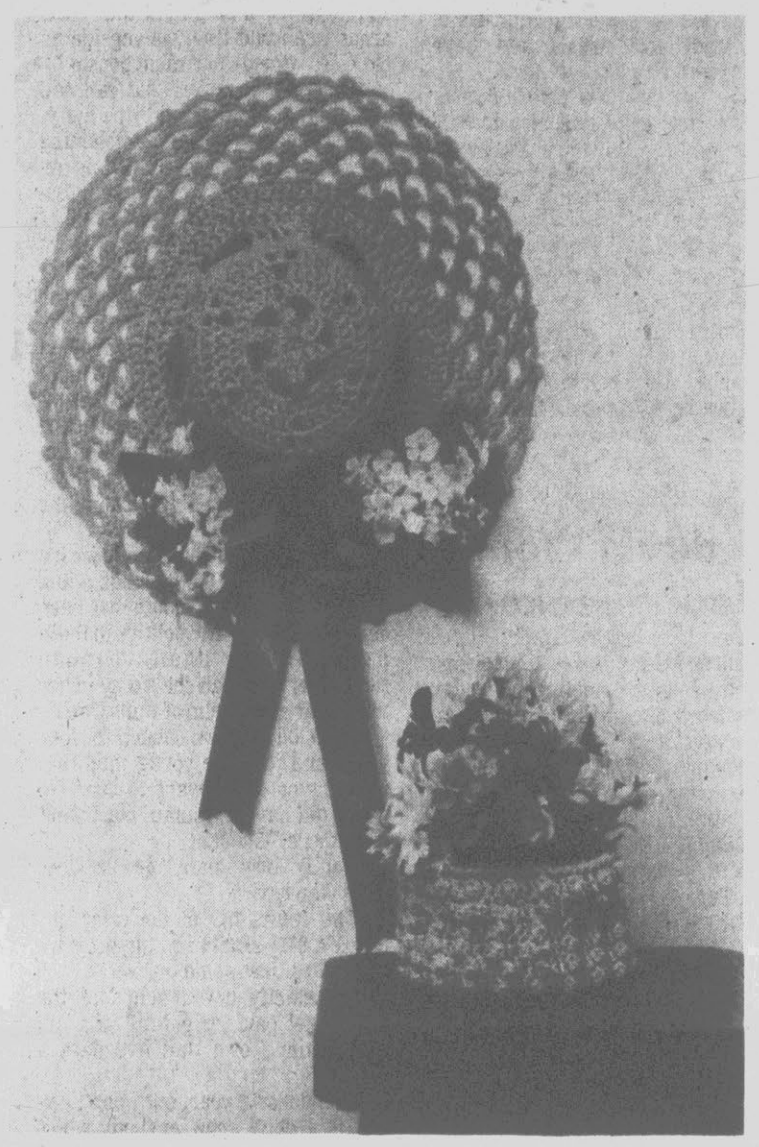
On the following row (B), chain 3, turn, single crochet in first chain-3 space and then repeat Steps 3 and 4 across, and end by working Step 5 as you did in Row 4. Notice that in this row, you do not work any double crochets in the first chain-3 space. Repeat Rows A and B until you have 6 rows of 5 shells each.

Then work decrease rows as follows: Work as you did for Row B across, but end the row with only a single rcochet in turning chain. Repeat this row, changing color each row, until one shells remains. Single crochet in turning chain. Fasten off.

With any color, work 1 row of single crochet around, increasing at corners to keep work flat. This round of single crochet will cover the loose ends of yarn left where colors were changed.

For an afghan, you would repeat Row 4 until you have approximately 52 shells. You would then work even (Rows A and B) until the piece measures 58 inches on the long edge. For a smaller rectangle, work even until the long edge equals the desired finished length on the rectangle. At this point, start the decrease rows.

For a square pillow top, work the increase rows until piece is half as large as the pillow form then immediately start the decrease rows, decreasing until 1 shell remains.



SILK FLOWERS — Crocheted garden hat and matching hobnail bowl can be decorated with silk flowers.

Handicapped Enjoy Prom At Special Alabama Camp

By KATHY KEMP
Birmingham Post-Herald

JACKSON GAP, Ala. (AP) — The music is loud and the dance floor is crowded. David Lewis, watching from the sidelines, figures the moment is now.

He whispers to his date, Christy Kimble, and they head for the floor. The disc jockey drops the needle on a Lionel Richie ballad. David gets down on his knees and puts his arms around Christy. She rests her head on his shoulder.

As he rocks slowly back and forth, her wheelchair turns to the left and then the right. She closes her eyes. He puts his cheek next to hers and whispers in her ear. She listens and smiles.

The annual prom at Alabama's Special Camp for Children and Adults, a facility for the handicapped, is in full swing.

David looks handsome in his crisp blue jeans and sporty knit shirt. Christy is radiant in her blue satin gown. Both are 18.

They're dancing in the dark, slow and close and cheek to cheek. Life couldn't get much better than this.

Ricky Bryer figures it could. He likes the fast numbers, where he can get down and boogie. When the DJ plays "Sledgehammer," he hops out on the floor on his hands and has no trouble finding a partner.

Born without legs and only misshaped flippers where his feet should be, Ricky is about 2 feet tall when he stands on his hands. In 18 years his torso has grown strong and his arms muscular. He jumps from one hand to the other in time to the music.

The girls like Ricky because he's so cool. He looks like a rock star with his gold earring and funky bow tie. Sweat rolls down his cheeks, but he doesn't care. He could dance until dawn to music like this.

The music ends long before morning. You can't dance all night and then go rafting or mountain climbing or horseback riding in the morning.

"Anything we can do to help bolster someone's self-esteem, that's why we're here," said Robert French, the public relations director.

"I had a mother call me up after her child was here and say, 'She doesn't want to do what she used to do,' which was sit around and watch TV all day. 'She wants to do things.' I love hearing that."

The idea behind the prom, French said, is to give teen-agers who may never go to a regular high school prom a chance to experience the excitement of getting gussied up in prom attire and dancing the night away. For many, it's their first opportunity to go out on a date.

Jill Falls, 15, and Joey Borden, 16, met at camp and decided to go to the prom together.

"I'm the camp flirt," she said, but Joey doesn't mind if he's only one of the many boyfriends she has acquired. He taps his crutches in time to the music as she wiggles like a Solid Gold dancer in her wheelchair.

The camp, on 230 acres in Tallapoosa County, opened 12 years ago, funded by the Alabama Easter Seal Society and private gifts. It is open all year to all ages of disabled people, who come either for a weekend, a week, or in the summer, perhaps a two-week session.

Using specially designed equipment, campers do things they never thought possible — rock climbing, canoeing, white water rafting, rappelling.

"You wouldn't believe how safe it is," French said. "But they don't know that. To them, it's an element of danger, and they're able to overcome it. And they'll take that feeling with them when they go back home."

The camp has weekly dances and, once a year, its annual prom.

With the help of counselors, the girls spend hours in their cabins getting prettied up in makeup and party dresses. In the boys' cabins, they pull out the after-shave and their best pair of jeans.

Before the prom starts, the campers vote on a prom king and queen and two runners-up.

Most of the 100 teen-agers and young adults at the prom are confined to wheelchairs because of birth defects.

"People living in Winterville work and shop in Greenville as do the people in the southern part of the county, and these people are involved in the growth-related problems. I think the time is right that we get together with all these other jurisdictions to see if we can't come to a mutual solution."

Meanwhile, City Planner Lynne James gave commissioners a statistical update on the growth in Greenville's seven planning districts south of Greenville Boulevard.

"Since 1981, 407 acres have been developed in planning districts 17, 18, 19, 20, 22, 24 and 26," Ms. James said. "Three districts — 18, 22 and 24 — were among the most active in the city in terms of new development activity from 1981 through the end of 1986."

About 73 percent of the development has been residential, while 23 percent has been commercial growth, according to Ms. James, who said the number of multifamily units has increased by 739 units, marking a 57.5 percent increase.

Population in the seven districts has increased 58 percent from 8,749 people to 13,862, she said.

Commissioners also discussed transportation problems connected with the area's growth.

Apartment Fire

RALEIGH (AP) — Fire struck an unfinished apartment project for the second time in two weeks Sunday, destroying a multiunit building, officials said.

The blaze burned a wood-frame apartment building at the Mill Valley complex to the ground. On Aug. 8, fire destroyed three other buildings within 20 years of the one that burned Sunday.

Investigators with the Wake County Sheriff's Department have said the cause of the first fire was "highly suspicious," but J. Darrin Holt, assistant chief of the Fairgrounds Volunteer Fire Department, declined comment on the second blaze.

Fire Fatality

GREENSBORO (AP) — A 42-year-old Greensboro man died in his printing shop in what police said was an explosion and fire sparked by a burning cigarette.

Joseph Walker Jeffrey was found dead Sunday behind the front door of International Minute Press, said Assistant Chief Jerry Cox of the Greensboro Fire Department.

"Apparently he came in with a cigarette and it ignited some flammable liquids that caused an explosion," said Officer David Long of the police department.

Inmates Hold 22 Hostages

ROME (AP) — Inmates who took 22 hostages at a prison on the island of Elba today threatened "a massacre" if police attacked or did not grant their demands for a helicopter.

"If any action is tried against us, there will be only a massacre, because none of us six (inmates) want to stay in jail," said Mario Tuti, a 40-year-old convicted right-wing terrorist, in an early-morning telephone interview with the news agency ANSA.

"At a certain point, none of us have anything to lose. We all have life sentences or thereabouts. We have nothing to lose but our chains."

Prison director Cosimo Giordano, one of the 17 guards and five civilian prison employees held by the inmates, also spoke to ANSA. He said the hostages had been treated well and reiterated the inmates' contention that the revolt would end peacefully if their demands for a helicopter and pilot were met.

Negotiations between authorities and the six inmates stretched into a second day today.

The bloodless revolt began 10:30 a.m. Tuesday at the H-shaped modern prison, which was built inside 16th century walls, on the island about 6 miles from Tuscany on Italy's west-central coast.

Four hostages, who were not identified, were released early in the revolt, and the inmates extended a 6:45 p.m. Tuesday deadline to kill hostages if no transportation was provided. They set no new deadline.

Tuti, appearing at a window, held up two or three bundles of what he described as explosives, according to news reports. In his telephone interview, he said the jail infirmary "was practically mined" with explosives.

"Our patience is limited," he warned in the conversation with ANSA. "Don't seek to pull too hard on the cord, or it will snap."

Five of the six inmates involved were serving life sentences for murder, authorities said. Tuti was convicted of right-wing terrorists acts and the murder of two police officials.

Elba is a popular resort island of 30,000 people. From May 1814 to February 1815, Elba was a sovereign principality under the exiled Napoleon I, who lived in a villa 90 miles from the prison.

Philippine Police, Strikers Clash

By ROBERT H. REID
Associated Press Writer

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Baton-wielding police charged protesters in Manila and opened fire on others in a nearby town as thousands joined a nationwide strike today against fuel price increases. At least 127 people were arrested nationwide.

Militants told 6,000 people at a rally near the presidential palace that the strike, originally scheduled to last 24 hours, would continue Thursday. The crowd cheered and shouted, "Strike, strike."

The protest occurred even though President Corazon Auino issued an order Tuesday reducing the price of regular gasoline to $1.35 a gallon. An Aug. 14 government order had raised the cost of a gallon from $1.24 to $1.49.

Strike leaders demanded prices be rolled back to $1.24.

The strike was spearheaded by transport workers affiliated with the May 1st Movement, but other groups, including telephone workers, seminary students, government employees and leftists also joined the protest.

The Philippine Constabulary said the strike affected transport in about half the country's 13 military districts, including the capital area. Many schools, offices and businesses closed or operated with reduced staff.

The Far East Network, which broadcasts to the 40,000-member American military community, urged U.S. troops and dependents to avoid travel to Manila because of the strike and demonstrations.

Witnesses, including foreign journalists, said one man and two women were wounded when police fired on protesters in Bacoor, about 10 miles south of Manila. A fourth person, a woman, was struck in the head with a club, they said.

Provincial commander Col. Cesar Garcia denied troops opened fire but claimed two women and a soldier were seriously injured when bombs held by protesters exploded. Garcia said 86 people were arrested.

In suburban Quezon City, officials said eight people were arrested after police sprayed jets of water and swung nightsticks at a crowd of several hundred blocking an intersection.

"I was shielding the women and at one point, I tried to catch a stick and I told (police) to stop it," said the Rev. Joel Boreo, a priest who was arrested. "But they went on hitting us."

Brig. Gen. Ernesto San Diego, northern Manila police district commander, said police also dispersed protesters in at least five other parts of the city.

In Cebu City, 350 miles south of Manila, police said 33 people were arrested after officers broke up a crowd of about 500 strikers and supporters.

Police said up to 80 percent of Manila's jeepney drivers joined the strike, along with many bus drivers. Jeepneys, modeled after military jeeps, are the main mode of public transport in Manila.

Mrs. Aquino urged the public to "understand the predicament of the government" regarding oil prices. She said the rollback indicated "I tried to do my best."

The government said the Aug. 14 increase, which boosted prices for gasoline, kerosene and liquefied gas an average 18 percent, was necessary because of increases in petroleum prices and because its fund for subsidizing costs of domestic oil companies was depleted.

In face of growing public opposition, Mrs. Aquino reduced the increase and cut the duty on imported oil from 20 percent to 15 percent.

Witnesses said gangs of strikers blocked several intersections in the capital early today and urged bus and jeepney drivers to stop working. Many complied.

In Manila's Cubao district, hundreds of protesters marched through the streets chanting, "Fight, don't be afraid!"

Clark also suggested that "there's going to be smaller industries come in" that are related to the saw mill operation and provide additional jobs for county residents.

Hiring for the facility will be through the N.C. Employment Security Commission office in Greenville. The mill's work force will be structured around multi-skilled work teams.

The mill will be part of Weyerhaeuser's Southern Forest Products Division, headquartered in Hot Springs, Ark.

Weyerhaeuser Co. is one of the world's largest forest products firms. It is headquartered in Tacoma, Wash., and markets its products world-wide. Total sales for the company in 1986 were $5.6 billion.

In North Carolina, Weyerhaeuser's Southern Forest Products Division has manufacturing facilities at Plymouth, New Bern and Jacksonville. Its land and timber holdings amount to some 600,000 acres statewide and include a pine regeneration center near Washington.

These operations also supply wood and wood chips to the company's pulp and paper complex at Plymouth and market pulp mill at New Bern.

Weyerhaeuser also has manufacturing facilities for composite wood panels and is active in home building, real estate development and mortgage banking in North Carolina.

The company's central administrative offices for the state are in New Bern.

the Contras. He suggested that the president is, of necessity, engaged in a delicate political balancing act.

"President Reagan has a problem that is endemic to his political party," Wright said. "There is a virulent right-wing faction which is deeply distrustful of the peace process. Some of them don't want it to work. They don't want anything but a military solution.

"On the other extreme there is a similar situation inside Nicaragua in which the far left, the hard core, doesn't really have any faith in the peace process. All they want is a military solution," the speaker said.

"And it seems to me that if there is ever going to be any peace, those extremes really have to be pacified to the degree that they don't try to keep getting in the way of peace."

Wright met with ambassadors Roberto Martinez of Honduras, Carlos Tunnerman of Nicaragua, Guido Fernandez of Costa Rica and Ernesto Rivas-Gallont of El Salvador. He said the ambassador of Guatemala, the fifth nation of the region, was absent because of illness.

Streak Continues

Milwaukee's Paul Molitor heads to first after getting a sixth inning single Tuesday night off Cleveland's Don Gordon to extend his hitting streak to 39 straight games. (AP Laserphoto)

No Borderline Hits

Molitor Thankful In Streak

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Paul Molitor has been thankful for many things during his 39-game hitting streak — including good health, good luck and no borderline hits.

"They've been clean hits but they haven't all been pretty," Milwaukee's designated hitter said Tuesday after lining a sixth-inning single off Cleveland's Don Gordon to keep the streak alive in a 10-9 Brewer victory.

"I've had a couple off the handles and some infield singles just between the fielders. At least it hasn't come down to a hit that's been questionable or a defensive play that was possibly an error," Molitor said.

"That eliminates controversy or putting pressure on anybody out there, official scorers or anybody."

Molitor didn't get his hit Tuesday until his fourth at-bat and tonight can tie Ty Cobb for fourth place on the modern-day list when he faces the Indians' John Farrell, a late replacement for injured Rich Yett.

Molitor is aware he is one game away from tying Cobb and only five behind Pete Rose's 44-game streak in 1978.

"It's been up on the scoreboard so I've noticed the people who are ahead of me. You have to be appreciative of what's happened to this point.

"When I'm through playing and have a chance to look back — whether it ends at 39 or I tie him — I have to be pleased at this point," he said.

"Forty four is a very nice number. For a long time it seemed very, very far away. I guess you have to say as each day goes by it becomes a little more realistic.

"But we talked the last week about focusing on each game and not five. So tomorrow we look at 40 and try to keep our momentum with our club winning games."

Molitor, whose ultimate target is Joe DiMaggio's 56 games in 1941, flied out in the first and walked in the second off Cleveland starter Ken Schrom. Molitor grounded out sharply to second base in the fourth off reliever Jamie Easterly.

But in the sixth he didn't wait. His first-pitch liner hit the back dirt of the infield between first and second base and sped into right field as the crowd of 15,580 responded with a 1½-minute standing ovation. It was the 15th time in his streak that Molitor's first hit has been to right and it was his third hit in five at-bats against Gordon this season. Molitor flied out in the eighth and is now 68 for 164 (.415) during the streak.

"If we win the game it doesn't matter to me if Molitor gets a hit or not as long as we win the game," Cleveland Manager Doc Edwards said.

Edwards said the Indians didn't pitch Molitor any differently because of the streak.

"We're going to go after him. It's tough to keep a guy like that from getting the bat on the ball," he said.

"He's getting base hits, but he's the same Molitor that's been in the league for a long time. He did a good piece of hitting. Gordon threw him a sinker and he hit it inside out and punched it through the hole.

"You can't really defense them when they use the whole field and Molitor is one of them."

McKinney Leads Offensive Drill

Senior tailback Reggie McKinney rushed for more than 100 yards and one touchdown, while the defensive unit turned in an impressive performance in East Carolina University's football scrimmage in Ficklen Stadium Tuesday night.

McKinney scored the first touchdown of the scrimmage on a 13-yard scamper, and later added runs of 18, 20 and 25 yards.

Carl Barkers, a sophomore transfer from Wake Forest, caught a 25 yard touchdown pass from quarterback Charlie Libretto, and reserve fullback Tim James muscled his way to three first-down runs to highlight the offense.

"I was very impressed with McKinney and James tonight, and our seniors are showing good leadership," ECU coach Art Baker said. "We made too many mistakes on offense, however, but credit the defense for forcing them."

The defense stopped a drive early in the scrimmage when junior safety Flint McCallum picked off a Travis Hunter pass at the goal line. The defense forced a second interception later, when Bryan Haywood stepped in front of a Libretto pass.

"We did some good things tonight," Baker said. "but we have a long way to go before playing N.C. State on Sept. 5. We've been practicing and scrimmaging basically to get ready for the season. Now we'll start our preparations for N.C. State."

East Carolina will scrimmage again Thursday night at 7 p.m. in Ficklen Stadium.

Wadkins May Miss Series

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Eight foreign players, and possibly one American, will be missing from the field of the $800,000 World Series of Golf.

The chase for a $144,000 first prize begins Thursday with either 42 or 43 players in the field.

The status of Lanny Wadkins, a former winner of this title and the runner-up last year, is unsettled. He went home to Dallas on Tuesday to be with his wife, who is expecting their first child.

According to tournament officials, Wadkins expressed hope he could return in time to tee off with the rest of the field at the famed Firestone Country Club.

Six European players elected to skip the World Series in order to compete in this week's German Open, which is the last qualifying tournament for spots on the European Ryder Cup team. Europe plays the United States in those biennial matches beginning Sept. 25 at Dublin, Ohio.

Those missing are British Open champion Nick Faldo and Gordon Brand, both of England; Ian Woosnam of Wales; Sandy Lyle of Scotland; Jose-Maria Olazabal of Spain and Bernhard Langer of West Germany.

Other absentees include injured Mark McNulty of South Africa and Japan's Tommy Nakajima, who had a previous commitment to play in a Japanese tournament.

The field, however, remains the largest ever for this exclusive event and includes 17 men who are making their first appearances in the World Series. Paul Azinger, the only three-time winner on the American tour this season, heads the list of rookies.

"I'm in good position. Obviously, I'd like to hold it," Azinger said of his lead in the season money standings. "But there's a long way to go yet.

So much depends on the ($2 million) Nabisco tournament (at San Antonio in October)," he said.

In fact, Azinger's lead is in jeopardy this week. He has $586,962 and could be passed by either Curtis Strange, who has $553,385, or U.S. Open champ Scott Simpson, with $522,385.

Other leading figures include Masters champ Larry Mize, defending title-holder Dan Pohl, Ben Crenshaw, Payne Stewart, Australian Greg Norman and Larry Nelson, the PGA champion who has finished first and second in his last two starts.

Portions of the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday will be televised nationally by CBS.

Alexander, Henneman Find A Home With Detroit Tigers

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

A pair of pitchers who started the season without a home in the major leagues have found a place to call their own with the first-place Detroit Tigers.

Doyle Alexander beat Minnesota for the second time in a week with exceptional relief help from Mike Henneman as Detroit took the Twins 5-4 in a matchup of American League leaders at the Metrodome.

The Tigers stayed two percentage points ahead of Toronto in the AL East while Minnesota, which has lost seven of its last eight, saw its lead over Oakland trimmed to one game.

Alexander, who sat out the first month of the season as a free agent and was acquired Aug. 12 in a trade with Atlanta, gave up four runs on seven hits in 7 1-3 innings.

Henneman, who began the season at Class AAA Toledo, took over with one out in the eighth after Randy Bush's RBI triple made it 5-4. Henneman retired Kirby Puckett on a grounder and struck out Kent Hrbek — who already had an RBI double and run-scoring single — and then worked a perfect ninth for his fourth save.

"I just wanted to keep the ball in on Puckett, and keep it down to Hrbek," said Henneman, 9-1 with a 2.20 earned run average.

Henneman has replaced Willie Hernandez as the Tigers' bullpen stopper, and his consistent outings have helped Detroit surge into first place and stay there.

"He's (Henneman) the biggest reason because we never even figured on him for 1987," Detroit Manager Sparky Anderson said. "This kid has done as well as anyone I've ever seen as a rookie. If anyone knew we had this kid, they never would've picked us for fifth or sixth."

In other games, Toronto beat Seattle 6-3, Oakland downed Baltimore 9-7, Texas bounced Kansas City 15-8, California defeated New York 5-1, Boston beat Chicago 7-3. Also, Milwaukee held off Cleveland 10-9 as Paul Molitor extended his hitting streak to 39 games.

Alexander, 2-0, shut out Minnesota for eight innings last Thursday. While he again pitched effectively, Joe Niekro did not.

Niekro, 6-10, lost for the sixth time in his last seven decisions. The Tigers tagged him for three runs in the third inning on Chet Lemon's two-run double and a wild pitch that enabled another to score.

After Minnesota scored twice in the fourth when Hrbek hit an RBI double and came home on Gary Gaetti's single, Detroit made it 5-2 in the sixth when Kirk Gibson blooped a two-run single with the bases loaded off Dan Schatzeder. Hrbek hit an RBI single in the bottom of the sixth.

Brewers 10, Indians 9

Molitor extended his streak with a first-pitch single in the sixth inning.

Molitor went 1-for-4 and moved within one game of tying Ty Cobb for the fourth-longest streak in modern history. Molitor flied out, walked and grounded out before lining a single through the right side of the infield off reliever Don Gordon.

Molitor is batting .415 in the streak that started July 16. He his hitting .370 this season.

Dale Sveum hit a three-run homer and two-run single, helping Juan Nieves, 11-6, win his sixth straight decision. Chuck Crim got his sixth save. Ken Schrom, 5-11, was the loser.

Brett Butler hit a two-run homer in the Indians' ninth, extending his hitting streak to 19 games.

Carmen Castillo, Joe Carter and Pat Tabler also homered for Cleveland.

Blue Jays 6, Mariners 3

Fred McGriff went 3-for-3 with a homer and drove in three runs and Lloyd Moseby hit a long home run at the Kingdome.

McGriff singled in the third and Moseby hit his 22nd home run into the third deck in right field. Only five players have reached that spot this season, and Moseby has done it three times in his career, most among visiting players.

McGriff hit a two-run double in the fourth as the Blue Jays made it 5-0. McGriff hit his 17th homer in the sixth.

Jim Clancy, 11-10, won for the first time in eight starts. He gave up three runs on five hits in 6 2-3 innings and Mark Eichhorn finished for his fourth save.

Mike Moore, 6-16, pitched his team-record sixth straight complete game and 11th of the season. He allowed 12 hits.

Athletics 9, Orioles 7

Steve Henderson and Mickey Tettleton hit two-run homers during a six-run fifth inning.

Henderson, who drove in three runs, tied the score 4-4 with his third homer. Mike Davis hit a two-run double and Tettleton got his seventh home run.

Carney Lansford also homered for the host Athletics. Lee Lacy hit a two-run homer and two-run triple for the Orioles and Fred Lynn hit a two-run homer, his 20th.

Curt Young, 11-6, won his first game since July 25 and Eric Plunk went 3 1-3 hitless innings for his first major-league save.

Angels 5, Yankees 1

John Candelaria scattered six hits in eight shutout innings and host California took advantage of a sixth-inning error to beat New York.

Candelaria, 7-5, struck out six and walked one. Greg Minton pitched the ninth and allowed a run.

Dennis Rasmussen, 9-7, took a one-hitter into the sixth before Mark McLemore doubled, took third on a fly ball and Wally Joyner walked with two outs. Devon White followed with a grounder to Yankees third baseman Mike Pagaliarulo, whose throw was dropped by second baseman Bobby Meacham as McLemore scored.

Rangers 15, Royals 8

Ruben Sierra went 4-for-5 with two solo homers and scored the tiebreaking run in the seventh inning.

Sierra, who has 25 home runs, singled in the seventh and later scored on a groundout by Pete O'Brien, breaking a 7-7 tie. Larry Parrish hit a three-run homer, his 27th, and Pete Incaviglia hit his 26th home run.

Frank White hit his sixth career grand slam in the sixth, lifting the Royals into a 7-7 tie.

Red Sox 7, White Sox 3

Rookie Sam Horn hit two solo home runs and Dwight Evans reached the 100 RBI mark for the second time in his 15-year career.

Horn, who went 3-for-4, finished his first month in the majors batting .345 with nine homers and 20 RBI. John Marzano, another Red Sox rookie, also hit a solo home run.

Palmer Tells On Sutton

NEW YORK (AP) — Don Sutton once gave him a lesson on how to scuff a ball and get away with it, Jim Palmer says.

The supplies recommended by Sutton were super glue and sandpaper, Palmer added.

Palmer, a three-time American League Cy Young winner, said Sutton offered the advice in the early 1980s when Sutton was pitching for the Los Angeles Dodgers and Palmer was with the Baltimore Orioles, Palmer said Tuesday.

"Don told me to just take some sandpaper and super glue, put it on your glove hand and when you rub up the ball, kind of scuff it," Palmer said.

A television close-up Monday night showed Sutton with a patch on his palm of his glove hand as rubbed up the ball while pitching for the California Angels against the New York Yankees.

Sutton, who has been accused in the past of scuffing the ball, said the patch was a bandage to cover a blister.

"Or maybe a paper cut," suggested Palmer, who said he was unaware that Sutton's left hand had been scrutinized by a TV camera.

American League executive vice president Bob Fishel expressed an interest in the TV footage.

"We want to take a look at them," Fishel said. "They made a big deal about it on the air. There were no complaints, no balls thrown out or sent to us, as far as we know. But it seemed like he had a substance of some kind on his hand. We don't want to be embarrassed by it."

Palmer, who will be with ABC-TV's broadcast crew at the Little League World Series championship game Saturday, was discussing baseball-scuffing before appearing at a news conference.

"Don Sutton told me how to do it," Palmer said, recalling a Sutton visit to see the Orioles play the Brewers at Milwaukee. "We were good friends."

Palmer said the lesson didn't pay off when he tried it one night in Baltimore.

"I was working on it in the bullpen and it was so humid that night — 95 degrees and humidity to match — the sandpaper kept falling off my hand and my skin was coming off because the glue was taking it with it.

"All I got was super-glue burn. I never got chance to scuff the ball."

Palmer said he once complained that Sutton was doctoring the ball so badly that he erased the American League president's signature.

"It was the final game of the 1982 season. Don was with Milwaukee then and pitching against me. He had rubbed Lee MacPhail's name from the ball. I showed it to the umpire and he just kind of laughed," Palmer said.

Palmer found no fault with pitchers who doctor the ball.

"If you can get away with it, more power to you," he said.

"A scuffed ball does a lot of funny things. When a hitter goes to hit it, now you see it now you don't. When you have that advantage, you're going to be successful."

Sutton, who has won 318 games in a big-league career that began in 1966, said he had no sandpaper in his hand Monday night.

"I suppose you are not going to buy that it was pictures of my kids. And, you probably wouldn't buy that it was (a bandage) covering up a blister, which it was.

"But I give you my word, it wasn't sandpaper, it wasn't an emery board and I don't mind being checked on the mound by the umpires, ever."

Last week against Baltimore, the 42-year-old pitcher was accused of scuffing several baseballs, and three balls were forwarded to the American League office by umpire Don Denkinger.

Defense Worrying NFL Coaches

By The Associated Press

The once-proud defenses of the Pittsburgh Steelers and Miami Dolphins need a lot of work and their coaches are the first to admit it.

"We've got a long way to go on defense," Dolphins Coach Don Shula said Tuesday. "We just gave up too many big plays, especially on third down. We can't afford that."

The Dolphins gave up 207 yards rushing and 264 yards passing in a 31-28 loss to Denver on Monday night. The biggest play of the night came when Broncos running back Gene Lang broke ran 76 yards for a touchdown.

Shula said veteran defensive tackle Bob Baumhower and first-round draft pick John Bosa, a defensive end, remain unsigned.

"I don't know how much longer we'll be able to go on without Baumhower and Bosa in there," Shula said.

The Steelers, meanwhile, have given up 547 yards passing and five scoring passes in two preseason losses.

"We've got the ability, but so far we haven't shown it," defensive coordinator Tony Dungy said of the Steelers' secondary.

Opposing quarterbacks completed 60 percent of their passes in the Steelers' losses to the Washington Redskins (23-17) and the Chicago Bears (50-14).

Dungy thought the Steelers made major improvements in their secondary last spring by selecting three defensive backs on the first four rounds on the NFL draft. But first-round pick Rod Woodson has yet to sign, second-rounder Delton Hall has been slow to learn the Steelers' system since his 12-day holdout and fourth-round pick Thomas Everett is sidelined with a shoulder injury.

"You think you've got yourself some help, and you do on paper, but you've got to play the game," Dungy said. "You've got one guy that's not here, one guy hurt and one guy who doesn't know what he's doing. They're three good players and they'll help eventually, but when, I don't know."

Woodson's holdout reached its 31st day Tuesday. He is running track in Europe and his agent, Marvin Demoff, has given no indication when a contract agreement might be reached.

Other Defensive Woes

Philadelphia Coach Buddy Ryan, hailed by some as a defensive genius when he was with the Chicago Bears, is dissatisfied with the Eagles' defensive performance, although the Steelers and Dolphins' coaches probably would be.

In the first two preseason games, the Eagles did not surrender a long touchdown drive, had 13 sacks, averaged only 220 net yards and posted an opposing pass-completion average of about 40 percent.

But Ryan said if the Eagles had played smarter, they could have made 10 sacks Sunday at New England. He said the defense, and in particular the pass rush, was not doing what he wants to see.

"We're not getting turnovers. If we get more pressure on the quarterback, we'll get more turnovers," Ryan said. "And again, another week went by and we haven't scored on defense."

Shane Conlan, Buffalo's first draft pick who is struggling to win a starting linebacker job after missing two weeks of training, said the Bills have too many linebackers to give them all enough practice.

The Bills have 13 linebackers, including Conlan, in camp at Fredonia State College.

"If I could just have more work," Conlan said. "But it's not just me, it's everybody. I know what to do, but the techniques, I have to use them in the right places. That takes practice."

Injuries

Quarterback Jim McMahon's on-again, off-again playing status with the Chicago Bears appears to off — again.

Coach Mike Ditka, who had expected McMahon to start Monday night's preseason game against St. Louis, isn't even sure McMahon will be able to play against the Cardinals.

McMahon is still recovering from shoulder surgery performed last December and his ability to throw in practice has been limited by a sore arm.

Ditka said Mike Tomczak, who started the first two preseason games, would start against St. Louis and could get the call against the Super Bowl champion New York Giants in the season opener, Sept. 14.

"He (McMahon) threw some today but it was hard to tell," Ditka said. "It was wet out there and it was like throwing a hand grenade."

Running back George Rogers could miss Washington's regular-season opener because of a toe injury he suffered in practice several weeks ago. He has not played in a preseason game and Coach Joe Gibbs said if he doesn't play against Tampa Bay on Saturday, he would be hesitant to use Rogers without contact work.

Tony Eason, New England's starting quarterback, may not be ready for the regular-season opener against Miami on Sept. 13 because of a pulled hamstring. Coach Raymond Berry said veteran Steve Grogan will start against Minnesota on Saturday night.

Philadelphia put Martin Booker, a wide receiver, and Ben Tamburello, a rookie center, on injured reserve.

Wide receiver Lew Barnes, who also returns punts for the Chicago Bears, suffered a broken bone in his left leg in practice Tuesday and is out for the season.

White Returns

The Los Angeles Rams said running back Charles White would return to practice today, but he will have to undergo daily drug testing.

White, who was arrested for investigation of being under the influence of a controlled substance, also will receive counseling under the supervision of Dr. Forrest Tennant, who is considered one of the nation's leading authorities on treating drug-abuse problems.

"The way I understand it, the best thing for Charlie at this stage is to receive outpatient care," Rams Coach John Robinson said. "He will remain on the active roster."

Before he was arrested in what police said was "an incoherent state," White, a Heisman Trophy winner at Southern Cal, was thought to have beaten a drug problem that began in high school but escalated after he was drafted by the Cleveland Browns in 1980.

Kickers Cut

Ali Haji-Sheikh, who holds the NFL record for field goals in a season, was released by Atlanta, and the Dallas Cowboys cut in half the competitors for Rafael Septien's old job by getting rid of three kickers.

Haji-Sheikh, who kicked 35 field goals in 1983, his rookie season with the New York Giants, joined the Falcons last year to replace Mick Luckhurst, who injured his back. Luckhurst is back with the team and kicking well, while Haji-Sheikh missed two field goal attempts in Saturday's exhibition loss to Kansas City.

Dallas released Jeff Ward, an 11th-round draft choice from the University of Texas, and two free agents, Kerry Brady and Bryan Franco.

That left Roger Ruzek, David Trout and Luis Zendejas as the remaining the competitors for the job. Septien was released after being pleading guilty to indecency with a child.

The St. Louis Cardinals released place kicker Richard Spangler, who had been signed to give some competition to John Lee. Spangler was No. 6 on Ohio State's all-time scoring list with 294 points.

"Lam" Jones

Dallas, hampered by injuries to its wide receivers, signed Johnny "Lam" Jones to a multiyear contract. Jones, the second pick overall in the 1980 NFL draft, was waived by San Francisco last week after being acquired from the New York Jets earlier this month.

Rampant Soccer Falls To Jacksonville, 4-1

JACKSONVILLE — Rose High School's Rampants opened the 1987 soccer season Tuesday, bowing to Mideastern Conference power Jacksonville, 4-1.

Jacksonville has won the Mideastern title for the past four seasons.

Both teams scored single goals in the first half, which ended in a 1-1 deadlock. But Jacksonville pushed through three second half scores to take the win.

Mike Morgan put Jacksonville on the scoreboard with as assist by Chris Butler at the 13:23 mark. Rose came back three minutes later to tie it up as John Beasley scored with an assist by Mike Kasperek.

But in the second half, Jacksonville dominated play. Jason Glover put the Cardinals back on top at 49:52, assisted by Mike Crystal. Morgan added a second goal at 65:08 followed by Steve Herring at 69:02. Jeff Denning assisted on both of those goals.

Jacksonville took 28 shots on goal while Rose goalie Brian Wille recorded 23 saves. Rose got only three shots on goal while Jacksonville's Jim O'Byrne had two saves.

"Goalkeeper Brian Wille and sweeper Dallas McPherson played very well," Coach Will Wiberg said. "(Jacksonville) is an excellent team and we were quite fortunate to only be beaten by three goals."

Rose will open its home season on Thursday, hosting Eastern Wayne at 5:30 p.m. at Eppes Field.

Roanoke returns to action on Thursday, hosting Tarboro.

San Diego May Be Next Cup Location

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The next America's Cup regatta probably will be held in San Diego, says the chairman of the committee responsible for selecting the site of the next cup defense.

Although the America's Cup Committee met Sunday and broke without announcing a decision on the site and date of the next regatta, its chairman has spent the past two days notifying officials of other bidding venues that San Diego is the only site being considered.

Committee chairman Gerry Driscoll said the committee has decided not to consider other bids unless it determines that San Diegois incapable of hosting the event.

He said he has told this to officials from Hawaii, San Francisco, Newport, R.I., and Ventura, Calif.

"The four I contacted personally were told the same thing — that the committee must concentrate on San Diego until the matter here is resolved. The others were sent a letter of gratitude for their interest," Driscoll said.

"It doesn't look good for our cause," Fred Smales, director of Hawaii's effort, said Tuesday after having lunch with Driscoll. "It's not over, but I think San Diego would really have to mess something up to lose the America's Cup."

Smales said Hawaii won't make a formal presentation to the committee unless San Diego is ruled out, and the regatta is opened up to other bidders.

"On the one hand, I'm a little disappointed that we will not be making our bid," Smales said. "On the other hand, I appreciate the committee being honest with us and sparing us going to the expense if the exercise is futile.

"I'd say San Diego's chances now are well over 90 percent," he said.

The seven-member committee was chosen by the San Diego Yacht Club and Sail America, the syndicate the managed skipper Dennis Conner's $16 million Stars & Stripes campaign for the yacht club.

Tumbling Double Play

Phillies' Steve Jeltz tumbles over Chris Speier of the San Francisco Giants as Jeltz completes the double play in the third inning Tuesday in Philadelphia. (AP Laserphoto)

Speier's Return To Giants Has Keyed Their Success

By The Associated Press

Chris Speier, once a young phenom for the San Francisco Giants, has now become an old hero.

Speier, 37, hit a home run to snap an eighth-inning tie as the Giants beat the Philadelphia Phillies 3-2 Tuesday night. The victory gave San Francisco a 1½-game lead over Houston in the National League West.

"Chris Speier is the most valuable player on this ball club," Giants Manager Roger Craig said after the game.

With one out in the eighth and the score tied 2-2, Speier hit a drive off the left-field foul pole for his 10th homer of the season, against Kevin Gross, 8-11. On Monday, Speier hit a two-run homer in the Giants' 6-1 victory over the Phillies.

Elsewhere, Los Angeles defeated New York 3-1, Pittsburgh edged Cincinnati 1-0, St. Louis defeated Houston 7-1 and San Diego beat Montreal 5-1. The game bewteen Atlanta and Chicago at Wrigley Field was rained out.

Speier, when informed of Craig's "MVP" statement, laughed, and said, "That must be a difficult thing for him to give me such a compliment. My hat is off to everyone on the club. I'm just thankful to be part of the 24-man squad."

Atfer only one season in the minors, Speier became the Giants' regular shortstop in 1971 at the age of 21. That was the last time the Giants won the NL West.

He had wonderful range and could make just about any throw from anywhere on the field.

In 1972, he hit .269 with 15 homers and 71 runs batted in, and was a member of the All-Star team. He also was on the All-Star squad in 1975 and 1976.

As his range and batting eye diminished, the Giants looked elsewhere and in 1977 Speier was traded to Montreal for shortstop Tim Foli.

Then, there were stops in St. Louis, Minnesota and Chicago. Last year for the Cubs, Speier hit .284.

Following the 1986 season, Speier became a free agent and found few takers.

"I looked at the teams I thought needed a utility infielder. I picked San Francisco. As a situation for me and my family, San Francisco stood out like a sore thumb," Speier said.

"So, I called (coach) Don Zimmer and he talked to (president and general manager) Al Rosen and I signed. No other club had contacted me."

The reunion has been a joyous one, as Speier has filled in at second, short and third when injuries sidelined Robbie Thompson, Jose Uribe and Chris Brown, who later was traded to San Diego.

In 266 at-bats for the Giants, Speier is hitting .248 and has 34 runs batted in. He also has two grand slams this season. On the field, he's made only three errors.

Reliever Scott Garrelts, 11-6, pitched the last 2 1-3 innings for the victory.

The Phillies tied the score 2-2 in the third on a walk to Steve Jeltz, a sacrifice, Milt Thompson's run-scoring double and Mike Schmidt's RBI single.

The only gold medal for the host country, Greece, in the first modern Olympics in 1896 was in the marathon. The winner was Spyridon Louis, a messenger by trade.

Pirates 1, Reds 0

Mike Dunne pitched a two-hitter for his first major-league shutout and Johnny Ray's first-inning single drove in the game's only run as host Pittsburgh defeated Cincinnati, extending the Reds' losing streak to five games.

Dunne, 8-5, did not allow a runner past second base, striking out seven and walking one, as the Reds fell to 63-64, the first time they have been under .500 this season.

Dodgers 3, Mets 1

Fernando Valenzuela pitched a four-hitter, struck out 13, and pitched a complete game despite walking eight as Los Angeles beat New York at Shea Stadium.

Valenzuela, 11-11, tied his career high for walks in a game. Leading 2-0, the left-hander lost his shutout in the fifth inning when Mookie Wilson doubled and Tim Teufel hit an RBI single. The Mets loaded the bases in the fifth with none out, but Valenzuela struck out Kevin McReynolds, got Gary Carter to pop out and fanned Howard Johnson.

John Shelby hit a two-run homer for the Dodgers, his 18th, and Valenzuela drove in a run with a single.

Cardinals 7, Astros 1

Rookie Lance Johnson and Vince Coleman each tripled to key a two-run second inning and Jack Clark doubled to drive in his 100th run of the season, leading St. Louis over visiting Houston.

The victory moved first-place St. Louis 4½ games ahead of second-place New York in the NL East.

St. Louis, which had lost five straight games to Houston, had 12 hits in the handing the Astros only their second loss in 12 games and snapping Houston's three-game winning streak.

Padres 5, Expos 1

Stan Jefferson and Benito Santiago each homered to highlight a five-run third inning as host San Diego defeated Montreal.

Jefferson led off the third against starter Neal Heaton, 12-6, with his seventh homer, and Tony Gwynn, Randy Ready and Carmelo Martinez followed with consecutive singles for a 2-0 lead. Santiago, a rookie, followed with a three-run homer, his 17th.

Mark Grant, 4-7, pitched five-hit ball for 7 2-3 innings for the victory.

Hole In One Made

FARMVILLE — Joe Jenkins picked up his second career hole-in-one recently at the Farmville Golf and Country Club.

Jenkins' ace came on the 161-yard eighth hole at the club. He used a five-iron for the shot. Witnesses were Charlie Rose, Greg Hardison and Russell Phelps.

Ironically, Jenkins' first ace also came on a 161-yard hole on which he used a five-iron.

Clemson Is Rated High, But Don't Tell Coach Ford

By RICK SCOPPE
AP Sports Writer

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — Clemson is expected to rank as one of the top college football teams in the country in 1987, but do not talk to Coach Danny Ford about winning the national title.

Ford, who led Clemson to the national championship in 1981, said if he was betting he'd put his money elsewhere when it comes to the top-ranked college team at the end of the season.

"Oklahoma has 14 sure enough (NFL) draft picks next year out of their top 22 and five maybes, and Miami of Florida has 15 projected draft picks," Ford said Tuesday at the final stop of the Atlantic Coast Conference media tour.

"What do they say, 'The smart money bets.' I'd bet that way," Ford said. "I'd bet on an experienced, senior-type football team with talent."

Clemson, which finished 8-2-2 overall and won the ACC title in 1986 with a 5-1-1 record, has 10 seniors listed in its three-deep depth chart and is without an experienced tailback.

But the Tigers also return 18 starters and play eight home games, factors that helped them earn a preseason No. 9 ranking and the pick to win the ACC championship again.

"Where's our punter?" Ford said. "I ain't seen him."

Told the punting position was listed on the last page, he said: "I still ain't seen him."

Ford joked about his need for a punter, but the need is real.

Gone is Chris Spiers, whom Ford called "Bill Shortstop" because he played baseball for the Tigers. Before last season started, Spiers answered a newspaper advertisement asking for any student who thought he could punt to try out.

But Spiers, who averaged 39.2 yards a kick last season, was drafted in the first round of the annual major league draft by Milwaukee and has signed with the Brewers.

So Ford turned to advertising again this year. But this time Ford, with the help of the school's sports information department, put together a poster asking for punting help.

Those who replied weren't nearly as qualified as Spiers turned out to be last year.

"Our tryout wasn't as good as they've been," Ford said. "We probably spent too much time on the poster."

Out of about 24 candidates, only two were worth serious consideration, Ford said.

Not surprisingly, there were a few humorous moments at the tryouts.

Two prospective punters who played soccer ran a few yards and then kicked the football — soccer style. Another kicked the ball first with his left foot and then with his right.

"One kid couldn't kicked it no more than 12 yards three times," Ford said. "Then he said, 'My leg just don't feel right today.'"

Quarterback Rodney Williams said the tryouts were a "big joke" to the players.

"There's not a whole lot of punters on this campus, I'll tell you that," Williams said. "Or they didn't show up, if there were."

Still, Ford said he feels sure the problem will be solved before the ninth-ranked Tigers open the season Sept. 5 at home against Western Carolina. As of now, Rusty Seyle will do the punting as well as kick long field goals and handdle the kick-off chores, Ford said.

Seyle did not punt a year ago, but Ford said he can kick the ball 60 yards. Trouble is, he also kicks the ball 20 yards at times.

"We need consistency," Ford said. "But we'll be all right. It's not a big deal yet. I keep telling myself it's not a big deal yet."

While finding a punter may be Ford's top concern, it isn't his only one. In fact, Ford said he is not too pleased with his team's overall play less than two weeks before the season begins.

He hoped his club would pick up from the first half of its Gator Bowl game against Stanford. The Tigers grabbed a 27-0 halftime lead before holding on for a 27-21 victory.

"We were hoping the football team would come in and be a November football team and pick up where we started in the first half of the Stanford game," Ford said.

"It seems we started somewhere in the second half of the Stanford game and we're not as far along football-wise as we should be, especially offensively and our kicking game.

"I was hoping we was going to skip phase one, learning how to hold onto the football and learning how not to make mistakes and errors and missed assignments and penalties. But we're not that blessed with the ability to do that," he said.

"So we are back to really a very average August football team trying to get ready by Saturday week."

Pats Are The Choice In AFC East

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — If he could view the remains of the ravaged AFC East, Satchel Paige might never have uttered his famous line.

Instead, the legendary pitcher and philosopher might advise the New England Patriots: "Look back all you want, boys, because nobody's gaining on you."

Last year, the Patriots had the NFL's worst running game but still were second in the league in scoring. They won the division title.

Their rivals already have lost key players to injuries — quarterback Dan Marino and linebacker John Offerdahl of Miami, defensive stars Joe Klecko and Lance Mehl of the New York Jets, and fullback Randy McMillan, the Indianapolis Colts' best runner.

All the Buffalo Bills lost was 12 of their 16 games last season. They also have one of the league's toughest schedules.

The Patriots should repeat as division champions by merit as much as by default.

"As far as overall depth, we definitely are in the driver's seat," says Bill McPeak, the team's pro scouting director. "I don't know how you could pick against this ballclub."

New England has depth at nearly every position and new faces should improve two weaknesses — the defensive line and the rushing attack.

Sean Farrell, obtained in a trade with Tampa Bay, and 1987 draft choices Bruce Armstrong and Danny Villa bolster the offensive line. Add halfback Reggie Dupard, healthy again after being sidelined most of his rookie season last year, and the running game should move back toward its No. 6 rating of 1985.

New England is loaded at the other skill positions. Tony Eason and Steve Grogan return as the one-two quarterback punch and the new four wide-receiver alignment that includes Stanley Morgan and Irving Fryar will give them the opportunity to strike quickly.

The Patriots already have one of conference's best linebacking groups, led by Andre Tippett, and secondaries, led by Raymond Clayborn. The coaches are counting on defensive end Ken Sims to rebound from back surgery and improve the pass rush.

"You've got to think the Patriots are going to be an improved team," says Miami Coach Don Shula. "They had a lot of injuries up there last year. They're entering the third year of Raymond Berry" as head coach.

The other four AFC East teams have a chance to improve their defenses. They couldn't get much worse.

In a 28-team league, Buffalo was ranked 24th, Indianapolis 25th and the Jets and Dolphins were tied for 26th. The Colts, Bills and Jets had the three worst pass defenses in the NFL.

So Buffalo's top four choices were defensive players, as were Miami's top two, Indianapolis' first and three of the Jets' first four.

The Dolphins suffered a serious setback when Offerdahl, a Pro Bowl starter as a rookie last season, tore his right bicep muscle in the opening preseason game. It was expected to sideline him for 10 weeks and perhaps longer.

Miami probably will start the same secondary that was part of the league's seventh worst pass defense last season. Linebacker Hugh Green, who missed the last 13 games in 1986 with a knee injury, is being brought along slowly.

The extended holdout of first-round draft choice John Bosa, a defensive lineman from Boston College, deprived the Dolphins of much-needed help.

The Dolphins have fewer problems on offense, even though Marino, the NFL's most prolific passer of the 1980's, dislocated a finger on his passing hand. He may be ready for the season opener at New England.

The Dolphins ran less than any other team last year.

"We're never going to go crazy trying to establish a running game as long as we have the fastest gun the NFL has ever seen," Shula says.

For the Jets, running shouldn't be a problem. First-round choice Roger Vick figures to start at fullback and take some of the workload off the oft-injured Freeman McNeil. Ken O'Brien still has Wesley Walker and Al Toon to throw to.

The problems are on defense.

Nose tackle Klecko and linebacker Mehl are expected to miss half the season with knee injuries. Klecko's backup, Tom Baldwin is out for six to eight weeks. Defensive lineman Marty Lyons won't be ready for the start of the season.

As the injuries piled up last year, the Jets' 10-1 start turned into an 0-5 finish in which they allowed 36 points per game.

Three draft choices — linebackers Alex Gordon and Onzy Elam and nose tackle Gerald Nichols — have looked good in training camp. Gordon could start on the outside.

Quarterback Jim Kelly's first full NFL camp should help improve Buffalo's offense. A healthy Greg Bell, limited by injuries to just six games last year, could give the Bills a potent backfield with Ronnie Harmon and Robb Riddick.

Walt Corey takes over as coordinator of a defense that forced an NFL-low 18 turnovers last year and plans a more aggressive style. Linebacker Shane Conlan, the Bills' top draft pick, should contribute once he makes up for missing the first three weeks of training camp.

"The best way to help Jim Kelly is to have a dominating defense," Buffalo Coach Marv Levy says. "If you've got a great defense, you can take risks on offense."

Indianapolis will have Gary Hogeboom, sidelined for 11 games last year, at quarterback. But McMillan, who was hit by a car in April, is out for the season.

The Colts' hopes for an improved defense suffered from the long holdout of linebacker Cornelius Bennett, the second player drafted.

Indianapolis has the league's second-worst record over the past 10 years but won all three games after Coach Ron Meyer succeeded Rod Dowhower last season after an 0-13 start.

The Colts also have the weakest schedule in the division.

Of the other four teams, the Patriots' schedule may be the easiest. They're the only ones who get to play Miami, Buffalo, Indianapolis and the Jets twice each.

NFL Players Will Strike If No Progress Is Made

HEMPSTEAD, N.Y. (AP) — NFL players are ready, even anxious, to strike next month if no progress is made in contract talks with owners, union president Gene Upshaw says.

Upshaw said in meetings with NFL teams, the players are telling him, "If they (management) aren't negotiating with you, why should you keep meeting with them? We've got to be prepared to take the step.

"When do we strike? That's what they (the players) are saying. When you hear from the stars of the league, there are a lot of guys who don't want to wait to strike after the first game. They want to go now."

Upshaw said the players can't legally strike until Tuesday, Sept. 15, two days after the regular season starts.

"We sent a 60-day notice (on July 15) to the clubs and to the National Labor Relations Board," Upshaw said. "The notice expires with the playing of the first league game. Legally, the first day we can go out is Sept. 15. The players say they are ready to go."

Upshaw said that since there has been no progress at the negotiating table, nion representatives have been meeting with teams at their training camps.

"It is my job to go out and inform the players of exactly the lack of progress," Upshaw said. "One of the things the players have to understand is the issues and the process. Then they will make the decision."

Upshaw said that Jack Donlan, head of the NFL Management Council, told the players during a meeting at New Orleans that the league isn't prepared to give them free agency without compensation. Upshaw said the players made a new offer on free agency, which he didn't spell out, but it was rejected by the NFL.

Donlan couldn't be reached for comment Tuesday night.

Upshaw said he waited until July 15 to file the 60-day notice because he didn't want a possible strike to start until team rosters were set. The current contract expires next Monday.

"I wanted to make sure everyone had a chance to make the team," Upshaw said. "I wanted all the cutdowns out of the way. I wanted to be dealing with a group of players who would actually be affected by the agreement."

Upshaw said the players have a negotiating plan that includes salaries, pensions and other items, contrary to reports that free agency is the dominant issue.

"You cannot isolate one issue," he said. "We refuse to do that. We are not going to let this be a one-issue negotiation. I've told players, the players have told me, it is a complete package. We are going to negotiate the whole package and we are not going to pull one piece out. It's all one piece."

The players' negotiating team plans to visit the Buffalo Bills camp today. By Thursday, the union representatives will have met with all 28 teams.

Upshaw said the players will not seek outside help to resolve their differences with the owners.

"We are not looking for help from arbitrators, we are not looking for help from the courts," he said. "We don't see that as an alternative. The quickest way to change things is for the players to control them. ... If you go to a court or to an arbitaror, you lose control of the outcome."

Fencik Is Demoted

LAKE FOREST, Ill. (AP) — The guard is changing for the Chicago Bears. Gary Fencik doesn't like it, but the veteran safety knows he has to accept it.

The tipoff came when the Bears decided to "experiment" by starting Todd Bell instead of Fencik alongside Dave Duerson against the Pittsburgh Steelers in last Saturday's NFL exhibition game.

The experiment became reality this week when Fencik was notified the move would be permanent.

A regular with the Bears for most of his 11 seasons, Fencik, 33, hasn't missed a start in the last three seasons and resents the demotion.

"I don't feel as if I've played myself out of the position," said Fencik, the Bears' career leader with 1,110 tackles, 38 pass interceptions and 50 takeaways (interceptions and fumble recoveries).

With his starting spot gone, Fencik is now concerned about making the Bears' final roster.

"Things do not not always work out as you like," Fencik said. "I still have contributions to make. I'm healthy and I've played well in the preseason games. I only hope that after the preseason, I'm still a member of this team."

Coach Mike Ditka said Fencik had no reason to worry.

"I don't think this is a slight at Gary," Ditka said. "We had a decision to make and to try to put our best people on the field. Backup people have to play on special teams and he already has volunteered to do that."

Fencik said that defensive coordinator Vince Tobin told him earlier this week that the Bears were going to go with Bell and Duerson as the safeties.

"I did not have a good night; I've slept better," Fencik said. "I've been told that's the way it will be. The Bears asked me to come back after last season and I've worked hard the past six months. I want to be part of this team."

The Bears also have Shaun Gayle available in the defensive secondary.

"Shaun Gayle, Bell, Duerson, I know their strengths and I like them all," Fencik said, "but no one has played better at free safety in the preseason than I have."

"I've enjoyed playing with Gary, no question about it," Duerson said. "I was drafted to be his apprentice. It's a changing of the guard. When I came here it was Fencik and (Doug) Plank. Then it was Fencik and Duerson. Now it's Bell and Duerson.

"It's a matter of getting the best 11 men on the field," Duerson said. "Todd and I are better athletes, we're younger, fresher. We can do a lot more."

Eskimos Cautioned To Avoid Oils

NUUK, Greenland (AP) — Greenland's Eskimos, stars of television ads promoting fish-oil capsules to Americans, are being advised by their own doctors to go easy on the whale blubber, seal and other meat that provides the oil.

The doctors agree the fish oil is probably beneficial to the circulatory system, as the advertisements claim. What troubles them is the high level of toxic mercury being found in the meat of marine mammals in far-northern waters.

"Among people in northern Greenland, we are finding serum mercury levels two, three or four times higher than recommended by the World Health Organization," said Dr. Jens Peter Brangstrup Hansen, deputy chief medical officer for this Danish island territory.

Brangstrup Hansen and other physicians also pointed out that although the Eskimos seldom suffer heart disease, as noted in TV commercials showing them heartily paddling kayaks, they have high incidences of stroke and other illnesses, including arthritis, probably brought on by long years cramped in those very kayaks.

Two U.S. drugmakers have mounted major advertising campaigns to sell diet supplements based on omega-3 fatty acids, substances found in oily, cold-water fish and in the seals, whales, walruses and other mammals that eat them.

Studies of Greenland Eskimos, whose diet is heavy with such foods, found that they suffered heart attacks at only one-tenth the rate of European Danes. That discovery and subsequent research elsewhere led scientists to theorize that omega-3 fatty acids protect the human heart by lowering levels of blood fat that causes hardening of arteries, and by slowing the clotting of blood.

Some specialists balk at all-out endorsement of the concentrates, however, noting that research is only in its preliminary stages. Some suggest the oil is beneficial only when fish is substituted for red meat in the diet, and would do little good if simply taken as capsules along with a diet heavy in red meat.

In his latest review of the studies, a key Danish researcher, Dr. Joern Dyerberg, went no further than to endorse seafood generally in the diet, "while awaiting the results of controlled clinical trials" on omega-3 fatty acids themselves.

Brangstrup Hansen, meanwhile, has other concerns.

"We know the Eskimos' traditional food is supposedly healthy food. It's beneficial to the arteries," he told a reporter visiting Nuuk, the Greenland capital. "But we have a problem with it — the high content of mercury we are finding in marine mammals, especially whales."

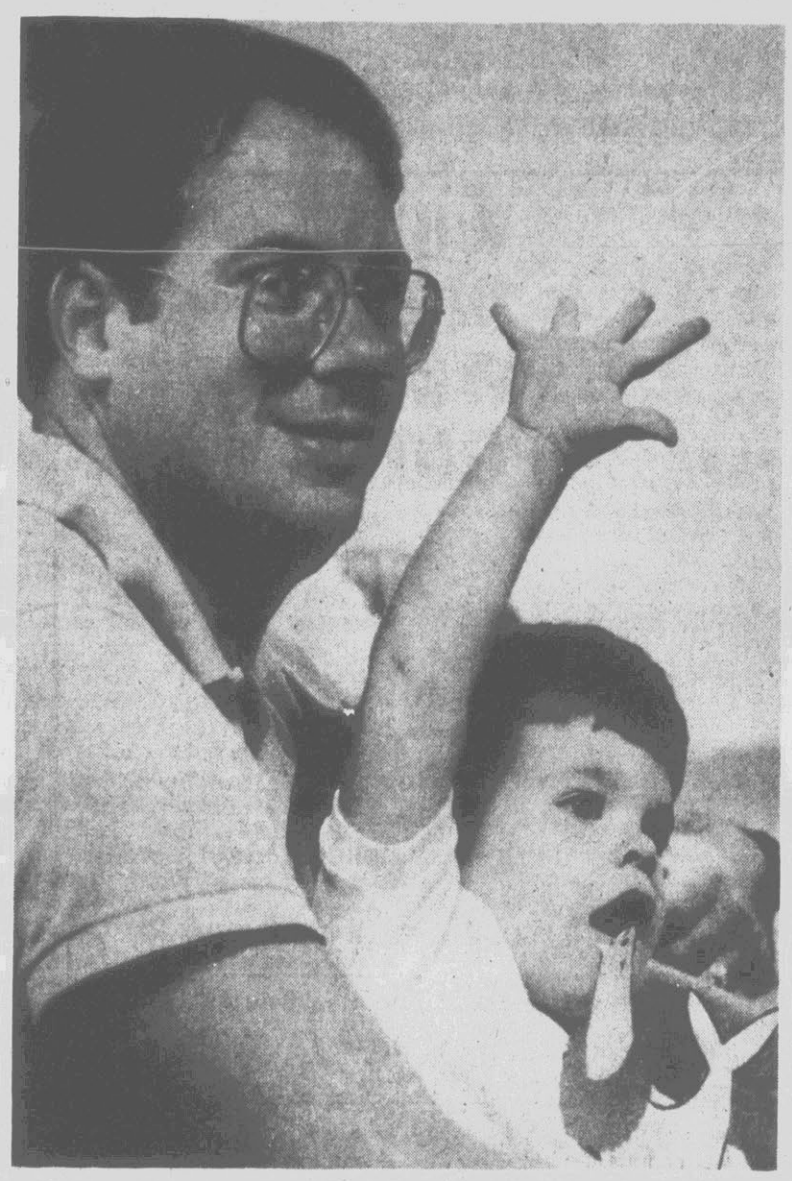
Sheppard Memorial And Kids Add Up To Book Magic

'Children don't stumble onto good books by themselves; they must be introduced to the wonder of words put together in such a way to spin out pure joy and magic.'

Gladys Hunt, author of 'Honey for a Child's Heart'



FATHER AND SON — Carl Schnier took advantage of some extra vacation time recently and attended preschool story hour at Sheppard Memorial Library with his son Christoper. Schnier said he had wanted to attend for some time to meet the people that had a hand in helping his son become "more outgoing" this summer.

JUGGLING EXHIBITION — Story hour is not just for story telling. Librarians also schedule appearances by area residents like juggler Samara Hamaze and her sister-assistant Noura Hamaze, who livened up a program featuring circus books, Disney cartoon film and other activities.

SITTING PRETTY — Children 3 and under can participate in story telling and reading, but parents should remember that the art of listening is an acquired talent that must be taught and cultivated gradually. "It doesn't happen overnight," according to Sheppard Memorial children's librarian Phyllis Conner.

Phyllis Conner's students are young from a traditional standpoint.

But according to the Sheppard Memorial children's librarian, a child is really never too young to be introduced to the multifaceted and entertaining world of books.

"Remember that preschoolers are like sponges, soaking up their environment. They should be exposed to the best," and should not be forced to endure "boring trite stories or dull unimaginative illustrations when there are wonderful books available."

Ms. Conner is one of four librarians staffing the children's division of Sheppard and the library's East and Carver branches, which all offer fall, winter, spring and summer programs for children aged 18 months up to 12 years. Details on upcoming autumn programs are available at Sheppard, 830-4581; East Branch, 830-4582, and Carver Branch, 830-4583.

WHERE'S MY BALL — Librarian Phyllis Conner uses colorful, large print books and lots of facial expression during preschool story hour at Sheppard Memorial Library. Other techniques Ms. Conner uses which parents might consider putting to home use include varying length and subject matter of reading and adding a third dimension to story time whenever possible. For example, have a bowl of blueberries ready to be eaten during or after the reading of Robert McCluskey's "Blueberries For Sale." Or if you read a story about a ball, baseball glove or other object, have one on hand to play with before or after reading. Children as young as 18 months can attend Sheppard, Carver Branch and East Branch children's programs. However, all tots attending preschool story hour must be accompanied by an adult.

Oklahoma City Firm Finds Military Gear For Movies

By BILL JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — When Stanley Kubrick wanted some palm trees, vehicles and military uniforms for his movie, "Full Metal Jacket," he called Charley Biggs.

Some of the uniforms were on hand at Biggs' store, Charley's Militaria; others, he had to manufacture. Biggs got the palm trees in Spain for $30,000, the vehicles in Europe and then shipped them all to England.

"We had to make London look like Hue during the 1968 battle in Vietnam," Biggs said one recent day while resting for a few minutes in the cluttered office of his building in south Oklahoma City.

Bookcases are crammed with illustrated volumes of weapons. On one wall are sketches of uniforms for a forthcoming movie. Another wall displays advertising photographs of military equipment in use in Grenada, Honduras and Lebanon, equipment his company can provide.

The office is housed toward the rear of a 13,000-square-foot building on an acre and a half. In the front is a somewhat typical military surplus store and the rest of the building holds barrels, boxes, bins and racks of military equipment and uniforms. He plans an addition with a loading dock.

"We're really a four-part operation," Biggs said. "We have a walk-in store. We have a mail order business, probably about the fifth biggest military surplus mail order outfit there is. We have our sales to governmental units, federal, state and local and to some foreign countries. And then we have our movies."

Biggs opened Charley's Militaria in 1969 shortly after serving with the 25th Infantry Regiment in Vietnam. It was while he was in the service that he met Fred Rexer, an actor and screenwriter. Through his relationship with Rexer and others, Biggs began supplying military equipment to Hollywood prop companies.

"We've supplied equipment to maybe 20 movies since the late 1970s," Biggs said. "I imagine we've helped equip at least 100 TV shows. Whatever it takes, we get the job done."

Among the other major films for which Biggs has supplied equipment or uniforms are "Apocalypse Now," "Uncommon Valor," "Raw Deal" and the soon-to-be-released "Hamburger Hill."

Biggs' company was involved for about 2½ years with "Full Metal Jacket," and spent about 17 months on "Apocalypse Now."

While he has thousands of military items stored at his main building and in warehouses, the company also makes a lot of its equipment. Charley's Militaria has its own casting machines to turn out rubber and aluminum guns and grenades.

"When you're putting 150 men in the field, you can't afford to give each one of them a real gun," Biggs said. "Then, too, some of the equipment has to be the 'drop' type, like you see a guy fall from a building or something. And the grenades clipped to the chest need to be soft for when the actor falls on them."

When he needed thousands of yards of material to make Vietnam-era uniforms, it wasn't to be found so he went to a mill and contracted for the material.

"That has turned out good for us," he said. "It's a stock item we keep on hand now."

Biggs has developed contacts throughout the world to supply equipment he doesn't have. "We don't have any tanks, for instance, but I know where we can get them," he said.

In supplying equipment and props for movies, Biggs primarily deals with the producer but also works with the director, art director, costumer and set designer. He and his staff of 19 often spend hundreds of hours on research to make sure that every piece of equipment and uniform is authentic.

"I try to work from photographs of the action if at all possible," he said. "We'll interview hundreds of soldiers who were there to find out what outfits were in the battle and who all was there.

"The Vietnam veterans are the ones now going to see those movies, and they're quick to spot something that isn't authentic."

The company also has helped equip World War II and Civil War films.

While Biggs is able to locate much of the equipment either in his warehouses or from people he knows, he readily makes what isn't available. "Right now, we have a call for a lot of Soviet gear and we're casting that now," he said.

There are tricks to making the props, just as there are for many other lines of work: A diet drink can gets a coat of paint and a cap and becomes a smoke grenade; a spray can, in the same manner, is turned into a trip flare; a new pair of boots, after being sandblasted and treated with a chlorine spray, appears well-worn.

Biggs doesn't advertise but depends on word of mouth for movie and TV contracts. And his company is doing well.

"Our net worth now is about $3 million," he said. "That's not bad considering that I started 18 years ago with only $750."

Mom-Daughter Team On Book

LOS ANGELES (AP) — When Carol Burnett and her daughter, Carrie Hamilton, were "Under One Roof," it was less than a perfect household: Ms. Hamilton was on drugs.

Now, the two are collaborating on a book by the same name by writing alternate chapters on the experience. Ms. Hamilton has been free of drugs for five years safter undergoing a treatment program, said Rick Ingersoll, a spokesman for Burnett.

The mother-daughter team also is to star in a new movie for CBS called "Hostage."

Burnett will play a lonely widow who is kidnaped by a 19-year-old fugitive from prison, played by Ms. Hamilton.

Ms. Hamilton starred in the television series, "Fame," and her mother made a guest appearance on the show last year.

Disney's Film Sets Sales Pace

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "Stakeout," a Walt Disney detective thriller starring Richard Dreyfuss, was the nation's biggest box office success last weekend with $5.5 million in ticket sales.

Cheech Marin's irreverent barrio romp "Born in East L.A." was second with $4.3 million.

"Can't Buy Love" was in third place with $4.01 million and "Dirty Dancing," the Catskills romance featuring Patrick Swayze, was fourth with $4 million.

But the movie with the biggest per-screen box office draw was "The Big Easy," starring Dennis Quaid as a Cajun cop, which made its debut last weekend on only 32 screens. It took in $353,259 for a whopping $11,039 per screen.

Moviegoers also found their way in to "No Way Out," the fifth most popular film with $3.8 million in its second week of release. The double-cross thriller stars Kevin Costner as a Navy officer trapped in intrigue after the murder of the mistress of the secretary of defense.

The latest James Bond film, "The Living Daylights," starring Timothy Dalton, dropped from second to sixth place with a $3.6 million gross after three weeks of release.

In seventh place was the summer sleeper hit "La Bamba," with $3.3 million, while the teen-vampire picture "The Lost Boys" was eighth with $2.3 million. "Robocop" was ninth with a $2.1 million gross and Cannon's "Masters of the Universe" was No. 10 with a $1.6 million take.

The box-office gross is determined by the amount of tickets a movie sells over the weekend, always a much stronger sales period than the rest of the week. Studios use the weekend box-office to calculate how well a movie is doing.

Here are the top box-office films for the weekend as tallied by Exhibiter Relations Co., with distributor, weekend gross, number of screens, per-screen average, total gross, number of weeks in release and estimated production costs. Distributors supply the gross amount figures. Figures not available are indicated by n-a.

New Orleans Museums Prepare For Pope's Visit

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — French Quarter museums are turning to the city's Catholic history to honor the visit of Pope John Paul II next month, while the New Orleans Museum of Art displays religous art.

Bibles, a first communion gown and candle and a table set for a sumptuous dinner on the Feast of the Assumption are all on display at the Hermann-Grima Historic House.

The display, which will run through the third week of September, shows how large a place religion held in everyday life for Creole families in the early 19th century, said Charles Mackie, director of the house.

As one moves through the house, the exhibits move from baptism to confirmation to marriage, touching on the commemoration of feast days.

"Creoles downplayed birthdays and set more store in the patron saint's name day," said curator Jan Bradford.

She said there were six Maries in the household in 1835, so the dining room is laid out as it might have been for dessert on the Feast of the Assumption — the name day of the Virgin Mary.

There is not only a huge two-tiered cake but dishes for ice cream — a delicacy that would have been bought or made only for special occasions.

Even the 2-year-old baby would be allowed to stay up late for the occasion, said Mackie.

In the bedroom is a prie-dieu, a small padded stand on which to kneel for daily prayers. The one in the Hermann-Grima House is from the 1850s but it is not one owned by the family, Bradford said.

The cover on the family's prie-dieus, like other religious needlework, was probably embroidered by one of the women who lived there, Mackie said.

As the mistress of the house taught her daughters the intricacies of fine sewing, the guides explain, she would weave a thread of religious instruction into the lesson.

Intricate stitching is also on display at the New Orleans Museum of Art, which is showinng "Sacred Treasures: An Exhibition in Honor of the Papal Visit."

The exhibit, which closes Sept. 27, features ceremonial religious artifacts such as ornate crosses and other reflections of Catholic pageantry.

Those include 10 medallions illustrating the mysteries of the rosary, embroidered in Bruges, Belgium in the late 19th century to be sewn onto processional banners.

Each is set on a 15-inch-high oval of cream-colored brocade. Within each oval is embroidered an oval rosary, finished with a small ivory cross. And inside those are embroidered colorful scenes illustrating the mysteries of the rosary — five significant episodes of Jesus' life and five after his death.

They were lost until the last decade, when they were found in the attic of St. Anthony Padua Priory. Anthony of Padua, fittingly enough, is the patron saint of people who have lost something.

Also on display are reliquaries — ornate containers for religious relics such as a piece of wood thought to be part of the cross on which Christ was crucified.

The September exhibit at the Historic New Orleans Collection shows artifacts of the first person born in Louisiana to become a priest.

Abbe Adrien Emmanuel Roquette, known as Chahta-Ima — "He Who Is Like A Choctaw" — to the Indians with whom he worked, was born in New Orleans in 1813 and lived most of his 74 years near Bayou Lacombe.

The exhibit includes photographs of Roquette and his family as well as his religious vestments, missal and other religious items he owned.

The Louisiana State Museumm in the Presbytere will honor a Catholic order of nuns and The Rosary — a school which it founded in 1887 on St. Charles Ave.

"Sacred Heart: A Century of Love and Learning" covers more than a century, since it starts with the order's foundation in France in 1800 to educate young Catholic women.

The exhibit, which will open Sept. 9 and run through June 1988, will include a re-creation of a dormitory alcove like those used by boarding students.

"We're re-creating sort of a generic dormitory alcove," said Tamra Carboni, the museum's director of public programs. "The furnishings we're going to use are early 20th century. We're just trying to get across the stark kind of circumstances in which the boarders lived."

She said The Rosary no longer has boarding students, but had 30 boarders among its 140 students in 1905.

The exhibit includes numerous pieces from the convent at Grand Coteau, including a machine which the nuns there used to make caps for their habits, a branding iron used on the cattle once raised there, and a dentists' chair and foot drill. Dentists had to visit the convent because the nuns were forbidden to leave their cloister.

Carboni said the Order of the Sacred Heart set many precedents for public schools. Girls were taught a wide range of subjects, from painting and sewing to geometry, romance languages and literature.

"There was also a feeling that they needed to be made socially aware, to know there were people less fortunate than they and how to help them," Carboni said.

Ferrets Becoming Popular As Pets

By GARRY MITCHELL
Associated Press Writer

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — Ferrets, the small weasel-like animals related to the European polecat, are gaining popularity as pets in the South, perhaps for their playful attitude, say veterinarians and pet owners.

Dr. Anthony Drake, a Montgomery veterinarian, said he recently purchased a ferret for his 11-year-old daughter, Deborah.

"The trick is to get them very young, 6 to 7 weeks old, so they are bonded to you," said Drake. "They seem to be good natured."

Drake said ferrets are vulnerable to the same diseases that afflict dogs and cats, such as distemper and heartworm.

One warning: ferrets can give off a musky odor that's offensive to some people. The secretion gland can be removed, Drake said.

Dalton Halbrook of Prattville, an Alabama Conservation Department game and fish law enforcement officer, said his ferret, Leroy, likes to run loose in the house.

"He eats kitten food," said Halbrook, who has owned Leroy for four years.

Mike Hemingway and his wife, Teresa, found that raising ferrets can be profitable.

"We had seven at one time," said Hemingway, an auto mechanic in Mobile. They became interested in ferrets by visiting friends who already owned them.

"We charged $50 for the pick of the litter," said Hemingway. "It's fairly cheap to raise them. We let them run through the house and they mainly eat cat food."

He said the younger ones want to bite, but they get used to their owners and other pets in the house, like dogs and cats. Hemingway said he also raises poodles.

He said the albino ferrets are the most valuable.

Pet store owner Cherlina Monteiro said the popularity of ferrets gave birth to a new pet food, Ferret Diet, although most ferret owners feed their pets cat food.

Ferrets also can be trained to use a litter box. Some can be cantankerous once riled, though most merely hop around in an idle threat.

Linda Beasley of Brewton said her brother tried to punish his ferret.

"It got away and tore the insulation from under the dishwasher," Mrs. Beasley recalled.

She ran a newspaper ad recently trying to sell her 8-month-old ferret, Tiny. "We are moving or else I wouldn't be selling it," she said.

Ferrets were once trained to hunt rats and rabbits.

"They have no fear," said Bob Shaw, who owns a Great Dane and a Doberman pinscher in Mobile. Shaw helped his daugher, Cindy, raise 1-year-old Fidgett, a female ferret. "She's half-albino, half-sable, with a face masked like a raccoon."

Shaw said Fidgett's only downfall is "going to the bathroom in the wrong place." But she's not afraid of the Great Dane. "The dogs stay outside," he said.

Ex-Con Studies Film, TV Offers

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — Vincent Pelliccia, pardoned 41 years after escaping from a prison work crew, says he's postponing his planned retirement in Florida because of the film and television deals he's been offered.

"Vinnie said that he has to get a secretary to handle all the calls that he is getting from producers who want to film his story," said Terry Dunne, a payroll worker at Warner Bros. and a longtime friend.

About 50 friends and relatives turned out at a Veterans of Foreign Wars hall Sunday to toast Pelliccia, 62.

Pelliccia was pardoned by Virginia Gov. Gerald Baliles last week for his 1946 escape there after serving a few months of a 10-year sentence for a store burglary.

Neighbors and colleagues said Pelliccia has been honest since moving to Southern California in 1959. He raised five children and worked as an electrician for the Burbank Studios until April.

Spelling Signs

LOS ANGELES (AP) — After a career of creating television series from the 1960s hit, "The Mod Squad," to last year's flop, "Life with Lucy," Aaron Spelling has extended his contract with ABC for another three years.

For the first time in many years, however, the contract is not exclusive. Spelling will be free to offer shows to the other networks.

Spelling has been one of the most prolific producers in the history of television, with 30 series. In all, he has produced 1,935 hours for ABC.

Two Spelling shows are still on ABC: "Hotel," entering its fifth year, and "Dynasty," going into its eighth year.

Auditions

The Greenville Choral Society will begin rehearsals for its 18th season at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at Memorial Baptist Church, 1510 Greenville Blvd.

Singers interested in joining the Choral Society may audition at the church on Sunday between 2 p.m. and 4 p.m.

The fall program will center around the Ralph Vaughan Williams "Mass in g minor," an a cappella work for double chorus. In addition, the group will perform a section of well-known holiay musical selections.

Since its beginning in 1969, the Greenville Choral Society has set as its goal to bring fine choral music to the singers and listeners of Greenville and the surrounding areas.

Singers interested in more details are to contact the musical director, Dr. Rhonda Fleming at 756-3613.

Program In Safe Boating Scheduled

Local sailors with extensive experience on the water will teach a course in safe boating beginning Sept. 14 at 7 p.m. The course is open to the pulic and will be held for a duration of 12 weeks at E.B. Aycock Junior High School.

The only fee for the course is $15 for a textbook and other materials.

Instructors are members of the United States Power Squadron, the largest private boating orgnization in the world. They have boating knowledge ranging from fishing on the river to ocean voyaging.

Leon Gipson, commander of the Tar River unit of USPS, encourages even those who have a lot of baoting experience to check out the course. "The course is also ideal for family members who want to know what to do if their skipper falls overboard or is incapacitated," Gipson said.

Gipson will teach engine troubleshooting. His wife Tomeka, commander of the squadron last year, will give instructions on how to read a nautical chart.

Dr. Jack Chamberlain of the East Carolina University School of Medicine is course chairman. He will be assisted by Lt. Jody Wilkinson.

Required safety equipment and regulations will be taught by Dr. Duane Webb, U.S. Coast Guard license hold and member of the ECU Medical School faculty. Two other medical school professors, Drs. William Fore and Richard Merrill, will teach rope work, safe boat handling, rules of water traffic and water laws and many other topics relating to safety in boats, including how to make a Mayday call correctly.

Basic navigation will be taught by squadron education officer Kathleen Kennedy. She has logged 6,000 miles offshore water travel. "We hope that by providing this course we can save people from learning everything the hard way," she said.

Squadron members feel their instruction will help in saving lives. Statistics show that the majority of boating fatalities involve people who never had any formal training in seamanship or navigation.

In addition to safety-related topics, all kinds of basic boating infromation are included in the course. Tar River veteran Charles Hammon will introduce the principles of sailboat theory and practice. Trailering tips, boat types and tides are among topics he will teach.

Members of the Tar River Squadron were recognized last years as the outstanding squadron in the North Carolina district for achievements in education and public service.

The public boating course is an annual activity. Members also assist the federal government in updating and correcting nautical charts and survey maps.

For more information, contact: Leon Gipson, 752-1100, ext. 321; Kathleen Kennedy, 757-6494; Dr. Duane Webb, 551-4652, or Dr. Jack Chamberlain, 551-2383.

POET WINNER

NEW YORK (AP) — Josephine Jacobsen has been named the 52nd recipient of a $10,000 fellowship for "distinguished poetic achievement" by the Academy of American Poets.

Jacobsen is the author of seven books of poetry, most recently "The Sisters: New and Selected Poems" and "The Chinese Insomniacs." She is also the author of two collections of short fiction and two volumes of theater criticism.

In another action, the academy announced that Garrett Kaoru Hongo's "The River of Heaven" had been chosen as the 1987 Lamont Poetry Selection.

Hongo has been awarded a $1,000 cash prize and his book is to be published in the spring of 1988. The academy said it would purchase 2,000 copies of the book.

Big-Time Soviet Rock Music Group Lives On Small-Time Performances

MOSCOW (AP) — Seven rock musicians in jeans and sneakers sauntered onto the stage of a black-walled basement theater late one night after the actors had gone home.

They sat in a semi-circle of wooden chairs tuning their flutes, violins, guitars and drums while the lead singer, looking thin in his multi-colored shirt of loosely crocheted leather thongs, chatted and joked with a few of the 200 or so spectators.

When he sat down, his clear tenor and acoustic guitar led the band into an hour and a half of tunes sounding sometimes like American country or folk, sometimes like the blues.

No screaming fans, no flashing lights, no stage show, no big bucks. Another pretty typical performance for Boris Grebenshchikov and Aquarium, one of the Soviet Union's hottest rock groups.

After 15 years of growing but officially unrecognized fame, most performances by the 33-year-old balladeer and his Leningrad group still would be too small-time for most of their big name Western counterparts.

The group is cutting its second record for the state-run Melodiya label, and Grebenshchikov is going to New York in September to arrange a recording session there.

All 200,000 copies of Aquarium's first album, made by Melodiya from tapes circulating in the Soviet underground music world, sold out in hours. Although the group still doesn't have official recognition, the new records indicate Soviet authorities are willing to blur the lines somewhat to give de facto recognition to popular groups outside the official system.

Authorities here tried for years to squelch rock music but have eased up recently. Some groups have become "official," signing on with concert organizations that book their performances and recording albums for the state-run label.

Aquarium, which emphasizes spirituality and introspection in its songs, is wary of losing its soul along with its unofficial status and straddles the line between official and unofficial.

Authorities nonetheless are permitting the trip to New York, where Grebenshchikov plans to set up a recording session with British and American artists and to return in January with other members of his band for the actual recording.

He has appeared on official Soviet television and is interviewed by the Soviet press.

"We don't want any superior authority," the rock star said, explaining his reluctance to accept official standing. "We want to be masters of ourselves."

In an interview in a crowded and stuffy room backstage after the unofficial concert in central Moscow's Tabakov Theater, Grebenshchikov credited Mikhail S. Gorbachev, the Communist Party leader, with creating the new attitude that has allowed the group to make albums and hold some official concerts without submitting to censors.

"Thanks to Mikhail Gorbachev and 'perestroika' (reorganization), we have a chance to be ourselves in public," said the musician, crouched in a corner of the room and speaking English in a clear, quiet voice.

In the West, an artist with Grebenshchikov's fame would be a millionaire, but the group's recent artistic success has done little to improve his living conditions. Grebenshchikov, his wife and 2½-year-old son share a Leningrad apartment with two other families. In an arrangement typical of the communal quarters made necessary by a chronic housing shortage, the Grebenshchikovs have one of the apartment's three bedrooms to themselves but must share the bathroom and kitchen. They have no telephone.

Because Aquarium has refused to sign on with any official concert organization, getting paid for performances is a headache, said Marina Albee, president of Belka International, a private, U.S.-based firm that is sponsoring the New York trip.

Musicians can't be paid directly for their concerts and don't share in proceeds from the sale of tickets, which by Western standards are quite inexpensive anyway. Instead, groups that sponsor concerts pay official organizations, such as the state concert agency, which then pay the musicians for their work.

Without the formal tie to a recognized state organization, there is no official way for musicians to be paid.

When they do perform officially, Aqarium members share a 9-ruble ($14) fee. Grebenshchikov received 300 rubles (about $450) for the tape from which Melodiya produced the hot-selling first Aquarium album.

Grebenshchikov said he manages to make enough money from his music to support his family. But to keep from being considered a parasite — someone who does not have an approved job — his official profession is playwright.

Aquarium does some hard rock 'n' roll, but those who follow the group said the soft rock with folk and blues influences as performed at the Tabakov Theater recently was more typical of the group's repertoire.

Amish Lifestyle Saves The Day

HARMONY, Minn. (AP) — Curiosity about the devout, old-fashioned Amish lifestyle has become the hot ticket for Michel Farm Vacations, a new tourism business in a southeastern Minnesota town that has felt the sting of a troubled farm economy.

"The main draw is the Amish. Those tours and our (gift) store are carrying us now. They're way ahead of what I expected," said Vernon Michel, who started the business last fall with his wife, Paula.

"Our idea is to bring people here for a week to utilize the whole area, instead of pulling them off the highway and into town for a couple of hours or a day," said Michel.

"We want to tie everything this area has to offer together — the Amish, trout fishing, canoeing, hiking and hunting — to the farms, historic sites and golf courses," said Michel, whose company basically acts as a booking agent.

The business serves as a liaison between eager tourists and bed-and-breakfast farms, rural cabins for rent, Amish wanting customers for their homemade goods and various recreational businesses and tourist attractions in southeastern Minnesota and northeastern Iowa.

Some of the Amish, who sell everything from fresh pies and garden produce to bright woven egg baskets and rolltop desks, welcome the extra income from the tourists.

"I don't mind them, if they don't ask religious questions. They can take pictures of buildings and animals, but not of humans," said Lydia Ann Hershberger, an Amish woman, as she set a sheet of hot date cookies down to cool.

"I don't mind farm questions. I enjoy people coming, as long as we make sales," she added.

On the 1860s-style Amish farm of Jerry Hershberger and Henry Petershiem, visitors may watch work in the buggy repair and wheel shop, buy Lydia Ann's baked goods or watch her skillfully hand-stitch the pieced quilts of others.

"There are about 10 Amish farms where we can take car tours. But they've said no more bus tours," Michel said. "I can't blame them for not wanting the buses. I think they're concerned about liability. It's hard to control a bus crowd. The Amish are afraid kids could get hurt and then sue. They don't carry insurance."

Car Owners Pay Extra For That Personal Message

By MARVIN HARRIS
Associated Press Writer

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Brian Reaves joined a record number of Alabamians when he paid an extra $50 to get more mileage out of his automobile tag.

Reaves bought a personalized tag that read "ZAPCAR."

He is one of 17,870 Alabamians in fiscal 1986 to pay to exercise their originality, individuality and, in some cases, flamboyance.

This year, the Montgomery car stereo salesman shunned promoting Zapco, a brand of stereo equipment in his car, and chose another message.

"My friends and I made up a list of 30 tags we could get," Reaves said. "I chose '4U2HEAR.'"

In choosing that tag, Reaves likely became part of yet another record number of personalized tag buyers in the state.

Alabamians have driven up the number of personalized tags since 1977, when the tags were first issued and 24 were ordered. In the first quarter of fiscal 1986, the state issued 3,441 personalized tags. In the first quarter of fiscal 1987, that number jumped to 4,503.

Lisa Bearden of Auburn University knows firsthand why people buy the tags, once known as "prestige" or "vanity" tags.

"I think they're making a statement," she said. "My tag indicated my flamboyance."

Flamboyance expressed once on an automobile tag was enough, however, for the assistant professor of counseling-psychology. She bought a 1984 tag saying, "L B Bama." The L and B were for her initials and Bama was for the University of Alabama, where she earned her doctorate in 1984.

"I demonstrate my flamboyance in other ways now," she said, adding that she wishes the state would not require the payment of an additional $50 every year for the personalized tags even if the message is not changed.

Tags that shouldn't be seen on the state's highways include those that are obscene or offensive, sexually or racially, said Gene Crawford, a spokesman with the state Department of Revenue.

Also banned are "CIA," "FBI," "COP," "KGB-CIA," "KGB-FBI," "POLICE" and "MAFIA."

"It's amazing what people will try to slip by," said Crawford. "We'd rather err on the side of conservatism. Some of the messages at first don't seem obscene and require a closer look."

Giving the proposed tags a second look is Johnny Newman, who is head of the registration section of the Motor Vehicle Division and who doesn't have a personalized tag himself.

To police the tags, Newman relies on common sense, dictionaries and a list of about 900 words and phrases compiled by his office and other states.

Personalized tags may have up to seven letters, numbers or spaces and as few as one letter or number.

Tags with a commercial bent seem common, such as Reaves' plate and the "2C C ME" tag seen at a Montgomery shopping center.

In a small way, Rep. Claud Walker, D-Montgomery, has helped to promote the tags. He bought a personalized tag, "Cheri Lu," for his daughter, Cheri Louise Walker, a sophomore at Huntingdon College.

Camden businessman Jimmy Brock bought his two daughters tags with their nicknames on them — Genie "Tater" Brock, a sophomore at Auburn University, and Sara "Booger1" Brock, a senior at Wilcox Academy.

Sara settled for "Booger1" because her actual nickname, Booger, had already been claimed.

"I was surprised to find out how common the tags are," said Genie Brock. "There're a lot of them at Auburn."

She said the cutest personalized tag she's seen around campus is "UR2SLO."

Among others spotted are "ALICE R," "KRISTI C" and "BETTYE T," one that apparently belongs to a basketball fan is "CELTICS," one belonging to an appreciative offspring is "IOU1DAD," and one on a Datsun 280Z reads "JANAS Z."

Some messages are redundant — "TWO80Z" — while other car tags proclaim businesses or occupations. For example, a dance studio owner in Mobile County, Lynn Robinson, has "DANCE1" and her husband has "COACH."

School names, hobbies and sports abound on tags, as do descriptions of car owners — "IN DEBT," "MOM2B" and "BOSLADY."

One Alabamian has the last word on tag matters, "THE END."

Researcher Likes Bugs

BLACKSBURG, Va. (AP) — Most folks think of cockroaches as pests, but not researcher Mary Ross.

She sees the hundreds of thousands of them in her laboratory as the perfect guinea pigs: easy to reproduce, easy to feed, easy to house and not the sort of beast that animal lovers go out of their way to shield from the perils of laboratory work.

"I don't mind working with a German cockroach," Ms. Ross said in an interview at her Virginia Tech lab stacked high with containers of wiggling roaches. "When you keep it in a jar and keep it clean, it's not bad — a lot better than flies."

Ms. Ross, a professor of entomology, has studied the German cockroach, the most common roach, for nearly 30 years in the same laboratory.

She boasts the world's largest collection of mutant roaches — about 60 different types that can be detected by the naked eye of someone well versed in the anatomy of normal roaches. Laboratory equipment must be used to observe the more subtle mutations of others.

Some mutants feature different eye colors: green, purple dark red, "a very pretty color of pink" and a striped pink. Others have different skin colors or unusual bubbles on their skins.

"They're very easy to rear," Ms. Ross said. "That's the thing that makes them an excellent laboratory animal."

A female can carry up to 40 nymphs in its tiny egg case. About all Ms. Ross' roaches need is a bit of screen to climb on in their jars. Their diet: dry nuggets of dog food.

Ms. Ross said she didn't face opposition from animal rights activists who protest the use of dogs and other animals in experiments.

"Nobody seems to object if we kill off a few cockroaches," she said. "They're not protected that way, so they have to protect themselves."

And they seem to be doing well, thank you.

They've moved along with people around the world, into areas where they couldn't survive in nature, such as Alaska. More and more of them are able to withstand pesticides as well, as research from Ms. Ross' lab has helped document.

Some of her work focuses on the genetics and behavior of roaches. She also recently acquired some Asian cockroaches, which must be locked up because authorities don't want them to spread out from the Florida area.

"The big thing is they fly," Ms. Ross said. "The adults fly inside and gather on TV sets and what not."

Votes For Women

On this day in 1920, suffragettes celebrated as the 19th Amendment went into effect, granting American woman the right to vote. The fight for women's rights had taken decades. It got a big boost in 1890, when Wyoming became a state. As a territory, Wyoming had granted women the right to vote in 1869. The territorial legislature had taken a firm stand on the matter "We will remain out of the Union 100 years rather than come in without the women."

The bidding:

Opening lead: Five of ♠

We all crave a bargain. When we are offered a cheap trick, it is human nature to grab it and damn the consequences, even though they might prove very costly.

There was little to the auction. With 17 points and a flat hand, we endorse South's decision to open one no trump despite the fact that he had a weak doubleton. And North's bold raise to game with 8 points cannot be faulted—his fine club suit rated to be a source of tricks.

East followed suit with the seven of spades, and declarer seized the opportunity to win the first trick with the nine. When East refused to win the first club, declarer's predicament began to dawn on him: he needed two entries to set up and run the clubs, but only the ace of spades was a sure one.

East won the second club and returned a spade. Declarer played low from hand, and West was awake enough to insert the queen—had he carelessly followed low, the second entry in the spade suit would have materialized. Thereafter, it required only routine defense to hold declarer to eight tricks—three spades, two in each red suit and one club.

Knowledge of the Rule of 11 was all declarer needed to assure nine tricks. West's fourth-best opening lead of the five of spades meant the other hands held only six cards higher than that. Declarer could see five of them in his own hand and dummy. When East produced the seven at trick one, all were accounted for. Therefore, declarer could afford to win the king, secure in the knowledge the spade finesse was bound to succeed and produce the needed entries to run the clubs.

Scaled Down Desserts Are Just Right For Two

Dessert can make the simplest meal special, but most dessert recipes are too big for today's smaller families. With a little imagination and advance planning, many favorite desserts can be scaled down for a more intimate celebration.

Recipes for puddings and custards often can be cut in half. The same holds true for a variety of fruit crisp recipes.

Some desserts can be creatively and conveniently scaled down for two. For example, a fruit pie for six becomes fruit tarts for two with purchased tart shells from the supermarket. Strawberry shortcake, another old-fashioned treat, usually serves eight. The one large shortcake can be made into individual shortcakes, reserving two for dessert and freezing the rest for a quick breakfast or snack later in the week.

I Love You Shortcakes take advantage of summer fruits, pairing fresh peaches and raspberries with wholesome oat biscuits. Oats give a nutty flavor and moist, tender texture to the golden biscuits, while a light syrup sweetens the sliced peaches and ripe berries. The shortcakes can be served with or without a spoonful of low-fat vanilla yogurt, a convenient and calorie-wise alternative to traditional whipped cream.

Old-fashioned parfaits make frosty desserts for two and can be assembled in minutes with ingredients that are easy to keep on hand. Naturally Luscious Layers start with fresh berries and plain low-fat yogurt sweetened with honey. Between each creamy, fruity layer is a crunchy layer of toasted oats and nuts spiced with cinnamon.

I LOVE YOU SHORTCAKES

1 1/2 cups all-purpose flour
1/2 cup oats, uncooked
2 tablespoons sugar
1 tablespoon baking powder
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup margarine
1/2 cup skim or lowfat milk
1 tablespoon water
1 tablespoon sugar
1 teaspoon lemon juice
1/2 cup fresh or frozen peeled, sliced peaches, thawed
1/2 cup fresh or frozen red raspberries or other berries, thawed

Heat oven to 425 degrees. Combine flour, oats, sugar, baking powder and salt. Cut in margarine until mixture resembles coarse crumbs; add milk, mixing just until dry ingredients are moistened. Shape dough to form a ball; knead gently on lightly floured surface 10 times. Roll dough to 1/2-inch thickness; cut wiht 3-inch heart-shaped or round biscuit cutter. Place on ungreased cookie sheet. Bake 12 to 14 minutes or until golden brown. Makes 6 shortcakes.

Combine water, sugar and lemon juice; cook over medium heat, stirring until sugar is dissolved. Add peaches and raspberries; cook 1 to 2 minutes or until fruit mixture is heated through. Split 2 shortcakes; place on individual dessert plates. Spoon fruit mixture evenly over each shortcake. Serve topped wit lowfat vanilla yogurt, if desired. Makes 2 servings.

NATURALLY LUSCIOUS LAYERS

1 cup oats, uncooked
1/4 cup firmly packed brown sugar
2 tablespoons chopped nuts
1/4 teaspoon cinnamon
1/4 cup margarine, melted
1 8-ounce carton (1 cup) plain lowfat yogurt
1 tablespoon honey
1 cup fresh or frozen, sliced strawberries, peaches or blueberries

Heat oven to 350 degrees. Combine oats, brown sugar, nuts, cinnamon and margarine; mix well. Spread onto ungreased cookie sheet; bake 14 to 16 minutes or until golden brown, stirring once during baking; cool. Store in tightly covered container in refrigerator up to three months. Serve over fruit, lowfat yogurt, frozen yogurt or pudding. Makes 1 1/2 cups.

Combine yogurt and honey; fold in fruit. In parfait glasses, alternately layer fruit mixture and 2 tablespoons oat topping to form 2 layers. Garnish each parfait with fresh fruit, if desired. Makes 2 servings.

COFFEE CAKE — Cream cheese and orange marmalade combine to give you this fresh baked coffee cake. It makes breakfast a special occasion.

Cheese, Marmalade Join In Coffee Cake

Discover the wonderful combination of cream cheese and orange marmalade in a fresh baked coffee cake. It's easy to make this impressive braided bread when you start with versatile frozen ready-dough.

Try this time-saving tip: Place a loaf of frozen ready-dough in the refrigerator to defrost overnight. The dough can also be thawed in a microwave oven in six minutes on the lowest setting.

The delicately rich cream cheese and orange marmalade filling in tender fresh yeast bread makes any breakfast a special occasion.

CREAM CHEESE AND MARMALADE BRAID

1 (one-pound) loaf frozen ready-dough
8 ounces cream cheese, softened
1/2 cup orange marmalade
1 tablespoon melted butter or margarine
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
1 tablespoon sugar

Let frozen ready-dough thaw until pliable. (To thaw dough in microwave oven, wrap frozen loaf loosely in plastic wrap. Microwave on LOW power for six minutes.)

On a lightly floured board, roll dough out to a 12-inch square. Mix softened cream cheese and marmalade until smooth. Spread filling in a 4-inch strip down the center of dough, leaveing a 1-inch margin at each end. Use a knife to make 12 3-inch cuts in dough along both sides of filling.

Bring dough strips up across filling at an angle, alternating sides to give a braided look. Pinch dough at ends to seal filling in. Brush braid with melted butter or margarine and sprinkle with mixture of cinnamon and sugar. Let braid rise for 30 minutes. Bake at 350 degrees for 25 to 30 minutes or until golden brown. Serves 8.

Ph.D., ECU Dept. Family Medicine

Q. Can diet changes give me relief for my PMS? Lots of women, Greenville.

A. I admit I sometimes eavesdrop on conversations about nutrition while I'm out to lunch, at break time at work and in group gatherings. I know women are comparing their physician's approach to their problems with PMS. I do encourage women to discuss their PMS with their family physician before they start treating themselves.

A precise definition of PMS is lacking. PMS usually includes premenstrual bloating, mood swings, headache, appetite change, food cravings, breast swelling and tenderness, constipation and/or difficulty in concentration. Since some researchers think nutritional deficiencies cause PMS in some women, a variety of dietary treatments are being promoted. Some women get relief and some do not. Some treatments can be dangerous, although most are not.

Researchers have several guesses about how PMS works. But, since we don't really know the cause, there is no clearcut treatment. Your family physician may help you with stress reduction, support counseling, and/or healthy diets, and a regular exercise program.

One treatment that can be dangerous if not carefully done is supplementation with vitamin B6. Always review your diet and other vitamins you may be taking before adding more of a vitamin. For PMS relief, some magazine reports suggest daily high doses of 800 milligrams of vitamin B6. The normal body's daily need is only 2 milligrams per day. We use to think that if your body got too much of a water soluble vitamin, such as B6, that your body would just get rid of it in the urine. But since 1983, we have had reports of side effects or vitamin toxicity from water soluble vitamins.

Before giving a women a supplement of vitamin B6, we check the diet for how much vitamin B6 is already there. Some foods high in B6 are brewer's yeast, enriched fortified breakfast cereals, beef, navy beans, potatoes, bananas, poultry, tuna and fish. Many multiple vitamin-mineral supplements have large amounts of B6 in them.

Since there are reports that vitamin B6 helps women with symtoms of depression, forgetfulness, crying and confusion, we do sometimes recommend a supplement for those without much B6 in their diet. But, we recommend no higher than 100 milligrams per day. We feel that amount may help but won't cause harm. If women feel numbness or tingling in the arms, legs or other extremities, we tell them to stop taking the B6.

Some women who experience breast tenderness, weight gain and swelling of hands and feet get relief with supplements of vitamin E. The body's requirements is 30 IU (international units, which are used on labels). We might have a woman try a supplement of 150 to 200 IU, if she doesn't have much vitamin E in her diet. Some women also get relief by cutting down on salt seasoning and extra salty foods.

We ask women with anxiety, irritability, mood swings, nervous tension, headache, sweet craving, increased appetite, heart pounding, fatique, dizziness or fainting to pay attention to their diet. These women need to lose weight if overweight. It may help if they eat small, frequent meals, high in complex carbohydrates or starches like fruits, vegetables and grains. Also, avoiding alcohol and limiting caffeine and methylxanthine containing foods like coffee, tea, sodas and chocolate helps.

Each woman suffering PMS has an unique pattern to find relief. Some of these dietary measures may help. Remember to always look at your diet first before you add vitamins or minerals or supplements. Talk them over with your doctor.

SUMMERTIME TREAT — The I Love You Shortcake is a summertime treat for two to share. Light and tender biscuits made with fiber-rich rolled oats are split, then filled and topped with fresh raspberries and sliced peaches in a light syrup. Low-fat vanilla yogurt adds a creamy richness with the fat and calories of whipped cream.

Mentally Retarded Find Work In Restaurants

By ANNE McGRATH
Associated Press Writer

MADISON, Conn. (AP) — First there was the Apple Doll House Tea Room in Guilford, a tiny restaurant with a storybook name that challenged entrenched notions that mentally retarded people should be segregated from the rest of society.

Thirteen years later, a vocational rehabilitation organization has gotten even bolder, opening a 200-seat restaurant on a busy highway in the middle of the resort town of Madison.

The wood-paneled Hob Nob, operated by the parents of a mentally retarded teen-ager, now has 15 mentally handicapped adults helping in the kitchen and serving meals and eventually will have more than 30.

The venture is one of the projects of the Shoreline Association for Retarded and Handicapped Citizens (SARAH).

"The ultimate goal is to place the trainees in other people's restaurants," says Peter McManus, the association's director of vocational services.

The new restaurant is in the same roadhouse on U.S. Highway 1 where for 17 years James and Diana Morris operated another Hob Nob until they sold the business nine years ago.

They came out of retirement to operate the new Hob Nob out of commitment to SARAH and to their 17-year-old son, John, who is mentally retarded.

James Morris, a retired pilot, says he believes in SARAH's philosophy that the mentally retarded should be living and working among non-retarded people.

"Everybody has to be pushed to their limit," Morris says.

SARAH got into the restaurant business in 1973 when it opened the Apple Doll House, which the organization's executive director Ted Bergeron says was the first restaurant in the country operated by developmentally disabled people.

"We had hundreds of visitors come through the tearoom to pick our brains," McManus says.

In 1978, SARAH also bought the Country Squire Inn in Killingworth.

About 25 trainees from those restaurants now have jobs in other food service businesses, McManus says. A labor shortage in Connecticut helps rehabilitation organizations find job openings.

The idea of training retarded adults for food service jobs has caught on around the country.

A number of major chains, including Wendy's and the Marriott Corp., have hired disabled workers. And the National Restaurant Association strives to forge partnerships between its members and vocational rehabilitation agencies.

Of the 27,725 adults whose major disability was mental retardation and who were rehabilitated in fiscal year 1984, 13.9 percent were trained in food and beverage service, says Larry Mars, a statistician in the U.S. Department of Education's Rehabilitation Services Administration.

He said the group was second in size only to the 21.5 percent reported as entering sheltered workshops.

SARAH also operates a number of other small businesses in products and services such as landscaping, firewood and concrete. The Hob Nob will serve vegetables and herbs grown in SARAH gardens.

In all, SARAH businesses are training 117 people full time and the organization supervises 67 in other jobs.

"I think we have broken down the prejudices here in the community," McManus says.

The Country Squire was only modestly successful because of its out-of-the-way location, so the Morrises were consulted about opening a larger restaurant in a more prominent location to replace the other two.

James Morris says they had two problems to overcome: the ordering and serving process could be too confusing for some trainees, and a made-to-order kitchen presents many hazards.

He says he suggested trying a fixed dinner menu, permitting trainees time to work with the chef throughout the day, and serving customers family style.

"Serving is just a matter of carrying the stuff in," Morris says.

The Hob Nob also has an a la

German Peach Cake: For Brunch Or Dessert

By NANCY BYAL
Better Homes and Gardens
Food Editor

I was introduced to kuchen (cake in German) by our German-born neighbor. I was always welcome to stop by for a piece of fresh kuchen and a glass of milk.

She poured the coffee-cake-like batter over whatever fruit was in season but her heavenly peach kuchen was my favorite. This recipe reminds me of Inga's. I serve it warm for brunch or as dessert.

PEACH-ALMOND KUCHEN

1/2 cup all-purpose flour
3 tablespoons brown sugar
1/2 teaspoon ground cinnamon
3 tablespoons margarine or butter
1/4 cup toasted sliced almonds
1 1/4 pounds medium peaches, peeled, pitted and sliced (4 cups)
8-ounce carton peach yogurt
3-ounce package cream cheese, softened
2 eggs
1/4 cup sugar
1/4 cup all-purpose flour

For crumb topping, stir together the 1/2 cup flour, brown sugar and cinnamon. Cut in margarine until mixture resembles fine crumbs. Stir in almonds. Set aside.

Spoon peaches into an ungreased 10 by 6 by 2-inch baking dish. In a medium mixer bowl beat yogurt and cream cheese with an electric mixer or rotary beater. Add eggs, sugar and the 1/4 cup flour, beating until smooth. Pour mixture over fruit in dish. Sprinkle crumb topping around edge of dish. Bake in a 375-degree oven for 30 minutes or until filling is set. Serve warm, cut into squares. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

GERMAN CAKE — A coffee-cake-batter poured over peaches makes a luscious kuchen. It's perfect for brunch or as a dessert.

Engineered Foodstuff Lets Eater Have It All

By CAROLE SUGARMAN
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

Chemist J. Michael Gould has reversed the logic of cupcakes. With his invention of "fluffy cellulose" — a no-calorie supplement made from straw, citrus pulp or sugar beets — the U.S. Department of Agriculture researcher can turn a Twinkie into a high-fiber, low-calorie food — without altering its flavor.

Donald Beitz, a professor of animal science and biochemistry at Iowa State University, envisions a day when "please pass the cholesterol reductase" will become a standard dinner-table request. Beitz is working to develop an enzyme that could be sprinkled on foods to reduce their cholesterol.

Procter & Gamble recently submitted a petition to the Food and Drug Administration for approval of sucrose polyester, a fat derived from sugar and edible oils.

Because it passes through the body unabsorbed, it contributes no fat, cholesterol or calories to the diet. If approved, olestra — as P&G calls its compound — could become as widespread in the food supply as NutraSweet.

In laboratories all across the country, government scientists, university researchers and food companies are engineering foods that may be the edible equivalent of having it all — to indulge without gaining weight, to eat fat-laden and cholesterol-loaded foods without worrying about heart disease, to guiltlessly choose chocolate cake as a fiber source over prunes or beans.

"You're never going to convince people to only eat foods that are good for them," said USDA's Gould, much to the likely chagrin of nutritionists and health professionals. Instead, Gould believes, "We have to make foods to fit people's taste preferences."

Beneath the nirvana such products might bring, however, are broader questions about their impact on the food supply. How far should science go to manipulate real food? How necessary or safe are some of these ingredients? What could be the effect of a combination of them in a single product? And will overzealous food companies use medical findings that lack consensus to make grandiose health claims for their "wonder" goods?

Already, manufacturers have created controversy in the health community by formulating products such as calcium-fortified orange juice and soft drinks and competing in high-fiber cereal wars.

While health experts are generally recommending that the public consume more calcium and fiber, some are worried about indiscriminate fortification of the food supply with these nutrients and question whether some of the products are simply being promoted for marketing purposes.

Jack Doyle, director of the agricultural resources project for the Environmental Policy Institute, believes that engineered foods do not bode well for consumers.

Such processes not only increase the price and mystification of food, he said, but when food is developed in the confines of a fermentation tank or petri dish, it weakens consumer input. "It leaves the high priest in the lab in control," rather than the marketplace, said Doyle, who is suspicious of taking scientists' "word for it (safety)."

Sanford Miller, outgoing director of the Food and Drug Administration's Center for Food Safety and Applied Nutrition, believes that such foods and food processing methods have "enormous potential for both good and bad."

Miller said that engineered fat-free products may afford people with special dietetic problems their first opportunity to "enjoy French pastry."

On the other side of the coin, Miller said, non-caloric foods might be dangerous for individuals with eating disorders, who could gorge to their heart's content and not gain weight. Miller is also concerned about feeding these types of foods to growing children.

Nevertheless, Miller said that although a lot of research still needs to be done, consumers should not be suspicious of new technology. Miller said that he suspects that people felt the same way about airplanes and birth control pills before they became available-as did the first cave man who cooked raw meat on a fire.

The following examples of engineered foods and food additives are in various stages of development:

Spreadable lowfat butter. While there are already a plethora of margarines and margarine imitations in supermarket refrigerator cases, the dairy industry is fighting back with its own alternative.

Scientists at Dairy Research Inc. (DRINC), a developmental arm of the National Dairy Promotion & Research Board, are working on an all-dairy product that is 35 to 40 percent lower in fat, cholesterol and cal-

Recipes Win Top Prizes In Cheesecake Contest

Three original cheesecake recipes captured prizes totaling $6,000 in the "Philly" Cheesecake Lovers Recipe Contest. Chosen as the best from thousands of entries, the judges' winning selections combine today's innovative cooking style with great taste and eye appeal.

Caramel Swirl Brownie Cheesecake won the $3,000 First Prize for Priscilla Yee of Concord, Calif. Swirls of chocolate and caramel combine in the fabulous marbled filling made with cream cheese. A rich and chewy brownie crust adds a special creative touch.

The $2,000 Second Prize went to Brittle Bread Cheesecake, which owes its winning appeal to crushed peanut brittle and peanut butter. Created by Gloria Ward of Garden City, Minn., the cheesecake's buttery shortbread crumb crust complements the luscious filling. A sour cream-peanut butter topping completes the dessert.

Irresistable to any chocolate lover, Chocolate Fudge Praline Cheesecake garnered the $1,000 third prize for Sylvia Schmitt of Glendale, Ariz. The buttery brown sugar-pecan praline mixture that tops velvety, rich chocolate filling makes this recipe a sure-to-please winner. A subtle hint of cinnamon and finely chopped pecans add extra appeal to the graham cracker crust.

As exemplified by the winning recipes, contest entries were a showcase of diverse tastes and cooking creativity. Recipe entries featured a colorful spectrum of interesting ingredients and flavorings. Many contestants enhanced recipes with exotic liqueurs. Favored additions also included fresh seasonal fruits, all kinds of nuts and cookie crumb crusts. Others confirmed that chocolate in all combinations remains a hands-down favorite.

1/4 cup margarine, melted
3 tablespoons packed brown sugar
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon

•••

Spanish Cooking Beats Heat

By TOM SIETSEMA
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

Those of us who find ourselves stuck in town in August — when the last thing you want to do is turn on the oven — might take a culinary cue from the Spaniards.

Some of Spain's best-known dishes, after all, are those that involve little or no cooking, or can be eaten cold.

Take the liquid salad known as gazpacho; most of us know it as tomato-red and chunky, but there also exist recipes for refreshing chilled white gazpachos, made with grapes and almonds and crustless white bread. Then there's the staple called chorizo, that garlicky, paprika-spiked sausage that is as likely to be eaten at room temperature as it is hot. And one of the most popular ways to eat shellfish in Spain involves boiling, then cooling, the likes of shrimp and mussels.

Not the least of these warm weather-friendly dishes is the tortilla espanola, or Spanish omelet, a light meal of eggs, potatoes and onions. The best of these are quite thick, with soft, slightly runny centers and tender but not-quite-browned cubes of potatoes.

Long a standard in the tapas bars of Spain, a Spanish omelet's advantages are many: While it can most certainly be eaten warm, it is even better at room temperature, after its simple flavors have had a chance to meld. Moreover, it's as good with coffee at breakfast as it is with sherry — another Spanish tradition — at dinner. Or it can take the form of a snack, a lunch, an appetizer.

Best of all, whoever does the dishes in your household will appreciate the Spanish omelet's finger-food potential. Unlike its American counterpart, this classic egg dish can be sliced into pie-shaped wedges and eaten out of hand.

Express Lane list: olive oil, potatoes, coarse salt, onion, eggs

TORTILLA ESPANOLA
(Potato Omelet)
(4 to 6 servings)

1 cup olive oil, or a mixture of olive and salad oils
4 large potatoes, peeled and cut in ⅛-inch slices
Coarse salt
1 large onion, thinly sliced
4 large eggs

Heat oil in an 8- to 9-inch skillet and add potato slices one at a time to prevent sticking. Alternate potato layers with the onion slices and salt the layers lightly. Cook slowly, over medium heat, lifting and turning the potatoes occasionally, until they are tender but not brown. (The potatoes will remain separated, not in a "cake.")

Meanwhile, in a large bowl, beat the eggs with a fork until they are slightly foamy. Salt to taste. Remove the potatoes from the skillet and drain them in a colander, reserving about 3 tablespoons of the oil. (The potatoes give the oil a delicious flavor, so reserve for future use.) Add the potatoes to the beaten eggs, pressing the potatoes down so that they are completely covered by the egg. Let the mixture sit 15 minutes.

Heat 2 tablespoons of the reserved oil in a large skillet until very hot (use the same skillet as long as nothing is stuck to the bottom). Add the potato-egg mixture, rapidly spreading the oil out in the skillet with the aid of a pancake turner. Lower the heat to medium high and shake the pan to prevent sticking. When the potatoes begin to brown underneath, invert a plate of the same size over the skillet. Flip the omelet onto the plate. Add an additional 1 tablespoon oil to the pan, then slide the omelet back into the skillet to brown the other side. (If your skillet is not hot enough, some of the omelet may stick to the pan. If this happens, scrape off the pieces and fit them into their places on the omlet. With subsequent flips, the pieces will mesh with the omelet.)

Lower the heat to medium. Flip the omelet 2 or 3 more times (this helps to give it a good shape), cooking briefly on each side. It should be slightly juicy within. Transfer to a platter and serve hot or at room temperature. — From "The Foods & Wines of Spain," by Penelope Casas (Knopf, 1982) carte menu in an area staffed by non-disabled waiters and waitresses.

Eventually, the Hob Nob will have a professional staff of 35, five or six job counselors for the trainees, and 31 mentally retarded staff members.

McManus says renovations to the Hob Nob will continue to suit the trainees who may need special equipment, such as push buttons instead of switches, to do their jobs.

Morris says the mentally retarded can learn complex tasks, it just takes them longer.

"Like my kid trying to tie his shoelaces," Morris says. "It's taking him a long time. Slowly, he's almost there."

ories than regular butter and spreads like tub margarine right out of the refrigerator.

Ann Cassela, a project leader with DRINC, said that the new butter is made from cream, milk and a "touch of beta-carotene" and is manufactured using an "updated technology" called ultrafiltration. The finished product has less fat, because it has more water left after processing than does regular butter, Cassela said.

Currently, spreadable butter is being "scaled up" by a large dairy in the Midwest, according to Cassela, who predicts that it will be on supermarket shelves in about a year.

Cholesterol-free eggs, meat and dairy products. With a grant from the Wisconsin Milk Marketing Board, Beitz from Iowa State hopes to change the nature of cholesterol in food so that it can't be absorbed in the body.

To do this, Beitz is attempting to grow the bacteria that naturally occur in the large intestine which convert cholesterol to coprastinol, a steroid that is poorly absorbed.

Once isolated, the enzymes produced by the bacteria could then be used to treat dairy products or meat, converting their cholesterol to coprastinol before they are consumed.

While Beitz and his colleagues are at the early stages of their work, he dreams about the future applications should it be successful. For instance, Beitz said that someday egg packing plants could be equipped with fast-spinning needles containing the cholesterol-reducing enzyme that would be inserted into the shells as they move along the conveyor belt.

At the University of Wisconsin at Madison and the Phasex Corporation in Lawrence, Mass., researchers are at more advanced stages in cholesterol removal from foods.

The method being used, called superfluid critical extraction, begins by compressing carbon dioxide to a temperature at which it behaves somewhere between a gas and a liquid. A freeze-dried or spray-dried food is then heated to a specified temperature and the compressed CO is run through the vessel, dissolving a substantial portion of the cholesterol.

According to Robert Bradley at the University of Wisconsin food science department, "many food companies" have expressed interest in the process, which is currently in patent negotiations.

Bradley predicts that products such as low-cholesterol ice cream, cheese and beef tallow could be on the market in a year or more. As for the saturated fat in these products, he said that the technology already exists for lowering fat.

High-protein food bars and meatless meat pies. Dave Dreisker, vice president of the Provesta Corp., a subsidiary of Phillips Petroleum, would like to see "everyone munching on a Meal On the Go" while stuck in morning rush hour traffic.

Two weeks ago, Provesta started test marketing its new food bar in northeastern Oklahoma. Made with Provesteen, a high-protein yeast grown in fermentation tanks, the bar is combined with ingredients such as wheat, bran and pineapple, and is designed as a meal substitute rather than a snack. Dreisker said it looks similar to an oatmeal cookie.

The race is on to develop food products from these single-cell proteins (SCP), as they have been generically called. Using a similar fermentation technology, two British companies — Ranks, Hovis and MacDougall and Imperial Chemical Industries (ICI) — are producing a material that can assume the texture of beef, chicken or even potato chips.

The material, a fungus, is then combined with flavorings, spices or breading to simulate the taste of the desired final product. By enhancing or suppressing the texture, the fungus could resemble a food such as a potato chip, according to Stuart Pape, an attorney who is representing RHM in this country.

High in fiber, low in fat, sodium and cholesterol and with a protein profile superior to soy, RHM's protein was approved for use in Britain in October of 1985 and is currently being sold in frozen pasties (meat pies). The company filed a petition last year with the FDA for approval to use in frozen entrees here.

High-fiber white bread, etc. Gould calls the USDA's fluffy cellulose "invisible fiber" because it does not have the coarse or gritty texture of regular fiber.

The ingredient could be used to replace part of the flour in baked goods; Gould said that consumer panels couldn't tell the difference between a control cake and a cake in which fluffy cellulose was substituted for 40 percent of the flour.

Fluffy cellulose is being pursued "vigorously" by a number of companies, according to Gould. The process of making the product, which involves treating a fiber source with a diluted solution of hydrogen peroxide, has already been licensed to four firms (Dupont, Interox American, Food and Energy Inc., Southwest Bioenergy) and the food formulation of the product is currently being patented, Gould said.

New non-caloric sweeteners. Currently, the FDA has four non-caloric sweeteners under active consideration: acesulfame K, sucrolose, alitame and cyclamate. Lactitol, a caloric sugar substitute, is also being reviewed by the agency.

Scientists Say Omega-3 Lowers Cholesterol

By TONI TIPTON
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

Much attention has been focused recently on the growing popularity of vitamin and mineral-fortified products and vitamin-mineral supplements as a means of promoting health. It seems many people want a "quick fix," opting to improve their health with these products instead of building a healthy body from a wide variety of food sources.

The latest development for the pill-popping generation is fish oil supplements. The supplements are being lauded because one of their components — omega-3 fatty acid — is implicated in everything from the reduction of serum cholesterol levels in the bloodstream to its ability to relieve the discomforts of immune system diseases, skin disorders and allergies.

But is all this hype about omega-3 just another food fad? The jury is still out on supplementation, but the results of epidemiologic studies on people who eat fish instead of red meat are encouraging.

Physicians and nutritionists gathered in Los Angeles recently for a symposium discussing the possible role of fish oils in the American diet. The discussions included a historical perspective on coronary heart disease in the United States, disclosed the results of research data on the effects of fish oils in the body and suggested ways of designing diets to include fish rich in omega-3.

The panel included Dr. William P. Castelli, director of the Framingham Heart Study and lecturer at Harvard University Medical School; Dr. Alexander Leaf, chairman of the department of preventive medicine and clinical epidemiology at Harvard University Medical School; Dr. Artemis P. Simopoulos, director of the Nutritional Sciences International Life Sciences Institute Research Foundation; and Carolyn Crimmins, clinical nutritionist at Massachusetts General Hospital-Harvard Cardiovascular Health Center.

The idea of substituting fish in the diet for more saturated sources of protein like red meat is not new. Neither is supplementation. The American Heart Association has stated that it is possible to lower the amount of red meat in the diet by eating more fish and poultry, and mothers have included a dose of cod liver oil in their children's diets for generations. Today's renewed interest in fish oil supplementation comes on the heels of research seeking an explanation for the prevalence of coronary heart disease in Americans. The results were surprising.

Epidemiologic studies of Greenland Eskimos and Japanese and Dutch fishermen confirmed that deaths from cardiovascular disease occurred at a lower rate compared to the death rate for Americans. Yet the Eskimo diet tends to be extremely high in cholesterol; it is largely made up of whale blubber and seal meat, in which fat is excessive. The American diet is also high in fat but the Eskimos also eat large amounts of cold-water fish such as salmon, sardines, mackerel and herring.

The scientists surmised there was something in the blood of fish inhabiting the icy waters of the north that counteracts the Eskimos' high-fat diet. The conclusion was that it was omega-3 fatty acid.

Omega-3 is a polyunsaturated fat that helps to keep the systems of cold-water fish fluid. The Eskimos and Japanese fisherman who ingest fish with high amounts of this substance in their meat tend to benefit from its anti-inflammatory and fluid-inducing effects. "Fish oils counteract the constricting quality of other acids and fats on blood vessels," Leaf said.

The scientists concluded that because of its fluidity, omega-3 is responsible for keeping cholesterol from building up in the arteries of those who eat it, thus reducing the occurrence of diseases like arteriosclerosis, coronary heart disease and high blood pressure, even in high-fat diets.

The clinical definition of omega-3 fatty acid is a technical one that includes terms like eicosapentaenoic acid (EPA), docosahexaenoic acid (DHA), triglycerides, lipoproteins and lipids. It is more important to remember that omega-3 fatty acid in fish oil seems to act in three ways to benefit the body: It lowers blood fat levels by sweeping away harmful levels of "bad" fats, which are the major cause of coronary heart disease; it keeps blood flowing by forming platelets (cells that clot) that are less sticky and therefore less likely to clot and jam arteries — a chief cause of strokes; and it lowers total cholesterol levels, which are linked to heart disease.

Physicians are now recommending at least three to four fish meals per week for optimum benefit. There has been no recommended intake for fish oil capsules.

There have been some studies showing adverse effects of consuming fish oil capsules — in some cases supplements have actually worsened conditions in people who already have a blood lipid disorder. So the bottom line is that it is unwise to self-medicate.

A good source of basic information is a new book entitled, "The Omega-3 Breakthrough" by Julius Fast (Body Press, a division of HP Books; $15.95).

Fast, himself a victim of coronary occlusion, who underwent coronary angioplasty — a surgical procedure that reduces the risk of a heart attack — does not encourage the use of pills. His book focuses on doctor recommendations for three fish meals per week and contains meal plans and recipes.

Here are a few recipes using sardines, an excellent source of omega-3. The Norway Sardine Industry says that sardines in oil have about 5.5 grams of omega-3 per 3¾-ounce can, drained. The same size serving in either soy or olive oil contain 3.1 grams. Low-sodium sardines in water contain 4.5 grams. Sardines are also a superior source of calcium, a three-ounce serving contains about 372 milligrams.

SARDINE SUSHI

1½ cups short grain rice
2 teaspoons sugar
2 tablespoons vinegar
4 (8- by 6-inch) sheets nori (dried seaweed)
2 (3¾-ounce) cans sardines in oil, drained
Carrots, green onions, cucumber or radishes, cut julienne

Rinse rice until water runs clear, then drain. Combine rice and 1½ cups water in 3-quart saucepan. Cover and bring to boil, then reduce heat and cook, without stirring, until water is absorbed, about 15 minutes.

Dissolve sugar in vinegar, then stir into rice. Spread rice on baking sheet and fan with piece of cardboard to cool quickly. Let stand at room temperature to cool completely.

To assemble, place 1 sheet nori, shiny side down, on bamboo sushi mat so you can roll up from long end. Spread about ¼ of rice evenly over nori, leaving 1-inch margin at top to seal roll. Arrange layers of sardines and vegetables across center of rice parallel to margin.

Starting from long end, roll up mat to enclose filling. Press mat gently around roll to shape, then moisten margin of nori with water and seal roll snugly. Remove mat and press in lose ends. Place, seam side down, on cutting board. Repeat with remaining nori and filling. Slice into 1-inch rounds with sharp, wet knife. Makes 16 (2-piece) servings.

SESAME-SARDINE SUSHI

2 (3¾-ounce) cans sardines in oil, drained
¼ cup finely chopped green onions
1 tablespoon soy sauce
1 tablespoon sesame seeds
1 teaspoon plus 3 tablespoons vinegar
1 teaspoon lemon juice
1½ cups short grain rice
2 teaspoons sugar
4 (8- by 6-inch) sheets nori (dried seaweed)

Combine sardines, green onions, soy sauce, sesame seeds, 1 teaspoon vinegar and lemon juice in bowl. Set aside.

Rinse rice in water until water runs clear, drain. Combine rice and 1½ cups water in 3-quart saucepan. Cover and bring to boil, then reduce heat and simmer until water is absorbed, about 15 minutes.

Combine sugar and remaining 3 tablespoons vinegar and stir into hot rice. Spread rice on baking sheet and fan with piece of cardboard to cool quickly. Let stand at room temperature until completely cooled.

Place 1 piece nori, shiny side down, on bamboo sushi mat so that you can roll up from long end. Spread about ¼ of rice evenly over nori, leaving 1-inch margin at top to seal roll. Spread sardine mixture over center of rice parallel to margin.

Starting from long end, roll mat to enclose filling. Press mat gently around roll to shape, then moisten margin of nori with water and seal roll snugly. Remove mat, press in loose ends and place, seam side down, on cutting board. Repeat with remaining nori and filling. Slice into 1-inch rounds with sharp, wet knife. Makes 16 (2-piece) servings.

SARDINE SUMMER SALAD

Butter lettuce
3 cups cooked rice, chilled
1 medium cucumber, sliced
2 large carrots, shredded
1 bunch radishes, trimmed and halved
12 medium mushrooms, halved
2 (3¾-ounce) cans sardines in oil, drained
¼ cup sliced green onions
Sesame Dressing

Line serving platter with lettuce. Mound rice in center. Arrange cucumber, carrots, radishes, mushrooms and sardines on lettuce, surrounding rice. Sprinkle with green onions and serve with Sesame Dressing. Makes 4 servings.

Sesame Dressing

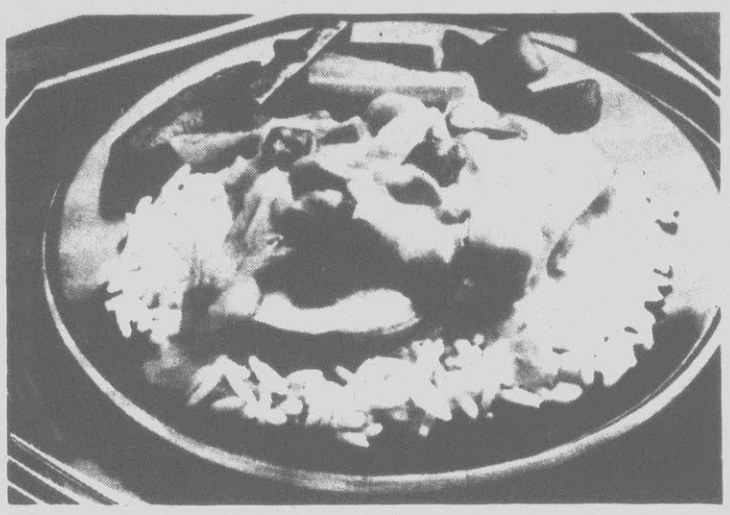
6 tablespoons oil
2 tablespoons sugar
1½ tablespoons soy sauce
1½ teaspoons dry mustard
3 tablespoons toasted sesame seeds

Combine vinegar, oil, sugar, soy sauce, mustard and sesame seeds in blender container and blend 1 minute. Store refrigerated in covered container up to 1 week. Mix before serving.



WINNING RECIPE — This turkey with curry sauce dish was a winner of the Better Homes and Gardens monthly recipe contest in 1983. The sauce includes banana, dates, cashews and lemon peel.

Turkey And Curry Make Winning Duo

By NANCY BYAL
Better Homes and Gardens Food Editor

In 1937, Better Homes and Gardens announced its first monthly recipe contest for readers. Since then, thousands of readers have shared favorite recipes. In the September issue of the magazine we're celebrating this golden anniversary of good eating with a selection of 50 of the best recipes from 50 years of winners. This recipe was a 1983 winner for Roxanne E. Chan, of Albany, Calif.

TURKEY WITH CURRY SAUCE

1 pound fresh turkey breast tenderloin slices, cut ½ inch thick
2 tablespoons margarine or butter
2 tablespoons all-purpose flour
½ teaspoon curry powder
1 cup chicken broth
¼ cup milk
½ of a small banana, diced (½ cup)
¼ cup snipped pitted dates or raisins
¼ cup chopped chashews
½ teaspoon finely shredded lemon peel
3 cups hot cooked rice or bulgur

Wrap turkey slices in foil; place in a shallow baking pan. Bake in a 350-degree oven for 25 minutes or until turkey is no longer pink.

Meanwhile, for sauce, in a small saucepan melt margarine. Stir in flour and curry powder until blended. Add broth and milk. Cook and stir over medium heat until thickened and bubbly. Cook and stir 1 minute more. Stir in banana, dates or raisins, cashews and lemon peel. Arrange turkey over rice or bulgur. Pour sauce over turkey. Makes 6 servings.

Tuna Is Favored

L.A. Times-Washington Post

The long-suffering seafood industry, having finally shaken decades of consumer ambivalence, is now enjoying its fifth consecutive year of record sales and consumption.

The growing interest, spurred by health concerns and renewed culinary emphasis, has meant that even species once dismissed as "trash" fish are now in demand.

But despite all the attention given to exotic and familiar varieties from regions as diverse as the South Pacific and Iceland, America's favorite remains the humble canned tuna, according to a study compiled by the National Fisheries Institute.

After tuna and shrimp, the most frequently used seafoods, by volume, are: cod, salmon, pollock, clams, flounder and oysters.

Pollock has only recently been added to the best-selling species list because it is the prime ingredient in surimi, the imitation shellfish mixtures that have received widespread consumer acceptance. The fish, found primarily in Alaskan waters, is also used increasingly by fast-food companies.
