Four ECU Athletes Face Charges In Dorm Thefts

By TOM MORRIS

Two former players and one present member of the East Carolina University basketball team today were bound over for trial on Sept. 11 after being arrested by university police in connection with the theft of almost $6,000 in property from dormitory rooms.

Another former player also has been charged but not arrested in the break-ins, which were reported at Scott Residence Hall Dec. 26, 1986.

ECU Police Chief Johnny R. Rose said ECU basketball player Theodore "Blue" Edwards, 21, of Kings Arms Apartments, was arrested Wednesday on three counts of breaking, entering and larceny in connection with the series of break-ins.

Former players Tracy Clayton King, 20, of 105A Scott Hall and John Aaron Williams, 20, of 104A Scott Hall also were arrested Wednesday.

King was charged with four counts of breaking, entering and larceny while Williams was charged on five similar counts.

Rose said warrants charging former ECU basketball player Howard Elliot Brown of Brooklyn, N.Y., with five counts of breaking and entering have been issued. But because Brown is no longer a student at ECU, Rose said he has not been taken into custody.

Brown, who grew up in Raleigh, was a sophomore majoring in criminal justice before he left school earlier this year and returned to Brooklyn.

Edwards, whose home is in Walstonburg; King, of Hampton, Va., and Williams, of Atlantic City, N.J., had their first appearance in Pitt County District Court this morning before Judge J. Randall Connor.

Edwards was released from jail Wednesday after posting $3,000 bond, but Williams and King were held under $6,000 bond each.

At their hearing, Edwards and Williams were given a court-appointed lawyer, while King retained a private lawyer.

Rose said a total of $5,729 worth of stereos, cameras, tapes, cash, calculators and other items were reported taken in five break-ins. About $785 worth of property has been recovered by officers who are continuing to investigate the cases, the chief noted.

Bob Roller, the university's sports information director, said men's basketball coach Mike Steele had dismissed Williams and King from the team when they returned to school this week.

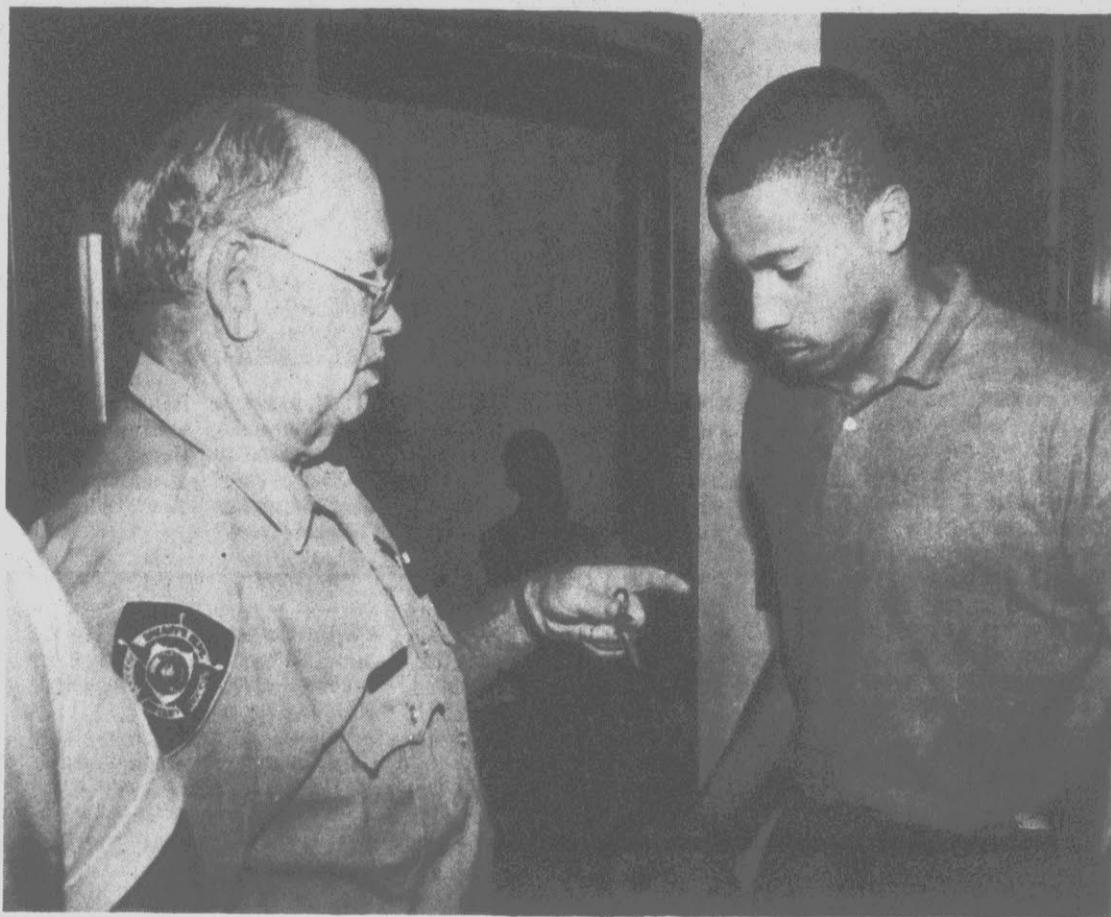

In an interview Wednesday night, Steele said Williams and King were dropped from the squad "for academic reasons."

"They were guys that we spent a lot of time discussing over the summer," Steele said. "They came in on Monday and we decided it wasn't going to work out."

But Steele said Edwards is still on the team pending the outcome of the matter in court.

"In my brief time here, Blue Edwards has done everything we've asked him to do, both on and off the court," Steele said. "We're just going

Iran Rejects Arab Call To Stop War With Iraq

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iran dismissed an Arab League ultimatum to accept a United Nations call for a cease-fire with Iraq, and Iraq today reported injuries from overnight shelling of its port city of Basra.

The dismissal came in a commentary on Iran's state-run radio Wednesday night. It followed a statement by Prime Minister Hussein Musavi that his country will never accept "an ignominious peace" with Iraq to end the 7-year-old war.

The Arab League on Tuesday demanded that Iran agree to a cease-fire by Sept. 20 or face the rupture of diplomatic relations.

An Iranian official visiting Rome today called the Arab League ultimatum a "cosmetic gesture."

Deputy Foreign Minister Mohammad Jawad Larijani told a news conference, "We don't think peace and stability in the region can be obtained via threats."

He added: "As long as Iran is one of the major countries in the region, I don't think any country in the region is projecting long-term relations ignoring Iran."

Larijani earlier met with Italian Foreign Minister Giulio Andreotti. He said they discussed ways to reduce tension in the Persian Gulf and to "guarantee free navigation and stability in the region." He gave no further details of the meeting.

In another development, Egypt's top military official was quoted as saying his nation and other Arab states have given Iraq $181 billion during its war with Iran to the detriment of their own economic development.

In the Persian Gulf, meanwhile, sandstorms drastically reduced visibility Wednesday, and shipping executives puzzled over the location of a convoy of Kuwaiti tankers and U.S. Navy escorts, or whether there was one at all.

Asked about the proposed cease-fire, deputy State Department spokeswoman Phyllis Oakley said Wednesday: "Unless the Iranians officially indicate their acceptance very soon, we believe the U.N. Security Council must move ahead to consider enforcement measures."

U.S. delegates are consulting with other members of the 15-nation council about imposing sanctions on Iran for failing to comply with the resolution, which the Reagan administration shepherded through the council.

Iraq, which backs the U.N. cease-fire resolution, has not attacked shipping in the gulf since it was passed July 20.

The Iraqi News Agency praised the Arab League action and called Wednesday for a boycott of Iran that would force it "to accept a comprehensive and lasting peace."

Iraqi forces invaded western Iran in September 1980 following border skirmishes and acts of sabotage in Iraq which Baghdad blamed on the Council To Make Manager Choice

The Greenville City Council plans to select a new city manager from the three remaining candidates during an executive session Friday at 7:30 a.m., Mayor Les Garner said today.

The three remaining candidates who visited Greenville this week include Gregory Knowles, city manager of Inkster, Mich., and William Veeder, who served as Charlotte city manager for 12 years. A third candidate has asked that his name not be revealed for job security reasons.

Veeder, an employee at Pensions Plans Inc. in Charlotte, was scheduled for a day-long meeting with council members, department heads and community leaders today. The council was expected to interview Veeder in an executive session at 4 p.m.

Knowles, Inkster's chief executive since 1984, visited Greenville Wednesday and was interviewed by council members during an executive session Wednesday afternoon. According to the 1980 Census, Inkster, a Detroit suburb, has a population of about 35,190 people.

During a lunch meeting at the Sheraton Greenville, Knowles met with East Carolina University Chancellor Richard Eakin; Ed Walker, president of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce, and Malcolm A. Green, Greenville Utilities general manager.

The unidentified candidate was in Greenville Tuesday. The City Council, which received 177 applications, reduced the number of candidates to three on Aug. 3. The search for a new city manager began following the March 16 dismissal of Gail Meeks.

Democrats Call For War Powers Act

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic legislators said anew today that the Reagan administration's decision to grant danger pay to U.S. military personnel in the Persian Gulf means it is time to invoke the War Powers Act.

White House officials, however, say the 1973 law still doesn't need to be triggered.

Rep. Robert Torricelli, D-N.J., said on the NBC-TV "Today" show that "it isn't much of a leap of logic to say that if sailors who are in the region are going to get this imminent danger pay, thereby (U.S.) forces are in an imminent threat of hostilities and the War Powers Act should be invoked."

"It is a logical conclusion," said Torricelli, a member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

Earlier, Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said that, "to my mind, this decision is one more reason why the War Powers Act should apply, and I think the War Powers question will keep coming up again and again."

Pell, speaking Wednesday by telephone from his Newport, R.I., home, said he intends to push next month for Senate approval of a bill requir-

Lawmakers Stress Team Play

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Legislators representing Pitt County in the N.C. General Assembly worked together as a team, lawmakers told those attending a Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce breakfast this morning.

The breakfast was planned to recognize Pitt County's legislative delegation — Sens. Tom Taft and Bob Martin and Reps. Ed Warren, Walter Jones Jr. and Gene Rogers.

"This delegation worked together as a team," Taft told the gathering, and as a result, "Pitt fared as well as any county in the state."

The General Assembly "is not an arena of fairness," Taft said, suggesting that the county's delegation has to play politics and work together "to assure that Pitt County gets its fair share."

The legislators reviewed actions by the General Assembly that will provide Pitt County about $31 million over the next 10 years for school construction and give East Carolina University $100 million each year of the biennium for operations and about $13.5 million for capital projects. The actions, lawmakers said, would also provide $700,000 to Pitt Community College — the seventh largest community college in the state — for building construction over the next two years, as well as $2.4 million for operation of the Jones Alcoholic Rehabilitation Center.

The 1987 session was "very productive," Martin said.

Warren reported that of the $19.6 billion budget for the biennium, $11 billion was earmarked for education.

"It's a good team," Jones said of Pitt's delegation. "We worked together for our district."

Jones said all members of the General Assembly "worked together for the good of the state."

"I had no idea what it was like when I went up there," said Rogers, serving his first term in the N.C. House member. But he said the other members of the delegation helped with guidance and advice. "I'm thankful to be included with the delegation," the Martin County resident told the gathering.

Whittington Wins Appeal

By The Associated Press
A state court on Wednesday dismissed two misdemeanor charges against Greenville-based television evangelist Jim Whittington, saying the crusade he held in Belhaven in March was not in violation of the town's zoning ordinances.

Superior Court Judge Charles Winberry Jr. of Rocky Mount said he dismissed the charges because it violated the constitutional grounds of freedom of religion.

"We feel like this is a victory for Christianity, freedom of worship and freedom of speech," said Whittington, president of the Fountain of Life Inc. of Greenville.

Whittington was arrested March 15 after a 1 1/2-hour sermon and faith-healing service. He pleaded innocent to the misdemeanor charge of conducting religious services without a permit in a zone approved only for business use and another misdemeanor charge for occupying an uninspected building.

Violation of the zoning ordinance carries a penalty of a $50 fine and 30 days in prison.

Diabetic Loses Suit Over Arrest

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — A federal appeals court said Wednesday it was regrettable that a Charlotte, N.C., diabetic seeking to counteract an insulin reaction was roughed up by police but that the police didn't use excessive force.

"It is deeply regrettable that a private citizen who had committed no crime was forcibly taken into custody and suffered injury as a result," the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said in its majority opinion. "Nevertheless, the evidence clearly indicates that at each stage of the incident, the actions of the officers were essentially reasonable under the circumstances."

The 2-1 ruling affirmed a decision last year by U.S. District Judge Robert D. Potter to clear five Charlotte police officers of using excessive force to restrain Dethorn Graham, who suffered the reaction Nov. 12, 1984.

Graham's foot was broken in the struggle and he also said his head was slammed against the hood of a police car, causing a loud ringing in his ear.

The incident began when Graham had a friend drive him to a nearby convenience store to get orange juice to counteract the reaction. There was a long line at the store and Graham grew agitated, leaving in a hurried state and asking his friend to drive him to his girlfriend's house.

A police officer saw Graham leaving the store, followed the car and stopped it. Graham's friend told the officer what was happening and he and the officer had to restrain Graham, who had gotten out of the car and ran around it twice. Four backup officers arrived at the scene, and one of them rolled Graham over and handcuffed him after Graham lost consciousness.

When the officers learned that no crime had been committed at the convenience store, Graham, who had regained consciousness and was struggling again, was put in a patrol car and taken home.

Graham, in a lawsuit filed in July 1985, contended that he struggled with the officers because they would not let him get his wallet to show a card that identified him as a diabetic.

He also said one officer refused to allow his friend to give him orange juice and that he was cursed when he asked for the juice.

When the case came before Potter, he ordered a directed verdict for the city and the five officers after concluding that the force used by police was not constitutionally excessive. The appeals panel majority agreed.

The majority said an expert defense witness on police handling of medical emergencies acknowledged that it was appropriate to restrain Graham under the circumstances, that Graham was offered but refused medical treatment, that there was no evidence of his head being slammed, and that the foot injury appeared to be accidental and self-inflicted.

But Judge John D. Butzner Jr., writing in dissent, said the evidence should have been presented to a jury. "... Graham was not a convict," Butzner wrote. "He was not even a pretrial detainee or a person under arrest. He was a free, innocent citizen..."

Baptists Endorse Bork Appointment

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The Southern Baptist Convention has a duty to voice its support for U.S. Supreme Court nominee Robert H. Bork because liberal groups are fighting to oppose him, says the author of a resolution backing Bork that was adopted by the convention.

"We felt that it was imperative... to take a stand and speak on this issue for Southern Baptists," Les Csorba said Wednesday.

The SBC's Public Affairs Committee approved Csorba's resolution on a 7-5 vote Friday.

The vote was a first for the committee, which just this summer was given a mandate by the SBC to take action on First Amendment issues, Csorba said.

The resolution calls on each of the 14 million members of the convention to "prayerfully consider his responsibility to fulfill his civic duty to support those principles clearly supported by Southern Baptists."

President Reagan nominated Bork, a federal judge, to replace Justice Lewis Powell.

Bork has come under attack from liberal groups but has the backing of conservative groups who approve of his opposition to abortion and homosexuality and his support for school prayer.

Csorba said that Bork's views on those issues reflect those of Southern Baptists.

If Bork is confirmed, "the views that Southern Baptists hold would be greatly promoted," Csorba said.

Csorba is executive director of Accuracy in Academia of Alexandria, Va.

Adoption of the resolution drew criticism from some members of the convention, who said the SBC should not become involved in political appointments.

Lloyd Elder, president of the Southern Baptist Sunday School Board, said he felt it is not the role of the SBC, but rather of individuals, to speak out on the Bork nomination.

Elder also objected to the actions of the SBC's Public Affairs Committee.

South African Mine Fires 10,000 Blacks For Striking

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — South Africa's largest mining company fired 10,000 black strikers who refused to return to work today after their union rejected a new offer to end a nationwide strike.

Anglo American Corp.'s decision to resume mass firings came one day after members of the National Union of Mineworkers voted overwhelmingly to reject a mining company contract proposal that offered slight improvements in benefits but no additional pay.

In another development, the country's main black labor federation, the Congress of South African Trade Unions said today it is preparing for a national strike in support of the mineworkers.

Thousands of Anglo workers engaged in the 18-day-old strike face return-to-work ultimatums over the next two days.

At one Anglo gold mine, Western Deep Levels, about 3,000 strikers were taking part today in an underground sit-in. The company did not say why the strikers staged the sit-in, but the union claimed they were forced underground on Wednesday night.

Anglo American, the company worst hit by the strike, had suspended return-to-work ultimatums for thousands of strikers threatened with dismissal so they could vote Wednesday on the contract offer by the Chamber of Mines, which represents the six major mining houses.

Last week, Anglo fired about 7,000 striking workers and closed two economically marginal gold mines.

The huge mineworkers' strike, which began Aug. 9, is the largest legal walkout in South African history. Under the country's labor law, companies may fire workers if they do not show up for work.

With the strike again deadlocked, the trade union congress, of which the miners' union is the largest affiliate, announced a series of steps it would take in support of the miners.

Jay Naidoo, general secretary of the 750,000-member congress, said leaders of neighboring countries would be urged to discourage the recruitment of strikebreakers and international trade unions would be asked to order members not to handle South African coal and gold.

"If the legitimate demands of the miners aren't met, the chamber should be aware that COSATU (the congress) has already set in motion plans to mount even stronger national solidarity action," Naidoo said.

He said congress leaders, at a strategy meeting Wednesday, had approved the idea of a national strike.

"Workers in this country have very few weapons," he said. "The one weapon we have is the withdrawal of our labor."

Cyril Ramaphosa, the union's general secretary, said Wednesday that strikers were nearly unanimous in turning down the chamber's offer.

"The strike continues until our demands are met," he told a news conference.

The chamber said in a statement today that it was "gravely disappointed" by the union's decision. "Mine managements will now be pursuing the objective of getting their mines back to normal production," it said.

The National Union of Mineworkers said 340,000 miners remained off the job at 45 gold and coal mines, the backbone of the country's economy. The Chamber of Mines said 210,000 miners were striking 29 mines.

In the first round of negotiations since the walkout began, owners issued an offer Tuesday that would have slightly improved death benefits and holiday pay. The offer did not address the central union demand — a 30 percent wage increase.

Ramaphosa disclosed that the union had lowered its wage raise demand to 27 percent but that management refused to discuss pay.

The chamber said owners would not negotiate a further increase beyond raises of 15 percent to 23.4 percent that it implemented July 1. The annual inflation rate in South Africa is 17 percent.

According to chamber statistics, black miners made an average $250 a month before the raise and now earn $285. The union says miners averaged $170 a month before the increase.

The union says 350 miners have been injured and 300 arrested since the strike began. Six miners have been killed, including strikers and non-strikers.

On Wednesday, the Libanon Gold Mining Co. was granted a Supreme Court order allowing it to dismiss 41 miners because of fighting at the mine Aug. 20 that left one person dead and 43 injured. The company is a subsidiary of Gold Fields of South Africa Ltd.

Philippine Fuel Protest Leaves 66 Under Arrest

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Police arrested 66 people today and surrounded the headquarters of a militant union in a crackdown following the largest strike of President Corazon Aquino's administration.

Brig. Gen. Alfredo Lim, Manila's police chief, said Medardo Roda, chairman of United Association of Transport Workers Nationwide, was arrested today for "inciting to sedition."

Roda heads a union of passenger jeep drivers affiliated with the militant May 1st Movement, which spearheaded Wednesday's strike demanding a rollback of fuel prices that the government increased Aug. 14.

In addition to Roda, police arrested 28 people, mostly students, who marched to the union headquarters to protest the crackdown.

Officials said 37 more were arrested in various parts of the city while urging drivers to continue the strike. They faced charges ranging from "grave coercion" to "public disturbance," police said.

Other union leaders, including May 1st Movement chairman Crispin Beltran, went into hiding to avoid arrest.

"I made the order to assert the authority of the government," Lim said of the arrests. "It's about time we enforce the law and maintain peace and order. This is the after-effect of their declaration of a nationwide strike where acts of violence were committed causing injuries to people and damage to property."

Wednesday's strike paralyzed public transport and commerce in Manila and other cities Wednesday and triggered violent clashes between police and protesters.

It occurred even though Mrs. Aquino issued an order Tuesday reducing the price of regular gasoline to $1.35 a gallon.

The Aug. 14 government order had raised the cost of a gallon from $1.24 to $1.49. Strike leaders had demanded a complete rollback of the increase.

Roda denied in an interview at police headquarters that his actions were seditious and said he merely opposed policies which "we did not feel benefit the nation."

The May 1st Movement called a press conference at its offices today to comment on the arrests. But when reporters arrived, they found dozens of plainclothes police armed with handguns surrounding the building. Union members refused to let reporters inside.

"We hear there are going to be some big shots there and we'd like to dialogue with them to end the strike," said Col. Edgar Dula Torres.

As word of the crackdown spread, about 100 people, mostly students, marched to the movement's headquarters. They were chased away by police, who confiscated banners and a public address system. Twenty-eight of them were arrested.

"We will come back here tomorrow," screamed one woman at reporters. "The government of Cory Aquino will never serve the Filipino people."

In a statement distributed to reporters, the May 1st Movement condemned the arrests and vowed to organize new protests.

"We have not deposed a dictator only to bear a new and deceptive kind of tyranny and oppression," it said.

Mrs. Aquino came to power in a civilian-military revolt that deposed former President Ferdinand Marcos.

Presidential spokesman Tedoro Benigno said the situation had returned to normal after the strike. He said there was no comment from Mrs. Aquino on the arrests but noted there had been "very specific orders that demonstrators who would resort to illegal means like barricading were liable to be arrested."

U.S. Ran 'Foolish' Plans For Hostages

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. officials pursued "harebrained schemes" and ran "foolish" operations in their desire to free the American hostages in Lebanon, a top CIA official says.

Clair George, chief of the CIA's clandestine service, says the "emotionalism of the hostage issue" affected President Reagan, former CIA Director William Casey and others.

"People didn't want to stop," George said in declassified and censored testimony released Wednesday by the congressional Iran-Contra committees. "They wanted to get the hostages, and it led them to do and run operations that are now, after the fact, foolish."

Officials revealed last November that U.S.-made weapons had been shipped to Iran in 1985 and 1986 in an effort to secure the release of Americans held by pro-Iranian Lebanese Shiites.

George's testimony and documents released by Congress show the extent to which other avenues also were followed in trying to win the hostages' release. U.S. officials concocted plans to ransom the hostages and talked of interfering with the judicial process.

Documents show that in the summer of 1985, Cyrus Hashemi, an arms merchant who had been indicted on charges of violating U.S. export laws by shipping weapons to Iran, contacted the CIA through John Shaheen, an old friend of Casey's.

Hashemi was a fugitive in Europe when he relayed information that he might be able to win release of the hostages if U.S. officials would drop criminal charges against him, George said.

The CIA reached an "agreement informally" that if Hashemi succeeded in helping release the hostages, the Justice and State departments "would consider such a possibility," George said.

But the "entire affair drifted off" because Hashemi was unable to make good on his promise, he said.

'Truth In Preference To Fiction'

Vital Link

There's a reason for Tar Heels to take a self-congratulatory attitude over reports their private colleges are seeing enrollments grow despite a nationwide decline in 18-year-old students.

The statistics prove this pride is justified. Davidson College had to set limits on enrollment of new students; Greensboro and High Point Colleges have long anticipated an increase in enrollments and that expectation became a reality in 1987. Elon College is another institution where enrollment will be going up this fall despite forecasts of declining interest.

Data suggests more North Carolina high school grads are going to college — which is fine because a more knowledgeable citizenry represents the biggest single factor in improving North Carolina's future. This state has long recognized the important role private colleges play in conjunction with the university system toward meeting Tar Heel needs.

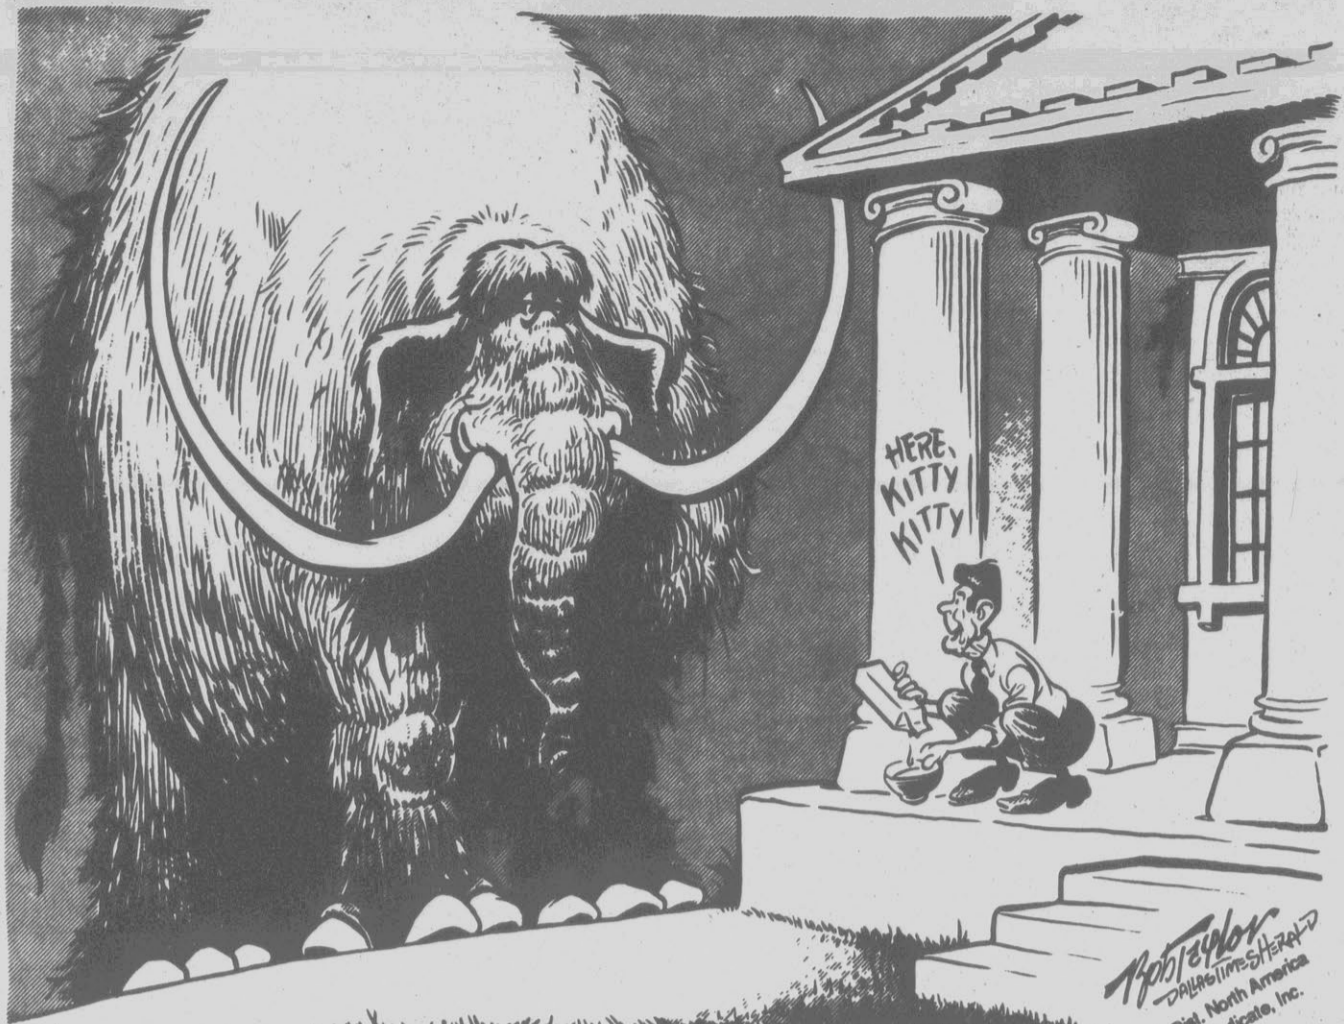

One common denominator seems to have helped in spurring enrollments this fall. As a general rule the private colleges did more and better advertising plus aggressive recruiting.

Officials of the University of North Carolina system estimate 39 percent of North Carolina's 1986 high school graduates were in college last fall. That's below the national average of 54 percent, but Raymond Dawson, the system's senior vice president for academic affairs, says North Carolina's showing appears to be improving.

A survey of high school seniors by the N.C. Department of Public Instruction indicates the percentage of college-bound North Carolina students has increased from 31 percent in 1982 to 34 percent in 1986. Some believe more students are choosing college in part because new high tech industries demand better-educated employees.

Using that as a premise, it is also reasonable to project that the private colleges have created an awareness that smaller classes result in more personal attention through a specialized curriculum.

It is evident North Carolina's private colleges are meeting the challenges they have been called upon to face. This fact can only benefit North Carolina since the private colleges are a vital link in the state's education network.

NEWS ITEM: Reagan describes Bork as a Moderate.

— Robert A. Burt —

Ideology Plays Role In Bork's Confirmation

There are unique historical reasons why the Senate should give special attention to the ideology of the person selected to fill the vacant seat on the Supreme Court.

This is the third seat to be filled by President Reagan. President Carter, by contrast, appointed no one to the Supreme Court. Only two other presidents share this status with Carter. William H. Harrison died only 30 days after taking office in 1841 and nominated no one. Andrew Johnson was deprived of the opportunity to fill two vacancies, in 1865 and 1867, by a congressional act that reduced the size of the court from nine to six justices during his term.

This was more than bad luck for Carter and the Democrats. It was also a misfortune for the institutional integrity of the court. The life tenure of justices ordinarily serves to ensure that the court is composed of members chosen by different presidents at different times reflecting different points of view. Without such diversity, the court cannot serve its basic constitutional function as a check on the impulses of a momentary majority.

Ideological diversity also is essential to carry out the court's task of constitutional interpretation. The Constitution can be interpreted only by the light of the justices' appreciation of enduring national values. If all of the justices, or a predominant group, share a single-minded commitment to a narrow ideology, then the court will lack a full understanding of the breadth of national values.

Reagan is the beneficiary of an historical accident. This opportunity carries a responsibility to safeguard the institutional integrity of the court by ensuring that the justices do not share a uniformly narrow or partisan viewpoint. The responsibility is even heavier for Reagan's third nomination than the others, because his previous nominees were drawn so much from the same ideological mold.

Past presidents have been more attentive to their obligation to transcend partisanship. President Eisenhower fulfilled this responsibility in his five Supreme Court nominees, whose views ranged from John M. Harlan to William J. Brennan Jr. (Indeed, Brennan had been a registered Democrat before his nomination.)

Even President Nixon's four nominations adequately met this criterion, ranging from William H. Rehnquist to Harry A. Blackmun. (And Lewis F. Powell Jr. was a registered Democrat.)

As a practical matter, if the Senate insisted on its complete and independent ideological agreement with nominees, an unresolvable stalemate could occur when the Senate and the presidency are controlled by different parties, as they are today.

Moreover, the same principle that mandates deference to the president because he represents a majority of the people applies to the Senate, whose members also are popularly elected. The president has a national constituency while senators represent only their states, and it is possible that a Senate majority may not reflect the majority sentiment of the entire population.

The Constitution authorizes the Senate to both "advise and consent" regarding Supreme Court nominees. The Senate may base its advice on its independent judgment. The president is not obliged to accept the Senate's advice. But if he totally disregards that advice, then the Senate is entitled to withhold its consent from his nominees.

In deciding whether to confirm Bork, the Senate is entitled, and even constitutionally obliged, to consider his ideology. It may, moreover, legitimately reject him solely because of his ideology.

Why Wait For Pinochet?

WASHINGTON — Some day the story of 19-year-old Carmen Gloria will make a great movie. But Hollywood must wait for the final chapter of Gloria's cruel encounter with the Pinochet regime in Chile.

Gloria's woes say as much about the daily brutality of Gen. Pinochet's reign as they do about our own government's well-known tolerance of despots.

For those who don't know the story, Carmen Gloria was a typical freshman college student who, according to friends, was the first child in her middle-class family ever to attend a university. She was a grateful, eager, jovial, and optimistic young woman.

But in July 1986, Gloria was splattered with gasoline by a military patrol in Santiago, set aflame, thrown into a ditch and left to die. Miraculously, she survived, albeit with appalling third-degree burns. In Chile, her story (including co-victim Rodrigo Rojas) has become known as "Los Quemados," "The Burnt Ones."

During the past month Gloria has returned to Chile from exile in Canada to offer testimony to lawyers and judges. The story she has given to judicial authorities goes as follows:

On the morning of July 2, 1986, a group of students and neighbors gathered in a poor suburb of Santiago to participate in a two-day protest against the Pinochet regime. The protestors intended to build a burning barricade at the entrance to one of the barrios south of Santiago. But a military patrol appeared unexpectedly and all parties vanished.

Only Carmen Gloria and Rojas, a 19-year-old free-lance photographer, were nabbed. The two were beaten and set aflame, while Chilean militiamen broke into laughter.

Amendment Keeps Public In Dark

RALEIGH — Legislation made in haste is often a defective product — sometimes it's outright dangerous stuff.

In the waning days of the 1987 session, the General Assembly stuck the public with amendments to the Public Records Act that will give bureaucrats the power to lock up previously public information. The new law is ostensibly designed to help the state recruit new industry. In effect, it will allow the politicians to give away the farm while the public is left in the dark.

The bill is a reaction to press inquiries about the state's bid to bring the microelectronics firm Sematech to North Carolina. The governor has said the state is willing to provide major incentives to the firm to get it to move here, but he won't reveal what those incentives are. Before he got the law amended, it was fairly clear that he was breaking the law in refusing to release that information.

Supporters of the bill, including Gov. Jim Martin, Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan and Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, its introducer, say it is needed to keep other states from learning what North Carolina's offer to Sematech is. They support the bill because in industrial recruitment, it is often essential to keep the name of an industry secret.

Those are two different issues. If the state is merely asking for the authority to keep secret the name of firms looking at state sites, the public policy implications are not very severe. If a company is asking the state for information about sites and business conditions in the state, they have a certain right to privacy.

But in cases like Sematech, the state is going far beyond providing information about North Carolina. A lot of cash may be involved. There is word that as much as $8 million in incentives have been offered to Sematech to come here. If the state is offering that kind of money to industrial recruits, don't the people of North Carolina have a right to know?

Supporters say that the people will know — but only after the money has been pledged to the company. That's hardly the way democracy works.

On the Senate floor, Sen. David Parnell, D-Robeson, raised a far more serious matter than money. He questioned the public's ability, under the new law, to gain access to important public health information.

Parnell was concerned that state records about a new hazardous waste treatment plant might be kept from the public. When GSX Corporation tried to locate such a plant in Laurinburg, Parnell said, they had to file a number of documents with the state. Would the new law have kept those records from becoming public before the plant actually located in Laurinburg?

Sen. Ken Royall, D-Durham, who handled the bill on the Senate floor, said that in Parnell's situation the records would be made public.

But Sen. Bill Martin, D-Guilford, one of only three senators to oppose the bill, disagreed. "I think David Parnell is absolutely right, regardless of what Ken Royall said. The way it is worded, there is nothing to differentiate between a situation like GSX and an industrial recruitment."

Sen. Ted Kaplan, D-Forsyth, the third dissenter, said he also agreed with Parnell and then questioned the whole philosophy of hiding information about some of these businesses from the public. "I don't know if I particularly want an industry here that we have to be so quiet about."

That's the disturbing element of this new law. Not only could the governor and legislature lure an undesirable industry here, but they might also be paying them to come. And the public wouldn't know about it until after it was done.

Strength For Today

"The truth shall make you free."

These words of Jesus are familiar to everyone, but many people miss the point of the Master's declaration because they emphasize the word "free" in which they are the most interested. But it may well be that when Christ first spoke the words to his disciples, his emphasis was on "truth." It is truth that makes us free. Men can be born politically free, but the inner freedom Jesus was speaking about is one which comes only to those who bow in submission to the dictates of spiritual truth.

People may live in a democratic society, but if they have false or warped ideas about God and the universe, their freedom is limited and will never blossom into the glorious liberty of the after-life.

Adjustment

Sometimes the simple solution to a problem is the best approach.

People from this area traveling to Morehead City and the beaches nearby have been caught in the traffic jams that characterize the Neuse River bridge at New Bern during the summer season. Most everyone here traveled N.C. 43 to Vanceboro, U.S. 17 to New Bern and then U.S. 70 from New Bern to Morehead City. Some were aware there was another route from Vanceboro to the U.S. 70 bypass of New Bern, but it was difficult to follow.

That won't be the case anymore. The N.C. Department of Transportation has decided to extend N.C. 43 from U.S. 17 business in Vanceboro to New Bern.

The N.C. 43 extension now continues from Vanceboro along state road 1482, 1400 and 1401 to N.C. 55. It continues from N.C. 55 to U.S. 70 business, U.S. 70 bypass and state road 1309 to U.S. 17. The 18.2 mile trip on N.C. 43 is some 2.7 miles shorter than following U.S. 17 to New Bern.

The extension is designed for motorists from the areas of Rocky Mount, Greenville, Williamston and Washington who are bound for Jacksonville, Wilmington and Morehead City. The routing is a economical move since all the roads meet primary road standards and no new construction is needed.

James E. Harrington, N.C. transportation secretary, urged motorists from those areas to take advantage of the western route "in order that they not get caught in the congestion of the drawbridge and the intersection in New Bern."

The route adjustment is an example of what good administrative planning and utilizing existing resources can accomplish in solving traffic flow problems. It should ease congestion around New Bern and facilitate the travel of beach-bound cars.

The new N.C. 43 route is ready-made to provide travelers from this area a faster and shorter route on the way to Morehead City. It will not be difficult to follow now and it offers a way for motorists to avoid a major summertime traffic jam.

The Real Garbage Is The Top Story Of The Year

Analysis

WASHINGTON — Happy New Year, news junkies. Herewith early nominations for top news story of 1987, offered in the conviction that the time for such honor approaches. The real New Year, after all, begins on Labor Day, not Jan. 1.

The field is filled with worthy contenders, complete with memorable characters and incredible events. Consider the Iran-contra hearings, with Fawn and Ollie & Co., and Jim and Tammy Faye, and Gary and Donna. In less tumultuous times, each would rate as an almost certain winner.

Of many wondrous policy flips and flops, the most noteworthy involves Iran.

Turns out that those hated Iranians, our sworn enemies, fonts of international terrorism and practitioners of the art of hostage-taking, aren't so bad. Lots of moderates there and secret America-lovers, too. So the United States secretly shipped arms to Iran, in part because top White House strategists believed that Iran was losing its war with Iraq. This despite the nearly unanimous opinion of experts at the Defense and State departments and at the Central Intelligence Agency.

Then, when Iran failed to deliver U.S. hostages — a matter of only incidental interest in the arms deals, according to the tale told the country by administration officials — America began tilting toward Iraq, whose great benefactor had been the Soviet Union. U.S. reflagging of oil tankers in the Persian Gulf would protect Iraq's oil lifeline but also work to Iran's interest by keeping international sea lanes open. Thus, Iran's vital oil flow, upon which its war and other national undertakings including terrorism depend, would continue.

How's that for diplomatic sleight of hand and working at cross-purposes?

We've had high and low moments in sports, ranging from the ridiculous to the sublime. Loud-mouth George Steinbrenner is in contention again for making even more of an ass of himself than usual as the ham-handed Yankees owner whose destructive behavior seems guaranteed to turn winners into losers. In cheering contrast is the classy manner in which modest Paul Molitor has been chasing Joe DiMaggio's perhaps imperishable 56-game hitting streak.

But, deserving as these are, they pale beside an epic sea saga finally completed. It rates this corner's choice as news story of the year.

On Monday, the barge Mobro 4000, towed by the tug Break of Day, docked in Bensonhurst, N.Y., near the Southwest Brooklyn incinerator. This brought to an end a 156-day odyssey covering 6,000 miles during which Mobro, the Flying Dutchman of barges, plied the waters from Long Island Sound into the Atlantic, through the Caribbean and the Gulf of Mexico and back into New York Harbor.

Along the way, Mobro attempted to discharge its cargo in North Carolina, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas, Florida, Mexico, Belize and the Bahamas. At each port of call, Mobro's cargo was rejected. On she went, vainly in search of a final resting place.

She carried 3,186 tons of potential archeological treasure: original New York garbage whose contents, if preserved, would help future historians understand the nature of late 20th century urban life in America. This trove will be lost. Plans are to examine it for infectious waste, then recycle or incinerate it. The resulting ash will provide more footage at a landfill in Islip, New York.

Even standing alone, the saga of Mobro 4000 ranks as a great news story. But it doesn't stand alone. It symbolizes a greater story of the times, the factor that gives special stature among news events of 1987.

About 10 days before Mobro finally docked, vacationers in New Jersey resort communities began noticing a disturbing, horrifying phenomenon as thousands of pill bottles, intravenous tubes, hypodermic needles and reportedly even body parts began washing up on beaches. Upon investigation, this turned out to be wastes from tons of hospital and household trash, apparently emanating like Mobro from New York, illegally dumped from an off-shore garbage barge. The resulting garbage formed a slick about 50 miles long.

At the same time, dead dolphins began washing ashore on mid-Atlantic beaches in unprecedented numbers. The cause of death appears to be bacterial infection, and scientists are investigating to determine whether it stems from an unknown virus or toxic contamination.

So, when it comes to memorable news of the year, forget Iran-contra and other worldwide problems. Think about a society that can't even dispose of its own mess.

Dealt Out

Europeans are beginning to perceive that Americans are unwilling and dissatisfied as never before with the burden of defending Western Europe, and comments from the Continent are taking on a new tone.

Significantly, the debate is going on for the most part within Europe, and, strangely, we in America seem set on ignoring it.

Some strong signals have crossed the Atlantic from the United States, and the Europeans are not obtuse.

The Europeans know that we are running huge trade deficits with them, and that we have run several billion dollars into debt to them to finance our budget deficits. They heard former national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski's calls to relocate American troops from Europe to the Middle East, and they watched Senate Armed Services Committee Chairman Sam Nunn, D-Ga., sponsor a measure to recall 90,000 troops from Europe and saw it fail to pass the Senate by only a half-dozen votes. They are aware that many Americans doubt a strategy that leans on the first use of nuclear weapons to cover for inadequate conventional strength, and they share those doubts themselves. Most of all, they see the hunger of the Reagan administration for an arms-control agreement that would remove tactical nuclear weapons from Europe.

They were startled at the rapidity with which President Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev came to terms at their meeting in Reykjavik last October, and they feel pushed into a deal that was made over their heads. They know that there is no time to meet their concerns in the rush to an autumn summit meeting, and that the summit must take place this fall if there is to be a ratification from the Senate before the next election.

The American who is the most in touch with the Europeans' strategic concerns, outgoing North Atlantic Treaty Organization commander Bernard Rogers, spoke for many of them when he protested at his farewell news conference, "Somebody ought to stand up out there and say to NATO, 'Time out, dammit!' ... When the future of Western Europe is at stake, I don't know why it so necessary ... to rush into this, other than the fact that certain administrations are going out of existence."

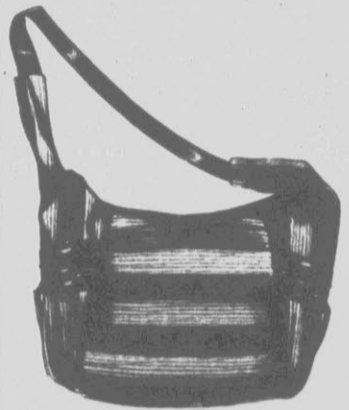

The Europeans are talking, and for the most part they are dealing the Americans out of the discussion. The dialogue is fascinating, and is little reported in the United States. It should be news when former Chancellor Helmut Schmidt proposes that West Germany effectively put its troops into the hands of France. "Now is the time," Schmidt said, "to replace the 20-year-old flexible-response strategy with a new approach — for example, by massing sufficient conventional forces through the integration of German, French and Benelux troops under a unified French command."

We in America should cock an ear when a former French prime minister, Laurent Fabius, proposes in turn that France spread the small nuclear umbrella of its force de frappe to cover West Germany.

Council Of State Approves Land Offer To Get Collider

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — The Council of State has unanimously authorized Gov. Jim Martin to offer land and tunnelling rights for a proposed $4.4 billion superconducting super collider, and Martin says there is an "almost perfect probability" North Carolina will be a finalist for the project.

Martin said Wednesday the action by the Council of State was important to demonstrate the depth of state government's enthusiasm for the massive project. Without it, he said, "all I would be able to do is ... say it's my intention to propose" making the land available.

The state Constitution requires the council's approval of state land transactions.

"Even if they only pick five or six sites, we think we're going to be one of those," Martin told reporters one week before the Sept. 2 deadline for states to submit bids for the project to the U.S. Department of Energy.

A task force is working around the clock to complete the North Carolina presentation, which Martin said will be delivered to Washington next Tuesday.

A National Academy of Sciences and Engineering panel is scheduled to give the Department of Energy a "short list" of finalists by Dec. 31. President Reagan will make the final decision around Dec. 31, 1988.

If North Carolina is chosen, it will have to turn over 8,000 acres to the Department of Energy for the super collider complex, including a 53-mile underground tunnel in which experiments with subatomic particles will be conducted, and the mineral rights to another 8,000 acres.

Purchasing the land from its private owners would cost $20 million to $25 million, according to Earl Mac Cormac, Martin's science adviser.

Katherine White, an associate state attorney general, said the state can condemn land if owners refuse to sell but emphasized that either way they would be compensated. "A very small number" of residents might have to move, she said.

The state will acquire land only if North Carolina is chosen to host the project, Martin said.

Council of State members voiced support for the project, although Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham asked how it might affect farming and quality of life in the area state officials are touting for the super collider. The area extends into rural Granville, Person and Durham counties.

Mac Cormac said the tunnel would not disturb agriculture because it will be 1,500 feet below the surface and encased in granite. "You can put your cows up there, you can put your tobacco (there) and we can put those fish ponds ... in for aquaculture and grow catfish," he said.

Although officials initially said the "short list" would consist of three to six states, Mac Cormac said there was speculation it might be enlarged to 10 or 12 "to keep congressional support alive for funding this proposal."

"Our hope is to make the first cut ... the best-qualified list," Mac Cor-mac said. He said the Aug. 17 edition of "New Technology Week" quoted White House science counsel John Deutch as saying North Carolina was one of the top five contenders.

The others are Illinois, California, Texas and Colorado, the publication said. Although the bigger states generally have been rated as the favorites, Martin said those analyses underrated North Carolina.

"North Carolina has an ideal combination of a relatively rural site that's in close proximity to the urban advantages of interstate highways and the ... Raleigh-Durham Airport, and world-class research institutions," he said.

Although the initial screening will be based on technical merits, politics will play a growing role as the list of contenders is pared, Martin said.

He said he would push for regional solidarity at next week's Southern Governors Association meeting in Louisville, Ky.

Several other Southeastern states are bidding for the project, but Martin said he would urge his fellow governors to agree to line up behind whichever of the states make the final cut.

Wake Farmers Begin Review Of Tobacco Co-Op's Books

RALEIGH (AP) — The records of the Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corp. have been opened for two farmers and their attorney, the first time in the cooperative's 41-year history that members have been allowed to review the documents.

Farmers Horace Tart and Dewey Keith of Fuquay-Varina ended their 3-year battle against the co-op Wednesday when they began examining minutes of board meetings from 1980 through 1985.

Their attorney, John Butler of Raleigh, said the minutes were detailed, but declined to elaborate on what was in them.

"It's impossible until we've really finished with the minutes and they — the farmers — have a chance to assess them to say what we found," Butler said.

Tart and Keith had sued to examine the co-op's books, saying they suspected the farmer-owned cooperative of mismanagement. The co-op buys and stores tobacco when private companies don't meet the set support price.

Tart said they would review board minutes for two more weeks. Tart said that their review would focus on the board's decision to recommend an increase in increasing the assessment that farmers pay from 7 cents to 25 cents per pound in 1985.

A Wake Superior Court Judge ruled in June that the farmers had a "proper purpose" in seeking to review the books for mismanagement. An investigation by the U.S. Department of Agriculture in 1985 found that three co-op officials had used company employees to perform personal duties while on company time.

The co-op had fought the farmers in court, saying that the farmers had harassed co-op executives and that they had no substantiated reason to suspect mismanagement. But the state Supreme Court last week cleared the way for the farmers to look at the books by refusing an appeal by the co-op to keep its books closed pending an appeal.

Butler said Wednesday that the co-op's appeal would be dropped because of an out-of-court settlement signed Wednesday. The settlement gives Tart and Keith access to the co-op's books until Nov. 1.

In the settlement, Keith and Tart agreed to keep confidential any information pertaining to the quantity, price and timing of tobacco sales to specific cigarette companies. If Tart and Keith wish to make public any confidential information, the settlement says, a court-appointed mediator will decide whether that information can become public.

Governors' Panel Studies Punishments For Drug Violations

By The Associated Press
A Board of Governors' committee assigned to develop a drug policy for the University of North Carolina system is considering urging specific punishments for the most serious drug violations.

Such a recommendation would move the board toward a proposal similar to one faculty representatives in the 16-campus system found unacceptable last March.

That draft said students who deal in drugs should be expelled and employees who do the same should be fired.

"I would think that the committee feels there are certain violations serious enough to warrant a broad, university-wide policy, and that policy ought to deal with those infractions specifically," David J. Whichard II of Greenville, the committee chairman, said in an interview. Whichard said he views trafficking and sale of drugs as the most serious offenses, but would not speculate on what punishments might be suggested.

He said, however, that any policy would leave considerable latitude to the individual campuses.

"Obviously, it would be almost unworkable for the Board of Governors to try to come up with a policy that would apply to every situation on drugs," Whichard said. "A lot has to be left to the individual campus administration."

Whichard's committee, which was scheduled to meet again today in Chapel Hill, last month instructed UNC Vice President Lloyd Hackley to come up with another draft.

UNC officials began developing a drug policy last fall. But when faculty representatives objected to specific punishments for specific offenses, the draft was watered down.

Faculty members said the proposed policy usurped the authority of individual boards of trustees and gave more authority to the Board of Governors.

When the draft was presented to the Board of Governors last March, the board turned it down, saying it wanted something stronger.

Whichard's committee was formed shortly after that and has been meeting regularly ever since.

"It's not an easy task," Whichard said. "It just takes time to work through the ramifications of this thing."

"We're going to take some firm stands on hard drugs," said J. Phillip Haire, a committee member, who specifically cited cocaine, crack and heroin. "We're going to tell the universities that they are going to do something."

Whichard said he does not know whether campus representatives will be given the opportunity to comment on a final draft.

But faculty members want that opportunity.

"I think we are going to wind up with a draft just like we had to begin with," said Ed Smallwood, former head of the faculty senate at N.C. State University.

Applications

RALEIGH (AP) — The State Department of Public Instruction is about two months behind in certifying applicants to teach in North Carolina schools, officials said.

The backlog typically hits during the summer because of applications from recent college graduates and teachers moving into North Carolina from other states, but this year's flow of applications has been somewhat greater than usual.

That, combined with difficulties in getting acquainted with a new computer system, has led to a backlog that is slightly greater than usual for this time of year, said Robert Boyd, state assistant superintendent for personnel services.

Boyd said the department had a special telephone line that school systems could call to inquire about a candidate's certification. When a system indicates they are interested shows interest in hiring an applicant, the department will place top priority on processing that person's certification, he said.

State Issues New Chart Comparing Phone Rates

RALEIGH (AP) — Consumers baffled by the assortment of companies offering in-state long-distance telephone service will find it easier to compare shop, thanks to a new chart published by the State Utilities Commission.

The chart, which is available free to the public, shows the per-minute rate charged by 15 long-distance telephone companies for calls within North Carolina. It will be revised as rates change and will eventually be expanded to include charges for out-of-state calls as well.

"I don't know of anywhere else you can get this information," Daniel Long, assistant Utilities Commission attorney, said in an interview. "We're trying to be sympathetic to the ordinary consumer, and it's difficult for him to call around to all these different companies."

"It's not meant to be a recommendation," he said. "It's simply trying to give some basic price comparisons."

Since the break-up of American Telephone and Telegraph in 1984, telephone customers have had the right to choose their long-distance telephone company. Numerous small long-distance companies have sprung up in North Carolina, and several major national companies, such as MCI and Sprint, have begun offering service in the state.

The choice has left many consumers shaking their heads in befuddlement. Because the companies use different rate structures, billing procedures and have different requirements, finding the cheapest and most convenient service is no easy task.

The chart, the brainchild of the Public Staff, which represents consumers in utility cases, is the state's first attempt to end some of that confusion.

"Unless you want to write a book about it, we feel that this is about as good information as you're going to get," said John Garrison, the Public Staff communications engineer who compiled the chart.

Garrison said consumers should pay attention to more than a long-distance company's rates. Some companies, for example, bill in one-tenth of a minute increments instead of by the minute, which saves money. Others require monthly minimums, while others offer discounts for volume.

These policies are included in the chart's footnotes.

As for rates, the chart breaks down costs based on the mileage of a call and the time of day the call is made. There are 12 mileage zones, ranging from 0 to 10 miles to 431 to 544 miles, with each zone increasingly expensive.

Most companies have three rate periods: daytime, which is the most expensive; evening, which is cheaper; and night, weekend and holiday, which is the least expensive. The hours of those periods depend on the company.

The chart shows how widely charges vary from company to company. A person making a 9 p.m. call from Greensboro to Winston-Salem, for example, would pay from 30.21 cents to 44.30 cents for a three-minute call. The low rate is offered by TMC Piedmont, the high rate by U.S. Sprint. The AT&T charge would be 33 cents.

IN THE STATE

Trucker Killed

SOUTH HILL, Va. (AP) — An all-day hunt by two states for the killer of a Lindenhurst, N.Y., truck driver whose body was found along a Virginia stretch of Interstate 85 turned up no suspects.

Thomas R. Riecker Jr., 23, was found dead Wednesday near a tractor-trailer along the roadway in Mecklenburg County about two miles north of the Virginia-North Carolina line.

Although the cause of death had not been determined, police found human hair in the grill of the rig and speculated that Riecker had been hit by the vehicle.

Two truck drivers reported seeing two men arguing in front of a tractor-trailer stopped in a southbound lane, police said. The witnesses reported hearing shots and seeing one man fleeing on foot, heading west into the woods.

The cab of the truck was punctured by bullet holes and a shotgun was found nearby, but Charles Vaughan of the Virginia State Police ruled out shooting as the cause of death.

Sentence

BEL AIR, Md. (AP) — A Harford County circuit judge sentenced a North Carolina trucker to six years in prison for smashing his rig into a state police cruiser and killing the two troopers inside.

Judge William O. Carr sentenced Carl Douglas Cates to 11 years, then suspended five, and fined him $1,500 Wednesday on a vehicular manslaughter conviction and six other counts including driving while intoxicated.

Cates, 35, of High Point, N.C., hit the troopers last March on Interstate 95.

Settlement

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — The Cumberland County clerk of court has ordered the Cumberland County Board of Commissioners to release $4.5 million it has held in a dispute with the county school board over teacher supplements.

But in arbitrating the long-standing dispute between the two boards, Clerk Tommy Griffin left unresolved the original question of how teacher supplements should be distributed.

Griffin announced his decision Wednesday after listening to more than five hours of testimony.

Population

RALEIGH (AP) — Wake County is considering asking the U.S. Census Bureau to conduct a special head count because county officials think the area's population has been underestimated.

The special census would cost almost $800,000, authorities said, but the county would stand to gain up to $5 million in state sales tax revenue over the next five years if the county's population is higher.

State figures show Wake County with 353,801 residents as of September 1986 with 89,110 living in unincorporated areas. County officials say there are 24,000 more people in those areas.

"One only need to drive around the county and look at the subdivisions in the areas of the county outside of Raleigh and the other municipalities to recognize that there has been substantial growth in those areas," said County Manager Richard Y. Stevens.

Impostor Cop

BURLINGTON, N.C. (AP) — A man posing as a police officer has approached one motorist and demanded money because she wasn't wearing a seatbelt, authorities said Wednesday.

A Burlington woman told police she was approached by a man driving a blue-and-white police style vehicle that had a blue light on the dashboard Monday afternoon. The stocky white man, wearing dark pants and a blue shirt, told the woman he was a police officer and that a $25 fine was payable on the spot for not wearing a seatbelt.

The woman said she gave the man $25 in cash and he left without asking for her driver's license or issuing a citation, according to Lt. William Fox of the Burlington Police Department.

Eagle Ready

RALEIGH (AP) — A bald eagle rescued from Jordan Lake earlier in the month is ready to leave the North Carolina State University School of Veterinary Medicine and test its wings, doctors said Wednesday.

"Bob," as the young eagle was dubbed while it recuperated at the school, is planning to be shipped to a federally licensed raptor rehabilitation center in Virginia by Friday, Dr. Keven Flammer, avian specialist at the school's teaching hospital, said.

Flammer has approved the release of the eagle, whose weight has been boosted from 7.2 pounds to 8.2 pounds in a week and a half at the hospital.

The eagle was rescued Aug. 16.

Clerks Charged

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Thirteen store clerks in Cabarrus County have been charged with selling alcohol to a minor after an undercover operation by State Alcohol Law Enforcement agents, authorities said.

ALE district supervisor Ron Parrish said clerks at half the 26 stores targeted during the undercover operation sold beer to a 16-year-old Mecklenburg County girl.

None of the clerks who were charged asked the woman for identification, Parrish said. Parrish said the stores involved in the two-day undercover operation were in Concord and Mount Pleasant.

Unit Closed

SILER CITY, N.C. (AP) — A shortage of skilled personnel has prompted Chatham Hospital to close its intensive care unit, leaving patients a trip of up to 30 miles to receive such care, officials said.

It is likely the unit will be closed for several months because there is a shortage of and high demand for the highly skilled personnel needed for the unit, Bob Carey, interim administrator at the hospital, said.

Chatham Hospital was the only medical facility in Chatham County that offered intensive care. Depending on where Chatham residents live, the closest intensive care unit for them is at hospitals in Asheboro, Raleigh, Durham, Chapel Hill, Sanford or Burlington, Carey said.

Protesters Confront Senator In Tunnel

BRYSON CITY, N.C. (AP) — Angry protesters confronted U.S. Sen. James Sasser in a tunnel in the Great Smoky Mountains National Park, saying a wilderness bill he co-sponsored will end Swain County's shot at economic recovery.

The protesters swarmed a van carrying Sasser through the park Wednesday, briefly blocking the Tennessee Democrat's passage through a tunnel. Two of them jumped in front of the van.

The protesters said they were demonstrating to oppose Sasser's wilderness bill, which would designate about 467,000 acres of the 518,000-acre park as wilderness and kill a proposed road in Swain County. The Swain County road was begun and abandoned in the 1960s.

Dr. Marcus Williams, a doctor of internal medicine from Bryson City, said Swain County is one of the poorest counties in the state and that the road is needed to help the area prosper.

"In 1943, Swain County was promised its road. In 1944, Tennessee was promised Foothills Parkway. Tennessee got theirs and we didn't. We have suffered economically ever since," he said.

Williams also charged Sasser was protecting the huge tourist industry in East Tennessee served by the park.

One man, Marvin Grant, 35, from Bryson City, N.C., was physically removed by park rangers after a brief scuffle.

Sasser, who was visiting the park to see what effect his bill will have on certain areas that would be designated wilderness, did not get out of the van and was not injured in the confrontation.

The legislation is co-sponsored in the Senate by Sasser and Sen. Albert Gore Jr., D-Tenn., and Sen. Terry Sanford, D-N.C. House sponsors are U.S. Reps. James Clark, D-N.C., and John Duncan, R-Tenn.

The bill would exempt from wilderness many park attractions in Tennessee, such as Cades Cove, while barring roads and other development in the areas designated wilderness. A majority of those wilderness acres would be in North Carolina.

A spokesman for Sasser said the senator's bill would pay Swain County with $9.5 million as reimbursement plus interest for a section of the roadway already built, and then designate 44,000 acres as wilderness.

It would exempt already developed areas and Tennessee Valley Authority rights of way for power line maintenance. Also, the park service would continue maintenance on Gregory and Andrews roads.

American Tobacco Expanding Facility

By The Associated Press
Expansion of the American Tobacco Co. plant at Reidsville began Wednesday as the company's landmark plant in Durham was closed, ending an era when tobacco was the economic mainstay in that city.

Thousands of people are expected to apply for 30 new production jobs at the Reidsville plant, which is expected to benefit from the Durham plant's shutdown. The Durham closing was announced a year ago and production ended at 2:40 p.m. Wednesday as the last package of Carlton 100s was wrapped in cellophane.

"They were having a little celebration," Bobby Green, president of the Local 183 of the Tobacco Workers International Union, said of the last group of Durham employees. "There were smiles on their faces."

"I reckon some people were sad. It's just one of those things. There's never been sour grapes in Durham that the company choose the Reidsville plant instead. We're just glad one of the companies stayed open."

There were only 100 of the original 1,200 workers left as the last bit of tobacco was used up on four of the company's cigarette-making machines. The other 16 machines already had been moved to Reidsville, along with about 275 employees. Most of the employees left working in Durham when production ended are retiring, Green said.

American Brands Inc., the parent company, announced in May 1986 that it was closing the Durham plant and consolidating its cigarette-manufacturing facilities in Reidsville to save money for the ailing cigarette manufacturer.

American Tobacco produces non-filter brands such as Lucky Strike, which have lost their appeal with an increasingly health-conscious public. Production has fallen steadily since 1965.

At first it appeared Reidsville would not gain additional jobs from the consolidation. But next week, the Rockingham County Employment Security Commission will take applications for 30 entry-level jobs, with starting pay of $6 an hour.

J.G. "Doc" Alston, a spokesman for the Reidsville plant, declined to say if the 30 new jobs were created by Durham workers who decided not to transfer to Reidsville.

American Tobacco officials say a few more jobs might be coming as a result of the expansion under way to build a tobacco-processing plant.

EPA Says 62 U.S. Cities Flunked Ozone Tests

By CAROLYN SKORNECK
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Sixty-two cities violated the federal ozone pollution standard for the years 1984-86, and 65 violated the carbon monoxide limit during the period, the Environmental Protection Agency said today.

The figures still reflect an improvement over the EPA's previous report, covering the years 1983-85, when 76 cities violated the ozone standard and 81 violated the carbon monoxide standard, EPA spokesman Chris Rice said.

Rice said the EPA's "emphasis is normally much more on ozone. We believe the carbon monoxide problem is only a longterm problem for a few cities."

The hot, dry summer of 1983 triggered an increase in ozone pollution, and Rice warned the cities dropped from the latest ozone pollution list not to celebrate too soon. He said the mid-Atlantic's hot summer of 1987 may throw some cities back on the list in the next report.

"My understanding is, for the most part, in the Western part of the country, it's been a relatively cool summer," Rice said. "But it's been particularly bad for the mid-Atlantic area, from about South or North Carolina up to New York. Those areas will probably experience bad ozone numbers for the summer..."

"Cities could be added or re-added to the list of violating areas when the 1987 data are incorporated," he said.

The Clean Air Act requires that all areas of the country reach the standards by Dec. 31, and EPA will use data from 1985-87 in judging which have complied, he said.

Ozone is a form of oxygen that comes from chemical reactions in sunshine between nitrogen oxides, the combustion of fossil fuels, and chemicals such as unburned gasoline and certain solvents.

A layer of ozone 15 miles to 25 miles high protects the earth from harmful ultra-violet rays, but ground-level ozone is a key element in smog and cannot be added to the protective layer.

Congress has not said what will happen to cities that fail to meet the standards by the Dec. 31 deadline, Rice said. However, the EPA already has begun enforcement actions against cities that either have failed to develop an approved plan to reduce the pollution or that have failed to carry out previously approved plans. Such sanctions include bans on construction of major new sources of pollution, and cuts in federal grants.

At the end of September, the EPA will announce its post-1987 policy for areas not meeting the standards, Rice said.

Los Angeles, the perennial ozone pollution leader, tops the latest list. The ozone limit of 0.12 parts per million was exceeded there almost by a factor of three, to 0.35 parts per million, on an average of 154 days each year in 1984-86.

It was followed by San Diego, with 0.22 ppm on about 11 days, and then by Houston and New York with 0.20 ppm on about 19 days. Next on the list were Greater Connecticut; Providence, R.I.; Sacramento, Calif.; Atlantic City, N.J.; Chicago and Philadelphia.

Sixteen areas were dropped from the ozone list, while two were added:

Those dropped were Acadia National Park, Maine; Charleston, W.Va., Dayton-Springfield, Ohio; Dover and Seaford, Del.; Erie, Harrisburg, Lancaster, Pittsburgh, Reading and York, Pa.; Detroit and Grand Rapids, Mich.; Janesville-Beloit, Wis., and Northampton County and Richmond, Va.

The two added were Knox County, Maine, and Lexington, Ky.

Denver ousted the Los Angeles-Long Beach area from the top of the list for carbon monoxide pollution; Los Angeles-Long Beach was second, followed by Las Vegas, Nev.; New York; Fairbanks, Alaska; Provo-Orem, Utah; Sacramento; Raleigh-Durham, N.C.; Reno, Nev.; and Albuquerque, N.M.

A total of 23 areas were dropped from the carbon monoxide list, while seven were added.

Those dropped were Lowell, Mass.-N.H.; Stamford, Conn.; Worcester, Mass.; Nassau-Suffolk, N.Y.; Trenton, N.J.; Norfolk-Virginia Beach, Va.; Philadelphia; Atlanta; Birmingham, Ala.; Greensboro-Winston-Salem, N.C.; Lexington, Ky.; Louisville, Ky.; Chicago; Davenport-Rock Island, Iowa-Ill.; Milwaukee, Wis.; Peoria and Rockford, Ill.; Toledo, Ohio; Des Moines and Dubuque, Iowa; Kansas City, Mo.-Kan.; Tucson, Ariz., and Portland, Ore.

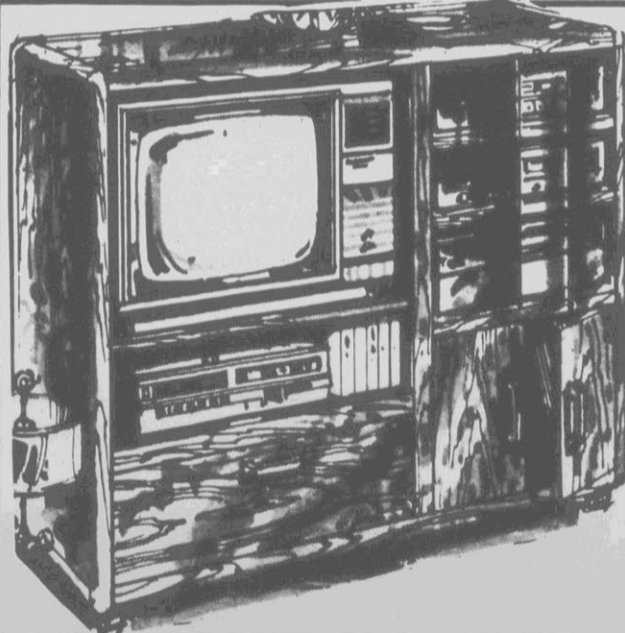

Those added to the list: Cleveland; Duluth, Minn.; Houston; Lincoln, Neb.; Springfield, Mo.; Wichita, Kan.; and Modesto, Calif.

Reagan, Soviets Says Bonn Offer To Destroy Missiles Clears Way

PAUL LAXALT

SAM NUNN

Laxalt, Nunn Pull Out Of '88 Races

L.A. Times-Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Former Nevada Sen. Paul Laxalt, a confidant and longtime political supporter of President Reagan, announced Wednesday that he will not enter the 1988 race for the Republican presidential nomination because of fund-raising difficulties.

The surprising announcement, which was issued by his campaign committee, said that Laxalt had made a "careful and realistic assessment" of his situation and concluded that "while the political response was encouraging, the financial outlook was not as bright."

"We are a family of very modest economic means, and I wasn't about to embark on a campaign that would have led us into a financial black hole," said Laxalt, 65, who had reported raising nearly $1.2 million in contributions.

On April 28, Laxalt announced that he was forming a 147-member exploratory committee, and said that he wanted to have $2 million in campaign funds in the bank by Oct. 1 before making a final decision to run. At the time, he said his campaign was "a go" and that his decision to run was "as close to final as one can get."

In Wednesday's brief statement, however, Laxalt indicated that even if his fund-raising projections had been met, "the money, in my opinion, would have been inadequate to conduct a viable presidential campaign."

Because of his modest standing in the race, Laxalt's withdrawal is likely to change the GOP contest only in narrowing choices for conservatives.

"At 1 or 2 percent in the polls, Laxalt is not going to have a Gary Hart effect," said California political consultant Sal Russo, who is working for rival Republican candidate Jack Kemp, R-N.Y. Laxalt's move will also cut free a number of prominent Republicans who were backing his bid, making them available for other contenders. One such Laxalt consultant was Reagan pollster Richard Wirthlin.

The decision leaves the race without a serious candidate from the West, where Republicans have done well in recent presidential elections.

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — President Reagan says West Germany's offer to dismantle its Pershing missiles removes an obstacle to a U.S.-Soviet arms control agreement, and a Soviet official said today the development does indicate "some movement" toward a pact.

Chancellor Helmut Kohl announced Wednesday that West Germany will eventually destroy its Pershing IA missiles if the superpowers agree to scrap medium- and shorter-range nuclear weapons.

Reagan aides said the West German action will be subject to further consultation with the United States and other NATO allies. They said they had not been informed of a timetable for removal of the missiles.

"I think there is some movement," said Vitaliy Churkin, a staff member of the Central Committee of the Soviet Communist Party.

"But of course it remains to be seen what the details of what the West Germans and Americans have in mind are," Churkin said in an interview from Chautauqua, N.Y., on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America" today. "The details can be very important in arms control negotiations."

A senior administration official said the White House was alerted to Kohl's announcement a day in advance — first by a telephone call from Kohl's office to national security adviser Frank C. Carlucci and then by a letter from the chancellor to the president.

A paragraph was hurriedly inserted into Reagan's long-planned foreign policy address here Wednesday to reflect the development. Reagan said Soviet insistence that any arms control treaty would apply to the Pershings was "without foundation," but that Kohl had "removed even this artificial obstacle from consideration."

"We are therefore hopeful that the Soviet Union will demonstrate that there is substance behind the rhetoric they have repeated so often of late — that they genuinely want a stabilizing INF agreement," the president said.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater, in a statement issued shortly before the president spoke, said the disposition of the missiles "is a matter for the Federal Republic of Germany to decide, in consultation with NATO."

"We therefore understand and support the statement ... which was made today by the chancellor," Fitzwater said. He added that NATO "must retain a robust, modern and survivable nuclear deterrent for the foreseeable future."

Reagan, taking a five-day break in Los Angeles from his annual August vacation at his ranch north of Santa Barbara, was meeting today with leaders of the administration-backed Contra rebels fighting against Nicaragua's leftist government.

Kohl's announcement came one day after U.S. negotiators in Geneva proposed less stringent monitoring under the arms control treaty. The revised U.S. position was an outgrowth of the Soviets' recent agreement to dismantle all short- and intermediate-range missiles instead of having each side retain 100 as proposed earlier. Monitoring, or verification, has long been a sticking point in U.S.-Soviet negotiations.

The senior administration official, asked whether any significant obstacles to an agreement now remain, said, "I think the way has been smoothed considerably with the positions that we are taking now on verification. Kohl has made this gesture on a very artificial impediment. This doesn't mean that there isn't some negotiating to go on. But ... this looks very promising at this point."

The official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said Kohl has made "a gesture on his part to facilitate the negotiations. Now that gesture obviously will have to be made in consultation with NATO. But there was absolutely ... no pressure on Kohl from the United States government, from any source in the United States government."

In his speech, he said, "In regional conflicts like Afghanistan and Central America, the Soviet Union and its clients have, thus far, shown all too little real willingness to move toward peace with real self-determination for the people."

In Miami, Alfredo Cesar Aguirre, one of six Contra directors planning to confer with the president, said the future of U.S. aid to the Contras was one of the subjects to be discussed.

The Contra leader said the rebels, like the administration, support a two-track approach, military and political, to achieving peace in Central America.

"What the resistance is doing now is concrete actions to strengthen the diplomatic part of the two-track policy," he said. "We have very clearly stated our commitment to stop receiving lethal or military aid for our troops as soon as the cease-fire comes into effect."

Reagan will meet Friday with law enforcement officials who support his nomination of U.S. Court of Appeals Judge Robert Bork as a Supreme Court justice.

The president and first lady Nancy Reagan flew here Tuesday from their ranch, where they went on Aug. 13 to begin their vacation. They have been having private dinners with friends in the evening in Los Angeles and will return to the ranch Saturday. They fly back to Washington Sept. 5.

Army Grounds Helicopters

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army, concerned that a helicopter crash last week was caused by mechanical failure, has temporarily grounded its entire fleet of new AH-64 Apache helicopter gunships.

The service says the move is "precautionary" but the choppers will remain grounded pending completion of an accident investigation and corrective repairs.

The action, announced Wednesday, is the third such general grounding order affecting the Apache in two years. It was prompted by an Aug. 21 crash at Fort Rucker, Ala., in which one soldier was killed and another seriously injured.

In a statement, the Army said the crash was caused by "what appears to be a mechanical failure in the tail rotor swashplate assembly."

"The Army is still investigating the cause of that tail rotor swashplate assembly failure. When that investigation is complete, a subsequent safety of flight message is expected to be issued with instructions on the actions to be taken to bring the AH-64 aircraft back to a fully operable status," the Army said.

The Aug. 21 incident was the third major accident involving AH-64's during this fiscal year, but the first to produce a fatality. The other two accidents also occurred at Fort Rucker, on July 9 and Aug. 10, and were blamed on an engine fire and pilot error, respectively.

The Army said its "safety of flight" directive applied to all 264 Apaches in inventory, including 36 now being shipped to West Germany for an annual NATO exercise known as Reforger.

The Apache is replacing the Cobra helicopter gunship as the Army's primary attack helicopter. Designed to destroy enemy tanks, the Apache is a twin-engine copter and is loaded with Hellfire and Hydra 7 missiles and a 30mm cannon.

It is built by McDonnell Douglas Helicopters, formerly Hughes Helicopters, and costs roughly $11.5 million. The Army plans to buy a total of 573.

The Apache fleet was grounded twice in 1986, both times for relatively minor problems.

Competency Tests Eliminate Would-Be Teachers

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
AP Education Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A government study says competency tests are knocking out 28 percent of the applicants to teacher education programs and 17 percent of the graduates applying for licenses to teach.

But Chester Finn Jr., research chief of the U.S. Department of Education, says passing scores are still set so low that they may be letting incompetents into classroom jobs.

The study, "What's Happening in Teacher Testing," was released Wednesday by Finn's Office of Educational Research and Improvement. It found that in some states, teachers can still be certified even if they miss more than half the questions on the National Teacher Examinations.

"Teacher testing cannot yet be relied upon as a form of quality control, except of the crudest sort," Finn said in an interview.

All but two states, Alaska and Iowa, require applicants to achieve minimum test scores, either when they apply to major in education or, in most instances, before they are awarded a license to teach.

Less than a quarter-century ago, no state tested teachers. North Carolina imposed the first test in 1964, followed by Louisiana in 1977 and Florida in 1978.

Most of the tests are aimed at ensuring that teachers are literate and possess at least rudimentary writing and math skills.

Lawrence M. Rudner, the analyst who directed the study, said many certification testing programs "do not provide adequate standards and, hence, cannot live up to expectations."

In the 27 states with admissions testing programs for prospective education majors, an average of 72 percent passed the tests.

Twenty-six states now test prospective teachers as a certification requirement, and 18 others are planning to do so soon. In the 22 states that made their pass-fail rates public, 83 percent of the applicants passed.

The study said that in 10 states using the National Teacher Examinations, applicants only had to answer an average of 47 questions correctly out of 104 to pass.

"Given that the tests are not difficult and that the passing scores appear to be relatively low, one would expect virtually everyone to pass teacher certification examinations. Yet this is not the case," the report said.

Minority applicants generally fared much worse than whites on these tests. But the report noted that in states such as California and Florida, the percentage of minorities passing the tests has been increasing.

In California, for instance, only 26 percent of the blacks who took the exam in 1983 passed; in 1985, 33 percent passed. Mexican-Americans improved their pass rate from 39 to 46 percent, while the pass rate for whites rose from 76 to 81 percent.

The report said that during the next two years, 20 states will be reporting teacher test results for the first time. Only three states, Arkansas, Georgia and Texas, have forced veteran teachers to take competency tests.

The study noted that the tests "do not test actual teaching ability. Rather, they test knowledge and skills believed to be prerequisites to teaching and (they) may test knowledge about teaching."

"The tests do not evaluate many important human qualities such as dedication, caring, perseverance, sensitivity and integrity and they cannot guarantee that an individual who passes will become a good teacher," the study said.

"In principle, however, they can guarantee that an individual who passes is literate and-or knows the subject matter."

Here are the pass rates on teacher certification exams for 22 states listed in the study:

Alabama, a customized exam, 85 percent; Arizona, customized, 78 percent; California, the California Basic Education Skills Test (CBEST), 74 percent; Delaware, the Pre-Professional Skills Test (PPST), 69 percent; Florida, customized, 85 percent; Georgia, customized, 78 percent;

Hawaii, National Teacher Examinations (NTE), 73 percent; Indiana, NTE, 88 percent; Kansas, both PPST and NTE, 94 percent; Kentucky, NTE, 93 percent; Louisiana, NTE, 87 percent; Mississippi, NTE, 88 percent; Montana, NTE, 92 percent; New Hampshire, PPST, 74 percent; New Jersey, NTE, 83 percent;

New Mexico, NTE, 88 percent; New York, NTE, 79 percent; North Carolina, NTE, 80 percent; Oklahoma, customized, 81 percent; Oregon, CBEST, 80 percent; Texas, customized, 85 percent; and West Virginia, customized, 83 percent.

No pass rates were available for other states. The report cautioned that states define pass rates differently, with some referring to the percent who pass each time the test is given, and others reporting the total number who pass after repeated attempts.

Public Backs New School Standards

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans overwhelmingly support tougher standards in the nation's public schools, including more emphasis on basic courses and less on electives, according to a Gallup Poll released today.

The poll found public sentiment in favor of many of the education policies that President Reagan and Secretary of Education William J. Bennett have championed, including an emphasis on basics and more parental choice of schools.

The annual poll, sponsored by Phi Delta Kappan magazine, found opinion divided on whether the public schools have improved over the past five years. Twenty-five percent said their local public schools have improved, 22 percent said they got worse, 36 percent said they stayed the same and 17 percent had no opinion.

Asked to grade the schools in their community, 12 percent handed out A grades, 31 percent B's, 30 percent C's, 9 percent D's and 4 percent F's for failure. Fourteen percent had no opinion.

That was the highest number of A's since 1975, when 13 percent gave the schools top marks, and it was the smallest combined number of D's and F's since 1974, when only 11 percent gave out the lowest possible grades.

In 1986, the grades were: 11 percent A; 30 percent B; 28 percent C; 11 percent D, and 5 percent F or fail.

The Gallup Organization has conducted this annual survey on attitudes toward the public schools since 1969. In 1974, the first year it asked people to assign letter grades, 18 percent said their local schools merited an A.

The poll has a 3-point margin of error in either direction. Gallup interviewers questioned 1,571 adults in their homes last April 10-13.

Bennett hailed the survey results. "I'm very pleased to see what the American people are saying, what they believe is necessary for education reform. Now's the time for the education establishment to catch up with the people," he said in an interview.

Juror Dismissed After 3 Years As Deliberations Near

By PAUL DE LA GARZA
Associated Press Writer

CASEYVILLE, Ill. (AP) — A woman who for 3½ years sat on the jury in one of the nation's longest trials said she "cried all the way home" after being dismissed for a conflict of interest 45 minutes before deliberations began.

"I cry when I'm mad. I think I'm mad because they let me go," a tearful Barbara McCann said Wednesday. "I think I would have liked to voice my opinion."

Mrs. McCann, 49 of Caseyville, began serving on the jury Feb. 22, 1984, in a $135 million lawsuit filed against the Monsanto Co. over a 19,000-gallon chemical spill containing less than a teaspoonful of dioxin, a toxic chemical.

Mrs. McCann said she sat in the jury box for 621 days before the judge removed her Wednesday because Rex Carr, the attorney for the 65 plaintiffs, also represents plaintiffs in a lawsuit against a relative of hers.

Deliberations at the Belleville courthouse were scheduled to resume today.

An alternate replaced Mrs. McCann on the 12-member jury before it received the case, which involved 182 witnesses and 6,000 exhibits and generated more than 100,000 pages of transcripts.

"We appreciate what you've given up in your personal lives," St. Clair County Circuit Judge Richard Goldenhersh said as he began instructions to the jury, minus Mrs. McCann.

"I cried all the way home," said Mrs. McCann, a department-store sales clerk and mother of five.

Mrs. McCann said she informed the judge of the possible conflict when it developed midway through the trial. She would not give details of the other case or say why the judge did not remove her at the time.

Goldenhersh would not comment. Calls to Carr's home Wednesday night went unanswered. However, David Snively, a Monsanto attorney, confirmed Mrs. McCann informed the judge about 17 months ago. He would not comment further.

The jury was not sequestered during the trial, which results from a derailment near Sturgeon, Mo., in 1979 in which a Monsanto wood preservative was spilled.

The plaintiffs are seeking $100 million in punitive damages and $35.4 million in compensatory damages for health problems they say resulted from dioxin exposure, such as birth defects, cancer, fatigue, headaches, joint pain, high blood pressure and nausea.

Monsanto contends the amount of dioxin was too small to have such effects.

Dioxin, a byproduct of the manufacture of some herbicides and pesticides, is known to cause brain, heart and genetic damage in laboratory animals, but the risk to humans remains subject to debate.

Earlier Wednesday, Carr ended 12 hours of closing arguments by urging jurors to award a "sizeable sum" to his clients.

"You have to say with this verdict, 'Monsanto, we're not going to stand for this any more. You can't get away with this fraud,'" he said. "When a company is $3½ billion in size, you can see you're not going to get their attention with $20 million, $30 million."

Monsanto attorney Kenneth R. Heineman told the jury Tuesday, "This case is important to us because it's a sham."

Mrs. McCann, noting the technical nature of the lawsuit, said, "I think there's confusion."

Mrs. McCann said she looks forward to fixing lunch for her husband and spending more time with her children. "What do I look forward to?" she asked. "To what I normally do. It seems like I always washed clothes."

Teen-Agers Set Fire To Man Sleeping In Brooklyn Park

By VIRGINIA BYRNE
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A "down-and-out" man who was doused with flammable liquid and set afire by teen-agers along with a woman friend as the two slept in a Brooklyn park says his attackers "had to be out of their heads."

"They must be like sadists," said 25-year-old Gerard Grayson, who was burned in Prospect Park early Wednesday along with Bernadette Crowley, 26.

No arrests have been made. Police gave no motive for the attack.

Grayson was treated at New York Hospital-Cornell Medical Center and returned to the neighborhood with bandaged ankles and a burned wrist. He sipped from a pint bottle in a brown bag, saying it was "for my nerves."

Ms. Crowley was admitted with burns on 7 percent of her body, mostly on the legs, said administrator Barry Kriseberg.

The attack was described to police by another intended victim,

Joseph Thomas, 38, who said he was awakened by someone pouring alcohol on him. He said he chased the youth, who fled with four companions, all 15 to 18 years old.

When he returned to where he had been sleeping, Thomas said, he saw the other two on fire. Officers in a patrol car thought they saw a trash fire and went to investigate.

Ms. Crowley, a second-year student at New York Technical College, said she had gone to the park because Grayson, an old boyfriend, "needed to talk to someone."

She said she decided to sleep there for her first time even though she lives in an apartment nearby, and awoke to Grayson's shrieks.

"I didn't realize I was on fire," she said. "But my friend was rolling around and so I jumped up and I ran back and forth. I panicked."

Grayson, who said he's in a "down-and-out situation" and stays in the park occasionally, said waking up on fire was a "total nightmare."

"Somebody had to be out of their heads," he said.

Police Capt. John Ricci said officers were canvassing the neighborhood Wednesday, asking residents and people who frequent the park if they knew of troublemakers.

Ricci said he knew of no pattern of violence against park people, but homeless people who congregate on the park's benches recalled being harassed and yelled at and having a large firecracker thrown at them recently.

One, who identified himself only as Eddie, said the attackers were "just some kids running around."

"There's no place for homeless men to sleep in this area," said a 25-year-old man who gave his name as Ralph. "This makes me wonder where I'm going next."

"This ain't the Grand Hyatt, but in the summertime it beats the train stations," said Grayson.

Oil Prices Push Past $19 Level

NEW YORK (AP) — The prospect that the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries may come to grips with its supply glut has sent oil futures prices back above $19 per barrel.

The futures market rallied Wednesday in response to reports that the cartel's pricing and quotas committees would meet soon. The rally also was driven by technical factors, analysts said.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, October contracts for West Texas Intermediate, the benchmark U.S. crude, settled at $19.46 per 42-gallon barrel, up 82 cents from Tuesday.

The contract had not closed above $19 since Thursday, when it finished at $19.42. Wednesday's jump in the price was also the biggest one-day gain since a 83-cent leap July 28, when the contract settled at $21.32.

Prices for refined products also joined in Wednesday's rally. September contracts for wholesale unleaded gasoline closed at 50.90 cents per gallon, up 1.60 cents, while wholesale heating oil contracts for September settled at 51.18 cents per gallon, up 2.13 cents per gallon.

Though prices have fallen from what they were several weeks ago, consumers are unlikely to see much difference soon. The main reason is that it takes weeks for the raw crude to be shipped, refined and distributed to the final point of sale.

The 13-nation cartel's self-imposed production quota is 16.6 million barrels a day.

Falwell Defends Loans Between His Agencies

LYNCHBURG, Va. (AP) — The Rev. Jerry Falwell says loans exchanged between his religious ministry and his political organizations were lawful and ethical.

The News & Daily Advance reported today that over the past four years Falwell's political groups and his Old-Time Gospel Hour religious ministry have made loans to each other totaling more than $2 million.

In the seven months ending Jan. 31, 1987, Falwell's Liberty Federation loaned the Old-Time Gospel Hour $1.2 million, and the religious ministry made a loan of $318,441 to the political organization, the newspaper said.

The newspaper reported earlier that the political organizations also made grants totaling $6.7 million to the religious ministry.

Until last week, Falwell had insisted that the religious ministry was separate from his political organizations.

The board of directors of the Old-Time Gospel Hour and the Liberty Federation "have through the years agreed when funds were available to make loans available in an arm's length, business-like manner," Falwell said. "These loans are always paid in full as approved by the directors and management."

"This is both legal and ethical," Falwell said. "Any criticism of such aboveboard practices is pure and simple nitpicking."

New Lemon Scent Has The Smell Of Success

By JUBE SHIVER JR.
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

LOS ANGELES — Although her mother used a pine-scented wax to polish the furniture in their home a generation ago, today daughter Jan Zussman prefers lemon-scented cleaners to keep her furniture dust-free and dishes spotless.

"I guess it's the idea that lemons cut grease and smell good," mused Zussman, a 28-year-old administrative assistant at a Los Angeles accounting firm. "It's not that I dislike pine, but when I smell a lemon I think of the natural and fresh outdoors."

It used to be that when consumers smelled a lemon, it was in connection with a $9,000 clunker parked in the garage. But these days, the fragrance of Citrus Limonia is wafting from so many detergents, polishers, and dish-washing liquids that supermarkets' household products aisles are beginning to smell like the produce section.

Mr. Clean has lost that piney smell. It's gone lemon. And there's lemon-scented Comet cleanser, Windex window cleaner and, this month, Cascade detergent. In the last 21 months, at least 78 household cleaners and laundry products have been introduced with lemon. There is even a new lemon-fresh Brillo soap pad.

But even as lemon seems to have surpassed pine in popularity, there is another aroma of sorts moving on to supermarket shelves: no smell at all. Lever Bros. has introduced an unscented detergent called Surf, and Procter & Gamble now offers unscented Tide, advertised as "100 percent perfume-free."

But to America's merchants of clean, the smell of success today is lemon.

"Lemon is by far the most popular scent in household cleaning products," said Phylomena M. Augurusa, manager of soap and household products at New York-based International Flavors and Fragrances, the nation's largest producers of smells and flavors.

Last year sales of lemon scented household cleaning products increased 5.9 percent to $429.9 million, while sales of pine scented products declined slightly to $161.6 million from $162.9 million in 1985, according to the New York market research firm Selling Areas Marketing Inc.

The growing use of lemon scent and the waning popularity of pine illustrate how a product's fragrance can be as important to consumers as packaging, advertising or even how well the product works, experts say. Lemon's popularity may also reflect American's changing views about housecleaning, as more women enter the workforce and devote less time to fighting household grime.

"The traditional view has been that if the product didn't stink it didn't do the job," said Donald E. Payne, executive director of Oxtoby-Smith Inc., a market research company in New York. But with Americans devoting less time to housecleaning, he said, strongly scented specialized cleaners such as floor waxes and laundry pre-soaks are being abandoned in favor of easier to use and more pleasant smelling all-purpose cleaners.

A University of Michigan Study published in 1985 found that of the list of activities that people do every day, housecleaning ranked lowest in enjoyment — behind grocery shopping, cooking, reading or doing home repairs and far behind going to work or taking care of children.

"Consumers want something that is pleasant to use," said Brian Curtiss, senior product manager for Lysol at Lehn & Fink Inc., which makes pine, herbal and lemon scented disinfectants and cleaners. "Cleaning the house is already an unpleasant enough job."

Not all household product companies have jumped on the lemon bandwagon. Oakland, Calif.-based Clorox Co., whose unscented Formula 409 is the third most popular household cleaner behind Pine Sol and Mr. Clean, does not market a lemon scented cleaner, a spokeswoman said.

Yet Clorox seems to be among the few holdouts.

Besides household cleaners, there are lemony nail polish removers, shampoos, soaps, bubble baths, deodorants and perfumes. In most cases, however, the aroma isn't from an actual lemon at all but rather derived from dipentene, a chemical that smells like lemon and can be man-made or extracted from oranges, according to Craig Warren, vice president of research at the fragrance maker IFF.

It seems odd that a tart-tasting fruit, whose name is widely used as an epithet for defective products, would grow so popular in housecleaners. After all, no one scent so dominates any other household or personal product category such as air fresheners, perfumes, bar soaps or deodorants, experts say.

"I guess the bright yellow color has something to do with it," offered Zussman, the Los Angeles administrative assistant who prefers lemon to pine. "It reminds you of sunshine." By contrast, she said, pine products don't evoke natural sylvan images because "I live in the city and there are no pine around." Manufacturers insist that lemon is a logical choice for cleaning products.

"The lime fragrance is too sharp and too tart and doesn't enjoy the same consumer acceptance," observed Sandy Sullivan, a spokeswoman for Clorox.

"It's nice to have that lemon fragrance on your countertop in the kitchen," said David Perkins a spokesman for the Drackett Co., maker of Windex and Drano. "Pine isn't the kind of fragrance you connect with food. You wouldn't want to eat something that smelled like pine."

Lemon's enduring popularity seems to fly in the face of recent buying trends, which have seen Americans splintering into new classes of shoppers with vastly diverging tastes. Yet a host of scents ranging from green vegetable floral (Windex) to cherry almond (Scrub-Free heavy duty bathroom cleaner) have failed to successfully challenge lemon's dominance.

Some experts attribute lemon's staying power to a lack of imagination on the part of product managers who, when they want to introduce a "new and improved" product, simply add lemon scent.

"What happens is a product manager will look at a couple of success stories and believe that he can boost a product's sales by adding lemon scent," said John Quelch, a Harvard Business School professor who specializes in consumer marketing.

By STEVE GLATFELTER

YORK, Pa. (AP) — When Larry Williams graduated from York Suburban High School in 1967, the term "music video" had not yet been invented. The closest medium to MTV was the weekly antics of the Monkees foursome.

Now, 20 years later, Williams and his wife Leslie Libman live in Los Angeles and direct music videos that appear on MTV. They have worked with such artists as Prince, Little Richard, Rod Stewart, Paul Simon and Boy George.

The route Williams traveled from York to Los Angeles and his present career was far from a direct one.

In the fall of 1967 he left York to study anthropology at George Washington University. While there, he "took some art courses and enjoyed them," so he moved to California, where he studied art at the University of Southern California.

By way of explaining such a drastic switch in studies and locales, Williams said, "It was the late '60s ...

it was the trend at the time. Everyone was moving to California at the time."

After earning his bachelor of fine arts degree at USC, Williams continued his art studies at the San Francisco Art Institute, before returning to USC to earn a master of fine arts in 1974. Although his degree was in painting, he was attracted to photography, which led to his association with the Light Gallery in New York in 1975.

A series of international exhibitions of his photography followed, as Williams began to work commercially for such magazines as Rolling Stone and Newsweek, as well as with a variety of ad campaigns and record companies.

It was an assignment to do a series of photo sessions with Prince for the album "Purple Rain" in 1984 that first led Williams to the world of music videos.

When the photo sessions were finished, Prince asked Williams to direct the video for "When Doves Cry." Williams found working in music video "new and exciting" and "a lot of fun ... so much fun that it affected a career change for me" — from photography to video directing.

More than just a career change awaited Williams, however. In 1985, he married Libman, whom he had known since 1970, when he was at USC and she was in high school. Libman had taken an equally indirect route careerwise, but she also is a director of music videos.

Her education at the Los Angeles City College Film Studies Program was followed by her serving as assistant to the director on the 1975 cult film "Massacre at Central High."

After writing free-lance for the record and film industries, she became involved with music videos when she and producer Francie Moore formed Libman-Moore Productions in 1983.

When they married, Williams and Libman established their own production company, Double L Ranch. Together they have collaborated on videos for such artists as David Sanborn, Heaven 17, Michael Franks, and Stewart and Simon. Both Williams and Libman continue to do individual projects, as well.

One of their most important collaborative efforts was the birth earlier this year of their son, Bennett, named after Williams' late father, long-time York realtor Bennett Williams.

Parents Play Childrens' Game

At Wits End
Erma Bombeck

The ultimate game show is being played this week by thousands of college-bound students from all over the country. It's called "Plunder and Pillage" and is fun for the whole family.

The object of the student-players is simple. Don't leave home without it. (The home, that is.) Students park the family car in front of the house and load as many of the furnishings from the house into it as possible.

Meanwhile, the parents (who think they're playing "Wheel of Misfortune") try to hold on to their household goods ... or at least enough to qualify as primitive campers.

It's a game of youth vs. maturity ... materialism vs. poverty ... guilt vs. reason. I watched my friend and her son play the game last week. The son said, "I'm going to try for the toaster oven." The mother said, "OK, here's your question. What is a toaster oven?" The son replied, "It's an oven where toast is grown."

"You lose," said the mother, grabbing it out of his hand. "You don't even know what it is."

"I thought you wanted me to eat well while I'm at school and have well-balanced meals. Doesn't toast have grains in it?"

The mother folded under pressure and he added the toaster oven to his car full of prizes: linens and bedding, clock radio, steam iron, bathroom scales, coffee maker, electric fan, floor lamp, full set of luggage and portable TV set.

The next item he grabbed to take to college with him was her camera. She protested. He said, "OK, answer this in 10 seconds or less. When was the last time you used your camera?" The seconds seemed like hours as they ticked by. Finally, a buzzer went off and he said, "Sorry, Mom, the answer is Christmas two years ago. The camera goes." And with that he added it to his loot.

Some parents who aren't particularly good at games have been known to be left in barren rooms with barely enough kitchen utensils to get a meal together. Even though I played the game with all three children, I never seemed to get any better at it. At one point one of my sons had 20 years of our possessions in his car headed for a dormitory in California. As he jammed the skis in the station wagon (when was the last time it snowed in Southern California?), he said, "Cheer up, Mom. You and Dad have been great sports and I have a few consolation prizes for you. You can have these eight albums of baseball cards to store, 50 feet of garden hose, electric crepe maker, turkey roaster and a set of iced tea spoons. And to show you what a great guy I am, I'll return your VCR when you get another TV set. I hope you've had a good time."

He told us we could visit our belongings anytime. Just call first.

Lace Sells Well Even Though It's Made In Taiwan

By MILAN RUZICKA
Associated Press Writer
BRUGES, Belgium (AP) — It doesn't matter much to Christian Meulle that the days of glory for Belgian lace are long gone. His Little Lace Shop uptown and Little Lace Shop downtown are doing a booming business.

Some two dozen shops in this quaint medieval town in northern Belgium offer their customers — mostly tourists and mostly Americans — nothing but genuine Belgian handmade lace. Some merchants readily admit their "Belgian lace" was handmade in Taiwan.

To most of them, there is nothing misleading about this apparent inconsistency. What counts, they explain, is the technique and patterns that originated in Belgium, not the long and tedious process of braiding the thread into the diaphanous tissue. With training, anyone can do that, they explain.

For more than three centuries until the late 1800s, the finest lace was made for kings — and to a lesser extent for queens — and paid for in gold, according to Marguerite Coppens, a curator at the Musees Royaux d'Art et Histoire in Brussels.

Speaking in her office, she said ordinary people kept lace in safes, together with family silver and jewelry. Only such solemn occasions as getting married or sitting for a portrait would justify wearing a lace garment.

To the royalty, Coppens said, ostentatious display of lace was a mark of rank jealously guarded by laws and edicts. For example, she said, Jean Baptiste Colbert, the finance minister of King Louis XIV of France, decreed that betraying lace secrets to a foreign power was a capital crime.

To keep lace priced out of the reach of commoners, the French banned the importation of lace and placed a heavy tax on its sale.

As a result, said Veronique de Schepper, director of the Lace Center in Bruges, a vast smuggling network was set up to provide a steady and profitable supply of lace, mainly from Flanders and Wallonia, Europe's lace strongholds.

What made lace so dear, Coppens explained, was the enormous amount of time it took to make fine lace, and the cost of the linen thread. She said a headdress of Valenciennes-style lace took a year to make.

Emancipation, changes in fashion and machinery combined to end the glorious days of lace, bringing it down from a status symbol to a tourist attraction, Coppens said.

She said that before World War I virtually all women in Belgium had known how to make lace and thousands of them made it for a living. Today, she said, "lacemaking has almost disappeared as a profession." The skill, once dictated by economic necessity, is no longer transferred from one generation to another. Rather, lacemaking has become a hobby taught evenings and weekends in churches and government-sponsored schools, de Schepper said.

The French Revolution in 1789 dealt a considerable blow to the industry by outlawing lace as a symbol of aristocratic corruption. The emerging bourgeois fashion for men — who once spent more on lace than women and wore lace frills even over armor — had no place for the impractical lace anyway.

But, according to de Schepper, it was the development of lacemaking machines in the late 1800s that brought the era of glory for lace to an end.

Meulle is not complaining, however. He says he sells about $526,000 worth of lace each year in his two stores, and believes the others are doing equally well.

He said imports from Taiwan and other Asian countries had made considerable inroads on the Belgian lace market. "In some stores, 100 percent of the lace is imported," he said.

Another merchant, who asked not to be named, admitted her lace came from Taiwan, but insisted it is "Belgian lace" nonetheless, or at least what she called the "creative part" of it.

Meulle, who said all his lace was locally made, did not argue and agreed that the only difference between Belgian and imported handmade lace was in the price: Belgian lace costs nearly twice as much.

But, he said, to be called Belgian the lace must be made here. As proof of authenticity, his shops, and nine others in Bruges, display a yellow sticker with the letter "B" printed in the middle and the words "Quality Control" on the bottom. He said only stores selling Belgian-made lace were allowed to display this insignia.

All Meulle's lace is produced by women in the Bruges region who use the income to augment their families' wages.

The prices in most stores range from $10.50 for lace-fringed napkins to $260 for all-lace women's blouses. Small decorative objects, selling for about $2.60, are almost all machine made and imported from Asia.

De Schepper said most contemporary lace was made of cotton, rather than flax, thread and was machine-washable.

Thank-You Note Is Shocking To Abby

DEAR ABBY: A friend of mine recently received the following thank-you note for her wedding gift:

"Dear Mrs. (),
"Thank you for the $10. I know it will come in handy. Love, (signed by the bride)"

Included was the following:
"From the Good News New Testament (today's English version), fourth edition: James 4:8: Come near to God and he will come near to you. Wash your hands, you sinners! Purify your hearts, you hypocrites!"

Abby, needless to say, my friend was shocked. Don't you think it would have been better had the bride sent no thank-you note at all than to send this cruel, insulting message? — PATTI IN CHINA GROVE, N.C.

DEAR PATTI: Yes, I, too, am shocked. Perhaps the bride was more disturbed than vicious. Pray for her.

DEAR ABBY: My son, "Charles," who is almost 14, has always had a wonderful relationship with my father — his grandfather — until a few months ago. For about a year and a half, Charles would stop at his grandpa's on the way to school, and they would have breakfast together. Charles even had a key to Dad's house, and would start preparing breakfast while Dad was shaving.

This, of course, was on school days. However, one Saturday morning, Charles had to be at school to practice for a play. He went to his grandpa's as he usually did on school days, let himself in with his own key and found Grandpa having breakfast with an attractive lady — both in their pajamas!

Dear Abby

Charles never did go to school for play practice. Instead, he stormed home and locked himself in his room. Now he will talk to no one, and rushes out of the room when his once-beloved grandpa visits us. We are all terribly upset by his attitude. Dad is heartbroken because he can't seem to get through to his only grandson. Dad has been a widower for over eight years. The lady is well-known to my wife and me. She is a lovely person and a widow.

How can we get through to Charles and persuade him that Dad has not committed a terrible crime? Don't suggest our minister, Abby. He is rather conservative and does not approve of "living in sin." — CANADIAN DAD

DEAR DAD: You are assuming that Charles is angry with Grandpa for "living in sin." I think he's angry for another reason — he's jealous of the intimate relationship Grandpa has with the attractive lady. Charles needs to talk about his feelings honestly — if not with you and Grandpa, then with a counselor. When he admits to himself why he overreacted, he will be able to handle it in a more mature manner.

DEAR ABBY: My husband of six years thinks it is perfectly OK to visit my 17-year-old daughter's bedroom at bedtime to "talk" to her. She sleeps in the nude and makes very little effort to cover up.

I am vehemently opposed to this and have told my husband so, but he thinks I am paranoid, crazy and evil-minded. Am I? — WONDERING IN SAN ANTONIO

DEAR WONDERING: Not in my book. And if you haven't already spoken to your daughter about the impropriety of these nocturnal visits, it's time you did.

New Lemon Scent...

tory sense can be tricky.

"Our sense of smell is controlled by the limbic system, which is the same part of the brain that governs sex, emotion and memory," said Milton Wolpin, an associate professor of psychology at the University of Southern California. "There's a very strong correlation between smell and memory. It's hard to sell a product that brings back bad memories."

What's more, fragrance preferences apparently aren't universal. "In the Spanish market, people prefer strong scents," said Harry Lawless, a senior research scientist at S.C. Johnson & Son, a Wisconsin-based consumer products maker.

"The Germans want the smell to go away real fast. Here (in the United States) the public is a little more flexible. I see that with the growing popularity of air fresheners. And there has been a lot of interest of late in creating an odorless product."

Other experts agree lemon's days may be numbered.

"There's a whole bunch of people out there that don't want a scent," said Elizabeth Donovan, a senior consultant for Kline and Co. Inc., a market research concern in Fairfield, N.J. "Tastes change."

BROILERS: The North Carolina fob dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 45.25 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2½ to 3 pounds birds. Too few of the loads offered have been confirmed for a final weighted average. The market is steady and the live supply is adequate for a moderate demand. Average weights desirable to light. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Thursday was 2,020,000, compared to 1,780,000 last Thursday.

GRAIN: No. 2 yellow shelled corn 2 cents to 4 cents higher at mostly 1.66-1.80 in East and mostly 1.86-1.93 in the Piedmont; No. 1 yellow soybeans mostly 2 cents to 3 cents higher at mostly 5.23-5.38 in East and mostly 5.15 in the Piedmont; wheat 2.37-2.53; new crop corn 1.46-1.81; new crop soybeans 4.73-5.10. Exchange rates for P.I.K. certificates were steady to 1 percent higher and ranged from 104½ to 109 percent of face value.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market declined broadly today in profit-taking aggravated by a further rise in interest rates. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial fell 17.38 to 2,684.47 in the first half hour of trading. Losers outnumbered gainers by close to 3 to 1 in the overall count of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 294 up, 832 down and 427 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 28.63 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street. With interest rates on the rise in the credit markets, prices of long-term government bonds showed losses of $5 to $10 for each $1,000 in face value this morning.

Tobacco stocks also slumped in selling ascribed to profit-taking after a strong recent advance prompted by court decisions favorable to the industry in product-liability cases. Philip Morris fell 4¼ to 118½ and RJR Nabisco was down 1¼ at 69.

 ECU Chancellor Richard Eakin said the students may face other disciplinary action.
 "I am dismayed by the news that three ECU students and one former student have been charged in connection with thefts from student rooms in a university residence hall," Eakin said.
 "Since the alleged crimes occurred on university property, the student judicial system will be charged with the responsibility of determining whether the students involved have violated provisions of the Student Code of Conduct."
 Brown was suspended from the team late last season for disciplinary reasons and was charged with larceny and possession of stolen property by ECU police in connection with a theft reported on May 7. William Grady, a former basketball player, was also arrested in connection with the same incident.
 Brown and Grady were arraigned on the charges Aug. 24 and both entered innocent pleas.

Pay Rule Challenged

 ing the War Powers Act to be put into use.
 "I'm not sure if it will pass," Pell said. "You never know until you try, but I'll support it."
 The Pentagon announced Wednesday that about 10,000 military personnel serving in the volatile gulf region will receive the $110 monthly bonus, a decision expected to cost $1.1 million a month. The pay will be retroactive to the beginning of August.
 The Defense Department has been under pressure from the Democratic-controlled Congress to grant the danger pay. Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., author of a law requiring the money, applauded the decision.
 "I am glad the politics of reflagging and whether to invoke the War Powers Act have been separated from danger pay," she said.
 The debate over the "imminent danger" pay mirrors the dispute over the War Powers Act, which was passed in the waning days of the Vietnam War by a Congress that wanted to limit the authority of the executive branch to send troops into combat.
 It limits a president's ability to send military personnel — without congressional authorization — "into situations where imminent involvement in hostilities is clearly indicated by the circumstances." The personnel must be withdrawn within 60 days unless Congress specifically approves their deployment.
 The administration has refused to invoke the War Powers Act, saying U.S. forces are in the gulf only to ensure the safe passage of oil tankers through international waters as part of President Reagan's policy of protecting 11 Kuwaiti ships.
 Congressional critics counter that by protecting ships of Kuwait, an ally of Iraq, the United States risks being drawn into the 7-year-old Iran-Iraq war. They note the May 17 attack on the Navy frigate Stark, which killed 37 U.S. seamen.

Iran Rejects Cease-Fire Call

 Iranians. Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, who withdrew his troops to the border in June 1982 largely under Iranian military pressure, has been seeking a negotiated settlement for several years.
 Iran is ethnically Persian, not Arab. It shares the Moslem religion with the Arabs, but Iranians belong to the minority Shiite sect that has been at odds with the predominant Sunni branch of Islam for 1,300 years.
 Musavi was quoted by Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency as saying the United States, by intervening in the gulf, seeks to impose "an ignominious peace" on Iran "in collaboration with Arab reactionaries."
 "We will never agree to such a peace," he said. "Even a psychological war cannot make us accept a compromise to the benefit of the United States."

Although neither the House nor Senate formally has sought to invoke the War Powers Act, 114 members of both chambers have filed suit in U.S. District Court asking that the law's provisions be set into motion.
 Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., echoed Pell's statements. "The administration can't have it both ways," Levin said.
 But national security adviser Frank C. Carlucci disagreed, saying "there's a different legal standard" between the War Powers Act and the imminent danger pay.
 Talking to reporters in Los Angeles where he accompanied Reagan, Carlucci said: "The broader language in the history of this authority (for danger pay) makes it clear that it's available in situations where the War Powers resolution is not applicable."
 "The special pay is where we advise where there is a threat of physical harm or imminent danger, whereas the War Powers resolution involves only an imminent involvement in hostilities."
 Pell disagreed. "In my opinion, if they're going to give combat pay, and they should, they can't argue that no combat or hostilities are likely," he said.
 The extra pay will go to the Navy crews on ships in the Persian Gulf, the Strait of Hormuz and a small portion of the Gulf of Oman, as well as personnel stationed in Kuwait and Bahrain.
 Dr. David J. Armor, acting assistant defense secretary for manpower, said the decision on the danger pay was unrelated to the War Powers debate.
 He noted that Congress approved a law in 1983 authorizing the danger pay even if there is no immediate threat of the United States being drawn into hostilities.
 Currently, imminent danger pay is authorized for any military personnel posted to Colombia, El Salvador, Lebanon, Peru and the Sudan.

Tehran radio, monitored by the British Broadcasting Corp., said in a commentary Wednesday night that "reactionary Arab states" have failed to isolate Iran.
 The official Iraqi News Agency said in a dispatch today that Iranian border artillery gunners shelled residential areas in Basra, Iraq's second-largest city. Basra is about 12 miles west of the international border in southernmost Iraq.
 Earlier this month, Iraqi warplanes began bombing Iranian oil installations in retaliation for the death of 12 civilians in recent Iranian shelling of Basra.
 The Reagan administration agreed to reregister 11 Kuwaiti tankers to protect them from attack from Iran, which accuses the emirate of aiding its enemy.
 There were conflicting reports Wednesday about the whereabouts of the latest convoy, or even if it was underway. Some shipping sources said three tankers and their escorts were approaching Kuwait; others denied it.
 The Washington Post reported in today's editions the Maritime Administration is expected soon to allow Kuwait to charter at least two American-owned supertankers, the Maryland and the New York.
 Both are 265,000-ton crude oil tankers. The Post said a third tanker, the Massachusetts, also may be included in the agreement. The ad-

Waite Doing 'Well'

LONDON (AP) — A British Broadcasting Corp. reporter in Tehran said today he has received authoritative assurances that Church of England envoy Terry Waite, who disappeared in Lebanon in January, is alive and well.
 Waite, who had gone to Lebanon to negotiate for the release of Westerners held hostage there, is still in Lebanon and "both his captors and the Iranians are anxious to ensure that nothing happens to him," said John Simpson in a television broadcast from Iran where he is on assignment.
 Simpson did not say whether he received any news of other Western captives in Lebanon.

 Church of England spokesman John Miles said the report that Waite was alive reinforced the church's own information. "We have sources in the Middle East and they have been telling us all along that Terry Waite is still alive," he said.
 Simpson said his information came from "high up in the Iranian structure, from a person who has access to the full facts about Terry Waite's kidnapping and imprisonment."
 Waite, 48, arrived in Lebanon on Jan. 12 and was last seen in Beirut on Jan. 20 as he left that city's Riviera Hotel for a negotiating session.

Streak Ends At 39 Games

Molitor Philosophic At End

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Think Paul Molitor had an emotional evening? How about Rick Manning.

Here was Manning, a reserve outfielder in his 14th major-league season, celebrating a rare game-winning hit, and yet the fans were booing.

They had wanted Manning to fail, because in doing so Molitor, the next batter, would have one more chance to succeed.

But Manning didn't fail, singling to center to drive in the only run as the Milwaukee Brewers beat the Cleveland Indians 1-0 Wednesday night. More importantly, at least to the fans, was that Molitor's 39-game hitting streak had ended.

And so they booted. "The irony is the distortion of priorities. You have the home team win in extra innings and the crowd goes silent," said Molitor, who was hitless in four at-bats against Cleveland rookie John Farrell.

"It was meant to be 39 and not 40," Molitor said.

"I went up to Rick and he said, 'Sorry,'" Molitor recalled. "And I said 'Sorry? You won the game.'"

Molitor struck out in the first inning, grounded into a double play in the third and grounded out in the sixth.

In the eighth, in what turned out to be his final plate appearance, Molitor came up with a runner at second and two out. The situation called for Molitor, a .365 hitter, to be walked intentionally to set up a force play.

But Cleveland Manager Doc Edwards and Farrell decided to give Molitor one more chance.

"After 39 games, we felt the percentages were against him," Edwards said. "If it was every going to stop, this would be the night."

"I looked at John and said, 'What do you want to do?' He said, 'Let's go for it.'"

Molitor tapped a weak grounder to third and the throw from Brook Jacoby beat him. But Molitor was awarded first base when Pat Tabler juggled the throw for an error.

"He had four chances," Manning said. "I understand the feeling of the fans. They wanted him to keep going but no more than I did."

There was no way to get that message across to the 11,246 fans who braved rainy and cool weather to see if Molitor could continue his march toward Joe DiMaggio's record 56-game hitting streak.

"Paulie was saying, 'Come on, guys, let's get a run and end this thing. Come on, Arch, get a hit,'" Manning said. "I was going to say, 'I'll try to get infield hit.'"

Manning took the first pitch from Indians reliever Doug Jones for a strike. The crowd cheered.

"I felt a little weird after the first pitch and I heard everyone cheer when it was a strike," Manning said. "I had to step out and take a breath and say, 'I don't know what's going on here. I think they want me to strike out.'"

"For a minute, I thought I got traded back to Cleveland in the middle of an at-bat."

He lined the next pitch to center. "Normally I would hit into a double play in that situation," he said. "I don't know what happened."

It took Molitor, the man of the month and the moment, to get Manning off the hook as the bad guy.

"I was pulling for Archie (Manning) to get a hit to win the game," he said. "You concentrate on winning games, despite personally what you might have at stake."

Molitor had known the night would finally come when there would be no hits left in his bat. But after 39 games and six weeks, it was difficult to see it end.

Ty Cobb (40 games), George Sisler

(41), Pete Rose (44) and DiMaggio are the only players in this century with longer hitting streaks.

Prior to 1900, Baltimore's Willie Keeler hit in 44 straight in 1897 and Chicago's Bill Dahlen hit in 42 straight in 1894. At that time, several rules were different, including foul balls not counting as strikes.

"In a lot of ways it's a disappointment," Molitor admitted. "I've always felt a lot confidence day in and day out and even tonight."

"On the other hand there is a sense of relief that we can now get back to a sense of normalcy and get the focus back on the club."

"The fact that it's in the top five or six hitting streaks in the history of the game makes you realize you are fortunate to have this. I enjoyed it and I enjoyed having the chance to step up front and center for awhile and at the same time contribute to our ball club."

"Someday when I'm through playing I will look back at it and it will be one of my greatest personal satisfactions."

During the 39-game streak that began July 16, Molitor had 68 hits in 164 at-bats with 43 runs scored and 33 RBI, all as a designated hitter.

Getting An Ovation

Detroit Rallies To Top Twins

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

Detroit rookie Matt Nokes is hitting the ball well, even though his production has dipped since he played in the All-Star Game. But veteran Minnesota reliever Jeff Reardon is struggling, and his numbers show it.

Nokes hit a two-run, pinch-single with two outs in the ninth inning off Reardon that put Detroit ahead and Chet Lemon followed with his second homer of the game as the Tigers rallied for five runs Wednesday night and beat the Twins 10-8.

The victory put visiting Detroit one-half game ahead of Toronto in the American League East. Minnesota lost for the eighth time in nine games and had its lead in the AL West trimmed to one-half game over idle Oakland.

Nokes had been hitless in his previous 18 at-bats before singling to right field on an 0-2 pitch for a 7-6 lead.

"What's a slump? I've been hitting the ball hard," Nokes said.

Nokes was batting .311 with 17 home runs and 48 RBI at the All-Star break. He is now hitting .280 with 23 homers and 67 RBI.

Reardon entered to start the ninth with a 6-5 lead. Instead of getting his 25th save, his record dropped to 6-7 and his earned run average went to 5.37.

"He didn't hit my first two fastballs so I figured I'd try another," Reardon said. "When I have my bad innings, it's been one pitch. I didn't do my job tonight. It's tough. We're in a pennant race and I didn't do my job. You can't do it all the time."

In other AL games, Milwaukee beat Cleveland 1-0 in 10 innings although Paul Molitor of the Brewers had his 39-game hitting streak stopped, Kansas City defeated Texas 3-0 and Chicago downed Boston 5-3.

Darrell Evans drew a leadoff walk from Reardon in the Detroit ninth, Bill Madlock walked with one out and Alan Trammell's two-out single loaded the bases. Nokes got his go-ahead single and Lemon then hit his three-run homer.

"Matt Nokes got the big hit," said Lemon, who hit a solo homer in the sixth. "I thought my home run would be more than enough cushion. It turned out we needed it."

The Twins scored twice in the ninth against Mike Henneman on Kent Hrbek's RBI double and an error by Trammell at shortstop. Dan Petry, 8-6, got the victory and Willie Hernandez got the final out for his seventh save.

Greg Gagne, who drove in three runs, hit a 440-foot, solo home run in the eighth that gave Minnesota a 6-5 lead. Kirk Gibson had doubled and scored on Trammell's single in the seventh for a 5-5 tie. Gibson left the game after scoring because of a muscle strain in his left leg.

Jim Morrison hit a three-run homer for the Tigers and Tom Brunansky homered for the Twins.

Brewers 1, Indians 0
Molitor went 0-for-4 as the Brewers beat Cleveland in the 10th inning on pinch-hitter Rick Manning's RBI single.

Molitor failed to get the ball out of the infield against Indians rookie John Farrell, who gave up three hits in nine innings in his second major league start.

Molitor struck out in the first inning, grounded into a double play in the third, grounded out in the sixth and reached on first baseman Pat Tabler's error in the eighth. Molitor was on deck when Manning singled home pinch-runner Mike Felder from second base with one out in the 10th.

Molitor fell one game short of tying Ty Cobb for the fourth-longest streak in modern major league history. Molitor's streak was the longest since Pete Rose set a National League with a 44-game streak in 1978. Molitor hit .405 during his streak.

White Sox 5, Red Sox 3
Carlton Fisk again socked Boston, hitting two home runs as Chicago won at Fenway Park.

Fisk, who left the Red Sox in 1981 and signed with the White Sox as a free agent, has hit 24 homers and driven in 54 runs in 70 games against Boston. He hit a solo homer in the second inning off Roger Clemens and a two-run shot in the fourth, giving him 17 home runs this season and 298 in his career.

Bill Long, 8-6, gave up three runs on seven hits in 7 1-3 innings and Scott Nielsen got his second save.

Clemens, 13-8, had won five straight decisions. He allowed five runs on five hits in seven innings.

Royals 3, Rangers 0
Danny Jackson pitched a four-hitter and struck out seven as Kansas City beat visiting Texas.

Jackson, 7-15, pitched his ninth complete game and helped the Royals stop a three-game losing streak. He walked the bases loaded in the fifth but retired Bob Brower on a grounder to end the inning.

Last winter, the East Carolina University basketball team returned from Christmas break looking to improve on its 7-2 record.

Instead, the Pirates went 5-14 the rest of the way to finish 12-16 and many asked why.

With the arrest of two former and one present player, former coach Charlie Harrison said some of his questions may now be answered.

"It shows me what really brought our team down," he said. "It answers some questions that I had about what went wrong with our team, that something happened after Christmas. I think it really affected Blue's (Edwards) play at the end of the year. I think it affected his cohesiveness with the team. I don't know if any of the kids knew about this. ... They all denied it when I questioned them."

Edwards, a rising senior, along with junior John Williams and sophomore Tracy King, both of whom were removed from the team Monday, were charged with breaking and entering and larceny by university police Wednesday.

In addition, warrants have also been issued for five counts of breaking and entering and larceny against Howard Brown, who was removed from the team late last season. Brown is out of town and warrants against him will be served at a later date, according to police reports.

ECU police reports said that over $5,000 in goods, including stereo and other equipment, were taken from rooms in Scott Residence Hall in the break-ins.

The alleged thefts all took place during Christmas break in December 1986. At that time, the Pirates were coached by Harrison, who later resigned. Mike Steele took over April 1.

Edwards, the only one of the group that is still a member of the Pirates' team, was charged on three counts while Williams was charged on five counts and King on four counts.

Mike Steele

All three have been bound over for trial on Sept. 11. Edwards was released on $3,000 bond, while Williams and King remained in jail today under a $6,000 bond each.

Steele said Edwards would remain on the team pending the outcome of the trial.

"In my brief time here, Blue Edwards has done everything we've asked him to do, both on and off the floor," he said. "The coaches and I were looking forward to having him back on the team. We're just going to have to wait and see what happens."

The crime reports involved the loss of $5,729 in stereos, cameras, tapes, cash money, calculators and other assorted items. So far, $785 worth of the stolen goods has been recovered by ECU police.

For Harrison, who is presently mulling job offers, the entire situation has been a shock.

"It's embarrassing as hell, first of all," he said. "Three of the kids had no prior trouble. They were from families where they didn't need to resort to crime. I'm just embarrassed because they know better."

Williams and King were removed from the team on Monday for academie reasons, according to Steele. They were arrested and charged Wednesday.

"They got back in Monday and they got in late," he said. "I just didn't think they were going to fit into the program. They were guys that we spent a lot of time discussing in the summer and after they came in on Monday and decided it wasn't going to be worth it."

"When we made our decision (to remove Williams and King from the team), we had no prior knowledge (of the thefts). I didn't know anything about this until (late) Monday."

King had paid his own way through summer school in an effort to shore up his academic deficiencies.

Harrison said the situation places the college basketball careers of Williams and King in jeopardy.

"If given a chance, (or) a little bit more notice, both of those kids could have found another place to pursue their educations and their basketball," Harrison said. "They're really stuck."

Harrison said he was not exonerating the pair. "I don't feel bad they got caught," he added. "If they did it, they should have gotten caught."

For Steele, the situation is just an added obstacle in what was already shaping up to be a tough year with only two upperclassmen as well as Blue returning.

"It's disappointing," he said. "With the number of players we had returning and as late a start as we got in recruiting, we all knew it was going to be difficult. It's a setback."

Williams and King contacted Harrison upon their dismissal from the team Monday, Harrison said.

"I think it was probably already known then that they were in hot water," Harrison said. "The only thing I could say was 'why, or do you realize what you've done?' You get the standard answer. 'We don't know, or I'm sorry or it was stupid.' But it was after the fact. This is an example again of athletes getting in trouble when they didn't have to."

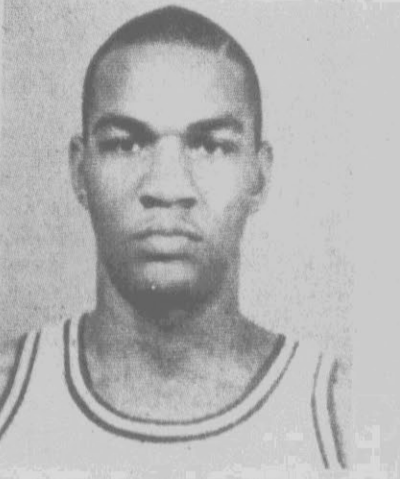

Charlie Harrison

They suffered through it last year and during the winter and a number of people have suffered unknowingly."

In a separate incident last May, Brown was charged along with former ECU player William Grady with felony larceny and possession of stolen property for goods worth over $3,000.

Their trial date in Pitt County Superior Court is set for Oct. 6 with both having entered not guilty pleas in an arraignment Monday.

Dolan Says New Contract Talks Have Been Better

NEW YORK (AP) — Jack Dolan, the executive director of the NFL Management Council, doesn't think the talks on a new contract are going as badly as the union is portraying them.

Dolan said on Wednesday that, while owners and players remain stalemated on the players' demand for free agency, "an atmosphere conducive to getting things done" still remains.

No date has been set for the next session to negotiate a new contract to replace the one that expires next Monday.

Gene Upshaw, executive director of the NFL Players Association, said on Tuesday that players are prepared to strike after Sept. 15, two days after the end of the season's first weekend, if no progress has been made. That date — not Monday, the contract expiration date — is the first the union could walk out legally because it didn't send a 60-day notice of a possible strike to the National Labor Relations Board until July 15.

Donlan, management's chief negotiator, said that in informal negotiating sessions both sides have indicated a willingness to give ground on crucial issues.

"The best I can tell is you look at the words and not the headlines," he said.

Donlan said he was aware for a week and a half that Upshaw's statement would be forthcoming and said he had been given to believe that the union's strike deadline is closer to Sept. 30, after the third weekend of the season. The union's executive committee is to meet in Washington next week to set a formal strike date.

Union and management have been negotiating since April with little progress in formal sessions. They have also been meeting in smaller sessions, most recently when Donlan and Jim Conway of the Management Council met 10 days ago with Upshaw and Dick Berthelsen, the union's general counsel.

"When we had the separate meetings, both parties explored areas where neither party was as firm as they were at the formal session and there were strong indications on where we could go in a particular area," Donlan said, although he acknowledged that the owners are not prepared to grant the players free agency.

"You would clearly have to say that the indications from both parties were more liberal and more conducive to getting things done than they were at the formal meetings. We've given them indications of movement in the pension area and we've made a couple of suggestions such as 'what if, what if, what if ...'"

Upshaw said Tuesday that in meetings with NFL teams, the players have been telling him: "If they aren't negotiating with you, why should you keep meeting with them? We've got to be prepared to take the step."

Donlan said, however, that he had called Upshaw twice this week about resuming negotiations but that Upshaw had been out of the office.

California Team Again Dominate

By ERIC PREWITT
AP Sports Writer
SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — One of these seasons, the New Orleans Saints might reach the National Football League playoffs and make San Francisco 49ers Coach Bill Walsh look good.

"It seems like I say this every year, but I think New Orleans is on the verge of breaking out and getting into the playoffs. They've been flirting with it every year," Walsh said in a pre-season look at the 49ers' opponents in the National Football Conference's Western Division.

"The Atlanta Falcons have a fine young team, but their quarterback has to become established," Walsh added, referring to 25-year-old David Archer.

Those two teams are trying to break into what has been a California monopoly in the division.

Walsh is heading into his ninth season with the 49ers, who won their fourth NFC West title in the last six seasons by finishing 10-5-1 last year and edging the Los Angeles Rams, 10-6. The Rams have one division title and four runner-up finishes so far in the 1980s.

Atlanta last made the playoffs in 1982, the strike-shortened season, and hasn't had a winning season since. Last year's Falcons went 7-9-1, and an off-season change brought Marion Campbell back for his second tour as head coach.

The Saints, in their first season under Coach Jim Mora, were 6-5 at one point last year, then faded out of the division race and finished 7-9. In 20 NFL seasons, Saints have never posted a winning record or made the playoffs.

"Once the Saints have that first winning season, it's going to help a lot," says Mora, who is making no promises for the coming season. "It's hard to catch up when the teams ahead of you are trying to improve, too."

What the Saints have going for them, besides Walsh's encouraging words, include a highly regarded defensive line and linebacking unit; Rueben Mayes, who rushed for 1,353 yard as a rookie and their superb placekicker, Morten Anderson.

David Wilson and Bobby Hebert again are competing for the starting quarterback job. Hebert, the former USFL star, was knocked out of the starting lineup by a broken foot last season. The two passers combined for 12 touchdowns and were intercepted 25 times.

Mora considers improvement of the passing offense and pass defense essential. Lonzell Hill, a rookie from Washington, could break into the lineup as a starting wide receiver, and several rookies are getting shots at winning jobs in the defensive backfield.

Atlanta's Archer was another of the many NFL quarterbacks injured during the 1986 season. He helped the Falcons to a 5-1 start, but the team was 5-5-1 when he suffered a shoulder injury in November, and backup Turk Schonert took over. The Atlanta passing offense ranked 25th in the NFL, and the quarterbacks were sacked 56 times.

The Falcons' strong rushing attack is led by Gerald Riggs, who has gone over 1,000 yards three straight seasons. Second-round draft pick Kenny Flowers from Clemson joins the running back contingent this year.

Defensively, Atlanta ranked in the middle of the NFL pack statistically last year with a mix of veterans like linebackers Buddy Curry and Joel Williams, and young players, including linemen Rick Bryan and Tony Casillas.

Campbell, who was head coach in Atlanta from 1974 to 1976, returned last year as defensive coordinator.

"I feel good about this opportunity," he says. "The timing has to be right. I think the timing is right this time."

Coach John Robinson of the Rams has a new offensive coordinator, Ernie Zampese, formerly with the San Diego Chargers. Zampese will oversee the annual challenge of giving the team a passing offense to adequately complement NFL rushing champion Eric Dickerson. The Rams' passing offense ranked dead last in the NFL last season.

Jim Everett became the Rams' starting quarterback late in his rookie season and is the unchallenged at quarterback entering into his first full NFL season on a team that for a decade has played musical signal-callers.

"He's very competitive. He's very confident," Zampese says of the 6-foot-5 passer from Purdue who threw for 1,018 yards and eight TDs as a rookie.

Everett and the Rams should have the advantage of full-time play from Henry Ellard, the wide receiver who missed the early part of last season because of a contract holdout. Ellard caught 34 passes for 447 yards in nine games last season, after gaining 811 yards on receptions in 1985. He's also has a career 12.7-yard average on punt returns, best mark in NFL history.

The Los Angeles offensive line is one of the league's strongest and most experienced. Tackle Jackie Slater and guard Dennis Harrah are heading into their 12th and 13th pro seasons, respectively. The defense, which ranked fourth in the NFC last year, includes longtime performers such as safety Nolan Cromwell, linemen Reggie Doss and Gary Jeter, and linebacker Carl Ekern, all with at least 10 seasons of experience.

San Francisco's veteran players include several who starred on the Super Bowl championship teams of 1981 and 1984. Quarterback Joe Montana heads that list and, at age 31, would like to remain the 49ers' starter for several more seasons.

But it's unlikely that Walsh envisioned more than a year or two of backup duty for Steve Young when he traded with Tampa Bay for the 25-year-old quarterback, former Brigham Young All-American and USFL player. Young was a starter most of last season and took plenty of lumps, being sacked 47 times and intercepted 13 times while throwing for 2,282 yards and eight TDs.

Montana had back surgery in September and played only eight regular season games last year, yet passed for 2,236 yards.

Keith Fahnhorst, the 35-year-old offensive tackle, center Fred Quillan, tight end Russ Francis and wide receiver Dwight Clark are among veterans nearing the end of their careers.

The 49ers' most talented young players include wide receiver Jerry Rice, the 1986 league leader in receiving yardage with 1,570, fullback Roger Craig, and defensive linemen Michael Carter and Charles Haley. Others expected to become starters soon include three rookies, running back Terrence Flagler from Clemson and offensive linemen Harris Barton of North Carolina and Jeff Bregel of Southern Cal.

"We are reaching a developmental time, but it's not a time in which we are devoting to rebuilding this team," said Walsh.

Norman Hopes For Big Finish

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Greg Norman, nearing the end of the American portion of his golf season, says it still isn't too late to turn a bad year into an acceptable one.

"I started playing pretty well last week in Chicago," said Norman, who joined 42 other players in today's opening round of the $800,000 World Series of Golf.

"Just a little ripple," Norman said, flashing a smile. "Now, I'll just try to turn that ripple into a tidal wave. It could happen at any time. It could happen this week."

"And it can't happen too soon for me," said Norman, who qualified for this elite event with his only victory of 1987, the Australian Masters.

"It's been a bad year. Bad," said the player who dominated world golf with 10 international triumphs last season.

"I was trying too hard. I was putting pressure on myself to make 1987 a better year than 1986. Now I'm aware of what I was doing and I can take steps to correct it — just relax and have some fun and let things happen instead of trying to force them to happen."

Norman, who has six international titles to defend later this season, said he plans only one more American tournament appearance after this week. That will be in the Nabisco Championships of Golf at San Antonio in November.

"That'll give me 17 in the States this year, and that's about all I can handle," he said.

Norman, a runner-up in the storm-shortened Western Open last week, ranked as one of the leading contenders in the 43-man field that was scheduled to start in the chase for a $144,000 first prize.

Lanny Wadkins, who made a quick trip back to Dallas to be with his wife for the birth of their first child, was expected back in time to compete.

Defending champion Dan Pohl was a questionable starter, however, after suffering severe back spasms.

Six European golfers eligible to compete in this tournament opted instead to enter the German Open, the last qualifying tournament for the European Ryder Cup team. Those players include British Open champion Nick Faldo and Gordon Brand, both of England; Ian Woosnam of Wales, Sandy Lyle of Scotland, Jose-Maria Olazabal of Spain and Bernhard Langer of West Germany.

In addition to Norman, some of the leading contenders in the World Series include Paul Azinger, Masters champ Larry Mize, Ben Crenshaw, Payne Stewart and Larry Nelson, the PGA champion who has finished first and second in his last two starts.

Portions of the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday will be televised nationally by CBS.

Johnson To Chowan

MURFREESBORO — Tyrone Johnson, a former East Carolina University football player, has joined the staff of Chowan College.

Johnson, a native of Vicksburg, Miss., attended Vicksburg High School, where he was a second team all-state linebacker. He then enrolled at Hines Junior College, where as a sophomore, he was named as an all-American linebacker. He was also named team captain that year and received the award as the team's most valuable player.

At East Carolina, he was voted the outstanding newcomer as a junior and led the team in tackles as a senior, winning the defensive MVP award.

Following his graduation, he served on ECU head coach Art Baker's staff as a graduate assistant for two years.

Johnson replaces Rene Osborne on the Chowan football staff after the former was elevated to the head women's basketball coaching position. Johnson will also serve as resident director of Parker Hall.

Coleman Paces Cardinal Victory

By The Associated Press
 Watch out Andre Dawson, Eric Davis and Dale Murphy. Vince Coleman is flexing his muscles.

Coleman homered, singled, doubled, and scored the winning run on Tommy Herr's grounder in the seventh inning, lifting St. Louis over Houston 5-4 Wednesday for the Cardinals' fifth victory in six games.

Coleman's second major-league homer in 1,914 plate appearances gave St. Louis a 4-2 lead through five innings. Billy Hatcher's two-out, two-run double off reliever Ken Dayley, 8-4, in the top of the seventh had tied the score 4-4.

Elsewhere in the National League, New York edged Los Angeles 3-2, San Francisco blanked Philadelphia 2-0, Pittsburgh tripped Cincinnati 6-5 and Montreal beat San Diego 6-5 in 12 innings. The doubleheader between Atlanta and Chicago at Wrigley Field was rained out.

Coleman's only previous home run was inside the park off Len Barker of Atlanta on May 21, 1985, his rookie year.

"It's a lot of fun to do it," he said of his opposite-field homer over the gate in right field, 386 feet away. "I had confidence in my ability that I'd hit at least one. I feel awfully proud."

As it turned out, however, it was Coleman's speed rather than his power that won the game for St. Louis. He scored three runs and stole his 83rd and 84th bases.

"He had a helluva day," St. Louis Manager Whitey Herzog said of Coleman, who slid home with the winning run on a dash from third base after Houston threw out Herr at first base in the seventh inning.

"That last piece of baserunning was a beauty. Really, it turned out bigger than the home run," Herzog said. "(Astros shortstop) Dale (Berra) did right. He looked him (Coleman) back and threw (Herr's grounder) to first."

Glenn Davis hit a two-run homer for Houston, his 21st, in the first. Jack Clark matched that with his 34th for St. Louis, and the Cardinals went ahead 3-2 on Ozzie Smith's sacrifice fly after Coleman singled and stole bases on consecutive pitches.

"I'd like to see the times he gets on base with nobody out and scores," Astros starter Jim Deshaies said of Coleman. "It must be up there at 90 percent."

The victory kept St. Louis 4 1/2 games ahead of New York in the NL East.

Giants 2, Phillies 0
 Bob Brenly's two-run homer with two outs in the ninth inning lifted San Francisco over host Philadelphia, the Giants' fourth straight victory.

The win gave the Giants a 2 1/2-game lead over Houston in the NL West.

Phillies starter Shane Rawley, who had held the Giants to two hits and struck out a career-high 10, gave up a bad-hop single to Chris Speier with two outs in the ninth. Brenly then hit a 1-0 pitch over the left-field fence for his 15th home run. "I hit an off-speed pitch that he got up, Brenly said of his game-winning homer.

Don Robinson, 9-6, pitched 1 1/3 innings to earn the victory. Robinson took over for starter Dave Dravecky with two outs in the eighth. Dravecky allowed five hits.

Mets 3, Dodgers 2
 Keith Hernandez hit a home run in the sixth inning to extend his hitting streak to a career-high 16 games and Ron Darling pitched six-hit ball for 7 1/3 innings as New York beat Los Angeles at Shea Stadium.

Darling, 11-8, has won seven of his last eight decisions. He struck out eight and walked three. Randy Myers came on after Darling allowed a single and walk in eighth. Hernandez's throwing error on Tito Landrum's grounder allowed Pedro Guerrero to score. Roger McDowell came on and got the final four outs for his 20th save.

The Mets used three pitchers in the eighth and the Dodgers five to establish a major-league record for most pitchers in an inning. The last time the Dodgers used five pitchers in an inning was 1927 when they played in Brooklyn.

Pirates 6, Reds 5
 Al Pedrique's run-scoring bloop single with two outs in the bottom of the ninth inning extended Cincinnati's season-high losing streak to six games.

The defeat dropped the third-place Reds five games behind San Francisco in the NL West.

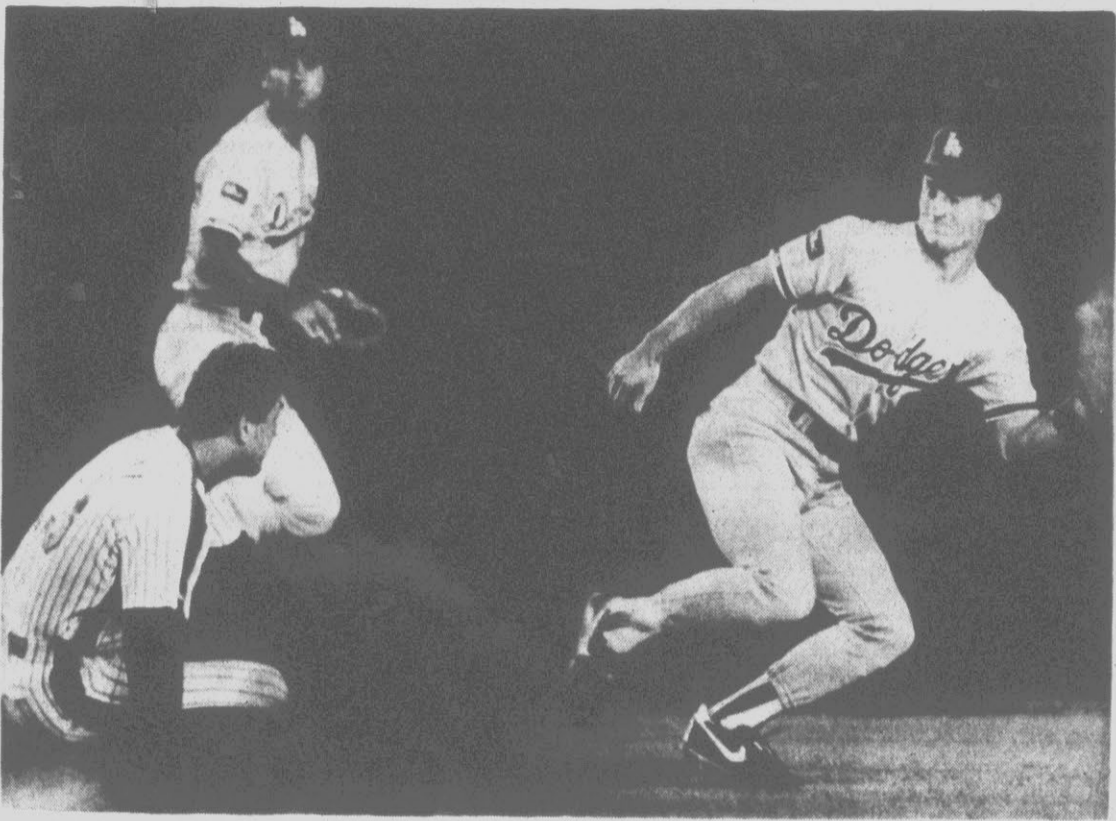

Johnny Ray started the Pittsburgh ninth with a double off reliever John Franco, 7-4, and moved to third on pitcher Jeff Robinson's sacrifice. With the infield and outfield drawn in, John Cangelosi grounded out to shortstop for the second out. Pedrique then singled just beyond the reach of second baseman Kurt Stillwell into right field to give the Pirates a three-game sweep.

Expos 6, Padres 5
 Tim Wallach hit an infield single with the bases loaded and two outs in the 12th inning as Montreal beat host San Diego.

Herm Winningham doubled with one out off Lance McCullers, 7-7, and after Tim Raines was intentionally walked, Mitch Webster singled to fill the bases.

McCullers struck out Tom Foley but Wallach hit a grounder off shortstop Garry Templeton's glove to give the Expos a 9-1 record in extra innings. The Padres loaded the bases with one out in the 11th, but Randy Ready struck out and Stan Jefferson grounded out.

Trailing 5-2, Montreal scored three runs in the ninth on Hubie Brooks' RBI pinch single and Wallace Johnson's two-run pinch double.

Green Bay Adds Brown In Effort To Bolster Defense

By The Associated Press
 It took Green Bay Coach Forrest Gregg just one look at a videotape to realize that veteran cornerback Dave Brown is the player he's been looking for to firm up the Packers' secondary.

The Packers acquired Brown, 34, Wednesday from the Seattle Seahawks in exchange for an undisclosed 1988 draft choice. He was the last remaining member of the original Seahawks' expansion team of 1976.

"He's a smart cornerback. He's got a lot of savvy. I think he still has good speed," Gregg said Wednesday. "He has great pattern recognition. He also has the ability to understand what the wide receivers are trying to do to him," Gregg said. "He's a good tackler. He seems to be an aggressive football player."

Brown, a 13-year National Football League veteran, is tied with Pittsburgh's Donnie Shell for the NFL lead in career interceptions by an active player with 50.

Brown was expected to arrive in Green Bay tonight, but isn't likely to play in the Packers' exhibition game Saturday night against the Cincinnati Bengals.

The 6-foot-1 197-pounder was a first-round pick of the Pittsburgh Steelers in 1975 from the University of Michigan and was selected by Seattle in the 1976 expansion draft.

Around the Camps
 Running back Charles White of the Los Angeles Rams is determined to show that he can overcome a substance abuse problem.

White returned to practice Wednesday and released a brief statement concerning his arrest last Friday for suspicion of being under the influence of a controlled substance.

"I'm sorry for the embarrassment I caused my family, my teammates and the Ram organization," White said. "I'm determined to make up for this by my actions on and off the field."

"I'm grateful for another chance and will do all that is asked of me. Statements don't mean much, actions do. My actions will reflect my progress."

The statement left many questions unanswered, but White was unavailable for further comment.

Quarterback Dave Wilson, who missed several days of practice and a preseason game because of a sore back, is again throwing crisply and will start Saturday against the Pittsburgh Steelers, says New Orleans Saints Coach Jim Mora.

Mora said Wednesday that Wilson was sharper after the rest, and will play at least a half.

"David can't throw hard every day, every day, every day," Mora said.

Holding Out
 Minnesota safety Joey Browner's agent says the two-time Pro Bowler wants more money.

"He's unhappy with the Minnesota Vikings," Harold Daniels told the Minneapolis Star and Tribune on Wednesday, when Browner continued his second holdout of training camp. "He's playing more now than he's ever played and he doesn't feel he's being justified (financially). He's playing on all special teams and his position. Usually a starter doesn't play on special teams."

Browner, signed a four-year, $1.375 million contract before last season. Browner missed the first nine days of camp and was fined $9,000. He left camp again Tuesday afternoon and also missed both of Wednesday's workouts.

"It's a minor situation," said Coach Jerry Burns, who has said that the Vikings' defense performs 40 to 50 percent better with the hard-hitting Browner in the lineup. "He's got a problem, and I told him, 'Do what you have to do.'"

Injuries
 The New York Giants completed their 34-day training camp stint at Pace University here without third-string quarterback Jeff Hostetler.

Giants spokesman Ed Croke said Hostetler's bruised kidney was giving him trouble. As a precaution, team physicians checked the former West Virginia University player into a hospital, which team officials would not name.

The team was to reconvene for a practice Thursday at Giants Stadium in East Rutherford, N.J., where offensive tackle Karl Nelson, who was diagnosed as having Hodgkin's disease last week, was expected to make an appearance.

New England Coach Raymond Berry continues to move players around on his banged-up offensive line.

With center Pete Brock out with back spasms and backup Jim Romano out with a hamstring pull, Berry has moved guard Paul Fairchild into his position for Saturday's game with the Minnesota Vikings.

Ten Now Say No To Carter

NEW YORK (AP) — The list of NFL teams that want no part of the Cris Carter-Charles Gladman supplemental draft continues to grow.

The Cleveland Browns, in a statement issued by owner Art Modell, joined nine other teams in dropping out of the controversial lottery for the two players, who were declared ineligible to continue their college career because of dealing with agents.

The joined San Francisco, Washington, the Los Angeles Raiders, Cincinnati, Chicago, Minnesota, Tampa Bay, Atlanta and the Indianapolis Colts in declining to participate in Friday's draft. And Houston Coach Jerry Glanville said he doubted the Oilers would take part.

But Carter's agent, Mitch Frankel, said he had been contacted by "11 or 12" NFL teams expressing interest in the All-American receiver from Ohio State.

"We are not in favor of this supplemental draft and will not participate," said Modell, who in 1985 traded with Buffalo for a supplemental draft pick with which he took quarterback Bernie Kosar.

Kosar was in that draft because he had graduated from the University of Miami, although he had a year of athletic eligibility left.

Carter, on the other hand, acknowledged taking $5,000 in loans plus another $1,800 from agents Norby Walters and Lloyd Bloom. Gladman, a running back from Pitt, lost his eligibility for refusing to cooperate with an investigation of agents.

The NFL, which said it would hold the draft "reluctantly" because of threatened court action by the players, also announced the names of four other players in the lottery: Dan McFadden, a defensive back from Miami; Paul Miller of Illinois Valley Community College, position unknown; Marquis Pleasant, a wide receiver from Southern Methodist and Chester Savoie, a defensive back from Nicholls State.

NFL spokesman Dick Maxwell said none of the four had been illegally involved with agents but added that he didn't know why they had petitioned for the draft. The league customarily holds several supplemental drafts a year for players who have completed their school work or used up their eligibility in some other fashion.

The announcement of the Carter-Gladman draft set off a storm of protest among college coaches, some of whom said they were considering barring NFL scouts from their campuses. They claimed that by allowing the players to be drafted, the NFL was tacitly condoning illegal activities.

Like Modell, many professionals seemed to agree with the colleges.

Coach Bill Walsh of San Francisco, who said his team wouldn't make a pick, said it would be better to hold the draft after Sept. 15, following the start of the regular NFL season.

And General Manager Bobby Beathard of the Washington Redskins said: "We just don't think it's right to reward a guy who sticks it to his school, his coaches and his teammates."

Frankel, meanwhile, charged that Carter has been barred from working out for scouts at league facilities.

He said Carter had planned to work out Tuesday at the Hoosierdome in Indianapolis, but had been barred by officials at the arena, home of the NFL's Colts. Earlier, Frankel said, workouts at St. Louis and at the Cowboys' facility in Dallas had been called off.

Spokesmen for the three clubs denied that any workouts had been scheduled at their respective facilities.

"We just can't seem to find a suitable facility. We don't get much cooperation any way we turn," said Frankel, who added that Carter might have to perform for the scouts informally at a park or vacant lot.

Maxwell said the league had nothing to do with the ban.

The 6-foot-3 inch, 194-pound Carter had been considered a possible first-round draft choice next season. But most team officials said they doubted he would go that high in the supplemental draft, since a team taking a player in the supplemental draft loses that round's pick in the next regular draft.

Frankel said he had first arranged through Joel Bussert, the NFL's personnel director, to have one of the NFL scouting combines administer a physical to Carter and work him out in St. Louis. He said he later got a call from officials at the scouting combine telling him that wouldn't be done and suggesting Carter run his own workouts.

Frankel said Carter wanted to work out because he had run 4.7-second 40-yard dashes in earlier tryouts. He said Carter was out of shape at that time, and said he thought he could now do between 4.58 and 4.6, closer to the norm for NFL receivers.

"I also wanted them to talk to him," Frankel said of his reason for making Carter available for the scouts. "He's a 21-year-old kid who made a mistake. He's a good kid with a good knowledge of football. He tried to make what's wrong become right but he's become the symbol of what's bad."

Frankel disagreed with the assessment that Carter isn't worth a first-round pick.

"On talent alone, I think he's a first rounder," he said. "If there's nothing else going on, I think he's a first-round draft choice. But I don't know what's going on."

An association of college athletic directors has succeeded in scheduling a meeting with Commissioner Pete Rozelle concerning the draft, a spokesman said.

Dennis Collins, spokesman for the National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics, said the meeting was scheduled for this afternoon in the New York City area.

Collins said Wednesday that the group's delegation would express its opposition to the drafting of Carter and Gladman.

The Cleveland-based NACDA earlier this week asked the NFL to postpone the draft until the group could meet with Rozelle on Saturday.

Special Draft Has Smell Of Tainted Meat To It

By ED SCHUYLER Jr.
 AP Sports Writer

Player drafts are the meat markets of sports.

They are the way in which the prime cuts of college basketball and football are selected by professional teams.

To some people the system might seem demeaning, but being a high draft choice is a goal planted into minds of many athletes before they reach their teens.

Draft time is springtime, but the National Football League is holding a special draft Friday, and it has the smell of tainted meat about it.

It is being held because Cris Carter, a wide receiver for Ohio State, and Charles Gladman, a running back for Pittsburgh, were made ineligible by their schools.

Carter petitioned the NFL for admission after admitting to school officials he accepted a $5,000 loan from player agents Norby Walters and Lloyd Bloom in May 1986, and subsequently accepted $1,800 more from them.

Gladman was made ineligible for refusing to cooperate in an investigation of agents.

"Most college coaches feel like the NFL let the college game down," Pitt Coach Mike Gottfried says.

Unfortunately, there are too many instances of colleges making a mockery of the term student-athlete by putting the quest for bowl games and television revenues ahead of education.

"Now we send a message to all these kids: 'Go ahead and try college football,'" Bo Schembechler, coach at Michigan, says.

"Try to go to school. If it doesn't work out, you can quit easily. All you need to do is violate any rules, any rules you want, and let them declare you ineligible — and Pete Rozelle will set up a supplemental draft so that you can go into professional football."

But a chance of going into professional football or basketball is the only reason a lot of young men go to college.

"NCAA rules say a college player becomes a professional when he signs with an agent," NFL spokesman Joe Browne says. "That's their rule, not ours."

The NFL also has said it has no legal recourse but to hold the draft because to not allow players like Carter and Gladman to play professionally would be forbidding them to earn a living.

Several NFL teams have said they will not participate in Friday's draft, which, besides Carter and Gladman, will involve four relatively unknown players.

The four players are involved for a variety of reasons, but none took money from an agent, the league said Wednesday.

"We are not going to participate in the Cris Carter sweepstakes," Paul Brown, general manager of the Cincinnati Bengals, says.

"We just don't think it's right to reward a guy who sticks it to his school, his coaches and his teammates," General Manager Bobby Beathard of the Washington Redskins says.

Bill Walsh, president and coach of the San Francisco 49ers, wants to do something to prevent a recurrence of the Carter-Gladman draft affair.

He suggests the NCAA withhold eligibility decisions on athletes until after Sept. 15 and that any NFL supplemental drafts be held in late October or November.

"That would reduce the area in which an agent can coerce a player into taking money illegally so he would be ineligible and be able to go into pro football," Walsh says.

Says Gottfried: "I think the message that's been sent out is the unscrupulous agent can come in and deal with your younger players now."

Meat always attracts vultures.

From Joe Cullipher Chrysler Plymouth, Dodge, Peugeot

By James Phillips

SAVE TRANSMISSION TROUBLE

If your car has an automatic filter or screen which traps transmission, the power from the engine is transmitted to the rear wheels through oil. In addition to being subjected to extreme heat, this special oil holds in suspension minute particles caused by wear and tear of transmission parts. One tiny particle of this metal in one of those finely machined valves which help the transmission do its shifting could disable your car. Often, the only cure is to remove and disassemble the transmission, clean or replace the affected parts and reassemble it. Fortunately, your car's transmission is protected by a filter or screen which traps these particles. To save yourself repair bills that could mount into the hundreds, be sure to check your owner's manual for recommendations as to when your transmission is due for oil and filter replacement and periodic adjustments of bands and/or clutches.

Appellate Court Overturns Ruling Barring Use Of 'Secular' Books

By BARBARA VOBEJDA
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

A federal appeals court panel in Atlanta Wednesday reversed a ruling by a federal judge in Alabama that banned 44 textbooks from public schools in the state because they promoted the "religion" of secular humanism.

The three-judge panel of the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled unanimously that U.S. District Court Judge W. Brevard Hand had erred in his controversial March order that declared the textbooks in violation of the First Amendment ban on government establishment of religion. The purpose of the history and social studies textbooks was clearly secular, the panel said, ruling in favor of the Alabama Board of Education and against more than 600 fundamentalist Christian parents who had challenged the books.

The appeals court order, which instructs Hand to dissolve his order banning the books and to dismiss the lawsuit, clears the way for Alabama schools to use the textbooks when they open in coming weeks.

It was the third consecutive courtroom defeat this summer for fundamentalist Christians who have fought to have their point of view heard in public schools. A federal appeals court panel Monday overturned a judge's decision ordering Hawkins County, Tenn., schools to excuse fundamentalist children from reading class because their parents found the textbooks offensive to their religious beliefs.

In June, the Supreme Court declared unconstitutional a Louisiana law requiring that public schools give equal time to the teaching of evolution and creation science.

In its decision Wednesday, the appeals panel said the books did not violate the First Amendment, as Hand had concluded, and that there was no evidence that "omission of certain facts regarding religion from these textbooks of itself constituted an advancement of secular humanism or an active hostility towards theistic religion."

Hand had said the books promoted secular humanism — defined in the dictionary as a human-centered movement based on the belief that people can live ethically without the supernatural — in part because they excluded facts about Christianity and other traditional religions. Shortly after his ruling, the appeals court suspended the ban while the appeal was decided.

The appeals panel did not deal with the question of whether secular humanism is a religion, saying such a ruling was unnecessary because the parents had failed to prove that the schools were unconstitutionally promoting a religion.

"We're very pleased by this decision," said Alabama school superintendent Wayne Teague. "We have felt all along the state board had acted properly in adopting the textbooks questioned by the lawsuit."

Judy Whorton, who has acted as a spokeswoman for the fundamentalist parents, said they would appeal the decision, taking it to the Supreme Court if necessary. The parents could first ask that the case be reheard by the full appeals court.

"We feel like it's a great blow to academic freedom," she said of the ruling. "There is only one view being promoted. When you're doing that, you're not educating, you're inculcating them. That's not constitutional."

The parents had charged that 39 history and social studies books and five home economics books promoted secular humanism, both by excluding facts about religion and by failing to present a Biblically based or divine framework for decision-making.

"The texts reviewed are not merely bad history," Hand wrote in his order banning the books, "but lack so many facts as to equal ideological promotion. Omissions, if sufficient, do affect a person's ability to develop religious beliefs and exercise that religious freedom guaranteed by the Constitution."

But in Wednesday's ruling, written by Judge Frank M. Johnson Jr., the appeals panel said Hand had construed the constitutional mandate of government neutrality on religion "into an affirmative obligation to speak about religion."

Hand's ruling, which declared that the textbooks incorporated a "systematic promotion" of secular humanism, was praised at the time by conservative Christians, who declared it a significant victory because it confirmed their long-held belief that secular humanism is a religion.

Attorneys for the fundamentalist parents were not available for comment Wednesday.

Consumers Use More Red Meat, Poultry

WASHINGTON (AP) — The per capita consumption of red meat and poultry is expected to climb to another record in 1988, reflecting stepped-up production of pork, broilers and turkeys, according to new projections by the Agriculture Department.

Beef consumption is expected to decline somewhat as farmers and ranchers hold back animals to expand breeding herds. That will mean more beef later on, if strong consumer demand continues.

As it looks now to the department's Economic Research Service, Americans will eat an average of 221.8 pounds of meat and poultry next year, up 3 percent from the expected average of 215.3 pounds in 1987, which is also a record.

Those are retail weight figures, which do not include shrinkage from further trimming, cooking and table waste.

"Lower grain prices and positive returns (profits) are encouraging continued expansion in poultry and pork production, and an end to breeding herd liquidation for cattle," the agency said in a new outlook report.

Per capita meat supplies have been at record or near-record levels since 1982. The continued large supplies "will mean lower poultry and pork prices in 1988 and very little gain in beef prices," the report said.

Penn Is Feature At County Jail

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A jailed Sean Penn can't escape those who want an off-screen glimpse of the bad-boy actor famed for his scuffles with photographers, a newspaper says.

"Everybody sneaks a peek at him through the little window on his door," an anonymous source was quoted as saying in Wednesday's Los Angeles Herald Examiner. "Nurses, doctors, trustees, sometimes five people at a time."

Penn, 27, checked into the Los Angeles County Jail on Aug. 22 to serve the second portion of a 60-day sentence for probation violations.

A judge ordered him jailed after a fight with a man who tried to photograph him on the set of the film "Colors." Penn was placed on probation earlier this year after a barroom brawl with a man he thought was trying to kiss his pop singer wife, Madonna.

The actor was assigned to a separate section of the jail reserved for inmates thought to be at risk from the general jail population.

Penn's cell in the "elite section," as inmates call it, is freshly painted in light blue with dark blue trim, has metal doors and is furnished with a steel frame bed bolted to the floor, a two-inch foam mattress and a small porcelain sink and toilet, the paper said.

"Everybody's going out of their way for him," the source told the newspaper. "A trustee from the kitchen said, 'If you need any extra food, I'll steal it for you.'"

There has been pressure on other inmates "to keep the place clean" during Penn's stay and "a sergeant had him in his office for coffee."

Oldest Guest

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Proclaiming she was "too mean to die," 105-year-old Mildred Holt traded quips with Johnny Carson and became the oldest guest of "The Tonight Show."

"You're the oldest person I have ever met and ever had on the show," Carson told Mrs. Holt, who was born July 17, 1882.

"That's the way it is at home," said Mrs. Holt of Ellsworth, Kan. "I'm always the oldest one they ever met."

Dressed in a powder blue outfit with pearls and corsage and sipping a highball, Mrs. Holt recalled during Wednesday's show her family's first automobile in 1914, supporting Teddy Roosevelt for president and giving up driving just two years ago.

British Actor Sparkles As 'Mystery' Barrister

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LONDON (AP) — Down by the chambers of the Inner Temple you can find Horace Rumpole, that ruffled and somewhat outrageous barrister who has never gotten the silk of a queen's counsel.

Rumpole is that delightful courtroom intriguer played by Leo McKern in "Rumpole of the Bailey," which appears as part of the British-made "Mystery!" series on PBS.

A barrister, as producer Jackie Davis explained over tea a few blocks from the London courts, is the lawyer who represents a defendant in court. Chambers are the barristers' offices at the Inner Temple, which is one of the four inns of the court buildings.

She also worked as a production secretary for such directors as Sidney Lumet, Robert Mulligan and George Roy Hill. Afterward, she returned to England and worked at a variety of jobs until she became a producer.

McKern lives in Bath, the old Roman spa in the west of England. He has spent most of his life on the stage, but he has been in such movies as "The Mouse That Roared," "Moll Flanders," "Ryan's Daughter," "The Omen," "Blue Lagoon," and "The French Lieutenant's Woman."

Davis said she got her start working as a secretary at CBS in New York. Her husband at the time had been transferred there by his bank.

Theaters Looking Toward Record Fall Box Offices

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — As the year's movie box office receipts build toward record totals, the nation's theaters are looking forward to a fall season with an extraordinary number of releases, including returns to the screen by Barbra Streisand and Steven Spielberg.

Autumn is traditionally the lull between the bonanzas of summer and Christmas, notes industry analyst Arthur Murphy of Daily Variety.

"But even with a so-so season, 1987 is likely to go over $4 billion for a new record. It's like Pete Rose getting hits: Every dollar is a new record," Murphy said.

Murphy's statistics show the box office take so far this year at $2.439 billion, as opposed to $2.189 a year ago. The 1986 gross was greatly helped by strong fall movies, especially the summer holdover, "Crocodile Dundee." This summer has produced few films that seem capable of surviving the hot weather, but heavy reinforcements are coming up.

A local consulting firm, Exhibitor Relations, has counted 104 movies for release in September, October and November while 64 appeared in the same months last year. Of course, autumn is a time when the major companies get rid of their dogs, and independents scramble for a share of the less competitive market. But the post-Labor Day period is also when studios release attractions geared for the Academy Awards.

Barbra Streisand will be appearing for the first time since her 1983 "Yentl." She is starring in "Nuts," based on the off-Broadway play about a woman seeking to prove her sanity. This time she was directed by Martin Ritt ("Norma Rae"), and the cast includes Richard Dreyfuss, Maureen Stapleton, Eli Wallach, James Whitmore and Karl Malden.

Although he has served as executive producer of "Innerspace" and other films, Steven Spielberg hasn't directed since "The Color Purple." Coming this fall is his new film, "Empire of the Sun," the story of a boy's reaction to the Japanese occupation of Shanghai.

Another returnee is James L. Brooks, who has devoted himself to television since his 1983 hit "Terms of Endearment." The new film, "Broadcast News," features William Hurt, Holly Hunter and Albert Brooks in a drama about Washington reporting.

Undoubtedly aimed for Oscar consideration is "Cry Freedom," Denzel Washington and Kevin Kline star as the South African friends Stephen Biko and Donald Wood. The director is Richard Attenborough, whose "Gandhi" collected nine Oscars.

After a frivolous summer, drama is in strong supply for the fall.

There's "The Big Town," starring Matt Dillon, Diane Lane and Tommy Lee Jones in a drama about bigtime gambling.

"Destiny," with William Hurt, Timothy Hutton and Stockard Channing, is a World War II story about a Basque family.

Other dramatic offerings include: —"Hope and Glory," a 6-year-old's view of the Battle of Britain, starring Sarah Miles and directed by John Boorman ("Deliverance"). —"Fatal Attraction," Michael Douglas, Glenn Close and Anne Archer in a psychological thriller. —"The Sicilian," another Mafia epic from Mario Puzo, with Michael Cimino ("Heaven's Gate") directing Christopher Lambert. —"Bestseller," Brian Dennehy as a cop-novelist who collaborates on a book with a retired hit man, James Woods. —"House of Games," directorial debut by playwright David Mamet, with Lindsay Crouse and Joe Mantegna in a psychological thriller.

The autumn season will also bring a host of comedies.

In "Hello Again," Shelley Long plays a housewife who dies and returns a year later to find her husband in the clutches of a gold digger.

There's also "Surrender," a romantic triangle composed of Michael Caine, Sally Field and Steve Guttenberg.

The Big Bang
On August 27th, 1883, the island volcano of Krakatoa erupted in the largest explosion of its kind in historic times. The explosion, which could be heard 3,000 miles away, killed 36,000 people. Areas as far away as 40 miles were inundated by raining ash that accumulated at a rate of about three feet an hour. World-wide atmospheric effects from the volcano lasted for a year. The total energy released by Krakatoa was the equivalent of about 200 one-megaton hydrogen bombs.
DO YOU KNOW — A one-megaton bomb is the equivalent of how many tons of TNT?

Horoscope From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY Aug. 28
GENERAL TENDENCIES: Now is the time to add some new dimensions to your vocational interests and activities. Relying on your intuition would be highly beneficial, as it's not likely to be wrong.
ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Show a partner that you are willing to make changes on an agreement, but be subtle, and take a subordinate position.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): There are many modern innovations which can eliminate some old-fashioned routines you've been distressed with.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Be more enthusiastic about entertainments which your mate enjoys. Drive very carefully today and tonight.
MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): This is a good day to make any needed improvements to your property, or at least plan to have them done.
LEO (July 22 to August 21): A bit of praise for one associate and a friendly attitude toward another can bring fine results for the days ahead.
VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): You like neatness and order around you, but try to loosen up and add some charm and creativity to your surroundings.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): If you are not invited elsewhere, give a little party yourself and repay some social obligations this way.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): The information you've been seeking can be gathered easily today. Show your mate how devoted you are. Drive carefully.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): If you are very cooperative and accommodating, you can achieve your goals easily. Keep conversations private.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): A prominent person who in the past has been unapproachable can do you a favor. Show gratitude for this.
AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Be more willing to listen to ideas from associates, as you can pick up some really fine ideas which will help you.
PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Rely on your intuition when dealing with difficult persons. You can be highly romantic with your loved one this evening.
IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be constantly looking to the future while studying current conditions, and, as a result, will have great success due to readiness for any eventuality. Teach your progeny to reach decisions more quickly and not to take too long deliberating.
"The Stars impel; they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Once the defenders had shifted to a trump, declarer should have realized he would never be able to ruff a spade. Therefore, he should have looked for another way to avoid losing four tricks. Besides the club finesse, there was the possibility of a 3-3 club split.
Declarer should have won the trump switch in hand and immediately finessed in clubs, while dummy still had a trump to control the third round of spades. The defenders then would have had no counter. Declar-

IT'S BUILT TO SURVIVE THE WORLD'S WORST CLIMATES. EVEN THE ECONOMIC ONES.

$5995 * Don't be fooled by our low price. Sure, it's one of the lowest of the top five compact pickups, but that's probably the last reason to buy an Isuzu. What really makes us a solid investment is the fact that our trucks have conquered some of the world's roughest terrain. FOUR WHEELER MAGAZINE called them "a shining example of what quality control is all about." The bottom line is you get a durable truck at a price that's tough to beat.

Researchers Seek New Uses For Food Products

By JODI PERRAS
Associated Press Writer
WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP) — Every dieter's fantasy — a chocolate cake with two-thirds of the calories removed — is also a dream of researchers here.

At Purdue University's Whistler Center for Carbohydrate Research, scientists are working on new and expanded uses for carbohydrates, including research on a "bulking agent" that can be used to bake cookies, cakes and pies with fewer calories, said James N. BeMiller, the center's director.

BeMiller says an artificial sweetener such as aspartame, known under the brand name NutraSweet, is used mainly in beverages. "You can't use it in something like cakes or cookies or pies because the sugar you put in those products does more than provide sweetness."

A bulking agent used with aspartame would hold moisture and add bulk to the product, making it indistinguishable from the cakes Mom used to make. The center's scientists are working to develop such an agent.

Researchers at the center, named for Purdue Professor Roy L. Whistler, are also:

- Looking for a way to use corn instead of petroleum to make trash bags and plastic containers that are biodegradable, thus helping both Midwestern farmers and the environment.
- Using carbohydrates to make a new polysaccharide, which is used in powdered drinks and baker's emulsions. Polysaccharides now come from a crop which is difficult to acquire because it is grown in a volatile region of Africa south of the Sahara, BeMiller said.
- Trying to use carbohydrate-based materials in place of fats in some foods, such as margarine, to reduce the calorie content.

Carbohydrates are organic compounds, including sugars and starches, which form a class of foods that give the body energy.

BeMiller is probably most excited about research being done on enzyme inhibitors, which can be used to study certain rare, genetic diseases.

"There are some diseases for which there are no animal models. We can't study them in dogs or laboratory rats. But there are inhibitors that can be used to generate the diseases in laboratory rats," he said.

People suffering from those diseases, which are known as storage diseases, cannot break down complex carbohydrates. As a result, the carbohydrates build up in their cells, causing severe mental retardation and early death, he said.

Research done at the Whistler center is underwritten by corporate sponsors.

Still, said BeMiller, "It's really not our role or goal in life to find new products.

"We develop new knowledge which can then be used by others to find new products. People in industry don't take the time or money to do the basic research, and that's what we can do."

Companies such as Kraft Inc., NutraSweet Co., and Hershey Foods Corp. benefit from research done at the center, and negotiations are pending with General Foods Corp. and Nabisco Brands Inc., said Philip Nelson, head of Purdue's department of food sciences.

The ties between industry and the Whistler center were forged early, when the new food sciences department was searching for a way to be different from other such departments, Nelson said.

Through a survey of the food and pharmaceutical industries, the department found a void in carbohydrate research and a need for trained scientists in the field.

"There was no such center in place anywhere in the universities across the country," Nelson said. "We felt if we were going to be successful we needed funding. This was an opportunity for industry to join us and help support us."

BeMiller looks back to the 1960s to explain the shortage of carbohydrate research and experts in the field.

"People said we shouldn't even be thinking of using these things we grow on the farm in industry. We should be using them to feed the world," BeMiller said.

Then came the "Green Revolution," when resources went into research to increase production and away from new utilization of farm products.

"All of a sudden there just wasn't any (utilization research)," BeMiller said. "It was not even something we should talk about. It's somehow immoral. We should feed the world with the things grown on the farm."

That attitude prevailed through the 1970s, but recently the search for new uses for agricultural products has come back in vogue.

"All of a sudden people are back to this interest, at least for a couple of reasons," BeMiller said. "One, the realization that petroleum is not going to be with us forever, and two, even more than that is the concern about the farmer."

The Green Revolution, with its emphasis on production, created surpluses that hurt farmers by driving the price of commodities down.

"When farmers go into the field this fall to pick the 1987 corn crop, between 70 and 90 percent of last year's crop is still in the bins," BeMiller said. "We've not only got to use these things we've got stored, but we've also got to help our farmers sell their products."

Gene Loss May Cause Colon Cancer

By MALCOLM RITTER
AP Science Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The loss of a gene that suppresses cell growth may play a key role in up to 40 percent of cases of colon and rectum cancer, the nation's second leading malignant disease, scientists have reported.

Once the gene is isolated and analyzed, scientists may be able to develop better treatments for the cancer and an inherited predisposition toward it, one of the researchers said.

Colorectal cancer is the nation's second most common serious cancer, with an estimated 145,000 cases and 60,000 deaths this year.

The research found evidence for loss of the gene in about a quarter of colorectal tumors examined. But for technical reasons, the true figure may be 40 percent, said Walter Bodmer, director of research at the Imperial Cancer Research Fund in London.

Bodmer co-wrote two papers on the gene with colleagues in England and Israel in today's issue of the British journal Nature.

Scientists should be able to isolate the gene within a few years, Bodmer said in a telephone interview.

Bert Vogelstein, associate oncology professor at the Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine, called the work important.

"Genes that suppress tumorigenesis (tumor development) and are lost during the development of cancer are probably important in a wide variety of human cancers," said Vogelstein. "This is a first step in identification of a gene which may be important in colon cancer."

Evidence of similar genes has been found in a form of lung cancer, the nation's most common serious cancer, and in several rare cancers, said Robert Weinberg of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Genes lie along threadlike molecules called chromosomes. Chromosomes come in pairs, one inherited from each parent, so each person generally gets two copies of each gene.

The research says copies of the gene linked to colorectal cancer are on the pair of chromosomes designated number 5. It also suggests that colorectal cancer may arise after both gene copies are lost or damaged.

The role of the gene is not known. But each copy in a cell appears to order production of some substance that keeps the cell's growth in check, Bodmer said. So if one copy is lost or damaged, production of the substance declines, and the cell may grow into a polyp.

That may be the case in familial adenomatous polyposis, an inherited condition that produces hundreds of intestinal polyps and predisposes a person to colorectal cancer, Bodmer said.

The person inherits the faulty copy of the gene. A polyp can progress toward cancer if the other gene copy then disappears, he said.

The same process may promote spontaneous cancers if one normal copy, and then the second, is lost or damaged, he said.

Other changes in the cell also are needed to produce cancer, researchers wrote.

For their study, the researchers noted that the second gene copy could be lost if a portion of the chromosome that carries it disappears. Such chromosomal losses can occur as cells reproduce.

So scientists looked for evidence of losses from chromosome 5, by comparing chromosomes from spontaneous colorectal tumors to those of tissues taken from adjacent normal tis-

... of loss appeared for 10 of studied with one test, six of studied with another, and six of the 15 tumors studied with both tests.

Stroke History Traced

BOSTON (AP) — Men who have a family history of strokes are at unusually high risk of suffering strokes themselves and should be encouraged to lose weight and control their blood pressure, a new study concludes.

The study in the New England Journal of Medicine found that men whose mothers died of strokes were three times more likely than other people to have strokes.

"The chief problem with a risk factor such as an adverse family history is that it is untreatable," the researchers wrote.

"On the other hand, it could be used to identify those at higher risk of stroke, who might then be more easily motivated to stop smoking, reduce body weights and have their hypertension treated."

The study was conducted by Dr. Lennart Welin and colleagues at Ostra Hospital in Goteborg, Sweden.

Strokes are blamed for an estimated 155,000 fatalities a year in the United States.

The research was based on 789 men who were enrolled in the study at age 54. Doctors followed their health for 19 years, and 57 of the men suffered strokes.

When the study began in 1967, 99 of the men's mothers and 59 of their fathers had died of strokes. Nearly 20 percent of the men whose mothers had died of strokes suffered strokes themselves, compared with less than 7 percent of the other men.

However, those whose fathers died of the disease did not appear to have an increased risk of stroke.

Rampants Picked High In Big East

By WOODY PEELE

Reflector Sports Editor

Rose High School's football Rampants picked a bad year to change their opening date.

In the past, the Rampants have traditionally opened their season on the second play day, which falls this year on Sept. 4. But this year, they moved their opening game to Aug. 28, moving their open date back to just prior to the start of the Big East Conference start.

And, just like Ol' Murphy's Law, it happened. First the American Legion baseball team advanced to the Eastern State finals, keeping three members of the team, quarterback Tom Moye, tailback/defensive back Axel Smith and fullback/linebacker David Daniels off the field for over a week.

Then, three other members of the squad, including starting tailback/defensive end Timmy Moore, along with quarterback reserve Jamie Brewington and end/cornerback Abram Lang, a potential starter, still have yet to officially join the team. They've been involved in play with the Babe Ruth League all-stars who began play in that organization's World Series last Sunday. Play could continue in that until this Saturday.

"It's hurt us, sure," Coach Chip Williams said. "And it's having an affect on the team. It's not that we're working hard, but we know that there are still people who are not there who can be important to the team."

But, Williams added, he is pleased with the way those involved in baseball play have come out to work when they were in town, getting their conditioning phase out of the way and getting some contact work in.

Brewington is currently number three at quarterback behind Tom Moye and Don Thompson, while Lang would be number three at split end. But Moore is a potential starter both at tailback and defensive end.

While most observers are picking Rocky Mount to win the Big East this year, they are also looking at Rose as the potential number two team and the heir apparent should the Gryphons stumble. "A lot of that is based on the fact that our junior varsity team did well last year, but we don't take that many kids up. So I think it remains to be seen how well we'll do," Williams said.

"We don't have the size we did last year. And we haven't won a 100-meter dash with a football player since I've been here, so you can't say we've got blazing speed.

"However, we do have good quickness. Right now we just have to put it together and use it to our advantage," Williams said.

"I think we can be good this year. And I'll be disappointed if we don't make the playoffs — but then that's always my hope — reaching the playoffs," he added.

Williams said that Rocky Mount has the most players returning. "We've got four on offense and maybe six or seven on defense. Northeastern has a lot of kids back and they are going to be very, very good. Hunt has the best running back in the conference and they are usually tough on defense. Northern Nash has tradition and a lot of things going for them. Fike is improved.

"Really, I see it as a five-team race where anyone can whip anyone. Fike is the dark horse," Williams said.

Offensively, Rose will stick with the I-formation in 1987, and Williams looks to have a rather balanced attack. "I think we'll be able to throw the ball well and I think we will be able to run it well too," he said.

Moye (6-0, 185, Sr.), who saw some action at quarterback last year, returns to hold the reins this season. "I thought Tom had an excellent scrimmage (last Thursday) even though he didn't play much. He understands out system as well as any quarterback I've ever had at this point of the season. I have confidence in him in every phase of the game," Williams said.

Don Thompson (5-11, 185, Jr.) is the prime backup, followed by Brewington (6-2, 175, Jr.).

The tailback situation is good, despite the late start of Moore. Axel Smith (5-8, 175, Sr.) and Rexter Williams (5-8, 160, Sr.) occupy the spot now, but Moore (5-9, 210, Jr.) will make a strong bid for the job when he returns. "With all three of them playing defense, too, they will see a lot of alternating back there," Williams said.

The same is true at fullback, where Adrian Barnhill (6-0, 215, Sr.) returns as one of the starters. He's backed up by David Daniels (5-11, 215, Sr.). Both are strong runners and should both see a lot of duty. Moore will also see some action here, too.

Two backs off the junior varsity, Tony Williams (6-0, 180, Jr.) and Freddie Best (5-10, 175, Jr.) will also be in line to see action in the backfield.

The wide outs — the flanker and the split end — will be interchangeable. Vying for jobs there are Jeff Mahoney (5-10, 170, Sr.), Eric Morris (5-9, 150, Jr.), Malcom Wilson (6-1, 180, Jr.), Johnny Ebron (6-1, 180, Jr.) and Wayne Meads (5-8, 165, Jr.). Lang (6-1, 180, Jr.) will also see action here once he rejoins the team from baseball.

"There are three or four kids that we'll be seeing at tight end," Williams said. "Stacy Best (6-4, 195, Sr.) caught the ball very well in summer drills. We also have Carlester Crumpler (6-5, 195, Jr.), D.J. Wightman (6-1, 180, Jr.) and Lang here. Billy Carr (6-0, 195, Jr.) could play some here or at fullback." Jay Mattox (6-2, 200, Sr.) returns at

Rocky Mount Is Big East Choice

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Perennial power Rocky Mount would appear to be the favorite as the 1987 Big East 4-A Conference football race gets underway.

But most coaches also call this center for the Rampants, while Steve Tripp (5-10, 180, Jr.) and Kevin Goodrich (5-10, 194, So.) will also be involved in the action.

Rampants...

Barry Murry (5-10, 205, Sr.) returns at one of the guard slots while Gerald O'Koth (5-8, 175, Sr.) will hold the other. "We're still waiting for someone else to step forward to give us some depth," Williams said.

Tommy Baker (6-2, 200, Sr.) is a returning tackle, while Raleigh Fuller (6-2, 210, Jr.) will join him in a starting role. "Again, we are looking for backup people here," Williams said. The current backups, Tim Hines (6-2, 225, Jr.) and McKinley Simmons (6-1, 210, Jr.) are defensive starters.

On defense, the Rampants will continue to operate out of the 4-4 lineup. Daniels, Barnhill and Murry all return from last year at the inside linebacker slots.

The outside spots, however, will be filled by newcomers. Crumpler has looked good so far at one position, while Tony Williams has looked good at the other. Mike House, (5-8, 180, Sr.) and Moore, when he returns, will figure in here also.

Shelton Northern (6-0, 215, Jr.) and Clarence Baker (5-9, 185, Sr.) both return at the tackles, but again Williams is still searching for depth at the position.

Hines and Simmons will be at the guards, while Torrence Green (5-10, 175, Jr.) and Baker provide depth.

Smith, Best, Rexter Williams, Wilson, Morris and Carr will all be seeing action in the secondary.

As for the kicking game, Williams said that he was somewhat frantic about that phase of the game when practice started. "We lost Robbie McDonald, who had been a very good placekicker for the past two years," he said. "And we had no one to take his place."

But then, the sophomore Goodrich showed up and asked for a shot. While he still hasn't faced game conditions, he has proved good thus far, kicking a 35-yard field goal in practice. "He's been consistent, but I'm not sure whether he or Moore will do the kicking off."

Moye will probably handle the punting again. "He's been consistent between 35 and 40 yards a kick, and has boomed some well over 50."

Williams feels that discipline will be the key for the Rampants. "One thing we are going to have to do is not stop ourselves. I think we can move the ball, and if we are stopped, it's because we've stopped ourselves. We have to find some depth and we have to avoid injuries in key positions, especially the line. If we have some injuries there, it could be fatal."

year's race one of the best ever in the league. Defending champion Northern Nash, which went to the state finals last season, along with Elizabeth City Northeastern, Wilson Hunt and Greenville Rose all look to have the potential to come through for the championship.

Wilson Fike is expected to be the dark horse of the league, while Beddingfield and Kinston are not expected to advance much from last year.

ROCKY MOUNT

Rocky Mount (5-2 Big East, 6-4 overall last year) returns experience everywhere but in defensive line, according to Coach George Kelly.

"I think we're in good shape offensively with eight starters back," Kelly said. Tops among them are Tim Kilpatrick at quarterback, who threw for 1,241 yards last year, and fullback Boo Boo Lancaster and tailback Wayne McKnight. "I look for Tim to pick up where he left off, and both of the backs have good size."

Also back are Donald Thomas at receiver, who was an all-conference free safety. Myron Sharpe, another all conference player, returns at linebacker.

"We have to stay injury free with only 35 players on the varsity," Kelly said. "But we shouldn't have many going both ways unless it is because of the defensive line."

NORTHERN NASH

Northern Nash Coach Mickey Bridgers said that he is hopeful that something from last year's team that was 7-0 in the league and 12-2 overall, finishing second in the state playoffs.

"You always want to have the type program where the kids can be enthusiastic and up for a repeat, but it's awfully hard. I think we have the potential, but the conference as a whole is so much stronger this year than last. We're young, having lost 22 lettermen with just 15 back," Bridgers said.

Four starters return on offense and four on defense. Tim Marshman was an all-conference pick in the secondary and will also be the quarterback for the Knights.

Returning on offense will be Tony Leonard (210) at tackle and Aaron Beshears (190) at center, along with tailback Lewis Speight, who rushed for 500 yards in five games before missing the rest of the year with an injury. Curtis Jones, who replaced him is also back. He ran for 950 yards in nine games. Speight is expected to move to fullback this year. Rounding out the offensive returnees is split end Deon Evans.

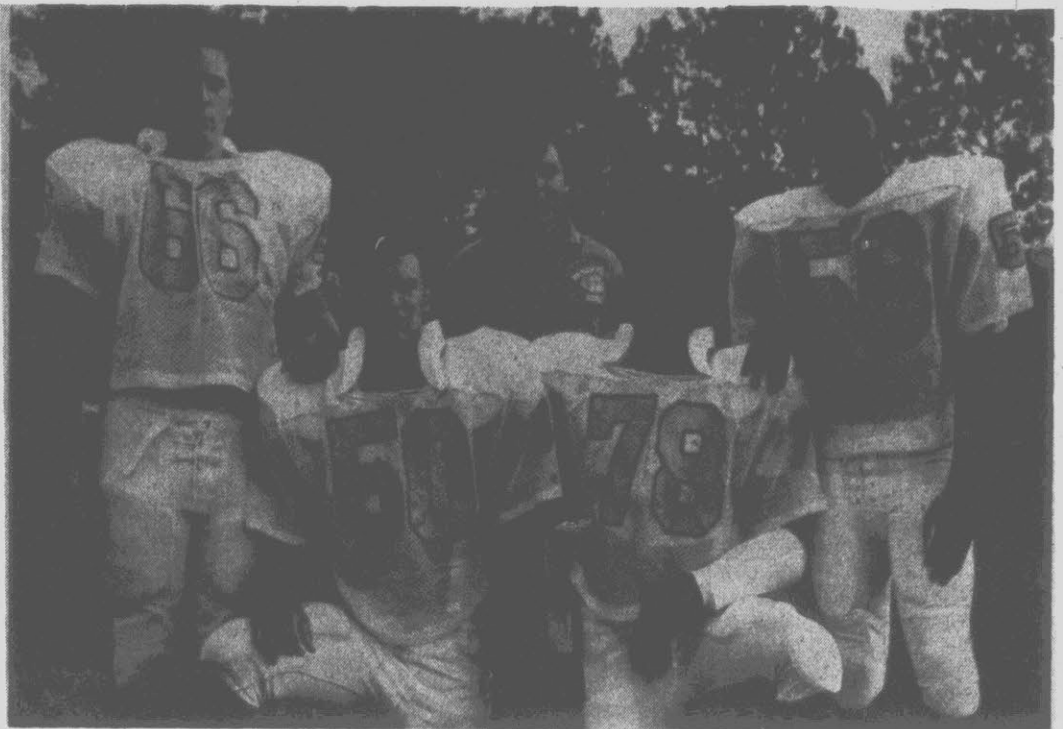

Defensive starters back include Marshman, Vernon Cooper, a 250-pound tackle; linebacker Lee Boone and end Foster Wilkins.

FIKE

Fike High School (4-3, 5-5) has a new coach in William Huffstetler and is thought of as a darkhorse for the 1987 season.

While the coach said it is difficult to pinpoint to the top people at this time, he anticipates tight end Carlyle Williams (6-4, 218) to be a good all-around player. Two others are senior

Conley Talented But Unpolished

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

HOLLYWOOD — The D.H. Conley Vikings have a new football coach this year, and he admits that he has a lot of talent to work with.

But, Steve Craft added, much of the talent is unpolished and raw. Whether it will all fit together is the big question.

Craft inherits a team that won a conference championship two seasons ago, then slipped to 1-5 in the 3-A Coastal Conference and 2-8 overall. That left the Vikings in a three way tie for fifth (and last).

Oddly enough, however, some of the coaches in the Coastal are pointing to Conley as a potential dark horse for the 1987 campaign. Craft doubts that can come about.

"I don't think you could rate us as a favorite," he said. "Havelock has so much back. I see them up there. West Craven is good too and North Lenoir is another possibility. The rest are a bunch of unknowns. With four new coaches in the conference, you haven't got a lot of continuity."

And therein may lie another of the Viking problems since Craft is one of those four newcomers. "I really don't know if it will be a problem," Craft said. "The kids have seem to have adapted well to the new schemes — and everything is new this year. I don't think we've had any more problems that we might have had anyway. In fact we may be a little further along than most because of the work habits they are developing."

And Craft added that while the heat has slowed some of the progress, he is generally pleased with the way things have gone to this point.

season until the second play date, on Sept. 4 (hosting Ayden-Grifton) and Craft is thankful for that. "It gives us a little more preparation time, but the kids do get anxious (to play) ... practice ain't no fun. But it does give us more time to get things in."

While Craft said he didn't put a lot in the number of starters back, he thinks there are about four on each side of the ball. "It doesn't mean a lot. Everyone is new, the players and the coaches, so what you do in the first four weeks is what counts."

While Craft is carrying about 30 on the varsity squad, he still anticipates a number of players going both ways, at least early in the year. "I hope we can get to more one-way performers. I'd like to be able to platoon, but I just don't think we have the numbers to do it."

On offense, the Vikings will use a multiple I formation.

And much of the offense will be built around the abilities of senior quarterback Bronswell Patrick, 6-1, 190. "He's a good player, a talented young man, and he's adapting well after a late start (due to American Legion baseball). We will definite try to throw the ball this year," Craft said. "I'm a former wide receiver and I like to throw the ball. With Bronswell, our quarterback position is probably our most solid."

Backing up Patrick — and getting some benefit from his late start — is sophomore Scott Seymour (6-0, 155), who should also see some playing time.

"We don't have a lot of experience in the rest of the backfield," Craft said. Donte Williams and Aaron Freeman, who ran there last year, have been shifted into the line because of their bulk. Darrell Simpson (5-11, 190, Jr.), Anthony Perry (6-0, 200, Jr.) and Mike Williams (6-0, 180, So.) are all working at fullback. Perry has some limited experience.

Ardee Anderson (5-8, 160, Sr.) saw some action at tailback too and leads the candidates for that position.

Tyrone Turnage (5-11, 165, Jr.) hasn't played since junior high. "Anderson has the experience but Turnage is very talented," Craft said. "With experience, I think we can have two very talented runners."

Chuckie Gardner (5-10, 165, Sr.), Derrick Credle (5-11, 170, Sr.) and Travis Clemons (6-0, 165, Jr.) are all out for the first time at the flanker position. Paul Merritt (6-4, 190, So.) and Jason Hanby (6-0, 175, Jr.) are at the split end position. "Merritt has excellent hands and good speed. Hanby has experience in Ohio and he's a hitter."

At the tight end position will be either Martin Patrick (6-5, 190, So.), Leon Joyner (5-11, 165, Sr.) and Howard Gaitner (6-1, 170, Sr.).

Craft also noted that at times, the split end will move inside as a tight end, and could play either inside or outside the flanker.

Chris Lindsey (6-1, 185, Jr.) has been converted from tight end as a junior varsity player to the center slot. "He's been a bright spot and has come along well," Craft said. Robbie Little (5-9, 205, Sr.) is also working at center and may also see some action at a guard slot.

Williams (5-11, 190, Sr.) and Aaron Freeman (5-9, 205, Sr.) move from the backfield to the guard positions this fall. "Freeman is our strongest player, bench pressing over 400 pounds," Craft noted. "They have been bright spots in our line, making the conversion well and doing a good job." Kevin Daniels (5-9, 165, So.) and Chad Roberson (5-11, 175, Jr.) also are in the battle for a starting role at guard.

At tackle, things are a little more indefinite because of injuries. Todd

Rams, Eagles Coastal Favorites

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Havelock High School posted a 6-0 Coastal Conference record in 1987 and was 14-1 overall bowing only to Shelby, 9-6, in the state 3-A championship finals.

The Rams also posted a 9-1 record with their junior varsity team, and, despite some losses in personnel, are the favorites to repeat as league champions in 1987.

West Craven, meanwhile, was 5-1 in the league and went 10-2 overall, advancing to the second round before losing out in the playoffs. Gone is All-Stater Jesse Campbell in the backfield, but the Eagles are expected to return enough to challenge for the title.

WEST CRAVEN

Coach Clay Jordan would have one believe that things aren't that rosy for the Eagles, however.

"We lost 17 seniors and 2,400 yards rushing from the backfield," he said. "We have only two offensive linemen returning and three starters on defense. We have a lot of seniors starting, but they have little experience."

"But they do have good work habits and that helps. Still, we have no quarterback who has taken a varsity snap and only one running back who has carried the ball. We don't have much size with only two players over 200 and they are just over 200."

"We do have speed and we will hit you if we can catch you. Depth is a problem with only seven people we can really call offensive linemen and three we can call running backs."

One of those running backs, however, is Campbell's mate, Derrick Booker, who raced for 1,100 yards last season. "He's small, but he can fly," Jordan admits. Also returning are tackles John Taylor and Brad White, who will anchor the line.

Top people back on defense include Van Freeman who moves to middle linebacker and William Chapman at tackle.

"With four new coaches in the league, it's hard to say what's going to happen," Jordan said. "But I do think we have a chance to get back in the playoffs. Havelock has to be the favorite with their 9-1 jayvee team and 15 or 16 back off last year's team."

NORTH LENOIR

Doug Hill lost 14 seniors off last year's team that went 4-2 in the league and 6-5 overall, earning a spot in the playoffs for the first time in the school's history. That was in spite of the fact that the Hawks have never finished below third place.

"We have only 28 players out, with just two offensive starters back and six on defense. So defense will carry us. It's been our strong suit for several years and I expect it to continue," Hill said.

Tailback Dennis Jones, fullback Coy Jackson and lineman Burt Hoell are the top players on offense. Defensively, Hoell at tackle, Scotty Barnhill at safety and Heath Atkins at inside linebacker should lead the way.

"I'd like to at least equal last year and get back into the playoffs," Hill said of his team's chances. "It should be Havelock, then West Craven, then ... well, it's anybody."

HAVELOCK

Havelock's Rams come off a fine 14-1 season in 1986 when they went to the state finals before losing. They swept through the Coastal with a perfect 6-0 mark.

That, coupled with the fact that the junior varsity team went 9-1 has made the Rams the favorite this year.

Coach Wilbur Sasser laughs over that. "They always pick us, so there's nothing new about that," he said. "But we don't win every year. I do think we have as good a shot as anyone, but I'd pick West Craven and Conley to be the best. They both have good athletes, but Conley has a new coach and I don't know how they'll respond to him."

The Rams, meanwhile, lost nine of 11 starters on offense, and Sasser says that is the biggest problem the team faces — replacing them. "We lost some great athletes, but we do have six back on defense and they will help us there. We're coming along and getting better. And I think we will improve as the season goes along. We do have some good athletes."

"Our non-conference schedule is the toughest it's ever been, however," he added.

Much of the offensive pressure will be laid on the shoulders of quarterback Ledel George. "He's a very proficient thrower and I expect us to throw the ball more than any other Havelock team in the past. He's got a strong, accurate arm. If we can get the blocking, I think we can have a very good passing game."

The two returning offensive players are guard Brad Craig and end Steven Doub, both of whom are three-year veterans. Another players of whom much is expected is senior tackle Levon Morris, who has been on the varsity since he was a freshman.

Doub and Morris will also play a big role on defense, at end and guard, respectively. Craig will play at middle linebacker and Walter Goodwin at outside linebacker, while George will lead the secondary.

"How quickly our totally new offensive unit comes around and how quickly we learn to play at the varsity level will determine our season," Sasser said.

WEST CARTERET

West Carteret is one of the three schools in the conference with a new football coach in Ed Hiatt. The Patriots went 1-5 in the conference and 2-8 overall.

There are no returning starters on the team, and five juniors who have never played. Sophomores will start at six positions on offense. The Patriots are small and don't have a great deal of speed.

Top players could be Robert Reynolds at tailback and Mike Davis at fullback. Todd Kramer also has a great deal of position at tackle on both sides of the ball. Mike Homan, a sophomore, moves up from the junior varsity to handle the varsity quarterbacking duties.

On defense, the Patriots will run a 52-lineup, while running from the pro I on offense.

The attitude is good however, and Hiatt thinks that the future lies ahead for the team.

EAST CARTERET

East Carteret could be the sleeper in the conference. The biggest problem the Mariners face is the lack of numbers, with only nine lettermen returning.

Five starters return on offense and eight on defense giving Coach George Viereck a good nucleus to build around.

The Mariners look to Russell Reed to spark their offense with his running. Milton Johnson, another back, also should be an effective ball carrier.

However, Viereck still hasn't settled on a quarterback, with three players vying for the job. The coach believes that any of the three will be adequate for the job.

Defensively, top players should be Dee Morris, 5-10, 240, and Scott Henry, 6-2, 260. They will anchor the line. The defensive formation is nominally a 4-4, but the ends will actually be linebackers also, giving them six across the line.

Conley...

Holloway (6-2, 210, Jr.) and Larry Wilson (6-0, 190, So.) both started out well, but the former has been slowed by a pulled muscle and the latter has a sprained knee. Kevin Moye (6-2, 225, Sr.) will probably handle one of the tackle slots.

"We're thin in the offensive line right now. We will probably be making a couple of other conversions to try and shore up the line," Craft said.

On defense, the Vikings will use a 60 scheme. "You always try to feel that the defense is ahead of time at this time of year," he said. "Right now our defense is coming. The kids are adjusting to the multiple scheme and have an idea about what we're trying to do."

Donte Williams, Freeman, Perry and Mike Williams are the top candidates for the inside linebacking positions.

Anderson, Gardner and possibly some of the inside people could end up as defensive ends.

The tackle spots will be handled by Martin Patrick, Hamby, Lindsey, Holloway, and Wilson. Kyle Jarman (6-1, 170, Jr.) is also a candidate here.

The defensive guards will be manned by Joyner, Daniels, Moye, Little and Simpson.

Bronswell Patrick and Merritt vie for free safety, while Credle and Seymour will handle one corner and Turnage and Robert Staton (5-8, 150, Sr.) will battle for the other.

Hall Dunn (5-11, 165, Sr.) will handle the PAT kicks and short field goals. "I have right much confidence in him, but we don't have a long field goal kicker," Craft said.

As to punting, Craft said that when practice started the Vikings didn't have one. "We have three now, Clemens, Seymour and Turnage. All have about the same leg. It's just a matter of which one gets consistency quicker." Seymour was the kicker for the jayvees last year.

"We have a lot of first year players in key positions," Craft said. "How fast they come around determines how we'll do. We have some good points and some weak points — and we have a lot of points to work on."

"Actually, I don't think what we do this year is that important. We're trying to build a program, not just do a band-aid job on it."

Chargers Return Heart Of Squad

By TOM MORRIS

Reflector Sports Writer

The Ayden-Grifton Chargers, coming off an 8-3 season, return the heart of their Eastern Plains Conference co-champion squad with the only major change coming at the head coaching position where B.T. Chappell assumes command.

Chappell replaces Dwight Tart, who moved on to Harnett Central.

Chappell begins his second head-coaching stint in the EPC. He compiled a 10-18-2 mark in three seasons at North Pitt from 1981-1983.

A coaching change can often be disruptive for a team but the transition at Ayden-Grifton has gone well, according to Chappell.

"I believe it's worked real well," he said. "It's been a lot easier and a lot better than I thought it was going to be. I was worried to begin with that some of the seniors might be comparing me to the old coach but I think the way things have gone thus far they have accepted things real well.

"We seem to have a good attitude. We've got some good seniors. They've got to come through with the leadership this year and make this team work."

The Chargers did lose a few key players off last year's team, but the caliber of the returning players softens the loss considerably. No where is this more true than at running back.

At most schools, the loss of tailback Jessie Hooker, who totaled 1,313 yards rushing last year, would be catastrophic. But at Ayden-Grifton, there is little worry since Eric Blount, who had 851 yards rushing and 1,605 all-purpose yards in 1986, returns and will be joined in the Chargers' new T-formation backfield by Tony Reeves, who had over 2,000 yards rushing for the JV team last season.

Chappell said the Chargers will still use some of last year's I-formation attack but that with the wing T-set, they have added versatility.

"We do have two good, quick running backs in Eric Blount and Tony Reeves," Chappell said. "If we stayed in the I, they'd have to be splitting time back there. This way both of them get a chance to run in the same backfield at the same time."

In addition to Blount (5-11, 170, Sr.) and Reeves (5-11, 175, Jr.), Chappell also has both fullbacks returning in Aaron Harper (6-1, 200, Jr.) and Ronnell Peterson (6-1, 190, Jr.), who combined for 474 yards rushing last season while also clearing the way for Hooker and Blount.

Other candidates in the backfield include halfback James Woodard (5-9, 150, Jr.) and Curtis Blount (5-11, 170, Sr.), who is the fastest player on the team but in his first year of high school football.

Also returning on offense are center Reggie Jackson (5-11, 175, Sr.) and guard Steven Tucker (6-1, 210, Sr.).

Guards Cell Stokes (5-11, 165, Sr.) and Ben Vaughn (6-0, 175, Sr.) were part-time players a year ago and will also see plenty of action, according to Chappell.

The tackle slots will be manned by George Fuller (6-3, 240, Jr.) and James Collins (5-11, 220, Jr.).

"The majority of our leadership has to come from the offensive line," Chappell said. "We've got three seniors at the guards. All of them will be splitting time."

Last year's ends are gone and competition for their spots is still going on.

"That's where we're the most unsure right now," Chappell said. "We're thinking about switching some running backs over to the ends. Ronnell Peterson will be doing some time over at the end."

Other candidates include Kelvin Ellison (5-11, 160, Jr.) and Jeff Barrett (6-2, 170, Jr.).

Darryl Moye (5-8, 140, Jr.) is running number one at the quarterback position with Ty Little (5-11, 160, Sr.)

challenging after a late start due to American Legion baseball. Little will handle the punting chores.

On defense, the Chargers will employ a six-man front, keyed by the linebackers, where Tucker and Jackson return as starters. Stokes and Vaughn will also see time here.

Fuller, Collins and Terrell Braxton (5-10, 250, Sr.) will all play at defensive tackle, while Eurskine Lyons (5-11, 160, Jr.) and Cedric Prayer (5-10, 171, Jr.) look to man the defensive guard spots.

The ends will be Peterson and Ellison.

"I only need two linebackers," Chappell said. "We'll be using some others in other positions. Ben Vaughn will probably be playing defensive guard some. We'll be moving them around."

Little and Blount are returning starters in the secondary at corner and safety, respectively. Other players who will challenge for time in the defensive backfield are Moye, Woodard and Terry Dixon (5-11, 165, Jr.) at corner and David Dixon (5-9, 150, Jr.) at safety.

Chappell said there would be a lot of personnel moving around on defense.

"We've got a lot of people that can play a lot of positions," he said. "We're looking at an opportunity where we are going to switch some people up and give them rest."

"The main thing I'm worried about is staying healthy. We (also) need to establish a passing game. That's one of the keys right now."

The Chargers have a tough schedule this season, opening at Wallace-Rose Hill before taking on 3-A D.H. Conley, 4-A Kinston and 3-A Washington before starting conference play.

Next year, 1988, is the final year of the current realignment program of the North Carolina High School Athletic Association. During the coming year, studies will be made concerning a new realignment, which will become effective in 1989 and carry through 1992.

Under the present program of the NCHSAA, realignment will be restudied each four years.

Two different plans are being considered as a basis for the 1990 lineup. One would follow the plan used four years ago when the current system was put in place. That roughly divided the state into four different classifications based on a 25-25-25-25 percentage on each. A variation would place 20 percent each in the 4-A and 1-A, and 30 percent each into the 3-A and 2-A.

And there could be some changes in the five area conferences, assuming attendance figures change little between now and next year.

The Big East has one of the largest variances between its member schools.

Blount Takes Offensive Reins

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

LITTLE FIELD — Last year Jesse Hooker ran for 1,313 yards for Ayden-Grifton but now he's gone.

At some schools, it might be time to panic, but not at Ayden-Grifton where Eric Blount is set to take over the reins for the Chargers.

Last year Blount played wingback in the Chargers' I-formation, tailback-oriented attack as the Chargers went 8-3 and were the co-champions of the Eastern Plains Conference.

Still, Blount totaled 1,605 yards in total offense, including 851 yards rushing, while leading the Eastern Plains Conference in scoring with 102 points and 16 touchdowns.

This year, under new coach B.T. Chappell, Blount will line up as one of the halfbacks in the Chargers' new wing T offensive formation.

"It's a couple of adjustments," Blount said of the new offensive set. "It's different than the I because you can run so many more plays from the T than you can from the I. You can't key on one person."

Blount, a three-sports star who is attracting attention from colleges in both football and basketball, is one of the fastest players on the Charger team and it is that attribute that sets him apart, according to Chappell.

"He's the type player (that is) a game-breaker," he said. "He's able to find the holes. You may hold him to no yards, no yards, no yards and then all of a sudden he might break one 70 yards."

"He's got the capability that if you give him daylight, he can take it all the way."

Blount said he is happy to be back at halfback where he can best utilize his speed and quickness but that he is willing to play anywhere.

"I think I'm pretty quick for a running back (but) I'll play any position that will help the team win," he said. "It's my senior season and I want to put forth the effort to make the team win. Coach Chappell is a good coach and I know the players are going to be behind him."

"Most of the seniors have never played under him before but the rest of the team has. I know he's a good coach because he had a good program at the junior high."

Chappell said Blount will take on a major role this year.

"He'll get it (the ball) more than he did last year," he said. "He ran at the wingback spot last year and he didn't touch it that often. (This year) he's going to be called on to do a lot of different things. We are going to use him as a receiver, as a back and we'll rely on him heavily in the kicking team."

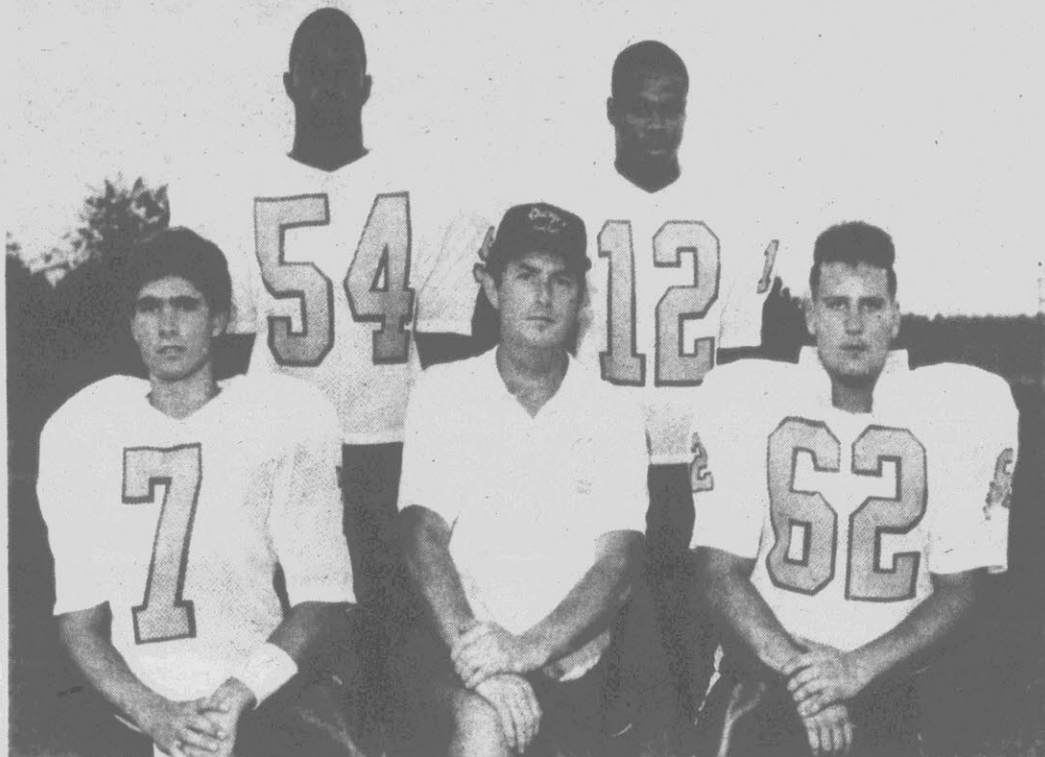

The success of Blount and the T-formation will go along way towards deciding whether the Chargers have a chance to repeat in the EPC.

"We're going to have to play together and I think depth is going to be a factor too," Blount said. "We have good depth. We've got a lot of juniors."

"The (top) teams (in the EPC) are going to be North Pitt, Farmville Central and probably Pamlico," Blount said.

The North Pitt game, in particular, looms big in Blount's mind.

"We only lost by one point (to the Panthers) last year," he said. "It was a hard loss."

Unlike most top high school football players, Blount has to choose more than just a school when the season is over. He has to choose which sport he would like to play in college.

"He's definitely a major college prospect," Chappell said. "He's got good potential. He's attracted attention in both basketball and football."

Blount said he'd like to play both sports next year but would wait until after the basketball season before he makes any decisions.

Playoffs

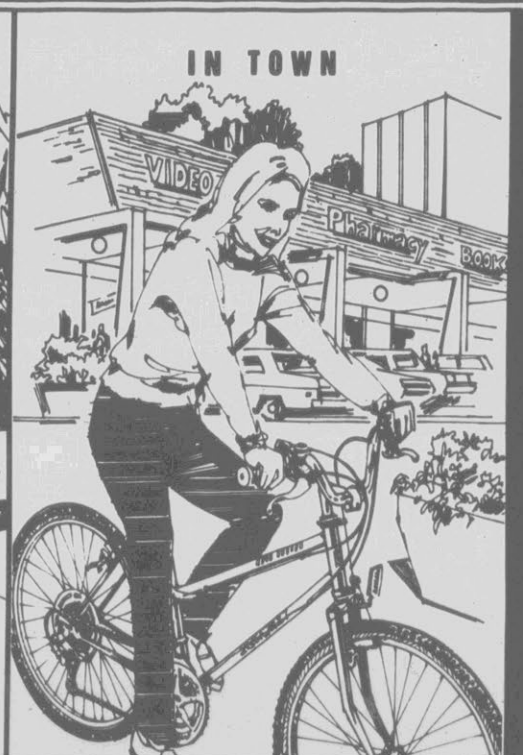

The five area football conferences will place a total of 16 teams into the 1987 North Carolina High School Athletic Association's state playoffs.

The Big East 4-A Conference will receive three berths in that classification's playoffs as does the 3-A Coastal Conference. The Big East and Coastal winner and runner-up will all have home games for the first round while the number three teams travel.

In the 2-A ranks, the Eastern Plains winner and runner-up are at home to the Northeastern third and second place team, respectively, while the Northeastern winner hosts the EPC's number three team.

The Tobacco Belt's winner and runner-up are at home in the 1-A playoffs' first round, while the third and fourth team travel.

Jaguars Seek To Move Upward

By TOM MORRIS

Reflector Sports Writer

FARMVILLE — Attitude and determination will have a lot to do with whether or not Farmville Central is able to improve on last year's fourth place finish in the Eastern Plains conference, according to head coach Dixon Sauls.

"Realistically, I think we'll need a few breaks," Sauls said. "We'll have to have a very positive attitude. We're not an experienced team. We'll have to look to improve weekly. Our attitude and determination will have a lot to do with it."

The Jaguars return five starters on both offense and defense from last year's 4-6 team. In addition, Farmville will employ the I-formation on offense this season after utilizing the T-formation for years.

"Last year, we changed to the I halfway through the season," Sauls said. "This is the first time in my 10 years as head coach that I have committed (totally) to the I. We feel like we need to be a little more wide open on offense. We were having trouble getting enough backs to run the T formation. We're pleased with what we've accomplished to date."

The Jaguars do return halfback Gary Moore, who suffered through an injury plagued 1986 season after earning All-Area honors as a sophomore with over 1,000 yards rushing.

Moore will play either tailback or fullback, depending on the development of sophomore fullbacks Billy Hardison (5-11, 209) and Calvin Jordan (5-7, 158).

Whether Moore can return to his 1985 form remains to be seen.

"We won't know until he gets into competition," Sauls said. "I was very disappointed for Gary and our team last year. He was injured last year. I think he's healthy now. It's up to him to motivate himself."

The biggest determinant of the Jaguars success could be the development of a young offensive line that returns two starters in tackle William Johnson (5-9, 238) and guard Michael Pickett (6-1, 192). A third starter, Gary Tripp (6-1, 185) switches from center to end.

"That is the big question," Sauls said. "We're very inexperienced. That was one of our glaring weaknesses last year. Our entire blocking was not up to par. We're very inexperienced. We have as many as six new starters."

"Through experience, this offensive line will become a better executing line."

Joining Pickett and Johnson on the offensive line will be right tackle Moses Streeter (5-11, 190) and center Scott Gardner (5-8, 180). The other guard will be either Eric Hale (5-9, 162) or Chevalier Jefferson (6-1, 182). Two other players challenging for playing time are tackle Kevin Wade (6-6, 315) and center-tackle Brent Ellis (5-11, 198 Jr.).

The quarterback will be Mack Davis (5-7, 150, Jr.). "He's not a natural quarterback," Sauls said. "He's a running back who we have converted to quarterback. We feel he'll be very capable once he gets experience."

Tripp will man one end position while Chris Ross (5-8, 178) or Alexander Daniels (6-4, 182) will play the other position. The split ends will come from either Elvis McFee (6-0, 189), Dennis Edmonds (5-9, 150) or Phillip White (5-10, 145).

Colleges Eye Area's Prospects

By TOM MORRIS

Reflector Sports Writer

For many of the top football players in Pitt County, their final year of high school will be an opportunity to move up in the eyes of the college recruiters, according to recruiting analyst John Ralston.

Based in the Asheville area, Ralston provides information on the top high school football players in the state to area colleges and universities.

A number of the top football players in the area are called follow prospects, Ralston said. A typical example is North Pitt's Ashley Sheppard, a 6-3, 210 end-linebacker.

"He's listed as a follow," Ralston said. "Presently he is not necessarily a Division I prospect by two or more schools. He is a kid the (Division I) schools want to follow during his senior year. I feel like he'll get a number of contacts. It depends on his senior year whether he'll be a division I prospect."

Sheppard caught 34 passes for 511 yards during his junior season and also was the leading tackler for the Panthers.

His teammate, quarterback Calvin Hunter, who passed for 628 yards, falls into the same category, Ralston said: Other follow-up prospects include Farmville running back Gary Moore, Conley lineman Donte Williams and North Pitt lineman Jesse Frank.

Ralston said Conley quarterback Bronswell Patrick is attracting attention but not necessarily as a quarterback.

"They have him listed as a Division I prospect with a good senior season," he said. "He's such a good athlete that he might not be a prospect (at quarterback) but he could play several positions."

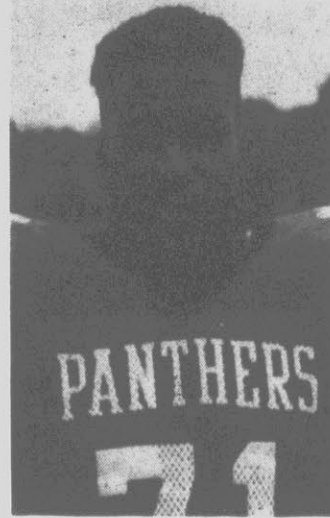

Rose tailback Timmy Moore, a 5-9, 200-pound junior, has attracted Ralston's attention.

"He appears to be a potential budding superstar," he said. "He is a kid that has to be watched very closely."

Across the state there are about 75 of these follow-up prospects. "It will vary year to year," Ralston said. "Out of the 75 follows, maybe anywhere from five to 20 will make it. Twenty is rare, five is more accurate."

One of the top prep players in the East is running back Derrick Booker of West Craven.

"(He's) one of the better (prospects) in the state," Ralston said. "If he has the grades, he's definitely a division I prospect. From what I've been told he also plays several posi-

Jesse Frank

Jay Pittard of Roanoke Rapids is another one of the East's best players, according to Ralston. "He has great feet. He has excellent upper body strength. He's one of the better prospects around," he said.

Other top prospects in the East include quarterback Dexter Davis of Ahoskie (6-5, 190), linebacker Chester McGlocklin of Whiteville (6-5, 225) and lineman Jason Ornsby of Fayetteville 71st.

Patrick, Williamston wide receiver Felix Purvis (6-2, 180), Pittard, Ornsby, New Bern running back Tracy Murphy (5-10, 180), Moore, Rocky Mount kicker Tim Kilpatrick (6-0, 170), Williamston fullback Francisco Clifford (6-1, 222), Roanoke Rapids quarterback Walter Jones (6-2, 185), McGlockton, Booker, Davis, Roanoke Rapids tight end Brad Alexander (6-4, 240) and Elizabeth City-Northeastern lineman Link Brook (6-2, 235) all were selected to the Greensboro News and Record's Top 100 High School Seniors' List.

tions. They say the kid is a pretty darn good defensive back. He has very good hands. He could also be a wide out."

Jaguars...

On defense the Jaguars will be using an eight-man front and many of their players will play both ways.

The outside linebackers will be Jefferson and Moore, who was a starter in the secondary last year. Tripp and Eric Hale will be the inside linebackers.

The defensive tackles will come from Pickett, Hardison and Streeter. Johnson, Gardner and Edmonds are competing for the two defensive guard slots.

The secondary returns Mack Davis and Rasel Daniels, who will also spell Moore at tailback. Joining Daniels in the secondary will be Chris Ross, with Alexander Daniels and McFee also competing for time.

"We're coming off a losing year. We're limited in some areas," Sauls said. "Leadership must emerge in the next month."

Sauls, though, said he is optimistic, especially for the future since the Jaguars were able to field a JV team for the first time in three years.

The Jaguars open with North Edgecombe on Aug. 28th.

Panthers Primed For Challenge

By TOM MORRIS

Reflector Sports Writer

BETHEL — With a host full of starters returning off last year's 9-2 team, North Pitt head football coach Larry Bolger knows the opposition will be gunning for his team each and every week.

"We're expecting to repeat," Bolger said. "Everybody is pointing their finger at North Pitt. Last year we were picked to be in the running. This year, everybody has got us picked. We're going to have to be ready to play every ball game."

And the Panthers should be. They return All-Area quarterback Calvin Hunter and All-Area end Ashley Sheppard. The Panthers also return two starters on the offensive line along with fullback Collier Mullins and last year's number three receiver, Reggie Daniels.

Hunter, (6-8, 183, Sr.), threw for 628 yards last season, completing almost 60 percent of his passes for nine scores and three interceptions.

His main target was Sheppard, who had 34 catches for 511 yards. Daniels moves into the other starting end position after being the number three receiver last year.

"At the tackles, we have Tony Hopkins (5-10, 260, Jr.) returning and Jesse Frank (6-3, 240, Sr.)," Bolger said. "Leroy Davenport (5-9, 212, So.) is making a bid to take over a tackle position. At one guard, we have Kevin Briley (5-10, 196, Jr.), who started a year ago. Our other position is open."

North Pitt Panthers

Candidates for that spot include Dennis Palmer (5-10, 170, Jr.) and Matt Davis (6-0, 210, Jr.). Whichever player wins the guard spot, the other will play center, according to Bolger.

In the backfield, the Panthers return Mullins (6-2, 195, Sr.) at fullback but must replace 1,000-yard-rusher Jarvis Massenburg at one halfback slot and workhorse Johnnie Bartlett at the other.

Among the candidates here are Terry Nobles, Billy Hardison and Michael Blow, who ran for over 1,300 yards for the jayvee team in 1986.

Moving to defense, Sheppard heads the returnees from his inside linebacker slot, where he will be joined by Daniels.

"We need a third (linebacker) when we play a 5-3 and we're looking at Michael Daniels (5-10, 180, Jr.)," Bolger said. "He was ineligible last year. He's raw, he hasn't played since junior high. He's an unknown thing right now but he's got 4.2 speed. I didn't believe it when I saw it."

Up front, Nobles returns at nose guard, where he was all-conference a year ago. Flanking him will be Hopkins along with Jesse Frank with Leroy Davenport (5-10, 220, So.) and Mark Hines (6-2, 220, Jr.) as other candidates.

In the secondary, Hardison and Hunter are returning starters. Eldred Smikle moves into a starting position after being a backup a year ago.

The Panthers will be running a lot of players both ways, but that is a familiar story, according to Bolger.

"We sort of do it out of necessity," he said. "Last year, at one time we had eight players going both ways. Again this year, it looks like we're going to have a lot of players going both ways. Hopefully with our conditioning program, we'll be able to tow the line like we did last year."

Bolger is attempting to maintain the year-to-year improvement the Panthers have shown since he started there. After going 0-10 his Northern Nash is the largest with 1,452 in average daily membership in three of four months at the start of the last school year. Beddingfield is the smallest with only 788.

Rocky Mount and Rose come in second and third, respectively with 1,295 and 1,196, while Northeastern is fourth with 1,099.

But, under the 20-30-30-20 plan, those would be the only Big East teams to meet the standard. The remaining members would have to play up to stay in the conference. Kinston, at 992, and Fike at 955, would still fall into the standard with the 25-25-25-25 plan. However, Hunt, at 863 and Beddingfield would be in the 3-A ranks — if they chose to go that route — under either adopted plan.

In the 3-A Coastal Conference, one school, West Carteret, with 978 ADM could move up to 4-A ranks under the 25-25-25-25 plan, but would remain 3-A in the other. North Lenoir with 826, Washington with 813, Conley with 307, Havelock with 753 and West Craven with 624 would remain 3-A.

The latter school, however, would be at the cutoff point for 3-A membership. East Carteret, the other member of the conference, would be 2-A size at 558. East actually was considered 2-A size in the original realignment, but requested 3-A status to avoid a great deal of travel to compete in a conference.

Roanoke Rapids at 596 would lead the Northeastern 2-A Conference, followed by Plymouth at 541, Edenton at 539, Northampton East at 507, Ahoskie at 503, and Williamston at 433. Roanoke, at 412, would fall into the 1-A ranks under the 25-25-25-25 system, but would remain 3-A under the 20-30-30-20 proposal.

Charles B. Aycock at 572, leads the Eastern Plains 2-A Conference, with Greene Central and South Lenoir next at 530 each. North Pitt follows at 509, followed by Farmville Central at 448, Pamlico at 436 and Ayden-Grifton at 422.

All six EPC schools would fall under 2-A guidelines regardless of the program.

Likewise all 10 members of the 1-A Tobacco Belt Conference would remain under 1-A guidelines. Belhaven is the largest now at 335, followed by North Edgecombe at 321. Bath comes next at 247, followed by Chocowinity at 242. Mattamuskeet has 212, Aurora (which dropped football this year) has 183, Columbia 151, Jamesville 150, Creswell 129 and non-football playing Bear Grass trails at 119.

As was done three years ago, some schools will play up or down to remain in their present conferences. However, there may be changes. Some schools have found themselves uncompetitive in these situations and may wish to try their luck in a more comfortable setting.

Only time will tell.

Sheppard, Hunter Lead Panthers

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

BETHEL — As the North Pitt Panthers get ready for the 1987 season, head coach Larry Bolger sports a big smile and two of the main reasons for that smirk are the return of quarterback Calvin Hunter and receiver Ashley Sheppard.

Hunter and Sheppard are four year starters for the Panthers and the leading returning players at their respective positions in the Eastern Plains Conference.

Last year, Hunter passed for 628 yards and nine touchdowns while throwing only three interceptions. His main target was Sheppard, who had 34 receptions for 511 yards and seven scores as the Panthers advanced to the playoffs for the second year in a row.

"They were with us when we were 0-10," Bolger said. "They have grown with us through 6-5 and 9-2 seasons. We're looking for their leadership ability (to show) through their actions on the field. If they can maintain that level of play and help bring the younger boys on, we will be in excellent shape."

Both Sheppard and Hunter are poised for their best seasons yet and determined to get the Panthers past the first round of the playoffs, where they have lost each of the last two years.

"I think it's been a jinx," Sheppard said jokingly. "We're ready to play. (We want) to go as far as we can this year. We don't want to get knocked out in the first round of the playoffs this year. We want to go further."

If the Panthers do, it will be behind these two seniors who play both ways. When the opposition has the ball, Hunter moves to free safety and Sheppard to inside linebacker. Sheppard, in particular, is as dangerous on defense as he is on offense. He intercepted four passes last year and recovered six fumbles.

"When you got the number-one passer and the number-one pass receiver in the conference in your lineup, you've got a big threat offensively," Bolger said. "Turn it around and look at it defensively (and) you have the number one tackler on the team back and a good leader in the secondary in Calvin."

Both have attracted the interest of college recruiters with Sheppard drawing notice from East Carolina, Clemson, N.C. State and Georgia.

The Panthers shared first place with Ayden-Grifton in the EPC a year ago and Hunter said he hopes the Panthers can win it outright this time around.

"We want to go out winners," he said. "We want to repeat and hopefully repeat alone if possible. We're trying to do the best we can this year. Everybody (in the EPC) seems pretty strong this year so it doesn't seem like it will be a runaway. Hopefully, we'll be at the top."

"We've been in the weight room all year long," Sheppard said. "I think everybody has been dedicated to it. That's our goal, to be on top."

Bolger said Hunter's biggest assets are his smarts.

"Calvin's strengths are his intelligence, his game awareness (and) knowing what's going on. He has an awareness of what the defense is trying to do against our offense."

"Ashley is more the silent leader. He lets his actions speak for themselves. Defensively, I would say he is the mainframe of the defense. He's the toughest hitter I've ever coached."

first year, he guided the Panthers into the playoffs in 1985 with a 6-5 mark. Last year, the Panthers were the co-champions in the EPC.

"Perhaps the biggest turning point for the Panthers was two years ago against (3-A) D.H. Conley when we beat them in double overtime in the second game of the season," Bolger said. "It finally dawned on them that they had the ability to win. (That) they had the ability to beat good teams. Conley finished first in the (Coastal) conference that year. The old adage, 'winning begets winning' sort of snowballed. We went from a lackadaisical and scared attitude to an attitude where they hate to lose."

Pam Pack Looking For Return

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

WASHINGTON — Washington High School has a new football coach this fall in Bob Hanna, and the Pam Pack faithful are hopeful that Hanna will lead them back to the glory days.

Washington finished with only two victories in 10 outings last fall, including a 1-5 Coastal Conference record, and Hanna is hopeful of moving up to around the middle of the league this year.

He has a veteran quarterback, but no other backs returning to the squad.

This year, the Pam Pack will operate out of the I formation on offense and run the 50-gap control defense.

"The number of starters back doesn't make a lot of difference this year," Hanna said. "But I guess you could say that we have three on offense and maybe seven underclassmen on defense."

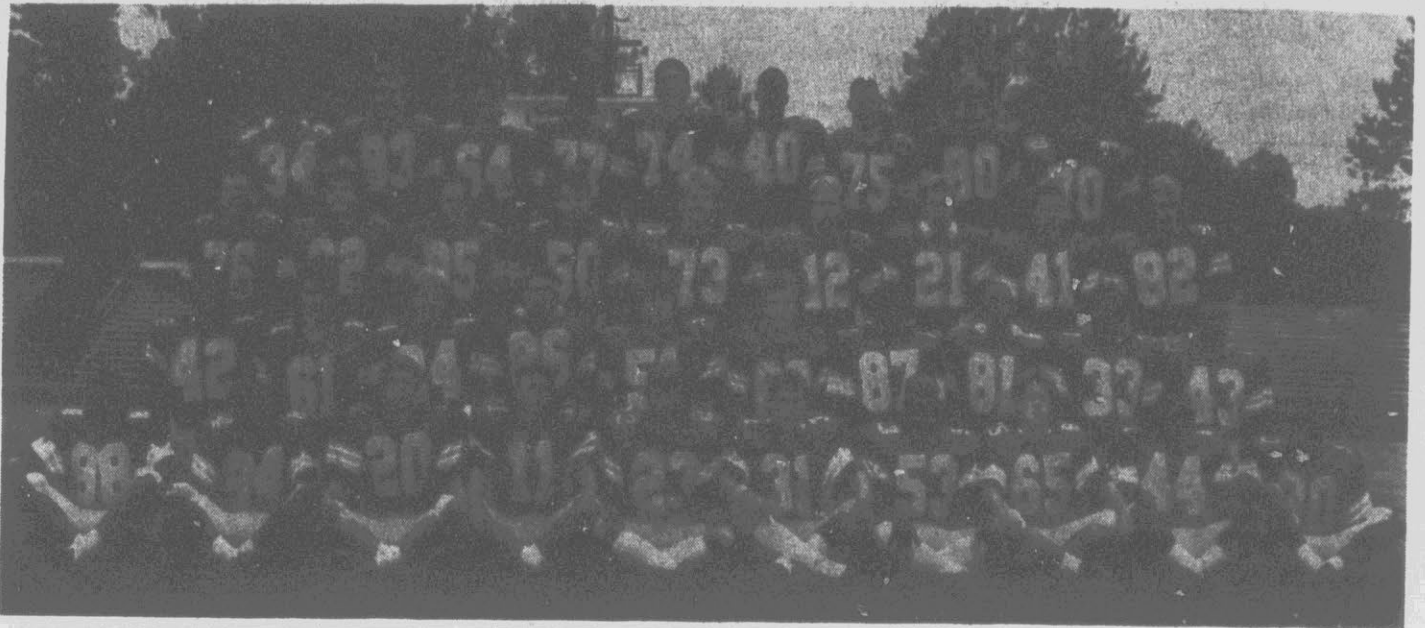

Hanna said that the Pack has shown some signs of being successful on offense, but a lot of mistakes are being made right now because of inexperience on the part of the running backs. "We're just trying to get things situated in terms of people and spend the rest of the time shaping up. We put our whole offense in early, but it's not looking that great as yet."

A senior, Franz Holscher, returns at quarterback, and Hanna has been pleased with him. "He's throwing the ball decently and will be one of our leaders," the coach said. Sophomore Tyrone Waters is listed as the backup at quarterback.

Donnell Albritton, a 6-1, 200-pounder, has been moved from defensive tackle to tailback, working in front of two sophomores, Waters and Darrell Dixon. Albritton, however, may end up playing at fullback. "We don't have a lot of team speeds but we're adequate at tailback, despite the fact that we are small," Hanna said.

Brian Reddick is currently working at the fullback slot, and Hanna said that he will probably use the fullback as a runner quite a bit.

Adam Williams and Felix Hopper are working at the wide receivers. Hopper has 10.8 speed in the 100 meters. "If we can get the football to them, I think we can cause some problems," the coach said. Williams will probably play split end and Hopper, the flanker.

Two players are currently vying for the tight end job. They are Eric Smith and Mark Fulcher. "Both of them are adequate and working hard."

Shane Holt and David Boosinger, both 170 or lighter, are working at guard while Greg Smith, a 6-1, 221-pound junior, will be at one of the tackle slots. Ray Pippin, 6-1, 190, will be at the other. Charles Clark, a 165-pound senior, will play center.

Hanna hopes that in the future the Pack can build some size through its weight program.

In the defensive line, the down people will be Robbie McKinney at one tackle, Harris Booth at nose guard, and Rodney Moore at the other tackle. All three are 210 or better.

James Archbell and either Gary Moore or Charles Manning will be at the end positions.

William Ragland and Charles Littlewood will hold down the linebacker slots.

In the secondary will be David Littlewood at strong safety, Walt Gerrard at free safety and Trey Gerrard at the one corner. The other corner is up between a number of candidates, including D.J. Paszt, Doug Harvey and Henry Rouse.

"So far, they've shown signs of being a good defensive team," Hanna said. "They are working hard on techniques and getting to the football. I think we will have to be a good defensive team for us to be successful."

Holscher returns at the punter for Washington, averaging around 40 yards a boot. He also will handle the placements.

"I think the key will be how successful we are early and whether we can establish a good attitude. How well we respond toward adversity the first time we meet it will determine a lot," Hanna said.

"And I just have no idea how we'll do in the conference, since I'm not familiar with any of them. Reportedly, Havelock is the pick. I've never seen them, but I know their reputation."

Scramble Set For Playoff Spot

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

North Pitt and Ayden-Grifton look to be the class of the Eastern Plains Conference, just as it was a year ago, with the remaining five schools scrambling for the number-three playoff spot.

The Panthers seem to be the overwhelming choice for the top spot. Ayden-Grifton must adapt to a new coach in B.T. Chappell but returns enough talent to still be a favorite.

"North Pitt has some very good athletes," Chappell said. "They've got a good quarterback (Calvin Hunter), some big linemen (Jesse Frank) and a big strong tight end (Ashley Sheppard). They had a good junior varsity last year. They're going to be tough. We go down there so that's going to be a good game."

Greene Central coach Spence Grantham sees things much the same way.

"It's going to be pretty even," he said. "North Pitt probably is head and shoulder above everybody. Ayden-Grifton, they've got some good talent coming back. He's (B.T. Chappell) a good fundamental coach. They'll move right on. Eric Blount is probably the best all-around yardage gainer in the conference. I think they are definitely strong."

Another new coach in the EPC is Harvey Brooks at C.B. Aycock. Brooks is a veteran coach with one of the best records in the state and will install the single wing offense.

"I think the sleeper is C.B. Aycock," said North Pitt coach Larry Bolger. "Harvey Brooks is going to run an unorthodox offense that nobody is prepared to defense. They've got some large people. I would venture to say they are bigger than we are."

Greene Central was the number-three playoff team a year ago but suffered heavy losses in graduation. Still the Rams look to contend for the conference's third playoff spot.

"Greene Central is going to be tough," Bolger said. "Spence has a way of turning things around in a hurry."

Farmville looks to rebound from a tough year (5-5, 3-3). Jaguar head coach Dixon Sauls picks Ayden-Grifton and North Pitt as the front runners.

"They appear to have the most returning ability," he said. "I hope we can be in it with Pamlico and Greene Central for the third spot."

C.B. Aycock (2-8, 1-5)

C.B. Aycock is turning back the clock this year, going to the single wing offense popularized in the 1950s.

New coach Harvey Brooks popularized the offense during 15 successful years at Princeton High School.

The offense proved potent in a preseason scrimmage with North Johnston. Fullback Corey Dickerson (5-9, 207, Jr.) had 212 yards in 19 carries. He was the leading rusher on last year's JV team, which went 6-3.

The tailbacks will be Calvin Artis (5-9, 136, Sr.) and Shawn Harris (5-10, 162, So.). Victor Holland (6-0, 162, So.) is the blocking back while the winback spot falls to Johnny Smith (6-2, 159, Sr.)

The offensive line is keyed by Jamie Scutt (6-1, 272, Jr.) and Jimmy Alawar (Sr. 5-9, 223).

James Smith is the defensive-line leader (5-9, 180, Jr.). Dickerson is a two-way starter at linebacker. Travis Uzell (6-0, 188, Sr.) is the other linebacker.

Pamlico (5-5, 3-3)

The Hurricanes return three starters on both sides of the line, led by quarterback Bill Lovelace (Jr. 6-2, 160).

Other players to watch include tight end-linebacker Jamie Gibbs (6-2, 200, Sr) and center-linebacker Robert McAdam (5-9, 185, Sr.).

"We're going to have to have a lot of young people come and play real well," said Pamlico coach Mike Twitchell, who returns only five seniors. "We're definitely going to be underclassmen oriented. We'll rely on seven juniors and seven sophomores."

"Our strength right now is the fact that we have so few people returning that we have some real good fights for positions. We have a lot of people that want to be starters."

South Lenoir (2-8, 0-6)

At South Lenoir, head coach Jimmy Smith welcomes back running back Ray Koonce after a year off due to academic problems.

Koonce (6-4, 220, Sr.) was chosen Player of the Year by the Kinston Free Press two years ago and joins two other returning starters in the offensive backfield in halfback Montez Davis and quarterback Cranford Heath.

Davis had 650 yards but the return of Koonce is the biggest boon.

"He's going to be a key to our team," Smith said. "We're mighty young, if we can overcome that I think we can have a real good football team."

Overall, the Falcons return six starters on offense and five on defense. Koonce will also play linebacker while Chris Uzell is a three-year starter at defensive guard.

Rams Hope To Overcome Losses

By TOM MORRIS

Reflector Sports Writer

SNOW HILL — Despite heavy losses from last year's 8-4 playoff team, Greene Central coach Spence Grantham feels that with a little early season success, the Rams can be right back in the thick of it.

"We lost 17 seniors," Grantham said, "nine defensive starters and seven offensive starters. That's heavy. At the same time, we feel like we have good athletes coming back. We return 17-18 lettermen. All of them got playing time. Hopefully this is going to be a carryover."

Heading the list of returnees is All-Area guard Henry Warren (6-1, 240, Sr.), split end Shay Beaman (6-0, 174, Sr.), tight end-fullback Paul Grantham (6-1, 190, Sr.), guard-linebacker Tommy Eason (6-0, 190, Sr.) and guard-nose guard Reynolds Askew (5-7, 215, Sr.). Two other key players are tackle Monte Morgan (6-1, 247, Sr.) and quarterback Kris Radford (6-0, 156, Jr.).

Radford came on during the playoff game against Edenton last year and helped lead the Rams to victory after starting quarterback Barry Ginn got hurt.

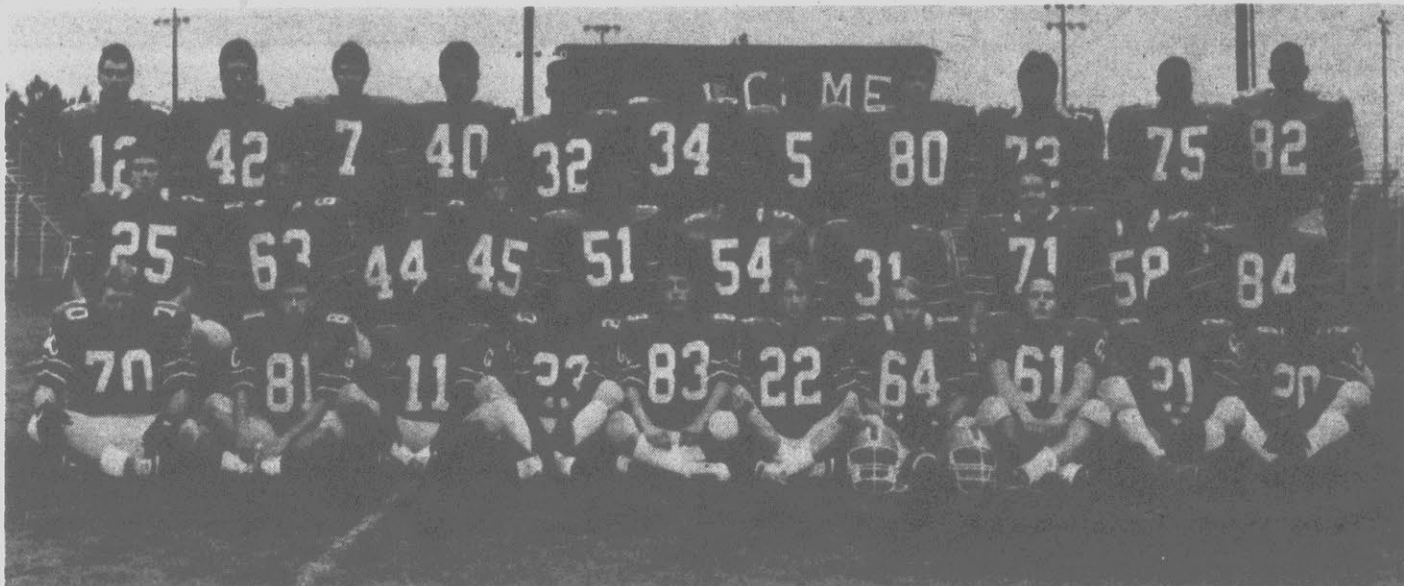

In Warren and Morgan, Grantham feels he has two solid tackles.

"We've got the two best tackles I've ever had," he said. "I thought Henry Warren came on real good last season. When we were in the playoffs he made some big plays. He's the strongest man we've ever had in school history."

Joining those two on the offensive line will be Eason and Askew at the guards, although Grantham would like to develop some other players there so Eason can concentrate on defense. Carlos Hooker (5-9, 245, Sr.) will play when the Rams go to a bigger line with Askew shifting to the weakside guard. Juan Burney (5-10, 178, Sr.) is also competing for time.

Center spot is a question mark, Grantham said. Archie Walker (5-9, 211, Sr.) and Allen Vandiford (5-9, 225, Sr.) are the top candidates there, although Walker is in his first year of high school football.

Radford will be the quarterback. Grantham moves from tight end to

The Greene Central Rams open the 1987 football season Sept. 4 hosting West Craven. Members of the team are, first row, left to right: Bill Lane, George Odom, Kenneth Spruill, Anthony Baker, Brian Carroll, Bryan Harris, Tony Shingleton, Reynolds Askew, Anthony Dupree, Darryl Wilkes; second row, Paul Grantham, Juan Burney, Marvin Suggs, Kevin Hart, Russell Gotham, Charles Carmon, Walter Hawkins, Allen Vandiford, Archie Walker, David Hall; third row, Michael Dail, Wes Sugg, Kris Radford, Chris Tyndall, Cornelius Hill, Anthony Suggs, Donald Speight, Ritchie Britt, Monte Morgan, Henry Warren and Corey Washington. fullback where the Rams must replace Terrell Strong, who rushed for nearly 1,000 yards last season. Other fullback candidates include Anthony Suggs (6-1, 203, Sr.) and Anthony Dupree (5-9, 198, Sr.).

"(Suggs) is probably the best athlete on the team and is one of the two fastest guys on the team," Grantham said.

The tailback will likely be Cornelius Hill (5-10, 170, Sr.). "He is the fastest guy we have on the team. (4.6 40). We pulled him up as a JV player last year," Grantham said. "We had three senior running backs who took up most of the work. He made a real big catch in the Pamlico game that set up a score to win the ball game."

Backing him up will be Marvin Suggs (5-7, 166, Sr.) and Walter Hawkins (5-8, 178, Sr.).

Beaman will be the split end. Wes Sugg, who played a lot last year, will be the tight end while the flanker slot is open. The candidates here are Donald Speight (6-0, 172, Jr.), Anthony Baker (5-11, 157, Jr.), Channing Suggs (5-8, 165, Jr.) and Kenny Spruill (5-7, 138, Jr.).

"We'll see if we can move somebody up for Tommy (Eason) since he's playing linebacker for us," Grantham said. "We're trying to get somebody to rest Paul since he's playing outside linebacker for us."

On defense, Grantham and Eason lead the linebackers, with Grantham playing outside and Eason inside.

Wes Sugg joins Grantham as the other outside linebacker while Anthony Dupree will probably join Eason inside, according to Grantham.

Warren and Morgan likely will be the defensive tackles, with Askew handling the nose guard position, along with Hooker and possibly Anthony Suggs.

"We're going to start off with our experienced players until the other kids know what they are doing," Grantham said. "The defensive backfield is where we are wiped out. We're trying to put good athletes back there who have never played there before."

Speight played back there last year and will be joined by John Dixon, Baker and Hill, who are all challenging for starting spots in the secondary, Grantham said.

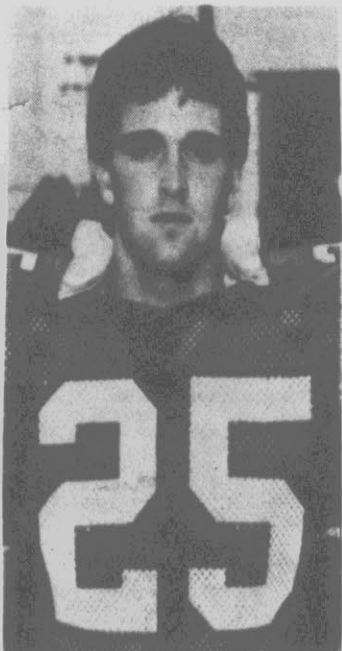

Speight is the leader back there and Grantham thinks he is ready for a big year.

"We feel like he has the capabilities to be all-conference," he said. "He has good instincts. He hits. He has all the physical qualifications."

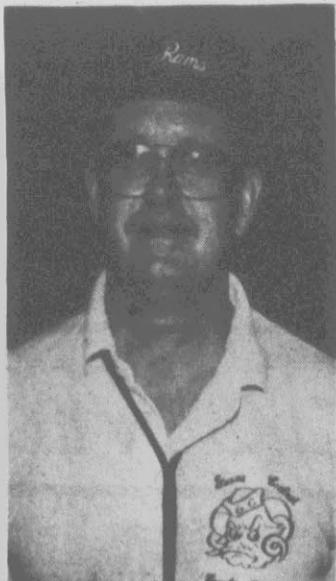

Other candidates in the secondary include Suggs, Beaman, Radford and Michael Dail.

Last year, Greene Central beat out Pamlico for the EPC's final playoff slot and then went on to advance to the second round before losing to Ahoskie, which advanced to the state final.

"I'm hoping we'll be in there like we were last year," Grantham said. "If our kids can get a little experience and get started off good, we could move up. We've got to establish something in the early part of the season."

Repeat Expected In The NEAC

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

In what may be a repeat from last year Edenton and Ahoskie look like the teams to beat in the Northeastern 2-A conference.

Edenton won the conference last year, topping Ahoskie, 3-0, in the season finale to claim the conference's top playoff spot.

The Cougars, however went on to finish second in the state, falling to Lexington in the state championship, 35-7, while Edenton lost in the first round of the playoffs to Greene Central, 14-12.

Beyond these two, Roanoke (3-3 5-5) and Williamston (1-5, 3-7) look to battle for the third spot with Northampton East.

Edenton (9-2, 6-0)

Edenton looks to be the preseason favorite with versatile quarterback Eric Downing returning to lead the way.

Downing (5-7, 170, Sr.) threw for nine touchdowns last season and ran for eight more, two of which came on punt returns. Edenton must replace the running backs, though.

Overall, Edenton returns 10 defensive starters, led by defensive tackle David Drew (6-2, 210, Sr.) along with Maurice Taylor (5-10, 165, Sr.), the leading tackler for the last two years. The defense had four shutouts last year.

Edenton won the conference's top seed last season, but was upset by Greene Central in the playoffs, 14-12.

Ahoskie (5-1, 13-2)

The Cougars went to the state finals last year before bowing to Lexington, 35-7.

Ahoskie lost all-purpose running back Richard Peterson but returns quarterback Dexter Davis and fullback Darrin Mitchell, along with halfback Vince Outlaw.

Davis (6-3, 170 Sr.) was hurt early in the year but was healthy in the playoffs and ended up with four touchdown passes. Mitchell (6-4, 240 Sr.) wasn't a starter last season but saw a lot of playing time. Another returning starter is halfback Vince Outlaw (5-8 170, Sr.) who rushed for seven touchdowns and also returned both an interception and a kickoff for a score.

The Cougars beat Ayden-Grifton, 28-12 in the first round and then topped Greene Central (19-7) and Clayton (28-12) to advance to the Eastern finals where Whiteville was stopped, 33-31.

Northampton East (4-2, 7-4)

Northampton East was the third playoff team from the NEAC last season and returns nine offensive starters and five defensive starters. Last year, the defense gave up only 111 points and 48 of them were in one game to Ahoskie.

In the playoffs, Clayton beat Northampton East, 35-16.

On offense, Northampton East returns Jeff Ramsey (6-2, 185, Sr.) along with the top four running backs.

On defense, All-state linebacker Rodney Sexton must be replaced but number two tackler Andy Jenkins returns at the other linebacker slot. Edward Vaughan, a starter on the outside last season, will move inside to replace Sexton.

Plymouth (2-4, 5-5)

Plymouth is pinning its hopes for improvement on receiver Martin Hoggard (6-1, 185, Sr.). He led the NEAC with eight touchdown catches a year ago.

Overall, Plymouth returns three starters on each side along with six lettermen. Nick Alexander replaces Ray Styons at quarterback while Gerald Puckett (6-1, 185, Jr.) looks to handle the running chores after starting early last year before going down with an injury.

On defense, Tim Baxter (6-3, 285, So.) looks to lead the way at defensive guard while Chris Cherry (5-10, 175, Jr.) is the leading returnee in the secondary. He also plays wide receiver.

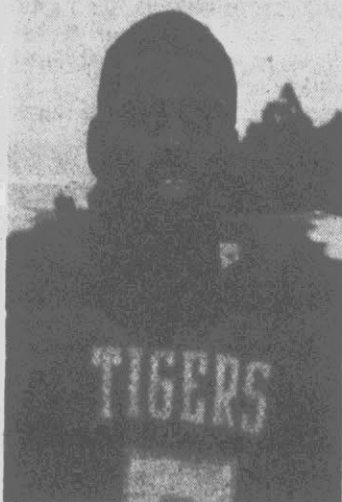

Roanoke Rapids (0-6, 2-8)

Roanoke Rapids looks to improve with Jay Pittard back to anchor the lines and Walter Jones at the offensive controls.

Roanoke Rapids will run the I, hoping to take advantage of the skills of Jones (6-0, 176 Jr.), whose brother Cedric is a wide receiver for the New England Patriots.

Pittard (6-3, 245 Sr.) is one of the top prospects in the east and will play tackle on offense and guard on defense. Another top player on the team is tight end Brad Alexander (6-2, 240, Sr.)

Overall, five starters are back from last year's team, which scored only 88 points all season.

Tigers' Offense Spurs Hopes

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

With 11 starters returning on offense, Williamston coach Harold Robinson may lose his reputation as a defensive-oriented coach.

"I'm a defensive coach by nature," Robinson said. "(But) I can look at it and see it (the offense) has got a lot of potential. It's coming. We really feel good about it. We return all our offensive starters. The kids really have a lot of confidence in what we're doing.

"It shouldn't be a learning process like it was last year (when the Tigers went 3-7). It should be a regrouping, not a rebuilding.

Leading the way on offense for Williamston is fullback Francisco Clifford (6-1, 220, Sr.) and tailbacks Guy Spruill (5-8, 155, Jr.) and Tyrone Bland (5-8, 155, Jr.).

"Clifford has good speed, good size," Robinson said. "He's going to handle it a lot for us. (Sпруill) is not real big but he makes a lot of things happen."

Sпруill also is working as the number-two quarterback behind Mark Williams (5-10, 165, Sr.) which has given Bland a chance to show his abilities.

They will run behind an offensive line that features two plus-200 pound tackles and a set of twins at the guards.

Steven Clifford (6-0, 235, Jr.) is one tackle while Andy Sheppard (5-11, 235, Sr.) handles the other spot. The guards are Dean and Dwight Parrish (5-10, 175, Srs.) while Mike Nicholson (6-1, 170, Sr.) is the center.

Flanker Bart Revels (5-11, 160, Jr.) has an injured knee and if he is not ready to go Raymond Judd (5-9, 165, Sr.) will take over. The split end is Felix Purvis (6-2, 180, Sr.). The tight end is John David Ambrose (6-1, 175, lb.) In defense Boris Brown (6-5, 285, Sr.) leads the way from his defensive tackle position. Joining Brown at defensive tackle is Larry Williams (5-10, 235, Sr.) who will have to develop quickly for the Tigers, according to Robinson.

Williamston Tigers

Shawn Reid (5-9, 185) and Ambrose key the Tigers' 4-4 defense from their inside linebacker spots.

Tyrone Rodgers (5-8, 155, Sr.) was a starter at nose guard last season but has moved to end. "We haven't changed defenses but because of his (Rodgers) quickness and our inexperience on the outside, we moved him outside," Robinson explained.

The other end will be Clifford while David Leigh (5-9, 155, Sr.) and Purvis handle the outside linebacking positions.

In the secondary, cornerback William Matthews (5-11, 165, Sr.) is the only returning starter. He will likely be joined by Judd and Ted Biggs (5-10, 155, So.).

"I think the strengths (of the defense) right now are our linebackers," Robinson said. "We have four guys returning and three of them have played before and the other played too. I think our size is going to help us. It will offset some of our lack of experience. We've always been known as a defensive team. Right now, we're behind in our defense but before our first game, we'll be ahead of our offense."

Both sides of the line of scrimmage had better be ready for the Tigers' opener Aug. 28 at home against Manteo as well as a rugged Northeastern Conference slate.

Both Edenton and Ahoskie return key players of strong teams from last year top two teams in the Northeastern 2-A conference.

"These guys are working hard," Robinson said. "We've got a senior dominated team. We've got 17 seniors. We're used to being in the playoffs. Last year, we were disappointed. We lost five games by one point each. Give or take a point, we could have been 7-3."

"In order to win our conference, we're going to have to have some breaks. We're going to have to jell as a team."

Redskins Banking On Experience

By WOODY PEELE

Reflector Sports Editor

ROBERSONVILLE — Only a loss in the final game of the season to Northampton East kept the Roanoke Redskins out of the State 2-A football playoffs in 1986. Coach Dock Ayers, who has a good deal of experience back off that team, is hopeful of parlaying it into a playoff berth this year.

"We are going to be real experienced," Ayers said. "We have 16 seniors back. And I think our strength will be in the offensive backfield."

The reason for this optimism on the part of Ayers is the return of tailback Marvin Earl Morning, who rushed for 950 yards in nine games last season. "He's a strong, slashing runner, with good balance and good instincts," the coach said.

And it will be on Morning's shoulders that the Redskins seek to improve on last year's 3-3 Northeastern Conference and 5-5 overall finish.

"We were fourth last year and that was good for us. But we were only one game away from being in the playoffs and we would like to have made it."

Ayers looks to Edenton and Ahsokie to battle for the league championship, but he feels that it will be dogfight after that for the remaining playoff spot.

Roanoke Redskins

"We're inexperienced and small in the offensive line. We've been moving people around trying to find the right combination. We lost three big kids out of the line last year, so I think a lot is going to depend on how quickly our line comes around. And injuries could be a real factor. We could go from being a pretty good team to being a pretty bad one with just a couple of key injuries. That's the key for us, to stay healthy and how quickly the line comes around," Ayers said.

Six starters are back for the Redskins on offense. They include Brent Roberson at tight end, Paul Council at quarterback, Morning at fullback or tailback (depending on whether the Redskins are in the wing T or the I formation); Corey Baker at tailback, William Martin at tackle and Mike James at guard.

"We have two kids back who have played before but didn't play last year," Ayers said. "Toby Caster started for us as a sophomore, but was ineligible last year. He plays tight end and free safety. Martin was moved to tackle from guard."

The slot back position will probably go to Pender Lock, who played on the jayvee team last year. Ronnie Kirkman, Johnny Carr and Stacy Whitfield are call candidates for the split end position.

David Whitfield will probably handle the center slot, with Arnie Wynne at the other guard position. The other tackle could go to Terry Wilson, or there is a possibility of moving Caster inside.

"We will be small. Morning is the only offensive player who hits 200," the coach said. "We have right many who go 180 to 190, and we have pretty good tam speed. But we're not going to be able to run over people."

"I don't see us throwing much either. We're primarily a running team. We just don't have the corners who can get deep on the defense," Ayers added.

The defense, which will set up in the pro four or the 61, returns six starters also. They are Martin at tackle, Whitfield at end, Roberson and Bernard Huggins at outside linebackers, Mike James at inside linebacker and Council at safety.

Others up front will be Wynne or Wilson at tackle. Tony Mewborn at one end, and either Terry Morris or Whitfield at the other.

Casper and Council will be the safeties, with Kiki Greene and Lock at the corners.

"We lost both of our kickers, and we're looking to Marvin Earl or Jimmy Brown to handle the placekicking. Wynne or Mark Whitaker will do the punting," Ayers said.

"I think if we don't get anybody hurt, we can play with just about anybody in the league with the possible exception of Edenton and Ahsokie. I think we have a shot at third, maybe higher if can pull an upset," Ayers said. "Third will get us in the playoffs, and we almost had that last year."

Returnees Key Bullets' Hopes

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

JAMESVILLE — Jamesville High School hopes for a return to better days this season as Coach Jerry Godley has nine starters returning off last year's 2-8 team.

Despite the large number of returning players, in both starters and reserves, Godley is cautious because overall, the team is very young, with only four seniors.

"We're basically pretty sophomore and freshman oriented," Godley said. "If they mature, we can be competitive. Last year, we were in five ball games and possibly could have won five but youth and inexperience hurt us."

Leading the returnees are quarterback Craig Dickerson, (5-11, 155, Sr.) and tight end Eric Spruill (6-2, 195, Sr.), who was honorable mention all-conference last season.

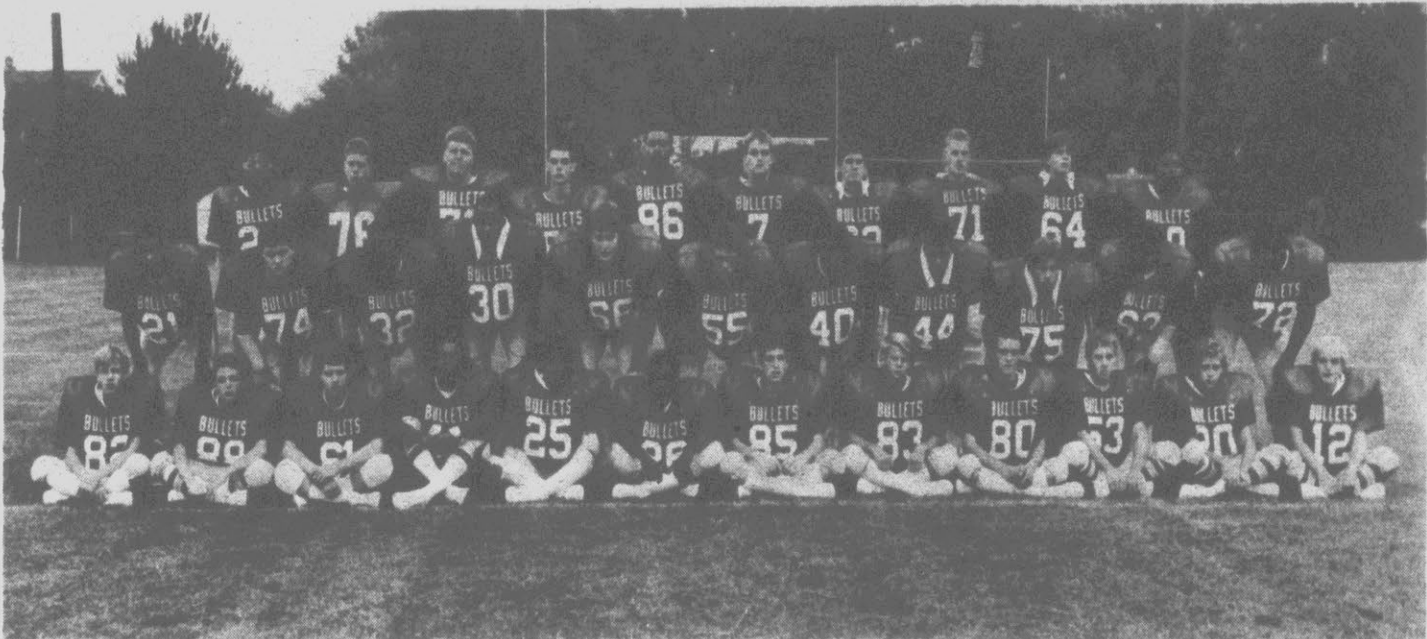

"He will probably be one of our team captains," Godley said of his tight end. "He's a very good leader. We're looking for good things from Eric."

Dickerson was an unexpected starter last season but progressed well, according to Godley.

"Craig Dickerson did an outstanding job last year," he said. "He was very inexperienced but he did a substantial job given the pressure. I think he matured a great deal. He learned the key situations which can make a quarterback become better."

Also returning in the Bullets' I formation backfield is fullback Eddie Fitzgerald (6-1, 190, Sr.). Keith Basnight (5-10, 152, So.) also will see playing time at the fullback position while Michael Duggins (5-10, 165, Jr.) will play both backfield positions. Other candidates for the tailback slot are freshmen Kent Dickerson (5-9, 150), Alexander Moore (5-8, 145), Dwayne Jones (5-9, 155) and sophomore Curtis Whitehurst (5-10, 165). Number-three quarterback Styron Moore (5-10, 145, Fr.) will also see action from the tailback slot.

At flanker, Ernie Gardner (5-10, 150, Jr.) returns from last year. Kelby Moore (6-0, 170 Jr.) will also see action there or at split end. Other candidates for split end are David Bell (5-10, 145, Fr.) and Benjamin James (5-10, 155, Sr.), a newcomer to the team.

"He definitely is a natural athlete," Godley said of James, who starts at point guard for the Bullets' basketball team. "He's the strongest man on the team. (He has) excellent speed, excellent hands. It's going to take him a while to adjust to the sport of football."

Tony Cooper (5-10, 175, So.), last year's starting center, is presently out with a knee injury and his status is unknown. If he is unable to go, Wayne Wrenn (5-8, 160 So.) will take his place.

The guards are Ernie Bembridge (5-11, 185, Sr.) and Michael Cox (6-1, 185, Jr.) while the tackles are John Carroll Jones (6-2, 195, Sr.) and William Thompson (6-1, 277, So.).

The Bullets will employ a 50 defense this year with Jones keying the set from his end spot. The other end will be Cox. Romus Lee (6-1, 165, So.) will also see time here.

Thompson, Bembridge and Chris Hardison (6-0, 226, So.) will handle the defensive tackle slots.

The nose guard spot is up for grabs. Provided he is healthy, Cooper could handle the position. If not, Bembridge could go or possibly Aron Williams (5-10, 240, Fr.).

Both linebackers return in Fitzgerald and Duggins while Whitehurst and Dickerson also may see time there.

Last season's secondary is still intact with Spruill at strong safety, Dickerson at free safety and Moore and Gardner at the corners.

Godley is hoping to improve the Bullets' punting game, which gave up 190 points last season. Spruill will probably handle the chores with Whitehurst, Dickerson and Williams chipping in if needed.

"The kids have come out with a lot of enthusiasm," Godley said. "They want to improve on last year's team.

They have received a lot of verbal abuse in the community.

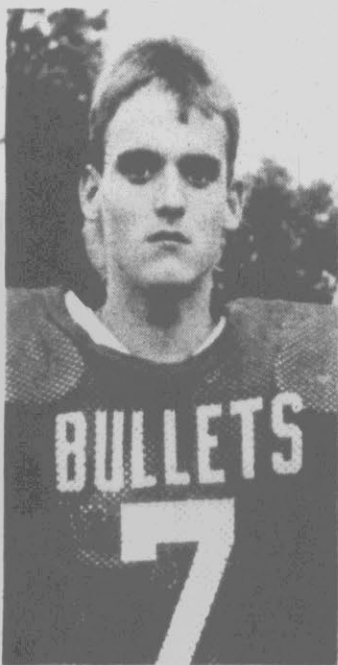

"The major thing is that we did learn (from last year) and we did get a year's experience under our belts. The kids are going to have to play with a lot of enthusiasm. Last year we played as a very young, immature team."

With 36 players out and a number of good young players, Godley said he is hopeful the Bullets' can return to the form of the 1984 and 1985 teams. In 1984, Jamesville won the state title and went 7-3 in 1985 despite losing 14 seniors.

"I tried to emphasize to our young kids that freshman participation is a necessity," he said. "It's bright for the future. We are going to take our lumps but if they stick it out, by the time they are juniors and seniors they will be competitive with anybody."

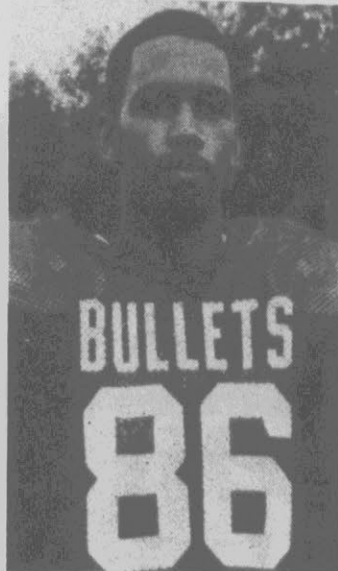

"We going to have to be patient. The good teams are going to put a whalping on us. The average teams we will be able to compete with."

Numbers No Problem For Tribe

By WOODY PEELE

Reflector Sports Editor

CHOCOWINITY — Usually, the biggest problem at a 1-A school when it comes to football is numbers.

At Chocowinity High School this fall, numbers are no problem. The problem is paper work caused by an uproar over the moving of the school's principal.

While parents are up in arms over the situation, Coach DeWayne Kellum has had to wait for some final action from the school board. "It's hurting us because we can't get some of the equipment we need or get our paper work done because there may be a chance in the principal's situation," Kellum said.

Meanwhile, the Indians have 52 candidates out for the team. "We graduated 14 lettermen, so we do have a lot of inexperience. The kids who sat on the sidelines last year have got to come through for us." Last year, the Indians went 4-4 in league play, 6-4 overall.

Kellum will tout the Indians with the wing T offense and a 4-3 or 6-2 lineup on defense.

"Because of some kids that may or may not show up, I can't say how many starters we have back. Right now, we're looking at four," Kellum said. They include Curtis Myers, who will shift from fullback to tailback, center Lee Paramore, tackle Lee Van Crawford, and Greg Heggie, who will move from split end to wingback. Crawford and Myers were both all-conference selections last year.

"I think we have a good nucleus to build around on offense. William Haywood hasn't returned. He's in New Jersey now, living with his father, and I don't know if he's coming

Heggie as the wingback will also be expected to carry the ball some in the Chocowinity scheme of things.

Dale Cole, a sophomore, played four games at quarterback last year after a rash of injuries struck the Indians. He will start there this fall. "When he gets his confidence built up, he will be a good quarterback. He has a good arm and a good read. Hopefully, he'll be able to run the ball some too. We're working with the option out of the belly series, plus the bootleg." Another quarterback candidate is Martin Abdullah, our for the first time. Though inexperience, he is doing a good job with the option.

Fullback is somewhat up in the air right now. Alton Rogers is the leading candidate, but Antonio McCullen, Brad Tyson and Corey Godley, all inexperienced, could challenge for the job.

Julius Smith, a sophomore, led the team in touchdown receptions last year, rotating at wide receiver. He will be the top candidate at split end. "We have four or five others who might play some there too, or at wingback. They lack blocking experience however, and we depend on our split ends to block for us," Kellum said.

Tony Guion, out for the first time, could wind up as the top backup at tailback. "He's a super hitter with a lot of natural ability. But he needs to learn the game; he hasn't played since the seventh grade," the coach said. Tylon Warren, who played defensive end last year and some action in the backfield after the injuries, could also see duty at tailback.

Sean Crawford is the top candidate at tight end. "He's the type kid we want here. A junior who played some at backup last year, he has good hands and good speed for his size. He's a super block and has a good attitude," Kellum said.

Lee Van Crawford returns at one tackle, but the other is still being contested for. Tony Crawford, a junior who started as a freshman, Keith Mills, who started on defense last year, and Ricky Clark, a senior, are the top candidates.

The guard position was hurt by graduation, and Kellum looks to Steven Carrow and Scott Gaskins to fill in here. "Carrow is just a little guy and Gaskins is a senior out for the first time, but they've both worked hard."

Paramore returns to anchor the center position.

"On offense, we're probably further along now than we were last year at this time. But with the inexperience in the backfield, only time will tell. We lack great speed, so we'll have to grind out more yards. Myers is an excellent power runner," the coach said.

Sizewise, the Indians don't have a great deal on offense. "We'll probably average about 165. Tony Crawford will go 215 and Lee Van Crawford is 195 and they're the biggest."

On defense, however, there is a little more beef, and Kellum is hopeful that if the numbers stay high, the Indians will be able to platoon more. "The key is going to be our defensive line. We lost a lot in the backfield, but our line will average over 200 pounds

By DAVID DROSCAK
Associated Press Writer

With a backfield that hasn't gained a yard in varsity competition, Fayetteville 71st head coach Bobby Poss said his team probably won't be in a position to defend the 4-A high school football title it captured last season.

"We're a little thin, and believe me, no one will feel sorry for us," said Poss, who's been the school's head coach since 1980. "I expect our conference to be stronger, which is bad news for us."

About half of the 321 North Carolina High School Athletic Association football teams will open the season Aug. 28. Greensboro Page, which has scored in 99 straight games, opens the season Aug. 27 against High Point Central.

Last season, 71st finished second in the Mid-South Conference, winning its last eight games, and marched through the playoffs. The Falcons defeated West Charlotte 3-0 in the state championship game. The Falcons also shared the title with Page in 1984 after battling to a 14-14 tie.

"Basically, our depth will be the biggest problem," Poss said. "We'll be as lean as we've been since I've been here."

With only six starters returning, Poss will rely heavily on all-state lineman Jason Ormsby, a 6-foot-1, 235-pounder. Also, tight end Chuck Johnson at 6-4, 245, is described by Poss as a "super blocker."

The Mid-South appears to be strong again this season with Fayetteville Douglas Byrd a possible state title contender. Three of Byrd's players ran a leg on the 4-A state championship 1-mile relay team.

Fayetteville Terry Sanford, a team that lost out to Page in the championship contest in 1985, will look to three-year starter Antonio Wilson at tailback, while Fayetteville Pine Forest has one of the best linebackers in the state in Reggie Richardson.

"Douglas Byrd is probably as strong as anyone around here," Poss said. "They should have an excellent team with some speed in the backfield."

Despite two championships in the past three seasons, Poss said his program still doesn't stack up with Page's.

Page and Wilson Fike are the only two schools in the state to win three straight football championships. The Pirates' bid to become the first school to win or share four straight state titles ended last fall when Charlotte Harding eliminated them in the third round of the playoffs. Page's 47-game streak without a loss also came to a halt. Fike pulled its feat in the late 1960's.

"In the West, count on Greensboro Page," Poss said last week. "Their program is just tops. They have a fantastic program starting at the head coach ... down to their good athletes. Where we have done well lately, I don't think we are as strong as that."

Other 4-A teams to watch include perennial power Jacksonville, Lumberton, Scotland County, Waynesville Tuscola, Gastonia

Ashbrook, West Forsyth, Northeastern, Northern Nash, Greenville Rose, Wilson Hunt and Hillsborough Orange. It appears both the Cap Nine in Raleigh and Southwestern and Tri County leagues in Charlotte will be balanced. However, Charlotte Olympic, 6-4 last season, may be a sleeper in the Tri County.

Brevard appears to be the top 3-A team in the state. The Blue Devils went 9-1 in the regular season last year and have a good mixture of experience and youth returning.

The Blue Devils also have a highly touted quarterback in Jeff Bailey, a 6-2, 190-pounder. Bailey, who also plays defensive back, has been a starter for 3½ years and has thrown for more than 3,000 yards. Junior offensive-defensive tackle Kelly Whitmire, at 6-6, 250 pounds, should anchor both lines.

Shelby Coach Jim Taylor said his squad doesn't have the team speed it displayed last season in winning the 3-A championship.

"Our defense has looked very, very ragged," Taylor said. "We have a slow team and no size up front defensively."

But Taylor does have two key offensive weapons back in quarterback Therome George and fullback Cedric Surratt. George passed for more than 700 yards last season and rushed for 400 more, while Surratt rushed for 1,414 yards.

Asheville Clyde Erwin is coming off a 7-3 regular-season and playoff appearance, and the Warriors may make some more noise in the West this season.

Havelock, losers to Shelby in the title game, will be able to pick players from a junior varsity team that went 9-1 last season.

Other 3-A teams that should fare well include Forest Hills, Tarboro, Burlington Williams, Burlington Cummings, High Point Andrews, James Ragsdale and Concord.

Lexington, winners of 10 straight games, could be the king of the 2-A ranks again after two straight crowns, but Coach Gary Whitman said his team isn't thinking about a third straight title.

"We don't try to look that far ahead," he said. "We have a pretty good nucleus on defense, but we need our offensive line to come around. We'll have to fight like a devil just to get through our league."

Veteran quarterback Fred Littlejohn and 1,300-yard rusher Kevin Sims will anchor the Yellow Jackets' offense.

Besides Lexington, the Central Carolina league appears tough with Thomasville, North Rowan and Randleman expected to field good teams.

However, Whitman said the team to beat for the 2-A title chase could be Whiteville.

"Whiteville is bigger than (North Carolina) State and Wake Forest," Whitman said. "I don't know what they put in that drinking water down there."

Drinking water or not, Wolfpack coach Bill Hewett admits his team will have good size, but "nobody to carry the mail."

Hewett also lost his son, record-setting quarterback Heath, but has the best tight end prospect in the state in 6-5, 260-pound Chester McGlockton. Flanker Herman Jones, a junior, also should be a key on offense. "He can fly," Hewett said.

Whiteville's defense should be held down by 6-3, 270-pound senior Pat Reeves. Place-kicker and punter John Plasky will get the quarterback nod. Plasky has kicked 53 straight extra points.

Other 2-A teams to look for include upstart South Brunswick, East Bladen, Sylva-Webster, Mitchell County, Jordan-Matthews, Ahoskie, North Pitt, Clinton, Clayton, Wallace-Rose Hill, Ayden-Grifton, Maiden and Charlotte Catholic.

In 1-A, defending state champion Murphy has the state's longest winning streak at 15 and an acrobatic wide receiver in Carl Pickens, a 6-3, 180-pound leaper.

Pickens, the state 1A-2A high jump champion the last two years, had 830 yards receiving as a sophomore and 947 last season on 47 catches. As a junior, Pickens also returned four punts for touchdowns and one kickoff for a score.

"He catches the ball real well and he's got moves like a halfback," said Murphy Coach David Gentry. "He's also strong, quick, can block and is a hard-nosed kid. What makes him the best wide out in the nation is that he does all those things — and does them well."

Besides Pickens, Gentry has speedster Mel Niceley on the other side. Gentry says Niceley, who is 5-7 and 150 pounds, is faster than Pickens' 4.5-second speed in the 40-yard dash.

"He takes some of the pressure off of Carl," Gentry said.

The hardest part of Murphy's season may be getting out of its conference and into the playoffs. Also in the Smoky Mountain is Swain County — the state champ in 1985 — and Robbinsville.

The West also boasts powerhouse Hendersonville and Rosman.

"Hendersonville will be extremely tough," Gentry said. "As far as athletes (in 1-A), nobody has got as many as they got."

Tabor City, a loser to Murphy in the title game, should also contend in the East, along with Bath, Perquimans, Clarkton, North Edgecombe, Red Springs and East Montgomery.

West Robeson has the state's longest losing streak at 29 games, while Kinston is second with 18 straight defeats. Aurora, which has lost its last 16 games, has dropped the sport after only 18 players came out for the team. After the first week of practice, the squad was down to 15 players, according to Charlie Adams, NCHSAA executive director.

Behind Page's 99-game scoring streak, Clinton has scored in its last 87 games and East Wake in its last 85.

Union is by far the lowest ranked defensive team. The Spartans have given up points in 112 straight games. Central Harnett is next at 60.

Brevard's Bailey, Clayton's Travis Stevenson, a 6-5, 200-pound drop-back passer, and West Caldwell's Russell Gibson may be the state's three best quarterback prospects.

Reggie Billips of Starmount, Junior Hall of Gastonia Ashbrook and Walter Boyd of Hillsborough Orange head the list of senior running backs. Boyd has been clocked at 4.34 in the 40-yard dash. Waynesville Tuscola's Malcomb Moore, back after a motorcycle accident a year ago, could be the best junior ball carrier, while Winston-Salem Reynolds fullback Red Booe, at 6-3, 225, is a bruiser.

McGlockton is ranked by several experts as the best prospect in the state, while all-stater Marvin Burnham of Camden is rated the best junior tight end.

Pickens and Roanoke Rapids wide receiver Walter Jones are the best at that position, but Mount Tabor junior Julius Reese, at 6-4, 188 pounds, is also a good one.

Several defensive players across the state also are expected to be top prospects.

The head of the defensive list is Roanoke Rapids Jay Pittard, a 6-3, 240-pound tackle who also plays on the offensive line. Defensive end Neal Auer, a 6-5, 210-pounder, runs a 4.65 in the 40.

Two linebackers to watch include Hendersonville's 6-3, 225-pound Eric Gash, the younger brother of Penn State running back Sam, and Hillsborough Orange's J.R. Boldin. Boldin, at 6-2, 246 pounds, has run a 4.56 in the 40.

Chocowinity ...

and the good thing about it is that they are all quick. All of them run the 40 in 5.4 or less."

Tops in size among the linemen is Craig Griffin, a guard, who tips the scales at 265.

Among those returning on defense at Griffin and Heggie. The latter was defensive player of the year for two straight years for the team. Keith Mills and Tony Crawford both saw action at the other guard position, while Lee Van Crawford played tackle. Tylon Warren started at the end as a freshman and Julius Smith played some at safety.

"The key spot we're trying to fill is middle linebacker," Kellum said. Scott Gaskins is the leading candidate, but Myers, Carrow and Godley could all play some here. "I'd like to keep Myers at defensive end, where he started last year," the coach said. "He's very good on pass coverage."

Up front will probably be Myers at one end, Lee Van Crawford at tackle, Griffin at guard, with either Mills or Tony Crawford at the guard and the other at the tackle. Sean Crawford or Warren would be the other end. Joining Smith in the backfield would be Heggie at one corner and either Brad Tyson or Guion at the other.

Kellum said that the kicking game could be a problem for the Indians. "We lost all our kickers and their backups," he said. "We're letting everyone take a try at it, hoping someone will come through."

In the conference race, Kellum looks at a tougher league overall. "Everyone should be at least a little better than last year. North Edgecombe will be strong again. Bath is strong, and so is Belhaven. Jamesville has got to be better than last year; they have potential, and Columbia is always a threat."

As for the Indians, Kellum feels that if they reach their potential, they can be a factor in the race. "I feel that we'll break .500 and I think we could be in the top two or three at the end. There are four playoff spots in the conference, and our goal is to take one of them."

"The key is going to be how fast our newcomers come around and how we gel as a team. I hope we are as good a hitting team on defense as we were last year," Kellum said. "And we have to keep a positive attitude."

North Edgecombe Picked In TBC

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

North Edgecombe High School has a new football coach this year, but that hasn't changed the outlook of the rest of the conference. The rest of the coaches still are picking the Warriors as the team to beat in the 1987 football race.

And the league, too, is trying to recover from the shock of Aurora High School abandoning football nearly two weeks into practice. Lack of numbers was the reason for the move by the school, but the suddenness of it left the rest of the league scrambling to find another game to play.

While some were successful, a few will remain with a nine-game schedule for this year and try to work out something for 1988, the second year of the state's two-year contract policy.

Meanwhile, it will be back to the races for the rest of the league, trying to see who — if anyone — can knock off the Warriors.

NORTH EDGECOMBE

Tom Collins is the new head coach at North Edgecombe, having been a graduate assistant at East Carolina University last season.

"We lost a lot of good players off last year's team," Collins said, "including three All-East players and 14 seniors altogether. So I look at this as a rebuilding year. But if our offensive line develops quickly, I think we can have a pretty good team."

Top players on offense should include tailback Larry King, a junior with 4.5 speed; fullback Derrick Eatmon, a hard block; and Danny Avent at guard. The quarterback spot is up between Marty Pittman and Orlando Whitaker. The latter is the younger brother of former All-East quarterback Jeff Whitaker and Collins says he is the man of the future.

Defensively, the top players are expected to be corner Mike Williams, safety Rodney Garrett, Eatmon at nose guard and King at linebacker.

"I think we can be in the top three at the end," Collins said, picking Bath as his choice in the league.

North Edgecombe went 8-0 in conference play and 10-2 overall, advancing to the second round of the playoffs before losing 6-0 to Perquimans.

BATH

Walt Davis of Bath (5-3, 7-4), has what he calls a young team with 24 juniors and just four seniors. Many of those juniors, however, started or saw action as sophomore. "We do have a good deal of experience, and if we stay healthy I think we will be okay," Davis said. "This year we will probably come as close to platooning as we ever have at Bath. Still, we are young."

Davis feels that how tough those young players are when they return to the field will tell the tale for the Pirates.

Top offensive players include quarterback Brian Tuten who returns from last year, along with slotback Jay Evans, fullback Bill Ambrose, and tackles Freddy Francis and Ernie Cornelius.

On defense, the top personnel should include inside linebacker Brian Cherry, nose guard Mitchell Randall, strong safety Jeff Frazier, inside linebacker Keith Boyd, and outside linebackers Melvin Bailey and Gary Tyre.

"If our young mature and get tougher and we stay healthy I think we'll again be in the battle for (one of four) playoff spots. We have gone (to the playoffs) six of the last seven years," Davis said.

He picks North Edgecombe as the team to beat with Columbia, Belhaven and Chocowinity in the battle for one of those berths.

BELHAVEN

Belhaven (5-3, 6-5) has a good group of seniors, according to Coach Mike Proctor, but does not return much experience.

"We'll have a senior back who's never carried the ball before. We don't have great speed and it's going to take a while for us to get the fundamentals and gel as a team," Proctor said.

Expected to lead the offense is Andreas O'Neal, a 6-5, 240-pound tackle, considered by Proctor a true college prospect. Other top people should be Orville Jones, 6-4, 235, at tackle; Richard Pugh, 6-0, 245, at center; Horace Griffin, converted from lineman to fullback. "If he doesn't learn to carry the ball, he'll go back to the line," Proctor said.

Defensively, the same people will anchor the team.

"I hope we can finish somewhere in the middle of the pack," Proctor said of the Bulldog chances in the league, picking North Edgecombe and Bath as the teams to beat.

COLUMBIA

"We have a lot of question marks," Columbia coach Spencer White said. "I really expected us to have more than we do at this point. We've lost four starters since practice opened for various reasons."

Columbia was 6-2, 7-4 last year, second in the league.

"We do have some talented kids in Tom Spencer, 6-1, 190, at middle linebacker and Nolan Kirkman, our quarterback and safety," White said. "We will build everything around them. Kirkman is out kicker too, and he's very good. That should be the strong point of our game."

White hopes to finish around the middle of the pack, and like the others, picks North Edgecombe and Bath as the class of the league. "Chocowinity has the talent to be up there as does Belhaven. And I think Mattamuskeet is on the move upward in the conference," he said.

CRESWELL

Creswell (3-5, 3-7) is a young team according to coach Mark Sigmon. "We have only five seniors among our 27 players," he said. "A lot is going to depend on how our younger players develop. We have some experience in the line, but our backfield is a question mark."

Top players offensively should be running back Neal Jones, quarterback David Phelps, guard Mike Jones and tackle Matt Clifton.

Defensively, the Joneses and Phelps at linebacker and Clifton at tackle are the people to watch.

"If we can get by our first five games and not get killed like last year and not get our morale killed, I think we will be okay," Sigmon said.

He, too, picks North Edgecombe, but notes that Bath, Belhaven and Chocowinity all are potential playoff teams.

MATTAMUSKEET

Herb Brickhouse, coach at Mattamuskeet (3-5, 4-6) is disappointed in that some of the people he counted on for the 1987 season haven't shown up.

"I think it's going to be a tough season," he said. "I don't think our starting quarterback (Dean Miller) will be able to play for us. His family moved to Rowan County last year, but he came back to school here. But unless his parents give up custody, he has to sit out two semesters to be eligible, and he's only gotten one of the way so far. He would have played quarterback and defensive back for us, and his brother, who didn't move back, would have been our starting center and linebacker."

Coupled with that are the absences of several other players Brickhouse had expected back this fall. "Right now, we're way behind and things are not as bright for us as they looked at the end of last season."

Top offensive players are expected to be James Topping at tailback; Lafonsa Beckwith at fullback, Roy Cotten at guard and Gyno Topping at split end.

On defense, Brickhouse looks to many of the same people: James Topping at linebacker, where he is the leading returning tackler from last year; Collins at cornerback, Gyno Topping at end and Beckwith at linebacker.

Big East Roundup...

Gary Gudac and junior Sharieff Dew, who are contesting at quarterback. Rufus McNeil is also looking good in the backfield.

David Fate, a linebacker, and Donald Ruffin, Eddie White, Pat Patterson and Reggie Garrett, the defensive front line, are all looking good.

Beddingfield (1-6, 2-8) is hopeful of improvement this year. Coach Jim Tabb, in his second season, admits that he was over-optimistic last season.

"I'm hoping we can play better than we did last year and compete. If we can, we will win some. Last year I didn't know our conference and I found out that we're the smallest school in the conference. We just have to go slow. We're larger and stronger, but don't have a lot of experience," Tabb said.

Quarterback Al Langston has good potential, the coach says. "He played two games off the JV team last year and can throw the ball well."

The top returning defensive player, Danny Harris, was a late returner and is behind because of that.

NORTHEASTERN

Tom Merritt thinks there could be four or five good teams in the league this year. "I have to pick Northern because of their success last year, but Rocky Mount will have a strong team and Greenville had a lot of talent. Then, too, you better pick Hunt because he goes to the playoffs every year."

As for the Eagles (3-4, 4-6), Merritt admits that his team has 10 of 11 back on defense, and that could make them a force in the league.

Only four return on offense, however. Tops among them are guard Eric Bonner (6-2, 220), guard Kenny Williams (230), and Linc Brooks (6-1, 225) at fullback.

Top defensive returnees include end Fred Lewis (6-5, 250), tackle Melvin Sutton (6-2, 270), safety Mike Christensen, and cornerback Sonie Freshwater.

"I think we will have a good defense," Merritt said. "If we can be consistent on defense and in running the option, and find a good tailback, we'll be in there."

HUNT

Hunt (5-2, 6-5) has high expectations this year according to Coach Bill Williamson. "We have right many back on offense, six, and we look to be a little better there. Our biggest concern is defense, where we only return one player. We have better people as far as being athletes, but whether we can do as well is another story."

Hunt has gone to the playoffs four years in a row and Williamson said he stresses that as building a tradition. "It's good motivation."

Herbie Barnes, the Warrior tailback, was all-conference last year, and leads the returnees. Rodney Little also returns in the backfield, while up front Todd Barker and Jimmy Stott return at tackles and Maurice Moore at guard.

"We have to find a quarterback and it's between three," Williamson said. Most likely it will be Glen Rideout, up from the junior varsity.

Tim Farmer, a tackle, is the only returnee on defense, but has been sidelined with a twisted knee.

KINSTON

Football hasn't been kind to Kinston in recent years. They went 0-7, 0-10 last year and hold the second longest losing streak in the state at 18 games.

And they have a new coach in Robbie Barrow. "It's hard to say what we will do. It's been a while since we had a good year here," Barrow said. "We've been teaching fundamentals; we have the numbers and we have some athletes. But we don't have a lot of experience. We're taking it slow and easy and you just can't demand a lot of kids who are just getting started and have no tradition."

Top offensive people are expected to be Reggie Israel, a 6-3, 222-pound fullback, along with Marty Kornegay, a 6-5, 210-pound tailback. Tony Hipps, with great speed but no experience, could be a factor, as could Robert Hooten, the team's center.

Defensively, Jeff Staton at middle linebacker, Mimi Moore at halfback, and Theodore Lee (6-4, 270), at guard, are the top people.

Longest Year For Prop. 48's

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

With one of the longest years of their lives behind them, four East Carolina football players finally get a chance to play after sitting out their freshman seasons due to Proposition 48.

The NCAA legislation, which was enacted prior to the 1986 season, caught Denell Harper, Anthony Thompson, Bojack Davenport and Junior Robinson quite by surprise.

All four were finishing up their final year of high school and had finally put the pressures of college recruiting behind them by signing with ECU. There was no where to go but up. Right?

Wrong.

Instead, the four were placed in limbo because either their high school grade point average or their SAT (Scholastic Aptitude Test) score did not meet levels set by the NCAA, specifically a 2.0 gpa in a college prep core curriculum and a minimum 700 SAT score. One level may fall slightly below the standard if the other rises to a certain prescribed levels.

"I'd heard about it," Davenport said of Proposition 48. "But I thought it was going to be phased in. Halfway through the year, I found out, 'Uh-oh, I'm in trouble.'"

The four were, in many ways, the cream of the Pirates' 1986 recruiting class. All were good athletes who could play a number of positions and the Pirates could have used them as they suffered through a 2-9 season.

Instead, all they could do was watch—no play, no practice, no meetings.

Disappointment, sure, but rules are rules. With the recent excesses and abuses that have cropped up in college athletics, no one will dispute the need for some rule changes.

"I was disappointed," Robinson said. "But my Mom was saying that it was me. It was my fault for not being prepared for the test. I hated that it came out in the year that I was going to play college football."

"It could be like an example for the rest (of the recruits) coming up to let them know that they need to concentrate a little more on what they're doing (academically) and study harder for that test because it is not an easy test."

ECU head coach Art Baker said all four responded well under the circumstances and fared well academically in their first year.

"They were a little confused," he said. "When they came here they were a little embarrassed. They were the first of the Proposition 48 people who didn't make it and they had a little stigma on them. They've responded real well."

All four survived the year. They are eligible now and in the thick of preseason practice.

Thompson was placed at outside linebacker. Davenport became a wide receiver. Harper plays slot/tailback while Robinson may see action at both defensive back and wide receiver.

Harper said the unplanned year's vacation from football was a tough adjustment.

"It takes a lot out of you," he said. "It's a whole year off. You're not used to getting hit. I never liked it because I was in it."

"Sitting out a year, it really doesn't help a player at all. It's like a whole new learning process all over again. All my life, I've played. Not playing, I felt like I was not doing anything for myself. You are not out there. You are like a person in the stands."

After a year off, the adjustment to playing again has been a little strange for the group.

"I put the helmet on and the knee braces on and felt real sluggish," Davenport said. "I'd been working out but it (playing, practicing) is different. I got my first headache on the first day we put the shoulder pads on from (senior defensive back Ellis) Dillahunt. He knocked my helmet off, he broke my helmet. That was my initiation back to football. That one hit made it feel real again."

For Robinson, it was just a matter of picking up old habits.

"I wasn't too sure how it was going to be the first couple of practices. It just took me a couple of days," he said. "It's like riding a bicycle. You get it back sooner or later."

One year later, all four have had a chance to reflect on the rule and while they can see the logic of the entrance requirements, they don't think they should have lost a year of eligibility and they should have been allowed to practice.

"I'd let the guys practice," Davenport said. "Practice isn't going to hurt anything. They know they can't play. It (should be) like taking a red-shirt year."

"My chances would be better if I knew what a redshirt freshman knew. Like say, for instance, Al Whiting. He's a redshirt freshman (wide receiver). He knows all the plays and everything. I'm just learning. Even though I came out to spring practice, it's not the same (just) watching. If I knew as much as those guys, I think my chances would be pretty good. Since I'm still learning, it might take a while."

"The guys should have all four years (of eligibility)," Harper added. Baker, too, admitted the lost year of practice could limit them.

"They couldn't practice last year and that is the biggest detriment they have right now," he said. "They're so far behind. Junior is probably the furthest along of any of them. He's challenging for a starting position. Denell and Bojack are both fighting to make the traveling squad. Probably the best prospect is Anthony and he injured a quadricep (thigh) and has not practiced to date."

With the year over, all four can smile about the lost year and even take a little kidding over it.

"Sometimes, we'll do something dumb and they'll call us the '48' guys," Davenport said. "But they're just joking. They know we're just as smart as any of the rest of the guys."

"A lot of the guys, if proposition 48 had been in place when they came to school, they wouldn't have played or even come to school."

Back In Action

East Carolina's Bojack Davenport (dark jersey) runs a pass route during a pre-season scrimmage. Davenport is in his first year of eligibility after sitting out his freshman year, along with three other Pirate players, due to Proposition 48. (Reflector Photo)

Why Is Our Golden Grilled Chicken So Much Better?

In this time of "cut costs," "do it quick," "just make a profit," "give the customer just enough to make him happy," a few people still go to the trouble to do things the right way. The best way.

That's the way we do things at Golden Corral.

Maybe that's why everything—including our chicken—tastes better at Golden Corral.
